Pampa Jury Gives Deputy Sheriff 10 Years On Charge Of Assaulting Girl

TOM C. JOHNSON FOUND GUILTY EARLY SUNDAY

Wheeler County Officer Convicted on Story of Young Girl

NEW TRIAL SOUGHT

Jury Works All Night to Arrive at Verdict and To Set Penalty

Special to The Record News.

PAMPA, Texas, Oct. 20.—A jury in district court here this morning sentenced Tom C. Johnson, Wheeler county deputy sheriff and former Wichita county peace officer, to 10 years in the penitentiary on a charge of criminal assault on a young Chillicothe, Texas, girl.

The state had asked the death penalty.

The defense immediately filed a motion for a new trial, hearing on which will be heard Monday morning. Should the motion be denied, attorneys said, the case will be appealed.

W. W. Davis, accused of attacking another Chillicothe girl, who was a companion of the one said to have been attacked by Johnson, is also under a charge of criminal assault, and is scheduled to go on trial at this term of court.

Case Lasts Week

It is reported that the jury in the Johnson case deliberated until about 3 a. m. Sunday arriving at a verdict of guilty, and then resumed their deliberations Sunday morning to fix the penalty.

The case, which commenced last Monday morning, had lasted the entire week with both day and night sessions of court and had drawn capacity crowds to the church house used as a court room. Standing room was at a premium throughout the trial and because of the nature of the case boys and girls were excluded from the courtroom.

Girl Makes Charge

It was charged by the prosecutrix that she and her sister and their two companions, Earl Lee Elliott and Naylor Pogue, all of Chillicothe, left that town on Saturday night, March 18 for a trip to McLean to visit friends and relatives. Arriving at Shamrock about 3 a. m. they

CHURCH RIOT

Negroes Wield Chairs and Razors in Dispute Over Election

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 20. (UP)—Members of the Mount Zion negro Baptist church took their religion so seriously here today that 20 suffered more or less serious injuries before police could quell a riot that broke out in a meeting to elect new church officers.

Chairs flew, pews were overturned and razors came into play when the 400 screeching men and women members, most of whom work as domestics in the fashionable homes of Evanston, the "millionaire suburb," of Chicago, started to riot inside the church.

When squads of police arrived they found Deacon Samuel Sanders, whom one faction had attempted to oust, sprawled on the church steps with his throat cut by a razor. He has little chance to recover. The other 19 injured suffered only minor cuts and bruises.

CHEST OPENS $70,000 DRIVE MONDAY NOON

300 Workers to Take Field In Annual Appeal For Charities

PASTORS URGE CAUSE

Wichita Falls Placarded With Story of City's Campaign

With more than 300 workers ready to begin an intensive campaign for the community chest's $70,000 quota, the city completely covered as to banners, posters and novelty cards proclaiming the chest, and pleas for sizeable donations heard Sunday from every pulpit in the city as well as over station KGKO, Wichita Falls will begin the actual drive for funds Monday.

A final rally of forces will be held at the Wichita club Monday noon in the form of a luncheon, with A. E. Kelly, campaign director, in charge. From this luncheon, the 325 workers assigned to the 29 districts in the city will go to their respective districts to begin work.

Quotas Assigned

Quotas have been assigned to each district as well as to the city as a whole, the amounts being based on the 1928 donations. The addition of the Red Cross, making 11 drives in one and assuring the one-drive idea for this year, calls for a small increase in each subscription.

A whirlwind drive through the business houses for the city will aim toward as many "100 per cent" concerns as possible. Those ranked as "100 per cent" will be those in which each employe gives one day's pay.

Members of luncheon clubs will observe a week of abstinence for the sake of the drive, eating a meager lunch at the regular price so that the profit can go to the chest.

Feather Indicator

As the money comes in each day and is audited by the auditing committee, a record will be kept on huge indicators on four downtown corners. The indicators are in the form of gray hats, each with a red feather in the band. The feather will be painted red as the money comes in, the red reaching the top only when $70,000 has been secured. Tiny bright-colored feathers will also be given as emblems to all contributors, and attractive posters scattered over the residential section further carry out the "feather-in-your-cap" idea.

Maid Yields Kiss and Hug in Daring Holdup by Unarmed 'Bandit' Here

Holliday Youth Charged With Assault After Faking Gun Threat on Two Young Wichita Couples

A stolen kiss, with an enthusiastic hug thrown in for good measure, was dubbed an aggravated assault Sunday afternoon when Wayne Somerville, county attorney, filed charges against a daring Holliday youth who Saturday night purloined the kiss and its accompaniment under the very eye of the girl's escort.

The boy used his nerve and a fist doubled up inside his pocket to intimidate two Wichita Falls boys and their sweethearts riding between here and Holliday Saturday night. The pseudo-hijacker, finding the quartet parked beside the road about eight miles west of Wichita Falls, assumed a belligerent expression, moved his right hand in his coat pocket, and ordered all four to leave the car, according to an account of the affair given Sheriff W. G. Bralley Sunday. No one disobeyed and no one offered serious resistance even when he grabbed one of the girls and administered the kiss which was later to be described as an aggravated assault. The necktie worn by the young girl's boy friend was the only other thing stolen in the course of the make-believe holdup. Mr. Bralley was informed. The "bandit" soon tired of his play, took another drink and left the four to recover themselves.

The boy was arrested in his home at Holliday Sunday by Mr. Bralley. He was released under bond after the charges were filed.

WAGGONER OIL DEAL DROPPED

$50,000,000 Option Expires Without Action

Special to The Record News

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 20.—An option that the Standard Oil company of Indiana, in the name of the Dixie Oil company, had to purchase all of the properties of the W. T. Waggoner Estate, situated in Wilbarger, Baylor and Wichita counties of North Texas, expired on Oct. 10, it was learned here.

Rumor had the price to be paid at $50,000,000, and after the news had been given circulation, it was denied both by Standard Oil, Dixie Oil and Waggoner representatives.

Under the plan, the Dixie would take over and operate the Waggoner estate, as one of the great light oil reserves of the country. Daily output on the ranch is now close to 40,000 barrels. The ranch has its own refinery and much unleased lands.

Inquiry disclosed the fact that about two years ago the Waggoner estate had an offer from an English syndicate of $120,000,000 for all of its properties and it was rejected on patriotic grounds. The reported price the Standard was to pay is considerably less than the purported English offer.

Word from North Texas says that Dixie officials spent more than a month there checking up on the Waggoner ranch properties, and that they recommended the purchase, on a price, presumably agreed on. That something may have occurred to break up the negotiations now appears to be the case.

FOUR INJURED IN ACCIDENTS HERE SUNDAY

Amarillo Woman Hurt Twice in Short Time On Highway

YOUTH LOSES LEG

Loyce Wilson Undergoes Amputation of Member After Crash

Two women and two young men were injured seriously in four traffic accidents in and near Wichita Falls Sunday.

One of the women, Mrs. R. S. Jones of Amarillo, figured in two smashes on the Henrietta road, sustaining injuries in both. Mrs. F. H. Dennison, 1704 Eleventh street, also was injured in the second of the two accidents.

Amputation of the left leg of Loyce Wilson, motorcycle deliveryman, followed his injury in a collision at Ninth and Broad streets.

Lee Miks, 1601 Grant, was injured when the car in which he was riding crashed into a mule near Jolly. The mule was killed.

BOY LOSES LEG AFTER SMASHUP

Physicians at the Wichita General hospital were forced to amputate at the knee the left leg of Loyce Watson, about 18 years old, injured in an automobile accident at Ninth and Broad streets early Sunday afternoon. The boy, employed by the Allison Drug company, was riding a motorcycle, going west on Ninth street, when he was struck by an automobile driven by H. A. Penrod, making a left turn at the intersection. Watson's left leg was so badly mangled as to force immediate amputation. The patient lives at 400 Cliff street.

Mr. Penrod immediately reported the accident to the police department, where investigations were made by motorcycle officers John Lowry and J. H. Pogue. No charges were filed. The injured boy was rushed to the General hospital in a Merkle ambulance. He was reported resting quietly by hospital attendants late Sunday.

WOMAN FIGURES IN TWO ACCIDENTS

Within a few minutes after she had suffered injuries in an automobile collision just outside of Henrietta Sunday afternoon, Mrs. R. S. Jones, of Amarillo, was hurt again when the car in which she was being rushed to a Wichita Falls hospital crashed into another machine. The second accident also injured Mrs. F. H. Dennison, 1704 Eleventh street, in whose car the injured woman was being carried. Neither of the two patients is dangerously hurt, according to physicians reports late Sunday.

The first collision occured about three miles north of Henrietta when the Jones car was struck by a machine driven by a man now held in Henrietta after his arrest by Clay county officers. Witnesses alleged that the driver was drunk at the time of the collision and that his car was out of control as he speeded down a hill on the Wichita Falls-Henrietta highway. The automobile driven by Mr. and Mrs. Jones, who were on their way from Fort Worth to Amarillo, was demolished.

Mrs. Jones, whose injuries were undetermined, was placed in the Dennison car and started for Wichita Falls. Mr. Jones, only slightly injured, stayed behind to clear up the Clay county affair. A few miles out of Jolly, the Dennison car in turn was struck by a machine carrying several negro passengers, investigators at the police headquarters here reported. The occupants of the car are belived to have made a getaway before they could be stopped.

A third car, the name of whose driver was not obtained by police, brought Mrs. Dennison, suffering from injuries to the chest, and Mrs. Jones on into Wichita Falls. Mrs. Jones was taken to the Wichita General hospital where physicians found that her nose and her ankle had been broken in the two collisions. Mrs. Dennison was taken to her home. Mr. Dennison obtained first aid treatment at the hospital for a slight wound on the nose.

Bull in Butcher Shop, Man in Hospital After Fight

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 20. (AP)—J. J. Kelly, 56, of Louisville, was never cut out to be a bull fighter. He admits it, and what's more, he can prove it.

One very large and war-like bull, escaped from the stockyards, insisted on doing battle with Mr. Kelly here today. Although armed only with a pair of good Irish fists, Mr. Kelly accepted the issue, as it was too late to run.

For several minutes the battle waged fast and furious, with Mr. Kelly on the losing end. The bull drew first blood in the first round with a deep cut over Kelly's eye, and in the second setto he had Kelly down for the count when Police Lieutenant Robert Gregory, attracted by the noise, joined the battle. The lieutenant unloosened his trusty .38. The bull is in a butcher shop and Mr. Kelly is in bed.

EDISON GRINS AT EARLY TOWN

Inventor Sees Transplanted Village at Dearborn

DETROIT, Oct. 20. (AP)—Thomas A. Edison finds the setting for a climactic event in the nationwide observance of the fiftieth anniversary of perfection of the incandescent light "perfect."

Inspecting Greenfield village, the early American community which Henry Ford transplanted at Dearborn, from many parts of the country, the 82-year-old inventor revisited the scenes of his early life and found them to his liking.

Town Is Cleaner

Smith's Creek station, he said, is cleaner than it was 70 years ago when he was ejected from a train, accompanied by his stock of magazines, newspapers, candy and tobacco, and the chemicals with which he was experimenting in the baggage car of the train on which he was news butcher. The chemical experiments resulted in a fire which brought down the wrath of the conductor upon the lad who was to bring electric light and many other things in the range of use by man.

A company of about 600 illustrious men and women, including the nation's chief executive, will be present at the banquet in honor of the inventor Monday night and at the re-enactment of the concluding experiments which resulted in the perfection of the incandescent lamp.

The public phase of the celebration will be the tour of President

Ex-Police Chief Slated for Trial on Robbery Counts Today

A defense motion alleging that political feeling centering in Electra will prevent a fair trial for Tom Shook, former Electra police chief, in Wichita county will be presented Monday morning when Shook is called to trial in the 89th district court on the first of three robbery charges. The definite announcement of the first defense move came Sunday afternoon from T. A. Hicks, member of the legal firm of Heyser & Hicks, who will represent the defendant.

The motion will be presented before Judge Vincent Stine, of the Clay county district court, sitting for Judge P. A. Martin, called elsewhere on business. Sam Spence, district attorney, has already announced that the state will vigorously contest any venue change. A special venire of 150 men has been summoned for service in the trial on Monday morning:

Prosecution Fund Cited

Mr. Hicks said Sunday afternoon that the motion as prepared will allege that citizens of Electra raised a sum of money for the employment of Fred Weeks as special prosecutor and will assert that political feeling in the town is so strong as to make a fair trial inside the county impossible.

The announcement of the move for a change followed Shook's own statement, made public Sunday, alleging that "certain parties in Electra made up sums of money to prosecute me because when I was police chief there I was hard on certain members of their pet bootleg ring. I was planning to make the race for chief again and the money was spent in a political frame-up against me."

Meanwhile, George W. Anderson, assistant district attorney, said Sunday night that he would not know until 9 o'clock Monday morning whether the state would declare ready for trial. The decision depended, Mr. Anderson said, on the success of efforts to reach J. B. Early, Jefferson hotel clerk, one of the chief state witnesses. The first count against Shook accused him of robbery with firearms in connection with the hold-up of Mr. Early in the hotel in May, 1928.

Pryor Under Sentence

Henry Shumate, another state witness, has testified in former trials here that he committed the actual robbery under the encouragement and promise of protection of Shook and Ed Pryor, former Electra constable. Pryor is now under an eight-year prison sentence.

Shook is charged here with two other Electra hold-ups, of the murder of Oscar Daugherty, and of driving while drunk. In Decatur county, Tennessee, where he was recently re-captured, he is under a second murder indictment. His re-arrest there followed a 13-month flight after his break from the Wichita county jail here in August of 1928.

Details of Frank Kell Railroad Purchase Made Public in St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 20. (AP)—Details of the sale of the Missouri and Northern Arkansas railroad, announced yesterday at Wichita Falls, Texas, were made public here tonight. The purchaser is Frank Kell multimillionaire of the Texas city.

The consideration was said to have been below the $3,000,000 mark which the government placed as the lowest valuation of the property at bankruptcy hearings about eight years ago.

The sale was executed through W. Stephenson, of Little Rock, Ark., president and receiver. He was here last week but returned to the railroad's headquarters at Harrison, Ark. The road has a 300-mile right of way from Joplin, Mo., to Helena, Ark., and was originally promoted by the late Richard C. Kerens, former ambassador to Austria-Hungary.

Since its estbalishment the M. & N. A., is said to have cost St. Louis investors approximately $11,000,000.

From Kerens' control the road passed to the late James Scullin Sr., St. Louis capitalist, ex-Governor David R. Francis, of Missouri and former ambassador to Russia, Powell Clayton, of Arkansas, former minister to Mexico, and the late Festus J. Wade, bank president. Wade was appointed receiver in

Gas Kills Father and Six Children When Water Boils Over Stove Jet

NEW YORK, Oct. 20. (AP)—A pan of water which boiled over and extinguished a gas jet of a kitchen stove today caused the deaths of a father and six children — three daughters and three sons—as they slept in their West Forty-sixth street apartment.

Walter Cavanagh, 42, a private chauffeur, failed to report for work today and the garage where he kept his employer's automobile called the apartment house to see if he had overslept.

Knocking brought no response from the Cavanagh apartment. Samuel Erisnick, whose apartment is on the same floor, smelled gas and, finding the Cavanagh's door locked, climbed the fire escape and entered through a window.

He found Cavanagh and the children—Ethel, 17, Catherine, 15, Rose, 13, Thomas, 11, George, 9, and Walter Jr., 8—dead.

Ethel was lying on the floor in the rear bedroom, and police said she apparently had been awakened by the fumes and had attempted to fight her way to a window when she was overcome. A gas company inhalator crew worked for an hour in a vain attempt to revive her.

Mrs. Cavanagh died seven years ago, and the only surviving member of the family is a fourth daughter, Mary, 20, who lived away from home.

TOM C. JOHNSON FOUND GUILTY

Former Wichita Deputy Given 10-Year Sentence

were arrested by Johnson and by W. W. Davis, deputy constable of Wheeler county. A fight ensued between the officers and the boys and the quartet was hailed before A. J. Austin, Shamrock magistrate, and a fine for vagrancy was imposed on the four and an additional fine for reckless driving was imposed on Elliott, driver of the car, according to testimony.

It was stated that the boys had sufficient funds to pay the fines of the girls but not enough to pay their own fines and the two boys were placed in the Shamrock jail. It was alleged by the state that the officers then took the girls to breakfast and then north on the Wheeler road where an assault was committed on each girl.

Return to Town

According to the testimony of the prosecuting witness, the four returned to town and the girls were left at Judge Austin's residence, the front room of which he used as his office at night. After a few moments Davis returned, according to the witness, and informed the girls that Johnson had gone after the boys to release them and told the girls to go with him, which they did. Taking the girls up on Main street, to a filling station in the edge of Shamrock, the girl testified that the trio was there picked up by Johnson and taken toward McLean, but turned north off the highway and over to the vicinity of Magic City, a small oilfield town, and down into a pasture where a series of attacks were committed on the girls.

Each girl testified that because of the officers being armed she was in fear of her life if she did not submit to the demands of the men. About noon, according to the two girls, they were taken to McLean and there were left by the men, who returned to Shamrock. Securing the aid of friends, the girls returned to Shamrock and paid the fines for the boys and secured their release. No outcry or complaint was made by the girls until Thursday following the Sunday on which they alleged the crime was committed, and the occasion of their complaint was the investigation by the fathers of the boys concerning the arrest and fines and fights. Written statements were then made by both girls, the younger girl making her statement before County Attorney Raymond Allred on Thursday night and the other making her statement in Chillicothe on Saturday before the same official.

Johnson Takes Stand

The defendant took the witness stand in his own behalf and denied that he ever at any time mistreated the girls in any way, claiming that after placing the boys in jail and giving the girls their breakfast at the Shamrock cafe, he then took them to the justice's home. Johnson stated that he was then called to the country east of Shamrock to bring in a school boy who had been out on an "all night party" and who was unmanageable.

Shamrock officers and other Shamrock people testified to seeing Johnson in and around town during the Sunday morning.

Johnson stated that about noon he was driving up the street when he was hailed by Davis who told him the girls wanted to be taken to McLean; that he and Davis took the girls direct to McLean to their friends but never left the highway nor stopped but once on the highway, and that at a filling station to buy some drinks.

Charges Surprise

Johnson swore that he and Davis returned immediately to Shamrock and the first he learned of a criminal charge was about a week or 10 days later when he was informed that the girls had made a statement against him and Davis.

Vigorous prosecution and defense marked the trial throughout. A fist fight between some of the attorneys enlivened the Monday night session and one of the attorneys wore a patch over his eye during part of the trial.

W. M. Lewright, local attorney, assisted District Attorney Clifford Braly in the prosecution and asked for the death penalty in his plea to the jury. Defense counsel was led by Judge Newton P. Willis of Pampa, former district judge of the Borger district, and was assisted by Clayton Heare of Shamrock and Ben P. Allred of Stinnett, and formerly of Wichita county. Judge C. G. Engledow of Shamrock, elected special judge of the court in the absence of the regular judge, W. R. Ewing, presided over the trial.

EASY--The Love Story of a Modern Girl-- By Beatrice Burton

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Ann Marie Macy, though young and pretty, is the easy mark of her motherless family. She is forever waiting on her more modern flapperish sisters, Alice and Jeanne, and lending them her clothes and trinkets to aid in their conquest of the boy friends. The money she earns by painting cards for her father's bookstore partly goes in payment of her brother, Howard's, debt. She is hoping to earn enough to pursue an art course. When Neal Forsythe arrives to visit the wealthy Lawlers, Ann Marie quickly loses her heart to him in spite of her disillusionment when she finds him embracing Leota Ingram, the town's bad girl. Her dream of an art course is rudely shattered when Howard her brother, tells her he is in trouble with Leota and asks Ann Marie to intervene. Leota unexpectedly appears at the Macy home as Florence and John Lawler call. To prevent a disastrous scene, Ann Marie quietly pays out her last money to Leota, who plans to leave for New York. It is the money saved for the art course. Before she leaves town, however, Leota writes a letter to Florence Lawler that brings about Howard's discharge from her father's bank. Howard, frantic, says he will leave for the West, and Ann Marie must raise the money for his expenses. At the station, when he leaves, Ann Marie meets Neal Forsythe just arrived for another visit. Neal explains his letter to Leota which Ann Marie had seen. That night, with John Lawler, he comes to take out Ann Marie and Alice. Ann Marie, for the first time, is jealous of Alice's desire to win Neal Forsythe.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XVII

Ann Marie stood at the top of the stairs while Mrs. Leezy opened the front door to Johnny Lawler and Neal.

She heard them go into the parlor.

Then she turned to Alice.

"Aren't you going down?" she asked in a whisper.

Alice shook her head. She had come to a dead stop in the middle of the upper hall and there she stood, gazing at her sister with bright unfriendly eyes.

"Not with you," she whispered back. "You go down first—and I'll come later. Or else I'll go first."

Ann Marie understood her perfectly . . . Alice was always striking poses and trying to make impressions on people. And now she wanted to go downstairs alone so that she could make an impression on Neal Forsythe with her smartness and her beauty.

For when she was properly made up, Alice had a certain glittering artificial beauty.

She knew how to dress, too. And tonight she was dressed in a short pale-green tube of a sleeveless dress with dark-green oak leaves patterning it . . . They had been painted there by Ann Marie's clever, willing fingers.

"And she looks slick in it," Ann Marie thought, and envy was in her heart. "She looks like a wood nymph who's wandered into a dressmaker's shop."

She felt very shabby and second-rate, herself, as she went down the stairs and across the dimly-lighted hall to the parlor.

The old room looked shabbier than usual tonight, too, somehow.

For one thing, there was no wood fire burning and crackling in the fireplace, Mrs. Leezy, "all broke up" about Howdy, as she said she was, had forgotten to lay a fire there.

Howdy's banjo was gone from the table in the middle of the room, and so was his Chinese brass box of cigarets . . . To Ann Marie it seemed as if his going had created a feeling of loss and sadness in the house that would last as long as the old place, itself.

It is always hard not to cry when you have been crying a good deal—and there was a sparkle of tears in her wide eyes when she walked into the parlor and shook hands with the two young men who stood in front of the cold fireplace.

"What's wrong, Ann Marie? Somebody been beating you up?" Johnny Lawler asked with his heavy humor.

"No." Ann Marie blinked very fast. "But—it gave me what Mrs. Leezy calls a 'turn' when I didn't see Howdy's brass box on that table. His box of cigarets, you know. He took it with him."

"Took it with him?" Johnny was curious. "Why—Has he gone away? Left the house?"

Ann Marie nodded. Then she told him the news about Howdy.

She was still telling it to him when Alice came floating into the room. She had a pale-green gauze scarf around her shoulders, and she stood still just inside the door for a moment so that both the men could take a good look at her before she sat down.

She always knew how to get the center of the stage and keep it.

"So nice to see you again!" she said to Neal in her soft company-voice. "It's perfect ages since you were here, isn't it?"

She shook both of his hands in both of hers, and Ann Marie could have slapped her for it.

Then she turned to Johnny and shook both of his.

"Let's not stay here," she said sweetly, looking from one to the other of them. "This house is terribly gloomy tonight—We all miss Howdy so—"

Ann Marie stared at her in wide-eyed astonishment. For at supper, two hours ago, Alice had taken the news of Howdy's departure with a certain stony cheerfulness.

"We can use his old bedroom for an upstairs sitting room," she had said to Mrs. Leezy. "And then when we girls have company downstairs, dad can sit up there . . . It always gives me the jumps to have him down there in the back parlor, listening in to everything that's said in the front room."

But now she looked almost broken-hearted!

"She's really wonderful. She ought to go on the stage," thought Ann Marie with a kind of angry admiration for her.

"Where do you want to go, Allie?" Johnny Lawler was asking her. "Let's pick a gay place—one that will cheer you up."

Alice shrugged a bare shoulder. "There isn't any very gay place near this God-forsaken town," she complained. "You know there isn't, Johnnykins! But I always have a good time with you—so you pick the place!"

She certainly knew how to flatter him, thought Ann Marie, watching Johnny fairly lap it up.

"All right, I'll pick the place!" he said. "But first we'll stop in at our house for a flask . . . You girls get your wraps."

"I'm pretty careful about what I drink," Ann Marie heard him saying to Neal when she came downstairs with her coat and her handbag. "I never touch the stuff they sell you in roadhouses."

Alice had forgotten that she was supposed to be downcast about Howdy by the time she came downstairs once more.

She had put on an extra layer of lip-stick and she had on her best "Whoopee" expression. She was all smiles and sparkles.

"Come on, Sloppy Socks!" she said boisterously to Johnny, catching him by the arm and starting out of the front door with him. "Big night on the state highway, eh what?—Lots of dance for Allie, hmm? Lots of music, hmm?—For Allie?"

Ann Marie knew that her slang and her baby-talk were silly . . . She knew that she was silly, herself, in a hard metallic sort of way.

And yet there were times when she longed to be like her. Longed to know how to flatter and "baby eye" the men, how to fascinate them and flirt with them and worry them.

For Alice did know those things in her more or less cheap trivial way.

"Your sister's a good little sport—to pep up and try to forget about your brother," Neal said to Ann Marie when they were going down the front walk, arm in arm, in the darkness. "She's a mighty fine kid."

Ann Marie said that that was true.

But she said it without much feeling. It was hard for Ann Marie to say something that she did not think.

The four of them crowded into Johnny's roadster and it was Alice who sat on Neal's knees because there wasn't room for all of them on the seat.

"I'm not so heavy as Ann Marie," she told him. "So I'll sit on your lap."

She put her arms around his neck twice, too, when the car went over pumps.

"Come on in while I fill up the flask," Johnny said hospitably when they drove into the Lawler's side yard and stopped.

Ann Marie did not want to go into the house . . . She thought of the Lawler's quarrel with Howdy that day, and she felt sure that they would not be exactly eager to see any of Howdy's family for a while.

"Alice and I will sit here in the car, Johnny," she said.

But Johnny objected to that. "No, come along in," he insisted.

And so she went.

Afterward she was sorry that she had not stayed out in the car that night.

They all went into the house through the side door that opened into a little hall-way between the living room and library of the big luxurious house.

Through the wide arch of the living room Ann Marie could see Florence and her mother sitting beside the fire, reading.

Neither of them looked up as the four young people marched past the door-way, although they could not have failed to hear them.

"Come on out, into the dining room," Johnny said in a half whisper, "and we'll have a glass of wine all 'round before we start out. What say?"

Alice nodded brightly and Neal looked even more cheerful than he had been looking all evening.

"Suits me" he said, "down to the ground."

The three of them had had their wine, and Johnny was filling a large triple-flask with Bourbon whisky from the sideboard when Mrs. Lawler came into the room.

She stood just inside the gold-colored velvet curtains that framed the door way, and she looked them all over with a cold and calculating eye.

"How do you do, Mrs. Lawler?" asked Alice in her sweetest and most polite voice.

"How are you tonight, Mrs. Lawler?" asked Ann Marie.

But Mrs. Lawler had nothing to say to either of them. She had known them all their lives, and for years they had run in and out of her house in the friendliest way. But now she was like a stranger to them.

She did not even look at them again, after she had given them that first cold glance.

"Johnny," she said, "this is Monday night."

Johnny went on carefully filling his flask.

He laughed. "That's no lie, mother," he said firmly. "It certainly is Monday night.

"The very beginning of the week!" she went on, and Ann Marie saw that she was very angry, "and here you are, planning to go out and stay out half the night—after all the things your father said to you today about tending to business! All the things he said to you about drinking and running around nights—"

"Yes, but he wasn't talking about me. He was talking about Macy—" Johnny began, and then stopped abruptly. He flushed and looked nervously from his mother to Howdy's two sisters.

"Let's talk all this over some other time, mother," he said, plainly embarrassed. "This isn't the time and the place—"

"This time and place suit me right down to the ground!" she interrupted him sharply. "I'm going to say what I have to say right now!—The best thing you can do, if you want to please your father and keep your position in the bank, is to give up these people that you and Florence have been running around with! And the sooner you do it, the better!"

Ann Marie clapped her hands to her lips. Above them her soft eyes burned like fire, and her face went white like magic.

"Oh, Mrs. Lawler—you can't mean me and Alice!" she cried, and she began to sob like a child. "You can't think such terrible things about Alice and me, just because Howdy didn't do what was right—or what you thought was right—You can't mean that we're not all right for Johnny! And for Florence!—You can't say that!"

Her small hands doubled up into fists and dropped to her side.

She turned and looked at Alice. "Let's go," she said to her. "Let's go home—not in Johnny's car. Just by ourselves, Alice."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helps Her So Much

Pittsburgh, Pa.—"I was just completely run-down. I had tired, heavy, sluggish feelings and I could not eat. I was losing in weight. I read so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what a good medicine it is, that I started taking it. I have taken eight bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and about the same in tablet form. This is one medicine a woman should have in the house all the time. I am improving every day and I sure am able to eat. I am willing to answer any letters asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. ELLA RICHARDS, 21 Chautauqua St., N. S. Pittsburgh, Pa.

Anniversary Of 'Light' Is Ready

Hoover and his party through the streets of Detroit and public reception for the president at the Detroit city hall.

Radio Broadcast

Ford suggested the world may take part in the event through the radio broadcast which will be made. According to the announcement made by Ford, the remaking of the first lamp will take place between 7:30 and 8:01 p. m. It has been suggested that citizens extinguish the lights in their homes during this time and turn them on again at the conclusion of the experiment, which will be heralded by the ringing of the bell in the tower of Independence hall, the central building in Greenfield village.

President Hoover's address will follow immediately after the experiment in the Edison laboratory.

Seated in his old Menlo Park laboratory during his inspection of the village and the Edison Institute of Technology, Edison chuckled as he claimed to be the first scholar in the institute. He found among the laboratory equipment there a part of a mercury vacuum pump which had been made for an experiment years ago. It was, he said, something he had been seeking for a recent experiment and he was delighted at discovering it here.

The laboratory and the Menlo Park boarding house are oriented exactly as they were in their original settings and the guest of honor found it natural in recalling early events to gesture in the true directions.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20. (AP)—A call for a special meeting of the house of bishops of the Episcopal church for the election of a presiding bishop to succeed the late Rt. Rev. John Gardner Murray, was issued today by Rt. Rev. William A. Leonard, bishop of Ohio and senior bishop of the church. The meeting will be held in Washington Nov. 13. Expert Warns Against Sun-Tan Removers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20. (US)—Debutantes and flappers who suntanned to a rich brown last summer, had best let nature restore that lily-white complexion for the indoor-winter season, Dr. Charles Frederick Pabst, noted dermatologist declared today.

He sounded a warning against the use of various sun-tan removing chemicals as injurious. Skin-peelers, he called them.

Doctor Pabst, chief dermatologist of the Greenpoint hospital of New York, admitted that milady who, following the fashion, tanned to the shade of a South Sea islander last July and August, is now in a quandary.

"To remove the tan quickly, she is apt to try chemical preparations which are extremely harmful," Doctor Pabst said.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 20. (AP)—Led by Pilot John Livingston of Aurora, Ill., planes in the annual national air tour for the Edsel Ford trophy, landed in a fog here today on the Milwaukee-Moline-Chicago leg of the flight.

Only one more leg, from Chicago to Detroit tomorrow, remains to be flown and Livingston's lead is such that only an accident can keep him out of first place. Art Davis, in second place in the tour, was second to land here.

RIOTS IN BERLIN

LONDON, Oct. 20. (US)—Rioting broke out in Berlin today as a result of the Nationalist-Fascist referendum on the Young reparations plan and the "war-guilt lie," according to a dispatch reaching this city.

"Firms Helping Build Wichita Falls"

In presenting this page of firms who are helping build Wichita Falls, the Wichita Daily Times and Record News also give to the public the first of a series of articles in which it is proposed to deal with the industrial, educational and other advantages to be found here. Even in Wichita Falls there are hundreds of people who cannot realize and comprehend the possibilities and opportunities that exist here. Therefore in addition, something of an inspirational nature will also be supplied the home folks.

The primary proposition, it is hoped, will be conducive to better civic spirit and a closer feeling of community interest, not only among business concerns and industrial establishments but among individuals as well. Of course it is hoped that this undertaking will be especially valuable in giving desirable publicity to Wichita Falls and advertising the firms represented in this group who have allied themselves in the undertaking as builders of Wichita Falls.

Wichita Falls is on the threshold of still greater development, if we can but realize the wonderful opportunities that we have at hand. Hundreds of acres of desirable industrial sites are located here within easy reach of railroad, water supply, electricity, natural gas and other desirable facilities. Living conditions are ideal in Wichita Falls with mild climate, open winters, an unfailing supply of water, and an abundance of natural gas.

With cheap and convenient fuel, unlimited water, excellent railroad facilities and markets, splendid factory sites, the industrial development is of great importance.

Wichita Falls offers wonderful school advantages with a large enrollment annually. With its numerous and modern equipped hotels Wichita Falls is prepared to offer excellent service to conventions and out-of-town trade. We have well-equipped hospitals, parks, churches, amusements and a multitude of other public facilities. Since it is the center of a vast trade territory and center of the oil development of Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma, together with its many other public facilities, Wichita Falls possesses everything that any community might need in order to prosper.

The number of advertisements on these pages speak for the friendly feeling that exists among our business firms and professional men. We believe that Wichita Falls is due for an era of prosperity even greater than it has ever before experienced.

Floral Heights League Gives Study Program

Side number two, led by Elizabeth Albritton, gave the program for the Epworth Young People of Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday afternoon.

The meeting was opened with a song led by Fred Sehmann, song leader, after which the minutes of the last meeting were read by the recording secretary, Mabel Rowe. Sentence prayers were led by Mary C. Boone. Leon Deaton Jr., president, turned the meeting over to Elizabeth Albritton, leader of the program.

Chapter two, "How the News Was Spread," from the book, "Going to Jerusalem," was given by five members of side number two. The first part, given by Elizabeth Albritton, told of the many persecutions of the Christians under the Romans until the conversion of Emperor Constantine who made Christianity the state religion in 312 A. D. Estell McPhail gave the second part of the chapter, telling of the conversion of Clovis, king of the Franks.

Part three was reviewed by Frances Gardner, telling of the life of Ulfilas, a follower of Christ, who went as a missionary to the Gothic tribes. He made an alphabet for them and translated the Bible.

Margaret Bone, in reviewing the fourth part, gave many fact in the life of St. Patrick which are not commonly known. The last part of the chapter was given by Leon Deaton, who gave the life and works of Columba, a young Irishman converted by St. Patrick who founded the famous monastery on the island of Iona, off the coast of Scotland.

The special number was given by Margaret Bone who sang a vocal solo, playing her own accompaniment.

During the business session, points were counted for the airplane race.

Plans were made for a Halloween party at which "peanut friends" will be revealed.

Margaret Pease was appointed superintendent of supplies and Frances Gardner and Dorothy Johnson named as the scrap book committee.

The closing prayer was given by Mrs. John Richker. About 40 were present.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

We heard a man say recently that he came to Texas in September, started traveling in a new car, and not a drop of rain fell on that car until the next April. Not that rain did not fall in his territory, but it was local, and he missed each rain until the next April when there came a general downpour.

◇ ◇ ◇

He said he was never so homesick in his life as he was for rain. He would lie awake at night, thinking of how the rain used to sound on the roof. The memory seemed music in his ears.

◇ ◇ ◇

He thought of lush woods in rainy spring time when the scent of wet grass and wild flowers filled the air. He would ask himself, "Will it never rain again?"

◇ ◇ ◇

And another man said that the thing he had missed most in his life was when he went from his country home to college and did not hear the cows low at night. When twilight came, he found himself listening with a loneliness and homesickness that could not be told, for the sound of lowing in a far-away pasture.

◇ ◇ ◇

And we read in a story of some writer (I believe it was Irwin Cobb), of two westerners who went to New York and suffered acute homesickness for sage brush and plains and the coyote's cry.

◇ ◇ ◇

It was the mountaineers of North and South Carolina and Tennessee who settled in the Ozarks. In caravans, they started for the West; they crossed over the fertile black lands of Arkansas and they knew that fertile prairies lay beyond; but they loved and were homesick for their mountains and there they stopped, where nothing but grapevines and apples would grow.

Russian Fliers Rest Up in San Francisco

OAKLAND, Calif., Oct. 20. (AP)—Four Russian aviators who piloted their monoplane, Land of the Soviets, from Moscow to America on a good will flight, spent part of today in San Francisco, resting after their trip from Vancouver, Wash., and a strenuous welcome yesterday at Oakland airport.

HAVANA, (AP)—Too many doctors and lawyers in Cuba against the small percentage of skilled industrial workers, has led the government to open technical schools in Havana and Oriente province.

Man in Love Never Notices Any Girl But His Fiancee

Is a Man in Love Blind to the Charms of Other Girls?—Peculiar Point of View of the Self-Invited Guest—Husband Who Likes Housework.

Dear Miss Dix—My son, who is 24 years old, thinks he is in love. For a year he has gone to see the same girl nearly every night. She is very attractive and they are very congenial, but the feeling he has for her doesn't keep him from being keenly interested in other girls with whom he is thrown in contact. Do you think that he really does love this girl and that his interest in other women is only the result of man's natural polygamous nature or do you think that he is still looking, perhaps unconsciously, for some one who suits him better? I don't want to interfere, but I do want him to be certain of his affections. —MOTHER.

Answer—I should not think he cared very much for the girl if he still has a roving eye for every skirt that flutters his way. My observation has been that as long as a man is really in love he has no interest in any other woman than the one on whom he has bestowed his affections. He is blind to their beauty, deaf to their witty conversation, dumb to their attractions, indifferent to their charms, no matter how great.

So I am inclined to think that your son has mistaken liking for loving, which is a very different thing, and that his feeling toward the young lady is merely one of friendship. He enjoys her society because they are congenial and he goes to see her because they like the same things.

That isn't, of course, a bad basis on which to marry, for a platonic affection often outlasts a fiery passion. It endures, while the conflagration burns itself out. The husband and wife who have the same taste and the same point of view and who can amble along riding the same hobbies may not have as many thrills as those who experience the grand passion, but they have a mighty comfortable, placid existence and seldom land in the divorce courts.

Perhaps your son is one of the men who love women in general rather than one in particular. There are plenty of men to whom women are alluring as a sex and who are general lovers, so to speak. Every woman between the cradle and the grave interests them and has a certain charm for them. They seek women's society instinctively. They are interested in women's fashions and notice how every woman is dressed. They like to buy pretty things for women and to deck out the women they love with chiffons and furs and velvets and jewels. They are connoisseurs of feminine pulchritude and will say that this girl has a pretty foot and ankle and that girl a lovely neckline. They are enchanted by one woman being brilliant and another one being a beautiful moron.

But these men who diffuse their affection for women over the entire sex never love any one woman supremely well, and if they marry they are philanderers, butterflies who flit from flower to flower in the rosebud garden of girls.

Perhaps your son belongs to this type, but anyway he may rest assured that he is not really in love until one woman fills his heart temporarily at least to the exclusion of all other women.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I have been trying to figure out the point of view of a visitor who suddenly appears with her family to stay a week without previously notifying her hostess that she is coming, and I have decided that she does this way because she has no imagination. She cannot picture other households being subject to sickness, accident, previous plans and fatigue. While this matter has to do with etiquette and politeness, it has far more to do with mercy. It is only mercy to give a few days' notice to one's hostess that she is coming.—JULIA H.

Answer—You certainly take a lenient view of the situation, Julia. I should say that the self-invited guest who descends on you, bag and baggage and brats, without warning is lacking in common decency and consideration far more than she is in imagination and no one except one who was brutally selfish would do such a thing.

It doesn't take imagination to visualize at long range the trouble and inconvenience that an unexpected guest puts a hostess to. Every woman knows that from her own experience. She knows that except in the houses of millionaires, and perhaps in millionaire homes, for all I know to the contrary, the coming of guests disarranges the household schedule and that certain arrangements have to be made for the guest's comfort. Among people in ordinary circumstances it means a lot of extra cleaning up and cooking and shifting the family about and planning for the guests' comfort and amusement.

If this is known beforehand, it can all be done orderly and leisurely without precipitating a domestic catastrophe, but for a lot of people to suddenly wish themselves upon a woman when perhaps the baby is sick and the maid has left and the larder has run low or the hostess has a sick headache is a source of work, worry and mortification and turns what might have been a pleasant visit into a nightmare.

In these days of regular mail and air mail and telephone and telegraph and radio, we have plenty of means of communicating with those we wish to visit us and when we don't send an invitation to a guest to come and bring along her children and spend a week with us, it is a dead sure sign we don't want her.

There is no excuse for any one thinking themselves on another as a guest, and only grafters do it. —DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a chef in a large cafe where I fell in love with a waitress. When I asked her to marry me she refused because she said she hated to keep house and to cook and I told her if she would marry me I would do all the cooking. We got married, and she has been the best wife anybody ever had and stuck to me through thick and thin, but we are made very unhappy by our neighbors criticising me for doing the housework. What shall I do? —WORRIED HUSBAND.

Answer—Quit listening to the neighbors. It is nobody's business but your own. If you like to cook and know how to do it why not go your own way without reference to anybody else?—DOROTHY DIX.

Lubbock Jail Break Fails

Two Prisoners Caught After Tying Guard

Special to The Record News

LUBBOCK, Texas, Oct. 20.—J. B. Brown, sentenced to two years in the state penitentiary for forgery, and Mrs. Bessie Tucker, under an indictment for forgery, were recaptured about 10 blocks from the Lubbock county jail late Saturday after forcing Jailer Will Earnest into a cell at the point of a pistol, tying him and making their escape.

Officers have been unable to learn how the prisoners obtained the gun and the sheriff has issued orders to keep all visitors out of the jail until Brown is removed.

Other prisoners refused to take their liberty and the two jail breakers overlooked an opportunity to go up to the third floor to release the husband of Mrs. Tucker.

Texas Dinner Of Federation Leads Social Activities

The first general dinner of the Texas Federation of Women's clubs meeting at Mineral Wells, Nov. 11-15 will be the Texas dinner, which will be held on Tuesday evening, Nov. 12, presided over by Mrs. Ben G. Oneal.

This feature of the conference was inaugurated by Mrs. W. R. Potter of Bowie, president of the federation and this is the second year of its celebration. Mrs. Potter will tell after the dinner, "Why the Texas Dinner."

Mrs. Oneal has arranged an interesting program for the evening. Miss Rebecca Smith of T. C. U. will be one of the speakers. The speaker of the evening will be Attorney General R. L. Bobbitt. Governor Moody will be present and will also make a short talk. Miss Tipporah English, chairman of the Mineral Wells Federation of clubs will be hostess.

Several clubs have already elected delegates and alternates to the annual federation meeting. Mrs. T. A. Hicks will represent the Travel club and Mrs. P. P. Langford has been elected delegate from the Unity club. Mrs. C. P. Burton will go representing the Woman's Forum; Mrs. Ben G. Oneal is president of the first district and others who will attend are Mesdames Ola G. Hamlin, Walter H. Campbell and G. B. Smedley.

Mrs. Oneal announces that dues are payable to Miss Ollie Reed, Denison, state treasurer and that it is only necessary to pay the state federation dues, which makes a club a district member. While dues may be paid at the federation conference, it is better to pay them now, so that a delegate can carry credentials with her.

We Women

By BETTY BRAINERD

Windmills

Fighting windmills is more common than Cervantes seemed to think when he limned the frenzied knight Don Quixote for us. Don Quixote was not the only person given to the silly habit of battling windmills and stabbing wine sacks, nor is the habit confined to the sex to which the gallant knight belonged.

◇ ◇ ◇

Women allow many windmills to tempt them into false conflicts and waste much precious time brooding over things that are not quite real. They conjure up many wholly imaginary misfortunes and feed on many shadowy suspicions that make them unhappy.

◇

Women allow the years to torture them. They see wrinkles and weep over fading beauty. They discover a sudden and growing indifference on the part of their husbands, become jealous and fret themselves into fine frenzies over nothing in particular. They discover an envy in neighbors, friends and associates, which has no existence in fact. They read wrong meanings into innocent glances at their gowns, or find something catty in a remark about their new hat—and it all helps to make them very unhappy.

◇ ◇ ◇

Women could and would be much happier if they put windmills out of their lives, if they thought less of age and more of youth, less of jealousy and more of love.

◇ ◇ ◇

Too often women allow their children to make them unhappy when there is really no reason for it. The mother becomes suspicious of the daughter, she thinks she remains out too late at night, or that she is in bad company and that something dreadful is likely to happen to her, when, as a matter of fact, the daughter is quite capable of taking care of herself in any company and in any set of circumstances.

Suspicion, whether it involves husband or child, is one of the worst things in the world for a woman. No suspicious woman can be happy—and suspicion is one of the most persistent of our windmills.

Then, too, many women become professional grunters. They just know there is something dreadfully wrong with them, that they are going to wind up in the hospital and on an operating table! Windmills!

Women who thus torture themselves become professionally unhappy. They scatter gloom wherever they go. Their friends begin to shun them and very often they are forced into a life of loneliness when there really is no substantial reason for it.

The woman who can put windmills out of her life is fortunate, for she will be happy, come what may.

Bride-Elect Honored With Dinner Party

Honoring Miss Vera Briggle, whose marriage to Fred Livingstone, a prominent young business man of Clinton, Mo., is announced to take place in Lawton, Okla., Nov. 23, Mrs. James Lomax entertained Friday evening at the Wichita club with one of the loveliest dinner parties of the season.

The table was laid in one of the private dining rooms with a cover of golden gauze and the center piece was an enormous bowl of red radiance roses, the favorite flower of the bride elect. Silver candlesticks held tall golden tapers with fluffy bows of maline tied round them. The only light in the flower scented room was from the soft gleam of the candles.

Frilled red and gold nut cups emphasized the color scheme which was carried out as far as possible, in the menu.

Individual favors were miniature wooden steamers, each carrying a dainty place card; these were an announcement that the young couple will make their bridal trip to Europe.

Covers were laid for Miss Briggle and Mr. Livingstone, Messrs. and Mesdames J. W. Lomax and H. N. Seevers, Mesdames B. C. Nicholson and A. E. W. Barrett of San Antonio, Misses Frances Lomax and Jewel Thomas and Messrs. John Smith Thornton Lomax Jr., Hershel Safford and E. W. Marriott.

Herbert Kaufman's

NOT THE SOUR-GRAPES FOX

Daily Editorial

HIS PARENTS weren't on calling terms with the Astors—but his grandchildren will be.

John Jacob's folks had actively retired from inn-keeping, and moved uptown, long before the Foxes settled in lower New York, to lay another super-fortune foundation.

That responsibility shortly and prematurely devolved upon son William, and so deprived him of the advanced schooling without which nobody is supposed to get very far.

John Jacob contrived to accumulate a Northwest empire, become the richest man in Manhattan, and live to lord it over De Puysters and Stuyvesants despite an identical handicap.

His line reaches to the peerage—but it also reaches from the steerage.

Less than a century separates the original Astor's broken gutturals from the broad A's of learning generations.

The fancier branches of learning are handy to have around the house, but not essential—provided a man can read the signs of the times and know enough arithmetic to calculate simple opportunity.

Self-confidence and ambition regularly build taller spires and create caster estates than pedantic precision or classical accuracy.

Higher education cannot claim Messrs. Edison, Rockefeller, Sarnoff, Ford, Ochs, Eastman, Dollar or Wright, either. And you'll observe that the deprivation did not noticeably foil their several careers.

ALL SOUND thinking isn't a college graduate. Necessity confers degrees of common sense, as distinguished as certified doctorates. In proof of which, William Fox is celebrating his silver wedding to motion pictures.

Astor once drove a fur peddler's cart; Edison hawked fruits, candies and sandwiches; Sarnoff wore messenger livery; Eastman wielded a bank janitor's broom; Fox sponged cloth and, with only one wage-earning arm, kept home fires and determination burning.

Circumstance designed him for a minor tradesman, or a petty manufacturer, but he refused to recognize his unfitness for command and kept his thoughts in shoulder-straps.

The Fox theater chain, Fox production units and Fox realty holdings, sprang from a dank basement shop and the conviction that there were just as good fish in the future as any the past had caught.

He didn't brood over sour-grapes, or meager backgrounds—he was too busy watching his foregrounds to waste energy on inferiority complexes and wishing rings.

Instead, he explored possibility—and landed in a trashy nickelodeon. It wasn't much, but it was a fair start—which is all that anybody's entitled to.

He plowed back his profits into the soil that produced them—which is both sound husbandry and fundamental business law.

He did nothing you couldn't have accomplished, and accomplished it under the noses of a million contemporaries immeasurably better financed and trained for the same job. You had as much money and as much experience—but you didn't care as hard or dare as hard.

Consequently, the Foxes, the Astors, the Ford and the Firestones, will be social landmarks and industrial dictators when your grandchildren are inheriting obscurity, the suburbs, and knowledge that grandfather took a university course and expected it to replace initiative, pertinacity and imagination.

Today in Texas History

October 21

1829—Sam Houston was formally adopted into a Cherokee tribe.

1874—Rev. S. F. Tenney preached the opening sermon at a meeting in Corsicana of the Texas Central Presbytery.

1928—Meeting in Wichita Falls of Tenth District International Ad clubs.

James McFadden, of Cleveland, is out to break the sitting up record. Plans to perch on a signboard for five days and five hours. He's the sort of fellow to date up with, girls.

Students at the University of Minnesota have been suspected of sending substitutes to take their examinations. Well, what's a football player supposed to do?

A British writer says he eats raw onions just like apples. That should be a great help in keeping not only doctors away but everybody else.

A congressman yawned the other day during the course of one of his own speeches. Maybe he was soliloquizing and became bored.

Many boys are taking up the study of housekeeping sciences, says a statistical bulletin. Somebody has to open the cans.

A Beacon on the Edge of Unending Night

FOR some unexplainable reason, the plight of the eight Canadian airmen who have been missing in the Arctic since the early part of September has not been getting the newspaper attention that it deserves.

There is something supremely fascinating about the story. Two seaplanes took off from an outpost near Hudson's bay more than six weeks ago, bound for an Alaskan settlement 2,000 miles away. They have not been heard from since.

Thus, while a busy nation far to the southward occupies itself with the businesses and diversions of autumn, sniffs the pleasant October air and worries about nothing more serious than the weekly football games, the incredible desolate barrens of northern Canada hide—somewhere—eight fliers, fighting their lonely fight against the ancient enemies, darkness, cold and hunger.

You would think that the situation would catch the country's imagination. But, for some reason, it hasn't. Canada is awake to what is going on; Canada is sending her best airmen to hunt for the missing eight. But the United States isn't paying any attention to them.

We are cheating ourselves by ignoring these fliers. We are not only losing an interesting story; we are depriving ourselves of something that would be a tonic for a civilization that has grown too secure and settled.

The United States is a long way from the frontier nowadays. Life has become stabilized. Most of us never know any experience more exciting than the daily ride from the home to the job on the street car or in the auto. We live in a time and place where the rough edges of existence have been worn off. We do not know what our race can endure.

Then, once in a while, something happens like this thing in the Canadian northland; something that reminds us that there are still men who go out of their way to skate where the ice is thin—men who leave the safety and comforts of civilization and go over the horizon to grapple with danger and earn their living under the shades of unending night.

It is important that we be reminded of this once in a while. The human race has a long list of follies, crimes and weaknesses on its record, and we are apt to magnify them when we live too long in a time of peace and ease. We forget that there is a credit side to the ledger as well; an amazing tale of bravery, sacrifice and endurance.

So, now, we have our all-important reminder again. Up under the arctic circle eight fliers are missing in a region of limitless desolation, and the finest fliers in Canada are risking their lives to look for them. We ought to pay more attention to it than we do. It would be everlastingly good for us.

No Wisecracks, After All

A CHICAGO mail order firm, finding that there was a good deal of "traffic congestion" about the mirrors in its plant, discovered on investigation that the average girl employe spends no less than six minutes a day using powder, lipstick and rouge before the looking glass.

One's impulse, on hearing this, is to make some sort of wisecrack. But on second thought, perhaps no wisecrack is called for from any self-sufficient male. For, after all, the man who pokes fun at the flapper who hesitates in front of every mirror is usually the man who says, "Now Alice would be a doggone nice looking girl if she'd only primp up a little bit once in a while."

In other words, the primping is done for the men's benefit, and the men seem to like it. So why should the men kick about it?

Why the British Protest

IT HAS BEEN the tendency in America to blame the British government rather severely for its recent strenuous protests against the reparations settlements as provided in the Young plan.

There are several important points to remember, however. At previous reparations conferences it has always been England that has had to make the concessions. England has settled her war debts at a far higher rate than France has. England has suffered much more from the post-war depression than have her allies.

All in all, it is small wonder that the British have felt moved to protest. Americans would do well to study the situation a little before passing judgment.

Much Obliged

You came to me when love had died
And sentiments and hopes were dismal,
And quite successfully you tried
To raise me from the vale abysmal.

I opened interested eyes
And studied you a while: thereafter
I vaulted gayly to the skies
And took another lease on laughter.

And that was love, and life took on
For I had but to look upon
Your face, and living then was lighter.

You made me what I am today,
And of your love I deeply drank:
You
Came and taught me how to play
So go on back again, and thank you!

—ROBERT NEWCOMB.

Heheheh

Kelcey Allen, the critic and joke-spreader, unfolded one yesterday about Acton Davies who was once one of the better New York drama defenders. Davies had rapped an actress for a full column and her nobleman husband (who never worked a day in his life, but cashed in on his title) finally cornered the critic and they punched each other silly. Davies' editor spoke to him about the encounter the next morning.

"And," concluded the editor, "is it true that he bit your finger?"

"No," said Acton, "but I can understand how a report like that could get around. He's been living off other people for years!"

Add Wilde Anecdotes

Then, there's the Oscar Wilde nifty, which dealt with his contemporary, Algernon Swinburne, who during his last years was so irritable that he tiffed with everybody about everything. When he died they brought the news to Oscar.

"Poor Algy," groaned Wilde, "it's too bad. He won't like God at all!"

The Retort Proper

Voyagers returning from London bring back this Frederick Lonsdale repartee from one of his comedies. The husband, it appears, defies his best friend to deny he has been carrying on an affair with his wife. "Don't be a fool," modestly replies the accused. "I never even kissed her!"

"You lie!" counters the husband, "you know damn well you have!"

"See here," is the retort swell, "do you think I would be such a cad not to remember it?"

Query

The look of joy—half mixed with pain—
Deep in your eyes I used to see,
Has gone, and when I look again
There's laughter there for me.
I can't be glad to be a friend,
After I've been much more,
Why did you close so nice a book,
And why did you bar the door?

—ELIZABETH C. LOWREY.

Of All Cracks!

At the premiere of Ring Lardner's and Geo. S. Kaufman's immensely funny show, "June Moon," ex-Govenor Al E. Smith ankled down the aisle to his front pew to the tune of fervent applause. Harry Reichenbach observed: "Gee, a guy with a following like that ought to go into the movies."

A Modern Cinderella

Twenty years ago Ramsay (Peace Messenger) MacDonald, who talked things over with President Hoover, was listed as the Norman Thomas of England, of no political consequence and negligible socially. The Labor victory which lately swung him into power elevated him by circumstance to a high social position.

Sir Esme (Another) Howard, the British ambassador, dislikes MacDonald's party and looks down upon him as an individual, yet he is compelled to sponsor him and Ishbel socially during their stay in Washington. Since MacDonald's election and the expectation that he would pay a diplomatic visit to this country, Howard has been seeking to be replaced at the capital. He had hoped for a recall right up to a few weeks ago, in order to avoid the embarrassment of connecting with MacDonald.

In other words you never can afford to be uppity with anybody. Even on Broadway the highest paid press agents will tell you that it doesn't pay to snub the other fellow, who today may only be a small-time hoofer, but 10 years from now a dramatic editor.

In Fewer Words

Then there's Frank Farron's crisp crack: "The old fashioned girl's dress used to cover her instep, but the modern girl's hardly covers her step-in."

Paradox

Love raced, one night, into my heart
Hurling the very stars apart—
So great was its first sweep.
And yet, so slightly did it creep
Away, with the first touch of dawn
I scarcely knew that love had gone.

—ESTELLE HAGEDORN.

Observations

The New York social register contains many names duplicating those borne by less fashionable but more famous individuals, including film favorites.

Frinstance: Wallace Reid, William Boyd and John Gilbert. Also the squaw of Edward T. H. Talmage is named Constance, and the Princess Miguel de Braganza was christened Anita Stewart.

Oh, yes, Hamilton Collitch offers an annual Greek prize of $1,000 which is donated by a Walter Winchell. Are you leffing?

Quiteo, Quiteo

Gil Swan passes along this chorus girl repartee:

First Merry Magdalen: "He's some sheik. He's getting into the best circles."

Second Eyeful: "Circles! You mean he's crashing the best triangles."

DAVID BRANCH'S DAILY FILOSOFY

"He who remembers the wrongs done him should also remember to forgive."

The real test of true Christian character is in determining one's ability to forgive. Try forgiving someone you thought you could never forgive and notice how good it makes you feel down deep in your soul.

"All Quiet on the Western Front"

By ERICH MARIA REMARQUE

CHAPTER XXXII

There are so many airmen here, and they are so sure of themselves that they give chase to single individuals, just as though they were hares. For every German plane there come at least five English and American. For every hungry, wretched German soldier come five of the enemy, fresh and fit. For one German army loaf there are 50 tins of canned beef over there. We are not beaten, for as soldiers we are better and more experienced; we are simply crushed and driven back by overwhelmingly superior forces.

Behind us lie rainy weeks—gray sky, gray fluid earth, gray dying. If we go out, the rain at once soaks through our overcoat and clothing—and we remain wet all the time we are in the line. We never get dry. Those who still wear high boots tie sand banks around the top so that the mud does not pour in so fast. The rifles are caked, the uniforms caked, everything is fluid and dissolved, the earth one dripping, soaked, oily mass in which lie the yellow pools with red spiral streams of blood and into which the dead, wounded, and survivors slowly sink down.

The storm lashes us, out of the confusion of gray and yellow the hail of splinters whips forth the child-like cries of the wounded, and in the night shattered life groans wearily to the silence.

Our hands are earth, our bodies clay and our eyes pools of rain. We do not know whether we still live.

Then the heat sinks heavily into our shell-holes like a jelly-fish, moist and oppressive, and on one of these late summer days, while bringing food, Kat falls. We two are alone. I bind up his wound; his shin seems to be smashed. It has got the bone, and Kat groans desperately: "At last—just at the last—"

I comfort him. "Who knows how long this mess will go on yet! Now you are saved—"

The wound begins to bleed fast. Kat cannot be left by himself while I try to find a stretcher. Anyway, I don't know of a stretcher-bearer's post in the neighborhood.

Kat is not very heavy; so I take him up on my back and start off to the dressing station with him.

Twice we rest. He suffers acutely on the way. We do not speak much. I have opened the collar of my tunic and breathe heavily. I sweat and my face is swollen with the strain of carrying on. All the same time I urge him to let us go on for the place is dangerous.

"Shall we go on again, Kat?"

"Must Paul."

"Then come."

I raise him up, he stands on the uninjured leg and supports himself against a tree. I take up the wounded leg carefully, then he gives a jump and I take the knee of the sound leg under my arm.

The going is more difficult. Often a shell whistles across. I go as quickly as I can, for the blood from Kat's wound drips to the ground. We cannot shelter ourselves properly from the explosions; before we can take cover the danger is all over.

We lie down in a small shell-hole to rest. I give Kat some tea from my water bottle. We smoke a cigaret. "Well, Kat," I say gloomily, "we are going to be separated at last."

He is silent and looks at me.

"Do you remember, Kat, how we commandeered the goose? And how you brought me out of the barrage when I was still a young recruit and was wounded for the first time? I cried then. Kat, that is almost three years ago."

He nods.

The anguish of solitude rises up in me. When Kat is taken away I will not have one friend left.

"Kat, in any case we must see one another again, if it is peace time before you come back."

"Do you think that I will be marked A-1 again with this leg," he asks, bitterly.

"With rest it will get better. The joint is all right. It may limp a bit."

"Give me another cigaret," he says.

"Perhaps we could do something together later on, Kat." I am very miserable, it is impossible that Kat—Kat my friends, Kat with the drooping shoulders and the poor, thin mustache, Kat, whom I know as I know no other man. Kat with whom I have shared these three years—it is impossible that perhaps I shall not see Kat again.

"In any case give me your address at home, Kat. And here is mine. I will write it down for you."

I write his address in my pocket-book. How forlorn I am already, though he still sits here beside me. Couldn't I shoot myself quickly in the foot so as to be able to go with him?

Suddenly Kat gurgles and turns green and yellow. "Let us go on," he stammers.

I jump up, eager to help him, I take him up and start off at a run, a slow steady pace, so as not to jolt his leg too much.

My throat is parched; everything dances red and black before my eyes. I stagger on doggedly and pitilessly and at last reach the dressing station.

There I drop down on my knees, but have still enough strength to fall on the side where Kat's sound leg is. After a few minutes I straighten myself up again. My legs and my hands tremble. I have trouble in finding my water bottle, to take a pull. My lips tremble as I try to drink. But I smile—Kat is saved.

After a while I begin to sort out the confusion of voices that falls on my ears.

"You might have spared yourself that," says an orderly.

I looked at him without comprehending.

He points to Kat. "He is stone dead."

I do not understand him. "He has been hit on the shin," I say.

The orderly stands still. "That as well."

I turn around. My eyes are still dulled, the sweat breaks out on me again, it runs over my eyelids. I wipe it away and peer at Kat. He lies still. "Fainted," I say quickly.

The orderly whistles softly. "I know better than that. He is dead. I'll lay any money on that."

I shake my head: "Not possible. Only 10 minutes ago I was talking to him. He has fainted."

Kat's hands are warm. I pass my arm under his shoulders in order to rub his temples with some tea. I feel my fingers become moist. As I draw them away from behind his head, they are bloody. "You see—" The orderly whistles once more through his teeth.

On the way without my having noticed it, Kat has caught a splinter in the head. There is just one little hole, it must have been a very tiny, stray splinter. But it has sufficed. Kat is dead.

Slowly I get up.

"Would you like to take his pay-book and his things?" the lance corporal asks me.

I nod, and he gives them to me.

The orderly is mystified. "You are not related, are you?"

No, we are not related. No, we are not related.

Do I walk? Have I feet still? I raise my eyes, I let them move around, and turn myself with them, one circle, one circle, and I stand in the midst. All is as usual. Only the Militjaman Stanislaus Katczinsky has died.

Then I know nothing more.

It is autumn. There are not many of the old hands left. I am the last of the seven fellows from our class.

Everyone talks of peace and armmistice. All wait. If it again proves an illusion, then they will break up; hope is high, it cannot be taken away again without an upheaval. If there is not peace, then there will be revolution.

I have 14 days' rest, because I have swallowed a bit of gas; in a little garden I sit the whole day long in the sun. The armistice is coming soon, I believe it now, too. Then we will go home.

Here my thoughts stop and will not go any farther. All that meets me, all that floods over me are but feelings—greed of life, love of home, yearning of the blood, intoxication of deliverance. But no aims.

Had we returned home in 1916, out of the suffering and the strength of our experiences we might have unleashed a storm. Now if we go back we will be weary, broken, burnt out, rootless and without hope. We will not be able to find our way any more.

All men will not understand us—for the generations that grew up before us, though it has passed these years with us here, already had a home and a calling; now it will return to its old occupations, and the war will be forgotten—and the generation that has grown up after us will be strange to us and push us aside. We will be superflous even to ourselves, we will grow older, a few will adapt themselves, some others will merely submit, and most will be bewildered—the years will pass by and in the end we shall fall into ruin.

But perhaps all this that I think is mere melancholy and dismay, which will fly away in the dust, when I stand once again beneath the poplars and listen to the rustling of their leaves. It cannot be that it has gone, the yearning that made our blood unquiet, the unknown, the perplexing, the oncoming things, the thousand faces of the future, the melodies from dreams and from books, the whispers and divinations of women, it cannot be that this has vanished in bombardment, in despair, in brothels.

Here the trees show gay and golden, the berries of the rowan stand red among the leaves, country roads run white out to the skyline, and the canteens hum like beehives with rumors of peace.

I stand up.

I am very quiet. Let the months and years come, they bring me nothing more, they can bring me nothing more. I am so alone and so without hope I can confront them without fear. The life that has borne me through these years is still in my hands and my eyes. Whether I have subdued it, I know not. But so long as it is there it will seek its own way out, heedless of the will that is within me.

He fell in October, 1918, on a day that was so quiet and still on the whole front, that the army report confined itself to a single sentence: All quiet on the western front.

He had fallen forward and lay on the earth as though sleeping. Turning him over one saw that he could not have suffered long; his face had an expression of calm, as though almost glad the end had come.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

Lines on Autumn Glories

The autumn is a season grand
With beauties rare that fell me;
Then nature paints with lavish hand—
Or that's what people tell me.

There's magic in the lifting haze,
The fields are super-tinted;
No other season has such days—
Or so it's widely hinted.

There's beauty in the cornfields dry,
And in the pumpkin swelling;
Then matchless is the distant sky—
Or that's the stuff they're selling.

No other season of the year
Can touch October's glory;
No other time's so fair and clear—
At least that is the story.

The geese are quacking overhead,
The quail pipe in the clearing
As nature puts the year to bed—
Or that's what I've been hearing.

In autumn mountains have a charm
That makes all else seem phoney;
Then beauty paints each home and farm—
Unless it's all baloney.

October is a gorgeous boon;
The year has no such member—
Excepting April, August, June,
July, May and September.

Terrible!

The gasoline truck-drivers of New York went on strike. They demanded more money and alleged their strike followed a long failure of their employers to keep promises of higher pay. They felt, in other words, that they had been fueled long enough.

Well, the world series is getting more colorless every year. The horns, the noise-making machines, the streamers, the boisterous rooting, the attacks on the umpires and the old-fashioned fights in the grandstands disappeared some years ago, but it remained for Philadelphia to take a step that just about knocked the game in the head as a spectacle. Believe it or not, the band music at Shibe park came from a phonograph record!

Records were played on an old machine into a "mike" under the grandstand, the music reaching the fans through loud speakers in the outfield.

Now all the magnates have to do next year to make a series 100 per cent drab is to bar "hot dogs," discover a synthetic peanut and put the Altrock-Schacht act over by magic-lantern slides.

S. M. U. PLAYS FINAL INTERSECTIONAL TILT WITH OLE MISS

VETERAN CREW BEING BROUGHT

Rube Wilcox Is Brilliant Quarterback

Playing their first game in two weeks the Southern Methodist university Mustangs will meet Mississippi university in their second big intersectional game of the '29 season in the Fair Park stadium, Saturday, Oct. 26. This game between Ole Miss. and the Mustangs marks the third and final intersectional football game for the 1929 state fair of Texas.

Determined Crew Coming

Homer Hazel is bringing a powerful and determined crew from across the father of waters. With a veteran team this year, the Mississippians got a slow start on the season by being defeated in their first three starts. Hazel's mighty Mississippians seek to renew their high standing in the South by bringing home a victory over the great red and blue machine of the Southwest.

Three weeks will have passed since the Ponies made their wonderful stand against the powerful Cornhusker eleven in Lincoln. Since that time the Ponies have worked untiringly smoothing up the rough spots in their offense and defense. Morrison and McIntosh have driven their charges at top speed in an effort to get their sophomores into a smooth working team. Only one game has been in the way of the Pony mentor since the Husker tilt. The scheduled game with the strong freshman team was cancelled and the Ponies worked over the week-end without interruption.

Woodruff Plunging Back

In Rube Wilcox the visitors have a dangerous and brilliant quarterback who runs his team in an unerring fashion, but Rube is not the only offensive threat in the backfield for the southerners. Cowboy Woodruff is a sensational driving plunging back. He had a big day against Vanderbilt a few weeks ago when he tore the Commodore line to shreds by his terrific drives. Little Sam Kyzar is a brilliant little back who the out-of-staters are also depending on to carry the mail. Coach Hazel has a great pair of ends, Patty and Peoples are both fast and heavy. These two wings will be a center of the air offense. The Ole' Miss. mentor has been very successful with his overhead game this year. If Captain Dump Burnett is shifted to the backfield the line will be greatly weakened. Burnett is a whale of a defensive man. Boutwell at center, is a good man both on the offense and the defense.

S. M. U. to Have Strength

Ray Morrison will have his full strength on the field. Gilbert has practically recovered from the ankle injury that he received in the Denton Normal game and will be at the helm of the Pony offense. Mason, Davidson and Hopper will be his running mates in the backfield. Skeeters, the only injured man of the Nebraska encounter has sufficiently recovered that he will be ready should he be called on. The Pony squad is in great shape for the game.

Ivey Is Winner In Sunday Auto Races

One of the most thrilling and spectacular exhibitions of automobile racing ever seen on a Wichita Falls racing course was won by a Wichita Falls man, Johnie Ivey, Sunday afternoon at the fair grounds track.

In a notable event featuring races for all cars selling less than $1,000 and driving a De Soto roadster Ivey came through by a nose, as they say in racing paralance, in a grueling race against Earl Hovoden, Duncan Okla., speedster. The race covered ten laps of the field. Round and round they sped with neither driver gaining a creditable advantage. And it was not until the final split second at the finishing tape that the winner was assured.

Weber Wins Main Race

The main attraction open to all cars of all prices was featured by the superb driving of George Weber, also of Wichita Falls. Weber also was the winner of the race which presented cars in the price field of over $1,000. He drove his Studebaker President Eight in this event. A close second in both of these two races was Jimmy Davis of Dallas. He piloted a Hudson roadster and gave the winner a long run for his honors. Earl Hovenden placed third, Huffman was fourth in the main attraction.

Othere entries in the races included Henry Williams, Wichita Falls, in a De Soto built machine; Smith Miller, Oklahoma City, piloting a Chevrolet; Clark Hunter, Hollis, Okla., with his De Soto; C. B. McCloskin, Hereford; J. M. French, Memphis, also driving a De Soto; E. Kefer, Duncan, Okla., with a Buick.

The track conditions were splendid for the best of racing and the meet was acclaimed a hugs success. Most of the drivers aver that they will return here on Nov. 10 and 11 when a second big program is presented.

Longhorns and Frogs Stand in The Forefront of Conference Contenders

By GAYLE TALBOT JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Texas university and Texas Christian university, two powerful versatile elevens with rock-ribbed defenses, stood in the forefront of Southwest conference championship contenders today. For the first time since the seaeson began the Baylor university Bears were deprived of their role of outstanding favorites.

Texas Christian—Ah, there is a football machine—lived up to all expectations by defeating the Texas Aggies, 13 to 7, in their opening conference battle at Fort Worth. The team that wins the Southwest conference crown has the Horned Frogs beat. It is an eleven with a forward wall nearly perfect, both offensively and defensively, and a backfield pulsing with speed and power. Leland and Grubbs are a pair of human bullets.

Southwest Teams Potent

The Longhorns looked equally potent in their 21 to 0 triumph over Oklahoma university at Dallas. The Sooners were the second Big Six eleven to fare disastrously against a Southwest conference team here in a week, the Aggie having trimmed Kansas State by almost the same margin. Texas, like T. C. U., appears to have everything, most important of which is a defense, both on the ground and in the air, which has defied all opposition. The Steers have not been scored upon in four games. Oklahoma tried 12 passes Saturday, completing one for a gain of four yards.

Bears Hard Put to Win

While the Frogs and Longhorns were establishing themselves as two highly explosive outfits, the vaunted Baylor Bear was having the fight of his life to outscore the Arkansas Razorbacks, 21 to 20, at Waco. Coach Jennings' array of stars finally did it, but they lost considerable prestige. Where Texas had trimmed the Porkers, 27 to 0, the previous week, the Bruins had to call on all their power to win by any score. The Arkansas passing attack, nullified by Texas' secondary defense, gave the Bears a fit. Jake Wilson's brilliant performance was all that pulled the Green eleven through.

Razorbacks Lose Twice

Arkansas, losing its second start, definitely was out of the running. The Aggies, dropping that vital game Saturday, scarcely can hope to win a title. Southern Methodist and Rice, although yet to play a conference foe, are not considered of championship timber. There is a feeling, however, that the Mustangs will bump off one of the big teams somewhere along the line. They meet both Texas and Baylor at Dallas; worth bearing in mind. And the Aggies will play host to Texas at College Station. The Longhorns, though, play what appears to be their most formidable rivals, T. C. U. and Baylor at Austin.

Won on a Play

That it is possible for the entire complexion of a conference race to hinge upon a single play was demonstrated forcibly in the Frog-Aggie fray at Fort Worth. The Christians, although outplaying the Farmers by a wide margin after they hit their stride, had to resort to one of the oldest tricks in the game to score their winning touchdown. The Aggies, taking an inopportune siesta, were caught flat-footed and saw their chances of victory fly away on the heels of speedy Cy Leland. The ball was snapped to Leland by pre-arranged signal after the referee had brought it from the sideline. Leland covered 42 yards in a little better than nothing flat. The play cost the Aggies a shot at the conference title.

Owls vs. Texas U. Saturday

Neither of the two conference frays scheduled next Saturday can be said to have an important bearing on the championship race. The Aggies play Arkansas at College Station and will be favored to win. Texas will take on the Rice Owls at Austin in what looks like an easy one for the Longhorns.

Four other elevens play non-conference foes. Southern Methodist tackles Mississippi university at Dallas in the third and final state fair attraction. Baylor travels to Shreveport for a bout with Centenary. Texas Christian will have a well earned let-down against Texas Tech at Lubbock.

25 Escape Mexican Prison Through Tunnel

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 20. (UP)—Twenty-five convicts, including murderers and bandits, escaped from the state penitentiary of San Luis Potosi through an old tunnel, dispatches to the newspaper Prensa said today.

The tunnel was the same as that used in another escape several years ago. It had been walled off partly, but the prisoners managed to dig a connected passage beyond the wall and gain their liberty.

How They Stand

Southwest Conference	Won	Lost	Pct.

Texas	1	0	1.000
T. C. U.	1	0	1.000

Sport Loose Ends

By W. G. CHAMBLESS

Well folks, all we know about what happened in football over the country during the past week-end is just what we can hear, see, and read in the papers. But that there was plenty going on is assured and certain, no doubt. It was a big week-end for the great American collegiate and high school game of football. Some of the best teams South, East, North, West met face to face, and now we know who's who on the gridiron.

Many of those contests had distinct bearings on team ranking and conference ratings. Yes, there were many good reputations to go to the dogs this past week. Of course, some of the elevens couldn't lose their reps, for the reason that they didn't possess any. Some of the teams acquitted themselves most heroically and remained in good standing; others stood on the fence; and a few forged to the front and now loom as "logical contenders" for mythical thrones.

Down here in our own Southwestern conference there are two teams to whom we invite your special attention and admiration. They played in Dallas and Fort Worth on Saturday and are by name the Texas Longhorns and the T. C. U. Horned Frogs respectively.

Somewhile ago we opined that the Longhorns, 1928 conference champions, looked as if they were again stampeded toward another conference title. And the outcome of the past week's skuffle with Oklahoma certainly did not belie the early surmise. Though the game was of non-conference importance, the Longhorns' enthusiastic thumping of the powerful Sooner team, one of the best of the Big Six, stamped the Steers as being of real titular caliber.

Too bad for Coach Matty Bell's Texas Aggies. They parted company with the unbeaten class of the conference when they bowed to the Horned Frogs, 13 to 7. Demonstratably the Frogs have a remarkable football machine. Four consecutive victories, two of them over most formidable elevens, place the Christians in the very front row of the contenders. In the game Saturday at Fort Worth they came from behind at the half, 7 to 0, and outplayed and outsmarted the Aggies. The highly touted aerial attack of the Farmers was completely smothered and paralyzed by the Frog defense.

The Baylor Bears have been tried against the Arkansas Razorbacks and found not so good. At least not up to pre-season expectations. The Bruins were not at all impressive in their 21 to 20 victory over the Razorbacks. Again the cold facts and figures bob up to stare us in the face and we find the Bears worsted by comparison with Texas against Arkansas. Though such reasoning as this finds us waddling in the dangerous embrace of "dope," but who can resist such tempting bait? It is indisputable that the Longhorns permitted the Razorbacks to cross their goal line not a single time while the Bears could not prevent them from chalking up three touchdowns.

California traveled 3,000 miles from coast to coast to play smart football this year. None of their players scooped up the ball and ran the wrong way this time, and they vanished Pennsylvania, 12 to 7, and thereby demonstrating that the "native sons" lost to the Georgians last New Years day only by an accident.

Too much confidence in a football game won't do. It is said that 30,000 Wisconsin followers had no fear whatsoever when their team went against Notre Dame in Chicago. When it was all over Notre Dame had 20 points and Wisconsin had none. No doubt many good Wisconsin dollars are now paying for little shoes in South Bend.

Coach Thistlewaite of Wisconsin shuffled his men from the line and vice versa, and had several surprises up his sleeve. But Coach Knute knew about it even if he wasn't right there on the field. He talked to 'his boys' about the matter before they left South Bend.

Four teams are outstanding in district 1 and three are as good as out of the race. Amarillo, Lubbock, Vernon and Wichita Falls are "fine" and Electra, Quanah and Plainview are the "outs."

The "outs" were all victorious in conference schedules this week, save the Vernon Lions who dropped a 6 to 0 non-conference skirmish to Denton. With only four teams to watch from here out, it will be a little easier to keep track of your favorites and how they stand.

And speaking of favorites how do you like the Coyote Pack? If you like a daring, take-a-chance, slashing attack and a team that improves and functions more smoothly with every game played, then you like the Pack. Any team that can register 24 first downs against another team in one game is not to be hooted at. It speaks mighty well for the offense and we don't care if the public knows it.

Now the defense wasn't so good, and wouldn't justify writing home about by special delivery. When it is taken into consideration, however, that the Pack was without the aid of three veteran linesmen, we find the matter partly accounted for. Also the coach shot in many new, second-string men, trying to find the strongest and likeliest men with whom to plug the gaps left by the retiring ineligible players.

All in all we'll say the Pack is still bidding and will continue to bid. It may be three or four spades on the other side now but before this race is over and the bid is taken it may be four or five no-trumps with Coach Barry Holton and his Coyotes doing the big yipping.

Tickets for Aggie On Sale Nov. 1

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Oct. 20.—Tickets for the two outstanding home games on the schedule of Coach Matty Bell's Texas Aggies this year, that with S. M. U. Nov. 9 and the clash with the University of Texas Thanksgiving day, will be placed on sale to the general public Nov. 1, James Sullivan, business manager of athletics at the A. & M. college of Texas has announced. The demand for tickets to these games is heavy and many requests have already been received, but Mr. Sullivan has announced that none will be filled until the opening date of the ticket sale.

Bell Has Sophomore Stars

Aggie fans who early in the season predicted that Coach Matty Bell would have a strong sophomore backfield to alternate with his veterans this year may see their prediction come true in the remaining games on the Aggies' schedule. With the release of Leonard Clark, Marshall, from the injured list, Coach Bell has a complete backfield of sophomore stars which probably will equal any similar quartet in the conference. William Wolf, Corpus Christi, and Nelson Rees, Dallas, are the halfbacks of this combination with Horace Dansby, Bryan, at quarter and Clark at full.

Larger Thanksgiving Turkey Crop Predicted

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20. (UP)—A turkey crop for Thanksgiving, nine per cent larger than was available a year ago, was predicted by the agriculture department tonight.

Practically all turkey raising states increased production this year. A large supply of the birds will be marketed for Thanksgiving at average prices.

NATIONAL GRID RACE IS CLOSE

Notre Dame and Stanford Bulk Large

By ALAN J. GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—On the basis of the latest and so far the most spectacular returns from the college football fronts, the race for the national championship honors is a more open affair than before Southern California and Pittsburgh set a good deal of the early pace.

They are still very much in the vanguard, for the Trojans bowled over Occidental Saturday, 64 to 0, in another wild romp while the Pitt Panthers gave Nebraska a more decisive beating than the score of 17 to 7 indicates.

Notre Dame Impressive

Notre Dame, Stanford, Minnesota and Tennessee have leaped forward, among others, to take an important hand in the proceedings. For their third straight triumph, the Hoosiers beat Wisconsin, 19-0, with by far the most impressive display of scoring power they have yet shown.

Minnesota opened its Big Ten campaign by smashing Northwestern's hopes, 26 to 14. In a day of southern upsets, Tennessee's great team prevailed over Alabama, 6 to 0, to loom big in the championship picture.

Dartmouth Stock Up

Dartmouth's crushing defeat of Columbia, 34 to 0, embellished the Big Green's first major test.

Stanford galloping rough shod over Oregon State to the tune of 40 to 7, furnished all the remaining evidence needed to forecast a sensational struggle when the Cardinals tackle the Southern California Trojans next Saturday.

These were the significant developments of football's major battles, but for sheer thrills nothing surpassed the comeback by which Harvard, on a 50-yard pass, scored the touchdown that led to a 20-20 tie with West Point at Cambridge after Red Cagle had put the Cadets in front with a stirring exhibition of broken field running.

This struggle, reminiscent of the Army's spectacular 21-21 battle with the Navy at Chicago in 1926, was a clash between two great offensives as the All-American Cagle shared laurels with a young Harvard sophomore, Barry Wood, whose passing and kicking saved the Crimson from apparently certain defeat.

Army was in First Test

Army, although tied, came through its first big test with flying colors and goes on to New Haven this week for the annual game with Yale, which rallied on Abie Booth's fine individual work to beat Brown, 14 to 6.

Cornell's 13 to 7 victory over Princeton, the first in 22 years and an indication of a big red revival, Fordham's advance at the expense of Holy Cross, 7 to 0, and California's conquest of Pennsylvania, 12 to 7, in the day's outstanding intersectional game, furnished other eastern features. The triumph of the Golden Bears picked up the string of far western victories where Stanford, Oregon State and Southern California left off last season.

East Gets the Best

Otherwise, the East plucked off a majority of honors, for in addition to Pitt's victory over Nebraska, Colgate trimmed Indiana, 21 to 6. Boston college took Dayton into camp, 23 to 7, and the Navy drubbed Duke, 45 to 13.

BIG SIX TEAMS WILL BRUSH UP

Inter-Conference Begins Saturday

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 20. (UP)—A week of polishing lay before Big Six coaches tonight in preparation for real inter-conference competition which opens next Saturday.

Early season intersectional games had brought more than half a share of disaster. The two big contests with two representatives Saturday, involving Nebraska and Oklahoma, left them in defeat.

Nebraska Laments Defeat

Pittsburgh left Lincoln with a 12 to 7 victory over Nebraska to liven the occasion of their homecoming. At Lincoln there was little to console. The Nebraska linesmen retained unpleasant memories of one Parkinson, Pitts fullback, who tore holes in their wall almost at will.

Oklahoma Is Texas Victim

Oklahoma was the victim of another demonstration that they grow tall and powerful in Texas. The Texas university squad handled the Sooners' strong offensive drives in a manner discouraging to the Big Six team and walked through for 21 points while Oklahoma was held scoreless.

The schedule for next Saturday brings Iowa State and Kansas university together at Ames; Kansas Aggies and Oklahoma City at Manhattan and Missouri and Nebraska at Columbia.

WARSAW, (AP)—Government ban against fruit imports has been raised because 60 per cent of Poland's trees and vines perished in last winter's exceptional cold.

WOMEN!

You know the importance of Food Sanitation

That's why I certify Cremo Cigars says

Alfred W. McCann

D. Litt., A.B., LL.D.,
famous pure food expert, long active in crusades for pure foods and sanitary factories.

"You housewives should know that here at last is a cigar manufacturer who looks at his product as an article of human consumption and gives it the same care and thought that I wish existed in the minds of every food manufacturer in the land. No longer need the spectre of spit and disease-lurking germs endanger the health of cigar smokers.

"Every man who smokes Cremo has the double assurance of fine cigar quality plus protection against the menace of spit-tipped cigars.

"Every tobacco leaf entering the Cremo factory is scientifically treated by U. S. Government approved methods. Every sanitary precaution known to science is taken to safeguard its purity along each step of the way.

"Cremo Cigars are folded, wrapped and tipped by amazing inventions without the menace of spit . . . in factories that are models of cleanliness . . . air-flooded, sun-baked, spotlessly clean!

"This Cremo purity is sealed . . . in separate sanitary foil wrappers. Thus the method of manufacture used by Cremo insures a cigar that aims to give the same standard as found in certified milk."

Do you remember the old, filthy shop where the man in the window rolled the leaves with dirty fingers . . . and spit on the ends? What a far cry this is from the modern method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo.

Here's a suggestion deliberately made with confidence: which you smokers of imported cigars will appreciate: Try a Certified Cremo. You will recognize the superiority of Certified Cremo which starts with the choicest and tenderest leaves, ripe and mellow, and continues in goodness through a slow, expensive maturing and mellowing process . . . topped off with the finest imported wrapper! For 5 cents you get the delight of a high priced cigar for Certified Cremo contains no scrap—no floor sweepings—all long filler—all fresh, tender leaves. Over $7,000,000 was spent in perfecting the method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo that insures uniformly fine, clean cigars. Foil-wrapped . . . sanitary . . . crush-proof . . . the kind of cigar the late Vice-President Marshall must have had in mind when he said: "What this country needs most is a good 5-cent cigar."

"I certify Cremo sanitary and clean." Alfred W. McCann

Bacteria Everywhere

There are bacteria associated with disease, and also equally as many associated with health. The word "bacteria" holds a terror for most people, who always associate the word with such words as "infection," "disease," "sickness," and "death."

As with many other things about which we have only a slight knowledge, a little knowledge is often a dangerous thing. Perhaps the greatest harm is produced through the fear engendered by the false belief that bacteria always mean trouble.

It is well to remember that bacteria are essentially vegetable growths. They have no sex life—they are not male and female, or bugs or worms or anything else except vegetable "growths." The different kinds of bacteria grow in different substances. If the substances which are nutritious to one type of bacteria are taken away from these vegetable growths the bacteria cannot develop, and either die off are remain in a resting state, in some cases for periods of time lasting as long as 20 years.

Bacterial growths change their location by throwing out little shoots or spores and sometimes in a short period these growths will spread over a large space wherever there is enough nutrition for their growth.

Dried bacteria are also blown off by the wind and carried from one place to another by any moving object, such as man or animals. Flies or mosquitos, in this way, also play their part in transporting either dry or moist bacterial growths from one place to another.

All bacteria may be destroyed by steam heat, and most bacteria by freezing.

There are a great many beneficial bacteria found in the alimentary canal and digestion and assimilation could not go on without their presence. The bacteria of the intestines do their work by breaking down the highly complex organisms of our food into simpler elements which the body can digest and assimilate.

In many cases, too many of the putrefactive bacteria exist in the intestines, and one of the secrets of scientific dietetics is to attempt through proper feeding to keep the right amount of good bacteria in the intestines, and to eliminate the destructive ones.

Bacteria are found in practically every part of the world. Even the oceans are literally full of bacteria. It is thought that fish and seaweed owe their existence to bacteria in the ocean which keep in circulation the chemical elements which are vital for aquatic animals and plants.

(More about bacteria tomorrow).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Onions, Kidneys and Liver

Question: Nanette asks — "Are onions, kidneys and liver healthful foods?"

Answer: No, No, Nannette; the onions are too grassy, and the kidneys and liver have their best use while in the living body of the animal.

Sandwich Fillings

Question: Seventeen writes—"I am a high school girl and as I live in the country I find it necessary to take my lunch. Would you please suggest some good food combinations to be used in making sandwich fillings? Should brown bread always be used? Also, I have noticed where you stated that milk should never be used with meals. Is it all right to drink milk between meals, for example, when one returns from school?"

Answer—None but genuine wholewheat bread should be used for sandwiches, with such fillings as ground nuts or nut butters, minced eggs, minced ripe olives, cheese or chicken, supplemented by leaves of lettuce or cabbage, or finely chopped celery. Do not make the mistake of using a glass of milk with a sandwich. And do not drink milk between meals, but use it as a meal, itself, and in combination with some raw acid fruits, such as oranges or apples, or with one or more of the non-starchy vegetables, such as string beans or spinach, etc. Keep in mind that milk is a real food, and not just a "drink" to be used whenever you are thirsty.

Enlarged Toe Joint

Question—Do you advise an operation for enlarged toe joints? I have seen advertisements of a medicine that would dissolve the joint. I have had a bad enlargement on the left foot, the big toe. Tell me how to get rid of it."

Answer—The operation for an enlarged toe joint is quite a serious one and should not be undertaken if there is any other way you can reduce the inflammation which is causing the swelling. Local treatment and diet should be the same as for chronic rheumatism. Special articles appear from time to time about the cause and cure of this disorder. Or, if you will give me your name and address the next time you write, I will be glad to send instructions.

Increase Shown In Hale County Valuation

Special to The Record News.

PLAINVIEW, Texas, Oct. 20.—The assessed valuation of Hale county on the current tax rolls is $15,512,908, which is an increase of $1,349,238, slightly under nine per cent, over 1928. Last year the valuations were $14,163,670.

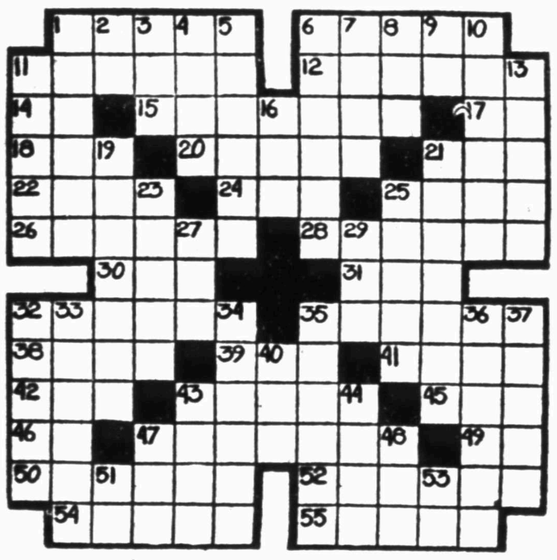

The major increase is seen in the resident rolls, which this year total $11,627,720, an increase of $1,126,010. Property assessed on the non-resident assessments is due largely to the fact that much city as well as rural property has been bought from non-residents by residents of the county.

Where West Texas Bands Will Pass in Review

This picture shows the brilliantly lighted El Paso High school stadium where the West Texas band pageant will be held on the second night of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention, and where they will parade giving publicity to their own home towns.

BANDS TO PLAY FOR THOUSANDS

W. T. C. C. Crowds to See And Hear Many Players

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 20.—The West Texas band pageant will be one of the big features of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention here Oct. 24, 25 and 26. This feature will be held on the second night of the convention in the brilliantly and permanently lighted El Paso high school stadium. This is a natural amphitheater, with a concrete stadium built in a horseshoe around three sides.

Starting at 6:30 p. m., the bands will parade in downtown El Paso and to the stadium where at 7:30 p. m. a massed band concert will be given under direction of Bandmaster O. M. Nord, First cavalry division, Fort Bliss. A special feature of the evening will be given between halves of the football game between the College of Mines, El Paso, and Wayland college, Plainview. Then all communities, who send bands to the convention, will have opportunity to get much publicity for their home towns. Each band will march across the stadium. Sufficient time will be allowed between halves of the game to give every band a chance to appear before the audience. This has been arranged especially to give visiting delegations opportunity to advertise their own city. During the time each band is on the field, an announcer will tell over the loud speaker, public address system, which is being especially installed for the night's entertainment, something of the city which the band represents.

Miss Dorothy Greathouse of Wichita Falls, who for three years was with the Chicago Grand Opera company, will sing as a part of the evening's entertainment, "The Eyes of Texas Are Upon You."

Another unique feature of the evening will be the giving over the public address system, the play by play of the game, telling who is carrying the ball; yardage gained or lost, score and other information about the game.

Plans also are being worked out for a band contest, based on appearance and performance of the band on the field.

Martin Pays Tribute to Working Men In Address to Bible Class Here

Declaring that idleness is the greatest cause of crime in the United States today, Judge P. A. Martin, addressing the Men's Bible class at the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning, paid a tribute to the honest working men of all times.

The speaker's theme was based upon the Biblical quotation: "If any would not work, neither should he eat" and he recommended such a dictum to control the many vagrancy charges brought before the courts. His address is quoted in synopsis form below:

"For long centuries people have been taught to believe that work is a curse, gathering it from the penalty laid upon Adam after he ate the apple when God said, 'In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread,' and turned him out of the garden and set a flaming sword to guard the gate of Eden. But Adam had already been commanded to work before this; he was set to tend the garden, but because he disobeyed the first prohibitory law ever enacted and ate the fruit of the forbidden tree, he was turned out on any ground to dig out a living in less fertile soil. Work is not a curse. On the contrary, useful work is and always has been a blessing.

"And what is work? In the minds of many people it has only the meaning of manual labor. To others it is social service and yet others regard it as the performance of the tasks of our different callings and professions and we are all prone to think of our own work as the most important work in the world. It is well that we thus think for it is a poor workman who does not take some pride in his work.

Honor for Laborer

"Back in the rear of the courtroom in my native county in Carolina one day there was a little confusion; an old man who had imbibed a little too much of the 'mountain dew' of that country had gathered around him some of his old cronies and was telling a joke, for he was a great jokesmith, especially when in his cups a little. The judge heard the disturbance and angrily ordered the sheriff to bring the old man to the bar for a reprimand and perhaps a fine. When he reached the bar he said, 'Jedge, I didn't mean no harm. I was the man that built this courthouse and that darned jail out thar and I jest thought I had a right to joke with the boys a little.' Everybody in the courtroom smiled and the judge courteously shook hands with the old man and had him take a seat inside of the bar and during that whole term he had a seat of honor in that courtroom.

"He had built works he was proud of and the sentiment caught a ready response in the heart of the jurist and they became fast friends.

"All the world honors the honest worker in any useful line of activity and the whole world scorns the man who will not work, be he rich or poor. Only last week there was a meeting between one of the greatest engineers the world has ever known and a great representative of labor in the city of Washington. One was president of the United States and the other was the prime minister of England. Both attained their high rank among their fellow men by labor. We do not know what they talked about while visiting in the president's camp in the Blue Ridge mountains but it is safe to say that there was much said between them about their life work, the patient toil that brought to them the admiration of their fellow men.

False Values

"The old Jews of Bible times thought work a religious duty and they taught their sons some useful trade. The Savior was a carpenter; James and John were fishermen, and so was Peter. Paul was a tentmaker and worked at his trade while preaching the Gospel to the Gentiles in Europe. The Jews had a maxim that one who did not teach his son a trade raised a robber. And, by the way, I am not sure that this would be a pretty good maxim for American fathers today believing as I do that idleness is the greatest cause of crime in this land of ours.

"But we are living in an age of false values. While we honor and revere the useful worker, our highest pecuniary rewards go to those whose work contributes more to the amusement of the world than the uplift of humanity. A good screen actor or actress enjoys an income that would pay the salary of 50 college presidents or a score of the best preachers in the land. A baseball or football star is better paid than the chief justice of the supreme court of the United States and the governor of Texas thrown in for good measure. A successful pugilist who is able to paste the map of his native land upon the bloody face of his adversary and wear the championship belt gets more money for it than the writer of the best book or the painter of the best picture in the land. Our heroes of today too often are such men as Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Charlie Chaplin or Bill Hart.

"I do not want to be understood as condemning innocent amusement of any kind; workers need it and it is a valuable part of human life; but I do believe that we should spend more of our time and money for the upbuilding of the kingdom of God than we do for amusement, for it is of far more importance to this and the coming generations than the gratification of our desire for pastime.

"Useful work is the kind taught in the Bible. It may be the planning of a great railway system; the mastery of the details of a great factory; the running of a great mercantile business, or it may be the work of the humble man who shovels some dirt under a low joint and makes the track safe for the Golden State Limited and its passengers. It may be a work recognized by the world as great or it may be some little thing the world knows nothing about.

"The stern old apostle laid down to his converts at Thessalonica a rule that is expressed in the golden text of today, 'If any would not work, neither should he eat.' If this penalty should be enforced today there would be less vagrancy charges in the inferior courts. It is the motto of some that 'the world owes me a living' and such a penalty would be a sad surprise to such citizens.

"The half will never be told of what we owe to the workers of the past; the men and women who blazed the trails and made our civilization possible. I heard our fellow townsman, Mr. Kemp, pay a beautiful tribute to the pioneer men and women of our own city on the occasion of the old settlers' barbecue out at Ex-Mayor Marlow's recently. He told of the hardships of life here in the early days and of how bravely they overcame them and made possible this 'city that faith built' with all its advantages and conveniences and I thought of the debt of gratitude this generation owes them; a debt we can never pay I am sure but we can and will, I trust, emulate the example and work, work and carry on as the generations come and go.

"All honor to the man who works."

PLANE CRASH AT QUANAH

Ship Wrecked but Pilot Is Uninjured

Special to The Record News.
QUANAH, Texas, Oct. 20.—Quanah's first airplane crash resulted in a demolished plane, but only slight injuries to the pilot.

E. D. Pinnell and John Fleming of Pampa and Groom, Texas, had been at Quanah for several days carrying passengers in their Eagle Rock and Travel-Air ships. Last Saturday John Fleming made short landing and broke the propeller on his Eagle Rock ship, but was not injured.

The new propeller was put on the machine and Pinnell was taking the ship up for a try-out. When about 200 feet up, while climbing, the ship went into a tail spin and fell. Pinnell was badly cut and bruised but no bones broken. He was rushed to Quanah hospital, and will be discharged soon.

The ship was badly damaged, and souvenir hunters have carried off practically every part that could be removed.

The accident occurred just outside the city limits on the same field where the Ford 16-passenger trimotor plane made all passenger take-offs a few weeks ago.

Cable Manager Tells Of South American Growth

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—"The eyes of the world's industries are upon South America," according to John R. Hyland, United States cable manager for Western Union who has just returned from a tour of the southern continent.

South America has turned to the United States for a model in expanding its telegraph industry and has adopted the United States' idea for rapid communications just as Latin Americans are accepting our habits of dress, our automobiles and our chewing gum, Hyland pointed out.

DOOR SLAMMED ON DAN MOODY

Sheppard's New Proposal Eliminates Issue

By GORDON K. SHEARER
AUSTIN, Oct. 20. (UP)—Around Austin a door was heard to slam very loudly last week. It was a door slammed by U. S. Senator Morris Sheppard upon Gov. Dan Moody's possible entry into the next senatorial race.

More than a year ago, former Gov. James E. Ferguson made the prediction that Governor Moody would run against Senator Sheppard and probably win. Since Ferguson outguessed them all on constitutional amendments, his prestige as a predictor is high.

Governor Moody's chief strength in a campaign with Sheppard would be the Al Smith issue. Both supported Smith after his nomination but Moody had figured in a battle against the Smith forces at the Houston convention and he also vetoed the bill that would have put "Hoovercrats" out of the Democratic party.

Now Senator Sheppard is out with a proposal that makes him the dryest of the drys. It disposes of the only political issue that might have been effective between he and Governor Moody.

Moody never has said that he intends to run against Sheppard, but political observers here figured that was his logical step—if he intends to remain in politics.

GRAND SALINE FORGETS FARM

Leases, Royalties—Money —Dominate Talk

GRAND SALINE, Texas, Oct. 20. (UP)—Thirty years ago a cotton farmer and his young son dug a well on their little homestead. As the well filled, the water was covered with a blue film. Oil!

Today the little town of Grand Saline which, for more than 50 years has had but 1,500 population, was the capital of a new oil field, destined to take its place among the Borgers, Signal Hills and Seminoles.

After a week of production, the discovery well of the Van Zandt county field, No. 1 Jarman, drilled by the Pure Oil company, today was flowing almost 100 barrels an hour. Locations for a radius of 10 miles have been made. Leases for a radius of 20 miles have been purchased.

Simultaneous with the blowing in of the well, the influx started. Overnight Grand Saline's population jumped to 2,500. Today it was 5,000. Monday it will be 6,000. From all corners of the country, oil men—petrologists, roustabouts, promoters and lease buyers—"boomers," dancehall girls, confidence men and get-rich-quick merchants, have purchased railroad tickets reading "Grand Saline, Texas."

With the meager hotel accommodations taken and private homes filled, tents have sprung up on the outskirts of town. In spite of the determination of natives not to "go oil crazy," there is sudden wealth on the tongue of every person.

There is no talk of "boll weevils" and "early frosts." The by-words now are "leases," and eights, sixteenths "royalties."

The magic hand of oil, that so many times in the history of Texas has turned paupers into millionaires and struggling communities into centers of industry and commerce, has touched Grand Saline.

In an effort to encourage the routing of a projected Oklahoma City-Texas highway through Wichita county, F. R. Knauth, commissioner from the Burkburnett precinct, will join a group of Burkburnett and southern Oklahoma citizens attending a meeting of the Oklahoma state highway commission at Lawton Monday. Mr. Knauth will head the Texas delegation which will seek to bring the road through Burkburnett and on south through the county. His plans were announced here Sunday through John P. Marrs, county judge.

Shot Increases Flow Of Lubbock Gas Well

Special to The Record News

LUBBOCK, Texas, Oct. 20.—The Marland Oil company's Slaughter No. 1 test was shot late yesterday for the second time in the past several weeks and at a late hour an approximate volume of 2,500,000 cubic feet of gas was flowing, reports from the well state.

The test, located in Cochran county, 65 miles west of Lubbock, has attracted the attention of oil men since the discovery of a good showing of oil several weeks ago.

The shot yesterday was made at a depth of 4745 feet.

Regains Health After 2 Years Of Suffering

Lubbock Farmer's Daughter Declares Orgatone Only Medicine That Ever Brought Her Relief

Any person suffering from stomach trouble learns to expect keen distress after a meal. Headaches and dizziness are common symptoms and as restless night follows restless night, the body becomes so run-down that the sufferer is exhausted by slight effort. This can be corrected by proper treatment, as was learned by Miss Margaret Jones, living on rural route 2, Lubbock, Texas.

"About two years ago I began to have spells of stomach trouble," she continued. "I was operated on for appendicitis and ever since have been so generally run-down that what food I ate bothered me, and I suffered at night, also had liver trouble and had frequent headaches. I had the 'flu' about six months ago and all this helped to get me in a more serious condition.

"A friend recommended Orgatone to me and I began the treatment. In a short time I could see some improvements in my condition and I continued taking the medicine until my tired, exhausted feeling has disappeared and I have new ambition. I'm no longer troubled with indigestion, gas or sourness, but enjoy eating my meals. I sleep soundly and rise refreshed and rested in the morning. I have told some of my friends about Orgatone and they are taking it on my recommendation. Orgatone is certainly a good medicine and will do what they say it will."

VODVIL BILL JUST SO-SO

Dancers Should Not Sing, Opines Critic

By W. L. UNDERWOOD
The Record News Staff

Five acts of vaudeville delivered Sunday afternoon by the Keith Interstate circuit to assist Ann Harding's "Paris Bound" in providing two days of entertainment at the Majestic for local theater patrons played to a fair budget of customers but so far as could be observed, were never compelled to extend the performance past the scheduled time for completion.

Featuring the headline performance, "Chorus Ladies," was an element of very agile dancing which had the same virtue as the opening acrobatic number—a high degree of athletic technique, which drew a good hand. The act opened with exceeding promise of something unique presenting effectively costumed impersonations of Little Tom Horner, Kewpie, and other paper dolls, with lightsome dancing. The more prosaic idea of song and dance seen asserted itself, and the light went out.

Algebra Problems

Just why superb dancing should give the director the idea that the dancer must be allowed to sing remains, a problem in algebra, and most of us are miserable mathematicians.

In dancing which lost none of its appeal through being acrobatic rather than aesthetic or interpretative, Miss Marsh scored heavily through unquestioned excellence; and the solo soprano was highly pleasing in the only opportunity given for display of a good voice. A moment of snappy tap dancing also rose above the noisome medley that remained.

"A Frozen Romance" offered a redeeming degree of warmth. Chris Chisholm and Viola Breen enact a pleasing skit which imagines a honeymoon spent in Arctic loneliness. Clever repartees and refreshing burlesque aided the cabin's spooks in providing a lively quarter-hour of entertainment.

Besser and Balfour incorporated a number of wisecracks with Mr. Besser's loose-jointed clowning in short-stage patter. The title "Cigars and Cigarets" has nothing to do with the act, unless they helped Mr. Besser get his funny voice.

No Casualties

Billy Potter's "Rolling Home," with which the show opens, places three men in rapidly changing impossible positions in, on, around, through and near a chair and table one of them, of course, feigning an anti-Volstead stupor. It is fortunate none was hurt, for the folks at Fort Worth will want to see them.

Members of the club also were entertained with musical numbers by the Misses Evangeline and Kathleen Murray, who sang a group of vocal duets, with ukulele and banjo accompaniment.

Cars Stolen at Vernon Recovered by Police

Two automobiles stolen a few days ago in Vernon were recovered here Sunday by members of the police department, according to information given Sunday night by Chief of Police Frank Burns. A Buick sedan, stolen from J. W. Burpo at Vernon was placed again in the hands of its owner Sunday afternoon after Luke Hart, Pat Allen, and Jimmie Gonzales, members of the force, had found it abandoned on the city streets. The borrowers of the car had been thoughtful enough to leave the keys to the machine carefully tied to the steering wheel, Chief Burns reported.

The users of the second car, a Ford coupe, were not so considerate, J. B. Flenniken and Tom Poe having discovered it parked under the brow of the river bank, minus the tires.

MAJESTIC: Keith Interstate vaudeville, five acts. Ann Harding and Charlotte Walker in "Paris Bound," talking picture. Paramount silent news.

STRAND: "Our Modern Maidens," with Joan Crawford, Doug Fairbanks Jr., and Rod LaRocque. The title is slightly new. Walter Huston in "Two Americans." Grant and Lincoln artistically impersonated. Paramount sound news.

OLYMPIC: "The Hit of the Show." Comedy. Pathe news. Honey Hank Harris and company on the stage.

GEM: "The King of Kings," with H. B. Warner. Comedy.

Perusal of the motion picture line-up in the city for Monday will at once reveal that for talent in the cast and quality of performance, the Gem theater has outstanding superiority in "The King of Kings." H. B. Warner and Ernest Torrence have created no finer roles for the screen than their portrayal of Christ and Peter, respectively, in "The King of Kings."

⋄ ⋄ ⋄

Joan Crawford's luminous big eyes, Douglas Fairbanks Jr. in scintillating impersonations of his illustrious dad, and a more-or-less new trick for letting out the terrible secret about the young blonde—these are to be remembered from "Our Modern Maidens," now showing at the Strand. So far as the background and general run of the story is concerned, the blaring orchestra, polished dance floor, dishevelled bobs, and rich papa's palatial home look just about the same. But Joan did get all filled up with crazy inhibitions and set a new record for syncopated serpentine writhing while putting the charm on handsome Glenn Abbott (Rod LaRocque).

⋄ ⋄ ⋄

Douglas Jr. not only contributed a striking likeness of his father's "Robin Hood," but emulated with equal finesse the Dr. Jekyll-Edward Hyde impersonations of John Barrymore, and the crushing osculation of John Gilbert. The take-offs were bright spots in the performance as well as the screen party.

⋄ ⋄ ⋄

Now about the card which was briefly flashed on the screen when Kentucky was being forced to a show-down: the most probable conjecture is the director actually evolved a new trick for letting the awful truth be known. The little girl, discovered sewing on a tiny garment, no more will be used to reveal situations which are so requisite to tales of frantic youth.
