RPUWCD election...

106 ballots cast so far

Some 106 people, including 90 in Scurry County, have cast early ballots in an election which, if approved, would create the Rolling Plains Underground Water Conservation District.

The water district would serve Scurry, Mitchell and Borden counties. Early voting began last week and continues through June 3. The actual election is June 7.

According to election officials contacted this morning, 11 votes have been cast in Mitchell County and five in Borden County. Early voting is being held at the county clerk's office in Colorado City and Gail, and on the first floor of the courthouse in Snyder.

There are two issues on the ballot. One is to form the water district and establish a taxing authority for it; the other is to select a six-person board of directors.

Seven men have filed for six places on the board. They are Tommy Marricle and Bill Eiland of Snyder, representing Scurry County; E.L. Farmer of O'Donnell and Ralph Miller of Fluvanna, representing Borden County; and Ray Ritchey, Robert David Stubblefield and Bruce Earl Rich, all of Colorado City, representing Mitchell County.

If voters okay the water district, one director in each county will serve a two-year term and the others will serve four-year terms.

By law, the district may not tax more than five cents per $100 appraisal of property value. The Rolling Plains Underground Water Conservation District temporary board, currently comprised of Stubblefield, Eiland and Miller, has proposed the first tax rate to be one cent per $100 appraised valuation.

Courts can't challenge base closing decisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal courts cannot second-guess the government's decisions on which military installations will be closed, the Supreme Court decided today.

Federal law enacted by Congress gives judges no authority to intervene, the court ruled in rejecting Sen. Arlen Specter's legal challenge to the closing of a shipyard in his home state of Pennsylvania.

The court ruled for the Clinton administration, which argued that letting judges step in would make it impossible to act quickly to achieve a trimmer post-Cold War military.

The federal base-closing law does not require the president to determine whether the procedure for recommending base-closings was flawed, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the unanimous court.

"Indeed, nothing in (the law) prevents the president from approving or disapproving the recommendations for whatever reason he sees fit," the chief justice wrote. "How the president chooses to exercise the discretion Congress has granted him is not a matter for our review."

"Our conclusion that judicial review is not available for (Specter's) claim follows from our interpretation of an act of Congress, by which we and all federal courts are bound," Rehnquist wrote.

Today's ruling reversed a federal appeals court decision that allowed Specter, a Pennsylvania Republican, to challenge the government's decision to close the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard.

Since 1991, Congress and the president have decided to close 250 military bases and realign 152 others, and a third round of base-closing decisions is planned next year. However, the Clinton administration is considering delaying some of next year's closings until 1997.

The 1990 Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act requires the defense secretary to make recommendations to a special commission, which holds public hearings and sends a closing list to the president.

The president can accept or reject the list for any reason. If he approves the base closings, Congress has 45 days to veto them. The law requires the president and Congress to act on the list as a whole, with no revisions.

Solicitor General Drew S. Days III said that provision was intended to avoid "cherry picking" by lawmakers.

Seniors reminded to vote in SHL election Tuesday

Senior citizens are urged to vote Tuesday in the Silver Haired Legislature election. Voting will be held in the Senior Center, 2604 Ave. M, between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Oscar Dickerson of Aspermont is running unopposed in the district which includes Scurry County. Ruth West, former district representative, could not seek re-election because she moved from the area.

Though Dickerson has no opponent, local seniors are encouraged to vote in order to indicate to the state legislature that they are interested in the work of the Silver Haired Legislature (SHL).

The SHL studies proposals which would benefit older Texans and makes recommendations to the legislature.

Voters in the SHL election must be at least 60 years of age and registered Texas voters. Anyone needing more information is asked to contact the Senior Center.

Court to allow Friday service

Scurry County Commissioners Court this morning approved the annual county audit and gave the okay for an noon-hour religious service Friday on the courthouse square.

The court unanimously approved the outside audit of county and hospital operations performed by the Lubbock firm of Mason, Warner and Company.

Larry Anderson presented the audit to the court on April 4. Commissioners took no action at that time in order to review the report.

Jason Rogers, pastor of Faith Baptist Church, met with the court to seek permission to use the gazebo area Friday for a musicial program during the noon hour.

Rogers said the church will be conducting a revival starting Wednesday and Rogers said the musical program on the courthouse square will be used to promote the revival.

In other business, commissioners appointed Rogers to serve as a member of the county grievance committee. Rogers' name had been drawn from the grand jury list as an alternate. The name of Sammie Lee Harrison was drawn to replace Rogers an alternate.

The court also approved a $750 line-item budget transfer from court-appointed attorney to supplies. The funds will be used to help purchase a $1,500 fax machine to be used by jointly by the offices of district judge and district attorney.

County Judge Bob Doolittle presided at the meeting and commissioners attending were C.D. Gray Jr., Roy Idom, Ralph Trevey and Jerry Gannaway.

WTC budget workshop set

Western Texas College board of trustees will get their first look at the 1994 budget when they convene for a workshop at 6:30 this evening.

Last year, the board set a tax rate at .2513 cents per $100 property valuation, which brought in just over $1.8 million in tax revenue. Due to a decline in values, the appraisal district has estimated that the tax rate necessary to raise the same amount of revenue this year will be .2876 cents, or a 3.6-cent increase.

Trustees can set the rate lower, or higher, however.

Taxable values within the junior college district fell from $782,485,476 in 1993 to $685,009,422 this year.

Economic session gets good response

The first in a series of public economic development strategy sessions has left DCOS executive director Doug Hutchinson optimistic and ready to move forward.

"I think it was a very, very positive session," Hutchinson said of Saturday's day-long meeting at the junior high. "I think everyone came away thinking about areas that maybe they really hadn't studied or followed too closely. It was a good working group."

The group of "just under" 30 people began by considering eight broad categories: arts and culture; basic needs; business development; education; health and medical; youth issues; physical assets; and safety.

Within each category were a number of areas of discussion and consideration. Physical assets, for instance, included transportation, roads, railroad, airport, communications and utilities in addition to basic physical features. Basic needs included food, housing, clothing, the homeless, jobs and welfare.

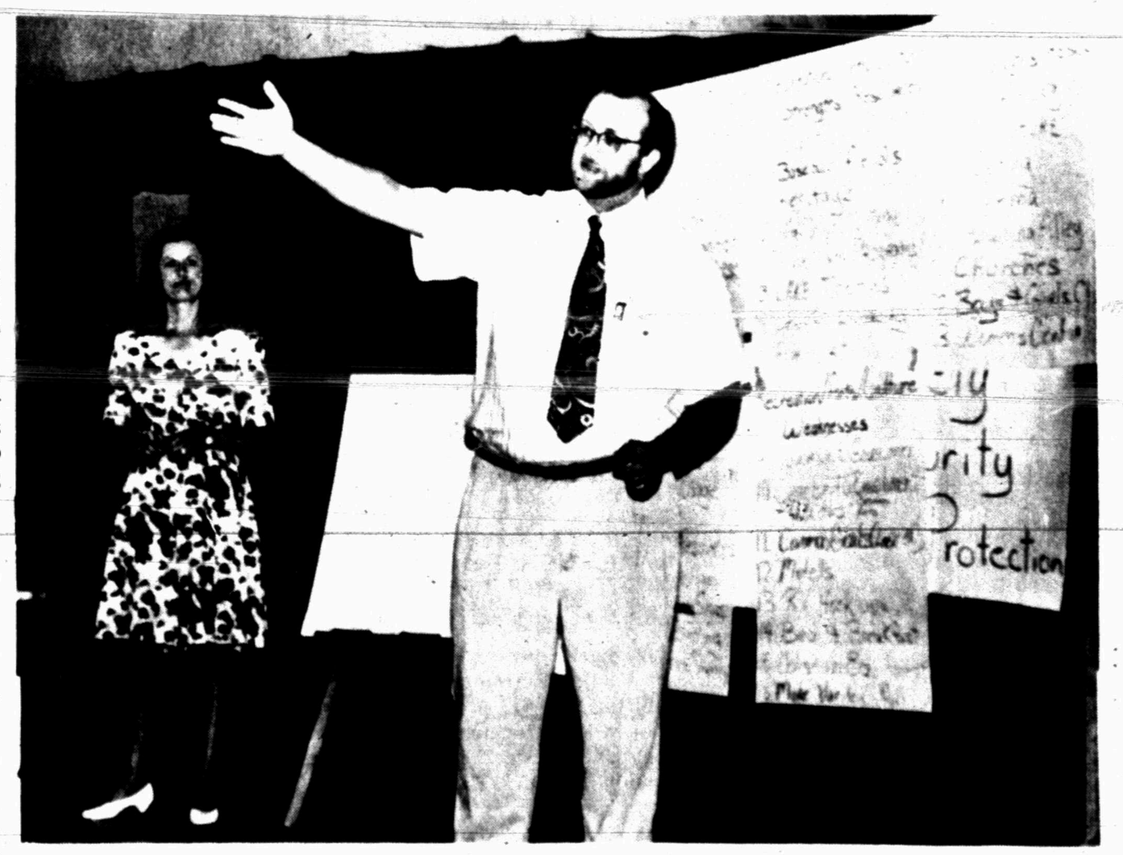

Strengths, weaknesses and opportunities were identified, and goals were set for each.

Hutchinson said that at a future public meeting, the goals will be priortized, and the methods by which those goals can be reached will be considered.

Hutchinson cautioned that there is no intent to interfere with other groups, boards or organizations already in existence, but rather to get the entire community working together.

"One comment we heard, from people who attended Saturday's meeting, is that they will go to their board, organization or friends and encourage them to be at the next meeting," said Hutchinson. "We want to stress that if you weren't unable to attend the first one, you can still fit right in at the second one."

Hutchinson said his office is currently compiling the information discussed at Saturday's meeting. A second meeting will be held in two to four weeks. He said it will be held in the evening and last from two-to-three hours.

Cable TV industry working to avoid fight over violence

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — On the eve of its biggest-ever convention, the cable TV industry is working to pre-empt a bloody battle with Congress over television violence.

The industry's "Voices Against Violence" initiative embraces many of the reforms its critics demand, including a violence rating system and technology that allows viewers to program their televisions to block violent programs.

Cable executives hope their work will discourage Congress from regulating TV shows.

"It's very dicey and scary when Congress takes it upon itself, through 10 or 12 pieces of legislation, to regulate the content of speech, no matter how well-intended," said Winston H. "Tony" Cox, president of cable's Showtime Networks

"I get uncomfortable any time the government wants to decide what's best for me to view, to read, to think, to say," he said.

The subject of violence — and what to do about it — will be a popular topic at the 43rd annual National Cable Television Association convention, which runs today through Wednesday. More than 20,000 people are expected to attend.

The theme of today's general session is "Bringing the Future Home." But Cox admits there's plenty of violent TV he won't let into his house.

"We don't watch the local news any more because it's so violent," he said.

Congress last spring responded to mounting public concern about violence in society by hauling top cable and broadcast executives in to testify. Broadcasters pointed to cable's higher violence content.

By October, Attorney General Janet Reno was telling lawmakers she felt some proposed legislation regulating TV violence would pass Constitutional muster.

The cable industry replied by launching "Voices Against Violence" in February. Twenty-six networks, including MTV, HBO and CNN, are participating, although the nation's largest basic cable network, the USA network, is not.

Cox said the industry supports the so-called "v-chip" proposed by U.S. Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., which would allow viewers to prevent violent programs from reaching their television.

It also advocates an advance parental advisory system and "responsible scheduling" of violent programs and their promotional ads.

The industry also has signed an independent firm to analyze and report annually on violence in television, beginning with the 1994-95 season.

Washington, D.C.-based Mediascope will do the research with the help of the University of California at Santa Barbara, the University of North Carolina, the University of Texas, and the University of Wisconsin.

Unlike previous monitoring attempts, Mediascope will not simply count the acts of violence but will consider the circumstances in which they occur.

Sports and news will not be monitored.

Cox acknowledged that the stakes are high.

"Unless we give parents an opportunity ... to use an on-off switch the way my parents did 25 years ago, we're never going to get to a 500-channel universe," he said.

Possible serial killer caught

HOUSTON (AP) — A grand jury is expected to hear evidence this week against a 46-year-old kidnapping suspect in Brazoria County, who authorities believe may be linked to the slayings of 10 prostitutes across Texas between 1971 and 1987.

Roy Alan Stuart, who remains in the Brazoria County Jail on $100,000 bond, was arrested Friday on charges alleging he kidnapped and attempted to strangle a woman near Brazoria.

Stuart is on parole for a 1991 felony drug conviction. He also served seven years of a 99-year sentence for the rape of a Potter County woman after the prison term was reduced to 15 years.

He is accused of abducting Janet Blanchard, 32, last Wednesday. She was hitchhiking from Freeport to Tomball. Authorities say Stuart picked her up and took her to a trailer house near Brazoria, where he tried to strangle and sexually assault her. She escaped and ran to a nearby house for help.

This week, a grand jury is expected to hear evidence against Stuart in the 1987 slaying of Carolyn Sosa, whose body was found under a bridge in Brazoria County.

"He's as slick as can be. He's not a beginner," said Capt. J.G. Adkins, of the Brazoria County sheriff's department. "We're working with the district attorney's office on this case and we hope to have it (before a grand jury) in the near future."

Police say the self-employed mechanic has been linked to the deaths of at least 10 prostitutes or hitchhikers between 1971 and 1987 in Brazoria and Harris counties and as far away as Amarillo.

Mono symptom could be infection

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 60 and suffered from mono three years ago. Since then, the glands in the front of my ears and down my neck swell. A specialist did blood work and said there is nothing wrong with me. I know there is and I'm desperate.

DEAR READER: Mononucleosis, a virus infection that commonly affects adolescents, causes fever, fatigue, swollen glands, and a sore throat. This disease is diagnosed with a blood test.

For all practical purposes, once a person has recovered from the infection, he has a lifelong immunity to the disease. Not only is mono rare in people over 30, it almost never leads to chronic fatigue and illness, as you seem to suffer.

Therefore, I suspect that you may have a disease that, in many respects, resembles mono — but isn't. Toxoplasmosis (caused by a parasitic microorganism) and cytomegalovirus infection are two such disorders. Both can be diagnosed by suitable blood tests, and treated with medication. Ask your doctor about this.

Also, remember that many other infections can cause the lymph glands to enlarge, because these structures act as filters in the body (to trap germs), and the glands produce antibodies, too.

Perhaps your family physician should sit down with you, describe the test results that have been reported, and plan a course of action (such as additional blood work) to identify the cause of your ongoing symptoms. Don't accept half-measures; badger your doctor for answers.

DEAR DR. GOTT: One night my husband and I had intercourse. During this, he died and could not be revived by ambulance personnel or the hospital workers. Was this too much stress and strain for a person who had a previous heart attack? I feel guilty.

DEAR READER: Don't feel guilty. You were not the cause of your husband's heart attack, which could have just as easily occurred during any other strenuous activity.

Sexual intercourse is a recognized risk for men with arteriosclerotic heart disease, because this exertion may place excessive demands on the heart. For this reason, physicians often recommend a "male under" position for men with coronary artery disease; a more passive role is associated with less heart strain.

To lose a loved one during physical intimacy is a devastating experience and I can well understand your tendency to assume responsibility. However, in most cases, the sex partner is not to blame.

Rather, many men with heart disease choose to accept the risk of intercourse — and other normal activities — in order to maintain as full a life as they can, despite other obvious restrictions, concerning heavy lifting and physically stressful endeavors.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Heart Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

Though oil prices are up, jobs in oil field continue to be cut

HOUSTON (AP) — Oil prices are on the rise, but job cuts in the oilfield continue.

A Houston Chronicle survey of 24 companies with large operations in Houston found that last year they cut more than 3,400 jobs, or 3.6 percent of their total Houston work forces.

"By the time you hit 35 to 36 years old you better be looking over your shoulder," said Michael Carmichael, 51, who produced training films for Conoco and received a pink slip in November. "The day when a person went to work for a company and was there until retirement is over."

Worldwide, those same companies shed more than 36,000 jobs.

Last year alone, Exxon cut 500 Houston jobs. Shell sliced 2,000, Dow Chemical, 500, and Conoco, more than 400.

This latest round of job cutbacks was precipitated in part by last year's oil price plunge. West Texas Intermediate closed Friday at $18.92 per barrel, but the crude price on domestic markets dove from $18 in October to below $14 in December. When adjusted for inflation, it was the lowest price in 20 years.

With prices so low, exploration efforts became impractical because it would cost more to pump the oil out of the ground than companies could ever hope to earn selling it.

As a result, more than 20,000 jobs in the exploration segment of the industry were eliminated, U.S. labor statistics show.

For 20 years, Richards Barilli worked for Conoco, forecasting inventories for gasoline, jet and diesel fuel.

In January 1993, Barilli was laid off. After sending out 1,400 resumes, he received 250 responses, all negative.

"I'm not trying to find a job," said Barilli, 46. "I'm trying to find an interview — half an hour of somebody's time."

Three months ago, Barilli found a job. He's now an assistant store manager for Walgreen's, a discount drug store, at half his former salary.

Retrenching continues as both Marathon Oil and Amoco prepare to make big job cuts later this summer.

The word is out among those just entering the market.

The number of students graduating from the University of Texas and Texas A&M University with petroleum-related degrees dropped by more than two-thirds between 1986 and 1993, the Energy Department says.

Just how far the cuts this summer will go is anyone's guess.

Coastal Corp. Chairman Oscar Wyatt predicted the industry could lose another 60,000 jobs by year's end.

Other experts think the worst is over.

"We will definitely see further employment reductions this year, although I think we've passed the peak," said John Hervey, vice president with Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette in New York. "The last two years will represent the peak in declines in employment."

Companies the Chronicle surveyed were: Exxon, Shell, Amoco, Texaco, Chevron, Dow, Phillips, Lyondell, Conoco, Pennzoil, Coastal, Mitchell, Marathon, Hoechst-Celanese, Halliburton, Baker Hughes, Western Atlas, Schlumberger, M.W. Kellogg, Bechtel, Enron, Panhandle Eastern, Tenneco and Transco.

Parents worried about park beer sales

ARLINGTON (AP) — Wet'N Wild's decision to sell beer this year at its Arlington park has drawn complaints from parents who wish the water park would have remained dry.

Three people have complained about the policy since the water slide park opened for the season May 15.

"It's just such a danger," said Linda Rosenberry, a teacher whose 16-year-old daughter, Alison, is a lifeguard trainee there.

Bill Monty, Wet'N Wild's marketing director, says there is no reason for concern. Parks in Las Vegas and Orlando, Fla., have sold beer for years without safety problems, Monty said.

Under the new policy, beer is available at the park from 10 a.m. until one hour before closing, Monty said. Beer drinkers must show identification and wear a special wristband, he said.

But that doesn't comfort some.

"In the past Wet'N Wild has been a baby-sitting service, even though people don't like to admit it," said Dani Van Wig, also a parent and teacher. "You buy your pass and you leave your kids there and take them to Six Flags the next day.

"At this point, I would not take my daughter and leave her anymore."

The park has sold beer at private parties since 1984. The Wet'N Wild in the Dallas suburb of Garland doesn't sell beer because city ordinances forbid it.

Many Houston students opt for night high school classes

HOUSTON (AP) — For hundreds of Houston high school students, the academic day starts at night.

In 1975, Houston Night High opened as the state's only year-round high school open five nights a week. The school has been occupying space at Milby High School since 1980, where students range in age from 15 to 21.

For at-risk students or those who are employed, married or raising children, the Houston Independent School District's night-time high school classes are a chance to secure a diploma.

"Students here take life seriously," said Ray Phillips, the school's librarian. "It's their last chance to get a full high school diploma rather than a GED (General Equivalency Diploma)."

Twelve teachers instruct about 400 full- and part-time students each semester.

Because most part-time students also are enrolled in a public day school, they must pay tuition to take extra classes at Night High. Full-time students attend free.

Night High students say they appreciate the small classes and individual attention; a laid-back, but serious atmosphere; the lack of peer pressure; and the absence of school violence.

But, Questaleicia Steemer said, the biggest benefit is the opportunity for students who have had problems to graduate from high school.

Ms. Steemer, 17, who is the 1994 senior class salutatorian, said she refused to quit school, as was suggested to her, once she became pregnant. With her twin sons barely a month old, Ms. Steemer started attending Night High.

She cares for the children and works part-time during the day. She will attend Texas Southern University in the fall.

"A lot of kids come here on their own. No one makes you come here, not your parents or anybody," said Ms. Steemer, who has attended Night High for two years. "You've got to be serious about going to school. The ones who think it's easy don't last after the first semester."

Teen-age rebellion led Mamisi Gordon to live on her own, dropping out of school to support herself. Low-paying, dead-end jobs led her back to the classroom.

Having dropped out for two years, Ms. Gordon, 20, said she wanted to be around older students like herself and avoid the typical high school culture. Night High was her solution. She will be among the 22 graduates who will get their diplomas early next month at a ceremony in the Milby High auditorium.

While the GED is available for those who drop out, several Night High students said that option did not appeal to them.

"I want people to know I went to school and worked hard for my diploma and didn't just take a test after studying for three months," said Ms. Gordon.

"We're not failures. I want people to know that," said Ms. Steemer. "We're poor and we're trying to get an education. We know how hard of a struggle it is out there. We don't take a lot for granted."

The young are winning

In January, there are two prestigious pair events held in Europe. The first is the Cap Volmac, played in The Hague, Holland. This year's winners were Geir Helgemo and Tor Helness from Norway. Helgemo, 23, is probably the world's best junior player. In 1993 he won silver medals in both the World Junior Team Championship and the Bermuda Bowl.

Unfortunately, I wasn't sent an interesting deal featuring them winning the Cap Volmac. So here is the first deal they played in last year's Bermuda Bowl.

Most experts would treat North's four-club rebid as showing game values with four spades and six strong clubs. However, the American pair, Peter Weichsel and Bobby Levin, use it to describe a balanced raise to four spades.

Showing that he was in mid-tournament form right from the beginning, Helgemo selected the diamond 10 as his opening lead.

Levin won in hand with the queen and played a trump to dummy's queen. But Helness won with the ace, shot back his second diamond and received the critical diamond ruff. Now Helness carefully returned a club into dummy's tenace, leaving South with an unavoidable heart loser.

It is almost never right to underlead an ace against a suit contract. But an expert will sometimes try it. There are two scenarios. The first occurs when the opponents bid a slam in an auction that makes it clear dummy has a control in the ace suit but declarer has losers in it. You lead low from the ace, hoping declarer is faced with a K-J guess. The second situation occurs when dummy has shown a strong balanced hand.

Bone marrow sought for boy

ABILENE (AP) — Hope is glimmering once again for Martin Garcia who watched a "phenomenal" turnout of potential bone marrow donors come to be tested for a match with his 11-year-old son.

"It's a good sign for us," the 40-year-old cook and father of five said. "People are pitching in. I appreciate it. I'm encouraged that something good is going to happen."

Jacob was diagnosed with leukemia in 1991 after clumps of his hair began falling out. Doctors thought the deadly disease was in remission until two weeks ago, when the fifth-grader suffered a relapse on Mother's Day.

Tarantulas seek companionship

BRYAN (AP) — Maturing isn't much fun for male tarantulas, many of whom will roam Brazos County streets until early June looking for mates.

As they pursue companions, the furry wolf spiders often meet their ends under the wheels of cars or in the mouths of predators.

Some are even captured as pets, but usually "die in a day or two," or "maybe two weeks maximum in the wild," said Bob Breene, a former arachnologist at Texas A&M University.

"I remember going to Austin from College Station and counting hundreds of them," Breene said. "On Highway 21, they do get thick. You can run over a bunch of them eventually."

Males live about 10 years before maturing, then die in about a month. But females can live for decades.

There doesn't appear to be much reason to fear tarantulas found along the road. Breene says a common kind of Texas tarantula called "Texas Tans" have become known as rather friendly critters.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"I DON'T KNOW WHAT IT IS, BUT I MADE IT MYSELF."

Hoerster accepts post at 3A Bridgeport High

Snyder High School tennis coach Teri Hoerster has accepted a position at Bridgeport High School.

Hoerster, who has been at SHS for two years, will teach middle school physical education and coach seventh grade basketball and varsity tennis, beginning the 1994-95 academic year at 3A BHS.

TERI HOERSTER

"I really love my job and Snyder High School," Hoerster said. "This is just an opportunity for me. I'm really moving because of the location and a chance to work with some of my family. I'll miss everyone here, all the players and students and faculty."

The Tigers have finished third in both Hoerster's team tennis seasons. In addition, the second-year coach sent five players to regional competition including the doubles team of Stephen Campbell and Greg Jones in the recently completed spring season.

Besides coaching tennis, Hoerster, a 1992 graduate of Tarleton State University, teaches typing, word processing and health at SHS.

Conference finals...

Rockets, Jazz to start series

HOUSTON (AP) — The road to the Western Conference final for Utah has been a rugged one for Jazz center Felton Spencer.

First he went up against San Antonio's David Robinson in the first round. Then he took on Denver's Dikembe Mutombo in the second round.

The tempo picks up tonight against Hakeem Olajuwon in Game 1 against the Houston Rockets.

"We've played against two guys — David Robinson and (Dikembe) Mutombo — who make it very hard for you," Jazz coach Jerry Sloan said. "And now we're going to have to play against another."

Containing Olajuwon will be Utah's primary task. Olajuwon is the NBA defensive player of the year and leading scorer in the playoffs with a 30.6 average.

"Hakeem is so active and quick, he plays like a forward," Spencer said. "I've just got to try to meet him early and hope for the best."

Olajuwon says the Rockets have come together as a team during the playoffs.

"Against Portland (first round) we were playing together as a team," Olajuwon said. "But now we're at a different level. We've seen that teamwork makes it so much easier."

The Rockets eliminated Phoenix 104-94 on Saturday, becoming the second team in NBA history to rally to win a seven-game series after losing the first two games at home.

Utah won the first three games in its semifinal series against Denver and then had to overcome the Nuggets' three-game winning streak to avoid being the first team in NBA history to lose after taking a 3-0 lead.

The Rockets' emphasis will be on Karl Malone, No. 2 in playoff scoring behind Olajuwon with a 27.6 average.

"He's their Hakeem," Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "A lot of their offense goes through him. Some of his stuff you can stop but you can't neutralize him."

Malone is the reason the Jazz's offense is called predictable.

"We've been predictable. Everyone has reminded me of that," Sloan said. "We're predictable because Karl Malone goes inside a lot. But he's done well in the last two series playing on the outside, too."

Utah is making its 11th straight playoff appearance, but has made it to the Western Conference finals only once before, in 1992, when the Jazz lost in six games to Portland.

The Jazz has had trouble holding leads. Denver's three victories came after the Jazz blew leads of 10 or more points. Even in Game 7, Utah was up by 19 with 5:24 left and the Nuggets got it to 83-75 with 2:24 to play.

"It's going to be a tough, tough series," Tomjanovich said.

Kidd expected to be Mavs' top pick

DALLAS (AP) — Even if the Dallas Mavericks say they are undecided about whom to take with the second pick in next month's NBA draft, they sure aren't acting that way.

The Mavericks stopped barely short of a wink and a nudge at the mention of Cal point guard Jason Kidd as they celebrated receiving the No. 2 spot through Sunday's lottery.

"He's certainly up there," new head coach Dick Motta said when asked where Kidd fit on Dallas' wish list.

Motta has seen Kidd play only once and it wasn't a very impressive experience. It was the first round of this year's NCAA Tournament when Cal was upset.

"Yeah, but I drove through a snowstorm to watch Rolando and he didn't take a shot," Motta joked, referring to his first impression of Rolando Blackmon

The Mavericks took Blackmon anyway and he blossomed into a star for them when Motta was their coach in the 1980s.

Hints like that comparison were dropped often after the lottery order for the June 29 draft was announced.

It was the highest the Mavericks have finished in six lotteries and will be their highest pick since they took Mark Aguirre at No. 1 in the 1981 draft.

Drafting fourth the last two years, Dallas took small forward Jamal Mashburn and shooting guard Jim Jackson, leaving them thin at center and point guard.

But no true center is available, meaning even if Milwaukee uses the No. 1 pick to take Glenn Robinson, the Mavericks can still fill one of their biggest needs.

The Mavericks also own the 19th and 28th picks in the draft. Before Sunday, they expected to try filling a need there, but now they're talking about just taking the best player available.

Wilson, Echols claim roping title

Trey Wilson and Perry Echols posted a 32.09 team roping time to nudge J.J. Kincheloe and Mark Mueller for first place at Saturday's 13th Annual Western Texas College Team Roping and Team Penning at Scurry County Rodeo Arena.

Kincheloe and Mueller were second in the event with a 32.37.

Capturing top honors in team penning were James Boucher, Gayla Owen and Kenny Hart, who registered a 56.00 clocking. Van Hale, Echols and Hart were runners-up, flashing a 1:09.00.

Winners in both events received Skyline belt buckles. Proceeds benefit the WTC Rodeo Scholarship Fund.

Griffey, Mariners sweep Rangers

SEATTLE (AP) — Ken Griffey Jr. matched Mickey Mantle's historic 1956 home run start. And, at 24, he's equaled his father's career home run total, too.

The Seattle Mariners star left the Texas Rangers in shambles — and out of first place — with a home run barrage that gave him 20 in his first 42 games. He hit No. 20 in the Mariners' 8-2 victory Sunday night.

Matt Whiteside walked Mike Blowers with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to give Seattle a 5-4 victory over Texas on Thursday night in a game in which the Rangers had a 4-0 lead.

It was all Griffey after that.

Griffey hit home run No. 18 in a 19-2 victory Friday night and No. 19 in a 13-2 victory Saturday night.

Griffey's 20 homers in 42 games matched Mantle's 20 in 41 games in the first two months of the 1956 season when Mantle hit 52. The Mariners have eight more games left this month.

That puts Griffey on a pace to hit 77 this season, 16 more than the late Roger Maris hit for the Yankees in 1961.

"He's something special," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said. "I'll tell you what, he ally is. Boy, you just make the slightest mistake with him and you're looking for problems."

In the Mariners' first-ever four-game sweep of Texas in the Kingdome, Griffey hit .437 (7-for-16) with three homers, five RBIs, two doubles, three walks and eight runs scored in the series.

Bruce Hurst walked Griffey in the first, got him to ground out in the third and struck him out looking in the fifth. Griffey faced James Hurst in the seventh.

On a 3-1 pitch, Griffey hit the ball 386 feet over the 23-foot wall in right-center, giving Seattle a 7-1 lead.

James Hurst's timing couldn't have been worse. He arrived in Seattle after being recalled from Oklahoma City to help Texas' much-abused staff. Rangers manager Kevin Kennedy brought him in for Jay Howell to pitch to Griffey.

James Hurst was the 11th Texas pitcher in the series. All 11 gave up runs. The Texas pitchers now have a team ERA of 6.12.

Luis Sojo also hit a homer — his second in two days — and Roger Salkeld (2-2) pitched five shutout innings for the Mariners, who outscored the Rangers 45-10 in the series.

The Mariners took a 1-0 lead in the first on Edgar Martinez's RBI single. Sojo's homer in the third off Bruce Hurst (0-1) gave Salkeld a 2-0 lead. Seattle made it 3-0 in the fourth on Felix Fermin's sacrifice fly and 5-1 in the sixth on Bill Haselman's two-run triple. Rich Amaral had an RBI single in the eighth for the final run.

The Rangers got an RBI single from Rusty Greer in the sixth and an RBI double from Dean Palmer in the eighth.

SD stops skid with 7-6 win

HOUSTON (AP) — It was only one home run out of 13 this year for San Diego Padres outfielder Phil Plantier. But everyone on the team knew it was something special.

Plantier's homer into the right field stands in the eighth inning drove in two runs and pushed the Padres past the Houston Astros 7-6 on Sunday afternoon. What made the home run and the victory so special was the fact it ended a club-record 13-game losing streak.

Manager Jim Riggleman had trouble remembering any factors other than Plantier's homer, which came off loser Mitch Williams, 1-4.

"That was just a huge at bat for us," Riggleman said. "To do it against a lefthander and with two strikes on him was something. It doesn't get any more clutch than that.

"This was a very good win regardless of what kind of streak we were on. The guys were actually smiling in the locker room."

Winning pitcher Pedro Martinez, 1-1, experienced some difficult times of his own, pitching two innings and giving up three runs that brought the Astros from a 5-3 deficit to a 6-5 lead. The runs, however, were unearned as they all came after a throwing error by Archi Cianfrocco on a grounder by Craig Biggio.

The Astros, who saw a four-game streak stopped, weren't so lucky. Starter Pete Harnisch, who is working on a new delivery to ease the pressure of a shoulder injury, was roughed up for five earned runs in only four innings.

Aid groups keep aheads of crisis in refugee camp

BENACO REFUGEE CAMP, Tanzania (AP) — The boys slipped through the barbed wire and scooped up corn kernels scattered in the dirt.

Marco Onorato waved his walkie-talkie and gave a loud "Boo!" that sent the boys running.

"Hey, sometimes you have to be the tough guy," said Onorato, an Italian Red Cross worker directing the food distribution for nearly 300,000 Rwandans at the world's largest refugee camp.

"It's a tough job."

The logistics behind providing food and shelter at the camp is as epic in scale as the huge flight from the savage civil war in Rwanda.

Hundreds of trucks, planes and boats have been needed just to keep pace with the demands at the camp, where the population grows by several thousand each day.

But speed has helped to avert epidemics and other ravages, aid officials said. A German Red Cross surgical hospital was erected in 10 hours. Water purification systems were in place in a matter of days.

Nearly every major relief organization is now operating in the camp, about 10 miles from the Rwandan border.

"I don't think I've seen a vaster, more organized response to a crisis," said Panos Moumtzis, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Nairobi, Kenya.

But the lack of a good airstrip nearby and the poor roads leading to the camp slow down shipments. Aid officials are far short of their goal of having a month's supply of food in reserve.

Engineers are looking at the possibility of expanding the short, dirt runway in nearby Ngara to handle C-130 cargo planes. In the meantime, tons of food is trucked in daily from airports in Uganda and Mwanza in Tanzania — each a day's drive away.

The food — mostly grains, flour and oil donated by the United States and Europe — are stored in hangar-like huts made of metal frames and plastic-treated cloth.

Each day, Onorato makes his request: about 220 tons of food.

The line of refugees begins to form about 9 a.m. for their three-day supply. Each person receives about one pound of corn; 13 ounces of beans; five ounces of soy blend flour and two tablespoons of oil.

A third of the camp's population — nearly 100,000 people — wait up to five hours every day to fill their plastic jugs or bags.

Close to 4 million sacks of food are emptied before sundown. When it rains, plastic sheets are tossed over the grains and beans.

"But we have to keep going," Onorato said. "It's messy and muddy, but what can we do?"

A 30-member security team guards the feeding compound. Quarrels, however, have been few and quickly ended.

"I'm always amazed at how docile and cooperative the Rwandans have been," said Ted Pride of the Irish aid group Concern. "If these were Somalis, the food would have been looted the first day, the tents burned and shots would have been fired."

The aid plan calls for a 5-by-4 yard sheet of plastic for each person; two blankets per family; jerry cans, buckets and cooking sets. As of Sunday, 50,000 sheets of blue plastic and 94,000 blankets had been given out, Pride said.

Children sometimes wait outside the fence, saying nothing but making soul-wrenching requests with a single gesture: an outstretchedpalm.

"I try to remind myself of the people we're helping rather than those we are missing," Pride said.

Texas school finance issue still in court

AUSTIN (AP) — Ten years ago, a group of poor school districts launched a legal battle against the state because they believed their students were being shortchanged by an unfair funding system.

Their lawsuit has forced lawmakers to slash funding disparities among school districts in a financing system that relies heavily on local property taxes.

But they're not through yet.

On Wednesday, poor districts will ask the Texas Supreme Court to throw out the latest education funding law, calling it inequitable.

Property-rich and mid-wealth school districts also are fighting the law, as are Texans who want to be able to use tax money to pay private school tuition.

If the state loses, it will be the fourth time a school finance law has been found wanting by the court, which first ordered lawmakers in 1989 to find a constitutional way to even out funding available to school districts.

Lawyer Al Kauffman of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, who filed the original lawsuit, said the continuing legal fight doesn't mean there hasn't been improvement.

"We feel we've made significant progress," he said.

For one thing, lawmakers have put a lid on school districts' property wealth. Schools are funded mainly through local property taxes and state aid.

At the time of the first trial, the wealthiest school district had about $14.7 million per student in property wealth. The poorest had about $20,000.

Under the latest law, school district wealth is capped at $280,000 per student, while the poorest district has $10,000. The 98 school districts over the wealth limit — out of more than 1,000 — must share with the rest.

There also is more money in the school system: a total of about $15.6 billion in state and local funding, compared with $8.7 million in 1984-85. According to the Texas Association of School Boards, however, the state share has dropped from about 52 percent to about 45 percent.

Despite the headway that's been made, Kauffman said, "We're still letting a large number of students in a large number of school districts have a significant advantage over other districts."

The current system doesn't divide the money as equitably as it could, and it will leave at least a $600 per-student gap in funding between rich and poor districts, according to poor school districts.

According to the U.S. Agency for International Development, the possibility of famine in the Horn of Africa puts 17 million people in the region at risk of starvation. The chief culprits in the pending crisis are drought — which is responsible for putting two-thirds of the total at risk — civil war and banditry.

Couple awarded $101 million lose Supreme Court challenge

WASHINGTON (AP) — A couple who won $101 million from General Motors lost a Supreme Court challenge today of a Georgia law that requires them to give most of the money to the state.

The court, without comment, turned down an appeal by Thomas and Elaine Moseley, awarded punitive damages for their son's death in a traffic accident. They contended the law requiring them to give $75 million to the state is unconstitutional.

Shannon Moseley, 17, was killed in 1989 when the truck in which he was riding exploded after being struck by a drunken driver. His parents sued GM, contending the design of the truck's fuel tanks, which were mounted outside the frame, caused the explosion.

A state jury ruled for the Moseleys and awarded them $4 million for the value of their son's life. The jury also awarded the couple $101 million in damages designed to punish GM.

Under a 1987 Georgia law, anyone who wins punitive damages in a product-liability case must give three-fourths of the money to the state.

There are similar laws in eight other states: Florida, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, New York, Oregon and Utah. A similar Colorado law was thrown out by a state court.

The Georgia law was intended to discourage litigation and eliminate the public perception that some people receive "excessive windfalls" in such lawsuits, lawyers for the state said.

The judge in the Moseleys' trial ruled the law unconstitutional, saying it amounted to an unconstitutional "taking" of their property without compensation.

The Georgia Supreme Court reversed the judge's ruling and upheld the law.

Fraud suit still active, court says

WASHINGTON (AP) — An evenly divided Supreme Court today allowed the reinstatement of a securities-fraud lawsuit dismissed as the result of a 1991 high court ruling.

Voting 4-4 in a Texas case, the court upheld a federal law that permitted the lawsuit to be reopened even though the dismissal had been final.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor did not participate in the case, and there was no indication how the remaining eight justices split.

No opinion accompanied today's ruling. It is possible that the issue, the subject of conflicting court of appeals rulings, someday will return to the high court.

O'Connor did not explain why she disqualified herself from the case.

The issue packs a big-money wallop. It could affect securities-fraud lawsuits worth more than $1 billion, according to James Finberg, an attorney for the National Association of Securities and Commercial Law Attorneys. The group supported allowing the lawsuits to be reinstated.

Until 1991, state law governed the time limit for filing lawsuits under a section of the federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934 that bars false or misleading statements in the sale of securities.

The Supreme Court set a nationwide standard in June 1991, saying such cases must be filed within one year after a securities violation is discovered and three years after the violation was committed.

In another previous decision, the court made the new limits apply retroactively to an estimated $4.5 billion worth of securities-fraud lawsuits pending at the time.

As a result, federal courts dismissed a number of lawsuits that had been filed within a state time limit but did not meet the new federal standard. If no appeal was filed, the dismissals soon became final.

Among the cases dismissed was a lawsuit filed in Dallas by Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co. over an $8 million securities purchase in 1987 from InterFirst Corp. Pacific Mutual sued several investment banking firms and an accounting firm.

Kin, others revive memory of training's forgotten dead

WESTOVER AIR BASE, Mass. (AP) — They are perhaps the most forgotten of World War II's forgotten.

They never reached Europe or the Pacific. Instead, they died thousands of miles from the war in lumbering bombers and crude fighter planes that plowed into snowy New England mountainsides or dropped into the Atlantic, often in the black of night.

They were the casualties of flight training, deprived even of the gratitude and honor bestowed on victims of combat.

More than 15,130 men died in World War II flight training across the country, according to the Air Force Safety Agency in Albuquerque, N.M. Among them were at least 118 killed in 35 accidents on training flights from Westover in the western Massachusetts city of Chicopee, according to military and state records.

Most died on flights of giant B-24 bombers, which allowed escape only through their underside in a crash. The plane was nicknamed the "Liberator," but many called it the "Flying Coffin."

The accidents were blamed on mechanical failure and errors by often inexperienced pilots.

Frank Tencza, a Vietnam veteran from Wilbraham, held a 1989 memorial service atop Mount Holyoke for 10 airmen who died in a Westover crash there in late May 1944 as they prepared to invade France on D-Day. That operation, so well-remembered by history, was launched 10 days later without them.

This year, Tencza is organizing another service at the South Hadley site for Saturday, two days before Memorial Day and nine before the 50th anniversary of D-Day. This one will honor all who died on Westover training flights in World War II.

"Who would ... think of training accidents as part of the cost of war?" Tencza asked. "Let's remember them — at least once."

Last rites today for Mrs. Onassis

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis was remembered today as "a blessing to us and to the nation — and a lesson to the world on how to do things right."

Family and friends gathered inside a Park Avenue church to mourn in a private service, while hundreds of people stood outside to say a final goodbye to the former first lady.

In his eulogy prepared for the funeral, Sen. Edward Kennedy said his sister-in-law "was always there — for all our family — in her special way."

"She was a blessing to us and to the nation — and a lesson to the world on how to do things right, how to be a mother, how to appreciate history, how to be courageous."

"I often think of what she said about Jack in December after he died: 'They made him a legend, when he would have preferred to be a man,'" the senator's remarks said. "Jackie would have preferred to be just herself, but the world insisted that she be a legend too."

"She graced our history," the eulogy said. "And for those of us who knew and loved her — she graced our lives."

Mrs. Onassis, 64, widow of President Kennedy and of millionaire Aristotle Onassis, died at her Fifth Avenue home Thursday night of cancer. A private wake was held inside the 10-room apartment on Sunday evening.

At exactly 10 a.m. today, a hearse carrying a dark mahogany casket covered with ferns and a cross of white flowers arrived at St. Ignatius Loyola Church from Mrs. Onassis' Fifth Avenue apartment building. It was followed by four limousines carrying the Kennedy entourage and a police escort.

Among those attending the funeral were the current first lady, Hillary Rodham Clinton, and former first lady Lady Bird Johnson.

At the service, Mrs. Onassis' son John F. Kennedy Jr. read a passage from the Bible. Her daughter, Caroline, and Mrs. Onassis' companion of many years, Maurice Tempelsman, also were slated to speak briefly at the funeral.

Though today's service was private, it didn't stop the masses from coming to say good-bye.

Annabelle Slattery, who works at the William Doyle art gallery where Mrs. Onassis occasionally went to look at paintings, was one of the few who actually met the former first lady.

"I had the honor of speaking with her about exhibits," Slattery said. "She was very reserved but most gracious."

Security was extremely tight. Police kept onlookers several blocks from the church behind barricades. The blocks surrounding the church were closed to all except residents, who had to prove they lived in the area.

Mrs. Onassis, 64, widow of President Kennedy and of millionaire Aristotle Onassis, died at her Fifth Avenue home Thursday night of cancer. A private wake was held inside the 10-room apartment on Sunday evening.

As her wake took place in her own home, for family and close friends only, a crowd out on the street 15 stories below chanted, "We love Jackie!"

Justices let stand big award

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today let stand an $8 million punitive-damages award against Phillips Petroleum Co. for causing an Arkansas independent gas distributor to lose most of his business.

The court, without comment, turned down Phillips' argument that Arkansas standards for reviewing such awards violate due-process rights.

The Supreme Court several times in recent years has refused to limit the amount of punitive-damages awards in lawsuits, leaving that question to state judges and lawmakers.

The case acted on today dates back to a 1986 lawsuit against Phillips by Butch Robertson, who owns Robertson Oil Co., an independent gasoline distributor in Fayetteville, Ark.

He alleged that the giant oil company caused him to lose his distributorship to 23 gas stations in 1984. He said Phillips reneged on an oral agreement to let the stations use the Phillips logo, implied to the stations' owners that there were problems with Robertson's operation, and sought the stations' business behind his back.

Local man injured in Sunday accident

Area officers investigated several accidents Friday and over the weekend, including a one-vehicle rollover which sent a Snyder man to Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Michael Carroll, 20, of 3010 Ave. F, was admitted to the hospital for 23-hour observation Sunday after being involved in a vehicle rollover. He was treated for multiple contusions and abrasions and dismissed this morning.

Carroll was the driver of a 1985 GMC 18-wheeler which overturned at 7:35 a.m. Sunday along the U.S. 84 business exit just southeast of the city. Carroll was trapped in the vehicle for a short period of time before local fireman and EMS personnel were able to free him.

Police investigated a hit-and-run which occurred between 8:30 and 9 a.m. Saturday in the Lawrence IGA parking lot. Involved were a parked, unoccupied 1989 Ford owned by Jesusita Garza of Rt. 3 and a vehicle which left the scene.

Officers worked another hit-and-run Friday at the Fieldcrest Apartments which involved an unoccupied 1988 Mazda owned by Charles Colvin of 1902 Scott and a vehicle which left the scene.

At 9:23 a.m. Friday, officers investigated an accident in the 900 block of College Avenue. Involved were a 1981 Chevrolet pickup driven by E.H. Kenney of Rt. 3 and a 1986 Dodge driven by Louis Ruiz of 2906 Ave. L.

At 1:52 p.m. Friday, police investigated an accident in the 2300 block of Avenue Q. Involved were a 1993 Mercury driven by Martha Schiebel of 3011 Ave. T and a 1986 Oldsmobile driven by Daniel Garcia of 2401 Ave. B.

Mrs. Schiebel was brought to Cogdell emergency room by private vehicle at 2:36 p.m. She was treated for contusions and released.

In one other vehicle-related incident, Snyder Fire Department personnel responded to a fire at 12:37 this morning at 1152 Ave. P. Involved was a 1982 Chevrolet Suburban owned by Roger Garza of 1117 N. Ave. P. The vehicle received heavy fire damage. Cause of the fire is still under investigation.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: As a medical assistant in a foot clinic, I was appalled recently when a patient explained why her feet were in such bad shape. The little toes on both feet were swollen and red from the high-heeled shoes she must wear on her job. She is an airline stewardess, and the airline for which she works requires its female staff to wear high-heeled pumps while on duty on the plane.

As a result, this woman must cram her feet into these shoes for five- and six-hour shifts, while she must smile and be polite. I personally would not care if she wore tennis shoes, but she says that's out of the question. I am furious that the airlines would be so pitifully image-conscious and sexist as to require such foolish footwear for women.

The patient told me that her company will allow her to wear "dressy flats" if she produces a letter from her doctor. So, Abby, for the benefit of all female airline stewardesses, please print your opinion of this regulation.

APPALLED IN BEAVERTON, ORE.

DEAR APPALLED: I have done a lot of flying, and I know of no airline that requires its flight attendants to wear high-heeled shoes while flying. Mark Ables, vice president of communications at Northwest Airlines, told me that the only shoe requirements his airline has for female flight attendants are that the heels be 1½ inches high and the shoes black. Attendants can wear higher heels if they choose.

By the way, flight attendants have not been called "stewardesses" since Eddie Rickenbacker was the first president of Eastern Airlines.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 25-year-old, happily married woman with a little one on the way. I, too, am a thumb-sucker, but I don't just suck my thumb at night; I suck my thumb when driving the car or reading a book. I find it very relaxing, and it sure beats alcohol or pills.

I recently quit smoking, and my thumb comes in handy when I get the urge to smoke.

As a child, I was teased by close family members who knew I sucked my thumb. I was told that if I didn't stop sucking my thumb by the time I got married, I'd look silly walking down the church aisle with my thumb in my mouth.

My older brother used to tell me I'd grow up looking like Bugs Bunny. Well, I'm married now, and I don't resemble Bugs Bunny in the least!

My husband has given me a lot of support in this. He says it doesn't bother him that I suck my thumb.

I don't walk up to somebody I've just met and say, "Guess what? I suck my thumb!" But if the subject comes up, I'll be the first to admit it.

So here's my response to "Embarrassed," who also sucks her thumb: "You are not alone. I, too, thought I was the only grown person who sucked her thumb until several years ago, when I read a letter in the Dear Abby column from a teen-ager who confessed she secretly sucked her thumb at night."

You told her it was OK, so thumbs up to you, Abigail!

Expelled students may cause trouble

FORT WORTH (AP) — With crimes committed by juveniles on the rise, some educators are wondering whether expulsion from school is still a good idea for some problem teens.

After all, they say, if the child is out of school, they have even more free time on their hands to possibly cause trouble.

It's been 10 years since Texas passed a law allowing schools to expel students for possession of a weapon, selling drugs or assaulting someone on campus at school-sponsored events.

"Would you want to leave a child who has physically assaulted somebody in school?" asked Toby Wood, director of student and parent concerns in the Birdville school district in Tarrant County.

"No, of course not. Your main priority is the 20,000 other students you have. But I don't like to put these kids on the street, either. It's a Catch-22."

Kinney County sheriff among those arrested at dogfight

BASTROP (AP) — Law enforcement officers say a busted dogfight in the rural part of the county may be part of a vicious and bloody moving attraction involving gambling.

Five pit bull dogs were recovered and 24 people were arrested from the event broken up late Saturday, said Capt. Charlie R. Littleton of the Bastrop County sheriff's department.

Among the people taken into custody was Kinney County Sheriff Norman Hooten, whose county is more than 200 miles away, making him one of a large group of people that traveled far to the dogfight, Littleton said.

Others taken into custody were from all parts of Texas and some from Oklahoma and Louisiana, he said.

"Somehow, they've got them a network to draw them that many people," said Littleton, adding that the Texas Department of Public Safety is assisting in the investigation.

Another reason to believe this was an established event was the ring's portable construction, Littleton said.

He described it as a 20-foot-by-20-foot-by-2-foot pen made from plywood panels and held together by pins. There was a blood-stained carpet in the middle that could be rolled up.

"That pit's been used before judging by the way they had it set up," he said. "They had benches around the whole pit and people were lined up, both sitting and standing. Sometimes it was two-deep watching them go at it."

Suspects were expected to be charged Monday with criminal trespass, a Class B misdemeanor punishable by up to 180 days in jail and a $1,500 fine, and attending a dogfight, a Class C misdemeanor with a fine of up to $500, Littleton said.

Those arrested were holding thousands of dollars, which investigators believe were used to place bets on the fights.

As for the dogs, two were "really chewed up," one had fresh bite wounds and two others were relatively unharmed, Littleton said.

"I'm just really glad that we caught it before any of them died," he said. "It takes you back. I don't see how anyone can get any kind of enjoyment out of watching two animals destroy each other."

Veterinarian James E. Whitworth said the two critically injured animals suffered wounds to their legs and heads, including torn ears.

"If you own a dog, it will make you sick," Whitworth said. "It's a degrading deal. I've never seen anything like it."

Neither had Littleton until he and another officer entered a heavily wooded, extremely dark field around 11 p.m. They were tipped off by the owner of the property who warned of possible trespassers.

The officers hid more than 50 feet away and began taking people into custody as they were walking around, the officer said. More than 50 people were at the event, Littleton said.

Within 10 minutes, they captured about eight suspects then moved in for the bust. Through help from several other agencies they made two dozen arrests.

Littleton said Hooten was among those arrested away from the pit area.

"His story has kind of flip-flopped back and forth," Littleton said.

Kinney County Judge Tim Ward was out of town Sunday and unavailable for comment.

Hooten is in his second four-year term as sheriff, Kinney County Justice of the Peace Alvin Hall said. The sheriff previously worked for the Brackettville Police Department and as a game warden, Hall said.

The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was incorporated in 1866.

New weather computers

SUITLAND, Md. (AP) — When weather forecasters first tried to use mathematical formulas to predict the weather, it took so long that a storm would be over before the forecast was done.

Today, National Weather Service meteorologists can flex their numerical muscles with blinding speed. Their new machine can slice the country into bits, analyze the weather and calculate how it will change.

It looks like a giant blue-green oil drum, about eight feet tall and more than nine feet across.

And boy can it count.

The Cray C90 can do 15 billion math operations a second and that, says company president John Carlson, makes it the fastest such computer in service anywhere.

"We have, in effect, stepped into a new era," said Commerce Secretary Ron Brown after snipping a ribbon in front of the computer.

"Each day in this country there are hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of decisions made based on the weather forecast," explained Ronald D. McPherson, director of the National Meteorological Center.

Those decisions range from whether to send a child to school with a raincoat to planting rot-resistant seed to permitting barge traffic on the Mississippi River, he said.

The $45 million machine joins a Cray Y-MP8 computer, purchased in 1990, which could only do 2.5 billion calculations a second. The older model will concentrate on research now, with the new one handling the daily forecasts.

More tax dollars going to prison system

HOUSTON (AP) — As state prison inmates in Beaumont access new computers in immaculate classrooms, middle school children write for the school newsletter and struggle with math amid broken windows and peeling paint.

Texas taxpayers still pay four times more for schools than prisons. But state records show education's share of the budgetary pie is shrinking, while the take for criminals is rising gradually, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

"People in general are more scared about safety than they are (concerned) about education," said state Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, for whom the $75 million, one-year-old Mark Stiles Unit prison in his hometown is named.

"The attention of the public has been on the criminal justice system and its crisis," Stiles said. "But there needs to be an alarm sounded about the crisis in education."

A few miles away from Mark Stiles Unit, at Crockett Middle School, window shades are drawn and lights are dimmed in the computer classroom, because the building's 20-year-old air conditioning system needs all the help it can get.

"We have been suffering, staying in this building too long," laments Principal Clifford Hardeman. "Every day when I come to work and get out of my car, I get depressed ... This old building should have been replaced a long time ago ... It's just rotten."

In the last eight or nine years, the public safety and corrections share of the state budget increased from about 4 percent to 6 percent, while education's share dropped from 31 percent to 25 percent.

"This is particularly disturbing, given the obvious correlation between low educational achievement and criminal behavior," Comptroller John Sharp said in the recent report of his yearlong audit of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Those appropriations for the correctional system don't take into account $3 billion in tax-backed bonds that Texas voters have approved for prison construction since 1987.

By large margins, voters endorsed four separate prison bond issues to finance construction that will give Texas 143,000 corrections beds, eventually making it the nation's largest prison system.

But voters haven't always been so eager to approve bonds for new classrooms and other school improvements. A year ago, only six months before Texans overwhelmingly approved the latest $1 billion installment in prison bonds, they rejected a constitutional amendment to issue $750 million in construction bonds for poor school districts.

Partly because of that defeated proposal, the Legislature is now under a state court order to equalize construction funding between rich and poor school districts. That issue will be argued this week before the Texas Supreme Court as part of the larger, long-running school finance dispute.

Currently, most public school construction is financed through local bond issues. Over the past 20 years, more than 70 percent of bonding authority requested by school boards has been approved by local voters, according to the Texas Bond Review Board and the Municipal Advisory Council, a trade group of investment bankers.

But bond issues in some districts have been torpedoed by voter anger over local property taxes, which have soared in recent years, partly because the state government's share of public education funding has steadily declined.

The state, which used to pay for more than half of public education costs, now pays for about 45 percent, because of budgetary problems and increased prison spending.

Your Birthday

Tuesday, May 24, 1994

In the year ahead you might develop a mutually beneficial alliance with an individual who initially rubs you wrong. Once you're past this abrasive stage, a genuine friendship could develop.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try to be extremely diplomatic and tactful in all of your one-to-one relationships today, even those with persons with whom you've always had a comfortable rapport. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Responsibilities or critical tasks you've been sweeping under the rug lately might pop their heads up through the seams today and make their presence felt. Unattended, they could get nastier.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone with whom you're presently involved might make a play at this time to make your friends his/hers. Sharing is one thing, but acing you out is another.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You have good leadership qualities today, but they might be too self-serving. Victory is likely to be much more gratifying if it encompasses everyone involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You don't like it when someone puts you in a position where you have to defend every statement you make. Bare this in mind today if someone makes statements with which you don't agree.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're now in a favorable cycle for joint endeavors, but there are conditions attached. Parity is a must and your counterpart must be able to offer what you can.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today regarding a matter of mutual concern your mate and you might be diametrically opposed. A compromise will be required, but neither may be prepared to offer one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A weightier burden than you anticipated might be your lot in life today, because someone for whom you're responsible failed to take care of something and passed the buck onto you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Even though you'll be a welcome addition to any social situation today, don't be the last one to leave the party. Start for the door before your host/hostess yawns a second time.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In order to achieve an important objective today, you'll have to be methodical, bold and organized. If you aren't endowed with these qualities in proper proportion, you might not succeed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Avoid the company of associates today who like to impose their views and ideas on others. Your tolerance for self-appointed bossy types is slightly above zero.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Take extra pains at this time to manage your resources as prudently as possible. Trying to pay off new obligations could put the squeeze on you at a critical period.

Ft. Worth to host two conventions

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Democrats are coming to Cowtown. So are the Republicans.

Within a week next month, Fort Worth will play host to the state party conventions for the rival political groups. Apparently, the two sides agree on something.

"It all makes for a wonderful opportunity for a city like this," said Doug Harman, president of the Fort Worth Convention and Visitors Bureau. "We're delighted to see events that bring this many people for this many nights."

About 9,000 Democrats will arrive for their two-day convention June 3. A week later, roughly 10,000 Republicans will assemble for the GOP event.

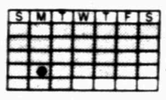

Hotels are booked solid both weekends and officials estimate the political gatherings could pump at least $1 million into the Tarrant County economy.

Things haven't been this good in June since ... 1990, the last time both parties held back-to-back conventions in Fort Worth.

Political campaigning by surrogates latest strategy

AUSTIN (AP) — There's a new secret to political campaigning in Texas: have the spokesperson say all the mean stuff.

That apparently is the strategy candidates are taking to take shots at their foes without putting their reputation and rating on the line, some experts say.

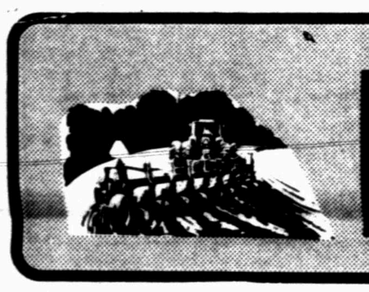

"The advantage of speaking through a surrogate is that you can say sulfurous things about your opponent and put that on the record without taking personal responsibility for it," said Roderick Hart, a University of Texas professor of communications and government.

Today's political landscape is lined with examples of surrogate-speak:

—George W. Bush's gubernatorial campaign routinely sends out news releases where campaign staffers knock Gov. Ann Richards;

—in the Texas Supreme Court fight between incumbent Raul Gonzalez and lawyer Rene Haas, jabs were thrown by the candidates' press aides;

—the Democrats have hired a spokesman whose duties include defending the party and its candidates against GOP attacks and stirring the political waters;

Milton Mapes plans to move Electrolux dealership to Coliseum Drive in June

Milton Mapes will be moving his Electrolux dealership and small appliance repair shop June 1 to 600 Coliseum Drive, next door to Cooper Appliance, and he is offering a Shampoo Special to the first 25 persons who call or come by and register. He will clean one room of carpet with a dry foam shampoo for free. Mr. Mapes has been in the professional floor care business for 45 years and has had 30 years experience in the small appliance business and with Electrolux vacuum cleaners. He is the factory authorized dealer for sales and service of Electrolux in the Snyder area. For free home demonstrations, bags or supplies call him at his new number 573-8105.

What makes the Electrolux vacuum cleaner different from units sold in discount or appliance stores? Several things. First of all, Electrolux is manufactured with pride in the United States. The company has been exclusively in the vacuum cleaner business for 69 years. Electrolux doesn't build radios, TVs or frying pans — they build vacuum cleaners.

Secondly, the Electrolux does something that is rare among vacuums — it cleans. Have you ever noticed when you empty your upright vacuum what you get the most of? Probably you get gobs of carpet fiber and a little dirt. This is because the beater bar tears out the fibers and vibrates the bulk of the dirt and sand deeper into the carpet. The small, tinker-toy type motors of most uprights just don't have the power to pull dirt and sand out of the carpet and into the vacuum. The Electrolux with its powerful 12 amp motor actually vacuums dirt and sand out of the carpet and into the bag. Call Milton Mapes and let him show you the difference with Electrolux.

Why throw away your quality small appliances when they go on the blink and buy new ones? Chances are the new appliance that you purchase won't be nearly as good a quality as your old one. See if your old appliance is repairable, right here in Snyder at a reasonable rate. Milton Mapes will give you an estimate, and tell you if it is more economical to have your appliance repaired or to replace it. Many modern small appliances — toasters, coffee pots, mixers, heaters, etc. — that are manufactured in foreign countries have planned obsolesence. They expect the product will fail and then you will have to buy a new one.

Mr. Mapes also repairs all types of clocks including grandfather and cuckoo clocks.

Don't throw away your money or your appliances until you see Milton Mapes at 600 Coliseum Drive or give him a call at 573-8105.

Mr. Mapes would also like to extend an invitation to high school seniors and college students who are looking for a summer job to come by and see him.
