Senate passes budget pact

■ Lawmakers rush to pass bills before adjourning, including the most comprehensive clean air legislation in 13 years, as Bush agrees to sign the deficit-reduction package.

By Alan Fram

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress gave final approval to a record package of taxes and spending cuts Saturday as lawmakers dashed through a stack of major bills and toward adjournment of their long election-year session.

The Senate voted 54-45 to embrace the budget compromise, the centerpiece of a $496 billion deficit-reduction plan — and President Bush said he would sign it into law. The action came a few hours after the Senate gave final congressional approval to the most wide-ranging clean air bill in 13 years.

The deficit-reduction measure reaches into the wallets of everyone from buyers of gasoline to Medicare recipients but takes special aim at the rich. Voting for the budget were 35 Democrats and 19 Republicans. It was opposed by 20 Democrats and 25 Republicans.

■ Drilling incentives safe/ 11B

President Bush said in Honolulu that he would sign the bill "because for the first time we've made significant and long term cuts in federal spending that should have a positive impact on America's economic future."

Noting that the bargaining that led to the budget has "sometimes been painful," the president said:

"All political points of view have sacrificed to bring this agreement about. Needless to say I don't like raising taxes, never will. But there is a price to divided government and that means that I have had to compromise on items that I feel strongly about in order to do what I think is best for the country."

Congress hikes state's federal judges by 11

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress voted Saturday to increase the number of federal judgeships in Texas by 11 to 47. Three of the seats are in the state's Western District based in Midland.

The measure sends eight new judges to the Texas' Southern and Western judicial districts, which lead the nation in drug case filings and consequently have huge backloads.

Senators approved the bill by a voice vote Saturday afternoon and the House approved it a short time later, also by a voice vote, sending it to President Bush. The bill was one of the last to be approved by the 101st Congress, which planned to adjourn after passing a 1991 budget.

The last time Congress created new judgeships was in 1984. Drug cases have increased 130 percent nationwide since then and now represent about one-third of all criminal cases in federal courts, officials say.

The Senate version of the bill originally contained fewer new judges for Texas. But both Texas senators, Democrat Lloyd Bentsen and Republican Phil Gramm, pushed its sponsor, Delaware Democrat Joe Biden, to accept 11.

"Our federal court dockets are seriously overloaded," Bentsen said. "It takes years to try civil cases because of the backlog of drug cases."

For Texas, the bill gives one new judge for the Tyler-based Eastern District, two for Dallas-based Northern District, three for the Midland-based Western District and five for the Houston-based Southern District.

Rusk alumni treated to Halloween message

By David Morris

Carolyn Doolittle watched as her six-year-old son Kelly signed his name on a giant Halloween banner bound for U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia.

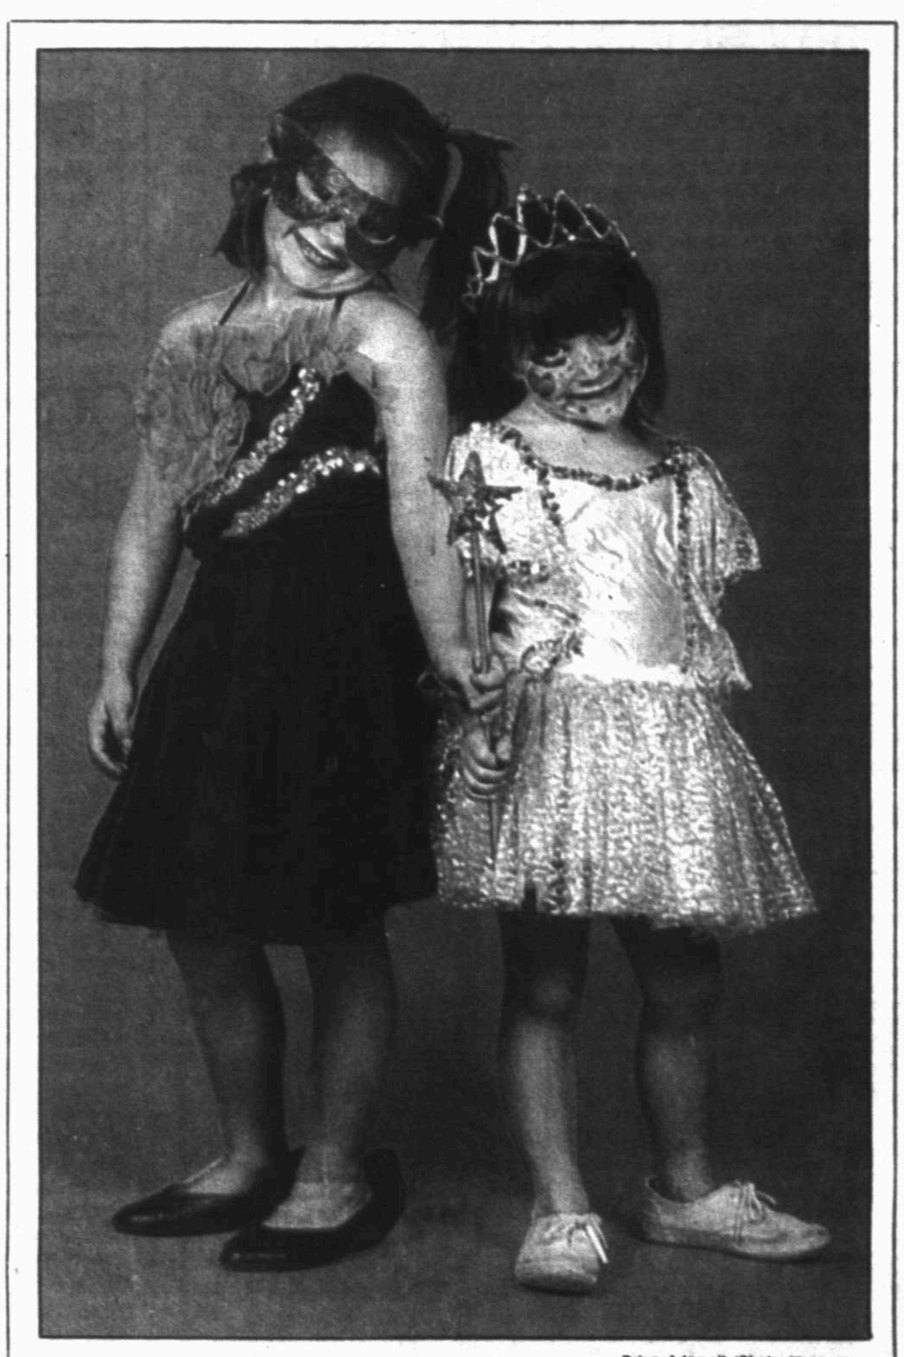

"He's signed his name for the guys in the Middle East, but I hope he's not signing up to go later on himself," she said.

Kelly was among hundreds of Rusk and Bush elementary school pupils who took time out from the schools' joint Halloween carnival Saturday night to send their regards to two U.S. Marines who are Rusk alumni.

2nd Lt. James Scott Welbourn, a 1984 Midland High School graduate, and Cpl. Jason C. Ramsey, who graduated from Lee High School in 1983, both attended Rusk in the early '70s.

Spirited holiday wear can still be safe

On Wednesday evening, Midland neighborhoods will once again be haunted by ghosts and goblins.

Or at least children in the guise of these scary creatures as well as others less frightening.

And with the spirit of Halloween, parents, children and motorists should take extra safety precautions to help prevent a night of fun from turning into a true horror.

Car accidents involving children are the biggest concern for safety on Halloween, said Ron Sartor, with the Midland Police Department's community relations division.

"It is an exciting time of the year for kids and drivers don't normally expect kids to dart out in front of cars," Sartor said, adding that small children are hard to spot between parked cars along the street.

Midland utility, taxi rates top those of other area cities

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Taxi fees and residential water and garbage collection rates in Midland are high compared with charges for those services in five other West Texas cities, a Reporter-Telegram survey has found.

Midland's residential water rate tops the list of cities, which includes Odessa, Big Spring, Abilene, San Angelo and Lubbock.

The residential garbage pickup rate here is second only to Lubbock, while taxi rates here exceed those in Odessa, Big Spring and Abilene. Cab fees in San Angelo and Lubbock are not set by the city governments, although the rate schedules receive City Council review.

Meanwhile, Midland's residential sewer rate is the lowest compared with sewer charges in the other five cities polled. Even a 2 percent rate hike proposal, which was approved on first reading in a close vote by city councilmen last week, would not move the sewer rate from the list's bottom.

For water, the city of Midland charges residents $10 for up to 2,000 gallons used monthly and $1.83 per 1,000 gallons thereafter. For the average residential water customer using 18,000 gallons monthly, the bill is $39.28.

Big Spring and Lubbock residential water customers who use 18,000 gallons pay $38.34 and $33.32, respectively, making them the only two cities on the list charging above $30 for that quan-

Sunny skies reign supreme

Staff Report

National Weather Service forecasters at Midland International Airport are calling for sunny skies today, with a high in the mid-70s. Winds will be from the south-southeast at 5 to 15 mph.

Tonight will be clear with a low in the mid-40s.

Monday will be sunny with a high in the low 80s.

Saturday's high was 81, compared to the record for Oct. 27 of 90 set in 1988. The overnight low was 42. The record low for today's date is 34, set in 1980.

STATE

Texas enjoyed mostly clear skies Saturday as a weak cold front crept into the Permian Basin and far western portions of the state.

A narrow band of high clouds stretched along the northern edge of the front, and northeast winds swept west Texas at 15-25 mph. Afternoon temperatures ranged from 64 at Dalhart to 84 at El Paso.

The rest of the state basked under mostly clear skies and warm temperatures.

Temperatures across most of south Texas reached the 70s, while extreme southern portions of the state experienced patchy coastal cloudiness and highs in the 80s.

A new surge of dry air moved into north Texas and by afternoon was located from near Sherman to between Lubbock and Midland.

High pressure was expected to build over northern portions of the state Saturday night, settling over the area on Sunday.

The cold front and its accompanying high pressure system was expected to provide fair skies and cool temperatures across the state through Monday.

CONGRESS: Bush says deal good for country

adjournment — to tell Bush that Congress was nearing the close of business.

"Your biggest problem is over, Mr. President. Congress is going to leave," quipped Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, expressed special gratitude to Bush for his support of tough clean air legislation.

Bush said, "I know we've had some altercations along the way, but the (tax and budget) deal you've hammered out is good for the country.'

As debate began on the measure — which sat 10 inches tall on senators' desks and weighed 24 pounds — lawmakers said the sacrifices it would demand were necessitated by years of growing budget gaps that have helped weaken the economy.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., said the measure would begin a "fundamental adjustment to too many years of indulgence and excess."

"It will be worse for America, worse for this decade, worse for our children if we do not reduce this lingering, pervasive deficit now," said the budget panel's ranking Republican, Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico.

With two of the White House officials who helped negotiate the plan watching from the visitors' gallery — chief of staff John Sununu and budget director Richard Darman — opponents objected that farmers would be hit too hard and that the measure imposed a new burden taxpayers do not need.

"You're going to see the working, struggling people of this country will be hit by increased taxes and fees," said Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss.

But after 10 months of intense and partisan budget warfare, exhausted lawmakers said it was time to close the deal.

"I've left my wife without much firewood out in the country," joked Sen. James Jeffords, R-Vt. "It's time to get home."

Tired and testy, the lawmakers pushed to complete work on a host of bills standing in the way of a hoped-for weekend adjournment, including final passage of historic clean air legislation.

■ The House worked out some last-minute snags on Senate-passed legislation embracing the first major overhaul of the nation's legal immigration system in a quarter-century, and the bill was passed and readied for dispatch to the White House.

■ Congress passed legislation that would establish new grant programs for child care and increase tax credits for low-income families with children in the name of child-care assistance.

■ Both chambers neared the finish of work on bills appropriating money for government operations for the budget year that started Oct. 1, including final passage of a $15.5 billion foreign aid bill. When all in place, they will appropriate approximately $1.2 trillion to operate the government for the current fiscal year.

■ Congress approved emergency financing of the government through Nov. 5, the fifth temporary extension of spending authority since Oct. 1. This will keep the government going while the deficit-reduction bill is drafted into legislative form and signed by Bush. Federal authority to spend money technically ended at midnight Saturday night. The stopgap was to be flown to Bush and the White House said he would sign it in San Francisco either today or Monday.

Just before dawn Saturday, the House approved the budget 228-200.

SAFE: Parents need to review precautions with their children

(From 1A)

In addition, dusk — a time when many children hit the trick-or-treat trail — is the time of poorest visibility for drivers, Sartor said.

As a precaution, Sartor advises motorists to "watch out for the unexpected — kids."

But roadways are not the only threat on Halloween night.

"This year we are concerned about jack-o-lanterns. The candles can ignite other things — like costumes — so we recommend carrying flashlights," Sartor said.

Another area of concern is children's contact with strangers. Parents should review safety precautions about strangers prior to trick-or-treating.

But the best protection against strangers is keeping an eye on children while out Halloween evening.

"Parents — not older brothers or sisters — should go along," Sartor recommended.

Children should be instructed to only approach homes that are well lighted and only go to homes in their neighborhood or homes of friends or family.

Children should not be allowed to consume any treats until they have been inspected by a parent.

As a preventive measure against tampered candy, the radiology department of Midland Memorial Hospital will X-ray treats on Halloween from 7-10 p.m. free of charge. However, only metallic items can be detected by X-rays.

Some costume tips include:

■ Wear light-colored or reflective clothing. Reflective tape is recommended.

■ Carry a flashlight or lightstick.

■ Wigs and costumes should be non-flammable.

■ Costumes should not be long or bulky, to keep children from tripping.

■ Vision should not be obscured. Makeup is better than a mask, but if a mask is used, eye holes should be large and adjusted to the child's line of vision.

■ Use non-allergenic makeup if a child has sensitive skin. Test all makeup prior to Halloween night.

■ Avoid sharp or pointed toy weapons or accessories.

■ Avoid unsafe shoes.

■ Bags should not be large, block vision, or be troublesome for a child.

tion Desert Shield, the men have been receiving letters from one Rusk teacher's classes since September. Rusk PTA Vice President Tonya Hancock thought it was about time the whole school voiced support for the men.

"They were real pleased that they got letters from us, so we decided to do this school-wide," she said.

Everyone who signed the banner received a yellow ribbon to display in remembrance of troops assigned to the Persian Gulf.

Reeves Yakubanski, a 9-year-old Parker Elementary School pupil who came to the carnival with a friend from Bush, said he hoped the banner would brighten the lives of Welbourn and Ramsey.

"They don't get to see their family and they might be killed and never see them again," he said. "I wanted to sign it to make the soldiers happy."

Brandi Reeves, 7, a Bush second-grader, said she signed because she wants to let U.S. troops in the Middle East know that "people are trying to get them back and stuff."

"I want them to get back and I'm worried about them," she said.

Kateva Doerfer, the Rusk teacher whose classes have been corresponding with Welbourn and Ramsey, said the school learned about the two Marines from the men's mothers.

JUDGES: Drug cases swamp courts

(From 1A)

In 1989, the average caseload for judges in the Southern and Western districts was twice the national average.

The districts led the nation in drug case filings in 1989. The Southern district, which includes the Lower Rio Grande Valley, had 1,662 and the Western district, which includes San Antonio, had 708. A judicial district in central California was next with 576 cases.

During a recent 16-month period, the 20 judges of the Southern and Western districts in Texas sentenced 23 percent of the defendants in all federal courts.

"There is a demonstrated need for these judges in the areas along the Texas-Mexico border," said Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio.

RATES: San Angelo residents pay the least for water quantity. Odessans pay $29.30, while Abilene residents pay $26.89.

Residential water bills are least expensive in San Angelo, where a resident would pay $18.94 for 18,000 gallons.

Midland's water rates are high partly because of the distances between here and the water sources, said Bill Tatsch, supervisor of customer service and utility accounts.

"We have to pump water further," Tatsch said, adding that some is piped from more than 100 miles away. San Angelo, meanwhile, has the benefit of three nearby lakes to draw from, he said.

Tatsch said that although Midland's residential water rates are the highest in the survey, punctual customers can get a break. Those who pay on or before the due date receive a 10 percent discount, lowering the bill on 18,000 gallons to $35.35.

But City Manager Fred Poe said last week that with millions of dollars of water and sewer development projects looming on Midland's horizon, a water rate increase could come within a year.

Upcoming projects include extending water and sewer lines to new developments and rebuilding existing lines, Poe said.

There are $2.5 million in 1990-91 fiscal year projects that will be paid for through fee revenues, while another $2.5 million in water and sewer development has been planned for 1991-92.

Poe said the city has proposed hiking the rate of $1.83 per 1,000 gallons to $2.05, a 12 percent increase. The hike would not be implemented for at least a year, he said.

A 2 percent increase in residential sewer fees barely made it past the Midland City Council on first reading last week. The new rate was tentatively accepted in a 4-3 vote along with hikes in ambulance and taxi rates.

The proposal to raise the monthly sewer rate from $11.67 to $11.92 was opposed by councilmen J.D. Faircloth, John Castro and Tony Carrillo.

The new rate, which is expected to go before councilmen Nov. 13 for a second reading, would go into effect Jan. 1, 1991, making it the first sewer fee increase since 1984. The estimated $80,000 annually in additional revenues would be used to help fund planned sewer and water projects, city officials said.

The water and sewer departments in the cities surveyed are financially self-supported through fees and are not financed with any tax dollars. The cities' sanitation departments also are self-funded.

Faircloth accused the city of not pursuing every fiscal avenue to avoid the sewer rate increase, while Carrillo said many of his District 2 residents cannot afford a higher cost of living.

"I think the water and sewer fund is a fairly sound fund," Faircloth said. "I don't think the projects I saw would justify an increase in the rates."

Midland's current residential sewer rate is well below the charges in other cities surveyed. Big Spring's, at $18.65 for 18,000 gallons of water used, is the highest, while Abilene, at $12.45 for that quantity, is second lowest to Midland.

Midland charges a flat rate, while other cities polled charge by how much water is used monthly.

In addition to reviewing the sewer rate proposal last week, councilmen voted 6-1 to raise the ambulance service fee from $75 to $125 per run — a 66.7 percent increase. Carrillo was the sole councilman to opposed the increase.

Poe said the city will use revenues from the fee hike, which will generate an estimated $70,000 annually, to help finance a 3 percent pay hike for all city employees next April.

Second reading on that fee hike proposal also is slated for Nov. 13, with the increase going into effect Jan. 1, 1991.

Ambulance rates in the six cities polled were difficult to compare because Big Spring, Abilene and Lubbock have independent ambulance operators.

But in garbage collection, Midland's monthly $8.09 rate ranks second highest to Lubbock, which charges $8.17 monthly. Rates for the other cities include: Odessa, $8.05; San Angelo, $6.90; Big Spring, $6.22; and Abilene, $6.06.

Jack Burns, assistant public works director, said a garbage collection rate mostly depends on a city's size, sanitation equipment costs and distance from the landfill among other factors.

And another financial burden should make its presence felt soon after the Environmental Protection Agency issues its regulations on municipal landfills, Burns said.

Guidelines on landfill construction, lining, covering and monitoring are expected before the year's end, with the requirement meaning higher sanitation costs for cities, he said.

Burns said Midland sanitation officials recently began studying how the proposed guidelines will affect the city economically.

It likely will mean the first increase in the city's sanitation rates since Oct. 1, 1984, when residential fees went to $8.07 monthly, he said.

Midland taxi rates last week saw their first hike in eight years, with a three-mile cab ride going from $4.15 to $4.95, a 19.3 percent increase.

The current rate is $1.35 for the first fifth of a mile and 20 cents per fifth of a mile thereafter. Under the increase, it has been upped to $1.55 for the first sixth of a mile and 20 cents per sixth of a mile thereafter.

Midland taxi franchise owners have said increases in insurance rates, gasoline prices and the cost of living have caused economic hardships for their companies.

Under the new rates, Midland's cab rates are above those in three other cities polled. Taxi fares in San Angelo and Lubbock are not set by city councils and could not be included in the study.

Cab rates for a three-mile ride in the other three cities are: Odessa, $4.40; Big Spring, $4.30; and Abilene, $4.84.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

Gorbachev hints Iraq may be softening stance

By Lisa Genasci
Associated Press Writer

Mikhail Gorbachev indicated Saturday that Iraq may be softening its stand on Kuwait, and the Soviets forced the U.N. Security Coucil to delay an anti-Iraqi vote in a bid to let peace moves develop over the weekend.

Speaking in Madrid, Spain, Gorbachev said the coming days might bring clarification of a change in Iraq's position. The Soviet president's envoy, Yevgeny Primakov, was to meet today in Baghdad with Saddam Hussein.

In New York, as the assembled U.N. Security Council members prepared to demand that Iraq pay war reparations, Soviet Ambassador Yuli Vorontsov rushed to the side of his U.S. colleague, Thomas Pickering, and requested a 48-hour delay on the resolution vote.

The delay was granted. Vorontsov said later that the postponement would allow Primakov's talks with Saddam to take place in a less tense atmosphere.

In Baghdad, French officials announced that most Frenchmen held by Iraq would be allowed to leave today. Iraqi officials granted 301 French nationals permission to leave but expressed reservations about seven others, they said.

The officials said negotiations were being held to secure exit permits for the seven, who are accused by Iraqi authorities of breaking their contracts and abandoning work at a government guest palace under renovation.

Vorontsov's intervention came after Security Council members had agreed to adopt a resolution holding Iraq liable for war damages and economic losses caused by its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

"We will have a massive vote in favor," the British Ambassador to the United Nations, Sir David Hannay, had said earlier. But the council postponed the vote until Monday.

The new resolution would be the Council's 10th to condemn Iraq since Saddam's forces invaded Kuwait in a dispute over oil, land and money.

It invites nations, companies and individuals to document damages and losses, but does not establish a system for recovering the money.

Kuwaiti U.N. Ambassador Mohammad A. Abulhasan estimated that Iraq has less than $800 million in assets in the United States. Shortly after the invasion, many nations, including the United States, froze both Iraqi and Kuwaiti assets.

The resolution further demands that Iraq stop taking hostages and "mistreating and oppressing Kuwaiti and third-state nationals."

It invites nations to collect information on abuses of civilians contrary to the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949. The convention, which Iraq signed, protects the rights of civilians in wartime or in military-occupied territory, outlawing summary execution, torture, deportations and hostage-taking.

Finally, the draft resolution says Iraq must allow the immediate provision of food, water and basic services to diplomats and foreigners in missions in Kuwait City.

After Saddam annexed Kuwait, making it Iraq's 19th province, he ordered the missions moved to Baghdad. He surrounded them with troops and cut off services such as water and electricity. The U.S., British and French embassies are the last Western holdouts.

At least 210,000 U.S. troops and another 100,000 from other nations have been deployed in the gulf against Iraq's estimated 460,000 soldiers stationed in southern Iraq and Kuwait.

But Gorbachev reiterated Saturday that military might should not be used to force Iraq from Kuwait.

Iraq's gas rationing a ploy, Kuwaitis say

By Youssef M. Ibrahim
N.Y. Times News Service

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Iraq's announcement last week that it would ration gasoline was a maneuver to persuade Baghdad's enemies to postpone any attack on Iraqi forces occupying Kuwait, several Kuwaiti oil-industry executives and European military affairs experts say.

The rationing announcement, the experts said, was intended to give the impression that the United Nations economic sanctions against Iraq were working well enough to make an attack by the United States and its allies in the Persian Gulf seem unnecessary.

Those experts said Iraq had no real shortage of gasoline or of the chemicals needed to produce it, as large quantities of those chemicals were already in Iraq and even larger quantities were taken from Kuwait after the invasion of that country Aug. 2.

In interviews this week, the experts said Iraq had a year's supply of tetraethyl lead, an important gasoline additive, and added they doubted the embargo would last that long.

By reinforcing the notion among many Western and Arab nations that the embargo on Iraq is working and should be allowed a full chance to break the Iraqi will, Baghdad may be hoping to gain time to drive wedges into the international alliance that has deployed 300,000 military troops in Saudi Arabia, according to estimates.

It is clear Iraq has every interest in postponing as long as possible a war that everyone agrees will be costly to both sides, but probably devastating to Iraq.

The Kuwaiti officials, who are senior executives of Kuwait Petroleum Corp. living in exile, said they believed Iraq's other motive behind the gasoline rationing is to prepare the Iraqi population for real shortages in other areas, which include spare parts for industry and domestic appliances.

Military affairs experts say the Iraqi Army is not a major user of gasoline, since all of Iraq's tanks and other armored vehicles, and most of its military trucks, use diesel fuel.

Iraq, with vast oil reserves and significant refining capability, can produce the diesel fuel with ease regardless of the embargo. Its air force runs on jet fuel, which can be produced in Iraq and from captured Kuwaiti refineries.

Other Arab officials said that while Iraq is indeed beginning to experience serious shortages in spare parts and raw material needed for industry, it has not spoken of any of those and taken no public measures to signal what in the long run could be a far-more serious problem than the possibility of a real gasoline shortage.

"I don't see why they should go around and pick the easiest problem they have and make a public deal out of it," said a senior executive of the Kuwait petroleum company.

"Between the TEL they had in storage before the invasion and what they took from Kuwait, they have enough to last them a year before they feel the pinch," said the Kuwaiti official, who insisted on not being identified.

A senior Saudi intelligence official, who also insisted on not being identified, said that while the embargo is expected to begin to hurt the Iraqi population in two to three months, Saudi intelligence data suggests it "will take much longer" before it can affect the Iraqi Army operations or deplete essential supplies of arms, ammunition and hardware.

As for food, most experts agree Iraq is not facing any immediate shortage yet and will not face them for a few months at least.

Such assessments tend to support Kuwaiti assertions that the embargo has yet to bend the will of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, and that he has plenty of time to try to undermine the efforts of the international community to force his troops out of Kuwait.

But Saudi and Arab diplomats note Kuwaitis have every incentive to lobby for military action sooner in order to recover their land.

"There is a great deal of disinformation being put out by both sides," said an Arab diplomat in Riyadh in a conversation the other day. "By all accounts, despite some episodic shortages here and there, the embargo has not yet begun to do its work in Iraq."

According to Kuwaiti oil industry officials, Iraq has a refining capacity that allows it to produce 65,000 barrels of gasoline a day, which is more than its consumption in normal times.

Iraq has the option of putting Kuwaiti refineries, which are capable of producing another 65,000 barrels a day of gasoline, back in production.

Marines enjoy first day off in two months

IN EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — Marines tossed horseshoes, batted volleyballs, ate grilled hamburgers and hot dogs, and jokingly played softball in gas masks as they enjoyed their first day off in more than two months.

"We'll be good to go for another couple of weeks after this," Sgt. Charles Owen, 35, of Mobile, Ala., said Friday.

Owen said before the day off tempers had begun to flare and morale to sink among the 500 men in Combat Service Support Detachment 111, which handles supplies and maintenance for Marines in the northernmost sector of Saudi Arabia.

The sports equipment and food were provided by American employees of Saudi ARAMCO, the kingdom's largest oil company.

"We're really proud to have these people here," said Joe Serna, a former Marine who served in Vietnam, "and we've come out here to give them a little bit of moral support."

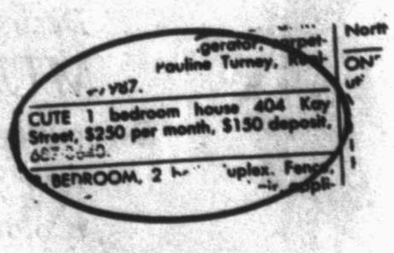

The ARAMCO workers also played softball with the Marines, providing one of many teams taking to the diamond in a steady stream all afternoon. It was a test for the specially groomed sand surface that the Marines dubbed "The Bob Hope Field of Dreams."

It was a reference to Hope's trips to entertain troops and to a recent movie about a baseball field built in an Iowa cornfield.

Israel border closure provokes anger, protests

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

The decision to seal the "green line" was not a simple one for Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's government. The green line vanished long ago from Israeli maps and road signs. According to Shamir's nationalist doctrine of Greater Israel, it no longer exists.

The roadblocks and long lines of sullen, protesting Arabs say otherwise.

"The green line is firm and abiding," wrote Zeev Schiff, respected military commentator for the newspaper Haaretz.

"It is as if a wall has gone up," said Nidal Abu Yehyah, a fifth-generation Palestinian grocer in Jerusalem.

Israeli authorities said the closure was a security measure of no political significance.

The closure's effects were felt immediately. Arabs lost wages and Israel lost its blue-collar work force. Restaurants were short of waiters, construction sites were idle, streets went unswept.

The latest cycle of violence began Oct. 8, when Israeli police fired into a stone-throwing Palestinian crowd on the Temple Mount, known to Arabs as Haram es-Sharif. Government investigators said 20 Palestinians were killed.

It provoked a spate of Arab attacks, beginning with a Palestinian who stabbed three Israelis to death in a rampage through a Jewish neighborhood of Jerusalem last Sunday. According to police, the attacker said he was taking revenge for the Temple Mount killings.

More attacks followed: two unarmed women soldiers knifed at a crossroad in northern Israel; two Israelis hit on the head with an 11-pound hammer by their Arab employee in a workshop.

The soldiers' attacker died of brain injuries inflicted by civilians who caught him. That night, shots fired at a car near the Gaza Strip killed an Arab occupant.

Tel Aviv police reported 1,700 calls from Jews informing on Arabs who disregarded orders to leave Israel. The owner of a large office block in Jerusalem said Jewish tenants want him to fire his Arab cleaners and car park attendants.

At the United Nations, the Security Council voted a second condemnation of Israel over the Temple Mount killings, this time for refusing to let it investigate.

Israel's own commission of inquiry largely supported the government version of events. It said police were being stoned by rioters and fired to defend themselves and the Jews worshiping at the adjacent Western Wall.

Arabs dismissed the report as a whitewash.

The knife attacks, incited by Moslem fundamentalist leaflets urging the killing of Jews, have spread fear that the 34-month old Palestinian uprising has entered an ominous new phase.

Yossi Sarid, a dovish member of Parliament, accused Shamir of paralyzing the peace process, and said: "If there is no movement . . . the blood that is spilled will be on his head."

Speaking on Israel television, Sarid added a warning to Palestinians: "What is happening now, knifemanship instead of statesmanship, is cutting the ground from under their feet."

Shooting mars Soviet Georgia elections

TBILISI, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The shooting of an opposition politician on the eve of the first multiparty elections in Soviet Georgia has created an atmosphere of fear and acrimony in this republic.

Gia Chanturia, leader of the National Democratic Party, said he was shot Friday afternoon as he left a meeting of politicians who are boycotting Sunday's elections.

"I was saved by a miracle," said Chanturia, showing a reporter and photographer his left arm, wrapped in a blood-soaked bandage.

Chanturia accused the powerful leader of the Round Table non-Communist opposition, Zviad Gamsakhurdia, of ordering the shooting on instructions from Communist Party bosses.

"I don't know exactly who shot me, but I know who could have done it," he said, referring to Gamsakhurdia. He said he believed he was shot "because someone wants to start a civil war," but did not elaborate.

Gamsakhurdia denied he was responsible for the shooting.

"This is a provocation, an attempt to sabotage the election," he said Saturday. "It's done by those parties and forces who don't want these elections to be held."

His coalition and the Communist Party are leading contenders to win a plurality in Sunday's election for the 250-seat Georgian Supreme Soviet legislature. The plethora of parties makes it unlikely a single group will win a majority.

Chanturia is among Georgian opposition leaders who are boycotting the vote. They were elected to the National Congress earlier this month intending to form a shadow government to pressure faster change in the republic.

All parties participating in Sunday's election, including the Communist Party, say Georgia should leave the Soviet Union.

The political debate is over the duration of the "transition" period to national independence, and the degree of economic and political cooperation the republic should maintain with the Soviet Union.

Georgia's desire for independence became almost a foregone conclusion after April 9, 1989, when Soviet soldiers killed 19 people in a pre-dawn attack on a pro-independence demonstration in downtown Tbilisi.

On Saturday, candidates stood atop a bus using bullhorns to address crowds on Independence Square — formerly named Lenin Square.

Even the Communist Party has tailored its rhetoric for the pro-independence mood.

"The position of the Communist Party of Georgia is that all the republics should be free," said Vazha Gurgenedze, the Communist Party's secretary for ideology.

Gurgenedze, himself a candidate, said that even a Communist-dominated legislature would declare independence, allow the free sale of private land and conclude economic agreements with the other 14 Soviet republics.

Gurgenedze acknowledges his platform might be more radical than that of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who wants all 15 republics to sign a new treaty of union and remain in the Soviet fold.

"We think the Communist Party will receive a mandate, 40 to 60 percent of the vote. I can't really predict," he said.

Gamsakhurdia predicted that his Round Table coalition would get up to 70 percent of the vote if the elections were fair. He dismissed a poll released last week showing the Communist Party winning 32 percent of the vote, Round Table 21.5 and the rest of ballots divided among other smaller parties.

"I know the man who prepared this poll, and he is a KGB agent," Gamsakhurdia said Saturday.

"We are receiving signals that they are violating the election law, they are calling people and frightening them into voting Communist, and the Communists are preparing too many ballots," he said, raising the possibility that some will be improperly completed.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Bolivia halts extraditions

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivia will stop extraditing suspected drug traffickers to the United States unless an extradition treaty is expanded to include drug violations, a government official said Saturday.

"We have no plans for further arrests and extraditions to the United States of Bolivian citizens without an extradition treaty," said Gen. Lucio Anez, commander of an special anti-drug force.

President Jaime Paz Zamora's administration was criticized by opposition parties and others after Thursday's extradition of Erian Echeverria, who has been indicted on drug-trafficking and other charges by a federal grand jury in Miami.

"Echeverria has been the last," said Anez, calling the extradition "a political decision."

He said there is "a list of extraditables," or suspected drug dealers, wanted for trial in the United States. He did not elaborate.

Six missing in ship blast

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — An apparent gas leak caused an explosion aboard a tourist ship off the Galapagos Islands, injuring 11 people and leaving six others missing, authorities said.

The Ecuadoran Navy and U.S. Embassy in Quito said there were reports that the missing in the blast early Friday included five Americans and an Ecuadoran crew member.

There were conflicting reports that two Australians and three Americans were among the missing.

The 71-foot ship Bartolome II was on an eight-day cruise of the islands 600 miles west of Guayaquil, Ecuador, when the explosion occurred at 4:15 a.m.

The vessel, based in Quito, caught fire and quickly sank eight miles off the isle of Seymor, authorities said.

Eleven people on board were rescued and were taken to the mainland for hospitalization and treatment. Most were believed taken to Quito, authorities said, but details remained sketchy late Friday.

Four of the 11 were seriously hurt, they said.

The remote islands, visited by the explorer Charles Darwin, are a popular tourist site replete with rare birds, fish and flora.

Anderson birthday noted

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese newspapers published birthday letters to American Terry Anderson on Saturday, his 43rd birthday and his sixth in captivity. One newspaper reported that fellow hostage Terry Waite will be freed soon.

Waite, 51, was kidnapped in Moslem West Beirut on Jan. 20, 1987, after leaving his hotel for a rendezvous with representatives of Islamic Jihad, or Islamic holy war, the shadowy Shiite Moslem faction that claims to hold Anderson.

Anderson, of Lorain, Ohio, is the longest-held among 13 Westerners — including six Americans — missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon. Anderson, chief Middle East Correspondent for The Associated Press, was kidnapped in Moslem West Beirut March 16, 1985.

Seven of Lebanon's eight daily newspapers marked Anderson's birthday by publishing letters to him from his sister Peggy Say, his younger daughter whom he has never met, Sulome, and Madeleine, Sulome's Lebanese mother.

The Arabic-language newspapers published the original English text of the letters, hoping that Anderson's kidnappers, the shadowy Islamic Jihad — or Islamic holy war — would allow him to read them. Anderson did not know Arabic when he was kidnapped.

The Associated Press bureau in Beirut held a somber birthday party for Anderson at his office, which his colleagues refer to as "Terry's Room."

Bishops affirm celibacy

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A worldwide gathering of bishops, affirming celibacy in the priesthood, on Saturday urged Pope John Paul II to make it clear that the controversial rule won't be changed.

The pope was quick to take up the invitation. He told the bishops that although there is a shortage of priests in some parts of the world, ordaining married men is not the solution.

"This isn't a solution to take under consideration and the problem needs to be addressed by other means," such as help from dioceses which have enough priests, the pontiff said.

The Vatican requires celibacy for priests in Latin rite churches. The church believes that forsaking marriage and sexual relations means more time for priestly duties and less opportunity for distractions.

Exceptions have been made for men who converted to Roman Catholicism after their marriage. In addition, some Eastern rite Catholic churches permit married men to be priests, and that practice was left intact in a recent revision of the rites' laws.

Bush reassures small nations on environmental concerns

HONOLULU (AP) — President Bush promised disgruntled Pacific island leaders Saturday that their pristine ocean will not become a permanent dumping ground for chemical weapons or other wastes.

They, in turn, told him that good will toward Washington had "begun to dry up."

Bush asked the leaders for their understanding and support for U.S. plans to destroy huge stockpiles of chemical weapons already stored or en route to a giant new incinerator on Johnston Atoll, a U.S.-held ring of islands 825 miles southwest of Hawaii.

The president met for more than two hours with the leaders of 11 remote and economically vulnerable countries.

SPEAKING ON behalf of the leaders at the close of the meeting, Cook Islands Prime Minister Geoffrey A. Henry said they all wanted the Johnston facility closed, "but we know of course that cannot be done."

Standing alongside Bush, Henry also spoke of a "huge gulf of misunderstanding or misinformation" between the islanders and the United States on the problem of global warming.

Expressing skepticism about scientific reports minimizing the problem, Henry said, "We'd love to read or hear what they tell you."

Two Navy ships carrying 100,000 artillery shells loaded with nerve agents from the U.S. Army's stockpile in Germany are expected to reach the atoll next month.

The weapons have become a major environmental issue throughout the Pacific.

THE SOUTH Pacific Forum, an organization of regional governments, claims that the use of Johnston Atoll could make the region "the toxic waste disposal center of the world."

In his closing remarks, Bush said the Pacific islands "have a special place in the minds and hearts of the American people."

However, Henry portrayed a different picture, saying the United States was "too concerned with the problems of other places and you weren't as interested in the problems of the people of our region."

Henry said Bush had "begun to replenish the pool of good will that has begun to dry up since the last war, the good will between Pacific Islands and the United States of America. ... Don't allow it to dry up."

Several dozen demonstrators staged a noisy protest about 100 yards from East-West Center where the leaders gathered.

"DON'T MAKE our Pacific Your Cesspool," read a large sign in the crowd. There also were protests against U.S. involvement in the Persian Gulf.

In advance of the meeting, President John Haglelgam of Micronesia said Bush needed to allay fears of tiny Pacific countries that the United States "is ignoring them."

Opening the session, Bush said the United States will destroy the toxic weapons "only under extremely stringent environmental controls and protections."

He said the Johnston facility would be used to destroy only the 300,000-piece stockpile already on the island and the weapons being shipped from Germany, along with any obsolete munitions found in the Pacific islands. That would rule out using the facility for chemical weapons stored on the U.S. mainland.

"Once that destruction is completed, we have no plans to use Johnston Atoll for any other chemical munitions purpose, or as a hazardous waste disposal site," Bush pledged.

He acknowledged that the whole issue 'has caused many of you deep concern. Our ability to move ahead and destroy chemical weapons is a significant step toward disarmament and peace."

INDEED, PRIME Minister Henry of the tiny Cook Islands, said the Johnston Atoll issue "is so pressing, so current, so important."

Tests of the incinerator are to end late next year, and full-scale incineration is expected to begin in 1992. The United States and Soviet Union have agreed to destroy such weapons by 1997.

The State Department has issued a statement saying opposition to the incineration project "must be weighed carefully against the long-term benefits both to world peace and the environment that will result from the total destruction of chemical weapons and a permanent ban on their acquisition and use."

Conferring with Bush were the presidents or prime ministers of Fiji, Nauru, Papua New Guinea, Western Samoa, Cook Islands, Kiribati, the Marshall Islands, Micronesia and Tuvalu. Tonga and the Solomon Islands also sent lower-ranking representatives.

BUSH ALSO said that the Overseas Private Investment Corp., a government supported organization that helps private interests invest in foreign countries, will establish a $200 million venture capital fund and environmental investment fund called the Asian-Pacific Growth Fund, and a $100 million Environmental Investment Fund for sustainable natural resource development.

He also said the OPIC would lead a group of American investors to Pacific Island countries next year, that the United States wants to negotiate an extension of the South Pacific Fisheries Treaty and that the State Department's Agency For International Development will set up four development assistance programs for private sector development, emphasizing agricultural and marine resources.

Aside from environmental concerns, the Pacific leaders fear that U.S. development assistance will be cut back.

Congress agrees to extend ban on offshore oil drilling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress agreed Saturday to renew for another year a ban on offshore oil drilling along thousands of miles of U.S. coastline from Alaska to New England.

The moratorium on the sale of offshore oil leases was contained in the Interior Department's fiscal 1991 appropriations bill worked out by a House-Senate conference committee.

The bill was adopted by both the House and Senate late Saturday.

"With this legislation, Congress continues to insist upon protection of sensitive (offshore) areas," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif.

Congress has blocked oil development along much of the nation's Outer Continental Shelf for nearly a decade through annual moratoria on lease sales as part of Interior's budget.

But this year, while the House had included the ban, the Senate version of the bill had not, causing concern among environmentalists. Oil companies have intensified their campaign for increased domestic oil production since the Persian Gulf crisis.

But the lawmakers adopted the House version that broadened the ban to include not only leases off southern Florida, California and New England, but for the first time Alaska's Bristol Bay, the eastern Gulf of Mexico off northern Florida, and along a 50-mile buffer in the Atlantic from Rhode Island to Maryland.

Drilling also is prohibited off the Pacific Northwest and, under separate legislation approved earlier, off North Carolina.

Last summer, President Bush announced that he was postponing, in some cases for as long as 10 years, oil and gas lease sales off the West Coast, New England and southern Florida until environmental concerns can be resolved.

Implants require inventory of spare parts

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Titanium hips and knees. Silicone finger joints. Carbon tooth roots. Gel-filled chins. Plastic skull plates.

These are just a few of the more than 50 "spare parts" currently available to repair the human body.

And products in the development pipeline — synthetic blood, ceramic-based bones and skin derived from cow proteins — seem to be moving science closer and closer to creating a bionic body.

"Implant technology is a very exciting science right now," said Donald Harlowe of the Food and Drug Administration's Division of Mechanics and Materials Science. "It has all developed in the past 30 years. Nothing was available prior to that."

The spurt of production stems from the combined efforts of chemists, biologists, physicists and engineers to develop high-tech materials that can mimic organ function without being rejected by the ultra-sensitive human immune system.

Numbers of implants performed annually in the United States range from "very few" for electronic pain relievers for the central nervous system to approximately 250,000 for various orthopedic replacements, said Harlowe.

Researchers have been especially successful in orthopedics despite the intricate demands posed by human joints. Replacement parts for hips, knees, elbows, wrists and ankles have to be at once soft and tough, non-corrosive, able to bend millions of times and survive for years.

Since the first hip replacement in 1963, the material used to manufacture joints has evolved from stainless steel to cobalt-chrome molybdenum to a titanium alloy. The two latter are stronger than steel.

The cost of a "total hip" ranges from $1,200 to $3,500, according to Todd Davis of Zimmer, a Warsaw, Ind.-based orthopedics manufacturer.

"The price depends on the size and style," said Davis. For instance, "some are cemented, some are not."

Zimmer knees range from $2,000 to $3,500 and shoulders start at $1,500 and can reach $2,500, according to Davis. The company does not do a lot of elbows and ankles, he said. And prices do not include surgery expenses.

Some products that form the base of other parts have already become household words, but for other uses.

Teflon, a dishwasher's dream because it keeps food from sticking to pots and pans, is being tested for use in artificial blood vessels. The anti-stick capacity of polytetrafluoroethylene — the chemical name for Teflon — is crucial to prevent clotting within blood vessels.

Gore-tex, the special film used in ski wear that allows a waterproof fabric to breathe, is used to make tissue patches. Applications include a chest or stomach wall that has been weakened by disease.

Silicone, commonly used in lubricants and paints and known as a breast implant, is also used to create chins, ears, noses, and finger joints.

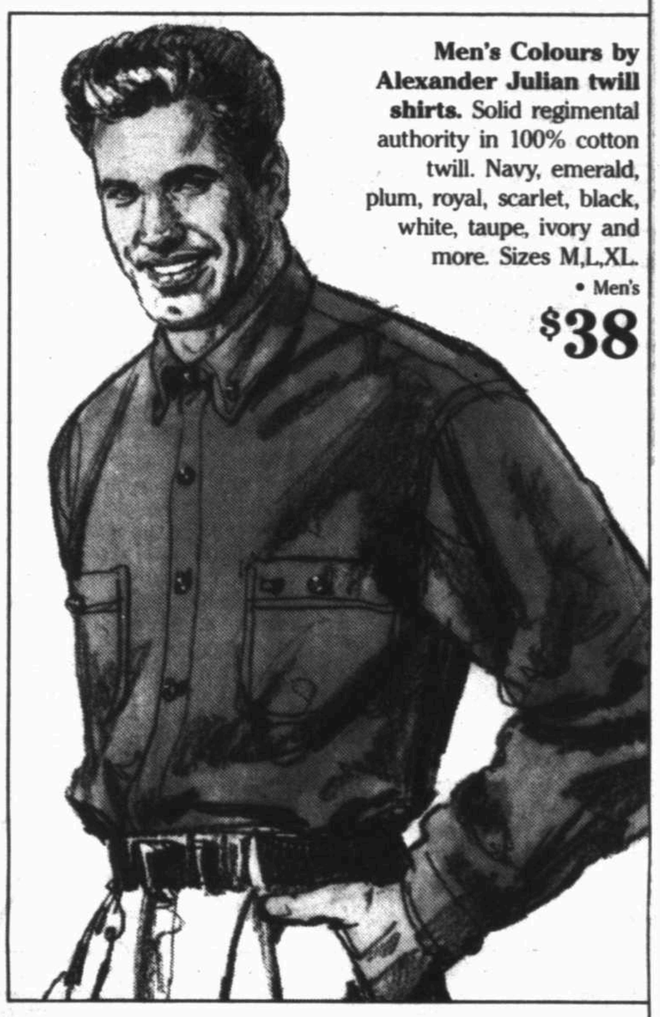

Dow Corning Wright, the Arlington, Tenn.-based firm that makes silicone parts provided the following price list: Finger joints: $195 (each); Toe joints: $185; Chins: $195 for a solid implant, and $135 for the gel-filled type; Breasts: $235-$325; Testes: $160.

A less-known polymer, pyrolytic carbon — carbon altered by heat —is used to make an anchor for mouth bridgework and for human heart valves. Other sources of heart valves include pigs and human cadavers.

The quest for artificial blood has intensified in the last couple of years, largely due to a sense of urgency brought on by blood-borne diseases such as AIDS and hepatitis, said Dr. Werner Wahl of Quest Blood Substitute in Detroit, Mich.

Tugboats free dredge that knocked out bridge

HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — Tugboats freed a dredge Saturday that knocked out the only road link to the mainland for thousands of people on North Carolina's Outer Banks.

Residents and tourists on Hatteras Island faced a 30-hour wait for ferries, their only transportation to the mainland since the dredge broke free of moorings in a gale Friday and hit Herbert Bonner Bridge.

The Northerly Island dredge took out a 369-foot section of the bridge and snapped power lines that ran underneath the span, leaving about 8,000 people on Hatteras and Ocracoke islands without electricity and telephone service.

Generators flown in by helicopter were used to restore power to some people while utility crews worked on putting up temporary lines, expected by Sunday.

The temporary lines could not be put up until the dredge was pulled from sand. It took three tugs about two hours to remove the dredge.

There was a six-hour wait to get on a ferry from Hatteras to Ocracoke, where the wait for a ferry was 24 hours for the final leg to the mainland.

Residents were warned to conserve water and fuel. Their predicament may seem daunting, but many consider such emergencies a way of life on the islands.

"We're running out of gas and fuel, the usual stuff," said Bert Austin, sheriff of Dare County, on Hatteras Island. "The local people are used to having problems. That's part of the island's heritage."

Gwen White, a Dare County emergency management spokeswoman, said the Hatteras Island water tank was about three-quarters full and residents should have no problem if electricity were restored soon.

"Food supplies are still perfectly good and plentiful right now," Ms. White said. "As far as bringing food in the next few days, that may become a problem if the ferries can't run."

Ferries couldn't run Friday after the bridge collapse because of high wind. The forecast called for mild weather through Sunday.

There have been no reports of looting, sheriff's Lt. Almey Gray said.

Ocracoke has about 3,000 permanent residents and Hatteras has about 5,000 permanent residents.

As for repairing the bridge, six months is the most optimistic estimate given by state emergency management officials.

People lined up for a 10-gallon gasoline ration at Dillons Corner on Hatteras. Another station in town was out of gasoline.

"Since (rationing) started, it's been a mad rush to the service station," said Cape Hatteras School principal Jimmy Webb.

"That's our umbilical cord," he said, pointing at the bridge. "It's very inconvenient (to be cut off). But so is living in the city."

The school's 536 students, in kindergarten through 12th grade, will return to class Monday, Webb said. Until then, the school will be used as a shelter. Red Cross workers were brought in aboard an Army helicopter to set up shop there.

"Most people that live here are ready for a month or so of siege," Webb said.

At a National Weather Service station on Hatteras, workers relayed messages to relatives on the mainland and transmitted frequent public service messages on the radio. The station's generator has enough fuel to last at least a week, said technician Jimmy McClain.

'We're running out of gas and fuel, the usual stuff. The local people are used to having problems.'

— Bert Austin, Dare County sheriff

Jay Benda, from Rockford, Mich., and Karl and Kathy Gleiss, from Clarkston, Mich., waited six hours for the ferry from Hatteras to Ocracoke. The three were dismayed when told to expect a 24-hour wait at Ocracoke, where traffic was backed up for 10 miles.

The three friends have been coming to Hatteras every year since 1988 for windsurfing at Canadian Hole on the Pamlico Sound.

"We're happy 'cause we got to sail three-fives," Gleiss said, referring to a small sail used in strong wind.

Strike replacements put out Daily News despite pickets

NEW YORK (AP) — Rusty editors, managers and replacement workers wrote, printed and delivered the Daily News on Saturday despite the absence of 2,400 employees in a strike marked by sporadic violence.

"The Fight For The News" read the paper's front page headline above a photo of strikers vandalizing a bus carrying replacement workers. Inside, there were ads to fill the strikers' jobs in all departments at the paper.

"New York's hometown paper is run by a bunch of out-of-towners. It's not right," said striker Joe Burgess, who has worked in the News art department since 1971.

News management said Saturday that about 100 permanent replacements had been hired already. Striking workers were welcome to return to their old jobs at their old salaries at any time until a permanent replacement is hired for that slot, said News vice president John Sloan.

"Any employee that wants to return can do so," Sloan said. "We have not fired anybody."

For editorial employees, the weekend was a time to consider the future. Sloan has said some temporary writers and editors were recruited from other Tribune Co. newspapers for temporary duty.

Besides the Daily News, the Chicago-based Tribune Co. also owns the Chicago Tribune; theSun-Sentinel in Fort Lauderdale and The Orlando Sentinel in Orlando, Fla.; the Times-Advocate in Escondido and the Peninsula Times Tribune in Palo Alto, Calif.; and the Daily Press and The Times-Herald in Newport News, Va.

The Daily News normally operates with a small weekend staff and Monday's edition will show whether the picket lines outside the News Building keep the news staffers away from their desks.

The newspaper's Sunday edition had 96 pages in the news section, compared with an 88-page news section last week, said Daily News spokeswoman Lisa Robinson. Its front-page story, an investigation into the state Liquor Authority, was written before the strike, she said.

As of 10 p.m. Saturday, early editions had not left the News' three plants.

The News published and distributed 710,000 copies of the tabloid Saturday, about 200,000 short of a normal Saturday run, Sloan said. Copies of the paper remained difficult to find in certain areas of the city and the suburbs.

The Saturday paper was the first one to hit the street prepared and distributed without the unions, which began to go out early Thursday in a job action that spread to nine of its 10 unions.

The News claimed to have distributed 611,000 papers on Friday, when eight unions were out. Editorial employees joined the strike Friday afternoon.

"I may be committing economic suicide, but I feel like I'm on the right side of the issue," said picketer John Wolf, a 24-year veteran of the News advertising make-up department. "It's not a family paper anymore."

Missing from Saturday's edition were the bylines familiar to its 1.18 million daily readers. "By Daily News Staff" appeared on most stories that were not wire copy.

The 64-page paper included some features that ordinarily run in the Sunday paper. A message to News readers asked them to bear with the paper despite the "inconvenience ... attributable to vandalism and violence by striking workers."

A team of four editors covered the strike for the News; they described the normally bustling city room as a "sea of empty desks" dotted with editors "long out of practice as reporters."

At stake is the future of the 71-year-old daily, which has been in a financial tailspin for the past decade. The News has lost about $115 million and seen daily circulation slip by about 700,000 since 1980.

As a volunteer who works with children, you're invited for an evening of recognition and encouragement

Tuesday, November 13
5:30-9:00 p.m.
Northeast YMCA

To offer thanks and motivation to our community's many children's volunteers, Permian Basin CAPP and other area organizations are hosting a special evening. From training in positive approaches to working with children to information about area resources, this event is designed to help you--and say thanks for all the good you do.

Special training and tips will focus on:
•Communicating, nurturing and bonding
•Working with groups of children
•Recognizing abuse and acting appropriately
•Protecting yourself against accusations of abuse

The evening will conclude with an entertaining dialogue between Judge and Mrs. Pat Baskin about the value and rewards of volunteering.

This event is one you and your colleagues won't want to miss! We encourage you to send as many representatives from your organization as possible so the good ideas can be learned and shared effectively.

A complimentary dinner will be served, and participants must preregister by Friday, November 9. To register or for more information, call Pam Isom at 685-3007 or 682-7696.

Kerosene spills in Hudson River

MARLBORO, N.Y. (AP) — Coast Guard crews took advantage of favorable weather Saturday to contain 164,000 gallons of kerosene that spilled into the Hudson River when a barge ran aground on a reef.

The barge, carrying about 30,000 barrels of kerosene or 1.26 million gallons, ran aground and sprang a leak Friday night about one mile south of Marlboro and 60 miles north of New York City, said Bill Falk, a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman in New York.

The cause of the accident was not immediately clear, but high winds and choppy seas may have contributed, Falk said.

The barge hit a known underwater hazard called Diamond Reef, which lies about 5 feet below the surface, said Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Alan Burd. Barges can dip 3 to 9 feet below the water when carrying a full load, he said.

"It was a known hazard and it was marked with a buoy," Burd said.

Petty Officer Howard Holmes said strong winds were keeping the kerosene along the river's eastern shore.

"The weather is very much in our favor," he said. "We're not chasing oil all over the river."

Dog mauls small boy

ULLIN, Ill. (AP) — A pit bull mauled a 4-year-old boy after the child's parents agreed to keep the dog at their rural home for a man who hadn't bought the insurance required to keep it in the village.

Joseph Lee Haddock was released from a hospital Friday after surgery for facial lacerations, a spokeswoman said.

The pit bull had been chained to a post when it attacked the boy Thursday.

Officials in this southern Illinois village of about 550 passed an ordinance in September requiring owners of pit bulls to keep the dogs caged or muzzled and to carry a $50,000 liability insurance policy.

The dog's owner, David McHarry, moved the dog to the home of his friends, the Haddocks, to avoid violating the ordinance, Village Clerk Ken Ledbetter said.

McHarry said he was uncertain whether he could afford the insurance or could cage the dog as securely as the ordinance required.

McHarry, upset over the attack, said he had planned to give the dog away. He said it would be put to sleep.

"I'm sorry it happened," he said. "It tears me up."

Brother gets $1.2 million

MIAMI (AP) — A jury ordered a millionaire to pay his estranged younger brother $1.2 million for describing him to a prospective client as an extortionist who wasn't above fraud.

The Dade County Circuit Court jury ruled Friday that Jorge Mas Canosa maliciously libeled his brother, Ricardo Mas. Mas Canosa is head of the Cuban American National Foundation, a lobby group.

The jury reached its decision after deliberating almost three hours. It based its decision on two letters Mas Canosa, 51, wrote to Southern Bell, the younger man's prospective client.

He reportedly wrote the letters because he was angry that his brother quit a job with his construction business to establish a competing company.

"I feel fantastic," Mas said. "I wasn't expecting that amount but I think it's a great decision."

Mas, 40, said he spent $100,000 in legal fees pursuing the 3-year-old lawsuit against his brother.

Two dead in plane crash

BELEN, N.M. (AP) — The bodies of two Albuquerque men were found near Belen on Saturday among the burned wreckage of the stunt airplane they were flying, authorities said.

Valencia County Sheriff Lawrence Romero said Mark R. Bode, 30, and Phillip Schaught, 40, died Friday when Bode's tandem-seat Decathlon stunt plane crashed and burned on a remote mesa northwest of Belen.

Authorities said Bode was piloting the aircraft and Schaught was a student pilot when they took off from Mid-Valley airport south of Belen about noon Friday.

Several of the men's friends began an air and ground search for the plane about 5 p.m. Friday after Bode and Schaught failed to return from the flight. The wreckage was spotted at about 7 a.m. Saturday by an airplane crew made up of the missing men's friends. The cause of the crash is under investigation.

Detective Ed Britt of the Valencia County Sheriff's Department said it was unlikely anyone witnessed the crash because the site is surrounded by low ridges and the nearest house is more than two miles away.

Britt said he was told Bode was "a very experienced pilot" and it was common for Bode to fly the airplane as low as 10 feet off the ground. The single-piston engine, high-wing craft often was used for stunt flying, Britt said.

Terry Anderson's hometown marks his 43rd birthday

BATAVIA, N.Y. (AP) — Hostage Terry Anderson's hometown decided against cake and singing to mark his 43rd birthday Saturday because of the crisis in the Persian Gulf.

"This year because of the new crisis it just seemed inappropriate," said Anne Zicki, an organizer of past celebrations for Anderson in Batavia.

Residents gathered in years past at a mall to eat birthday cake, listen to music and sing the happy birthday song for Anderson, who spent his sixth birthday in captivity in Lebanon.

Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, was abducted by Moslem extremists in Beirut on March 16, 1985. He is the longest-held Western hostage in Lebanon.

A bust of Anderson sculpted by artist Louis Dlugosz was placed Friday in Batavia's City Hall, alongside a scrapbook of local events held in Anderson's honor over the past six years.

The threat of war between the United States and Iraq over Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait made this year's events for Anderson more solemn, organizers said.

Band leader Cugat dies in Spain

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Xavier Cugat, the Spanish-born band leader who introduced the tropical beat of the rumba to millions of Americans, died Saturday. He was 90.

Cugat

Cugat died of heart failure in a Barcelona hospital, doctors Jorge Rius and Jaime Pujadas said in a statement. He had checked into the hospital Oct. 8 with a lung infection and failure of his left ventricle.

"Coogie," as he became known to millions of Americans and Europeans, became a star in the early 1930s playing Latin dance music at the Cocoanut Grove club in Los Angeles and later at the Waldorf Astoria in New York.

Cugat's career as a band leader stretched from the big band era in the 1940s to the 1960s.He played the violin and directed the band with his bow.

Cugat was married and divorced five times. "If I had it to do all over, I'd marry the same ones," he said.

Cugat had no children but raised dogs and wrote two books — "I, Cugat" and "My Wives."

NEW YORK (AP) — Defending champion Garry Kasparov conceded the seventh game of the world chess championship Saturday to challenger Anatoly Karpov, leaving the pair deadlocked in their $3 million showdown.

Kasparov — acknowledged by chess experts to be at a disadvantage in the game at the point it broke off for the night Friday — opted to resign rather than resume play, said Phyllis Arnold, spokeswoman for the championship.

The championship is now tied at 3½-3½. A player gets one point for a victory, and each player gets a half point for a tie. Each player has now won once, with the other five games ending in draws.

The first player to reach 12½ points wins the championship. Kasparov, who dethroned Karpov in 1985, would retain his title if the match ended in a 12-12 tie.

The first 12 games are being played in New York and the remainder will be played in Lyons, France. The winner will get $1.7 million and the loser will get $1.3 million.

The seventh game was adjourned Friday night when Karpov wrote down his 44th move and sealed it in an envelope. If Kasparov had not conceded defeat, play would have resumed Saturday evening.

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Gabriel Garcia Marquez may have earned a Nobel Prize for his writing but he's not about to take on the country's 104-year-old constitution.

Garcia Marquez, who's novel "One Hundred Years of Solitude" is considered a classic, was among the candidates favored to win Dec. 9 elections for one of 70 seats in next year's assembly to rewrite the Colombian constitution.

"My decision is final: I will not be a candidate for election to the constitutional assembly, nor will I be a candidate for anything, now or ever," Garcia Marquez said in a message written during his current visit to Hawaii.

Bogota's El Tiempo newspaper published the dispatch on Saturday.

Politicians, students and independent groups had already gathered the required 10,000 signatures in support of his candidacy.

Garcia Marquez still believes that his talent as a novelist would be useful in the assembly, "even if it only helps to ensure that the new Constitution would be well written," according to the message.

"But I have always had a clear understanding of my own limits," he added.

Garcia Marquez won the Nobel Prize in 1982. His other works include the best-selling "Love in the Time of Cholera," and "Chronicle of a Death Foretold." He released "The General in His Labyrinth" this fall.

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Author Elliott Roosevelt, who served his father, President Franklin Roosevelt, during World War II and later wrote a best seller about it, died Saturday in Scottsdale. He was 80.

He died of congestive heart failure at his home, said Patricia Roosevelt, his wife of 30 years.

Roosevelt was a World War II Air Corps general as well as author and lecturer. He was also a former mayor of Miami Beach, Fla., and a Democratic National Committeeman from that state.

Roosevelt launched his writing career in 1946 with the publication of the best-selling book, "As He Saw It," which detailed his experiences as aide to his father.

— Travis Elementary School TEAMS test cheer

'We had rallies, ribbons and a parade for the students. We got excited about succeeding right at the beginning of the year. When the class did exceptionally well, we went to the park or had ice cream.'

Success in motivating pupils to improve their standardized test scores motivated Gov. Bill Clements to award Principal Michael Worley a check for $31,924.

Worley is the principal of Travis Elementary School, one of 279 schools in the nation which received a monetary award in the first year of the Governor's Educational Excellence Awards.

The governor's award recognized gains in academic performance as measured by test scores. Schools vying for the cash awards competed on the basis of academic improvement.

Travis students had the highest TEAMS (Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills) scores in the history of the school since the test has been offered," Worley said.

He said Travis pupils topped district scores in all three areas of the test and scored above the state average in two areas.

The principal said teachers and parents worked together to encourage pupils to achieve on the test.

"I have to give a lot of credit to the teachers," he said. "They came up with all kinds of materials and strategies to meet the test objectives."

Worley said rallies, rewards for good work, banners, buttons and off-campus trips were all employed as positive reinforcement tactics.

"There was also a lot of remedial work," Worley said. "We were concerned about our TEAMS test scores, and since it was the last year the test was being given, we wanted to go out with high scores."

Sherrie Raughton, Travis counselor, said a little competition also helped instill determination in the youngsters. "Each class had a cheer, which we referred to as a battle cry," Ms. Raughton said. "A week before the test we had a rally with skits about test taking, and a chant after each skit."

The school counselor also noted that children were encouraged to write a positive word on a rock and keep the rock as part of a "support system."

"A lot of praise was involved," said Cindy Leascher, a third grade teacher at Travis. "Of course, we got a lot of encouragement from our principal. He instilled a good feeling in all of the teachers and we didn't want to disappoint him."

Norma Madden, Travis third grade bilingual teacher, said her pupils who took the test in Spanish scored in the top percentile.

"We had rallies, ribbons and a parade for the students," she said. "We got excited about succeeding right at the beginning of the year. When the class did exceptionally well, we went to the park or had ice cream."

While test objectives and test taking skills were stressed, Ms. Leascher said teachers' real intention was to build their pupils' self-esteem.

Worley, who traveled to Austin to accept the check, deposited it in a Midland bank account last week.

"A committee will decide how the money is spent," Worley said, noting the only restrictions are that the money can't be spent on salary supplements or athletics.

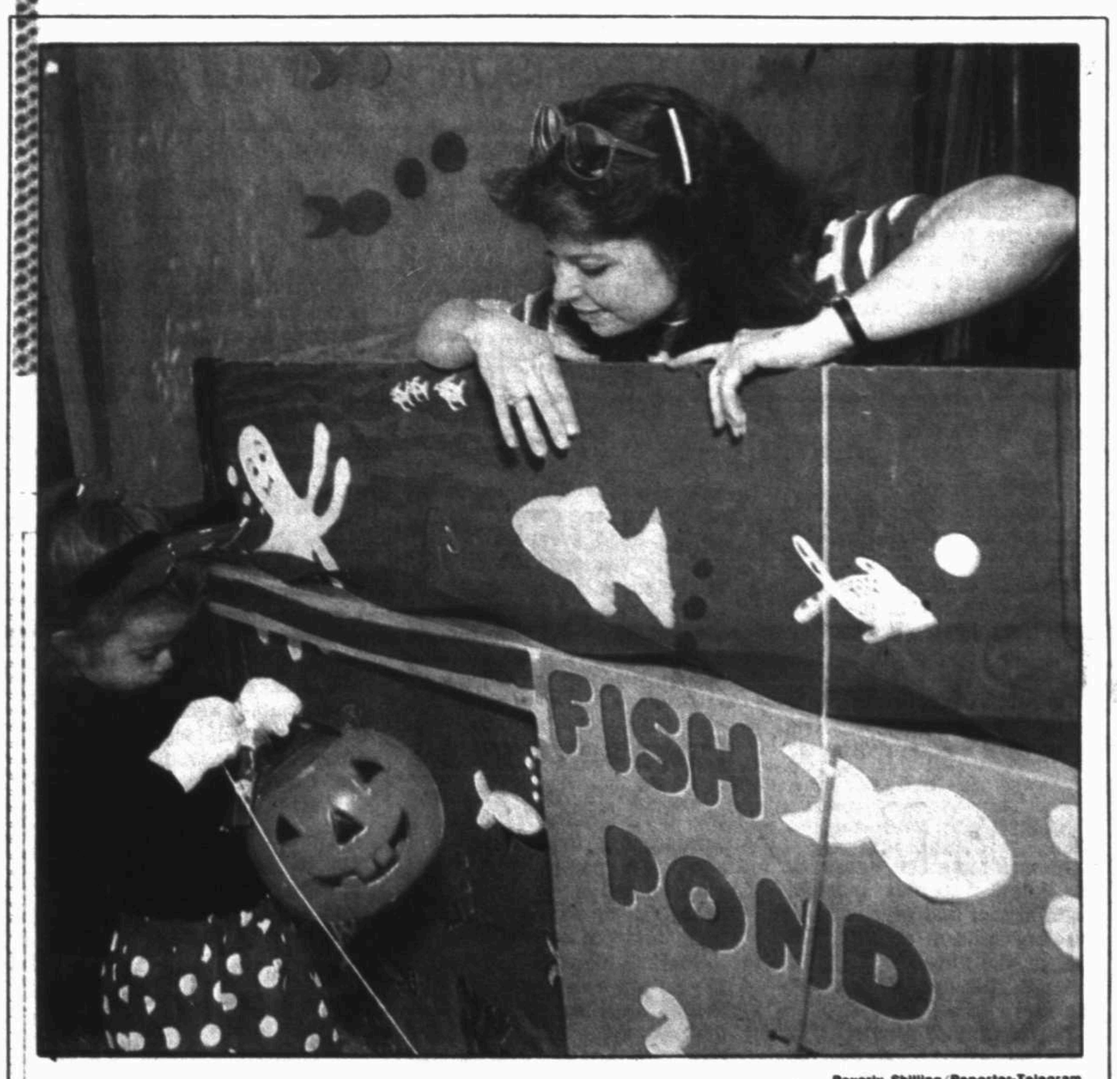

"I think it may be spent on computers," Worley said.

The principal said that money aside, the great reward for the push to improve test scores is that pupils are now "all working at a higher level."

South African tells local press apartheid not an issue

■ At a press conference in Midland, South African Tamsanqa Linda says only one side of the apartheid story is being told.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

The co-president of the South African United Christian Concilliation Party told a small group of reporters Saturday that communism, not apartheid, is the real issue in South Africa.

Tamsanqa Linda, whose two-month tour of the United States is sponsored by the John Birch Society, said African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela has duped the international press about his support in South Africa.

"Nelson Mandela does not speak for my people," Linda said.

He said the South Africa Communist Party has infiltrated the ANC and seeks a communist revolution in the nation.

"People here need to understand what's going on — they're only hearing one side of the story," he said.

"There are hundreds of thousands of moderate blacks who are wanting to keep Western culture, the free enterprise system for their own."

Linda also criticized Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu, who received a Nobel Peace Prize for his anti-apartheid stance.

"Tutu was never a spokesman of the people," he said, adding that whites had broken away from the South African Anglican Church because of his politics.

Linda, the former mayor of Ibhayi Township in Port Elizabeth and the president of a council of 74 townships, said his goal in coming to the United States was to educate Americans and press for an end to world sanctions against South Africa.

"I would love to see sanctions lifted," he said. "They would create more wealth and lessen the gap between blacks and whites."

He said the sanctions are strangling the country's economy and hitting unemployed blacks especially hard, a situation that could destabilize the government.

"South Africa is a Christian country, one of the few in Africa," Linda said. "We haven't legalized abortion or pornography.

"So why kick us out (with sanctions) when we're part of what the United States is all about?"

The South African sanctions are harsh considering that none have been levied against China, he said.

Linda said the government has made great strides in civil rights since its inception in 1961, "but ANC: A Communist plaything?

By Bill Modisett
Staff Writer

■ Analysis

Tamsanqa Linda is involved in a struggle for survival in South Africa — a country torn by tribal warfare. Since 1985 he has witnessed violence unseen in the United States. His life and the lives of those in his family have been threatened. His business was looted and burned. His home was firebombed.

Those responsible, says Linda, are the members of the African National Congress (ANC) — a Communist organization led by Nelson Mandela. It is that group, says Linda, that is creating turmoil in South Africa.

The conflict has been painted by much of the media in the United States as a struggle to end apartheid, the government policy of separation of the races. But Linda says, "It was that in the beginning. The struggle today is no longer apartheid, but the struggle is between the free enterprise system and the Marxist ideology which the ANC and communist countries are trying to create."

Linda, who is in this country on a tour sponsored by the John Birch Society, flew to Midland Saturday morning from Abilene for a press conference and a speaking engagement in Odessa. His visit to this area was arranged by the Birch Society and the Rosalind Kress Haley Library.

Although he resigned his position as mayor of Ibhayi township of Port Elizabeth, South Africa, Linda continues to serve as coun-

Midlander lives a modern-day miracle

A bone-marrow transplant, "positive attitude," faith and prayer have merged to give 34-year-old Pat Collier of Midland hope of recovery from a rare cancer of the blood-producing bone marrow.

Collier, his wife, Mary, and their family and praying friends have adopted a positive attitude and called upon the powers of "hope and faith," Mrs. Collier said.

"That's what it's all about," she said. "If you're positive in your heart, it's going to make Pat more positive" and that will "spread cheer" to other people in the hospital — Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas.

Collier

Collier, a chemical research and development engineer for Petrolite Corp. in Midland, received the transplant at Baylor on Oct. 18.

The miracle of the transplant came about 10 days after Dr. E. Donnall Thomas of Seattle, Wash., received the Nobel Prize for his advances in bone-marrow transplants, which have been found to slow disease processes such as leukemia, aplastic anemia, lymphoma and multiple myeloma, the rare disease Collier suffers from.

In recent years, about 2,000 patients worldwide each year receive bone-marrow transplants, according to the National Marrow

GARY OTT

What could be more important than knowing the score?

I'm not exactly sure when it happened, but somewhere along the way the sports sections of most newspapers across America underwent a dramatic change.

Ott

What occurred, of course, is that the actual reporting of sports news ceased and was replaced by coverage of social issues and political activities.

It used to be that you picked up the sports section and immediately checked out the score from last night's big game to determine if you won or lost your bet. If your team won, it put you in a delightful mood because you knew the first thing you were going to do at the office was sashay over to your buddy's desk, hold out an upturned palm and say, "Excuse me, but I believe you owe me $10." This, quite naturally, would be followed by much laughter and cackling.

"How could you bet on those wimps, anyway?" you would needle your friend. "They haven't covered the spread in a year-and-a-half."

Then your friend would insist on a double-or-nothing wager. If he was stubborn enough — or his favorite team bad enough — you could take your season-long winnings and finance your kid's college education, provided, of course, you weren't talking about one of those Harvards or Yales back east where all the professors have hyphens in their last names and try to sound like John Kennedy when they talk.

It was all good clean fun.

It still could be, except now you can't find the darn scores. They are hidden somewhere. Instead, you have to wade through articles on drug busts, lawsuits, salary arbitration, race relations, steroids and whether or not female reporters should be allowed in the locker room.

Gimme a break. I just want to know who won the game.

This is not to say that drug busts, lawsuits, salary arbitration, race relations, steroids and whether or not female reporters should be allowed in the locker room aren't dandy subjects to read about. It's just that when I turn to the sports page I want to know the name of the winning pitcher, not the identity of his defense attorney. Call me old-fashioned.

Since when did sports become a political subject, anyway?

What's the deal? We don't get enough mud slinging on the front page? I can see it now. "For more crime news, please turn to the Sports Section."

Life used to be so simple. And so was the news.

Want blood and guts? Fine. Read the police report.

How about the latest fall fashions? No problem. Check out the Lifestyle Section.

Price of oil? Flip to the Business Section.

And — back in the good old days — when you wanted to escape from reality you headed straight for the sports page. There, you could wallow in meaningless facts and figures to your heart's content.

There was no mention of social issues or the latest political controversies. If you wanted to find out how the league's Most Valuable Player voted in the last presidential election, you were dead solid out of luck.

But if you wanted to know his batting average, it was right there in black and white.

So take heart, Mr. Sports Editor. Just give me scores.

Who knows, I just might have a small wager on the outcome. And if I decide to have a kid, I want him to have the best college education possible.

Gary Ott is city editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

DEATHS

Sarah Houdyshell

Funeral services for Sarah "Beth" Houdyshell, 74, are scheduled for 11 a.m. Monday in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Pastor Gonzales of the Seventh Day Adventist Church in Odessa officiating.

Houdyshell

Survivors include two sons, Rollin Gunter Jr. and Jerry Gunter of Midland; and four brothers, Wade Gunter of Odessa, Beck Gunter of Granite Shoals, Lloyd Gunter of Abilene and Millard Gunter of Colton, Calif.

Leura Adell Partain

DeLEON — Funeral services for Leura Adell Partain, 81, of Midland are scheduled for 2:30 p.m. today at the DeLeon First Baptist Church. Burial will follow in the Victor Cemetery under the direction of Nowlin Funeral Home.

She died Friday at a Midland hospital.

She was born June 24, 1909, in Victor. She was a homemaker. Her husband, John Travis Partain, preceded her in death in 1956.

Survivors include: three sons, Charles Partain of Pearl River, La., Bill Partain of Fort Worth, and Tom Partain of Arlington; one daughter, Pat D. Stewart of Midland; two brothers and five sisters; 17 grandchildren and 25 great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by two sons, J. Doug Partain and Berhl R. Partain.

COLLIER: Transplant was successful

(From 1B)

Donor Program in St. Paul, Minn. In this country, the long-term survival rate has been 45 to 80 percent since 1968.

In Collier's case, the transplant performed by Baylor hematologist-oncologist Dr. Joseph Fay, has been deemed successful.

By fortune, the marrow of Collier's younger brother, Richard Collier, 28, of Albuquerque,. N.M., was a "perfect match," said Diane Randolph, Fay's bone-marrow transplant coordinator.

Portions of the brother's marrow, which was taken from the hip bone, were used in the transplant.

The transplant was accomplished intravenously.

"He's looking very well — doing great," said Ms. Randolph, who noted that the usual hospital stay for a bone-marrow transplant patient is five weeks.

Since the transplant, Collier has been in protective isolation while his body rebuilds its immune system.

Because of the "perfect" match, Collier's body is not expected to reject the transplant. But there could be complications.

Collier's infection-fighting white blood cells "dropped to zero after the new bone marrow settled in."

Now, however, Ms. Randolph said, Collier's new-found marrow is beginning to produce white blood cells; red blood cells which carry oxygen from the lungs to the body tissue and which carry carbon dioxide from the body tissue to the lungs; and platelets, which cause blood to clot.

"It's just beginning, just beginning barely," an elated Ms. Randolph said of Collier's bone marrow function. The healing process, she says, is "a miracle."

Without a marrow transplant, multiple myeloma "eventually is a fatal disease," originating in the bone marrow.

In 1988, Fay administered the marrow transplant for Midland teen-ager Heather Preas, who suffered from aplastic anemia, a condition in which the marrow shuts down and ceases production of blood.

Both Heather's and Collier's conditions were diagnosed by Midland oncologist Dr. David Snyder.

Heather, now an 18-year-old premedical student at Southwestern University in Georgetown, first became stricken with loss of energy. She bruised easily. Collier contracted a lingering cold, which led to pneumonia and later to Snyder's suspicions of something far more serious.

Unlike Collier's case where the marrow came from a sibling, Heather's transplanted marrow was donated by an Englishwoman following an exhaustive search for an antigen match.

From Mary Collier's viewpoint, the successful transplant is a miracle. And, it's "very rare" and "amazing" that the Collier brothers' antigens matched perfectly and even more amazing that the younger brother's bone marrow injected into Pat Collier's blood system somehow got inside the skeleton — from head to toe — to regenerate and to produce blood.

"If you didn't know before that that there is a God," Mrs. Collier asserted, "you know now. It is a miracle."

The family's church, The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity in Midland, has set up a fund to help the family. And the Permian Basin Blood Center in Midland Memorial Hospital is accepting blood in Collier's behalf.

LINDA: ANC 'terrorizes people,' leader says

cil president of 74 township councils which represent some 14 million blacks in the Eastern Cape.

Linda said that many Americans still view the struggle in South Africa as a racial struggle between blacks and whites, but apartheid has been effectively ended. "Today it is the ANC who is denying the people a good standard of living.

"ANC consists of hooligans," said Linda, "and terrorizes the people so they cannot think for themselves."

When Nelson Mandela visited the United States in late June, his trip was threefold, said Linda. He was attempting to obtain funds from the United States government, the Council of Churches and to stir up racial violence in this country.

Mandela and Linda both are members of the Xhosa tribe, but Linda says there are two factions to the tribe — one violent and the other anti-violence. Linda supports peaceful change and is working toward that end, but it's not without a degree of risk. He speaks, he says, because he wants the West to hear the truth and to support his people's right to determine their own destiny.

Linda is advocating that the United States government lift sanctions imposed against his country and help South Africa to create the wealth by which its people can remain free. But, he says, most importantly "stop supporting our enemies."

As co-president of the United Conciliation Party with 500,000 members, Linda says the U.S. sanctions have hurt his country's economy. Yet he pointed out that the Communists have hurt it there are no quick solutions."

He asked rhetorically if any black men in South Africa are still affected by apartheid.

The apartheid laws still on the books "are not preventing blacks from doing what they should be doing," Linda said, offering as proof the blacks who are buying homes and conducting business in white areas.

He added that blacks from other African nations are flocking to South Africa for economic advantages. "The 'evil' apartheid system is the only one offering hope to the people of South Africa," he said.

Linda believes that too quick a change from apartheid policies will scare whites and white businesses out of South Africa. He said no one was yet capable of taking their places.

"I'm not looking for a black government but a government of the people," Linda said. "Mandela is for removing the white racist system and replacing it with a black apartheid system oppressing your people."

Linda has given speeches in Dallas, Little Rock, Ark. and Appleton, Wis., home of the John Birch Society, as well as other midwestern locations during his tour. He hopes to have an opportunity to speak to Congress and the United Nations while he is in the States.

Shooting

Staff Reports

A 25-year-old Midland man was in custody Saturday night in connection with the attempted murder of David Posey, 31, who was shot five times in front of his house early Saturday morning, police and jail officials said.

Upon arrival at the house at 405 W. Nobles Ave. at 2:24 a.m., officers found Posey lying in a pool of blood in his yard.

Several witnesses testified seeing the suspect use what is believed to be a .22-caliber rifle to shoot Posey in the nose before running off, a Midland Police Department spokesman said.

Police said officers arrested the suspect Saturday afternoon on a warrant for attempted murder. Details of the arrest were not available.

A canine officer and his dog had attempted to track the suspect in the neighborhood where the shooting occurred, but lost his scent.

Posey was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital, where a spokeswoman said he remains in critical condition.

Police reports said the emergency room staff removed bullets from Posey's spine, chest and face.

The spokesman said he believed the incident was triggered by a domestic dispute.

Fatality

Odessan Mike Lee Henry, 39, was killed Saturday morning when his car was involved in a head-on collision on Interstate 20 near the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Midland police said.

The accident occurred at 10:06 a.m. when a 1979 Chevrolet pickup driven by Norma Zubia Juarez, 23, of Midland struck Henry's 1986 LTD Crown Victoria as it traveled in the eastbound lane, according to the report.

Police said Ms. Juarez allegedly was traveling west in the eastbound lane east of the Cottonflat Road overpass.

Henry was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe.

No charges had been filed in conjunction with the accident by Saturday night, police said.

Drug seizure

ODESSA — An Odessa man was in jail Saturday awaiting arraignment for possession of about 4½ pounds of cocaine with an estimated street value of $400,000, sheriff's department and jail officials said.

Sheriff's deputies arrested a 21-year-old man about 2:30 p.m. Friday after stopping him for driving erratically on West County Road in Odessa, Sheriff Bob Brookshire said.

The cocaine was discovered during a subsequent search of the man's car, Brookshire said. He said the man gave deputies a false name and was not carrying a driver's license.

Accident

Six people were injured, three of them seriously, in a two-vehicle accident about 11 p.m. Saturday in the 7100 block of West Highway 80, a Department of Public Safety trooper at the scene said.

The names and conditions of those injured, who all were transported to Midland Memorial Hospital, had not been released by presstime.

The officer said a pickup occupied by two white males apparently broadsided a white Pontiac Sunbird occupied by four women.

The Sunbird reportedly left the highway and crossed in front of the pickup, which was westbound on the north Highway 80 service road. The pickup apparently struck the Sunbird at high speed, the officer said.

Other details of the crash are still under investigation.

Alcohol was involved in the crash, according to the officer.

"WHY, GOD? WHY DID MY DAUGHTER DIE?"
"You've heard of so-called parental consent laws. They force a teenager to tell her parents she's decided on an abortion.
"If she doesn't, the law says she can't have one.
"Of course, most teenagers discuss their decision with their parents or another responsible grownup anyway, law or no law. But our daughter's friends tell me that if a girl is really terrified to tell her parents she can get around the law by getting on a bus to another state.
"Or she might try to end her pregnancy all by herself. Without telling anybody.
"That's what my daughter Becky did.
"She was seventeen years old. And now it's too late for us to talk about anything that scares her.
"Ever again."
Teens already face dangerous "parental consent" barriers to safe, legal abortion in ten states. Similar limits have been proposed in another four. Recent Supreme Court Decisions allowing states to severely restrict a teen's access to safe, legal abortion-such as requiring approval by both her biological parents, even those who are abusive or have been absent since birth-endanger millions more. Stop "parental consent" laws. Protect young lives.
Write to your elected officials and urge them to vote against parental consent laws.

TI thinks 'local' before going global

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

'If orders to the Midland/Odessa plant dry up, orders from the plant dry up. This cycle is what TI ... is targeting. It's good business, but it's good for the communities and it's the right thing to do.'

— Dennis Hiser, Texas Instruments vice president

There's a story that goes: Two men were walking in the woods when they were confronted by a bear, who began chasing them. As they were running from the bear, one of the men stopped to put on a pair of running shoes.

"What are you doing that for?" his friend asked. "Those won't help you outrun that bear."

"No," the other replied. "But they'll help me outrun you."

The story is often told as a joke, but the man telling this version wasn't trying to amuse the audience. Dennis Hiser, vice president, corporate staff and corporate director of procurement for Texas Instruments, was making a point.

"We have to recognize that that bear is global competition, and we can't outrun it. We have to outrun the other competition," he told the audience of around 25 attending a seminar on TI's new minority procurement thrust.

"We have to help each other outrun that bear," he added. "If orders to the Midland/Odessa plant dry up, orders from the plant dry up," Hiser said, adding, "This cycle is what TI's minority procurement thrust is targeting. It's good business, but it's also good for the communities TI has operations in, and it's the right thing to do."

Hiser told the gathering that in early 1989, the company redid its minority procurement program for non-defense-related companies, a decision motivated by demographics. "Minorities are the fastest-growing segment of the population entering the work force.

"Ten years ago, they comprised 17 percent of the population entering the workforce. Ten years from now, they'll comprise 26 percent, and 20 years from now will comprise 50 percent.

"We will have the most diverse work force in the world. Some experts say that will be an advantage, offering new creativity, enthusiasm and energy. But it will take a lot of hard work," Hiser said.

The company realized it needed to bring minority suppliers into the economic mainstream, which would help ensure a wide range of suppliers over the long term, he said. While revamping its minority procurement programs, company officials studied the minority procurement programs of a number of other corporations. Hiser said they found the other companies had some interesting features in common. For instance:

- Management's support of and commitment to the develoment of minority suppliers.
- The ongoing development of a few good supliers of mainstream products.
- A commitment of resources —technical training, long-term contracts and financing — that keep small-business operations operating.

Hiser acknowledged that developing minority suppliers is difficult, explaining that today's highly competitive environment, buyers feel they don't have the time to do anything that takes more time that doing the job the traditional way.

"Using different suppliers they don't know, that they're not sure of, takes longer than going back to a traditional supplier. Doing something different takes more time and it takes motivation. It's possible — that's why we're doing it. That doesn't take away from the fact that it's hard, or that we have to do it."

He reported to the gathering that last year, TI spent $34 million with minority-owned companies, up 62 percent from 1988, and he predicted those expenditures would be even higher for 1990. Hiser said TI's goal is to spend 5 percent with minority businesses, about double the current level.

The company has established a multifunctional Minority Business Development Council, which is laced, Hiser said, with vice presidents, that helps management implement the program companywide. Also established was a corporate office for minority recruitment, and minority procurement coordinators have been established at all TI sites.

Texas Instruments buys a wide range of supplies, Hiser said, citing such examples as trucks, lead frames, gold, pencils, paper, computers, connectors, and travel. He said the company spent $100 million on travel last year, $50 million on connectors, $60 million on circuit boards, $150 million on computers, and $100 million on contract labor such as security services.

He added that TI has had a strategic supplier program for more than a decade, which concentrates on helping their best suppliers develop. Small, minority-owned companies can become strategic suppliers, he said. "Sometimes the little supplier can save us money, give better response time and better quality than the big ones. It's his company, his livelihood. Whereas, the big companies usually have alternatives, in terms of customers."

Sorting out the good suppliers takes a long time and is difficult, "but that doesn't take away from the fact that we have to do it," Hiser said.

"Think of it in terms of the wealth of the nation and our competitiveness. That's something we can all buy into."

Governor's race gives plain choice

Back in Midland recently for he and his wife to cast their absentee ballots, Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams addressed a topic that should be on plenty of Texas voters' minds — negative political campaigning.

Williams and his opponent, Democratic nominee Ann Richards, have both stooped to what many view as "dirty politicking" in this campaign, but before voters cross them both off as unredeemable, they should think about a comment Williams made.

Noting that the gubernatorial campaign has gone on for too long, Williams said, "The people of Texas need to take a serious look at moving the March primary into August. I think a shorter campaign would make it less negative."

He's correct and that is a worthwhile proposal, but there are other aspects of such a change that could also benefit our system of government. With more than $26 million spent on just the governor's race, it's clear that only the rich or those able to raise millions of dollars in campaign contributions can even think of entering a political race nowadays with even a vain hope of winning.

Big money politics played out over a year or more of time necessarily turns sour because of the nature of news. The freshest, most sensational comment gets the coverage, which in turn encourages candidates to reach for the "worst" information available about their opponent. In short time, a candidate is cutting commercials about the poor-taste joke that Williams told on his ranch earlier this year comparing the act of rape to a rainstorm at a cattle roundup.

Never hint that in that context it might have been intended to break the ice with a rather stiff group of reporters who obviously could not even appreciate the analogy.

The natural response, of course, would be to cut commercials attacking Ms. Richards for her extreme liberalism and her support of the National Organization of Women (NOW).

But what purpose would such a response serve? It doesn't tell the voters any more about either candidate than they've already had the opportunity to find out. It doesn't carry the campaign toward a higher plateau. It only reduces the campaign to more of a mud-throwing contest and further demeans politics in the eyes of serious voters.

Williams, however, said his campaign will respond to the Richards' low-road advertisements with a round of ads showing the differences in the candidates' positions.

Now that's refreshing! The true difference between Clayton Williams and Ann Richards is that Williams is a conservative who has always made his living in private industry while Richards has lived off the fruits of the taxpayers as a government official. There's no comparison.

She'll obviously support government solutions to problems, which would only result in more taxes, more spending and more bureaucracy while Williams would stress private-sector solutions to the problems government hasn't been able to resolve.

The November gubernatorial presents a clear choice for Texas. In this day when taxpayers stand at the doorway to a tax revolt, we don't believe it's more government people want.

Williams offers leadership for Texas away from the tax and spend philosophy of the past while Richards only offers more of the same old bureaucratic double-talk.

OTHER VIEWS

Keep criminals off the streets

There is little reason to wonder why police officers in Texas' largest metropolitan areas are so frustrated. They risk life and limb to bring in drug dealers, robbers, thieves and others who make communities unsafe for honest citizens. But the ink hardly has had time to dry on the court convictions before the very same felons are out of jail and back in business.

Federal court mandates concerning prison overcrowding have left the Texas Department of Corrections with no alternative but to release inmates long before they have completed the sentences assessed by jurors. But a Dallas Morning News investigative report showing that violent offenders were serving only 26 percent of the sentences should be shocking to even the most battle-weary in this war on crime. ...

Unless Texas is ready to take the tough steps necessary, violent offenders will continue to be back on the streets almost as quickly as police can lock them up. Here are a few recommendations:

■ ... With new prison construction, lawmakers should seek ways to return to the earlier (tougher) rules on minimum stays.

■ ... Legislators should beef up financial support (for alternative sentencing programs).

■ ... The Texas attorney general's office should push for a court test (of a sentencing disclosure law) so that district attorneys and judges would feel comfortable with letting jury panels know the truth about the prison terms they are assessing. ...

State officials must be prepared to face this challenge with more funding for alternative programs for non-violent offenders and a sufficient number of prison cells for those criminals who should remain behind bars. The public should expect nothing less from their elected representatives.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Oct. 28, the 301st day of 1990. There are 64 days left in the year. A reminder: The country is back on Standard Time. Clocks should have been set back one hour.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 28, 1886, the Statue of Liberty, a gift from the people of France, was dedicated in New York Harbor by President Cleveland in the presence of its sculptor, Frederic Auguste Bartholdi.

On this date:

In 1636, Harvard College was founded in Massachusetts.

In 1919, Congress enacted the Volstead Act, which provided for enforcement of Prohibition, over President Wilson's veto.

JACK ANDERSON

There's still no rival to an on-off knob

WASHINGTON — When Republicans and Democrats join ranks as the gatekeepers of morality and public good, the First Amendment is frequently the casualty.

Anderson

Usually the target is television, where the right to free speech is especially easy prey. TV is regulated by the Federal Communications Commission and that means it gets caught up in the machinations of Congress and the White House.

In the latest assault, the issue was children's programming and whether the tube is exposing the kiddies to too much advertising. What politician in his or her right mind would defend the brainwashing of children? Even George Bush, who supposedly inherited his predecessor's predilection for letting the market set its own rules, caved in and let a bill regulating advertising on children's TV become law. Bush didn't sign it, but he didn't veto it either.

Supposedly, under the new law, kids will get a little more educational programming and a little less commercial time. And broadcasters will surrender more of their right to show what they want and what the market will bear.

Apparently no one thought to handle the problem of too many commercials by simply turning off the TV. And for all those parents who can't say "no" when Junior demands the G.I. Joe that he saw on TV, Congress has now done the parenting for them. (We're reminded of the city council in Boulder, Colo., that set a decibel limit on the music from the Good Humor truck because a few parents complained that the music set their children to begging for ice cream. It's no wonder our kids can't just say no.)

The sacrifice TV viewers make for all this convenience is the First Amendment, which both parties seem all too eager to jeopardize if they can cloak censorship in sanctimony.

Since the 1940s and the genesis of the Fairness Doctrine, Congress has opportunistically trampled on the First Amendment in the broadcast arena. The Federal Communications Commission used the Fairness Doctrine to force television and radio broadcasters to air opposing points of view when editorializing on issues. The effect of the rule was to ensure blandness instead of diversity. Broadcasters learned that rather than squandering precious air time on John Q. Public, they simply stopped broadcasting editorials that would prompt anyone to demand equal time.

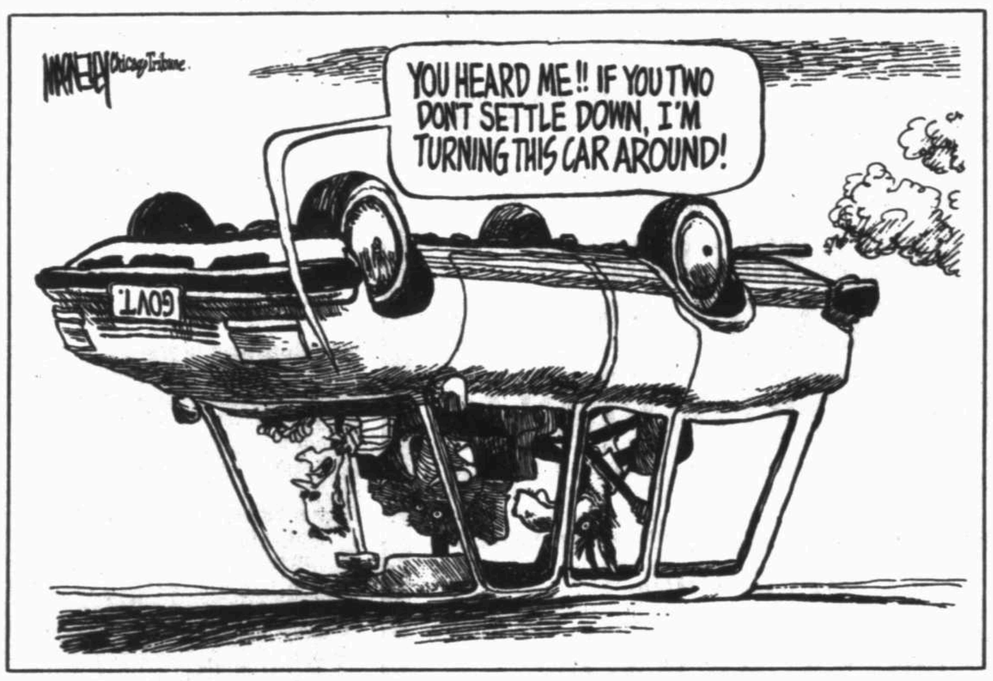

In 1987, when the Reagan administration repealed the Fairness Doctrine, it was all but useless anyway because meaty broadcast editorials were passe.

That didn't stop Congress from using Reagan's action for some grandstanding. Congress passed a bill reinstating the Fairness Doctrine, and Reagan vetoed the bill. But in defeat, Congress was united, as usual, against the First Amendment. A bipartisan chorus of conservatives and liberals said the media was an unruly child that needed to be regulated. Conservative Republicans complained about the legendary liberal bias of the media. Liberal Democrats said the media had a capitalist agenda and that the only way to get air time for activist causes was to require it under a Fairness Doctrine.

Both sides can't be right, and, as a practical matter, both are wrong. But that doesn't quiet the congressional chorus. The First Amendment is easy pickings and the politicians are the pickers.

Never mind that the Evil Empire has begun to dismantle state control of the media in the Soviet Union. Congress continues to tinker with attempts to reassert it, not out of any philosophical idealism, but simply because politicians get points at the polls when they make a scapegoat out of the messenger.

GEORGE WILL

From 'America, The Beautiful,' to this

WASHINGTON — Rabbit has come to rest as he should have, from heart failure at an early age, a death brought on by his undisciplined surrender to the temptation of petty indulgences. The question is, Is Rabbit us?

Will

"Rabbit at Rest," John Updike's fourth and very final novel about Harry "Rabbit" Angstrom, begins at a Florida airline terminal. Rabbit, 55 years old and 40 pounds overweight, is simultaneously suffering intimations of his terminal illness — chest pains — and an irresistible craving for a candy bar. The book ends, many such surrenders later, with Rabbit hospitalized, sagging toward a death that might have been forestalled by sensible habits or serious surgery, which he rejected.

The preceding installments in this unique literary genre — this epic of the mundane — were "Rabbit, Run" (1960), "Rabbit Redux" (1971) and "Rabbit is Rich" (1981). Updike is not a novelist of ideas but of mingled domestic atmospheres and social intimations. But the mingling makes it reasonable for the readers who have made these books bestsellers to ransack them for social diagnoses. Furthermore, Updike's timing causes them to be seen as summations of decades.

When we first met Rabbit, he was 26. It was 1959 and Updike remembers that "Kerouac's 'On the Road' was in the air, and a decade of 'dropping out' about to arrive."

The Rabbit we now rejoin (it is December 1988) is preoccupied with disasters, such as the terrorist destruction of the airliner over Lockerbie and, later, hurricane Hugo. "He, too, is falling, helplessly falling, toward death." Death by potato chips.

Updike has now written 1,700 pages about this emotionally stunted, intellectually barren, morally repulsive egotist whose self-absorption lacks even the fascination of large scale. His life's work is an inherited Toyota dealership that is taken from him by the no-nonsense Japanese after his son embezzles from it to feed his cocaine habit.

Rabbit, like all of us, is moved by a mixture of physical and moral promptings. But in Rabbit, the latter are so weak and the former so base, it is a tribute to Updike's craftsmanship that we want to watch as Rabbit becomes a comprehensive failure, as husband, father, businessman, man.

Updike is a realist in the American tradition of Theodore Dreiser, Sinclair Lewis and, recently, Tom Wolfe. Updike does not believe, as many less-read writers seem to, that American life is so absurd that it defeats the conventions of realism.

Realism can be angry, but only up to a point. There must be a residue of caring, even affection, to move a writer to engage reality. Sinclair Lewis may have loathed George F. Babbitt and his hometown of Zenith, or the smallness of Gopher Prairie's Main Street, but Lewis was angry because they fell short of hopes he had and standards they should have had.

The New York Times reviewer calls "Rabbit at Rest" Updike's "powerful critique of America" and also a "supremely eloquent Valentine to his country." The Washington Post reviewer calls it "a happy book; an exultant hymn to the inexhaustible vitality of America." Well.

Updike calls it "a depressed book about a depressed man, written by a depressed man." But Updike may not have much on his mind other than the literary challenge of casting a cool eye on the life, and now the death, of a middle-class man.

But not a representative man — not a metaphor for America. Perhaps "Rabbit at Rest" can be read as a cautionary tale for America the sclerotic, its arteries clogged by dumb consumption. But Updike, who is one year older than Rabbit and grew up where Rabbit lived, in southeastern Pennsylvania, may just be interested in, and perhaps depressed by, mortality.

Is America mortal? Maybe, even probably, but not imminently. As Updike once said, "People run down, and they confuse their condition with the world's."

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

If knotted properly, it's the tie that binds

A tie is a pain around the neck. Neckties — the flashy strips of silk that give the business to "business attire" — are an affront to the trend toward ease and wantonness.

Safire

I hate 'em. I wear them only when going to weddings and funerals (but not bar mitzvahs or wakes), or to White House briefings; when representing my company; and when going tieless would make a fashion statement discomforting other guests and cause them to think me a too-secure slob.

Given this cravatophobia, why am I uplifted and encouraged by the crusade of one educator in a tough neighborhood to get his male students to wear ties?

Frank Mickens, a former basketball coach, is principal of Boys and Girls High School in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn. For years, this had been a school described in the vogue phrase "out of control" — with students not just running up the down staircase, but running the venerable institution and themselves into the ground.

To the helm strode Mickens, a black man who exudes authority and confidence. He stopped the sassing of teachers and harassment in the hallways. According to Joseph Berger, a former schoolteacher now a reporter for The New York Times, the force of his personality helped stem the tide of disorder.

Now this front-line principal, offended by the dark T-shirts and gold paraphernalia of isolation and resentment, has come up with a revolutionary idea: neckties for the boys.

Starting next week, at a "dress-for-success assembly," male seniors will be expected to wear light-colored shirts and neckties on Fridays; by the first of next year, the necktie requirement will be applied to all male students, to be followed by a dress code for the young women.

Will the 2,000 boys go for this? "The support from students and parents has been phenomenal," Mickens tells me. "It's a matter of self-esteem. Neckties are not trivial; this has greater implications, and has struck a chord."

The stunning notion of an "old school tie" — once a badge of network snobbery — as an expression of pride at an inner-city school has also touched a nerve.

Civil libertarians are worried about regimentation, or about discouraging political slogans emblazoned across backs (Neckties today, haircuts tomorrow?); others express concern at requiring poor students to buy special clothes.

Is the necktie code mandatory? "We don't use that word," responds Mickens, a maverick who understands how to use peer pressure to do what school policy cannot do, "but this is a done deal."

What of kids (including those dressed in $25 T-shirts and glittering sneakers) who say they cannot afford the conservative apparel? "Ties and shirts have been coming in from all over the country" after the Berger story appeared, reports the principal, "and even the National Football League is getting involved."

As a result, no child will be embarrassed at being deprived of business attire.

But do boys really like wearing ties? "Sure," says Mickens, who prefers bow ties, which are to be an acceptable alternative to the long ties. "They steal 'em off my desk every day."

To get in the habit of wearing a tie is like learning the art of speaking correctly; after you have mastered them, you can pop your collar and spout the most creative slang.

Listen up, kids of all colors, in all neighborhoods: If you don't experience what ultimately becomes the pain of wearing a tie, you never get to feel the pleasure — and the freedom — of not wearing a tie.

LETTERS

What decisions are next on the list?

In recent weeks, I have noticed letters from members of the community who seem determined to rid our community of written and cinematic material which they deem offensive. I would like to thank these people for making some important decisions for me. It removes a great responsibility from my shoulders. Perhaps they would like to make some other decisions for me. Could they tell me which church to attend, what to name my firstborn child, and how to spend my money?

Council wrong about unmarked city cars

When I read the "Local" section of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Wednesday, Oct. 10, I was appalled at the outcome of the Midland City Council vote on unmarked cars for city officials Poe, McGregor, Thorp and Reagan.

Carrying the cars under the police department budget and expenditures is wrong. Leaving them unmarked is wrong. To do this just because other cities are breaking the law is most certainly wrong. Do we give a thief a shorter sentence because everyone else is stealing?

Believe it or not, there is a sharp line between right and wrong in my mind and in the minds of many others in Midland.

I'm not sure the four city officials mentioned above are required to have city vehicles furnished. What does their job description require them to do that would send them out of their offices many times a day? Why are they ashamed to drive marked cars?

I'm for them sharing one or two marked vehicles, as needed, and leaving the cars in the parking lot when off duty. Or they can use their personal cars and be reimbursed at a fixed rate per mile.

Certainly we are paying them enough to provide their own transportation to and from work. I don't think this perk is at all necessary. If they don't like the working conditions, let them find another job.

I was told many years ago when I was just beginning my working career that if I couldn't do the job, they could always find someone who could. Keeps you on your toes.

I find the city councilmen, the people we voted for to keep their eyes open and control spending for us, are not doing their job when they rubber stamp all of the requests of the city employees. They, too, should be aware that if they can't handle the job, we can find someone who will.

Not all of us can spend several hours of our working time at the scheduled City Council meetings. That is what our representatives should be doing.

Vultures hovering over Permian carcass

It's not surprising that some take pleasure in the UIL's punishment of Permian. When a person, school, country, etc., has misfortune there are always vultures such as Terry Williamson, Paul Cox and Earl Miller who gather to pick over the remains.

Mr. Williamson writes, "it is a fact West Texans, outside of Odessa, just like to see Permian get beat." Sorry, Terry. While there are some that agree with you, the majority of West Texans like to see Permian or any other 4-5A team win State. Since 1951 our district has competed in 16 state championships and won nine. West Texans are proud of that true fact.

Mr. Cox writes, "Permian should compete in a separate league, a league for cheaters." Mr. Cox has a short memory: Lee was penalized in the '70s for illegal practices. If the UIL doesn't learn to differentiate between cheating purposely and breaking rules unwittingly every school will be able to compete in Mr. Cox's "cheaters" league.

Mr. Miller is quoted, "We've got better coaches than Permian." Mr. Miller has won four of five against Permian, a fine accomplishment. However, Permian has a 14-2 record in the playoffs during Earl's reign compared to Lee's 4-4. It's always been a mystery why Lee seemed over-confident against Arlington in the 1987 playoffs, perhaps Mr. Miller's immodest statement explains it. Earl's hat size must be larger than his shoe size.

Last thought for the vultures: Gregory-Portland High School was banned from the playoffs in 1990. Their crime? The school principal bought the football team pizza after a 1989 practice. It's human nature not to question the UIL's integrity when they punish your school's chief rival, but with the plethora of hazy rules that the UIL has created, all it takes is a simple misinterpretation to land any school in the UILs dungeon.

Letters, parcels much appreciated

Greetings from Saudi Arabia.

I wish to extend my most sincere appreciation for your efforts and patience during this crisis. It is a great relief for myself and other soldiers to know we are not forgotten. Your letters and packages lift our spirits every day.

Continue to have faith, as we do, that this crisis will soon be over. Thank you again for making me proud to be from the Tall City and the great State of Texas.

'Satanic' hysteria taking up public's money, time

By Ken Carpenter

Ken Carpenter is an investor in oil property and real estate. He has been a resident of Midland since 1965.

On Oct. 30, 1989, one of my employees asked for time off to pick up her children at school and take them to a "sitter." Why? Midland Independent School District personnel had called to alert parents to pick up their children because they heard satanic cults were going to kidnap blond-haired, blue-eyed children for satanic ritual sacrifice on Halloween.

I later found that similar rumors had swept through most Texas cities and, indeed, much of the country. This past week an Albuquerque, N.M., elementary school announced cancellation of its annual Halloween Carnival because a parent who is a police officer had called the school to report a similar rumor. Although the Bernalillo County sheriff' officers said there was no evidence to back up the rumor, the school nevertheless decided to cancel this year's carnival.

When questioned, one parent stated: "It's more evident every year that this is a high holy day of Satan. Children every year disappear, and there are human sacrifices every year. Police across the country can verify that." No matter how sincere the Albuquerque elementary school parent is, there is simply no evidence to support such a claim.

Kenneth Lanning of the FBI Center for Analysis of Violent Crime did an extensive study published in October 1989, entitled "Satanic, Occult, Ritualistic Crime: A Law Enforcement Perspective." In the study, Lanning concluded that the FBI cannot verify even one single satanic cult murder in the United States. Not one!

This year there have been two satanic cult awareness seminars in Midland. Public employees, generally from areas of law enforcement, education, social services and mental health take one or two days away from their work (with pay I presume) to attend these seminars for which they receive 10-15 hours of continuing education credit.

Recently, I attended one such seminar and was astonished at the inadequate credentials of the presenters and the lack of statistical data and concrete evidence to support their claims. By inadequate credentials, I mean the presenters were self-appointed "Satan-hunters," ministers with limited education, probation officers, etc., not Ph.D.'s in sociology or psychology trained in research techniques.

These Satan-hunters presented the religious story of the fall of Satan as if it were historical fact. They presented anecdotal stories of satanic animal sacrifices and satanic ritual murders as if they are regular occurrences. There was no documentation or statistical data to support their claims. Some presenters seem to make their living doing seminars, writing books and pamphlets and appearing on the trash talk show circuit (Geraldo Rivera, Oprah Winfrey, etc.).

In a March issue of The Wall Street Journal titled "Pitchmen of the Satan Scare," Anson Shupe noted "Satanism-exposure-mania has become a growth industry in this country." Shupe further explained that under the guise of technical training a whole generation of concerned professionals is being exposed to "downright misleading, false and poorly assembled information." From my personal observation at the recent Midland seminar, Shupe is correct. Furthermore, I am disappointed to find public funds being used and public employees participating in and getting credit for such rubbish.

Many individuals and the news media in general are quick to describe any mutilated animal or grisly murder as satanic. Then they fail to report later when responsible law enforcement personnel, after careful investigation, dismiss such claims as unsupported by evidence. The most notable instance is that of the brutal, violent drug cult murders which took place in Matamoros, Mexico last year. The news media trumpeted the satanic theories at the time of the crime, but few reported later when the FBI and other responsible law enforcement agencies found no connection between these drug-related murders and satanic cults.

With Halloween near, it is time to listen to the FBI and other responsible law enforcement officials and not get caught up in the hysteria of the past year. Our law enforcement officials should spend their time with the real problems such as drug-related crime, murder, rape, robbery and assault rather than waste their time and limited resources — not to mention taxpayers' money — on investigation of satanic cult groups whose actual existence is highly questionable.

Our schools and government agencies ought to be ashamed to give academic credit for seminars which are better suited for the National Inquirer or the Geraldo Rivera show.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 700 words or less.

Readers' views on: Elections

Time to clean house in capital

I now believe the time has come for our country's voting public to change their strategy. I have always voted a straight ticket, or for the incumbent, if I was half satisfied with his record. I now have a new goal — to clean house in Washington. It is clear that our country is broke and our government is out of control.

Some will pooh-pooh my new strategy, while others may see the wisdom therein. I truly believe that when a new congressman heads out to Washington, he is going on behalf of the people he represents, and may actually hold that thought for up to two years. But, if left to be exposed to the "way things are done on the Hill," he will soon become just another pea in the pod.

The only way we can send a clear message to the men on the hill is to "clean house" and hope the new crew was paying attention. Several rounds of this type of voting will purge the system, then, a continued voter policy like this will keep the pool from becoming stagnate in the future. I don't feel congressmen should be able to pass laws without having to come back home in a couple of years and live with the laws they've passed. I do not believe theirs was ever intended to be a career position.

This may not bring about the necessary changes soon enough for our generation, but, our new generation may be able to inherit a country that isn't broke and a government that isn't out of control if we start this November. It's true that there are a few, very few, fine men on the hill — Phil Graham for one — but a clean sweep is the only way to deliver the necessary message to all the parties involved.

So then, this is my new voting policy, and one I advocate for all veteran and first time voters and apathetic non-voters everywhere: under all circumstances vote the incumbent out. Spring cleaning is healthy for you, for me, for our great country! The only way we can regain control.

Jay Leno, not a noted political analyst, but a comedian, put it best — "They say if a new budget bill is not passed, the government will be shut down. Can that be all bad? Weren't they the ones that got us into this dilemma in the first place?" Think about it.

Foot-in-mouth disease aside

Why vote for Clayton Williams?

I would rather have a governor with a boot hanging out of his mouth once in awhile than a person who has never done anything but teach grade school and live off the government payroll — a confirmed bureaucrat!

This has not been a campaign of issues and this is too bad, but the only issue Richards has verbalized is that she would lower insurance rates. She says she would do this by appointing an insurance commissioner. I guess she is implying the he or she would then lower insurance rates.

Well first, the current Insurance Commission chairman has just been appointed by Gov. Bill Clements and the term is for six years. This current chairman's term has five-plus years to run and the newly-elected governor's term is four years.

There are two more insurance commissioners on the Board of Insurance Commissioners and only one of these terms will run out during the next governor's term of office. Also, commissioners can only be removed from office by the Legislature for misconduct.

Since the commissioners of insurance are the only ones that can set rates, it seems to me that Richards as governor could have no more effect on setting insurance rates than I can. Richards is just as aware of these facts as I am.

She also knows that the chairman of the Insurance Commission cannot by himself set insurance rates and that the commission has to have proof of excessive profit by the insurance companies before rates would be lowered. And the rates would be lower right now if that were the case.

Williams may not be the political sophisticate that impresses some people, but everyone had better logically review the facts before voting for Richards.

The definition of "demagogue" is a person who makes use of popular prejudices and false claims and promises in order to gain power. I don't want one of those as my governor.

Voters deserve more than this

As an interested party to the upcoming election, one thing is clear. The voters deserve more information. I would like to see a debate between the candidates for governor.

We all know how Clayton feels about drugs, prisons and taxes, but can this state run on three issues? I need to know more than I can learn from a 30 second commercial before I vote.

Time and again Ann Richards has asked for a debate, where matters could be discussed in depth. The candidates would expose their views on more than a few topics and be seen by many voters.

Each time Ann Richards has asked, Clayton has refused to debate. He seems to prefer to sit back and snipe at her and call her names. He won't answer any questions or give any specifics.

He may scratch and bite like a mean rooster, but he looks chicken to me. Claytie, debate the lady!

Arab allies proving to be straws blown about by ill wind

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — The winds of change in the Middle East are shifting as swiftly as the swirling sands in a Persian Gulf desert storm.

Hearst

They are ill winds that have led fatefully to new aggression by Syria against Lebanon and to openly advocated Arab appeasement of Iraq's Saddam Hussein for his barbaric conquest of Kuwait.

In an appeasement move that rocked the White House, Saudi Defense Minister Prince Sultan Ibn Abdel-Aziz, brother of Saudi King Fahd, told reporters in Jidda that Saudi Arabia "sees no harm in any Arab country giving its Arab sister land, a site or a position on the sea."

It was the first time since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2 that any Arab government minister had promised the beast of Baghdad that he would be rewarded for his aggression.

King Fahd quickly disavowed his brother, declaring that the Saudi government's insistence on Iraq's unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait was "firm and unchangeable."

President Bush clearly indicated his concern that the Saudi prince's public proposal to reward Saddam Hussein with a compromise deal could strengthen the appeasement movement. The president said: "I am more determined than ever to see that this invading dictator gets out of Kuwait with no compromise of any kind whatsoever," adding that if Hussein were given "one iota" of Kuwaiti territory, it would be rewarding aggression.

However, Arab leaders generally, including the king of Jordan and Egyptian President Mubarak, have made it clear that if Hussein withdraws his forces from Kuwait, his claim for a share of Kuwait's oil-rich land and two islands that would give Iraq an outlet to the Persian Gulf would be considered at an all-Arab conference. Even the Saudi ambassador in Washington told Secretary of State James Baker that a restored Kuwait government could decide to reward Hussein for withdrawing from most of the devastated country. The Soviet Union, France and other European nations, with the exception of Britain, have been sending similar signals.

This appeasement movement is threatening to ruin President Bush's hope of establishing a new world order against aggression. It has strengthened the belief of some administration officials and foreign diplomats in Washington that the president will have to resort to military action, with or without United Nations Security Council approval, to get Hussein out of Kuwait and destroy his capability to conquer the Persian Gulf countries eventually and control most of the world's oil resources.

Our military correspondent in Washington, Stewart Powell, who returned last Monday from a trip to the Persian Gulf with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, reported that the Pentagon is preparing American units in Saudi Arabia to "go it alone" if necessary.

Thursday, Cheney announced that as many as 100,000 more troops may be sent to the Persian Gulf. That would bring U.S. forces up to more than 300,000. Cheney said no ceiling is being put on how many troops will be sent. Non-American forces are expected to total 250,000 by the end of January or February, which would bring the total allied troop strength to half a million. No wonder some European military attaches in Washington are predicting war early next year.

Meanwhile, Syria has become the latest aggressor in the Middle East. Syrian troops not only crushed the Lebanese Christian army two weeks ago but last Sunday gunmen, undoubtedly under Syrian orders, stormed the home of Christian leader Dany Chamoun at daybreak and shot him to death, along with his beautiful wife and two handsome sons, one six, the other eight years old.

A staunch foe of Syrian dictator Hafez Assad's long-time effort to conquer Lebanon, Chamoun had devoted his adult life to trying to prevent Moslem and Palestinian fanatics from replacing Christian control of what had been the most civilized nation in the Middle East.

Assad hoodwinked the Bush administration by first sending Syrian troops to join U.S. forces in Saudi Arabia. This led Secretary of State Baker to virtually embrace Assad as a friend. It was soon thereafter that a Syrian-led offensive crushed the Christian army led by Gen. Michel Aoun, who fled to the French Embassy where he was granted asylum.

The most shameful aftermath of this barbarism was the failure of the United Nations to condemn an aggression just as evil as Iraq's aggression against Kuwait. Not the United States nor any other nation has to date proposed a U.N. resolution condemning Syria or demanding withdrawal of its troops from Lebanon. On the contrary, there are indications the State Department virtually condoned the crime, even before it was committed. A Washington Post report from Beirut said the pro-Syrian Lebanese President Elias Hrawi sought assurances from the United States that a Syrian assault on the Christian army would not be opposed. State Department spokesman Margaret Tutwiler denied that this country gave Syria a "green light." Asked if it had given Syria a red light, she said:

"We did not give them any lights."

One can only assume principle was sacrificed for the expediency of getting Syria's help in forcing the withdrawal of Iraqi forces from Kuwait and possibly toppling Saddam Hussein from power.

MC Student Services moves into new quarters

After having folks in one place for more than 15 years, it's hard to keep track of them when they move. Such is the case for the people in the Student Services area, including the Dean of Students' and Registrar's staffs, who moved into their new facilities. The north portion of the expanded Student Center now houses all of Student Services.

Tuck

This includes the Dean of Students, counselors, student records, financial aid, Registrar, security, and Center for Reassessment.

There are entrances on the west and north sides of the building as well as access from the original portion of the Student Center. All Student Services telephone numbers remained the same.

An Open House is scheduled for the public next Sunday, Nov. 4, from 2-4 p.m. and we hope you'll be able to come. There's a lot to see: a new bookstore, new mailroom, enlarged food service area, faculty lounge, new meeting rooms and new games rooms. Refreshments and entertainment also are on the list for the afternoon.

We're excited about a new scholarship fund which was announced last week for music students. The Gonzalez Scholarships were established by Roy Gonzalez in memory of his wife, Ellen, who died last summer. Ellen had completed more than 10 years as secretary for the Fine Arts Division at the time of her death.

She also taught numerous ballroom dance classes for the Continuing Education Department.

The scholarships are $300 cash per semester and may be renewed for a total of two years. More information is available from Dr. Stan Jacobs, chairman of the Fine Arts Division.

In other related news, Dr. Eileen Piwetz, chairman of the MC Health Sciences Division, has been re-elected President of the Texas Board of Nurse Examiners. Eileen participated in the 13th annual meeting of the Texas Society of Allied Health Professions at Galveston Oct. 4-5, the 6th annual Pediatric Conference in Odessa on Oct. 11, but then really hit her stride as she took part in a Rural Texas Nursing seminar in Odessa on Oct. 12, presided the following day in Chicago at a "Mock Disciplinary Hearing" at the Emergency Nurses Association Convention, and was back in Midland that same night. Such is the price of fame.

Chaparral basketball begins one week from tomorrow and the early schedule is a real blockbuster. Cisco Junior College, with a new head coach, comes in for the Chap opener Monday, Nov. 5, followed Nov. 8-10 with three triple-headers for the Chaparral Classic. Featured this year will be Jacksonville, Angelina, Howard, Western Texas, Murray State of Oklahoma, and MC.

It doesn't get any easier as the Chaps then go on the road for three-day tournaments at South Plains, Nov. 15-17, and then at Dodge City, Kansas, Nov. 22-24. After that comes the Nov. 30-Dec. 1 gathering of champions as Midland and Odessa play San Jacinto College and Dixie College in doubleheaders.

You may purchase season tickets now through Chaparral Center.

OC announces new scholarship

ODESSA — A "New Opportunity" scholarship is being offered by Odessa College for those who previously have not qualified for assistance.

According to Sherry Burke, OC director of student development, the scholarship is open to those who have never attended college or have not attended within the last three years.

Complete guidelines for the scholarship are available through the OC counseling center at 1-335-6433.

HOW THEY VOTED

WASHINGTON - Votes of area members of Congress on key issues during the week ending Oct. 26, 1990.

KEY SENATE VOTE

Senate sustains civil rights veto. The Senate Oct. 24 failed to override President Bush's veto of the Civil Rights Bill. The 66-34 vote fell one short of the two-thirds needed to override a presidential veto. The legislation would have overturned six recent Supreme Court decisions which civil rights activists say make it difficult for women and minorities to bring suit against employers on the basis of discrimination.

Supporters of a veto override claimed that the bill's language is not intended to require or encourage job quotas, and that the administration is using the quota issue as an excuse to veto the bill.

"Instead of searching in good faith for a compromise, the White House has negotiated in bad faith and sought to cover up its oppostition to civil rights," said Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

"Pure and simple, take it from me, this is still a quota bill, and it is still a litigation bonanza for lawyers, two of the most important reasons that President Bush has cited for vetoing this bill," said Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah.

Voting for the veto override:
Bentsen (D).
Voting against:
Gramm (R).

KEY HOUSE VOTES

House approves house-senate defense compromise. The House Oct. 24, voted 271-156 to approve a House-Senate compromise agreement on the fiscal 1991 defense authorization bill. The agreement would authorize the Department of Defense to spend $288.3 billion during fiscal 1991.

The agreement includes $2.9 billion for research on the Strategic Defense Initiative, and $4.1 billion for the B-2 'Stealth' bomber.

Supporters said that reducing the defense budget $19 billion below the President Bush's request was necessary considering the severity of the budget deficit and logical given the reduced tensions with the Soviet Union.

Voting for the defense authorization bill:
Stenholm (D), Sarpalius (D).
Voting against:
Smith (R), Combest (R), Gonzalez (D).

House clears national service bill. Legislation to spur volunteerism cleared Congress Oct. 24, when the House approved 235-186 the National Service Act as previously agreed to by House-Senate conferees.

Among other initiatives, the measure would make people who volunteer in community service programs eligible to receive up to $5,000 in educational vouchers for each year of service.

Supporters of the legislation said it would encourage volunteerism from a wider economic spectrum.

"This legislation targets the young, the poor, and others presently not asked to serve," said Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif.

But opponents argued that spending more federal funds to launch a new program was a poor way to promote volunteerism.

Voting for the National Service Act:
Gonzalez (D).
Voting against:
Smith (R), Combest (R), Stenholm (D), Sarpalius (D).

House okays fish inspection bill. The House Oct. 24 approved, 324-106, a measure that would require mandatory federal inspection of shellfish only by the Food and Drug Administration and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The House-passed bill differs from an earlier Senate-passed measure, which shifts inspection duties to the Agriculture Department and subjects all types of seafood and fish processing plants to regular, unannounced inspections.

Voting for the fish inspection bill:
Smith (R), Gonzalez (D).
Combest (R), Stenholm (D), Sarpalius (D).

Staff Report

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer 13 short courses beginning the week of Nov. 5:

Bridge II will be taught by Joe Salman from 7-9 p.m., Nov. 5 through Dec. 3. A continuation of Bridge I, the class places emphasis on more advanced bidding techniques and defensive signals. Fee is $33.

Cindy Wilson will teach Christmas Short Courses: Candy Making on Monday, Nov. 5 from 7-9 p.m. This demonstration course teaches how to make at least 15 different types of molded candies. Recipes and samples will be provided during the class. Limited to 25 students, course fee is $5.

Christmas Short Courses: Gift Wrap will be taught in two sections — Monday, Nov. 5 or Tuesday, Nov. 6 from 7-9 p.m. Students should bring scissors to class. Limited to 20 students, course fee is $6.

Sam Guyton will teach A Workbook for Mid-Life Women on Mondays from 7-9 p.m., Nov. 5 through Nov. 26.

This class presents a workbook to help the student evaluate her present situation and make plans to expand her potential and life satisfaction in the future. Fee is $17.

Bookkeeping II will be taught by Dan Rush on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-9 p.m., Nov. 6 through Dec. 13. An introduction to computerized accounting, it provides hands-on instruction using packaged software. Topics include data entry, reversing entries, closing entries, and report generation. The prerequisite is Bookkeeping I. Text is available in the MC Bookstore. Limited to 30 students, fee is $45.

Career Opportunities Workshop will be taught on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-9 p.m., Nov. 6 through Dec. 4. Presented by a motivational expert, the workshop provides techniques for enhancing job-seeking skills. Participants receive practical instruction in preparing a more effective resume, perfecting interview techniques and completing a complicated employment application. Workbook is included in $37 fee and is available on first night of class. Limited to 30 students.

Computer and You will be taught in two sections — Tuesdays and Thursdays from either 9-11 a.m. or from 11 a.m.-1 p.m. A course designed to remove the mystique from the world of computers, it is appropriate for individuals who have purchased a small computer or those who are interested in learning about the world of computers. Upon completion of the course, students will have a knowledge of the vocabulary associated with computers and some experience with the language "BASIC."

Class limited to 14 students. Course fee is $45.

Frieda Balch will teach Intermediate Country Western Dance on Tuesdays from 7:30-9 p.m., Nov. 6 through Dec. 11. This class will review the basics as well as improve technique and style of country-western dancing.

Class is limited 20 students. Enrollment with a partner is helpful but not required. Fee is $19.

Beginning Lotus 1-2-3 will be taught on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 3-5 p.m., Nov. 6 through Dec. 11. This beginning course in spreadsheet applications will introduce use of Lotus 1-2-3 in solving consumer and business-oriented problems. "Hands-on" experience with IBM compatible personal computers is emphasized. Topics include introduction to computer hardware and software; data input; spreadsheet development; and creating and printing graphs. Prerequisite is completion of "Computer and You" or previous experience with personal computers. Text is available at MC Bookstore. Limited to 14 students, fee is $45.

Rachel Houston will teach Potpourri Workshop on Tuesday and Thursday from 7-9:30 p.m., Nov. 6 and Nov. 15. This workshop will show students the techniques of making potpourri. Each student will get "hands-on" experience in creating potpourri and other scented crafts. Limited to 12 students. Supplies may be purchased from the teacher for $5. Course fee is $11.

Selecting a College: Practical Tips for Finding the Right School will be taught by Robin Stilwell on Tuesdays from 7-9 p.m., Nov. 6 and Nov. 13. Designed for college-bound high school juniors and seniors and their parents, the sourse will address questions and concerns about the college selection and admissions processes including high school preparations, college entrance exams, admissions applications, campus visits and interviews, financing your education, and personal and academic adjustments to college. Fee is $17.

Joyce Low will teach Stained Glass II on Tuesdays from 7-9 p.m., Nov. 6 through Dec. 11. It involves instruction in the design and construction of a leaded panel complete with rebar, weatherproofing, and installation. Prerequisite is Stained Glass I or equivalent. The supply and equipment list is available the first night of class. Supplies purchased for Stained Glass I will be used. Limited to 16 students, course fee is $25.

Real Estate Inspector Workshop: Structural will be taught by George Friday on Friday, Nov. 9 from 1-5 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 10 and Sunday, Nov. 11 from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. The course will review essential inspection areas — roofs, insulation, frames, openings, fireplaces, foundations and floors. Course fee is $41.

For more information, contact the Office of Continuing Education in the Administration Building or call 685-4518.

MANDELA: Soviets interested

more, and noted that 50,000 jobs have been lost since September.

Linda said that it is the Soviet long-range stragegy "to target South Africa. If they get South Africa with the ANC, it will not be South Africa. The Soviet Union will be in control." Then, he noted, the Soviet Union could deny the United States strategic minerals such as chromium and magnesium which this country can only obtain from South Africa or the Soviet Union.

"Those who are saying that Communism is dead are making a great mistake," said Linda. "Where is the grave of Communism? Show me the grave.

"Mandela has never been a man of peace. If South Africa goes to the ANC it will be a great victory for the Soviet Union."

Gas. It's A Natural.
When it comes to doing things better for less, nothing works like gas. Naturally. Nothing heats your home, heats your water, cooks your food, or dries your clothes as efficiently. Or as cost-effectively. Or as cleanly.
What's more, no other form of energy helps to protect our environment – or our economy – quite like natural gas. Leading scientists state that the use of natural gas can guard against many of the environmental problems facing us today. And, virtually all of the natural gas we consume in the United States is produced right here in North America.
As for reliability, when's the last time your natural gas went off?
Use natural gas for your household energy. For cleanliness, cost-efficiency and reliability, it's a natural.

NTSB, DPS probe cause of bus crash

MINERAL WELLS (AP) — A federal investigator was at the scene Saturday of a school bus wreck that injured its driver and 13 children, one critically.

State troopers say they don't yet know what caused the bus to careen into a field Friday, although an investigator's report indicated one of its tires may have blown out or the driver could have swerved to avoid an oncoming car.

The driver, Elena Rouse, 34, of Gordon was in stable condition Saturday in the intensive care unit at Harris Methodist Fort Worth Hospital with head and other injuries, a spokeswoman said.

"She thought the tire blew. She didn't say which one," said Judy Kathey, Ms. Rouse's sister, who also drives a school bus in Gordon. "Some of the students heard a loud boom, then they started swerving.

"It's a miracle that it's not worse. I guess God was with them," she said.

Patsy Jackson, 8, of Gordon, was in critical condition Saturday at Cook Children's Medical Center in Fort Worth with internal and head injuries, a broken hip and fractured shoulder, hospital officials said.

An investigator from the National Transportation Safety Board was surveying the wreck scene with Texas Department of Public Safety troopers.

"The bus overturned one time and came to rest in a field," said Susan McAllester, a DPS dispatcher in Mineral Wells. "They are taking measurements out there this morning and trying to assess what happened."

Students from the Gordon Independent School District, about 20 miles southwest of the North Central Texas city, were returning home when their bus left the two-lane Farm-to-Market Road 2692.

The eastbound bus swerved into the westbound lane before overturning 2.7 miles east of Gordon, said DPS Sgt. John Stahl.

Alicia Switzer, 9, was riding the bus with her 6-year-old brother, Lawrence. She said she didn't hear any noise before the accident.

"I was eating candy, then my mouth got all full of dirt," said Alicia. "We just started tumbling."

Lawrence was taken to Palo Pinto General Hospital in Mineral Wells with a neck injury. His sister was admitted for observation for a possible neck injury. They had escaped the bus through a window in the front door.

The other 11 children, ranging in age from 5 to 13, were treated at area hospitals for minor to moderate injuries, said officials.

Is Williams' 'inexperience' showing?

HOUSTON (AP) — Democrat Ann Richards suggested Saturday that the strain of a statewide gubernatorial campaign is wearing on rival Clayton Williams.

"His inexperience is showing," she said.

Richards campaigned at a black ministers' breakfast and a Hispanic get-out-the-vote rally in Houston. Williams, a Republican, attended a "Cowboys for Clayton Ropin' Reception" in El Paso. Aides said he would be on a horse at the gathering.

First Lady Barbara Bush also was campaigning Saturday, holding a press conference in Dallas with Republican lieutenant governor candidate Rob Mosbacher.

"This campaign has been tough and difficult and stressful," Richards told reporters at the rally, adding that Williams is "using inappropriate remarks and inappropriate behavior."

With the latest polls showing Richards and Williams in a dead heat, Richards said the momentum had turned to her because of Williams' repeated public gaffes.

"They have finally had to let him out in public," she said at the Hispanic rally. "When people got a good look they were not happy with what they saw."

Richards referred to Williams' refusal to shake hands at a recent campaign appearance and said that ever since the widely publicized incident, Williams' staff has "kept him under wraps in little towns outside of small towns."

At Mosbacher's news conference, the candidate said he has been forced to respond to what he called negative advertising by his opponent, Democrat Bob Bullock.

The Bullock ads have been a "sharp negative and so we have been in a position to have to respond," Mosbacher said.

'People begin to believe these things. And even though they may not bear any relationship to the truth.'

— GOP lieutenant governor candidate Rob Mosbacher

"People begin to believe these things. And even though they may not bear any relationship to the truth," he said, he has fought back. "Bob has not been deterred by the truth in any ads he's run."

Bullock's ads concentrated on the financial crisis at the Texas Department of Human Services under Mosbacher's watch. Rafe Greenlee, spokesman for Bullock in Austin, responded the campaign's ads are not "personal negative" like Mosbacher's, but instead talk about his record.

On another note, Mosbacher said a recent poll conducted by the Eppstein Group of Fort Worth is "fundamentally flawed" because about 10 percent more Democrats were polled than Republicans.

That poll showed the race between Williams and Richards had tightened. Bryan Eppstein, the group's president, said polling also showed that Mosbacher's name identification jumped 35 percent from August to October.

"That is extraordinary," said Eppstein. "But we would have to anticipate the Republican slate poohpoohing what the poll says because that is what Clayton Williams is saying."

He said his poll is an accurate reflection of voter breakdown and beliefs in Texas.

Former San Antonio mayor Henry Cisneros, appearing with Richards, said Hispanics in particular were offended by Williams' refusal to shake Richards' hand, calling it the "nuclear bomb" of the Republican's campaign.

"In the Hispanic community, men must respect ladies," he said. "His action talks of a crudity" that upset Hispanics.

Earlier, Richards told a meeting of the Baptist Ministers' Association of Houston and Vicinity, Baptist Pastors' Fellowship and the Interdenominational Ministers' Alliance that she would support civil rights.

"Unlike our president, I'm not going to tell you I believe in civil rights, then turn my back and veto a civil rights bill," Richards said, referring to President Bush's veto last week of the legislation.

Richards appeared with other statewide Democratic candidates, including comptroller candidate John Sharp and treasurer candidate Nikki Van Hightower.

Van Hightower criticized Republicans for wooing minorities to the GOP by saying white Democrats are taking advantage of them.

"This insidious little racist tactic isn't working very well," she said.

Richards accused Gov. Bill Clements Friday of conspiring with the Williams campaign to "put a lid" on an investigation into the candidate's Midland bank. Clements called her claim "baseless and ludicrous."

"I have no interest in making trouble for Clayton Williams or his bank," Richards said Saturday. "I want the consumers of this state protected and the law enforced."

Papers' endorsements contain complaints about campaign

Associated Press

Texas newspaper editors don't like what they've seen in this year's gubernatorial campaign, and have used their endorsements to complain about the tone and content of the race between Democrat Ann Richards and Republican Clayton Williams.

"The months and millions were largely squandered," the Fort Worth Star-Telegram said in its editorial endorsing Ann Richards. "The campaign has produced much heat but little light and less truth. It has dragged us through the barnyard and shoved us into the mud pit."

"Neither Republican Clayton Williams nor Democrat Richards begins to measure up to the standards of demeanor or expertise many voters feel is needed of a governor in this post industrial era," said The Dallas Morning News in its endorsement of the Republican candidate.

While decrying the tenor of the campaign, most newspapers selected a candidate, with the Richards' backers citing her performance as state treasurer and Williams' supporters liking his conservative philosophy and business background.

But the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal said its review of the candidates found little to excite.

The newspaper, which titled its non-endorsement "Richards Vs. Williams: Neither Of The Above," said: "Because we do not see that much difference in these two candidates as far as this area's interests are concerned, The Avalanche-Journal, for the first time in recent years, will not take a position on the gubernatorial race.

"In taking the position we do, we feel we are making a statement of what we and we feel a majority of Texas citizens expect of those who would seek to lead us toward the next century."

Dissatisfaction with the campaign was a universal complaint in the endorsements.

"This has been a disappointing campaign from nearly every perspective," said the Dallas Times Herald, which backed Richards.

"Williams has sung home on the range one too many times," said the Edinburg Daily Review. "Texas and the Valley simply cannot afford a governor like Clayton Williams, whose crass bullying and cutthroat methodology would be a continued embarrassment to this fine state."

Richards is "a proven leader ... who knows how to handle herself among the boys who still think a woman has no place in politics, who is not afraid to speak up for Texas' poor, minorities and elderly, and who can still be diplomatic while expressing her assertive opinion on the crucial issues," Edinburg editors concluded.

The Houston Chronicle said Richards is "more qualified by experience and temperament. ... Richards is wise in the ways of Austin, and how they work in a weak-governor, strong-Legislature form of government.

Noting Richards' Democratic convention jibes at George Bush, The Morning News said, "At a time then the state is struggling to recover from a steep slump and to obtain funding for key projects such as the Superconducting Super collider, having support in the nation's capital is essential."

Williams "has the capacity to learn quickly," The News said. "If he can learn from the problems that his offhand and angry remarks have caused him in the campaign, he could prove an effective problem-solver."

The Abilene Reporter-News backed Williams in part because of his West Texas connections.

"West Texans have the opportunity to send one or our own to the governor's mansion. ... As a rancher and oilman himself, he should better understand the farming, ranching and oil interests which are so vital to this part of Texas."

Drilling incentives part of budget pact

FORT WORTH (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's demand for drilling incentives worth $2.5 billion over the next five years prevailed in the budget agreement being completed by Congress.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, an Illinois Democrat long opposed to special tax breaks for oil companies, gave in to Bentsen's demand and allowed the incentives to remain in the $496 billion deficit-reduction package approved by the House Saturday. The agreement was then forwarded to the Senate.

"I'm confident we'll pass it," said Bentsen, D-Texas, the Senate Finance Committee chairman.

Bentsen, who is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, jousted with Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, on a variety of tax items.

In exchange for Rostenkowski's blessing on the drilling incentives, Bentsen agreed to drop from the budget plan a clause relating to the application of the Medicare payroll tax for state and local employees hired before April 1, 1986.

House Democrats accepted the drilling incentives package, apparently under the impression that a trigger mechanism linked to oil prices would keep the incentives from taking effect as long as prices are high.

But the tax breaks for drilling will kick in next year even if the price of oil goes back up to $40 a barrel. The price triggers are determined by the average price of oil for a calendar year and low prices in the first half will hold down the average.

Under the provision, the tax breaks are fully in effect when the crude oil price is below $28 a barrel. They phase out when the oil reaches $34 a barrel.

During the first six months of the year, the average U.S. wellhead price was $15.73 a barrel, the Energy Information Administration said, virtually guaranteeing the incentives will be in force in January.

Bentsen advocates reducing U.S. dependence on foreign oil by stimulating domestic production and conservation.

"I think it means an increase in drilling and a lot of jobs and overall substantial help to the economy," Bentsen said.

The energy package is designed to stimulate more drilling by giving independent oilmen a break from the alternative minimum tax and major oil companies a credit for enhanced oil recovery.

The provision provides a 15-percent credit for enhanced oil recovery projects, and exempts a portion of exploratory and developmental intangible drilling costs from the alternative minimum tax.

NSF center at A&M will aid offshore oil technology

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The Southwest's first National Science Foundation engineering research center, opened at Texas A&M University, will explore economical ways to produce deep petroleum reserves.

The Offshore Technology Research Center, a joint project of A&M and the University of Texas, houses what researchers called the nation's only multidirectional wave tank available to faculty and students for industrial use and teaching.

Petroleum industry executives joined educators Saturday in opening the NSF center at the Texas A&M University Research Park.

"This unique facility will play a central role for Texas and the offshore industry and provide significant opportunities for research between our two great universities," said Dr. Richard Miksad of UT, an associate director of the center.

"It is our good fortune to work with industry to tackle the problem of deepwater development," he said.

The center is one of the first of its kind designed to specifically research exploration and production of oil reserves located at depths of more than 6,000 feet.

Developing domestic petroleum reserves has gained importance following Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2 and the resulting United Nations-sanctioned economic blockade of Iraq.

The deep reserve technology, when developed, would also be applicable to other industries, such as ocean mining and nuclear waste disposal, A&M officials said in a prepared statement.

The computer-programmed wave tank, in a demonstration after opening ceremonies, simulated offshore tidal and wind conditions that would be used to test stability of offshore structures such as drilling platforms.

"University-based research is becoming increasingly important as our country strives to remain competitive in world markets," said Wayne Showers of McAllen, vice chairman of the Texas A&M University System Board of Regents.

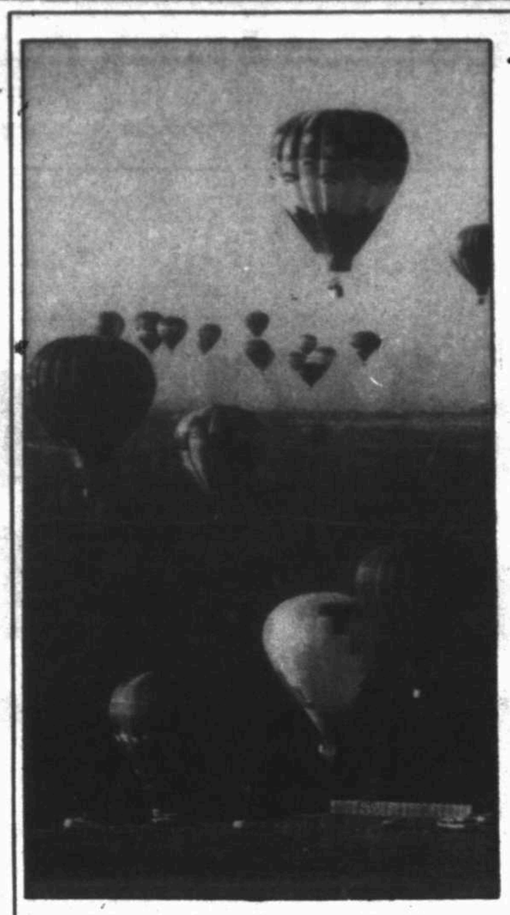

Stolen U.S. vehicles recovered in Mexico

EL PASO (AP) — Federal officials recovered another 14 stolen automobiles from Chihuahua state police Friday.

FBI spokesman Terry Kincaid said Chihuahua authorities in Juarez had the vehicles towed to the Paso del Norte Bridge Friday morning.

The 14 automobiles were in addition to six handed over Thursday and were part of a total of about 60 stolen vehicles to be returned over the next several days.

Kincaid said state police in Juarez have allowed an FBI liaison officer and a National Auto Theft Bureau representative to inspect all of the automobiles in a state impounding lot in Juarez.

'Gentle giants' decorate skies around San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Excitement builds as the sun peaks over the South Texas horizon. Huge, colorful bubbles soon pop up across a grassy field, then drift into the morning sky.

It's all part of the beauty of the North American Hot Air Balloon Championships, where professional balloonists are competing through today for $30,000 in prize money.

"It's a tremendous, wonderful, ooh-aah, tremendous event," said Tom McLaughlin, director of planning and operations for the competition, also dubbed the "Tejas Takeoff."

Sanctioned by the Balloon Federation of America, the six-day competition began Tuesday evening with a special "moon glow" launch of the so-called "gentle giants." Since then, it's stopped traffic daily and attracted dozens of balloon fanatics.

"People come out of the woodwork to see this show," said McLaughlin, who expected crowds in the thousands this weekend.

The 40 top balloonists in North America — 20 from the United States and 20 from Canada — compete for prize money after vying all year for points that determine who makes the championships.

The event is the largest hot air balloon festival of its type in Texas, and the first time the North American Hot Air Balloon Championships has been in San Antonio.

Tax protesters take aim at officeholders

Associated Press

People protested taxes and urged the defeat of incumbent officeholders at Texas rallies Saturday, dubbed "Taxpayer's Action Day."

"Throw the spenders out of office," read one sign at a Capitol rally. Another said, "Congress equals free haircuts, gas, food, vacations, money — free, free, free. Taxpayers — pay, pay, pay pay."

Gary Johnson, Libertarian candidate for U.S. Senate, said, "We are mad as hell and we are not going to take it any more. ... We are fed up. We are taxed off.

"It's time for a clean sweep," he said at the Austin rally. "It is time for a tax revolt."

The Capitol rally was sponsored by Citizens Against Government Waste, which Johnson described as a national, non-partisan organization.

An estimated 200 protesters gathered near the John F. Kennedy Memorial in downtown Dallas to attack lawmakers. Others rallied in Houston.

"It's going to take a major revolution in American politics to change the system, to change the way we are headed," said Mike Ryan, Dallas County chairman for Taxpayers Action Day.

"We are frustrated, we are tired, we are sick of the oppression that has come on the United States of America," Ryan said. "We are fed up with leaders who lie, who defraud, who deceive us with what they are doing."

Conservative Dallas talk show host David Gold, apparently referring to an ABC "Primetime Live" report this week showing lawmakers on a junket in Barbados, told the Dallas protestors: "Let the big spenders go to Barbados, let them go on their own money and let them stay there. Let them drink all the Chivas Regal they want but let them do it on their own money, not yours."

Only 22 people showed up in San Antonio for a noon rally. Rallies were held in cities nationwide, sponsored by Citizens Against Government Waste.

Angered voters have loaded state ballots with the most citizen initiatives in 76 years, many aiming to slash taxes.

LULAC to probe killing

AUSTIN (AP) — Hispanic leaders in Luling say they will investigate whether the slaying of an elderly man by law officers during a narcotics raid there was justified.

"The community is pretty upset," said Manuel Rangel, treasurer of Council 652 of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

"To me it's just plain murder. It's 1990 and they (law officers) think it's the time of Bonnie and Clyde," he said.

There are conflicting reports concerning the death of 81-year-old Andres "Andrew" Acosta, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday.

Law officers say Acosta shot at them and was killed in return gunfire. Family members say he was unarmed.

Caldwell County Chief Deputy Jerry Wiggins said the investigation is going forward. Texas Ranger G.W. Hildebrand is assisting.

Pilot killed in crash

LLANO (AP) — Medical examiners Saturday were trying to identify a single-engine plane's pilot, who was killed when his craft slammed in to the side of a Central Texas mountain and exploded.

The pilot of the 1974 Piper was pronounced dead at the scene Friday by a peace justice from Llano County. The victim's body was taken to the Bexar County medical examiner's office in San Antonio.

Dallas officer reassigned

DALLAS (AP) — Claims that a police officer here paddled two high school students for skipping school prompted his reassignment pending an investigation.

Police say Ronald C. Flanagan, a patrol officer in the department's southwest division, will work in a desk job until the investigation is concluded, a spokesman said Friday.

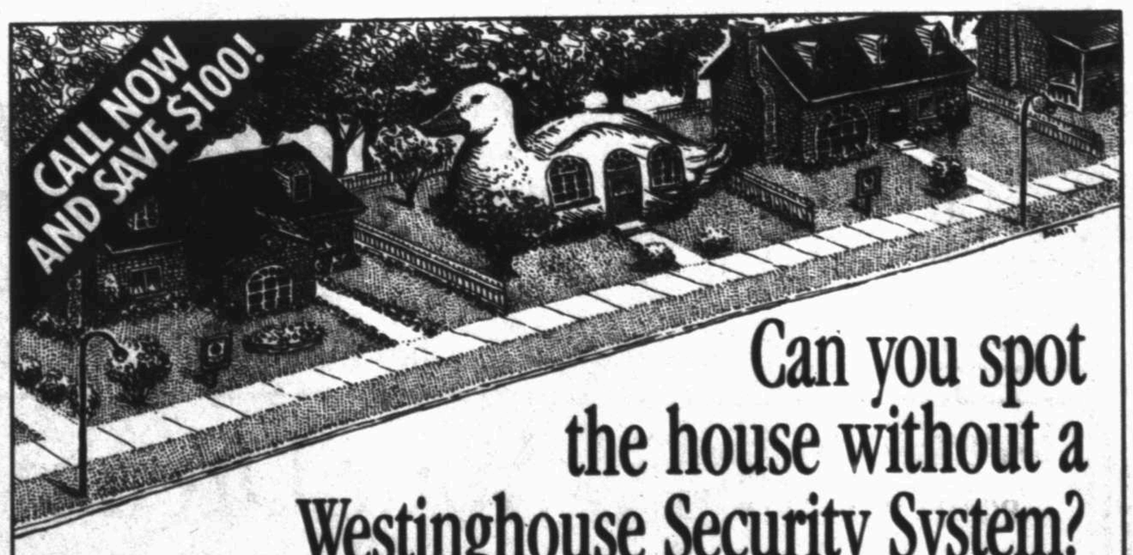

The two 16-year-old students at Kimball High School alleged that Flanagan struck them each five times Wednesday morning with a paddle.

Nike spurs Dave

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Can you say, "Pull that ad from prime time?"

If you're Nike Inc., you can. Reaction to a Nike commercial featuring San Antonio Spurs center David Robinson doing a parody of "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood" was so negative it now will be shown only after 11 p.m., Nike officials said Friday.

The Beaverton, Ore.-based sneaker company said the decision was made Wednesday after two days of complaints about the ad, which was broadcast on ABC's Monday Night Football this week.

The commercial, promoting Nike's $135 Force basketball shoes.

Robinson looks into the camera and says: "Can you say, 'Kick some butt?'"

Dallas renews feud

■ Even though Jimmy Johnson and Buddy Ryan have yet to exchange heated words this season, the memory of last year's games still burns fresh in the minds of the Cowboys.

Associated Press

IRVING — In their first meeting, they shook hands and talked coach talk an hour before game time.

They laughed and things were so affable Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson slapped Philadelphia coach Buddy Ryan on the back when they parted.

Four hours later they were enemies.

Johnson believed Ryan had a bounty out for placekicker Luis Zendejas who was injured on a kickoff by a vicious block from Jessie Small.

Johnson said he wanted to confront Ryan about it but "Buddy got his fat rear end off the field as fast as he could."

Several weeks later the Eagles gave Johnson a royal Philadelphia salute with a second whipping on the field and a snowball bombardment off of it in what was dubbed as "The Bounty Bowl."

■ Houston-New York Jets, NFL Sunday/5C

The two teams meet again on Sunday in Texas Stadium in a game that should have playoff intensity.

"Considering the team we are playing we shouldn't have any trouble getting ready for it," Johnson said.

However, Johnson wouldn't criticize Ryan during the week, saying "I'm not interested in talking about Buddy. He doesn't interest me."

Ryan refused to guarantee a victory because the Cowboys "defense has improved too much."

However, he did say on his weekly radio show, WOGL in Philadelphia: "Dallas is not going to beat the Philadelphia Eagles. They never have since I've been here and they're not going to start now."

Ryan wouldn't say if he and Johnson could patch up their differences.

"I'll be at the 50 watching Dallas warm up just like I always do," Ryan said.

The Cowboys come into the game with a better record than the Eagles, 3-4 to 2-4. If the NFL picked playoff teams before Sunday's game, the Cowboys would be in that number.

"Dallas has improved a great deal on defense," Ryan said. "And I like quarterback Troy Aikman very much."

Aikman threw a 28-yard touchdown pass to Michael Irvin with 23 seconds left to bring the Cowboys a 17-14 victory over Tampa Bay on Sunday.

The Cowboys are last in the NFL in total offense.

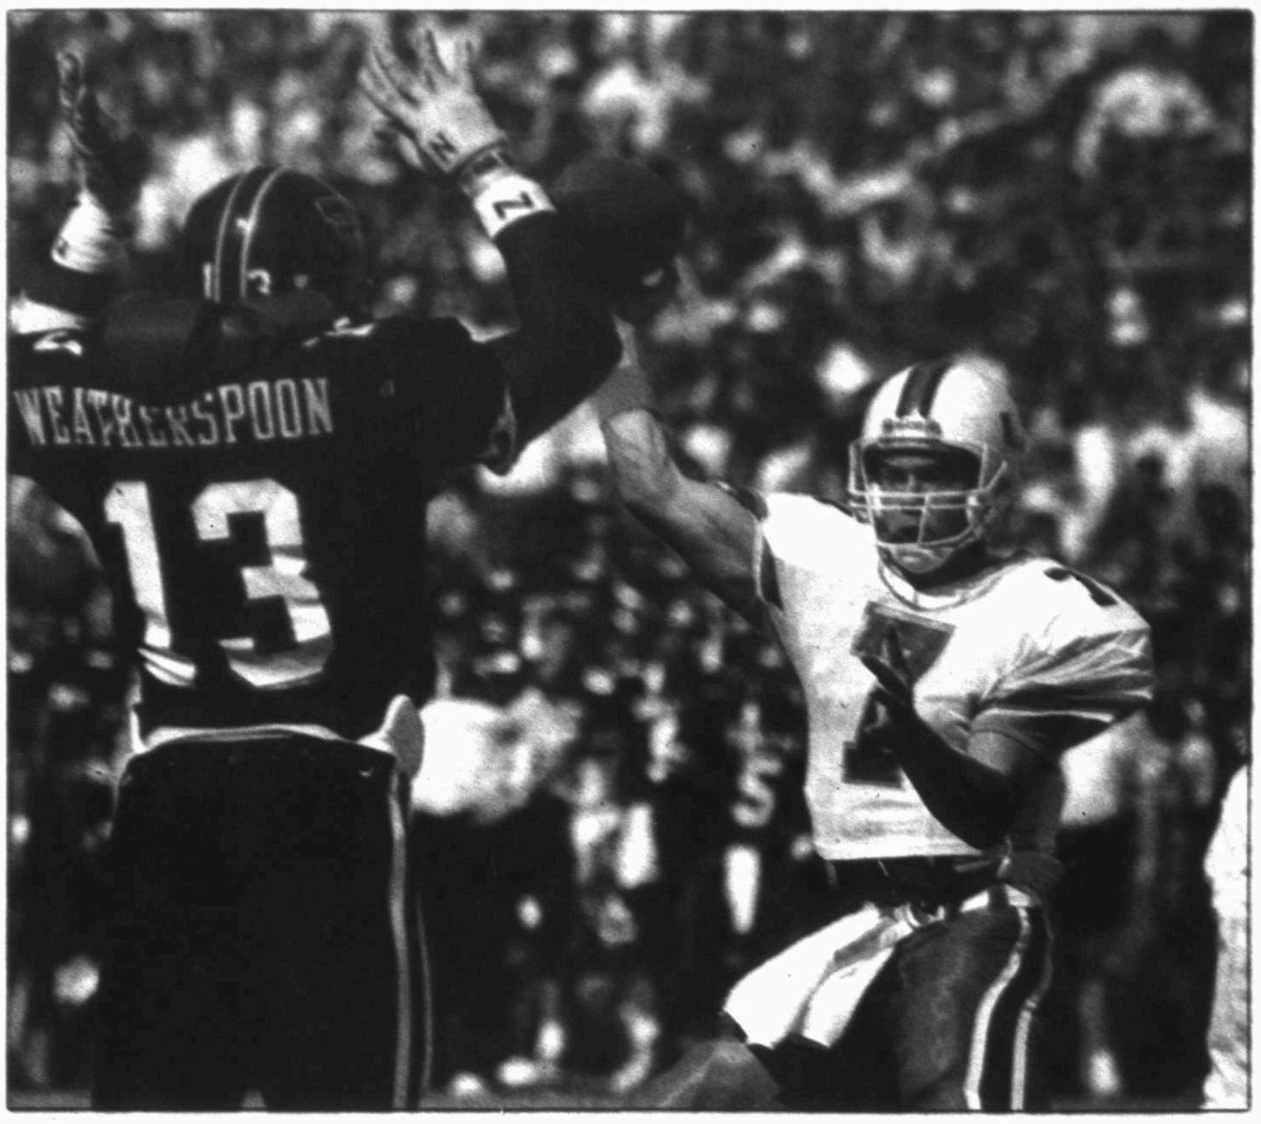

After the victory over the Buccaneers, there was just one word scribbled on a dressing room blackboard: "Eagles."

"We'll be motivated to play the Cowboys," Ryan said. "I don't have to get the players ready, this town (Philadelphia) gets 'em ready. The rivalry was here a long time before I got here."

Ryan isn't worried about what a loss would do to his job security.

"I don't think it would hurt," he said. "I've done an excellent job since I got here. I built this team from scratch. We've been snake bit this year."

Dallas leads the series 36-23 but has lost the last five games. Ryan is 6-2 against the Cowboys.

Texas Tech linebacker Stephon Weatherspoon swats down a pass by Craig Erickson in Miami's 45-10 blasting of the Red Raiders Friday in Lubbock.

'Canes lean on Raiders

■ Miami shows why it's the 8th-ranked team in the nation by destroying Texas Tech in Lubbock.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Miami played what Texas Tech head coach Spike Dykes called a "mistake-free ball game", and for the second-straight Saturday the Red Raiders suffered what Dykes termed "a good, old-fashioned, country tail-kickin'," with a 45-10 defeat to the Hurricanes.

It would be hard, perhaps even impossible, to pinpoint one single outstanding highlight for Miami. The 'Canes tallied 563 total yards offense while limiting the Red Raiders to a mere 93.

■ SWC Roundup 6C

— Miami QB Craig Erickson completed 22-of-32 passes for 302 yards and four touchdowns — before being lifted with 4:00 left in the third quarter.

— Flanker Lamar Thomas hauled in three TD passes. As remarkable as it may seem, it was the first time ever a Hurricane has had three scoring receptions in one game.

— Tight end Rob Chudzinski grabbed six passes for 112 yards, a career best for him.

— And then there was the Miami defense. Red Raider quarterbacks Jamie Gill and Robert Hall were sacked 10 times officially by Miami's unsympathetic defense. Right defensive end Rusty Medearis — making his first start in place of the injured Eric Miller — had five of the sacks. Miami was credited with three additional unofficial sacks and constantly had Tech signal callers under pressure.

For Tech, which falls to 2-6 on the season, it was easy to pinpoint the highlight of the day. When the scoreboard read "0:00" in the fourth quarter, a tangible sense of relief spread across Jones Stadium.

"We knew they had a good pass rush," Gill said. "They really are that good. And we just weren't getting anything done."

Miami led 28-0 at the end of the first half. Erickson hit Chudzinski for the first score of the day with 9:32 remaining in the first quarter.

Thomas caught an 11-yarder from Erickson with no time remaining in the first quarter, and a 38-yarder with 5:02 left in the half.

Steve McGuire's one-yard run with less than a minute remaining put the 'Canes up 28-0.

Lady Rebs die hard in finale

Midland Lee's volleyball season finale mirrored the Rebels' 1990 season — competitive, but not enough to win consistently.

The Rebels ended their season with a 15-13, 10-15, 15-12 loss to San Angelo in the District 4-5A season finale for both teams Saturday at the Lee gym.

San Angelo kept its playoff hopes alive with the win over Lee. But the Bobcats' hopes were dashed when, as expected, Abilene High defeated last-place Odessa High to move its mark to 9-3 and win the second playoff berth by a game over third-place San Angelo and Midland High.

In the other 4-5A match Saturday, district champion Odessa Permian crushed Abilene Cooper, 15-5, 15-7.

Permian will face 3-5A runnerup Amarillo Tascosa in bi-district action at 8 p.m. Thursday in Levelland. Abilene High must face perennially powerful Amarillo High at 6 p.m. Thursday in Brownfield.

Lee finished in sole possession of fifth place with a 5-7 district mark. To Coach Elise Wheat, that was dramatic improvement over a pathetic 1989 season in which the Rebels finished last. And with seven of the 11 varsity players expected back in 1991, Wheat expects even more improvement.

"I think we're going to get even better, when the younger get an idea of what we're doing," she said. Looking years ahead, Wheat applauded the recent move of the junior high season from spring to fall to coincide with the varsity season.

Saturday, the future was now for Rebel seniors Julie Bryan, Gina Natividad, Tonja Mansfield and Andrea Armstrong — all playing their final high school match.

Lee had several chances to pull ahead in the third and deciding set after overcoming Bobcat leads of 8-3 and 12-7, but numerous side-outs forced the Rebs beyond the substitution limit. Consequently, Wheat was forced to play several players out of position, and the second-year coach felt like the subsequent unfamiliarity hurt.

"One of our kids (sophomore Tekeira Strambler) had never played back row before," she said. "The kids who were out there just had to stay in."

After several side-outs at 12-12, San Angelo took the lead for good on a net violation and illegal hit by Strambler that gave the 'Cats a 14-12. Jeni Pederson finished the Rebs off with a spike that nobody on the Lee side was able to handle.

JIMMY PATTERSON

Maybe Wapner will rule in their favor

Twenty reasons Odessa Permian High School coaches are so vigorously pursuing their lawsuit against the University Interscholastic League, the Ector County Independent School District, ECISD Superintendent Gene Buinger, and whomever else fails to understand, gets in the way or doesn't happen to agree with the Permian line of thinking:

Patterson

Reason No. 1. Really, really wanted Buzz Bissinger to return to Odessa and write a sequel.

2. Wanted team to have a good understanding of the legal system in preparation for law school.

3. After all, it's been so long since they last had a shot at winning the state title.

4. "Plaintiff" looks good on the resume.

5. Wouldn't it be great if Susan Dey defended us?

6. Couldn't resist those "Torres and Torres" ads on late night TV anymore.

7. Wanted a chance to party in Austin.

8. Since Dallas Carter screwed up the playoffs for everybody else two years ago, it was high time to return the favor.

9. Like seeing the school's name in headlines seven days a week instead of just six.

10. They just don't take away a possible district championship like that. It's just not done.

11. Thought they'd have a good chance of winning if only Judge Wapner would hear their case.

12. What else is there to do in Odessa during the week?

13. Wanted Mike Wallace to see the inside of Ratliff Stadium.

14. Just wanted to tie up the court system for a few years.

15. Tired of those little rascals from OHS getting all the publicity.

16. Band could learn "The Theme From Perry Mason" for halftime shows.

17. Tam Hollingshead always dreamed of having Harrison Ford play him in the movie version.

18. Mike Ditka was on "L.A. Law." Why can't we be?

19. Dress rehearsal for the NCAA.

20. Thought judge would find in their favor since he wears an all-black robe.

UNLV tries 2nd appeal

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Nevada-Las Vegas officials are to meet with NCAA representatives in Chicago Sunday, hopeful a second appeal could allow the Runnin' Rebels to defend their national basketball championship next year.

"These kids have worked hard to represent our university and I think they deserve the chance to defend their title," UNLV president Robert Maxson said Friday. "My major concern has always been that our youngsters be treated fairly and that they not be penalized for something in which they were not involved."

Maxson flew to Chicago Saturday with coach Jerry Tarkanian, interim athletic director Dennis Finfrock, university counsel Brad Booke, and Danny Tarkanian, the coach's son who is an attorney.

They will meet with the NCAA's five-member Infractions Committee, hoping to reverse a penalty the committee handed down July 20 which would prevent the Rebels from competing in postseason play next year.

The penalty was the final step in resolving a bitter battle between Tarkanian and the NCAA dating back to the early 1970s.

Tarkanian has volunteered to sit out the playoffs if the committee allows his team to compete. The university is expected to offer the NCAA several penalty options in an effort to reverse the postseason ban.

Maxson declined to discuss the options, saying they should be discussed first with the committee.

A decision by the committee is not expected Sunday.

The Rebels have four returning starters from last season's 35-5 team that beat Duke by a record 103-73 in the championship game. They are expected to be the preseason choice to repeat.

Tragedy strikes Breeders' Cup

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Tragedy eclipsed brilliance Saturday on racing's greatest day in the Breeders' Cup at Belmont Park.

Go for Wand, the superb 3-year-old filly, died. So did Mr. Nickerson.

Meadow Star, the 2-year-old filly, glittered like her name. Lester Piggott, the great English jockey, rode like the master he is.

The day ended with dusk falling and Kentucky Derby winner Unbridled bursting between horses about 50 yards from the wire to win the $3 million Classic, the world's richest horse race. The 3-year-old colt achieved his victory without the diuretic Lasix, which prevents bleeding from the lungs and on which he has run most of his races.

That victory immediately followed In The Wings' win in the $2 million Turf.

Go for Wand was fighting to keep Bayakoa from taking the lead when she snapped her right front ankle and crashed to the track just a stride inside the sixteenth pole in the Breeders' Cup Distaff. Her jockey, Randy Romero, also crashed to the dirt. He was taken from the track in an ambulance, but returned to ride later in the $3 million Classic.

Bayakoa went on to win her second straight Distaff, then was greeted in the winner's circle by her tearful trainer, Ron McAnally.

"I can't cope with this," McAnally, a Hall of Fame trainer, said. " . . . It's like my wife said, 'They give their lives for our enjoyment.' "

Go for Wand, who had won five straight races and seven of eight previous starts this year, struggled up and staggered down the stretch, collapsing just past the finish line where, just moments before, she had been striding so hard to reach.

There, behind screens to shield the crowd from seeing her distress, she was humanely destroyed. Hundreds of people left Belmont Park after Go for Wand was destroyed.

"It's the track," Rose Badgett, the wife and assistant to trainer Billy Badgett, said of the cause of the tragedy.

Trainer D. Wayne Lukas said:

"This has to come under serious review. There is something wrong here. I am not a track superintendant, but too many horses are breaking down and not just Breeders' Cup horses."

"You can't blame the track," McAnally said. "The inside is the worst part of (any) track. Not because it is unsafe because it is a tough place . . . there are several factors involved in a horse breaking down."

After Meadow Star's impressive victory in the Juvenile Fillies, owner Carl Icahn said, "You've got to love this horse. You don't get many like her, maybe once in a lifetime, and this may be mine."

Go for Wand was Mrs. Jane Dupont Lunger's.

Mr. Nickerson dropped dead on the turn during the running of the six-furlong Sprint. Shaker Knit fell over Mr. Nickerson, but escaped serious injury.

Jose Santos, who rode Mr. Nickerson, returned to win the Juvenile Fillies on Meadow Star and the Juvenile on Fly So Free. Chris Antley, who was aboard Shaker Knit, suffered a broken right collarbone.

Unbridled, ridden by Pat Day — who finished second to the colt on Summer Squall in the Derby, then beat him with Summer Squall in the Preakness — was far back in the pack as Day patiently waited to let him make his one run.

Unbridled zoomed down the stretch to shoot between Ibn Bey and Thirty Six Red, who were battling for the lead, to win by one length over British-bred Ibn Bey, who was one length in front of Thirty Six Red.

The victory, in 2:02 1-5, was worth $15.20 to win and a purse of $1.35 million for Unbridled's 93-year-old owner, Frances Genter.

In The Wings closed from third place with a quarter-mile remaining in the 1½-mile Turf for a half-length victory over With Approval, who was 1¾ lengths in front of El Senor. Saumarez, owned by hockey star Wayne Gretzky and winner of the Arc de Triomphe, was fifth.

Safely Kept, a 4-year-old filly who was second in the Sprint last year, won the race this time when Dayjur, who had an eyelash lead, jumped a shadow about 25 yards from the wire. Dayjur, who had done all his previous racing in Europe, finished second, a head behind the filly.

Piggott, returning to racing recently after serving a year and a day in prison for income tax evasion — he was released in October 1988 — scored his victory with a brilliant ride on Royal Academy in the Mile on the turf. Royal Academy, who started from the No. 1 hole, broke third, but Piggott dropped him to last, then circled the field and won a cavalry-charge finish by a neck over Itsaligreektome. It was a masterful exhibition by the 54-year-old Piggott, who has won most of the world's great races and has been British champion many times.

Rounding out the seventh Breeders' Cup day program, under a glaring sun, were the $2 million Turf and the $3 million Classic.

The unbeaten Meadow Star broke from the No. 10 post in the 12-horse Juvenile Fillies and Santos kept her on the outside because "I was taking no chances."

Mavericks make final preseason cuts

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks made their final cuts Saturday, dropping Kelvin Upshaw and Bob McCann to reduce the roster to 12 players.

Upshaw, a 6'2" guard, is a two-year NBA veteran who played briefly with the Mavericks last year. In five preseason games this year, Upshaw averaged 8.2 points with a 40 percent shooting average.

McCann, a 6'8" forward, also played last season with the Mavericks after signing a 10-day contract in February. In six preseason games, McCann averaged 1.2 points and was 2-of-23.

The 12-man roster has four new additions — veterans Pat Lever, Rodney McCray, Alex English and John Shasky.

Mudd, Mayfair try to avoid Shark attack

AP Laserphoto

Jody Mudd blasts out of a sand trap Saturday in the Nabisco Championships. Mudd is in a three-way tie for the lead.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jodie Mudd and Billy Mayfair have the lead, but Greg Norman could have the advantage going into the final round of golf's richest tournament.

Mudd and Mayfair shared the top spot at 205 after 54 holes of the Nabisco Championships, which offers $3.5 million in individual prize money as the last official event of the season on the PGA Tour.

Nick Price was next at 207, while Norman was three off the pace at 208.

But Mayfair, Mudd and Price — decided longshots in a field composed only of the top 30 money-winners of the year — have won a combined total of one tournament this year. And they have a combined career victory total of four.

Norman has won four in this country alone in the last 14 months and has collected a career total of 60 around the world.

"With this much money at stake, it's going to come down to who can rise to the occasion for the big bucks," Mudd said Saturday after he'd gained a tie for the lead with a 3-under-par 68 on the Cypress Creek course at Champions.

Norman, of course, has demonstrated that ability on four continents over two decades.

Mayfair, a tour sophomore, has yet to win as a pro. Price's only American triumph came in the 1983 World Series of Golf.

Mudd said he doubted his own ability "to put away a big event" until he won the Players Championship this spring.

Now, he said, "I think I can win a big event. I just have to go do it. I have a chance."

Mayfair, who had a third-round 70, said he was "thrilled to death to be playing. I think I can win. I don't see why I can't win."

Price, who had to come back from a double bogey to salvage a par 71, was perhaps the most confident of them all.

"I'm playing well. I really think I can win," he said.

Norman said nothing at all. He just headed for the practice tee after completing a 71 that left him in prime position to attain two major goals: a second consecutive Vardon Trophy and the season's money-winning title.

North Texas falls to Bearkats

Associated Press

Curtis Thomas rushed for 150 yards on 27 carries and scored three touchdowns Saturday to lift Sam Houston State past North Texas 26-14 in a Southland Conference game.

Sam Houston State improved to 3-5 overall and 2-1 in the conference. North Texas fell to 4-4 and 1-3.

Thomas scored on touchdown runs of 1, 1 and 4 yards.

Quarterback Ashley Van Meter rushed for 163 yards on 11 carries for Sam Houston State.

Erric Pegram scored on a 76-yard run on the first play from scrimmage to give North Texas' Eagles a 7-0 lead.

The Bearkats came back on field goals of 48 and 42 yards by Mark Klein and a 1-yard run by Thomas to take a 13-7 halftime lead.

SW Texas St. 19, McNeese St. 17

Robbie Roberson kicked a 30-yard, second-chance field goal with no time remaining to lift Southwest Texas State past McNeese State 19-17 in a Southland Conference game.

Southwest Texas State improved to 6-3 overall and 3-1 in league play. McNeese State fell to 4-4 and 3-1.

McNeese State, leading 17-16, fumbled away the ball on the Southwest Texas State 10 with 1:10 remaining, and the Bobcats drove to the 25 for the snap on Roberson's field goal try with 7 seconds to play.

Roberson's 42-yard try sailed wide to the left, but McNeese State was flagged for a roughing penalty. The penalty half the distance to the goal put the Bobcats on the McNeese State 13, and Roberson was successful on his next try.

Abilene harriers win district

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — Just about everyone in Abilene came away happy after the District 4-5A Cross Country meet here Saturday with Cooper winning the boys title and Abilene High taking the girls crown.

Cooper scored 45 points to edge defending champion San Angelo by three points for the boys crown. The AHS girls poste 53 points and was a narrow one point victor over Odessa Permian.

Only five district teams competed in the boys division as Cooper and San Angelo were followed by Abilene High, Odessa High and Odessa Permian. In the girls division, Abilene High and Permian were followed by San Angelo and Cooper as only four teams competed.

San Angelo, however, swept the top two individual boys spots with Joe Machado winning in 15:38 and was followed by teammate Brian Aguilar at 15:57.3.

The girls second place finisher Permian also won the top two positions with Tania Castillejos winning in 12:13.1 and Angela Skaggs taking second in 12:24.6.

No Midland High or Midland Lee individuals won Region I advancement in either the boys or girls divisions.

SPIKERS: Lee defenders strong

From 1C

Strambler's front row play had been instrumental in forcing the third set, however. The soph helped stake Lee to a 10-3 lead in the second set with several soft dinks. And, junior Alicia Furrow provided some devastating blocks to keep the 'Cats de-clawed, at least for a while.

San Angelo came back to tie the set at 10-all, but Furrow's defense at the net and a couple of Strambler kills helped prolong the match.

Lee jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first set, but the Bobcats fought back to make a go at it. The lead changed hands three times and there were five ties.

The Lee junior varsity finished its season Saturday with a three-set loss to San Angelo.

'Skins try to end Giant skid

Associated Press

Someone asked Joe Gibbs this week about the possibility that the New York Giants may use a 4-3 defense against him Sunday rather than their standard 3-4.

"We've seen it from them before," he replied. "We've seen everything from them before."

From Washington's standpoint, that's unfortunate.

Including a 24-20 New York win in Washington two weeks ago, the Giants have won five straight over the Redskins and 10 of the last 12 non-strike games. Nor have the Redskins won in Giants Stadium since 1983, when New York was 3-12-1 — except for a strike replacement fiasco in 1987.

This week means survival for Washington, which is 4-2 and trails the 6-0 Giants by two games in the NFC East. A loss and they're effectively four games behind — three games plus the tiebreaker and are most likely playing the rest of the season for a wild-card spot.

"We know exactly what we face," Gibbs says. "It's a chance to be 5-2 and a game behind the Giants or we'll be three back. That's what it is. Nothing less and nothing more."

Cincinnati (5-2) at Atlanta (2-4)

Sam Wyche can't avoid it.

Wherever he goes there's a storm, even to Atlanta, which at last glance hardly had a bitter rivalry with Cincinnati.

Enter Jerry Glanville, still seething over a 61-7 beating a year ago administered by Wyche to the Oilers, then Glanville's team. Plus various other insults and slanders during their AFC Central rivalry.

Wyche, meanwhile, is still taking donations to pay the $27,000 fine levied by commissioner Paul Tagliabue for barring a woman reporter from his locker room.

Cleveland (2-5) at San Francisco (6-0)

If only . . .

If only the Browns could have gotten by Denver a time or two, they might have met the 49ers under happier circumstances, like in New Orleans, Miami, Pasadena, etc.

Now it seems only a matter of time before the Browns' slide costs coach Bud Carson his job. "There has already been too much speculation," says owner Art Modell, which is hardly a vote of confidence.

"It takes away from my preparation, I know that," Carson says. "But that's something you're going to get if you lose. That's an extra burden you have to carry and you have to overcome. Nothing good happens with losing."

Joe Montana has a sore finger but he'll play for the 49ers, although Roger Craig may miss his third straight game and John Taylor could be out.

Los Angeles Rams (2-4) at Pittsburgh (3-4) (Monday night)

John Robinson, who saw no hope for the Rams a week ago, has been energized by the 44-24 win over Atlanta that leaves Los Angeles only a half-game out of a playoff spot.

"We've just crawled out of our hole and are wiping the dirt off our face," he says.

The Steelers won't be easy. They gave San Francisco a game for two-and-a-half quarters last week until Barry Foster inexplicably let a kickoff drop on his own 5-yard line and give the 49ers a chance to break open the game. Still, after nine touchdowns in two games, the offense needs a jump start again.

Miami (5-1) at Indianapolis (2-4)

Someone should tell the Indy boobirds that 55 yards in 9 carries for Eric Dickerson after missing six games and all of training camp isn't bad. On the other hand, he's going up against the NFL's second best rushing defense this week — one that's had a 10-day rest since beating New England 17-10 last Thursday night.

Jeff George's strained abdomen is now officially healed but Jack Trudeau, who has the Colts' only two wins, remains the quarterback.

"It feels healed," George says. "But I'll let the coaches decide."

Chicago (5-1) at Phoenix (2-4)

This may not be easy for the Bears after a week off — depending on the Cards' mindset after losing a game to the Giants in the Meadowlands that they could have won.

"Momentum could be a problem," Mike Ditka says of the rest his Bears got.

It could also be a problem for the Cards, who allowed the Giants 10 points in the final 3:21 and lost 20-19 in what coach Joe Bugel called "the worst loss I've ever been associated with."

Minnesota (1-5) vs. Green Bay (2-4) at Milwaukee

"I still think we'll make the playoffs," says tight end Steve Jordan of the Vikings, perhaps the NFL's biggest bust.

You can make that case, although everything and everybody seems to be coming apart, mostly Herschel Walker, who when last seen was carrying three times for three yards and fumbling twice against the Eagles. The latest problem: allegations by ABC News that kicker Donald Igwebuike has been involved in heroin smuggling.

Buffalo (5-1) at New England (1-6).

Speaking of things not going well . . .

New England has been sliding on and off the field since the first week, although the Pats could get off to a good start this week — the Bills are this year's Kardiac Kids, pulling out games in the last quarter. Last week it was 30-27 over the Jets on Jim Kelly's TD pass to Jamie Mueller with 19 seconds left.

Detroit (2-4) at New Orleans (2-4)

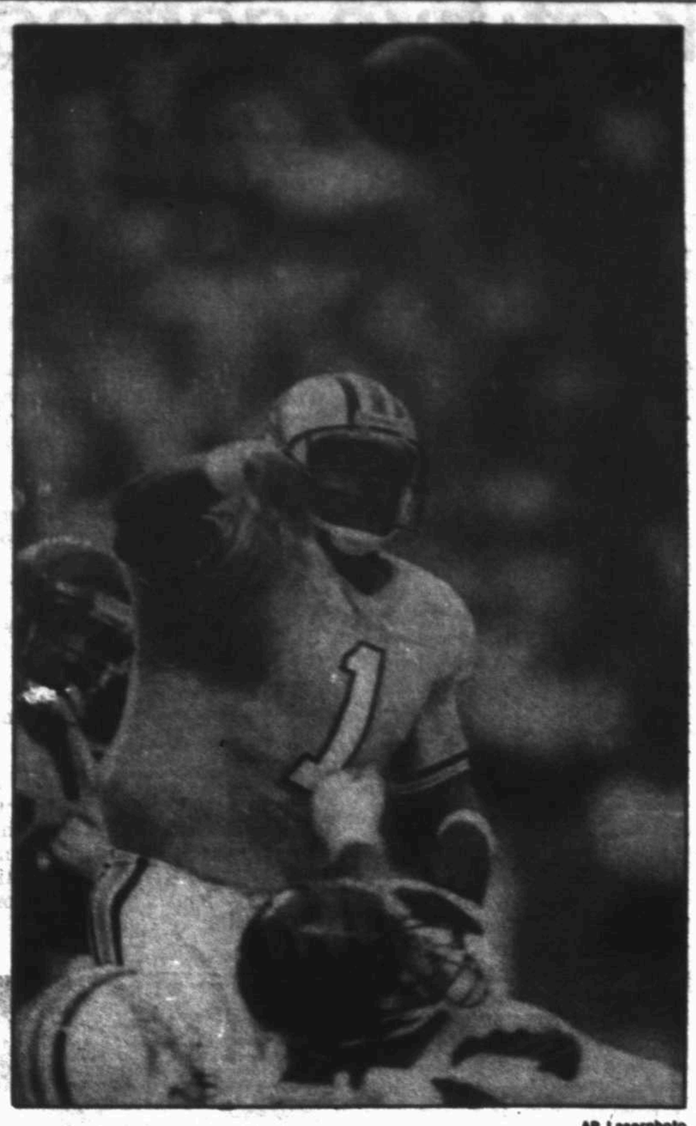

Despite the records, these two remain in the expanded playoff picture — each is only a half-game out of the last wild-card spot and has the potential to reach it.

Detroit, for example, gets back two of its defensive stalwarts, linebacker Chris Spielman and safety Bennie Blades. Both will probably play less than usual, but just their presence is a plus.

For New Orleans, this is Week III of the Steve Walsh regime. So far it's 1-1, but the Dome team advantage should help, even against another domer.

Tampa Bay (4-3) at San Diego (2-5)

Despite their winning record, the Bucs are reeling because they've lost twice to Dallas in the last three weeks, something that Ray Perkins believes just shouldn't happen. This week, Vinny Testaverde rests his sore toe and Chris Chandler takes over.

Houston quarterback Warren Moon led the Oilers to a 48-17 win over Cincinnati two weeks ago when the Bengals were without former offensive coordinator Bruce Coslet, new Jets head coach.

Coslet changes tune about Oiler attitude

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A year ago, as offensive coordinator of the Cincinnati Bengals, Bruce Coslet called the Houston Oilers defense "a bunch of loudmouth jerks."

Now that he is head coach of the New York Jets and Jack Pardee has replaced Jerry Glanville as Oilers head coach, the Oilers defense has become a hard-hitting, aggressive bunch of professionals.

What a difference a year and a coaching change make.

"I was not misquoted, but I was only partly quoted," Coslet said. "I also said there are some great (Oilers) players like (Ray) Childress, Al Smith and (John) Grimsley, the guys who are making the plays.

"They don't say anything. They just play good hard football. It was their fringe players that had a tendency to shoot off their mouths. That was the case back then."

Coslet left the Bengals in February to replace Joe Walton and will bring a 2-5 record and three-game losing streak into the Astrodome Sunday.

And he likes the business-like attitude Pardee has installed along with the run-and-shoot offense and 4-3 defense.

"Jack Pardee has come in there and got a solid program and that extracurricular stuff I don't see on film and I don't hear it being complained about by other coaches and teams after they play the Oilers."

Coslet joined his former boss Sam Wyche at Cincinnati in blasting the Glanville-coached Oilers last season and participated in a 61-7 victory over the Oilers last December. That's behind Coslet now.

"We're coming down there expecting to find a good, tough football team to play and we'll have to play at the top of our game just to have a chance," Coslet said.

Pardee traced part of the change in the Oilers' temperament this year to the realization of what the new regime expects. Pardee wouldn't say they had bad habits, they were just different from what he demanded.

"I wouldn't call it bad but they weren't in the type of routines that I wanted our team to have," Pardee said. "A lot of times you don't feel like working, but you've got to go to work anyway.

"Once you have the self-discipline to do a lot of things you don't want to do and concentrate, you can predict your performance.

"What pleases me the most about this team is when we identify something we want to get done, they really go at it. They aren't fighting the cause. They just do it."

After starting the season 0-2, the Oilers (4-3) have jelled both offensively and defensively. They rank No. 3 in the NFL in total offense and No. 6 in total defense. They've won four of their last five games.

Simms returns for Giants

N.Y. Times News Service

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Bill Parcells and Joe Gibbs do not talk to each other before or after their games. They seldom talk to each other except to compare weight losses from their mutual diet.

It is not that Parcells, who coaches the Giants, dislikes Gibbs, who coaches the Washington Redskins. It is just that the rivalry between these division rivals has been so intense.

Two weeks ago in Washington, the Giants beat the Redskins, 24-20. That day, while the Redskins utilized the Giants' typical ball control, the Giants utilized the Redskins' typical long passing game.

Phil Simms scored one touchdown on an 80-yard pass to Stephen Baker and set up the other touchdowns with a 63-yard pass to Maurice Carthon and a 61-yarder to Mark Bavaro.

On Sunday, the Giants (6-0) and the Redskins (4-2) will meet again at 4 p.m. in Giants Stadium. Although the Giants have won five straight games from the Redskins over three seasons, they are only 3 1/2-point favorites at home.

The Giants will have Simms at quarterback. The ankle sprain that kept him out of the last three quarters last week was mild, and he has taken all the offensive snaps in practice last week.

Two weeks ago, the Redskins ran for 162 yards against the Giants. The Giants suffered without the injured Carl Banks, an excellent outside linebacker against the run.

With Banks still sidelined, the Giants, usually a 3-4 defensive team, may experiment with a 4-3 utilizing their best run-stoppers. If the Redskins continue to keep in extra blockers, a 4-3 may be the best counter. It might also free Lawrence Taylor, the Giants' best pass rusher, from constant double and triple teaming.

"It's extra hard to prepare for the Giants," Gibbs said, "because you don't know where they're going to line him up. He's even lined up in the middle against us."

Stung by Sweep

Two weeks ago, the Redskins stung the Giants with their old counter-trey sweep, with a pulling tackle and guard leading the blocking.

"I think 90 percent of their runs were to the outside," said Erik Howard, the Giants' nose tackle.

"They used some different blocking schemes," said Everson Walls, the Giants' cornerback. "They used different ways of getting guys outside, different ways to shut our guys off from pursuit."

A pursuing linebacker, and Taylor is among the best at that, can ruin a sweep. The Redskins use a running back or Art Monk, the big wide receiver, to cut off pursuers. And while the Redskins can make steady gains running, they still can put three dangerous receivers on the field with Monk, Gary Clark and Ricky Sanders. And Stan Humphries, the Redskins' young quarterback, showed the Giants two weeks ago that he could scramble.

Baylor ends Frogs' winning streak at five games

Associated Press

Quarterback J.J. Joe's 78-yard scoring pass and two timely Baylor interceptions propelled the Bears to a 27-21 victory over Texas Christian Saturday, knocking the 24th-ranked Horned Frogs from the Southwest Conference lead and ending their unlikely winning streak at five.

The loss dropped the Frogs to 3-1 in SWC play and 5-2 on the season while the Bears kept alive their fragile championship hopes at 3-1-1. They are 4-3-1 for the year.

The Frogs, trailing by 11 points in the final period, pulled within three with 8:13 left but their comeback rally was cut short by a pair of interceptions, the first by Charles Bell with 3:43 remaining.

Bell picked off a Leon Clay pass at the Baylor 44 and returned it to the 22, setting up a 36-yard field goal by Jeff Ireland.

With just over two minutes left, Clay passed TCU out to midfield, but a fourth-down desperation pass was picked off by Michael McFarland at the Baylor 29.

Joe rifled a first-quarter pass to the TCU 30, where Melvin Bonner wrestled the ball from Frog defender Greg Evans and raced unhindered to the goal on a 78-yard play from which the favored Frogs never recovered.

Southern Methodist 3

Alex Waits buried Southern Methodist with his long punts until the Texas offense started to move as the 13th-ranked Longhorns routed the Mustangs 52-3.

Texas, a Cotton Bowl contender, remained undefeated in the Southwest Conference at 3-0 and improved to 5-1 overall. But the Longhorns showed little of the emotion they had in back-to-back victories over Oklahoma and Arkansas. SMU dropped to 1-6 overall, 0-4 conference.

Texas A&M 41, Rice 15

Kevin Smith returned interceptions 35 and 78 yards for touchdowns and Darren Lewis became the Southwest Conference's career leading rusher as Texas A&M rolled to a 41-15 victory over the Rice Owls.

The Aggies increased their overall record to 5-2-1 and stayed alive in the SWC race at 2-1-1. Rice dropped to 3-5 and 1-4.

Lewis rushed 25 times for 176 yards to take the SWC career rushing lead at 4,453 yards.

Eric Dickerson of Southern Methodist owned the SWC career rushing mark of 4,450 yards from 1979-82. Earl Campbell of Texas is third at 4,277.

Trevor Cobb established a Rice rushing record for one season by getting 132 yards on 29 carries to give him 970 for the year. The old Rice season rushing record was 945 yards in 1971 by Staley Vincent.

The Aggies built a 31-12 halftime lead as Lewis piled up 121 yards rushing before scouts from both the Holiday and Fiesta bowls.

The Owls, who haven't won in Kyle Field since 1980, led 12-7 in the first period after scoring runs of 1 and 9 yards.

TECH: 'Horns next for 2-6 Red Raiders

From 1C

Miami completed its scoring in the third quarter with Thomas' third TD catch — a 6-yarder from Erickson; just over two minutes later on the 'Canes' next possession, Shannon Crowell ran in from 12 yards to put Miami ahead 45-3.

Running back Louis Sheffield scored Tech's lone TD with 12:02 left in the game, making it 45-10.

"I'm happy with this football team for a number of reasons," Miami head coach Dennis Erickson said. "We came out and played from the start on both sides of the ball ... we're improving all the time on defense, and we played with class. After a loss like we had last week (29-20 to Notre Dame), sometimes it's hard to bounce back."

Miami moved to 5-2 on the season with the win.

"You kind of run out of options when you're playing a good football team that makes no mistakes," Dykes said. "They were great defensively, well directed and Erickson was a great quarterback. That makes for a great combination.

"We made some mistakes and just couldn't put the fires out. They sure are tough when they are in sync, and boy, are they in sync."

Tech's 93 yards total offense was the lowest since Texas held the Red Raiders to 85 in 1960.

Tech rushed for minus-21 yards, the first time a negative rushing total has been amassed by a Red Raider team since 1984 (against Baylor).

"They have great athletes and came with a game plan. Their (game plan) worked and ours didn't," Gill said. "Things just haven't gone our way this year like they did last year."

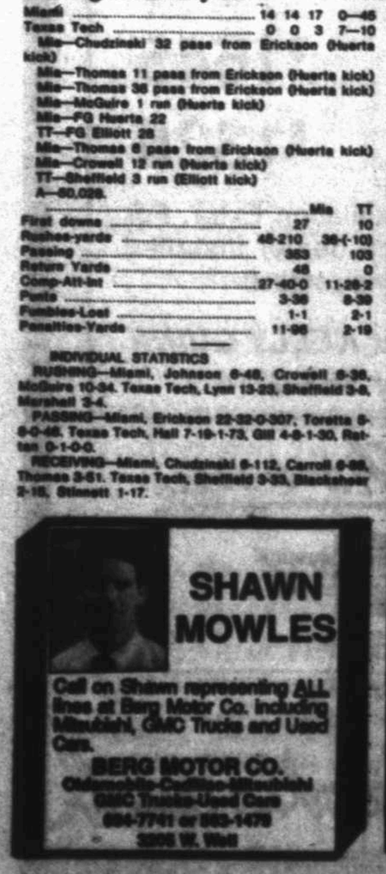

"Miami's a different breed of cat," Dykes added. "(They're) multi-talented with depth running out their ears. It's like they're all out of the same mold and keep coming back at you."

Late PAT block saves Auburn win

Associated Press

Darrel Crawford blocked Joel Logan's conversion kick with 2½ minutes to play Saturday to preserve No. 2 Auburn's 17-16 Southeastern Conference victory over Mississippi State.

Mississippi State (3-4 overall, 0-4 SEC) had a chance to tie the Tigers (6-0-1, 3-0-1) after David Fair's 2-yard run with 2:33 to play. But Crawford, a junior linebacker, batted down Logan's kick to preserve Auburn's unbeaten record.

Fair's touchdown, on his only carry of the game, capped an 80-yard, nine-play drive keyed by a pass interference penalty on a third-and-10 play that gave the Bulldogs a first down at the Tiger 45. Fair scored six plays later.

Auburn got what proved to be the margin of victory with 13:25 remaining in the game, when Jim Von Wyl kicked a 20-yard field goal after a drive was halted at the Mississippi State 3.

Auburn outgained Mississippi State 405-292 in handing the Bulldogs their 10th straight SEC defeat and ninth in a row against Tiger coach Pat Dye.

Freshman quarterback Stan White directed two second-quarter scoring drives as Auburn overcame a 3-0 Mississippi State lead.

No. 3 Notre Dame 31, Pittsburgh 22

Tony Brooks ran for two touchdowns following turnovers and No. 3 Notre Dame turned to its defense and big-play specialist Raghib "Rocket" Ismail to avoid a post-Miami letdown and beat Pittsburgh 31-22.

Ismail ran for a career-high 116 yards and a touchdown and had 214 all-purpose yards, giving him 482 in his last two games, as the Irish beat Pitt for the third straight year.

Alex Van Pelt completed 37 of 51 passes, including 14 straight in the fourth quarter, for 384 yards and two last-period touchdowns, but was unable to rally Pitt from a 24-7 deficit.

The late touchdowns were the first that Pitt managed in the second half against Notre Dame in four years, but the Fighting Irish (6-1) shut down the Panthers (3-4-1) on three important fourth-down plays to withstand an off night by quarterback Rick Mirer.

No. 4 Nebraska 45, Iowa St. 13

Leodis Flowers rushed for a career-high 208 yards and scored three touchdowns, leading a big-play offense that carried No. 4 Nebraska to a 45-13 Big Eight Conference victory over Iowa State.

Iowa State, coming off a 33-31 upset of Oklahoma, couldn't handle Nebraska's running game, which amassed 557 yards. The Cornhuskers (8-0 overall, 4-0 Big Eight), also contained Iowa State quarterback Chris Pedersen, who had been so effective running against Oklahoma.

A record Cyclone Stadium crowd of 54,475 saw Flowers score on a 70-yard run in the first minute of the third quarter and Joseph break a 70-yard run moments later to set up Flowers' 5-yard touchdown run.

Joseph, who rushed for 123 yards in eight carries, also threw two touchdown passes to freshman tight end Johnny Mitchell as the Cornhuskers beat Iowa State (3-4-1, 1-2-1) for the 13th straight time.

No. 7 Washington 46, California 7

Greg Lewis rushed for 205 yards on 29 carries and scored two touchdowns as No. 7 Washington continued its Rose Bowl march with a 46-7 victory over California.

Lewis became the first Huskies player ever to rush for 1,000 yards in two consecutive seasons. He also caught two passes for 90 yards.

Huskies quarterback Mark Brunell passed for a touchdown, caught a touchdown pass, ran for a score and passed for a 2-point conversion.

Washington (7-1 overall and 5-0 in the Pac-10) widened its gap in the Rose Bowl race. Cal (5-3 and 3-2) started the day as the Pac-10's second-place team. The Huskies have three Pac-10 games left and every other Pac-10 school has at least two conference losses.

Brunell caught an 11-yard touchdown pass from Beno Bryant in the third quarter. If that wasn't bizarre enough, the Huskies converted on a 2-point conversion after Cal blocked Travis Hanson's extra-point attempt, following a 56-yard touchdown pass play from Brunell to Lewis in the third quarter. Brunell picked up the bouncing ball and threw to Darius Turner for the 2-point conversion.

Brunell completed 10 of 21 passes for 181 yards. He also ran seven times for 87 yards.

No. 9 Brigham Young 55 New Mexico 31

Ty Detmer passed for five touchdowns, three to Micah Matsuzaki, as ninth-ranked Brigham Young swamped New Mexico 55-31 in the Western Athletic Conference.

Before leaving late in the third quarter, Detmer completed 26 of 41 passes for 464 yards with two interceptions for BYU (6-1 overall, 4-0 WAC).

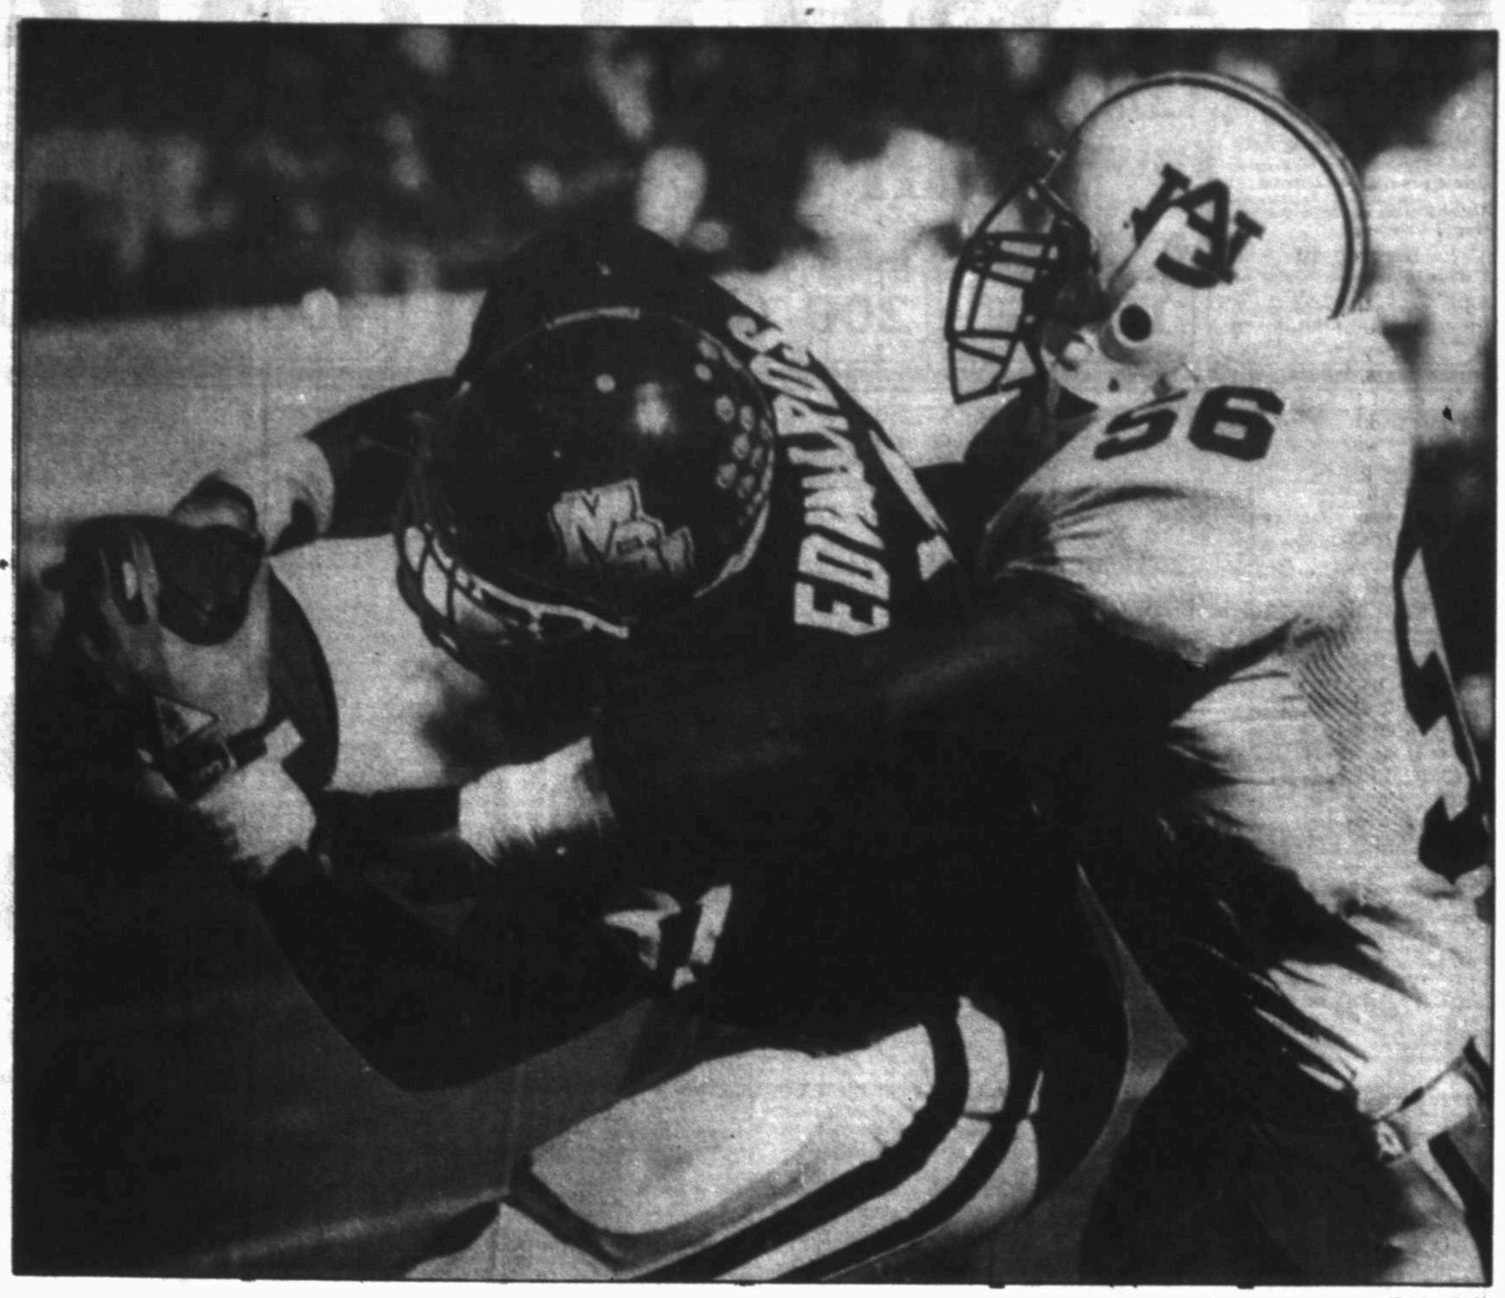

New Mexico (2-7, 1-3) got a big day from its own passer, Jeremy Leach, who had the Loboso in a 21-21 tie in the second quarter. He completed 22 of 40 passes for 293 yards and four touchdowns, three to Mike Henderson.

Leach was intercepted three times by BYU's Derwin Gray, who returned one for a touchdown.

Detmer drove the Cougars 79 yards in eight plays late in the second period for the go-ahead touchdown, which came on a 4-yard pass to Matsuzaki.

Eric Bieniemy bolted 69 yards for a third-quarter touchdown, and Darian Hagan passed 85 yards to Rico Smith for a fourth-quarter TD as 10th-ranked Colorado exploded to a 32-23 Big Eight victory over fading Oklahoma.

Colorado erased a 14-6 second-quarter deficit on an earlier Hagan touchdown pass, the two big plays and Hagan's 3-yard scoring run following an interception.

It was the sixth straight victory for the Buffaloes (7-1-1 overall, 4-0 Big Eight), while No. 22 Oklahoma (5-3, 2-2) lost three straight for the first time in 25 years.

Bieniemy, who finished with 188 yards rushing, put Colorado ahead for the first time at 18-14 with his 69-yard romp up the middle with 10:19 left in the third quarter.

No. 12 Florida St. 42, LSU 3

Amp Lee scored three touchdowns as 12th-ranked Florida State defeated Louisiana State 42-3, giving coach Bobby Bowden his 200th career coaching victory.

Bowden's victory celebration was marred by a bench-clearing, free-for-all after Florida State was flagged for a late hit on the game's final play. Coaches and stadium authorities moved in to separate the players.

A similar penalty last week against Florida State helped Auburn beat Florida State 20-17.

Florida State (5-2), which had lost to Miami and Auburn the last two weeks, broke the game open in the final minute of the half, scoring twice to lead 28-3.

Bowden, 61 next month, is the 11th major-college coach to win 200 games. Penn State's Joe Paterno, with 224, is the only active Division I coach with more victories.

I am a single, 24 year-old, pretty Caucasian female with long dark brown hair and brown eyes. I like c/w dancing, some rock & roll, theatre and stormy nights inside cuddling. Two of my favorite sports are football and bowling. I'm looking to meet my destiny. Smoking and social drinking okay. No drug users. Send phone number and photo if possible.
MP - 616

Attractive Caucasian lady looking for a truly unique relationship. Gentlemen in early 40s to early 50s welcome to exchange letters. Sincere, honest gentlemen with positive outlook and a zest for life essential.
MP - 618

DEPRIVED/DEPRAVED
Caucasian widow, 38, smoker/social drinker, tired of playing solitaire, craves companionship, convenience and STRUT. Looking for Caucasian, single man, 35-45, who is financially secure. No DRUGS/Diseases. Send photo and phone number.
MP - 608

Does this sound familiar? Looking for that "special friend" (30-40) who enjoys movies, dining out, evenings at home, whatever. Are you honest and unpretentious, someone who isn't intimidated by an independent woman? I'm an unencumbered (no kids or husband) animal lover, science fiction buff who enjoys music and cooking. I need a compatible, Caucasian, non-smoker, non-drug user who enjoys dating. Any takers?
MP - 621

Healthy widow, optimistic, vivacious and an incurable romantic, seeks gentleman counterpart - mid 50s. I have brown hair, large expressive brown eyes, am 5'2" tall. I have a good "gift of gab" and a loving heart, not thin or fat. I make friends easily and keep them.
MP - 619

Attractive, petite, Hispanic 49 year-old lady who looks younger, is tired of the single life and wishes to meet Caucasian male 40 - 65 who is sincere and secure for long term relationship - possibly marriage. I like arts and crafts, gardening, sports, cooking, animals, and traveling. A photo of yourself would be appreciated. I will answer all replies.
MP - 623

Attractive, 27-year-old Caucasian female, 5'1", brunette with blue eyes looking to meet a tall Caucasian male, 25-35 years old, non-smoker, non-drug user, social drinker, someone who likes sports and is active (not a couch potato). I'm not like most women. I'd rather be at the races or fishing with you than out shopping or gossipping on the phone. Must have a steady job. Hope to hear from you Soon!
(MP - 598)

Caucasian female, 35, 5'2", blonde, hazel eyes, with one child is looking for a Caucasian male 30-40, non-smoker, non-drug user, social drinker with a steady job who enjoys sports, music, dining out, movies, quiet evenings at home and kids. Please reply.
(MP - 597)

Caucasian lady in early 50's, attractive and energetic! Enjoys CW dancing, travel. I'm fun-loving and looking for serious relationship. Especially attracted to cowboys, native American Indian, Hispanic and Caucasian men. I will answer all letters. Please enclose photo and I will do the same.
(MP-596)

Single, attractive green-eyed Hispanic female, 24 years-old, 5'1", 115 lbs, would like to find a special someone to spend time with. I like going to the movies, and Mexican dances. If you're a single Hispanic male 21-28 years old, non-smoker, light drinker with similar interests, respond with your phone number. I will answer all replies. I guarantee you won't be dissatisfied! Hoping for a lasting relationship.
(MP - 594)

Single 25 year-old petite, attractive, intelligent black female looking for someone unique. I have two children, but I'm not looking for a father-figure for them, I want to meet someone who enjoys dancing, movies and spending time together. I would prefer someone who doesn't do drugs, is between the ages of 25-35. Please send a letter about yourself along with a phone number. All replies will be answered.
(M - P 592)

Attractive Professional Hispanic female, 33 years old. I can dance everything from a two-step to a waltz. I would like to meet a male who enjoys anything from a rodeo to a black-tie affair. My interests are many. How about yours? If interested, please respond with a letter along with a phone number. Hope to hear from U!
(MP - 590)

Are you a Caucasian Senior Citizen who is physically, emotionally and spiritually healthy? So am I. But I am tired of going out alone, eating alone and doing everything alone. Are that way too? I'm 5'5" and weigh 155 lb. I have a dark complexion, gray, naturally curly hair, and a smile that will drive you crazy. I like having a good time and enjoy clean fun. I play most table games and like music real well - even Country Western dancing. I like to laugh a lot. I'm just a "good company" person. Let's meet. Whatcha say? Will answer all replies.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
MIDLAND-ODESSA DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Petitioner,
V.
$86,900.00 REPRESENTING FUNDS ON DEPOSIT WITH SHEARSON LEHMANN HUTTON, INC. AND $19,800.00 REPRESENTING FUNDS ON DEPOSIT WITH MERRILL LYNCH, PIERCE, FENNER AND SMITH, INC.,
CIVIL ACTION NO. MO-90-CA-160
RESPONDENTS.

NOTICE OF COMPLAINT FOR FORFEITURE AND ARREST OF PROPERTY

To any and all claimants of, in, or to the property which is the subject of this action, NOTICE IS GIVEN THAT:

1. A verified Complaint for Forfeiture has been filed in this Court on 10-5-90, by the United States Attorney for the Western District of Texas, against Respondent $86,900.00, representing funds on deposit with Shearson Lehman Hutton, Inc. and $19,800.00, representing funds on deposit with Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, Inc., said deposits hereinafter referred to as the "Respondent Property". An Order has been entered by the United States District Court that a Warrant for Arrest be issued as prayed for by Petitioner.

2. A Warrant for Arrest was issued by the Clerk of the Court commanding me to arrest the Respondent Property described above and take it into my possession for safe custody as provided by Title 28, United States Code, Rule E(4) (b) of the Supplemental Rules for Certain Admiralty and Maritime Claims, until further order of the Court, and to make my return as provided by law, and said Warrant for Arrest has been executed.

3. I was further ordered to cause publication of Public Notice as required by Rule C(4) of the Supplemental Rules for Certain Admiralty and Maritime Claims and to be made not less than once a week for three consecutive weeks in the Sunday edition of a newspaper regularly issued and of general circulation in Midland, Midland County, Texas.

4. ANY CLAIMANT OF, IN, OR TO SAID RESPONDENT CURRENCY MUST FILE HIS CLAIM WITH THE CLERK of the United States District Court, Western District of Texas, Midland-Odessa Division, on or before 10:00 a.m., ten (10) days from the date of last publication of this notice and that such claimant shall serve his answer within twenty (20) days after the filing of the claim, as provided by Rule C(6) of the Supplemental Rules for Certain Admiralty and Maritime Claims.

5. Any individual or party who is personally served with Notice of Complaint for Forfeiture and Arrest of Property in this cause, however, shall file his claim within ten (10) days after such service has been executed, and shall serve his answer within twenty (20) days after the filing of the claim, as provided by Title 28, United States Code, Rule C(6) of the Supplemental Rules for Certain Admiralty and Maritime Claims.

SIGNED this 10th day of October, 1990.

Living & Style

This well-designed home is filled with beautifully decorated rooms. The area next to the kitchen, top photo, is suited for a small sitting area. A built-in desk is placed against one wall.

One wall in the formal living room is lined with plantation shuttered windows, above. A fireplace and bookshelves are inset along the far wall.

The sequestered master bedroom, below, provides a quiet retreat for parents. The windows overlook the back yard.

It is not very often that a person can walk out of a home and be left with a lasting visual representation. And if the walls could talk, stories could be told about the significant events that have occurred over the years inside the four exterior walls. From the sound of thundering sneakers of little boys on the staircase to a roomful of talkative girls during a slumber party to coping with teenagers during some difficult times, this week's featured home looks marvelous considering everything it has witnessed during the years.

This two-story home is located in an older Midland neighborhood and includes three or four bedrooms, depending on a family's needs, and three baths. Although this home was built over 20 years ago, the design between the kitchen, family room and breakfast area is very similar to the homes which are being built today.

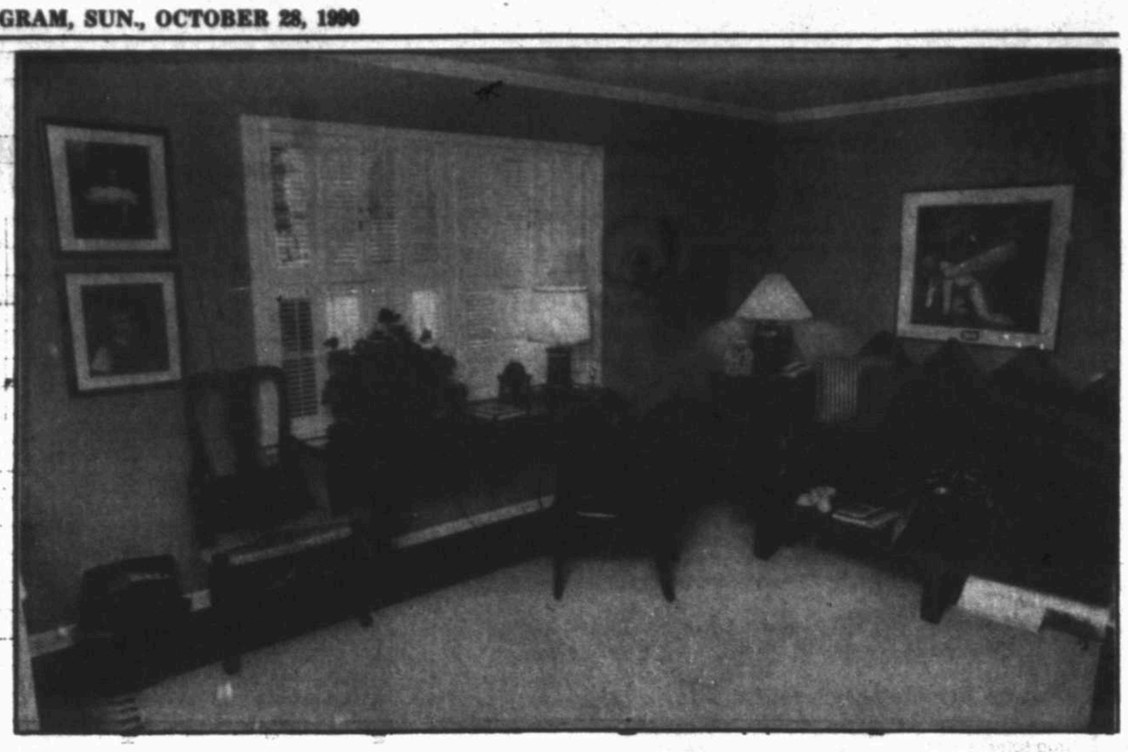

A glass front door opens into the entrance. Hardwood flooring is ideal for this high-traffic area. A pale paper in shades of blue, rose and teal adorns the walls and a shuttered window adds natural light into this area. The entrance extends to the right of the front door, next to the staircase, into the formal living room.

Taupe colored walls and white trim help to formalize the interior, as does the fireplace and bookcases which are placed at the far end of the room. A plantation shuttered window which lines the right wall overlooks the front yard. Bookcases are placed on both sides of the fireplace and recessed lighting can be used to attract attention to a favorite painting. A door provides access into the family and breakfast rooms.

The entrance hall flows past the formal living room into the dining room. This elegant area has painted wainscoting which is highlighted by a floral paper in shades of rose, peach, blue, teal and taupe. French doors provide a great view of the back yard and open onto the back patio. When entertaining during the warmer months, guests can mingle between these areas. The hardwood floor is ideal for displaying an area rug.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

The formal dining room is elegantly decorated in a floral wallpaper, custom window treatment and a hardwood floor.

Families will relish the cozy study, above, that is situated down the hall from the sequestered master bedroom. The open design, below, between the kitchen, breakfast room and a small family room makes a wonderful gathering place for family members.

IDEA: Decor highlights family home

(From 1D)

The kitchen is situated to the right of the dining room. A sink is placed under a window that frames the back yard. The appliances in the U-shaped kitchen include a General Electric cooktop, oven and dishwasher. A yellow paper with blue accents lines the kitchen walls and complements the blue and white checked paper in the adjoining family and breakfast rooms.

The area which is adjacent to the kitchen can be used in a variety of ways. Currently, it is being used as a cozy gathering place for family members with an adjoining breakfast area. But this room could also be used as a larger family room if owners chose to dine at each meal in the formal dining room. A desk is placed along one wall in the room and is designed to keep a busy mother organized. The opposite wall is lined with a tall window that views the gorgeous back yard. A door to the left of the window leads to the back patio.

A door between these two areas opens into the spacious laundry room. A half-bath is located at one end and is brightened by a blue wallpaper and a window. The laundry room can easily accommodate a freezer and a sewing/office area. It also features a storage closet and a door that leads to the two-car garage with an automatic door opener. A second door opens onto the back yard.

A corridor to the left of the dining room leads to the master bedroom. This room is painted a light shade of blue and is accented by white trim. Two plantation shuttered windows overlook the side and back yards. The size of this room allows for a intimate sitting area for parents.

The master bath is divided into two parts. The dressing area is located next to the bedroom. It features a tile vanity and a large, customized walk-in closet. A white paper with blue floral decorates this area. A door opens into the bathing area which includes a bathtub/shower.

The corridor extends past the master bedroom, behind the staircase, to a guest bath. This bath is also decorated in blue and white and has a tile vanity. It opens onto the bathing area in the master bath.

A study is situated at the end of the hall. This room was originally used as a bedroom, but a doorway was added to provide access into the entrance hall. Due to the guest bath, it can be used a fourth bedroom. It has two shuttered windows that frame the front yard and a hardwood floor. A built-in entertainment cabinet is placed along one wall. White moulding accents the taupe walls.

Two bedrooms and a hall bath are located upstairs. These sequestered rooms provide a retreat for children and their friends. The first room could easily accommodate more than one child. A floral border in shades of pale yellow and blue frame the walls. One wall is papered in a blue stripe and the other walls are painted a soft shade of blue. Windows provide lots of sunshine and two walk-in closets allow for storage of clothing and toys. A sitting area or a desk can be placed in a nook under one of the windows.

The second bedroom has two tan walls and two white walls. Sailboats are placed on a border at the top of the walls personalizing this area. A window overlooks the back yard and two doors open into a spacious closet.

A tile vanity, bathtub and linen closet are the amenities of the hall bath. The bathtub has glass doors and this area is decorated in blue and white.

This memorable family home also features ceiling fans, custom window treatments and a beautifully landscaped yard. It contains approximately 2,800 square feet and is being offered by Langston Realtors for $144,900.

Preseason maintenance gives homeowners headstart

Shorter days and cooler temperatures should be a signal to homeowners to start preparing their homes for the winter months ahead, notes Bill Jackson, owner of Adobe, Inc., Realtors. "It's easy to put household maintenance off until a later date, but homeowners can save themselves a lot of time — and possibly money — if they take the time to organize, inspect and fix things around the house before winter arrives," says Jackson.

"Probably one of the best approaches to maintenance is to set a monthly schedule for inspections and upkeep. Performing a few of these tasks each month can make household upkeep much easier by stretching out jobs to be done so that they don't pile up."

Bill Jackson

Adobe Inc., Realtors is a member of RELO/The International Relocation Network, the nation's oldest and largest referral network of independent real estate brokers.

The RELO network, headquartered in Chicago, provides a wide range of relocation services to assist transferees and their families sell a house in one community and purchase a new home in the new community.

The network, celebrating its 30th anniversary this year, reported more than $50 billion in total real estate sales volume from its members in 1989.

Jackson suggests that homeowners start on fall projects early into the season, but recommends that homeowners design a specific plan of action. He says, "During October, homeowners will want to focus on performing outdoor projects."

"The weather is still warm enough to work outside comfortably — and serves as a prime opportunity to wash windows and screens, install weatherstripping, store patio furniture as well as mow and rake the yard one final time."

"As the weather continues to cool and the days become shorter," notes Jackson, "homeowners will want to change the emphasis of their work from outdoors to indoors."

"In the month of November, for instance, further preparations for the winter should include having the fireplace and furnace inspected to ensure that they are working properly and purchasing needed items such as new snow shovels and rock salt."

With the holidays drawing closer, he also suggests that homeowners get a head start on the season by giving the interior of their homes a thorough cleaning.

"With all of the activity of summer, it is easy to let housework slip until a later date, but now is the time to take a weekend to get things in order. Waxing floors, washing fingerprints off of walls and dusting the house from top to bottom will make the house more livable in addition to serving as preparation for holiday decorating," Jackson notes.

He adds, "By starting these projects early, homeowners will have a head start on the upcoming season that will eventually pay off by giving them time to relax during the holidays."

In addition to providing a wide range of relocation services, the RELO network has entered into an agreement with the Dallas-based Associates Corporation of North America, allowing Adobe, Inc., Realtors and other RELO members to further help homebuyers as well as sellers by offering a variety of financial services for transferees.

RELO also recently announced the formation of two new divisions providing its members with the opportunity to expand activities with both commercial and rental properties.

Adobe, Inc. Realtors has 11 sales associates and has served the Midland area for 12 years.

Carriage Co., Realtors discuss preparation for real estate careers

In a recent newsletter, Louise Culver, president of Carriage Co., Realtors, discussed the rewarding experiences that come from a career in real estate sales and the personal traits that make such a career successful. Culver states that she has received numerous requests for more information on the technical aspects of qualifying for a license.

"Specific educational requirements are a concern for most newcomers, so more needs to be said at this point," states Culver. "Though the licensing laws are much more demanding now then when I was licensed as a salesman in 1964, I believe that the educational and examination requirements are necessary to protect the homebuyer and seller as well."

Louise Culver

The Texas Real Estate Commission requires evidence of successful completion of 180 hours of real estate or related education plus attendance at a Fair Housing Seminar prior to allowing a candidate to sit for the Salesman's licensing examination.

Ninety hours must be core real estate courses as designated by the Commission. The remaining may be core or related hours. The Commission will accept college credit hours as related work upon evaluation of an official college transcript.

A program of continuing education is an integral part of the real estate profession. Maintenance of the Salesman's license requires an additional 30 hours annually in "core related real estate courses."

Those who are dedicated to the profession normally progress to licensing as a Broker. The requirements for this level include a total of 900 classroom hours of courses approved by the Commission in addition to two years actual experience in real estate sales.

An additional enhancement to professionalism of the real estate industry was provided by the 71st Legislature of Texas who amended the Texas Real Estate License Act to require continuing education for all licensees. No licensee is "grandfathered" or, in other words, permitted to practice with a license obtained perhaps many years ago.

The purpose of the amendment to the act is to ensure that all licensees, through additional training programs, are knowledgeable and informed about relevant real estate issues and changes in regulations and policies affecting the industry.

The desired result is a licensee community which is better informed to a high level of competency and ethical conducts, and the general public is the beneficiary of this training.

Many real estate agents also enhance their qualifications through special training courses for professional designations such as Graduate Real Estate Institute, Certified Residential Specialist and Certified Real Estate Broker. Of course, there are numerous other professional designations for related fields such as appraising, commercial real estate and property management.

Culver concludes that if you are interested in a career in real estate, you should call for an appointment to discuss the opportunities. A general plan for accelerating your training and preparation for obtaining your real estate sales license can be developed.

You will have the opportunity to meet professional and to find out why they have dedicated their time to real estate. Culver also says that you will discover that at Carriage, "We have time to have fun and to enjoy what we do."

Experts give essential touch-up tips for furniture repair

Associated Press

Repairing wood furniture is easier than you might expect, and materials, available at your local paint store or home center, are inexpensive. Here are some touch-up tips:

Small gouges and holes can be easily filled with shellac sticks. You can get special burn-in shellac sticks, in a variety of colors, through woodworking supply outlets. Other materials you'll need that are available through the same source include a burn-in knife (you can substitute a grapefruit knife), an alcohol lamp, 400-grit waterproof abrasive paper, a felt block and leveling solvent (usually alcohol).

To use the stick, heat the tip of the knife over the alcohol lamp. Hold the hot knife over the gouge, and press the stick against the blade until the shellac melts into the gouge. Reheat the blade, wipe it clean with fine steel wool, and spread the shellac level.

Avoid touching the surrounding finish. If some melted shellac does get on the surrounding surface let it get firm, but not hard, then gently scrape it off. Remove any residue with a piece of cloth moistened with alcohol.

Moisten the felt block with leveling solvent and rub it briskly over the hardened shellac. Dry sand the area with 400-grit paper, and use a felt-tip marker to draw in grain lines. Seal the patch with shellac and apply finish.

To remove white spots or rings on a shellacked surface left from a wet glass, simply rub some toothpaste over the spot with the tip of your finger. If this doesn't do the trick, rub the surface with a soft cloth lightly moistened with denatured alcohol or lacquer thinner. Then apply paste wax and buff.

A cigarette burn – or any other deep localized burn – is repaired by patching with wood filler. Scrape away charred wood using a razor knife with a curved blade. Clean the depression with a cloth dampened with paint thinner, then pack it with a filler that's colored to match the wood, or stain the filler to match. When the patch is dry, sand it smooth and level to the surrounding surface. Use a felt marker to draw in grain lines, seal the spot and apply top finish.

A veneer blister may be flattened by heating it and pressing it down. The finish on and around the blister may have been damaged as the blister formed. Gently scrape off any flaking or cracked finish before repairing.

Cut into the center of the blister, along the grain, with a razor knife to let the air escape. Heat the blister with a hair dryer to soften the adhesive. Then roll the blister flat with a veneer roller, weight it down, or clamp a small block of wood over it.

A blister that formed at the edge of a surface is easily repaired. Gently slide a little glue under the peeled section, and clamp a block over it.

On large veneer blisters, make an X-shaped slit to permit access for recementing. Regardless of whether the veneer was originally applied with glue or contact cement, use contact cement to make the repair.

Gently bend back each flap of the X, and apply cement to the veneer and the substrate with a small brush. Let the cement air dry, then press the veneer back in place. Apply pressure with a roller or by placing a wood block on the repair and tapping it.

"ME" SELLING FOR A FUNERAL HOME? YOU'VE GOT TO BE KIDDING !?!

That's what Mark, Dan, Eddie, James, Linda, Brian, Jeff, Helen, and Les all said.

But. . .

they investigated and here's what they found:
- They found one of the best sales jobs in Texas.
- They work by direct appointment only.
- They have a proven lead system with no credit turndown. Women do as well as men.
- They average $200 per sale, and $300-500 per week.

Yes
they are quality sales people and
Yes
they do work hard.

"SELECT SUCCESS"

THE FEEL OF COUNTRY LIVING WITHOUT THE DRIVE
Your own haven, 4 bedroom, plus office area, country style nestled on 2 acres of trees, flowers, and shrubs. Let nature's beauty delight you through the wooden windows & doors, or knotty pine kitchen. Pool with secure feature of a fenced area. Plenty of space, minutes from anywhere. Call Jim Hoisager at 697-2450 or 682-7884.

OWNER WILL CONSIDER FINANCING
with considerable amount down. Owner will consider financing this fantastic 4 bedroom home with workshop, great landscaping, like new condition. Call Ruth Young at 697-1217 or 682-7884.

HORSE MANURE - - IF YOU'RE CRAZY ENOUGH TO SHOVEL IT...
I may have the perfect house for you - 2 bedroom, 2 baths, stalls for 2 horses, storage building, well house situated on just under 3 acres. This owner will carry with enough down to get him out without too much out of his pocket!!! Total price on this is only $22,000. Call Sandra McGill at 697-1717 or 682-7884.

WAITING FOR A BARGAIN?
Then head straight for this 3 bedroom, 2 bath immaculate home just around the corner from two of Midland's best schools! Decorated for perfection. You can't find a neater, cleaner home in this price range. Save yourself lots of time and money -- look here first! Please call Melissa Herndon at 697-5612 or 682-7884.

TWO FOR ONE SALE WITH GREAT TERMS
in fact, the terms couldn't be better. The owner has agreed to be your banker. 2 bedroom, 1 bath with refrigerator and stove is where you could live and then fenced off is a separate one bedroom, one bath with small living area for your rental that would bring in about one-half of your house payment. Owner lives out of town and is anxious to sell. Call Sandra McGill at 697-1717 or 682-7884.

ATTENTION: MOBILE HOME FAMILY!
Picture your family enjoying life at it's best on this beautiful acre of land located southeast of Midland. Lots of trees, 2 water wells and pretty new 2 car carport. Park your mobile home here to enjoy West Texas sunsets the way they were meant to be. Please call Melissa Herndon at 697-5612 or 682-7884.

CUL-DE-SAC AND OH SO PRIVATE is this fabulous patio home. It has an Atrium that puts all others to shame. 2 bedrooms, 2 baths, 2 living areas, 3 fireplaces, sunken living room, formal dining, large breakfast area, extra large workshop, 2 car rear entry garage. Call to preview this one. Ask for Sandra McGill at 697-1717 or 682-7884.

GET ALONG LITTLE DOGGIE!
Saddle up the family and head out Greenwood way and let your imagination roam over these 19 acres. There's even a HUGE 3 bedroom, 2 bath mobile home that you can make your home. Tons of space to build and grow on! We also have only 2 acres in the same area if this fits your needs. Call Melissa Herndon at

Dennis Bishop/Reporter-Telegram

Matthew Wiseman, 10 months, "gets into" investigating the wonders of the library.

Once Upon A Time....

By Tina Stewart
Staff Writer

Dennis Bishop/Reporter-Telegram

Exploring the importance of fire prevention, Marita Richards reads a favorite Sesame Street story.

Marita Richards leads "Jump Frog Jump."

A showcase of puppets and stories appears at the Children's Department of the Midland County Public Library 10-10:30 a.m. Tuesday and Thursday mornings when Story Time — Puppet Time is presented. In a sequence of stories, songs and puppet acts, Marita Richards, head of the department, becomes Midland's own Mr. Rogers.

In her best Story Time — Puppet Time frog voice, Ms. Richards tells the story of Picasso the Frog to an inquisitive group of 3-, 4- and 5-year-olds. It seems that this frog, Picasso, accidently jumps into a jar of jellybeans and turns multicolored. After finishing Picasso's saga with a classic storybook happy ending, Ms. Richards launches into the rambunctious story, "Jump Frog Jump."

While telling the tale, she encourages the children to jump — like the frog puppet that is perched on her hand — as the frog goes through the perils of escaping the near misses of a snake, a turtle and several young boys equipped with nets and baskets.

WITH GLEEFUL exuberance and frog-like jumps, the children join in with laughter and outbursts of "Jump frog jump!" After a sequel of at least five "Jump frog jumps," the children settle down and prepare for Ms. Richard's next tale.

Story Time — Puppet Time is a six week program for 3- to 5-year-olds sponsored by the Children's Services Department at the library. The program, according to Ms. Richards, has been an ongoing project in her department.

The primary objective of the program is to bring children and books together. "It's a neat time for the children to learn and develop. You learn what you can do at each age," Ms. Richards said.

The program is specifically targeted to children who are not in school yet. Ms. Richards said at first the children are timid, especially the 3-year-olds, because in most cases they haven't been put into a group situation without their parents.

"The first week they are really timid. By this time, (the sixth week) the children are practically sitting in my lap," she said.

Each session, the children are introduced to books, finger plays and singing plays. Movement and activity songs also are presented to develop the child's sense of rhythm. "It helps to teach them how to sit in a group. It helps them to become interested in reading," Ms. Richards said.

Keeping the interest of 15 3-, 4- and 5-year-olds is not the easiest of tasks, so Ms. Richards moves swiftly through several books and skits. Each session is dedicated to one topic. For example, one session was dedicated to learning about water and the animals that live in the water; hence Picasso the frog and "Jump Frog Jump."

Puppets play a primary part in expressing the different themes Ms. Richards presents. The puppets, purchased from a grant provided by Friends of the Library, range from a host of images that include owls, frogs, bears and Sesame Street characters. As a special part of Puppet Time, the children are allowed to pick and choose a puppet to take home for the week.

ALTHOUGH PUPPET-picking is high priority among the children, equal amounts of energy and time are used to scour the shelves for books. The stampede begins scarcely a moment after Ms. Richards finishes her last story.

Peggy Wennerlind, whose daughter Angela is a Story Time — Puppet Time attendee, points to library shelves that have recently been emptied. "We love the books. They have a marvelous selection and are always getting new books in. It's obvious that a lot of short people (like children) are reading in this town," Ms. Wennerlind said.

Although some of the children involved in the program have already been exposed to the wonders of the library, the sessions provide time for all the children to come and investigate the library on a regular basis. "It gets the children

Couple spends one week in New England

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Just back from a week's trip to New England to see the beautiful fall foliage are Pat and James Upham. Flying to Boston, they rented a car for a leisurely drive along the back roads and away from the busy interstate. They particularly enjoyed the charm of staying in Bed and Breakfast Inns.

McKnight-Harrison

The couple's itinerary included Providence, R.I., the seaport of Mystic, Conn., and Sturbridge and Plymouth, Mass.

Among the highlights were visits to Sturbridge Village and Plymouth Village, both of which have been restored to reflect our Early American heritage, and tours of the Mayflower and the USS Constitution. They also enjoyed the unique shops throughout New England, many of which featured crafts and antiques.

LONGTIME MIDLANDER Mrs. Allen J. Watts (Artamyse McMullan) was honored on her 90th birthday recently with a McMullan family dinner at Zentner's Steak House in San Angelo. Approximately 30 family members attended, including her niece, Gayle Dodson, and Gayle's husband, "Doc"; another niece, Mrs. Peggy Jackson, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. D.K. (Pete) McMullan, all of Midland.

Among the other guests were her only living sister, Mrs. Lewis (Lutie) Hersey, 96, of San Angelo and a frequent visitor to Midland, and as a special surprise, the late Mr. Watts' nieces, former Midlanders Shirley Watts Brown of Edmond, Okla., and Jean Ann Watts Widmire from Alaska.

Mrs. Watts was born in San Angelo on Oct. 3, 1900. Currently a resident of Trinity Towers, she has lived in Midland for 53 years and also has made her home in San Angelo, San Antonio and Washington, D.C. She has traveled extensively, including the 50 States, Canada, Nova Scotia, Europe and the West Indies.

MEMBERS OF RANCHLAND HILLS Country Club held an open house recently to honor Glen Hurd, an employee of 40 years. Mr. Hurd was employed the year the club opened and has been a faithful employee and friend to three generations of RHCC members.

To show their appreciation, club members gave a generous monetary gift, which club president Johnny Mulloy presented to "Mr. Glen" and also an honorary lifetime membership in Ranchland Hills.

The honoree's wife, Bea, and grandson, Marcus, were special guests.

A RECEPTION was held here last weekend to honor Christine Kirk on her 90th birthday. The party was held in the home of her daughter, Dorothy (Mrs. Frank) Scott. It was co-hosted by her other children, Margaret (Mrs. R.B.) Rikli of New Orleans, Bob Kirk of Scottsdale, Ariz., Joyce Mattocks of Midwest City, Okla., and Charlotte (Mrs. Earl) Caraway of Midland.

Approximately 50 persons attended, including eight grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Kirk, the former Christine Laverne Gibson, was born on Oct. 24, 1900, in Nashville, Tenn. She and Royce Kirk were married in December of 1919 in McGregor, Texas. They moved to Midland from Oklahoma City in 1966 after the late Mr. Kirk retired from Government Service.

DrugAlert kit causes concern over privacy

By Terry H. Burns
Copley News Service

An aerosol spray kit that allows suspicious parents to test their children's rooms for drugs is prompting concerns over the accuracy of the test and a child's legal right to privacy.

The DrugAlert kit, which retails for $49.95, went on sale in September and its Yonkers, N.Y.-based manufacturer says it has been swamped with requests from concerned parents.

"We haven't come back off the clouds yet. We're getting tremendous response," said Sidney Klein, general manager of SherTest, which manufacturers DrugAlert.

He declined to reveal how many of the kits have been sold, "but we're getting inquiries from all over the country," he said.

The kits not only are being sold to parents concerned about their children's possible drug use, but to spouses who suspect husbands or wives of taking drugs, he said.

"This kit helps break down the denial, whether from a husband, wife or child, usually associated with drug use," Klein said.

The DrugAlert kit contains three aerosol cans — two needed to test for marijuana and a third to test for cocaine.

Along with the spray cans is a parent's guide to drug abuse titled, "Not My Kid," and a window sticker reading "Drug Free Home."

KLEIN SAID THE at-home kit is easy to use.

Parents are told to wipe a piece of paper on any surface — a desk, a table, a chair — that drugs may have touched, and then spray the chemicals on the paper.

Any cocaine residue will turn the paper turquoise, while marijuana makes it reddish brown.

Although it is possible that the chemicals might detect cocaine or marijuana, the process is far from foolproof, experts warn.

And, some medical experts caution that the chemicals could react with a number of other drugs, including over-the-counter medications, and give false readings.

CNS Graphics

"Those agents can react with a number of drugs so it's not particularly effective," said Dr. John Ambre, head of the American Medical Association's Department of Toxicology.

"The obvious problem would be from false results. There could be a lot of false negatives and probably a lot of false positives too," he said.

"I don't think the results would be convincing proof of anything. It's not a definitive test, and because of that, it couldn't be very reliable," Ambre said.

"I THINK IF you're going to use such a test, you have to very, very careful that it is reliable. If you get a high number of false positives it would really be disastrous," said Dr. Eugene Woods, professor of pharmacology at the University of Illinois in Chicago.

Beyond that, the whole idea of DrugAlert "is a sad commentary on our society that a parent would undertake that kind of approach to find out what's going on with their kids," Ambre said.

"I think you ought to talk to them rather than go around swabbing their desks with a test kit."

Klein, however, defended the However, if the test is used, and accuracy of DrugAlert.

He said the product has been tested thoroughly by ElSohly Laboratories in Oxford, Miss., which concluded that the spray was a "very valuable and sensitive preliminary testing reagent to identify the presence of marijuana and cocaine."

The key phrase is preliminary testing, Klein stressed.

"I'm not claiming anything more than that. If you want anything more, send a sample to a laboratory," he said.

Some drug prevention experts say that parents should be able to spot drug abuse problems in their children without the use of a drug screening kit.

ALTHOUGH THE TEST might help parents detect a drug problem, "even the untrained eye can perceive the clues and signals that a child is in some kind of trouble," said Dr. Leon Hendricks of the Midwest Regional Center of Drug-Free Schools and Communities in Chicago.

"The signals are there and we can detect them without the use of other chemicals," he said.

parents find evidence of drug use, it's important that they support their child and focus on solving the problem.

"If parents use the product properly and then seek help for their children, I don't see any problem. It's all in how you use it," Hendricks said.

His concern is that DrugAlert provides a potential for abuse.

"If a parent can use it, what can stop a teacher or a coach or a principal from using it?" he said.

The American Civil Liberties Union has expressed similar concerns, although the group admits it has no grounds for a legal challenge.

"If the product is only marketed to parents for use with their children there are no legal constitutional grounds to object," said Phil Gutis of the ACLU.

"WE'RE ONLY ASKING parents to put this in perspective and think about what they're teaching their children. We think they're teaching them that privacy is unimportant," Gutis said.

"We're also concerned about what a false positive (test result) is going to do to the relationship between a parent and child," he said.

Klein insisted that he was not advocating that parents secretly spray a child's desk, "even though a parent has a right to do that.

"I'm talking about fighting drugs in the home. There is no legal basis for saying invasion of privacy for a parent in a private home with their own kids," he said.

Ideally, parents who suspect their children are using drugs should sit down with them, discuss the problem and then show them the kit.

"Parents should use as much love and care as possible.

"Invasion of privacy is a concern, but it is a minor, minor concern when you're facing the life and death of a child who is slowly poisoning himself with drugs," Klein said.

Instead of criticizing anti-drug efforts like DrugAlert, the experts should "start getting a little excited about the kids killing themselves with drugs," he said.

STORY: Children become excited, interested in reading

(From 1E)

"It gets the children interested in reading. It also gets the people who are not regular library users to come and visit. Then the children will want to come to the library even if it's not story time," Ms. Richards said.

This seems to be the case with Jesse Dalgiesh, 3. "She doesn't want to miss it (story time). She'll start saying she wants to go to the library around Monday. I wouldn't bring her down here if it wasn't for this," said Jesse's mother, Laura Dalgliesh.

There will be two six-week Story Time — Puppet Time sessions offered this fall and winter. The first session meets Tuesdays, Nov.6 through Dec. 11. The second session meets Thursdays, Nov. 8 through Dec. 13, except for Nov. 22. All sessions will meet 10-10:30 a.m.

Registration for Story Time — Puppet Time must be made in person and will begin 9 a.m. Monday in the Children's Department of the Midland County Public Library. The sessions are limited to 15 children each.

"It's a wonderful opportunity to get close to good books, good ideas, to learn to sit and listen," Ms. Wennerland said, " and it's free."

Beauty tips are offered

NEW YORK (AP) — From fading lipstick to lumpy lashes, common beauty problems can be solved with the right technique.

Here are some tips from Family Circle magazine:

- Use lip primer over lipstick to keep lips moist and color fresh.
- Press loose powder onto lips and then cover with a matte lipstick to help lipstick last longer.
- Rub the spot where you applied your perfume to reactivate the scent.
- Help nails dry more quickly by applying fresh nail polish and then plunging them into ice water for a few minutes.
- Apply mascara in zigzags from inner to outer corners of the eye to reduce clumps.
- Reduce dry scaly feet by applying a rich moisturizer. Wrap feet in plastic bags and wear socks overnight. In the morning, reapply a light lotion before putting shoes on.

Rollercoaster mania born in Russia

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Sledding down huge ice-coated wooden slides was popular in Russia in the late 1700s.

So popular, in fact, that ruler Catherine the Great was enamored with the sport. When summer came and the ice melted, Catherine ordered wheels added to the sleds so thrill seekers could enjoy the slides during the summer months — and the roller coaster was born.

By 1816, the "Russian Mountains" were popular in France, Paul Ruben, editor of Roller Coaster! magazine told a recent conference at the University of Rochester.

Roller coasters were widespread throughout the United States by the turn of the century and are still popular today.

Cartoonist sees humor in life

By Jamie Reno
Copley News Service

As a notorious underachiever growing up in suburban St. Louis in the 1950s, Mike Peters had a grade point average in a neighborhood somewhere south of 1.0.

He showed a talent for drawing, but he hated studying. He ignored lectures. He dismissed assignments.

His school days consisted primarily of daydreaming and doodling on everything from textbooks to teachers' desks.

"Listen, young man," his English instructor wrote in his senior yearbook, "you need to grow up. You can't just go on drawing cartoons forever."

Oh, no?

At 47, Peters is enjoying a sustained last laugh: He's still drawing cartoons, and he still hasn't grown up.

"My job sort of demands that I stay a kid," said the boyish Peters, whose editorial cartoons are now syndicated to 300 newspapers around the country and appear regularly in Newsweek and Time magazines. In 1981, his editorial cartooning earned a Pulitzer Prize.

BUT MILLIONS of Americans are probably more familiar with "Mother Goose & Grimm," the goofily satiric comic strip Peters has been drawing since 1986. Carried by about 500 newspapers, "Mother Goose & Grimm" is an off-the-wall strip filled with everything from pointed social satire to clever wordplay.

It features Grimm, the flea-bitten pooch whose pastimes include chasing cars, drinking from toilets, eating garbage, commenting on life's little indignities, and trying to impress the cute little poodle who lives down the street.

On a promotion tour for his latest "Mother Goose & Grimm" epic, "Grimmy Come Home," Peters giggled when asked if Grimm is his alter ego.

"The dog isn't my alter ego, it's me. Make no mistake. The dog is me."

But he didn't know that when he started the strip.

"When I came to the realization that the dog is really me, about a year into drawing it, that's when the strip really took off and I was able to do anything I wanted with it," he said. "Now I delve into myself more with it. I tap into memories I have of growing up and I translate them to Grimmy."

What he can't share with Grimmy is the stress of his job. With the grind of drawing a daily comic strip in addition to producing five editorial cartoons per week, Peters is never really away from work, even when he's away from the office.

"Even on vacation," he said. "I jot down ideas, little blips that come into my mind, no matter where I am. My mind's always working."

BUT FORTUNATELY for Peters, work is play.

Holding a felt pen poised over a sketch pad on his lap, he was armed and ready to draw.

"What would you like to see an editorial cartoon about?" he asked.

But before there was time for an answer, the marker started to dance. When it rested, Peters studied the result and came up grinning: another astute and funny cartoon.

"I like this one," he said of the sketch, which showed a man, his dog and his cat all lying on their backs in their living room, fast asleep in front of a television and snoring as an announcer said, "And now, for the Democratic response ..."

The caption read, "Six words guaranteed to put anyone to sleep."

Peters was quick to point out, "This could be either political party, you know. It just shows how predictable those opposite-party responses to speeches are."

He describes his editorial cartoons as dark but not cynical; biting but not bitter.

The same could be said for the cartoonist, who thought he had gotten into the wrong profession when he started out in the 1960s, because most of his colleagues, he said, were such cynics.

The Peters principle, he realized, is that humor is the best weapon.

THAT DOESN'T mean he doesn't get angry, or that anger doesn't come up in his work.

Recently Peters, a Roman Catholic, did a series of editorial cartoons sharply criticizing the Catholic Church for refusing to grant Holy Communion to those in favor of abortion.

"You wouldn't believe some of the hate mail I got," recalled Peters, who uses his comic strip as a vacation from such hard issues.

Though Peters had been a horrendous student, he showed enough talent to be accepted to art school at Washington University in St. Louis, from which — to the shock of many of his former teachers — he graduated.

Soon after, the esteemed editorial cartoonist Bill Mauldin, whom Peters had met as a child through Peters' mother — a talk-show host in St. Louis — helped him get a job in the art department at the now-defunct Chicago Daily News.

In 1968, Mauldin helped Peters get an interview with the Dayton Daily News in Ohio, and 20 years later — though he has since moved with his wife and three daughters to Sarasota, Fla. — Peters is still on staff there.

Thanks to fax machines and computer hookups, he is able to send his work back to Dayton. And he still draws one cartoon a week of specific interest to Ohio.

'Self-help' book self-destructs

By David Grimes
N.Y. Times News Service

My brother-in-law, Bubba Bob, called me up the other day to say that he had finished writing his new book. "What's this one called?" I asked.

" 'How to Pick Up Chicks,' " he said.

"You wrote a whole book about poultry handling?" I said.

"No, stupid. It's about gettin' it on with the babes. You know, the old romance-arooni."

"Have you been fermenting corn again, Bubba Bob?" I said.

"No, man. Listen, I got a best-seller here. It's got chapters and everything. Want to know the title of the first chapter?"

"I'm dizzy with anticipation," I said.

" 'Noises That Drive Chicks Wild,' " he said.

"How intriguing," I said. "Dare I ask for an example?"

"Certainly," he said. "Let's say you're drivin' around in the pick-up with a coupla boys from the fillin' station, and you see a fine-lookin' lady walkin' down the sidewalk. You lean out the window and yell 'Hoo-wee! Hoo-wee! Hoo-wee! Aw right!' "

"What about the beach?" I said.

"Picking up chicks at the beach is kind of tricky, because the women have trouble hearing your seductive noises, what with the waves and the seagulls and everything. So what I do is I bring an amplifier."

"An amplifier?" I said.

"Yeah," he said. "I personally prefer Mr. Microphone."

"I don't mean to sound skeptical, Bubba Bob," I said, "but I don't know any women who would get within a mile of a man who's standing in the middle of the beach yelling 'Yip-yip-yip yeow!' into a Mr. Microphone."

"That's too bad," Bubba Bob said. "You don't know what you're missin'."

"Nice talking to you, Bubba Bob," I said and hung up.

PEARCE-HUTCHENS

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Pearce of Waxahachie announce the engagement of their daughter, Trudy Rene, to Landon Ray Hutchens II, son of Landon Hutchens of Norfolk, Va., and Linda Burdine of Arlington. The wedding is planned for 2 p.m. Nov. 24 at Wheatland United Methodist Church in Dallas.

Miss Pearce, the granddaughter of Serena Pearce of Midland, attended Midland Christian and Greenwood Schools. She graduated from Red Oak High School in Red Oak in 1987 and attended Dallas Baptist University on a Presidential Scholarship. She attended the University of Maryland and is attending George Washington University. She is a policy analyst and directs the internship program at Citizens for a Sound Economy in Washington, D.C. Her fiance, grandson of Bea and Jay Grudzien of Euless and Erlene Higginbotham of Plano, graduated cum laude from Dallas Baptist University with degrees in theology and history. He served with the Commerce Department during the Reagan administration and is employed with the Development Office of George Washington University while he is in graduate school.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle sections of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographes will be published only for winners, not runner-ups. These announcements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Thank You

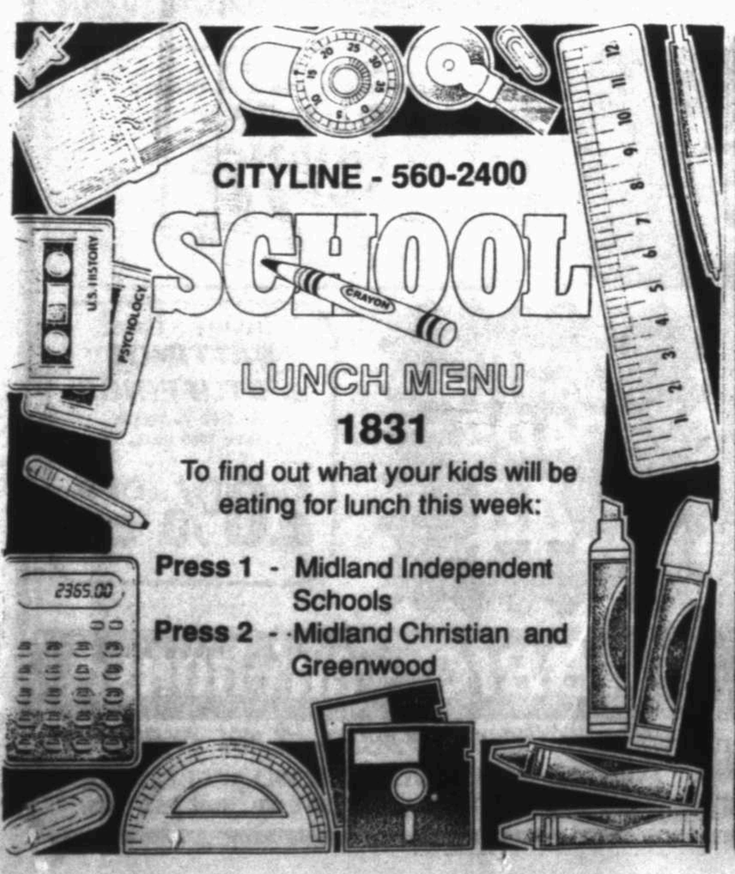

We are grateful for the love and support of all our many friends during the illness and death of our daughter, Frances Rhodes Graham. We thank you for the memorials in her memory. You were there when I (Fi ji) was in the hospital. The visits, cards and food brought after we returned home were appreciated so much.

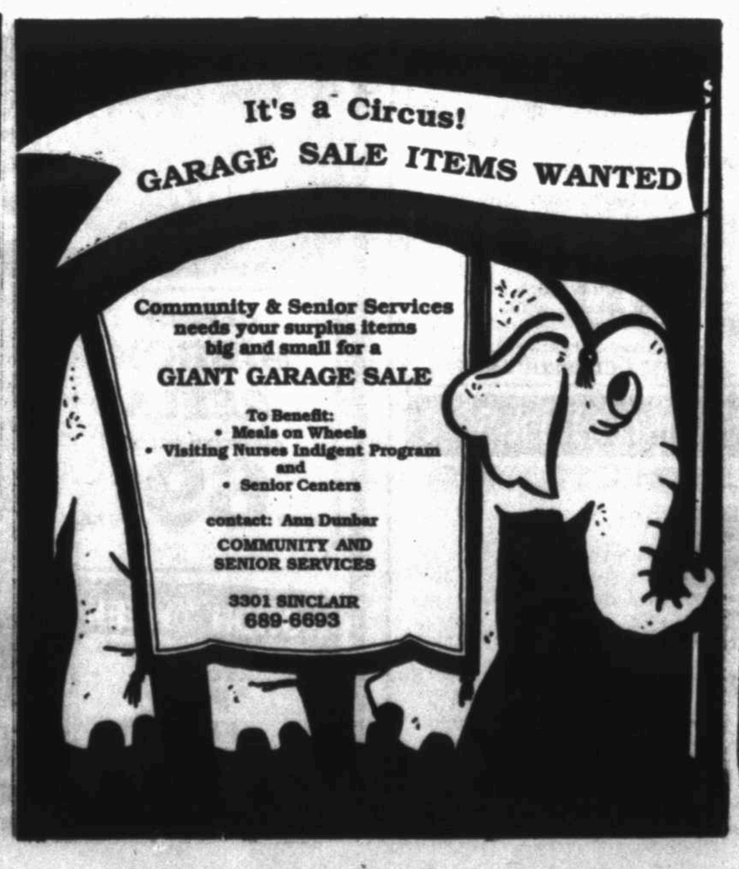

You seem to always be there when we need you.

Most of all, we thank you for your prayers that helped us through these difficult times.

May God be with you each and everyone.

Widows know pain of 'one left behind'

By Carol Lawson
N.Y. Times News Service

Home is the two top floors of a condominium apartment building in Manhattan, near Central Park, which were demolished and rebuilt over the past year as a French palace.

It is a work in progress: a butler in a white jacket serves soft drinks in crystal goblets as workers on tall ladders adjust the wiring for a chandelier in the rotunda.

Rooms are filled with gilded French furniture, crystal sconces, heavy silken fabrics, towering Greek columns and hand-painted murals.

It has all been planned "so you shouldn't think you're in America," says its owner, Joan Rivers.

But the minute she begins talking about her life during the past three years, the far-fetched trappings of celebrity and fortune fade away.

As she speaks about life on her own without her husband of 23 years, Edgar Rosenberg, Ms. Rivers sounds like widows everywhere who are groping for a way to go forward despite what nearly all agree is the most painful, wrenching and self-defeating experience they have ever faced.

EVEN THOUGH she did not become a widow under typical circumstances — her husband committed suicide — Ms. Rivers' description of her passage through grief is not all that different from that of other women whose husbands have died.

"You don't ever get over the loss of your husband; you survive it," said Ms. Rivers, who is Mrs. Rosenberg to her household staff. "I was 52 years old and had to totally start a new existence."

At first, she said, she turned to close friends and a psychologist for help. "But nobody can really help you," she said, her brash speaking voice toned down to a soft, serious level. "You have to help yourself. This is a solo trip."

Few married women will escape widowhood. There are 11.5 million widows in the United States, and projections from census data suggest that nearly 80 percent of all married women can expect to be widowed, and that they will survive their husbands by about 16 years.

Underlying those projections are two trends: women live longer than men, seven years on average, and men tend to marry women younger than themselves.

Ms. Rivers and other widows who have written new books on the subject all describe life as a black pit immediately after their husbands died.

PHILOMENE GATES writes in "Suddenly Alone: A Woman's Guide to Widowhood" (Harper & Row, $18.95) that she "wanted to die too." She was married for 38 years to Samuel E. Gates, an lawyer who died of a heart attack in 1979.

Mrs. Gates, herself a lawyer in New York, goes on to write that she "felt vulnerable, unattractive, unloved and hideously alone," and that "the first few months of widowhood almost flattened me."

"I felt my life was over. There was no future," said Xenia Rose, whose husband the cellist Leonard Rose, died of leukemia in 1984. They had been married 20 years.

"It was the worst thing that ever happened to me," added Mrs. Rose, a psychotherapist in New York. Her account of her experience, "Widow's Journey: a Return to the Loving Self," will be published in October by Henry Holt ($19.95).

Ms. Rivers described herself as virtually starting over from scratch.

Her husband was found dead from an overdose of prescription drugs in a Philadelphia hotel room on Aug. 14, 1987.

His death came three months after Ms. Rivers was dismissed by the Fox Broadcasting Co. from "The Late Show," a ratings failure that was an attempt to topple Johnny Carson.

HER HUSBAND HAD managed her business affairs and was the show's executive producer.

"I was totally unstrung, totally fragmented," Ms. Rivers said. "I had no career. No husband. Nothing."

"I didn't know how to turn on the outside lights or where the burglar alarm was," she said. "Edgar did everything, so I could concentrate totally on my child and my career. I didn't even know the name of my bank."

At the same time, she said, she was dealing with other issues typical of early widowhood: anger toward her husband, loss of self-esteem, friends' expectations of how she should and should not behave, rejection by married friends who felt uncomfortable socializing with a single woman, and worries about finances.

She wanted to go back to work, but the combination of her talk-show failure and the circumstances of her husband's death made her unemployable.

"Nobody wants to see someone whose husband has killed himself do comedy four weeks later," she said.

Some widows say that initially, they are so exhausted by grief that they can hardly get out of bed in the morning. "Putting on my makeup, deciding what to wear, thinking of what I had to do — it all took as much energy as climbing Mount Everest," Mrs. Gates writes.

Ms. Rivers had a very different reaction. Unable to work, she funneled her energy into frenetic travel.

"I went all over," she said. "To Dallas for a party, the South of France for a weekend. It was better to be in the air for 14 hours than sitting at home."

LIKE MANY WOMEN, she has never liked being called a widow. "It is a terrible word," Ms. Rivers said. "The connotation is a lady in a long black dress who has retired from the world. And then, when you start to go out, and you laugh in a restaurant, people look at you as the Merry Widow. That's even worse."

"Part of the healing process," she added, "is that you can laugh at something, even the next day, and then you start to cry again. There are terrible highs and terrible lows."

For every widow, recovery follows an individual path. "There are no rules for getting through this," said Mrs. Rose, who has remarried. "I expected to feel 100 percent better a year after Leonard died. I felt worse."

Mrs. Rose, who encourages widows to join support groups, said many women feel so much pressure to recover by the end of a year that "they think they are weird if they don't."

Laurie Graham, the author of "Rebuilding the House: One Woman's Passage Through Grief" (Viking, $17.95), said it was "at least a year before I felt tentatively hopeful, but I still had terrible episodes of sadness."

MS. GRAHAM, a former editor at Scribner's, was married for eight years to George Shieffelin, a retired chairman of Scribner's, who died of a heart attack in 1988.

"I was not ready to meet new people until two years after George died," she said.

Ms. Rivers, who has resurrected an "ice cold" career and is writing a book about her life, said she was "very proud" of what she had done on her own. "My life now is very busy, very full and terribly lonely," she said.

She came close to remarrying about a year after her husband died. "I was so desperate, so left out," she said. Now she sees someone on a "semi-regular" basis, she said, but has no plans to marry.

Mrs. Gates has rebuilt what she called "a co-ed life." Although she said she still thinks of her husband "40 times a day," she has worked hard to establish friendships with single men whom she can call to accompany her to parties and dances.

"I like men," she said, "and I have made the most enormous effort not to have a circle of friends who are all widows."

Ms. Rivers said she was now in "the final phase of widowhood: you have adjusted, you are able to go on but you do not forget your husband."

"I miss the person you can say everything to," she said, her eyes welling tears. "I miss having a history with somebody. I miss getting into a car after a party and saying, 'Could you believe that?' I miss the friend, the buddy who is really in your corner. There is no one to say: 'I'm going downstairs. Do you want a sandwich?' Those are the things of widowhood that are just killers, even now."

She took a deep breath. "He's not going to come back, so you have to get your life going again. You must get to it, and don't wallow. A life can be made. It can even be terrific. But it's never going to be the same."

Single farmers on tractor parade Tokyo to lure brides

N.Y. Times News Service

UGO, Japan — Three single men from a farming village within this northern Japanese town came to the big city last month, parading with a tractor in hopes of luring prospective brides.

But two weeks later, the 74 young men of Tashiro are still waiting for a call from the women of Tokyo.

"Marry me and come to my place" and "Challenge of male farmers" read the banners on the tractor as the farmers' representatives marched through the busy, glitzy streets of Tokyo's Ginza and Shinjuku districts.

The farmers from the Tashiro district of Ugo in Akita Prefecture drove their tractor about 700 kilometers (434 miles) in five days to reach Tokyo, where they held demonstrations in which they lamented the shortage of women willing to marry farmers.

The three men belong to a group of Tashiro farmers formed three years ago with an aim to revitalize the village. Shigeru Abe, 30, Hiroshi Motegi, 29, and Katsumoto Shibata, 36, who took part in the tractor parade, all said they weren't thrilled with the idea at the beginning.

"On the way we visited other farming villages and realized that many farmers are facing similar problems," one of them said. "We have always wanted to get married, but up until now we haven't taken any determined action."

The Tashiro district, with a population of about 2,600, is a rice-farming village in a mountain pass about 12 kilometers (7.4 miles) from the center of the town of Ugo. In the winter the rice paddies are covered with 1.5 meters (5 feet) of snow, sending many farmers seeking seasonal work in distant, urban areas.

According to town officials, 74 of the 220 men in their 30s living in the district are single. But there are only four single women of the same age bracket in town.

The demonstration in Tokyo was the third the group has held since 1988, when the move started following a failed attempt to introduce five single men from the group to women in Tokyo as prospective marriage partners.

Only one woman showed up at the meeting arranged by the marriage consultation office of the Nihon Seinen-kan, a wedding hall in Tokyo.

The men, who felt they were being discriminated against because they were farmers, decided to show their determination by doing something to astonish urban women, and the tractor march to Tokyo was born.

The media reported the first event and about 100 women responded to the call. It led to the marriage of four couples.

The move spread last year and 53 farmers from 11 prefectures took part in a procession of 20 tractors in Tokyo. Another four couples, this time all from villages outside Ugo, became husband and wife.

The reactions of the villagers are divided. Some support the attempt while others say it's a disgrace to publicize that no one wants to marry farmers anymore.

"Despite the many responses from women to the call the first time, the reaction of the men was not as enthusiastic," said Tsuyoshi Abe, who organized the last two marches. "The real purpose of the demonstration is to rouse shy, single men who often back off from women when the opportunity presents itself."

"If the men really want to get married, they must voice their real intention," said Yoko Itamoto, director of the marriage consultation office of Nihon Seinen-kan. "If they throw a stone, ripples will spread across the water. I believe the move served its purpose of calling women's attention to agricultural communities. Now, it's up to the men to respond and create a new image for farming villages."

Study shows men who marry live longer

By Barbara DeWitt
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Get married and live longer.

A wife may drive you crazy, drive you to the poor house and drive you to the hospital when you have a coronary, but her very presence will double your life expectancy if you are between the ages of 45 and 64 and still single.

Yup, that's the outcome of a recent study at the University of California, San Francisco, that involved 7,651 American adults to see if there was a link between living arrangements and survival. Smoking, drinking, junk food and other nasty habits were taken into consideration, too, but marriage was the lifesaver in spite of them all.

So, how do you find a wife? There's a hot-off-the-press publication called L.A. Attractions that's the first singles guide and coupon book in the country, claims its publisher, Marci Kass, of Santa Monica, Calif.

The book has clubs to join, charities to work for, places to meet eligible people and lots of coupons for theaters and restaurants. If you can't find it at local book stores, call Kass at (213) 280-3300. The price is $21.50.

If you're still mateless, lay off the doughnuts and beer. Your days are numbered.

Bewitching SUPERSTITIONS

■ A black cat crossing your path is bad luck. ■ Walking under a ladder is bad luck. ■ Killing a spider will bring you bad luck. ■ A horseshoe is good luck; it will keep the Devil away.

Superstitions.

We all grew up with them. They are a part of our language and part of our childhood. We learned them from our parents and our playmates. Some superstitions are so deeply embedded into our daily routines that we don't even consider what we do to be a superstition. They are simply things that have become habit without a consideration as to where they came from or why we practice them.

But how did these superstitions begin and what is the reason for them?

Many people believe the earliest superstitions grew out of pagan religions. Primitive man believed in the worship of the sun and moon, and viewed these heavenly bodies with great fear and respect. It was believed both had the power to change human affairs, according to "Superstitions? Here's Why!" by Julie Forsyth Batchelor and Claudia de Lys.

Our ancestors questioned why things happened. Each event was a mystery to be to solved. Their belief that inanimate objects as well as humans had both good and evil powers led them to a "reason" for everything that happened.

Remedies for the evil happenings varied according to the superstition. Many remedies had to do with spitting once it happened. This belief may have come from early man's realization that he was able to change the nature of food in the mouth, therefore he must have "magical" powers; therefore, saliva might be a protection against evil, and that it might dissolve bad luck.

MOST SUPERSTITIONS had mystical, magical connotations and were based on ignorance and fear, so thoughts of superstitions seem to be a little more in the forefront during the mystical, magical season of Halloween.

For instance, black cats are used as a symbol for this time of year. Because there are numerous superstitions about the color black and about cats, the very thought of a black cat causes some people to shiver.

Black is the color of night, "when life-giving sun has withdrawn its presence," according to Webb Garrison in "How it All Started," and also is often associated with evil forces.

The cat — considered the most mysterious of domestic animals — was believed to be able to see in the dark, and because of its agility was reasoned to have nine lives.

Therefore, a black cat was a combination of the evils of black and the mysteries of the cat, which made it an evil force to reckon with. In fact, superstition says that a black cat crossing your path is a sign of crisis or tragedy.

This belief, according to Batchelor and de Lys, goes back to the Middle Ages when it was thought that a black cat was the companion or mascot of a group of witches, and that it changed into a witch or Satan after seven years of service. Another medieval lore was that Satan liked to assume the form of a black cat at any time.

Because of this strong belief that cats were demonic, black cats were never kept around a household, and kittens whose markings indicated they were potentially "evil" were often killed, according to Garrison. This meant that people could go for months without seeing a black cat; when they did, the cat's appearance was taken as an omen of bad luck.

"Those ancestors of ours were amazed at many things about these animals. The gleam of their eyes at night suggested a magic light within. People didn't know of course, that cats' eyes can't give off light by themselves, but can only pick up light rays and reflect them," wrote Batchelor and de Lys.

ANOTHER MYSTERY of the cat was the sparks that sometimes came from its back when stroked. In medieval times, the people were sure it was fire.

One superstition with no truth at all is that cats perch on the chests of sleeping babies and elderly people and suffocate them by sucking their breath. This may have come from the fact that cats like to snuggle up to the warmth of human beings. Perhaps in doing so, a cat may accidentally have suffocated a baby. The idea of sucking the breath probably came from witchcraft days when the cat was thought to be an evil spirit.

The cat's ability to almost always land on its feet astonished the ancients. This is easily explained now, of course, because it has a very flexible spine and every part of its supple body works perfectly together to help it land on its shock-absorbing feet.

The Egyptians who worshiped the cat decided it lived more than once, probably since it was able to survive many dangerous falls. They associated the cat with the Trinity, their sacred symbol of "Mother, Father and Son." Three times three, or nine, was the highest expression of honor which they could grant, so today, we have the popular saying, "A cat has nine lives."

It's the black cat's link with witches and the Devil that makes it a popular symbol of Halloween, "the night when witches and evil spirits ride."

SUPERSTITIONS: Myths become embedded in everyday life

(From 1F)

Scarecrows also are used as symbols of Halloween, but the question remains: "Do scarecrows really scare crows?" Actually, the scarecrow derived from the superstition that placing a cross-symbol in the cornfields would protect the crop. The cross was made of two poles fastened together in the form of a cross, considered to be one of the most powerful charms against evil spirits. Clothes were hung on these crosses in order to disguise them, according to Batchelor and de Lys.

Another theory is that the Greek god of fertility, Dionysus, was so potent that even the crudest representation of his image would cause fields to bear bigger crops. Therefore, farmers of that time would erect a little mannikins, or what are now considered scarecrows, symbolizing Dionysus.

Today, we know there's nothing supernatural about a scarecrow, and most farmers agree that the presence of a scarecrow does not scare away the crows. Dr. Ralph Bienfang, an authority on odors, said it's the human scent on the clothing that keeps the birds away initially. But as time and weather conditions take away the human odors, they also take the "scare" out of the scarecrow.

HALLOWEEN ALSO brings thoughts of witches and magic. These witches were created by our ancestors as part of the pagan religions of mankind. They were the "reasons" for illnesses, death and all the terrible things that happened.

Witches were imagined as women who had a friendly pact with the Devil and did his bidding, according to Batchelor and de Lys. Men who made pacts with the Devil were called sorcerers or wizards. They all were believed to have supernatural powers in making "black magic," the writers said.

Superstitions about witches included such things as they traveled by broomstick, they cast their spells at night, and they caused crops to be bad and crows to be sick, and were the reasons babies died.

Superstition also said a witch could change forms, so she would often chose to be a cat, rabbit or pig, but she could also become a person, and this could be considered the most tragic of the beliefs. Through the centuries, thousands of innocent people were burned or hanged because they were believed to be witches.

Other goblins and gremlins, known by various names in different cultures, were used as the "reasons" for bad things that happen as well.

LADDERS ARE another form that conjures up myths and superstitions.

Walking under a ladder has long been considered bad luck. Some cultures believed that walking under a ladder would bring a disaster to your life. Others believed that a leaning ladder formed a triangle with the wall and floor, a symbol of life or of the Holy Trinity. Anyone walking through this Sacred Triangle would be punished by spirits unless countercharms were used.

In some Asiatic countries, criminals were hung by the seventh rung of a ladder propped against a tree. Because death was considered contagious, people were forbidden from walking under a ladder for fear a wandering ghost would be there and the person would "catch death" from it.

So, if forced to walk under a ladder, there are three ways to save your luck: stop long enough to make a wish, quickly cross your fingers or make the "fig" sign, according to Batchelor and de Lys. Making a fig sign is done by making a fist and thrusting the thumb between the index and middle finger. Any one of these three acts was believed to save you from disaster.

In reality, we know that walking under a ladder is dangerous because it might fall, but it is considered more of a caution than a superstition.

THE HORSESHOE is one symbol known for bringing good luck. According to old stories, the blacksmith saint, St. Dunstan, was approached by a man who lifted one of his feet that asked for service. The man was the Devil, and the saint (pretending to be obedient) tied the Devil to the wall before shoeing his cloven hoof, according to Garrison. The job was so painful, the Devil roared for mercy, but was only released after promising never to enter a place where he saw a horseshoe displayed.

Horseshoes also were considered lucky because they were made of iron, the metal that people believed protected one from the witches.

Part of the horseshoe's luck-bringing qualities were believed to be because it was cresent-shaped, a shape believed to be powerful and protective. Many arched doorways were built with that notion.

According to Batchelor and de Lys, it makes no difference which way the horseshoe is hung. If the horseshoe is hung with the prongs up, the Devil is sucked in and destroyed if he gets too near; when the prongs go down, the magic in the horseshoe pours out and keeps him from crossing the threshold.

AND THESE myths are just the beginnings of the superstitions that haunt everyday life. A few others that have become embedded into everyday life include:

- Give a knife as a present, but make sure the giver pays you a penny or your friendship will cut in two.
- If a child plays with fire, he will wet the bed at night.
- A new penny brings good luck.

Today's children show serious signs of stress, anger

By Cecelia Goodnow
Hearst News Service

SEATTLE — Maidi Nickele doesn't need an expert to tell her today's kids are stressed. She sees it every day in her first-grade classroom where, she says, about a third of her students show signs of serious, family-related stress.

"Some of them can become very emotionally detached," Nickele said. "It's almost like they're not there. I'll talk to them and they just look right through you. Other kids at times may become very excessively angry about things that are minor.

"Sometimes it comes out in their art," she added. "I'll ask them to draw a picture. One little boy the other day said, 'That's my mother and she's whopping me.' "

Although the Seattle teacher believes her class has an unusually high incidence of stress, studies indicate similar problems are plaguing children nationwide. Studies by the National Institute of Mental Health and the Institute of Medicine, found that 35 percent of American children suffer stress-related problems by age 14.

A 1989 survey in Kansas of more than 4,000 kindergarten through third-grade pupils showed that 42 percent had stress-related behaviors such as headaches, sleep disorders, nail biting, academic worries, stomachaches and short tempers. Researchers speculated that stress is even more prevalent in fast-paced urban areas of the country.

ALTHOUGH LIFE HAS always been difficult at times, therapists say today's children have less family support in handling their problems.

"As long as they're out of the way and quiet, we assume they're OK," said Seattle therapist Maria Pertik, who with co-author Sandra Senter has written what is believed to be the first stress management workbook for children.

"Stress Management and Me: Participation Activities to Brighten Each Student's Day" ($6.95, Incentive Publications) has 47 exercises for children in second through fifth grades.

The good news is that more teachers and therapists are recognizing that children need help in managing these problems.

"It's a real phenomenon and it can be treated," said Bill Womack, co-director of the Stress Management Clinic at Children's Hospital and Medical Center, which sees up to 120 children a year — twice as many as when it opened 10 years ago.

Stress management often includes relaxation exercises, cognitive therapy and biofeedback, a technique to regulate muscle tension and blood flow.

"Most kids that are seen with behavioral disorders are in fact reacting to stress, and that stress is coming from dysfunctional families," said Judith Green, a Colorado therapist who helped pioneer biofeedback therapy. "It's shocking, and the school system doesn't really look to that."

Drug abuse, parental neglect, racism, poverty, divorce and the everyday pressures on working parents contribute to the problem.

But stress also can hinge on the child's temperament and stage of development, as well as overly high expectations by fast-lane parents.

Pertik used biofeedback to treat an 8-year-old girl who had excruciating migraine headaches almost daily as a result of her obsession over academic and athletic achievement.

"She was never good enough in her own mind," Pertik said, adding that the girl's father, a corporate executive, was the model for her perfectionist behavior.

The girl learned to overcome her headaches by using a computer game designed to measure biofeedback with numerical readouts on the screen to help her gauge her progress.

TO MAKE IT MORE fun, cartoon bats flew wildly around the screen when she was tense and her blood vessels were constricted. In a few weeks the girl was able to slow down her nerve impulses and increase her blood flow enough to "win" the game by trapping the cartoon bats in a box.

Biofeedback is most effective when combined with cognitive therapy, an approach that helps children reason through their problems. They learn to view their daily stresses in a different light and devise strategies to overcome them.

But the best approach is prevention.

"A therapist can do a lot ... (but) I don't think private therapy is the solution. It has to start with families. And schools can do a whole lot."

Green and Womack agreed that early intervention can help stressed-out children avoid more serious psychological disorders that have contributed to a teen suicide rate that has almost tripled since 1960.

Children may not be able to avoid life's valleys, the therapists say, but at least they can learn to survive as resilient adults.

Airline travelers want better security

NEW YORK (AP) — Travelers would be willing to pay extra for better security on airline flights, according to a survey conducted by a travel newsletter.

The publication, Travel Smart, asked readers if they would be willing to arrive at the airport early and-or pay extra for such security measures as pre-flight interviews and exhaustive luggage searches.

Ninety-five percent of those responding said they would arrive two hours early for flights, with 33 percent adding they would arrive even three hours earlier for international flights.

Practitioners claim witches misunderstood

By Julie Bonnin
N.Y. Times News Service

Anyone with a pointy hat, ghoulish makeup and a broom can call herself a witch at Halloween. But witchcraft isn't limited to costume party imitations or a single time of year, practitioners say.

Not all witches are "old ugly hags who eat rats and take babies and consort with the devil," said Susan Kaczmarczik, a pleasant-voiced telephone receptionist, who practices witchcraft.

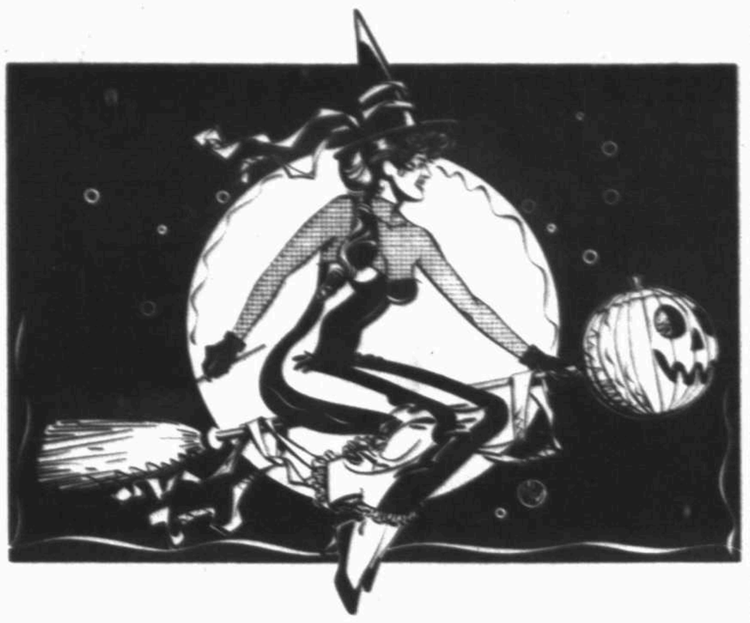

"The person who sits across from you at the office may be a witch," she said. "The person who takes care of your child at the doctor's office may be a witch — and that's nothing to be afraid of."

But afraid we are. In Austin, the school district recently banned witches and devils in school Halloween decorations.

"That's one of the reasons we're coming out of the broom closet, as it were," said Lynn Burson, high priestess of an Austin coven and an instructor at the University of Texas.

"We're not asking anybody to believe what we believe. We're just asking to not be harassed," said Burson, who has been studying her craft for 20 years.

THE HARASSMENT often comes from people who mistakenly connect witchcraft, also called "Wicca," with Satanism, the witches say.

The devil doesn't exist in their belief system, which centers around the worship of a goddess and god who are manifested in all aspects of nature, Burson said. To Wiccans, the Earth, its atmosphere and creatures are considered sacred.

"Yes we're witches, we're pagans, but we're also law-abiding citizens," Kaczmarczik said.

"But because of that fear and ignorance, it's a very big deal for me to even be talking to you. Frankly, I'm a little nervous. ... I hope the day will come when I can say I am a witch and not have to duck."

Until then, many witches meet semi-secretly in Austin homes. One recent night, Kaczmarczik, Burson and Lila Harman stood before an altar Burson has created in one room of her home.

The women, who typically worship "skyclad," or naked, wore long robes. Bells jingled softly as Harman walked about the room, a double-edged knife hanging from a cord wrapped around her waist.

Incense, candles, deer antlers representing a horned god and a sculpture of a female form representing a goddess were gathered about an altar.

So are the classic Halloween symbols of witchcraft — a broom and a small cauldron.

But instead of chanting "Double, double, toil and trouble," and flying off on the broomstick, the broom was used in an opening ceremony designed to sweep away "all worldly cares and concerns."

The witches' Wiccan rituals also include elements of Japanese, African, Celtic and Native American religions. Male and female witches go through a 13-week initiation class in Burson's coven. First, second and third degrees can be earned by further study of topics that include psychology, mythology and dance.

"There's a lot to learn," said Harman, who is studying for a third degree, which will allow her to be a high priestess. "It's something we work at every day."

SO IS WORKING magic, another integral part of witchcraft that the witches say is harmless and not nearly as mysterious as it seems.

"Most of magic is positive visualization," Burson said. "We start with affirmations. Anybody can do that."

Neither are the witches totally reliant on magic for worldly goods.

"Magic is a practical thing," Kaczmarczik said. "If you're looking for a job, yes you do your incantation, but you follow that up by sending out resumes, going to interviews."

And magic is not to be used for evil or unkind purposes, the witches say. They operate on an honor system, reinforced by a belief that "what you sow will return to you three times."

Their own Halloween celebrations will be more somber and serious than the costume parties and trick-or-treating typical of more mainstream America.

"To us, Halloween is the holiest time of the year," Kaczmarczik said. The Celtic new year called "Samhain" is a time to "remember those who died, think about the year coming to its close. It is a time for reflection, a very powerful and quiet time," she said.

"The things that people are afraid of don't have anything to do with the reality of witchcraft," Kaczmarczik said. "There's no need to lock your children up.

"Witches listen to Mozart and watch Bill Cosby. We're just regular people."

Tips list do's, don'ts for mailing foods

By Carrie White
N.Y. Times News Service

Whether sending a food care package acro.s town or around the world, there are some do's and don'ts that apply to the U.S. Postal Service and other commercial mail services, such as Federal Express and United Parcel Service.

When it comes to the government service, Nancy Hertel, communications manager for the Phoenix post office, said the most expedient way to send food is by express mail.

For most locations in the U.S., this will mean your package will be delivered the next day. An example of cost is $8.75 for eight ounces and $12 for two pounds.

Food can also be sent first class or priority mail; the classification depends on how much the item weighs.

First class applies to packages that are 11 ounces or less, while parcels 11 ounces to 70 pounds are classified priority. Parcels sent with this rating take two days to reach most destinations or three days to rural addresses. The cost is $2.40 for packages less than two pounds. With parcels weighing more than that, the rate will depend on where it is going.

When sending mail overseas — say to Europe — each country has its own rate structure, Hertel said. The package will take longer, though, to get to its destination largely because of customs.

SO IN TERMS of perishable items, it's advisable to stay away from them. If sending food, you might want to consider vacuum-packed items or hard candy and gum.

"We've received an awful lot of inquiries on sending care packages to Desert Shield," Hertel said. Because that mail is sent to a New York address and then forwarded on via the military, domestic priority mail rates apply.

For people interested in sending care packages to Army, Air Force and Marine Corps ground troops participating in Operation Desert Shield, the address is Any Service Member, Operation Desert Shield, APO, New York, NY 09848-0006.

Packages to Navy and Marine Corps personnel on ships should be sent to Any Service Member, Operation Desert Shield, FPO, New York, NY 09866-0006.

Food items are not among those recommended for inclusion in care packages. Recreational items — stationery, books, magazines, cassettes, even footballs — are preferred items. If sending food, a good test of its ability to withstand extreme temperatures is whether the item could last two days in the back window of a car. Pork items or pork byproducts are not permitted.

First-class or priority mail sent to Desert Shield takes five to 10 days to arrive. For Christmas parcels going to Desert Shield, they should be sent by Nov. 16.

For both domestic and international parcels, Hertel said items should be packaged in sturdy cartons with cushioning such as Styrofoam popcorn or shredded newspaper to protect it.

PACKAGES SHOULD not be sealed using any kind of wrap, cord or string, cellophane or masking tape. The delivery address should only be written on the parcel once. Inside, include your name and address as well as that of the recipient.

Unlike Federal Express, the U.S. Postal Service and UPS do not insure food.

The services also differ on how food items should be marked. The U.S. Postal Service does not require that food be marked as such, while Federal Express does.

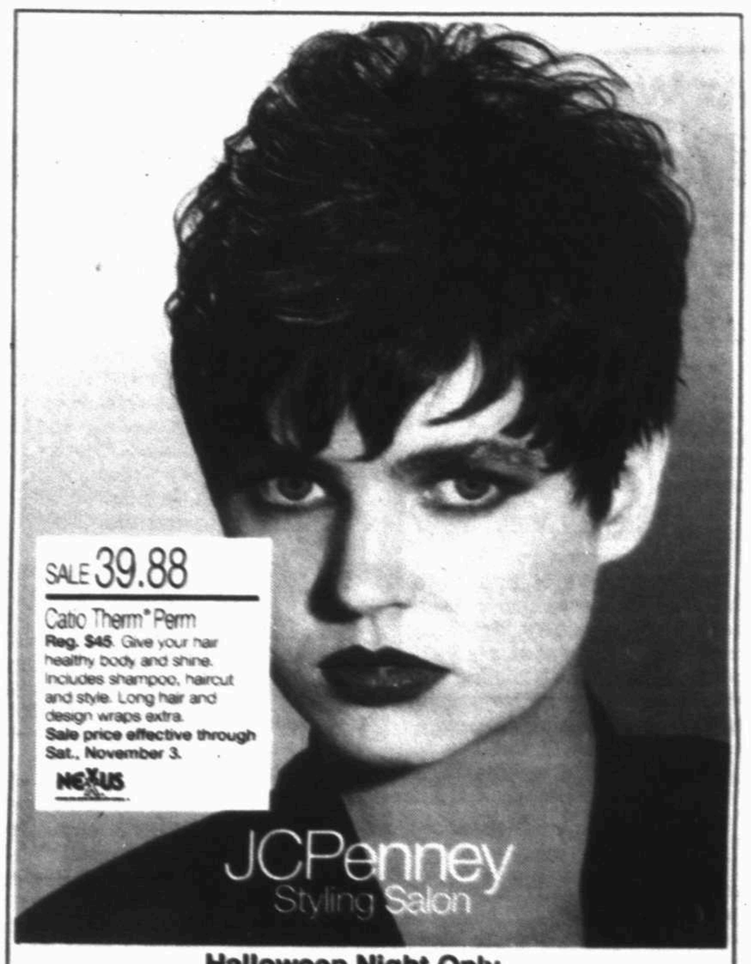

While UPS does not allow food to be sent internationally, it does allow it domestically, and food items need not be marked.

Nancy Wyatt, a customer service representative for Federal Express, reminded people that when mailing food — either domestically or internationally — vans and planes are not heated or refrigerated. Dry ice, however, can be used in packaging. (The company also has a packaging hot line that customers can ask for when calling any Federal Express number.)

With Federal Express' priority service, packages are delivered the next day with a few exceptions. In those cases, such as with Hawaii, packages are delivered by noon in two days.

The cost for priority service is based on dimensional weight. A 12⅛x13x2-inch box weighing one pound costs $22.50. The costs for additional weight for that same box are as follows: two pounds, $24.25; three pounds, $27; four pounds, $29.75; and five pounds, $32.50. Those rates reflect domestic mailings.

Wyatt recommended if an item is extremely perishable to call the Federal Express number and find out where the nearest drop spot is for the latest time.

DEAR ABBY

'Adopt' a unit, bring good cheer to servicemen far from home

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to ask you and your readers to mobilize for the most important Operation Dear Abby/America Remembers Campaign ever. Our servicemen and women in Saudi Arabia and at sea in the Persian Gulf need visible support from their countrymen.

Van Buren

We are asking schools, service groups, business clubs, towns and cities to once again step forward and declare their support for our troops by "adopting " units and ships serving in the Persian Gulf during the approaching holidays. With the help of the armed services, we have arranged for many of the units and ships to be available for "adoption" for Christmas and, if needed, for Valentine's Day as well.

When we launched the "Adopt a Unit" program last year, more than 4,500 schools and groups participated. The response was overwhelming! This year, a generous corporate company, Taco Bell, has offered its headquarters employees to process the mail to ensure an even smoother operation. In addition, they have provided office space and computers for this effort.

Imagine how proud the small towns across America will be knowing they are taking care of "their" troops overseas. Elementary schoolchildren could work on special class projects, and teenagers could also join in the operations. Imagine how thrilled the troops will be!

While our country is most concerned with supporting troops in the Persian Gulf, we cannot forget our service members stationed in Europe, Asia and the rest of the world. So, your readers are being asked to do even more than ever. I know they will come through, because as you have often said, Dear Abby readers are the best people in the world!

Thanks to you and your readers, our joint effort on behalf of the troops has brought incredible joy and love to hundreds of thousands of outstanding young men and women who proudly wear our nation's uniforms.

With deepest gratitude to you, your staff and your millions of readers for all your love and concern. — DONALD P. GRIMES, NATIONAL CHAIRMAN, 1990 AMERICA REMEMBERS CAMPAIGN

DEAR READERS: In the past, you have proven to be generous beyond belief, and I hope that this year you will again open your hearts to our servicemen and women who will be far from their families for the holidays.

Your cards, letters and goodies can be tremendous morale boosters to these dedicated young people. Some wonderful friendships have been formed — and some found romance, too!

Those individuals or groups interested in adopting a unit or ship, please send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: America Remembers/Operation Dear Abby, c/o Taco Bell Corp., 17901 Von Karmen, Irvine, Calif. 92713.

P.S. I'll publish specific addresses for servicemen and women before Thanksgiving.

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

AT WIT'S END

Ties that bind found in store's 'community' dressing room

By Erma Bombeck

Pessimists say there is no friendliness in the world anymore. They say we sit shoulder-to-shoulder in church without speaking. We share hospital rooms without so much as an introduction. We don't even know our neighbors' names.

Bombeck

The general feeling is that our sense of community has been lost. It's me for me and you for you.

Well, rejoice ye of little faith. There is one exception: a Loehmann's community dressing room. For reasons that are difficult to explain, this is the last bastion where desperate souls cling together in some kind of camaraderie reminiscent of the Titanic.

Standing around together in a house of mirrors, wearing only underwear and knee-hi's, we pull up short of singing "Nearer My God to Thee" before we all go down.

You're not going to believe this, but I don't have a happy feeling about undressing in a roomful of women I have never met before. My girlfriend says I overreact. "Do you honestly think people are bused in from Orange County just to see you crouch and whimper in a corner?"

The day I was there, however, I was convinced that all the other women in the dressing room were strippers. Why else would they be so relaxed walking around in their lingerie?

I was in a corner trying on a two-piece rose-colored dress. I did this by pulling the skirt up to the top, and then when I had the blouse on, dropping the skirt back to where it belonged. A woman in black hose and a slip stood two inches from me and stared. "Honey, there's a spot on the blouse." Another woman joined her. "It's also a little tight across the hips. I'll bet you need the next size." Yet another one said, "They have it in green, but that really isn't your color."

"You know what the problem is," said the first woman, "a two-piece cuts you in half. How tall are you?"

"I'm 5-2," I said.

"You look shorter," she said, then turning to the others in the dressing room, asked, "Doesn't she look shorter?" They all nodded.

A young blonde walked over to another woman and asked, "Are you going to take this?" The woman eyeballed the garment she had just removed and said she didn't think so. The woman tossed it at me. "This is more your style," she said. The dress was still warm.

"Get a different belt," shouted an elderly woman across the room. "That one makes it look cheap."

We had done more bonding in the last 15 minutes than I had done with my children at birth.

I hated the dress, but you can't let friends down. I bought it.

Plan party for Halloween

Children enjoy festive, seasonal chocolate cupcakes

NEW YORK (AP) — Halloween ghouls and goblins will howl with delight when they taste Witch's Hat Chocolate Cupcakes, a delicious, homemade chocolate treat.

These colorful, festive cupcakes are easy to prepare. A cone-shaped piece is cut from the center of each chocolate cupcake. The cupcake is filled with orange-flavored marshmallow creme. The cone is placed on top of the filling, pointed side up, making a witch's pointed hat. The recipe is provided by Hershey's Cocoa.

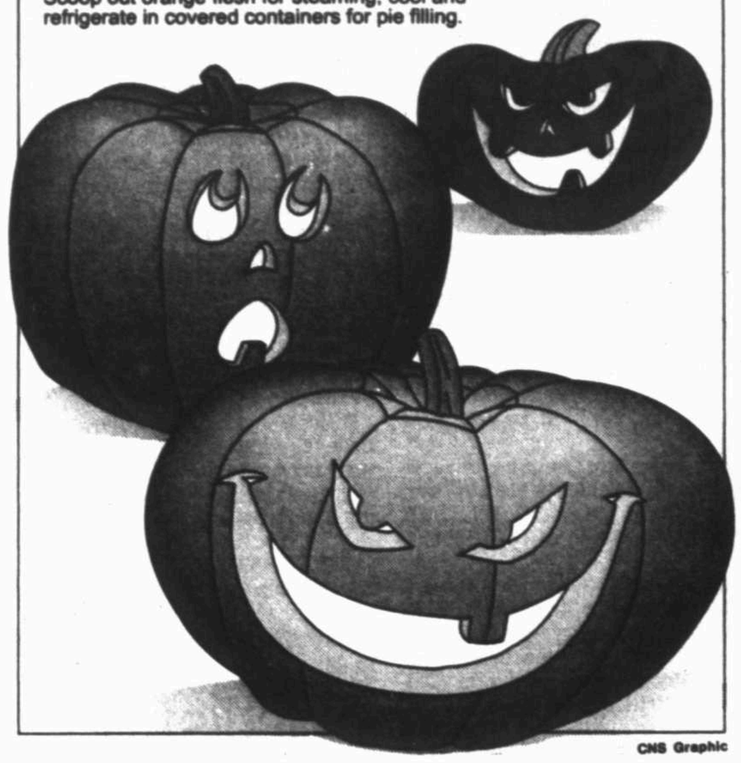

WITCH'S HAT CHOCOLATE CUPCAKES

¾ cup butter or margarine, softened
1⅔ cups sugar
3 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 cups all-purpose flour
⅔ cup cocoa
1¼ teaspoons baking soda
¼ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1⅓ cups water
Orange Cream Filling (recipe follows)

Heat oven to 350 degrees F. Paper-line 30 muffin cups (2½ inches in diameter). In large mixer bowl combine butter, sugar, eggs and vanilla; beat on high speed 3 minutes. Combine flour, cocoa, baking soda, baking powder and salt; add alternately with water to butter mixture. Blend just until combined. Pour batter into cups, filling each ⅔ full. Bake 20 to 25 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool completely. Meanwhile, prepare Orange Cream Filling. Cut 1½-inch cone-shaped piece from center of each cupcake; reserve. Fill cavity with scant tablespoon filling. Place reserved cake pieces on filling, pointed side up. Chill. Makes 2½ dozen cupcakes.

Jack-o'-lantern carving

- Begin project by spreading newspapers over kitchen table and assembling tools – large spoons, short knives, bowls in which to place seeds and flesh.
- Younger children can draw face on pumpkins for an adult to cut out – older children can do the carving themselves.
- Circle cut out of top of each pumpkin forms a lid, with stem supplying a handle.
- Remove seeds and loose fiber in center, saving seeds to roast. Scoop out orange flesh for steaming; cool and refrigerate in covered containers for pie filling.

ORANGE CREAM FILLING

⅓ cup butter or margarine
1 cup marshmallow creme
1¼ cups powdered sugar
½ to 1 teaspoon freshly grated orange peel
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
Red and yellow food color (optional)
2 to 3 teaspoons orange juice

In small mixer bowl beat butter; gradually beat in marshmallow creme. Add powdered sugar, orange peel and vanilla, beating until blended. Gradually add food color, if desired, and orange juice; beat to desired consistency. About 1⅓ cups filling.

Create edible centerpiece for Halloween entertaining

HARVEST PUMPKIN BALL

¼ cup water
1 teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
¼ teaspoon salt
1 pound vanilla caramels (about 64)
4 quarts popped pop corn
Shoestring licorice
Green gumdrops

Combine water, pumpkin pie spice and salt in the top of double boiler; mix well. Add caramels; melt over hot water, stirring often, until smooth. Pour mixture over popped corn in large bowl; toss until kernels are well coated.

With lightly buttered hands, form into pumpkin shape measuring about 8 inches in diameter at the bottom and about 4½ inches high at the center. Make 7 or 8 slight indentations from center to bottom to form a pumpkin "stem."

Arrange with a cornucopia of fresh red and green apples, grapes and nuts.

Copley News Service

Popcorn labeled "air-popped" isn't necessarily low in fat. Registered dietitian Karen Owens says one air-popped brand called Bachman's actually derives more than half its calories from corn oil. Some other brands contain cheese and are even higher in fat. Plain, unbuttered, air-popped popcorn has just 30 calories per cup and almost no fat.

TRAVEL

Follow Columbus to delightful St. Martin

By Tova Navarra
Copley News Service

Columbus discovered St. Martin on St. Martin's Day, 1493, on his second voyage to the West Indies. He was looking for spices, perfumes and gold.

Now French and Dutch nationals and paradise-seeking Americans, among others, come to this golden Leeward isle eager to exchange their currency for the duty-free splendors on sale — top European and American designer clothing and accessories, perfumes, jewelry, objets d'art. One native Californian who moved permanently to the island said the major occupation of St. Martiners is retailing.

On any beautiful day in Marigot, capital of the French side of the island, or Philipsburg, capital of the Dutch side, shoppers can gloat over the 20 percent to 40 percent discounts on their finery and recount to each other the triumphs of haggling prices with the merchants.

But no doubt they've also stopped to smell the blooms amid the verdancy indigenous to the Caribbean islands and to delight in watching a lizard or two dart through the succulents. Dressed more nattily than most native islanders, the tourists know who they are: They're the ones who've bought themselves time in St. Martin/St. Maarten — the northern part belongs to Guadeloupe, the southern part to the Netherlands Antilles — as an antidote to stress and the wolves at their mortgaged doors.

HERE, IN A weekend if need be, they can unskein their stressors and become water babies, water sportsmen, sybarites, sun bunnies and night revelers. Here, where weather reports never include the temperature (always in the low 80s), but simply "sunny" or "partly sunny." And an occasional, intense rain lasts about 10 minutes, as though the island took a fast swig for the sake of vegetation and put the bottle down for the sake of people.

The island's daily hospitality takes several forms. The sight of gray city buildings and congested suburbs back home gives way to egrets daintily poking among the greens. Peaceable cows enjoy a nocturnal munch on expensive hotel landscaping — this while you're taking an after-dinner stroll on the resort grounds.

St. Martiners (and residents of the neighboring Anguilla, St. Kitts, St. Barths, St. Eustacia, Saba and others), speak French, French patois, English, Dutch or Spanish, and some may even stop to listen to a few happy New Yorkers who have begun to croon under the stars.

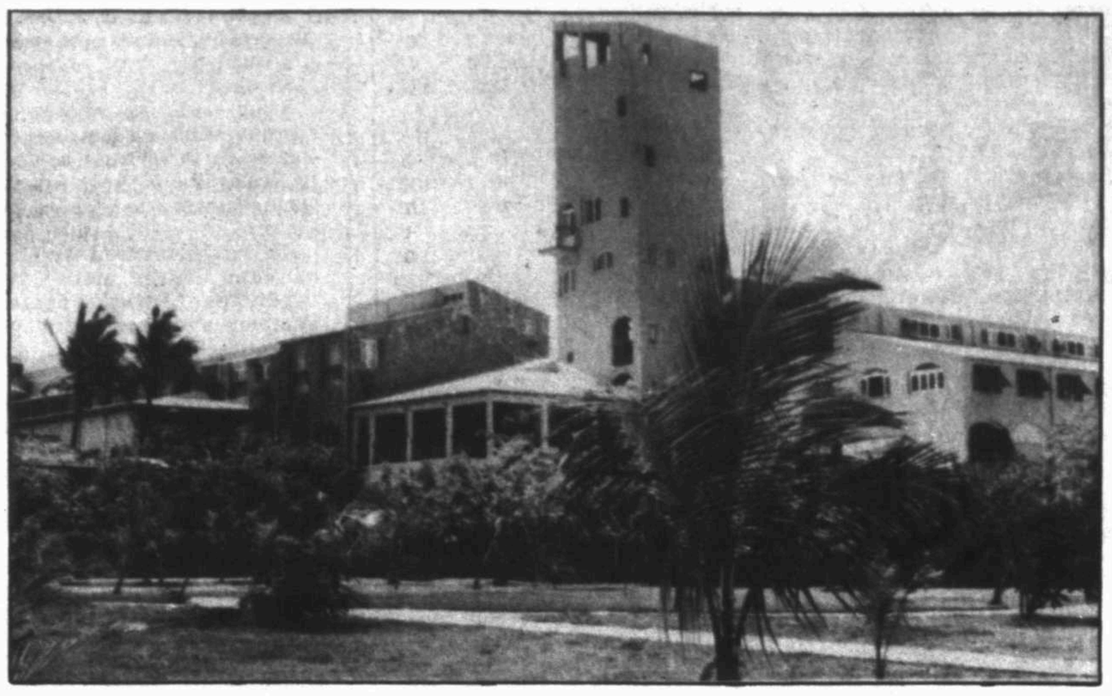

Generally, all's quiet — a necessity for clearing the cobwebs of the mind and rejuvenating the body as trips to an island are wont to do.

BUT AT THE casinos (only on the Dutch side) and discos, din and dancing prevail far into the night. And at the Saturday market in Marigot, Latin rhythms boom into your bones from a centrally parked van. Island women in curlers or big sun hats sit behind their displays of fruits and vegetables.

Save the fruit of the coral-colored guavaberry cocktail, which parallels the Hispanic islands' beloved pina colada, little agriculture thrives on St. Martin. Livestock also is meager, and mostly everything prepared by the gourmet French chefs comes from Miami.

Even with its imported wares, the market is a painting: This French tradition — you find Saturday markets in Paris and other regions of France, too — bursts into still lifes and portraits from all angles. The purchase of produce and some T-shirts seems secondary to the market's social aspect. And the boats motor or sail the bays of the Caribbean Sea, which creates a backdrop for the hustle-bustle and reminds you to relax, you're on an island.

In keeping with elements of tranquillity, the French and the Dutch have set up house side by side, and people are free to roam the entire island at will. Along narrow, winding roads through Rambaud (pronounced "Rambo") to Grand Case and along the tacit Dutch border, "cow-crossing" road signs draw a chuckle from city folk and les gendarmes couches — the many speed bumps affectionately known as "the sleeeping police" — prevent drivers from relaxing too much upon their accelerators.

The La Belle Creole resort in St. Martin is a replica of a French seaside resort where guests can relax and play in a historical setting.

THE RESORTS ARE designed for comfort and a subliminal historical interest, as in the case of La Belle Creole, built a few miles from Marigot as a replica of a French seaside village.

Relaxation can mean languishing at the pool or on the sand, improving your backhand at a state-of-the-art tennis court, enjoying all conceivable water sports or galloping along the beach on a horse.

At the hotel's restaurant, French grill and gourmet are both available, all foods delicately prepared and served in a soothing environment.

Like French Riviera beaches, other resorts of St. Martin cater to naturisme, such as Orient Beach for those who believe in tout nu, tout bronze ("all nude, all tan"). Many beaches are public domain, but no nudity is allowed on the Dutch side.

Aside from your bathing suit (or "birthday" suit) and sunscreen at seaside, St. Martin gently demands casual coverings for going into town and casual but elegant frocks for dining and evenings. Amusez-vous bien — have fun — essentially dictates the fashion, and the ceaseless trade winds make it more comfortable to be fully dressed.

Columbus must have praised the winds that filled the sails of his ship and propelled it toward the island. Had the adventurous Genoese signore of 1493 been a hotelier or restaurateur, he would have pegged the destination a tropical getaway from the first.

Annual event set

The third annual Christmas Jubilee shopping extravaganza will be Nov. 9-11 at Inn of the Mountain Gods in Ruidoso, N.M. The event will be sponsored by Ruidoso Valley Greeters. More than 40 local merchants will have clothing, jewelry, crafts, gifts and art available for sale.

Luxury hotels, children's fantasies and adult fun cover the 42 square miles that make up Disney's Magic Kingdom in Florida.

Disney designs another world filled with fantasy, adventure

By Jane Clifford
Copley News Service

The world according to Disney is 42 square miles of Florida swampland and orange groves transformed into a Magic Kingdom and more.

For starters, Disney has its own government and a totally self-supporting infrastructure, including firefighters and paramedics. More than 30,000 people are on the payroll — more than the population of many American towns — and every morning (hi-ho, hi-ho) it's off to work they go to hotels, theme parks, restaurants, golf courses, tennis courts, convention space, monorails, campgrounds and, well, you get the picture.

The Walt Disney World Resort (that's the official name) opened in 1971 with land holdings totaling a tidy 28,000 acres. Only about 7,000 have been developed. So far.

The centerpiece is the Magic Kingdom, 45 attractions on 100 acres. That's the extent of Southern California's Disneyland, but here it's just the beginning. And the rest is beyond mind-boggling.

EPCOT Center is an international showplace covering 260 acres, which opened in October 1982. Future World includes theme areas focusing on science and discovery. Major attractions feature the development of the Earth and its inhabitants through time (presented by large corporations): Universe of Energy (Exxon), Spaceship Earth (AT&T), Journey Into Imagination (Eastman Kodak), The Land (Kraft), Computer Central (Unisys), World of Motion (General Motors), The Living Seas (United Technologies), Horizons (General Electric) and Wonders of Life (Metropolitan Life).

WORLD SHOWCASE IS 11 nations in miniature, with food, shops, architecture and entertainment keyed to Canada, the United Kingdom, France, Japan, China, Mexico, Italy, Germany, Morocco, Norway and, of course, the United States.

Disney-MGM Studios (and theme park) are working studio facilities for TV and film production by the Disney Co. (movies, Disney Channel programs and more), plus a series of attractions for visitors, a la Hollywood. You can add sound to film, star in one of your favorite productions, ride through scenes of films and do a "screen test." All while you mingle with the Disney characters and the Muppets, and, of course, eat and shop.

Pleasure Island is six acres of Disney for grown-ups. There's a 10-screen theater, six nightclubs (where every night is New Year's Eve) and plenty of places to spend money.

River Country is a water park billed as the "best darn swimmin' hole this side of Huck Finn's wildest dreams." Rope swings, slippery slides and flumes (one 260 feet long) keep daredevils busy. A sandy beach, gigantic pool, nature trail and picnic tables are enough to entertain the faint-hearted.

Discovery Island is just that — a nice discovery. There are no rides, no screaming, nothing but nature. It's a natural land formation in the middle of a lake that has been developed into a sanctuary for more than 250 species of plant life from around the world and a multitude of mammals, reptiles and birds.

TYPHOON LAGOON IS a water-theme park, Disney World's newest theme park. What about descending 51 feet of man-made mountain at 30 mph? And there's no waiting for waves here. Ocean-size curls appear every 90 seconds in another part of the lagoon. Several other thrilling, but not chilling, rides are available, as well as some slow ones for the small-fry.

Of course, in order to see only some of all this, Disney knew you'd need to stay awhile. No problem. There are 14 hotels, a campground and vacation villas totaling 12,773 rooms. If that's not enough (and apparently it isn't), five more hotels are under construction that will add another 5,271 rooms.

Pick your theme when you make your reservations. Wish you were in the islands? Try the Polynesian or Caribbean Beach Resort. Modern? Stay at the Contemporary Resort. Tastes a little old-fashioned? Then the Grand Floridian is for you. Fort Wilderness offers almost 1,200 campsites for those who want to rough it, and Disney's Village Resort's 576 villas will seem like home to condo owners.

For the truly eclectic tastes, there's the new Dolphin and Swan hotels. Interesting architecture at the very least. But if you just can't decide, stop at the Hilton, Howard Johnson's, the Travelodge or some other familiar lodging site among many at the Disney Hotel Plaza.

IT MAY BE DIFFICULT to imagine, but a growing number of people have come to consider Disney World as a business destination. So much so, that the new Dolphin and Swan hotels were built with 252,000 square feet of convention space, and several existing hotels are adding more meeting space.

All told, by late 1992, there will be 700,000 square feet of convention facilities and 17,000 hotel rooms.

And plenty of things for you to do when you're not listening to those luncheon speeches.

Now, what will it cost you? That depends. It's $31 per person, per day, per park ($25 for children 3-10) for the Magic Kingdom, EPCOT Center and Disney-MGM Studios. But, if you're staying awhile, a "passport" for four or five days' unlimited use of all three parks is a better deal: $104 for the former, $135 for the latter. River Country will cost you another $11.75, $7.50 for Discovery Island and $18.25 for Typhoon Lagoon. Oh, plus $9.95 for Pleasure Island.

Accommodations start at $29 per night for a campsite at Fort Wilderness to $355 a night for the best suite at the Grand Floridian. (Rates vary depending on the seasons and the location of your room.) Transportation via monorail, bus or boat within the Disney World complex is included; Florida sales tax and Orange County resort tax are not. And all sorts of package deals have been devised (most for five-night stays) that give you rooms, meals, park admission, baby-sitting and other necessities for a combined price.

And, while you're budgeting this vacation, don't forget food and all those souvenirs you (and the kids) will want to bring home.

The bottom line: Before you see your travel agent, see your banker.

Pleasure Island is adult playground

By Robert J. Hawkins
Copley News Service

First of all, to appreciate Pleasure Island, you've got to let go of those goody-goody assumptions about everything Disney.

Pleasure Island is an adult playground, and it's even, well, a bit naughty.

Shocked?

Being raised on wholesome doses of Walt and Mousketeerism, I was. Delightfully so. It is to Disney World what Touchstone Pictures is to Walt Disney Pictures.

Pleasure Island is in the Buena Vista Lagoon, nestled between the AMC 10 Theater Complex and Disney Village Marketplace, off Buena Vista Drive.

This island with a Cannery Row meets Montreal meets New Orleans feel holds a half-dozen theme nightclubs, some restaurants, trendy gift and clothing stores, and a nightly bacchanalian street party.

Calling it an island is stretching the concept a bit. Ever notice how people loosen up aboard a cruise ship, a train, on an island? Well, there is just enough water between this island and shore to establish the illusion and enable visitors to shed inhibitions.

If that doesn't do it, the evening street party will. New Year's Eve is celebrated every night — at 11 p.m.

After 7 p.m. the island is open to visitors 18 years and older for a modest fee. The walk across the bridge is lightened by greetings from those irrepressibly cute Disney employees in Pinocchioesque outfits. Of course! We're headed for the land where children never grow up. Perhaps we'll even turn to braying mules by night's end.

Along the cobblestone street there's a club to suit every taste. In the square at the top of the hill there is the live band outdoor stage. It is bookended by The Comedy Warehouse and the Neon Armadillo Music Saloon.

Just down from Armadillo's (need I point out they have live country and western music?) is the Adventurers Club, a '30s Victorianish explorers club filled with stuffed heads that talk and other exotica. Highlight of each night is the raucous ceremonial membership induction into the Adventurers Club. Second-highest light is the list of exotic and potent drinks served here in Mason jars, I dimly recall.

There's also the Cage, a black wall-blue light progressive pop club with a post-cultural collapse/urban-industrial motif. Brighter, lighter and louder is XZFR Rock & Roll Beach Club with its body-builders posing outside and classic surf's-up tunes inside.

Mannequins offers contemporary music and a dance floor that rotates. And you must be over 21 to get in.

At the bottom of the hill a live DJ spins records at mega-decibels from a tower studio, keeping the atmosphere pulsing.

The Fireworks Factory is an open-air brick warehouse restaurant that feels like Old Montreal or Key West. Merriweather's Market is filled with farm-fresh wholesome foods. The Portobello Yacht Club and Empress Lily paddle-wheel restaurant are havens of reserve on the fringe.

The clubs are supplemented by streetside bars selling beer and fruity drinks in plastic garbage pails (true).

The atmosphere is intoxicating enough for many people as they linger in the street gaping at revelers. At 11 p.m. everybody hits the street as the New Year's Celebration begins.

This artfully choreographed piece of revelry pumps up the jam. Body Gloved dancers, a thumping beat, fireworks, tons of confetti shot from rooftop cannons and well-partied people swirl in kaleidoscopic frenzy until a conga line materializes and snakes up and down the street in hilarity.

And the strangest part is, the boorish behavior you might encounter in the real world doesn't seem to intrude on this party. No falling-down drunks, drunken mashers, mashed drunkards. Just a lot of good clean adult Disney fun.

I won't go so far as to deny that hangovers occur in the morning, but there is a pleasant afterglow to Pleasure Island.

Kent Garrett, a Waco High School art teacher, puts his artistic talents to the test by carving a spooky Jack-o'-lantern. Garrett said pumpkins are an easy medium to work with.

Pumpkin carving an easy art

WACO, Texas (AP) — A jack-o'-lantern can be scary element in your decorations for Halloween, so don't be afraid to get out your knife and start carving.

"Pumpkins are an easy medium," said Kent Garrett, an art instructor at the Waco Ninth Grade Center. "They are very forgiving about mistakes."

He said many people are afraid to carve jack-o'-lanterns because they think they can't draw or carve properly. But Garrett said the wonderful thing about carving pumpkins is you use your own design, so who is to say it's wrong.

"After all you are usually carving a demon that is ugly to begin with," said Garrett, who has been carving jack-o'-lanterns for The Art Center Pumpkin Event for three years.

This year, he's doing a Teen-age Mutant Ninja Pumpkin.

"When we carve the mask, we won't carve all the way through the skin," said Garrett, who is bringing his class into the project and using pumpkins supplied by the school cafeteria. "That will give it a translucent effect. Then we'll cut out the eyes."

Garrett likes conceptual designs.

He's got an idea for a punk-in — a punk rock jack-o'-lantern with a mohawk wig, ragged eyes and a safety pin in its ear.

HE SAID THE pumpkin he carved for last year's Pumpkin Event had a face like an abstract painting because his students had been studying the abstract artist Picasso.

Even this year's Teen-age Mutant Ninja Pumpkin has a link to art. Like all the Ninja Turtles, this one is named after a famous artist — Michelangelo.

For those who still aren't convinced they can carve a pumpkin, Garrett suggests painting and decorating one instead.

"There are many people who decorate pumpkins without carving them," he said.

In the years he has carved pumpkins, Garrett has found several helpful tips.

First choose your pumpkin carefully. The best jack-o-lantern pumpkins weigh 15 to 20 pounds, have bright orange, blemish-free rinds and well-defined ribbing.

If you have a design in mind, choose a pumpkin with a shape to match it. For instance, some designs look best on round pumpkins while others are more suited to oblong pumpkins.

When you are ready to go to work on your jack-o'-lantern, Garrett suggests cutting into the bottom of the pumpkin instead of the top when making the initial hole to scrape out the insides.

"You can scoop out the pumpkin easier from the bottom and you don't have the mess at the top," Garrett said.

IT'S ALSO EASIER to install a candle or even an electric light from the bottom than it is from the top.

He recommends using a long sharp knife and making a hole about five inches in diameter.

Use a large soup spoon to scoop out the seeds and pulp. A cleanliness note: Spread lots of newspaper around before making the cut. There are many seeds and lots of juice and rind in a pumpkin that you won't want all over the floor.

Once the pumpkin is ready for carving, Garrett suggests drawing your design on the pumpkin with a felt tip pen to use as a guideline. Keep the design simple and practice on paper before moving to the pumpkin.

Potbellied pig a pricey pet

AUSTIN (AP) — Jim and Cindy Carroccio had a farm. E-I-E-I-O.

And on this farm they had some pigs. E-I-E-I Oh, what gives here. Those don't look like any ordinary squealing porkers in that pig pen.

No, they're Vietnamese potbellied pigs, a very popular pet of late. But don't even ask the price.

And what's that on the other side of the barnyard? Barbado sheep, Sicilian miniature donkeys and Tennessee fainting goats that will fall over with a clap of the hands.

With an oink oink here and a baah baah there, the Carroccios plan to open an exotic animal park for kids this spring that will be stocked with such rare critters from nearly every continent.

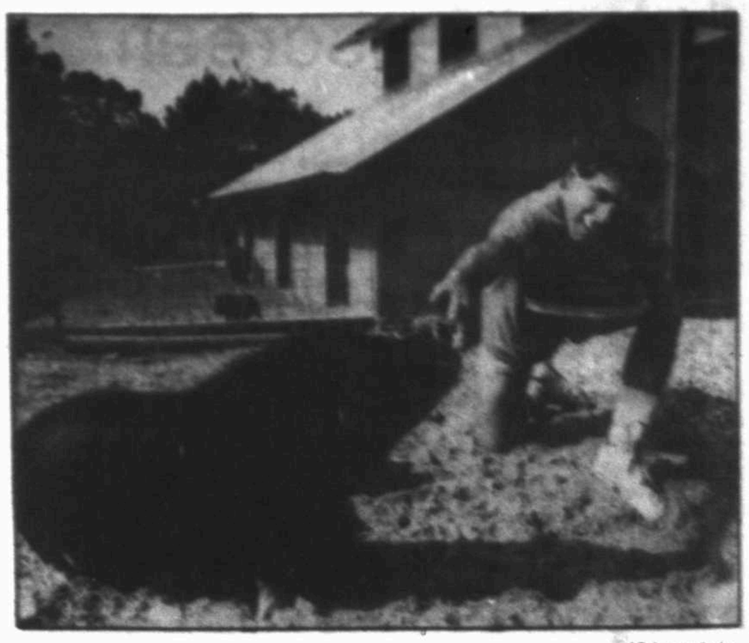

"It'll be a cross between a zoo and a nature center," says Cindy Carroccio, a former nurse who quit her hectic job at a local hospital nearly a year ago to care for the ever-growing number of animals at her home.

"But we don't want it to be like a zoo where they just come and look at the animals inside cages," she says. "We want the kids to be able to touch the animals and actually learn something about them."

The Carroccios say they and investors have spent nearly $75,000 buying rare animals, and constructing facilities to house them on the couple's 25-acre ranch about five miles southwest of Oak Hill.

"We want the kids to understand that there is a good way and a bad way to keep animals," says the 33-year-old Cindy Carroccio. "We want them to learn how to coexist with animals and give them dignity and respect."

The couple got their start in the exotic animal business several years ago with the purchase of several Shetland ponies and Vietnamese potbellied pigs, which some people keep as pets because they are small and can be housebroken.

AP Laserphoto

Jim Carroccio feeds a Vietnamese potbellied pig at his 25-acre ranch south of Austin. He and his wife hope to open an exotic animal park there.

Next came the brown-and-black Barbado and Mouflon sheep, delicate-looking creatures with horns that hail from the Caribbean island of Barbados and from Europe.

Then the Carroccios added fainting goats, which have a genetic disorder causing them to tumble when scared. And later a pair of Bengal cats, spotted felines that resulted from breeding tabby cats with Asian leopards.

"Our friends came over, and they enjoyed seeing the animals so much that they wanted to know if they could bring their kids out," says Jim, a 37-year-old theatrical set designer. "Then they wanted to know if they could bring their friends' kids out. Finally, we just decided we should open a park."

The Carroccios, who have applied for a permit from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to show the animals to the public, say they hope to gradually add more exotic animals to their menagerie as visitors increase.

"We don't plan on having any dangerous or vicious animals," Jim Carroccio said. "No lions, tigers, bears, monkeys or anything like that. Only domestically bred animals that won't bite off your hand."

Bat colony spiraling into limelight

AUSTIN (AP) — The 1 million bats living under Austin's Congress Avenue Bridge are well-known as North America's largest urban bat colony. But 10 million of their country cousins living about 100 miles away have gone virtually unnoticed.

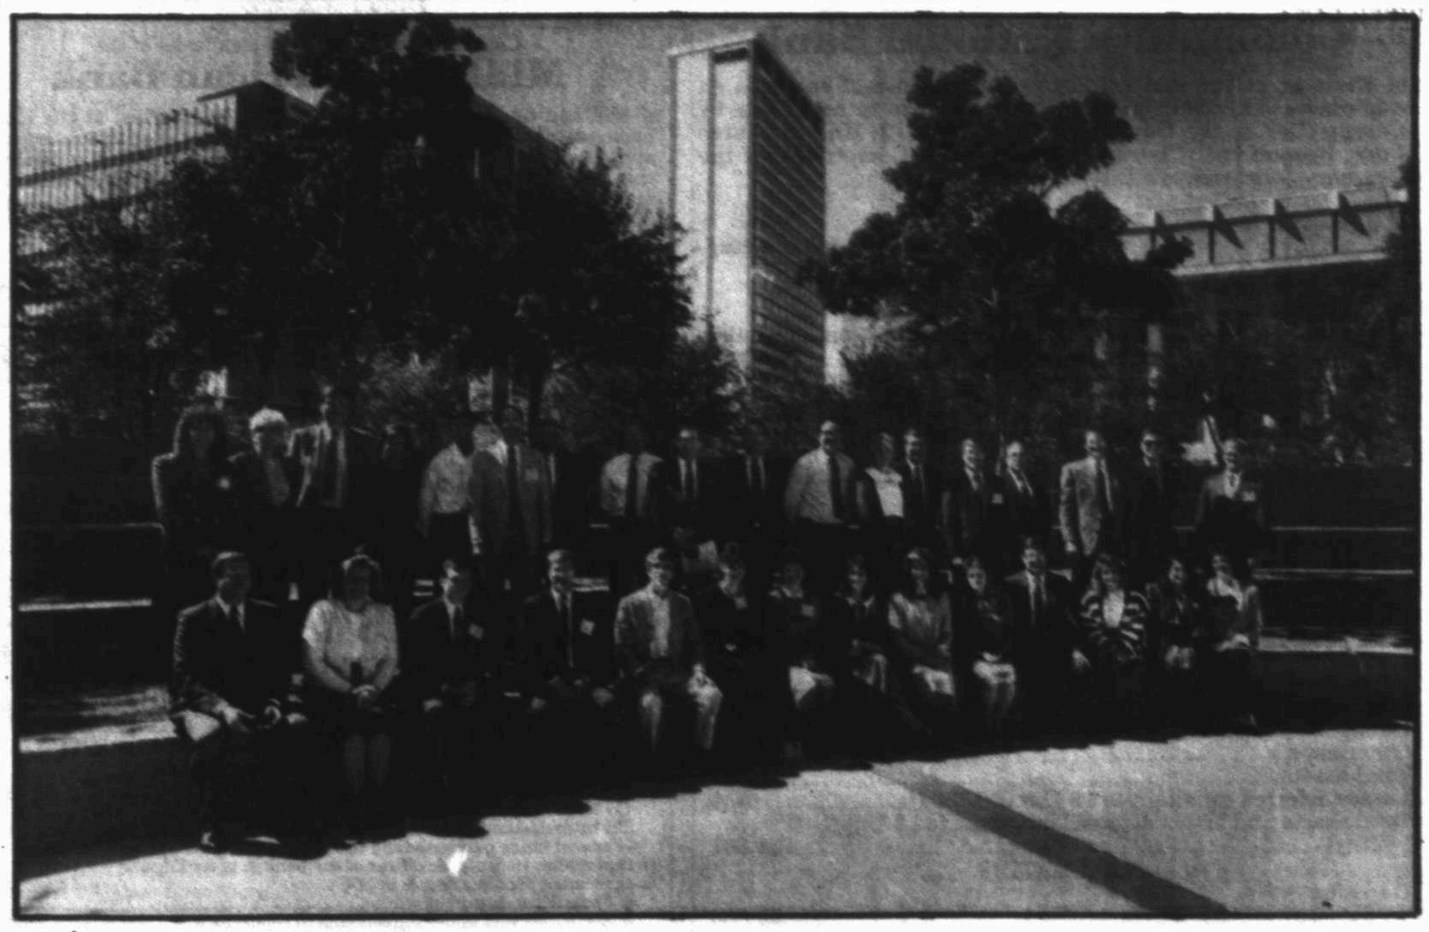

The Nature Conservancy and Bat Conservation International, which have collaborated to protect bat habitats nationwide, want to change that.

The groups are developing a management plan for the rural bat colony, which makes its home in a remote cave on the James River south of Mason.

The plan includes provisions to allow the public to see the Mexican free-tailed bats regularly, hopefully by next spring.

At dusk from March through October, the warm-blooded mammals swirl out of their cave to feed, wings fluttering, spiraling upward in a seemingly infinite stream.

"It looks like a little tornado," said Cindy Lind of Bat Conservation International. "There are so many, and they make a circular motion as they come out, around and around, and they go off into the sky. You can see them for miles."

These Midlanders are Pro-Sports about The United Way

These Midlanders represent all facets of our community. They are volunteers who are responsible for raising the money that funds our United Way. They spend countless hours in their respective divisions, planning team strategy. And when they hit the playing field during our annual campaign, they're out to win for the 35,000 Midlanders who will benefit from services provided by our 17 United Way Agencies this year.

These volunteers come from diverse backgrounds with varying skills, but they share a common goal -- a commitment to seeing that Midlanders take care of our own. And they give of their time to help make it happen.

So if you see one of them walk through your door, welcome them in and hear what they have to say. Their enthusiasm could change the way you think about your community.

Gay rights activists blast big screen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of the bolder love scenes this movie season won't make it to theaters.

A frank encounter between two women — from "Welcome Home, Roxy Carmichael" — was left on the cutting room floor. What remains is a brief scene with two women in a bedroom, hinting elliptically at their love making.

Depictions are more explicit in the upcoming "Henry and June," which details the sexual encounters of writer Henry Miller, his wife, June, and writer Anais Nin in Paris in the 1930s. There are scenes at lesbian social clubs in which women embrace, kiss and dance together, and a brothel scene shows two women making love.

Critics say upcoming films will include negative gay role models. The Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation (GLAAD) says the scripts for "Basic Instinct" and "Ticking Man" are littered with villains who are gay. They say "Basic" features lesbian and bisexual women as murderers and "Ticking" features a man described as "wierdly effeminate."

"What we'd like to see is gay and lesbian characters portrayed, I hope in continuing roles, as normal people," said Richard Jennings, executive director of GLAAD's Los Angeles chapter.

THE GROUP IS pleased with the character of a doctor's gay brother on "Doctor, Doctor," on CBS.

GLAAD has placed ads of protest in trade papers but plans no boycotts of movies.

A few recent releases have been criticized for allegedly fostering anti-gay violence.

GLAAD is unhappy with David Lynch's "Wild at Heart," whose lead uses the word "faggot," and "House Party," where a character raps, "Me a homo? Nah man, that's a no-no."

ITC Entertainment Group's "Roxy Carmichael," distributed by Paramount Pictures, is an account of a small town's memory of a bisexual teen-age woman. The film attempted to deal straightforwardly with sex between two women.

"But at test screenings people were kind of shocked to see the two people in bed," said the film's director, Jim Abrahams. "I thought it was done pretty tastefully. ... I think we miscalculated the reaction."

"We're lucky (the scene) is in there at all," said screenwriter Karen Leigh Hopkins. "Paramount was very nervous about it and wanted it cut. ... But there's nothing wrong with (two women) being lovers. Roxy is the hero — and she's bisexual."

Negative, cliched characterizations have been a motion-picture staple since 1915's "The Birth of a Nation." Almost every group, at one time or another, has censured the entertainment industry for biased depictions.

SOME GAYS HAVE been pleased with such films as the recent "Longtime Companion," 1959's "Suddenly, Last Summer" and 1968's "The Killing of Sister George." For the most part, though, gays are unhappy.

In an advertisement taken out in the Hollywood trade newspaper Daily Variety last week, GLAAD said: "Gay and lesbian film characters are portrayed either as sissies or victims, or murderers and twisted villains. We are verbally abused with offensive terms such as 'faggot' and 'dyke.'

The New York City police department recorded 64 anti-gay crimes through July, up 120 percent from the previous period in 1989. According to research by the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force for 1989, there were more than 7,000 reported incidents of harassment, intimidation, vandalism or bias-related violence directed against gays, including 62 homicides.

The makers of some films under attack say criticisms of gay characters are overly emotional.

"I didn't realize the word 'faggot' was derogatory," said Steve Golin, a producer of the Samuel Goldwyn Co.'s "Wild at Heart." "It's just a term that's in our vocabulary. The film doesn't depict gay people in a negative context."

Embezzled funds buy American dream

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — When Becky and Peter Schafer arrived in town last year, they had an art collection, a $30,000 BMW and plans to move into a $1 million home in an exclusive suburb.

But the Schafers' flirtation with lifestyles of the rich ended Oct. 11 in a federal court in New York City. Becky Schafer pleaded guilty to criminal charges she embezzled $3.3 million from her former employer, New York-based Citibank.

Mrs. Schafer, who has a year-old daughter, faces up to 20 years in prison.

Her husband was not charged with a crime. But Citibank, in a lawsuit filed in August in Johnson County (Kan.) District Court, accused him of complicity in the embezzlement. The suit, which seeks unspecified damages, is pending.

Citibank says Mrs. Schafer used her power as a bank executive to illegally write as many as 165 checks to pay for the house in the Kansas City suburb of Leawood, Kan., the BMW, and a houseful of art, designer furniture, expensive china and jewelry.

The couple never got to live in their Hallbrook Farms Country Club home. On Aug. 3, three days before they planned to move in, FBI agents arrested Mrs. Schafer, 29, at another home she had bought in Lake Ozark, Mo., the Kansas City Star reported. Her husband was not charged.

AP LaserPhoto

Becky Schafer and her husband, Peter, are seen in a photograph that had been left behind in a luxury home they had purchased in suburban Kansas City, Mo., with embezzled funds. Mrs. Schafer recently pleaded guilty to criminal charges that she embezzled $3.3 million from her former employer, New York-based Citibank.

The Schafers' fall from the good life came when a Hallbrook official called Citibank checking the Schafers' references for country club membership.

Citibank has since repossessed the Hallbrook house and the $150,000 Lake of the Ozarks home.

The Schafers appeared to be down-home Nebraskans who struck it rich as Wall Street executives and were returning to Middle America to raise a family.

Mrs. Schafer was a top student and former cheerleader at her hometown school in rural Nebraska, the newspaper said.

"It was a Cinderella story in which the glass slipper didn't fit," said Max Geiman, an FBI spokesman in Kansas City.

Mrs. Schafer's arrest was "inevitable," said Geiman. "Someone was going to question them before long."

Mrs. Schafer, charged with embezzling about $3.3 million from December 1987 through June 1990, on Thursday admitted stealing more $2.5 million from the bank. Her lawyer said she stole around $3 million.

The checks, drawn on various trust accounts, went directly to pay American Express bills and various other personal debts, court records say.

Citibank spokesman John Maloney said it was the bank's largest theft in a decade.

An elementary school teacher by training, Mrs. Schafer worked as operations manager for Citibank's Corporate Trust Services department. Her husband worked as a paralegal for Shearson Lehman Hutton, Inc.

Mrs. Schafer's job called for her to handle billings and payments for the bank's corporate trust department.

Sex trade spurred on Texas border

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico — Each night at twilight, caravans of cars, taxis and four-wheel-drive trucks brave the journey down an unlit, pothole-filled caliche road toward a walled town of shining neon lights.

From a distance, the headlights appear like hundreds of giant fireflies in the orange and purple dust-filled air.

Many of the drivers are drunk and reckless, causing street vendors to scurry into the shadows at their approach.

The town — wedged among Nuevo Laredo's southwest stockyards, factories and neighborhoods — looks like a circus or carnival to an observer seeing its lights on the horizon. In daylight, however, it looks more like a prison, with a narrow entrance guarded by rifle-toting Mexican police.

It is La Zona de Tolerancia — a zone where prostitution is tolerated in a nation where prostitution is illegal.

U.S. patrons know it as Boy's Town.

Despite fears of sexual disease, the allure of Boy's Town has never been more enticing.

"We've got more people here than we have had in 20 years," said Louis Sandoval, 40, owner of the Manhattan Club, a bar with seven prostitutes.

As many as 3,000 prostitutes are employed, along with hundreds of cooks, maids, tattoo artists, musicians, bartenders, photographers, disc jockeys, store owners, tour guides, taxi drivers, security guards, shoe shine boys and buggy drivers.

Boys' Town growth has been spurred by the greater availability of customers attracted by the flourishing economy at Laredo, Texas, across the Rio Grande from Nuevo Laredo.

Laredo is the busiest landport in the United States. The city of 110,000 also has the fastest-growing economy in Texas, according to reports by the state comptroller. During the past five years, the city has added 11,000 new jobs and has seen a nearly 100 percent increase each of the past three years in new building permits.

Both Laredo and Nuevo Laredo have been bolstered by expanding trade. About 60 percent of the projected $72 billion in U.S.-Mexico trade this year will flow through Laredo-Nuevo Laredo.

The area has seen a near quadrupling of "maquiladoras," or "twin plants" since 1986 to 93 today, employing 22,800 workers. The plants use low-cost Mexican labor to assemble U.S.-made parts, with the products shipped duty-free back into the United States.

The growth in border jobs also serves as a magnet for Mexican citizens. A Mexican census report shows that Nuevo Laredo has experienced a surge in population. About a third of the city's 400,000 residents are recent arrivals — most of them from distant Mexican villages; most of them single women, often under 14 years old.

Many women, having children to support after a divorce, decide to work for a store earning the Mexican minimum wage of about $3 per day, or at a maquiladora for about $3 to $10 a day.

Others, however, opt to work at Boy's Town where they can earn from $25 to $65 for a 30-to 40-minute encounter.

South African hostels called dirty, dreary beds of violence

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Muzi is a Zulu in alien territory, a migrant in a settled township, and needs no time to think when asked what he hates most about living in a workers' hostel.

"Everything is bad," he said. "There's no privacy, even in the toilets. Nothing's being done."

He sat on one of four beds in a dark concrete-block room beneath a roof of corrugated metal, a stocky, bearded man with his arms wrapped across his chest. Grease and dirt stained the floor and walls. A lone electric wire stretched overhead.

"Staying here, you end up drinking," Muzi said. "I'm so tired of waiting."

The squalid hostels, long a source of many social ills, have become flash points of political violence that has killed nearly 800 blacks in townships around Johannesburg since Aug. 12.

Many of the vicious street clashes have pitted hostel dwellers, usually Zulus like Muzi, against township residents from other tribes.

Most of the Zulus support the conservative Inkatha movement based in their homeland in Natal province, and many township residents support the African National Congress.

Even South Africa's white government, architect of the apartheid system that spawned the hostels, has called for change. President F.W. de Klerk visited a Soweto hostel in September and, standing in a urine-stained hall, said the conditions were unacceptable.

Officials have suggested converting some hostels to family dwellings, but no action has been taken.

More than 130 hostels housing nearly 200,000 people dot the 31 black townships around Johannesburg.

Muzi, who is 32 and has two children, is one of countless blacks who for decades have left their families in impoverished rural areas to seek work in Johannesburg, the financial hub of South Africa. He would not reveal his last name.

Apartheid laws made the move difficult, requiring a migrant to obtain a job first in order to live in an urban township. Most restrictions were repealed in the 1980s, but overcrowding in the townships has left migrant workers little choice but to live in the cramped, single-sex dormitories without heat or indoor plumbing.

Miserable living conditions combined with tribal and political rivalries encourage fighting.

"The evil migrant labor system . . . lies at the root of the current conflict," said a group of national church leaders, including Desmond Tutu, the black Anglican archbishop who won the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize.

Other observers say it's more complicated.

John Kane-Berman, head of the respected Institute of Race Relations, a private organization, said personal disputes, political and tribal differences, human nature and poor living conditions contribute to the violence.

"It's a lot of different factors, and one might not be aware of them," he said.

For example, rooms in many hostels are segregated by tribe. If a man has a fight with someone from another room and his friends get involved, he said, a personal dispute has the appearance of tribal fighting.

He insisted that tribal differences play a role, despite statements to the contrary by black leaders.

"It's not fashionable in liberal circles to talk about black ethnic rivalry because the government used that argument as part of its divisive strategy," he said.

Kane-Berman said township residents look down on the poorly educated rural workers, creating class differences, and the frustration and danger of hostel life compound the problems.

Serial killer stalks women in San Diego

SAN DIEGO (AP) — People used to leave their doors unlocked and take the kids for strolls along the city's quiet streets north of downtown. Not anymore. A mysterious serial killer who has claimed five female victims — and who police say will likely strike again — has driven people inside, behind locked doors and windows.

There, some people have taken to bathing with revolvers nearby, aware that some of the victims were in the shower or had just gotten out when they were stabbed to death with their own kitchen knives.

Outside, the city's normally peaceful University City and Clairemont neighborhoods are filled with fear.

"I can't go out in the street or open the door," said Lupe Reyes, a 23-year-old live-in baby sitter in University City. "Before, we could take the children out to play and we could take walks. But now we can't go out because of the fear that he's out there.

"Sometimes the doors along the back used to be open," she said, motioning to the back of the house. "Now, day and night, they're closed."

Reyes, like so many other women in the neighborhood, is wary — frightened of the man who since January has boldly entered the homes of five women between the hours of 8 a.m. and 1 p.m.

In each instance, the killer entered through an unlocked door or window, say police who are conducting the largest manhunt in San Diego history.

About 30 investigators in the nation's sixth-largest city are sifting through more than 2,000 leads that came in after the most recent murders, the Sept. 13 slayings of Pamela Gail Clark, 42, and her 18-year-old daughter, Amber.

Amber Clark and three other victims were brunettes, aged 18 to 21. Authorities speculate that Pamela Clark was killed because she happened to be home with her daughter.

The first victim was 20-year-old Tiffany Paige Schultz, a San Diego State University student who moonlighted as a nude dancer. She was slain in her Clairemont apartment in January.

Janene Marie Weinhold, 21, who lived just two blocks away, was killed two months later. Holly Suzanne Tarr, an 18-year-old high school student from Okemos, Mich., was in town to visit her brother when she was killed in April.

Experts have put together a profile of the killer that describes him as a disorganized opportunist who probably picks his victims on the spot. They say the fact he uses the victims' own knives as weapons indicates the murders aren't well planned.

A maintenance man who interrupted the attack on Tarr described the killer to police as 14 to 23 years old, with a dark complexion, close-cropped hair and a medium build.

But aside from that information, authorities say they have little to go on.

"We don't have the lead that we need," said police Capt. Dick Toneck. "We're still waiting for someone to come forward and say, 'I know this person.'"

In the meantime, Toneck said, police believe the killer will strike again.

Many residents agree, adding they have taken precautions to protect themselves. Some people have even moved away.

"After the second murder there was a stream of moving trucks going up and down the street," said Victoria Ross, 27, who lives across the street from the apartment complex where Schultz was killed.

Ross stayed, but she has become far more cautious.

"Every time I come up the stairs I watch around the bend, thinking that since there were no signs of forced entry in any of the murders that maybe he waited (outside for his victims)," she said. "I watch in every direction before I get out of the car."

"I want to catch him," she said.

War in Gulf could result in $70 oil

■ A study by the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas looks at oil prices and the Texas economy in light of the conflict in the Persian Gulf.

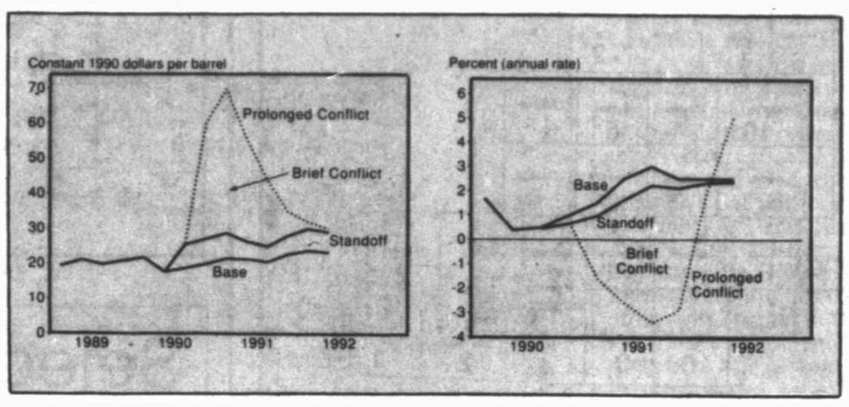

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

What will the price of oil be if hostilities break out in the Persian Gulf, and what will be the impact of higher oil prices on the Texas economy? A study recently completed by the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas attempts to answer those questions.

The bank study headed by Stephen Brown, senior economist, examined three oil price scenarios for resolving the Iraq, Kuwait conflict, which include:

A POLITICAL STANDOFF — In a political standoff, oil production lost in Iraq and Kuwait would be partially made up by increased production from coutries with excess capacity, and the price of West Texas Intermediate crude would sell for $25 to $30 per barrel under normal standoff conditions. However, if fear of war is interjected into the scenario, the price could go to $45 or higher.

That in fact has been the case in recent weeks as the price of crude oil on the New York Mecantile Exchange has soared (at times above $40) and fallen to the $35 mark based on rumors of war and peace. At times oil prices have fallen or soared $2 and more in a single day, driven by rumors.

Source: Dallas Federal Reserve

Brown says there are no fundamentals to support a $40 oil price. "The prices are built solely on fear," he noted.

Brown noted that the team of economists who worked on the study put very demand into the standoff scenario but could justify only $25 to $30 oil prices.

■ BRIEF CONFLICT — In a brief military conflict with minimal damage to oil fields in the area, the price of WTI could reach $60 per barrel and remain at that level for up to six months until production in the damaged fields is restored, says the study.

■ PROLONGED CONFLICT — A prolonged conflict of nine months or longer would almost guarantee extensive damage to oil fields in Saudia Arabia, Iraq and Kuwait, sending oil prices to $70 per barrel. In this event all stops would be pulled from private and strategic reserves, says the study.

What impact would these higher oil prices have upon the national economy and Texas economy? Here's what the report says:

■ NATIONAL ECONOMY — Higher oil prices under any of these three scenarios will push the nation as a whole into or at least to the brink of recession.

Inflation will increase, and GNP will shrink to .04. The nation may narrowly avert a recession in the standoff scenario, but will surely have one if either the second or third military options prevail.

■ TEXAS ECONOMY — The Texas economy, however, will grow. Most economic growth, says the report, will not

New Penneys line marks shift in merchandise mix

■ J.C. Penney has introduced a new line of home fashions, JCPenney Home, which marks a shift in the retailer's merchandising mix.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

All year, economic experts — and retailers — have worried about the weakness in retail sales.

In an attempt to boost retail sales, retailers have implemented a number of marketing, pricing and merchandising changes. One example is J.C. Penney, which recently moved its corporate headquarters from New York to Dallas.

After two years of research, Penney's has come up with the JCPenney Home Focus.

As a part of this focus, the retailer has launched its first ever private brand program in its Home division — bedding, bath and window coverings.

"I think this merchandise is perfect for this area," says Gary Boyle, manager of the J.C. Penney's store in Midland Park Mall. "I feel this is merchandise this area has been looking for that hasn't been available."

He goes on to predict that the new lines will sell well, despite the recent weakness in the local economy. Currently the local store has been remodeling its home fashions area to make room for the new lines and for new displays featuring them. Boyle expects the renovations to be complete around November 1.

The program features five brands offering distinct, exclusive designs geared toward three segments customer lifestyle interpretations - updated, traditional and conservative. The new lines are: By Design, Elizabeth Gray, Classic Traditions, Carson Reed and Home Collection. It also features a unified color palette for easier mixing and matching.

Penney's defines the three segments this way:

■ Updated: Customers who are fashion risk-takers and want to have a new look first. To them, cost is secondary. Fashions in this category feature mix-and-match patterns and bold colors.

■ Traditional: Customers who look for long-lasting quality and traditional, tikmeless designs. Fashions in this category will feature Chippendale, houndstooth or paisley patterns and Battenburg lace.

■ Conservative: Customers who are more concerned with price than new fashions, so home fashions will feature traditional styles and colors.

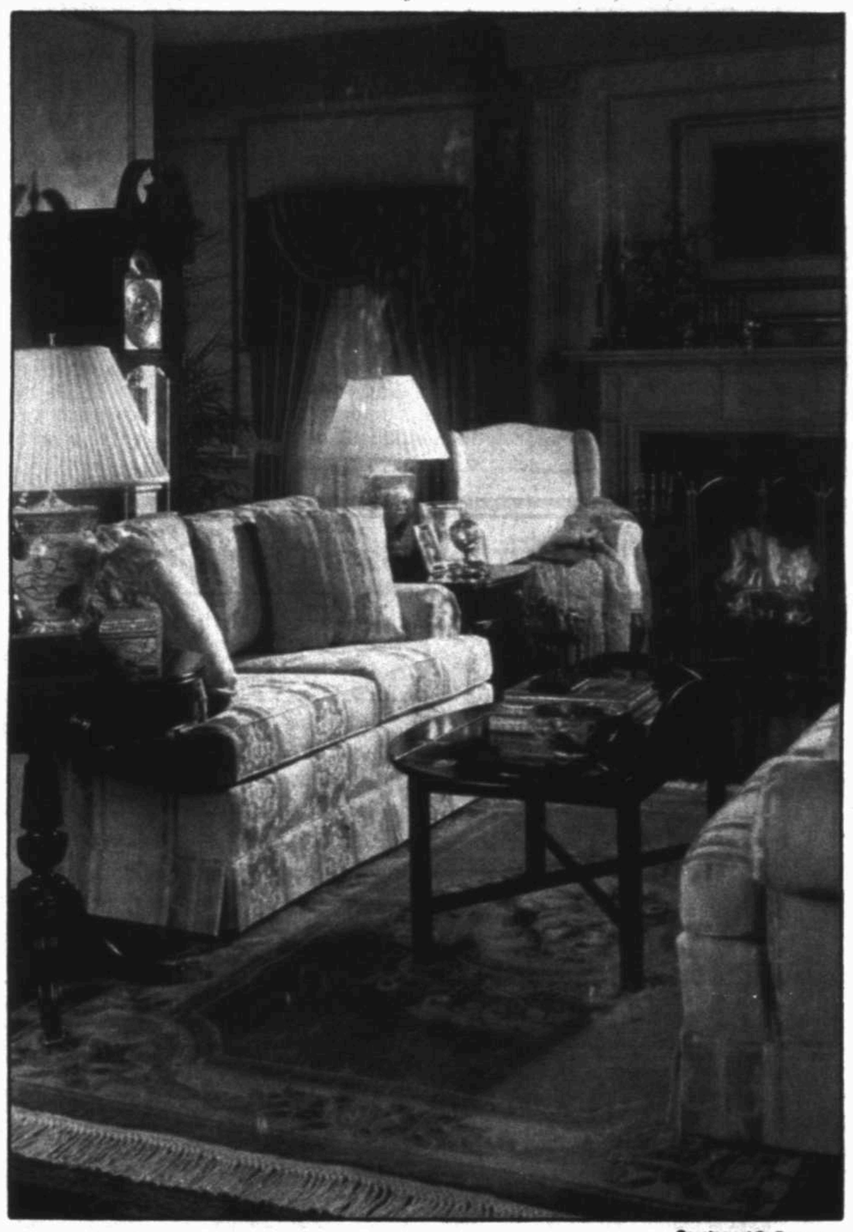

"This is the first time we've segmented the market so aggressively," says Cecile Kittock, home fashions merchandise manager, who recently came to Midland from Tulsa.

The Midland store has already stocked some of the merchandise is already available, though the store is still revamping the home fashions area to better display the new program.

"Response has been very good,' she said. "It's been very well received."

According to James J. Kenedy, president of Penney's home division, the home has emerged as an important means of self-expression.

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Allday feeling heat of a thankless job

John Paul Pitts

A proposed Canadian pipeline to supply natural gas to the Northeastern part of the U.S. has become one of the most divisive and bitter issues to hit the petroleum industry in recent history.

Pitts

The proposed Iroquois pipeline, which would bring 579.9 million cubic feet daily of natural gas from Western Canada into the Northeast, has split two major petroleum groups, pitted major U.S. producers and pipelines against independent producers, turned friend against friend and interjected discord into a harmonious free trade agreement between the U.S. and Canada.

Worst of all, the oil industry may have wounded one of its own in the thick of the battle.

Caught in the middle of the turmoil, Martin Allday, Chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, a Texan, lawyer, and former oil producer, has been vilified by some of his fellow Texans and oilmen as a "back stabber" and "enemy of the oil industry," because of his stand for the pipeline.

Forbidden by law from commenting on cases before the Commission, Allday has been unable to defend his position to the industry. But inside sources say he has been deeply hurt by the accusations, and feels his friends in the oil industry have needlessly, and viciously turned upon him," said the source.

Allday, with fellow FERC commissioners, voted this summer to approve the Iroquois Project. But following an outcry by the Independent Petroleum Association of America, agreed to postpone the final decision for a full hearing on November 28.

IPAA is outraged at the probable certification of the pipeline, claiming the Canadian gas would be allowed into the country under a different, more attractive rate structure and that it would back natural gas from the Southwest out of the Northeast market.

"We're not against Canadian gas," says Paul Hilliard, chairman of IPAA, "we just want a level playing field. This unlevel playing field could cause the price of natural gas to drop 40 cents per Mcf at the wellhead. It would be an economic disaster to an already depressed industry."

On the other hand, the Natural Gas Supply Association takes a nonchalant view of the matter, and feels IPAA may have overreacted in its harsh treatment of Chairman Allday.

"We're not for it (Iroquois) and we're not against it," says Nicholas Bush, president of NGSA. "We think it will back out fuel oil — not domestic gas, and, we don't think it will cause the wellhead price to drop."

Moreover, Bush feels demand for natural gas will grow to the extent that it will not be a matter of "backing out" natural gas in the Northeast but getting adequate supplies into the area. "Entry of Canadian gas into the Northeast will only stimulate demand," he noted.

When IPAA issued a press release indicating it spoke for U.S. producers, Bush sent a letter to FERC Chairman Martin Allday to distance NGSA, which markets 90 percent of the natural gas in the U.S., from the organization which represents independent producers.

"We do not support the position or the statements of IPAA in their press release," Bush told Allday.

Hilliard responded: "We don't see the demand growth in the Northeast that Mr. Bush does. Simply put, NGSA does not have the same perspective of the wellhead that IPAA does.

"To his members, the sale of natural gas is incidental income. To our members it is our life blood."

He acknowleges that it was probably that perceived threat to livelihood that prompted some members of IPAA to go after Martin Allday so viciously, accusing him of "betraying" the independent and "stabbing" the industry in the back. "Sometimes the rhetoric gets strong in the heat of conflict," he said.

Some of the kinder remarks leveled against the former oil and gas attorney from Midland suggest only that Allday has fallen victim to bad advice.

"He has inherited a cadre of ill-advised, lawyer-bureaucrats left over from Martha Hesse's tenure as Chairman of FERC. He should have cleaned house," said one Midland oilman.

Notes Nicholas Bush: "Because Allday is from Midland, Texas and has been in the oil business, there may have been some who thought he should be a lobbyist in Washington for the independent oil man. He is not. He's the Chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for all the people of America."

Paul Hilliard agrees that personal attacks against Allday were unfortunate. "We don't agree with Martin Allday, but he is an honorable man, and only

SUNDAY BUSINESS DIGEST

Mr. Snackman

Staff Report

A former Midlander is looking to become the "snack man" of Texas.

Ted Paup, a 1970 graduate of Midland High has been awarded the franchise for the state of Texas by the United Snack Group, which sells snacks to small employee groups on the honor system.

Paup, a CPA and resident of Abilene, says that he is excited about the prospect of bringing "honor" to the snack system in Texas. "We have seen the concept work very well in our part of the state," he noted.

Paup bought the right to franchise 20 exclusive territories in the state in addition to his own Abilene franchise. He says the honor system is designed for businesses with fewer than 50 employees and adds that 95 percent of all U.S. businesses have fewer than 50 employees.

Big bucks

ANCHORAGE — The increase in world oil prices could nearly double Alaska's annual revenue this fiscal year, state officials say.

That estimate is the most optimistic of the oil price forecasts state Department of Revenue officials came up with during their semiannual oil price review last week.

Should the projection come true, the state's fiscal 1991 revenue could nearly double original estimates and hit $4.5 billion by June 30, officials said Friday. That rosy picture, however, is based on the darkest scenario for the Middle East — a major war.

About 85 percent of Alaska's revenue comes from oil taxes and royalties.

Gas locked

WASHINGTON — Would $2 gasoline get you out of that station wagon and into a mini sedan? Would cars that were more efficient, but slower, strike your fancy? Is patriotism as powerful as the pocketbook?

Members of Congress have once again asked those questions, as they wrestle over ways to reduce the nation's dependence on the foreign oil which to a large degree fuels our love affair with the automobile.

Of the 300 million gallons of gasoline U.S. motorists burn each day, almost half is imported, according to the Department of Energy. On the eve of the 1973 oil embargo, less than 37 percent of the nation's fuel came from overseas.

The consensus seemed to be that it would take strong economic incentives, coupled with government guidance and pressure, for Americans to kick their high-octane habits.

"Consumers are not terribly interested in fuel economy when they go into the showroom," admitted Marc Ledbetter, director of the American Council for an Energy Efficient Economy.

■ RIG COUNTS RISE. Both the U.S. and Permian Basin rig counts rose this past week, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the count rose five to 159.

Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma led an increase in U.S. rig count, which rose 33 this week to 1,089.

In the most recent total, Texas gained 17 rigs while Oklahoma and New Mexico each increased by nine.

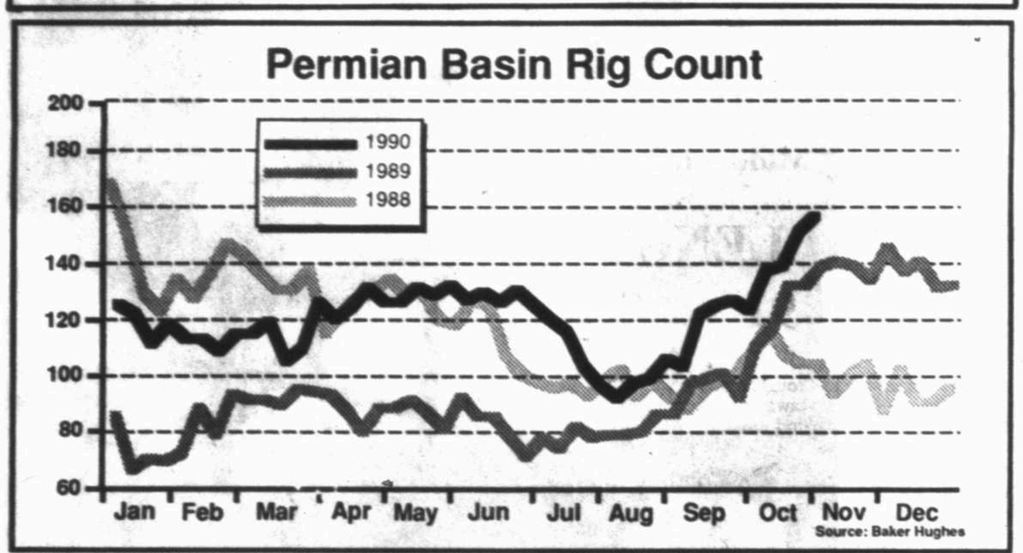

Other major oil producing states that reported gains for the week included Colorado, up five; and Wyoming, up one.

North Dakota showed a decline of six, while Kansas, Michigan and California each dropped one.

Petrolite opens office in Hobbs

Staff Report

Petrolite Oil Field Chemicals Group has officially opened its new Southeastern New Mexico District office and analytical laboratory for Tretolite chemicals and services.

"This new office and lab will permit us to provide faster, more accessible service to our customers in southeastern New Mexico."

The lab, which complements Petrolite's regional laboratory in Midland, will offer a full range of analytical services, including complete water and mineral deposit analysis, chemical residuals, and corrosion evaluations.

The new office will be headed by Steve Bennett, who has more than 10 years field sales and management experience with Tretolite chemicals. The Southeastern New Mexico district currently numbers some 20 employees with more expected.

Company puts new twist on bartering

By Mariann Caprino

NEW YORK (AP) — Lance Lundberg surveys the businesses in his "portfolio" much like a card player eyeing his hand.

There have been cable TV companies in need of broadcasting equipment, a cruise line that could use some advertising exposure, a papermaker with a surplus of baby wipes.

The companies' needs were skillfully matched through swaps and trades that Lundberg, a 34-year-old Harvard MBA, arranged under the age-old system known as bartering.

Bartering has been around since cave days and continues to be a method of commerce among corporations of every size worldwide. According to the Alexandria, Va.-based International Reciprocal Trade Association, more than 400 "exchanges" help an estimated 220,000 businesses — usually small ones — trade goods and services.

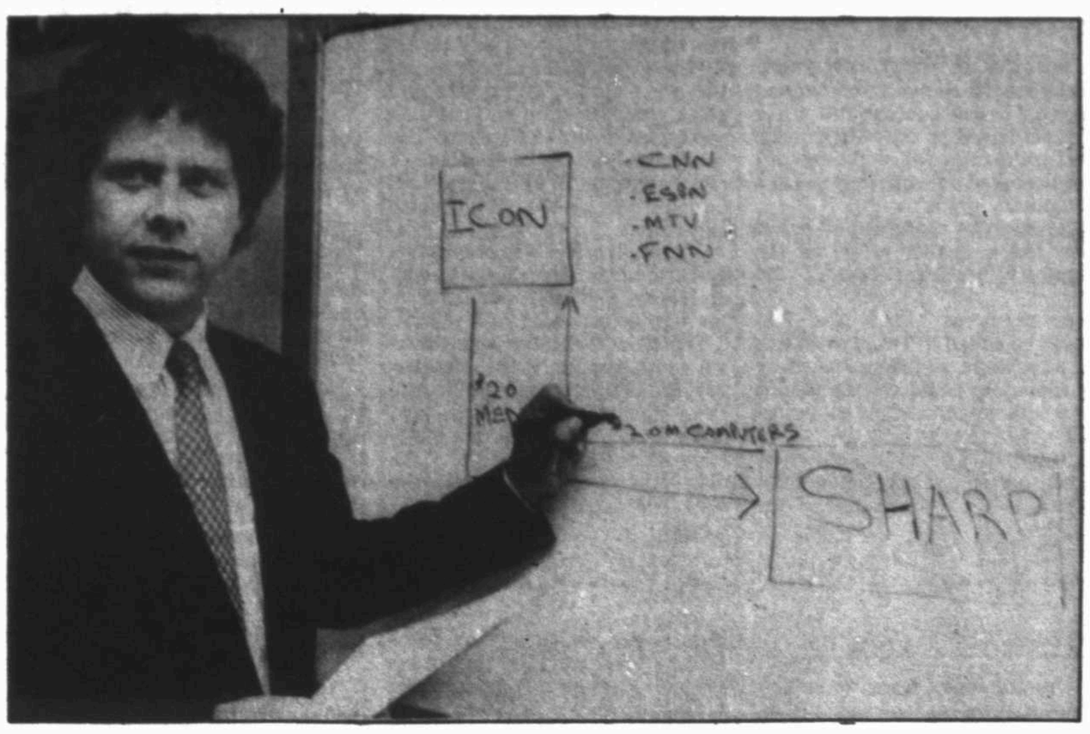

But exchanges account for only a fraction of the pie. When direct swaps among large corporations are considered, industry experts say barter is responsible for up to $12 billion of domestic trade a year.

Lundberg's ICON International puts a new twist on what traditionally is a quid pro quo transaction. By footing the bill himself in many cases, Lundberg is leveraged into the transaction, which makes him more of a financier than just a stockpiler of surplus goods and services.

Take, for example, a cable televison channel that needs broadcasting equipment. "I purchase it, lease it to them, and over the life of the lease take payment in a stream of 30-second commercial units," Lundberg said.

Since the price of air time has been increasing at an average 30 percent a year, Lundberg is left "holding a portfolio much like a portfolio of stocks. I can trade out when I think values have peaked."

By trading out, he means swapping the commercials for, say, Radisson Hotel rooms. Or, from time to time, Lundberg trades merchandise for cash, like the baby wipes he sold for James River Corp. "You can't endlessly trade, or you won't have money to pay the light bill," he said.

Lance Lundberg, president of ICON International, illustrates how his bartering business works. The Harvard MBA matches companies' needs through swaps and trades.

Much of ICON's success resulted from Lundberg's apt targeting of once-fledgling cable TV channels like Financial News Network, ESPN and Arts & Entertainment, which had spare capacity at low cost. The cable clients "got at a very early developmental stage cash-free financing" while Lundberg cheaply built a foundation from which to trade.

Now he's building another base in the travel and accommodation industry. All inventory is computerized and is periodically reviewed so values can be reassessed.

Four years into his venture, Lundberg boasts an impressive client list, including 3M Corp., James River, the Raddisson hotel chain, Norwegian Cruise Line, Time-Warner Inc. and People magazine.

ICON began taking shape in 1985, when Lundberg met John Fentener van Vlissingen, a wealthy Dutch businessman and chief executive of Holland's Noro Group. Noro helped set up meetings with "sophisticated, substantial individuals," as Lundberg refers to them, so he could pitch his idea.

Within six months, 60 European investors had anted up $60,000 each for a piece of a mutual fund; another $500,000 was raised through a separate pool of U.S. investors.

Lundberg was somewhat surprised at the interest in his new venture. "Selling a new idea is sometimes easier than selling an operating business," he said. "You're really enthusiastic — you're in there selling sizzle. When you get going, you're selling steak, and there's a big difference."

Today, ICON is a $20-plus million company growing at an annual rate of 60 percent. Lundberg now employes a staff of 25 at a midtown Manhattan office so new that the company's name has not yet been stenciled on the front doors. Annual returns have been "volatile, but never negative" and have averaged 16 percent a year, he said.

Born in Amherst, Mass., Lundberg studied English and administrative sciences at Yale University before moving on to Harvard University. He left the consulting firm Booz Allen & Hamilton to found a company that oversaw a network of cash machines. "I can't say it was a success, but we preserved our investors' capital and learned a lot," he said.

So far, the boyish Lundberg has received high marks from clients.

Daniel Infanti, a spokesman at Sharp Electronics Corp. in Mahwah, N.J., said his company has dealt exclusively with Lundberg in a handful of deals involving laptop computers, fax supplies and other office goods valued anywhere from $100,000 to more than $1 million.

"The use of barter helps us in times when we have distressed merchandise," Infanti said. "It gives us a good outlet for products that become outdated in a very short period of time."

Whataburger chain keeps Sunbelt focus

By Jim Steinberg

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — In the relaxed, resort setting of a recent corporate retreat, Whataburger Inc. President Jim L. Peterson digressed from the intricacies of strategic planning for a vital lesson: He showed top corporate and franchisee executives how to properly assemble a Whataburger hamburger sandwich.

"If Whataburger is on the name of your building, and that's the product that got you where you are, you do every thing you can to perfect it and keep perfecting it," Peterson said, explaining the company's preeminent maxim.

Born 40 years ago in Corpus Christi, Whataburger is a $300-million company with a sharply focused niche in the fiercely competitive fast food industry. Despite significant broadening of the menu, sales of the Whataburger sandwich account for more than 50 percent of total restaurant sales, Peterson said.

While some competitors have expanded globally, Whataburger has retained a Sunbelt focus. One can find the company's orange flying W symbol in Texas, Alabama, Arizona, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Tennessee. Recently a franchisee began operations in Arkansas.

Predominantly, Whataburger is a Texas firm: more than 70 percent of its units operate in the Lone Star State. Some 2,000 of Whataburger's 18,000 employees work in the Coastal Bend, where its restaurants have a 60 percent market share among the hamburger chains, Peterson said.

About 150 work out of the company's corporate headquarters at 4600 Parkdale Drive.

Peterson said Whataburger currently has about 475 units, up from 255 in 1980. "One of our top priorities continues to be building that critical mass in markets. We are still trying to fill in those markets rather than branch out," Peterson said.

Privately held Whataburger is detached from the often turbulent world of publicly owned corporate America. Miami-based Burger King, for example, has been held by three major ownership groups in its 26-year life. And it has seen many chief executives come and go in recent years. By contrast, Whataburger has been controlled by the same founding family throughout its history.

After the restaurant's originator, Harmon Dobson, was killed in a private plane crash in 1967, his widow, Grace Dobson, became chairwoman and has held the post ever since.

Peterson, 54, has been Whataburger's president and chief executive officer for 16 years.

Whataburger's methodical growth has earned it the nickname "the Steady Eddie" of fast food. Critics say, however, that the firm's insulation as a private company has made it sluggish when it comes to new product introductions.

Like most privately held companies, Whataburger doesn't divulge its sales or earnings. "We really just like to go about running our restaurants as well as we can and we don't try to impress anyone with numbers," Peterson explained.

But according to the trade publication Restaurants & Institutions, Whataburger's 1989 revenues were $301 million, up 174 percent from $110 million in 1980. Whataburger ranked 75 among the magazine's recently published listing of the 400 largest food chains, up from the number 76 spot the year before. Its sales grew 7.3 percent last year over 1988 levels, the magazine said. Sales for No.1-ranked McDonald's Corp., headquartered in Oak Brook, Ill., increased 7.7 percent to $17.3 billion, while the number two player, Burger King, grew 5.6 percent to $5.7 billion. Dublin, Ohio-based Wendy's International Corp. grew 4.6 per cent to $3 billion, Restaurants & Institutions said.

OIL & GAS FIELDS OF THE PERMIAN BASIN - SILURIAN-DEVONIAN CARBONATES: This course will examine the stratigraphy and geologic development of Silurian-Devonian (including Fusselman) reservoirs in the Permian Basin. Several field examples will be presented which will show how the actual orientation of pay zones might be secondary to structure as mapped on overlying markers, and will emphasize the importance of stratigraphic exploration for more subtly-expressed reservoirs in these rocks. Fee $60; Louis J. Mazzullo, instructor; Nov. 7, 8:30-11:30 a.m.

OIL & GAS FIELDS OF THE PERMIAN BASIN - MORROW OF SOUTHEASTERN NEW MEXICO: This course will examine how reservoir trends are developed in the Morrow, and the importance of recognizing lateral and vertical depositional and authigenic facies changes in the reservoir sandstones. Alternative mapping techniques designed to predict reservoir fairways will be discussed. Modern deposition models from Belize will also be covered. Fee $60; Louis J. Mazzullo, instructor; Nov. 7, 1-4 p.m.

Electronics company plans staff cutbacks

EINDHOVEN, Netherlands (AP) — Philips, the Dutch electronics manufacturing giant, said it will cut nearly 16 percent of its worldwide staff and eliminate stock dividends because of heavy losses and stiff competition.

The company, which makes items ranging from light bulbs to televisions under a range of brands, said it lost nearly $1.3 billion in the third quarter of the year.

CHALLENGE 91

1990 will be remembered as a year which brought a military buildup and energy crisis to the Middle East, a new movement of energy awareness and a return to profitable wellhead prices. While caution for industry expansion remains, we look to 1991 to revilatize the industry and for a return to enhanced times.

OIL: Three scenarios

(From 1H)

Brown notes that there has been little benefit shown from current high oil prices because the prices are perceived as only temporary. "Oil companies will make few decisions based on what they see as a temporary price."

He said a $1 change in oil prices now has a smaller effect on the economy of Texas than it did before.

As many as 17,000 new jobs could be added in Texas with each $1 increase in oil prices, but many of those jobs could be only temporary and eliminated as oil prices decline.

It is not known exactly how much better the producing areas will fare over other areas of the state, because the report fails to break out economies by areas of the state.

While the producing sector of the oil industry is expected to grow, transportation and refining sectors are likely to decrease. The study also says that a shortage of rigs, equipment and personnel could hamper economic expansion.

Higher oil prices will also have a positive impact upon the economy of Mexico and that will improve the border economy of Texas.

The federal reserve economists who authored the study are: Harvey Rosenblum, Stephen Brown, Evan Koenig, Keith Phillips and Mine Yucel. Brown said the study took about three weeks to complete and incorporated data the bank had used previously.

LINE: Penney's refocuses

(From 1H)

The JCPenney Home focus has identified its target consumer as female, between the ages of 35-44 with an income of $30,000 to $50,000. Women account for more than 80 percent of all home furnishing purchases, and the focus's target consumer spends more for home furnishings than any other segment of the population and makes over 60 percent of all department store purchases.

PITTS: Allday feels heat

(From 1H)

wants to do what is right. He is not out to get anyone."

Nevertheless, Hilliard is one of those who agrees that Allday should have gotten rid of the Hesse staff and installed his own.

"I think it's a mistake to think that Martin Allday has been trapped by any camp. He is his own man and not a dupe of anyone, and he is not an enemy of the oil industry as some have characterized him," says Bush.

No matter how deep the disagreement on Iroquois, there seems to be general agreement from both sides that Martin Allday is the right man to straighten out the "mess" at FERC.

Hilliard says the U.S. cannot adopt a rate structure similar to Canada's or certify new pipeline projects into the Northeast because of an outdated, unworkable regulatory system at FERC.

"Heading FERC is a difficult, thankless, no-win job," said Hilliard, "and despite the tough rhetoric, we're glad that Martin Allday has the job. The system that regulates natural gas delivery in the U.S. is broken, and if anyone can fix it, he can."

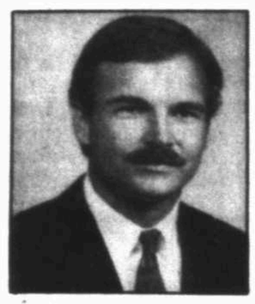

Hilliard says there is no reason that it should take two to three years to certify a pipeline, and no reason that every ruling by FERC should be overturned by the courts.

The Natural Gas Supply Association agrees, and has supported an overhaul of FERC that would limit litigation, formal hearings and mandatory statutory reviews. Nicholas Bush says FERC has been saddled with the difficult task of ushering the natural gas industry into a revolutionary new era of open markets with 50 year old laws.

"Allday can handle it," said Bush. "He is a class act. Both he and Jerry Langdon, another Midlander, are members of FERC because they have a knowledge of the industry and pipelines."

Oil prices squeeze chemical industry

HOUSTON (AP) — Crude oil price hikes hampered third-quarter growth in the chemical industry — a situation analysts say will get worse by the end of the year.

"Feedstock prices have gone up more quickly than product prices," said Earl Armstrong, a consultant for DeWitt & Co., a Houston consulting firm that specializes in the chemical industry.

Makers of "commodity" chemicals such as ethylene will be hit the worst, analysts say, because oil represents a large portion of their costs. Ethylene is the building block for a variety of plastics, and various Houston-area plants make billions of pounds of it a year.

"If conditions stay as they are, it's bound to be worse in the fourth quarter" because a recession will follow, said analyst Leslie C. Ravitz with Salomon Brothers in New York.

Companies that buy commodity chemicals and further refine them to make plastics are a little more insulated because a relatively smaller portion of their feedstock cost is directly related to the price of oil, analysts say.

Armstrong said prices for some refined products began catching up with the higher costs this month. But most companies were forced to swallow the higher costs during the first month of the oil spike because of price protection clauses in supply agreements that require them to give manufacturers 30 days' notice of an increase.

"Everybody got hurt pretty badly on the time lag," Armstrong said.

Integrated companies with large chemical units like Exxon Corp., Chevron Corp., Mobil Corp. and E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., which owns Conoco, will offset their chemical earnings squeezes with higher profits from crude oil sales.

But stand-alone chemical companies such as Dow Chemical Co. and Houston-based Lyondell Petrochemical and Vista Chemical Co. have no crude oil profit buffer.

John L. Garcia, analyst with Wertheim Schroder & Co. in New York, said he has reduced his third-quarter earnings estimate for Lyondell from $1.10 a share three months ago to 60 cents; for Vista from $2 a share to $1; and for Dow from $1.75 a share to 70 cents.

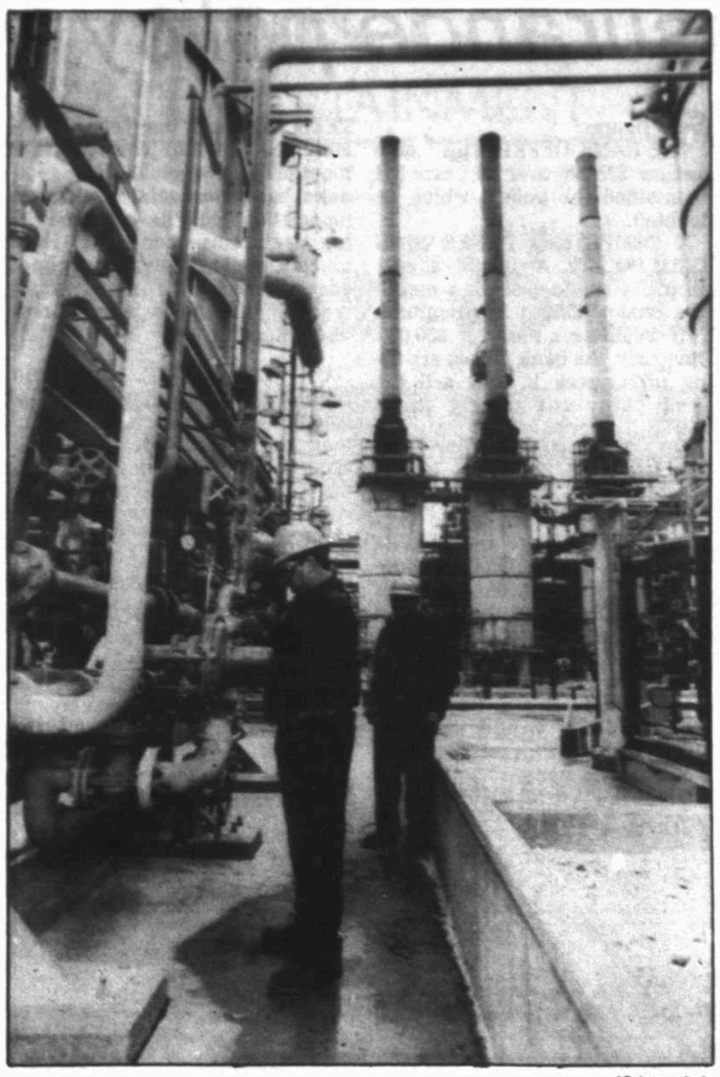

Houston-based Sterling Chemicals is an exception. A major styrene producer, Sterling does not expect a big hit for the third quarter because it has been able to pass on its cost increases.

"Styrene is pretty darned tight right now," Sterling Vice President J. David Heaney said. Styrene is used to make polystyrene foam and a variety of plastic packaging and automotive products.

Heaney said a July explosion that knocked out a large styrene unit at Arco Chemical's Channelview plant firmed the market for styrene. Sterling has been able raise prices by 7 cents a pound.

But Lyondell Petrochemical has been able to recoup only a third of its extra costs to make ethylene and propylene, spokesman David Harpole said. Feedstocks are costing Lyondell at least 15 cents more a pound, he said.

"Assuming oil prices stabilize, we believe we can pass through some additional price increases a little bit at a time," Lyondell's Harpole said.

Chemical companies that turn oil into plastic are expected to feel the squeeze on their earnings from high oil prices.

Compaq profits up 42 percent

DALLAS (NYT) — Compaq Computer Corp. said that its profits rose 41.9 percent in the third quarter, with foreign sales continuing to account for more than half of its revenue as growth in the North American market remained slow.

Net income for the Houston-based company was $123.6 million, or $1.38 a share, compared with $87.1 million, or $1.01 a share.

Diners may soon develop taste for McPizza

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) — Stacy McIntire and her visitors wanted something with cheese and sauce, so they did the obvious thing at a not-so-obvious place.

They went out for pizza — at McDonald's.

"We had company over and we fed four people on two pizzas for something like $12," she said. "We went to the drive-through and didn't even have to get out of the car. We got it in five minutes."

Pizza, in the land of all-beef patties, special sauce, lettuce, cheese, pickles, onions and sesame-seed buns? Is this a fast-food induced nightmare?

Not at all. McDonald's, which for years counted its hamburger sales in the billions, may soon be counting pizza, pasta and other non-traditional offerings in an attempt to boost sluggish U.S. dinner sales.

Owensboro's four Golden Arches and 10 others across the Ohio River in Evansville, Ind., are among 240 restaurants nationwide which are test-marketing tomato pies. The 12-inch pies also are being tested in Las Vegas; Hartford, Conn.; Fresno, Calif.; and suburbs of Chicago.

Fresh carrots and celery sticks are being test marketed in Pennsylvania and California, and McDonald's also is experimenting with fresh fruit and soups.

"Our customers are interested in a little more variety and more choices," said Melissa Oakley, spokeswoman at McDonald's Corp.'s Oak Brook, Ill., headquarters. "But we have to be very careful in what we choose. We're still committed to serving a limited menu."

But Michael Mueller, a Montgomery Securities Inc. analyst who specializes in restaurants, says McDonald's has reasons to press ahead with pizza now — investors' complaints about the company's recent U.S. sales growth.

A pattern of progressively weaker domestic sales growth began in 1988 after peaking at 11.6 percent in 1987. A selloff of the company's stock followed release of second quarter results showing domestic sales of $6 billion for the first half of 1990, a 3.3-percent increase from the first half of 1989.

"From their standpoint they have to do something to boost dinner sales," Mueller said. "This (pizza) is better than nothing."

But is it better than Tony's, or Vito's, or Sal's?

"If you like pizza, it's just not right," said Elaine Lillpop of Rockport, Ind. "It's a hurry-up job."

She complained that the pepperoni pizza she bought in Owensboro tasted burned and didn't have enough cheese. Her 8-year-old daughter, Kari, said she didn't like it either.

Gail Thompson of Owensboro said she won a free pizza and liked it, but wouldn't buy another.

"I love pizza but I don't particularly like eating it in this atmosphere," she said between bites of a burger. "It's not fast food to me."

That, says Mueller, is the problem. Pizza doesn't follow the rules that helped make McDonald's the world's largest restaurant chain.

"In the past they've been successful introducing products that are cheap, easy to eat, and come with quick service at the drive-through window," said the San Francisco-based analyst. "Pizza is expensive, hard to eat in the car, and takes five minutes or more to get."

Pizza also requires special ovens and is more difficult to make.

Another restaurant analyst, Roy Burry of Kidder Peabody in New York, acknowledged the problems. But he expressed confidence that McDonald's would find a fast-food pizza that works.

SCOTT BURNS

Savings bank's insurance policy an offer to die for

By Scott Burns

It seemed like a thoughtful offer.

Burns

Having let me borrow the money to buy a home, the savings bank that had lent the money was offering me an opportunity to buy life insurance. "We are pleased to endorse a Term Life Insurance Program written to protect your home loan," their note said. Furthermore, the savings bank said it would simply add the cost of the policy to my monthly mortgage payment.

Sound like a reasonable deal?

Think again. If what I was offered is any indication of the direct mail selling schemes emanating from savings banks, the title for Sleaze Leader of the '90s will go, by excoriation, to marketing managers at the thrifts that sell grossly overpriced term life insurance to a trusting public.

You can measure the degree of sleaze by exploring the value chasm between what was offered through the mail and alternatives offered through other sources. The offer was for $125,000 of decreasing term life insurance at a price of $219.24 a month for someone age 50 to 54. Thinking the price was a little steep, I called the 800 number provided to ask if I understood things right.

Did the policy build any cash value? I asked.

No.

Did the policy offer a level amount of life insurance?

No. The amount of insurance declined with the mortgage balance.

So I called the agent who endures the thankless task of ordering a physical for me each year so I can get the lowest price on term life insurance. I asked him for some alternatives for the same amount of money.

An hour later he had faxed me these figures:

THE BANK OFFER. This would cost me $78,926 over 30 years if I maintained the policy, which he doubted.

A COMPETING DECREASING TERM POLICY. A virtually identical policy would cost $82 a month or a total of $25,520 in premiums. This would save me over $50,000. Obviously, the bank people are doing pretty well if they sell the same thing for nearly three TIMES as much.

A LEVEL TERM POLICY. A 15 year level term policy would cost $44.41 a month for the first 15 years. After that it would cost $168.73 a month for the next 15 years. This would provide more coverage since it remained at $125,000. If I applied the $174.83 a month difference to the mortgage, it would be virtually paid off at the end of 15 years. Only 26 payments would remain. Buying another product would save me $169,000 in future mortgage payments to the bank.

ONE YEAR RENEWABLE TERM. A simple, one year renewable policy would cost $23.04 a month. This, I was told, was a good news, bad news deal: I would save money but would have to face rising premiums each year. How much it would finally cost depended on whether or not I could "reenter" with a new policy at regular intervals.

UNIVERSAL LIFE. It was also possible to use the same amount of money to buy a policy that built a long term cash value. For the same outlay, for instance, I could buy a policy that would have a cash value over $300,000 in 30 years. In other words, instead of being out of pocket $78,000, I would have over $300,000.

Another alternative was to buy a universal life policy that had the same life insurance but a smaller cash value build up. This would cost me $93 a month, a savings of $126 a month, and would have a cash value of $30,629 in 30 years. If I applied the $126 a month saved to the mortgage payment, the mortgage would be paid off in 230 payments (less than 20 years) instead of 30 years, saving some $142,600 in future mortgage payments.

James M. Hiser and Mark J. Sherer, of Hiser/Sherer Associates in Dallas, Texas, are in the business of tailoring universal life policies to create attractive non-qualified pension plans for individuals and corporations. These fellows know life contracts inside and out and didn't pull any punches "... the premium you had quoted to you for your mortgage redemption insurance seems outright criminal," they wrote with their analysis.

According to their figures, I could use the same premium dollars to build enough cash value to pay off the mortgage balance — about $91,000 — in less than 19 years in a policy that includes a disability rider that will make the payments if I am disabled.

Could it be, I asked them, that the figures are particularly bad because I am about to turn 50?

"Give us the rate for someone younger and we'll tell you," they said.

A 35-year-old homeowner who would have to pay the insurance company $636 a year for $125,000 of decreasing term insurance could buy the same coverage in a universal life policy and accumulate a cash value of over $49,000 in 30 years. The choice, in other words, is between paying his savings bank $19,080 over 30 years and having nothing to show for it or buying another product that will have cash value of more than $49,000.

Bottom line: until state or federal agencies act to regulate this kind of bilk-by-mail offer, just remember that a bank offer isn't necessarily competitive, reasonable, or in your interest.

Scott Burns' column, syndicated by King Features, appears on the Reporter-Telegram business pages each Thursday and Sunday.

MEETINGS

SPE group to hear from drilling expert

Jack Combes, recently retired chief drilling engineer for Chevron Corp., will be the guest speaker at the Nov. 6 meeting of the Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers.

Combes

The meeting will be at Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Combes will speakon "International Drilling Operations: Past, Present and Future."

As chief engineer, drilling for Chevron, Combes provided technical consultation on difficult operational and engineering problems for drilling projects worldwide. He also was responsible for drilling personnel as well as corporate strategy for drilliing research, technological development and training.

McElwrath set for WTGS symposium

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

McElwrath

The West Texas Geological Society has made "innovative ideas in exploration and production" the theme for its Fall Symposium set for November 1 and 2.

Principal speaker for the event will be Mike McElwrath, deputy assistant secretary at the Department of Energy. McElwrath has been one of the guiding forces behind a DOE plan to sponsor innovative petroleum research to prevent the premature plugging of wells.

DOE has reported that at least two major reservoirs in the Permian Basin will be the target of extensive oil recovery research and that the research will be shared throughout the oil industry. McElwrath has supported has supported a plant to created an energy "extension agent" for the purpose of distributing production research.

Seven field studies will also be included at the symposium. They will include studies of the Salt Creek Field, Spraberry Trend Area, Three Bar Devonian Chert Field, Amacker-Tippett Wolfcamp Field, B.C. Canyon Field, W. Pardue Field and Cordona Lake field.

"We expect over 400 to be on hand for the two-day symposium," said Louis Mazzullo, publicity chairman for the event.

Mazzullo said over 20 professional papers would be presented at the symposium and that some of the topics for discussion would include: horizontal drilling, strategic infill drilling, remote sensing, use of formation microscanner, reservoir geology and other topics.

For more information on the fall symposium call WTGS at (915) 683-1573.

'The Runner Stumbles'

■ The author of the upcoming Midland Community Theater production says the characters are the strength of "The Runner Stumbles."

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

The story of an actual murder trial in turn-of-the-century rural Michigan forms the genesis for Milan Stitt's dramatic work, "The Runner Stumbles."

"I think people are going to sit back in the show and try to figure out whether or not the principal character did commit the murder," said Don Bachmann, executive director at Midland Community Theatre and director for this production, which opens Friday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Avenue.

"If he did, what drove him to it. If he didn't, what is left of his life after he's a acquitted?"

John Bourke, who plays the leading character, finds the play "intense." This drama "really requires that not only you know your lines, but you have to feel them before you say them."

Stitt spent more than a decade working on the script. First written as a classroom assignment at Yale Drama School, the script went through three major revisions while Stitt supported himself by working at a variety of jobs in different theaters and in the public information office of the New York Public Library.

During those 11 years, four different literary agents represented the play, acquiring four options for Broadway production. The play was staged three times before opening on Broadway May 18, 1976, where it played for 191 performances, closing Oct. 30, 1976. In 1979, a film version of the production was made starring Dick van Dyke."

Unlike many contemporary dramas, "The Runner Stumbles" has few humorous moments. This type of drama demands the actors create three-dimensional characters.

"This is not like 'Steel Magnolias,' where the audience laughs two thirds of the time and cries one third of the time. It's a show where the characters and their development are what the audience is going to focus in on. When they focus on the characters in the play, it means that every small moment of the play must be true so there is less tolerance for error.

"Even with 'Cat on a Hot Tin Roof,' there are certain elements of comedy inherent in the script," Bachmann said. "There are very few laughs in this show. Its strength comes through its characters. This places a tremendous burden on the actors and director to make sure the characters ring true. Through their realness we hope we can maintain the attention of the audience."

Most of the members of the MCT cast are, Bachmann said, "seasoned veterans. Whenever we do a drama, we attract some of the best people that we have."

Included in the ensemble cast of five men and four women are Bourke as Father Rivard, Jennifer Helms as Sister Rita, Barbara Inglehart as Mrs. Shandig, Ronald Allen as Amos, Kelly Newson as Erna Prindle, Scott Lunsford as Toby Felker, Chris Breining as the prosecutor, Kimberly Smith as Louise and Andros Toefield as Monsignor Nicholson. Stage manager is Carolyn Sutton.

"It's a different style of staging for us because, if you were a James Joyce fan you would say, there is a little bit of stream of conscious here," Bachmann said. "The play takes place in a courtroom in the upper peninsula of Michigan in 1911, but it also takes place in the mind of the principal character as he relives those pieces of time that led us to where we are now.

"So the set cannot be just a courtroom space," Bachmann said. "They need to be abstract enough so that we can go to many different places that are conjured up in this man's mind. That was the challenge in the set design, and it's one that has been ably met by our designer David Layman."

MCT is also spending "a lot of time" ensuring that the costuming for the show is an accurate representation of 1911 rural America, Bachmann said.

"Because the style of staging will be abstract, it means that greater care must be taken in both sound and light to help create the proper atmosphere for the action of the play," Bachmann said.

Thus, "The Runner Stumbles" provides costumer Mae Dawson and Eddie Taylor, light designer, with a "marvelous opportunity to demonstrate their talents," Bachmann said. "We have a great bunch of volunteers that are going to be working on the show. Again, we don't put up as many dramas as compared to lighter stuff. When we get the opportunity to do a stronger script, we want to rise to the occasion."

Bourke, who plays the priest accused of murdering a nun, was raised in a Catholic family of nine in New York.

"I'm in the process of rediscovering my Catholic faith after questioning for 20 years several aspects of my faith," Bourke said. "This play sort of strikes me at an awkward time. I have a whole gamut of stories and memories and I've even made videos where I have impersonated my first grade nun — Sister Leoni — who spoke in words totally alien to first graders."

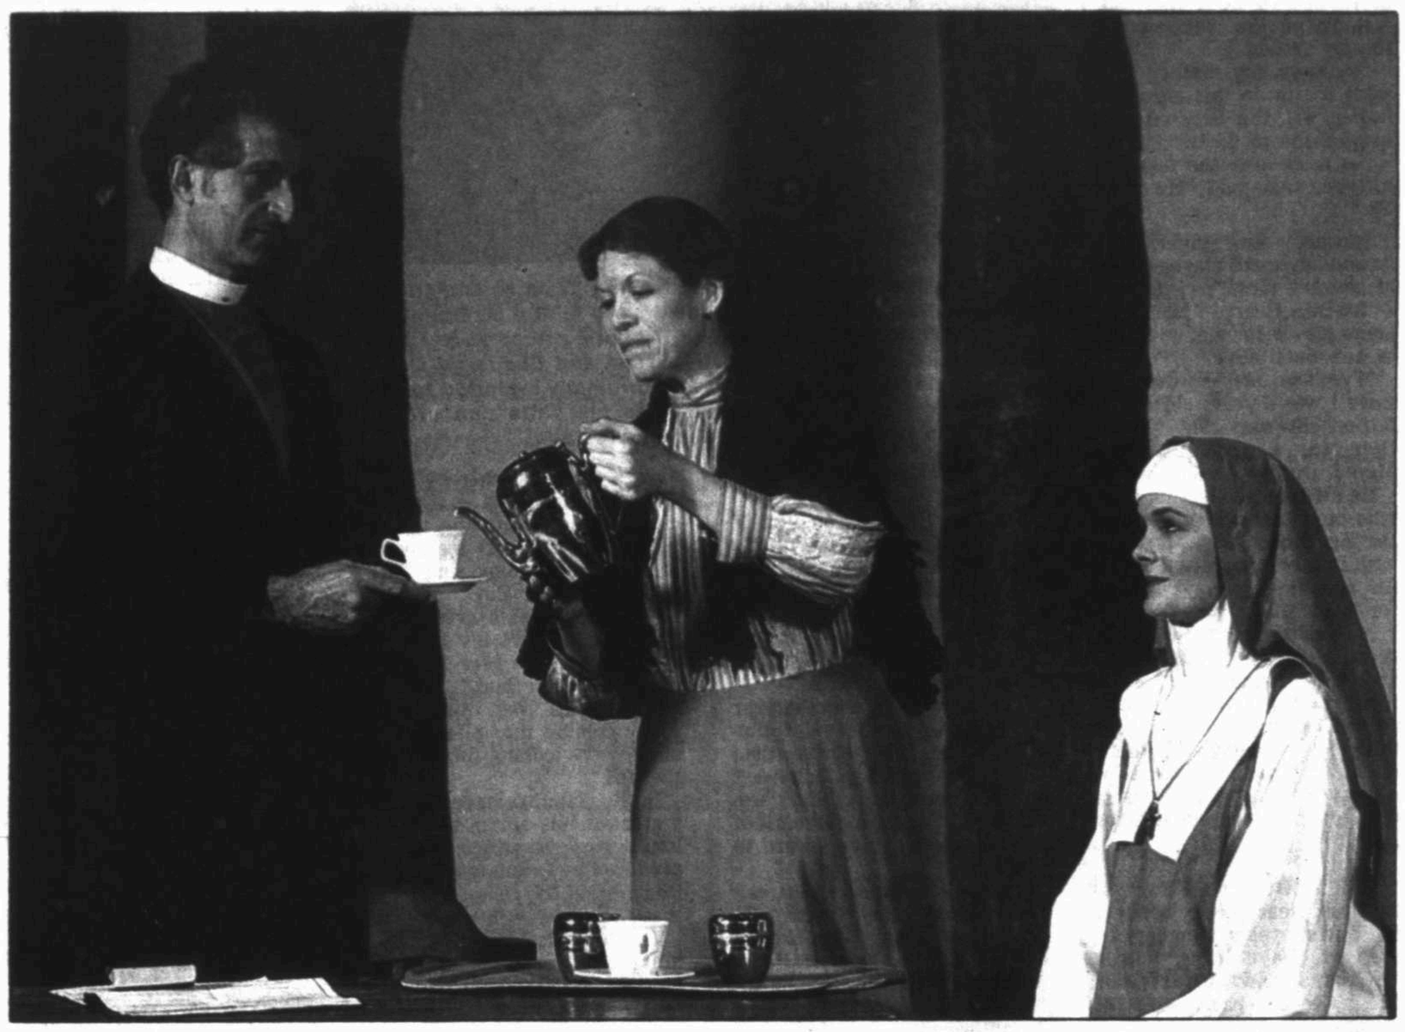

In New York, Bourke said, Sister Leoni was well known by parents, parish priests, other educators and bishops as "one of the best teachers of English grammar."

However, Bourke said, children saw nuns, including Sister Leoni, in a different light. "Every kid at that age — we thought there were men, women and nuns."

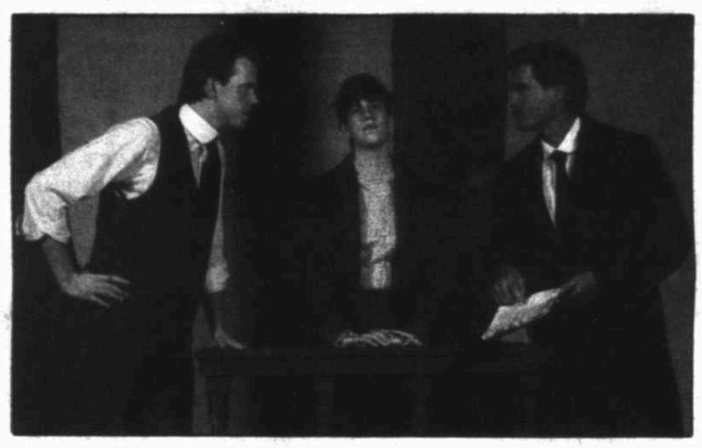

Besides, they could not understand what she was talking about, Bourke said. In one of his videos he quotes some of her favorite words — galoshes, vestibule, orientation and laboratory.

At a time when Bourke was in the process of "working Sisters Jennifer Helms and Kelly Newson have their own solution to one of the most difficult aspects of acting — learning lines. They spend their days at work practicing lines.

"We're in a room by ourselves basically away from the public and the traffic, so we can work and learn lines at the same time which is a real advantage," said Mrs. Newson.

However, they do have company as they learn lines. Mrs. Newson manages the dog department at Birds 'N' Things and Miss Helms, her younger sister, helps her groom dogs.

"Sometimes we do get some strange looks from some of our four-footed friends," Mrs. Newson said. "I do have a very understanding family that is very supportive of my theater. I have a husband and a 17-year-old son and an 8-year-old stepdaughter, and they all like to come and watch mother on stage."

Miss Helms, 20, plans to pursue an acting career. Although the first time she was on stage was as a fourth grader at Burnet Elementary, she traces her interest in acting to her sophomore year at Midland High School.

"I had Bob Fennell as a director, and I did a lot of Texas Forensics Association competing, and I did a lot of theater and just got hooked on it," Miss Helms said.

Mrs. Newson first on-stage experience came in 1980 when she had a chorus part in Permian Playhouse's "My Fair Lady."

"I had a friend who wanted to do that show, and so to give her moral encouragement we both went down and tried out. Unfortunately or fortunately, I made the cast. She didn't. I've had a love affair with the theater ever since."

The sisters have performed in productions together before. Since February, they have acted in "Othello," "Cinderella" and "Blithe Spirit," all in Odessa. Their acting debut at Midland Community Theatre comes Friday when "The Runner Stumbles" opens at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Asked why they haven't performed at MCT before, Mrs. Newson said, "We've just been very busy with the Globe. It's always kind of been our home away from home."

Actually, Miss Helms wasn't going to audition for "The Runner Stumbles." She just went to the auditions with her sister.

"We had just closed a play, and I wasn't going to do this one. And I got downstairs, and I guess it's a theater disease, I heard everyone reading for it. I had to try out."

Restless Heart to hit Tall City

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Restless Heart wheels its Fast Moving Train to Midland's Chaparral Center Thursday. Showtime is 7:30 p.m. Opening the concert will be Alan Jackson. Tickets, priced at $17.50, may be purchased at Endless Horizons and Chaparral Center. Lead singer Larry Stewart, who originally intended to be a professional baseball player, gets his "hits" on stage rather than on the baseball diamond.

Although his childhood dream was to play professional ball, Larry Stewart gets his hits on stage instead of the baseball field.

"I really didn't want to get in this business in the first place," said Stewart. "I'm an athlete, was an athlete growing up.

"It was a lot of peer pressure, or I felt peer pressure from my friends, if they knew I played the piano, I'd be a sissy. So, I just played the piano secretly for my father.

"Actually, my mother didn't want me to do this either. My father was the only one who wanted me to do it."

His voice over the telephone softened as he said, "He died in '78."

Stewart — lead singer, guitarist and keyboard player for one of country music's rising stars — Restless Heart — has been a piano player for almost as long as he's been alive.

"I've been playing the piano since I was 4 years old for my father," Stewart said. "My father was a singer, and we played around Kentucky."

He attended college in Nashville on a baseball scholarship. During those years, he lived with family friends and earned his spending money working for MCA Music.

"I was doing tape copies there (MCA) for all the writers, and they found out I could sing," Stewart said. "So, I started out singing demos and one thing led to another. I met a bunch of guys in the band. We started playing in projects together and formed Restless Heart."

THE PROCESS OF forming Restless Heart took between five and six years. Members are Stewart, Dave Innis, vocals, keyboard and guitar; Paul Gregg, vocals, bass; John Dittrich, vocals, drums; and Gregg Jennings, vocals and guitar.

Since 1985, Restless Heart, who plays Midland's Chaparral Center Thursday, has had six consecutive Number One singles, including "That Rock Won't Roll," "I'll Still be Loving You," Why Does It Have To Be," "Wheels," "New York Hold Her Tight," "Bluest Eyes in Texas" and "Tender Lies."

"We've been very lucky," Stewart said. "I never really thought I could get to this point — to be able to do the kind of music that I love and be successful at it and have people want to buy our music and buy tickets to our concerts."

"This has been a great year for Restless Heart; it's definitely been the best year Restless Heart has ever had," Stewart said. "Seems like things are really coming into place right now. We're looking forward to the '90s."

This April Restless Heart can be heard on a Roy Rogers tribute album. Along with Rogers and K.T. Oslin, Restless Heart performs a country classic on the album, "Tumbin' Tumbleweeds."

Although Restless Heart will spend most of December on tour in Holland and Germany, the members will be home for the holidays.

THE GROUP IS PART of a syndicated television Christmas special — "Home for the Holidays" — put together by RCA and telecast on TNN. In the special, Jennings plays the guitar while Restless Heart members, in five-part harmony, sing "The Little Drummer Boy."

"This has been a great year for Restless Heart; it's definitely been the best year Restless Heart has ever had," Stewart said. "Seems like things are really coming into place right now. We're looking forward to the '90s."

In the planning stages now is a greatest hits album to be released in July, which will be produced by Grammy recipient Don Was, of the group Was Not Was.

This year also has had its humorous moments. The one Stewart recalls happened recently at an outdoor festival in Florida.

"We hit the show, and we were rocking, we were jamming," Stewart said. He began laughing.

"About six songs into the show the road manager comes over and whispers to our guitar player Gregg Jennings. He (Jennings) got real embarrassed, and he zipped up the zipper on his pants. The first three rows applauded.

"I don't think I've ever seen Gregg Jennings more embarrassed. We've had so much fun with that. We've all done embarrassing things and that happens to be the last.

'GREGG IS VERY quiet and very shy and he very seldom does anything wrong. He kind of stays out of everyone's way. He's the level headed one in the band. He covers his tracks, but this time he didn't cover all his tracks.

After muttering between laughs something to the effect of — "He's going to kill me when he sees this in print," Stewart said, "It's a good thing our year's coming to an end."

Today, Stewart wouldn't change places with anyone else in the world, not even professional baseball players. As an artist, he said, he feels "very lucky about where" he is right now. He credits the band's fans and says Texas has "been very, very good to us. Texas is our best state in United States of America.

"I would hope that people would know how appreciative Restless Heart is about where we are and our fans and people who come to see our concerts."

Performing live is of paramount importance to Restless Heart, whose members "look forward to that 90 minutes on stage every day" they're on the road.

"We're in the entertainment business, and we pride ourselves on that. We have a lot of energy. We invite the audience to get involved — dance and clap and sing. It's really important to us that people get their money's worth. Our job is to have them go away saying, 'My goodness. That's one of the best concerts I've ever seen.' "

THE MOST IMPORTANT thing to an artist is, Stewart said, "be true to yourself and do what feels good to you. That's why we feel so lucky. We're doing the music we love — something that most of us have dreamed about all our lives. And we've been lucky enough to have music" which "touches people."

RUNNER: Themes recross plot line

(From 1H)

out what it was like to be raised Catholic" and "what it's like to be an adult Catholic," MCT held its auditions for "The Runner Stumbles." The priest's role represented such a "challenge" to Bourke, who has usually acted in comedies, that it was hard to turn down. However, after getting into rehearsals, Bourke has realized the play contains certain potential drawbacks.

"I have some concerns that this play playing in a community where Catholics are in a minority might provide a real handy target for issues that I think might have typified the church back in the early 1900s.

"My concern is that there might be Catholics in the community who might be sensitive to this type of theme because it's rare to hear anything constructive about Catholics said in the news. Catholics are always in a controversial spot.

"For instance, the church's hierarchy, specifically, the pope. Because of the church's strong stand on issues, he's very often the brunt of a lot of jokes and really even ridicule. It's my concern that this play in that light might provide an easy target for people who don't understand the history and traditions of the church."

Bourke has questioned "whether depicting a character in a true life story is worth the potential damage that it could impose on both Catholics and non-Catholics alike," while realizing the playwright took a true situation and used it to say something universal about man's condition.

"Although it has very strong themes that for me are reminiscent of my Catholic upbringing, it's really the story of a man who hides behind an institution so that he doesn't have to deal with his feelings," Bourke said.

"And I think that the institution could be any institution, or it could be another person, it could be suicide, and, in this case, it's the church. To me, that's the message that I find appealing. It's not so much a story of what the Catholic church is, but it's a story about a particular human situation."

Bourke paused, then added as if the thought had just occurred to him, "Of course, this play would never work if the guy was Baptist."

SISTERS: Rehearsals literally go to dogs

(From 1H)

in a courtroom and is loosely based on a murder which occurred in rural Michigan in 1911. The murder victim was a nun; the murder suspect a priest. During the drama, the audience spends time wondering if the priest is or is not guilty.

Miss Helms plays the role of the murder victim, Sister Rita.

"It's pretty hard compared to some I've done, but it's not the most difficult," said Miss Helms, who found Shakespeare "a killer. It was good practice because after doing that show I'm a lot more conscious now of trying to memorize things letter perfect."

The sisters usually learn everybody's lines, especially by the time a show opens.

"Kelly does basic clipper work in the morning, and I run lines with her," Miss Helms said. "And then I bath and dry, and she runs lines with me. We both finish (dogs) in the afternoon, and we get my brother and sister-in-law to run lines with us — Mike and Charlee Helms. It works pretty well. We can be 'off book' pretty quick. That's good for us so we can concentrate more on blocking and character development."

But, what kind of audience do the dogs provide?

"Dogs make a wonderful audience," Mrs. Newson said. Especially when rehearsing musical numbers, "They tell you exactly when to shut up, and they let you know when it's right."

Brady Bunch on stage draws fans

CHICAGO (AP) — OK, video kids, fill in the blank:

"Here's the story

"Of a man named - - - - -"

If you answered "Brady," get in line for the unlikeliest hit on Chicago's theater scene: "The Real Live Brady Bunch."

The show is a live, word-for-word re-enactment of an episode from the early 1970s television series, "The Brady Bunch." The all-adult cast plays it straight, from the dopey sing-along theme song to little Cindy's irritating lisp.

The show has become so popular since beginning its Tuesday night run in early June that the 110-seat Annoyance Theater added a second weekly performance in mid-August. The cramped theater in a funky, North Side neighborhood charges $7 a ticket.

If "The Real Live Bradys" is art — and not even the actors agree on that point — it may be the first case of art imitating TV sitcom life, a kind of life so far removed from the real thing that it's, well, laughable.

A concept this loopy could only have been hatched by people with genuine affection for the Bradys: sisters Faith and Jill Soloway, who jointly produce and direct the shows for the Metraform theater company.

"We pay tribute to the Bradys, we don't disrespect them," Jill said.

Like the young professionals who fill the theater, the Soloways are in their mid-20s and grew up watching the Brady Bunch, which stayed on television from 1969-'74 and ran as an hour-long series in 1977 before hitting the rerun trail.

"We were all really jealous of the Bradys," Jill said, a sentiment also expressed by several spectators at a recent performance.

Brady envy? It's not hard to understand.

In their suburban digs, the Bradys resided in a universe far removed from the social and political turmoil of their times. Teenager Greg Brady never worried he might be drafted and sent to Vietnam. No Brady ever wondered if Nixon was a crook.

Nor were the Brady children ever stressed by the dynamics of their mix-and-match family: a widower and his new wife, her three daughters, his three sons and Alice, their old-maid housekeeper.

Brady family crises involved such mundane aggravations as Dad's misplaced architectural plans and middle daughter Jan sneaking a peek at eldest daughter Marcia's diary.

And as self-styled Brady historian Max Merlin, a Northwestern University film student, observed, "their problems always worked out in 23½ minutes."

Actress Eve Plumb, who played Jan in the series, experienced the Brady revival first-hand when the Soloway sisters flew her in from Los Angeles to guest star in one of their shows during the summer. She played a bit part, choosing not to reprise her role as pubescent Jan at age 32.

It was "a totally bizarre experience," Plumb said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles, where she is a rotating cast member of the Groundlings, an improvisational troupe.

She said she doesn't understand the Bradys' enduring appeal, but thinks the Chicago show is "sort of a hoot."

"Brady Bunch" creator Sherwood Schwartz, who also gave us "Gilligan's Island," suggested the lure of the Bradys is mostly nostalgia.

"It's something people have as a reference point in their youth, and they hold fond memories of those shows," he said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles.

Lee-Ann Dufour

Lee-Ann is our newest associate and will be at Reflections on Tuesdays and Wednesdays only to assist you with her very special talents in hair and makeovers. We'd like to tell you a bit about her.
She is a native of Port Elizabeth, South Africa. She commutes to Midland from Houston, where she lives and works for Heidi's, a salon in the Galleria. Her family is very accomplished--her mother is a former Miss South Africa, her father a rugby player who was invited to play for the English "football"team. They're both currently missionaries who work in South Africa and the U.S. A sister once competed against Cathy Rigby during her gymnastics career, and her brother-in-law founded the first interracial football team in South Africa. Her sister's husband's family is the Watsons, the South African political activists against apartheid whose home was fire-bombed, and who were then framed for the crime. It was only after a great public outcry that they were freed. Negotiations are under way to turn their story into a motion picture.
Lee-Ann has been trained at the leading schools of hair design, among them the Ogle School in Dallas. She specializes in long hair and color, and uses the European techniques of styling--not the avant-garde or bizarre, but techniques that enable women to give themselves very special hairstyles and makeup that looks like it was both time-consuming and expensive, but is neither! She'll also be teaching those techniques in seminars to be held on the two days a week she'll be here.
Lee-Ann says, "You don't wear the same clothes every day; why should you wear the same hair? Every woman has the potential to be glamorous and exciting--let me show you!" Reflections is located in Midland Plaza, on Loop 250 near Mervyn's. Call 697-4422 for an appointment.

Large-print publishing doubles

NEW YORK (AP) — Large-print publishing has doubled in the past five years, according to Bowker, a division of Reed Publishing, U.S.A.

The number of publishers bringing out large-print titles has increased, with new publishers entering the field and established publishers expanding their output. In "The Complete Directory of Large Print Books & Serials 990" there are listings of nearly 8,000 titles.

From 120 titles produced by two publishers in 1970, this industry segment has grown in 20 years to include eight major publishers producing almost 1,200 titles per year. In addition, a group of smaller publishers accounts for another 200 titles.

Best-sellers are now often published in large print and regular print simultaneously.

Odessa College exhibit closing

ODESSA — A showing of drawings and prints by Katherine Liontas closes Friday at Odessa College's Options Gallery.

Ms. Liontas received her master's degree in fine art from Texas Tech University and is an assistant professor of art at Cameron University, Lawton, Okla.

'The Miser' revived on Broadway

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Thank goodness for star turns.

Philip Bosco and Carole Shelley are the main reasons to see "The Miser," Moliere's comic portrait of greed incarnate, now being revived on Broadway by Circle in the Square.

Their performances dominate an otherwise ordinary production marred by Stephen Porter's listless direction and some oddly cast secondary roles.

Bosco is almost unrecognizable as Harpagon, the man who worships his money more than life. With a white fright wig and a scruffy, unshaven face, he looks like Ebenezer Scrooge on a bad day. The actor is a master of comic timing as he storms around the stage, blowing out candles — why waste the wax — or ordering his servants to water the wine.

Bosco plays Harpagon a little nastier than usual, but it's still funny. His miser's maniacal devotion to gold makes one a bit uneasy. There's a hint of venom underneath the obsessiveness, but it works.

Besides, not many actors can get a huge laugh just by coughing. But what a cough. It starts as a low rumble in his throat and bursts forth like an engine of a 747 cleared for takeoff.

Shelley, in the much smaller role of the matchmaker Frosine, matches Bosco quip for quip and laugh for laugh. The production, in fact, doesn't really come to life until the actress shows up late in the first act.

TARTED UP IN rouge and masses of red curls, Frosine coos her way into Harpagon's confidence. Shelley and Bosco beautifully play off each other, mining the humor that Moliere finds in the hypocrisy of two people using each other for their own ends.

The plot turns on the usual complications of mismatched couples. Harpagon, a widower, wants to marry the young lady adored by his son. His daughter desires a supposedly penniless manservant in the household while Harpagon plans to marry her off to a wealthy older man.

The ending is so blatantly contrived that it earns laughs for its artificiality. The translation by John Wood certainly is serviceable, conversational without being too modern.

But when the two stars are off stage, the production sags. Harpagon's vexed children, Elise and Cleante, are played by Mia Dillon and Thomas Gibson. Their performances are marked by some mighty strange vocal acrobatics. She simpers. He screeches. What may have been thought of as funny by director Porter becomes annoying.

Elise's admirer, Valere, is done in by Christian Baskous' wooden portrayal in which he seems to be reading his lines from a cue card. Only John Christopher Jones as the hapless servant Maitre Jacques can match the comic spirit of Bosco and Shelley.

Part of the director's problem may be the awkward elongated playing area with the audience on all four sides. Actors have to race around the stage, and they do it without much style.

JAMES MORGAN'S SCENERY is sparse but Gail Brassard's costumes are sumptuous, especially for the foppish son Cleante. But "The Miser" only really comes alive when Bosco and Shelley are center stage. Without them, the merriment is as minimal as the title character's gift of giving.

What other critics said:

Frank Rich, The New York Times: "...the production has been guided with uncharacteristic sloppiness by the Moliere and Shaw expert (and frequent Bosco collaborator) Stephen Porter. ... Mr. Bosco deflates much of the evening by wailing and sobbing in grave self-pity over Harpagon's travails, as if he were somehow imbued with a tragic awareness more appropriate to Shylock than to a role with roots in commedia dell'arte."

Rumor has it

Johnny Blaine and the Spur Band play Rumors II, 3305 W. Front St., through November. The band has two albums and four singles to its credit. Blaine, who is from Hamshire, now owns his own publishing company, Gator Hole Music. For more information call Triple 'J' Promotions, 694-3206.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Church gearing up for craft fair

The 11th annual Fall Craft Fair is set for 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Nov. 10 at the Midland County Exhibit building, East Highway 80.

The event, sponsored by Asbury United Methodist Church, includes 102 booths featuring all types of handmade crafts including items for Christmas, pottery, woodwork, decorative clothing, crochet, needlework and stained glass.

Church members will have bakery items and homemade ice cream for sale. The kitchen will be serving homemade chili, chopped barbecue beef sandwiches, hot dogs, hamburgers, nachos, frito pie, dessert and drinks.

Admission is $1 for those 12 years and older.

Watercolors shown

The works of Odessan Marvin Stevenson may be viewed from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday at the Midland Woman's Club, Hogan Park.

His watercolors mostly depict western and wildlife subjects.

"I like creating the mood or spirit of the subject rather than an exact rendering of the objects involved," Stevenson said.

A signature member of the Southwestern Watercolor Soceity, West Texas Watercolor Society and American Plains Artists, Stevenson teaches, conducts workshops and has the Art of the West Gallery, Odessa.

Terlingua cookoff set

TERLINGUA — The 24th annual Original Terlingua International Frank X. Tolbert-Wick Fowler Memorial Championship Chili Cookoff is set for Saturday.

Registration begins at 10 a.m. Friday. Gary P. Nunn and the Sons of the Bunk House Band will perform Friday and Saturday beginning at 8 p.m.

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

It's our birthday but you may get the present! Midland Centennial Branch Library, Midland Park Mall, is celebrating five years of service to the community with a book giveaway. From now until November 16, library visitors may enter a drawing for a total of $300 worth of new books provided by the Friends of the Library. Lucky adult and children's names will be drawn November 17.

Children between five and ten are encouraged to have additional fun by coloring a birthday picture to be displayed at the library. The library is located at the north mall entrance leading to James Avery Craftsman.

Hope you found great books at the Friends of the Library 23rd annual Used Book Sale. After a short rest, the Friends will begin collecting books November 7 for next year's sale. You may leave (no magazines, please) on Wednesday mornings between 9 and 12 at the corner of Weatherford and Illinois.

The Friends appreciate the Reporter-Telegram making this site available to them for book storage but a larger site is desperately needed. If you can put the Friends of the Library on the trail of a larger and better site, please call the library, 683-2708.

Some of the unsold paperbacks are being sent to the troops in Saudi Arabia courtesy of Jane Debenport and friends.

Good News for video buffs! The Audiovisual Department of Midland County Public Library, 301 W. Missouri St., is now open evenings and Saturdays. This popular department specializes in quality videos for adults and children. Check out is free. Hours are the same as the downtown library's fall-winter hours, 9 a.m.- 9 p.m. on Monday through Thursday and 9 a.m.- 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Are there still bargains in real estate available from the Resolution Trust Corporation? The downtown library has the latest printed volumes available of single family residential property for sale in Texas and commercial and land properties listed in the U.S.

These printed sources date June 30 are not as current as online information obtained with a computer and modem. These volumes can, however, give an overview of what's available and where to get more information on real estate for sale resulting from the nation's thrift crisis.

Finding information in magazines got a lot easier when the downtown library acquired InfoTrac on CD ROM. It not only helps you find articles on your subject, it also prints the article citation for you and states whether the library subscribes to that particular journal. The Friends of the Library used some of their Annual Book Sale money to help the library acquire InfoTrac.

Your prescription is just what the doctor ordered but you would like to know more about your medicine. Both downtown and branch libraries have the latest edition of the Physician's Desk Reference. Downtown library also has "Advice for the Patient: Drug Information in Lay Language."

For a change of scene why not check out an art print from the downtown library. About 300 framed prints including a wide variety of subjects and art styles are available for two-month loan at no charge. Friends of the Library, whose funds provided these art works, are currently updating this collection by adding new prints and retiring less popular selections.

Closing today at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., is an exhibition of 82 portraits by master photographer Yousuf Karsh.

The renowned photographer has documented, by his portraits, the great and the near-great of statesmen, artists, writers, musicians and scientists as well as actors and political figures. In the exhibit are the famed portrait of Winston Churchill taken immediately after he had addressed the Canadian Parliament in 1941, as well as those of Ernest Hemmingway, Clark Gable, Albert Einstein, Sir Lawrence Olivier and Georgia O'Keeffe.

All of the pictures are black and white except for one of Sophia Loren who is wearing a red hat and sitting on a burgundy sofa.

Now in his 80s, Karsh was born in Armenia. He went to Canada when he was 15 to live with an uncle, noted studio photographer George Nakash. There Karsh became captivated by photography which became his livelihood and his "continuing passion."

After apprenticeship in Boston with eminent portrait photographer John H. Garo, Karsh started his professional career in Ottawa in 1932. He began photographing visiting statesmen and dignitaries, including President franklin D. Roosevelt, as early as 1936.

Karsh gained international recognition with the unforgettable portrait of Churchill, one of the most widely reproduced portraits in photographic history. The sitting, accomplished in less than five minutes, illustrates Karsh's in-depth perception of his subjects and his ability to illuminate their personalities.

To achieve his memorable images, Karsh travels to photograph his subjects in their own environment.

"Any room in the world where I could set up my portable lights and camera — from Buckingham Palace to a Sulu kraal, from miniature Zen Buddhist temples to the chambers of the vatican — would become my studio," Karsh said.

In 1943, working on his first international portfolio, Karsh began his homework routine of "finding out as much as I can about each person I am to photograph," Karsh said. This method helps him to present the "inner power" of the individual and, combined with his technical skills, produces images giving the viewer an intimate glimpse of the personality.

Karsh's work is represented in permanent collections of leading museums such as the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Philadelphia Art Museum, the Art Institute of Chicago and the National gallery of Canada.

The exhibit, "Portraits by Karsh," is on national tour and the Midland exhibit is an exclusive for the State of Texas. The exhibition was organized by the Muscarelle Museum of Art, William and Mary, Virginia, from Karsh's private collection of 5,000 portraits.

Hours today are 2 to 5 p.m. No admission is charged.

Artist works in mixed media

Lubbock artist Future Akins will be presenting her mixed media artworks Saturday through Dec. 30 at Gallery 1114, 1114 N. Big Spring St.

Ms. Akins is best known for her autobiographical sculpture that has been referred to as private graffiti. She combines found objects and personal artifacts with her sculptured stages and paintings to create haunting stories.

A series of these installations are from a continuing study on alcoholism and its effects on those who live with or around the disease. Called "Stories from a Bottle," memories of a young husband's death by a drinking driver sets the chilling mood for this realistic examination of one of the nation's most common diseases.

Not all of Ms. Akins' work is so somber. One wall is filled with what the artist calls her "ladies," small altars dedicated to contemporary women and life after 35.

"Each altar has a big dose of humor with its dash of truth," said a release from Gallery 1114.

A special area of the gallery is reserved for jars, created by members of Gallery 1114 that deal with the issue of "lost." Left to each artist to interpret, the "lost" may be emotional or physical. Recently, Ms. Akins was a part of the "Texas Women Artists" in Washington D.C. and Austin.

Her work is represented by Charles Adams Gallery, Lubbock.

Your Horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The events of the next few months will bring out your decisiveness and determination. You will get unexpected emotional support when you need it most. December brings about a happy family reunion. Your work leads to new financial rewards in January 1991. Do not be too quick to change jobs in the spring. Adopting a different lifestyle in early summer will add to your creature comforts. Vacationing at home holds enormous appeal. Nurture a romance.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: athlete Bruce Jenner, Dr. Jonas Salk, actress Jane Alexander, actor Dennis Franz.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Romantic considerations are likely to figure in all of your plans today. Seek a change of scene. A loved one will share a delicious secret. Children must learn to set priorities.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If you already have a grand design for your future, concentrate on the details. The want ads provide you with a new employment idea. Seize a chance to revive an old relationship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may decide to use your networking skills in an effort to get on top. Recognize that social contacts are often more important than nose-to-the-grindstone labor. Dine out tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may have to do a bit of research to locate a business contact or decide on the best way to approach him. An old friend could come to town, stirring up memories.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may decide to get together socially with a likable business associate. You could also find yourself in charge of a charity benefit. Limit the amount you spend on entertainment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A former lover may reappear. Welcome the opportunity to discuss your relationship and see what, if anything, is still between you. An older person offers excellent advice. Try not to jump the gun.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A spur-of-the-moment romantic decision is like an impulsive credit card purchase. In both cases, the bill will come due. A quiet, candid chat helps mend a parent-child relationship.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your personal life may have a strong effect on your professional life now. Realize that you cannot be all things to all people and set aside some time for yourself. Meditation provides answers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A future event could be the impetus you need to start that fitness program or diet. You and loved one may be at odds over how to spend joint funds. Avoid issuing ultimatums.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A great day for family get-togethers. Try to spend time outdoors. A new sense of purpose infuses everything you do. Your relationship with your mate becomes more rewarding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): News from overseas gives you reason to cheer. Write letters to teenagers who are away at school. Friends will share surprising information. You find some great bargains.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Express your thoughts clearly to avoid misunderstandings. Other people will respect your opinions if you are honest. A last-minute invitation will put you in touch with old friends.

The Russians came! As a result of glasnost, Russian players took part for the first time in a world bridge championship in Geneva, Switzerland. They came armed with complex bidding machinery, but on this deal they fell victim to old-fashioned Yankee ingenuity.

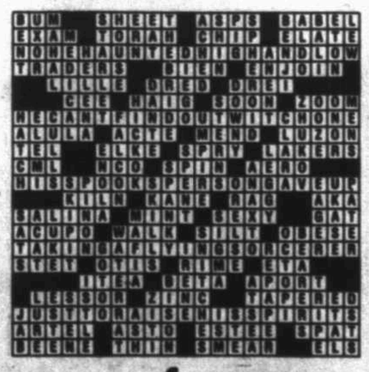

South's opening bid was of the weak variety. All North's bids except the last asked questions about South's hand, and South described a minimum opening bid with five spades, four diamonds and a singleton heart. North elected to try six diamonds.

Sitting West was Ralph Katz of Chicago. He led his singleton club. Declarer rose with dummy's ace and cashed the three top hearts, discarding two clubs from hand. Next came a low diamond to the seven, and Katz won it with the king!

Not unnaturally, declarer presumed East held the jack, so when West exited with a spade, declarer let that ride round to his hand, then led a trump to the ace. Down one when East showed out.

Had West routinely won the first trump with the jack, declarer virtually would have been forced to make his contract. The percentage play in trumps would have been to take a finesse for the king, so declarer can pick up trumps and bring in the spade suit with the help of a finesse.

Blind Hilton entertainer a unique performer

Pianist and singer Arthur Crissey is featured each weekday from 5 to 7 p.m. in Goodnight's, Midland Hilton.

Crissey, who has been blind since age 13, is the founder of the Exceptionally Talented Handicapped Individuals Cooperation Society, Inc.

According to Barry Smith, general manager of the Midland Hilton, Crissey's music is a unique combination of pop, blues, boogie, jazz, rock and original music.

"Arthur varies the style of music he plays based on what he senses the audience wants to hear," Smith said.

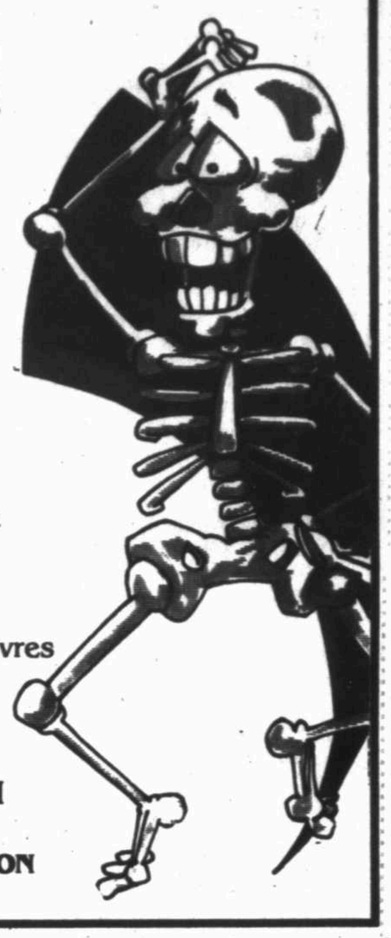

"Arthur is an outstanding individual who has overcome many obstacles in his career as a musician and music producer," Smith said. "And not only has he conquered these challenges, but he has taken his experiences and created an organization to help other talented, disabled adults."

'Avalon' opens slow at box office

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Marked for Death" delivered another kung-fu kick at the box office as the martial arts adventure movie finished first for the third consecutive weekend.

According to figures compiled Monday by Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc., "Marked for Death" collected $5.1 million, a drop of 31 percent from the previous weekend. The film stars Steven Seagal combating a Jamaican drug ring.

In second place was the World War II aviation drama "Memphis Belle," which made $4.3 million. It was followed by the new Western "Quigley Down Under."

Directed by "Lonesome Dove's" Simon Wincer, "Quigley" features Tom Selleck as an American cowboy in the Australian wild. It made $3.9 million.

"Ghost" was fourth with ticket sales of $3.6 million. Fifth was the re-release of the animated Disney classic "Fantasia," on a gross of $2.9 million.

The horror film "Night of the Living Dead," a remake of the 1968 classic, opened in sixth in its first week of release with $2.88 million.

Seventh was director Barry Levinson's semi-autobiographical drama "Avalon," moving into wider release on 630 screens. It made $2.81 million.

The Jim Belushi comedy "Mr. Destiny" was eighth with $2.77 million.

Martin Scorsese's mob drama "GoodFellas" was ninth with $2.5 million. In 10th was the yuppie landlord drama "Pacific Heights" with $2.4 million.

Here are the top movie ticket sales for Friday through Sunday as tallied by Exhibitor Relations, with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater screens, average per screen, total gross and number of weeks in release.

Eva and Sam Krichinsky (Joan Plowright and Armin Mueller-Stahl), their daughter-in-law, Ann (Elizabeth Perkins), son, Jules (Aidan Quinn) and nephew Izzy, (Kevin Pollak) enjoy a parade in the film "Avalon."

1. "Marked for Death," 20th Century Fox, $5.1 million.
2. "Memphis Belle," Warner Bros., $4.3 million.
3. "Quigley Down Under," MGM-UA, $3.9 million.
4. "Ghost," Paramount, $3.6 million.
5. "Fantasia," Disney, $2.9 million.
6. "Night of the Living Dead," Columbia, $2.88 million.
7. "Avalon," Tri-Star, $2.81 million.
8. "Mr. Destiny," Disney, $2.77 million.
9. "GoodFellas," Warner Bros., $2.5 million.
10. "Pacific Heights," 20th Century Fox, $2.4 million.

Bookstore hosts reception for authors of 'Easy Money'

Staff Report

Midlanders Roger and Diana Olien will sign copies of their book "Easy Money" from 1-4 p.m. Saturday at Pages and Prints Bookstore, 40 Plaza Center.

The book focuses on the promoters and investors who became the victims of greed during the great oil speculation of the 1920s. In "Easy Money" the Oliens detail the economic context of the oil mania and its relation to the real estate and securities markets of the Roaring Twenties.

The book depicts the various types of people drawn to the "black-gold," including promoters, haberdashers, insurance salesmen, ministers, hog farmers and even ex-convict S.E.J. "Alphabet" Cox.

Olien is a J. Conrad Dunagan professor of regional business and history at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. His wife is senior lecturer in history at UTPB.

The couple were co-authors of "Oil Booms: Social Change in Five Texas Towns," "Wildcatters: Texas Independent Oil Men," and "Life in the Oilfields."

Albums previewed over phone

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A small independent record label, American Gramaphone, is offering customers a chance to listen to albums over the telephone before they buy them.

The Omaha record company believes the new "personal preview" service that uses a 900 telephone number is the first of its kind.

"As far as I know, for music and for being able to give people their own choice as to what they are going to be able to hear, there is no one else," said Richard Musil, director of consumer response marketing for American Gramaphone.

A person uses a touch-tone phone to call a 900 number and gets a recorded message asking the caller to choose one of the 60 albums in American Gramaphone's catalogue.

Two selections from the album are played, lasting about a minute each. The caller can listen to excerpts from four albums during each call. A $2 charge is automatically added to the caller's monthly telephone bill.

If the caller buys an album during the call, $2 is deducted from the price of the album.

American Gramaphone is an independent label that is best known for representing the groups Mannheim Steamroller and C.W. McCall.

Turning on the masses to 'new jack swing'

By Hillel Italie
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Keith Sweat is a competitor. He was pleased about a recent review but noted the critic preferred fellow singer Al B. Sure. His latest album has gone platinum but he's still keeping an eye on the progress of Johnny Gill.

So when Sweat makes records, he thinks about what sells. Songs about relationships do better, he insists, whether they're about getting together or breaking up.

The singer also tries to imagine what he likes to hear on the radio and beyond that, what the average buyer looks for in a record store. Sweat, dipping into his considerable royalties, decided to be one of those buyers.

"Most artists are not record buyers," the singer noted in an interview at the Manhattan offices of Elektra Records. "They don't have to buy records, they can get them for free. If you're with a company, and you want an album, you tell somebody you want an album and they'll go get it for you.

"If I go to a store and actually buy records ... I'm more aware of what it's like to decide what to get."

The music on his new album, "I'll Give All My Love to You," is a mix of hip-hop and soul, what's come to be known as "new jack swing."

Demographics count, too. Take "Merry Go Round." It was conceived during a soundcheck in London when the singer heard some carnival music. He was reminded of the hit "Side Show," a Philadelphia-style ballad recorded by Blue Magic in 1973.

Soon, Sweat had a ballad of his own, with an easy, sinuous groove and a message he's sure will appeal to record customers of all ages.

" 'Merry Go Round' could relate to anybody," he insisted. " 'Merry Go Round' could appeal to kids. They like it because I'm singing about merry-go-round and they're thinking about amusement parks.

"When adults are singing, they're thinking about a relationship, when you go through changes over and over again, like a merry-go-round. It was a gimmick to make all age limits like it."

Sweat, a native of Harlem, grew up two blocks from the famous Apollo Theater. Marvin Gaye was his idol. He figures he was like a lot of kids, dreaming about being a singer, practicing dance steps in front of his mirror the way others today pretend they're Michael Jordan on the playground. At age 14 he began singing and was soon working on his own material.

"I would just write lyrics on paper," he recalled. "I would also make 'em rhyme.
