Farmers say the past few days of hot weather have really damaged cotton. It seems to be suffering more since the showers than before.

Some months ago when we started a new column "From the Top of Lone Wolf Mountain" we thought we would have our larger chases and would be printing an eight column paper so we would have plenty of room for it but our chases failed to come—they haven't arrived yet—so we have been leaving out our column because we rarely ever have room for it. This week we are including a short interview in this column and we shall continue to do that until our new chases do arrive.

Earl Browning, who farms on the Ab Pratt place north of town, said last Sunday he had the best prospect for a crop of cotton he had ever had. Part of his cotton was hailed out, but it came out and is fruiting well. He has two registered Hereford hogs, a sow and boar, that are dandies. They are ten months old and are larger than another type hog he has that are two months older. They have the same markings as Hereford cattle. Earl bought the shoats in Kansas and paid $165 for the two. He thinks they are a better breed of hogs. If you have not seen them you should make a point to do so.

Earl had some bad luck last week. Two of his calves became ill and one of them died.

While we were at his place Earl gave us a very nice watermelon to take home with us.

25 BOYS OUT FOR FOOTBALL PRACTICE

Coach Hank Brown has been holding two practice sessions daily this week trying to get his football squad in shape for the opening game on September 19, with Stanton.

Coach Brown will use the T formation and is building his team around ten or more lettermen. Bobbie Johnson and Glen Bowlin are captains for this year.

Drive Right Or Be Fined Says Deputy

Deputy Sheriff Jack Brewer has issued a warning to drivers of motor vehicles in Loraine to drive properly or be fined. Any person driving a vehicle that makes a U turn on Main Street or a half U turn into the curb on either side of Main Street, or runs a red light in the City of Loraine, will be subject to a fine of $14.

A fine of $1 will be assessed against any person who parks a car or truck, either side or angle parking, not within the parking lines on the curb.

These laws will be enforced by the city officer.

FAMILY REUNION

The children of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Thompson, and other relatives, held a reunion at Buffalo Gap Sunday, August 31. The occasion honored W. B. Thompson of Stephenville on his birthday. It was voted to make the reunion an annual occasion and to be held at this same time each year.

Those from Loraine who attended were Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Bennett, Mrs. Cora Hall, Mrs. Annibel Long and sons, Thomas Bob and Billie, Mr. and Mrs. K. L. Taylor. From Colorado City were Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Thompson and son Delbert, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bennett and son Tom. Others attended from Coahoma, Sweetwater, Dublin and Stephenville.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Beights of Colorado City are the parents of a baby girl, born on August 28, whom they named Rachel Ellen.

C. W. Norman of Breckenridge was a guest in the Owen Leggett home Sunday night.

Mr. and Mrs. James T. Follis of San Antonio visited in the A. J. Follis home over the week end.

Jo Ann Leggett of Lubbock is here spending the week with Mr. and Mrs. Owen Leggett and Mrs. Emma Leggett.

School To Open Next Monday

School will open here Monday, September 8, with a general assembly in the auditorium at 10 a. m., according to Superintendent G. W. Parish. All pupils will attend the general assembly after which registration will take place in the respective class rooms.

The faculty of the school is now complete with the exception of a teacher of Mathematics and it is hoped that this position will be filled in the next few days. The new teachers for this year are: Miss Lucille Martin, Girls Physical Education and Health; Miss Vernemna Freeman, Homemaking; and R. L. (Hank) Brown, High School Principal and Coach.

Two new courses have been added to the program of the high school for the coming year, both of which will be elective. Coach Brown will teach a course in Drivers' Education and Safety, and Rev. Newton Starnes will teach a course in the Old Testament the first semester, and Rev. Barton will teach the New Testament the second semester.

Much work has been done to the buildings this year, including refinishing the floors, and the building of the new agriculture and bus shop building just north of the campus. All of the buses are in good shape for the coming year because only two of the buses are more than four months old and they were both purchased last year. Any changes in bus routes will be effective Tuesday morning instead of the first day.

A general faculty meeting will be held Saturday morning at ten o'clock, at which time the new teachers will be introduced and the procedures for registration will be outlined.

The lunch room will be opened Tuesday with the same staff as was employed last year: Mrs. O. A. Moore, manager; Mrs. Moody Richardson, Mrs. W. H. Jean, and Mrs. Leon Johnson as helpers. Meals will be sold for 20 cents in the first five grades and 25 cents for all students in the sixth grade and above.

Calvin Forbus, Jack Brewer, Floyd Hale, and S. O. (Doc) Givens have been named bus drivers for the coming year. There is still one position to be filled.

Roscoe District FFA Changes Name

In a meeting at Sweetwater last Friday and Saturday the name of Roscoe District Future Farmers of America was changed to Lone Wolf Future Farmers of America. Events for the year in which FFA boys will take part are: livestock judging contest at Colorado City at the annual county show; dairy judging contest at Rotan Dairy Show and chapter conducting contest in December.

Members met at the Sweetwater park at 2 p. m. on Friday and held a general session at which time committees were appointed. Following the session a swim was enjoyed which was followed by a steak supper.

The members spent the night in the park here they cooked breakfast Saturday morning.

A general session Saturday morning heard reports of committees. Two counties were added to the district, Fisher and Scurry. Roby, Hobbs and Rolan were transferred to Area 2 from Area 4 and Snyder and Hermleigh from Area 1. The new boundary for Area 2 is from Fisher County west to New Mexico and south to Del Rio and west to El Paso, making the largest Area in the United States.

Edward Brown, Maurice Coldey and Otis Adrian attended the meeting from Loraine. Maurice was chairman of the committee on constitution and by-laws. The principal changes were the name of the organization and the method of electing district officers.

Bible Classes In High School

The Loraine High School, in cooperation with the local churches, will offer a Bible course in its high school curriculum this year, according to G. W. Parish, high school superintendent. The State school law permits the teaching of Bible in high schools as a credit course, one-half credit for the Old Testament, and one-half credit for the New Testament.

Students who enroll for the course will meet the class daily, as in any other course. The Old Testament will be taught the first semester and the New Testament the second semester. Bible history and moral and ethical teachings will be discussed. No doctrine will be taught.

According to the arrangement with the local pastors, Rev. C. Newton Starnes, the Methodist pastor, will teach Old Testament the first semester, and Rev. R. T. Barton, the Baptist pastor, will teach New Testament the second semester. The churches will buy maps and other equipment needed to teach the course.

Rev. Starnes, who will enroll students Monday for the course, which will come the fourth period, taught Bible in Big Spring and Pampa high schools before the war. Since the average student rarely understands the historical background of the Bible, he strongly urges all high school students to consider this opportunity to make a thorough study of the Bible.

Mrs. McPherson Buried Here Monday

Funeral services were conducted at Midland Sunday for Mrs. Dona McPherson, 66.

Mary Dona McPherson was born in 1881 and died at her home in Midland August 29, after a short illness. She had been a faithful member of the Methodist Church since 14 years of age.

Mrs. McPherson and family were former residents of Loraine.

Rev. R. T. Barton conducted a short graveside service at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Lone Wolf Cemetery where she was buried by her husband, Richard McPherson, who preceded her in death in 1909.

She is survived by one daughter and two sons: Rev. Fred McPherson of Lubbock, Roy McPherson of Port Arthur, and Lela McPherson of Midland, and by three grandchildren; two sisters, Mrs. Stella Copeland of Lubbock, and Mrs. Pearl Bennett of Wasco, California.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Templeton were hosts Sunday at a family dinner honoring an aunt, Mrs. Dee McGee, who is visiting here from Woodlake, California.

Others present were Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Templeton and Carolyn, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Pendergrass, and Mrs. John Pendergrass and daughters Ruth and Marion, all of Sweetwater, Mr. and Mrs. Varnell Templeton and sons Don, Joe and Jerry, Mr. and Mrs. O. I. Griffin and son Wayne, and the J. M. Templetons and daughters Mary, Dixie and Virginia.

UNDER FLOODLIGHTS . . . For 74 years, Seven Falls and South Cheyenne Canyon have been among the major scenic attractions in the Pikes Peak region of Colorado. Visitors now can view the famous falls at night, under electric lights. The waterfall, shown above, is lit by 28 large floodlights with alternating white and color effects.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

Floodlights Now Cast Beam On Scenic Falls and Canyon

WNU Features.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—Embracing "the grandest mile of scenery in Colorado," majestic Seven Falls and picturesque South Cheyenne Canyon have intrigued visitors to the Pikes Peak region for the past 74 years. Their beauties, however, have been shrouded when nightfall descended but now, through completion of an electrical engineering feat, this major scenic attraction of the Rockies can be viewed under electric lights.

The project, which makes this Colorado beauty spot the only completely lighted canyon and waterfall in the world, required the use of 80 huge floodlights and more than 1,000 small spotlights. More than two miles of heavy copper rubber insulated cable was installed underground.

The waterfall, which has seven separate falls in its 266 foot descent, is lit by 28 large floodlights with alternating white and color effects. The crystal clear trout pool at the foot of the falls is lit by eight underwater lights, revealing the rainbow trout gliding about in its depths.

The magnificent weather beaten pink granite walls of the canyon, which rise to a height of more than 2,000 feet, present countless shadow effects as the lights play upon them. Various rock formations, such as the "Settling Turkey," "Devil's Slide" and "Wrestling Bears," are spotlighted by 500 to 1,500 watt lights.

Majestic pine trees on the banks of the splashing mountain stream are bathed in various colored flood lights, while others are sprinkled with colored lights. Standing as a sentinel at the entrance of the canyon are the familiar "Pillars of Hercules." It is at this point that the huge $10,000 anti-aircraft carbon arc light has been installed. The big light has eight million candlepower and shoots an effective beam five miles in the air. The Lonesome Pine, Eagles Cliff and other features of interest are caught in its bright path. It also will be used to sweep the sky to indicate that Seven Falls is now under lights.

As a final touch, a 90 watt sound amplifier system has been installed to play soft music.

Al G. Hill, Dallas, Tex., oil man, who purchased the 1,400 acre scenic attraction June 1, 1946, immediately began a program of improvements which have taken more than a year to complete and have cost approximately $100,000. In addition to the lighting project, a stairway of 250 steps has been erected to a spectators' platform on the south wall of the canyon from which point all Seven Falls can be seen at one time. Part of a mountain slope was removed by bulldozers to provide parking space for cars, and a graceful arch has been erected over the roadway at the mouth of the canyon.

The canyon approximately one mile in length is a "box" or dead end type. Before the coming of the white man, the Indians stampeded herds of buffalo from the plains into the canyon where they then were killed as food was needed. The canyon also served as a strategic retreat from which the Indians fought off their enemies.

Bombing Proves of Peacetime Use

HELENA, MONT.—Bombing techniques which wreaked havoc on enemy cities and military installations during the war also have proved effective in saving valuable timberlands of the northwest through control of forest fires from the air involving spraying water from planes.

A successful test conducted jointly by the forest service and army air forces, a B-29 and two P-47s successfully dropped seven water

At the top of the falls lies a picturesque valley with many small waterfalls and shady nooks. A short hike takes the visitor to Inspiration Point, which is 1,500 feet above the floor of the canyon. From this point, a breathtaking panorama of mighty cliffs and distant plains is seen. The beauty of Inspiration Point inspired Helen Hunt Jackson to write some of her most famous books and poems; and, on her death in 1885, her last request was that she be buried there.

Mule Postman Loses Contract In Remote Area

PORTLAND, ORE.—The lonely existence of the scattered families living in the remote fastness of Siskiyou national forest no longer will be relieved by periodic visits from the mule-driving postman.

The mule-post postal route between the isolated towns of Illabe and Marial, near Grants Pass, has been terminated by the government because the carrier, who has a monopoly on mules, submitted too high a bid.

The action leaves only one route served the year around by mules although 12 others are served by mule and horse during the stormy winter months.

Residents of the remote mountain areas served by the mule routes do their shopping through the mail or direct catalogues and depend upon mule packs for everything—clothing, accoutrements, rifles, even food, according to Fred H. Twoby, railroad mail district superintendent who has spent 10 years traveling the mountain regions to check on his mule postmen.

"One winter not even a horse could get through the heavy snows," Twoby recalls. "The residents were shut off from the world, and there was quite a squawk."

Obliging postmen resorted to sleds to reach the isolated areas, Twoby adds, "and the first thing the people ordered by parcel post was several cases of beer."

The Marial route was typical of the involved carrier setup required to get mail to secluded areas. Mail went 34 miles up a river in a flat-bottomed river boat from Wedderburn. Then it was transferred to mule for an additional 16-mile trip. It was "kind of expensive," Twoby admits, costing about $400 a person to keep the route open. "The stamps don't begin to pay for it," he adds.

"I have a hard time convincing them back in Washington that these routes are worth the expense," Twoby says.

Presidential Travel Is Major Project

Chief Executive Zealously Guarded by Secret Service

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—When President Truman finally announced that he was going to Brazil, he was immediately asked if he contemplated any trips across continental United States. He answered in the negative.

A reporter piped up: "This year or next year?"

"THIS year," the President replied.

That gave the White House press and radio conference a short interlude of laughter. For the reason that whenever a president is forced to drop his role of chief executive to assume the functions of candidate, it is funny. Frequently it isn't funny for the candidate, especially when he has been used to the respect spontaneously and (except in election years) almost universally, tendered his office.

A presidential trip may be, in many cases, fun for the President, but it isn't much fun for a lot of other people.

Not that all Presidents have had easy traveling.

It was an ordeal for the early heads of the nation just to get home in the stagecoach and tavern days.

President Garfield was shot in a railroad station; McKinley was killed by a half-mad anarchist on a trip to the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo; Harding died in San Francisco on his way back from a swing-around that had taken him to Vancouver, Canada; Wilson suffered a stroke in his Pullman; Theodore Roosevelt was wounded while he addressed a meeting on a visit to Milwaukee.

Furthermore, it has been recently revealed by the head of the secret service, Mike Reilly, in his book "Reilly of the White House," that Franklin Roosevelt, who disliked air travel, nearly cracked up in Malta, and might have been assassinated in a park in Miami had he not learned out of his car to take a telegram (Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago was killed and four other persons wounded).

Reilly says "to protect FDR anywhere in the United States."

When a spotter or watcher, either civilian or military, spotted an airplane he or she was unable to identify "any place from Greenland to the Straits of Magellan," the information was radioed immediately to the army air force headquarters at Mitchell Field, N. Y.

The information was immediately evaluated and conveyed by radio and land line to the secret service communication system where men were standing a 24 hour watch. This system tied together Mitchell Field, Bolling Field, the homes, offices and automobiles of various secret service agents, field offices throughout the country, all secret service mobile units, the President's train, Shanghai-La, and the President's room at Hyde Park.

President Kept Informed Constantly

But keeping the President alive is only one activity. Keeping him in touch with his job is another.

Once when a bullying congress demanded of President Grant which if any of his duties he performed in Washington, he replied that his business and where he did it was his own affair. Now a president's out-of-town business is a lot of people's affairs.

In wartime this signal corps detail had the mission of speeding the President's top-secret communications "from the highest level conference tables to installations in the field."

"Today," as Major McNally puts it, "wherever the President travels, the White House signal detachment continues its task of weaving deftly an intricate communications net, which enables the commander-in-chief (and, he might have added, a traveling candidate) to keep himself constantly informed and in touch with the nation."

This work of weaving this "communications net" is an exciting story too long to recount here, but let me quote Major McNally briefly to show how continuous communication was maintained when President Roosevelt made one of his frequent trips to Hyde Park.

"A 50-watt frequency modulation station was modified and installed on the secret service car attached to the presidential train. Army vehicles, radio equipped, were spotted at strategically plotted points along the route between Washington and Poughkeepsie, so that the train was in constant touch with the White House all the way. Another FM radio link was installed in the old stable on the President's estate at Hyde Park. By means of a direct telephone line to Washington and frequency modulation radio, the White House was kept informed of the President's whereabouts at all times."

The speed with which messages could be dispatched and answers received was astounding. When Winston Churchill was making his second visit to Hyde Park, he and the President who were keen competitors as well as close collaborators decided to make a speed test on the communications facilities. Each sent identical messages to Australia over the respective British and United States facilities. The President had an answer in less than two hours; the Prime Minister got his the next day.

Travel has become a presidential must, and Mr. Truman's trip to South America is just routine.

But it is complicated routine for a whole army of people.

What these people do is little known to the public, especially the secret service. One out of every 10 of our presidents has been assassinated up to the time congress turned the job of protecting the chief executive over to the secret service. Since then no president has been assassinated.

Their (the secret service) is a heartbreaking job, and never have the details been so thoroughly revealed (to the discomfiture of some of his former colleagues) as by Mike Reilly in the book I mentioned.

Of course in wartime the job was vastly more complicated, and the army and navy worked closely with the secret service. A special air raid alert system was designed. Reilly says "to protect FDR anywhere in the United States."

Hint American Aid Plan; Truman Acts for DP's

THE AMERICAS:

Aid Promised

"We must reject an encroachment upon the fundamental rights of the state. I am confident that we all agree that the state exists for man, not man for the state—and that we abhor any limitation upon the freedom of expression of men throughout the world."

Thus, in his first address before the inter-American conference at Petropolis, Brazil, U. S. Secretary of State George Marshall issued a reaffirmation of democratic principles in the western hemisphere and then bulwarked his expression of idealism with specific assurances of U. S. economic aid to Latin America.

He told the delegates that the U. S. government "will continue to take up economic questions with its sister republics and seek a sound basis for practical cooperation."

Marshall at Rio

"... the state exists for man . . ."

That was interpreted as meaning that the U. S. is willing to help solve Latin America's economic problems through a series of bi-lateral pacts. There was also a hint that the big northern neighbor is counting on sending down its capital.

DP SHUFFLE:

Truman Acts

President Harry Truman, in a renewed effort to alleviate the "tragic plight" of Europe's displaced persons, ordered a three-way shift in the top command of the U. S. immigration and naturalization service.

In addition, it was disclosed that administration officials in Washington have resumed their review of the problem of displaced persons.

Most important personnel shift involved the transfer of Ugo Carusi from his post as commissioner of immigration to a position in the state department where he will survey all "critical" problems relating to displaced persons, particularly their resettlement.

This is expected to result in added stress being placed on a directive Mr. Truman issued in December, 1945, calling for coordinated action by federal officials to admit as many displaced persons as possible within quota limitations.

Watson B. Miller, federal security administrator, succeeds Carusi as commissioner of immigration, and Oscar Ross Ewing, New York lawyer, replaces Miller.

President Truman's action was taken in the face of congress' refusal to act on his proposal to relax immigration quotas.

Headliners

IN DALLAS . . . Mrs. Warren J. Woodward, 24, housewife, got up in arms about legs.

She organized the "Little Below the Knee Club" for women who oppose the long skirt now in style. The girl's organized a parade and ankle through Dallas streets to give emphasis to their protest.

IN LAS VEGAS . . . Senator McCarthy (Rep., Wis.) put the bite on congress for its "do nothing" attitude toward veterans. Congress, said he, "did foully by our disabled veterans, their widows and dependents."

IN BALMORAL SCOTLAND . . . Princess Margaret Rose of England, just turned 17, received as a birthday present her first military title—colonel-in-chief of the Highland light infantry.

CRYSTAL BALL:

Next President

General Douglas MacArthur will be the next president of the United States.

That, at least, is the occult prediction of a 75-year-old Japanese fortune teller, Kakudo Tomioka, who eulogized: "MacArthur was a glorious future in store for him."

Tomioka, who is said to have a record of several accurate predictions, placed the general on a plane with Mohandas Gandhi if the field of social welfare.

"There presently are two living men who have succeeded in realizing a peaceful revolution," he said. "They are MacArthur and Gandhi. But, then, Gandhi's mission is over. And MacArthur has his most glorious task to accomplish for the world in the future."

It was not immediately known whether MacArthur would use Tomioka's recommendation as a plank in his platform if he runs in 1948.

SURPLUS: Budget Review

President Truman's budget business made big news again when the chief executive (1) forecast a record treasury surplus next June of nearly five billion dollars, and (2) hurt Republican feelings by telling the nation that congress trimmed the 1947 budget estimates by only 1.5 billion dollars.

His mid-year budget review estimated tax receipts this year at $41,857,000,000, which is 2.1 billion dollars more than any previous forecast.

Mr. Truman made his announcement coincidentally with a bureau of labor report which indicated that the U. S., far from being in for a business depression, can look forward to a period of prosperity continuing "indefinitely."

New Product Keeps Potato Sproutless

Problem of Storage Now Aided by New Methods

The sprouting, shriveling and sogginess of potatoes when kept at room temperatures now can be prevented with use of barsprout. The treated potatoes remain firm, practically farm-fresh, and not only cook but also taste better. The product is equally effective on certain other root crops such as beets, carrots, turnips and rutabagas.

The active ingredient is methyl ester of naphthaleneacetic acid. When applied to the potatoes as a dust, it vaporizes and literally "gets into their eyes," keeping them from sprouting. Feeding tests have shown that the chemical imparts no harmful effect. Tests have been conducted for the past five years at leading agricultural experiment stations.

By this treatment the potatoes may be kept at ordinary room temperatures without sprouting and without formation of reducing sugar. Ordinarily potatoes are held below 45 degrees and shrink 5 percent in weight, developing reducing sugars which affect color and taste.

The FICTION Corner

BETTER LATE

By EDWARD STEVENSON

WELL, I'm certainly glad you're not seasick. When I first saw you leaning over the rail I said to myself that you must be seasick, though I couldn't see how anybody could get seasick with the water so calm the way it is. Our room steward says that anybody that gets seasick in this kind of weather wouldn't be safe on the lake in Central Park. He's a regular comedian. . . . And that reminds me, how much do you think I ought to tip him—the room steward. I mean, I'm not one that don't have to count my pennies, but still I want to do the right thing as to tipping.

You see, this is the first time we've been on a boat—my wife and me. I mean, of course we've taken a trip up the Hudson with the kids, but I guess you wouldn't mention the Hudson River Day Line in the same breath with the S. S. Goliath, would you? The kids thought it was grand, though. They're grown up and married now, with kids of their own—except Judy, that is, and she hardly had time, not having been married quite a year yet—but it don't seem more than yesterday that they were running about like a bunch of wild Indians and getting into all sorts of mischief. Time certainly flies.

Whew! It's getting hot, isn't it? We must be coming into the tropics from the way it feels. Ever been down here before, Mr. — I don't think you mentioned your name, did you? . . . Arthur? . . . Well, I'm glad to know you, Mr. Arthur. My name's Bentham. I'd like you to meet my wife some time, too. That's her laying in that deck chair down at the end. She's making believe she's reading that book, but she's sound asleep. The salt air seems to tucker her out.

As I was saying, time certainly flies. Now, you take me. Why, it seems it's only the other day that Ellen and me were getting married; and here we are, grandparents of six already.

We've been married thirty-five years. It don't seem possible, but that's what it is, all right. Why, say, I can remember the wedding just as plain as if it happened last week. It wasn't much of a wedding—you know, no fuss and feathers. Besides, Ellen and I and the minister there was only the minister's wife and the church janitor, for witness. But I can still see the five of us standing there in the chapel, with the sun coming through a high window and falling all around us and turning everything golden. I remember Ellen specially. She was so pretty and little.

When I look back, I think Ellen and I must've been crazy, getting married the way we did. My gosh, I didn't have a cent to my name—it was all I could do to scrape up the money for the wedding ring. Engagement rings and honeymoons and all the fixings were out of reach as far as we were concerned.

I felt pretty bad, taking her right from church to a $2.50-a-week furnished room. A wonderful girl like her deserved better, and I told her so. A big wedding, a reception at the Waldorf—the old Waldorf, you know—and a honeymoon at Niagara Falls was little enough to her. But she just laughed. "If I wanted such truck," she says, "I'd've married Mr. Astor and not Johnny Bentham." That's the way she is. I didn't mind so much not having a big church affair, or a reception afterwards, but, gosh, what's a wedding without a honeymoon? I mean, it made me feel kind of low, not being able to provide even that.

You know, marrying Ellen was the making of me. I was just a shipping clerk at the time, but she made me study bookkeeping and when an opening in the company

Well, last year our company did pretty well and they gave all the old employees a month's pay for a bonus at Christmas—first bonus we'd had in years. So what did I do? Well, I figured with all the kids married and no one to take care of but ourselves, that we didn't have any real need for the money, so I didn't breathe a word about it to Ellen. You see, I'd been seeing these cruise ads in the papers and I thought to myself that's just the thing for Ellen and I. Twelve days, Nassau, Jamaica and Cuba, $125 and up. I didn't say anything till about two weeks before we were to sail. Then I broke the news. Well you could've knocked Ellen over with a feather.

"First thing I knew she threw her arms around me."

came along I stepped right in. I'm head bookkeeper now. Of course that isn't so much—there's only one other bookkeeper—but being head of anything is pretty good these days, I always say. A couple of years back when I'd been with the company thirty-five years they put on a dinner for me at Jack Dempsey's and gave me a watch. Here it is. See what it says. "To John W. Bentham"—that's my full name—"for thirty-five years of devoted service. Atlas Paper & Supply Co." Mr. Stover, the president, made a speech. I did too—but I was too choked up to say much. You can bet I'd never've slipped around to get that watch if it hadn't been for Ellen.

And the kids, too, of course. When you get to be a family man you got to tend to business. Kit—that's short for Christopher—was the first; then Roger, Cynthia, Anthony, and Judy, the baby. Nice names, ain't they? Ellen picked 'em out.

They're all grown up now—fine young men and women, if I do say so myself—but there was times when you just wondered if they ever would. It was just one thing after another. Sick or healthy, they had you up to your neck in bills.

"Johnny Bentham," she says, "are you out of your mind?" "No," I says. "And I haven't robbed a bank, neither." So I told her all about the bonus.

Well, she still thought I was crazy. "Spending all that money on a little trip," she says. "Do you think we're millionaires? Johnny, I'll never put foot on that boat."

"Now, that's a fine howdydo!" I says, making out I'm insulted. "A woman refusing to go on a honeymoon with her husband!"

Well, she just looked at me and I just looked at her, and first thing you know she threw her arms around me and began kissing me, and what did the two of us do but end up laughing and crying like a couple of kids.

"Gosh, Mama," I says. "It's better late than never, ain't it?" . . . Say, will you look at them porpoises!

Book Reviews In Brief

THE CAMPBELLS ARE COMING—Glenn H. Campbell (Dodd, Mead & Co., $4).

The origin of the Clan Campbell and the history of Scotland are synonymous and here the author, as a bearer of the famous name, takes the most interesting aspects of each and has woven them into a skillfully drawn account of the Campbells' hand in Scottish affairs.

Liberally illustrated, the book contains historical information written in an absorbing narrative form. In every Scotch crisis a Campbell had a responsible role in the ultimate outcome. One of the best chapters in the book concerns the story of the ill-fated Mary, Queen of Scots, on whose side the Campbells remained loyal with almost disastrous results.

The author, an advertising executive of Cleveland, O., took many pains to bring his readers an accurate, descriptive history of the Campbells. Not content with a long and diligent research in local libraries, he travelled to Scotland and covered personally the territory about which he writes. While the book is of primary interest to the Campbells themselves, many of whom know nothing of the fascinating background of the clan, every individual of Scotch descent and scholars of every nationality will find something appealing in its pages.

National Park Ideals

National parks in the United States, created by act of congress, are areas of national significance distinguished by superlative natural scenery, set aside for preservation as nearly as possible in unimpaired condition and dedicated to the use and inspiration of the people. In establishing the Yellowstone, first national park, congress designated it "a public park or pleasuring-ground for the benefit and enjoyment of the people," and provided against "injury or spoliation of all timber, mineral deposits, natural curiosities or wonders within said park, and their retention in their natural conditions. In establishing national parks no thought is given to geographic location. The area proposed for national park use is considered primarily from the standpoint of whether or not its principal features are of broad, national interest.

SOAP BOX SPEEDWAY . . . The tenth anniversary running of the all-American and international soap box derby got under way at Akron, Ohio, with a spectacular pre-race parade, all derby entrants participating. The derby, won this year by Kenny Holmboe of Charleston, W. Va., was held on a special track built for the motorless speedsters.

BIG CHECK FOR CANCER RESEARCH . . . California has received its first $100,000 allocation from the Damon Runyon memorial fund for cancer research, presented by a group of representative leaders of the motion picture and radio profession in behalf of the treasurer, Walter Winchell. Presentation was made to the California division of the American Cancer Society, represented by Dr. Lyell C. Kinney. Shown left to right are: Tyrone Power, Danny Kaye, Greer Garson, Dr. Kinney, Frank Sinatra, Bob Hope and Jimmy Durante.

WILD BLUE YONDER GIRL . . . Calm confidence radiates from the face of Jane Page, 25, of Wilmette, Ill., who entered as a contestant in the national Bendix air races to pit her flying skill against the best male aviators in the world. One of her opponents was Bill Odum, solo globe-hopper. Miss Page sits atop the P-38 in which she planned to compete for the $10,000 Bendix prize money.

MOSAIC OF LAST SUPPER . . . F. F. Burritt, retired Portland, Ore., plumber, who has been dabbling in mosaic work for several years, is shown with his recently completed Last Supper. The 5 by 10 foot mosaic contains 40,000 pieces of vari-colored rock, all picked up from beaches between Portland and California. It took Burritt 9,700 hours to complete the detailed work which is an exact reproduction of Da Vinci's immortal painting.

BEST PICTURE . . . This photograph by Lloyd MacLean was awarded first prize in the fourth annual Hollywood studios still photograph show. It is a still from "Stallion Road."

PARKED AND HAPPY . . . To protect the tot from any do-gooder who might want to cart her off to the lost and found department, Barbara Salmon's mom put this sign on the big waste paper basket where she parked the girl.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter acids and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by practical nurses everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

ANNOUNCEMENT

To Owners of Armed Forces

Leave Bonds

This bank is authorized by the United States Treasury Department to cash Armed Forces Leave Bonds for registered owners.

President Truman has said: "If veterans choose the wise course, hold their bonds and continue to draw 2½% interest, their dollars will buy more when they cash their bonds after inflationary conditions have eased. I urge veterans not to cash their bonds unless they are in urgent need of the money now."

Under no circumstances may registered owners cash their bonds before September 2, 1947.

Questions and Answers

Q. If I get a guaranteed loan under the G. I. Bill, does the government pay any part of the loan for me?

A. Yes, Veterans Administration pays the lender, for credit to your loan account, an amount equal to 4 percent of the guaranteed portion of the loan.

Q. I understand that the government will guarantee up to $4,000 on a business loan. Is this correct?

A. It is correct if the business loan is for the purchase of business real estate property, but if the loan is for non-real estate property, the maximum guarantee cannot be more than $2,000.

Q. My husband is a World War 2 veteran and often becomes suddenly ill because of malaria. How and where do I apply for hospitalization for him?

A. You should see your nearest VA contact representative or apply at a Veterans Administration regional office or hospital. In an emergency call the nearest VA office, collect.

Earning and Spending

LESSON TEXT FOR SEPTEMBER 7
Proverbs 11:24-27; 16:8; Ecclesiastes 5:10, 11; James 5:1-6.

MEMORY SELECTION—Better is a little with righteousness than great revenues without right.—Proverbs 16:8.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, used by permission.

By WILLIAM CULBERTSON, D. D., Of The Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

AS BELIEVERS in Christ we are responsible not only for the way we earn our living, but for the way we spend what we earn.

Of course we must earn our living honestly, but if we spend foolishly that which we have earned, we shall have dissipated much of the effect of our example in earning.

Possessions are a trust from God, and we shall have to render an account of our stewardship.

Just because we have given a certain percentage of our income to Christian causes is no reason to think we shall meet with divine approbation with regard to our stewardship. If we give a tithe, well and good, but what about the other nine-tenths? Is God pleased with our stewardship there?

I. The Vanity of Wealth (Eccles. 5:10, 11).

IN ANY study of wealth, it seems necessary to begin with an understanding of its limitations. We live in a world in which men frequently lay great importance on possessions, and indeed, there are many things which wealth can purchase. On the other hand, there are some things that money cannot buy. And further, we should recognize that our possessions are not eternal, that they may suddenly fade away.

The passage here reminds us of the fact that wealth for wealth's sake is bound to be a disappointment. The man who loves silver shall not be satisfied with silver, any more than the man who loves pleasure shall be satisfied with pleasure. Augustine was right when he said that man could be satisfied with no less than God himself.

Notice how accurately the picture is drawn. If we have increased wealth, we have increased responsibility (v. 11). That fact is as unalterable as the most rigid law we know. The only advantage is, as the Preacher expresses it, the beholding of goods with the eye—not a very great advantage after all.

II. The Proper Accumulation of Wealth (Prov. 16:8).

IT IS just as true as when Solomon wrote it, that "Better is a little, with righteousness, than great revenues without justice."

This statement needs no argument, needs no proof. If we would have the honor of men, self-respect, and the blessing of God, there is no alternative.

III. The Improper Accumulation of Wealth (James 5:1-6).

THE apostle James speaks of a condition that will obtain in the last days (v. 3). There are many evidences that the condition he describes has had altogether too many fulfillments in recent history. James excommunicates the rich who have defrauded their employees in order that they might fare sumptuously and live riotous. These unscrupulous rich have taken advantage because they were not resisted (v. 6). Such wealth is corrupted.

Notice once again that the result of their sin will rise to break them. It is a serious thing to trifle with sin, to eat the bread of iniquity. God has no patience with iniquity in social relationships. Sooner or later judgment will come.

IV. The Proper Use of Wealth (Prov. 11:24-27).

LIBERALITY should characterize the child of God. It is true that the Bible condemns the attitude of imprudence, yet it also condemns the attitude of the miser. To withhold more than is meet, also tends to want.

How blessedly true it is that there is a recompense to giving. Here we read that the one who waters shall himself be watered. Our Lord affirmed the same truth in Luke 6:38.

To have it within our power to help, and fail to do so, is to bring upon ourselves censure and condemnation. Therefore, we should seek to perform the good (v. 27).

This passage concludes with the statement that one who searches after evil shall find that evil will come to him. The man who sets his heart to do wrong will not have to wait long to find the occasion to do that which is in his heart.

Many are the injunctions in the New Testament regarding the proper use of wealth. For example, the Christian has a duty toward his own family (I Tim. 5:8). He is enjoined to be sympathetic and generous in his giving to help others (II Cor. 8:1-15). Certainly he is to dispense his goods with the glory of God in view (cf. Col. 3:17).

Can We Absorb 400,000 Refugees?

CONGRESS failed to enact the Stratton bill admitting 400,000 displaced persons from Europe. This is bestirring considerable bitterness among people who can make themselves bitter about such matters, believing the United States should be a refuge for anyone who needs a political haven. These people had spread their own impression that a critical emergency on the issue requires immediate action.

There are perhaps 1,000,000 Europeans who do not wish to return to their homes for political or social reasons (they fear to go under the wing of Communism). About 21 per cent are children; 13 per cent are over 44 years old; 20 per cent are Jews; 65 per cent are Catholic; 15 per cent Protestants; a majority was in agriculture before the war.

Congress realized the problem could not be solved simply by opening American immigration gates to let the mass flow in, although some evidence indicated many had relatives here who might support them.

Perhaps a faster part-answer to the problem will be found at the forthcoming meeting of foreign ministers of the Americas. Certainly Latin America is a young and growing area in which immigration and colonization is needed more than in the United States. Better opportunities for the DPs may exist there. For us to absorb some may be found economically feasible for both them and us. An All-America agreement would certainly be better than a United States decision alone.

H. I. PHILLIPS

Dangers of the Open Road

The papers inform me of approval of a super-duper national highway system to embrace the whole United States. It will connect 42 state capitals and link the larger cities of the land by express highways, viaducts and tunnels.

Link 42 state capitals by super-highway my eye! Unlink a few of 'em, say I.

There are too many good highways already and too many people going places on them. Instead of broader highways with fewer stoplights we need narrower ones with more stop-lights if the population is not to be kept in a state of sustained flight from home and fireside. Americans were a sturdier, more likeable, steadier and genuinely happier people when they were home part of the time.

What does Russia want? Can it be a cut in the world series? Two for "Oklahoma"? An end to husband and wife radio programs?

Why the apparent hatred of America and all things American? Have some of Stalin's friends been using our subways?

DREW PEARSON

Junkets to Alaska

IT'S AMAZING HOW MANY congressmen suddenly find they have urgent business in Alaska this summer—with travel paid for by the sweltering taxpayer back home. Even Cong. Evan Howell, Illinois Republican, now appointed to the U. S. court of claims and who won't pass on airfield sites any more, now finds he is needed in Alaska to inspect new airfield routes.

Here are the different congressional groups that have found urgent business in Alaska, though this summer they are careful to pay personally the expenses of their wives and families:

- Junket No. 1—Senate public lands committee.
- Junket No. 2—Senate small business committee.
- Junket No. 3—House interstate commerce committee.
- Junket No. 4—House public lands committee.

Whereas the senators made no effort to conceal their Alaskan trips, Wolverton's interstate commerce junket tried to get off without public notice.

If these legislators really got to know Alaska, their visits might be beneficial; since that neglected territory deserves consideration for statehood. So far, however, few congressmen have been willing to pay much attention to Alaskan problems, except during the summer.

WALTER WINCHELL

Oddities in the New York Scene

At one time New York City threatened to secede from the union and form an independent nation. . . . The mammoth illuminated sign atop Doctors hospital is a signpost for mariners and also a reminder not to foot their boat whistles in front of the hospital. . . . Many of the trees in New York streets manage to exist by pushing their roots into sewers to absorb water.

Bryant park — don't be surprised. It used to be a cemetery. . . . When tathtubs first were introduced in New York, the very cautious board of health ordered citizens not to use them without first consulting their doctor.

The Big Town's most arresting landscape can be viewed from the heights of Fort Tryon park. . . . Wall Street got its tag because the Dutch erected a wall there (centuries ago) when they feared an invasion. . . . The reason some streets in the Big Town have feminine names: When those streets were parts of farms, the farmers honored their wives by naming lanes after them. . . . The grimmest sea voyage is taken by the tug that ferries cadavers from Bellevue to Hart's island for burial.

WALTER SHEAD

What About Federal Spending?

FEDERAL spending in general and President Truman's 1947 budget in particular combined to make a wonderfully bouncy political football which both parties have kicked about sportively all year. (A political football is a thin tissue of truths and half-truths inflated out of all proportion with air of a strictly torrid temperature.) As a result, the average American working man continues to go about thoughtfully rubbing two nickels together and wondering if his government is really as extravagant as a night club blonde or whether it is making a genuine effort to cut financial corners.

What is the truth? Probably it is impossible to get an accurate bearing on all the true facts. The Republican congress raised a victory chant over its cutting of Mr. Truman's budget estimates. And, if we can believe what we read, many agency appropriations were slashed considerably, including the army, navy, interior department and agriculture department.

But the President, with a weather eye out for his big day in November, 1948, has come up with another idea. He has accused congress of working the hidden ball trick, intimating that the illustrious members have shifted various budget items around to produce the illusion that they have effected a great savings. In other words, did we put any money in the bank, or did we blow it all at the races?

WRIGHT PATTERSON

Wholesome Entertainment Best

On the lawns of the Orange, Calif., high school building grounds we ate a pot luck dinner, and then everyone attended the ball game between teams of the Rotarians and the Lions. Everyone knew all the players, business and professional men of the town. That game produced more thrills, was more wildly exciting, than any professional game I ever witnessed in the Cubs or the White Sox parks in Chicago. It must have been good, for it ended in a tie of 0 to 0. Such recreation as that pot luck dinner and ball game has replaced, for us, the attempt to find thrills at the theaters, night clubs and other spots.

Budget Pointers

There's a tendency to go along with the crowd when it comes to spending money, especially on food, instead of seeing what can be done to stretch the food dollar. Getting the most out of the food dollar does not, fortunately, mean that we have to tighten our belts; it just means a bit of maneuvering.

In the midst of soaring food costs, there's plenty of help for the woman who wants it, and today's recipes are designed to give you plenty of food for thought. Give your family a change of menu, and give the budget a chance to stay within its limits at the same time.

There are several general rules to follow: Buy wisely; don't overbuy and let food go to waste; serve and cook whatever you have properly, and don't toss away good leftovers.

For main dishes you can call on good quality proteins for front line duty; they're cheaper than the expensive cuts of meat and do just as much for you.

Macaroni-Cheese Souffle.

(Serves 6)
1 cup uncooked macaroni
1 cup sweet cream or condensed milk
½ cup butter or substitute
1 cup soft bread crumbs
½ green pepper, minced
1 medium green onion, minced
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
½ cup grated cheddar cheese
Salt and pepper
4 eggs, separated

Cook macaroni in boiling, salted water until tender. Drain; scald milk and add other ingredients. Stir in beaten yolks, then fold in stiffly beaten whites. Turn into a greased casserole and set in a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for one hour. Serve with mushroom or pimiento cream sauce.

Eggs Foo Young.

(Serves 6)
6 eggs, beaten
1 No. 2 can bean sprouts
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
½ cup shredded onion
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
½ pound mushrooms, sliced, if desired

Add salt and pepper to eggs and beat well. Add remaining ingredients. Taste and add more seasoning if desired. For each cake, measure out ½ cup of the mixture and use 1 tablespoon of fat for frying. Pour mixture into skillet, leveling vegetables evenly over the surface of the cake. Brown on both sides, turning once. About five minutes are required to cook each cake. Serve with soy sauce.

Rice Nests With Egg.

(Serves 6)
½ cup butter or substitute
1½ cups cooked rice
8 slices bacon
4 eggs
Salt and pepper

Butter a baking dish and place rice in it, forming nests out of it with a spoon. Broil the bacon and place one strip around each nest, holding it in place with a toothpick. Break an egg in each nest and sprinkle with salt and pepper and dot with butter. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until the white of the egg is cooked but the yolk tender. This will take five to six minutes.

Among the kind - to - the - budget items is corned beef hash that comes canned and ready-to-serve. It's easily dressed up in pinwheels of baking powder biscuit dough, and certain to be a favorite with the men of the house.

*Corned Beef Hash Rolls.

(Serves 4)
1 cup sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup shortening
¾ to 1 cup milk
1 1-pound can corned beef hash
Mix dry ingredients together and sift. Work in shortening. Add liquid gradually, mixing to a soft dough. Roll to a thickness of about one-fourth inch. Spread corned beef hash on dough; roll and cut in four parts. Place on a greased cookie sheet (lifting with a pancake turner). Bake in a moderately hot (400-degree) oven for 30 minutes.

For an easy vegetable, take a can of green beans and make this:

*Sweet Sour Green Beans.

(Serves 4 to 5)
2 strips bacon
1 small onion
1 No. 2 can green beans
2 teaspoons sugar
Salt and pepper
¼ cup vinegar

Cut the bacon in half inch pieces. Brown lightly with diced onion. Add liquid drained from green beans. Cook down to about ¼ cup. Add remaining ingredients and beans. Heat and serve.

If you want to keep the budget trimmed, don't splurge on desserts.

*Date-Nut Custard Pudding.

(Serves 6)
1 egg
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of cinnamon
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 8-ounce can date-nut bread
Beat egg slightly, add milk, sugar and salt. Cook in a double boiler until mixture coats the spoon. Remove from hot water and stir in lemon rind and cinnamon. Cut date-nut bread into pieces and combine with custard. Chill.

Here's a cookie that will take care of leftover egg whites and bread crumbs. Serve it with fruit for a nice, light dessert:

Pecan Brownies.

(Makes 3 dozen)
2 egg whites
1 cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon maple flavoring
1 cup pecans, chopped
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
Beat egg whites until stiff, add sugar and flavoring. Stir well, then fold in nuts and crumbs. Shape into small balls, place on a greased baking pan and bake in a slow (325-degree) oven for about 20 minutes.

Lima beans take on new character if they are well seasoned with salt and pepper plus a crumbly of crisply fried bacon.

A good relish with sliced leftover meat? Mix together 1 cup of applesauce, ½ cup of whipped cream and ¼ cup grated or pureed horseradish.

Do up your gingerbread right by serving it with a whipped cream topping. Use two tablespoons of molasses folded in 1 cup of the cream when whipped.

Star Spangled Banner Key Watched Had 15 Stripes

The Star Spangled Banner that Francis Scott Key watched "through the perilous fight" had fifteen stripes. From 1795 to 1818 the American flag had fifteen alternating red and white stripes. Two extra stripes stood for the two newest states in the Union, Vermont and Kentucky, admitted in 1791 and '92.

Bees Don't See Red—Even When They Sting

Bees can see most colors, but are color blind to red. For that reason flowers dependent upon bees for pollination are seldom red. Poppies are an exception to this rule, however, due to their peculiar construction—for poppies not only reflect the red rays which humans see, but in addition a large percentage of the ultra-violet rays beyond our vision. It is these ultra-violet rays which attract the bees, and not the red.
