They were arrested last night after officers called to the home on a "tip" discovered a blood-spattered living room and later found the body of the woman in the cistern back of the house.

Court Action Begins

Court action against the Burgeses has been held up pending questioning of their son, Burnett, by Prosecutor Paul M. Tedrow, to determine whether the youth was in the house at the time.

In his confession to officers, Burgess coolly revealed an amazing belief in spells and latter-day witchcraft reminiscent of the "hex" murders in the vicinity of York, Pa.

His Health Blamed

Burgess and his wife blamed Mrs. Fairchild for the ill health of their daughter, Eugene, and also for a spell under which they believed the entire family labored. Yesterday, when Mrs. Fairchild called at the Burgess home she said she boasted a "mental power" to annihilate whoever she chose to destroy.

They said she told them she had killed more than 100 persons a year for the past 25 years. Mrs. Burgess said the woman had a long list of persons she claimed were victims of her "evil eye," including her husband, and prominent Kalamazoo citizens.

For Governor; Praise Is Sounded For Houstonian

HOUSTON, July 19. (AP)—A movement to draft R. S. Sterling, Houston chairman of the State Highway commission, for Governor, was launched Friday by The Houston Chronicle, of which Jesse H. Jones is publisher.

"Without consulting his wishes in the matter, The Chronicle is for R. S. Sterling for the next Governor of Texas," the article stated. The Chronicle believes the nomination should be tendered to him by the people of Texas.

The article praised Sterling's services as chairman of the State Highway commission and in other public capacities and concluded by saying:

"There is no denying this problem of highway financing will be the issue of the next gubernatorial campaign. Obviously, R. S. Sterling is the man to lead it."

The article is also published in the Houston Post-Dispatch and the Chronicle for many years.

Let's Get This Boy In Lubbock

ENTERPRISE, Ore., July 19. (AP)—When a small boy erased part of the watermelon price quoted on the window of a local grocery store yesterday, he started a price war that involved several stores and exhausted the grocer's supply of melons by nightfall. In a spirit of mischief the lad rubbed out the half cent from the price of 3-1-2 cents per lb. and on a store window. A rival grocer saw it and decided he'd "beat" it. He made the price 2-1-2 cents. Another grocer made it 2 cents and before long the price dropped to 1 cent per pound.

Monkey Business
Reigns In Dallas

DALLAS, July 19. (AP)—Little Rollo, a big baboon of unknown residence, made another of his periodic appearances here today.

This time it was a wild-eyed group of boys which reported that Rollo pounced into the middle of their marble ring and broke up the game.

For months, according to the reports—unvarying as to description—the baboon has stalked about the Trinity river bottoms. After each public call he presumably retires to his dark recess.

Officials of local zoos long ago have checked their membership and reported nothing missing so it is assumed little Rollo is not of the garden variety.

Casting Is Lauded

(By Associated Press)

SAN ANTONIO, July 19.—Repeating his stand for "freedom of conscience" voting and amplifying a platform which pledges him particularly to extension of advantages to the rural inhabitants of Texas, Senator Thomas B. Love of Dallas, anti-Tammany, Hoover-Democrat and prohibitionist, expanded upon his original announcement before the governor of Texas made July 3, in a statement to the San Antonio Express Friday.

Love has no plans for an immediate campaign, he said, but admitted that he will make five or six speeches in North Texas within the next few weeks.

His Statement Quoted

Senator Love's statement in part said:

"As I announced on July 3, I will be a candidate for governor as an anti-Tammany democrat, before the democratic primaries next year.

"I will fight for freedom of conscience in all political parties in Texas and for enforcement of the laws and especially for full and efficient cooperation of state and federal government in the enforcement of prohibition laws in accordance with the Eighteenth Amendment and for rehabilitation of education and eleemosynary institutions of Texas so as to put them on the highest plane of efficiency and keep them for effective and prompt improvement of conditions of rural life.

"I will stand especially for the improvement of schools and roads."

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The Russian and Chinese governments have been reminded by Secretary Stimson of their renunciation of war as an instrument of National policy, through adherence to the Kellogg Treaty.

The action was taken directly yesterday with Chinese Minister Wu and was communicated to Moscow through French Ambassador Claudel and Foreign Minister Briand in Paris and the Soviet embassy there.

Secretary Stimson is convinced that the underlying causes of the dispute are of a justifiable nature and that the whole matter can be settled by arbitration.

The attitude of American officials is that while the treaty will not come into full force until the formal deposit of Japan's ratification in Washington Wednesday, the pact should be accepted by the adhering powers as though it was not in effect.

Chairman Borah of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, declared today that "Russia has from the time she signed the Kellogg pact recognized its biding force."

Porter Is Pleased
Chairman Porter, of the House committee on Foreign Affairs, also expressed pleasure at the Russian stand.

Word from the Chinese government along a similar vein to that which has been expressed in Moscow was expected by many diplomats here to result from Secretary Stimson's action.

Simultaneously with his reminder to China and the Soviet, Secretary Stimson yesterday summoned the British and Japanese ambassadors, whose countries are parties to the Pan-Pacific treaty of 1921, and enlisted their cooperation in his peace movement to avoid the hostilities which appeared to be threatening in the Manchurian trouble.

Signs Of Modern Times Reflected In
Pioneers' Reunion At Johnston Ranch

Old And New West
Rub Shoulders;
3,500 There

BY SUTTON CHRISTIAN
OF THE AVANCEANCE STAFF

BUD JOHNSON'S RANCH, NEAR SLATON, July 19.—The ranchmen of the early nineties in looking down upon Yellowstone canyon from the rim of the winding swath would never have visualized 1,000 automobiles assembled in a huge natural arena where fashions of 1929 were contrasted with dun-colored attire of scores of cowmen as 3,500 persons united to renew acquaintances of frontier days and witness glamorous attractions of the old West.

Ranchmen who but a few years ago rode horseback several days across the Plains to attend gatherings arrived today at the Johnston ranch, formerly the old IOA ranch, after motoring a few hours from all sections of the South Plains.

Road Beaten To House.
A winding automobile road has been beaten over cowtrails to the old ranch house.

A more fraternal body of men could never be found—These ranchmen are all glad to see you again, S. C. Burns, former boss of the old IOA ranch, of which the present Johnston ranch is but a small part, greeted Sid Boykin, of Clovis, N. M., after 35 years separation. They both rode the range in Lubbock county in the early nineties.

Bill Hyatt, of Spur, reminisced with George Bolin, of Snyder. "Dock" Kennedy, of Post, tall and bronzed by wind and sun of the open life, chatted with many groups of cowmen.

"Chuck-Wagon Stories" Told.
Tom Wagner, of Littlefield, Bob Norfleet, of Kress, F. E. Wheeler, of Lubbock, the Johnston boys, related chuck wagon stories.

A more picturesque setting of the old and the new world could not be assembled upon one ranch. City-reared onlookers, dressed in silks and summer fashions, mopped sweating foreheads and coughed in response to dust, provoking antics of wild west attractions, but watched intently the bronco busting, calf roping and steer riding performances.

Old Days Recalled.
Ballyhooing of concession stands gave carnival atmosphere to the tented region near the ranch house. Leisurely and delightfully recalling early experiences, scores of ranchmen and old timers sat day-long under shade of the trees.

R. C. Burns evoked generous laughter in recounting one of his trades in the early days. "Green Igo, well known cowman in those days, traded me a donkey and $300 for a section of land," said Mr. Burns.

Lubbock Deputy Reverts To Wild West Tactics
To Capture Dry Law Violator At Ranch Party

TRAILING in the footsteps of true western pioneers, Chief Deputy Sheriff O. B. Conley, Friday discarded the use of an automobile in his chase of bootleggers and placed his chances in a tough little range pony.

Patrolling the Old Settlers' reunion at the Johnston ranch near Slaton, Conley saw a car far up the side of the canyon walls and decided upon an investigation. Another officer took an automobile and started in the direction of the parked car while Conley hustled a pony. Nearing the scene he saw that the other officer had taken one of the men and started back. Turning his horse he galloped back toward the rodeo. Upon reaching a knoll he glanced back and perceived the car to be some 200 yards farther on while the driver was outside breaking what appeared to be beer bottles against his rear axle.

He again turned back and set his mount in a fast gallop.

Fatal Shooting Of Mexican Ranch Hand Brings On An Unlooked-For Situation, Attorneys Find

HABEAS corpus proceedings, in an effort to secure release on bail of W. T. Strickel, Lubbock, will probably be instituted in 72nd District court here today before Judge Homer L. Pharr.

Strickel, who resides in Lubbock but who ranches in Cochran county, was being held last night in the Hockley county jail, Levelland, without bail as the outgrowth of the fatal shooting of Francisco Carasco, 39 year old Mexican ranch hand, on the Strickel ranch near Levelland, Cochran county, Thursday morning.

Justice Hails Bail
After attorneys for the state and the defense had agreed on a $10,000 bond in the case, Justice of the Peace J. P. Taylor, of Morton, ruled yesterday afternoon that the case was not bailable and ordered the defendant's removal to the Hockley county jail. Habeas corpus proceedings, expected today, will be the ultimate outgrowth of the Justice's ruling. Sheriff J. P. Montgomery, Cochran county, escorted the ranchman to Levelland late Friday.

Burton S. Burks, assistant district attorney attached to the 72nd and 99th judicial districts and who attended the proceedings at Morton yesterday, told The Avalanche last night that reports of the fatal shooting of Carasco by Strickel, Thursday night, that the Mexican was approaching him with a long, keen-bladed knife and that he shot only once and in self defense, Mexican ranch hands do not coincide with the statement made by Strickel. The ranchman told The Avalanche Thursday night that the Mexican was approaching him with a long, keen-bladed knife and that he shot only once and in self defense. Mexican ranch hands, Attorney Burks said, claim that the rancher chased Carasco on his horse, shooting several times.

(By Associated Press)
KEYPORT, N. J., July 19.—Catherine Crawford, 12, small for her age, today shot and killed her father, because she said, he attempted to attack her.

Catherine's mother put up $2,500 bail and obtained the girl's release, but the child will have to go before the grand jury next Thursday and tell her story. She is charged with manslaughter.

Indictment Is Doubtful
Prosecutor John J. Quinn, indicated he would not ask for an indictment. "Under the New Jersey statutes," he said, "murder when committed under circumstances of that sort, is justifiable."

Catherine's father, George, 35, was a constable. Her mother works and was away today when Catherine killed her father.

"I picked up his gun from the dresser and shot him," the child said. "And he ran out into the hall, yelling for my little brother. Buster. Then he fell down."

Another Daughter Leaves
The mother told Prosecutor Quinn that Catherine's father had annoyed the child before, and that their eldest daughter, Ann, 18, had been living in Asbury Park for some time because of trouble with the father.

No Decision Yet Reached Here In Airport Purchase

The purchase of land for Lubbock's municipal flying field remained very much up in the air this morning even after a meeting of the directors of the Board of City Development, officials of Lubbock and members of the BOD airport committee yesterday afternoon when efforts were made to mediate in a disagreement between Milt Jones, tract owner, and Frank Jones, local realtor.

After deciding to purchase the tract from the estate represented by Milt Jones and located five miles north of Lubbock on the Plainview highway the city has been advised of a misunderstanding between the Jones estate and Frank Jones regarding a sales commission. The meeting yesterday presided over by H. L. Allen, BOD president was called in an effort to reach an understanding but was unsuccessful.

MRS. NEAL IS A REAL ORGATONE BOOSTER NOW

"I Gladly Tell Others Of Me. It Saved My Life",

Says Lubbock Woman

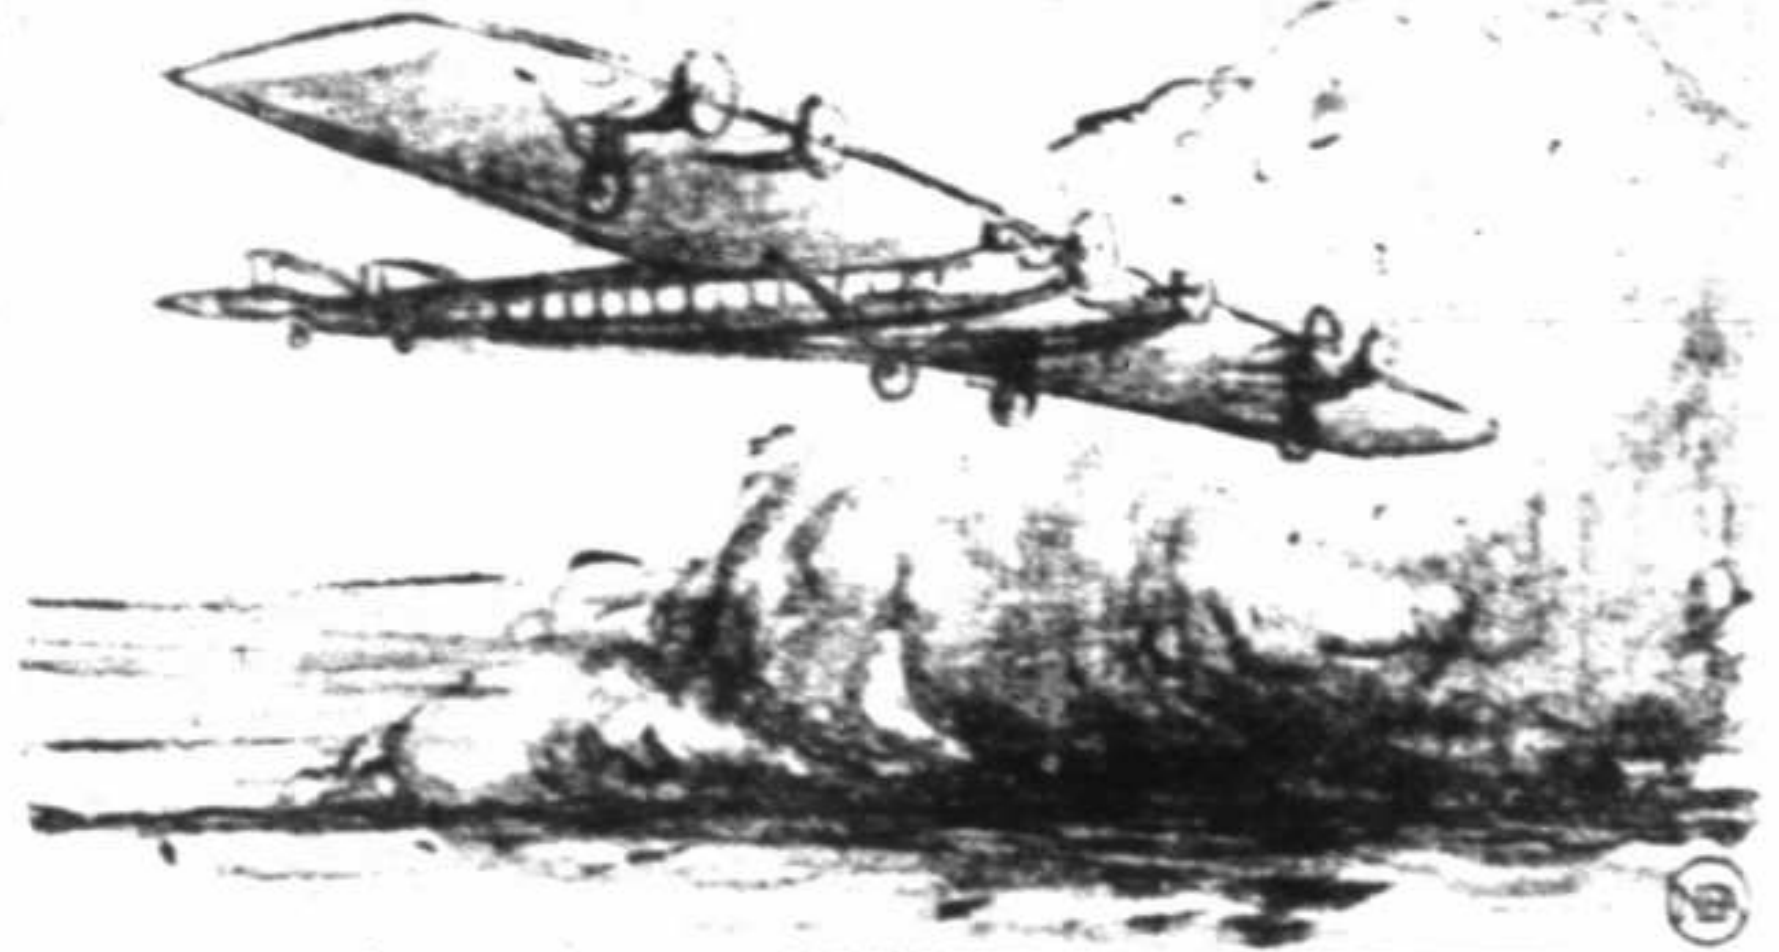

"I'm a booster for Orgatone from now on."
Thus spoke Mrs. J. B. Neal, well known citizen of Lubbock, residing at 1613 Tenth Street, and when asked what Orgatone did for her, she said:

"Orgatone has given me the relief I long sought. I had stomach trouble for fifteen years. My food never agreed with me and the least thing I ate soured on my stomach, causing me to suffer intensely. Frequently I had dizzy spells and everything seemed to be turning round and round. I would become so dizzy that I'd have to lie down. I had gall bladder trouble, and I had pains in my right side when I would ache and throb until I would be in misery and though I was going to die. Gas formed on my stomach, and I had terrible headaches at times. I was very nervous and restless and never felt like doing my work and hardly ever got a good night's sleep."

"A friend recommended Orgatone to me and advised me to try it. Since I began taking Orgatone I have a different story. Now my stomach is in fine condition. I can eat any kind of food I want without it disagreeing with me. Nothing ever soured on my stomach now, and the pains in my sides have entirely disappeared, and this is the greatest relief of all. For I did suffer terribly with those pains in my right side. No matter how much I stooped over, my spells of dizziness do not bother me and I have more strength and feel more like doing my work than I have in years. The nervousness has been relieved and now I sleep soundly all through the night and get up mornings feeling fine. Orgatone has really made life worth living for me. It has saved my life, and I'm going to be a strong booster for it. It has done for me what medicine and doctors failed to do. I am more than glad to make this statement and tell my friends about it."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Lubbock exclusively by the Brown Drug Store who are direct laboratory agents.

He Steers Ocean Flights To Safety But Opposes Them As Risky Stunts

Dr. James H. Kimball, chief government meteorologist, is opposed to ocean flights but he aids them all he can. His reliable weather data has been used for seven successful hops across the Atlantic and here you see him mapping a course between storm centers. Giant air liners of the future Dr. Kimball says, will be guided by radio reports and will go around storms which lie along their route.

By BERYL MILLER
NEA Service Writer
NEW YORK, July 19.—The man who made possible seven successful trans-Atlantic airplane flights is opposed to ocean flying.
This seemingly paradoxical figure is Dr. James H. Kimball, government meteorologist. He is the man who gave the final word to those who want to fly over the ocean, and he is the man who has been fighting against the hazards of the Atlantic.
And Dr. Kimball hasn't lost a sleep yet. Not one. He has played the game and followed the doctors' meteorological guidance has been forced down in the ocean by storms.
When Dr. Kimball said "go" a little-known young man named Charles A. Lindbergh gave his ship the gun at Roosevelt Field. Long Island shot out over the ocean and landed safely at Le Bourget field near Paris and became a world hero overnight.

Aided Bird's Flight
Hours of endless work by Dr. Kimball and others in the weather bureau made it possible for Commander Richard E. Bird and his companions to navigate a safe course to France. And the meteorologist said them a word of encouragement.
Dr. Kimball's word is law to the Atlantic flyers. After preparations for their flight were completed, Ames Earhart and the late Wilmer Shufeldt waited many days to take off for Europe because the meteorologist said the weather wasn't right.
Charles Chamberlain, hop to Germany was made possible by the weather bureau's observations. Orders who passed their lives in Dr. Kimball's hands were the three Frenchmen, Louis Asolant and Leferre, the globe circled Schles and Brook and Williams and Yancey who flew the Atlantic a few days ago.

Flyers Praise His Work
In the United States Weather Bureau office atop the Whitehall building facing the New York harbor Dr. Kimball was pointing over weather maps and a mass of telegrams. He is middle aged, with graying hair, friendly eyes, a thoughtful smile and a soft voice.

On his desk by newspaper tellings of the reception accorded Yancey and Williams in Rome and of how the flyers praised Dr. Kimball's work as a major factor in their achievement.

Yancey and Williams are friends of mine, Dr. Kimball said. But the part I play in these flights is not a personal one. Every member of the weather bureau helps obtain the necessary information to guide the flyers.

The meteorologist doesn't believe in ocean flights. We've tried to discourage every one of them, he said. Trans-Atlantic flying isn't safe at present. But when flyers are determined to have a try at it the only thing we can do is give them every bit of assistance possible.

Prepares Weather Maps
Weather maps for ocean flying showing the high and low pressure areas and the temperatures are prepared by Dr. Kimball from reports by steamships along the proposed air routes.

Weather reports are received daily from ships scattered throughout the ocean. When the first Atlantic flights were being made in 1927, a special service by selected ships was set up and radio reports were received without toll by a radio cor-

We could hardly afford to do otherwise with USED CARS

EVERY Ford dealer has a reputation to maintain. Our name for fair-dealing in selling new cars, and in servicing those cars, means far more than "quick profit regardless of consequences." Likewise, our good name must also be upheld when we sell used cars, accepted in trade for the Model A. We could hardly afford to have it otherwise, for we realize that the person who buys a used car from us is a prospect for a new car later on—or at least another used car.

You will find here many bargains in used transportation, sold for what they are actually worth. There is no inflation of used-car prices to care for excessive trade-in allowances—for the low price and high value of the Model A allows no margin for unreasonable trade-in concessions. When we sell a used Model T Ford, it has been thoroughly reconditioned, and we guarantee it. Other makes of cars are priced according to the service you may expect from them. Stop in today.

Pat Neff To Run For Governor Is Walthall's Word

Board Of Control Chairman Says Ex-Governor To Be Candidate Regardless Of Mayfield's Decision

(By Associated Press)
AUSTIN, July 19.—Former Governor Pat M. Neff, of Waco, will announce his candidacy for Governor subject to the 1930 primaries, R. B. Walthall, chairman of the Board of Control and former private secretary to Neff, said today.

"You may quote me as saying Governor Neff will make the same intensive campaign he made in 1920," Walthall stated. "He is going to offer himself again because he has been importuned to do so by many friends and because he feels he can be elected."

Walthall had said that Governor Neff would run if former United States Senator Earle B. Mayfield of Texas as a candidate. There is not anything to that, Governor Neff will run regardless."

Walthall, who had said he intended to become a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, said he would devote his time to Governor Neff's campaign instead of seeking office himself.

Walthall's term on the board of control will soon end and he does not expect to be reappointed, he said.

"I have heard it said that Governor Moody will appoint John P. Wallace, of Trague, chairman of the

Hubbers Practically Assured Of Entry In Tournament

Yankees Divide With Indians And Lose Ground To Speeding Philadelphians

Final Drive Will Be Made Today To Help Hubbers

Lubbock Aggregation Is Strengthened For Annual Classic At Amarillo: Expect Keen Competition

Practically assured of entering the Amarillo News-Globe baseball tournament which opens tomorrow, club officials will make a final drive this morning to raise the remaining amount necessary to defray the expenses of the Hubber aggregation during their week's stay in the Potter county capital.

More than half the desired amount was netted in yesterday's drive. The team management announced last night, and barring unforeseen difficulties, the committee in charge of donations promises to go over the top in its drive today. Tournament officials were notified late last night that the Hubbers would undoubtedly be on hand when the meet opens but it was too late to get in on the opening day's double attraction Sunday's opening game will find San Antonio and Canyon matched while Lamesa and the Tactless Texans of Amarillo will meet in the nightcap.

Jerry Main, sports editor of the Amarillo News-Globe, who is in charge of the tournament, told the Avalanche-Journal over long distance telephone last night that the Hubbers would like to play Monday and probably against Wellington.

Manager Joe Chasum and Field Captain H. B. Wilson began assembling their forces yesterday and from all indications will have their full strength for the classic event. Several outsiders are likely to appear in the Lubbock lineup.

With Alex McColl local hurling ace and Volney Hill spit ball artist ready for action, the management is negotiating for two services for two more chuckers. If Collier and Jeffries can be obtained, Hill will remain at his position behind the bat. D. Walter will be used as relief pitcher.

Del Morgan, Amarillo Hubber first baseman, is expected to arrive in Lubbock today. Tomorrow Morgan's presence in the lineup will have the locals considerably more power with the stick. Lefty Reed will be used on the initial sack in Morgan's place to arrive on the scene in time for the tournament.

Roy Taylor will be retained at the keystone position and Raymond Aker at shortstop. Both have fielded in brilliant style in previous games this season and the Hubbers are certain to be well fortified around the middle bag. Roberto Rodriguez, former Trinity University star, is slated to hold down the hot corner.

Brothers Marshall Wilson and Naylor will man the outer gardens for the locals and in case Red Gaultner can be reached, Red Gaultner will be in the catcher's cage. Club managers are to meet at the News-Globe office in Amarillo tonight at 8 o'clock. Tournament officials have announced in case Manager Chasum is unable to attend this meeting a representative will be sent. Club managers and tournament rules will be decided on at this confab.

Since the locals are not slated to appear in either of the Sunday games, the Hubbers are not likely to leave here before Sunday night.

MELILLO INJURED
ST. LOUIS, July 19. (AP)—Oscar Melillo, second baseman for the St. Louis Browns, was injured in batting practice before today's game with Washington and it was announced he would be out of the game probably for two weeks. TAYLOR, CHOCOLATE MATCHED
NEW YORK, July 19. (AP)—Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Ind. featherweight and Kid Chocolate, Cuban negro, were matched today by Humbert J. Fugate for a ten-round boxing bout Aug. 14 at Ebbets Field.

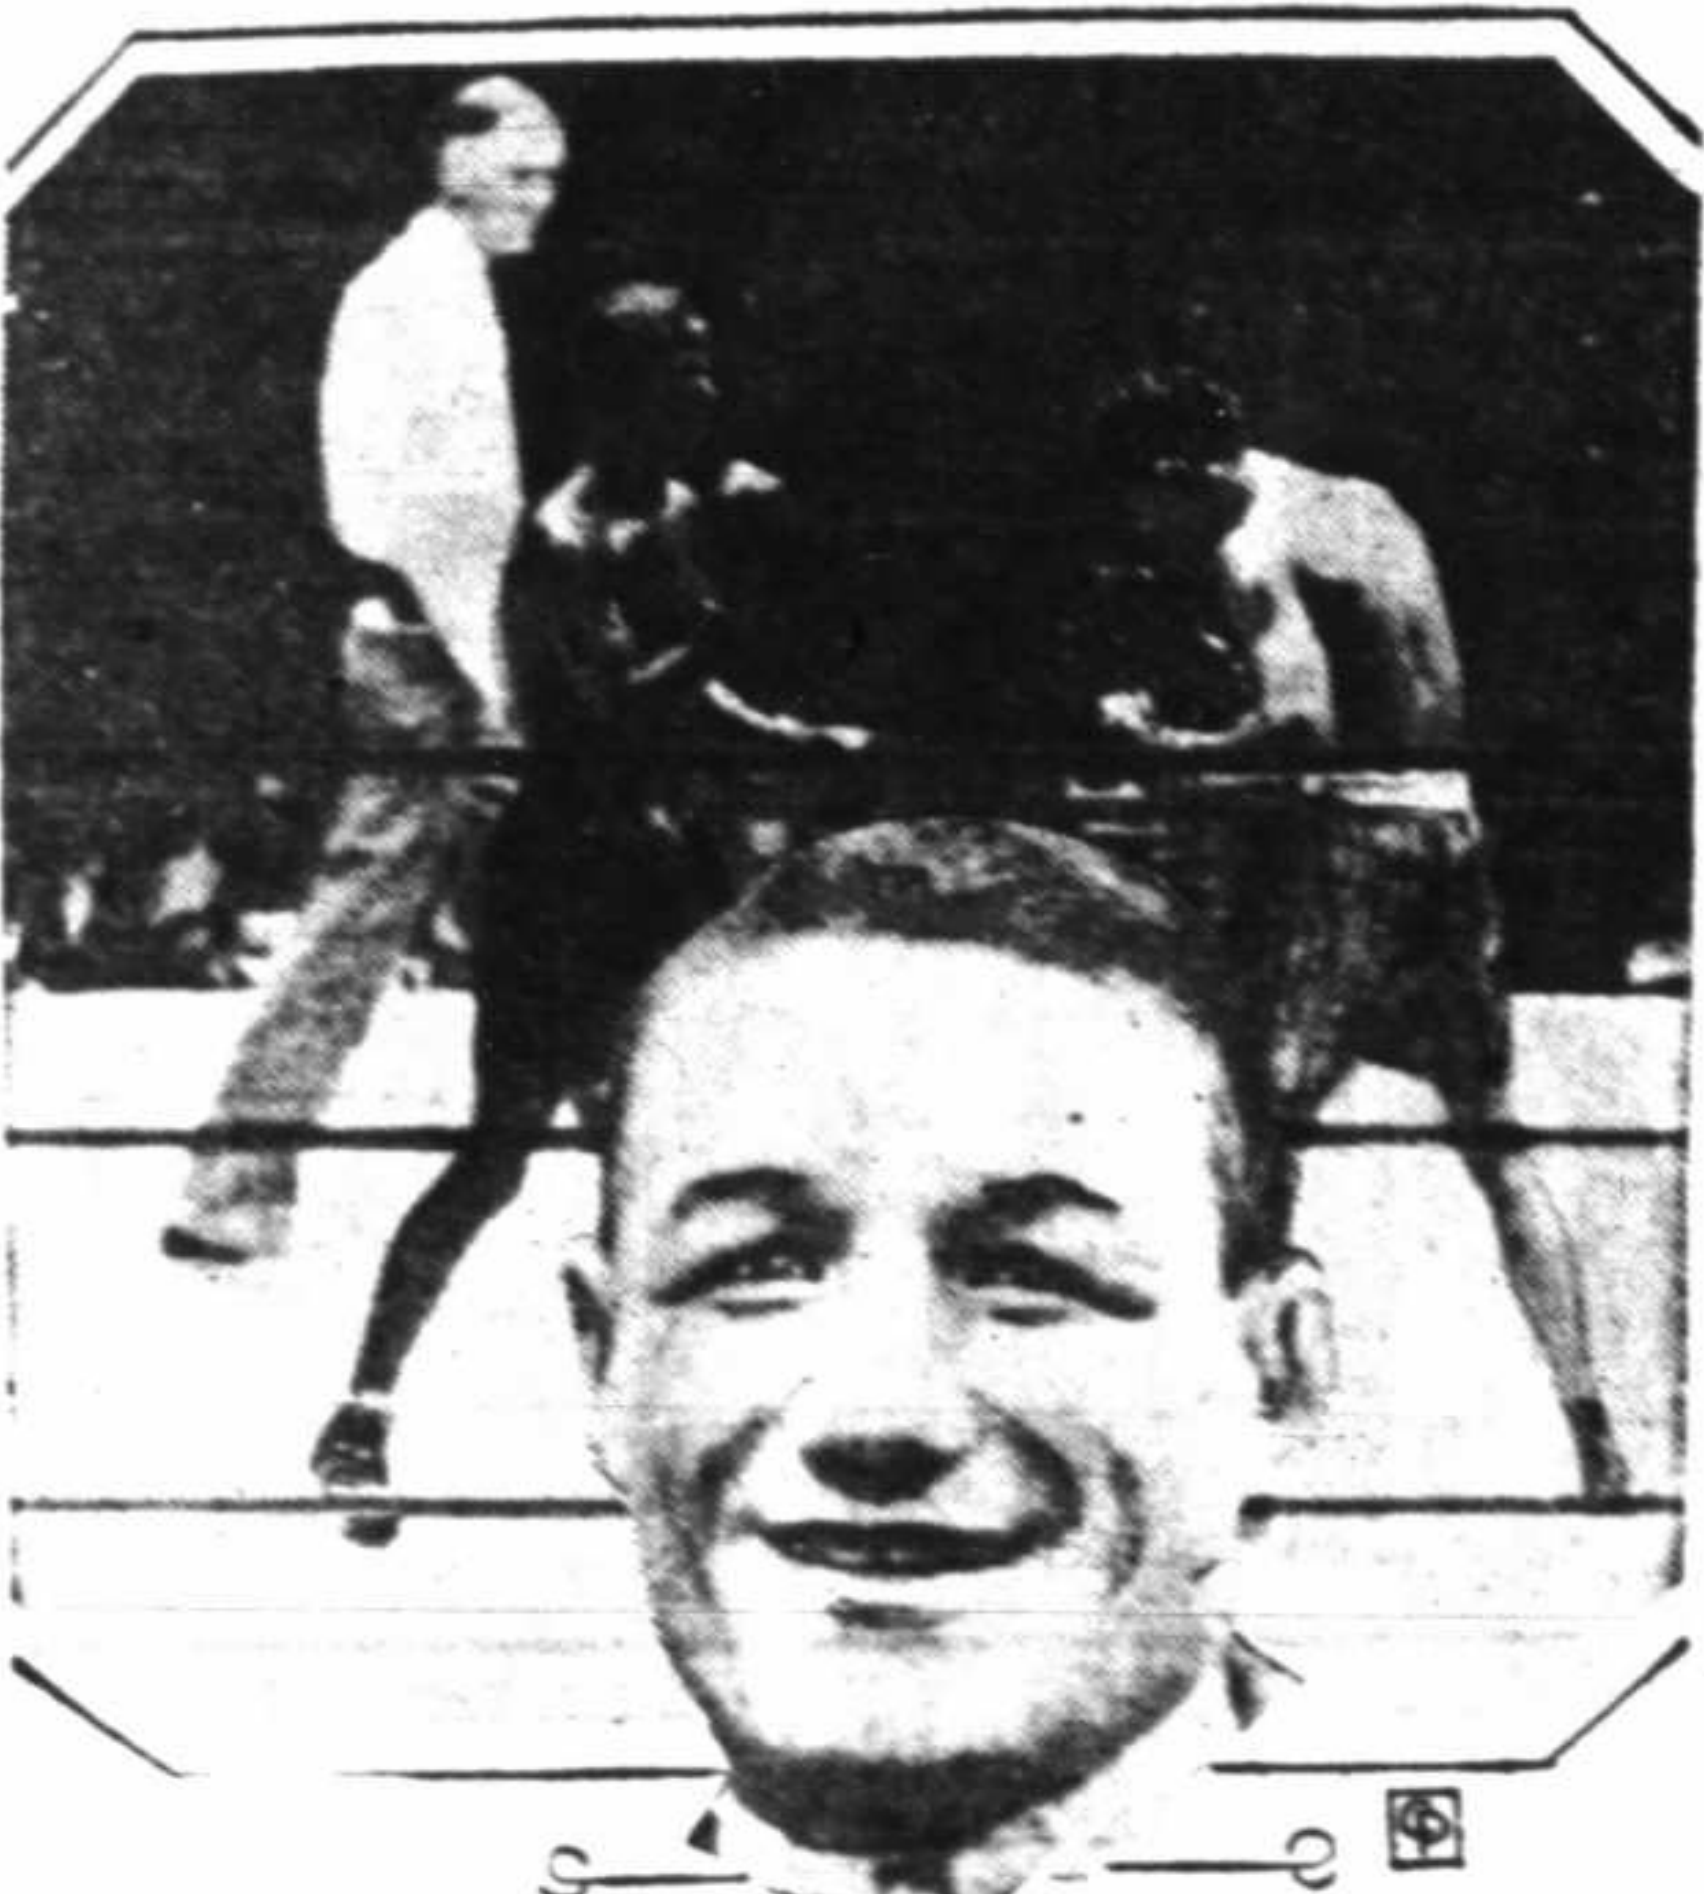

GLEDHILL IS FINALIST
CHICAGO, July 19. (AP)—Keith Gledhill of Santa Barbara, Calif., today became a finalist in the singles of the Western tennis championships, overcoming Gifford Sutter, New Orleans, star in four tierette sets, 6-1, 10-12, 6-2, 14-12.

State Athletic Department May Undergo Change

Suggested Plan Calls For Super-Director To Be In Charge Of Intercollegiate Athletics

AUSTIN, July 19. (AP)—The Austin Statesman said today sweeping reorganization of the athletic department of the University of Texas is being considered by a five-member faculty committee which will report its conclusions to the board of regents at an unannounced date in September.

Under a suggested plan a super-director would be placed in charge of present uncorrelated inter-collegiate athletics, physical education, physical training and women's athletics.

Names of L. Theodore Bellmont, former director of athletics and now professor of physical education; William J. Dusch, veteran baseball coach; E. J. Stewart, former football coach; and Berry Whitaker, former head football coach, are being considered as chief of the new athletic department, the newspaper said it had learned.

Tradesmen Whip Auto-Barbers, 12-7

Carpenter-Painter, cellar occupants of the first half, hung up their third straight victory Friday evening at Merrill Park by pounding out a 12 to 7 decision over the Auto-Barbers.

Henry Martin elected to do the chinking for the Chisum aggregation and was the victim of a potent batting attack that lasted for seven innings. T. Bettis, Hill and Allen were the leading swatsmiths in the fourth straight.

Waller hurled effectively for the winners, holding the Auto-Barbers' bingles well scattered and exhibiting unusually good control. Lemons was the hitting star for the losers.

McAdoo Cheers Fliers To Record

William Gibbs McAdoo, war-time secretary of the treasury, who sponsored the record-breaking endurance flight of Loren Mendell and R. B. Reinhart, is shown here with Mrs. Reinhart waving a cheering salute as the fliers whirled above the Culver City airport. The fliers came down after setting a record of 246 hours 43 minutes and 32 seconds in the air.

May Stage Fight Away From N. Y.

NEW YORK, July 19. (AP)—The Madison Square Garden corporation plans to stage the Max Schmelling-Jack Sharkey fight "somewhere outside New York" in spite of objections by the New York State Athletic Commission.

This was made clear today in a statement issued by William F. Carey, president of the corporation, and designed as a reply to the commission's attitude in suspending Schmelling.

The understanding is that Soldier Field, Chicago, scene of the second Dempsey-Tunney fight, is favored as a site but Boston and either Detroit or Windsor, Canada, are believed to be still under consideration.

New Orleans Robbers Steal Cash Car

Three Hijackers Flee With Funds In Armored Auto

Loot Is $42,000 In Daring Coup Staged On Crescent City Streets; No Traces Found By Police

(By Associated Press) NEW ORLEANS, July 19.—Masked robbers stole an armored money truck containing $42,000 in cash and negotiable checks off the streets of New Orleans early today and disappeared.

Police were unable to find any trace of either. The only clue was a description by bank guards, who were thrown off the truck by the robbers and chased into a restaurant. The thieves escaped in the car, firing their pistols as they sped away.

Apparently the robbery was planned carefully. The truck was making its daily rounds to branches of the Hibernia Bank and Trust company, when it was forced to the curb by a grey sedan, out of which jumped three men, wearing black hoods over their heads and black raincoats. As they sprang to the running board of the truck, they fired their pistols.

One robber chased the guards into the restaurant, another turned the sedan, which was stolen, crosswise in the street, another blocked a cross street with a second machine.

War Debt Confab In France Holds Continued Sway

PARIS, July 19. (AP)—Continuing a session interrupted only by brief recesses, the Chamber of Deputies tonight resumed its discussion of ratification of the Mellon-Berenger settlement of the war debts France owes the United States.

The Finance committee of the Chamber today almost unanimously rejected the proposal which had the approval of Premier Raymond Poincaré for incorporating in a special resolution or subsidiary bill any reservations from the deputies might require. Despite this flat refusal to follow his lead, the premier will make the matter a question of confidence, and is expected to demand an immediate vote without permitting further discussion.

The premier, exhausted by almost five days of constant speaking, in favor of ratification and forced to rest, was expected to return to the chamber tomorrow afternoon. It was said he was prepared to accept one of the orders of the day rejected by the Finance committee, probably that submitted by Deputy Deligne.

Professor Who Slew College Co-Ed Puts Hope Of Acquittal In Alienists

COLUMBUS, O., July 19. (AP)—The law is prepared to foreclose on July 22, what the prosecution believes to be a lien on the life of Dr. James H. Snook, former Ohio State university professor.

Snook is the confessed slayer of his 21-year-old co-ed paramour, Theora K. Nix.

The trial of the 49-year-old veterinarian is to be held before Judge Henry S. Scarlett of the Franklin county common pleas court here.

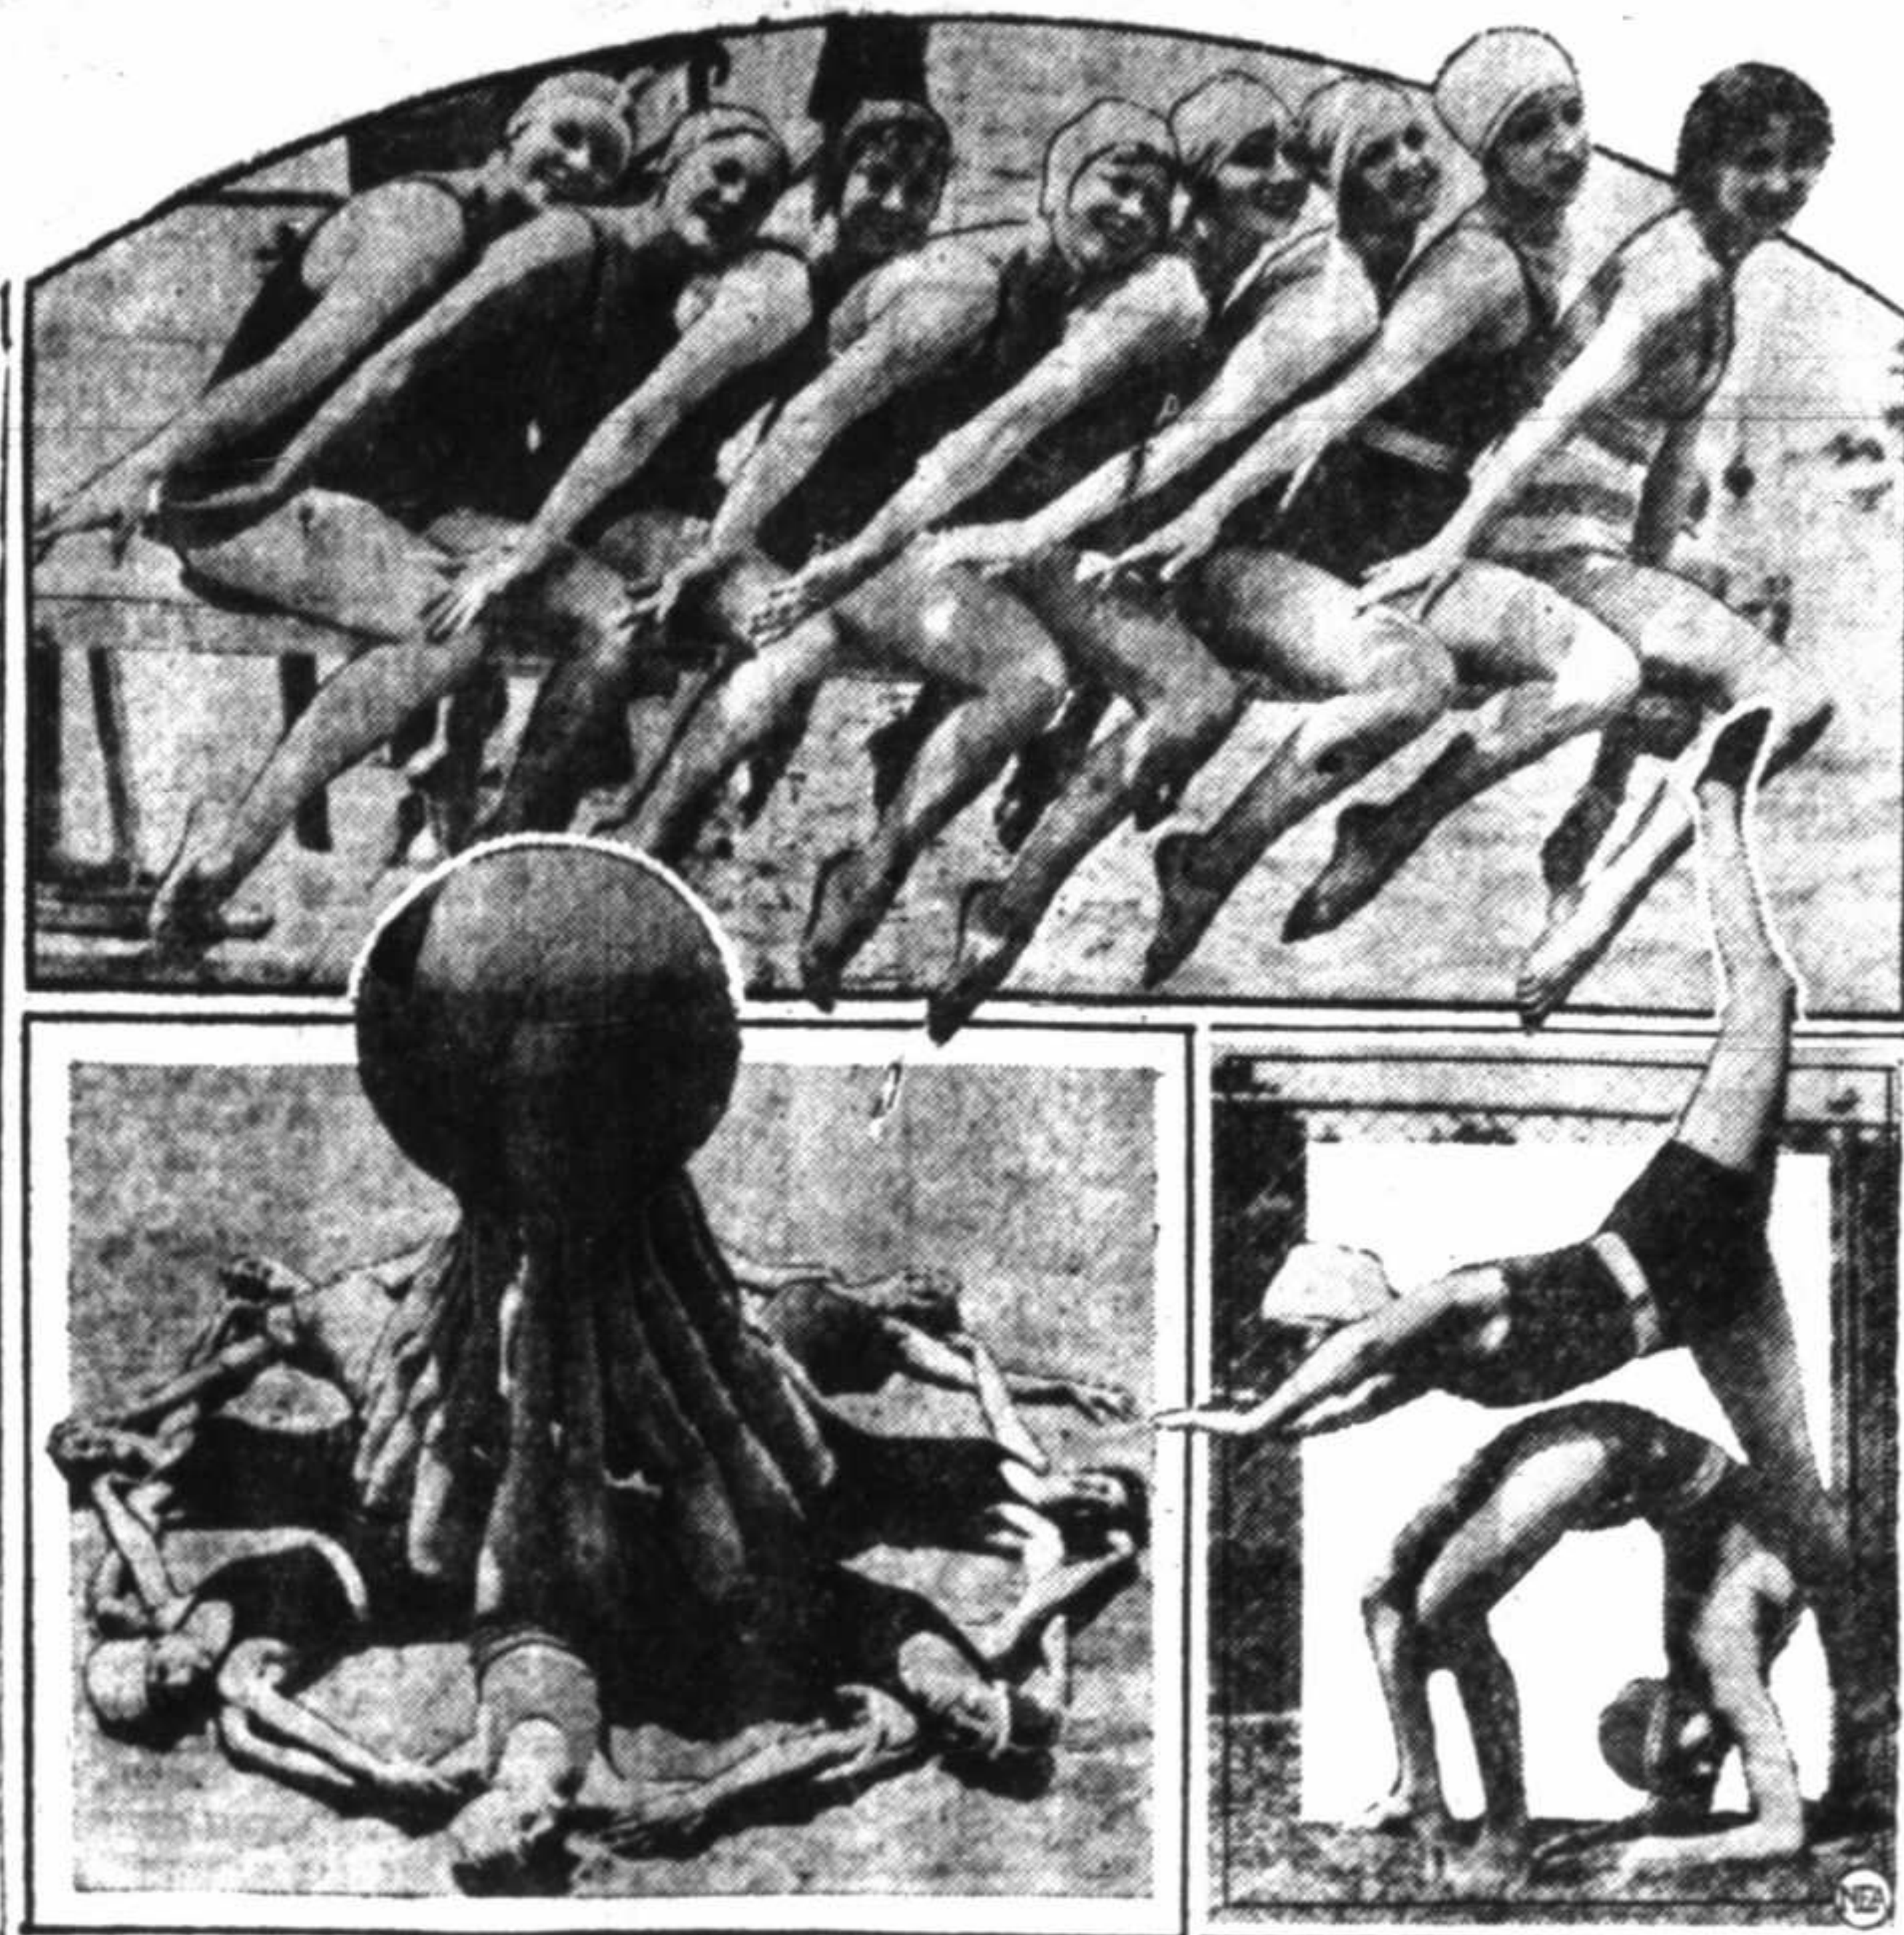

The defense hopes to show through alienists, that Snook's actions were not rational. The professor's attorney, John F. Seidel and E. O. Ricketts, said they had a surprise witness to substantiate that claim.

The prosecution, however, led by the youthful county prosecutor, John J. Chester Jr., has had Snook examined by alienists. Chester contemplates showing that Snook coldly planned the killing.

The former teacher, in his confession, said he bludgeoned the girl with a hammer and then cut her throat with a pocket knife "to protect his family." Theora had threatened to kill his wife and two-year-old child, he claimed. She was a narcotic addict, according to Snook.

The body of the medical student, battered and mutilated, was found on a rifle range near Columbus.

Harvester Head Began His Career As Timekeeper, Getting $40 Per Month

CHICAGO, July 19. (AP)—Solid from "scratch." But not that kind of "scholarship" is meant. Rather the kind that makes a business man read poetry, hold imagination of highest importance in his work, and sets him collecting delicate etchings and aquatints as a hobby.

Imagination, led Perkins, as a young man just out of Yale, to scorn a comfortable professorship of Latin for a job at $40 a month as timekeeper in a Chicago coal room. He had trained to be a teacher, too, and his family had a long record of professional activity.

Mr. Perkins had met a different kind of business man—rare in those days, perhaps—who lifted the curtain and let him see a world of industry unknown to him. He was J. H. Whitmore, owner of a great iron works, and Perkins was tutoring his son.

"He made me see how business was more than just making money," Perkins relates. "How it was a fine thing, with romance in it." The first winter Perkins lived in a room without a stove—it was warmed by a stovepipe which ran through it. The next winter saw him in a better job and a room with a stove. So it has been since, a steady march to the crest. He has spent 27 years as a Harvester executive, the last seven as first vice-president, and has held many of the company's important posts.

Perkins was born in Constantinople, but, consciously, he's never been a foreigner. His father, a clergyman, was teaching in Robert college there and the family left when Herbert was 9 months old.

They came back to America, and as a boy the new Harvester head lived in most of the New England states. When the time came for him to go to college there wasn't any money in the family to send him. But a degree was important to them, so Herbert tended furnaces for people who could afford to have furnaces in those days. Later he won scholarships and tutored his way through.

"A college education is an advantage, a head start," he says, "but I don't regard it as I once did. I've seen too many good men without one."

He is this kind of a big executive. His office door is never closed and to reach him it isn't necessary to

Lack Of Money Halts Marathon

FORT WORTH, July 19. (AP)—Croquet balls won the endurance test over pocketbooks of the Galveston-to-New York City croquet marathoners, according to R. Frank Walton of Rule, manager of the long distance ball pushers, who was in Fort Worth today.

The two marathoners, G. C. Hart and L. R. Rose of Rule, picked up their croquet balls at Bryan Saturday. Walton said. The trio arrived in Fort Worth today at noon.

"Our money just gave out," Walton explained. "Both Hart and Rose were getting in fine fettle. They made about 25 miles a day, each knocking a croquet ball."

Walton declared Hart and Rose were anxious to resume the croquet marathon if they can obtain financing. The plan was to knock croquet balls all the way to New York City from Galveston.

run a gauntlet of office boys and secretaries. Once a co-worker wanted a time-clock installed, but Perkins balked.

THE "MASHING" ORDINANCE

J. C. Levens, assistant city attorney, will find many supporters in his endeavor to influence the Lubbock City commission to create an ordinance providing penalty against "mashing."

According to information received at police headquarters, four women have testified within the last week that they have been insulted by men, unknown to them, who have parked alongside curbs in efforts to influence them into "mashing." Approximately 30 such cases have been reported this year.

"Mashing" in itself is the hailing of women publicly in the streets, without any previous introduction, in an effort to pick up a "date." It is sometimes a forerunner of a most serious situation—the statutory charge.

It is an intolerant practice. It is indiscriminately strikes at the very heart of organized society. The participant of such and offensive gesture has no regard for your wife or your sister. He presumes that every woman pedestrian is a prospective companion for a ride. His "do you want a ride" chatter is directed without any measure of respect. He is always a lonely man, "just arrived in town," and he wants to get acquainted.

Occasionally an innocent and inexperienced girl falls victim to his prey. Flattery serves his aim. Subsequently, the girl arrives home and tearfully relates to parents that she has been insulted. And then the masher falls into clutches of the law on a statutory or an aggravated assault charge, as the case may be.

But the masher is at liberty so long as his prospect does not take a ride and so long as his plea is not vulgar or indecent. An ordinance would prevent such intolerable assumption of disrespect for society. Officers would then have a weapon for assuring the peace and dignity of women who might appear in the streets at night.

Surely, the City commission should give serious consideration to Mr. Levens' plea for the ordinance.

EVOLUTION OF THE DOCTOR

"What becomes of all the doctors?" is an expression that in recent years has become quite as common as the query, "What becomes of all the pins?"

Year after year a cry for medical help comes from many rural communities because of a real scarcity of physicians. The old-time country doctor, whose faithful Dobbin drew the buggy or the cutter into remote and isolated places at all times of the night and under all climatic conditions, and who was ever ready to respond to the call of the suffering, has vanished completely. In his place is the physician whose office and waiting hours are short and rapidly observed and who discourages night calls, frequently refusing to respond to them.

It is a mistake to assume from the paucity of rural doctors that the profession is less popular with young Americans and that matriculation in medical schools are falling off. The fact is that there are more medical schools and students than ever, the eighty medical schools in the country having an enrollment of 16,690 men and 964 women this year.

The shortage of doctors is felt only in rural sections. In the cities there is a surplus of anything. Apparently men and women hanging out their medical shingles today consider the city a better and more profitable field.

There is another trend that is drawing doctors away from sparsely settled sections. It is the trend toward specialization in medicine. A large percentage of those leaving medical schools each year will specialize in some branch of the science instead of entering the general practice of medicine. The reasons why the specialist cannot establish himself in the rural community are obvious.

ON OUR WAY

The most striking feature of long-distance airplane flights is the greater degree of caution exercised and in most instances, a certain contributory purpose to the progress of the modern world. It would be too much to say that the phase of modern life is done with, but its examples are becoming less frequent, and in doing so nothing detracts from that noble daring which needs must pioneer in every new field from that continuing boldness which carries on a still perilous task; in no field of human endeavor has the spirit of sacrifice been more spectacular and more brave than in aviation.

The fact remains that the Atlantic has been crossed several times. There is now an air of relative certainty attaching to such flights, and a diminished anxiety in the public mind. Mechanical features have been developed, construction improved in response to needs. Vital information is more readily obtained and more successfully distributed. Remote places are more alert and resourceful in furthering such adventures or in providing aids. Pilots have more experience, not only the fruits of their own exploits but the lessons plucked by others out of the wilful weather. More is known of the vagaries of Atlantic weather, and the treacherous of it can be matched more probably by human foresight and patience.

Almost it seems that so far from being surprised when an airplane reaches its distant goal, we would be surprised if it didn't.

It is an interesting gift to the people of this age, whose memory can span the first important flights, and the contemporary age of skillful, testing experiments and who, if they live only a reasonable number of added years, may witness the consistent fulfillment of man's proudest achievement.

NEW CURRENCY REMINDS CHINESE OF PAPER MONEY USED IN THE ORIENT LONG BEFORE DAWN OF CHRISTIANITY

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 19.—It's a cold day, even in mid-summer, when a Chinese takes note of any convenience of modern civilization without claiming that the Middle Kingdom was well acquainted with it when the Ming dynasty was still in short pants.

An attaché of the Nanking legation in Washington happened along in the bank lobby, as I was examining my first sample of Uncle Sam's latest currency—the new small-sized kind, only two-thirds the area of the old bills.

"We had paper money in my country," he remarked patronizingly, "long before the dawn of the Christian era."

Piqued, I inquired at the federal reserve board's headquarters in the Treasury building whether paper currency really was so ancient.

The board's statistical division frankly was uncertain just when it did originate but ventured the guess that it couldn't have ante-dated the printing press, at any rate.

Promptly we called up my oriental friend to suggest this paper to him.

"Hu!" he jerked back. "I thought everybody knew that the Chinese already were good printers centuries before Gutenberg was born."

The federal reserve folk do agree that bills of exchange circulated throughout the Roman empire in B. C. days.

The Venetian merchants handled lots of them in the middle ages.

Marco Polo who preceded Gutenberg by a couple of generations mentions carrying what would be called travelers' checks, through the banks of the East, as a means of supplementing their gold and silver hoards whenever they began to run short.

The federal reserve's experts surmise that something like really modern paper issues must have followed pretty speedily after the printing press' appearance in Europe; they cannot imagine the kings of those days as being slow to see the system's advantages as a means of supplementing their gold and silver hoards whenever they began to run short.

Moreover, the government's treasury authorities say paper could be made a reasonably satisfactory circulating medium even without bulion reserves to back it up.

In fact, economists like Prof. Irving Fisher insists that it would be better than gold.

Professor Fisher's plan—which Henry Ford heartily endorses by the way—is to make paper money redeemable in stored-up commodities.

The federal reserve and treasury people do not dismiss this idea as altogether visionary. They prefer a gold basis but they admit that the other scheme might work pretty well.

What orthodox financiers like about gold, they explain, is that it has an intrinsic value—in the art and, for instance, filling teeth—which does not fluctuate so rapidly or so far as values of any other sort of national wealth, such as crops, real estate or warehouseful of manufactured goods.

Hence, it has stability, as a weight on the scales. The financial folk refuse seriously to consider the theory that science may one day knock the value out of the precious metal.

However, scientists speak of it as possible. Indeed, the French savant, Joliot-Curie, is asking now for a test of a process by which he declares he has produced synthetic gold, exactly the same as nature's.

Similar claims have been made before. None ever has been satisfactorily verified, but science declines to go on record as denying that it can be done—the right jolt on the right atom is recognized as able to turn the trick any time.

The financiers themselves confess that cheap gold would be no good as a money—and synthetic gold would imply other synthetic metals.

Then what? Treasury men answer: The fixing of an index value on commodities generally.

A wheat index for example, would hardly do, wheat prices vary too widely with good and bad years. Just so with other single commodities, but some hundreds of them could be jumbled together—wheat, beefsteak, dairy products, gent's furnishings, town loaves, rubber shoes, automobiles—and an index value pinned on the whole.

Paper would be issued on that basis.

FEWER DIE OF "T. B." BUT DISEASE ISN'T UNDER CONTROL YET

By DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

In 1880 tuberculosis was responsible for 326 deaths for every 100,000 people in the United States. The rate has gradually fallen until 1927, when the death rate was 81 deaths for every 100,000 people in the United States.

In 1917 the rate for heart disease passed the rate for tuberculosis. By 1924, the rates for heart disease, pneumonia, brain hemorrhage and cancer passed the rate for tuberculosis. This does not mean, however, that the disease has been in any sense of the word brought under complete control.

The improvement in the rate is no doubt, to be accredited to the advance in our knowledge, but particularly to the removal from general circulation, through residence in sanatoriums of tremendous numbers of people who formerly spread the disease to other people with whom they came in contact. Dr. E. B. Vedder is inclined to consider more important in producing this result than the organized campaign, developing in the United States. Tuberculosis is primarily a disease of bad nutrition, bad housing, overwork and lack of outdoor life.

The people of the United States, during the past thirty years, have come to realize more and more by the campaign of education of the public in health that outdoor life with plenty of sunlight and fresh air, good living conditions and the eating of proper food in considerable quantities is the best possible insurance against many forms of disease.

Whether or not the United States has reached the optimum in this regard is a question that cannot be settled by haphazard guesses. Should the rates for the disease continue to decline during the next twenty-five years as they have in the past twenty-five years, it is possible that tuberculosis may be brought completely under control, with a death rate similar to that of some of the acute infectious diseases, such as scarlet fever and measles.

One of the lowest death rates for this disease ever achieved in the United States was reached in an experiment in a city in Massachusetts in which a considerable sum of money was spent with a direct emphasis on the control of tuberculosis. As a result the rate was brought from 121 per 100,000 in 1917 to 38 per 100,000 in 1925.

Quotations Of Real Merit

"It is no service to the farm family to keep it on the land, at the cost of a declining standard of living. Nor is it a service to the State if the farmer finds that he can better educate and improve his own condition by enlisting in the ranks of industry. It is the business of the State only to keep the door open so that he may do so."—Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture.

"Men, as we have said, crave some badge as a tangible evidence of their distinction if they have attained it. For those not content with being a Master of a Grand Lodge or the High Priest of something-or-other wealth is the sole badge of success."—James Truslow Adams, Harper's Magazine.

"Even if marriage should never become an exact science you can always fall back on love to guide you. Love has the virtue that science hasn't—it overlooks a lot of things."—Eddie Cantor.

"Unfortunately, today there are many who have let the custom of church attendance with their children lapse. They are making a great mistake."—Theodore Roosevelt, Liberty.

"The fit from the social point of view, are those who, through their own survival, contribute most to survival of the group. People are divided into two groups, those who have managed to make an economic success of their lives and those who have made failures."—Prof. Thomas Nixon Carver, Harvard University.

SIDE GLANCES

By George Clark

It was lovely on the pond. The moon hid behind the clouds. And the dark was soft and sweet, and fragrant with the moist odor of flowers that bloom in the starlight.

"And you honestly don't mind if I go to work?" she asked him.

"Not a bit," he lied gallantly. "I want you to."

"I'll promise never to accuse a bum," she vowed. And he kissed her laughing lips. "You know, honestly, dear, I think this is simply a golden opportunity. I've been so awfully hedged in all my life. Now, you see, I've a chance to learn about life, and love, and men."

"Hey!" Jack looked rather alarmed. "Lay off this life, and love and men stuff."

She smiled his arm lovingly. He drew the little white box that held the solitaire that sparkled so small and so brave. He was embarrassed, and trying to make light of a momentous occasion.

"What is it?" demanded Molly.

"Oh, Jack, quick, let me see it! Oh, Jack it's beautiful! It's lovely! Love!"

She slipped it on her finger and held up her hand and watched it sparkle.

"Do you like it? Honest?"

"Like it?" she exclaimed. "I'm crazy about it!"

"It's sort of small," he offered apologetically.

"Why it isn't either. Besides I hate great big stones. It's the very loveliest thing I ever saw."

Jack smiled. A great load was lifted. "You'll wear it to work in the morning?"

Molly hesitated. A shaft of moonlight caught the diamond, stone alive. And Molly, with her hair gleaming like a halo, turned the MOLLY BURNHAM, graduating from college, inherits $10,000. And it seems destined to bring her nothing but misery. In the first place Molly is desperately in love with JACK WELLS, a handsome boy without any money. Jack loves her but flatly declines to marry her until he can take care of her.

They quarrel when she offers him her inheritance. They spend a miserable evening, bickering over money. And Molly, in tears, announces that she is going to get a job, and live her own life. Her newly acquired fortune will make it possible for her to take an apartment and live comfortably while she looks for work.

She says that she had rather do that than return to the mean little prairie town where she lives.

After Molly has gone, in tears, to her room, Jack takes from his pocket a little diamond ring. He had meant to give it to her that night, but suddenly it seems very small and cheap to him.

He crosses it mournfully back to his pocket, and departs for the last train. Next morning Molly goes job hunting with her dearest friend RITA MELNOTTE. Rita is a brilliant, cynical young thing who is experimenting disastrously with a companionate marriage.

Eventually Molly is promised a chance on a newspaper. She meets Jack for dinner, and to tell him her big news. He is maddeningly unenthusiastic and dampens her ardor considerably. Then he remarks that he has some news himself.

NOW G O O N WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI

"Well, sweetheart," Jack told her, "the old man called me in today and asked me how I'd like to work in the New York office. It's a big chance."

Now if you'd only go home, sweetheart, like a good girl and wait a little while six months, maybe. How would you like to live in New York? Take an apartment in the Village, perhaps—

"But Jack, I want a career, too!"

"A career! Molly, what's this bug you've got?"

"Oh, Jack, you're so unreasonable! You expect me to get all excited about your work. Of course I am awfully glad. I think it's wonderful. But I should think you'd know I'd like a little enthusiasm myself."

"Tell me about it, Molly," he said flatly. "I suppose I am very selfish. I was thinking pretty much about myself. Have you honestly a job?"

"Have I?" she cried. "I should say I had! Guess what I'm going to do?"

"Oh, Lord, I don't know. What do girls do in newspaper offices? Write things about cooking and clothes?"

"What?"

If she had said she was going around with a gunman, and hold people up, Jack could scarcely have sounded more horrified.

"You're going to do nothing of the kind!"

"Jack Wells, what do you mean? I'm going to do nothing of the kind?"

"But see here, Molly, do you think any man's going to stand for having his sweetheart run around, accosting a lot of bums, asking fool questions. Getting herself insulted. What in blazes are you going to say to people?"

It had been a long day, and a nerve-racking day, and suddenly Molly began to cry. "Oh, Jack! It's awful to quarrel this way. I love you so, it simply breaks my heart."

"Oh, Molly! Molly sweetheart! I am jealous, that's all. I don't want you working with a lot of men. You are such a little thing, Molly. We'll take a boat on the pond in the Public Gardens. And, listen, darling, the more I think about it . . . Well, goah, I haven't any right to ask you to sit around and wait for me. If I was any damn good, you wouldn't have to anyhow."

It was lovely on the pond. The moon hid behind the clouds. And the dark was soft and sweet, and fragrant with the moist odor of flowers that bloom in the starlight.

"And you honestly don't mind if I go to work?" she asked him.

"Not a bit," he lied gallantly. "I want you to."

"I'll promise never to accuse a bum," she vowed. And he kissed her laughing lips. "You know, honestly, dear, I think this is simply a golden opportunity. I've been so awfully hedged in all my life. Now, you see, I've a chance to learn about life, and love, and men."

"Hey!" Jack looked rather alarmed. "Lay off this life, and love and men stuff."

She smiled his arm lovingly. He drew the little white box that held the solitaire that sparkled so small and so brave. He was embarrassed, and trying to make light of a momentous occasion.

"What is it?" demanded Molly.

"Oh, Jack, quick, let me see it! Oh, Jack it's beautiful! It's lovely! Love!"

She slipped it on her finger and held up her hand and watched it sparkle.

"Do you like it? Honest?"

"Like it?" she exclaimed. "I'm crazy about it!"

"It's sort of small," he offered apologetically.

"Why it isn't either. Besides I hate great big stones. It's the very loveliest thing I ever saw."

Jack smiled. A great load was lifted. "You'll wear it to work in the morning?"

Molly hesitated. A shaft of moonlight caught the diamond, stone alive. And Molly, with her hair gleaming like a halo, turned the ring around and around on her finger, and never said a word.

"You don't want to wear it . . . do you, Molly?"

Suddenly the lovely night was filled with tragedy. She bent toward him, and the little creeping scent of her perfume was wafted softly.

"Why, darling!" she held out her hand. "What do you mean? You see it's too large, dear. I'd lose it."

"No!" He shook his head. "No, that's not it, Molly. You don't like it because it's little. You're disappointed. I can tell. Never mind. I'll get you another one. A big one like Claudia Cabot's." He boasted arrogantly. "I'll have a raise pretty quick, and get you a knock-out stone. I'm sorry I bought that thing."

"Jack Wells, are you crazy?"

Molly's eyes were full of shining tears. She smiled luminously. And, bending kissed him softly. How could she say that it might not be wise to wear an engagement ring to work the first morning? He was telling everyone you were just about married.

A girl without any romantic entanglements got along better in business. Men aren't interested in engaged girls.

Then, suddenly she was sorry she had hesitated. What did she care about newspaper men? Didn't she love Jack with all her heart? And now she had hurt his feelings!

"Sweetheart!" she cried, and held the little ring toward him. "Wish it on for me. And I'll never take it off till you put a wedding ring beneath it."

But her lover was filled with shame and humiliation, and a sort of heart-breaking anger. He reached and taking the ring, dropped it overboard.

"Oh! Molly's startled cry broke on a sob. "Jack!"

"You didn't want it," he said.

"But I did! Oh, Jack, Jack! It's been over the side of the boat. It's gone," she said, and her voice was flat and empty. "It was so white and shining . . . and now it's gone." She put her white fingers to her face.

"Yes," he answered cully. And he wondered if there was anything symbolic in the way it fell. If their love, which was also white and shining, had also gone?

Molly was crying softly.

"My poor dear little ring!" she sobbed. "I loved it so much. And now I'll never see it again. It's down at the bottom of the pond. And all that money thrown away! Oh, Jack, how could you?"

"That's nothing," he bragged. "Money isn't going to count with me much longer. I'll have something to buy you an engagement ring. It's heart was by the way, darling. Did I tell you I'm going to New York first thing in the morning?"

"Jack Wells! You're not either!"

"Yes, I am. I report for work Wednesday."

And he'll be in Boston all alone.

"Oh, no," she corrected her gently. Ruth Woods and her husband. And there's your new job. You won't be lonely."

"But I want you!" she cried. "Never anybody but you."

Jack's mouth looked drawn. "You have made your choice. Oh, he reminded her. "You'd never be satisfied unless you'd found something to do. It's better, you said, than sitting around, hemming dish towels, and playing bridge."

"Have you packed yet?"

"No, it won't take long. Throw a few shirts in a bag. Oh, he reminded her. "You'd never be satisfied unless you'd found something to do. It's better, you said, than sitting around, hemming dish towels, and playing bridge."

"I'll help you pack," she offered.

"What!" Jack pretended to be shocked.

"Don't be silly," she admonished. "Mrs. Maloney would be shocked to death. Gee, she might put you out!"

Molly consulted her watch.

"It's exactly 10 minutes past 10," she said. "And I'm not a bit afraid of Mrs. Maloney. Come on. Start packing!"

"She'll have a fit," he predicted darkly.

"Maybe she won't be home."

"Oh, she'll be home all right. She's always home. She hasn't any place else to go."

Molly had never been to Jack's quarters before, and every girl is curious about the sort of a place a man lives in. Particularly when she loves that man.

"You wouldn't get a kick out of visiting my room," observed Molly.

"But I will out of seeing you."

And she reflected that Jack knew so many little personal things about her that there would be nothing particularly revealing about her room. He knew more than a mere bedroom could ever tell him.

He knew, for instance, that she used violet toilet soap. And sweet pea perfume. And baby's talcum powder. He knew that her favorite color was orchid. And that she had a taffeta coverlet that she bought second-hand from a girl at college for $20, because she had told him about it.

Yes, after all a man knows pretty much about a girl. But a girl doesn't know much of anything about a man,

Wheat Continues To Be Freight Into Texas Port

Fort Worth Grain Men Send Product To Galveston As Embargo Holds First Day's Business

(By Associated Press) — Despite the embargo on wheat at Galveston, all rail lines leading to Galveston are still accepting wheat for shipment there. Today it was estimated more than 600 cars from Fort Worth had been diverted to Galveston while more than 100 cars had gone to Houston, where about 700,000 bushels of storage was still available.

The wheat trade was naturally "up in the air" over the embargo this morning as Galveston interests had been assuring the trade the wheat would be moved promptly. That it was not so moved as blamed by Fort Worth grain men on the United States shipping board.

Wheat is Active
However, Fort Worth grain men were still buying wheat actively today, cash wheat premiums showing little reduction from those in force yesterday, although nominally following the contract values which were fluctuating rather violently. Fort Worth storage space was still available for regular customers of the elevators but it was said those desiring emergency storage here might not find accommodations. Nearly 3,000,000 bushels of storage space was still available for regular shippers to the Fort Worth market but applicants were said to be many.

Rancher Fleeced Of $3,500 Funds

BROWNWOOD, July 19. (AP) — Homer Fields, sheep rancher of Bertram, was fleeced of $3,500 last night when taken to a hotel room with the idea of closing a deal for some sheep, he reported to police. The rancher said he had drawn the money from a bank to pay for the sheep, but when he arrived at the hotel the would-be sheepmen took the roll from his pocket. Later, when he got back to the room with officers, it had been re-arranged so as to give the impression he had lost the money in a game of cards. Fields reported.

RAYMONDVILLE, July 19. (AP) — A temporary injunction has been granted in District Court restraining Willacy county officers from opening a highway out from San Perita through property of the King estate to Red Fish bay. The petition for an injunction was filed by R. J. Kieberg, Sr.

Fruit Fly Situation Seizes Stage As Farm Relief Board Continues On Task Of Aiding Ailing Agriculture

Senator Tom Connally, Of Texas, Is Heard In Plea For Statistical Bureau To Aid Cotton Industry

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The fruit fly emergency in Florida gained the attention today of President Hoover and the newly organized federal farm board.

The board for the first time turned aside from its task of organization to hear an appeal for relief from the Florida citrus industry. Because of the situation, the farm board heard the plea of the Florida citrus industry for a share in the $150,000,000 fund available for loans to cooperatives.

President Hoover announced he would recommend an appropriation to meet the cost to the fruit growers of the federal and state agencies in the drive for extermination of the fruit fly. This appropriation will be in the millions.

It was explained at the White House that the government had established the precedent of meeting these costs after the question arose during the fight against the hoot and mouth disease.

Establishment of a new policy, however, whereby the fruit will be permitted to be shipped from the infected areas under certain conditions was expected by the president to cut down the losses from damage tremendously.

Texas Senator's Pleas Are Heard

HON. TOM CONNALLY

Failure of a number of Florida banks appears to have added to the woes of the Florida citrus industry. Because of the situation, the farm board heard the plea of the Florida citrus industry for a share in the $150,000,000 fund available for loans to cooperatives.

Connally Takes Floor
Senator Tom Connally, Texas, suggested consideration of the cotton situation. The Texas urged the board to set up a statistical arrangement whereby a close check would be had on cotton conditions at all times.

Chairman Legge said the board would accede to a request made that it receive a committee from the Texas legislature respecting cotton. Otherwise, he said, the cotton situation had not been taken up by the board. He refrained from any comment on the cotton market beyond the observation that the price seeped to be about the same as a year ago.

AUSTIN, July 19.—In an effort to check the spread of typhoid fever in many sections of the state, Dr. J. C. Anderson, state health officer, today urged immunization treatment by individuals and cautioned officials in charge of water to guard against contamination of the supply.

The disease has reached epidemic form at Wink, McKinney and Junction, the state health officer said he was advised.

Gas Tax Applies To All Users, Is Terrell's Claim

Exempted Fuel Will Later
Be Subject To Warrants
For Repayment, Official Of State Announces

(By Associated Press)
AUSTIN, July 19.—The new four-cent tax on gasoline must be paid even though the user is fuel exempt, State Comptroller S. H. Terrell said today. The tax paid on exempted gasoline will be refunded by state warrant, he said.

"There has been some misunderstanding as to the operation of the new law," he said. "Gasoline for use on roads, streets and highways of Texas is subject to the tax that is used in other ways being exempt. However, the tax must be paid on gasoline used. Users entitled to exemptions will have the amount refunded to them by state warrant."

Wholesale distributors have 30 days in which to file application and bond for a permit to sell gasoline. A minimum bond of $1,000 is required, and additional bond may be required at discretion of the comptroller up to a maximum of $100,000.

Lives Of Six Persons Aboard Ill-Fated Train Might Be Dead Today Had Goddess of Fortune Been Asleep

DENVER, Colo., July 19.—(AP)—Screams of a child, a pair of yellow shoes and a change of berths were factors in saving the lives of six persons in the wreck of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific passenger train near Stratton yesterday.

Mary Margaret Waddle, 6, cried out when water swirled about her, taking her parents and a sister. They reached safety from their coach which was on one side of the creek, half in and half out of the water into which part of the train plunged.

Ex-Soldier Here In Need Of Help

Man, Wife, Both Victims
Of Tuberculosis, Sorely
In Need; Legion Post To Stage Drive For Them

Because his wife and child would be left without means of support, no money, clothes or food, and ex-service man in Lubbock, suffering with tuberculosis, has refused offers of the local Allen Brothers Post, American Legion, to help him get hospitalization.

The wife, also a sufferer of the disease, is in a much more serious condition than is her husband. Unless some immediate relief is found for her she cannot live long, according to Glen Hess, secretary-treasurer of the local post. Aid could be given the man through the government, but his wife could not be cared for and rather than leave her alone, he declares he will stay.

To Make Collection.
Efforts will be made for a collection in order to relieve the couple's immediate need. They are housed in a tent at a local camp ground. County Judge Robert H. Bean has announced that there is no statute provision whereby the county could pay hospitalization fees until the person has resided in the county for six months.

Subjects of this kind reveal the need for a county hospital, where the poor can receive treatment, said Mr. Hess. "Lubbock and the county should give serious consideration to installation of a hospital for the poor."

Prohibition Officers In Texas and Arkansas Hunt
Feminine Offenders In Newly Created Booze Drive

TEXARKANA, Ark., July 19.—(AP)—On his promise that seventy-five percent of bootlegging in Arkansas is done by women, S. M. Gurley, deputy prohibition administrator for the western section of the state, has arrested 14 women and declares the drive has just begun.

Gurley assigned 75 percent of bootlegging in his state to women and said half of those so engaged operated as agents for their husbands or men friends.

Chivalry Is Over
"The days of southern chivalry are over so far as women violators of the prohibition law are concerned," he added.

In the past prohibition officials especially in the south, have been inclined to look askance at the women liquor vendor because federal judges have not favored sending them to such institutions as Atlanta and Leavenworth prisons. Now with the new prison for women at Alderson, W. Va., the situation is changed.

had been assigned a berth in a car but later was notified by the Pullman conductor she had to move two cars back in the train. The berth she originally occupied was one that was submerged.

On his way forward to visit a porter in the Cape Porpoise car that was submerged in the water, Garland Edwards, Chicago, porter, stopped. His attention was caught by a pair of brilliant yellow shoes. Between the shoes and the Cape Porpoise were two coaches. Edwards put the talking desire behind and took the shoes back to shine them. The train was wrecked and he was safe two cars back of the submerged coach.
