Angelo: Bush stronghold to fend off Buchanan

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

HOUSTON — If conservative challenger Patrick Buchanan gets as much as 30 percent of the Republican primary vote in George Bush's adopted home state next Tuesday, the president's re-election drive would suffer a damaging blow, according to Texas GOP strategists.

"Thirty percent would be a fairly significant vote, and it would have to raise some concern on the part of the president," said Ernest Angelo of Midland, a Republican National Committee member. "But I think that won't happen."

Officially, GOP leaders say Bush will likely walk away with all 121 of the state's delegates to the national convention here in August. Under GOP winner-take-all rules, Buchanan won't get any delegates unless he wins a majority in any of the state's 27 congressional districts.

Charles Black, a senior Bush campaign adviser, says he isn't worried about Buchanan in Texas.

Democrats to debate in Dallas tonight

By Kaye Northcott
N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — Presidential campaigning will intensify in Texas tonight as the top four Democratic candidates debate in Dallas, without Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey, who is expected to officially drop out of the race this morning.

Kerrey has scheduled a 10 a.m. news conference in Washington and a 5:30 p.m. "Welcome Home Rally" in Omaha, Neb.

"If you called to central casting for the ideal Democratic candidate, they would have sent back Bob Kerrey," said Mike Sims, Kerry's Texas campaign coordinator. "But somehow he did not live up to his potential.

"Kerrey put it well himself. He said he was having trouble connecting. For some reason, he didn't connect," Sims said.

'Double Dare Day'

San Jacinto Junior High School student Justin Campbell, above, gets a bitter taste of coffee grounds as he grasps a plastic spoon in his mouth Wednesday. He and his peers participated in "Double Dare Day" events planned at Midland Youth Center's early dismissal day program. Kit Sheffield gets his nose stuck on the strap of a swimming mask as he races to put it on during the events, which were patterned on Nickelodeon's kid-oriented quiz show. The final early dismissal day of the school year is set for April 29.

Sams leads judge's race fund-raising

■ Top two spenders in sheriff's race list nearly even contributions.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Robin Malone Sams, the Midland County District Attorney's prosecutor in the three-way race for judge of Midland's 142nd Texas District Court, has raised more money — almost $60,000 — than the combined contributions to her two opponents for the Republican Party's nomination for judge.

And Ms. Sams has spent more than $53,000 to lead all Midland candidates in spending in her campaign for the March 10 Republican Party and Democratic Party primary elections, according to records in the Midland County Elections Administrator's Office.

Within Midland County, all races except a contested county commissioner's post are among Republicans.

The reported funds reflect contributions and expenditures through Feb. 29.

Ms. Sams' contributions totaled $59,978, and her expenditures reached $53,377.76, according to records.

Runner-up in fund-raising for the bench position is George D. "Jody" Gilles, who reported $23,492.57 in contributions and expenditures

College presidents tout Tech-Prep

By Myra Lee Salcedo

A building located between Midland and Odessa took on the air of a college president convention Wednesday afternoon.

But presidents from area community colleges and Odessa's university converged on the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification (CEED) in a show of support of the Tech-Prep program.

Midland College President David Daniel delivered a strong message to attendees at the afternoon news conference.

He said it will take the cooperation of all higher education institutions in the Permian Basin to educate and train the work force of tomorrow.

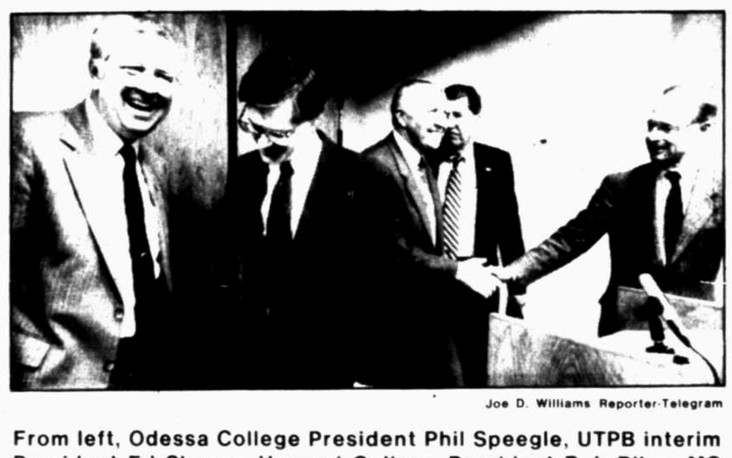

'This is a win-win-win proposition.' — David Daniel, Midland College president

"This is a cooperative effort that will have far-reaching effects," Daniel said.

Daniel announced that the Permian Basin Tech-Prep Consortium — which includes a group of educational institutions in 17 Permian Basin counties — will be headquartered at the CEED.

The MC president also announced the consortium was awarded a federal grant amounting to almost $249,000 from the Carl Perkins

Jury finds infertility doctor guilty of fraud and perjury

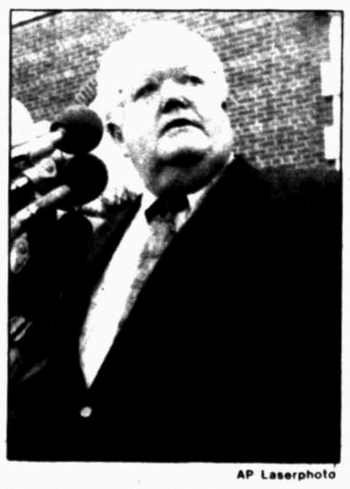

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A federal jury Wednesday convicted infertility doctor Cecil Jacobson on 52 counts of fraud and perjury in a case in which the prosecution alleged that Jacobson may have fathered as many as 75 children through artificial insemination.

Jacobson, 55, appeared to show no emotion when the verdict was announced after four days of deliberations. He faces up to 280 years in prison and $500,000 in fines when he's sentenced May 8.

Jacobson, who is credited with introducing amniocentesis in the United States to diagnose defects in unborn babies, was charged with defrauding patients by artificially inseminating them with his own sperm while claiming to use other donors. He also was charged with tricking patients into believing they were pregnant when they were not.

Swimsuit issue splash stirs pro, con passions

By Larry McShane
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — It's that time of year again — the Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue is on the stands, and feminists are on the streets to complain about the scantily clad models featured throughout its pages.

On Wednesday, members of the National Organization for Women were outside the Time-Life building handing out flyers that announced "girl-watching is NOT a sport!!!"

The protesters said Sports Illustrated only puts women on its cover if they were half-naked, ignoring women athletes who are more deserving of coverage.

Their message, however, wasn't quite getting through.

"Will this stop me from looking at the magazine? Not really," said David Davis of Manhattan, one of several doz-

Early ballots cast

Early ballots have been cast by 5,582 Midlanders in the March 10 Republican Party and Democratic Party primary elections, since early voting began Feb. 19, according to Midland County Elections Administrator Bettye Calvert. On Wednesday alone, 976 early votes were recorded. Early voting continues today and Friday in the Elections Administrator's Office at 709 W. Washington Ave. — from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. each day. Voters among the 48,671 Midland County citizens eligible for the election who do not vote by 7 p.m. Friday, will have to wait until Tuesday to go to the polls in their precinct. A list of the polling places for both primaries will appear in Sunday's edition of the Reporter-Telegram.

Pathologist to quit

LUBBOCK — The attorney for a forensic pathologist accused of billing Hockley County for an autopsy he never performed says his client is retiring rather than being forced out of his Lubbock County services contract. Dr. Ralph Erdmann, who has performed autopsies for several West Texas counties, gave Lubbock County officials notice Tuesday that he will end his $140,000 contract, effective 90 days from March 15. "He had been contemplating retirement for quite some time," said state Sen. John Montford, of Lubbock, who is representing Erdmann.

Luby's in Killeen

AUSTIN — Luby's Cafeterias Inc. plans to reopen its Killeen restaurant on March 12, the company has announced. The cafeteria has been closed since Oct. 16, 1991, when gunman George Hennard crashed his pickup truck into the restaurant and opened fire on diners, killing 23 people and then himself. In a statement issued Wednesday from its San Antonio headquarters, Luby's officials said Killeen residents had urged the company to reopen the cafeteria. Employees remained on the payroll while the restaurant was closed, and most will be returning to work.

Longest since '72

WASHINGTON — No sooner do we get leap day over with and they announce it's time for a leap second. An extra second will be added to the world's clocks June 30, according to the U.S. Naval Observatory, which keeps the nation's official time. The combination of a leap day and a leap second will make 1992 the longest year since 1972, when a leap day and two leap seconds were added.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Sunny skies, mid-70s on tap

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies and a high in the mid-70s with west winds at 10 to 20 mph and gusty. Tonight should be fair with a low in the lower 40s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-70s.

After an overnight low of 43, Wednesday's high reached 66 compared with the record high for that date of 85 set in 1938. The record low for that date is 11 set in 1989.

STATE

Texas was cloudy and warm Wednesday with continued thunderstorm activity across the central portion of Texas. Tornadoes and flooding were also possible across much of the state, forecasters warned.

A twister was spotted 15 miles north of Houston, but no damage was reported. Rainfall totals of 2 to 5 inches forced rivers over their banks, closing many roads in the Houston area.

The area from Cotulla to Corpus Christi south to Brownsville had sunshine.

High temperatures Wednesday were in the 50s to 70s.

Winds were from the west or southwest at 20 to 30 miles an hour and gusty.

The forecast for West Texas was for partly cloudy skies today, clearing Friday. High temperatures today were to be in the mid- to upper 60s with highs Friday mostly in the 70s. Lows were to range from the mid-30s to mid-40s.

South Texas was expected to have clearing skies Friday with continued high temperatures. Highs were to be in the 70s and 80s. Lows were to be in the 50s and 60s.

Forecasters said North Texas would be mostly cloudy today with a lingering chance of rain in the east. Partly cloudy Friday. High today and Friday 69 to 76. Low tonight 44 to 54.

NATION

Heavy rain caused flooding Wednesday in parts of Texas, heavy snow fell in the Colorado Rockies, and temperatures were unseasonably high from the Plains to the Appalachians.

Rain and occasional thunderstorms extended over eastern Texas and western Louisiana at midday. Rain also extended across Arkansas and eastern Oklahoma.

Up to 8 inches of rain hit parts of Houston, pushing bayous over their banks and inundating some highways. Several rural roads also were closed.

Along Interstate 10 at the White Oak Bayou, dozens of cars were stranded in door-handle-high water. Handicapped children and their driver escaped serious injury when their small school bus went into swollen White Oak Bayou near downtown.

The National Weather Service issued a flash flood watch for all of southeastern Texas, where the ground has been saturated by repeated heavy rain since Christmas.

Locally heavy rain had pushed Cibolo Creek to 6 feet above flood stage by noon near New Braunfels, Texas.

In the Colorado Rockies west of Denver, 3 to 4 inches of new snow had fallen by midday, with up to a foot possible in some areas. The storm had previously dropped 2 feet of snow west of Saguache, in the mountains of southwestern Colorado.

The moisture ended weeks of drought in the Denver area and was welcomed by the ski industry and agriculture.

Rain over southeastern Wyoming during the morning changed to snow by early afternoon, with up to 6 inches of snow possible in the mountains by this morning.

Rain in the west-central Plains changed to snow at higher elevations of the central and southern Rockies and into northern Arizona. Rain also extended over much of the central and northern Plains into the upper Mississippi Valley.

Elsewhere, rain extended over the northern Pacific Coast and the northern Great Basin, the area that includes Nevada and western Utah.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

DEBATE: Campaign to intensify in Texas tonight

(From 1A)

Tonight's nationally televised debate will give Texans and others an opportunity to do some comparison shopping of the remaining Democrats before Tuesday's primary.

A total of 214 delegates are up for grabs in the Democratic primary and 121 delegates in the Republican primary.

The 90-minute closed debate will begin at 10:30 p.m. CST and will be conducted at the ABC-affilated studios of WFAA-Channel 8 in Dallas. It is the fourth in a series of seven nationally televised Democratic debates. ABC anchor Peter Jennings will serve as moderator.

With Kerrey's expected departure, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton's Texas campaign is running a full-court press to get Kerrey supporters to switch their allegiance to Clinton, who has led in all Texas polls. A Fort Worth Star-Telegram poll published Sunday indicated that Kerrey had only 2 percent of likely Democratic voters.

Railroad Commissioner Robert Krueger, chairman of Massachusetts Democrat Paul Tsongas' Texas effort, said that as the field narrows he expects many Democrats to come into the Tsongas fold because Tsongas has no potential chinks in his armor.

Clinton's Texas campaign chairman, Garry Mauro, said that if Krueger was referring to unsubstantiated allegations about extramarital affairs and draft dodging, he is behind the times.

"Bob Krueger must be the only person who didn't notice that the voters of Georgia, Colorado and Maryland put that behind us yesterday," Mauro said, referring to Clinton's strong showings Tuesday in those states.

Sims said some veterans who supported Kerrey, a Vietnam amputee who won a Medal of Honor, might be reluctant to support Clinton, who used college deferments during the Vietnam War.

"On the other hand," he said, "there are many Texans who remember the maxim, 'Beware of Massachusetts Democrats running for president.' "

Texan observers said other Democrats are beginning to look like also-rans.

Max Sherman, dean of the LBJ School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas at Austin, said: "It almost looks to me like a Tsongas-Clinton race. We'll get an idea of how strong that race is on Tuesday."

Both candidates are expected to elaborate on their energy policies today.

Tsongas, Clinton and former California Gov. Jerry Brown have scheduled Texas appearances around the debate.

This week's primaries were a boost for Brown. His poorly funded, unconventional campaign won new respect Tuesday with a surprise win in the Colorado primary.

DOCTOR: Jury's verdict is guilty on all counts

women have children," Jacobson said after the verdict. "It's a shock to be found guilty of trying to help people. . . . I certainly did not willfully or intentionally harm anyone. . . . I did not break any law."

But jury foreman Daniel Richard told reporters outside the courtroom that he was convinced that Jacobson lied to his patients. Jacobson admitted on the witness stand he knew the hormone treatments he gave patients would remain in their bodies until after their pregnancy tests, Richard said.

"We knew he was lying to those patients," Richard said.

Juror Deborah Earman said jurors were "baffled" by the size and complexity of the case but that the evidence against Jacobson was overwhelming.

"I think that he was a good man," Earman told reporters after the verdict. "It was obvious that he went wrong somewhere and mistreated a lot of women. He definitely did some wrong."

Former patient Jean Blair, who testified that Jacobson convinced her she was pregnant and miscarried six times, said she believed Jacobson should go to jail.

Her husband, James Blair, said Jacobson "fooled a lot of people for a long time and I'm glad he didn't fool this jury."

Prosecutor Randy Bellows declined to say whether he would recommend that Jacobson, who remains free on bond, should go to jail.

Jacobson agreed to stop practicing medicine in 1988 after the Virginia state Board of Medicine found enough evidence to revoke his license. He conducts privately funded genetics research in Provo, Utah.

Bellows portrayed Jacobson to the eight-woman, four-man jury as "a man who routinely lies to his own patients." But defense lawyer James Tate called him a medical pioneer who acted "out of love, out of a desire to help people."

Jacobson admitted on the witness stand that he occasionally used his own sperm for artificial insemination when other donors weren't available. He said he didn't know how many children he had fathered, and his lawyer said it was not illegal in any case.

Eleven women and men testified under anonymity that Jacobson promised to match the physical characteristics and even religion of patients' husbands, and that he promised that the donor would never know who they were.

The prosecution said genetic tests showed that Jacobson was 99.99 percent likely to be the father of 15 children by unsuspecting patients. Overall, by the prosecution's account, he may have fathered up to 75.

"God doesn't give you babies — I do," one witness testified Jacobson told her.

PROGRAM: College presidents unite for Tech-Prep

(From 1A)

Foundation.

"So, we are in business," Daniel said to spectators who applauded and cheered.

The consortium will implement the Tech-Prep associate degree program. The four-year program of study will begin in the junior year of high school and will result in an associate of applied science degree with advanced skills from a community or technical college.

The program is heavily laden with math and science courses and provides students with a career option in the technical fields.

"This program will begin in the public schools," Daniel said, noting that Midland College signed an agreement with Midland Independent School District in the fall to implement the program.

Ed Sharpe, interim president at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, said, "This is the outcome of the first joint effort of Odessa College, Midland College, Howard College and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

"If we can keep our attention on the goal of doing what's best for the Permian Basin as a whole, then our decisions will be the best for the area."

Roger Guess, human resources director for Texas Instruments, said, "Texas Instruments is excited about the Tech-Prep concept. It is very gratifying to us to work with member colleges ... A total absence of provincialism is an indicator of success."

"We worked closely with Texas Instruments from the beginning," said Jerry Lee Jones, MC chairman of business studies. "Technically, this program brings together business, education, industry and government."

Jones is the chairperson for the consortium Strategic Planning Task Force or steering committee.

Guess heads the task force for evaluation.

Other steering committee members include Linda Basham, area manager of Southwestern Bell, heading the task force on community support and publicity; Ken Hurst of OC, chairing the task force on curriculum development; Shirley Shroyer of Howard College, chairing the professional development task force; and Quentin Burnett, superintendent of Greenwood Independent School District, heading the support-services task force.

Jones and his team wrote the grant for the proposal sent to the Carl Perkins Foundation. The foundation awarded Midland College $59,000 in September to start up the Tech-Prep program.

"There is an enormous potential and opportunity for this area to promote a quality work force and encourage young people to move into technical programs in high demand for this area and the nation," Jones said.

"This is a win-win-win proposition," Daniel said. "It's not just a Midland College or Odessa College program. It is our program. As we begin to see the benefits of pooling our resources, we will see the payoffs in our children's education."

"Our training will be second to none," he said.

Daniel also announced that John Reed, Tech-Prep coordinator at Midland College will relocate his office to the CEED.

Other school districts supporting the program include Ector County, Fort Stockton, Lamesa, Monahans and Seminole.

In the race for tax assessor-collector for Midland County, Midland City Councilman James Devenport reported $7,125 in contributions and $6,541.79 in expenditures.

His opponent, Kathy Hodge Reeves, who is a lead deputy clerk for Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield, has raised $5,580 in contributions and has spent $5,282.06.

Ms. Shuffield, tax assessor-collector since 1981, is retiring.

In the campaign for Midland County Constable, incumbent Ron Rice reported $4,441.12 in contributions and $2,195.91 in expenditures. Tom McGinnis, a former constable who is a Midland County deputy sheriff, listed $3,552.50 in contributions and $1,777.84 in expenditures.

In the county's only Democratic Party race, Precinct 3 Commissioner Louisa Valencia reported $305 in contributions and $462.05 in expenditures. Her opponent, Midland businessman Fernando "Freddie" Calderon, listed $220 in contributions and $168.68 in expenditures.

In the Republican Party race for commissioner of Precinct 3, Jo Ann Carr reported $3,607 in contributions and $3,010.68 in expenditures. Her opponent, David L. Jezek Sr., listed $1,331.97 in contributions and $1,199.71 in expenditures.

Commissioner Durward Wright, seeking re-election to the Precinct 1 post, listed in $5,368.02 in contributions and $5,449.38 in expenditures.

Candidate Henry Goulet reported $3,444.70 in contributions, including $2,750 in loans he made to his campaign, and $2,398.09 in expenditures.

Ronald Harvel, a Midland County deputy sheriff who is seeking the post, listed $20 in contributions and $2,754.90 in expenditures.

Individual donations to the candidates ranged from less than $50 to as much as $5,000.

Gideon received $5,000 donations from Mr. and Mrs. Murray Fasken, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bird and Walter R. Davis.

Two $2,500 contributions, by Mr. and Mrs. George Glass and by John L. Cox, went to Gideon's campaign.

The single highest contribution reported to Painter's re-election campaign was $2,500 by George Glass.

Richardson received $1,000 contributions from Mark Giebel and Joe M.L. Melton. Richardson's wife, attorney Susan Richardson, made a $2,600 loan to her husband's campaign. Deane Stoltz paid $1,150 for a Petroleum Club reception for Richardson and his supporters.

Judge candidate Ms. Sams received many $500 contributions and $1,000 donations from W.B. Yarborough, the Union Pacific Fund for Effective Government, John Hendrix, Buddy Branum, Mr. and Mrs. John Redfern III, E. Ashley Smith, William B. Kent, William L. Adams, and Wagner & Brown.

David Malone made a $2,500 loan to the Sams campaign.

Judge candidate Gilles received several $500 contributions.

And Bruner reported that he contributed $7,633.56 to his campaign for the judgeship in amounts of $5,000, $2,000, $500 and $133.56, according to reports. In addition, $777.59 to his campaign was reported from Mr. and Mrs. Bruner.

Kire C. Scott contributed $4,000 to the Bruner campaign.

Contributions to Ms. Reeves' campaign for tax assessor-collector includes $2,500 in loans that she made to her campaign.

KOZLU, Turkey — Heavy smoke and gas blocked rescuers Wednesday from reaching an estimated 150 men trapped deep in a burning mine. Already, 121 bodies have been pulled out in Turkey's worst mining disaster, officials said.

"We wait for a miracle for their survival," said Akin Gonen, the state minister for press relations. Heat or toxic gas from the fire have probably killed any miners who survived the blast, he said.

Workers closed ventilation shafts to cut off air feeding the fire ignited by the blast, and erected concrete barriers to prevent the spread of the blaze. Ambulances lined up outside the entrance, where thousands of relatives of missing miners also waited anxiously for news of loved ones. Other ambulances carried charred bodies covered with blankets to morgues for identification.

It was a grimly familiar scene in this northern Turkish city of 60,000 where most families earn their living from the mine. Four other major explosions at the Kozlu mine have taken a total of 107 lives since 1945.

AP

"How am I going to survive alone?" cried one woman whose husband remained missing. She held her 9-year-old son.

Tuesday's explosion 1,850 feet below the surface caused a 1½-square-mile portion of the Incirharmani mine to collapse, said Ozer Olcer, the head of Turkey's state-owned Coal Enterprise.

"All I could hear was the moaning of my friends," said Mehmet Calik, hospitalized with back and shoulder injuries from being hurled by the blast against steel bars. He said it took two hours for rescuers to arrive.

"The scariest part was sitting there waiting," Calik said.

The biggest Turkish labor confederation, Turk-Is, issued a statement attacking what it said were low safety standards in the northern Turkish mines. But officials said Incirharmani's emergency equipment made it a showcase for visiting engineers.

The early warning system did not work because the naturally occurring methane gas that caused the blast accumulated to dangerous levels a mere 20 seconds before the explosion, State Minister Omer Barutcu said.

Gonen said 101 miners were known dead and 75 others had been injured. Anatolia news agency later reported 20 more bodies had been found. The government estimates that around 150 workers are missing, down from earlier figures of up to 300.

Officials based the earlier figure on the number of flashlights registered in use at the time of the blast. But Olcer said some survivors probably fled the mine explosion without returning their flashlights or notifying officials.

"It is a heart-burning pain for the whole country," Premier Suleyman Demirel, holding back tears, told reporters in Kozlu.

Turkey's worst previous coal mine disaster killed 103 men in 1983 at a mine six miles from Kozlu, at the Black Sea port of Zonguldak.

The world's worst mining accident, in 1942 in Manchuria, killed 1,549 workers.

A disaster last April 21 in northern China killed 147 people.

Pakistan burns contraband drugs

TURBET, Pakistan (AP) — Forty-five tons of heroin and hashish were set on fire Wednesday in a government-sponsored ceremony designed to portray Pakistan as a drug-fighting nation.

Black smoke billowed from the giant bonfire set to burn $400 million worth of contraband drugs in the heart of Baluchistan Province, a sparsely populated region that has become a major transit route for drug trafficking.

Anxious to convince the world that Pakistan is doing its part in the war against drugs, the conservative Islamic government flew dozens of diplomats and journalists to Baluchistan to watch the two-hour burning ceremony. Many complained of dizziness after half an hour.

"We want to show that the Pakistan government is determined to eradicate the menace of drugs," said Rana Chanedra Singh, the federal minister of narcotics.

Last week, President Bush certified to Congress that Pakistan was trying to reduce the production of heroin and hashish, freeing $13 million to help destroy poppy fields in Pakistan's rugged and mostly lawless tribal region.

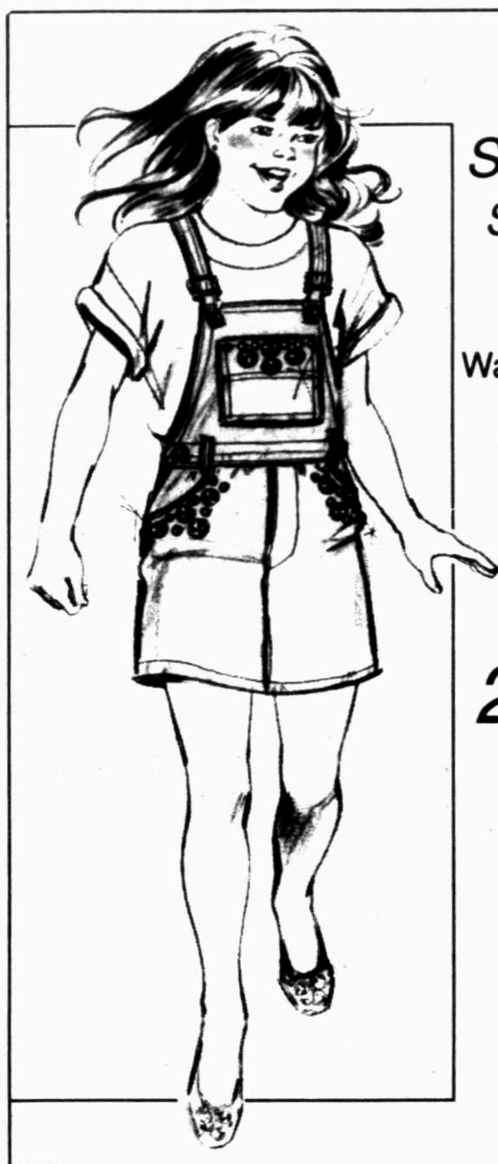

Pakistan annually produces about 200 tons of opium, which is refined into heroin. The U.S. Embassy in Islamabad says almost two-thirds of the drug is consumed at home. The remainder is smuggled to the United States and Europe.

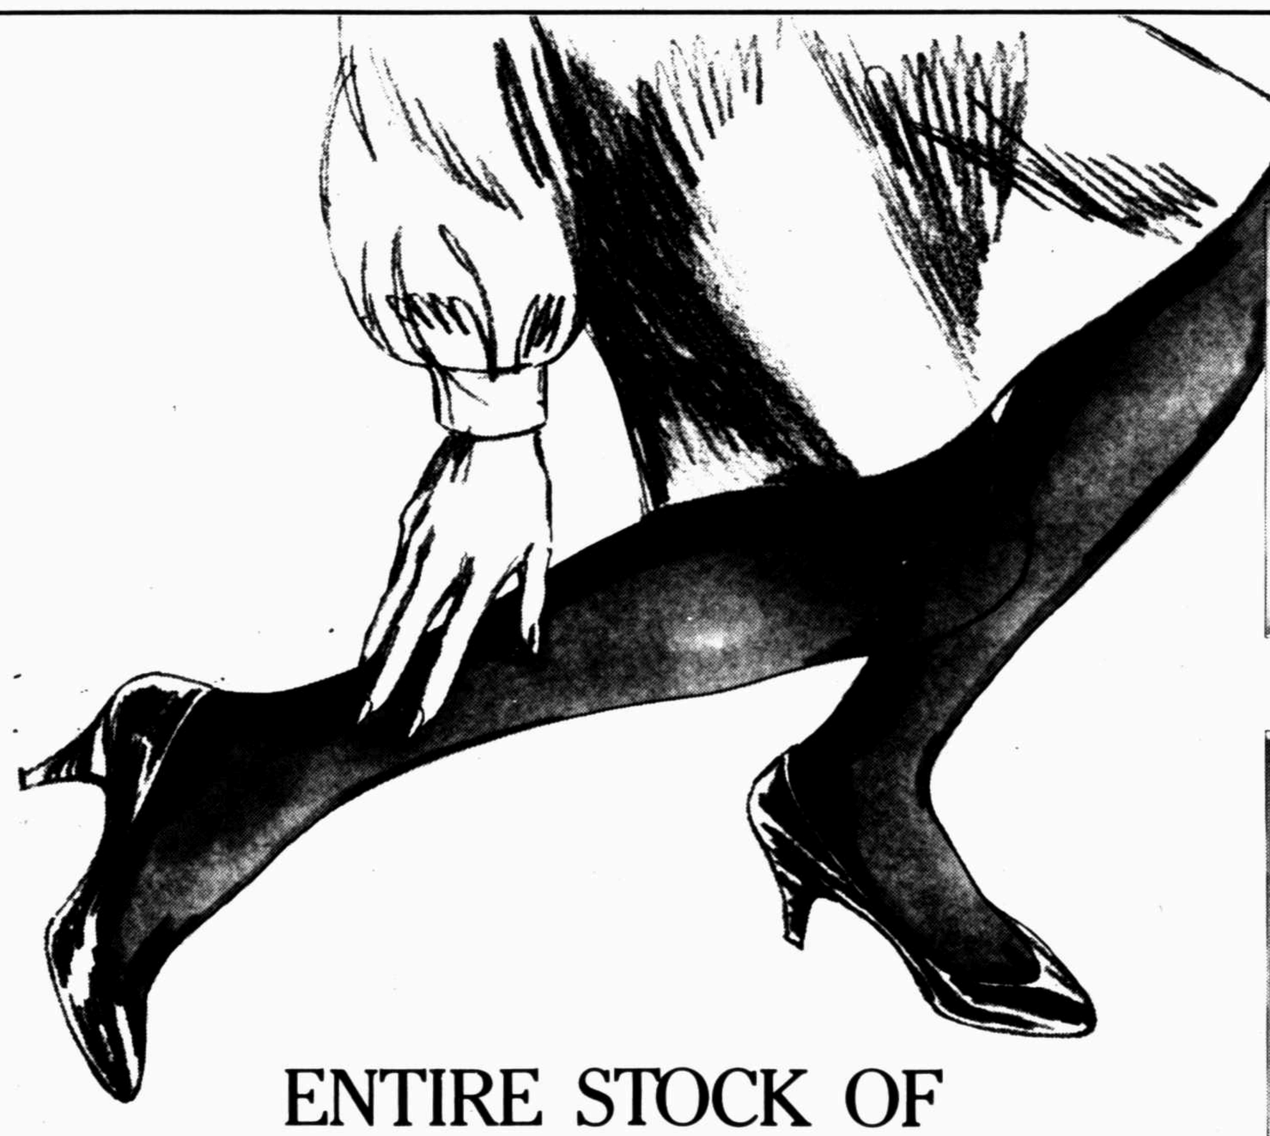

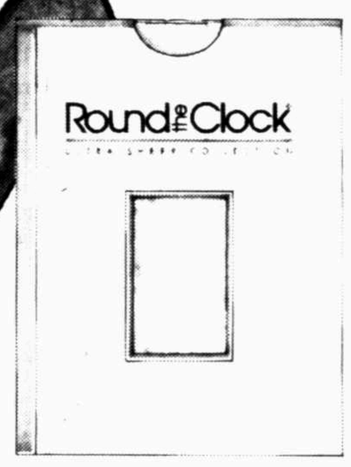

Pakistan is also one of the main transit routes for drugs grown in neighboring Afghanistan and Iran.

BATTLES: Buchanan set to arrive in San Antonio

(From 1A)

"I hope he does go in and spend a lot of money and time," Black said. "George Bush is viewed by Texans as a local boy and their guy and their president and they like him."

Texas is a crossover state, however, meaning that Democrats and independents can vote in the GOP primary. One party strategist, who asked to remain anonymous, conceded that Buchanan might pick up delegates in certain Democratic strongholds districts in East Texas.

The strategist said a 30 percent vote for Buchanan statewide is "not all that unlikely."

So far Buchanan has won 37 percent of the vote in the New Hampshire GOP primary, 36 percent in Georgia and 30 percent each in Maryland and Colorado.

Bush, who handily won the Texas GOP primary vote in 1988, has formidable resources this year, including plenty of cash, extensive local organization and the backing of such Republican heavy hitters as Texas Sen. Phil Gramm.

"I think winning 100 percent of the delegates will send the right message to the doubters," Angelo said.

During a campaign appearance for his father on Monday in the East Texas city of Nederland, George W. Bush of Dallas said predicting and interpreting percentages was a game better left for the news media.

"If Buchanan had gotten 30 percent in New Hampshire,the media would have said that was an embarrassment," the younger Bush told an airport rally. "We're not going to play that numbers game."

Karl Rove, an Austin-based Republican strategist, said Buchanan would leave the Lone Star State next week with "zip, zero, nada."

He called Buchanan a "creation of the Washington media," and attacked what he called the combative columnist's "inward-looking negativism."

Terry Young, Buchanan's state director, said, "If Pat got 25 percent here, he'd scare them (the Bush forces) to death. We have a tremendous amount of support here.

Young said the campaign has at least 2,000 volunteers and will begin TV commercials in major markets this weekend.

Still, he conceded that with Bush's strong organizational advantage, "This is going to be a very tough state for Pat to do well in."

Young said Buchanan, who is scheduled to arrive in San Antonio tonight, will focus his Texas message on the state's economic woes arising from persistently low market prices for natural gas and crude oil.

"We have no energy policy, period, and oil and gas people in this state are going bankrupt by the hundreds," Young said.

Buchanan will also zero in on illegal immigration, Young said. "We have a really major problem, with lots and lots of Mexicans storming across the border all the time, and Bush has done nothing to stop it."

Buchanan, said Young, "wants to stop illegal immigration, period." Buchanan has suggested separating the United States from Mexico with either a huge ditch or fence in order to keep illegal immigrants out, but Young said the candidate has no detailed proposals yet.

The campaign director said the immigration problem is compounded by "pregnant Mexican ladies who come into our hospitals so their children will be born as U.S. citizens."

The faltering economy has alienated many Texas voters including Houston trucker George Lopez, a Republican who voted for Bush in 1988. Lopez, who blamed his discontent on the recession, said in an interview, "I don't like anybody this year, including Bush." But then he added, "Some of Buchanan's ideas just seem too radical to me."

en men who stopped to watch "Miss Sports Ill-Lust-Raided 1992" cavort on the sidewalk as part of the demonstration.

Miss 1992, dubbed "Ruth Babe," vamped and vogued in shoulder pads and shin guards, waving a baseball bat and posing for pictures. She danced to a C&C Music Factory tape, mocking the models featured inside the magazine.

"It's very important to let all the women of America know that men have certain inalienable rights over our bodies," she said to passersby. "Men need something pretty to look at as they exclude women from the workplace."

Her rap irritated Anthony Gerbino of Brooklyn, who was passing by on his lunch hour.

"What are they proving out here? It's only bathing suits," Gerbino, 36, said. "OK, they're exposing some flesh. But this is a sports magazine. Why don't they go to the porno houses? Or outside Penthouse or Screw magazine?"

The annual issue, which includes revealing shots of well-known models including Kathy Ireland and Ashley Montana, prompts the same demonstrations every year by groups that charge it is degrading to women.

"All groups are entitled to their opinion," said the magazine's publicity director. Roger Jackson. "We feel we do a very tasteful, classy job with the swimsuit issue, which is really a travel and fashion section."

Woman fails training to be fighter pilot

CHIVENOR, England (AP) — The Royal Air Force's first woman trainee fighter pilot has failed to make the grade seven weeks into the course, a Defense Ministry spokesman said Wednesday.

Flight Lt. Sally Cox was suspended from the combat flight training course at the RAF's base at Chivenor, southwest England, because she could not handle the demands of flying an advanced Hawk trainer jet as low as 250 feet while traveling at 650 mph, the spokesman said.

A disappointed Cox, 30, said she had "given it my best shot."

Cox was selected for training last year when the RAF changed its policy to permit women pilots.

She had been the first woman to attempt the tough 17-week tactical weapons course on bombing, missiles and dog-fighting techniques in the Hawk jet training aircraft.

The normal failure rate is 10 percent to 20 percent, the defense spokesman said.

The spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Cox instead could opt to fly other jets or helicopters for the RAF.

End of Cold War hasn't ended spying, CIA says

By Ruth Sinai
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Cold War is over, but its agents provocateurs have yet to come in from the cold.

The FBI says the Russians are still spying on us. And the Russians say Americans spy on them just as much.

At first, the FBI thought it was simply a case of old habits dying hard. Now the agency thinks Russian President Boris Yeltsin wants to keep an eye on Washington.

"More and more we see that it's a formal intelligence operation directed from Moscow," said Wayne R. Gilbert, the FBI's top spy catcher. "We see no reduction," said Gilbert, whose formal title is Assistant Director of the Intelligence Division.

Two Russian agencies are active here — the GRU military intelligence service and the Foreign Intelligence Service, the heir of the dreaded Soviet KGB — he said.

Gilbert predicted the Russians will increasingly turn their espionage to obtaining scientific and high-technology secrets, both from civilian firms and from the military.

He said the FBI was also gearing up for possible spying by some of the former Soviet republics that are in the process of setting up their own intelligence services with the help of former KGB operatives.

In Moscow, the spokeswoman of the Foreign Intelligence Service said the agency would reduce its network of spies in the United States to a "reasonable" number. She did not elaborate.

Tatyana Samolis, quoted by the Interfax news agency, said Russia expects reciprocal reductions but does not believe the United States will cut down its spy operations, given the economic and political turmoil in the Commonwealth of Independent States.

Recent comments by U.S. officials bear out her prediction.

CIA Director Robert Gates has said the United States needs to "dramatically" increase its so-called human intelligence collection — in other words, spying.

At a time of increasing budget constraints, the United States has nonetheless decided to open embassies in all but one of the former 15 Soviet republics, in part to serve as listening posts to developments there.

For the United States, the difference from Cold War days is that much information is now openly available in government and media publications.

For Russia, the difference is that the doors to the United States have opened to a flood of Russian academics, businessmen and tourists — providing much more cover for its spies than it had under the strict monitoring of Cold War days.

The Russians are expected to be, in some ways, more active than before to make up for losing the services of their east European proxies who were known as consummate professionals and were subject to less surveillance than the Soviets.

The Czechs, for example, were used by the Soviets to steal secrets in Silicon Valley. Now the Russians will have to fend for themselves, said a law enforcement official who added that hi-tech firms have been alerted to such possibilities.

With so much interaction between American and Russian firms and scientists, though, "the situation has become so porous there's no way we can control it," he added, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Gilbert noted that it was far easier to spot Soviet spies when they served under cover as diplomats or journalists whose numbers and movements were strictly restricted by both sides.

"I question their assertion that they won't use journalists" as spies anymore, he said.

Gilbert said that even as the Russians were spying here, they were also requesting and offering cooperation on information regarding international terrorism and drug trafficking.

The United States, in turn, is believed to have asked the Russians for help in solving some espionage cases involving Americans suspected of having spied for the Soviet Union and Soviets who allegedly spied against this country.

Gilbert declined to discuss any cases, but they are believed to include that of fugitive Ed Howard — a former CIA agent wanted by the FBI for selling secrets to the Soviets — and Felix Bloch, a former U.S. diplomat under investigation by the FBI for the same offense.

The fact that Russia continues to spy on the United States does not surprise experts in the espionage field.

"Our best friends spy on us, too," said Joseph Trento, an author of several books on espionage activity. These include Japan, France, Israel and other allies, he said.

That would be especially true for Russia, which is so cash poor that it cannot afford to buy technology and resorts to stealing it, he said. "We've always thought they spied for ideological reasons. A lot of it was purely economical."

Official tries to convince Libya to turn suspects over to U.N.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States, Britain and France are willing to have Libya turn over the two Libyans indicted in the bombing of Flight 103 to the United Nations, the U.N. chief reported Wednesday.

But Libya says its own laws have barred the extradition of nationals against their will for 30 years, and it has appealed to the World Court to arbitrate the dispute.

A report by Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, which is to be submitted shortly to the Security Council, found that Libya has not met the terms of a January resolution of the Security Council demanding its cooperation in bringing the suspects to justice.

However, the U.N. chief noted "a certain evolution in the position of the Libyan authorities" and suggested that the council consider this when deciding its next course of action.

The report concerned only the December 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, which killed 270. The Security Council is also demanding that Libya extradite four Libyans accused by France of bombing a French UTA airliner over Niger in 1989. That bombing claimed 170 lives.

In his report, Boutros-Ghali seemed to be counseling patience at a time when the United States, Britain and France are ready to back a new resolution clamping a weapons embargo on Libya and severing commercial air routes.

The London-based Financial Times reported in its Thursday editions that Libya has moved between $2 billion and $3 billion of its overseas assets from Europe to banks in Middle East. The newspaper quoted unnamed bankers and officials in London and the Middle East as saying the move was aimed at putting the money out of reach of governments seeking retaliation over the bombings.

Boutros-Ghali sent a top envoy, Vasily Safronchuk, to see Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi on Feb. 24 to convey the Security Council's demand for Libya's full cooperation.

Boutros-Ghali said that the United States, Britain and France have no objection to Libya handing over the suspects and evidence to the U.N. secretary-general if that would speed matters.

Gadhafi later suggested handing over the suspects to a third country, suggesting Malta or any Arab country.

He also agreed to a French request to have a French judge come to Libya to observe the judicial process there.

Germany seeks return of Honecker

BONN, Germany (AP) — The government said Wednesday that Russia should send Erich Honecker back to Germany to stand trial for manslaughter if the ousted East German leader isn't seriously ill.

"We have the impression Honecker is capable of being moved. We ask that the Russian government hand him over," said Dieter Vogel, chief spokesman for Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

Germany has been pressing for the return of Honecker, a 79-year-old hard-line Communist, since he fled last year to the Chilean Embassy in Moscow from a Red Army hospital outside Berlin.

Honecker's attorneys had been claiming the fugitive, who escaped Germany with the help of the Red Army, has terminal cancer.

But according to the Chilean government, doctors who examined Honecker at a Moscow hospital have found his health is "totally satisfactory."

The Chilean Foreign Ministry said Tuesday that doctors found Honecker suffers from "widespread arteriosclerosis" but otherwise is physically fit.

Honecker left the hospital on Tuesday, returning to the embassy in Moscow where he sought refuge in December after Russia threatened to expel him.

Honecker is wanted for allegedly giving shoot-to-kill orders to East German border guards whose job was to stop people from fleeing to the West.

According to the Chilean communique, Honecker "will remain in the embassy as a guest" and the Chilean government will "continue its contacts with the governments of Russia and Germany in order to resolve this situation in a satisfactory manner."

Chile has offered to accept Honecker on humanitarian grounds, but has said it will not act unilaterally.

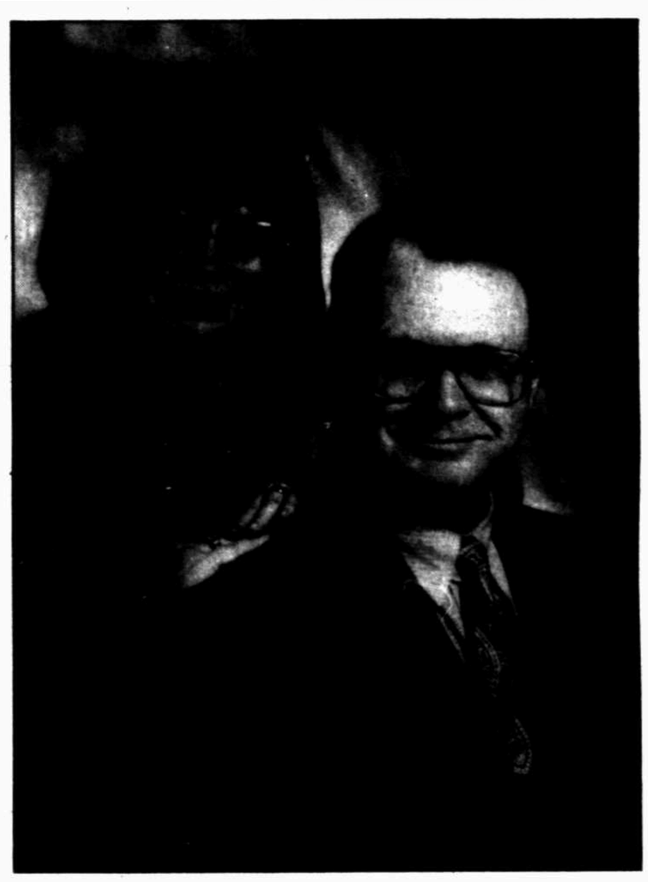

Honecker wants to go to Chile because his daughter lives there.

Sense, sensitivity needed on Asians

Asian-Americans suffer from two equally unfair stereotypes. They're considered a "model minority," industrious and resourceful.

They're also seen as insular and threatening — and not quite American. They lose on both counts. The "model minority" myth holds them to an unreasonable standard. The hypercompetitive stereotype exposes them to abuse and bigotry.

That's the basic conclusion of a report released last week by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. The report adds a sane and welcome counterweight to recent oversimplifications, even hysteria, about Asians and the United States.

Like other immigrants, Asian-Americans are diverse. Bigotry and resentment undervalue the contributions of those who succeed and underestimate the needs of those who, like many Americans, struggle to succeed. The report urges political leaders to "refrain from 'race-baiting' tactics in upcoming election campaigns." It fails to denounce similar activities by business leaders, but the message applies to them as well.

Simplistic efforts to scapegoat Japan lead to bigotry and violence against Asian-Americans generally. The commission cites the murder in 1982 of a Chinese-American by two white automobile workers in Detroit. Other incidents arise from perceived economic challenges — including the 1990 boycott by blacks of two grocery stores owned by Korean-Americans in Brooklyn.

The commission asks for sense from politicians and sensitivity from the media, employers, the police, courts and schools. It's a timely message, especially in this political season.

'Buy American' needs to prove itself first

As the "Buy American" movement gains momentum, I can't help being concerned. Not because I oppose the "Buy American" principle, but because I know that there are alot of Americans that make their living dealing with imports. And while I believe that the "Buy American" theory is basically prudent, I also have some serious reservations about it, for several reasons.

First of all, I don't completely disagree with recent Japanese appraisals of the American work ethic. Although my first reaction was one of rage, I believe that it is imperative that we accept this assessment as constructive criticism and learn from it.

Basically, I believe that I should buy an American automobile over a Japanese car. I believe it is my responsibility as an American. But I also believe that the American auto workers have a responsibility to me as a consumer, to deliver a quality product at a reasonable price. And I don't believe they take their responsibility seriously. They are grossly over-paid, underworked and have turned the American auto worker into a high-class welfare recipient. If you doubt this, tour an American auto plant.

So I'm ready to join the "Buy American" movement. I'll even pay a little more for an American product just as soon as America's organized labor shows a willingness to do more labor and less organizing.

Gilles shows qualities needed for district judge

What symbol do we use to illustrate justice? The scales, indicating objective weighing of the evidence, the need to hear both sides, the fair and unbiased application of the law for the welfare of the people.

As a juror, I was most impressed with the role of the district judge in administering justice. He advised us about our part in the process, about the determination of guilt or innocence, about the evidence which was and was not admissable. He kept order. He kept the process moving. But above all, he insured that justice was served for both the defendant and the victim.

I finished my three days of jury duty with a profound respect for the American judicial system.

We will soon elect a new judge for the 142nd District Court. While Ms. Sams' supporters would have us believe she is most qualified, I cannot vote for a lawyer who has not tried a single civil case in court. Particularly when two-thirds of the cases heard in this court are civil. I also wonder how fair and impartial a former prosecuter will be as district judge. And Tom Bruner stresses his maturity as his major asset. I learned long ago that chronological age does not automatically determine maturity. Maturity is a state of development determined by adult experience.

And the kind of experience required of a fair and respected judge is knowledge of civil and criminal law, personal and professional integrity, fairness and wisdom. George D. "Jody" Gilles meets all of these qualifications. He knows the law and respects the system and ethics that bind him. He has never compromised his integrity for personal gain. His character and wisdom are evidenced in his personal and professional relationships. He is one of the most caring men I know, and he has already contributed to this community as both a leader and a servant. Don't pass up this opportunity to elect a candidate who is right for the job. Join me in voting for Jody Gilles on March 10th.

Writer overlooks facts of compulsory service

For the benefit of Dixie C. Mims (Letters, Feb. 16), the idea of using the Armed Forces of the United States as a social rehabilitation agency for the errant youth of our country was formally dead and buried in 1973 with the advent of the all-volunteer armed forces. This action left the Department of Defense free to concentrate on the one and only true function of the Armed Forces — that of preparing for and fighting the wars that our so-called leaders have a habit of blundering into.

Using Israel is a bad example. Israel survives with its enemies right outside the gate, making compulsory military service a necessity. The United States doesn't. Jordan and Syria also have conscription, because they perceive Israel as their enemy, also perched right outside their gates.

I also point out that China instituted compulsory military service for their students to teach "them respect for themselves, others, and their country, as well as a sense of discipline and order." Of course, this happened after a massacre in Beijing when students had the almighty gall to want things like freedom and democracy.

Dixie C. Mims' idea is not exactly an original. I've heard it all my life. I also remember a time when draftees, who were supposed to be learning the social skills that Dixie Mims was talking about, ended up lining the inside of too many body bags in Vietnam, unable to carry on with the new skills the draft would have supposedly given them.

Our all-volunteer armed force recently proved its worth in the successful prosecution of the war in the Persian Gulf. Young people go into the armed forces these days better educated and more highly motivated than anytime in the days of the draft. As a former Air Force officer and Vietnam veteran, that's the kind of people I want to serve in the Armed Forces. I don't want to see draftees used and abused like they were during Vietnam, ever again, and it would happen if we fight another war using draftees.

142nd District Court tries mainly civil cases

Voters, know the facts! Don't be misled by Robin Sams' claims. Statistics from the District Court Clerk's office at the Midland County Courthouse show that during the last year, 80 percent of the trials conducted by the 142nd District Court were civil trials. This figure does not include tax suits or family law matters. This means that four out of every five trials in the District Court involved civil legal matters. Last year, Judge Baskin conducted 66 trials, of which only 11 were criminal trials.

With these facts in mind, doesn't it make sense that the best choice for the 142nd District Court is Tom Bruner? He's the candidate with a business background. He has the civil trial experience, as well as the most appellant experience in business litigation. Without a doubt, he is the best qualified candidate to understand the complex legal issues that come before the 142nd District Court.

Governmental waste has got to be stopped

The fight between our sheriff and county judge and commissioners is costing someone. My questions are "Who's winning and who's losing?" Who's paying for the attorney's fees and costs for the sheriff? Who's paying for the county judge's attorney and costs?

Were the sheriff and his staff being paid at the same time they were in court? Who paid their salary while they were in court? How about the judge and the commissioners, were they being paid while they were in court?

What about all the preparatory time in putting this case on? Who foots the bill for this time? Who pays the judge for his time and expenses related to this suit? What about all the lost time from "doing their jobs?" Who pays for this loss? The list could go on and on. Who's paying these bills? And who's making all the money? Who's winning and who's losing?

If it is true taxpayers in Midland County pay these bills or any portion thereof, then I believe it's time all these guys either come out of pocket for these expenses or it's time they all go. I don't know if I speak for other taxpayers, but governmental waste has got to go.

Both parties involved will argue all this is the fault of others or that the suit was necessary. I say I'm sick and tired of my taxes funding waste. And although I believe an accounting should be forthcoming from both sides, I doubt seriously Midland County taxpayers will ever see it!

Who's winning? Attorneys and their staffs.

Who's losing? Midland County taxpayers.

Non-paying lawmakers should come forward

Last year, there was much coverage of Anita Hill and then-Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas occasioned by leaks of confidential testimony by members of the Congress or their employees. As it turned out, little was accomplished other than to damage or destroy the reputations of individuals who actions had not warranted such.

About the same time, there was a brief mention that some members of Congress had their credit at an eatery withdrawn because of failure to pay long-overdue bills, and that more than $1 million in outstanding debits had been involved. The Congress has not decided whether to publish these names, and perhaps will not find it convenient to make such a major decision before the November elections.

However, it seems likely that many voters would be influenced to vote against a candidate who had been unable to differentiate personal integrity and public responsibility, for some of us would hardly be proud to have a criminal as our representative.

In view of the significance this list of names could have on the outcome of the next elections, it is surprising that someone in the media has been unable to ferret at least a name or two from the list. To my knowledge, none of the members has seen it worthwhile it inform the public of the situation.

Court doesn't respect Painter, Shuffield

In all of the years that I have been a resident of Midland County, I have never seen such an utter display of disrespect of officials in the county by the five-member county commissioners court. Their mutual attack on Gary Painter and Frances Shuffield, the only two officials receiving the major cuts in budgets, is a prime example of their arrogance.

One commissioner is a former Dallas Smith supporter, one was arrogant in telling his rural voters that their votes didn't matter to him, one changed parties strictly for political reasons, and the other is a non-voice because that vote can always be overridden.

The judge led this charge against our sheriff and tax assessor-collector, and no amount of facts and figures presented, showing the error of their charges, could alter this course. He had his agenda and the other four simply fell into step, thinking this would give them status in the community. Instead, it made our community look like Duval County politics.

In this budget crunch, they turned right around and purchased "wind chillers" for the courthouse that cost $229,000 with installation, etcetera, estimated at $157,927 and none of this is on the budget! How can they spend money that is not even budgeted and yet take away salaries of other employees that would have been on the budget? When the budget is used as their stance, that is completely false — the money was there, was used and the whole agenda was to follow the lead of the judge in getting rid of Gary Painter and the tax office by the "farce" of "saving the taxpayers' dollars." Taxes were raised 4½ cents per $100 value so the taxpayers saw absolutely no savings.

Why don't the county commissioners and judge cut their "part-time" salaries? They are sorely overpaid for the hours they spend on their jobs for the county. Let's voice our opinion of these "so-called leaders" that are running for re-election in 1992 and vote them out of their high-paying "part-time" jobs!

Do commissioners want drug dealers to run free?

Of course, citizens expected Judge Mulanax to favor criminal activity over law enforcement. Keeping criminals free and comfortable is what our criminal justice system does these days.

But why do Judge Seltzer and commissioners Wright, McCrary, Valencia and Brown want to let drug dealers run free and keep their money?

Whenever someone like Sheriff Gary Painter begins to make things uncomfortable for drug dealers and users, some judge or judges and their political cronies find a way to help criminals and stop law enforcement dead. Maybe the Commissioners' Court, in their infinite wisdom and power, could order criminals to stay in Midland County where Sheriff Painter can arrest them. As it is, they are home free before they get to Stanton or Odessa. Actually, if "Bro" Seltzer and the commissioners had their way, Sheriff Painter wouldn't have enough gasoline to follow them that far!

Now, I know this is a democracy. A majority of my fellow citizens in Midland want a criminal-loving county judge and Commissioners' Court.

Think about that when a pregnant woman is shot or an elderly lady is robbed in the parking lot. Think about it when your car is stolen or your home burglarized. Then think about it again when someone you know is shot, stabbed, raped or beaten. The majority of people in Midland like it like that!

Love it, change it or leave it.

Epsilon Sigma Alpha's efforts appreciated

I would like to publicly thank an organization that has brightened Valentine's Day for a special group of students annually for the past 27 years. The Beta Eta Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha organization has presented two fun-filled hours of clowns, games, treats and laughter for approximately 150 special education students of Midland Independent School District (MISD).

To undertake a party of this magnitude requires a tremendous effort. The ladies of this organization have never failed to upstage the efforts of the previous year. They just get bigger and better each year! The generosity of this group reflects the true community spirit of Midland.

On behalf of the many students who have enjoyed the annual event, I would like to say "thank you!"

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Final letters slated Sunday

Sunday, March 8, will be the final publication day for letters concerning candidates and issues related to the Tuesday primary election.

In the interest of fairness to all candidates, letters will not be published on Monday, the day before the election, or on election day itself.

Parents should check out school bus drivers

On Feb. 25 at approximately 7:40 a.m., I was sitting in my car on Garfield Street. The traffic signal had just turned green on my side when I witnessed school bus No. 89 filled with children drive through a red light while heading east on Golf Course Road.

There is more to this story. Approximately six weeks ago, I was sitting in my car, again on Garfield Street, waiting for the signal to turn green. After it did, I thoughtfully looked toward the west to make sure the intersection was clear before moving forward. Vehicles commonly run this light. I am thankful because on looking, school bus No. 20, empty of children, came racing through the intersection, heading east on Loop 250.

On both occasions I phoned the school transportation department. The first time I was thanked for my concern and was told that this information came as quite a surprise, as this bus driver has a habit of driving very slow. "She is one of our slower drivers," I was told, and the driver was not running late that day.

The second time, I immediately called the school transportation department only this time I insisted on hearing back from them as to the outcome of this matter. "There is nothing for you to hear. We will check it out," the individual said.

Dissatisfied with the outcome of this telephone conversation, I called the police department. After speaking with two different individuals, it was clear that they wouldn't do anything unless an officer actually witnessed a violation by a bus driver.

Parents of children who ride a school bus in Midland should ask this question: Do some school bus drivers make a habit of driving dangerously, risking the lives of precious children and the general public, or were these two incidents isolated cases?

I have no children of my own so it seems appropriate that the actual parents should delve into this matter further. This safety issue is critical. Please take care of this problem before there is a tragedy.

Tom Bruner will make Midlanders proud

As a Midland resident for over 30 years, I have seen Tom Bruner do an outstanding job as head of the trust department for a major bank and as a practicing lawyer. In addition he has found the time for civic work with Midland Senior Services, United Way, Junior Achievement and, currently, the board for Downtown Kiwanis Club, Hospice of Midland and Midland Memorial Hospital.

He is an honest, conservative, even-tempered, mature man, who is knowledgeable in both civil and criminal law. Tom Bruner has the experience, intelligence, appearance and bearing to make a judge of whom we will be proud.

Midland voters get what they deserve

We've been hearing a lot of discussion about our governments, and I agree that none of our elected officials — city, county, state or federal — seem to be other than self-serving miscreants.

However, there is one aspect of "self rule" that doesn't seem to be addressed. George Bernard Shaw said, "Democracy is a device that assures we shall be governed no better than we deserve."

Perhaps we all need to remember that the next time we go to the polls, or more importantly, when we decide not to.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, March 5, the 65th day of 1992. There are 301 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 5, 1770, the Boston Massacre took place as British soldiers who had been taunted by a crowd of colonists opened fire, killing several people.

On this date:

In 1766, a Spanish official, Don Antonio de Ulloa, arrived in New Orleans to take possession of the Louisiana Territory from the French.

In 1867, an abortive Fenian uprising against English rule took place in Ireland.

In 1868, the Senate was organized into a Court of Impeachment to decide charges against President Andrew Johnson.

In 1933, in Germany, the Nazi Party won a majority of seats in parliamentary elections.

Tsongas searches for pockets of Southern support

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Along Florida's "condo coast" of retirement communities, the very idea of limiting Social Security increases is political poison.

So Bill Clinton's suggestion that his chief Democratic rival might want to limit cost-of-living increases in entitlement programs drew gasps from the hundreds of retirees assembled at their poolside social hall.

Clinton's visit was part of a preemptive strike against Paul Tsongas, who hopes for a come-from-behind Florida win and strong showings elsewhere in the South.

Retirement communities, which include thousands of seniors from the Northeast, are one place where Tsongas has a chance to make inroads as he tries to keep Clinton from making too good a showing in next week's Super Tuesday primaries. Six of the 11 contests will be in Clinton's native South, including delegate giants Florida and Texas.

With little time and lots of catching up to do, Tsongas must choose his targets carefully. He can take cues from the lessons of years past, including 1988 Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis' successful primary campaigns in Florida and Texas.

In addition, surveys of voters in the contests held so far offer Tsongas a roadmap to potential pockets of support in the South.

Tsongas, the former Massachusetts senator, heads into Super Tuesday with momentum from a New Hampshire win and his successful showings this week in Maryland, Utah and Washington.

"Paul doesn't need a lot of golds,' said Massachusetts Democratic Chairman Steven Grossman. "But he does need to show everywhere that he is a credible national candidate."

Eight-five percent of Florida's population was born elsewhere, making it a Southern state by geography only. Its Democratic primary constituency includes thousands of transplants from the Northeast, including a vibrant and politically active Jewish community.

"Florida is too big for anyone in a campaign of limited resources so he can hit the condos and the Jewish community," said Democratic consultant Vic Kamber. "You have to pick and choose but there are opportunities for him."

It was success in these groups that helped Dukakis to his win four years ago — and one of the reasons Clinton was courting both constituencies Tuesday in advance of expected Tsongas forays.

A new poll showed Clinton leading Tsongas 27 percent to 21 percent, but a large undecided block remains. A plurality in the polls agreed with Tsongas' characterization of a Clinton-backed middle class tax cut as a "gimmick."

Already, a Clinton television ac. mentions a Tsongas proposal to limit cost of living increases for entitlements and he brings it up on the stump as well.

Tsongas makes the case for keeping COLAs at 1 percent below inflation in his detailed economic book, saying such a reduction is "not a great deal but would establish a policy of economic response."

FBI joins in warning of computer virus

N.Y. Times News Service

FBI Director William Sessions on Wednesday joined a growing number of computer experts and others warning about the potential danger of a computer virus called Michelangelo.

Sessions noted that the destruction of data in government computers is a federal crime.

The FBI's warning follows a similar caution issued on Tuesday by Scotland Yard, the British police agency.

Sessions said in a short statement that there are more than 1,000 known computer viruses and that new ones are surfacing daily.

"The FBI urges computer operators to use appropriate security procedures to minimize the risk of a computer virus destroying information," he said.

Peace talks close with shift to substantive issues

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The fourth round of Mideast peace talks ended Wednesday with no major breakthroughs, but with a clear shift to substantive discussions on all fronts.

The Israelis and their various negotiating partners — Palestinians, Jordanians, Lebanese and Syrians — all ended the round engaged in serious talks rather than procedural skirmishes for the first time since peace talks opened last October.

While each complained about lack of progress and said the opposite side wasn't cooperating, all expressed a long-term commitment to continue the process.

One surprise with potential to seriously affect the talks came from Syrian Moaffak Allaf, who during a news conference floated the idea of delaying the next round of talks until after Israel's elections in June.

"I think maybe this is not a bad idea to wait, since we are sure that the Israeli delegation will not be ready to make any real progress before the elections," said Allaf, who only moments earlier had said negotiators should not waste time but should continue talks through the election period.

"What I am saying is we have to choose between two things: whether not to weaken the peace process by postponing meetings four months without any meeting, or whether not to weaken the peace process by meeting with no avail, with no results," he said. Meeting without progress erodes the confidence of the Arab people in the peace process, he said, and thus weakens it.

Even Allaf, however, firmly backed continued efforts to make the peace process work, after earlier hints that the Syrians were thinking about dropping out.

Once again all parties left the talks without agreement on when to return or where to meet next. Israel still is pressing to move peace negotiations to the region, while the various Arab delegations at the least demand to see more progress in negotiations before changing the site.

Israeli negotiator Elyakim Rubinstein said after the final session that his group rejected "in detail" a new Palestinian plan for interim self-government in the occupied territories, but the Palestinians said they may try to begin implementing it immediately even without formal Israeli acceptance.

Palestinian spokeswoman Hanan Ashrawi said the Arabs living under occupation cannot stop Israeli settlements in the territories or kick out the Israeli army, but they can begin laying groundwork such as drawing up voter lists and legislative districts for the elections they want to hold by September.

She admitted Israel as an occupying force could stop moves toward implementation, through tactics such as arrests and curfews, but suggested she expects the Israelis finally to agree to an election plan.

Tsongas is in good health after cancer treatment, doctors say

WASHINGTON (NYT) — More than five years after undergoing an experimental treatment for cancer, Paul E. Tsongas is in good health and, if elected president, the Democratic candidate has a favorable prognosis for serving out his term, his doctors say.

They pronounced the 51-year-old Tsongas fit after he underwent an array of tests last December that showed no evidence of recurrence of the lymphoma, a cancer of the immune system, that was first detected in 1983 and for which he received experimental therapy in 1986.

"There was no hint of a problem," said Dr. Tak Takvorian, a lymphoma expert at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston, a leading cancer center. Takvorian is Tsongas' doctor and spoke in an extensive interview with his patient's permission.

"At the moment, it would appear to be clear sailing," Takvorian said.

But because the treatment is so new and Tsongas was one of the first people to undergo it, there are no statistics that show the relapse rate after five years.

The lack of such data and the unpredictability of this type of cancer have led some doctors in the field to say it is not clear yet whether Tsongas is cured and whether, if a relapse occurs, he could serve out his term.

Dana-Farber researchers who have followed 114 patients, including Tsongas, who received the treatment, have reported that they split into two groups, 57 who had detectable cancer cells afterward and 57 who did not.

In the first group, there were 22 relapses. In the second group, there were three relapses. The median follow-up time was 23 months.

Tsongas and his doctor said he has never shown evidence of cancer cells after the treatment, so that he would fit in the second group, which had the better results.

Dr. Leonard R. Prosnitz, chairman of the radiation oncology department at the Duke University Medical Center, said, "One would be cautious about labeling a patient only 4 to 5 years removed from treatment as being cured despite the fact that they had been disease-free during that entire interval."

In interviews, Tsongas, a former senator from Massachusetts, told how he fought the recurrence of cancer in 1985 and how in 1986 he received large amounts of chemotherapy and radiation.

The experimental treatment depended on removing a portion of his marrow, treating him with chemotherapy and radiation, and then injecting the marrow cells back into the body.

Having overcome an initial reluctance to discuss his cancer and saying he has passed the five-year point marking a cure, the first cancer survivor to run for president is increasingly talking on the campaign trail directly and matter of factly about the disease.

Tsongas was fully cooperative and was as open about his health records as other presidents and candidates have been.

Discipline of doctors by hospitals is erratic, report says

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The rates at which physicians in hospitals discipline incompetent colleagues varies greatly from state to state, says a report published Wednesday by Public Citizen.

Nationally, there are 600,000 medical and osteopathic doctors. In the 12 months that ended in August 1991, hospitals reported 750 serious disciplinary actions — 1.25 per 1,000 doctors.

That's "only a handful," said Joan Stieber, author of the report issued by the health research group of Public Citizen, founded by consumer activist Ralph Nader.

In each case a doctor had his or her privileges restricted for more than 30 days. Restrictions could range from working under another doctor's supervision to a ban on practicing at the hospital.

The rates ranged from 10.15 per 1,000 doctors in Alaska (8 actions and 788 physicians) down to 0.35 per 1,000 in Rhode Island (1 case and 2,828 physicians).

Alaska, Nevada, Colorado and Arizona all had more than three cases per 1,000 doctors. At the other extreme, Tennessee, Maryland, Minnesota and Rhode Island all had less one case per 2,000 doctors.

"Clearly, the system isn't working very well," Ms. Stieber said. "Whether through fear of scrutiny of their own performance, courtesy toward their colleagues or risk of vengeance lawsuits, the doctors who comprise hospital review committees are reluctant to penalize their peers."

Or, hospitals may rely more than they used to on restrictions of 30 days or less, which don't have to be reported, she said.

"She may be right. It may well be that you have both under-reporting and under-disciplining. But I don't know what an optimal figure would be," said Robert S. Adler, an associate professor of legal studies at the business school of the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. Adler helped draft the 1986 federal law which set up the data bank, required hospitals to fill and use it, and gave immunity from lawsuits to peer review committees which used fair procedures.

Ms. Stieber complained that the 750 disciplinary actions reported in the data bank's first year of operations was far below estimates that 100,000 or more hospital patients harmed each year by "negligent medical care, usually involving physicians."

However, Adler said, "After all, some of those 100,000 cases didn't involve doctors or could be one-time screw-ups not warranting a suspension. No human being working in a high-risk activity can avoid all mistakes."

Disciplinary actions will increase, predicted Peter Budetti, director of the Center for Health Policy Research at George Washington University in Washington, D.C.

"The medical community will take a few years to gain confidence that they can get and share adverse opinion about a colleague as long as they do so in a way that protects that person's rights," said Budetti, a physician and attorney who also helped draft the law.

"Ever since a case in Astoria, Ore., in which a doctor disciplined by his colleagues collected almost $2 million in antitrust damages, doctors have been leery in this area," Budetti said. "That's why the law was passed."

High winds stir dust, Airpark neighbors' ire

■ A safety improvement project leaves parts of runway area temporarily bare of plant cover.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

High winds Wednesday raised loose topsoil in an area covering almost 100 acres where mesquite trees and shrubs have been cleared from Midland Airpark during the last few months.

The ensuing dust raised complaints from neighbors and motorists.

Some neighbors say the clearing has caused a dustbowl, others that it resembles a would-be cotton field. But city staffers say removing the tall growth was necessary for the facility to remain safe and useful to the pilots it is intended to service.

"We don't want a dangerous situation out there," said Marv Esterly, assistant director of airports. After a Federal Aviation Administration inspection, clearing of brush around the runways and other areas was ordered, Esterly said.

He hopes residents will bear with the situation, because it is expected to be temporary. "Something had to be done" to ensure airplane safety, he said.

"We have a unique situation because of the improvements, but we're sorry for the inconvenience," Esterly said.

Now that clearing is complete, Esterly said, grass and weeds should grow over the vacant land, holding the dirt in place.

"There's some vegetation coming up out there already," he said. Additionally, there are plans to keep a water truck available to help keep blowing dust down until the vegetation can get a better grip.

Then, he said, staffers will keep Airpark land mowed and sightlines clear.

About 100 acres of the air park's 550 were cleared, at the ends and along the sides of runways as well as lining the entire park — where a 6-foot fence will be erected and strung with barbed wire, city officials said.

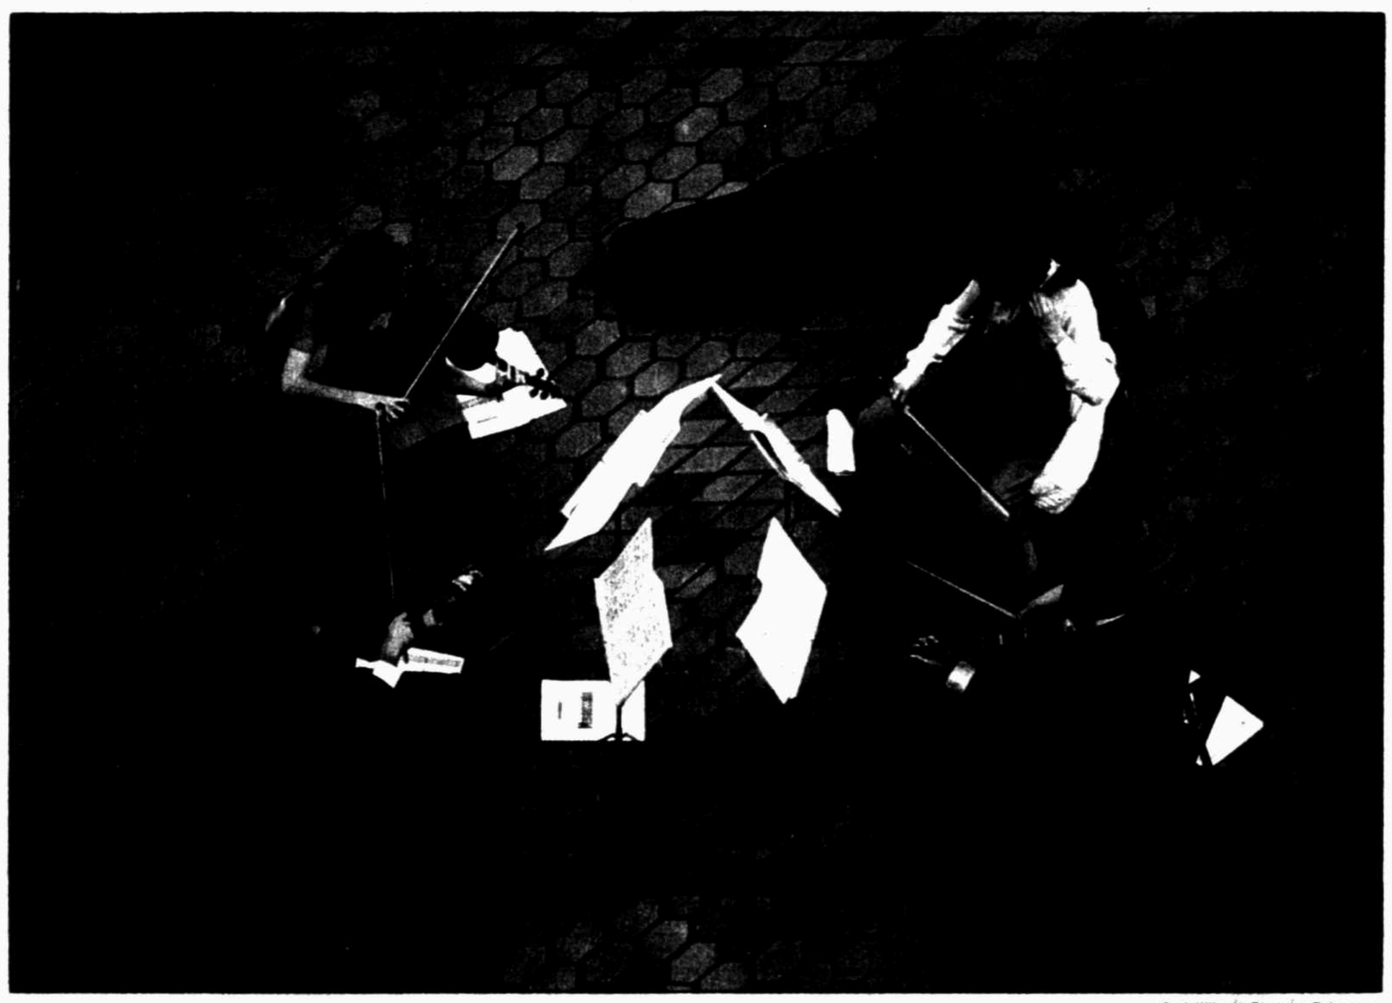

Security fencing, the clearing and some other construction total about $600,000 — to be funded 90 percent by a grant from the FAA. Esterly expects the construction, begun in December but delayed by bad weather, to be complete in May.

"Airpark was getting run down," Esterly said. For many years, the future of Airpark was uncertain while the city made plans to relocate its "reliever airport" — an idea since placed on hold indefinitely.

Some of the projects, including the clearing brush, are much-needed safety measures, Esterly said. If a pilot has trouble during a landing, gliding the plane in would be much easier if the area around the runway's end is clear.

Security fencing is designed to prevent vandalism, which has occurred at Airpark through the years, and theft of planes or equipment. It is also a safety measure, to prevent unauthorized access to the area around the runways, officials said.

General contractor Cooper Construction is supervising the project, which also includes renovations, such as resealing the ramp where planes are parked.

The Thouvenel String Quartet of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale entertained lunchtime listeners in the ClayDesta atrium Wednesday. MOSC is continuing its emergency fund drive to raise $125,000 by Monday. Wednesday afternoon the group said it had collected $92,827 toward its goal, excluding a $25,000 challenge grant that an anonymous donor has pledged in the event the fund drive reaches $100,000.

State to provide funding for road to CAF museum

■ Construction project is expected to start in April, finish by September.

Allen Howland Reporter-Telegram

It's little more than a pasture now, but in a few months a new road will lead visitors right up to the door of the Confederate Air Force headquarters and museum.

The Texas Department of Transportation will fund the construction of Loop 40 near Midland International Airport from Spur 217 (Sloan Field Boulevard) past the CAF facility to Farm-to-Market Road 1788.

"We're just tickled to death to have it," said Norma Webb, director of marketing and communications for the CAF. She said the group has been working on securing the road for more than a year.

The road will pass the headquarters facility on its west side, and will allow visitors easier entrance and exit to the area. It also may reduce congestion for people heading to the airport during events at the CAF.

"Once they (the CAF) committed (to locating in Midland), the city came to us about a road," said Mike McAnally, resident engineer for the department's Odessa office. Although the job is completely on Midland city and county soil, the Odessa office will oversee the road's completion in a typical sharing of the local workload.

"We think it will give good (traffic) movement to the CAF," McAnally said. "It's going to serve their interests well."

The city has donated a small section of land for the road, which will be about a mile long. The remainder of the land was owned by the Scharbauer family and donated for the project.

Originally, officials hoped to build the road before the CAF's December grand opening, the project will be up for bid within a week or two and construction should begin in mid-April. The road is expected to be complete by September, if weather permits.

"We'll block off Wright Drive for a while," McAnally said, but added there should be no disruption of traffic to the airport terminal or other areas there. While Wright is closed, visitors can reach the CAF from Windecker Street.

Loop 40 will replace Wright Drive where it connects to Sloan Boulevard, near the U.S. Postal Service Regional Mail Facility. The new road, estimated at $600,000, will be curbed and guttered with several lanes, similar to Sloan, McAnally said.

The state will pay for constructing the road, relocating utility lines and inspecting the work.

Train workers tour to warn of railroad dangers

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

When Dub Johnson was involved in an accident with a dump truck a few years ago in Alamore, the truck was demolished.

"I hit the dump truck and the dump truck was torn into eight different pieces as if a bomb hit it," Johnson recalled.

"It just pulled out in front of us. Who knows what the man was thinking? He died in the accident. And he had a family," he added.

Johnson, an engineer for Union Pacific Railroad, was operating a train at the time.

"The thing people don't understand is that the average train weighs 6,000 tons and it takes over a mile to stop at 55 miles per hour," said Tom Newsom, a train conductor (the person in charge of cargo) for Union Pacific.

Newsom and Johnson are currently involved with Operation Lifesaver, a public education program aimed at reducing railroad crossing accidents.

The two train workers, who reside in Big Spring, speak at schools, civic organizations and other groups from Fort Worth to El Paso.

"We are basically trying to educate the public on trains," Newsom said.

With about 14,500 railroad crossings in Texas, train/motor vehicle collisions are the most severe type of highway accident, according to the Texas Safety Association.

About 6,000 such accidents occur every year, Johnson said.

Motorists can easily prevent being involved in such collisions by just being aware, he said.

"If they (drivers) want to know what's going on around them, they have to look and listen. You have to think when you come to a crossing," Johnson said.

One mistake some motorists make is stopping on a railroad track while waiting for a traffic light, Johnson said. If a train comes, the driver may not be able to move with cars in front and in back also waiting for the light, he said.

"Most people think we can stop like a car. We can't do that," Newsom said.

A freight train traveling at 30 mph takes about two-thirds of a mile to stop. An automobile at the same speed can do so in 78 feet.

Another safety area that Johnson and Newsom address concerns children and trains.

"They like to play in switch yards and think there's no danger involved," Newsom said.

"But they can get their legs or arms cut off. They can get in a boxcar, the door can lock shut and nobody knows," Newsom added.

One common practice — waving at trains — can have hidden dangers as well, Johnson said.

"They get up close to the railroad track to wave," Johnson said.

Unfortunately youngsters aren't usually aware that trains are wider than the tracks, he added.

Illustrating the danger of a train, Johnson compared having a car run over a person's foot and train do so.

A car's rubber tire may drive over a foot not causing any injury but a foot that's been underneath a train's steel wheel: "it's gone, nothing's there."

Buchanan prevents Bush's tax decisions, Bentsen says

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, author of the Democrats' tax bill, said Wednesday that there was little chance of progress on taxes, health care or other important issues "as long as the president's decisions are being held hostage by Pat Buchanan."

Bentsen said President Bush was rejecting tax increases on fewer than 1 percent of Americans to pay for tax credits of $300 per child because he was scared of losing the votes of conservative Republicans.

Patrick J. Buchanan, the commentator who is challenging Bush, has received most of his votes in recent primaries from conservative Republicans.

"Right now all of his efforts, the entire machinery of the executive branch of government, is focused on one thing, and that's enticing that faction of the voters back and away from Pat Buchanan," Bentsen, the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, told the National Press Club.

Bentsen said the point of the Democrats' bill, which would cut some taxes by $57 billion over five years and raise others by the same amount, was more fairness than economic growth.

"We're trying to redress some of the excesse of the Reagan-Bush economic years," he said.

Morales inspired media attacks, Tilton testifies

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Television evangelist Robert Tilton testified Wednesday that the Texas attorney general encouraged media attacks on his ministry for the last four months, causing about 1,000 members to leave the church.

Tilton

Tilton and his wife, Martha "Marte" Tilton, appeared before U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks in an attempt to receive a permanent injunction against Attorney General Dan Morales' investigation into their ministry.

Tilton's Word of Faith church in suburban Dallas came under scrutiny in late November after the ABC television show "PrimeTime Live" broadcast allegations that church members were defrauded.

Sparks granted the ministry a temporary restraining order Feb. 7 after Morales ordered the ministry to produce 55 types of financial, marketing and administrative records, the attorney general's office said.

Morales' investigation was launched last year into the Word of Faith Outreach Center Church in Farmers Branch, a north Dallas suburb. The probe focuses on whether the church has violated charitable practices and commit-

Staying the course leads to fulfillment's personal award

Todd

The pathway to fulfillment in life lies in the EE factor: Earnest Endeavor.

It is not riches and fame, which often outlive the flesh, that get the gold and the glory. Rather, it is forging ahead that wins the fulfillment award. And that is no particular revelation.

But last week, after running another marathon, I once again figured that out. Well into the 26.2-mile race, I got to wondering "Why in the world am I doing this?"

Out of pain and weariness, your body wants to call it quits. But your mind says, "No, sir." And you keep on going. The lingering pangs of not finishing the course would far, far exceed any discomfort — not exactly agony — of running the course.

Like anything else done well, after you finish the course, you know why you stuck it out. You know why you put in the groundwork — the homework. You feel good about yourself, about others, about the world. You have persevered.

And that is the story of success in life — win, lose or draw. If you unfailingly carry the banner of purpose in seeking achievement, you somehow are going to be a winner. You can't fault yourself for not trying to bring out the best in yourself.

There is an inspirational saying credited to Theodore Roosevelt in 1899, before he became president of these United States of America. It goes thusly:

"Far better it is to dare mighty things, to win glorious triumphs, even though checkered by failure, than to take rank with those poor spirits who neither enjoy much nor suffer much, because they live in the gray twilight that knows not victory nor defeat."

Without 'fessing up, I can tell you that I have stepped in many a pothole. I have fallen short in many areas. I have tripped short of the goal, begrudgingly got up, whined and headed for the sidelines. That, my friends, is no way to run a railroad.

There is wisdom, they say, in knowing when to stop and to hang up the spurs. There is wisdom, they say, in knowing the difference between "enough" and "giving up." I don't know. Though I have suffered this failure called "giving up," I hope never again to fall prey to the self-imposed sidelines.

As long as we are given breath, I reckon we ought to keeping striving for the mark — finishing the course in good faith.

DEATHS

Jordan Snyder

Services for Jordan Charlton "Chuck" Snyder, 79, of Midland are set for 3 p.m. today at First Christian Church with the Rev. Chris Diebel officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Snyder died Wednesday at a local care center.

He was born April 27, 1912, in Beaumont and moved with his family to Houston, where he attended school, including South Texas College. He received his law degree, specializing in oil, gas and mineral law and land titles, in 1936.

He married Louise Weaver on Nov. 30, 1940, in Houston.

He joined Sun Oil Co. in Houston and Beaumont and later was associated with American Republic Corp., Sinclair Oil Co. and Atlantic Richfield in Houston and Midland.

After taking early retirement, he joined Tom Brown Inc. He retired in 1980.

He was a deacon, elder and trustee of First Christian Church of Midland. He also was a member of the Midland and Texas Bar Associations.

Survivors include: his wife, Louise Weaver Snyder of Midland; one daughter, Virginia Snyder Kohler of Odessa; two grandchildren and one niece.

Memorials should be directed to First Christian Church or a charity of choice.

Annie Brooks

Services for Annie Brooks, 79, of Midland are set for 11 a.m. Firday in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. James Denison of First Baptist Church officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Brooks died Tuesday at a local hospital following a brief illness.

She was born July 23, 1912, in Port O'Connor and grew up in Austin, where she attended school, including earning bachelor's and master's degrees in foreign language from the University of Texas. She worked as an official Spanish translator for the General Land Office in the 1930s.

She married Richard S. Brooks on April 4, 1935.

The couple moved to Midland in 1941. He preceded her in death on Sept. 10, 1989.

Mrs. Brooks was a member of the American Association of University Women and was active in their piano group. She also was a member of the Aaron W. Estes Chapter of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas.

Survivors include: two sons, Richard T. Brooks of Midland and David K. Brooks of Dallas; one daughter, Anne Brooks Ramsey of Orange, Calif.; two grandchildren and one niece.

Mayme Sperry

BRECKENRIDGE — Graveside services for former Midlander Mayme Polk Sperry, 91, are set for 11 a.m. today in the Breckenridge Cemetery with the Rev. Charles Hamilton officiating. Services are under the direction of Melton Funeral Home.

Mrs. Sperry died Tuesday at a Breckinridge care center.

She was born in Palo Pinto and was a longtime Breckenridge resident.

She worked as a seamstress for S&Q Clothiers in Midland and for several businesses in Breckenridge.

Mrs. Sperry was a member of the First Christian Church.

Survivors include: two daughters, Mary (Mrs. Jim) Wolfe of Midland and Joann (Mrs. Don) Lee of Denton; two sons, Fred Powell Sperry of Midland and Jack Polk Sperry of Breckenridge; eight grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

Memorials should be directed to the Helping Hand Fund or Christian Womens Fellowship at the First Christian Church of Breckenridge or the Stephens Memorial Hospital Pink Ladies Auxiliary.

ted fraud in its fund-raising activities.

Tilton's Sunday TV broadcasts draw thousands of viewers each week. The church has attracted 8,000 Dallas-area members.

The sanctuary's annual income has been estimated as high as $100 million.

The U.S. Postal Service, the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service also are investigating Tilton's ministry.

Tilton said he has had no problem cooperating with their investigations, but is resisting Morales' request because of the attorney general's approach.

The minister said he also objected to Morales' decision to transmit copies of a letter and later a lawsuit via facsimile to the media before offering them to the church. Tilton said he learned about the lawsuit when a reporter called him for a comment about it.

"That gives me the impression you're playing dirty," said Tilton, who held a worn, red bible during an early portion of his almost two-hour testimony.

Another letter favoring Tilton was later used an evidence, prompting the minister to say "I wish it would've been faxed too."

Mrs. Tilton said she did not learn of Morales' investigation until immediately before the Nov. 21 ABC broadcast.

"That convinced us we could never trust your office," Tilton said.

Rose Ann Reecer, an assistant attorney general, said in opening statements that "we don't claim (violations) occurred, only that very serious allegations have been made and the attorney general has the duty to investigate."

According to the ABC broadcast, Tilton deposited financial donations sent with "prayer requests," but the requests didn't reach the minister.

Martha "Marte" Tilton, the church's top administrator, denied that in her testimony. She said all mail first goes to a bank, which deposits donations, then is forwarded to a firm which directs prayer requests and other items to Tilton.

Mrs. Tilton said two other 1991 television programs had short-term negative effects on the church. However, she said they still have not recovered from the Nov. 21 ABC program.

Strangers have called Mrs. Tilton and her children fools, frauds and charlatans, she said. Death threats against Tilton have increased almost five times since the broadcast and church membership has dropped by almost 1,000, Mrs. Tilton said.

"We feel the harassment has gone past Bob and me personally, but the members of our church also have been made to look like fools," she said.

"At lunch one day, a man walked up to me and said 'I want you to know that you're husband is a disgrace and a charlatan.' It's just personal agony," Mrs. Tilton said.

Tilton added that he too has been verbally assaulted and "what seems like tons of Monopoly money" has been dumped on his home's front lawn.

Tilton's attorney, J.C. Joyce of Tulsa, Okla., said in his opening statement that Texas has no law allowing Morales to take action against the ministry. He said that if such a statute existed, it would be unconstitutional.

LOCAL/AREA REPORT

Drugs seized

Staff Report

Law enforcement officials seized nine pounds of cocaine and arrested two Rockdale residents Wednesday morning at a home located one mile north of Crane, according to Tom Finley of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force.

The cocaine has a street value of $500,000, officials said.

Leonardo Rodriguez Pena, 51, and Juan Gilberto Gonzalez, 42, were both charged with possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver. Both were being held in the Crane County jail without bond, Finley said.

Also seized was a 1981 tan Chevrolet flatbed truck.

The arrests culminated a one-month investigation conducted by the Permian Basin Drug Task Force and the Crane Police Department, officials said.

Narcotics found

ODESSA — Narcotics officers arrested a 36-year-old Odessan Wednesday afternoon after searching his home and discovering 32 grams of heroin and 13 grams of cocaine, Odessa police said.

Castulo Dimas Garcia of the 900 block of E. 23rd Street faces a preliminary hearing in Midland today on charges of aggravated possession of heroin and possession of cocaine, police said.

Officers also seized $2,639.50 in cash and assorted drug paraphernalia. The search warrant was executed at 1:50 p.m. The value of the heroin is listed at approximately $7,000 and the cocaine is estimated to be worth $1,300, police said.

House fire probed

ODESSA— Odessa fire officials are investigating the cause of a fire Wednesday night at a vacant mobile home in the 5300 block of San Benito Drive, fire officials said.

The blaze was discovered shortly after 8 p.m. and officials declared the home a total loss, officials said.

Odessan arrested

A 36-year old man arrested on drug charges in Odessa Tuesday night remained in the Midland County jail Wednesday pending a detention hearing, officials said.

Castulo Llanez Garcia, charged with possession with intent to distribute herion and cocaine, appeared before before a U.S. Magistrate Wednesday, federal officials said.

Garcia was arrested by Odessa police after an investigation assisted by Drug Enforcement Administration.

Clues sought

Police were still searching for clues in the Tuesday afternoon burglary of a home at 420 E. Shandon Avenue. Four Zenith color televisions and two videocassette recorders were taken in the incident, police reports said.

Entry was gained through a door that had been kicked down. The burglary was reported by Mamie Williams at 3:23 p.m., reports said.

Bush's Houston home looks like hotel room

By Susan Yoachum

N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — The bookshelves are lined with Reader's Digest Condensed Books. The king-size bedspread is done in floral pinks and greens. The bathrooms are stocked with miniature containers of mouthwash and shampoo.

This is George Bush's home-away-from-the-White House, the $800-a-night hotel suite that gives him bragging rights to being a Texan — and the chance to escape paying state income tax in one of the few states that does not have it.

President Bush's "home" and legal residence, which he visits a handful of times a year, is at the Houstonian Hotel, a curious cross between Asilomar's scenic setting on the outside and a Holiday Inn on the inside.

And, in what some see as a metaphor for Bush's presidential campaign woes, the hotel is facing tough economic times. Its owner, Houston Properties Ltd., has filed for bankruptcy protection under Chapter 11 at a critical time when the hotel hopes to undergo some renovations before the Republican National Convention in August.

From upholstery that doesn't quite cover all of the sofas near the elevators to the scuffed-up orange-and-white ice machines on the way to the Presidential Suite, the hotel has suffered from benign neglect, employees say.

From upholstery that doesn't quite cover all of the sofas near the elevators to the scuffed-up orange-and-white ice machines on the way to the Presidential Suite, the hotel has suffered from benign neglect, employees say.

It has also suffered from an occasional lack of crowds — except when the president is in residence.

"When Bush is here, it's a mess, with dogs sniffing everybody, and everything else," confided one hotel worker. "It's a disaster."

Other hotel employees say they seldom glimpse Bush, who is brought in and out the back way to his second-floor "home" — a living room and a bedroom.

The living room, which looks out over the hotel swimming pool, has a wet bar, a dining room table and chairs, loveseats, chairs, ottomans and a television — but no kitchen area.

That would be unusual in most homes, but at the Houstonian, all Bush has to do is pick up the phone and order chili con queso by the quart or a rib eye steak by the ounce.

In the bedroom, there is a desk, along with the king-sized bed, and the suite has two bathrooms, stocked with the usual tiny hygiene products for the forgetful guest.

Although the suite has about as much warmth as a glacier, hotel employees were quick to note that they put family pictures in place before Bush arrives.

The hotel suite became a cause celebre after its owners filed for bankruptcy protection and "Doonesbury" cartoonist Garry Trudeau penned a strip urging his readers to do "like the prez" and declare legal residency in Texas — and avoid taxes.

Bush has explained his Texas residency by pointing out that as a former oilman and congressman from Houston in the late 1960s, he spent all of his business life in Texas before he moved to Washington to enter public service.

A hotel executive who asked that his name not be used said that Bush only pays for the suite on the nights he uses it. Most of the rest of the time, he said, it remains vacant, although on "very rare" occasions, someone does rent it out — sort of a pay-as-you-go house-sitting plan for Bush's legal home.

And, lest the president need any inspiration for the day, he can turn on the hotel television channel, which always admonishes its guests to "have a productive day."

Richards unveils child care plan

AUSTIN (AP) — State employees who work in the Capitol complex can apply to participate in a model child care program, Gov. Ann Richards has announced.

The center, located near the Capitol, will serve 120 children.

Approximately 17,000 employees who work for an agency in the area surrounding the Capitol are eligible to apply for services.

To be considered for the initial child placement, employees must submit their registration by March 16. A drawing will determine the position of applicants on a waiting list.

Doug and Denise Kniffen, who own Creative World Learning Centers, were selected to operate the state center, the governor's office said. They have been in business in Austin for 10 years.

State employees will contract for services with Creative World, and fees will fund operations.

Ector County gets housing grant

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Ector County will receive a $270,895 grants for projects to aid low and moderate income residents through public works, housing and economic development programs, Gov. Ann Richards announced Wednesday.

The grant is among 181 totaling $35.75 million for Texas cities and counties that were financed by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Regional review committees, comprised of 12 locally elected officials appointed by the governor, review requests for funds and make recommendations on awarding the grants.

Heavy rain hits Houston area; flooded freeways slow traffic

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Up to 8 inches of rain hit parts of Houston Wednesday, pushing bayous out of their banks, leaving some freeways under water and making normally clogged traffic even worse.

Four handicapped children and the driver of their school bus escaped serious injury when their small bus went into rain-swollen White Oak Bayou near downtown. Police said the frightened bus riders were alert and conscious as they were put into ambulances and taken to a hospital by police dive team members.

Forecasters said the rains were caused by a line of storms that hovered over the area for several hours.

"The thunderstorms just stalled out on us," Bill Evans, spokesman of the Harris County Flood Control District, said.

The National Weather Service issued a flash flood watch for all of southeast Texas, where the ground has been saturated by repeated heavy rains since Christmas.

Rain totals Wednesday averaged from 3 to 6 inches with isolated areas reporting more.

Although the weather was expected to clear by nightfall, a new line of storms was developing across central Texas in the late afternoon and moving east. Forecasters said those rains could aggravate the already serious flooding problem.

Several major bayous that drain rains from Houston were reported at or above their banks, including Buffalo, White Oak and Braes bayous. Evans said Greens Bayou north of the city was also an area of concern.

Along the Interstate 10 freeway at the White Oak Bayou, dozens of cars were stranded in door-handle-high water.

"It's the first time I've seen it like this," Ken Baugh, who has lived in Houston since 1984, said while waiting out the flooding on a bank along the bayou. "I'm not going to be a statistic. I'm going to stand right here, drink beer and watch it."

Steve Wilson, a manager at the Fiesta Supermarket next to Interstate 10 in west Houston, said traffic was at a standstill in both directions.

"There's high water underneath the bridge. It's high enough so our parking lot looks like a lake," Wilson said.

Two convicted in drug seizure

TYLER (AP) — Two defendants in the seizure of 2,400 pounds of cocaine have been convicted on federal drug charges, officials said Wednesday.

Andy Restrepo, 52, and Gustavo Naranjo Bedoya, 39, both of Longview, were convicted Tuesday on charges stemming from the Nov. 18 seizures in Gregg and Marion Counties, the U.S. Attorney's office in Beaumont said.

Restrepo and Bedoya each face a minimum of 10 years to life in prison along with $4 million in fines, officials said. No sentencing date was announced Wednesday.

Three other defendants arrested at the time have pleaded guilty.

Stone praises Congress for releasing JFK papers

WASHINGTON (AP) — "JFK" director Oliver Stone said Wednesday during a tour of official Washington that "Congress deserves an Oscar" for moving to release intelligence documents on the assassination of President Kennedy.

Stone met with key lawmakers and administration officials to promote an opening of the assassination records.

"This is a great day and it gives me an enormous sense of optimism," said Stone after a meeting with Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Boren assured Stone in the closed-door session that he sees no legislative or administrative obstacles to the release of tens of thousands of CIA, FBI and military documents relating to the 1963 assassination.

Other than the occasional blacking out of an undercover agent's name, Boren said virtually all the secret material relating to the assassination can be made public. He said a panel of historians could be named to review documents in cases where public release is under dispute.

Later, after a meeting with Stone, Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, who chaired a 1978 House investigation into the assassination, said legislation on the release of documents would be ready within two weeks.

"There will be no smoking gun in the files," Stokes said. He said he disagreed with Stone's version of the assassination but credited the director for "raising the consciousness of the American people."

"JFK," nominated for eight Academy awards, puts forth what Stone calls an "alternative scenario" to the Kennedy assassination.

U.S., Mexico improperly monitor maquiladora's waste, EPA says

But an EPA official in Dallas said steps are being taken to improve monitoring of hazardous waste shipments from Mexico into the United States.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency concurred Wednesday with a congressional report outlining the failure of the United States and Mexico to track hazardous waste generated by maquiladoras.

But an EPA official in Dallas said steps are being taken to improve monitoring of hazardous waste shipments from Mexico into the United States.

The General Accounting Office this week released a hazardous waste report prepared at the request of Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., chairman of a government operations subcommittee.

"Currently, neither the United States nor Mexico has accurate and complete information on the number of maquiladoras that generate hazardous waste, the amount of hazardous waste they generate, or the final disposition of that waste," the investigative arm of Congress said.

Under Mexican environmental laws, U.S.-operated maquiladoras are required to re-export their waste for disposal in the United States and to notify the EPA when they do so.

There are about 2,000 maquiladoras along the border, of which 850 are operated by U.S. companies.

The EPA said the border environmental plan released by President Bush last week should go a long way in improving hazardous waste monitoring. The U.S.-Mexico border plan was developed to demonstrate the countries' commitment to environmental protection as part of their effort to craft a free trade agreement.

"We are quietly hopeful the language outlined in the border plan will address this issue," said Dave Barry, spokesman for the EPA regional office in Dallas, which oversees Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

"It's a start," Barry said. "With all things, especially the issue of hazardous waste and transshipment of it across the border and back, we have to start some place."

"There was never then, nor is there now, a real good system in place to track not only the shipments of raw materials from the United States to maquiladoras, but also the hazardous wastes that are generated and brought back to the United States."

The border plan calls for increased cooperation between U.S. and Mexican officials, joint training and beefed-up enforcement.

But Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio, said the border plan is yet another "comprehensive report" instead of a blueprint for action.

"We're tired of being studied," he said. "We want action."

Bush's fiscal 1993 budget request includes $241 million for border environmental projects, which Bustamante called insufficient.

"Heck, we send more money into the Middle East than we ever would even dream of sending to our people along the border," he said.

Bustamante said he will support legislation Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, plans to introduce requesting upwards of $500 million for the border in 1993.

"We ought to have a billion," Bustamante said.

One problem not addressed in the GAO report is that U.S. and Mexican officials have no way of monitoring chemicals used in the manufacturing process, Barry said.

"What you are doing is trying to address the issue of hazardous waste from one end without looking at the other end where the raw materials and chemicals are generated," he said.

Mexican environmental officials also admit they are unsure how much toxic pollution has been caused by maquiladoras. The EPA's Mexican counterpart, SEDUE, estimates that over half of the foreign-owned maquiladoras near the border produce poisonous waste.

Bentsen defends tax cut strategy

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, original author of the plan to give the middle class a tax cut, defended the strategy Wednesday as one that "does not add one dollar to the deficit."

The Texas Democrat is the leading Senate sponsor of a $300 per-child tax credit for middle-income families, paid for by higher taxes on the wealthy. A similar proposal was narrowly approved by the House last week.

Though Bentsen's proposal has helped Democrats frame their "tax fairness" issue during a presidential election year, the idea of sweeping tax cuts during a recession has drawn fire from several quarters, including some fellow Democrats.

"We seek to restore fairness to the tax code," Bentsen said Wednesday at a National Press Club luncheon. "We are doing this in a fiscally responsible manner."

Bentsen was questioned by the audience about the wisdom of cutting taxes against the advice of leading economists, who say it will not help the recession, and at a time when the government cannot balance its books.

"That doesn't stop us from addressing fairness," Bentsen said.

He said he took pains to ensure that revenue lost by the tax cut will be made up by higher taxes on the richest Americans.

A bill he is sponsoring as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee calls for increasing the top income tax bracket from 31 percent to 36 percent for individuals with taxable income of at least $150,000 and couples with at least $175,000. It also proposes a 10 percent surtax on incomes over $1 million.

"We are trying," Bentsen said, "to redress some of the excesses of the Reagan-Bush economic years," when the top income-earners paid less in taxes and the middle class was squeezed.

"We are providing some long overdue relief to middle-income America," he said.

Sen. Hollings' 'joke' angers survivors of atomic bombings

TOKYO (AP) — Sen. Ernest Hollings' "joke" about Hiroshima and Nagasaki drew angry responses Wednesday from survivors of the atomic bombings, but Japanese officials sought to play down the controversy.

The South Carolina Democrat's remarks come amid severe Japanese-American tensions, brought on by longterm trade problems and recent remarks by Japanese officials that Americans are lazy and lack a work ethnic.

On Monday, Hollings told a group of workers in his home state that they "should draw a mushroom cloud and put underneath it: 'Made in America by lazy and illiterate workers and tested in Japan.'"

He called his remark a joke and said his point was to criticize the recent Japanese comments about American work habits.

On Tuesday, Hollings expressed anger that the remark had turned into a controversy, telling a reporter outside the Senate chamber that he was glad he made the comment.

"I come through here with important stuff, day in and day out, for 25 years and you all stop me with this bull ... Good God!" Hollings was quoted as saying in The State newspaper of Columbia, S.C. "I'm glad I said it, glad I said it."

In Japan, most evening newspapers Wednesday carried reports of Hollings' remarks, though generally on page 2. Japan Broadcasting Corp. (NHK), the public TV network, also carried reports on the issue through the evening.

An article in Yomiuri, Japan's largest-circulation newspaper, carried the headline: "Is (the U.S.) Countering the 'Laziness Remark' With an Atomic Bomb!? Senator Makes an Irrelevant Statement."

A leader of a group of Japanese survivors of the World War II atomic bombings of the two cities had harsher words.

"This kind of remark cannot be permissible to the people of a nation that suffered the world's first atomic bombing," said Yoshio Saito, acting director of the Japan Confederation of Atomic-and Hydrogen-Bomb Sufferers.

'The use of a mushroom cloud and making bashing comments are two issues of quite different dimension.'

— Yoshio Saito, bombing survivor

"The use of a mushroom cloud and making bashing comments are two issues of quite different dimension," he said by telephone.

Masatoshi Takoda, deputy director of another group of bombing victims, said Hollings' statement shows "the belief (in the United States) that there was nothing wrong with the dropping of an atomic bomb on Hiroshima."

In an apparent attempt to prevent the senator's remarks from fueling the war of words that has strained U.S.-Japan relations, Foreign Ministry spokesman Sadaaki Numata said Hollings' comment was not worthy of an official response.

"One could comment on the taste of it, but that's all I need to say," Numata said in a telephone interview.

Chief government spokesman Koichi Kato said Wednesday that he did not think Hollings was speaking for most Americans, and added: "A joke that uses the atom bomb cannot be said to be a good joke," Kyodo News Service reported.

Japanese have always been sensitive to American assertions that the atomic bombings in August 1945 that left up to 205,000 people dead were necessary to speed the end of World War II.

Sarajevo police, army patrol city

■ Violence won't affect deployment of U.N. peacekeepers, Vance says.

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — In an effort to prevent more ethnic violence, police teamed up with the Serb-led army Wednesday to patrol streets that separate Serb and Muslim neighborhoods in Sarajevo.

The patrols brought the army, accused in Croatia of siding with Serb insurgents, more directly into the conflict. But the district army commander, Gen. Milutin Kukanjac, promised his neutrality and called for a political resolution of the dispute over the republic's independence.

Traffic moved through the checkpoints smoothly, and the government said it was regaining control of the city.

The Muslim president of Bosnia-Hercegovina, Alija Izetbegovic, expressed confidence a tense peace among Muslims, Serbs and Croats could hold.

At least eight people have been killed since a weekend referendum in which Muslims and Croats, who together make up a majority of the population, voted for independence. Serbs, who make up a third of Bosnia's 4.4 million people, oppose independence and boycotted the vote.

U.N. envoy Cyrus Vance, arriving in the Serbian and federal capital Belgrade, said the scattered violence in Bosnia-Hercegovina would not affect the scheduled deployment of thousands of U.N. peacekeepers this month, mostly in Croatia where 10,000 have died in fighting since June.

Vance arranged meetings with Izetbegovic, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, and officials in Croatia.

He commented, "I'm not assuming, there's going to be war at this point" in Bosnia.

He reported that Milosevic and Blagoje Adzic, Yugoslavia's acting defense minister, fully supported deployment of U.N. peacekeepers.

After talks with Vance, Milosevic said "there are absolutely no more obstacles" to the deployment and other aspects of a U.N. peace plan.

Izetbegovic was quoted as telling the French daily Le Figaro: "We are midway between war and peace, in a sort of cold war which will last for some time. There is a balance of fear, and I believe that for the moment, fear is conducive to peace."

Izetbegovic took a defiant walk through downtown Sarajevo on Wednesday. He was greeted by people shouting, "Alija, Alija."

"This is our town and no one will take it from us," he replied.

All sides in Bosnia are well armed, and say their traditional animosities ensure any conflict would be much bloodier than the civil war in Croatia. Of the six former Yugoslav republics, only Serbia and Montenegro want to remain part of the federation.

Barricades manned by heavily armed militants went up around Sarajevo after the weekend referendum.

Six people were injured in overnight fighting in Bosanski Brod, a town of 33,000 on Bosnia's northern border with Croatia.

Associated Press reporter Slobodan Lekic, in Bosanski Brod, said grenades had damaged a department store and other buildings. Dozens of refugees crossed into Croatia over a heavily mined bridge open only for pedestrians.

Trouble also was reported near Visoko, a town northeast of Sarajevo, where Serbs reportedly hijacked a police truck carrying explosives, and near Foca, south of Sarajevo, where two army reservists were hurt in an ambush.

In Sarajevo, police and army units patrolled seven spots where factions were likely to clash.

Meanwhile, 200 people attended the funeral of Nikola Gardovic, a 64-year-old Serb allegedly shot by Muslims Sunday.

"He was killed only because he was Orthodox and Serb," Orthodox Bishop Vasilije Kacavenda told mourners. "The shot at Nikola is a warning to all ... three ethnic groups."

Celebrate Newspaper in Education Week
March 2-6, 1992

Your local newspaper, schools, and reading and social studies educators are joining together to celebrate NIE Week.

Teachers, parents and students everywhere use the newspaper as an innovative learning tool.

Newspapers make the world come alive—every day.

GARFIELD is delighted to help spread the newspaper reading habit—it's contagious.

NIE Week is sponsored by the American Newspaper Publishers Association Foundation, the International Reading Association and the National Council for the Social Studies.

Incumbent's defeat sends shivers through Capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Among the returns from Tuesday's primary elections was an unmistakable message for congressional incumbents that sent shivers through the Capitol: No seat is safe.

Voters in Maryland's 6th District soundly rejected Rep. Beverly Byron, a conservative Democrat whose family first held the seat more than 50 years ago.

"People are troubled, they're questioning, they're demanding answers," said Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., chairman of the House Democratic campaign committee. "Incumbents who don't realize that are going to find themselves with problems."

Tom Hattery, a member of the Maryland Legislature, trounced Byron 57-44 percent in the Democratic primary. Hattery mounted a professional campaign based heavily on anti-incumbent themes, particularly junket-taking and the congressional pay raise.

"This ought to heighten the anxiety level within the House, because this could happen just about anywhere," said political newsletter publisher Charles Cook.

But House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., dismissed any suggestion that Byron's race has significance for other lawmakers.

"All these races are decided primarily on local issues," he said, noting that many incumbents challenged on the congressional pay raise or for being out of touch with home have fought back and won.

One of Byron's Maryland colleagues, Rep. Steny Hoyer, said the anti-Washington theme had taken its toll in the race. But, he added, "I don't think you needed the Beverly Byron race to know that Washington's in trouble."

President Bush's own drop in the polls and Congress' low standing in the public eye testify amply to that phenomenon, said Hoyer, a member of the Democratic leadership.

"I think House members are pretty cognizant of the fact that this is not a year to take for granted," he said.

Experts blamed Byron's loss on other factors, as well. She seemed to take the Democratic primary for granted, entering the fray late against a well-financed, experienced and savvy opponent.

Hattery's pollster, Alan Secrest, said Byron committed "what this year will be the most unforgivable of political sins: She went Washington."

In one mailing, Hattery charged: "Byron voted against raising the minimum wage, and then voted herself a $39,000 pay raise."

Byron was further weakened by her anti-abortion stance, which Hattery attacked, and by high unemployment in her western Maryland district. Secrest's polls as early as last November showed only 41 percent of Democrats favored her re-election.

Hattery will face a stiff Republican challenge in the conservative district in November. The GOP has nominated Roscoe G. Bartlett, a retired teacher.

Ironically, Byron's district had escaped relatively unscathed in this year's redrawing of congressional lines; it had been largely preserved as a favor to her.

Byron's husband, Goodloe Byron, served four terms in the House before his sudden death in 1978, when she succeeded him. His father and mother both had held the seat before him in the 1930s and 1940s.

Appearing at a House Armed Services Committee hearing the day after her loss, Byron at one point wiped away a tear and sounded a bitter note.

"The American public does not understand what we're doing," she said, a reference to her resistance to sudden, deep cuts in Pentagon personnel. And she ridiculed Hattery's campaign proposals.

"There's an enormous amount of education to do," she said.

Poll: Lawyers aren't happy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "Why don't sharks eat lawyers? Professional courtesy" is the kind of joke that probably wouldn't go down too well in California law offices.

As targets of a genre of jokes comparing them unfavorably to sharks, rats and other sneaky species, it wouldn't appear lawyers have much to smile about. In fact, it turns out some of them wouldn't want junior to follow in their footsteps, according to an informal survey.

"You could say this is the ultimate lawyer joke. Except that maybe the joke is on lawyers," said Ray Reynolds, editor and publisher of California Lawyer, which conducted the "fax poll."

Rude colleagues, creeping incivility and clients who are just plain ungrateful were among the reasons more than half the 449 lawyers who faxed in responses to the January questionnaire said they weren't happy in their work.

"There's a lot of speculation out there that lawyers are unhappy," Reynolds said Tuesday. "This adds some anecdotal evidence at least to support the theory."

Results of the survey included responses from 52 percent who said they were either "so unhappy I'd change careers," or "unhappy, but unlikely to do anything about it."

Of course, not everyone was at odds with the law.

One respondent among the 40 percent who were totally or reasonably satisfied with their work cited "the gratification of convicting criminals and putting them in prison."

But 72 percent said they weren't as happy in their work as when they first began.

Shop caters to beauty queens

By Gina Holland

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — Many Southern belles have the looks, poise and charm to be Miss America, but they come to this Mississippi River city for that extra something — the packaging.

Many find it at Karl's Ladies' Boutique, a two-story red brick building one block from the river that has earned a reputation for clothing the South's beauty queens.

The instant a contestant pushes through the oak doors, she's met by a solicitous clerk and led across plush rose carpet toward the dressing rooms and mirrors in the rear of the store.

"We offer them a Coke or a sandwich," said Delores Jabour, who owns the shop with her husband, Karl. "Most of them aren't eating though, they're watching it."

Former Miss Louisiana Amanda Mainord Reeves said meeting the Jabours was a highlight of the 1986 pageant.

"We walked in and were just going to look. By the time we had left, we had spent almost $2,000," Reeves said. "A lot of people in the pageant system make a lot of money off the little girls, but they are not like that. They care about the girls."

FOR 20 YEARS, Karl's has carved a comfortable niche in the beauty pageant market by selling the dresses contestants wear during interviews, autograph parties and rehearsals. Contestants need about 10 of these less formal dresses, plus the more expensive full-length competition gowns that Karl's doesn't carry.

In roomy dressing rooms, the sales clerks help the customers into and out of the sequined and beaded creations, which cost from $400 to $600. The women model the dresses before tall three-way mirrors — and sometimes anxious mothers and pageant directors.

Jabour said she makes sure the outfits aren't too revealing, don't crinkle and don't break other rules of etiquette. Linen is off-limits unless it's a blend, and so is black clothing.

Across the store the women can hunt for earrings, pantyhose or a padded bra to "pull it together," she said.

Saleswoman Diana Farris, who has worked at Karl's since it opened, said the clerks spend several hours with each contestant.

"It really wears you out," said Farris, who wore comfortable thick-soled shoes during a recent interview. "It's not a mall deal. We're here to serve. It's not go get it and take it to the checkout stand."

One wall features framed photographs of satisfied customers who went on to become winners.

Susan Akin, a Miss Mississippi who won the Miss America pageant in 1986, autographed her picture: "To my parents of home away from home. I love you."

Jabour said the contestants become like family members. "They're all winners. All the girls are real, real sweet and very beautiful from within also," she said.

'We walked in and were just going to look. By the time we had left, we had spent almost $2,000. A lot of people in the pageant system make a lot of money off the little girls, but they are not like that. They care about the girls.'

Contest honors teen volunteers

Teenage volunteers have a chance to meet Luke Perry and Gabrielle Carteris of "Beverly Hills 90210" and win a total of $10,000. Noxzema Extraordinary Teen Awards Program will award a total Grand Prize of $10,000 to a teenager who best embodies the spirit of the program. The prize will be divided equally between the winner and his or her charity.

The contest, co-sponsored by Noxzema Skin Cream and 'Teen magazine, has an entry deadline of April 21. Students aged 12-19 are eligible to enter. Five finalists will be flown to New York for an all-expenses paid visit to meet leaders in various volunteer campaigns. A winner will be selected by a panel of celebrity judges. Noxzema will donate $500 to each national finalist's school and provide nominators with a chance to accompany their nominees to New York City if they are chosen as a finalsit.

For details to enter or to nominate someone, look for an application in 'Teen magazine or write to Noxzema Extraordinary Teen Contest, c/o 'Teen magazine, 437 Madison Ave., New York City, 10022. To request an application by telephone, call 1-800-488-7288.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, MARCH 5, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A wide range of career and business opportunities will test your good judgment. The choices you make this spring will determine the level of financial success you achieve. You love a challenge and have what it takes to win lasting prestige. Resist the temptation to indulge in extended travel next summer; it is unlikely to live up to your expectations. Romance looks golden in the fall. Temper your forcefulness with diplomacy when attending family gatherings.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: football's Rocky Bleier, actors Dean Stockwell and Michael Warren, actress Samantha Eggar.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The right contacts can help you make substantial financial gains now. Keep your calendar open so that you can accept an important business invitation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Look forward to an unusual but interesting day at work. Refuse to take sides in an office dispute. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences tonight. Send any lingering doubts on a permanent vacation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Reorganizing your schedule will make you more productive. Do not be deceived by someone who pretends to support you while they actually work against you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stress the importance of developing better working habits. Punctuality is essential for success. A social event offers you a chance to make beneficial professional contacts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not try to force an issue today. Answers will come naturally. Investigate travel possibilities and take care of distant interests. Diplomacy and patience will work wonders in romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can make sizable financial gains by moving quickly today. Sidestep anyone who tries to distract you. Edit your comments to preserve office harmony. Meditation provides a solution.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romance is on a smoother course now. Be careful what you say about a business associate. Mixed trends affect your financial plans. Be cautious about spending your hard-earned dollars.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Showcase your originality. Clever suggestions could lead to a raise or promotion. Invest in a new project only after consulting experts. A teenager deserves the benefit of the doubt.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Today's events will have a lasting effect on your work environment. Cheer up a friend who has personal problems. Flamboyant behavior will irritate someone you want to impress.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Business correspondence requires prompt handling. Learn to delegate more responsibility. Working out a sensible budget will mean greater financial security in the years ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Romance seeks you out. Be receptive. Special purchases may prove more expensive than you anticipated. You can find what you need at resale shops. Your employment prospects improve.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A sudden rift in an alliance is cause for concern. Angry protests will only make things worse. Keep your cool and ask probing questions. Your artistic talents receive new attention.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are tenderhearted, patient and optimistic. They look to the future with great confidence. Known for their compassion and tolerance, these Pisces are slow to criticize other people. They will go to almost any lengths to help a friend. Their sympathetic nature makes them the repositories of many secrets.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Four of ♣

The hallmark of the bridge expert is a hatred of going down by putting all of one's eggs in one basket. How would you play this hand in four spades after a club lead?

The auction was routine. Once North showed a minimum opener with spade support, South gave up all thoughts of slam and settled for the "sure" spade game.

Where we watched, West led a low club. Declarer ducked, East won the king and returned the five—his lowest card in the suit, a suit preference signal for diamonds. West ruffed, returned a diamond to partner's ace and ruffed another club for a one-trick set.

We think declarer relied too much on finding West with the king of clubs. Look at the chances declarer has by going up with the ace on the first trick.

After drawing trumps in two or three rounds, ending in dummy, declarer leads a low club. If East has the king and rises with it, declarer will get to discard the heart loser on a club. When East plays low, declarer inserts the queen. If that loses to the king, the contract is safe if clubs are 3-3 or if East has the ace of diamonds—and those are just the obvious possibilities.

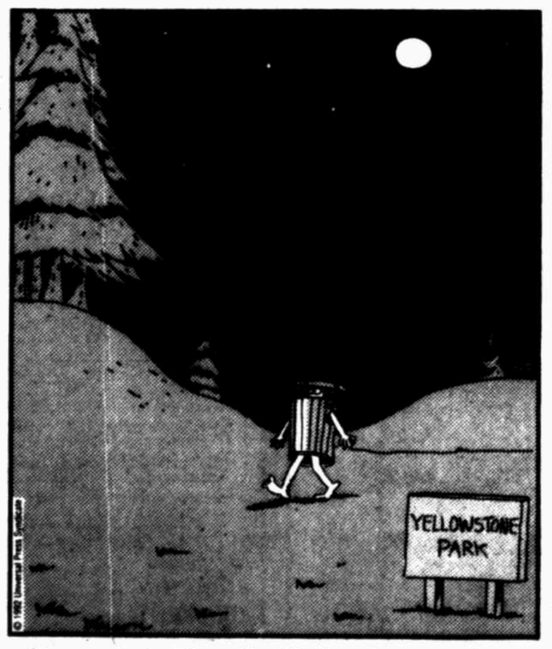

Assume the queen of clubs wins and West shows out. Declarer now cashes the ace and king of hearts and exits with a heart. If West started with any five hearts, or fewer hearts including both the queen and jack, that defender will be endplayed. If East can win the third heart and shifts to a diamond, declarer can still get home by guessing the diamond position.

Oscar-winning filmmaker dies

NEW YORK — Cinematographer Nestor Almendros, who helped change the look of Hollywood films with his concept of natural light and filmed such movies as "Sophie's Choice" and "Kramer vs. Kramer," died Wednesday.

He was 61.

Almendros

The Spanish-born filmmaker died at his Manhattan residence, said director-producer Jorge Ulla, co-director with him on the documentary "Nobody Listened." Almendros had been suffering from lymphoma, Ulla said.

Almendros won an Academy Award for cinematography in 1979 for "Days of Heaven," directed by Terrence Malick and starring Richard Gere and Brooke Adams.

In it, Almendros perfected his technique of relying on available light — what he called "natural light" — unencumbered by the ubiquitous flood lights of most Hollywood films.

He also was nominated for Oscars for other Hollywood films in subsequent years, and won a Cesar award — the French equivalent of the Oscar — for his cinematography of "The Last Metro" in 1981.

After winning the Oscar, Almendros filmed "Kramer vs. Kramer" in New York, with Dustin Hoffman and Meryl Streep.

His other movies include "Places in the Heart" with Sally Field, directed by Robert Benton; "Sophie's Choice" with Streep and Kevin Kline, Almendros' favorite; "Still of the Night," also with Streep; and his last movie, "Billy Bathgate," which opened late last year.

Almedros is survived by his mother, Maria, a brother and a sister.

Plans for a memorial service were not announced.

NEW YORK — The Boss is back.

Bruce Springsteen released his first new music in 4½ years Wednesday, a pair of singles from a pair of new albums: the title track of the "Human Touch" album, and "Better Days" from the "Lucky Town" album.

The albums are due in stores March 31.

Springsteen

Springsteen, 42, has gone through a lot of changes since he released "Tunnel of Love" in 1987. He's been divorced, remarried, become a father, and moved from New Jersey to California.

His biggest change musically came when he split with the E Street Band, the seven-piece group which spent most of the past two decades touring with The Boss. Their departure explains why the music on the new songs sounds like nothing Springsteen has done before. And he's rediscovered his electric guitar.

The only E Street Band survivors are his wife, Patti Scialfa, and pianist Roy Bittan. Even Bittan doesn't play on the "Better Days" single, with Springsteen handling the keyboard chores on that song.

BONN, Germany — Mikhail Gorbachev said Wednesday he feels like a liberated man now that he's no longer a world leader. But his wife said she hasn't noticed any difference.

"I'm a free man now. I can express myself with considerably more freedom," said Gorbachev, the last leader of the now-unraveled Soviet Union.

Gorbachev's wife, Raisa, had a dissenting opinion.

"I haven't noticed you're a free man," she said.

"A freer man," said Gorbachev, correcting himself.

"Not according to your appointment calendar," bantered Mrs. Gorbachev, referring to a busy schedule in Germany that included talks with Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

NEW YORK — A fleeting encounter with a good-hearted New Yorker has made Broadway star Spiro Malas "The Most Happy Fella."

Malas, appearing in the musical revival of that name, writes of his experience in the "Metropolitan Diary" section of Wednesday's New York Times.

"Standing on the subway going to work, I glanced over the shoulder of a very nicely dressed young man and couldn't help but notice that he was reading the one less-than-favorable review our show had received," Malas wrote.

" . . . For some reason, he looked up, saw me and did a bit of a double-take. He must have recognized me because he looked down at the magazine, politely closed it and put it in his case.

"He did it in a manner as if to protect me. I was very touched," wrote Malas. "Now tell me that New Yorkers don't have hearts."

ARLINGTON, Va. — Armand Assante finally gets to lead the dance.

The 42-year-old actor said he was drawn immediately by "The Mambo Kings," but didn't think director Arne Glimcher wanted him for the starring role as the ambitious band leader with a dream.

The story of two Cuban musician brothers who seek fame and fortune during the 1950s is based on Cuban-American writer Oscar Hijuelos' 1990 Pulitzer Prize-winning novel "The Mambo Kings Play Songs of Love."

DEAR ABBY

Chiropractor frees boys from bed-wetting misery

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Desperate Mom," whose 20-year-old son still wets the bed, I was compelled to write.

Van Buren

Since her son has seen doctors and tried medications, and they have had no positive results, maybe she should do what I did. I took my 15-year-old twin sons (both daily bed-wetters) to a chiropractor, and within a month, both boys were completely cured of their bed-wetting. Regular medical doctors could not help them.

As this chiropractor explained it to me, there is a certain part of the spinal column that regulates the bladder — I can't explain it very well — but all I can say is it worked, which meant everything in the world to me and my boys. These kids couldn't go to camp or sleep over at a friend's house because of their terrible problem, and I was a slave to the washing machine, doing those bedsheets and blankets every day.

I don't want to embarrass my boys or the medical doctors in my community, so if you use this letter in your column, just sign me ... A TRUE BELIEVER IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR TRUE BELIEVER: I believe you. I have several hundred letters bearing the same message concerning chiropractors. I am well aware that some in the medical profession will criticize me for giving what sounds like a "commercial" for chiropractors — the "stepchildren" of the medical profession — but I would be less than honest if I did not publish your letter. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: My son was still wetting the bed at 16. I took him to urologists, psychologists, nephrologists, and even to a hypnotist. Guess what cured him? A pediatric nephrologist who prescribed a nasal spray called DDAVP and ordered no liquids after 5 p.m.

I am enclosing a piece from North Shore magazine, which explains the nasal spray better than I can:

"BETTER NEWS FOR BEDWETTERS

"Bed-wetting is a simple fact of childhood; at age 3, 40 percent of all children cannot control their bladders consistently while they sleep.

"By age 5 or 6, bed-wetting is less frequent. Fortunately, chronic bed-wetting at this age may be treatable, suggests a Danish study, recently published by the American Urological Association in Dallas.

"The ability to hold urine through the night appears to be regulated by an antidiuretic hormone that is insufficient in some children.

"A new prescription medication — DDAVP Nasal Spray (desmopressin acetate) — stimulates this hormone, keeping children dry at night.

"Dr. Kenneth Miller, a pediatric nephrologist in Des Plaines, Ill., has studied the effects of DDAVP on his patients, and has found that the majority of children taking this medication continue to be dry even after medication is terminated."

Abby, I am not selling anything; I just want to share an idea that worked for us. — MRS. D.S.B., ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA.

DEAR MRS. D.S.B.: Many others wrote to praise the DDAVP nasal spray.

DEAR ABBY: An aunt of mine died recently. She had a will in which she stated that everything she owned should go to me.

Several people who had given my aunt gifts over the years have asked for their gifts back. Do you consider this proper behavior? I say, "Yes." My son says, "No." We will respect your judgment. — LORAINE IN SAN ANGELO, TEXAS

DEAR LORAINE: I agree with your son. Once a gift is given, it becomes the property of the person to whom it was given.

Had your aunt wanted those gifts returned to the givers, she would have made that stipulation in her will.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will take time to give me your opinion on a problem that involves two partners in a small business.

Partner A bought a $100 ticket to a charity ball with company funds, a normal procedure. The day of the ball, partner A asked partner B if he would like to use the ticket. Partner B said no. Partner A offered it to others. No takers. At the last minute, partner A decided to go himself.

The ticket was the winning number. It won $4,000!

Partner A insists the money is his. Partner B thinks it should be split 50-50. What do you think? — P.R.

DEAR P.R.: If partner A, with the knowledge and consent of partner B, invested company funds in an oil well, and it brought in a million-dollar gusher, wouldn't partner B be entitled to half the proceeds? The same principle applies.

AT WIT'S END

Garage sales mean 'sharing the wealth'

By Erma Bombeck

One of my kids just called to share with me the ultimate secret for making money. He said he took all the stuff out of his apartment and his garage that he no longer used, put it in the front yard and sold it.

Bombeck

"It's called a garage sale," I said tiredly.

"You knew about this and you never told me!" he said accusingly.

The kid is obviously out of it. I told him that playing musical possessions is a game older than spear throwing. Anyone can play. It's when a person cannot bear to throw away something he doesn't want around the house anymore and wants to sell it for top dollar to someone who doesn't want or need it.

I can remember when my parents were going to get rid of a threadbare 8-by-10-foot carpet, but decided to sell it to my Uncle Charles for 2 bucks — at 50 cents a week. It took my uncle two years to pay it off.

I had so much of my mother's furniture in my house after we were married, every time she visited, she rushed to answer our phone. She thought she was home.

The ultimate players in musical possessions have to be the family of a reader who sent me a note on what happened when her ex-husband's friend, Bill, received three food processors for wedding presents.

He gave one of them to the ex-husband in payment for printing the wedding invitations. The printer in turn gave the appliance to his second wife, who couldn't figure out how it worked so she gave it to her stepson. He gave it to his bride who "didn't know cabbage from celery." She sold the food processor to her brother-in-law for $50.

He gave it to his wife to make coleslaw, who (see above paragraph). She gave it to her sister-in-law. The sister-in-law didn't know what a food processor was, so she gave it to the printer's third wife, who took umbrage and gave it to his first wife.

First wife didn't like cleaning eight parts each time she used it, so she gave it to her mother. Her mother didn't need it and gave it to the Salvation Army.

I told my son this story, and he said, "That reminds me, I have an electric knife I'll sell you for $2."

"I bought you that for Christmas," I said.

"So, for you, it's a buck and a half."

Runyan leads

OPHIR, Alaska (AP) — Joe Runyan tore through two more checkpoints Wednesday, trying to put distance between himself and other top mushers in the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race before he takes a mandatory 24-hour layover.

Runyan grabbed the lead early in the day, arriving first in McGrath, at 4:38 a.m., and again in Takotna, at 1:30 p.m. He hit the trail for Ophir half an hour later.

Trailing him by less than an hour out of Takotna were Doug Swingley of Simms, Mont., and Bill Cotter of Nenana, who also had not taken their 24-hour breaks.

The Nenana musher, who won the race in 1989, said he didn't plan to take the break until Kaltag, another five checkpoints and 325 miles down the trail from this ghost town. Race officials said that might be the longest anyone has waited to take the layover.

Several of the race's perennial contenders were slowed on the trail into Nikolai early Wednesday on the windswept section known as the Farewell Burn.

By mid-afternoon, there were about 40 teams in Nikolai.

Midland's Bobby Burns ...lives out a fantasy

Midlander lives out baseball fantasy

■ Bobby Burns attends the Texas Rangers' Fantasy Baseball Camp, and gets a "hit" off of Nolan Ryan.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Don't tell Robert E. "Bobby" Burns that dreams don't come true.

When you spend a couple of grand to go to Port Charlotte, Fla., and bat against Nolan Ryan, it's the stuff of which memories are made.

Burns, who heads up Robt. Burns & Associates Insurance and Financial Services in downtown Midland, recently returned from the Texas Rangers' Fantasy Baseball Camp. He and his fellow campers were treated, if not like royalty, then like the closest thing to it: Major Leaguers.

"I tell you what, it was a blast," Burns said. "It was like a dream come true. A lot of 40 year olds out there dream of playing ball again."

If rubbing shoulders with big leaguers for a week wasn't enough, Burns' moment to remember came when he stepped into the batter's box with none other than Nolan Ryan on the hill.

And Burns made the most of the four pitches he got from the future hall of famer, including his 'Oh-all-right-let's-score-it-a-hit' final pitch.

"The first one was a fastball about 80 mph, and I fouled it off," Burns said. "The second one was in the 90s, and I didn't even have time to swing.

"I went up there with the intention of swinging at everything, and Nolan kind of grinned at me. The third pitch was in the 80s, and I swung and missed. The fourth one, I hit it to right field, and the the ball hit the fielder's glove and bounced out. I called that a hit. It may not have been, but it was to me."

Ryan wasn't the only big leaguer at the camp, but he was certainly the most popular. The 45-year-old pitcher was interviewed for the NBC program "Close Up With Maria Shriver" during the week. And the 25-year major leaguer stayed on the mound until every last camper had a chance to bat against him.

Burns also got to bat against former Oakland Athletic Vida Blue, and, while playing second base, turned a double play with former Los Angeles Dodger shortstop Maury Wills.

Prime field set today for TofC

While there is no rest for weary Midland High, the Midland Lee Rebels must wait yet another day to play their first complete game of the season as the 18th Annual Tournament of Champions opens today at Angels Stadium.

Defending T-of-C champion Lubbock Monterey takes on El Paso Del Valle at 5:30 p.m. to start the five-team, double-elimination tournament. And MHS, already 2-3 in the early going, meets Del Rio at 8 p.m.

But Lee, which had its season-opening doubleheader with Monterey halted Tuesday by rain, drew a first-round bye and faces the winner of the Del Valle-Monterey game at 12:30 p.m. Friday.

"Midland High will be playing its sixth game and we're still trying to play our first one," said Lee head coach Jesse Benavidez, whose Rebels were tied 8-8 with Monterey before rain washed out the scheduled openers for both teams in the fourth inning of Game 1.

"The kids are itching to get out there and play, and I think they'll start to gel together as soon as we get some playing time."

Including District 4-5A titlist Lee and league runner-up MHS, the Tournament of Champions is just that: All five teams reached the state playoffs last year.

"Every year we try to bring in quality teams and we've not been disappointed yet," MHS head coach Rick Wood said. "This tournament is always a good learning experience and a good test to get us ready for district."

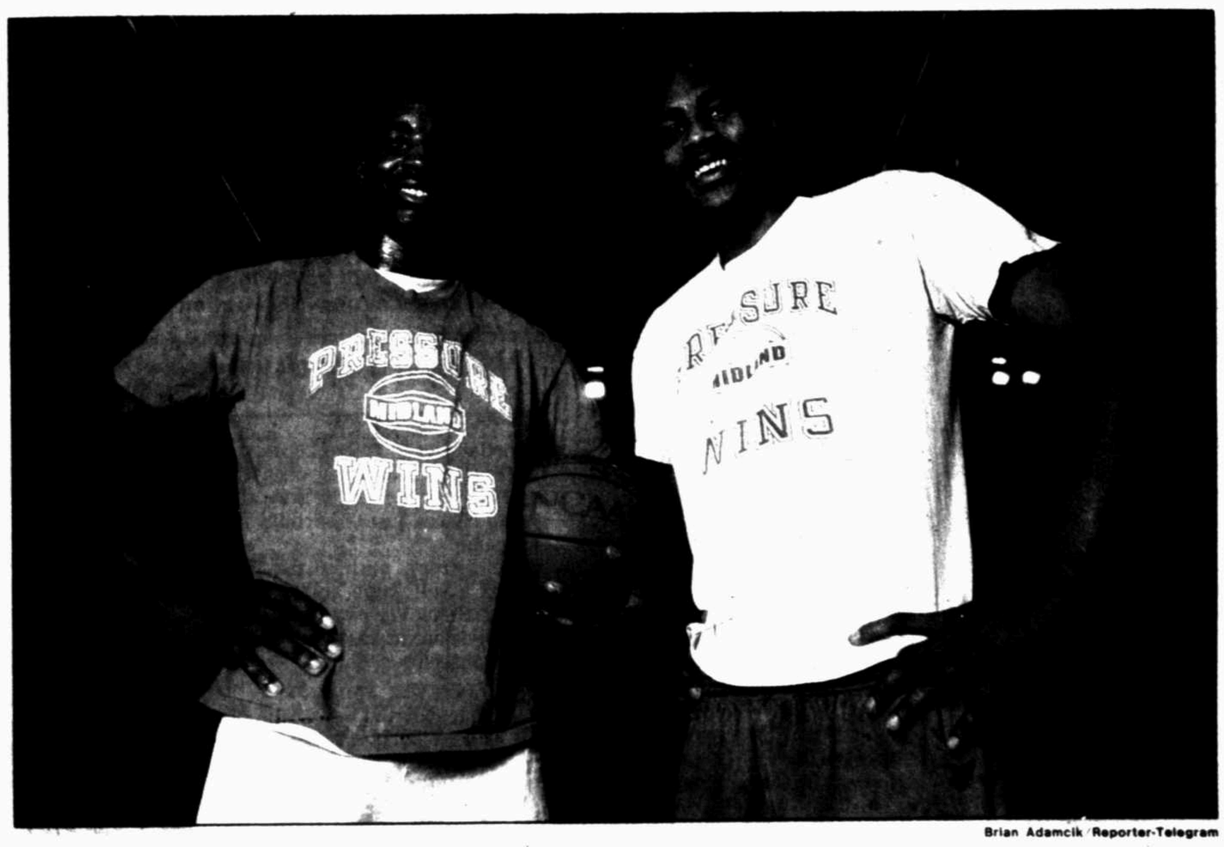

The Bulldogs, who swept a doubleheader from Frenship to start the season, have since lost one to Hobbs and a pair to Lubbock Coronado. All five of those games were played in a five-day span, so the weary Bulldog pitching staff goes into today's game overworked and on just three days rest.

"We're a little arm weary, but I think the experience we'll get from this tournament will far outweight anything else," said Wood. "The kids' attitude is real good right now."

Lee, meanwhile, comes into the fray with plenty of fresh arms.

"We'll start fresh with our pitching and I hope that's something that gives us an advantage," Benavidez said. "But all five teams in this tournament were in Midland College freshmen Shawn Morris, left, and Bruce Patterson, have played quietly, but effectively, all season for the Chaparrals, who are headed for the Region V tournament this weekend.

Chaps own 'Burg connection

■ Shawn Morris and Bruce Patterson, both from Pittsburgh, are ready to aid Midland College's run for a Region V title.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

One of Midland College's quietest, yet most valuable assets this season has been the play of 'The Boys from the 'Burg.'

Freshmen Shawn Morris and Bruce Patterson, both of whom came to Midland from Pittsburgh, missed games while nursing injuries this season, and, as a result, the Chaparral basketball team has felt the void.

But when MC goes to Waco to open play against Temple Junior College Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Region V tournament, Morris and Patterson will both be ready, which pleases Chaparral first-year head basketball coach Steve Green.

"We lost at Western Texas (71-70, Feb. 20) when Shawn wasn't playing," Green said. "And we struggled against New Mexico (an 84-81 loss, Feb. 24) because Shawn was not healthy.

"We won some big games when Bruce played well. We went to Yavapai (Ariz. tournament) and did well because Bruce was on top of his game."

Morris and Patterson came with high recommendations from Kenny Turner, an assistant coach at Kansas State.

"Kenny thought they were the kind of players who could come in the first year and get us in the middle of the pack," Green said. "I think they got us above the pack."

Morris and Patterson are from different necks of the Pittsburgh woods. Morris was brought up in what he considers a suburban type neighborhood; Patterson grew up in an inner-city environment after his parents, both communications sergeants in the army, were transferred from Killeen to Pittsburgh.

"Basically, my neighborhood is the same as Terrance (Rone's)," Patterson said of his teammate from Chicago. "Drug dealers on the side, betting on high school games, street ball games. We'd play next to people selling dope on the street."

Patterson said often times high school basketball players in cities such as Pittsburgh develop their own little shadows along the way.

"If you're good in basketball," Patterson said, "the drug dealers will take you in and protect you. They'll make sure you stay clean and out of trouble. It's like, if I make it, they make it. They can say, "I knew him when ...

UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian flashes an uncharacteristic grin beneath a sign that greeted him Tuesday in what was scheduled to be his last game.

Tarkanian begins life after UNLV

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Jerry Tarkanian's first day as ex-UNLV coach followed a short night's rest and started a period of indecision.

"I have a lot of things to do, but they're fun things, nothing big," Tarkanian said over breakfast Wednesday, less than 12 hours after ceremonies honored college basketball's all-time winningest coach by percentage.

Tarkanian said he would go to his office, make some calls and the go about his life with some questions to be answered.

Will he coach next season and if he does where? Will he continue his fight to stay at UNLV, from where he rescinded his resignation? Will he walk away and become Jerry Tarkanian, private citizen?

"I can't talk about what I want to do," he said referring to continuing his battles with the school and its president Robert Maxson. "I won't be without basketball regardless. I have a lot of things to do that relate to basketball. I'm not really sure."

Tarkanian had said recently he would like to coach at another school and indicated Wednesday there were some offers on the table, but he wouldn't elaborate.

"It would take a very unusual situation, I know that," he said. "I'd probably be better off in the NBA: I think I could do something in the NBA, whether it be coaching, scouting, the front office. I have a lot of good friends in the NBA and some are owners. I have possibilities there if that's what I want to do."

With his 19-year career at UNLV over and a 30-year coaching career on hold, what would Tarkanian do if he didn't stay in basketball?

"You know what I really want to do? I want to go to the Texas-Oklahoma football game," he said. "I want to see a football game at Notre Dame and I've added Miami and Florida State to the list. I want to go spend a few days at those places and really enjoy the whole atmosphere."

He said he could try the broadcasting field, but wasn't sure how good he'd be. He does know there is still something he wants to do to wrap up his days at UNLV.

"No matter where I am next year and whether I'm coaching or not, I still want the truth to come out about what happened here," he said.

territory. But my mom lectured me a lot about who I hung out with."

Patterson said drug dealers would actually fund the summer basketball leagues, and then award the winning team at the end of the season — if there was a winner.

"The summer league Shawn and I were in," Patterson recalled, "we were in the championship game but couldn't finish playing because everybody started throwing beer bottles. A few people got hit in the head. I think it'll be more guarded by the police this summer."

Morris, who comes from the upper-middle class suburb of Verona, says he still calls his mother every day. Being the youngest of five children, Morris said he's never lived this far away from where he was raised.

"I get homesick all the time," Morris said. "I always miss mom."

Morris' father is a parks and recreation worker in Pittsburgh, while his mother works for the Internal Revenue Service.

Morris played in Quad A, the largest high school district in Pennsylvania. His high school team went 92-15 in his four years. Morris was a four-time all-state and team MVP. As a senior, he averaged 22.5 points per game.

Patterson averaged 25.6 points and 17 rebounds per game as a senior. Like Morris, he was a multi-year honoree, three times being named all-state. He also set a new city scoring record upon finishing his career at Pittsburgh Langley, with 1,419 points.

At Midland, however, Patterson said he has learned to accept a reduced role.

"Playing for the school I played for, I could do no wrong," Patterson said. "All my mistakes weren't mistakes. Here, playing under Coach Green, I've become a better player.

"Coach Green is the type who won't compliment you, and that's what I needed ... he brings you down to earth."

Patterson, like Rone, said he would like to study law one day after his basketball career is over. For Morris, his goal is to eventually become a high school guidance counselor. For now, though, the regional tournament is foremost in his mind.

"We needed it (the Odessa win) to raise our spirits," Morris said. "We definitely want to win it all, and if not, we want to make it to Hutchinson.

"We know we have a good team, it's just a matter of how we're going to play together."

the playoffs last year and that can make it tough.

"I guess that's why it's called the Tournament of Champions."

The first-day losers meet at 10 a.m. Friday, followed by Lee's first game at 12:30 p.m. The winner of the Rebels' first game takes on today's MHS—Del Rio winner at 5:30 p.m. Friday, and Friday's nightcap at 8 p.m. features the initial loser's bracket winner versus the loser of the initial Lee game.

The championship is slated for 3 p.m. Saturday, followed at 5:30 p.m. by any necessary "if" game.

McGraw innocent

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The son of former Philadelphia Phillies pitcher Tug McGraw was found innocent of rape Wednesday by a jury that deliberated less than 40 minutes.

Rodman grabs 34 rebounds

Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Denis Rodman grabbed 34 rebounds — the highest total in the NBA in nearly four years and a Detroit Piston team record — and Isiah Thomas scored five of his 31 points in overtime to key a 110-107 victory over the Indiana Pacers on Wednesday night.

Rodman's rebound total was the most in the NBA since Charles Oakley had 35 for the Chicago Bulls on April 22, 1988. The 34 rebounds broke Bob Lanier's Piston record of 33 set in 1972.

The total included 18 offensive rebounds for another new team record. The old record was 13, set by Earl Williams on Jan. 2, 1976. Rodman fell short of Moses Malone's NBA record of 21, set in 1982.

76ers 107, Hawks 102

PHILADELPHIA — Hersey Hawkins scored 31 points, including a crucial 3-point shot with 35 seconds to play, as Philadelphia defeated Atlanta.

Charles Barkley also had 31 points and grabbed 12 rebounds. Rumeal Robinson had a career-high 30 points for the Hawks, who played without Kevin Willis, the league's No. 2 rebounder. Willis was sidelined with tendinitis in his left ankle.

Celtics 125, Magic 100

BOSTON — Larry Bird scored 17 points and grabbed 14 rebounds in limited action for his second consecutive double-double since a two-month layoff with a back injury and Boston Celtics employed a balanced attack in a victory over Orlando.

Bird, who celebrated his return with 26 points and 12 rebounds against Dallas last Sunday, was joined by eight other Boston scorers as the Celtics beat Orlando for the fourth time in a row this season.

Boston won a second consecutive game for the first time in more than one month.

Hornets 119, Bucks 110

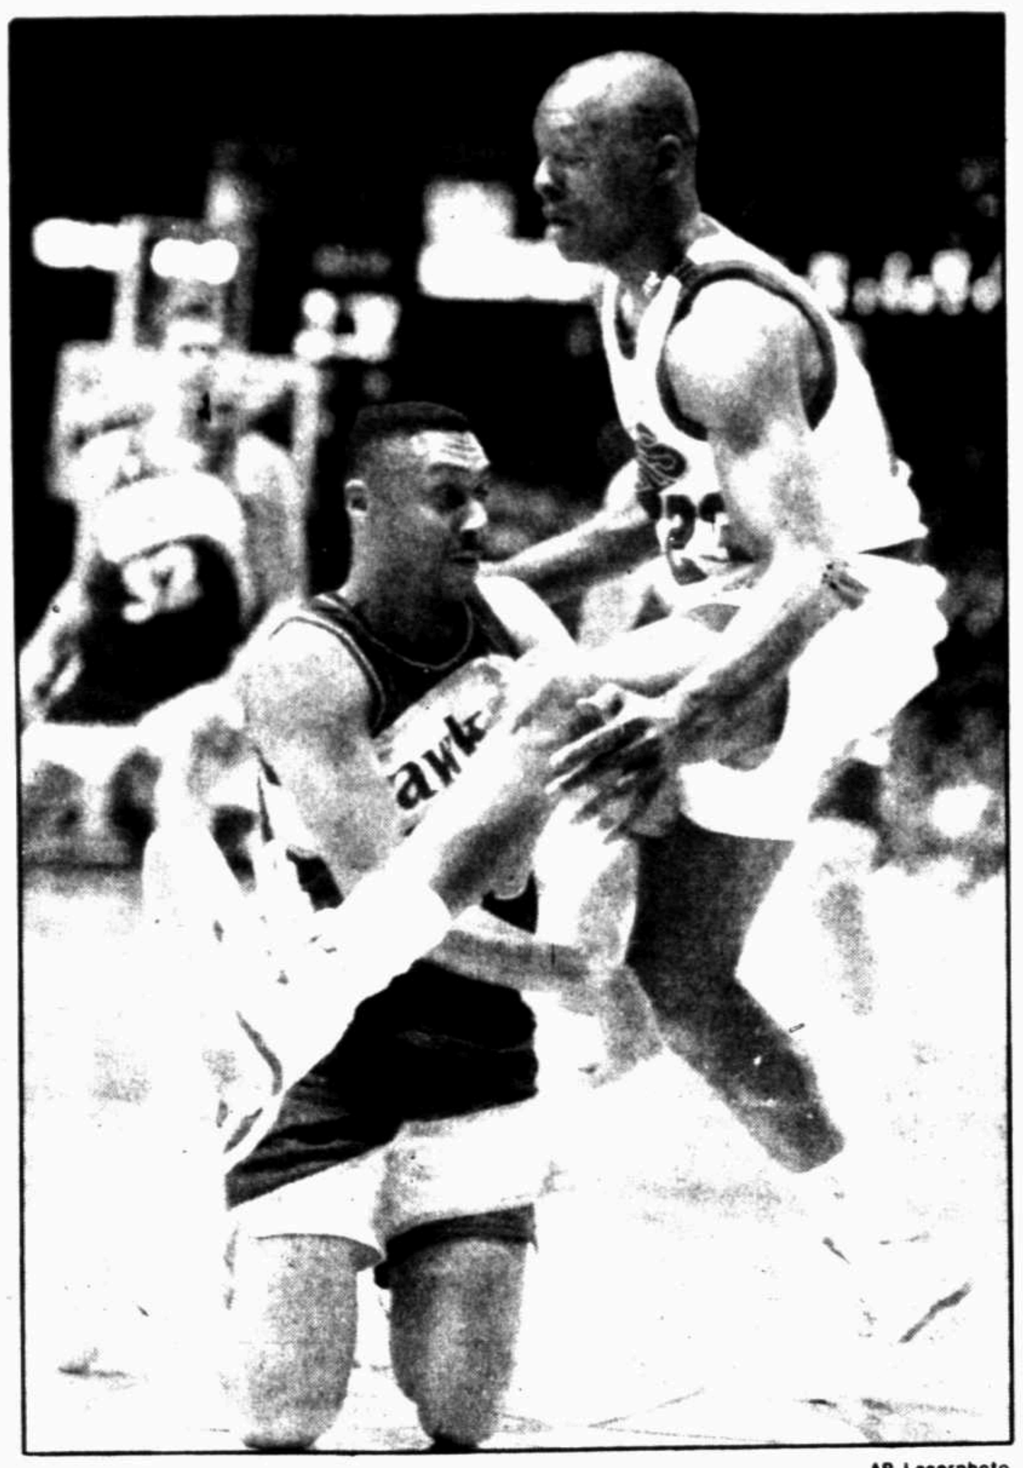

MILWAUKEE — Kendall Gill scored 20 of his 25 points in the second half and former Odessa College star Larry Johnson added 25 points as Charlotte overcame a 17-point first-half deficit en route to a victory over Milwaukee.

The win was Charlotte's fifth straight and 10th in its last 13 games.

J.R. Reid added 23 points, including 15 in the second half for the Hornets, who broke a three-game road losing streak.

Trail Blazers 129, Nuggets 100

DENVER — Portland, with Danny Ainge leading the way with 23 points in reserve, breezed past Denver.

Portland used its bench most of the time as it shot 60 per cent from the field and led all the way after taking charge just 90 seconds into the game.

The victory pushed the Trail Blazers a full game ahead of the Golden State Warriors in the Pacific Division. It was Denver's seventh consecutive defeat.

Jazz 102, Spurs 93

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 26 points, 13 in the fourth quarter, as Utah broke away to defeat San Antonio.

The win put Utah ahead of the second-place Spurs by four games in the Midwest Division and enhanced Utah's NBA-best home record to 27-3.

Utah trailed the Spurs 76-74 at the start of the fourth quarter, but went ahead for good on two straight jumpers by reserve center Mike Brown with 11:05 to play.

Brown scored nine in the fourth quarter and 17 for the game. Utah then opened an 88-82 lead on a drive by Karl Malone with six minutes to play. The Spurs closed within 88-84 on a slam by David Robinson at the 5:37 mark but would come no closer.

Lakers 101, Nets 92

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Los Angeles won for only the second time in its last 12 games, overcoming their lowest-scoring first half of the season and beating New Jersey with 23 points from Byron Scott.

New Jersey's winning streak ended at four games with their seventh straight loss to the Lakers and their 14th defeat in a row at the Forum dating back to Dec. 3, 1978. Chris Morris scored 17 points for the Nets, who lost backup center and coach Bill Fitch with third-quarter ejections.

Cavaliers 109, Kings 108

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Craig Ehlo followed a steal with an eight-foot jumper with 1.2 seconds left as Cleveland rallied past Sacramento.

Sacramento didn't produce a field for 5:22 late in the fourth quarter, yet still had held a 104-97 edge with 5:00 left.

Texas A&M spills Tech

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Damon Johnson score 11 points, including a short bank shot with 1:02 remaining and a free throw with one second left as Texas A&M upset Texas Tech 58-56 Wednesday night.

The Aggies (6-20 overall and 2-11 in the Southwest Conference) went up 55-54 on Anthony Ware's jumper with five minutes left. Four minutes elapsed with neither team able to score until Johnson's bank shot made it 57-54.

Tech's Will Flemons, who was held to 10 points, half his average, hit a layup with 39 seconds left to pull the Red Raiders to within a point.

The Aggies out-rebounded Tech 35-24 in the first SWC home victory for first-year coach Tony Barone. They also outshot the Red Raiders 52 percent to 41 percent from the field.

Texas A&M led 32-29 at halftime after overcoming a seven-point deficit and twice led by five points in the second half.

Chuck Henderson added 11 points for the Aggies and Shedrick Anderson had 10.

Lance Hughes scored 11 for the Red Raiders, who fell to 13-13 and 5-8.

NL realignment plan defeated

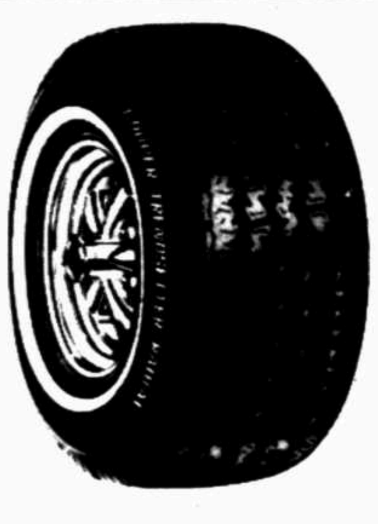

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — A plan to move the Chicago Cubs and the St. Louis Cardinals to the National League West in 1993 and shift Atlanta and Cincinnati to the NL East was blocked Wednesday by the Cubs.

NL president Bill White had pushed for realignment when the league expands to 14 clubs in 1993, but it failed despite a 10-2 vote in favor.

"We thought it was very important for the Cubs to remain in the East," said Mark McGuire, a Cubs executive vice president.

White must now decide on the format of the NL schedule in 1993.

TIP OF THE WEEK: If you've been bowling with a conventional ball for a long time, you may find that your scores will "peak" out. The only way to start them on the upswing again is to make a change in your equipment. Talk to your pro at one of the bowling centers and see if he can drill you a finger-tip ball. This will increase the scoring potential for you and will afford you those big scores you've been seeking. It takes some getting used to, so ask your pro for pointers.

SWC tourney may move

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference basketball tournament could soon be moving south to Houston or San Antonio unless officials unload some 3,000 tickets by March 12.

By Wednesday, only 8,000 tickets, sold in $60, $80 and $100 packages, had been purchased for the 1992 SWC Post-Season Classic tournament, March 13-15.

Under contract, the SWC promised Dallas city officials they would deliver a minimum of 11,000 fans for the tournament at Reunion Arena, which seats about 17,000. Without the 11,000, the SWC won't be able to extend its contract at Reunion Arena to 1993.

Chuck Nagle, the SWC's director of basketball operations, admits that selling the required 3,000 tickets in a week will be a challenge. However, it's not impossible, he said.

"We've been optimistic throughout that we were going to sell 11,000," Nagle said. "I think it's up to the general public."

In years past, hog-wild Arkansas fans snatched up 7,000 to 9,000 tickets, Nagle said. This year, Arkansas belongs to the Southeastern Conference, having severed its SWC ties last year.

Falling short of the ticket minimum won't necessarily mean the SWC tournament is gone forever from Dallas. But a bidding war likely will develop among Dallas and two other cities interested in hosting the tournament, San Antonio and Houston.

John Crawford of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce said he is confident the tickets will be sold and the tournament will remain in Dallas. He is leading a push with local firms to purchase corporate packages of tickets.

All eight teams compete in the tournament.

BURNS: Signs autographs

(From 1D)

Other former players to attend the camp were Hall of Famers Brooks Robinson and ex-Chicago Cub and Texas pitcher Ferguson Jenkins, and former Rangers Jon Matlack, Jim Kern and Toby Harrah.

"They treated us like real players," Burns said. "We had our names on our lockers, uniforms with our names on our back."

Burns also received an action photograph of himself, as well as a small amount of baseball cards with his camp statistics.

The story would not be complete without mentioning that Burns wore the No. 20 on his uniform, the number of former Philadelphia Philly third baseman Mike Schmidt. Schmidt was a hero to Burns' late son, Tyler, who died last July from the effects of cystic fibrosis.

"He was a good little ball player," Burns said of his son, who was nine at the time of his death. "He came off the mound the winning pitcher in his last Little League game, and took a trip to Washington, D.C. He caught something up there, and it turned in to pneumonia.

"I've got the seven month itch. I've been thinking about him a lot lately. Mike Schmidt was his favorite ball player, so I wore his number."

Burns and his wife Denise have a 5-year-old son, Austin, who has helped ease the pain of losing Tyler at such an early age.

Burns said he was encouraged by a friend to take the trip to help him with his feelings after Tyler's death.

"It's an ego booster, if nothing else," Burns said of the camp. "You get humbled, and you feel good at the same time."

Burns said he even signed "about a dozen autographs" for kids who may or may not have mistaken him for a real life major leaguer. And for a 40-year-old Midland businessman, that in itself may be a dream come true.

Bo Jackson still can't run

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Bo Jackson's first trial run of the spring turned into an awkward trot Wednesday when he was not ready — or unable — to get around the bases at a Chicago White Sox intrasquad game.

Jackson, still slowed by the hip injury that sidelined him for all but the final month last season, singled hard up the middle in his third at-bat after looking at third strikes the first two times.

But Jackson hobbled the whole way to first base, his left leg kicking out to the side in an odd motion. And when Warren Newson followed with a grounder back to pitcher Wayne Edwards, Jackson jogged only a step or two before stopping.

"To be truthful, I think I may've been expecting a hair more," said team trainer Herm Schneider, who has directed Jackson's rehabilitation program for nearly a year.

Jackson dismissed the alarming appearance, and said the real tests would begin Thursday with the exhibition opener against Pittsburgh.

"When I got the hit and saw it was through, I really didn't run. I just coasted to first base," Jackson said.

Duke survives Top 25 upset rash

Associated Press

CLEMSON, S.C. — Top-ranked Duke rallied from a 19-point deficit as Christian Laettner scored 17 of his 23 points in the second half in the Blue Devils' 98-97 victory over Clemson to survive a rash of upsets to Top 25 teams Wednesday night.

Brian Davis scored a career-high 30 points for Duke (24-2, 13-2 in the Atlantic Coast Conference).

Laettner, who played the final 16:31 with four fouls, hit a 3-pointer with 1:39 left to give the Blue Devils the lead for good at 95-92.

Sharone Wright, slowed by the flu, pulled the Tigers within a point on a follow shot with 1:18 left. After a Duke miss, Wright was fouled, but the freshman, who hits 57 percent from the foul line, missed the front end of a one-and-one with 30.4 seconds left.

Bobby Hurley hit one of two free throws to give Duke a 96-94 lead with 19.9 seconds. After Corey Wallace missed a jumper, Thomas Hill hit a pair of free throws to seal the victory.

Clemson, which lost to Duke by 39 points on Jan. 27, fell to 14-12 and 4-11. The loss meant the Tigers will play in the elimination game of the ACC tournament next week between the bottom two teams.

No. 2 Indiana 64, Iowa 60

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Calbert Cheaney scored 29 points, including Indiana's first 10 of the second half, to lead the second-ranked Hoosiers over Iowa.

Greg Graham scored 14 points and Eric Anderson 10 for league-leading Indiana (22-4 overall, 13-2 Big Ten), which swept Iowa this year. James Moses scored 20 points, Acie Earl had 12 and Kevin Smith 10 for Iowa (16-9, 8-7).

Iowa St. 70, No. 3 Kansas 66

AMES, Iowa — Julius Michalik scored 17 points, including two key baskets in the final minute, as Iowa State broke a four-game losing streak with a victory over No. 3 Kansas.

It was the second major upset for Iowa State (19-10, 5-8 Big Eight), which stunned then-No. 2 Oklahoma State on Feb. 15. The Cyclones blew an 11-point lead in the second half but recovered in time to keep their NCAA tournament hopes alive.

Florida 79, No. 10 Kentucky 62

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Stacey Poole scored 19 points and sparked a 15-2 run that helped Florida upset No. 10 Kentucky.

Florida (16-10 overall, 9-6 SEC) clinched second place in the league's Eastern Division with its first victory over a ranked team in more than two years.

Oklahoma 81, No. 11 Missouri 67

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Brent Price scored 13 of his 22 points in the first half as hot-shooting Oklahoma beat No. 11 Missouri.

Oklahoma shot 65 percent in the first half and went on to win at the Hearnes Center for the first time since 1985. It was the second straight loss for Missouri (20-6, 8-5), which ended an eight-game losing streak at Oklahoma last month.

No. 12 Okla. St. 69, Colorado 63

STILLWATER, Okla. — Byron Houston and Sean Sutton made big plays down the stretch as No. 12 Oklahoma State hung on to beat Colorado.

Oklahoma State (23-6 overall, 7-6 Big Eight) was sluggish throughout much of the second half as the Buffaloes (12-14, 3-10) overcome a nine-point halftime deficit to tie the score at 48.

Marquette 73, No. 15 DePaul 65

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Robb Logterman scored 17 points to top five Warriors in double figures as Marquette upset 15th-ranked DePaul, snapping the Blue Demons' eight-game winning streak.

DePaul (19-7, 8-2), playing without two starters, had won 16 of 19 overall and 20 straight home games. Howard Nathan scored 17 points and Terry Davis added 14 for the Blue Demons. Marquette (15-12, 5-5) won for just the fourth time in 12 games.

No. 16 North Carolina 79, Georgia Tech 75

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Hubert Davis scored 27 points in his final game in the Dean Smith Center, leading No. 16 North Carolina over Georgia Tech.

The victory ended a four-game skid for the Tar Heels — their worst losing streak since 1965.

No. 20 Alabama 84, Miss. 83

OXFORD, Miss. — Elliott Washington hit two free throws with six seconds left to give No. 20 Alabama an victory over Mississippi.

Washington's foul shots broke a three-minute scoring drought by Alabama (22-7, 9-6 SEC) and made up for his turnover 28 seconds earlier when he stepped out of bounds.

Memphis St. 68, Tulane 67

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Anfernee Hardaway made a 3-pointer with five seconds left, giving Memphis State a victory over No. 21 Tulane.

Hardaway, who led Memphis State with 17 points, sealed the Green Wave's fifth straight loss when he stole an inbounds pass with three seconds remaining.

Connecticut 85, No. 24 Syracuse 78

HARTFORD, Conn. — Scott Burrell had 25 points and nine rebounds as Connecticut held on to beat foul-plagued Syracuse, ending the Orangemen's hopes for a share of a third straight Big East title.

Syracuse had a chance to tie the game at 79 with 25 seconds left, but Dave Johnson's 3-point attempt was long. Rod Sellers and Burrell then hit two free throws each for Connecticut to clinch the Huskies' second victory in nine games.

No. 22 Seton Hall 90, Miami 82

MIAMI — Terry Dehere tied a season high with 31 points and Bryan Caver hit 11 of 12 free throws in overtime, leading Seton Hall over Miami.

Seton Hall's 12 3-pointers set a school mark.

No. 25 Massachusetts 96, Rhode Island 88

AMHERST, Mass. — Anton Brown scored 22 points as No. 25 Massachusetts beat Rhode Island.

Massachusetts (25-4 overall, 13-3 Atlantic 10) will be the top seed in the conference tournament, which begins this weekend in Philadelphia.

Jeff Kent scored 35 points for Rhode Island (19-8, 9-7), which finished fourth in the league.

Prices hold

NEW YORK — Oil prices were mixed in light trading Wednesday as the market digested fuel inventory figures released late Tuesday.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled at $18.63 a 42-gallon barrel, down 1 cent, on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Subsequent contract months closed modestly higher.

Lower-grade sour crude for May delivery also fell, settling down 4 cents at $15.96 a barrel.

Analysts said trading was quiet, with players responding largely to Tuesday's inventory report from the American Petroleum Institute. The API said the nation's supply of crude oil rose last week while heating oil and gasoline stocks fell.

In natural gas trading, the April contract rose 2.4 cents to $1.191 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar soars

NEW YORK — The dollar staged an impressive advance on world foreign exchange markets Wednesday, piercing key technical levels against major currencies in hectic trading.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose to a closing 131.50 Japanese yen from 129.94 yen at Tuesday's close.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.7240 from $1.7395 late Tuesday.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — The stock market took a tumble in late trading Wednesday, pulling back from the record high it reached the day before.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 14.98 points on Tuesday, dropped 21.69 points to 3,268.56.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange.

U.S. parts

TOKYO — Nissan Motor Co. said Wednesday it will buy auto parts from about 320 American suppliers this year, or twice as many as 1991.

The aim is to raise the U.S. content of Nissan models assembled in the United States, said Masamichi Mogi, spokesman of the Tokyo-based Nissan, Japan's second largest automaker.

Mogi also said Nissan will buy parts from about 140 new U.S. suppliers for a minivan being jointly developed by Nissan and Ford Motor Co., the second largest U.S. auto maker.

A Ford plant is to produce 130,000 of the minivans annually.

Nissan plans to purchase $3.7 billion in U.S.-made auto parts in fiscal 1994, up 2.8 times from 1990.

Orders to factories increase

■ Gains in factory orders and decline in delinquent mortgages signal economic recovery, analysts say.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Orders to U.S. factories rose for the third time in four months and delinquent mortgages declined, two reports said Wednesday, signaling a slowly emerging economic recovery.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady said he believed the January gain in factory orders would be followed by an "increasing number of statistics" convincing Americans the economy is indeed improving.

"That is the way the American people will make their minds up on whether there is a strong recovery going on," he told reporters after appearing before a House Appropriations subcommittee.

Separately, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce said business optimism nearly tripled from December to February.

But a bipartisan commission appointed by Congress and President Bush cautioned that economic malaise will linger for the foreseeable future unless the United States improves its global competitiveness.

Orders to U.S. factories inched up 0.4 percent to $235 billion in January, the Commerce Department said.

It was the third increase in four months, but followed a 3.7 percent plunge in December, the steepest in more than a year.

"It's a meager increase (in January), but we have to start somewhere," said Evelina Tainer of Prime Economic Consulting, a Chicago forecasting service. "It goes along with other things we're seeing suggesting a very slow recovery."

The Mortgage Bankers Association of America said the percentage of Americans 30 days or more behind on their mortgage payments fell to a seasonally adjusted 4.78 percent at the end of December, down from 5.07 percent three months earlier. The decline nationally came despite increases in states in the recession-plagued Northeast.

Delinquencies nationally had hit a five-year high of 5.28 percent at the end of June.

Meanwhile, 47.4 percent of 7,924 executives questioned by the Chamber of Commerce said they believed the economy would improve in the next six months, compared with 17.6 percent in the last survey.

But the executives were a bit less optimistic about their own businesses. There were 41.5 percent looking for sales increases, compared with 23.6 percent in December.

Optimism was strongest in the Midwest and South, weakest in the Northeast and West.

The bipartisan commission, composed of 12 leaders from government, labor, business and education, said the recession is a symptom of the nation's steadily eroding international competitiveness.

It said that without fundamental reform of policies on trade, industry, education and financial markets, Americans will be doomed to more of the same into the next century.

A full-page GM ad in Japanese newspapers ask consumers to compare Cadillac Sevilles and Infinity Q-45.

GM ads ask buyers to compare

TOKYO (AP) — General Motors Corp. heightened the competitive struggle to crack Japan's auto market Wednesday with ads imploring consumers to directly compare GM and Japanese cars in size, price and performance.

It was the first time an American automaker has used such a blunt advertising approach in Japan, where U.S. cars have a serious image problem because many Japanese perceive them to be shoddily built gas-guzzlers.

"Please compare Cadillac Seville's fuel cost with that of Infiniti's Q-45," says a full-page display in four major Japanese newspapers. It shows a Seville and a Nissan Infiniti parked side-by-side at a gasoline pump.

President Bush made efforts to sell more American cars in Japan a major focus of his visit here in January, saying he wanted to create jobs for Americans.

Autos and auto parts account for about three-fourths of the United States' annual $43 billion deficit in trade with Japan.

GM's move marked the debut of a two-month ad campaign that departs from the traditional soft-sell approach in Japan.

James E. Steinhagen, GM Japan's vice president for marketing, sales and service said the campaign is designed to openly compare competitive models and figures to enable Japanese consumers to judge which cars are better.

The first ad says the GM car gets 16.2 miles per gallon in the city and 25.4 mpg on the highway, compared with 16.2 mpg city and 22.3 mpg highway for the Nissan car.

"We want to put to rest the decade-old image of huge American gas-eaters that persists in Japan," Steinhagen said.

The full-page fuel economy comparison will appear in the newspapers Asahi, Yomiuri, Mainichi, Sankei, Nikkei, Chunichi and Tokyo Shimbun, with a combined nationwide circulation of more than 20 million copies a day, he said.

Judge to consider Drexel revamping

NEW YORK (AP) — The investment firm of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. hopes this week to end a relatively quick but contentious stay in bankruptcy court.

The firm known for its capital-raising muscle is expected to emerge from Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings as a small financial adviser mostly managing old Drexel assets.

At its peak, Drexel had more than 10,000 employees. The new company, New Street Capital, will have about 20 investment bankers, portfolio managers and support personnel.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Francis G. Conrad was to consider Drexel's complex bankruptcy reorganization plan at a two-day hearing beginning today. Creditors have overwhelmingly supported the plan.

Drexel could emerge from bankruptcy court by late April.

At the same time, U.S. District Judge Milton Pollack, who is overseeing the case, will consider a proposed settlement of civil lawsuits against former Drexel financier Michael Milken by thrift regulators, ex-clients and investors.

If the reorganization plan is approved, Wall Street's most complicated bankruptcy would be completed in just over two years. Lawyers attributed the speed to Pollack forcing the warring parties to compromise.

"By getting them to agree to a scaled-down share of their claims against Drexel, he probably saved 10 years of litigation," said John C. Coffee Jr., a Columbia University securities law professor.

Creditors would receive an estimated 50 cents to 75 cents of every dollar they are owed.

Drexel spokesman Steven Anreder said Wednesday that major disputes had been resolved with federal, state and city tax collectors who had claims exceeding $350 million. They had claimed the reorganization denied them the right to sue former Drexel employees for unpaid taxes.

Senators introduce bills to boost airline competition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring that the consequence of airline deregulation is "ashes in our mouths," five senators on Wednesday opened a drive to boost competition in an industry they said is being propelled toward monopoly control.

They introduced legislation which would attempt to do that, first by regulating the reservations systems owned by United and American but used by most other airlines as well.

The bill would also try to shoehorn smaller airlines into major congested airports by assigning them landing and departure slots now used by commuter lines.

Many industry observers predict that the industry may soon be dominated by just three or four airlines with consumers bearing the brunt of higher fares and reduced service.

"The promise of deregulation has turned to ashes in our mouths, literally," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz. "We must find a way to reverse the recent, disturbing trends in the airline industry which threaten competition and its benefits."

The legislation would require the computer reservation systems to give equal service to all airlines within three years.

And it would allow would-be competitors to acquire slots at Chicago O'Hare, Washington National and Kennedy and LaGuardia airports in New York.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Savings bond interest depends on date

By Bill Doyle

Q. I know the annual interest rate on Series EE, U.S. Savings Bonds, cannot fall below 6 percent. But what is the guaranteed rate on Series E bonds and "Freedom Shares" purchased in the 1960s and 1970s?

Doyle

A. It's either 6 percent, 7.5 percent or 8.5 percent, depending on the date on which each was issued and the date on which it entered an extended maturity period.

Right now, E bonds with the following issue dates are accruing interest at a guaranteed 7.5 percent: March 1953 through November 1957; February 1965 through December 1970; November 1977 through June 1980.

E bonds issued in the following months currently build up guaranteed interest at 8.5 percent: March and April 1952; March 1963 and January 1965; March 1975 through October 1977. All other Es are accruing interest at a guaranteed 6 percent or have reached final maturity and stopped accumulating interest.

Freedom Shares, another name for U.S. Savings Notes, now accrue guaranteed interest at 6 percent if issued from May 1967 through August 1967; at 8.5 percent if issued from September 1967 through April 1968; at 7.5 percent if issued from May 1968 through October 1970.

Most EEs, including the ones now being sold, currently accumulate guaranteed interest of 6 percent. The exceptions are bonds issued from November 1982 through October 1986, on which the minimum guaranteed rate now is 7.5 percent.

Yes, it is a crazy quilt on which changes keep happening. Savings notes were issued with original maturities of four and a half years, EEs with original maturities ranging from eight to 12 years and Es with original maturities of from five to 10 years, with strange numbers such as seven years-nine months and nine years-eight months thrown in.

All three have been granted extended maturities, during which they continue to accrue interest. The guaranteed rate drops to 6 percent on Es, EEs and savings notes entering an extended maturity after October 1986. Es issued before December 1965 reach final maturity 40 years after their issue dates; the others in 30 years.

Q. The personnel director at work gave a pep talk about the payroll savings plan for purchase of EE bonds. She said employees shouldn't "focus on the bonds' guaranteed interest rate," but should consider the "market-based rate," which, she said, is higher. Is that true?

A. Generally, yes. Since November 1982, EEs, Es and savings notes held five years or longer accrue interest at either their guaranteed rate or a market-based rate, whichever is higher.

That market-based rate changes every May and November and is equal to 85 percent of average yield on U.S. Treasury securities with five years remaining until their maturity dates. It's currently at 6.38 percent.

This arrangement dates back to Nov. 1, 1982. Since that date, the market-based rate has been higher than the guaranteed rate for every six-month period save one. From May through October 1987 the market-based rate was 5.84 percent. The guaranteed rate was 6 percent back then and is still 6 percent.

Q. With interest rates in general at their lowest levels in decades, isn't there a strong chance the government will reduce the guaranteed interest rate on EE bonds? When do you suppose that would happen?

A. There's a possibility of such a rate cut. Of course, it would apply only to new bonds issued on and after the date the revised guaranteed rate goes into effect and to older bonds entering extended maturity periods on and after that date.

If it happens, the change will take place either on April 1 or Nov. 1, the dates on which market-based interest rates are altered.

The last change in U.S. Savings Bonds' guaranteed interest took place on Nov. 1, 1986, when the rate was cut from 7.5 percent to 6 percent. That was also during a period of falling interest rates. Wise investors loaded up on EE bonds just before that date. Many will do the same thing in advance of May 1, 1992.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Foods with folate can reduce cancer risk

By Jean Carper

Eating foods like spinach, rich in folate, a B vitamin, may help keep cervical cancer away — even if you are already infected with the HP virus, implicated in 80 percent of such cancers. This astonishing fact comes from a new study by Charles Butterworth Jr., M.D., University of Alabama at Birmingham.

Carper

He studied 464 women infected with the virus. Those with lower levels of folate in red blood cells were five times more likely to develop cell changes leading to cervical cancer than those with higher red blood cell levels of folate.

Dr. Butterworth suggests that when folate (a B vitamin) is lacking, chromosomes are more apt to break at "fragile" points. This allows the virus to slip into the healthy cell's genetic material, promoting initial changes that precede cancer. Once disease occurs, dosing with folate supplements "has no benefit," he says.

Foods high in folate: "greens and dried beans," says Dr. Butterworth. Also liver, cereals, nuts.

Coffee cleared again

Heavy coffee drinkers can relax again. Johns Hopkins University researchers have concluded that men who drink 24 ounces a day — about five cups or three mugs — of drip-brewed, filtered coffee don't endanger their hearts.

The test of 100 healthy men was designed to find out whether drinking 24 ounces of filtered caffeinated coffee boosted blood cholesterol compared with drinking 12 ounces daily of caffeine coffee, decaf coffee or no coffee.

Indeed, they found the 24 daily ounces of caffeinated coffee raised bad LDL cholesterol levels by 4.7 percent. And that would be expected to boost risk of heart disease by 9 percent. So how could the experts say coffee drinking didn't matter?

Here's the catch. The coffee also raised good HDL cholesterol levels, and that slashed the risk of heart disease by 7 to 11 percent. So the rise in good HDL canceled out the danger from a rise in bad LDL cholesterol.

The red wine question

Why is red wine better for your cholesterol than white wine? a reader asks.

The truth is red wine's "superiority" has little to do with cholesterol. In tests by the French scientist Martine Seigneur, at the Hospital Cardiologique in Pessac, both red wine and white wine markedly boosted heart-protective good-type HDL cholesterol about equally.

However, red wine but not white wine, he found, also acted as an anticoagulant, somewhat like aspirin, by blocking blood platelet clumping or aggregation and thus blood clots.

To be sure, red wine might discourage clots that trigger most heart attacks and strokes. On the other hand, red wine could be detrimental to people with blood coagulation problems or who are vulnerable to "bleeding" strokes. Of course, wine also has alcohol. That makes garlic, ginger and aspirin that have similar clot-thwarting effects far safer for many people.

Jean Carper's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

Low-fat diets may lack needed nutrients

CHICAGO (AP) — School-age children whose diets are low in fat may miss vitamins they need to grow healthy and strong unless parents make sure the youngsters get high-nutrient foods, researchers say.

Among 871 children studied, researchers found that those who consumed less than 30 percent of calories from fat also failed more than half the time to get recommended dietary allowances of vitamins B-12, E, thiamin and niacin.

In contrast, youngsters who consumed more than 40 percent of calories from fat got those nutrients more often. They failed to hit desired levels of B-12 in only 36 percent of cases, of vitamin E in 23 percent, thiamin in 40 percent and niacin in 41 percent, researchers said.

"We need to educate the public on ways they can decrease the fat with healthy substitutions," said Theresa A. Nicklas, lead author of the study, published in the February issue of the journal Pediatrics.

None of the youngsters, all 10-year-olds in the ongoing Bogalusa (La.) Heart Study, had been intentionally following low-fat diets. However, the findings suggest a potential danger if health-conscious parents put their children on low-fat diets without recommending nutrient-rich foods, she said.

The federal government last year recommended that every child over age 2 begin a heart-healthy diet. The recommendations include fat intake of no more than 30 percent of total calories consumed, no more than 10 percent of total calories from saturated fat, and a maximum daily cholesterol intake of no more than 300 milligrams.

Meat, eggs, coconut and palm oils and dairy products such as milk, cheese and butter provide most of the saturated fat and cholesterol in the American diet.

"I am a great supporter of the dietary recommendations," said Ms. Nicklas, an associate professor in applied health sciences at Nee Orleans' Tulane University Medical Center School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine.

Honda presents fresh design for Prelude sports coupe

By Bob Plunkett

What was that slick silver streak?

It slipped past me on the freeway, all smoothly rounded and sophisticated on the outside, with low stance and sport coupe styling.

Racing to catch up for a closer look, I realized its handsome sculpted form was new to me, another shape to add to an ever-expanding memory that tries to catalog burgeoning entries in the crowded class of subcompact sport coupes.

Then I spied the distinctive trunk logo of Honda as it dawned on me: That's the new Prelude.

After a four-year run with the previous issue, Honda's designers jettisoned virtually everything but the sport coupe concept and two model labels (S and Si), then set about creating an entirely new fourth-generation car.The resultant Si example, riding beside me in the other freeway lane, appeared up-to-the-minute in terms of contemporary styling, with wrap-around integrated front bumper and chin spoiler in lines that flow up the slanted hood and over severely-raked glass to a high rear deck with raised spoiler and blunt tail.

With twin bucket seats up front and scant two-person seating in back, it essentially remains — particularly in freshest form — a car for driver and front passenger only.

But this is the user-friendly sports car, one that builds on Honda's reputation for gadgets and gizmos, for practicality and dependability, for taking that middle-of-the-road position that counters extremes of sportiness (powerful acceleration and impish agility) with concepts of comfort and convenience.

A subsequent test-drive in the new Prelude Si confirmed that while the new car may not be the most powerful in its class, nor the most acrobatic, it feels imminently good to drive and so easy to accommodate — no need to read a thick driver's manual for Prelude, just buckle up and roll.

The only catch is cost, as Prelude represents a fair investment.

Such substance invites comparisons in this broad class of cars. You can find more power elsewhere, although you may not end up with the qualitative difference that Honda has managed to deliver time after time.

I know there's always an exception to a rule, but Honda's success (best-selling brand for several years now) comes in large measure from the factor of dependability for its products — they rarely fail to perform and with scheduled maintenance end up costing little to operate.

As personal testimony, I once traded my troublesome Italian two-seater (in retrospect, I probably needed three of those vehicles — one to drive, a second to work on and the third to steal parts from) for a Honda that never failed me. After 55,000 miles of driving, my cost to maintain the Honda amounted only to scheduled tune-ups and oil changes, plus a set of Michelins.

So the promise of dependability may be worth a certain measure of the new Prelude's worth.

Also, the new car adds items previously unavailable, such as the safety factor of a driver's-side airbag. Take the top-of-the-line Si 4WS and you'll also gain an airbag mounted to the passenger's side of the dash.

Up front, Prelude feels like a custom fit — it all gets back to that user-friendly image. With the upscale Si, the driver's seat brings adjustable lumbar support to fine-tune the fit.

The entire interior is new this year, and, although wheelbase and overall length of Prelude have shrunk modestly, width was increased, which translates to wider interior space for personal comfort.

Then there's Prelude's new 16-valve aluminum engines, another Honda strong suit.

Base model, with single-cam orientation and the 135-hp rating, offers more torque than last year's issue, despite identical horsepower.

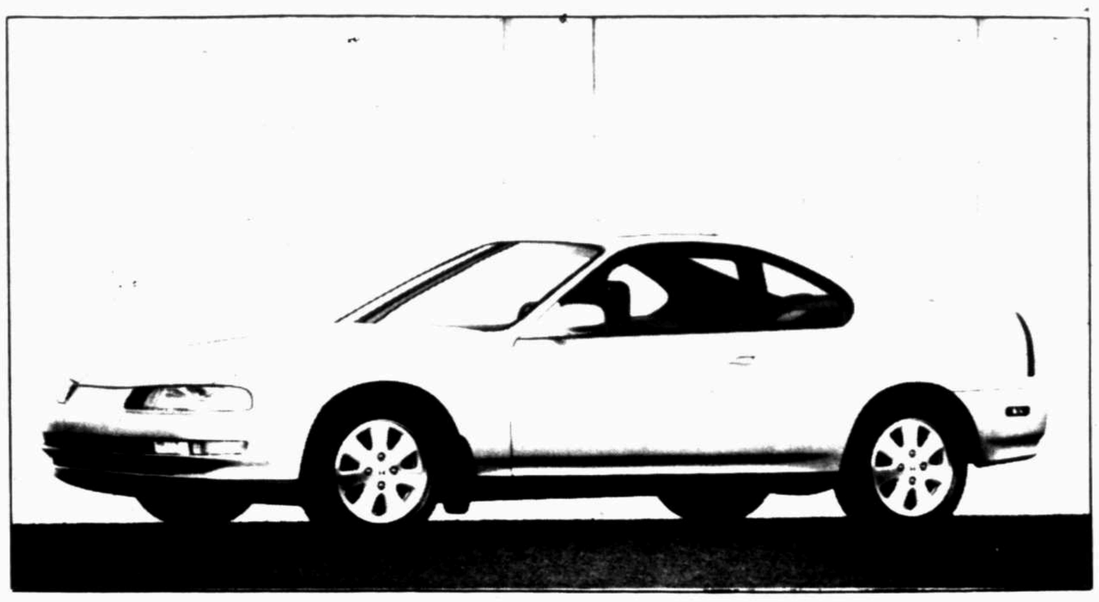

Step up to the the Si for dual-overhead-cam 2.3-liter version. Its 160-hp setting, up from 1991's 140-hp also adds strong torque for more low-gear power.

A manual 5-speed is the standard shifter, but Honda's electronic 4-speed automatic is offered optionally.

All models sport Honda's remarkable suspension, consisting of the famous double wishbone arrangement front and rear, with stabilizer bars and sport geometry.

All have effortless variable-assisted power steering, plus power-assisted four-wheel disc brakes. Add the optional anti-lock system and top-line's 4WS and you end up with a Jack-be-nimble arrangement that pleases.

Honda packs so much equipment on its models that the only accessories are those installed locally by a dealer.

Striking new aerodynamic styling and increased performance highlight the totally redesigned 1992 Prelude Si. The all-new, 160-horsepower, 2.3 liter DOHC engine delivers exciting acceleration. Four-wheel disc brakes with ABS provide superior stopping power and control, while the standard driver's side airbag (SRS) provides an added measure of safety. The driver's environment is appointed with such standard features as driver's seat with adjustable lumbar support, power windows and door locks and dual power mirrors. Also standard is air-conditioning, a High-Power AM/FM stereo cassette with six speakers and a power sunroof.

The 130-mph NX2000 makes trip to the supermarket memorable

By Russ DeVault
New York Times News Service

The mini-compact Nissan NX 2000, which has replaced the Pulsar, is a single-exhaust pocket rocket, but it's still a full-tilt screamer.

The white-on-black speedometer registers 150 mph and the 2000, which runs out of go-power at about 130 mph, will zip from zero to 60 mph in seven to eight seconds. The 2,500-pound 2+2 coupe gets its quickness from a 140-hp four-cylinder engine that pulls right on through 7,500 revolutions per minute.

The 2000, which is compactly rounded with an overall length of 162 inches, has a weaker, less flashy sibling marketed as the 1600. Both offer removable T-bar roof panels and have driver's-side air bags, but anti-lock brakes are available only on the 2000.

While the 2000's distinctive exterior seems a love-or-loathe design because of its mix of horizontal, vertical and angular lines, the interior will please all but overly tall enthusiasts. Front headroom is 37.3 inches, but long-legged drivers may find it difficult to adjust the 2000's reasonably supportive manual seats for optimum convenience to its pedals and tilt steering wheel.

The fold-down rear bench is suitable for groceries, other cargo and small children who aren't likely to complain about having less than the equivalent of coach seating.

For the driver and front passenger, however, the seats, layout and design are pleasing. Visibility is fair to good, instruments and controls are easily used and the air conditioning-heating and stereo are powerful and simple to operate.

The drivetrain, which features an engine used in the Infiniti G20 and some Sentras, is a jewel, although the test vehicle's shifter lacked sports-car definition and was vague about returning to center. But acceleration is zippy — push it and the 2000 will develop wheelspin and torque steer — and the high-revving engine doesn't need to be tightly wound to produce serious responsiveness.

The 2000's ride is unbelievably soft by pocket-rocket standards, thanks to an independent suspension featuring MacPherson struts and coil springs. In fact, its softness may present a problem for less-than-professional drivers who'd like more feedback during hard cornering, although the 2000's overall handling characteristics are quite good despite marked body lean.

But treat its quickness and speed with respect, appreciate its unusual design and good ergonomics, and the NX 2000 is a fun car even if it does lack the enthusiast-pleasing growl or burble usually produced by the dual exhausts found on many pocket rockets.

A BIT OF IRISH LUCK
A country home with an assumable loan. This very nice three bedroom brick home has affordable financing. You need to see this. $45,000

It doesn't take A POT OF GOLD to put you in a Large home in a great neighborhood. Very close to Parker Elementary. So many "extra little touches" added by the builder Marvin Simpson make this home stand out. But you have to see it to appreciate how quiet, spacious and inviting it is. $72,000

You might just make A POT OF GOLD when you decide to buy a duplex. We have two great duplexes that are perfect for the person who wants to live in one side and rent the other. Two price ranges. Call for details.

It appears that the builder spent A POT OF GOLD putting in all the extras and added storage and closet space in this custom home just south of Bluebird Lane. But the current owners have cut the price and you get to reap the rewards. There is just so much to see here. Call for details. $114,900. Original design.

Making crime pay in West Texas

BY DAVID ARMSTRONG AND NICK JOHNSON

A showdown is brewing in Midland County. Unlike the movies, however, there will be no last-minute heroics on the part of the local sheriff, stepping in to restore peace in the community. In fact, in this conflict, the sheriff is one of the combatants. His worthy opponent: That lone outpost of West Texas justice, the County Judge.

The dispute is one of perceived duty versus fiscal reality. Since late July, the Midland County Commissioners' Court, headed by Country Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer, has endeavored to rein in the activities of County Sheriff Gary Painter - particularly his wide ranging anti-narcotic "sting" operations. The five-member Commissioner's Court, which is tasked with setting the county's tax rate and crafting the budget, said its actions were inspired by a desire to tame the county's mounting financial difficulties and avoid liability should one of the sheriff's out-of-county adventures go awry. In the process, the commissioners hope to encourage Painter to concentrate on law enforcement activities closer to home. "The gist of what the Commissioners' Court is trying to accomplish is to convince the sheriff that his first duty is to the citizens and taxpayers of Midland County," Seltzer said, "and to emphasize that his 'extra-jurisdictional' operations were outside the scope of his duties and therefore unauthorized."

Painter contends that the commissioners have overstepped their budget-writing authority and are meddling in the internal affairs of his department. The sheriff, who was elected in 1985, argues that he is answerable only to the citizen-taxpayers of Midland County and has repeatedly thumbed his nose at the Commissioners' Court's edicts. "I am the one who calls the shots and not the commissioners," Painter told the Midland Reporter-Telegram in August. "The sheriff needs to run the department and the commissioners need to run their business."

The outcome of the feud will likely be determined in court, where Painter has filed suit charging the commissioners with an "unconstitutional usurpation of (his) legal and lawful authority." The commissioners have responded with a counterclaim denying that their actions infringe on Painter's "lawful and authorized duties." They maintain that the "obvious purpose" of their directives "is to encourage all Midland County employees to perform their duties in accordance with state and federal law and within the scope of their authority and within the restraint of their budget classifications."

Cash Incentives

The implications of Painter's lawsuit go well beyond the narrow question of his control over the sheriff's department, however. At the heart of the controversy is a two-year-old piece of legislation allowing law enforcement agencies to recover the forfeited assets of convicted criminals. The law, Chapter 59 of the Texas Code of Criminal Procedures, has been a boon for the Midland County Sheriff's Office which has already taken in hundreds of thousands of dollars in forfeited funds as the result of successful sting operations. Critics of the measure, however, point out that while these operations are conducted at taxpayers expense, it is in most cases the law enforcement agencies alone that reap the profits. Under such circumstances, Judge Seltzer and others believe that the law creates a virtually irresistible incentive for these agencies to stray far afield of their traditional responsibilities.

"The new forfeiture statute created a state-wide atmosphere of what we are calling entrepreneurial law enforcement," Seltzer said. "Several law enforcement agencies around the state, including the Midland County Sheriff's Office, have literally gone into the sting business so that they can accumulate large sums in these forfeiture accounts."

The commissioners want to see the forfeiture statute amended so that the proceeds from sting operations go into the county's General Fund, where they would benefit the entire community. "Law enforcement is not, never has been, and never should be a for-profit enterprise," said Seltzer. "If such an amendment was enacted, it would take the 'profit motive' out of law enforcement operations and it would also allow all the taxpayers of the county to benefit from the proceeds of the forfeiture, not just law enforcement....After all, the taxpayers of Midland County pay the salary and benefits of all law enforcement officers employed by the sheriff's office.

In trying to address these concerns, the Commissioners' Court may have stepped on a hornets' nest, however. "What began as an exercise on our part in good government and accountability has taken on some rather strange twists," Seltzer said. "The County Commissioners, by their actions, have become a threat to an underground economy which lives off of this forfeiture money. There is a whole industry of people out there - professional snitches, informants and worse - who do nothing but get in good with dopers or anyone else they think they can set up, and then go pedle their deals, their sting operations, to the highest-bidding law enforcement agency. And frankly, some of these people are downright scary."

There is no doubt the commissioners are nervous. "We've all got targets on our backs over this," Seltzer quipped during a recent session of the Commissioners' Court. "Hell, I've got one on my forehead." Asked if he had been threatened, Seltzer replied: "Yes, I've had a threat that I am definitely taking seriously - notifying the FBI and the local police." Commissioner Winfree Brown, who has served on the court for over 20 years, is also spooked. "I will tell you that it's frightening to me," Brown said.

But it is not just the unsavory informants and threatening phone calls that have the commissioners concerned. The past activities of certain law enforcement officers have also raised considerable concern. In particular, two individuals who have served with a variety of local, state and federal law enforcement agencies, including the Midland County's Sheriff's Office, have a well-documented history of involvement in paramilitary enterprises ranging from the training of commando units in Central America to an assassination plot against Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini, all, allegedly, at the behest of the U.S. goverment. (See sidebar, page 5.) In recent years, these former mercenaries, Gary S. Howard and Ronald R. Tucker, have put their talents to work as deputies and investigators for several West Texas sheriff's departments and district attorneys' offices conducting big-buck sting operations and other "routine" law enforcement activities.

The pair's most renowned bust came in 1987, while working as freelance deputies out of Painter's Midland County Sheriff's Department. In that incident, Howard and Tucker concocted a scheme to lure a group of alleged arms dealers to Midland under the pretext of purchasing "stolen" missile guidance components for resale to Iran. The affair gained national media attention and landed Painter on ABC television's Nightline where he hailed the operation as an effective blow against international arms smuggling. The case against the "arms traffickers" was eventually dropped for lack of evidence; the "missile components" had never existed.

Painter's flirtation with national fame continued over the next several years. In 1988, for example, his department was using its 296-C Hughes helicopter to round up seized cattle. It was, by all accounts, a calculated publicity stunt. With television cameras rolling and the assembled reporters scribbling, one of Painter's deputies took to the skies. While hovering just four feet off the ground, the chopper's skid was hooked by a cow's horn, bringing the craft crashing to the ground. The wreck caused several thousand dollars damage and the helicopter never flew again. Once again the headlines blared. The supermarket tabloid The World featured an artist's rendering of the incident on its cover. The Commissioner's Court howled.

The commissioner's headaches had just begun, however. During this same period, Painter began the operations that would eventually lead to the present conflict with the Commissioners' Court. Many of sheriff's department's "reverse stings," in which undercover officers pose as drug dealers, were being conducted beyond the borders of Midland County and, in some cases, outside state lines. The commissioners concluded that these cross-border jaunts violated both the Texas Constitution and case law regarding juridictional authority. Moreover, they feared that such activities unnecessarily exposed the county to liability for which it cannot obtain insurance of any kind-precisely because insurance companies, aware of these operations, flatly refuse coverage. The result, say the commissioners, is that the county is self-insured by default and could face the unpleasant prospect of having to float a bond issue or raise property taxes, should it be sued and lose.

Battle Lines Drawn

The issue came to a head in January of this year when the Dallas Morning News filed an Open Records Act request with the sheriff's office seeking detailed information about the stings, including inter-office memoranda. Painter apparently failed to to provide all the information requested, and the newspaper took him to court. The lawsuit was the last straw for the commissioners. On July 23 they issued a directive ordering Painter to "cease and desist any and all criminal investigation operations, reverse stings and narcotics operations being conducted outside Midland County." Judge Seltzer also instructed the county auditor's office "not...to pay any invoices" from the county's General Fund or the Sheriff's Office Drug Forfeiture Fund for travel outside of Texas by Painter or his deputies except for the extraditions of prisoners or "approved education." The commissioners did, however, allow certain legal exceptions, including "hot pursuit" of criminal suspects and serving arrest warrants issued in Midland County.

Painter simply ignored the new restrictions, insisting they impeded his ability to run his department. "The directives...are ridiculous and certainly not in the best interest of the public, nor good law enforcement," Painter wrote in a letter to the Commissioner's Court. "It is obvious that some members of the court, and especially the county judge, have a tacit desire to take total control of the various county elected official positions, " including the sheriff's office. The letter goes on to say that if Painter were to "succumb" to the commissioner's stipulations, "I would be violating my oath of office and certainly my obligations to the citizens of Midland County...I have no alternative but to ignore the document in its entirety."

On August 12, the commissioners responded by issuing a formal "Resolution Policy and Order" which essentially restated and enlarged upon their earlier directive. Citing the county's "limited resources," the order declares that "that all employees of Midland County shall perform their duties within the boundaries of Midland County, Texas." It also prohibits any "official, agent, or employee of Midland County" from leaving the county's boundaries "while in a duty status or in a compensatory leave status...without the express prior approval of the Commissioner's Court." The commissioners then list eight specific exceptions to these restrictions, allowing deputies to leave the county when in hot pursuit of a criminal suspect , to testify at court hearings, and so on.

In an effort to enforce these policies through the power of the purse, the resolution states that the costs of any "unauthorized out-of-county operations, business, and/or travel will be deducted from the budget and/or salary of the official, agent, or employee during the next succeeding or some subsequent pay period." The order also says that the Commissioners' Court will not defend or provide any defense funds for any Midland County employee who carries out unauthorized out-of-county operations or makes an out of county trip. County Attorney Mark Dettman, defends the Commissioners' Court's actions as being within the scope of their duties. "They (the commissioners) have budgetary control over where he (Painter) goes," Dettman told the Midland Reporter-Telegram. "If he goes anywhere, that's his business. They are just saying they are not going to pay for it. That's their privilege....I think the order they drafted is perfectly legal and proper."

Initially, Painter grudgingly assented to the order, saying he would "abide" by it if it were proven "lawful" or until it is overruled or superseded by another order. Just two days later, however, on Aug. 14, he publicly rejected the resolution, calling both it and the earlier directive "asinine."

With that, Dettman, who represents both the commissioners and the sheriff's department, entered the fray, seeking a legal opinion from Attorney General Dan Morales, author of the controversial forfeiture statue. Dettman asked Morales to determine whether Painter has the authority to conduct criminal investigations and make arrests outside of Midland County and beyond Texas' borders, and whether the sheriff or the Commissioners' Court has ultimate control over assets seized in those operations. Since 1985, the sheriff has been in control of forfeited funds collected through operations conducted within Texas. Assets seized in operations outside the state have been deposited in the county's General Fund and spent at the discretion of the Commissioners' Court.

Before the Attorney General's office could respond to Dettman's inquiry, however, Painter filed a lawsuit seeking an injunction preventing the commissioners from enforcing the order. The suit, filed in the 238th State District Court, asserts that "The order effectively removes Painter as Sheriff and inserts the County Judge into the office." The suite, styled Painter v.Seltzer, further alleges that the order "deprives (the sheriff and his deputies) of their civil liberties and emasculates the departments' ability to fight crime in Midland." The plaintiffs also request that the Commissioner's Court be ordered to pay "the reasonable and necessary attorney's fees" incurred in bringing the suit.

Much of the lawsuit reads like a press release, stating, for example, that "Under painter's leadership, the department has gained a state and national reputation as a leader in the fight against illegal narcotics." Painter's sting operations, the suit says, have resulted in "the seizure and forfeiture of millions of dollars in drug money and properties." Moreover, cooperative efforts with "outside agencies," according to the suit, have "greatly enhanc(ed) the department's ability to investigate and arrest local drug dealers."

Just hours after the suit was filed, several of Painter's deputies submitted permission slips to the Commissioners' Court seeking clearance to leave the county, ostensibly in compliance with the order. The requests were rejected. According to the Midland Reporter-Telegram, "Commissioner Guy McCrary called the appearance of the deputies an orchestrated parade that smacked of mockery of the court because the sheriff had deemed the order invalid." McCrary denounced the "parade" as a naive and deliberately provocative gesture. "I consider that expressly unprofessional," he told the Reporter-Telegram. The following day, Painter agreed to abide by the order.

Courtroom Showdown

The attorney who filed the suit on behalf of the Midland sheriffs is Hal Upchurch, the former district attorney for the 143rd district (which includes Ward, Reeves and Loving counties), with whom Painter's department frequently collaborated on sting operations. Upchurch says the commissioners went "overboard" in issuing their order. "They prohibit the sheriff's department from going across county lines to gather evidence," Upchurch said. "There is one airport in Midland County that is impossible to get to without leaving Midland county and going about three miles through a stretch of Ector county and then reentering Midland county. That's the only road into the airport, so if they get a routine call to that airport, they've got to stop and get permission from the County Judge or run the risk of being held in contempt of court for violating the order." The order, however specifically states that deputies do not require the judge's approval when "interviewing witnesses, and/or suspects involving cases arising within Midland County." The commissioners have consistently argued that this provision is sufficiently broad to allow deputies to travel to other counties for "legitimate" law enforcement purposes.

Upchurch also complained that the order infringed on deputies' private lives. "The way the order reads, they've required every employee in Midland county to get the permission of the county judge every time they want to leave the county if you're on comp(compensatory) time, which means you've got to have their permission to go on vacation," Upchurch said.

This issue is addressed in the commissioners' response to Painter's suit. The commissioners' countersuit defines compensatory leave as "time that an employee has a right to be off work because of overtime previously worked." The response then states that "Sheriff Painter has been ordering and permitting his deputy sheriffs to perform sheriff's duties outside the boundaries of Midland County and outside the boundaries of the State of Texas at a time when the officers were on compensatory leave." But, the commissioners' response says, "An employee cannot be working and off work at the same time. If a deputy sheriff is working for Sheriff Painter while on compensatory leave, then as a matter of fact and law the deputy is earning additional compensatory time to be off work." Thus, the commissioners argue, the sheriff's policy of requiring deputies to perform "unauthorized duties" outside the county "adversely affects" the county in two ways: "First, Midland County loses the services of its deputy sheriffs while they are working out of the county. Second, Midland County loses the services of its deputy sheriffs when they return home and take time off for the compensatory time earned while they were working out of the county."

Upchurch ultimately acknowledged that the commissioners had "some legitimate concerns, " particularly on the question of liability, and added that even the question of restricting sting operations was negotiable. "If it were simply a limited order saying you will not leave Midland County for reverse stings or something like that, I seriously doubt that the lawsuit would ever have been filed," he said. The commissioners said that neither Upchurch nor Painter had previously indicated they were flexible on the question of out-of-county stings, but could not discuss the matter since it is under litigation.

In their response, the commissioners also flatly refused to pay the $150-an-hour legal fees for Painter's suit. As the "governing and administrative body of Midland County," the countersuit states, the Commissioners' Court "has not authorized Gary Painter to bring suit" nor to retain an attorney on behalf of the sheriff's department.. The commissioners therefore requested that the court remove the sheriff's department as a party in the case and name Painter and his deputies as sole plaintiffs, "if the suit is to maintained." A group of sheriff's deputies have pledged to raise money to continue the suit if county funding is cut.

Under Investigation

There is a certain irony in Upchurch being selected to represent Painter's sheriff's department in a case involving disputed forfeiture funds. Just two days before Upchurch filed the suit against the Commissioner's Court, he'd filed separate charges claiming that a public accountant's unfavorable 1990 audit of his former 143rd District Attorney's office's budget, including its forfeiture account, was defamatory and amounted to libel. Upchurch resigned his office several weeks before the accountant's report was released. He stepped down "for personal reasons that were unrelated to the audit," according to the Odessa American.

In his suit, Upchurch alleges that the accountant, Randolph Thompson, was responsible for media coverage of the audit resulting in "negative publicity" to the District Attorney's office and that "the harm to Upchurch caused by Thompson's activities can never be corrected." The petition charges that Thompsons' report wrongly concluded that Upchurch was over-reimbursed $20,587 in personal expenses and $48,187 in office costs and employee expenses; purchases were made for more than the $10,000 bid limit without request for bids; personal expenses of employees were paid out of the District Attorney's fund; an automobile was turned in on an employee expense report and reimbursed; no budget was filed in each commissioners' court as required by state law; and Upchurch's office did not maintain an inventory of seized assets.

The suit does not specify the amount of damages sought. Upchurch's attorney, John W. Cliff, has stated that he expected his client to collect an amount "in the six-figure range" should the suit be successful, according to the Odessa American.

Upchurch's bookkeeping practices as district attorney have also come under the scrutiny of a grand jury. "The purpose of that investigation is to look into possible improprieties that may have occurred during the term of the former district attorney," said Assistant Attorney General Shane Phelps. "Part of the investigation deals with the disposition of forfeited funds by the former district attorney." Phelps would not elaborate on the nature of the inquiry except to say it was "ongoing." The Attorney General's office is conducting the investigation because the current 143rd District Attorney, David Zavoda, served under Upchurch and recused himself to avoid a conflict of interest.

At one point in the investigation, the grand jury requested that Zavoda provide the names of paid confidential informants used in reverse sting operations. When Zavoda refused, he was held in contempt of court and booked into jail for several hours. The contempt order was later lifted when Zavoda agreed to turn over the list of names.

Forfeiting Accountability

Upchurch's association with the Midland sheriff's department did not begin when he was hired on as legal counsel. During his tenure as D.A., Upchurch's office was involved in a number of lucrative sting operations with Painter's deputies. Between October, 1989, when the forfeiture law went into effect, and September, 1990, when Upchurch stepped down, well over $400,000 in seized funds resulting from these joint operations were exchanged between the two offices, according to records on file with the Midland County Auditor's Office. The vast majority of that money went to the Midland sheriffs from Upchurch's office.

On Oct. 4, 1989, for example, Upchurch's office deposited $69,355.51 in the Midland County Sheriff's Narcotics Fund, representing a one-third cut of an earlier seizure. On Feb. 14, 1990, Painter's office received $73,975.80 from the 143rd D.A.'s office as its share in a separate seizure operation. During this period, the Midland sheriffs made only one payment from its forfeiture fund to the 143rd D.A.'s office. That check, dated Nov. 28, 1989, was made out to Hal Upchurch in the amount of $7,500, according to Midland County Auditor's records. The receipt for the check does not indicate the purpose of the payment. Upchurch said the money came from a reverse sting conducted in Norman, Okla., in conjunction with the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

The largest transaction by far during this period occurred on April 10,1990, when two separate deposits totaling $267,252.71 were made in the Midland sheriff's forfeiture fund by Upchurch's office. The following day, a check for $88,000, slightly less than one-third of the previous day's deposit, was written on the Midland sheriff's forfeiture account made payable to "Gary Painter, Sheriff." A receipt for the check indicates the money was for the purpose of "Evidence & Obtainment," funds used as "flash money" in sting operations and to pay informants.

Check for Evidence and Obtainment, or "E&O," money are frequently made out to the sheriff or one of his senior deputies then converted to cash for use in operations or to pay tipsters. To protect their identity, informants are paid not only in cash, but also by a code name or number known only to the sheriff's department. Before receiving the money, the informant must sign his or her code name or number in view of a sheriff's department witness. Seltzer fears that the stealth surrounding the dispersal of these funds creates the potential for abuse. "I don't know who they (the people receiving E&O funds) are," said Seltzer. The only ones who do know are Painter and his deputies, and they, at least for the moment, aren't telling.

Far Afield

After Upchurch left office, the Midland sheriff's department's relationship with the 143rd D.A.'s office continued. Between the time Zavoda took over as D.A. and September of this year, there have been four transactions of forfeiture funds between the two offices totaling nearly $80,000. One of these is especially revealing. On June 5, 1991, $22,000 was paid out of the sheriffs office's forfeiture fund to the 143rd D.A.'s office as their cut of the seized assets "resulting from a reverse undercover operation out of New Albany, Indiana," according to a May 28 letter from Zavoda to Painter. The Indiana bust came about as the result of information developed in a sting conducted by the Midland sheriff's department last fall. In that operation, a group of people were arrested in Midland attempting to purchase several hundred pounds of marijuana. The sting netted $350,000 in cash and produced a series of clues leading to Indiana.

Rather than notifying federal authorities with the information, however, on October 5, 1990, the Midland deputies called the Indiana State Police (ISP), according to an article in the Indiana Drug Enforcement Association publication Idea at Work. Based on the tip from the Midland deputies, ISP investigators set up the sting in New Albany. "Four investigators from Texas arrived in Indianapolis on October 6 and 7 and helped set up the operation, " according to Idea at Work. "On Sunday night, October 7, approximately 400 pounds of marijuana were delivered to Steve Allen on some rural property that Allen was purchasing in New Albany." When the pot was delivered, Allen was arrested. With the aid of a federal search warrant, obtained through the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), $160,000 in cash was eventually seized.

"Two days after the Indiana raid, authorities with the Maricopa County Sheriff's Office Special Investigations Unit in Phoenix Ariz., raided a local residence based on information resulting from the arrests in Texas and Indiana," according to Idea at Work. "After entering several safes on the property, (Maricopa) sheriff's investigators seized just under $100,000 in cash." The article ends by saying, "Thanks go to the officers in Midland, Texas, who were willing to pursue the investigation well beyond their state borders in an effort to effectively break up a complex drug-dealing network." The article does not mention the $22,000 the Midland sheriffs received as their share of the take.

Incestuous Relationship

The Midland County Sheriff's Department's relationship with the 143rd D.A.'s office is not strictly financial. Clayton "Clay" McKinney, Jr., a D.A.'s investigator under both Upchurch and Zavoda, is the son of Midland County Sheriff's Captain Clayton McKinney, Sr. The elder McKinney, a 51-year-old ex-Texas Ranger, heads the sheriff's 34-member Operations Division and is widely regarded as the master mind behind the department's sting operations. It was McKinney, in fact, who first contacted ISP officers initiating the Indiana operation.

Capt. McKinney has publicly stated that since he joined the department in 1985, the same year Painter became sheriff, his deputies have engaged in three out-of-state stings and conducted 20 similar operations within Texas but outside of Midland County. Although McKinney told the Midland Reporter-Telegram that "Every one of them has started in Midland County, " only one major sting, the one that lead to the Indiana operation, was conducted in Midland.

One of the out-of-state operations took place in Illinois. According to the Champaign (Ill.) News-Gazette, "Midland authorities apprantly had numerous contacts with dealers in the Midwest, but the dealers were reluctant to travel to Texas." Once again, rather than contacting the DEA or FBI, the sheriff's office called the Illinois State Police for help "in an investigation they ha(d) been conducting for the last five months," the News Gazette reported. Once the deal was arranged, the paper said, the Midland sheriffs transported several hundred pounds of marijuana to Champaign as "as sample that would lead to half-ton purchases." Police eventually arrested 10 people and seized $176,000 and four vehicles.

McKinney defends the extra-territorial stings as an important weapon in fighting drug-related crime. "We can't depend on the federal government to protect us," he told the Midland Reporter-Telegram. "We have an obligation to the people of this county and the people of every other county. If we can assist in stopping this stuff (the drug trade), we're going to do it." Nevertheless, McKinney acknowledges that his deputies have no legal authority outside of Midland County. "We have never made an arrest outside of this county on one of these reverse stings," he told the Reporter-Telegram. "We (undercover agents) get 'arrested.' Whenever they (the host agency) bust people, they bust us too." Still, McKinney insists that the operations are always conducted at the "invitation" of the local authorities. McKinney did not return repeated phone calls from the Observer.

Cash Cow

According to Midland County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin, since the Sheriff's Office Narcotis Fund was established in 1986, approximately $1 million in forfeited assets has been deposited. Jarnagin estimates that "a little over $700,000" has been paid out. An examination of records on file in the auditor's office indicates that activity in the account has increased substantially since Chapter 59 went into effect in the fall of 1989. In 1988, for example, seven forfeitures were recorded, totaling just over $27,000 - $22,852 of which came from one forfeiture alone. No money came in from or was paid out to other counties during the year, indicating that no cross-border stings were conducted.

Through the first nine months of 1989, no forfeitures were recorded. The first deposit of seized funds came in October, the month Chapter 59 went into effect, when the sheriff's department receiver $69,355.51 from the Hal Upchurch's 143rd D.A.'s office as a one-third share in an out-of-county seizure operation. That same month, the department paid $9,720 for a sophisticated firearms training system. Two more out-of-county deposits totaling almost $32,000 were made in the account the following month. The only payment to another county during this period came on Nov. 28 when the department sent the aforementioned check for $75,00 to Hal Upchurch.

In 1990, Midland County switched its bookkeeping from a calendar year to a fiscal year system. During this "short" recording period, from Jan. 1, 1990 to Oct. 1, 1990, activity in the sheriff's forfeiture fund heated up dramatically, In all, over $360,000 in seized funds were deposited in just nine months. During this same period, the department spend an additional $42,630 on its firearms training system. No money was paid out to other counties.

In the first 11 months of fiscal year 1991, which ended Oct. 1, the sheriff's department took in over $227,000 in seized funds from nine operations in five Texas counties and out of state. During this period, the department paid out nearly $100,000 to three counties for five different operations. In August, the department spent $89,984 of the forfeiture funds on a computer imaging system. As these records indicate that under the new forfeiture law, other people's crime does pay - to the order of the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

Enforcing the Law in Style

One interesting gauge of the growth of Sheriff's Office Narcotics Fund is its bank account. Through out all of 1988, the fund took in just $809.19 in interest on its accounts. In the first nine months of 1989, the fund earned an additional $391.32 in interest. But in October 1989, the month the forfeiture statute took effect and the department received its first major deposit of seized assets, the fund's newly established $130,000 Certificate of Deposit (CD) earned $879.87 in interest. By December, the fund was earning monthly interest of $2,480.49 and its CD had grown to $150,000. In the 23 months between the time Chapter 59 became effective and September of this year, the department's forfeiture fund has earned over $35,000 in interest and its CD has ballooned to $200,000. The balance in the fund as of September was $73,636.66, not including the money in the CD.

Chapter 59 stipulates that forfeited funds must be used for "law enforcement purposes." In the past two years the department has used its Narcotics Fund to purchase such items as radios, firearms, oil field investigations, helicopter "maintenance and modification," as well as computer equipment and the firearms-training system. They have also purchased a number of automobiles. In 1989, the department bought four vehicles for a total of $16,077. But in 1990, the sheriff's department apparently acquired a taste for more luxurious transportation, purchasing four additional cars costing $35,964.42, including a 1986 Cadillac DeVille for $7,637.50. The Cadillac is driven by Operations Director Clayton McKinney. This year, the department acquired two cars for $9,995 each, just five dollars under the limit before a purchase must be approved by the Commissioner's Court. The department also recently purchased a fire-engine red 1988 Pontiac Trans Am for the Sheriff's Office Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) Program at a cost of $8,612.50. A receipt for the check indicates that the Narcotics Fund is to be "reimbursed in full." "He (Painter) has got 64 vehicles for 67 officers who drive regularly," observed Commissioner Louisa Valencia, the only Democrat on the court. "He could do with 50 or even less. We can't afford to maintain all those vehicles."

After all that driving, Painter apparently decided his deputies needed more exercise. In the past nine months, the department has spent over $7,000 in forfeiture funds on exercise equipment, including: a "Challenger 3 Treadmill w/Siderails"; a "45 degree Calf Sled"; a "Cir(cular) Vertical Butterfly" machine; and a "Hack/Leg Combo," all with "white paint and charcoal grey upholstery," according to an invoice for the items.

Attorney General Morales, who, as a San Antonio state representative in 1989, sponsored the forfeiture bill, described such purchases as "highly questionable." "I think there probably ought to be a much more direct correlation and relationship to more traditional law enforcement initiatives than some of those purchases may reflect," said Morales. "If the expenditures and the investment...of the resources do not have a direct bearing upon law enforcement efforts and initiatives, then the funds are being expended in a manner inconsistent with the directive of the stature." Painter did not return the Observer's phone calls.

Truth in Advertising

When the sheriff's department's rift with the Commissioners' Court spilled in to the headlines in September, a group calling itself "Citizens in support of Sheriff Gary Painter" took out an advertisement in the local paper. The ad, headlined "Just the facts!," purports to detail the various benefits of the department's sting operations. The ad states, for instance, that the "Cost of Sting Operations to Midland Taxpayers (for) All out-of-state Stings" was "$2,990.39." The burden to taxpayers for "All in-state but out-of-county Stings," according to the ad, came to "$7,033.60." A footnote written in fine type indicates these expenses included "Airline, motel, meals, etc."

Not included in these figures, however, are the total number of work days missed, man hours expended, compensatory leave time taken, or deputies' time out of county. Supervisory support, which accompanies all sting operations is also omitted. Telephone costs and computer time are completely ignored. Most importantly, the fact that these operations, from which only the sheriff's department profits, are paid for by the taxpayers out of the General Fund rather than the sheriff's forfeiture account, is completely overlooked.

The ad also states that "The $1,000,000 return from sting operations has been spent" on such items as helicopter insurance, telephone equipment, archives storage equipment, mobile radios, walkie-talkies, typewriters, firearms, fingerprint equipment, miscellaneous office equipment, and fire investigation equipment for the County Fire Marshall. It also lists nine autos purchased through the Narcotics Fund, including a "Jail Maintenance Vehicle," a Crisis Intervention Unit van, a Crime Stoppers vehicle, a "Litter Control Vehicle," and two "Reserve Patrol Units." Conspicuously absent from the list was any mention of Cadillacs, Oldsmobiles, treadmills or the information purchased from paid snitches with this drug money. A note at the bottom of the page urges readers to "Save this ad for future reference and comparison reports from the proceedings of the Commissioners's Court."

Just Say No

Under Chapter 59, local law enforcement agencies may draw up agreements to determine how forfeited assets will be divided. Midland County's Local Agreement, drawn up between Painter and 142nd District Attorney Al Schoore in August 1989, stipulates that the sheriff's department will receiver 80 percent of the forfeited funds, with the D.A.'s office getting the remaining 20 percent, if the seizure is not contested. If the seizure is contested but is upheld by the courts, then the D.A.'s office and the sheriff's department split the money evenly.

The Local Agreement also states that Painter and Schoore "shall make every effort to insure that up to 10 percent of the total funds forfeited be deposited in a special fund...for a county operated drug prevention program or facility." Since no such program existed at the time, Painter and Schorre agreed to set one up. The stated purpose of the project, eventually dubbed the Sheriff's Office DARE Program, was to educate young people "with respect to the dangers of drugs," according to the agreement. Since that time thousands of dollars in forfeited drug money has been invested in the program.

Amongst the "educational" items purchased were $2,524 worth of "Yogi" stickers, black rulers, erasers, "DARE Cross" ball point pen and pencil sets, black balloons, and plastic key fobs and other paraphernalia, in June 1990, according to an invoice for the merchandise. The following month, the Sheriff's DARE program purchased two "Fuzzy Bear Sticker(s)" for $47.05 from a specialty shop in Morton, Ill. In November 1990, the department spent $925.74 for DARE T-shirts, stoneware mugs, flags, tri-color pens, and a Christmas ornament. Finally, in April of this year, the dangers of drugs were explained to children through the purchase of 300 DARE lapel pins at a cost of $515.25.

The Big Bust

Although sting operations have become more lucrative in recent years, the Midland Sheriff's Department was conducting them even before forfeiture laws were a consideration. The most famous of these early undercover busts came in 1987, when "volunteer" deputies Gary Howard and Ronald Tucker got a tip that a group of "Iranian" arms dealers were in the market for American Hawk missile aiming devices. Over the next four months, Howard and Tucker devised an elaborate plan to draw the would-be arms merchants to Midland on the pretense of purchasing the supposedly purloined missile parts, then arresting them on conspiracy charges and seizing their assets, according to a series of articals in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

While Howard and Tucker were busy setting up the operation, Painter was negotiating side deals with ABC television. An agreement was eventually hammered out in which ABC News would have exclusive access to the story in exchange for a video tape of the arrest. Painter later claimed that the sensitive low-light equipment necessary to capture the bust on tape could only be provided by the network.

As the scheduled arrival of the notorious arms dealers grew near, Painter sent a SWAT team in full-combat regalia to the edge of the runway at Midland Regional Airport. Rather than the jet load of shadowy Middle Eastern middlement that had been anticipated, however, a lone, bespectacled Portuguese businessman by the name of Victor Fonseca eventually emerged as the feared "arms trafficker." Cognizant of the potential for looking foolish in light of all the contrived publicity, Painter's deputies forged ahead with the operation.

Fonseca was shuffled off to a near-by military hangar where he was to inspect the alleged missile components. Instead, the crates, which he had been told contained "radar tubes," actually held half-a-dozen 55-gallon oil drums filled with gravel and sand. Having captured the "crime" on film, Painter's men promptly hauled Fonseca off to the pokey and confiscated the $400 they found in his possession. Hours later, Painter was whisked away on a chartered plane for a Nightline interview in which the sheriff explained how diligently he was dealing with the international threat. Fonseca spent the next five months in jail, no doubt wondering what had hit him, before prosecutors dropped the charges,. saying they could not win a conviction against a man for trafficking in dirt-laden oil drums.

Battle of the Budget

Gary Painter's penchant for high-profile operations makes his sheriff's department an inviting target when things go wrong. As a result, when he's not out fighting the drug scourge or international terrorism, he frequently finds himself doing battle with the

The Kings of Sting

The Fonseca fiasco (see above) was not the first attempt by Gary Howard and Ronald Tucker to conduct an international weapons-smuggling sting. The month before the Fonseca bust, the pair filed suit against the U.S. government, claiming they were owed $1.4 million for their part in shutting down a Middle East arms pipeline. According to the lawsuit, which is still pending, in early 1981, Howard, Tucker and former Green Beret Major Richard Meadows were contracted by the U.S. Customs Service to assist in the criminal prosecution of a weapons smuggling network.

Since 1979, Howard and Tucker, both Vietnam veterans, had served as investigators and informants for the Customs Service and Treasury Department. Meadows had played a key operational role in President Carter's failed 1980 Desert One hostage rescue mission in Iran by sneaking into Tehran in disguise to gather intelligence. The suit states that in March 1981, Howard, Tucker and Meadows helped Customs seize a Boeing 707 loaded with hand guns, M203 40mm grenade launchers, and Colt M16 machine guns bound for South Africa at Houston International Airport. Through that operation, dubbed "Houston I," Customs eventually recovered over $200,000 in fines from those arrested in the aircraft. Howard and Tucker later received over $600,000 in commissions from funds that had been part of the arms deal.

Dr. Doom

Shortly after the successful completion of Houston I, according to the suit, Customs again contracted Howard and Tucker, this time to carry out an even bigger weapons sting. The target of this mission known as "Houston III," was Ian Smalley, a British subject described in the lawsuit as "one of the principal arms dealers in the world," Smalley, otherwise know as "Dr. Doom," was allegedly cooking up a massive deal in which he would deliver 100 M48A-5 tanks to Iran and 8,300 U.S. TOW anti-tank missiles to Iraq. In exchange for their assistance in closing down the Smalley operation, Howard and Tucker were to receive a 10 percent "commission" from Customs, according to the suit.

In their complaint, Howard and Tucker state that in the summer of 1981, Customs instructed them to set up a series of international companies as part of Houston III. Among these where Peregrine International Associates, a front for their supposed arms marketing, and Merchandising International Associates, both based in Dallas. Customs also directed them to hire "retired military personnel for security and intelligence gathering and particular expertise," according to the suit. Among those employed by Howard and Tucker for Houston III, were Meadows, TOW missile expert William Patton, and the former director of selection and training for Delta Force, Charles Odorizzi. As in the Fonseca case, Howard and Tucker allowed virtually the entire operation to be taped by ABC television's Houston affiliate.

As the investigation of Smalley continued, however, Howard and Tucker began hearing disquieting rumors. During a meeting in Washington, D.C. in the early summer of 1982, Lt. Col. Wayne E. Long of the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) told Meadows and Tucker "that Smalley would not be arrested because the Department of Justice would not prosecute him due to pressure from the United States Department of Justice," according to the lawsuit. Shortly thereafter Customs scuttled the Houston III operation, leaving Howard and Tucker holding the bag for the $1.4 million they say they spent carrying out Customs directives.

"The decision of the Customs Service to forego (sic) prosecution of Smalley...was inexplicable to (Howard and Tucker)," according to their suit. "It was only in the fall of 1986...with revelations of United States arms deals with Iran that the(y)...realized that there was in all probability a connection between the United States Government's covert arms deals with Iran and the sudden and inexplicable desire not to prosecute Ian Smalley...(The) Houston III investigation...was sidetracked and sabotaged by high government officials who were afraid that a full-blown investigation and prosecution of Smalley would reveal covert and illicit arms shipments being sent to the government of Iran with the sanction of the National Security Council, the Pentagon, the Customs Service, the State Department and other high government officials."

These documents, if accurate, raise the specter of British government complicity in the so-called October Surprise scandal.

Smalley was eventually brought to trial in Houston on weapons smuggling charges. "During the trial, says Howard, the U.S. Department of Justice pulled its punches, deliberately blinking at witnesses and evidence that might have linked Smalley to sensitive British arms deliveries to Iran in 1980 and afterward," according to a recent article in the Villge Voice. Howard told the Voice that Smalley had bragged about blackmailing the British government into "going soft on him" in a separate arms trafficking case in England. Smalley's threat, Howard said, was to reveal shipments of military equipment by the British Ministry of Defense (MOD) to Iran in 1980, when 52 Americans were being held captive.

A British Customs report obtained by the Voice lends credence to the allegation. The document, written by a British Customs agent, states that during a 1982 phone conservation with Smalley, the arms dealer claimed that "he had informed MOD that if his came to court he intended to 'blow the operation' undertaken by the British Government in relation to sales of military equip-

Commissioners' Court. It is a curious conflict in many ways: Both are high on fighting crime, for example, but the commissioners are also committed to balancing the budget, keeping taxes in line of protecting the county from liability. Painter merely scoffs at these concerns, however, and insists the commissioners are challenging his authority.

A particular focus of Painter's enmity is Seltzer, with whom, he says, he is engaged in a "very direct, personal conflict," as he told the Midland Reporter-Telegram. The two are seemingly the least likely of adversaries, however. Seltzer, 43, who was elected judge last year, is an Air Force reserve officer and chairman of the local Republican Party; hardly a wild-eyed radical. "Neither I, nor any member of the Commissioners' Court, have ever accused the sheriff of any dishonesty or of any intentional wrongdoing," said Seltzer. "Although we have had occasion to question the sheriff's judgement and his methods, we have never questioned his honesty or integrity...The reasons we enacted the Resolution Policy and Order are monetary and budgetary in nature."

Yet the defiant 44-year-old Painter, a Vietnam-era marine, former Midland City police officer, ex-Texas Department of Public Safety trooper and one-time deputy sheriff, accuses the judge of engaging in a political power play. "My concern is that the county judge is exercising authority over the Midland County Sheriff's Office by restricting our movements," Painter told the Odessa American. "Why does he want to control law enforcement in Midland County?"

Seltzer categorically denies the charge. "(I)t has never been our intention to attempt to micro manage the sheriff's office," he said. "The sheriff's office does not tell us about their sting operations and frankly we do not want to know about them...However we do have a constitutional and statutory responsibility to the taxpayers of Midland County to protect Midland County personnel, assets and funds from being used in an unauthorized, and possibly illegal, manner."

Because of the commissioner's financial responsibilities, Painter's continued defiance comes at an extremely inopportune juncture. In the midst of current controversy, the Commissioners' Court was busy drafting a budget for fiscal year 1992, which began October 1. Many already believe the sheriff's department was ripe for trimming. Since 1985, when Painter took office, the department has mushroomed from 70 employees, 30 vehicles and a annual budget of $2.3 million, to 156 employees, 64 vehicles and a budget of $4.86 million for the 1991 fiscal year. During the past fiscal year, the department consumed about one-fourth of the county's $18.77 million budget, while employing approximately 40 percent of its nearly 400 workers.

In August, Painter proposed a new budget of $5.25 million, an increase of $390,000 over last year's. The county's budget, however, shrank by $280,000, to $18.49 million. As a result, the sheriff's budget was trimmed to $4.49 million, down $370,000.

Perhaps even more discouraging for Painter, in September, the Commissioners' Court handed down new guidelines on worker strength and office hierarchy for the sheriff's department. According to a 1987 Texas local government statute, in a county with a population of over 75,000 people, "county government shall classify all positions in its sheriff's department and shall specify all duties and prescribe the salary for each classification." The commissioners' reshuffling of the department eliminates some top-level positions, removes a division and a captain, shifts workers from the sheriff's investigative arm to the jails, cuts the number of authorized vehicles to 40, and, overall, shaves four people off the staff. The restructuring was conducted without input from Painter who chose not to participate in the budget study process.

Although the commissioners have apparently won the budget battle, the legal war is yet to come. While no one relishes the conflict, some in Midland County believe it may be the only way to resolve the issue. "We will probably write a new state law," Commissioner Winfree Brown told the Odessa American. "We have finally got a new judge who has gotten around to doing the things the county needs."

Addendum to Oct. 18, 1991 Texas Observer Article "Have Badge, Will Travel"

Since the above article first appeared in the October 18, 1991 issue of the Press described one of these companies, Dallas-based Peregrine International, as operating "like a private CIA, offering counter-terroist and counter-insurgency assistance to foreign countries." A prospectus for the company, obtained by the Free Press, describes "a commando training program for Honduras that included instruction in urban assault tactics; restraint techniques; interrogation; demolition and sniper marksmanship." Other allegedly Pentagon-approved Howard and Tucker operations described in the article include schemes to abduct and kill drug smugglers in Peru, Honduras, Belize and the Caribbean. The pair also claim they won American clearance to arm and train Nicaraguan contra rebel units and elite military commando forces throughout Central America.

Perhaps Peregrine's most dramatic mission involved a plot by Iranian military officers to overthrow the Ayatollah Khomeini. In January 1992, Peregrine President Richard Meadows met with Iranian Air Force Maj. Masoud Yahya, an associate of Ian Smalley's. According to a September 1982 internal Customs Service memo, obtained by the Free Press, Yahya indicated he was interested in purhcasing about $100 million in weapons for use in a "military coup in Iran." Yahya's "moderate faction," planned to assassinate Khomeini and his guards, then crush the Ayatollah's supporeters with the help of a 4,000-memeber pro-western Iranian military force, Howard and Tucker told the Free Press. After allegedly receiving approval for the weapons sale from senior U.S. military officials Peregrine told Yahya the deal was on and a price of $120 million was set. The money, which was stored in a vault in New York, was to have come from the holdings of the late Shah of Iran, Mohammed Riza Pahlevi, the Free Press reported. The money never arrived however, and the deal fell through.

Bordering On the Ridiculous

After Peregrine folded in 1984, Howard and Tucker moved on to only slightly more mundane activities. Howard worked as a U.S. Border Patrol agent and liaison investigator for the Texas Senate, and Tucker served as a narcotics investigaor for the Texas Department of Public Safety, before eventually hooking up with the Midland Sheriff's Office. Howard and Tucker first met Painter in the mid 1970s through the Presidio County Sheriff's Department in Marfa, where, Painter was chief deputy. Howard and Tucker were serving as federal agents at the time and the trio worked "a plethora" of border smuggling cases together, according to the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

In 1986, while working as freelancers for Painter's Midland Sheriff's Department, Howard and Tucker were once again conducting operations along the border. After a four-month undercover investigation, Howard and Tucker concluded that just across the border near Ojinaga, no fewer than five terrorist training camps were in full operation, preparing squadrons of Libyans, Cubans and Colombians for future attacks throughout Mexico and possibly the United States. Worse yet, Howard and Tucker discovered that these "training camps" were being funded by Colombian drug money. The intrepid investigators reported these ominous findings to Painter, who, alterted to the threat, immediately hopped a plane (at taxpayuers expense) for Washington, D.C., for an emergency meeting with top federal officials, including: C. Boyden Gray, chief counsel to then-Vice President George Bush; John Savercool, legislative aide to U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm; and representatives of the Central Intelligence AGency, State Department and Customs Service. The response from the federales was reportedly something on the order of sidelong glances and a polite admonition to leave and not come back.

Howard and Tucker eventually moved on to other West Texas law enforcement agencies. Their first stop was with Hal Upchurch's 143rd District Attorney's office where, along with Clayton McKinney's son, they served as investigators beginning in the summer of 1989, according to pay records obtained by the Observer. Their employment was cut short when they were dismissed in July 1990, shortly before Upchurch tendered his resignation. "I knew in June (1990) that the time had come and I was getting ready to step down," Upchurch said, "so I went ahead and gavey Gary and Ronnie notice as a way to save some money for the new D.A." Howard and Tuckers are currently working out of the Nolan County Sheriff's Office in Sweetwater. They did not return Observer calls. -D.A.

"A Private CIA"

Even after the abortive Smalley investigation, Howard and Tucker continued running what they said were government-sanctioned operations through the front companies they'd set up for Houston III. A 1987 article in the Detroit Free

Howard and Tucker concluded that just across the border near Ojinaga, five terrorist training camps were in full operation, preparing squadrons of Libyans, Cubans and Colombians for future attacks throughout Mexico and, possibly, the United States.

Hal Upchurch, former Ward County district attorney and attorney of record in Sheriff Painter's suit against the County Commissioner's Court, was indicted by a Ward County grand jury on January 16, 1992 for activities relating to "reverse stings' he had conducted in conjunction with the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

Upchurch is charged with misapplying $68,750 of $275,000 seized in a 1989 marijuana reversal conducted in Ward and Grayson Counties, and tampering with governmental records by reporting only $206,200 of the $275,000 seizure. According to court testimony by Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter in his recent suit against the Midland County Commissioners, deputies of the Midland County Sheriff's Department (MCSO) played a significant part in this operation in that Captain Clayton McKinney, MCSO head of operations, flew the seized funds and a deputy/informant, Ronald Ray Tucker, from Grayson County to Ward County in an aircraft rented by the Midland County Sheriff's Office.

Also named in the same set of indictments - - for misapplication of fiduciary property and theft - - is Ronald Ray Tucker.

According to newspaper reports, including a December, 1991 article in the Dallas Morning News, Gary Howard and Tucker, along with Captain Clayton McKinney of the Midland County Sheriff's Department, figured heavily in the design and implementation of drug reversals conducted throughout West Texas and beyond by the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

Less than two weeks later, the same Ward County grand jury again indicted Mr. Tucker, this time for lying during testimony in a case against drug informant Billy Doyle.

In 1990, Midland County Sheriff's deputies confiscated $449,950 in a marijuana reversal that took place at the La Quinta Motor Inn in Midland. According to his own testimony in the recent suit over the Resolution Policy and Order, Sheriff Painter admitted that after seizing the money, deputies Jose Primera and Ed Krevitt took it to the Sheriff's Office in the basement of the Midland County courthouse, where they counted and photographed it. Immediately afterward, Sheriff Painter and Deputies Primera and Krevitt loaded the money into a car and transported it to Ward County District Attorney Hal Upchurch's office, where Ronnie Tucker swore out an affidavit that he had seized the money in Ward County. A while afterward, after defense attorneys began making noises about ancillary lawsuits contesting the seizure, the money was moved back to Midland, where another affidavit was sworn attesting that the seizure had indeed been made in Midland.

Although the "local agreement" clause of Article 59 would seem to mandate the funds being split more-or-less evenly between the Midland County D.A.'s and the Sheriff's forfeiture accounts, Al Schorre's office only received $17,000 of the funds; the remainder was split between Sheriff Painter's forfeiture fund and that of Hal Upchurch, the Ward County District Attorney.

On or about August 25, 1989, Clay McKinney, acting as a peace officer with Hal Upchurch's 143rd District Attorney's office, filed a notice and intention to forfeit against $206,250 against Ronald Ray Tucker. After "respondent" Tucker failed to make appearance in the cause, the money was forfeited to Mr. Upchurch's office.

Meanwhile, in Presidio County, Glyn Robert Chambers and Sheriff Rick Thompson were charged with and subsequently pled guilty to conspiracy to import for sale 2400 pounds of uncut Colombian cocaine.

The cocaine, with a potential street value of $1 billion, is believed to be jointly owned by several Latin American smuggling organizations, including the Medellin Cartel of Colombia, the Guadalajara and Chihuahua City cartels of Mexico, and the successor organization to the Pablo Acosta Ojinaga drug plaza, now being run out of Juarez by former Acosta associates Amado Fuentes and Malaquias Flores. According to DEA and Customs intelligence reports, these organizations have been responsible for thousands of murders in their respective regions, including the machine-gunning of a 24-year-old woman and her 12-month-old baby on a Guadalajara sidewalk and the abduction and murder by torture of American DEA agent Enrique Camarena.

According to the arrest summary attested to in Sheriff Thompson's detention hearing in Pecos on Jan. 12, 1991, by DEA agent Dale Stinson of El Paso, Chambers and Thompson were to deliver the cocaine to either Houston or San Antonio, for which they would be paid a transshipment fee of half a million dollars apiece.

In a phone interview with this writer, Captain Clayton McKinney claimed that as a Texas Ranger in the Big Bend area, he often availed himself to Mr. Chamber's services as a free-lance operative.

In 1989, Captain McKinney wrote a warm letter of recommendation to Judge Harry Hudspeth on Chambers' behalf when Chambers was charged with a federal firearms violation earlier that year. The text of the letter is this:

"I am Captain Clayton McKinney of the Midland County Sheriff's Department, Midland, Texas. I am writing this letter on behalf of Mr. Robert Chambers, who I understand is to appear before you for sentencing. Having worked the border area for sixteen years as a Texas Ranger, I have known Robert well for the last several years.

During this time he has on numerous occasions assisted me with the recovery of thousands of dollars worth of stolen property, including everything from burros to airplanes. He has also given me, and assisted me, in obtaining information we believed to be vital to the security of the United States of America.

His assistance has been without regard for his personal safety, and was done by him solely as a civic duty. I have never paid Robert Chambers one cent as informant fees. In all my dealing with Robert, I have never found him to be untruthful or lie about anything. I know him to be a man of his word.

I am sure that Robert has more respect for the Court than he does for any man, and I feel that if Robert tells you he will live by the terms of probation, he will do just that.

Thanks for your consideration.
Respectfully Submitted,
Clayton McKinney."

In all fairness, it should be pointed out here that Captain McKinney emphatically stated that he "never had Robert Chambers do anything on doper (sic)," and that this reporter is aware of no evidence that would suggest his involvement in the Chamber/Thompson smuggling operation.

But nonetheless, acting Sheriff "Abe" Gonzales of Presidio County verifies that in the intervening time between the putative "discovery" of the 2400 lbs. of cocaine in a horse trailer belonging to Sheriff Thompson at the Presidio County Fairgrounds and Sheriff Thompson's arrest, that a number of calls were placed back and forth between Thompson and the Midland County Sheriff's Department. In light of the fact that Sheriff Painter was Sheriff Thompson's chief deputy from 1973-1978 and admits to being the best of friends with him, it may be incumbent upon Mr Painter and Mr. McKinney to disabuse the public of any doubts these associations might have raised.

Moreover, according to sources close to the DEA, federal agents are now looking for a link between smuggling operations in the Big Bend and the international money launderers. American smugglers are regularly ripped off by money launderers in Mexico, often forcing them to seek out "trustworthy" individuals adept at floating illicit funds in places like Panama, the Caymans, London and Switzerland.

In early February of this year, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales intervened in the lawsuit Sheriff Painter originally filed against the County Commissioners, seeking almost $1 million he claims the sheriff improperly seized in reverse-sting operations. If the Attorney General is successful in his suit, the taxpayers of Midland will have to pay that bill.
