Cardinal of 2nd largest archdiocese denies allegations of sexual abuse

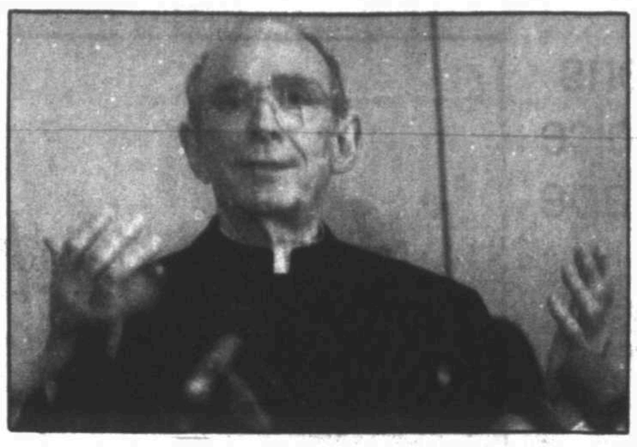

CHICAGO (AP) — Cardinal Joseph Bernardin, spiritual leader of the nation's second largest archdiocese, was accused Friday in a lawsuit of sexually abusing a teen-ager more than a decade ago. Bernardin, the highest ranking U.S. Roman Catholic official to be accused of sexual abuse, insisted he was innocent.

"I know the allegations are totally false," the cardinal said at a news conference. "I am 65 years old and I can tell you that all my life I have lived a chaste and celibate life."

The allegations were made by Steven Cook, 34, in a $10 million lawsuit filed Friday in U.S. District Court in Cincinnati.

Cook, who lives in the Philadelphia area, said Bernardin abused him between 1975 and 1977, while Cook was in a high school program at a Cincinnati

MPD uncovers drug buys

Undercover investigation leads to 36 arrests

A Midland police officer handcuffs a drug suspect before taking her into custody during an early-morning drug raid on Friday.

An investigation into drug activities on Lee Street culminated in a major drug bust Friday by the Midland Police Department and other area law enforcement officials.

Midland police officials attempted to arrest 42 Midland residents, including two juveniles, on 62 counts of delivery of a controlled substance. Indictments for the residents were handed down on Sept. 29.

By mid-morning, officials had arrested 24 of the 42 residents. Midland police were assisted by officers from the Midland County Sheriff's office, Odessa Police Department Narcotics Unit, Texas Department of Public Safety Intelligence Section, U.S. Marshal's Service, Drug Enforcement Administration, Permian Basin Drug Task Force, and the Midland County District and county attorney's office.

Lt. Damon Shupp, of the Midland Police Department's Special Investigation Division, said officers from the department's narcotics unit, field operations division and investigations division began an undercover operation in the Lee Street area about six to seven months ago. He said the investigation spread to other parts of the city as officers gathered more information about drug dealers during undercover buys.

The cases were turned over to the Midland County District Attorney's office and then to the Midland grand jury

Former senator talks about war, politics, flying

■ Barry Goldwater speaks in Midland at CAF's American Airpower Heritage Museum symposium.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

While Barry Goldwater doesn't foresee "any major wars on the horizon right now," the former Arizona senator, 1964 Republican presidential candidate and World War II pilot said in Midland on Friday that world hostilities could be lessened if people would just "talk to each other in a friendly way."

Besides, it's the world leaders and not their people who bring about war.

"The more people in this world who can talk to each other in a friendly way, the less chances we have for fighting," Goldwater said at the American Airpower Heritage Museum symposium, "A Sleeping Giant Awakens," at the Confederate Air Force Headquarters at Midland International Airport.

"And any of us who have been through one war will tell you that's enough."

The 85-year-old Goldwater in his talk, "The World Today," said, "I think our foreign policy should be extremely well thought out, not necessarily requiring congressional approval, because, God knows, that's the best way to ruin the country," Goldwater said.

The nation's leadership should be "able to intelligently and systematically figure out where the world is going and what can we do to help it."

Goldwater said he advocates "dropping food where food is needed, ... but not dropping bombs just for the hell of it, because somebody is going to shoot back."

In reflecting on the Vietnam War, Goldwater said that President Kennedy in the early 1960s made a mistake when he "sent 15,000 Marines (to Vietnam as advisers) and said, 'Don't shoot back.'

"Why the hell do you go to war for?" said Goldwater, whose books include "The Conscience of a Conservative."

"All of the other mistakes we made in Vietnam were made at the feet of politicians who thought more of getting votes than they did of winning wars."

Official: Quality of public education progresses despite stricter standards

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

ODESSA — Despite news reports to the contrary, public education in Texas has improved due to tougher standards in recent years, according to the Texas State Teachers Association.

"We're not saying everything is rosy but it is better than what we are given credit for," TSTA vice president Ignacio Salinas Jr. said Friday at a news conference.

As proof, Salinas cited findings of a recent TSTA report: "Public Schools: Tougher Than You Think . . . And Getting Tougher."

"It is 10 times more academically challenging for students today than it was a decade ago," Salinas said.

The report found that school curriculum has become progressively more difficult, there are more rigorous testing programs, and stronger teacher evaluations have been implemented.

Along with stricter academic standards has come a decrease in the number of dropouts and an increase in high-school graduates entering college, according to the report.

"I believe we are preparing children to the best of our ability that we have now," Salinas said.

Unfortunately, the public is often misled — by political candidates — to believe that education is lacking, he said.

"Next to God, mother and apple pie, bashing the public schools is high on the list of political themes for candidates,"

Newborn babies may have received tainted blood

BONN, Germany (AP) — The AIDS scare sweeping Germany worsened Friday with the announcement by health officials that at least 50 premature newborns may have received AIDS-tainted plasma during treatment in Bavarian clinics.

The report is likely to increase anxiety about contaminated blood supplies, despite evidence that only a small fraction of the country's 60,000 people infected by the AIDS virus got it from tainted blood.

More than 1,500 people in Germany have been infected with the AIDS virus after receiving blood products since 1984. The infections of six people have been traced to two companies that were shut down after officials said they had distributed tainted blood.

In an effort to ensure that no more AIDS-contaminated blood products are used, the federal Health Ministry unveiled a comprehensive plan Friday that includes closer monitoring of pharmaceutical companies.

"Each individual step in the use of blood and blood products must be immediately subjected to a strict examination, from the donation of blood to the treatment of patients," Health Minister Horst Seehofer told reporters.

Seehofer said Germany will start requiring blood donors to undergo a second AIDS test after their blood has been quarantined for four months. A person can carry the virus months before it actually is detected in the blood.

The Bavarian Health Ministry said it is examining whether premature babies received AIDS-contaminated plasma while being treated at hospitals in the southern state.

Albert Limmer, spokesman for the state Health Ministry, said about 50 premature newborns in a Bamberg clinic received plasma provided by one of the closed companies, Haemoplas.

Limmer said 26 other Bavarian clinics also received plasma from the company. Premature babies that may have been treated with the company's plasma will be tested for the AIDS virus, he said.

Werner Lossa, director of the clinic in Bamberg, said chances were slight that premature babies would contract AIDS because plasma that they receive is subjected to additional tests to ensure its safety.

Lossa said his clinic took delivery of Haemoplas plasma between February 1992 and October of this year. Fifty or so premature babies were treated at the clinic during that period, he said.

Bavaria is the only one of Germany's 16 states so far to report that premature newborns may have received AIDS-tainted blood.

Under the federal Health Ministry's plan, as of Jan. 1, health inspectors will visit pharmaceutical companies to test processed blood products on the spot before they are marketed. The companies themselves are currently responsible for taking the final quality control steps.

Detective claims to have met prime serial murder suspect

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A private investigator said Friday he has met a prime suspect in the serial murders of seven hitchhikers whose bodies were found in an isolated forest.

Tim Bristow told police, and two television networks later, that the suspect is an aggressive schizophrenic in his early 30s who has escaped from several mental institutions.

Bristow said he met the man several months ago. He told Channel 10 News that the man "is very sick and needs help."

The suspect's name wasn't released by police.

A police spokesman said detectives were following up Bristow's information.

Bristow said he has given police several spent cartridges allegedly fired by the man from a rifle of the same type used in some of the murders.

A squad of 300 police is searching for clues in the Belanglo State Forest, about 125 miles southwest of Sydney, where the bodies were found in shallow graves.

The first victims were two British backpackers found in September 1992. Another five bodies — an Australian couple and three Germans — were discovered in the past five weeks.

Court listens to child's voice in police tape

PRESTON, England (AP) — One of two schoolboys accused of killing a toddler lied repeatedly, changed his story and blamed his alleged cohort during questioning about the murder, according to taped interviews played Friday.

Child A, as a court order requires he be identified in the news media, is heard breaking down and crying on several occasions during gentle but firm interrogations by police Detective Sgt. Phil Roberts.

"Why can't I go home with me mum?" Child A, who is now 11, asks the police at one point in a sniffling voice.

His mother, who was not in court, is heard admonishing him on the tape: "It's up to you to tell the truth."

Child A and another 11-year-old boy, Child B, are charged with the abduction and murder of 2-year-old James Bulger, who was taken from a Liverpool shopping mall Feb. 12. James was dragged and walked 2½ miles across the city to a railroad track where his battered body was found two days later.

Both boys, who were 10 at the time of the crime, have pleaded innocent. But prosecutors say Child B confessed to the crime, while Child A told police he only watched. Since they are under 14, the prosecution must prove they knew right from wrong.

Four interviews with Child A took place on Feb. 18-19. The court is expected to hear 11 interviews with Child A and nine with Child B.

Child A is heard initially telling police that he and Child B had a fleeting glimpse of James walking with his mother in the shopping center.

Roberts: "We believe you left with Baby James and with Child B."

Child A: "Who says?"

Roberts: "We do."

As the tape was broadcast throughout the courtroom, Child A fiddled with a white tissue, while Child B molded his light green tissue into a hat for his fist. At one point the boys leaned around a social worker sitting between them and exchanged a smile.

In a clear, high-pitched voice with a heavy Liverpool accent, Child A is heard recanting then admitting that the toddler followed them out of the mall.

Child B "took the baby, why are you talking to me?" Child A asks police.

The boy then tells police he left the toddler at a church. But when confronted with two witnesses who placed the boys with James on a hill farther along the route from the mall to the rail line, Child A says he left the toddler there.

James' body was found splattered with blue-grey enamel paint.

If convicted, the boys will be held indefinitely in one of several secure facilities for young, very serious offenders.

Clinton, Rabin demand that PLO condemn attacks on Israelis

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Clinton and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin demanded Friday that Yasser Arafat denounce recent attacks on Jewish settlers by Palestinian terrorists.

Clinton said the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) chairman is "duty-bound at a minimum to condemn" the violence under terms of his September peace agreement with Israel.

Rabin warned that Arafat's continued silence on the attacks could affect the "complicated negotiations" still under way to implement the pact signed by Israel and the PLO at the White House.

The dawdling peace process has been threatened by unrest in the Israeli-occupied West Bank following the killing of a Jewish settler on Oct. 29 by five members of Arafat's own Fatah faction of the PLO. The killers reportedly said they acted without higher authorization. However, the attack is politically damaging to Rabin, who had cited Fatah's pledge not to attack Israelis as proof that Arafat could be trusted.

"This is why the PLO must condemn vigorously, openly and immediately any action that is in flagrant violation of the commitment to renounce terrorism," said Rabin. "The basis for our advance and progress in the implementation of the agreement is that each side must keep its commitments."

At a joint White House news conference, neither Clinton nor Rabin would say whether talks with the PLO would be suspended if Arafat does not speak out against the attack.

"That'll be a decision for Israel to make," said Clinton.

"I believe that we have to stick to our commitments. I expect the other side to keep its commitment, said Rabin.

On his home front, Rabin is politically squeezed between Palestinian militants opposed to the Israeli-PLO deal and right-wing Jewish settlers who have answered Arab attacks with more violence. On Friday, Israeli soldiers shot and killed a Palestinian who fled from a military roadblock in Gaza. Meanwhile, Palestinians stabbed two Israelis and soldiers shot and wounded a Palestinian.

Clinton and Rabin said Arafat should ease the tension by coming out publicly against the initial attack.

"Leaders who seek peace must speak out in a loud and clear voice against those who would destroy those aspirations for peace," said Clinton.

In other developments at the press conference:

— Rabin asked Clinton to help set up secret peace talks between Israel and Syria. "We have found that dialogue and quiet contacts . . . (are) the best ways to overcome prejudices of the past," he said. "We believe that you, Mr. President, and the secretary of state can assist in facilitating this particular mode of negotiations."

A reporter promptly asked Clinton if "some sort of back-channel, behind the scenes talks" are in the works.

"You can see by the question, Mr. Prime Minister, it's hard for the United States to facilitate talks out of the press," Clinton laughed. But he promised to explore ways to facilitate the peace process.

■ Clinton urged Arabs to end their economic boycott of Israel, calling it "a relic of past animosity." He said there are "indications that the enforcement of the boycott is not as vigorous as it once was, but that some of the countries involved are reluctant to explicitly lift it."

■ Rabin said Clinton had promised to continue to help Israel maintain "our qualitative edge" in security "through the supply of advanced aircraft, the lifting of technological barriers, especially in the field of computers, and your decision to beef up our capacity to defend ourselves against missiles is most significant." Clinton said Defense Secretary Les Aspin will meet with Rabin on Monday to discuss whether the deal would include F-15 bombers and F-16 fighter jets that Israel has long sought.

■ Clinton said the $3 billion a year in U.S. aid to Israel would not be cut.

■ The president said he must await a recommendation from the Justice Department before deciding whether to release convicted Israeli spy Jonathan Pollard. Many Israelis want Pollard to be freed and Rabin raised the issue in his talks with Clinton.

Esso joins Shell, keeps tanks shut

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Esso joined Shell in defying a court order to distribute gasoline in Haiti, saying Friday that to open the pumps would violate the U.N.-imposed oil embargo on the military-run nation.

There was no immediate attempt by the army to force either company to comply, and no word on whether the third major distributor, Texaco, would also keep its depot closed. The court order applies to it as well.

The depots are believed to contain several weeks worth of gasoline. With gas pumps running dry, the embargo has slowed traffic and the economy to a crawl.

When asked what the American reaction would be if force were used to open the pumps, U.S. Ambassador William Swing told reporters Friday: "We would regard any action that abates the sanctions with concern."

Some Haitians on Friday lined up to buy small amounts of black-market gas shipped in illegally from the embargo-busting Dominican Republic, Haiti's neighbor on the Caribbean island of Hispaniola. Buyers recently at the border town of Malpasse reported uniformed soldiers selling the fuel.

The United States and other nations have positioned warships off Haiti to enforce the embargo, and Washington has frozen the U.S. assets of Haitian military leaders and supporters.

The embargo was imposed Oct. 19 to pressure the army to yield power to elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, toppled in a military coup in September 1991. The military refused last month to provide security for a U.N. military technical mission, which led to the collapse of a U.N. plan to return the exiled leader on Oct. 30.

A spokesman for the Irving, Texas-based Exxon Corp., Doug Walt, said the firm's Essosa subsidiary in Haiti rejected a 24-hour deadline set by a Haitian civil court judge Thursday to resume fuel deliveries.

Essosa advised the Haitian government it would not comply "in view of the international sanctions currently in force," he said.

Royal Dutch-Shell's British-owned West Indies subsidiary on Thursday refused to comply with an earlier court order, the result of a lawsuit by Haiti's National Petroleum Distributors Association.

Texaco, based in Purchase, N.Y., reiterated Friday that "the operations in Haiti are complying with the law." Spokesman Jim Reisler wouldn't elaborate.

In a separate development, the military has threatened to imprison the defense minister of the weak civilian transition government for taking "the liberty of criticizing" Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, Haiti's army chief.

The threat to retired Brig. Gen. Jean Beliotte emphasized the struggle over authority between the 2-month-old Cabinet and the army. The Aristide-backed government has little real power but is recognized as Haiti's government by the international community.

In a letter, chief of staff Brig. Gen. Philippe Biamby said Beliotte would be put in the brig for 10 days after completing office.

It's unclear when that will be because the transition Cabinet's mandate is supposed to end with Aristide's return, which the army has blocked.

Biamby accused Beliotte, who retired in 1986, of being "forgetful of the requirements and duties of the military code," which he remains subject to for life.

In early September, Beliotte chastised Cedras for having "encouraged an act of rebellion," referring to the army chief's attendance at a ceremony presided by a disputed Supreme Court justice.

The government had ordered the retirement of Justice Emil Jonassaint, but Jonassaint challenged the order and, backed by Cedras, has kept on working.

SPEAK: Goldwater talks to CAF audience

(From 1A)

Once "you declare war," Goldwater said, "you ought to say, 'I am going to win that war.'"

He said that didn't happen in the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

"Unfortunately, we did not allow our forces to win the war in the gulf," Goldwater said.

"Had Bush kept his mouth shut for about three or four more days, I think we would have gotten rid of (Saddam) Hussein," Iraq's president who ordered a military takeover of its oil-rich neighbor, Kuwait.

The United States, with President Bush at the helm, and its allies intervened in what became known as the 100-day war.

Had the United States and its allies won the war, "I think the problems in the Middle East would be over at least for a time," Goldwater said.

"We are always going to have problems with the countries down there."

From his world travels, Goldwater concluded that "the average Arab doesn't have a great hatred for the average Jew and vice versa.

"It's the leaders of the country. Now isn't this true when we get into wars in this world? It's always the leaders."

He recalled American humorist Will Rogers' approach to "avoid wars: Let's get the leaders in a 10-acre field, give each one a club, and the one that walks out the gate" is the winner, and his country is the winner.

Of 1992 presidential candidate Ross Perot, Goldwater said that the Texas billionaire should stay out of politics.

"If I had a business that was in bad shape, I'd want Perot to come around and fix it. But if I had a government in bad shape, I don't want Perot any place — not president of this country, maybe some other country."

Of homosexuals serving in the military, Goldwater offered support and no objection.

"The Constitution gives us freedom of speech, freedom of action, freedom of association as long as using those freedoms do no harm to somebody else," he said.

"Nobody has ever told me what harm a gay does. And after 37 years in and out of the military uniform of the United States, I never once met a gay. I never once heard the subject discussed."

However, Goldwater said, "I can understand the guy in the foxhole being a little concerned" if he is sharing that foxhole with a homosexual.

"It would be much better to have a WASP next to you."

A WASP was a member of the Women Airforce Service Pilots in World War II. Former WASP pilots were in the audience.

The United States is only one of three countries in the world that "prohibits gays from wearing uniforms," Goldwater said.

"It's hard for me to understand, but, hell, I'm not fighting no battles for gays. I'm not even an honorary gay."

Goldwater expressed apprehension about Russia's successful conversion to capitalism from communism.

"There are hundreds of thousands, millions, of Russians who know of no other way of life than not having to work too hard, not having to be too ambitious, but just being loyal to the Communist Party."

Goldwater said he had expected communism to fail, but "I didn't expect to be alive when it happened."

Goldwater said the Russians "without question have ability. They are highly intelligent. They have built some beautiful aircraft," though refinement may be lacking, "but they are good (aircraft)."

Goldwater, who logged more than 15,000 hours in more than 160 types of aircraft — from propeller-powered airplanes to supersonic jets — said that his favorite propeller-driven airplane is the "old" Curtiss P-40 Warhawk.

"It was the first in-line engine (aircraft) I had ever flown and I loved it," he said.

As for jets, Goldwater said his favorite is the North American F-86A Sabre, which was "a wonderful invention. You could turn it around in this room (hangar)."

And of the Republic P-47 Thunderbolt, Goldwater said the World War II fighter with a powerful radial engine was "one of the best things they ever put together.

"You could fly it (the P-47) through a brick wall and come out with the engine running.

"There's nothing like flying," Goldwater declared. "It's ever better than sex. At my age (85), I still fly."

Of mainland China's people, Goldwater said that he has a "sense that they are trying, not desperately, to move communism away from the government of their country. And if this happens — and I pray it happens — I'll give mainland China 20 years to be the leading military force (and) the leading economic force in the world. And that might not be bad."

Goldwater said he has "great respect and affection for the Chinese. I taught a few of them how to fly."

Goldwater said he favors the North American Free Trade Agreement.

While the "wages are less" in Mexico than those in the United States, Goldwater said "the wages around the world are going to come into harmony."

Today, the world is on the "verge of . . . the greatest revolution that has every taken place — a communications revolution.

"Communications is the big thing of the future," Goldwater said.

"It is now physically and electronically possible for everybody in the world to communicate with everybody else, except it is economically impossible."

Goldwater said today's young people "give me great confidence in the future of our country."

He teaches part-time at Arizona State University.

"They understand the free-enterprise system. They understand our Constitution and what it is supposed to do," he said.

"And how different they are from their fathers and mothers . . . who went through World War II . . . And I don't know what happened to us in that war. We won the war, but we lost something."

In another facet of the American Airpower Heritage symposium, Francis "Gabby" Gabreski, who was America's leading ace in World War II's European Theater, will talk on "The Eighth Air Force's Fighter Operations and the Role of the 56th Fighter Group" at 11:30 a.m. today in the CAF hangar.

Gabreski was an ace in two wars: in World War II when he flew Republic P-47 Thunderbolt fighters and the Korean War when he flew North American F-86 Sabre jet fighters. Gabreski shot down 28 enemy aircraft in the European Theater in the P-47 to become The Eighth Air Force's leading ace.

Scott Crossfield, a World War II U.S. Navy aviator and flight instructor who set many supersonic speed records in the post-war years, will speak on "Onward and Upward or Research Airplanes — Act II," at 6:30 p.m. today.

An aeronautical engineer, test pilot and project engineer in the early X-series aircraft, Crossfield was hailed as the "fastest man alive" by flying Mach 2 and Mach 3 — two and three times the speed of sound.

ACCUSE: Cardinal denies abuse allegations seminary. Cook said he only recently began recalling the abuse.

"I don't really know if you can put words to describe it, what that pain is like," he told CNN in an interview televised Friday. "It shatters your world, it shatters your soul, it shatters your life."

Bernardin, a former president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, was archbishop of Cincinnati from 1972 until 1982. He built a reputation over 11 years as cardinal in Chicago as a quiet but tough reformer, opposing the arms race and abortion.

A priest for 42 years, Bernardin is chairman of the bishops' Committee on Marriage and Family.

Cook said that a priest, the Rev. Ellis Harsham, first abused him, then brought him to Bernardin's private quarters. There, Cook said, Bernardin gave him a book and a framed picture, then sexually abused him.

Bernardin said he had no recollection of Cook.

"It leaves me in a state of bewilderment," he said. "I was flabbergasted . . . and I was saddened."

Cook's lawyer, Stephen Rubino, who has handled similar cases, had little reaction to Bernardin's denial.

"I can tell you that over the last 10 years in doing this litigation, every case starts out with a denial," Rubino said.

Bernardin said he has faced other allegations of impropriety over the last year. He told reporters a woman accused him of taking part in a satanic ritual and a man said Bernardin participated in an orgy. Bernardin denied the allegations.

Also named in the lawsuit are Harsham; the Archdiocese of Cincinnati; the Cincinnati archbishop, Daniel Pilarczyk; and Francis Voellmecke, the former rector of the seminary Cook attended. The lawsuit accused Pilarczyk and Voellmecke of being negligent in hiring Harsham.

Pilarczyk said the archdiocese investigated Cook's allegations against Harsham earlier this year but "found insufficient basis upon which to substantiate the allegation."

He went on to say: "I believe they are rubbish and deserving of nothing but contempt."

A woman who answered the telephone at St. Luke Catholic Church in the Dayton, Ohio, suburb of Beavercreek, where Harsham lives, said he was out of town and could not be contacted.

The seminary was called St. Gregory Seminary at the time and is now the Athenaeum of Ohio. Cook was attending a pre-seminary program for high school students, the lawsuit said.

Voellmecke is pastor of St. Thomas Aquinas Church in Logan, Utah. A woman who answered the telephone said Voellmecke was away from the church and unavailable for comment.

The Chicago archdiocese has faced a spate of allegations of sexual abuse by priests in recent years.

A panel appointed by Bernardin to review 59 allegations of such abuse since 1963 reported in 1992 that abuse was involved in about two-thirds of the cases. The priests involved in those cases were removed or had already resigned, retired or died, the archdiocese said at the time.

Based on the panel's report, Bernardin last year set up a toll-free telephone number to report priests who may have molested minors in the Chicago archdiocese, and he set up a nine-member board to investigate allegations.

Bernardin submitted the allegations against him to the board, comprised of six lay people and three priests. He said he wouldn't change his church activities unless recommended by the board.

BASH: Education is progressing

(From 1A)

Salinas said.

But despite "inadequacies in funding, volatile societal problems and inconsistent political support," the quality of public education is progressing, he said.

"During the academic career of just one generation of Texans, there has been a virtual revolution in public education," Salinas said.

The TSTA report is the second in a series concerning the public school system.

In August, TSTA released a report that defended student test scores — often the target of critics.

And in April, a report dealing with school funding will be released, to be followed by a look at restructuring public schools expected out next fall.

Board endorses stronger courseload

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education endorsed a tougher high school courseload Friday to better prepare students for jobs or college. But some predicted an outcry from school districts that are football powerhouses.

The stronger coursework won't be required for graduation. But school districts' accreditation could be affected eventually by the number of students in the recommended program.

Superintendent Stan Paz of the El Paso Independent School District said schools will be under community pressure to have students in the program even though it's not mandatory.

"The expectation from our communities is that we will provide the best," said Paz, who serves on the board of the Texas Association of School Administrators.

The recommendation is a concern for some school districts — not El Paso — whose athletes now spend two elective class periods a day in football practice, he said. That's on top of the required 1.5 physical education credits.

"I guess they'd have to do it (practice football) after school, of all times," Paz said. "I don't see a problem with that. However, I know that there's going to be some strong reaction from the state of Texas."

El Paso high school football players use one elective class period to practice, he said. "We make academics the priority."

The school administrators' group had asked the board to delay its consideration of the recommended program. Officials cited cost and staffing concerns, and said the board should await input from meetings around the state on what schools teach.

Since the program isn't required, Paz added that he thinks it should not be used in accrediting schools.

Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno, who recommended the course guidelines, said students shouldn't have to give up any outside activities.

"I have a daughter who's in 9th grade this year," he said. "She's in marching band, and she is going to play basketball, and she's taking exactly this kind of a program."

The recommended program has 24 credits, all but three in "core" courses, while the minimum program has 21, including seven electives.

To complete the recommended program, students would need a credit in computer science, one in fine arts and three in a foreign language — none of which is required in the minimum program. The recommended program also includes an extra credit each in social studies and science.

Meno said students could earn credits by testing out of subjects. Some students already are enrolled in advanced programs similar to the one recommended by the board.

The recommended program "is an historic first step in a larger effort to help schools provide students with the knowledge and skills they are going to need to be successful as adults," Meno said.

MC to present teleconferences about program

Staff report

Two live teleconferences being presented at Midland College by satellite provide information about the new "Tech Prep" program for Texas children and educational institutions, plus a public hearing on the participation of blacks and Hispanics in Texas higher education.

"Tech Prep Texas — A Town Meeting for Parents" is designed to provide parents of middle schools and high schools straightforward information about Tech Prep as an educational and career path for today's school children and those of tomorrow. It is being presented at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the LBJ Room, located on the second floor of the Murray Fasken Learning Resource Center (library). Admission is free.

The satellite conference includes Tech Prep specialists from the Texas Education Agency, the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, and the Texas Department of Commerce.

Tech Prep is a key component of the national educational restructuring movement to prepare students for the transition from school to work. It is an educational and career path which students begin in high school and continue at community colleges, technical colleges, and universities.

This teleconference is an activity of Texas A&M University's Tech Prep Professional Development Consortium, which is supported by Tech Prep Consortia in every region of Texas.

A teleconference from 3:30-4:30 p.m. Wednesday is a public hearing on "The Texas Access and Equity 2000 Plan". It is being presented locally at the Midland College Health Sciences Building lecture hall.

"Access and Equity 2000", scheduled for implementation in September, 1994, is the third successive Texas Educational Opportunity Plan for Higher Education developed through the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board. This draft plan, developed by an advisory committee representing administrators, faculty, and students of Texas public colleges and universities, assesses the participation of blacks and Hispanics in Texas public higher education. Based on those status reports, which show that those groups are under-represented, this draft plan offers recommendations and suggested action items for including more blacks and Hispanics in Texas public higher education.

This teleconference is presented by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board in cooperation with the Dallas County Community College District. Admission is free

Bill Messner, aka the dancing charwoman, hams it up at the Dellwood Senior Center's Talent Review Friday night. Volunteers said they hoped the event would entice more seniors to participate in the center's activities.

Talent event gets seniors involved

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Line dancing, a man in drag and sing-alongs were just some of the events entertaining seniors at the Dellwood Senior Center Talent Review Friday night.

The event was organized to get more senior citizens involved in the many activities the center offers, according to volunteer Maywood Kelly, who also participates in the fun.

The show started off with a bang and a ping and a ring . . .

The Kitchenettes, a group who plays a variety of instruments ranging from washboards to egg beaters on cookie sheets, played a medley of songs with Maneeta Heckathorn leading the group on the piano.

One of the band members seductively pulled off her vest and donned a boa as she enticed some of the male members of the audience with a tempting dance before returning to her icing spoons and coffee-can drum set.

The audience tapped their feet and clapped along to the music and then joined in a sing-along.

Ms. Kelly said she hoped the event would persuade more senior citizens to come to the center and participate in the numerous activities.

She said the center offers arts, crafts, games from bridge to dominos and billards, as well as a number of classes. She said instructors teach line dancing and country and western dancing.

Ms. Kelly, who also leads the Dellwood Gospel Singers, said the singers rehearse every Wednesday morning. She said there is even an exercise class that is "very good for the ones who think they can't do it."

She said the senior center also has a sewing room where the folks are working on quilts, a library and television room.

"It is just a fun place to be," Ms. Kelly said.

Early registration at MC begins Monday

Staff report

Early registration for Midland College's 1994 spring semester opens Monday for certain students.

For current and former students who have passed the TASP (Texas Academic Skills Program) exams, registration can be completed by telephone.

"We wrote a letter earlier this month to qualified former and current students, providing them with a special telephone number which they can call to register quickly and easily. After they select their courses for the spring semester, they will be sent bills. Upon payment of their fees, they are enrolled into the classes they selected and need not report for any other processing," said Don Cates, associate dean of students and registrar.

All students receiving financial aid or scholarships must report first to the Financial Aid Office for processing. Students transferring from other colleges or universities must present transcripts. Transfer students without TASP-exempt status will be required to take the TASP exams unless they had earned at least three hours of college credit prior to Sept. 1, 1989.

Students who are not TASP-qualified must take the TASP exams, which measure skills in English, math, and reading. Remedial courses are mandated by state law in those areas, but Midland College provides flexible entry into many of the classes, so students may exit the remedial classes upon mastery of certain skills.

Registration during the early period, Nov. 15-Dec. 3, is handled on an alphabetical basis which changes each semester. For this period, those whose last names begin with M-R should report on Nov. 15, Nov. 19, and Nov. 30; F-L on Nov. 16, Nov. 22, and Dec. 1; A-E on Nov. 17, Nov. 23, and Dec. 2; and S-Z on Nov. 18, Nov. 29, and Dec. 3.

Those who do not wish to enroll and pay fees at this time may obtain time permits on a first-come basis from Dec. 6-16 and Jan. 3-7. First-time students needing pre-TASP assessments will be tested on Wednesday, Jan. 12. Formal enrollment day for the spring term will be Thursday, Jan. 13. Classes begin on Tuesday, Jan. 18.

Spring course bulletins, which contain registration information, are available at the Midland College Student Services area, Student Center, which is open from 8 a.m.-8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m.-5 p.m. on Friday. Bulletins also may be picked up from the Midland County Library.

Some information is available by calling 685-4501.

Prosecutors announce charges in murder of anti-Mafia hero

By Daniel J. Wakin
Associated Press

ROME (AP) — Four men stood on a hill overlooking the highway outside Palermo, Sicily, one nervously smoking Merit cigarettes, as Italy's leading anti-Mafia crusader made his way from Rome.

Lookouts in contact by cellular phone tracked his moves. They watched as Giovanni Falcone took off in a plane, as his police escort left to pick him up, as his car set off down the highway.

Then came the final call from a car trailing behind Falcone's.

A remote control was activated, and Falcone was blown away by hundreds of pounds of explosives planted under the highway. Falcone's wife, prosecutor Francesca Morvillo, and three police guards also died. A quarter-mile of highway was demolished.

With charges announced against 18 suspects, a more complete picture emerged Friday of a crime that shocked and revolted Italy and helped prompt a crackdown on the mob.

The charges are a major breakthrough in a country where spectacular crimes often go unsolved. They also should provide a morale boost to Italians battered by corruption scandals and recession.

In Washington, FBI Director Louis J. Freeh congratulated Italian law enforcement officials for "a brilliant and relentless investigation" and said the FBI would continue its cooperation with Italian authorities.

At the time of the May 1992 killing, Falcone had reached near-legendary stature for engineering most of the government's successes against the Mafia in the previous decade. He also was a key ally of U.S. mob prosecutors pursuing the Sicilian-U.S. Mafia connection.

American investigators helped in the case, including FBI analysts who helped identify DNA on the Merit cigarette butts on the hill overlooking the highway.

Prosecutors in the central Sicilian city of Caltanissetta issued arrest warrants Thursday for 18 people. Ten already were in jail, five were arrested and three remained fugitives.

Dozens of murders have been attributed to the suspects, including the killings of a leading Sicilian politician and police commander.

The leading suspect is Salvatore "Toto" Riina, the Mafia "boss of bosses" who was arrested in January in a major coup.

His driver, Salvatore Biondino, coordinated the plot, Tinebra said. Riina's brother-in-law, fugitive boss Leoluca Bagarella, also allegedly took part. Another suspect was Palermo builder Salvatore Sbeglia, who is charged with providing the detonator, apparently a modified automatic gate opener.

One of Falcone's contributions was inspiring the confidence of "pentiti" — Mafia members who became informers. His murder and that of close friend and colleague Paolo Borsellino by a car bomb two months later have prompted a wave of new collaborators.

A key pair of "pentiti" helped special anti-Mafia police, the DIA, break the Falcone case.

It began with a secretly taped phone call, the ANSA news agency reported. Two of the plotters mentioned a certain "Santino" during the call.

Another turncoat, Baldassarre Di Maggio, whose help had led police to Riina, identified Santino as Mario Santo Di Matteo, known as "Half Nose."

Investigators then connected Di Matteo with a portable telephone used to make calls discussing the attack.

Experts defuse book bomb mailed to ex-neo-Nazi author

BERLIN (AP) — A neo-Nazi's dirty laundry is hanging out for all to see: boredom, beer, attacking foreigners for sport. Jail time with old Nazi war criminals as cellblock heroes. Weapons training in forests.

Ingo Hasselbach, 26, once a top neo-Nazi in east Berlin, has written a book about the extremist movement and why he dropped out. On Wednesday, someone mailed him a bomb.

He may have damaged the neo-Nazis, but he has enemies on the left, too. For months he has lived abroad or semi-underground in Berlin, getting messages by beeper and making calls from public phones.

"I don't have a fixed address, there are too many people after me," he said recently in a call to The Associated Press to arrange an interview that didn't come off.

Federal anti-terrorist police have questioned him for clues to the bomb that his mother found Wednesday in a package addressed to him at her apartment in east Berlin.

When she opened it, she saw a book with wires. Bomb experts found and defused a live explosive device, a police statement said.

Press reports say it contained about two pounds of TNT, enough to kill Hasselbach's mother and perhaps other people in the 11-story building.

Terrorism investigators have taken over the case and are treating it as attempted murder, the Federal Prosecutor's Office said Friday.

Hasselbach's book describes a childhood that belies East Germany's image as a police state. His hard-working communist parents neglected him. Hippies adopted him, then he became a punk. Next was the skinhead life, sniffing glue and drinking beer to the point of oblivion.

He records many scrapes with the police. Yet as East Germany collapsed and Germany united, the police were no hindrance to Hasselbach's move into neo-Nazism. He said the police often stood by watching as he and his comrades attacked foreigners in train stations or fought with leftists.

Hasselbach's life swerved last year after a film director used him as the main character in a documentary on the rise of neo-Nazis. As they traveled together, the director mocked the crude slogans that passed for Hasselbach's thinking and the gross comrades he lived with.

Then an arson attack last November killed three Turks — a grandmother and two young girls — in Moelln, near Hamburg. It was one of the worst outrages in a wave of neo-Nazi violence, and it was the last straw for Hasselbach.

"I expressed my opinion to my 'comrades,' who didn't have the slightest understanding. In contrast, they celebrated the criminals as martyrs, and I thought they (the arsonists) were stupid, cowardly and underhanded. I stood alone and began to withdraw."

So Hasselbach wrote in "The Reckoning: A Neo-Nazi Drops Out," the book published in October and co-authored by the director who befriended him, Winfried Bonengel.

Hasselbach also has given television and newspaper interviews about his change of heart. Since then, he says, he received death threats from the "Kommando Horst Wessel," named after a Nazi hero.

Hasselbach was a prominent spokesman of the Berlin neo-Nazi group National Alternative. His book describes meetings with leading neo-Nazis from Germany, Austria and other countries.

They come off as unsavory characters, with the exception of Michael Kuehnen, acknowledged leader of the German extreme right until it became known he had AIDS. That split the neo-Nazis into pro-Kuehnen and anti-homosexual wings, a division that continued after Kuehnen died in 1991.

Hasselbach depicts other prominent neo-Nazis as vain contenders for the "Fuehrer" title, though one had only two followers. He tells of battles with leftists in east Berlin's drabbest neighborhoods and weapons training in the forests with a sadistic comrade nicknamed "Stinki" because he never washed. Yet the extreme rightist movement always appears dangerous. Weapons training is done in the guise of "defense sport groups" and money comes from wealthy sympathizers or news interviewers.

The violence may be abating. From January through October, 1,584 extreme rightist acts of violence were recorded, down from 1,949 in the same period of 1992, according to the Federal Office for Protection of the Constitution, the watchdog agency on terrorism and political extremism.

Jerusalem shrine gets new shine

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Dome of the Rock, Jerusalem's most famous landmark, has a new $1.6 million halo.

The dome on the mosque was electroplated with 176 pounds of gold as part of an extensive renovation project bankrolled by King Hussein of Jordan.

The king paid for the facelift by selling his London villa after a reported squabble with Saudi Arabia's King Fahd, who wanted the honor for himself.

The shrine, known for its beautiful mosaics and blue exterior tiles, was built by an Umayyad caliph in A.D. 691 to mark the spot where Muslims believe the Prophet Mohammed made his journey to heaven. It is the third holiest site in Islam, after the Saudi cities of Mecca and Medina.

A 1964 renovation left it with a leaky roof and a 35-ton bronze-aluminum simulation of its original solid gold sheen. The latest renovations will be completed in March.

"(Now) it will have the original color of gold. I hope it will last for generations," said engineer Osama Odeh.

Nixon chief, Watergate conspirator H. R. Haldeman dies at 67

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — H.R. "Bob" Haldeman, President Nixon's fiercely protective chief of staff who served 18 months in prison for covering up the Watergate break-in, died Friday. He was 67.

Haldeman died of abdominal cancer in his home overlooking the Pacific Ocean. His son Hank said he had been ill for only a month.

Nixon said he was saddened by the news.

"Ever since he joined my vice presidential staff as a young advance man in the 1956 election, I have known Bob Haldeman to be a man of rare intelligence, strength, integrity and courage," Nixon said in a statement.

"As my White House chief of staff, he played an indispensable role in turbulent times as our administration undertook a broad range of initiatives at home and abroad."

Haldeman was convicted of conspiracy to obstruct justice, obstruction of justice and lying to the FBI and a federal grand jury and was sentenced to a 2½- to eight-year term by U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica.

The June 17, 1972, break-in of Democratic Party headquarters at Washington's Watergate complex eventually forced Nixon from the White House.

Haldeman had been in advertising when he met Richard Nixon in the 1950s and became one of the earliest and most trusted of Nixon's campaign aides.

"I am not a politician," he said once. "I had no real interest in politics, and no participation, until I volunteered for a Nixon campaign."

After the 1968 election, Haldeman became Nixon's chief of staff and thereby the gatekeeper to the Oval Office, a post he valued. Other than John N. Mitchell, who had been Nixon's campaign manager and attorney general, no one was closer to the president.

Mitchell and another top Nixon aide, John D. Erlichman, also were convicted of Watergate conspiracy. Mitchell, who died in 1988, served 19 months in prison for his role in the scandal. Erlichman served 1½ years.

Haldeman joined Nixon's second vice presidential campaign in 1956 and in Nixon's failed 1960 presidential campaign, his race for California governor in 1962 and Nixon's victorious 1968 election.

Sporting a crew cut, he was constantly at Nixon's side, often with camera in hand as he pursued his photography hobby.

Haldeman was a major figure in the coverup. Six days after the Watergate break-in, he suggested that an FBI investigation that was coming too close be derailed.

Nixon gave his tacit approval and the tape recording of that conversation became the so-called "smoking gun." On Aug. 9, 1974, four days after the tape became public, Nixon resigned.

Haldeman also was found to be the keeper of a $350,000 slush fund that was used to pay the living expenses of some of the Watergate burglars and he played an active role in the Oval Office conversation on how to contain the growing scandal.

When Nixon counsel John Dean threatened to go to Watergate investigators, Haldeman told him that "it's tough to put the toothpaste back into the tube once it's out."

After leaving prison, Haldeman became president of Murdock Hotels Corp. and senior vice president of Murdock Development Co. He worked for seven years at the private companies owned by David Murdock, the financier who now heads Dole Food Co.

More recently, he had been involved with several start-up businesses, as a mentor and adviser to the founders and as a shareholder.

Judge denies woman's plea to drop charges

DETROIT (AP) — A judge rejected a woman's pleas Friday to drop charges against her boyfriend who is accused of dragging her with his van, slamming her into a utility pole and driving over her.

"Eighty percent of it was my fault. I jumped in the van," Darlene Kincer said from the wheelchair she uses because she lost an arm and leg after the incident. She also lost her unborn baby.

"He didn't do it," Kincer, 32, told Recorder's Court Judge Daphne Means Curtis. "I know what happened that day."

Curtis said she didn't have the authority to dismiss the charge of assault with intent to murder against William Powell. "And even if I did, I wouldn't," Curtis said. "Frankly, sometimes we have to protect people from themselves."

Kincer said she's to blame. She said Powell, 35, was leaving the house Aug. 30 after arguing with her and she followed because she wanted him to stay. She said she grabbed his van and held on as he was driving away.

Witnesses have said Powell was holding Kincer with one hand.

The van sped off, turned a corner and slammed Kincer into a utility pole. According to witnesses, including Kincer's 16-year-old daughter, Powell then backed the van over her legs.

Powell, who's free on $100,000 bond, has said it was an accident. A Feb. 14 trial date was set. Powell and his lawyer, Sharon Payne, left the hearing without commenting.

Curtis also denied Kincer's request to lift an injunction forbidding contact between her and Powell. Curtis said Kincer may telephone Powell, but he may not try to reach her.

Kincer said the arrangement makes her feel they are "both in jail," and the criminal case is keeping the couple from putting their relationship back together.

After the hearing Kincer said she believes her daughter's account of the attack is the reason Curtis ordered Powell to trial.

"She don't want no man in my life," Kincer told reporters as she was being wheeled into the courthouse elevators.

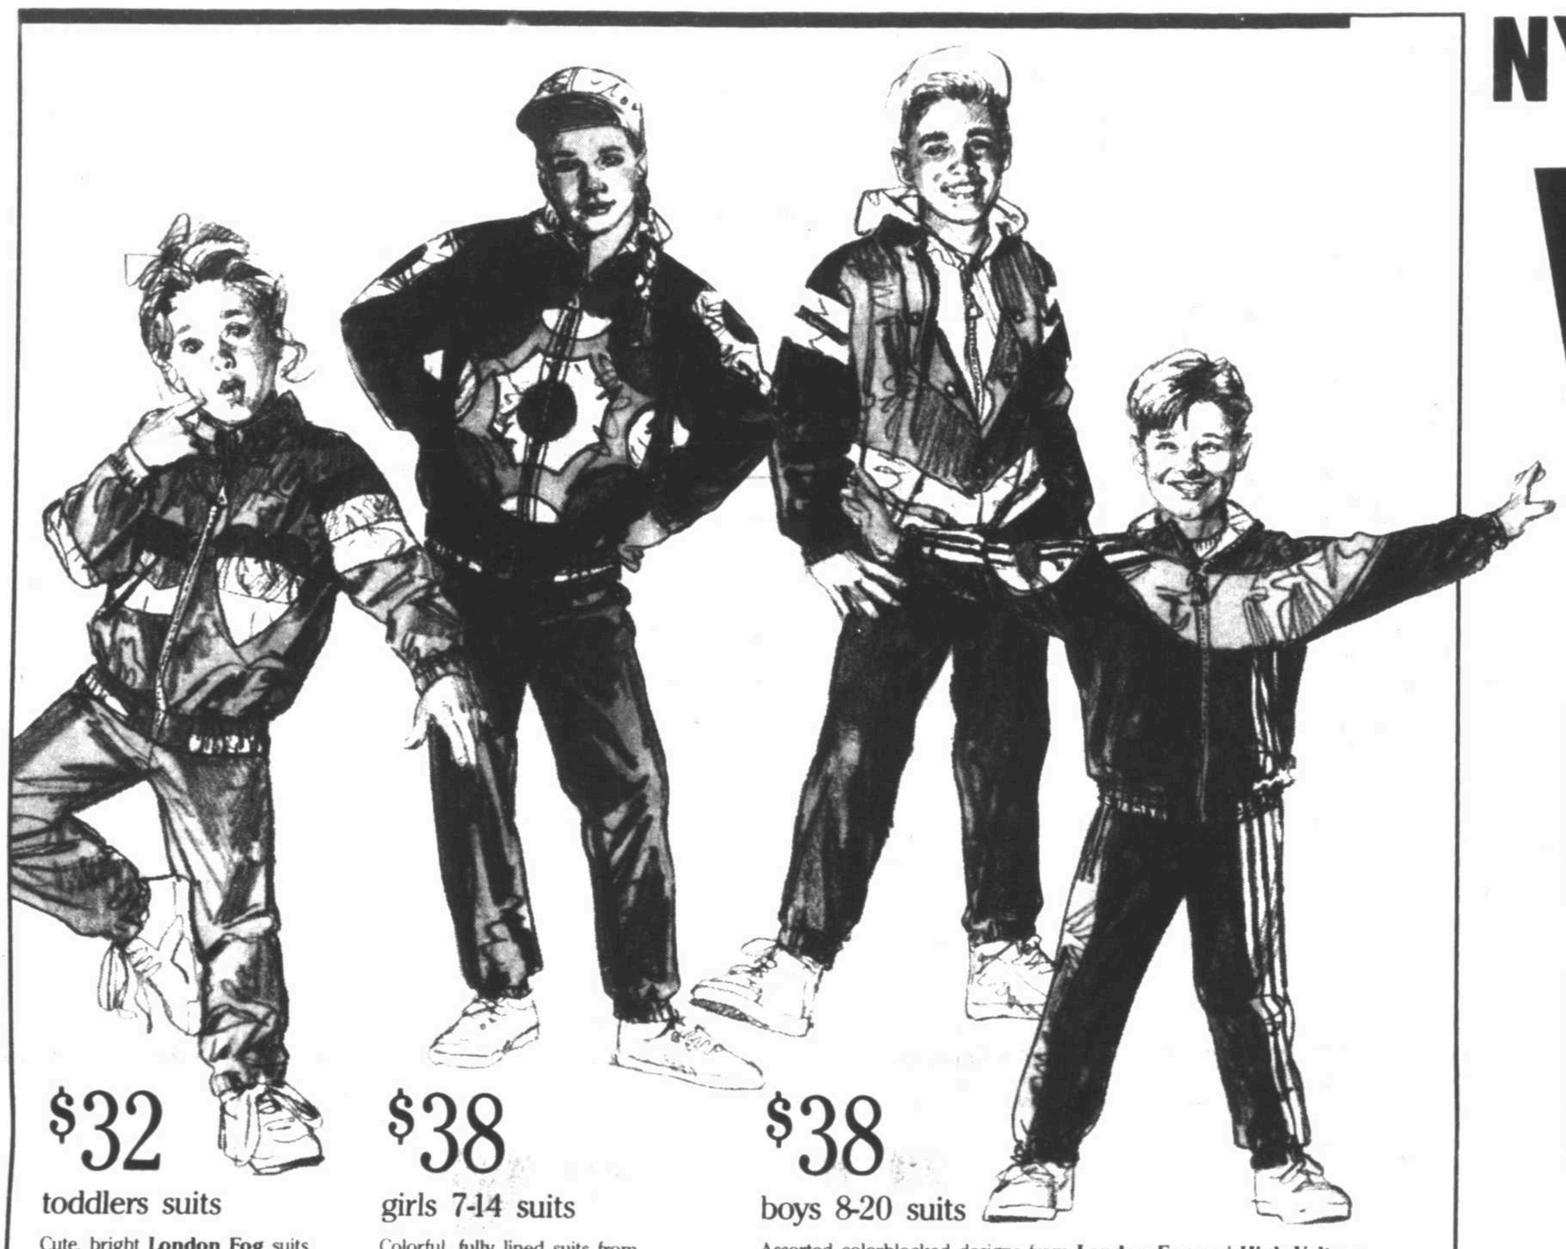

Even if Kincer's daughter changes her story, Wayne County Assistant Prosecutor Mary Hickey said she still has plenty of witnesses to the daylight attack. "There are neighbors who saw what happened," she said.

David Ford, a sociologist at the University of Indiana-Indianapolis, said Kincer's defense of Powell, while extreme, is unsurprising. "It's a tremendously complex and perplexing issue," said Ford, who also is the director of training for Family Violence for Indiana Law Enforcement Officers.

"What we have here is a severe felony, just short of murder," he said. "This case is the worst instance and reinforces the worst stereotype. These people are usually not ready to face the reality of a relationship gone bad."

Officials drop charges against AIDS researcher

By Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government dropped misconduct charges Friday against Robert Gallo, the renowned AIDS researcher who had been accused of violating scientific ethics in his pioneering work on the virus.

Gallo, 56-year-old co-discoverer of the AIDS virus and head of a laboratory at the National Institutes of Health, said he was "completely vindicated" by the action.

But Dr. Lyle W. Bivens, head of the U.S. Public Health Service investigation of Gallo, repeated the allegations and said they were dropped only because his agency could not meet "a new definition of scientific misconduct" demanded by a review board.

Gallo's Washington attorney, Joe Onek, called Bivens' statement "outrageous" and hinted at future legal action by his client.

"He never got his day in court," said the lawyer. "But that may happen yet."

A hearing on Gallo's appeal of the charges had been scheduled for next week. He had been found guilty by the Public Health Service's Office of Research Integrity of failing to give proper credit to other researchers and with making a misstatement in a science publication.

"The reason that they didn't pursue the case is that the ORI knew that it couldn't prove its false charges before a fair and independent tribunal," Onek said.

In a statement welcoming the action, Gallo said, "I will now be able to redouble my efforts in the fight against AIDS and cancer."

Some in the scientific community said the murky conclusion of the long investigation leaves a cloud over Gallo's reputation, and one Nobel Prize winner called the whole process "a witch hunt" that found only "trivial" charges against Gallo.

Gallo and his laboratory colleagues published a series of articles in 1984 that identified and proved that a specific virus was the cause of AIDS.

French researchers shortly afterward claimed that the virus Gallo identified had actually been isolated earlier at the Pasteur Institute and that the Americans were falsely claiming credit for the discovery.

After negotiations, the issue was settled in 1987 with both the French and Americans agreeing to recognize Gallo and Pasteur researcher Dr. Luc Montagnier as co-discoverers of the AIDS virus. They also agreed to share royalties from the patent of an AIDS blood test developed in Gallo's lab.

The controversy was revived in 1989 after new charges were leveled against Gallo and a senior scientist in his lab, Dr. Mikulus Popovic. The ORI and its predecessor agencies at the NIH investigated and ruled last December that both Gallo and Popovic were guilty of misconduct in the 1984 AIDS research publications.

Additionally, the Pasteur Institute has hired a New York law firm to attempt to revise the 1987 agreement. That issue remains unsettled.

Gallo and Popovic appealed the December ORI ruling. A three-member board set up by the Department of Health and Human Services ruled last week that the ORI failed to prove its case against Popovic. The ORI asked for a week's delay in the Gallo appeal and then decided on Friday to drop the case.

In making the announcement, Bivens said the Gallo charges were being dropped because of the appeals board's ruling in the Popovic case.

"It is clear that the panel now applies different standards (for scientific misconduct) from those applied by ORI..." Bivens said.

Decisions by the review panel, Bivens said, "made it extraordinarily difficult for ORI to defend its legal determination of scientific misconduct regarding Dr. Gallo."

Onek, Gallo's attorney, said the whole case was based on an interpretation of a single sentence in a long research article or on charges that could easily be proven false.

Onek said that Gallo was forbidden by NIH orders from publicly discussing the investigation while it was under way and, as a result, never got to publicly answer the charges or to confront his accusers.

Dr. Howard Temin, a Nobel Prize-winning virus researcher from the University of Wisconsin, said that Gallo was not treated fairly by the federal investigation.

"It had all the elements of a witch hunt," said Temin, who won the Nobel Prize in 1975. All of Gallo's AIDS discoveries, he said, have proven to be correct, despite the accusations by the ORI.

Dr. Mark Frankel, director of scientific freedom, responsibility and law at the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said he thought the government "went the extra mile to assure that this was done in a thorough and a fair manner," but that it left behind an element of uncertainty.

"The whole matter would have been much clearer if they had gone on with the appeals. He (Gallo) never got his day in court," said Frankel.

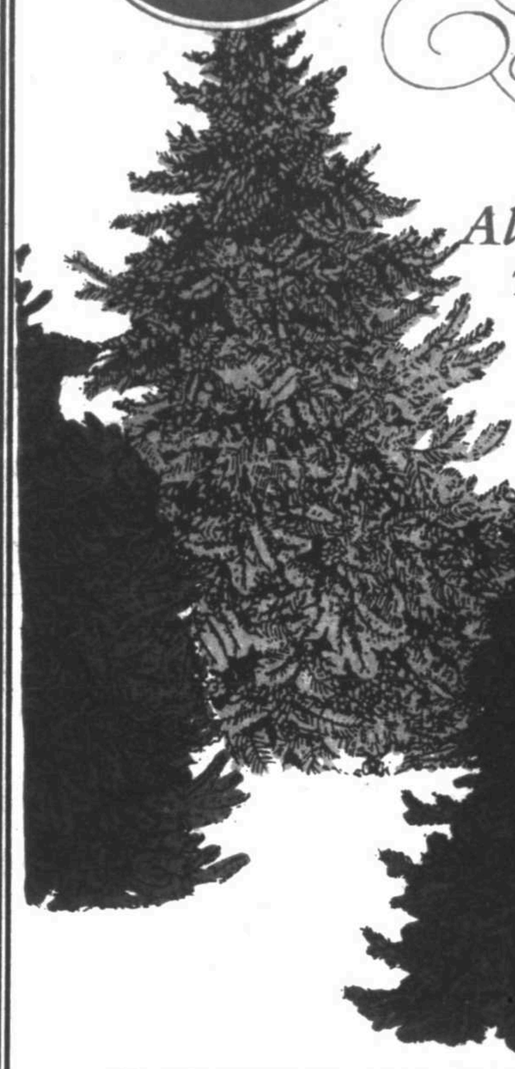

The AAAS is the largest general organization of scientists in the country and is publisher of the journal Science, which printed the research that was investigated by the ORI.

Report: Lung cancer rate in women increases

ATLANTA (AP) — The lung cancer death rate for women has shot past that of breast cancer and probably will increase into the next century, years after the death rate in men peaks and starts to fall, the government reported Friday.

In a separate finding, the American Cancer Society reported that gains in preventing heart disease deaths in all U.S. smokers are being more than offset by the rise in deaths from lung cancer and other smoking-related cancers.

Heart disease deaths have declined in smokers as they have in nonsmokers, due to factors other than smoking, including healthier diets and lifestyles. Lung cancer deaths have increased, the cancer society said.

Gary Giovino of the U.S. Surgeon General's Office on Smoking and Health reported that smoking rates continue to decline among all groups of men and women in the United States except white men 18-24. Their rate of smoking hasn't changed since 1980.

The new findings were reported in a weekly publication of the Centers for Disease Control and at a meeting on nicotine addiction sponsored by the American Society of Addiction Medicine.

In 1950, white women had a breast cancer death rate of 26.4 per 100,000. In 1990, the rate showed little change at 27.4.

In 1950, the death rate from lung cancer among white women was 4.9, but it climbed to 32.1 in 1990.

Lung cancer surpassed breast cancer in 1986, said Scott Tomar of the Office on Smoking and Health.

For black women, the breast cancer death rate was 21.4 per 100,000 in 1950 and 31.7 in 1990. During the same period, their lung cancer death rate soared from 3.8 to 32, surpassing breast cancer in 1990.

"The continued increase in lung cancer death rates primarily reflects patterns of cigarette smoking throughout this century," the government reported.

Smoking among white American men, for example, peaked at about 67 percent in the 1940s and 1950s. Smoking among women peaked at about 44 percent in the 1960s.

"The lung cancer death rate for men is expected to peak before the year 2000, then begin to decline," the government said.

Dr. Michael Thun of the American Cancer Society reported that heart disease made up 41 percent of smoking-related deaths in white men in the 1960s, but fell to 21 percent of the smoking deaths in the 1980s.

During the same period, the percentage of smoking deaths in white men due to lung cancer rose from 15 percent to 28 percent, he said.

Similar trends were seen in women. The data were preliminary, and the percentages could change slightly with further analysis, Thun said.

Pentagon releases report on POWs in Soviet Union

WASHINGTON (AP) — After weeks of refusing public release, the Pentagon on Friday made available copies of a report alleging that the Soviet Union forcibly moved U.S. Korean War prisoners to its territory and never released them.

The report, written by U.S. government analysts in August and presented to Russian government officials in Moscow in early September, is Washington's most comprehensive effort since the 1950-53 war to link Moscow to missing U.S. servicemen.

It states that several hundred U.S. prisoners in Korea were secretly taken to various places in the Soviet Union, mostly by rail, and in some cases through China. It makes no attempt to assess how long the American servicemen might have lived. The Russian government, and the Soviet Union before it, denied that any Americans were taken from the Korean battlefield to the U.S.S.R.

About 8,140 American servicemen are officially unaccounted for from the Korean War. The report does not claim knowledge that any specific Americans were taken to the Soviet Union, but strongly asserts that some transfers were undertaken.

The Clinton administration initially suppressed the report after presenting it to the Russians at a meeting of the U.S.-Russian Joint Commission on POWs-MIAs. After The Associated Press obtained a copy and published a story about its allegations in September the Pentagon stamped the report an internal document and said it was not for release to the American public.

Last month, in denying an AP request for release of the report under the Freedom of Information Act, Col. Joseph A. Schlatter, Jr., of the Defense POW-MIA Office asserted that its release "could have a chilling effect" on U.S. government deliberations and would give a "skewed picture" of his office's work.

Asked why the Pentagon had apparently changed its mind about releasing the report, spokeswoman Beverly Baker said, "It's already out there anyway." She said she was unaware that a Freedom of Information request had been filed and denied.

Baker said the report had been available to the public since Wednesd , although there was no announcement, as ually accompanies release of reports.

Attached to the report is a statement, dated Nov. 3, by Malcolm Toon, head of the U.S. delegation to the U.S.-Russian Joint Commission on POWs-MIAs. Toon, a former ambassador to Moscow, wrote that the report "contains subjective opinions" and is "not an official conclusion" of the Joint Commission.

Phoenix died of multiple-drug overdose, coroner says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor River Phoenix died from a lethal combination of cocaine and heroin, a coroner's spokesman said Friday. The same deadly mix killed comedian John Belushi 11 years ago.

Toxicological tests conducted on the 23-year-old-actor, who convulsed and died outside a West Hollywood nightclub on Oct. 31, showed extremely high levels of cocaine and heroin, said coroner's spokesman Scott Carrier.

Also found in Phoenix's body were traces of marijuana, the prescription sedative Valium, and an over-the-counter cold medication, Carrier said.

Phoenix's death outside the Viper Room, a trendy music club coowned by actor Johnny Depp, had prompted widespread speculation about whether the actor, known for clean living and vegetarianism, had been abusing drugs at the time of his death.

Unlike Belushi, Phoenix had not injected heroin and cocaine in a mixture referred to as a "speedball." Belushi died in 1982 at a Hollywood hotel after a binge of cocaine and heroin injections administered by a woman companion.

"There were no needle marks" on Phoenix's body, Carrier said. "Maybe it was ingested, maybe it was inhaled. How it was introduced into his body is unknown at this time."

The coroner's office has ruled the death accidental, Carrier said, and the sheriff's department said Friday it had closed its investigation into Phoenix's death.

Disabilities Act protects some voluntarily obese people, officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some obese people are protected from discrimination under the Americans with Disabilities Act regardless of whether the weight was caused by disease or poor diet, the government is arguing in court.

If a federal appeals court accepts that interpretation of the law, some obese people could be helped in resolving employment conflicts or even in getting comfortable seating in movie theaters.

"Before, if something was deemed voluntary, it wasn't a disability," Peggy Mastroianni, director of disabilities policy for the Equal Employment Commission, said Friday.

"That had some very disturbing implications — what if someone became paraplegic because they participated in a dangerous sport?"

The EEOC, in a brief filed in a court case from Rhode Island, said someone who is morbidly obese has a disability even if disease did not cause the person's weight. Morbid obesity is a medical term that means 100 percent over normal weight.

If someone is merely obese — 50 pounds overweight, for example — that person also could have a disability protected under this interpretation of the act, but only if the obesity were caused by a disease.

But the EEOC stressed that any obesity complaints filed under the disabilities act would be considered "on a case-by-case basis."

Lawyers say the decision probably would not affect a lot of people, but nevertheless is significant.

"Anytime someone is discriminated against because of a physical characteristic, that should fall under the ADA," said Jim Goodman of the Persons with Disabilities Law Center in Atlanta. "It will make a difference in accommodation of obesity. What does a movie theater do about seating? What does an airline do?"

He is representing a woman in Tennessee who wants to bring her own chair to movie theaters, putting it in the wheelchair section, because she cannot fit into the regular seats.

Ms. Mastroianni would not speculate on how far-reaching the EEOC decision might be.

"But my sense is there's a movement out there toward ending discrimination against the obese that has a life of its own beyond the ADA," she said. "The act will resolve some things but not everything."

Sally Smith, executive director of the National Association to Advance Fat Acceptance, agreed.

"What about someone who's 50 percent overweight, or 50 pounds overweight? For most fat people, it's not a disability, so this doesn't address the whole problem," she said.

The act protects obese people in cases where the obesity severely limits them and is caused by a physical disorder. It also protects people who are not limited but are regarded as disabled because of obesity.

Using that second provision, the EEOC filed a brief in July on behalf of Bonnie Cook of Rhode Island. The 300-pound woman was turned down for an attendant's job at a state school for the mentally retarded, the same job she had twice held earlier when she weighed about 100 pounds less.

A jury last year determined she had probably been discriminated against and reinstated her with $100,000 in damages. Rhode Island appealed. The U.S. 1st Circuit Court of Appeals is expected to rule soon.

The EEOC brief pointed out that Ms. Cook is protected under the disabilities act because her employer apparently thought her weight impaired her even though she said she had no limitations.

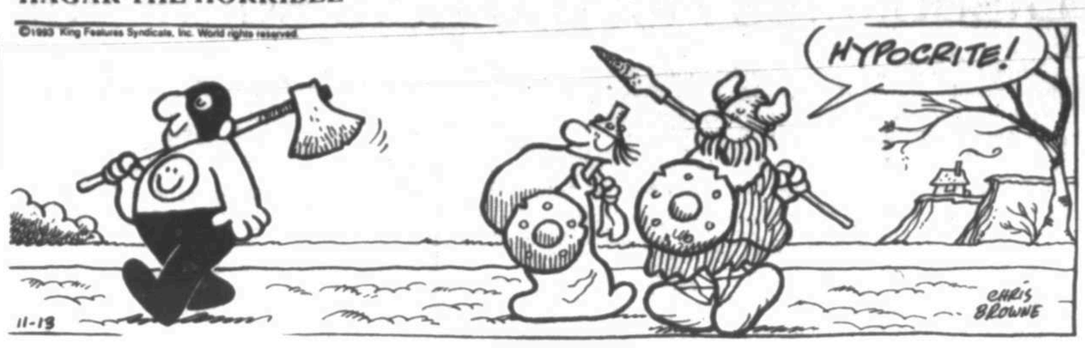

But the commission also took the opportunity to clarify the definition of obesity it will use in enforcing the act. It said that even if an obese person could lose weight, "it is not necessary that a condition be involuntary or immutable to be covered."

Mary Jo Buttafuoco wants her husband, Joey to be free

NEW YORK — Joey Buttafuoco may have slept with 16-year-old Amy Fisher, but his gunshot-victim wife says he shouldn't have to go to jail for it.

"It doesn't make any sense. Joey is a productive member of society," Mary Jo Buttafuoco told "A Current Affair" in an interview.

"He owns a business," she said. "He pays taxes. To take him out of that environment and put him behind bars, where he is now sucking from the system instead of contributing to the system, is ridiculous."

Buttafuoco, 37, faces up to six months in prison when he is sentenced Monday. In October, after 1½ years of denials, he admitted his affair with Fisher and pleaded guilty to third-degree rape for sleeping with a minor.

Mrs. Buttafuoco, 38, who was nearly killed in the May 1992 love-triangle shooting, said the judge should take her husband's close family ties into consideration.

"He has a 13-year-old son who loves him very much and needs him," she said. "He has a 10-year-old daughter who just worships the ground he walks on. And he's got me, who loves him."

FORGE, Tenn. — Dolly Parton, who certainly likes wearing makeup, is starting a new line of cosmetics.

Parton

"Next to music, makeup is my first love. If I hadn't been a musician, I would've been a beautician," she said Thursday.

She calls her 12-item line for Revlon the Dolly Parton's Beauty Confidence Collection. It goes on sale in January, when an infomercial will be broadcast and people can call to buy the set for $100.

"It makes me feel better about myself and that's why I call it Dolly Parton Confidence," the big-haired, glitter queen of country music said at a makeup party she had at her theme park, Dollywood.

BARCELONA, Spain — If Mario Vargas Llosa could rewrite his life, he'd cut out the part where he got involved in politics.

"A writer can contribute more to politics if he dedicates himself to what he really knows how to do — write," the Peruvian author told the Spanish news agency EFE in a story Friday.

The 57-year-old Vargas Llosa was granted Spanish citizenship in July. He hasn't been to Peru since 1991, a year after he lost a presidential runoff to Alberto Fujimori.

He was in Barcelona to promote his latest novel, "Lituma in The Andes." The book recently won the Planeta Prize, a top award in Spain. Vargas Llosa said his next book will be about the French-Peruvian feminist Flora Tristan.

NEW YORK — A construction worker found a loaded gun hidden in a bathroom at the Ed Sullivan Theater, home to David Letterman's "Late Show."

Someone apparently stashed the .38-caliber semiautomatic in the drop ceiling, police spokesman Scott Bloch said. The gun fell out Thursday night when the worker began removing the ceiling in the continuing renovation of the theater.

Police didn't know who owns the gun, Bloch said.

Rosemary Keenan, a Letterman spokeswoman, said he had no comment.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II returned to the Vatican on Friday after an overnight hospital stay for a shoulder fracture he suffered in a fall on some steps.

The 73-year-old pontiff will need six weeks to fully recover and months before swimming and skiing again. He will resume most activities, but canceled audiences Friday and Saturday as well as a visit to a Rome parish on Sunday.

John Paul tripped and fell down four steps during a Vatican audience Thursday. He was treated for a dislocated and fractured right shoulder.

He has to eat with his left hand but can sign documents with his right.

"He has already tried it and managed to move the (right) hand enough to sign," said Dr. Luigi Candia, medical chief at Gemelli Polyclinic. "(But) he can't lift the fork to his mouth."

The pope's orthopedist, Dr. Gianfranco Fineschi, said his arm must remain bandaged and immobile for four weeks, followed by two weeks of physical therapy.

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said John Paul was feeling well, was out of pain and slept peacefully at the hospital Thursday night.

LOS ANGELES — Life behind the camera is more rewarding than acting for Liv Ullmann.

"Acting is something I'm happy to say goodbye to," said the 54-year-old actress, whose films include "Persona," "Cries and Whispers" and "Autumn Sonata." "I'd really like to replace it professionally with writing and directing."

"Sofie," her directorial debut, opened recently and received favorable reviews. The film, based on a novel, chronicles the life of a Jewish woman in 19th century Copenhagen.

Besides directing, Miss Ullmann wrote the screenplay.

Woman sues pastor over 'prostitute' remark

Grandmother claims televangelist's remark left her 'totally devastated,' caused husband to kick her, children out of house.

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas grandmother has filed a lawsuit against a local televangelist who announced to the church's congregation that she was a prostitute.

Della Washington, 50, a mother of six and grandmother of five, filed the lawsuit this week seeking unspecified damages for slander against the Rev. W.V. Grant, pastor of Eagle's Nest Family Church.

In the lawsuit, Mrs. Washington said Grant's remark was false, left her "totally devastated" and caused her husband to kick her and her children out of the house.

"He believed what the preacher had said to him was the gospel," Mrs. Washington told The Dallas Morning News.

The woman's husband, Phillip Washington, told the newspaper that he believed his wife was a prostitute even before the preacher announced it at church, but he declined to elaborate.

"He (Grant) said that on July 4, and we split up on June 15," Washington said. "I knew it before he even told me."

The lawsuit alleges that Grant approached the woman's husband during a morning church service and said aloud to the entire congregation, "Your wife is in prostitution. She's become a prostitute."

"We've got a tape where the Rev. Grant says this at the service," attorney William McKenzie, who represents Mrs. Washington, said.

Grant was out of town on a trip with his wife and was not available for comment, a church official said.

Dallas County criminal records show that a Della Washington pleaded guilty in July 1990 to a misdemeanor charge of prostitution. But that woman, who received a 45-day jail term and an $800 fine, is 32 and lived on Marsalis Street in Dallas.

Mrs. Washington said she never lived on Marsalis and pointed out that her name in 1990 was Della Butler. She and Washington were married in 1992, she said.

The lawsuit alleges that the statements were false and malicious and caused Mrs. Washington to suffer mental anguish, damage to her reputation and ended her marriage.

Energy chief outlines SSC relief plans

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — Employees of the defunct superconducting super collider will learn details of their promised severance package the day before Thanksgiving, Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary told them Friday.

O'Leary said the package likely will include a severance award; relocation compensation; $5,000 to $7,000 for retraining; standard medical benefits; and help finding a new job. The government also will consider offering some help to people who bought homes near the supercollider, she said.

She told the workers that about half of them probably will lose their jobs on Jan. 7.

About 2,000 people are employed at the $11 billion particle accelerator shot down by Congress.

O'Leary met with several hundred of the employees in what she characterized as a private "family meeting" that was hostile at times. It was her first visit to the site since Congress voted last month to shut down the collider.

"I felt it was very important for the employees to be able to vent to me, to be very open and honest," O'Leary said afterwards.

"I didn't expect it to be a love feast. But I am the secretary of the Department of Energy and the moral leader of that project, and so I went down there to talk to my family about the next steps we should all be taking," she said.

After meeting with the workers, O'Leary appeared in Dallas at a rally for the North American Free Trade Agreement.

The Energy Department is still assessing how the work will stop, but similar closedowns show about half of the workers should be laid off in the early months, O'Leary said.

"These things we know: No. 1, standing still doing no work, the burn rate on the taxpayer's money is huge, and I've been instructed to stop that," she said.

"I said today I'm not clear that that is the exact number. We will know that likely just after Thanksgiving."

The Energy Department will work with employee representatives to help craft the severance package.

O'Leary said she already had torn up a proposed severance plan that "had been drawn up as sort of a standard government package without looking at the fact that this was a very unique site."

"What we intend to do by the Wednesday before Thanksgiving is process people's major concerns and address them in this severance package," she said.

Customers get sexy legs rather than drumsticks

DALLAS (AP) — When Sonny Bryan's Smokehouse customers called a toll-free order line, all they wanted were some smoked turkeys. But what they got was a little more fiery.

The smokehouse, a Dallas-based family barbecue business established in 1910, changed its 1-800 telephone number earlier this year. But apparently, not all of his customers got the news — or the new number.

The new number, 1-800-5-SONNYS, was printed on all packaging, except the boxes that the turkeys are shipped in. Those boxes have the old number with the tagline "Taste the Legend."

So when customers dialed 1-800-SONNY-4-U to order some turkeys, they were somewhat surprised when the call was answered by a sensuous, breathy voice offering a little more than turkey legs.

The problem? The discontinued number was resold to a company offering lewd phone sex messages. Sonny Bryan's said it has received phone calls from all over the country informing them about their lewd sex line.

Tim Ruys, executive vice president for the smokehouse, joked that "We don't think a co-op promotion will work" with the sex line.

Both sides cry spy during Hutchison investigation

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawyers for U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison and prosecutors Friday accused each other of trying to spy on each other and abusing a grand jury investigating Mrs. Hutchison.

"I don't want the state to have the ability to come into my office and find out what I'm doing," said Dick DeGuerin, Mrs. Hutchison's lead attorney.

But Travis County First Assistant District Attorney Steve McCleery said that Mrs. Hutchison's defense team was trying to "sneak into the grand jury room through the back door."

The dispute was over Alicia Fechtel, a witness ordered to appear before the grand jury that is investigating allegations of official misconduct against Mrs. Hutchison while she was state treasurer.

Ms. Fechtel was the treasury's general counsel under Mrs. Hutchison. Ms. Fechtel's attorney in the grand jury probe is Ron Woods, who also is helping DeGuerin in Mrs. Hutchison's case.

McCleery said he feared Ms. Fechtel will tell Woods about what are supposed to be secret grand jury proceedings, and that would then be told to DeGuerin. In addition, Ms. Fechtel is working for DeGuerin on the legal representation of Mrs. Hutchison.

McCleery asked State District Judge Bob Perkins to order Woods not to divulge anything about the grand jury concerning Ms. Fechtel to DeGuerin.

Perkins approved the order, but acknowledged that if Ms. Fechtel wants to join her defense with Mrs. Hutchison's then Woods can share information with DeGuerin.

"The law is clear that a person who testifies before a grand jury has the right to counsel, has the right to consult fully with his counsel and counsel can share that information if it's in the best interest of his client," DeGuerin later told reporters.

DeGuerin asked Perkins to dismiss a subpoena for Ms. Fechtel, because he said that since she is working as a legal representative of Mrs. Hutchison, what she knows is protected by attorney-client privilege.

"They (prosecutors) are not entitled to spy in our camp," he said.

But Perkins denied the motion. He said that if the grand jury asks questions that would violate the attorney-client privilege then Ms. Fechtel can assert her protections.

Parents seek answers after hints of abuse by teacher

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — A male teacher in an elementary school has been informally suspended with pay while police and school officials investigate parents' complaints that he sexually molested female students and improperly punished male students.

A Jacksonville woman told the Tyler Morning Telegraph that she notified Jean Mixon, principal of Eastside Elementary School on Wednesday after her daughter began crying at home Tuesday and begged not to be taken to school anymore.

Jacksonville Police Chief Floyd W. Stiefer said officers are "in the process of interviewing children and parents." The investigation began Thursday, he said.

Superintendent Walter Harris confirmed the investigation, but declined to comment further.

According to the mother, the girl was "afraid" of the teacher because the teacher was allegedly "touching her everywhere."

An older daughter who had been in the teacher's class last school year also made the same accusation and said she did not mention it earlier because of being "afraid to tell," the woman said.

A father claimed some boys in the teacher's class were punished by being pinched on the shoulders or placed in a locker where they were forced to stand for up to an hour and a half with their knees bent, the newspaper reported.

When the boys cried, the teacher humiliated them, the father complained.

Eastside School houses approximately 570 students altogether in first, second and third grades. School officials say the complaints involve about 20 children.

Author: Severe diet, exercise may reverse artery blockage

ATLANTA (AP) — A very low-fat vegetarian diet and 90 minutes a day of exercise and stress reduction may reverse artery blockage in heart-attack patients, says a study by the author of a best-selling diet book.

The study by Dr. Dean Ornish, author of the current best seller "Eat More, Weigh Less," was criticized by other researchers who said the treatment was too difficult and costly, and that the study didn't have enough patients to support Ornish's claims.

"If I put this out to my patients, I'm not going to get half of them to buy into it," because it's too severe, said Dr. Thomas A. Pearson of the Mary Imogene Bassett Hospital in Cooperstown, N.Y. "It's a very small study that makes a limited point."

According to Pearson, the point of the study, reported Wednesday at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association, is that some people might be able to lower their cholesterol through diet as effectively as through drugs.

The danger is that people may then reject cholesterol-lowering drugs, even when they need them, he said.

"People will say to the physician, 'I'm not going to take your drugs because I've got this book, and if I follow it I'll be fine,' " he said.

Ornish, director of the Preventive Medicine Research Institute in Sausalito, Calif., is now training other medical centers to administer the program. It will cost patients $3,500 for the first 12 weeks, and $1,500 for the next nine months.

The Mutual of Omaha insurance company has agreed to cover the costs of the program at the Immanuel Medical Center in Omaha, Neb. The company also has given $100,000 to the medical center to help cover the start-up costs.

Some researchers said the cost was high. "You don't have to write a check for $3,500 to treat this disease," said Dr. K. Lance Gould of the University of Texas Medical School in Houston.

Dr. Neil Stone of the Northwestern University School of Medicine in Chicago said that the extreme diet and lifestyle changes advocated by Ornish might be helpful for people with heart disease.

But they are probably not necessary to prevent heart disease in healthy people, he said. "It takes more to reverse disease than prevent it," Stone said.

Ornish's study involved 41 patients with heart disease. Twenty-two were given a vegetarian diet with no more than 10 percent of calories coming from fat. They were told to exercise 30 minutes daily and meditate and perform relaxation exercises for an hour each day.

The 19 others were put on a standard diet, with no more than 30 percent of calories from fat, as recommended by the government's National Cholesterol Education Program. They also were asked to exercise.

The coronary arteries of the first group were 43.6 percent blocked, on average, when the study began. After four years, that blockage was reduced to an average of 39.7 percent.

Struggle for leadership of obscure religious group is in hands of court

By Michael deCourcy Hinds
N.Y. Times News Service

PHILADELPHIA— A case that is winding its way up the Pennsylvania appellate ladder holds the potential to help clarify the judiciary's authority in religious disputes, constitutional scholars say.

The legal battle involves a struggle for the leadership, and control of $5 million in assets, of a secretive religious organization, the Fraternitas Rosae Crucis, a small Christian group that has a rose and a cross as its symbol.

In 1989, four dissidents in the fraternity ejected the leader, called the supreme grand master, and installed a new one. The ousted leader sued the dissidents in state court, arguing that he remained the leader because the effort to remove him had not followed the religious order's rules. The court agreed and ordered the dissidents to step aside. The dissidents appealed, saying that a civil court has no business interpreting the rules of a religious organization.

Constitutional scholars say this area of jurisprudence is murkier than most. "The Supreme Court rulings in this area have not been models of clarity, and in my mind, the appellants could either win or lose," said Bruce Fein, a former associate deputy attorney general in the Reagan administration who specializes in constitutional law.

The organization's headquarters is on a 77-acre campus in the rural Bucks County township of East Rock Hill, north of here. The campus, called Beverly Hall, has about 15 fieldstone buildings arrayed around a 20-foot-tall stone pyramid. A half-dozen fraternity members live on the campus and work in its publications office, school and library.

The adherents of the Rosicrucian fraternity, which has secret initiations and procedures, believe they know about secret laws and superior beings that guide the universe, said Dr. Robert S. Ellwood, a professor of religion at the University of Southern California. The fraternity, one of three separate Rosicrucian societies in the United States, is an offshoot of a Christian sect founded in 1614 by a Lutheran minister in Germany.

The century-old branch with headquarters in Bucks County, and its affiliated Church of Illumination, says it has about 850 members across the country and 150 in Europe.

The fraternity's belief in reincarnation plays a role in the leadership struggle. Dr. R. Swinburne Clymer, the first leader of the group to take the title supreme grand master, taught his followers that after he died he would return in another life to resume his duties. He died in 1966, and Rosicrucians are awaiting his return. He left behind a body of "Organic Law" that, among other things, laid out a complicated procedure for selecting a supreme grand master and, in emergencies, removing him.

Gerald E. Poesnecker, a 63-year-old chiropractor, became the fraternity's supreme grand master in 1983, but on Sept. 12, 1989, four other leaders took control of the organization's offices in Bucks County and deposed Poesnecker, replacing him with Paul P. Ricchio, 76, who is also a chiropractor.

The dissidents said Poesnecker had mismanaged the assets of the fraternity's nonprofit corporation, and they challenged his appointment as supreme grand master, saying it had not followed the Organic Law.

When Poesnecker took the case to the Court of Common Pleas, a state jurisdiction in Bucks County, the dissidents argued that the Organic Laws were so imbued with religious meaning that a civil court could not interpret them. But the trial court ruled in 1990 that the correct procedures for dismissal had not been followed, and Poesnecker remained the supreme grand master. The court also appointed a custodian to re-organize finances and make procedures more accountable to its members, in conformance with state law.

The dissidents appealed to the Commonwealth Court, a state appellate court for cases involving nonprofit corporations, arguing that only fraternity members had the right to resolve their religious dispute. In September, the seven-judge court unanimously upheld the trial court's decision. In mid-October, the dissidents appealed to the Pennsylvania supreme court, which has not decided whether to hear the case or let the earlier ruling stand.

Paul S. Diamond, a lawyer for the dissidents, maintains that only fraternity members have the right to resolve their religious dispute. "Can you imagine if there was a dispute over who the head rabbi of the Jewish faith was?" he asks. "And the Common Pleas Court of Bucks County interpreted Talmudic Law to settle it?"

Church of England to ordain women

By Ari L. Goldman
N.Y. Times News Service

In London this week, Parliament gave its final approval to a measure that will open the priesthood to women in the Church of England. The House of Lords gave its overwhelming approval on Tuesday after a similar vote last week in the House of Commons.

The measure, which was initiated with the church leadership, requires government approval because it involves the state-sanctioned church. The measure now goes to Queen Elizabeth II, whose approval will make it law. Then the church's General Synod will put the change into effect.

The move to ordain women has prompted strong protests from some church conservatives, who see it as a violation of Scripture and as dividing the Church of England from the Catholic Church, which does not ordain women. Some members of the Church of England have left and joined the Catholic Church, including a former Bishop of London, Graham Leonard. Other members say they will leave after the first women are ordained.

Among the supporters of the ordination of women are the Archbishop of Canterbury, George L. Carey, who said in arguing for passage in the House of Lords: "We have well over 1,000 women deacons who are offering their skills and gifts to the service of Christ and many of them see this legislation as offering the fulfillment of their ministry."

The first women are expected to be ordained into the Church of England in April, after the Easter holiday, since ordinations do not take place in the pre-Easter Lenten season.

Study: Politicians may encounter dangers in religious appeals

By Ari L. Goldman
N.Y. Times News Service

The breakdown of religious affiliations within each major political party is pretty close to the breakdown of the nation as a whole, according to a new analysis released after the elections this week.

The Democratic Party, often seen as the home of Roman Catholics, is only slightly more Catholic in make up (28 percent) than the Republican Party (24 percent) or the Independent Party (26 percent). The Republican Party is roughly even with the Democratic Party in the number of people who identify themselves as "born again" Christians (41 percent to 39 percent).

Proportionately, there is a greater variation when it comes to the party affiliation of Jews. Among Democrats, 3 percent are Jewish. Among Independents, 2 percent are Jewish and among Republicans, 1 percent are Jewish.

The analysis is based on national voter surveys taken by the Gallup Organization throughout the 1992 presidential election year. It was released by an affiliate of Gallup, the Princeton Religious Research Center. Sample sizes were 40,000 or more. The margin of sampling error is plus or minus 1 percentage point.

It was the first time such an analysis was done.

Among the other findings were that Republicans are somewhat more likely to be church members than Democrats (79 percent to 71 percent). Members of both parties were about equal in their agreement with the statement that religion is "very important" in their lives (65 to 63 percent).

Republicans and Democrats had roughly the same number of people who profess no religious belief (6 percent to 7 percent), but Independents had the largest proportion with 13 percent.

Based on the analysis, politicians would be wise to stay away from narrow religious appeals, said the author of the study, Robert Bezilla. "They should not charge that they have the moral high ground and that their opponents are irreligious or non-religious," he said. "The voters are interested in moral issues, such as abortion, but not on whether a candidate is a Methodist or a Catholic or a Born Again. To most voters, that is irrelevant."

Asbury United Methodist Church is having its annual Fall Art and Craft Festival from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. today at Midland County Exhibit Building, East Highway 80.

The festival will have 103 booths containing works by local and area exhibitors. Items include, among others, clothes, pottery, needlework, crochet, woodwork and Christmas items.

The church also will have a bakery and homemade ice cream. In the kitchen will be chili, chopped beef sandwiches, nachos, burritos, Frito pie, hot dogs, dessert and drinks.

Admission is $1 for adults and children 12 years old and older. Proceeds go to the church's budget.

■ Union to hold auction

The Women's Missionary Union of Ranchland Heights Baptist Church will sponsor an auction at 7 p.m. Dec. 3 in the Suburban Lions Club, 2550 Flynt.

Proceeds from the sale of arts, crafts, foods and quilts made by church members will be given for foreign missions. The Lottie Moon Christmas Offering and this auction are held annually. Anyone wishing to participate in making items may contact the WMU president, Sarah Crawford, 684-7048.

The young people will have a cornbread and bean supper at 5:30 p.m. the same day. This is a fund raiser for the youth.

■ Church to honor pastor

The Apostolic Assembly Church, 2309 S. Fort Worth St., will be celebrating Pastor's Day at 3 p.m. Sunday.

The Rev. V.B. Torres, along with his wife, Maria Torres, has pastored the local church since it was established here in 1970.

The church has grown from a one-room building with a small congregation consisting of a family of five and no musicians or clergy assistance to one of the largest predominately Spanish speaking churches in the area, said a release from the church.

The guest speaker Sunday will be the Rev. Jesus Andrade, Fort Worth. A dinner will follow the honorary service.

The public is invited to attend the service.

■ Devotions series set

A special series of devotions is being given at the 5:30 p.m. Thursday prayer services at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

The focus of the devotions will be the Lord's Prayer. The schedule is "Hallowed by They Name," Thursday; "Thanksgiving Day Evensong," Nov. 25; "Thy Kingdon Come," Dec. 2; "Give Us this Day," Dec. 9; "Forgive Us Our Debts," Dec. 16; "Lead Us Not into Temptation," Dec. 23; and "For Thine is the Kingdom," Dec. 30.

Nursery care will be provided for the 5:30 p.m. Thursday prayer services with prior notice.

■ Seminary offers course

The West Texas Extension of Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary will present the course "The Theological Task in the Modern World" Feb. 13 through May 15 at Grace Presbyterian Church, 2801 N. Garfield St.

"UNDER CONSTRUCTION"

It is interesting to note our various construction preferences. Some of us find sheer delight in the tactile texture and design of a building, though the edifice itself may be transient in endurance. Others seek satisfaction only in the technically perfect structure which will endure for many years. Then, there are those who simply prefer to watch others do the building. That's fine too. Our world would be rather "lopsided" if our innate preferences were all identically planned.

Yet, there is one set of plans that leaves little room for variance...the plan by which we construct our lives...that which we must do for ourselves. We must construct our lives upon faith as solid as the walls within which we worship each Sabbath, and design them within the guidelines set forth in God's Word. Finally, we must pray each day for the Creator's guidance, for truly we are each..."under construction".

Judge: 'Pray' plates are OK

OREGON CITY, Ore. (AP) — Gloria Iverson no longer feels like a "second-class citizen" after a judge ruled she may buy vanity license plates that exhort fellow drivers to "Pray."

"Hallelujah, Jesus," she exclaimed when she learned of the ruling Monday.

The businesswoman and lay minister had sued the state Motor Vehicles Division, claiming its ban on plates that "promote or discourage any form of exercise of religious belief" violates the United States and Oregon constitutions.

Clackamas County Circuit Court Judge Sid Brockley agreed. He ruled that the state "created a limited public forum" by allowing car owners to purchase the right to express their personal ideas and opinions on custom license plates.

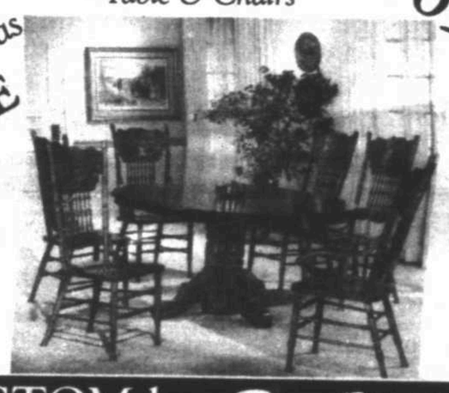

Iverson may have to wait more than a year for her specialized plates if the Oregon Motor Vehicles Division decides to appeal, Assistant Attorney General Wendy Paris said.

Scholar urges compromise to reform 'Culture of Disbelief'

By David Briggs
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — In the fractious world of religion and politics, where the soul of a nation is often portrayed as hanging on the thread of a single issue such as abortion or school prayer, a calm voice of compromise is emerging.

The herald of a mutually respectful approach to defining the boundaries of church and state is Yale Law School Professor Stephen Carter, a soft-spoken self-described liberal who rejects the notion that religion should be excluded from the body politic.

Why not, for example, allow "safe sex" programs in schools, but give parents the right to excuse their children if it violates their religious principles?

And just as religiously based principles motivated the civil rights movement of the 1960s, so do individuals and groups today who oppose abortion on moral and spiritual grounds have the right to make their voices heard in political debates, Carter says.

"It is impossible for a private individual to violate the separation of church and state," he said at a recent Yale forum on "Law and Religion: Values in Contemporary America."

"The danger the separation of church and state guards against is not religion," he said. "It is the state."

Carter recently entered the literary and political limelight with a provocative new book "The Culture of Disbelief: How American Law and Politics Trivialize Religious Devotion." In it, he argues the First Amendment that was intended to prevent government interference in religion and safeguard religious freedom has been twisted in recent years in attempts to exclude religion from any role in public affairs.

Among the book's many interested readers has been President Clinton, who recommended it at a recent meeting with religious leaders.

Why not, for example, allow "safe sex" programs in schools, but give parents the right to excuse their children if it violates their religious principles?

"The people of faith in this country ought to be able to say that religion shapes their approach to public debate without someone saying, 'Oh, you're just a right-winger,' " the president said.

Just how necessary a common ground may be in the contentious debate was dramatically illustrated at the forum held recently at Battell Chapel as part of the Yale Law School alumni weekend.

Sen. John Danforth of Missouri, the forum moderator, introduced the discussion by disputing the idea that the state cannot legislate morality, since that is what lawmakers do in legislation from criminal law to health care reform.

When political foes say morality cannot be legislated, Danforth said, what they may mean is "you can't do it while I'm busy doing it."

During the ensuing debate among Yale Law School alumni, religious broadcaster Pat Robertson argued that proper legal concerns over the propriety of sectarian school prayers has steadily evolved into hostility toward religion.

He said his American Center for Law and Justice gets 30 complaints a week from people who claim their rights have been infringed.

Among them, he said, were the cases of a 6-year-old girl told to sit down and put her head on the desk for giving a religious answer in response to a teacher's question about the meaning of Christmas. In another case, Robertson said, a young man who brought a Bible to read in school during free time was told by a teacher to "Get this thing out of here."

Relating official hostility toward religion to the nation's high rates of abortion, divorce and illiteracy, Robertson said, "Our nation is at risk. It is at risk because we have a naked public square."

But Yale Law School Professor Bruce Ackerman said a naked public square — one where religious convictions are left out of public policy debates — is a good thing.

If political action based on religious motivations is legitimized, he said, civic culture likely will degenerate and the nation will be driven apart by forces that have the potential to turn ugly because of their emotional power.

While Ackerman evoked images of Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein and Robertson pointed to the Holocaust to buttress their points of view, Carter drew sustained applause in his appeal for an understanding based on mutual respect.

Respect means recognizing the legitimate concerns of those who fear an individual religious group will dictate public policy, but also recognizing the right of religious individuals to participate in public policy debates, he said.

Pointing back to the civil rights movement, Carter makes the argument that religious rhetoric — in its best sense and in its best causes — can enable the nation to see moral truths.

While sometimes it may contribute to tension, he said, religion can also "bring out the very best in America and the American people."

Professor: Televangelism to grow despite latest scandals

By Alan Sayre
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS — At first glance, scandals that hit the television empires of evangelists Jim Bakker, Jimmy Swaggart, Oral Roberts and Robert Tilton appeared to have taken their toll on a business that blossomed throughout much of the 1980s.

A.C. Nielsen Co., the overseer of television ratings, says not only have the number of religious shows dropped sharply since 1988, but the number of homes reached by evangelists' broadcasts has gone down.

But don't believe that televangelists are a thing of the past, says a communications professor who has extensively studied not only the recent video preachers, but those who go back to the pioneer days of radio.

"One of the characteristics of America is that we're disinterested in history," said Quentin Schultze of Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Mich., and author of "Televangelism and American Culture." "We tend not to learn the lessons of history as well as we should."

Evangelists have always carried their share of baggage in the minds of some. Aimee Semple McPherson was accused by critics of staging her own kidnapping in the 1920s. Father (Charles) Coughlin's anti-Semitic and anti-New Deal broadcasts were squelched by the Catholic Church during the 1930s.

The latest round of scandal went like this:

Bakker went to federal prison for mishandling his followers' contributions.

Swaggart was connected with prostitutes and sued for defamation by a rival Louisiana evangelist who claimed that Swaggart was afraid of his planned TV competition.

Roberts turned off many with his claim that God would kill him if he didn't raise enough money.

Just last month, Robert Tilton, fighting ABC-TV, the Texas attorney general and numerous unhappy contributors in court, pulled his television shows off the air amid allegations that, among other things, requests for prayers were tossed in the trash can after the checks were deposited.

"The fact that Tilton was so successful on the heels of the other scandals shows that people don't learn anything," Schultze said.

Schultze sees a "very bright future" for televangelism. For now, the scandals have hurt and an economic recession has further dried up the flow of checks.

According to A.C. Nielsen, the number of regularly scheduled religious programs shown on over-the-air television dropped from 55 to 39 between 1988 and early 1993. Those carried by at least 100 stations fell from nine to six.

But many televangelists are now buying cheaper time on cable television, where they can target a more-specific audience, Schultze said.

Why is there still a market for televangelism?

"There is a tremendous religious ignorance in the United States," Schultze said. "There are a lot of people who believe in God, but they have a poor understanding of doctrine and the Bible. We have a religious culture, but a high degree of religious ignorance. I'm not saying stupidity, but a high degree of just not knowing."

Schultze also said Americans love personalities, whether they are entertainers, sports figures, news anchors or preachers.

"People are less interested in ideas than they are people," he said. "Televangelism tends to be personality oriented."

Then there's a tendency to believe that the solution is in technology, Schultze said.

"This is one of the principal appeals of televangelists," he said.

■ Midland Lee coach Earl Miller thinks his team can have a long playoff run after missing postseason action last year.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

LUBBOCK — For the 10th time in 11 seasons, Midland Lee, 8-1-1, is making a Class 5A state football playoff voyage and that trip begins here today at 2 p.m. at Texas Tech's Jones Stadium against the 6-4 Amarillo High Golden Sandies.

The playoffs aren't new to either of these two teams as the bi-district round of the Small School (Division II) bracket arrives, but it is a special game for both squads involved.

A year ago Amarillo High advanced to the state semifinals, beating both District 4-5A Small School entries Abilene Cooper and Odessa Permian along the way. Both of those wins came here at Jones Stadium.

That was a high water mark for the Sandies in recent years and they would like to add to the prestige of District 3-5A with another upset over 4-5A.

"It would be nice if we could do that again this year," said Amarillo High coach Larry Dippel, who has had his Sandies in the playoffs in 10 of his 19 years at the school. "However, Lee is a really good team and we've been incon-

Stars might move

FORT WORTH — Dallas Stars owner Norman Green, who recently moved his franchise from Minneapolis to make more money, says he might consider moving his hockey team again if Dallas doesn't improve Reunion Arena or even build a new one.
The Canadian millionaire told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram he wants to stay in the Dallas-Fort Worth market, which has greeted his team's arrival with great enthusiasm and big crowds.
He said that the city needs to do more improvements to Reunion or, preferably, build his team a new home with luxury suites to boost his bottom line.

Could this be the year?

■ The District 4-5A girls basketball teams have a tough league schedule to help prepare to end 3-5A's dominance in the state playoffs.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff writer

1993-94 is turning out to be a hot year for girls basketball in District 4-5A. Just ask Midland Lee coach Elise Kail and Midland High coach Jim Raughton.

■ Girls Basketball Preview

"Our district is a lot stronger than it has been in the past years," Raughton said. The Lady Bulldogs kick off the season Tuesday hosting Class 4A powerhouse Big Spring at the Chaparral Center starting at 4:40 p.m. with the sub-varsity games.

"It's going to be real close," Kail added. "It was pretty equal last year and it's even more so this year." The Lady Rebels travel to perrenial Class 2A playoff team Wall Tuesday with the junior varsity game starting at 6 p.m.

"Every team has got the team players and the good athletes, the skill players. I mean it's going to be tough," Raughton said.

"And I hate it when that happens," joked Raughton. "I want Midland High to be the only team that has the good players."

All kidding aside, however, the more competition, the better the level of competition and talent.

It all goes back to "The Streak."

Mustangs run by Happy Hill

By Mike Butts
Staff writer

ABILENE — Whether the pen is mightier than the sword may still be open for debate. But Midland Christian proved here Friday night, at least in six-man football, the leg is mightier than the arm.

The Mustangs crushed Granbury Happy Hill Farm 64-8 in a Texas Association of Parochial and Private Schools regional playoff game. They stopped the Pioneers vaunted passing game and ran around and through its defense. Midland Christian rushed for 255 yards and took the game after one half of play because of the six-man 45-point rule.

Happy Hill struggled for 146 yards passing — well below its norm.

"They're just so quick, our guys were open but by the time the ball got there they just broke on it and took away things we've been able to do all year," Happy Hill coach Gary Rickard said.

Led by Clay Gunter's 135 yards and Kyle Jackson's three touchdown runs, the Mustangs won their 29th game in row and took their first postseason step toward winning a third straight TAPPS six-man state title. They scored on all nine of their possessions.

"We feel like we can score on anybody," Mustang coach James Blake said. "We stayed (in) tight (formations) tonight. We only spread it out when we need to."

Happy Hill (8-3) came in with more than 3,800 yards passing. They threw early and often, but Pioneer quarterback Bill Climer was under constant pressure from the Midland Christian defense and ended up throwing 24 incompletions in his 33 attempts. After completing his first two throws he threw 15 straight incompletions.

"We had much more time to throw the ball in other games this year," Rickard said. "Most times (teams) cover with five and rush one but they're quick enough they can cover four (and

Andrews loses shootout

ANDREWS — For nine weeks the defense of the undefeated Andrews Mustangs was the toast of the town.

Sweetwater quarterback Terry Clemmer simply turned it to toast.

Clemmer threw for 335 and four touchdowns to lead Sweetwater to a 51-40 win and the District 3-4A championship here Friday.

Sweetwater, 7-3, advances to play Plainview. The game is tenatively scheduled for 2 p.m. next Saturday at Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

Andrews, 9-1, will play Canyon Randall Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

LUBBOCK — If there was a perceived "hump" in the playoff road for Abilene Cooper, the Cougars acted like a steamroller in erasing the problem here at Lowry Field Friday night.

Cooper ran and passed its way to a 27-13 Class 5A Small School bi-district victory over previously unbeaten Lubbock Monterey in what Randy Allen called his biggest victory while at Cooper.

"I felt this was a huge win for us," Allen said. "It's the biggest win since we've been at Cooper.

Red Devils head to playoffs with shutout

By Bill Petitt

RANKIN — The Rankin Red Devil defense made a statement early in the game and turned it into an exclamation point when the final horn sounded in a convincing 35-0 win over the Garden City Bearkats Friday night.

Rankin claimed District 8-1A's last playoff spot an l will face either Petersburg or Anton next weekend at a site and time to be determined.

Garden City, which went into the game needing a win to make the playoffs finished the season 2-7, but 2-2 in league play.

It would be hard to believe that the turning point in the game would be a missed field goal by Red Devil kicker Robert Guadarrama.

But it was.

With Rankin holding a slim 7-0 with 1:48 until halftime, Rankin head coach Raul Sanchez sent Guadarrama in for a field goal to give the Red Devils a 10-0 lead. but Guadarrama missed the 25 yard chip shot.

At that point the Red Devils, 8-2 overall, arched its back and stiffened, holding Garden City on three downs. Sanchez used two timeouts during final minute and took the ball back after an 11 yard punt and score with :02 to play

Like its motto this year, the Midland Lee girls basketball squad hopes it's not the missing piece to the Class 5A playoffs puzzle.

The Lady Rel s, behind third-year coa Elise Kail, failed to return to the playoffs last year because of some key injuries and and a string of close losses near the end of the season.

But as Kail revamps her offense around 6-foot-2 junior post Krissy Woodard, the Lady Rebels hope they can follow their team motto: T.E.A.M. — Together Everyone can Achieve More. Or as Kail puts it, "Don't be the missing piece to the puzzle.

"We've really got to have a team effort this season to make it back to the playoffs," Kail said. "These kids are a lot like the group I had two years ago. They get along so well and they like to help each other out."

Lee returns three starters from a team that finished 14-14 overall and 5-7 in District 4-5A play. There are also seven of the same faces from last year's varsity squad. That all leads to an experienced team.

"We're 11 deep and I've got four kids on the junior varsity that could move up any time," Kail said. "I've got seven kids back from last year and you can't beat that. Especially in this district where most of the schools only have three years in high school."

Abilene High and Abilene Cooper are the only schools in the district where the freshmen are on the same campus with the upper three classes.

Another strength for the Lady Rebels will be their height. Along with returning starter Woodard, a second team all-district performer as a sophomore, Lee has 5-10 post post Heather Huff and 5-11 post Deborah York. Also battling for a starting position inside will be 5-8 Brandy Allen, who lacks the height but is a solid, hard-working returner, Kail said.

Huff and Woodard are joined by honorable mention all-district wing Susan Seay as the returners for Lee. Letterwinners last year were Allen, Caroline Bryant, Dee Kendricks and Phyllis Turner.

Woodard is the team's top returning scorer with an average of 10.8 points per game. She is the leading returning rebounder with 8.5 per game.

"Height is definitely one of our strengths," Kail said. "And it's kind of fun because I've never coached height before."

Obviously, rebounding strength should go along with that height and Kail said her team is no different.

"We're an aggressive rebounding team and they (the players) like to be physical," Kail said.

One of Lee's weaknesses, however, stems from losing two all-district performers to graduation. Tanisha Mills and Tekeira Strambler, also outstanding track stars, were the main reason the Lady Rebels were a running team last year.

Mills and Strambler also led the team in rebounding and scoring last year. Strambler pumped in 16.0 points per game and grabbed 9.6 rebounds before missing the last half of district play with an injury. Mills was the leading rebounder with 11.6 and was second on the scoring chart with 12.9 points per outing.

"We lost a lot of speed," said Kail, of her two sprinters.

But the Lady Rebels are adjusting and the focus is now shifting to Woodard, who after getting over the shock of playing in her first varsity season as a sophomore, is returning a more confident and stronger player.

"She learned a whole lot last year and that gave her a base for this year," Kail said. "She knows what she has to do to help the team. She could be the strongest post in the district if she wants to be."

Woodard added, "The transition from being a freshman to a sophomore on the varsity is major. Now I know more what to expect."

And Seay, who played her first season as a Lady Rebel after transferring from Houston Klein last fall, is not too worried about the lack of speed in the backcourt.

"We don't have as much speed and we did a lot of fast-breaking last year," Seay said. "But our strong inside game is going to help that situation a lot."

Kendricks, who will move into the starting point guard role as soon as she heals from a back ailment, could make up for some of that speed, Kail said.

Kendricks said she is also hoping to help out with the leadership of the team.

"I need to be able to keep the team motivated," Kendricks said. "I'm used to being the one that is being motivated. But I know I can do it this year."

Filling out the rest of the Lee roster is wing Michelle Benson, wing Farrah Fisher and wing Nika Goodley. York played on the JV last season and she, along with Huff, were a strong part of Lee's volleyball team which finished second in district and advanced to the playoffs.

■ Midland High

Transition might be a strange label for the District 4-5A defending champion Midland High girls basketball team — at least for the people that followed the Lady Bulldogs last season.

After all, coach Jim Raughton is returning the top two scorers from last year's squad. That includes the district MVP and junior forward Amy Alcala, who earned that honor by leading the district in scoring as a sophomore, and all-district senior forward Julie Chancellor.

True, the Lady Bulldogs lost three starters to graduation, including all- district first teamer Charlotte Scharbauer and honorable mention pick Jackie Perez. But the loss that put Midland in the situation it is now was that of 6-foot-4 second team post Lisa Koss.

Without Koss, the Lady Bulldogs are without any real height at the post position. And that's why Raughton has moved from the half-court offense to the transition, or running, game.

"No, we don't have much size," Raughton said. "We're going to put more pressure in the backcourt and run a transition game."

While Koss was the third-leading scorer, with a district average of 8.7 points a game, she was almost always the tallest player on the court. She averaged 5.7 rebounds a game in league play. But Koss was most impressive at shot blocking and intimidating the opposing shooters, Raughton said.

"I don't have people that can play block to block with most of the people in this district and I'm not going to try to do that," Raughton said.

In the post position, Midland returns Michel Ann Thompson (5-10) and Elaine Rogers (5-11), a player Raughton dubbed the "most improved player so far this season." Thompson and Rogers didn't start last season but both got a large doses of playing time. Raughton is not fretting too much about the change, however.

For one thing, the Lady Bulldogs do have speed and quickness, the most important elements of the transition game.

'We're putting better quickness on the floor this year than in the last," Raughton said. "In the past we've had good size, but that sometimes places limitations on you."

Secondly, fourth-year coach Raughton admittedly recognizes when change is neccessary.

"If I don't have the people that can run that type of game, then I'm not going to do something we can't do," Raughton said. "...I understand girls basketball a lot better now and I understand more what girls are capable of. There are some things that girls do better than boys and vice-versa. Now I know what they are."

Alcala and Thompson are well-versed in their new game plan.

"We don't want to be in the half court," Thompson said. "We've got to be more aggressive and stronger."

Alcala added, "We're all about the same height and we've got to be able to get up and down the court."

Alcala carried the load offensively as a 16-year-old averaging 18.3 points per game in district play and is the type of player that you build an offense around. She is a pure shooter and at 5-8, she has enough size to play the power forward with her quick driving ability.

Chancellor averaged 13.1 points in district but virtually ran the offense from her guard-forward position, leading the team in assists with 3.8 per game. She's also physical and at 5-7 led the team in rebounds, grabbing six a game. Raughton also says Chancellor has become a better shooter during the off season.

Add that scoring power to some young but quick help in the backcourt — namely Casi Madison, Karie Cornelius, Lakendria Kendrick, Jamie Rand and Veronica Poage — and the Lady Bulldogs have a new recipe that they hope leads to the same success they experienced last season.

The rest of the lineup includes Marci Swinney, Kristi Pearson, O'Ganna Merrit, Laura Childress, Sheridan Gilkerson and Lisa Yanez.

The Lady Bulldogs finished with a 23-7 overall record and a 10-2 district record. Raughton's squad advanced to the regional qualifying round before losing to Amarillo Tascosa.

To prepare for what Raughton said is going to be an extremely competitive district, the Lady Bulldogs are playing a variety of playoff teams.

First up is Big Spring, a 4A team which had a legitimate chance to win state but lost a close one in the first round of playoffs to eventual state champ and perrenial power Levelland. In addition, the Lady Bulldogs will play in the mid-December Caprock Tournament in Amarillo, which features some of the strongest girls basketball in the state with a slate of Panhandle teams from all classifications.

HOOPS: Lee, MHS ready

(From 1C)

It's been 21 consecutive times that a 4-5A team has fallen to a highly-regarded 3-5A team of the Texas Panhandle in a playoff game.

Before the start of last season, the number was 18. And with the new playoff format allowing three teams to the playoffs, one of the playoff teams was hoping it could get a little farther along in postseason play and build up some momentum before facing the stumbling block 3-5A has become.

San Angelo Central and Abilene High, which tied for the runnerup spot, were the first victims and did not upset the 3-5A momentum. San Angelo lost at home to Tascosa in bi-district. Abilene almost pulled it off but fell in the end to Lubbock Monterey.

So it was up to district champ Midland. The Lady Bulldogs got the bye and were able to advance to the regional qualifying round before facing Tascosa. Midland battled back courageously from a 20-6 first quarter deficit but fell short by a 45-43 margin and "The Streak" lived on for one more season.

Tascosa and Amarillo met here in the regional finals and Amarillo went on to win the state championship.

And Raughton knows the question "Can 4-5A ever beat 3-5A?" will be brought up lots of times in the upcoming season.

"Until we can beat them, we can't say anything," Raughton said. "When we lost I'm sure everybody said, 'Well, 4-5A lost another game.'"

Kail added, "(Having the bye) gives you some confidence before you have to face those teams, but it's still going to be tough."

Could this be the year, though, with a district full of talented teams?

"I think Lee has the best talent in the district," Raughton said of his cross-town rivals. "They've got good inside people and their guards are back and they should have a very strong team."

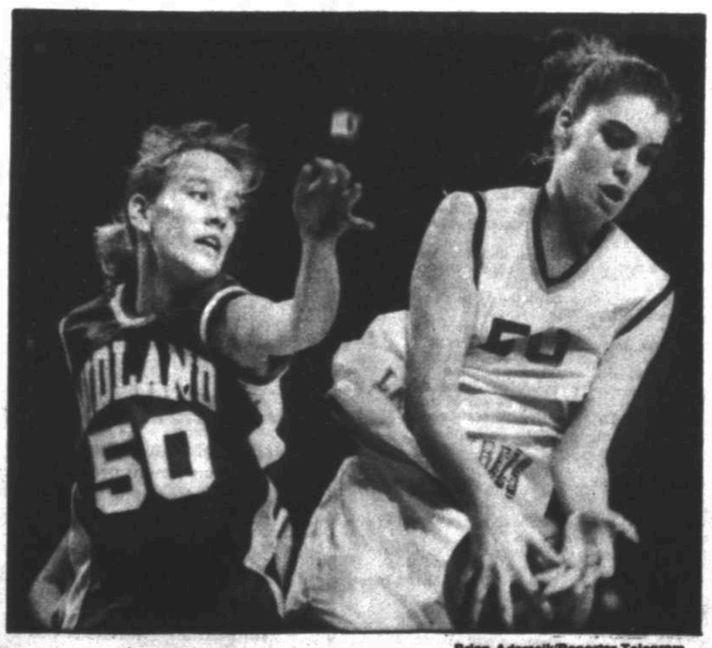

Odessa Permian, which finished seventh in district standings last year, should be improved, Kail said, because "they have more height and experience than last year. And Abilene is going to be very strong along with Midland, us and San Angelo."

Odessa High, which started strong but fell back last year, and Abilene Cooper, which was also in the running for a playoff spot, should be better too, Kail said. However, Cooper is adjusting to a new coach.

But Kail is still skeptical about the district's ability to get past 3-5A.

"Seriously, I think it could be a while (before 4-5A tops 3-5A)," Kail said. "Amarillo High won state last year and they have everybody back.

"It's always going to be tough because (the 3-5A schools) have a feeder system already in place. When our feeder system kicks in, and I hope it helps both Midland schools, then we'll have some continuity," Kail added.

Bowl hopes riding for several teams

One team remains alive in the race for post-season bowl consideration and the other team will stay home.

■ SWC Roundup

That's the cold, hard fact facing the Baylor Bears (4-5, 2-3 SWC) and the Rice Owls (5-4, 2-3) when the two teams meet at Waco today.

There are similar scenarios to be played out elsewhere. The SWC's current list of six eligible bowl teams could be reduced to three by the end of today's games:

—Texas Tech (4-5, 3-2) must extend its three-game winning streak to four or it will be out with a loss at Southern Methodist (1-6-2, 1-4-1).

—Texas Christian (4-5, 2-3) can't afford a another loss to Texas (3-4-1, 3-1), and the Longhorns must win out against TCU, Baylor and Texas A&M to get the required six victories for a bowl game.

The No. 11 Texas Aggies (7-1, 5-0), who already have clinched a bowl berth, will play No. 20 Louisville at Kyle Field, where the Aggies haven't lost since 1989.

All Houston and Southern Methodist can hope for is to play the spoilers' role. Houston (1-6-1, 1-3-1), which faces Cincinnati (6-3) Saturday at the Astrodome, and SMU have long been eliminated from bowl consideration.

If past history means anything, Rice and Baylor will play a close, exciting game. Rice has won three of the last four games by scores of 6-3 (1989), 20-17 (1991) and 34-31 (1992).

Baylor beat the Owls on the last play of the game 17-16 in 1990 that kept Rice from its first winning season since 1963.

"It promises to be a great contest," Rice coach Fred Goldsmith said. "The past four years, this has been some of the best in the conference in several years."

Baylor's first year coach Chuck Reedy is more worried about Rice quarterback Bert Emanuel and running back Yoncy Edmonds.

"Emanuel presents great problems for your defense and Edmonds is on pace to go over 1,000 yards," Reedy said. "They've really improved at wide receivers with Emerson Allen and Jimmy Lee."

son when we lost our momentum, but these kids took care of things tonight."

Cooper leaped to a 10-0 lead in the first period, getting a 32-yard field goal from David Anderson after a fine 13-play drive and followed by converting a fumble by Levone Maden into a 29-yard TD drive with Mike Rose getting the final five.

"I think that was a key period of the game," Allen said. "We felt like we came into the game with no momentum, losing to Odessa Permian and Midland Lee to end the season, and to come out and take a lead was a big factor in this game."

But Monterey almost got Cooper to thinking when Maden broke the last play of the first half to the Cooper one, but failed to score as the clock ran out. Then Monterey went 76 yards for a score in eight plays early in the third period to cut the Cooper lead to 13-6.

But Cooper answered twice with Rose ending a 76-yard drive with a three-yard TD and quarterback Zac Allen dialing Ben Rozell with a 37-yard TD and a 27-6 lead.

"Every time we tried to make it interesting, Cooper would answer with a touchdown," said Monterey coach Buster Leaf. "We just couldn't handle Cooper up front and never could effectively stop them. Cooper's offensive line was the huge difference in the game."

For Rozell, the TD catch was a second chance he dropped a perfect ball from Allen that would have been an easy TD in the second quarter.

"I was glad to get a second chance," Rozell said. "I was feeling down after dropping a ball in the wide open, but my teammates said I could come back and catch another one. I did and I think that broke the game open."

Cooper climbes to 7-3-1 for the year and advances against El Paso Irvin in El Paso next week in the area round.

Monterey ends the season at 10-1, a mark that Leaf is still proud of.

"I'm not going to take anything away from our kids," Leaf said. "We were picked to finish fifth or sixth in our league, but we won the district championship."

LEE: Rebs meet AHS

(From 1C)

sistent this year. We're hoping we don't get embarrassed because Lee is a team that can do that to you. They did it up here to Palo Duro this year."

Lee, on the other hand, missed the playoffs last year after nine consecutive playoff runs. The playoff return is an emotional time for both coaches and players in the Maroon and White.

"Our kids rose to the occasion this year, and I couldn't be any prouder of them," said Lee coach Earl Miller. "In certain respects, this is the most over-achieving team that we've ever had at Lee. I expect them to continue with the type of effort we've had over the regular season."

Miller thinks making the playoffs this year is special in more ways than just getting back into the playoffs.

"We felt at the start of the season that this was the year to get in the playoffs because you have a chance to go pretty far," Miller said. "That doesn't mean you will win, but I think there is a better chance at winning for several weeks this year. I've seen the region stronger than it is this year.

"Still, this is the start of a new season, and it can end in a hurry. I remember that there were two years (1986 to Amarillo High and 1988 to Amarillo Palo Duro) that we lost in the first round and that wasn't a lot of fun. We didn't get the job done."

Even though Lee is a solid favorite against the Sandies, Miller sends out some warning signals.

"They are well coached. The quarterback (Brett Leathers) likes to throw and run and they look to have a pretty good sophomore running back (Brandon Blount). Leathers also has some good receivers," Miller said. "Defensively, they aren't very big, but they are pretty solid."

Dippel said that playing the role of an 18-point underdog is a tough task.

"We will have to eliminate any mistakes if we are to stay in this game, and we haven't done a very good job of that," Dippel says. "Lee is really scary. We'll have to establish field position by moving the football and get some consecutive first downs. You have to keep the ball out of their hands because they can score so quick."

Lee isn't without some woes entering the game.

"We've lost Mark Hunter to a knee injury," Miller said. "He has played both at linebacker and tackle for us on defense and that really hurts our depth. (Linebacker) Chris Connally has been sick all week and we have to have him. We're getting a little short on defense right now.

"Our offense is just going to have to take up the slack. They've got to play better. They've done a good job, but we still are having too many penalties and fumbles. That's killing us."

The winner of this game will advance to the area playoffs against either El Paso Bowie (7-3) or El Paso Eastwood (9-1) next week at a time and date still to be determined.

A glimpse of the ultimate pickup game between Jordan, generally regarded as the greatest basketball player of all-time, and Swoopes, considered the best female player in the world, airs today on NBC-TV following the Notre Dame-Florida State football game.

But nobody's saying who won.

The matchup in Elmhurst, Ill., was taped this summer soon after Swoopes, Nancy Lieberman-Cline and Cinietra Henderson won the Hoop-It-Up women's championship in Dallas and before Jordan's shocking retirement from the NBA on Oct. 6.

In June, Swoopes, who was named college Player of the Year after leading Texas Tech to the NCAA title, flew to Chicago to help out at Jordan's basketball camp.

"We just thought they were going to talk to each other," said Pam Rapkin, spokeswoman for Dallas-based Hoop-It-Up. "We didn't know they were going to play."

A cameraman was there to capture the challenge before a small group of youths seated at midcourt inside the gymnasium at Elmhurst College.

"I enjoyed watching it," Texas Tech coach Marsha Sharp told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal after getting a peek preview of the clash of titans. "They talked a little trash to each other, and I think people will enjoy watching it."

Snippets of the June 30 game are shown on NBC's one-hour Hoop-It-Up special, which features the finals of the team competition in the world's largest 3-on-3 street basketball tournament.

The highlight is definitely the Jordan-Swoopes matchup.

It's playground hoops at its best, complete with trash talk and dares. At one point, Swoopes, feigning agitation, calls Jordan a cheater. Jordan promises to dunk on her.

Both are shown canning 3-pointers and Jordan at one point drives to the bucket, slapping away a Swoopes hand check.

The segment, previewed by The Associated Press Friday, doesn't show the outcome, however, only Jordan and Swoopes bantering afterwards.

"He was tired, old, out of shape," declared Swoopes, who lamented that Jordan had cut the challenge short. "Eleven is the game."

"I didn't see any challenge. I just wanted to cut it short before someone got hurt," countered a smiling Jordan.

Before the game, Jordan is shown in a classroom with the words "Swoopes 101" chalked on the blackboard behind him.

"She's really unstoppable from my standpoint, she has the skills that really seem to be better than anyone else she was playing against," Jordan said. "I think she really opened eyes about women's basketball."

Shaq and Zo: We're no Chamberlain and Russell

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Mention the word "matchup" and both Shaquille O'Neal and Alonzo Mourning duck.

They are the newest of the NBA's heralded big men: O'Neal, the 7-foot rapper and television star for the Orlando Magic, and Mourning, the 6-10 center of intensity for the Charlotte Hornets. Shaq has done a commercial with the legendary centers of the game; Zo recently posed on a magazine cover with one of them.

But ask them if they are the modern-day successors to the Bill Russell-Wilt Chamberlain duels of the 1960s, and both players back off, just the opposite of their on-court attitudes.

"I understand why the league does it — to promote the league," O'Neal said to reporters after a less-than-impressive 19-point effort in a 120-87 loss to the Hornets Thursday night. "And I understand why you guys do it — to sell papers."

Mourning says O'Neal is just another center that he has to face in the midst of an 82-game schedule. That's almost like saying Babe Ruth was another left-handed hitter.

"I play hard against him, just like I play hard against Brad Daugherty or Olajuwon, Parish, anybody," Mourning said after he got 18 points and 10 rebounds. "Any of those centers, they're big games to me. I take it one game at a time. If I have a good game, so be it.

"Shaq is very talented and my hat's off to him because he's going to be a great player. He is a great player now, but he's going to be even better," Mourning added. "I put all that stuff aside and go out and compete."

Between holdouts and suspensions, Shaq and Zo have met only three times out of six possible meetings. The latest encounter lost some of its glamor when O'Neal, who was struggling with Charlotte's defense, went just 6-for-15, hit 7-of-15 free throws and scored 19 points. He picked up three fouls in a four-minute stretch of the third period and sat out the fourth quarter.

Mourning played 18 minutes, 10 less than Shaq. Because the Hornets were determined to get the ball inside, Zo hit 10 of 14 free throws and finished with 18 points. He also got 10 rebounds as Charlotte took its biggest win in the series with the Magic and the fourth biggest win in franchise history.

In the two games last year, Mourning scored 48 points and grabbed 22 rebounds. O'Neal scored 58 points and had 25 rebounds. Of Mourning's 48 points, 22 of them were free throws, as opposed to 12 for O'Neal.

Stich upset in European tennis event

ANTWERP, Belgium (AP) — Swede Magnus Gustafsson, playing on a sore knee, upset second-seeded Michael Stich 7-6 (8-6), 7-5 Friday to set up a semifinal match against Boris Becker in the European Community Championships.

■ Tennis Roundup

Top-seeded Pete Sampras also needed a first-set tiebreaker against Swede Nicklas Kulti, ranked 50th in the world, but he kept his perfect record here intact with a 7-6 (8-6), 6-3 win for his third straight-set victory.

Sampras will play the winner of the Pioline-Ivanisevic match and is unlikely to lose his concentration in the semifinal, as he did against Kulti.

Seven of the eight places at Frankfurt have already been clinched by Sampras, Jim Courier, Sergi Bruguera, Stich, Stefan Edberg, Andrei Medvedev and Michael Chang.

Virginia Slims

PHILADELPHIA — Steffi Graf improved her match record for the year to 71-5 Friday, defeating Coetzer 6-4, 6-1 in the quarterfinals of the Virginia Slims of Philadelphia.

The win moves the German star into a semifinal today against Kimberly Po, who ousted Zina Garrison-Jackson 6-2, 6-4. The other semifinal will pit No. 2 Conchita Martinez of Spain against the winner of a night match between No. 4 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina and Amy Frazier. Martinez downed No. 9 Natalia Zvereva of Belarus 6-4, 6-4.

Kremlin Cup

MOSCOW — Defending champion Mark Rosset, after struggling to reach the quarterfinals, hit his stride Friday and defeated Paul Haarhuis of the Netherlands 6-4, 6-2 to advance to the semifinals of the Kremlin Cup.

Rosset had squeaked by Russian Yevgeny Kafelnikov the day before and said then that he was "not in my best shape physically and mentally." But he was confident and smiling after the match Friday.

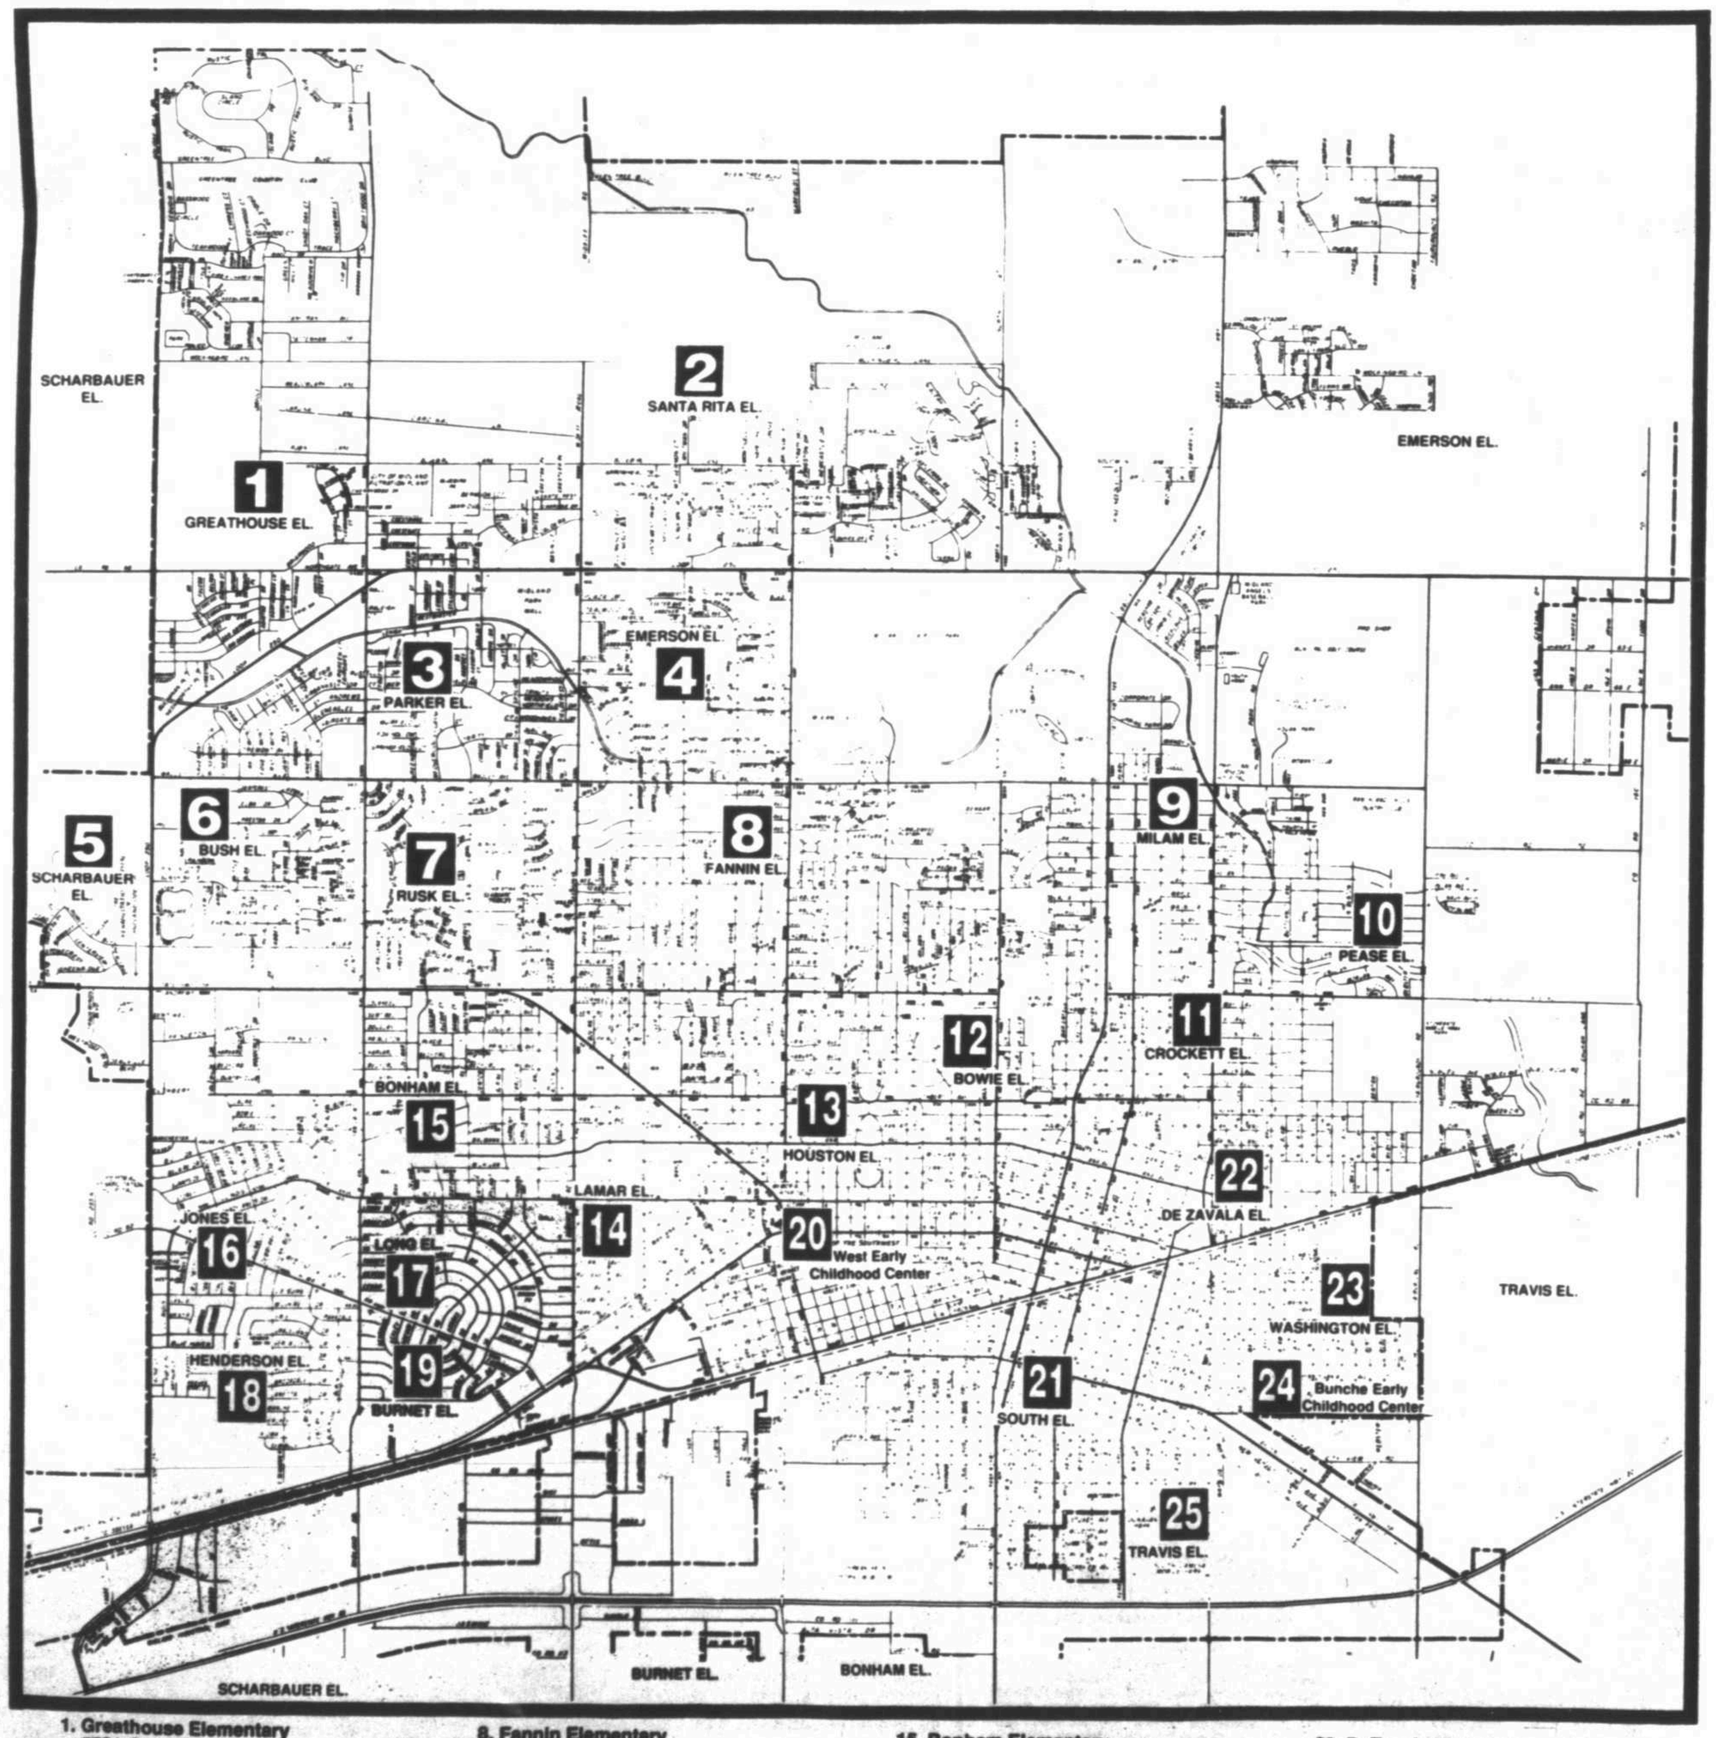

Patrick Kuhnen of Germany defeated Russian Andrei Olkhovsky 6-4, 7-6 (7-4) in the quarterfinals, and his fellow German, Karsten Braasch, also advanced by sweeping by Andrei Merinov of Russia 6-2, 6-3.

Irish, Seminoles battle for top spot

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — No. 1 Florida State swaggered into Notre Dame Stadium Friday wearing green-and-gold hats and scoffing at the Fighting Irish football tradition.

"There is no mystique," said Seminoles receiver Kevin Knox. "They should be scared of our mystique. We could be the best college football team ever."

The Seminoles borrowed the brightly colored hats, each with a gold shamrock on the side, from the Florida State baseball team, which wears them on St. Patrick's Day.

Coach Bobby Bowden said his team meant no disrespect to the Irish. The Seminoles wore the hats only to commemorate today's long-awaited showdown with No. 2 Notre Dame, Bowden said.

Both teams are 9-0 and have won 16 straight games. The Seminoles are 6½-point favorites.

"We're not trying in anyway to undercut anybody or belittle anything," Bowden said, his tan looking out of place on a cold, gray day. "It's just a doggone great week."

Knox said the Seminoles wore the hats to let the Irish know they were focused on today's game. Florida State, which has already beat Miami, has another tough game, Nov. 27 at No. 8 Florida.

"There's nobody on our mind but Notre Dame," Knox said. "Not Miami, not Florida, not anyone."

Bowden also spotted a small flaw in the stadium that could help the Seminoles: The north goal post tilted slightly to the right. Florida State lost its chance at a national championship the past two seasons when last-second field goal attempts sailed wide right against Miami.

"It's leaning that way, and I sure do appreciate that," Bowden said.

The Seminoles were met by about 50 enthusiastic fans when they stepped off two buses outside the 64-year-old stadium. The players walked quietly into the visitor's locker room and then held a spirited 15-minute workout on the field.

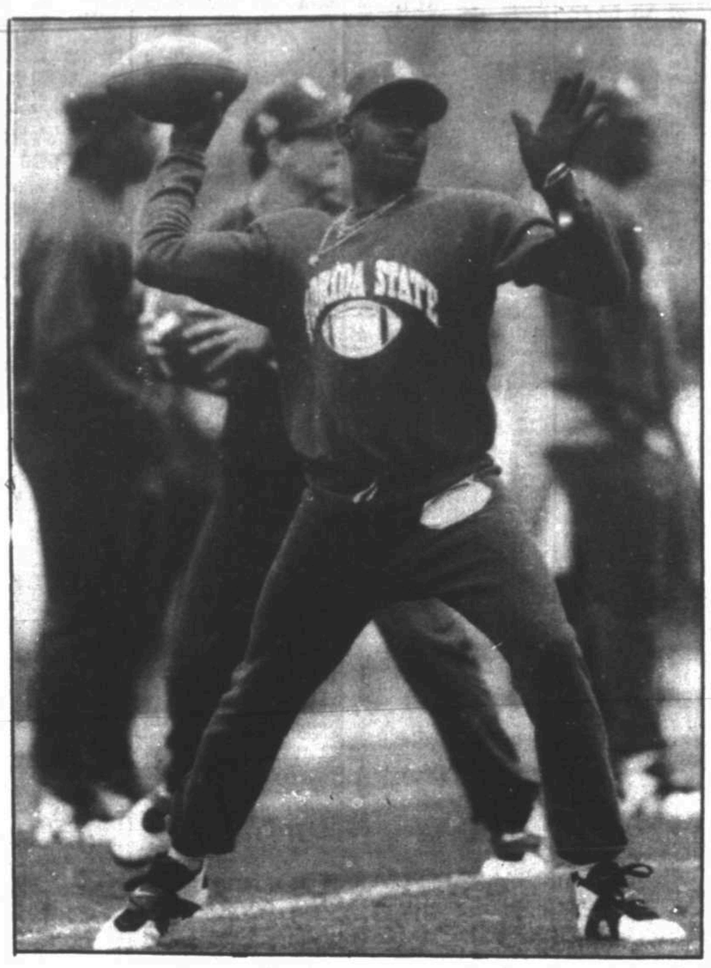

"We're loose for every game," said quarterback Charlie Ward. "We were loose for Miami, we were loose for Virginia. That's the attitude we're taking."

Bowden said he and his players have been looking forward to playing Notre Dame since breaking their jinx against downstate rival Hurricanes on Oct. 9.

"As soon as the Miami game was over, you knew that your next hurdle was going to be Notre Dame," Bowden said. "There's no hiding the fact that that was on my mind."

The temperature was only in the 40s Friday afternoon, and the forecast called for rain Friday night and early today. But the skies were expected to clear by kickoff and temperatures should be in the low 60s.

"This is not, by no means, as cold as people said it was going to be," said Ward, the leading Heisman Trophy candidate. "If it's like this tomorrow, I think we'll be OK."

Notre Dame mystique looms large for 'Noles

■ More Sports/ 10C

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Rockne, Leahy and Parseghian. Lujack, Hornung and Montana. The Four Horsemen, the Gipper and Touchdown Jesus.

Top-ranked Florida State will face more than a football team today when it plays No. 2 Notre Dame in the game of the year. The Seminoles also will confront the mystique and tradition that have made the Fighting Irish the most famous team in college football.

"This place is special," offensive tackle Aaron Taylor said. "I felt that the second I got off the plane on my recruiting trip. There's an energy here that I didn't feel at other places."

Over the years, Notre Dame has played in more big games than any team, including eight No. 1 vs. No. 2 showdowns. The school also leads everyone in national championships (eight), Heisman Trophy winners (seven), consensus All-Americans (75) and winning percentage (.763).

"The mystique is they have the best players," said ESPN commentator Beano Cook. "Everyone wants to come to Notre Dame. Ara Parseghian only had to visit two kids in 11 years. No other coach could do that."

Florida State coach Bobby Bowden appreciates the Notre Dame tradition. Growing up in Alabama in the 1940s, Bowden followed the exploits of Irish stars Angelo Bertelli, Johnny Lujack and Leon Hart.

"Notre Dame was a magic name in college football," he said. "Even down South, everyone knew about the Fighting Irish."

Some of Bowden's players aren't as familiar with Notre Dame history. Receiver Kez McCorvey and linebacker Chris Cowart called Knute Rockne "Rock Knuteny," and linebacker Derrick Brooks said he had "no idea where this mystique thing got started."

"Once we snap the ball, there is no history," Brooks said. "I don't think there's any mystique in the stadium."

Others disagree.

"I very much believe in the mystique and tradition of Notre Dame," Taylor said. "There have been so many phenomenal players and people who have come through this place. ... I really think it plays a part in the success we've had. You always expect miracles to happen here."

"They're like the Yankees," Cook said. "Half the people love 'em and half the people hate 'em."

rush two)."

Climer showed some great scrambling ability and was only sacked once. But he had several passes batted down, two intercepted and was constantly throwing on the run. He also had some passes dropped early.

"We try to put a lot of people on defense and wear people down," Blake said. "I noticed in the first quarter he (Climer) was dragging a bit."

Last year's Mustang star quarterback Andy Awtry gave his old school a hand at preparing for Happy Hill.

"We prepared for this game by taking our all-state quarterback from last year and having him throw against us," Blake said.

Gunter and Jackson each scored on runs to put the Mustangs up 30-0 with 2:29 left in the first quarter. Quarterback Chad Bayley threw 46 yards to Allan Awtry to close out the first period scoring.

Happy Hill mounted its only scoring drive to start the second quarter with running back Adam Cox finding Kelly Vansickle in the end zone for a score.

But Glen Bishop ran the ensuing kickoff back 60 yards for a TD and Midland Christian closed out the scoring with three more touchdowns.

The Mustangs play the winner of the Christway Academy and Temple Christian regional playoff in the state semifinal.

"This is a position we love to be in," Blake said. "We love this time of year. It gives our kids another month to play."

until halftime and took a 14-0 lead into the locker.

"Us scoring that late in the half was a downer for them going into the locker room," Sanchez said. "We executed our two minute offense real well down there. Juan (Batista) and Jo Jo (Guerra) did a good job down at the end and it gave us a big lift.

"We been saying to the kids to be successful you have to overcome adversity. If you can't overcome adversity this time of the year you'll lose."

Rankin, ranked No. 1 in the Class A poll earlier this season before back-to-back losses, slammed the door on any playoffs hopes the Bearkats might have had as 146-pound running back Roy Abalos returned the opening kickoff of the second half 81 yards for a score and gave Rankin a 21-0 lead.

Abalos led the Red Devils with 173 yards on 18 carries.

Garden City running back Stuart Wilde was held to 61 yards on 20 carries for the Bearkats.

ence in the game.

"I think when they fumbled the kickoff to start the second half, that was the key," said Clemmer.

Sweetwater took advantage of the miscue when Lamar Blueford caught a deflected pass from Clemmer and raced 36 yards for the touchdown with 10:54 remaining in the third quarter.

Clemmer added the conversion on a quarterback draw and Sweewater had its first lead of the game at 36-28.

"I told the team not to get down that we have the capability of putting points on the board in a hurry," Clemmer said. "Everybody knew it wasn't over. Andrews has a good defense but Coach (Tom) Ritchey had a good game plan. He knew what he was doing."

American emulates Africans in running style

NEW YORK (AP) — For several years, Africans, mostly Kenyans, have dominated the world road racing scene. Keith Brantly, a veteran distance runner from Ormond Beach, Fla., decided that to be like them, he had to join them.

"You can't be successful if you don't emulate success," said Brantly, who will try to show what he has learned by upsetting the Africans in Sunday's New York City Marathon.

In the past four months, Brantly has been home only four weeks. The rest of the time he spent training with Kenyans, first for four weeks in August at Concord, Mass., the rest of the time at Boston.

"I decided to join the Kenyans because they were winning," said Brantly, who has run five marathons, but has yet to win. He has come close twice, finishing fourth at the 1992 U.S. Olympic trials at Columbus, Ohio, after leading much of the race, and placing second behind Steve Plasencia at Sacramento, Calif., in October 1992. He also was ninth in this year's Boston Marathon in 2 hours, 12 minutes, 58 seconds, his career best.

■ New York City Marathon

After his intensive training with the hard-working Kenyans, the 31-year-old Brantly is confident he can lower that time significantly.

"I know I will run a very strong race," he said. "I am very well prepared. I'm now ready to run with the big boys. I have to be willing to run a low 2:10 or faster. I've done too much work to run any slower or let it slip away this time. I think my fitness will allow me to do that."

Brantly's fitness was honed by his workouts with the Kenyans.

"They're a different breed of athlete," he said. "They don't suffer from a lifetime burnout like many Americans. You have to go through extreme poverty and suffering like they do when they're young to know how they feel.

"But now, they don't have to pay taxes and worry about a lot of other things like we do. They're very focused on their running. Our society frowns upon just being a runner.

"What they've done has clarified what I've been trying to do for a long time. I wish I had learned it when I was 18. If I had their discipline, there's no telling where I'd be now."

With the Kenyans, Brantly lived a spartan existence at Concord Academy, staying in the bare dorms for $13 a day.

He learned a lot from the Kenyans, not only about running, but about life — their way of life.

"In Kenya, they don't have to wrestle with trying to be a great football player or a great basketball player," Brantly said. "In Kenya, there are three things to do — be a cattle herder, a soccer player or a runner.

"Here, there are too many other activities."

The Kenyans take their training very seriously, Brantly noted. "It's very organized," he said.

For example, one time when he went with them for a workout about five miles away from the academy, he thought they would warm up before getting into a heavy-duty session. But as the group got moving, "they were going faster and faster and faster," Brantly said.

"I didn't know they were going to do a five-mile hard workout before the warmup," he said, laughing. "When they run hard, they run very hard. When they run easy, they run really easy, like about an eight-minute mile pace."

At first, Brantly feared he wouldn't be able to do the workouts with the Kenyans. But he acclimated himself quickly and figures the sessions toughened him up for the New York race, one of the more difficult marathon courses in the world.

Runners ready for marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — It's three days of celebrities and photo shoots, parties and pasta, wrapped around five hours of pure torture. It's marathon weekend, where Sunday's 26.2-mile run is almost an afterthought amid all the hoopla.

This bash requires 1.6 million paper drinking cups, 260,000 servings of Gatorade, 150,000 bottles of water, 30,000 sponges, 26,000 runners, 300 gallons of paint, 225 portable toilets, 36 plastic whistles and two winners.

Well, it is the world's largest footrace.

But there's more — too much more — than all that. On Friday, the official marathon runner's blanket was unveiled by that world famous marathoner, Elsie The Cow.

While runners from Germany, Mexico and the United States were greeted by the bovine pitchmoo, a group of British runners arrived to a more proper greeting.

Alistair Hunter, the British consul general, turned out Friday afternoon for a proper how-do-you-do for the runners from home. It's all for a good cause; the British are raising funds for disabled children.

For Thomas Young and Pamela Kezios, this is a particularly interesting weekend. The Chicago couple arrived Friday and starting preparing for Sunday's events: The marathon and their wedding.

At the eight-mile mark of the race, they plan to stop on the steps of the Brooklyn Academy of Music and tie the knot, then spend the first 18 miles of their honeymoon headed toward the Central Park finish line.

If they want, the two runners can schedule their rehearsal dinner for Saturday night at Tavern on the Green. Unfortunately, they'll be sharing the food with 14,000 other runners.

For the eighth straight year, the Central Park restaurant will throw a pasta party for thousands of carbo-loading marathoners. The head chef is Nancy Clark, the nutritionist for the Boston Celtics, who has prepared three pasta recipes perfect for runners.

Americans lead golf's world cup

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A struggling American team retained the lead in the World Cup of Golf but gave up three shots and a profuse apology to Nick Price and Mark McNulty of Zimbabwe in second-round play Friday.

■ World Cup

Fred Couples played a blind tee shot over a stand of pines and bushes on the 309-yard 14th hole, driving the green on the par-4.

Price, playing in front of the Americans, was lining up a short putt on the green when when Couples' ball missed him by only a few feet.

"Fred almost took us both out," McNulty said.

"If I was in the address position, I think it would have hit my foot," Price said.

McNulty and Price jokingly chided Couples and Davis Love III about the incident.

Both Americans apologized.

"I just didn't know they were on the green," Couples said. "When you're driving over trees, you can't see the green. It's that simple."

McNulty and Price waved away the apologies.

"I know Freddie wouldn't do that on purpose," Price said after his round of 69. McNulty had a bogey-free 68 and they moved to within one stroke of the lead at 278, 10 under par at the tournament halfway point.

Couples' drive on the 14th ended up only three feet from the cup and he made the putt for an eagle-2, the highlight of a round of 71 that dropped him out of the lead.

NEW YORK — TickTickTickTick-Tick ...

You can't avoid superlatives in discussing CBS' "60 Minutes," which celebrates its 25th anniversary Sunday night with a two-hour special.

It is, after all, the longest-running prime time show still in production.

It is the most popular, most profitable, most watched news program in television history. To date, it has collected 47 Emmy Awards, six Peabody Awards and many others.

The granddaddy of TV news magazines is, quite simply, the crown jewel of the Tiffany Network.

About 680,260,000 viewers have tuned in since the broadcast's inauspicious debut on Tuesday, Sept. 24, 1968, in a killer, 10 p.m. Eastern time slot.

Its anchors were Mike Wallace and Harry Reasoner, who died in 1991. Alpo Dog Food sponsored the entire hour. Don Hewitt, who'd devised the show as a kind of Life magazine for TV, directed. The first season tanked.

■ "60 Minutes 25th Anniversary Special," 6 p.m., Sunday, CBS (KOSA-Ch. 7).

And yet, eight seasons later, "60 Minutes" had found its Sunday night berth and Nielsen's Top 20, finishing 18th of 117 shows. The next season it reached No. 4 and has remained in the Top 10 ever since, never lower than No. 8, for a record 16 consecutive seasons.

It was TV's top-rated show in the 1991-92 and '92-93 seasons, and is dead certain to finish in the top five this year.

Sunday night's special is a "60 Minutes"-style profile of the show and its stars, Mike Wallace, Morley Safer, Ed Bradley, Steve Kroft, Lesley Stahl and their patron and executive producer, Hewitt.

Curing the tube addiction

By Frazier Moore
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — You come home from work too tired for anything but watching TV. You see things on TV you end up buying. Then you go to work to pay for them. And then ... why, you come home tired and watch more TV.

Is this what they mean by interactive television?

The typical viewer has been chasing his tail since TV blinked on nearly a half-century ago. Now Vicki Robin has some modest suggestions for breaking that cycle of over-indulgence.

Her first suggestion: Just recognize the cycle and how you're caught up in it.

Robin, a Seattle-based lecturer and writer, collaborated with fellow activist Joe Dominguez on a book about the spurious connection between monetary wealth and material satisfaction.

"Your Money or Your Life — Transforming Your Relationship With Money and Achieving Financial Independence" argues that — flash! — dollars don't guarantee fulfillment, and that, for many Americans, money-making comes at far too great a cost.

At times, so does TV, Robin adds during a recent interview.

"There's too much passivity in watching television," she says — not just the "act" of blind-gazing at the tube by the hour, but also that familiar non-decision to watch in the first place.

There's an old slogan "time is money," but Robin proposes that, more aptly, "money is time."

Quite literally, your money represents a certain measure of what she labels "life energy." The more bucks you spend, the more of your finite life energy is required to recoup that outlay.

Meanwhile, profligate TV-viewing runs up the tab even further.

"The more television you watch," Robin cautions, "the more desire you feel because of the advertising, and the greater need to buy more stuff."

"Clutter" in her lexicon is whatever

Brat Packers don mustaches, sabres

By Yardena Arar
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The umpteenth remake of Alexandre Dumas' tale of intrigue, romance, comedy and derring-do in 17th-century France is played strictly for small fry, which means don't look for much intrigue or romance in Disney's "The Three Musketeers."

Instead, director Stephen Herek (the director of "The Mighty Ducks") settles for lots of action, picturesque locations and costumes, a couple of villains you love to hate and plenty of adolescent male bonding by an engaging Brat Pack cast.

In short, everything a young boy could want — although possibly a tad more violence and displays of Rebecca de Mornay's cleavage than some parents would have wished. But while there never is a dull moment, there never is a truly thrilling one, either, which is pretty sad for a film

Brian De Palma is a movie director desperately in need of a hit, and chances are he will have one with his new Al Pacino gangster epic, "Carlito's Way."

De Palma is the '80s gangster-movie specialist ("The Untouchables," "Scarface") who fell from grace in the '90s with two of the most vacuous and unwatchable movie monstrosities: "The Bonfire of the Vanities" and "Raising Cain."

Clearly trying to avoid three strikes, he has allied himself with his "Scarface" star, returned to the safer turf of the Hispanic gangster movie, and turned out an unpretentious and entertaining thriller that should be a big audience favorite.

No way 'Return' can equal original

No Robert Duvall. No Tommy Lee Jones. No Angelica Huston. Heck, not even Robert Urich's Jake Spoon character will be back.

Patterson

Which is really all a viewer needs to know concerning "Return to Lonesome Dove," a seven-hour CBS miniseries, and the sequel to the widely acclaimed series based on Larry McMurtry's novel "Lonesome Dove," about a Texas-to-Montana cattle drive.

The sequel, said in advanced publicity material to describe "the next chapter in the development of the American West," starts Sunday (8-10 p.m.) and continues its three-night run next Tuesday (8-10 p.m.) and Thursday (7-10 p.m.). "Return" does bring back a few of the original characters. Rick Schroder reprises his role as Newt Dobbs, the ranch hand who learned at the end of the 1989 miniseries that he was the son of Woodrow F. Call, the rangy, rough ex-Texas Rangers' captain who reluctantly took part in Augustus McCrae's dream of the 1,000 mile cattle drive.

Pea-Eye Parker, (Tim Scott), July Johnson (Chris Cooper), Lippy (William Sanderson, the former Darryl on the "Newhart" show), Jasper Fant (Barry Tubb) and Needle Nelson (David Carpenter) all return to their roles from the original mini-series.

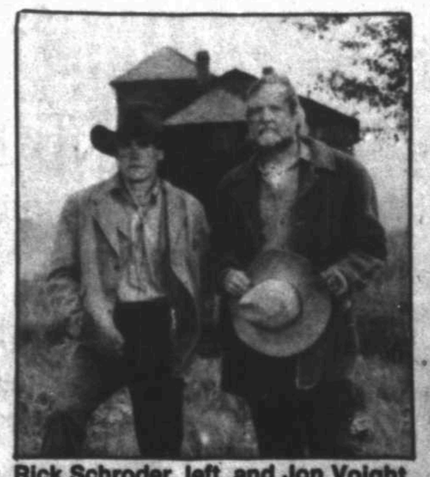

But even with the return of Schroder, who has grown into a fine actor since playing the overbearing, irritating son of a has-been prize fighter in "The Champ," one wonders how the sequel can live up to the reputation of the original.

Filming a sequel to the finest entertainment programming television has ever offered is like writing a sequel to "Gone With the Wind." Why bother? And what's the point?

Anyone who does decide to invest three nights on a sequel must go in with the understanding that there is no way this production — no matter how good it may be compared to other TV offerings today — can match the beauty, the brutality, the ruggedness, the exceptional story and the flawless performances the original series captured.

If television continues as an entertainment medium for another 200 years, there may never be another character like Gus McCrae. The perfection with which Duvall portrayed

'60 Minutes' Legacy

"60 Minutes" has generated more than $1 billion for CBS during its 25-year run.

That's just one of the facts to be found in "60 Minutes: 25 Years of Television's Finest Hour" (General Publishing Group; $29.95) by Frank Coffey. Other facts you might not know about the program:

■ Three kinds of stopwatches have been used in the 25 years of "60 Minutes" — Minerva, Hauer and Aristo.

■ The first two broadcasts of "60 Minutes" included the stopwatch only in the closing credits. The first watch was gold.

■ The first "60 Minutes" broadcast was at 10 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 24, 1968. Harry Reasoner and Mike Wallace were the anchors. Included were a report on the Nixon/Humphrey presidential campaign; "Viewpoints," a feature in which guest columnists were to comment on issues; "Cops," looking at the relationship between Americans and law enforcement, featuring an interview with U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark; and excerpts from "Why Man Creates," an animated film by Saul Bass on the history of human creativity.

■ The show has had nine principal anchors in its history: Mike Wallace, Harry Reasoner, Morley Safer, Dan Rather, Ed Bradley, Diane Sawyer, Steve Kroft, Meredith Vieira and Lesley Stahl.

■ Mike Wallace is one of nine original staff members who have been with "60 Minutes" its entire run. The others are executive producer and creator Don Hewitt; broadcast director Arthur Bloom; director of operations Joe Illigasch; re-recording mixer Joel Dufberg; and producers William K. McClure, Jeanne Solomon, Joel Tiffin and Merri Lieberthal.

■ Producer Merri Lieberthal was Mike Wallace's secretary when the show made its debut.

■ Andy Rooney was on the staff of "60 Minutes" when it made its debut, but left for two years and returned in 1971.

■ Prior to the advent of "A Few Minutes With Andy Rooney," the program featured commentary in the form of "Point-Counterpoint" with James J. Kilpatrick and Nicholas von Hoffman, and later Shana Alexander. Before that was "Digressions," featuring silhouetted profiles Ipso and Facto debating issues of the day. Ipso was producer Palmer Williams and Facto was Andy Rooney, who wrote the segments.

■ There have been Australian and Russian versions of "60 Minutes."

Everything old is new again. Who needs cable's Nostalgia Channel when you've got "Bonanza" and "The Waltons" returning?

Programming scheduled for the November sweeps period is missing a lot of the blood and the women and kids in peril that have been so popular on TV lately.

Instead, many of the high-profile movies and other sweeps programs will look to the past — recent or distant — in a grab for viewers.

The networks, cable and local channels have scheduled at least 20 shows on John F. Kennedy and Lee Harvey Oswald in the two-week period leading up to the 30th anniversary of Kennedy's assassination on Nov. 22.

The biggest attention-getter from non-JFK programming will be the three-night CBS miniseries "Return to Lonesome Dove," Nov. 14, 16 and 18. One possible problem: The sequel to the critically praised original includes almost none of the original cast.

That's not the case for the CBS movie "A Walton Thanksgiving Reunion" Nov. 21, which boasts 19 members of the original 1972-81 cast.

NBC can't work miracles to bring back the late cast of "Bonanza," so it's using offspring — Michael Landon Jr. and Dirk Blocker — to spearhead "Bonanza: The Return" on Nov. 28.

Robert Wagner and Stefanie Powers will reprise their roles Friday in an NBC "Hart to Hart" movie based on their 1979-84 series.

Larry "J.R." Hagman will make his first big appearance since "Dallas" with "Staying Afloat," a movie premise that NBC hopes will develop into something regular. It's on Nov. 26.

And Raymond Burr's last movie, "Perry Mason: The Case of the Killer Kiss," is getting a big promotional push from NBC for its Nov. 29 appearance.

There also will be several theatrical hits you probably have seen already. ABC presented a two-night version of "Dances With Wolves," with Kevin Costner and 50 minutes of added footage, this week.

CBS on Nov. 14 will present a major nostalgia news show to celebrate the 25th anniversary of "60 Minutes," with a look at the people and events that have been part of the king of newsmagazines.

And do we really need another look at the musical phenomenon called Meat Loaf? NBC thinks so. The result on Nov. 16 — "A '70s' Celebration: The Beat is Back" — will take us back to a time that those who lived it (especially the latter years) may still be trying to forget.

Just a regular River

■ Phoenix's death shakes under-30 generation that saw him as 'regular guy.'

By Kris Worrell
N.Y. Times News Service

If someone hadn't pointed him out, I wouldn't have noticed him. He looked like a regular guy with bad skin and a frayed thrift-store shirt, sipping beer out of a plastic cup.

"That's him," my friend told me at a backyard party given last year for musicians T-Bone Burnett and Bruce Cockburn. "That's River Phoenix."

"Wow," I said, squinting to see him through the crowd of faces. "He looks so . . . normal."

On the way to our car after the party had fizzled, the young actor careened into me while horsing around with a waifish girl. He said "excuse me" and told us to drive home safely.

He's cool and polite, my friends and I agreed.

So, after I heard that the actor had collapsed and died a week ago, I wasn't too surprised when my phone started ringing.

"Did you hear what happened?" each friend asked, and I knew they weren't talking about Clinton's health care plan.

Nobody could really figure out what his sudden death meant or why it bothered us so much.

"I was an arm's length from Jay Leno once, but who cares?" said my friend, Jeremy. "I don't get obsessed by people. So River Phoenix was an exception. And I guess that's because he did what actors are supposed to do — he struck a chord."

He reminded us all of someone we knew, maybe even ourselves. Someone with insight, talent, vulnerability and scruffy hair. A slacker with a job. To those of us under 30, he represented the triumph of the misfit, the quirky, the not-too-perfect.

We related to the characters he played — from the tough, scared kid in "Stand by Me" to the emotionally wounded gay hustler in "My Own Private Idaho" — much more than the suits, macho guys or pretty boys played by guys like Tom Cruise or Rob Lowe.

If anybody in the Brat Pack had keeled over outside a nightclub at age 23, we would have been more prepared. They're Hollywood, bright-lights big-city actors.

But River Phoenix, with his boyish face and hippy name, had a clean image. He was a well-known vegetarian, was close to his family and once appeared in a magazine photo kissing his mother — not exactly a rebel without a cause.

In fact, the night he died he was out with his brother and sister. His 19-year-old brother, Joaquin, called the paramedics when Phoenix began having seizures outside a club in Los Angeles. Joaquin told them he thought his brother had taken some Valium.

Other rumors of a drug overdose began to crop up. But a coroner's autopsy was "inconclusive as to the cause of death," and further toxicological tests have been scheduled.

His friends and colleagues (and mine too) found the rumors difficult to reconcile with Phoenix's reputation for clean living.

Whatever the cause of his death, the fact that he seemed to be one of us made it harder to face. He was so natural on and offscreen. How could a young guy who seemed to be doing all the right things suddenly lose it? If it could happen to him, it could happen to us.

Every generation has a hero shot down too soon — James Dean, John Lennon, Jimi Hendrix. Whether River Phoenix gets canonized in the future the same way as these other idols were remains to be seen.

If he is, it'll be ironic. He wasn't a leather-wearing rebel or a flamboyant, guitar-burning musician or a world-famous Beatle. He wasn't larger than life. He was just real life.

Pass on Bernie, Sharon

Weekend at Bernie's II. PG, 1993. Columbia TriStar, $95.95.

When directors are tempted to make a sequel of a film that doesn't deserve a sequel, they should be forced to watch "Weekend at Bernie's." Then "Weekend at Bernie's II."

The original was no great shakes. But director Ted Kotcheff found an audience for this silly little ditty about two junior execs trying to ditch the corpse of their murdered boss (Terry Kiser).

Four years later, the lads (stun-gunned Andrew McCarthy and hyper Jonathan Silverman) are back where they started: one day after stashing their boss's break-dancing body.

Enter insurance scams. Voodoo. And a hatchet directing job by Robert Klane. Put them all together and you've got a textbook example of a sequel that should have remained on the shelf. If there's a laugh here, it must have happened when I blinked.

Sliver. R, 1993. Paramount, $95.95.

Speaking of stiffs. . .catch Sharon Stone in "Sliver." On second thought, don't.

Director Philip Noyce's "high-tech thriller" gives more than ample evidence that Stone cannot act her way out of a body bag.

To be sure, Stone knows how to take off her clothes. Which she does here. And in "Basic Instinct." And in "Above the Law." But that's about the only thing she's done on screen so far.

Sliver offers Stone little more than to grunt and rut as a book editor who lives in a "sliver" of a New York high rise. Not just any high-rise, but one whose owner has wired the apartments with video cameras, the better to appease his sick voyeuristic habit.

William Baldwin and Tom Berenger are no better than Stone. Their acting is uniformly flat, in keeping with Joe Eszterhas' vacuous screenplay. With "Sliver," Paramount Pictures' studio executives hug the same kind of high-gloss pseudo-porno they embraced in earnest with "Indecent Proposal." After suffering through these sleaze fests, you have to wonder where the studio chiefs' heads are. On second thought, you don't.

Yellow Earth. In Mandarin, with subtitles. Unrated, 1984. Fox Lorber, $79.95.

"Yellow Earth" was the 1984 directing debut of Chen Kaige, who went on to make "Farewell, My Concubine," this year's co-winner of the grand prize at the Cannes Film Festival.

Chen uses a romance between a 14-year-old peasant girl and a communist soldier to scrutinize the old and new China. As with "Concubine," Chen locked artistic horns with China's Communist regime for his less-than-comradely depiction of life behind the Bamboo Curtain.

The Star Trek Starfleet Collection. 1993. Paramount, $199.95.

Here's something for the Trekkie in your universe who has everything. Besides having letter-boxed formats of all six Star Trek features, this boxed set also has several Star Trek themed gifts.

Included are six trading cards (three with holograms), a numbered certificate verifying its limited edition status (only 5,000 sets will be made) and a watch that beeps "To Boldly Go Where No Man Has Gone Before." All in a futuristic attache case that can only be opened by a special Star Trek card key.

Gee, Scottie, what will the Star Trek merchandising machine think of next? William Shatner hairpieces?

'Miracle on 34th Street' remake — John Hughes will write and produce a remake of "Miracle on 34th Street" for 20th Century Fox, which released the original 1947 version of the holiday classic.

The tale of a Macy's department store Santa Claus whose claim to being the real item is tested in court will feature footage to be shot at this year's Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, the studio said. A Christmas 1994 release is planned.

Also for Fox, Jodie Foster will star in and produce "Nell," about a woman raised in the wild who forever changes the doctor and psychologist who introduce her to modern society. Michael Apted ("Coal Miner's Daughter," "Gorillas in the Mist") is to direct.

Lou Diamond Phillips will star in and direct "Sioux City," about a Beverly Hills-raised physician who investigates the murder of his American Indian birth mother on the reservation where he was born.

ON SCREEN

N.Y. Times News Service

FATAL INSTINCT: Another — yawn — movie spoof, this time of erotic thrillers and their better, film-noir antecedents. Much too obvious, but this Carl Reiner production does have a few good laughs, some of which even spark off that oft-parodied, "Basic Instinct" leg-crossing scene. Armand Assante is the dim bulb detective. Sherilyn Fenn, Kate Nelligan and Sean Young are the femmes fatale. PG-13. Rating: ★★½

FEARLESS: Peter Weir's brilliant evocation of the surreal, nightmarish aspects of unspeakable catastrophe is the major achievement of this adaptation of Rafael Yglesia's book about two plane crash survivors who help each other come to terms with their very different emotional injuries. Jeff Bridges, in another one of his patented Golden-Boy-gone-south performances, plays an architect whose Good Samaritan rescues at the crash site leave him feeling euphoric and invincible, but totally detached from his loved ones. Rosie Perez is wrenching as a young mother paralyzed with guilt for not having saved her baby. A bit long-winded and fairly predictable in its resolution, but nonetheless a powerful and disturbing achievement. R. Rating: ★★★

FLESH AND BONE: More successful as a mood piece than anything else, this Southern Gothic screwball romance is mightily concerned with fate. As a child, Arlis Sweeney assisted in the murders of a rural Texas family. As an adult played by Dennis Quaid, he literally drives around in circles, trying to avoid what he fears may be his own violent nature. Taking up with Meg Ryan's runaway wife only shows Arlis that the past never goes away. Nothing here makes a lot of sense, but it sure feels interesting. Written and directed by Steve Kloves of equally quirky "Fabulous Baker Boys" fame. R. Rating: ★★★

THE NIGHTMARE BEFORE CHRISTMAS: Tim Burton's puppet-animation musical is a clever comedy of misperception. The dedicated ghouls who stage Halloween every year take over Christmas with the best intentions, but with macabre misunderstanding of the holiday's subtleties. Although you never get past the fact that you're looking at puppets, they're always great to look at, sort of like Dr. Seuss characters putting on a German Expressionism exhibit. Danny Elfman (Oingo Boingo, "The Simpsons") wrote the show tunes. PG. Rating: ★★★

ROBOCOP 3: Thanksgivng comes early this year in the form of this utter turkey of a sequel to the once witty, exciting future cop series. Robert John Burke replaces Peter Weller as the cyborg policeman. This time, he sides with urban guerrillas fighting a conglomerate that's trying to bulldoze their homes. There are Termininjas, too; like everything else about the movie, their potential is totally wasted. PG-13. Rating: 0 stars.

RUDY: A true-life sports story that doesn't have an honest moment in it. Sean Astin plays the puny, dumb, working-class kid whose only goal in life is to dress out and sit on the bench for one Notre Dame football game. It takes years, inordinate effort and a lot of pain, but the conclusion is never in doubt. Rudy's sense of priorities, however, always are. One-dimensional acting and equally flat writing doesn't help, though you could give it points for modesty and efficient, if soulless, manipulation. David Anspaugh ("Hoosiers") directed. PG. Rating: ★★

SLEEPLESS IN SEATTLE: Tom Hanks and Meg Ryan star in Nora Ephron's contrived, self-mocking and deliriously wonderful romantic comedy. He's a widowed single father; she's a passion rattled journalist on the other side of the continent. They don't meet until the last scene. In the meantime, Ephron (who wrote Ryan's hit "When Harry Met Sally...") hilariously implores us to bury our fake, movie fed romantic notions — then makes us fall for them all over again. PG-13. Rating: ★★★½

STRIKING DISTANCE: Bruce Willis plays a Pittsburgh river rescue cop on the trail of a serial killer and Sarah Jessica Parker is his partner (on the water and off) in an action-adventure yarn that misfires on almost every count imaginable. The plot is transparent, the dialogue hackneyed and needlessly foul, the action scenes are not nearly as spectacular as they need to be and the usually appealing Parker has never looked worse on screen. Only a die-hard fan would find Willis's trademark smirk an acceptable substitute for acting. R. Rating: 0 stars.

THREE: Script plays fast, loose

inspired by one of the great adventure stories in world literature.

Screenwriter David Loughery plays fast and loose with Dumas' admittedly complicated tale about D'Artagnan, a young squire who leaves his native Gascony to seek fame and fortune in Paris as a member of the Musketeers, an elite corps of bodyguards to King Louis XIII.

In a major departure from the book (and other films), D'Artagnan (Chris O'Donnell), reaches town only to find that the Musketeers have been disbanded by the evil Cardinal Richelieu (Tim Curry) and his one-eyed chief enforcer (Michael Wincott).

However, the book's most famous set piece is re-created more or less intact as D'Artagnan schedules successive duels against fast friends Athos (Kiefer Sutherland), Porthos (Oliver Platt) and Aramis (Charlie Sheen), who have refused to turn in their Musketeer swords and cloaks.

As the first duel is about to begin, the cardinal's guards try to arrest the Musketeers and D'Artagnan earns the respect of his erstwhile foes by fighting at their side. From then on, the four keep busy foiling Richelieu's efforts to wrest the throne from the young king (Hugh O'Conor) and his bride, Queen Anne (Gabrielle Anwar).

This "Three Musketeers" takes little interest in the woman who figured prominently in Dumas' book. D'Artagnan's love interest, Constance (Julie Delpy), has maybe three minor scenes. The beautiful but witchy Milady (de Mornay) is demoted from Dumas' chief villain to a tragic heroine; de Mornay is cast perfectly and sadly underutilized.

She isn't the only one with unexpectedly brief screen time. Top-billed Sheen as Aramis, who is torn between his religious vocation and his worldly desires, is scarcely visible. Sutherland at least has a lost love to brood on, and Platt gets to be funny, something he is very good at.

O'Donnell, who should be carrying the film, is winsome — and actually the right age for the part. But he simply is nowhere near as dashing as the role requires; he still reeks of that quietly righteous kid in "Scent of a Woman."

It's Curry who steals the show with a performance that turns on a dime from bone-chilling to campy. His Richelieu recalls nothing so much as Alan Ryckman's Sheriff of Nottingham in "Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves," which may not be a coincidence given that both movies also feature Wincott as second-string bad guy and closing songs by Bryan Adams.

"Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves" at least had a nice surprise ending in the person of Sean Connery. "The Three Musketeers" offers no such bonus, unless you count Sting and Rod Stewart assisting Adams on vocals. The kids won't complain, but grown-ups are advised to seek their swordplay elsewhere.

60: Show a bit heavy on back slapping of the stars, whose off-camera lives have rarely, if ever, intruded on the stories they have covered.

A cynic might argue that devoting most of the two-hour show to its newspeople whiffs faintly of self-indulgence, but how can you argue against a team of newspeople who have become an American institution?

How can you carp about a show that invented its own audience and changed the rules for broadcast journalism?

"I think "60 Minutes" may have done the greatest disservice to broadcasting anybody's ever done," Hewitt said in May, delivering the inaugural William S. Paley lecture at the Museum of Television and Radio.

"Because of us," he said, "you can't do news on television any more unless it's profitable."

And who at CBS would say no to a program that has earned the network upwards of $1.3 BILLION dollars?

And who's going to complain that the show should have aired back in September? Hey, there aren't any ratings sweeps in September.

TickTickTickTickTick ...

There's only one critical set of numbers that "60 Minutes" and CBS are not celebrating. Collectively, the "60 Minutes" team is more than 400 years old.

Wallace, the dean of "60 Minutes" correspondents, a man who's just begun to show a hint of gray in his hair, is 75 years old.

That's not a typo. That's three-quarters of a century. In the first eight weeks of this year, he logged 24,981 miles on the road, ranging from Albuquerque, N.M. to Sarajevo, Bosnia.

Hewitt, his sparkplug, taskmaster, sometime tormentor and the presiding heart and soul of "60 Minutes" is 71.

Neither he nor Wallace is talking about retirement; their contracts expire in 1997. (Curmudgeonly commentator Andy Rooney — aw, gee, don't you just hate this? — is 74.)

Safer is a spry 62. Ed Bradley, who joined the broadcast in 1981 after Dan Rather left to anchor the evening news, is 52. Steve Kroft, at 48, is the baby of the bunch. "60 Minutes" doesn't give Stahl's age.

Critics have complained over the years that "60 Minutes" is pretty much white and pretty much male. Whether or not you believe the boys have lost a step or two, there's no denying that they're getting old.

On March 12, 1991, Wallace scared the dickens out of Hewitt by fainting in front of him aboard a jet at Los Angeles' airport. Wallace was hospitalized; on March 16 he received a heart pacemaker; on March 20 he went back to work and prepared a report for the March 24 show.

Old, maybe; not tired.

ADDICTION: Key is to gauge your viewing habits

you own that doesn't really serve your needs, yet takes up space in your world.

"Clutter" is also the TV industry's own term applied to advertising, previews, station IDs and other non-program fare. One obvious way to banish that sort of clutter is to "time-shift": Tape your favorite shows, then, when you play them back, zip through the commercials. (And what a value, time-wise: Six shows for the price of five!)

To go further in breaking the cycle, just pry your eyes off the tube and look elsewhere for validation.

"We look to our peers to see how we're doing," Robin says. "It's called 'keeping up with the Joneses,' and if there's a big discrepancy between what they have and what we have, we start to feel unhappy."

So what happens when you get an eyeful of TV's rich and beautiful "Joneses," those contented, successful folk who populate commercials and programs alike?

"There's an illusion that the people on television are your friends," Robin says, "and when television becomes your 'neighbor,' when the 'people' you visit with include too many TV stars and make-believe happy families, then you'll have trouble not feeling dissatisfaction with the life you live."

Robin suggests that the viewer gauge the peak of his or her "TV fulfillment curve."

"Figure out the maximum amount of television you get value from — whether that means learning something, having a good laugh, or whatever. The longer you watch beyond that point, the further down the curve you slide.

"When you over-indulge — whether it's buying stuff or watching TV — every new thing erases the pleasure of the last, and it becomes a diminishing experience of fulfillment."

Indeed, research has found that the longer a viewer watches television, the less the viewer is likely to enjoy it — yet progressively greater is the effort required to shut the darned set off.

"But if you watch more judiciously, and time-shift when you can," Robin says, "it leads to less temptation and fewer expenditures, which can actually lead to less time working, which can lead to other, more rewarding pursuits besides TV. And around it goes again.

"The bottom line: You have more energy, more happiness, more sense of purpose."

Now, that's a cycle worth setting in motion.

Elsewhere in television ...

PBS REMEMBERS: The Public Broadcasting Service will mark the anniversary of President John F. Kennedy's assassination with three special programs.

"JFK: In His Own Words," airing Monday, Nov. 15, uses Kennedy's voice to tell his life story, compiled from 300 hours of audio and 200 hours of recorded pictures.

PBS' "Frontline" will present a special, three-hour investigative biography of JFK's alleged assassin. "Who Was Lee Harvey Oswald," took more than a year to put together, and involved a team of more than a dozen reporters. It airs Tuesday at 9 p.m. EST.

And, on Wednesday, Nov. 17, most PBS stations will air "The Kennedy Years — In Words and Music," which combines the pictures of Jacques Lowe, JFK's official photographer, with music from the Kennedy years.

DEALING WITH THE DEPRESSION: It began in the Roaring Twenties and ended when war exploded in the 1940s. "The Great Depression: Stories of a Generation's Struggle for Democracy" begins tonight on PBS at 9 p.m., and continues the next three Monday nights. Produced by Blackside Inc. (maker of the stirring civil rights examination, "Eyes on the Prize"), this seven-hour documentary provides a new look at how Americans responded to the greatest crisis to confront them this century.

PATTERSON: No one will ever replace Gus

(From 1D)

the former Texas Ranger with a desire for the riches of the north, is unmatched in television history. McCrae's death, and Call's returning of Gus's body 1,000 miles back to Lonesome Dove so that he can be buried in Texas as he wished, are two moments in television that will be etched in fans' minds.

(And anyone who saw the original will likely never forget the Irish cowboy being attacked by water moccasins as the cattle drive forged across the Red River.)

Gus is dead, but Call returns, in the form of Jon Voight, who, ironically, played Schroder's father in "The Champ," several years ago.

For Voight, an accomplished actor with memorable performances in "Deliverance" and "Coming Home," it will be difficult for him to capture the essence of the original character as played by the stoic Tommy Lee Jones.

Reviews of "Return to Lonesome Dove" have been mixed. Almost all agree that in order to enjoy it, one must forget that the original was television entertainment at its finest. While "Return" may be an above average television Western by today's standards, it's no "Lonesome Dove."

Jimmy Patterson writes about radio, television and music for the Reporter-Telegram.

CARLITO: Story written by judge of high court

(From 1D)

preme Court Justice Edwin Torres and set in the mid-'70s, the film is about a somewhat legendary Puerto Rican gangster (Pacino) who gets out of prison and intends to go straight, to pick up where he left off with his Anglo girlfriend (Penelope Ann Miller) and buy into a car-rental business in the Bahamas.

That's not easy in the Spanish Harlem world he calls home. After getting an interim job managing a swank nightclub, Carlito is pressured by admiring, neophyte gangsters; harassed by vengeful feds who want to put him back in the slammer, and victimized by his scheming, coked-out best-friend, a Jewish lawyer played by Sean Penn.

The movie is a cliche: The paces it goes through in 2½ hours are so familiar, so inevitable, that the audience is always a step ahead of the script — almost as if De Palma were consciously trying to pay tribute to the greatest scenes of Hollywood's gangster-movie past.

Fortunately, De Palma does this extremely well. All of it works, and two of the action sequences — a bloody shootout in a pool hall and a virtuoso chase through a New York subway — are probably the best he has directed. And, since he wants to be ingratiating here, he lightens up considerably on the explicit brutality that has been his signature.

KENT OIL, INC. KENT KWIK CONVENIENCE STORES

DO YOU WONDER WHAT COMPANY NAME WILL BE ON YOUR PAYCHECK NEXT WEEK?

Kent Oil (operating Kent Kwik convenience stores) is a stable West Texas-based company, thirty six years old and still growing. We offer many benefits to our employees. These benefits include:

- Company-assisted medical, dental and life insurance
- Paid vacations

- Tuition reimbursement program
- Special incentive programs for all employees
- Profit-sharing and retirement plan
- Intensive new hire training
