TOM BLANTON HAS COURAGE TO ATTACK THINGS HE DOESN'T LIKE, HIS SISTER SAYS HERE

"I'm Not Defending Him, but I Never Heard Him Use Language Harmful to Youths;" Klan Will Die Natural Death, She Says

"I don't believe that I should be elected to congress from this district because I am a sister of Tom Blanton, and I don't believe I should be defeated because I am his sister.

"I am not ashamed of being his sister. In fact I am proud of it and consider it a privilege to be known as his sister."

"I believe the history of the present Ku Klux Klan will be the same as the original one. It will not be willing to be responsible for some of the things that are done in its name and for that reason it will die out."

300 Hear Her

This and more Annie Webb Blanton, state superintendent of public instruction and candidate for the unexpired term in congress from this district, told some 300 hearers in the courtroom of the 30th district court Wednesday night in one of the first speeches of her campaign.

Judge John Kay in introducing the speaker said that she had made an efficient state official in the office which she now holds and said that he stood ready to give her consideration for the office to which she now aspires.

"I couldn't promise, if elected to congress, to make as fine a fight as he has made," Miss Annie Webb Blanton declared following a defense of the course of her brother, Congressman Thomas L. Blanton, which has gotten the latter "in bad" with his fellow congressmen, in her speech tonight. "I can promise, however, to vote against all of these extravagant things. And that is the way to stop them—to send members of congress with the courage to vote against them."

"If elected to congress I would let Tom attend to the affairs of his district and I would attend to mine," she said in another point of her talk.

Unable to Tour State

"I am running for congress and not for a third term as state superintendent of public instruction because I could not afford the latter. It takes money to make a state wide campaign and I am still $4,500 in debt for my other campaigns. I am making this campaign through the aid of friends

CONGRESSMAN HATTON W. Sumners, as acting ranking Democrat on the judiciary committee of the house, made a speech against the so-called anti-lynching bill which is now pending in the senate. It is evident that America has entered a new phase in the evolution of the race question in this country. For the first time, influenced by professional agitators, the negroes in the doubtful states and in congressional districts where they constitute the balance of power are organizing along racial lines. They are demanding, by attitude and by word, as the price of their continued allegiance to the Republican party, the right to fashion a nation's policy with regard to the race problems of the South. In addition to this, they threaten the individual member of congress with defeat in the primaries if he opposes their program. The vote on this bill shows how effective this measure has become. The South in round numbers has only one-fourth the membership of congress. It is perfectly evident that southern opposition to that which is developing must be based upon broad principles of governmental and public policies. In his speech the Texas congressman endeavored to lay down these principles and to discuss them and the constitutional questions involved in such a way that not only the lawyer, but the laymen as well, will be able to comprehend them and in such a way as to appeal to thoughtful people of other sections of the country and to the law-abiding black man of the South whose welfare is being put in peril by these agitators. Congressman Harry Wurzbach of the San Antonio district voted for the anti-lynching bill. He has advertised himself as the spokesman of Southern negroes, if press reports are true, and the negroes of Washington have demanded of him a repeal of the so-called separate coach law of Texas. Wurzbach is certain to meet with defeat this year. He has been ignored by the President and the leaders of the Republican party in Texas have turned him down repeatedly. His father was a Confederate soldier. Wurzbach is a native son. He has wandered afar from the teachings of his youth and the traditions of his people. There should be written law enforcement. There should be one law for all. There should be justice for all but the Lord help the negro if he organizes along racial lines either in the North or in the South. He is inviting destruction.

PRESIDENT HARDING OPposes a cut in the navy; President Harding opposes a cut in the army. Isn't the congress the legislative branch of the government? Is the general staff of the army the ruling force? Is the general staff of the navy the ruling force? Arn't the people

J. B. Fitts Replies to Complaint Made To Mayor

"There is not a word of truth in it; no one was assaulted here by a band of men following the address of Colonel J. G. Camp April 9," emphatically declared J. B. Fitts, police commissioner, in speaking Wednesday night of the "assault" which E. B. Murray, Sr., of New Jersey, asserts, in a letter to Mayor Collier, was made upon his son, E. B. Murray, Jr., soon after the address.

"After the speaking that Sunday afternoon," Commissioner Fitts said last night, "a man named Murray, who said he was a Roman Catholic, cursed and abused Camp, and followed him when he came out to the Kemp hotel. I was called to the scene, because it was feared trouble would follow.

"Murray got on the same elevator with Colonel Camp and attempted to go up with him. I called Officers Belcher and Johnson of the police department to protect Murray, because a crowd who were following the two were growing angry at the language he had used.

Not a Blow Struck.

"Officers Belcher and Johnson went with him to the train he was leaving on and saw him safely on the train; there wasn't a blow struck, and no one was even abusive except Murray himself," the commissioner said.

Camp had addressed a mass meeting at the Palace theater on the Ku Klux Klan. Remarks he is said to have made regarding the religion which Murray believes in is said to have aroused the latter to anger, he having followed Colonel Camp to the hotel.

Nothing to Investigate.

A letter from the young man's father in New Jersey reached the mayor Wednesday and was immediately turned over to Commissioner Fitts, who said last night that no "investigation is being made because there is nothing to investigate."

Murray is a traveling salesman with his headquarters in Kansas City.

HENRY CLUB TO BE FORMED HERE

Man Who Defended Klan to Speak

Organization of a "Bob" Henry club in Wichita Falls will take place within the next two days, and will be fully functioning prior to the candidates scheduled address here on the night of Friday, April 28, according to information obtained Wednesday.

POST L. HENRY

Several Wichitans who have expressed themselves as sympathizers of the Ku Klux Klan have pronounced in favor of Henry following the latter's recent defense of the organization—a stand which has attracted notice throughout not only the state, but the country.

His defense of the Ku Klux Klan is one of the interesting angles of Henry's campaign for senator. Henry, formerly a representative asserted in a recent speech that he was a Klansman, denounced the enemies of the K. K. K. and said that organization must survive in that state.

Henry was born in Linden, Cass county, Texas, May 12, 1864. He is a graduate of the Southwestern university of Texas and was valedictorian of his class—1885.

Two years later he received his LL. B. degree there. He became mayor of Texarkana in 1890 and the next year became assistant to the state attorney general. He served as congressman continuously from the fifty-fifth to the sixty-fourth congress.

VIOLENT WINDS KILL SEVERAL IN CITY OF CHICAGO

Downtown District Is Scene of Many Casualties

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Several persons were killed and scores injured today by a sixty-mile wind which uprooted trees, unroofed many buildings and destroyed hundreds of plate glass windows and signs.

Snow flurries and freezing temperatures followed in the wake of the gales which lashed the lake into fury and caused storm warnings to be sent broadcast to mariners.

Downtown Suffers.

In the downtown district the tall buildings acted as giant wind scoops, catching the gale and shooting it into the streets.

A mounted policeman was blown from his horse while riding to the rescue of an overturned wagon. On one downtown corner alone, seven wagons were overturned by the wind in less than two hours. Many automobile tops were whipped from machines.

One boy was killed by a falling sign; a man died from injuries received when he was struck by a tree and another was fatally injured when he came into contact with an electric wire.

Buildings Wrecked.

Scores of persons attending a meeting in the Imanuel Baptist church narrowly escaped injury when the top of the sphere, was blown down through the roof of the church. Several persons were injured when the roof of the North Side Turner Hall was loosened sending a shower of bricks into the surrounding streets.

The snow flurries and cold wave were due, according to the weather bureau, to a storm in Wisconsin, which traveled United Statesward from Canada, and is now moving across the middle western states.

OUSLEY MAKES HOT RETRACTION

But Sticks to His Assertion in Main

Special to the Record News.

GRAHAM, Texas, April 19.—"I will retract a portion of my statements regarding the Honorable Cullen Thomas and his stand on price fixing," said Colonel Clarence Ousley, candidate for the United States senate speaking before about 250 Graham and Young county citizens Wednesday night.

"I said he was either ignorant or not sincere.

"I will retract my insinuation that Mr. Thomas was not sincere," he continued, "but I hold by the ignorance part."

Colonel Ousley referred to Thomas' Tuesday night speech at Decatur, when the latter said that he had refrained from any personal attack on any of his opponents, and that he had observed that all of these had done so, with the exception of Colonel Ousley, whom he quoted as saying:

"The man who favors price fixing except in the emergency of war is too ignorant to serve you wisely, or is trying to fool you.'

Colonel Ousley's speech Wednesday night dealt with the usual issues of the campaign, with the exception of this slight departure into repartee. His audience was the largest ever accorded a political gathering in Graham, according to many present and he appeared to have his hearers with him.

The Honorable Cullen F. Thomas had preceded Colonel Ousley in this section by a week or so.

Man Demands $2,000 In 'Hush Money' From Okla. Scandal Heroine

Scheme to Blackmail Mrs. Jean P. Day at Oklahoma City Fails

By Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 19.—A plot to blackmail Mrs. Jean P. Day, wife of Jean P. Day, wealthy attorney and oil man, who recently was exonerated here of the slaying of Lieutenant Colonel Paul Ward Beck, army aviator, was revealed tonight with the announcement that a man giving his name as Ed Reed of Oklahoma City, had been arrested at Enid, Okla., at the request of postal authorities. Day testified at the coroner's inquest that he killed Colonel Beck after he returned home and found the army officer attempting to assault Mrs. Day. The testimony of Mrs. Day corroborated that of her husband.

Demands $2,000.

A letter was received last Wednesday by Mrs. Day from a man who demanded $2,000 to keep silent on what he claimed he saw through the window of the Day home on the morning Colonel Beck was slain. Mrs. Day said tonight, after being informed of the arrest at Enid.

The letter was signed "G. Daer," Day said.

In the letter, Mr. Day said, the man declared he was passing by the Day home early in the morning of April 4 and saw through the window what occurred.

Mr. Day said he immediately presented the letter to postal inspectors.

Would Forget.

The writer of the letter, Day said, declared if $2,000 was sent in package marked merchandise, he would forget what he saw.

The author of the letter did not say, according to Mr. Day, whether he witnessed what occurred between Colonel Beck and Mrs. Day before Mr. Day returned home, or what took place after the return of Day.

A package was sent to Edna addressed to Daer, and was claimed last night by Reed, who asked for Daer's mail. A deputy sheriff immediately arrested him.

Received Much Mail.

Reed is said to have received mail at Edna under the names of G. Daer, Jim White, and William C. Wilson. Inquiry at the Oklahoma City address given by Reed shows that Ed Reed, a civil engineer with his family rooms at that address. He formerly was employed by the Oklahoma Gas & Electric company. It was said he was now in Tulsa.

The owner of the house said he knew of no one named Daer, White or Wilson. The man arrested at Edna denied any knowledge of the blackmail letter. He told officers he had met Daer, White and Wilson just before he went to the postoffice and at their request asked for mail addressed to them. Daer, White and Wilson are not known in Edna.

Reed was taken to Sapulpa tonight and turned over to federal authorities.

BILL AS PASSED PROVIDES 86,000 ENLISTED FORCE

Vote Regarded as Blow to House Leaders

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—By the margin of 71 votes, the house tonight broke away from its own leadership, stood behind the president and passed the 1923 naval appropriations with an amendment fixing the enlisted personnel at 86,000.

The vote on the McArthur-Vare amendment, the big point in dispute which increased the man force from 67,000 as provided in the bill, was 221 to 148, with two members answering present. Ninety republicans voted against the 86,000 amendment while 48 democrats supported it.

There was no great shout at the finish like that which filled the chamber a week ago when the same proposal was put through the house, sitting in committee of the whole, by a margin of 47 votes. A bare hand clap or two greeted the announcement by the speaker.

With the fighting section out of the way, the bill was put on its passage and went through, 279 to 78. As amended, the measure carried a total of $251,260,000 or $15,000,000 more than the total fixed by the appropriations committee which framed it. It goes now to the senate with the charge by Chairman Kelley of the naval appropriations sub-committee that many millions will be added and which the house would have been asked to add "had not the big navy men changed front at the last."

If you fellows are salesmen you will sell goods. Anybody who can't sell cant draw pay. Go out and get the business or get off the job."

GERMAN TREATY ATTITUDE HALTS GENOA MEETING

No Solution Found For Problem

By Associated Press.

GENOA, April 19.—The German delegates and experts have not yet bee nable to find a formula whereby to compromise with the entente powers, without sacrificing the Russo-German treaty, although they were in session at a very late hour tonight. Efforts are being made to have the conference formulate a Russian policy in which the Russo-German treaty can be absorbed, thus giving it the stamp of conference approval and removing the cause of hard feelings.

The plain language of Premier Lloyd George to the German statesmen today over the treaty incident, which at one time threatened to disrupt the conference, was believed to have cleared the political atmosphere, but as neither the German reply to the allies nor the Russian reply regarding acceptance of the conditions of the restoration of Russia was forthcoming, the situation is still considered critical.

Some of the neutrals described the Germans as embarrassed as to how to find a way out of the difficulty. Meanwhile, the work of the conference is blocked. The neutral states have insisted that the agenda of the conference can be discussed in the open parleys and not in private conversation between the larger delegations.

MIDDLE WEST CROP PROSPECTS GLOOMY

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Delay in the seeding of spring grains in the lower Missouri and Ohio valleys, due to continued rains, is becoming serious, the weather bureau said today in its weekly weather report and crop review. Reports to the bureau, it was said, states that large area of farm land were flooded in the Ohio and central and lower Mississippi valleys.

Corn planting made satisfactory progress in the southern states during the week, the report said, but in the central district the preparation of the soil was practically at a stand still.

HOSTILE THOUSANDS JEER SEMENOFF AS HE LEAVES PRISON

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 19.—A demonstration, typical of his turbulent Russia, greeted Gen. Gregorie Semenoff, Cossack chieftain, as he left Ludlow street jail late today.

Released on $25,000 bail furnished by his friends, the Cossack ataman, surrounded by a detachment of the police departments bomb squad, appeared at the jail door and cringed into his coat collar as the jeers of thousands fell upon his ears.

Extra details of police were ordered to preserve order.

TOM BLANTON—

who have thus expressed their confidence in me," Miss Blanton declared in explaining the reason for her campaign.

Although speaking in clear tones throughout her hour and a half address Miss Blanton showed the greatest feeling when declaring her pride in her brother. Thomas Blanton, congressman from Abilene district, who has secured a large amount of unfavorable comment in connection with speeches made in congress.

Defends Brother

"Understand, I am not trying to defend him," Miss Blanton said, "he can defend himself. They say he put matter in the record which was harmful to the youth of our country. I never heard him use such language in my life and it is not used by any members of our family."

"When he went to Washington he found things which he did not like and thought should not be and he has had the courage to say so."

Tells of Tom's Troubles.

The speaker took up in detail events in connection with which criticism has been heaped on her brother throughout the United States. She told of the trouble which resulted in his near expulsion from congress by other members. Referring to the reported vile language which he placed in the congressional record she said merely first letters were used in the record and the same thing had been done by other congressmen numerous times in the past.

She read in detail from the congressional record regarding the criticism he has recently made of the expenditures made by members of congress through appropriations for stationery, the employment of barbers, and other similar expenses. She brought up the subject of her brother by reference to the fact that some had said that she should not run for congress due to the fact her brother was already there and two from one family was too many.

No Room for Klan.

"It is needless to say that I am not a member of the Ku Klux Klan and I don't know that it has any special reference to this congressional election. But I am not afraid to speak upon any subject," Miss Blanton declared near the end of her speech.

"I do not believe there is room in this country for both a visible and invisible government. We have a klan because the visible government has fallen down in some respects. I have appeared before a large number of grand juries and courts throughout this state in connection with my work as state superintendent and I am here to tell you that the results I have obtained generally speaking have not been satisfactory."

State Aid Fight.

In this connection the speaker told of the fight that she had made and was making to prevent certain sections of the state from securing more state aid for their schools than they deserved by padding their school censuses. She also told of her fight to enforce the state law which makes it a felony to allow teacher's examination questions to be made known before a designated time. She told of one case where a teacher whose indictment sha had secured was freed by the court because he had distributed the answers and not the questions designated in the statute. Her remarks regarding the courts were made in connection with the declaration regarding the klan.

Miss Blanton opened her address by declaring that she was "basing her candidacy on what I believe a sound principle of service." She devoted a large part of the evening to telling of her work as school superintendent declaring that by that service the voters of this district could determine in part whether or not they desired her to represent them in congress.

She told of the campaign that she made to be elected and said that she had not yet paid all the costs of the campaign. She said that friends had made financial contributions for her present campaign and that they would furnish additional funds.

"Some one has said that I should not run because I could not cope with men in congress. What else have I done during the last four years? Who has fought the battles of the public schools of the state?" Miss Blanton asked.

"It takes intelligence to be congressman. It takes common sense. It takes a desire to be of real service to the people. If a woman can do the work without losing her womanly characteristics then she is doing a great service. I believe that every woman should know how to do those things which belong peculiarly to her sex.

"Some have asked—what does an old maid know about house work? But I do know how to sew and cook because I was oldest of a large orphan family."

Traces Progress.

The speaker traced the history of woman's progress from a state where she was "nothing more than a chattel" to her present position of equal suffrage. She declared that their next step was to obtain equality in opportunity for work and service.

Taking up the things for which she would stand the speaker said that she believed that every congressman should represent the views of a majority of his constituents and that if he or she could not conscientiously do what they wished, they should resign.

For Bonus.

"I stand for the soldiers' bonus. I had about 1,000 former pupils in the world war and I know that they feel that their work has not been appreciated. I believe every care should be taken of the sick and wounded of the war.

"As a good democrat I stand for a tariff for revenue only.

"If any changes are made in the Volstead act it should be made stronger. The forces of evil are trying to break down the prohibition laws. It should be made as strong as possible.

"Laboring people should have unions. They are necessary for their welfare. I have studied this matter for several years. I do not believe any organization should dictate how things should be done which effect the whole state or country and which are political and economic in character. If that principle is open shop then I am open shop."

Refers to Education.

The speaker stressed the importance of educational advancement with special reference to this state. She on numerous occasions during her address made reference to educational matters. There was no applause during the address, the speaker talking in a conversational tone with no attempt to secure oratorical effects.

"They said up to the day of election that I could not be elected as state superintendent and I was elected the first time by over 100,000 majority. For my second term I secured the largest vote ever given a state official in the state. So if you want to vote for a winning candidate cast your vote for me," Miss Blanton concluded.

TWO PRODUCERS IN TEXHOMA

Third Well on Sand Reported in Archer

Two new producers and a third well on the sand, are reported from the Texhoma pool in Archer county. The Texhoma well is an offset on the north to the Archer well, which marks the southern extent of the pool, so far.

—Personal Service

—So much has been written on "service" that there is a danger of the subject becoming time-worn. The truth is that more institutions have WRITTEN ABOUT service than have GIVEN IT.

—But even though we realize that this is the case, we believe that it is worth while to call your attention to a feature recently installed by us which will make for real "PERSONAL SERVICE."

—On the lapel of every man and upon the waist of every woman in the employ of our institution from the manager down, you will find a little badge carrying the name of the individual wearing it. You know immediately that you are being served by "Mr. Brown," "Mr. Smith" or "Miss Jones." You are dealing with a personality, a person in whom we have sufficient confidence to entrust them with our business, a salesman or saleswoman who measures up to the high standard we set for our employes.

—We like this idea. It makes for a better understanding. None of us like to deal with people we don't know. It "breaks the ice," so to speak. Then again it enables you to locate the salesman or saleswoman who served you, in the event that an adjustment, alteration or exchange is desired. It's a small matter, perhaps, but we like the idea behind it and we believe that you will like it too. We sincerely hope that it will make your shopping with us just a little more pleasant and satisfactory.

—We want you to feel that we are doing everything that we can to justify ourselves in using our motto "The Courteous Service Store."

The Soldier Who Found the Lost Brigade Indorses Guinn Williams for Congress

April 10, 1922.

HON. T. J. McMURRAY,
Decatur, Texas.
Dear Sir:

I am intensely interested in the candidacy of Senator Guinn Williams for Congress. I had the pleasure of serving with him throughout the sessions of the 37th Legislature in the State Senate. It was my pleasure to direct some of the legislation in behalf of the disabled ex-service men of Texas. Chief among which legislation was the building of the American Legion Memorial Hospital at Kerrville. In this we had the loyal co-operation and able assistance of Senator Williams. He was one of the best friends the ex-service men had in the Texas Senate.

He was always boldly taking issue in behalf of the people. He stood four-square for sound business principles in the administration of government. His work and his votes in the interest of decency and economy, especially with reference to the penitentiary system of the state, will live as a monument to his name in Texas history.

He was always a Christian gentleman, a faithful friend and an able senator. He has a heart of pure gold, and every pulse beat was an intense yearning for the interests of his people. We need him in Congress. The ex-service men need him. Texas needs him. May we have an increase of his tribe at the national capitol.

Yours very truly,
WOODVILLE ROGERS,
State Senator, 5th District.

LEGISLATIVE SURVEY AND HIGHER EDUCATION.

Texas is an imperial commonwealth. Texas some day should lead all the states speaking from an educational viewpoint. All the children of all the people should be given educated brains and trained hands. Texas has a survey committee for higher education. This committee was appointed by the legislature and will report to the Thirty-eighth legislature in January, 1923. A survey was necessary in order that the law-makers shall know the most convenient road to travel, the people shall know just what to expect and all the schools of the state shall be linked or grouped together as they should be. Education calls for properly trained and developed minds, of high social and spiritual ideals and a genuine respect, love and veneration for the American home. Rural schools have been crippled by reason of inadequate support. This is one of the serious complaints made. This applies to not only meager salaries but the inadequate number of instructors employed. Texas is growing in population by leaps and bounds. It has its state institutions of higher education. These are inadequately supported. It costs money to keep the modern educational pace but it is money well spent. This survey should be both comprehensive and complete. Our institutions of learning must be given a more adequate and dependable financial support. Speaking of the mill tax method of supporting state institutions it obtains in several states of the union. According to President F. M. Bralley of the College of Industrial Arts in every case this plan has proven more satisfactory than the plan of support by legislative appropriations alone. In other states the scheme of support is by mill tax and supplemental appropriations by the legislature. In no state has this method proven satisfactory. On the other hand, the authorities of these state institutions are enthusiastic in their approbation and emphatically state that such method is far superior and is much to be preferred to the old method of appropriations alone. It is contended that the certainty and dependability of the mill tax method give assurance and continuity to the annual maintenance of higher education and furthermore such plan affords an opportunity for planning and realizing sure and ample developments of state supported higher educational institutions. Among the states in which the mill tax methods is in operation may be mentioned Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas (voted but not levied) Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nevada, New York (temporarily), Ohio, Oregon, Tennessee, Utah, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming. The adoption of the mill tax method of support for the state institutions of higher education of Texas would require an amendment to the state constitution. The rate of such tax, in order to remedy the present situation and guarantee future support and development, Dr. Bralley says should be between two mills and three and one-half mills. The inadequate support of the Texas state institutions of higher learning for the current fiscal year is equivalent approximately to a two mill tax. Since no expansions, increased facilities, or enlargements were provided for the present fiscal year it is evident that a two-mill tax would not be adequate. In order to procure the adoption at an election by the people of an amendment to the state constitution authorizing the mill tax method of support it would be necessary to have the united support of all the state institutions of higher learning and all friends of higher education. This unanimous action and hearty co-operation friends of higher education say is the only hope of the adoption of the mill tax method in whole or in part for the support of our institutions of higher learning. Unity and co-operation are necessary in furthering and perpetuating any movement or measure that may contribute to the promotion and upbuilding of the educational machinery of Texas and of society in general in this commonwealth. Texas has its University, its College of Industrial Arts, its A. & M. College and related branches, its State Normal Schools and all these should be given adequate support. There is a plan of control which has worked admirably. There is work to be done. There will be work to be done after the survey committee has submitted its report to the governor and the legislature. There is a new legislature to be elected this year. There are upwards of 1,200,000 men and women voters. These voters should see to it that men are elected to the legislative places who are stalwart friends of education, who believe in adequate support of all the state schools of higher education and that all the children of all the people should be given educated brains and trained hands. Texas has a free text book law. Texas has a compulsory school attendance law and it should be made more drastic. Texas should bludgeon illiteracy. Texas should banish superstitution. Texas should minimize ignorance. There is a way to do it. Educate the brain and train the hands of the youth of the commonwealth.

DEMANDS OF LABOR.

El Paso is the meeting place of the annual convention of the State Federation of Labor. All the labor leaders who are attending the convention agree: First that Texas labor will not be divided as it has been in the past on political and religious issues. Second, that labor holds the balance of power if it acts as a unit. Third, that the strike as a weapon with which to combat capital is absolete and should not be used except in special emergencies. Fourth, that if a candidate for public office is endorsed it will be by labor as a whole and not by individual unions. Fifth, that support will be given to candidates of any religious creed who are friendly to the workingman. Sixth, that women shall be given adequate representation in any program undertaken by labor. It is evident that men who are safe and sane are determined to shape the program of the future for the organized workers of Texas.

CRUDE WORK.

Mexican oil fields produced 200 million barrels of oil during 1921 and only 4 per cent of oil exports were taken by the British. More than 74 per cent went to the United States. Democrats placed Mexican crude on the free list; Republicans kept Mexican crude on the free list. If protection is a good thing then why a petroleum free list? Ask a Republican protectionist and he talks about the weather. Ask a Democratic free trader and he grins like a Georgia negro facing a fat watermelon.

WHO CAN BLAME HIM?

There is another Richmond in the field. H. C. D. Killgore of Fort Worth is a candidate for United States senator to succeed Charles A. Culberson. Mr. Killgore was born in Williamson county in 1891; his great grand parents were born and reared in the United States; he has worked on a farm; he has worked on a railroad; he says he has probably more relatives in Texas than any ordinary man; he admits that he is a public speaker, writer and author; that he was "trained in one of the highest detective schools in America" and has agreed to study law if given the opportunity. This is his slogan, "Americans should own America." He favors a national insane asylum system. Who can blame him and this is his advice to the people of Texas, "Vote right. Send all campaign contributions direct to Howard Crosby Douglas Killgore, Fort Worth, Texas, box 1833." The woods are full of them.

Cullen F. Thomas says that one man owns one-hundredth of the wealth of America. Well, don't point the finger of scorn or distrust in this direction. "America first."

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

the masters? Arn't the senators and congressmen their serveants? If so, why shouldn't the congressional leaders go ahead and carry out the wishes of the people?

GEORGE H. SLATOR OF GALveston is president of the State Federation of Labor. In his annual address President Slator said he favored less use of the strike as a weapon and that the federation should concentrate on elimination of radical movements. He urged better wages for women, changes in the compensation laws, less religious controversy and agitation for light wines and beer. Why the agitation for light wines and beer? Will it lighten the load of labor? Will it place more money in the pocket of labor? Will it place more happiness in the home of labor? Will it place more of the luxuries of life within the reach of labor?

GEORGE JAY GOULD IS ON the rack now. William Nelson Cromwell is a noted lawyer of New York. He is the guardian for the children of the Duchess De Talleyrand formerly Anne Gould. This is the allegation against Gould that Cromwell made in open court: That he had wrecked every railroad he touched and the management of his father's estate was a collosal crime. Otherwise George Jay is all right. Jay Gould began life as the seller of a patent mouse trap. He became the railway king of America. He left behind him a huge fortune for his children to manage. George J. was named as the executor. Many years afterwards George Jay was separated from his trust by the courts. Now the heirs of the former wizard of the rail are washing their soiled linen in public. They have dissipated millions; they have millions yet to dissipate. Old Jay Gould began in shirtsleeves. His grandchildren may have to begin in jumpers and overalls.

CONGRESSMAN JOHN M. Garner of Texas is not in harmony with the program of the Southern Tariff Association or John Henry Kirby and his followers. Representative Garner is not a free trader, neither is he an ultra-protectionist but he insists that the proposed American valuation plan will result in the formation of a free trade party that will grow up in this country and control its legislation within a decade. On with the battle. Shake the skeletons in the closets of the elephant and the donkey. Publicity is the thing.

YOU NEED NOT WORRY

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

To the man or women who has fallen into the bad habit of fretting and worrying over every little disappointment, every little mishap, every little grievance that develops in the course of the day, I would say:

This habit of yours is working harm to you in many ways. It involves a waste of nervous energy you should have at your disposal for the work you have to do. It fatigues you excessively. It keeps you in a chronically perturbed state of mind.

Because of this it affects your health unfavorably. It lowers your vitality, and as a result makes you both more liable to contract disease and less resistant to any disease you may contract.

Yet it is a habit of which you can most certainly break yourself, if only you will make a sincere effort to do so. For your own great good you ought to make the effort. Here is one device exceedingly helpful:

Whenever you find yourself beginning to worry over an actual or expected occurrence, disagreeable, perhaps, but really of no great moment, shift your thought to some great evil that might with reason be accounted a cause for worry. In imagination see yourself hopelessly poverty-stricken or incurably ill.

Conjure up before your mind's eye dire catastrophes that you know from your newspaper reading have recently befallen other people. Seen against a background of stark tragedy, the trifles you are permitting to vex you will be perceived in their proper portion and at once will lose all power to vex.

Also summon to your aid the magic force of self suggestion. Repeat over and over, mentally and aloud, with confidence and vigor:

"I will be master of myself. I will no longer be a slave to hateful, harrying thoughts. I will be free, and through freedom will achieve."

And, having thus presented to your mind real evils, having thus invoked suggestion to give you added strength, turn at once to self-forgetting action of some sort.

If you have work immediately at hand, plunge into it with extra energy. Insistently fasten your thoughts upon it. If you are at leisure and with no special work to do, engage in some hobby or recreation that will keep your mind fully occupied.

By such a procedure as this you will soon prove to yourself that chronic worry is eminently curable. And you will have gained a power of controlling your thoughts to an extent that may amaze you. You will have demonstrated beyond peradventure that, in the words of Warren Hilton:

"You are master. You can change the setting of your mental stage from portentous gloom to sunlit assurance. You can concentrate upon the useful, the helpful, and the cheerful, ignore the useless and annoying and make your life a life of hope and joy, of promise and fulfilment."

THE ONCE OVER

By H. J. PHILLIPS

DUMM AND DUMMER ON GENOA

"Whaddya think will be the outcome at Genoa?" asked Senator Dumm.

"I dunno," replied Representative Dummer. "Who's pitching?"

o o o

"Can't you think of anything but baseball?" demanded Dumm, with indignation.

"I can, but I don't see why I should," returned Dummer. "Ain't this Genoa got a team in the International League or sumpin'? It seems to me I read sumpin' about it."

"Figuratively speaking, I suppose Genoa has," replied Dumm. "In fact you might say all the teams of importance are playing in that Italian city just now. England, France, Japan, Italy, Belgium, Russia, Germany and practically all the nations except the United States, are in the game. The United States couldn't attend on account of the date interfering with the opening of the National and American League conference in this country."

o o o

"Well, who's ahead? asked Dummer.

"They're only warming up so far," answered Dumm, "but Lloyd George appears to have the most on the ball. A couple of outlaw players, Wirth and Itcherin, are doing very well. The only complete lack of control and loose playing is being shown by a guy from France named Barthou."

"Lloyd George? Lloyd George," repeated Dummer, stupidly. "I don't recall his name. You're not thinking of George Burns, the old Giant fielder, are you?"

"Lissen, Dummer: I'm speaking o the Genoa conference, to which the various nations have sent accredited representatives to discuss plans for restoring the world to normalcy. Does it begin to seep through your hatholder?"

"Oh, I get you now," replied Dummer, chewing his cigar. "Well, has the Genoa conference taken any stand for the reinstatement of Babe Ruth yet?"

"The conference is not going to take any stand for the reinstatement of Babe Ruth, you idiot!" roared Dumm.

"World peace will never be restored till it does," insisted Dummer.

o o o

"Once again I'll try to get it through your bean that baseball figures in no way in the Genoa conference," resumed Dumm. "It is purely a peace conference. The main object, as I see it, is to get Russia and Germany back into the family of nations."

"Do I nnderstand that Russia and Germany are both at the conference?" asked Dummer.

"They're not only at it, but if it wasn't for this bird George Lloyd they'd be running it, I'm afraid," said Dumm.

"George is a clever party," agreed Dummer. "He may have the German delegates singing the 'Marseillaise' and the Frenchman singing 'The Watch on the Rhine' before he gets through. But I don't think he can do much with Russia."

"He'll beard the Russians yet," insisted Dumm.

"They look pretty well bearded to me as it is," insisted Dummer. "Just what's the stumbling block between Russia and the rest of the bunch, anyhow?"

o o o

"Well," informed Dumm, "Lloyd George, representing the allies, insists that before Russia be restored to the All-Europe March and Chowder Club as a member in good standing she must recognize all the debts incurred by the old Russia regime. Russia is willing to recognize the debts, but says it will be impossible to pay them."

"Russia should be elected to honorary membership in the Don't-Think-I've-Forgotten-That-Little-Loan Club. A lot of friends of mine are members. They're all willing to recognize that they owe me ten dollars orso, but that ends it. I've a good mind to report 'em to Lloyd George and see that he includes 'em in any decision covering Russia. What's been done so far about this, anyhow?"

"The conference has just suffered a very long delay," replied Dumm. "Just as some action was about to be taken on the Russian loan issue somebody started to call the roll of the Czecho-Slovakian delegates. This'll take several days, even though there is no stuttering."

"I should think it would save time to sing 'Czecho-Slovakian roll-call,'" suggested Dummer. "Well, from what you say I gather nothing has been accomplished yet."

"Some committees have been named," replied Dumm. "I think Ireland was named chairman of the entertainment committee, England chairman of the rules committee . . ."

"Rules-the-waves committee," corrected Dummer.

"And Japan chairman of the committee on new business," continued Dumm.

o o o

"The committee they need more than any other with Europe in its present distressed condition has been overlooked entirely," remarked Dummer.

"What one is that?" asked Dumm.

"The Sick Visiting Committee and Committee on Fruits, Medicine, and Flowers," replied Dummer.

A Grand Old Heroine

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1922, by Frank Crane.)

At Kingston-on-Thames in England on February 25th, 1921, the widow Collet, or, to be more exact, Mrs. Sarah Collet, was married to Mr. Lewis Robert Goodwin.

That in itself is not an occurrence of outstanding interest to the general public. People are marrying and giving in marriage every day.

But what renders this item somewhat unique is that for Mrs. Goodwin this is her seventh marriage, and she is eighty-five years old.

She has a daughter sixty-five.

She has borne altogether sixteen children, six of wh m are living, four of them sons and two daughters.

She has nine grandchildren and fifteen great-grandchildren.

She was first married at the age of eighteen and most of her life has spent in Kingston-on-Thames.

The young blade who is leading this blushing creature to the altar for her seventh inning is sixty-six years old.

We note these points and are herewith endeavoring to give them publicity because we have a feeling that this will be an instance which will stir the general mind profoundly toward optimism.

There is too much literature in the world which disparages marriage, to say nothing of that literature which is pessimistic toward life itself. There are too many people who agree with the philosopher whose advice to those who were contemplating marriage as well as to those who were contemplating divorce was "Don't."

To fear marriage is to fear life. It is to doubt the practicality, if not the power of love.

That army of cowardly old bachelors and timid old maids that refuse to take up arms in the great war of matrimony are the most contemptible of pacifists.

There are too many who believe with the old woman who declared that "Old maids is happiest—when they give up strugling."

There are too many who hold with the grandmother back in the Kentucky mountains. She had been married fifty years. She sat on her back stoop smoking a pipe. A young lady visitor was talking with her. She asked the young lady, "Are you married?"

"No," was the answer.

"Well," remarked the old lady, after a few minutes' deliberation. "You're just as good off."

Over against all of these infidels toward matrimony we wish to set forth the shining example of Mrs. Sarah Goodwin, formerly Collet.

As we see her in our mind's eye advancing toward the front line trenches of matrimony for the seventh time and gayly risking her prospects once more to the keeping of one of the male persuasion, we, as men and brethren, thank her for the compliment she pays our sex and are grateful to her for the sure influence which this, her "triumph of hope over experience" will have upon all hesitating and timid swains.

AUNT ORINDA

(Copyright 1922 by W. Werner)

"There's nothing else to do," Mrs. Tremaine's voice was taut with annoyance. "She is old and poor and I shall have to take her back with me. Goodness knows where I'll put her, for the apartment is crowded now. I guess she'll have to sleep on a couch in the library. I may be able to spare her half of the hall closet for her clothes. She won't have many."

"Understand now, Rita, I want her made welcome. Aunt Orinda has worked all her life for other people. That's why she has nothing left except that tiny cottage. I should think you'd be delighted to have a sweet old lady with you all day. She does exquisite needlework and I'm sure she will be willing to take a stitch or two for you when you are rushed. You hate sewing and mending so much that——"

"A stitch or two?" cried his wife, amazed. "Say, she'll do more than that. If we give her a home it is the least she can do to turn in and help. I suppose you'd keep her in lace ruffles and lavender while I—"

Orinda could hear no more. They knew that she was sitting in the bay window of the old-fashioned sitting room; the door ajar permitted the strained voices to penetrate clearly. Rising rather stiffly, she went out into her well kept yard, where already the spring flowers were pushing sturdy heads through the moist brown earth. The old dog ambled up to her wagging his tail furiously, and ran ahead of her down the path to the chicken house, hoping to tempt her into following him. Down the hill she could see the steep roofs of the village houses. She knew every soul in the quaint town, and it wrung her heart to think of being uprooted and taken to the city. "I couldn't expect to have a room all to myself," she pondered, recalling the conversations relative to the high rents demanded for the smallest apartments. "But where shall I keep my Bible and my weekly paper and my work box? I shall have to whisk by bed clothes out of sight and fold them away early in the morning to keep the library tidy instead of leaving my pretty patchwork quilts over the chair in the window to get the sunshine and sweet smell into them." The old eyes blurred suddenly.

"Aunt Orinda, have you finished those ruffles for my blouse?" Rita Tremaine stood before her.

"No, I could not help hearing you talk, so I came out for a bit of a walk around." Orinda spoke rather guiltily. For the first time in her life she felt that she was accountable for her time to another. The sensation was depressing.

"You country folks don't know the value of time. In the city we make every instant count. We are going to take the noon train back to the city. I can't take you now, but I'll send you a ticket as soon as the sale is over."

"What sale?" asked the other faintly but her question was merely fencing for time. She knew instantly that it was her house that was to be bartered—the little white cottage that she had entered as bride half a century before.

"This place." Rita waved a contemptuous hand glittering with rings at the peaceful little half acre on the brow a tiny hill. The faintly green vines of the rambler roses that almost hid the house meant nothing to her. She did not even know that hands long since dead had planted those vines, and it would have signified nothing to her had she known. Her interests lay in different paths. "I've spoken to the auctioneer. He will put up signs and send a notice to the village paper. We ought to get a few hundred dollars, and then you'll be through here. Don't save out any old furniture, for our flat is crowded now," she admonished.

"I have a little money by me, enough for my funeral expenses," said Orinda, with frightened eyes. "I don't want to sell my home."

Gerald had followed his wife out and looked with comprehension at the disturbed face of the old lady. "We'll let th smatter rest for a few weeks, Aunt Orinda. I have some free time in May and I'll come and stay with you until the sale is over. You'll feel better with some one by you," he said.

Orinda made some chicken sandwiches and sliced some home-made cake to fill the luncheon box she prepared for her relatives. She was her usual cordial self as she bustled about to make them comfortable before their journey to the city. Underneath her sweet placidity, however, a fire of revolt was slowly burning into life.

When they had waved a last farewell and disappeared down the strip of road toward the little station she sat down in her armchair and opened her Bible. "Seems like," she thought, settling her steel boxed spectacles more firmly, "there must be a way out." She read through her favorite psalms and finally allowed the worn volume to drop into her lap. "They say that the Lord helps those who help themselves. There ought to be some way of earning the little bit of money that I need for things at the store. Gerald spoke of my fine needlework, but the girls would think I wasn't smart enough to make their Sunday dresses although I love to sew." She looked down toward the roofs. Underneath those shingles she pictured the busy homemakers flitting from task to task and quite suddenly she knew where her work could be found.

Two weeks later, when Gerald again climbed the hill, the lilacs were budding. The tender mauve of the bursting buds made dainty flecks of color against the vague greens of the spring foliage. The man drew in deep breaths of the sweet air and then stopped in surprise. A neat sign in the sitting room bay window read:

"My services by the hour are for rent at 20 cents. I will gladly care for babies and children; mend socks and stockings, do fine embroideries and bake bread and cakes. Anything that a busy housewife wants done will be done by me."

The quaint wording and the uneven letters inscribed by the aged fingers brought a mistiness to Gerald's eyes. "She certainly has spirit," he thought. "How I wish some one would bring her an hour's work to cheer her up."

Orinda dropped her lapful of filmy white material as her nephew entered. "Gerald, I'm so glad to see you! I have gone into business and I have more than I can do. Every evening is filled for this week," she informed him. "I keep babies prayer meeting nights and the folks know that I can look after the tots better than their young mothers. See," she waved toward a big clothes basket that stood near her chair. "That's Mandy Miller's youngest. Mandy went up to the city today to shop. I have all the family mending for three families. Guess I'll have to either get an assistant"—she laughed a little at her own absurdity—"or take down my sign for a while. I make more than I can possibly spend, so the sale can be put off."

THE FLU.

The flu is raging in our town, and many wights are stricken down, with anguish in their works; the docs are hustling day and night, and undertakers, as I write, are hiring extra clerks. I hear my friends, 'twixt cough and sneeze, denounce the harrowing disease that puts them on the blink, the while they swallow mixtures green, composed of tar and gasoline, and purple pills and pink. And nothing seems to be a cure; and men must suffer and endure until they wear it out; they take the dope the druggist sends, the counsel that the newsbones lends but take the same with doubt. He jests at flu who has not felt the weary sickness 'neath his pelt, and that robs one's life of peace; it is an ailment base and foul, and it would make a Spartan howl, and send for the police. And there is nothing you can do that will alleviate the flu, or make it pull its freight; just go to bed and ache and pant, and cough and sneeze, and rail and rant, and sing a hymn of hate. I have the flu, and sit and cough the lining of my larynx off, and nothing does me good; I've taken all the druggist's drugs, in boxes, demijohns and jugs, and pills of wood and chalk.—(Copyright, 1922, George Matthew Adams.

Hundreds See Wedding Of Miss Teresa Veal And Loy Shrader Here

In a beautiful setting suggestive of the springtime, the wedding of Miss Teresa Veale, daughter of Mrs. Pearl Veale of Kingman, Kan., to Loy Shrader of Columbia, Mo., was solemnized at the First Presbyterian church Wednesday evening, Dr. N. F. Grafton, the pastor performing the ceremony, was assisted by Dr. A. B. Shrader of Atchison, Kan., father of the groom.

Hundreds of friends of the bride were in attendance and the church was decorated in palms, southern smilax and bridal wreaths, lilies with beautiful bird cages containing birds arranged in the midst of the fragrant flowers. A rainbow color scheme was carried out in both the decorations and in the pastel shades of the gowns worn by the attendants.

With the bridesmaids dressed in the many dainty colors, the bride in a handsome white satin gown and the groom and his attendants in the conventional black, the wedding party presented an exceptionally pretty picture. Fluffy bows of maline in pastel shades also added to the decoration scheme. Ribbon bands of white satin marked the section occupied by relatives and intimate friends of both bride and groom.

A charming musical program preceded the ceremony which was opened with the Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" played on the organ by Mrs. O. E. Mear. Miss Marian Maer played "Because" on the violin, and Mrs. H. M. Young sang the prenuptial solo, Herman Lohr's "It Is Not Because Your Heart Is Mine." As the wedding party entered, Mrs. Maer played Lohengrin's processional and during the ceremony "For You."

The bride, who entered upon the arm of J. Will Gray, and who was given to be married by Mr. Gray, was charming in an exquisite gown of white satin with trimmings of hand-made flowers and tulle veil, caught with a wreath of lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and brides roses.

Mrs. J. Will Gray was matron of honor. Miss Elsie Furrow of Colorado Springs, maid of honor, and bridesmaids included Misses Valois Compere, Emily Foster and Ethel Nycum. Mrs. Gray wore pink taffeta, trimmed in handmade roses and carried an arm bouquet of white roses; Miss Elsie Furrow wore sunburst georgette over silver cloth with handmade roses and carried an arm bouquet of red roses, while the bridesmaids, Miss Compere and Nycum wore green and silver taffeta and yellow and yellow and silver taffeta respectively. Both carried garden hats suspended from their arm, filled with pink tulips and yellow jonquils and ferns.

Preceding the bride and her maids little Misses Florence Cabiness, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cabiness, and Erma Cline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Cline, dressed in dainty white net frocks, strewed rose petals from pretty baskets in the path of the bride.

Mr. Shrader had for his best man, Joe Farabee. Groomsmen were Thelbert Martin, Joe Ward, Myron Ellis, Rufus Thaxton, Lon Scurlock, Jimmie Ellis and Ira Avent of Dallas.

An informal reception for the bridal party and intimate friends was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Will Gray, following the ceremony, when the wedding cake was cut and served with brick ice cream.

Since the announcement of the engagement two weeks ago, many social courtesies have been given for the bride-elect, who is popular in social and musical and church circles, and who has made her home here for several years. She has also been soloist at the First Presbyterian church since her arrival. The groom is connected with the extension department of the State university of Missouri and makes his home at Columbia, where they will live after a short wedding tour.

COAT OF KID

By ELOISE

The Paris races are always a source of fanciful and bizarre costumes. Not a season passes but what the French designers bring forth something startling at Anteuil or Deauville. This wrap is one of the newest and most striking creations seen this season. Its oddity lies in the novelty of the material used, a fine white kid.

The soft kid is fashioned into a coat made on straight, simple lines featuring the wide sleeves and side fastening so popular in the new season's wraps. Red roses and green foliage are painted on the kid in a wall paper design. A collar which may be worn open or closed at the throat is an unusually practical feature for so extreme a fashion.

The hat has a braided brim of geranium red velvet with a soft crown of kid like the coat.

Blue and white is rumored to be the color of the new complexion.

A Wife or a Profession?

CHAPTER LIV.

When Howard Blake awoke it was almost morning. Utter exhaustion of mind and body had claimed him and he had lain on the couch almost like a dead man through the long hours of the night. He was dazed at first, could not think what had happened, how he came to be lying there. Then it all came back. His talk with Dr. Campbell, his resignation, his rushing from the hospital and then that aimless walking. He had no idea where he had walked, but for hours he had wandered about the streets. Annette said it was 8 o'clock when he came in. He recalled that it was only 4:30 when he left the hospital. No wonder he was tired and had fallen asleep on the couch. Well, it was all over! All his dreams of the future, his dream of being a great surgeon and doing good because of his skill. His dream of helping those too poor to pay, the boys who fought in the war and who so terribly needed the best in surgery if they were to be able to take their place in the world of men again.

He rose and as he moved across the room he caught a glimpse of himself in the glass.

"You weak creature you! Damn you!" he shook his fist at his reflection. "Well, it's all over! Now get all you can out of what is left! All you can, you damned fool!"

He shaved and bathed, then made a careful toilet. The marks of his struggles still showed in his face, but there was no sign of the suffering that had dimmed his eyes, that had brought tears. Instead there was a hard, cynical expression, one that was to grow familiar as times went on, what which at first confused his friends.

"All dressed, Howard!" Annette exclaimed.

"Yes, dear, and hungry. How are you this wonderful morning. We must get out and take a ride. You see, Annette, now I am free to be what you have wanted me to be—a fashionable doctor. Physician to the fancied ills of the Four Hundred, or such part of them as seek my advice. We'll cut out all the poor, the lame, the blind. We'll pick and choose whom we will allow the privilege of consulting Dr. Blake, physician of Fashion, husband of that charming Mrs. Blake whose father left her a fortune! What are you staring at me like that for, dear? Come, let's go down. I want my coffee."

Howard's long, cynical speech had amazed Annette. She had expected, feared censure and blame because of her opposition to his hospital work, had even decided that if he quarreled with her she would keep her temper. And here he was joking, cynically of course, but it was far easier than if he had blamed her. Easier for her.

"I shall love a ride." She fell in with his mood. Annette was indubitably clever and often showed unexpected tactfulness in dealing with Howard—heretofore principally in getting her own way. But now she would cater to him, accede to all he suggested for a time, at least until he got over the hurt of what had happened. A hurt she was unable to minimize when she looked at him, although she tried desperately to think he didn't mind so very much.

You see, next to herself, Annette chatted and laughed gayly, and Howard met her efforts half way. He had decided he would get all possible out of the life now to be his. He would commence at once. They met acquaintances and flung them gay greetings. Howard remarked:

"Good business to be in the park early. Your fashionable friends seem to be of the same mind."

"Yes, I have always loved to get out in the morning, but you never would come with me, and I can't bear to have people sorry for me because my husband never has time to go with me."

"That's all altered now," a hard line aroused his mouth. "I am henceforth your humble slave and servant. I have no will but yours."

Annette ignored the cynical speech and drew his attention to some children playing on the walk, dainty, beautifully dressed children, their nurses keeping close watch over them.

"Don't they look sweet," she queried.

"Very! I wonder——"

Annette did not press him to tell her what he was thinking about. She knew! He had wanted children, she had not. As in everything else what she wanted was what happened, not what he wanted. Later, when she was older and had enjoyed herself to the full, perhaps—then—she might, but not for years and years. So she had told Howard, and never had he again referred to the subject.

"Home, Humphreys" Howard said, then to Annette: "If I am to be a fashionable physician I must not keep waiting patients who will pay my price."

"And you will give up that afternoon hour?"

"Yes, Annette."

"There's Kent Moore! Stop a minute. I want to speak to him!" Then: "Hello, Kent! surprised to see us at this time of day, aren't you? You see Howard has quit his hospital work to devote his time to special office patients. Of course I am delighted! Drive on, Humphries!"

Chapter LV.

To the casual observer life flowed by very smoothly in the Blake menage, more smoothly than ever before. Annette was gloriously happy and content. If at times a doubt of Howard's happiness crossed her mind, if she thought he was brooding or regretting, she dismissed it with a shrug and immediately planned something to interest him. In fact, as she told Claire Gordon, she kept him so busy he had no time for regrets.

Claire had mistrusted something very near the truth when Annette confided with great glee that Howard had resigned from the hospital. She had realized Howard Blake had ideals, that he was not the sort to give them up without suffering for his act. She saw the cynical, hard look in his eyes and understood something of the shame he felt at the renunciation of his ideals, his hope of helping humanity. Claire also realized Howard's weakness where Annette was concerned.

"She has succeeded. She has made a different man of him. One can't help but be sorry for him even if he is weak as ditchwater," she said to herself. To Annette she remarked:

"Howard looks awfully old lately. Is he fretting over his work?"

"No, indeed! We are having just the best times ever! He was awfully worn out with his hospital work and it will take him a little time to pick up." This was her answer to all who spoke of Howard's changed looks.

Howard Blake was alone in his office. It was mid-afternoon. The nurse had left and Annette was at a matinee. He had refused to accompany her, saying he had a new and interesting book. Following her plan, Annette had not urged him but had laughed at him for preferring a book to a play.

The door boy announced:

"A lady insists upon seeing you, Dr. Blake. I told her your office hours were over, but she wouldn't go. She is in the reception room."

Howard rose unwillingly. He would dismiss her and return to his book. But whe nthe lovely golden-haired Nadine Norwell came toward him, with extended hands, he forget all about dismissing her and clapsed them warmly.

"You didn't expect to see me, did you, Dr. Blake," she asked.

"Indeed, I did not! But that doesn't lessen my pleasure."

"I just heard that the Dr. Blake some of my acquaintances knew about was my Dr. Blake and I just hurried here to tell you how glad I am that you are in New York. What hospital are you connected with?"

A wave of crimson swept Howard Blake's face, then receded, leaving him ghastly white for a second, only to turn crimson once more as he replied in a strained voice:

"I am not connected with any hospital at present. I resigned a short time ago to attend to special office practice."

"But, doctor! I thought you were a surgeon, that you cared nothing much for office practice! Oh, I am so disappointed!" Tears stood in her eyes.

"Why—? have you a friend who needs an operation?"

"No, it isn't that. But I thought you were so wonderful! Oh, why did you resign?"

"Certain things which I cannot explain made it necessary."

"But it is only for a time! You will ally yourself with some hospital? You haven't given up surgery, have you?"

"Yes, as far as making it my sole work." He could not tell this girl who so believed in him the raw truth.

"But it is a mistake, Dr. Blake, I am sure it is. Why I should not be alive but for you, or if I were I should be a poor, broken creature. Think what you did for me in Clarkstown! Mother and I never tire of talking of your skill. Now I must go I don't know when anything has made me feel so badly." Her big eyes were once more moist with unshed tears. "Here is my card with our address. Mother made me promise I would ask you to come and see her. She hasn't been very well, nothing serious, but just an unwillingness to exert herself that is unusual with her."

"I shall surely come, say to-morrow?"

"Yes do! And now good-bye, and please get back with some hospital."

Smilingly Howard Blake went to the door with Nadine. He waited on the step until her car drove away, then with lagging step returned to his office.

"I'm not at home to any one," he told the door boy, then locked his office door.

Once more he fought the despair that had seized him when he realized he was finished with what he had thought and hoped would be his life's work. The faith of Nadine had brought back all the bitterness, all the disappointment, all his hatred of himself for a weakness he had not been man enough to overcome.

"Damn you!" he said to himself as he had done before, and going to a closet he poured himself a drink of brandy. He never had been a drinking man, but now he occasionally tried to stifle his conscience—when it became too uncomfortably accusing—with brandy. As he was a physician, he had no trouble getting it, even though the country was supposed to be dry.

FEDERAL JURY TO BE DRAWN

Term Is Expected to Last Six Weeks

United States Commissioner Lantz was ordered to draw grand and petit juries for federal court in a wire received late Wednesday from the office of Judge James C. Wilson of Fort Worth. The wire was also the first official confirmation of the previous report that the court would open May 1 and that Judge G. W. Jack of Shreveport, La., would preside for Judge Wilson.

The wire did not state how long the court would be in session. Due to the brief session at the last term and the large number of cases now pending several of which are of special importance it is hoped that that court will be in session six weeks.

HOW TO GIVE BED FOOTBATH

Ill People Too Weak To Be Moved

"I'll have to get up, won't I, mother?" said William hopefully. "I don't see how I can have a footbath unless I get up and sit in a chair, so my feet will be hanging down."

William was sick in bed, and boy-like, he hated being that way, and in spite of his headache and backache and fever, he spent most of the time devising schemes which would give him an excuse to get out of bed.

His mother, moving to and fro from the bath room, and placing a blanket across the radiator to warm, shook her head.

"The doctor wishes you to stay in bed, son," she said, "and it's just as easy to give you a footbath in bed as if you were sitting up in a chair—easier, because your poor head would start to spin if you sat up in a chair. You have a temperature, and sitting up straight might make you feel very sick, indeed."

Interested in Preparations.

William was disappointed. He did so want to sit up in a chair. However, he began to take an interest in his mother's preparations for the footbath in bed.

First, she brought a foot tub into the room, the tin one that usually stood in the attic. She filled it half full of hot water, and put the bath thermometer in it.

She wrapped a hot water bottle in a bath towel and placed it at the foot of the bed. She had a large blanket warming on the radiator. Then she placed a smaller towel on a chair where she could reach it, and looked at the thermometer in the bath. It registered 110 Fahrenheit, which was warm enough for William, though some people could stand a footbath that was several degrees hotter.

"Now we are ready, son," said William's mother, and loosened the bed clothes at the foot of the bed.

She doubled the warmed blanket and folded it in four, with the two ends on either side of the fold. Placing this at the foot of the bed, she held one edge, folding the bed covers back to William's knees and tucked the upper edge of the warmed blanket under the bed clothes.

She then turned back the edge of the warmed blankets, still at the foot of the bed, as far under William's legs as the bath tub would reach. Placing the tub on the foot of the bed, she put her arm (the one nearest the foot of the bed) across the tub, the other arm under William's knees, with her hand supporting his feet.

Weakness Surprises William.

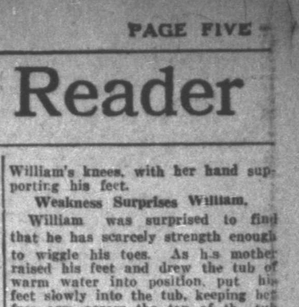

William was surprised to find that he has scarcely strength enough to wiggle his toes. As his mother raised his feet and drew the tub of warm water into position, put his feet slowly into the tub, keeping her free arm across the top of th tub to keep the blanket from getting into the water.

As soon as William decided that he could stand the heat of the water, his mother placed the small towel she had provided, folded, over the edge of the tub under William's knees to protect him from the sharp edge of the tub. She folded the warmed blanket carefully around the tub of water and drew down the bed clothes. The tub bath was to last for thirty minutes, so often ten minutes she added some more hot water, pouring it into the tub gently from a pitcher, keeping her hand in the water mean time to keep the stream of hot water from touching William's feet until it had mingled with the cooler water already in the tub.

When the bath was over William's feet were lifted out of the tub, wrapped in the warm bath towel that was wrapped around the hot water bottle, and the bath tub was removed. The warm blanket remained in the bed until his feet had been well dried and placed against the well covered hot water bottle.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

CHATTERER JUMPS FOR HIS LIFE

It isn't very often that Chatterer the Red Squirrel knows fear. That is one reason that he is so often impudent and saucy. But once in a while a great fear takes possession of him, as when he knows that Shadow the Weasel is looking for him. You see he knows that Shadow can go wherever he can go. There are very few of the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows who do not know fear at some time or other, but it comes to Chatterer as seldom as to any one because he is very sure of himself and his ability to hide or run away from danger.

But now as he clung to a little branch near the top of a tall pine tree in the Green Forest and looked down at the big sharp teeth of Buster Bear drawing nearer and nearer, and listening to the deep, angry growls that made his hair stand on end, Chatterer was too frightened to think. If only he had kept his tongue still instead of saying hateful things to Buster Bear! If he had known that Buster could climb a tree! If only he had chosen a tree near enough to other trees for him to jump across! But he had said hateful things, he had chosen to sit in a tree which stood quite by itself and Buster Bear could climb. Chatterer was in the worst kind of trouble and there was no one to blame but himself. That is usually the case with those who get into trouble.

Nearer and nearer came Buster Bear and deeper and angrier sounded his voice. Chatterer gave a little frightened gasp and looked this way and looked that way. What should he do? What could he do? The ground seemed such a terrible distance below. If only he had wings like Sammy Jay! But he hadn't.

"G-r-r-r-r!" growled Buster Bear. "I'll teach you manners! I'll teach you to treat your betters with respect! I'll swallow you whole, that's what I'll do. G-r-r-r-r!"

"Oh!" cried Chatterer.

"G-r-r-r-r! I'll eat you all up to the last hair on your tail!" growled Buster, scrambling a little nearer.

"Oh! Oh!" cried Chatterer and ran out to the very tip of the little branch to which he had been clinging. Now if Chatterer had only known it Buster Bear couldn't reach him away up there because the tree was too small at the top for such a big fellow as Buster. But Chatterer didn't think of that. He gave one more frightened look down at those big teeth, then he shut his eyes and jumped—jumped straight out for the far away ground!

It was a long, long, long way down to the ground and it certainly looked as if such a little fellow as Chatterer must be killed by such a jump. But Chatterer had learned from Old Mother Nature that she had given him certain things to help him at just such times and one of them is the power to spread himself very flat. He did it now. He spread his arms and legs out just as far as he could and that kept him from falling as fast and as hard as he otherwise would have, because being spread out so flat that way the air held him up a little. And then there was his tail, that funny little tail he is so fond of jerking when he scolds. This helped him, too. It helped him keep his balance and keep from turning over and over.

Down, down, down he sailed and landed on his feet. Of course he hit the ground pretty hard and for just a second he quite lost his breath. But it was only for a second and then he was scurrying off as fast as a frightened squirrel could. Buster Bear watched him and grinned.

"I didn't catch him that time," he growled, "but I guess I gave him a good fright and taught him a lesson."

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Linton Tells How Helpful Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is at This Period

Denver, Colorado.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for seven years and I cannot tell you the good it has done me. It is good for young and old and I always keep a bottle of it in the house, for I am at that time of life when it calls for Lydia E. Pinkham's help. My husband saw your ad. in the papers and said 'You have taken everything you can think of, now I want you to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound!' So I let him get it, and I soon felt better and he told me 'I want you to take about six bottles.' So I did and I keep house and do all my own work and work out by the day and feel fine now. I tell every one about the Vegetable Compound, for so many of my friends thought I would not get well."—Mrs. R. J. LINTON, 1850 West 33d Avenue, Denver, Colorado.

After reading letters like the above, and we are constantly publishing them, why should any woman hesitate to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound if she is in need of help? It brings relief where other medicines fail.

HIGH HEAVER GIVES GAME TO SALM

Gassers Get 10 Hits But Fail to Rout Ramsey

By "Spike" Cooper

Billy Smith's board of strategy held conference in the middle of the diamond in the final section of the last round yesterday afternoon and decided to walk "Old Folks" Kitchens as Adams was perched defiantly on third. They did, but walked him to the club house after Adams walked home when Stone hit the grandstand with a wild pitch in his vain attempt to pass the hitter. The score stood five all before the heave and as "Get-Two" spiked the rubber, the game went into history as a 6-5 win for the Spudders.

At the same time that the Spudders were chalking up a win Jim Galloway's nine took the Panthers into camp and the homelings went into a tie for the top rung of the ladder.

Salm sent "Jumbo" Ramsey to pour it on the Gassers, and a nice game he turned in too. Although he wobbled a couple of times, shaky support was more or less to blame for the knotting of the count in the ninth frame rally. Ramsey won the heart of the fans from the manner in which he pitched to 'em all alike. Three times did he put his stuff on the apple when the mighty Eibel came up with runners on the paths and just as often did he fail to produce the necessary blow to send them in, although he singled in the ninth, but a beautiful throw by Summa stopped Jackson at the plate as he attempted to count on the blow.

Flaherty pitched a steady game, but became a trifle wild in the third when he passed three hitters, which coupled with an error by Eibel on Kitchens' sacrifice and hits by Beck and Summa counted the first batch of runs accumulated by the Spudders.

Tex McDonald continued his uninterrupted hitting streak when he singled in the eighth. Another contribution to the day's activities were three swiped sacks to the flashing third sacker. Tex pulled a fast play in the fourth when he reached the limit to take Pratt's fast grounder down the line, grabbed it with his meat hand and whipped a hard throw to Beck whose pick-up was sweet to see.

The Gassers used 15 men in a vain attempt to grab a game. Vann singled in the ninth when he went in to bat for Flaherty. Lindsey and Williams substituted as runners for the two catchers, Pratt having singled just prior to Vann. Slappey, the elongated southpaw who started the game Tuesday pitched to only one hitter in the ninth. Adams knocked splinters off the left field wall with one of his offerings and Stone went to the front. Sorey dumped one in front of the plate, advancing Adams to third and he counted a moment later on the wild pitch.

Shreveport counted two runs in the first inning on a single, a double, a sacrifice and an error. Another in the eighth when Ramsey slipped for a minute and then the ninth inning rally netted a couple more, but fast fielding turned them back short the necessary runs to cop the fray.

Walter Salm objected to a strike called on Adams in the last chapter and in declaring himself to Roy Brashear, riled the umpire and was chased to the club house.

Jake Miller rambled all over the left garden in getting his two killings. Jackson drove one out his way in the third that rainbowed and hooked promiscuously and Jake sprawled in the dust as he speared the ball in an off-hand grab. But boy howdy! he went against the boards and reached his limit in the ninth to capture one Felix hammered all the way in the ninth. The fans opened up to him as he came back with it.

Felix opened the game with a smash far over Bob Bescher's head to the center wall for a double. Hartford sacrificed him to third and "Grandpa" Jackson scored him when he singled to left. Eibel hit to Sorey who forced Jackson at second, but his throw was high and wide and Adams had no chance to get two. An error by Bescher permitted Eibel to register at home when Hollahan hit his way. Storey flied out to Summa.

The Spudders went out in order in their half of the first. Bescher rolled one to Eibel who timed a nice throw to Flaherty at the initial bag. Summa hit a fast one to Hartford but was an easy out and McDonald rolled one to Hollahan who retired the side.

Kitchens failed to hold the third strike when O'Shaughnessy swung at a low one, but chunked him out at first. Pratt popped one up to Adams and Flaherty followed suit and Adams got two murders.

Felix took care of Beck's line drive to left and Miller flew out to center. Hollohan threw Adams out at First.

Felix was first up in the third and walked. Hartford dumped his second sacrifice, but Jackson was out when Miller grabbed his drive by the handle. Sorey threw Eibel out at first.

The Spudders got five runs on two hits in the third. Sorey locked 'em over for a walk and Kitchens was safe when Eibel failed to hold a throw from Flaherty on his sacrifice. Jumbo whiffed, but Bescher walked and filled the bags. Summa came through with a high one toward right which Hollahan misjulged and it fell safe for a base hit socring Sorey and Frank Kitchens. Tex took a walk and then Fred Beck lined out a stinging knock to right scoring Bob. Miller shot a sacrifice fly to Roy Storey who threw wild to the plate and both Summa and Tex rambled up the home stretch. Adams ended the frame with a line drive to Hollahan.

Hollahan opened the fourth with a fly to Summa. Ramsey threw Storey out. O'Shaughnessy singled to left but died there when Tex made a great barehanded stop of Pratt's drive and threw him out at first.

Sorey lifted a fly to left but was out. Kitchens fanned and Ramsey rolled out, Hollahan to Eibel.

Ramsey got another assist on Flaherty's easy roller and Kitchens showed the futility of popping up foul flies when he grabbed one off Felix's bat. Hartford flied out to Bescher.

Bescher was an easy out, Hartford to Eibel. Summa lifted a pop foul to O'Shaughnessy. Tex drew his second pass and Beck failed to get out of the way of one of Flaherty's shoots. Jake Miller ended the frame with a drive to second.

Jackson tanned for the first out in the sixth. Eibel laid against one which sent Summa far back toward the fence but he captured it. Hollahan doubled to left center but perished half way round when Storey fanned.

Adams hit to third but was thrown out in the sixth, and Sorey went out Hartford to first. Kitchens was also out, third to first.

"Old Folks" Kitchens grabbed a high one by O'Shaughnessy, Pratt was out Adams to Beck and Tex threw out Flaherty by many steps.

Ramsey was out Hollahan to Eibel and Bescher hit to Hartford who retired him at first with a stop and throw. Summa lifted a high one to right.

Felix was first up in the eighth, but rolled out, Sorey to Beck. Hartford drew a pass and Adams threw wild to first on Jackson's fast one, advancing both runners a sack. Eibel walked and filled 'em up. It looked hard for Ramsey but he never looked back. Hollahan's short single to right scored Hartford. Storey whiffed for the second time and O'Shaughnessy flied out to Bescher.

Tex McDonald got his daily bingle in the eighth and promptly stole second and third on two pitched balls. Beck rammed one down toward first that looked a foot long, but Eibel pulled a back-hand grab and sacked it. He got a hand from the stand on the play. Jake Miller flied out to center after Tex was out at the plate on a squeeze that didn't squeeze.

The going got rough in the first half of the ninth. Pratt opened with a single to center and Vann followed suit with one toward the same field. It was a Texas leaguer behind second and everybody was safe. Felix drove to the left field palings but Jake Miller went all the way after it and pulled it down. Hartford came through with a blow to right scoring Williams who ran for Pratt and Lindsey was out between second and third when Summa headed him off with a nice throw, Hartford taking second on the play. Jackson got his second hit of the game when he singled to right scoring Hartford from second. Eibel dry cracked one to Summa who whipped a beautiful peg to the plate. Frank Kitchens timed the hop well and caught Jackson at the plate as he tried to score from second which how he had been stolen.

"Get-Two" Adams opened the final round with a long double to left center. This dismissed Slappey who had come back for more following his disastrous turn Tuesday. Stone went to the mound and was greeted with a perfect sacrifice by Sorey, advancing Adams to third. Cady who had gone in to catch for Pratt, called Stone in and they decided to walk Kitchens to afford an opportunity for a double play, but the third pitched ball was high over the catcher's head and Adams rambled in with the ball game in his pocket.

VARSITY, VETS AND PONDS WIN

Henderson Hurls Two Hit Game for University

By "Hank" Hayes

In the second series of the Twilight league, the University club, Legion, and Pond Laundry held their clean records while the Shriners lost to the Methodists. Two of the contests were shut-out affairs, while the others were rather loose and much hitting and errors pulled by both clubs.

Scott of the Varsity and Colley of the Cleaners, pitched their teams to victories with shut-outs, and Henderson of the Baptists, twirled a dandy game. One player connected for a pair of triples and beat Henderson 6 to 0. Watford of the Legion was wild in the first canto against the Millers and they swamped him with six tallies for a starter, but his crew hit in the pinches and held their record.

Thus far the race for the Twilight pennant seems to be between the Varsity, Ponds, and Legionnaires, but in the next games for the 26, some of the others may spill the dope on one of the three leaders.

METHODISTS TOPPLE SHRINE FROM LEAD

The Methodists after a hard tussle with the Shrine aggregation sent them from the tiptop of the win column to the half rung. Both twirlers were a bit off form as many were given free passes to the initial bag. Brooks of the Methodists clouted a homer and a three-base hit for his nine while Center Fielder Gordon robbed many of the nobles of apparent hits by his sensational stabs of their drives. The score:

SNIPE SHUTS OUT LAUNDRY TEAM

With "Snipe" Conley in rare form backed up by errorless fielding of his teammates, kept the Laundrymen tied for the top of the ladder. Pond's crew hit Miller and Raley for seven safeties and scored seven runs and the Christian church team took the short end of the game with a bare goose-egg.

Although "Snipe" issued seven free passes to first, he tightened up and kept the runners hugging the sacks while he breezed a dozen of the Church's hitters that faced him, and held them to a pair of weak bingles. The score:

GASSERS GET PITCHER AND NEW INFIELDER

SHREVEPORT, La., April 19.—Manager Billy Smith of the Shreveport Texas league team, in a telegram from Wichita Falls, today announced the purchase of Pitcher McGrew from the Washington Americans and of Infielder Kane from Nashville of the Southern association.

PARKER'S HITTING BEATS ELEVATORS

Hitting where hits counted, the Legion nine bombarded the Mill and Elevator ball-tossers for the contest yesterday afternoon 9 to 7. The Millers started in the first canto to salt away the game, hitting Watford for four safeties and six runs on top of too much booting by his squad.

After the first frame Watford steadied and his colleagues began to paste the pill and at the end of the fifth chapter were leading the fray and both agreed to adjourn as the shades of night were falling fast.

Parker of the ex-soldiers was the star with the stick, swatting three out of four trips to the platter. His single in the fifth brought in the tying run and later on Belcher's peg to center field loped to the counting station with the deciding tally. The score:

RICE FAVORITE IN TEXAS SERIES

Teams Meet April 19 and 20 in Austin

AUSTIN, Texas, April 19.—Coach Billy Disch's Texas Longhorns, recently triumphant over their arch rivals, A. & M. college, have two of their hardest games of the season in Austin, April 19 and 20 against Rice Institute.

Jim Nowlin of Italy, star Texas third baseman, is in Arizona on a business trip, and will be lost to the Dischmen during these contests. Nowlin's absence breaks up the local infield defense.

Rice Institute recently broke even with the Aggies and are said to be in even better shape now. Melton and Dyer, both southpaws, will work for Rice, Melton defeated A. & M. while Dyer held the Aggies to eight hits, with Nowlin gone Coach Disch will have to insert another left-handed hitter into his line-up.

Bus Gillett, the former star of the pitching staff, is still unable to pitch effectively. Coach Disch has only Rube Leissner and Emmanuel Ponsford for mound duty and both flingers are overworked.

SCOTT HOLDS 'EM TO ONLY TWO HITS

Scott, of the Varsity sluggers, held the Baptist nine to two measly hits in their game yesterday and won by a score of 6 to 0.

Henderson, of the Baptists, was touched for six hits including a pair of triples by "Dub" Davis, and these two blows served to bring in the tallies that beat him, after a six-inning twirlers' battle.

RUTH CASE IS NOW CLOSED —LANDIS

No Plea for Piercy Is Heard

By DAVIS J. WALSH,
International News Service Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Certain public-spirited souls, we are informed are wandering the length of Broadway armed to the store teeth with petitions to have Judge Landis think better of his decision in the Ruth case. They are wasting their time, although that is of slight moment. It is assumed that they have plenty of time to waste.

Long before this, it has been reasonably well established that Babe Ruth will play no baseball in the American league until his suspension expires.

"The incident is closed," says Landis and the remark is not prompted by an attitude of flouted dignity, although Ruth gave him some reason to feel that way about it. At the time Ruth not only assumed an indifferent demeanor toward the Commissioner when interested persons attempted to bring them together for a conference, but previously had essayed to embarrass him before a roomful of ball players.

Legal Mind Objects.

Ladis' legal mind, however, declines to take these things into consideration. He merely regards Ruth as a law breaker, who knowingly transgressed against a baseball statute of doubtful value, a law breaker who carelessly jeopardized the interests of fellow players and the men who pay his salary.

It is with the more obscure players affected by the suspension that Landis feels the greatest sympathy. We talked with a baseball man close to the throne in Jacksonville, Fla., on this particular subject. The man's identity is withheld for obvious reasons.

"Judge Landis," he informed us "has received hundreds of letters from fans all over the country condemning him for the suspension of Ruth. Not one of them mentions the name of Bill Piercy, who in theory, at least, is entitled to as much consideration as any other player."

Yankees Split Pair With Red Sox At Beanville

By Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, April 19.—St. Louis broke Cleveland's winning streak today by winning 15 to 1. Van Gilder held Cleveland to three hits, duplicating his feat of Saturday when he shut out the White Sox. Coveleskie failed to show his usual form but was much better than Pott or Keefe. Sisler and Williams each stole three bases, the former stealing home in the ninth.

WARNER LAMENTS SIZE OF SQUAD AT STAMFORD

PALO ALTO, Cal., April 18.—A condition that would bring joy to the average college football coach has brought a lament from Glenn Warner former Carlisle Indian mentor and at present head coach at the University of Pittsburgh and advisory coach at Stanford University. The size of the squad that greeted Coach warner when he arrived here to take charge of the Spring practice was a revelation to the veteran coach who declared that while he was highly pleased with the turnout, he was finding the bigness of the squad a handicap, making it impossible for him to give the candidat s the individual attention that he would like to give them. With the presence of Coach Warner hopes of a victory over California next season are running high on the Stanford campus.

COFFEE DECLINES

NEW YORK, April 19.—There were reactions in the market for coffee futures here today. Brazilian cables were considered somewhat disappointing while development at the Genoa conference have been regarded in some quarters as modifying optimism over prospect for European demand and opening at a decline of 9 to 13 points, prices worked off another point or two under scattered realizing or liquidation. May sold off to 10.25 and September to 9.71, or about 30 to 35 points from yesterday's high prices. The close was within a point or two of the lowest, showing a net decline of 1 to 19 points. Sales were estimated at about 62,000 bags. May 10.25; July 10.02; September 9.73; October 9.70; December 9.63; January 9.65; March 9.62.

Spot coffee firm; Rio 7s 11 to 11¼ Santos 4s 15 to 15¼.

The raw sugar futures market was easier earlier under liquidation, prompted by the decline in the spot market. Prices at one time were 1 to 2 points net lower, although covering and commission house buying caused a rally and final prices were one point lower to two net higher. May 2.45; July 2.66; September 2.83; December 2.80.

The market for refined unchanged and three of the leading refiners reduced list prices 10 points to the basis of 5.40 for fine granulated. Others unchanged at 5.25 to 5.35. The demand was light.

SCOTT AND GOOSE TO SPEND $10,000 MONTH SEEKING NEW POOL

Special to the Record News.

ARCHER CITY, Texas, April 19.—The rig for the drilling of the Scott & Gose test for oil on the L. L. Hudson land some six miles southwest of the grounds this week, and that work on the derrick, water line, etc., will be gotten under headway at once. Messrs. Scott & Gose it is said are deriving $10,000 monthly as royalty on the Texhoma field production in this county, and intend spending $10,000 monthly in the county hunting for another pool of like value, with which like pools they diagnose Archer county to be generously infested with.

JUROR JAILED

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Theodore Ludin, a juror in the trial of William Quesse, head of the Flat Janitor's union, on charge of graft and extortion, today was sentenced to six months in jail for contempt of court. The charge was based on evidence that Ludin had answered questions incorrectly so as to qualify for the jury.

STOCKS REGAIN LOST STRENGTH

Optimistic Reports on Coal Help

NEW YORK, April 19.—The stock market today threw off many of the reactionary influences which prevailed during the greater part of yesterday's session. Prices in general registered extreme recoveries of 1 to 5 points on dealings amounting to 1,475,060 shares.

Denials from industrial centers that the coal strike had made serious inroads on steel iron productions, caused optimism. Easier money also helped in this direction.

Hesitancy characterized the initial trading in consequence of renewed selling pressure, which was chiefly directed against coalers, steels, coopers and several of the high grade rails, notably Canadian Pacific.

Before noon, however, the list ran into higher grounds under leadership of United States Steel. That stock rose to within a nominal fraction of par and the independent steels also responded to steady absorption.

Motors, equipments, secondary rails and various industrials comprising textile, tobacco, rubber, leather and mail order groups were again taken in hand by pools, some scoring record prices of the year. At intervals, when the market was disposed to give way to profit taking, dividend paying rails became the sustaining features, although strength in that group were comparatively moderate.

WHEAT SHARPLY RISES IN VALUE

European Messages Strengthen

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Wheat advanced sharply in value today, owing for the most part to unexpected higher quotations from Liverpool and to enlargement of foreign buying on this side of the Atlantic. Closing price here, although unsettled, showed 2 1-8c to 3 5-8c net gain, with May 1.42 3-4 to 1.42 7-8 and July 1.25 5-8 to 1.25 3-4. Corn finished 1-2 to 1 3-4c up, and oats up 5-8c to 1c.

In provisions, the outcome varied from 10c decline to 5c advance.

Surprise over course of the Liverpool market led to active competition for wheat offerings at the opening, especially as the rise on British exchanged was prescribed to talk of a better outlook of harmony at the Genoa conference. A decrease of nearly 6,000,000 bushels in the amount of wheat on ocean passage was also regarded as a bullish factor, and there was gossip of a serious drought in Australia.

Indications that foreigners were buying wheat here for July and September delivery, tended later to give the market an additional upward swing and so too did estimates current that 1,000,000 bushels of wheat and 1,500,000 bushels of corn had been taken at the seaboard for shipment to Europe.

Unfavorable weather and export demand for corn did a good deal to strengthen prices of corn and oats.

Packers selling virtually nullified in the provision market the effect of the higher prices on hogs.

COTTON PRICES SUFFER DECLINE

Advance at Outset Becomes Lost

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 19.—An early advance was followed by reaction in the cotton market today with July contracts selling off from 17.70 to 17.50 and with the general list closing barely steady at a net decline of 1 to 7 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 7 to 20 points on the unfavorable weather map and reports of a continued improvement in the cotton good market. Liverpool cables were slightly disappointing however, and after selling up to 18.00 for July and 17.74 for October or back to nearly the best price of yesterday, the market turned easier under realizing. The latter was promoted by a favorable weekly report from the weather bureau, while also complaints of a poor sport demand scattered selling here, believed to be for southern accounts. Trading was quite active on the opening advance, but became very quiet on the decline on what was attributed chiefly to profit taking after advances earlier in the week. Selling on the favorable weekly weather report was held in check by the unfavorable showing of the day's weather news, which emphasized heavy rains in eastern sections of the belt, and low temperatures in the west.

Private cables reported less spot demand in Liverpool, and said that buying of futures was restricted by an unfavorable view of development in the Genoa conference.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, April 19.—It was mostly a weather market on the cotton exchange today, advances of 13 to 16 points being scored in the early trading on buying stimulated by wet weather in the belt while later on there was a break under the effect of the weekly crop returns from the government which most traders considered more favorable than expected. In the afternoon an unfavorable opinion of developments at the Genoa economic conference carried prices to their lowest level, 9 to 13 points under the close of yesterday. May trading down to 16.85 as compared with 17.11 as the high price of the day. On the close May stood at 16.89 with the list showing net losses on the day of 7 to 9 points.

The early buying was in the face of an indifferent Liverpool and was because of heavy rains in the central belt and also farther east. These rains, coming in high stages of water in the rivers in the central belt, caused considerable uneasiness.

The weekly crop reports indicated that planting had been done on a larger scale this last week than thought possible. Because of this and the way the trade regarded the Genoa conference, some little long cotton was thrown overboard in the afternoon.

ONLY 5 METERS NEEDING TEST

$2 Charge Goes Into Effect Today

Only five meters were reported Wednesday as needing tests, that being the number of reports received in the office of Dr. A. H. Douglass as a total for the last day in which meters could be examined gratis to the public. The ordinance passed 30 days ago fixing a charge of $2 per meter for such tests, goes into effect today.

Beginning today, $2 will be charged for testing water, light and gas meters, on complaint of individuals, the party entering the complaint, according to the ordinance, filing the $2 with the health department at the time of the complaint.

According to the ordinance, if the meter tested proves to be over 2 per cent fast, the complainant's $2 deposit is refunded, and the company which operates the meter in question must pay the cost. The ordinance also provides that if the meter proves to be less than 2 per cent fast, the complainant's deposit shall be held to cover the costs.

Dr. Douglass said, yesterday that the ordinance was passed because it had become necessary to derive funds to carry on the work of testing meters. Seventy-five meters have been examined since the city began to conduct such work in February, he said, the greater part of those tested proving to be faulty.

Dr. Douglass expressed the belief that with the city law becoming effective a smaller per cent of meters will be tested each month than in the past pointing to the provision of the ordinance calling for a test to be made by the city on each gas, water and light meter before it is sent to any customer, which Dr. Douglass says will lessen the number of examinations.

BURK WANTS NEW STATION

Grace Promises He'll Ask for It

Special to the Record News

BURKBURNETT, April 19—Burkburnett needs and wants a new passenger station, members of the executive committee told P. W. Grace, division superintendent of the Wichita Falls & Northwestern, who was a guest at the luncheon of the organization today.

The railroad man promised to transmit the request to the general officers of the company. He was present to test the sentiment of the organization in an informal manner, to the proposed removal of the mid-day passenger trains.

The organization promised not to oppose the change, believing that morning and evening trains each way would be sufficient without the mid-day trains. Other organizations in this section, however, have opposed the move.

The possible changing of the night train, which now goes from Wichita Falls to Oklahoma City by way of Frederick, to include Altus, was also discussed, and the committee endorsed the change.

Approval of the movement for the organization of a Burkburnett band, with the employment of a professional leader and instructor, with provision for the hearing of the expense by the organization, was among the other actions taken.

"All Must Face God"—Scarborough

Last night at the First Baptist church, Dr. L. R. Scarborough dwelt on the fact that "Thou Shalt Surely Die," and urged upon those in the audience that preparation be made for it.

Dr. Scarborough said, "since you have no guarantee as to when you must answer the summons of death, what have you done to set your house in order? While I would have you seriously consider your own household and those who are bound to you by family ties, yet I would have you think in still more far-reaching terms. I would have you place no limitations on the question of duty, except that it reach to the limit of your power and influence. First, I would ask you in regard to your own condition spiritually. Then, that of your own household. But what of your friends? Have you done aught to help them toward God? But go still further than friends and consider not how much, but think of how little you have done toward the salvation of those with whom you come in contact from day to day. Some there are who may not be so gifted in speaking, but every true Christian should be able to at least pray. Do not pray in the mere sense of asking God for things, but pray, letting God speak to you. Have you access to the Heavenly Father? Have you that assurance that He hears your petitions? Is your life placed before God's mirror reflecting for His glory? Next to the word of God in the teaching of men is a Christian life, one which commends Christ to the lost. It is not how much we profess, but how much we possess."

The First Baptist church male Quartet rendered special music for last night's service. Tonight, Mr. Young will sing a solo number.

"Tarzan of Bulldoggers" Hopes To Drop Hard Luck Jinx When He Contests for Title Here

"Tarzan of the Bulldoggers," is the nickname hung on to Mike Hastings, of Pendleton, Oregon.

Big, powerful, good-natured Mike, who has furnished bulldogging thrills for thousands, has had a stormy career in his favorite sport, breaking the world's record in the bulldogging contest and winning the world's championship at the New York stampede in 1916. Mike looked like and was a real champion, but at the next contest at Cheyenne, Wyoming, three broken ribs put him out of the running.

Three years ago Mike journeyed from Pendleton, Oregon, to Chicago, to enter the bulldogging of the world's championship contest of cowboy sports staged during the Elks national convention.

Mike was fit and looked like he would make the going rough for the bulldogging field, but the night before the contest opened, he was accidentally shot in the leg by the late Angelo Hughes in a friendly scuffle over a six shooter and was incapacitated for two months.

Recovering and regaining form, Mike had already entered the contest at St. Joseph, Missouri, Round-Up, when the "day before contest" bad luck still followed him and this time in rounding up some wild steers in the arena his horse fell upon him with the result that Mike was taken to the hospital with a broken limb, but the "Tarzan of the Bulldoggers" is living up to the name now. He seems to have shaken off the ill luck and is going like a house afire.

The present champion, Frank McCarroll, of Boise, Idaho, had hard work nosing out ahead of Hastings at the Fort Worth rodeo this spring, and the battle between these two in the bulldogging of the Round-Up here will be interesting.

Beardless Bandits Elude Cop Sleuths

No clue as to the identity of the two youthful bandits who held up and robbed the Western Oil company's filling station at Fourth and Indiana had been obtained by city and county officials working on the case late Wednesday, authorities freely expressing themselves as believing the thieves to have been "visiting talent."

The pair of youthful robbers, clad in new overalls, entered the filling station while the proprietor, H. G. Warren, was working at his desk. Holding Warren under cover, the pair proceeded to loot a cash register, obtaining $12.50 and overlooking other funds in their apparent haste.

The boys had disappeared before Warren could get out of the building.

ELECTION ORDER
Whereas the Trustees of the Wichita Falls Independent School District as incorporated by special act of the Thirty-first Legislature of the State of Texas, approved March 15, 1909, and known as Chapter 36 of the local and special laws of the State of Texas, passed by the Thirty-first legislature of the State of Texas at its regular session, as amended by the Thirty-third Legislature of the State of Texas, at its regular session, said amendment being approved March 28, 1913, acting under and by virtue of the authority of said act as amended, deem it advisable to submit to the qualified voters of said Wichita Falls Independent School District the proposition as to whether or not the bonds of said District hereinafter described shall be issued for the purpose hereinafter mentioned.

Therefore, it is hereby ordered by said Board of Trustees of said Wichita Falls Independent School District that an election be held on the 13th day of May, 1922, at which election the following proposition shall be submitted:

THOMAS PAYS SCIENCE HONOR

Monuments of Future Will Be to Them

"Men will build monuments in the future not to the Napoleons who destroy life, but to the Pasteurs who seek to preserve it," declared Cullen F. Thomas of Dallas, candidate for the senate, in addressing the Lions' club yesterday at noon. Mr. Thomas, who was the honor guest of the club, delivered a non-political address, mentioning no phase of the senate race.

"Doing something for somebody else is the joy of living," Mr. Thomas continued, concluding with the statement that "as individuals, we should abide by the thought of the golden rule, for in the following of that principle we can become of the most benefit to our individual communities."

His address followed an interesting program arranged by the Lions, who had invited the Lionesses into their den to share their regular weekly luncheon, held at the Kemp hotel. The guest commended the club for the "spirit which it animates in social life."

The club, Mr. Thomas said, stands "for the old thought that men should dedicate their lives not for self but for service. In that thought is the spirit of the good Samaritan—in that thought is the vision of the golden rule.

"If we could just get the thought of the golden rule in us and use it from day to day this would be a better business world. The man who lives for 'me and my wife, John and his wife, us four and no more,' hasn't caught the meaning of his duty to society.

"The great men of the world are measured by their usefulness to the world—not by what they get out of it."

Commending the Lions for honoring the women at the luncheon, Mr. Thomas said, referring to the passing of cigars for the men and chewing gum for the women, that "if things keep on going like they are, the men will be using gum and the women cigars in public."

In his talk on usefulness, the speaker asserted that Jay Gould, with all his millions, failed to get the most out of life "because he didn't do much for others." In this connection, Mr. Thomas said:

"Thomas Jefferson didn't have engraved on his tombstone that he had once been president of the United States—he had engraved there that he was the author of the Declaration of Independence, an act which brought freedom to an oppressed people."

A number of the Lionnesses was in attendance at the luncheon.

Mrs. Louella Thompson, soloist, accompanied by Miss Annette Walsh and Miss Juanita Kinsey, elocution instructor in the public schools, entertained the club.

Preacher - Business Man Voices Recovery of Dixie's Commerce After Trip Through Southland

Business is on the recovery all over the South, he is convinced from personal observation from the trip of Florida to Kansas City, Dr. L. R. Scarbrough, Baptist leader conducting a revival here, who described himself as a business man as well as a preacher, told members of the Wichita club at their Wednesday luncheon.

Dr. Scarbrough complimented the business men of Wichita Falls on the city they had carved out in this corner of Texas, and expressed belief that the city was sharing and would share in the South's recovery of business.

The inspiration which had guided them he attributed to optimism, which he indicated as of first importance in successful effort. To this quality he attributed largely the building of the city's churches and schools, as well as the good roads in the county, both mentioned by the speaker as especially praiseworthy in his discussion of the city.

More religion for business men was urged by the speaker in his talk, Roger W. Babson being quoted in a recent statement in this connection.

G. Clint Wood, the president, who was absent, came in for attention while Dr. Scarbrough was talking. It was while the speaker was discussing good roads, and he asked his audience what the total mileage of concrete highways would be when the county pgram was finished. A member of the club hazarded 63 as the mileage.

"You surely are a conservative" the speaker replied. "I have been told that it would be 300. And, while I don't like to accuse a man in his absence, I think it was Clint Wood that told me that."

Dr. J. C. A. Guest, vice president agreed that the speaker might be correct as to his informant.

Dr. O. L. Powers, pastor of the First Baptist church, introduced Dr. Scarbrough.

T. H. McGregor, candidate for governor two years ago on the American ticket was one of the guests of the club.

CECIL JAMES WILL RECOVER

Sister Copies Wires About Shooting

"Cecil James, shot here last night by officers when he resisted arrest, is being cared for in a first class hospital. Condition serious; can't tell whether he will recover or not," reads a message received Wednesday morning by Jack Miller, chief of detectives, from Ben W. McLendon, police chief of Long Beach, Calif., where James was injured in a pistol duel with officers.

The message, one in reply to a telegram sent late Tuesday night by Chief Miller informing the California police that the man shot there who gave the name of H. E. Robertson" might prove to be Cecil James, son of H. G. James of 1304 Kemp boulevard, concluded by saying that Chief McLendon will keep the local authorities notified as to the condition of the wounded man.

Miss Sibyl James, sister of the man in California, was the first person in Wichita Falls to receive information concerning his fight with the officers, she having copied the message as it came over the Western Union telegraph wires Tuesday.

Local officers have forwarded the records of the two youths to California, where B. L. Benton is being held under $500 bond pending an investigation into the shooting, which is said to have resulted when Long Beach officers came upon Benton and James in a city park. Both James and Benton are said to have been armed, the former showing fight as the officers approached.

CENTRAL TEXAS OUTPUT DROPS

Tornado Damage Is Cause of Loss

With a 1,000-barrel drop in the Burkburnett pools, a similar loss in Young county, a loss of several hundred barrels from Comanche, only partially made up for in other pools in last week's average amounting to almost 4,000 barrels. The daily average is slightly under 121,000 barrels.

Lack of new production, and a shut-down in some fields of producing properties, while damage done by tornadoes and high winds was being repaired, will account for this decline.

The daily production, by pools, based on pipeline runs, follows: Burkburnett, 33,400; Electra, 12,630; Kemp Munger Allen and Iowa Park shallow, 2,550; Archer-Texhoma, 1,450; Petrolia, 300; Young county, 8,000; Stephens, 42,550; Ranger-Eastland, 12,200; Comanche, 5,800; Strawn, 1,070; Moran, 300; Brown, 700; Coleman, 70.

PAVING UP TODAY

Decision on the Burnett street paving, which brought protests from nearly a score of property owners at the Monday night session of the city council, will be made by the city council at their adjourned meeting at 10 o'clock this morning. It is thought that the points objected to by many property owners on this street have been cleared up, and that the owners of property generally will agree to the project.

Salary cuts, practically decided upon by the members of the council last week, but which were not taken up Monday night due to lack of time, will be finally disposed of at this meeting, it is expected.
