BSHS students show support for ill classmate

By TOMMY WELLS
Sports Editor

Brooke Marshall admits she doesn't really know every student that attends Big Spring High School. What the junior does know is something more basic: Everyone who attends the school – whether they know each other or not – share a special bond. They are, in a way, family.

Thus, it made Marshall proud to see her classmates turn out in full force earlier this week to help one of their own during a special “Briana Night” at Lady Steers Park. Members of the BSHS Student Council, along with members of the community, put “family” first by holding a fund-raiser for Briana Mendoza during the high school softball team’s showdown with rival Snyder.

Mendoza, a 17-year-old senior at Big Spring High School, was diagnosed with Ewing’s Sarcoma — a rare form of cancer in which cancer cells are found in the bone or in soft tissue — in February and is currently undergoing treatment. Ewing’s Sarcoma is most often diagnosed in young teens and young adults.

“I don’t really know her personally, but I think it is great that everyone is trying to help her and her family,” said Marshall, who has split time with the BSHS varsity and junior varsity this season. “It’s nice to see everyone on the community

DAILY PRAYER

May we remain diligent about reading Your word, Lord, for our life.

Amen

An exercise, or somethig sinister?

It's fascinating, isn't it? Jade Helm 15, military exercises in our back yards at 3 a.m., Walmart closings in “strategic locations” across the nation, and speculation of a government take-over becoming one of the hottest topics of conversation in coffee shops and living rooms across America.

Admittedly, I wish I could trust the government and the media to tell me the truth about everything, but I know that isn't going to happen. It's never been true, and in recent years the documented list of outright lies told by talking heads out of Washington is staggering.

Simply because of global unrest and the instability of the financial structure of our world, common sense dictates we Americans need to be prepared for anything. God only knows what's really happening in our world today.

This summer, a military exercise known as Jade Helm 15 is set to kick off in the southwestern quarter of the United States. The operation, which will run from July 15 through Sept. 15, labels Texas and Utah as “hostile areas.” The military says that under the operational guidelines, New Mexico “isn't much friendlier.” California, Colorado, Arizona and Nevada are also involved in the exercise.

The drill will see Special Operations forces from all four main branches of the military conduct hostile “take-over” training on civilian soil. But many are concerned the operation is a prelude to martial law. The military, however, says there's nothing to be concerned about.

“The nature of warfare is always changing and U.S. Army Special Operations Command's mission is to make certain the Army's various Special Operations Forces are trained, equipped and organized to successfully conduct worldwide special operations in support of our nation's interests,” Army spokesman Lt. Col. Mark Lastoria told the Washington Post in a statement issued a few weeks ago. “Training exercise Jade Helm is going to assist our Special Operations Soldiers and leadership in refining the skills needed against an ever changing foreign threat.”

But many on Main Street America and social media aren't convinced. A number of Twitter users are calling the exercise a “prelude” to World War III, while others say it's part of an effort to institute martial law.

“While we're obsessing about the Walking Dead, Martial Law is coming to fruition in the US,” one person said on Twitter Monday. Some claimed to have spotted Turkish troops operating in Texas. Some have said the recently-reported Wal-Mart closures in Texas, California, Florida and Oklahoma are part of the drill.

Examiner's David Thornton, however, said there's nothing to be concerned about after donning his tinfoil hat to investigate the matter. The military, he said, “answered many of the conspiracy charges” in a Stars and Stripes article in which Jade Helm was compared to similar exercises held in the past. The primary difference, according to Lt. Col. Mark Lastoria of the US Army Special Operations Command, was “the use of new challenging terrain,” which, Thornton explained, “is similar to the regions where the special operations forces have been fighting. Presumably, this is a reference to Afghanistan and Iraq.”

I'll go on record as saying I have no personal knowledge of anything happening as it might relate to the many theories we are hearing about the Walmart closings being connected to the DHS and the martial law concerns. I am not (yet) building a shelter in my back yard in which to hide during an invasion. I will, however, say that the level of secrecy and the almost laughable explanations I am getting from the government and news sources interest and concern me. But is there really anything to be alarmed about?

Martial law is an extreme and rare measure used to control society during war or periods of civil unrest or chaos. According to the Supreme Court, the term martial law carries no precise meaning (Duncan v. Kahana-moku, 327 U.S. 304, 66 S. Ct. 606, 90 L. Ed. 688 [1946]). However, most declarations of martial law have some common features.

Generally, the institution of martial law contemplates some use of military force. To a varying extent, depending on the martial law order, government military personnel have the authority to make and enforce civil and criminal laws. Certain civil liberties may be suspended, such as the right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures, freedom of association, and freedom of movement. And the writ of Habeas Corpus, which allows persons who are unlawfully imprisoned to gain freedom through a court proceeding, may be suspended.

In the United States, martial law has been instituted on the national level only once, during the Civil War, and on a regional level only once, during World War II. Otherwise, it has been limited to the states. Uprisings, political protests, labor strikes, and riots have, at various times, caused several state governors to declare some measure of martial law.

Martial law on the national level may be declared by Congress or the president. Under Article I, Section 8, Clause 15, of the Constitution, Congress has the power “[t]o provide for calling forth the Militia to execute the Laws of the Union, suppress insurrections and repel Invasions.” Article II, Section 2, Clause 1, of the Constitution declares that “[t]he President shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the Militia of the several States, when called into the actual Service of the United States.” Neither constitutional provision includes a direct reference to martial law. However, the Supreme Court has interpreted both to allow the declaration of martial law by the president or Congress. On the state level, a governor may declare martial law within her or his own state.

Maybe the next few months in Big Spring are going to be like a movie set with tanks rolling down Gregg Street and helicopters landing on the golf course. I'm sure everybody has a camera within reach.

I honestly don't know what's really going on and I'm not convinced anyone does. All I know for sure is that God is keeping an eye on the situation so I'm sleeping just fine these days.

You may not agree with anything I've said, but I column as I see 'em.

On the internet, no one knows you're a fraud

There's been some tense back-and-forth over the Canadian mother who said she had stopped opposing vaccinations after all seven of her kids came down with whooping cough. Some say we should loudly thank Tara Hills for publicly disowning her anti-vax campaign. Others — me, for instance — are feeling less grateful.

Hills went beyond spreading lies about the “dangers” of vaccinations and exposing her Ottawa neighbors to serious disease. She strongly implied that the best medical authorities are “puppets of a Big Pharma-Government-Media conspiracy,” according to The Washington Post — and on a site demoniacally named TheScientificParent.org.

You've probably seen the famous cartoon showing a dog at a computer saying to another dog, “On the Internet, nobody knows you're a dog.” The word “dog” could have been replaced with “fraud.”

As more Americans turn to online forums for advice on everything from where to eat to whether they need surgery, concerns mount about the quality of the information. Readers often use the consensus of forum participants to bypass the views of recognized experts. And because these forums are usually little-monitored, the “weight of opinion” is often determined by the most verbose and those with too much time on their hands.

Millennials have become especially reliant on (apparent) group consensus, according to a report by PricewaterhouseCoopers on the “sharing economy.” “If trust in individuals and institutions is waning or at best holding steady,” the report notes, “faith in the aggregate is growing.”

That is, consumers who disbelieve a hotel chain's claims of fine accommodations will show up at the door of a total stranger, renting a room via Airbnb — their trust totally based on reviews submitted by who-knows-who.

As we know, interested parties or crazy people can create a phony consensus.

Then you have people like the Ottawa mother, who seemed truly committed to her beliefs but was unable or too lazy to examine expert opinion in reaching them.

In a similar vein, Sarah Watts wrote an interesting essay about her online confab with other millennial new mothers on caring for an infant. At the time, her own mother was on the scene urging her not to worry if baby June cried shortly after a feeding. The crying will stop, the mother's mother said. That advice turned out to be good.

“I had been scouring message boards and Facebook groups during June's nursing sessions,” Watts said, “and I had stumbled on discussions of every kind of parenting issue imaginable.” Some were issues she had never heard of, such as cord clamping and vitamin K shots.

Most posted questions, Watts observed, resulted in respondents “bandying conflicting research like a weapon, every one of them armed with a battery of qualifiers to describe her personal parenting philosophy.” (I might take her skepticism one step further and wonder whether the other “moms” were actually mothers or even women.)

It's crazy out there. Good sites are often so plagued by armies of the uninformed filling their forums with dimwitted comments that smart people stay away. But some well-run forums are hugely interesting.

It's a sign of the times that Californians trying to tighten the vaccination mandate for schoolchildren now worry that the drawn-out legislative process will open the door to anti-vaxxers intent on poisoning public opinion.

In many cases, readers won't even know who they are. The scary part is many won't even care.

Ph.D. student illustrates her thesis in comic book

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Late last spring, a doctoral student worked late into the night. As she doodled, her chemistry thesis took on a life of its own, transforming into a comic book.

Veronica Berns, 28, was working on her Ph.D. in chemistry at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Berns said she long struggled to explain her work to her parents and friends. The self-described comic book fan said she began drafting her thesis on quasicrystals—a subset of crystals that diverge from the usual structural characteristics of crystals. Berns quickly concluded that she would be best able to describe the oddball compounds with illustrations.

"They're not very well-polished illustrations. That's on purpose," Berns said. "I wanted it to be like I'm explaining on the back of an envelope."

And on many occasions, it was on the back of an envelope or on a napkin that she doodled sketches of the chemical bonds to better show her parents what she was working on in the lab. Jody Berns, Veronica's mother, said their family has a history of doodling and has shared comics for

Berns surprised her family with her comic book "Atomic Size Matters" at her graduation last year. The book depicts cartoons of Berns wearing various costumes and uses humor as well as simple comparisons to describe elaborate chemistry.

"We're just really proud that she can take something so complex and put it into a fun visual explanation that everyone can enjoy," Jody Berns said.

Veronica Berns' professor Danny Fredrickson said Berns was the first of his students to construct her thesis in an artistic way.

Lady Hawks climb to No. 9 in national poll

By TOMMY WELLS

Sports Editor

With the 2015 softball season coming to an end, the Howard College Lady Hawks are beginning to get more notice from the national pollsters.

A lot more notice, actually. Howard College women's softball team climbed into the national top 10 this past week when the latest NJCAA rankings were released. According to the NJCAA web site, at www.njcaa.org, the Lady Hawks are ranked No. 9 nationally among all Division I junior college squads.

HC had been ranked 11th in the national poll in the previous poll. The leapfrogged another Texas power, Blinn College, to move into 9th.

Howard College enters its final four game stretch of the season sporting an impressive 38-11 record. The HC women host El Paso Community College on Friday and Saturday at Foundation Field.

Howard College's main rival for the Western Junior College Athletic Conference crown, Midland College, fell out of the top 10 for the first time. Following two losses to Odessa College last week, the Lady Chaps plummeted from No. 4 to No. 11.

Salt Lake Community College, now 37-7, held onto the top spot in the national poll by receiving all five first-place votes. The College of Central Florida (49-7) was second, while Wallace State Community College-Hanceville (54-11) moved into third. Seminole State College of Florida (41-7) and College of Southern Idaho (39-12) rounded out the top five spots.

Odessa College, now 34-16, moved up five spots in the poll to No. 15 this week.

NFL bans Cowboys' Hardy for 10 games

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL suspended defensive end Greg Hardy for 10 games without pay Wednesday for conduct detrimental to the league after concluding there was "credible evidence" he roughed up his former girlfriend nearly a year ago when he was a member of the Carolina Panthers.

Hardy, who joined the Dallas Cowboys as a free agent on a one-year, incentive-laden deal, was notified Wednesday of the decision in a letter from Commissioner Roger Goodell. Hardy plans to appeal.

Goodell cited "sufficient credible evidence that Hardy engaged in conduct that violated NFL policies in multiple respects and with aggravating circumstances." His assault case had been dismissed in a North Carolina court because his accuser refused to cooperate with prosecutors, but an NFL investigation concluded that Hardy used physical force at least four instances.

"The net effect of these acts was that Ms. Holder was severely traumatized and sustained a range of injuries, including bruises and scratches on her neck, shoulders, upper chest, back, arms and feet," Goodell wrote. "The use of physical force under the circumstances present here, against a woman substantially smaller than you and in the presence of powerful, military-style assault weapons, constitutes a significant act of violence in violation of the personal conduct policy."

The 26-year-old Hardy was on the commissioner's Exempt List last season and did not play for Carolina. He was suspended under a policy that was revised after the league was widely criticized for its handling of a domestic violence case involving former Baltimore running back Ray Rice.

"This suspension is something that we anticipated prior to Greg's signing, and we respect the commissioner's ruling," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said Wednesday.

Spurs even series with Clippers at 1-1

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three days from his 39th birthday, Tim Duncan keeps getting better with age.

Duncan scored 28 points and fellow NBA Finals MVP Kawhi Leonard added 23 to help San Antonio beat the Los Angeles Clippers 111-107 on Wednesday night, tying their Western Conference playoff series at 1-1.

The series, the only one of eight in the first round that is tied after two games, moves to San Antonio for Game 3 on Friday night.

Five Hawks agree to deals to play at Division I universities

By TOMMY WELLS

The Howard College Hawks flooded the Division I basketball ranks with a bevy of talent on Wednesday afternoon when they held a special signing ceremony that officially adds five members of the Hawks' Region V finalist team — Niels Bunschoten, Rob Gray, Sam Finley, Travis Charles and Will Ferguson — to the NCAA Division I ranks.

"Obviously, these young men have been a big part of what we've done here in basketball," said HC head coach Scott Raines, who led the team to a 24-8 record and a berth in the Region V finals against South Plains. "I can't say enough good things about them and what they have done for us on the court and on the campus."

Raines indicated that all five players had agreed to deals that will have them playing at major universities next season.

Finley, who transferred to Howard College prior this year after having played at the University of California-Riverside as a freshman, will be making the jump from the Western Junior College Athletic Conference to the Southeastern Conference next season as he will be playing at the University of Mississippi.

At Ole Miss, Finley will be joining a Rebels team that went 21-13 and advanced to the second round of the NCAA tournament before falling to Xavier.

Finley averaged 17.1 points per game this season for the Hawks, and lead the team in steals.

Bunschoten, one of the Hawks' top three-point shooters, will be joining the Indiana State University Sycamores in the Missouri Valley Conference this coming season.

A 2-year veteran of the Hawks program, the 6-foot-9 Bunschoten will be joining an ISU team that went 15-16 last season and finished fourth in the MVC race.

A native of the Netherlands, Bunschoten led HC in three-point shooting this season, hitting 61 treys.

Gray will remain in Texas to play Division I basketball by joining the University of Houston. A 6-foot-2 freshman from Forest City, N.C., Gray was the Hawks' top offensive weapon this season as a guard. He averaged 18.2 points per contest and played a key role in HC's ability to finish the regular season as the Co-WJCAC champions.

At UH, he will be joining a Cougars' program that produced some of the NBA's top players, including Hakeem Olajuwon and Clyde Drexler.

Gray said his time with the Hawks will help him down the road.

"I learned a lot in Big Spring," he said. "It is going to help me down the road."

Houston went 13-19 a year ago, including a 4-14 mark in the American Athletic Conference.

Ferguson, a 6-foot-1 sophomore who transferred in from the College of Central Florida following his freshman year, will also be staying in Texas to play. He inked a deal to play next fall at Texas State University in San Marcos.

After a rough start in Big Spring, Ferguson said he enjoyed his time at HC.

"I know when I came in the summer I didn't want to stay," he said. "But Big Spring kind of grew on me. I am glad I stayed. I really like it here."

Ferguson averaged 9.9 points per game for the Hawks this season.

At Texas State, Ferguson will be joining a Bobcats program that went 14-17 in 2014-15 and 7-13 in the Sun Belt Conference.

Charles, who elected to return to HC this season despite having Division I offers a year ago, rounded out the Hawks' signing parade. A 6-foot-6 sophomore from Brooklyn, he signed to play at the University of Albany in New York.

Charles said he treasured his time with the Hawks, saying it was among the best experiences he had as a player.

"Coming from New York City, I played with some great players and for great coaches, but I never felt anything like this," he said. "I had an awesome career, and I'm so thankful to have had the support we had here."

The Albany Great Danes went 24-9 last season and lost to Oklahoma in the second round of the NCAA tournament.

Opening lead — queen of clubs.

The signal is probably the single most valuable weapon available to the defense, but, like any other weapon, there is a proper time and place for its use. Take this case where a signal proved useless, partly because of a good play by declarer and partly because one defender could not obey the command of the other.

West led the queen of clubs, and East signaled for a club continuation by playing the eight. Declarer correctly ducked the queen in order to hamper defensive communications (had South won the first trick, he would surely have gone down).

West had no more clubs to lead and had no effective alternative move. In practice, he shifted to a low heart, but declarer won in dummy and led the king of diamonds. East took the ace and returned the ten of clubs, but he was fighting a losing battle. South won with the jack, led another diamond, took the next club with the ace and finished with 10 tricks.

East should have allowed for the possibility that West's queen of clubs might be a singleton by overtaking the queen with the king. East could then have continued clubs, dislodging one of South's club stoppers.
Whenever declarer got around to leading diamonds, East would win, force out South's remaining club stopper and would thus win the race to set up his clubs before South could set up dummy's diamonds.

East should realize from the bidding that declarer might well have the A-J-x or A-J-x-x of clubs. Whatever the case, overtaking the queen guarantees establishment of the clubs before the diamonds. East should have signaled, all right, but with his highest club, the king.

Tomorrow: Test your play.

BIG SPRING HERALD

Mercury, Mars
and Money

Will Smith said, "Too many people spend money they haven't earned to buy things they don't want to impress people they don't like."

MATHIS

The sun, Mercury and Mars in financially oriented Taurus have been taking turns angling heavy hitters like Jupiter and Pluto, activating all kinds of feelings, plans and schemes that revolve around money.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Just because you hold an office doesn't mean you automatically wield all of the authority associated with that position. You have to step up and claim it. Today you will.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). There's always more to learn, but on days like today, it's more important to stick to the schedule, muscle through and say "good enough." You don't have to be the world's greatest expert to get this job done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Don't wait for permission or for someone to grant you the status you need to move forward. Claim what you want. This actually makes a lot less work for others.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). This is one of those times when it will feel far more urgent to give than to receive. You need to know you make a difference in someone else's life, and you'll give until you have proof.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Right now you have so many events and items you're in charge of that you may find it challenging to get them into a system that makes sense. Spend a few hours trying anyhow. You'll find something you were missing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The tiniest things can make you happy when you feel you have earned them. Use this principle to your advantage by supplying a small but meaningful prize for another person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). A lot of people won't even realize the truth of the situation until you point it out. You will say what everyone else is thinking and with such a light touch that they can't help but laugh.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You can't change people, but you can inspire them to change themselves. Because you look like you're having so much fun today, you'll influence the people around you. They'll want your happiness secret.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You feel a duty to love, but you don't always love the duty. The mundane acts of selflessness, like feeding or driving another person, may not be very romantic, but they are now among the best ways to show you care.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Should you offer your kind service for free? Some say that people only value what they pay for. Research and experiment. What's working for other people will likely work for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Persistence will win out, but only if it's coupled with problem-solving skills. Success will require tinkering. Before you try again, figure out what went wrong the last time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Others around you are trying to rush to the finish. There's no hurry! Take your time. You have a talent for thinking things through. What's well conceived will be well expressed.

BIRTHDAY (April 23). Because you surround yourself with fresh, playful influences this year, you will grow up without growing old. You'll be up against a worthy competitor at work, and this helps you achieve your best. The special times with family will make May and June sing. September and November bring financial highs. Capricorn and Scorpio people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 5, 33, 2, 38 and 16.

YOUR MOON SIGN (part six): While your sun sign offers information about your identity, your moon sign is a window into your emotional makeup. Also, your moon indicates feelings about your mother and your relationships with women. Do you know where the moon was when you were born? It's easy to find out! Key "moon sign" into a search engine on a computer, and you'll find the tools you need. Astrology books also offer tables to tell you this information, or you could always ask an astrologer. Last week we took a peek into the personalities of each moon sign except Pisces, which is a wise placement for the moon, indeed. It is extremely common to find a Pisces moon in the natal charts of fine actors and musicians, as this moon lends extraordinarily sensitive and empathetic powers. It is not difficult for Pisces moon people to give themselves over to a situation, mood or other influence. They can quite literally feel another person's pain or joy. They don't so much read minds, as their process is not an intellectual one. Through a process that's like channeling, Pisces moon people simply have an ability to enter into the spirit of others.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: He is the second most-quoted writer in the English language and widely regarded as having influenced the English language more than any other single person in history. William Shakespeare was a tenacious Taurus who was born when Jupiter, his planet of luck, was in Leo, the sign of drama. "The play's the thing!" -- William Shakespeare

Annie's Mailbox ®

Dear Annie: Last week, our son came home from high school and told us that a boy at his school had killed himself. The boy had been a friend of his since the fifth grade.

The school had a moment of silence over the public address system, but never mentioned the boy's name. Most of the details about the suicide are nonexistent, although there are a few things mentioned on a website asking for help paying for funeral costs. Students who didn't know the suicide victim are guessing it was caused by bullying. Our son says that's not true. Some students are even saying the fund requests are a scam.

We haven't heard anything about whether the school is offering grief counseling. We've talked to our son about the tragedy and are trying our best to help him. Because the students have no information, they are making wild guesses and placing uninformed posts on social media. My question is why is this tragedy so secret? Should the school do more? -- Sad Mom

Dear Sad: Sometimes, the school is ill-equipped to deal with such tragedies and does nothing, which tends to create a whirlwind of misinformation. Also, the administration may fear that mentioning the details would create copycat suicides. But the details do not need airing. The acknowledgement of mourning, however, is important.

The American Foundation for Suicide Prevention (afsp.org) offers a Toolkit for Schools, and you should mention this to the administration. The foundation is also an excellent resource for anyone dealing with suicide, and you will find information there that will help you talk to your son about his friend.

Dear Annie: I would like to thank "B" for bringing attention to the telephone scammers who have been plaguing America.

also would like to bring to your readers' attention to a scam perpetrated by people claiming to be from the IRS. I have received three calls from these people.

The "official" recorded message is totally bogus. The caller threatened me with arrest for ignoring the calls. They instructed me to call a 202 area code, but it's a private Washington, D.C., number, not the IRS. I have worked for a federal agency and know how things work. Please be aware of the following:

1. The IRS does not initiate contact by telephone. They use certified mail.
2. Legitimate government agencies have an 800 number.
3. The IRS will not arrest anyone over the phone. If an arrest is required, it will be after lengthy legal processes have been exhausted. You'll know about it. Police agencies need a bona fide warrant to arrest people.

4. If you receive such a call, report it to the IRS at IRS@tigta.gov. Also notify your local police. -- Knows Better

Dear Knows: Thank you for your expert advice. Calls pretending to be from the IRS can be particularly frightening for people who are so eager to cooperate that they give out personal financial information over the phone. Please, folks, be careful.

The Spider

During Mark Twain's days as a newspaperman, he was the editor of a small Missouri paper.

One day, he received a letter from a subscriber stating that he had found a spider in his paper and asked if this was an omen of good or bad luck.

Twain replied, "Finding a spider in your paper is neither good nor bad luck. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant was not advertising so that he could go to that store, spin his web across the door and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever after."
