Carter 'Determined' To Curb Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, asserting his anti-inflation program "is exactly what the American people want," vowed Thursday that he is determined to curb inflation even if it proves politically disastrous.

Carter was asked at his nationally broadcast news conference whether he would risk being a one-term president by advocating government actions that could alienate many groups.

"I would maintain the fight against inflation," he said, adding that " ... I believe this is exactly what the American people want. Instead of being an unpopular act, I think it would be a popular act to maintain it."

No "Despair" Seen

Then, when later asked if the nation's economic problems meant Americans might have to accept a lower standard of living, he said, "I see no reason for despair at all."

Carter also said the mass murder-suicides at Jonestown, Guyana, were atypical of American life. And the president acknowledged he has been somewhat discouraged by the inability of Egypt and Israel to agree on a peace treaty.

Of the nation's economic woes, the president said, "We don't anticipate a recession or depression next year."

Some See Recession

A number of prominent economists have predicted a recession in 1979 as a result of Carter's wage and price guidelines which would generally limit wage and benefit increases to 7 percent and price increases to an average of roughly 5.75 percent. Alfred E. Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, recently quipped that he would substitute the word "banana" for "depression" in his future public statements.

Carter said details of his wage and price guidelines still have not been made final and that, while he has not yet made any changes in his overall program, "with a thousand different decisions to be made, there will be some flexibility."

Cult Not Typical

Carter also commented publicly for the first time about the deaths of more than 900 members of the Peoples Temple cult in Jonestown, Guyana, saying he didn't think the cult "was typical in any way of America.

"I don't think we ought to have an overreaction because of the Jonestown tragedy by injecting government into trying to control people's religious beliefs," Carter added.

Turning to the Middle East, Carter spoke more deliberately than at any other point during the 30-minute session with reporters. He said that "temporary setbacks" experienced in the Egyptian-Israeli negotiations were no more serious than those that occurred during the Camp David meetings that produced a framework for future accords.

However, the president said he was "somewhat discouraged" by the talks' slowdown and said that a lot of the negotiations between Israel and Egypt were "unfortunately conducted through the press."

Carter also said, in response to a question about MiG-23 aircraft in Cuba, that "we have no evidence at all, no allegations, that atomic weapons are present in Cuba."

He said the United States has been observing a model of the aircraft in Cuba since last spring, but had received assurances from the Soviet Union through diplomatic channels that no weapons shipments to Cuba will violate the 1962 agreement growing out of the Cuban missile crisis. The agreement prohibits the Soviets from introducing offensive nuclear weapons into Cuba.

Carter also acknowledged that he was "very concerned" about the trend to gain intelligence information through electronic channels to the detriment of other means.

On other issues, the president said:

—The administration has not shifted its nuclear policy away from an emphasis on deterrence of nuclear attack.

—While his administration continues to push for improved relations with China, "we don't have any intention of selling any weapons to either China or the Soviet Union."

—Responding to former President Richard M. Nixon's criticism of his human rights pronouncements, he said, "I think Mr. Nixon has the same right to speak out as any other American and it doesn't cause me any concern."

The president continued to voice support for the Shah of Iran, saying that he trusted the troubled leader to maintain stability in the Persian Gulf nation while continuing progressive change and increasing democracy there.

At the same time, Carter said, the United States had no intention of interfering in Iran's "internal affairs."

In preparing a budget for fiscal 1980, which begins next Oct. 1, Carter is striving to hold the federal deficit to $30 billion or less.

Goats As Lawnmowers Fine But Troublesome

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Americans in search of a bargain have been investing in an unconventional lawnmower that also provides milk and cheese.

Goats, however, also provide headaches for buyers who don't realize how temperamental the inflation-fighting pets can be, warns Donald L. Ace, a Pennsylvania State University dairy scientist.

While they are effective lawntrimmers, the goats also have appetites for rose bushes, vegetable gardens and tree bark.

And though the dairy products are wholesome and tasty, the nanny goats require daily care to keep the milk flowing.

Ace said new goat enthusiasts have too much spirit and too little knowledge.

"You'd be surprised how many people think they can just buy a goat, tie it up or let it roam in the backyard, romp with it occasionally and milk it when the feel like it," he said.

"However, the females (nanny goats) must be milked twice a day, and cared for on a regular schedule, every day of the year."

And you can't buy just one goat.

"Goats need companionship, mostly of another goat. Without it, they become upset, give little milk or even lay down and die of loneliness."

Ace estimates 4 million goats are kept nationwide, some by experienced goat ranchers, but others by enthusiastic but ignorant newcomers.

"Many people start with one goat as a pet-cum-dairy source," Ace said. "Soon they find they have to buy another goat to keep the first company. Whether they buy a male or later breed the female to keep her milk supply going, eventually they end up with some kids.

"They quickly become captivated by the kids' antics and haven't the heart to give them away. Before they know it, they've got more goats and milk than they know what to do with."

School Suit Damages Denied By Woodward

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

U.S. DISTRICT Judge Halbert O. Woodward has denied the $31.14 million in damages sought by plaintiffs in the class action lawsuit against the Lubbock school board's at-large election system.

Woodward said there is no basis for such a claim of damages "because the plaintiffs' complaint lacks allegations of bad faith or malicious intent on the part of the defendants in calling and holding at-large elections.

"It is the opinion of the court that the defendants are entitled to a qualified immunity from suit for money damages under (federal law) for official actions performed by them in good faith."

In an order signed Thursday, the judge granted a partial summary judgment requested by Lubbock Independent School District lawyers. The order addresses only the matter of damages, other issues in the case will be decided later.

In July, two black and six Mexican-American voters filed a federal-court suit claiming that the school board's existing at-large election process handicaps racial minorities in getting representation on the board.

At-large elections mean citywide voting with no reside ncy restrictions. The plaintiffs want Woodward to order adoption of a single-member district system, by which certain seats on the school board would be designated for particular geographic areas of the city.

West Texas Legal Services, representing the complainants, said plaintiffs "have filed this class action and seek to recover damages because the voting strength of the plaintiffs and the class of blacks and Mexican-Americans has been diluted, minimized or canceled" by the at-large voting method.

At-large elections violate minorities' constitutional and civil rights, result in an insensitive school board, perpetuate racial discrimination and subject minorities to "the indignity and humiliation of second-class citizenship," the plaintiffs said.

For damages, the plaintiffs asked that Woodward order the school board to pay each of the estimated 31,400 minority voters in Lubbock $10,000.

School attorneys argued, and Woodward agreed, that the "complaint nowhere alleges malice or bad faith on the part of the defendants. The defendant school board members enjoy a qualified immunity from suit for actions taken in good faith."

School lawyers also contend that the existing system does not discriminate against minorities. Minority voters "enjoy full access to the processes of nominating and electing trustees," the school system said.

At-large elections are "valid, viable and not racially motivated," and have resulted in minority representation on the school board, school lawyers said.

A similar suit pending against the Lubbock City Council for two years is scheduled to go to trial Dec. 11.

The school board presently includes six whites and one Mexican-American. The board's only black member was defeated in her bid for re-election in April.

Wreck Kills Lubbock Man

VERNON A. Turner of 1214 48th St. was killed and another Lubbock man seriously injured Thursday afternoon in a car-truck accident just south of Brownfield.

Turner, 74, died in Methodist Hospital about two hours after the 2:20 p.m. mishap that occurred at the intersection of South 14th Street and U.S. 62, just outside Brownfield city limits. Turner was a passenger in a vehicle driven by Alton H. Wilson, 71, of 3417 23rd St.

Wilson remained in serious condition with chest injuries at Methodist Hospital late Thursday.

Wilson's 1973 Mercury, apparently was heading south on 14th Street when it was in collisson with a pickup truck travelling northeast on U.S. 62, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

Donald Ray Blackwell of Amarillo, driver of the pickup, was uninjured, the DPS said.

Services for Turner are pending with Rix Funeral Directors.

Gift Exchange Funds Go To Goodfellows

GIVE AND share are words that symbolize the Christmas season and in Lubbock there are persons who believe in putting those words into action.

The employees of First Federal Savings and Loan Association are the embodiment of the spirit of giving and sharing today as they have donated $300 to Lubbock's Goodfellows program for needy children on Christmas morning.

This year, instead of purchasing gifts and exchanging them among themselves, the employees have donated the money they would have otherwise used for their Christmas gift exchange.

The employees at First Federal Savings and Loan Association decided this year to give in the Christmas spirit to those less fortunate than themselves and contribute to the Goodfellow program.

The Goodfellows, a group of anonymous men and women in Lubbock who began their work in 1934, carry Christmas to boys and girls of the city who might otherwise be missed by Santa Claus on Christmas Day.

The project, which expects to distribute 10,000 packages on the doorsteps of children this year, is designed for boys and girls under the age of 14 years who live within the city limits of Lubbock.

DAYS TO CHRISTMAS

West Texans Urge Interstate Highway

AUSTIN (AP) — Armistead Rust of the San Angelo Chamber of Commerce told the state highway commission Thursday it may be San Angelo's turn to get an interstate highway.

West Texans made a united presentation for an interstate highway from Lubbock through Lamesa and Big Spring to San Angelo.

The highway would follow U.S. 87 to San Angelo and Eden, then turn south on U.S. 83 to connect with Interstate 10 at Junction.

The 281-mile route first proposed in 1956 — would cost an estimated $455 million. A limited-access highway would cost approximately $254.5 million.

Lubbock Group Appears

Supporters included delegations or spokesmen from Lubbock, Lamesa, Big Spring, and Brady, as well as the Midland-Odessa complex, which is southwest of Big Spring and not on the proposed route. A letter was read from the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce, also supporting the proposal.

Rust, a rancher, said San Angelo does not have a main highway, railroad or airline. "We're very anxious to have some relief, to have a real super highway coming through San Angelo."

San Angelo, he said, is the second largest city in Texas that does not have an interstate highway passing through it. Wichita Falls was the largest, the last time he checked, he said.

"Most Economical"

"It is the shortest and most direct route" between Lubbock and San Angelo, said Rust, "and that's what makes it the most economical."

He said all but some 20 miles of the proposed U.S. 87 route is a multi-lane, divided highway.

The traffic count on U.S. 87 ranges from 1,000 to 8,880 vehicles a day, but Rust said the federal highway department has predicted the top figure will increase to 26,100 vehicles a day by 1995.

Rust said Central Texas and the Houston area "have a lot of interstates — maybe it's our turn to have one some out there (West Texas)."

Mayor Tom Parrett of San Angelo said, "We are a very expansive city, with tremendous growth, but we have a certain handicap with transportation."

Interest was expressed in the proposed route once it passes Eden, 44 miles east of San Angelo, by residents of Kerrville, Fredericksburg and Mason.

"I'm not endorsing anything south of San Angelo," said Rust. "I'd rather not get into that."

Commission Chairman Reagan Houston said, "I don't know any issue that has been more consistently before us ... I don't think there's any question of the importance of it, but it is a matter of ups and downs financially."

State Highway Engineer B.L. DeBerry said the department's 20-year plan allocates only $16 million to $17 million to improving the highway from Lubbock to Eden.

Nowhere near enough federal funds are expected to cover the cost, he added.

TICK STUDY GRANT MADE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has approved a $28,028 grant to help a team of University of Texas scientists find out what makes ticks tick. Scientists hope to "relate the genetic information to which hosts the ticks prefer and to econological conditions." If this can be done, they may find ways to curb ticks.

Visiting Solon Downgrades Carter, Aides

By KIM PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

U.S. REP. Shirley Chisholm had scant praise Thursday night for President Carter, calling his advisors parochial and unsophisticated, but added she had no intention of repeating her 1972 bid for the presidency.

In a question and answer session following a 45-minute speech at Texas Tech University, the country's first black congresswoman said she would "never again run for the presidency" after her historical try for the Democratic party nomination six years ago.

Mrs. Chisholm, the first woman from a major political to actively seek the presidency, said she saw her role in America as a "catalyst for change."

Followed Convictions

"When I considered running for the presidency I knew all hell would break loose. I felt it was important for people in this country to start thinking that some person other than a white male could run this great ship," she said.

Mrs. Chisholm labeled her initial effort as "planting a bulb for the future."

Although she said President Carter had "good intentions," she said most of the president's advisors were not the best.

"His advisors are very monolithic and parochial and they lack the background and sophistication to operate efficiently in Washington," Mrs. Chisholm said.

Inflation Plan Hit

She criticized President Carter's inflation plan calling for voluntary wage and price controls, saying, "it simply will not work." She also noted that allocations for human resource programs would be cut more disproportionately than other programs, but cited the move as "nothing unusual."

In her speech to about 300 people in Tech's Center Theatre, the New York congresswoman called for an end to pov-

Winning Team Uplifts School

LINDER MOSLEY says students who used to loiter get to class on time now. Willie Queenan notices fewer fights, more smiles. Jim Broome sees a special kind of unity. "There are no small groups anymore. We are one big group."

Football is one big reason why students and staff believe Estacado High is a better school this year.

"When your football team is losing, everybody complains, not just about the team, but about school, the cafeteria food — everything," said Miss Mosley, Estacado's head cheerleader.

"When your football team is winning, it's a whole different story. Students are enthusiastic, and school is a good place to be."

Estacado's team is indeed winning. Tonight the Matadors take their 10-1 record to Snyder for the quarterfinals of the Class AAA state playoffs.

That means a lot to a school, said student council president Queenan. And the spirit, he said, is expressed in more than just pep rallies, hallway banners and game attendance.

"Student morale is up, students are more unified. We can see more people getting involved in school activities. They're joining clubs and forming new organizations. They're volunteering to help with safety programs, blood drives, Christmas preparations," Queenan said.

"They are seeing that Estacado is more than a building. It's a family."

Football is by no means responsible for all of that, said Queenan and student activities director Broome. The student council, for instance, has initiated several efforts to raise school spirit and dispel student apathy.

But Matador mania — "football fever" — is definitely a contributor to the changes at Estacado this year.

"When school started in August, I saw several different groups but very little cohesion. There was no big thing all the students could identify with," Broome said.

"The attitude of a lot of students was, 'Yeah, I go to Estacado — so what?'

"But I noticed that as the football team kept winning, everybody came together. They suddenly had something in common: support that football team. Everybody started talking football, that was our uniting force," Broome explained.

Added Queenan: "A winning football team, a team that's going to state, really gives a school a shot in the arm."

Curtis Gipson, who is in his first year as Estacado principal, said, "The atmosphere of the school is altogether different."

"There's a tremendous increase in pride. Students feel good about their school — not just about the athletic team, but about school life in general."

Gipson said Estacado is "getting students involved who have never been involved before. Underclassmen, particularly ninth-graders, seem as if they've been a part of the school for years."

Carrol Thomas, Estacado vice principal, said it is a matter of success building upon success. "When the football team is doing well, this motivates other students. It causes more positive things to happen throughout the school."

The feeling extends into the community, too, Thomas said. Last Friday, a school holiday, a pep rally drew an estimated 1,000 persons — mostly Estacado students but many adults and even pre-high school youngsters.

The surge in school spirit, Gipson believes, is a "carryover from last year," when Estacado did well in basketball, drama and speech events. Success on the football field simply added greatly to the momentum, he said.

"Students are right when they say there's been a change at this school. There are a lot of factors — and no doubt

Nixon Takes Questions From British Audience

OXFORD, England (AP) — Richard M. Nixon, showered with jeers and applause, protesters' eggs and British courtesy, told a student group in this historic university town Thursday he has retired from politics but "I'm not going to keep my mouth shut."

"I feel as long as I have any breath in me I will speak up for what I believe," the former president told an audience of 800 in the hall of the prestigious Oxford Union debating society.

During a 90-minute question-and-answer session, Nixon was asked how he felt about being forced from office by the Watergate scandal.

"I screwed up," Nixon said. "I paid the price."

In his wide-ranging remarks, Nixon said that as president he had authorized wiretaps and break-ins to root out a group of Palestinian terrorists in the United States.

The former president arrived and departed from the 19th-century building through a battery of 500 noisy, egg-tossing protesters, both British and American students. During his 20-minute address on foreign affairs and the 90-minute question-and-answer period that followed, he frequently had to speak over angry chants of "We Want Nixon Dead!" and "No More Nixon!" from the demonstrators outside.

As he left, protesters waving placards — "Why Shame Us Here?," "Nixon, Crawl Back Into Your Hole" — grappled with 80 police officers who linked arm-in-arm in a vain effort to keep them from pounding on Nixon's black limousine.

One U.S. Secret Service man swung his fists wildly at the protesters as he lunged from side to side of the road and onto the roof of Nixon's car to guide it through the crowd.

Police said there were 10 arrests, but a police spokeman added, "On the whole, the demonstration was conducted in a good-humored way."

The ex-president, apparently unscathed by the egg barrage, seemed calm and cracked an occasional joke during his appearance inside the high-ceilinged hall. He fielded generally polite questions about, among other things, Vietnam, East-West detente and Watergate, the scandal that forced him to resign in disgrace four years ago.

At the end he received a one-minute standing ovation.

Climaxing a week-long trip to Europe marking his active return to international affairs, the pink-cheeked Nixon told the packed audience of Oxford University students and faculty:

"I have retired from politics but I have not retired from life.

"... I'm going to talk about the great issues that affect the world. I'm not going to keep my mouth shut."

He began by looking back over the 20 years since he last spoke to the Oxford Union, on Nov. 28, 1958, when he was vice president.

"How has the world changed — particularly whether you may grow up in peace and freedom?" he asked.

"Twenty years ago the United States and what we call the Free World had an enormous military advantage over the communist world, particularly in nuclear weapons ... Today in every area of the world the communist powers are extending their domination," he said.

During the question-and-answer session, Nixon disclosed that a group of Palestinian terrorists in the United States "which would have killed innocent people" was broken up by wiretaps and FBI break-ins he authorized during his administration. He cited this in answering a question about whether the office of the presidency corrupts the office-holder.

He said civil libertarians might object to the means used in that case but he believed they were necessary.

One questioner asked: "Is it true you chose Gerald Ford as vice president because you knew you would get a pardon for Watergate?"

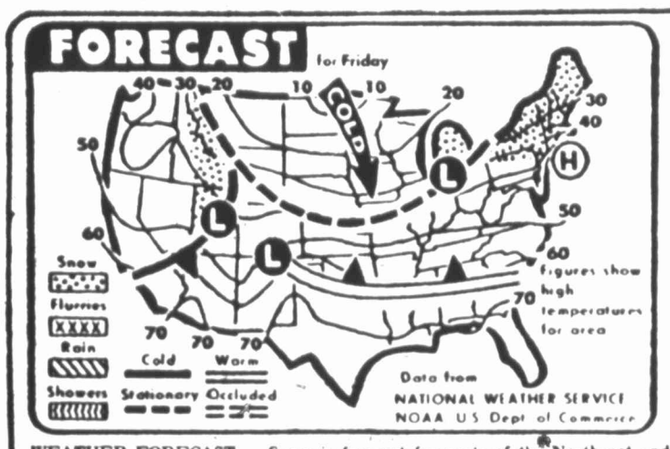

Nixon replied: "I chose him because I had known him for many years. We shared views on domestic and foreign policy issues, and I knew he would do a good job."

Another question: "Why did you invade Cambodia?" Answer: "I was doing what Gen. (Dwight D.) Eisenhower did when he invaded France in 1944 to destroy the German army ... I wish I'd done it sooner."

Asked by a student whether he regretted leaving office the way he did, Nixon confessed: "I did fail in the political arena — I failed to handle a little thing, Watergate, which became a big thing ... but when it comes to the great things, the China issue and relations with the Soviet Union, I think there is nothing to be ashamed of."

Finally one member of the audience, in what was to have been the last question, asked: "Have you ever been employed as a second-hand car salesman?"

Nixon didn't hear it. He put his left hand to his ear and said, "How is that?" The question was repeated but again he missed it. He walked down the central aisle toward the questioner and, leaning forward, asked for another repeat. But Oxford Union president Daniel Moylan, looking angry, intervened and gestured for another question.

Pleasant Weather To Linger In City; Front Due Saturday

Sunny, warm weather will hold for the Lubbock area through tonight before slowly giving way to increasing cloudiness and cooler temperatures Saturday.

No precipitation or frost conditions are expected to accompany a cold front's move through the South Plains Saturday.

The front, which is developing along and east of the Rockies, will edge into the area early Saturday, replacing today's expected high in near 70 with a reading only in the mid-50s. The mercury tonight will dip into the upper 30s.

Only six hours of sunshine are expected Saturday, compared to eight today, according to the National Weather Service.

Today's gusty southwesterly winds will shift to a northerly direction late Saturday.

The rest of the state is expecting continued fair and mild weather through tonight.

Except for some high cloudiness across the Panhandle, in far South Texas and along the coast, skies were clear Thursday. Late afternoon temperatures ranged from the 50s in the Panhandle to the low 80s in South Texas.

Iowa Escapee Seen On Hollywood Show

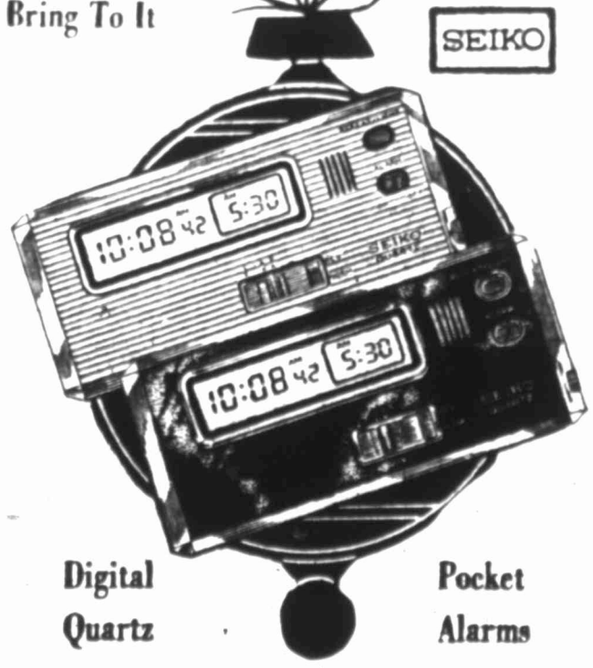

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — Investigators now know a little more about where James A. Shelton went after he escaped from the Davenport Correctional Center last year.

On Sept. 13, he was in Hollywood taping a session of the television program "The Dating Game." They know that because a former employee of the correction center recognized him when the program was broadcast here this month.

But the officials aren't much closer to catching him.

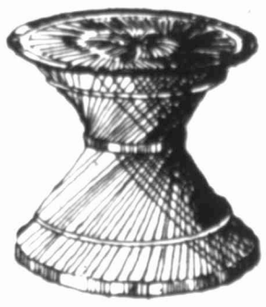

Using his real name, Shelton was competing for a date with a cheerleader for the Los Angeles Rams football team. He lost, and officials once again lost track of him.

Shelton, 26, from Rock Island, Ill., walked away from the prison a year ago after serving less than a month on a larceny conviction.

N.Y. Holiday Inn Blaze Ruled Arson

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Arson has been ruled the cause of a fire at a suburban Holiday Inn that claimed 10 lives and did $2 million damage, police said Thursday.

Town of Greece Police Chief Gerald Phelan announced the ruling at a press conference, but refused to say what led investigators to rule out other causes.

"I'd like to catch the guy who did this," he said.

More than 35 of Holiday Inn-Northwest's 183 guests were injured in the blaze that broke out early Sunday in a storage area and spread along hallways in both wings of the L-shaped building.

Authorities earlier had discounted the possibility of arson, but a laboratory investigation revealed that the storage area held no chemicals which could have ignited spontaneously.

CULTURAL FUNDING

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Japan has agreed to give nearly $23 million to set up a cultural fund for the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, a cultural attache to the Asian group said Wednesday.

Student Magazine Sparks Controversy

SOUTH WINDSOR, Conn. (AP) — A teacher whose remedial English class produced a magazine with tips on smoking marijuana and shoplifting says she does not condone the subject matter but feels the project was "an accomplishment of incredible magnitude."

In addition to articles like "How to Steal Ice Cream and Candy at 7-11" the magazine included advice on "How to Cook an Egg" and "How to Fish," noted the teacher, Wendy Evans.

She said the magazine, "Party Times," gave her ninth-grade students at Timothy Edwards School a feeling of accomplishment that may help keep them in school.

Three school board members criticized Mrs. Evans Tuesday night for allowing the controversial articles, but five members and the school superintendent supported the publication.

Mrs. Evans told the board the 14 students in her remedial English class are two years behind their grade level in writing and "have difficulty constructing a complete sentence, let alone a paragraph."

Their short attention span and high frustration level has prompted many of them to consider quitting school at 16, she said.

"For these students to have put together 14 pages of articles and advertisements is an accomplishment of incredible magnitude," Mrs. Evans said. "For them to see their written work in print gave them such a feeling of pride."

Mrs. Evans said only one parent contacted her about the magazine, and was satisfied with her response.

"How to Party," an article on marijuana smoking advised: "You find a place and get in a circle. Then you pull out a joint and light it up. You suck some in and hold it in. Then you pass the joint to the next person and wait 'til it comes back. That is how you party."

"How to Steal Corn Off a Pickup Truck" told readers: "You keep the driver talking on one side of the truck. Then your friend takes the corn in a bag and runs."

There were also interviews with teachers and editorials on minimum ages for driving, working and drinking.

Mrs. Evans said she did not specify topics when she asked the class to prepare articles, and she said she told them she did not condone some of the activities they decided to write about.

Maneuvers Called Threatening To Ancient Tombs

ROME (AP) — The ruins of an important 2,400-year-old Etruscan city and cemetery discovered in an army military zone are threatened by military maneuvers, archaeologists said Thursday.

At a news conference presenting a book on excavations at Norchia — the ancient Etruscan city Orcla — archaeologist Elena Colonna di Paolo, one of the authors, said 300 tombs carved into the steep, fragile tufa rock side of a hill were being weakened by firing and by movements of heavy transport in the military zone.

The 300 tombs, each different from the others, have a distinctive funerary architecture that belies the theory that rock tombs of this period were copies of houses, Mrs. Colonna said.

She said the city, calculated to have had a population of 1,300, was one of the most important inland Etruscan centers from the 4th century B.C. until the middle of the 2nd century B.C.

Norchia, 37 miles northwest of Rome, is at the center of a vast uninhabited hilly area set aside as a firing range for the army.

AN EDITORIAL:

Plucked CIA Home To Roost

A REPORT OF the past few days that President Carter is upset over the failure of U.S. intelligence sources to foresee the political unrest in Iran is a sad commentary on the state of things, if not intelligence, in the nation's capital.

According to a report in The New York Times, Mr. Carter has sent a handwritten complaint to CIA Director Stansfield Turner and others over the lack of advance knowledge of the Iranian uprisings.

The memo also reportedly was sent to Sec. of State Cyrus Vance and to Zbigniew Brzezinski, the President's assistant for national security.

THE FAILURE of the CIA to know exactly what was going on in Iran, or for that matter any place else in the world, should come as no surprise.

And as a matter of fact, according to The Times item, "the Iran episode is described as only the most recent of several cases in which the White House has questioned CIA performance.

For months now, not only certain members of Congress, numerous civil and human rights groups and the liberal eastern media, not to mention certain egghead members of the academic community, have been screaming about the alleged wrongs and excesses of the CIA and FBI.

We have no argument with the fact that indeed in some instances there were excesses by both agencies, particularly as they may have applied to domestic and political probes.

HOWEVER, WE have argued all along that to emasculate the Central Intelligence Agency and the FBI to the point where they are ineffective does nothing but play into the hands of foreign and domestic enemies.

Recently, when former Sec. of State Dr. Henry Kissinger was speaking in Lubbock, he made a major point of saying that "emasculation" of the CIA had put the U.S. in an untenable position in relation to gathering of needed data, particularly in the volatile Mideast.

If the Times report is accurate, it would seem that Mr. Carter fully agrees.

NOW, THE next big question is what to do about it.

The first step, it would seem, would be for the President himself to set about rectifying as quickly as possible some of the damage done by the "do-gooders" and far-out fringe groups which always seem to be worrying, at taxpayer expense, about Third Worlders, terrorists and the Communists rather than the welfare of this nation.

We, and the critics of the CIA and FBI, seem to forget that both organizations served this nation well for a long period of time. As for infringement on personal liberties, the free press faces a far graver danger from recent court rulings and the threat of police seizure of confidential records than it ever has from the CIA or FBI.

AN EDITORIAL:

Double Whammy On Economy

THE AMERICAN consumer, in the midst of Christmas buying, got a double jolt of bad news the past few days.

On one count, the Labor Department announced the obvious, living costs are still rolling along at near double digit inflation.

On the other, the Commerce Department said that the nation's trade deficit was larger than anticipated for the month of October. In the background, looming closer, is the almost certain prospect of another price boost by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

ALL THREE ITEMS combined to depress the Stock Market and put a further brake on the recovery of the dollar in overseas money markets.

But, closer home, the fact that the root causes of the nation's economic woes, along with continued federal spending, are not improving again is taking over the spotlight, temporarily shoving aside pressing foreign matters in the Mideast and Iran.

Unfortunately, the continued unrest in those areas is playing a role in the nation's overall problems.

THE BAD NEWS on the cost of living front was punctuated by a continued rise in the price of many basic food items.

Hikes in beef, poultry and pork prices in October helped push consumer prices up .8 percent for the second straight month, a rate of 9.6 percent if averaged over a year.

And while President Carter and some members of the administration continue to see an eventual upturn, the President's new chief inflation adviser, Alfred Kahn, used words most people can understand. He called the new figures "God-awful."

PUT IN LANGUAGE the wage earner can understand, the Consumer Price Index passed the 200 mark for the first time in October, 200.9 to be exact.

That means it costs $200 today to buy what $100 would buy in 1967.

As we have noted previously, the public now perceives the basic cause of inflation to be the real culprit, the heavy involvement of the federal government in almost every facet of life.

A sharp reduction in the federal budget, deferral of the Social Security tax increase and a brake on the infusion of new money into the economy, all would serve to help put the brakes on. It's far past time.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Public Right To Know Shackled By Unionism

WASHINGTON—The Biblical adage suggests the folly of those who would strain at a gnat and swallow a camel.

A similar inconsistency has marked the sages of the newspaper industry who have been busy of late combatting relatively small (though arguably important) dangers to freedom of the press, while swallowing a massive threat of total compulsion that can put them out of business altogether.

That total compulsion, of course, is the practice of coercive unionism and the strike threat sanction that enforces it.

This anomaly has recently been apparent in the case of the New York Times, which fought a tortuous court case at immense expense to defend the right of reporter Myron Farber to withhold materials pertaining to a murder trial.

THE CASE BECAME a cause celebre, even though the right contended for was cloudy in its application, and even though the functioning of The Times would have been affected imperceptibly, if at all, had the materials in question been surrendered.

As squabbling on this issue reached a fever pitch, meantime, other events were unfolding which affected The Times in something more than marginal fashion:

The paper was shut down altogether by a strike of its pressmen and other sympathizing unions for a period of 88 days.

For almost three full months, that is, New York City and the nation were deprived of the New York Times entirely, as well as of the New York News, and, for much of the period, the New York Post.

AND WHILE there was plenty of comment about this situation, nobody seemed to think there was a civil liberties issue involved. This kind of thing keeps happening all the time.

As I write, the newspapers of St. Louis have been shut down by a pressmen's strike.

Three years ago the Washington Post, which not too long before had triumphed over a President of the United States, was put out of commission by vandalism to its presses, then forced to appear as a shadow of its former self because of a protracted strike.

It's probable that the rigors of compulsory unionism have done more to injure freedom of the press in the United States than all the endeavors of hostile judges, attorneys and government bureaucrats combined.

FOR SOME REASON, the media spokesmen who have battled hammer and tongs for the "right to know," the validity of shield laws and other similar concepts have watched with relative equanimity as labor difficulties have taken their toll of media freedoms.

The source of the paradox is plain: The reigning ideology, in the national media at least, has been friendly to the union movement, and to the practice of compulsory unionism.

Many journalists have therefore looked the other way to avoid observing the obvious conflict between such practices and freedom of the press. By slow degrees, however, the message is getting through.

In the current issue of Esquire, managing editor A.M. Rosenthal of the New York Times is quoted as saying with respect to the recent strike:

"THE GOVERNMENT can't close us down, the government can't keep a paragraph out of The Times, but these people could."

Which is the point that some of us who have opposed the practice of the compulsory unionism in the media have been trying to make for years, in print and in the courts.

The fact of the matter is that "these people" not only could close down the New York Times, they did—and could do the same for other communications outlets in the United States at almost any time they choose.

Until that anomaly is faced and dealt with, friends of media liberty will continue to strain at gnats and swallow camels.

'I Don't Intend To Lose This Fight'

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Feeding Soviet Spies

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Official suspicion is rising that Soviet KGB (intelligence) agents are surreptitiously using the Freedom of Information Act to pry secrets out of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), a development causing deep consternation in the intelligence community and among friendly foreign intelligence services that cooperate with the U.S.

Originally passed in 1967 and strengthened in 1975, the act invites anyone, not just citizens or resident aliens, to poke around the inner recesses of the CIA for "information" that is not classified as "national defense or foreign policy" secrets.

But the expanding volume of requests has now reached the point that, as one intelligence operative told us, "mistakes are unavoidable under the act and sometimes secret stuff gets cleared."

The CIA alone has consumed 109 man-years of work meeting the insatiable demand, now coming in at a rate of 85 requests per week with a 10-day response deadline.

Knowing in each case what is "security" information and what is not demands a high degree of experience.

Adding to the problem is the burden it is putting on friendly intelligence services abroad—and on U.S. businessmen who cooperate with the CIA.

Concern over their exposure under terms of the act has drastically reduced this cooperation.

Now in the works is a major effort to close this loophole by a change in the law.

One modest change, though far from satisfactory to the CIA, would follow the language of another new law—Privacy Act—and limit requests under the Freedom of Information Act to U.S. citizens and resident aliens.

WHITE HOUSE political aides are blocking the appointment of Dr. Wesley Posvar, 52, the chancellor of the University of Pittsburgh, to run the new civil defense program.

Despite Pentagon and other official support for Posvar, a West Point graduate and Rhodes scholar who took his Ph.D. at Oxford, Jimmy Carter's political aides want the job to go to a partisan Democrat with political ties to the President.

The growing list now includes one ex-governor —Mike O'Callaghan of Nevada—and one lame-duck governor, Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts.

Another contender is William H. Wilcox, former aide to Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp and now head of the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration which will be wrapped into the new Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) along with civil defense.

POSVAR'S CREDENTIALS include the quiet support of Paul Nitze, a frequent critic of Carter on strategic defense questions and one of the prime movers for a serious civil defense program.

Posvar's Oxford classmates included CIA Director Stansfield Turner and Gen. Bernard Rogers, the Army chief of staff.

Carter, who has not yet been brought into the fight over who should run the new civil defense program, wants a strong hand at the helm to dispel liberal Democratic attacks that his $1.75 billion civil defense program is a farce aimed only at appeasing critics of the expected new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT).

In point of fact, Carter personally telephoned Bardyl Tirana, the Defense Department official mainly responsible for the new program, on May 8, 1977, to ask for immediate studies of the immensely expensive Soviet program and for a U.S. response.

That was long before he had given thought to lining up support for a new SALT treaty.

EVER SINCE THE angry, surprised reaction in the White House over revelations of Soviet MIG-23 attack-bombers in Cuba, the aircraft have been kept "under cover" to avoid their being photographed by high-flying U.S. surveillance spy planes.

Carter ordered the surveillance about 10 days ago to double-check Pentagon findings that the MIG-23s now in Fidel Castro's Cuban air force are similar to the type deployed in the Warsaw Pact arsenal as front-line Soviet nuclear-delivery planes.

Pentagon analysts are certain that the Cuban planes are, indeed, the "dual-capable" type that can be "wired" for carrying nuclear bombs (although no accusation has been made here that the planes are equipped at this time for nuclear delivery).

As long as the planes stay under cover, U.S. efforts at positive identification of the MIGs will probably be frustrated.

But Carter will insist on getting that information to determine whether the presence of the MIG-23s in Cuba violates the Soviet 1962 pledge not to send Cuba "offensive" weapons.

ANDREW TULLY:

Libs See No Rape

WASHINGTON—Apres ERA, the deluge? All I know is that lawyers from Sebago, Me., to Honolulu are rubbing their hands—and not to keep them warm.

Now that Congress has changed the rules and given the "equal rights" libbers an additional three and a half years to get the amendment ratified, its okay by the required 38 states is virtually assured.

I can hardly wait to see the first female arrested for falling behind in her alimony payments.

My candidate for the defendant in the first alimony case is the sometime superb actress Jane Fonda.

Jane is always bleeding for the poor and the oppressed, and it would seem the chances are good she will marry some guy merely because she feels sorry for his poverty. Zap!

COMES THE DAY when the guy is tired of asking wealthy Jane for spending money and wins a divorce. Please, let me be on hand when the judge orders Jane to pay her former mate a thousand clams a day alimony.

I wish to observe Miss Fonda's facial expression on Der Tag because she was in the forefront of the crusaders who pushed through ERA over the craven bodies of what passes for our Congress.

Anyway, femlibbers, that's the way it's going to be. You want equal rights, you're going to get them. Right in the mush.

What ERA says is that henceforth "equality of rights under the law" shall not be denied or abridged on account of sex. The concept is eminently fair.

THE PROBLEM is that that brief amendment is too concise, too all-inclusive. It will bring peace between the sexes like the 18th Amendment stopped the flow of booze.

I always have maintained that Congress would pass a law legalizing rape if there were enough votes in it. It has done just that. ERA nullifies all laws against sex crimes.

Thus, since the amendment contains no specifications or exceptions, it means neither a man nor a woman can be punished for a sexual assault.

Predictably, the femlibbers have taken a step back on this issue. Their mouthpieces depose that any crime based on a woman's unique physical characteristics would still be punishable.

IS IT POSSIBLE they have not bothered to read ERA?

It says an individual's physical architecture is not to be used as a basis for giving her or him —or it—privileges in any fashion different from that accorded to a member of the oppposite sex.

ERA also wipes out all "protective" legislation for female workers. For example, a woman no longer would be forbidden to lift objects heavier than a stated weight—35 pounds in most instances.

It would permit women to work in coal mines and work at night. The custom that mothers are to be preferred in child custody cases would be outlawed.

To the delight of lawyers everywhere, Prof. Paul Freund of Harvard, a celebrated constitutional scholar, has said ERA "will open a Pandora's Box of legal complications." Pandora, it may be noted, is not a man's name.

JAY HARRIS:

A Family Portrait

WHAT MEANS the most to Americans today?

What sort of life do most of us yearn for, seek, think we have? How important is family life, health, religion, money, sex, love, job satisfaction?

The answers to these questions to a great degree help determine the attitude of millions toward themselves, their relatives, co-workers and bosses, political leaders, leisure, religion.

At the root of it all lies the values we place on how these things fit into the final scheme of things, how we view life itself, the God or gods we worship.

The nation a few days past marked the observance of National Family Week, culminating in the traditional observance of Thanksgiving. Although millions "participated" in the week, few were aware of it.

BUT, IF WE are to take a recent nationwide poll at face value, the family, whether one unit or a houseful, is still a vital factor in American life, fragmented as it may be. And it is around the family that much of our lifestyle is still centered.

Proof of this, to a degree, has been given recently in a Louis Harris survey on what Americans find most important and satisfying in their lives. The study examined what it is in U.S. society that means the most to most of us. The answers, in some respects, were contradictory.

According to those who take the polls, the three things which most Americans say are the most important to them are family life, health and peace of mind. The same survey puts money, sex and romantic love at the bottom of the list.

In view of what seems to motivate millions, the three basics on the one hand as opposed to the pursuit of the latter three on the other, there appears to be a massive conflict of interests!

ACTUALLY, THE "conflict" is one of perspective perhaps more than anything else.

What many yearn for and say they would be satisfied with is not what they have. What they say they place last in the matter of priorities is what many actually seek. In other words, a lot of people may be kidding themselves. But, let's hear it from the survey...

Across the board, a substantial 92 percent of those surveyed say family life is "very important" to them. And surprisingly, 67 percent say they are satisfied with the way their family life is going.

Good health rates high with 97 percent of those studied. But a sharply lower 54 percent say they are not satisfied with the state of their health, which accounts for so much interest in everything from jogging to dieting.

PEACE OF MIND is a phrase which can mean about as many things as there are people.

In the study, an impressive 91 percent of the populace rates peace of mind among the three top priorities. Yet, only 52 percent say they are really satisfied with their peace of mind.

Those who delve into such things may find a clue to the disparity in the answers given to some other queries.

For instance, 60 percent of those surveyed say that work is important to them, but only 43 percent find their jobs fulfilling. A hefty 69 percent feel education is important, yet only 25 percent are satisfied with the education they have received.

Seventy-six percent say having respect from others is vital to their well-being. Sixty percent feel they have it. Seventy-one percent say it is important to have friends, and 64 percent of them are happy in this area.

WHAT ABOUT religion, money, sex, romantic love?

Well, the cynics will take some of the answers in this area with a grain of salt, we think.

Despite all the magazines on the subjects, all four items were "downgraded" in importance when the computer got through with the answers.

For instance, 58 percent say religion is a very important part of their lives. And 57 percent are pleased with how they say religion helps them.

Thirty-eight percent report sex is very important to them, and 52 percent say they are highly satisfied in this area. A low 33 percent say romantic love is a big deal, but only 40 percent feel satisfied on this point.

And money? Forty-seven percent claim money is very important in their lives. Yet, only 25 percent are happy with their current incomes and mode of living.

ARE THESE typical answers from typical family-oriented people?

If you asked a child to draw a picture of a typical family today, he or she might sketch a mother, a father, several children and perhaps a dog or a cat.

There are millions of prototypes of this scene, of course. But, today's "traditional" nuclear family, with a working father, a homemaking mother and dependent children, is the exception rather than the rule.

According to the U.S. Statistical Abstract, only 15.9 percent of all households fall into this category.

The family today comes in a variety of shapes and sizes: 18.5 percent include both a working father and working mother, plus one or more children at home; 30.5 percent consist of married couples with no children or no children at home; 6.2 percent are headed by women who are single parents; 20.6 percent are single-person households, of which women over 65 comprise almost a third. Just for the record, there are 2.5 percent unrelated persons living together.

Perhaps the answers in the survey indeed are correct. We would hope so. But, the nagging question remains: Is what we say we want what we really seek?

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

Q. "HOW MANY of the new TV shows make it to a second year?"

A. About one out of three, on the average.

Q. "How many medals were awarded to the late Audie Murphy, this country's most decorated hero of World War II?"

A. Twenty-eight.

When umbrellas were first introduced into this country in the 1730s, numerous religious souls objected to them mightily. Especially, the Quakers. Guess I just don't have enough information to understand why? Do you?

Stuttering is eight times more frequent among men than among women. So is color-blindness.

A farmer sent his nephew a crate of chickens but the crate burst open just as he started to take them out.

He wrote his uncle, "I chased 'em through my neighbor's yard but I only got back eleven."

"You did alright," wrote back the uncle, "I only sent you six."

Nixon Wiretap Remark Evidently Cited Palestinian Terrorists

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI said Thursday that Richard Nixon's statement that he approved wiretaps and break-ins against Palestinian terrorists in the United States apparently referred to a 1973 case which led to the arrest of several persons accused of planning bombings.

But FBI spokesman Otis Cox said in response to questions that he could not determine whether wiretaps and break-ins were used in the course of the New York investigation.

The former president referred to the case while answering questions from Oxford students after making a speech at the English university.

He said the Palestinian terrorist group known as Al Fatah "had established a network in the United States" and had planned terrorist acts in this country.

"That group was apprehended, it was broken up in the United States through what was called wiretapping and break-ins by the FBI," Nixon said.

Noting that civil liberties groups criticized the widespread use of electronic surveillance by his administration, Nixon continued, "Wasn't it worthwhile under those circumstances where we had a foreign-controlled group of radicals who were threatening to kill Americans in a certain area — shouldn't the president and his attorney general, and his director of the FBI, weren't they justified in approving the extra means that were necessary to break it up?"

The FBI spokesman said the 1973 investigation led to the arrest in New York in March of that year of several persons who identified themselves as members of Al Fatah.

He said they were accused of planning to bomb businesses owned by supporters of Israel. Cox said he had no information on the disposition of the case or the names of those arrested.

Because of the vagueness of Nixon's remarks, FBI and Justice Department officials could not say which case he was talking about.

Department officials recalled that L. Patrick Gray, acting FBI director during part of the Nixon administration, once testified about an investigation of alleged Arab terrorists in Texas.

And a Detroit lawyer, Abdeen Jabara, is pursuing a civil suit against the FBI for using allegedly illegal wiretaps against him when he represented a group of Arab students in the United States and an organization of Arab university graduates.

In the New York case, Cox said he didn't know whether electronic surveillance was used in the investigation. But FBI procedures at that time would have allowed wiretapping and bugging of the group if the attorney general approved.

No court warrant would have been necessary in the investigation but then-Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst may have informed him of developments.

Prosecutor Says Informant Feared Violence

HOUSTON (AP) — A prosecutor revealed Thursday that FBI informant David McCrory thought he might have to kill Cullen Davis after the millionaire defendant almost exposed an FBI surveillance operation.

"He was scared to death," chief prosecutor Tolly Wilson told a reporter outside the courtroom where Davis is on trial on a murder conspiracy charge.

"He really thought he was going to have to kill Davis when Davis looked in the van," Wilson said. "He thought Davis had caught him."

Several state witnesses told previously how Davis approached, circled and rapped on an undercover van moments before a fateful meeting last August with McCrory.

Four agents were huddled in the unmarked vehicle monitoring and videotaping a parking lot rendezvous in which Davis allegedly gave McCrory a cash payoff for the killing of a state judge.

Prosecutor Wilson's disclosure came late Thursday after Texas Ranger James Hogg testified that McCrory was emotionally distraught and in tears minutes after his betrayal of Davis.

"He was visibly shaken, his cheeks wet with tears," Hogg said. "He was driven up (upset)."

Defense lawyer Phil Burleson told newsmen he "nearly puked" when he heard Hogg's testimony about McCrory's demeanor.

"...If ranger Hogg is correct in that regard," Burleson declared, "McCrory deserves the Academy Award."

The ruddy-faced, sandy-haired Ranger testified McCrory met him on a restaurant parking lot after the Aug. 20 meeting with Davis and asked simply for a glass of milk.

"Come on, I'll drink some milk, too," Hogg said he told the onetime pool-shooting and drinking companion of Davis.

McCrory was wired for sound at the meeting in which Davis allegedly handed him a $25,000 bounty earmarked for a non-existent killer.

Ranger Hogg took possession of the alleged payoff money only moments before his milk-drinking episode with McCrory.

It was all part of an FBI trap that led to Davis's arrest on a murder conspiracy charge.

A state witness testified earlier that FBI fingerprint experts found nothing to link the defendant to the stack of $100 bills confiscated that Sunday morning.

"Mr. Davis's prints were negative on every item," district attorney's investigator Morris Howeth told the jury.

Prosecutors showed jurors the two-inch pile of $100 notes the state claims Davis gave McCrory for the murder of divorce Judge Joe Eidson.

The Fort Worth judge was not harmed.

Howeth testified the FBI examined each of the 250 bills and three envelopes allegedly handled by Davis but found no fingerprints belonging to the Fort Worth oil heir.

"Were David McCrory's fingerprints found on any item surrendered to the FBI?" defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes asked the witness.

"His fingerprints were found on one of the three envelopes," Howeth replied.

"...on one envelope or on all three?" Haynes asked.

"I don't recall" Howeth snapped. "I wasn't concerned about Mr. McCrory's fingerprints.

Howeth also testified that tests conducted with an ultraviolet lamp failed to turn up traces of fluorescent powder in the defendant's Cadillac.

FBI agents sprinkled the powder across the back of a photograph which McCrory said he handed Davis Aug. 20 as "proof" that Judge Eidson had been shot to death.

"That's the way it goes," shrugged prosecutor Jack Strickland, when asked about the negative testimony.

But he insisted again that it is the FBI sound and visual recordings of that parking lot encounter between Davis and McCrory that forms the crux of the state case.

"The tapes stand on their own merit and nothing the defense does can diminish their effect on the jury," Strickland said.

The Aug. 20 recording ends with McCrory saying, "I have got the money. He has got the gun." and the jury has now seen both, the money and the silencer-equipped pistol recovered from the trunk of Davis's car.

Howeth said the money has been in his "care, custody and control" since the morning of Davis's arrest.

While on the stand he removed the currency from a black attache case and on instructions from Strickland, silently counted through the bundle of bills.

"How much is there?" Strickland asked.

"$25,000" Howeth replied.

"Pass the money without comment," the judge told the jurors.

Outside the presence of the jury, Haynes asked Howeth about his conversations with a Fort Worth man jailed on narcotics violations.

"Did anybody in the DA's office cut any deal in exchange for testimony from Randall Craig...against Cullen Davis?" Haynes asked the investigator.

"No sir," he responded.

The judge refused then to permit Haynes to pursue that line of questioning before the jury.

Highway Said To Threaten Austin Refuge

AUSTIN (AP) — Construction of Loop 360 west of here threatens Wild Basin wilderness area — 300 acres where "silence can be heard," the state highway commission was told Thursday.

Preservation of the area, four miles from the Capitol, attracted national attention as Texans donated some $175,000 to save it from development.

That money is being matched by the federal government, said Janet Poage, and 100 acres are now available. There is money to buy all 300 acres.

The Parks and Wildlife Department designated the land as the most important natural urban area in Travis County and the 10th most important in Texas.

"Thousands of Texans ... have made this an almost emotional cause," Mrs. Poage told the three-member commission.

A narrated slide show described the area as a "miniature outdoor living museum," with more than 400 species of Hill Country plants — "many found nowhere else in the world" — and two rare birds, the Golden Cheeked Warbler and the Black-capped Vireo.

It is a place, the narration said, where "serenity can be a way of life."

Brother Of James Earl Ray Denies 'Raoul' Link

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jerry Ray, the brother of James Earl Ray, denied Thursday that he is the mysterious "Raoul," named as an alleged accomplice in the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr.

The House assassinations committee had said it appears likely that Raoul was either Jerry Ray or John Ray, another brother of James Earl Ray, who is serving a 99-year prison term for the famed civil rights leader's slaying.

Nearing the conclusion of its two-year investigation, the committee confronted Jerry Ray with indications that he met and talked several times with brother James in the months immediately preceding the April 4, 1968, assassination in Memphis, Tenn.

James Earl Ray pleaded guilty to the murder but then recanted his confession, saying he was drawn into the assassination plan by a man he identified only as Raoul. He has described a series of contacts with Raoul in the months leading to the assassination. During this period, James Earl detailed his travels from Los Angeles, to New Orleans, to Montreal and to Mexico.

James Earl also told various persons along the way of various contacts with his brother, although he didn't specify whether the contacts were with Jerry or John. The committee has compared the Raoul meetings with contacts Ray had with one of his brothers. And the panel said there are some striking similarities.

"When you come down to it, the Raoul theory that seems to fit is that the mysterious accomplice might actually be one of Ray's brothers, Jerry or John, or a composite of the two of them," said G. Robert Blakey, chief committee counsel.

"It seems to be true that each point where James' movements or his funding during the fugitive period are explained by James by reference to Raoul, one of the brothers is ... either on the scene or in contact with James," Blakey added.

In his testimony under oath, however, Jerry Ray said he believes James may have described contacts with his brother as a means of avoiding any reference to Raoul.

"Raoul is still out there," he testfied.

Wearing a bright red shirt and tie and nervously puffing on a cigarette, Jerry Ray appeared under a grant of immunity which prevents prosecution for his testimony.

He had previously denied to the FBI that he saw James after his brother's escape from the Missouri State Prison on April 22, 1967.

But on Thursday, Jerry acknowledged seeing his brother, who had escaped from prison, three or four times during the period leading to the assassination.

But when asked about allegations that he was in frequent contact with James Earl, including a conversation the day before the assassination, he declared, "I could not have been in all those places even if I was the Bionic man."

Jerry Ray said he is now employed by J.B. Stoner, head of the segregationist National States Rights Party, a job that Ray said he took because the FBI had him fired from a previous position.

Before Ray testified Thursday, committee lawyer Mark Speiser told him, "We have received information of an incriminating nature that you might be involved as a co-conspirator or otherwise in the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr."

The committee has said James Earl Ray's travels appear to have been financed by an unsolved 1967 bank robbery in Alton, Ill. in which there is some indication that all three Ray brothers took part.

On Thursday, Jerry Ray denied any roll in the holdup and in a subsequent bank robbery about which committee lawyers say they have testimony that both John and Jerry Ray were participants.

Jockeying For Vacated County Position Begins

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Anyone who thought politics was over for a while in Lubbock County did not figure on the post-election resignation of Tax Assessor-Collector Russell Hardin and the maneuvering that would be involved in appointing his successor.

Hardin, 73, who also was appointed in March 1955, and has held the office longer than anyone, last week gave Lubbock County commissioners notice he will step down Dec. 31 with two years left in his term.

He recommended his chief deputy, Bill Nelson, for the appointment, and Nelson submitted his application to County Judge Rodrick Shaw the same day.

Two Lubbock political figures with apparently sizable constituencies also were either in the running or preparing applications for the $24,500-per-job.

Charles Smith, Precinct 1, Place 2 justice of the peace for the past nine years, is in the process of making out an application replete with position paper on various tax issues and planned to turn it in late this week.

Former State Rep. Delwin Jones, an unsuccessful Democratic primary candidate for the state senate this year, filed an application Thursday afternoon.

Shaw and the four commissioners will make the appointment. They have set Monday as the deadline for applications and set a 9 a.m. Tuesday meeting to examine them.

Commissioner Alton Brazell had been rumored to be interested in the post. Brazell said, however, that the rumor was without basis and that he never considered applying.

Smith said he is not only going after the appointment with both hands, he intends to run for the office in 1980 if the commissioners court gives it to somebody else.

He does not expect a recent squabble over his request for another secretary to enter into the deliberations, though.

"I think the commissioners will appoint the right man regardless of how they might feel toward me," Smith said, adding he feels his record as justice of the peace is in his favor aside from his dispute with the court.

Smith had threatened not to take on any more new businesses wanting hot checks collected if the commissioners didn't give him more office help, and the court later approved the hiring of one additional secretary for Smith and Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy.

Smith called a news conference to protest the reluctance of the court and threatened the slowdown. A number of individuals in his precinct supported him in letters to the court.

Smith, a key backer of Criminal District Attorney-elect John Montford in the Democratic primary last spring, said he and some political allies were readying his application.

One of his stands, he said, will be on property tax equalization.

"I feel that I can raise a third more revenue for the county by equalizing taxes," he said, adding that he would also expect a tax reduction from the current 78 cents per $100 valuation by "maybe a nickel to 73 cents or 72."

Jones, a representative from 1964 to 1972, issued a general statement on operating the office.

"I feel like any public office should have its prime emphasis on efficiency, economy, a business-like operation," Jones said.

"I feel that each citizen should feel that the office literally belongs to him, the taxpayer, and should be treated with courtesy and respect at all times."

Chief deputy Nelson thinks the office has "done quite well considering that we've been short on employees and very short on salaries down through the years."

He said there have not been enough properly trained workers to handle peak periods as well as they should have been handled or to keep property tax valuations equal over the county.

"In general, we have had personnel only to keep up with new improvements, and we have been real short on that," Nelson said.

"We cannot recruit employees under the current salary limitations; so you normally have to check what is new and the changes that come up that you can pick up with the limited personnel that you have.

"You do not have time to revalue or thoroughly check the parts of the county on which there are no permits. With the personnel we have, we barely have time to check the permits in the city."

He said the city does a revaluation every four years with "several times the personnel of the county."

Lubbock County has five appraisers who work in the office and some outside it and three more appraisers who work part-time.

Workers in the various departments are called away from their normal work to help during rush periods, however, Nelson said.

"With the tools they give us," he said, "we do the best job that we possibly can."

Hardin said the timing of his resignation was related only to an audit of his office which had not been finished before the election and not to the selection of a successor.

If he had resigned earlier this year, the issue could have been decided in the recent general election.

Hardin said he had been considering retirement, mainly because of his age and ample benefits built up through the county retirement program, but considered it crucial for his department to be given a financial clean bill of health before leaving office.

"I wouldn't have left it at all if it hadn't been in excellent shape," he said. "There was no gimmick."

An audit like the one just completed is done by an independent auditor about every three years, he said.

Hardin recommended Nelson, who has worked in the department for more than 25 years, as "a man who is admired and respected by every person that is employed in the tax office, a man who has high ideals and is honest, responsible and dedicated to serve in a capable manner."

Shaw said the court will aim at an appointment by mid-December so that the new assessor may arrange bonding and be ready to take office on Jan. 1.

The county judge said he had taken relatively few inquiries about the appointment.

"I've had some folks say when Russell retired they might be interested," Shaw said, "but none of them have been in yet. It's been very quiet."

He said that so far as he knew, the only legal requirement of an appointee is that he be a resident of Lubbock County.

Indirectly indicating what qualities he might look for in the new man, Shaw said Hardin was good in the office because he had a kind disposition and was well-mannered to taxpayers as well as being "a person of unquestionable integrity."

He noted that he alone makes appointments to fill vacancies among the commissioners but that the entire court is involved in replacing Hardin.

PEOPLE — PLACES — THINGS

Guitarist, Wife Divorce

LONDON (AP) — Rock guitarist Ronnie Woods of The Rolling Stones was divorced by his wife, Chrissie, on grounds of adultery with model Jo Howard.

RONNIE WOODS

Woods, 31, did not contest his 30-year-old wife's suit. They had been married seven years and have a 2-year-old son, Jesse James.

Miss Howard, 25, and Woods have been living together for two years. She had a daughter by him last month. She also has a 4-year-old son by a British textile dealer and is waiting for her divorce so she and Woods can marry. They recently moved into a mansion in Bel Air, Calif., formerly owned by swimmer-actress Esther Williams.

Royal Insult Trial Slated

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — For labeling Dutch royalty "Princess Emptiness and Prince Dull," a leftist weekly magazine is being taken to court for insulting the royal family.

The move followed a story in the magazine "Vrij Nederland" in which the references were to Crown Princess Beatrix, 40, and her husband, Prince Claus.

"Colorless," is the way the princess was described.

The decision to take action followed orders from Premier Andries van Agt. Penalties for insulting the royal family include a maximum jail sentence of five years or a fine of up to 600 guilders — $300.

Piano Testimony Heard

NEW YORK (AP) — Stephen Schwartz, composer of the Broadway hit "Godspell," played on a battered upright piano to open his testimony.

The second witness in the federal court trial was a musical expert, who listed among his credentials that he once wrote a tune called "I Got Tears in My Ears From Lying on My Back in My Bed While I Cry Over You."

The unusual testimony was produced Wednesday as U.S. District Judge Gerard Goettel opened the trial of a suit alleging the theme song of NBC-TV's "Today Show" was pirated from the "Day by Day," hit song from "Godspell."

Mrs. Truman Recuperating

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former First Lady Bess Truman has begun an exercise program at Research Hospital where she has been hospitalized since Nov. 20 for treatment for high blood pressure and stomach pains.

Mrs. Truman, 93, walked in her room for a short time Wednesday with the aid of a walker, a hospital spokesman said. She was listed in satisfactory condition.

Woman Found Guilty Of Welfare Fraud

COMPTON, Calif. (AP) — A 33-year-old mother of four was found guilty Thursday of perpetrating a $240,000 welfare fraud scheme, believe to be the largest such case in United States history.

Barbara Williams, accused of using eight different names for herself and claiming as many as 70 dependent children, was found guilty of 22 counts of welfare fraud and perjury. One count of perjury was dropped.

Compton Superior Court Judge Kenneth W. Gale issued the verdict in a non-jury trial and set sentencing for Mrs. Williams for Dec. 28.

Mrs. Williams remained free on $50,000 bail.

REGIONAL

ROUNDUP

Arts, Crafts Bazaar Set At Idalou

IDALOU (Special) — The Idalou Jaycee-Ettes Arts & Crafts Bazaar will be held from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday at Scout Hall in Idalou. The attractions will include exhibits by local and area artists, a bake sale raffle of Christmas stockings for children, small appliances, gift certificates and a concession stand.

Project profits will be used by the Jaycee-Ettes to provide a college scholarship for an Idalou student and to provide a dinner for Idalou's senior citizens.

Further profits will be used to aid the local scout program, purchase playground equipment for elementary students and generally aid the community.

Floydada Bazaar Offerings Varied

FLOYDADA (Special) — Original paintings, metal and wood creations and baked goods are among items to be sold during Saturday's arts and crafts bazaar at the Massie Activity Center.

The event, sponsored by the Floydada Lions Club, opens at 10 a.m.

Snyder Church Sets Christmas Program

A-J Correspondent

SNYDER — The First Baptist Church will present its fifth annual dinner theater, featuring "That Stupid Christmas Play," Dec. 6-7.

Dinner will be served at 7 each evening and the play will follow.

Tickets are $1.50 per person, and reservations may be made by calling the church office at 573-2631.

Carter Aide To Speak At Childress

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — Sarah Weddington, special assistant to President Carter, will speak at the Childress Chamber of Commerce banquet in January, according to Hazel O'Donnell, Chamber manager.

Mrs. Weddington, 33, previously was a general counsel in the Department of Agriculture. She is an attorney and a native of Abilene.

Mrs. O'Donnell also announced that six new members recently were named to the chamber's board of directors. They are Glen Cain, James Cox, Mrs. Janis Lawrence, Raymond McGee, Ray Leatherwood and C. B. Barfield.

New Area Judge Takes Office

TULIA (Special) — Louie Bonds, Swisher County judge-elect, has taken the office about six weeks in advance of the normal Jan. 1 installation date after the present judge, Jack Driskill, submitted his resignation.

Driskill administered the oath of office to Bonds, who defeated him for the Democratic nomination in a runoff election.

County judge the past 18 years, Driskill, 58, resigned in order to accept appointment as chief juvenile and misdemeanor probation officer for Judicial Districts 64 and 242 of Swisher, Hale and Castro Counties.

Moslem Leader Asks New General Strike

TEHRAN (AP) — An exiled Moslem leader spearheading the move to topple the shah of Iran has called on his supporters to begin an indefinite general strike Saturday, dissident sources reported Thursday.

The sources said an appeal sent from 78-year-old Ayatullah Ruhollah Khomaini, in exile in Paris, also asked oil industry workers to stage a walkout, again disrupting Iran's oil flow, its major source of income.

"The money the shah derives from oil is used to buy arms and equipment which is being turned against the people," one dissident source quoted the secret circular as saying.

Khomaini's renewed strike call, issued through his network of Moslem clergymen in Iran, indicated the Moslem leader plans to intensify his struggle against the 59-year-old monarch during December's Moslem holy period of Moharram.

Religious opposition to Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's 37-year-rule centers on his modernization drive and reforms that conservative Moslems find unacceptable. His political opposition finds fault with the shah's authoritarian one-man rule, his secret police and the alleged corruption of government officials.

Religious fervor usually runs high during Moharram, which begins Saturday. The faithful beat and whip themselves in mourning for Imam Hossein, the martyred grandson of the prophet Mohammed, who died in 641.

In an attempt to head off violence, the military government banned public religious processions, a move observers said would heighten tension.

A 15-day strike by oilfield and refinery workers cost Iran more than $1 billion in lost crude oil revenues before it ended Nov. 14.

Since the strikers went back to work military personnel have been trained to assist executives at the oil installations to keep the wells going if another major walkout occurs.

The state-owned National Iranian Oil Co. said production was almost back to normal, with 5.7 million barrels produced in the last 24 hours.

Normal production in November is about 6.4 million barrels a day. Petroleum importers usually stock up before the Organizationh of Petroleum Exporting Countries holds its annual December meeting.

OPEC is scheduled to meet in Abu Dhabi Dec. 16, and members have strongly indicated a price hike is unavoidable.

Dependents of Americans and other foreigners employed in Iran continued to leave the country, diplomatic sources said.

A cluster of wildcat strikes this past week has created a gas and home fuel shortage. National Iranian radio and television staffers have refused to work until press censorship is lifted.

Employees of Iran Air postponed their threat to strike until Saturday instead of midnight Wednesday, unless the military government releases airline employees arrested after a strike grounded the airline earlier this month.

Word of only one anti-shah demonstration reached Tehran in the last 24 hours. Authorities reported a soldier was hospitalized with a gunshot wound during a protest march in Eiland in southwestern Iran Wednesday.

In the town of Tiran, an agricultural area 248 miles south of here, about 2,500 persons held a pro-shah demonstration. Women in their traditional veils, together with youths and workers chanting "God, shah and country," marched to the main square holding photographs of the Iranian royal family.

The fear of armed clashes between the shah's opponents and the army heightened after a government report said troops had seized an arms cache in Mashhad in northeast Iran near the Soviet border. The city has been the frequent scene of bloody anti-shah demonstrations.

American Health Survey Results Aired

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans know what's good for them, but they don't have the willpower to change their habits to improve their health.

That's one of the conclusions of a survey released Thursday by Louis Harris and Associates Inc.

The survey, sponsored by the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co., also indicated that doctors are not doing as much as they could and should in the area of preventive medicine.

"The public knows it has its problems," said Harris, "but they openly confess they cannot do it (find a solution) themselves. They need real help."

The survey was conducted in June and July. It involved interviews with 1,517 members of the general public representing a cross-section of the population and with representatives of 176 large corporations and 35 labor unions.

Sixty-seven percent of those questioned said they would be healthier if they changed their eating habits, 62 percent said they knew that lack of regular exercise wasn't good for them and an equal number were overweight and knew the extra pounds were bad for their health.

At the same time, however, 71 percent said they agreed with the statement: "I myself, and most people, just go on doing the things that make us less healthy even when we know we shouldn't."

Almost three-fourths of those questioned said they would save money in the long run by taking better care of themselves now and avoiding future medical bills.

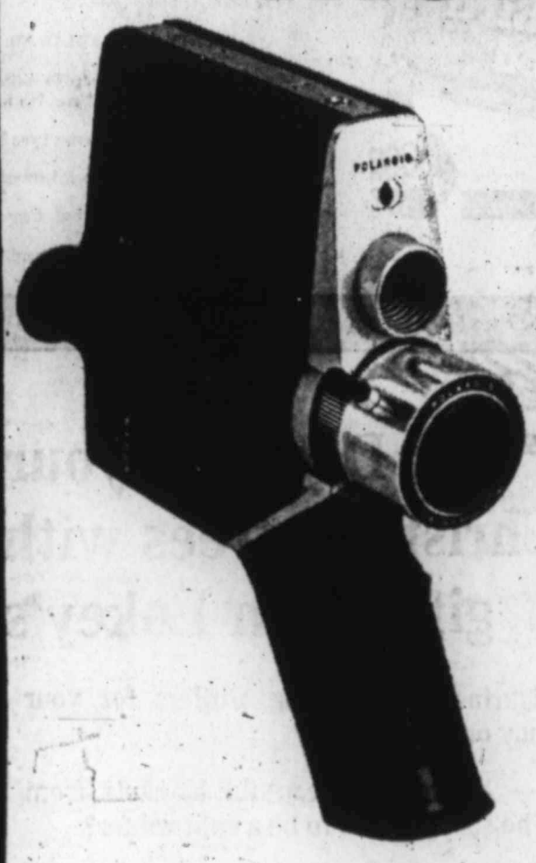

Americans now spend $163 billion on health care. The medical segment of the Consumer Price Index released Tuesday stood at 224.9, meaning that medical costs are 2¼ times as high as they were in 1967. The overall CPI for October was 209.9.

Harris said people are more aware of the importance of preventive medicine than they were five years ago. He also said the public wants help from doctors and often is not getting it. Only 16 percent of those who said they went on a diet, for example, said they did so on doctor's orders; only 17 percent said of those who exercised regularly said they began doing so because of a physician's advice.

Capitol Art Book Made Available

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tourists visting the Capitol enjoy the many art works there and the government has now issued a book highlighting these.

The Capitol collection includes almost 700 items including 132 portraits of presidents, senators, representatives and other prominent individuals; 54 paintings, 77 busts, 102 statues, 137 frescoes and murals and 200 other works of art.

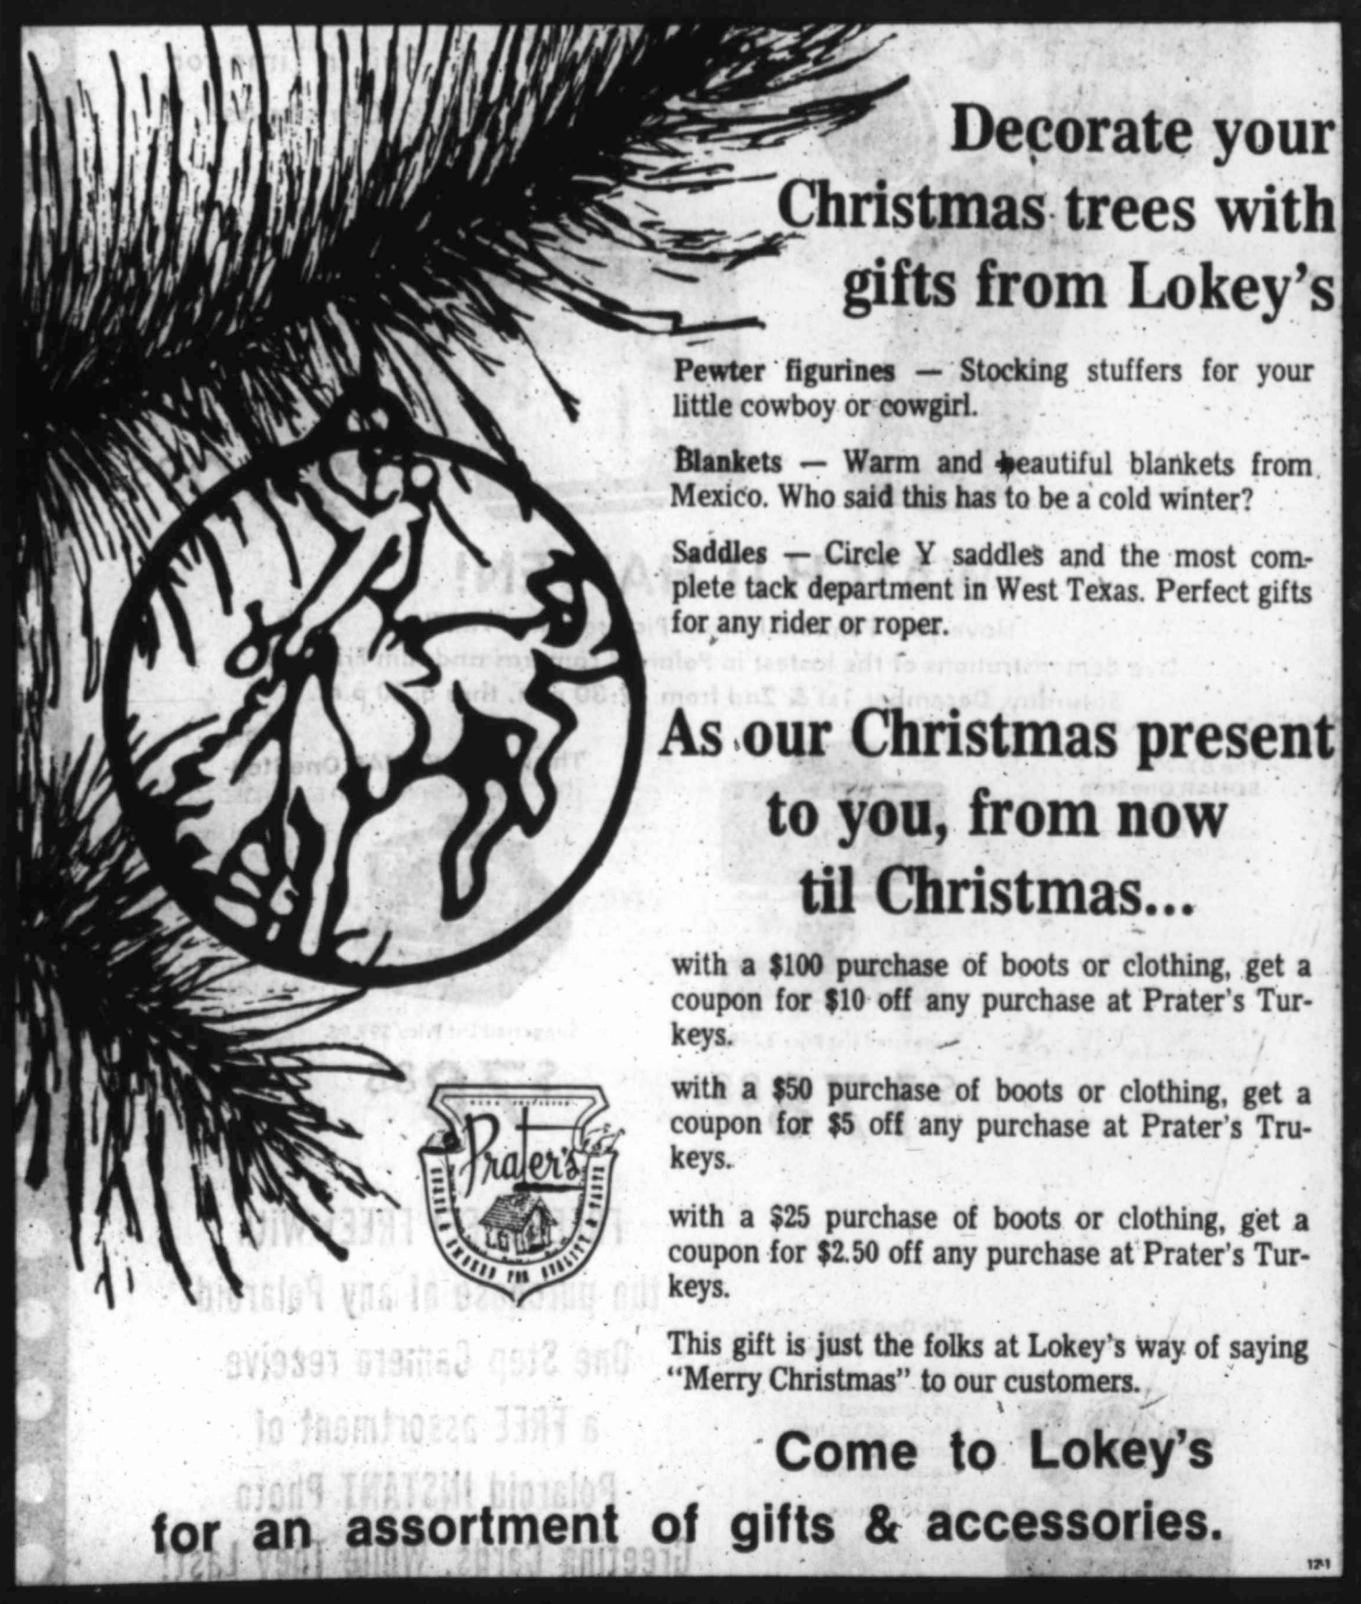

The book "Art in the United States Capitol" includes photos of more than 400 of these items, many in color, plus a listing of all the Capitol's art works.

Copies of the book can be purchased for $12.55 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington 20402. Ask for stock number 052-071-00453-0.

NO FUELING

NEW DEHLI, India (AP) — India will seek alternative sources for nuclear fuel supplies if the United States refuses to approve a request for 37 tons of enriched uraniium, Prime Minister Morarji Desai told parliament Thursday. Desai did not say which nations India would approach if its request is rejected. Recent U.S. legislation has banned the supply of uranium to countries that have not signed the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, Desai said.

Litton To Assist Tacfire Production

Lubbock's Litton Industries will be part of a $64 million contract awarded Thursday by the Army for production of a tactical fire computer system.

The system, called Tacfire Fire Direction Center, is used in field artillery units for automatic data processing. The Army's Communications Research and Development Center uses the system.

Litton's Data Systems Division will produce 31 of the units, increasing the number of Tacfire artillery systems to 51, Don Walter, public relations manager of Beverly Hills, Calif., said.

"Most of the work will be done in Lubbock," he added.

The system can do tasks faster, more accurately, and with greater effect and economy than is possible with present manual methods, Walter said.

The contract also includes production of variable format message entry devices, battery display units, maintenance and repair facilites, and other associated equipment.

The contract is an addition to a 1977 contract for 114 Tacfire systems and a 1975 contract for low-rate initial production.

Other Litton-Army contracts involving Lubbock have been for $1.7 million, $26.9 million, $30 million, and $2.5 million.

Litton plants in Colorado Springs, Colo., and Van Nuys, Calif. will be involved also with the new $64 million contract.

Albuquerque Girl Dies Of Injuries From Area Crash

Raulee Ribble, 18, daughter of a prominent Albuquerque, N.M., family died Wednesday in Methodist Hospital here of injuries received in a Thanksgiving weekend accident.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ribble Jr. Ribble heads N.C. Ribble Co., a heavy equipment distributing firm.

The accident occurred Nov. 22 when the car in which Miss Ribble was a passenger went out of control some nine miles southeast of Post on U.S. Highway 84. Miss Ribble was reportedly thrown from the vehicle.

Investigating officers think the driver of the car, Tina Maico, 19, also of Albuquerque, fell asleep at the wheel.

Miss Ribble, Miss Maico and two other passengers, Carol Elifritz, 21, and Bobby Lovett, 20, were returning from Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene to Albuquerque for the holiday weekend.

The driver and the two other passengers received minor injuries in the mishap. They were treated and released at Garza Memorial Hospital in Post.

Hope Increases For Survival Of Rarest Falcon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nearly-extinct Mauritius kestrel, the world's rarest falcon, has been raised in captivity for the first time, giving rise to hopes the species may be saved from oblivion.

The small falcon, about the size of an American sparrow hawk or robin, lives on the island of Mauritius in the Indian Ocean. In 1974, only four birds could be found in the wild and two in captivity.

Of the 9,000 bird species in the world, less than six species are known to have populations of less than 20 members.

News that an imperiled kestrel had been hatched and raised to flight stage in captivity brought an immediate sigh of relief from American bird lovers who feared for the bird's survival.

"It's a pretty important step," Warren King of the Smithsonian Institution said Thursday.

Russell Train, president of the World Wildlife Fund-U.S., which financed the five-year efforts to raise the birds in capivity, said, "It is encouraging that we can now see the results of positive human intervention toward saving Mauritius' endangered birds."

The island of Mauritius holds a special distinction to birds lovers because it was on this island that the dodo became extinct in the 1600s, the victim of club-wielding sailors.

The lone Mauritius kestrel flew for the first time on Tuesday, King said, proving that man possesses the capability of raising a captive population for later release into the wild.

Fay Steele, an aviculturist on leave from the Albuquerque, N.M., zoo, was credited with raising the kestrel. He notified American authorities that the young bird had flown for the first time on Tuesday.

Earlier attempts to raise Mauritius kesterels to flight stage had failed, King said.

The kestrel population on Mauritius Island had declined due to loss of habitat and nest predation by monkeys. Authorities estimate that 18 kestrels are surviving in the wild. Another five are being held in captivity, excluding the lone fledgling.

The comeback of the wild population was due in part to the kestrel's "fortuitous abandonment" of traditional nesting sites in tree cavities where monkeys destroyed the nests, King said.

Instead, the wild kestrels switched their nest sites to holes in nearby cliffs, where they could nest undisturbed.

The small black, brown and gray birds once soared in the skies over the island, swooping down to catch small birds, lizards and large insects on which they preyed.

Steele has two pairs in captivity on the island, King said. The male of one pair, however, is sexually immature. The pair is not expected to reproduce until next year.

Plans call for biologists to raise kestrels in captivity for later release into the wild on Mauritius and the nearby island of Renuion, King said.

Agency Forbids Sales Tactic

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Bureau of Consumer Protection ordered a Texas firm to stop mailing circulars to Florida homes offering a $200 "discount" on a set of the company's cookware.

Attorney General Robert Shevin said the brochures of IMOCO, Inc., claim the recipients have been "selected by computer to participate in a test" and that an accompanying check entitles the recipient to a discount on the firm's $269 cookware set.

"The so-called check is a gimmick to generate sales," Shevin said in a release. "Anyone can buy this cookware for the lower price."

Shevin said violations of the cease and desist order could subject IMOCO to civil penalties of as much as $5,000 per Florida mailing.

He said the firm has been the subject of similar actions in Texas and Arkansas.

Mahogany is believed to have been introduced into England from the West Indies by Sir Walter Raleigh.

Richard M. Nixon's permanent numbers are 9, 12, 18

Step 1 — Year of birth. Read down the left hand column to find the last number in the year of your birth then go across to the appropriate decade. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible
Luke 6:18 B-27, The Living Bible

And He cast out many demons.

19 Everyone was trying to touch Him, for when they did, healing power went out from Him and they were cured.

20 Then He turned to His disciples and said, "What happiness there is for you who are poor, for the Kingdom of God is yours!

21 What happiness there is for you who are now hungry, for you are going to be satisfied! What happiness there is for you who weep, for the time will come when you shall laugh with joy!

22 What happiness it is when others hate you and exclude you and insult you and smear your name because you are Mine!

23 When that happens, rejoice! Yes, jump for joy! For you will have a great reward awaiting you in heaven! And you will be in good company — the ancient prophets were treated that way too!

24 But, oh, the sorrows that await the rich! For they have had their happiness down here.

25 They are fat and prosperous now, but a time of awful hunger is before them. Their careless laughter now, means sorrow then.

26 And what sadness is ahead for those praised by the crowds—for false prophets have always been praised!

27 Listen, all of you! Love your enemies! Do good to those who hate you!

Burglars Busy In City

Burglars have continued to make large hauls from the homes and vehicles of several unhappy Lubbock residents.

Richard David Godinez told police Thursday he is out $3,374 after burglars pried the front door of his 1603 Elkhart home earlier that day.

Godinez said items taken included stereo equipment, a television, a camera, nail gun and two rings.

Joe Fortenberry, a salesman for an Albuquerque, N.M., firm, said a $1,200 portable computer terminal was taken from his 1977 Chevrolet sedan sometime Thursday morning. He said he noticed the computer was gone about 11:30 a.m. after he parked his car at the Holiday Inn, 6624 Ave. H.

About $1,104 worth of meat was reported stolen from a refrigerated trailer by Darrell McGinnis, an employee of B & M Meat Company. McGinnis said the trailer, whose lock was cut, was parked at the 1713 E. Broadway firm at the time of the break-in.

John Hartsfield, owner of a service station at 2815 Slide Road, said that after checking his business' receipts for the month of November, he discovered he is missing $587 cash and 400 gallons of gas, worth $240.

Burglars who caused $175 damage to Plains Furniture, 4311 Ave. H, while breaking into the business Wednesday night took a $350 television, $189 worth of furniture and $18 cash, according to store manager A.B. May.

Builder Bruce E. Benton said two air compressors, valued at $350 each, were taken between Tuesday and Thursday from a house under construction at 602 N. Elkhart.

Don Wayne Henderson said burglars took a 30-gallon aquarium worth $100 and four Angel fish, together valued at $40, from his 2241-A 34th St. business Wednesday night. Henderson said the intruders also caused $300 damage to the structure when they broke the front glass of the firm to get inside.

Walt Williamson said a 12-gauge shotgun, valued at $225, and a $75 .22-caliber rifle were taken from his unlocked 1977 Ford pickup truck late Tuesday. He said the truck was parked in the driveway of his 5405 54th St. home at the time of the burglary.

Roosevelt High School clerk Bonnie Craig told sheriff's deputies that during the school's Thanksgiving holidays $98 cash was stolen from a cabinet in her office.

Police Thursday were investigating the rape of a 16-year-old Lubbock girl by a man armed with a switchblade knife.

The girl told police the Mexican-American suspect confronted her at an apartment doorway about 1 a.m. Thursday and asked her to sew up some of his clothes. She said when she refused, the man, who reportedly lives in the next apartment, forced her inside the residence and raped her.

In another incident, the suspicions of a policeman resulted in the arrests of three burglary suspects shortly before 10 p.m. Wednesday.

Officer James Gill said he attempted to stop a vehicle, carrying two women and a man, on Flint Avenue near 45th Street. He said the car sped off and that several items were thrown from the moving auto in the 3000-block of 46th Street.

Reports show the officer was able to force the car to the curb in the 4600-block of Elgin Avenue. While the policeman was talking to the occupants, Marion W. Stawn of 3001 45th St. walked up and told Gill her residence had been burglarized.

Further investigation revealed items in the suspects' vehicle, as well as property thrown out of the car, possibly came from Mrs. Stawn's home. The suspects were booked in the county jail.

John Harmon, 27, of 2408 Auburn St. said he was robbed of his billfold containing $35 after getting into a fight with a man about 4:45 a.m. today in front of an apartment in the 1500-block of Bradley.

Harmon said that after the suspect snatched his wallet, he told Harmon to leave and never come back or he would kill him.

David L. Yocum of 3109 31st St. reported his house broken into Wednesday night and $1,000 in jewelry, a radio and games stolen. Police were given the description of a suspect.

Authorities say they suspect arson in the Wednesday night fire at Preston Smith Park at 5500 16th St. The blaze broke out about 8 p.m. and caused an estimated $500 damage to a park shelter.

Stereo equipment, valued at $700, was taken in a break-in at Antonio Garcia's residence 5810 24th St., Apt. C-1, between 7:30 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Tommie Epting of 2008 56th St. said burglars entered her home Wednesday or early today and made off with $500 in cash and jewelry.

William High of 3116 Emory St. said he was missing a television set, radio and watch, totaling $575, after burglars broke into his home Wednesday.

Auto Turnover Fatal To Man

BROWNFIELD (Special) — A 29-year-old Brownfield man, Alton Carl Rains, was killed about 11:15 p.m. Wednesday in a one-vehicle turnover six miles west of here on U.S. Highway 380.

He was pronounced dead on arrival at Brownfield General Hospital.

Rains was traveling east on Highway 380 when he apparently lost control of his pickup truck which left the highway and overturned three times, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Rains was thrown from the vehicle.

Services for Rains will be at 2:30 p.m. Friday at the First Baptist Church in Plains with the Rev. Jess Little, pastor, officiating.

Burial will follow in the Plains Cemetery under the direction of the Brownfield Funeral Home.

Rains was born in Lamesa. He had been a resident of Brownfield since 1953. Rains was married to Shirley Mae Bilfrey April 17, 1970, at Plains. He was a member of the First Baptist Church in Tokio.

Survivors include his wife; a son, Scotty, and daughter, Sherry, both of the home; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Rains of Tokio; and a brother, Ronnie of Tokio.

Warning Issued On Accounts Funds Shift

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banks in many areas are heavily promoting their new automatic funds transfer services. While these can be a boon, the Office of Consumer Affairs warns there can be hidden pitfalls too.

Basically the transfers, which were allowed by federal regulations starting Nov. 1, permit movement of money from savings to checking accounts to cover checks as they are written.

In theory, this allows you to keep the money in an interest-bearing account as long as possible. But the OCA warns that thinly disguised or hidden charges may be quite costly.

Some typical charges found in an OCA survey included:

—A basic system fee, whether the account is used or not.

—A charge for each day your account falls below a certain level.

—An assessment for each day you use the transfer system.

—A sliding fee scale based on the amount in your account.

In one example a bank requires a minimum balance of $1,500 plus a charge of $4-a-month even if the service isn't used every month. The savings from which the transfers are made pays 4½ percent interest.

Therefore, if you opened a $3,000 savings account to take advantage of the automatic transfers you could earn $33.75 in interest in the quarter, if the balance stayed around $3,000.

But, the service charge would be $12 for three months. Plus your money would be in the 4½ percent account when it could be earning up to 6 percent or more in other accounts or at a savings and loan instutition.

"It's up to you to determine the trade-offs involved in automatic transfers between savings and checking. If the idea seems worth a slight price, be sure to shop around," the OCA says.

Police Seek Clues In Roswell Death

ROSWELL, N.M. (Special) — Police here are continuing their investigation into the Wednesday stabbing death of Arthur Riley Rose.

Rose was killed about 5:30 p.m. (MST) after he apparently tried to thwart a hold-up attempt at his motel here. Police said he suffered numerous stab wounds from a long-bladed knife.

Officials said the suspects, two young white men, got away with between $80 and $100.

Police Thursday expanded their search to Texas and are seeking the pair, who are believed to have left the scene in a yellow or orange Datsun or Toyota. Officials said one of the bandits, described as in his early 20s with dark brown, shoulder-length hair, possibly remained inside the car during the hold-up.

The other suspect is described as being between 18-and 21-years-old, 5-feet-8, with a thin build and shoulder-length light brown hair. Officials said he was wearing blue jeans and a red-checked shirt.

Services for Rose are pending with Ballard Funeral Home here.

Carter Discouraged By Mideast Parley

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Thursday he was "somewhat discouraged" by the slowdown in Mideast peace talks and charged Egypt and Israel with negotiating through the press for domestic political purposes.

And yet, Carter told a news conference he is convinced leaders of both countries and their people want a treaty completed. Therefore, Carter said, the now-stalled negotiations are "very likely to be fruitful."

Carter gave this assessment shortly after Egyptian President Anwar Sadat sent his prime minister here with a message urging the United States to break the lingering impasse over the Palestinian issue. They are scheduled to meet today.

Carter "Disappointed"

"I have been dissatisfied and disappointed at the length of time required to bring about a peace treaty," Carter said.

This he attributed, in part, to conducting "a lot of the negotiations" through the press. Carter said this was unfortunate and motivated by the internal political situations in Egypt and Israel.

In the past, he has complained that the negotiators in Washington had limited authority. Carter raised this complaint again indirectly.

But, he said, neither the problems nor his own concerns were greater than at Camp David, Md., in September when Egypt and Israel, under U.S. guidance, ultimately agreed on frameworks for negotiating a peace treaty as well as the disposition of the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Palestinian Snag

The treaty negotiations began seven weeks ago. At first, they held promise of producing an agreement quickly. But Egypt and Israel have been unable to settle their differences over whether to clear the way for Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank and in Gaza in the treaty itself.

Sadat is looking to Carter to fulfill Egypt's notion of the U.S. role of a "full partner" in the negotiations and to persuade Israel to accept a timetable for Palestinian self-rule.

While sending Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil here on that mission, Sadat also sent a message to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

The message to Begin was carried to Israel by Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., after Byrd met with Sadat in Egypt. The content of the message was not divulged.

U.S. Seeks Compromise

The United States has tried to arrange a compromise over the Palestinian issue by proposing the end of 1979 be set as a target date for moving on the autonomy issue. Israel did not accept that proposal.

However, reversing a previous stand, the Israeli Cabinet earlier this month approved a provision in the treaty preamble reaffirming a commitment to negotiate self-rule for the 1.1 million Palestinians living on the West Bank and in Gaza.

Egyptian Prime Minister Khalil's visit to Washington is likely to establish whether Sadat also will accept the provision or whether he is still insisting that a four-step timetable be included in the treaty "package."

The prime minister, a 58-year-old engineer who holds a graduate degree from the University of Illinois, was named to the post in Sadat's reshuffling of the Egyptian Cabinet two months ago.

He will begin his U.S. talks at a noon meeting today with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, continue them over lunch at the State Department, then see Carter immediately afterward.

Khalil was accompanied by Osama Al-Baz, deputy foreign minister and one of the principal Egyptian negotiators at Camp David, Md., in September and during the now-stalled peace negotiations here.

Further complicating the Palestinian dispute is one between Israel and the United States over new Jewish settlements on the West Bank.

The Israeli government insists it has the right to "thicken" or expand them, while the United States is trying to force a moratorium.

As Khalil headed here, Ariel Sharon, the Israeli agriculture minister, said he "could not see the existence of Israel without settlement activity." Touring settlements along the Gulf of Aqaba in Sinai that would be relinquished as part of a peace treaty with Egypt, the ex-general gave assurances that new ones would be built on the West Bank as well as in the Golan Heights area lost by Syria in the 1967 Six-Day war.

At the State Department, meanwhile, spokesman Hodding Carter said Vance had no plans to visit the Middle East to try to wrap up a treaty. Vance is going to Brussels for a NATO meeting next Tuesday and to London to make a speech on Thursday. There has been some speculation he might go on to the Middle East.

In Cairo, the official Middle East News Agency reported Sadat will not go to Oslo to accept the Nobel Peace Prize he is sharing with Begin. The agency said Sadat would send a representative to receive the prize.

Publication Halted By London Times

LONDON (AP) — Officials of The London Times, a Gibraltar of journalism and an institution of British life, announced Thursday the paper was suspending publication in a showdown with labor unions.

The suspension was announced at a press conference by the paper's managing director, Marmaduke James Hussey.

He said there will be no Friday edition of the 193-year-old newspaper and the suspension would continue indefinitely.

Reporters had remained at their desks in the vain hope their work would see today's morning light.

"Time Runs Out at the Times," headlined the Evening Standard, which along with the rest of Fleet Street warmly praised the paper fighting the test battle over new technology and union discipline.

Parliament debated the prospect of losing the paper that 85 percent of its members read.

Talks had continued Thursday with some of the 64 labor groups representing Times employees.

But the National Graphical Association, one of nine major unions at the paper, remained adamant that it would not dicker under threat of shutdown.

Not Backing Down

The Times management was not backing down on opposing wildcat strikes. Its president, Lord Thomson of Fleet, says opposition is necessary to keep the paper and its sister publications from being "slowly bled to death."

The Times itself had signaled the high likelihood of a suspension by printing the answer to Thursday's crossword Thursday.

The labor editor estimated in a front-page story that the suspension would last "two to three months." And true to form, small temporary slowdown actions by a few mechanical employees lost 68,000 copies of the "last" Times Thursday morning.

The management claims a plague of such small-scale slowdowns, many of them unauthorized by parent unions, have cost the Times, the Sunday Times and its three supplements more than 13 million copies and some $7.8 million this year.

Union Admits Disputes

NGA General Secretary Joe Wade, in a message to members, admitted the Times has suffered an "appallingly high number of unofficial disputes." But he still declared management is "hell-bent on bulldozing the unions and their members into abject surrender."

Hussey said all 4,250 staff members of the Times, the Sunday Times and three supplements will be paid for two more weeks in a $2 million goodwill gesture while negotiations continue. He said tentative agreements had been reached with 17 of the 65 bargaining units that operate the Times, representing about 800 persons.

Asked why the paper would not continue printing since it planned to pay the holdouts as well as staff with whom it has reached agreement, Hussey said: "We are no longer prepared to go on publishing until we can guarantee full and punctual production."

Staff To Be Paid

Staff members who go along with the management are to continue being paid after the two-week period even if there are no papers.

NGA members are expecting union payments of up to $150 a week while the suspension lasts.

If the Times comes back, as the management promises it will, the journalists' work will not be wasted. After past suspensions the paper has always printed extensive resumes of missed issues — complete with weather reports.

That kind of seriousness about its role as a journal of record is the hallmark of the Times.

Natural Gas Price Lids Take Effect

WASHINGTON (AP) — New federal price ceilings on natural gas taking effect today are expected to boost the average household's gas bills by about $14 next year, to a total of nearly $300.

The higher price ceilings are included in legislation, approved by Congress after an 18-month battle and signed by President Carter Nov. 9, that is intended to provide added incentives for industry to explore for new natural gas supplies.

The rising costs for natural gas consumers will be uneven around the country, partly because of varying demand related to weather, and will be felt only gradually.

Over the long haul, however, residential gas bills could rise as much as 42 percent by 1985, when federal price regulation of newly discovered gas is removed entirely.

Meantime, decisions to be made in the next couple of months are likely to result in further increases in the cost of gasoline, heating oil and other petroleum products.

How much will depend largely on the size of price increases ordered by OPEC, the foreign oil producers cartel, which is meeting in December.

Under the new National Energy Act, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission is still drafting nationwide regulations governing previously unregulated intrastate gas and 25 separate pricing categories.

Ken Williams, deputy director of FERC's office of pipeline and producer regulation, estimated in a telephone interview that the new price ceilings set by Congress will cost residential gas users about $1.7 billion in the first year.

If that total is divided evenly over all the gas sold to homes, it would raise the average household bill by about $14 for the year, an increase of 5 percent over the average residential gas bill of some $277 last year.

Some pipelines and distributors will purchase more newly discovered natural gas at the higher price ceilings than others, increasing the cost to their customers. Also, some customers will burn substantially more gas than others, depending on location and weather.

Winning Team Helps Boost School Morale

about it, the football team is one of them," Gipson said.

Queenan and Broome said that over the years, Estacado has been saddled with an undeserved reputation for fighting, poor academics and being a "bad school." This term, they said, students and teachers are trying to clean up the school's image.

The enthusiasm and pride generated by the football program aid in that effort, Queenan said.

The feeling of unity, for example, goes right along with the student council's Project Family, which is an umbrella for various "get-involved" programs this year. The theme for Project Family, Queenan said, is "Estacado: A Place for Every Face."

"We spend six hours and 50 minutes at this school every day, and it's imperative that we get along. With Project Family, we're getting kids working together and involved," Queenan said.

Queenan and the council are organizing such campaigns as BIONIC (Believe It Or Not, I Care) to drum up support for their Dec. 14 blood drive; KISS (Keep Involving the Silent Student) to introduce shy students to school activities; a school-wide Christmas celebration; and school safety programs.

Getting volunteers to make buttons and decorations, give blood or reach out to a lonely student is easier when morale is high about football, Queenan said.

Winning in football is not the most important rerason for such a turnabout, but it "gives the students something to rally around," Queenan said.

Such significance puts pressure on football players, and they seem to know it.

"If you're winning, you're considered good. If you're losing, you're considered sorry," said defensive end Steve Wright. "If we lose against Snyder, I sure don't want to have to come to school Monday."

Presidency Bid Repeat Not For Rep. Chisholm

erty and discrimination through the development of one human family sensitive to humans needs and values.

"This country cannot endure two more centuries unless we get our own house in order and face the fact that the American dream is not reality for all Americans," she said.

Sometimes labeled a maverick by her colleagues, Mrs. Chisholm talked of her 10-year battle against the cycle of poverty.

"Most of my colleagues in Congress are good men and others are men, but they have so little in-depth knowledge of what causes poverty and what poverty looks like. Out of sight, out of mind," she said.

Former School Teacher

A former school teacher and specialist in childhood education and child welfare, Mrs. Chisholm said the great influx of women into the American labor force had created an urgent need for the development of child care centers throughout the country similar to ones established in many European nations.

Asked afterwards to comment on the recent mass suicide of the Peoples Temple cult in Guyana, Mrs. Chisholm said it was "tragic" but added there was "more to the act than meets the eye."

"It's tragic that we have lost almost 1,000 human lives, but what is more tragic is the number of cults in this country whose members are not physically dead but are emotionally and mentally absented."

Noting the large amount of cash and social security checks found at the religious community, Mrs. Chisholm reccommended that the money be used to "take care of the tremendous expense this whole situation will call for."

Expressing grief over the death of Rep. Leo Ryan of California, she said Ryan possessed "love and feeling for the underdog and he had a strong desire to get to the bottom of what was happening to members of his constituency."

Media Tagged Biased

The five-term representative also accused the American media of biased news coverage.

"I do not favor those who dwell on that part of the news and information to conjure up emotion in the American people. For God's sake, be objective," she urged.

Mrs. Chisholm celebrated her 54th birthday Tuesday and was presented with a birthday cake from students in a Texas Tech journalism class.

Somoza Okays Plebiscite In Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza said Thursday he is willing to put his job on the line in a nationwide plebiscite to determine if the Nicaraguan people want him to remain in office.

But Somoza said in a nationally televised news conference he would not resign immediately if the plebiscite showed the people opposed him.

Somoza said if the plebiscite went against him another election would be held — not for the presidency but for seats in the National Assembly. He said the National Assembly then would choose his successor and he would not leave office until after a successor was choosen.

Somoza was asked why he had changed his mind after insisting during a year of guerrilla war and political turmoil that he will stay in office until his current elected term expires in 1981. Somoza said, "In politics, only the rivers never run backward."

Shell Sets Rationing Of Gasoline Today

NEW YORK (AP) — Shell Oil Co. said Thursday that it will begin rationing all its brands of gasoline nationwide today. The Shell announcement followed one by Texaco Inc. not mentioning rationing, but warning its gasoline supplies are "extremely tight nationally."

Shell spokesman Norman Altstedter said the company's ration program might last through "the end of December or the early part of January."

Shell, the nation's largest gasoline marketer, blamed the shortage on an unseasonal "dramatic increase in demand," on maintenance work at two refineries and on federal "regulations which have held down" Shell's prices to "an unrealistically low level."

Weather Spurs Driving

The high demand for gasoline was brought on by good summer and fall weather that led to a unusual amount of driving. Shell as well as Mobil Corp. already were known to have had problems in supplying unleaded gasoline.

The American Petroleum Institute, in its regular weekly report, said Thursday that the nation's gasoline stocks totaled 217.6 million barrels as of Nov. 24, up by about 5 million barrels from the previous week but down by 32.5 million barrels from year-ago levels.

There are 42 gallons to a barrel.

Ironically, Shell also said it would be cutting all wholesale gasoline prices by one-half cent a gallon just as it puts its rationing plan into effect. Wholesale price changes may be passed on at the pump if the dealer chooses.

Price Lids Exceeded

Altstedter said Shell was cutting prices because it had exceeded federal gasoline price limits. "Shell has passed through all the increased costs it can, and can't go any higher," he said.

Earlier Thursday, Texaco Chairman Maurice F. Granville said at a Chicago news conference that the company's "inventories are low for all gasoline. The problem is that demand in various regions is somewhat higher than anticipated."

At Shell, Altstedter said "historically, gasoline demand falls off after Labor Day. ...

"However, demand for Shell gasoline has not only failed to taper off, but has actually increased to record levels," he said.

Shell plans to limit dealers to either 75 percent of the gasoline they pumped last December, or — if the amount is greater — to 75 percent of their 1972 volume. Of all gasoline shipped to a dealer, no more than 38 percent will be unleaded, Altstedter said.

The supply problem already has led to price increases in many areas, and the Federal Trade Comission is investigating charges that Shell is givng unleaded gasoline only to dealers that buy a certain amount of leaded gas. The company has denied the charges.

In a related development, four New Jersey dealers filed suit against Shell Thursday, charging the firm with "coercing" dealers to fix prices and playing favorites with gas stations that eliminated repair and maintenance services.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Newark, N.J., alleges Shell "discriminates" against dealers who do repairs by offering discounts and rebates to "gas-only" stations.

Death Pacts Probed By FBI

WASHINGTON (A) — The head of the Justice Department's criminal division said Thursday the government is looking into reports of possible suicide pacts among survivors of the People's Temple.

But Phillip Heymann said there may be little the federal government can do to prevent anyone from committing suicide.

"It's not a federal crime to commit suicide," he said.

Heymann expressed great reluctance to discuss an investigation by the Secret Service into an alleged "hit list" of officials and other individuals who may be the target of assassination plans by members of the People's Temple.

"It's wildly inflammatory to talk about it," Heymann said. He said, however, that the government could have power to prosecute if there is solid evidence of a conspiracy to kill certain public officials who fall within the government's jurisdiction.

The Justice Department held the news briefing to provide an update on the government's role in investigating the People's Temple.

The government's primary responsibility is looking into the killing of Rep. Leo J. Ryan, D-Calif., who died with four other persons in an attack at an airstrip in Guyana.

Heymann said the government's role was limited largely to offering assistance to help Guyanese officials probe the deaths of more than 900 members of the religious cult who died in a suicide-murder ritual.

More Survivors Of Cult Due Release By Guyana

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — Most of the Peoples Temple cult members who have been cleared by an investigation of more than 900 deaths at the fated Jonestown commune will be released soon, Guyanese police said Thursday.

Cecil A. Roberts, deputy crime chief, indicated some of the remaining 72 American survivors in Guyana could be released late this weekend. He said the eight survivors who already have returned to the United States were allowed to go because of their age. The youngest was 61.

Seven arrived in New York late Wednesday and took flights home to California.

Several of the survivors remaining in Georgetown, many of whom lost relatives in the mass deaths, have complained the U.S. Embassy is not doing enough to gain their release.

One cult member has been charged with murder in the deaths of Rep. Leo J. Ryan, D-Calif., three newsmen and a disaffected cultist who were ambushed as they attempted to leave the agrarian commune Nov. 18. Another has been charged in the killings of four cultists in Georgetown.

Roberts declined to comment on whether more indictments were expected.

All survivors of the sect have been interviewed and their statements are being reviewed to determine if they are needed as suspects or material witnesses, Roberts said.

He said one witness reported at least three "dry run" rehearsals of the mass poisoning at the Jonestown jungle settlement 150 miles northwest of this South American capital.

The Rev. Jim Jones led the mass murder-suicide in which babies and unwilling cultists were administered a fruit drink laced with cyanide and many cultists willingly drank the poison, according to witnesses.

The mass killing followed the murder of Ryan, who was investigating reports that some cult members were being held at the commune against their wills.

Charles E. Beikman, a temple member for 20 years, has been charged with murdering a member and her three children at the sect's headquarters in Georgetown shortly after the mass poisonings.

Beikman is to appear at a preliminary hearing next Monday, and court sources say Beikman's lawyer has obtained a writ requiring two temple members to appear as witnesses Tuesday.

Charged in the Ryan slayings is cultist Larry Layton. Roberts said an effort is being made to schedule a preliminary hearing for Layton next week. His hearing now is set for mid-January.

Light Of Truth Shines On City Mystery Tunnel

The recent mystery of the 100-foot-long tunnel found by construction workers under a warehouse being built at South Univeristy Avenue and Loop 289 has a distinctly unromantic solution.

The tunnel, which some had speculated to be possibly an escape route, was constructed in 1956 as a septic tank for the now defunct Q-C Bowl, W.G. McMillan of W.G. McMillan Construction Company told The Avalanche-Journal Thursday.

McMillan explained he was commissioned by Quinn Connally, the bowling alley's owner, to construct the six-foot-deep tunnel.

The company owner said he did not realize until Thursday that the tunnel that had attracted so much public curiosity was the same one he dug 22 years ago. During a conversation with friends, the mention of the tunnel's location jarred his memory, McMillan said.

Jerold Elliott, estimator for Claude Martin and Sons Construction, said the tunnel will be filled in or the top of it reinforced with a concrete structural slab to ensure it never caves in under the Southwest Electric Supply warehouse being built on the site.

Former FBI Agent Says Files Destroyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former FBI official testified Thursday that he destroyed bureau files dealing with allegedly illegal government surveillance against the radical left-wing Weather Underground in the early 1970s.

Robert Shackelford, former chief of the FBI's internal security branch, said he believed he was only destroying duplicates. The aim was to prevent classified information from falling into the wrong hands, he said.

Shackelford, who retired earlier this year, testified at a pretrial hearing to determine whether charges should be dismissed against three former FBI officials accused of authorizing the allegedly illegal surveillance.

Unless U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant accepts dismissal motions by defense attorneys, a trial will be held, probably beginning in January. The defendants are former FBI Acting Director L. Patrick Gray III and two of his top aides, W. Mark Felt and Edward S. Miller.

Shackelford replied, "Yes, I did," when asked if he destroyed documents in some 40 FBI file folders.

Shackelford testified that he retained some of the material, anticipating that it might be helpful if he were ever charged with wrongdoing in connection with the government's investigation of the bureau's use of allegedly illegal surveillance against the Weatherman faction.

"I had a continuing interest in some of it," he said. When asked by Justice Department attorney Francis J. Martin whether he felt the material retained "might be exculpatory to yourself and to others," Shackelford replied:

"It was historical in nature and could possibly be of some benefit to me."

As for the documents that he ordered his secretary to destroy, Shackelford said, "Generally, it would be carbons or Xeroxes I had retained for ready reference." He said he believed the originals would be in the FBI's main files.

The government is seeking to show that any documents Shackelford destroyed could only help the prosecution, not the defense. But the defense lawyers are seeking to establish that the Justice Department was guilty of gross negligence in permitting the loss of more than 1,500 FBI files which could contain information that would help exonerate the defendants.

The material retained by Shackelford was turned over to the government last June, the witness said. He said he volunteered the information after reading news accounts of the deliberate destruction of FBI files pertaining to the Weather Underground.

Shackelford was transferred from his post as head of the internal security section on Aug. 15, 1976, the same day that government investigators seized 22 file cabinets of information that included Shackelford's own files.

Kidnapping Victim Freed By Basques

MADRID (AP) — Jose Javier Crespo, a Spanish government official kidnapped by Basque separatists two days ago in San Sebastian, was released unharmed in Madrid Thursday, the Spanish news agency said.

The agency said Crespo, 41, the education ministry's representative in the northern city of San Sebastian, had been abducted by three men Tuesday after he, his wife and three children were held prisoner overnight in their home.

Basque guerrillas have been fighting to free their region from Spanish federal rule.

Builder, Firm Spar Over Tower Shadows

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The St. Paul City Council has set a 30-day period for sparring among contestants in the city's first solar rights dispute.

Louis Sudheimer, a developer, and L. Kenneth Mahal, an architect, plan a 10-story condominium tower on the old McKinley school site.

However, Control Data Corp. is completing construction of an office building next door, and it doesn't want the condominium tower to cast shadows on solar heating equipment included in the office building.

The council, meeting Wednesday, gave the developers 30 days to find a solution satisfactory to Control Data. A city memo said Control Data would be forced to move its solar collectors if some changes aren't made in the site, configuration or location of the housing tower.

City officials said the city may hire a solar consultant to shed light on the problem.

Senators Prepare For China Mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., said Thursday he will lead a delegation of six senators on a trip to China at the request of President Carter.

The delegation will leave Friday and return Dec. 19, Williams said. Other members will be Sens. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., Donald Riegle, D-Mich., and Paul Sarbanes, D-Md.

"I am aware that congressional journeys have sometimes been the object of criticism," Williams said. "But I feel carefully planned visits such as the one I am about to take have a tremendous benefit to me personally and to the taxpayers.

"I think it is vital that members of the Senate, and the president, have personal accounts of the latest events in China."

Survivor Recounts Leap From Bridge

SEATTLE (AP) — Duncan McKenzie, the lone survivor of five persons who jumped off an ice-slicked bridge to escape a skidding tractor trailer, says his first thought was, "Is it this easy to die?"

Then he was awake, on the ground and hollering for help. His pregnant wife was dead, and soon afterwards, three others would die from the 50-foot fall.

Moments earlier, they had been trying to sort out a four-car pile-up on a fog-bound bridge over the Cowlitz River.

By the time they noticed the truck, its headlights suddenly burning through the fog, they had nowhere to flee.

Had they leaped from the other side of the bridge, they would have probably landed safely on a four-foot walkway. But in the foggy darkness, they couldn't see that beyond the side to which they scattered was a five-story drop onto rocks and the cold Cowlitz currents.

"I sort of eased myself over but just kept going," McKenzie said. "After about four seconds I knew it was going to be a long way down."

McKenzie, 33, of Breckenridge, Mich., has been recuperating at a Portland, Ore. hospital. He recalled the tragedy in an interview with the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

He and his wife, Christine, had been visiting relatives. It was three nights before Thanksgiving. They were driving to Seattle to visit a friend. The road was wet in spots, the night was cold.

"We were talking about going out for a nice dinner," he said. "Suddenly, as we came over the rise and down the grade, we saw cars piled up on the bridge.

"I slowed down. I was only going about 20, but it was icy, and I pulled to the left to try and weave by the mess. I nicked one car but hit the other.

"We nearly made it through."

The McKenzies got out of their car. No one was hurt and one man left for help. McKenzie told his wife to hurry away from the pile-up.

"I remember telling her that it was dangerous and to get off the highway," McKenzie said. "I didn't see her after that.

"I was talking to another man, trying to figure out how to move the cars before any more rammed us.

"Then I saw a semi-truck loaded with steel bearing down the road toward us, and all I can remember is jumping over the bridge railing. I didn't see anyone else jump."

McKenzie's ribs were broken in the fall. His left lung was collapsed and filled with blood. His hip was cracked and blood ran from a cut on his head.

"I heard three other people yelling 'Help!' I did, too, but I thought it was hopeless," he said. "But someone answered."

An hour later, an ambulance attendant told McKenzie his wife of only a few months was dead.

"I'm numb right now," McKenzie said. "I'm isolated from the mental trauma. They buried Chris last week. It won't all come down on me until I'm back home."

Hit Men Plan Aired At Houston Trial

HOUSTON (AP) — An electronic expert, who once served a federal prison term for fraud, testified Thursday that former Houston Police Chief Carrol Lynn intended to hire "hit men" to slay several persons he considered undesirables.

J.L. Patterson told a federal court jury that Lynn had planned to steal $350,000 in cash from the police property room and use the money to hire assassins to clean up the city.

Lynn, who served 15 months as police chief in Texas' largest city, is on trial on charges of obstruction of justice, perjury and extortion. He is accused of asking for $45,000 to stop a federal investigation of John Vincent Holden, a former Houston oilman.

Holden is facing charges of mail fraud and violation of securities regulations.

Lynn, 45, was an assistant chief when arrested last April as he left the Holden home. He was carrying $25,000 in cash at the time.

Patterson testified he discussed plans of breaking into the property room with Lynn in November 1976 and that he believed the former police chief "had gone over the brink" mentally at the time.

The names on the alleged hit list were not revealed.

Under cross-examination, Patterson said he offered to perform the killings. But, he said, he was not serious and was trying to find out whether Lynn was serious.

Patterson served time in a federal prison after his conviction of defrauding a telephone company. He also was indicted for allegedly planning to burglarize the police property room. The indictment was dismissed earlier this month. Prosecutors said there was insufficient evidence to build a case against Patterson.

Authorities said at the time of planned break-in, the property room contained $250,000 in cash, two fur coats and a large amount of jewelry.

Brewery Officials Plan Expansion

FULTON, N.Y. (AP) — The Miller Brewing Co. brewery here, which started out producing two million barrels of beer annually four years ago, will be turning out 10 million barrels a year by 1980.

Officials of the Milwaukee, Wis., beer company announced Thursday their plans for a $25 million expansion of the facility northwest of Syracuse. The expansion will create 200 jobs, pushing employment to 2,200 workers, Miller officials said.

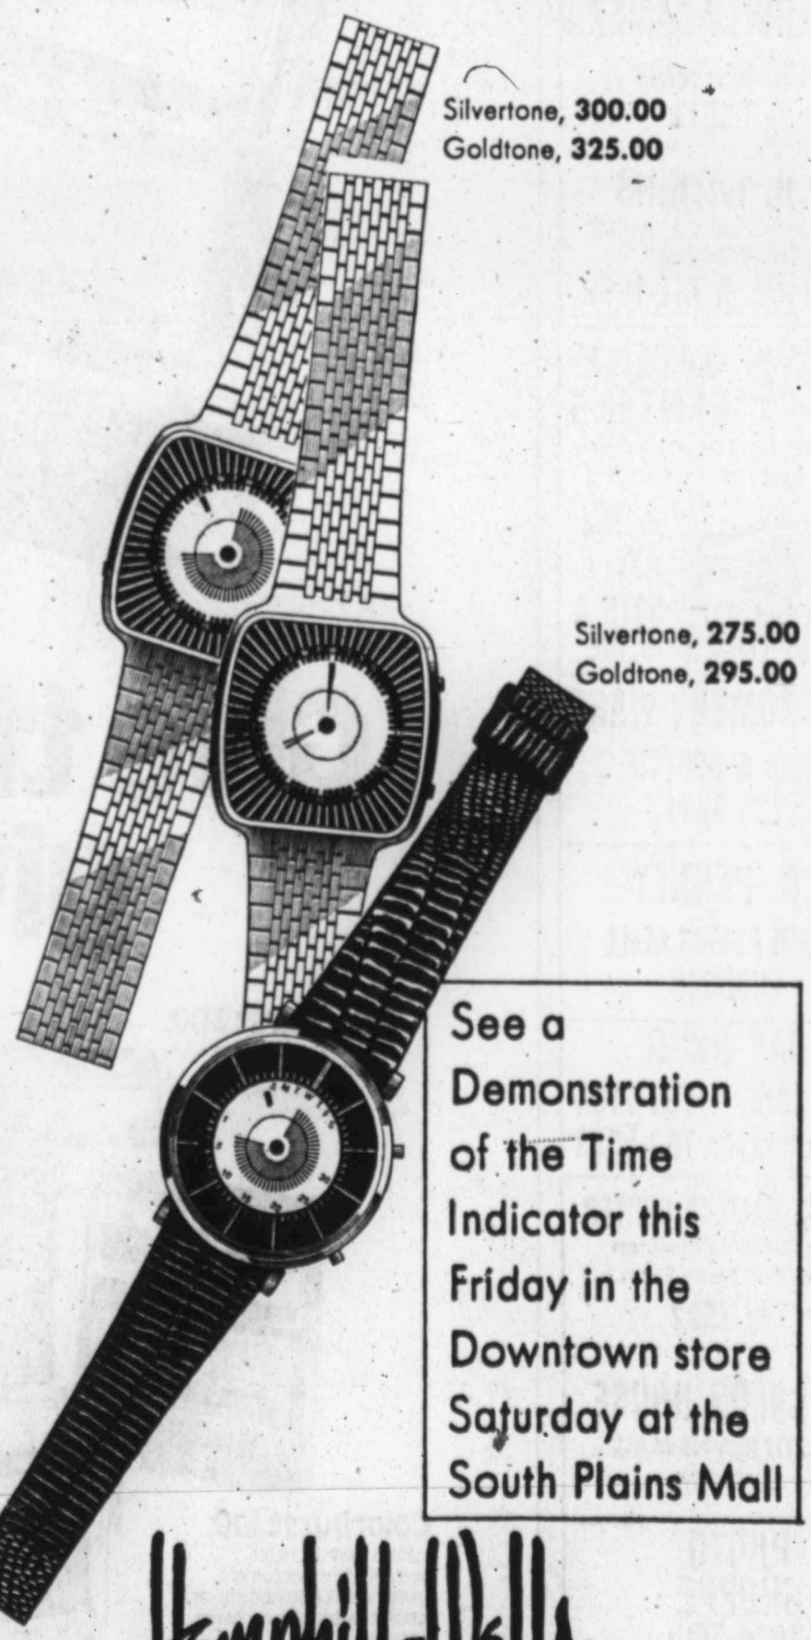

Production at the brewery has been expanded twice previously. The brewery currently produces 8.8 million barrels of beer a year.

The latest expansion will increase Miller's investment in the brewery near Lake Ontario to $237.8 million.

Five Judges Selected For Miss Lubbock Scholarship Pageant

Judges for the 1979 Miss Lubbock Scholarship Pageant, set for 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Municipal Auditorium, have been selected.

According to pageant chairman Cecil D. Caldwell, the judges will include:

—June Graves, official chaperone for Miss Texas;

—B. Don Magness, chairman of the board and executive producer of the Miss Texas Pageant Corp.;

—Art Cole, founding director of the Midland Community Theatre, Inc.;

—Carol Cushman, chairman of advertising sales of the Miss Texas Pageant program book; and,

—Carl Dunn, president of the Cinderella Girl Pageant.

Twelve contestants will compete in categories of swimsuit, evening gown and talent. The entrants also will be judged for poise and intelligence during personal interviews conducted in the afternoon.

"A Christmas Dream" is the theme for this year's pageant, featuring the Music West Barbershop Quartet, the Miss Lubbock Dancers and Singers and the Miss Lubbock Orchestra, directed by Jim Green.

Debbi Clark will serve as mistress of ceremonies.

The pageant winner will receive a wardrobe valued at $1,000, a $750 scholarship and an expense-paid trip to the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant in Fort Worth next summer, where she will compete for the state crown.

PAGEANT JUDGES — Selection of Miss Lubbock 1979 will be accomplished Saturday by these five judges, from left, June Graves, Carol Cushman, B. Don Magness, Art Cole and Carl Dunn.

Magness will serve as panel chairman. He is director of public events for the City of Fort Worth. Magness has been named one of the outstanding young men in the United States, outstanding young man of Haltom City while serving as mayor pro-tem, and one of Fort Worth's five outstanding young men. He has judged more than 400 state and local pageants.

Mrs. Graves is employed by American Airlines in the grooming department for flight attendants and also is a fashion model in the Dallas-Fort Worth area. She has been active in pageant work for many years.

Cole has held various offices in the Southwest Theater Conference, National Theater Conference, U.S. Institute for Theater Technology and the American National Theater and Academy.

He also has been honored with the first David C. Bryant Award for his outstanding contribution to community theater. Cole is president of the International Amateur Theater Association.

Miss Cushman is a member of the board of directors of the Miss Texas Pageant and is a traveling companion for Miss Texas.

Dunn is president and founder of International Productions and Publications, Inc., and is the publisher of the annual "Who's Who In Pageants." He also is board chairman of the International Beauty Pageant Hall of Fame.

Dunn founded the Worldwide Youth Crusade, an international organization dedicated to setting higher ideals for modern youth. He is recognized as a leading authority on baton twirling in the nation.

Finalists, who were named at preliminary judging in October, include Marilyn Campbell, Terry Lynn Eoff, Judi L. Johnson, Alice Kindle, Judy O'Banion, Rhonda Porter, Karen C. Roberts, Liz Robinson, Rae Lynn Stone, Debra S. Tyler, Dana Wendel and Kathy Zaicek.

Tickets for the pageant are available at Hemphill-Wells Box Office and at Dunlap's. They also will be available at the door. Admission is $3.

Cindy Leonard never thought of her life as a source of inspiration to others. That is, not until a dramatic event in May of 1975.

Traveling alone on a business trip to San Marcos, late one afternoon she suddenly realized she could not get out of bed to answer the motel room's phone.

"I couldn't move, and then I heard someone knocking at the door," she related. "I was very scared, and I didn't have any idea what was happening."

At the local hospital she could only say "You wouldn't believe...." and nod her head 'yes' or 'no.' Because of her age, 24, doctors suspected she was a victim of a drug overdose. Finally, after three days of tests, a brain scan revealed that Mrs. Leonard had had a stroke.

Today Cindy lives a relatively normal life in Lubbock with her husband, Harry, and son, Will. Watching and hearing Cindy talk about her experiences give no indication she was once a stroke victim.

After several years of therapy, she feels recovered. "I had to learn to read and write all over again. I felt so dumb, not able to even write my name. My stroke affected the left side of my brain. I have been told that if I had a stroke on my right side, I would be paralyzed today," she said.

Her husband, an ambulance driver studying to be a paramedic, adds that Cindy officially had a cerebral aneurism that caused the stroke. "It's like a weak spot in a vessel or artery. For example, it's like a hose that has a weak spot. When one puts a lot of water pressure on the spot, it bursts," he said.

Cindy said she had no history of high blood pressure. "I feel emotional problems and smoking had something to do with it," she adds.

Today Cindy continues to take medication, watch her diet, avoids alcohol, "and equally as important, I avoid emotional upsets. I have been communicating with people for about a year now," she said.

Cindy credits her recovery to her faith. "I believe in God, have a whole lot of faith, and a lot of support from my family. I tried to say 'Jesus I need some help' but I couldn't. He knew I needed Him. And my prayers have been answered. I am a very lucky girl."

She also credits her husband's understanding and patience as helpful during her recovery. "He was a whole bunch of help to me. He could really get angry with me when I couldn't say, for example, the word 'Coke.' But he would make me work on it until I could say 'Coke' by myself," she said.

Cindy likes to plug one of her favorite organizations, the Stroke Club. An affiliate of the American Heart Association, members here range in age from their middle 20s to middle 70s. With more than 30 couples on its rolls, the group meets the last Tuesday of each month at St. Mary of the Plains Hospital and Rehabilitation Center in Lubbock.

"There are no dues for the club, and requirements are that members be stroke or polio victims, or those with heart or brain impediment," she said.

The club has a speaker each month, "and we try to do something that interests everybody ... We had a Thanksgiving party and are planning a Christmas prty," she said.

There are 22 cities in Texas that have formed Stroke Clubs, and anyone interested can phone 792-0537 for more information. The club has been in existence in Lubbock for five years.

"When one has a stroke, it takes a lot for a family to deal with. The club helps families and victims adjust to such ordeals," she adds.

Cindy can't read as much as she used to. "It takes me longer. I guess it would take me a whole year to read a book," she said, laughing.

Her husband adds, "But the more she practices, the better she becomes."

Wanting to help area stroke victims, Cindy hopes to inspire many people in the same situation that she once was in. "I want to help people. And if I can't help a whole group of people, then I want to help one person. That is my goal in life."

PRESCRIPTION ADS OKAYED

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed rule to establish the legal right of pharmacists to advertise prices for prescription drugs has been withdrawn by the Federal Trade Commission as unnecessary. It said a 1976 Supreme Court decision established this right and because "private interference with retail pharmacists' decisions to advertise prices has declined."

RYAN AT JONESTOWN — The late Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., left, talks to Peoples Temple member Brian Bouquette, from Burlingame, Calif. at the Peoples Temple site in Jonestown, Guyana. Ryan told him that his mother was in Georgetown, and wished to see him. Bouquette replied: "I only wish to see her through the sights of a rifle." Bouquette was among those who died in the murder-suicide at Jonestown. This photo was discovered in a camp dark-room by Guyanese officials attempting to identify victims. (AP Laserphoto)

Officials Advise Disabled Persons

Although the government recently has changed the amounts of money which can be earned by disabled persons without disqualifying them from Social Security and Supplemental Security income benefits, the amount of income still must be reported to the Social Security Administration.

Spokesmen in the Lubbock office said the Social Security law requires a report from all persons who work, regardless of the amount of pay they receive.

Questions concerning person who work but still draw disability checks can be directed to the Social Security office. A booklet containing pertinent information also is available from the Social Security office in Lubbock's Federal Building.

Utility Payment Drop Boxes Moved

Two Lubbock Power and Light utility payment drop boxes have been moved to new locations.

The box at United Supermarket at 203 N. University Ave. has been moved to 106 N. University Ave., and the box at the United at 1720 Parkway Drive has been relocated in the new United store at East Fourth Street and Idalou Highway.

The changes were necessitated by the purchase of several local Piggly Wiggly stores by United stores.

Carole Baron has been appointed vice-president and editor-in-chief of Pocket Books.

The couple plans to be married Dec. 30 in St. Paul's On The Plains Episcopal Church.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY THE LATE GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.
IN COLLABORATION WITH PAUL E. RUBLE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you explain the details of Marie-Strumpell disease? A doctor told us our grandson has this. Is it curable or is there anything one can do to help it? Is it always crippling? His shoulders are a bit stooped now. He has had it for some time. Any advice would be appreciated. — Mrs. D.D.

This is a form of arthritis that hits males chiefly. It usually appears in the 20s, but may begin as early as 10. Another name for it is ankylosing spondylitis. Ankylosing refers to a stiffening or fusing of a joint. Spondylitis refers to spinal discs, which are affected.

Sorry to say there is no specific effective treatment except exercises to strengthen back muscles and thus preserve as much spine function as possible. The spine stiffening goes on slowly for many years, then tends to arrest itself. The lad's future depends on how long the process does continue and how fused the discs (of the lower spine) become. The stoop is characteristic of this disease, and a condition called poker spine may develop. The exercises are important, but I will not try to describe them for you in this brief space. His doctor should be able to be more specific. Hot baths prior to the exercises help, and medicines help relieve any pain. You do not mention the boy's age, but he is fortunate if the condition was found early and the therapy started promptly. An early symptom of this sometimes overlooked problem is low back pain, especially in the morning. Although considered one of the arthritis diseases, tests do not reveal the rheumatoid factor that is present in rheumatoid arthritis. The only real clue is the pain resulting with back manipulation. X-rays confirm it. In some, a certain abnormal blood substance may be found. You may find that other family members have had this.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell your readers who work in nursing homes to keep the temperature set for the comfort of the residents, not of the staff. It should not be uncomfortable for 24 hours each day so the staff can be comfortable for 8. If women staffers are warm wearing pants uniforms they will be cooler in dresses. Also, there should be blankets on the residents' beds. Even on a warm summer night just a sheet for covering is not enough for elderly people. I speak from the experience of having parents in a nursing home. — Mrs. H.B.

I agree with you, and would only add a timely reminder about keeping wintertime temperatures comfortable as well.

Dear Doctor: What could the reason be for one of my nipples leaking a drop of yellow liquid every now and then? I am 56. My doctor thinks there is nothing the matter because the nipple looks OK and he can feel no lumps. Please comment. — L.L.

Nipple ducts are kept open normally by the discharge of small amounts of mucus. This may be heavier in some women than in others. I suspect this is the case with you. Normally, such discharge is all but invisible. A Pap smear is in order, nonetheless, and I suggest you have one done whether lumps are felt or not.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: I wept over the letter from the woman who accused you of ruining her life by advising her to tell her fiance about her out-of-wedlock twins. (She did and he dumped her.) This is to tell you you were right.

When I began dating my husband, we were discussing "people from the past." (We were 19 and 21 at the time.) He said he had been to bed with only one other girl, and that was during high school. I said, "You're lucky you didn't get her pregnant." A strange look came over his face. He said, "There is something I should tell you that I've never told anyone else." He then confessed that she did become pregnant, though to this day his family doesn't know. The girl had a stillborn at seven months. He took her to the hospital when it happened. It was a baby girl and they buried her quietly in a cemetery. I can't tell you how my heart went out to him.

A couple of weeks later, at my urging, we went to the cemetery together and found a small numbered grave in an area simply called "Babyland." We both cried and he told me he loves me more for my understanding. I surely loved him more for his honesty. We never discussed it again.

That was eight years ago. We have been married five years and have a beautiful relationship based on love and trust.

I can't say I always agree with your advice, but you surely hit home on this one. — A Bouquet For The Bullseye

Dear Bouquet: Thanks for letting me know. I've said it before and I'll say it again. The most painful, shabbiest truth is better than the best-dressed lie.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband died 11 months ago and my children are far away. I'm sure they will phone on the 25th and say "Merry Christmas." I'll say the same and then my heart wil break. I'm miserable and feel so alone.

I am not a self-pitier and I do have a great many friends. At least seven people have said, "If you don't have anything else to do we would love to have you join us for Christmas." I'm sure they mean it but I wouldn't consider such a general invitation. I've even received some notes and Christmas cards saying, "If you aren't spoken for already, please drop by on Christmas Eve — or Christmas Day."

Since Jack's death I have tried to project an image of strength and independence. I can't ruin it all by begging someone to take me in for the holidays. There will be other occasions and I need to know what to do. Can you help me? — Alone

Dear Alone: The key to your problem lies in the sentence, "Since Jack's death I have tried to project an image of strength and independence." Then you go on to say, "I can't ruin it," etc.

Why do you feel that need to project an image? A widow has a right to be lonely, frightened and in need of emotional support. To accept an invitation (even a rather vague one) does not mean you are begging to be taken in.

Next time someone says, "If you aren't doing anything on Christmas, Saturday, Columbus Day or Easter," respond immediately with, "I'd love to be with you. Let's make it a firm date. What time?"

Going to a wedding? Giving one? Or standing up for one? Even if you're already married Ann Landers's completely new "The Bride's Guide" will answer questions about today's weddings. For a copy, send a dollar bill, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (24 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Local Scouts Plan Bulb Planting At Elementary School

Ninety-four Girl Scouts and 25 adults will take part in a bulb planting ceremony from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday at Nat Williams School.

The scouts will plant 100 King Alfred daffodils to beautify their school ground and show their gratitude to their principal, Earl Lockett.

This date was chosen as the planting time to assure the bulbs blooming as close to Girl Scout Week, March 11-17, as possible. During that week girls will culminate the planting by participating in an all-school assembly in recognition of Girl Scout Week for their schoolmates and to present an appreciation plaque to Lockett.

Nat Williams Elementary School has provided meeting space for seven troops over the years and granted three special parties: a Juliette Low get-together in October, a Thinking Day party for parents and the Girl Scout Week ceremony in the spring. Scouts will raise and lower the school flag for each of the days during the birthday week and take part in a flag ceremony for the PTA.

Mrs. Darrell Krenek is the organizer for the school. Mrs. Sandy Spears is coordinator for the bulb planting. Leaders include Mrs. Pat Havenhill, Mrs. Martha Talbut, Mrs. Diane Roberts, Mrs. Elaine Malloy, Mrs. Barbara Freer, Mrs. Linda Stewart and Mrs. Spears.

Circuit probe shines like an elaborate jewel; the probe, 1¼" in diameter, automatically tests computers' tiny electronic chips in square at center.

COMPUTER PATTERNS

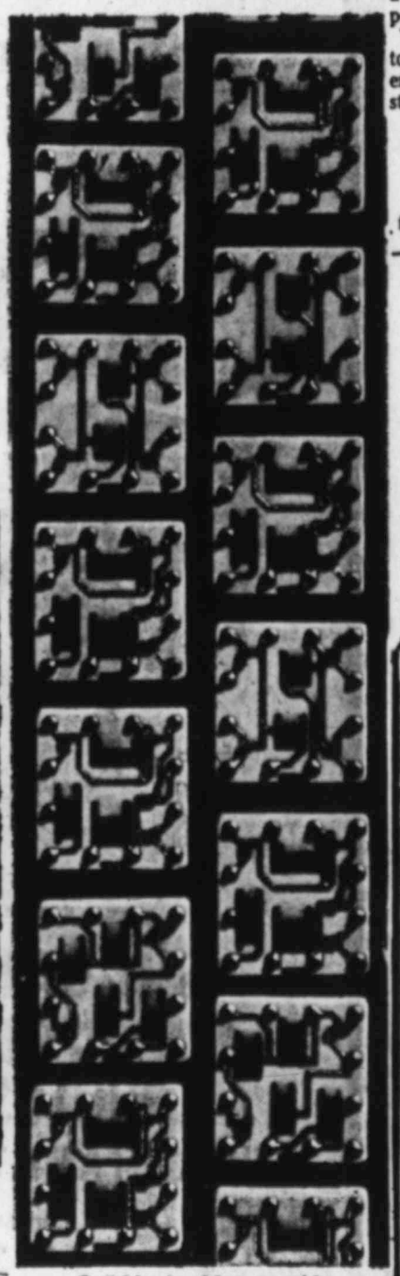

Have you ever thought of getting inside the computer world to enjoy the view? It turns out that the assembled hardware of microelectronics can look pretty smart as well as act smart. Precision, refinement of design and symmetry are basic to computer function—and they're easy on the eye too, as these photos supplied by IBM show. A modern computer has hundreds of thousands of tiny components, perfect in microscopic detail, systematically organized, performing similar functions. The result is not only single, gem-like pieces but repeating patterns of them—a kind of abstract art which is a nice spinoff of efficiency.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Our economy is in the news a lot these days.

Every time I read of a move by the president to remedy the situation, I say a silent prayer: "Please, God, don't let him borrow from Amy. We're not that desperate."

People who have never borrowed from children could possibly see it as a way out. After all, it is a fact that children control the wealth of this country. But, for those parents who have ever tapped them for a loan, it's an experience one never forgets.

It was children who first initiated some of the loan expressions we have come to know and fear. Expressions like: "I'll break both of your legs," "How would you like a cement overcoat?" and "I understand you have a mother in New Jersey."

I had a neighbor once who fell upon hard times and had to withdraw $700 from her son's savings account. The kid had a wire service for a mouth. No group was too small to enlighten with all the intimate details and confidences surrounding the loan and the repayment. One night he came into a cocktail party in his pajamas, went over to his mother, kissed her lightly on both cheeks and announced loudly, "Noon tomorrow."

Somehow, it seemed cruel when you stopped to consider that the $700 was the first payment to the orthodontist on the kid's overbite.

You never really realize how much wealth a child can accrue until you stop to consider these facts:

(a) A child does not pay for room, board, medical expenses, entertainment, charitable contributions, education, clothing, travel or herbal shampoo;

(b) He gets an allowance for breathing;

(c) Grandparents conspire to make him or her independently wealthy before the age of six;

(d) As soon as he is able to unclench his fist, he places a pocket-size computer in it and becomes a major lending institution.

Frankly, I'm worried about the president's wage insurance policy where people with wage increases that are held below 7 percent in a given year would get a tax rebate if inflation rose more than 7 percent in the same year.

The kids in the treehouses aren't going to like that. And if they're not happy, every adult in this country with an outstanding debt could be in big trouble.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The late Kenneth Konstam was one of the greatest rubber bridge players of all time.

In rubber bridge there is something called table presence that means more than almost anything else and Kenneth possessed this faculty in the highest degree.

Derek Rimington, in an article in Popular Bridge monthly, gives today's hand as an example of Kenneth at his best.

His double of three notrump was based on three factors: 1. He knew cards were going to break badly for declarer. 2. He knew that North was an overbidder. 3. He knew that South did not play the dummy very well.

There was a fourth factor. He knew he was going to lead the deuce of spades.

Dummy's jack fell to East's queen. Back came a club and South was in. A really alert declarer would see that he was in real trouble and go after diamonds in an effort to save as much as possible from the wreck, but South led a second spade. We won't carry on from there except to report that when the smoke lifted South had been held to five top tricks and was 1100 points poorer.

Photography Center Celebrates Fourth Birthday

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

For its fourth birthday recently, the International Center of Photography in New York City had a memorable week of celebration.

It started with a gala birthday benefit party with Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis graciously greeting guests and included the opening night of an exhibition of dance photographs; then went on to a President's Council night; special press meetings; a Photography Community Day open house; and finally a Membership Day Party.

There were good reasons for ICP's week of celebration, for it signified the end of a perilous three-year infancy, and the emergence of a photographic-museum-mecca with an assured maturity, strength and permanence. Executive director Cornell Capa was able to announce some good news and dramatic plans for the immediate future.

The good news: ICP was awarded a $200,000 challenge grant by the National Endowment for the Arts. Since it had to compete with hundreds of other worthy nationwide organizations for the grant, it signified recognition of ICP's importance in the field of America's cultural arts. To complete the grant, ICP must raise three times that amount from its own resources. But with the NEA award assured, Capa anticipates less trouble in fulfilling ICP's part on its own behalf because of new increased strength in its board members, corporate support and gallery endowments.

The dramatic plans: ICP's participation in two upcoming photographic projects of international scope.

First there will be a two-month involvement, with "Japan Today," an extraordinary program for spring of 1979 to inform Americans about that nation.

Second, ICP's collaboration in photography's first major convocation in Venice during the summer of 1979 with sponsorship jointly by UNESCO-Venice and the Municipality of Venice. Called "Venezia '79-La Fotografia," it will be the largest cultural photographic gathering in the history of the medium, it is claimed.

The fourth birthday benefit party marked the opening of ICP's exhibition, "Fleeting Gestures: Treasures of Dance Photography." It consists of more than 200 photographs of the dance from the 1850s to the present and in its variations from the classical to modern.

The dance exists only during its performance and as Martha Graham once said, "The only record of a dancer's art lies in the other arts."

The exhibition reveals photography's ability to record the beauty, poetry, grace and strength of dancers from legendary stars such as Isadora Duncan and Martha Graham to unknown performers dedicated to the art. The images, too, are from a diverse assemblage of photographers and among them are: Cecil Beaton, Desderi, Horst P. Horst, Arnold Genthe, Baron de Meyer, Barbara Morgan, Edward Steichen and James Van Der Zee.

In addition to the exhibition, there's a catalogue, postcards, films, lectures, dance performances and plans for this to become a traveling exhibition when the curtain closes on the show at the International Center of Photography Jan. 7, 1979.

Capa visited Venice and Tokyo recently to finalize the plans for ICP's participation in both photographic projects.

The "Japan Today" program will take place simultaneously in 16 major institutions in four cities — New York, Washington, Chicago and Denver — with grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the National Endowment for the Arts, the Japan Foundation and Matsushita Electric. It will be organized and coordinated by the Japan Society, Smithsonian Institution and Meridian House International.

ICP's special contribution for the two-month spring 1979 tribute will be "Japan: A Self Portrait," an exhibition of the work of outstanding contemporary Japanese photographers. All of ICP's gallery space will be devoted to the 200-or-so photographs which deal with postwar Japan and with special focus on the '70s. The April-May exhibition, made possible by a grant from Olympus Camera Corp., will travel to other cities after the event.

The "Venezia '79 — La Fotografia" program will feature numerous solo and thematic exhibitions, master workshops, lectures, symposia and other events throughout the city of Venice June 11-Sept. 16, 1979.

ICP and UNESCO will be responsible for organizing the exhibitions and educational programs in cooperation with other institutions, photographic galleries and private collectors. Their plans include 25 exhibitions from around the world that reflect the theme, "Trends and Masters of the 20th Century."

This body of work has been assembled in the past decade and will be brought together for the first time in a city which possesses the necessary facilities and the art history to create an impressive stage for such a huge undertaking. While the exhibitions are being displayed, 36 or more master workshops will be taught by world-renowned photographers, educators and historians.

Kids Can Embroider Sampler

Cross stitch wall decorations and samplers fit right into the nostalgic holiday scene with their formal, quaintly charming designs. A truly easy-to-do needlecraft, cross stitch can be mastered quickly by youngsters who can embroider the little "x's" to outline simple patterns traced on the cloth for them.

Historically, samplers were the school girl's art. For more advanced crafters, intricate designs are available. You'll add warmth to any room in the house with the beautiful example of cross stitch shown. "God Bless Our Home" can be completed by a novice to become a family keepsake to treasure for generations.

The kit contains a design stamped on Belgian linen, cotton embroidery floss, diagram and instructions. The finished sampler measures 9-inches by 22-inches.

Order Kit, No. 00587 for $5.49 plus $1.45 postage and handling for the sampler or order Kit No. 00588 for $15.99 plus $1.95 postage and handling for sampler and frame.

Send your name, address, order and remittance to Creative Home Crafts Dept. 8BB, P.O. Box 1281, Locust at 17th, Des Moines, Iowa 50336. Chimney Sometimes Leaks

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q. — The fireplace in our living room seems to work very well. The draft is good and no smoke comes into the room when a fire is on. Lately, however, we notice a slight drip into the pit of the fireplace whenever there is a heavy rain storm, especially if it is accompanied by high winds. Can you tell us what is causing this?

A. — Nearly all chimneys have either caps or smoke shelves. If yours has either, then the water must be coming in through the bricks themselves or via an opening in the chimney flashing. You can inspect the part of the chimney that is exposed and the flashing at the point where the chimney disappears into the roof, assuming that you are experienced and agile enough to do roof work, but if you cannot find the source of the leak, you will have to hire a professional. In many cases, the openings are such that the rain does not get through unless driven by wind.

Q. — Our living room floor was varnished many years ago. It is beginning to look a bit seedy. We are thinking about finishing it this time with a penetrating wood sealer which we understand is easier to touch up when it starts to wear in certain areas. Can this be applied right over the varnish?

A. — No. That type of finish is intended to be applied to raw wood. You will have to remove the varnish, preferably via sanding. Rent a floor sander, but be sure to take possession of it shortly before beginning the job, otherwise you will be paying for the rental during a period when the sander is idle.

Q. — Our shingled house had a wood preservative applied to it about five years ago. Now we want to paint it white. Does anything have to be put on over the preservative before we apply the paint? Or do we have to remove the preservative first? Someone told us that the paint will not adhere over the present finish, which is completely colorless.

A. — The preservative sinks into the wood and acts as a sealer. It cannot be applied over paint, but paint most certainly can be applied over it, especially if it is the clear type without pigmented materials. However, before going ahead with the job, inspect the exterior walls carefully and smooth down any irregularities and tighten any loose shingles.

(For either of Andy Lang's booklets, "Wood Finishing in the Home" or "Paint Your House Inside and Out," send 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Skill Requirements Ordered By Board

LINTHICUM, Md. (AP) — The state Board of Education has approved a proposal requiring students to develop leisure skills in sports and the arts in order to graduate.

State education department staff members must now determine the scope and number of skills to be taught, and return to the board with specifics. Students probably will be be exposed to some physical education and participate in art, music, crafts or drama, officials said Wednesday.

Set Of Soviet Stamps Honors 1980 Games

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

It's anchors aweigh for the Soviet Union in its latest stamp set.

Yachting events of the XXII Olympiad are featured on the fifth in a series of semi-postals honoring the 1980 Olympic Games scheduled for Moscow and Tallinn. The set consists of five different denominations and a souvenir sheet. The additional values on the stamps will help defray the expenses of the Olympic Games.

The 4 plus 2 kopecks (blue, brown and black) shows a boat in the Star Class. The 6 plus 3 kopecks (blue, brown and black) depicts the Soling Class. The 10 plus 5 kopecks (blue, aqua and black) illustrates the 470 Class. The 16 plus 6 kopecks (blue, brown and black) portrays the Finn Class. The 20 plus 10 kopecks (red, blue, grey and brown) features the Flying Dutchman Class. The 50 plus 25 kopecks souvenir sheet (blue, red, violet and black) has a view of a ship in the Tornado class with others in the background. Each stamp bears the inscription "XXII Olympic Games" at the top.

Collectors who specialize in ships on stamps and Olympic Games will want to add these items to their collections. Yachting was first introduced into modern Olympic competition at the second Olympiad in 1900. After a brief hiatus, the sport has been a part of every Olympic endeavor since 1908.

Soviet postal authorities say the stamps are being issued in singles, sheets, and plate blocks.

A new 50-cent Domestic Parcel Post Insurance booklet for use in U.S. Postal Service self-service vending machines is now available. The booklet contains a gummed, parcel-post insurance label, and the price reflects the recent increase in the cost of the service from 40 cents to 50 cents.

These are labels rather than postage stamps. However, there are some collectors who specialize in these odd items as an addition to their regular U.S. property.

If you missed getting first-day covers of the U.S. stamp honoring photography, there is a special cachet available with the theme "Remembering the Good Times," prepared by the International Stamp Collectors Society.

The gold-tone cachet shows one of the oldest 19th-century cameras. The antique photographic equipment depicted is an early box camera mounted on a base with two metal animals and the official U.S. Postal Service postmark.

Center Sets Holiday Party

The Texas Tech Ranching Heritage Center will hold an old-fashioned Christmas party Dec. 14, with music, hot chocolate, cold cider, popcorn balls, cookies and pathways lit by lanterns for visitor touring.

While buildings on the historic outdoor site will not be open to visitors, there will be Christmas activities in several of the historic homes. Visitors can peer through windows and watch holiday preparations and hear music provided by Lubbock area and Texas Tech musicians.

The David M. DeVitt and Mallet Ranch Building will open at 6:30 p.m. for browsing in Cogdell's General Store and the Edith Whatley McKanna Parlor.

The cost is $2 per family with refreshments being sold on the Richard T. Campbell Patio. A portion of the proceeds will go to the Ranching Heritage Association.

The event is being sponsored by the Docent Guild of the Texas Tech Museum.

The Ranching Heritage Center is a 12-acre outdoor exhibit of the Tech Museum authentically depicting the history of ranching in the American West.

PRISONER RELEASE

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The government plans to release 5,000 prisoners Monday, some of whom have been held 12 years without trial, government officials announced Thursday. The release brings the total number of prisoners released this year to about 10,000, officials said. They have been held since the outbreak of an abortive communist coup in 1965, the officials said.

Graduation Scheduled At LCC

Baccalaureate and graduation ceremonies for Lubbock Christian College's first class of December graduates will be Dec. 8 and 9.

Baccalaureate ceremonies will take place during the normal 10 a.m. Chapel time Dec. 8 in the Moody Auditorium. Dr. Joe D. Schubert, minister of the Houston Brammel Road Church of Christ, will be the guest speaker.

Following baccalaureate services, a reception for the school's 28 graduates will be conducted from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. in the Betty Hancock Parlor. An Ex-Students dinner is planned for 7:30 p.m. in the President's Dining Room.

Commencement exercises will start at 9 a.m. Dec. 9 with Kent Hance, the 19th District's newly elected U.S. representative, as featured speaker.

Following commencement exercises, the LCC faculty will host a dinner for graduates and their families in the President's Dining Room.

Agencies Recruit On Tech Campus

Peace Corps and VISTA representatives will continue their recruiting campaign through Friday at the Texas Tech Information Booth in the University Center from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Dallas office representatives Yvonne Rodgers and Cris Deborjas, who have manned the booth since Wednesday, will interview persons interested in serving in developing countries worldwide and in America's poor communities.

Peace Corps and VISTA officials say they still need skilled technicians, but more emphasis is now placed on sincere motivation, adaptability, imagination and the commitment to help others.

Additional information can be obtained by calling (214) 749-1855.

Dr. Johnson Chosen For Editor's Post

Dr. Eileen Johnson, principal investigator of the Lubbock Lake Site research project of The Museum of Texas Tech University, has been elected editor of publications for the Texas Archeological Society. The term of office is three years.

Dr. Johnson's "reputation as editor of museum publications at Tech is exemplary," according to nominations committee chairman Pat Wheat of the Houston public school system.

Most Items Of Food Ample This Month

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here's the December food outlook as reported by the Agriculture Department's Agricultural Marketing Service.

Beef supplies will be adequate, although production will be slightly less than a year ago. Pork will be adequate also with production about the same as last year.

Chicken will be plentiful with marketing up six to eight percent from last year, while turkey supplies will be adequate.

Eggs, milk and dairy products in general will be in adequate supply although on Oct. 1 commercial stocks of butter, nonfat dry milk and American cheese were down substantially from the average.

Fresh apples, winter pears, cranberries, grapefruit and tangerines will be plentiful while supplies of oranges are merely adequate.

Household Fuel Price Hikes Predicted

Most consumers won't find themselves paying much more for natural gas Friday when the first stage of federal deregulation of natural gas prices goes into effect.

But they will see a series of price increases beginning in the spring and continuing through 1985, when much of the fuel will be freed from federal price controls, according to gas utilities around the nation.

"I don't think that come December 1 everyone's going to get a higher gas bill," said David Morehead, a spokesman for the American Gas Association, a leading industry group. "Some will, but it's going to come in spurts."

The AGA estimates that the average residential gas bill, now $277 a year, will rise about $20 a year as a result of the new regulations.

"We think that the effect will be minimal and gradual," said Robert Dixon, vice president of Connecticut Natural Gas Corp. "I don't envision anything radical."

"My understanding is there will be no immediate impact at all on gas rates in Philadelphia," said Alan Simms, spokesman for Philadelphia Gas Works, which services 540,000 customers. "If there is any effect at all, it will be gradual over a period of time."

The new natural gas rules are an outgrowth of the energy bill passed by Congress in October. The bill calls for deregulation of newly discovered natural gas by 1985; regulations on older gas will be softened.

The deregulation will come in steps beginning Friday. That's when, under interim rules approved by the Federal Eenergy Regulation Commission Wednesday, the legal ceiling on the price of new gas will rise at least 7.2 percent and as much as 300 percent, depending on the well.

But the new prices, most of them on the lower end of that scale, will take some time trickling down from gas producers through pipeline operators and utilities to consumers.

"Until we get the bill from our supplier, we will not be able to assess the impact," said Bill Gillette, spokesman for Columbia Gas of Ohio Inc.

There will also be delays because of state regulatory restrictions. Many gas utilties that want to raise prices have not yet gotten approval from state commissions.

"Out-of-state suppliers are raising their rates and then we are reflecting those increases in our rates," said Rich Nemec, spokesman for Southern California Gas Co. "But before the consumer would feel it, it would have to go through the state regulatory process, and that would probably be completed around April 1."

Other gas utilities list similar schedules. But a couple are ready to institute price increases as soon as the rules become effective.

Mountain Fuel Supply Co., which serves Utah and part of Wyoming, asked last Friday for a 6.08 percent rate hike which spokesman John Keahey said was in response to deregulation. Montana-Dakota Utilities has also applied for a price increase which will cost the average customer of the utility about $4.80 a month.

Gas industry officials say the price increases over the seven years before deregulation will probably be only slightly greater than the rate of inflation.

"Basically what we think is that the consumer's bill is going to go up 2 or 3 percent over the next few years — that's without inflation," said Morehead. "No one's expecting anything outrageous."

Judge Sets Utility Payment Deadline

CLEVELAND (AP) — U.S. District Judge Robert Krupansky has given the city of Cleveland until Dec. 31 to pay a $5 million debt to the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. or face seizure of city property.

The judge, who ruled Wednesday, also denied motions from the city to allow it to substitute land for assets already seized by CEI and said he will no longer stand in the way of property seizures by the utility to satisfy its debt. Krupansky characterized the city's plight as an "obviously forseeable financial catastrophe" which he warned city officials about more than 21 months ago.

What in the World is happening today?

Sparked by progressive dedicated teachers, today's students are taking an increasingly active interest in the world at large. One way they are getting the information they want is through the classroom use of daily newspapers.

Daily newspapers are serving as a vital addition to the list of resources available to teachers. Within the pages of daily newspapers, there is current information relating to virtually every area of study. Subjects such as social studies, economics, science and geography are brought vividly to life in current news articles.

Newspaper reading also contributes to a child's grasp of language and improves writing, spelling, and English usage skills.

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL • TEXAS •

Perhaps most important, newspapers can make children aware of the events and ideas which shape their world, helping them to become informed and participating members of society.

This newspaper offers special educational services to teachers in its circulation area. Teachers not familiar with these services, are invited to write or telephone for complete information.

Energy Advisory Board Studies Gas Diversion

AUSTIN (AP) — If anyone decides when to divert Texas natural gas to other states, it should be the Texas Railroad Commission, a blue-ribbon advisory committee recommended Thursday.

Under the federal natural gas pricing act passed this year, gas from producing states can be diverted to states with a shortage. It will take several months to understand the new law, the 72-member Texas Energy Advisory Committee agreed.

The railroad commission should decide when a temporary surplus exists in the intrastate market, said Earl Ogden of Chapparal Minerals of Abilene.

"We envision this as allowing the railroad commission to allow gas to go into interstate markets when there is a need elsewhere without it being permanentaly dedicated to out-of-state markets," said Ogden.

Congress did not specify who should declare a surplus condition, he added.

Protection of the state's electric generating system and excess profits taxes were other subjects considered during a draft of a state energy policy. State agency heads, consumer groups, oil and gas producers and private industry are represented on the committee.

The group makes recommendations to the Texas Energy Council, composed of 10 state officials.

Approximately 70 percent of electric generating capacity in Texas is linked in an intrastate system not subject to federal control, a committee document said.

The Texas system has provided superior service and the Texas Public Utility Commission should fight hooking up Texas utilities with a national system, the committee agreed.

Excess profits tax should not mentioned in any state energy policy, Ogden said. An early policy draft states that "free market conditions be allowed to prevail possibly accompanied by an excess profits tax on old oil."

No one knows what "excess profit" means or how it would be taxed under future federal legislation, Ogden said.

"I don't think we ought to rock the boat now and comment on it," he said. "We might come out (of Congress) with legislation without it."

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong told the group of his fight to deregulate price on natural gas produced from state lands. Armstrong and Attorney General John Hill have asked President Carter to lift price controls on May 31, 1978.

"For every dollar increase the state would get (from an expected price rise) that's a dollar we can use to solve our own problems and not go to Washington for help," he said.

(Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 East Dayton Street, West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.)

HEARTLINE: I am a widow, age 68. I have had Medicare since I was age 65. I knew it paid on hospital bills, but did not know, until recently, that it would help pay doctor's charges. I have always kept receipts for all my medical bills. I am now wondering if I can make a claim to Medicare on these bills I've had since age 65. Can I? — J.R.

There is a time limit on filing claims to Medicare. You can file claims on your bills that go back to Oct. 1, 1976, if you file them before Dec. 31, 1978. For medical services you received between Oct. 1, 1977, and Sept. 30, 1978, you would have until Dec. 31, 1979, to send in your claim. If you have had quite a few medical services since Oct. 1, 1976, we would advise you to prepare all your claims just through Oct. 1, 1977, now, since you have a limited time to send them in. Then you can wait until after the first of the year to submit all the more recent claims. Remember to send only copies of your receipts and never the originals.

You should also get some literature about Medicare to help you determine which of your bills are for covered a services. You can pick up a free copy of Your Medicare Handbook at any Social Security office. Heartline also has a booklet on Medicare that is in easy-to-understand question and answer form. To order, send $1.75 to Heartline's Guide to Medicare-1979 edition, 114 East Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. Please allow eight weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: My husband plans to retire at age 65. We have a daughter in high school that we will be supporting for another three to six years. I am now employed and will be until she finishes college. Will my husband and daughter be able to draw on his Social Security account even though I continue to work? — R.L.

Your employment will have no effect on your husband's and daughter's Social Security benefits. When they make application for the benefits, be sure that you tell Social Security that you plan to remain employed and do not wish to receive mother:s benefits at this time.

HEARTLINE: I am a nurse. I do not understand why someone has not come up with a type of medical identification card that allows a person to record more information than a particular allergy, blood type, or specific hidden medical problem. I work with mostly older people and many of these people have very complex medical conditions. A bracelet giving limited information is fine, certainly better than nothing. However, it seems to me that a nation that can put a man on the moon could certainly come up with more effective medical identification. — G.S.

There is a company that makes available a card which has a built-in microfilm frame which, when placed under any standard micro-film reader, displays a person's complete medical history, including surgery and first aid authorization. (You do not have to give surgery and first aid authorization if you do not want to.)

You simply fill out a medical form which this company sends you and return it. They convert your medical form to microfilm, insert it into your own waterproof plastic card, and send the card to you. So now, you can carry a card which has your complete medical history on a microfilm, including: your physical description, name, address, phone number, Social Security number, your insurance companies, your Medicare number, your employer's name, name and address of your physician, persons to be notified in case of emergency, your religion, present medication and dose schedule, allergies, chronic ailments, major surgeries, present medical treatment, shot record, blood type, and past conditions. In addition to giving your authorization for first aid treatment and surgery, you also have the option of designating that you wish to donate your kidneys, eyes or body to medical science.

Each card is coded with your own code number and contains a 24-hour emergency phone number. Should those emergency personnel attending you not have a microfilm reader, they can call this number collect and within seconds receive any information on your microfilm record.

This service is inexpensive and Heartline recommends it to everyone. Regardless of whether you are an older American or a child, you should carry something like this with you at all times. Any nurse or doctor will agree. For information, write to Heartline, Dept. I.D., 114 East Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. Include 25 cents for postage and handling and we will send you information about this company.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

How do you get bathtub appliques off? I have never found anyone who knows how, and mine are looking shabby and need to be replaced. — E.B.

You don't seem to be the only one who doesn't know how to remove those "pretty when new but icky when old" decals. We've gotten several pleas for help.

You'll be flabbergasted when you find out just how easy it is and how common the solvent — just plain ol' fingernail polish remover. But a word of caution: use it on porcelain tubs only, as fingernail polish remover will damage fiberglass tubs. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

If you are like me, you dislike wrapping gifts that aren't in a box.

I start early and save cereal boxes, cake boxes, etc.

I wrap the article in a little tissue paper and slip it into the box for gift wrapping.

It really turns out to be fun when we open the gifts, as the grandchildren are always wondering if they are going to get — cereal, croutons, or what.

Imagine the chuckle when my 14-year-old grandson opened a cigarette carton to find tube socks in it.

Or another finding a pair of panties in a margarine carton.

My packages always look nice, and the boxes can be thrown away without feeling you have to save them for future use. — Pat Bittner

That's probably the best part: no boxes to stack or store. Thanks, hon. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

With a new baby in the family, I found this little hint very helpful.

The fitted crib sheets I bought were not made well enough to stay tucked in, what with baby's movements.

I was forever tucking in the sides. I attached the bottoms of two metal snaps at one-third intervals on the edge of each side of all my sheets.

I then attached the tops of the snaps to two pieces of elastic about 15 inches in length.

After cleaning baby's crib, I put the sheets on the mattress, attach the elastic strips, and no more tucking.

Because the elastic is on the bottom of the mattress, away from baby's reach, I feel my baby's crib is a little safer place — no more pulled up sheets to become tangled with baby — Wendy Tyndall

DEAR HELOISE:

When baking cookies, as soon as I remove them from the cookie sheet, I wipe off, or rinse off, the cookie sheet and slip it into the oven.

The heat is off in the oven, but the warmth is still there from baking. The heat dries the sheet easily, and it is not left in the sink or on the cabinet to add to the baking clutter. — Jael Byrd

DEAR HELOISE:

This is a hint for animal lovers. You see, I have three fuzzy cats.

In the winter, I feel bad about petting them as they build so much static that they get "zapped" when you touch them.

Now I take one of those wonderful clothes dryer anti-static sheets, rub the cats with it, and voila! no more shocks. — Deborah Bewly

I bet your cats appreciate that and now love to be petted. — Heloise

Retired General Sets Speech At LCC Dedication

Retired Air Force Maj. Gen. George J. Keegan Jr. will be the guest speaker during Dec. 7 dedication ceremonies for Lubbock Christian College's Mabee Student Life Building.

Widely recognized as one of the nation's top military experts on the Soviet Union, Gen. Keegan served as Chief of Air Force Intelligence from March 1972, until January of 1977.

While serving as chief of combat intelligence for the Virginia Tactical Air Command, he was involved in the development of the United State's first tactical nuclear bombardment.

He has authored several studies on Soviet research and development, education and training and strategic and tactical combat doctrines.

General Keegan has served in the Joints Chief of Staffs organization, the Air Force Logistics Command, Far East Air Forces in Japan and was also chief of Air Force Intelligence in South Vietnam where he later became chief of intelligence for the entire Pacific command base in Honolulu.

General Keegan became widely known within the U.S. intelligence community for his dissenting views on Soviet backfire bomber capability and defense expenditures. He was the first senior officer to expose Soviet high energy beam weapon development.

During his military career he had extensive experience in combat operations, command strategic plans and is widely known as a writer, lecturer and planner.

Betty L. Torre

Baked Chicken with Almond Rice

INGREDIENTS
1 3-pound chicken, cut up
¼ cup butter or margarine
2 cups chicken stock
1 cup uncooked Comet Long Grain Rice
1 small onion, chopped fine
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms or 1 3-ounce can mushrooms, undrained
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup slivered almonds

DIRECTIONS
Brown chicken on all sides in butter in a large skillet.
In a separate pan, combine broth, rice, mushrooms, onion and salt; simmer rapidly for 5 minutes.
Stir almonds into rice mixture. Pour into a 2-quart casserole; top with browned chicken pieces. Cover and bake for 45 minutes in a 325° F. oven or until done.

Farm Price Index Shows Drop; Quick Return Upward Forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices that farmers get for raw products dropped 1.5 percent in November, the first decline since last summer, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said that lower prices for hogs, cattle and citrus fruit contributed most to the over-all decline in the farm price index.

However, higher prices were reported for eggs, lettuce, milk, corn and wheat which partially offset price declines for the other commodities.

Despite the drop in the index, farm prices in November were up 20 percent from a year ago, the report said.

Further, the drop in over-all farm prices may be short-lived. Cattle and hog market prices began to rise again toward the end of November, and department economists expect further gains in the winter months.

Farm prices, after climbing for nine consecutive months, dropped 1 percent in July and another 3 percent in August. They rose 2 percent in September and an additional 1 percent in October.

Economists do not consider farm prices in a single month good indicators of future food price because they often do fluctuate so much. But over the longer pull higher farm prices do have an impact on grocery prices and this has been happening the past year.

Higher livestock prices, particularly, are a major reason for an expected 30 percent boost in farmers' net incomes to around $26 billion this year, compared to $20.1 billion in 1977, according to the department.

Another factor has been a thriving export market, a record of $27.3 billion worth of farm commodities shipped abroad in the year that ended Sept. 30, and prospects that China, the Soviet Union and many other countries will continue as important customers.

Earlier this week the Labor Department announced that retail grocery prices rose 0.9 percent in October after rising 0.4 percent in September and holding steady in July and August. Food prices rose an average of about 1.6 percent a month in the first half of this year.

The USDA says that retail food prices are going up an average of about 10 percent this year and that they may average 7.5 percent higher in 1979.

However, department experts say the actual 1979 food price increase could range between 6 percent and 10 percent, depending on the weather and other factors, including inflation.

About 60 cents of each grocery dollar spent by consumers at supermarkets is paid to process, transport and sell food after it leaves the farm. Thus, grocery costs will rise regardless of what happens to farm prices as long as inflation boosts the costs of middlemen.

One reason for food prices going up 10 percent this year against a gain of 6.3 percent in 1977 is that cattle producers, after years of depressed prices have trimmed their herds sharply, meaning that there is less beef now.

Despite relatively high cattle prices and prospects that those will continue to reach record levels next year, producers still have not begun to expand their herds significantly. Thus, experts say it will be at least another year or two before beef production begins to catch up with demand.

Farmers are producing more pork and chicken, but those prices also have been swept up the past year by the decline in beef supplies. Red meat and poultry account for about one-third of family food spending.

The report said that prices paid by farmers to meet expenses, meanwhile, held steady in November but still averaged 11 percent more than a year ago.

The November parity ratio for farm commodities was 70 percent, compared to 71 in October and 65 a year ago, the Crop Reporting Board said.

In theory, if prices were at 100 percent of parity, farmers would have the same buying power they had in the 1910-1914 period. For example, the November corn price was $2.03 a bushel — 54 percent of the November parity price for corn of $3.78 a bushel.

According to the report, the preliminary November index for all farm commodities at the farm averaged 214 percent of a 1967 base used as a standard. In October, it averaged 217 percent. It was 178 percent in November of last year.

The record high for the index is 221 percent, in August 1973.

The report also said:

— Cattle averaged $51.50 per 100 pounds of live weight nationally in November, compared to $53.20 in October and $34.30 a year ago. Those are average prices for all types of cattle sold as beef.

— Hogs averaged $46.70 per 100 pounds, compared with $51.10 in October and $37.80 a year ago.

— Wheat averaged $3.05 a bushel at the farm nationally in November, according to preliminary figures, compared with $2.99 in October and $2.46 in November 1977.

— Corn was $2.03 a bushel, compared with $1.97 in October and $1.88 a year ago.

— Soybeans were $6.31 a bushel, compared with $6.26 in October and $5.61 in November of last year.

— Upland cotton was 60.6 cents a pound on a national average, compared with 59.6 cents in October and 50.7 cents in November 1977.

— Eggs were 56.8 cents a dozen at the farm in November against 52.3 cents in October and 51.2 cents a year ago.

— Broiler chickens were 24.7 cents a pound, compared with 24.8 cents in October and 21.3 cents in November of last year.

— Oranges were $4.65 a box against $5.25 in October and $5.03 in November of last year.

The board said that preliminary average prices received by farmers for raw products in November, compared with those in October, and the November parity prices, in dollars, included: November

—October—Parity
Wheat, bu., 3.05—2.99—5.40
Rice, 100 lbs., 7.85—7.62-15.70
Corn, bu., 2.03—1.97—3.78
Oats, bu., 1.16—1.08—1.95
Sorghum grain, 100 lbs., 3.45—3.36—6.26
Hay, baled, ton, 46.40—47.10 —

ROUGHAGE CUBES — Texas Tech regent James Snyder examines a cube made from low quality roughage material as Dr. Reed Richardson, feedmill supervisor, explains the cubing operation. The process is completed without the use of heat or steam. The feedmill and the cuber are a part of the facilities at the Texas Tech New Deal farm which was toured by the regents Thursday. Tech Regents Laud New Agricultural Facilities On Campus, North Of City

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

The new livestock arena at Indiana Avenue and the Tech Freeway and the agricultural facilities at the farm near New Deal were toured by five of the Texas Tech board of regents Thursday.

Interim Dean of the College of Agriculture William F. Bennett said the animal science enrollment in the college had decreased in the past due to a lack of facilities, but no further declines had been felt since the new arena and farm were put into operation.

The arena with three adjoining wings is used for displaying individual classes of livestock to students on campus. The facility has offices, classrooms, holding pens, washing areas, stalls and feed and tack rooms.

According to Dr. Robert Albin, chairman of the department of animal science, the pavilion can also be used for livestock shows, 4-H clubs and judging contests.

After viewing the livestock arena, the regents went to Tech's Lubbock County Field Laboratory east of New Deal.

The beef cattle center, under the supervision of Dr. Robert Long, was the first stop for the regents. Six courses taught in the College of Agriculture utilize the center which includes electronically activated feeders which record individual feed consumption on experimental animals.

The beef cattle feedlot includes unloading chutes and covered working facilities, tilting chutes, dipping vats and 25 pens with 10 head per pen.

According to Dr. Reed Richardson, who directs the feedlot and the feedmill, the feedlot is engaged in many types of research including the utilization of crop residue.

The feedmill, Richardson said, has a maximum cleanout system to eliminate cross contamination. It has a micro-ingredient room for vitamins and minerals, a grain cleaner, feed mixer, pellet mill and pellet crumbler. A cuber for low quality roughages is located behind the mill.

The swine facilities consist of four buildings. The university intends to increase the breeding herd to 100 sows.

The Research Center, under the supervision of Dr. James R. Clark, has two laboratories, a surgical lab room, classrooms and a metabolism area. Experiments are conducted in reproductive physiology, metabolism and digestion and environmental physiology.

About 80 acres in the north border of the farm are utilized by the department of plant and soil science, Dr. Dwane Miller said. Miller is the department chairman.

According to dairy center supervisor Dr. Mark Hellamn, the top producing cow supplies 120 pounds of milk per day, but the average is 50 pounds. A milking parlor, milk room, machine room and office make up the dairy facilities. Three lots with a capacity of 25 cows per lot are maintained outside the structure.

Adjacent to the milking facilities is the necropsy building where dead animals are brought to examine diseased tissues. A pharmacy for drugs and health products is included in the necropsy building.

Entertainers Set For Bankers' Meet

The light entertainment of humorist Bob Murphey and pop singers Joe and Joy Roper will precede business sessions of the sixth annual Bankers Agricultural Credit Conference today and Saturday at Texas Tech University.

Registration will begin at 6 p.m. Friday in the courtyard of the University Center. The entertainment will follow a 7 p.m. dinner in the ballroom. Saturday sessions, lasting from 8 a.m. to noon, will be for business only. A buffet luncheon will conclude the meeting.

President B.E. "Bill" Loyd of the conference will open the sessions. Loyd is president of the Muleshoe State Bank.

Leadoff speakers are Sac City, Iowa bankers Larry Reding, vice president, and Neil Stadlman, assistant vice president and agricultural representative, Sac City State Bank. "Merchandising Your Bank Services for Profit" is their topic.

The Sac City bank has various loan and management programs for production agriculture centered around computerized record systems and budget planning.

The bank has mini-computer programs to aid in loan decisions covering break-even projections from livestock to investment analysis. It also has a farm management and real estate agency.

L. Buel Berry, Farmers Home Administration county spervisor from Sulpher Springs, Texas, will discuss the FHA as it is today.

The "Outlook for 1979 — Cotton, Grains, Livestock and 1979 Estimated Cost of Production Budgets" will be discussed by a panel of Texas Tech agricultural economics faculty. Moderator will be Dr. Gene A. Mathia, chairman of the Department of Agricultural Economics at Texas Tech.

Bankers' spouses are invited to the Friday banquet, and there will be a special breakfast for them at the University City Club, beginning at 9 a.m. on Saturday.

Dr. J. Wayland Bennett, associate dean of the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences, is conference coordinator. Registration fee for the conference business sessions is $35 and the banquet cost is $12.50 per person.

Postman In Trouble Over Mace Incident

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Jim Taylor, director of employee and labor relations for the Albuquerque post office, says action is being taken against a postman who allegedly sprayed Mace in the face of a 3-year-old boy, Edward Sanchez, after the child squirted him with a water pistol. Sanchez was treated at Presbyterian Hospital and released.

"The postman is no longer working a delivery route and we are proceeding with the appropriate administrative action," Taylor said Wednesday. "The Postal Service does not condone those kinds of actions." The postman's name was not divulged. Taylor said the Postal Service would pay the boy's medical expenses.

HEADS SEEDSMEN — Jim Lindsey of Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., of Plainview was elected president of the Southern Seedsmen's Association at the group's recent 60th annual convention in New Orleans. About 965 seedsmen and others attended. Lindsey, a graduate of Texas A&M University, has long been active in the research, production and marketing of sorghum seed. He is a native of Abilene.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THOUGHTFUL OBSERVERS BOTH within and outside the grain business have expressed a viewpoint that a weak dollar makes U. S. grain more attractive in overseas markets.

After all, goes the rationale, if the German mark has appreciated 15 percent in value since 1977 and U. S. corn prices have remained essentially unchanged, U. S. corn should be at least 15 percent cheaper to a German feed manufacturer.

But this is not the case, according to Benjamin S. Jaffray, vice president for finance and treasurer of Cargill, Inc.

"U. S. grain exports will not benefit to any significcant degree from a weak dollar for several reasons," says Jaffray.

PRIMARY AMONG THESE REASONS, he says, is the system of variable levies existing in the European Economic Community, which is the largest buyer of U. S. grain. (The EEC, for example, accounts for 25 to 30 percent of U. S. corn exports.)

Variable levies insulate the EEC interior market and the EEC consumer from lower imported grain prices. If the U. S. price expressed in German marks is decreased as a result of a weaker dollar, lower U. S. grain prices, lower ocean freight rates or other factors, the levy increases by a like amount, explains Jaffray.

Although there are no levies in the EEC on soybeans and soybean products, Jaffray points out that the EEC already buys about 45 percent of U. S. soybean exports. Brazil, the major competitor for European soybean markets, trades soybeans in dollars — thus neutralizing any potential gain.

Jaffray acknowledges that levies also are not a factor in Japan — the single most important and consistent buyer of U. S. food and feed grains and soybeans.

"ALTHOUGH DOLLAR PRICES EXPRESSED in yen have been reduced 47.3 percent since 1968 and a staggering 28.8 percent since June of 1977, there are no significant signs that demand for U. S. grains has increased as a result of this factor alone," Jaffray says.

He observes further that Japanese trade barriers and other restrictions sharply limit exports of U. S. beef to Japan.

"A cheaper dollar would create significant demand for U. S. beef in Japan if the opportunity were not effectively foreclosed by trade walls," he says.

As for the remainder of U. S. grain exports, Jaffray points out these shipments tend to move to developing countries or countries such as the Soviet Union or in Eastern Europe where currency exchange considerations are less significant.

A DECLINING DOLLAR ALSO HAS NOT improved U. S. grain prices relative to principal export competitors such as Canada, Australia and Argentina, Jaffray says, since their prices are kept competitive with U. S. dollar prices.

Most other surplus-producing nations are more dependent than the United States on agricultural exports as a source of foreign-exchange earnings and thus tend to price exports on a competitive basis with U. S. grain, he says.

As a result, this nation is a residual supplier in the world grain market and does not benefit from a cheap dollar, he adds.

Jaffray concludes his analysis with the following observations:

"U. S. AGRICULTURE, WITH THE productivity of its farmers and the efficiency of our marketing system, represents a great renewable resource.

"However, corrosive inflation and continued unwillingness to recognize its causes ultimately will hurt U. S. agriculture and its ability to serve world markets.

"U. S. agriculture represents one of our best resources to correct trade imbalances and ensure a source of foreign exchange to support the importation of necessary commodities.

"A strong and healthy domestic economy supporting a reasonably priced U. S. dollar will further enhance the excellent potential of U. S. agriculture."

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL Thursday Morning, November 23, 1978

Lubbock County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1, Buffalo Springs Lake, has been notified by the Texas Department of Health that the water being supplied by their system exceeds the maximum constituent level for flouride established by the department's "drinking water standards", which were promulgated as requried by the "Safe Drinking Water Act," Public Law 93-523 (U.S.)

The limit for this area has been set at 1.6 miligrams of flouride per liter of water. The samples of water from the lake system contained 2.6 miligrams of flouride per liter. There is no immedaite health hazard for drinking water containing fluoride at this level.

However, the fluoride may cause mottling (brown staining) of the teeth in children less than 14 years of age.

All detints in this area are aware of the fluoride level.

The district intends to apply to the Texas Department of Health for a variance from the fluoride requirement while it investigates available treatment techniques to lower the fluoride to allowable levels

Enlarged Mainland China Trade Exciting Agricultural Prospect

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trade with China, particularly prospects of it opening up as a giant regular market for American farmers, is a big and exciting item for discussion these days.

But Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland's recent trip there has prompted even more excitement in some circles over the possibility of future scientific and technical exchanges between the two countries.

For instance, Bergland and others found that China has virtually an untapped reservoir of seed stock, some of which possibly might lead to new or improved varieties of crops for American producers.

The soybean, a native of China, has emerged as one of the most valuable crops of American farmers, both as a source of high-protein meal and oil. It does best in the Corn Belt and in other areas where rainfall is ample.

China, Bergland found, has germplasm — seed stock — of ancient soybeans that can thrive with extremely sparse rainfall.

Although the plants are primitive by U.S. standards, they pose exciting possibilities if the Chinese varieties could be meshed with American soybeans to produce new drought-resistant strains.

It may be a wild notion, but one day farmers might be growing soybeans profitably in dryland areas of eastern Colorado if this can be done.

Soybeans are only one example of what China may have to offer American farmers through exchanges of scientific and technical information and material.

One objective of Peking is to modernize China's agriculture, particularly the livestock sector. If this can be done, it would raise the possibility of selling much more U.S. corn and other feedstuffs to support hog and poultry production.

At a news conference shortly after their return from China, Bergland and others who made the trip said that in addition to possible larger feed grain sales the United States might also gain from knowing more about Chinese livestock itself.

"For example," Bergland said, "our experts indicated that the litter of the Chinese swine is larger than our own. They have more pigs produced per sow per year."

One reason that U.S. pork output has not increased as much as some authorities expected the past year or so is the problem farmers have with small litters and disease.

Bergland noted that Chinese swine and poultry are mostly scavengers fed largely from waste material and garbage.

Thus, if China follows through, it will need a dependable and uniform supply of feed to produce more and better pork and poultry, he said. The United States "will be competitive in that market, if we maintain our quality and if we maintain our supplies," Bergland said.

Meanwhile, as in the case of soybeans, U.S. scientists will be eagerly looking at reasons why Chinese sows have larger litters of pigs.

For their part, Chinese officials seemed highly interested in exchanging seed, seed research, biological control of pests, livestock and veterinary sciences and agricultural education methods, Bergland said.

They also asked Bergland — and he agreed — to help arrange contacts with U.S. manufacturers of agricultural equipment and supplies.

"The areas which seem most promising are farm machinery and chemicals, and equipment and technology for animal feed production, food processing and agricultural plastics," he said.

One official who was on the trip with Bergland, asking not to be identified, said that the Chinese want to know more about how the network of extension information involving USDA, land-grant universities, and state and local governments works.

The "county agent" of the extension system has been credited with helping farmers convert to scientific methods of production, including the promotion of hybrid seeds and fertilizers.

Although extension still is important in today's system of agricultural information, it addresses itself to a much more sophisticated farm audience than existed in the United States several generations ago.

"What we should do is tell them about our extension work in 1914, not how we do it now," the official said.

In other words, as China strives to mechanize and improve its agriculture in other ways, it is in many ways comparable to U.S. agriculture of 1914, just as farmers were moving from horses to machines, he said.

Speculation about future benefits of scientific and technical exchanges between China and the United States, however exciting to scientists and others who take the more distant view, still takes a back seat to immediate prospects of stepped-up trade between the two countries.

When China embarks on a new grain-buying splurge as it is doing now, questions arise about how it intends to pay for the additional commodities and what China may sell the United States in return.

Assistant Secretary Dale E. Hathaway, who accompanied Bergland to China, said at the same news conference that such a question "implies that in fact trade is only bilateral" between two countries when really it is "a multilateral matter" that can involve others.

China recently has entered into "a series of arrangements with a number of countries, some of which should generate them foreign exchange, and this in turn may well be used to buy the various items" from the United States, he said.

Hathaway said that "saying that they are going to sell directly to us implies something that is not necessarily the case."

Bergland added that China and Japan, for example, have entered into a $10 billion trade pact.

"China is, I am sure, exploring the world over to find markets for things that it can export," Bergland said.

Cattle Futures Mart Closes Lower

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures cl[illegible] to 92 points lower Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

The February delivery, which fell 112 points for a time, paced the downturn. Sales totaled 24,009 cars. The market was lower from the start except for an early gain of five points.

Prices turned around from Wednesday's gains on increased livestock arrivals and fears that plentiful pork supplies could offer stiff competition to beef.

Wholesale beef was unchanged to up one-half cent at 84 3/4 to 85 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, a six-week high. The six markets expect 6,600 head today.

Cash cattle were steady to off $1.50, with the best top at $56 per hundredweight. The Omaha top was $55.50. Slaughter was 147,000 head.

White House and U. S. Department of Agriculture officials said Thursday the Carter administration has under consideration a plan to reallocate meat imports for 1978.

Under the proposal, which is awaiting President Carter's approval, the United States would reallocate meat imports from nations that do not appear likely to fulfill their quota of meat imports into the United States this year to nations which have available supplies.

Feeder cattle futures closed 37 to 25 points higher on 1,915 cars. March was off the most after slipping 97 points, with August up the most after gaining 40 points.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading was slow to moderate Thursday on the Lubbock cotton market.

Supplies of cotton for sale were moderate to heavy and demand was moderate.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations held steady. High Plains growers sold mixed lots at 1,400 to 1,625 points over loan rates.

LUBBOCK SPOT COTTON

National Market System For Trading Stocks Moving Nearer To Reality

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — A long-debated national market system for trading stocks is moving considerably closer to becoming a reality, the chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commmission said Thursday.

"While much remains to be accomplished, very significant progress has been made" in the past year, the SEC's Harold Williams told the annual convention of the Securities Industry Association.

"If comparable developments occur during the next 12 months, we will be far along the road toward the objectives Congress set forth" in 1975 legislation mandating the creation of a central market, he said.

Williams said he was confident that the basic task could be completed by the time his term as chairman ends three years from now.

Some elements of the central market are already operating, such as a consolidated ticker tape reporting trades on the various exchanges around the country, which was introduced in 1976.

Another major step was the opening up of full price competition on the commissions charged by brokers in May 1975, replacing the old fixed schedule of minimum fees.

But one primary component has yet to be agreed upon — a means of linking the trading facilities of the nation's various exchanges and markets through computerized communications facilities.

Two competing proposed systems to do that job have been developed and tested this year.

One, called the Intermarket Trading System, would retain present exchange floors with the markets competing for business through an electronic communications system. It is now being tested by the New York Stock Exchange and several regional exchanges.

A second is known as the "Cincinnati experiment" because it is sponsored by that city's stock exchange. Rather than using specialists on stock exchange floors as a meeting point for buy and sell orders, it employs a computer to match up such orders.

Although the two systems seem at the moment incompatible, Williams cited them both as evidence that progress is being achieved toward the central market goal.

All these changes, notably the advent of full price competition, have been cited as primary factors behind a wave of mergers and consolidations that has swept the brokerage industry in the last few years. Many brokers here are talking of the likelihood of more mergers to come.

But Williams suggested to the convention Thursday that a possible further rush of consolidations, forming larger and larger firms, might not be advisable.

"I don't see the basis for another wave of mergers on the basis of good, sound business judgment," he told a news conference.

For some firms so far, he said, "the perceived benefits of being larger have only led to larger problems. And, upon reflection, it may be that there are greater opportunities by remaining smaller, being better managed and offering superior services in those areas in which a firm chooses to specialize.

"It is my sense that any industry fat and overcapacity, which may have existed as logical consequences of a fixed-price umbrella, have now been wrung out. But some firms have yet to determine their future place in the industry and to manage themselves well," Williams said.

Mexicans Assess Damage From Quakes

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Many of Mexico City's buildings were closed Thursday as municipal officials assessed the damage done by a series of earthquakes that stunned central and southern Mexico. There were no confirmed reports of deaths due to the quakes.

The police public relations office said, "It is believed there are probably six dead, but I must emphasize this is not a confirmed report." Newspapers reported between four and nine dead. About 100 persons were injured and 500 treated for shock.

The six shocks began Wednesday about 2 p.m. and continued through 6 p.m., shaking loose building cornices, breaking windows, cracking large buildings and briefly shutting down the subway system in this metropolitan area of 13 million residents.

"It was terrible," said Rosario Hidalgo Martinez, 31, a secretary who was momentarily caught in an 11th-floor office building. "People were white in the face, they were so scared. But we all made an effort and stayed calm."

Municipal inspectors were checking the eight-story federal treasury building, the navy department building, and dozens of other structures in Mexico City and other towns that were damaged and closed after the quake. A not-yet-occupied 20-story hotel was left with four cracks between four and six inches wide on one of its walls.

City public relations Director Ignacio Gutierrez said Mayor Hank Gonzalez toured the city and found "the damage was not too great — in fact it was minimal."

Mexico City Public Works Director Eduardo Rincon Gallardo said his office is "trying to compile some damage estimate, but the city is very big and it'll take days since the damage was scattered."

The quake's most severe shock registered from 6.5 to 7.9 on the Richter Scale, making it capable of widespread heavy damage. The National Geophysical Institute said the epicenter was beneath the Pacific, about 10 miles off Puerto Angel on the Oaxaca coast.

Dr. Jaime Yamamoto, chief of the national university of Mexico seismological service, said the quakes "were possibly the worst in Mexican history."

"It would have been much worse if the epicenter had been located on land," said Prof. Cesar Luna Bauza, a leading meteriologist. "The fact that it was out in the Pacific helped."

Electric-Light Fancier Ready For Yule

CINCINNATI (AP) — Roy Dixon's home is bedecked with 500 Christmas lights these days, and recorded Christmas music serenades passersby.

"It's pretty nice to sit here and have these items," he says, surrounded by an electric Santa and Frosty the Snowman. "I've had a dream since I was a kid to have a lot of electric lights."

Dixon, 32, says it's never too early for Christmas. This year, his lights went on Nov. 25. "It should be celebrated all year long," he says.

Mark Twain's first fiction, "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," appeared in the Saturday Press in 1865.

INVESTORS GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Three years ago, my husband and I began putting money into an "investment certificate." To date, we have invested approximately $1,700 and the "surrender value" of the certificate is 80 percent of that amount. After eight years of payments, we would reach the "break even point." After 22 years, when the certificate matures, we would receive a large sum of money.

Recently, my husband's employer began a savings and profit-sharing plan, which seems to be a more profitable investment. In addition to what my husband would put in, the employer would make contributions. We are a young couple with three children in elementary school and cannot afford to contribute to both plans.

Should we join the company plan and accept our mistake in getting involved in this "investment certificate" plan?

A. The loss of $340 — 20 percent of the $1,700 you have paid into that "investment certificate" — not to mention the interest you would have received by putting your money in a savings account may be a bitter financial pill to swallow. But my answer has to be "yes."

From the information you sketch out about your husband's opportunity to get into his company's plan, it would be a mistake not to take advantage of it.

It's a shame that you were suckered into (Sorry, I can't think of better words) a "contractual plan" for a "faceamount certificate." Those things, which should have gone out with highbutton shoes, are still being peddled by a handful of high pressure outfits.

Most people who sign up for such plans don't stay with them long enough to even reach the "break even point."

My advice is to cash in that certificate, put that money in a savings account and have your husband sign up for as much of his company's savings and profit-sharing plan as your family budget will allow.

Q. I just learned that I will receive a $15,000 legacy next month. I am 78 and live on Social Security of $325.60 a month. The mortgage balance on my home is $7,000. The interest on the mortgage is 6 percent. Through the years, as interest rates have climbed, the savings and loan association where I have the mortgage has urged me to refinance — supposedly to obtain a larger loan to make life easier for me. What do you think I should do with the $15,000?

A. I think you should check with that savings and loan association and a number of others to find out which one is paying the highest rate on six-month "money market" savings certificates.

Put the $15,000 in whatever federally-insured institution offers the highest rate. As I pound this through the typewriter, many "thrifts" are paying more than 9 percent on six-month certificates in minimum denominations of $10,000.

Whatever you do, don't give up that 6 percent mortgage. That's "cheap money," these days.

• • •

Q. When I buy securities, I have four dates: the trade date, the settlement date, the date I pay the broker and the date on the stock certificate or bond. Which date should I use for long-term capital gain purposes?

A. The trade date. You become the owner of a stock or bond on the day — actually the very minute — your broker buys it for you. And you stop being the owner on the day your broker sells for you.

• • •

Q. From time to time, you furnish advice based on the "income tax bracket" of the person who writes to you. Just how is one's income tax bracket determined?

A. By the federal internal revenue code. Those brackets, which are spelled out in the "Tax Rate Schedules" page of the federal income tax forms run from 14 percent for people with relatively low taxable income to 70 percent for those With high taxable income.

Tech Board Of Regents Extends Dockery Pact

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

With a new contract stuffed away in his hip pocket, Texas Tech head football coach Rex Dockery returned Thursday afternoon to final preparations for Saturday's regular-season finale with the University of Arkansas.

On the last day of formal practice, Dockery spent part of the morning at a table with Texas Tech president Cecil Mackey, Board of Regents chairman Robert Pfluger of San Angelo and Tech athletic director Dick Tamburo. The entire meeting was dedicated to Dockery.

And as the group faced a press gathering, Tamburo announced that the school had given Dockery a new contract and increased the salaries of him and his coaches.

Dockery, since becoming Tech's head coach last wiwinter, had been working on a four-year pact. Thursday's announcement of action by the Board of Regents extended the new contract to five years, effective Jan. 1.

So, in reality, the Regents added two years to the contract.

Dockery had been working under a contract calling for an annual salary of $37,500, and the new pact, The Avalanche-Journal learned, is for about $42,500.

Tamburo made the announcement, commending Dockery for his successful season (7-3 and a six-game winning streak going into Saturday's game at Fayetteville against the Universityof Arkansas).

"Coach Dockery and his staff have been well accepted by the people of West Texas, and this is shown by the new attendance record of 45,000-plus which we set this year.

"One of the first men I met with and talked to at length when I was hired last summer was Rex. He filled me in on the football program."

And Tamburo said the contract extension and raise was "for the fine job you have done and to show our appreciation."

"I appreciate the opportunity to be head a head coach — that's what every coach looks for — and I appreciate the confidence Texas Tech has shown in me," Dockery said in response.

"I want to thank my staff for their help. And, the players should be commended (for the successful season. I think all the honors that have come my way (Coach of the Year in the SWC as well as the contractual rewards)."

Dockery was elevated from offensive coordinator last winter when Steve Sloan resigned to become head coach at the University of Mississippi.

It was Dockery's first head coaching position on the college level, although he had had successful high school coaching stints prior to advance to the college ranks.

Today, the Raiders will leave for Fayetteville and Saturday's 1 p.m. contest. Tech holds an outside shot at the Cotton Bowl, a situation where Tech can get the berth if it whips Arkansas and Rice upsets Houston.

. . .Of Upsets And Runaways

WHEN TIME AND space run short. . . Checked the "all" lists closely? From some angles, Russell Erxleben and Tony Franklin, the remaining two-thirds of the SWC kicking triplets of a year ago, have made all-America. But, from some angles, they haven't made all-conference. It's how close or how far away you stand. Erxleben finished below Raider frosh Maury Buford in punting, and Franklin's percentage of hits and misses was not as good as Raider Bill Adams. Also Adams had the longest field goal of the year in conference. But, it has happened before. Last winter, in basketball, UCLA's David Greenwood was a consensus all-America but didn't even rate all-West Coast in the eyes of the voting sports writers from that section. . .

The honors continue to roll in concerning mutual and its radio broadcasts. The network put a stop to the commercial overlap; now, if play resumes, the announcer chops into the commercial. But, around San Angelo, to pick up a certain station, you have to turn on your TV and switch to this cable station. Kinda difficult while traveling. . .

• • •

IT IS IRONIC; Rex Dockery thought seriously about not having contact last Tuesday, the last possible day of the season for pad work. And in that pad session, noseguard Curtis Reed sustained a serious knee injury and underwent surgery Thursday. . . Wouldn't you know it? After that surprising win over Houston last week, the Red Raider Club luncheon Thursday overflowed its tables for the first time since the first couple of weeks. . .

After Wednesday night's 109-54 runaway from Northern Montana, and that coming on the heels of a 24-point win over Central Oklahoma, maybe Tech should give some thought to scheduling some better teams in these season warmups. Granted a coach wants some competition where he can get his younger players in the game. But if this is the case, why go all the way to Montana for a team; there's no difference in this and Rice playing Texas Lutheran, TCU playing Trinity. Tech is having trouble drawing adult fans —despite the sold-out season ticket list — and such a game as Wednesday is not conducive to attracting customers. It appears from here that higher caliber of competition would do more to improve the image of SWC basketball than 100-point laughers. . .

• • •

AH, SO. THE Aggies, who played basketball in Alaska last week, will stretch their sports boundaries even further. This spring, a Japanese collegiate baseball team will be touring the U.S. and will play at College Station on Feb. 28. . . When Texas whipped the Northern Montana by more than 70 points the other night, coach Abe Lemons kept starter John Krivacs in the entire ball game, and guard John Moore played 33 minutes. He came out then with five fouls. Lemons said he wanted the two to get in better physical shape. . .

• • •

CHIP AWAY THREE months; who would have predicted that Rice would beat Baylor. . . or the Bears would upset the Aggies — and Texas? Or that the SWC championship could come down to the Rice-UH contest? . .

Texas A&M at Texas — By this time of the year, injuries have mounted up on both sides of the stadium. But, by the time the Corps marches in, the strains of the Aggie War Hymn and Eyes of Texas blend in, who would notice. The 'Horns, surely, are embarrassed after last week's loss to the Bears. The Aggies are bouncing back after losing to Arkansas and then falling behind TCU. But, Texas is at home; it likes Memorial Stadium. The Longhorns, but not by much. . .

Rice vs. Houston — Regardless of what happens in the Hills, the Cougars can control their own destiny. And they should, with gusto. It's a city dogfight, but the Cougars have bigger and better animals. UH 35, Rice 14. . .

Tech at Arkansas — This one could come down to emotion. Arkansas' incentive will be momentum going into the Fiesta Bowl, Tech's is a possible trip to Dallas. The Raiders have been emotionally high the past two weeks, and getting up again will be difficult. But, the car rot of the Cotton Bowl dangles out there, just a few inches away. Question could be if the Razorbacks feel that their coach, Lou Holtz, really is headed for Florida as the speculation says. If so, will they play harder to show him, or will they relax, knowing they'll have new bosses in a few weeks? Tech 24, Arkanasas 21. . .

Estacado Battles Snyder Today

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Last year at this time, the closest Estacado Coach Louis Kelley came to coaching a football game was planning an off season program schedule.

But the Estacado mentor doesn't mind delaying this year's weights and agility drills. That is, as long as the Matadors keep on winning.

Tonight, Estacado will visit Snyder in a quarterfinal AAA football game. Kickoff is slated for 7:30 p.m.

Because University Interscholastic (UIL) rules state that two teams who meet within six years will determine the site of the game by where the two teams last played. Since, Estacado and Snyder last met in Lubbock when both teams were members of 3-AAA two years ago, this time the action will be positioned in SnSnyder.

"There will probably be a packed house and three-fourths of the crowd will be rooting for them (Snyder)," said Estacado Coach Kelley. "But the fans can't come on the field. Anyways, I can't do anything about it, so I'm not going to worry about it."

Meanwhile, Snyder coach Mike Jenkins agrees that the home field advantage won't be much of a factor, but for a different reason.

"Playing on our home field of course is to our advantage for obvious reasons," said Jenkins. "But Estacado isn't going to be at a disadvantage as other teams, because they have played here before."

Since, both teams were members of the same district until the Matadors became part of 1-AAA this season, the respective coaches are familar with each other's strengths and weaknessess.

"We know that the sweep will be coming," said Snyder mentor Jenkins. "I don't think we will be able to shut it down. I just hope we're able to slow it down a little."

And while wide plays garner the attention of Jenkins' mind, what worries Kelley about Snyder?

"Snyder runs the veer offense," said Kelley. "They're execution is excellent, and if we don't read our defensive assignments well, then they'll break it all the way."

And speaking of breaking it all the way, the Tigers have two breakaway threats in quarterback Clay Johnson and runningback Richard Creighton. Johnson has rushed for over 900 yards this season, whil Creighton has accounted for 800 yards.

"We'll run a balanced offense as the situation dictates," said Jenkins. "In otherwords, we'll throw enough times to clear out running game."

In bidistrict play last week, Synder only put the football in the air four times against Burkburnett last week. But four times was enough as the Tigers beat Burkburnett 17-9.

Estacado, on the otherhand, earned its way into the quarterfinal contest by upseting third ranked Fort Stockton 21-7.

Jenkins is well aware of the fact that Kelvin White has been the primary ball carrier for the Matadors this season. But according to the Snyder coach last week brought double trouble for his team.

The double trouble is in the form of Robin Gatewood. Gatewood, who had been playing sparingly until last week, s scored two of Estacado's touchdowns.

"It sort of prevents your defense from keying," said Jenkins.

Oilers, 'Pokes Fight For TV

HOUSTON (AP)— The fans of the Houston Oilers and the Dallas Cowboys have found some fresh fuel for their feud — which team should appear on television this Sunday.

Seems as if the Houston-Pittsburgh Steelers game and the Cowboys-New England clash are both set for 3 p.m.(CST) and several Texas channels have a tough decision to make.

As Larry Harris, station manager of KLTV in Tyler, said Thursday, "We can't win. No matter which game we carry, we'll hear from fans of the other team."

Ed Cheviot, vice president and general manager of KMOL-TV in San Antonio said his station will go with the Oilers and the protest calls are coming in at a rate of 100 per hours.

"Cowboy fans are upset. They feel they a God-given right to see their team each Sunday. Oiler fans would be upset if we had decided not to carry their team."

The conflict came about when the networks decided last spring to schedule both games for 3 p.m. with the hope that one of the two games would be crucial. Now both games are crucial with all four teams having a shot at the National Football League playoffs.

In an interconference game such as New England of the American Conference against Dallas of the National, network coverage is determined by the visiting team.

Roy Shotts of Port Arthur's KJAC-TV, "The Oilers have something started and we feel obligated to keep the momentum going. We've been getting lots of flak from people here, though. We know from rating books that the Cowboys still have the edge. I'd give my eye teeth if we could have both games. Then we'd have our audience for six hours."

A check showed that Houston, San Antonio, Port Arthur-Beaumont, Laredo and Austin have opted for the Oilers.

The Cowboys will be seen in Fort Worth, Waco, Corpus Christi, Harlingen, Tyler, Lufkin, Amarillo, Lubbock, Midland and El Paso.

Although most station executives declined to mention their favorite professional team, Harris admitted he grew up in Pittsburgh and while his channel shows the Cowboys, "I will drive the 100 miles from Tyler to Texarkana and watch the Steelers on TV up there."

Fans Send Tech Off

Members of Texas Tech's Saddle Tramps spirit organization and Tech students will gather at 8:30 a.m. today at Lubbock International Airport to give the Red Raiders football team a big send-off as they leave for their clash Saturday with the Arkansas Razorbacks.

Players and coaching staff are scheduled to leave the Tech Athletic Dining Hall at 8:30 a.m. and depart for Fayetteville, Ark., at 9 a.m. on a Texas International charter flight.

"The whole send-off is really informal because we did not include Arkansas in our original plans," said Dwayne Mosser, head of the Saddle Tramps' spirit committee.

Mosser said Coach Rex Dockery called the send-off a great idea, but said it was "Beat Arkansas" and not "Red Cotton" yet.

The Tramps decorated the team's charter plane Thursday night.

Aggies Battle Texas Tonight

By PAUL McGRATH
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

'Twas the night of great upsets and all through the league, not a creature was stirring—out of shock.

Just as it appeared the Houston Cougars could start making their reservations and packing their belongings for a trip to Dallas, the Texas Tech Red Raiders emerged to throw a little drama into a comparatively dull Southwest Conference race.

Tech bushwacked Houston with an inspired effort last Saturday, projecting their shadow into the title picture. Should some unlikely events occur, and they have been occurring all season, then the Red Raiders, not the Cougars could wind up playing Notre Dame on Jan. 1.

Those who forecast a cellar's role for Tech this fall are now seeking asylum in Hillsboro.

To explain the situation one more time, Rice must defeat Houston and Tech must beat Arkansas. If Texas defeats Texas A&M, a three-way tie would result and Tech would get the bid. Simple?

Any other result (discounting the Texas-A&M game which has no effect on the title outcome) would give the crown to Houston for the second time in three years.

The Cougars, 8-2, have their destiny in their own hands for the second week in a row. They need but to knock off the Owls, who are 2-8, to enter the Cotton Bowl. But the lack of intensity shown by the ninth-ranked Cougars against Tech has coach Bill Yeoman worried.

"How can you be uninspired when you're arm-wrestling for a trip to the Cotton Bowl?" he asked newsmen. "If you have any ideas, see me later because I sure don't have the answer."

Houston leads the series 5-2, winning both games played between the two as conference rivals

"I've got a sneaking suspicion these kids are going to really play hard this week. I think they're going to come back without turnovers and be ready to play mentally," Yeoman said. "Rice has a good team, but, I think we'll play very hard."

The game will start at 7:30 p.m. in the Astrodome.

The Aggies and Longhorns tangle tonight in their yearly fued over motherhood, apple pie, Chevrolet, Coca-Cola–all the things that made America what it is.

"We're very excited about the game," siad Aggie boss Tom Wilson, now 3-1 in his short head coaching career. ""It's been a rivalry that has been going on for a long time and you can't help but be excited about it. It's been a fiercely competitive series.

"In this ballgame. . .when Texas A&M lines up against Texas. . .it doesn't matter what the records of both teams are, it's going to be a big ballgame," he added.

"They have an outstanding defense and we have been playing good defense lately. Both teams have had explosive offense at times, although both have also been inconsistent."

When asked the reason for the inconsistency, Wilson replied that the intensity —there's that word again—of the players has ebbed and flowed and is perhaps one of the reasons for the many upsets this year.

Another of course is the scholarship rule.

"There's no question about it," said Wilson. It's the 30 scholarship a year and 95 scholarship limit (that is eveing up the talent). I think the rules have done what they were intended to do and that is to really even things out. And I think you'll see more and more of it as the years go by."

The Longhorns carry a 7-3 ledger as do the Aggies and both are off of disasters or near-disasters. Baylor romped Texas 38-14 forthe Bears biggest win over the 'Horns ever and keep Texas winless at Waco since 1974. TCU put a fright into the Aggies by driving to the A&M 18 before throwing an interception to end 15-7 ballgame.

Wilson said the homefield advantage for the Longhorns should not play a big a role when compared to turnovers and field position. A&M defeated Texas on their last trip to Austin and both teams are familiar with miscues, Texas losing the ball nine times against Baylor and A&M coughing it up six times as well.

The nationally-televised contest is expecting a sellout crowd for the 7:30 p.m kickoff.

Shakeup Possible On Wilson Staff?

A general house-cleaning may be in store among Texas A&M football assistants at the end of the year say those watcing the scene in College Station as head coach Tom Wilson puts the final personal touches to the Aggie program.

Three or four Aggie assistants, presently nameless, are expected to be released following Texas A&M's bowl game with Iowa State Dec. 22.

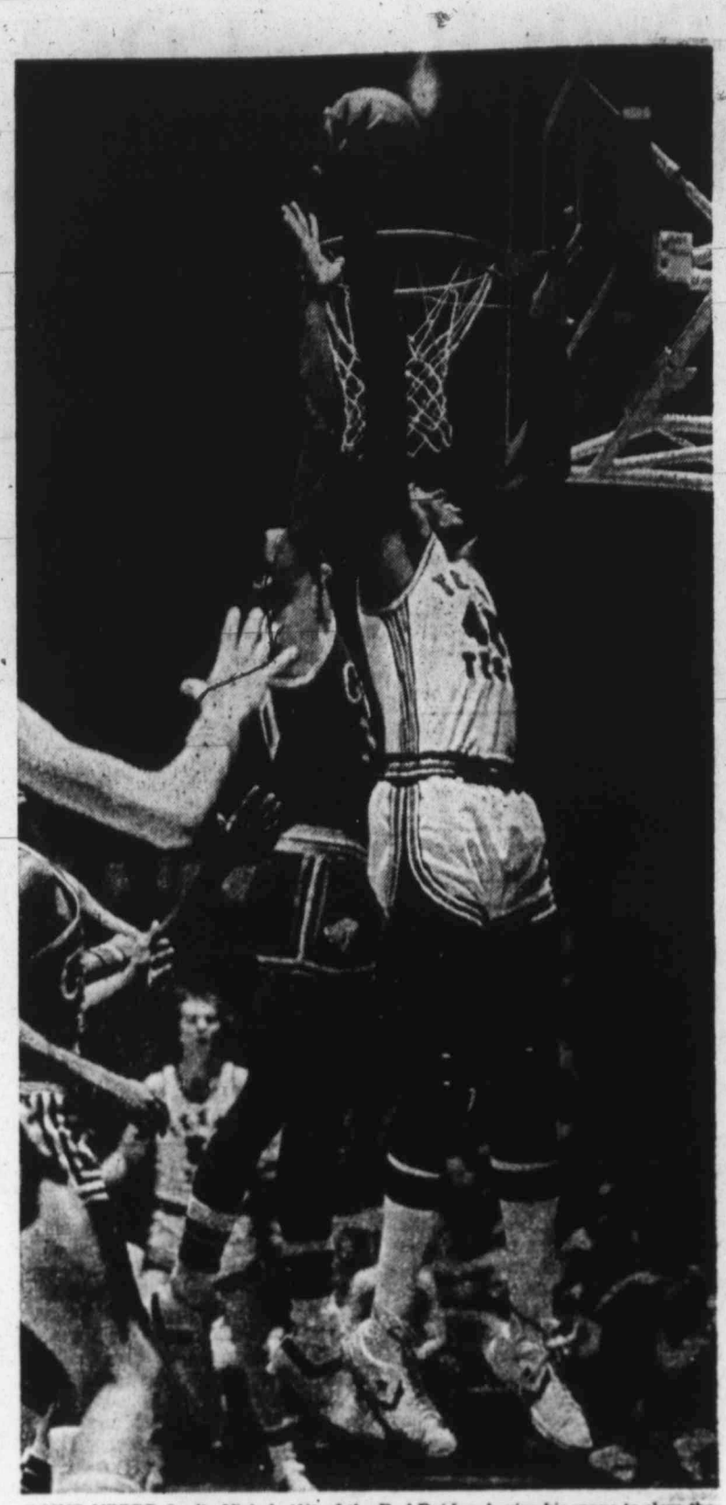

Wilson, who replaced Emory Bellard at mid-season, admitted there will be some vacancies filled and some changes made.

"But whatever we do, it'll be after the bowl game," he said. "There'll probably be something done, but not until the first of the year."

Some have mentioned the name of Temple High School coach Bob McQueen as a possible additon to the Aggie staff. McQueen, who has guided the Wildcats to an 11-0 record thus far, is a long-time friend of Wilson and was thought to be one of those who would have accompanied Wilson to Texas Tech had Wilson obtained the Red Raider coaching job.

"Bob's an outstanding coach," Wilson said, not allowing a confirmation or denial of the rumor.

The Aggies will meet Texas in a nationally-televised contest tonight to close out their regular season.

Stanley Obtains Court Order

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Ousted Oklahoma State football coach Jim Stanley Thursday obtained a temporary federal restraining order prohibiting the Big Eight Conference from taking action against the school on the basis of hearsay testimony against Stanley.

The restraining order was issued in U.S. District Court and remains in effect until Dec. 8 when a hearing on Stanley's application for a preliminary injunction will be held by Judge Russell G. Clark.

As a result, the Big Eight announced the postponement of a scheduled session during conference hearings this week involving allegations related to the Oklahoma State football program.

Stanley was fired as coach Nov. 21 following a 4-7 season. He was accused of being involved in alleged player payoffs prior to the start of the season.

"They can do whatever they want to do to Oklaoma State," said James P. Linn, the ousted coach's attorney, "as long as it does not involve Jim Stanley."

Stanley and his attorney filed for the restraining order when court opened for session at 9 a.m. Thursday and presented it to the conference shortly before noon.

Clark ordered that:

1. The Big Eight is restrained from considering any information, facts or testimony as it relates to Stanley except through live witnesses subject to confrontation and crossexaminiation by the coach.

2. The Big Eight is restrained from rendering any decision or finding as to Oklahoma State University if based upon facts, information or testimony relating to Stanley if such is elicited in a way other than through live testimony of witnesses again subject to confrontation and cross-examiniation by Stanley.

3. It is further ordered that the Big Eight be restrained from conducting any hearing with regard to Oklahoma State based upon facts, information or testimony relating to the activities of Stanley unless such facts are elicited through live testimony of witnesses.

"We thought we could work out some agreement with Big Eight attorneys as to what evidence would be used," said Linn. "but we couldn't so we decided to use this route. We did not feel we were getting minimal due process of law.

"He (Stanley) is named in the report. He's mentioned in the report. But the testimony is hearsay. It's like, 'Somebody said, somebody said, somebody said.' Let me say this, very little of the report deals with Jim Stanley."

Both Stanley and Big Eight Commissioner Charles M. Neinas declined comment.

Penn State Trio Named To East-West

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former Penn State coach Rip Engle has landed three players from the No. 1 ranked Nittany Lions for the 54th Shrine East-West Game scheduled Jan. 6 at Stanford Stadium.

Engle, selection chairman for the East squad, announced Wednesday that offensive linemen Keith Dorney, Eric Cunningham and Charles Correal will be playing in the all-star football game five days after Penn State plays in the Sugar Bowl.

Others named Wednesday to the East team were tight end Kellen Winslow of Missouri and offensive linemen Jon Giesler of Michigan, Robert Shaw of Tennessee and Randy Butler of Southern Mississippi.

No Successor Named For Florida Coach

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The search for a successor to Doug Dickey as University of Florida football coach is wide open, selection chairman William E. Elmore said Thursday.

"We want the best one available, and anyone is in the picture right at the moment," said Elmore, university vice president for administration and president of the University of Florida Athletic Association.

He invited applications.

His committee was expanded to 10 members and Elmore said it will hold its first meeting here Saturday morning.

Florida alumni and supporters bandied about names such as Charlie Pell of Clemson, Jackie Sherrill of Pittsburgh, Steve Sloan of Mississippi and Charley McClendon of Louisiana State.

It wasn't clear if Lou Holtz of Arkansas, rumored a few days ago set to take the job if promised a salary in excess of $100,000 a year and the athletic director's post as well, was the leading prospect for the post.

Since then, some have quoted Holtz as not being interested in the job while others say he hasn't closed the door on the possibility and that he would like to live in the Florida climate.

Elmore, asked whether Holtz is in or out of the picture, replied, "I have no idea."

He said when his committee meets Saturday it will discuss names of those suggested and those who have expressed an interest.

"We'll have a better idea after that meeting how long it will take to name a coach," Elmore said. "I certainly hope it can be completed within a couple weeks."

President Robert Q. Marston, who named an eight-member search committee Wednesday evening after announcing that Dickey was out, added two names — Jacksonville businessman Russell Godwin and law college professor Mandell Glicksburg, who is chairman of the university's faculty-student athletic committee.

Marston said the search committee will report its recommendations to him and to athletic director Ray Graves.

Graves has been athletic director since 1960, also holding the role of head coach for his first 10 years here.

Stoll Resignation Still Undecided

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — University of Minnesota Athletic Director Paul Giel said today that he still has not heard from Football coach Cal Stoll as to whether Stoll will resign.

Giel added, however, that Minnesota definitely would have a new coach next year and that the selection process would begin immediately. Giel said he would like to name a new coach in the next three to four weeks and that it was critical that a new coach be selected as soon as possible for recruiting purposes.

Giel said he talked with Stoll after the Michigan game Oct. 28 about the Gophers' final four games. He said they decided that if Minnesota finished 7-4, they would not have to apologize to anyone. He said he they finished 6-5, they would be pleased with a winning season but knew that other people would be unhappy. He said if they finished with less than that record, Stoll would have to consider stepping down.

The Gophers lost 48-10 at Wisconsin in the final game of the season Saturday and finished with a 5-6 record.

Phillies Stop Efforts To Contract Pete Rose

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies announced Thursday that they were no longer negotiating to acquire Pete Rose, baseball's aging superstar in search of a new uniform for next season.

"We have made an offer that would have made Pete the highest paid player in Phillies history," club owner Ruly Carpenter told a press conference. "Unfortunately it was not quite enough.

"He didn't get into the game of one-upsmanship for which I have the greatest admiration. He's a great player and I wish him the best."

The Phillies for some time had been considered the front runner in the Rose sweepstakes with a reported offer of $1.8 million over three years.

The 37-year-old Rose, who owns the modern National League hitting streak record of 44 straight games, has been searching for a new team since he played out his option after 15 years as a star infielder-outfielder with the Cincinnati Reds.

Since returning last week from an exhibition baseball tour with the Reds in Japan, Rose has visited Atlanta, Kansas City, St. Louis and Pittsburgh. San Diego and New York Mets also made overtures, but are no longer in the running.

Rose said the Phillies offer was "a tremendous one, but it wasn't what I thought I could get from a couple of the other ball clubs."

Asked who the frontrunner was now, Rose replied, "I don't think there is a frontrunner. We're down to four — three in the National League and one in the American League — and I've said all along I'd like to stay in the National League and beat Stan Musial's record."

Musial holds the all-time National League record for career hits of 3,630.

Atlanta, St. Louis Cardinals, and Pittsburgh are the three National League clubs still in the running. In the American League, the Kansas City Royals have been in contact with Rose.

Rose said he may reach a decision as early as Sunday and would first call all the teams involved before making any public announcement.

Rose said he could not rule out reopening negotiations with the Phillies but added, "It doesn't look good right now that I'll be playing in a Phillies uniform."

Earlier in the day, the New York Mets announced that they were withdrawing from the Rose competition, saying the switch-hitter had turned down a package deal offer in excess of $2 million.

Mets spokesman Arthur Richman said Rose's attorney, Reuven Katz, told General Manager Joe McDonald that Rose had received offers "far in excess" of the Mets, including a "spectacular" offer. Katz would not reveal the other club's terms.

Rose had first said he would made a decision on an offer by Dec. 5, but he changed his mind after meeting with Pirate officials in Columbus, Ohio on Wednesday.

"It's like going up a mountain," Rose said. "I'm halfway up and still going."

The Phillies and Rose had scheduled a late afternoon press briefing Thursday to discuss details of their session.

Since returning last week from an exhibition baseball tour with the Reds in Japan, Rose has visited Atlanta, Kansas City, St. Louis and Pittsburgh. San Diego and the New York Mets also made overtures, but are no longer in the running.

New York, in announcing earlier Thursday that they were withdrawing from the competition, said Rose had turned down a package deal offer in excess of $2 million.

PLANS TO STAY–Penn State football coach Joe Paterno poses in New York with Lambert trophy, honoring Penn State as the top football team in the East. Paterno said Thursday he has no desire to leave Penn State and join the ranks of the pros. (AP Laserphoto)

Will Not Go Pro, Claims Joe

NEW YORK (AP) — Penn State's Joe Paterno, with the best winning percentage of all active college football coaches, insisted emphatically Thursday that he has no desire to move into pro ranks.

He urged an end to speculation that he might succeed John McVay as coach of the New York Giants in the National Football League.

"I plan to stay at Penn State as long as I am wanted and as long as we agree on our football philosophy," the 51-year-old coach of the nation's top-ranking team said at a New York luncheon honoring Penn State as winner of the Lambert Trophy.

The trophy is given annually to the major college team voted the best in the East. It marked the fourth time the Lions had won the honor and the 10th time since Paterno became head coach in 1966.

Penn State finished the season with an 11-0 record, the only perfect mark among the major universities, and No. 1 in The Associated Press poll. The ranking will be challenged Jan. 1 in the Sugar Bowl where the Lions meet either Alabama or Georgia.

Massachusetts (8-3) was awarded the Lambert Cup as best of the Eastern teams in the NCAA's Division II. Ithaca (9-1) won the Lambert Bowl for Division III supremacy.

Paterno, a bespectacled, professorial one-time Brown quarterback renowned for his rare emphasis on academics and balanced campus life, appeared embarrassed by repeated questions of whether he would be interested in the Giants' post.

"Let me emphasize as strongly as I can that I never have been offered the Giants' job," he said. "No one from the Giants has talked to me and neither have I talked to them.

"That's the first point. The second is that such speculation is unfair to McVay, who is still the Giants' coach and doing a good job. It is unfair to the Giants, who are trying to salvage the season. It is unfair to our team, preparing as they are for an important bowl game.

"Please, I would like to be removed from all such speculation."

Paterno was accompanied by his two co-captains, quarterback Chuck Fusina and linebacker Paul Suhey.

"I can't imagine Coach Paterno leaving Penn State," said Suhey. "It would shock me — I know he loves the place," added Fusina, second to Billy Sims of Oklahoma in the recent Heisman Trophy voting.

Paterno, as in the case of Alabama's legendary Paul "Bear" Bryant, said he had turned down pro offers in the past because he gets more pleasure from developing raw, unfinished young athletes than from working with the finished product.

"I believe there is more to the college football experience than winning and losing," he has said repeatedly. "We tell our players, 'It's a game — enjoy it.' The business that winning is everything is nonsense."

Paterno said, however, that he could not use the word 'never' when discussing a possible move from Penn State.

"I am not as solidly entrenched as Bryant is at Alabama," he said. "I am just a coach. Bear is also athletic director. Some day the administration at Penn State might change and it could dictate that I would have to make a change. I can only say, I don't foresee it. But I can't say 'never.'"

WTT Plans Expansion; Dallas Team Sought

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — World Team Tennis will field franchises for the coming season in Dallas, Los Angeles and San Diego, commissioner Earl Buchholz announced Thursday.

Buchholz also said Wimbledon Champion Martina Navratilova has indicated an interest in playing for the Dallas franchise.

Earlier this month WTT appeared on the brink of extinction when eight of its 10 franchises folded. After the crash only the Golden Gaters and the Phoenix Rackets remained viable.

Buchholz also said WTT will select five applications from a list of cities to bring the total number of franchises to 10 for 1979.

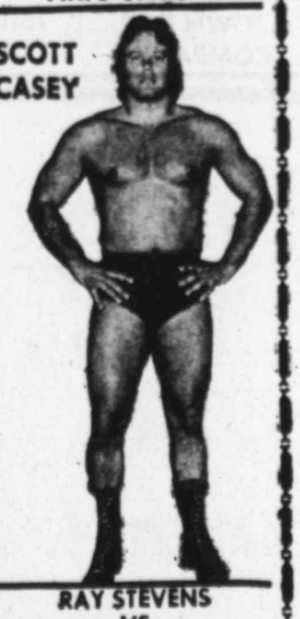

Dave Peterson, chairman of the board of WTT and the owner of the Golden Gaters, did not reveal the names of specific owners in the cities involved.

Peterson said each team will be required to spend $100,000 annually on publicity and promotion, which will be handled by marketing firms in each city.

Davis-Led Tigers Meet Kermit In AA Showdown

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Despite gaining shares of the District 5-AA championship for the last four years, Slaton has only been in the state playoffs once. But when the Tigers did get in, in 1975, they went to the quarterfinals.

They're ready to roll again this season after knocking off Colorado City for the bi-district title last weekend. Tonight they meet Kermit in Midland at 7:30 for the regional championship.

And if you're looking for a line on the game, try pick 'em.

Kermit lost only once this year, to District 2-AAA champ Ft. Stockton. Slaton lost three times, by one point to Littlefield, by 13 to Frenship and by four to Tahoka.

But in the Tigers' favor is their youth. Only one starter returned from last year's team (which tied with Tahoka for the loop title but stayed home because of a regular-season loss to the Bulldogs.).

And, according to coach Ed Cook, they're still improving.

"I don't think we've played our best yet," Cook said. "We're still making those young ball club mistakes. At least I hope we haven't reached it yet."

Cook said his club's best games were against Seminole and Denver City, both district victories. Slaton beat Seminole 27-15 in the next-to-the-last game of the district season and knocked off Denver City 29-7 in the third loop contest.

Comparing scoring, the two teams break down remarkably similarly. Slaton has outscored its opponents by an average of 22.5-12.8. Kermit's average is 21.9 to 10.7.

"They're just a good fundamental ball club," Cook said. "They have super speed and three super runningbacks. They have a quarterback who is real comparable to Ricky (Davis, the Slaton QB)."

Davis, the sole returning starter from last year's team, has been the Tigers' guiding light so far this year. In 11 games (including last week's 33-21win over Colorado City) he has rushed 132 times for 983 yards and 15 touchdowns. At the same time, he has thrown 42 times, completing 17, for 306 yards and another seven TDs.

In last weekend's win he rushed for 159 yards and four touchdowns.

Kermit's leading rusher is tailback Albert McGilbra. He carried the ball 165 times for 770 yards and scored six times. Rounding out the backfield is Todd Ethridge, Deon Bryant and quarterback Brent Barrs.

Barrs has completed 27 of his 71 attempted passes for 366 yards and a pair of scores.

"We're going to have to play good sound football to beat them," Cook said. "They're very balanched. They're not a ball club you can pick up tendencies from. They run equally to the right and to the left and they throw enough to keep you honest.

"We're also going to have to play with a good bit of emotion."

Rams Battle Turmoil On Road To Playoffs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For a team in torment much of this 1978 National Football League season, the Los Angeles Rams have done well with much credit due to coach Ray Malavasi, a lovable brute who knows the score.

Owner Carroll Rosenbloom wants a Super Bowl title as much as any politician wants the presidency.

Chuck Knox coached the Rams to five National Football Conference Western Division championships in as many seasons at the helm, but he never put the Rams into the Super Bowl.

Rosenbloom became disenchanted, gave Knox a new contract with the intimation that he'd like to see him elsewhere. Knox took the hint and resigned to become coach and general manager at Buffalo for the 1978 season.

Rosenbloom decided on former Rams' coach George Allen who put on a tough demeanor and lasted all of two preseason games, both losses; he was sacked from his three-year contract and Malavasi was named to take over.

The veteran Malavasi had been defensive coordinator in the Knox regime and moved over to the offense under Allen. The players respected him and promptly won the final two preseason conflicts and the first seven regular season NFL contests.

Then the Rams, and Malavasi ran into troubles. They lost to underdogs New Orleans, Atlanta and Cleveland, and barely escaped San Francisco with a narrow win over the 49ers, who possess the NFL's worst record.

The coach didn't do much criticizing until last Sunday's 30-19 loss to Cleveland. Then he said:

"We weren't ready. We played poorly. The defense was embarrassed."

He speaks frankly and criticizes officiating and the Los Angeles press.

He said officials might be put in one room for instruction and the press in another. And he laughed with no denial when a newsman suggested a third room might be for coaches.

The Rams had walkouts during the training period. Before that they had decided not to renew the contract of Joe Namath, to go instead with young quarterbacks Pat Haden and Vince Ferragamo. All-Pro defensive back Monte Jackson was one of the walkouts and was traded. Also sent away was a top wide receiver Harold Jackson.

Malavasi has installed a more wide open offense although critics still call it staid. Misfortune has centered on the running back corps.

Top draftee Elvis Peacock went out for the year with a knee injury suffered in the preseason. Another speedster, Wendell Tyler, suffered his knee injury early in the regular season.

Ace running back Lawrence McCutcheon was hurt in preseason and missed five regular season games and has been hurt again and might be out for the rest of the year.

"We have depth and thank goodness for that," says Malavasi who once was head coach at Denver for 10 games on an interim basis and has spent 23 years in the coaching ranks after playing for Army and Mississippi State.

On taking over the Rams this time, he said, "If you want to be head coach, you have to take the opportunity. You simply try to improve execution of basic football and then put in the refinements."

He went back to the Knox defense and tried to improve on the Allen offense.

More rollouts, passing when its not expected and sprint outs were in his game plan. The Rams are no longer predictable as they were in the past.

Malavasi ran into an unpredictable situation himself with outside linebacker Isiah Robertson.

The defender had walked out on training camp "to get my head together" and Allen demoted him to second string behind Bob Brudzinski.

Malavasi's first move was to return the former All-Pro to his starting spot, but then decided to demote him again. Robertson promptly asked to be traded.

The team suspended Robertson for 14 days this week after numerous team rule infractions. "If he comes back," Malavasi said, "he'll come on our terms not his. At the end of the season, we'll try to accommodate him."

Yankees Deny Move To Lure Away Rod Carew

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The New York Yankees firmly denied a report Thursday that they're trying to trade with Minnesota for Rod Carew, and the Twins' star first baseman deftly fielded the report with a terse "no comment."

Carew, contacted at his suburban Minneapolis home, wouldn't even say whether he would like to play with the Yanks. "I don't want to make any comment," he said.

In New York, Yankees' President Al Rosen described the report as "absolutely, totally, unequivocally untrue."

Twins Vice President Clark Griffith said he knew nothing about the report. His father, Twins President Calvin Griffith, was in Florida and reporters hadn't been able to reach him for comment.

Despite the denial, it was considered very likely that the elder Griffith and the Yanks' owner, George Steinbrenner, would be conferring when baseball's winter meetings begin Monday in Orlando, Fla.

Other reports have had the Cincinnati Reds willing to give pitcher Paul Moskau, first baseman Dan Driessen and cash for Carew.

The published report Rosen denied involved a deal in which the Yanks would give up first baseman Chris Chambliss, outfielder Juan Beniquez and pitcher Ken Clay for Carew. To sweeten the deal, the Yankees also would pay the Twins $400,000 in cash — the maximum amount permitted by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn in such transactions.

"We have had no talks with Minnesota involving any of the players mentioned," said Rosen. "And that includes Carew."

Asked if the Yanks were interested in Carew, a seven-times American League batting champion with a .330 career average, Rosen said: "That's not fair. That's like asking if we're interested in George Foster or Jim Rice or Vida Blue. You'd have to be out of your mind not to be interested in them."

Referring specifically to Chambliss, Rosen said, "We've got a pretty good first baseman here already. If you look at his RBI (90), his homers (12), his batting average (.274) and his ability to play every day, and this year he was a golden glover, and he's only 30 years old, you get the idea he knows how to play baseball."

Carew and Griffith have disagreed on several matters, including club operations and the Minnesota superstar's salary, understood to be in the neighborhood of $200,000 a year.

Carew is in the final year of a three-year contract and 1979 would be his option year.

In a speech to the Waseca, Minn., Lions Club near the end of the 1978 season, the blunt-speaking Griffith said Carew had been foolish not to demand more compensation, in view of his consistently great performance.

After that speech was reported, Carew vowed he wouldn't play another season for the Twins and said he wanted to be traded.

It appeared it would take at least a five-year $3 million contract to keep Carew in Minnesota. Griffith has steadfastly opposed high salaries for baseball players.

Montgomery Signs Pact With Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons announced Wednesday the signing of offensive tackle Marv Montgomery, the Denver Broncos' No. 1 pick in the 1971 draft, to bolster a line hurt by an injury to starting tackle Warren Bryant.

The 6-foot-6, 265-pound Montgomery has played for the Broncos and the New Orleans Saints.

Fem Cagers Play

The Texas Tech women's basketball team will try to bounce back from a dismal performance at the Wayland Baptist Tournament this tonight and Saturday as the Red Raiders host Kansas State and the University of Kansas.

Kansas State will invade the Lubbock Coliseum with nine women returning from last year's 20-14 team.

Kansas State All-Big Eight selections Eileen Feeney (13.5 points and 6.3 rebounds per game) and Laurie Miller (11.9, 6.4) will lead the Wildcats.

The University of Kansas will present All-American Lynette Woodard to Lubbock basketball fans. Only a sophomore, the 6-1 Miss Woodard has already played on the U.S. team that competed in China this summer.

Tag Teammers Meet

Dick Murdock and Ted DiBiase will meet Mr. Pogo and Akio Sato in a main event tag team match in wrestling action at the Fair Park Colisem tonight. The competition will begin at 8 p.m.

In other matches, Ray Stevens will wrestle Adrian Adonis, Bob Brown will battle Ricky Romero, Doug Somers is scheduled to face Ratameyus and Larry Lane will face Roger Kirby.

Swim Meet Set

The Texas Tech swimming team will wrap up its fall schedule in Dallas today and Saturday in the Pre Season Southwest Conference Championships.

SMU will host the two-day meet, which has sessions starting at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. both days.

Tech Coach Jim McNally saw improvement in last week's loss to Houston and feels his younger swimmers are beginning to make the transition from high school to college.

Tech will return to action against New Mexico Jan. 13 in Lubbock.

Swimmers Battle

The Texas Tech women's swim team will wrap up their fall season with the University of New Mexico Invitational today and Saturday.

Besides Tech and New Mexico, others entered in the competition includes the University of Wyoming, Colorado State and New Mexico State.

The New Mexico meet will mark the first time this season that the Raider tankers have competed in the 1650 freestyle and 400 individual medley.

Sarah MacDonald, Lynn McKelvey and Jenny Stuart will swim the 1650 freestyle. Miss MacDonald will also p participate in the 400 individual medley as will Dawn Pruitt and Carol Gilliam.

LCC Drops Game 92-81

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (Special) —Despite having three starters scoring in double figures, the Lubbock Christian Chaparrals lost their fifth game in as many starts, this time to Mesa College 92-81.

It LCC's 33rd consecutive road loss.

Mike Wrinkle led the attack for LCC, now 0-5, with 22 points, while Bruce Carver and Bill McGee scored 18 and 17 points respectively.

John Lynch popped in 22 points for Mesa, which is now 1-2, as all five Mesa starters scored in double figures.

Mesa hit 47.8 percent from the floor while LCC was only six percentage points less accurate. The Chaps were behind by only one at the half, but saw their hosts stretch the lead in the second half.

The Chaps' Kevin Wharton and Mesa's Wade Kirchmeyer were ejected from the contest following a scuffle in a jump-ball situation in the second half.

TCU Blasts Trinity

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Freshman guard Mark Nickens scored 16 points as Texas Christian rolled to an easy 97-55 basketball win over Trinity University Thursday night.

The victory evened TCU's record at 2-2 and snapped a two-game losing streak. Trinity is now 1-2.

TCU dominated the boards, snaring 64 rebounds to Trinity's 21.

The 97 points were TCU's highest offensive output since a 103-87 victory over Rice in the 1975-76 season.

"We needed a game like this to give all our young players some confidence," said TCU Coach Tim Somerville said. "We did a much better job of blocking out on the boards and we played with more intensity. I was also pleased with our fast break."

Trinity was led by 6-foot-6 center Danny Ivey with 17 points.

WTSU 114, Wayland Baptist 83

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Dan Elmer and George Sims combined for 47 points Thursday night as West Texas State coasted to a 114-83 victory over Wayland Baptist in a college basketball game.

Sims scored 24 points and Elmer had 23. They were among five West Texas State players who finished in double figures.

Donnie Seal led Wayland with 26 points.

West Texas State is now 2-0 and averaging 102 points per game. Wayland's record fell to 4-3.

Tulsa 87, NTSU 80

DENTON, Texas (AP) — The University of Tulsa overcame a sloppy first half and exploded with 50 points in the second period Thursday night to defeat North Texas State, 87-80, in a nonconference basketball game.

Guard Terry Sims paced Tulsa's second half effort with 12 points, and the winners ended the game with their biggest margin of the night.

Tulsa trailed at the half, 38-37, after committing 16 fouls and losing 10 turnovers.

The game boosted Tulsa's record to 2-0, and left North Texas at 1-2 for the season.

Today's action pits Caprock against Dumas at 3 p.m., Canyon against Clovis at 6:30 p.m. and Hereford and Morton at 8:15 p.m.

Odessa Tourney

Coronado opened the Odessa Tournament on a high note Thursday afternoon by edging El Paso Irvin 44-41, behind the 12-point output of guard Dennis Boyles.

Irvin managed to hold a 26-22 halftime lead, however the Mustangs roared back in the third stanza and outscored their counterparts 12-4 to take control of the game for the rest of the afternoon.

The Ponies will meet Odessa High at 6:30 p.m. tonight in the second round of the three-day event, set to conclude late Saturday night.

Coronado outscored IHS 20-19 from the field and 4-3 from the free throw line.

In other Odessa action, Rex Fields pumped in 18 points as Odessa Permian defeated El Paso Riverside 70-68 in overtime, and Henry Crawford scored 18 as Amarillo High nipped Odessa Ector 59-56.

Kress Tourney

Terry Henry hit 12 points as Hale Center crushed Hart 58-25 in other girl's action. Stacey Averitt paced the Longhorns with 10 points. Also, Nazareth edged Littlefield 45-44, despite Wanda Williams' 16 points for the losers.

Junior Ashmore bucketed 19 points for the Hale Center boys as they blitzed Hart 57-27. David Rick led the Longhorns with 10 points. In other action, Littlefield advanced by beating Nazareth 60-50.

In late night action, the Kress boys whipped Silverton 63-47 and Olton guys surprise Happy 56-51. Olton girls defeated Happy 54-41 and Kress girls fell to Silverton 45-37.

Brownfield Tourney

Jeff Manley pumped in 24 points as Lubbock High defeeated host Brownfield 84-77 in the Brownfield Basketball TouTournament.

The win puts Lubbock High in the win column for the first time this year. The Westerners are 1-5.

Lubbock High will now play the winner of the Levellan Levelland-Lamesa game Saturday night at 7:30 p.m.

ENMU Women Win Rout

ALPINE (Special)—The Eastern New Mexico University women opened their cage season in winning fashion by dumping hosting Sul Ross State 87-24 in a clear mismatch.

Forward Donna Reed scored 28 points for the Greyhoundettes, while guards Margie Martinez and Brenda Worley added 17 and 14 points respectively. ENMU led 41-12 at the end of the first half and scored 46 points in the second period while holding Sul Ross again to an even dozen.

Miss Reed had 15 rebounds.

Matadors Eye Snyder

Kelley plans to utilize both Gatewood and White against the Tigers. But what took Gatewood so long for him to come on?

"He transfered here earlier in the season," said Kelley. "And of course UIL rules state that a player must be in a new school district 30 days before he is eligible to compete in athletic competition."

Defensively, Jenkins might be preparing the Tigers for something that is not going to happen.

"We feel that Estacado will be sending linebackers," said the Tiger mentor. "Thus, we have been having our linemen practicing picking up linebackers."

Kelley doubts that the Tiger offensive line will have to concern themselves with blitzing linebackers.

"You can't affort to blitz against a veer team," said Kelley. "You can't, because the execution is so quick."

Estacado will bring a 10-1 record into the game, while Snyder sports a 9-2 mark.

The winner of the game will go advance into semifinal action against the winner of the Gainsville-Carthage game.

"It's going to be who wants the game the most," said Kelley. "Of course, I want to go on, but you can't get mad or upset if you lose. After all, only eight teams are where we are."

But Kelley did admit that he would like to postpone for at least another week trying to figure out a off season program schedule.

Acting On Horses, Bikes Wins Over Dentistry

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It's a safe bet that Larry Wilcox would rather make a living on horseback than on a motorcycle.

He does own three motorcycles and drives another one on the popular NBC series "CHiPs."

Horses are another story. He owns seven, wants to raise more, and spends his weekends participating in amateur rodeos. Recently, his skills were put to a test on "CHiPs."

"We had a rodeo episode," said Wilcox. "The crew knew I rode and roped. They were hoping I'd mess up so they could rib me." He grinned and added, "That's a great way to make a living."

Wilcox, virtually raised on horseback in Rawlins, Wyo., also plays western outlaw Emmett Dalton in the four-hour NBC movie "Raid on Coffeyville." The movie, produced and directed by Dan Curtis, recounts the attempt by the Dalton Gang in 1892 to simultaneously rob two banks in Coffeyville, Kan.

Would he rather be doing a western series? Wilcox has no compliants. Without hesitation, he replied, 'I'd rather be doing something successful, and 'CHiPs' is successful."

"CHiPs," which also stars Erik Estrada and Robert Pine, is one of NBC's most consistently popular series. Last year, it helped save the network from total embarrassment in the ratings.

It is the first show since "Highway Patrol" 23 years ago authorized to use the badge and seal of the California Highway Patrol. Wilcox said that since the series began a year ago, applications to join the Highway Patrol have doubled.

"In the past, there was the connotation that policemen were pigs," said Wilcox, "but here are two semi-idealistic officers. I don't mean to sound pompous, but kids are looking up to them. Even older people are seeing policemen as human beings, and that's one of the facets we try to stress.

LIKES WESTERNS BETTER — Actor Larry Wilcox, dressed at right for his starring role in the TV series "CHiPs," says he would rather be in a western series. At left is how he looks for his starring role in an upcoming four-hour TV film on NBC titled "Raid on Coffeyville," the story of the Dalton Gang in 1892. While he owns three motorcycles, he demonstrates his preference for horses by owning seven, and wants to raise more.(AP Laserphoto)

"Parents like the show because of its good image of the police and its lack of violence. Nobody ever draws a gun and we hope it stays that way. We may stop somebody, but if it's a felony we always turn the suspect over to the Los Angeles Police."

Wilcox said the series is viewed as a training film by many police agencies because a Highway Patrol officer is always present during filming as a technical adviser. He said, "We don't do everything right, but there are incidents that show the proper response."

The series has changed from its first year, when it was played more for comedy than adventure. NBC and MGM brought in Cy Chermak as executive producer to move it toward more action-adventure.

"The real difficulty is that they're basically traffic cops," Chermak said in an earlier interview. Chermak had produced other police shows in the past, including "Ironside."

"They're not investigators. They don't get involved in murders or kidnappings. What they do get involved in are runaway trucks and buses, car thefts, lost children, a variety of traffic violators and such things as finding a baby who may have eaten contaminated food."

In "The Raid on Coffeyville," which has not yet been scheduled, Wilcox ages from 24 to 64 as outlaw Emmett Dalton. "It's a good western and representative of the period," he said. "My son, Derek, plays my character at the age of 9. Derek ropes, too, and in the opening of the show he's roping milk cans. He gets it every time. Everybody in the company teased me that he was the real roper in the family."

Although Wilcox grew up in the town of Rawlins, both sides of his family had been in ranching in Wyoming. But he also was something of a ham in high school and he headed for Los Angeles to study acting.

For several years, Wilcox couldn't decide whether he wanted to be an actor or a dentist. Even after he had starred two years in the "Lassie" series he was still considering dental school.

Acting, of course, won out, and Wilcox is branching into directing and writing. He plans to organize his own production company.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Armando Rodriguez, president of East Los Angeles College, was sworn in by Vice President Walter F. Mondale Thursday as a member of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

NBC 'Weekend' News Effort To Air

NEW YORK (AP) — "It's like riding a roller coaster, lurching, pulling to the top," says Linda Ellerbee of the several weeks before the premiere of NBC's weekly "Weekend" news magazine. "You know in a few moments you'll be rushing through an exciting new experience.

"None of use knows what to expect, and I really can't wait."

That mad rush begins Saturday night at 10 EST as "Weekend," started in 1974 as a once-a-month alternative to NBC's "Saturday Night Live," goes weekly. The first program includes stories on artificial insemination, "A Growing Need for Single Women," and on Idi Amin, the self-styled "King of Africa."

The show is a "premiere" only in the sense that NBC is committed to a weekly format. A special edition of "Weekend" the evening of Oct. 12 — a Thursday — fell flat in the ratings, but NBC has indicated a willingness to endure unsteady footing — for a while.

The inevitable comparison is with CBS' "60 Minutes," which suffered in the ratings for years before settling into a Sunday evening time slot to watch the ratings soar.

Miss Ellerbee and others on the "Weekend" team are uncomfortable with the parallel with "60 Minutes." Indeed, the similarity is in the magazine-style format.

NBC describes "Weekend" this way: "Diverse subject matter, offbeat, investigative or simply picturesque," "60 Minutes," in contrast, tends more toward the hard news, investigative story.

And unlike the staff of four correspondents at "60 Minutes," Miss Ellerbee and co-anchor Lloyd Dobyns are it for "Weekend" — and they write their own material and the script for the show.

"There are only a certain number of things I can do personally," Miss Ellerbee says of the certainly difficult period ahead. "The thing I have to do is write better material than anyone else in television, and do it consistently.

"Nobody asked me what night to put on the program, nor did they consult me about the time. The network has to do its share," she says, "and leave us on long enough to find out how much of an audience we can build."

For NBC, it's more than just a numbers game. There is a certain amount of prestige involved — a critically acclaimed news program should survive in spite of low ratings at the start.

This season is Linda Ellerbee's first with "Weekend." Dobyns and the program's executive producer, Reuven Frank, have been there from the start.

"We are working with no net," Miss Ellerbee says, "no backlog of stories in the can. I don't know how it will be, but I came into it with the idea it would be a killer."

The 34-year-old native of Bryan, Texas, was an NBC News correspondent in Washington before taking the "Weekend" assignment. Her career began in 1964 at radio station WVON in Chicago, and includes work with stations in San Francisco and Juneau, Alaska.

After a stint as a reporter for The Associated Press, she was hired by KHOU-TV, the CBS affiliate in Houston, and in 1973 went to work for New York's WCBS-TV. She joined NBC in 1975.

Ballerina Displays Dual Talents In Film Debut

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — From Mary Pickford to Genevieve Bujold, Canada has provided the screen with acting talent. From Leslie Caron to Leslie Brown, the world of dance has been equally generous.

Now comes a double gift: Anne Ditchburn, Ontario-born ballet star.

She appears opposite Paul Sorvino in the new film by John Avildsen, "Slow Dancing in the Big City." The United Artists release has opened to mixed reviews. Some critics, including this one, found it charming though flawed. Others have assailed the film as sloppily sentimental.

"I'm not surprised by the adverse reviews," says the outspoken Miss Ditchburn, who has been dancing for 21 of her 28 years.

"Not many critics are romantically minded, and I must say that I am not romantic in judging my peers in the dance world. There is a razor-fine edge between romanticism and corn, and I think 'Slow Dancing' worked against the corn. John's films hit people emotionally; he is a genius at that.

"I see no better reason for films than to affect people. When I go to the theatre, I love to laugh and cry."

"Slow Dancing in the Big City" relates the offbeat romance between a New York columnist, a pushover for the heart-tugging human interest story, and a dedicated, ailing ballerina. Avildsen, who won the Oscar for "Rocky," is comfortable with such material.

"John deals with heroes in his work," observes Miss Ditchburn. "Many of us don't like to admit that we have heroes. I know I didn't. But then I realized that I had one in Rudy Nureyev, who has danced with our company, the National Ballet of Canada, for six years.

"I had always had trouble choreographing men. Watching Rudy dance and observing not only his tremendous artistry but his charisma as well, I was able to make a huge opening in my ability to design dances for men."

Anne Ditchburn was choreographing a ballet at the Metropolitan Opera House when director Avildsen happened to see her photograph in the New York Times. The pose showed her rehearsing a couple of dancers, and Avildsen detected a sense of energy. He called her for an audition, which began as a disaster.

"My dramatic acting on the stage had been strictly limited to dance," she says. "When I first read the scene, my inexperience showed. But John filmed me over and over again, and gradually I improved."

The director came to Hollywood to test other dancers, but Anne Ditchburn stuck in his mind. She filmed a test with Sorvino "which proved that Paul and I were okay visually and that Paul could work with me." Two months of dramatic coaching, five hours a day, helped prepare her for the New York filming.

Her feelings about her first acting job?

"I felt incredibly tired. I was undergoing two disciplines at once — acting and ballet. I sprained my ankle, and that delayed the dance scenes for two weeks. It was inevitable. The more tired I got, the more risk I took. But then, ballet dancers are always working beyond their limitation, ever seeking to be higher, better, stronger, looser.

Ryan Aide Denies Story Of Leaked CIA Briefing

SAN MATEO, Calif. (AP) — An aide to slain Rep. Leo Ryan has denied reporter Daniel Schorr's statement that the congressman leaked a story to him on covert CIA operations in Angola in 1975.

Aide Joe Holsinger said on Wednesday that Schorr's remarks were "reprehensible" and accused Schorr of attempting to use Ryan "to reinstate himself."

Ryan was killed Nov. 18 while on a fact-finding trip to the Peoples Temple settlement in Jonestown, Guyana.

Schorr, a former CBS television newsman, said Wednesday the California Democrat leaked the information after receiving a top-secret briefing from the staff of the House International Relations Committee.

Holsinger said Schorr had contacted Ryan and asked Ryan to confirm information Schorr had received from another source.

"Schorr tried to trap Leo, to use him," Holsinger said. "Leo refused and he told me later he was glad he refused."

"Leo did not have much respect for Schorr, and I'm sure time will justify that opinion," Holsinger told reporters.

Holsinger said there were other persons who could support the denial, but he did not identify them.

Schorr said he is not accustomed to revealing his sources, but he felt it was proper to identify Ryan because he was "dead and beyond reproach."

Schorr left CBS on Sept. 28, 1976, following a controversy over his having given secret government documents to the Village Voice newspaper in New York.

Famed Conductor Arthur Fiedler Enters Hospital

BOSTON (AP) — Arthur Fiedler, longtime conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, cancelled an appearance at the lighting of a giant Christmas tree Thursday after he was admitted to a hospital for tests.

"I don't know what is wrong with him, if anything," said Peter Gelb, a spokesman for the Boston Symphony.

Fiedler was admitted to Tufts-New England Medical Center on Wednesday.

Fiedler had been scheduled to lead a sing-along during the lighting of a tree at the Prudential Center.

Gelb said the conductor still plans to direct the Pops during a nationally televised tribute Dec. 17 on his 84th birthday.

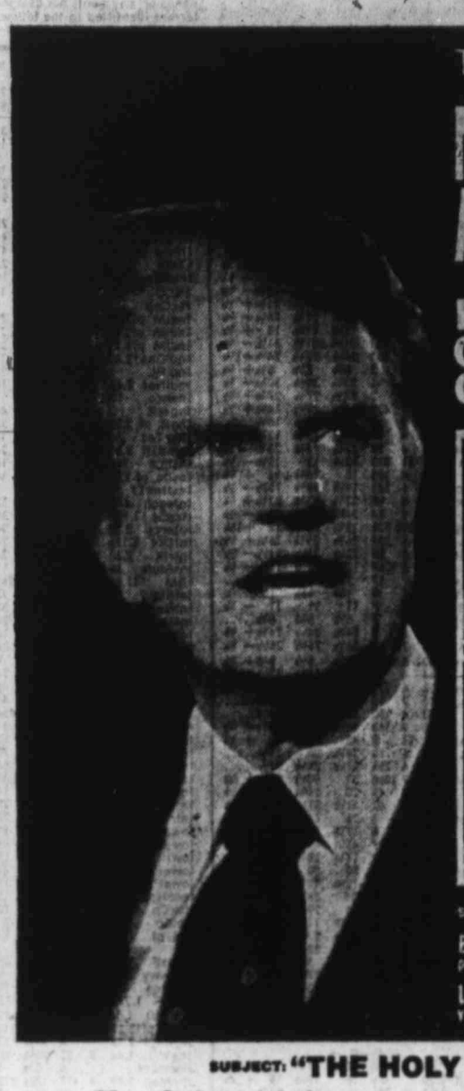

The spokesman said Fiedler has been hospitalized for tests several times earlier this year.

Fiedler has conducted the Pops since 1930.

If Montana's northern boundary were placed along the Atlantic seacoast, it would stretch from Boston to Richmond, Va.

Late Surge Aids Mart

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market shook off day-long doldrums in the last hour of trading Thursday as bargain hunters entered the market looking to capitalize on losses in the two previous sessions and the dollar scored late gains.

For most of the day, the market appeared to be duplicating its sluggish performance of the past two weeks. Volume was light and there was very little movement up or down, which analysts attributed to a lack of news.

But the Dow Jones industrial average surged in the final minutes to finish with an 8.92-point gain to 799.03, its biggest jump since the record 35.34-point bulge Nov. 1. Wednesday the market tumbled 14.03 points after a 9.70-point loss Tuesday.

"You've got a little bit of bargain-hunting here," said Eldon A. Grimm, an analyst at Birr, Wilson & Co. "There's a bit of an automatic rebound after the losses of the last two sessions."

There was also a strong showing by the dollar, which rose against most currencies in world foreign exchange trading.

Advances led declines by a 9-5 margin on the New York Stock Exchange. The NYSE's composite average of more than 1,500 listed common stocks rose .51 to 52.89. Standard & Poor's 400-stock industrial average rose 1.15 to 105.16, and its 500-stock index climbed .95 to 94.70.

New York (AP) — Thursday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

New National Smoker Study:

Merit 100's Taste Acclaimed!

Latest research shows 'Enriched Flavor'™ cigarette equal to-or better than-leading high tar 100's.

Can the taste of low tar MERIT 100's satisfy the toughest low tar critics: smokers of much higher tar 100's?

Here are the results of new, nationwide research involving smokers who taste-tested MERIT 100's against leading high tar brands.

Results Confirm MERIT Breakthrough

Confirmed: Majority of 100's smokers rate MERIT 100's taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to 70% more tar.

Confirmed: Majority of 100's smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT 100's.

And detailed interviews conducted among current MERIT 100's smokers documented the same taste satisfaction.

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT 100's smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: Overwhelming majority of MERIT 100's smokers say their former high tar brands weren't missed!

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT 100's smokers not considering other brands.

First Major Alternative To High Tar Smoking

MERIT 100's have proven conclusively that they not only deliver the flavor of high tar 100's—but continue to satisfy!

This ability to satisfy over long periods of time could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT is what it claims to be: The first real alternative for high tar smokers.
