On the issues

It's election year and Midlanders face decisions on an array of candidates and issues in the April 3 election. To help with those decisions, The Reporter-Telegram has scheduled a 14-part series on the candidates and bond issues. Watch for Part One Sunday.

OPEC leader urges defense of base price

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC's president today urged the world oil cartel to maintain its benchmark price of $34 a barrel as the group focused on ways to reduce production in order to dry up the world market surplus of oil.

"There is no way to touch the $34-per-barrel benchmark," said Mana Saeed Oteiba, the United Arab Emirates oil minister who is the current president of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and chairman of the oil ministers' conference here.

Market analysts believe that if OPEC does not agree on production cuts below the current level, estimated as high as 19 million barrels a day, prices of crude oil and refined products will continue to fall.

Oteiba and other key ministers were urging lower production as the way to defend the organization's price structure.

Tayeh Abdul-Karim, the Iraqi minister, said OPEC delegates meeting at a Vienna hotel hoped to agree on reducing the production ceiling to 18.5 million barrels a day.

"We are ready to defend (the $34 price) until the end of the year," Abdul-Karim told reporters as the ministers gathered for an informal meeting.

"We will see how we can defend the price we agreed on in Abu Dhabi," said Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto, referring to the benchmark that was set last October at an OPEC meeting in the United Arab Emirates.

With a recession-spurred world industrial slowdown, an oil glut and production levels already at a 13-year-low, OPEC ministers have a hard choice. They can further trim production to restore balance between supply and demand or face new downward pressures on their prices.

The 13-member cartel's benchmark price of $34-a-barrel for Saudi Arabian light crude already is undercut by as much as $6 a barrel on spot markets, where oil is sold to the highest bidder. The average contract price has dipped to about $33 for a 42-gallon barrel from about $35 a barrel a year ago.

Price reductions spurred by the glut, increased conservation and undercutting by non-OPEC producers have pushed down the average retail price of gasoline in the United States by about 10 cents a gallon in the past year.

"I hope they (the ministers) are all ready to sacrifice, to defend the $34 price," Oteiba said as the ministers gathered for an informal discussion Thursday evening.

Earlier, Oteiba said OPEC must cut production below its current level of 19 million barrels a day. He would not speculate on a lower ceiling.

Industry analysts say OPEC would have to cut production to 16 million barrels a day to balance supply and demand.

Army 'unaware' slain journalists were with rebels

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Four Dutch television newsmen who left San Salvador to cover the guerrilla side of El Salvador's war were killed when an army patrol returned fire from a rebel band, the Defense Ministry says.

Defense Minister Jose Guillermo Garcia said in a statement the army patrol was unaware the journalists were with the guerrillas it said were operating 35 miles north of San Salvador in Chalatenango province, a leftist stronghold near the Honduran border.

Gen. Garcia said the Dutchmen were killed in a 40-minute gunfight Wednesday night after the rebels fired at the army patrol near the village of San Nicolas Piedras Gordas.

"The armed forces profoundly lament what happened and reiterate their request for the collaboration of Salvadoran and foreign journalists in not exposing themselves so imprudently by traveling to areas that could involve the danger of activities by subversives that international communism promotes in our country," he said.

The victims were identified as Jacobus Andries Koster, 46, producer; Jacobs Jan Willenssen, 42, cameraman; Jan Kornelius Kuyper, 40, director, and Hans Lodewijk Ter Laag, soundman.

age unknown. "Their faces were so shot out that we could hardly recognize our friends," said one of two Dutch journalists who identified them.

Foreign Undersecretary Alejandro Gomez said police questioned the four March 11 after Koster's name, hotel room and telephone number were found on the body of a dead guerrilla. Gomez said the four denied knowing any rebels and were released after five hours.

"If there is any question about how they were killed, the army will conduct a thorough investigation," he said.

Colleagues said the four men left San Salvador by car Wednesday afternoon to rendezvous with a rebel group so they could report on the guerrilla struggle in the Central American nation.

Reporters who visited the scene of the killings said they found empty cartridges in one part of a rocky field, two piles of bloody clothes and drag marks for 100 yards. They said one shirt had a Dutch label, and bullet holes in some of the clothes indicated shots were fired from behind.

Four others in the guerrilla group also were killed, the Defense Ministry said.

Shuttle 'rehearsal' begins

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts and flight controllers conducted a rare, mid-countdown dress rehearsal today — a final simulation of the shuttle Columbia's descent and landing onto an ill-equipped gypsum runway in New Mexico's desolate Tularosa Basin.

Equipment is coming, by the trainload, from California where furious rains washed out the primary landing site at Edwards Air Force Base. The most crucial machinery is to arrive well before Monday's 10 a.m. EST launch.

On launch pad 39A, where Columbia is being readied for its third mission, the countdown was several hours behind schedule — but NASA planned to use part of the 29 hours of scheduled "hold time" to make up the slippage. The repairs that would be made during hold time involved a computer and a fuel line regulator.

Meanwhile, Kennedy Space Center technicians prepared to complete service on Columbia's orbital engines by pressurizing the fuel tanks. The cockpit windows were being washed; the backup computer was being programmed.

The remote and secretive U.S. Army Missile Range at White Sands, N.M., bustling with unaccustomed activity as hundreds of NASA and contractor personnel were preparing to handle the first touchdown by the shuttle at a contingency landing site.

No public viewing of the shuttle landing will be allowed — a far cry from the shuttle's first two landings, when huge crowds flocked to the Mojave Desert to watch the Columbia return from space.

Barring any problems, Marine Col. Jack R. Lousma and Air Force Col. C. Gordon Fullerton are to pilot the spaceship on a "textbook test flight," thoroughly flexing its systems for seven days and guiding it to a landing on March 29. If the weather turns ugly at White Sands, alternate landing sites are shorter, paved runways at Edwards and at Cape Canaveral.

For Lousma and Fullerton, the shift of landing sites 800 miles to the east should cause no problem. "They've flown (practice flights) into White Sands more than they have into Edwards," spokesman John Lawrence said.

New 'Speaking Out' column to make its debut this Sunday

'Winning plan' sought for state water crisis

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The water issue in West Texas is approaching the crisis stage. And unless the citizenry now is willing to pay the costs for good water and for cleaning up water it dirties, the situation could become overwhelming.

That, at least, seemed to be the consensus in a session Thursday night on proposals to amend the 1969 Texas Water Plan.

"The issue is extremely important," said William "Bill" Rapp, a Midland civil engineer. "Surely, surely, the citizens will come forth" and devise a "winning plan" on solving the water crisis and "sell it to our voters."

But Rapp alluded to apathy as the great hindrance to problem-solving and suggested that until the problem causes so much pain, it may remain virtually unsolvable.

He referred to Dante's "Inferno" and to a passage about a special "niche" in Hades for the "uncommitted souls who do not commit themselves in times of crisis."

APPROXIMATELY 50 people from Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Andrews, San Angelo and Austin showed at Midland Regional Airport to air their views or to listen to viewpoints on amending

Bond issues 'top priority,' speakers say

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The upcoming bond elections are the top priorities of the city council and the school district, two representatives of those organizations told the Kiwanis Club during a luncheon meeting Thursday at the Broken Spoke Restaurant.

"In August, we (the Midland City Council) put together a five-year plan. It (the bond issue) was considered a moderate priority. The bond issue was about number four on the list," said

City Councilman Steve Davidson.

"Now it's number one." "This phenomenal growth caught everybody by surprise and now we're all playing catch up," agreed Gary Hopper, Midland Independent School District trustee.

The $7 million city bond issue and the $9.475 million school bond issue will be brought to the voters in the April 3 elections.

The MISD bond issue includes construction of two elementary schools, 20 classrooms to be added to existing facilities and additions to Midland Freshman High School. "We're in just about a crisis situation," Hopper said.

THE ACTUAL ENROLLMENT of students in the school district was 16,476 on Jan. 14. Hopper said projected enrollment for the 1986-87 school year will jump to 21,581.

"That's more than 5,000 students in the next four years or so," he explained.

And although the Permian Basin area is experiencing a recession, compared to its usual activity, and oil and supply companies are regrouping, Hopper said growth in the schools will continue.

"We had a team come in (to assess the growth) and they took everything into consideration," he explained.

"Even with the slow-down in this town, we are still going to need these schools."

Hopper emphasized that school

Water amendments outlined at session

the Texas Water Plan. "We need legislation to prohibit dumping, discharge, or irrigation of sewage effluent water short of tertiary treatment," voiced Midland County Commissioner Charlie Welch.

"I realize that the first reaction you will hear is about the prohibitive cost of this treatment," which cleans up the water and allows its re-use and return to the underground fresh-water zones. "But when cities like Midland and Odessa have to pay for the damage they have already done to the underground aquifer," said Welch, who has been a critic of the cities' handling of waste water, "tertiary treatment will look cheap."

"Communities that are already importing water, and are looking for additional water sources without recycling the water they already have, have no right to ask other people to send their water to them," said Welch.

WELCH AND RAPP were among a dozen citizens who addressed a three-man panel, which represented the Governor's Task Force on Water Use and Conservation and the Texas Department of Water Resources.

Moderating was Bob Derrington, the city of Odessa's director of utilities, and also on the panel were O.H. Ivie, director of the Colorado River Municipal Water District, and Charles Nemir, deputy director of Water Resources. Scheduled to be on the panel but not present was Texas Senator E.L. Short, who is chairman of the Senate's subcommittee on water resources.

"There's no debate," Derrington said at the outset. "We're not going to agree on any rules or regulations tonight."

"Water is not an option in our lives and business, but a necessity," he said in quoting a viewpoint. The input to the Task Force is being compiled in 13 sessions across the state and will be considered by the Task Force in amending the Texas Water Plan. Nemir, who said that the Task Force is "not getting the response" it needs from the citizenry to amend the plan, said that concerned citizens may mail their proposals to the Texas Department of Water Resources in Austin.

Winston Barclay, manager of Texas Electric Service Co.'s Western Division, noted that TESCO has been "involved in water development" for four decades.

"WATER AND electricity are vital to the economic growth of the area," Barclay said.

Barclay's concern was that the private and public sectors would strive together toward a common solution, that the water plan would allow utility companies to "work hand in hand" with municipalities, and that those, including TESCO, who do the research, planning and development "will be able to retain the water that they have developed."

"There's a growing need for energy in the state that must be met," he said. "Water is necessary in generating electricity."

Kathy Kohls, manager of the Glasscock County Underground Water District, said that the farmers in the Garden City-St. Lawrence-Midkiff areas "are ever-concerned about the threat of water contamination by oilfield pollution."

Mrs. Kohls, who said that the district has "the power to import water" purchased from a state agency, recommended a tax-incentive program for farmers and others who conserve water.

MIDLAND LEAGUE of Women Voters President Terri Trentham recommended that the Texas Water Plan "address the issue of the vast amount of ground water contamination caused by brines" and that the Water Resources use its authority "to control the withdrawal of ground water."

Midland environmentalist Midge Erskine referred to water contamination caused by runoff of chemicals used in agriculture and by brines used in the oil field.

Mrs. Erskine held it "immoral besides being short-sighted" for oil companies to use fresh water rather than brines in the secondary recovery of oil.

June Naylor of Odessa's League of Women Voters also was critical of the use of fresh water in recovering oil.

She alluded to the natural order of re-cycling water "over and over and over and over..."

"Water used in oil production is lost forever" and drops out of "this cycle," she said.

Mrs. Naylor referred to Senator Short, who she said, said that, "After all, when a company buys it (water), we don't ask them what they use it for."

"We're a big state," Mrs. Naylor said. "We're short on water, and we have a big problem."

MRS. NAYLOR recommended that local governments be encouraged to give tax breaks to individuals, businesses and companies that are "good at conserving water." She also requested that the Task Force check into the "expensive and sensitive" issues of desalination and the importation of water.

She said that the Odessa League recommended the importation of water. That position, she said, is in opposition to the Texas League of Women Voters' stand on importation. "We are a minority view (on water importation)," Mrs. Naylor said.

However, Lois Carpenter, the League's state vice president for programs, quickly righted Mrs. Naylor's apparent misconception of the League's stance. The League "does not either support or oppose" water importation, Mrs. Carpenter said.

In turning to the Odessa League's official stand on water issues, Mrs. Naylor said that the Odessa League is concerned.

—Over the scarcity of surface water in the High and South Plains — from Amarillo to Midland.

"There is not an agency in the state that has regulated the use of fresh water in oil and gas production," she said in quoting the Odessa League's stance. "The Railroad Commission has ruled that it does not have the authority to regulate" the use of fresh water in oil production. The Texas Water Act gives this responsibility to the Texas Department of Water Resources."

DERRINGTON, the session's moderator, did address water conservation. And, as an ex-smoker, he mentioned a "most excessive and wasteful" use of water: tossing a lit cigarette into a commode "and taking five gallons of water" to put it out. He said usage of water in toilets and showers could be cut in half.

"We've got to be united or we're going to become stagnated," Derrington said.

Ivie, who is headquartered at Big Spring, speculated that West Texans aren't yet ready "to bite the bullet" and to pay for the cleaning up of waste water. At present, the cause of bringing water to households in municipalities is $1 per 1,000 gallons and the cost of "hauling" off the dirtied waters is about 25 cents per 1,000 gallons.

In response to Ivie's comment that "Texans aren't ready to 'bite the bullet' and pay the price of cleaning up water," Mrs. Naylor said that "When they're thirsty enough, they'll pay."

By then, said Ivie, "They're dead." He said it would take 10 years to develop such a massive system.

Rex Holt of Odessa said he "can't learn what's supposed to be in my (tap) and exactly how hazardous certain chemicals are to his health.

On water conservation, Holt said he has a brick in his toilet to displace water used in flushing. But Derrington said that that wasn't such a good idea; the brick will deteriorate and ruin the plumbing. Instead, Derrington recommended water-filled plastic bags in the water tanks of commodes.

NAOMI CHANDLER of the Warfield community between Midland and Odessa said that "water contamination is my first problem."

"We have to shut down our irrigation wells," said Mrs. Chandler. She and her husband, Vernon, farm south of Midland Regional Airport. "My wells are ruined, they're gone." She said that the chemical and salt contents in their water is so high that they have to irrigate at night. Otherwise, the reaction of the sun on the contaminated water on the cotton will burn the cotton plants.

Monahans Draw, which cuts through the Chandlers' farm land, carries secondary-treated waste water from Odessa's sewage treatment plant. And Mrs. Chandler alluded to the city of Midland's waste-water problems and the proposal to pump primary-treated effluent southeast of Midland and near the Midland-Glasscock County line and along Johnson Draw.

"It looks like they (Midland) are trying to do to Glasscock County what Odessa did to us" in running sewage effluent down Monahans Draw. "We've seen good water go bad," she said. "Before we consider importation (of water)," she said, "we should realize that we're destroying what we already have. We can't live without water, and that's almost what we're looking at."

City, school bond issues 'top priority,' speakers say

administrators were not using the bond election as the only source of relief from the overcrowded classrooms. He explained that board members had approved the elimination of full-day kindergarten classes, temporary buildings and the restructuring of the child care transfer policy in an effort to provide more room for the rapidly expanding student enrollment.

"It (the bond issue) is not going to be an overnight solution by any means," he said. "But if we don't pass the bond issue, the new school (presently under construction from last year's bond issue) would have 705 students by 1986."

Hopper said that by the time the new school opens in the 1983 fall semester it will have 531 students enrolled. THE PRIMARY GRADES are growing at an annual rate of 13.5 percent while the district is experiencing an overall annual growth of 10 percent, Hopper said.

"Probably year after next, we'll see a dramatic growth increase in our freshman schools," he said. "And the high schools will be getting crowded in the next eight or 10 years.

As far as taxes are concerned, Hopper said that if a person owns a house with an assessed market value of $65,000, he will pay $25.25. A house with a $95,000 assessed market value would require $36.95 in additional taxes.

"It is the only way we can do it — by asking the taxpayers to foot the bill," Hopper said.

"But it is a bargain, if you want to call it that, for the future of our young people of this town."

The $7 million city bond issue includes $3 million for street improvements, $1 million for City Hall expansions, $500,000 for police department renovations, $500,000 for vehicle maintenance building expansion and $2 million for construction of two fire substations.

"In my perspective and in my lifetime, there has never been a more important bond issue on the ballot," Davidson said.

Due to the tremendous growth of subdivisions in north Midland, Davidson said providing fire and ambulance service for these people was imperative.

THE VEHICLE maintenance building, which was built in the early 1960s to house 100 vehicles, is now trying to service 500 vehicles.

And the City Hall, which was built in 1965 with 21,000-22,000 square feet, is now serving a 30 percent larger population.

"We have got to get the City Hall up to 1982 standards," Davidson said. "We are not going to build a Taj Mahal, but we need something to recruit good employees to the City Hall."

He explained that job applicants now must wait in the hall as there is no specific room available for waiting or even taking aptitude tests.

When questioned about the $5 million passed in a previous bond issue for repairs to streets due to a damaging rain and freeze about 10 years ago, Davidson said that three major thoroughfares were specified for improvements.

Those include Illinois Avenue, from Midland Drive to Midkiff Road; Garfield Street, from Ohio Avenue to Wadley Avenue; and Midland Drive, from Illinois Avenue to Andrews Highway.

"Our streets are deteriorating because they are carrying what they aren't supposed to," Davidson said, adding that part of Midkiff Road was designed to carry 1,000 vehicles per day instead of the 25,000 it presently services.

"Those funds are going to have to be earmarked for the major thoroughfares," he said.

The $7 million city bond issue to be decided by voters on April 3 is part of $48 million of badly needed expenditures. These consist of $15 million for Midland Regional Airport, $23 million for water and sewer projects — with $20 million of that going for a sewage disposal system — and $3 million for unspecified water and sewer projects.

The airport construction will be financed through certificates of obligation, the $23 million in water projects will be paid by bonds sold through the Colorado River Municipal Water District and the $3 million in unspecified water and sewer needs will come from revenue bonds.

Amarillo lawyer seeks nomination for attorney general

By ED TODD Staff Writer

An Amarillo lawyer who entered politics and then education is making an effort to return to the practice of law in a political way — via the attorney general route.

Max Sherman, who is seeking the Democratic Party's nomination for the Texas attorney generalship in the May 1 primary election, said in Midland on Thursday that the race is not about issues. "The issues are all legislative."

"It's a law office. It ought to have good lawyers...and run like a good office," said Sherman, who resigned the presidency of West Texas State University at Canyon to seek the attorney generalship. "No, you're not the governor. You're not the legislature. You can advise."

Sherman, who is pledging an efficiently-operated Attorney General's Office, said that his WTSU presidency established his administration skills.

"The office needs to be run well," he said.

Sherman said he intends "to run the best law office possible and to remember that the goal of the Attorney General's Office is to serve the people and not add to the burden of government." Sherman, 47, was president of WTSU at Canyon from 1977 until mid-July 1982, when he resigned to pursue the statewide office. His tenure at the university was characterized by efforts to streamline the administration, cut costs and promote efficiency. "I will pursue those same efforts as attorney general," he said.

At WTSU, he administered a $23 million budget, cut costs, checked declining enrollment, built up the student count and "strengthened the academic standards." The university has 1,000 employees, including 370 faculty members, and 6,894 students.

The Attorney General's Office has a $14 million budget and a staff of 170 lawyers and 450 total employees.

From 1971 to 1977, Sherman was a state senator who three times — 1973, 1975 and 1977 — was picked by Texas Monthly magazine as one of the Ten Best Legislators and in 1977 was deemed "the unanimous choice as the best member of the Legislature." Sherman "has the ability to reason through problems." He was lauded for his integrity, fairness, intelligence and openness.

In the Senate, he chaired the Natural Resources Committee and served on the Jurisprudence and Finance Committees.

Sherman, who practiced law in Amarillo for 17 years, is a 1960 honors graduate of The University of Texas Law School.

"The public is going to be very well served" by the Attorney General's Office whose staff of quality lawyers constantly are upgrading their skills and expertise, Sherman said.

Two Midland attorneys — Ted Kerr and Bobby Sanders — have been named Sherman's campaign coordinators in the Midland area. Kerr is active in the State Bar of Texas. Sanders is a former briefing attorney with the Texas Supreme Court.

Of the five people in the race for state's No. 1 legal counsel, Sherman recently was favored by the Dallas Bar Association for the post. The Dallas Bar poll "reflects on the competency of candidates on a non-partisan level," reported Orrin Harrison, chairman of the Dallas Bar judiciary committee.

Sherman is seeking to succeed Attorney General Mark White, who opted not to seek re-election is his quest for the governorship.

Journalists' deaths to be investigated

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Foreign Minister Max van der Stoep today ordered the Dutch ambassador in Mexico to investigate the deaths of four Dutch journalists reportedly killed in a shootout between government troops and leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

"The minister was shocked at the news and wanted to establish the true circumstances of the death of the four men before deciding on possible further steps," a Foreign Ministry spokeswoman said.

Holland has diplomatic ties with El Salvador but is represented there only by an honorary consul-general.

The spokeswoman said Ambassador Baron Johan C.P. Speyart van Woerden, the Dutch envoy in Mexico City, was already en route to San Salvador to conduct the investigation.

The victims were identified as Jacobus Andries Koster, 46, a correspondent working for the Dutch Inter-Church Broadcasting Service (IKON); Jacobs Jan Willensen, 42, cameraman; Jan Cornelius Kuyper, 40, director, and Hans Lodewijk Ter Laag, soundman, 25.

Salvadoran authorities said they were killed Wednesday night near Santa Rita in Chalatenango province. IKON said it had no reports of any fighting in the area.

The four journalists were last seen alive when they left their hotel in San Salvador on Wednesday. Colleagues, who asked not to be identified, said the four planned to report on the guerrilla side of the Salvadoran civil war.

Nicaragua increases defenses against claimed U.S. invasion

By TOM FENTON
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Nicaragua's leftist government is beefing up its defenses to counter what it says are U.S. plans for an invasion from Honduras and is slapping a "patriotic tax" on businesses to pay for the buildup.

Reporters saw increased military patrols on the streets of this Central American capital Thursday as Defense Minister Humberto Ortega announced plans for the war tax.

His announcement came three days after the ruling three-man Sandinista junta declared a national state of emergency, tightening censorship of the media and suspending civil rights to counter the threat of an invasion it said was being readied by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and right-wing exiles in neighboring Honduras.

Ortega told reporters the junta would issue the new tax decree in a few days. He said the revenue was needed so other government funds would not be diverted from "programs to build homes, schools and other projects."

He gave no details.

Interior Minister Tomas Borge told a group of foreign correspondents Nicaragua would not invade Honduras "unless a conflict erupts that would do away with national borders."

Answering the Reagan administration's claim that his government is building a stronger army than it needs to defend Nicaragua, Borge said: "We have not denied that we've got arms. But I don't see why Mr. Reagan is taking the liberty of investigating us and what we've got. We're not trying to go to the United States to see how many atomic bombs they've got. It is impossible for us to disarm as long as we feel threatened."

In Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital, Foreign Minister Edgardo Paz Parnica said his government was worried about recent armed clashes with Nicaragua, including an exchange between patrol boats in the Gulf of Fonseca Monday.

Analyst hoping for honest elections

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON — The El Salvadoran government is adopting safeguards that should guarantee an honest election when voters there choose a constituent assembly on March 28, veteran elections analyst Richard Scammon says.

Scammon told a State Department news conference Thursday he based his assessment on inspection trips to El Salvador in December and February.

Past Salvadoran elections are widely believed to have been manipulated by El Salvador's military establishment, but Scammon said that possibility has been minimized this year by excluding the Salvadoran Army from the voting process.

Other confidence-building measures include protections against multiple voting by individual Salvadorans and the presence of between 150 and 200 foreign observers, he said.

Scammon, who was an observer for the 1967 national elections in South Vietnam, plans to return to El Salvador Tuesday to monitor the final days of campaigning and the election day balloting itself. The official U.S. delegation will be headed by Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan.

The Reagan administration has been strongly supporting the Salvadoran elections while opposing calls for the Salvadoran government to negotiate peace with leftist insurgents.

The leftist guerrillas have refused to participate in the elections, saying free and fair campaigns are impossible in the current atmosphere of political violence.

The administration's policy came under challenge Thursday from Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., who introduced a bill to cut off military aid to El Salvador unless the government there negotiates with the guerrillas.

Hatfield, one of the early opponents of American involvement in Vietnam, said his amendment is aimed at strengthening the hand of moderates both in the government and in the opposition.

Joining him in sponsorship of the amendment were Senate Democrats Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Thomas Eagleton of Missouri, and Republican Lowell Weicker of Connecticut. Two Republicans introduced an identical measure in the House.

Hatfield said his amendment does not conflict with the Salvadoran plan under which the March 28 constituent assembly elections will be followed by presidential and parliamentary elections next year.

In San Salvador, meanwhile, Vice President Jaime Abdul Gutierrez, an Army colonel, pledged that the Salvadoran armed forces will remain neutral in the elections and "guarantee the right of the people to decide their own destiny."

DEATHS

Sarah McDonald

Memorial services for Sarah English McDonald, 84, of Stamford, were to be at 11:30 a.m. today at the Chapel of the First Presbyterian Church of Midland with Dr. Ray Riddle officiating. Grave-side services will be at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Willow Wild Cemetery in Bonham. Services are under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Wednesday in a Midland hospital.

Mrs. McDonald was born July 11, 1897, in Bonham. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George L. English and the granddaughter of Bailey English, a founder of Bonham. She was a well-known artist and art instructor. She began her art education at Stamford College in Stamford. She then studied at the Chicago Art Institute in Chicago, Frank Klepper Studios in Dallas and Claremont College in California.

She exhibited her work by invitation in Dallas and other leading cities. Mrs. McDonald served as trustee for Texas Fine Arts Association in Austin. She was a charter member of the Creative Sketch Club and the Museum of Fine Arts in Abilene. In the 1920s, she was a freelance artist for the advertising department of Arthur A. Everts and Lutz Jewlers in Dallas. In addition, she created the cover and art work for the 1950 Rotunda SMU Campus Yearbook including full-page water color paintings and etchings. She painted with well-known Western artist Frank Tenney Johnson. Wayne Baize, another well-known artist, was one of her students. She was the widow of William P. McDonald and a sister of the late Robert L. English of Dallas.

Survivors include a son, William P. McDonald III of Dallas, two daughters, Mrs. James R. Meyers of Kirkwood, Mo., and Sarah English McDonald of Midland; two sisters, Mrs. L.S. Abbott of Claremont, Calif., and Mrs. John F. Evans of Irving; two brothers, Charles G. English of Lubbock and Jeff D. English of Odessa; four grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be directed to the Fort English Historical Society of Bonham or the Texas Crippled Childrens' Hospital of Dallas.

Madeline Wheat

Services for Madeline M. Wheat, 78, of 1707 Western Drive, were to be at 10 a.m. today at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Steve Edwards, senior minister of the First Christian Church, officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Tuesday in a Midland hospital.

Pallbearers will be Mike Borland, Steven Wheat, Guy Burleson, James Laughlin, Joe Will Maxwell of Blum and Richard Jeskie of Austin.

Kathleen Davidson

Kathleen Davidson, 62, of Tucumcari, N.M., died Thursday in a Midland hospital.

Services are pending in Tucumcari under the direction of Dunn Funeral Home. Local arrangements are being handled by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Davidson was born May 4, 1919, in Arkansas. She had been in Midland for a month, visiting her daughter. She had been a resident of Tucumcari for more than 40 years.

Survivors include a daughter, Doris Vealquez of Midland, two brothers, two sisters, two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Habib gains ground in ceasefire

By R. GREGORY NOKES Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration appears to have succeeded in heading off a potential new outbreak of fighting between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, although officials caution that a ceasefire remains fragile.

Philip C. Habib, President Reagan's special Mideast negotiator, managed to strengthen the ceasefire between the PLO and Israel during a recently completed mission to the region, it was clear from the comments of several officials Thursday.

Habib told reporters following a meeting with Reagan that he doesn't think Israel will attack Palestinian forces in southern Lebanon.

"They will not attack. That's my understanding," Habib said. "What I received was a clear indication they wish to abide by the ceasefire," he added.

Habib said that although violations of the ceasefire have been "of minor significance compared with the situation that existed last spring...the situation should still be described as fragile."

The unwritten ceasefire originally went into effect in July following heavy fighting between the PLO and Israel. Already, it has lasted much longer than many people, including some well-placed U.S. officials, had expected.

One official said Habib's latest success clearly reinforces the ceasefire. "It's another brick in the wall," he said. "The more often we say we are hopeful the ceasefire will last, the more trust we have it will not be broken." He asked not to be identified by name.

Only weeks ago, a renewed outbreak of fighting seemed imminent. The Israelis had built up their forces along their border with Lebanon, while accusing PLO units of doing the same on the Lebanese side.

Israel's new U.S. ambassador, Moshe Arens, had told reporters here the situation in southern Lebanon was deteriorating and he thought it was only a matter of time before Israel was provoked into attacking PLO installations there.

The key to strengthening the ceasefire was to extend it to bar attacks by the PLO from Lebanon into Israel through third countries, notably Syria and Jordan. The Israelis were insisting on this because the PLO had carried out some attacks against its territory through third countries.

Habib visited all of the key countries in the region. While the United States doesn't negotiate directly with the PLO, it was understood that contacts were made through Saudi Arabia.

Dean Fischer, the State Department spokesman, disclosed the strengthened agreement to reporters Thursday.

Since the PLO and the Israelis do not talk to each other, and therefore won't acknowledge there is a ceasefire agreement between them, Fischer's announcement was couched in terms of a new interpretation of the original ceasefire rather than anything new, although clearly it was.

"The cessation of hostilities pertains to all hostile military activities from Lebanon into Israel and vice-versa, and therefore any hostile action originating from Lebanon but going through Syria and Jordan into Israel would be a violation of the ceasefire," Fischer said. "The same would apply to an Israeli action into Lebanon transiting international waters or foreign territory."

Fischer said the interpretation of what would constitute a violation of the ceasefire "is put somewhat more precisely than we have put it in the past."

Hussein talks of war

NEW YORK (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan says the Middle East is approaching the brink of war because of dangerous rifts among Arab nations and Israel's continued occupation of the West Bank, today's editions of The New York Times reported.

In an interview at his residential palace outside Amman, Hussein told the Times. "We are passing through one of the most critical stages we have witnessed in our time. It is far more serious than it has ever been."

West Bank Palestinians strike against Israeli government

By ARTHUR MAX Associated Press Writer

EL BIREH. Occupied West Bank — Palestinians in the occupied West Bank decreed a general strike today to protest Israel's dismissal of El Bireh's mayor and council.

They were fired for boycotting the area's Israeli civilian administration.

Ibrahim Tawil, the dismissed mayor, received a stream of Palestinian well-wishers and journalists in his home and said he believed the struggle against Israeli rule will continue. Israel seized the West Bank from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East war.

"I am one person out of many," Tawil said. "It is the duty of others now, they can continue."

Shops were closed in El Bireh and the adjacent city of Ramallah, but only a few Israeli troops were seen patrolling.

Tawil said he had refused to cooperate with the new governor "because we consider the civil administration a way to legalize the occupation. If we deal with them it means accepting them, and this will give it (Israel) the legality they ask for."

On Thursday Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon ordered Menachem Milson, head of the civilian administration, to fire Tawil and his councilmen.

The dismissals climaxed months of confrontation between the civilian administration which replaced Israel's West Bank military government last November.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, March 20, 1982
YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Writer/comedian Carl Reiner, auto executive Roland Peugeot, actor Hal Linden and former hockey star Bobby Orr celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: former TV game host-turned-cable TV system owner Jack Barry. Creative enterprises and the support of influential people help you find unique success this year. You learn to curb a tendency to be impulsive and win new financial rewards. Do not make secret pacts; they could prove a hindrance to progress. Club memberships lead to romance. A child helps you uncover a very special love. Ideas that did not work previously can now be put to good use.
ARIES (March 21-April 19): Several exciting new developments work in your favor. Show more confidence in your abilities and ideas. You could meet some very interesting people this evening.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Friend may suggest a bold change in your financial plans. Turn his/her proposal down, but leave a large loop-hole for the future. You feel sociable tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your relationship with a member of the opposite sex is put to a new test. You may feel reluctant to form alliances. Do not divulge another person's secrets.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Speculation, creative projects and joint ventures bring new financial gains. A friend introduces you to a fascinating person who will play an important role in your future.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Previous commitments must be kept. Loved one's support is very valuable—especially if you find yourself short-handed at work. A give-and-take attitude helps promote harmony.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Teamwork and cooperation give you a feeling of security about your relationship with someone you have long admired. You may be headed down a new road to romance.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Social events and shopping expeditions lift your spirits. Your finances get a well-deserved boost in the form of a surprise gift or bonus. Joint ventures prove rewarding.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You could have a special reason for celebrating today. Why not stay home and invite in a few friends? Make certain you respect loved ones' wishes when carrying out your plans.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An excellent day for indulging any harmless and inexpensive whims. A certain amount of excitement is in the air! Plan ahead for a special vacation or journey.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You discover quite casually that your popularity is at an all-time high! Others look to you for advice. Material possessions may be more important than usual to you right now.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stay out of other people's domestic affairs! A relationship reaches a turning point without any effort on your part. Let things develop naturally.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A career decision that should have been made long ago can no longer be postponed. Loved ones may not understand. A confidential talk helps. Maintain an optimistic attitude.

A spade shift in itself was not enough. Suppose that West led the ace and queen of spades. Declarer would simply hold up the king one round, and the defenders would get only two spades and two diamonds. In an effort to force declarer to play the king of spades, West made the devilish shift to the queen!
Note that if declarer covers with the king of spades, the defenders will collect three spade tricks when West wins his second diamond trick. But declarer was aware of what was happening and he foiled that plan by playing a low spade from dummy!
West had yet another surprise up his sleeve for declarer. He continued with a low spade! Had declarer ducked a second time, the contract would have been defeated. But West was marked with the ace of spades for his opening bid, so declarer put up dummy's king. Another diamond forced out the ace, and the best that West could do was to cash the ace of spades to hold declarer to his contract.

Answer on Market Page

The battle between an astute defender and a fine declarer is one of the most exhilarating sights at a bridge table. West's defense was a brilliant effort, but declarer was equal to the task.
Despite West's opening bid, North-South had little problem in reaching three no trump. West made his normal lead of the fourth-best heart. Declarer took the king in dummy and East contributed the three to this trick. Declarer led a diamond to the jack and West's king.
Since his partner had followed with the three of hearts to the first trick, declarer was virtually marked with both the ace and queen of that suit. Therefore, West decided that there was little future in persisting with that suit. South surely had the king of clubs for his venture into no trump, so if the contract was going to be defeated, the only suit likely to produce enough tricks quickly was spades. And East had to hold the jack of spades if that was to be accomplished.
