Rebels win, head to quarterfinals

Staff Report

EL PASO — After racking up 376 total yards and posting their third shutout this season in a 25-0 area round playoff victory over El Paso Franklin, the Midland Lee Rebels are headed to the Class 5A Big School state quarterfinals for the fourth straight year.

The Rebels (8-4 overall) will play the winner of today's area round game between Arlington High School and Keller Fossil Ridge at 2 p.m. next Saturday in Odessa's Ratliff Stadium.

Arlington and Fossil Ridge will play tonight at Texas Stadium in Irving. Both Metroplex teams will carry 9-2 records into the game.

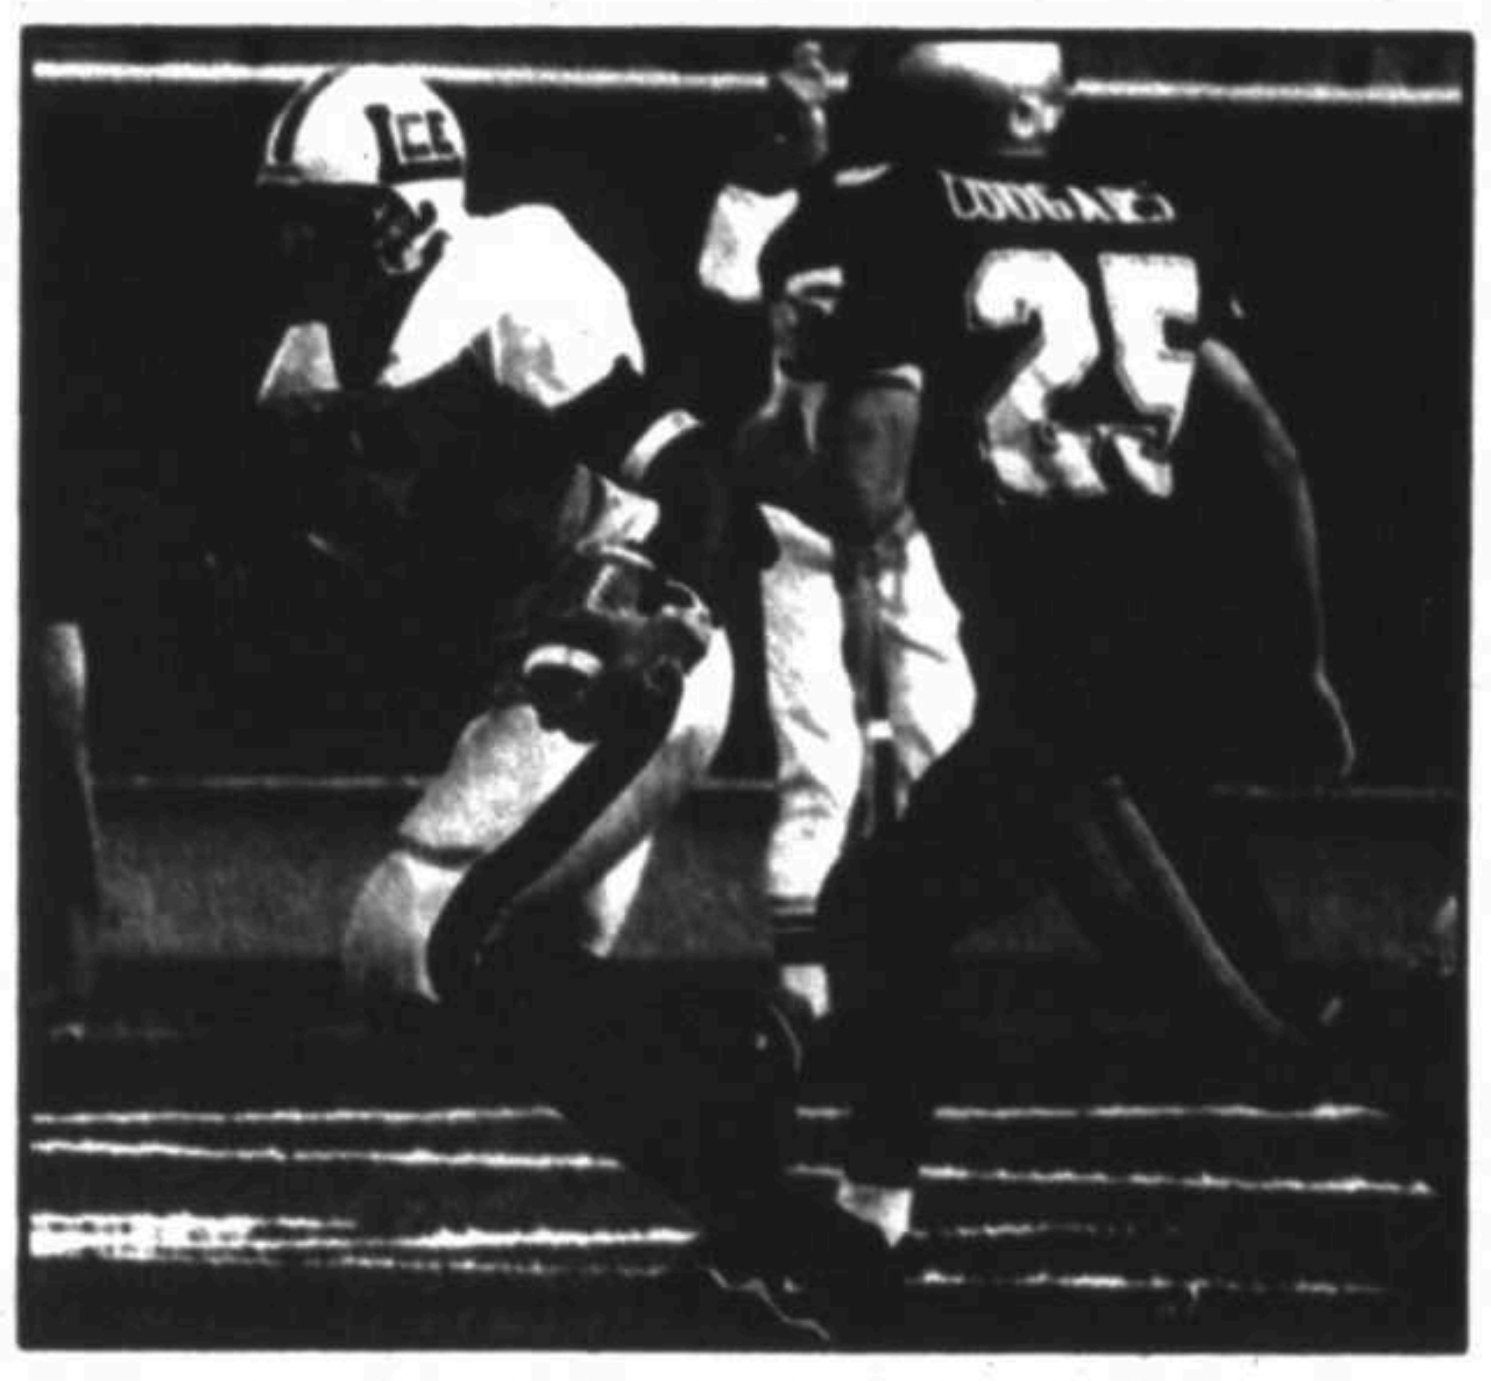
For Lee, the shutout of previously unbeaten Franklin was revenge for a 21-7 road defeat at the hands of the Cougars during the non-district schedule. However, this game was all Lee, which continued its dominance over El Paso teams, raising its all-time record to 48-4-1 vs. El Paso teams. Lee is also 3-0 against Franklin in the playoffs and 2-0 in games played in the Sun Bowl.

Offensively, two Rebels — Jacobe Kendrick and Freddie Jones — both gained 100 yards on the ground for the second straight postseason game. Kendrick finished with 139 yards on 24 carries while Jones had the bigger day with 161 yards and two scores. The Rebels racked up 343 rushing yards as a team.

Looking to the next round, Lee is 0-2 all-time vs. Arlington. Both meetings came in the postseason, the most recent game occurring in 1994 (a 28-18 Arlington win). Midland Lee and Fossil Ridge have never squared off on the gridiron.

Midland Lee extended its postseason winning streak to 18 games. It's a streak that includes three straight state championships and now a fourth consecutive appearance in the state quarterfinals.

With three more wins, the Rebels will collect a fourth straight state title, which is unprecedented in Texas' highest classification.



Jacobe Kendrick (42) of Midland Lee runs the ball during a Class 5A Division I area round playoff game against El Paso Franklin on Friday afternoon at the Sun Bowl in El Paso. Midland Lee won 25-0.

Shoppers climb out of bed early to cash in on holiday bargains

By Emily Baker and Evan A. Pierce

Parking two blocks from the front of a store and standing in line for an hour while waiting to check out were not problems for bargain hunters who were willing to tough it out to save some money during America's busiest shopping day of the year — the Friday after Thanksgiving.

Many stores opened early, closed late and offered special sales Friday. Some stores, such as Best Buy, offered extra savings during early hours.

Best Buy opened at 7 a.m. instead of the usual 10 a.m.

Sheriff's Mounted Patrol may ride again this season

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Just as it did in the 1999 Christmas-shopping season, the Midland County Sheriff's Mounted Patrol may be out patrolling Midland Park Mall on horseback to ensure safety and discourage crime during the holiday gift-shopping season.

"I think it is very effective," said Sheriff's Lt. Monte Kay Cross, who is commander of the Mounted Patrol. "And I know

Stocks approach 10,000 in limited trading session

By Adam Geller
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Investors returned from the Thanksgiving holiday in a buying mood Friday, sending blue chip stocks to strong gains and reversing the profit-taking trend of recent sessions.

The Dow Jones industrial average ended an abbreviated trading session up 125.03 to 9,959.71. For the week, the Dow climbed 92.72 points, or 0.9 percent.

Broader stock indicators also rose. The Standard & Poor's 500 index was up 13.31 to 1,150.34, to end the week up 1 percent. The Nasdaq composite index rose 28.15 to 1,903.20, to end the week up 0.2 percent.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a nearly 3-to-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where consolidated volume came to 512.75 million shares, down sharply from 1.28 billion in Wednesday's session.

The rise in stock prices, despite the absence of news, shows some investors see buying opportunities after market backtracking earlier this week, analysts said.

"We did see some selling. We did see some money taken off the table. But there are bargain hunters that refuse to sit idly by as optimism appears to be increasing," said Alan Ackerman, executive vice president at Fahnestock & Co. in New York.

Friday's gains reversed the trend of earlier this week, but are in line with the market's recent surge, which has seen stocks gain about 20 percent from the lows that followed the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Stock markets closed at 1 p.m. Friday due to the Thanksgiving holiday weekend.

Gainers included Ericsson, whose chairman said this week he expects less competition in the market for third-generation wireless technology. The company's stock rose 33 cents to $5.55.

Wal-Mart Stores, the nation's largest retailer, rose 68 cents to $55.80 as consumers headed to stores on the day regarded as the official start to the holiday shopping season. Toys R Us shares also rose, up 95 cents to $23.05.

Tests find no evidence of anthrax in woman's mail, mailbox, post office

By Donna Tommelleo
Associated Press

OXFORD, Conn. — Preliminary tests have found no evidence of anthrax so far on the personal mail, mailbox or post office of an elderly Connecticut woman who mysteriously died of the bacteria this week, law enforcement officials said Friday.

The officials in Washington, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said preliminary tests found no spores so far on the woman's rural mailbox outside her Oxford home, mail found inside the home or the post office she used.

The officials added there was no anthrax evidence on tests taken at the U.S. Postal processing center that served her area.

"The preliminary tests show nothing positive," one official told The Associated Press.

The officials cautioned that the tests were preliminary and more samples from Ottilie Lundgren's home and other locations she frequented were still pending.

Connecticut Gov. John Rowland was expected to discuss the testing at a news conference later Friday, but officials cautioned not all the environmental testing from the woman's house was complete.

As federal investigators searched for clues to how the 94-year-old woman came down with inhalation anthrax, Chilean and U.S. officials confirmed the first reported case of a deadly strain of the bacteria in mail outside the United States.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta confirmed on Thursday that a letter

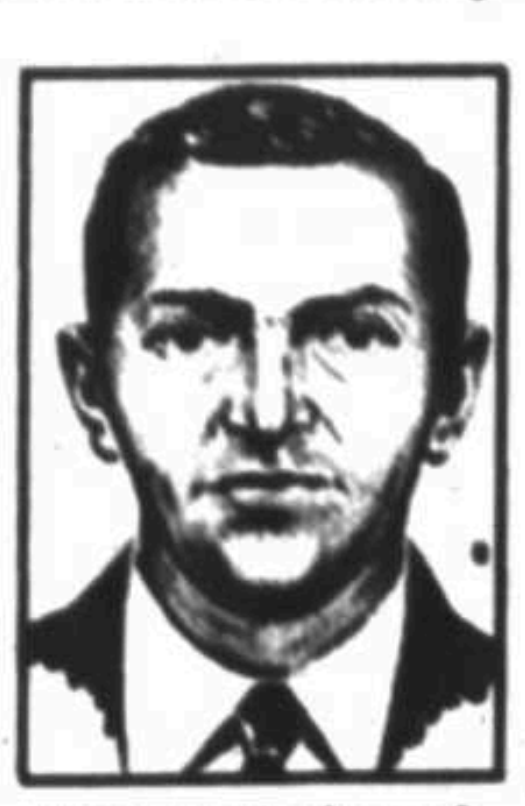
D.B. Cooper's disappearance still a mystery 30 years later

Associated Press

SEATTLE — Thirty years have passed since D.B. Cooper jumped from a hijacked jetliner with $200,000 in ransom money and disappeared into a remote forest.



FBI rendering of Cooper from 1971

With the 30th anniversary of the crime coming on Saturday, Cooper's escapade remains unsolved. The FBI has received thousands of tips, but investigators have nothing to go on — no suspect, no leads, nothing to prove who Cooper was or where he went.

"He's our Jesse James and Billy the Kid," said Jerry Thomas, a retired Army infantryman who has searched the backwoods of southwestern Washington for any trace of Cooper.

Many who have studied Cooper's actions on Thanksgiving Eve in 1971 are certain he died trying to escape. They have reason to believe that, too. He exited the plane in heavy rain and jumped over a dense forest of pine and Douglas fir. He was dressed in a suit and loafers and one of the two parachutes he used was defective.

But his story continues to fascinate.

On Nov. 24, 1971, a thin man in his 40s calling himself Dan Cooper showed up at the Northwest Orient Airlines ticket counter at Portland International Airport in Oregon. He paid $20 in cash for a one-way flight to Seattle departing at 4:35 p.m. He boarded the plane and took a seat near the back, where he had the row to himself.

Soon after takeoff, Cooper handed a note to a stewardess and said he had a bomb on board. He let her peek into his briefcase at wires and red sticks that looked like explosives. He then demanded $200,000, four parachutes and "no funny stuff." At 5:40 p.m., the plane landed at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport and authorities met his demands.

He ordered the plane back into the air and demanded that it fly toward Mexico through Reno at no more than 10,000 feet. He later jumped, and hasn't been seen or heard from since.

He's beaten the best crime fighters in the country, earning him folk hero status among some. On Saturday, the tiny town of Ariel, Wash., will throw a party for Cooper for the 27th straight year at a bar called the Ariel Store.

After years of investigating the case, all authorities know about Cooper is that he smoked Raleigh cigarettes, drank whiskey and was familiar with aerodynamics.

Only some of his ransom money — a bundle of $20 bills — has turned up. A child digging in a sand bar on the north bank of the Columbia River west of Vancouver found the money in 1980. The serial numbers had been recorded by the FBI.

"The fact that it's the only unsolved hijacking keeps it high profile," said FBI agent Ralph Hope of Seattle, the latest agent in charge of the case. "It will remain that way until we know the individual could not be alive."

FDNY action figure selling out in stores

NEW YORK (AP) — An action figure of a New York City firefighter is selling briskly and is expected to help the department raise more than $1 million for fire safety education.

The mustachioed, ax-wielding Billy Blazes is part of Fisher-Price's Rescue Heroes line of action figures.

The limited-edition New York firefighter, which debuted about two weeks ago, wears a black and yellow bunker jacket emblazoned "FDNY."

The popularity of Rescue Heroes, an established line before Sept. 11, has jumped since the attacks, and the FDNY version is particularly popular, said toy industry analyst Jim Silver.

"We know there's going to be a shortage," said Silver, who publishes Toy Book and Toy Wishes magazines. "The question is: 'When will it be sold out for the holidays?'"

The $9.99 action figure is made by Fisher-Price and is being sold by Toys R Us and the Fire Zone, a store operated by the FDNY Fire Safety Education Fund.

Fisher-Price and the fund began talking about an FDNY figure more than a year ago. But after the terrorist attacks, production was boosted to 105,000 dolls, and it was decided that all proceeds will go the fund.

The FDNY logo has gained nationwide cachet after the heroism of its members in the Sept. 11 attacks; 343 city firefighters lost their lives trying to rescue people from the World Trade Center.

ANTHRAX: CDC confirms tainted letter in Chile sent from Switzerland to Chile was tainted with anthrax. The letter had been sent to Dr. Antonio Banfi, a pediatrician at a children's hospital in Santiago.

(From 1A)

Banfi, who opened the envelope, and 12 others nearby have not tested positive for exposure to anthrax spores but were being treated for the disease as a precaution, according to the Chilean Health Ministry.

Banfi became suspicious because the letter was postmarked in Zurich but marked with a Florida return address, Chilean officials said. No other details were made available.

In Connecticut, law enforcement and health officials are speaking to Lundgren's friends to determine what she did, where she went and who she saw before Nov. 16, when she was admitted to a hospital with flu-like symptoms.

Investigators on Friday completed an initial sweep of Lundgren's home, said Nicole Coffin, a spokeswoman for the CDC.

"That was very thorough, and the samples were taken to the state health department's lab," she said.

Besides sifting through Lundgren's trash and examining her mail, investigators took environmental samples from the few places Lundgren had visited over the past few weeks in this rural town of 9,800.

Friends and relatives said she seldom left her home, except to visit the library, a beauty parlor, doctors' offices and her church.

Investigators have said that cross-contamination of the mail is a leading theory about how Lundgren contracted the disease. "But we're really trying to keep an open mind about any possibility," said FBI spokeswoman Lisa Bull.

Coffin said testing so far has shown the strain of anthrax that killed Lundgren was similar to anthrax found in other recent cases.

Tests also were due back Friday on two postal service centers that serve Oxford: the post office in neighboring Seymour and a regional mail distribution center in Wallingford.

About 50 postal workers at Seymour and more than 1,100 at Wallingford were offered a 10-day regimen of the antibiotic Cipro. About three-fourths of the workers have accepted the drug, postal officials said.

Erik Wexler, executive vice president of MidState Medical Center in Meriden, said the antibiotic was being distributed as a precaution.

In Washington, the president of a major postal employees union said he will advise members to refuse to work in buildings where any trace of anthrax remains.

Two postal workers have died and others have been sickened by anthrax since tainted letters addressed to the news media and members of Congress began appearing. Postal facilities in New Jersey and Washington remain closed for decontamination.

"It's a continuing concern that so much uncertainty continues to exist regarding the source of these infections," said Bill Burrus, president of the 360,000-member American Postal Workers Union.

Nationwide, the U.S. Postal Service has tested 278 facilities for anthrax and found some contamination at 21 of them. Nineteen have been decontaminated and reopened.

Because medical experts differ on how much anthrax is needed to cause an infection, Burrus said, "I'm telling my members we will not work in contaminated facilities."

Postal Service Vice President Azeezaly Jaffer said he believed talks were continuing with the unions on how to respond in the event of future contamination.

There have been several reports worldwide of anthrax being found in mail, but most have turned out to be false. They included cases in Kenya, in the Bahamas and at Pakistan's largest newspaper, in which authorities at first said they had found dangerous forms of anthrax in mail but later said further testing found no anthrax.

In Argentina, anthrax spores were discovered in mail, but tests determined that they were a harmless strain of the bacteria.

SHOP: Stores offer early bird incentives and offered extra savings to shoppers until noon. At about 9:30 a.m., lines at registers stretched to the DVD aisles. Though all registers were open, about 350 people stood in line, some for up to an hour, to check out.

Chris Saxton had been in line for 20 minutes and had only a DVD player in his cart.

"It wasn't bad getting in, but it is taking a long time getting out," he said.

Though the DVD player was not a Christmas gift, Saxton waited until Friday to take advantage of the Christmas sales.

Gwen McCown was also taking advantage of the sales. She and her mother, Ladeana Box of Seminole, bought a Game Boy Advance for Ms. McCown's little sister.

"The people here were real helpful," Ms. McCown said about Best Buy employees despite the hectic conditions.

"It's usually like this," said Best Buy Merchandise Manager Jeffery York. "We usually have two rushes. You'll have one now (morning) and one later on this afternoon."

Shopping on Friday brought out the bargain madness in Midlanders, York said.

"We had people out there before 5 o'clock this morning," he said. "We had probably 300 people out there. We had a line back to Barnes and Noble."

Though it is the season to be jolly, holiday shopping doesn't always bring out the best in people.

"It gets crazy," Alex Gonzales, electronics sales associate for Toys 'R' Us said.

Gonzales said he has seen parents do everything from steal gifts from other people's baskets to start confrontations for elusive toys on big shopping days.

HORSE: Mall manager says she would welcome Mounted Patrol

(From 1A)

it has been successful in other areas."

Mary Castillo, Midland Park Mall's manager, said she would welcome the patrol because the November-December holiday season is the mall's busiest months and daily summons thousands of shoppers.

Lt. Cross said the mall patrol isn't yet finalized, "but we're trying to get something worked up where we can."

Sheriff's Public Safety Capt. Ed Krevit "is aware" of the Mounted Patrol's interest in revisiting the mall and would seek "the blessings" of Sheriff Gary Painter.

"We've been talking about it," said Lt. Cross, who heads up the sheriff's Civil Process, Warrants and Fugitive Section. "We're still in the process of working with some of our personnel and new horses that they have. They will not be going (on mall patrol). Only our seasoned animals that are used to this type of thing will be out there" among a densely-populated area.

Her 12 Mounted Patrol officers are Courthouse Security Lt. Benny Matlock, who is assistant Mounted Patrol commander; Patrol Lt. Richard Gillette, who is the Mounted Patrol's training coordinator; Sgt. J.D. Stuard, assistant training coordinator; Sheriff's Investigator Candy Matlock; Constable Charles "Choc" Harris; Court Bailiff Jake Ussery; Sgt. D. Hall; Investigator Dale Burns, Deputy Frank Ortega, Sgt. Trish Kessler; Patrol Deputy Freda Blythe, and Inspector Alan Thompson of the Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

Matlock who, like Lt. Cross, is a seasoned rider, said the mall-patrol duty is effective.

"I think it is an excellent idea because of the visibility with the height that you are at (on horseback)," Matlock said, "plus the fact that the citizens of Midland seem to really be supportive of it."

Of the 2001 mall patrol, Matlock said, "Nothing is etched in stone. It's been discussed, but I don't know where it's going to go from there."

Mounted patrols are "being used throughout the state," Matlock noted. "There's a significant reduction in purse-snatching and property crimes" and other offenses "just from the mere presence of the horses being there."

The Mounted Patrol did not gear up to ride in the mall's parking lots last Christmas season, Matlock noted. The patrol's first Midland Park Mall duty was in the 1999 Christmas season as the sheriff was embarking on election to his fifth four-year term of office. He was first elected in 1984. His next election cycle is in 2004. Some of the sheriff's critics at the time had suggested the mounted patrol was more about politics than protection.

"We are doing this (mall patrol) out of the goodness of our heart," Matlock said in mid-December 1999. "This is something for the citizens of Midland. And, pardon my language, it doesn't have a durn thing to do with politics."

Christian academy faces abuse charges

By Jim Suhr
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Before his parents shipped him off to the Heartland Christian Academy, 16-year-old Tim Hans was struggling in school and messing with drugs and the occult.

After nearly a year at the academy, considered a last resort for difficult youngsters, Tim has righted his course. No more rebellion or fits of rage. The straight-A student, now respectful and polite, has found God.

"It's kind of a total overhaul of the mind," he says.

Now the academy that markets its tough love faces troubled times itself. Prosecutors are calling its form of discipline abuse.

In June, five Heartland workers were accused of sending 11 misbehaving teen-agers to shovel manure, at times in a pit filled with animal waste and afterbirth. Two months later, four Heartland workers — two already charged in the manure incident — were accused of spanking a teen 30 times with a board.

Authorities removed 115 Heartland students in October after a 13-year-old boy reported another Heartland worker burst his eardrum. Parents, some from as far as Texas and California, were called to retrieve the children.

About 80 have since returned to the school after a judge intervened, according to Charles Sharpe, Heartland's founder and senior pastor.

"It's an evil attack," Sharpe fumes. The former Kansas City insurance executive pledges to spend his fortune — estimated in the tens of millions — "and every drop of blood in my body" to defend the 200-acre religious community 150 miles north of St. Louis where work therapy is combined with Christian teachings.

The 74-year-old Sharpe, known at Heartland as Pastor Charlie, maintains no child gets more than five "swats," and says the 13-year-old was struck accidentally by a worker trying to free his arm from the boy's jaws.

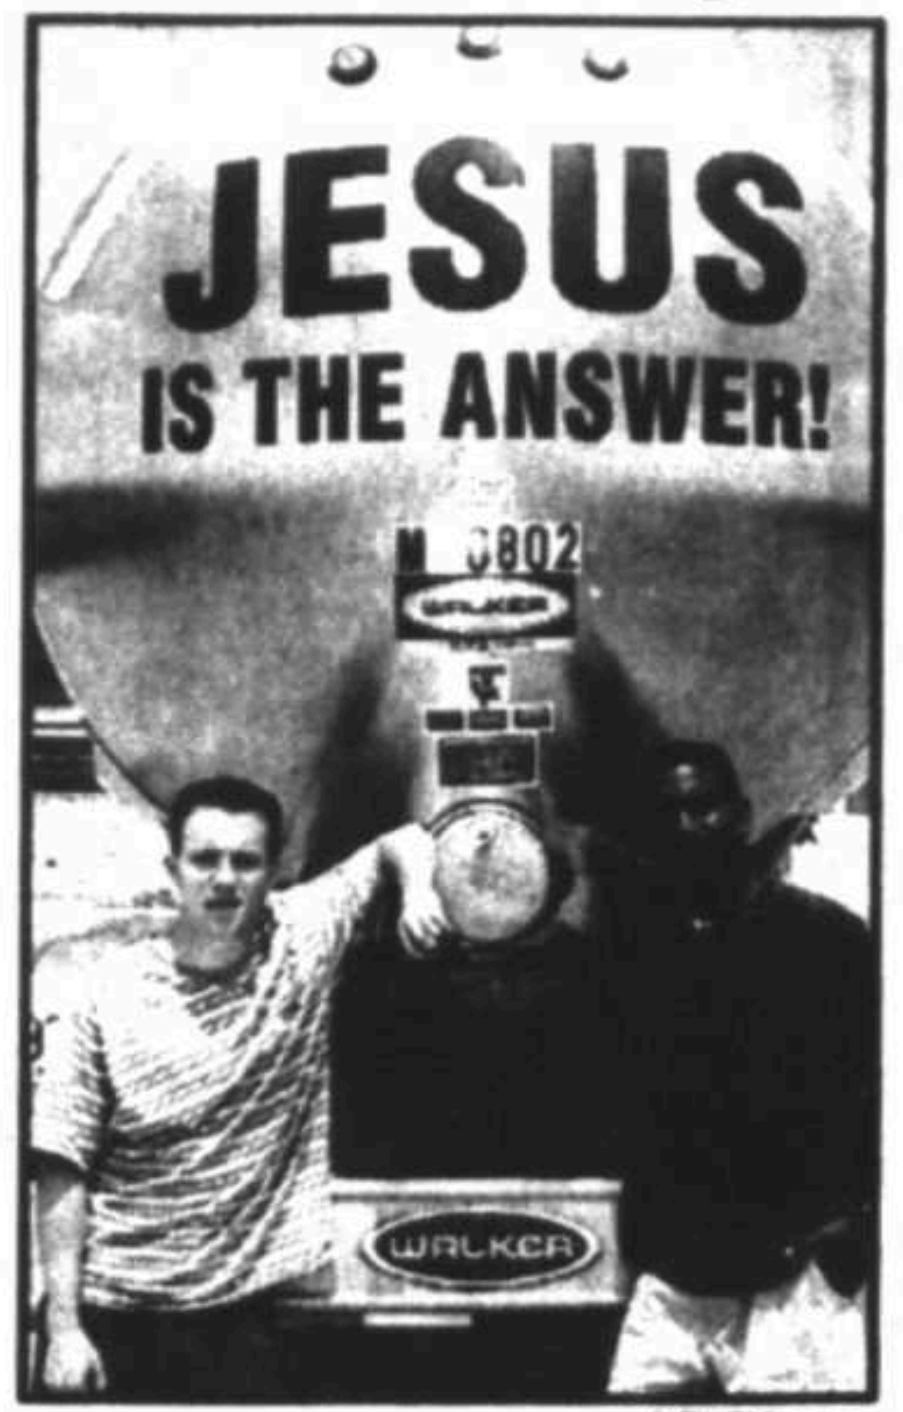
For now, a federal judge is allowing juvenile authorities to seek removal of any Heartland child considered at risk, but he has barred any mass removals pending a final ruling.

Heartland's operators are suing authorities in federal court, complaining of a "systematic, persistent and continuous campaign of harassment." Joshua Eads, a 17-year-old Heartland student, also is suing local investigators, alleging he was unjustly held for 12 days on suspicion he was involved in the manure-pit incident.

"We don't believe in abusing kids," Sharpe says. "In society today, any time you correct or discipline a child, in the eyes of many it's abuse."

Sheriff David Parrish, a father of two who says he shoveled pig manure as part of a boyhood summer job, counters: "We believe it was abuse, and I'm comfortable with what a jury will say."

Parrish says the youngsters were forced to stand for up to two hours in manure piles brimming with bacteria. Parrish says some witnesses told him children were forced to stand in manure up to their chests, though others dispute that.



AP Photo

Heartland Academy students Riley Stern, 17, and Steven Parmulla, 19, lean on a milk truck from the dairy owned by Heartland founder Larry Sharpe in Newark, Mo. Both Stern and Parmulla believe the academy has been a positive influence on their lives. The academy is under fire, after five employees were charged with felony child endangerment stemming from alleged abuse at the dairy farm manure pits where students were made to work as a punishment.

Sharpe says he believes many of the abuse allegations come from troubled kids — usually new arrivals — who often would "rather be on the streets, doing drugs and having sex."

Heartland children run the community's two eateries and work on its 7,000-cow dairy farm as they work toward a high school diploma or an equivalency degree. Only adults now shovel manure on the dairy farm.

Sharpe has friends in high places. Attorney General John Ashcroft, to whom Sharpe donated at least $10,000 for a 2000 presidential exploratory committee, wrote the introduction to Sharpe's 1999 autobiography.

"Charlie Sharpe doesn't need a public opinion poll to know right from wrong. His faith in God and his conscience determine that for him," Ashcroft wrote.

Hans says he plans to stay at Heartland and graduate from the school. His parents soon will be there, too. Katherine and Terry Hans are selling their farmhouse near Mendota, Ill., and plan to move with their 14-year-old daughter to Heartland to help.

"There's a difference between swatting a kid on the bottom and beating a kid," says Katherine Hans, 49. "When you can't bring God into it and have a foundation, a basis for morals, what do you got? Sometimes I feel Christians are persecuted."

Senator's meetings modeled after FDR's 'Children's Hour'

By Jeffrey McMurray
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — "Children's Hour" is a misnomer for Sen. Max Cleland's effort to soothe staffers made anxious by terrorist attacks and anthrax.

After all, the participants are adults, and the chatty senator seldom keeps it under 90 minutes.

Cleland takes no credit for the idea or the name. Those belong to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who convened intimate staff meetings during the darkest days of World War II.

"FDR looked at all his staff as children," said Cleland; a dog-eared copy of a Roosevelt biography rested on the conference table beside him. "It was a family experience, and that's what we've tried to build and create here, too."

The Georgia Democrat, who lost both legs and an arm in a Vietnam War grenade blast, has long felt a kinship with the polio-stricken president, who also used a wheelchair.

Cleland is relying on his political idol's example to get through the tough times after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. He's held three Children's Hours since then, where the concerns of his aides — not legislation or constituent requests — determine the agenda.

As Cleland spoke informally before the latest session last week, some 25 staffers chatted among themselves, nudging each other for doughnuts and juice.

Cleland says he had pondered holdings such meetings since reading "FDR: My Boss," private secretary Grace Tully's account of Roosevelt's close relationship with his staff. Cleland's copy, which he has brought to the meeting, is worn and filled with scribbled notations.

The senator keeps returning to one passage in which Tully describes the Children's Hour as helping "cement an intangible but deep sense of camaraderie" among the staff.

"I read that a couple weeks ago and thought, 'That's the kind of leader I want to be,'" Cleland said.

Though he had thought of holding such meetings for some time, the terrorist attacks inspired Cleland to take action.

"We had a feeling, all of us here on that day, that we were under attack," Cleland said. "I've gone to war in Vietnam, but for most of the children here, they've never seen war, never been there."

The first Children's Hour came days after the attacks, when he noticed some of his younger staffers struggling with fear and loss. A second session addressed the discovery of an anthrax-tainted letter on Capitol Hill.

"It's just been very therapeutic getting together with people I know, trust and love and being able to talk about what was happening," said Jane Terry, one of Cleland's legislative assistants.

With the weighty issues of Sept. 11 and anthrax a few weeks removed, the conversation was somewhat lighter at the third installment, held before Thanksgiving. Cleland read a tribute to his aides, which he would submit for the Congressional Record, and asked all to say what they were thankful for.

Some battled tears, others used levity.

Many of them said they were thankful for the Children's Hour, noting many congressional offices are so busy and turnover so great that lawmakers seldom get to know the people who work for them.

Retailers open holiday season with bargains, early bird specials

By Anne D'Innocenzio
Associated Press

Shoppers looking for things like Harry Potter games and Microsoft's Xbox hit the nation's malls at first light Friday as the Christmas rush began amid tight security and fears this could be the worst holiday shopping season in a decade.

In a scene played out across the country, 300 people lined up outside a Toys R Us store in Little Rock, Ark., before the doors opened at 6 a.m. Among the crowd was Elizabeth Phifer, who was in search of a Diva Starz pet plush dog for her 8-year-old daughter.

"I'm way back here at the end of the line and I'm nervous I'm not going to get it," said Phifer, who was lured in early by a $5 discount on the toy.

Shoppers seemed indifferent to increased security, which was stepped up to put consumers at ease about lingering in public places for fear of more terrorist attacks or anthrax scares. George Briggs didn't seem to notice any extra security at a Lincoln, Neb., mall.

"There's so many people you couldn't pick it out if it was here," Briggs said.

Many shoppers, nervous about job security and political uncertainties, said they plan to pare back their holiday spending.

"Normally I would just buy and buy, but because I don't have a job I'm cutting down," said Gwen Allen, 42, who was shopping in San Diego. "I'm trying to find as many bargains as I can. I've been looking for coupons in the papers and plan on using them."

Analysts said there were deeper discounts this Thanksgiving weekend than last year. Many stores, including Sears and KB Toys, as well as mall operators like General Growth Properties, reported a heavier turnout of early morning shoppers than in past years.

Despite the strong showing, Wall Street analysts are nervously watching how the rest of the holiday season will play out. Retailers cut back on inventory in anticipation of slow sales, but fear there will be plenty of leftovers.

Jeff Feiner, managing director of Lehman Brothers, said he expects sales for the 22 major retailers he follows to be up only 2 percent for the holidays. And those gains will be driven by discounting and will come at the expense of profit margins.

The National Retail Federation predicts total holiday retail sales, excluding restaurant and auto sales, will rise 2.5 percent to 3 percent to about $206 billion. If so, that would be the worst retail performance since 1990, when sales were basically unchanged.

Last year, retailers rang up a modest $201 billion, up 3.9 percent from 1999.

E-commerce was expected to post gains, but only a fraction of those registered last year as consumers retrench amid rising job losses and the slumping economy.

At a Wal-Mart in Oklahoma City, Steve Estepp unloaded board games, Barbie accessories and kids' clothes from a packed cart into the back of his pickup truck.

"This is one stop of many," he said, then pointed to his wife Pamela. "We're going wherever she wants to go."

In the online world, Amazon.com, the bellweather of the Internet industry, reported that 12,000 more items were ordered per hour on Friday than last year, driven by such merchandise as Harry Potter products and DVD players.

Man shouting 'freedom' sets himself afire

CHERRY VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — A man shouting "freedom and liberty for all" set himself on fire in a suburban shopping mall Friday and hurled flaming objects at shoppers before he was subdued and hospitalized in critical condition, officials and witnesses said.

Four other people also were injured.

Witnesses said the man, identified by authorities as Richard Lewis, 27, was yelling about freedom as he leaned from a mezzanine railing and threw burning packages onto the CherryVale Mall's center court. The fire was just outside the second-floor entrance to a department store in this Rockford suburb.

Two shoppers subdued him and extinguished the fire that burned him.

Mall employee Jeremy Wolf said Lewis had stretched his leg over the railing as if to jump down to the center court, where hundreds of shoppers were waiting in line.

"I could literally see his face on fire," Wolf said.

Police said Lewis apparently doused himself with gasoline. He also carried a backpack containing jugs of gasoline and ammonia that he lit and dropped, but the backpack was extinguished before it could explode.

"My son, observe the commandment of your father, and do not forsake the teaching of your mother; Bind them continually on your heart; Tie them around your neck."
Proverbs 6:20-21
Anita designed this heart, bearing a cross upon it, as a reminder of the Father's love. The swollen heart is cut into two halves by a cross, making the heart appear like two chambers of the human heart. The heart speaks of God's great love for mankind and of His willingness to cut His heart in two by allowing His Beloved Son to die on a cross.

News readers, doctors, hairstylists: Afghan women reclaim working life

By Kathy Gannon
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — After Humaira's beauty salon was shut by the Taliban, she hid her cans of hairspray, her portraits of coiffured women and her cracked hair dryer. A day after the Islamic militia fled, she reopened for business.

The chairs are old and torn, and the Taliban had smashed her larger mirrors, but Humaira has scraped off the paint they splashed over her "beauty salon" sign. And she's put her posters back on the walls, one showing a sassy young woman in heavily curled pigtails.

A beauty salon reborn, women on the air, and, from this Saturday, no more sexual segregation in the hospitals — women in the Afghan capital are heading back to work after the collapse of the Taliban social order.

"We were like in prison," Humaira said. "We had no life, nothing for us to do. We were not people."

Afghanistan was always a conservative place, and many women were wearing the burqa, the tent-like, all-enveloping robe, long before the Taliban seized power in 1996.

But the Taliban's extreme reading of Islamic law made the burqa mandatory. Women were barred from holding jobs, and girls over 8 couldn't go to school.

People were exhorted to paint their ground-floor windows black so women couldn't be seen by passers-by. White stockings were taboo because the Taliban's flag was white.

Women were not supposed to move outside their home without a male chaperone. That seemed to be one of the few rules women ignored. They were always seen in small groups, unescorted, seeming to drift along the streets in their billowing burqas.

Shireen, 26, was a government statistician before the Taliban sent her home.

Now she is trudging from one government ministry to the next, looking for work. Like most women in Kabul, she still wears her burqa. Her gold-rimmed glasses are all that is visible behind the mesh. She said she's waiting for a regular government to take office and give official clearance to shed the burqa.

Until then, she remains cautious. She and several other women talked to a reporter only on condition that their surnames not be published.

The aviation ministry was closed, so Shireen went next door to Radio Afghanistan, where several women already have been given jobs delivering the news.

"Maybe I could get a job as a news reader," she said through an interpreter. "I am educated. I have to work. I must work to contribute to my country and to my family. I have the right to participate."

For young women who have been unable to acquire other skills during the Taliban years, broadcasting seems to be favored as a quick way back into the job market.

The medical profession also suffered under Taliban strictures.

At Rabia Balkhi hospital for women, female doctors were forbidden to work alongside male colleagues. Starting Saturday, that rule is also dead, by order of the new health ministry. But there is a lot of catching-up to do.

"Our new women doctors are not properly trained," said Dr. Rahina Staniczai, head of the hospital.

The Taliban allowed women to take only three selected medical courses, at one hospital, and under strict supervision.

"Really this is our biggest problem today — lack of education," said Staniczai.

At Wazir Akbar Khan Hospital, women were secluded on separate floors, hidden behind walls built by the Taliban. The walls are to be torn down Saturday.

One woman waiting to apply for a news reader job at Radio Afghanistan told of being beaten by a Taliban soldier.

Moving aside a tuft of her deep brown hair to reveal a red weal, Marzia Adeel said it happened while she was buying shoes a few months ago. She couldn't see through the mesh of her burqa and since there was only an elderly salesman in the store, she took a risk and uncovered her head.

Suddenly two Taliban soldiers burst in. One hit her with the cable. As the struggled to get her robe back on, he hit her again.

"I was bleeding. I was scared," she whispered, speaking in the halting English she taught herself during five years of enforced idleness. "The man selling shoes was scared. He said, 'Sister, please go. Leave.' But I couldn't see. Blood was dripping in my eyes."

Another applicant at the radio station, Parveen Hashafi, said that under Taliban rule "we were neither alive nor dead."

Single, jobless, her life was a monotonous routine of waking, eating, cleaning, sleeping, she said.

But she wondered whether the world that condemned the Taliban's treatment of women would now force Afghanistan to enshrine their rights in a constitution.

"Or, now that they have what they want, will they forget about us again?" she asked.

Farhanda and Noori Jan, both Afghan doctors, look at a patient's X-ray at the Rabia Balkhi hospital for women on Thursday. Female doctors were forbidden to work alongside their male colleagues during the Taliban regime.

Palestinian militant dies in van hit by Israeli helicopter missile

By Mohammed Daragmeh
Associated Press

NABLUS, West Bank — An Israeli helicopter fired two missiles at a van in the West Bank on Friday, killing a leader of the Islamic militant Hamas group along with his deputy and another Hamas activist, officials said.

Mahmoud Abu Hanoud was head of Hamas' military wing and was high on Israel's most-wanted list, Hamas officials said. The group declared three days of mourning and called for a general strike throughout the West Bank and Gaza Strip on Saturday as a mark of protest.

Hamas officials initially denied that Abu Hanoud had been hit, but later acknowledged his death.

Also killed was the Hamas leader's deputy, Ayman Hashaykah, and Hashaykah's brother, a lower-ranking Hamas activist.

Their bodies were identified by Palestinian hospital officials, who said they had not yet identified any remains as those of Abu Hanoud.

The Israeli military refused to comment. Earlier reports from Israeli army radio and Palestinian officials said two Hamas members were killed in the attack but did not include Abu Hanoud among them.

The attack occurred on road between Nablus and the town of Jenin. Earlier, Israeli security forces had gone on alert after receiving intelligence that three armed Palestinians were on their way to carry out an attack inside Israel, they said. It was not known if the alert and the attack on the Hamas trio were connected.

The three Hamas members were among seven Palestinians killed Friday, making it the deadliest day since Oct. 26, when 10 died in clashes with the Israeli military.

Israeli troops shot and killed a 15-year-old Palestinian while dispersing stone throwers in the Gaza Strip refugee camp of Khan Younis, where a day earlier five boys had been killed by what Palestinian police said was a bomb planted by Israeli forces. There were growing demands in Israel that the military make swift disclosure of its investigation into the deaths.

Also in Gaza, a Palestinian taxi driver was killed and three of his seven passengers were wounded when the vehicle came under Israel fire. Two of the wounded were critically hurt with head injuries, doctors said.

The army said troops opened fire at the car fearing it contained attackers after the driver approached an army post after dark and ignored orders to halt.

They said the car had previously twice driven toward the post, then turned back before approaching for a third time.

Near the West Bank town of Nablus, two Palestinians were killed when a bomb they were trying to plant near a road used by Israeli motorists blew up prematurely, Palestinian security officials said.

Palestinian Cabinet Secretary Ahmed Abdel Rahman said the killing of the Hamas activists just a day after the deaths of the Gaza schoolchildren, suggested a deliberate attempt by Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon to sabotage a new American push to calm the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

"I think he wants to make the American effort fail and it is an attempt to push the Palestinians to react," he said.

In recent months, Israel has killed some 50 militants it suspected of involvement in bombing and shooting attacks on Israelis. More than a dozen bystanders have also died in such targeted killings. The United States has condemned the practice.

In the Gaza Strip, thousands joined the funeral procession for the five boys killed in Thursday's blast. The victims ranged in age from seven to 14 and all members of the same clan.

After the funeral, about 200 Palestinians marched toward the nearby Jewish settlement of Neve Dekalim, throwing stones at the fence. Israeli troops fired stun grenades and live rounds, killing a 15-year-old boy, doctors said. The army said it fired warning shots in the air, and did not see anyone being hit.

The Palestinian police chief in Gaza, Brig. Gen. Abdel Razek Majaida, said the boys appeared to have been killed by a bomb planted by Israeli forces, who had been seen operating in the area the night before the blast.

"Our investigation continues, but it looks as if the device was booby-trapped and when one of the children kicked it, it exploded" he said.

Poor Colombian miners risk all to find gold

By Juan Pablo Toro
Associated Press

FILADELFIA, Colombia — They knew it was risky work, but for the miners who died in a mudslide in the Andes, finding a few specks of gold was the difference between eating and going hungry.

While emergency crews dug for bodies Friday, people talked of the perilous prospecting that killed at least 43 miners a day earlier when a hillside gave way and swept over them. Officials said 35 others were missing and feared dead.

Authorities had shut the site as a commercial mine earlier this year because erosion made it unstable, but the free-lance miners moved in and began working it themselves. Good jobs are scarce in the region and people do whatever they can to earn money for their families.

Urias Romero talked of the hard times while waiting for news about his missing wife.

As he watched as rescuers pulled body after body from clammy brown earth, a corpse was carried to the Cauca River, where the coating of mud was rinsed away.

"My wife, wife!" Romero shrieked when he recognized his wife, Luz Marina, then fell to his knees and sobbed.

He said she had gone to the mine despite his warnings that it was unsafe because the family needed the money for food.

Romero said his job selling lottery tickets didn't bring in enough to support their six children.

This area in western Caldas state is rich in gold, but much of it is excavated by crude methods — by pick and shovel, and with little regard for engineering or safety.

The region had depended on coffee for its livelihood, but a plunge in world prices devastated the local economy. Thousands of people became gold diggers in desperation to make a living.

"Coffee is not delivering," said Luis Antonio Loaiza, a 22-year-old former coffee picker who survived the mudslide. "We have to risk our lives, because sometimes we find gold."

The prospectors live an almost nomadic existence, moving from site to site, entire families at a time, scraping out what gold they can find while waiting for news of another discovery.

Prosecutors are investigating whether there was criminal responsibility in Thursday's accident. Although the site had been recently condemned, its owners allegedly allowed the miners to continue working.

Miners were using earthmovers left at the site along with picks and shovels to dig huge clumps of rock and dirt from the side of the hill. They would take the material to the edge of the river and try to separate out small particles of gold using wood-frame sieves and pans.

Many of those who died were inside a large hole they had dug into the side of a hill. The mudslide caved in the hole, which had no structural supports.

"It was unbelievable," said Raul Guzman, 27, one of the 200 or so miners working in the pit. "We were making a clearing to take out the gold when it began crumbling and crumbling, until the entire hill fell down."

Guzman said he had been working for a month at the site, which is 120 miles west of the capital, Bogota.

Officials said they had tried to discourage the dangerous mining. Filadelfia's mayor, Roman Aristizabal, said police evicted some of the miners from another illegal mining site two weeks ago.

Aristizabal said he issued eviction orders last month for the site of Thursday's collapse, but didn't have police or troops at his disposal to enforce the orders.

Luis Galeano, 24, said he has been working illegal mines for nearly five years, earning the equivalent of about $6 a day. He lost friends and a cousin in the catastrophe.

"It's the first time I've lived through a tragedy like this, and I feel very sad," he said, watching rescuers carry away another body covered by a white sheet.

Volkswagen van to go out of production in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The era of peace and love really is over: the Volkswagen van that took a generation on long, strange trips is going out of production in Mexico at year's end.

Sales are scheduled to halt at the end of December. And in Brazil, the only other place where the boxy VW bus is still being made, union officials say they suspect Volkswagen is planning to end production soon as part of cost-cutting measures.

The van, known in Latin America as the Combi, was introduced in 1950. Distinctive because of its air-cooled, rear-mounted engine, the van was last offered in 1982 in the United States as the Transporter.

It is being replaced in the VW lineup by the Eurovan, a more modern vehicle with a water-cooled front engine.

The demise of the old bus has saddened a lot of old hippies here, as Volkswagen conceded with full-page ads in Mexican newspapers that read "Adios, Combi" above a picture of a teary-eyed, aging flower-child in a tie-dye shirt.

"I think it's gonna be a big surprise for Volkswagen fans that they were still making them down there," said Ryan Price, editor of the magazine VW Trends.

Russia trims oils output, but amount less than others had hoped

By Deborah Seward
Associated Press

MOSCOW — A pledge from Russia to reduce its daily oil exports by less than 1 percent disappointed the world's other leading petroleum producers, which had hoped for a cut three times as large to help stabilize falling prices.

The government of the world's second-largest oil producing nation said Friday that companies would trim output by a mere 50,000 barrels a day for the remainder of the year. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has implored Russia to join other nonmember nations such as Mexico and Norway in making larger cuts to help shore up prices, which have plummeted nearly 30 percent in the past two months.

Russian Deputy Prime Minister Viktor Khristenko made the announcement following a meeting with the leaders of the largest Russian oil companies. He said a decision on further production plans for 2002 would be made in December.

The less-than-desired cut sent the price of Brent crude down 62 cents to $19.28 per barrel, on the International Petroleum Exchange in London. The New York Mercantile Exchange was closed on Friday.

Russia's flourishing petroleum industry has been one of the main stimulants of the country's economic recovery. Oil barons are loath to give up market share — even as profit margins fall — and the government is reluctant to lose valuable tax revenues, fearing it may have to revise budget projections for 2002.

Oil prices have fallen sharply since Sept. 11 as worldwide demand slumped and Russia's refusal to make big cuts has irritated OPEC members and nonmember nations that are dependent on the industry.

An OPEC official, speaking on condition of anonymity, called the planned cut too small and said OPEC had hoped Russia would reduce production by at least 150,000 barrels per day.

Russia has been under pressure from OPEC and other major non-OPEC oil producers such as Norway and Mexico to cut production in order to help stabilize the global oil market.

The 50,000 barrel figure includes a previous cut of 30,000 barrels that Russia had already promised.

Prime Minister Khristenko was quoted by the ITAR-Tass news agency as saying another meeting would be held in December to discuss exports in 2002.

"Russia cannot technically reduce oil production as quickly or in such large volumes as OPEC," Leonid Fedun, the vice president of Russian oil giant Lukoil, told the Interfax news agency. "The reduction will be spread out among companies in proportion to their overall production."

OPEC has agreed to reduce output by 1.5 million barrels a day as of Jan. 1 on condition that non-OPEC members including Norway, Russia and Mexico also agree to cuts amounting to 500,000 barrels a day.

Norway already has agreed to reduce production by 100,000 to 200,000 barrels a day, while Mexico has promised to cut its production by 100,000 barrels a day.

Russia recently surpassed Norway to become the world's second-largest oil producer. Russia has a total production of 7 million barrels a day.

In a telephone conversation Thursday, Mexican President Vicente Fox discussed the importance of stabilizing the global oil market with Russian President Vladimir Putin.

A statement released by Fox's office did not say whether the two leaders had made any decisions on oil production, but the telephone conversation reflected the dilemma both face amid falling oil prices and a global economic slowdown.

Midland Christian's Tony Joseph tries to stiff arm an Austin Hyde Park defender during a game earlier this season.

Mustangs meet Denton Liberty for second time in four weeks

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

KILLEEN — It's been four weeks since Midland Christian and Denton Liberty Christian last met on a football field.

It's been an especially long four weeks for the Midland Christian football team because back on that late October evening, the Warriors dealt the Mustangs their only loss of the season, 26-20 in overtime. That loss cost the Mustangs a district title and ended a goal of going 13-0 this season.

At 1:15 p.m. today at Leo Buckley Stadium, the 11-1 Mustangs get a chance at what Midland Christian coach Greg McClendon calls a "do-over" when they play 11-1 Denton Liberty Christian for the TAPPS 4A championship.

"I haven't thought much about the last three games," said Midland Christian senior cornerback James Vallee. "We just look at each game as getting one step closer to getting back at Denton."

McClendon said he isn't looking at this rematch against Denton Liberty as a "revenge game".

"Our motivation is that they stand between us and a state championship," McClendon said. "You don't ever like to lose to a rival but they threw a wrinkle in our goal to go 13-0 and undefeated. Not many times in life you get a chance at a do-over."

For Denton Liberty, the Warriors would rather be playing someone else.

"I rather not play them," said Denton Liberty coach Mark Bowles. "They're going to be really tough to play. They've got a good quarterback, a great running back and play great defense. There are more things that concern me about them than don't.

"The first time we played them, it was homefield advantage for us and they had to travel. Everything was on our side and it still was a squeaker. They may have even outplayed us for most of the game on that night."

What helps the Mustangs in this game is that there is plenty of experience left over from last year's TAPPS 4A state championship team. The veterans know how to prepare for the big game and they know what is at stake.

"I think it's a huge benefit that we've been there," McClendon said. "I feel like we're playing a familiar opponent — an opponent that is a big rival of ours. We have a lot of respect for their team and their coaches and we know what to expect when we play them."

Andrews hosts Riverside today

By Jay Peden
Sports Writer

ANDREWS — The El Paso Riverside football team will be fighting some history when it takes on Andrews at 1 p.m. today here in a Class 4A Small School Area round playoff game.

Riverside coach Tom Work didn't need to read Terry Williamson's column in Friday's edition of the Reporter-Telegram to know that El Paso teams have trouble when they come up against teams from east of the Pecos River. But he did read it, and the numbers reported there make an impression.

"I'm optimistic, but 0-71 makes you realistic," Work said.

Actually, 0-71-1 is the record of El Paso teams against teams from the east in Class 5A playoff games since 1980 (El Paso Andress tied Midland Lee in 1990 and advanced on penetrations). Riverside is part of that record, having lost to Lee in 1994.

Things aren't much better in Class 4A, in which Riverside has been to the playoffs every year since dropping down in classifications but hasn't gotten past the area round.

"We've been in the playoffs eight of the last nine (years, including Class 5A), and we've won our district five out of six (years)," Work said. "We're playoff-tested, but we just haven't won any of the ones that count against the good teams we've played in the area round.

"Every game, we've been right there," he said. "It's frustrating."

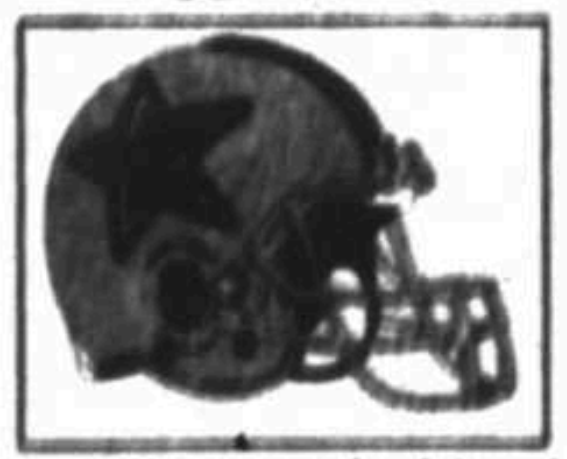
Dallas' Smith still scoreless this season

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — When the Dallas Cowboys put together their best quarter of the season and nearly pulled off the biggest comeback in team history, Emmitt Smith wasn't part of it.



Instead, he was on the sideline with his helmet off Thursday when the Cowboys scored three touchdowns in the fourth quarter of a 26-24 loss to the Denver Broncos.

What made his absence so strange was that two of the scores were 1-yard runs by Smith's backup, Troy Hambrick. Those short TDs are the signature play of Smith's career. He has 43 1-yarders among his 145 scoring runs, the most in NFL history.

"No one asked me to go into the game, but I didn't press the issue," said Smith, who hasn't scored this season.

Smith, the second-leading rusher in NFL history, gained just nine yards on nine carries, the second-lowest non-injury total of his career. He lost 12 yards on his first two carries and had 1 yard on seven attempts at halftime.

Smith tweaked the knee injury that forced him to miss two games earlier this month on the opening drive of the third quarter. He wasn't hurt too badly, though, because he returned for two drives later in the period.

Midland Lee avenges early-season loss to El Paso Franklin with crushing 25-0 victory

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

EL PASO — It might be wise for future consideration not to give a defending state champion a do-over in football.

Midland Lee, a three-time defending state champion, crushed El Paso Franklin, 25-0, Friday at the Sun Bowl to avenge a 21-7 loss to the same team back in September. But this was the one that counted. This was the area round of the Class 5A Big School playoffs.

Franklin earlier cost Lee its state ranking for the season, but the Cougars now sit at home while Lee joins the Big School final eight.

The Cougars, who were on a 10-0 roll with the help of the upset of Lee early in the season, had only 93 yards of total offense and got no points on the board as Lee's blitzing defense gave Franklin quarterback Travis Magden no time to set up. Lee had eight sacks in the game.

LEE

Midland Lee	25
El Paso Franklin	0

"I thought it was a solid game on our part in just about every aspect of play except in the area of extra points, and we'll work on that," said a pleased Lee coach John Parchman. "The difference this time is that we just had more pieces of the puzzle in place than we did in the first game. Heck, Eric (Winston) and Tim (Norman) weren't even playing defense at that time of the season.

"It was just a solid game for us and I really can't see anything about it that was a fluke. After all this was a solid 10-0 team and they beat the defending state champion. I think we're getting better every week."

Lee scored one touchdown in every period of play and dominated the football most of the day under less than ideal conditions. Wind gusts of up to 60 miles per hour greeted fans to the Sun Bowl. The winds died down somewhat by the start of third quarter, but it wasn't a pretty day.

The high winds played a role in the game, but maybe not as much as the blitzing Rebels. Magden had no time to look for receivers. He was spending his time fighting for his life and losing to the red dog crew of Norman, Winston, Michael Skinner and Nick Hand, all of which introduced Magden to the UTEP carpet a few times.

"We practiced everything they were going to do," Norman said. "Coach Parchman told (the

Longhorns get two late touchdowns from Benson on way to defeating Aggies 21-7

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

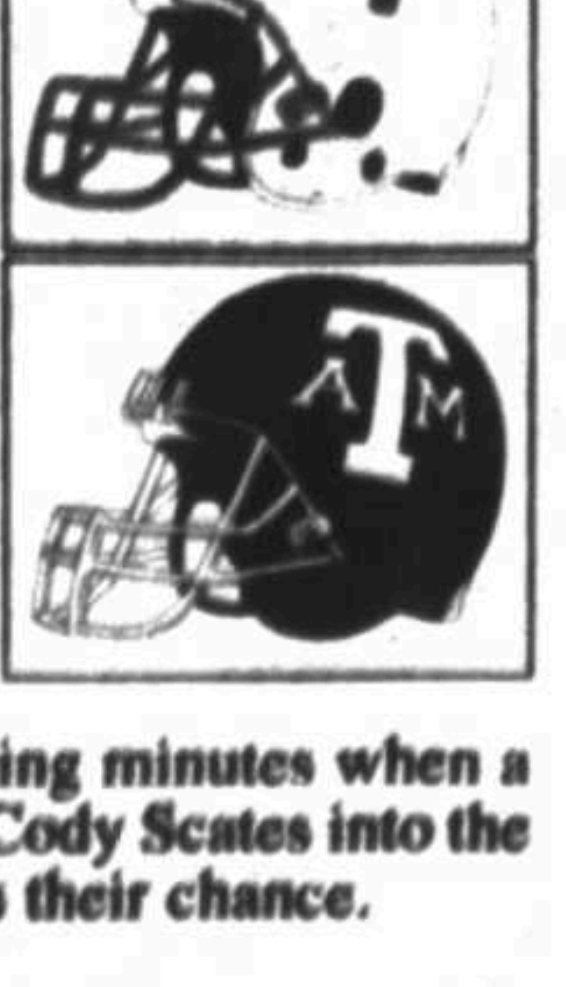
COLLEGE STATION — Texas finally got the wind and Cedric Benson going in the same direction.

Working with their backs to wind gusts up to 20 mph, the No. 5 Longhorns broke up a defensive struggle with Benson's two fourth-quarter touchdown runs for a 21-7 victory over Texas A&M on Friday.

The Longhorns (10-1, 7-1 Big 12) completed a 35-yard drive with Benson's 5-yard touchdown run with 7:22 left.

"In these kind of games whoever is toughest, longest wins," Benson said. "The fourth quarter came around and it seemed to me they were backing off like they kind of just gave up. I guess we were toughest, longest."

Benson, a Midland Lee product, added a 12-yard touchdown run with 1:15 remaining after the Aggies (7-4, 4-4) tried a desperation fourth-down pass from their own 19. It was intercepted by Everick Rawls and returned 15 yards to set up Benson's score.



"It was me and him one on one," Benson said. "I tried to juke him but he didn't take it so I had to go right at him. I wanted that touchdown bad. I didn't want to give it up."

The largest crowd ever to see a football game in Texas, 87,555, was kept in suspense until the closing minutes when a 31-yard punt by A&M's Cody Scates into the wind gave the Longhorns their chance.

"I'm proud that offense was in a situation where things weren't working well and they didn't panic and turn the ball over," Texas coach Mack Brown said. "They waited for their opportunity and showed their maturity.

"When we got the wind in the fourth quarter they drove down and got the points they needed to win the ballgame."

The Longhorns won their sixth straight game this season and improved to 69-34-5 in the series. The victory was Texas' first in College Station since 1995 and the second since 1983.

A&M coach R.C. Slocum wanted the wind in the third quarter to help the Aggies get a lead.

"I wanted to get back in it in the third quarter and used the crowd to help us in the fourth quarter," Slocum said. "We didn't want to go into the fourth quarter playing from behind."

MUSTANGS: Beeghley has thrown 25 touchdowns for Midland Christian

(From 1B)

Denton Liberty, which captured the District 1-4A championship by virtue of its win over Midland Christian, is a solid all-around football team with a good quarterback in John Admire, an outstanding running back in James Mitchell and a tough defense.

As good as the Warriors are as a team, what makes them state-championship caliber is the 5-foot-8, 180-pound Mitchell, who has rushed for 2,262 yards on 224 carries and has scored 27 touchdowns.

When they're not running the football, the Warriors go to the air with junior quarterback Admire, who has thrown for 955 yards on 69-of-134 passing with 14 TDs and 10 interceptions. Admire's two main targets are 5-10 junior Ryan Seaton (322 yards on 22 catches, 7 TDs) and 5-6 senior Kurtis Campbell (223 yards on 21 catches, 2 TDs).

"They have the ability to strike quickly or just grind it out," McClendon said.

In charge of slowing down Mitchell and the Denton Liberty offense is the Midland Christian defense, which has done a solid job against most of the offensive standouts they've faced this season. Mitchell, however, had a pretty good day against the Mustangs in the last meeting, rushing for 168 yards on 19 carries and three touchdowns.

"Watching them on film, they look like they've gotten a little bit better than the last time we played them," said Midland Christian defensive coordinator Chris McKinney. "They've got a lot of weapons. They're going to try to beat you with Mitchell. If you stop Mitchell, they're going to come out and throw it. So we're going to try to stop what they do best, stop Mitchell. We're going to make them beat us other ways."

Defensively, McClendon said the Warriors will put eight to nine men in the box and will play a lot of man-to-man coverage just like the Mustangs.

Midland Christian will counter with its explosive offense which has scored 525 points in 12 games (43.75 points per game).

The human highlight film for the Mustangs has been senior running back Tony Joseph, who has rushed for 2,221 yards on 184 carries and has scored 28 touchdowns.

Then, of course, there's senior quarterback Jamie Beeghley, who has connected on 118-of-200 passes for 1,994 yards, 25 TDS and just 10 interceptions. His top two targets are 5-9 junior Bryan Joseph (550 yards receiving, 9 TDs) and 5-7 senior David Guerrero (450 yards, 5 TDs).

Bowles believes his team has to play an almost perfect game for his team to have a chance.

"We're going to have to play the game of our lives," Bowles said "Even if we do that, I don't know if we'll be able to keep up with them. Midland is in a class by themselves."

"I think the key for our football team is that our offense has to execute," McClendon said. "Our offensive line has to block, our running backs have to run, our quarterback has to run the team and our receivers have to step up and catch the ball."

McClendon added that special teams might also play a large part in this game.

"They have a good punter," McClendon said. "I felt like he hurt us in the first game. He kept punting us into bad field position. And we need to hit our extra points. We both missed one in the first game and it ended up being the difference in the ballgame."

What's also crucial for the Mustangs against the Warriors is to avoid self-destructing. The Mustangs learned that hard lesson in the first game against Denton Liberty.

"Every play they made was a mental mistake on our part," said McClendon, recalling the first meeting. "Other than that, we felt like we shut them down offensively, but we also shut ourselves down offensively. We had too many penalties and we had to go on long drives during that game. It was a night when everything went against us."

The Mustangs hope to make up for that October night on Saturday afternoon.

Newcomers score goals for Dallas in 3-3 tie with Flyers

Associated Press

DALLAS — Joe Nieuwendyk's goal with 4:45 left in regulation lifted the Dallas Stars to a 3-3 tie with the Philadelphia Flyers on Friday night.

Paul Ranheim gave the Flyers a 3-2 lead with 6:35 left with his second goal of the season on a one-timer from the right circle, but Nieuwendyk tied it 50 seconds later with his 10th goal.

Kirk Muller and Benoit Brunet, acquired in a trade with Montreal on Wednesday, also scored for the Stars, who are 2-1-3 in their last six.

Kent Manderville and Simon Gagne had the other goals for Philadelphia, which is 4-1-2 in its last seven.

Rebels basketball splits pair of games

Staff Report

ARLINGTON — In a day of mixed results for the Midland Lee boys basketball team, the Rebels didn't have as good a day as they could have, but at least one player did more than his share.

Lee opened the Arlington Martin Tournament Friday by losing to private school power Heritage Christian of Cleveland, Texas, 71-66 after failing to hold a fourth-quarter lead. After dropping down to the consolation bracket, the Rebels roared out of the lockerroom with a big third quarter to defeat Bentonville, Ark. 69-52.

"I thought we played very well," said Lee coach Mark Coffman. "We played two real good teams and we very easily could have won both games."

Against Heritage, Lee (3-2) faced a much bigger lineup, which started a front line of players standing 6-foot-10, 6-8 and 6-6. The Rebels led by 11 points in the third quarter and by five with three minutes left but couldn't hold the lead.

In a highly physical game, Lee's two biggest players, 6-7 Jason Watlington and 6-6 Chris Packer, both fouled out.

"We had a very hard time matching up and I think that was the difference with the fouls," said Coffman.

Drew Coffman had a career-high 34 points in the defeat for the Rebels. That career high lasted only three hours until the end of the game with Bentonville.

Coffman, the coach's son, topped himself with 35 points in the second game, including three 3-pointers. Coffman, a junior, has increased his point total from game-to-game this season and is averaging 27.6 points a game.

"We're looking for someone to score and Drew and Art Garcia are our top two scorers," said coach Coffman. "Art's kind of in a shooting slump. Drew's been able to take over what other people haven't been able to do."

Lee trailed Bentonville 35-30 at halftime, but stormed out in the third quarter, outscoring the Arkansas school 28-7.

The Rebels will face Fort Worth Eastern Hills today at 3 p.m. in the consolation bracket.

LEE: Pendergrass throws touchdown pass defense) that the offense was going to score, so we just had to get them the football: We did what we were told to do."

The Lee offense was also up to the task. The Lee tailback tandem of Freddie Jones (161 yards and two touchdowns) and Jacobe Kendrick (139 yards) again eclipsed the 300-yard barrier. Jones carried the ball only 10 times, but two of them went for scores of 21 and 82 yards.

"That long touchdown was just a straight dive play," Jones said. "I just broke it back to the sideline and they couldn't match my speed."

Center Chad Owens said, "We know that if the line makes some holes these guys are going to run hard and make yards. If they're making yards, it means the line is getting better every week and that's what we really have to do."

Kicker Fletcher Pendergrass, a backup quarterback, probably had one of the more thrilling moments of his high school career.

Late in the first half, the Rebels looked to have stalled out at the Franklin 6-yard line. On fourth down, Lee lined up for a Pendergrass field goal. But Pendergrass took the ball from holder Aaron Timmerman and threw a TD pass to tight end Eric Winston, who had dropped a TD pass against Franklin in the first game.

And, oh yes, Pendergrass came to Lee from El Paso Franklin where he played as a ninth grader.

"That had to be a big moment for Fletcher," Parchman said. "He came out of that program."

The other Lee touchdown was turned in by the defense when Rebel defensive back Michael Skinner intercepted a Magden pass and returned it 57 yards for a touchdown with just less than four minutes left in the game.

"That was really nice," Skinner said. "I've never returned one for a touchdown on the varsity. That really broke them down, but the key for us may have been in the third quarter when Franklin comes down to our six-yard line and we don't let them score."

And when the Cougars didn't score, that's when Jones turned the game out of sight with his 82-yard TD run. It was the backbreaker.

Lee now will play again and at home, or almost at home. Lee will host either Arlington High or Keller Fossil Ridge at 2 p.m. on Saturday in Odessa's Ratliff Stadium in the state quarterfinals. Arlington and Fossil Ridge square off at 7:30 p.m. today at Texas Stadium in Irving.

Big 12 names first team

DALLAS — Five Colorado offensive players were named to the Coaches All Big 12 Conference's first team Friday, the same day the Buffaloes piled up nearly 600 yards in their 62-36 upset of No. 2 Nebraska.

No. 14 Colorado, which wrapped up the Big 12 North title Friday, led the conference with eight first-team players selected by Big 12 coaches.

Running back Cortlen Johnson, tight end Daniel Graham, kicker Jeremy Flores and offensive linemen Victor Rogers and Andre Gurode made the first team on offense for Colorado.

Fourth-ranked Oklahoma had five players on the first team: offensive lineman Frank Romero, defensive end Jimmy Wilkerson, interior lineman Tommie Harris, linebacker Rocky Calmus and defensive back Roy Williams.

No. 5 Texas, which beat Texas A&M 21-7 Friday, had four players on the first team: offensive lineman Mike Williams, receiver Roy Williams, defensive lineman Cory Redding and defensive back Quentin Jammer.

Nebraska had three first-teamers, including quarterback Eric Crouch, who went over 1,000 yards rushing for the season in Friday's loss to Colorado.

Colorado, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas combined for 40 of the selections on the first, second and third teams.

Running back Ricky Williams was Texas Tech's only first-team player.

Baylor, which has lost 29 straight conference games, didn't have any players on the team.

Dallas places Zhizhi on injured list,

DALLAS — The Dallas Mavericks placed forward Wang Zhizhi on the injured list Friday because of right Achilles' tendinitis and activated second-year forward Eduardo Najera.

Wang, the first NBA player born in China, joined the Mavericks on Wednesday after leading his national team to the Asian Games championship last week.

Najera went on the injured list Nov. 13 with a bruised right knee. He was on the injured list much of the preseason with tendinitis in his left knee.

Scorpions defeat Jackalopes, 2-1

Staff Report

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — It was the little things which came back to bite the Odessa Jackalopes Friday night.

In a four-minute span midway through the second period, the Jacks suffered two crucial defensive breakdowns against the New Mexico Scorpions which resulted in a pair of goals. That was all the Scorpions needed as they defeated the Jacks 2-1 in a Central Hockey League game.

New Mexico scored its first goal when Jonathan Beaulieu got the puck off the faceoff and scored on an odd-man rush to make it 1-0. The goal, though, was even more painful, as the Jacks had a power play advantage, but Mike Sanderson made a bad pass which Chris Richards intercepted to beat Joe Harris for an unassisted goal and a 2-0 lead which made the difference.

"We actually gave them two goals," said Jacks coach Don McKee. "It was similar to a situation in Lubbock the other night when had had the power play and gave up a goal. We've had three or four games hwre mental mistakes have been very, very costly."

The Jacks did convert a power play opportunity early in the third period when Rob Frid scored off an assist from Scott Hillman and Matt Cressman to make it 2-1, but that was it for the scoring.

Odessa will continue its road swing tonight when it goes to El Paso for an 8:05 p.m. game. If recent history is any indication, it should be a tight game, since the Jacks have played four straight one-goal games.

"The number of one-goal gaqmes shows the parity of this league," said McKee.

Odessa will have to make a personnel change prior to tonight's game. Don Margettie, the team's leading scorer who has been out the past five games with a cracked rib, will return from the injury list, forcing the Jacks to cut a player loose.

Olympians Taylor and Vinson triumph

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Jermain Taylor and Clarence Vinson, bronze medalists for the United States in the Sydney Olympics, remained undefeated as professionals Friday night at Roseland.

The three Olympians on the card — Brian Viloria was the third — donated their entire purses to the Twin Towers Fund. Other fighters made donations and all proceeds from the "Fighting for America — A Night of Thanksgiving" show will go to the fund.

Taylor, a middleweight from Little Rock, Ark., opened a a cut above Undra White's left eye and the scheduled six-round fight was halted 14 seconds into the fourth. The win was the seventh, five by knockout, for Taylor, who weighed in at 159 pounds.

SMITH: Rebuilding plan could use salary cap freedom

(From 1B)

He didn't play at all in the fourth quarter.

Hambrick, who spent last season on the practice squad as an undrafted rookie, switched from fullback to featured back during the rally.

But with the Cowboys trailing 26-3, running wasn't much of an option. In fact, the only two times Dallas handed off the rest of the game were Hambrick's two scoring runs.

Hambrick also caught a short pass and turned it into a 23-yard gain with a combination of shifty moves and bulldozing reminiscent of Smith in his prime. The play came midway through the drive that resulted in the first touchdown of Hambrick's career.

Smith has 486 yards this season, jeopardizing his streak of 10 straight 1,000-yard seasons. He last missed it in his rookie year, 1990. Smith must average 86 yards the final six games to make it.

The slowdown also affects Smith's pursuit of Walter Payton's career rushing record. He's 1,074 yards behind.

Most jarring is the zero next to Smith's name on the team's scoring chart. Stranger still is one of the guys ahead of him: kicker Tim Seder.

That quirk is typical of the frustration Smith has felt this season.

As one of two holdovers from Dallas' Super Bowl teams of the 1990s, he's had trouble dealing with the revolving door at quarterback. The Cowboys (2-8) have used four starters and still haven't found a competent heir to Troy Aikman. They've lost their last four games since winning two in a row.

The lack of a passing threat allows defenses to concentrate on stopping the run. Smith has mentioned that often when he complains about the team's plight. Offensive coordinator Jack Reilly's play-calling has been another of Smith's targets.

He's also said several times this season that he's tired of auditioning players and wants more emphasis on winning. When he said it again early this week, coach Dave Campo said that if Smith doesn't like what's going on he should retire.

Dallas' rebuilding plan could use the salary cap freedom Smith's departure would provide. However, the team's reputation and relationship with fans would be hurt if he left on a sour note, especially with Payton's record so close.

GAME: Benson ends season with 974 yards rushing

(From 1B)

mances ended at five, missed out on becoming Texas' seventh consecutive 1,000-yard rusher, but he gained 24 yards in the winning drive that kept the Longhorns' hopes alive for a BCS bowl game.

"I think we have (done all we can) and I think everybody else thinks we have," Brown said. "What we've got to do is hope the system works for us."

The Aggies' defense matched the Longhorns throughout the game until the late breakdowns.

After trailing throughout the first half, the Aggies finally ended a string of 10 quarters without a score by the offense early in the third on a 4-yard run by Keith Joseph for a 7-7 tie.

Mickey Jones' 37-yard punt return set up the score, and a bruising open-field block by Jay Brooks, who missed the previous four games with a groin injury, cleared the way.

Mark Farris completed passes of 11 yards to Terrence Murphy and 14 yards to Greg Porter before Joseph's touchdown with 10:45 left in the third quarter.

Joseph's touchdown was only the second against Texas defense in the third quarter this season. The Longhorns had outscored their opponents 79-7 in the third quarter prior to the game.

Texas needed help from its defense to scratch out a 7-0 halftime lead. The Longhorns got it with a 23-yard return by Tony Jeffery with 7:44 left in the first quarter after Roderick Babers blocked his second punt in as many games.

Quarterback Chris Simms had been especially strong since the Longhorns' 14-3 loss to Oklahoma, throwing 16 touchdown passes as Texas won five straight. But he didn't show any of that form against the Aggies, finishing 16-of-33 for 138 yards.

A&M's defense matched its rival in the first half, holding Simms and Texas' offense to 92 total yards as it held the Longhorns offense scoreless for the first time since the Texas' Big 12 championship game against Nebraska in 1999.

Benson entered the game needing 105 yards to break 1,000 yards for the season. He was trying to beat Ricky Williams' freshman record of 990 yards, but finished the game with 79 yards on 27 carries for 974 yards.

Colorado upsets Nebraska, 62-36

Associated Press

■ College Football

BOULDER, Colo. — A 32-point deficit — and Chris Brown's school-record scoring spree — proved too much even for powerful Nebraska to overcome.

Colorado's explosive offense raced to a 35-3 lead early in the second quarter, and the No. 14 Buffaloes withstood a mid-game rally to upset the No. 2 Cornhuskers 62-36 on Friday.

Brown ran for a school-record six touchdowns — three of them in the fourth quarter — as Colorado (9-2, 7-1 Big 12) won the Big 12 North to advance to the league's championship game Dec. 1.

It was the most points ever scored against Nebraska, eclipsing the 61 points by Minnesota in 1945.

The loss was a blow to Nebraska's hopes for a sixth national championship. Nebraska (11-1, 7-1) had been No. 1 in the Bowl Championship Series ratings for the last four weeks.

Brown's fourth TD run with 12:50 remaining capped a 93-yard drive, giving Colorado a 49-30 lead after the Huskers had cut the deficit to 12 points.

Safety Michael Lewis intercepted Eric Crouch's pass moments later, and Brown ran 13 yards for his fifth score.

No. 6 came after an interception by linebacker Joey Johnson, giving Colorado another 32-point advantage, 62-30, with 9:41 left.

Colorado generated 582 total yards, compared to Nebraska's 552.

TCU 37, No. 17 Louisville 22

FORT WORTH — Casey Printers threw three touchdown passes, including an 80-yarder on the game's first play, as TCU kept its faint bowl hopes alive with a 37-22 victory over No. 17 Louisville on Friday.

Louisville (10-2, 6-1 C-USA) had its seven-game winning streak snapped, but had already clinched the Conference USA title for the second straight year and accepted a berth to play in the Liberty Bowl.

The Cardinals couldn't overcome another early 14-0 deficit, like they did last week at East Carolina when they won 39-34 for the C-USA title and their 10th straight league win.

After Printers started with the 80-yard TD pass to Adrian Madise, who caught the ball in stride at midfield, TCU (5-5, 3-3) recovered a pooch kick that no Louisville player fielded. Four plays later, Printers scored on a 3-yard keeper for a 14-0 lead less than two minutes into the game.

LSU 41, No. 24 Arkansas 38

BATON ROUGE, La. — LaBrandon Toefield ran for 173 yards and three touchdowns and Josh Reed had 183 yards receiving as LSU beat Arkansas 41-38 Friday to remain in the Southeastern Conference Western Division title race.

No. 24 Arkansas and LSU were both in the running for a share of the division championship and a spot in the SEC title game. LSU (7-3, 4-3), the preseason favorite to win the SEC West, will win the division if it beats Auburn next Saturday.

Arkansas (7-4, 4-4), picked to finish last in the West, came into the game with a six-game winning streak. The Razorbacks needed to beat LSU, then have the Tigers beat Auburn to win the division.

Lady Chaps get huge win over Barton County

Staff Report

GREAT BEND, Kans. — The Midland College women's basketball team started off the Pizza Hut Barton County Community College Classic on Friday with a big win over the host team.

The Lady Chaps' 88-69 victory over Barton County was one that coach Ron Jones seemed to enjoy.

"Barton came to our place last year and we beat them at home, and I believe they're better this year," Jones said. "This is the best game we've played (this season) and this is the second game in a row that I think we've done a really good job in halfcourt, team defense. We'd been giving up easy baskets, but I'm starting to see improvement in that area."

The Lady Chaps dominated on the boards, outrebounding Barton, 59-39. Amisha Carter grabbed 19 rebounds and Jacquanda Amaker had 10. Carter also led MC in scoring with 20 points, sharing high-point honors with teammate Hazel Woods.

Midland College will play Dodge City (Kans.) Community College today.

ANDREWS: Gardner has over 1,000 yards rushing for Mustangs

(From 1B)

After losing to Andrews in bi-district games in 1996 and 1997, Riverside has lost in the area round in each of the last three seasons. In 1998, there was a loss to Pampa, the school that Andrews beat last week in overtime. Riverside had a chance to win that game, Work said, but threw an interception in the end zone late in the game.

Then there was 1999, when Riverside led Frenship, 17-0, at one point before losing, 32-17. And last year, against Big Spring, Riverside was close for a while before the Steers pulled away and won, 46-12.

Make no mistake: Riverside (8-2) will bring a good team to face the Mustangs (6-5) today. Work likes his team's chances, but maybe history has made him gun-shy.

"I've said it every year," Work said, referring to his teams' chances of getting over the area hump, "But it's made a liar out of me."

The Rangers have the respect of Andrews coach Mike Lebby, who also knows something about playoff frustration after bi-district losses to state-power Stephenville in both 1998 and 1999. He also, by the way, knows about getting past that frustration after advancing to the third round of the playoffs last year.

"Riverside is one of the better teams out of El Paso," Lebby said. "They've got a big fullback, a kid named Shawn Jordan, and they've got a good tailback in Carlos Carrillo, who has rushed for over 2,000 yards already. They're pretty talented."

Carrillo is a small tailback at 5-foot-6 and 160 pounds, but he's got big statistics. He's rushed for 2,131 yards and 22 touchdowns this year, including 219 yards and four TDs last week in a 55-7 bi-district win over Fabens.

In two seasons, he's rushed for more than 4,000 yards.

"We can't let him get in the open," Lebby said. "He's good in open space. We've got to get him before he gets started."

The Riverside fullback, Jordan, is also a threat. The junior is 6-1 and 230 pounds, Work said, and has rushed for 818 yards and nine TDs.

"He's the first real Division I prospect I've had in the 10 years I've been here," said Work. "He's already gotten letters from Alabama and Notre Dame and Boston College.

Lebby is impressed with Riverside's running backs, but the Mustangs are used to seeing good running backs in District 4-4A.

"We've faced some pretty good running backs in our district," Lebby said "The kid from Plainview (Brylon Bradie), the kid from Levelland (Christian Coronado)... They all have good running backs, so it's not something that's new to us."

At quarterback, Riverside has junior Michael Stephenson, who has been starting since he was a freshman, Work said. He topped 1,000 yards passing for the year last week against Fabens with only one completion — a 90-yard touchdown pass to Sal Acevedo.

Andrews quarterback Ryan Newbrough is closing in on 1,000 yards passing with 43 yards in last week's 14-7 overtime win over Pampa, and sophomore tailback Matt Gardner reached 1,047 yards rushing with 87 against Pampa. The Mustangs' offense didn't exactly tear up and down the field against Pampa, with 209 yards of total offense, but it did help control the game.

"We played great defense," Lebby said, "and we controlled the ball. We had it for probably 20 more plays than they did."

One thing that Andrews will need to do this week is cut down on penalties.

"We had lots of silly mistakes," Lebby said. "We had eight five-yard penalties on the offense, and that really hurt us. That killed about three drives for us. I felt like we could have been in control in the fourth quarter, but we had too many penalties. We haven't had that all year. I don't know what happened."

Both teams may throw more than they usually do, but for different reasons.

Riverside's defense features eight men on the line of scrimmage, Lebby said, and while the Mustangs won't change their running style, he thinks Andrews can throw the ball successfully against the Rangers. Riverside may be forced to throw, even with two good running backs.

"We just don't match up well up front," Work said. "They're so much bigger and stronger up front. It ends up being a finesse deal.

"We've thrown the ball three times in the last two games, but we'll probably throw that many times in first series (today)," he said. "We haven't had to throw, because we've dominated (against El Paso teams)."

Andrews' success was forged in the white-hot competition of District 4-4A, which featured a five-way tie for third place going into the final week of the regular season. Riverside, though, doesn't get that much competition in El Paso, Work said, and that has a lot to do with the Rangers' struggles in the second round of the playoffs.

He's grateful to Lee coach John Parchman, he said, for letting Riverside scrimmage the three-time defending state champion Rebels, since the only way to get better is to play against tough competition.

"We're trying to get over the hump," Work said. "It's really frustrating, but I think we're closing the gap."

Work can only wish, though, that the area-round hump was the biggest problem his Rangers faced this week. Many of his players spent the week mourning the loss of two Riverside students, Jaclyn Rodriguez and Valerie Provencio, who both died in an auto accident last weekend.

One of the girls was a student in a class Work teaches, and one was dating a Riverside football player. Provencio was a Riverside cheerleader. The rosary service for one was even held on Thanksgiving Day, he said.

"It's been real emotional week," Work said. "It's brought us together. We've had some team meetings about it."

It's impossible to predict what effects those emotions will have on the field, but Work said, "I think they'll play hard."

Midland College Chaps fall to San Jacinto CC

Staff Report

PLANO — The tough early season road continued for the Midland College men's basketball team in the first round of the Collin County Classic Friday night.

Facing another tough opponent, the Chaps never led and fell to powerful San Jacinto Community College 79-63 to see their record drop to 3-7 on the season. For first year MC coach Scott Raines, San Jacinto was just the latest opponent to give his young team a lesson.

"San Jacinto has been to the national tournament each of the past two years and I think they have a chance to go again," said Raines. "We didn't hang our heads after getting down early that's a good time to show your character against a team who's been to so many national tournaments."

Midland College fell behind early, 15-2, and cut San Jacinto's lead to as little as three late in first half. The Chaps trailed 36-29 at halftime.

In the second half, MC cut the deficit to five but missed chance to cut it to three a possession later when the Chaps missed a layup. San Jacinto took control the rest of the way.

"I don't think we defended really well and we had a hard time putting the ball in the basket," said Raines.

While Raines praised the play of his inside players, he still thinks his team is learning and struggling to find a way to win games.

"We seem to make enough mistakes to prevent us from having a chance to win," said Raines.

Midland College continues the tournament today at 4 p.m. against McLennan Community College.

Spurs, Mavericks defeat opponents

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Tim Duncan scored 30 points and grabbed a season-high 18 rebounds as San Antonio defeated Indiana 97-79 Friday night, recording its seventh consecutive victory.

Both teams shot 39 percent from the field, but San Antonio outscored Indiana 26-9 from the free-throw line and outrebounded the Pacers 62-40.

The Spurs took what was then their biggest lead of the night, 73-63, by scoring the final nine points of the third quarter on free throws.

Indiana reduced its deficit to 73-68 early in the fourth quarter, but San Antonio scored eight consecutive points and was never seriously challenged again.

Reggie Miller and Jalen Rose led Indiana with 17 points apiece. Rookie Jammall Tinsley, coming off a 23-assist performance against Washington, finished with four points and six assists.

Steve Smith and reserve Antonio Daniels were the only other Spurs in double figures. Daniels had 11 points and Smith scored 10.

A tight first half that included nine lead changes and three ties ended with San Antonio holding a 46-42 advantage.

Mavericks 104, Heat 94

MIAMI — Dirk Nowitzki had 33 points and 11 rebounds as the Dallas Mavericks extended the Miami Heat's losing streak to seven games with a 104-94 victory Friday night.

The Mavericks spoiled the return of Miami center Alonzo Mourning, who was back after missing three games with a stomach virus. Mourning came off the bench for 12 points and five rebounds in 21 minutes.

Nowitzki was 11-for-17 from the field and 10-for-10 from the line as he posted his fifth double-double of the season.

Miami last lost seven straight from Jan. 11-21, 1994. The Heat has dropped five in a row at home.

Steve Nash added 22 points and nine assists for the Mavericks, the first team to score more than 100 points against Miami this season. Michael Finley had 15 points and Juwan Howard scored 13.

Eddie Jones led Miami with 22 points.

Gordons exchange bumps

Associated Press

LOUDON, N.H. — It's rare to see Jeff Gordon lose his cool on the track. It's even rarer to see Robby Gordon win a race.

Both happened Friday in NASCAR's season finale at New Hampshire International Speedway, a race rescheduled after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

The two Gordons, who are not related, exchanged a pair of bumps in the waning laps of the New Hampshire 300. Robby's allowed to get his first Winston Cup victory, while Jeff's retaliatory contact earned him a penalty that cost him any chance at victory.

When it was over, there were harsh words flying through the garage — even from mild-mannered Jeff.

"He should be embarrassed to win like that," said Jeff, the series champion who led 257 of the 300 laps. "But hey, I understand why guys do that kind of stuff. I just wish I had taken his tire down or something so at least he wouldn't have won the race."

Robby, who was out of work for part of the season and blew two other opportunities to win this year, apologized for nothing.

The clash began with 16 laps to go when leader Jeff Gordon appeared to slow his Chevrolet to avoid running into the lapped car of Mike Wallace. Robby rammed him from behind, turning Jeff sideways and into the back of Wallace.

As the yellow flag came out, Jeff raced around the track and slammed into the back of Robby in a retaliatory bump that drew a one-lap penalty from NASCAR.

"I ought to take him out right now!" Jeff screamed over the radio as he headed into the pits for his penalty.

But he didn't, leaving Robby alone on the track, where he held off second-place finisher Sterling Marlin on the restart to become NASCAR's 19th different winner this season.

It was easier than Robby expected it to be, in part because Jeff wasn't around to battle him.

"I didn't expect that (bump) from Jeff Gordon," Robby said. "I didn't wreck him and he had a car still good enough to win the race, but he took himself out when he hit me."

Jeff's Chevrolet suffered heavy-front end damage after the contact and the penalty eliminated him from contention. He wound up 15th.

But Jeff didn't know NASCAR would frown so heavily upon his revenge.

NASCAR president Mike Helton met privately with the eight drivers who could still exchange positions in the Top 10 of the standings before the race, warning them that aggressive actions on the track would be punished.

Because Jeff had wrapped up his fourth Winston Cup championship last week, he wasn't included in the meeting. So he had no warning that NASCAR would react so quickly after the contact.

"The first hit was a racing incident, the second one was a retaliation incident," NASCAR spokesman Jim Hunter said. "Those get punished."

Robby did not receive a penalty, enabling the year to end with the late Dale Earnhardt's car owner getting a victory in a season that began with The Intimidator's death in the Daytona 500.

Richard Childress, who owned Earnhardt's car, also owns the Chevrolet Robby Gordon began driving midway through the season as a replacement for Mike Skinner.

Childress was able to celebrate Robby's win, but it was tempered.

"It's nice to go out this way, but nothing will ever fill the void left by Dale," Childress said. "I've still got an emptiness."

And Robby's party also was a little subdued. He was booed heartily by the crowd of 98,000 as he tried to explain his actions in victory lane.

"I wouldn't wreck him to win unless it was the last lap," Robby said. "I wanted to race him clean but he slowed down to avoid (Wallace.) If Jeff wants to talk to me, I'm not too concerned about it, I've seen him crash into another car to win a race."

Burns nears first World Rally triumph

Associated Press

CARDIFF, Wales — Richard Burns moved closer to his first World Rally season title after Tommi Makinen and Colin McRae both crashed Friday in the season-ending Rally of Britain.

Makinen, the four-time world champion from Finland, lost his title bid when his Mitsubishi hit a rock on the 8.5-mile first special stage of the rally in south Wales.

Makinen had started one point behind Scotland's McRae going into the final round of the season. English rival Burns started two points adrift.

McRae's hopes of winning the title ended 10 minutes into the third stage of the day when his Ford Focus crashed into a ditch at approximately 100 mph in the Welsh forests. Co-driver Nicky Grist said the car rolled "four or five times." McRae was treated in a hospital for an injury to his left eye.

With Makinen and McRae out, Burns only needs to finish in the top four to win the driver's title when the rally concludes Sunday.

Burns, second in the championship in the last two years, was third Friday morning in his Subaru, just under 20 seconds behind outgoing title holder Marcus Gronholm of Finland. Gronholm's Peugeot teammate Didier Auriol was second, 11.9 seconds back.

Spain's Carlos Sainz was seven points behind Burns and the only other driver with a mathematical chance of winning title. He struggled Friday with a puncture and a time penalty and was over a minute behind.

McRae had been leading the event, by just 0.2 seconds over Finland's Marcus Gronholm, going into the stage in the Rhondda Valley.

Former Muslim answers Christians' questions

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

With the recent surge in interest in Islam, churches throughout Midland have responded by offering comparative religion classes and bringing in speakers, both Christian and Muslim, to help people understand what Islam might or might not have to do with the Sept. 11 attacks and with the conflict in the Holy Land.

For United Methodists, finding a knowledgeable source to help make sense of the puzzle was as simple as calling on one of their own. They have a former Muslim in their midst who has distinguished himself not only in the clergy, but as a public speaker as well.

The Rev. Ihsan Ardhuerumly immigrated to the United States in 1951, married a Christian and later converted to Christianity. He then entered the clergy and moved up through the ranks in the Methodist Church.

Using terms familiar to Christians, he explains the similarities and differences that unite and divide Christians and Muslims.

"Muslims consider Islam, Judaism and Christianity sister religions," he said Sunday during a service at First United Methodist Church. One question he addressed was the mistaken belief that Muslims believe in a different God.

"Allah is the Arabic word for God. You say Yahweh, Jehovah, Allah, God, you are using different words, but you are saying the same thing," he explained, adding that an entire chapter of the Koran is devoted to the virgin birth of Jesus.

"In a lot of cases, Muslims believe more strongly in that aspect than some Christians do."

Ardhuerumly also stressed the need for Christians to take a close look at the Palestinian/Israeli conflict, and answered questions about the prevalent notion that the Sept. 11 events were instigated by Islamic edict.

"Those people may call themselves Muslims, but they can no more speak for Muslims than Jim Jones or David Koresh can speak for all Christians," he said. "This is a local, cultural thing, and they did those terrible things because they were terrible people.

"I know you hear some negative things about Muslims, but these things are local things.

"You have heard of small Christian sects condemning Catholics, or Pentecostals. All Christians are not the same, and all Muslims are not the same. You don't condemn all because of the actions of a few."

He urged the congregation also to pray and work for peace in the Middle East.

"This (the Palestinian/Israeli conflict) is not a religious conflict," he said. "This is about power and politics, not religion."

Ardhuerumly, who is of Turkish heritage, was born in Baghdad. He talked Sunday of growing up in an Islamic culture, in a close-knit family that did not at the time practice Islam.

"As a child, I grew up in a Muslim home, in the Muslim culture and the Muslim religion was taught in every grade of the public schools," he explained. "Neither I nor my family were practicing Muslims then, but nonetheless we learned about the religion and its articles of faith."

In a story reminiscent of Abraham's, he told of how, looking back over his life, he can see how God led him, even though for years he didn't know where he was going.

He said he had felt an urge from a very young age to immigrate to the United States.

"I didn't know then where this was all leading," he said. "I lived a comfortable life, with opportunities for a good education, but I thought that I needed to go to America to get an education as an electronics engineer. An uncle loaned me $200, and I sold my old English sports car for $135, and my mother paid for my bus ticket to Beirut, where I sailed to America.

"It took 21 days to get to New York. We landed on a cold wintry November day, 50 years ago."

His passage had cost $100. With $235 in his pocket, he made his way to Indiana Tech, one of three colleges that had accepted him,

Ministers to dedicate garden as place for those seeking to end abortion through prayer

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

After some 15 months of planning and work, the prayer garden opposite the Planned Parenthood clinic is complete. Dedication services are scheduled for 8 a.m. Nov. 30

The idea for a place for people to come and pray, primarily for the cessation of abortions in Midland and around the world, first came to Midlander Bob Hilton in August 2000, as he was praying in what was then an empty lot on the corner of Illinois Avenue and Fort Worth Street.

"I had been away from the pro-life movement for a while, although I was active for a good while down in Austin, and had spent 20 days in jail there," he said. "But then I got so busy with Comunidad Alabare (a food and clothing ministry on Midland's south side) that I just didn't think I had time to do anything else. Then in the summer of 2000, the Lord began to speak to my heart.

"I began to go down there (Illinois and Fort Worth) to pray every Friday (morning) and I'd pray for about an hour. One morning as I was praying, I said, 'Lord, we come here and pray, but is there anything else you would like for us to do?', and he said, 'Yes, I want my name lifted up out here.'"

Hilton said at first he waited.

"Normally, I'm a guy who jumps up and does things, and I wanted to be sure that I was doing what the Lord wanted, so I waited. The next week, when I was praying down there, he said it again.

"It seemed to be more of an impulse, or an idea, than an audible voice. He said, 'I want you to come here and get in the arena. I know you've been out on Loop 250 and Midkiff carrying your signs, but I want you to come here, and I'll be with you.'"

Hilton said his first move was to arrange to buy the lot.

"The owner wanted $15,000 for it. I was able to raise that money in about seven weeks, and I bought the lot," Hilton said.

Next came the work of clearing the lot of debris, arranging for an architectural design and doing the actual construction.

On the north end of the lot is a collection of white wooden crosses. On the east side is a sheltered walkway with a wall painted with murals that serves as a backdrop for the garden. On the south end is a red rock mulch-covered area with concrete benches where visitors can rest and meditate and pray.

Hilton said the work was done on a pay-as-you-go basis, and ended up costing about $35,000.

Much of the work was done by volunteers or at a reduced price.

The murals' artwork was designed by Pat Thames, who did the painting along with Mary Hilton and Leslie Lee.

Presiding at the dedication will be the Rev. Gary Dyer of First Baptist Church, the Rev. James Bridges of St. Stephen's Catholic Church, the Rev. Robert Walter of Our Savior's Luther-

Second interim pastor helping Trinity Presbyterian through transition

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

In the year since the Rev. Fane Downs, last permanent pastor of Trinity Presbyterian Church, retired, the congregation has come almost halfway in the long process of preparing itself for a new relationship with a new pastor, as yet to be chosen.

The Rev. Bob Bullock, Trinity's second interim pastor, said there is nothing traumatic or hurtful in Trinity's transition.

"Trinity Presbyterian is a healthy congregation, and what they're looking for is a spiritual director as well as a pastor, preacher, teacher and administrator — all of which are among my skill sets, so it's a wonderful match. I feel privileged to serve them as their interim pastor."

Bullock, an interim pastor by choice, has 25 years of ministry experience during which he has served variously as a solo pastor, a senior pastor and an associate pastor for congregations in Oklahoma and Texas. He also served as a conflict consultant, dispute mediator and strategic planner in other churches, denominations and schools, including the Catholic Diocese of Galveston, Houston's Board of Education and the United Methodist Church.

He said the interim between pastors can often be a time of earth-shaking decisions, where the church chooses to look at itself, do an assessment of itself and do a mission study — a process Trinity did with its first interim pastor, the Rev. Jim Patton, who left after six months.

"It's not unusual for a congregation to have a couple of interim pastors," Bullock said. "Jim took Trinity through the assessment, and now they'll be reaching to the future, with goals and strategic planning. I will be working with the committees and different ministry areas to see where the church wants to go and how I can help it get there.

"Normally, you would hope to have one interim pastor doing all the process, but I'm going to have a great time doing the second part," he said.

Bullock said he had signed a nine-month contract with Trinity, but the nature of the contract is that it can be shortened or lengthened, depending on the progress of the search for a permanent pastor.

He said the temporary nature of his appointment gives him some advantages he didn't have in the years he served congregations as permanent pastor.

"I enjoy both kinds of ministry, but interim pastors have the opportunity to do some very bold and exceptional things with a congregations, whereas a permanent pastor must move more slowly.

"It's a different kind of ministry, and it's fun. I can cut to the chase, so to speak. As a contract worker with only a certain amount of time, you don't ever get to stick around to see the fruits of your labors, but my understanding of the call of Christ is that every Christian should be close enough to God that they're willing to leave their future in God's hands. Interim pastors have the opportunity to test their willingness to leave it all in God's hands."

Bullock at present is basking in the warmth of the early developmental stages of his relationship with Trinity.

"Trinity is such a wonderful congregation, and I'm really enjoying this. I personally think Midland is a great place to live, and I envy people who live here for a lifetime. But meanwhile, I plan to enjoy every minute of my time here — whether it's six months, or nine months or longer."

ANSWERS: Ardhuerumly converted to Christianity after wife entered seminary and paid $210 tuition. To feed himself while studying, he found work where he could.

(From 1C)

"My first job was at the soda fountain of the YMCA," he said, laughing. "I had no idea what a chocolate soda, or a malt, or an ice cream sundae was, but there were two lovely women who helped me."

Other jobs included warehouse maintenance and carpet cleaning. He lived on one meal a day, most of the time boiled potatoes covered in mustard. "It was OK; it was doable," he said.

Soon after graduation, he was drafted into the U.S. Army, an experience he said he values, because it exposed him to people from all over the country. After two years in the Army, he worked as a field engineer for the company that became General Dynamics.

During the course of the job, he went to Lindsey, Okla., where he met a Methodist girl named Lillith. He asked her to marry him, and she said she would, on the condition that he go to church with her. For years, he simply attended church while remaining a non-practicing Muslim, resisting the vaguely uncomfortable feeling that he needed to be doing something more. But Ardhuerumly had married a woman experiencing urges of her own. She said she struggled with God for 16 years before coming to the climax of the conflict raging in her heart.

"I had come home from a meeting of a district United Methodist women's group, and I let myself into the back of the church and prayed as I was accustomed to doing, when suddenly I realized that I couldn't put off my decision any longer. I said, 'All right, Lord, I'll become the first woman (Methodist) preacher in Oklahoma, and I'll probably become the first divorced woman preacher too, when I tell Ihsan,'" said Mrs. Ardhuerumly. "But when I went home and told him, he said that he would support me and follow me."

Shortly after his wife entered seminary, Ardhuerumly converted to Christianity, and then answered the call to the ministry.

He said he had put off making the decision for 13 years, using the rationalization that he needed to provide for his family.

"But one day while Lillith was at school, and the kids were at Disneyland, I realized that I either had to get in or get out. I gave up my job and we sold the houses and the extra car, and set off for Texas driving a Ryder truck."

He eventually became a district superintendent for the UMC.

The couple, who have five children, 11 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren, said that while their journey in faith has not always been easy, they've been incredibly blessed.

"God is so good, and you can see how good he is, (patting the protrusion above his belt) because I used to weigh 160 pounds," Ardhuerumly said.

Their daughter and their oldest son also entered the ministry. Their daughter presently serves as district superintendent for the United Methodist Church in Pampa. Their son is minister of a nondenominational church in Indiana.

Now retired, they still travel to wherever they are called to conduct preaching or speaking engagements from their home in Roosevelt, a small community in Oklahoma.

an Church and Hilton.

Hilton explained that presently, plans call for various church groups to pray at the garden at 7 a.m. the first Friday of each month.

"That's when the abortions are done," he said. "We hope that sometime in the future, we can get groups to come every Friday.

"Of course, people are welcome to come and pray and meditate at any time, and there are several people who do that.

"We are not here to judge those people (at Planned Parenthood). We love them and we don't want to harm them. We just wish they would find something else to do," Hilton said.

"We're just going to be here to make a stand for life. It's been 28 years now (since Roe vs. Wade). I don't know how much longer we will have to cry out, but if it takes another 28 years, we will do that. We know that if we make a continuous stand for life, the Lord will return that life to us."

ESV enters crowded Bible market

By Richard N. Ostling
Associated Press

Shopping for a Bible? You could pick the venerated King James Version (also known as the Authorized Version) or revisions of it known as KJ2, KJ2000, KJ21, the New King James or the Revised King James, not to be confused with the Revised Standard Version or the New Revised Standard.

Not satisfied? Looking just at the other N's, you could consider the NIV, its simplified NIrV, the NAB, NASB, NCV, NEB, NET, NJB, NLT, NLV or NWT.

At last count there are some 70 English renditions of the Bible, in whole or in part.

The latest addition to this alphabet soup is the ESV (English Standard Version) from Crossway. Granted, we'll never again have a common Bible, but does this crowded market really need a 70th edition?

Yes, asserts Raymond Van Leeuwen, New Testament professor at Pennsylvania's Eastern College, writing in Christianity Today magazine.

Modern versions generally use thought-for-thought translation, known as "functional" or "dynamic" equivalence. Van Leeuwen favors "transparent or direct" translation, conveying how things were said in the original Hebrew and Greek, word for word, as closely as English allows.

The ESV isn't a wholly new Bible but an updated RSV. Proponents say they preserved the best of the RSV and King James "legacy" but dropped "archaic language" (thee-thou) and made "significant corrections" in "key texts."

One all-important "correction" occurs in Isaiah 7:14, which conservatives regard as a clear prediction of Jesus' virgin birth. It is quoted from the Greek Old Testament in Matthew 1:23.

Conservatives exploded in anger when the RSV rendered it, "Behold, a young woman shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." The ESV changes that to "the virgin shall conceive."

Otherwise, the ESV mostly tinkers with the RSV verbiage, judging from a quick spot check.

House of prayer working toward round-the-clock intercession

By Annette Fuller
The Dallas Morning News

Carol Adams and Larry Simpson pray at the All Nations House of Prayer in Grand Prairie. The center is hoping to become the first 24-hour worship and prayer center. More than a dozen area churches are participating members at ANHOP. People come to listen to live music that glorifies God as well as to study and pray.

AP Photo

GRAND PRAIRIE — Worship leaders at the All Nations House of Prayer don't mind if no one attends their services.

"God is in our audience; that's all that matters," said director Tom Grossman. "We have our eyes set only on him."

Created in January, the All Nations House of Prayer is part of a national evangelical movement to create 24-hour prayer centers in every city in the nation.

Few people attend most of the 35 services each week at the small, one-story building in Grand Prairie. Volunteers from 16 area churches lead services, which last from one to two hours and fill about nine hours a day. The Friday night service, which attracts up to 150 worshippers, is the only one at which a collection plate is passed.

"We're not in a hurry," Grossman said. "We'd rather wait for the right people" spiritually led people "to lead our services than to hurry up and go 24 hours a day."

The Grand Prairie prayer center is modeled after the International House of Prayer of Kansas City, known as IHOP, which was created two years ago. About 100 houses of prayer have been created in cities from San Diego to Chicago and Portland, Ore.

In Texas, prayer centers have opened in Amarillo, Waco, College Station, and Austin.

The idea is catching on internationally as well, with churches in Sweden, South Africa, Israel, China, and England.

Dwayne Roberts, director of the traveling teams for the International House of Prayer in Kansas City, said the Dallas center is off to a great start.

"Tom Grossman is doing a great job down there," Roberts said. "I think there is an awakening taking place all over the nation. There is a hunger and an unprecedented desire to pray and awaken to the Lord, especially since Sept. 11. There is a growing need and understanding for prayer, and that's what is happening in Dallas."

The goal of each center is to provide worship and prayer for its city, in an effort to bring revival and change to the city's people.

"The apostle Paul talked about presenting the church as the bride to her one husband, Christ," Grossman said. "We're saying the end result of our mission would be that power breaks out from the church like never before. We won't see the hype and the self-promotion from the churches, just a humble willingness to serve and to exalt Christ. We will see those in trouble truly turning to the church: the prostitutes, the drug addicts, those who are suicidal. True revival comes when the church is passionate about Jesus Christ, and not about their buildings or their programs."

In the Bible, many people experienced spiritual renewal after praying nonstop for a day or several days, Grossman explained.

"We believe that God is calling the people of Dallas and Fort Worth to come back to him," Grossman said. "God is calling these people back to worship and devotion, and he's asking them to do much more than just church on Sunday."

Each service has at least three worship leaders, all volunteers from supporting churches. Most, but not all, are nondenominational, Pentecostal or Charismatic.

They include the Potter's House in South Dallas, Christ for the Nations Institute in Dallas, Restoration Church in Euless, Colleyville Christian Fellowship, Cornerstone Assembly of God in Rowlett, First United Methodist Church of Bedford, and Vista Ridge Vineyard Church in Lewisville.

Volunteering at the House of Prayer can mean giving up one night a week or, in some cases, enough hours to cause a real-life change.

Take Ravi Durairaj, for example. The India-born Dallas resident who is a member of Potter's House wakes up at 4:15 every morning and prays for an hour before leading the earliest service at the House of Prayer. He arrives at the center at 6:15 to lead the 6:30 to 8 a.m. service Monday through Thursday.

"Our vision is that the fire of prayer will never go out," Durairaj said. "We are praying for Dallas every morning."

It doesn't bother him to wake up before dawn to lead a worship service that, often, no one attends.

"Our audience is God and his throne," he said. "We know that eventually, this place will be packed."

Crystal Whetzel of Mansfield comes to play the piano and lead singing at the 6:30 a.m. Thursday service.

"If you give time to the Lord, he blesses you," Mrs. Whetzel said. "God's love exceeds all hatred. Being a part of these services has brought me around to the place where I don't hate the Afghans or Osama bin Laden, for example."

She admits that on some mornings, she is tired and sometimes a bit sick to her stomach because she is pregnant with her second child.

"But I know that I must give the Lord my best," she said. "We are truly the watchmen on the wall, bringing God to the metroplex."

Bob Martin, a music leader on Tuesday nights, said music is a wonderful way to reach out to God.

"I believe he loves to hear his children sing and cry out to him," he said.

Wendy Goshen, a singer on Tuesday nights, said participating in the services is like "rest" to her.

"In such a busy world where so many things pull our attention and affections, it's so key that we take time to rest," she said. "Resting in his presence and letting Jesus wash us with his word is the most refreshing place to be."

The services are a mix of singing and devotions. Instruments include electric piano, guitars, and drums. The songs are ad-libbed from Bible verses, with pianists and guitarists switching between two chords.

"Worthy is the lamb" and "This is the day the Lord hath made, rejoice" are two phrases that are ad-libbed for 30 minutes at a time. At intervals, the singers lower their voices so the speaker can pray or read Bible verses.

The few who attend the services say they appreciate that the prayer center is open so many hours of the day.

"I have intermittent pain that travels in different parts of my body, and doctors do not know what is the root cause," said Vladimar, who asked that his last name not be used. "Also, I need miracles and wisdom concerning our finances and a new job."

An American Airlines flight attendant, still in her uniform after just leaving work, cried as the songs were being sung.

"I come here to pray for my father, who is dying and who hasn't been saved," said the flight attendant, who would not give her name. "I am praying that he will find the Lord before he dies."

The idea for the All Nations House of Prayer came to Norm Frederick, missions pastor at Shady Grove Church in Grand Prairie when he attended a training workshop at the Kansas City IHOP two years ago. After that, Shady Grove Church members decided God was calling them to build an altar next to the site of their new building, which is still under construction. The All Nations House of Prayer which looks like a modest office building also houses some of the church's administrative offices.

"Obviously, there are considerable hurdles to overcome when you are pioneering something that has never been done before," said Frederick, who oversees Grossman's efforts in the House of Prayer. "One of our core values is that this not belong to one local church, but that it be a representation of the church in the city."

The prayer center is not about the personality of Grossman or any worship leader, and it should not be considered a "project," Frederick said. "It is an ongoing love affair with the King of Kings and Lord of Lords," he said. "We are continuing to see increase in the hearts of God's people for the desire of night and day worship. ... The future of the House of Prayer is broadened by every heart that is awakened."

The All Nations House of Prayer is at 2410 N. Carrier Pkwy in Grand Prairie. Call 972-660-8640 or visit www.anhop.org.

Wilkinson moves on to Hollywood after achieving everything he wanted at home

NEW YORK — Tom Wilkinson co-stars in two movies opening this weekend — "Black Knight" with Martin Lawrence and "In the Bedroom" with Sissy Spacek.

The British actor said he's appearing in more big Hollywood movies these days because he accomplished everything he wanted at home.

"I got to the point where I could do more or less anything I wanted on British television and British theatre, and I thought that the big stage, the big game, is the Hollywood game, and I should have a crack at that," he said. "And I saw other actors doing it and I thought, well, if they can do it, I can do it."

Wilkinson said a combination of luck and good judgment has propelled his career in recent years. He's also co-starred in "The Full Monty," "Shakespeare in Love" and "The Patriot."

"I wouldn't say my position is enviable," Wilkinson said. "I'm, not Mel Gibson. People aren't sort of falling over themselves to give me $20 million and do a picture, that's for sure true. But I can get work here."

NEW YORK — The artist formerly known as Natalie McIntyre said she changed her name to Macy Gray because she liked the sound of it.

"When I was little, I was riding my bike and I saw 'Macy Gray' on a mailbox," the R&B singer told Teen People magazine for its December 2001/January 2002 issue. "For some reason, it stuck with me. It's hot. I'm feeling it. I want to do records under some different aliases. I want to record something as Mite B."

Gray said that even though she's a famous, Grammy-winning singer now, she still gets a little starstruck.

"Oh, I'm a real groupie," she said. "I have a Method Man picture next to my computer and some Bob Marley pictures sitting on the floor. I haven't figured out where to put them yet.

"My favorite song (in recent years) is '...Baby, One More Time' by Britney Spears," Gray said. "It's just a hot song, even the lyrics. I haven't met Britney, but everywhere I go her people come up to me and say, 'Britney really loves you.'"

LOS ANGELES — Gregory Peck has helped raise $350,000 to teach adults to read.

Peck is the honorary chairman of The Literary Odyssey Dinners, fund-raising events that are held at celebrities' homes and feature a well-known author. The dinners, which cost $300 to $2,500 per plate, took place Nov. 3 in Santa Barbara and Nov. 5 in Los Angeles County.

Philanthropist Eli Broad donated $200,000 of the money for adult literacy programs through the Los Angeles Public Library and its 67 branches.

In 1997 and 1999, the literacy fund-raising dinners drew more than $750,000, publicist Judi Davidson said Thursday.

The program is run by the Library Foundation of Los Angeles, a nonprofit fund-raising group run by 250 women.

NEW YORK — Jazz musician and composer Alex Bugnon said he was inspired to write the song "Sunset Over Manhattan" while looking at the New York skyline the day after the terrorist attacks.

"I drove along the deserted West Side Highway and saw a beautiful sunset behind the smoke that had engulfed the city," Bugnon said Thursday. "At that moment, I observed what looked like thousands of angels flying overhead."

Bugnon performed "Sunset Over Manhattan" during a Nov. 14 benefit concert at the Beacon Theater in New York. The song is from his new CD, "Soul Purpose," which he dedicated to the families of attack victims.

LOS ANGELES — Hilary Duff, the 14-year-old star of ABC and the Disney Channel's children's' show "Lizzie McGuire," will host the Los Angeles Master Chorale's family holiday program Dec. 1.

Duff will lead children in Christmas carols and other singalongs. She started in show business at age 6, appearing in commercials and dancing ballet.

Duff's film debut was in "Casper Meets Wendy," in 1998. She also appeared in a CBS film, "Soul Collector." Duff is featured in the upcoming films "Human Nature" with Patricia Arquette and Disney's "Cadet Kelly."

LONDON — Prince Charles praised the "wisdom" and "experience" of older generations and said he learned a lot from his grandmother, the Queen Mother Elizabeth.

"I certainly know all my life I've benefited enormously from the wisdom and experience of older people," the prince said Thursday at an award ceremony organized by the charity Age Concern.

The prince paid tribute to 200 people, all over age 50, whom the charity honored Thursday for organizing projects across Britain that benefit young people. Initiatives included a sewing group, an art workshop, an Antarctic expedition and a summer sailing school.

"I do hope and believe the lasting benefit of these skills will rebuild some of the trust and understanding and remind young people their elders, and many ways their betters, do have experience and wisdom to pass on," Charles said.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Nov. 24, 2001:
Often this year, you will not reveal all that you think or feel. Your family and private life develop greater significance. Express your depth and caring to those you can trust. If single, you will want a special relationship yet opening up to the right person could be challenging. You will attract someone who is emotionally unavailable. If attached, your partner could feel as if you are withdrawing. PISCES understands you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Schedule today alone with a loved one. Don't be the gregarious Ram, inviting others to join you. Dote on this person as if he is the only person in the world. You get the same in return when you need it. Let the courtship begin. Tonight: A quiet dinner far away from others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Friendship abounds between you and another. If single, this person might want more than being just a pal. Think in terms of whether you want the same as well. Laugh along with a friend or loved one; enjoy the moment. Tonight: Where the party is.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Your caring comes out in many ways. Don't think that a gift must be just that. Sometimes choosing an action type of experience can make an even better present: Be open to another's suggestions. Don't make anything difficult, rather, see how you can make things easy! Tonight: Your treat.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ Your softer side emerges with a child or loved one. Dote on someone, and let feelings emerge. You might want to be spontaneous or do something very special. Don't worry about ramifications, just express your loving friendship. Tonight: Playful, aren't we?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Your positive energy and caring ways draw out a partner, friend or family member. Deal with this person as if he were your best friend. Before you know it, new trust and caring build within this relationship. Buy flowers or something special for a parent. Tonight: Reveal what is on your mind.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Others seek you out. When you hear from that special someone, let him know how very pleased you are. Make plans to get together. Wherever you are, you let go and enjoy the moment. You could have a close-to-perfect day. Tonight: Hang out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Make a list before you go out; otherwise, you could overspend. Getting a head start on the holidays is one thing, depleting your checking account is another. Know that there are many types of gifts that could please others. Tonight: Be a couch potato.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Your smile thaws out someone who could be a bit uptight. You have had difficulties with this person recently. Make light and allow the mood of the moment to float through. Express your feelings in a neutral manner to a child or friend. Tonight: Play away.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You have a special glow in your eyes that tells much more than you want to reveal. You might do well to curl up with a good book or vanish if you don't want to let the cat out of the bag. Share your authentic feelings. Avoid games. Tonight: Stay close to home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Something you have always wanted could happen; just relax and ask for it. Others remain highly responsive to your suggestions and direction. Talk about your long-term desires. Someone works well with you, and with him, anything is possible. Tonight: At a favorite spot.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ There is something special on your mind that you want to do for someone. Check out different possibilities and price this idea. Though you believe it is achievable, you might want to work overtime or make an effort to tame your budget during the next few weeks. Tonight: Treat another to a back rub.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Your positive attitude and emotional generosity pay off. Detach when a loved one expresses his feelings. Though his words might not be yours, he does have a lot to share. Take a drive together and visit a place that is special to both of you. Tonight: Enjoy a play or concert.

Bird lovers urge homeowners to plant native

By Lynn Brezosky
Associated Press

AP Photo
Janice Bowman gazes out the window of Barbara Kennett's home in South Padre Island. Bowman, a Minnesota resident who is a participant in the Rio Grande Valley Birding Festival, was bird watching in the Kennett home because it was opened up to a tour group with the festival.

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND — The birds set out north each year from the tropics of Mexico and Central America, sometimes braving storms that blow across the Gulf of Mexico. By the time they reach the Texas coastline, they're hungry and their feathers are heavy with salt.

Even a few decades ago, this narrow barrier island would have been a tangle of native vegetation trapping accidental pools of rainfall — a welcome expanse of food, cover and water to bathe.

But beachfront development has taken over. Now many of the exhausted birds risk dropping into lots of mowed imported grass where they are prey for feral cats.

As one of thousands of American homeowners who have created a "backyard wildlife habitat," Barbara Kennett has come to the rescue. Her 50-by-100-foot lot is an oasis of overgrown native flora, faux ponds and thoughtfully scattered meal worms and caterpillar larvae.

"The birds have been coming here for thousands of years," Kennett said. "They expect to find native plants and there aren't enough because landscapers don't use them."

The retired Los Angeles police officer has spent more than five years on the project. She has scoured South Texas in search of native plants and trees. A hired gardener helped the 78-year-old Kennett dig shallow pools to be lined and filled with decorative rocks, lily pads and small water pumps.

The rewards are plentiful.

The trees, flowering plants, ponds and bird feeders create a miniature jungle. During 90 minutes of coffee sipping in the back room one morning, Kennett and visiting Midwestern birders identified 72 species through the window panes.

Nationally known photographers have shot pictures through her windows. Her walls are lined with their photos: a painted bunting in its red, green and blue; a green violet-ear hummingbird; a Harris's sparrow; even the rose-breasted grosbeak that made the cover of Birder's World magazine.

Birding tours regularly spin through her home during the fall and spring migrations, making her whole house a "bird blind" for photographers. One man drove straight down from Ohio to glimpse a certain hummingbird. He missed it by a day.

Homeowners across the nation increasingly are creating such wildlife habitats to help replace disappearing ones, National Wildlife Federation spokesman Phil Kavits said. On Oct. 31, the NWF "certified" a restored Iowa prairie as its 30,000th backyard wildlife habitat.

"People make a commitment to make a place for wildlife where they live, work or go to school," Kavits said. "They're really allowing wildlife to share their world with them."

To get started, experts suggest visiting public libraries, most of which offer information on native flora and birds, and much is available on the Internet. State wildlife agencies and local Audubon Society chapters are sources as well.

For some, the difficulty is neighbors, who may balk at anything jungle-like.

Aside from a "don't litter" sign she got in response to some storm-blown palm fronds, Kennett has never been challenged by the city.

Still, she said has been fighting City Hall for 15 years.

"They put through more anti-bird ordinances than you'd believe," she said. "The Realtors want the island to look nice and manicured. All they can think about is the money in Spring Break."

DART claims state agency protection in lawsuit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charles Etta Williams pays 1 percent sales tax to support Dallas Area Rapid Transit, so she is puzzled that DART is arguing it is a state agency to fight her age discrimination lawsuit.

"I would expect it to be local," said Williams, a former DART manager.

DART, a public transportation agency that serves 13 North Texas communities, is arguing in filings with the U.S. Supreme Court that it is an arm of the state. DART argues that it is protected by the U.S. Constitution's 11th Amendment from being sued in federal court on age employment discrimination.

"We believe it's set forth by the state Legislature. We've been recognized before as a state entity in the northern district of Texas," said Patricia Reed, an attorney for DART. She refused further comment.

The Supreme Court could decide next week whether to hear the case. If it does, its ruling would add to a body of recent decisions that have reshaped federal-state governments' relationship. If the court passes on the case, a 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision that DART is indeed a local entity will stand and Williams could take her suit to trial.

"This is really a case about the fact that not everyone is entitled to immunity, so where do you draw the line?" said Bill Isbell, Williams' Dallas attorney.

How far the federal government's power should extend over states is a key issue in DART's case. In recent rulings, the Supreme Court has limited citizens' ability to sue state governments under federal employment statutes.

Most recently, in three separate cases from Florida and Alabama, the court said Congress exceeded its authority by allowing state employees to sue states in federal court over age bias.

The court said the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 cannot trump states' 11th Amendment immunity against being sued in federal courts.

Reed, the DART attorney, said Williams' lawsuit is the first age discrimination case litigated by the agency since that ruling. She would not say how DART treated previous cases.

Williams sued DART in 1998 after she lost her job in agency-wide layoffs. Williams alleged DART found jobs for other younger, less qualified workers, and filled her job with someone younger.

The district court dismissed her lawsuit, deciding that DART is an instrument of the state of Texas and entitled to 11th Amendment immunity.

The 5th Circuit overturned that decision this year. Using a checklist established in a 1986 case against Tarrant County. The appeals court said DART does not meet the criteria for being considered a state agency. Most important, the appeals court said, is the source of DART's money.

DART's total budget for 2002 is $606 million. It collected $357 million from the 1-cent sales tax in the fiscal year that ended in September, said DART spokesman Morgan Lyons. The tax is levied on certain purchases by communities DART serves. DART also receives federal funds and money from passenger fares and bond revenues, but does not receive any state appropriated money.

The appeals court also noted that DART does not serve the entire state and that an executive committee that oversees DART operations is comprised of members appointed by the communities served by DART.

In its petition to the Supreme Court, DART said that the transit agency was created under state statute intended to address the state's transportation needs.

WORLD IN BRIEF

■ Two men killed in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH — Two young men were shot and killed early Friday morning outside an apartment complex in north Fort Worth, police said.

Authorities were investigating the crime and had not identified any suspects as of Friday afternoon, said Lt. Duane Paul of the Fort Worth Police Department.

Police did not immediately release the identities of the victims, who were returning home from visiting a family member in the hospital Thursday evening.

The Tarrant County Medical Examiner's Office identified one of the victims as Martin Lopez, 21.

Neighbors reported hearing screeching tires about 1:30 a.m. Friday. Family members discovered the bodies in the street at about 3 a.m., authorities said.

■ Man indicted for deaths

FORT WORTH — An Arlington man has been indicted on capital murder charges in the August shooting deaths of his estranged wife and two stepchildren in Mansfield.

A Tarrant County grand jury returned the indictment Wednesday for Terry Lee Hankins, 27, who is being held at Tarrant County Jail on $1 million bail. He also faces charges of capital murder and murder in the slayings of his father and sister.

Prosecutors are seeking the death sentence for the Mansfield deaths.

On Aug. 29, Mansfield police discovered the bodies of Tammy Hankins, 34, and two of her children, Kevin Galley, 12, and Ashley Mason, 11. They had been shot in the head and were found inside Tammy Hankins' mobile home.

Two days later, Arlington police discovered the body of Terry Lee Hankins' father, Earnie Hankins, sitting upright in a recliner in his mobile home.

Authorities said the elder Hankins, who would have been 56 in February, died of a gunshot wound to the face, likely a year before his decomposed body was found.

Arlington police found the body of Terry Lee Hankins' half sister, Pearl "Sissy" Sevenstar, on Aug. 31. Her body was found stuffed in a plastic container covered with blankets on the seat of an abandoned car, which was parked behind an auto repair shop once owned by Earnie Hankins.

■ Company recalls cheese

MINEOLA, N.Y. — Pollio Italian Cheese Company announced a recall of certain Polly-O ricotta cheese packages and some foodservice ricotta products because of potential contamination from Salmonella bacteria.

The cheese, in 15 oz. and 3 lb. sizes, had the code date DEC-10 and was distributed through retail grocery stores and foodservice distributors primarily in 18 states.

The recall also applies to 3 lb. foodservice products with the code date DEC-10 PD1, distributed in the same states.

The states involved are Arizona, California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Maryland, Michigan, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Salmonella can cause serious and sometimes fatal infections in young children, frail or elderly people, and others with weakened immune systems.

In a statement, Pollio said the recall came after the Department of Defense contacted the company and the New York Department of Agriculture and Markets when a sample of 15 oz. Polly-O Ricotta Cheese tested positive for the bacteria.

Lawmakers question sexual assault statistics

HOUSTON (AP) — Wide discrepancies between state and federal reports on sexual assaults has prompted Texas House Speaker Pete Laney to urge state legislators to study the statistics and perhaps change the way the information is accumulated..

In the most recent Uniform Crime Report, compiled by the Texas Department of Public Safety, there were an estimated 7,629 sexual assaults committed in Texas in 1999.

But the national crime victims center at Medical University of South Carolina puts that number at 104,516.

UCR data is based on information from 956 Texas sheriffs and chiefs of police, while the national data is based on national random surveys about crime and 2000 Census data for Texas.

Laney, D-Hale Center, asked the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee earlier this month to study the manner in which sexual assaults are reported by different groups.

Ellen Cohen, president of the Houston Area Women's Center, said many of the women counseled by the center choose not to report their sexual assaults.

"Clearly the numbers that are reported do not indicate the number of sexual assault survivors," Cohen told the Houston Chronicle for Friday's editions.

Laney also told another group of lawmakers, the House Judicial Affairs Committee, to study the feasibility of creating a statewide sexual assault prevention program.

Both committees will report to the Legislature in January 2003 any suggestions for changes in the law.

"We are very pleased that Speaker Laney recognizes the importance of dealing with the silent crime of rape," said Sherry Boyles, executive director of the Texas Association Against Sexual Assault. "We look forward to working with legislators to examine these critical aspects of the fight to end sexual violence in Texas."

There are two problems with the DPS crime statistics, said Ron Acierno, an assistant professor with the National Crime Victims Research and Treatment Center at Medical University in South Carolina.

"First, a person actually has to report it to the police. And we know that only about one out of eight rapes is reported," Acierno said. "Step two, the police actually have to believe the person. It's always a subjective evaluation on the part of a police officer about whether an event occurred."

Police are likely to be most skeptical about date rapes and spousal rapes, Acierno said.

And there are many other limitations to collecting sexual assault data.

Texas and California have unique reporting problems related to their large population of Mexican immigrants, Acierno said. Language barriers, cultural factors and fear of deportation mean Hispanics may be even less likely to report sexual assault.

Chris Lippincott, a spokesman for TAASA, said rural communities also may have lower reporting, possibly because of the stigma still attached to being a rape victim.

Low-income women have a greater risk of sexual assault and also are less likely to go to police.

Women are more likely to report sexual assaults by strangers than ones by a family member or acquaintance. Studies have shown 7 out of 10 sexual assault victims knew their perpetrators.

Lippincott said TAASA likely will ask lawmakers to conduct a study of sexual assaults in Texas.

"No estimate based on national surveys can replace a study in Texas. We need to know how substantial the underreporting problem is," he said.

Cohen said more accurate statistics could improve funding for sexual assault prevention and treatment programs.

Longtime federal judge, WWII veteran dies

Belew

DALLAS (AP) — A longtime federal judge, who was one of the first soldiers to storm the beach at Normandy and presided over the longest aviation trial in history, has died after a long illness. He was 81.

Family and friends remember David O. Belew Jr. as a "warm and compassionate human being" who wanted "everyone to feel comfortable in his courtroom."

Belew retired in 1995, 16 years after President Jimmy Carter appointed him to the Fort Worth bench in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas.

His best-known case was a 14-month civil trial resulting from the 1985 crash of Delta Air Lines Flight 191.

The crash at Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport killed 137 people. He listened to weeks of testimony, reviewed thousands of documents, and even flew the same route himself during the trial before ruling that Delta Air Lines alone was legally responsible for the crash.

His ruling closed the door on the airline's attempt to recoup some of the $100 million it spent in settlements and judgments by suing the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Weather Service.

Delta appealed the ruling all the way up to the U.S. Supreme Court, but Belew's decision was upheld.

"I think it was a positive thing for him, because I believe he exhausted every effort that he could to come to what he thought was the right decision," his widow, Joetta S. Belew, told The Dallas Morning News for Friday's editions. "Once he came to that decision, he was comfortable with that."

Dee Kelly, a Fort Worth lawyer and longtime friend of the judge, said that Belew "tried to help defendants where he thought they could be helped."

"In that regard, he was pretty different than most," Kelly said.

Belew was born in Fort Worth on March 27, 1920. His father, David O. Belew Sr., was a Fort Worth lawyer.

Belew attended Texas Christian University in Fort Worth and the University of Texas at Austin before joining the Army in 1942.

Like his father, he served in the Army's 90th Infantry Division, rising to the rank of captain. He was wounded at least three times once seriously and received the Silver Star, three Purple Hearts and five Battle Stars.

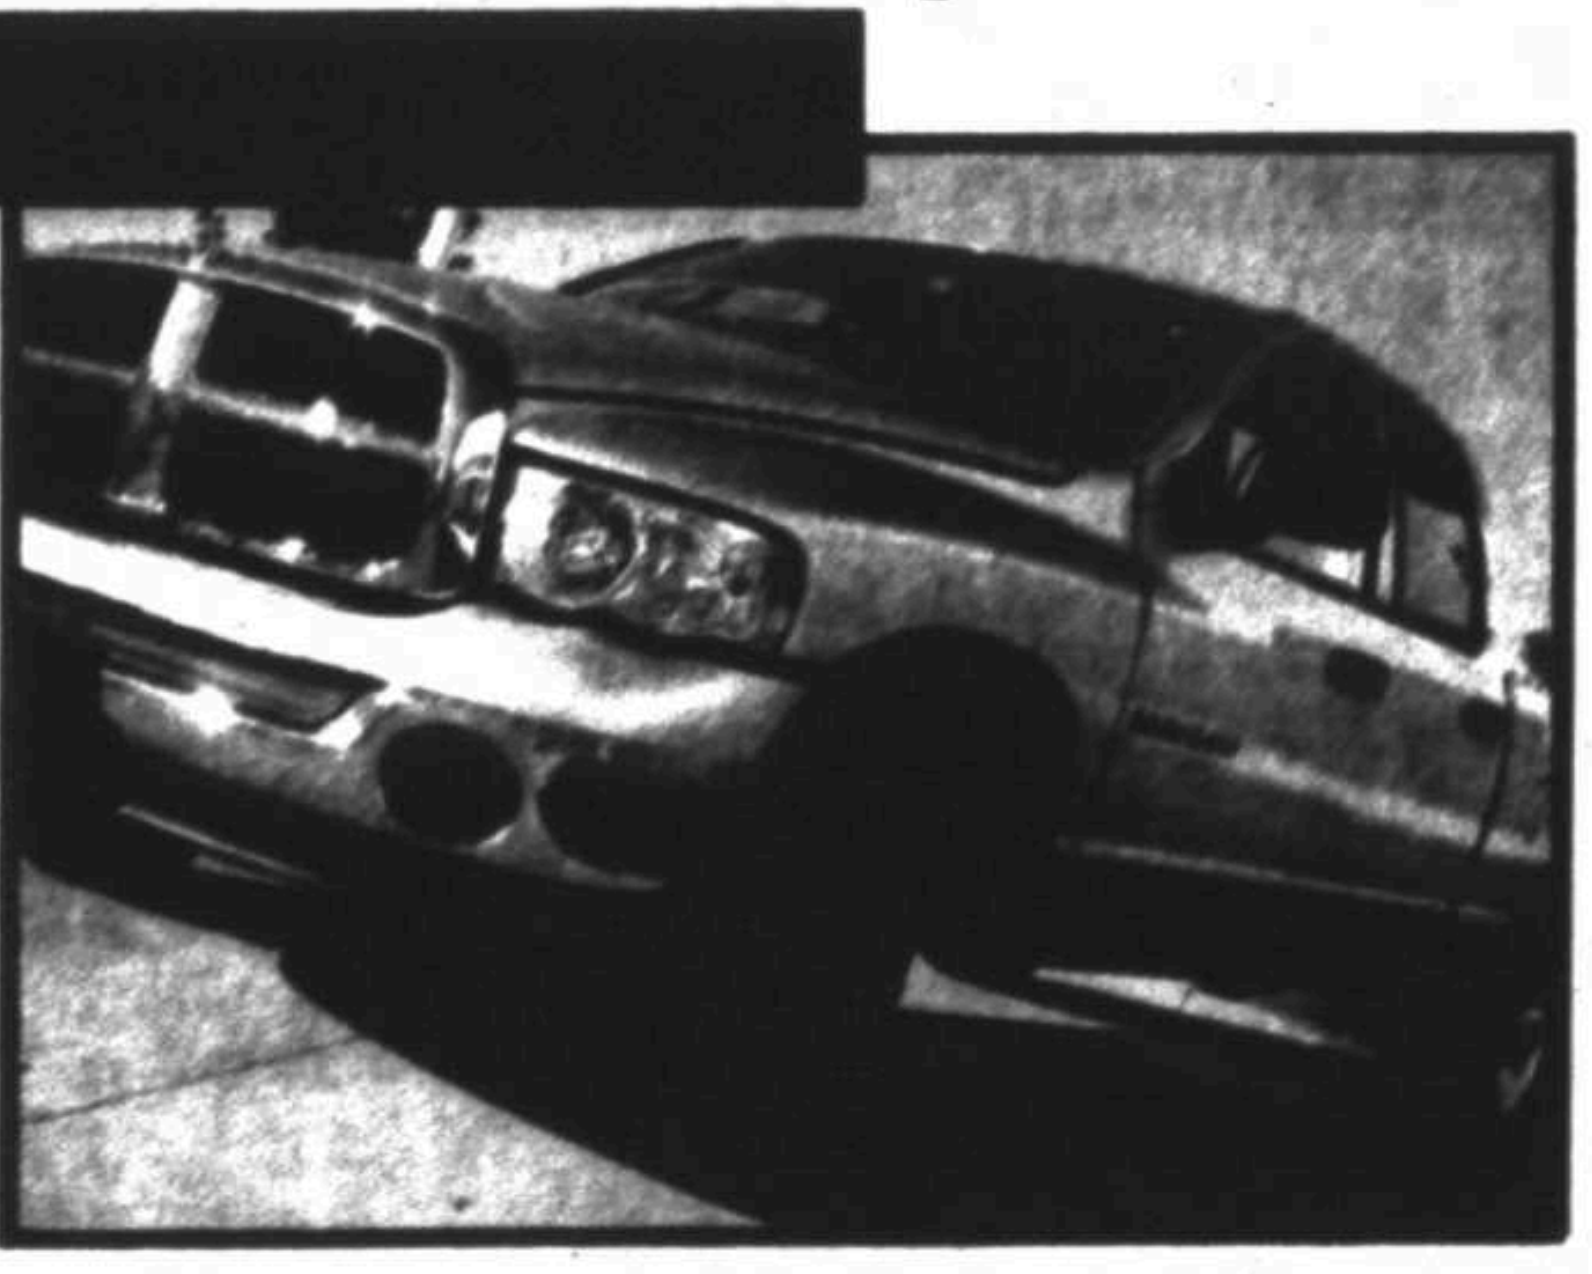
Big & burly:
2002 Dodge Ram 1500 Pickup

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.



Big, aggressive, handsome, roomy, proud, American. The new mayor of Truckville wants you! Against the current backdrop of global uncertainty, Dodge rolls out its all-new Ram – a bold statement on four wheels. Nothing shouts American to the world as much as the pickup truck. And nothing is as visually big and bold as the new Dodge. This truck is so bold, the previous truck looks conservative by comparison. Drivers of the new Ram will not be mistaken for anything else on the road – nor will they be readily ignored.

As rugged as the American West and as handsome as a real cowboy, the Ram started appearing on the ground across America late this summer. The automaker will have a staggered roll-out of the Ram – the 1500 (1/2-ton) models first – the 3/4 and 1-ton models will debut in the 2003 model year.

Built at the automaker's assembly plants in St. Louis, Mo., Warren, Mich., and Saltillo Mexico, the Dodge Ram is available in regular and Quad Cab body styles, full-size 8' or 6' 3" cargo box sizes and two- or four-wheel drive. Trim level offerings include ST, SLT, Sport and SLT Plus. The keywords for "Hizzoner" are "more and better."

The Quad cab models now have four full-sized doors. Engines are larger and more powerful. Brakes are larger. Available tires are larger – 17 and 20 inch – and overall build quality is markedly improved. The exterior sheetmetal is more of the "big rig" look that Dodge pioneered with the introduction of the previous generation Ram pickup during 1994 model year.

Engine choices offer two all-new engines to the lineup – the 3.7L Magnum V6 and the 4.7L Magnum V8. Consumers that desire a larger engine to go with their big truck can opt for the traditional favorite – the 5.9L V8. The heavy-duty NV 3500 five-speed manual gearbox is standard while the new 45RFE (3.7L/4.7L) multi-speed overdrive automatic or 46RE four-speed electronically controlled automatic (5.9L) are $975 additional.

On the road, the ($595) optional 5.9L V8 performs smoothly and powerfully. While the new Ram is a no-excuses truck built for work, Dodge engineers removed the harshness – thanks in part to a much stiffer chassis featuring a hydroformed front structure. The independent suspension system features heavy-duty shock absorbers, stabilizer bar, coil springs (4x2) and torsion bar (4x4) in the front and heavy-duty shock absorbers and longitudinal leaf springs in the rear.

Inside, the cabin is a poor man's Disneyland. There is so much to be had – room, storage, flexibility and equipment, there is not enough space to attempt even a basic description here. Displays and controls are large and easy to read/use, and the driver enjoys a commanding view of the landscape – from every angle. Seating is comfortable – good cushion and plenty of room for all comers. Short and tall drivers will find the new Dodge Ram an accommodating place for long trips.

Thoughtful touches like grocery bag hooks and a flat-loading steel floor make the big truck convenient for the short trips common in the daily dispatch. In short, living rooms should be so friendly. Now if only there was a place in the truck for a big screen TV.....

Ratings & specifications

Engine performance numbers are as follow: 3.7L V6 – 210 hp at 5,200 rpm and 230 lb-ft of torque at 4,000 rpm; 4.7L V8 – 235 hp at 4,800 rpm and 295 lb-ft of torque at 3,200 rpm; 5.9L V8 – 245 hp at 4,000 rpm and 335 lb-ft of torque at 3,200 rpm.

EPA fuel economy numbers range from 16 city/21 highway for the 3.7L V6 to 12 city/16 highway for the 5.9L V8. All three engines use regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are clearly marked and easily accessible. Properly equipped, the Dodge Ram 1500 pickup has a maximum payload of 1,850 pounds and a towing capacity of 8,650 pounds.

Standard safety/security equipment includes dual front airbags, side-impact steel beams, four-wheel disc brakes and rear-wheel anti-lock brakes with electronic variable brake proportioning. Optional safety/security equipment includes side curtain airbags ($390), limited slip rear axle ($285), fog lights ($140) four-wheel anti-lock brakes ($495) and power adjustable pedals ($120).

The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the all-new 2002 Dodge Ram 1500 pickup starts at $16,955 for the two-wheel drive regular cab up to $25,680 for the four-wheel drive Quad cab model. Destination charges add $715. Dealers report improving supplies of the new Ram pickup. There are no rebates.

Professional grade comfort:
2002 GMC Sonoma Crew Cab

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Meet the new flagship of the Sonoma lineup: the four-door, four-wheel drive Crew Cab. Added to the Sonoma roster last year, it provides a whole new dimension of versatility, durability and spaciousness. The new Crew Cab offers sedan-like amenities with the flexibility of a pickup – designed to carry five adults in relative comfort.

Since its last major redesign in 1995, the Sonoma story has been one of product evolution. An inside and out freshening during the 1998 model year has aligned the small truck's identity with the larger Sierra pickup. With its rugged good looks and improved structure, this compact pickup works and plays hard. Sharing its exterior dimensions with the Sonoma extended cab model, the Crew Cab rides on a 122.9 inch wheelbase and has an overall length of 205.3 inches.

Manufactured in the automaker's Linden, N.J., assembly plant, the Sonoma Crew Cab is available in SLS trim and equipped with four-wheel drive. Power is generated by the L35 Vortec 4300 V-6 engine and transferred to the ground via the silky smooth 4L60-E four-speed electronic automatic with overdrive and torque converter. No other drivetrain is offered.

On the road, the smooth running powertrain turns in a powerful, safe and sure performance. Suspension hardware includes upper and lower control arms, torsion bars and a 25 mm anti-roll bar in the front. Rear suspension hardware consists of a traditional two-stage, variable rate multi-leaf suspension with a semifloating axle in order to manage ride quality when the specially designed short bed cargo box is fully loaded or empty.

The Sonoma Crew Cab is equipped with the Z85 Increased Capacity/Firm Ride Package suspension. This setup is recommended for heavy-duty hauling and trailering and can be used on paved or gravel roads. Technical features of the Z85 include 5,150 GVWR, 32 mm twin tube shock absorbers, 28 mm front anti-roll bar and P235/75R15 tires.

Inside the cabin, there is a full complement of analog displays and controls. Water and motor oil temperature gauges join the speedometer, tach, fuel, volts, odometer and trip odometer to provide an excellent, well laid out format that is easy to use. Outward visibility is top notch. The cargo box features a standard factory bedliner! A rear chrome bumper and full size spare tire are also standard equipment.

Ratings & specifications

Engine performance numbers are 190 hp at 4,400 rpm and 250 lb-ft of torque at 2,800 rpm. EPA fuel economy figures are 15 city/18 highway using regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are easily accessible and clearly marked. Properly equipped, the GMC Sonoma Crew Cab has a maximum payload of 1,111 pounds and can tow a trailer with a maximum weight of 5,200 pounds.

Standard safety equipment includes dual front airbags, four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock, side impact door beams, programmable door locks, fog lamps, automatic headlamp control, front tow hooks, PassLock theft deterrent system, daytime running lights and limited slip rear differential.

The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the 2002 GMC Sonoma Crew Cab pickup starts at $24,273. Destination charge adds $585.
