O'Connor voices family support, but is noncommittal on abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court nominee Sandra Day O'Connor voiced support for the American family today but told a Senate committee considering her nomination that she will not divulge how she would vote on abortion and other controversial issues.

Nonetheless, the first woman ever nominated to the nation's highest court faced the prospect of tough, pointed questions from conservative senators concerned about her views on abortion and such other explosive social issues as busing and school prayer.

In their respective opening statements, several Senate Judiciary Committee members indicated they would pose such questions — and said they expected answers.

Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., made reference to a disputed July 7 memorandum in which, according to some conservative groups, a Justice Department aide may have distorted Mrs. O'Connor's past views on abortion and the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution.

"The report to which I refer has been thoroughly dissected by those in opposition to your nomination and perhaps while not dispositive on the issue these analyses raise legitimate concerns ... with respect to your attitudes on such issues (and) ... your credibility," Denton told Mrs. O'Connor.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., said Mrs. O'Connor should feel free to discuss constitutional issues in general terms so that the committee can judge her character, intellect and capacity to faithfully carry out her official duties.

In a statement prepared for delivery to the committee during the first of three scheduled days of confirmation hearings, Mrs. O'Connor quoted from a marriage ceremony she has prepared for use when she performs civil weddings.

"Marriage is far more than an exchange of vows. It is the foundation of the family; mankind's basic unit of society; the hope of the world; and the strength of our country. It is the relationship between ourselves and generations to follow," she said.

Mrs. O'Connor made clear that the words of the vow reflect her beliefs.

"That statement represents not only advice I give to the couples who have stood before me but my view of all families and the importance of families in our lives and in our country," Mrs. O'Connor's prepared remarks stated.

Mrs. O'Connor, picked by President Reagan to become the 102nd member in the 191-year history of the nation's highest court, is expected to win Senate confirmation easily. But she first may have to wrestle with tough and pointed questioning about her views on such explosive issues as abortion, busing and school prayer.

A state appeals court judge from Arizona, Mrs. O'Connor was to appear before the Senate Judiciary Committee today for the start of what is expected to be three days of hearings.

Mrs. O'Connor, 51, arrived in Washington a week ago for what a White House spokesman called "isolated study and preparation." A family friend said the nominee was "getting ready for the worst, and hoping it does not come."

A memorandum circulated by conservative Sen. John East, R-N.C., urges his 17 fellow committee members to be bold in questioning Mrs. O'Connor about her views on the broad range of constitutional issues likely to come before the court.

East's memo said, "There is broad agreement among constitutional scholars that the Senate's duty to 'advise and consent' to Supreme Court nominations is at the very least an obligation to (provide) more than a rubber stamp for the president's choices."

Solidarity urges more unions in Soviet bloc

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Solidarity's first national congress took up two more resolutions bound to anger communist authorities today after threatening to take control of Poland's industries and urging workers in other Soviet bloc countries to form their own independent unions.

The first resolution, circulated by the independent labor federation's 900,000-member Warsaw branch, called for free and unrestricted elections to the Parliament.

Elections to both the Parliament and the local governments are now done from a pool of candidates chosen by the National Unity Front, a coalition made up of the ruling Communist Party and other groups.

The second resolution, circulated by Lech Sobieszak, a unionist from Gdansk, proposed that Solidarity delete a clause from an annex to its charter acknowledging the leading role of the Communist Party in Poland.

When delegates at first refused to take up the resolution, Sobieszak sought and won permission for a secret ballot, claiming the move not to discuss the issue was a "manipulation."

The question of whether Solidarity retains the annex as it stands now is crucial, since the party insisted last fall that it be accepted in order to allow registration of Solidarity as a union.

On Tuesday, the Solidarity congress adopted a resolution calling on the Sejm, the Polish Parliament, not to adopt government legislation to give the workers a voice in industrial management because it does not give them the right to hire and fire managers and make production decisions.

"Passing this bill will create an immediate growth of tension and will block the way out of economic ruin," said the resolution, passed with only one dissenting vote. "If this bill is passed, we will boycott it and undertake the activities implementing the reforms in our own way."

The resolution called for a national referendum, unprecedented in communist countries, in which the public could choose between the limited "workers' participation" offered by the communist government and the dominant voice in management demanded by the union.

Karol Modzelewski, a union leader, told the 892 delegates the communist authorities obviously would not permit the referendum "because they are not suicidal."

"If despite all that, the bill is passed, we will be standing ready for battle, and we know where we stand," he declared.

The congress made its bid to extend the free trade union movement to the rest of the Soviet bloc with a second resolution greeting "the working people of Eastern Europe" and telling them:

"We support those of you who enter the road of struggle for the free trade union movement. We believe that soon our trade union representatives will be able to meet and exchange experiences."

The resolution underlined its defiance of Solidarity's foreign communist foes by singling out the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia and East Germany, where condemnation of it has been strongest.

"A new Poland is being built on the banks of the Vistula," the resolution said. "We are not a trade union any more, but a social movement... Our aim is the improvement of the living conditions of the working people."

There was no immediate official Soviet or Polish comment on the resolutions. But Tass, the Soviet news agency, said earlier Tuesday that "right-wing leaders" of the union were trying to undermine the authority of the Polish party and "seize power."

It said the congress was making irresponsible demands which the Polish government lacks "resources and conditions" to fulfill.

"The creation of an impasse is exactly what suits the directors of the congress because they are aiming at seizing political power in Poland and would like to undermine the faith of working people in the socialist people's state," Tass said.

Officials mum on school board meet

The Board of Trustees of the Pampa Independent School District held a closed meeting Tuesday at 5 p.m. at the Carver Educational Service Center Curriculum Conference Room, 321 W. Albert Street.

The topic for discussion was personnel. Board members who attended the meeting refused to comment on the topic of discussion today.

Bob Phillips, superintendent of schools, said, "I just can't tell you anything. No action was taken."

The next open meeting of the board is tentatively scheduled Sept. 22, according to Phillips' office.

Head-on crash injures three

Three Pampans were treated for injuries Tuesday afternoon after they were involved in a head-on collision on the Lefors highway 5.6 miles south of the city.

The injured were identified by a Coronado Community Hospital spokesman as 2-year-old Amanda Tynell of 429 N. Nelson, suffering from abrasions to the right ankle; Timothy Boyd, 20, of 1224 S. Finley, treated for a dislocated right thumb and abrasions; and Randall Moxley, 24, of Pampa, suffering from a lacerated lower lip and several teeth knocked out. All three persons were treated and released from the hospital emergency room, the spokesman said.

Highway Patrol Trooper John James investigated the two-car accident on Farm to Market 273 at 3:35 p.m. Tuesday. He said the crash occurred when a 1972 Ford station wagon, driven by Moxley, was northbound on the highway when it apparently crossed the center stripe into the path of an oncoming 1975 Oldsmobile, driven by Danny Boyd, 23, of 1224 S. Finley.

The two vehicles struck right fender to right fender, James said. The three injured persons were taken to the Pampa hospital from the scene, James said.

Moxley attempted to run from police after he reached the hospital, but was recaptured by James, and returned to the hospital for treatment.

Moxley was cited for driving with a suspended driver's license, and driving on the wrong side of the roadway, the trooper said today. James said he is investigating the possibility of further charges, in connection with the accident.

Pampa firefighters were called to the accident scene at 4:45 p.m. to wash down spilled gasoline from the wrecked vehicles, but no fires were reported.

Tax appraisal meeting set

Gray County Commissioners in special session Tuesday set Sept. 17 at 2:30 p.m. in the Flame Room for an informative meeting with the executive director of the State Property Tax Board Kenneth Graeber with officials and local citizens to discuss the formation of a county-wide tax appraisal board.

Graeber, at the request of Texas Representative Foster Whaley, will explain the changes in House Bill 621, the Peveeto bill, which resulted in the formation of House Bill 30, passed Aug. 14 in the special Texas Legislative session.

Area city, school and county taxing entities will be present at the meeting as well as concerned citizens.

"Part of the reason for this special informative session is the fact that Gray County has never formed a tax appraisal district," Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said.

Gray County Tax Assessor Margie Gray said today that Graeber is very knowledgeable about all the changes and will be able to answer all the questions raised about the tax appraisal district.

"We want Graeber to know that we have deadlines to meet concerning the formation of the tax appraisal board," Gray said.

"According to Graeber, Gray County is in the worst shape of all the Texas Counties because we have not even formed an appraisal board yet," Gray said.

"But if we get moving, we will be able to comply with all the state regulations. We need to work together in this thing. It is not going to go away, and we must open our eyes," Gray said.

In other county business, the contract for paving one mile of county road 2300 between Highway 153 and 160 was awarded to D and L Paving of Guymon, Okla.

Commissioners also were given a time table for the completion of their 1982 budgets.

Beware! Handicapped parking being enforced

When the handicapped parking sign appears on that prime parking spot, beware!

Persons without a disabled person sticker or a temporary disabled card displayed in their windshield are subject to citation and fines between $50 and $200.

Pampa Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said today that officers are enforcing the new law, which went into effect Sept. 1.

The handicapped parking sign designation is a blue profile of a person sitting in a wheelchair.

Vehicles using the handicapped parking areas are to display a disabled person sticker or a temporary disabled card in the windshield.

The law, passed during the past legislative session, states that it is a violation for anyone who is not disabled or not driving for a disabled person to use the specified handicapped parking places. Non-handicapped persons also are not allowed to borrow or use a temporary disabled card belonging to someone else.

The fines for violations of the handicapped parking areas, set by the Texas Legislature, are a minimum of $50 and a maximum of $200.

Persons who are unable to walk easily or who are "legally blind" can apply for the disabled sticker at the Gray County Tax Assessor-Collector's Office on the first floor of the Gray County Courthouse.

Disabled persons parking in any parking space are not subject to parking meters or time limitations.

Pampa Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said officers are enforcing the new law and so far about six violators have been ticketed, with one McLean person being fined $56.

"There were several violations in the first week, but now people are being informed of the parking law and are complying," Ryzman said.

"We have found that some persons are eligible for the handicapped sticker but were unaware that it is available. We have helped several of these persons to get their stickers," Ryzman said.

The handicapped parking law can be enforced on both private and public parking areas.

"It seems that the prime areas of violation are the private parking areas," Ryzman said.

Capital murder charges to be filed in Amarillo

AMARILLO — The filing of capital murder charges against a 23-year-old Amarillo man was delayed Tuesday but will be filed today in connection with the April 25 disappearance of an Amarillo woman whose skeletal remains were found Saturday near Amarillo in Valle De Oro, Amarillo Police Capt. Jimmy Davis said today.

"The suspect will be arraigned this afternoon in Justice of the Peace L. B. Bartlett's court," Davis said.

The capital murder charges will be filed against Richard Leonard of Amarillo who reportedly gave the woman, Anselma Saiz, a ride on April 25 from an Amarillo disco. She was never seen alive again.

"We just couldn't get all the parties together yesterday, but the delay was not hinged on positive identification of the skeletal remains," Davis said.

"With the information we have now, I think we could convince anyone in the country that it is the body of Anselma Saiz," Davis said.

Davis said the department will be using an Albuquerque, N.M., orthodontist to identify the teeth of the girl.

"We also have hair and blood samples to be identified. It will just take time," Davis said.

No state relief funds for flood-damaged residents

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Homeowners and businessmen can expect no relief from the state for flood damage suffered when heavy rains caused a small lake to spill over its banks late last week, Amarillo Mayor Pro Tem Beau Boulter said.

"There isn't any money available through the state," said Boulter. "You can bet on it."

City manager John Stiff told the city commission that 46 businesses, six single-family homes, five townhouses, four large apartment complexes and a duplex had been damaged by the flooding that began late last week after two weeks of heavy rain. No damage estimate has been set, he said.

About 40 people were evacuated over the weekend because of the flooding that covered some streets with five feet of water.

Gov. Bill Clements on Sunday declared the flooded areas in a state of emergency and ordered about 30 National Guardsmen to the city to protect against possible looting.

An emergency pumping system installed Monday continues to operate, draining the lake of 10 to 12 inches of water a day, officials said.

Bill Johnson with the Lubbock branch of the Texas Department of Public Safety said that as soon as damage figures were set, he would forward them to the governor's office to try to get relief funds for Amarillo.

But Robert Lansford, director of emergency management services for the governor's office, said the chances of Amarillo qualifying for any funds were slim.

A local merchants' association has scheduled a 4 p.m. press conference today to announce the damages suffered by businesses.

However, Dr. Jeff Ghormley, a member of the association, said the group does not plan to file suit against the city for damages.

"Lawsuits are the absolute farthest things from our mind right now," he said.

But some merchant still are criticizing the city for not draining the lake last month before it overflowed when rains filled it beyond its usual level.

"A 6-year-old could see that one more rain and this was going to happen," said Jerome Feserman, owner Feserman's Western Store.

Thomas Brown, president of Village Cadillac, also was critical of the city. "The city is completely liable," Brown said. "They were very indifferent when this whole problem started. The city turned their backs on us like the situation would go away."

STRIKING TEACHERS ARRESTED. Striking Philadelphia teachers peacefully walk to police van Wednesday morning after they were arrested for contempt of a court order for blocking the entrance to the Board of Education offices. Striking teachers are arrested

By The Associated Press

Thirty picketing teachers were arrested in Philadelphia today as school openings were delayed or threatened for thousands of students by strikes in Pennsylvania and a decrease in enrollment, into more confusion.

San Francisco teachers reached a tentative agreement and said they would be in their classrooms when school opens Thursday if the membership approves the contract.

Fewer than 3 percent of the 21,000 member Philadelphia Federation of Teachers reported for work Tuesday, a day of preparation for the beginning of classes Thursday. The union represents 13,000 teachers.

The teachers walked off the job because the school board claims a $223 million deficit prohibits it from honoring a contract that ended last year's 22-day strike. The board said it must cut 3,500 jobs and withhold a 10 percent pay increase called for in the contract.

The school district spokesman Elliot teachers' union and school board agreed out of court to the limit.

Teachers in Boston's public schools have voted to strike, throwing today's start of school, already chaotic from budget-cutting layoffs and a decrease in enrollment, into more confusion.

The school district spokesman Elliot

Alexander said the district would decide today whether to open its schools on schedule for 213,000 public-school students.

The school district has gone to court to prove its deficit claims, but the teachers, for whom the average salary is $24,443, refused to budge.

Seven school districts in Michigan, five of them in suburban Detroit, face strikes by teachers, the Michigan Education Association said.

MEA spokesman Harry Boyes said about 27,000 students were affected by the strikes in the Chippewa Valley, Fraser, Huron Valley and Madison Heights school districts, where classes were scheduled to begin Tuesday, and in Decatur and Sanilac County Intermediate school districts, where teachers struck last week.

Key issues are salaries and teacher layoff policies. Michigan teachers earned a statewide average salary in 1980 of $12,257 minimum and $20,065 maximum, the MEA says.

Begin to voice plane sale opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) - Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin is using his first meeting with President Reagan to voice his opposition to the sale of sophisticated U.S. radar planes to Saudi Arabia. But Begin's aides say his objections will be muted.

The prime minister's aides said privately Tuesday that Begin knows Reagan is determined to go ahead with the sale. For that reason, they said, Begin will not argue too loudly.

Begin, making his fourth visit to the United States since 1977, was to be received by Reagan today at a formal White House ceremony. Afterward, the two leaders were scheduled to confer in the Oval Office.

They planned to discuss a wide range of issues, including stronger U.S.-Israeli military ties, ways of advancing the Camp David peace process and the status of the cease-fire in Lebanon.

The two leaders will hold a second meeting Thursday morning.

The Israelis are known to want access to intelligence information from U.S. spy satellites that look down on the Middle East, and U.S. officials were willing to discuss this without any advance commitment. However, one high official declared Tuesday that providing Israel with its own satellite was out of the question.

Even as Reagan and Begin prepared to meet, the administration's preliminary notification to Congress of its intention to sell Saudi Arabia five Airborne Warning and Command Systems aircraft, known as AWACS, became official.

Congress has until the end of October to block the sale. Both the House and the Senate would have to vote against it to stop the sale.

Begin said in New York over the weekend that the AWACS, whose sophisticated radar can track aircraft for distances of up to 300 miles or more, "will endanger very seriously the security of Israel."

He also said he has brought maps and other documents to support his argument.

However, aides to Begin said the prime minister is reconciled that he can't dissuade the administration from making the sale and probably won't make too big a fuss to prevent damaging overall U.S.-Israeli relations.

As Reagan and Begin had not met before, their first meeting was carefully choreographed because it probably would set the tone for relations between the two countries during the remainder of the Reagan administration. Both men held planning sessions with key aides Tuesday.

Tropical storm headed for U.S.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) - Tropical storm Gertrude was expected to pick up some strength today as it moved north of Puerto Rico and Hispaniola, and a Miami forecaster said it could reach the eastern U.S. coast in about three days.

At midnight EDT, the National Hurricane Center in Miami estimated Gertrude's center about 115 miles northwest of San Juan moving toward the northwest at about 20 mph.

"I think it has the same chances of hitting Florida as it does of hitting every other state on the East Coast as well as Bermuda and Nova Scotia," said forecaster Miles Lawrence.

"It is heading in the general direction of the southeastern United States. If it continues on that course, it could reach the U.S. in about three days."

"At the present time, we're looking at a tropical storm with highest winds of 50 mph, so that's hardly in the category of a deadly storm. However, it is September, and any system that we're tracking within a fairly short time could go from a rather benign situation to something very threatening."

The center's midnight advisory said the storm's gale winds extended 50 miles out from the center and "some strengthening is likely to begin later today."

Gertrude, the seventh storm of the season, lashed Puerto Rico with heavy rains Tuesday, briefly knocking out electricity in about a dozen towns and flooding some highways. No casualties or evacuations were reported, and the San Juan weather service said only a few showers were expected today.

Flash-flood and gale warnings for Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands were canceled.

Meanwhile, Hurricane Floyd passed south of Bermuda Tuesday afternoon and was reduced to a tropical storm when its top winds dropped to 70 mph.

"Floyd is past Bermuda and is heading out to sea. It can still strengthen for the next day or so, but eventually it will have to end its career in the North Atlantic the same way Emily is trying to do," Lawrence said.

Bermuda had 60-mile winds and three hours of rain from Floyd. Officials reported no damage.

Emily, the season's second hurricane, was still weakening after being downgraded Monday to a tropical storm in the North Atlantic.

Tuition tax credits worry officials

WASHINGTON (AP) - Reagan administration officials for the first time are publicly voicing concerns that private school tuition tax credits, a proposal with strong presidential backing, may be unconstitutional.

R. Tim McNamar, deputy secretary of the Treasury, said he and a number of Justice Department officials have serious reservations about whether the First Amendment's separation of church and state would be violated if tax credits were given to parents who send their children to parochial and other non-public schools.

Up to now, only opponents of the measure have raised the First Amendment problem, while the Reagan administration has promised consistently to work for passage of the tax credits.

But in an interview with The Associated Press, McNamar said: "We don't want to do anything disingenuous like pushing a bill and then seeing it declared unconstitutional. That's silly."

Concerns about the legality of tax credits come on top of previously expressed administration concerns about the economic feasibility of the proposal.

President Reagan promised during last year's campaign to "wholeheartedly support" enactment of tuition tax credits, and his aides say he remains committed to the proposal.

However, administration enthusiasm for swift passage has been ebbing because the legislation would cost the Treasury billions of dollars in revenues at a time when the president is trying to keep budget deficits from ballooning.

McNamar said Congress might not want to take up the issue until next spring so members can campaign on the issue for the 1982 congressional elections.

Positive living seminars are underway here

People Plus, Inc. is giving a series of Positive Living presentations to business and service organizations in the city of Pampa, Sept. 8-11.

The presentations will be hosted by Mark Camp, production manager for People Plus, Inc. The free 30-minute programs begin with a film by Zig Ziglar, author of the bestselling "See You At The Top". Following the film, Camp and assistant Dennis Butler will address local groups with motivational thoughts from Ed Foreman (seen on CBS' "60 Minutes") and memory expert Billy Burden (featured on ABC's "20-20").

These presentations are geared to inspire goal-orientation and self-help. Professional and non-professional persons may benefit from the Positive Living philosophy - being the best you can be in life.

Mr. Camp and his assistant will be at the Lions Club Sept. 10 at 12 noon and the Kiwanis Club Sept. 11 at 12 noon.

Ziglar, Foreman and Burden may be seen in person when they appear at People Plus' Positive Living Event in the Amarillo Civic Center on Oct. 20th. For additional information contact Mark Camp 806-374-5115.

Air Force Thunderbird fly team commander dies in freak crash

CLEVELAND (AP) - Stunned members of the U.S. Air Force Thunderbird precision flying team canceled a show and prepared to return to their base in Nevada after a freak jet crash killed their commander.

The T-38A Talon trainer jet piloted by Lt. Col. David L. Smith hit a flock of birds Tuesday at Burke Lakefront Airport, causing the engines to "flame out" before the plane plunged to the runway and skidded into Lake Erie while leaving for a show in Texas, officials said.

Smith, 40, a native of Rossville, Ga., and decorated former Vietnam pilot who had flown more than 350 combat missions, was killed when his ejector-seat parachute failed to open.

His crew chief, Staff Sgt. Dwight Roberts, 31, a native of Lexington, N.C., was injured slightly upon parachuting to the runway.

Air Force officials said an investigation of the crash would begin in several days and could take weeks to complete.

Capt. Jim Jannette, a spokesman for the Thunderbirds, said the precision flying team's eight jets, nine officers and 41-member crew planned to return to Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada to map out future air shows.

"We are professional. We have a job to do and we're going to do that job. That's what Colonel Smith would have wanted," Jannette said.

They had performed aerial acrobatics at the Cleveland Air Show over the weekend without incident. Smith's lead jet had taken off for a planned show in Texas today when the incident happened. The Texas exhibition has been canceled.

Officials said the supersonic aircraft was traveling at about 210 mph 50 feet off the airport's 6,200-foot main runway when it collided with the birds.

That caused the plane's engines to fail, said Gen. Wilbur L. Creech, commander in chief of the U.S. Tactical Air Command.

"It could have happened on any flight," Creech said by telephone from Langley Air Force Base, Va. "There's no indication of human error involved."

Investigator contradicts superior officers

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. (AP) - An Air Force investigator, contradicting superior officers, says 2nd Lt. Christopher M. Cooke was offered complete immunity from prosecution if he fully disclosed details of his contacts with the Soviet embassy.

Testifying at Cooke's court-martial on espionage charges, Lt. Col. Jerome Hoffman said Tuesday that he had a clear understanding with the Strategic Air Command that Cooke would not be prosecuted if a lie detector test verified his statement.

Cooke's attorneys, citing the immunity agreement, are seeking the dismissal of the charges.

Hoffman testified that Cooke gave a statement indicating that he had compromised Strategic Air Command documents and then passed a lie detector test.

The Air Force charged Cooke with conveying defense information to the Soviets and failing to report his contacts with Soviet officials.

Cooke, 26, the deputy commander of a

Titan II nuclear missile launch crew at McConnell Air Force Base in Kansas, faces more than 50 years at hard labor if convicted on all counts.

But as his court-martial opened Tuesday, defense lawyer F. Lee Bailey moved for dismissal of the charges on the grounds of the immunity agreement. Hoffman, who conducted the interrogation of Cooke for the Air Force Office of Special Investigations, was the first witness.

Bailey led Hoffman through a recitation of the events that began May 5, when Cooke was arrested, and ended on May 17, when he passed the lie detector test.

Hoffman said he was ordered not to advise Cooke of his right to a lawyer because the Air Force was more interested in learning the extent of Cooke's disclosures to the Soviets than in prosecuting him.

Cooke made a written statement on May 7. In it, he said he contacted the Soviets at their embassy in Washington in hopes that they would help him write an academic treatise on U.S.-Soviet relations. He said he hoped the treatise would help him land a job as a foreign policy analyst with the State Department or the Central Intelligence Agency. He denied compromising any classified information.

Hoffman said he told his superior officers that "it was my distinct impression that Lt. Cooke was lying," in that statement. But he could not persuade Cooke to take a lie-detector test to verify it.

Hoffman said that on May 9, he advised Cooke of his right to have an attorney and said the Air Force might prosecute him if he did not take the lie detector test. Cooke still refused to take the test.

Finally, Hoffman said, he was authorized to offer Cooke immunity in return for taking a lie detector test. He said he talked twice by telephone on May 9 with Brig. Gen. Claude Teagarden, the staff judge advocate, or chief counsel, for the Strategic Air Command.

Clements, Bonilla disagree on alien education ruling

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements applauded the Justice Department's decision to withdraw itself from a lawsuit seeking free public education for illegal alien children, but a Hispanic leader denounced the department and President Reagan for the stand.

In a retreat from the Carter administration position, the Justice Department said Tuesday it would let Texas officials and the students' parents settle the dispute themselves in a case now pending before the Supreme Court, the department disclosed Tuesday.

"I am extremely pleased to see the federal government getting out of the state's business," said Clements. "It's a healthy sign and one that confirms President Reagan's pre-election position on all these matters of delegating more responsibilities to the states."

But Tony Bonilla, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, assailed the Justice Department's decision.

"For them to withdraw from the case is, in effect, an endorsement of the constitutional violations against alien children," said Bonilla.

During the Carter administration, the Justice Department told lower federal courts that a Texas law allowing school districts to charge illegal alien children tuition is illegal.

Bonilla said the new decision on illegal alien education "is inviting future problems."

He said that Reagan's policies "represent a callous disregard for the poor, the minorities and the uneducated in this country."

The department's position was filed with the Supreme Court Friday night but not made public until Tuesday.

"The United States will leave to the parties directly affected the arguments concerning whether the equal protection clause (of the Constitution) requires Texas to educate alien children who were not lawfully admitted into the United States," the department told the high court.

In 1975, the Texas state legislature passed a law allowing school districts to charge tuition for alien children who are not "legally admitted" to this country. The law also allows local school districts to keep illegal alien children out of the public school system.

The Justice Department paper filed Friday maintains that the tuition law does not conflict with federal immigration or education laws.

A challenge to the state law is now pending before the Supreme Court following a ruling by the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals that it is unconstitutional.

Lighting kills motorcyclist

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A motorcycle rider has been killed by a bolt of lightning as he rode along an interstate highway access road.

Allan George Wenzel, 23, of suburban Live Oak, was struck by lightning as he rode toward San Antonio during a heavy thunderstorm on Tuesday.

A witness traveling behind the motorcycle told Live Oak police he saw a flash of lightning and saw the motorcyclist topple from his bike on the access road of IH-35.

Patrolman Gary Hopper said he found Wenzel lying 2 feet from his cycle and that the victim had burns on his right ear, chest and pelvic areas. The victim's helmet also was burned, the officer reported.

The thunderstorm dumped more than 2 inches of rain in an hour, with lightning interrupting electrical power in some areas of the city and rushing waters snarling morning rush hour traffic.

Firefighters in San Antonio rescued a woman and her dog after her automobile was swept from the intersection of Rolling Ridge Drive and Evers road into a drainage ditch containing 5 feet of water.

Police also reported the lightning tripped numerous burglar and fire alarms.

At San Antonio International Airport, some takeoffs and landings were delayed while the storm moved through.

Offensive dictionaries approved by agency

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two dictionaries criticized in hearings last month because they define words seen as offensive have been approved by the State Textbook Committee for use in Texas classrooms.

Without discussion, the 15-member committee gave 13 votes Tuesday to The American Heritage Dictionary and 12 votes to Merriam Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary.

Committee member Ralph Schultz of Midland later defended the decision to recommend the dictionaries to the State Board of Education for adoption.

"Both dictionaries have some vocabulary that is offensive to a lot of people, but in reality, they are in our society, so we have got to face the fact they are here. The students might as well know the correct meaning," Schultz said in an interview.

The board will hold a public hearing on textbooks Nov. 12, then vote on adoptions for books in 31 subjects or fields on Nov. 14. Adoptions take effect in September 1982, and new texts are expected to cost $27.2 million.

During the August hearings, Eleanor Hutcheson of Fort Worth, vice chairman of the Texas

Daughters of the American Revolution's textbook committee, said The American Heritage Dictionary had words that broadcasters can't say on the air.

Mrs. Hutcheson not only protested words with meanings related to sex and excretion but also racial epithets defined in the dictionary.

American Heritage's response was that in the academic context of a dictionary it was appropriate to include vulgar words.

A grade-school social studies text criticized by Mrs. Hutcheson on behalf of the DAR because it called the internment of Japanese-Americans during World War II a "mistake" was approved by the committee.

Scholastic Publishing Co.'s series of social studies texts, which includes "Our Country's History" for fifth graders, was one of five recommended by the committee.

Other social studies series recommended for fourth- through sixth-graders are published by Follett, Macmillan, Laidlaw and Silver Burdett. Alternates are published by Ginn and the Economy Co. Alternates would be considered for adoption only if one or more of the top five were rejected by the board.

A series published by Harcourt was rejected, and its vote total dropped after Schultz said his local advisors thought it was too rough on the oil industry.

"My teachers feel it has a negative view of big business, particularly the oil business," Schultz said.

Stephanie Hirsch, free enterprise consultant for the Richardson Independent School District, defended the Harcourt series and said criticisms of it at the August textbook hearing did not check out.

One book in the Harcourt series, "The World," was attacked at the August hearing by Dr. Reginald McDaniel of Grand Prairie, who said its "overriding theme ... is that little is just or right in America, and that Russia and Red China are on a noble quest for such an ideal."

The committee refused to recommend any bilingual kindergarten materials even though three different publishers — Pergamon Press, Addison-Wesley and Learning Line — made offerings.

Barriers to minorities in politics exist

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The chairman of an advisory committee on civil rights said today that 17 years after the passage of the Voting Rights Act barriers to minority participation in politics still persist.

"In other instances, newer and more subtle forms of discrimination are being used to deny minorities full participation in the political process," said Dr. Denzer

Burke of Texarkana.

Burke said, however, the registration of black and Mexican-American voters has increased substantially since the federal Voting Rights Act was adopted in 1965.

As of 1976, he said, no state black registration rate was lower than 47 percent, and several states were above 60 percent. "The overall patterns for "Even in 1981, some of the barriers to full participation to the political process that led to the passage of the Voting Rights Act persist," said Burke.

A commission summary said, "Continued attempts to impose new forms of discrimination make continued vigilance an absolute necessity."

The commission said in one jurisdiction in Texas a Mexican-American candidate reported that Mexican-Americans were afraid to vote because of "potential economic reprisal."

"Some minorities seeking to run for office also face intimidation and harassment, sometimes even before they have declared their candidacy," the commission report said.

The commission reiterated its recommendations that:

- Special provisions of the Voting Rights Act being considered in 1982 be extended through 1992.
- Minority language provisions of the act be extended an additional seven years, also to 1992.
- The act be amended to prohibit all states or political subdivisions from establishing voting practices or procedures that discriminate on the basis of race, color, or language.
- Specific criteria be established to assist non-English speaking minorities.
- "A lengthy journey lies ahead," said Burke. "Clearly, 17 years of remedial effort has not been enough in view of the kinds of persistent opposition to full voting right for minority Americans."

Harrelson arraignment today

DALLAS (AP) — Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, the wife of a man identified as a suspect in the slaying of a federal judge, has been ordered to appear for arraignment today on charges of making a false statement on an application to buy a rifle.

A federal grand jury alleged Mrs. Harrelson used a fictitious name to purchase a high-powered rifle on May 17, 1979, just 12 days before U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. was assassinated outside his San Antonio townhome.

The rifle allegedly purchased by Mrs. Harrelson, is capable of firing the same caliber bullet ballistic experts believe killed Wood on May 29, 1979.

U.S. Magistrate John B. Tolle on Tuesday ordered Mrs. Harrelson, who said she understood her rights and the charges against her, to appear before U.S. District Judge Sarah T. Hughes for arraignment.

Mrs. Harrelson was arrested in Houston Sept. 1 and transferred to Dallas Friday under a $500,000 bond. She was indicted by a Dallas federal grand jury earlier the same day.

Tolle appointed Dallas lawyers Fred Time and Ed Mason to represent Mrs. Harrelson after she said she did not have an attorney.

Time was present in the courtroom yesterday.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Fannie Mae's index

Stricken by an annual inflation rate of about 100 percent, Israel forestalls internal turmoil by indexing prices and wages to the inflation rate. As prices double, wages are carried along at an almost identical rate. Everything remains relative.

A little of that philosophy has been expressed by the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae).

In a policy switch that essentially acknowledges inflation isn't going away, Fannie Mae announced it will accept eight different variations of the adjustable mortgage, in which rates can rise or fall without limit during the life of a home loan.

Such loans are still largely untapped. Public acceptance is a question, but under the pressure of rates at the 16 percent level for today's loans, there may be no other path to travel in tomorrow's markets.

The importance of Fannie Mae's acceptance of the adjustables is that the congressionally chartered organization is nationally the largest buyer of mortgages from banks and other thrift institutions. Fannie Mae presently holds $58 billion in mortgages, or about 5 percent of all home mortgages in the U.S.

A few weeks ago the other big secondary market agency, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. (Freddie Mac), took a more restrictive path. That group announced it would buy only loans with rates that fluctuate no more than once a year and that allow no negative amortization, in which the principal rises during the term of the loan.

The current mortgage market is so extremely volatile that what looks prudent for lenders today — the adjustable rate mortgages — may be as dead as dodos 12 months from now. For now, Fannie Mae has decided to accept them. As we said earlier, it's a sign that the smart money is on inflation as a long-term feature of the U.S. economy.

Soviet bloc troubles

The unusual statement published in the front pages of Soviet newspapers Sunday, which has been interpreted as a warning to other Eastern bloc satellites not to tolerate the kind of dissent that has put Poland in the headlines, should be read in the context of recent developments behind the Iron Curtain. It seems quite possible that the "Polish infection" is spreading to other satellite countries, and that the Soviets are very worried.

The West German Der Spiegel recently reported that some aspects of labor unrest have spread to East Germany, and that they seem related to events in Poland. Apparently short strikes have occurred in some factories and workers have passed out illegal leaflets calling for solidarity with Solidarity, the independent Polish labor union.

Sympathy with the Polish workers has also been evident in the Baltic states of Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, despite a long history of Soviet repression in those countries. The Soviet campaign of "Russification," which sought to submerge the national identities of the Baltic states by placing Russian nationals in most important posts and urging massive migration, is considered a failure by most authorities. Lithuania in particular has close ties of sympathy with Poland based on a similar religious heritage and, to some extent, cultural affinity. The support network in the West for dissidence in the Baltic states has been strengthened in recent months, and this development may be causing concern in Moscow.

In Czechoslovakia, Charter 77 dissident Rudolf Battek has been given a very harsh prison sentence, and reports reaching Vienna indicate that a new crackdown on the Catholic Church in Czechoslovakia is either in the offing or already under way.

In Moscow itself, Felix Serebov, the last member of a group protesting the use of psychiatric facilities as political prisons has been convicted of anti-Soviet agitation. His sentence is four years at hard labor and five years internal exile.

All these signs point to an unusual degree of ferment within the multi-national empire that constitutes what its rulers are pleased to call the Soviet bloc. Some of this unrest is related to developments in Poland, which have demonstrated that a certain amount of independence of Soviet rule is possible. Some unrest is more the result of local dissatisfactions that have come to some kind of crisis point.

With the benefit of hindsight, the Politburo in Moscow now seems to be implying that the Polish troubles could have been forestalled by a prompt show of force when labor leaders started getting uppity over a year ago. The latest message from Moscow seems to be designed to warn dissidents in other parts of the empire that new outbreaks will be met with a ruthless application of force.

Close students of the situation will remember, however, that it wasn't simply a lack of will that deterred the use of force against Polish strikers. Concern about international repercussions and a genuine question about whether a swift application of force would have stopped Solidarity at the outset also played their parts.

It is still possible that the Soviets will decide to use massive, ruthless force to halt dissidence in Poland and in other parts of their troubled empire. But even the use of massive force will not provide a permanent solution for the Kremlin's slavemasters.

There are interesting times ahead in the Soviet empire — time of testing and possible tragedy. The outcome is still in doubt, and perhaps the best that lovers of freedom can do now is to watch and pray.

Breaking the records

There was a time when swimming the English Channel was one of the ultimate tests of human strength. Anyone who succeeded in crossing the 21 miles of rough water separating England and France was guaranteed instant fame.

Just recently a 26-year-old Chicagoan swam back and forth across the channel three times without stopping and his achievement hardly made the news. His name was John Erikson, but we doubt that many have heard of it.

Athletes keep getting stronger and faster. Since England's Roger Bannister ran the first four-minute mile in 1954, runners have set new records dozens of times.

When Pete Rose broke the National League hit record earlier this month, the most memorable part of the event may turn out to be the switchboard foul — up on President Reagan's congratulatory phone call.

Are humans evolving into a superior race? Or do athletes keep breaking records because they are willing to try harder? We like to think it is the extra effort that produced the champions, because effort is the key to progress in most other human endeavors.

By EDWARD J. WALSH

The sad reputation of American utility companies is one of the facts of life on the American energy scene. That was true even before the Three Mile Island accident in March 1979; it is even more so today, as General Public Utilities, the owner of the plant, struggles to pay for the cleanup.

Yet with very little public notice, investment counselors have been promoting utility stocks of late. The Reagan administration has announced that it plans to speed up the process of approving construction of nuclear plants, and thus far the once-frantic anti-nuclear fringe is nowhere to be seen. To be sure, the administration has taken other bold steps in the area of energy development. It has stuck with the Clinch River breeder reactor project, despite a firestorm of opposing arguments, some of them quite reasonable. And of course, it has backed Secretary of the Interior James G. Watt's efforts to restore balance to the energy-environment debate.

Mr. Watt has been widely opposed, but the bulk of the abuse directed at him has come from the environmentalist extremists, who believe that where trees and water are concerned, there is no truth but theirs. Many Americans don't like the energy companies, but they want new promising energy sources to be developed.

Without speculating too facetiously on the public mood, it's more than possible that the American people have had something of a change of heart on the subject of energy. They are finally taking conservation seriously, with their automobiles and their homes. The benefits of energy-saving tax credits may be having an effect; everyone, it seems, is insulating and weatherstripping. In the Northeast, conversions of home heating systems from oil to natural gas have increased dramatically. Americans have not been lulled by the popular notion of an oil "glut" — they are conserving scrupulously as current auto sales indicate.

Pulling together on energy

There are all sorts of signals that fuel consumption of every kind is down, and will stay down. In July the Tennessee Valley Authority announced that it will scale back its plans for construction of power plants, and therefore won't seek a rate increase as high as originally contemplated. Small comfort for Tennesseans. The other side of the picture is just as convincing: the wood stove companies are booming; so are the solar water heater installers. Thanks to the new Reagan tax bill, wood stove owners will now receive a federal tax credit. The roar of chain saws will echo in suburban woodlots throughout the nation.

It's hard to pinpoint exactly how much of this revised behavior is due to momentous events in Iran, Saudi Arabia, or Washington. There has been something of a glut, as the Saudis have attempted to force their will on the rest of the membership of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries by producing an extra two million barrels per day since the outbreak of the Iran-Iraq war, in order to stabilize world prices and relations with the United States. Then too, eight years of proselytizing on conservation by the federal government may be sinking in.

Certainly, these factors pushed the American people to save energy, and now, are pushing the country closer to independence of foreign sources of petroleum. But there may also be something to the idea that Americans have tried conservation and liked it. The "energy crisis" caused a great stir, and no little discomfort and suffering. It has also pulled people closer together. Conservation on a national scale required a national effort; large economic decisions as well as personal assistance, and problem-sharing of firewood and advice. It may well be that individual efforts to cope with the energy shortage may have done more to unite the nation than any ambitious government energy policy.

Naturalmania hits it big

By D. R. SEGAL

The magic word today is "natural." You would not believe it, but there is more natural around today than there was in grandmother's time — lot's more. And it costs a ton.

A young relative of mine is "into" natural, as we say. I suppose it is better for girls to hang around health food stores than poolhalls but they do come home loaded with bottles, jars and cartons of ingredients which will make them live forever, whether they want to or not.

I have given up explaining that conventional science holds that the body does not know the difference between a "natural" vitamin and one that comes from Uppjohn; and I will never be able to get it through my head how you can have "natural" soap and cosmetics, or why you should want to.

Sugar is a particular villain although I would have thought it was about as natural as anything could be. Honey is very big, although if the truth be known it is a nasty, sticky mess that reminds me of fly paper. Ice cream is made with honey, at a considerable premium, and it tastes like ice cream made with honey.

"Artificial preservatives" is the worst thing that can happen. Apparently, it is better to take a chance that the unpreserved substance has started to grow a nice crop of salmonella than subject the body to a milligram of chemical preservative. I don't know if anyone has ever died of preservative poisoning, but very likely it can be proved that over a period of one or two hundred years a steady diet of preservative on toast could arrest one's growth.

I am aware, through advertising, that ordinary white bread is worthless junk and, if not dangerous, at least a futile exercise in nutrition. But it tastes pretty good and that is more than you can say for the trick items they offer as the "natural" article. Natural bread is full of what seems to be sawdust and what is left after they shell pecans. Generally, it is dark in color (I don't know if that is to signal its content or if the trash they put in it discolors it) and it tastes stale. You can chew on it for a long time and afterwards you need Dental Floss. Often it is made with honey. It has names like Good Stuff and Old Fashioned but do not be deceived. It is full of what ought to be thrown away.

Much has been learned about nutrition and the value of natural ingredients. I would get more into natural things if I didn't know we all consist of less than six bucks' worth of chemicals and if chemicals are good enough for Nature they are good enough for me. Naturally.

The Namibia danger

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Pressure is being increased on the Reagan administration to yield to liberal demands that South Africa turn over control of Namibia to the Southwest Peoples' Organization, a terrorist pro-communist group.

For the time being, the administration is resisting any plan that would give communism a new base of operations next door to Angola. It reportedly is seeking a Namibian plan that insures the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola.

However, the liberals are selling the line that the U.S. should push for Namibian independence, irrespective of what the Cubans do in Angola.

However, the liberals are selling the line that the U.S. should push for Namibian independence, irrespective of what the Cubans do in Angola. The Wall Street Journal reported Aug. 12 that critics of the Reagan administration approach "believe that Angola will send the Cuban troops home voluntarily once its neighbor, Namibia, is stable and independent." That's about as believable as the notion that Fidel Castro is an agrarian reformer.

The Journal's reporter said that "The Reagan administration can't delay long in its search for a solution." That isn't so.

The best thing the United States could do with respect to Namibia is to do nothing. This vast, strategic territory, rich in minerals, is safely in hands friendly to the Western world. SWAPO is no more legitimate than the Palestinian Liberation Organization. In no sense is this isolated, almost empty land a legitimate nation.

One can be sure, however, that Carter-era liberals still have a foothold in the State Dept. and an influence upon policy — making with respect to Southern Africa.

It was very disturbing to learn from a dispatch by Washington columnist Allan C. Brownfeld that a leading African terrorist recently visited the United States with official permission. Mr. Brownfeld said that Oliver Tambo, head of the Africa National Congress and an advocate of terrorism, was permitted into the United States by the Department of State. Mr. Brownfeld asked: "Why did the State Dept. feel that it was necessary and proper to provide a terrorist such as Tambo with a platform within the United States to promote his ideas?"

The State Dept. should be required to answer this question. Supporters of President Reagan surely don't expect tolerance of revolutionaries in the Reagan era.

While Secretary of State Haig is taking a strong stand on Soviet subversion in Central America, it appears that the Department is not rid of old-style liberals at lower echelons — the types who want to maintain links to revolutionary forces in Africa and who are prepared to appease them in Namibia and elsewhere.

Firmness is applauded

President Reagan's firmness in confronting the strike by air traffic controllers has been applauded. Public opinion surveys since reward him with "higher grades."

Excesses, ultimately, eventually, inevitably are their own undoing. Whether the excesses monopolistic corporation in the '30s or the excesses of autocratic unions in the '80s, a "public be damned" attitude will not be tolerated indefinitely.

Somewhere such strikes had to stop. Now what?

The walkout by air traffic controllers was an "illegal" strike. Now what of other "government workers" who have sworn not to strike? A lot of them have been striking anyway.

More than 2.3 million federal government workers have signed an oath not to strike.

Including postal workers. Postal workers struck anyway in 1970 — and were forgiven, rehired.

Probably — except for President Reagan's demonstrated toughness — postal workers would soon strike again.

And the American Federation of Government Employees, representing 700,000 and the National Federation of Federal Employees representing 136,000 have been contemplating walkouts against the Social Security Administration.

The National Treasury Employees Union has a standby plan to strike.

The million members of the state, County and Municipal Employees Union are certain to be deterred by the president's firmness and the public support of that firmness.

Roger Dahl of the United States Conference of Mayors says, "We are going to say 'no' and stick to it."

President Calvin Coolidge, as governor of Massachusetts, called on the National Guard to break a Boston police strike in 1919 with these words: "Nobody has a right to strike against the public safety."

The world did not come to an end. The labor movement, thus disciplined, became stronger, not weaker.

And the showdown of 1981 may well have a similarly constructive effect.

We've had a rash of "illegal strikes" in recent months. City workers in Providence, Rhode Island; city workers in Steubenville, Ohio; firefighters in suburban San Francisco; police in Terre Haute, Indiana; teachers in Ravenna, Ohio. In all 536 "illegal strikes" last year, 19 by teachers.

This precedent may remedy that. We've forgotten how far too far we've backslid.

We've ignored the way thumbing anybody's nose at the law begets more of the same.

We've ignored the fact that teachers on the picket line are still teaching.

After jackpot, pass the caviar

NEW YORK (AP) — They gather once a year in places like the Rainbow Room or Tavern-on-the-Green to compare investments, complain about taxes and recall the days when they used to worry about bills, rents and jobs — the days before they became instant millionaires.

The Millionaires Club's weighty tab for food, drink and entertainment is picked up by the state of New York, because each of its 51 members has won at least $1 million in the state lottery.

In their annual attempt to show that the average citizen can hit the jackpot — and to discredit the notion that instant wealth brings trouble — lottery officials showed off 28 members of the exclusive club to reporters Tuesday evening at Tavern-on-the-Green, a posh restaurant in Central Park.

"You are walking, living proof of the kind of luck that can come to any man or woman," lottery spokesman George Yamin told the 28. "You are the best evidence of the success of the New York State lottery."

As cameras rolled and pens scratched, the new millionaires used virtually the same phrases and expressions to describe their contented post-jackpot lives: "a feeling of security," "life is the same, but more comfortable," and so forth.

Many bought new cars, many went South during the winter. No one invested in swamps or the Brooklyn Bridge. No one gave it all away, no one blew it all. No one's brother-in-law came begging for a loan.

In fact, the main impression was that coming into a million was a little boring.

"The news media expects you to be some kind of wild-eyed idiot," said Aaron "Dixie" Bellen, a 52-year-old used-car buyer from Queens. "I thought the guy from Channel 4 was going to cry when I said I hadn't run out and bought a 180-foot yacht."

Bellen did buy a Kentucky race horse, but he explained that he did not buy a yacht because he could not afford to.

Since his million comes in monthly installments over a period of years, he explained, there's no windfall and no opportunity to go hog-wild: "I look on it as a very fine raise, and a very fine retirement income."

Since he is tired of being asked, he now tells those who ask about his winnings that "I spend it on gambling, drinking and carousing, and I spend the rest foolishly on things like food."

The other winners made the new life sound less exciting, but satisfactory.

No one admits to having changed much, and some even act that way. Barbara Couton of Manhattan, who won a million dollars in May, was interviewed on national television Tuesday morning. But she was back at her job as a switchboard operator at 1 p.m., working a half-day.

Report Jordan will resign as National Urban League president

NEW YORK (AP) — Vernon E. Jordan Jr., who was wounded in a sniper attack in 1980, plans to resign as president of the National Urban League to join a Dallas law firm, according to published reports.

Jordan intended to make the announcement at a news conference today, according to The New York Times, which quoted sources close to the 46-year-old civil rights leader.

The Washington Post reported Jordan will join the Dallas-based law firm of Akin, Gump, Strauss, Hauer &

Feld, Robert Strauss, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee and former President Carter's 1980 campaign director, is a partner in the firm.

Interviewed Tuesday night by CBS News in connection with the death of civil rights leader Roy Wilkins, Jordan declined to comment on the reports.

Jordan has headed the non-profit, non-partisan organization since 1971. Jordan returned to work last October following a five-month absence after being wounded by a gunman in Fort Wayne, Ind., on May 29, 1980. He was shot in the back and was hospitalized for three months.

Jordan's assailant has not been captured, and it has not been determined whether the shooting was politically motivated.

He first gained national attention in 1961 when, as a young Southern civil rights lawyer, he led a black student into the University of Georgia through a mob of angry whites. It was a landmark in the drive for integration of Southern schools.

Families lose $641,000 to ex-preacher

HOUSTON (AP) — A 73-year-old invalid lost $100,000 and another man lost more than half a million dollars to a former minister who pleaded guilty to felony bond fraud Tuesday.

David Franklin Boston, 67, faces a maximum of 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine when State District Judge Miron Love sentences him in November.

"I paid him money to manage my account," said John C. Branch, 56, a consulting oil engineer. "I paid him money to steal my money, it looks like."

Branch had hoped to build a house and retire on the $541,000 he had invested with Boston. He also planned to spend the money educating two children, both of whom have learning disabilities.

"He's one of the smoothest con men I've ever known," said CaRita Barrett, whose bed-ridden husband, David, invested $100,000 with Boston. "But he was our first minister when we came to Houston in 1941 and Mr. Barrett had faith in him."

The Barretts were part of Boston's congregation at Broadway Baptist Church.

"In both cases they're just worried sick about their futures," said Janet Mortensen, an investigator with the state Securities Board. Ms. Mortensen began checking Boston's dealings a year ago when it was suspected he had used $11,000 in forged church bonds as collateral for a $10,000 personal loan a year ago.

Branch said he discovered the swindle earlier this year when he asked for $30,000 of his money.

"He kept procrastinating and finally I got this letter to call his attorney," Branch said. "I found he had embezzled the whole thing."

Age group economic gap widens

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States has enough problems to worry about without bringing up still another.

But to observe that an economic gap grows wider between young and old is not to bring up a problem, but to recognize one that has been festering for years, tolerated in part because of familial loyalty. The pattern emerges in several ways: just two of them make the point:

The older generation receives regular annual increases in Social Security benefits; the younger generation is compelled to pay a rising Social Security tax to support the payments.

Older property owners, no matter what has been said about the adverse effects of inflation, have benefited from seeing market values rise; younger people often cannot afford to buy because of those high prices. If age and economic patterns were stable, the problem might continue to be tolerated with little criticism and little prospect of a rebellion, but the gap grows in two ways:

First, Social Security benefits are indexed. That is, they rise with the consumer price index. Some critics say the benefits rise faster than increases in beneficiaries' costs of living.

Next, the ratio of workers to retirees is changing, in part because life expectancy has increased nearly 10 years since 1940. In 1940, only 7 percent of the population was 65 or over. By 1980 the percentage was 11. By 2030 it seems destined to reach 18 percent of population.

Another factor, inflation, is involved as cause and effect.

By some estimates, one additional percentage point of inflation adds at least $1.5 billion to indexed programs, making it more difficult to balance the budget, and therefore reduce upward pressure on prices.

The converging pressures seem destined to produce a break in the good relations that have existed between young and old. Increasingly, the young sense they are being deprived. How long will they tolerate it?

The deprivation is most glaringly illustrated by the inability of young people to purchase homes — not just homes such as those in which their parents reared them, but smaller, less commodious models.

The dilemma is well known: The young couple downpayment on a house; the house, meanwhile, rises in value beyond their means. Moreover, high interest rates rule out further borrowing.

How long will the situation be tolerated? President Reagan might have to come to grips with it before long. In fact, it can be said he has already begun by improving tax advantages for those who invest in their own retirement, thus relieving some pressure on Social Security.

A select group of housing and finance officials already is studying the housing problem and is expected to report to the President early next year, perhaps recommending some new financing techniques.

Stations will battle Texaco

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A group of Oklahoma City service station owners are fighting mad about Texaco Inc.'s decision to charge stations a 3 percent service fee on credit card sales.

"We're planning to start a petition drive in Tulsa, Oklahoma City and all Texas stations to get customers to sign a petition to pressure Texaco into rescinding the fee," said Bud Welch, station operator.

"Texaco already has the highest price on gasoline," said Welch. "This will just hurt our business more and I don't think it's necessary."

Station owners said that translated into consumer terms, the 3 percent service charge will amount to about 4 cents extra per gallon.

Most station owners contacted said the cost will have to be passed on to consumers.

But one owner, Larry Mosley, said he could not see how he could pass on the extra cost.

"Right now I could go down the street and buy gas cheaper than I have to pay myself from Texaco," he said. "If I passed it on to the customer, it would price me out of business."

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

September 10, 1981

Your material prospects for the coming year look encouraging, although you might not earn money in large amounts. Your gains, however, will build in a slow, steady way.

VRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Projects or involvements that cannot enhance your security or add to your resources should be set aside today. Focus on that which is materially meaningful. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be very selective of your social companions today. People who are a little too aggressive could cause problems. Choose affable types like you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Give priority today to two important matters you've been unable to tie down. Both can be concluded now to your satisfaction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Turn to reliable old friends today to help you sort out things you can't on your own. They'll offer slants you may have overlooked.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Conditions look very promising for you today, both financially and where your career is concerned. You'll recognize your opportunities and know how to react.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Keep a close eye on your associates today. They might get off on the wrong track. Fortunately, you'll know what to do to correct any errors.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You function best today by being helpful rather than by looking after your own needs. Your selfishness will not go unnoticed or unrewarded.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today you may get the opportunity to resolve a misunderstanding with someone of whom you're quite fond. He or she will be equally eager to clear the air.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Major achievements are likely today, even though you are apt to get off to a slow or frustrating start. Success comes because you are tenacious.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Subdue tendencies today to take yourself or your involvements too seriously. Once you begin to enjoy what you are doing, it will enhance your productivity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is a good day to remind those indebted to you of their obligations. Your chances for being repaid look promising.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In situations requiring a team effort, play the supporting role today rather than the assertive one. Success of the venture is more important than the limelight.

Harvesters have best practice

The Pampa Harvesters enjoyed their best practice session of the season Tuesday, according to head coach Larry Gilbert. "It was just a great workout," Gilbert said. "It's the best we've had so far. It's the best we've ever run our offensive schemes. These young kids are starting to mature, which is a real positive sign for the future."

Only the injury situation darkened Gilbert's mood. Offensive tackle Bryan Bowen is still plagued by a muscle pull and defensive tackle Ted Cain sprained an ankle against Hereford.

"Bryan's injury has been bothering him since last spring," Gilbert said. "It's doubtful he'll be able to play Friday night (against Dumas). It looks like Ted is going to be out of action for awhile. He played a good game against Hereford. We're going to miss him. He's inexperienced, but he makes up for it by being so big and strong."

Darryl Caldwell will take Cain's spot in the defensive line. "The coaching staff has a lot of confidence in Darryl's ability," Gilbert added.

After studying films of the Pampa-Hereford game, the coaching staff co-awarded the "hit of the week" to linebacker John Kadingo and cornerback Kurt Rawls.

Kadingo and Rawls had 15 and 14 tackles respectively against Hereford. Rawls, 140-pound senior, also forced a fumble.

Gilbert said noseguard Harold Landers had 14 stops and Joe Ryzman played had an outstanding game at tackle.

Gilbert urged the Harvester fans to show up in force when Pampa travels to Dumas Friday night.

"We need all the fans we can get at Dumas," Gilbert added.

"We don't want the people to give up on the kids."

SWC honors Hector, Wright

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

AP Sports Writer

If it hadn't been for Johnny Hector the Texas Aggies couldn't have come from behind to beat the California Bears Saturday 29-28.

If it hadn't been for linebacker Will Wright of Dallas, the Aggies comeback wouldn't have counted.

Both earned The Associated Press Southwest Conference Offensive and Defensive Players of the Week awards, respectively, for their performances in the non-conference victory.

Hector, a junior from New Iberia, Louisiana, scored one touchdown, ripped off a 54-yard run, and gained 125 yards on 16 carries against the Bears.

He did all this despite suffering heat cramps which kept him on the bench half the time.

Wright, a 6-2, 225-pounder who played at Dallas Roosevelt, blocked a last-second California field goal try that could have given the Bears a victory.

Hector said, "Our offensive line was just great. We never felt out of the game because of the way they were blocking."

"Our backfield depth paid off too because it was hot and I kept getting the cramps."

Hector has been compared by Aggie Coach Tom Wilson to former Chicago Bears superstar Gale Sayers.

"Johnny has the quickest feet I've ever seen," said Wilson. "And he's stronger this year."

Hector is playing now at around 190 pounds compared to 180 last year.

He can run the 40-yard dash in 4.4 seconds but some of his runs against California were right up the middle not around end.

"I used to be an East-West runner (sideline-to-sideline) but I've learned through experience to make my moves but still stay on a goal-line to goal-line direction," he said. "I know where my holes are going to be now."

Wright said he wasn't supposed to be rushing the kicker on the last second field goal try by the Bears.

"They had been trying a lot of crazy things and my job was to watch the tight end," he said. "However, I noticed the guy blocking down so I just blew in there. I'm glad I did."

There were other top performances.

Southern Methodist tailback Eric Dickerson gained 164 yards in a 48-0 victory over Texas-Arlington. Texas Christian's Marcus Gilbert scored on an 80-yard run and gained 116 yards in a 24-16 loss to Auburn, and Houston halfback Eddie Wright gained 100 yards in a 21-10 victory over New Mexico.

Earning defensive honorable mention was Mustang tackle Harvey Armstrong, who led a swarm of Mustang tacklers which held UTA to 30 yards offense.

Cedano ejected

ATLANTA (AP) — Houston first baseman Cesar Cedeno was ejected from the Astros game with the Atlanta Braves Tuesday night after going into the stands and engaging in a scuffle with a fan who Cedeno said called him a "killer."

Cedeno had just struck out to end the first inning when the incident occurred. Several other Houston players rushed into the stands behind Cedeno to restrain him.

After conferring with a uniformed policeman on the scene, the umpires ejected Cedeno from the game.

Pampa sweeps Hereford in volleyball matches

HEREFORD—Pampa High's varsity and junior varsity volleyball teams continued their winning ways Tuesday with victories over Hereford.

Pampa varsity won 8-15, 15-13 and 15-1 and 15-10 and 15-5.

"Hereford is better than they were last year," Pampa coach Lynn Wolfe said. "They returned lots of balls on us. Neither team played any offense."

Teresa Glover was a perfect 16 of 16 from the service line. Gay Hurst had 16 of 17 serves and Carla Rogers was 16 of 18.

"We're still looking for consistency in our setters," Wolfe added. "We've got some inexperience there."

Amy Bower will be out of action indefinitely after sustaining a hip injury diving for the ball.

The Pampa JVS won, 15-9, 15-2, and 15-10 and 16-14.

JV standouts were Stacey Brown, who served several aces, Lisa Sims (16-18) and Lisa Crayton (19-20).

The Harvesters will play an unnamed opponent at 11 a.m. Saturday in West Texas Tournament. The Harvesters drew a first-round bye.

Stovall finds it lonely at the top

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

AP Sports Writer

Jerry Stovall, Louisiana State's second-year football coach, is learning that you really are all alone at the top.

"One of the worst things I wasn't prepared for is the loneliness," Stovall says. Loneliness, to Stovall, is an empty candy jar on his desk. He hasn't bothered to refill it.

"When I was an assistant coach, I'd spend $150-200 a year on hard candy. If I'd fill that jar on Monday, it would be empty by Friday. Now, it takes longer for people to empty it and that tells me I don't have the traffic I had as an assistant coach."

"You put 'boss' in front of someone's name and people think they can't get to see you. You get some area of responsibility and people withdraw from you."

Stovall also has learned another fact of coaching life — head coaches don't do much coaching.

"Coaches coaches, I don't coach players," he says. "One of the real joys of being an assistant coach is working with a young man on the field, seeing him get better, seeing him say to younger players some phrases you once said to him. I miss that badly."

"Sometimes I feel myself hoping one of the other coaches will get sick and they'll let me coach. Let me do something. I just don't get to coach any more."

Stovall became LSU's head coach in January 1980 under trying circumstances. When the board of supervisors decided that Charlie McClendon would have to go following the 1979 season, Stovall longed for the job.

He had been a star halfback for the Tigers in the 1960s under Paul Dietzel, now LSU's athletic director, and then under McClendon, later returning to serve as Mac's backfield coach from 1974-78 when he resigned to become coordinator of the school's Varsity Club, a fund-raising group.

Stovall was hurt when LSU bypassed him as McClendon's successor and hired Bo Rein away from North Carolina State. But he was the man LSU turned to when Rein died in a tragic and mysterious crash of a private plane off the Atlantic coast before he could so much as hold a spring practice in Tigertown.

American League roundup

By KEN RAPPOPORT

AP Sports Writer

Carl Yastrzemski has played more than 3,000 games in the major leagues, but it's still a joy for him — especially with his team in a pennant race.

"I love it — I love being involved in a race," says Boston's 42-year-old wonder. "There's nothing like it. It's something you'll always remember. It's something special. Every play means something. There's no pressure. It's fun."

"When you're losing, that's when there's pressure."

Hardly acting his age, the veteran Red Sox first baseman collected three hits, including a two-run homer and an RBI single, to lead the Red Sox to a 5-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers Tuesday night.

The victory moved the Red Sox within 3½ games of the front-running Tigers in the American League East.

Playing his 3,034th major league game, Yastrzemski had the RBI single in the fifth inning, then hit his homer in the seventh. It was his sixth of the year, and provided the Red Sox with their eventual winning run.

Yastrzemski has been forced to change his batting style ever since tearing a hamstring muscle in his left leg Aug. 31. As a result, he has battered Tiger pitching for four hits, including a pair of homers, in the first two games of their three-game series.

"Since the injury, I can't drive hard off my back leg," Yastrzemski explained. "Now, I have to use my hands. I take a tiny step back and just glide into the ball. It seems to be working very well."

Elsewhere in the AL, it was Baltimore 14, Cleveland 5; Kansas City 5, California 3;

Minnesota 1, Toronto 0; Chicago 5, Seattle 3 and Oakland 3, Texas 0. Rain postponed the New York-Milwaukee game.

With the score tied 2-2 in the Boston seventh, Jim Rice singled off a tiring Milt Wilcox, 9-7, and came around on Yastrzemski's shot into the upper right field seats at Tiger Stadium.

Boston starter Mike Torrez, 8-2, gave up eight hits in the 6-2-3 innings he worked before giving way to Mark Clear.

Orioles 14, Indians 5
Eddie Murray hit a three-run homer and drove in four runs for the second straight game as Baltimore routed Cleveland. Dan Graham and Doug DeCinces combined to drive in five runs while ending extended batting slumps.

Graham, hitless in 24 previous at-bats, had two doubles and two RBI. DeCinces had three hits, including a two-run homer in the third, and three RBI, after entering the game in a 3-25 slide. The homer was his 12th of the season.

Six of the 10 hits off winner Scott McGregor, 10-3, were by leadoff batters. Len Barker, 8-5, was the loser.

Royals 5, Angels 3
Willie Aikens hit his second home run in two games and singled to ignite a four-run rally in the fifth inning, powering Kansas City past California.

Dennis Leonard, who was 1-8 in Royals Stadium this year, scattered nine hits before needing Dan Quisenberry's help in the eighth inning. Quisenberry gained his 15th save.

Twins 1, Blue Jays 0

Rob Wilfong's ninth-inning double scored pinch-runner Chuck Baker from second base as Brad Haven pitched his first major league shutout in Minnesota's victory over Toronto.

Glen Adams led off the ninth against Dave Stieb with a pinch-hit single. Baker ran for Adams and moved to second when Stieb walked Hosken Powell on four pitches. Wilfong then doubled to score Baker with the winning run.

Haven, 2-4, gave up just four hits while striking out six and walking three. Stieb, 8-10, allowed just five hits and struck out six.

White Sox 5, Mariners 3
Wayne Nordhagen hit a game-tying RBI single and went on to score the go-ahead run in the fifth inning to lead Chicago past Seattle. The Mariners put runners on base in each of the first five innings, but were unable to score until the fifth when Lenny Randle's RBI single gave them a 1-0 lead.

Floyd Bannister, 6-7, breezed through the Chicago lineup for four innings, striking out five and allowing just two hits before the White Sox scored four runs in their half of the fifth with Nordhagen the key figure in the rally.

Lloyd breezes into semifinals

NEW YORK (AP) — It was supposed to be the big test for Chris Evert Lloyd going into the last rounds. But Hana Mandlikova was overrated as a sparring partner.

Lloyd, the defending champion, took just 56 minutes Tuesday to breeze past Mandlikova 6-1, 6-2 and into the semifinals of the U.S. Open tennis championships.

It was a surprisingly easy win. Mandlikova was runner-up to Lloyd here last year and in the Wimbledon final this year.

Next, Lloyd will play the winner of a quarterfinal match between fourth-seeded Martina Navratilova and Anne Smith. That match was to have been played Tuesday night, but heavy rains canceled the night program.

A fourth-round match between No. 8 Eliot Teltscher and No. 16 Brian Gottfried also was pushed back to today.

In Tuesday's other matches, second-seeded Bjorn Borg struggled briefly then drove on to defeat No. 13 Yannick Noah of France, 6-7, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

No. 9 Roscoe Tanner ousted sixth-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-4, 6-2, 7-6, winning 15-13 in the tiebreaker on his fifth match point.

Fourth-seeded Jimmy Connors glided past Mike Cahill 6-3, 6-3, 6-1. He will play the winner of the Teltscher-Gottfried match in the quarters.

Borg and Tanner will meet in the quarterfinals, which is getting to be a habit. It's the third year in a row they have played in that round.

Also scheduled for today was a quarterfinal between third-seeded Tracy Austin and No. 6 Sylvia Hanika of West Germany, a fourth-round match between defending champion John McEnroe and Ramesh Krishnan of India, and a quarterfinal between 15th-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis and Bruce Manson.

The quarterfinal-match-against-Tanner habit, is a rather unpleasant one for Borg. In 1979, after extending Borg to five dramatic sets at Wimbledon, Tanner upset him in the quarters at the Open. That was a night match, and Borg doesn't like to play at night.

Last year, Borg eked past Tanner in the quarters after being down two sets to love. That match was in the day time.

Nurse accused of mercy killing goes on trial

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — The pain for cancer patient Norma Leanes was so severe the night of May 18, 1980, that hospital workers heard her cries echo down the hallways. As the patient's husband kept vigil, a nurse eased her suffering with an injection.

The 54-year-old mother of four died sometime during the night — a victim, the death certificate said, of runaway cancer.

But Wednesday, Anne Capute, a 44-year-old licensed practical nurse, is to go on trial on charges of murdering Mrs. Leanes.

The cause of death, according to Bristol County District Attorney Ronald Pina, was morphine sulfate, the powerful drug used to quench the fire of terminal pain.

Mrs. Capute, a nurse with three years' experience, has said she was following the doctor's orders when she injected Mrs. Leanes with what she claimed was less medication than was contained in previous doses.

Two other nurses who were on duty with Mrs. Capute are also charged. Registered nurses Nancy Robbins, 26, of Taunton and Judith Foley, 30, of Foxboro were indicted with Mrs. Capute last August on charges of murder and illegally distributing and administering a controlled substance.

Both have pleaded innocent and face separate trials in the case that Pina, a former state legislator, says could set needed standards in the way doctors and hospitals care for terminally ill patients.

Mrs. Capute's trial is expected to be a long one with the likelihood that jury selection will take a week.

Defense attorney Pat Piscitelli said the long-delayed trial comes as a relief to his client, who was suspended from Morton Hospital in Taunton after the investigation. Mrs. Capute, a mother of seven, has been unable to find another nursing job.

Piscitelli — a Brockton attorney who once represented Albert DeSalvo, the reputed Boston Strangler — disagrees with Pina's assessment that the case could set a national precedent.

"It's significant for what he's trying to make it," said Piscitelli. "From my estimate the woman did what any nurse does: comply with a doctor's order to make the patient comfortable."

The trial is at least the third case in recent years in which hospital personnel were accused of the "mercy killings" of their patients.

In 1979 Mary Rose Robaczynski, a 24-year-old nurse at Maryland General Hospital in Baltimore was charged with murder for allegedly stopping a patient's respirator. A mistrial was declared and the state dropped the charges after Ms. Robaczynski agreed to surrender her nursing license.

Last year, Jani Adams, a nurse at a Las Vegas hospital, was charged with disconnecting a patient's life-support system in a case dubbed "the Angel of Death." The charges against the 32-year-old nurse were thrown out because of lack of evidence.

This year, state and local officials began investigating 25 mysterious deaths of elderly patients at Community Hospital of the Valleys in Perris, Calif. The investigation, expanded to several other hospitals, found that at least nine deaths may have been caused by lethal doses of lidocaine, a drug commonly used to regulate erratic heart beats.

No one has been charged so far in that case.

An irony in the Massachusetts case is that some medical experts believe Mrs. Leanes was not terminally ill.

Mrs. Leanes discovered she had cancer after undergoing hip surgery in 1979. Medical evidence gathered after her death showed the cancer had spread from an undiagnosed tumor in her breast.

She received radiation treatment in Rhode Island but returned to Morton — a 200-bed facility in the southeastern corner of the state — for an operation to remove a malignant tumor from her spine.

She died two weeks after the operation. The cause of death was listed as lung and bone cancer.

But four days after she died, hospital officials began an internal investigation, stating publicly that they had discovered the "possible intentional overdose sedation of a terminally ill patient."

Pina had the body exhumed six weeks later and state pathologist Ambrose Keeley found no evidence of cancer in the woman's vital organs. Keeley, an important witness in the case, died this summer, forcing a three-month delay in the trial.

When a grand jury was convened, witnesses included cancer specialist Dr. Robert Green of Boston's New England Deaconess Hospital. After appearing before the panel, Green told reporters Mrs. Leanes might have lived for several years with the proper treatment.

Dallas cartoonist dies

DALLAS (AP) — Award-winning cartoonist Bill McClanahan, who joined the Dallas Morning News in 1930, has died of a heart attack. He was 73.

McClanahan first was a sportswriter for the News and its companion publications, but was named full-time cartoonist when he returned from World War II in 1946. He retired in January 1973.

He went on to win several national awards, including 11 National Freedom Foundation (Valley Forge) Awards, six Congress of Freedom Awards and the Southwest Journalism Award for continued excellence in sports and editorial cartooning from Southern Methodist University and the Press Club of Dallas.

McClanahan created all the mascot symbols he used in cartoons of Southwest Conference athletic teams. His most famous editorial character was Lefty Q. Liberal, a cretin in tennis shoes and a beret.

A native of Greenville, McClanahan moved with his family to Dallas, where he graduated from Highland Park High School. He studied engineering at SMU, then switched to art school.

He and his wife, Mary Eloise, recently observed their 50th wedding anniversary. They had no children.

McClanahan suffered a massive stroke in March and died Monday.

His funeral will be at 2 p.m. today at the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd. Burial will be in Restland Memorial Park.

It's new. It's beige.

it isn't good to drink water with a meal. Not true! It is important to drink a beverage with your meal for several reasons. The beverage will help to soften the food, assist in peristalsis (the movement of food down the digestive system). You will be able to taste each different piece of food more distinctly if the flavor of one food is removed from the mouth before tasting a different food. Diet Center recommends water be drunk with each meal. You should drink eight glasses of water daily, you can easily accomplish this by having some with meals. Water is important to us because it contains minerals such as fluorine which helps protect our teeth. It is also necessary to remove waste products from the kidneys. Don't be fooled by what you read. Beverages, especially water, play an important role in the digestive process.

'Eyes in the sky' the steed for Border Patrol hunting aliens

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Every morning, a lone hunter mounts his space-age steed and stalks a frustratingly wily prey — illegal aliens crossing the Rio Grande into the El Paso area.

The hunter: a U.S. Border Patrol agent. The steed: a helicopter.

"Helicopters are a great assistance to us because they can observe a lot that the ground units can't see," said Ed Garcia, acting director of the Border Patrol office in El Paso.

The helicopters provide the "eyes in the sky" in the Border Patrol's chore of attempting to stop the tide of illegal aliens sweeping across the river, said copter pilot John Jennings.

"It's frightening," Jennings said. "The country's actually being invaded and there's not a thing we can do about it."

But it's the job of Jennings and fellow pilots Ed Nichols and Loren Nichols to try. So they spend their days in the air above El Paso and the surrounding countryside, watching from above as their counterparts on the ground try to stop the human deluge.

Garcia said the helicopter has been used in El Paso for nearly two years. The Border Patrol also uses copters at its office in Chula Vista, Calif., he said.

Garcia said manpower shortages have limited the ability of the Border Patrol to keep Mexicans from illegally crossing the border to immigrate, look for jobs or simply shop in El Paso stores.

"Sometimes, we can't respond because of a lack of ground units," Garcia said. "Consequently, the chopper does see a lot of things that we can't take care of."

The patrol still picks up large numbers of illegal aliens as they cross or after they are caught holding jobs on the United States side of the border, but many go uncaptured and others are released and can try the crossing again.

"Because of the heavy volume and because usually the person caught crossing is not a chronic offender, we usually recommend voluntary departure for the ones we pick up," he said, adding that repeat offenders generally are formally deported.

"If we catch them here again after they've been deported, then we can seek prosecution," Garcia said.

Despite the frustrations, the chopper jockeys enjoy their work and develop a relationship with the illegal aliens that is at once menacing and friendly.

Jennings began a recent day helping ground units in a raid on an El Paso rock quarry where Border Patrol investigators believed several illegal aliens were working.

Before taking off, Jennings checked the maze of switches and dials in the Hughes 500 four-seater, slipped on his helmet and gloves and anchored his thermos between the seats.

"I always bring coffee along with me to make it as much like home as possible," he said.

After a smooth, low takeoff, Jennings headed westward toward the towering Franklin Mountains and the rock quarry where he was to meet agents traveling in unmarked vehicles.

As Jennings circled above, the other agents swept through the quarry searching for undocumented workers. Jennings spotted a group of men huddled among the rocks on a high, bulldozer-carved bluff and signaled to the agents below.

Six illegal aliens were taken into custody by the ground forces. Jennings waved and headed toward the Rio Grande for his daily search for Mexicans slipping across the shallow river on their way north.

As the copter made its way past the downtown skyline, Jennings told how the pilots sometimes quickly land their aircraft and make the arrests themselves.

"You can do so much more with a helicopter than with an airplane," he said. "We just land right beside of them and grab hold of them."

Because El Paso and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, line either side of the river, Jennings said the Border Patrol gets complaints about noise caused by the low-flying helicopter.

"We have to be careful flying over private property," the big pilot said with a shrug. "They complain that we blow dirt and make too much noise. Or they get mad about us picking up their illegal help. A noisy, dusty helicopter is a prime thing to yell about."

He's careful about flying too low because an irate alien sometimes decides to see if a rock can bring a helicopter down.

"Some of these kids can really chuck a rock," he said.

Here and there along the river were apparent border crossers, including a group of about 40 near a downtown railroad bridge over the river. Jennings spotted a Border Patrol ground unit nearby and flew on. A rock sailed by.

Not all of the aliens are hostile. Many smiled and waved as the aircraft passed overhead. Jennings returned the waves through the open door.

Jennings spotted a Mexican standing on the north side of the river in his underwear, his trousers drying on a bush. "Let's see if this gentleman would be interested in going back south," the pilot said as he landed the chopper on the riverbank.

Jennings motioned to the alien to head for home and the young Mexican man signaled that he would when his pants dried.

"He may go back and he may not," Jennings said as he steered the rising helicopter downriver. On a return trip a half hour later, the pilot saw the man standing in the same spot.

Bomb scare device turns out to be radio

DE KALB, Texas (AP) — A bomb squad from Arkansas found a harmless transistor radio today in a duffle bag which had been left at the rear of the Bank of De Kalb in an apparent extortion attempt, authorities said.

A four-man team from the Army arsenal at Pine Bluff, Ark., about 180 miles away, were first going to blow up the device which was supposed to have two pounds of explosives in it.

However, the team then took several X-rays and determined no explosives were inside the bag. A team member then carefully opened it to find the radio. The entire operation lasted about a half hour.

An employee arriving to open the bank found the duffle bag with a chain around it and a small antenna protruding from it. A walkie-talkie with its antenna extended and a note were next to the bag, law enforcement officers said.

A voice over the walkie-talkie suddenly told the employee to pick up the duffle bag and fasten it around his neck.

The note said in part: "There is a rifle with a silencer pointed at you. Do what it says and you will live. Lock the chain around you and do what the note says."

Instead the employee fled and notified authorities.

Police evacuated about 15 people from the bank and a small clinic nearby. The FBI, Texas Rangers and state troopers aided local and county law enforcement authorities in the investigation.

An all-points police bulletin issued shortly after the bag was found sought a white van. The van was later found in Idabel, Okla., about 30 miles to the north.

Highland rapist belived captured

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A man chased down by 15 policemen and a tracking dog after a Labor Day rape was accused of being the "Highland rapist" who terrorized a local neighborhood for 10 months, police said.

The special police team used a tracking dog to hunt down the man, identified as Danny G. Goodson, 33, an unemployed roofer and former resident of the city's Highland section.

"We feel pretty sure at this time this subject is what is known as — quote — the Highland rapist," Capt. Sam Burns, chief of detectives, said Monday.

Police said Goodson was undergoing questioning.

The Highland rapist terrorized an eight-block area of the residential neighborhood. He is blamed for at least eight rapes since November, 1980 — including an 11-year-old girl kidnapped from a slumber party and an 83-year-old woman.

In the attack early Monday, a woman in her 20s was raped by a man wearing gloves and a ski mask and wielding a screwdriver. Her 5-year-old son, asleep in the room, was not injured, police said.

Goodson, who lives in north Shreveport, was booked with four counts of rape, one of attempted rape, one of burglary and two counts of attempted aggravated burglary, city police said.

He may be booked later with at least four more counts of rape, said detective Sgt. Andy Franks.

Police in nearby Bossier City said they are also investigating Goodson in connection with rapes in that city.

Police notified a special team of about 15 officers after a rape call in the Highland area about 1 a.m. Monday, said Franks. He said the team — including women, plainclothesmen and a tracking dog — has been watching the neighborhood on weekends for months.

Minutes after the rape, a man pried open the bedroom window to a nearby house. He fled, however, when a woman inside began screaming.

Learning experiences aren't confined to classrooms

WASHINGTON, D.C. — As a new school year begins, the nation's largest organization of teachers and other education employees has some tips for parents.

Parents can give their children a great boost for school, says the National Education Association, by treating everyday home and community activities as learning experiences.

Young children, for example, are natural talkers. As they talk, they are practicing — learning words — perhaps the most basic skill of all. Listen to them, but just listening is not enough. Talk with your children.

By reading to children — or having them read — parents can create opportunities for children to use new words. There is no firm rule on what to read. Read what your children like or what you think will please them. It's even possible to begin a provocative conversation by reading the back of a cereal box!

Make reading a family project. Have older children share some of their favorite stories with the younger ones. Share your favorite stories, too.

When you read to young children, convert pictures into words. The more words children use at home, the more they will benefit from school.

You can also stimulate your children's interests by letting them choose items in stores — items that will require them to read labels, compare prices. Have them estimate the cost of fruits and vegetables sold by the pound. Older children might keep track of what you buy and estimate the total bill.

Encourage children to start a collection — a hobby that teachers say is a good learning experience. Anything from baseball cards to stamps will do.

If your child says, "See this pretty rock," you can stimulate learning by responding, "Have you seen another one like this? Let's see how many different ones we can find. Do you know the names of some of the rocks?"

While collecting rocks, your child will learn both order and variation — important components of knowledge. As a follow-up, take your child to the library. Find a book about rocks. This helps the child learn library skills in a meaningful way.

Autumn is an excellent time for outdoor learning. Parents can help children appreciate the environment by encouraging discussions about the changing colors of leaves, temperature changes, various kinds of trees. Take a walk with your children. Start a leaf collection.

When children can relate these kinds of out-of-school experiences to what they learn at school, school has more meaning for them.

A crucial factor in your child's success in school, teachers believe, is your attitude about the school and education in general. Children do better when they understand that the home and school are working hand-in-hand. Become involved. Get to know the teacher, counselor, secretary, bus driver and other school staff.

Ask questions: "How can I help?" "Do you need volunteers?" "Should I help my child with homework? How much?" Let the teacher know about your special interests or hobbies. You may be an excellent resource for the class.

Stress the value of education — what it means to you and your children.

Journey to lost father dead-ends

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have two fine grandsons, 20 and 22. Their mother (my daughter) divorced their father (I'll call him George) when the boys were 2 and 4. She married a wonderful man who raised the boys like they were his own flesh and blood. The boys loved him, but they always knew that he was their stepfather. There was no contact between the boys and their real father after the divorce.

Anyway, the boys were curious about their "real" father, so about a month ago I found out where he was living and I went to his house.

I rang the bell and a young woman came to the door. She said she was his wife, and when I told her who I was, she said George wasn't home but she would have him call me.

Well, he never called, so last Sunday when the boys were over I asked them how they would like to meet their real father. They were very excited about it, so we drove over. The boys sat in the car and I rang the bell. George came to the door, and when I tried to tell him that his sons were in the car and wanted to meet him, all he said was, "Please get off my property!" Then he shut the door.

Abby, how could a father do this to his own sons after not seeing them for 18 years?

Now I feel guilty because the boys were hurt. Their mother doesn't know anything about this visit. Please give your opinion of this matter.

GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: If the "boys" (who, by the way are men at 20 and 22) wanted to meet their real father, they should have had a third party contact him to find out whether he wanted to meet them. I agree, it's hard to understand how a father would have no interest in meeting his own sons, but for them to have gone unannounced and uninvited to his home was an invasion of his privacy. Even though you meant well, Grandma, you used poor judgment.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you advised GEORGE FROM GEORGIA to offer his collection of interesting old letters to family or friends instead of torching them. But what if there still are no takers?

'Health food' muffin recipe taken from state fair entry

SNACKTIME FARE

Raisin Muffins Milk

RAISIN MUFFINS

My friend Veronica Petta developed this "health food" hot bread from one that was a winner at a state fair.

- 1 cup raisins
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1 large egg
- 1/4 cup honey
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 1 cup whole wheat flour
- 1 cup regular oats
- 1 cup all-bran cereal
- 1 teaspoon baking soda

In a 1 1/2-quart saucepan, simmer raisins and water until raisins are plump — about 5 minutes. Cool. Drain, saving liquid. In an electric blender at low speed whirl together the drained raisins, 1/4 cup of the saved liquid, the egg, honey and buttermilk only until raisins are coarsely chopped — a matter of seconds. In a large bowl, with a wooden spoon, thoroughly stir together the whole wheat flour, oats, bran and baking soda; add the raisin mixture and stir only until the dry ingredients are moistened. Turn into greased muffin-pan cups (each 2 1/2 by 1 inch and holding 1-3rd cup), filling about 3/4 full. (Do not use paper or foil baking cups as liners.) Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — about 35 minutes. With a small metal spatula, loosen edges and remove. Serve hot. Makes 12.

Note: Veronica adds the leftover raisin liquid to orange juice.

societies collect personal and business letters, snapshots, scrapbooks, postcards, memorabilia, diaries, etc. The lives of ordinary people are attracting more genealogists, social historians and other researchers than ever before. Many of our best stories lie forgotten in attic boxes. Most will be destroyed.

So please tell people to call a librarian or archivist before deciding what's not worth saving. They'd love to be snowed with telephone inquiries.

All that clutter is not mold.

DEAR DAVE: Pity you'll never know how much history will be preserved as a result of your letter. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: My sister died last week. Now the question: Is the husband of my deceased sister still my brother-in-law? I say that he is no longer any relation to me, but I seem to have some opposition to this. What do you say? Thanks a lot.

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: The husband of your deceased sister is now your former brother-in-law.

ARRIVES FOR TALKS. Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, left, is escorted by Secretary of State Alexander Haig on Begin's arrival in Washington Tuesday. Begin is scheduled to meet with President Ronald Reagan today, their first meeting. (AP Laserphoto)

Rescuer unsure of leap until landing

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A Coast Guard engineer who leaped into a runaway speedboat to rescue two injured men said Tuesday he wasn't sure where his jump would land him until he came down in the cockpit.

"I had second thoughts on the way across, but it was too late," said Petty Officer 2nd Class Bill Jennings, 26, of Safford, Ariz.

Jennings vaulted across about five feet of water into the motorboat from his Coast Guard utility boat, then grabbed the throttle and gained control of the speedboat.

The drama started Sunday night when a 26-foot racing boat, cruising at about 40 mph, struck a buoy in the Houston Ship Channel near Galveston Bay. Both Bill Dreyer, 39, and Jim Walker, 43, were knocked unconscious.

"When we got there the boat was turning in a tight circle, about 20 feet at about 20 mph," said Petty Officer 3rd Class Patrick Haley, who was at the helm of the 41-foot Coast Guard boat dispatched to the scene.

He said he could see both men in the smaller boat.

"One was moving a little bit, but he was just conscious enough to hold himself on the boat," Haley said. "We first tried to throw our mooring lines into their screws (propellers) to stop it, but we couldn't get it."

Jennings made his move when the runaway boat struck the Coast Guard's rescue boat broadside and turned away.

News in brief

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — The parents of a 15-month old girl suffering from hydrocephalus say they will try to reverse an Oregon Court of Appeals decision that the baby must undergo brain surgery.

Arnold and Donna Jensen of Brownsville, both members of the Church of the First Born, believe in the healing power of prayer and do not see doctors or use medication.

The appellate court upheld a lower court's decision ordering the brain surgery for Sara Jensen. The three-judge panel decided to postpone the operation until Sept. 15 to allow the child's parents time to appeal.

Hydrocephalus is an accumulation of fluid on the brain.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A one-month stay of execution has been granted to Thomas Lee "Sonny" Hays after his mother pleaded before a federal judge that Hays is mentally incompetent.

Hays, who has said he does not want to appeal his death sentence, was scheduled to be executed next Monday and become the first person in the United States to die by legal drug injection. He was convicted of murdering a Muskogee cobbler in March 1977.

Iola Hays told U.S. District Judge Luther Bohannon her 49-year-old son had been committed to state mental institutions "three or four times" in the late 1960s and early 1970s. Bohannon issued the stay after the hearing on Tuesday.

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — An indefinite halt has been ordered against using small explosions to look for oil in the Beaufort Sea because the activity might threaten the fall migration of the bowhead whale.

The order will affect only exploration allowed under state permit, and will not affect federal permits issued for exploration farther offshore in the same area, near a whaling village about 75 miles from the Canadian border on Alaska's northern coast.

North Slope borough officials threatened to go to court if the state did not halt the exploration, in which sound waves from small explosions are used to form a picture of underground rock formations.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home mortgage interest rates hit another record high in August, rising some 38 percent above August 1980 as sales of new single-family houses rebounded slightly in July, according to new data.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board said Tuesday that average rates on conventional 25-year mortgages were up in August for the sixth straight month, reaching 17.27 percent, compared with 12.52 percent a year earlier.

The increase, up 31 percent from July, reflected high interest rates generally in the economy and the reduced flow of money into savings and loans, the primary source of home mortgages, the board said.

July figures showed new single-family houses selling at an annual rate of 420,000 units, 33 percent below the pace of July 1980, when the housing industry was pulling out of a recession. Seasonally adjusted, July's sales were 2.4 percent above June's.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Expiration of the law giving the president standing gasoline rationing authority could leave the nation without the ability to deal with a major cutoff of foreign oil, the Congressional Budget Office says.

If supplies fell as much as 2 million barrels a day below demand, the budget office said Tuesday, higher fuel prices alone would not be enough to hold down consumption and some form of rationing could be required.

The standby authority law enacted after the 1973 Arab oil embargo expires Sept. 30. The Reagan administration, saying a free market can better handle a supply disruption, has urged Congress not to renew it.

The budget office did not endorse any legislative action but suggested that Congress consider establishing emergency powers tailored to the size of the supply disruption.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says the Soviet Union's failure to give formal notification about the number of troops involved in maneuvers near the Polish border raises "serious questions" about its interest in European stability.

State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said Tuesday the Soviets violated provisions of the Helsinki agreement requiring prior notification when military maneuvers involved more than 25,000 troops.

Fischer, who said officials do not believe the maneuvers are a preparation for an invasion of Poland, said the Reagan administration learned from a Tass dispatch that 100,000 troops are involved in the Warsaw Pact exercises that are scheduled to end Saturday.

"We deeply regret that the Soviet Union did not provide this information in its original notification and that it has not yet officially replied to our inquiries on this question," Fischer said.

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bruce Jenner has acted in his second episode as a special guest star on NBC's "CHiPs" with no indication whether Erik Estrada will return to the series, a spokesman for MGM Television says.

And the 1976 Olympic gold medalist is targeted for a third episode starting this week, MGM spokesman Bill Barron said Tuesday.

"They'll start the new episode on Thursday," said Barron, "and as of now there's no rewrite that would put Erik into the show."

MGM hired Jenner after the studio became embroiled in a legal dispute with Estrada.

Larry Wilcox and Robert Pine also star in the series about motorcycle officers of the California Highway Patrol.

Negotiations continued between representatives of the actor and MGM.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., celebrated his 81st birthday by doing his job, something he believes too many people his age are forced away from by unfair laws.

Pepper chaired a three-hour hearing Tuesday in which people over 60 testified how working is important to them.

Pepper is the oldest member of the House and chairman of the Aging Committee. He used his birthday to announce he is beginning a new campaign "to once and for all wipe out the last destructive vestige" of age discrimination in the workplace.

Singer Pearl Bailey, 63, concurred during the hearing.

"If we were to say who is to stop working, we would have to start right at the top. President Reagan is 70, you know," she said.

Pepper says he wants to pass a law making it illegal for employers to retire anyone solely because of age.

NEW YORK (AP) — Barbara Walters says she feels "very good" after signing a new five-year contract with ABC after turning down offers from NBC and CBS.

ABC would not disclose terms of the new contract, but it was learned it is worth more than the $5 million that drew her away from NBC five years ago.

"I feel very good about today. I'm very happy to be able to stay at ABC," Miss Walters said in an interview. "I know the people and like the people here."

A source at CBS said Miss Walters was offered the first female spot on "60 Minutes" and the host role on CBS News' new afternoon show, "Up To The Minute."

Miss Walters began her career as a writer with CBS. She became one of the anchors of the "Today" show on NBC before being lured away by ABC.

City plans to challenge election order

NEW YORK (AP) — The city will ask a U.S. Supreme Court justice to overturn a federal court order halting Thursday's primary election in three of New York's boroughs, officials say.

The primaries were blocked by an order issued late Tuesday by a three-judge panel in response to lawsuits alleging the city discriminated against minority groups in drawing up new district lines for City Council seats.

The injunction was designed to block primary elections of council seats in the boroughs of Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx. But the order also blocked balloting on nominations for mayor and comptroller.

The order did not cover the city's other two boroughs, Queens and Staten Island, and it was not clear if voting would go ahead there if the court order remained in effect Thursday.

Tom Goldstein, a press secretary for Mayor Edward Koch, said the city's corporation counsel planned to ask Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall today to stay the order.

Koch is seeking nomination in Thursday's primary on both the Republican and Democratic ballots.

The City Council decided on the new council district lines in May. The new boundaries were necessary because of shifts in population to Staten Island and Queens, that showed up in the 1980 census.

Among the plaintiffs were the state's Black and Puerto Rican Legislative Caucus, the Puerto Rican Legal Defense and Educational Fund, and city councilman Gilberto Gerena-Valentin of the Bronx.
