Grand Jury Indictment Claims Watergate Cover-Up Began Quickly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Watergate grand jury has charged that within hours of the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic national headquarters, the cover-up was under way at the highest levels of President Nixon's White House staff.

The 50-page indictment issued Friday says that in the weeks and months that followed, the persons closest to Nixon destroyed evidence, paid $557,500 in "hush money" to the Watergate burglars to buy their silence and thwarted efforts by the FBI, the Justice Department and later the courts to find out the truth.

President Nixon has said that during this time he was ordering these same close aides to cooperate openly with the investigators because the "truth had to come out." But even on the dates Nixon said he gave the orders, the indictment claims the cover-up conspiracy going ahead.

An indictment, it should be noted, is only an allegation. It is not proof or even evidence.

Among those indicted on conspiracy and other charges were former attorney general and Nixon campaign director John N. Mitchell; and former close Nixon aides H.R. "Bob" Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman.

Obtain Release

The grand jury charged that within hours of the break-in, then campaign chief John N. Mitchell met with Robert C. Mardian, an aide who also was indicted for conspiracy. It said Mitchell told Mardian to seek the assistance of then Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst in obtaining the release of one or more of those arrested in the burglary.

Kleindienst, who was not indicted, has testified he resisted such attempts.

The day after the burglary, the indictment said, Gordon Strachan, Haldeman's assistant who also was charged with conspiracy, destroyed documents relating to the incident on orders from his boss.

Two days after the burglary, the grand jurors said, Ehrlichman met with White House Counsel John W. Dean III, and Ehrlichman "directed" Dean to tell conspirators G. Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt to leave the country.

On the same day, Charles W. Colson, a presidential special counsel who also was indicted for conspiracy, met with Ehrlichman and Dean at the White House, the indictment charged. It said Ehrlichman directed Dean to take possession of the contents of Hunt's safe.

Also on that day, Mitchell and Mardian met and Mitchell "suggested" that documents from the file of Jeb Stuart Magruder, the deputy campaign manager, be destroyed, the indictment said. Previous testimony indicated Magruder had the "Gemstone files" which contained documents obtained in Watergate burglaries.

The indictment said the first talk of "commitments" for the benefit of the burglars came on June 20, three days after the break-in, at a meeting Mardian attended with Liddy and presidential adviser Fred C. LaRue. Four days later, the indictment said, Mardian and Mitchell suggested to Dean that the CIA provide "covert funds" for the burglars' assistance.

Allegedly Made Payments

Step by step over the next few months, the alleged coverup was traced by the indictment, including the involvement of another defendant, Kenneth W. Parkinson, a lawyer for the Nixon re-election committee, who allegedly made the payments to the Watergate burglars.

The crucial part of the indictment centers on a meeting Nixon had with Haldeman and Dean at the White House March 21, 1973. This is the date Nixon said he first learned the details of the cover-up, ordered a complete investigation, and told his aides to cooperate fully with the FBI and the Justice Department.

Haldeman told the Senate Watergate committee Dean told Nixon at that meeting it would take $1 million to support the expenses of the Watergate burglars.

"The President said 'there is no problem in raising a million dollars, we can do that, but it would be wrong'," Haldeman testified. The grand jury, underlining the crucial phrase "but it would be wrong," charged Haldeman with lying about that phrase.

Nixon, in a news conference last Aug. 22, said: "Mr. Haldeman has testified and his statement is accurate ... I said 'John, it's wrong.'"

Dean insisted the President never added the phrase "but it would be wrong." The grand jurors did not have to depend solely on Dean's testimony. They have heard the White House tape of the March 21 meeting.

Rejected As "Blackmail"

At the news conference, Nixon said a demand by Hunt for $120,000 in cash was discussed and rejected as "blackmail."

Airplane Crash Kills 345

PARIS (UPI) — A preliminary report on the crash of a Turkish Airlines DC10 jetliner said today a bomb explosion could have brought down the widebodied aircraft which nosedived to earth from 13,000 feet Sunday, killing 345 persons in aviation's worst disaster.

Orly Airport sources said specialists had prepared a report for Airport Director Gilbert Dreyfus who is leading the inquiry. "The report states that the possibility of an explosion is supported by an important number of them," the sources said.

Turkish airline sources in Istanbul said the airline had information that three Japanese and two Arabs aboard the crashed plane were guerrillas. They said the five had planned to sabotage a British Airways flight from Paris to London but were transferred to the Turkish plane because of a strike by British engineers in London and that their bombs exploded in flight.

The airline sources said there also was a possibilty the reported guerrillas were linked with the seizure later in the day of a British Airways jet after takeoff from Beirut. Arab commandos blew up the aircraft in Amsterdam after letting 102 persons on board flee the plane.

Most of the victims in the Turkish Airlines crash were believed to be Britons, including a police amateur rugby team, although no passenger list was available. The number of Americans aboard also was not known but the U.S. Embassy in London said the victims included its cultural attache, Dr. Wayne Wilcox, his wife and two of their children. Japanese Embassy sources said 49 Japanese were aboard. The Turks said there were 15 Turkish nationals on the plane.

Turkish President Bulent Ecevit told newsmen in Istanbul:

"At present I cannot say whether the plane was sabotaged or not but we are reviewing every possibility. The question of whether the plane was sabotaged or not will be cleared following technical examinations which I presume will last a couple of weeks."

Orly field sources said the passenger search before takeoff was normal and that the plane was searched for explosives and none was found. Hand baggage was searched but not the suitcases of the 216 persons who joined the flight in Paris.

Police said they found six bodies at a spot seven miles before the impact point. Newspapers said this could have happened only if the plane was breaking up as a result of an explosion or some other cause before it hit the woods.

Eyewitness reports were conflicting. One witness said he saw the plane's tail break off. Another witness said the plane was intact until it crashed and that no fire or smoke was visible aboard.

In Ankara, Turkish Communications Minister Ferda Gulley said he could not rule out sabotage. Turkish pilots issued a statement saying the crash was the work of saboteurs.

The three-engined plane smashed into the Ermenonville Woods five minutes after takeoff from Orly Airport on a flight to London.

The U.S. Embassy said a delegation from the U.S. National Safety Transportation Board arrived in Paris and joined the investigation at the crash site. Turkish and French investigators also were at work.

The American officials are taking part in the inquiry because the DC10 was U.S.-built.

Airport sources said the black box tape-recorder was taken to the Civil Aviation and Space Testing Center at Bretigny sur Orge, 35 miles south of Paris, where experts began to study precrash flight data.

Authorities said it would be impossible to identify most of the bodies. "This is the most horrible sight I've ever seen," a firemen at the scene said.

Mistrial Motion Denied

NEW YORK (UPI) — A federal judge today denied a motion for a mistrial in the case of former Nixon cabinet officers John N. Mitchell and Maurice H. Stans, accused of obstruction of justice.

Defense attorneys for Mitchell, former attorney general, and Stans, former commerce secretary, had sought a mistrial on the basis of the opening statement to the jury by the prosecution.

That was near the end of the opening statement of Assistant U.S. Attorney James W. Rayhill Friday when Stans's lawyer contended, Rayhill asked the trial jury to equate itself with the grand jury that had indicted the two on charges of lying under oath, conspiracy, and obstruction of justice.

Veteran court observers doubted that Federal Judge Lee P. Gagliardi would call a mistrial. But then ... he had been stern in ordering a halt to the trial Friday afternoon, had given the government until 7 p.m. Friday "to provide an excuse" for the statement, and had given the defense only 24 hours to reply to the "excuse."

The two former cabinet members are accused of using their political influence to try to sidetrack a major federal investigation of Robert L. Vesco, the fugitive financier, in exchange for his secret $200,000 contribution to the Nixon 1972 campaign.

Mitchell now faces a maximum of 30 years in prison and $40,000 in fines if convicted in Washington, in addition to the 50 years both he and Stans could get in the New York case.

The New York jury of eight men and four women was isolated from news of the Watergate indictment. It will be sequestered for the trial duration.

Patricia's Parents Waiting For Reply

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A full month after Patricia Hearst was kidnaped, her parents waited today for a reply to their dramatic televised plea for word the 20-year-old heiress is still okay.

Randolph A. and Catherine Hearst broke nine days of silence Sunday when they stepped to a bank of microphones in front of their Hillsborough home "to talk to our daughter" and to ask her captors to let Patricia send them a note or tape recording.

"You've never harmed anybody and I know that pretty soon God will touch their hearts and they'll send you home again," said the kdinaped coed's mother.

Her father told the Symbionese Liberation Army, which has not been heard from in 11 days, that Patricia had the right to correspond with her family if she was being held as a prisoner of war—as her terrorist abductors have repeatedly contended.

Hearst told his daughter to "see if they'll let you send us a note or something and say that you're okay." He said the Geneva Convention, which sets down rules for treatment of war prisoners, allows POWs to write or correspond with others.

Miss Hearst was snatched from her Berkeley apartment exactly one month ago—on the evening of Feb. 4—by two men and a woman who badly beat her fiance and fired several shots before fleeing with their hostage.

The SLA, a tiny leftist terrorist band, sent a series of ransom demands which resulted in Hearst and the Hearst Foundation providing $2 million for a free food giveaway to the needy.

The SLA then demanded $4 million more in handouts as a preliminary to negotiations and threatened to break off communications and hold Patricia as a prisoner of war if Hearst did not immediately put up the money. He said he didn't have and the Hearst Corp. would provide $4 million for food—but only after the girl was freed.

Since then, the kidnapers have not been heard from. The last message from Patricia to her parents was taped on Feb. 19.

"We might ask that people that are holding you if you could be allowed to send us a letter or get in touch with us by tape," added Hearst, president and editor of the San Francisco Examiner.

"It's of course ridiculous to think that under the Geneva Convention we're going to be allowed to go in and see you, that anybody can go in. But under the convention you are allowed to write or correspond with other people," he said.

Arab Hijackers Take Plane, Set It Ablaze At Amsterdam

AMSTERDAM (UPI) — Two Arabs refused today to tell police interrogators why they hijacked a British Airways VC10, forced it to fly to Amsterdam, freed the 102 passengers and crew and then set the airliner afire with whisky, perfume and explosives.

Police said they had questioned the two continuously since their capture on the tarmac of Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport Sunday night.

"They told us nothing at all," an airport police spokesman said.

Two young Arab hijackers seized the British Airways VC10, carrying 92 passengers and 10 crewmen, Sunday afternoon 90 minutes after the four-engine jetliner took off from Beirut on a flight to London.

Three hours later, the guerrillas ordered passengers and crew out of the blue, silver and white plane at Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport and used the duty-free whiskey and perfume aboard as fuel to burn and blow up the aircraft.

The police spokesman said airport police had questioned the hijackers until midnight. State police then took them away to a place "somewhere in the country safe behind locked doors" for further interrogation, he said.

Although the hijackers spoke only broken English with authorities, police "had the impression they were good in English but preferred to keep their mouths shut," he said.

When the Arabs left the plane, the spokesman said, "they took a terrible risk by not keeping any of the passengers as hostages. Sharpshooters sitting in armored cars had their fingers on the trigger."

A police officer "unwittingly kept them from firing by walking toward the hijackers with his hands up," he said.

The officer persuaded the skyjackers to give up their ammunition, he said.

A Justice Ministry spokesman said the case "is now in the hands of the public prosecutor of the city of Haarlem under whose judicial authority the airport is."

All the passengers as well as the two commandos slid to safety down the plane's emergency chutes before the blaze touched off plastic explosives left behind in the aircraft.

Authorities said the interior of the plane was badly damaged by the fire and explosions, but the jet was not expected to be a total loss.

The two hijackers, who identified themselves as Abu Said and Abu Ali, members of an Arab youth organization, were taken into custody when they slid down the chute after the passengers. They apparently had made no ransom demands.

The drama aboard the plane, which had stopped in Beirut on a trip from Bombay to London, began just after lunch was served. Two men with guns suddenly ran forward through the jet.

Mrs. Meir Reconsiders Decision On Resignation

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Prime Minister Golda Meir delayed a planned meeting today with President Ephraim Katzir, setting off speculation she might have changed her mind about abandoning a seven-week attempt to form a new government.

Mrs. Meir had scheduled an 11:30 a.m. meeting to tell Katzir she would give someone else a chance to lead Israel, but the session was put back to 5 p.m. without explanation.

"The postponement has led to speculation that she may be reconsidering her decision," a political source said. "She's meeting with various people at the moment."

Sources in the National Religious party, which has refused to rejoin Mrs. Meir's government because of a dispute over Jewish law, said, however, she might merely need more time to find a candidate to succeed her.

Mrs. Meir stunned her Labor party leaders Sunday, breaking up a tempestuous political discussion about a new government by announcing her plans to step down.

"After what I heard, all this bitterness, I will take my mandate to the president and ask that someone else will take my place," she said.

The decision—if she sticks to it—would put an end to Mrs. Meir's five yers as leader of Israel. She would stay on as caretaker prime minister until a new government was chosen.

Political analysts predicted either new elections or the creation of a broad coalition government including the right wing Likud bloc if the 75-year-old grandmother turns down demands from supporters from her to stay on.

She was unable to get together a coalition with more than 58 seats in the 120-member Knesset (parliament) despite increasing calls from Labor party leaders for a majority government.

Easter Seal Letters Being Delivered Now

Easter Seal Appeal letters are being delivered this week in Gray County, according to Mrs. Betty Casey, the Easter seal representative of the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults of Texas.

As representative, Mrs. Casey serves as contact representative for disabled persons needing Easter Seal rehabilitation services and also serves as treasurer of the Easter Seal Appeal in Gray County.

The Easter Seal Society offers physical and occupational therapy, speech and hearing programs, and special equipments loans to enable disabled persons to make the best use of their abilities to overcome handicaps. These services are financed by the annual Easter Seal Appeal.

The Society also finances public education programs, provides scholarships for training of professional personnel to staff rehabilitation centers, and helps provide for national research into the causes and cures of crippling conditions.

Mrs. Casey pointed out that all these programs are important if Texas is going to continue to provide the best in rehabilitation services for its own disabled citizens.

During 1973, The Texas Easter Seal Society provided treatment and services for $20,570 children and adults who were in need of assistance.

Easter Seal services are available to any disabled person who can benefit from help provided by the Easter Seal Society, and who do not qualify for any other assistance, Mrs. Casey added.

The Easter Seal Campaign will continue through Easter Sunday, April 14.

Then and Now

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — In the 1950's, Mrs. Rosa Parks triggered the bus boycott here because she refused to give up her seat on a bus to whites. Her prosecution sparked years of civil rights demonstrations.

Just before Christmas, Mrs. Parks stopped here and paid a surprise visit on Gov. George C. Wallace. He thanked her for stopping by his office.

She now works in the office of Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich.

Divorces Hurt Children

MUNICH, Germany (UPI) — Every seventh marriage in West Germany is dissolved, according to figures released by the Caritas, the Roman Catholic charity organization.

Caritas said the number of children affected by divorces had more than doubled over the last 15 years.

In 1971 a total of 80,000 couples divorced involving and 42,890 children.

Price Gives EPA Plan On Cyanide Pellet Okay

U.S. Rep. Bob Price of Pampa has given his okay to the Environmental Protection Agency's approval of an experimental use permit in 44 Texas counties for the use of a sodium cyanide pellet gun for the control of coyotes and other predators.

The permit, recently approved by the EPA in Washington, calls for testing of a spring - loaded sodium cyanide ejector mechanism which is contained in a six - inch tube planted in the ground which discharges a lethal dose of poison into the mouth of a coyote that tugs at a scented device placed at the top of the tube.

The permit enables ranchers to use the system on private land in Cottle, Dickens and King counties in the 13th Congressional District, and in 41 other counties of Texas.

Counties other than the 44 test counties may use the mechanism with potassium cyanide pellets but sodium cyanide.

The EPA placed a ban on chemical toxicants in controlling predators in 1972, although the ban did not cover the use of potassium cyanide. Last October the U.S. House Agriculture Committee, of which Price is a member, passed a resolution calling for use of the sodium cyanide pellet gun because of its instant and humane killing effects and the rapid decomposition of the pellets which tend to avoid secondary kills.

EPA's recent test permit appears to be a response to that action.

The test counties outside the 13th District are located in Central Texas, the Big Bend Country and the King Ranch area in South Texas.

Carr, Osorio Trial Opening

DALLAS (UPI) — Testimony was expected to begin today in a securities fraud and conspiracy case involving former Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr and former insurance commissioner John Osorio.

Also charged in he case are Dallas businessman David Hoover.

Felony charges have been dropped against Thano Dameris, after he pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of using a "manipulative device" in violation of a Securities Exchange Commission regulation in connection with the purchase and sale of securities.

Dakota, a confederation of Sioux Indian tribes, and the name given to two states, means "allies."

Dear Abby

Son's New Year's house party was a sober idea

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Our son, Peter, who is 21 and a senior at college, came home for the Christmas vacation. He invited six couples to the house for a New Year's Eve party. My husband and I planned on staying home, altho all the kids were 21 and didn't need a chaperone.

Peter's invitation read as follows: "If you plan to drink, please plan to stay all night. Sleeping bags will be provided."

I didn't like the idea of a coed slumber party, and said that no daughter of mine would be allowed to accept such an invitation—even at 21!

My husband sided with Peter. He had the party, and everybody stayed all night. How would you have voted, Abby?

MOM

DEAR MOM: Not with you, Mom. Sorry. All the kids were 21, and I think your son used excellent judgment.

DEAR ABBY: A writer recently inquired about providing a simple funeral for himself even tho his wife insisted that should she survive him, he would be given an elaborate funeral with all the trimmings. You advised him to seek legal counsel.

Abby, the California Laws Regulating Licensed Funeral Directors and Embalmers [Sec. 7100] states that "prior to one's death one may direct by written instruction the type of burial he desires, and those otherwise entitled to control the disposition of his remains shall faithfully carry out his instructions."

I think it would probably be safe to assume that most other states have similar provisions.

A. S. H.: LONG BEACH, CAL.

DEAR Mr. H.: Thank you for the information regarding California law. But I have learned [the hard way] that when it comes to state laws, one may not safely assume anything.

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe I am actually writing Dear Abby, but I have a solution for people who want to know how to get off those junk-mailing lists.

Write to: Direct Mail Advertising Association Inc., 230 Park Ave, New York, N. Y. 10017. Request an application form, and it will be sent to you free of charge. Fill it out and return it. I did, and some days, I don't get any mail at all!

ANTI-JUNK MAIL

DEAR ANTI: Writing this column has been an endless education. And I'm still learning. Thanks, friend.

DEAR ABBY: Cheers to you, Abby, for telling that bride that merely saying, "Thank you for the lovely wedding gift," when she accidentally bumped into the giver in a restaurant one evening is not sufficient. All wedding gifts should be acknowledged with a written note.

Or to borrow a phrase from Sam Goldwyn: "A verbal thank you isn't worth the paper it's written on."

J. B. S.: CHAMPAIGN, ILL.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212.

Why Grow Old?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Keep Good Eating Habits You Have Just Developed

LIMBER YOUR SPINE — This will limber up your spine and come to the aid of your neckline. Sit on the floor, cross-legged. Place both hands on the outside of your left thigh, palms toward the thigh. Pull against your thigh as you twist your torso to the left. At the same time look over your left shoulder. Return torso to starting position. This time place hands on right thigh and twist to the right. Look over your right shoulder. Pull back with the hands. Return to starting position and continue alternating. Do this slowly.

This is the last in a series of 15 articles in which Josephine Lowman, author of WHY GROW OLD? and leading authority on health and beauty, tells yo exactly what to do to lose 20 pounds in eight weeks. You may want to save these menus and exercises to refer back to during the eight - week period.

Congratulations! I am sure that many of you out there deserve them and other soon will. You have lost tiring unattractive pounds, and feel and look years younger. Many of you are now wondering how to stay that way, how to keep the prize you have won with determination and self discipline.

I hope you have formed new habits in eating during my eight week Beauty Improvement Plan. I trust that skim milk or powdered fat - free milk has made whole milk unappealing, that you have learned you can season food lusciously with herbs and that raw vegetables have a delicate flavor when not smothered with fat. Perhaps gravy and pastries do not seem so important to you as they did and hopefully you have broken the habit of snacking.

Don't return to the old food habits which piled the unwanted pounds on you in the first place. That is the way to keep your lovely figure and it is also the way to vibrant health.

Of course you can have more calories now that you had while reducing. However take it slow and easy. Do not suddenly up our calorie intake by 1000.

The best plan is to increase the number of calories which were allowed each day by 200-300 a day, do this every two weeks. Watch your weight carefully. When it seems stabilized, keep it there.

From now on make it a lifetime habit to weigh yourself once a week. Never ignore more than a two pound gain. Those are easy to lose but left alone two pounds can turn into ten before you know it. Regular weighing is essential!

I hope many of you will write to me about your results when you finish this course. Please share your happiness with me. At the end of next summer I will publish some of your letters, without using your name. Tell me how this has affected your happiness or health or both. I am always as excited as you are by your success.

This is the last time I will be offering my eight week Beauty Improvement Plan for a long time. If you missed part of this series and would like to begin now to see how much you can improve your appearance in the next eight weeks, you may want my Bip Kit. This gives you complete directions for a loss of from 15-20 pounds and many inches during that time and has a unique wall chart on which you can plot your progress and see your beauty line rise as your weight line drops. If you would like to have this send 50 cents and a long, self - addressed stamped envelope to Josephine Lowman in care of the Register and Tribune Syndicate, Des Moines, Iowa, 50304.

DMF Has Covered Dish Supper Meet

Mrs. Dave Kerns and Tommy Bruce hosted the February party of the Cities Service Gas DMF recently in the Blue Flame Room. A patriotic them was carried out.

Following a covered dish supper the group played Bingo.

Mary Holman and Helen Tate were guests of the group.

Mrs. Jack Becker and Wayne Askin will host the March party, and the group voted to have the meetings each month.

Those present were Wayne Brown, Charles Tate, Frank Holman, John Ryan, David Budd, Larry Hempkin, Dick Brown, Jack Becker, J.W. Gambill, Steve Dewey, Ed Wiens, Harold Bruington, C.D. Anderson and Leon Brown.

Mrs. Frank Holman and Charles Tate hosted the January party in Mrs. Holman's home.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Brown were honored with a retirement party in January at Furr's Cafeteria. Mrs. Brown was presented a money corsage and her husband received a calculator and money from the group.

Brown retired after 38 years service with Cities Service Gas Co.

There was 68 attending the party.

Better Tire Performance

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Conventional snow and ice tires still perform better under winter conditions than the new radial tires, Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. reports. Tests indicate the snow tire without steel studs and the ice tire with studs give about 50 per cent better traction in snow than radials designed for highway driving in the warm and temperature months, Goodyear said.

Karpin On Bridge

By FRED KARPIN

When declarer loses a finesse, he loses not only a trick, but also quite frequently the "timing" of the hand. As an obvious fact, when the defenders gain the timing, they will use it to further their cause, not declarer's.

In today's deal our South declarer took an unnecessary finesse; and, in so doing, he lost a trick, the timing — and his contract.

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♠ A Q 7
♡ 8 5 3
♢ Q 10 4
♣ A Q 6 2

WEST
♠ J 2
♡ K 9 4

SOUTH
♠ K 10 5
♡ A J 2
♢ K J 9 7 5
♣ J 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♣.

After West had opened the five of clubs (presumably his fourth - highest), there was no doubt but that West, rather than East, figured to be the possessor of the club king. The reason was a simple mathematical one: West had at least four clubs, and might well have five of them (if he also had the three - spot); while East had a maximum of three clubs; and perhaps only two.

So, without counting his tricks, declarer played the deuce of clubs off dummy, finessing against West's presumed king. Upon winning the trick with his king, East made a fine switch at trick two to the six of hearts. South played low, and West's nine won the trick. West continued with the heart king, which declarer permitted to win. West's remaining heart was led next, South's ace capturing the trick.

When declarer then led a diamond to the board's queen, East took his ace and cashed the thirteenth heart, for the setting trick.

While West rated to have the club king, declarer was very wrong in playing the hand as he did, for he had an absolutely guaranteed contract. All he had to do was to capture the opening club lead with dummy's ace and promptly attack the diamond suit. Sooner or later East would take his ace, and at that moment declarer would have nine winners: three spades, one heart, four diamonds, and one club.

There is no question but that declarer, in spurning the club finesse, might be tossing away an overtrick or two, which would be the case if West actually had the king of clubs. But, as all bridge players know, one does not play for an overtrick if, in so playing, he jeopardizes his contract. Let us hope that South learned his lesson.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, MARCH 5

Your birthday today: From a slow take-off, your prosperity can build steadily all year. Self-discipline and continued investment of energy are essential, not always easy. Relationships flow smoothly once you are past an early phase of testing and being tested. Today's natives attract notice thru strong personal reactions, a flair for dramatizing even trivial routines. These people are never two of a kind, however near in age they may be.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Adopt a natural course of action, with special regard for the feelings of others, and all goes well for a vigorous day of personal progress.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Your excessive concern for home and possessions shouldn't be allowed to take you beyond the range of ready adjustment in family affairs.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: It would be hard to find less provocative and yet so potentially rewarding circumstances, once you get over a morning mood of dissatisfaction.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: A search for obscure information offers extra advantages, gets you out of line just far enough to complicate your schedule.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Flash your brightest smile, and charm your way past an early disagreement. Self-assured, move fast now that you are riding a wave of opportunity.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Additional work, perhaps under somewhat trying conditions, seems almost inescapable. An early start is more help than you can possibly imagine.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Work and play both extend longer than usual. It's up to you to stick within the limits of your budget—and you may not quite make it.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Concentration on the fine points brings results, but you must keep an eye out for the unexpected discrepancy which can be both crisis and opportunity.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: A late start pushes you past the clashes of opinion from relatives and others. Technical advice runs into details which help your understanding.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Added cooperation should not be taken lightly or assumed as permanent. Get long-term benefits confirmed while circumstances are in your favor.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Getting your day off to a good clear beginning involves responding to irritation with calm and gently expressed resolve. Just don't be careless.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Being able to handle those who inadvertently get in the way is its own reward. It's a great day for repaying old obligations.

A Right Inside A Wrong

An employe for the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) leaked information to the New York Times.

The IRS then subpoenaed telephone company records that showed which long - distance numbers New York Times staffmen had been calling. The precise IRS objective for the subpoena is not clear, but alternatives are limited. It appears to be either an investigation of news - gathering, of information leaks from the IRS or both. First indications are that some of the executives of the Times organization are disposed to go to court in the dispute.

The case could be significant if, for no other reason, the issues are so tangled. On the one hand, a person certainly has a right to receive information that is volunteered to him. That is, the Times has a right to receive information from the "talkative" IRS employe, even though the employe may not have been legally authorized to give the information. On the other hand, the IRS — as any other real or corporate person — has a right to take protective action to shut off unauthorized disclosure of information. And, of course, there are many combinations of circumstances that would affect the rightness or the wrongness of what each party did.

The type of decision we would like to see is one that would safeguard the right of every individual to receive news, at the same time securing the power of civil authority to make protective investigations of its own administrative staff. The first part is essential to freedom, the second is indispensable to order.

The question of whether internal revenue statutes that the IRS administers are right or wrong is another subject area entirely. We certainly do not agree with the presumption that they are. Nevertheless that presumption happens to be the prevailing view. As long as that view does prevail, then the logical consequence is that the administrative agency has authority to administer, including necessary investigations of its own personnel.

We make this point to demonstrate that when The News criticizes a government activity — whether of the IRS or some other — we are not criticizing the administrators per se, nor even the agency as a whole. Rather we are attempting to point out that the activity itself is not morally right, is dangerous, or is unnecessarily costly.

For example, we do not believe the tax laws are moral because they amount to theft. Yet, inasmuch as so many people believe otherwise, a presumption arises that sets administrative machinery in motion. We would like to change the presumption, not skirmish with the machine. The goal is to understand right and wrong.

To The Young Traveler

Not all foreign relations can be left to the State Department.

A great deal toward the formation of multi - national goodwill can be conducted only by the individual.

For example, to kick a cow in Iowa is one thing, but to do the same in India is quite another.

A reader called our attention to the American teenagers who were arrested in Bangkok for sacrilege because they sat on an image of Buddha while having their photos snapped.

We doubt that the young people intended to desecrate the shrine. More likely they were trying to adopt it as a part of their memorabilia. The more probable cause of their infraction was a lack of geographical concept. They were looking on Bangkok as an extension of their own homeland, to which attached the customs, cultures and latitude with which they were more familiar. They were supposing that these aspects of America travel with them when they travel abroad. And so they outraged their Thai neighbors.

To be an American is a privilege. Some are born to it. Some achieve it. The privilege is not in outward abundance only. Part of it is in the honor that is accorded by others. To privilege much is given; from privilege something is expected. A little thoughtfulness — an attempt to understand how another nationality might feel — is good for starters.

The sage of the United Organizations of Taxpayers, Howard Jarvis, notes that Democrats topped Republicans in contributions from the milk industry. The score was $613,000 to $577,000. Since the Republican contributions were a bribe to raise the price of milk, Jarvis opines, the Democrat contributions must have been a bribe to raise the price of cream.

Question Box

QUESTION: Am I wrong in think that the people must find a way to eliminate the huge sums expended by candidates for election, or face an ever increasing disregard by those elected to office? It is estimated that only about 40 per cent of our citizens bother to vote. Can you suggest any method not to force them to vote, but to make them want to vote? Can you see in the near future any end to the Watergate scandal and if not can we survive three more years like 1973?

ANSWER: We believe the huge sums of money expended by and for candidates could and should be eliminated, and that if not, the politicains will continue to disregard the interest of the people other than the special interest groups who give them their power.

Our suggestion is and has been that the politicans in government remove themselves from their continued interventions in the lives of the people. If government were restored to its rightful function of protecting the lives and property of all the people, there could be a renewed interest in government.

But when the politicians seek to subsidize and control nearly every human activity, they build a huge, impersonal bureaucracy, which takes over the tasks. The politicians then seek to keep in power by catering to the special interest groups, who donate the huge sums, whether it is business people, farmers, union people, welfare clients, racial groups, or what have you.

The polititicans serve their masters, not the people, and the people become discouraged.

That the people do not choose the candidates is demonstrated clearly in every election. The election then is between candidates not truly of the people's choice, and a great many people no longer take interest. The attitude is "What's the use?" We believe government limited solely to protection of life and property would be much smaller and more manageable, and that non - professional politicians would once again seek to serve their neighbors for limited periods of time. Government then might return to the type sought by the founding fathers.

We think the Watergate scandal will continue so long as the democrat policicians think they can gain politically from that unsavory mess. And we think the Republican politicians would do the same if afforded a similar case against the Democrats.

Perhaps it would be well to quote from George Washington. In his Farewell Address, he warned the people of the danger of parties. He said in part that the spirit of parties "serves always to distract the public councils and enfeeble the public administration. It agaitates the community with ill - founded jealousies and false alarms; kindles the animosity of one part against another; foments occasionally riot and insurrection. It opens the door to foreign influence and corruption, which find a facilitated access to the government through the channels of party passion ..."

We do not hold that our idea of limiting government to its proper function of protecting peaceful people's lives and property will solve all problems. We do believe that Ralph Waldo Emerson that "The less government we have, the better — the fewer laws, the less confided power."

And there'd be little for the politicians to fight over, and the people would be more interested in defending the little government they have.

Cosa Nostra Comeback: New Mafia Boss Taking Over Again

By VICTOR RIESEL

NEW YORK — They'll soon start shooting the second Godfather in lower Manhattan. Paramount Pictures, I mean. The producer papered the Mulberry Street district with leaflets asking the local citizenry to gather at a neighborhood church and play themselves. Become members of the Screen Extras Guild.

But, some the the "central intelligence" desks of federal and local anti - Mafia police sections say quietly the moviemakers need only wait around to catch the real thing. The pistols won't be blank, they tell me.

They point to a "new boy" in town. He's not exactly new. He's 64. And he knows the city — for he ran much of the "combine" until the early '60s when he went to prison for a 13-year - stretch on a narcotics conviction. Was sprung this past Jan. 25. Fellow by name of Lilo (Cigars) Carmine Galente, 5-foot-5, tough like all little men. FBI Number 119495. City Police yellow sheet No. B-66994.

If the federals are correct, Galente never lost his clout. He's still one of the younger Dons. And ambitious. He's hard like molybdenum. More than a decade in the pen didn't rust him. Made a few friends. Like Jimmy Hoffa in Lewisburg prison. Saw to it that Jimmy H. was well treated.

According to anti-crime sources Galente came up from jail, rested at the Brooklyn home of a relative, began making the rounds of the so-called Joe Bonanno family, conferred with virtually all the "quiet ones" who hate the new "youth" imagery of Joe Colombo, Jr. (now vegetableized by a non-lethal bullet in the brain) and then decided to call on the alleged boss of bosses of the entire Cosa Nostra national network, Don Carlo Gambino, Godfather of Godfathers.

Says one high law officer: "Carlo could outgun Galente anytime, but at the moment there's peace. Galente will take over what we call the Evola - Bonanno family. If anyone tries to stop this, there'll be noise which will make that Godfather movie look like a fairy tale."

Galente isn't expected to run into difficulties while reaching for Evola - Bonanno leadership.

After Joe Bonanno migrated to Arizona for his health, and I don't mean anything minor like a disease or heart strain, his so-called organization was commandeered by Natale (Joe Diamond) Evola, a man of heavy interests in the garment and trucking business. Joe Diamond did well. He disciplined the family. He wiped out the kind of feuds which are racking other Mafia families. He put the young turks in their place. The older men of the Lansky - Genovese era liked it.

Then Evola proved that Dons can die in bed. Cancer took him out. And Carmine Galente came in.

Now the best-informed federal and local police Mafia desks believe he will consolidate and wait for the 71 - year - old Don Carlo to pass away. Carlo Gambino, incidentally, has developed labor racketeering into a mighty profitable business.

Then, the script has it that Don Carmine will take over as boss of bosses. Extend his power across in New Jersey (he loves the southern shores of that state) and reach into other cities where the leadership is weak — such as Chicago, Philadelphia and into North Central and Southwestern states.

This was the talk among some of the 35 men who met secretly in the Dept. of Justice Feb. 14 and 15, among whom were the chiefs of the 18 anti - organized crime strike forces. They discussed the newest Mafia twists. They exchanged information on the latest gimmicks in stock and Treasury certificate multimillion - dollar thievery and counterfeiting.

And they learned that Atty. Gen. Saxbe, Organized Crime and Racketeering section chief Bill Lynch and strike force coordinator Ed Joyce will be sending each strike unit an intelligence analyst. He'll be in permanent residence for instant on - the - spot analysis instead of riding the circuit and conferring with them from time to time. And each analyst will be able to reach back to Washington for instant aid from the centralized intelligence desk in "Justice."

So the strike force heads do know what's happening on the inside. Virtually every Mafia unit has been infiltrated. Thus it is logical to believe that Galente will be the candidate for boss of bosses if he outlives Don Carlo. Of course he'll need National Commission approval.

The Commission still functions. It doesn't meet en masse as it used to gather in Italian and Chinese restaurants. It dispatches trusted couriers with messages and decisions. It decides who can buy real estate in Houston (as they are) and in Arizona. And who shall head what family.

So Galente is on his way to national leadership — no just in New York but right across the land. His clout comes from his liaison with the Montreal crowd so closely watched these days by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Galente used to be the mobs' envoy, according to certain records, to the Canadian Mafia in general and boss Joe Cotroni in particular.

Question: What About The Public Man's Private Life?

By PAUL HARVEY

We've recently been led to expect that a public man is entitled to no private life.

We've come to assume that his private conversations are not private, that his personal papers must be made public.

Will the prying eyes of the news demand access to his bedroom next? They following Warren G. Harding there.

Every President since F.D.R. has taken a tax deduction when presenting his official papers to some public museum.

Theretofore presidential papers were frequently sold, stolen, burned, forged, suppressed or lost.

Presidents Martin Van Buren and Franklin Pierce burned most of their papers.

Millard Fillmore's son specified in his will that his father's documents should be destroyed. Most were.

Why should a President want to conceal what went on while he was President? Only a partial answer to that question should suffice. The President's Oval Office conversations are not always circumspect.

Harry Truman's and Lyndon Johnson's were liberally spattered with profanity, doubtless some obscenities.

Political adversaries and prospective appointees are figuratively stripped naked during some Oval Office briefings. To reveal those briefings publicly would shame families and stain the names of innocents indelibly.

President Harding while in the Senate and the White House had two mistresses — one a married woman, and he sired a daughter by the other.

His Administration spawned the Teapot Dome scandal, and at the time when drinking was a no-no his letters reveal that he drank — in the White House.

When the wretched man died, it was rumored that his wife had poisoned him.

In any event, his widow burned most of his personal papers including most — but not all — of the love letters he had written to Carrie Phillips.

Some of those love letters reportedly are 50 pages long, highly erotic. To this day his heirs have prevented their publication.

James Madison meticulously preserved his papers. Dolley Madison, needing money, sold trunks full of them to the government.

Others her son John sold one at a time to meet his considerable liquor and gambling debts.

Former Sen. John Williams (R-Del.) authored a law which prevents any President from taking a tax deduction resulting from the disposition of his official papers. He says, "People must not profit from selling government property."

Yet there is precedent dating back to George Washington for a President treating his papers as his own.

Now we come to "tapes," which are oral transcripts of what previously would have been written notes.

Presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon made tapes for their historical legacy.

I would have to vote to let history judge those, too.

COLUMNIST DECLARES

It Is Error To Say Dean's Testimony Is Unsupported

By CLARK MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON — Since the credibility of John W. Dean III is probably the most crucial question at this point in the Watergate investigation, it is time that those who comment on the subject do a little more than superficial homework and read carefully the testimony in the public record.

If former White House Counsel Dean is telling the truth, then President Nixon had knowledge of, and responsibility for, the Watergate cover-up — which boils down to an obstruction of justice, which in turn could be firm grounds for impeachment.

With that vital issue at stake, it is painful to read respected editorial pages and respected columnists declaring that "there is no support by other witnesses" for the testimony of John Dean.

Not even President Nixon's own lawyers will seriously make that assertion before the court, although they White House press office occasionally tries to peddle that thesis through the door, and obviously with some success.

It is always arguable that there is insufficient evidence to prove "beyond a reasonable doubt" that Mr. Nixon knew about the perjury of Jeb Magruder, pay - offs to the seven convicted Watergate burglars, destruction of records, discussions of executive clemency to keep the burglars from involving White House personnel in the Watergate affair, or the manner in which the FBI and CIA were being used to limit the scope of the investigation.

Lawyers frequently differ as to what constitutes proof "beyond a reasonable doubt."

But to state flatly that Dean's testimony is unsupported publicly by any other witness demonstrates a lack of information on a vital subject. It is misleading to the public, for the long run the evidence will be spotlighted in reports and discussions dealing with impeachment.

Examine, for example, the supportive testimony of former White House aides Jeb S. Magruder and Egil (Bud) Krogh, as well as the testimony of former Nixon Reelection Committee aides Frederick C. Larue and Herbert L. Porter, all of whom have entered pleas of guilty to conspiracy charges and are available for prosecution testimony.

Their stories dovetail with Dean's pertaining to conversations at the time Dean was Mr. Nixon's White House lawyer, and was discussing with them the burglary planning and the Watergate cover-up.

Add to that the testimony of Herbert W. Kalmbach, President Nixon's personal lawyer who handled much of the pay - off money from secret campaign funds on Dean's direction, after checking with former White House Chief of Staff H.R. (Bob) Haldeman and Special Assistant John D. Ehrlichman.

It is hardly conceivable that these witnesses, with long - time political ties to the Nixon administration, would conspire falsely with Dean and the special prosecutor's office to create documents, conversations and incidents to give the impression that the Watergate cover-up was directed from the highest levels in the White House.

This would be difficult to achieve short of a carefully planned conspiracy to coordinate all stories with Dean's testimony in return for lighter sentences and no further prosecution.

With the broad net of corroboration on details of the Watergate conspiracy to cover-up the involvement of Nixon Reelection Committee Personnel and the White House, the best and strongest corroboration for Dean conversations with the President is Haldeman.

Haldeman's testimony before the Senate Watergate Committee last July 30 was in fact almost 100 percent corroboration for Dean on the key Nixon - Dean conversations of Sept. 15, 1972 and March 21, 1973.

He supported Dean on such relevant factual matters as the topics Mr. Nixon and Dean discussed, the sequence in which they were discussed and in some instances the precise words used by Dean and Mr. Nixon.

After studying that Haldeman testimony closely, listening to the White House Tape recordings of those conversations, and requestioning Haldeman several times before the federal grand jury, Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski has concluded there is no reason to believe that Dean perjured himself before the Watergate committee or in any other forum.

The position the special prosecutor has taken in U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell's court on the reliability of Dean for use in the perjury prosecution of former White House Appointment Secretary Dwight Chapin is applicable to all of Dean's testimony on Watergate - related matters.

The White House, which has prepared documents used by others to charge that Dean is perjurer, has carefully stopped short of charging intentional falsification by Dean.

While both the White House and Jaworksi are under strict admonition by the court to refrain from further out - of - court comments on Dean's credibility, the public record of the testimony by Dean and Holdeman is available in printed form as volume three and volume seven of the Senate Watergate hearings.

Heard Cards 15 Under To Capture Citrus Title

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — For whistling Jerry Heard the signs were right, his wife said, and a bogey on the first hole didn't shake his confidence one whit.

"I feel like I have a real good shot at the Masters now," said the 26-year-old Californian who won the $150,000 Citrus Open Sunday for the second time in three years, his first PGA victory in 22 months. "That's my goal, to win a major championship."

Never trailing in four rounds of golf in the sixties on the par 72 Rio Pinar course, Heard bogeyed the first and last holes Sunday, along with another, but got five birdies to finish with a 69-273, 15 under par.

Whistling and humming as he toured the 6,929-yard layout, Heard said he was confident from the start. His wife, Nancy, had told him "it was supposed to the week" for a Taurus.

"It certainly was," said Heard, who won the Citrus in 1972, but has been winless since the Colonial Invitational in Fort Worth the same year.

The six-foot 200-pounder, who quit worrying about improving his swing and learned to relax, finished three strokes ahead of Jim Jamieson, 67-276, and Homero Blancas, 70-276.

Heard likens his renewed confidence to that of his friend, Johnny Miller, who won the first three tournaments this year.

Jamieson, who had to go to town to buy a brace for his back after the second round, had a bogeyless round Sunday, with five birdies. He said his caddy—Joe Burden—had been giving him tips on how to putt.

Bobby Cole, a skinny South African billed as the next Gary Player, shot a 69 to end in a tie with chunky Bob Murphy at 11-under-par 277, three strokes behind Heard.

One stroke farther back were Lee Elder, Bruce Crampton, Leonard Thompson and Chi Chi Rodriguez.

Banking a $30,000 first-place check—almost twice as much as he had made up to this stop on the tour—Heard said he will be humming a new tune since he found a winning swing.

Today's Sports Parade

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Baseball is selling out, tarnishing its pure white image and surrendering its very virtue by letting Hank Aaron skip those first three contests in Cincinnati, say some of the "saviors" of the game, and I say all this sudden selfrighteousness gets me right here.

How did baseball ever possibly survive before being saved from perdition by so many of these livid, loud-voiced salvationists?

For them to argue that the Atlanta Braves are perpetrating a piece of skullduggery in what they are doing with Aaron is patent nonsense because they are not being devious at all.

The Braves could've been very easily.

Fictional Injury

They could've held off until a day or so before the season opened and then announced Aaron wouldn't be able to play against the Reds due to some fictional injury.

For anybody to say the integrity of baseball is at stake by Aaron being kept out so he can break Babe Ruth's home run record back home also is without foundation because a quick look at last year's statistics reveals the Braves didn't win that many more whether he was in the lineup or not.

Hank Aaron will tell you himself he can't throw very well anymore. All the throwing he does now generally is either sidearm or underhand.

"I've got about five good overhand throws left in this arm," he laughs, raising his right one. "I don't wanna waste 'em."

Defense wins more games than the long ball, and around the National League, they'll tell you the Braves are a stronger defensive unit with Mike Lum, Dusty Baker and Ralph Garr in the outfield than when Hank Aaron is out there.

One other item.

Hank Aaron has played in 18 season openers and never hit a single home run in any of them.

Six months, six weeks, six minutes after the Braves' 40-year-old superslugger hits No. 7.5 it really won't matter a whole lot in which city he did it. To most people anyway.

It will matter, and does matter now to Hank Aaron.

Show Them

"When I finish playing ball, I'm going to make my home in Atlanta," he says. "I'd like to walk out to the ball park occasionally and say to someone, 'this is where I hit my home run.' I can't catch a plane to Cincinnati to show them."

Aaron can't understand the controversy which has generated over the decision he and the Braves' management mutually reached for him to pass up the first three games of the season in Cincinnati so he'll have a crack at the record-breaker back home in Atlanta when the club goes there from Cincy for a subsequent 11-game stand.

"Nobody made a big deal when (Stan) Musial sat out a game so he could get his 3,000th hit in St. Louis," Aaron says. "Nobody said anything about (Roberto) Clemente waiting to get his 3,000th in Pittsburgh either. So why all this fuss about me?"

Musial actually wound up collecting his 3,000th hit in Chicago because even though he began the game in question on the bench, the Cards needed a base hit late in the contest, Musial was tapped as a pinch-hitter and he delivered a double.

Eddie Mathews, the Braves' manager, has been asked hundreds of times now about keeping Aaron out of the opening set with the Reds. Patiently, he answers the same old questions over and over again.

That Much Difference

"This is nothing against Hank, you understand," he says, "but I don't believe one guy makes that much difference to a ball club. I hate to think everytime we don't play him, we're going to lose. I hate to think everytime he doesn't play, my integrity is going to be questioned. Everytime Hank doesn't play, is someone going to ask me, 'What are you giving up? What are you trying to do, lose?'"

Norm Miller, one of the Braves' other outfielders, looks at the whole thing another way.

"The greatest ballplayers in the world sit out some games now and then," he says. "Hank has done it, too, and if these happened to be three other games, nothing at all would be said. Now suppose we lose the pennant by one game this year. For sure, somebody will point to one of the games Hank sat out."

Somebody sure will.

That's only human nature.

Longhorns Nab Crown Saturday

By United Press International

Harry Larrabee, who lacks by one inch being the shortest player in the league, was quick to admit moments after his Texas Longhorns became Southwest Conference basketball champions Saturday night, he and his teammates know little about Creighton University.

But, then, Creighton probably does not know much about the Longhorns either.

So a couple of strangers will be meeting Saturday night in the first round of the NCAA tournament at Denton, Tex.

And if a team is judged simply by its won-loss record the Creighton-Texas contest appears to be the mismatch of this season's NCAA tournament—or any other season for that matter.

Creighton has a 21-5 mark for the year and Texas enters the playoffs with a losing record—12-14.

Texas' record, of course, is somewhat deceptive, since the Longhorns put on a pretty fair about face this season. Having lost 11 of their 12 non-conference games, the Longhorns captured the SWC title with 11-3 league mark.

The Longhorns clinched the title Saturday with a 95-84 victory over Baylor after Texas Tech had been knocked out of a tie with Texas by SMU during the afternoon, 78-72.

Pacing the turnaround for the Longhorns have been 6-7 Larry Robinson and the 5-10 Larrabee.

"I don't think we have the overall talent we had when I was a sophomore (when Texas tied SMU for the crown two seasons ago)," said Robinson. "But this team is more competitive.

"I had my share of problems early in the season (a knee difficulty which has bothered him throughout his college career.) I was kind of disappointed in my play. I was trying to come back too fast (from surgery) I guess."

Texas coach Leon Black, who many critics felt had sealed his doom with the Longhorns, has preached throughout the conference season that his team never thought of giving up during the adverse part of the year.

"This club has come back further than any team I've ever had," he said. "It's the most competitive group I've ever been associated with.

"I never had any doubt it could happen. A lot of people won't believe it, but we talked about winning the conference when we were 0-9."

Black was pressed as to when he first really thought Texas had a chance to win the title, and the Texas coach persisted.

"I thought we did in October when our players first reported for practice," he said.

Texas finished the season by winning six in a row and SMU's victory over Texas Tech Saturday was the Mustangs' eighth straight.

SMU will likely draw an invitation from the Commissioners College Tournament March 14-18 in St. Louis. The Mustangs ended the season with a 15-11 record.

Volleyball, Tennis Teams To Compete

Pampa's volleyball and tennis teams will be in action Tuesday as the girl volleyers travel to Amarillo for a match with tough Tascosa and the netters host Dumas in a dual match.

The volleyball team, coached by Lynn Wolfe, upped its season record to 11-1 (6-0 in district) in downing Caprock, 15-8, 15-5, Thursday in Amarillo. Pampa defeated Tascosa the first time the teams met a month ago, but Tascosa won first place in the West Texas Tournament Feb. 16.

Pampa placed third behind the Rebels and Amarillo High in the meet.

Alton Setliff's tennis team and Dumas meet at 2:45 p.m. at the high school courts.

Cardinals Wrap Up MVC Championship

By United Press International

Denny Crum's problem now is to convince his Louisville Cardinals they have to play some more basketball games between today and March 14.

And who could blame the Cardinals for forgetting. Saturday they not only played their final Missouri Valley Conference game of the season, but played it against the only team that had a chance to take the MVC crown away from them.

They were playing this other team—Bradley—on the other team's court. It turned into a classic with the Cardinals winning 87-84 in overtime.

That gave them the MVC title with an 11-1 league record and a trip to Tulsa March 14 where they will play the winner of the Oral Roberts-Syracuse game in the NCAA tournament.

But Louisville still has two non-conference games to play before that March 14 date in Tulsa. Tonight the Cardinals play Illinois State and Thursday night they travel to Michigan for a contest with highly regarded Detroit.

Louisville carried a one-game lead over Bradley going into their showdown and the two teams had not met since Dec. 22, when the Cardinals won 74-65 in Louisville.

The game was tied 76-76 after regulation play ended and Bradley jumped off to a four-point lead in the overtime period.

But Junior Bridgemen, who led all scorers with 19 points, hit a jump shot with seven seconds to play and added a free throw to provide the winning margin.

"We figurd Bradley would play us tough in Peoria and they did," said Crum, the former UCLA assistant who celebrated his 37th birthday Saturday.

Bradley put up a tenacious man-to-man defense against the Cardinals, but Crum said he was expecting it.

There's still one conference game remaining before the season ends. On Tuesday night New Mexico State will try for a third place tie with Tulsa in a game against West Texas State.

Tulsa, which lost its first three MVC games, rallied to finish with a 7-6 record, third best in the league.

Lakers Win 7th Straight To Narrow GS Margin

By United Press International

Pressure is the name of the game in the NBA as the season heads down the stretch and Los Angeles coach Bill Sharman realizes it will continue to mount despite the Lakers' seven-game winning streak and Sunday's victory over the Golden State Warriors.

"It will be all uphill from here," Sharman said after a 108-104 win over the Warriors that pulled the Lakers to within one-half game of first-place in the Pacific Division for what will likely be the final Western Conference playoff spot.

"I'm sure the division will be decided by injuries and the team that is able to win the close ones," Sharman said.

Capitalizing on the Warriors' frigid shooting in the first period, the Lakers spurted to a 23-8 lead. Rick Barry, who had averaged 42 points in his last four games, went 1-for-11 in the half.

Cazzie Russell, who ended up leading all scorers with 29 points, came off the bench in the second period to help cut the Laker lead to 57-47 at the half.

The Lakers, paced by a 26-point effort by second-year guard Jim Price, led 104-93 with 5:34 to go. The Lakers could manage only four free throws in the final 5:34 as the Warriors charged back. With the score 105-102 with 21 seconds remaining, Connie Hawkins sank a free throw to put the game away.

Gail Goodrich ended with 19 for the Lakers, while Hawkins had 17 and Pat Riley scored 15 in relief. Jeff Mullins had 20 for the Warriors, while Nate Thurmond and Jim Barnett had 16 each.

The Warriors host Detroit Tuesday night, a team they haven't beaten in three meetings this season. The Lakers are at Portland Tuesday night and return home Wednesday to host the Boston Celtics. In the next two weeks, the Lakers play Boston, New York and Golden State twice each.

In other NBA action Sunday, New York edged Boston 108-102 in overtime, Capital clipped Cleveland 98-93, Milwaukee downed Houston 112-106 in overtime, Phoenix tripped Kansas City-Omaha 113-100 and Detroit beat Portland 99-95.

Knicks 108, Celtics 102

Dave DeBusschere got a reprieve Sunday afternoon when Paul missed a potential tie-breaking free throw with two seconds left in regulation time. DeBusschere had been called for a loose ball foul. Silas, with two shots, hit the first but the second bounced off the rim into the arms of DeBusschere as the buzzer sounded. DeBusschere then hit the first basket in overtime and from then the Knicks roared to victory in the nationally televised game.

Walt Frazier, stone cold with only six points in regulation, broke the overtime period open on a three-point play.

Bill Bradley added two field goals in the overtime to finish with 25 points but DeBusschere, who fouled out midway through the extra session, was high for New York with 26. Earl Monroe added 20 for the winners.

Don Nelson led Boston with 29 points and Jo Jo White added 27 for the Celtics, who beat the Knicks in New York Saturday night 104-88. The Knicks trail Boston by five games in the Atlantic Division.

Bullets 98, Cavs 93

Elvin Hayes scored 16 of his 25 points in the second half to lift the Bullets from a 44-41 halftime deficit. Phil Chenier added 14 of his 20 points in the third period to help the Bullets to an eight-point lead going into the final quarter.

Longhorns 15-0 After Sweep From Cougars

By United Press International

Unless some spectacular upsets occur within the next three months, Texas has a shot at winning all four major Southwest Conference championships—football, basketball, track and baseball.

The Longhorns won the football title months ago and wrapped up the basketball crown Saturday. With their devastating showing in the Border Olympics this weekend plus their performance in the SWC indoor meet, they are odds on favorite to win the track title.

And in baseball, the Longhorns are 15-0 today and fresh from a three game sweep of the University of Houston in Houston.

Texas A&M also swept baseball series from Baylor this weekend. Rice won three from SMSMU, and TCU captured two out of three from Texas Tech. Arkansas, participating in the conference race for the first time this year, will not get into league action until next weekend.

Texas gave up 17 hits, committed five errors and allowed five unearned runs in the first game of the Houston series, but still won 8-8. Then after taking the first game of a Saturday doubleheader 6-2, the Longhorns erupted for 15 hits and bombed Houston 20-3.

TCU, the team expected to give Texas its roughest competition this season, committed nine errors in the middle game of its series with Texas Tech and lost it 8-0. The Frogs' Frank Johnstone showed, however, he can throw even with a pulled back muscle as he won his third game without a loss in the series opener 12-3.

Rice scored 12 unearned runs in an 18-2 stomp over SMU to start their series. But in the second game the Mustangs' Jeff Sage came close to throwing his second straight no-hitter. He gave up only one hit in six innings, but he walked three, threw a wild pitch and committed an error in the first inning that allowed Rice to score all its runs in a 4-2 victory.

Texas A&M had to go into extra innings to win its third game over Baylor. Fred Russ drove in the winning run with a single in the bottom of the tenth to bring about the sweep over the Bears 6-5.

This week's series feature Arkansas at Baylor, TCU at Houston, Texas A&M at SMU and Texas at Rice. Single games are played Friday and doubleheaders Saturday.

Brown Grabs 4th, 6th Places In Swim Meet

ODESSA — Ted Brown, the only Harvester competing in the meet, placed fourth in the 500-yard freestyle and sixth in the 200-yard freestyle over the weekend in the Region I swim meet, which involved 28 West Texas schools.

Brown's times did not qualify him for the state meet. He had a 1:59.9 clocking in the 200 and 5:15.4 in the 500. Larry Page of Amarillo Tascosa won the 200 with 1:47.1 and Kerry Freedman of Midland Lee placed first in the 500 with 5:04.1.

"He had a flu bout before he went to this meet and that slowed him some. He should have won second in the 500," said Pampa swim coach Bonnie Grantham.

"Ted's a very dedicated swimmer," added the coach.

The regional meet closed out Pampa's season.

Hartford Has A Little Surprise

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — Huntington Hartford has a tidy little surpirse for his friends (and girl friends). In June, by which time he'll be 63, he'll become a bridegroom for the fourth time. He'll be marrying Elaine Kay, who's going on 22 and until recently was a student in Florida.

"She's a beautifuyl blond and very creative; I've known her two or three years," Hartford said. She's of Greek background and studied hairdressing. "She has a brilliant personality," Hartford said. Their romance blossomed while Hartford operated the Show Club, from which he recently withdrew.

"Hunt," a 1934 Harvard graduate, eloped in his sophomore year with Mary Lee Epling, then married hatcheck girl - painter - actress Marjorie Steele, then Diane Brown, the model. Hartford said plans for the wedding are indefinite, "but it may be in England." He has one of his three residences in London.

Lucille Ball's queen of the town. I haven't seen such adulation heaped on anybody since Marilyn Monroe as they gave Lucy at a "Mame" celebrity showing at Avery Fisher Hall. Then we limousined off to a swinging soiree given by investment banker Richard Jenrette at his 1 Sutton Pl. N. house which he believes that Mrs. Wm. K. Vanderbilt 2d build around 1920.

Lucy's hair, for the part, was brown, short, and jazzy, and the gals loved it — and her. Her husband Gary Morton, who's playing a Milton Berle - type comedian in the film "Lenny," sat with her at the hall when she took such a bow as few movie queens have taken.

You can tell a star's popularity by the number of people who want to be photographed with her. Well, I was one of them, squeezing in a couple of times. Carol Channing, composer Jerry Herman who wrote a new song "Loving You" for her, and Bea Arthur of "Maude" were around the festivities.

A spy told me that when Mayor Beame came into view, Lucille Ball immediately noticed the disparity in height between the Mayor and tall Miss Arthur, and said, "Sit down, Bea!"

I talked to Sammy Davis at the Diplomat (Hollywood - by - the - Sea, Fla.) the other night and he gave no signs of feeling over - tired. The report Monday that he has suffered an attack was a shock. His mother, who'd talked with doctors, doubts that it was serious. Sammy stayed up for a couple of hours with friends after his second show was over about 1:30 a.m. and showed no urge to retire. He was watching some of his TV film and mentioning that he would be in NY for the Fight for Sight show at Lincoln Center May 5.

"The $10,000 Pyramid" CBS-TV show, which was very popular hereabouts, was cancelled ... Dinah Shore's back home in Nashville doing TV and Burt Reynolds is doing a film there (but no marriage in sight).

In Connecticut, claims Lynn Dalton Delaney, the former Glee Girl with Jackie Gleason, "a Maserati with a full tank of gas was stolen, they returned the car unharmed, and held the gas for ransom."

THE MIDNIGHT EARL...

Redd Foxx's trouble on his TV show is that he hates the old man he plays and doesn't want to do it any more, says his friend Alan Drake ... Liz Taylor's nurse accompanied her and Richard Burton to Puerta Vallarta ... O.K., O.K.: Al Cooper says the 6 a.m. service stations are "the Dawn Petrol."

H'wood Buzz: The Oscar front - runners are Jack Lemmon ("Save the Tiger") and Jack Nicholson ("Last Detail"), with Lemmon the sentimental favorite ... Cher's first appearance without Sonny, since the bustup, will be on the Grammy Awards show Saturday (says TV producer Pierre Cossette) ... Paul Newman's birthday gift to Joanne Woodward: a motorcycle. Practical, too — saves gas.

Show Biz Quiz: What actor played Buck Rogers, Flash Gordon and Tarzan? Ans. to Friday's: The male stars of the three film versions of "Of Human Bondage" were Leslie Howard, Paul Henreid and Laurence Harvey.

Paul Keyes, producer of the James Cagney tribute, says that Mae Clarke — who got that famous grapefruit in the face — will be introduced ... Robert Preston's leading lady in David Merrick's next B'way musical "Mack & Mabel" may be Marcia Rodd ... Aldo, headwaiter at Pier 52, told a waiting group of doctors, "There'll be a short wait. You go make a house call, and by the time you get back your table will be ready."

The scruffy-looking character in shapeless hat and old coat at Jimmy's and The Colonnades was Al Pacino ... The owners of plush Quo Vadis don't mind women diners in pants suits: "We're food specialists. We wouldn't want a fashion expert to make the rules in our kitchen."

I'D RATHER BE LIGHT

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: A man complained that he can't communicate with his teen-age son: "How can you have a man - to - man talk with someone who's wearing one earring?"

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Nowadays (says Larry Rhine in Funny Funny World), chivalry consists of snatching a purse only from a man.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "A dog is man's best friend because he wags his tail instead of his tongue." — Mark Twain.

EARL'S PEARLS: Well, this administration said it would bring us all together, and it did — at the gas pumps.

Don Rickles claims that in all his years of needling, only one cafe patron ever objected to his clowning: "I made fun of this customer's mustache and almost got belted. That broad had no sense of humor."

That's earl, brother.

Under Twenty

By KURT LASSEN

"We never got any encouragement from our father and we didn't get any discouragement either. We just went the way we wanted to and each of us did it in his own way."

Keith Carradine, star of "Thieves Like Us," and the third son of actor John Carradine to become an actor, was reminiscing about his childhood as he talked.

"Because we spent a good bit of time with my grandparents and away from our parents, we were all very close as we grew up. We were all very good friends and as we grew up we've stayed that way, but each has gone in our own way."

It would seem from what the young actor told us that David ("Kung Fu"), Robert and Keith had very little contact with the successful acting career of their famous father. Their entry into the field was on their own.

"We knew, of course, that my father was an actor but we didn't talk about it very much, any more than any other kids would talk about what their father did for a living," Keith told us.

Keith has the Carradine mark of a bony face. He has expressive hazel eyes and blond hair and his 6'1" carries a lean 150 pounds. He has a boyish, innocent look which made him a perfect candidate for the part of "Bowie" by director Bob Altman, who also cast Keith with his co-star, Shelley Duvall, in "McCabe and Mrs. Miller."

"Shelley is a natural, she's something else to work with," Keith said. "Here's a girl with absolutely no training and she's so beautiful to work with. Yes, I'd like to do another picture with her."

Keith, however, did prepare himself for a career in acting.

"I went to Colorado State University and majored in drama," he recalled. "But after I was into the student routine I really got interested in acting and decided I'd learn more by doing it than by studying. A college play convinced me to get out and really work at it."

He did, however, enroll in acting courses until he got his first break in the rock opera, "Hair," with six months in the lead role of Claude.

"My first film was 'A Gunfight' with Kirk Douglas and Johnny Cash. Then I did 'McCabe and Mrs. Miller,' 'Idaho Transfer' and 'Emperor of the North'."

Keith and Shelley are being hailed as two exciting newcomers on the strength of "Thieves," a film which has received widespread critical acclaim. Set in the thirties, the film is a less - brutal, more sensitive version of "Bonnie and Clyde." Keith plays a prison escapee who goes on a bank robbing spree, in the course of which he meets and falls in love with a small town girl, "Keechie," played by Shelley.

Unlike his father, Keith has no particular desire to play Shakespearean roles.

"I do like the stage," he admits, "but the important thing is to find roles you like doing, regardless of where they are. And there is a lot to life besides acting."

One of the other things that attracts Keith is music. He has taught himself to play the guitar and the piano and spends much of his time writing songs.

Keith is taking the present praises in his stride. He's been on the fringes of the tricky business of acting all his life and one gets the impression he takes things as they come.

Is there any competition between the brothers?

"Not a bit," says Keith. "We each do our own thing in our own way and are close enough to be happy when something good happens to any one of us."

Short term interest rates have tumbled sharply in the past 60 days. The prime rate, which was at 10 percent has dropped to 8¾ percent and some experts believe that it will drop to the 6-7 percent level before climbing again.

Much of the decline has been the result of Federal Reserve monetary policy which has been used to ease the availability of money in order to prevent a recession in 1974 and to get the economy moving upward once more.

Economists who study the figures are saying that this is only a temporary dip in interest rates and that the long term trend is just like the price of every other commodity which we use in our economy.

There are several powerful forces behind the continuing rise in interest rates. One of the strongest forces is inflation. Our economy has had a built in inflation factor ever since the end of World War II.

Lenders, in an effort offset the washout of the value of the dollars which they lend out for 20 or 30 years, add an "inflation factor" to the interest rate they charge. This helps protect them from the loss in purchasing power of the dollar which they will get back when the loan comes due 20 or 30 years from now.

Another primary factor in higher interest rates is that the money supply has not grown fast enough to provide the dollars which the economy needs. And, on top of that, the demand for capital to finance U.S. industry has grown faster than the retained earnings which industry plows back into plant and equipment and the individual savings that supply the funds to meet this need.

So, the money lenders are in a sellers market because there is so much competition for funds. All of the major U.S. industries, such as railroads, steel, chemical, oils and utilities must raise massive sums of money during the next 10 years. These demands have come from many sources: businesses expanding capacity, anti - pollution controls for industry, military expenditures, government financing of highways, hospitals and schools.

Meanwhile, the supply of funds has not expanded anything like the expansion in industry and the growth in business expenditures. Personal savings still run 6 percent to 7 percent of personal income, about where they were in the early 1950s.

The combination of continual boom in capital spending by U.S. industry and a sluggish rate of personal savings has kept constant upward pressure on interest rates. Higher interest rates guarantee, to some extent, at least, that funds go first to the investments that offer the highest return.

Whatever the outcome of t e arguments among economists, all the factors point in the same direction: continued higher interest rates.

What About Sex After Attack?

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is the title or who is the author of any book having to do with sexual relations while recuperating from a heart attack?

My doctor seemed embarrassed when I asked him about sexual relations after my coronary (heart attack). He merely said there were books on the subject. I phoned no less than 10 bookstores none of which had such a book. Three said there are such books but they could not supply me without the title or name of the author.

Most people I phoned seemed reluctant even to talk about sexual relations. Is this taboo? No wonder we need some sort of education in schools. Or somewhere.

—M.G.

I don't know of any book on that specific topic, but there are books on sex that discuss it. About as good a one (for that purpose as well as others) is "Sexual Life After Sixty," by Isadore Rubin, Ph.D., published by Basic Books, Inc., in 1965. Check with a bookstore and I trust you'll find it still in print.

Both blood pressure and pulse rate rise in the course of sexual relations, but promptly — sometimes within a matter of seconds — return to normal. As you may gather, there has been some scientific exploration of the matter.

Generally speaking (and unless ther is some unusual situation involved) there is no reason why a patient cannot resume sexual relations after he has recovered from the acute attack, say in six weeks to three months.

There's this additional warning, though. The nervous tensions and anxieties of extramarital affairs are quite another matter. In such cases the tensions, worry about getting caught, and so on, last much longer, and not just for the limited time of the sexual activity itself.

Prolonged tension can, indeed, be dangerous for such a patient. Or under any circumstances, if relations bring on such symptoms as chest pain, shortness of breath or undue fatigue, take it as a warning.

In advance, when wondering whether it's safe to begin, a good rule is that you can if you can climb stairs without heart symptoms of pain, palpitation or shortness of breath.

There is a good bit of unwarranted fear. One patient was merely told to avoid relations "for a month or so" after leaving the hospital. Two years later, another doctor discovered that the man was still afraid.

Some experts have reported that such prolonged restraint can build up to the point of causing anginal spasms.

There's much more in the Rubin book; I trust you'll get a copy and enjoy it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband and I are both over 80. What are the best pills or medicine to take to avoid colds?

—Mrs. C.J.

In spite of some of the claims being made, I do not know of anything that will ward off colds other than a healthy constitution.

However, an annual flu vaccination will ward off or minimize the various types of influenza, and a good many mild flu cases are mistakenly called "colds."

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you explain the difference between gall bladder disease and gallstones?

—A.F.

A gall bladder can be diseased by infection without stones being present — but gallstones usually develop in such a gall bladder. And a gall bladder that has stones is a diseased gall bladder, so there really isn't much significant difference in the terms.

Are you having a gall bladder problem? To find out how the gall bladder works and what types of trouble to look for, send for Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "You And Your Gall Bladder." Write Dr. G.C. Thosteson, Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120 for a copy, enclosing a long, self-addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover the cost of printing and handling.

Dr. Thosteson is interested in all his readers' questions, and whenever possible uses them in his column, but because of the great number received daily, he regrets that he cannot answer individual letters.

Octogenarian Likes 'Living' At College

By MAXINE YEE

CLAREMONT, Calif. (UPI) — Octogenarian Mary Routt doesn't like the criticisms aimed at today's young people. She says those who condemn the young don't know how they act and think.

Mary Routt does know. She's surrounded by some 5,000 of them.

Mrs. Routt lives in a single-room senior apartment at Scripps College, one of six Claremont Colleges.

A widow, she moved to the campus from her 20-room house in 1972 when her husband died.

It isn't common practice to allow non-students to live in a dorm on campus, but in the case of Mrs. Routt, an exception was made. She was one of the original board of trustees for the college in 1926 and contributed most of the funds to build the dorm where she is living and which bears her name. Her only official capacity with the college is as an honorary member of the board.

Fresh Viewpoint

Mrs. Routt doesn't like to compare today's generation of young people with past generations, but she speaks up to defend them if they are criticized.

"We should realize that they are different than I was," she said of the way they speak and dress, "but they do think and analyze what they're trying to do.

"They have a fresh viewpoint that we sometimes can't reconcile ourselves with."

She pointed out that today's young people are living through more turbulent times, and that "we had a much easier time when I was in college. It was much easier to make solutions to our problems because the problems were easier."

Mrs. Routt, who doesn't affect today's slang and isn't quite used to seeing girls in blue jeans, suggested that those who criticize young people try living among them to get to know them.

No Age Gap

She is convinced the experience would change such critical opinions.

A generation gap doesn't exist in Mrs. Routt's life even though there is a span of some 60 years between her and the students. She says the gap people speak of frequently is not a matter of age gap but rather of communication.

For the students at Scripps College, Mrs. Routt is friend and confidante.

Mrs. Routt, a former journalist who once wrote a syndicated column in Washington, D.C., is often questioned by students who want to compare the present political scene with those of other years.

The discussions and friendships with the students have rejuvenated Mrs. Routt, who said:

Staying Young

"My prescription for staying young is association with youngsters. I don't know how young it's going to keep me, but it's made me feel a lot younger. I'd rather associate with kids anytime than with people my own age."

Mrs. Routt is active on and off campus. When she isn't auditing classes or attending seminars, she can be seen at art openings, concerts and anything else she finds to her liking.

Among other activities, she is writing a book on her experiences as a columnist. The book, sponsored by Scripps College, will include a collection of her columns and insights on the behind-the-scenes events that helped shape the nation's news.

But she still has time to lend a listening ear to anyone who wants to talk.

Hearing Scheduled For Secret Report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chief U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica has called an extraordinary hearing Wednesday to help him decide what to do with a grand jury's secret report believed to detail President Nixon's possible role in the Watergate cover-up.

Sirica announced plans for the hearing Monday after a hastily called meeting with Watergate prosecutors, White House lawyers and attorneys for two of Nixon's former top aides now under indictment in the alleged cover-up plot.

In a one-sentence statement, Sirica said the hearing was set so "all interested counsel may state their views regarding disposition" of the report, which the grand jury handed him last Friday after indicting seven of Nixon's former White House and campaign aides.

Sources have said the grand jury asked Sirica to forward the report to the House Judiciary Committee, which is considering Nixon's impeachment.

The committee was scheduled to meet this morning for a "major briefing" by the staff on the progress of the investigation to date and possibly to consider subpoenaing White House information.

Chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., said Monday the White House had not yet responded to a committee request for material issued eight days ago. He said the committee wanted to give the White House a "reasonable time" and "I believe it is a reasonable time."

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson today named a Labor cabinet, balanced evenly between leftwingers and moderates, with the immediate task of ending the 3½ week-old coal miners' strike, getting Britain back to a five-day work week and ending the economic crisis.

A bare 15 hours in office, Wilson showed up early at his No. 10 Downing St. office, posed chewing on a pipe for photographers, interviewed a succession of new ministers and then announced his cabinet.

Then he began talks with leaders of the 10 millionmember Trades Union Congress (TUC) and the Confederation of British Industry, which represents 12,000 industrial firms.

The key appointment in the economic hot seat was Denis Healey, 56, named chancellor of the exchequer.

Healey, defense secretary in Wilson's last 1964-70 administration, will have the job of trying to curb rocketing inflation and to hand the nation a crisis budget before the end of the month.

He said during the recent election campaign that the budget will involve tough belt-tightening for Britons, with heavy new soak-the-rich taxes.

Healey is considered a moderate.

But Michael Foot, 60, a one time rebel on the extreme leftwing of the Labor party, was named secretary for employment with the specific job of trying to end the coal strike.

Foot, famous for his long white hair falling into his eyes, is regarded as one of the top orators in the House of Commons. But he never before held a cabinet job—largely because of his extreme left-wing views.

Two other left wing "wild men" named to cabinet jobs were Anthony Wedgwood Benn, 47, appointed Secretary of State for Industry, and Peter Shore, 49, named Secretary of State for Trade.

Both are strong opponents of Britain's Common Market membership.

However, Wilson's office said James Callaghan, 62, who was named Foreign Secretary, will handle renegotiation of Britain's Market membership terms.

Roy Jenkins, 53, widely regarded as a successful chancellor of the exchequer during Wilson's last administration, was named home secretary, a job he also held earlier in Wilson's last government.

Eric Varley, 42, a little known Labor party member, was named secretary of state for energy. His job will primarily be to deal with Britain's energy crisis and also with her rich offshore oil resources in the North Sea.

Mrs. Barbara Castle, 61, employment secretry in Wilson's last government, was named secretary of state for social services.

Anthony Wedgwood Benn, a prominent left-wing Labor party leader and minister of technology in the last Labor government, was appointed secretary of state for industry.

Michael Foot, 60, a one-time rebel leftwinger, was named secretary for employment.

Immediately after being appointed, Foot invited leaders of Britain's 269,000 striking mineworkers to meet him later today for peace talks.

His familiar pipe clenched between his teeth, Wilson arrived at the prime minister's residence at No. 10 Downing St. shortly before 10 a.m. from his nearby home.

Wilson smiled and waved to waiting newsmen and photographers before entering the familiar black door.

His day started with good news. The pound sterling, shaky throughout the recent crisis, climbed 1.75 cents at the foreign exchange market, opening at $2.2878.

His predecessor Edward Heath, now homeless because he gave up his bachelor flat when he became prime minister in 1970, spent the night in a penthouse apartment borrowed from his parliamentary private secretary, Timothy Kitson.

Wilson, head of Britain's first minority government in 45 years, called in union and industry leaders for a meeting aimed at getting the country's battered economy moving again.

The Labor party leader, who headed two previous governments, was cheered and jeered by a crowd of hundreds Monday night as he returned to the prime minister's No. 10 Downing St. office.

With the applause and boos still ringing in his ears, he phoned leaders of the 10 million-member Trades Union Congress (TUC) and the Confederation of British Industry, which represents 12,000 companies, to set up today's meeting.

A grim-faced Heath, looking like a beaten man, submitted his resignation to Queen Elizabeth earlier in the day. He later promised support "for whatever realistic measures the new government takes in the service of the nation."

The queen then asked Wilson, head of the largest party in Parliament, to form a minority government. Wilson drove straight from Buckingham Palace to 10 Downing St., lit his pipe and went to work.

"We've got a job to do," he said on the steps of his new office with his wife by his side. "We can only do the job as one people and I'm going right in to do the job now."

It was Wilson's third term as prime minister and Britain's first minority government since 1929. He led Labor governments from 1964 to 1966 and from 1966 to 1970.

Heath stepped down after the third-ranking Liberal party refused to join his Conservatives in a coalition government. The Liberal decision ended Heath's attempt to hang on to power despite an upset in last Thursday's elections.

Heath, whose government had been rocked by union unrest in recent months, called the vote in hopes of winning a new mandate. Instead, Labor came in first followed by the Conservatives and Liberals.

Wilson, lacking a majority in the 635-seat House of Commons, was expected to be restricted in his actions by the Liberal party, which holds the balance of power.

Voters Receive Clarification On Registration Aid

There has been considerable interest shown in Pampa of late regarding voters registration — how long the registration is good for, how long before an election one has to register and other items of a similar nature.

Gray County Tax Assessor - Collector Jack Back said today a voter registration card is good for three years from the effective date typed on the card.

Thus, if a person registered March 1, 1972, his registration card is valid through Feb. 28, 1975.

A person must register to vote at least 30 days before the election he wants to vote in is conducted.

For those who have not registered, the deadline for registering has passed for the city election April 2 and the deadline for registering for the April 6 school board election is Thursday.

Pampa residents register vote at the tax assessor - collector's office in the courthouse.

Deadline for filing for school board office has been set tomorrow, March 6.

ORDINANCE PASSED

Gas Consumers Face New Rate

By TEX DeWEESE

Natural gas consumers in Pampa will begin feeling the effect of an adjusted cost of gas rate with billings starting tomorrow.

An ordinance granting the pass - through adjustment to Pioneer Natural Gas Co. was passed on final reading at a meeting of the Pampa City Commission this forenoon.

It became effective immediately and City Manager Mack Wofford said it would affect billings starting tomorrow.

Gas company officials have said the rate adjustment will amount to about $1 a month increase on the average gas bill.

The vote on final passage of the legislation was 3 to 1, the same as when the ordinance was introduced one week ago. The dissenting vote was cast by Ward 3 Commissioner Leo Braswell. Mayor R.D. Wilkerson and Commissioners Ray Thompson and Arthur Rohde voted for the measure. Commissioner Joe Curtis was absent.

In other business:

Commissioners agreed to invest $800,000 of funds received from the sale of Beatrice Food stock dedicated for the retirement of M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium bonds.

The investment will be made in U.S. Treasury bonds at 6.75 percent interest, which City Manager Mack Wofford said would assure sufficient earnings to pay off the bonds as they become due.

The city manager also reported on right - of - way purchase progress on the widening of S. Cuyler from Brown to McCullough and the replacement of 2-inch water lines in the city.

Wofford said 53 property owners between Tuke and McCullough on S. Cuyler are affected by the right - of - way project.

So far, he said, approximately half of the owners have agreed to the sale contracts which include a ten-foot strip on each side of the street necessary to widen the thoroughfare to 84 feet.

The city has employed N.F. Woods, 1021 Christine, to contact the remaining property owners.

The city manager reported work is going ahead on the replacement of 2-inch water distribution lines throughout the city.

New 4-inch pipelines will be laid in approximately 36 miles of 2-inch lines that eventually will be replaced. The city has budgeted $115,000 for the project.

Wofford said work is being done first in the areas of highest water consumption.

A public hearing on proposed removal of a half dozen abandoned buildings was continued until the commission meets again next Tuesday in a continuation of today's meeting.

Rotary Club To Observe School Week

The Pampa Rotary Club will observe Texas Public School Week by meeting tomorrow noon at the Baker Elementary School.

Students of the school will provide the program for the Rotarians.

Newly elected board of directors for the Pampa Rotary Club are Melvin Kunkel and Gene Steel. Both men will join Otis Nace, Don Nelson, Jack Reeve, Gary Stevens and Chuck Zlomke, who were re-elected to the seven - man Rotary board.

Wales Madden spoke to the group regarding his work on the current Texas State Constitution during last Wednesday's meeting.

Madden served on the committee which drafted the document after holding meetings throughout the state. The Texas legislator is currently sitting as a constitutional convention reviewing the drafting committee's work.

IN MITCHELL TRIAL

Sears Expected To Be Witness

NEW YORK (UPI) — The government was expected to bring on one of its biggest guns today, Harry L. Sears, as a witness in its attempt to send two former dominant figures in the Nixon administration to jail on charges of selling political influence for $200,000 cash.

Sears, named in the indictment as one of two bagmen who delivered a secret $200,000 donation from financier Robert L. Vesco to be used in the 1972 Nixon campaign, has been called by the prosecution "the middle man" and "one of the central figures" in the case.

Former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, 60, and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans, 66, are accused of conspiracy, obstructing justice, and perjury in an alleged attempt to obstruct a federal investigation of Vesco, now a fugitive, in exchange for the gift.

Sears, a New Jersey attorney and Vesco associate, former State Senate Republican leader, and state chairman of the 1972 presidential campaign, was a co-defendant but his case was severed.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James W. Rayhill disclosed in his opening statement in U.S. District Court Friday that the government has promised Sears immunity.

Some stage-setting and backgrounding witnesses were expected to precede Sears to the stand.

Rayhill told the jury that Sears "was bought and paid for by Robert Vesco—he was in Vesco's pocket." He said Sears got $60,000 a year from Vesco, who also advanced him $35,000 to pay debts incurred in the 1969 gubernatorial primaries.

"We intend to call as witnesses people who were there," Rayhill told the eight men and four women jurors. "Some have committed crimes.

Sears and Laurence B. Richardson, then president of a Vesco company, are charged with delivering the $200,000 around 11 a.m. on April 10, 1972, to Stans when Stans was chairman of the Finance Committee to Re-elect the President.

"At which time," the indictment alleges, "Richardson gave Stans a message from Vesco to the effect that Vesco wanted help" on the investigation.

Simon Says 'Instant Experts' Miss On Gasoline Shortages

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy chief William E. Simon suggested today that "instant experts" who he said were off base about forecasts of winter disasters from fuel shortages would be just as wrong about forecasts of dire gasoline shortages this spring and summer.

At the same time, officials were optimistic about chances that the Arab oil-producing countries would agree at a meeting Sunday to lift their embargo, entirely, against the United States.

Other officials said that if the embargo is removed, production would be allowed to increase sharply, while the price of crude oil—from which gasoline and other fuels are refined—would drop sharply at the Arab wells.

An immediate end to the embargo would not result in an immediate end of shortages at the motorist's favorite gasoline station, since it would take several weeks for new oil to arrive in the United States.

However, without counting on lifting of the embargo, Simon appeared optimistic that the situation which President Nixon downgraded from crisis to serious problem proportions would not become critical as warmer weather arrives.

"We have many experts today, instant experts if you will," Simon said in an interview on the CBS-TV Morning News Program. "...and we're seeing them again today predicting all the doom that's going to come this spring and summer."

Simon, head of the Federal Energy Office, said the same kinds of forecasts of people "freezing in their homes," of utility brownouts and blackouts by February and of unemployment reaching 10 per cent, were made last fall.

"Well, did it happen?" he asked, and answered himself, "No, it didn't" because, he said, the government devised a conscious policy of accelerating heating oil production. This was at the expense of gasoline output, he said.

"Now, we're paying the price of some inconvenience in the gasoline lines. And we're now taking care of that."

Simon said the FEO's gasoline allocation policies had succeeded and "we've seen the alleviation of the long lines (at gasoline stations) in all the hard-hit areas."

Spot checks showed that lines appeared to be shorter in several metropolitan areas, including New York and Washington, where additional gasoline was allocated in recent days.

Grover Drops Out Of Governor Race

AUSTIN (UPI)—Party maverick Henry C. Grover dropped out of the Republican primary for governor Monday because he said the GOP leadership would withhold campaign funds and betray any real bid for the office.

Grover was considered the strongest candidate in the threeway race for the nomination to challenge Gov. Dolph Briscoe. Grover said he had more than $400,000 in debts left from the 1972 race in which he fell 100,000 votes short of upsetting Briscoe and becoming the first Texas Republican governor since Reconstruction.

"It is obvious that the Republican hierarchy in Texas has no intention of making any effort to win the governor's race in 1974," Grover said. "In view of these facts I cannot in good conscience ask the thousands of Republican volunteer workers and contributors to put forth their efforts in a cause that the party hierarchy intends to betray."

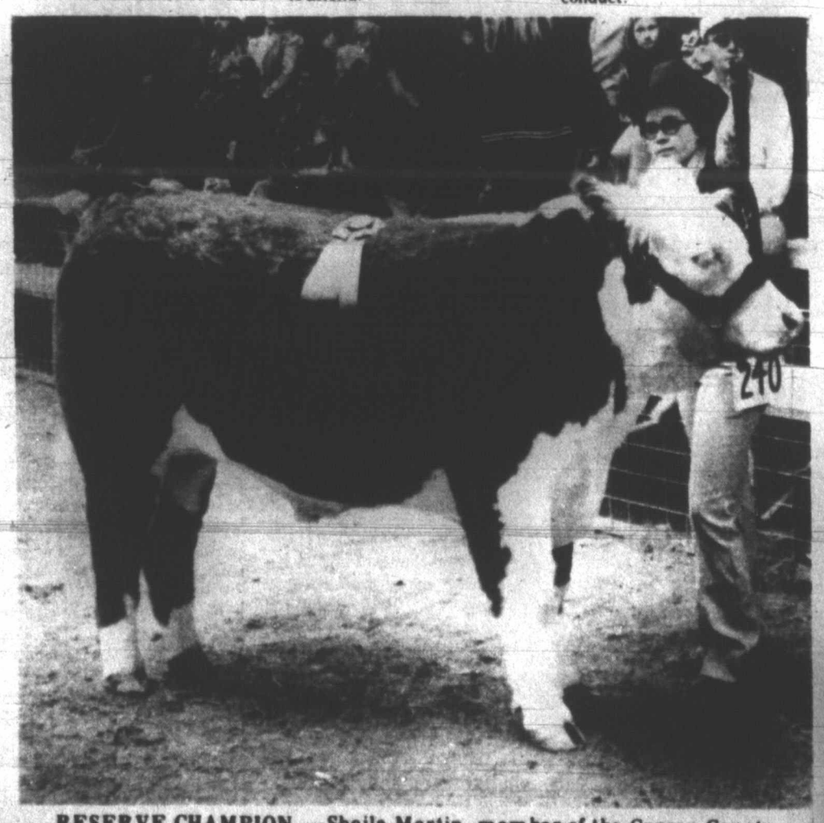

Grover, a converted Democrat, grabbed the 1972 nomination by defeating Albert Bell Fay, the state leadership's choice and a former national committeeman. The boyish, former state senator from Houston maintained he lost to Briscoe because of poor party financial backing. Since his defeat he steadily built a stronger statewide organization.

ON IMPEACHMENT

Committee Asking Attorneys Meeting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House attorneys have asked to meet with House Judiciary Committee leaders Wednesday to discuss a committee request for presidential papers in its impeachment inquiry, it was learned today.

President Nixon's chief attorney for Watergate matters, James D. St. Clair, asked chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., for the meeting late Monday night but did not promise any of the numerous White House documents, tapes or logs the committee requested Feb. 25.

The White House failure to respond to the request for more than a week had irritated some Republican and Democratic committee members. Some had been prepared to urge during a meeting with impeachment inquiry staff today that subpoenas be issued for the material.

The committee's special counsel, John M. Doar, said before making the initial request that it should not take St. Clair very long to comply.

After stating Monday that he had received no response, Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., signaled committee frustration over the White House silence when he said: "In my judgment it's been a reasonable time. It's been eight days."

Rodino didn't mention subpoenas but other committee members said that would be a prime issue today when the impeachment inquiry staff gives the 38 committee members a briefing on what has been done to date and where it expects to go now.

A decision also was expected today on whether Doar should be sent to U.S. District Court on Wednesday to participate in a meeting with Chief Judge John J. Sirica, Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski and St. Clair on the sealed report filed by a grand jury last week and believed to pertain to Nixon's possible involvement in the alleged Watergate coverup.

Doar has urged the committee to avoid a confrontation with the White House and instead give St. Clair a reasonable time to turn the information over voluntarily. But Doar said it should take "only a day or two" for the material in the initial request to be assembled and delivered.

Rep. Robert McClory of Illinois, second-ranking GOP member of the committee, said, "if there's any evidence of any delay or stalling or refusal" by the White House to comply with the request, "I don't think there's any question" that subpoenas would be issued.

The full House has already voted subpoena power for the committee.

500 'Streakers' Stage A Mass Nude Carnival

By United Press International

More than 500 "streakers" staged a nude carnival at the University of South Carolina Monday night but police used tear gas to disperse University of Georgia students angered over the arrest of a naked runner.

The latest collegiate fad began spreading North in the spring-like weather with Ohio University, the University of Pittsburgh and Indiana University getting into the act.

But the craze may have met a quick death at the University of Southern California. A naked youth ran through a lunchtime crowd on the Los Angeles campus Monday—and was ignored.

The first mass coed "streaking" took place at East Carolina University in Greenville, N. C., Monday night, according to campus radio announcer Marc Mitchell, who said he "held a spotlight" on the nude girls. Mitchell said he thought about 50 girls were involved, "but I can't be sure about that."

The extravaganza at Columbia, S.C., the largest in the nation so far, featured "Tarzan," a dozen nude coeds and several naked motorcyclists and was watched by campus police, who made no arrests. The officers appeared content to direct traffic and keep order among the 3,000 spectators.

The streakers gathered on fraternity row and then raced to the Russell House near the center of the South Carolina campus, and then down a street and back. One shaggy-haired youth, described as "Tarzan," climbed atop an information booth to proclaim his nakedness to the cheering crowd, many of whom took pictures.

Sunday night, the "super streaker," clad in long underwear and a beach-towel cape, which he shed, led 100 male and female streakers in a dash around the University of South Carolina campus. (See story, Page 8.)

Angry students began throwing rocks and bottles at police cars after a male streaker was arrested at the University of Georgia late Monday night. Police finally used about six cannisters of tear gas to disperse the 2,500 students, who later regrouped but remained orderly. A number of students were treated for cuts and tear gas inhalation. The streaker was charged with public indecency and another student was arrested for disorderly conduct.

Court Approves Drug Program

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court said Monday Texas' vendor program for distributing drugs to welfare clients is constitutional.

Welfare recipients argued the system ignored need criteria violating federal law and earlier court decisions.

But the Supreme Court reaffirmed a lower court order which decided the program, which began in September, 1971, did not unconstitutionally ignore "standards of need."

Before the new program starte, welfare recipients were given special grants if they needed to purchase drugs for their health care. Under the vendor program, recipients obtain drugs from pharmacists who then bill the state.

The lower court said since Texas did not eliminate the need for medical care entirely, but replaced it with a new system, the procedure did not violate federal regulations. The lower court also said the 14th Amendment requirements of equal protection of the law did not require states to pay benefits to the medically needy.

Signs Disappear

BEATTY, Nev. (UPI) — The highway department designed a sign to warn motorists of burros which sometimes stray onto the road and cause accidents.

The signs, showing a shaggy black burro on a yellow background, got too much attention. A department spokesman said they all disappeared, probably because tourists regarded them as prized collector's items.

Their Christmas gift?

Message from daughter

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: On Dec. 10th, 1973, you published a notice in your column advising runaway kids anywhere in the U. S. A. that they could direct dial a number FREE OF CHARGE and request that their parents be called and told that they were alive and well. It was understood that there would be no lecturing or counseling, and their calls would NOT be traced. And if the parents wanted to leave a message, the runaway could call back in a day or two to get it. The program is called "OPERATION PEACE OF MIND," and its purpose is to re-establish communication between runaways and their parents.

Abby, you gave us the most wonderful Christmas present we've ever had. Our 17-year-old daughter had run away from home two years ago. We received a call Christmas Day telling us she had called in and wanted us to know that she was well and working her way thru college! Her father and I cried most of that night. We left the message that we still loved her and wanted to help her any way we could. When she got our message she wrote us a letter saying she would come home after she finished her school semester!

Please, please, publicize that toll-free number again. It should be posted wherever runaways gather. God love you!

CAN'T THANK YOU ENOUGH

DEAR CAN'T: Don't thank me. Thank those wonderful volunteers in Houston, who man those phones 24 hours a day.

I'll repeat the message: If you are a runaway OUTSIDE THE STATE OF TEXAS who wants to give your parents a message, direct dial 1-800-231-6946. If you're IN the state of Texas, direct dial 1-800-392-3352. If you're IN Houston, dial 524-3821.

The only question that will be asked of you is, "Do you need any help—medical or otherwise?" If so, you'll be told where it is available FREE wherever you are. Please, forget the past and let your parents know that you are alive. They'll sleep better tonight—and so will you. God bless you!

DEAR ABBY: I hope it's not too late to add another gem to your collection of far-out Christmas card messages:

"Joe and I hope you have a very nice Christmas and a wonderful New Year. We will never forget all the good times we had together. Please understand, tho, that we intend to continue with our lawsuit against you. Love,

MARY"

Sign me . . ."SUE-D"

DEAR SUE-D: It's never too late for a good chuckle.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ZENO S. ON ALLEN COURT: If a line or two is dropped from my column, I prefer to believe that the editor felt that in the interest of saving space it needed slicing, rather than that in the interest of saving face it needed de-spicing.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 6

Your birthday today: Your year starts reasonably enough, much going for you, with indications of staying in the same old comfortable grooves of habit and routine; but it will not work out that way. Midyear brings detours, challenge for special efforts; and if you do not develop new tactics, some definite obstacles appear. Today's natives are impressionable, have an affinity for family or group life which attracts steady relationships.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Competition increases. Finesse with friends, relatives is very much needed. Problem-solving among local circles thrives; make the effort!

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Concern over family, property, possessions goes on, spurs you to take some belated step to simplify the situation. Strangers are apt to be critical.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Make the rounds early; there is a story you need to hear and get a second version while it is fresh. Asking questions is the least productive approach.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: A mixed sort of day; some contacts are very profitable, others lose a bit. Confidential advisors are to be shielded from publicity at almost any cost.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: You have a wide range of choice about what to do. Whatever you decide, it is likely to be your own singlehanded effort. Expect no relief or immediate help.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: You have reason to abstain from criticism, as almost any comment you make now is taken for more than you intend. Let other people do the talking.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: If you have a good idea, put it to use immediately. Asking questions merely sets off many rounds of discussion, during which very little gets done.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Despite some uphill going, business deals mature nicely today. Bring home some tangible evidence of your mood and degree of prosperity.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Now is the time to take a long look at the protection and well-being of those you cherish. There may be something you should do about them.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: All the variables except financial rearrangement are open for adjustment. Get off to a running start and stay on the ball for a day of steady effort.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: You've gotten to the point of feeling that you need little advice—at precisely the point where it would do the most good if you will listen.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Anything will do for an excuse. It's your responsibility to ignore provocation or teasing. There are far more important activities than squabbling.

Life Of Albert Schweitzer Told To Culture Club Members

The Twentieth Century Culture Club met Tuesday, Feb. 26, in the home of Mrs. Wyatt Lemons, with Mrs. James A. Poole, co-hostess. Mrs. Ross Buzzard, president, conducted the business meeting. A letter from the student whom the club helps to support at Texas Tech University, was read by the secretary, Mrs. Paul Turner.

Mrs. J.M. Stallings introduced the speaker for the day, Mrs. B.R. Nunn, whose program was entitled "The Doctor of Lambarene." Mrs. Nunn gave a word portrait of one of the mose widely respected men of our time, Dr. Albert Schwietzer, who made his philosophy of "reverence for life" an ethic for the world; his symbol of this was his hospital in the jungles of Africa.

Albert Schweitzer was born in Alsace, between France and Germany, in 1875, and came from a line of seriously inte' ectual people. His father was a minister and raised Albert in the frugal style of the small Protestant parishes until the age of ten, when he was sent to live in Mulhausen with an uncle and aunt, where he would have the opportunity for an excellent education. He learned to speak both French and German, and later wrote in both languages, the speaker told.

From his youth, Schweitzer was preparing for two careers: music and the church. He was an eager and conscientious student, and developed an intense power of concentration and a thoroughness of approach which served him well later on.

The organ was the national instrument of Germany, and Schweitzer inherited a deep interest in organs and organ - building as an art and a science. At the age of sixteen he gave his first organ concert, after having taken lessons on the beautiful organ of St. Stephens Church, which in itself was a rare opportunity. The skilled playing of the organ brought incredible esteem and appreciation to its performer, she said.

Schweitzer attended the University of Strasbourg, and at the age of 25, he received his doctor of theology degree. He had received his doctorate in philosophy the year before at the Sorbonne in Paris. During this time he was also preaching, and was doing some writing and teaching, both in religion and music. At the age of 30, he was well - known for his theological pioneering as a liberal Protestant, and today, after half a century, his work is still acclaimed for its solid scholarship.

His concerts and recitals in the capitals of Europe made him famous everywhere. But will all the outward signs of success and academic achievement, Schweitzer still felt an inner unrest and spiritual dissatisfaction that gnawed at him, so he decided to find some field of service and sacrifice where he could pay Creation for all he had received.

He preached and taught, as he had been educated to so. He felt that the basic Christian theology did not need to be intricate or elaborate, but was powerful in its truth and simplicity, and with this belief he answered a plea from the Paris Missionary Society regarding the needs of their Congo mission. His search was over, and he began making preparations for his real life mission of dedicated service to the people of Africa. He felt compelled to develop a new world view that believed that purpose lies in mankind, not in the world itself, she continued.

The one person who fully understood him and his philosophy was Helene Breslau, daughter or a distinguished professor at Strasbourg University. She was a crusader in social work, and as he entered medical school, she began to study nursing.

They married in 1912, and he continued studying tropical medicine. Then in 1913, Dr. and Mrs. Schweitzer began their life in Lambarene by cleaning up an abandoned chicken house for use as a hospital; construction of a new hospital was begun immediately, during which time Dr. Schweitzer was treating patients, as these pathetic, ill people touched his heart. Probably the greatest value of his hospital was that the natives were treated with respect, and dealt with thoughfully as individuals, fostering a mutual love between the Schweitzers and the Africans.

The war years between 1914 and 1918 were dark and depressing, as the Schweitzers were prisoners of war until declared non - political and returned to Alsace; he worked for a time at the Strasbourg Hospital, made lecture tours, and they were again in good health. Their daughter, Rhena, was born in 1919, and in a few years Helene Schweitzer urged her husband to return to Africa without her, as her health would not permit her to live in the tropics.

He returned to join his staff and resume his work in Africa. The patient load had increased considerably, and more land was needed for expansion, so they bought 172 acres up the river from their hospital.

In January 1927 the buildings of the Schweitzer - Breslau Hospital were ready to move into, and the patients were transported to it by riverboat. The treatment was more varied and complete, and the more puzzling aspects of tropical medicine could be carried on. It grew into a pulsating community.

Schweitzer travelled to Europe occasionally for the purpose of fund - raising and to see his wife and daughter. His lectures took him to all European countries, and he took back with him all the drugs he could obtain. After World War II there were difficult times, but they managed to keep the hospital open.

At age 70, Schweitzer found himself in a new Africa, as they were pressing for their independence; during this struggle, he remained aloof from their politics, choosing the role of the proverbail old family doctor. His daughter, Rhena, had married and had four children whom he had not seen because of the war, and in 1958 she came to Lambarene to celebrate jointly their birthdays, his 83rd. She loved the hospital and Africa, and later studied to be a laboratory technologist in order to help him, which she did for many years.

Mrs. Schweitzer had come to Africa with him in 1956, but she was weak and ill, and died a few months later, as she neared her 80th birthday. He and her ashes buried outside his window at the Lambarene Hospital, the place for which she had made so many sacrifices during her lifetime.

In 1958, he bid farewell to Europe, though the world did not know this was to be his final visit to his native continent.

The third Schweitzer Hospital developed after the war. He was now well along in years, and served more in an administrative capacity than a practicing physician. He administered a hospital of over 75 buildings, serving 700 patients a day, which with family attendants required nine tons of food a week. This required all of Schweitzer's amazing energy, foresight and executive ability.

In the last years of his life, Albert Schweitzer emerged as a truly world citizen. Before a hushed audience on the occasion of his 90th birthday breakfast in 1965, Dr. Schweitzer briefly summarized his career in these words: "At first I wanted to build a hospital like those in Europe, but two simple African laborers convinced me that conditions here were different. Therefore, I have built an African hospital for Africans."

Schweitzer died Sept. 4, 1965, after 52 years of service in Africa, having earlier designated his daughter, Rhena, to be administrator of the hospital.

Members present besides Mmes. Lemons, Poole, Buzzard, Turner, Stallings and Nunn were Mmes. A.E. Berry, Fred Brook, Milo Carolson, J.L. Chase, R.L. Cooke, J.R. Donaldson, M.K. Griffith, Myron A. Marx, Jr., Doyle Osborne, E.E. Shelhamer and L.J. Zachry.

Mrs. Whatley Hosts Music Teachers Meet

The Pampa Music Teachers Association met recently in the home of one of its members, Mrs. Calvin Whatley. Under new business, the club voted to accept to membership Mrs. Gary R. Henderson and appointed a nominating committee to select officer candidates for the coming year.

A musical program was presented by Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. Harold Starbuck and Bill Haley. Mrs. Henderson gave a review of the life of Anton Rubinstein after which she and Mrs. Harold Starbuck played a piano duet arrangement of "Melody in F," the composers most celebrated composition.

Haley played a group of five works for piano beginning with three by Chopin: "Prelude Op. 28, No. 1" in C Major, "Nocturne Op. 15, No. 2" in F sharp major, and "Berceuse, Op. 59" in D flat major. These were followed by the "Prelude No. 1" in B flat major from "Three Preludes" by Gershwin. He concluded with "Gardens in the Rain" by Debussy.

A salad luncheon was served by the hostess, Mrs. Whatley.

Members present besides those already mentioned were Mrs. Lois Fagan and Mrs. W.M. Cooper.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

All bridge players have at one time or another found themselves in the position where they were forced to guess which way to finesse for a queen or a jack. Sometimes they guessed right, and sometimes they didn't.

When today's deal arose, our South declarer felt that he was in a guessing position. In the play, he misguessed the location of a vital key card, and lost a vulnerable game. In the post - mortem analysis, it was revealed that there was no necessity for guesswork; and that, in fact, South misplayed the hand.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

Both sides vulnerable.
North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

South ruffed the opening lead, after which he cashed the queen of trumps, picking up the outstanding pieces. Since the loss of two heart tricks was inevitable, the success of the contract depended on losing only one club trick. This, in turn, depended on not losing a trick to the jack of clubs.

For no positive reason, at trick three declarer led the four of clubs and finessed dummy's ten when West played low. As is evident, East won the trick with the jack. Eventually South went down, losing all in all two club tricks and two hearts.

At trick two, declarer should have led the seven of trumps to dummy's nine, after which a second diamond would be trumped. Then would come the queen of trumps, which would be overtaken by the board's king. Dummy's remaining diamond would next be ruffed. Diamonds would now have been eliminated from both the North and South hands.

The ace of hearts would be played next, and this would be followed by a second heart lead. It would not matter which of the defenders elected to win this lead; nor would it matter which of the defenders then cashed a third lead of hearts.

With hearts and diamonds having been eliminated from both the North and South hands, the defenders would now be compelled to lead a club — and declarer would get a free finesse against the jack. Thus he would restrict his club losses to just one trick.

And so if declarer had played the hand in the recommended manner, the end - play would have accomplished what the finesse did not; the fulfillment of the contract.

The Pampa Daily News

A Watchful Newspaper

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Our Capsule Policy

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces can he develop to his utmost capability.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

An Inescapable Obligation

The number of highly publicized kidnapings and shootings leave an impression that the police are not able to protect people any more.

The impression is not precisely correct. Policemen seldom have been able to protect anybody in a direct sense. The reason is that criminals tend not to commit crimes in the presence of a policeman. The policeman is not a security guard. Police work is aimed at catching the criminal after the crime has been committed and to remove the offender from society so that he cannot repeat the misdeed.

Removal of the criminal, of course, usually has the same effect as direct protection, but not always. When criminals are few in number, relatively speaking, it stands to reason that crimes can be diminished by taking the crime - doer out of circulation. However, when criminals are numerous — as in our society today — imprisoning a few of them does not have the indirect protective effect that might be hoped for. Other measures, direct and indirect, are called for.

As to indirect alternatives, we will offer a suggestion and then go on to a discussion of direct protection. We believe that crime basically reflects a lack of respect for other people's property. Disobedience to law and disruption of order are an unwanted byproduct of teachings that obscure the distinction between what belongs to some private person and what belongs to the community.

Take the case of the man who was telling about his 11 - year - old son who picked fruit off a neighbor's tree without the consent of the owner. The young man had a number of "justifications." Among them were that other persons were sending their children to pick the fruit. He had heard that the owner had invited the neighbors to help themselves to vegetables left in the garden, etc. The man reported he told his son, "All you really had to know was that the fruit did not belong to you." These are times that call for extra - emphasis on property and instructions of super - caution to the young.

Indirect efforts to arrive at protection — police service, improved teachings — probably are more productive in the long term than the direct approach, but the results come much to late when you are being shot at, clubbed, stabbed, or kidnaped. Since the assailant has the initiative, and is disposed to strike when a policeman is not present, the prospective victim is thrown back upon his own resources. To achieve protection for the individual and family, some means is required to diminish the natural advantage of an adversary.

And here you come into a tradeoff situation. Some protective instruments are not advisable unless the user is willing to take the time required to become skillful. In specific situations, firearms are an attractive novelty to younger children. Some types of firearms are less dangerous than others.

Meat-Labeling Program

Early findings in a seven - state survey indicate that consumers are responding favorably to the national voluntary standardized meat - labeling program introduced by the meat industry.

Gone, or going, are the fancifully named cuts — the "charcoal steaks," "his and her steaks," "London broils," "Pike's Peak roasts" — that are colorful but tell a shopper very much about what he or she is buying.

Many stores now display charts showing the different beef, pork and lamb cuts prepared by the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

According to the board, which has been co-ordinating the uniform meat - labeling program developed by an industrywide Meat Identification Standards Committee, consumer response has been "extremely favorable" in the nation's stores and uspermarkets.

The labeling system was actually proposed long before the meat boycott of last April and the furor over beed prices during the summer. Executives from the meat industry and supermarket chains met for 16 months with representatives from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the White House's Office for Consumer Affairs and the Council of Better Bsuiness Bureaus to refine the mast list for uniform cuts.

A number of state and local government units have adopted or are considering adopting the industry's standards as the basis of new mandatory labeling codes.

"In the old days, the butcher behind the counter advised housewives on good, nutritious cuts of meat and how to prepare them," says the president of one supermarket chain, "but that personal touch disappeared with the spreal of self - service markets. I think this new program will to a long way toward restoring a closer relationship between shoppper and retailer."

In these days of shortabes, inflation and all around uncertainty, that's good news.

THE CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE

Criminals Must Be Convinced That Crime Really Doesn't Pay

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

It is of course impossible to foresee all that may have occurred in the Hearst kidnapping case by the time these words reach print. But nothing can alter the basic nature of the problem it represents.

Why is this worldwide rash of kidnappings, hijackings and bombings occurring at this particular moment? Men today are no better or worse, intrinsically, than they have ever been. The general conditions of human life, if they are deemed relevant, are certainly no worse, and probably on balance far better, than ever before. To be sure, modern technology has made certain types of crimes possible for the first time: Hijacking an airliner has obvious advantages over hijacking a stagecoach, for example. But that merely means that new techniques have become available to the ingenious criminal; it doesn't expalin his new disposition to use them.

What has happened is that various reckless individuals and groups have sensed (and shared) a subtle but profound change in the general attitude toward a particular sort of crime. They have discovered that governments have, in many instances, simply lost the will to deal decisively with kidnapping, or hijacking, or even murder, provided these are carried out in the name of some higher Cause.

Why should this make such an enormous difference? The answer is to be found among the root assumptions of the liberal world view.

When sociology at last achieved independent status among the social sciences, its students naturally gave early attention to the causes of crime. Being almost unanimously good liberals, they found these causes not in the wayward individual, but in his background: he was raised in poverty, or had suffered some other social disability. At bottom, in other words, his crime wasn't really his fault at all: it was society's.

What sweeping consequences have flowed from that simplistic premise! First, lighter penalties (or none) for all but the most aggravated or repeated offenses. Then enormous government expenditures to alter "crime - breeding" environments. Then the total abolition of the death penalty. Now the entire civilized world finds itself palsied because some bravo with a chip on his shoulder has the wit to kidnap or kill in the name of "the Palestinian refugees" or "the poor people of California."

What can be done about such people? Nothing, if we are unwilling to abandon the disastrous premise that has crippled our will to refuse to bargain with them. Otherwise, quite a bit.

Once we have determined never to bargain with such criminals, we must get over the idea that the death penalty does not deter. Provided it is both swift and sure, nothing deters so effectively. One may well agree with the Supreme Court that in the past it has been applied too unevenly in this country, and over too broad a range of crimes.

To repeat, however: death for the criminal must be swift, and as certain as possible. Speed is important, not only because of its general deterrent effect but in order to prevent the kind of grotesque chain reaction we have seen recently, in which innocent hostages are kidnapped to ransom some deliberate murderer, and then a hijack is staged to force release of the kidnappers, etc. etc.

Why Send Coal Abroad While We Have a Shortage in U.S.?

By VICTOR RIESEL

WASHINGTON — "Clean" American coal, without which it's mighty difficult to produce vital steel, is being exported mostly on freighters heading out of Hampton Roads, Va., to Communist Rumania, Tito's Yugoslavia and France, the Arab League's newest brother state — while the American steel industry is in desperate need of exactly this type of black fuel.

So acute is Bethlehem Steel's need for this low sulphur coal, it is cutting back "hot metal" production by a million tons in the next six months — and has begun laying off United Steelworkers Union members. Admittedly these furloughs still are light — some 350 in the Lackawanna (Buffalo) N.Y. plant and 50 at Sparrows Point, Md. In all, there will be some 1,250 workers cut from Bethlehem's payroll. This is a significant signal.

Of course, massive amounts of this vital coal dug in Appalachia goes to Japan as well as Europe, including Franz Joseph's Liechtenstein and the Lowlands. Point is the coal exporters can get between $10 and $20 a ton more for this key coking material abroad than they can from the American steel industry.

It's not that Bethlehem, U.S. Steel, Republic Steel, et al., refuse to pay. The government won't allow them. Prof. Dunlop's sagacious - appearing Cost of Living Council has clamped a ceiling on what the American steel industry can pay. But there are no price controls on coal exported to Europe, Asia and Latin America. Nor are there price controls on what the American mine operators can charge electric power utilities.

All other metallurgical coal lies under a price ceiling. So the U.S. steel industry lies under a pall. Some now live a hand - to - furnace mouth existence. Few have more than dangerously short supplies of this special coal.

So during the afternoon of Jan. 30, several steel company executives met secretly with such presidential, energy and price control czars as Treasury Secretary Shultz, Cost of Living Council chief John Dunlop and energy chieftain Bill Simon in a small Executive Office Building conference room.

The steel men pleaded with the braintrusters to decontrol metallurgical coal all the way. The steel suppliers urged the professors to let the price increase. Otherwise the American steelmakers would be short in 1974. Coal operators simply sell their stuff abroad at a terrifically higher price than the American steel companies are permitted, by the government, to pay mine owners.

There were well over 57 million tons of this special coal sold abroad by American firms in 1973. This year's rate is higher.

Thus if there are miners' protest strikes for automobile gasoline, such as those which shut 35 mines in West Virginia Monday (Feb. 25), or wildcat stoppages, there will be even less "clean" coal available — and it is possible we'll yet see heavier layoffs and lighter production in the steel industry.

The three wise men, energy and price czars, listened to the steel company executives' supplications, nodded sagely — and did nothing. So America's metallurgical coal still is being sold abroad — to Communist nations, to politically antagonistic nations which encourage the Arab oil embargo, and to tough competitors.

Specialists tell me France will be buying almost 3 million tons of American metallurgical coal from Kentucky, West Virginia and other mines this year — which is more than four times what Bethlehem Steel now needs.

This will help the French rebuild their armament industry and produce heavy machine equipment for sale to the Arab nations — especially Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. Authentic reports disclose the French now plan developments of a range of new weapon projects. They are going in for special land - based strategic missiles, advanced SAMs and air - to - air missiles.

Thus even should Dr. Kissinger convince the Soviets to cut off armaments from their Arab clients, France will be ready to step in with a long new line of killer machines. Few realize that much of France's policies, despite the Gaullist strength, is based on the united - front policies of the huge Communist party, which in turn stands on the powerful foundation provided by the Communist - controlled General Confederation of Labor (CGT) and some Socialist unions. So the Soviets could officially withdraw as the supplier of armaments in the "first instance" and permit France to move in against the U.S. in the Middle East.

Thus American metallurgical coal helps build the French economic and military machinery which will bolster the Arabs in their confrontation with the U.S. And yet this coal is needed by American steel companies, and workers — companies willing to pay a higher price to keep the critical coal at home. But our braintrusters just won't permit it. Why?

The Blackmail Billions

Washington Observer Newsletter has discovered the real reason for the taxpayer-financed grain deal with the U.S.S.R. which cost the taxpayers billions, and which triggered economic dislocations leading to the present quagmire of shortages and high prices, with no end in sight.

Contrary to public belief, the "Great Grain Robbery" was not the result of incompetence and stupidity on the part of the Nixon Administration, nor were Nixon and Kissinger so gullible as to allow themselves to be out-traded by the crafty Soviets.

On the contrary, the grain deal was a carefully-worked out scheme to pay "reparations" to the Kremlin, and to show the good faith of the White House in its intent to subsidize the buildup of the Soviet economy with further trade deals and giveaways.

These startling facts have been divulged to Washington Observer by a high Washington non-political bureaucrat who has personal knowledge of all details. He has told Washington Observer flatly and unequivocally that the taxpayers are "making a payoff in reparations for the Vietnam War, but the word, 'reparations' is not to be used in public discussions."

The Soviets argued that they spent $56 billion in aiding North Vietnam and the Viet-Cong and demanded reparations as a condition for pressuring Hanoi to accept a cease-fire. This Soviet demand was accepted by Kissinger and Nixon conditionally. The one condition being that the word "reparations" be taboo and that the payoff would be in the form of credits, trade favors and U.S. insured, private American investments and technological assistance. The Great Grain Robbery was the first installment of the disguised reparations. Even the Pentagon and the C.I.A. were not officially apprised of this circumstance.

It is not known how much Kissinger, in his secret diplomacy, has agreed to pay of the $56 billion reparations demanded by the Soviets. There is a historical analogy: in 1946 Stalin told the Truman Administration that he wanted $10 billion in credits to rehabilitate war-torn Russia. The State Department was agreeable to the Stalin request, but a hitch developed when it was learned that Stalin would not accept any consumer goods and wanted only machine-tools, heavy manufacturing equipment, transportation equipment and technology (blueprints). The U.S. was then in a period of transition from production and machine-tools were at a premium. American manufacturers refused to cooperate in this scheme. This was the beginning of the Cold War and the Berlin Blockade.

Ironically, the Soviets are now demanding a similar package as reparations for the Cold War, of which the Vietnam conflict was an integral part and served as a lever to make the United States come to terms. And the accommodating Dr. Kissinger, backed by the powerful factions behind him, has made a breakthrough by pledging American resources in a yet-to-be-disclosed arrangement. As the scenario unfolds, the American people will gradually learn the magnitude of the commitment.

Labor's Election Dollars -Conspicuously Unprobed

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON — What is sauce for the goose is not necessarily sauce for the gander — when it comes to investigating organized labor's multimillion - dollar political contributions.

In 1972, unions gave more than $1.699 million to 50 senatorial candidates — 40 liberal and leftish Democrats, 9 "friendly" Republicans, one independent.

But despite this massive political spending, there hasn't been even a whisper of a congressional probe. As far as Congress is concerned, it's something that just isn't mentioned.

Seemingly, there is no end to investigating 1972 Republican presidential contributors and expenditures. By congressional committees, grand juries, special prosecutors and certain sensation - mongering muckraking media, such ferreting goes on and on and on.

But organized labor's multimillion - dollar electioneering spending is blandly ignored.

virtually anything goes in censoriously harrying and scourging GOP campaign financing, but that of big labor is apparently sacrosanct. Doing anything about that is reverentially unmentioned and untouched.

Striking proof of that is that the significant data being recorded in this column was offered to all the media and completely disregarded.

It was contained in a widely distributed press release by Americans for Constitutional Action (ACA), a reputable nationwide non - partisan organization.

ACA's revealing figures were based on a detailed study of reported financial contributions to Senate candidates in the 1972 election. ACA is compiling a similar survey of union spending for "friendly" aspirants to the House of Representatives.

Who Got The Dough

Following are highlights of the ACA's analysis of labor spending for the 50 "friendly" Seante candidates:

—Democrats got $1.569 million — $1.456 million directly, $113,075 funneled through the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee.

—$123,478 was invested in Republicans — $108,478 directly, $15,000 via the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee.

—The independent was John McKeithen, La., on whom $6,500 was bestowed.

—Twelve Democrats received more than $50,000 each; seven in excess of $75,000. Largest beneficiary was Frank Kelley, who got $110,174 in a vain race against Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich. Of the hefty largesse dished out to Kelley, $34,531 came from the coffers of the United Auto Workers — whose ultra - liberal officials, but not rank - and - file, were ardent McGovernites.

—Militant liberal Sen. Clifford Case, N.J., topped the GOP list of labor's handouts — with $39,900. Second was Sen. Theodore Stevens, Alaska, with $20,300.

Next in line was Sen. Charles Percy, Ill., who is already busily hustling for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination. Although a multimillionaire, Percy accepted $13,750 from union sources to finance his re-election campaign.

Interesting sidelight on that, disclosed by ACA, is that labor contributed twice as much ($34,774) to Percy's Democratic opponent — former Rep. Roman Pucinski. He was put into the race largely by Chicago's Mayor Richard Daley, but never got off the ground.

Obviously, in this instance, labor was hedging its betting!

—Two other Republicans who fancy themselves 1976 presidential hopefuls got labor financing — Sens. Edward Brooke, Mass., and Howard Baker, Tenn. Brooke received $9,150, Baker $7,500. Brooke is an avowed White House aspirant, with the blessing of the congressional Black Caucus; Baker is still coy about it.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., who favors mod attire, also got $9,900 of union money.

Calling The Tune

The $1.699 million reported by ACA is by no means all organized labor poured into the 1972 senatorial election.

That's only a "minimum total."

Charles McManus, ACA president, stresses, "These figures reflect only those financial contributions reported to the proper recording agencies. They are minimum totals and do not reflect 'contributions in kind' which are required by Public Law 92-225.

"'Contributions in kind,' he explains, "should identify all expenditures of prorated administrative expenses, — i.e., salaries, manpower, printing, rent, computer time, etc. — of the unions and their political committees to political campaigns. But this type of campaign assistance is not generally recorded."

Principal labor electioneering organization is the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education (COPE).

Headed by Alexander Barkan, tough and aggressive veteran political operator, COPE exerts powerful influence in the Democratic establishment and Congress. This potent clout is reinforced in campaigns with wide - ranging and openhanded spending.

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Walt Alston leans on the iron bar behind the batting cage, peering through the strings intently and taking in every tiny detail.

There is the unmistakable look of the eagles about him, accentuated all the more by the crowsfeet which start near the corners of both eyes and journey part way down his cheeks.

Walt Alston is embarking on his 21st consecutive year as manager of the Dodgers, and only two men, Connie Mack and John McGraw, ever managed one club for a longer period of time. Only eight men in the entire history of professional baseball ever managed for more than 20 years.

Whenever he's referred to as the Dean of major league managers, which, of course, he is, Walt Alston simply smiles.

"I've been awfully lucky being in a good organization," he says, rationalizing in his own mind.

Alston's Sincerity

Some managers say something like that because they feel it's the thing to say. Alston says it because he means it.

"First of all, I inherited a helluva ball club when I originally took over. It didn't need much coaching or direction. Later on we were fortunate to come up with the Koufax's, Drysdale's and Roseboro's. This is about the third turnover since I've been with the club. We've got some fine ballplayers this year."

Alston has managed the Dodgers to all four of their world championships and six pennants. He is 62 going on 52 because of his general approach to the job, but that doesn't stop touring journalists from coming here each spring and asking him how much longer he intends to keep going.

"I never get through with that," he says, good naturedly. "Every year someone says 'this is his last year.' Believe me, I never give it much thought. Quitting, I mean. The important thing is liking your job. If you didn't with a job like managing, the grief and disappointment at times would drive you insane. I like what I'm doing. I hope to keep doing it as long as I'm healthy and I've never felt better in my life."

Specialists Needed

When the Dodgers, who were still in Brooklyn then, first signed Alston in 1954 it was only to a one-year contract. He has signed 20 other one-year contracts since and that doesn't bother him at all. When he originally was hired to manage the Dodgers, one newspaper asked "Walt who?"

"I remember that," he says, "but it didn't really bother me. I was just thankful to be there. Later on, there was a lotta talk whether or not I'd be back. I didn't worry about that too much either."

Ask Walt Alston the prime reason for his success, and he turns the subject toward others, not himself. He talks about those who have helped him in his career, men like his present coaches Jim Gilliam, Tom Lasorda, Monty Basgall and Red Adams.

"The best thing a manager can do is have some specialists in the coaching department," he says. "I don't profess to know everything there is to know about pitching. I think, for example, I know about infielders and know when they make a mistake, but I leave the fine points to a specialist like Monty Basgall.

No Imitator

Alston says he never has copied any other manager, wittingly, anyway.

"I played for Bennie Borgmann a couple of years at Portsmouth, Ohio, and I kinda liked the way he did things. But everybody has to manage his own particular way.

"I think Leo (Durocher) was a great manager. He does it one way, I do it another way. I think if I did it Leo's way, I couldn't do it, and he probably couldn't do it my way."

The two teams Alston is proudest of are the 1959 and 1963 Dodgers. His 1959 club beat the White Sox in the world series—"it may have not been the best club but it gave me 110 per cent"—and his 1963 outfit knocked off the Yankees four straight.

The last thing in the world Walt Alston will ever do is single out any one favorite player of his down through the past 21 years.

"There were so many you were proud and thankful for," he says. "I tried to treat them all alike."

Right there you have the whole key to Walt Alston's singular success.

CRITICS QUIET AFTER WIN

Dayton Proves Bid No Fluke, ND Falls

By United Press International

There were some harsh words last week when Dayton was selected for the NCAA tourney but the critics have all been silenced today.

Dayton shut off the detractors Monday night with one of the biggest upsets of the college basketball season as the unranked Flyers shocked No. 2 rated Notre Dame 97-82.

With a record home crowd of 13,528 chanting, "Goodbye Irish, we hate to see you go", the Flyers surged to a 15-point lead in the first half and then held on the rest of the way to hand Notre Dame only its second loss in 26 games this season. The other was to UCLA.

Donald Smith was the big man for Dayton as he hit 32 points despite being charged with three personal fouls in the first half.

"In all the time I've been here (nine years), this is the greatest win we've had," said Dayton Coach Don Donoher. "This will give us a tremendous lift for the NCAA tournament. We just played our game all the way."

Donoher admitted to periods of tremendous anxiety in the second half.

"It was frustrating to see the lead dwindle," he said. "I was seriously thinking of putting on the stall with four minutes left to go in the first half. That Notre Dame team will test you. They showed us every defense in the book and they change all the time."

John Shumate, named earlier in the day to UPI's All America team, led the Irish with 29 points.

In other games involving ranked teams, Providence (8) ripped Brown 92-77, South Carolina (11) rolled past Creighton (18) 78-69, Louisville (15) beat Illinois State 117-107 and Alabama (16) crushed Auburn 97-84.

Marvin Barnes, also named an All America Monday, scored 37 points and grabbed 23 rebounds to carry Providence past Brown and South Carolina, with Brian Winters hitting a career-high 29 points, surged past Creighton. Bill Butler's 24 points helped Louisville down Illinois State and Charles Russell's 26 points lifted Alabama past Auburn.

Elsewhere, Alvan Adams' 29 points helped Oklahoma beat Missouri 97-80 and Robert Wilson scored five points in the last two minutes to lift Iowa State to a 70-68 victory over Oklahoma State. Kim Hu[illegible]s and Gary Anderson each had 18 points as Wisconsin routed Iowa 74-58.

In other games, Marshall downed Canisius 71-64, Villanova beat Xavier (Ohio) 79-74, Tennessee defeated Georgia 97-89, Jacksonville edged Houston 83-80, Florida State overcame South Alabama 96-91, Kentucky crushed Mississippi State 108-69, Mississippi beat Louisiana State 82-74, Tulsa nipped Oral Roberts 85-84.

OLIVA WANTS RAISE

Designated Hitter Causing Arguments

By United Press International

One year later, the value of the designated hitter remains open to hot dispute.

And, naturally, the man who is behind the latest dispute is Calvin Griffith, president of the Minnesota Twins, who just a few days ago was involved in another controversy concerning arbitration.

Tony Oliva, who thought he had made a healthy contribution to Minnesota last year when he batted .291 with a club-leading 92 RBI's as a designated hitter, learned Monday that his boss had a different perspective of his job.

"The designated hitter is something new, we have only had it one year," Griffith said in explaining his refusal to give Oliva the same $91,000 salary he received last year. Griffith is offering $84,000.

"No one knows what designated hitters are worth," Griffith continued, "but I believe they are part-time players and should be paid accordingly."

Oliva countered: "I believe I had a good year last season and deserve at least as much as I made then. Other designated hitters like Orlando Cepeda and Deron Johnson received raises. All I want is the same."

Griffith, to strengthen his case, also pointed out that he was informed by team doctors that cartilage and torn ligament on Oliva's right knee will never permit him to play the outfield again.

For Philadelphia Phillie Manager Danny Ozark, when it comes to the designated hitter, he can take it or leave it. In fact, he said Monday he will allow American League managers to use designated hitters in exhibition games at their parks, but for himself, he'll leave it.

NL President Chub Feeney is allowing individual clubs to rule for themselves whether to [illegible] AL rivals to use designated hitters in inter-league exhibitions.

"We won't use it ourselves," Ozark said. "It will put us at a slight disadvantage in some games, but these games aren't that important. They aren't as important as getting my pitchers some at-bats before the regular season starts."

NIT Invites First Black Team In Event's History

NEW YORK (UPI) — The National Invitation Tournament selection committee decided Monday to give the University of Maryland-Eastern Shore the "benefit of the doubt" and issued the first invitation to a predominantly black school in the tourney's 37-year history.

It was the end of a roller coaster week for Hawks coach John Bates, who was hopeful, then disgusted, then hopeful again, then... well, as he described it himself, "ever watch a small kid receive a bicycle at Christmas-time?"

The NIT has given the Hawks their long-awaited chance to play with the big boys, an opportunity sought since UMES joined Division I basketball this season.

The NIT has lined up Cincinnati (19-7), Fairfield (17-8), Rutgers (18-7), Utah (19-7), Boston College (18-8) and Connecticut (18-7) for its 16-team field Monday. Previously, Manhattan, St. John's, Hawaii and Massachusetts had accepted bids, so 11 of the 16 berths are now filled.

But, no invitation was accepted as eagerly as the Hawks.

"It's hard to explain how I feel," Bates said. "I'm very proud of the NIT for inviting us. It's a giant step for the black colleges."

When UMES embarked upon its proposed major college basketball program, it found the going as treacherous as the Chesapeake Bay in gale-force winds. Simply, none of the major schools would schedule the Hawks.

So UMES continued its NAIA affiliation and compiled a 26-1 mark against Division II opponents, breathlessly hoping for an NCAA or NIT bid.

But, Thursday saw the NCAA pass over the Hawks and the NIT did not include them among the first four teams named either. With a Friday deadline for accepting a bid for the NAIA tourney and still no word from the NIT, the Hawks committed themselves to the NAIA.

However, Bates received a call at home Sunday from a member of the NIT saying the Hawks were still under consideration.

"I hated their calling," Bates said. "I hated to sleep after that, afraid the dream would go away."

Bruins Place Two On Collegiate Team

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two-time Player of the Year Bill Walton of UCLA was joined by frontcourt teammate Keith Wilkes as the Bruins placed two men on the 1973-74 United Press International All-America major college basketball team.

The two UCLA seniors were joined on the first team by juniors David Thompson of North Carolina State and John Shumate of Notre-Dame and senior Marvin Barnes of Providence.

The 6-foot-11 Walton made the first team for the third successive year, a feat matched by only six other players in the 26-year history of the UPI teams, the last being Calvin Murphy with Niagara and Pete Maravich with LSU in 1968-70.

The 6-4 Thompson is also a repeater from last year's team, while Wilkes, 6-7, Shumate, 6-9, and Barnes, 6-9, are on the first team for the first time.

In the balloting by 241 sportswriters and sportscasters from across the nation, Walton compiled 478 points out of a possible 482 —named by all but four voters on the first team — to lead all vote-getters for the past three seasons, the first to accomplish this feat.

Thompson finished second with 447 points, followed by Shumate (352), Wilkes (350) and Barnes (272).

In addition to the first team selection of Thompson, the Atlantic Coast Conference put four men on the second team to join the NCAA's leading scorer, Larry Fogle of Canisius. With Fogle on the second unit are Maryland's Tom McMillen and Len Elmore, North Carolina's Bobby Jones and Thompson's teammate Tom Burleson, the tallest player on the team at 7-4.

The third team is composed of Barnes' teammate Kevin Stacom, Campy Russell of Michigan, James "Fly" Williams of Austin Peay, Bill Knight of Pittsburgh and Shumate's teammate Gary Brokaw.

The red-headed Walton, from La Mesa, Calif., has averaged 18.9 points a game and 14.7 rebounds, connecting on 65 per cent from the field. Although his efforts were not enough to guide his team to an undefeated season —as he had for the past two years —the UCLA pivotman's defensive skills were of a consistently high calibre.

Wilkes, a forward from Santa Barbara, Calif., earned the nickname "Silky" for his smoothness and grace on the court, complementing Walton's overpowering style. Wilkes, on the second team as a junior, averaged 16.6 points and 6.6 rebounds and hit 86 per cent of his free throws. His best game came in a national TV game against the Wolfpack, when he scored 27 points to Thompson's 17.

Pampa Visiting Canyon's Eagles

CANYON — Pampa's Harvesters, in an attempt to break the winning column for the first time in their initial four games, travels here today for a 4 p.m. game with the 1-AAA Canyon Eagles.

Pampa dropped three games to Altus, Okla. in both teams' opening series of the season. The scores of those contests in Altus were 18-9, 6-5 and 13-6.

Canyon is 1-1 for the season, losing to the Sandies in its opener, 15-2, and belting Palo Duro at the Dons' field, 16-4, Monday.

Canyon's top hitters include third baseman Wayne Pitt, an outstanding guard for three seasons on the basketball team. Pitt went one for three batting and scored twice against Palo Duro. Another basketballer, Ed Lair who plays second base scored three times in the Eagle win.

Canyon pounded out 12 hits Monday.

Much of the Harvesters' hitting has been coming from short stop Toddy Black, three of seven for a .428 average in three games. Black also has batted in three runs.

Joe Watkins, an outfielder, is one of five but has three RBI's on a bases - loaded triple. Centerfield Rick Smith is three of nine for a .333 batting mark.

Pampa's batting and position lineup for today's game will probably be Black, shortstop; Smith, centerfield; Tyler Drinnon, rightfield; Rick Bigham, second base; John Agan, leftfield; Mike Adair, third base; Roy Morris, first base; Bobby Hendricks, catcher and Tommy Washington, pitcher.

Why should our son have a newspaper route?

The living is good. Plenty of money, nice home, nice furnishings, another salary raise in sight; we've never had it so good. Why should our son manage a newspaper route?

Most any educator or businessman will tell you why in three simple words: it builds character.

Oftentimes the youngster who grows up in comfortable circumstances and who gets his weekly "handout" from dad never realizes the value of money or the efforts required to make it and manage it, until he's on his own. By then attitudes and habits are difficult to reverse.

But the newspaperboy quickly learns valuable lessons that stick. While making money on a newspaper route is important, the experience of getting-the-job-done-no-matter-what is more important. When through route management, responsibility and self-confidence are acquired at this early age, a newspaperboy has an advantage over other youngsters that no amount of money can buy.

If you're still wondering whether your son would benefit from newspaper route management, ask a community businessman or civic leader, or better still, phone our Circulation Department.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Bothered With Chapped Lips

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For several years now I have been bothered with chapped lips, not only in the winter but summer also. Our family doctor recommended drinking more water but that has not cured the problem. Could you make any recommendation?

—Mrs. W.M.

This could be a variety of conditions and should be seen to be evaluated.

However, drying, crusting and cracking the year round suggests there may be an irritant that is continually present.

Cosmetics sometimes are the offenders — lip stick is an obvious possibility. Nail polish or other preparations that touch the lips only secondarily can't be neglected as suspects.

So think back. Have you made any change in your cosmetics dating to about the time the trouble started?

Stopping all cosmetics for a time may be useful. It may not, right off the bat, show which cosmetic is guilty, but if the trouble stops, it narrows things down a good deal.

Irritation from toothpaste or dental materials sometimes proves to be the cause of the trouble.

Sensitivity to the actinic rays of the sun can be involved.

You also might try one of the lip balms available in the drugs store. These are colorless but serve as protection against external irritants.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You had an article on post - nasal drip. Would you please rerun this article, and do you have a booklet on treatment?

—Mrs. P.J.

I don't like to run articles over again, but I do have a booklet that discusses post - nasal drip, causes as well as treatment, in a good bit of detail.

The same booklet also discusses sinus trouble, so send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self - addressed envelope to me in care of Dr. George C. Thosteson, Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120 and ask for the booklet, "You Can Cure Sinus Trouble." It will include the information you want on post - nasal drip.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there any home treatment for a leg ulcer caused by varicose veins?

—F.L.N.

The only effective one is surgical removal of the varicose veins — and that's hardly a "home treatment." Local treatment of the ulcer is also necessary, as prescribed by the doctor.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am three months pregnant and worried sick. At about six weeks I tried taking quinine to try to stop the pregnancy. After one pill I showed one spot of blood, and took four more but didn't show any more. Then I was having morning sickness and couldn't keep the pills down at all. They just made me sick.

Now I am worried that the quinine hurt my baby. Would it affect the baby's health?

—Mrs. R.P.

It is doubtful if a small amount of quinine would have any detrimental effect on the baby, but I suspect it is a good thing that you couldn't keep some of the pills down.

There's a long list of drugs that can harm the baby, and a longer list of drugs about which we don't yet know enough to be sure, so I stick to the advice I've often given before: Don't take ANY medicine in pregnancy without your doctor's sanction.

By the way, the claim that quinine will terminate a pregnancy is an old and oft - repeated fable, but neither it nor any other medicine will undo an established pregnancy or cause a miscarriage. The cases in which somebody says quinine did so, it was a coincidence, and a miscarriage was going to occur anyway.

Birth control is a much - discussed and highly relevant topic in today's society. Find out all you should know about birth control in Dr. Thosteson's easy - to - read booklet, "The Twelve Birth Control Methods." For a copy, write to him in care of Dr. George C. Thosteson, Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing 25 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self - addressed envelope (include zip code).

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

Our Little Ole Town's A-Hummin'

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — Our little ole town's a-hummin' since Joel Grey and Pat Cooper barged in.

Joel, a Cleveland, O., boy who made good in the big city, as O.O. McIntyre used to say, opened at the Waldorf Empire Room where the Walter Cronkites were seen exchanging dances with the Skitch Hendersons.

"Ruth Henderson is the only one who can get Walter out on the dance floor," confessed Betsy Cronkite. Walter danced fast and sexy and as one who hasn't mastered any dance since the shag, I want to be the first to nominate him for a scholarship at Arthur Murray.

Rumors were wild! A woman correspondent prophesied to me she had positive information President Nixon's departure is "imminent." Another rumor was that the Cronkites were trying to reconcile Barbara Walters and her ex-husband Lee Guber. Everybody denied everything.

Joel Gray told Shirley MacLaine, Beverely Sills, Carol Channing and the like that he looks up to people who are short — Dick Cavett, Dustin Hoffman, Truman Capote, the late Billy Rose and "Henry Kissinger and Golda Meir who are about 5-11 ... piggyback." Little Joel had the most resplendent Waldorf opening in many months complete with standing ovation.

Pat Cooper got into economics in his opening at Jimmy's. He said he's staying at an $80-a-day hotel: "They put a 'Don't disturb' sign out, and at 6 a.m. comes a knock — the maid's gonna make the bed — whether you're in it or not." He asks for a bucket of ice: $4, with a tip. $5; Order a bottle of beer: $2.50 — and they bring it in a bucket of ice. Figure it out.

Tuesday Weld ringsided at Michael's Pub listening to her friend Dudley Moore (of "Good Evening") play some fine jazz piz piano, and the strange fact was that he worked without salary. (Hard to get that kind of help nowadays.)

Chinese artist Dong Kingman told me he'd gone to the "Sing Moritz" Hotel but corrected it; he meant "the Sing Regis." Cliss Connol opened there, he explained. Chris Connor, the vocalist, who used to be with Stan Kenton.

THE MIDNIGHT EARL...

There have been "the usual disagreements" between Burgess Meredith, director of the Zero Mostel show, "Ulysses in Nighttown," and the Alexander H. Cohen management, but Meredith says he has not quit. (Meredith was home with a cold — and a TV commercial to do.)

"It's a wonderful show and it's stupid not to straighten things out." He said he welcomed the help of English director John Dexter.

Sarah Churchill decided during dinner at the Gold Coin that "I'd better get back to England and vote." She phoned for a plane reservation and went right to the airport, carrying only her handbag and a bag of spareribs ... There was only one Andrews sister in "Over Here" the other night as ptomaine knocked Patti out.

Show Biz Quiz: What TV star was featured in the Japanese monster movie, "Godzilla?" Ans. to yesterday's: Buck Rogers, Flash Gordon and Tarzan were played by Buster Crabbe.

Tony Curtis'll be Ann - Margret's landlord while she's movie - making in London; she rented his big home ... Sarah Mile's estranged husband Robert Bolt escorted a young girl to a London show, and his agent was angry at questioners: "Why shouldn't Robert have a girl friend? His wife reveled in publicity about these things" ... Ex-child star Margaret O'Brien's up for a TV role as a sort of Women's Lib version of James Bond.

I'D RATHER BE LIGHT

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: A young comic said proudly he'd just signed a $3,000 - a - week contract to appear in Las Vegas: "That'll be the most money I ever lost there!"

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Marion Butler of Norfolk, Va., suggests a way to enforce gas - saving speed limits: "Have men drive at the age they wish they were, and the women at the age they'll admit to."

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Conscience is that still, small voice within you that tells you Internal Revenue just might possibly check your returns."

EARL'S PEARLS: Virginia Graham tells of her effective "see - food" diet. "You see food, but don't eat it."

Under Twenty

By JEANNE HARRISON

Although the rain is coming down in buckets in New York City as we analyze this week's hits, all is sunshine at the Number One post position with "Seasons In The Sun" moving up from second last week. Also, John Denver's "Sunshine On My Shoulder" shows up in the Top Ten for the first time. Here's the scoop:

TOP TEN SINGLES (+)

1. "Seasons In The Sun" — Terry Jacks
2. "Boogie Down" — Eddie Kendricks
3. "Spiders & Snakes" — Jim Stafford
4. "Love's Theme" — Love Unlimited Orchestra
5. "The Way We Were" — Barbra Streisand
6. "Rock On" — David Essex
7. "Dark Lady" — Cher
8. "Sunshine On My Shoulder" — John Denver
9. "Jet" — Paul McCartney
10. "Mockingbird" — Carly Simon & James Taylor

FIVE TOP ALBUMS (+)

1. "Planet Waves" — Bob Dylan
2. "Denver's Greatest Hits" — John Denver
3. "You Don't Mess Around With Jim" — Jim Croce
4. "Tales From Topographic Oceans" — Yes
5. "Behind Closed Doors" — Charlie Rich

The Chambers Brothers, now on a new label, have sprung loose with "unbounded." Album is well worth the spinning. "The Dells vs. The Dramatics" pits these top rhythm and blues groups together on a fine new offering. In the rock vein listen for Bo Diddley's "Big Bad Bo."

Remember The Singing Nun? Another nun from Australia, Sister Janet Mead, has a hit in a single recording of "The Lord's Prayer" in rock. Look for an album to follow.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®
...it tells you how

Spring is salad time . . . and after a winter of dried, salted or stored root vegetables, it's no wonder that the early settlers fell rejoicing on the first edible green shoots that poked their heads out of the ground. Come to think of it, lack of fresh vegetables and fruits over the long cold months probably had a lot to do with the weakness, tiredness and low resistance that traditionally went with early spring.

Even though we're less vitamin-starved than our forefathers when the early greens come up, the spring salad bowl is still a treat to look forward to. And for an added ingredient that will boost the nutritional value of your dish more than anything else you can find, keep your eyes open for wild violets while you're on your way to the early lettuce patch. The leaves are unbelievably rich in vitamins C and A . . . so shred them into your salad and celebrate the end of winter with a fine—and picturesque—spring tonic.

For further information about foraging and eating violets and eight other wild foods, send 10¢ and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®, in care of this paper. Ask for Reprint No. 45, FAMILY FORAGING!

Streaking Spreads Across Campuses

By United Press International

They streaked for fun and politics at North Carolina Monday morning. A South Carolina man in pink longjohns led them.

There was wall to wall nudity at Tennessee Sunday night and normally staid Memphis State plans a streak to end all streaks for later this week.

But nighttime nudity at Memphis has already met with police ambush. Campus officers waiting in the dark near a women's dorm arrested football quarterback David Fowler, 20, of Mayfield, Ky., and offensive guard Tony Marchetti, 21, of Nashville, as they ran by.

The men were charged with indecent exposure.

"It was really like a carnival," said Cliff Mitchell, the "streak coach" who fired the starting gun at Greensboro, N.C. at 1:30 a.m. EDT. At the shot 258 students, 75 of them coeds, galloped, or rode motorcycles or packed small foreign cars for the several-block run three times through a dormitory complex.

"People had painted themselves and were wearing funny hats," Mitchell said. One student, a potential candidate for upcoming campus elections, ran nude for "complete openness in government."

About 100 students led by "Super Streaker" ran Sunday night through streets and dorms at Columbia, S.D. The leader, clad in pink longjohns, helmet, goggles and a beach towel cape, exhorted residents of a coed dorm to join the run, then stripped and took off.

At Columbia, Mo., home of the University of Missouri, about 40 nude men raced along fraternity row in mild temperatures.

"Everybody was out enjoying the warm air," said one student, "when a man ran through the area and through the front door of a fraternity house while people on the front lawn cheered him on."

From there the crowd grew and police finally appeared "to make sure no one was hurt."

Early today at least two fraternities issued challenges for "an intra-mural streaking match" scheduled tentatively for Wednesday night.

In most areas streakers have met with considerable tolerance but in Tennessee it may get down to skin on shotgun.

Traffic was blocked for three hours by "wall to wall" streakers Saturday night at the University of Tennessee's main campus in Knoxville and 10 male students streaked across the Trinity University campus in San Antonio, Tex.

But the most disruptive streak appeared to be the one at 11:15 p.m. EDT Sunday at Memphis State. Although only three fraternity pledges actually streaked, other pranks resulted in 12 police units in riot gear and shotguns descending upon the campus along with a couple of police helicopters.

Administration officials said disciplinary action would be taken against the three streakers who ran naked across the university's women's dormitory area in springlike 69 degree temperature.

Students on the normally quiet campus secretly formulated plans for a "super streak," tentatively planned for sometime this week that is expected to set a host of national streaking records.

There is no accurate account of the number of streakers who dashed across the Memphis State campus Sunday night. Estimates ran from a low of five to a high of 35, but only the three fraternity pledges were actually identified.

The incident started at a women's dormitory with reports of a panty raid. Fraternity members and other male students then zipped across the area on motorcycles, stopped near the dorms, dropped their trousers, and rode off again into the night.

It ended with the three fraternity pledges dashing totally naked through the area.

By that time the huge contingent of police had sealed off the area.

In Knoxville, police Sgt. Floyd Patty said "at the outside there were 50" persons involved in that streak. Patty said one tavern offered a free bag of beer for any woman streaker and within minutes a nude woman jumped from a car, dashed for the tavern, and left carrying a bag that probably was filled with beer.

"They were staying out having a good time, drinking and throwing cans," Patty said. "There was no serious damage."

He said no one was injured and no one was arrested.

In San Antonio, 10 nude men jumped out of cars and ran by the women's dorm on the Trinity campus. Coeds were at almost every window.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Alta's University Women's Club were almost unanimous in accusing their husbands of the most common masculine fault! Wives, smile sweetly and don't feel unduly hurt, for this is a safety valve, invented by Adam.

CASE Z-568: Alta D., aged 28, was President of her University Women's Club.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "we'd like to have you conduct a forum for questions after your main address.

"Then our members can ask what they wish regarding their personal problems with their children.

"And especially with their husbands!"

BUCK-PASSING

One of the queries that caused the most nods of assent was this:

"Dr. Crane, why do husbands try to blame their wives for everything that goes wrong?

"Even when they themselves are obviously guilty of the mistake, they will still twist things and rationalize till they make the wife seem at fault."

Buck-passing is a universal attempt to protect our own ego.

Men (and women, too) all wish to feel important.

If we make errors, we feel less important.

So we eagerly try to shift the blame to somebody else, for that helps relieve our ego from being badly deflated.

And it also may divert punishment, especially when we are children.

Thus, when my sister Elsbeth was about 7 years of age, she broke off some of my mother's geraniums that were in a flower bed in front of our home.

"Who broke off my geraniums?" our mother demanded.

And Elsbeth, the guilty party, wished to avoid reprimand but had been taught not to tell a fib.

"I saw a little dog run around the house!" Elsbeth eagerly replied.

Adam was the first inventor of the human race, and his buck-passing device has been used ever since.

You Bible readers will recall that after Eve had fed him the forbidden apple, and both then hid when God entered the Garden of Eden, God made Adam come forth.

"Did you eat the forbidden fruit?" God inquired.

Adam was definitely on the spot!

And, like my sister Elsbeth, he didn't dare tell a lie.

Then a flash of wisdom caused him to invent buck-passing.

"The woman whom thou gavest to be with me," replied Adam, "she gave me of the tree, and I did eat."

So God turned to Eve and asked, "What is this that thou hast done?"

Being a smart wife, she recognized the merit in Adam's unique invention, so Eve immediately adopted it and said:

"The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat."

Alas, the serpent was in the same boat with former President Truman, who had this motto on his desk:

"The buck stops here!"

There is a modern story to the effect that when Adam and his son Seth were taking a hike together, Seth noticed the beautiful Garden of Eden.

"Father," Seth began, "that is a beautiful place so why don't we live there?"

"My son," Adam replied, "we used to live there until your mother ate us out of house and home!"

Wives, men are usually the egotists of the family, which is why they have such an excessive craving to protect their masculine pride, so don't become hurt by their buck-passing.
