Irish Catholics react with renewed violence

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British troops and police fired regular ammunition and plastic bullets to quell rioters in Belfast's Roman Catholic districts in a second round of clashes today after jailed IRA guerrilla Bobby Sands died in the 66th day of his hunger strike. At least 10 people were injured, three of them seriously, authorities said.

New violence flared in Catholic strongholds of Belfast as word came that up to 100 of the 440 jailed Irish Republican Army guerrillas might join the hunger strike by three of their comrades at the Maze Prison outside Belfast.

In the British House of Commons this afternoon, legislators greeted the announcement of Sands' death in silence. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher declared Britain would never grant jailed IRA men political status "no matter how many hunger strikes there may be." Leaders of the opposition Labor Party backed her stand.

Earlier today, Catholic housewives banged out a requiem for Sands with the lids of their garbage cans as the death of the IRA hunger striker elected to the British Parliament set off several hours of violence in Catholic districts of Belfast and Londonderry.

"This is about what we expected," a police spokesman said. "We are prepared for it."

The 27-year-old IRA guerrilla died at 1:17 a.m. in the 66th day of his fast demanding that the British government give imprisoned IRA members the special political-prisoner privileges it took away from them in 1976.

Sands had been an unknown prisoner for most of his nine years in the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing, with no notable military exploits to his credit. But when he died on a prison hospital waterbed with a golden crucifix from Pope John Paul II in his emaciated hand, he became for supporters of the IRA and many other Catholics the newest martyr in their cause W the unification of the Protestant-dominated British province of Northern Ireland with the mostly Catholic Irish Republic.

Meanwhile, the IRA's fight for the special privileges Sands did not win was carried on by three other hunger strikers in the Maze. Visitors said one of them, Francis Hughes, 25, was within days of death after 52 days without food. Two other guerrillas in the 45th day of their fast were in less serious condition.

Despite pleas for calm from Catholic leaders and Sands' family, three days of mourning ordered by the IRA began with rioting by roving bands rampaging through the dark streets of Belfast and Londonderry, the province's two biggest cities.

Hundreds of extra police were deployed in the battle-scarred Catholic districts of West Belfast and Londonderry, intent on keeping the rioters from spilling over into neighboring Protestant districts and setting off a backlash by the extremists of the Protestant Ulster Defense Association.

The initial wave of violence ended at dawn, and the Protestants were not involved. Catholic rioting began again hours later, and the Provisional Sinn Fein, the political front of the outlawed IRA, announced that up to 100 of the jailed guerrillas in Maze were considering a mass hunger strike.

In the second round of clashes with police, gangs threw up street barricades and hurled bombs and bottles at security forces, who retaliated with plastic bullets and some regular ammunition, officials said.

An army spokesman said one man was shot in the hip when a patrol fired two shots because "soldiers were in danger of being engulfed in flames by petrol bombers." A 7-year-old girl was hit in the head by a flying brick.

A milkman and his 16-year-old son were critically injured when their milk truck careened into a utility pole as stone-throwing youths attacked, evidently wanting the bottles for use as firebombs. Police said a woman storekeeper was severely burned when rioters bombed a bakery and the blaze spread to her adjoining dress shop.

Democrats admit they can't match Reagan's clout

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As debate gives way to action, House Democratic leaders are conceding they can't match President Reagan's lobbying clout and lack the votes to block the administration's budget cuts.

"It's a little bit like going into the ring and the other guy has got brass knuckles and all you've got is 16-ounce gloves," said House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas. "We don't have any rewards to bestow, favors to withhold or punishment to mete out....

"The speaker (of the House) and the majority leader do not have anything except a hunting license to persuade, and we've been trying with varying degrees of success," Wright said Monday in an address to the National Press Club.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. was more direct.

"Am I getting commitments? The answer is no, to be truthful on the thing," the Massachusetts Democrat said. "Have I got disappointments? The answer is yes."

The House was moving toward votes late today on amendments to a budget blueprint, with a final vote expected Wednesday.

In the Republican-controlled Senate, debate begins Wednesday or Thursday on a similar administration-backed plan approved by the Senate Budget Committee.

An Associated Press survey late last week found 29 House Democrats definitely supporting the president's plan instead of their own party's alternative and at least five others leaning that way. If Republicans stay solid, a switch of 26 Democrats would be necessary to give Reagan a victory. GOP leaders say they expect only one Republican to vote against the president.

O'Neill said Monday his count showed 175 of the 242 Democrats in the House standing firm, 41 votes short of what is needed. That assessment generally matched the prediction of Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, co-author of the substitute budget plan endorsed by Reagan, that 40 to 50 Democrats will vote with the president.

But in a last-ditch move to keep potential defectors in line, House Democratic leaders argued that a vote now will lock members into budget-cutting decisions they will regret later.

Reagan, meanwhile, was working hard to seal a victory.

Two dozen congressmen, mostly Southern Democrats, met with the president Monday at the White House, a few at a time. More were to be invited today and possibly Wednesday.

Among Monday's visitors was Rep. Donald J. Albosta, D-Mich., who said he expected to vote for the administration-favored budget resolution sponsored by Gramm and Rep. Delbert L. Latta, R-Ohio. Albosta said he was "basically" persuaded to do so when "the president agreed he'd look very seriously" at the Michigan congressman's complaints that his state was treated inequitably by formulas for handing out federal funds.

Rep. William H. Boner, D-Tenn, said Reagan "tried to inform us what he was trying to do...and assure us that the problems we had (about specific appropriations) would be worked out."

In House debate Monday, however, a parade of Democratic committee chairmen argued that the administration-backed plan would force deeper cuts than those outlined in an alternative package approved earlier by the House Budget Committee.

Generally, the budget resolution merely sets guidelines for Congress to follow in making decisions on spending and taxes.

But Democratic leaders have begun focusing on the portion of the Reagan-backed plan that would mandate $36.6 billion in budget cuts next year through instructions to individual committees to trim programs under their jurisdictions by that much.

Rep. Carl D. Perkins, D-Ky., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, assailed the cuts Monday. Although he is not in full agreement with the Democratic alternative, Perkins said, "even if Tweedle-dee is only marginally better than Tweedle-dum, we are obligated to make that distinction in our votes."

But Latta responded that "your (Perkins') committee has been responsible for a lot of the explosion that has occurred in the federal budget in recent years."

In a related development, a $1 million media campaign aimed at defeating the administration's program was announced Monday by Jerry Wurf, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

MMH roles focused, fine-tuned

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a three-part series examining the new management study recently adopted by Midland Memorial Hospital to delineate powers of the governing bodies.

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

Although most hospital officials agree the new management contract between the Midland County Hospital District's board of directors and the Midland Memorial Foundation's board of trustees is a good one, few can say just how the public will notice the change.

The trustees, it seems, will continue their basic roles, only now they have a specific job description on paper. The directors will continue the roles entrusted them through 1977 legislation.

Will it change anything?

"I'm not sure it will change a lot," said Roy Campbell, chairman of the board of trustees. "It has formalized an understanding of who has what responsibilities or what type of work." He added job descriptions of each hospital official allowed for a more professional working situation. "It's usually a thing done in companies," he said, "but it just hadn't been done here."

CAMPBELL WORKED as chairman of the operations committee in implementing the earlier Tribrook Group Inc. recommendations in each department. He said he thinks the management study by the efficiency group has been just as important.

"It has helped us to get into focus, to define specific relationships," he said. "It has defined the specific role of the directors in what parts they can delegate to trustees and to committees and the president of the hospital."

Campbell said, "Each of us has to be accountable to each other. The board of directors are responsible as a whole for the overall health of the district. They delegate a portion of that responsibility to the trustees. We, in turn, act as a group rather than each of the directors or trustees acting alone, which can happen unless the roles are clearly defined," he added. Essentially, "there's a delegation of responsibility to the lowest point."

Campbell went on to say the agreement established the administrator as president and chief executive officer (CEO) of the hospital "instead of chief operational officer (COO)." The difference, he said, is a "more responsible position."

THE CEO WILL be "taking broad policies and goals of the trustees and implementing them," whereas the COO operates on the "day-to-day requests made of him." Campbell said the hospital president will be "doing more thinking ahead, planning the overall implementation and keeping the hospital in order."

In addition to the authority delegated to the board of trustees and the president of the hospital, management authority also has been distributed to trustee committees.

"Each of the trustees is assigned to certain committees of the board that monitor certain of the operations," said Ed Magruder, president of the board of directors.

City may now load up on buses

Tower reveals Transportation grant

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The Department of Transportation has awarded a mass transit grant to the city of Midland in the amount of $286,994 to be used to purchase four 15- to 20-passenger buses with wheelchair lifts, six 20-passenger buses, fare boxes and radios.

The grant was approved last Thursday and the office of U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, received notification of the grant Monday afternoon.

MidTran is the city's public transportation system that operates on the basis of subscription service in the morning and late afternoon for workers and on flex-route for midday riders. In the past few months, MidTran has been working on agreements to take over the job of providing transportation for clients of various social services agencies.

Doris Carter, acting director of MidTran, responded to news of the grant approval with "I'm thrilled. These will help us considerably for subscription, for flex-route and with the elderly and handicapped."

MidTran started with seven of the light transit buses in February 1980. With the additional buses "we won't be running as tight." All of the buses are scheduled for certain runs and on Monday, she commented, "We had one major breakdown today and we'll have to replace the motor."

The additional vehicles also will assist in coordinating more of the social services clients, according to Mrs. Carter.

John Ingram, who is on the MidTran board and was one of the major forces behind the system, said the extra vehicles are primarily to flesh out our system so we can dedicate time to more service agencies, such as Casa de Amigos and YMCA. We can serve more people through subscription and possibly handle shift changes at both hospitals (Midland Memorial and Parkview)."

However, he said all 10 buses probably won't be purchased this year. "It's not likely we'll go for all 10 buses at once," Ingram said. The city will go out for bids as "we see the growth need in our operation."

Mrs. Carter explained this grant pays 80 percent of the cost for the new buses. The state pays 13 percent and the city 7 percent.

New buses probably wouldn't be in Midland before the end of the year. She explained that the city first must advertise for bids and award a contract with one of the manufacturers. After that, it takes six to 12 months for the buses to arrive.

Ingram and Mrs. Carter noted that MidTran has been trying to cut its deficits. Mrs. Carter said that revenues had come up in the past four months and MidTran was operating at about a 58 percent deficit. This isn't much higher than the 50 percent than had been anticipated, she added.

In light of recent fare increases, Ingram pointed out that "if we're going to have a system we're going to have to pay for it. I'm pleased that the administration has seen fit to approve this," he said, referring to President Reagan's budget cut package which includes a decrease in transportation grants.

"This is an expression of their confidence in what Midland is doing," he added.

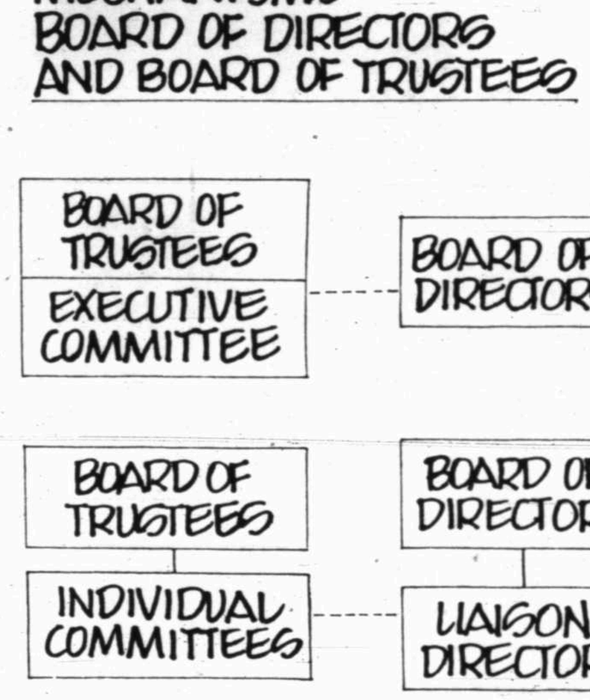
ty assurance, finance, long-range planning, joint conference and public relations — will include trustees and a director liaison. Needs and plans are established in the committees and are passed to the boards for approval.

In addition, there is an executive committee made up of chairmen of the standing committees, Campbell and Magruder. That committee will help guide the lower ones in meeting the hospital's goals.



The new management contract between the Midland County Hospital District board of directors and the Midland Memorial Foundation board of trustees clearly delineates the power structure at the hospital. The executive committee and the board of trustees answer directly to the board of directors. The board of trustees also can work through its five individual committes with a liaison director before going to the board of directors for approval.

MOST OF this, Magruder said, "has been done before in sort of a loose fashion." The operations "have not been changed a great deal," he said. However, the specifics have been changed.

"The very little difference really is the way by which we have formalized this system of reporting and communications," Magruder said, specifying monthly reports trustees must now furnish directors and the president must furnish trustees.

"We're approaching (management) on a much more professional method than before," Magruder said. Before, the boards "were trying to manage from one crisis to another. They have definite goals and objectives from which to work. It's hard to be very specific about the changes, but all of us feel a whole lot better knowing we're not going to come up to a quarter and be surprised.

"It's a whole lot better feeling when you know how you're getting along," he continued, adding it was like a pilot suddenly having a flight plan. "Now we can keep the hospital on track all the time by monitoring where we are."

DELEGATING authority to trustees and the president, he said, will "free directors to do some planning and forecasting and trying to determine what the needs of the community are going to be in two years or five years."

Hospital President Ray Branson agreed. "The role of management is now on paper and is distinctly different from the role of the trustee. The trustees are morally and legally responsible — and courts have shown this to be true — for any of the actions involved in the hospital, regardless of what they may be," Branson said.

"Part of their role is to delegate to management the responsibility and corresponding authority to see that the policies adopted by the board are carried out in full," he said.

"One reason the directors are willing to do this is that legislation gives the board of directors more than just the responsibility for management of Midland Memorial Hospital," Branson continued. "Legislation gives the board of directors the latitude to consider virtually all the health care needs of Midland County and where needs are determined to exist, they could be considered by the board of directors and where determined feasible, a plan of action could be developed for meeting those needs."

AS FOR OVERALL effectiveness of the changes, officials were hesitant to say much.

"There may not be anything noticeable to the average citizen in the community as a result of these changes," Branson said, "but if you were a director or a trustee, you would see a considerable change. This (new contract) is good for me because we do have a high-quality board of trustees and I believe that this committee structure is going to allow each trustee to use his or her interests and skills to help the hospital fulfill its mission in a more quality way."

Magruder said he believed the hospital's goals would not change, however, there would be more efficient management as a result of the new contract. "There's not going to be a great deal of difference except now we are actually doing it," Magruder said. "We're moving ahead and monitoring our progress on a monthly basis by keeping between these guidelines, so we're not way out of balance.

"I definitely do believe there will be some change," he continued. "This is a much more efficient and effective method of running the hospital than we've ever had before."

"We've made considerable progress this past year," Campbell emphasized. "This contract will help to continue this progress. I hope (the community) has seen some improvements."

The new contract, he said, would change "not so much any one thing, but the whole system of the hospital will continue to improve. In terms of the community," Campbell continued, "they're going to feel like they have a better hospital all the way around. And we're going to continue to make the hospital a better hospital."

Storm brings rain, wind, hail to Permian Basin towns

A thunderstorm with rain, high winds and some hail raked the area late Monday and early Tuesday, resulting in precipitation amounts as much as 1.15 inches.

The National Weather Service west of Midland received an official .99 of an inch as the storm struck the Tall City shortly after 11 p.m. A location at Garfield and Neely received 1.15 inches of rain with marble-size hail, while northwest Midland received .81 inch of rainfall and southwest .93 inch.

Rain flooded the streets in Big Lake, according to the Reagan County Sheriff's Department, while other area towns recording precipitation include Andrews, .32; Lamesa, trace; Rankin, trace; and Big Spring and Stanton, showers.

More rainfall is likely, with a 40 per cent probability tonight and a 30 per cent probability Wednesday, according to the NWS.

Monday's high of 86 fell far short of the record 103 mark set in 1947. A slight cooling trend is in the forecast for tonight, although the mercury should again surge into the 80s Wednesday.

A slow moving cold front triggered showers and thunderstorms, some quite heavy, early today in North Central Texas and Southwest Texas.

Flash flood warnings were issued for an area near San Angelo during the night and high water was reported over U.S. 70 near Crowell in Foard County early today.

Department of Energy files air quality permit application

SANTA FE (AP) — The U.S. Department of Energy has filed a modified application for an air quality permit to begin construction at the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant site near Carlsbad, a state Environmental Improvement Division spokesman said.

Doug Barber said the state granted the DOE an air quality permit in June 1980, but the federal agency since has altered its estimates of the amount of emissions that will be released during the construction phase of the project.

The DOE intends to accelerate its work schedule because of delays in beginning work at the site. Barber said the compressed schedule would result in higher emissions levels during initial construction.

In addition, the DOE is planning to use diesel fuel with a higher sulfur content than originally proposed, Barber said Monday.

The EID will accept public comments on the DOE's revised application until May 15, Barber said.

"The division expects to issue a permit for this construction if it determines that the proposed facility will conform to state and federal air quality regulations for new sources and will not cause ambient air standards to be exceeded," Barber said.

If granted, the permit would allow the DOE to excavate 340,000 tons of rock at the site during the preliminary construction phase of the project, which is expected to take 3-4 years.

The DOE estimated maximum air pollutant emissions during the construction phase at 24 pounds per hour of particulates, 12.2 pounds per hour of sulfur oxides, 67 pounds per hour of nitrogen oxides, 6.71 pounds per hour of hydrocarbons and 40.7 pounds per hour of carbon monoxide.

Air pollution control methods to be used at the site include water spraying of fugitive dust emissions.

Midlander faces incest charge

A 46-year-old Midland man was being held in City Jail this morning on charges of incest involving his teenage daughter.

Arvel Lee White, of 902½ W. Kentucky Ave., was arrested at his home late Monday afternoon following an investigation by city police.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bond of $20,000 on White.

White was charged with incest with his daughter, Tammy Jane White, now 18. The complaint alleges that he had sex with her from the time she was 14 years old.

Ms. White, who is seven months pregnant, was sentenced to 12 years in prison Friday after pleading guilty to injury to a child after the death of her nine-month-old infant, Misty Dawn White, on Jan. 23, 1981. The infant, who was born April 12, 1980, had been on a life support system since Jan. 8.

Originally, Ms. White was indicted for attempted murder and later re-indicted for murder, but a plea bargaining agreement brought the reduction of charges from murder to injury to a child.

Midland grocery store robber sought by police

Police today were looking for a man who walked into an eastside grocery store early Monday night, grabbed an undetermined amount of money and fled in a small gray or silver car.

An employee of the Sundown Market, 711 E. Front St., told officers the man entered the store shortly after 7 p.m. and took the money — all in $20 bills — while a clerk's back was turned.

The suspect was described as black, about 5 feet, 9 inches tall, in his late 30s or early 40s, and having short hair, a light complexion and a beard. He was wearing a light colored shirt, dark pants and a gray cap.

Meanwhile, theft and burglary complaints with total losses in excess of $8,000 were reported during the past 24 hours.

Donna Hanson of 3001 N. Midland Drive told officers Monday lawn mowers and other lawn equipment valued at $2,150 were taken from her vehicle while it was parked at the Park Place Motel, 1505 E. Front.

Mrs. Cecil Davis, 3102 Harvard Ave., said someone took $1,190 worth of assorted jewelry from a dresser drawer in her home, after apparently gaining entry through an unlocked window.

Several band instruments valued at $3,800 were reported stolen from the band room at Goddard Junior High sometime Monday afternoon, while Charles Williams of 4006 Avondale told police an ice chest, tool box and tools worth a total of $845 were removed from his vehicle, which had been parked at the Holiday Inn, 4300 W. Wall St.

Four calculators and 25-50 spiral notebooks were reported taken in a burglary at Washington Elementary School. No value was placed on the items.

Two adding machines worth $500 were said to have been stolen in a burglary of the Midland Planing Mill, 415 S. Baird St., while an employee of Ray's Machine Works at 1705 Carol Lane told officers a tool box and assorted tools valued at $400 were taken from the establishment.

And four Uniroyal tires, along with the rims, were reported taken from Berg Motor Co., 3205 W. Wall. The theft occurred sometime in the past week.

A short in an air conditioner motor caused a brief fire scare at Park Place Motel, 1505 E. Front, shortly after 6 p.m. Monday. The blaze was out when firemen arrived on the scene, but the motor was damaged.

Impeachment of judge sought

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler should be impeached, convicted and removed from the bench, a state representative says.

Rep. Ken Riley, R-Corpus Christi, told the House State Affairs Committee late Monday night that Justice — whose far-reaching civil rights, bilingual education, and prison reform decisions have angered many people — has "created numerous problems for the Texas Department of Corrections and the taxpayers."

The resolution asks the U.S. House of Representatives to impeach the judge for "abuse of power and usurping the rights of the people of Texas."

The measure also calls on the U.S. Senate to "convict and remove him (Justice) from office."

In support of the resolution, Riley read excerpts from anonymous letters from three prison officials who said Justice's ruling in the inmates' civil rights case had created problems for them.

Families of slain black children to get funds

ATLANTA (AP) — About $50,000 will be divided among the families of 26 slain young blacks this month when the Southern Christian Leadership Conference dissolves a foundation that served as a conduit for donations, an SCLC official says.

The SCLC Foundation Children's and Families Fund, founded in March, accepted $102,028 in private donations for the families of the victims in Atlanta's 21-month-old string of slayings, according to a statement from the foundation.

Since the fund started handling the money March 9, it has spent $41,306 on funeral expenses and other needs of the families, the statement said.

The co-chairman of the SCLC foundation, the Rev. John Sharp, said the fund would retain about $10,000 in case more funeral money is needed.

The rest will "be divided equally among the 26 families," he said. "That will be less than $2,000 apiece when you divide it up."

Meanwhile, attorney Mark Lane, who once represented the man convicted of killing SCLC founder Martin Luther King Jr., said Monday he is considering filing a lawsuit against the FBI on behalf of the mothers of some of the 26 victims.

The attorney said he was contacted by Venus Taylor, the mother of victim Angel Lanier, about filing a defamation suit over a statement by Mike Twibell, special agent in charge of the Macon FBI office.

Twibell told reporters last month that "some of those kids were killed by their parents."

Lane said he had met with some of the parents and as many as 10 mothers had "asked if they could join the suit."

The proposed lawsuit would seek monetary damages as well as a temporary restraining order to keep agents from speaking publicly about the cases, he said.

Lane has represented James Earl Ray, who was convicted of killing King. Lane first became well-known in 1966 when his book "Rush to Judgment" disputed the Warren Commission's conclusion that President John F. Kennedy was killed by a lone assassin.

Sharp said the SCLC foundation fund was being dissolved in part because of conflict with the Committee to Stop Children's Murders, a group started by mothers of some of the victims.

When the foundation fund was first announced, committee founder Camille Bell objected, saying, "The parents of the children who are murdered and who are missing contend that no one has the right, the authorization and the authority to collect funds for the parents except the committee that the parents themselves have set up."

The Committee to Stop Children's Murders has divided more than $15,000 in donations among the victims' relatives.

Sharp said another reason for the foundation's closing was that it was "hard for us to know when to do, what to do, for whom to do."

Ten young people have been slain here since January, nine of them victims of some form of asphyxiation. Many of the 26 victims showed no signs of struggle.

Midland to get health spa, racquetball club

Plans to build a $1.5 million racquetball club and health spa in the Western Park Plaza shopping center were announced today at a press conference.

The three general partners in the project are Jerry Apodaca, former governor of New Mexico, from Santa Fe, N.M.; William H. Jowell of Midland; and Hawkeye, Inc., owned by Ned Locario Jr. of Houston.

Apodaca, who serves as managing partner, said the facility will feature reciprocal arrangements with similar clubs throughout the Southwest.

The 16,060-square-foot club will contain ten racquetball courts, a complete physical fitness center, an indoor swimming pool, juice bar and lounge serving health drinks and snacks, and a pair of dressing rooms, each with its own sauna and whirlpool baths.

Apodaca, Locario and Jowell have organized the Midland Racquetball Club, Ltd., the partnership which will own the new club — to be called The Court House and Spa of Midland.

Of the ten racquetball courts, four will feature glass backwalls, with stadium seating for tournament viewing.

"It has been my experience that racquetball is the fastest growing sport in the country," Apodaca said. "A center of this kind will substantially satisfy the need of enthusiasts in Midland who desire to play racquetball in the atmosphere of a private club."

Apodaca is a board member of Philip Morris, Inc., and is a native of Las Cruces, N.M.

Jowell has been in the life insurance business in Midland since 1966. He also is a former director of the Texas Association of Life Underwriters. He currently is chairman of the Planning and Zoning Committee, a subdivision of the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Locario has been active in the real estate management, sales and development business for the past 16 years. In 1973, he formed Hawkeye, Inc., to invest in, sell, manage and develop real estate. In Midland, he has developed the Western State Bank building, Western Park Plaza and, currently, North Park, a 40-acre multiuse development.

"There are at present less than 10 racquetball courts in the city of Midland," the partners said in a joint statement. "The Midland area enjoys a healthy economy with the population characteristics necessary to support such a club."

Construction is under way, and completion is expected by July 15. The club's sales office should be open early in May.

The announcement was made at a noon press conference in the Midland Hilton.

Wiretap bill goes to Senate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The fate of Gov. Bill Clements' "war on drugs" wiretap bill now lies with a hostile Senate committee.

The measure passed the House on a voice vote Monday after representatives rejected amendments designed to limit the scope of the bill.

Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio, introduced an amendment mandating expiration of the wiretap law on Sept. 1, 1983, unless it is extended by the Legislature.

"I don't want the right of privacy of the people in this state to die," he said.

The amendment was defeated, 51-72, after Rep. Bennie Bock II, D-New Braunfels, said "Drug dealers would love it."

The bill would allow wiretapping or bugging with the approval of one of nine state district judges. Covert entry would be allowed to set up the taps or bugs.

A judge would have to satisfy himself that all other investigative methods had failed. The Department of Public Safety would supervise all electronic surveillance.

Garcia also attempted to remove the bill's covert entry provision, calling it "legal burglary, legal breaking and entering." The amendment was defeated 46-75.

The bill now goes to the Senate Jurisprudence Committee, where chairman Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, has promised a chilly reception. But opponents of the measure fear Mauzy's opposition might not be enough to block passage.

The bill, which tracks similar federal legislation, contains some safeguards. All tapped telephone calls would have to be recorded, and trial judges would receive and seal the tapes to prevent tampering. A judge could prohibit prosecutors from playing in court a tape on which innocent parties are named.

The bill provides two to 10 years in prison and up to a $5,000 fine for people who perform unauthorized electronic surveillance.

Missouri officials balk at tuition plan

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Local educators are clearly intrigued, but state officials are balking at a novel federal proposal to give free college tuition to students willing to help desegregate city and suburban public schools here.

"That's an interesting proposal," said Gary Wright, superintendent of the suburban Lindbergh School District. "I haven't seen any incentive like it."

"It's creative," said Earl Hobbs, superintendent of the Clayton School District just west of the city limits.

But state officials accused their city and federal counterparts of of being "willing to freely spend the state's money," and wondered if the proposal would discriminate against students from other Missouri towns.

The proposal — the first indication of the Reagan administration's position on forced busing — is aimed at making voluntary metropolitan desegregation appealing to parents.

It would offer free college tuition to white suburban students who agree to enroll full-time in city schools and to black city studens who enrll full-time in suburban schools.

The plan was submitted Monday to U.S. District Judge Edward L. Hungate, who is overseeing the court-ordered integration plan which last September saw the busing of 6,700 St. Louis students.

That left about 28,000 of the city's 63,000 students in overwhelmingly black schools. Seventy-eight percent of city students are black.

"This voluntary plan could substantially eliminate the racial isolation remaining in the city schools," U.S. Attorney General William French Smith said in a statement.

"No student would be required to attend any school but that to which he or she would normally be assigned," he said. "Every decision concerning the choice of schools and districts other than students' home schools and districts would be made by students and their parents."

Justice Department attorneys estimated that in the first year alone, 2,000 black St. Louis students would transfer to the suburbs and 775 white suburban students would transfer to four new city magnet schools offering specialized education.

When the plan reached high gear in the third year, it was estimated up to 8,000 black city students could be attending suburban schools.

"In this time oq rising college tuition, this should make attending the magnet schools very attractive, particularly to students who want to specialize at these schools and go on to institutions of higher learning," said Hobbs.

The proposal also was endorsed by the city school board.

Under the plan, each student would receive a half-year of free education at any state college for each year spent in a participating school. Students must meet normal requirements for admission to college.

The department estimated the plan would cost $6.2 million in the first year to establish magnet schools, operate part-time programs, pay student recruiting and counseling costs, and finance busing.

The cost of the scholarship program was not known.

All costs including transportation would be borne by the state — which already has announced its will ask the u.S. Supreme Court to overturn an order for the state to pay up to half the costs of busing city school students this year, an estimated $11 million.

Tuition at the University of Missouri-St. Louis is now $435 a semester, but the plan also would apply to vocational and technical schools, which cost less.

It wasn't clear what would happen if a student participated in the program and then failed to gain admission to the state university.

Missouri Attorney General John Ashcroft argued that the plan discriminated against students outside of St. Louis.

"They wouldn't be able to participate in this incentive program," he said. "It ... doesn't afford each student in the state a similar opportunity to obtain relief in terms of college funds."

State officials filed a proposal for voluntary pupil transfers which reljes on the attraction of magnet schools but which lacks any tuition incentive.

An introduction to that plan said the state's proposal was not as extensive as the plan put forth by the federal and city governments.

NATO allies pleased by U. S. commitment

ROME (AP) — Western European leaders say they are pleased by the U.S commitment to open talks with the Soviet Union on missile deployment in Europe and by President Reagan's personal letter to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. went a long way toward easing anxieties among the NATO allies by disclosing Monday that the United States intends to open talks with Moscow before the end of the year to limit the number of medium-range nuclear weapons stationed by the two superpowers in Europe.

Haig's announcement was made during a closed-door meeting of the foreign ministers of the 15 members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The meeting ends today with the issuance of a communique.

The secretary of state told the other foreign ministers he would have preliminary talks about the missiles with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko at the U.N. General Assembly in September. Conference sources said lower-level talks might be held earlier to establish ground rules for the negotiuations.

Some West European governments had hoped for an earlier start to the arms control talks, but most of their representatives seemed satisfied that Haig was able to go as far as he did.

To deter the 1,040 missiles the Soviets have deployed in batteries trained on Western Europe, NATO agreed in December 1979 that the United States in 1983 would begin deploying 572 cruise and Pershing II missiles in Western Europe unless the superpowers agreed otherwise before then.

Sentiment against the U.S. deployment has mushroomed in Western Europe since the NATO decision.

During the session Monday, Haig also disclosed that Reagan sent a handwritten letter to Brezhnev a few days ago.

Blood pressure drugs prompt caution

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite a trend toward aggressive treatment for any degree of high blood pressure, some doctors are recommending caution in prescribing drugs for the mildest cases.

The split emerged Monday at the opening of the National Conference on High Blood Pressure Control, a three-day gathering of doctors and health workers.

While most of those attending back the growing practice of aggressive treatment for anb elevation in blood pressure, a few doctors said they were worried that doctors and patients may rely too heavily on drugs when diet apd exercise could control the condition.

The dissenting doctors said that for patients with the very mildest cases — a diastolic blood pressure reading of between 90 and 100 — the side effects of the drugs might offset the benefit.

"The number of serious problems (with drugs) is small. But we're talking about such large numbers of people that we have to be cautious," said Dr. Norman M. Kaplan of the University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas.

A blood pressure reading of 140 over 90 is considered "normal." The 140 is the systolic blood pressure, or the reading when the heart contracts, while the 90 is diastolic pressure when the heart relaxes.

An estimated 60 million Americans have blood pressure over this "normal" figure.

Most doctors say all these people should be treated by any means that work. Studies have shown that lowering even modest high blood pressure reduces the risk of strokes, heart attacks and other blood pressure-related diseases.

Patients are usually advised first to try to lower blood pressure by cutting back on salt, eating properly, losing weight and exercising. If these fail, doctors turn to drugs.

But most of the drugs have side effects ranging frov fatigue to potassium loss to a decrease in heart output, Kaplan said.

He said that for people with a diastolic pressure between 90 and 100, drug treatment should be used sparingly unless there are other factors — smoking, obesity or high cholesterol levels — that make the person a possible candidate for circulatory disease.

Dr. Gerald E. Thomson of Harlem Hospital said a large Australian blood pressure study released last year showed that drug-treated patients had more health problems than those whose blood pressure came down without drugs. The Australians are reviewing their data to see whether it was just a statistical fluke, he said.

U.S. still actively considering giving aid to Pakistan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, although omitting military aid to Pakistan from its fiscal 1982 budget, still is actively considering the assistance as part of a five-year program to aid that country in the face of a perceived Soviet threat, U.S. officials say.

The aid was omitted from the budget after Pakistan agreed that there was not enough time to adequately consider just how it should be structured, said the officials, who asked not to be identified.

They said Pakistan acted responsibly in deciding to discuss the military aid question in detail rather than insisting that the deal be sealed in time to meet rapidly approaching congressional deadlines on the budget.

"They said they were willing to accept not being in the '82 budget for the sake of sober, extensive consultations," one official said. "They were willing to accept the slippage of another fiscal year."

The officials said, however, that the aid still was under active consideration in light of the 85,000 Soviet troops stationed in Afghanistan, across the border from Pakistan.

It was announced April 30 that $100 million in economic aid for Pakistan would be included in the 1982 budget, and a State Department spokesman said at the time that Congress eventually would be asked to approve additional economic assistance.

Former President Carter's original offer of $400 million over two years was rejected by Pakistani President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq as "peanuts."

The Reagan package is said to envision assistance of about $2.5 billion over five years.

Pakistani Foreign Minister Agha Shahi said in Washington last month that the important difference between the Carter and the Reagan proposals isn't the amount as much as the five-year commitment.

One official said leaks and public discussions of the Carter offer before it was officially made soured the atmosphere and "raised hackles" even though no one was particularly to blame.

"They did not have the feeling we were prepared to go the distance, regardless of how sticky things might become," the official said.

State Department officials familiar with the U.S.-Pakistan discussions said the groundwork now has been laid for those more extensive aid requests.

However, they acnowledged that difficulties could arise over that aid unless Congress decides to waive legislation which bars such assistance if the recipient nation does not place its nuclear facilities under international safeguards.

Pakistan is widely rumored to be working on a nuclear device, and the official acknowledged that the entire situation would change dramatically if the country actually detonates a nuclear explosion.

"We have made them quite aware of the fact that an explosion of an actual device would turn things upside down," the official said. He said Pakistan insists it is not planning on building a nuclear bomb but continues to maintain it cannot accept safeguards while India refuses to accept them.

Reagan may send helicopters to Guatemala

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration may be willing to send helicopters and other aid to Guatemala to resist what is being labeled as a communist-armed "major insurgency," a State Department official says.

John A. Bushnell, acting assistant secretary of state, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Monday that Guatemala has not requested the aid but has "made feelers" for helicopters and spare parts.

"I think given the extent of the insurgency and the strong communist worldwide support for it, the administration is disposed to support Guatemala," Bushnell said.

Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., said Guatemalan officials told him and two other senators two weeks ago that they might request $2 million to $2.5 million in U.S. "non-lethal" military aid.

Bushnell said Guatemala is stronger than some of its neighbors and communist support of the insurgency there is small compared with El Salvador.

"On the other hand," he said, "it is very difficult for any small country ... to withstand a massive assault supplied by training and material from one of the superpowers and its assistants without help from the other."

Bushnell said the fighting in Guatemala has escalated to ambushes and "active combat" between guerrillas and military units. He said violence there has reached the level of violence in El Salvador a year ago.

"There is a major insurgency under way in Guatemala," Bushnell said. "The level of the insurgency has picked up substantially over the last 18 months.

"We have identified arms moving there from the worldwide communist network," Bushnell said.

Some of Guatemala's guerrilla leaders have been trained in Cuba in the last year or two, he said, and "are having more success in organizing insurgency in the rural areas."

"If this situation continues and accelerates, it will present a major problem," he said. "But I would not anticipate, at least in the short run, that this will resemble the order of magnitude that they are now providing to El Salvador."

Guatemala gets U.S. economic aid but has not received U.S. military aid since 1977, after Congress passed a law prohibiting aid to countries that treat their people inhumanely.

Bushnell said the military aid was not cut off to Guatemala. He said that country refused to accept further military aid because of the human rights condition.

Bushnell also said U.S. economic aid to El Salvador may have to be increased above the $91 million requested for the 1982 fiscal year starting Oct. 1, but he did not say by how much.

"If there is not an economic resurgence (after violence subsides)," he said, "this will be a big trump card to the communists."

The outlook brightens

Every time an American president completes his first 100 days in office, it's tradition that Americans analyze his performance, inevitably comparing it with that of predecessors and judging — as near as is humanly possible — what the remaining three years and so many months will be like.

Realistically, the first three months of a presidential term is not an appropriate standard by which to judge a chief executive's performance any longer. At some point in the nation's history, when events took place on a slower timetable and life was, perhaps, a bit more casual, the first 100 days probably was a good measuring stick.

Today, an American president is expected to hit the ground running and to bring about changes so dramatic, so far-reaching that our lifestyles are significantly altered rapidly.

President Ronald Reagan completed his first 100 days in office last week and it appears he truly has accomplished the goal of significant change. There is a new mood, a new vitality among the public, a mood sorely lacking until Mr. Reagan took office and re-inspired Americans.

That feat has been accomplished both by word and by action. Mr. Reagan's finesse at smoothing relations with the legislative branch — relations strained to the breaking point during the administration of Jimmy Carter — attest to his skill at the business of politics. His dealings with other heads of state artfully combine the qualities of strength, leadership and compassion so necessary to successful diplomacy.

This isn't to imply that Mr. Reagan has not suffered from shortcomings during his initial three months; he has. And there have been glaring errors of judgement in some instances. But that's a debatable analysis that varies with political, economic and social groups.

Mr. Reagan showed his strength of character following the assassination attempt outside the Washington Hilton. In so doing, he gave the American people an example of what would be forthcoming in his presidency — strength, good humor, a determination to prevail, even compassion toward his would-be assassin.

After 100 days it's clear that Ronald Reagan isn't quite the man Americans thought he was when they boosted him to the nation's highest office. He's much, much more.

There will be those who undoubtedly will criticize him at times during coming months and years (most probably including ourselves), but that's to be expected in the political world. Basically, though, we believe the outlook for the United States and its people is exceedingly bright for the remainder of Mr. Reagan's term.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, May 5, the 125th day of 1981. There are 240 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 5, 1961, Alan Shepard became the first U.S. space explorer when he rocketed 115 miles into space from Cape Canaveral.

On this date:

In 1821, Napoleon Bonaparte died in exile on the island of St. Helena.

In 1864, Union troops were routed by Confederates in the Civil War battle of the Wilderness, west of Fredericksburg, Va.

In 1955, West Germany became a sovereign state following its occupation by the Allies after World War II.

Ten years ago: More than 1,000 anti-war demonstrators were arrested in Washington, D.C.

Five years ago: Nationaliists in the Mediterranean island of Corsica were demonstrating for independence from France.

One year ago: Iran handed over to a Greek Roman Catholic archbishop the remains of the American commandos who were killed in the aborted hostage rescue effort.

Today's birthday: Food expert James Beard is 76 years old.

Thought for today: If man had always heeded the advice always to keep both feet on the ground, we wouldn't be living in the space age — anonymous.

CHARLEY REESE

Selling AWACS to Saudis could initiate Armageddon

Charley Reese

What is an AWACS and why all the fuss about selling them to Saudi Arabia? Well, that's a fair question and the answer will show, unfortunately, that Ronald Reagan has some advisors no better than Jimmy Carter's.

The Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) E-3A is a modified Boeing 707-320B aircraft, equipped with a 30-foot rotating dome antenna. It is absolutely the state of the art in airborne early warning radar, battlefield surveillance and a tactical battle control station.

This baby has "look down" radar which can "see" downward and differentiate moving targets on the ground. It can detect up to 600 targets and its on-board computers can define at least 240 of them in terms of size, altitude identity, speed and direction. From its normal altitude of 30,000 feet, it can "see" out to 250 miles.

That is why the Israeli government is gambling its entire stock of good will in an all-out effort to persuade the U.S. Congress to block the sale. From Saudi air space, the AWACS can "see" every inch of Israel. No tank or airplane can move anywhere in Israel without the AWACS picking it up instantly. Israel would never be able to pull a pre-emptive attack, which a small, outgunned country must rely on; gone would be the capability to stage another Entebbe operation; and if war came, gone would be the Israeli Air Force. As a matter of fact, as far as Israel is concerned, having to fight combined Arab forces guided by AWACS would mean that Armageddon had arrived.

Nor is it surprising that the fact that Reagan's advisors promise to put Americans on board is no consolation. In the first place, by agreeing to sell AWACS and offensive equipment to the Saudis, the U.S. Government is breaking a promise, a promise made not only to Israel but to the U.S. Congress when the Carter Administration asked for permission to sell the Saudis F-15s. Futhermore, there is nothing the U.S. could do if, once the Saudis have their own technicians, they tell the U.S. to get out.

So that's why the Israelis are upset. But what's the problem as far as Americans, who may not give a hoot about Israel, are concerned? First, there is nothing the Soviet Union would like better than to learn everything there is to know about the AWACS. The innards of the AWACS are top secret stuff.

Saudi Arabia does not have an internal security program worthy of the name. The kingdom is full of Pakistanis, Palestinians, Koreans, and you name it. Soviet intelligence agents might easily score, or the Saudi royal family may be tossed out by an ambitious colonel who could "invite" us out and the Soviets in. It's well to recall that the U.S. State Department, CIA and Defense Department swore on their mother's graves that Iran was a stable country when the adminstration decided to give the Shah sophisticated American technology, all of which was compromised 30 months later when the Iranian Revolution ousted the Shah and us at the same time. Compared to Saudi Arabia's corrupt royal family, the Shah's regime was the rock of Gibraltar.

The second minus to the AWACS issue from an American point of view is that it shows the world that we are still weak and foolish. Saudi Arabia will not allow us to establish a base in their country; Saudi Arabia "ordered" us to stop filling up our strategic petroleum reserve; Saudi Arabia leads opposition to the Camp David Peace Agreement; Saudi Arabia funds the PLO, which is the leader of the world's terrorist network and which has murdered a number of U.S. citizens, including several U.S. diplomats; and Saudi Arabia has been the brains that have kept the oil cartel from falling apart and engineered a price rise from $12 a barrel to $32 a barrel. By giving in to Saudi demands without even asking them to do an anythng in return, the Reagan Administration is showing the world that despite the new talk, we have the same old rubber backbone.

Why endanger American security, break a promise to Congress, betray an ally, increase the danger of war in the Middle East, and show the white feather to the world just to please a corrupt royal family which runs a feudal kingdom? Saudi Arabia doesn't have that much clout in American politics. If you probe deeply enough, you'll find that the pressure is coming from Wall Street, from multinational oil companies and multinational banks. Mr. Reagan had better decide if he wants to be president or a front man like his predecessor.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Drug still sold while warning label pends

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Responding to the Reagan administration's "go slow" approach to more government regulation, the Food and Drug Administration is planning to delay indefinitely a rule that controversial prescription drugs contain package inserts to warn patients about their dangers.

This mild corrective action — far less drastic than taking a suspect drug off the market while its safety is proven — would at least give doctors and patients a chance to weigh the risks against the benefits of the medication. Yet even this partial damper on sales is opposed by the drug industry.

Let me cite one particularly shocking example of the development and marketing of a widely used but controversial drug: Bendectin. It has been prescribed routinely to millions of pregnant women since 1956 for relief of nausea and vomiting.

Bendectin's manufacturer, Richardson Merrell, now Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, is facing several lawsuits from women who blame the drug for severe malformations in their babies. The birth defects — missing or badly deformed limbs — are reminiscent of those caused by the sedative drug Thalidomide, which Merrell distributed in the United States.

My reporters Indy Badhwar and Judy Grande have examined court documents and confidential company memos that sketch an appalling record of inadequate testing, irresponsibility and outright deceit. Here are what the documents show:

— Bendectin was concocted — literally — by Merrell's research director, Dr. Raymond Pogge, who had only three months of obstetrical training in his background. He simply mixed three existing drugs together like a cocktail.

— Development was to be given top priority so that, as a Merrell memo explained, Bendectin would be ready for promotion at an upcoming meeting of the American Academy of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

— The FDA approved Bendectin in 1957 even though Merrell offered no reproductive or fertility tests to vouch for its safety. Despite the American Medical Association's view that combination drugs have a greater risk of toxicity, the FDA OK'd Bendectin on the grounds that it was not a new drug, but a mixture of drugs already on the market.

— To promote Bendectin, Pogge wrote an article on it for the Ohio State Medical Journal. It appeared under the name of Dr. R. Nulsen, an obstetrician. In a sworn deposition, obtained by public interest lawyers Alan Eaton, Tom Tate and Jim Butler, Pogge later said he had ghostwritten 20 or 30 articles for other doctors over the years.

— In 1963, a Merrell expert on birth defects, R.E. Staples, tested Bendectin on rabbits and noted malformations in the offspring similar to those caused by Thalidomide. He recommended further testing. But the disturbing findings were deleted when the Staples report was summarized for the FDA and for Merrell's sales force.

— The company received numerous letters from physicians with questions about malformations that had shown up in their patients' babies. Merrell did not promptly report all this information to the FDA, as it is required by law to do.

— Six years after Bendectin's introduction, an article in the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology linked the drug to deformities in newborns.

Last September, an FDA advisory committee reviewed published studies and concluded there was no increased risk of birth defects from the use of Bendectin. But the panel did come across two studies that left "residual uncertainties" about the drug.

Instead of ordering Bendectin off the market while the uncertainties are cleared up, the FDA decided to make use of a new regulation that would require package inserts warning that the drug should be used only as a last resort. This is the proposed regulation that the FDA has put on "hold" in response to the administration's anti-regulatory policies.

Meanwhile, Bendectin is still on the market.

U.S. VS. THE PEOPLE: I receive hundreds of letters from individuals who have been abused by arrogant or incompetent federal bureaucrats. From time to time, I'll report on some of the most flagrant cases. Here are three:

— Robert Depprich was an Air Force enlisted man from 1971 to 1975, when he left to complete his college education at Penn State. He stayed in the Air Force reserve. Now he wants to go back on active duty as a second lieutenant with special qualifications as a loadmaster, but the Air Force says he's too old. Depprich is 32.

— Louis A. Drake is a 71-year-old retired economics professor who bought an acre of land on Little Glen Lake, Mich., in 1967 and built a modest vacation home on it. In 1970, the National Park Service notified Drake that it was going to take his property by condemnation to add to Sleeping Bear National Lake Shore. The bureaucrats in Washington, it turns out, had based their proposed seizure on a 1964 map that showed no one living on the property. Drake feels his home should "not be bulldozed down to buy some hiking trail at $2,000 a foot" when the national lake shore already contains about 60,000 acres.

— Victor Stamler was called up in World War II even though draft board doctors found that his right leg was an inch shorter than his left. As a combat infantryman in Germany, Stamler was wounded by mortar fire and spent months in traction. When he later complained of back problems, examination showed his right leg was then nearly three inches shorter. The Veterans Administration has mulishly refused to admit that the increased deformity was service-connected, insisting that the draft board doctors must have measured wrong. Stamler's lawyer pointed out that he couldn't possibly have served as a combat infantryman in such a crippled condition. Stamler, of Orlando, Fla., is unable to work and has exhausted his appeals.

INSIDE REPORT:

Soviet task force's assignment in Cuba still undetermined

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — The continued presence of a Soviet naval task force, including a missile-firing, Kara-class cruiser, in the Cuban navy base of Cienfuegos has raised this question at high administration levels: Is the Soviet purpose to challenge President Reagan or to prop up the falling political fortunes of Fidel Castro?

The last Soviet naval presence in the Caribbean was early 1980, but it bypassed Cuba and sailed away after Carter administration protests. Some Reagan officials believe the quick departure was to help Jimmy Carter's presidential campaign. Thus, the nearly three-week presence of the new task force at Cienfuegos could be a calculated response to Reagan's anti-Soviet hard line, serving notice that what was given Carter is withheld from Reagan.

The contrary view here is that President Brezhnev sent his ships to Cuba merely as a symbol of Soviet support for Castro, who is alarmed about Reagan's hard line in the Caribbean. That conclusion is based on earlier indications that Brezhnev secretly informed Castro to expect no Soviet help in shipping communist arms to El Salvador. If that assessment is accurate, the Soviet task force is Brezhnev's token of affection for Castro — but not much more.

ADLAI III COMEBACK

Former Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, out of public office only five months, is seriously considering a 1982 comeback attempt to oppose the re-election of the most popular politician in Illinois: Republican Gov. James Thompson.

Democratic politicians critical of Stevenson are chortling over the prospect that he will be chewed up by Thompson's third-term bid. However, the Stevenson name is still a respected one in Illinois (particularly downstate, in the predominantly Republican area outside metropolitan Chicago) and he may be the only Democrat able to oust the governor.

A footnote: Thompson has mended his fences with the Republican right. He impressed President Reagan's inner circle during last year's campaign with his pro-Reagan speeches. If he becomes the first governor of Illinois ever elected to three terms, Thompson would be a serious entry in the post-Reagan succession sweepstakes.

REAGAN TO HELMS

President Reagan finally told Sen. Jesse Helms, the conservative leader, that he really did want Senate confirmation of half a dozen top State Department nominations that Helms had objected to the past three months.

The president's April 29 call followed a Helms White House talk with top Reagan staffers April 23 at which presidential counselor Edwin Meese III and staff chief James A. Baker III told him the president truly was committed to the State Department nominees. Helms listened politely, then said he would like to hear that word from Ronald Reagan himself.

In their 20-minute chat, Reagan promised Helms that the performance of the disputed diplomats would be closely monitored by the White House. In that case, said Helms, he would end his blocking operation (with the possible exception of Under Secretary of State-designate Myer Rashish and African affairs assistant secretary Chester Crocker). The nomination may be confirmed early this week.

A footnote: The luncheon arranged between Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Helms for April 25 turned instead into a long conversation on the telephone. Driving to the State Department from his home in Virginia, Helms was caught in a giant traffic jam resulting from the March of Dimes Walkathon and finally drove back home.

JUSTICE AS USUAL

Conservatives inside and outside the Reagan administration are furious that Attorney General William French Smith is following the advice of Justice Department career lawyers in opposing bills to give Congress veto power over executive branch regulations as a brake against runaway government.

That is the focus of the conservative complaint that Smith has permitted business as usual at Justice, making few changes in Carter administration policy. In his first weeks on the job (the first government post he has ever held), Smith bought the career-lawyer argument that the legislative veto is unconstitutional.

That puts Smith in conflict with Sen. Charles Grassley of Iowa (principal sponsor of the legislative veto), budget director David Stockman and even presidential counselor Edwin Meese III. The question now is whether President Reagan, who endorsed the legislative veto during the campaign, will support his personal-lawyer-turned-attorney-general.

ALLEN AT ACDA

President Reagan sent Richard V. Allen, his top national security assistant, to play the role of acting head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) for two days last week for one purpose: to fire acting Deputy Director Michael Pillsbury and counselor David Sullivan.

Pillsbury and Sullivan are hardheaded, hard-lining anti-Soviet specialists on arms control. Their efforts to put more muscle into U.S. handling of alleged Soviet violations of SALT and their repeated run-ins with the arms control bureaucracy in the State Department had made them hairshirts to the White House.

Political allies on Capitol Hill, however, intervened with the White House after the ouster orders were issued. As a result, both will keep their offices, security clearances and building passes at least until incoming ACDA Director Eugene Debs Rostow takes over in the next few weeks. Conceivably, he may want to keep one or both in his agency — but probably at different jobs.

Newly named Playboy Playmate of the Year Terri Welles covers the face of her husband, Los Angeles Kings hockey player Charlie Simmer, during a Monday news conference in Los Angeles.

Playboy will fly with former stewardess

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Terri Welles, a former United Airlines stewardess from Southern California, has been named the Playboy Playmate of the Year.

Ms. Welles, the 24-year-old wife of Los Angeles Kings hockey player Charlie Simmer, was one of several who posed in a May 1980 issue featuring flight attendants.

The issue caused controversy when some of the flight attendants were fired, but Playboy spokesman Brad Sawtelle said Ms. Welles was not among those dismissed. He said she resigned.

Ms. Welles was born in Santa Monica, but her family moved to San Diego when she was 8 years old. She became a flight attendant with Pacific Southwest in 1977 and was hired at United in 1978, Playboy officials said.

She has starred in a television commercial advertising cameras, and her first movie — a science fiction film starring Albert Finney, James Coburn, Susan Dey and Lee Taylor — may be released in late July.

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Former hostage Billy Gallegos has been eating more than the two meals a day he got from his Iranian captors — and it shows.

Marine Sgt. Gallegos has added 50 pounds in the 3½ months since his release from the Iranian embassy.

"I've put it all on in the wrong places," said Gallegos. "I haven't had much time to exercise."

Gallegos, 22, is one of the 52 Americans held hostage for 444 days in Iran until he was freed Jan. 20. He is a Marine recruiter in Denver and visited here last week to speak to families of Marine recruits and to deliver speeches about his experiences in the Marine Corps.

One member of the audience asked Gallegos if he was well fed by his Iranian captors. "We were fed rice twice a day," he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Young and Robert Crippen, who flew the space shuttle Columbia on its successful maiden flight, will meet with President Reagan at the White House May 19.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced Monday that they also would spend several days next month at the Paris Air Show. Today they were scheduled to speak at an American Newspaper Publishers Association dinner in Chicago.

●

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Joseph Granville, a stock market analyst whose "sell everything" advice wreaked havoc on the market in January, has married a 40-year-old commercial artist.

Monday's marriage was the third for Granville, 57, and the first for his bride, Karen Erickson.h

A local stockbroker introduced the couple in March when Granville was in town to give a lecture sponsored by a local brokerage firm.

Granville, of Holly Hill, Fla., travels and publishes a newsletter giving advice to investors. His advice early in the year that investors sell all their stocks because he believed a sharp drop in the market was approaching was blamed for a 24-point drop in the Dow Jones industrial average.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actor Pat O'Brien, an old Hollywood colleague of Ronald Reagan, was the co-host at a reception given by first lady Nancy Reagan for 185 foster grandparents.

O'Brien, 81, starred with President Reagan in a movie about Knute Rockne, the legendary football coach at the University of Notre Dame.

Jim Brady survives third surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House press secretary James S. Brady, facing continued difficulty in his recovery from a gunshot wound to the brain, is resting comfortably after surgery to prevent potentially life-threatening blood clots from reaching his heart and lungs, officials say.

Brady was reported in satisfactory condition after the 2¼-hour operation late Monday night, said Emily Turk, a spokeswoman at George Washington University Hospital.

It was Brady's third operation since he was shot March 30 during an assassination attempt on President Reagan, in which Reagan and two law enforcement officers also were wounded. The first two operations were on Brady's bullet-pierced brain.

Dr. Dennis O'Leary, a spokesman at George Washington University Hospital, said doctors decided to operate after discovering several small clots in Brady's lung. He said, however, that the clots were in "no way" life-threatening.

O'Leary said the clots indicated that a channel was open between the leg and the lungs and "if a larger clot were to break off, it could be potentially life-threatening."

The surgery involved inserting an umbrella-shaped, sieve-like device, with the diameter of a "fat ballpoint pen," in a vein carrying blood from the legs, where clots sometimes form, to the upper torso. The device is called a Kimray-Greenfield or vena caval umbrella.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, who said the latest development "does not appear troublesome," described the device as a "net letting blood pass through but stopping any clot."

On April 22, Brady underwent hastily scheduled surgery to close passages that had been letting air seep into his brain.

Since last Monday, Brady, on doctors' orders, has remained in bed with his head elevated 20 degrees to help prevent further seepage. This was scheduled to last about 10 days.

O'Leary said Brady "developed some very vague chest discomfort Monday morning, the kind of thing in most patients you would just pass off" because of being bed-ridden for an extended period.

He said a chest X-ray showed "a very small infiltrate, a density, on the edge of the lung, the right lung. Normal lung tissue appears dark in an X-ray and this area appeared white."

A second procedure, a lung scan that used radio isotopic methods to contrast air and blood flow, presented evidence that made doctors 90 percent to 95 percent confident that a blood clot was involved, O'Leary said.

This procedure was done in the late afternoon.

It was followed with a pulmonary angiogram, or the injection of dye into the circulatory system, in the area of the right lung. With this confirmation of clots and with the possibility that larger ones could form, a decision was made "to interrupt the channel," O'Leary said.

"The most reasonable approach is to put, in essense, a sieve in the vena cava," a vein carrying blood to the heart and lungs from the leg, he said.

He said the clots that had been discovered would dissolve on their own and that there was no danger of their moving from the lung.

The sieve-like device, which he described as looking like "a mess of hairpins" in a conical shape about 2½ inches high and about one-half to three-quarters of an inch in diameter, was inserted through the right groin at the end of a wire and placed in the vein near the navel.

Brady was given a local anesthetic during the surgery, which began around 9:10 p.m. EDT.

O'Leary said that if nothing had been done, Brady "might do fine."

However, he said, "if he's broken off little clots, the danger is he could break off a bigger clot."

If a clot passes through the heart into the lungs, it can cut off the flow of blood to the body and cause death.

O'Leary said such clots often occur when a patient is lying in bed "and there is some pooling of blood in the lower extremities."

The pools, he said, tend to promote clotting, "an occupational risk of staying in bed."

Man alert, stable after brain injury

BOSTON (AP) — Four days after his brain was run through by a 6-foot steel bar during an auto accident, 30-year-old John Thompson was conscious, alert and officials said he may be taken off his breathing respirator today.

"He understands everything; he is able to obey simple commands," Dr. Joe I. Ordia, a neurosurgeon, said Monday.

Ordia said Thompson is in critical but stable condition in the intensive care unit of Boston City Hospital.

"We are very hopeful of eventual recovery. We know he has some movement in his right leg. But he has no movement in his right arm. How much recovery will be a question of time."

A pinchbar, a 6-foot steel bar with a 3-inch chisel end, was loose in the back of a station wagon that spun out of control Friday with Thompson at the wheel. When the car hit a tree, the bar speared the back left side of his skull, went through his brain and out above his left eye.

"It really was a demonstration of teamwork between the (hospital) trauma center and the emergency services that he is alive," said Dr. Lenworth Jacobs, a surgeon who heads Boston City Hospital's emergency medical services section.

"Certainly, I have never seen anything like this, and we see many unusual trauma injuries. To have this type of injury and see a man survive is highly unusual."

Senator 'didn't know' of church's role in movie

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato did not know the Unification Church helped bankroll the $46 million movie "Inchon" when he agreed to serve as chairman of the committee for the film's Kennedy Center premiere, a spokesman for the New York Republican says.

"We're a little perturbed that the full story wasn't told us when we were approached to lend our name," the spokesman, Ed Martin, said. "I think we will be very careful in the future."

He said D'Amato's only intention was to help the Carl Vinson Hall, a home for retired Navy, Marine and Coast Guard officers and their surviving spouses in suburban McLean, Va.

Tickets for the Monday night benefit premiere of the Korean War movie t the center' Eisenhower Theater were priced at $25 to $500. Martin said D'Amato wants to make certain the proceeds actually go to the old age home.

Sandy Burke, spokeswoman for Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-Calif., who also is on the committee, said McCloskey knew of the connection to the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church but was concerned only with helping Carl Vinson Hall.

Court grants prosecutors one shot at death penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prosecutors have only one shot at convincing a jury to impose the death penalty on convicted murderers, the Supreme Court says.

The high court ruled by a 5-4 vote Monday that a convicted murderer sentenced to life in prison by a jury that could have imposed the death sentence cannot face the possibility of execution again if he wins a retrial.

The majority said that once a jury in a capital murder case has rejected the death penalty during the post-trial sentencing proceeding, constitutional bars to being tried twice for the same offense come into play.

The decision came a week after Justice William H. Rehnquist accused his colleagues of thwarting states' attempts to execute convicted murderers.

The court issued its decision in the case of Robert Bullington, who was convicted in October 1978 by a St. Louis County, Mo., jury of capital murder in the drowning death of Pamela Sue Wright. The prosecutor had announced he would seek the death penalty in the retrial, which was delaying pending Bullington's appeal to the Supreme Court.

In an opinion by Justice Harry A. Blackmun, the court said that in death-penalty cases the Constitution's double jeopardy clause bars prosecutors from seeking execution if the defendant wins a retrial.

"Because the sentencing proceeding at (Bullington's) first trial was like the trial on the question of guilt or innocence, the protection afforded by the double jeopardy clause to one acquitted by a jury is also available to him, with respect to the death penalty, at his retrial," Blackmun said.

He was joined by Justices William J. Brennan, Potter Stewart, Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens in drawing a distinction between capital murder sentencing and other criminal sentencings, where stiffer sentences are enerally llowed on retrial.

A masked youth with a bottle in his pocket clenches his fist and takes a defiant stance in the Lower Falls area of Belfast, Northern Ireland Monday as a burning vehicle behind him forms a barricade to this Roman Catholic section of the city. Mobs of rioting Catholic youths attacked Belfast police and British troops with fire bombs and acid-filled milk bottles following the death Monday night of Bobby Sands.

Sands: IRA terrorist or Irish folk hero?

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — To Roman Catholic nationalists, Bobby Sands, the first Irish Republican Army hunger striker to die in Northern Ireland, was a freedom fighter and romanticized hero.

To the British government and most of the Protestant majority in Northern Ireland, he was simply a terrorist who chose to take his own life.

Few figures have so symbolized the sectarian divide in this British province, partitioned from the rest of Ireland in 1922.

Sands, who spent the last third of his life behind bars for IRA activities, died demanding that convicted IRA guerrillas be treated as political prisoners — as they were from June 1972 to March 1976.

His martyrdom follows a long tradition in the IRA. Thirteen IRA men have died this century while on hunger strike, opposing the British presence in Ireland.

The first was Thomas Ashe, a leader of the ill-fated 1916 Easter Rising in Dublin — and the latest before Sands was Frank Stagg, who died in England's Wakefield prison in 1976 after a 62-day fast.

Sands launched his fast on March 1, bitter over the failure of a mass hunger strike last year to win special status. He claimed the British tricked the hunger strikers into abandoning that protest with fake concessions.

On April 9, his 40th day without food in the Maze prison outside Belfast, Sands had already ensured that his name would live in the annals of the IRA's campaign to get the British out.

On that polling day he was elected to the British Parliament from Fermanagh and South Tyrone, a Catholic majority district in the southwest of the province. He never took his seat in the House of Commons, dying for his political cause while still behind bars.

Until his fast, Sands was little known outside his family and small circle of friends. The hunger strike made him a hero among Irish Republicans, or nationalists, seeking the reunion of Protestant-dominated and British-ruled Northern Ireland with the independent and predominantly Catholic Irish Republic to the south.

He had written his own epitaph in a series of essays and poems scribbled on toilet paper and smuggled out of jail in 1978 and 1979. He wrote of his cell, "My tomb may be my grave."

"The Writings of Bobby Sands" became a best-seller in Catholic enclaves as his hunger strike approached its end. He likened his unbroken spirit to that of a caged lark and described himself as a "political prisoner of war."

Twenty-seven when he died, the 5-foot, 9-inch slightly built Belfast native spent all but six months of his last nine years incarcerated.

A picture of him as a smiling, healthy 21-year-old with long brown hair became familiar to newspaper readers around the world and was plastered on walls throughout the province.

But in Protestant areas there was no sympathy as Sands starved himself to death.

"The murderers have a choice, their victims had none," said one slogan in Protestant East Belfast.

Sands' fast brought an upsurge in tension and violence in the strife-ridden province and drew the world's press to Belfast.

It also brought intervention by Pope John Paul II, who in 1979 on a visit to the Republic had appealed "on my knees" for the warring factions to seek peace.

American sympathizers included former Attorney General Ramsey Clark and fasting veteran Dick Gregory, while there were appeals from many gmvernments for British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to prevent Sands' unnatural demise.

Bernadette Devlin McAliskey, the Catholic civil rights campaigner here, declared as he neared the end: "Britain, in allowing Bobby Sands to die, is about to make a historical error of major proportions."

Robert Gerard Sands was born in Rathcoole, a mostly Protestant suburb of Belfast, on March 9, 1954, the eldest of four children. At that time it was possible for Catholics and Protestants to live in some harmony and Sands was a medal winner at a Protestant athletic club.

Politicians, religious leaders call for end of bloodshed

By The Associated Press

While mourners stood in silent vigil in New York and San Francisco, politicians and religious leaders prayed that the death of Irish hunger striker Bobby Sands would not lead to further bloodshed in stife-torn Northern Ireland.

The death Tuesday of the Irish Republican Army guerilla also aroused anger and pleas for an end to the British government's "inflexibility."

"We must not yield to terrorism, but we also must not yield to intransigence that can only fan the flames of greater terrorism," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., noting that other Irish activists have mounted hunger strikes.

"I urge the British government...to end its posture of inflexibility and to implement reasonable reforms capable of achieving a humanitarian settlement of the other hunger strikes so that the tragedy of Bobby Sands is not repeated," Kennedy said.

"The fact is that (British Prime Minister) Margaret Thatcher — who had the power to keep him alive, to let him wear his own clothes and to receive a letter a day in prison — permitted this man to die," said former Attorney General Ramsey Clark, who tried unsuccessfully to visit Sands in prison. "She has destroyed any claim she may have to moral leadership by that outrageous act."

Sands, serving a jail term on a weapons charge, died after a 66-day hunger strike demanding status as a political prisoner for himself and other jailed IRA leaders.

At the news of Sands' death, 120 demonstrators gathered before the San Francisco home of the British consul general in silent protest. "Another murder for the crown," said a sign held by one of 50 protesters in front of the Manhattan consulate offices.

No incibents were reported.

In Detroit, a round-the-clock, nine-day vigil for Sands ended with the recitation of the rosary.

Before Sands died, the New Jersey Assembly voted 34-29 for a resolution to honor "the courage and commitment of Bobby Sands," over objections from some lawmakers that the state should stay out of Irish politics.

Sister Rosaleen O'Halloran, a teacher in New York City, went to St. Patrick's Cathedral when she heard the news. Finding the cathedral locked, the nun prayed on the floodlit steps.

Cardinal Terence Cooke, Roman Catholic archbishop of New York, expressed concern that Sands' death would lead to violence in Northern Ireland.

The Most Rev. Robert A.K. Runcie, Archbishop of Canterbury, visiting Los Angeles, expressed his sorrow and appealed for calm.

Catholics spread news of death

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Watched by their women in bathrobes and slippers, fathers and sons battled police and troops in the streets of Roman Catholic West Belfast early today after the death of IRA hunger striker Bobby Sands.

Young and old spread the news of the 27-year-old guerrilla's death by honking car horns, blowing whistles and banging garbage can lids, the warning sign once used to signal British army raids.

Youngsters hurled gasoline bombs and acid-filled milk bottles at security forces patroling turbulent Falls Road, a stronghold of the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing in which Sands enlisted when wa 18.

Television crews and photographers mingled with masked men.

Youths who skirmished with troops and police for days as the 27-year-old Sands starved himself to death made hit-and-run attacks on police Land Rovers and British army "pigs," the armored personnel carriers that the Catholics consider a symbol of the British army's "occupation" of Northern Ireland, where Protestants outnumber Catholics 2 to

AT WIT'S END

Underwear saint

By ERMA BOMBECK

Someone once told me there is a patron saint of women's underwear named St. Frederick. I never really believed this.

The person who told me said she used to pray to him all the time to keep her slip from creeping up on her like a venetian blind, and to give her courage when she crossed her legs and saw her pantyhose crotch around her knees.

I still don't know if such a saint exists, but if what I read is true about the garter belt coming back, then I have to take the chance.

Dear St. Frederick: (read with feeling) As I have said so often, there is no other saint in your line of work so kind, so charitable and so caring. Who can forget how you, in your infinite compassion, gaveth us the one-size-fits-all and taketh away the girdle?

That is why I do not understand why you permit the return of the garter belt. Was it something I said? Did I go too far in my criticism of the pantyhose? Is there no one who wants to sit on the eggs anymore?

I beg not for myself, but for an entire generation of young people who saw Liza Minnelli in "Cabaret" and think garter belts are sexy.

They don't know garter belts as I know them. Without a top hat and starved legs, they're nothing! Garter belts are what happens when you assign a committee to design something to take your mind off your headache. The elastic band that cuts your waist in half supports two dangling marionette supporters that never warm up. They are positioned so that when you turn to reach the supporter in the back, they travel up to your waist. When you reach behind your waist, they fall to your knees.

They make ridges in your legs when you sit on them, and when you stand, sometimes release the very stockings they are supposed to hold up.

I beg you, St. Frederick, to intercede for women everywhere and arrange for an unfortunate accident to occur to garter belts on the comeback trail.

Naturally, we will live with thy will, but when 30 million women stand in front of their mirrors looking at themselves in garter belts, trust me, Freddie, you're going to work a seven-day week!

Caution can prevent burns

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP) — Headlines about hotel blazes and office-tower fires may be all too common, says a surgeon who specializes in burn treatment, but, adds Dr. Duane Larson, most victims travel no further than their own bathroom, kitchen or garage to sustain tragic burn injury.

"We all feel safest when we're home, but 90 percent of serious burns occur in the home," he points out. "Of the 2 million Americans burned annually — the worst statistics of any nation — half are children, who spend very little time in hotels or office buildings."

Larson is serving as chief medical advisor to the Shriners Burns Institutes in Galveston, Boston and Cincinnati, recognized as leading medical centers for children's burn care. The Shriners, a fraternal organization of 1 million members, have launched a national public awareness program, "Stop Burn Injuries."

"People don't realize that we have an epidemic on our hands," Larson said. "As devastating as our losses were due to enemy action in Vietnam, burn deaths back home during that same period were more than three times as great."

Larson feels that one of the most positive, yet frustrating, aspects of the burn problem is the fact that 75 percent of the injuries that occur are preventable if simple precautions are taken around the home.

"Hot liquids, often tap water, are the most common hazards children face at home," said Larson. "If every parent in America turned their water-heater setting down to 130 degrees Fahrenheit and provided supervision in the bathroom and kitchen, two-thirds of children's burns could be avoided. That's simple, but people just don't understand the damage scalding water can inflict in seconds."

At 145 degrees Fahrenheit, the temperature setting of most home water heaters, a serious burn can occur in less than three seconds. Water at 120 degrees requires more than five minutes to produce serious injury.

Although scalds are a year-round household hazard, with warm weather America goes outdoors and meets new hazards.

"Lawnmowing is a common chore we often give to our youngsters," Larson points out. "Gasoline has become such a commonplace element in our lives that we and our children handle it without much thought. But one gallon packs the explosive power of at least 14 sticks of dynamite."

Larson offers these safety tips for using flammable liquids:

—Use fluids only for the purpose for which they were intended. Never use gasoline to start a barbeque.

—Use only in well-ventilated areas.

—Make sure lawnmowers and other power equipment are cool before fueling, which should be done outside, away from cigarettes, lighted grills or other ignition sources.

—Before starting the motor, put the gasoline can away, and let any spilled fuel evaporate completely.

—If the mower runs out of gas, let it cool off before refueling.

—Put only enough fuel in the tank to do the job; full tanks tend to produce more vapor and fuel could spill out.

—Store gasoline in approved metal safety cans, in a cool, well-ventilated area, out of the reach of children. Never store in the basement or any living area.

After 25 years of pioneering new techniques for burn treatment, Larson says he is frustrated.

"A burned child can survive and be restored to full physical function only to die a social death because other children react badly to the scars," he said. "Despite our magnificent medical progress, our most important charge is still to stop these burns before they happen."

DEAR ABBY

Reluctant bride thinks two is a crowd

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a minister who has been married since last December, but our marriage has not as yet been consummated.

We spent our wedding night in a very nice motel in Salisbury, N.C., where I thought surely we would consummate our marriage, but she said, "Let's wait a night or two in case I get pregnant. I don't want people counting the days and saying we had premarital intercourse."

She put me off that way for a whole month. Then she said, "Plenty of babies are born in the seventh month — let's wait a little longer."

Abby, after putting up with her stalling for three months, I demanded my rights. She refused to go on the pill and rejected my offer to take all the responsibility of precautions. To this day, she continues to hold me off with one ridiculous excuse after another.

I am growing very impatient. What do you suggest? — GREENSBORO, N.C.

DEAR GREENSBORO: Insist that your reluctant bride see a gynecologist. She is obviously uninformed, frightened and totally unprepared for the physical part of marriage.

DEAR ABBY: My very efficient secretary, who had been with me for 12 years, retired recently.

After I had tried several applicants who were brainless, our daughter sent a 26-year-old former college friend of hers to apply for the position. She was personable, qualified and eager to work, so I hired her. In the past months, she has shown promise of developing into a top-notch secretary. Meanwhile, my wife is furious with my daughter for sending this girl to me and she's angry with me for hiring her. The reason: The girl is well-endowed and she always goes braless.

Good secretaries are hard to find, and I mean to keep this one, short of breaking up my home. Her going braless doesn't bother me, and besides, I feel it is her business and nobody else's. What do you think? — NO HANKY-PANKY

DEAR NO HANKY: Tell your wife to run the house and let you run your office. Better a braless secretary than one who's brainless.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the woman signed NOT OK IN OKLAHOMA, who was sexually harassed on her job.

I am a female law student, currently writing a paper on sexual harassment. Your women readers should know that they DO have legal remedies if they experience sexual harassment on their jobs. (Sexual harassment is not only physical abuse, it may also be verbal abuse.)

Sexual harassment can occur when a woman is fired, or forced to leave her job due to the sexual threats or demands of her bosses or co-workers. It can also happen when a woman is demoted and or/blocked from promotions at her place of employment.

The courts have awarded a wide assortment of legal remedies to victims. These have included reinstatement of the job (if the woman was fired), back pay, a promotion, and even the woman's attorney's fees (if she later chooses to hire a lawyer).

Women who have been victims of sexual harassment should go to their local Equal Employment Opportunity Office and file a complaint. They do not need a lawyer. They can do it themselves. — KNOWLEDGEABLE IN ILLINOIS

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Soiled wedding dress care

LOVING CARE FOR BRIDAL GOWN

DEAR HELOISE:

I would like to know the proper way to store a wedding gown and veil to keep it from getting spots and yellowing.

Can you help me? I would appreciate it so very much, along, I'm sure, with other brides and brides-to-be. — Patricia Gillenwater

+ + +

I can only tell you to do what other readers have told me, which is to wrap the gown in several layers of blue tissue paper or blue broadcloth or material of a similiar type, then place it in a large box with a tight-fitting lid.

They quote from their own experiences to back up their claims and I would like to share one such quote from a dear lady who says:

"I have my mother's wedding dress which is 70 years old and it has been wrapped in blue cloth all these years. It is still as white as the day she wore it."

Other readers' comments were similiar. For whatever reason, the paper or cloth does seem to have worked for many generations, so it will probably work for you, quietly performing its blue magic.

Of course you know the dress should be cleaned before storing it and that it should be stored in a cool, dry place. — Hugs, Heloise

RECIPE WRITING

Dear Heloise: When writing out a recipe on a card for your file box, jot down the oven temperature and cooking time in the upper right corner and the number of servings in the upper left hand corner, rather than at the end of the recipe.

I find that in all recipes, the oven must be pre-heated and this way, I can see at a glance whether I can plan other dishes which require the same time and temperature for oven meals or such.

Sure beats reading the whole card to find out the correct temperature and number of servings. — Eleanor Josephs

+ + +

How simple, how smart. I love it! — Heloise

LACE MAGIC

Dear Heloise: When I wanted to make a large, round tablecloth with ruffled lace on the edge, my daughter suggested I lay a heavy crochet thread on the straight edge of the lace and sew with a wide zigzag stitch as I guided the thread along.

When finished, the crochet thread pulls very easily and the resulting gathers are easy to distribute. — Mrs. G.W.

CURTAIN HANGING

Dear Heloise: When hanging curtains, use a yardstick to even the gathers.

Much better than hopping on and off a stepstool to adjust them and you will do a better job. — Marie Koenes

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Distinguished actor Orson Welles and baseball great Willie Mays share this birthday with you. Those born on this date are warmhearted, civic-minded and skilled in administration. In the year ahead, various worthy groups and organizations urge you to use your considerable managerial talents on their behalf. Be careful not to let too many extracurricular activities distract you from your domestic obligations. Loved ones need to know that they will always be your top priority! Reconciliation with a brother or sister may be possible now. Go ahead and extend the olive branch. Your finances will show steady improvement due to your willingness to put forth extra effort.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An unexpected announcement about work or money could cheer you greatly. A romantic interlude is destined to change your life. Loved one may require special care or attention.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): This is a day for rebuilding burnt bridges and restoring greater order to your life. You get a golden opportunity to right a wrong. Take advantage of it!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be relying on others too much. Trust your own intuition and you will make swifter financial progress. Romance is important to the success of this evening's plan.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You start the day in an optimistic mood. There is a new emphasis on improving your mind. Look for ways to control spending. Trust your own judgment in romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A long-awaited visit could take place today. Certain financial burdens are lifted. People you have depended on in the past may not be there now. Postpone romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A work relationship may have reached a turning point. Take the high road in everything you do! A foolish move could cost you plenty. Be patient. Look for a fair solution.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your financial dealings will run more smoothly if you keep business and pleasure separate. Be more discreet about loved one's activities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Exercise great tact when dealing with others. You cannot make problems disappear by pretending they do not exist. Tackle them head-on. You will be pleased with the results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This should be a very good day for those involved in the arts. A financial solution appears to arise from out of nowhere! Avoid speculative ventures. Keep your money where it will be safe.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): This is a good period for negotiations. Joint finances need attention from experts. Family affairs may be cutting into your work hours. Concentrate on business.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You could bring more order to your life by picking up the threads of the past. Think twice before saying "yes." Many opportunities present themselves now. Choose wisely.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may have an opportunity to deal with people at a distance today. New negotiations could pave the way for you to solve a financial problem while advancing your career goals.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
3 ♡	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ◇.

Skilled technique can sometimes be like magic—it makes defenders' tricks disappear as if into thin air. This hand is from a recent national championship.

East took advantage of the vulnerability to preempt with three hearts—in tournament play the requirements for preempts are relaxed; after all, you can't lose money! South's hand was by no means ideal for an overcall, but a pass ran an even bigger risk—his partner might not be able to compete because of shortness in spades. North had ample for his raise to game.

Declarer won the opening diamond lead with the ace and made the normal play of leading a spade to the jack. East won the queen and forced declarer with a diamond. A spade to the ace revealed the unfortunate distribution, and prospects were bleak—it seemed that declarer would have to lose a second trump trick in addition to two heart losers.

After studying the position, declarer saw a way to telescope two of his losers into one if he found a lucky distribution in the minor suits. Declarer ruffed a diamond and, when both defenders followed, West's hand was an open book: four spades (known), four diamonds (judging from the opening lead), one heart probably a high honor) and, therefore, four clubs.

Now the hand became a simple double dummy problem. Declarer cashed the king of spades, discarding a heart from dummy, crossed to the king of clubs and ruffed a diamond with his last trump. Next came the ace and a low club. When West followed to the third club, declarer finessed the ten. That succeeded, as declarer was sure it would, so the queen of clubs became declarer's tenth trick. On the last two tricks the defenders had to play the ace and king of hearts and the only remaining trump in the game.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy and a scorepad, send $1.75 to "Goren-Four Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Thrift shops can provide buyers a shopping alternative

By LOUISE COOK
AP Writer

Bad times are good times for secondhand clothing stores.

"Sales have been increasing steadily for the past two years," said Mollie Haines, who is in charge of public relations for the Washington, D.C., chapter of Goodwill Industries of America.

"Consumers have a need to stretch their buying dollars," Ms. Haines said, adding that the Goodwill Thrift Shops traditionally do well in times of rising prices and high unemployment.

Virginia Knauer, President Reagan's consumer adviser, agreed. "There are some excellent clothing buys" in thrift shops, she said. "I feel this is a shopping alternative — especially if you have a lot of growing children."

There are two basic types of thrift shops — the ones whose merchandise is donated, and the kind which accept goods on consignment, giving the original owner of the clothing a share of the sales price. Many of the thrift shops are operated by charities like Goodwill, the Salvation Army, church groups and local hospitals.

The 167 local members of Goodwill Industries of America operate about 1,000 thrift shops across the country. Arlo Wagner, a spokesman for the organization, said 1980 sales were $143 million, up 14.4 percent from 1979.

By contrast, the Commerce Department said that retail sales of all kinds increased only 7 percent from 1979 to 1980. Major department store and discount chains generally reported sales increases of less than 10 percent for the fiscal year which ended Jan. 31, 1981.

Consumer organizations say determined shoppers can cut clothing budgets by up to 50 percent — if they buy entire wardrobes at thrift shops. This kind of saving is impractical for most people, of course; you can't always find what you want or need. But you can save hundreds of dollars by careful buying.

There are eight Goodwill shops in the area around the nation's capital. They sell a wide range of products — someone once even donated a cemetery plot — but Ms. Haines said that when people think of thrift shops they usually think of clothing.

Inflation not only has boosted business for thrift shops, it also has brought a new type of customer. "At one time there was a type of snob appeal that was working to keep the middle class and upper middle class out of thrift shops," Ms. Haines said. "There was a negative stigma."

Today, she said, buying in a thrift shop is "the mark of the savvy shopper." Ms. Haines estimated that 40 percent of the customers at the Goodwill Thrift Shops might be able to afford the prices in conventional stores, but prefer the secondhand outlets "simply because they are good shoppers."

Mrs. Knauer said that hospital thrift shops often offer particularly attractive bargains. "That's where the doctor's wives drop off their used clothes," she said. "I think a lot of people think this (shopping in thrift outlets) is just for poverty-level families and don't go looking," Mrs. Knauer said. "The more publicity it's given, the more chic it will become."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

CAPD suitable for children

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine who lives on the West Coast tells me that a portable kind of dialysis suitable for young children has been developed. Since my own child is presently on hemodialysis because of kidney failure, I am of course very much interested in this new technique. Have you heard anything about it, and do you know what is involved in its use? — Mrs. T.H.

Dear Mrs. H.: It is a fact that a new method for continuous ambulatory peritoneal dialysis (CAPD), suitable for children and infants with chronic renal failure, has been developed. According to Dr. Steven Alexander, assistant professor of pediatrics at the University of Oregon Health Science Center, CAPD provides a number of advantages over either hemodialysis or intermittent peritoneal dialysis.

In the first place, the new procedure is continuous and therefore tends to maintan more stable biochemical conditions. Second, since it is portable, it permits the child to continue to live at home and to take part in almost all physical activities. Moreover, since the child is permitted to eat and drink whatever he wants, the child grows better than he would if he was being maintained on hemodialysis. And finally, CAPD is substantially less expensive than maintenance dialysis.

While CAPD may be considered an endpoint for adults, this is not true with children; rather, it is looked upon as a temporary treatment that may go on for from two to five years until a suitable transplant becomes available. In view of the many advantages of the new procedure, the physician can be more selective in choosing an appropriate time for transplantation, instead of being forced into surgery at a time not of his choosing and not best for the patient.

One possible disadvantage of CAPD is the amount of time that must be invested both by health professionals and parents in the treatment. A very intensive training period is required at the time therapy is initiated, and a great deal of followup by social and medical personnel is essential. Dr. Alexander notes that CAPD may not be successful if the people involved are not prepared to make this kind of investment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My 9-year-old son was hyperactive almost from the moment he was born until he started undergoing treatment three years ago. Since then, he has calmed down considerably and is showing improvement in his behavior, both in school and at home. Does his kind of hyperactivity that starts in childhood ever continue into adulthood? — Mrs. T.C.

Dear Mrs. C.: Hyperactivity — or, to use the term now preferred, attention deficit disorder — can continue into adolescence and adulthood. Since your son apparently has responded to treatment, there is every reason to believe that his improvement will continue. You should be commended for seeing that he received proper treatment instead of waiting for him to outgrow the condition, something that does not always happen.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., a 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Students, teachers face strain of school troubles

BOSTON (AP) — Each day, Maura Solari and Alisa Bennett face declining morale and deteriorating conditions at Boston English High. Each night, the teacher and the student watch the news to see if their broke school system will make it through another day.

For more than a week, the 64,500 students of the nation's oldest public school system have gone to classes under a judge's order that broke or not, the schools must be kept open.

The teachers are worried about whether they will be able to keep their jobs as the city fights the impact of a tax-cutting referendum.

And the strain of uncertainty is beginning to show, both students and teachers say.

"You get to thinking it don't matter if you don't go," said June Sullivan, a freshman at English, the nation's oldest high school. "They might close the schools next week so you start thinking, what's an extra day?"

"I've never seen the faculty so down," said Mike Kehrmeyer, a teacher with nine years experience. "No one feels up to it no matter what you try to tell yourself."

City officials have been bickering for weeks over how to raise $30 million to keep the schools running until June 19 — the end of the school year.

The schools' $210 million budget ran out last Tuesday, but the schools are being kept open by court order. The city's challenge of that order is before the state Supreme Court.

The beleaguered system received a $9.3 million care package from the state on Monday when Gov. Edward J. King signed a bill refunding the city for a school construction program.

The money assured the schools, rocked last year by protests over court-ordered busing, of one more week's operation.

"I was in bed reading the other night and I had to get up and turn on the news to see if I had a job tomorrow," said Ms. Solari, a special-education teacher at Boston English. "It's depressing."

Miss Bennett, a freshman, gets angry.

"It's ridiculous," she said. "You have to watch the news at night to find out if you're going to school. They're messing with our education and our future."

Teacher morale took a nosedive Monday when half of the 120 teachers at English received notices that their jobs may be terminated because of budget cuts brought on by declining enrollment and Proposition 2½, the tax-cutting law approved by voters in a referendum last November.

Similar notices went out to 2,300 teachers — nearly half the system's teaching staff.

William Lawrence, headmaster at Boston English, says attendance among his 2,000 students is 10 percent to 20 percent lower than usual. Similar attendance declines are reported at other Boston schools.

Teachers complain that more students are wandering the halls. Maintenance has stopped. Escalators in the 10-story building are stuck; broken ceiling panels have not been replaced.

Textbooks were collected before last month's spring vacation in anticipation of a school shutdown. The books haven't been redistributed because classes may end at any time. Instead, students are given printed homework sheets.

"You can use the uncertainty in some classes with the really good students who can deal with adversity," said chemistry teacher John Diadato. "But with a majority of the student population you've got a motivation problem. They'll use it for an out — to skip homework or not attend classes."

Other students said they are trying harder to learn. If a shutdown comes, teachers will grade students on what work they've done. Many are afraid that losing points — class credits — will push graduation further into the future.

Houston area flooded

HOUSTON (AP) — Residents along the San Jacinto River in the northern part of the county were urged to leave their homes overnight because of the possiblity of flooding from rain-swollen Lake Houston, which feeds the river.

Authorites said 120 people were evacuated from their homes in southeastern sections of Harris County Sunday night when more than 9 inches of rain forced the river over its banks, flooding freeways and many streets.

John Caswell of the Harris County Civil Defense, said three shelters were open Monday night to house evacuees. He said some moderate flooding already had been reported in northern sections.

"We're encouraging people in the low-lying areas near the San Jacinto River to spend the night elsewhere," Caswell said. "We're expecting a crest of about three feet over the spillway of Lake Houston."

Jim Green, director of ohe Harris County Flood Control District, said the waters could recede within 24 hours if no more rain falls.

At least one person was killed as a result of Sunday's rain, and 10 were injured in twisters that accompanied the storm.

Jessie Peak, 18 months, wandered away from home and drowned.

Lawmakers may get own health spa

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas lawmakers are under so much pressure they need their own Capitol spa where they can "let off steam," and $2.5 million of tax money is not too much to pay, a representative says.

The bill by Rep. Sam Hudson, D-Dallas, would create a Capitol area "health facility," including a weight room, indoor track, massage parlor and sauna.

Hudson told the House State Affairs Committee Monday the facility is needed to "protect the taxpayers' investment in the health of their state officials." Use of the facility would be limited to lawmakers and state employees who work in the Capitol complex.

"It would make for a happier Legislature and everything else," he said.

Questioned about the $2.5 million bill taxpayers would have to pay for the exclusive spa, Hudson first said he had been told the bill "would have no fiscal impact."

Then, he revised his opinion.

"Two-point-five million isn't so bad," he said, explaining that "the pressure on the Legislature and state officials is so bad they really need an outlet where they can let off steam."

He said adding a sauna was not an extravagance.

"After you get through lifting weights and jogging, you need to finish the job properly and relax the muscles," he said.

Committee members chuckled throughout his presentation. At one point Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, asked facetiously:

"Sam, aren't you afraid that if we do all this, get healthy, lift weights, maybe take karate, we'll stop killing bills and start killing each other?"

Child considered for treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three-year-old Matt Van Geest, his stomach bloated and his joints sore from an often-terminal bone disease, will undergo tests to see if he is eligible for an experimental treatment to replace the enzyme that his body lacks.

Matt and his parents, Joanne and Terry Van Geest, traveled Monday from their Blodgett, Ore., home to the National Institutes of Health in the Washington suburb of Bethesda, Md., where doctors have agreed to look at the child's case.

"Now, finally, we have some hope," Van Geest said Monday as the favily boarded a plane at Portland International Airport.

Matt suffers from Gaucher's disease, a hereditary illness that prevents the bone marrow from producing an enzyme that breaks down fats in the blood. His doctors say he might die within 10 years.

"We're going to oake a look at the case," said Dr. Roscoe Brady, an NIH researcher who pioneered the enzyme replacement technique. "But at this point we can't guarantee that the boy will be accepted for experimental treatment.

"Others are lined up for the enzyme and there's not enough for everyone," Brady said. "In view of the publicity, we offered to do what we could."

NIH paid to bring the boy and his mother to its clinical center after nationwide publicity drew attention to his problem. The father took time off from his $16,000-a-year job in a lumber mill and paid his own expenses to accompany them.

Doctors say they also are considering a bone marrow transplant for the boy, a risky procedure used to treat certain types of blood cancer but which has never been used for Gaucher's disease.

Numerous people havelvolunteered to donate bone marrow for a possible transplant after they learned that 30 of Matt's relatives tested as donors proved unsatisfactory.

Doctors told the boy's parents that only one person in a million outside the family is likely to have matching tissue.

The child's stomach is bloated, his liver and spleen are infected and he has to take pain-killing drugs for sore joints.

He can't run around because jarring might rupture his spleen. He can't eat foods that are difficult to chew and doesn't have much of an appetite.

The inherited condition, which generally inflicts an estimated one person in 40,000, occurs most frequently in Jews of eastern European origin, NIH researchers say.

While symptoms may appear at any age, the progressive disease normally becomes noticeable in late adolescence, experts say. And while it can be fatal, some sufferers live to old age, they add.

Dr. John Barranger, an NIH researcher who works with Brady, said doctors for years have considered marrow transplants as a possible treatment for Gaucher's disease. But all hesitate because these transplants can be dangerous and there is no way to test the procedure first.

"We don't have a good animal model for this disease and the safest way to go would be to try it in an animal first," Barranger said in an interview. "We don't have this option."

Proud Celtics face upstart Rockets in NBA finals

BOSTON (AP) — Basketball is a team game, at its best when the five players work together as one, moving the ball around for the open shot on offense and helping each other out on defense.

But it is a team game that can easily be broken down into its component parts — the one-on-one matchups between individual players, matchups that become heated rivalries over the course of a best-of-seven playoff series.

Here is a look at the matchups in the National Basketball Association championship series between the Houston Rockets and Boston Celtics, which begins here tonight:

Center

Moses Malone, Rockets, vs. Robert Parish, Celtics: The 6-foot-10 Malone is an awesome force, a player capable of personally dominating any game. He goes after every rebound and gets more than his share, having led the league with a 14.8 average to go along with his 27.8 scoring mark, second-best in the NBA. He has developed a respectable 15-foot jumper, which greatly enhances his devastating inside game. Malone must have a great series if Houston is to have any chance.

Parish, an agile 7-footer, has enjoyed a renaissance in his first year in Boston after falling into a rut in Golden State. He slumped during the Philadelphia series but broke out of it with a solid game in Sunday's finale. He's a streak shooter with a fine turnaround jumper and has also become an active shot-blocker and intimidator.

Forwards

Robert Reid and Billy Paultz, Rockets, vs. Larry Bird and Cedric Maxwell, Celtics: Bird is the key player on the Celtics, one who doesn't have to score to be effective. He led them in scoring and rebounding in six of the seven games of the Philadelphia series, but his passing and floor leadership were just as responsible for the team's success. Reid, who has been a starter at guard as well as forward, will have his hands full trying to contain Bird and will have to concentrate every minute he's on the floor.

Maxwell and Paultz are both most effective from 15 feet in. The 6-11 Paultz has a three-inch height advantage, but Maxwell is considerably quicker and could present problems. Paulz doubles as a backup center.

Guards

Tom Henderson and Mike Dunleavy, Rockets, vs. Nate Archibald and Chris Ford, Celtics: Henderson, who quarterbacked the 1978 Washington Bullets to the title, gives Houston an experienced playmaker and Dunleavy can be an effective outside shooter at times. The 32-year-old Archibald has had a big season as the lead man on the Celtics' fast break and also running their half-court offense, averaging 13.8 points and 7.7 assists per game and reestablishing himself as one of the best point guards in the game. Ford is a streak shooter who can be effective from three-point range but lacks consistency.

Reserves

Calvin Murphy is Houston's second most potent weapon behind Malone. The 5-foot-9 veteran has provided scoring punch off the bench, averaging 16.7 points per game and setting NBA records with 78 consecutive free throws and a .957 foul shooting percentage for the season. Allen Leavell gives the Rockets a very quick backup playmaker but often is erratic. Major Jones and Bill Willoughby provide some rebounding, but 32-year-old Rudy Tomjanovich has become a forgotten man, rarely getting off the bench anymore.

Boston's bench is loaded with role players. Rick Robey comes in at center and bangs the boards for 10 minutes, letting Parish grab a breather. Rookie Kevin McHale plays tough defense, blocks shots, rebounds and hits a few shots. M.L. Carr comes in at big guard and bodies his man all over the court, not letting him get off an open shot. Gerald Henderson, while erratic, was an effective replacement for Archibald during the seventh game against Philadelphia.

Coaching

Del Harris, Rockets, vs. Bill Fitch, Celtics: Both are both completing their second seasons as head coach of these teams, but Fitch has a t edge in experience with nine years Cleveland under his belt. Fitch, aft getting away from his normal patte of substitution in last year's playof stuck with his reserves this time a it paid off against the 76ers. Harr one of the lesser-known NBA coache deserves credit for leading the Roc ets to the finals after they bare made the playoffs on the final wee end of the regular season. He has ke Houston playing within its limits, en phasizing the team's obviou strengths in Malone and Murphy an doing an effective job of masking it weaknesses, such as a vulnerabilit to a running game.

Intangibles

The Celtics hold the home-court advantage and the Rockets have a miserable 3-30 record at Boston Garden, including 0-5 in playoff competition. Boston has won the last 13 times the teams have played, including a four-game sweep in the conference semis last year.

Boston may suffer a let-down following its emotion-charged series against Philadelphia, and Houston has won the opening game on the road in each of its three playoff series so far. The Celtics may also be tired, since the last two games were brutal physical confrontations. Houston, meanwhile, has been resting since knocking out Kansas City last Wednesday.

Although Boston will be going for its 14th crown while Houston is trying for its first, the only players with championship series experience are Rockets guards Tom Henderson and Mike Dunleavy. Henderson was with the Bullets in 1978 when they won the title and in 1979 when they lost to Seattle in the finals. Dunleavy was with the 76ers in 1977 when they lost to Portland in the finals.

Montreal Expos' Rolland Office slides into Los Angeles Dodgers' catcher Mike Scioscia knocking the ball out of his control and scoring the Expos first run during the National League baseball game in Montreal Monday night.

Carlton hot left-hander too

By The Associated Press

You may not have heard it, but there's another hot left-hander in the National League in addition to Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Remember Steve Carlton, last year's Cy Young winner?

While the sensational Valenzeula has been making news with his peerless 6-0 record, Carlton has been pitching just as steadily as last season for the World Champion Philadelphia Phillies.

Monday night, the unbeaten Carlton posted his fifth straight victory with a 6-4 decision over the San Francisco Giants.

Carlton is off to his best start in 16 years. Monday night was his 25th straight start in which he didn't allow more than four runs in a game. Incidentally, he moved ahead of Carl Hubbell into 11th place on the all-time National League victory list with 254.

In other NL action, it was Atlanta 9, St. Louis 6; Montreal 4, Los Angeles 3 and Houston 5, Chicago 4.

After spotting the Giants a 4-0 lead in the first three innings, Carlton settled down and allowed only two hits through the final six and finished with a seven-hitter. He struck out eight to boost his career strikeout total to 3,014, just one behind Cincinnati's Tom Seaver for fifth place on the all-time list.

The Phillies started their comeback in the third when Carlton hit his first triple since July 1978 and scored on a sacrifice fly by Greg Gross.

The Phillies scored again in the fourth on Larry Bowa's RBI single. They added a run in the fifth on Pete Rose's RBI single and went ahead for good in the sixth on a run-scoring base hit by Bob Boone and an RBI groundout by Carlton.

Braves 9, Cardinals 6

Bob Horner slugged four hits and drove in three runs, including the tiebreaker in a three-run eighth inning, as Atlanta cooled off St. Louis. Horner doubled home the first run of the eighth to provide the Braves with a 5-4 lead. Atlanta scored two more runs in the inning on Glenn Hubbard's single and then added insurance in the ninth on Chris Chambliss' two-run base hit.

The loss was only the second in the last 13 games for the Cardinals.

Expos 4, Dodgers 3

Steve Rogers scattered seven hits in 81-3 innings and Montreal took advantage of two Los Angeles errors in a four-run second to beat the Dodgers. Only one of the Expos' runs against Los Angeles starter Rick Sutcliffe was earned.

Warren Cromartie singled to lead off the second, and one out later, Rowland Office walked. Cromartie was thrown out at the plate on Chris Speier's single, but Office scored while Speier was reaching second base after being caught in a rundown.

Rogers then hit a sharp bouncer that got past Ron Cey at third base for an error, allowing Speier to score. After Tim Raines walked, Rodney Scott blooped a single to score Rogers, and Raines also came home when right fielder Rick Monday bobbled the ball for an error.

Cey homered for one of the Dodgers' runs and they got two more in the ninth before Elias Sosa shut the door in relief.

Astros 5, Cubs 4

Jose Cruz' three-run homer in the first inning powered Houston over Chicago. Terry Puhl opened the Houston first by reaching on an error and Danny Heep drew a walk before Cruz smashed his fifth homer, off Mike Krukow.

The Astros added their eventual winning runs in the sixth inning on successive singles by Mike Ivie, Art Howe, Alan Ashby and Kiko Garcia.

Winner Joaquin Andujar was working on a six-hit shutout when Hector Cruz, Jose's brother, hit his first homer of the season in the sixth. The Cubs rallied for three more runs in the ninth before Joe Sambito came out of the bullpen to nail down the victory.

Cubs blank El Paso

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland's Cubs, four-hit by El Paso pitching twice in this series, had to watch another four-hitter, but this time it was one they could sit back and enjoy for a change.

Lefthander Craig Lefferts closed out the 10-game homestand by hypnotizing El Paso while the Cubs pounded out 12 hits for a 10-0 victory at Cubs Stadium Monday night.

Midland travels to San Antonio tonight to launch a five-game series against the Dodgers after concluding a 4-6 homestand against Amarillo and El Paso.

IT WAS not only Lefferts' third win of the season and second complete game, but marked the first shutout of the season by a Midland pitcher, although the southpaw who hurled the University of Arizona to the NCAA College World Series championship last spring, has flirted with goose eggs on a couple of other occasions.

Tom Grant paced Midland's attack with three hits, including a triple, to knock in two runs and extend his consecutive game hitting streak to 13.

Perhaps even more encouraging for Manager Roy Hartsfield was the timely stick work of some of his other Cubs. For example, slump ridden Randy LaVigne, who a year ago at this time was pacing the Texas League in runs-batted-in, ignited a six-run second with a two-run bases loaded single.

"Randy is a hitter of record," Hartsfield says referring to LaVigne's past statistics, "He's got to start hitting soon."

IN THE same frame, Mel Hall lashed a two-run double and Grant got one of his rbis with a single.

Grant singled, stole second and scored on Carmello Martinez' single down the left field line in the fifth and was passed purposely during the Cubs' two-run sixth as catcher Mike Diaz singled home both runs.

Midland's other run came in the ninth when Dave Owen singled and Grant tripled into the left field corner.

It all served to make the outing a lark for Lefferts, now 3-2. It was almost a routine shutout, if there is such a thing. Wayne Simmons, starting at second, turned Ron Koenigsfeld's grounder into a double play to erase leadoff batter Eddie Irvine in the first. Owen came up with the play of the night in the second when Terry Shoebridge drilled a hot grounder into the hole on the left side. Owen went to his right, backhanded the ball on the grass and whirled to get the runner with a major league throw.

Grant then went to the warning track to shag John Skorochocki's fly in the third.

Lefferts, in turning the tables on the Diablos who had four-hit the Cubs twice earlier in the series, walked only one and fanned three in his masterpiece.

Grant continued to swing one of the hottest bats in the Texas League, raising his average to .449. However, during the 13-game streak, the Mendon, Mass., outfielder is 24-for-49, .480 with 16 rbi and five homers.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—The Cubs return home next Monday for the first invasion of the TL East...Lefthander Norm Churchill went on the disabled list, tender elbow, and Carlos Gil came off the disabled list, which means Hartsfield will altering his pitching rotation. Gil, 0-2, has pitched since April 18...Randy Hundley's suspension at Iowa is for four days...The Cubs are now 6-8 at home...

Davis and Foote lift Yanks to win

By The Associated Press

Lately, when Ron Davis throws baseballs, nobody hits them. And no matter who pitches the ball, Barry Foote seems to hit them ... out of the park.

That combination — along with Lou Piniella and rookie pitcher Gene Nelson — bedeviled the California Angels 4-2 Monday night.

Davis tied an American League record with eight consecutive strikeouts and, added to the five batters he fanned to conclude a Yankee victory in Oakland Sunday, he's struck out 13 of the last 14 men to face him.

Foote, acquired from the Chicago Cubs last week as a fill-in for injured catcher Rick Cerone, hit his fourth homer as a Yankee in the sixth inning after Piniella had homered earlier in the inning to put the Yanks on top 3-2.

NELSON, A 20-year-old rookie who is the youngest player in the majors, won his big league debut with six solid innings.

Elsewhere in the AL, it was Baltimore over Minnesota 4-3 in 10 innings; Milwaukee besting Seattle 9-5, and Boston and Kansas City deadlocking 5-5 in a game suspended by curfew after 10 innings.

Don Baylor, the first batter Davis faced, popped up. Then he went on his strikeout tear, tying the AL record accomplished by Nolan Ryan twice in the early 1970s.

Orioles 4, Twins 3, 10 innings

Pinch-hitting specialist Terry Crowley, a lifetime .300 hitter when coming off the bench, singled in the winning run for Baltimore off reliever Doug Corbett. the Orioles have won five of six and snapped a five-game Minnesota winning streak.

"I'd be stupid if I wanted to play every day," said Crowley, 34 and a 10-year veteran. "All I want to do is continue to make this club a pennant-winner.

"I get a chance to be designated hitter and I start at first base every one in a while. This keeps me sharp."

Brewers 9, Mariners 5

Robin Yount had a big night with two homers and four RBI and Gorman Thomas also homered for Milwaukee. Jerry Narron had a three-run shot for Seattle.

Prior to the game, Yount was hitting .210 with five RBI and no homers.

"I've always had good luck in this ballpark," said Yount. "I've always hit well here. I'm just trying to hit it solid. A game like this sure helps. It gave me a lot more confidence than I had before.

"I still need to work on my stroke. I don't feel that it is all that comfortable yet."

Red Sox 5, Royals 5
10 innings,suspended

Boston, which has lost seven in a row, scored in the top of the ninth on Jerry Remy's run-scoring single to go ahead 5-4. But the Royals got a leadoff triple from Ken Phelps and a sacrifice fly by Cesar Geronimo to tie the game, which will be picked up prior to tonight's regularly scheduled contest.

The start of the game was delayed two hours and 16 minutes by rain.

Hall of Fame Dinner to honor four

The Petroleum Museum's Hall of Fame Dinner will be held Wednesday night at Green Tree Country Club, Midland to honor four well-known oil men.

Sponsored by the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, the May 6 dinner will be the eighth and largest of a series that began in 1968. The museum elects no more than four individuals at intervals of at least two years to its Hall of Fame.

Two of this year's electees live in Midland. N. Ford Chapman, Jr., is one of the comparatively few cable-tool drilling contractors left in the American oil industry and is also a successful wildcatter. The other Midlander is Stanley C. Moore, retired board chairman of Smith International, Inc. Moore founded Drilco, a Smith division, and pioneered many developments in drilling technology.

The other two honorees, both deceased, are Jesse Clement Barnes Sr., who maintained residences in both Midland and Fort Myers, Florida, and Charles V. Lyman, who spent much of his later years in Scottsdale, Arizona. Barnes died in Fort Myers in 1975, and Lyman in Phoenix in 1977.

Speaker at the dinner will be H.E. "Eddie" Chiles of Fort Worth, chairman and chief executive officer of The Western Company of North America. Chils, whose "I'm mad!" boadcast messages made him known over much of the nation, is the founder of The Western Company and chairman of the Texas Rangers Baseball Team.

Seven completions filed in District 8-A counties

Seven completions have been reported in Crosby, Dawson, King and Lubbock counties by the Texas Railroad Commission District 8-A, headquartered in Lubbock.

Third hearing slated in thefts investigation

DENVER (AP) — The Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs will conduct a hearing June 1 in Albuquerque, N.M., into allegations of widespread theft of oil from Indian and federal lands, spokesmen said.

Officials believe millions of dollars in oil have been stolen from Indian and federal oil fields every year, and the allegations have sparked an investigation by the U.S. Justice Department.

The upcoming hearing will be chaired by Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., who is the senior minority member of the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs. The hearing will explore how oil and gas monitoring is done in other Western areas by the U.S. Geological Survey, said Max Richtman, minority staff director for the committee.

The U.S. Geological Survey and its office in Casper, Wyo., came under sharp criticism during two earlier hearings held by the committee. The agency was charged with failure to complete prompt investigations into reports of theft and violations of government regulations in federal and Indian oil fields.

Representatives from USGS offices in Menlo Park, Calif., Denver and Albuquerque will testify at the one-day hearing, said Richtman. Members of the Osage and Navajo tribes are expected to answer questions on management of their oil fields.

Melcher has said laws will have to be passed in Congress to correct some of the agency's regulatory problems and he added that the necessary legislation will be drafted by midsummer.

Policies delay production; areas still offer potential

HOUSTON (AP) — Irratic federal leasing policies have delayed production but the nation's areas still offer great oil and gas potential, a Shell Oil Company official says.

Leasing schedules and energy policies of the past decade also have contributed to the current and potential shortages of trained people and equipment, C.L. Blackburn, Shell's executive vice president said Monday.

"It is criticially important to our nation's future that all promising offshore areas be explored quickly and efficiently to determine the real potential for production," Blackburn told a general session of the Offshore Technology Conference.

"The delays in federal lease offerings in the period between 1975 and the end of 1980 mean that much of the production we were expecting to come onstream during the 1980s will be delayed until 1990 or even beyond," Blackburn said.
