Drought loan plan stirs up some interest

Ranchers now eligible

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

WASHINGTON — Relief for drought-stricken West Texas farmers and ranchers should be coming next week, and it's not spelled R-A-I-N.

Agriculture Secretary John Block and U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas, worked out Wednesday morning a plan, which was approved by President Reagan, to lower the interest rate on loans and lift restrictions on ranchers. However, by late Wednesday the plan was being criticized for not meeting the ranchers' needs.

Money under the Emergency Loan Program had been allocated earlier for farmers. According to Loeffler, who represents Midland in the 21st District, the new plan lowers the interest rate from 8 percent down to 5 for the first $100,000. An additional $400,000 is available at 8 percent.

Farmers and ranchers who can obtain credit elsewhere still will be eligible for federal aid, but at a 13.75 percent interest rate.

Loeffler reasoned the lower interest rate and revised regulations will give farmers and ranchers money for feed without having to borrow it at the higher conventional rates.

'We really need rain'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

The federal government could hand out feed to ranchers for free and it's still too late, contend two men whose livelihood come from cattle.

"Money won't make it rain; we need the rain," said Fort Stockton rancher Mark Mays this morning as he sat in an office of Southwestern Livestock Auction in Midland.

Agriculture Secretary John Block announced Wednesday he was dropping the interest rate on loans from the Farmers Home Administration from 8 percent down to 5 on the first $100,000. An additional $400,000 could be borrowed at 8 percent. And the regulations were to be changed to include ranchers immediately. Currently, farmers could get the loans.

The policy change came after pressure had been put on Block to make changes in aid for the 23 states declared a disaster from the widespread drought. However, he stopped short of doing what some legislators had wanted and that was to give subsidies on feed or to hand out damaged grain stored in the Panhandle which could be used as feed.

Burning of outpost heats up Nicaragauan conflict

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Costa Rican-based rebels attacked, burned and abandoned Nicaragua's main southern border post and dynamited power lines leading to the north, heating up the two-front war against the leftist Sandinista government.

The rebels attacked Wednesday, striking at Penas Blancas, a Nicaraguan post 90 miles south of Managua, the capital, and just across the Costa Rican border.

Elsewhere in Central America on Wednesday, Guatemalan leader Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores marched into the Council of State and told the 60-member body he was dissolving it because of lack of funds. A leading moderate charged right-wing violence has increased since the general seized power earlier this month.

In El Salvador, the Defense Ministry accused guerrillas of "vandalistic occupation" of Tenancingo, saying leftist rebels killed 13 civilians in a rocket and mortar attack when they seized the town for two days earlier this week.

In Washington, the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America, headed by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, was expected to announce today plans for a trip to Central America next month. The 12-member commission expects to complete its policy recommendations for President Reagan by February.

Costa Rica's public service minister, Angel Solano, said Costa Rican civil guards were ordered out of the area of Penas Blancas to avoid the fighting Wednesday. He said at least four people were wounded but did not specify who they were.

A Nicaraguan military officer in Sapoa, three miles north, said several wounded soldiers were brought to Sapoa. He said the customs office in Penas Blancas had been partially destroyed in a mortar attack, other buildings were destroyed and phone communications with the rest of the country were cut.

Mourning declared for victims of Lake Nicaragua boat disaster

GRANADA, Nicaragua (AP) — Authorities declared a two-day mourning period as the search continued today for victims of a passenger boat that burned and sank in shark-infested Lake Nicaragua with as many as 127 people aboard.

The government reported 14 dead and 28 missing in the disaster aboard the Santa Elena and said rescue workers "continue to search for the missing victims."

But a witness said he saw a passenger list with 127 names on it, and rescue officials said they recovered only 27 survivors, raising the possibility there could be as many as 100 dead.

Jose Marenco Torres, who was rescued, said some screaming passengers leaped into the lake when the fire broke out Wednesday, although the presence of sharks was well known.

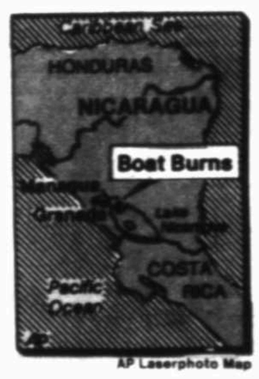

It is rare to find sharks in fresh water, but Lake Nicaragua was once filled with salt water and gradually evolved into a freshwater lake. The marine life, including sharks, adapted to the slow change.

Granada Red Cross Director Daniel Mendoza said 27 people had been rescued and 13 bodies recovered.

He said the Santa Elena and similar boats are designed to carry about 60 passengers.But he said the boats often carry more passengers if they show up at dockside at the last moment.

"Even though supposedly they have capacity for 60 people, they usually carry more than 100, aside from the cargo they take with them," Mendoza said.

Officials said the boat started its journey to Granada Tuesday night from San Carlos, 100 miles to the south, carrying a cargo of 250 pigs and 50 head of cattle.

The Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, in a press release from San Jose, said its forces left the border post "burning and abandoned."

It said they also dynamited power lines leading to the cities of Rivas, 20 miles north, and Nanaime, also to the north on the Pan American highway.

Reporters trying to reach Penas Blancas were stopped at Rivas and told by Nicaraguan military officials that fighting had resumed along the border late Wednesday.

Last weekend, U.S.-backed rebels of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force seized the northern town of El Espino, bordering on Honduras, held it for almost two days then pulled back Tuesday.

The attacks prompted junta leader Daniel Ortega Saavedra to warn the U.N. General Assembly Tuesday that Nicaragua needs to build up its arsenal to defend itself against "ever more direct involvement" by the United States.

Recent congressional testimony showed the Honduras-based guerrillas received $19 million in funds and training from the CIA.

The Costa Rican-based rebels in the south, led by Eden Pastora, a hero of the 1979 revolution that placed the Sandinistas in power, have received no American help as far as is known.

Mejia Victores, Guatemala's chief of state, dissolved the Council of State, an advisory board composed of businessmen, politicians and Indian leaders created by his predecessor, Gen. Efrain Rios Montt.

Vinicio Cerezo, head of the Christian Democratic Party, called for Mejia Victores to halt an "alarming increase in the number of kidnappings and murders" since the general overthrew Rios Montt Sept. 8. He said the violence was "not necessarily part of any official policy...," but "since the fall of Rios Montt, certain groups think they have been given the green light to act with impunity."

Government spokesman Edgar Dajalman Dominguez blamed the violence on leftist guerrillas, who he said were "trying to create an image of chaos on an international and national level."

Guerrillas, meanwhile, ambushed a military patrol 91 miles northwest of the capital, killing one and wounding three, and set off a bomb that interrupted telephone service on the south side of the capital.

In El Salvador, the Defense Ministry said leftist rebels, using rockets and mortars, killed 13 civilians when they seized Tenancingo Sunday.

The ministry press release made no mention of air force bombings of Tenancingo after ground forces had surrendered — for which the government apologized Tuesday. Civilians say the bombings killed 50 townspeople and wounded 25. At least 22 soldiers and 26 rebels were killed in the fighting, and 70 troops were captured.

Limousine whisks clients away on funeral tour

MANKATO, Minn. (AP) — A funeral home employee spurning industry tradition may have come up with a sales plan whose time has come — even if the occasion hasn't. He offers freebie limousine trips as part of a "pre-need" funeral sales tour.

Dick Porter, a sales representative for the Vetter Funeral Home at Woodland Hills Cemetery, picks up potential customers for a day trip to the mortuary.

During one recent tour, a shiny black limousine cruised up to the door of the Walnut Towers senior citizens high rise to meet nine elderly women who oohed and aahed and tittered some.

In a flash, Porter bounded through the foyer. There was a let's-get-this-show-on-the-road urgency in his step and good cheer in his voice.

"Well, we got a real lovely bunch this morning," Porter said as he greeted the residents.

With that, the entourage was whisked into the limousine for an outing that netted them a crisp $2-bill, a fresh white carnation and a quick delve into mortuary science.

First stop on the Vetter tour was Sue's Floral for flowers for the women. Then on to the funeral home and cemetery, where the ladies spared no questions.

"Are we going to see where they do the cremating?" one woman asked.

"Absolutely," Vetter representative John Allen said.

The tour included stops in the funeral home's new chapel, mausoleum and "cremation niches" where, the women were told, ashes are placed and left "forever."

There were no overt sales pitches, only informational banter between the women and Vetter staff.

If the women felt any sense of the macabre, they weren't letting on. The mood was anything but grave, and there was laughter among the crypts.

"Listen to them," funeral home manager Howard Fletcher said. "Doesn't sound like there's much fear there, does it?"

The tour reflects aggressive marketing trends in the funeral industry. Fletcher says it is called pre-need sales and it differs from the traditional "we'll be here when you need us" approach.

It is a conflict that doesn't set well with many traditional funeral homes, Fletcher said Wednesday night.

"I'm sure if you talked with other funeral directors they would put it down so fast it isn't funny. They'd probably be repulsed."

He's right.

"I consider it an unprofessional act. Totally unacceptable," Landkamer's Funeral Home manager Edward Fraser said of the tour, which ends with a lunch stop at a restaurant.

Johnson-Boman Mortuary manager Larry Essen also is put off by the idea, calling it "a gimmick."

"But that's fine," he said. "It's just a difference of opinion."

Essen agreed that pre-need funeral arrangements make sense.

Cool, cloudy weather continues

A cool, cloudy climate continues to cling to the Midland area, with no claims to clear. In other words, more of the same.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is expecting cloudy skies and a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight. Lows should be in the low 60s and south to southeast winds will blow 5 to 15 mph.

Friday's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. Highs in the mid 80s should be accompanied by south to southeast winds at 10-20 mph.

Wednesday's mild high of 88 couldn't compete with the all-time record for that date, 100 degrees in 1977. The overnight low of 67 was 26 degrees warmer than the record low reached in 1945.

Pilots vote to strike Continental

HOUSTON (AP) — About 200 Continental Airlines pilots meeting in Los Angeles unanimously agreed with earlier votes in Denver and Houston to strike rather than work for the carrier for less than half their previous pay, a union spokeswoman said.

Marilyn Wade said the strike vote would be relayed to a Houston meeting where a 15-member panel of Continental pilots union executives were expected to decide today on suspending service to the carrier.

The Master Executive Council of the Air Line Pilots Association was to meet at 8 a.m. CDT today and was expected to take up the strike motion, which was tabled at Wednesday's session pending results of the Los Angeles poll.

The latest mandate followed similar votes by pilots in Denver and Houston.

"This is something we want to march into together," said Gary Thomas, a spokesman for the Continental pilots in Houston.

Pilot captains, who previously made $89,400 annually, are being offered $43,000 a year under the new pact.

A spokesman for the Los Angeles pilots, in a recorded message, called the bankruptcy filing by Continental "a manipulation of the bankruptcy laws to deprive us of our jobs."

The Los Angeles group also said is supports the Air Line Pilots Association opposition to a Continental application to split its international operations.

"If that plan should succeed, you can expect replacement pilots to be hired," the spokesman said.

Debbie Powell, a spokeswoman for the Union of Flight Attendants, said she anticipated a joint statement from her group and the pilots today. She said it was a "safe assumption" that their decision on striking would be the same.

A company spokesman said the Denver bank which handles Continental Airlines' payroll is refusing to honor the carrier's paychecks, which means about 1,500 checks worth $1.5 million are in limbo.

United Bank of Denver stopped honoring the checks late last week, Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks said. Continental grounded its flights Saturday and asked a federal bankruptcy court for protection from creditors while it reorganized as a much smaller business. Flights resumed Tuesday.

"We have the money in our accounts to cover the checks, but the bank set off those funds because they are one of our credit banks," Hicks said. "We are going to ask the bankruptcy judge to free up those funds and allow us to clear our payrolls."

The bouncing checks were written to pilots and flight attendants between Sept. 15 and Sept. 20.

Hicks said he did not know when Continental would file its request to free the funds. He said United Bank did not notify Continental of its decision not to honor the paychecks and airline officials only discovered the checks were being returned Tuesday night.

United Bank spokeswoman Peg McKechnie said the bank had no comment.

Flight attendants who worked for Texas International Airlines before it merged with Continental were paid Sept. 20 for their work in August, said Linda Downing, spokeswoman for the Union of Flight Attendants. Attendants paid under the Continental contract before the merger got their last check on Sept. 15.

John Mazor, spokesman for the Air Line Pilots Association, said several of the Sept. 16 checks issued to pilots had bounced.

"We've got bills to pay," Ms. Downing said. "What do they expect us to do?"

A 47-member group representing each airline whose pilots were covered by the Air Line Pilots Association also planned to meet in Houston today and will consider grounding most of the nation's jetliners for "a day or two" to give a message "to the government and to the public" that the industry is in economic trouble because of airline deregulation.

"We'll be discussing two things," said Mazor. "A system of financial support for the Continental pilots and an industry-wide suspension of service."

Meanwhile, Texas Air Corp., parent firm of Continental, announced it was suspending the 4 cent per share quarterly dividend payment on its common stock. The firm, however, said it would pay the regular quarterly dividends on two issues of preferred stock.

Continental filed papers in federal bankruptcy court Saturday, asking protection from creditors while the airline is reorganized. President Frank Lorenzo announced that Continental had lost $471.9 million since January 1979.

In another industry development, Frank Borman, chairman of Eastern Airlines, warned employees this week that the carrier may go bankrupt unless they take a 15 percent pay cut.

Senate rejects War Powers plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today rejected 55-45 a Democratic proposal requiring President Reagan to call home the 1,600 U.S. Marines now in Lebanon unless he first explains in detail why they are there.

Democrats led by Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd Jr. had sought to require that Reagan, not Congress, invoke the 1973 War Powers Act, a Vietnam era legacy intended to limit the president's powers to send troops into a combat zone without authority from the House and Senate.

Under the Democratic proposal, further congressional authority to keep the Marines in Beirut would have been required after 60 days.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said Reagan has refused to obey the War Powers Act, whose authors intended "no more Vietnams, no more undeclared wars, no more presidential wars."

"The president has done everything in the world to avoid not just the letter of the law, but the intent of the law," Bumpers said shortly before the vote.

Byrd's proposal would have set much tougher limits on Reagan's authority to keep the Marines in Beirut than a compromise war powers resolution approved in the House on Wednesday.

Reagan has agreed to sign the compromise resolution, but only after declaring his constitutional objections to congressional limits on his authority as commander in chief of U.S. military forces.

The compromise agreement would permit the president to keep the Marines in Beirut for 18 months, and appears headed for certain, if narrow Senate approval.

Reagan has agreed to consult with congressional leaders if he decides to keep the Marines in Lebanon longer than 18 months, but stopped short of promising to request legislation extending his authority.

Sources said administration officials were lobbying heavily to make sure the compromise survives.

The Senate voting came a year and a day after the Marines were sent to Lebanon as part of a multinational peacekeeping force which includes troops from Great Britain, France and Italy.

In the debate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said 18 months is too long a time to give Reagan a free hand without more specific congressional authority and a clear idea of the mission of the American forces.

"If the Marines are there to win, we have too few," Bentsen said. "If they are there to die, we have too many."

The House vote to approve the resolution was 270-161, but it came only after an impassioned, personal appeal from Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. to his colleagues.

Jetliner lands at Beirut airport; U.S. Army technicians detained

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Lebanese jetliner landed at Beirut international airport today, hours after the Druse militia agreed to allow the field to reopen for the first time in more than a month.

Despite the concession by one of Lebanon's warring factions, Shiite Moslem militiamen detained two U.S. Army soldiers for about two hours after they made a wrong turn off a main road near the airport.

Public Works Minister Pierre Khoury ordered the airport to reopen for the first time since Aug. 28 after the four-man cease-fire supervision committee agreed on arrangements to ensure the safety of the airport and roads leading to it.

The first plane in, a Middle East Airlines flight from Jidda, Saudi Arabia, circled downtown Beirut four times before landing about 4:45 p.m. Motorists stopped their cars on the busy streets and joined pedestrians, shopkeepers and apartment dwellers looking skyward.

A U.S. military spokesman, Marine Maj. Robert Jordan, said the two Americans detained by the Shiites were Army technicians attached to the Marine peacekeeping force who turned by mistake into a Shiite neighborhood on Beirut's southern edge about 1 p.m.

Texans stir up interest in drought loan plan

Ranchers in the 23 West Texas counties declared a disaster will have the same access to this money as the farmers. Under the regulations now, farmers can more easily show the amount of losses required to qualify for a loan.

"One of the problems with the program is that it's not being used in West Texas," said Loeffler in a telephone interview from his office.

Loeffler and state officials have criticized Block for not touring the drought area in West Texas. But Block has backed off his stance and assured Loeffler "some high-ranking Washington officials from the Agriculture Department will be in West Texas next week to meet with farmers and ranchers." Their job is to make sure the revised standards are workable and to move the paperwork.

Midland is among the 23 West Texas counties that have been declared disaster areas because of the drought. Another three — Crockett, Glasscock and Irion — should be added soon.

Meeting with Block after the announcement was Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower who reportedly said the secretary he had not gone far enough. This latest move, he said, was "a step in the right direction" but that it's "not going to be the ultimate help." He urged Block to provide as feed the damaged corn stored in the Panhandle."

Loeffler criticized Hightower for not trying to get state aid for West Texas ranchers. "Maybe it's time (for Hightower) to go home to Texas and see what Texas has to offer."

Loeffler and a colleague, Bill Alexander, D-Arkansas, applied pressure to Block last week by drawing up an amendment that was placed on the budget's Continuing Resolution. If that resolution had been passed by the House, it would have forced Block into giving subsidies on feed purchased by farmers and ranchers or releasing federal grain in storage.

The plan announced Wednesday is a compromise between what Loeffler wanted and Block's testimony before the House Agriculture Committee that he wouldn't give any more drought aid.

If this project proves unworkable, said Loeffler, he'll be knocking on Block's door for the feed assistance.

The new plan is nationwide in scope, but the congressman, himself a rancher, feels it should help because of the lower interest rate and its immediate availability.

He said the administration also agreed not to contest a U.S. District Court decision that the Agriculture Department release $600 million in aid under the federal Economic Emergency Loan Program.

A federal judge recently ruled that Block's refusal to release the money was "arbitrary and capricious." Block had contended that $1.3 billion in federal operating loans was enough for farmers.

Loeffler noted Block still was unwilling to release that damaged grain stored in the Panhandle, which has been said could be used to feed livestock.

Loeffler believes the amendment forced Block to take some action. A new Continuing Resolution, minus the amendment, will go before the House and Loeffler said he will oppose it. Meanwhile, a similar amendment has been introduced by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, with John Tower, R-Texas, as co-sponsor.

Fighting Loeffler along with Block was David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, who had contended there was no money for such a program, especially feed subsidy.

"David has learned when I say I'm here to represent the people of West Texas, I'm not here with my hand out," said Loeffler. "David lost; we won."

Area ranchers, suppliers react to loan plan

Enos Howle, co-owner of Southwestern Livestock Auction, said the action has come too late. "People with cattle will go ahead and sell them."

He's seen a sharp increase in the number of cattle being sold in the past month. What used to average 1,000 head each week has gone up to 2,000. And last Tuesday he saw 2,300 head sold.

The cattle have been in fairly good shape, he said. And the prices ranchers are getting are about the same as last year's, maybe a little lower.

But the price of feed has jumped, according to Mays, who stressed that ranchers depend on grass to feed the cattle.

Howle has seen several ranchers sell-out completely in the last two weeks. These people, he said, can't do anything more on their ranches until the rain comes. Even then it will have to be enough to grow grass, and then they will have to restock.

"No one's going to use this loan program," said Mays. "We need grass. That's what's so silly about the loan program. You're putting more money in your cow than you will get out of it at today's market price."

Mays is one of those ranchers being forced to sell his herd of 300-400 cows. Ranching has been his family's business all their lives. "Dad's been in ranching 40 to 50 years," he said.

The decision to sell was hard. "These cows were young, only three to four years old," said Mays. "We had loans out on them thinking we could keep them for their lifetime."

Buying feed, even with the lower interest loans, costs too much. Mays said cake now costs $220 a ton, compared to $120 a ton three years ago, and a ton is devoured quickly.

Earnest Kiker, Midland County extension agent, said the lower interest is better than the higher prices. But it won't be of benefit to the drought conditions. "Whether it's 2 or 5 or 15 percent, you still have to pay off that note," he commented. And until the drought eases, paying off the loan will be difficult.

Releasing the grain might help ranchers, according to Mays, but that wouldn't come without a price tag also. "They're not going to be giving anything away. Anyone would be foolish to think the government is going to help them out. The government will get something out of it."

Nixon says economic, military aid needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon says Central America will achieve democratic stability only through a program even more ambitious than the $13.3 billion Marshall Plan that helped Europe recover from the devastation of World War II.

Nixon, summing up for reporters his closed-door testimony Wednesday before the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America, also said a massive U.S. economic aid program for the region must be coupled with continued military aid.

"It is not possible to have progress without having security and it is not possible to have security without having progress," Nixon said, with commission chairman Henry A. Kissinger standing at his side.

The scene in the State Department lobby was reminiscent of the 1970s: Nixon and his one-time foreign policy partner standing before microphones talking about a sensitive foreign policy issue. Except for a slight limp, Nixon, 70, seemed in good health.

Kissinger thanked Nixon for a "very comprehensive and extraordinarily thought-provoking presentation."

So impressive was Nixon, Kissinger said, that Nixon would be capable of writing the commission report for President Reagan by himself. The 12-member commission, formed in July, expects to have its policy recommendations completed by February.

Kissinger was expected to announce today plans for a commission trip to Central America next month.

In his remarks, Nixon stressed the same anti-communist stance that has been a hallmark of his long public career, warning that a Marxist victory in El Salvador would mean "another Soviet base in the Americas" and endorsing U.S.-backed military operations against Nicaragua's leftist goverment.

If the leftist guerrillas triumph in El Salvador, "the impact on the surrounding countries and on Mexico eventually could be enormous," he said.

But he said it would be a mistake for the United States to become obsessed with Marxism.

"The communists talk about problems. Too often we just talk about communists," Nixon said.

He suggested the U.S.-sponsored postwar European recovery effort was far simpler than the task required in Central America. "The problem in Latin America is not recovery," he said. "The problem is getting started."

A bulldozer pushes blocks of cheese into place to be destroyed and covered at the Orange County landfill Wednesday. Possibly as much as 24 tons of cheese intended for local distribution through the Federal surplus food program was destroyed because of possible spoilage.

Cheese buried after spoilage

BEAUMONT (AP) — A private relief agency may have to pay for 24.4 tons of government surplus cheddar cheese that had to be buried after it spoiled in an airconditioned but unrefrigerated warehouse, a state official said.

The Texas Department of Human Resources was investigating whether Programs for Human Services was negligent and financially liable for replacing the cheese, with a retail value of $122,100, said Harold Cartmill, regional food services director for the DHR.

Programs for Human Services had been holding the 1,221 cases of cheese for distribution to needy families in the Southeast Texas area, but was forced to bury it Tuesday and Wednesday at an Orange County landfill because some cases had bloated and the cheese began to stink.

The cheese, some of which had been stored for three months, was kept at 60 degrees — 15 degrees too high — said Julia Lee, state food and drug inspector for the Texas Health Department.

"It was not held at the proper temperature," she said.

The Federal Food and Storage Guide sets the proper storage temperature at 36 to 40 degrees with a maximum of 45 degrees, Ms. Lee said.

The agency's directors, who said they didn't know why the commodity was stored improperly, agreed Tuesday to destroy "all the cheese that was questionable" rather than go through the time (and expense) of testing it" to see if any was still safe to eat, Ms. Lee said.

She also supervised destruction of more than 33 cases of butter valued at $1,880. Agency's directors say it was damaged after Hurricane Alicia knocked out power to the cooler where it was stored.

However, she said the agency was not responsible for the loss of the butter.

Programs for Human Services director Don Johnson told the Beaumont Enterprise he didn't know why the free cheese was not kept refrigerated.

And he acknowledged that the agency planned last week to distribute some of it — despite the warnings of local health offial and employees — because the U.S. Food and Drug Administration had said the week before that it was safe.

However, The agency decided against distributing the cheese when the employees persisted in their complaints, Johnson said.

The FDA official who handled the inquiry, Bill Sedgwick, told the Enterprise that he was given incomplete information.

Four arrested for sexual abuse

BURNET (AP) — A former Marble Falls police officer was among six people indicted on sexual abuse charges involving five children ages 2 to 11, authorities said.

The alleged acts took place during the last 13 months, Assistant District Attorney Sam Oatman Jr. said Wedenesday. The cases, involving both boys and girls, had been under investigation since July 30, he said.

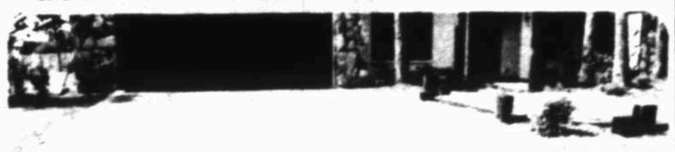

The investigation began after the children "began to do some talking" when Gerry Herring, 21, of Marble Falls, was indicted May 17 on a rape charge, Oatman said.

Herring, who is free on bond, is accued of raping an 8-year-old girl he volunteered to babysit on Sept. 4, 1982, Oatman said. The girl is Herring's relative, the prosecutor said.

Six people were named in seven indictments returned Tuesday by a Burnet County grand jury, Oatman said.

Economy causing 'big name' companies to collapse

NEW YORK (AP) — American companies are collapsing at the fastest rate since the Depression. Yet many people do not notice until the ax falls on such "big name" corporate giants as Continental Airlines and Baldwin-United Corp.

Radical shifts in the economic landscape are toppling all kinds of businesses: car dealers, insurers, banks, oil companies, lumber mills and drug stores.

More than 20,000 companies were forced to close their doors or to reorganize under court protection in the first eight months of the year, according to Dun & Bradstreet Corp. That is up 26 percent from the same period in 1982.

Continental, which entered bankruptcy proceedings on Saturday, and Baldwin-United, which followed on Monday, are the two biggest bankruptcy cases of the year.

Here are some questions and answers to help explain the bankruptcy process:

Q. How can a company such as Continental be bankrupt if it owns a fleet of airplanes?

A. In a legal sense, no company or individual is technically bankrupt until a bankruptcy judge says so. Continental, then, is not bankrupt. It is not even broke; the company had $50 million in cash and securities easily convertible to cash when it filed a petition in bankruptcy court in Houston on Saturday. It also has sizeable assets, such as its airplanes, that could have been converted to cash.

Q. What is Continental doing in bankruptcy court, then?

A. Like many other companies before it, Continental entered bankruptcy court in order to gain court protection from creditors while it attempts to reorganize. Unlike most others before it, Continental said the main reason it needed that protection was excessive labor costs, not a lack of cash to pay creditors.

By entering the court Continental was relieved not only of making payments on its $650 million in long-term debt, but also of making severance payments to the 7,800 employees it laid off. That could save Continental million of dollars a year.

Q. Why are so many companies filing for bankruptcy?

A. The reasons vary, of course, but among the common sources of trouble for U.S. business is the sick state of the economy over the past few years. Interest rates soared to record heights in 1980 and have remained unusually high ever since; fuel prices doubled in 1979 and have fallen only modestly this year; corporate profit margins last year were the lowest in 30 years. All this, combined with the effects of deregulation in many industries, has pushed the bankruptcy rate in this country to the highest level since the Depression year 1932.

Map man tells about stars

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — He knows when Jimmy Stewart walks his dog and what Barbra Streisand has for breakfast, and he doesn't care if the stars gripe about gawkers. As a curbside salesman of maps to the stars' homes, Vincent Cravero knows a bit of ogling is good for publicity.

"We make the stars. They don't make us," says Cravero.

"It's better that they see a few cars passing in front of their homes," he says. "That way they know they're still in business. Otherwise you're a dead duck."

Cravero has been a fixture on the Hollywood map-selling scene for almost 10 years, earning about half the $5 price for each "Guide to Starland Estates and Mansions" that he sells.

But the former disc jockey and band and theater manager does more than sell maps.

Sitting on a lawn chair clad in a T-shirt, jeans and tennis shoes, he provides curbside gossip for the Midwestern masses and foreign tourists who stop in their campers and rental cars.

"Ringo Starr left his house and there's just regular rich people living there now," Cravero tells Cookie and Dean from Illinois. "...No. 14 is God — George Burns. ... Lucy (Ball) comes out sometimes. Forget Johnny Carson's house. It's not visible. ... Raquel Welch just sold her place. Wanna know what she got for it?"

He also tells tourists when Stewart walks his dog, the time Miss Ball is likely to pass through her front door and the type of sports car Burt Reynolds drives.

Cravero says he is updated constantly on Hollywood's real estate transactions by his loyal "emissaries," including deliverymen, swimming pool builders and gardeners.

He also says he personally trails celebrities when he spots them and even rummages through their garbage to learn their buying and eating habits.

"People like to know what their stars eat and what they drink," he says. "Streisand just bought a coffee maker. They want to know that. So I try to give them more than what's listed here on the map."

Cravero's customers are a varied lot.

"They even come up in Rolls-Royces and buy maps from me," he says. "I've had rich and poor. I've even had sheiks."

Japanese tourists are big customers, asking most commonly about Paul Newman but also liking Charles Bronson and Kirk Douglas, Cravero says. The French are fond of Miss Ball and Jerry Lewis, while Midwesterners want to know about Miss Ball, Stewart and Peter Falk.

Retired federal justice still busy with legal activities

WASHINGTON (AP) — When not active as a federal judge, international arbitrator, lecturer, recording artist or member of two presidential commissions these days, Potter Stewart enjoys retirement.

"I've never been one for hobbies and such, never was much good in manual training. So it's probably a good thing to stay active in my work," says Stewart, 68, who left the Supreme Court two years ago.

His work, and great love, remains the law. Much of Stewart's post-retirement life is a reflection of his 23 years as a member of the nation's highest court:

—He has served as a volunteer reader of textbook materials for blind law students, working for the Washington chapter of the not-for-profit Recording for the Blind Inc.

"It's not easy work," Stewart said in a recent interview. "You have to be very precise. One slip-up and you start it all over.

"Some of the material is Supreme Court decisions. And I dissented from some of those," he added with a smile.

—He has been a law school guest lecturer and visiting scholar at Yale, Michigan and Columbia universities, and may lecture at the University of Virginia Law School next year.

"That keeps me young," he said. "The students always have new ideas and perspectives."

—Stewart, as do many retired federal judges, has pinch-hit as a member of three different federal appeals court panels to help decide cases. None was a landmark in the law, but in one the retired justice fired off a spirited dissent disagreeing with two fellow jurists.

—He will travel to London next month and to Paris in January as part of a three-member international arbitration tribunal trying to settle a dispute between the Royal Dutch-Shell Group, a British-Dutch conglomerate, and the government of Qatar, a tiny and oil-rich Middle Eastern nation.

—He has been appointed to serve on President Reagan's Commission on Central America, a 12-member panel headed by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger that is expected to issue a report in February offering long-range recommendations on American policy.

Stewart said he told the White House "I would be entering this thing in total ignorance. I'm told the euphemism for that is 'going in with an open mind.'"

—He also is a member of a commission appointed by Reagan to study organized crime, a panel headed by Irving Kaufman, a federal appeals court judge in New York City.

Stewart bucked tradition on July 3, 1981, when he retired from his life-tenured job in good health.

A desire to see more of his five New Hampshire grandsons, whose ages range from four to 10, played a major role in the retirement decision. But the spark was provided by a schoolgirl's letter written as a class assignment.

Watt's dismissal may be urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a White House pronouncement that President Reagan considers the matter of Interior Secretary James Watt's latest gaffe "closed," the Republican-run Senate may be on the verge of approving a resolution urging his dismissal.

And House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois, claiming Watt's remarks have been an embarrassment to the administration, says he believes a resignation by Watt "would not be all that far off the mark."

Reagan's chief spokesman, Larry Speakes, said Wednesday that Watt intends to stay on as secretary of the interior, despite the cries of protest raised by his characterization last week of an advisory panel as "a black ... a woman, two Jews and a cripple."

However, Republican sources said a survey conducted privately by Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., suggested considerably more opposition to Watt within his own party than registered publicly by the 13 GOP senators who have either called for his dismissal or suggested he consider resigning.

At the same time, Senate Democrats in a party caucus voted without dissent to support the resolution by Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., stating it was the "sense of the Senate" that Reagan should request Watt's resignation "without delay."

Innocent Jackson gets anonymous check for $10,000

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A man who spent 4½ years in prison for two attacks he didn't commit has received a $10,000 check from an anonymous donor.

The gift from a Milwaukee resident went to William Bernard Jackson, who was released from prison in 1982 after police charged Columbus physician Dr. Edward F. Jackson Jr. with the two rapes.

An unmarked envelope containing a cashier's check made out to William Jackson arrived this week at the offices of The Columbus Dispatch, along with an unsigned letter.

"I don't believe this. Look at this," Jackson, 31, said as he tore open the envelope and saw the check.

"All he's trying to do is achieve the end result and that's to help Mr. Jackson get back on his feet.

Sisters meet in market

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pat Speer walked into a small-town supermarket and got more than she bargained for: a reunion in the checkout line with the sister she had lost track of 18 years ago.

"My husband said we made quite a scene," Mrs. Speer said Wednesday of last week's chance meeting with her younger sister, Madeline Cooke. "I was oblivious to everybody else. It was a real high, the feeling and the love. We (had been) very close. It was still there."

Mrs. Speer had gone to the store in Terra Linda, a Marin County community about 15 miles north of San Francisco, to buy housecleaning supplies. Her sister, who moved to Marin County less than a month ago, was looking for bargains on salmon.

Mrs. Cooke was standing in line in front of Mrs. Speer when their eyes met.

"I saw her look at me first. I kind of did a double take. I thought, 'My God, those eyes are familiar,'" Mrs. Speer said. "I said, 'Are you Mickey?' And she said, 'Are you Patti?'"

Then came the hugging, the laughter, the tears.

The sisters, adopted by different families when their biological mother couldn't afford to keep them, had once been "very close," said Mrs. Speer. But they lost track of each other when Mrs. Speer ran away at age 16.

Their reunion "was meant to happen," said Mrs. Speer. On Tuesday, "I bumped into her in the library. If we hadn't met in the supermarket, we would have met in the library."

After hours of catching up, the sisters discovered they shared an intense desire to find their biological families. Both had been searching for about two years.

School bus driver charged

MIAMI (AP) — The driver of an "extremely dangerous" school bus has been charged with operating unsafe equipment after the vehicle blew a tire and rolled over, injuring 37 youngsters aboard, one seriously, troopers say.

Sarita Taylor, 55, was charged Wednesday after the privately owned bus she was driving overturned on a rain-slicked highway west of Miami, troopers said. Four of six tires on the bus were bald and it had no state inspection sticker, according to Florida Highway Patrol Sgt. J.D. Johnson. One student was hospitalized with a possible skull fracture, while the others were treated and released, officials said.

The children were mostly first- and second-graders.

Longshoremen to be questioned

BOSTON (AP) — Longshoremen protesting the downing of a Korean Air Lines jet with 269 people aboard will be asked why they should not be held in contempt for defying a judge's order to unload a Soviet ship.

The Soviet vessel, the Novomirod, sailed Wednesday for Canada with most of the 2,700 tons of plywood destined for the port of Boston still aboard, an official said. Dockworkers stopped unloading the ship Monday, prompting U.S. District Judge Walter J. Skinner to order them to comply with their contract.

But the order had no apparent effect and Skinner set hearings for today and Friday, a court official said. Jim McNamara, an International Longshoremen's Union official, said, "Like other Americans, they're free to exercise their freedom of speech."

Man faces prison for fake death

NEW YORK (AP) — A man who says he was "fed up" because he couldn't get worker's compensation for job-related injuries faces up to 15 years in prison and $8,000 in fines after pleading guilty to federal fraud charges for faking his death at sea.

Robert Granberg, 51, admitted to a judge Wednesday that he dived from a fishing boat off New Jersey in 1981 and swam to shore, leaving his wife and two friends to vouch for his death.

Granberg's wife, Judith Brent, could be sentenced to a maximum 10 years in prison and $6,000 in fines after admitting she collected $200,000 in insurance claims after having him declared legally dead. Most of the money has been recovered, officials said.

Lawyer wants venue change

BALTIMORE (AP) — The lawyer for a white police officer accused in the shooting death of a black motorcyclist says he will seek a change of venue because of massive publicity and "political overtones."

Daniel Shanahan pleaded innocent Wednesday to manslaughter and weapons charges in the death July 13 of Booker Lee Lancaster, 49, during a traffic dispute. An initial report that Shanahan shot Lancaster twice after he punched the off-duty officer and pulled a hunting knife was amended after later investigation showed the knife never left its sheath.

"This thing has taken on political overtones," said lawyer James White after Wednesday's hearing.

Convicted rapist sent from hospital to prison

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A judge, asked to release a rapist to an outpatient program after the man had spent six years in a state mental hospital, instead decided to order the offender to prison.

Anthony Eugene Hughey, 27, of Pasadena, was sentenced Wednesday to 10 years, four months, in state prison.

After two days of hearings, Superior Court Judge Ronald Stevens told Hughey that he was convinced "we can't devise a program on probation for you that would adequately protect the community."

Stevens had the options of releasing Hughey on probation, returning him to Atascadero State Hospital or sending him to a state prison.

Bishops gathering at Vatican

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II today opened a world conference of Roman Catholic bishops who will tackle several nagging problems facing the church.

After a brief prayer meeting at the Sistine Chapel, the pontiff led a 15-minute procession of more than 200 cardinals, archbishops and bishops through St. Peter's Square to the basilica for the celebration of a solemn Mass.Thousands of faithful applauded as the pope approached the entrance of the basilica.

Among the issues to be discussed at the synod is the dramatic and continuing drop in confessions by Catholics.

The church encourages the faithful to frequently confess their sin, regardless of its gravity, to a priest in an individual "rite of reconciliation" to receive forgiveness.

Shaking hand with Pope John Paul II, left, is Polish primate Cardinal Josef Glemp. Glemp will participate in the Bishops World Synod.

Mass held for slain leader

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Some 1,500 mourners attended a Mass for slain opposition leader Benigno Aquino today while more than 1,000 students banged cans and tossed firecrackers across town in a "noise barrage" protesting the government of President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

The priest celebrating the Roman Catholic Mass urged mourners to demand the rights which Aquino fought for. He said Aquino, like Jesus Christ, had liberated them.

Prior to the memorial Mass, about 150 office workers and a few executives marched through the suburban financial district to the Church of St. Santuario de San Antonio. The service marked the 40th day since the assassination.

"net us recommit ourself to the purpose Ninoy (Aquino) came to accomplish... for Filipinos to assert their rights," the Rev. Jose Planco, a Jesuit, said in his homily. "Before he came we were afraid to exercise these rights. But the death of Jesus Christ and Ninoy has liberated us."

It was the latest in about a dozen memorial Masses held for Aquino since his assassination Aug. 21 moments after he stepped from an airplane returning him from three years of voluntary exile in the United States. His death triggered widespread demonstrations against Marcos' 18-year rule and rioting that killed 11 people.

Lax security reports refuted

LONDON (AP) — The British government's Northern Ireland Office has denied newspaper reports that lax security and possible bribery were to blame for the armed breakout of 38 IRA guerrillas from Belfast's Maze prison.

In a statement issued Wednesday night, it also denied press reports that Northern Ireland Secretary James Prior has threatened to resign if his parliamentary under-secretary, Nicholas Scott, who is in charge of prisons in the strife-torn province, is forced to quit over the affair.

Britain's chief inspector of prisons, Sir James Hennessy, is in Northern Ireland conducting an inquiry into Sunday's breakout, in which one prison guard was killed and six others wounded.

Thousands of troops and police are continuing their hunt for the 19 guerrillas still on the run.

Exhange program revived

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger announced today that China and the United States have agreed to revive a program of military exchanges between the nations' armies beginning next year.

The news followed Weinberger's announcement Wednesday that the United States was "fully prepared" to sell defensive weapons and military-related technology to China in a move to expand military cooperation.

Building outrage

Midland City Council passed a resolution Tuesday that would be truly meaningful if every city in this country would do the same. It embodies the moral outrage of a nation, measured at the grassroots level.

But in addition to the expression of disgust everyday Americans feel for the downing of the Korean Airlines jet early this month, the resolution also demands compensation for the families of the Americans who died in that inhumane act. If compensation is not received from the Soviet Union, the resolution asks the United States government to seize Soviet property in this country, to forfeit the Soviets' rights of diplomacy and to withdraw American officials from the Soviet Union. In other words, it says Midland's leaders aren't satisfied yet with the punishment doled out to the Soviets.

Mayor G. Thane Akins said the original idea for cities to respond to the Soviet aggression came from the U.S. Conference of Mayors. After being somewhat modified by Akins and others locally, the resolution was submitted to the council for action. It passed. Unanimously.

The resolution — if adopted by thousands of American communities — is just what's needed to bring pressure on the Soviet Union. The bad boys in the Kremlin wouldn't think twice about one resolution expressing displeasure from one American city. But what if President Reagan received thousands of resolutions from communities all over the nation.

The Soviets would find out about it; there are enough KGB spies at the United Nations to guarantee that. And when they witnessed this outrage, maybe it would become clear to them that the American people aren't going to let this insane act be swept under a diplomatic rug.

That support would make it easier for President Reagan to be tougher in responding to this atrocity because he would have the weight of the entire nation behind him — spelled out in resolutions.

Maybe the feeling that our hands are tied in responding to Soviet aggression is just that — a feeling.

'Uncle' gets tough

The federal government is about to get tough with 600,000 persons who owe it money.

Starting Nov. 1, it will turn over to private credit bureaus the names of those who have not made some agreement to pay off their delinquent government loans, which total $44.3 billion.

The new system will make the debtors sit up and take notice — and, we hope, make arrangements to get square with the government. Not only will the system make it tough for them to get credit from stores, banks and finance companies in the private sector, it will give all government offices, for the first time, a means of checking credit.

Now, the government has no credit information center of its own. If someone refuses to pay off a federal student loan, for instance, and applies for a government housing loan, there's a good chance the application will be accepted.

The new system is a step in the right direction. If the government can pick up $44 billion here and $44 billion there, who knows, maybe it can make some payments on its own national debt of $1.4 trillion.

Another View:

Economic challenge

Some say America is in its second industrial revolution, that we are moving swiftly from manufacturing to service led with a ring in our nose called "technology."

This is transforming the job market into skilled and unskilled, rich and poor categories. The divisions are not new, but some observers say the gaps are growing. They fear revolution will result because some people adjust better than others, creating an automatic inequality.

Economist George Gilder believes a dynamic economy boosted by technology, "creates wealth which will be invested in areas where people are paid to do things technology can't do." Although people fear this will create accelerating upheaval, most scholars see a gradual change.

Although it may take time to see the impact, people who adapt will thrive and those who resist will fall by the wayside. Education and attitudes will separate the winners and losers. Those who emphasize self-sufficiency, the work ethic, positive thinking, etc ... will win. Those who rely on the solutions and protections of government and collectives will lose.

The unskilled and undereducated, by choice of circumstances, could fall further into the abyss of despair, and society may find the welfare burden growing. However, the Bureau of Labor Statistics believes there will be more low-skill, low-pay service opportunities — janitors, sales clerks, secretaries, cashiers, nurses aids, etc.

Most of America's work force has been traditionally employed at average or below-average wages. Despite this reality, expectations have been intensified by politicians, the media and unions. Everyone believes he is worth steelworkers' wages. Anything less is embarrassing and unacceptable.

Future economic justice depends greatly on how the large body of middle-income, semi-skilled workers adjust to automation. This is where liberal economists see the largest deviations. How many will educate themselves to hold onto their incomes and how many will slip into low-paying jobs will direct our political path.

If automation is aimed at low-skilled functions, upward mobility is possible. If, however, employers use automation to reduce the cost of skilled positions, then the displacement impact could be severe.

Politics enters the picture when government disrupts the survival of the fittest law by distributing wealth regardless of the workers' contribution to the common good. Socialists believe peace is obtained by preventing classism, reducing the inequality between those who achieve and are proportionately rewarded and those who don't and are jealous enough to create rebellion.

Thus the smoothness of the transition from manufacturing to service relies on our ability to accept natural and fair inequalities.

— The Sacramento Union

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Computers zapping Pentagon

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon has blundered into the computer age with all the recklessness of the legendary Light Brigade.

Jack Anderson

Computer contracts have been bursting like shrapnel, scattering dollars to the winds. The cost to the taxpayers is already measured in the hundreds of millions of dollars. Here are three outrageous examples of sky-high overruns in Pentagon computer contracts, all with the same supplier — the Boeing Co.:

— In 1980, the Army signed a contract with Boeing to streamline recruiting programs. The intial cost was supposed to be $8.5 million over a five-year period. Three years later, the cost estimate now stands at a whopping $120 million, with no hard final figure in sight. The Army expected to pay no more than $10,000 a month for the computer service; yet the first month's bill from Boeing was $1.3 million — nearly a 13,000 percent overrun.

— During the same period, the Navy awarded Boeing a contract for similar services. The original cost estimate was $524,000 over a three-and-a-half year period. The Navy now has revised that estimate up to $13 million. The monthly cost of the service was supposed to be $12,000; the first month's bill was $350,000.

— The Air Force gave Boeing a five-year contract for teleprocessing services, at a total estimated cost of $426,000. The contract is only about a year old, so no exact figures on cost overruns are available yet. But in a letter to Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., the General Accounting Office predicted: "This contract could cost the government far more than has been estimated."

Congressional investigators told my associates Indy Badhwar and Donald Goldberg that the main reason for the huge cost overruns is quite simply bad management — or none at all — by Pentagon officials responsible for the computer programs. They don't know what they're doing or what the computers should do.

An analysis prepared for the General Services Administration explained why this problem may exist in all federal agencies: Program managers' tenure is often no more than 18 or 24 months, so they're looking for quick fixes instead of long-term results. Furthermore, their backgrounds have not prepared them to cope with high-technology problems — and the computer field is still so new it's hard even to find outside consultants who know what they're doing.

Meanwhile, the GAO has recommended that all three services' contracts with Boeing be terminated and put out for competitive bids. The Army and Navy have shown a willingness to heed the GAO's suggestion. But the Air Force "has remained firm in its support of the contract," a GAO memo said, adding: "We believe the Air Force is wrong."

SOME JUNKYARD: President Reagan campaigned on a promise to clean out waste and fraud in government agencies by appointing inspectors general who were as mean as junkyard dogs. A principal target of Republican wrath was the scandal-ridden General Services Administration.

It now appears that the GSA's inspector general, Joseph A. Sickon, is more intent on turning his investigators into well-groomed poodles than into bare-fanged watchdogs.

He recently ordered 32 auditors and office directors to attend a two-day training course (at $309 a head) that GSA insiders refer to as a "finishing school for etiquette training."

The official title of the course was "Effective Presentation and Behavior Style Recognition." In his written justification for the $9,888 expenditure, Sickon wrote that his office "has an immediate need for training of its top management staff in the theory and practice" of bureaucratic behavior.

The course, described as "intensive" in a GSA memo, consists of oral, audio and video presentations designed to prepare Sickon's sleuths "to present major briefings, conduct exit interviews and lead discussion groups, including situations where the audience could be hostile or negative."

According to an internal document, the first session focuses on the use of eyes and voice, the second on the use and positioning of feet, hips and arms. Other seminar subjects include Behavioral Styles, the Art of Listening, Adaptive Role Plays and something mysteriously called I Speak Instrument. (Could that be pidgin English for telephone?)

A high GSA official insisted that the two-day course had nothing to do with etiquette. "This is training in communications skills," he said. "The course is on how to prepare for briefings and how to give them."

Another high-ranking official countered sourly: "This is a training course to teach auditors how to point their feet."

Footnote: Meanwhile, a congressional committee is looking into a problem that could be related to Sickon's apparent infatuation with style over substance. The Senate subcommittee on government management is concerned about morale and personnel turnover in the IG's office.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, the subcommittee chairman, noted that two deputy assistant inspectors general and two top assistant inspectors general for investigations have left, and numerous other supervisors and professional personnel have either left, transferred or were planning to leave.

Maybe they didn't like having to learn parlor tricks.

GEORGE F. WILL

Recovery just tax hike away?

WASHINGTON — Looking, as is her habit, at a far horizon, Margaret Thatcher sees a Britain made virtuous by ordeal, and then made prosperous by its virtues — thrift, industriousness, entrepreneurial daring. But as yet, after considerable ordeal, the evidence of renewal is less statistical than anecdotal.

George F. Will

There are many stories of management and labor driven by hard times to buckle down to new efficiencies. But growth, employment and investment are disappointing.

Thatcher's recovery (such as it is), like Reagan's, is driven by consumers, not investors, and that was not the plan. Productivity in manufacturing is rising (up 17 percent since 1980, better than in Japan), but that happens when recession washes away the least efficient. Britain's productivity remains 30 percent behind Europe's average.

During the 1970s wages rose 346 percent, productivity just 26 percent. The union and management attitudes responsible for that have been changed, which is a significant Thatcher achievement. But during the recession Britain's industrial production dropped three times more than the average for industrial nations, and real gross national product is still slightly below what it was when Thatcher took office in 1979. Forecasters expect GNP growth to be just 2 percent in 1983 and less in 1984, when unemployment, now 12.5 percent, may rise.

Thatcher came to power talking about "rolling back the frontiers of the corporate state." But although she has sold or reduced many public enterprises (500,000 municipal housing units, 12 percent of all civil servants, 100,000 workers from the nationalized steel corporation), the frontiers remain basically unrolled.

Critics say she is like Mr. Gradgrind (in Dickens' "Hard Times"), who believed that the good Samaritan was a bad economist. But in rhetoric and policies she accepts the "social-market economy." That phrase is favored by her critics as they try to seem different without disputing her indisputable premise. That premise is that Britain's welfare state can not be paid for by the British economy without making the economy sluggish.

A "social market economy" is just what exists in every developed nation. It is a system where market forces are tempered by what Ronald Reagan calls — approvingly — a "safety net" of welfare-state policies.

Thatcher, like Reagan, inherited, and will bequeath to successors, a "social-market economy." She, like Reagan, never sought, never got and will never seek a mandate for radical surgery on the welfare state. She has tried to prune it a bit, but it has broken her shears — with help from traditional Tory paternalists.

Spending on the National Health Service is up 7.7 percent in real terms, education spending per child is up 5 percent. Unemployment benefits will soon be higher than they were under Labor. That may help explain why unemployment cost Thatcher so little in the election, and why you can eat in London restaurants for months without meeting an English waiter.

Reagan could take a correspondence course from Thatcher in the art of praising free markets, entrepreneurship, minimal government and the rest of Republican values, including — drum roll, please — balanced budgets. When I first met her, in 1976, I decided she had made a mistake being born 4,500 miles too far east. She would have made a magnificent Republican senator from Oklahoma, but she was, I thought, improbable as leader of Britain's Conservatives. She defines conservatism as most Republicans do, but as few Tories ever have. She defines it in terms of individualism and a light state — low taxes for a slim public sector.

Collectivism in Britain is at least as much the legacy of Conservatives as of socialists. Clement Attlee's postwar Labor government built on institutional and even ideological foundations laid by Conservatives. The Americanization of British Conservatism is a Thatcher achievement.

In fact, although she is a radical Tory, she is a traditional Republican — perhaps more so than Reagan. Unable to cut spending as much as she desires (it now is 43.5 percent of GNP, up from 40.5 percent when she took office), she has raised taxes as a percentage of GNP (from 35.3 to 39.1) in order to hold down the deficit. Britain now has the smallest deficit of any Western nation: 2.75 percent of GNP. (The U.S. deficit is 6 percent.)

She believes what Republicans said for 30 years — what they said until (recently) it became impolitic. That is, she believes that large deficits are a cause of high interest rates, and are so disruptive of capital markets that higher taxes are justified, as a nasty last resort, to reduce deficits. If Thatcher's program does not produce growth soon, or if Reagan's recovery aborts soon, there will be new heat to the intramural argument among conservatives concerning which is worse, tax increases or huge deficits.

LETTERS

Number for professionals

To The Editor:

In response to D.P. Miller's letter in a recent Sunday paper, we did not release the telephone number for the poison control center for Mrs. Miller's babysitter, because the control center has specifically requested that we not give out the number published in Mrs. Miller's letter. The reasons that the poison control center did not choose to list their number and requested that we not give it out are: This is the only 800 "emergency" number that the center can currently fund and it must serve the entire state. They intended for this number to be utilized by hospitals, clinics and physicians that have established the "emergency" and have obtained the information pertinent for diagnosis and treatment to best benefit the victim and maximize the effectiveness of the emergency line.

Mr. John Thompson at the poison control center, located in Galveston, verified these reasons to me. He may be reached by calling (409) 765-1420 or (713) 654-1701. These numbers are not listed locally, but Mr. Thompson requests that they be published for the benefit of those with questions.

These are several steps to be taken in the event of poisoning. Most important is prevention — keep all dangerous household products and medications safely stored and keep a reference book for poisonings with first aid instructions and common antidotes for household products that may be abused.

If there is a dramatic reaction, the victim should be taken to the hospital emergency room immediately — there is not time for phone calls! We have an excellent emergency room, with a very professional staff to treat these acute emergencies. The hospital emergency staff knows the exact information necessary for the poison control center to quickly diagnose and advise appropriate treatment. This maximizes the speed of proper treatment and allows the "emergency" line to be free for the next emergency.

If the victim is in no apparent distress, it is appropriate to call the minor emergency clinics or your family physician for assistance and information. In most minor cases they are able to advise and/or render treatment without calling the poison control center, thus leaving the emergency line available for the most acute cases. If there is ever any doubt, go immediately to the hospital emergency room!

The emergency line was established to provide an immediate reference center for medical professionals treating emergencies and not to dispense information at large. Utilize your hospital emergency room and minor emergency clincs, they are professionally staffed and are able to maximize the use of the emergency line to the poison control center for the benefit of all.

Ticket 'em!

To The Editor:

There is a great lack of respect for drivers in downtown Midland. Jaywalking pedestrians carry the attitude that they have the right-of-way on our increasingly busy downtown streets.

During peak traffic hours (8-9 a.m.; 11 a.m.-1 p.m.; 4-5 p.m.), it is impossible to travel the downtown area without having to stop every half block for jaywalking pedestrians. The main areas of concern are on Big Spring Street between Ohio and Illinois; Texas Avenue between Big Spring Street and Colorado; Loraine between Missouri and Highway 80; and Highway 80 between Main and the Big Spring Street underpass. There may be other areas of concern, but these seem more critical.

I'm not a speed demon that hates pedestrians and even I have jaywalked at one time or another. My main concern is centered around downtown Midland where even I abide by the simplest of traffic laws. On numerous occasions I have had to brake suddenly for jaywalking pedestrians. What makes it worse, while sitting in my car in a passenger loading zone, a patrolman driving one of those one-man meter cars orders me to "move it!" He obviously failed to notice or chose to disregard the three women jaywalking in front of my car.

The problem is well out of hand. Midland's vehicle population has grown entirely too large for downtown drivers to have to brake for inconsiderate pedestrians.

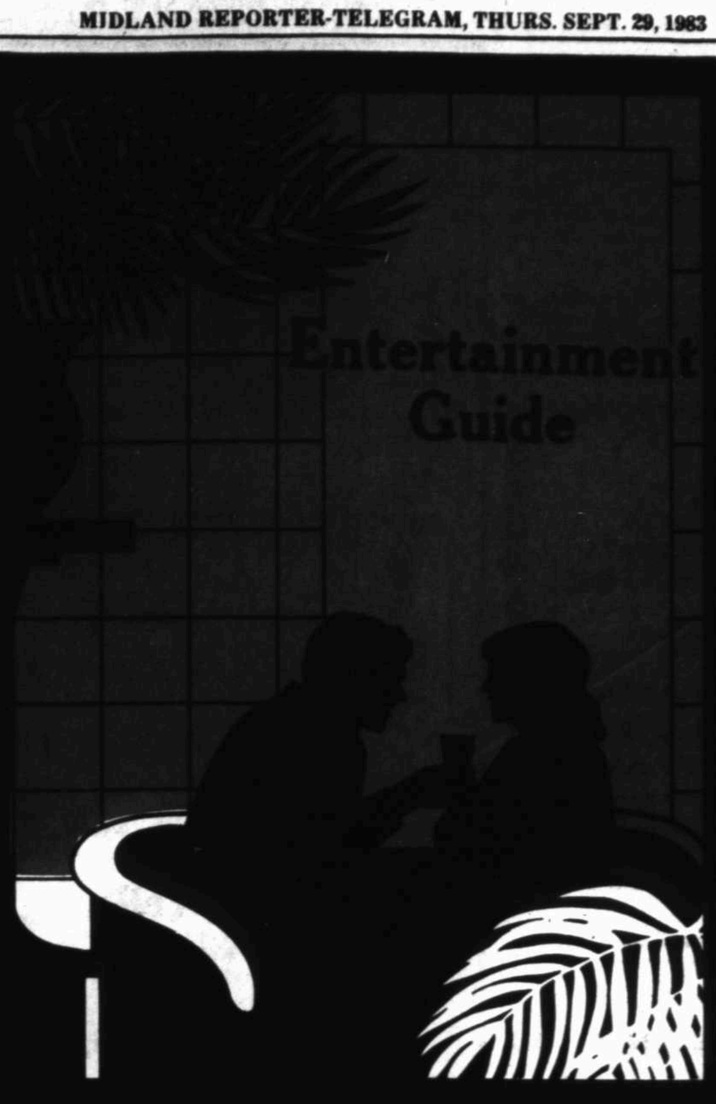

I'm all for short cuts and time saving methods, but unless our police department starts issuing "example" tickets or the pedestrians decide to be a little more energetic by walking that extra half block, a very serious traffic accident between vehicle and pedestrian is inevitable. By the way, the latter solution would easily satisfy everyone.

Shenanigan's Offers Excellance for Guests

The restaurant business is a demanding business. There is a fine line which separates simply a "good" restaurant from an excellent one. On one side of this line should be good food and good service. But, although this is a basic ingredient, it is just not enough to make a restaurant excellent. An excellent restaurant comes from a true concern for customer satisfaction and particular attention to small details.

Shenanigan's 3330 W. Illinois in Midland, certainly qualifies as an excellent restaurant. They have been in Midland for 5 years, and managers Steve Kempton and Bob Woody pride themselves on the fact that Shenanigan's has been serving Midland some of the finest food for that amount of time. Shenanigan's is partly locally owned, and after 2 years in management, Bob and Steve are getting to know Midland on a first name basis. Their concern for their guests is passed on and is evident in each and every staff member.

The menu at Shenanigan's is small enough to allow each and every meal to be hand prepared in our kitchen. We use only top quality beef, cut right here in our own kitchen. We have the freshest seafood available -- our live Maine lobster is flown in every week. Even our salad bar, almost every item is farm-fresh, everything is pruchased locally, and every piece is prepared daily in our kitchen. Again, every item in our menu is fresh and hand-prepared, from the delicious prime rib, live Maine Lobster, and Alaskan king crab, right down to the whole grain bread, purchased from Lone Star Bakery in San Antonio. We refuse to serve simply good food: If we can't be excellent, we won't serve it.

One of the other main reasons for Shenanigan's excellence is their employees. You are not a customer at Shenanigan's, you are a guest. Every employee is hand trained, knows his job, and enjoys his work. Upper level employees have worked their way up, so they know the importance of team work among all employees. There is very little turnover at Shenanigan's due to excellent spirit and morale, and it shows in the quality work each employee puts out. Bob or Steve (or both) are always on hand for personal supervision, and they will personally do their best to see that no guest leaves unhappy.

Anyone can claim excellence, but you are the true judge. Try Shenanigan's. You'll see what a difference particular attention to minute details can mean to you as a guest. Shenanigan's is open for dinner Monday thru Thursday from 5:00 to 10:30, Friday and Saturday 5:00 to 11:00, and Sunday lunch is served from 11:30 to 5:00 and dinner from 5:00 to 10:00. Happy hour is 4:00 to 6:30, Monday thru Friday, with 2 for 1 drinks and free appetizers. A banquet room is available for birthday, Christmas, and other festive occassions, and Shananigan's has the capability to cater gatherings large or small. Call 697-3216 and ask for either Bob or Steve.

Doctor studies snake viruses

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — His wife hates snakes. His children aren't interested in them. He occasionally keeps them in buckets in the back of his pickup truck, then decapitates them so that he can dissect them to see if they have, among other things, cancer.

Dr. Jim Daly, an associate professor of microbiology and immunolgy at the University of Arkansas Medical Sciences campus, heads a four-member team of doctors studying viruses in snakes.

"I'm mainly interested right now in water snakes," he said during a recent telephone interview. One of the major tumor viruses in the reptiles, he said, belongs to a group known as the Retrovirus, which causes cancer. Similar viruses are found in man. Daly's research is concentrating on the yellow-bellied water snake, the diamondback water snake and the broad-banded water snake.

Members of the Retrovirus group are found in human leukemia cells, Daly said. Doctors don't know if these viruses produce leukemia in people but know that they do in other animals.

New Grimm fairy tale to be published

NEW YORK (AP) — A long-overlooked story about a lost little girl will be the first addition in more than a century and a half to the 210 fairy tales collected by the brothers Grimm, its publisher says.

The manuscript, penned in 1816 by Wilhelm Grimm, opens with the familiar "Once upon a time" and tells of a girl whose guardian angel leads her to shelter with an old man, eventually revealed as St. Joseph.

When it is published by Farrar, Straus & Giroux, the 2,500-word story will become the first addition to "Grimm's Fairy Tales" since the German folklorists first published the work between 1812 and 1815.

"The new manuscript should also be of great interest to scholars," said Peter Demetz, Sterling Professor of German Languages and Literature at Yale University.

Demetz said the Grimms "are among the major figures of 19th century culture and civilization."

The work is thought to be the only original manuscript by either Wilhelm or Jakob Grimm outside the Bodmer library in Geneva.

New York rare book dealer Martin Bresslauer said Tuesday he bought the manuscript in 1974 from an auction house in West Germany.

Before that, said Michael di Capua, editor in chief of Farrar, Strauss & Giroux, the manuscript was apparently owned by the family of a girl named Milli to whom Grimm addressed an introduction.

Bresslauer said he offered the manuscript for sale five years ago for $21,000 but could find no buyers, then placed it in a bank where "I forgot all about it because I have quite a lot of books."

The publishing company bought the manuscript this year from the Justin Schiller dealership, to whom Bresslauer said he had given it on consignment for $26,000. Di Capua said his company purchased it for a "a substantial five-figure price."

Illustrator Maurice Sendak, who is to provide color drawings, called the story wonderful, beautiful and touching. My major challenge is that they're so good as prose, what can an illustrator do to complement them?"

The story tells of a little girl — her name is never mentioned — whose mother fears an impending war and sends her into the woods.

It's hard to hire, change doctors

From Wire Reports

Finding a doctor for your family — before somebody gets sick — can be the key to good health, but a physician and author says its hard to pick the right person in today's complex medical marketplace.

Dr. Henry Berman of Spokane, Wash., says too many people lack what's called a primary care doctor — someone who has studied all the parts of the body and will be concerned with your life and your family as a whole.

"Your primary care doctor is the first person to turn to with medical problems," says Berman in an upcoming book, "The Complete Health Care Advisor," which he authored along with psychologist Diane Burhenne and medical writer Louisa Rose.

Berman, a pediatrician and the head of a prepaid health plan system, said that people looking for someone to treat family members of all ages should consider a family practioner whom he described in a telephone interview as "a new-fangled version of the old-fashioned GP (general practictioner)."

He explained that the field of family medicine became a recognized specialty in 1969. To qualify as a family practioner, a doctor is required to take a three-year residency program.

You can start your search for a doctor by checking credentials of potential candidates.

One of the most useful credentials is board certification. Boards are exams given by qualified physicians in a specific field to determine whether an applicant has reached a certain level of knowledge. If you are considering a particular family practioner, for example, check to see if he or she is board-certified in family medicine. You can find the information in the Directory of Medical Specialists, published by A.N. Marquis Co. of Chicago.

Find out what hospitals the doctor is affiliated with, charges for different types of services and what they cover.

"Human interaction" is important, Berman says, and you will have to meet the doctor before you can decide whether he or she is right for you. A good doctor, Berman says, listens to what the patient has to say and asks questions to draw out the patient and find out what is on his or her mind.

Changing doctors, if you're dissatisfied with the one you have, can be almost as complicated as finding one in the first place.

If you've only visited the doctor once, Berman says it is easier to start from scratch than it is to have records transferred. Just don't go back again. If you have visited the doctor several times, however, it may be worth a little effort to try to work out your problems.

"Try to figure out what you didn't like about the doctor," said Berman. "See the doctor one more time and tell that doctor what you're unhappy about."

Crane risks 4-0 record against McCamey

Lamesa coach Clyde Noonkester. Lamesa opens district play against unbeaten Lakeview Friday.

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Several area teams enter district play while unbeaten Crane takes a final tune-up test against once-beaten McCamey Friday as area action heats up.

In district 2-AAAA, the countdown to the showdown begins. Four teams start district play without a loss. Andrews, Lakeview, Fort Stockton and Sweetwater have been unblemished after three bouts.

Sweetwater and Fort Stockton have immediate concerns, but both are probably looking a week ahead to their scheduled 15-rounder Oct. 7 in Fort Stockton.

Sweetwater visits Snyder Friday while Pecos tests Stockton.

Andrews has been the district dark horse all along, but few expected the Mustangs to develop so soon. No one has touched the Mustangs, and only 5A school Midland High challenged before bowing 25-20.

Andrews will travel to Monahans this week to open its district slate. Monahans has stumbled to a 1-2 mark.

The district's other unbeaten, Lakeview, visits improved Lamesa. The Tornadoes won their second game in three seasons against Brownfield earlier, 34-0. But in a non-district match up against Andrews in their last outing, the Tors were annhilated, 39-0.

New Tor mentor Clyde Noonkester hasn't asked for anything more than a good effort from his young charges. The Tors have been a pretty sorry football team the last few years, but Noonkester's plans call for a revitalization of the Lamesa program.

Unfortunately, Noonkester is attempting this in a notoriously tough district.

"Lakeview looks real good," Noonkester said. "They breezed through their first three games. They are definite contenders."

Defensively Lamesa has been unsteady, but for Lakeview Noonkester wants bigger production on offense. "We're going to have to score," joked Noonkester. "Against Andrews we moved the ball real well, we just couldn't get it across the goal line."

Against Lakeview, the Tornadoes will need a few breaks.

Down in Crane, people are taking this year's fast start with a grain of salt. The Golden Cranes ripped through the first leg of 1982, then skidded in the money games. Crane's 7-0 getaway last year became 7-3 after a late-season washout ruined the Cranes.

This year Crane has bolted out at 4-0. But coach Rickey White doesn't anticipate a similar finish. White says the current Cranes are his best outfit to date. With 26 seniors and a crushing ground attack, Crane has been untested since an opening 12-7 squeaker past Reagan County.

McCamey's Badgers face the task of recovering from a one-sided 46-21 loss to visiting Ozona last week. The Badgers had compiled a 3-0 mark against mostly powder puff competition before the Lions slapped them around.

First year Badger coach Buster Leaf now leads McCamey into play 21 miles up the road in Crane. The game promises to be a tough one. Badger QB Ray Zarate has equalled his All-District pace in his senior season. Zarate and freshman tailback Rodney Terry power the Badger option attack. Terry's speed will be a key factor against the big, aggressive Crane defense.

Pity poor Rankin. The Red Devils were considerably handicapped entering the '83 campaign due to graduation losses and only four returnees. Throw in only 19 squadmen overall and the recipe is for struggle.

It has been an uphill climb for Rankin. The Devils have been held scoreless in three games and have never been closer than 29 points by games' end.

This week, Rankin looks for win and point number one at Imperial.

Area games for week five action are:

Alpine at Reagan County: The Owls have started slow at 1-3, but there is no worry in Big Lake. Last year, RC started the year 0-4-1 before getting it together and rolling into the state quarterfinals.

Dodgers blow chance to clinch

By Associated Press

The Dodgers are on the brink. But a rare rain shower in Southern California kept Los Angeles from securing its division title.

The Dodgers blew a 3-0 lead and a 4-3 edge in the 10th inning and then saw the rains force a halt to their game in San Diego with the score tied 4-4 in the top of the 14th inning. The teams will play a doubleheader today.

Leading by 4½ games, the Dodgers need only one victory in five remaining games or an Atlanta loss to claim the title.

After Atlanta split with Houston, winning 3-1 and falling 5-1, the Dodgers' magic number dropped to one. But the elements stopped the Dodgers from getting that one Wednesday night.

The Dodgers built a 3-0 lead through four innings. Then San Diego pecked away to tie it and loaded the bases with none out in the bottom of the ninth inning. But Dodgers starter Jerry Reuss got pinch-hitter Joe Lansford to pop out, and Bobby Brown and Alan Wiggins to ground into force plays to end the threat.

Derrel Thomas homered in the top of the 10th, but San Diego rallied in its half of the inning when rookie Kevin McReynolds walked, moved to second on Doug Gwosdz's sacrifice and came home on Garry Templeton's single up the middle.

"I've been around too long to start popping the cork on the champagne. Strange things happen in this game," said veteran Los Angeles shortstop Bill Russell. "We don't know how to do it any other way. We go out and do it the hard way."

Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda said, "Let's just put it this way. We didn't win and we didn't lose. But we gained half a game."

Braves 3-1, Astros 1-5

Pascual Perez threw a four-hitter and tied his career high with 10 strikeouts in the opener. But the Astros used a four-run eighth inning off Terry Forster, highlighted by Tim Tolman's second double of the game, a two-run shot, to grab the nightcap. Joe Niekro fired a five-hitter in the second game at Houston.

"My whole career I've gone in situations like that, and I like it," said a dejected Forster. "I feel like I could cry. I never give in to a hitter, and today I did. Today is one of the poorest efforts of my career."

Mets 4, Pirates 2

Two youngsters the Mets plan to build around, Darryl Strawberry and Ron Darling, were heroes against Pittsburgh. Strawberry slammed his 26th homer and Darling earned his first major league win, going all the way with a seven-hitter.

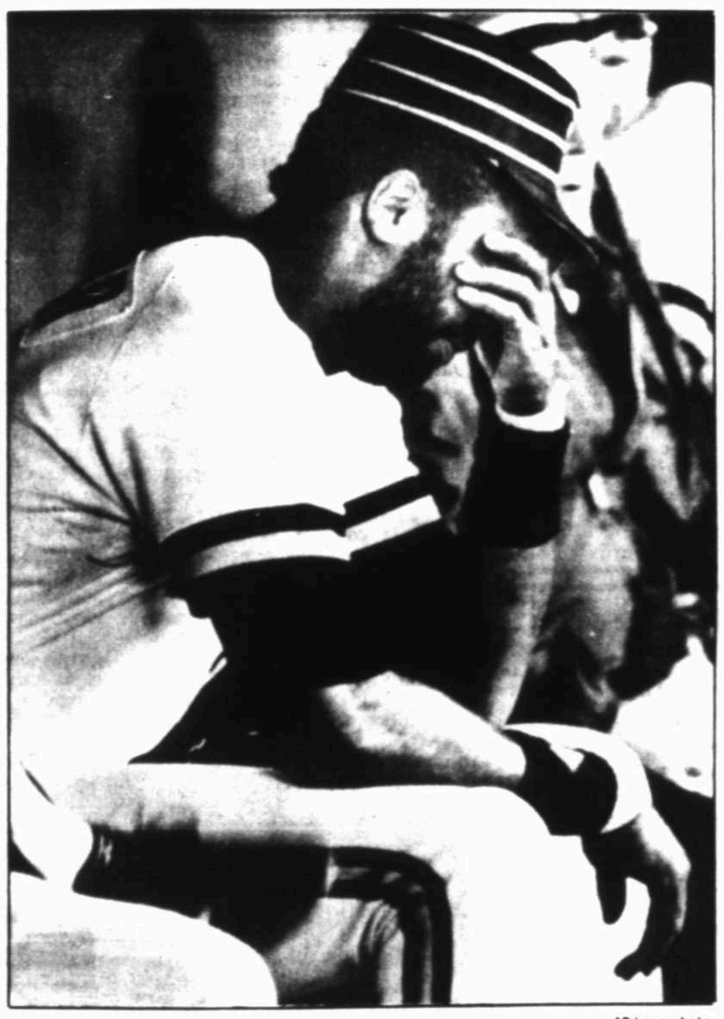

Pittsburgh's Dale Berra set a major league record when he reached first base on catcher's interference for the seventh time this season.

Reds 5, Giants 4

Mario Soto won his 17th game with a league-leading 18th complete game. He survived a four-run Giants' eighth inning. "I'm pitching a good game and here comes the same story," a frustrated Soto said. "This is getting to me a little bit."

Expos 4, Cardinals 0

Bryn Smith shut out the defending World Champions for the second straight time, hurling a four-hitter for the visiting Expos. Against St. Louis in four appearances for the year, Smith has permitted 20 hits.

Schmidt hits No. 40; Morgan goes 4-for-4

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Schmidt refused to call it symbolic, but he had to have a big hand in Philadelphia's clinching of the National League East title Wednesday, despite the fact Bo Diaz went 5-for-5 and Joe Morgan 4-for-4.

Schmidt contributed his major-league leading 40th homer and a triple to the Phillies' 19-hit attack in a 13-6 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

But all of that was secondary as far as Schmidt was concerned. With champagne dripping down his forehead, the two-time National League Most Valuable Player had a bigger role in what turned the Phillies around.

"Yes, I'll take some credit," said Schmidt, who had a bitter exchange with interim manager Paul Owens early in the month before the Phillies started their title drive.

AMIDST A LOT of grumbling within the ranks, Schmidt at the time said the team didn't know who the manager was and that "the lineup was decided by committee (Owens and the coaches)."

Owens, who had stepped in for Pat Corrales in July, told Schmidt not to worry about the managing and to concentrate on playing to his potential.

"We went 19-3 after that," said Schmidt, "I think that's what turned us around. If we had gone 3-19, I could have hung up my spikes. They would have said I was the reason the team had failed and that I had caused the dissension.

"But a lot of the guys agreed and told me so," said Schmidt. "It's going to have to change, we decided, and it did. I'm a Christian and believe that maybe it was something that was supposed to happen.

SCHMIDT SAID he wasn't sure if the drive would carry over to the playoffs and he wouldn't compare this team to the 1980 team which won it all, including the World Series.

"In '80, we had to go to Montreal to win two of three. We were world champs. This team still has a lot to prove, but we have the potential to be as good as the '80 team."

What was symbolic of the clincher was that Schmidt led off the fourth inning with a homer to break a 3-3 tie and put the Phillies ahead to stay with his 12th game-winning run batted in.

The homer was his 39th in Wrigley Field and his 59th against the Cubs, but the crux of the victory that brought the Phillies their fifth divisional title in eight years was the hitting of Diaz and Morgan.

Diaz homered in his first two trips, giving him 15 for the season, and finished with three straight singles.

AP Laserphoto

Wheez Kid Pete Rose splashes Phils Manager Paul Owens with champagne in Chicago.

Morgan, the 40-year-old marvel who was 0-for-35 at one time but has been going strong during September, had a double, three singles and walked twice.

"I'm just trying to win and very happy with the job I did," said Diaz, who was enjoying the greatest game of his career.

"I had two home runs and two doubles in a game last year, but we lost," said Diaz. "I don't go for average or home runs, I just want to win. We stayed together and we won."

MORGAN WAS asked if he'd like to be 23 again.

"No," said Morgan, who played on two championship teams at Cincinnati. "I've seen a lot of guys who are 23 who never make it. I know when I'm healthy I can do the job.

"I'm the type of guy who never lost confidence in Joe Morgan, and I'm just happy I could contribute."

Bill Giles, president of the Phillies, had his arms around Owens, who was general manager of the club before relieving Corrales.

"Great, Paul, just great," said Giles, as the two shared a bottle of champagne.

Asked what turned the team around, Owens said: "They came together and realized they are as good as I thought they were. They played great ball against good clubs. They're professionals and they'll show it again before its all finished."

Charley Fox, manager of the Cubs, had vowed before the game that there would be "no celebration here because I hadn't been invited to any party."

But Fox wasn't even offered a beer.

"We scored enough runs to win most games," said Fox. "I threw everybody we had at them and I did everything I could. But you saw what I saw."

Bird agrees to $15 million over 7 years

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird did at the bargaining table what he does on the basketball court. Things really began rolling once he entered the game.

Boston Celtics General Manager Red Auerbach and attorney Bob Woolf, representing Bird, held six meetings and still had a way to go before they could agree on a contract for the superstar forward, said Woolf.

Then Bird and Auerbach met face-to-face Monday.

"I didn't expect any agreement, and we came out of there with one," Woolf said.

Bird signed the reported seven-year, nearly $15 million contract Wednesday. The pact, one of the richest in sports, insures that he will not become a free agent after the 1983-84 National Basketball Association season, the last on his original five-year, $650,000-per-year deal.

"That opened it up," Woolf said of Monday's session. "It was incredible. You could almost feel the love and affection. Larry said, 'Red, I want to be a Celtic the rest of my life,' and that was it.

"Red loves and respects Larry Bird as much as I do. I felt Red Auerbach wanted to do the best he could do for Larry Bird because he felt he deserved it, and it was his reward."

Eyes of Texas to focus on Midland Friday

The Eyes of Texas will fall on Memorial Stadium Friday night when No. 5 ranked San Angelo meets No. 7 ranked Midland Lee. There is not another game in the state this week between two ranked teams.

Interest in this battle will go beyond the realm of District 4-5A and the winner will be King for a Day. Even third-ranked Odessa Permian will have to take a back seat to this one.

But coaches Jimmie Keeling in San Angelo and Spike Dykes at Lee don't care much for the rankings. They do care for victories, especially in district games.

"I'm sure Lee and San Angelo will be in the spotlight this week because it's the biggest game in Texas," said Keeling. "But I don't think our kids even think much about them. Besides, it depends on which poll you read. Some rank Lee ahead of us and some rank us ahead of them. I don't think the polls have one thing to do with whether you win or lose. You decide that on the field.

"Still, I understand the interest in this game. Heck, I'm interested in the outcome of this game and any fan of District 4-5A should be interested. It looks like a good one to me."

The above rankings are from The Associated Press, but there are several state rankings coming from such places as the Harris Rating System, Dallas Morning News poll and several others.

Lee's Dykes said, "Polls have one major purpose. Your opponents tack the poll on the bullentin board.

"This is a big game because it's a district game — not because we're ranked in some poll. But it looks like a good one to me no matter how you look at it."

Fans in Midland and San Angelo may see it all differently. Despite being an early district game, interest seems to be reaching a new height for this series and you would think that interest is being spawned by the polls.

First of all, the polls seem to uphold the opinion everyone had before the season ever began. That opinion was that both Lee and San Angelo would be strong contenders for the 4-5A title.

While a loss by either team will not ruin a season or shatter playoff hopes at this early date, the winner may build some powerful momentum toward that goal. Confidence is a key factor in football — maybe more so than pure talent. If you knock off a ranked team or one that is favored to make a run at a district crown, your team is headed in the right direction.

Friday's loser will still be a contender. Both teams are that good. But the loser will have to take stock of its situation and regroup for an all-out assault the rest of the season. It may mean that the loser will then have to beat an Odessa Permian along the way.

BYU holds 1st in Tucker golf

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Brigham Young University held the lead going into today's second round of the 29th annual William H. Tucker Invitational Golf Tournament.

Brigham Young, the defending champion, nabbed the lead Wednesday behind Robert Meyer's 5-under-par 67.

Meyer birdied three of the first four holes en route to a three shot lead in the individual competition.

A trio that included Mike Hogberg of Colorado, David Jackson of Florida and Andrew MaGee of Oklahoma were tied for second, all with opening round 70s.

Only six golfers broke par on the demanding par-72 University of New Mexico South Course where the 72-hole tournament is being played.

BYU's team total of 288 was two shots better than Oklahoma and Oklahoma State, both of whom posted a team total of 290 in the first round of play. Oklahoma State is the defending NCAA champion.

Florida was in fourth place at 291, followed by Colorado at 295; New Mexico at 297; Texas-El Paso a 298 and TCU at 300. A total of 15 teams are entered.

USFL considers franchise swap

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — With the proposed swap of the Chicago and Arizona franchises being voted on by United States Football League officials Wednesday, most members of the two teams were left wondering if they were coming or going.

Arizona owner Jim Joseph said Tuesday that he had agreed in principle to sell his 100 percent interest in the Wranglers to noted Phoenix heart surgeon Dr. Ted Diethrich, the Blitz' majority owner who has agreed in principle to sell his Chicago share to Illinois banker Ron Patocnik.

As part of the reported $7 million transaction, the two teams would exchange their top players, with Chicago Head Coach George Allen and his five assistants also coming to Arizona.

Allen, along with his son Bruce — the Blitz' general manager — have personal services contracts with Diethrich, as do several Chicago players like quarterback Greg Landry, wide receiver Trumaine Johnson, running back Tim Spencer and linebacker Stan White.

Wranglers running back Calvin Murray said he's heard all the Arizona players except quarterback Alan Risher and offensive tackle Jeff Kiewel will become Chicago's property once the sale is finalized.

"I've heard that it will be a complete swap and I also heard that it will only be a management swap," said Kiewel. "Everything I've heard has been real hearsay. I don't know what to believe ... It's kind of nerve wracking just waiting to find out."

Diethrich said a three-quarters vote of the 18 charter members of the USFL is needed to approve the sale and "it could be done in a matter of how long it takes a conference call operator to put 18 owners on the phone. It'd be that quick."

"It's gone. We're history," said Wranglers linebacker Ben Apuna. "I'm asking for a trade right now. It's too cold in Chicago. I want to go to either Memphis of Florida. If I'm not traded, I'll try to make it in the NFL as a free agent."

Risher said he would "rather stay in Arizona than go to Chicago," but added that he'll "be wherever I'm supposed to be in January."

Arizona finished the USFL's inaugural season this year with a 10-game losing streak and a 4-14 overall record — tied for the league's worst with the Washington Federals.

Things looking up for Twins

By Associated Press

Last year, the Minnesota Twins lost 102 games in compiling the worst record in baseball.

This season, the Twins still are having their troubles. But things are looking a little brighter, if Wednesday's 3-0 victory over the Texas Rangers is any indication.

With the victory, the Twins are now 68-90 and in fifth place in the AL West, one-half game ahead of the California Angels. And, for Minnesota, there were other bright spots.

Pete Filson, celebrating his 25th birthday, pitched 7 1-3 innings and allowed six hits. He's now 4-1 this season. Reliever Ron Davis went the final 1 2-3 innings for his 30th save.

"I didn't have anything," Davis said. "I had no velocity whatsoever. I got lucky. But for a team that has won only 68 games, 30 saves is a pretty good year."

Kent Hrbek doubled twice and gave the Twins 274 two-base hits this year, setting a team record for a season. Tom Brunansky belted his 28th home run, tying three others for the most home runs by a Minnesota hitter since Harmon Killebrew blasted 41 in 1970.

White Sox 5, A's 3

Greg Luzinski drilled his 31st home run — tying the AL record for homers by a designated hitter in a season — and Rich Dotson upped his record to 21-7.

Luzinski's two-run blast snapped a 2-2 tie in the fifth inning in Oakland. The home run tied a record set by Jim Rice in 1977 and matched by Rico Carty in 1978 and Andre Thornton in 1982.

AL Roundup

Tigers 9, Orioles 5

Last week, Detroit got 10 consecutive hits in a game against Baltimore and routed the Orioles 14-1. Wednesday, the Tigers rapped seven straight hits during an eight-run second inning to again bounce Baltimore.

Larry Herndon's two-run homer, his 20th, and Alan Trammell's two-run double highlighted the big inning.

Brewers 6, Indians 4

Robin Yount's two-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning tied the score and Ben Oglivie then belted a two-run homer with two outs to lift Milwaukee to victory.

The Brewers trailed 4-2 going into the ninth before Jamie Easterly, 4-3, yielded Yount's 16th homer and Oglivie's 13th.

Red Sox 3, Yankees 2

Bob Ojeda won his sixth straight game in September with relief help from Bob Stanley, who got his 33rd save.

Royals 11, Mariners 8

Willie Aikens drove in five runs with two home runs and George Brett knocked in four runs, including a three-run homer.

Aikens now has 22 homers this year. Brett, who also had a sacrifice fly, has 24 home runs

Like drownings? Then you'll love Husker games

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Listen! Like to watch people pull wings off butterflies, do you? Train wrecks your meat? Drownings thrill you? Pay to watch a guy go to the electric chair, would you? Like to watch lions feed?

Memorial Stadium in Lincoln, Neb., might be your Blue Heaven. They're selling tickets to an execution. They're feeding UCLA to Nebraska.

You know, I wasn't there the night before the Charge of the Light Brigade. I didn't go to the going-away party the night before the Titanic sailed. What do you bring as a gift, a lifeboat? I walk out on one-sided fights.

But I did go over to the UCLA practice field the other day as they were getting ready for the Nebraska game. My first thought was, there should be a band nearby playing "Nearer My God To Thee." I couldn't believe they were teaching blocking and tackling. They should have been administering the last rites. In fact, they asked me to stay for lunch with the team. I declined. Too much like The Last Supper.

I LOOKED at the coaches. I felt like that guy in the scene from an old World War I air movie where, with the Red Baron's squadron over the field, he clutches the arm of the camp commandant and says, "My God, sir, you're not going to send a boy up in that!" pointing to a flying coffin with struts missing.

As one football coach said, "Nebraska is not a team so much as it's God's punishment for our sins." It's not a squad, it's a horde. It's not the Four Horsemen, it's Apocalypse Now. Old Testament wrath.

I spotted the UCLA coach. "Cheer up," I told Terry Donahue, "they pull their pants on one paw at a time, er, I mean, hoof, no I mean leg. They're human.""They have scored 184 points in three games," he said. "They're averaging 62 points a game. What's human about that?"

He had a point — 184 of them, as a matter of fact.

I was profoundly depressed. I'm a guy who can't even watch "The Poseidon Adventure." As a kid I used to hate to see Tom Mix get tied up.

THE THOUGHT of UCLA going out there and getting humiliated in front of 76,000 people named Elmer or Clarence, the kind of people who watch daytime TV and buy washday miracle detergents, got to me. I briefly weighed calling the Nebraska athletic department for a spokesman, but I could see how that would go. Like this:

Me: "Hey, Big Red! How's it going? What are you doing to get ready for the biggie against UCLA?"

Nebraska: "Well, we got the ladies wrapping bandages. We got the field hospital ready and the ambulances greased. We're going to have the offensive captains read 'em their rights on the coin toss."

Me: "Has anyone been able to figure what possessed UCLA to schedule Nebraska in Lincoln in September?"

Nebraska: "Well, some guys like to ride sharks. Others like to wire-walk chasms without a net, others like to dive bombers down the smokestacks of battleships. Others like to play Nebraska. What's UCLA working on — goal-line stands?"

Me: "They're working on the kicking game."

Nebraska: "Oh, kickoff returns? Well, they'll get a lot of them."

Me: "No, no. Your kicking game."

Nebraska: "Our kicking game! We don't have one — unless you mean points after touchdowns."

Me: "No. What you do on fourth and long yards to go."

Nebraska: "Fourth and long! We don't have fourth and long. We don't have fourth down, to tell you the truth. Haven't since 1979. We don't even have third and long, if you want to know. As a matter of fact, we don't have second and long. We average 9.1 yards per play. Match that around the Sunset and Vine."

Me: "UCLA is working on ball control. You ain't gonna have the ball much."

Nebraska: "We ain't gonna need it much. We only had it 23 minutes in the Minnesota game."

Me: "Twenty-three minutes! I'll bet that was a squeaker."

Nebraska: "Yeah, we squeaked by them 84-13. We only rolled up 790 yards. We only had the ball 22 minutes in the Wyoming game. We squeaked by them, 56-20. Wyoming may yet bronze the ball. Our touchdown drives average four plays and they average, like, 1.2 minutes per drive."

ME: "LISTEN, nobody likes a smart act. Nobody used to like the Yankees either. Or the German Army. They had a coach in the Big Ten once they called "Close The Gates Of Mercy" Schmidt. Francis Schmidt once beat a team 117-0. He beat Western Reserve 76-0, Drake 85-7 and NYU 60-0. Then, he went up against Notre Dame and got beat. He couldn't beat Notre Dame ever. Let that be a lesson to you."

Nebraska: "The last time we played Notre Dame we beat them 48-6."

Me: "I hear you piled it on against Minnesota, put your first team back in when the score was 56-13. You must have a very nervous coach."

Nebraska: "The third team was getting tired."

Me: "They were only in there three minutes. The ball ain't that heavy. What is it they call that team of yours — the Cornballers?"

Nebraska: "The Cornhuskers, dummy!"

Me: "What's a Cornhusker?"

Nebraska: "I dunno. What's a Buckeye? What's a Nittany Lion? What's a Hoya? What do you want us to call 'em, the Violets? What do you think a Cornhusker is?"

ME: "I WOULD say from the evidence, it's a guy from New Jersey who can run the 100 in 9 flat, carry a football through a keyhole and didn't know there was such a place as Nebraska till the scouts came around."

Nebraska: "Johnny Carson and Darryl Zanuck came from Nebraska. Henry Fonda,too."

Me: "Still, isn't your coach afraid they're gong to start calling him 'Close the Gates of Mercy' Osborne?"

Nebraska: "Well, it's better than being known as 'Gimme a Break' Brannigan."

Me: "Do you think you have the greatest team in the country? In history?"

Nebraska: "Well, some people think the Dallas Cowboys are just as good. And maybe the 1940 Chicago Bears. Be sure to get points if you think so, though."

Rice facing decisive year

HOUSTON (AP) — Rice University is the only Southwest Conference school that has not won a conference team title in any sport since the 1971-72 season.

Prior to the Owls' SWC tennis championship in that year, Rice teams had been competitive, winning a surprising number of titles for a small school with high academic standards.

The school still has its high entrance requirements and rigid standards, but is no longer winning and Rice athletic director Augie Erfurth places part of the blame on the decreased prestige of getting a college degree.

"There is a different type of athlete today than there was 15 years ago," Erfurth said. "Back then, we could go out and recruit on the basis of offering an athlete a prestigious degree. That was a strong selling point.

"But today, with the increases we see in professional salaries, athletes aren't as interested in that degree. They are looking for a school that will give them a springboard into a pro contract.

"The big contracts that the pros are paying tends to cloud the academic aspect of going to college."

The Rice football team, which has not posted a winning season since 1966, broke a 15-game losing streak last week with a 22-21 victory over Southwestern Louisiana.

But the celebration had to be short-lived. The Owls return to reality Saturday when the face the No. 2 ranked Texas Longhorns in Austin.

Rice officials have been holding meetings in recent weeks to discuss ways of narrowing the gap that exists between the top state schools and Rice.

Erfurth said the current year could be pivotal in upgrading Rice's athletic program.

"The kinds of dicussions we've had aren't the kind you would have if you weren't making positive moves forward," Erfurth said.

Improvements in the school's facilities and tailoring the curriculum to the athlete's needs are being discussed.

Erfurth said Rice may offer increased academic counseling for athletes and plans have been discussed for an expanded business curriculum.

NBA to crack down on drugs

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Basketball Association's crackdown on involvement with cocaine and heroin is a warning to present and future college players that "there will be no place for them in the NBA" if they use illegal drugs, says Bob Lanier of the Milwaukee Bucks and president of the players union.

Lanier and Commissioner Larry O'Brien signed an agreement at a news conference Wednesday in which it was announced that violators face expulsion from the NBA — the strongest stand taken yet by a sports league.

"We felt the stigma of drug use has hurt the sport and we want to eliminate it," said Larry Fleisher, general counsel of the National Basketball Players Association.

Most recent NBA players who underwent drug rehabilitation are playing in the league are Michael Ray Richardson of the New Jersey Nets and John Drew of the Utah Jazz.

Richardson, at a unrelated Nets news conference Wednesday, said drug addiction was "a disease. It's like cancer or something. Guys need help."

O'Brien at the news conference to announce the NBA crackdown, said, "The message we are sending out today is clear: Drugs and the NBA do not mix. If you want to get involved with drugs, you won't be involved with the NBA."

Just how much will the home field advantage help Lee? There are some Lee supporters who wish the game was being played in San Angelo. Lee has lost only one game on the road since Spike Dykes has been head coach. They have lost seven at home. Dykes is unbeaten in San Angelo.

The Rebels made their first appearance at Odessa's Ratliff Stadium last week against Odessa High. Lee became only the second team to venture into Ratliff and come out with a victory over an Odessa school. The other win came last year from MHS, who will always stand in history as the first outside opponent to win a game at Ratliff.

Lee and MHS own a combined 2-1 record in Ratliff, meaning Odessa schools are 1-2 against Midland in their own stadium. Maybe Midland should move all home games to Ratliff. We all would probably enjoy it more anyway.

Huskers picked to beat Orange

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Boy, is No. 1-ranked Nebraska in trouble this week.

Coach Tom Osborne warns that 3-1 Syracuse, Saturday's fodder for the Cornhuskers, has "a better record than anybody we've played. We're excited about playing them. We think they're going to be a very good opponent."

In boxing, an "opponent" is someone who can give you a workout but is no threat to beat you. So it is with Syracuse and the oddsmakers have not listed a line on the game.

Despite Syracuse's winning record, the victories were at the expense of Kent State, Northwestern and Rutgers. In its final tuneup before the Big Eight race . . . Nebraska 45-6.

Last week's score was 39 right, 12 wrong for a percentage of .765. For the season, it's 132-58-4—.695. Against the spread, last week was 16-12—.571. For the year, 38-41—.481.

No. 17 Florida State at No. 10 Auburn (favored by 5): The old irresistible force (FSU's offense is third in the nation) against the immovable object (Auburn's defense is 13th) . . . Auburn 24-21.

No. 12 Florida at No. 16 LSU (2): The Gators were snapping away a year ago until they ran into LSU. Revenge time . . . Florida 27-21.

Rice at No. 2 Texas (no line): Even if the Longhorns are looking ahead to Oklahoma, they have too much for Rice . . . Texas 35-7.

No. 3 Arizona (10 1-2) at California: This should be the Wildcats' toughest test before November . . . Arizona 31-17.

No. 4 Iowa (5) at Illinois: The Hawkeyes may have trouble getting up again after big wins against Penn State and Ohio State. Upset Special of the Week . . . Illinois 21-20.

No. 5 North Carolina (14) at Georgia Tech: The Tar Heels haven't been tested thus far, while Tech has slipped after playing Alabama tough . . . North Carolina 35-14.

Memphis State at No. 6 Alabama (no line): The Tide keeps rolling along under Ray Perkins . . . Alabama 35-7.

Pitt at No. 7 West Virginia (6): From September's results, the best team in the East is . . . West Virginia 24-14.

Minnesota at No. 8 Ohio State (30): The Buckeyes will be fighting mad after losing to Iowa . . . Ohio State 45-14.

No. 9 Oklahoma (14) at Kansas State: Not too many years ago, you couldn't have found a line on this game . . . Oklahoma 34-14.

Mississippi State at No. 11 Georgia (11): Barring a tie, the Bulldogs will win; barring a tie, the Bulldogs will lose . . . Georgia 24-17.

Indiana at No. 14 Michigan (21): If Bo Schembechler is Little Woody, then Indiana's Sam Wyche must be Little Bo after his tirade at his players . . . Michigan 38-14.

No. 15 Miami, Fla. (13) at Duke: The Hurricanes have not allowed a point in two games . . . Miami 34-13.

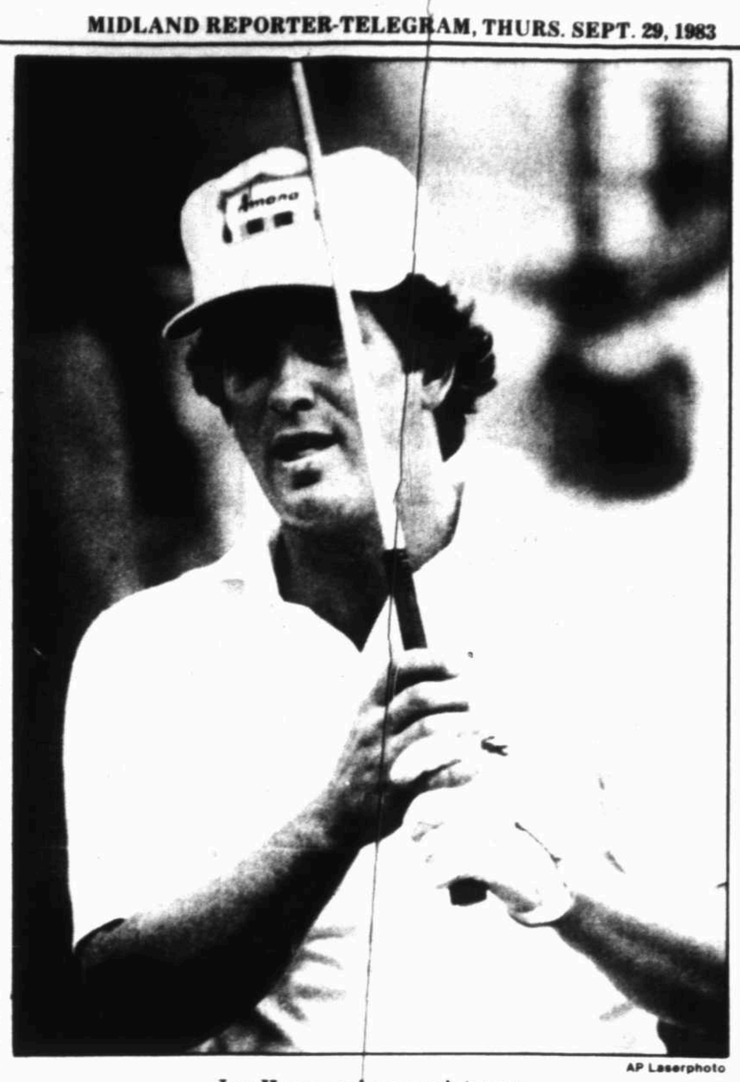

Navy at No. 18 Washington (20): The Middies knocked off the Huskies a few years back. Not this time . . . Washington 38-7.

Virginia at No. 19 Maryland (no line): George Welsh has Virginia on a roll, but the oddsmakers have obviously taken a cavalier attitude . . . Marvland 24-17.

Haas begins defense of Texas Open title

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Jay Haas, quietly establishing himself as one of the PGA Tour's more proficient and consistent players, had some personal history going for him heading into the $300,000 Texas Open golf tournament as defending champion.

"Most of my success has come late in the season," Haas said as he prepared for today's opening round. "There's been no real indication it's going to happen again, but there's still a little ways to go and maybe I can turn it around again."

Haas, 29, a former NCAA champion, has won two tournaments in each of his last two seasons. And all four of them came late in the year.

Perhaps the most spectacular of his victories came in this event a year ago, when he led or shared the lead all the way, opening with a 7-under-par 63 and eventually scoring a 3-shot victory over Curtis Strange, his former teammate at Wake Forest. He won it with an 18-under-par total on the 6,525-yard Oak Hills Country Club course.

"That was one of my best tournaments," Haas said. "I've been looking forward to coming back here all year long.

"It always gives you a good feeling to come in as the defending champion. Of course, you start out even this time, but when you're defending, you know you've played well on this golf course before, and that helps your confidence; gives you confidence that you can play well again."

Although not a winner this season, Haas has had a pair of runner-up performances, was third in another tournament, missed the cut only once all season and has $181,197 in winnings.

"From the standpoint of money, it hasn't been a bad year at all. But it sure would be nice to win one before it's all over," said Haas, whose steady play has provided him with a spot on the 12-man American team that will play Europe's best in the biennial Ryder Cup Matches in Florida next month.

Haas, who learned the game from his uncle, former Masters champion Bob Goalby, is among the 156 in the chase for a $54,000 first prize.

Among the major contenders are Fuzzy Zoeller, who needs a sixth place finish or better to overtake the absent Hal Sutton on the year's money-winning list; Rex Caldwell, who scored his first career victory last Sunday in Abilene; and Lee Trevino, who said he's playing "better than I have in two years."

Benefits planned for plane disaster victims

NEW YORK (AP) — A series of major league all-star baseball games will be played in Japan in November to raise money for a scholarship fund for the children of the victims of the Korean plane disaster, it was announced Wednesday.

The project is being put together by Peter Rose, former counsel of the Major League Baseball Players Association, and Joe Peters, director of Sports Projects, Inc., in New York.

Rose said that one player from each of the 26 major league teams will be selected for the series, which will entail "about 2 or 3 games" in the first week of November.

"Since we're making a late start, we'll take the best players available," said Rose. "We don't have any yet."

The series is also subject to the availability of stadiums in Japan.

Andrews opens 4-4A

The Owls have been struggling defensively while sophomore QB Bobby Gunnels and fullback Howard Williams organize the offense. Alpine should test the Owls before they enter district competition Oct. 7.

Seagraves at Stanton: The Buffs have floundered after an opening win over Tahoka. Stanton's wishbone offense has been broken and snapped the past two weeks in shutout losses at Crane and Hamlin.

If Seagraves spoils Stanton's bid this week, coach Dale Ruth will need to make some switches before district opens against Eldorado.

Robert Lee at Greenwood: The Rangers seem to have hit their stride, winning two straight after opening with two setbacks.

Friday's game is big. Both teams began district play with wins last week, and the loser tomorrow will be at a decided disadvantage. Greenwood's Roger Smith has carried the heaviest load thus far and is on course for a 1,000 yard season rushing.

Christoval at Midland Christian: Midland Christian looks for its first win against 6-man power Christoval. Last week MC looked better in a 39-26 loss to Three Way, but thus far defensive lapses have plagued the MC six.

This week's area game: Lakeview (3-0) at Lamesa (1-2).

Husker fan gets his ducats

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — When the No.1-ranked University of Nebraska Cornhuskers race onto the field against Syracuse in Lincoln Saturday, Richard King and his guests — not his former business partner — will have four tickets to the game.

Josepy A. Vetro filed suit last week against King seeking possession of two of the four NU season tickets that the men have shared since 1976.

However, Douglas County District Judge Samuel Caniglia ruled Wednesday morning in favor of King by declining to issue a temporary order in the case.

The action apparently settles the issue at least for the 1983 season because the case probably will not be settled before the final home game against Kansas on Nov. 12.

Vetro alleged in his suit that he and King are former business partners who split last spring. Vetro contended that the men have received four season tickets yearly from a woman in Lincoln.

Vetro contended that he should get two of the tickets but King kept all four, prompting the lawsuit.

Jim Nance hospitalized

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — Former New England Patriots fullback Jim Nance continues in stable condition, recovering from a heart attack and stroke suffered after a weekend touch football game.

A supervisor at Quincy City Hospital, who would not allow herself to be identified, said today that Nance had been in stable condition since suffering the mild stroke Monday.

Nance, 40, who lives in Pembroke, suffered the heart attack Sunday after playing touch football with friends in Hanover. He drove home, complained of chest pains and was driven to the hospital by his wife, Marjorie.

He suffered the stroke Monday while at the hospital and was left with some paralysis on his left side, his wife told the Quincy Patriot-Ledger.

AfterMASH could use another war

NEW YORK (AP) — If you loved "M-A-S-H," you won't love "AfterMASH."

The new CBS series, which debuted Monday night, is a well-written, well-meaning comedy. But it lacks a compelling reason for watching regularly. In that sense, it is disappointing.

The hour-long episode, written by "M-A-S-H" creator Larry Gelbart, touches the right issues and some tender emotions. It also has an occassional funny line, but, sad to say, "AfterMASH" could use a war.

War is hell and, in comedy, a powerful vehicle for moralistic cycnics to crack jokes in the face of danger and ponder the senselessness of it all. Postwar, set in a veteran's hospital, is a heck of a lot less interesting.

"M-A-S-H" had urgency, excitement and funny characters on the fringe: Hawkye, Radar and Frank Burns.

There's a stale, snapless quality about "AfterMASH." It's set in 1953 and it feels like another generation, with old cars and older looking suits. It seems dated. "M-A-S-H," dressed in basic khaki, was colorful and as current as the latest anti-Washington joke.

Maybe, for long-time M-A-S-Hies, it's too soon to bring back memories of TV's 11-year-old Korean war. This new post-war series pales by comparison.

Harry Morgan, Colonel Sherman Potter, gets top billing in "AfterMASH." He's a wonderul character actor with great comic humility, but he's not the leading man type. Neither are the other two holdovers, Jamie Farr, who plays Max Klinger, and William Christopher, who plays Father Mulcahy.

It's the misfortune of "AfterMASH" that the strongest characters from "M-A-S-H," Hawkeye (Alan Alda) and Margaret (Loretta Swit), chose to get out on top.

In this series, Potter has returned to Missouri and his beloved wife Mildred. We don't see her face right away in an attempt to whet our curiosity.

When we do, Sherm's Mrs. Potter looks like your everyday fourth-grade school marm.

As played handsomely by Barbara Townsend, Mrs. Potter is warm and wise with an almost saintly quality. When Potter quickly tires of retirement, crabgrass and bridge games, Mrs. Potter suggests he seek a job at the General Pershing Veteran's Hospital. He's hired as chief of staff, and thus begins another medical show of sorts.

Klinger's trek to the General General, as the VA hospital is irreverently known, is more circuitous. Klinger, with his Korean war bride, Soon-Lee (Rosalind Chao), has found that his cons, fast talk and wheeling-dealing — coping tools in a war zone — are tickets to trouble back home in Toledo, Ohio.

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

Readers of this column know all about the Rabbi — the kibitzer who, after the fact, would pontificate on the result of a hand. Among his more famous dicta is: "If the king is singleton, play the ace." He would have been proud of this hand.

North-South reached their optimum contract in quick time. South needed no more than a sign of life from his partner to leap to game in no trump.

West led his fourth-best spade. East won the ace and returned the suit to his partner's king, and West played a third round to remove declarer's stopper. That proved to be the last trick for the defense. Declarer banged down the ace of clubs to pick up West's bare king, and claimed the rest of the tricks.

Now we're sure that there are cynics among you who might think that the result of this hand is a tribute to South's peripheral vision, rather than to his bridge skill, and you would suggest that West hold his cards close to his chest. Nothing could be further from the truth. There is a sound bridge reason for South's play.

After winning the third trick, declarer does not need the entire club suit to land his game. He does not mind if East gains the lead, since East can do him no harm. Therefore, if the club finesse is destined to win, it is unnecessary! The danger to the contract lies in West gaining the lead. If West has the king of clubs and it is guarded, declarer is doomed. The only hope if West has the monarch is that it is singleton. Hence the play of the ace of clubs at trick four caters to that possibility.

Chamber approves plan, elects officers

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

The Midland Chamber of Commerce approved a detailed plan of work for the 1983-84 year at its monthly board meeting Wednesday — with full intentions of continuing its responsibilities although faced with a projected budget deficit of $78,788.

W.P. "Bill" Franklin, president of First City National Bank, was elected chamber president following the expiration of Larry Bell's 21-month term. Attorney James M. Alsup was named president-elect.

Other officers elected were Joan Baskin, vice president for community development; George B. Irish, publisher, Midland Reporter-Telegram, vice president for membership relations; Bill Morrow, Magnatex Corp., vice president for economic development; Joe Campbell, Lone Star Abstract and Title, treasurer.

Other executive committee members are Douglas B. Henson, Alan R. McDaniel, Curtis L. Neely and Allen K. Trobaugh.

Eight new directors will join the board; they are Jim Everett, David N. Jones, Jim Ingram, Bill Morrow, Sam Ogletree, Amy Stewart, Edgar Williamson and Modesta Williams.

Clarence Cardwell Jr., ARCO Oil and Gas, and Thomas J. Wageman, president, First National Bank, were appointed to serve the remaining year of an unexpired three-year term.

The chamber's projected $78,788 budget deficit in fiscal 1983-84 should not affect its programs, said new president Franklin. "We are not willing to budget for deficit spending," he said. "The executive committee felt this budget is appropriate for the chamber, to continue to do what we want to do."

Franklin said if fund raising programs were not adequate, some programs might have to be cut as a last resort.

Executive vice president Grant Billingsley told the board economic conditions in the community have affected the amount of money available to the chamber, but the staff has tried not to let this affect its programs. "The deficit is not an item that has been taken lightly," he said.

The budget reflects the chamber's conservative planning for the coming year, according to out-going president Larry Bell.

In 1982-83, the projected budget of $820,650 was eventually revised downward to $752,622, with a net deficit of $20,822.

Bell said the chamber's leadership has been exploring possible ways to reduce the projected shortfall this year. Among those would be some sort of fund raiser to retire some of the debt on Midland Center, the city's three-year old convention center which is managed by the chamber.

The Chamber board approved an extensive plan of work for the coming year, emphasizing being responsive to needs of its member businesses and broader participation in the chamber's many programs. Opportunities exist for chamber members to get involved in a wide range of activities that promote a healthy business climate in Midland.

Areas of interest include the Small Business Council, which will conduct the annual small business trade show; the M-Squad, which welcomes new businesses and visitors to Midland; the many publications available to chamber members (apartment and office space surveys, dissemination of economic data, and yearly statistical studies); and Clean Midland, Leadership Midland, and the Conventions and Visitors Bureau.

In other business, the chamber heard from Laura Manulik, president of the Midland Board of Realtors. In August 1983, local Realtors closed on 138 units, including 56 new homes. A year ago in August, 152 units were sold.

Midland's real estate market is continuing to slide somewhat, Manulik said. There are currently 1,642 properties listed, versus 1,405 listed in August a year ago. Homes are available in all sectors of the city, she said. Based on data collected by the Board of Realtors, average sale prices for both new and existing homes have not fallen in the soft, buyers' market, but have climbed slightly from sales prices of a year ago.

Experts fear new dangers in Persian Gulf area

From wire Reports

WASHINGTON — Even while attention is focused on Lebanon, American foreign-policy officials fear that the next explosion could take place in the Persian Gulf where the three-year-old Iran-Iraq war is entering a dangerous new stage. And officials say that the consequences of an explosion there could be far more damaging to U.S. interests than anything that could happen in Lebanon.

Specifically, U.S. officials fear that a proposed sale of advanced warplanes and missiles by the French to Iraq could precipitate an escalation of the conflict that will end in the closing of the Persian Gulf to all oil shipments. And that could have a devastating impact on the U.S. economy as well as those of all the industrialized democracies. Currently 19.3 percent of their oil comes through the Gulf.

"We are spending too much time worrying about Lebanon, where we don't have vital interests, and not enough about the situation in the Persian Gulf, where we do have vital interests," one White House foreign-policy official said recently. "We are very concerned with the French sale because we believe it is just the type of step that could lead to a major blowup there."

The French have said that they would sell Iraq five Super-Etendard warplanes and supply them with the sophisticated Exocet missile. The French argue that Iraq needs this new equipment to deter Iran from further escalation. But Iranian leader the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has warned that if Iraq uses the Exocet on Iranian oil facilities, Iran will close the narrow Strait of Hormuz through which all shipped oil must pass. And on Tuesday an Iranian official said that it would attack any ship passing through the strait that was carrying war materiel for Iraq.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tarq Aziz has said that his country would use the Super-Etendard against Iranian oil installations at Kharg Island in the Gulf. Iraq started the war but has been beaten back and has had to withstand repeated attempts by Iran to invade its territory.

While it is not clear whether Iraq will carry out its threat, military experts say that the combination of the Etendard and the Exocet missile — the missile that sank the British warship Sheffield in the Falklands War — could destroy tankers loading at Iran's oil terminals.

A rapid escalation of the Iran-Iraq war and closing of the Strait of Hormuz has been the nightmare scenario for U.S. policy makers. Although the recent recession in the West and oil-conservation measures have lessened dependence on Mideast oil, a recent study by the Congressional Research Service concluded that a cutoff of Persian Gulf oil would have painful consequences for the United States and other industrial democracies.

Based on 1982 figures, a cutoff would result in a shortage of 5 million to 5.3 million barrels of oil per day. And crude-oil prices would rise from $34 a barrel to $65 to $130 a barrel.

Officials point out that a Persian Gulf embargo would not necessarily mean an immediate cutback of that dimension because there are other oil sources and because both the United States and Japan have large domestic oil reserves. But the price effect would be almost immediate.

Both Presidents Carter and Reagan have vowed to keep the Gulf open to shipping in the event of an Iranian attack. At the beginning of the war, the United States sent AWAC early warning planes to Saudi Arabia as a way of helping protect the area and of showing the U.S. flag. But blocking the strait is a relatively easy task, according to U.S. military officials. Fewer than 100 Iranian mines strategically placed could block almost all oil exports from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates.

The State Department voiced U.S. concerns Wednesday, in a statement that said the United States would view "with grave concern any attempt by Iran or any country to restrict shipping in the Persian Gulf."

Washington has quietly tried to persuade the French to at least delay the sale of the planes. While French officials say that the deal will go through, they are not specific about its timing.

The French defend the sale by saying it is the only way to prevent an Iranian victory in the war. French officials say that they have been encouraged by other Gulf states, including Saudi Arabia, to go ahead with the sale. In the French view, a strong Iraq will be a source of stability in the Gulf. France has had a longtime security and financial relationship with Iraq.

In contrast, the United States has remained neutral in the war, although relations with Iraq have improved over the last three years. U.S. officials say that they fear that a tilt toward Iraq would push Iran closer to the Soviet Union. And U.S. officials say that despite the French position, it is Iran that is the strategically vital country in the Gulf.

'Frog' freed, sets precedent

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Frog, who's "making law," is free to come and go at will.

Three years ago, he wasn't.

In 1980, James Allen "Frog" Johnson, 34, of Midland was convicted by a jury of possessing a handgun in a tavern. Texas law doesn't condone that. It took the jury about five hours to find him guilty even though Johnson freely admitted he toted the pistol in a bar. He even fired it a few times. The jury took five minutes to hand him a two-year sentence. He could have received a 10-year sentence.

But he never went to prison.

Last year, the Texas Court of Appeals overturned the conviction. It said the judge — Vann Culp of Midland's 238th State District Court — erred in not allowing self-defense and necessity as a defense for having a pistol in a place where alcoholic beverages are sold or served.

This year, a higher court, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, said the other appellate court in part was mistaken. It should haven't allowed self-defense as a defense, since the charge — unlawfully carrying a firearm — had nothing to do with murder; a defense for murder may be self-defense. Self-defense was no valid defense for carrying a gun in a bar, said the higher court.

NECESSITY IS a defense, however, the higher court said. The mistrial was declared, a new trial was ordered and the District Attorney's office moved for a dismissal, which was granted, since an acquittal was still possible with the inclusion of the necessity defense.

Johnson, who had walked in the bar unarmed, was handed a pistol by one of his friends, since Johnson's alleged foe, Wilbur Edward Williams, 29, was in the crowded bar. Williams had vowed to "get" Johnson to avenge a lost dice game and for two weeks had been looking for him and, by police accounts, had been armed with a .20-gauge shotgun and a .45-caliber pistol.

In the bar, Williams and his brother, Leroy Jackson, who was just out of prison, began striking Johnson with barroom chairs, according to reports. Johnson, sensing he was in danger, took the .22-caliber pistol out of his back pocket and fired away, according to reports. Williams was killed, and Williams' mother, his brother and a bystander in the bar were wounded. Shortly afterward, the Midland County grand jury no-billed Johnson in the death and the woundings.

But the state hit him on the liquor-law violation: possessing a firearm in a bar.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY Vern Martin found no fault in the judge's decision not to allow any of three defenses — duress, self-defense, necessity — proposed by defense attorney Kevin Bartley.

"The judge made no honest mistake," Martin said. "He followed the law as it appeared to be."

The law allowed no excuse for carrying a loaded (or empty) firearm in a bar.

Martin, when a defense attorney, recalled tendering a similar defense for his client, but it didn't work then either.

Theatre's production changes its act

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Roy Caulder no longer talks of Edith Ellen Hyde. He no longer tells his younger brother, Ray, during a talk behind Angel's Bar of his skirt-and-match experience in the backseat of his '59 pink Thunderbird convertible; the view that left him knowing how the first explorer who discovered the Grand Canyon felt.

And Roy's language has changed since he first stepped on the Theatre One stage at Theatre Midland. He's cleaned up his vocabulary.

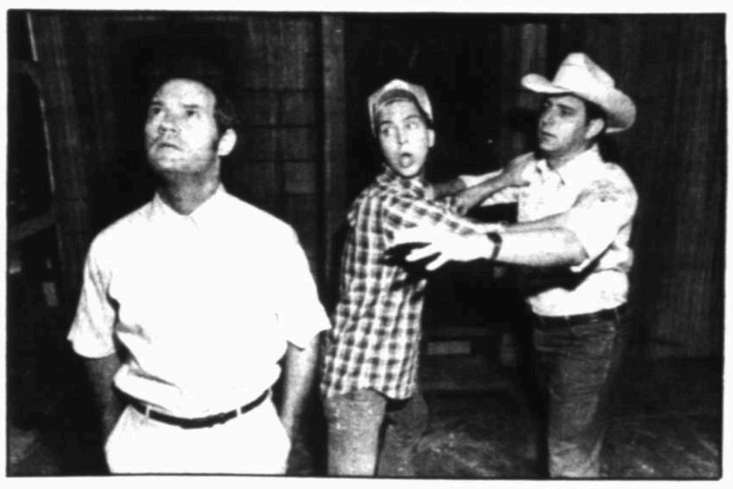

Or did he get a mouth wash?

"The reason the changes were made was because we did not bill the play as an adult comedy," says Michael Spicer, director for Midland Community Theatre's production of James McLure's two one-act comedies "Lone Star/Laundry and Bourbon." "It was an oversight and a grave error."

Opening night, two members of the audience walked out during "Lone Star." About 12 more left during intermission. But, Don Bachmann, MCT's executive director, says, that was not the reason the production was changed.

"The last thing we're going to allow to happen is take artistic control away from the theater. We're not about pabulum, there's too much of that. Sometimes we shock a little bit. We challenge people, as in 'Shadow Box.' Our job is to "present material we think is relevant."

This material must come, Bachmann says, "from the broad body of dramatic literature. We need the whole thing."

Staff Photo by Cody Bell

Ray (Daren Taylor) keeps Roy (Michael Huslage) from choking an oblivious Cletus (Corby Considine) in this scene from Midland Community Theatre's production of James McLure's "Lone Star/Laundry and Bourbon." The production closes Saturday. Reservations may be made by calling 682-4111.

In the case of "Lone Star/Laundry and Bourbon," an unusual situation arose.

"I see all the productions, but that last week (the week before the opening of 'Lone Star/Laundry and Bourbon') I was sick the whole week and I didn't see this production until Saturday night (opening weekend)," Bachmann says.

At that time, Bachmann realized there was a problem. The production contained material and language designed for adult viewing, and it had not been billed as such.

In addition to changing the billing to "adult" Texas comedies, Bachmann says, "I talked with the board of governors. Michael Spicer and I got together and took out two small sections as a safeguard. We decided to play it doubly safe.

"We just made a mistake in not billing the production as adult comedies and we will have to take our lumps on that," Bachmann says. "If we had billed it as such, there would have been no problem with the play going as it was."

The changes were, Bachmann says, "rather minor."

"I don't want to get involved in a censorship thing," he says, "We want to be able to present theater as close to the way that it's done while still reflecting the attitudes and mores of the people in our community."

Bachmann cited as an example "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

"Obviously we had some people bothered by 'Best Little Whorehouse in Texas,' but they knew by the way we billed it what it was." More than 11,000 people saw "Whorehouse," and Bachmann says, "Ninety-five percent did not find it offensive at all."

The same was true of the two audiences that saw "Lone Star/Laundry and Bourbon" opening weekend. "Ninety-five percent of the people who saw the show Friday and Saturday were not offended. But a small portion of the audience was."

Bachmann cited as another example the Theatre One showing of "Shadow Box." All the publicity contained the information that "Shadow Box" dealt with three terminally ill patients and that it contained a homosexual situation.

That way the membership and the public had, Bachmann says, "freedom of choice."

"That's the big thing. We've always provided that information for them in the past, and we intend to in the future."

"Lone Star/Laundry and Bourbon" closes Saturday.

Death row inmate not expecting to die

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Death row inmate James David Autry says he doubts he will die as scheduled Oct. 5, but adds that he is ready if his execution is not stayed.

"I already made up my mind that there isn't any sense worrying about it," Autry told the Huntsville Item Wednesday. "There isn't anything I can do. It's not really left up to me. It's up to the Supreme Court and my lawyer."

Autry, who celebrated his 29th birthday Tuesday, was convicted in the April 1980 shooting death of 43-year-old Shirley Drouet, a Port Arthur convenience store clerk. One customer also was fatally shot, and another was crippled.

Autry's attorney, Charles Carver, asked U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White to delay the execution so arguments could be heard in the case. White referred the matter to the full court, which is meeting in conference this week.

"I'm prepared mentally and emotionally," Autry said. "I've thought about dying. I don't think dying is a bad thing. Everybody dies."

Being imprecise is precisely their business

If sometimes it appears I don't know what I'm talking about, it's probably because I don't. That goes for anybody.

And that's what gobbledygook is made up of: Being imprecise about precisely nothing.

Can one be specifically imprecise? Certainly.

Journalists, who are pledged to be specific and lucid, sometimes get caught in a cloud. And who doesn't? Journalists are paid (never mind how much) to get above the fog and out of the web. But sometimes pride and ignorance intervene, and an honest "I don't know" is suppressed.

That aside, I'll go on to other violators, while not forgetting the beam-and-mote admonishment by The Master.

Being imprecise, foggy and windy is the business of politicians. (Chicago isn't labeled the "windy city" just because of gales over Lake Michigan.)

Lawyers, noted for their rhetoric, try to persuade for their clients' benefit and their cut of the judgment or for the fee. Their degree of exactness and preciseness just depends on the circumstances and whether logic, considered thought, emotionalism or impulsiveness is desired. To get an idea of how clouded legalese is, you might pick up most any court document, particularly an original petition. It's usually a catch-all. The lawyer attempts to cover his every flank; if one position doesn't work, perhaps another will. That's why many a lawsuit will say, "in the alternative" and so forth, et cetera, so on and more to come.

Preachers are movers and shakers of rhetoric. The more precise a minister gets, the more likely he is to win some ardent followers and lose many others who disagree but often without investigation. If he's not sure about his own stance or about that of whom or what he speaks, then he'll generalize to the tune of a boring viola. Now, you know why there's a bustle at onset of the offertory: to wake up the sleeping. Who can give when he's dozing?

Educators — certainly not all — have a penchant for being ambiguous. Maybe that's because they're not scholarly enough. Or if they are, then their organization is without order or purpose. Have you ever waded through a grant request, a curriculum proposal, an excellent-in-education study or an education course bedded in redundancy?

As erudite as William F. Buckley is, he discards plain language with the same relish with which Art Buchwald and Erma Bombeck write barbershop and laundry-room language. Is WFB being ambiguous, just trying to impress, or convey thought? He's writing to a different audience, just as Thoreau heard those different drum beats. Still, he violates Rudolf Flesch and the Reader's Digest formula for plain writing, and there's much virtue in that. Wouldn't Norman Cousins and H.L. Mencken agree?

Salesmen and particularly promotional "literature" (a misnomer) writers are masters of empty-word usage. And that's all right. Let there be, for there will be, pomposity and simplicity in language. It's merely up to the reader and the listener to discern what is meant by what is said or written. That's an art. So is good literature.

He lived in various places in Texas where he worked in the oil fields as a drilling crewman. He moved to Midland 30 years ago. He was a member of the Church of Christ.

Survivors include three daughters, Carita Griffin of Midland, Janet Cobb of Austin and Nancy Sessions of Midland; six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Report indicates Texas prison brutality rampant

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A court-appointed monitor has charged that the Texas Department of Corrections has made "no significant effort" to stem brutality in state prisons, despite a federal judge's order for sweeping changes to protect inmates, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

In a recent report, Paul T. Belazis concluded that widespread brutality by guards continues two years after U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler issued a reform order in a landmark civil rights case filed by Texas prison inmates, the newspaper said.

Belazis said TDC has taken no apparent action to discipline guards who beat prisoners.

"TDC's efforts instead have reflected deliberate indifference to complying with the court's order and, in many cases, deliberate efforts to impede monitoring," Belazis' report said. "In the meantime, illegal use of force continues unabated at TDC institutions."

BELAZIS' 82-PAGE confidential report was distributed Sept. 13 to Texas prison officials, the Texas Board of Corrections and lawyers for both sides in a civil rights case which prompted Justice's order for widespread prison reforms, the Times Herald reported.

Justice had specifically directed the TDC to adopt standards governing the use of force, to document and investigate complaints of prisoner abuse and to discipline guards who violated those standards.

TDC spokesman Rick Hartley said he was "very disappointed that this is public now because we have not even had a chance to respond to it.

"We're in the process of reviewing the report and will respond accordingly," Hartley said.

HARTLEY SAID IT would not be proper for officials to comment publicly until they had "ample" time to review the report.

"I don't think it's fair for us to make comments on something that is to be confidential at this time. We are reviewing it and looking into the matters raised by the monitor," he said.

Belazis' report noted that all sides would be allowed to comment on the findings and conclusions, and their comments would be incorporated in the report before it is officially submitted to Justice.

Once the report is filed with the court, the prison system may ask Justice to conduct a hearing before he decides whether to accept or reject it.

BELAZIS, WHO WAS given the task of reporting on prison guard brutality, said most of his observations spanned the period between December 1982 and August 1983. During that time, Belazis said he received 670 complaints of abuse, but conducted thorough investigations of only 14 cases.

"The incidents formally investigated by the monitors must be regarded as only a fraction of those which routinely occur," he wrote. "It is inconceivable that they constitute isolated or aberrant incidents upon which the monitors stumbled by coincidence."

Citing specific examples of what he considered to be violations of Justice's order, Belazis said it was clear that "physical abuse of inmates has continued to occur with alarming force and frequency."

The monitor said the instances of abuse "go beyond overreactions to situations requiring the use of some physical force.

State Commission to host forum

The State Commission for the Blind will host a public consumer forum Friday from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ, 3500 Golf Course Road.

The public session will be held in conjunction with a meeting of the local INSIGHT organization, group of blind, visually disabled and interested persons who gather for social and recreational activities, according to spokeswoman Anne Dunn.

The purpose of the consumer forum, said regional supervisor Franklin Johnson, is to "provide information and address questions that residents of the Midland-Odessa area might have concerning services to blind and visually disabled people in this area."

The forum will include a discussion of the services offered by the commission to blind and visually impaired adults, children and senior citizens.

Johnson said representatives from the commission's regional office in Odessa, which also serves Midland, will be on hand to answer questions and discuss commission services.

For more information, call Ms. Dunn in Odessa at 337-4491.

Museum to hold lecture

The Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., is having a special lecture on the Zapotec Weaving exhibit today at 7:30 p.m.

Marsha Lucas Barton, guest curator for the exhibit, will talk about "Zapotec Weaving: A Living Tradition." The tapestries in the exhibition were created by contemporary Zapotec Indian families living in Oaxaca, Mexico.

The textiles are woven in a weft-faced tapestry weave on a Spanish style foot loom. Usually the loom has been passed down through the families for generations.

In addition to using natural colorations of the wool, the Zapotec tradition includes complex natural dyeing techniques using plants, mosses, lichen, nuts, berries, indigo and the cochineal insect.

The designs reflect the ancient and highly developed Zapotec civilization of more than 2,000 years ago.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

Burglaries reported

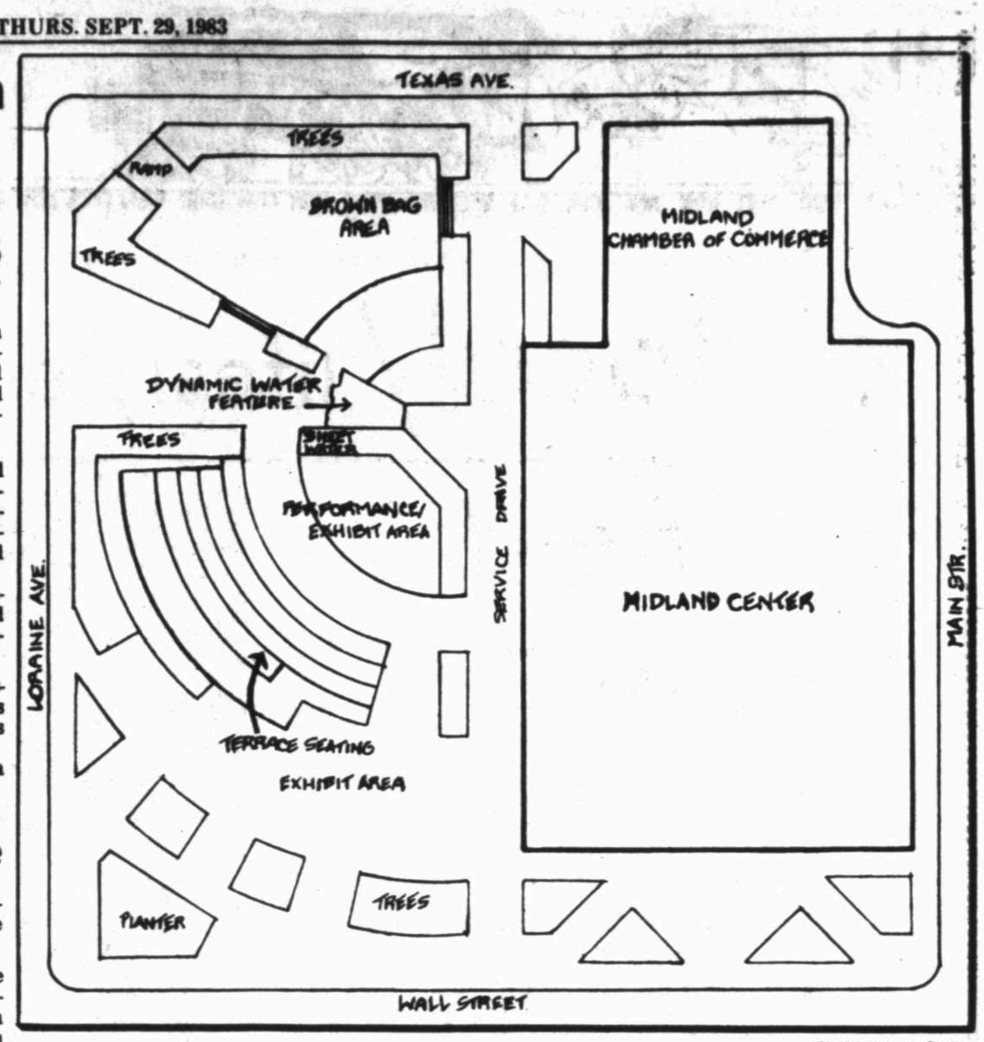

Mark Hardwick of 2613 Terrace told police that jewelry, silverware, firearms and assorted other items were taken in a burglary at his residence Wednesday. No immediate dollar value of the loss was available. Entry was gained through a window.

Stephanie Pendergrass of 5256 N. Loop 250 said $1,247 was stolen from from a jar in the bedroom of her apartment. The theft occurred Wednesday.

Susan Setzler of 4101 Dawn reported that her garage was entered Tuesday. A lawn mower and assorted tools worth $1,198 were missing.

Sally Jones of 4301 Raleigh Court said jewelry, a microwave oven, a sewing machine and 10 silver dollars were removed from her apartment sometime in the past month while she was out of the country.

Total value was placed at $1,160. There was no sign of forced entry, according to police.

Midland Centennial Plaza, Inc., is being developed by Midland Jaycees, who are hoping to solicit enough private funds to pay the $900,000 tab. This conceptual drawing by architect Walter Pate shows the designated areas for brown-baggers, trees, a water feature, a performing area and an outdoor exhibit area plus terrace seating. The park, which now is the flat tract known as Downtown Park, should be ready by mid-1985, Midland's centennial year.

'Frog' Johnson freed, sets precedent

It conceivably could today, he said, since the case effected new case law, and courts now may allow defenses in the charge to the jury. In 1980, there was no case law allowing such a defense in a similar case.

"Necessity has always been in the penal code," said Martin. But, he cautioned, it's not going to surface "in one case out of 2,000." Generally, Texas law says that necessity may be justified as a defense if the "actor reasonably believes the conduct is immediately necessary to avoid imminent harm."

BUT THE LAW followed by Culp, who is attending a judicial conference this week, "categorically stated in absolute terms that it (necessity) is not available" as a defense in a fire-arm-in-a-bar case.

An appellant court judge, Charles Schulte, commented on the necessity issue: Johnson "did not arm himself at all times. He wasn't armed when he entered the bar. Nor did he arm himself upon immediately seeing the anticipated assailant. It was only immediately before the actual confrontation that he took custody of the pistol."

On the since denied self-defense issue, the judge ssid: "The facts in this case indicate both real and apparent danger, reasonable fear or serious bodily injury or death or an inability to reasonably retreat to a position of safety...Having an arguable right to exercise deadly force, it would be ridiculous to statutorily preclude him from taking custody of the deadly means of his own deliverance...He acquired it (the gun) at the last reasonable opportunity to do so and did not fire until it the assault was well under way."

BARTLEY WAS pleased with the appellant court's ultimate decision. "Self-defense is really a defense to murder. It's not a defense to carrying a weapon."

He said he felt the state "picked on Frog" by trying him for carrying the pistol after the grand jury no-billed him for murder.

Bartley said he was "kind of angry" at the judge for not allowing the defenses in the charge. "He (Culp) just refused...just flat refused."

Had Johnson walked in the bar with a pistol, the necessity as a defense allowed by the appellant court might have been "questionable," he said.

Bartley noted that during voir dire — questioning of prospective jurors — and at the trial's closing arguments:

"It's all right to kill people (in self-defense) but just don't do it in a bar, because you're carrying a gun" and you'll get in real trouble.

Church organizing campaign

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Conceding that they have "a terrific image problem," the General Assembly of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) has agreed to spend $1 million for a 1-year media campaign.

"Our name certainly isn't a household word, said Robert L. Friedley, the church's vice president for communications.

"And it may be that we are so diverse and non-doctrinal as to be invisible," he said Wednesday at the close of the church's biennial meeting.

Donna Albright of Seattle had urged the other delegates to support the publicity effort.

UIL president defuses showdown of sports battle

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — After a long night of "soul searching," the director of the University Interscholastic League defused a potential showdown over scholastic sports and other extracurricular activities by proposing a long list of reforms.

Bailey Marshall, head of the body that regulates high school sports and other activities, told the Select Committee on Public Education Wednesday that changes are essential.

"If we can't control them," he said of the competitions, "we won't have them."

Marshall's plan appeased committee chairman H. Ross Perot, who says extracurricular activities are "stealing" time from education. Perot has called for de-emphasis of high school extracurricular activities. He also wants a ban on interscholastic sports below high school.

Perot said he was "surprised and pleased" that Marshall came prepared with a package of reforms, although it did not go as far as Perot wants to go.

"I certainly think it's movement in the proper direction," he said.

Marshall said he came up with the package the night before, when he slept only three hours and jumped out of bed to make notes during the night,

"I'm tired and I'm emotional because I did a lot of soul-searching last night," Marshall told the committee that is looking into all phases of public education in Texas.

Marshall's proposals included:

— Requiring high school athletes to be passing four courses, instead of the current three, to remain eligible. Students also would be banned from participating in a UIL contest if it meant missing a class they were failing.

— A study of eliminating some sports — he did not say which ones — that are offered outside of school.

— Penalize "redshirting," a process in which parents have their children repeat seventh grade so they'll have another year of growth before they begin high school sports. Marshall said such students should lose one year of high school sports eligibility.

— Ban interschool contests below the seventh grade. The UIL does not regulate activities below the high school level, but Marshall said many districts use UIL rules throughout their system. Perot has called for a ban on interscholastic sports below the high school level. Marshall proposed a ban on junior high school games on school nights.

— A five-year moratorium on adding new athletic programs.

— Allow schools to provide only "basic equipment" for sports. Marshall called for the elimination of "towel dryers, hand warmers, names on jerseys ... things we do not need to conduct the programs."

— A limit on the number of coaches at a school. "I don't think we need one for every position," he said.

— Move golf and tennis competition, which he said are the most time-consuming sports, to the summer months,

— Allow students to miss school only once a year for a music contest.

— Study cutting the number of baseball, basketball, volleyball and soccer games. Perot liked the proposal, and said, "You get the same benefit out of playing everybody once as you do playing everybody twice."

— Limit speech competitions to eight per year, with a limit of 10 school days missed. Marshall said some students miss up to 22 days per year to participate in such contests.

— Penalize coaches for UIL rules violations. A school would be able to escape a penalty by replacing the coach. A school that hired a penalized coach would be subject to the penalty. Marshall said that plan would "place the penalties not so much on the students."

EDUCATION

Computers will aid education

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of university officials predicts that computers will be a major benefit to American education, citing their use in inspiring creativity and helping students handle information more skillfully.

"Rapid changes in the character and usage of computers and communications technology have a major impact on institutions of higher education, and will have a greater influence on educational methods and styles in the coming decade," Maurice Glickman, provost and dean of the faculty at Brown University, said to a Science and Technology subcommittee Wednesday.

Drexel University required every member of the 1983-84 freshman class, regardless of academic major or career plan, to own a personal computer, said Bernard P. Sagik, vice president for academic affairs.

He said the Drexel program "is not intended to produce a generation of computer programmers or computer scientists. Rather, its academic purpose is to help become more creative, more knowledgeable about their areas of study, more skillful in the handling of information, and more excited about learning."

James W. Johnson of the University of Iowa said that school has set a goal of increasing the number of terminals (or minicomputers) available for students from one per 75 to one for every three students.

"Without large investments in equipment, curricular development and adoption of new research techniques are meaningless," Johnson told the subcommitee.

Education Secretary T.H. Bell said computers can help teachers better present such subjects as history, mathematics and science. "There is little learning by the student in these subjects that could not be assisted by computer practice of some kind," Bell said.

He said computers also could lower teachers' paperwork jobs, such as test scoring, correcting student papers and keeping attendance records. "We want to use our resources to help in the development of software that will make the computer an effective slave mechanism that will free teachers to teach," the secretary said.

Microcomputers set beat for music class

Copley News Service

Microcomputers are taking some of the tedium out of routine classroom assignments in Gerald Balzano's music class.

They also help the students learn more effectively by individualizing the tasks they must perform.

Balzano, who teaches Musical Literacy at the University of California at San Diego, is sold on computers as a tool for learning.

"In my class, a certain amount of just plain drills — I hate that word, but it best describes what students have to do — are required," he said. "Drills usually are boring in class, and they take up time that I could be filling with more stimulating material.

"Also, there is the problem of what level I should place the drills. For some students they might be too simple; for others, too difficult."

Balzano said he solved both problems by installing four microcomputers his students can use in conjunction with their classwork.

He developed programs on tape that can be used at their convenience.

"There is a drill, for example, in which they are called upon to identify different intervals in music," he said. "A minor second is the smallest interval, and an octave is the largest.

"The students can sit down at the computer and work at their own pace. They can call it up on the screen over and over if they're having trouble with it, or can go on quickly to the next lesson.

"Because it's more individualized, more personalized, they get more out of the assignments."

Another advantage of the computers, Balzano said, is that students get instant feedback on their exercises, rather than having to wait until papers are graded in class. They know whether they're doing them correctly.

"One other thing computers do is measure the time required to do an exercise," he said. "This is important, because getting up their speed to follow a musical score, for example, is just as important as getting the correct measurement."

Balzano, who said the class is designed to enrich the students' listening experience, cited an interesting spin-off of classroom computer use.

Faster film developed in response to consumers, photographer says

By HOLT CONFER
Copley News Service

There's a popular television show that builds its format on the request of its viewers. People write in asking to see rare and unusual things and the producer respond by tracking down where those "things" can be found, and then film crews are sent to record whatever it is the audience asked to see.

While that may be a novel idea for a television show, a whole lot of companies that supply consumer products have become quite successful by simply responding to the demands of their customers. And I suspect that it has been the constant demand for faster films that sent the Kodak research people scurrying to their work benches and computers to lay the groundwork for a print film with an ASA rating of 1000.

Yes, I said 1000. If you're just getting started in photography, you might accept a 1000 speed print film with a casual ho-hum, and go on about your business. But to those of us who remember the not-so-old days when film speeds were only single and double digit numbers, the thought of having an off-the-shelf item with a film speed of 1000 is a pretty interesting development.

I had an assignment recently where I needed to trot out a pair of prized Leica M-3's that I bought in Austria not quite 30 years ago. I was shooting at a jazz concert, and the Leica's, with no mirror to flip up and no motor drive or winder, have a shutter that's barely audible. In any event, on the back of these cameras, there is film type-speed reminder dial that the photographer can use to recall the product he's using. Well, the film speeds on that dial range from 5 to 200. Remember, at that time, the Leica was the camera by which all others were judged and the Leitz people were working on the photographic frontier.

The new VR 1000 film is five times faster than anything available just 30 years ago. Five times translates to two and a third stops.

The film will only come in 35mm format — at first. And, you'll be able to do your own processing or have your favorite local processor do it for you since it uses the standard C-41 chemicals and can be printed on conventional photographic papers.

Kodak says the special sensitization of their new film reduces the photographic differences between a variety of light sources so that unless photofloods or other tungsten lamps are used, there should be no need for filtration.

I shot a trial roll of VR 1000 in Atlantic City on New Year's Eve.

Anyway, the weather was mild, so I shot a bunch of outdoor scenes along the boardwalk — all at night, and all with artificial light sources.

Kodak was correct in saying that tungsten light sources needed filtration. While I was able to record a whole lot of details in my pictures, I did get some rather strange colors. Surprisingly, the several shots I took under fluorescent lighting in a hot dog eatery turned out very well. Getting acceptable color rendition under fluorescent lighting is a feat that confounds even experienced photographers with bags full of filters, so getting acceptable results with no filtration at all is certainly a giant step forward.

Mirrors give this bathroom personality and create an illusion of roominess.

Mirrors give room personality

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. I have a tiny windowless bathroom with sink built into a cabinet and toilet.

I'd like to add some personality to this room and make it seem as large as possible. What might I do? — F.N.

A. If your cabinet extends across one wall, mirror the area above the cabinet to the ceiling. If you have a small cabinet, extend the mirror across the entire wall, as well. This will greatly enhance the size.

In addition, you could use a decorative wall covering to add color and interest and give you something worth mirroring.

Those two items combined with some interesting accessories, adequate lighting and fresh new towels should do wonders for your bathroom.

DEAR ABBY

Student's lesson from school of hard knocks

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a junior high school girl with a problem concerning my gym teacher. I love everything about her, so I asked if I could talk to her privately after school and she said yes. After school I told her that I loved everything about her and asked if she would be my special friend. I told her she reminded me of my mother who died a few years ago; then I asked her if I could call her by her first name outside of class.

She didn't seem pleased at all. She said she couldn't be my special friend because she was a teacher and I was her pupil, and she didn't want me to call her by her first name anywhere. Then she said she felt uncomfortable being "loved" so much by a student, and I should try to get over it.

That night I wrote her a letter apologizing for making her feel uncomfortable and begging her to be my special friend.

Now she treats me like I'm invisible. Abby, she means the world to me, and I don't want to get over it. How can I let her know how I feel without making her angry? -- LOVES MY TEACHER

DEAR LOVES: Please don't pursue a special friendship with this teacher. She obviously feels threatened by your aggressive behavior and can't handle it.

Talk to your school counselor about this. You need a mother image - someone with whom you can have a mutually loving relationship - but this gym teacher is definitely not the one. Back off, honey, and get counseling.

DEAR ABBY: This is a very touchy situation. A nice young couple we hardly know (socially) are expecting a baby soon and they have asked us to be their child's godparents. (We did not accept. We told them we would let them know.) Then they informed us that if the baby is a boy they will name him after my husband, and if it's a girl, they will name her after me.

Abby, the young father-to-be only recently went to work for my husband. We are already godparents to as many children as we care to be, and we really do not care to have their child named after one of us.

How can we decline these honors without hurting their feelings? -- SMALLTOWN, U.S.A.

DEAR SMALLTOWN: You may not be able to, but if you must hurt their feelings to avoid being drawn into a commitment with which you are uncomfortable (and being godparents is a lifelong commitment), you will have to risk it. Decline as tactfully as possible, saying you think that such honors should go to family members or closer friends.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has not worked for over a year, and we are just barely making ends meet. Is there a tactful way to stop exchanging Christmas presents? We can't afford to send any, and we don't want any gifts, so how can this be handled? - IN DEBT IN DULUTH

DEAR IN: As I've suggested before, around Thanksgiving, send cards to those on your Christmas gift list saying, "We are thankful for folks with whom we can be frank. We are not in a position to send Christmas gifts this year, and we don't expect gifts, but please accept our love and sincere good wishes for a healthy, happy, blessed holiday."

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Students see world, study on 'Ship of schools'

Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE - A cruise ship containing 500 enthusiastic college students would seem to be a natural for a new fall TV series - but this isn't fiction.

That many students from universities throughout the United States boarded a floating college campus here this week for a three-and-a-half month trip around the world. They are enrolled in the unusual "semester at sea" program sponsored by the University of Pittsburgh.

The seagoing students will earn college credits while visiting Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Indonesia, India, Kenya, South Africa, Israel, Egypt, Greece, Spain and Brazil.

The "ship of schools" includes courses for those majoring in most of the liberal arts, business and sciences - particularly oceanography.

"However, business school majors and graduates comprise one of the largest groups on board because international trade has become so important in business today," according to Jeanne Kelley, associate director of admissions. "They feel it's necessary to become acquainted with other countries."

The S.S. Universe, an 18,000-ton ocean liner, includes living quarters for the students, classrooms, a library, bookstore, theater, dining room, hospital, swimming pool and other sports facilities.

The college credits and round-the-world tour are priced at $8,000 to $9,000.

AT WIT'S END

Childhood seemingly gone

By ERMA BOMBECK

Where have all the children gone?

I don't mean the battery-driven ones who spend their days and nights propped up before TVs and computer terminals. Or the 35-year-old minds in children's bodies who operate a microwave oven and have their own door key before they are six. Or the ones who log 10,000 jet miles a year visiting two sets of parents.

I'm talking about the children who used to enjoy a couple of years of doing nothing but discovering things around them, exploring their curiosity, easing into a family and being loved. It had a name. It was called childhood.

It was an important time in which a child could only guess what was across the street, behind the fence, or on the other side of the traffic light. For the moment, he had to know what his home was all about and how safe he felt and that no matter what, it would always be there and feel the same way.

Where have the children gone? They've passed Childhood and proceeded directly to Adulthood. Realistically, that's where all the action is today anyway.

Who wants to be a child anymore? There isn't a day goes by that kids aren't blamed for interfering with jobs, marriage and life. There isn't a day goes by that you don't see a sign on an apartment that says, "No Children or Pets Allowed." Children cost more to raise than a condo in Palm Beach. Their worth as an income tax deduction has dropped within the last 10 years. Child care centers are near the bottom of priorities in this country.

Indeed, their very right to be born is in jeopardy.

Small children . . . more than any other single group . . . have had to bear the brunt of the changes of the '80s: our mobility, our redefined family structure, changing technology and new attitudes toward everything, including them.

Children are no longer a dominant force, an excuse, a reason, a goal, a status or a commitment. They are just there.

I have no idea whether this is good or bad. I am just trying to imagine what it is to be a child in these times and to wonder if we could spare a few years so that childhood could once again flourish.

With it, you can take just about anything life has to throw at you. Without it? I'm not sure I could have survived.

Teacher load cut

In the last 30 years the number of teachers in Japan has more than doubled so that now the number of students per teacher in primary schools is only 25.

Some colleges offer prepayment plans

Copley News Service

NEW YORK — To make tuitions more affordable and at the same time improve their cash flow, some colleges are now offering prepayment plans, according to an article in Dun's Business Month. Under the plans, parents may pay in advance for the entire four years of tuition at the current year's rate. They can elect to pay in full or take out a loan from either a bank or directly from the university.

Prepayment offers parents protection from tuition increases, while providing tax deductions for the interest payments on loans.

Ben Kingsley opens one-man show on Broadway

NEW YORK (AP) — Early in Ben Kingsley's one-man show, "Edmund Kean," you tend to wonder what was so remarkable about Kean, even though he was one of England's most famous tragedians of the early 19th century.

You're aware that Kingsley is off to a good start as Kean as he prowls the stage, wearing a wig of black, curly hair, clad in black doublet and hose, and nipping at the first of six bottles of brandy he downs during the night.

But initially you fear you're only watching a very skilled depiction of yet another Shakespearean ham commencing yet another hoary recitation of his early days of suffering and woe, then his eventual triumph over adversity.

Not to worry. The Oscar-winning star of "Gandhi" starts building his character beautifully, with subtlety and sureness. The result, bowing Tuesday on Broadway, is a compelling, complex, magnificently shaded performance that just takes your breath away.

A Review

His "Kean" becomes more than just an actor's story of rise and fall. It becomes a universal story about the terrible price of ambition, told in a virtuoso display of acting that will bode well for Kingsley at Tony award time.

Written by Raymund Fitzsimons and crisply directed by Kingsley's wife, Alison Sutcliffe, the proceedings take place on Martin Tilley's economical, black-draped set, which consists of an actor's dressing table, a large wicker basket, a trunk, a mannequin, and two poles.

The show — unfortunately, it's only on the boards here through Oct. 29 — is a little on the mundane side in the early going. It opens with Kean's posturings, declamations, and then, to the audience, the question:

"Have you ever starved? I have."

He then looses the predictable litany of a young actor convinced of his own genius — this particular actor embittered by 10 years of starvation and of being ignored, forced to play the harlequin and other minor roles in fifth-rate provincial troupes while awaiting the call to greatness in London as Macbeth, Othello, Shylock, and Richard III.

You also hear his claims to noble bloodlines, and of his wife and two young sons who starved with him as he played to nearly empty provincial houses in the desperate early years. And why he refused her pleas to quit acting: "I could not give up my ambition."

He's alternately airy, self-mocking, scornful and self-pitying. But there's no real drama until the day after he achieves his goal.

City to use Beatles as tourist attraction

LIVERPOOL, England — (DPA) — After years of ignoring the Beatles, Liverpool wants to cash in on its famous pop music sons.

"We are going to make out of Liverpool and the Beatles what Memphis is for Elvis (Presley) and Nashville is to country music," vows Liverpool's tourism adviser, Ron Jones.

"Visitors should notice everywhere that this is the birthplace of the Beatles, where Ringo, Paul, John and George went to school and took their first steps on the path to world fame," Jones says.

Currently, visitors here scarely notice anything about the four young musicians who 20 years ago took the pop music world by storm. There is no monument to the group, which brought overnight fame to this port city.

For years, the city government has debated whether to honor the Beatles. Some felt that the group was too young; others didn't like pop music and some felt that the Beatles had not done that much for Liverpool anyway.

But as financial condition of Liverpool, England's third-largest city, has worsened, city planners have become more interested in using the Beatles as a tourist attraction.

Once a leading port, Liverpool has declined as trade shifted, and the area in northwestern England has an unemployment rate of almost 20 percent.

The murder of Beatle John Lennon, 40, in New York in December 1980 actually began the revival of interest in the Beatles here as thousands of fans flocked again to the banks of Liverpool's Mersey River.

Now Liverpool is planning to open a Beatles museum, and musical festivals are being planned.

The remaining Beatles have not been active in these plans, although Paul McCartney, who still visits friends in Liverpool regularly, donated a number of items to the museum.

Cynthia Lennon, John's first wife, has been cooperating closely with the museum's organizers, but Yoko Ono, John's second wife, and Beatle George Harrison, who lives in relative seclusion in southern England, have both declined to become involved.

"Beatles Memory Tours" are also being planned. A Saturday tour, with a specially trained female tour guides, includes stops at Penny Lane and the orphanage "Strawberry Fields." "Penny Lane" and "Strawberry Fields Forever" were among some of the Beatles many hit songs.

Up to now, strangers to the city had trouble finding these place by themselves.

NBC shows new, 'weird'

By SUSAN PAYNTER
Hearst Feature Service

Some new network shows are too weird for many words, so here are a few words about three of this fall's strangest shows – all on NBC.

Being bizarre is no barrier to success in show biz, so "Mr. Smith" may be the sleeper hit of the year. It stars 10-year-old and already-famous C.J., the movie-star orangutan who was the best supporting actor to Clint Eastwood in "Every Which Way but Loose" and Bo Derek's leading ape in "Tarzan."

Like many stars, C.J. is changing his name (to Mr. Smith) and going for broader exposure. This time, he'll be top banana, playing a performing orangutan who accidentally is imbued with the intelligence of Einstein. Leonard Frey will be his government-assigned liaison, and Mr. Smith will secretly work on special projects for the State Department.

With the writer-creators of "Taxi" and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" behind him, Mr. Smith is not an ape who's apt to be silly. Ed Weinberger and Stan Daniels are known for their witty dialogue and winning ways of working human values into comedy scripts. Through Mr. Smith, they say, we'll see our world and its absurdities through the fresh eyes of this outsider.

The gimmick? It's already leaked out that for some scenes and TV ads there's been a real live (little) man inside the monkey suit. "Mr. Smith" airs on Fridays.

The ads showing Grannie with a smoking shotgun give you some idea that NBC's new "The Rousters" isn't your ordinary family series. It's the oddest concept and collection of characters to confront a reviewer yet this year.

Stalwart Chad Everett is no longer a good doctor – he's Wyatt Earp III, a carnival roustabout raising a son and trying to live down his moniker. And then there's Mom (Maxine Stuart), an unabashed carbon copy of Ruth Gordon's role in "Every Which Way but Loose." She natters a lot about the Earp legend and shoots at any stranger who come too close to her trailer.

On the carny's sawdust fringes is Earp's pea-brained brother Evan (Jim Varney), a mechanic who thinks he can fix everything but dogs and cats. Of course, none of the machinery ever runs again. And Hoyt Axton plays the carnival's bedrock-solid, good ol' boy owner.

All this insanity springs from the fevered mind of writer Stephen J. Cannell, the man behind such diverse hits as "The A Team" and "The Rockford Files." "The Rousters" will be seen on Saturdays.

Festival to be held

The fourth annual Asbury Fall Festival will be in Midland County Exhibit Building, East Highway 80, Oct. 15 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. A public preview will be Oct. 14 from 3 to 9 p.m.

This event is sponsored by Asbury United Methodist Church. Activities Oct. 15 include games for children, local talent performing in the Showmobile and arts and crafts created by local as well as regional artisans. Barbecue lunch and homemade ice cream will be sold.

Admission is free for children and $1 for adults.

Couple to end series

"Music From the Merry Heart: Show Tunes and Novelty Songs," featuring the voices of Ty Morris and Linda Morris, will conclude the Museum of the Southwest's Notable Notes Series.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris will be accompanied by pianist Linda Sellers.

The free performance is set for 3 p.m. Sunday at the museum, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. The museum staff suggest, due to the popularity of this concert series, that people arrive early.

Sutherland wows opera audience

NEW YORK (AP) — The phenomenon of the opera, Dame Joan Sutherland, sang the title role in "The Daughter of the Regiment" on the second night of the Metropolitan Opera's season Tuesday.

She isn't the slip of a girl Donizetti may have had in mind. But vocally she displayed the most wonderful youthful, agile, beautiful, voice. Her coloratura is as silver, true and under control as ever.

'E.T.' star in new movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Remember that shadowy government agent in "E.T. — The Extra-Terrestrial," the one adult who seemed concerned for the well-being of the lovable little spaceling?

Maybe not, because the movie was dominated by E.T. and his juvenile friends. But Peter Coyote — now there's a name that's easy to remember — added a great deal of strength to the movie. He does the same in "Cross Creek," a much acclaimed new film based on the memoirs of Pulitzer Prize-winning writer Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings.

Coyote plays Norton Baskin, a hotel keeper who falls for Miss Rawlings (Mary Steenbergen) when she seeks refuge and inspiration in the Florida backwaters.

Andropov attacks arms move

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov says President Reagan's latest proposal to limit nuclear arms in Europe is an attempt to build NATO strength while disarming Moscow, but he did not reject the plan outright.

Andropov said the Soviets were committed to "peace on Earth" and termed Reagan's offer a "so-called new move" that did not significantly alter the U.S. stand at Geneva talks on limiting medium-range missiles.

The Soviet president and Communist Party chief accused the United States of "unwillingness to conduct serious talks of any kind on arms control." His statement was carried Wednesday by the official Soviet news agency Tass.

"In brief, we are proposed to talk on how to help the NATO bloc to upset to its advantage the balance of medium-range nuclear systems in the European zone. And this move is presented brazen-facedly as something new," he said.

ON MONDAY, in a speech at the United Nations, Reagan offered to halt deployment of an unspecified number of the 572 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles on the continent if the Soviets dismantle some of their SS-20 missile force aimed at Western Europe. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization plans to start deploying the U.S. missiles in December.

The State Department said Wednesday the world would be "disappointed" in Andropov's response to Reagan's initiative.

It said the response was "a threatening restatement of their long-standing position that the Soviets will maintain their monopoly of intermediate range missiles in Europe. For our part, we will continue to work in Geneva for a negotiated settlement that strengthens international peace and security."

BUT UNLIKE past instances, Andropov did not attack Reagan's so-called zero option and interim proposal offers to withdraw or reduce medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe. Nor did he mention the inclusion of British and French nuclear missiles at the Geneva talks, which has been a key Soviet demand.

Moscow has objected consistently to NATO's deployment of any new nuclear missiles in Western Europe. It claims that the 162 missiles already deployed by France and Britain are enough protection.

Vice President George Bush said Wednesday in Washington that "there has to be an answer found for the British and French missiles" if the United States and Soviets want to conclude a missile-reduction pact in Europe.

President Francois Mitterrand of France, in an address to the U.N. General Assembly on Wednesday, rejected the Soviet proposal to include his country's nuclear arsenal in a super-power deal to reduce intermediate-range missiles.

"It is unacceptable to include the central defense system on which the independence and survival of my country rest with the intermediate-range nuclear forces of the two superpowers, which in their case merely complement their formidable strategic arsenals," Mitterrand said.

ANDROPOV reiterated that the Soviet Union is willing to reach accord on limiting nuclear arms in Europe but also that the East bloc will not allow the West to undermine what the Soviets consider their security needs.

"It would not be advisable to anyone to stage a trial of strength," he said. "On our part, we do not seek such a trial of strength. The very thought of this is alien to us."

A GOOD USED CAR... MORE CAR FOR THE MONEY.

Year in and year out...cars depreciate in value. You've heard it. But it's not true! Cars only depreciate each year in price, not in value, because the next year's models have arrived.

There's a difference between price and value. Today's late model used cars, specially those that received good care, actually can give you as much value as a new one. When you can buy a good used car for thousands of dollars less than a new one...that's real value. Our reputation for offering good value for the money is your best assurance...buying your used car.
