Noriega met North, Panamanian testifies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, Panama's military ruler, met with Lt. Col. Oliver L. North twice in 1985 and agreed to provide military training for U.S.-backed Contra rebels, an exiled former Panamanian official testified today.

The witness, Jose I. Blandon, once a senior member of Panama's intelligence apparatus, said Noriega later offered to send Panamanian soldiers inside Nicaragua to conduct "terrorist sabotage" against that country's leftist Sandinista government.

But he said North replied that he had no authority to accept such an offer and would relay it to his superiors at the National Security Council. Blandon did not indicate if the idea was ever put into effect.

He said Noriega's first meeting with North took place on a luxury yacht off Panama's Pacific coast in June 1985, the second in Noriega's office the following October.

Blandon, appearing under oath before the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on terrorism, contradicted statements by Noriega last week that in a December 1985 meeting with Rear Adm. John Poindexter, just installed as presidential national security adviser, the subject of Nicaragua had not come up.

Noriega said that Poindexter spoke of plans to mount a U.S. invasion of Nicaragua.

No mention was made of invading Nicaragua, said Blandon, adding that he was present at all the meetings he described.

On Tuesday, the Central Intelligence Committee "categorically denied" Blandon's assertion that the CIA regularly sent Noriega information about the political positions and personal lives of U.S. senators with an interest in Panama, including Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a foe of Noriega, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Anti-crime groups neutral

Letter from Angelo sparks concern

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

At least two Midland anti-crime groups are concerned that a political mail-out connecting their names to a partisan campaign could affect their tax-exempt statuses.

Midlander Ernest Angelo Jr., a Republican National Committeeman and author of a letter soliciting support for 142nd District judicial candidate Nick Taylor, described the matter today as "a tempest in a teapot."

Taylor said this morning he doesn't think the letter will hurt his campaign.

But Susie Hitchcock-Hall, chairman of the board of Crime Stoppers, said this is the second time her group — against her instructions — has been associated with supporting Taylor.

"There is no two ways about it, this is going to hurt us," Ms. Hitchcock-Hall said.

The Taylor mail-out sent to "thousands" of Midlanders paints incumbent judge Pat Baskin as holding a "liberal" court, a charge Baskin denies.

"So how do we determine the truth?" Angelo asks in the letter.

Johnnie Maxie, left, and Alton Maxie leave Smith County Courthouse in Tyler following an inquest into the death of Loyal Garner Jr. The Maxies were taken into custody with Garner and taken to Sabine County Jail, where Garner was beaten.

Death in East Texas jail homicide, jury determines

TYLER (AP) — A jury ruled the death of a black jail inmate was a homicide after a former cellmate testified he saw a white officer beat his friend and heard moans after the man was taken to another room.

The jury also ruled in an inquest Tuesday that the death of Loyal Garner Jr., a 34-year-old father of six, two days after his Christmas arrest on a drunken driving charge in Hemphill, was due to head injuries.

Will Smith, a black Church of Christ minister from Hemphill who has protested Garner's death, praised the ruling.

"This has opened some of the black folks' eyes, but some of the white folks', too," said Smith, who has alleged racism and police brutality in the remote East Texas logging and farming town of 1,300.

A pathologist testified at the inquest that Garner, of Florien, La., suffered severe brain hemorrhaging after apparently being struck in the head at least twice.

Hemphill Police Chief Thomas Ladner, 40, county sheriff's deputies Bill Horton, 58, and James Hyden, 34, already have been charged with violating Garner's civil rights by beating him and denying him medical treatment.

If convicted of the state charges, they face maximum sentences of life imprisonment. The officers are free on $25,000 bond each and have been suspended from their jobs with pay. A trial has not been scheduled.

The FBI also is investigating the death.

Justice of the Peace William B. Baird, who presided at the inquest, said additional state charges could be filed in Sabine County, or Smith County, where Garner died.

Smith County District Attorney Jack Skeen said he would review the ruling in about three weeks to determine whether to file murder charges.

Sabine County District Attorney Bill Martin did not attend the inquest and was away from his home and was not available for comment Tuesday night.

Ladner's defense attorney, John Seale, said the inquest ruling won't make a difference in the criminal civil rights case or a civil suit filed by Garner's widow, Corrinne, against the town of Hemphill. He said the ruling cannot be entered as evidence in those trials.

Garner family members showed no reaction when the ruling was announced, and refused to comment later.

Garner was arrested Dec. 25 for investigation of driving while intoxicated as he and two black friends, Alton Maxie and Maxie's brother Johnnie, drove through Hemphill.

Garner was taken to Sabine County Hospital the next day and transferred to a Tyler hospital, where he died Dec. 27.

An autopsy showed that although there were no skull injuries, there were several internal contusions, some penetrating to the deepest part of the brain, Dr. V.V. Gonzalez testified.

Most Taylor donors from out of state

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

The second financial report due last Monday in the 142nd Judicial District race between incumbent Judge Pat Baskin and Nick Taylor shows both are collecting large amounts of money, although Taylor's report lists a majority of donations from outside Texas.

Donations totaling $14,296.64 were garnered by Taylor Jan. 1 through Jan. 28. All but $2,346.64 of the sum was from outside Midland, the document showed.

Taylor had 31 donors during the period and 13 — including himself — were from Midland, reports showed.

Amounts came to Taylor from Houston and Dallas; Washington, D.C.; Connecticut; Massachusetts; Maryland; Illinois; Rhode Island; and California.

The contender said this morning those contributions from the north and west don't mean he has no support in Midland.

They instead reflect the results of personal correspondence with family and old friends that he told about his race, he said.

Taylor said his campaign got off to a slower start because he was not prepared for Baskin's move to the Republican Party shortly after Taylor announced he was running several months ago.

Council smooths pet owners' hackles, agrees to relax limits

By RAMONA NYE

After fielding phone calls all week and listening Tuesday to several residents speak vehemently against a proposed pet limit of five animals, the City Council acknowledged touching a nerve and tossed out the measure.

With a unanimous vote Tuesday the council agreed to postpone acting on the amendment that would limit pet ownership to five cats, dogs or ferrets or a combination of the three species.

The seven-member group directed the city staff and Animal Control Advisory Commission to formulate a more flexible rule.

A public hearing on the rule will be held 5 p.m. March 1 in City Council chambers in City Hall, Main Street and Illinois Avenue.

"I was flabbergasted at the number of calls I have received from people that have pets," said District 2 Member Oralia Corrales, during the council's Tuesday meeting.

"I just never realized what a touchy subject this was," she said.

Animal Control Director Coy Willis said the amendment was not set up to limit pets, but to allow the city to keep track of animals by requiring a yearly $25 kennel fee for each household with more than five animals.

However, one speaker Tuesday, who presented the council with 250 signatures protesting the amendment said the fee penalizes home owners who are taking care of their pets.

"I think we're being unduly persecuted," said Bambi Nix, who has 15 cats that control rodents and snakes on her 5.2 acres in Melody Acres.

Ad brings requests for retirement information

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Local efforts to develop a vigorous retirement industry are kicking into high gear, as more than a dozen potential residents from around the nation request information on Midland and Odessa every day.

The Midland/Odessa Health & Retirement Endeavor is receiving the requests in response to its first-ever ad, a ⅓-page ad in Fifty Plus magazine. The advertising effort, using the theme "Warm climate. Warmer People!" was underwritten by a $3,000 grant by the Midland Board of Realtors.

The Realtors have not only provided financial support to MOHRE's programs, but also will cooperate with the group to have member agents work on a rotating basis with visitors interested in relocating and house hunting in this area.

MOHRE's mission — attracting permanent and seasonal residents over age 50 to the Petroplex — is "an absolute vision of the future," Board of Realtors president Darrell McDonald said at a press conference this morning.

"As Realtors, we sell this city every day and we are excited and glad to support a program that brings us greater opportunities to do that."

On peak days, more than 40 response coupons come in to the MOHRE office and since the campaign began in the January edition of the magazine, information packets have been sent to 41 states, MOHRE board member Joan Baskin told the group.

Residents of Illinois, New York, California and New Jersey have been among the top "inquiring minds" looking for more information on Midland/Odessa.

Nation's test scores subject to 'Lake Wobegon effect?'

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON — Parents and children alike are being misled by achievement tests with a "Lake Wobegon effect" in which most students' scores are declared above average, a top Education Department official says.

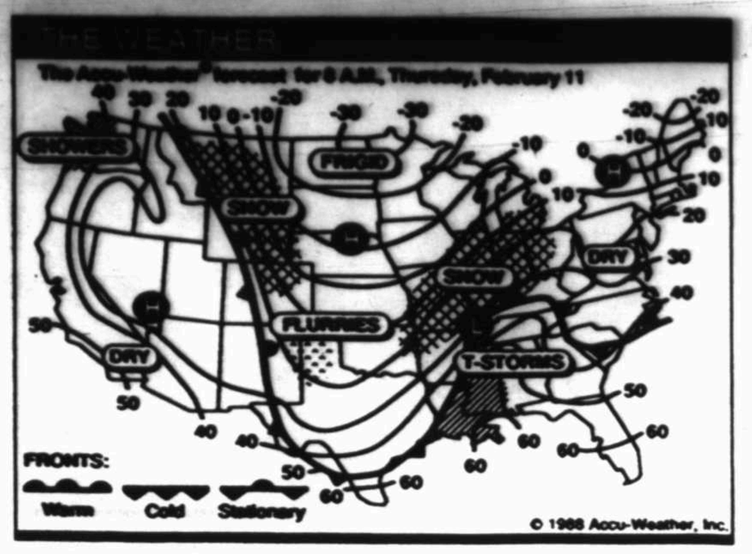

Chester E. Finn Jr., the assistant secretary for educational research and improvement, likens such test results to the Lake Wobegon invented by author and radio personality Garrison Keillor. There, according to Keillor, "all of the women are strong, all of the men are good-looking, and all of the children are above average."

Statistically, half of the children taking a standardized test should be above average and half below it.

The exams that are showing otherwise give "a falsely optimistic" picture of the schools' performance, Finn told reporters Tuesday after a closed-door session with test publishers and experts.

Snow extended across much of Iowa and Nebraska and parts of South Dakota, Wyoming and Colorado. Two to 4 inches of snow fell by late Tuesday in Iowa and Minnesota, and up to 3 inches had falled at Casper, Wyo.

Strong winds and extremely cold temperatures added to winter's bite in South Dakota and Nebraska.

Winds at 41 mph and the cold made the air feel like minus 64 degrees at Mobridge, S.D.

Huron, S.D., had a temperature of 9 degrees below zero with a 19 mph wind, producing a wind chill factor of 50 degrees below zero.

Advisories for snow or blowing snow were posted for the northern and central Colorado mountains and the front range of the Colorado Rockies. Five to 10 inches of snow was likely today in parts of the Colorado Rockies, and 1 to 3 inches in the Denver area.

NORIEGA

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., the subcommittee chairman, asked Blandon today if he wanted to change his story.

Speaking in Spanish through an interpreter, Blandon told the panel: "There is no reason in my heart and in my mind to invalidate what I have said. Unfortunately, what I have said is true."

He said it is "no secret" in Latin America that the CIA makes such information available to other governments, even though the agency is barred by U.S. law from gathering information on Americans in the United States.

Sen. Alphonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., said he believes there are powerful groups who "will do anything they can to discredit Mr. Blandon."

"The fact of the matter is that it has been well known that Noriega — this thug and racketeer — has been on the payroll of the CIA for many years and remained there, I am given to understand, until rather recently," D'Amato said.

"I do not doubt the veracity of Mr. Blandon," he said. "I believe him."

But the spy agency, through spokesman Sharon Foster, said on Tuesday:

"The CIA categorically denies Blandon's assertions that the agency furnished any such information regarding U.S. senators or their staffers to the government of Panama."

The central theme of Blandon's testimony has been his allegation that Noriega made millions of dollars by opening Panama as a safe haven for drug traffickers and allowing Panamanian banks to be used as conduits for laundering drug-sale profits.

Meanwhile, the Senate Intelligence Committee, which oversees the CIA, immediately began inquiries of the agency and of the National Security Council and the Pentagon, two other agencies mentioned by Blandon as intelligence sources for Noriega.

But committee spokesman David Holliday added: "We have seen no substantiation of any kind. The question is, is there any proof? I don't think that people should automatically jump to the conclusion that the CIA's guilty."

Blandon told the subcommittee Tuesday that Noriega actively assisted international drug traffickers, accumulated a personal fortune of more than $200 million, and essentially "turned Panama into a gigantic machine for all sorts of criminal activities and enterprises."

Noriega was indicted last week in Miami for allegedly accepting $4.6 million to provide a safe haven for narcotics and money-laundering operations.

Blandon's testimony appalled senators, especially those whose private lives and political stances were allegedly detailed in CIA dossiers given to Noriega.

Kerry, co-chairman of the Senate subcommittee, called it "as disturbing a revelation as I've heard in the course of a lot of disturbing revelations" about Noriega.

Kennedy called the prospect of CIA complicity with Noriega "reprehensible."

If true, Blandon's allegations would mean the CIA violated a law prohibiting it from gathering information about Americans inside the United States.

Noriega's lawyers disputed Blandon's testimony, describing Blandon as willing to "say what any particular bidder wants him to say at any particular time."

But Kerry, who is heading the investigation by the Senate panel, said Blandon is credible because his central accusations have been corroborated by other sources.

Blandon, who was fired by Noriega last month as Panama's consul general in New York City, said reports on senators also were received from the National Security Council and all were routinely passed to him as a member of Panama's security apparatus.

Most of the senators involved were sponsors of legislation aimed at cutting off U.S. aid to Panama because of Noriega's alleged drug connections.

PETS

"It's not that I don't have the money to pay the fees. I'm just against the fees," Mrs. Nix said.

Willis said animal control officers need to know how many pets are in the city because stray cats have become a nuisance, and the shelter's 35 traps are always in use.

But, Dalton Byerly, director of the Midland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Amimals, disputed the measure's effectiveness. "We're not going to know any better from this ordinance where animals are," he said.

He added that some pet owners might have gone "underground" and not vaccinated or licensed animals exceeding the limit if the measure had passed.

Animal commission member June Dotson Tuesday defended the $25 kennel fee.

"I couldn't see anything wrong with a $25 fee to have more than the designated number," she said.

"Animals don't want to be in a condition where there's too many to take care of," she said.

At-large council member Katie Heck acknowledged responsible pet owners may have had to unfairly foot the bill for animal control.

"The fact is, animals can be a hazard. We must pay people to control them," Ms. Heck said.

She added, "I can't imagine living without a pet. For that privilege, I feel paying the license fees is necessary."

In other action Tuesday the council:

— hired private consultant Ray Kendall at a $8,000 monthly salary for three months to assess the city's phone system needs,

— extended a one-year contract with Big 3 Tire Inc. of Midland for vehicle repairs, — transferred a surplus of $650,000 from the 1987 budget to the 1988 budget,

— bought four tractor lawn mowers for $20,684 from Cisco Equipment Inc. of Odessa to maintain lawns around the Paul Davis Water field plant north of the city,

— accepted a $83,000 bid from Honeywell Corp. of Lubbock for maintenance of the Airport Department's heating, ventilation and air conditioning systems, and — approved a definition of a restaurant and a private club to be used as a condition for businesses applying for permits allowing alcohol sales.

JUDGE

"The best way would be to ask someone who knows... an attorney who practices in the 142nd District Court, an off-duty sheriff's deputy or police officer, a member of groups such as Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs, Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, Crime Stoppers, or Crime Watch."

Said Ms. Hitchcock-Hall: "The letter was so strongly anti-Baskin, there's no way it can look like anything but an endorsement."

Crime Stoppers and other groups mentioned could lose their tax-exempt status if they are perceived as working for a specific candidate in a political campaign, she said.

"This was done without our knowledge or consent. I'm not trying to 'downtalk' Taylor, but we don't endorse any candidate. We are remaining neutral," Ms. Hitchcock-Hall asserted.

"If we lose tax exemption we are out of business. They can't brush us off and say we are taking this too seriously," she said.

Faye Higgins, who heads up the local Mothers Against Drunk Driving chapter, said today Angelo didn't inform her he was mentioning MADD in the letter.

MADD is not mad per se, but Ms. Higgins didn't feel the letter was worded correctly, she said.

"We have had people call us and say they would not support our organization because we were supporting a political candidate," Ms. Higgins said today.

"We just want to make it clear we are not endorsing anyone," the MADD leader said.

Angelo said he checked with attorneys before writing the letter to ensure the mention of the group's names would not hurt the tax-exempt statuses.

King Hughes, president of NABD, said he didn't see the letter as an endorsement of Taylor.

Taylor's wife, Trinka, helped found NABD and is an officer of the group, according to Taylor campaign literature.

Hughes said his group's membership is comprised of supporters for Baskin as well as Taylor.

"From the outset NABD has agreed, and it has been etched into steel, that we are non-political as far as personality and individuals and people are concerned," Hughes said Tuesday.

Hughes said his group also operates under tax-exempt status, but he didn't feel a proper interpretation of the letter would affect its future endeavors.

No one was available for comment from the "Crime Watch" organization, which also is named in the letter. Officials at the police department said they had not heard of the group, but said there was a group called Operation Crime Watch.

Operation Crime Watch is a group comprised of utilities workers — meter readers, street cleaners, telephone workers and the like — who are asked to call the police if they see a crime being committed, according to a police spokeswoman.

DONORS

"We got caught flat-footed, but we are getting substantial results in town," the Taylor said.

Taylor said he was getting about 40 letters a day at one point from Midland supporters.

Baskin, reports showed, raised $17,625 from 85 donors during January. All but two were from Midland.

One donor was an Odessa man who gave $100 and the other was a $500 gift from First Republic Bank's "Fund for Effective Government" Political Action Committee (PAC) in Dallas.

The judge said the show of support is proof citizens are not buying Taylor's campaign rhetoric that Baskin is liberal and soft on crime.

The most recent statistics available (1985) from Baskin's court show that 50.8 percent of the people found guilty in his court that year were sent to the penitentiary, he said.

"I confess to be overwhelmed and deeply gratified at the response," Baskin said of the contributions.

Baskin said Taylor's donation report shows the contender may not have the broad base of local support he claims. "Of course there's nothing morally wrong" with getting campaign money from out of state, the judge said.

Taylor's expense report showed he has spent $7,100 on a political poll conducted by Tarrance and Associates of Houston.

However, the contender said he had no comment on the results of the poll because he didn't want to divulge any secrets to "the competition."

RETIRE

In addition to mail requests, calls for "immediate information" have come from California, Colorado, Wisconsin, North Carolina and New York, Ms. Baskin said.

A slick new MOHRE brochure embodying "the stories and glories of Midland/Odessa," is being sent to those requesting information, she added.

Jamie Berryhill, chairman of MOHRE's board of directors, noted that the group expects to get 2,000 to 3,000 total responses over a five-month period — two months running the ad, plus another three months as part of the magazine's reader response card.

In the first half of the 1980s, 880,000 people over 65 moved across state lines, including more than 310,000 who moved south or west, Berryhill said. They moved with an average annual "operating" income of $19,000, meaning a total shift of more than $5.8 billion.

Said Berryhill: "If MOHRE could attract only 1 percent of that, it would mean pumping roughly $60 million into the local economy."

And, the trends appearing to be continuing. Forty-two percent of respondents to a survey of people over 50 expressed a desire to move during the next five years. Also, growth of the number of people over age 50 is expected to boom by 62 percent in the next 30 years, compared to 19 percent growth in total population.

"We are laying the foundation for stability by investing in attracting retirees," Berryhill said.

In addition to responding to information requests, local MOHRE operations are gearing up with the establishment of an advisory council, a speakers' bureau and a 12-member ambassadors group.

The Advisory Council will, among other things, be working to improve the quality of life for local retirees, which will in turn make the area more appealing to potential residents from other regions.

Headed by Jim George, a retiree who recently relocated to Midland from Arizona, the council is made up of 50 volunteers from Midland and Odessa.

The council has five committees which will assess current conditions and make recommendations for improving local services particularly important to people over age 50, such as transportation, health care services, financial and cultural resources and other aspects of the community, according to Lois "Cookie" Wetendorf, project coordinator for MOHRE.

The ambassadors group will serve as "greeters" for visiting retirees who can share their personal stories of what the two cities have to offer people over 50.

Members of the speakers' bureau are available to address civic and professional groups on the local retirement endeavor and its progress. The organization is a joint project of the Midland and Odessa Chambers of Commerce and the Private Industry Council.

TESTS

Finn called the meeting to discuss a report issued in November by a crusading West Virginia doctor, John Jacob Cannell, who canvassed every state and could not find a single one that reported its elementary pupils were below average on national tests.

People are beginning to call it "the Lake Wobegon effect — more kids than half are above average," Finn said.

Cannell also attended the session and said afterward that, "Seventy-five percent of children in the U.S. are told they are above average."

He claimed that test publishers are in cahoots with school officials, who have a vested interest in being able to report ever-rising test scores.

"This system allows the public schools in this country to continue to provide inferior, inadequate education," he charged.

He also claimed that the tests are "racist" because schools use the results to avoid the expense of remedial education.

David Deffley, general manager of CTB/McGraw Hill, which markets both the California Achievment Test and the Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills, denied Cannell's allegations and said there was not "a scintilla of truth" to the allegation that "they'll give us money if we make them look good."

"The tests serve a very fine purpose," including pointing out which children need remediation, said Deffley. "For one $3-a-child testing, you get a multiplicity of purposes...all designed to improve education in that school district."

The major commercial tests are revised and renormed, given to a test group of several hundred thousand youngsters to establish a new national average — every seven to nine years.

Cannell contends the norms are made too easy to begin with, and schools improve their performance by giving the same tests over again each year, with teachers knowing precisely what questions their pupils will be asked.

W. James Popham, a professor at UCLA's Graduate School of Education, said, "It's not conspiratorial. It's not collusive. But what we see is a sublime melding of self-interest."

Deffley said, "The norms are the norms. The public is just learning they're not produced every year." He said if school systems are willing to pay for updated norms annually, "we will do it."

Most school systems report a significant drop in test scores when they switch tests or use an updated version.

DEATH

He said Garner must have been hit with an object that had a smooth surface and that injuries caused by a "slapjack," a weighted leather weapon used by police, are "compatible with the injury that was sustained by Mr. Garner."

Alton Maxie testified that after the men banged on the cell door and asked to phone their families, Ladner and Hyden entered the cell and Hyden struck Garner with a slapjack.

Maxie said the officers took Garner to a nearby room.

"I heard Loyal saying all he wanted to do was make a phone call. I could hear a muzzled slap and I could hear him (Garner) moaning," Maxie testified.

Campaign heating up in New Hampshire

■ Related stories — 5A

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Republican Pat Robertson declared in New Hampshire today that "I'm on the winning edge" after finishing second in Iowa, while Paul Simon, the Iowa runner-up among Democrats, stepped up his criticism of Richard Gephardt but admitted his own campaign had money problems.

The comments came a day after George Bush borrowed a neighborly slogan from rival Bob Dole, and Dole took a leaf from Rep. Jack Kemp's playbook as the Republican presidential contenders jostled for support in New Hampshire after their race turned topsy-turvy in Iowa.

Among Democrats, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis settled in for a fight on his home turf, declaring he would lead the pack after the Feb. 16 primary here. Iowa winner Gephardt at least partly agreed, describing himself as "clearly the underdog" here.

Today, in Dixville Notch, Robertson said, "I have a wonderful bit of momentum coming in to New Hampshire."

"I believe that I'm on the winning edge," he said at the Balsams, a resort hotel where the first votes in New Hampshire elections are cast.

Following study, Waldheim pressured to resign

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — President Kurt Waldheim today faced mounting pressure to resign after an international panel of historians criticized his role as a lieutenant in Nazi Germany's army.

Only leaders of the conservative People's Party, which backed Waldheim's election in 1986, supported him.

The three other parties in Parliament distanced themselves from Waldheim. The Socialists, restrained by their government coalition with the conservatives, did not say outright he should resign but indicated they would like to see him step down.

The small Greens party demanded Waldheim's resignation and said this matched sentiments expressed in private by Socialists and People's Party parliamentarians.

"No one dares to say it publicly," Greens deputy Walter Geyer told a news conference.

"But when we talk to Socialist deputies privately, I don't know of one who doesn't say, 'Kurt Waldheim damages Austria,'" he said. "Even most of the deputies from the People's Party privately think Kurt Waldheim has become untenable."

Joerg Haider, leader of the small Freedom Party, said the panel's report on Waldheim meant his party should keep its distance from the president.

Waldheim, 69, has maintained he is innocent of any wrongdoing during his World War II service in the Balkans.

Austrian and U.S. news reports disclosed Waldheim's wartime past in March 1986, during his campaign for the presidency — a largely ceremonial office in Austria. The reports included allegations that Waldheim helped deport Jews to Nazi death camps.

Since then, the United States has barred him from entering the country and Israel has withdrawn its ambassador to Vienna.

A 202-page report released Tuesday by a six-member panel of historians documented Waldheim's actions as a German army lieutenant from 1942 to 1945.

The report concluded Waldheim had been in "close proximity" to criminal actions and said the question of whether he is guilty of any crime remains open. It also documented Waldheim's intimate knowledge of Nazi atrocities in the Balkans.

The conservative Salzburger Nachrichten newspaper said today that "the situation is disastrous" for Austria. It said the nation is badly divided at home and "odious in the whole Western world" because Waldheim is president.

Army takes control of homeland

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The army of Bophuthatswana seized control of the tribal homeland early today and deposed the president. South Africa's president then ordered South African troops to aid the ousted government.

President P.W. Botha of South Africa told Parliament that South African security forces were given the order after members of the Cabinet of deposed President Lucas Mangope requested help.

Bophuthatswana, 200 miles northwest of Johannesburg, is one of four nominally independent black homelands inside South Africa. No other country recognizes their independence.

In seizing control early today in the second military coup in a South African tribal homeland in six weeks, the Bophuthatswana army accused Mangope of corruption and human rights abuses. The army said power would be handed over to an opposition party.

Botha said in Cape Town the decision to send in troops came after a meeting of the National Security Council. He said he would inform Parliament of any developments.

South Africa's Foreign Minister, Roelof Botha, announced from Cape Town that he had received a message from People's Progressive Party leader Rocky Malebane-Metsing saying he was leading the new government and would pursue good relations with South Africa.

The Star newspaper in Johannesburg, quoting a dispatch from its correspondent in the Bophuthatswana capital of Mmabatho, said Malebane-Metsing had been picked up at his home this morning by army officers who told him he was being taken to Parliament to be sworn in as head of state.

The South African Press Association quoted sources in Bophuthatswana as saying Mangope and most of his Cabinet were believed to be held in dressing rooms at the national sports stadium.

In a statement broadcast by Bophuthatswana's government radio, the army described as fraudulent the October general elections in which Mangope's Democratic Party was returned to office with most of the seats in Parliament.

The military statement said the army had decided to turn the government over to the People's Progressive Party, which "has openly and strongly denounced corruption and erosion of fundamental human rights."

Residents of Mmabatho said they heard gunfire at 3 a.m. and after 9 a.m. No injuries were reported.

A woman in Mmabatho who spoke on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press by telephone that witnesses said Bophuthatswana army vehicles sealed off the red brick complex of government buildings in the capital.

The military statement broadcast by Bophuthatswana radio said soldiers, police, nurses and teachers should report for work today, and that other government employees should stay home.

The South African Press Association said without attribution that about 50 Bophuthatswana soldiers took over the radio station about 4:30 a.m. The Bophuthatswana army also reportedly took over the Mmabatho airport. Travelers seeking to fly there from Johannesburg were told by airport officials that it was closed.

Mangope had governed as leader of the Democratic Party since Bophuthatswana was established 10 years ago.

Bophuthatswana is one of 10 tribal homelands, mostly arid, over-farmed territories with few resources. Is is among four homelands that have accepted nominal independence under a former South African apartheid policy to make all blacks homeland citizens.

WORLD in brief

Israel lifts curfew; Diplomats meet

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli authorities today lifted curfews affecting 212,000 Arabs, and U.S. envoy Richard Murphy met with Israeli leaders in an effort to defuse tensions in the occupied territories.

Murphy outlined a U.S. plan that Israeli sources said calls for Palestinian self-rule and elections this year in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The plan also calls for talks by December on the permanent status of the occupied lands, sources said on condition of anonymity.

The sources said Murphy reported that Jordan's King Hussein had insisted on an international conference, which Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir opposes. But they said Hussein showed a new willingness to negotiate a temporary self-rule arrangement for Palestinians after an international opening for talks.

Murphy discussed the U.S. proposals today with Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, and planned to meet with a Palestinian leader whose name was not disclosed, officials said.

Nicaraguans protesting

MASAYA, Nicaragua (AP) — In the second anti-government protest in Masaya in two days, demonstrators built barricades of burning tires and police with clubs broke up the crowd, roughed up journalists and seized news film.

Shots were heard but no injuries reported in the latest protest Tuesday night in the Monimbo neighborhood of Masaya, 20 miles southeast of Managua.

On Monday night, hundreds of opponents of forced military recruitment of young men stoned the police station and a Sandinista Youth office in Masaya.

Before Tuesday night's melee, 4,000 people had staged a rally to support the leftist Sandinista government and repudiate Monday night's demonstration. The pro-government rally ended before the anti-government rally began.

Clergy opposing tax

LONDON (AP) — Leaders of the Church of England called on their bishops to oppose a controversial new tax proposal they say will hit the poor hardest.

The policy-making General Synod of bishops, clergy and laity voted overwhelmingly by a show of hands to condemn the tax, to be levied against every adult to drive home the cost of community services.

The synod's decision Tuesday was sure not to please the Conservative government, which already has accused the state church of being too political in expressing its concerns about urban homelessness and poverty, race relations and deteriorating public transport.

The tax, to take effect in Scotland in 1989 and in England and Wales in 1990, replaces the present system of taxing property, known as rates.

The new tax will be levied against every adult instead of every head of household, doubling tax bills for some families. Critics call it a poll tax, reminiscent of those which provoked peasant revolts in the Middle Ages.

Commons to allow TV

LONDON (AP) — The House of Commons voted to let television cameras into its often rowdy proceedings, despite years of dogged opposition to the proposal by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and some parliamentarians.

The British Broadcasting Corp. said today that screening by the BBC and Independent Television of the proceedings for a six-month trial period is to start next fall. After that, the cameras are expected to become a permanent feature of the Commons.

In Tuesday's 318 to 264 "free" vote, legislators were released from party affiliations and allowed to decide individually.

Mrs. Thatcher led opponents of the move but many rank-and-file members of her governing Conservative Party and seven members of her Cabinet ignored her stance. The British domestic news agency, Press Association, said the decision and size of the majority vote in the 650-member chamber was a deep embarrassment for the prime minister.

The other 68 Commons members were either absent, abstained or were among the handful of Commons officers who do not vote.

Marcos tickets unused

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Friends of ousted President Ferdinand Marcos bought three tickets for a flight from Hawaii to Manila, including one intended for Marcos' wife Imelda, an airline spokesman said today.

Enrique Santos, Philippine Airlines vice president for public relations, said none of the three checked in at the Honolulu airport and the plane left on schedule Tuesday for Manila without them.

Reports from Honolulu said Mrs. Marcos showed up at the airport Tuesday but left immediately after posing for pictures with a group of Filipinos who apparently had gathered there to see her off.

Joe Lazo, a Honolulu travel agent and a staunch Marcos supporter also at the airport, said later that Mrs. Marcos planned to return to the Philippines on that flight but changed her mind so as not to embarrass the U.S. government.

Departure of PLO ship will be delayed

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization said today that a planned voyage to Israel by more than 100 Palestinian deportees would be delayed.

It was not immediately clear whether the ship would leave today as scheduled. A Greek coast guard official said the PLO was having difficulty chartering a ship.

"The departure of the ship is delayed until the night," said a PLO spokesman who declined to be identified. He gave no further details.

PLO sources said the departure apparently was delayed because of a social event being arranged for participants by the Greek government. Government officials could not immediately be reached for confirmation.

A morning news conference on the voyage was postponed until later in the day.

PLO officials say they have chartered a vessel — which they call the Ship of Return — for the trip to the Israeli port of Haifa, but refuse to give the vessel's name, size or country of origin.

Meanwhile, a senior Greek coast guard official said that as far as he knew, no PLO-chartered ship was due to leave Piraeus today.

"There isn't a ship leaving today. They (the PLO) haven't found one," said the official, who is responsible for security at the port of Piraeus.

The coast guard official said the PLO had tried to charter a Cypriot-flagged truck ferry, the Empress, but that the deal fell through.

Asked about the PLO deal, a woman answering the telephone at Universal Glow, the Piraeus-based agents for the ship, said: "We told them no" and hung up. She did not give her name.

The Empress is listed as an 8,196 gross tons roll-on, roll-off ferry owned by Phineas Navigation of Limassol, Cyprus.

An earlier charter fell through after Israeli protests.

Conservative PAC accused of mail fraud halts activities

WASHINGTON (AP) — A political action committee created by Rep. Newt Gingrich in 1984 to raise money for conservative candidates for Congress says it has stopped all fund-raising activities because it is mired in debt.

Robert R. Weed, treasurer of Conservatives for Hope and Opportunity, notified the Federal Election Commission of the PAC's fund-raising halt in a Jan. 31 letter. The letter accompanied a financial report showing the PAC had $54,645 in debts and only $1,060 in cash on Dec. 31, 1987.

The letter was written less than two weeks after the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee accused the PAC of mail fraud and asked the U.S. Postal Service to initiate a civil investigation.

Postal Service spokesman Phil Nater said Tuesday the complaint has been referred to the postal inspector's office to determine if a civil or criminal investigation is warranted.

Nater said, however, that CHO's notification that it has ceased fund-raising lessens the likelihood that the Postal Service would initiate a civil investigation.

In his letter to the FEC, Weed said some of the companies that CHO still owes for work associated with its fund-raising have agreed to allow the committee to distribute money to political candidates even though the companies' bills would remain unpaid.

GOP ponders ways to handle Robertson

By WALTER R. MEARS

An Analysis

Republicans are whistling past the churchyard as they try to figure out how to handle Pat Robertson and his single-minded supporters. They may well prove to be a troublesome lot.

As the Democrats learned in more than one splintered presidential campaign, zealous, single-issue activists can be hazardous to a party's general election health. They tend to force intramural warfare, embarrassing and useless platform battles, and in the end, they sometimes walk out.

So far, the Republican presidential candidates competing with Robertson have been careful and, in debate, courteous toward the former television evangelist — who now bristles at that accurate description.

Sen. Bob Dole, the comfortable GOP victor in Monday's Iowa caucuses, said the party ought to welcome the Robertson newcomers aboard, looking to the day when they will rally behind the eventual nominee.

That is not likely to be Robertson, and most of the people he has attracted to Republican political activity are not going to be transferable. They are aboard for the man, not for the party. They don't have a second preference for the nomination.

Dole said it remains a two-man race between himself and Vice President George Bush, who ran a damaging third behind Robertson in Iowa.

Robertson gained nearly a quarter of the Republican vote in Iowa, outpolling Bush by fewer than 7,000 and registering the one real surprise of the night.

Dole said that showed Robertson could pull people out to caucuses all over Iowa. "So I think we plant a big welcome flag and we say welcome to the Republican Party," the Kansas senator said.

But he also said that Robertson, who never has held public office, is far more formidable in caucuses than he will be in the presidential primary elections, which begin with New Hampshire next Tuesday. That's almost surely the case.

Organization, zeal, and the kind of ready-made structure the evangelical movement provides all worked to Robertson's advantage in Iowa, and in the Hawaii caucuses he nearly swept while Dole and Bush were otherwise occupied. Bush claimed victory in the Michigan caucuses, but Robertson said that was stolen from him. His people staged rival caucuses, and he promised to challenge the outcome in court.

Indeed, in Iowa, Robertson said the Republican establishment was not to be trusted, and set up a tabulating system to keep his own count of caucus votes. It was quietly dropped when the official numbers turned out in his favor.

When a television interviewer called Robertson a former television evangelist, which he was, the candidate said it was evidence of bigotry. He said he was a religious broadcaster and a cable television executive.

Those are symptoms of what may be ahead when the competition turns tougher, as it surely will if Robertson proves strong in the primaries. The six Republican candidates meet in a final New Hampshire campaign debate in Manchester Sunday night, and Robertson, who so far has been spared sharp questions from his rivals, may face some there.

"The emergence of Pat Robertson could cast a long shadow over the prospects of the Republican Party in the general election," said Alexander M. Haig, who ran last in Iowa.

Robertson said he had proven an appeal that goes far beyond his evangelical supporters. Indeed, on caucus night he said he could do for the GOP what Dwight Eisenhower and Ronald Reagan had done.

"I won Dubuque," he said. "Well, that is a Roman Catholic, Democratic, blue-collar worker city and I won it. This is a new side of my coalition."

In campaign advertisements and in his statements, Robertson has been comparing his situation to the one that confronted John F. Kennedy in 1960, when he became the first Roman Catholic elected president.

He said the same religious issue used against Kennedy now is being used against him. "I shouldn't be disqualified because I'm a devout evangelical Christian," Robertson said.

That's unassailable. But the situations are not the same.

Kennedy had a record in public office, in the House and the Senate, even though his rivals said it wasn't a very impressive one. He said that religion should not be an issue, and that he would resign before permitting his religious beliefs to prevent him from doing his presidential duty.

Robertson, quite properly and quite openly, has made religion a major part of his campaign. It was his career before he entered politics, and it is the base of the support he now seeks to broaden.

Robertson trying to muster second 'invisible army'

DIXVILLE NOTCH, N.H. (AP) — Pat Robertson, his ability to duplicate his Iowa surprise still doubted by rivals, is trying to mobilize another "invisible army" in time for next week's New Hampshire primary.

The former television evangelist was opening a campaign swing in this tiny northern resort community, whose voters traditionally cast the first ballots in New Hampshire elections.

Before flying to New Hampshire late Tuesday, Robertson told supporters in Brainerd, Minn., "I had to make a win and that's what Iowa did."

He added: "I expect to move up to first place very shortly."

Robertson stunned Republican Party regulars Monday when he finished a strong second in the Iowa precinct caucus presidential preference poll. Kansas Sen. Bob Dole won the poll, while Vice President George Bush was a weak third.

Dole said that while Robertson made an impressive showing in the caucuses, the senator didn't think he could repeat the feat in a primary like New Hampshire's.

Before the Iowa vote, even Robertson's campaign manager, Marc Nuttle, said that the Northeast "is tough for us."

New Hampshire GOP chairman Elsie Vartanian said she doubted Robertson would be as successful in New Hampshire's primary next Tuesday as he was in the Iowa caucuses.

"He's not going to be able to impact in New Hampshire as he did in a caucus state," she said.

Tom Rath, one of Dole's leading supporters in the state, also was skeptical of what Robertson could do in the primary.

"I can tell you it's not showing up in the polling data," said Rath.

But professor Robert Craig of the University of New Hampshire, a political scientist and pollster, said Robertson's Iowa showing "throws a monkey wrench into the Republican race."

Craig said it was possible that "the pool from which he is drawing voters is perhaps larger than we had given him credit for."

There was a surge in voter registration last Saturday, the deadline for being eligible to vote in the primary. But Secretary of State William Gardner said it was unclear whether the new voters reflected Robertson support, backing for other candidates or simply increased population.

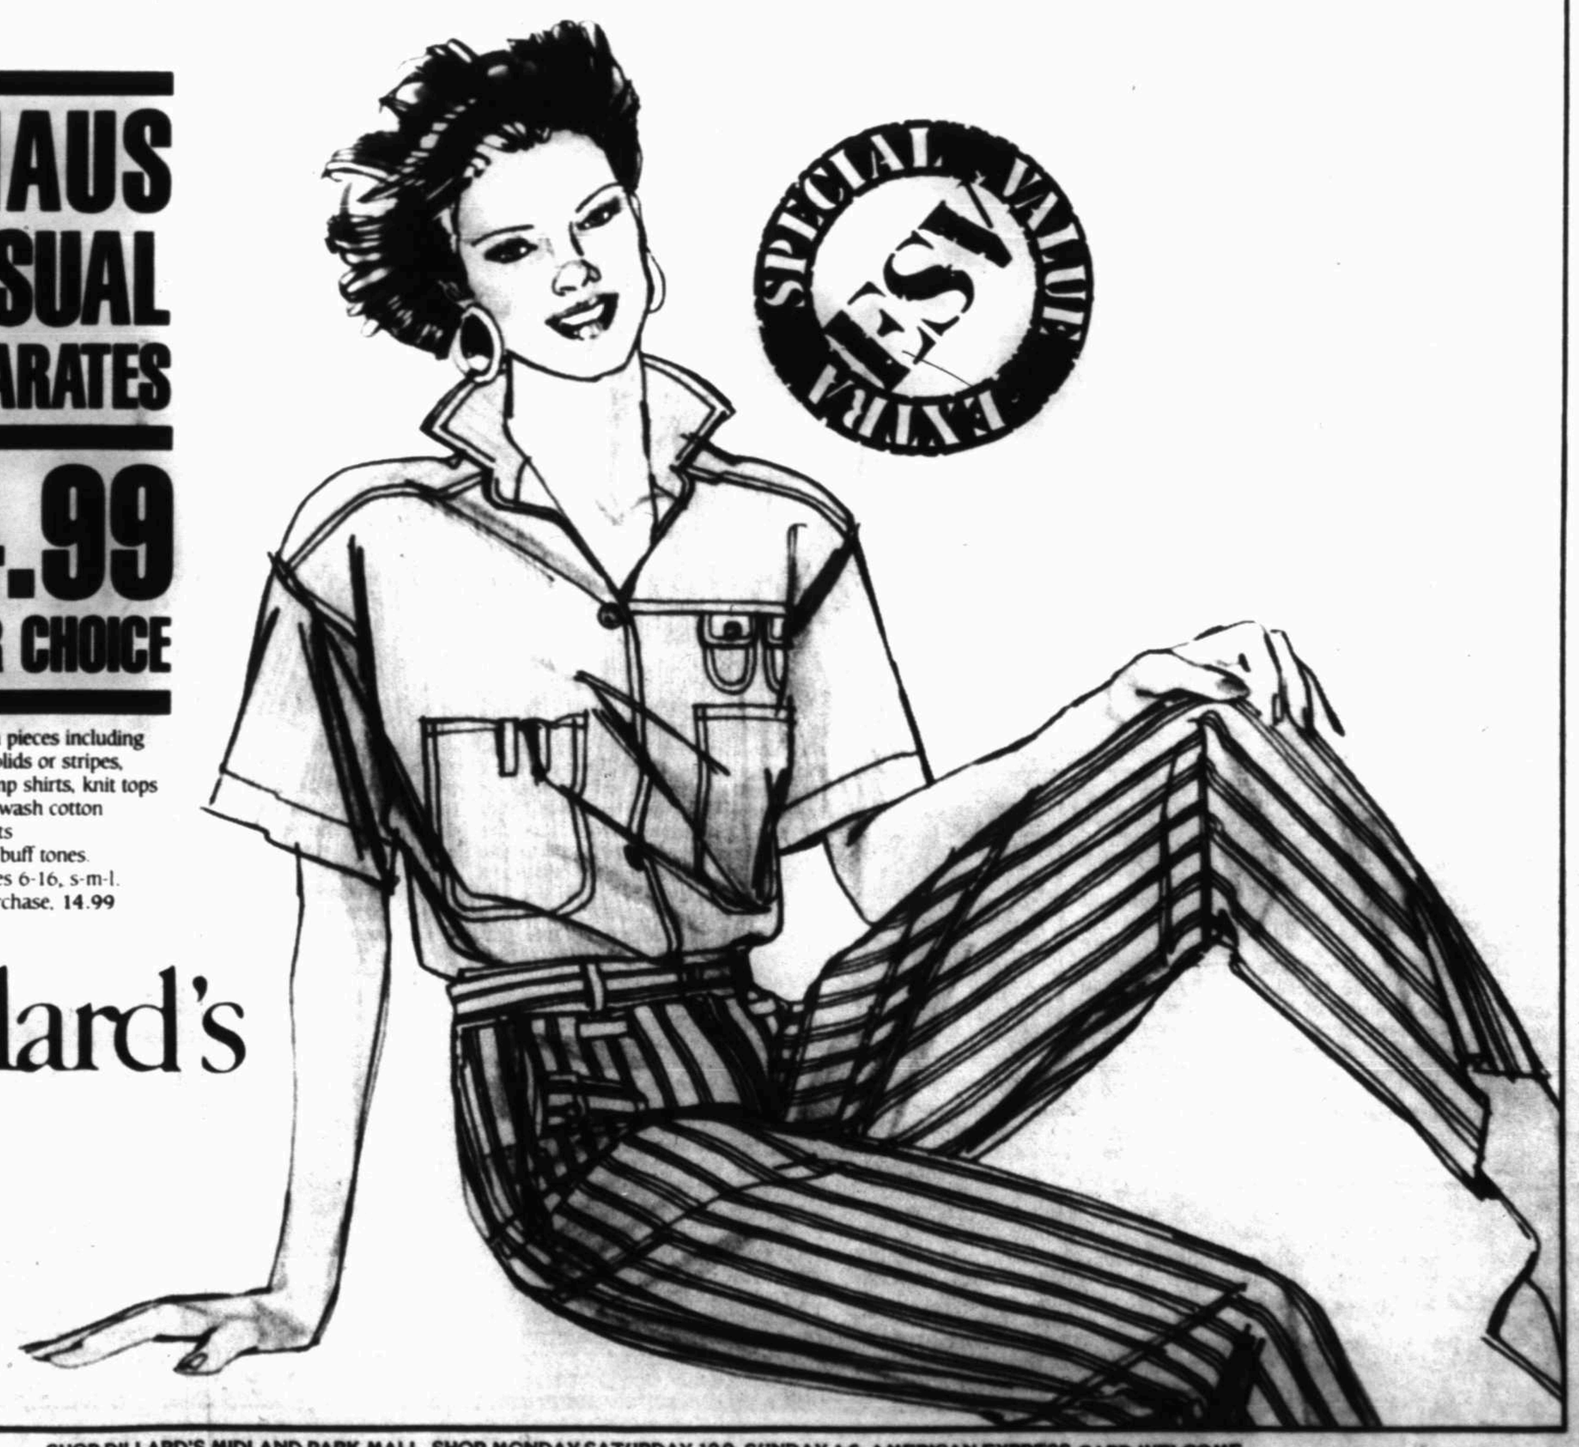

"There's no way to tell if Robertson made the difference," he said.

Robertson was saying his Iowa showing would do away with the impression he was unelectable.

"The fact that I got more votes than any of the Democrats shows I was doing pretty well and it was a significant victory," he told supporters in Bemidji, Minn.

Pushing aside hype lets reason reign

With the Iowa caucuses in the history books and New Hampshire's primary just around the corner, the start to the 1988 presidential election season is under way. The wins posted by Republican Sen. Bob Dole and Democratic Rep. Dick Gephardt may be little more than fodder for commentators and newsmen at this point, but they do point the way toward a full year of political wrangling. It could be a year to watch.

There were surprises in Iowa, of course. Few Republicans probably expected Vice President George Bush to finish third in the GOP polling, losing not only to Dole but also to televangelist Pat Robertson. But it has to be noted that Bush apparently had anticipated losing in Iowa and had moved on to New Hampshire even before the polls closed.

On the Democratic side, Gephardt, congressman from Missouri, jumped in front of the pack but only slightly ahead of Illinois Sen. Paul Simon. The other "dwarfs" trailed.

In the past few weeks, though, the political rhetoric that gave the "dwarfs" that explanatory label splashed on the Republican leaders, too, as Dole and Bush began taking something less of a "high road", as questions arose concerning Dole's wife, Elizabeth's, blind trust, and Bush's advice to President Reagan in the Iran/Contra affair.

We certainly don't discount the importance of the Iowa caucuses. They are an important beginning down a long and sometimes bumpy road to, hopefully, a consensus on the part of the American voters about the individuals who should lead this nation. Unfortunately, too often the hype in politics centers on the "fluff" and the sensational instead of addressing the issues that really will make a difference months or years from now. In such an atmosphere, voters undeniably find it difficult to glean the information they need to make intelligent decisions.

The "front-runners" who appeared in the Iowa results likely won't be the front-runners down the road in this campaign. But listening to the political hype that's already started, one wouldn't believe that currently. The task for the voters is to push that hype aside to get to the real issues that separate all the candidates.

That's the only way reason can reign in political season.

Thanks for protecting us

While recently watching the evening news on KMID-TV, Channel 3, I became aware of the controversy between Lloyd Pittman and the City of Midland concerning his dastardly carport. After reviewing the news story, and later making some investigative phone calls, I wanted to take this opportunity to praise our city officials for their relentless pursuit of justice and their determined battle against such people as Pittman.

Pittman's evil motives for constructing the carport, namely to make easier the vehicular loading and unloading of his wheelchair-bound mother-in-law and additionally, to protect her from the weather elements, must be condemned.

During a telephone visit with Teresa Clingman, the assistant city attorney apparently in charge of the proceeding against Pittman, I was told that the location of the carport was in violation of Sec. 11-1-7-D of the Midland City Code and that the carport created an "obstruction". Seeing as how the carport does indeed have two skinny posts holding up the end not connected to Pittman's house, I thoroughly agree with our city officials that an obstruction exists.

After all, the roof of the carport serves as prima facie evidence that raindrops are being obstructed from hitting Pittman's mother-in-law's body. I was also told by Ms. Clingman that the carport could hamper the work of "police and fire". Police and fire what doesn't matter, if she says so. I mean, the situation could arise whereby a policeman could be shooting at a burglar and accidentally hit one of the skinny posts! Also, consider the possibility of a fireman frantically dragging a firehose to combat a nearby residential blaze and bumping into one of the posts and knocking himself unconscious!

On behalf of myself and I'm sure on behalf of many other of the taxpayers of Midland, I want to thank Ms. Clingman and the other city officials involved for filing the lawsuit against Pittman. I thoroughly recognize that the city's endeavor against Pittman has required considerable amounts of time, effort and money to be expended.

Again, thank you wholeheartedly for protecting us citizens from the likes of the Pittmans of the world and for keeping Midland the most "liveable city in the U.S.A."

Student talent showing

On Jan. 29th I was privileged to attend the Midland High School musical production of "The Leader of the Pack." I admit that the only reason I went was because our neighbor's daughter was in the cast; however, I was very pleasantly surprised with the talent these high school students possess.

My experience with high school musical productions was limited to those of my high school days, and therefore I was prepared to spend a very long and boring evening.

The opening number of this production was a gold-plated attention-getter. Every member of this cast is extremely talented in his own right, but as a total cast they were extremely entertaining.

This production was two hours of complete enjoyment for me.

I have looked in our local newspaper for any mention of this production as a whole, or the individual talent these students possess, but once again it appears that our local newspaper staff was not interested enough to attend any one of these three performances by these students. Or perhaps it is not worthy of the attention of the press unless it involves one of our local students breaking a rule or law.

My hat is off to Mr. Fennel, the Midland High School drama coach, and the entire cast of "The Leader of the Pack" for all of the time and energy they put forth to provide their audiences with two hours of solid enjoyment, which my my humble opinion was equal to and in some cases better than many professional productions I have attended.

To Mr. Fennel and these students I say keep it up because there are some residents of Midland who sincerely appreciate watching our young citizens do something creative and enjoyable.

NSC staffer had no security clearance

WASHINGTON — The National Security Council has on its staff a Pakistani-born analyst who was once declared a security risk by the Central Intelligence Agency. The woman, Shirin Tahir-Kheli, is a close friend of Donald Gregg, the national security adviser to Vice President George Bush.

Jack Anderson

According to our sources, Tahir-Kheli has maintained personal ties with the leadership of Pakistan while doing NSC work that gives her access to sensitive secrets regarding that country — including what we know about its nuclear programs, its relations with the Chinese and even the names of CIA agents in Pakistan.

Gregg is already embroiled in the Iran/contra affair as the man who knew about the contra resupply operation and may or may not have told his boss about it. He has offered twice to resign, but Bush has refused to accept his resignation, despite calls from both political parties to dump Gregg.

While working on national security issues at the White House, Gregg and Tahir-Kheli have developed a close relationship. Gregg once arranged for her to travel to Pakistan with Bush and to meet Pakistani leaders in a home once owned by her family.

Tahir-Kheli's status in the Directorate for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs bothers NSC staffers who know that she was refused classification clearances by the CIA, according to our sources.

Dale Van Atta spoke with 11 past and present NSC staffers familiar with Tahir-Kheli. One of those staffers was her former secretary, Fawn Hall.

Tahir-Kheli, the daughter of a university president and member of an elite family, refused to speak to us, and an NSC spokesman would offer little information except her name and present assignment.

She came to the NSC from a political appointment at the State Department, toward the end of Reagan's first term. For months after that, she read "codeword" or "compartmentalized" documents — ones classified higher than "top secret." But she didn't have the security clearance to read them. "In that place (the NSC) there was no real security," a former NSC staffer said. "It used to drive me crazy how sloppy they were."

The CIA's security-clearance investigation of Tahir-Kheli dragged on for months because one of her fellow staffers suggested to the CIA's director of security that he "take a hard look at her." Before the process was finished, then-CIA Director William Casey and his deputy John McMahon personally got involved. The CIA developed "derogatory" information about Tahir-Kheli, which involved her continuing contacts with both Pakistani and Indian government officials, according to our sources. For this reason, the CIA regarded her as a security risk and refused to give her clearance.

Her patron at the NSC at the time, the late Donald Fortier, fought the CIA ruling and pressured the Justice Department to give Tahir-Kheli the clearances over CIA objections. She passed an FBI polygraph and got permission to read what she had been reading all along.

But the controversy did not die. NSC staffers became incensed when Gregg became Tahir-Kheli's patron after Fortier's death. Those staffers say the problem is not her place of birth. Several noted a clear distinction between her and foreign-born national security advisers like Henry Kissinger and Zbigniew Brzezinski. "They came to the United States estranged from their countries of origin," one source said, "whereas she maintains intimate contacts with the leadership of Pakistan. Her family is close to the Zia family (Pakistan President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq). (She) has a personal connection to senior Pakistani officials."

On top of that, Tahir-Kheli's critics note, she has lived off and on in Pakistan since first coming to the United States at the age of 15. She has earned bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees at American universities, returning to Pakistan for long stays in between each course of study. She taught at Temple University during the late 1970s.

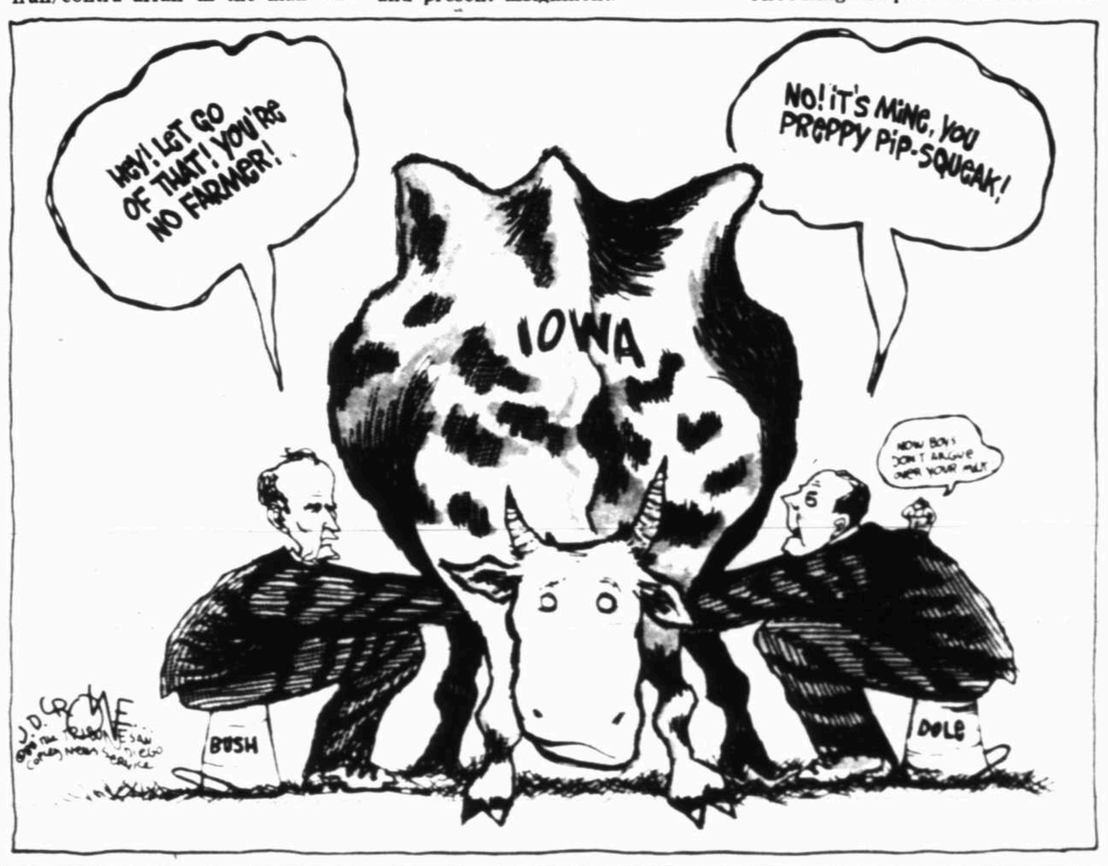

One former NSC staffer who is a friend of Tahir-Kheli's called her "a very able public servant." He said that "people will thrive on whispering campaigns. And when they can raise somebody's national origin, then nobody hesitates to do so."

But Tahir-Kheli's critics say it is more serious than that. "These are security issues," one former NSC staffer said, "and there was a fairly high degree of discomfiture (over it) at senior levels of the NSC. If it weren't for Fortier, she would have been deep-sixed a long, long, long time ago."

MINI-EDITORIAL — Here's one you can thank "The Media" for: Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, has asked Congress to rescind an appropriation of $8 million that he had originally put in the budget to fund schools for Jewish refugees from North Africa now living in France. The glaring light of publicity on Inouye's budget item and on his campaign contributions from a member of the group that started the schools has forced the senator to back down. That would not have happened if the press had not been watching the fine print in the budget. The press takes plenty of heat, some of it deserved, for poking and prying.

ART BUCHWALD

Problem with A-Meesia is ... ugh, I forget!

The Centers for Disease Control have just announced a new health hazard. It is called "A-Meesia," known in medical circles as, "Attorney General's Disease."

Art Buchwald

Dr. Covey Extra, who discovered it, said A-Meesia has reached epidemic proportions in the Justice Department and has even infiltrated the Cabinet in the White House.

"What are the symptoms?" I asked Dr. Extra.

"Loss of memory is the main one. The person is unable to remember any details when testifying in regards to crimes involving himself or his friends."

"He goes blank?"

"Completely, particularly when it has something to do with the law. At these times he can't distinguish right from wrong."

"Are you sure this is a new disease?"

"I'm quite certain. I had an attorney general in the other day and I asked him to read a memo on the Iraqi pipeline. He couldn't do it. Then I handed him a paper concerning Wedtech and he said, 'I never saw this before.'"

"What was wrong with that?" I asked.

"He had read it out loud in my waiting room an hour before. It was a textbook case of A-Meesia. The man had lost all recollection of who and what he had been involved with in the last seven years."

"It sounds like there is a pattern to the illness."

"If you lose your memory once, it is not serious. But when you continually lose it in public, then you are sick."

"Can you contract A-Meesia from other people?"

"That's the easiest way to get it. My patient confessed to me he was constantly having financial relations with his friends."

"Where have you witnessed the most cases of A-Meesia?"

"I saw a lot of it during the Irangate hearings. So many people were losing their memories we had to set up a MASH unit outside the Senate hearing room."

"Is there a cure?"

"Some people in the Administration have been taking an aspirin every other day. But it hasn't stopped them from forgetting everything."

"Suppose," I said, "A-Meesia is psychosomatic and people are pretending they have lost their memories so they won't be indicted by a grand jury?"

"We thought of that, but rejected it. A-Meesia is a real disease and has to be dealt with as such. That's why we're doing a lot of work with rats. If we can find out why white rats forget, then we may discover why government lawyers do the same thing."

"Do you have any leads?"

"We suspect it might be the asbestos in the Attorney General's ceiling. But then again he might have caught A-Meesia when he was working as counselor to the President. We don't have much to work with. But we have to find an answer. There is nothing so sad as seeing an attorney general on the witness stand who doesn't know what time it is."

"I'm sure you'll find a medical solution."

"Maybe, maybe not. I just received this specimen bottle back from the Justice Department lab."

"Whose is it?"

"Nobody over there can remember."

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Bush has no alternative to tough-it-out course

WASHINGTON — Why can't George Bush simply come clean on his participation in the arms-for-hostages decision? Why does he respond by attacking the press for daring to ask the question, or by hiding behind his confidential relationship with the president, or by claiming that he's already answered everything?

William Safire

As Bob Dole keeps reminding us, the questions just won't go away. Why not put the issue to rest once and for all with a single, dramatic, lay-it-all-out speech?

Because it's not that easy; indeed, resolving the inherent contradictions in his story may be impossible. Here is an attempt to deal with the real world of his imprisonment.

Let us assume, for argument's sake, that CIA chief William Casey discussed with the vice president, who is a former director of central intelligence, the vexing problem facing American intelligence a few years ago: the capture of the CIA station chief in Beirut, William Buckley.

The concern here went beyond compassion. Honor among spooks was also involved: The world of spies expects a nation to strain to get back its captured agents with trades or raids. Moreover, our man was being tortured to extract from him the names of our entire network in the Middle East, so getting him out was a matter of national security.

Let us assume further that the idea of dealing with Iran, put forward by national security aides McFarlane and Poindexter, was not couched in stark terms of arms-for-hostages. In the real world, people tend to slip around such harsh reality; this could be presented as a way of dealing with influential intermediaries, not as paying ransom to the actual terrorist kidnappers.

And so the colossal misjudgment, in which Vice President Bush was probably involved, went ahead. When presidential findings had to be signed, the matter came up before the National Security Council, where the secretaries of state and defense were let in on the secret. At one meeting at least, on Jan. 7, 1986, they expressed astonishment and strong disagreement.

What did the vice president say? That's a legitimate question to a man who would be president, and all participants have been released by Reagan to say what was advised.

Jim Lehrer and I worked over Cap Weinberger pretty hard the other night, but that old loyalist is saying nothing to embarrass Bush. George Shultz, however, decided to tell the truth from the start: He recollects that the vice president was right there, that the secretaries of state and defense were forceful and outspoken in their opposition, and that "my impression was that the others had a different view."

Now we come to what makes campaigning so difficult for George Bush. He cannot start with a clean slate; he is the hostage of his past statements.

He thought it would be safe to say at first only that he "supported the president's decision," but that evasion intimated that he went along with it afterward, not before.

Then he said that he "expressed misgivings," to give the impression he had been sort of on the side of those opposing the deal; in fact, it turns out that the key reservation was about dealing through the Israelis, though it is hard to imagine a CIA man not wanting some cutout.

His third line of defense was that he was "out of the loop," deliberately excluded from key meetings in which presumably he would have changed the direction of events. "My first real chance to see the picture as a whole didn't come until December 1986...," when the whole world knew.

A fourth approach came recently, when he recalled his feelings about the captured station chief, but that may conflict with the out-of-the-loop defense.

Put yourself in George Bush's shoes now. You cannot go back and unsay what you have said without admitting "cover-up," so that's out. You cannot wholly rely on your own memory about what you said in meetings, because in real life people do forget, and contradictory classified memcons may yet surface, or Amiram Nir may publish, or men about to go to jail may seek clemency by remembering otherwise.

Admit that you were hip-deep in Reagan's greatest blunder and tried to sneak out afterward? Never; political suicide.

That leaves you blasting the media for daring to ask, and defending the abstraction of confidentiality of discussions between the president and vice president — when everybody knows that you and he would instantly breach that confidentiality if you had told him privately, "Don't do it."

Which is why George Bush, hostage to past evasions, is trying to tough it out. That's all he can do now.

Rights report cites 'more than cosmetic' changes in U.S.S.R.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev instituted "more than cosmetic" improvements in Soviet human rights performance last year, but failed to meet Western hopes and expectations for more dramatic progress, the State Department said today.

In its annual report on human rights in 169 countries and territories, the department also said it observed positive signs in Poland, Hungary, South Korea and Taiwan.

On the negative side, the report repeated a long list of conditions imposed by the Israeli government on Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza territories, said hopes for the establishment of democracy in Haiti were set back and concluded "there was no progress toward respect for human rights in South Africa."

The 1,358-page report was sent to Congress to give senators and representatives guidance in deciding which nations are worthy of U.S. aid and trade benefits.

The report, for the most part, did not judge the nations, but merely stated conditions as observed by U.S. diplomats assigned to monitoring rights in each country. In a brief introduction, however, some national performances were highlighted.

"There is no doubt that the attention of a great many observers focused on developments in the Soviet Union," Richard Schifter, assistant secretary of state for human rights, said in the introduction.

"Was Mikhail S. Gorbachev, in this third year of his stewardship of the world's first Leninist dictatorship, bringing about fundamental change, or were the changes merely cosmetic?

"The answer to this question, asked by so many observers, is that neither adjective fits. The changes were more than cosmetic and less than fundamental."

Schifter said the country continues to be controlled by "a small elite group" supported by the secret police.

On the other hand, he said, "some political prisoners were released" and some totalitarian controls were relaxed, notably on emigration of Jews, Armenians and ethnic Germans. Plays and films dealt with the realities of Soviet life "more honestly than had been allowed in a long time."

The report itself, in contrast to a predominantly gloomy outline of conditions in last year's document, contained several relatively bright spots, notably in the loosening of Soviet control over press commentary.

"On the other hand, we regret to say, the hopes and expectations voiced in the spring of 1987 as to rapid additional progress were not fulfilled by the end of the year," Schifter said. "We need to see what 1988 will bring."

He said Poland and Hungary continued as the two Soviet-bloc countries with the most freedom. For the first time in a long time, Poland completed a full calendar year without jailing anyone for expressing dissenting views, he said.

Israeli violence against Palestinians up, report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Incidents of violence by Jewish settlers against Palestinians in Israeli-occupied territories increased last year, according to the annual State Department report to Congress on human rights around the world.

The 20-page section on Israel and the occupied territories covers 1987 and therefore mentions only briefly the violence which flared between Israelis and Palestinians in December and which continues to rage.

The report does not place blame for the unrest on either side, saying only that "much of the violence appears to have been spontaneous or locally generated," rather than orchestrated by the Palestine Liberation Organization or other outside groups.

"Incidents of violence by Israeli settlers increased during the year, including the shooting death of one Palestinian youth, the use of unauthorized armed patrols, physical harassment, disruption of legally authorized political meetings, attacks on refugee camps," the report found.

Forty-two Palestinians were killed in 1987, most of them by Israeli gunfire, and some 300 were wounded. Of those, 22 were killed and about 150 wounded in December's unrest, the State Department said.

So far this year, at least 27 more Palestinians have been killed as the violent demonstrations continue in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The State Department report says that "in some cases, Israeli military authorities have prosecuted or taken administrative action against soldiers who have fired at unarmed Palestinians. However, Palestinians have charged that punishment of (Israeli) personnel is often light or is suspended."

The report says Palestinians were believed responsible for killing two Israeli soldiers and six civilians in 1987, as well as the wounding of 135 Israelis.

Although torture is forbidden by Israeli law, "Palestinians and international human rights organizations complain of widespread and systematic mistreatment of prisoners," including minors, the report says.

The report notes that Amnesty International has found that the Israelis extracted confessions from Palestinians by beatings, solitary confinement, hoodings and cold showers.

Democrats leery of Contra fund-raising

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democratic leaders say a plan by Nicaragua's Contra rebels to solicit private donations for their war against the Sandinista government smacks of the private foreign policy that led to the Iran-Contra affair.

The House leaders also criticized the Contras' failure to resume cease-fire talks today with the Managua government, saying the delay calls into question whether the rebels want a negotiated settlement or insist on a military solution.

"I'm disappointed that they seem to give no priority whatsoever to continuing the peace talks," House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said Tuesday. "That casts serious doubts on their intentions."

Wright said he will continue efforts to draw up a package of purely "humanitarian" aid for the rebels — with or without administration help — to replace the White House proposal that included military aid. President Reagan's plan was killed in the House last week.

Wright said he hoped to have the alternative ready by the week of Feb. 22.

House Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., accused the Contras and the administration of trying to "privatize" U.S. foreign policy despite the lessons of the Iran-Contra affair, and destroy a five-nation Central American peace accord.

"Before, it was an international embarrassment for the United States," Coelho said in a reference to the elaborate covert network that sent profits from arms sales to Iran to aid the Contras.

He noted that polls repeatedly have shown a majority of the American public opposed to the policy of arming the Contras to overthrow the Sandinista regime.

"But the administration is saying we are going to circumvent the Congress and tell the American people to go to hell," Coelho said. "They're trying to do publicly what they tried to do privately before. I think there's a deliberate attempt by the administration to stop the peace process."

At a news conference in Miami Monday, Contra leaders said they were establishing two tax-free funds to receive donations from private Americans to buy supplies. They said they were doing this publicly to avoid the taint of scandal that came in the Iran-Contra affair.

The rebels also said they planned to solicit military aid from foreign countries.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan has not contributed to the private aid account and he does not know whether the president plans to do so. GOP presidential contender Bob Dole already has given $500.

Fitzwater added, however, that the president has made it clear "through the decision-making network here at the White House," including the National Security Council, that the administration "will not be involved in private support to the Contras."

Coelho said that in their humanitarian aid package, Democrats will likely seek to include provisions banning third-party fund raising.

The rebels had been scheduled to resume talks today with the Sandinistas in San Jose, Costa Rica, but announced Monday they were postponing the negotiations to work out their strategy following defeat of the president's $36 million aid package last week.

NATION in brief

Nofziger jurors to decide if he illegally used influence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jurors in Lyn Nofziger's conflict-of-interest trial are being asked to decide whether the former presidential aide illegally used his influence with onetime White House colleagues for private clients.

Nofziger was described during closing arguments by independent counsel James C. McKay as "a man to be reckoned with" when he sought help at the White House.

Nofziger sent a memo in 1982 to then-presidential counselor Edwin Meese III about Wedtech Corp.'s troubles getting an Army contract "to take advantage of his friendship with Mr. Meese and to cash in on his influence," McKay told the jury Tuesday in U.S. District Court.

The contact and three others for Wedtech and other clients violated the law enacted by Congress "to prevent people like Lyn Nofziger from coming out of the White House within a year and attempting to cash in on their influence with the United States government," McKay said.

The defense, meanwhile, argued that Nofziger was simply being prosecuted for "leaving government service for a better job."

The jury was scheduled to begin deliberations today after receiving final instructions from U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Flannery.

GOP cool to Mofford idea

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Republicans who control the Legislature reacted coldly to Democratic acting Gov. Rose Mofford's proposal to revive a Martin Luther King holiday as a symbol of state government decisiveness and unity.

"Would it ever be divisive!" House Majority Leader Jim Ratliff said Tuesday. "Now is not the time to get into that one" as the Senate gears up for the impeachment trial of Gov. Evan Mecham.

However, House Minority Leader Art Hamilton, a Democrat, said he agreed with Mrs. Mofford that a King holiday could be an important part of the political healing process in Arizona.

Mecham, a Republican, first stirred controversy when he took office last year by rescinding Democratic former Gov. Bruce Babbitt's order for a King holiday for state employees.

The Senate on Tuesday formally scheduled an impeachment trial Feb. 22 for Mecham, who also faces a May 17 recall election and criminal charges of allegedly concealing a $350,000 campaign loan.

Marcos planned to return

HONOLULU (AP) — Imelda Marcos had planned to board a Philippine Airlines flight for her homeland early Tuesday but changed her mind, according to a leading Marcos supporter here.

Joe Lazo, president of Friends of Marcos, was at Honolulu International Airport and welcomed Mrs. Marcos when she arrived in a black limousine. But he said she had decided even before arriving there not to try to go home.

Lazo, a flamboyant travel agent and a confidant of Mrs. Marcos, said the former Philippine first lady, wife of deposed President Ferdinand Marcos, wanted desperately to return in hopes of joining her 30-year-old daughter, Imee. Mrs. Marcos has said her daughter is ill in Morocco.

"Her moral obligation as a mother is to take care of her daughter. The Philippines is the only place Imee can travel without a passport," Lazo said.

Waldheim finding disputed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Justice Department official who specializes in finding former Nazis disputes the conclusion of a commission of historians that there was no evidence Austrian President Kurt Waldheim committed war crimes.

"Under the Nuremberg standard, one who is involved in the implementation and facilitation of deportations of civilians is culpable of war crimes," Neal Sher, head of the Justice Department's Office of Special Investigations, said Tuesday in an interview.

Sher said the United States had found Waldheim "personally participated in persecution" of civilians while serving as a lieutenant in the German army during World War II, "and the evidence against him is overwhelming."

Local architects complain about MISD hiring

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

A member of the Midland Architects Association said he was to set up a meeting today with school officials so that a procedure may be drafted ensuring the notification of local architects of future school district construction plans.

"We are satisfied the process is going to be entered into. When we see the end result we'll know if we're really satisfied," said David Messersmith, an MAA member.

About 15 local architects converged on the Midland Independent School District meeting Tuesday night to air complaints centering around what they said is the constant hiring of out-of-town architects for local school construction.

"Since the construction of Lee High School...we estimate that $33.5 million worth of MISD construction has been under the direction of out-of-town architectural firms," Messersmith said Tuesday night.

He claimed just $7.5 million in contracts have been given to Midland firms during the same time period.

"Since 1968, no Midland architectural firm has received a commission for a project which has had a construction value of more than $700,000," Messersmith added.

One catalyst raising the ire of local architects occurred at the school board meeting last week.

MISD officials met in an illegal executive session to discuss the hiring of an architect for a tentative $3-$5 million construction project.

School district officials chose veteran MISD architect Terry Hardin of Fort Worth to design conceptual drawings for the project in a public meeting held after the closed-door session, Superintendent Joe Baressi said.

However, local architects claimed they knew nothing of the proposed project, which includes the addition of about 50 classrooms to various elementary schools in the district.

Tuesday night they pleaded with district officials to draft a plan whereby they would at least have a chance to vie for future school district commissions.

District trustees rescinded their choice of Terry Hardin Tuesday night in light of the illegal session's discussion, but immediately turned around and re-hired him without discussion of any other alternatives.

Baressi claimed it was because Hardin had already drawn up conceptual renderings. He promised the local architects a chance at the drafting of the construction plans should voters pass a May 7 bond issue needed to finance the 50 classroom-addition.

Said local architect Larry Connolly of the move: "I'm baffled by the expression that you want to rectify and admit you made an error (in the illegal session) and then you just let it go."

"You acknowledge you made a mistake but you continue to live by it," Connolly asserted. "We didn't get a fair shake," an angered Connolly said.

But trustee Mike Conaway promised: "When we get ready to spend the big bucks all the architects will be considered."

Architects and trustees agreed it was highly unusual for one architect to draw conceptual plans and have another draft actual construction plans.

But Conaway said "time is of the essence here" and trustees must have something to show voters when the board calls the bond election in early March.

Trustees stayed in town, however, to choose a financial consultant to assist in the development of the May 7 bond election they plan to call.

Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc. of Midland was chosen by the board Tuesday to develop "necessary information" to call the bond election and develop "materials to educate voters on why" a bond election is needed, Conaway said.

The $3-$5 million bond election is needed, officials have said, to build classrooms that will allow the district to be in compliance with a state law mandating a 22-1 student-teacher ratio in pre-kindergarten through the fourth grades.

About 50 classrooms need to be built in smaller clusters at various elementary schools in the city, Baressi has said.

The Fort Worth architect showed district officials his initial drawings of what the eight-classroom clusters may look like.

Hardin said the additions should take about seven months to complete should the bond election pass.

If a local architect is hired to design the actual construction plans for the classrooms, Hardin will be paid on a retroactive basis for the amount of work he has done by the time a new architect is chosen.

Prior to the bond election, school district officials will restructure several elementary school boundaries to ensure they are not wasting classroom space. The move shouldn't affect more than 200 children, one official said.

Boulter criticizes Bentsen's politics of 'tax-and-spend'

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, who is gunning to unseat U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, believes the four-term Democrat is in "deep trouble" politically because of his "tax and spend" philosophy.

"Lloyd Bentsen is a tax-and-spend Democrat — one who spends some time taking caring of lofty friends here and there. But by and large, as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and as a member of the U.S. Senate, he does not represent the best interest of Texans or of our state," Boulter told reporters assembled for a Tuesday press conference in the offices of Republican National Committeeman Ernest Angelo.

"The problem is that when you are a tax-and-spend politician, you're always tampering with tax codes. This is Bentsen's specialty.

"When you refuse to cut spending and always raise taxes to try and cover the spending, what happens is you create sort of a buyer-seller relationship between the special interest groups and the politician who writes the tax law," he said. "The guys that have the money to buy the access get the favorable treatment in the tax code and the rest of the people get ignored."

The two-term Republican congressman claimed the spending bill passed by Congress last December raises taxes by $23 billion and does not reduce spending, except in the area of national defense.

"While I'm against that and voted against it, the fact is that if it were necessary to put together a tax package it was the perfect time to also accomplish some things for Texas. One of the things that Lloyd Bentsen should have gotten done as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee is the repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax," he said.

The congressman said he's received no response from Bentsen to a letter sent Monday urging that the senator support the National Petroleum Security Act — legislation cosponsored by Boulter and Texas Republican Sen. Phil Gramm.

The legislation calls for repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax, a 10 percent tax credit for the first $10 million spent on exploratory and marginal wells and decontrol of natural gas.

"The bill contains some tax incentives that are very, very necessary and are genuinely and enthusiastically supported by every oil and gas association of which I am aware," Boulter said. "Even those associations which favor an oil import fee also understand that the tax incentives are very, very necessary."

Although the legislation is void of an oil import fee, Boulter acknowledged that doesn't mean he doesn't support such a tariff.

"I am in favor of an oil import fee, but the fact remains that it's not something which has the unanimous support of the petroleum industry nor is it something that the administration is likely to support," he said.

Boulter, who faces primary opposition from Houston businessman Milton Fox and two other candidates, was advised against running by Gramm, Gov. Bill Clements and Texas GOP Chairman George Strake.

The GOP bosses had several reasons for opposing Boulter's candidacy, including the possibility of the Republican Party losing that congressional seat.

However, Gramm stopped just short of endorsing the congressman last month when he told the the Dallas Morning News that "Beau Boulter is clearly the qualified candidate in the Republican primary. No one has the qualifications comparable to Beau."

And Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, confirmed Tuesday that he will serve as Boulter's honorary campaign manager in Midland and throughout the 21st Congressional District.

"I whole-heartedly support Beau's campaign for the Senate. He has always fought hard to keep the energy industry strong, to keep our taxes low and to reduce the federal deficit," he said.

Boulter realizes that he faces an uphill battle in his quest to defeat Bentsen. But he observed that the timing is right politically as in no other previous election year.

"I believe that if I beat Lloyd Bentsen, the Republicans will take control of the Senate again. The National Senatorial Campaign Committee for the Republican Party believes that and that's why they support me.

"I think that this is something that I should do, the timing is right and, in politics, timing is everything. This is a presidential year and the presidential nominee — regardless of who it may be — is going to get a dead minimum of 57 percent of the vote. That's going to bring in at least 500,000 brand new people voting Republican at the top of the ticket.

"That means, with a serious challenge, that Bentsen is in deep trouble," Boulter said.

Post office hours will be curtailed

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Starting next Tuesday, Midlanders may be feeling the first local repercussions of Congress' attempt to reduce the federal budget deficit when a curtailment of post office hours goes into effect.

Raul Rojas, officer in charge at Midland's Central Post Office, said that Monday through Friday window services at five local post office locations will open an hour later than in the past in direct response to the reduction attempt.

Window hours for services such as stamp sales and package mailing at the main post office and at Graves, Village, ClayDesta and Air Terminal stations will start at 9 a.m., instead of the prior 8 a.m., he said.

All stations will remain open until 5 p.m. except Air Terminal, whose window services will close at 4:30 p.m., he said.

Scheduled to be eliminated entirely are four-hour daily window services at the Westside Station, he said. The only service to be offered at that station is the renting of post office boxes for use by individuals.

In addition, Saturday service at Graves Station will be eliminated. Midlanders wishing to partake of postal services on Saturday should use the Dunlaps Department Store contract station, which has hours of 10 a.m. to noon on Saturdays.

The hour adjustments are local postal officials' contribution to a nationwide reduction in post office operating costs called for under the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987, Rojas said.

The act required the U.S. Postal Service to cut expenditures by $1.25 billion over the next 21 months. The cuts are to include $430 million in operating expenses like window service hours, Rojas said.

The officer in charge added that local officials decided that the daily hour-long cuts were a better response to budget requirements than elimination of an entire half-day of service one day a week.

"Of course we changed our hours trying to minimize as much as possible the inconvenience to our customers," Rojas said.

"We hope that the Midland community will accept it better than closing half a day."

In addition to window time reductions, the local post office also is eliminating Sunday pick up and processing of mail from the blue post office boxes interspersed around the city, Rojas said.

That means letters and packages deposited in the boxes after their last posted pick up time on Saturdays will remain in the boxes until the following Monday, he said.

"We expect some calls on the changes," said Rojas. "We're hoping for the best."

Handicapped teen to take his case to nation's leaders'

By JOHN TACKETT

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Carlos Garcia has a strong will, an inquiring mind, plenty of pluck — and a speedy electric wheelchair.

The 17-year-old Fox Tech High School senior, who was left a quadriplegic at age 11 by a brain tumor, has used those assets to earn a special trip to Washington D.C., this month for a close-up look at what makes the government tick.

On Feb. 28, Garcia will fly to Washington, where he will join three other handicapped students from across the country for a series of meetings with government leaders and visits to the capital's attractions.

The trip was made possible through the urging and coaxing of Garcia's world history teacher, Bobbie Feldstone, and other teachers who pleaded for a special week for such students.

For the past two years, Ms. Feldstone has taken student groups from Fox Tech on week-long tours of Washington sponsored by the Close Up Foundation.

But the physical rigors of the tours had made participation by students such as Garcia impossible without special arrangements.

Those arrangements were lined up last month when officials with Close Up agreed to a $4,000 expenditure for a specially equipped van that will make it possible for seriously handicapped students to participate in the educational program.

"They started a program called 'Project Ironsides,'" Ms. Feldstone said, explaining the name came from the old television show starring Raymond Burr as a wheelchair-bound detective who operated from a van.

Conspiracy to kidnap indictment unsealed

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The federal indictment accusing Kenneth Wayne Parker, 41, of two counts of conspiracy to forcibly kidnap two women — June Gilkerson and Susan Lindsey — and sell them into prostitution in a foreign country was formally unsealed Tuesday.

Parker is a former Midland firefighter and maintenance worker at Midland County Public Library.

He was arrested by FBI special agents on Feb. 4 in a video store in the Dallas suburb of Garland, was jailed in Dallas and has yet to be transferred into federal custody in Midland. Parker today was in the Lew Sterrett Criminal Justice Center in Dallas and was placed "on hold" by the U.S. Marshal Service for transfer to Midland.

He was indicted Jan. 28 by a federal grand jury in Midland and the indictment was sealed until Tuesday, when U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith ordered the indictment unsealed.

In the indictment in which Parker was charged with conspiracy to kidnap, David Alderink was named as an unindicted co-conspirator. Alderink on Feb. 1 pleaded guilty in state district court in Midland to the aggravated kidnapping of Ms. Gilkerson, 24, and was sentenced to 20 years in prison. Alderink's attorney, Jim Bobo of Odessa, contended that Alderink had been "led into" into Ms. Gilkerson's kidnapping and that he would have "wanted nothing bad to happen" to her.

Ms. Gilkerson, a former part-time worker at the Midland Restitution Center, disappeared on the morning of Nov. 8, 1986, after she had received a telephone call in her west Midland Home. Even until today, 15 months following her abduction, Ms. Gilkerson has not been located despite intense investigations by law-enforcement agencies.

The indictment charges that about 9 a.m. on Nov. 8, 1986, Alderink telephoned Ms. Gilkerson, that Parker drove Alderink to the Fairmont Park Lanes bowling alley in northwest Midland, and that on that day Parker "bound June Gilkerson and placed her in a pickup truck and drove away."

In the other case, the federal indictment says that Parker on Nov. 7, 1986, obtained "two pistols and handcuffs," that he and Alderink drove from Midland to Rockdale northeast of Austin that day, that Parker placed a telephone call to Ms. Lindsey's residence later that day.

Midlander remains jailed on murder charges

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

A 27-year-old Midland man remained in the city jail this morning after being charged Tuesday afternoon with the murder of an 11-year-old girl and the aggravated assault of her mother, his fiancee.

Bond for Lyndon Bart Long, 2408 Faulkner Ave., was set at a total of $150,000, Midland Police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said today.

Midland County Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set Long's bond at $100,000 on the murder charge and $50,000 for the alleged aggravated assault, White said.

The charges stem from a Monday afternoon domestic disturbance that White said "escalated beyond their control" and ended in the death of Jenalee Frazier, a Santa Rita Elementary School fifth grader, and the wounding of her mother, Debra Frazier, 33.

Both victims were shot at close range with a .22-caliber rifle, White said.

The mother remained in satisfactory condition this morning at Midland Memorial Hospital, Laurie Johnson, a hospital spokeswoman, said. The woman's vital signs were stable and she was resting comfortably, Ms. Johnson said.

Monday afternoon Ms. Frazier underwent about 1½ hours of exploratory abdominal surgery.

White has said the couple had argued "off and on" all day Monday, but the dispute which ended in tragedy began about 1:15 p.m. when a man and woman were heard struggling in a downstairs apartment at 2408 Faulkner Ave.

Police were notified of the dispute by the girl's grandfather, who she apparently called during the struggle. White was unsure Tuesday whether the call was placed before or after she had been shot.

Lawmen at the scene found the girl's body in a bedroom, White said.

Long listed his occupation as a student registered nurse. He told police during booking procedures that he was a resident of the Faulkner Avenue apartment, although his Texas drivers license listed a McCamey address.

Incoherent system of addresses could hinder Enhanced 911

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Although Odessa City Council members and Ector County Commissioners have acted to provide funding for enhanced 911 emergency service, unless a way is found to establish a coherent countywide numbered street address system the efficiency of the computer-dependent service could be severely hampered, officials contend.

The city council Tuesday approved the budget for the countywide Emergency Communication District, while Commissioners Court members approved a phone rate increase of 4.6 percent to fund operation of the system.

But, as explained by Ector County Engineer Don Bonifay, in some areas of the county outside city limits telephones are situated at locations indentifiable only by U.S. Post Service Route numbers, rather than numbered street addresses.

In effect, the enhanced 911 Emergency 911 system computer will instantaneously trace, the exact location from which an emergency phone call originates.

This will mean that if an incapacitated person or child needs emergency assistance, but is unable to verbally communicate, they will need only to be able to dial 911.

As the call is received by emergency services dispatchers, a computer will lock onto the number and display its location by street address number on a computer screen.

Without a numbered street address for each phone, Bonifay told commissioners, the system will not function with the envisioned effectiveness.

Commissioner Bill Tolbert, whose Precinct 1 encompasses a large portion of the county's unincorporated area, observed that the lack of numbered street addresses has been a problem plaguing the utility companies, as well as the U.S. Postal Service, for many years.

The increasing utilization of computerized equipment to read first five-digit, then nine-digit ZIP codes to expedite sorting and distribution of mail prompted the postal service to attempt to identify every rural route box number with a specific street name and number.

According to postal service officials, the effort was confounded in the early to mid-1980s by the county's explosive population growth.

The effort has been complicated, primarily in unincorporated areas, by the fact some county areas have roads with no names and developers have often initiated their own addressing systems that have sometimes duplicated existing street names and/or numbers.

Noting that he will work closely with the postal service and utility companies to resolve the problem, Bonifay indicated the difficulties could be solved in about six months.

He said he should be able to utilize established city base-lines and extending existing number sequences.

According to David Young, assistant county engineer, the problem area is primarily that extending west from FM 1936. While most streets and roads have names and numbers, he said, the numbers, in some instances, have been arbitrarily assigned or selected at random. In some cases, this means numbered blocks do not always increase consecutively.

The Emergency Communications District board has earmarked $2,000 for mapping supplies to help Bonifay accomplish the task.

The 4.6 percent phone rate increase approved by County Commissioners will add about 42 cents to the $9.10 base phone bill of most residential customers.

Base business bills of about $21.30 will increase by about 98 cents per month. According to the budget developed by 911 board members, once the system is initiated and costs covered, the 4.6 percent phone rate increase "should fall to an estimated 3.2 percent thereafter."

Total projected fiscal 1988-89 revenue from the communication district tax on all phones in Ector County is $574,446. This is expected to cover start up and installation costs and leave the district with a reserve of about $23,905.

Ex-FBI agent indicted for giving information

HOUSTON (AP) — A former FBI agent was indicted on charges he gave classified information to an official of an organization that represents Taiwan interests in the United States.

According to a grand jury indictment handed down Tuesday, Douglas S. Tsou, also known as Tsou Tauhsu, gave the information in March 1986 to the Director of the Coordination Council for North American Affairs, the Taiwan group, said U.S. Attorney Henry Oncken.

Oncken and Andrew J. Duffen, special agent in charge of the Houston FBI office, refused to disclose the nature of the information.

Oncken would say only that it was about an individual being evaluated and considered as a source of the FBI.

The indictment described it as "classified information concerning an operational foreign counterintelligence asset of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"At the time of the communication, the defendant knew that the information he communicated was classified, and he knew that the Coordination Council for North American Affairs was and is an instrumentality acting on behalf of the governing authority on Taiwan, formerly recognized as the Republic of China," the indictment said.

Tsou, 63, was fired in October 1986 from the FBI bureau in Houston, where he had worked for six years as a language specialist, translating Chinese to English, Oncken said.

Authorities said he had spent the majority of his six years in the FBI in Houston although he was hired by the agency on the West Coast. His dismissal in 1986 was related to the charges outlined in Tuesday's indictment, officials said.

Tsou was born in mainland China in 1924 and became an American citizen in 1977.

He was held on $100,000 bond and faces up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine if convicted.

A woman who answered the telephone Tuesday at the Coordination Council for North American Affairs referred questions about the case to John Wei, whom she described as the organization's secretary. He was not in the office, however, she said.

Federal authorities said the council had been helping investigators with the probe. Oncken said it did not appear the organization had solicited the information.

"This case at hand presents an additional element for consideration, that of the matter of national security," Duffen said. "This element takes this case out of the realm of a routine announcement of an indictment and arrest and precludes the government from going any further with statements about the case, which is to be proven in a court of law."

"Please understand we are not trying to be evasive," Oncken said. "We've got the issue of national security and there's just a lot of things we cannot answer that we ordinarily would be able to answer."

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

According to a recent CNN poll, average Americans now watch up to six hours of television per day.

Six hours! Think of that. One-fourth of our lives, frittered away in alpha-wave bliss before the TV screen as our limited RAM spaces and mortal time slots fill up with the images of daytime and prime-time television.

And, how often do we stop to ponder the nature and purpose of this entity that is so much a part of our everyday lives? Paraphrasing Bill Cosby, now himself a creature of the entity, "What is it really?"

Let's start with the screen itself. When approached for closer scrutiny, this thing, unlike an ordinary object of perception, fades into obscurity, a flurry of excited phospher dots without meaning or apparent purpose. Only when we watch it "properly" — according to instructions — does it make any sense at all.

It's not all that pretty a picture at the other end of the signal, either. Hordes of producers, actors and technicians work tirelessly to technically arrange the disparate elements that make up a television production, contriving, in effect, to sell us mediated reality in the form of the "Dukes of Hazard," when at the same time, unmediated reality is right at our fingertips.

If you would like to meet some of this unmediated reality, to talk to some real people in real life situations, to have the opportunity to share in their lives and even lend them a helping hand, call the Volunteer Center of Midland. This week the center needs:

- Assistance on planning a city-wide Volunteer Recognition banquet, including personnel to act as committee chairpersons, public relations facilitators and fundraisers.
- Clerical support for virtually all member agencies.
- Volunteer income tax assistance for low income families.
- Afternoon tutors with math and English skills to work with children.
- Relief switchboard operator from noon to 1 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. Will train.
- Computer person. Will train.
- Board members, minorities and senior citizens especially, with experience or willingness to learn fundraising and public relations.
- Emergency response service volunteer, to conduct visits to elderly, install lifeline units and troubleshoot equipment.
- Need of the Week: Clerical, all phases.

For more information on how you and/or your group or organization can become involved, give the Volunteer Center a call at 684-5866.

Garcia and the three other students in Project Ironsides will be taken around Washington in the special van, meeting with members of Congress, visiting the Pentagon and attending seminars with government officials on economics and other topics.

The $885 cost Garcia must pay for the trip is being raised by a variety of friends and supporters, including the Harmony Hills Optimist Club and Fox Tech graduates Richard Garza, an attorney, and David Arrevalo, a food sales representative.

Garcia will be accompanied to Washington by his father, Pedro, who will attend to his medical needs.

Medical care is at the top of Garcia's list of topics to discuss with government leaders.

"Things that have made the handicapped more independent have been cut," he said.

Garcia, who ranks ninth academically in his class of 338, said he would like to speak with President Reagan while in Washington.

"If it's at all possible, I will," the determined teen-ager said. "I believe where there's a will there's a way. And I have a very strong will."

If he gets the chance, Garcia said he will ask the president "if Reagan can do what he thinks he can in his last year."

INDICTMENT

At about midnight on Nov. 7, Parker and Alderink drove to a Rockdale apartment complex where Ms. Lindsey lived. The indictment does not say why Parker and Alderink did not carry out their alleged scheme to kidnap Ms. Lindsey, who is married.

Ms. Lindsey, 25, had appeared before a federal grand jury prior to the Parker's indictment late last month.

Parker, a Vietnam veteran, was a city of Midland firefighter for five years, from October 1972 to July 1977, and had worked for the Midland County Public Library at two different times. He worked in the library from July 1982 to March 1984 and from March 1985 to November 1986, when he resigned that job.

About that time, Parker had appeared before a Midland grand jury in connection with Ms. Gilkerson's disappearance.

While Parker is being held in custody, Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Beery of Midland has filed a motion to detain Parker and to hold him without bail on grounds that Parker is "charged with a crime of violence," that Parker presents "a serious" flight risk and a serious risk of his obstructing justice or threatening, injuring or intimidating a prospective witness or juror, and that Parker represents a danger to the community.

The Parker case is being handled by Assistant U.S. Attorney Wayne Speck of San Antonio and, if it goes to trial, would be presented in the court of U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

Were Parker convicted of conspiracy to kidnap, he could be sentenced to any terms of years up to and including life in prison.

U.S. plans show of force during Games

By RICHARD HALLORAN
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration plans a full-scale show of military force in and around South Korea next fall to deter possible North Korean terrorism or attack during the Olympic Games in Seoul, administration officials say.

The North Korean government under President Kim Il-sung has made little effort to disguise its attempts to exploit political turmoil in South Korea, including that surrounding the presidential election last fall and that expected during the parliamentary election this month.

The United States, which has 40,000 soldiers in South Korea, has a mutual security treaty that requires the United States to render military assistance in the event South Korea comes under attack. About 47,000 more Americans, including 20,000 Marines, are in Japan.

In its preliminary plans, administration officials said, one aircraft carrier and possibly two, each with 6 to 10 escorting vessels, would steam off the coast of South Korea during the Games, which are scheduled for late September and early October in the South Korean capital.

More Air Force planes may be flown from Japan to join those already in South Korea, the officials indicated. Marine amphibious battalions often accompany carrier battle groups and would be available from American bases on Okinawa.

Perhaps most important, the officials said, surveillance by reconnaissance aircraft and intelligence satellites would be increased to provide South Korea with the earliest possible warning of trouble from North Korea.

Before that, at least one army and one Marine battalion will be flown into South Korea in late March for an annual training exercise known as Team Spirit. That drill is intended to reassure South Korea that the United States can bolster forces there and to remind North Korea of the American alliance with South Korea.

The officials said the new plan would be similar to deployments in the region at the time of the Asian Games in September 1986. At that time, the carriers Ranger and Vinson, along with the battleship New Jersey and about two dozen other warships, patrolled the sea around South Korea.

Just what role American military power would have in any terrorist episode during the Olympics was not clear. Most conventional forces are not organized for anti-terrorist operations, but they could be used to retaliate for terrorism.

Candidates already building war chests for 1990 election

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

STATE

AUSTIN — Although the elections are more than two years away, a dozen and a half probable candidates for 1990 statewide races already have raised more than $3 million, according to records filed with the secretary of state.

While men and women of both parties scour the state in search of funds to run their 1988 campaigns, the two-years-from-now hopefuls are building political war chests for the future. The expected turnover among all the top executive posts has more than the usual number of candidates running early "exploratory campaigns."

Attorney General Jim Mattox, all-but-announced candidate for governor in 1990, leads the pack with $1.03 million in contributions during the last six months of 1987. His report lists 1,126 donors, including 37 who gave $10,000 or more. The group of 37 includes Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams, Tyler oilman Royce Wisenbaker and law firms from around Texas such as Umphrey Swearingen & Eddins of Port Arthur.

"Jim Mattox is a friend of mine," Walter Umphrey says when asked why he gave money to a yet-unannounced candidate in a race still 24 months away. "I think he's a formidable candidate in the next two years."

His early giving, Umphrey says, helps Mattox demonstrate "he has the financial support behind him" and possibly discourages competitors.

State Treasurer Ann Richards, one opponent willing to battle Mattox's money, comes in second in the 1990 fundraising derby so far with $511,000 in donations from July through December. Ms. Richards' big supporters include bankers and other financiers with whom she has built a rapport during her five years as treasurer.

Probable candidates for down-ballot posts haven't matched Mattox's and Ms. Richards' collection level, but they acknowledge the need to get an early start.

His early giving, (attorney Walter) Umphrey says, helps (Jim) Mattox demonstrate "he has the financial support behind him" and possibly discourages competitors.

For example, state Rep. Dan Morales of San Antonio, who calls himself a "likely" Democratic candidate for attorney general in 1990, raised more than $100,000. Morales doesn't try to hide the fact that he doesn't need the money for his re-election campaign this year; he's unopposed for a third term in the House.

He says he will use the money to travel the state "to continue considering the possibility of...the attorney general's race." In fact he loaned the campaign $28,000 of his own money in the fall to ensure he would have enough funds to tour.

While Morales says most of his contributions came unsolicited, state Sen. Chet Edwards ran a massive fund drive during the fall and raised $401,000. The Duncanville Democrat says he first wanted to scare off any potential opponents for this year's re-election campaign.

Having accomplished that goal, Edwards says he wanted to "show credibility for a statewide race" in 1990. He says he's "seriously looking" at running for lieutenant governor.

State law prohibits elected officials from accepting campaign contributions during regular legislative sessions, and Edwards says he wants to be sure he has "some foundation already built" before lawmakers convene here next January.

Waco insurance magnate Bernard Rapoport tops Edwards' list with a $10,000 donation. "He is a bright young man who can serve the state well," Rapoport says of Edwards.

"This gives him an opportunity to test out the waters."

Candidates and donors alike acknowledge that this year's presidential and other races make fundraising for 1990 a difficult chore. "It's not easy," Edwards says.

The names of several big contributors show up on the secretary of state's records for both 1988 and 1990 candidates. The Texas Association of Realtors' political action committee, which has donated $131,500 to 1988 candidates over the past three months, earlier gave $10,000 each to Mattox, Ms. Richards and Comptroller Bob Bullock — who's running for lieutenant governor in 1990 — and $5,000 to Land Commissioner Gary Mauro.

Tommy Townsend, senior vice president and chief lobbyist for the Realtors, says the group has made no endorsements in the 1990 races. "All the contributions we've made are based on incumbency and record in office," he says.

Montford, Glasgow named to committee

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Bob Glasgow of Stephenville will replace Sen. Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls as co-chairman of the Joint Select Committee on Worker's Compensation Insurance, said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

Hobby also said Tuesday that Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, will be appointed to the open seat on the committee.

Farabee, who like Glasgow is a Democrat, has announced plans to resign his Senate seat. The other co-chairman of the select committee is Rep. Richard Smith, R-Bryan.

Montford also will become chairman of the Senate State Affairs Committee when Farabee resigns, Hobby said.

"A solution to the crisis in workers' compensation insurance will require just the kind of leadership Ray Farabee provided in the Senate: thoughtful, well-reasoned, practical and fair," Hobby said.

"We are lucky to have others in the Senate who bring these same qualities to bear on the problems facing Texas."

Sculptor wants to make Columbus' head rounder

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Christopher Columbus' head shouldn't be so flat, says sculptor Alfred Tibor.

"He doesn't have a brain. He has a flat head. It hurts my eye," said Tibor, who is repairing the statue given to the city by the Chicago suburb of Barrington, Ill.

Tibor had repaired a broken finger and thumb on Columbus' right hand and mended the explorer's fur coat. All the while, he kept looking at the 20-ton head.

Tibor, 68, wants to glue a piece of marble to make the top of the head rounder. He believes the head is a bit flat because someone miscalculated while cutting the marble in Italy.

The statue now is at the Columbus Art Memorial Co. It eventually will stand on the Columbus State Community College campus.

Columbus Art Memorial hired Tibor to repair the statue. Columbus State is paying for the restoration and for a base for the statue.

"He (statue of Christopher Columbus) doesn't have a brain. He has a flat head. It hurts my eye."
— sculptor Alfred Tibor

The statue is expected to be moved to the campus next spring, said Marvin Gutter, Columbus State vice president for business and administrative services.

Carmine Menduni, 40, of Columbus Art Memorial, said that for the discoverer to land on a college campus is appropriate. "That's why people go to college, isn't it? To discover things? And he will be pointing toward downtown, giving the students a sense of direction."

The Carrara marble statue was in a Columbus Recreation and Parks Department storage building for nearly a year while city officials searched for a place to display it. The damage occurred in Barrington, Menduni said.

"It was really in a bad state of repair," he said. "We have replaced part of the hands and part of the body. We replaced an eye. It had been shot out."

The statue originally stood in the bow of a ship. The ship has been removed and cut into pieces by Bill Sexton, 68, a stonecutter for 43 years. The pieces are being used to repair Columbus, who now stands 20 feet tall.

"Cutting it isn't too difficult, but making it fit is," Sexton said. "It's like a dentist working on teeth. You put them in and check it, take it back out and grind off the high spots."

The pieces are glued into place with epoxy mixed with marble dust. Some pieces, such as Columbus' extended arm and index finger, are supported with metal rods, and glued.

Earth, Mars to have close encounter

By RICHARD COLE

MIAMI (AP) — This year, Mars makes its closest approach to Earth in a generation, and astronomers say the red planet's appearance in the night sky may be the astronomical event of 1988.

As if to demonstrate the heavens have a sense of humor, the height of the show comes in September, just shy of the 50th anniversary of Orson Welles' 1938 "War of the Worlds" broadcast that panicked the nation with fictional reports of invaders from Mars.

"I see 1988 as a great Martian adventure," said Jack Horkheimer, the aptly named "Star Hustler" of the Public Broadcasting System and executive director of Miami's Space Transit Planetarium. "I'm like a kid in a candy store."

When Mars is at its closest on Sept. 21 — just over 36 million miles away — it will rival Jupiter as the brightest object in the sky after the Moon and Venus.

"It won't be this close again until 2003," says Horkheimer. "And there are a lot of kids out there who have never seen it this bright."

Unlike the comets Halley and Kohoutek, Mars will not disappoint viewers, because its brightness is more predictable and the planet will be easily visible from almost everywhere.

He expects a spate of UFO sightings to accompany Mars' visit as people unaccustomed to the unblinking reddish-orange light in the night sky mistake it for more exotic extraterrestrial visitors.

Like planetarium directors around the nation, Horkheimer is preparing a series of Mars shows he promises will "knock your socks off."

One involves a snazzy computerized simulation of a flight through the planet's gigantic 2,500-mile-long version of the Grand Canyon. Another centers around an 18-mile-high mountain — three times higher than Mount Everest — capped by a crater the size of Georgia.

He also is bringing to the planetarium a new telescope nicknamed "Awesome Orson" in honor of the late Welles' broadcast and girth.

Although Earth passes Mars every two years, it is only every 15 to 17 years that the orbits of the third and fourth planets bring them as close together as in 1988. The year began with Earth and Mars separated by 200 million miles.

The close encounter comes four years before a scheduled Mars probe by the Soviet Union.

The Soviets plan to have the probes bring back Martian soil, and perhaps, Horkheimer said, settle the most intriguing question about Earth's neighbor — whether life once existed on the now cold and arid desert planet.

U.S. Mars landers in the 1970s tried to answer that question, but the chemical soil test results beamed back to Earth were inconclusive.

"I really hope that they find fossilized signs of life," he said. "We know that there was water on Mars."

Horkheimer said he also hopes the Soviet probes will spur the United States to revive its own space program, with a manned landing on Mars.

"We could be on Mars easily within a decade or so," he said. "The technology already exisits. What is missing is the money." And the funds will be available only when the public once again supports spending the billions of dollars in funding a Martian landing would require.

If the political situation allows it, a joint U.S.-Soviet mission to Mars could ease the financial burden on both countries, he said.

It also could promote peace between the two rivals — an ironic benefit from a planet named after the Roman god of war.

BEE SMART

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1988 Regional Spelling Bee March 26 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 25. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

li'brer'e

library — (noun) A "library" is an excellent place to obtain information and learn about different fields. No matter where your interests lie, you can usually find a book, magazine, or other material on the subject of your choice. A "library" is a collection, room, area, or a building itself containing books, manuscripts, musical scores or other literary and sometimes artistic materials such as paintings and recordings. These materials are usually kept in some convenient order for use but are not for sale. Your school, county or city probably all have libraries. Many are linked together by computer networks. "Library" is derived from the French word "librairie," which is in turn derived from the earlier Latin word "librarius" meaning "of books."

Trader advises producers to 'hedge'

Says price volatility to continue

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

"High prices attract supply," is an overriding truth in today's oil markets. In 1987, domestic spot market prices for West Texas Intermediate crude were the highest in the world. As prices rose through the late summer, imports followed.

Investment consultants aren't generally in the business of offering guaranteed advice. But Anthony Annunziato, head of Shearson Lehman Hutton's energy futures trading desk in Houston provided one surefire prediction for investors attending a Tuesday luncheon: "The price of oil is going to keep changing."

While that isn't exactly earth-shaking news, Annunziato added that at any given time a fundamental analysis of supply and demand conditions will point to a greater probability of upward or downward price movements in the short-term.

Making those evaluations and using them to manage oil reserves as "in-ground assets" just like any other investment portfolio can benefit producers, the senior vice president told a group of about 75, which included many local producers.

Annunziato compared a proven oil reserve to a conventional portfolio, which would likely combine investments in cash and cash-equivalents, such as CDs, T-bills and bonds; as well as stocks, options, futures and other types of investments.

He equated selling all that production at the posted price as it is produced with being 100 percent invested in cash. Committing a portion of those reserves to futures contracts can protect against future price declines by locking in current prices for the length of the contract period.

Conversely, by buying others' futures contracts at current levels if the expectation is for rising prices allows the investor to reap higher rewards in the future if prices do go up, by selling those barrels at the higher market price six months down the road.

He cautions investors against "second guessing" themselves when dealing in crude futures. "Very few market participants are lucky enough to sell at very peak of prices or buy at the very bottom," said Annunziato.

Texaco to proceed with mailings

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A federal judge on Tuesday refused to block the mailing of a disclosure statement to Texaco Inc. shareholders, ruling that the document contains enough material to inform them of views opposing a planned reorganization of the company.

The disclosure statement forms the basis of the company's plan for emergence from Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings.

In a 19-page decision, Chief Judge Charles Brieant found the statement adequate and not an abuse of the discretion of U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Howard Schwartzberg, as had been charged by a attorneys representing a group of Texaco shareholders who are unhappy with part of the plan.

Schwartzberg approved the plan last month, clearing the way for the mailing, which is now in progress.

The plan, which includes a $3 billion settlement of Texaco's multibillion-dollar legal dispute with Houston-based Pennzoil Co. must be approved by at least two-thirds of the shares voting by March 21.

Should it be approved and should Schwartzberg agree to it, Texaco could emerge from Chapter 11 protection in April.

Texaco filed for protection from creditors in April to avoid posting a potentially ruinous security bond while appealing a $10.3 billion judgement held by Pennzoil against the White Plains-based oil giant.

Pennzoil was awarded the judgement by a Texas jury, which found in 1985 that Texaco had illegally interfered with a Pennzoil plan to acquire part of Getty Oil Co. and then bought Getty itself.

On Dec. 19, Texaco, Pennzoil, and committees representing Texaco's creditors and shareholders agreed on a $3 billion payment by Texaco to Pennzoil to settle the matter.

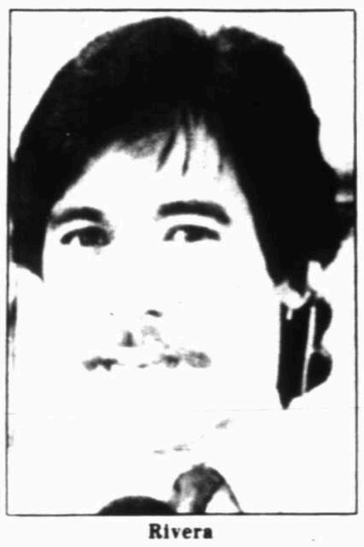

But attorneys for 13 shareholders oppose a part of the reorganization plan freeing all persons for personal liability for their roles in the events that led to the judgement against Texaco.

These shareholders have sued Texaco officers personally, seeking compensation for the company to offset whatever payment is made to Pennzoil.

In a hearing before Brieant last week, their attorneys argued that the 209-page statement failed to include enough information about the indemnifications and legal releases, claiming they "have been systematically false and misleading and inadequate."

Asking for more details on how the settlement was reached, they charged Texaco's board of directors with conflict of interest, because they approved a plan containing the indemnifications — a plan which would free them from liability in derivative suits.

Texaco agreed to allow the 13 shareholders to file a statement which is attached to the total plan already being mailed.

Geraldo Rivera will address convention

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Journalist Geraldo Rivera will be the keynote speaker at the President's banquet of the annual convention of the Texas-Mexican American Chambers of Commerce, set to take place in Midland July 30.

In making the announcement Tuesday at the monthly meeting of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Elvia Hernandez, executive director of chamber, said the group was also trying to bring in San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros to speak at the Legislators' Breakfast of the convention.

Hernandez said she was very excited to have a speaker of Geraldo Rivera's qualifications to be the keynote speaker for the state convention, which is being hosted by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

Hernandez also reported that F.J. Spencer, a consultant on international trade, would present a seminar at the convention. Special guest Joe Morin, executive director of TAMACC, commented that Spencer — who spoke at the state "Step Up to Success" convention last November, and at the recent quarterly TAMACC meeting — was an excellent speaker and had a number of solid ideas.

Morin said Spencer is focusing on maquiladoras, or twin plants on the Texas-Mexico border, and is trying to match suppliers and vendors of goods and services with these industries.

Flare Inc. posts record quarter

From Staff Reports

Flare Inc., a Midland-based public company traded over-the-counter, reported its best quarterly performance since 1982 during the fourth quarter of 1987.

For the period ended Dec. 31, the firm had net earnings of $650,541, marking the fifth consecutive profitable quarter, and brought annual earnings to $872,931. This compares to a net loss of $360,763 for the same period in 1986. Per share earnings for the quarter were 6 cents a share.

According to Charles A. McNamara III, president and chief executive officer, the improved results were principally due to a substantial increase in sales coupled with lower operating expenses.

"Due to our major debt restructuring and strong operating performance, our working capital has increased from a negative $1,608,744 to Dec. 31, 1986 to a positive $886,538 a year later," he stated. He noted that funded debt is now 31 percent of total capital, compared with 43.5 percent one year ago.

Flare through its operating subsidiary, Seismic Reflections Inc., is engaged in the acquisition, sales and brokerage of seismic data to the oil and gas exploration industry.

Steven D. Timms, president of Seismic Reflections, said seismic data valued at $1,187,134 was added to inventory during the first six months of the fiscal year. "Because our backlog of seismic data scheduled to be acquired continues to increase, we intend to increase the rate of our proprietary seismic data additions during our next fiscal quarter," Timms said.

He added that while quarterly results would always be subject to the unpredictability of customers' budget cycles, he feels more confidence in SRI's business plan, and in the health of the market.

Plugging rules may change

AUSTIN (AP) — A Railroad Commission proposal would allow operators to pay a $100 fee to extend the deadline for plugging an inactive well rather than post a bond or letter of credit to cover plugging costs.

Operators once had only 90 days to plug an inactive well, but the commission now generally gives operators a year.

The proposal would set the plugging deadline at one year with the new option for extending that deadline by paying the fee.

Federal gas tax throws city, state budgets off

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cities, counties and states are facing increases of up to 20 percent in their budgets for gasoline, thanks to a new law requiring them to pay federal tax on their fuel purchases.

Although state and local governments can file for refunds of the 9.1-cent per gallon gasoline tax, there is no indication how long it will take to get the money back. While they wait, some spending will have to be delayed.

"We anticipate the IRS is going to be flooded with applications for rebates and we have great concern whether they will be able to handle them in a timely fashion," said Lance Simmens, assistant executive director of the U.S. Conference of Mayors. "It could take anywhere from six to 12 months to get a rebate."

The requirement that state and local governments pay the tax was enacted in 1986 but took effect last Jan. 1.

Medical costs have long been a concern of patients, doctors and insurance companies. One innovation has been same-day surgery.

Now 34 Midland physicians have joined together to open SURGICARE CENTER OF MIDLAND, an ambulatory or same-day surgery unit at 3001 W. Illinois. Of the 34, 16 or 17 will perform surgery at the center, according to Dr. Shelton Viney, president of the governing board.

Viney said the center will offer patients an alternative to Midland's two hospitals at substantial savings. He emphasized that many of the anesthesiologists and surgeons will be the same ones who have worked at Midland Memorial and Physicians & Surgeons, and that hiring standards at Surgicare will be just as strict as at the two hospitals.

Viney said the center is equipped to perform any kind of same-day surgery, from cataract removal to tonsillectomies and hernia repair. Arrangements have been made with both hospitals to admit a patient should an emergency arise. The facility also has x-ray and lab-testing facilities as well.

Grand opening is March 3, and the first day for patients will be March 7, Viney said.

The company distributes not only Mitsubishi but Motorola, Panasonic, Oki and Audivox and services Southwestern Bell systems.

The Midland/Odessa terminal was chosen from among 130 terminals in 14 Midwestern states to receive the award, according to Clay Moore, terminal manager.

Oil prices reverse Tuesday trend

Heating-oil futures helped drag down West Texas Intermediate prices, according to the Wall Street Journal.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, crude slipped 24 cents a barrel, to $17.42, giving up most of the gains it made Monday in a minirally. Current-delivery heating oil closed at 48.6 cents a gallon, down 0.6 cents — a 2.84-cent plunge from the beginning of the year.

The heating-oil futures market is disappointing some traders who had expected a winter rally. Although the season started with bitter cold weather, historically low stockpiles and high demand, heating-oil futures have shown no signs of taking off.

According to Sarah Emerson, a vice president at Energy Security Analysis Inc., Washingon, the latest bearish factor for heating-oil and other distillate products was the report yesterday from Euroilstock, an industry group, of a substantial build in European distillates in January compared with December.

Dollar lower but steady overseas

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar opened lower on European currency exchanges today, weakened by technical factors but holding steady in anticipation of the latest U.S. trade figures, dealers said. Gold strengthened.

Traders said the dollar continued to enjoy a positive undertone because of optimism that balance-of-trade data to be released Friday will show an improvement for December.

In Italy, dealers were said to be taking a cautious view, recalling that the November trade deficit of $13.2 billion was much narrower than most had expected.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar opened 0.92 yen lower but recovered to close just 0.04 yen down at 129.03. Later, in London, it was quoted at 128.95 yen.

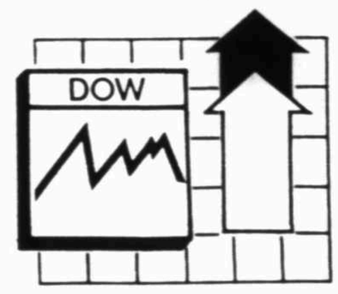

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

—1.6913 West German marks, down from 1.7030
—1.3853 Swiss francs, down from 1.3950
—5.7098 French francs, down from 5.7455
—1.9023 Dutch guilders, down from 1.9120
—1,244.00 Italian lire, down from 1,253.25
—1.2685 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2665

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.7570 , compared with $1.7425 Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $443.00 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $439.25. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $443.80

Stock market posts healthy gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted some healthy gains Tuesday as a sudden decline in a key lending rate triggered a late burst of buying.

Analysts said the decline stirred speculation that Federal Reserve policymakers, starting a private two-day meeting, had decided to relax the central bank's credit policy, something that could benefit stock prices.

But some of them said the rate decline was probably an aberration.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which fell 14.76 on Monday, finished up 18.74 at 1,914.46. The advance broke a strong of four consecutive declines in the market's best-known average.

Advancing issues led losers by a margin of nearly 2 to 1 among stocks listed in the New York Stock Exchange, with 976 up, 538 down and 481 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 162.35 million shares compared with 168.85 million on Monday.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Ten charged in fradulent trading

CHICAGO (AP) — Ten men have been charged with fradulent trading in commodity futures, including one scheme in which non-exchange members allegedly used wigs, makeup and phony credentials to gain access to the trading pits.

In the latter case, federal authorities said Tuesday, the phony traders cashed in on profitable trades, but walked away from losing deals because they could not be traced.

U.S. Attorney Anton Valukas said the four unrelated cases resulted from an investigation begun more than 18 months ago of possible commodities fraud.

GM doubles earnings for quarter

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — General Motors Corp. says its fourth-quarter earnings more than doubled from the previous year, although much of the improvement was attributed to accounting changes and tax benefits.

For the year, the nation's largest automaker said Tuesday its earnings jumped 20.6 percent, as record earnings from subsidiaries and overseas businesses offset marginal earnings from North American auto operations.

Wisconsin could sue Chrysler

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin's attorney general says the state should sue Chrysler Corp. because the automaker's decision to close its aging Kenosha plant broke a "clearly enforceable" agreement to build cars there.

Attorney General Don Hanaway said Tuesday he found no written agreement with the automaker that could be considered a "smoking gun," but contended there were enough handshakes and verbal agreements to fight Chrysler's plan to lay off 5,500 workers at Kenosha this summer.

Patent granted for AIDS drug

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Burroughs Wellcome, the maker of AZT, the first drug approved by the federal government for the treatment of AIDS, has been issued a patent for the compound.

Company spokeswoman Kathy Bartlett said Tuesday the company had filed for the patent last Sept. 17.

AZT is the only drug in widespread use for treatment of AIDS patients, although other compounds are being tested.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Don't paint all 'munis' with same brush

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Since the October stock market debacle, we have shifted most of our investments to municipal bonds. Several of these are hospital and health service issues. A knowledgeable friend told me this is a poor area for investments. Is that true?

Doyle

A. That's too harsh a statement. Although some bonds of that type have defaulted, it's wrong to tar them all with the same brush. The vast majority have met their interest payments on time and, when reaching maturity, have been paid off at face value.

As the words indicate, such bonds are sold to finance the construction or expansion of hospitals and such things as nursing homes and retirement-health care centers.

When they are issued by state, county or local governments, those securities become "municipal" bonds and the interest they pay is not subject to federal income tax. Also, most states with income taxes exempt from tax the interest paid by municipal bonds issued within the state.

Money to pay interest and redeem the bonds at maturity comes from hospital and health service facility revenues, much of it from Medicare and Medicaid programs. Because the federal government is attempting to hold down the costs of those programs, hospital and health service revenues are being squeezed.

With revenues tight, relatively few hospitals and health service facility bonds have the top triple-A credit rating. Those that do generally are insured by private companies.

Remember that these are "revenue" bonds. That makes them riskier than "general obligation" municipal bonds, which are backed by the full faith, credit and taxing power of a state or a political subdivision of a state.

Q. Most of our municipal bonds have high ratings, but two have no rating. Is that a danger sign?

A. There's no flat-out answer to your question. The lack of a rating can mean nothing at all or or a great deal.

Small bond issues usually are unrated. If a town issues enough bonds to pay for the purchase of a new fire truck, the mayor and town council won't go to the trouble and expense of obtaining a rating for those bonds from the major rating agencies — Moody's Investor Service, Standard & Poor's Corp. and Fitch Investors Service.

However, a bond might be unrated because its issuer believes it's better to have no rating than a low rating.

Ratings indicate each bond issue's credit worthiness — its degree of security from risk or default. The rating agencies analyze the bonds and their issuers. In general, it's wise to stay with bonds considered to be of "investment grade" with ratings from triple-A to Baa or BBB.

Q. I have borrowed my life insurance policy's loan value at 4 1/2 percent interest and invested that money in municipal bonds paying higher interest. Since I do not intend to repay the loan, should I cancel the policy?

A. That depends on the particular policy and your need for life insurance coverage. The policy's death benefit, of course, is reduced by the amount of the loan. If the remaining death benefit will be needed by those you leave behind when you depart this Earth, my advise is to keep the policy in force.

You have a problem of which you evidently are not aware.

You did the smart thing by borrowing on your life insurance policy and putting the money to work elsewhere. Everyone who has so-called "cash value" life insurance with low-interest borrowing charges should do the same thing.

But you goofed by putting that money into municipal bonds. You cannot take any tax deduction for interest on a loan, the proceeds of which are used to "purchase or carry" municipal bonds paying tax-exempt interest.

You'll be in trouble if the Internal Revenue Service catches you claiming that life insurance loan interest as a deduction on your income tax return.

Keeping up with the Joneses' economic cycle

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If there is anything that sets some families apart from the Joneses, or, if you prefer, allows them to keep up without straining, it is their ability to finesse the economic cycles.

It may be more art than science, and undoubtedly luck is an important factor, too, but some families seem to have an uncanny ability to buy when prices are low and borrow when interest rates are favorable.

BUSINESS MIRROR

They seem to have the good fortune to move into a home when interest rates or prices are in valleys, to invest in stocks prior to bull markets, and to time their automobile purchases when dealers are overloaded with inventory.

Science, art or luck, it can make an enormous difference in the fortunes of similar-income families in a world of economic ups and downs. Stable economies seldom produce big differences in fortunes.

All this is prelude to what is being widely viewed by professionals as an almost certain drop to come in interest rates, one that conceivably could make a vast difference in the fortunes of households.

To lock in a lower home mortgage rate, for instance, might mean tens of thousands of dollars over the maturity of the loan and the life of the borrower. Enough, perhaps, to provide for a world tour or college education.

The family with a $50,000 fixed-rate mortgage at 10.5 percent would pay $457.50 a month, $5,490 a year and $164,700 over 30 years. The neighbor with a 9.5 percent loan would save $444 a year and $13,320 over the three-decade term.

Many people comment that such small increments somehow get lost in the family's day-to-date activities in the marketplace, and therefore fail to manifest themselves in standard-of-living differences.

But those who practice thrift and those who teach it contend that differences do show up when multiplied by time. Savings also are multiplied by interest earned when banked, and by capital appreciation when invested.

The widespread belief that the economy is now headed toward a low-interest phase is bolstered by statistical reports suggesting an economic slowdown, and by a belief the Federal Reserve will ease monetary policy to avert a recession.

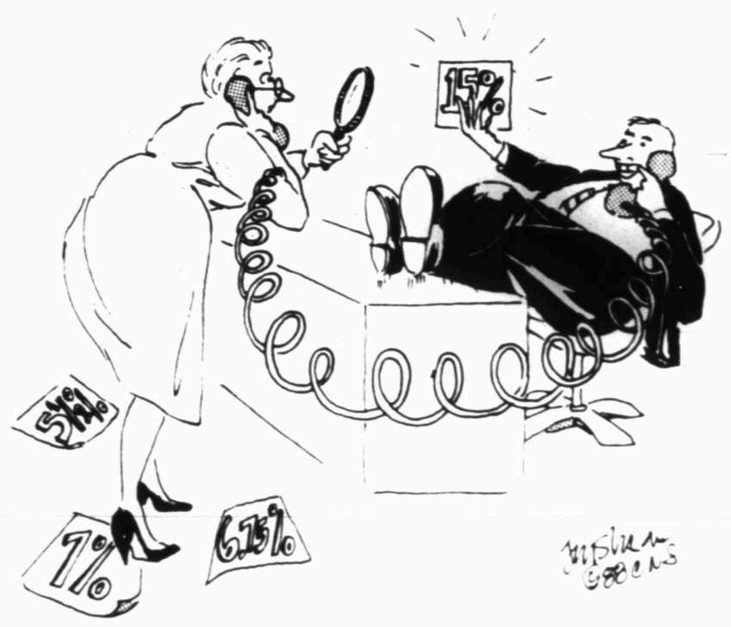

Adding to that theme is that fears of inflation, widespread just a matter of weeks ago, have abated. So have fears that lower interest rates would induce foreigners to pick up their funds and take them elsewhere to invest.

Moreover, the huge consumer market on which the economy has depended in recent years has turned cautious, as reflected by a decline of 3.8 percent annualized in the fourth quarter of 1987 and a sharp rise in the savings rate.

So convinced are some analysts of credit markets that they are looking beyond the dip, which some think might be brief, to a resumption of higher rates later in the year.

Don't be dazzled by double-digit claims

By CHRIS BARNETT
and ART GARCIA
Copley News Service

The telephone pitchmen are hawking safety, security and double-digit yielding government mutual funds, but take a hard look before you bite.

Those big numbers and the promise of Uncle Sam standing behind your investment sure look appetizing to investors who made a New Year's resolution to avoid the volatile stock market. But ask tough questions — and get satisfactory answers — before you write the check.

No sooner had 1987 become history than we got our first phone call. A broker with a San Francisco-based investment firm telephoned to say he had just discovered a new U.S. government securities fund that was paying almost 11 percent annual yield. Were we interested?

We were because, at the time, Treasury Bills, backed by the full faith and credit of Uncle Sam, were paying just under 6 percent annually.

But when the promotional material arrived, the temptress — Ginne Mae bonds yielding 10.65 percent annually — turned out to be just another bond fund paying a fat commission to our friend, the telephone salesperson, and an obscure but equally plump fee to the mutual fund management company to cover its mailing and promotional costs. In short, you pay to be sold.

Now we have no bone to pick with salespeople earning commissions. They have to be paid. But phone pitchers should give the prospect a few more facts on the first call and, conversely, investors should be alert to the wares being waved in their faces.

For example, these were Kemper and Franklin Ginnie Mae funds — load funds — where the first 8½ percent of your money goes into the salesperson's pocket. Next the Kemper fund assessed a 12b-1 fee of 1.25 percent annually, which is paid quarterly. On top of that, you pay the standard fee of about ¾ of 1 percent to the portfolio manager for managing the portfolio.

A San Francisco mutual fund watchdog firm, Brouwer & Janachowski, says there are so many red flags waving on this offer it's practically Flag Day.

"The state of California really frowns on 12b-1 fees over 1 percent a year," notes Kurt Brouwer, partner of the investment advisory firm and author of a book due out this spring, "Mutual Funds: How to Invest With the Pros" (John Wiley & Sons).

Ginnie Mae is a nickname for securities issued by the Government National Mortgage Association, a federal government agency. They are created from home mortgages that are originated mainly by savings and loan association and sold to GNMA, hence the term Ginnie Mae, explains Brouwer.

The agency "packages" billions of dollars of these mortgages and sells them to securities firms like Salomon Brothers, Goldman Sachs and Merrill Lynch. These investment houses, in turn, sell them to individuals or institutional investors like mutual funds, he notes.

But when a government securities or Ginnie Mae mutual fund advertises a "higher than market yield" — more than the individual bonds would command — that's red flag No. 1.

"It means they are advertising what is called in the business the 'trailing 12-month total return' which includes interest and capital gains/losses," warns Brouwer. "The fund is selling history."

Now in the fund's advertised quest for high current yield, "they could be damaging your long-term financial seucrity by unwisely shooting for short-term profits. The portfolio manager could be swinging for the fences using futures and options strategies to speculate on interest-rate movement in the hopes of capturing more capital gains to maintain the high performance."

Or, adds Brouwer, the portfolio manager could be buying "premium bonds" — priced above par, i.e., the face value of the Ginnie Mae — in order to get a high current yield.

"This is a heads-you-lose, tails-you-lose gamble. If interest rates spike up, all bond prices, including Ginnie Mae's, will plunge in value. And if interest rates go down, mortgage holders will refinance and that premium bond will be redeemed at par, hence the price of fund shares and the yield will both drop and you're left holding the bag."

Brouwer isn't torpedoing all Ginnie Mae funds. If he were buying one for his mother and father, he'd look for a no-load (commission free) fund with no or a very low 12b-1 charge that has a conservative portfolio strategy. As an example, he says Benham Government Income Trust "does not try to play games with pumped up advertising yields. They shoot for a high current yield but don't crapshoot with risky futures and options strategies."

Sums up Brouwer: "Jim Benham and his portfolio managers — and their clients — know there is no free lunch."

Morin, in town to help plan the convention, said plans were on schedule, and that members should be able to begin selling ads for the convention program in a week or two. He also told the group that sponsorships totaling $50,000 have been secured for each of the convention's main events.

For convention entertainment, Little Joe y La Familia, a leading Texas band sponsored by Stroh's Brewery will play at a dance for convention visitors on July 28 at Midland Center. This, the members agreed, would be an incentive that could bring delegates and visitors to the Midland convention a day early.

Investment group set to acquire Odessa petrochemical complex

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

El Paso Products Co., a major Odessa petrochemical facility, announced today that it will be acquired by a New York investment group.

Rexene Corp., the parent company of El Paso Products has announced an agreement to merge with two corporations (GJL Acquitions and GJL Holdings) controlled by Gilliam Joseph & Littlejohn, a New York-based investment firm. The agreement is subject to SEC approval and satisfaction of certain conditions.

Price of the acquisition was not revealed, but under terms of the agreement the two investment corporations will acquire 100 percent of the privately-owned stock and merge into Rexene. Rexene was acquired from Burlington Northern in January of 1984 by an employee group for approximately $210 million.

Founded in 1957 by Odessa oilman and industrialist William D. Noel, El Paso products is the largest inland petrochemical plant in the U.S. and employs a workforce of 1,270 from Odessa and Midland.

El Paso Products, which had $600 million in sales in 1987, said it would continue as the principal operating unit of Rexene and that it expected management and operations to remain unaffected by the merger.

El Paso Products Co. is a major supplier of Polyethylene, Polypropylene, Styrene, Amorphus Polyalphaolefins and specialty grades of plastic film.

HEDGE

"You can't think of it in terms of how much you might have if you'd bought earlier, held on longer or whatever. You've got to realize how much was made — or saved — by hedging a future position," he explained.

Annunziato said that while continued excess global supplies will keep prices weak for at least two to three years, he predicted that the extreme volatility of recent months will ease somewhat for the next couple months, until domestic demand picks up for the summer driving season.

Increasing domestic gasoline demand — which last year was at its highest levels since before the 1979 gas lines — is one encouraging sign for long-term oil prices beyond two to three years, Annunziato said. He added that reduced worldwide exploration, which points toward cuts in future available supplies will combine with economic growth — particularly in Pacific Basin nations — which increases global consumption to tip the supply-demand balance the other direction.

Sweet Treats for Sweethearts

Valentine's Day is a holiday for exchanging tokens of affection. It's also a time for sharing sweets with your sweetheart. Instead of presenting typical store-bought chocolates, dazzle your special valentine with a rich, luscious dessert you've made yourself.

Your sweetie will never know you've taken shortcuts in the kitchen when he or she bites into one of these special treats. Refrigerated all-ready pie crusts are the key to the simple preparation and homemade flavor of the beautiful, heart-shaped Sweetheart Lemon Cream Torte and the elegant Raspberry and White Chocolate Valentine Tart. The velvety chocolate French Silk Cookie Tarts and bite-size Cupid's Cherry Cream-Filled Cookies are easy to make, too, because they start with refrigerated spoonable cookie dough. With shortcuts like these, you have more time for the fun part—decorating!

Sweetheart Lemon Cream Torte

15-oz. pkg. All Ready Pie Crusts
2 teaspoons flour

Filling
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 3 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/3 cups milk
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 2 egg yolks
- 1 tablespoon margarine or butter
- 1 cup whipping cream
- 2 tablespoons powdered sugar

Topping
- Fruit (strawberries; maraschino cherries, drained; frozen raspberries, thawed, drained; or cherry fruit pie filling, drained)
- 2 tablespoons semi-sweet chocolate chips
- 1 tablespoon margarine or butter

Heat oven to 450°F. Allow crust pouches to sit at room temperature 15 to 20 minutes. Remove one crust from pouch; unfold. Press out fold lines. If crust cracks, wet fingers and push edges together. Sprinkle 1 teaspoon flour over crust. Turn crust, flour side down, on ungreased cookie sheet. Using paper pattern as guide, cut crust into heart shape.* Generously prick crust with fork. Bake at 450°F. for 9 to 11 minutes or until golden brown. Cool. Repeat with remaining crust.

In small saucepan, combine sugar, cornstarch and salt. Gradually add milk. Cook over medium heat until mixture boils and thickens, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. In small bowl, combine lemon juice and egg yolks; blend well. Add about 1/3 of the hot milk mixture to the egg yolk mixture, stirring constantly to blend. Stir egg yolk mixture into remaining milk mixture in saucepan. Cook an additional 2 minutes, stirring constantly. DO NOT BOIL. Stir in 1 tablespoon margarine until melted. Cover; refrigerate until cool.

In small bowl, combine whipping cream and powdered sugar. Beat until firm peaks form. Fold lemon mixture into whipped cream.

To assemble, place one heart-shaped pie crust on serving plate; spread with 1/2 of lemon filling mixture. Top with second crust and remaining filling. Arrange fruit around top edge of torte 1/4-inch from edge. In small saucepan, melt chocolate chips and 1 tablespoon margarine. Drizzle over lemon filling on top of torte. Refrigerate until serving time. 8 to 10 servings.

TIP: *To make pattern, cut a piece of paper into a heart shape about 10 1/2 inches high and 10 inches wide.

French Silk Cookie Tarts

(Pictured)

20-oz. pkg. Refrigerated Sugar Cookies
- 2 oz. (2 squares) unsweetened chocolate
- 1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
- 2/3 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1/4 teaspoon vanilla extract
- Fruit (strawberries, cherries, kiwi fruit, orange slices)

Freeze cookie dough for 1 hour or longer. Heat oven to 325°F. Generously grease 18 muffin cups. Slice eighteen 1/4-inch slices from frozen cookie dough.* Place in bottom of prepared muffin cups. Bake at 325°F. for 11 to 15 minutes or until golden brown around edges. Cool 2 minutes; remove from muffin cups. Cool completely.

In small saucepan, melt chocolate; cool. In medium bowl, cream butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating at medium speed 2 minutes after each addition. Blend in chocolate and vanilla; mix well. Spoon or pipe chocolate mixture onto cookies. Garnish with fruit. Store in refrigerator. 18 tarts.

TIP: *Prepare remaining cookie dough as directed on package.

Raspberry and White Chocolate Valentine Tart

15-oz. pkg. All Ready Pie Crusts
1 teaspoon flour

Filling
- 3 1/2 oz. (2 cubes) almond bark or vanilla-flavored candy coating
- 1/2 cup margarine or butter, softened
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 2 eggs

Topping
- 10-oz. pkg. frozen raspberries, thawed
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 2 tablespoons raspberry liqueur or 2 tablespoons water and 1/4 teaspoon almond extract
- 3 1/2 oz. (2 cubes) almond bark or vanilla-flavored candy coating

Heat oven to 450°F. Prepare pie crust according to package directions for unfilled one-crust pie using 10-inch tart pan with removable bottom or 9-inch pie pan. (Refrigerate remaining crust for later use.) Place prepared crust in pan; press in bottom and up sides of pan. Trim edges if necessary. Generously prick crust with fork. Bake at 450°F. for 9 to 11 minutes or until lightly browned. Cool.

In small saucepan, melt 3 1/2 oz. almond bark over low heat. Cool 10 minutes. Meanwhile, in medium bowl, beat margarine and 1/3 cup sugar until light and fluffy. Gradually add melted almond bark, beating constantly. Add eggs one at a time, beating at highest speed 2 minutes after each addition. Spoon into cooled crust. Refrigerate until set.

Puree raspberries by pressing through sieve.* In small saucepan, combine sugar and cornstarch; blend well. Gradually add raspberry puree. Cook over medium heat until thickened and bubbly, stirring constantly. Remove from heat; stir in raspberry liqueur. Cover; cool completely. Spread over filling.

In small saucepan, melt 3 1/2 oz. almond bark over low heat. Pour onto waxed paper-covered cookie sheet. Spread evenly to about 1/8-inch thickness. Cool on counter until hardened, about 25 minutes. Using heart-shaped cookie cutter, cut almond bark into shapes. Lift gently from waxed paper. Arrange hearts over surface of tart. Store in refrigerator. 10 servings.

TIPS: *Raspberries can be pureed in blender container or food processor bowl with metal blade; strain and discard seeds.

Cupid's Cherry Cream-Filled Cookies

20-oz. pkg. Refrigerated Sugar or Peanut Butter Cookies

Filling
- 1 teaspoon powdered sugar
- 1/4 cup chopped maraschino cherries
- 1 teaspoon cherry liquid
- 8-oz. pkg. cream cheese, softened

Glaze
- 3 cups powdered sugar
- 1/4 cup water
- 2 tablespoons light corn syrup
- 2 tablespoons margarine or butter, melted
- 1/4 teaspoon almond extract
- 2 drops red food coloring, if desired
- Maraschino cherries, fresh fruit, pressurized decorator frosting or candy hearts

Heat oven to 350°F. Spoon and shape heaping teaspoons of well chilled sugar cookie dough into balls. Place 2 inches apart on ungreased cookie sheets. Bake at 350°F. for 10 to 14 minutes or until golden brown.* Cool slightly; remove from cookie sheets with spatula. Cool completely.

In small bowl, combine all filling ingredients; blend well. Spread about 1 tablespoon filling on bottom of cooled cookie. Top with another cookie, bottom side down, to form sandwich. Repeat with remaining cookies.

In large bowl, combine all glaze ingredients; blend at low speed until moistened. Beat at high speed until smooth. Add 1 to 2 tablespoons additional water if glaze is too thick. Arrange filled cookies on wire rack over jelly roll pan. Spoon glaze evenly over tops and sides of cookies. Glaze that drips off can be reused. Let stand until glaze is dry. Decorate as desired with maraschino cherries, fresh fruit, pressurized decorator frosting or candy hearts. Store in refrigerator. 18 sandwich cookies.

TIPS: *Bake peanut butter cookies for 8 to 11 minutes.

Glaze should be thin enough to flow down sides of cookies and drip into pan below. If glaze is too thick, there will not be enough to cover all the cookies.

DEAR ABBY

Turnabout no longer fair play in dating game

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Would you please suggest some acceptable ways for a woman to return the favor of a date without escalating the relationship? Over the years, several men have invited me out repeatedly despite the fact that I never ended up in bed with them. Eventually I'd feel guilty because I wasn't giving them much in return, so I would invite them to my home for dinner — which apparently signaled that I was willing to go to bed with them. Then I had to tell them in so many words that's not what I had in mind.

My single women friends tell me that the reason men ask women for dates is to obligate them — hoping to get something in return.

I'm no shrinking violet, if you know what I mean, but I don't hop into bed with a man unless I really want to. And I never want to if I think that's the only reason he invited me out.

Any suggestions? — SINGLE BY CHOICE

DEAR SINGLE: All generalizations are useless. (Even this one.) But there are men who ask women for dates because they want the pleasure of their company. If she accepts, she shouldn't feel that she "owes" him anything. If she enjoys his company, then she can ask him to a concert, a party, a dinner out with the understanding that it's her treat. If he doesn't care for her enough to ask her out again, fine and dandy.

If a relationship is going to escalate, it will do so naturally without one pursuing the other persistently.

DEAR ABBY: In reference to filling out job application forms, I know it's against the law to inquire about an applicant's race, but I still come across it now and then.

I happen to be half-black and half-Comanche Native American, and whenever I see RACE on the application, I write "Human." It has gotten me some nice jobs, and lots of laughs. — LENA LAWSON, CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

DEAR ABBY: I may be a little late in commenting on your smoking column, but I still want to get in my 2 cents worth.

You cannot say too much about smoking, Abby. One of my daughters has smoked for 30 years. I pray I am dead and gone if she dies of lung cancer as a heavy-smoking friend of mine did recently.

Now my other daughter, in her 50s, is chain-smoking with her new friend, who smells like an ashtry. She was so against smoking all her life. I can smell her across the room even after she brushes her teeth. Her home sends out an odor to the porch even when the door is closed. She hardly ever comes here, and I cannot go into her house. She lives next door, and I have seen her only four times in four months. My heart aches, I can hardly sleep and I cry a lot. I pray that you will print this. — WEST VIRGINIA LADY

DEAR LADY: Your prayer was answered. Thank you for writing.

DEAR ABBY: I am a senior faculty member at a small liberal arts college in Virginia. Annually, our administration has a beginning-of-the-year reception for faculty and staff. Generally, this is a pretty dull affair, somewhat stilted and formal. This year, the invitation stated "Open House from 6:30 until 8:30." By 8 o'clock, the occasion became festive and quite pleasant. However, promptly at 8:30, all the food and drink were suddenly removed from every table and the lights were blinked off and on to signal the end of the affair!

This, in my view, gave the guests the impression that they were simply "hired hands" being tolerated for two hours, not professionally respected colleagues. Is my perception inaccurate? Or was such behavior simply "low rent," as we used to say in the South? — VIRGINIA LADY

DEAR LADY: Obviously the reception came to an end too abruptly. Blinking the lights to signal that the party is over is acceptable, but yanking the food and drink from the tables at 8:30 sharp is "gauche, b'gosh," as we used to say in Iowa.

DEAR ABBY: Our small office group (seven) recently took up a collection of bets and played paycheck poker. The person with the best poker hand among his paycheck's six digits wins the pool.

I held the winning checkstub (three 5s) and went to the gal who had collected the bets to show her my winning numbers. She checked them out, and then in the center of the office floor proceeded to flip seven $1 bills around her feet, saying in a voice for all to hear that the winner must pick up the bills and collect the money for the next payday pool. I was appalled and told her I felt humiliated. She said, "Think what it's doing for your waistline." (No one laughed.)

I went over to her desk later in the afternoon (after building up some steam) and told her how upset I was. She said it was a joke. Later I heard her telling others (ha ha) that she was surprised I should be upset over the "fun."

The next morning I returned everyone's money, saying that I would not be participating in any future pools and couldn't, therefore, accept my winnings. To the "lady" in question, I placed the $1 bill on her desk (not on the floor as many people had suggested) and told her I thought what she did was sadistic and unfunny. Is something wrong with my sense of humor? — NOT LAUGHING IN PHOENIX, ARIZ.

DEAR NOT: No. I think something is wrong with hers.

Chef impressed with hamburger flavors, dishes

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — When glancing through my recipes for meals that can be made in an hour, I am impressed by the number of hamburger dishes. Part of the appeal of hamburgers is that they can be teamed with a number of foods and flavors, altering their character with each addition.

The cut of beef to use is sirloin. It has the best texture and flavor. And one of the easiest garnishes is composed butter, or beurre compose. This is softened butter that has been blended with any number of flavors, including herbs or spices, and then served on meats, poultry, fish and vegetables. A good composed butter for hamburgers is made with garlic, shallots and fresh herbs.

At home recently I blended the ground meat with Dijon-style mustard and black pepper. The meat was then placed in a very hot cast-iron skillet and turned once or twice until cooked to the desired degree of doneness.

HAMBURGERS WITH GARLIC AND SHALLOT BUTTER

1½ pounds ground beef, preferably sirloin
Salt to taste, if desired
⅛ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
3 tablespoons finely chopped shallots
¼ cup dry white wine
1 tablespoon finely minced garlic
4 tablespoons butter at room temperature
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley

Put meat into a mixing bowl and add salt, pepper and mustard. Blend well, using your fingers. Divide mixture into four portions and shape each into a patty.

Combine shallots and wine in a small saucepan. Cook over moderately high heat about 3 minutes or until the wine is almost evaporated. Remove from heat and let cool briefly. Add garlic, butter and parsley and blend well.

Burgers may be broiled or cooked in a hot skillet. If they are to be broiled, preheat the broiler to high. Place burgers on a rack and place them under broiler about two or three inches from the source of heat. Cook about 5 minutes, turning burgers occasionally. If burgers are to be cooked in a skillet, heat the skillet, preferably a cast-iron one, until very hot. Brush it lightly with oil. Add burgers and cook about 2 minutes on one side. Turn and cook about 3 minutes longer, turning them occasionally.

Smear top of each burger immediately with herb butter and serve.

ALLUMETTE POTATOES

5 medium-size potatoes
10 cups vegetable, peanut or corn oil for deep-frying
Salt to taste, if desired

Peel potatoes and cut them into quarter-inch slices. Cut each slice into quarter-inch sticks. Drop pieces into cold water to prevent discoloration until ready to cook. Drain well and pat dry.

Heat oil to 365 degrees. Drop potatoes into hot oil and cook 7 minutes. At this point, they will still be pale. Drain and let cool.

Return potatoes to the hot oil and cook 4 to 5 minutes, or until potatoes are nicely browned and crisp. Drain thoroughly. Sprinkle with salt, if desired, and serve.

WATERCRESS AND HARD-COOKED EGG SALAD

2 bunches unblemished watercress
1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard
2 tablespoons red-wine vinegar
Salt to taste if desired
Freshly ground pepper to taste
6 tablespoons peanut, vegetable or corn oil
2 hard-cooked eggs, peeled and sliced or chopped
2 tablespoons coarsely chopped red onion
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley

Trim off and discard tough ends of watercress. Rinse and drain well. Shake or pat dry. Put mustard, vinegar, salt and pepper in a bowl. Blend with a wire whisk. Add oil, beating with the whisk. Add watercress, egg and onion. Sprinkle with parsley and toss.

WHAT'S COOKING

Kitchen is for family gatherings

EDITOR'S NOTE: This series of "What's Cooking" interviews will feature nonprofit organizations that have published cookbooks. This is the fifth article in a series of interviews with members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

After waiting three weeks for her kitchen to be remodeled, Janeen Pilkington has the spacious cooking area that she planned, designed for large family gatherings.

"I wanted the kitchen to be big enough so that I could cook with all four children in here and not bump into each other," she said.

A central island, surrounded by large areas of floorspace, is one of the features Ms. Pilkington designed. One of her most prized additions to the kitchen is an oven which she won with a $2 ticket at the Southern Living Cooking School in Odessa.

As an avid baker, Ms. Pilkington not only bakes her own bread, but grinds her own wheat. Church members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, where the Pilkington family attends, orders wheat by the barrel from Knorr Farms in North Dakota. "Three barrels makes 100 pounds of bread," she said.

Ms. Pilkington and her husband, David, an exploration manager for Meridian Oil, have been Midlanders for almost nine years and members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints for 15 years. Ms. Pilkington recently utilized her cooking talents by helping to prepare food for the church's annual fall conference gathering — about 250 people. She also made centerpieces created from small wooden houses to exhibit the theme based on Joshua 24: 15, "... as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Within the church, Ms. Pilkington is the Stake Relief Society president over all 14 of the Relief Society's (women's auxiliarys) in Texas.

"The Relief Society is the oldest women's auxiliary in the world," Ms. Pilkington said. "It was organized in 1842 to provide relief for other people in the church. All women automatically become members upon joining the Church. It's not an additional organization that you have to join," she said.

As Stake Society Relief president, Ms. Pilkington travels to other cities to speak to other Societies. She has studied Spanish and plans to speak to one group in Spanish with an interpreter on hand.

"I would like to go back to school and study Spanish," she said. "It's important to be able to communicate, and we should all be learning something new to further ourselves."

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram
Janeen Pilkington

The Midland Relief Society members compiled a cookbook, "Favorite Mormon Breads," which was handed out at the Church's Jan. 23 Open House. "We baked 100 loaves of wheat bread, fruit bread and cinnamon rolls," Ms. Pilkington said. "We started out with 400 cups and we ran out by 6 p.m.," she said.

Ms. Pilkington was Relief Society president in the Ward which made the 1984 Blue Ribbon Recipes cookbook. Her mother recently compiled a family cookbook titled "Memories are Made of This." The cookbook includes recipes and bits of information about the family members who contributed the recipes and occasions for which the recipes were used.

"The cookbook is really my mother's journal," Ms. Pilkington said. "She is quite a gourmet cook. As for myself, with four children and my job with the Church, I try to use quick and easy recipes."

Occasionally, the Pilkington's, who are certified foster parents, may have an additional child in the house.

Ms. Pilkington also has been active in the community and has served as Den Leader, unit commissioner for the Boy Scouts, PTA board member, with the Midland Association for Children with Disabilities and a soccer coach.

She said serving as a soccer coach was unplanned. "I had promised my four-year-old son for months that he could start soccer. When we went to register, I found out that four-year-olds could only join if they had a parent who would be a coach," Ms. Pilkington said. "My husband was serving on the High Council and traveling, and after promising my son for so long that he could join, I felt I had to volunteer."

With her active lifestyle, Ms. Pilkington tries to save time when cooking. One of the timesaving ingredients she has discovered is instant yeast. "You don't have to "proof" it first. You can just dump it into the recipe," she said. Another family favorite that requires little preparation is her Easy Sunday Roast. "We just put it in the oven on Sunday morning, let it cook, and when we come back from church its nearly done," she said.

Ms. Pilkington included some of her family's favorite recipes.

Fancy microwave chocolate mousse made in minutes

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Here's a microwave-cooked chocolate mousse that's ready for chilling in 12 minutes and tastes like that served in fancy restaurants.

12-MINUTE MOCHA MOUSSE
½ cup semisweet chocolate pieces
2 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon sugar
1½ teaspoons instant coffee crystals
2 slightly beaten egg yolks
½ teaspoon vanilla
2 egg whites
⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar
2 tablespoons sugar
½ cup whipping cream

In a 2-cup measure combine chocolate, water, 1 tablespoon sugar and coffee crystals. Cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 1 to 2 minutes or until mixture is hot and chocolate is soft enough to stir smooth, stirring once. Gradually stir hot mixture into egg yolks. Stir in vanilla. Beat with a rotary beater for 1 minute. Cool about 5 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Meanwhile, in a small mixer bowl combine egg whites and cream of tartar. Beat until soft peaks form (tips curl). Gradually add 2 tablespoons sugar, beating until stiff peaks form (tips stand straight). Fold about one-third of egg whites into cooled chocolate mixture. Fold mixture into remaining whites.

Beat whipping cream until soft peaks form. Fold into mixture. Spoon into 4 or 5 dessert dishes. Cover. Chill about 3 hours or until firm. At serving time, top with additional whipped cream and chocolate curls, if desired. Makes 4 or 5 servings.

"The doctor will see you now."

This Valentine's Day, bring someone you love to our Teddy Bear Clinic.

Injured teddy bears get the care they need, while kids and their parents learn more about children's health care — at Midland Memorial's free Teddy Bear Clinic. Bears will be admitted for stitches and other "procedures." Meantime, the children will enjoy a hospital tour and a safety program by Trooper Tex and McGruff the Crime Dog. Parents will receive free children's I.D.s (including fingerprints) and growth charts, as well as "Lifesaver" forms to authorize care for children who need medical attention when their parents are not with them.

It's all part of the Teddy Bear Clinic, for kids accompanied by their parents — and teddy bears accompanied by their owners. And it's all free, this Valentine's Day, from 1 to 6 p.m., with tours and teddy bear admissions starting every 20 minutes. The Teddy Bear Clinic is a community project from the volunteers of the Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary.

COOKING

CREAMED CORN

⅛ stick butter
¼ cup canned flour (canned flour doesn't lump)
1 package (10-ounce) frozen corn
2 cups milk

Melt butter in large frying skillet. Add the frozen corn when the butter bubbles. Cook over medium high heat until the liquid is boiled down. Stir in flour. Stir well and continue cooking until bubbles appear. Add milk and stir until thickened. Add salt and pepper to taste.

RHUBARB PIE

1⅛ cups sugar
3 tablespoons flour
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
1 tablespoon butter
2 eggs, well beaten
4 cups cut rhubarb (from frozen food section)
1 top and bottom pie crust recipe

Blend sugar, flour, nutmeg and butter. Add eggs, beat smooth. Pour over rhubarb (thawed and drained) in nine-inch pastry lined pie pan. Top with pastry cut in lattice strips. Bake at 450 degrees for 10 minutes and then at 350 degrees for 40 minutes. Serve with vanilla ice cream.

EASY SUNDAY ROAST

1 can French onion soup
1 3-5 lb. boneless chuck roast
1 package brown gravy mix

Take roast out of freezer. Put frozen (remove paper wrappings) into 9x13 inch pan. Pour can (undiluted) French onion soup over roast. Cover with foil. Bake at 350 degrees for 4 to 4½ hours. If not tender, bake longer. Potatoes and carrots can be added during last 1½ hours of baking.

Gravy:
Mix liquid from roast with one package brown gravy mix. Cook according to directions on package. Add water to thin only.

WHEAT BREAD

2 tablespoons instant yeast
⅓ cup honey
⅓ cup vegetable oil
⅓ teaspoon salt
2 cups whole wheat flour
About 6 cups of white bread flour

Mix three cups hot tap water with two cups whole wheat flour. Immediately stir in instant yeast. Add honey, oil and salt. Then start adding in the white bread flour.

When the dough pulls away clean from the side of the bowl, then quit adding flour even if you have flour left over. Knead for six minutes if using a dough hook in a bread mixer. If kneading by hand, then knead for about 10 minutes.

Let dough rise until doubled. Take it out of the bowl and divide it into four equal portions on oiled wax paper. Roll out and form into rectangles, then shape into loaves. Spray medium size bread pans with non-stick spray designed for baking. Lay one loaf into each pan. Let rise again. Bake in 350 degree oven for 35-40 minutes. Take out of pan and place on cooling rack. Butter top for soft crust.

CHICKEN AND DUMPLINGS

1 large hen
1 onion, cut in quarters
2 ribs celery, cut in pieces
1 carrot, cut in pieces
salt and pepper

In a large pot combine chicken and the rest of the ingredients, plus water to cover. Cover and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer until chicken is tender. A little water may be added as chicken cooks. Turn off heat. Remove vegetables and discard. Do not remove fat from broth, as it adds flavor to the dumplings. Cut chicken into serving pieces (remove skin and bones). Place chicken in bowl and add some broth to keep it moist.

Dumplings:
2 cups flour (may need more)
2 teaspoons salt
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup chicken broth

Mix above ingredients in a bowl. Add enough additional flour and mix until dough is no longer sticky. Mix flour in with your hands and knead. Use a pastry cloth and rolling pin covered with a stocking.

Dust the cloth and rolling pin with flour. (You will need to repeat this as you progress.) Break off a chunk of dough and roll out as thin as possible. With a pastry cutter or knife, cut one-inch wide strips of dough, then cut strips 2-2½ inch long. Place on wax paper. (Do not lay strips on top of each other or they will stick together.) Repeat with rest of dough.

Bring the broth to a rolling boil. Drop in strips of dough, one at a time. Reduce heat and simmer until dumplings are tender.

NOTE: Chicken and dumplings may be served separately or together.

Copley News Service

An Ojibwa legend says the Indians were busy gathering their autumn harvest when suddenly cold, wintry gusts descended on their campgrounds around the upper Great Lakes. The Great Bear opened his mouth high in the heavens, and snow fell.

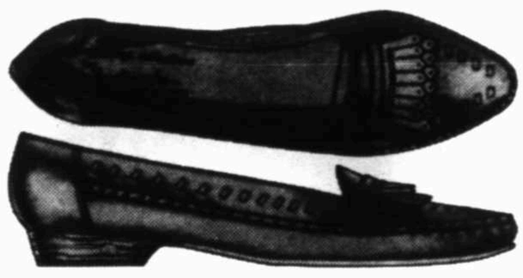

Desperately, the Indians appealed for a little more time to gather their crops. The Great Spirit heard their pleas and gave them a reprieve, a prelude to winter: Indian summer.

Ricotta cheese casserole low in fat content

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Here's a casserole that tastes like a million but has a fat content that's strictly skimpy. Ricotta and farmer cheeses are the low-fat ingredients that make the difference.

Some farmer cheeses are firm enough to shred, others are soft and crumbly, but either type will work in this recipe. Let lasagna stand for 10 minutes after baking to give the cheese time to cool just enough to cut easily and serve without stringing.

VEGETABLE LASAGNA
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
1 medium green pepper, finely chopped
1 medium onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tablespoon cooking oil
1 (16-ounce) can tomatoes
1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce
1 teaspoon dried thyme, crushed
1 teaspoon dried basil, crushed
1 teaspoon dried oregano, crushed
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon celery seed
2 bay leaves
8 ounces lasagna noodles
2 cups loose-pack frozen mixed broccoli, cauliflower and carrots
1 beaten egg
1 (15-ounce) carton ricotta cheese
1 cup shredded or crumbled farmer cheese (4 ounces)

In a large skillet cook mushrooms, green pepper, onion and garlic in hot oil until tender. Stir in undrained tomatoes, tomato sauce, thyme, basil, oregano, pepper, celery seed and bay leaves.

Meanwhile, cook noodles according to package, omitting salt; drain. Cook vegetables according to package, omitting salt; drain. Cut up large pieces. Combine egg, ricotta and half the farmer cheese.

In a 12x7½x2-inch baking dish layer ⅓ each of noodles, cheese mixture, vegetables and tomato mixture. Repeat layers twice. Cover with foil. Bake in a 375-degree oven 40 minutes. Remove foil; sprinkle with remaining farmer cheese. Bake 10 minutes more. Let stand 10 minutes. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Sodium called many names

WATERLOO, Ontario (AP) — Salt watchers should be on the lookout "for the prime sources of sodium, which you'll often find by reading food and drug labels," says Lou J. Smith, executive director of the Canadian Water Quality Association.

Smith says, "They are monosodium glutamate (MSG), sodium bicarbonate, sodium propionate, sodium benzoate, sodium hydroxide and sodium alginide."

New pepper plant varieties available to home gardeners

By PATRICK DENTON
Copley News Service

In evaluating vegetable entries growing in All-America Selections trial grounds, judges look for such desirable attributes as earliness, high and consistent yield, a long season of production, good flavor, high nutritional value, attractiveness of the plant, its tolerance to diseases and insect pests, novelty value and interest.

Two pepper varieties have received All-America Selections awards for 1988. Both bring something quite different and unique into the pepper variety choices available to the home gardener.

"Mexi Bell" is the first bell pepper with a mildly hot, pungent flavor. I very much enjoyed the light, mild tang in the flesh of this pepper. Our plants grew into nice clean bushes with abundant foliage and blocky fruits that turned chocolate and then red upon full ripeness.

I'm glad I labeled "Mexi Bell" very clearly and planted it apart from my other bell peppers, as I'm rather in the habit of munching into such things right in the garden. It would have been quite a shock to bite into a "Mexi Bell' and experience its surprising sweet-hot zing.

Apparently, the amount of hot flavor in "Mexi Bell" can be controlled by removing the white inner ribs for a milder flavor or leaving them on for a more pungent taste.

Peppers produce best in a sunny spot with light, fertile soil. I seeded our peppers in March into individual 4-inch-wide peat or plastic pots, and set the plants out at tomato transplanting time when night temperatures are remaining consistently above the 50 degree F mark.

The other award-winning pepper, equally unusual and intriguing, afforded me one of my more memorable experiences from last summer's garden. "Super Chili" is a hybrid hot pepper bred for compact size, ornamental value and high yields of bright, slender fruits borne upright on the plants.

Our "Super Chili" plants grew beautifully dense and bushy to about 18 inches tall with small leaves and masses of flowers and conical, pointed fruits. This must be an absurdly easy plant to grow. Since it was one of the last transplants I made into our garden, I had just about run out of prime pepper spots. But even in slightly crowded and less than full-sun conditions our plants were lovely and bore incredible numbers of fruits.

One day last summer as I was out surveying and tasting our pepper plants, it struck me how like the many ornamental pepper plants I had grown was "Super Chili." Now my Christmas pepper plants never produced the hot peppers they were supposed to. So I bit into a "Super Chili" pepper and my mouth caught fire. They are hot.

A 1988 award-winning vegetable that I initially viewed with some reluctance was "Salad Bush" cucumber.

"Salad Bush" surprised me. I seeded it indoors in 4-inch-wide peat pots along with three vining varieties of slicing cucumbers early in May and transplanted them outdoors in early June. "Salad Bush" grew and stayed perfectly clean with wonderfully healthy, deep green foliage.

Seed catalogs 'sprouting' with produce, recipes

Hearst News Service

Something's sprouted in the seed catalogs in the past few years — recipes. Even if you are not a gardener, these are handy for figuring out ways of trying new varieties.

Now Burpee's has gotten cookbook author Perla Meyers to whip up something a little more ambitious — two books of recipes, "The Spring Garden" and "The Early Summer Garden" ($8.95, Simon and Schuster). But why wait for spring? Check your produce section for what's available now, or use frozen vegetables for those that are too pricey or are not available fresh.

PILAF OF RICE WITH BROCCOLI AND PEAS

3 cups chicken stock or bouillon
1 teaspoon saffron threads
4 tablespoons unsalted butter
⅓ cup finely minced scallions
1½ cups long-grain rice
2 cups small broccoli florets
½ pound fresh peas, shelled to yield about ⅓ cup
3 tablespoons finely minced fresh parsley
Salt and freshly ground pepper

Combine the broth and saffron in a large saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat, and simmer for 25 minutes, tightly covered. Reserve.

In another large heavy saucepan melt the butter over medium heat. Add the scallions and cook for 2 to 3 minutes or until soft but not browned. Add the rice and stock, bring to a boil, reduce the heat, cover tightly and cook for 20 minutes or until the rice is tender.

While the rice is cooking, prepare the broccoli: Bring lightly salted water to a boil in a vegetable steamer, add the florets, cover and steam until crisp-tender. Reserve.

When the rice is done, add the peas, parsley and broccoli florets. Toss gently with two forks so as not to break the florets. Season with salt and pepper. Taste and correct the seasoning.

Breast Cancer Detection Unit Available to Area Women

An early read could save your life...

According to the American Cancer Society, one out of eleven women in the United states will develop breast cancer sometime in her lifetime. It is currently estimated that over 37,000 women die each year as the result of breast cancer.

Ninety percent of breast cancer are diagnosed by women or their physicians finding a lump in the breast. Women who are diagnosed with a lump large enough to feel have a 50 percent five year survival rate. A woman who is diagnosed as having breast cancer by mammography, before a lump can be felt, has a 97% five year survival rate. A mammogram can detect a cancer this small, • even before it can be felt. The American Cancer Society has established guidelines for a mmography in asymptomatic women. (Women who have no symptoms of disease). Those guidelines have been adopted by the American Academy of Family Physicians, American College of Obstericians and Gynecologists, and the American College of Radiology. Those guidelines are:

I. 35-40 years of age - One baseline mammogram.
II.. 40-50 years of age - A mammogram every 1-2 years depending on breast type and risk factor.
III. 50 years of age and over. An annual physical examination and annual mammogram.
IV. Asymptomatic women under 50 years of age with significant high risk factors should be examined at appropriate intervals. These risk factors include previous breast cancer and family history of cancer.
V. A symptomatic woman should have a mammogram at any age when she experiences a mass, nipple discharge, skin changes or unexplained breast pain.

A screening mammogram is an x-ray of the breast using extremely low dosages of radiation (usually comparable to dental x-rays) and is designed to find very early cancers.

A female technologist who is highly trained in mammography will perform the examination.

The charge for the screening mammogram is $50.00. The unit accepts cash, check, Visa, Mastercard and American Express.

Valentine's Day for indulging in chocolate

NEW YORK (AP) — As Valentine's Day approaches, thoughts naturally turn to chocolate.

When Spain's Maria Theresa became engaged to Louis XIV of France, she expressed her affection to her betrothed by sending him an elegant chest filled with chocolates. This may have been the very first chocolate Valentine.

The experts say the average American consumes over 11 pounds of chocolate each year. And when they choose to indulge, they go all out. As a result, gourmet chocolates have become very popular.

Americans simply cannot seem to get enough luscious chocolate treats, and they apparently don't mind running the extra mile, or paying the extra dollar to satisfy their sweet tooth.

"We're experiencing a fine chocolate revolution," says Gary Foote, director of marketing, Ferrero U.S.A., makers of Mon Cheri fine imported chocolate.

"People used to just reach for the sweet, gooey candy bars of their childhood. Today, it's high quality imported chocolates with richer taste and texture over sweetness," he said.

JOAN STEUER, PRESIDENT of Chocolate Marketing Inc., a New York-based consulting firm, agrees, "Thanks to the many imports on the market today, people are more discerning about chocolate.

"They want richer taste and smoother chocolates with exciting inclusions such as hazelnuts, wafers and macademia nuts. Fine chocolate is the fastest growing category in the candy market today."

It was the Spanish explorer Cortez who brought home from Mexico a drink made from cocoa beans and red pepper. Europeans began adding sugar, refining the process and adding other ingredients including milk, vanilla and nuts.

In 1828, a Dutchman, Conrad van Houten, came up with a method of pressing the oil, or cocoa butter, from the cocoa bean, creating a new product, cocoa powder, which eventually led to a chocolate that could absorb large amounts of sugar.

In 1847, the English firm of Fry and Sons began producing "eating chocolate," launching fine dark chocolate in the solid form that we know today.

Rich milk chocolate was developed in Switzerland by Daniel Peter and Henri Nestle. Milk chocolate began selling in 1875 and was such a big hit that countries such as Holland, France, Italy and Germany began making their own milk chocolate confections.

IT DIDN'T TAKE long before the chocolate craze reached America, and today, Americans are among the leading consumers of chocolate in the world. (The Swiss eat more chocolates than anyone in the world — consuming 22 pounds per person per year.)

To help consumers know their fine chocolate ABCs, Ferrero has put together the following quiz. Answer the following questions to find out how much you know about chocolate.

■ What does chocolate have to do with falling in love?

In many accounts from the 17th and 18th centuries, chocolate was reputed to be a drug capable of inspiring passionate love. Now modern science has revealed that chocolate contains a substance known as phenylethylamine that is similar to a chemical released in the brain when people fall in love.

■ What makes "fine chocolate" fine?

Fine chocolate is made from the best ingredients and flavorings. Quality ingredients such as Grade A cocoa beans, milk, sugar and vanilla are the key.

Chocolate must be fresh and well-tempered — that is, refined for greater smoothness. On the outside, it should have a beautiful sheen. On the inside, it should have a rich, smooth taste. Fillings such as nuts, liqueurs and caramels should have a distinctive flavor and texture.

■ Why is European chocolate especially prized?

EUROPEANS WERE the first to make chocolate based on an ancient Aztec recipe brought over by Cortez in 1527. They perfected this treat for centuries, continually refining the process and adding ingredients such as milk, sugar, vanilla and nuts.

■ How much caffeine does chocolate contain?

You won't get much of a caffeine charge from chocolate — one ounce has five milligrams; one cup of coffee contains between 93 and 153 milligrams.

■ What are some of the hot new trends in fine chocolate?

Americans are going crazy for molded chocolates, chocolate-covered macademia nuts from Hawaii and chocolate-covered potato chips.

Bite-size or small family packs of chocolates are also popular, as are ice cream bars coated in dense rich imported chocolate.

Here are some chocolate recipes to celebrate Valentine's Day:

This recipe for Amore Chocolate Torte has been provided exclusively to The Associated Press by the Campbell Soup Company:

AMORE CHOCOLATE TORTE

½ cup all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons cocoa
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 up finely crushed Amaretti di Saronno Biscuits (10 pair), divided
½ cup finely ground, chopped blanched almonds
4 eggs, separated
½ cup sugar
½ cup butter or margarine, softened
Chocolate hearts for garnish

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Line two 9-inch heart-shaped baking pans with wax paper. Grease and flour bottom and sides of pan.

In a small bowl, sift together flour, 2 tablespoons cocoa, cinnamon and baking powder. Add ½ cup of the biscuit crumbs, the ½ cup ground almonds, and mix thoroughly.

In medium bowl with mixer at high speed, beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Gradually add sugar, beating until stiff peaks form.

In large bowl, beat butter until creamy. Add egg yolks and remaining ½ cup of the crumbs, beat until thick and lemon colored.

Fold egg whites and cocoa mixture alternately into egg yolk mixture. Spoon into prepared baking pans. Bake 25 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pans 10 minutes. Remove from pans. Cool completely on wire rack. Frost with whipped chocolate frosting. Garnish with chocolate hearts.

Experts differ in quest for finest vanilla beans, extracts

New York Times News Service

Dinner included salad with vanilla vinaigrette, vanilla-glazed beef kebabs and vanilla cream seltzer. For professional reasons, the diners dutifully consumed eight vanilla custards, or at least took a thoughtful taste; each was made with a different vanilla extract or bean. Organizers of this unusual vanilla dinner, a gathering of the San Francisco Professional Food Society, had hoped to decide which vanilla was best. By evening's end they had a consensus of sorts: everything was delicious, even the kebabs.

But experts have strong opinions about what is the world's finest vanilla, and they seldom agree. Patricia Rains, the author of "The Vanilla Cookbook" (Celestial Arts, 1986), was once an advocate of vanilla from Madagascar. She now prefers the squat Tahitian bean, or Vanilla tahitensis, which, she insists, "has a much superior flavor."

Juan San Mames is the president of Vanilla Saffron Imports in San Francisco, which imports vanilla from all over the world. "Many of our clients have recently switched to the vanilla bean from Comoros, a small group of islands in the Indian Ocean," Mames said. "Vanilla is also grown in the Seyschelles, Mexico, French Polynesia, Indonesia, Uganda and the Tonga Islands."

MOST PEOPLE are unaware that the taste of vanilla depends on its species, where it is grown and how it is cured. The narrow, tapered Vanilla planifolia, sometimes called true vanilla or vanilla fragrans, is the most widely grown of the more than 50 species.

The reproductive parts of the vanilla plant are separated, which prevents it from pollinating itself. But in 1836 the Belgian botanist Charles Morren discovered a way to pollinate the plant by hand. This meant that vanilla could be grown in any area with the requisite tropical conditions.

Outside of its natural habitat of South America, vanilla has been known for only 400 years, since the Spanish first observed the Aztecs flavoring chocolate beverages with tlilxochitl, or ground vanilla pods. Once introduced to Europe, vanilla became prized as an aphrodisiac.

Except for saffron, it is the world's most expensive spice and is a lucrative commercial product. Vanilla is a member of the orchid family, the only one used for food. According to George Marcopoulos, the curator of orchids at the Conservatory of Flowers in San Francisco, vanilla starts out looking like "a heavy coarse vine with roots hanging down along the main stem." Even its flowers have no detectable fragrance; they last only a day or two, which is when the plant must be pollinated by hand.

THE PLANT produces what looks like long green string beans that have neither flavor nor fragrance. The beans are sweated, dried and fermented to release the aromatic vanillin and other flavor components. Inside each shriveled-up, crinkly brown pod reside tiny black dots of vanilla.

Traditional methods of producing vanilla may soon be passe. At the Escagen Corp. in San Carlos, Calif., vanilla is being reproduced without any beans at all. Instead, the flavor is produced by using vanilla cells.

According to Dr. Om Sahai, a senior research scientist at Escagen, "The logic is that any cell has the genetic information to produce anything that the vanilla plant can produce." Sahai said the process, now conducted only in the laboratory, should be commercially feasible in five years or so.

At present, no substitute can match the taste of real vanilla. Artificial vanilla, made from wood pulp or coal tar, is a poor replacement. It does contain vanillin, but this is only one of the almost 200 flavor components that give real vanilla its complex taste and aroma.

Travelers should beware of bargain-priced vanilla, especially in Mexico, where a look-alike bean called the tonka is often offered as the real thing in both extract form and as a whole bean. Not only is it fake, it also contains coumarin, a blood thinner that has not been approved as safe by the Food and Drug Administration in the United States.

FOR MOST COOKS, real vanilla is the only choice, either in bean form or as extract. The latter is made by immersing chopped-up beans in alcohol and percolating the mixture, much like coffee. But its high alcohol content, usually 35 percent, does affect the taste of the food it flavors. Other additives, like corn syrup, add nothing but weight and hence cost.

Ellen Szita, a San Francisco food consultant, said: "People are much more interested in the bean, going back to using the most natural form of things. And they're learning how to stretch the bean."

French staple produced in America

New York Times News Service

Some American cheese makers are now producing fromage blanc, long a staple in France. Fromage blanc is like an extremely smooth cottage cheese made from whole or skimmed milk.

The Vermont Butter and Cheese Co., in Brookfield, makes salt-free fromage blanc from cow's milk. It is sold in 6-ounce containers and has 37.5 calories and 113 milligrams of fat in a 2-ounce serving, according to the company. Zabar's in New York carries it for $2.29.

Brier Run Farm in Birch River, W.Va., produces a goat's milk fromage blanc. Greg Sava, who makes the cheese, said it had not been analyzed but added that most fresh goat cheeses have about 20 percent fewer calories and 30 percent less fat than cream cheese. Four ounces cost $2.25 at Zabar's. It is also available by mail from Brier Run Farm, Route 1, Box 73, Birch River, W.Va. 26610; telephone 304-649-2975.

Six from 11-1 Rebels due to sign letters of intent

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Six Rebels from Midland Lee's 11-1 football team are expected to sign athletic scholarship agreements today, the first day colleges are allowed to sign high school football players.

A 3 p.m. news conference has been called for today to officially announce the signings.

Three of Lee's players are expected to sign with Division I schools. Jimmy Fennell, District 4-5A's defensive most valuable player in 1987 and a three-year starter at Lee while earning second team All-State honors, will sign with Oklahoma. Jason Daniel, an offensive tackle, will sign with Nebraska. Those two players had committed to those schools previously Quarterback Geoff Rich will cast his lot with the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo.

All three players will be joining former teammates. Daniel will join Jake Young at Nebraska. Young started this year for the Cornhuskers as a sophomore. Fennell will be joining defensive end John Bradley at Oklahoma while Rich will be playing with former Lee graduate David Almand at Air Force.

Others Rebels expected to sign today include All-State lineman Paul Little with Kilgore Junior College, second team All-State lineman Charles Short with Texas A&I, and defensive back Eugene Farmer with North Texas State University.

Short will be reunited with former Lee line coach David Browning, who now is an assistant coach at A&I.

"I think anytime you send three kids to a Division I school, that's terrific," said Lee coach Earl Miller. "And to have six earn a college scholarship speaks well for the program we have at Lee. There are a lot of kids who never get the opportunity to play college ball."

Miller said there may be future possibilities for some other of his players to land some type of scholarships before the recruiting season ends.

"We have some smaller schools looking at some of our kids, but we don't know just where this will all end up right now," said Miller before adding, "I think we were caught a little short on some of the NCAA rules, like the requirement for core courses. It's unfortunate that some of the kids got caught up in that rule. A core course in Midland may be different than a core course up the road in Monahans. It's not a very standardized rule."

Midland High coach Doug McCutchen said he didn't expect any of his Bulldogs to sign today, but added that "several of our kids are exploring some possibilities. But none of them will sign today."

McCutchen did say that third team All-State defensive lineman Toby Box and honorable mention linebacker Clyde Govan, who is playing basketball now, would probably get the opportunity to play somewhere.

Govan told the Reporter-Telegram that he was talking with the University of Texas-El Paso, but said he wouldn't sign with UTEP today.

"We have some other kids who are shopping around, but we won't know much of anything about their status until this first recruiting wave passes," said McCutchen.

ENMU signs Ranger tackle

From Staff Reports

Steve Groeschel, a 6-3 1/2, 255-pound offensive lineman from Greenwood High School, is signing a football letter-of-intent with Eastern New Mexico University, it was announced by Greenwood Coach Bob Purser.

Groeschel was All-West Texas and All-District 5-3A. He lettered three season with the Rangers.

Last season, Greenwood posted a 5-5 record and tied for second in the district.

"We have a couple of other players visiting at Sul Ross State, but no other signings," Purser said.

Bowl wins pay off for Ags, UT in recruiting wars

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Bowl victories by Texas A&M and Texas were expected to propel them to bumper recruiting crops today, signing day for football national letters of intent.

Although UCLA, Louisiana State and Oklahoma will make big hauls, not as many top players will be leaving Texas as in the past. Many of those who stay will choose defending Southwest Conference champion Texas A&M and Texas.

The Aggies' impressive Cotton Bowl victory over Notre Dame gave Coach Jackie Sherrill the boost he needed for another talent haul.

Texas Coach David McWilliams' victory over Pittsburgh in the Bluebonnet Bowl showed recruits the Longhorns are on their way back.

The Longhorns' recruiting had suffered in recent years under former coach Fred Akers. McWilliams has been getting a big reception, particularly from offensive and defensive linemen.

Head coaches must stay in their offices Wednesday as the recruits sign on the dotted line. Assistants can gather the signatures beginning at 8 a.m.

No visits of any kind were allowed the last 48 hours as high school players got a chance to think in peace. Only telephone calls were allowed.

That's the only way Southern Methodist has been able to recruit, anyway.

New SMU Coach Forrest Gregg will have 15 scholarships available but the players who get them won't be on the field until 1989.

He's been limited to recruiting by telephone because of NCAA sanctions in a slush-fund scandal that reached the governor's office.

Irving tight end Drew Randall, who chose SMU over Rice and Princeton, has been the Mustangs' biggest commitment.

UCLA beat out A&M, Texas, and Oklahoma for Spring running back Kevin Williams. It was the third time in the past four years that the state's top prospect has left Texas.

Oklahoma got a commitment from Irving MacArthur's Reggie Finch, rated one of the best running backs in Texas. The Sooners have also received commitments from linebacker Joe Bowden of North Mesquite, halfback Ike Lewis of Dallas Wilmer-Hutchins, linebacker-defensive end Trey Tippens of Snyder and linebacker-defensive end Joe Green of Aldine MacArthur. Bowden is considered the No. 1 linebacker in Texas.

LSU was to sign such talented players as linebacker Tyrone Malone of Willowridge and defensive back David Walcup of Conroe.

LSU recruting coordinator Sam Nader says the Tigers don't have to recruit outside the Texas Gulf Coast area.

"We get criticized by our fans for not being national recruiters," Nader says. "But there's enough players in our recruiting area to where we don't have to do that."

A&M gained a late commitment from Cameron's talented quarterback Paul Johnson, who could also be a quality defensive back. The Aggies also should sign Robert Wilson, a bluechip running back from Houston Worthing.

Bulldogs' playoff hopes fade

ABILENE — The playoff hopes of the Midland High Bulldogs all but died here Tuesday night in a 71-53 loss to the Abilene High Eagles in District 4-5A basketball play.

The loss leaves MHS with a 5-5 district record with only two games left to play while Abilene High climbed up 7-2. Abilene High would have to lose the rest of its games while Midland High wins out and hopes San Angelo loses again to force an unlikely three-way tie for second place.

In fact, the AHS victory all but eliminated everyone but league leader Odessa High from the playoff picture. In San Angelo, Odessa High, now 8-2, downed the Bobcats 88-72 to earn at least a district playoff berth.

Greenwood's Rangers barreled toward the Class AAA playoffs with a pair of wins over Crane's Golden Cranes in District 6-3A action Tuesday night.

The girls, already the district titlists, posted a 45-37 win over Crane as Cherly Martin scored 15 points and Denisa McMullen added another 11. Nola Scarborough and Serita Hare each scored 10 for the Cranes.

Greenwood boosted its season's record to 21-4 and 9-0 in district play.

Greenwood trailed 11-17 after a period, but closed it to 21-22 at half before taking charge in the final period.

Greenwood takes an 8-1 record into Friday's doubleheader (boys and girls) with Alpine at Greenwood Friday. A win Friday would give the Rangers a hammerlock on a playoff berth.

Although losing, Crane outshoot Greenwood from the 19-9 arc 4-3.

Kermit, although beaten by Greenwood Monday, remained in the hunt with a 58-47 win over Alpine in action Tuesday to go 6-3 in district.

Lady Bulldogs lose to Abilene

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland High Lady Bulldogs completed their first losing basketball season in the history of the school at the MHS gym Tuesday night with a narrow 40-37 loss to Abilene High.

It was a game the Pack was close enough at the end to win, but didn't — much like the 8-20 season that is now only a bad memory.

"This season was hard on me, but it was hard on these girls, too," said MHS coach Jane Young, who suffered through her first losing season in her coaching career. "I think we have some great possibilities for next year since we don't lose anyone. Sometimes the only thing that helped us get back on the court this year was the fact that these kids are young and will be back."

Against Abilene High, MHS held a low scoring 16-13 advantage at the half. The two teams battled through three ties and 13 lead changes before AHS' Terra Alexander hit a basket to open the fourth quarter for a 29-23, six-point lead, the largest of the night.

Midland High's Tracy Lee then got hot with seven of her nine points in the fourth quarter to close the gap to one point, but Lee fouled out and Abilene High went quickly back to a six-point margin. MHS's Kim Jackson then scored four of her game high 12 points to move the Bulldogs to within two at 39-37 with 41 seconds left in the game.

Tomba could drop a Bomba on Games

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

He's superman on skis.

He's favored for gold.

He's Tomba La Bomba.

Alberto Tomba could shake up the Calgary Olympics the way he has shaken up the World Cup circuit.

The 21-year-old Italian won seven of the first 15 men's World Cup races this season, including four in a row. It was the longest streak since Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark put together a record 10 consecutive wins at the end of the 1977 and start of the 1978 seasons.

Tomba is the "new superman of Alpine skiing," says Josef Messner, coach of the Italian team.

Tomba is "one of the most powerful as well as mentally tough skiers I have ever known. ... He can win gold in Calgary," says four-time World Cup champion Gustav Thoeni of Italy.

A non-winner in his first two seasons on the World Cup circuit, Tomba has established himself as a serious threat for the overall title, even though he is not entering downhill races.

Switzerland's Pirmin Zurbriggen, the two-time overall champion, has virtually conceded the overall title to Tomba and says he has shifted his focus to the Olympics.

But Tomba also is looking toward Calgary, and his competitors hope that Olympic pressure — something Tomba has never experienced — will slow him down.

"The Olympics might create heavy pressure and turn him back into a normal person," said Guenther Mader of Austria.

Harald Schoenhaar, Alpine director for the U.S. Ski Team, agrees:

"We have seen it before, highly favored skiers who are all of a sudden not as strong in the Olympics or the world championships. Call it choking, if you like. It's common."

But he added: "Don't underestimate him. He's a gutsy young man, and he's been skiing phenomenally in slalom and giant slalom."

Other favorites on Mount Allan include the usual Swiss contingent — Zurbriggen, Peter Mueller, Michela Figini, Maria Walliser, Brigitte Oertli and Vreni Schneider — Marc Girardelli of Luxembourg, Markus Wasmeier of West Germany, Bianca Fernandez-Ochoa of Spain, Mateja Svet of Yugoslavia and Austria's Anita Wachter and Sigrid Wolf.

Host Canada also will be well represented, with potential medal winners Rob Boyd, Brian Stemmle, Laurie Graham and Karen Percy — all in downhill.

U.S. skiers, who won five medals at Sarajevo, likely will be absent on the medals stand this time because of several key injuries.

Tamara McKinney, probably America's best hope for a medal, has been sidelined since Nov. 9 when she broke a bone in her left ankle. Ski Team officials say she won't resume racing until the U.S. nationals, Feb. 4-8, the week prior to the Olympics.

Debbie Armstrong, who won the giant slalom at Sarajevo, has been plagued by injuries — and poor results — since 1984. Bill Johnson, gold medalist in the men's downhill, is still recovering from knee and back surgery and may not make the U.S. Olympic squad.

Eva Twardokens and Tori Pillinger are out for the year, and downhiller Doug Lewis, who has a broken collarbone, won't make it back until March, if then.

One of the few bright spots for the U.S. team has been slalom and giant-slalom skier Felix McGrath. Pam Fletcher and 18-year-old Hilary Lindh also have shown promise in the downhill.

"We have a lot of injuries, but we're not going to Calgary just to compete," Schoenhaar said. "That's not our objective. I'm not expecting any great finishes, but you never know.

"Nobody counted on Debbie Armstrong winning a medal in 1984, or on Diann Roffe winning a world championship medal in 1985. They were nobodies, but they pulled it out. We might have some surprises."

The first Alpine event is the men's downhill on Feb. 14. Swiss veteran Peter Mueller is the early favorite.

"He won by almost two seconds up there last year," Schoenhaar said, "and that gives you an idea of how much he likes the course."

A Mueller victory could be one of many medals won by the powerful Swiss, who may feel they have something to prove because of a sub-par World Cup season.

NBA Parity...

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The NBA is rapidly achieving parity, according to Bucky Buckwalter, the vice-president of the Portland club.

"I have never seen the league so evenly balanced," he said. "Any of the top teams can be beaten by a club that's up-and-coming. I still make the Lakers and Celtics the favorites to fight for the title but they both will run into nights when other clubs will give them a thumping. And, I think there might be as many as seven or eight clubs capable of winning the league championship."

Jordan, a mere mortal

Associated Press

After flying high during All-Star weekend, Air Jordan and the high-flying Chicago Bulls were grounded once the regular season resumed.

"It seemed like a letdown from the All-Star weekend," Michael Jordan said Tuesday night after the Detroit Pistons shut down Chicago 89-74. "I have to admit, I'm completely drained."

But he looked mortal on his home court against Detroit, shooting 7-for-22 from the field in scoring 20 points, about 14 below his average. He had only six points in the second half, including just one basket in the fourth quarter.

Hawks 112, 76ers 110

Dominique Wilkins scored 49 points, including the tiebreaking basket with two seconds left, and led Atlanta over Philadelphia despite Charles Barkley's career-high 47 points.

The 76ers lost in their first game under new coach Jim Lynam, who was promoted from assistant when Matt Guokas was fired.

Pacers 110, Lakers 106

Vern Fleming and John Long scored 19 points each and Indiana held off Los Angeles, ending the Lakers' seven-game winning streak.

Rockets 129, Celtics 120

Akeem Olajuwon scored 30 points as Houston beat visiting Boston, which got 44 points from Larry Bird.

The Rockets won their fourth straight and ended a seven-game losing streak against the Celtics.

Bucks 112, Cavaliers 104

Terry Cummings scored 29 points as Milwaukee held off Cleveland.

Mavericks 124, Jazz 93

Derek Harper scored 21 points and sparked a third-quarter burst that helped Dallas defeat Utah.

Is Oklahoma the real No. 1?

Associated Press

The Oklahoma Sooners are No. 1 in the Big Eight Conference. Nebraska Coach Danny Nee thinks they may be No. 1 in the nation as well.

"When I look at Oklahoma, I use superlatives," Nee said after the fourth-ranked Sooners whipped his Cornhuskers 92-77 Tuesday night. "I think they're very, very well-coached. I think they're a good defensive team and an explosive, powerful offensive team.

"They're a beautiful basketball team to watch because they're exciting, strong and talented. They seem to glide up and down the court."

The Sooners glided into first place in the Big Eight with a 7-1 record when 14th-ranked Kansas State lost to Missouri 79-75 and slipped to 6-1. In the only other game involving a member of the Associated Press Top Twenty, Michael Smith scored 24 points and Jeff Chatman added 21 as eighth-ranked Brigham Young rebounded from its only loss of the season and beat Miami of Florida 99-86.

Dave Sieger scored 19 points to lead five Oklahoma players in double figures at Lincoln, Neb.

Joining Sieger in double figures were Ricky Grace and Stacey King, each with 18 points; Harvey Grant with 16 and Mookie Blaylock with 12. Derrick Vick scored 16 for Nebraska.

Missouri 79, No. 14 Kansas State 75

Mike Sandbothe and Derrick Chievous each sank two free throws in the final seconds as Missouri beat visiting Kansas State for the seventh straight time.

Abilene High was led by the 16-point effort of Doug Brown while Dell Anderson had 12 points and Cornell McGee 10. Midland High got a game high 18 points from junior post Greg Lewis and Bart Saddler added 13 points.

The Bulldogs trailed by a narrow 30-28 margin at the half, but were routed by a 17-8 spread in the third quarter to absorb the loss.

Odessa High's Lester White pumped in 27 points to take any of the drama out of the key meeting with San Angelo while Victor Dancer and Tony Ellis each scored 16 and Ed Rheams 12 for a potent attack.

San Angelo also got some good scoring performances with 20 from Scott Marschall and 15 each from Colline Burdine and Bill Hollis and another 14 from David Brainard off the bench.

In the only other 4-5A game Tuesday, Abilene Cooper won its second district game in a row, the only loop wins they have this year, with a 78-76 double overtime win over Odessa Permian.

Tom Toney and Mitch Royals each had 20-point nights for the Cougars while Permian was paced by the 19-point effort of Chris Enriquez.

NHL All-Stars

Lemieux outshines Gretzky

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mario Lemieux capped a record-breaking night with his third goal and sixth point of the game at 1:08 of overtime as the Wales Conference beat the Campbell Conference 6-5 Tuesday in the 39th NHL All-Star Game.

Lemieux, who set up the Wales Conference's first three goals and scored the fourth, had given his team a 5-4 lead at 8:07 of the third period. But Luc Robitaille tied the score by beating goaltender Patrick Roy for his second goal of the game with 3:32 to go in regulation, sending the game into overtime.

BUT LEMIEUX, the NHL's leading scorer, wasted little time in getting the game-winner. He picked up a feed from Mats Naslund, who finished with a record-setting five assists, shook off a check in front and put a backhander through the legs of goaltender Mike Vernon.

Lemieux, of the Pittsburgh Penguins, was named the game's Most Valuable Player for the second time, having captured the award in 1985.

The victory was the fourth in a row and 10th in 12 games for the Wales Conference since the current format was adopted in 1975.

Lemieux set up a first-period goal by Tomas Sandstrom and assisted on second-period goals by Mike Gartner and Peter Stastny before scoring his first goal at 11:34 of the second period to give the Wales Conference a 4-2 lead.

After Denis Savard's goal at 5:19 evened the score at 4-4, Lemieux made it 5-4 with 11:53 to play in regulation by beating Vernon with a high shot after taking a pass from Naslund.

It also broke the All-Star record of four points in a game, held by six players.

THE GAME, before a standing-room-only crowd of 17,878, was played under the cloud of the death of former St. Louis Blues defenseman Barclay Plager, who died of a brain tumor last Saturday. Plager, who was scheduled to be an honorary co-captain of the Campbell Conference team, was honored in pregame ceremonies.

Dale Hawerchuk's goal gave the Campbell Conference a 1-0 lead at 3:25 of the first period.

Edmonton's Wayne Gretzky put the Campbell Conference up 2-1 with a 30-foot slapshot from the left circle at 18:46, beating Hextall cleanly on the stick side.

THE WALES Conference tied it 2-2 at 4:28 of the second period on a play that was almost identical to their first goal.

This time, Lemieux went in on a break with Gartner and fed the Washington forward with a perfect setup pass across the slot. Gartner drilled the puck past Fuhr, again on the stick side.

Lemieux picked up his third assist at 10:08, setting up Stastny for a power-play goal to give the Wales Conference a 3-2 lead.

The Pittsburgh star put the puck on net from the right circle and Stastny, a center with the Quebec Nordiques, deflected it over the goal

FANS LAP UP REDS TIX— The Cincinnati Reds are selling tickets for the 1988 season at a record pace, despite three straight second-place finishes in the National League West. The Reds already have sold out their opener on April 4, the earliest such sellout in the history of Riverfront Stadium. Season ticket sales stand at 14,600. The club record of 15,166 season tickets was set in 1980 after the Reds won the NL West in 1979.

JUDGE RULES AGAINST CADE— A Green Bay, Wis., judge refused to dismiss a perjury charge against Packer Mossy Cade, who is serving a prison term for sexual assault. DA Donald Zuidmulder said the complaint did not spell out specifically the lie Cade is accused of telling.

SIMS TABBED— Former All-Pro running back Billy Sims must pick up the tab for the legal bills an agent ran up during a USFL-versus-NFL court battle, the Michigan Court of Appeals has ruled. A three-judge panel agreed that Sims should pay the legal bills incurred by Career Sports Inc., which negotiated Sims' last NFL contract, a $4.5 million deal with the Detroit Lions that kept him from defecting to the USFL's Houston Gamblers.

AGREEMENT— Texas Rangers agreed to try to keep the pitcher Edwin Correa off duty from sundown Friday to sundown Saturday, while Correa, a Seventh-day Adventist, said he woud help out when necessary...

SWC PICKS MAYS— Texas guard Travis Mays earned men's SWC basketball player of the week honors while SMU's Felicia Bluitt was named women's player. Mays accounted for 42 points, 19 rebounds and three assists in helping the Longhorns to victories over Baylor and Arkansas. Mays had 25 points and 13 rebounds against first-place Arkansas and 17 points and six rebounds against Baylor. Bluitt, a Dallas native, scored 28 points, grabbed 13 rebounds, had 13 steals and handed out seven assists in helping the Lady Mustangs to victories over Texas-San Antonio and Texas A&M.

BAYLOR SIGNS— Don Baylor signed a one-year contract with the Oakland Athletics and said the team's main selling point was the promise of at least 300 at-bats in the coming season. At least three other clubs were interested in Baylor, 38, and one of them, the Kansas City Royals, made an offer that included a front office job after he ended his playing days.

BYRD PICKED— Charles Byrd of West Texas State and Meshell Graham of East Texas State were named players of the week in men's and women's basketball in the Lone Star Conference. Byrd, a 5-11 senior from Clovis, N.M., scored 73 points and had eight steals last week as the Buffaloes won three conference games to stay in contention for the league championship. Graham, a 6-0 senior from Greenville, came within one point of the LSC scoring record with 43 points in Saturday's 93-85 victory over Eastern New Mexico.

Sherrill wants Kickoff changed

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The Kickoff Classic hit a snag Tuesday trying to line up an opponent and a suitable date for Texas A&M in the game that will open the college football season in late August.

"Because certain key people involved in the selection process are traveling, it became impossible to make all the phone calls today and complete all the discussions," Bob Mulcahy, president and chief executive officer of the New Jersey Sports & Exposition Authority, which puts on the game at Giants Stadium, told the Associated Press. "It may take 48 hours to resolve."

Mulcahy had said earlier in the week that the pairing for the sixth annual Kickoff Classic would be announced Tuesday.

THE AP reported over the weekend that Texas A&M, winner of three straight Southwest Conference championships, had accepted an invitation. Coach Jackie Sherrill said Tuesday night he would prefer that the Kickoff Classic be played on Thursday night, Aug. 25.

Under NCAA rules, the earliest a college football game can be played is Sept. 1 unless that date falls on a Sunday or Monday, in which case regular-season games can be played on the preceding Saturday.

However, an exception is made for the Kickoff Classic, which the NCAA manual specifies is to be played "in the week prior to the beginning of the traditional fall season." This year, the first games other than the Kickoff Classic are scheduled for Sept. 3.

TEXAS A&M, 10-2 last year and No. 10 in the final AP rankings, already has September games scheduled against LSU, Alabama and Oklahoma State. If the Aggies play in the Kickoff Classic, Sherrill would like to have as much time as possible between that game and a trip to LSU on Sept. 3.

IOC wipes out sexuality clause

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — The International Olympic Committee struck a blow for sexual equality in sports Tuesday, erasing from its constitution a clause that could have restricted participation of women in the Games.

The panel's 93rd Session voted to delete from the Olympic Charter Rule 28, which made participation by women athletes conditional on approval by international sports federations and the IOC itself.

The charter contains no such restrictive language for men.

"The session voted to delete Rule 28 because it was felt to be discriminatory to women and no longer applies to the present world," Michele Verdier, the IOC spokeswoman, said.

Later, it awarded the Olympic Order, the IOC's highest honor, to 16 people, including Prince Ranier of Monaco, a former IOC member and the father of his country's present representative, Prince Albert.

It also presented the Olympic Cup to Australia in honor of the nation's bicentennial. The IOC said the award commemorated "the importance of sport in the Australian community and the country's strong commitment to the Olympic movement."

Opening a three-day session that Verdier described as "a rather straightforward agenda," the IOC heard reports from a string of commissions and panels.

The head of its medical commission, Prince Alexander de Merode of Belgium, described the new, $1.5 million laboratory that will be used to test for drugs among the 1,500 athletes competing in the Winter Games that start Saturday.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡

If we were asked for a one-word formula for better play, we would have no problem: Count! Not just points, but also suit length, so that you can gain a picture of all the hands. Had East done so, he might have avoided a fatal error on this deal.

Despite 19 points in high cards, South did not feel any compulsion to jump shift at his second turn. There was no established fit, so there was no reason to consume bidding space when the final destination was not yet clear. When North showed a reasonable hand with his jump preference, South made up for his conservative approach by bidding what he thought he could make.

West made the natural lead of the top of his sequence. Declarer won, drew trumps in two rounds, cashed the ace of hearts and then ran the jack of diamonds to East's queen. Since a heart return would give declarer a ruff-sluff (declarer would have ruffed a heart loser in dummy had he held one) and a diamond would lead into the table's tenace, East decided his best chance was to find partner with the jack of spades. Unfortunately, that was not the case, and declarer claimed the rest of the tricks.

Had East stopped to count the hand, he could have given his side a fighting chance. Declarer obviously held five clubs, four spades (he did bid the suit), two hearts and two diamonds. A diamond return into the board's tenace would give declarer one discard, but not his contract. South would still have three spades, and either he would have a natural spade loser if West did have the jack, or else he would have to guess the location of the queen to succeed.

Second Miss Minnesota-USA resigns after disclosure of shoplifting incident

APPLE VALLEY, Minn. (AP) — The first runner-up in the Miss Minnesota-USA pageant, who was tapped to replace Sue Bolich when she resigned after being charged with shoplifting, also has withdrawn following the disclosure that she had been arrested on shoplifting charges herself, pageant officials said.

Frank Sweeney, state director of the Miss Minnesota-USA pageant said late Tuesday night that he had spoken with Jolene Stavrakis, 20, and her father and said the woman had withdrawn as a contestant in the Miss USA Pageant in El Paso, Texas, where Miss USA will be crowned March 1.

"In light of recent publicity, she has withdrawn from competition," Sweeney said. "I have honored that request. We will go in proper order and I will contact the second runner-up." He declined to elaborate further and said he didn't know who the second runner-up was.

Ms. Stavrakis was arrested March 6, 1986, at the Donaldson's store in Burnsville for taking two skirts valued at a total of $76, Burnsville police told WCCO-TV.

Ms. Stavrakis was stopped by store security employees who detained her for police. She also was wanted on two traffic warrants, which were served on her at the time of the arrest, police told WCCO.

Her father, Richard Stavrakis, said his daughter paid a fine and said he thinks she pleaded no contest to the charges.

Ms. Bolich, 24, of Mound, was arrested Jan. 22 at a Dayton's store in Edina and was charged with gross misdemeanor theft. Police accused her of stealing $370 worth of clothing, including a swimsuit, scarves and hairpieces. She is scheduled to go to court next month.

Ms. Bolich resigned Monday and Ms. Stavrakis spent Monday and Tuesday night with Ms. Bolich and Christine Rosenberger, the 1986 Miss Minnesota-USA, preparing for the pageant.

Ms. Stavrakis could not be reached for comment following her withdrawal.

PHILADELPHIA (PA) — Composer Henry Mancini and four music companies dropped a $10,000 copyright lawsuit after a tavern agreed to buy a $500 music license.

Mancini

Mancini, Northridge Music Co., Jerry Leiber Music, Mike Stoller Music and SBK Catalogue Inc. sued The Fun House of Bethlehem last November, accusing the bar of failing to buy a permit to allow local bands to perform popular songs.

The plaintiffs dropped the suit Tuesday after bar owners Christopher and Tina Kowalski agreed to purchase the $500 license from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, as required by federal copyright laws.

"First, we didn't know we had to pay ASCAP to play the music," Mrs. Kowalski said. "Then, we never know all the music the bands are going to play, anyway. More than half the time, it's original stuff."

Mrs. Kowalski said ASCAP agents investigated The Fun House last July when a band known as The Vultures performed "Peter Gunn," a Mancini score.

The Fun House's lawyer, Charles Osinski, said he considered the settlement fair.

LONDON (AP) — "Hope and Glory," John Boorman's autobiographical movie about London during World War II, dominated the nominations for the 1987 awards from the British Academy of Film and Television Arts.

The movie, a hopeful in next week's Oscar nominations, took 13 of the 68 nominations in 17 categories announced Tuesday, including best picture, Boorman for best director and Sarah Miles for best actress.

Also nominated for best picture were Woody Allen's "Radio Days," Richard Attenborough's "Cry Freedom" and "Jean de Florette."

Winners in the craft division will be announced March 13. Those in production and performance will be announced March 20.

Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Boy Scouts of America praised Nancy Reagan for her battle against drug abuse by presenting the first lady with the organization's highest award for volunteer service to youth.

President Reagan placed the beribboned Silver Buffalo award on Mrs. Reagan's shoulders Tuesday in an Oval Office ceremony attended by top Boy Scout officials and a half-dozen Scouts from around the country, the White House said.

Mrs. Reagan is the first wife of a sitting president to receive the award, said her spokeswoman, Elaine Crispen.

The Silver Buffalo, which Reagan received in 1983, was established in 1926 to recognize those who have made an outstanding contribution to the nation's youth.

NEW YORK (AP) — A bitter tale written by F. Scott Fitzgerald three years before his death but never published is a herald of black humor and offers new insight into his days of despair, according to literary scholars.

"It's a Woody Allen joke that was 50 years ahead of its time," said Stephen Ferguson, curator of rare books and special collections at the Princeton Library.

"A Full Life," written in 1937 but rejected by Redbook magazine and then lost for 40 years, will make its print debut next week, The New York Times reported today.

The story will be published in the winter edition of the Princeton University Library Chronicle, which has a circulation of 1,400.

The tale was written when the author, having turned 40, was feeling his age and when his wife, Zelda, was in a mental hospital.

The heroine is first married to a munitions heir and then to a wealthy French count before she becomes a human cannonball in a traveling circus. She says "I'm full of dynamite" and detonates herself "with a tremendous bang."

"It's also a record of one of his attempts to resurrect the heroine of his earlier fiction, the bright spoiled young thing," said Professor James L.W. West III of Penn State University, who found the tale more than a decade ago. "It turned out to be an unsuccessful attempt and a frustrating experience for him."

The one surviving copy of the story, which none of Fitzgerald's biographers mentioned, was found in the Princeton Library in an adjunct section of the author's papers there. The batch of papers had come to Princeton after the rest of the collection of the author's papers had been cataloged, the newspaper said.

Small plane takes off without pilot

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — A single-engine Cessna took off from the Texarkana Regional Airport without a pilot on Tuesday.

Pilot Donald Warnke of Dallas, who had stopped to refuel, was spinning the plane's propeller to restart it when the aircraft took off unmanned, fire officials said.

The Cessna 183 R.G., owned by William Klein of Dallas, lumbered about 250 yards through a field of weeds between an airplane fuel station and the Airport Industrial Park, authorities said.

The aircraft sheared a wing on a pine tree, cut through a barbed-wire fence, rolled down a slope and slammed to a halt. Authorities said two wheels broke off in the field, and the torn wing was tangled in a tree.

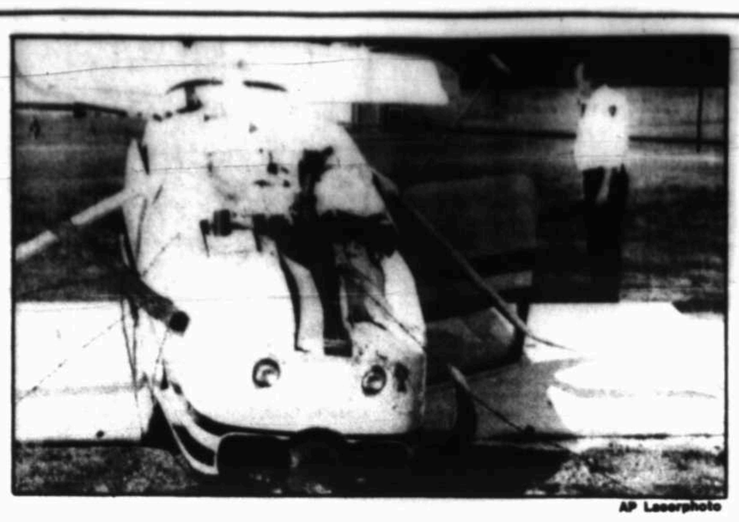

No one was injured, but the plane sustained heavy damage and about 75 feet of barbed wire was torn down, said Texarkana Fire Chief Mike Hughes.

Warnke told fire officials the aircraft was switched off and the parking brakes were set when the plane lurched down the runway. He declined comment to reporters.

Inmate seeking stay

HOUSTON (AP) — Death row inmate Calvin Williams, convicted of strangling a woman during a 1980 burglary, is hoping a federal judge will halt his execution set for early Thursday.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals last week refused to block the execution, which would be the second this year. Thursday's execution date is Williams' fourth.

A single engine Cessna took off Tuesday leaving the pilot behind. Donald Warnke of Dallas had stopped in Texarkana, Ark., to refuel and when he deplaned he apparently had left the throttle open.

His attorney, Craig Washington, took the case to the federal courts, where it was assigned to U.S. District Judge Lynn Hughes. Hughes was attending a judicial conference in Huntsville and had not ruled on the case, a court clerk said Tuesday.

Washington contends the Texas death penalty law is flawed in that it does not allow jurors to consider mitigating circumstances and forces them to return a death verdict. The jury at Williams' 1980 trial took just six minutes to decide he should be put to death.

Williams, who prosecutors say began assaulting women at the age of 13, has said he will put up a fight if prison officials attempt to put him to death as scheduled.

Williams, 27, was convicted of strangling Emily Anderson, 28, of Houston. Her nude body was found with a pair of panty hose wrapped around her throat. She was killed during a daylight burglary of her boyfriend's apartment.

Williams acknowledges breaking in to the apartment where the woman was slain, but insisted the burglary occurred a month before the killing. His fingerprints, however, were found in Miss Anderson's stolen car, recovered a few blocks from Williams' home.

Texans invited to cook-off

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Santa Fe will put its title of Mexican Food Capital of the World on the line Nov. 10 in a cook-off pitting Santa Fe chefs against those in 10 other cities.

Santa Fe cooks brought the title back last November in a contest in Tucson, Ariz., against cooks in four other cities. Santa Fe chefs will have a cook-off Oct. 16 to decide who will defend the capital city's title.

Cities are being asked to submit entries in five categories, including chili con carne, green chili, salsa, chef specialties and Mexican dessert.

The idea for a chili cook-off began when Tucson's then-mayor, Lew Murphy, declared his city the Mexican Food Capital of the World. Other communities in the region demanded a contest.

Santa Fe contest officials said they plan to invite Tucson and Phoenix, Ariz.; El Paso, Amarillo, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio and Austin, Texas; Albuquerque, Denver, Los Angeles, San Diego, Kansas City, Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Okla. The first 10 to respond will be assured of places in the contest, while the others will be assigned as alternates.

UTEP finalist withdraws

EL PASO (AP) — A finalist for the University of Texas-El Paso presidency has decided he doesn't want the job.

Samuel Kirkpatrick, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences at Arizona State, told UT System officials Monday he no longer wants to be considered.

Four others are still in the running, said James Duncan, the UT System official who headed the committee that selected the finalists.

The UT System Board of Regents plans to select the new president Thursday. The president is scheduled to meet the press in El Paso the next day.

Kirkpatrick said he made the decision last week. Several factors played a role in his decision, he said, including his children's residency in Arizona.
