Service MDs Discourage Smokers

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top doctors of the Army, Navy and Air Force have recommended steps aimed at discouraging smoking among the 2.7 million men and women in uniform it was learned today.

There would be no attempt to prohibit cigarette smoking, The Associated Press was told, but the military surgeon general proposed:

1. An educational program intended to point out to all service people the potentially harmful effects of smoking.

2. An end to service participation in what one surgeon general called "promotional schemes." Under this heading, he included gifts of cigarettes to military hospitals.

The surgeons general met Wednesday with Dr. Shirley C. Fisk, the Defense Department's health director. They discussed the Public Health Service's recent report linking cigarette smoking with lung cancer and various other life-shortening diseases.

Afterward, the Defense Department said, "No decisions were made on possible actions concerning the matter" and that the subject would be studied further.

This gave the impression the meeting ended inconclusively. But Fisk told The AP in emphatic tones that it was a conclusive session and that he expected a common policy to emerge for all the services.

He declined to go into detail pending an expected formal announcement.

RFK Claim Is Refuted

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—President Sukarno declared tonight Indonesia will continue its hostile confrontation policy against Malaysia.

"Onward: No retreat!" The president said, repeating a slogan that hostility toward Malaysia would continue until the new country is crushed.

Sukarno's remarks came only hours after he and Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy issued statements saying there would be a cease-fire along the Malaysia-Indonesian border and that Indonesia would work for another summit conference on the Malaysia crisis.

At the same time Information Minister Roeslan Abdulgani declared in a radio address that Sukarno's agreement for a cease-fire and to work for a new summit conference did not mean that confrontation has been terminated.

After announcement of the agreement, Kennedy flew to Bangkok, Thailand, for three hours of conferences with Thai officials. He was to go on to London to give British officials a review of his talks in Asia.

The attorney general said he hoped the foreign ministers' meeting would lead to a new summit conference of the principals in the Malaysia dispute—Indonesian President Sukarno, Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman of Malaysia and Philippine President Diosdado Macapagal.

However, some senior diplomats in Jakarta were not overly optimistic that another summit conference would produce a final solution to the crisis resulting from federation of the former British territories in Southeast Asia and Sukarno's announced determination to smash it.

Indonesian Foreign Minister Subandrio, appearing at a joint news conference with Kennedy, said the cease-fire in the undeclared guerrilla war in Borneo probably could be implemented within a week. He implied that Indonesian regular army troops would prevent raiders crossing from Indonesian Borneo into the Malaysian jungles of Sabah and Sarawak states.

There was no immediate comment from the British Embassy. Britain is pledged to defend Malaysia, where it retains bases, and several thousand British and British-hired Gurkha troops are in North Borneo. Sukarno, ambitious for Indonesia to be the dominant power in Southeast Asia, contends that Malaysia is a device to preserve Britain's colonial influence.

The Philippines also has opposed Malaysia but only in the diplomatic field and without the threats of violence that came from Jakarta. Philippine opposition is based on that nation's claim to Sabah, the former territory of British North Borneo.

Kennedy said Sukarno, Macapagal and Rahman all had agreed they were ready for new talks without preconditions. But he said all three also had agreed that new three-power talks were likely to fail unless a cease-fire was implemented.

One precondition that was dropped was Rahman's demand that Indonesia and the Philippines recognize his country. Kennedy said all three leaders had agreed not to let this point interfere with a conference, and Subandrio said it would be the chief question for summit discussion.

SEES DRAWBACK TO DIGGING NEW CANAL—Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif., senior House member of the Senate-House Atomic Committee, points to a globe as he discussed the digging of a new canal to link the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. Holifield said use of nuclear explosives to blast the canal seems technically feasible. He cited two major drawbacks — the nuclear test ban treaty, which would require the agreement of Russia, and finding a politically stable country to dig the canal in. (AP Wirephoto)

Tax-Cut Bill Ok Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee aims to complete work and vote final approval today of the $11 billion tax cut bill. Debate by the full Senate would begin next week.

President Johnson has urged quick passage of the measure, saying it will help rocket the economy to record heights this year.

The committee vaulted a high hurdle Wednesday, approving unanimously the rate reductions for individuals that had been written in the bill originally passed by the House.

The senators made only one change. They adopted President Johnson's proposal to put the new 14 per cent withholding rate into effect as soon as the measure becomes law.

The House version, which contemplated enactment in 1963, would have dropped the withholding rate from 18 per cent to 15 per cent in 1964, and then to 14 per cent in 1965.

After it became obvious that reductions could not become legally effective until perhaps March, Johnson asked that the two-step drop in the withholding rate be junked and the 14 per cent rate be established immediately.

The total cut for individuals is estimated at $9 billion when the measure takes full effect.

The individual rate cuts in the bill would mean a tax cut averaging about 19 per cent for all taxpayers. It would be somewhat more than this for those in the bottom and top brackets, less through the middle ranges.

Two-thirds of the rate cuts would be effective for 1964, with the reductions made retroactive to Jan. 1, and one-third in 1965.

A new range of 14 to 70 per cent would be substituted for the 20 to 91 per cent rates of present law.

As it passed the House, the bill called for over-all tax cuts for individuals and corporations totaling $11.1 billion. Congressional experts said this now had been boosted to about $11.5 billion by a series of changes made by the Finance Committee.

Judge Calls More Jury Prospects

Chattanooga (AP) — Fifteen more prospects were summoned today for questioning by a federal judge who is determined to speed selection of a jury for James R. Hoffa's jury-tampering trial.

U.S. Dist. Judge Frank Wilson made it clear he wants to wind up the jury selection by nightfall Friday.

Hoffa, Teamsters Union president, and five others are accused of trying to influence jurors in his 1962 conspiracy trial at Nashville. That case ended in a mistrial with the jury deadlocked.

Wilson took over questioning of prospective jurors—over vigorous defense protests — Wednesday in an attempt to speed the proceedings. When court adjourned for the day, he commented: "We've now gone three days and not a juror has been selected."

At that point, 10 men and a woman had been qualified by the judge subject to challenges for no specific cause. The defense had 10 such challenges left and the government four.

Defendants besides Hoffa are Thomas Ewing Parks, Nashville; Nicholas J. Tweel, Huntington, W. Va.; Larry Campbell, Detroit; Allen Dorfman, Chicago; and Ewing King, Nashville.

Barry Says Rocky Is Demo Echo

By WALTER R. MEARS

With Goldwater in New Hampshire (AP)—Campaigning Sen. Barry Goldwater said today New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller is a Republican echo of President Johnson on a surprising number of points.

The Arizona senator said he is "talking about anybody who sounds too much like a Democratic candidate" when he insists the voters should have "a choice, not an echo" in 1964.

"I'm surprised at the number of points that Gov. Rockefeller agrees with and would support," Goldwater told a news conference at Laconia.

The senator said if he wins the Republican presidential nomination, and sees Red China admitted to the United Nations, he "would be inclined" to campaign for U.S. withdrawal.

"I don't think it would be a safe place for us," he said.

Goldwater scoffed at Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's pledge to defend Communist Cuba against any invader.

Rift May Speed Passage Of Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — House passage of a civil rights bill by Feb. 7 appeared a strong possibility today as the result of a revolt in the House Rules Committee.

A bipartisan majority of the committee is preparing to seize control and cut off hearings on the bill in time to get it passed before the House takes its annual Lincoln birthday recess.

The revolt is aimed at Chairman Howard W. Smith, D-Va., leader of the Southern forces opposing the bill, who had planned to continue the hearings until the end of January.

Smith headed off any attempt to end the hearings Wednesday by hastily adjourning them for the day while his chief adversaries were absent plotting strategy. But a showdown today appeared inevitable.

Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., leader of the forces trying to speed action on the bill, said Wednesday night he is prepared to force a vote on ending the hearings at today's session. Bolling is counting on the support of the committee's Republicans in his maneuver. There are 10 Democrats and 5 Republicans on the committee but 4 of the Democrats are from the South.

Pressure on the Rules Committee to move the bill quickly is coming from both the Democratic and Republican leaders in the House. The Democrats are feeling the heat from President Johnson and the Republicans have decided they would be in a better position to hold Lincoln Day rallies if they had helped pass a civil rights bill.

Bolling has told Smith of his plan in hopes it won't be necessary to use force to cut off the hearings.

House Group May Probe Bakers Deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. H.R. Gross has called for a separate House investigation into Robert G. Baker's business affairs in the wake of Senate testimony that President Johnson once received a free stereo set from a Baker associate.

"This scandal has so many ramificiations that it would appear the House should set up a special committee to examine some of the tangents of the Baker probe," the Iowa Republican told the House Wednesday.

The Baker investigation is being conducted by the Senate Rules Committee, which plans to make public today personal financial statements filed by the former secretary to the Senate Democrats in connection with applications for bank loans.

Baker, a protege of Johnson when the President was the Senate Democratic leader, resigned his $19,600-a-year post under fire last Oct. 7. The Senate committee is investigating whether the 35-year-old former page boy from Pickens, S.C., engaged in activities that conflicted with his official duties.

Baker has a law office in Washington and has been in the capital throughout the inquiry, as far as is publicly known, but has refused to talk to newsmen.

Johnson's name was injected into the investigation by Don B. Reynolds, a local insurance man who said his firm lists Baker as a vice president.

Gross said the proposed House investigation should include "the activities of one Matthew M. McCloskey, contractor for the construction of many federally financed buildings and bridges, including a badly defective Veterans Administration hospital in Boston, Mass."

McCloskey, a Philadelphia contractor, had been treasurer of the Democratic National Committee for eight years when the late President John F. Kennedy named him ambassador to Ireland in June 1962. McCloskey is giving up the post to return to fund raising for the Democratic party.

Wednesday the Washington Evening Star disclosed that the Justice Department has started an investigation to determine if illegal collusion was involved in the handling of the D.C. Stadium construction project in Washington. The McCloskey firm built the stadium.

In his testimony to the Rules Committee, Reynolds said he paid $4,000 to Baker and $1,500 to William N. McLeod Jr., former clerk of the House District Committee, for helping him get the construction performance bond on the stadium.

Reynolds said the stadium project had been discussed at a meeting in 1960 attended by him, Baker, McLeod, McCloskey and Rep. John L. McMillan, D-S.C., chairman of the House District Committee.

Cuba Aids Krush Against China

MOSCOW (AP)—Prime Minister Fidel Castro has put Cuba behind Premier Khrushchev in his ideological dispute with Communist China following a Soviet pledge to pay more than $2.6 billion for Cuban sugar in the next six years.

Castro's support of the Kremlin was proclaimed in a joint Cuban-Soviet communique issued Wednesday night to mark the end of the Cuban leaders' 10-day visit to Moscow. Castro is with Khrushchev on a hunting holiday in the Ukraine.

Castro praised Moscow's policy of peaceful coexistence, called the treaty limiting nuclear testing "a step forward peace and disarmament" and supported the Soviet Communist party's measures "to remove the existing differences and strengthen the unity and cohesion of the ranks of the international Communist movement."

The statement appeared to end Castro's flirtation with Red China, which takes opposite positions on all these key issues.

Like Communist China, Cuba has refused to sign the Moscow-supported test-ban treaty. This has annoyed the Soviets in view of their heavy economic aid to the Caribbean nation.

While the communique gave no specific Castro pledge to sign the treaty, the Cuban government praised "the successes achieved by the Soviet Union in the struggle for ending nuclear tests and the agreement to keep nuclear weapons off vehicles in orbit."

Khrushchev renewed his promise to protect Cuba from any U.S. invasion "with all means at its disposal." The last such promise was made several weeks ago at a Kremlin ceremony marking the fifth anniversary of the Cuban revolution on New Year's Day.

The joint communique also endorsed Panama's efforts to seek revision or abrogation of the 1903 Panama Canal Treaty and denounced the "aggressive policies" of the United States.

However, Castro added his government is prepared to reestablish "good neighbor relations" with the United States on "the basis of peaceful coexistence of states with different social systems."

Name Price Of Considering Pact

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH

GENEVA (AP) — The Soviet Union said today the West must scrap its proposed multilateral nuclear force before there can be any agreement to stop the spread of nuclear weapons.

The Soviet disarmament negotiator, Semyon K. Tsarapkin, told newsmen "the multilateral force has to be cleared away" before East and West can reach an agreement on President Johnson's proposal Tuesday to bar nuclear weapons from nations that don't have them. Johnson worded his proposal so that the nuclear force the United States has proposed for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization would be exempt.

Tsarapkin said his government was studying Johnson's five-point arms proposal and would reply to it in due course.

The Soviet reaction to the proposal to stop the spread of nuclear weapons surprised no one. Tsarapkin in his speech at the resumption of the 17-nation disarmament conference Tuesday made a similar proposal, but he called specifically for it to apply to the multilateral force.

Western delegations at this stage are certain to reject any formal Soviet demand for abandonment of the NATO nuclear force. But there were some indications that if the Soviet Union accepted genuine and far-reaching disarmament measures together with control and inspection procedures demanded by the West, the United States would consider scrapping the multilateral force.

Many Western officials believe the costly multilateral force would be made obsolete by the new security that NATO members would obtain from such an unprecedented disarmament agreement.

KENNEDY MEDAL TO BE ISSUED—This is the John F. Kennedy Memorial Medal which will be issued. It was designed by sculptor Ralph J. Menconi of Pleasantville, N. Y., and is sponsored by Presidential Art Medals of Englewood, Ohio. The medal was to have been the late President's 1964 campaign medal. It was being developed in conjunction with the Democratic National Committee and the White House and was near completion in November last year when the President was assassinated. The reverse of the medal depicts the President's service to the public: naval service, naval insignia and PT109; seal of Massachusetts, service in the government as a congressman and senator, and Presidential Seal, service as President of the United States. Experts Mum On Extent Of Ruby's Mental Examination

By RAYMOND HOLBROOK

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The time, place and extent of the psychiatric examination to be given Jack Ruby, slayer of accused presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald, remain a professional secret.

Dist. Judge Joe B. Brown named Dr. R. L. Stubblefield of the Southwestern Medical School in Dallas, Dr. John T. Holbrook of Beverly Hills Sanitarium and Clinic in Dallas, and Dr. Milton Towler of the University of Texas Medical School at Galveston as the three psychiatrists to examine the 52-year-old night club operator.

Judge Brown said it would be up to the three psychiatrists to conduct the tests and that he did not know specifically what the examination would include.

"I am under instructions from Judge Brown to make no announcement as to what the tests will include, where they will be given or when they will be given," Dr. Stubblefield said late Wednesday.

Earlier, Dr. Holbrook said he did not know when or where the tests would be held. Asked if they would be extensive, he said "I hope so."

Shortly after Judge Brown announced the Tuesday appointments, Dr. Towler said in Galveston he had agreed to examine Ruby "from a neurological standpoint."

Ruby's trial is scheduled for Feb. 17 in Dallas and his lawyers say they will attempt to prove that he was temporarily insane when he shot down Oswald before a nationwide television audience in the city jail Nov. 24. The defense is seeking to have the trial transferred to another city and Judge Brown will begin hearings on that motion Feb. 10.

The judge said there is no legal precedent in Texas for appointing court psychiatrists and that he had no funds with which to pay them. He also said that the reports from the psychiatrists to the court will be subject to examination and argument by attorneys for both sides and that the final decision as to whether Ruby is sane or insane will be made by a jury.

All three of the psychiatrists are Texas born and Texas educated.

Dr. Stubblefield, 44, is a graduate of John Tarleton College, the University of Texas, and the university's medical school at Galveston.

Before coming to Dallas, he was on the staff of the University of Colorado School of Medicine in Denver.

Dr. Holbrook, 40, was graduated from Texas Christian University and Southwestern Medical School.

Dr. Towler, 53, is a 1935 graduate of the University of Texas Medical School in Galveston. He served in the Army during World War II and since has served as consultant to the medical corps of both the Army and the Air Force.

Reports Raft Sighted In Search Area

HONOLULU (AP)—The Coast Guard launched a search Wednesday night for a raft that was reported sighted in the area where an Air Force Globemaster with nine crewmen aboard vanished near Johnston Island on Jan. 2.

The Air Force crewmen of an Air Force cargo plane reported sighting the raft. They said they could see one man, standing up and waving, in the orange and yellow raft.

The sighting was in an area 250 miles northwest of Johnston Island, the same general area where the Air Force plane disappeared two weeks ago with a crew of eight and a Navy enlisted man and a corpse aboard.

The Navy man was escorting the body of a comrade home from Tokyo.

Authorities said they knew of no other raft likely to be in the area.

Three Navy planes were dispatched to the area and ships were also reported steaming toward the scene.

The sighting came on the same day that the Air Force had officially declared the crew of the missing plane dead.

An extensive search for the plane's crew was called off Jan. 10. It cost about $1.5 million, with 70 planes logging nearly 4,000 flying hours during the search.

Successful Saturn Launch Will Make US The Champ

By HOWARD BENEDICT

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) —World leadership in rocket power may be the prize next Monday when the United States plans to launch the Saturn 1 on its first two-stage test flight.

If all goes well, the rocket will lift a 37,700-pound satellite nearly three times heavier than any previous payload.

The satellite, mostly dead weight with no scientific value, will dwarf the largest payloads orbited by the Russians — Sputniks 7 and 8 which weighed 14,292 pounds each. The heaviest American space payload weighed 10,200 pounds.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration today disclosed details of the Saturn 1, which has been on a launching pad here since last August, waiting out months of checkout and several weeks technical delay.

The rocket stands 164 feet tall and fully fueled weighs 562 tons. The Statue of Liberty is 151 feet and weighs 227.5 tons.

The first stage, 21.5 feet in diameter, has an eight-engine powerplant which will generate 1.5 million pounds of thrust about 34 million horsepower.

This is designed to lift the rocket above the earth's atmosphere. At an altitude of 48 miles, the real key to Saturn 1's power flashes to action: a second stage with six engines that burn liquid hydrogen and produce 90,000 pounds of thrust. Hydrogen delivers 40 per cent more punch than fuels like the high-grade kerosene in the first stage. It generates a tremendous kick when ignited in the vacuum of space.

The second stage will be flown for the first time Monday. Four earlier flights used only the first stage.

Experts believe a good test will give the United States a booster lead over Russia. Best estimates place the thrust of the big Soviet space rockets at between 1 and 1.2 million pounds. There is no evidence of their progress with liquid hydrogen.

Dear Abby...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We need your help in settling an argument. What is the proper way to get a waiter's attention? Is it all right to strike your glass with a knife? How about snapping your fingers? Also, is it bad manners to whistle a short and not too loud whistle?

DON and DORA

DEAR D. and D.: Striking ones glass would startle and annoy everyone in the restaruant, including the waiter. Snapping the fingers is for dogs, and whistling is for the birds. Simply say, "Waiter, please."

• • •

DEAR ABBY: How does a 21-year-old girl tell her own father she doesn't want him at her wedding? I want my mother there (she is a saint) but my father makes a fool of himself every time he gets near liquor and I know what would happen if he were at my wedding. I want a church wedding with all my friends and relatives, and my oldest brother could walk me down the aisle. I know I sound selfish, Abby, but I also know that I will not be deprived of the kind of wedding I want because of my father. And I can't take the chance of having him get roaring drunk and ruining everything. What would you do?

IMPASSE

DEAR IMPASSE: I would tell my father candidly of my doubts and fears, and then, if he promised to stay sober on that day, I would let him walk me down the aisle. If we let people know we expect the best — they rarely disappoint us. Big brother can be waiting in the wings if Dad lets you down. But I'd bet on Dad this time.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am 15, an honor student, sing in the church choir and am considered pretty. My parents are the best in the world, with one exception. They never had a heart-to-heart talk with me, Abby, I know this is hard to believe, but everything I learned about sex I had to learn on my own. Because there was no mention of this subject at home, I was too ashamed to bring it up although there were so many things I wanted to know. The invisible wall grew thicker between my parents and me and I became a very curious, foolish and susceptible girl. From what I have said, you can guess that I would make very easy prey — and I did. I don't know if I am pregnant or not. I just pray to God I'm not. I know of no human being other than you to confide in. Abby, I love my parents and I am not blaming them for what I did. I brought it all on myself and deserve whatever happens. I am only writing this as a plea to parents, especially mothers, to get to know their teen-agers before it is too late. God bless you, Abby, for printing this, if you do.

Smith Vows To Conserve State Funds

AUSTIN (AP)—In announcing as a candidate for a second term, Lt. Gov. Preston Smith predicted Wednesday the legislature will undergo pressure to increase state spending.

"If this happens," he said, "it will mean a tax increase. This we should make all reasonable efforts to avoid."

Smith, from Lubbock, served six years in the Texas House and six years in the Senate before his election as lieutenant governor in 1962. He is 51.

In a formal statement Smith urged efforts to prevent boosting state spending above the $3.2 billion for the current biennium. He also mentioned economy measures taken by President Johnson and said:

"A dollar saved at the state house or courthouse adds just as much to the private economy as one saved at Washington."

To ease spending problems he proposed legislation to tap additional revenue sources for city governments, create special opportunities for young persons and permit establishment of junior colleges financed by more than one county.

It is proper to work for better senior colleges but "80 or 90 per cent of our young people will not be able to get a college degree," Smith said.

"The state-aided community college, emphasizing low fees, economical plans and vocational courses is the best vehicle for giving these young citizens at least a part of the training they need to get and hold good jobs."

Colonists at Berkeley Plantation, on the banks of Virginia's James River, observed a day of Thanksgiving on Dev. 4, 1619—three years before the Pilgrims held theirs.

MARLENE COIFFURE—Ultimately feminine, this new Marlene coiffure was designed by the NHCA for the ruffle revival, the frothy chiffon blouses, rippled collars and soft suits in couture collections for spring and summer. An updated coiffure, it is reminiscent of the Marlene Dietrich look in the Blue Angel, and will be featured in salons across the nation during National Beauty Salon Week, Feb. 9-15, dedicated to more beautiful women. Beguilingly ruffled, yet intuitively aware of the head shape beneath, this coiffure obtains its custom fit from superb hair shaping.

Grapefruit Bowl Frances

6 grapefruit, 3 pink and 3 white
1 can (12 ounces) unsweetened pineapple juice (1½ cups)
Candied ginger
Powdered (not confectioner's) sugar

Pare grapefruit so no white membrane remains; with a sharp knife cut away sections from dividing membrane. Drain off juice for other use. Add chilled pineapple juice to grapefruit sections. Wash 3 to 6 small pieces of candied ginger under hot water to remove sugar coating and soften; slice into very thin strips. Garnish grapefruit with ginger strips. Pass a small bowl of powdered sugar for those who wish to sweeten the compote. Makes 8 servings.

When a recipe says "Coat meat with seasoned flour" and the recipe is for stew, it's safe to use ¼ cup flour, 1 teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon white pepper for two pounds of boned meat cut in two - inch pieces.

Mrs. Odom Gives Club Program

The Altrurian Club met last Friday at Martha Ann Womans Club with Mrs. J. W. Leftwich, president, presiding, and Mrs. Fred A. Grayum, hostess.

The scheduled speaker for the afternoon from The State Hospital, Big Spring, was unable to be present, so Mrs. Dewey Odom generously snowed another group of slides, with commentary, upon each.

This second trip that Mrs. Odom has taken the club on was one of great interest and beauty. Dr. Vincent Peale was director of the tour and the sight seeing seemed directed to many worthwhile places in points of history, culture or religion.

New York, London with its Mayfair Hotel and Buckingham Palace, Paris and a visit to the Louvre were included. Rome with its fabulous fountains and its cathedrals and rivers.

The scenes then skipped to Egypt to King Tut's burial trappings in the museum; the pyramids and sphynx and camels in the white glare of the desert sand. A banquet of the party in the U. S. Embassy in Cairo was one of the highlights.

On to Lebanon, Damaicus and the Holy Land. The many religious shrines and churches, marking an event in the establishment of Christian religion or the life of Christ. Slides were also made in the Alps and in other places in India, as well as panoramic shorts of Iceland with its valleys and rivers. West Germany was part of the itinerary as well as another visit to France.

Spark Late Winter Meals With Biscuits

With the hustle and bustle of holiday baking now a pleasant memory, it's time to turn to the less fancy yet still creative baking that keeps husbands and kids happy the whole winter through.

No doubt, the most popular mothers and hostesses are the ones who are always conjuring up something new and different from their mixing bowls and ovens to delight their families and friends.

Many a clever cook, doesn't have a repertoire of fabulous recipes — though many of her friends may be convinced she has. Rather, she may have several basic recipes she's learned to prepare to perfection and can vary according to the occasion and her imagination. Here's a little lesson in how you, too, can adopt this little trick easily — to provide interesting and economical menu ideas year 'round.

Fashions Will Differ For Spring

By LOUISE HICKMAN
AP Fashion Writer

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Poles-apart collections by Irene Galitzine and Federico Forquet caused a buzz of excitement Tuesday night at the Florence spring and summer fashion showings.

Galitzine had little dash, compared to her former designer Forquet. Her look was almost bulky after the trim, controlled look prevailing here. Bloused bodices and soft sashes didn't help.

Forquet's colors were the palest of the pale — watercolor greens and blues, combinations of both, beige and ecru, white, and white combined with beige.

Mock-cape coats began the Forquet showing. From a fold at the shoulder they spread out in front in a wide, flat flare, their narrow sleeves and straight backs completely concealed.

Belted and stiffly flared three-quarter coats were in grospoint wool over suits of smooth wool.

Neckline treatments were important in the Forquet collection.

Big, rolled wing collars flipped out over the wide revers or cardigan V-necks of coats or suits. Bulky straight scarves of matching fabric were looped loosely around collarless necklines.

The Galitzine collection may have been a disappointment but it wasn't a loss.

Shirred-neck sleeveless silk tubes were superb. Her long culotte-shift and tube dress in butterfly print white pique were wonderfully fresh and pretty.

Long-line, long dresses with big V-neck and center seam outlined in ruche or rustle detail were elegant. Belled princess gowns in stiff white pique or pink silk were beautifully shaped.

1 pound shrimp, about 28 to the pound
1 medium clove garlic
¼ cup butter or margarine

Add the butter and melt. Add cooked shrimp and heat rapidly, turning them in the butter. Remove garlic. Serve at once. Makes 3 servings.

Note: To cook the shrimp you may use this method — wash in cold water and drain; add to 1 pint boiling water and 1½ teaspoons salt in a saucepan. Simmer, covered, for several minutes, until all the shells turn pink and the flesh is opaque.

when you call Grandmother

...YOU DON'T EXPECT TO REACH TIMBUKTU

Naturally, when you call Grandmother's phone, that's the one you expect to get, and you do. But that's not as easy as it sounds.

Your call must work its way through all sorts of interconnections, wires, cables, switches and so forth until, finally, it picks the right phone out of some 83 million in the U.S.

Yet, out of all the possible chances for mistakes, your call goes where you sent it . . . in town or out-of-town, to Grandmother, wherever she is. This sort of reliability is the result of service improvements that keep increasing the convenience and personal value of your telephone.

Finley Isn't Talking Now

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Charles O. Finley isn't talking.

And that is the big news in baseball circles.

The surprise development came Wednesday when Finley, embattled owner of the Kansas City Athletics, and American League President Joe Cronin were found registered in the same New York hotel. If they met, it was a deep, dark secret.

Finley made himself available briefly and had only two words to say:

"No comment."

That was two words more than anyone could get out of Cronin.

His hotel phone didn't answer. And a search of the hotel failed to reveal any traces of the stocky AL prexy.

In Boston, a league spokesman was more informative. He said Cronin was in New York to talk over legal matters. He didn't say with whom. He did say it wasn't with Finley.

In Kansas City, meanwhile, it was learned that Finley hadn't been doing any talking to city officials either. Under a league ruling, Finley was denied permission to move the A's to Louisville and has until Feb. 1 to negotiate a lease with the city or face possible expulsion from the American League.

Despite all that uncertainty, the A's home office managed to conduct some business. They are working on the 1964 roster, and signed pitcher Diego Sequi and infielder George Williams. They were the first A's signed.

Presumably they signed Kansas City contracts.

The New York Yankees were the busiest club in the player market, signing infielders Pedro Gonzalez and Mike Hegan and pitchers Jack Cullen and George Schoenmaker. The Los Angeles Angeles received contracts from pitchers Don Lee, Fred Newman and Aubrey Gatewood.

Pitchers Cal Koonce and Jack Warner and outfielder Don Landrum signed with the Chicago Cubs, pitchers Tracy Stallard and Bill Wakefield with the New York Mets, second baseman Don Blasingame with the Washington Senators and pitcher Wade Blasingame with the Milwaukee Braves.

Lema Aims For Second In A Row

By DICK BARNES
Associated Press Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—"We can hit the ball at the hole and it will stick," declared golf's 1964 big money winner Tony Lema today as the $50,000 Lucky International Tournament opened at the course he played as a youngster.

Tied for second in the San Diego Open and winner of the storm battered Bing Crosby event, the 29-year-old Lema aimed for back-to-back victories after already earning $12,100 playing golf this year.

He found Harding Park sloppy at tee and green after five days of rain but generally in good shape. Although posting only a three-over-par 74 in the pro-am prelude, Lema remained among the tournament favorites.

Most of golf's big names opened play in the Lucky as the weatherman forecast an end to the big Northern California storm.

Low pro in Wednesday's warmup was Bob Rosburg, now of Portland, Ore., but another who played Harding as a youngster. He posted a 68. At 69, indicating par would take a beating, were British Open champion Bob Charles, Fred Hawkins and Al Geiberger.

Rosburg collected $500 for his individual win and Arnold Palmer got $400 for his team effort.

White To California

CANYON (AP)— Howard White, backfield coach at West Texas State for the past two years, has resigned to accept the position of assistant coach at the University of California effective Feb. 1.

White graduated from the University of Southern California in 1947, came to West Texas from New Mexico State in 1962. He formerly coached high school and junior college teams at Riverside, Calif.

John Roberts, assistant football coach at Stillwater, Okla., High School, will replace White at West Texas. Roberts, a native of Stillwater and former quarterback at Texas Tech, was on the West Texas State coaching staff in 1960 and 1961. He coached Cameron, Tex., High School in 1962.

Texas Loop Disbanded

ABILENE (AP) — The Texas Athletic Conference, formed last September by four Texas colleges, has disbanded because of its failure to attract more members.

The action was taken Wednesday at a conference meeting.

McMurry and Midwestern voted for dissolution and Tarleton State voted against. Hardin-Simmons abstained from voting although it seconded the motion of McMurry to disband.

The action ends plans for a conference track meet at Tarleton State May 8-9.

However, teams will continue to play each other where scheduled but not for championships.

The conference, organized last Sept. 3, required its members to field teams in football, basketball and field. Scholarships would have been limited.

Hardin-Simmons recently announced it would discontinue football. Midwestern had no football team.

Hogan Not Sorry About Retirement

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—"I have no regrets," Ben Hogan said. "A man has to quit some time. I've never been sorry I stopped when I did."

The mushrooming $100,000-plus purses and the pressure of bigtime golf, intensified by the heavyweight duel between Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus, no longer hold a lure for the tough little master from Fort Worth, Tex.

"If I could get some semblance of a putting stroke I would play in more tournaments, just for the pleasure of it," added Hogan, who was presented the Gold Tee Award Wednesday night by the Metropolitan Golf Writers Association. "But I'm not eager to win any more championships, just for championships' sake."

Hogan insisted he never was haunted by the thought that he might have won an unprecedented fifth National Open championship, passing Willie Anderson and Bob Jones, had he not cut short his competitive career in 1955.

"If I had kept playing, I might have won another Open, and again I might not," he said. "As far back as 1953, my best year, I could tell I was beginning to lose my nerve in putting.

"That convinced me it was time to call it quits. I got to a point I couldn't even bring the club back on the putting green."

Hogan announced his retirement after losing a playoff to Jack Fleck in the 1955 Open at San Francisco, saying at the time:

"I'll never work this hard again to win a tournament."

At that time, Ben had won four U.S. Opens, two Masters plus the British Open and the PGA. His 72-hole records in the Open and Masters still stand.

At 51, Hogan looks as lean and hard as in his best playing days but he insists he is plagued by the bugaboo of all aging golf champions—the putting yips.

TROPHY DISPLAYED—Mitch Rambin and Steve Holder, who were named on the all-tournament team, display the second place trophy won by Lamar Junior High's 7th grade basketball team at the Colorado City tournament recently. The Lamar 7th graders are coached by Eddie Logan and Paul Hayes.

Olympic Practice Resumed After Death Of Tobogganer

By HANS BENEDICT
Associated Press Sports Writer

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP) — A black mourning ribbon flapped from the five-ringed Olympic flag today as skiers, skaters and sledders resumed practice sessions in a suddenly somber atmosphere created by the accident that claimed the life of a British tobogganer.

Kazimierz Kay-Skrzypeski, 30-year-old British Olympian, died Wednesday of injuries received 24 hours earlier when his sled careened off the chute at nearby Igls in a practice run for the event which will be held for the first time at these winter games.

Athletes and officials paid tribute to Kay-Skrzypeski Wednesday night in an open-air ceremony at which Prof. Friedl Wolfgang, head of the Austrian Organizing Committee, said:

"This is a tragedy, all the more as tobogganing was included in the Winter Olympics for the very first time. We were trying to make it as successful as the other competitions, and then this terrible thing happens."

Kay-Skrzpeski, a Polish-born British citizen who fled from Nazi-occupied Poland in 1940, was the second fatality in the last two Olympics.

At the 1960 Summer Games in Rome, cyclist Knud Enemark Jensen of Denmark died after competing in a 100-kilometer—62½ mile—road race. Officials at the Rome Olympics announced after the Games that 2,236 injuries had been tabulated during the competition.

Besides Kay-Skrzypeski, three other tobogganers have been injured. Two Germans — Josef Lenz and Josef Fleischmann — were injured here Tuesday, and Elizabeth Gould of Rydal, Pa., a member of the U.S. team, suffered multiple fractures while practicing in Poland in December.

The injuries here caused this order to be issued:

"Please take it easy. It is better to reach the end of the run in a slow time than to finish up in a hospital."

It was issued after Kay-Skrzypeski suffered multiple fractures when his sled raced out of control at high speed on the Olympic Curve during a trial run.

SPORTSCUTTLE

Personable Al Langford, the Lamesa High Football Coach, has experienced agony since Snyder's penalty by the Interscholastic League. Nobody in Snyder intimated or even thought that anyone connected with the Lamesa school system had anything to do with the penalty, or in bringing the issue before the Interscholastic League Committee. Langford, here last Friday night when the Tornadoes met the Tigers in a district basketball game, said he was grateful that local coaches and fans did not associate him, or other Lamesa school officials, with the incident.

"I didn't even know about it (the anonymous letter) until it was in the hands of the committee in Austin," the Tornado football boss revealed.

• • •

Langford lamented that the Lamesa "image" now is such that they are the number one target for all other teams in the district in all sports. The fact that a Sweetwater basketball star was declared ineligible and Snyder's basketball and track teams were disqualified for championships, all within a year's time and all because of some outside intervention at Lamesa, has served to put the Tornadoes, along with their coaches, on the spot. Lamesa, of course, is not out of the race in basketball, but if they should finish second and Snyder first, they know they are likely to be referred to as "rulebook champions" rather than champions on the court — through no fault of their own, or their coaches.

• • •

Langford, incidentally, is a highly-respected foe among opposing football coaches. He is one of those individuals who can joke with you and extend his hand in genuine friendship and then go out and inspire his kids to whale the daylights out of you ON THE PLAYING FIELD. Around here, he is regarded as an asset to the district.

However, there are continuing reports that he may depart Lamesa for greener pastures. Langford was the No. 1 choice for the head coaching spot at his alma mater, Howard Payne College, but turned it down. Now, his name has been mentioned prominently in connection with the head coaching vacancy at Temple High School, where the veteran Jay Stanley Fikes recently stepped down under pressure.

• • •

Fikes had a rather long and highly successful tenure at Temple. In fact he won his district and had an 8-2 won-lost record the past football season. But he had some critics, who reportedly had the power to call for a change. Fikes' overall record at Temple is 84 victories and 21 losses. He was in the running down to the wire for the head coaching position here in Snyder 10 years ago, with the nod finally going to John Conley after he and Fikes had been selected for final consideration from a long list of applicants. Fikes was coach at Littlefield at that time.

• • •

Incidentally, there is one point in the basketball penalty which has not been clarified here. Nobody knows whether the Tigers would be eligible to accept the trophy if they should win the district cage title. When the penalty was levied, local school officials were simply informed that the Tigers could compete in the district and that their games would count, but that if they should win, the second place team would go into the playoffs. Right now, of course, they are not particularly interested in speculation over a trophy — they're just concentrating on winning basketball games.

Coach Quits Post At Corpus Christi

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Corpus Christi Carroll High School is looking for a new football coach . . . a coach with a successful background, says athletic director Chatter Allen.

Vernon (Cotton) Ashton, head coach since the school opened in 1957, resigned Wednesday after fans criticized him for failing to defeat crosstown rivals, Ray and Miller high schools.

Ashton has a record of 29 wins and 39 losses. His teams had defeated Miller once, 3-0 in 1961, but had never won over Ray.

Hall Of Fame Door Will Remain Open

BOSTON (AP) — The door of that handsome, red brick Colonial building at Cooperstown, N.Y.—baseball's Hall of Fame—still was open today.

And shortstop Luke Appling and pitcher Charley (Red) Ruffing will lead 30 former big leaguers in an unprecedented second knock.

Balloting by baseball writers announced Wednesday showed none of the 59 old-time players nominated received the necessary 75 per cent of the votes cast.

Appling, who played 20 seasons for the Chicago White Sox between 1930 and 1950, received 142 votes, nine short of the 151 needed.

Right-hander Ruffing, who won 20 games or more four straight years while with the New York Yankees, polled 141.

But they and 28 others will get another chance.

The Baseball Writers Association of America instituted a change in 1962, the last time the biennial voting was conducted, authorizing a second ballot in the event no candidate received the needed three-quarters vote.

A second ballot was not needed two years ago because Bob Feller and Jackie Robinson were elected to Cooperstown on the first ballot.

Feller and Robinson are the only two former players to have been enshrined since Joe Cronin and Hank Greenberg made it in 1956.

Hy Hurwitz, secretary of the BBWAA, said ballots were being mailed to voting members today. The writers will vote for no more than five players from among Wednesday's 30 top vote-getters. Hurwitz set a Feb. 5 deadline for the return of the ballots.

Unless there's a tie, only one player from the 30 now eligible will be admitted to the Hall of Fame.

Others among the 30 include Roy Campanella, Ducky Medwick, Pee Wee Reese, Lou Boudreau, Al Lopez, Chuck Klein, Johnny Mize and Mel Harder.

Army Cagers Are Best In 20 Years

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Army probably isn't in the class of UCLA and Michigan, the top-ranked teams in The Associated Press poll, but the Cadets have come up with their best basketball team in 20 years.

Not since a 27-game winning streak two decades ago have the Cadets looked ahead with such confidence to their traditional game with Navy, Feb. 29.

The Black Knights scored their 10th victory in 12 games Wednesday by outlasting Hofstra 64-59 at West Point.

Hofstra earlier had defeated Navy and went into the Army game with a nine-game winning streak, but the Flying Dutchmen couldn't overcome the Cadets despite Steve Nisenson's 34 points.

One of Nisenson's baskets tied the score at 57-57, but Army went ahead to stay on goals by Joe Kosciusko of Grafton, Mass. and Bill Helkie, of South Bend, Ind.

There were only a few other major games on the schedule as mid-year exams continued to keep college activity to a minimum.

Seventh-ranked Villanova, the only team in the Top Ten to see action, romped against West Chester, Pa. State, 78-61.

Jim Stone and John Thompson combined for 52 points as Providence staved off a late Canisius rally to beat the Griffins 77-74. In other games Virginia Tech nipped East Carolina 72-68 and Pitt downed Kent State 84-63.

Liston's Advisor Uses Doubletalk

By GORDON BEARD
Associated Press Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP)—Bob Nilon, advisor of heavyweight boxing champion Sonny Liston, hustled into town Wednesday to beat the drums for local televising of Liston's title bout with Cassius Clay.

When Nilon departed, guests at a news conference were laughing and confused. . . mostly confused.

Nilon's rambling statements made Casey Stengel's famed double talk seem as simple as A-B-C.

As best could be determined, without aid of tape recorder or interpreter, Nilon told his audience:

1. Baltimore has a beautiful Civic Center (of which local newsmen were aware).

2. Clay, a beautiful specimen of a fighter, could take the championship from Liston in Miami Feb. 25, although he believes "Sonny should be the champ for another five to seven years."

"No man living can beat Sonny now," Nilon said. He did not explain where that left Clay.

3. There have been fixes in baseball, football and basketball, but "I'd hate to be the man who goes into his (Liston's) dressing room and say 'carry the fight for eight or nine rounds."

4. Nilon and his brothers, Jack and Jim, may go to Russia to scout a heavyweight for a possible future bout. "He's supposed to be in Omsk or Tomsk," Nilon said.

5. "The World Boxing Association is a misnomer. They don't really control anything. It's up to us to pick Liston's opponents whether or not they think they're worthy challengers."

Tuttle Has A Big Lead

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Tommy Tuttle of Rural Hall, N.C., took a commanding lead in the first day of finals at the $100,000 All-Star Bowling Tournament Wednesday night.

The personable newcomer won 12 and lost four games while knocking down 3,631 pins in the opening four rounds. He received a 600-pin bonus, 59 for each game he won, to boost his position to 4,231.

Tuttle's best performance of the day came in the third round when he walloped a 258-256-181-235 — 930 series to defeat Don Ellis of Houston, Tex., in three games.

Luke Barlow of Hobbs, N.M. was in second place as the tournament moved into the fifth round with a total of 3,943 pins, a reflection of his record of 12 won and four lost and his total pin fall of 3,343.

Barlow moved from third place into the runner-up spot after winning three of his four games with Dick Weber, the defending champion from St. Louis.

Weber, who was in second place going into the round, dropped to fifth place.

Norma Lake of Dallas and Laverne Carter of St. Louis were deadlocked for the women's lead after four rounds with identical grand totals of 1,871.

SHORTENING HIS ORBIT

It's Those Foreign Crises That Turn Presidents Grey

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson, like his predecessors, has to juggle the usual and the unexpected, which is all right except when the unexpected hits him, as it did Johnson.

But even the usual can look brand new, unless you have a lively memory. For instance, when a president trots his budget message into the congressional stadium.

It's like an Army-Navy game—cheers and jeers—except that Democrats and Republicans don't don blue or gray. They just stay dressed in their old party attitudes, as they did this week when Johnson sent them his budget.

Most Democrats found it delightful, Republicans looked for holes in the budgetary line. It's like that when a Democrat is president. It's like that when a Republican is president. But then Democrats and Republicans swap sides.

Since this has been going on for years, and Johnson was in Congress 23 years, he could hardly have been dumbfounded by the reaction and may even have been happy the Republicans didn't say more.

There will be much of the same as he continues to send Congress messages.

The real domestic fight, therefore, will get worse and, since 1964 is an election year, it should get noisier...

President John F. Kennedy went through the same routine in his first year in office, and the years that followed. It's not the domestic stuff that makes an old man of a president, it's the foreign stuff.

That's where a president gets clouted with the unexpected but Kennedy got a better break than Johnson, starting out.

Kennedy's first big foreign trouble was when he backed the disastrous rebel invasion of Cuba—but he had already been in office three months before that happened.

But here was Johnson, in office less than two months, up to his nose in getting his messages together for Congress, when the Panamanians blew their lid.

Johnson had already tried to overhaul the American machinery for dealing with Latin America when the riots in Panama began. It was an unhappy beginning.

Just about the time he got the Panamanians cooled off a bit, French President Charles de Gaulle let it be known that France was going to recognize Red China, which the White House promptly told him it hoped he wouldn't.

De Gaulle appears to have a compulsion to disturb the peace of American presidents.

He was a repeated problem to Kennedy. Since he doesn't seem to be a man to play favorites, he started on Johnson in a hurry.

When he came over here in November for Kennedy's funeral, he had a long talk with Johnson. But even this got messed up for out of it came the first mixup with the Frenchman.

Maybe Johnson was hard of hearing. Or maybe De Gaulle was. But the result was confusion.

Had Johnson understood De Gaulle to say he would come back for another visit? Or had the Frenchman understood Johnson to say he would go to France to see De Gaulle? The question is still unanswered.

French recognition of Red China isn't just a careless caper. What damage it may do to this country's position in Southeast Asia, and elsewhere, could well haunt Johnson for the rest of his presidency.

This is just the beginning of Johnson's foreign dilemmas. He is used to dealing with members of Congress but not with making America's foreign policy decisions.

And, besides, who ever got used to dealing with De Gaulle?

Concert Pianist Has Tough Life

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — A top concert pianist gets from $500 to $6,000 an appearance.

There are perhaps some 25 of these keyboard artists in the nation. One of the best is John Browning, 30, a slender and handsome bachelor, who started picking out tunes at the age of 3 and started taking lessons at 5.

He made his first debut at 10, but didn't become a professional in public until he had reached the ripe age of 20.

"Both my parents are musicians, and they didn't want to rush me too fast," Browning explained. "The child prodigy bit can be dangerous."

"The public sometimes gets tired of hearing him, and decides he doesn't sound so impressive after he grows up. Also, the artist himself can get bored if he starts too soon. By 50 he's tired of the business," he said.

Browning, who comes from Denver, Colo., and Los Angeles, became an international musical figure in 1956 when he won the gold medal award in Brussels. Since then he has performed with most of the great orchestras here and in Europe.

"It's a highly competitive field," he said. "This seems to be an age of pianists, and talent at present seems to come mostly from the United States and Russia, rather than Western Europe.

"Men outnumber women about 10-1. Women either get married or weary of a concert artist's life. It can be rough."

The chief ordeal is the constant travel.

"Another problem is the shortage of porters at rail terminals," he said. "If I have to carry my own luggage — it weighs about 60 pounds — it pulls my arm muscles the wrong way, and I'm afraid it could affect my performance."

Browning now solves this by wiring ahead for a messenger to meet him at the station.

Other woes of the concert artist's life: Poor acoustics, bad pianos, the social receptions that inevitably follow a concert, "and, above all, the constant need of keeping up your standard, to key yourself up to play your best no matter how you feel physically."

He spends anywhere from up to 14 hours a day at the piano, has committed to memory 30 concertos and more than 10 hours of solo music. This means he could play about 40 hours continuously without repeating a work.

Browning would seem a highly eligible Leap Year candidate for marriage, but says he is kept so busy that he hasn't yet been able to find the right girl.

Junior Editors Quiz on PERFUME

QUESTION: What are perfumes made from?

• • •

ANSWER: As little Cathy sniffs new perfume, she thinks of it as just one delightful odor. Actually, however, most perfumes are blends of many odor-producing materials, some of the most important of which we show surrounding Cathy like a wreath. Perfume experts take extracts from these and other sources and carefully mix them together, producing favorite fragrances, or originating new ones.

The fragrance in plants comes from minute sacs which store "essential oils" bearing the fragrance. These oils can be extracted from the flower blossoms themselves. Often petals are spread over layers of fat on glass plates; the fragrant oils are absorbed by the fats and then can be removed and used in making perfume. Leaves, stems and bark of certain plants also give fragrant oils, as do certain woods such as sandalwood.

It's hard to believe that coal would give perfume, but chemicals from coal tar, a product of coal, can be used in making inexpensive synthetic perfumes. "Castor" from the beaver, "civet" from the civet cat, "musk" from the musk deer and "ambergris" from the sperm whale are often used to strengthen other odors and make them more lasting.

• • •

FOR YOU TO DO: Go outside and see how many attractive odors you can locate. There are quite a few, even in winter. Many evergreens, for example, have a most delightful spicy smell. 1-23

Internal Revenue Explains Exemption Of Dependents

EDITOR'S NOTE—Do you know who to claim as a dependent in filing a tax return on 1963 income? Do you understand how to claim exemptions for the fullest benefit to yourself? In this fourth of five articles you will find the answers to these and other questions that may save you money.

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press Writer

You knock $600 off your income—before what's left is taxable—for each exemption you can claim in filing your 1963 income tax return.

A person filing a return gets a $600 exemption for himself if he is under 65, an additional $600 if he's 65, and $600 if he's blind. He gets the same for his wife.

The person filing a return also gets a $600 exemption for each person he can claim as a dependent but he doesn't get any extra $600 if the dependent is 65 or blind.

Who's a dependent? It varies.

Your child can be claimed as a dependent if he was born or died in 1963 (but not a stillborn child) if you contributed to more than half his support in that part of the year when he was alive.

Age is a vital factor in deciding whether you can claim your own child as a dependent, or a stepchild or adopted child. The age is 19.

If he was under 19 and you provided more than half his support, you can claim him as a dependent and it wouldn't make any difference how much income he had, under or over $600.

But if he was over 19 and had $600 or more income—even though you contributed more than half his support—you couldn't claim him as a dependent unless he qualified as a full-time student.

Your over-19 child would not qualify as a full-time student if he had a regular or part-time job or went to night school or took correspondence courses.

What happens if your under-19 child, or your over-19 child who qualifies as a student dependent, had $600 or more income?

He would file his own return, claiming his own $600 exemption, and paying any tax he owed but you could take a $600 exemption for him on your return and not have to include his income in your return.

A paid servant in your house can not be claimed as a dependent. But a friend can be if he lived in your house the full year and got more than half his support from you—provided any income of his own did not amount to as much as $600 for the year.

If he had $600 or more income he'd have to file his own return, taking his own $600 exemption, and you couldn't claim him as an exemption even though you did contribute to more than half his support.

The following relatives—in addition to your child—can be claimed as dependents if the rules given below apply to them:

Your grandchild, great-grandchild, and so on; your legally adopted child or stepchild, but not the latter's descendants; your brother or sister; your parents, grandparents, or other direct ancestors, but not a foster parent; your stepfather or stepmother; your niece or nephew, meaning a son or daughter of your brother or sister; your father-in-law, mother-in-law, son-in-law, daughter-in-law, brother-in-law, or sister-in-law.

Death or divorce does not end those relationships. For example: you can continue to claim your father-in-law as a dependent—even though your wife died or divorced you—if he got more than half his support from you.

The relatives listed above did not have to live with you to qualify as dependents. For example: you may have been paying more than half the support of your mother or father who was living with your brother.

In short: you can claim any of them as a dependent if he did not have as much as $600 of his own in taxable income and got more than half his support from you.

Right here an important point arises in deciding who's a dependent. It is the difference between taxable and non-taxable income.

Social Security benefits are non-taxable. They do not have to be reported by anyone who had to file a return because he had $600 or more taxable income from some other source.

But when you as a taxpayer want to decide whether someone you wish to claim as a dependent got more than half his support from you, you may have to consider his Social Security income to this extent:

You must figure the support you gave him against the support he got from all other sources.

For example: suppose your mother got $700 in Social Security benefits but put the money in the bank and didn't use it to live on. You could claim her as a dependent if you provided more than half her support.

But, suppose she used her $700 to help her live. You couldn't claim her as a dependent unless you contributed more than $700 to her support.

Next: Deductions for personal expenses.

Guard Tightened On US Records

By MARTHA COLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Archives Building, where rest the records of a nation 187 years old, has tighter security regulations since a recent theft.

But authorities have no fear of anyone stealing the Declaration of Independence or other great documents.

"We feel there's absolutely no possibility of anyone making off with the real national treasures," Dr. Robert H. Bahmer, deputy archivist of the United States, said in an interview.

Despite elaborate safeguards, presidential letters and other documents valued at $500,000 were stolen from the research area.

It was the first such instance Bahmer could recall in his 28 years with the archives.

The three great charters of freedom of the United States, inscribed on parchment in flowing script, are enshrined in the exhibition hall of the archives building.

These are the Declaration of Independence, adopted July 4, 1776; the Constitution of the United States, signed by members of the constitutional convention on Sept. 17, 1787; and the Bill of Rights, approved by the first Congress Sept. 25, 1789.

During the hours the archives building is open to the public, from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., a guard stands by the great documents, enclosed in glass cases.

After the great bronze doors of the building are closed, slowly an electric mechanism begins to operate.

The seven sealed glass cases containing the precious parchments begin to descend. It takes one minute for them to sink to a 50-ton vault, 20 feet below the floor, there to spend the night.

The vault is of steel and reinforced concrete with floor and walls 1,500 3 inches thick. The two doors of the same thickness that lock over it weigh 5 tons each. The vault is fireproof, shockproof and is considered bombproof.

In an emergency, the documents can be lowered at a moment's notice. In case of power failure, a stand-by mechanism will lower them and close the vault.

There's more than theft from which to protect the documents. Damage could result from light, air, heat, cold, mold and dust.

To safeguard against these, each parchment document leaf is sealed in helium, an inert gas, in its own bronze-bound case of filtered glass.

The documents did not always have such tender care.

When the British were advancing on Washington in August 1814, the documents, along with other valuable records, were stuffed in coarse linen sacks and transported in carts to Leesburg, Va., where they remained until the British sailed away.

During World War II, the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution were stored in the gold vaults of Fort Knox, Ky. The Bill of Rights stayed here under archives protection.

The archives has a fairly elaborate system of screening researchers, Bahmer said.

But it cannot run a full background investigation on each person who comes in. Visitors are interviewed. Records are checked out and in; staff members are ever present; brief cases and such are checked. But the archives doesn't search a person's pockets, clothing or a woman's purse. Most of the 500,000 Americans who visit the archieves building each year are tourists.

VFW Noted For Services

In strengthening the nation in which we live, the V.F.W. believes that democracy and true Americanism begin at home. The result of this thinking is a program which the V.F.W. refers to as "community service." In cities, towns, and neighborhoods throughout the country, V.F.W. posts and their auxiliaries carry on various programs which serve to benefit not only the community, but state and nation as well. Programs which aid individual families or establish better recreational and educational opportunities; or assist schools, churches and other organizations; or benefit youth groups; or provide leadership and support to the health, safety of fund raising drives are all examples of "community service" at work. Over 1,000 community service programs of different nature have been developed by V.F.W. Posts which are representative of millions of expended dollars and man-hours in completion of the programs.

Convict's Desperate Flight Ends In Meek Surrender

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A convicted murderer made a desperate dash for freedom Wednesday—abducting six persons, stealing four cars and robbing a store.

Howard O. Lowery, 25, was captured five hours later, 70 miles away, by a highway patrolman. He was alone — armed with a shotgun and a single shell—but offered no resistance.

Trooper John Eddleman pulled in behind Lowery when the escapee turned off U.S. 270 onto a county road near Watonga in Blaine County after a chase at speeds above 100 miles per hour.

"The car just wouldn't go any faster," Lowery said later. "So I decided to just give up."

The story began when Lowery, serving a life term for a 1960 murder, was brought from the State Penitentiary at McAlester to University Hospital to have doctors look at his hand.

When guard S. L. Koontz looked out a doorway, Lowery pulled a knife and said, "Koontz, I don't want to hurt you." Then he reached for the guard's pistol.

Koontz jumped back and Lowery fled down the hall. He came upon Dr. Everett L. Wiggins, 35, a first year resident physician. He put the knife to Wiggins' throat and ordered him to walk with him.

"I walked with him just like we were buddies," Wiggins recalled.

They walked out of the hospital and entered a taxi parked at the curb. Lowery, one hand handcuffed to his belt, ordered the driver, William McCoy, 44, to drive off.

"We started driving and he told me where to turn," McCoy said.

About a mile north of the hospital Lowery ordered McCoy to pull into a parking lot next to a state office building. He forced Wiggins to tie McCoy's hands. Then he bound Wiggins. He took $1 from the doctor and about $100 from the cab driver. He also took the doctor's trousers and shirt.

Mary Jane Wright had just taken an employment examination at the Capitol and was returning to her car. Lowery jumped out of the cab, put his arm around her shoulder, put the knife against her throat and forced her into her car.

They drove off, leaving Wiggins and McCoy bound in the taxi.

"He said if I just did as he said he wouldn't hurt me in anyway," Miss Wright said.

Lowery drove her car to an auto supply store several miles northwest of the Capitol. He forced Miss Wright to accompany him into the store.

They were approached by Burt Rathbun, 24, a clerk. Lowery asked to look at a shotgun.

He picked up a 12-gauge shotgun and loaded it. He pointed it at Rathbun and ordered him to empty the cash register. Lowery took about $100 and asked Rathbun if he had a car. He said he didn't.

Lowery called the store manager, Max Franke, 51, to the front, and forced him, Rathbun and Miss Wright outside. He left Miss Wright there, but forced Rathbun and Franke to accompany him in Franke's car.

The two men said Lowery told them to drive around the area and to stop at the first house they saw with a car parked in front.

Dr. George Kimball, 68, a plastic surgeon, was tending his beehives when the car pulled up to his house. Lowery ordered all three inside the fashionable home.

"They told me he was an escapee and meant business," Dr. Kimball said.

Lowery bound the last three hostages with telephone cord, then ransacked the house. He also drank a root beer and made some telephone calls. Then he fled in Kimball's car, taking one of the surgeon's sports coats.

A woman motorist later reported seeing Kimball's car about 70 miles northwest of here. Her call led to Lowery's capture.

Lowery was sentenced to life in prison for the July 1960 slaying of Dan W. Sims, 30, Worthington, Pa. Sims's body was found beside a road west of here.

The escape came almost three years to the day after another, which also involved a kidnapping. While he was being held on the murder charge at El Reno, Lowery and another prisoner escaped, taking a third inmate as hostage.

They were recaptured within 24 hours.

Harlingen High School Lad Admits To Extortion Attempt

By BOB M. GASSAWAY
Associated Press Writer

HARLINGEN (AP) — A high school junior has been charged with threatening to extort $10,000 from a Harlingen banker after the official received a note saying his daughter and her school would be blown up unless the youth received money.

Ralph Anes Avalon, 18, was held in Harlingen city jail in lieu of $1,500 bond.

E. Clinton Breedlove, president of First National Bank in this lower Rio Grande Valley town, said he first considered the extortion note a joke.

"We've got three teen-agers, and know what these kids do, so we thought it was one of their friends pulling a joke," Breedlove told the Associated Press.

Mrs. Breedlove discovered the note Tuesday, but the case did not become public knowledge until Wednesday.

Police Chief Marshall Rousseau said Avalon told Breedlove to take the $10,000 to an old abandoned house near Harlingen by 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Rousseau quoted the note as saying: "Don't call police or Harlingen High School will be blown apart with your daughter in it—and all the other students."

Rousseau said the note added that 25 pounds of dynamite would be touched off in the school at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday if the directions were not followed. No dynamite was found.

"We questioned him about that at length and he said he just gave that up. He said he couldn't get the 25 pounds of dynamite," Rousseau said.

The chief said the youth admitted the entire affair and signed a written statement.

Mrs. Breedlove called her husband after she found the note and he notified police who told him to follow instructions in the note.

Police were surrounding the house when Avalon drove up and began probing debris and dirt.

Rousseau said the youth told him: "My mother is sick all the time. We couldn't pay bills and I couldn't get a job."

North Viet Nam and South Viet Nam each is roughly the size of the state of Georgia.

Pearson Disagrees On Football Favorite

WASHINGTON (AP) — Canada's Prime Minister Lester D. Pearson says he agrees with President Johnson on practically everything they discussed at the White House Wednesday — except who is the best football quarterback.

Pearson told newsmen that Johnson's pick was Sammy Baugh, former quarterback for the Washington Redskins, who is a Texan.

Pearson's choice was Y.A. Tittle of the New York Giants.

LIGHTEST MEXICO

BY JOHN ABNEY

MEXICO CITY — Right here in Mexico City we had Mr. Charles B. West who used to be a Chinaman (in a way) and is now sort of half - Alaskan, half - Washingtonian (the Washington State kind: not the ones who make speeches or explain why they should be reelected).

At any rate, some twenty years ago Mr. West was merely "Chuck" who operated airplanes for the Flying Tigers and was a colonel in the Chinese Air Force.

Then everybody lost interest in fighting and drifted back home but Chuck drifted up to Alaska, where his wife and family lived, and got a job pushing throttles for the Wien Alasks Airlines. Tourists were always wanting to fly across the Arctic Circle or over the International Date Line, where it is either tomorrow or yesterday. (I forget which. My watch has stopped.)

Apparently Chuck sat down one evening after tossing another log on the camp fire and said to himself, "We get tourists coming up here and they want to see places. What somebody like me should do is provide them with transportation and accomodations."

So he got out the hammer and nails and built himself seven companies, Tour companies, sightseeing companies, a few hotels and a steamship line. Following which he became Mr. Charles B. West and was elegible to carry a coat over one arm, plus a brief case.

Well, I asked Mr. Charles B. West if this was his first trip to Mexico (in interviews you have to think of questions that are so original they are almost poetic).

And he said no, he had been here several times.

So I asked how he liked it.

Mr. West looked around to see if anyone was listening and asked, "Is this off the record?"

"Absolutely," I assured him.

He looked under the couch (I believe you call them sofas in a suite) and said, "Marvellous place. People, scenery, everything wonderful. Mexico is a gold mine for tourism."

"How come that's off the record?" I asked.

"Because," he said sternly, "I operate tourist facilities in Alaska. If they ever heard me say another place was gorgeous they might come after me with walrus spears."

To prevent any spearing, we must keep this off the record.

Mr. West and his family now live in Seattle but he runs up to Alaska every few weeks to visit his relatives and his money.

I inquired about Mr. West's relatives and he said his father-in-law had done some work with pans.

"You mean he's a cook in one of your hotels?" I asked.

Mr. West shook his head and said, "Gold." Then he tossed a nugget that felt like it weighed sixteen pounds in my lap.

"He panned this out of one of the rivers and gave it to me for a souvenir," Mr. West added.

Now a fellow who gives away keepsakes like this is a gentleman of unusual culture and well worth knowing. So I tried to get the father-in-law's name, address and telephone number but Mr. West was as silent as John Wayne crawling through the woods to shotgun the Comanches.

Also, he reached over and took back the nugget. Pleasantly, of course, but I was so emotional I couldn't think of any more questions to ask except, "Is there a tranquilizer in the room?"

Zone Dependents To Return To US

BALBOA, C.Z. (AP) — U.S. Army Southern Command headquarters announced Wednesday most of the nonresident American dependents remaining in the Canal Zone would return to the United States. A spokesman said they are due to leave Friday.

About 3,000 dependents moved into the zone from the Republic of Panama during the recent crisis. About a third returned to the United States Jan. 16 on a volunteer basis.

The spokesman said most of those remaining also had volunteered to go, in view of the shortage of Canal Zone housing.

Echo 2, World's Largest Satellite, Now In Orbit

By RALPH DIGHTON

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—The world's largest satellite—a glittering 13-story balloon designed to relay the first American-Russian conversations via space—rocketed into orbit today.

The 135-foot diameter Echo 2, launched at 5:59 a.m. atop a Thor-Agena B rocket, was expected to become visible over the United States for the first time early this evening when struck by rays from the sun below the horizon.

The U.S National Aeronautics and Space Administration said it would be seen, as it whirls around the earth's poles at a height of about 800 miles, by more people than any other man-made object in history.

Previous largest satellite was the 100-foot balloon Echo 1, launched in 1960 and still visible in orbit.

Officials of the space agency said they were "delighted" with preliminary information from the satellite.

They said they had received word from scientists in Pretoria, South Africa, that the plastic and aluminum foil balloon had inflated as planned as it approached the Malagasy Republic, formerly the island of Madagascar.

They said they had not determined yet the precise altitude and period of orbit, but expected this computation to be completed soon.

Engineer Richard Slater of the G. T. Schjeldahl Co. of Northfield, Minn., manufacturer of the balloon, said a television camera mounted on the second-stage Agena showed the balloon popped partly open in about 15 seconds and the wrinkles started to disappear.

Full inflation was expected to take several hours as the heat of the sun's rays vaporized chemicals carried inside the folded balloon.

The glittering sphere was to be visible many times during its estimated three - year life from every point on the globe.

Russians were to get their first look a few hours after launch, officials said; Americans would have to wait 10 to 12 hours, until the balloon was illuminated by rays from the sun at dusk on the sixth and seventh orbits.

The United States and the Soviet Union agreed last August to try to bounce radio signals off Echo 2's reflective skin in a series of tests which the U.S. Space Agency said would be the two powers' first cooperative experiment with a communications satellite.

The agreement called for voice, facsimile pictures and code signals to be bounced off the satellite between giant antennas at the Zemenky Observatory near Moscow and the Jodrell Bank Observatory in England.

Active satellites have "switchboard" equipment to receive ground signals and re-broadcast them back to earth. The passive Echo satellite is designed to reflect radio signals the way a mirror reflects light.

Echo 1, a 100-foot balloon launched in 1960 is still in orbit.

Made of a single film of plastic sprayed with aluminum, its shape has been distorted—and thus it has lost some of its reflectivity—by leakage of gas.

Echo 2 was designed to correct this. It was made of two layers of foil laminated on a plastic film and scientists figured the foil would stay in a spherical shape even after the gas leaked out.

Echo 2 was designed to whip another shortcoming of Echo 1, which, in an orbit around the earth's middle, cannot be seen in the far north and south regions. Placing it in an orbit around the poles of the rotating earth would make Echo 2 visible many times from every point on the earth's surface.

SNYDER AREA OIL

Sunray DX Oil Company and Goff Oil Company of Tulsa, Okla., No. 1 Ida Sue Johnson, Kent County wildcat 15 miles south-west of Clairemont, is flowing oil at the rate of 10 barrels per hour from the Strawn lime and is scheduled shortly to complete as a dual discovery.

The Strawn is being flowed on a 16-64 - inch choke from perforations at 6,988-95 feet, which have been washed with 250 gallons of mud-acid. Gas-oil ratio is approximately 250-1.

Earlier this exploration had been completed as an Ellenburger discovery for a calculated daily potential of 408 barrels of 40.4 - gravity oil, flowing through a 14-64 - inch choke from perforations at 7,603-16 feet. Gas-oil ratio was 220-1 and flowing tubing pressure was 300 pounds.

No. 1 Johnson is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 63, block G, W&NW survey, three miles northeast of the one-well Polar, North (Ellenburger) pool and 2¼ miles north of the Polar, Northeast (Strawn lime) area, which also has one well.

Brandywine Oil Company of Midland (formerly Development Ltd., — Ray Morris Drilling Co.) No. 9-1 Development, Ltd., - Hutto, 11,000-foot Howard County Fusselman wildcat eight miles east of Big Spring, has indicated production from an unidentified section, possibly Wolfcamp.

A drillstem test at 7,390-495 feet, open two hours, recovered 330 feet of free oil and 90 feet of oil and gas-cut drilling fluid.

No initial shutin bottomhole pressure was reported. Flowing pressure was from 119 to 292 pounds, and two-hour final shut-in pressure was 2,793 pounds.

The project was drilling ahead below 8,200 feet. It is ¾ miles southwest of the one-well Hutto (Wolfcamp) area and 2,250 feet from north and 2,310 feet from east lines of section 9, block 31, T-1-S, T&P survey.

Legislators' Foes Scarce

By ERNEST STROMBERGER
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

The outlook for Texas legislative races this year indicates fewer candidates campaigning on less issues.

A week before the filing deadline, the number of primary contests is below previous years.

As in most presidential election years, national races will overshadow state political activity. Legislative races also will be short on general controversial issues such as the sales tax, an issue in 1962.

Democratic candidates now have competition in the may 2 primary in only 50 of the 150 House districts. The number usually is close to 100 by the filing deadline.

Republicans promised at least 85 House contests Nov. 3, but only 14 GOP candidates have announced for House seats. One seeks a senate post.

Only five of 13 senators seeking re-election have opponents now.

There is no primary contest yet for the district of Sen. George Moffett of Chillicothe, one of two retiring senators.

The most active senate contest developing is in West Texas, where Sen. Frank Owen of El Paso is retiring.

Rep. George Cook of Odessa, in his third House term, former state Rep. Louis Anderson of Midland and Pete Snelson of El Paso are expected to vie for Owen's seat. Dr. S. L. Abbot, an El Paso republican, also will run for the seat.

Three other House members are seeking to unseat senators.

Rep. Don Gladden is opposing Sen. Don Kennard in Fort Worth; Rep. Joe Cannon of Mexia is out against Sen. W. T. Moore of Bryan; and Rep. Ronald Bridges is expected to oppose Sen. Bruce Reagan of Corpus Christi.

Former Vernon legislator Jack Hightower is the only candidate for Moffett's Senate seat. Rep. Vernon Stewart of Wichita Falls is expected to say on Monday if he will oppose Hightower.

Two Democrats and a Republican plan to run for Cook's House seat representing Odessa.

Rep. James Cotten of Weatherford has several opponents.

Incumbents in Lubbock, San Angelo, Breckenridge and Scurry are expected to have opposition.

Three candidates have announced for Cannon's House seat. At least six other Central Texas incumbents expect opposition.

Seven East Texas House members face opponents, and four coastal area representatives will have races.

Republicans hope to run full slates of candidates in Houston and San Antonio, as well as holding on to their eight seats in Dallas. Conservative Dallas Democrats have entered a group of opponents for the Republicans.

Formula For Talks Being Considered

By ARY MOLEON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Panama were considering today a proposed new agreement on a formula for talks to settle their dispute over the Panama Canal.

The formula was worked out at a meeting today between representatives of the two nations and the Inter-American Peace Committee, which has been trying to break a deadlock over the form of negotiations.

Panama has insisted on negotiations of changes in the 1903 treaty under which the United States owns and operates the canal. This country has expressed willingness to discuss all pending problems, but not to bind itself in advance to change the treaty provisions.

The draft formula, not yet approved, would call for both countries to arrange immediately a conference "with the objective of resolving, without any limitation, all the problems that affect the relations of the two countries."

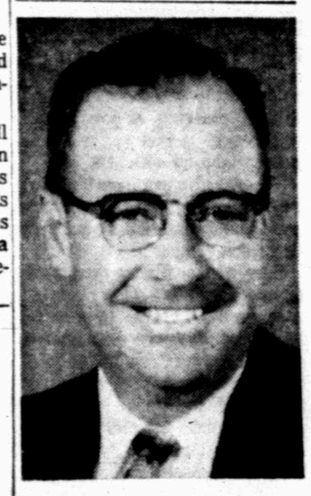
It suggested that the two nations send into the conference high level representatives with sufficient power to resolve the controversy over the canal.

Red Buttons Gets License To Wed

NEW YORK (AP)—Comedian Red Buttons and Alicia Pratt Pagan, a buyer, took out a marriage license Saturday and said they plan to be married here Monday.

Buttons, 44, who won an Academy Award in 1957 for his supporting role in "Sayonara," and his wife of 12 years, Helayne, were divorced last January. They had no children.

Miss Pagan's previous marriage ended in divorce in 1953. She is 36.



WAYLAND HOLT

Wayland Holt Is Candidate

Wayland Holt announced Saturday that he would be a candidate for re-election to the office of District Attorney of the 132nd Judicial District in the Democratic Primary this year.

In announcing his candidacy, Holt stated that he believes his experience as a prosecutor will enable him to better carry on the duties and responsibilities of the office.

A native Texan, Holt has lived in Snyder a total of 17 years. He attended Tarleton State College and Baylor University, where he received Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Laws degrees. He received his law degree cum laude.

In addition to being District Attorney, Holt has been active in civic and community affairs. In 1963 he was General Campaign Chairman of the Scurry County United Fund, Finance Chairman of the Loné Buffalo District, and is on the Board of Directors of the Buffalo Trail Council, Boy Scouts of America.

The candidate is presently serving as District Convention Chairman of District 2-T-2 of Lions International, which covers all the area from Snyder to Plainview. He was active in securing for Snyder the 1964 Lions District Convention, which will meet in May of this year.

Holt expressed appreciation for the support he has always had from the people of this district, and he pledged he would continue to do his best if re-elected.

The 132nd Judicial District is composed of Borden and Scurry Counties.

Protest Exemption Proposal

E. V. Spence, general manager of the Colorado River Municipal Water District, will file a statement of protest Wednesday in Austin to a proposal to exempt Ector, Martin and Borden Counties from the proposed order banning disposal of oilfield brines in pits overlying the Ogallala formation.

He will appear before a hearing of the Texas Water Pollution Control Commission on the proposed order. Spence pointed out that in the case of Ector County the district operates 59 water wells, some already affected to some degree by salt water instrusion. The district has 19 wells in Martin, and these could be subject to contamination from brines, he said. Because Borden County is in the Lake J. B. Thomas water shed, he was lodging an objection to pit disposal of brines in that area.

Monday he is to participate in a meeting of the executive board of the Texas Water Conservation Association and on its water district and authority panel. He plans to file a statement at this meeting regarding the district's position on potential water safety legislation. The district was granted by the legislature the power to conduct recreational facilities and govern safety on and around the lake, he noted, and moreover, it operates its recreational services solely out of revenues from them. The district is financed through revenue bonds and not as a general tax obligation, and the control of its funds is set up under a trust indenture. Spence asked that no laws be passed in conflict with this.

Be Sure You're Qualified To Vote...Pay Your Poll Tax

Nixon Ready To Try Again

By J. W. DAVIS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, recalling the 34 million votes he got for president in 1960, said this week he'd be willing to try again.

Nixon's announcement — "If the opportunity should come again, I would accept it"—was the standout in a flurry of presidential campaign developments.

Others included:

President Johnson was disclosed to have accepted as a gift, when he was a senator, an expensive stereo set. He made light of the incident, but the Republicans tuned it up loud.

Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania became somewhat less aloof from the talk that Republicans might settle on him as their presidential nominee.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, full-fledged candidates for the GOP nomination, low-rated each other a little lower than usual.

Nixon announced in a CBS television interview his willingness to accept a draft. He said also that Goldwater still is the leader among the professional politicians.

Nixon said he always believed no one could win the nomination without entering a presidential preference primary, but this year might be different.

"There are some indications we will go through the primary period and that the result will be mixed," he said.

Here are pertinent quotes on the stereo gift:

Johnson — "The Robert G. Baker family gave us a stereo set . . . We had exchanged gifts before. He was an employe of the public and had no business pending before me and was asking for nothing, and so far as I knew, expected nothing in return any more than I did when I presented him with gifts."

Goldwater — "Johnson should have realized then on an administrative aide's salary, that's a pretty expensive gift. I think I would have asked, 'Where did you find this, Buddy?' "

Rockefeller — "The American people don't like to see their officials taking favors."

In the dilution of Scranton's aloofness, these were the factors:

He denied he had pledged in 1962 to serve out his full four-year term as governor.

After a long period of sticking rather closely to Pennsylvania, he was reported to be planning a cross-country trip to accept an honorary degree from the University of Southern California.

Typical of the Goldwater-vs-Rockefeller comments:

Rockefeller on Goldwater—"He does not represent the Republican party nor the general public."

Goldwater—"If the Republican party wants to nominate an echo . . I suggest the people go again to the Democratic party where the real liberal noise is."

Goldwater saved some sharper words for Johnson, saying the real LBJ is "just a highwayman of the bureaucratic spoils system. Not a conservative, not a builder, but a taker. The Johnson budget is a spender's contraption of mirrors, tinsel and neon."

Another oldtimer back on the political stage this week was Harold E. Stassen, who announced he would enter Republican presidential primaries in the District of Columbia, New Hampshire, California and "certain others."

Stassen was last heard from nationally when he tried to get President Eisenhower to dump Nixon from the 1956 ticket—and wound up seconding Nixon's renomination to be vice president.

There was quite a bit of inconclusive action among the vice presidential possibilities.

Sargent Shriver, Peace Corps director and brother-in-law of the late President John F. Kennedy, said he has not decided to run if he should be asked. He would not say whether Johnson has asked him.

Robert F. Kennedy, the late president's brother, did not hurt his chances by announcing, after the disputants had talked things over with him, that Indonesia and Malaysia had agreed to stop fighting.

Pico Drilling Company of Midland No. 1 J. O. Guinn, Scurry County wildcat 13 miles east of Snyder, is testing for completion on two Pennsylvanian sand zones which have indicated possible discovery production.

Through a series of casing notches at 6,333, 37, and 41 feet, which have been treated with 1,250 gallons of acid and fractured with 15,000 gallons, the latest gauge was 42.25 barrels of load oil through an 18-64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 425 pounds. The project still had 361 barrels of load oil to recover before being able to test the actual producing ability of that section.

Later tests will likely be made in the area between 6,384 and 6,394 feet where samples and logs indicated promise of possible oil and gas.

The venture is four miles southwest of the Camp Springs (Pennsylvanian) area, five miles northeast of the multipay Hermleigh field and 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 11, block 3, H&TC survey.

Texaco Inc. has filed potential gauges on No. 1 J. M. McLaughlin Trust as a location west extension and the second producer in the Parramore (Caddo) pool of Nolan County, 24 miles southwest of Sweetwater.

It pumped 17 barrels of 44-gravity oil per day on potential plus 70 per cent water, through perforations at 7,014-023 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 54, block 1-A, H&TC survey.

One location in the Snyder area, J. M. Loffland, Jr., No. 1 Clara Mae Johnson, a wildcat has been abandoned at total depth 2,000 feet. It is 10 miles northeast of Snyder in Scurry County and 1,650 feet from north and 467 feet from east lines of section 235, block 2, H&TC survey.

Surgeons Seeking Artificial Heart

HOUSTON (AP)—Baylor University College of Medicine surgeons said Saturday they are concentrating efforts on developing an artificial human heart.

The Baylor group, who have transplanted animal hearts experimentally, said there are now two solutions for support of failing human hearts—transplants from animals or humans, and artificial hearts.

A Baylor spokesman said one model of an artificial heart had been used successfully in animals, but it is "several years away" from use in humans.

The Baylor group was commenting on an account from Jackson, Miss., telling of how doctors had taken the heart from a dead man and transplanted it into a man dying of heart failure. The heart worked for an hour.

The spokesman said it was the first heart transplant in a human in this country and called it a "highly significant step in organ transplants."

The spokesman said the Baylor group had developed an artificial ventricle, the functional pumping center of the heart, for temporary support in certain cases. The spokesman said such a ventricle has been used for the left side of the heart in two patients. He said one was successful.

The spokesman said a similar chamber is under development for use in the right side of the heart.

These by-passes now are being powered from the outside, the spokesman said, but equipment for power implanted in the body is under study. He said the artificial heart under development would be a permanent replacement.

Heart patients from all over the country come to Houston for heart surgery and to take advantage of techniques developed by the Baylor surgeons.

Louisiana Plan Faces Court Test

NEW ORLEANS (AP) —The possibility of a court test loomed today for Louisiana's grant-in-aid system—the state's last ditch effort to preserve school segregation.

Three Negro children made an unsuccessful attempt Friday to enroll at one of the all-white private schools where pupils receive state aid.

Officials of the Ninth Ward Elementary School turned the three children away, saying the head of the school was out of town.

A.P. Tureaud Sr., chief counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the Negro children would try again and hinted at a court test for the grant-in-aid program if the private school refuses to admit them.

Tureaud said he took "the position that this is a public school operating under the guise of a private school."

The NAACP has never taken the grant-in-aid program to federal courts for a constitutionality test. However, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court, in another Louisiana school segregation case several years ago, seriously questioned the validity of the grants-in-aid.

Blast Could Delay Launch

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) —An explosion of a rocket motor during a test in California threatens possible postponement of the Saturn 1 launching scheduled here Monday.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported today a stage similar to the second stage of the Saturn 1 blew up Friday on a test stand at the Douglas Aircraft Co. facility at Sacramento Calif.

The explosion occurred as preparations were being made to ground fire the hydrogen - fueled engines in what a space agency spokesman termed "an additional confidence test" for Monday's Saturn 1 flight.

The Saturn 1, believed to be the world's most powerful rocket, carries a live second stage for the first time. It will attempt to launch the heaviest satellite ever sent aloft, weighing nearly 19 tons.

NASA said cause of the explosion, which wrecked the test stand, was being evaluated to determine if Monday's shot should be delayed. A decision was expected later today.

Meanwhile, plans to fuel the 164-foot tall Saturn 1 today were held up.

Dear Abby...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: If girls don't want trouble with boys, why do they ask for it? I think it's disgraceful the way young girls sit so close to boys who are driving automobiles that you can't get a toothpick between them. There ought to be a law against having a girl's arm flung around the neck of a boy who is trying to drive. Where do they think they are? Paris? It isn't safe on the streets any more with all those one-armed drivers. I am not an old fogy, either. I am 31 years old. Someone should tell those brazen girls how to behave.

DISGUSTED CITIZEN

DEAR DISGUSTED: Yes. And it should be the nut behind the wheel.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am a minister and my wife thinks I have a problem. I don't care to drink anything hot. Especially coffee. (I cannot even stand the SMELL of coffee.) My wife thinks I embarrass a hostess when I refuse coffee, and ask instead for anything cold. She says a hostess goes out of her way to have a perfect meal for the preacher and when I say I don't like something it makes her feel ill at ease. Is my wife right? Must I force hot coffee down me? If not, how can I graciously refuse without embarrassing my hostess?

COLD DRINK PREACHER

DEAR PREACHER: Your wife is mistaken. A minister is just as entitled to his preferences as any other man. If you don't care for hot coffee — say so. And don't be fearful of embarrassing your hostess OR your wife.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am in the U. S. Navy and have been writing to this girl for over two years. We started out being just pen pals, but we have become very close through our letters. I mean it has become serious in a romantic kind of way. (Mention of marriage, etc.) We have never met face to face, but we've exchanged pictures. I just found out that she was only 13 when she started writing to me (she said she was 18) and now she is only 15 years old. Do you think I should keep writing to her? I am almost 21.

FEELS FOOLISH

DEAR FEELS: Yes. But in your next letter, tell her frankly that you know her age, and also that you never would have begun the pen pal relationship with her had you known she was only 13 at the time. Then taper off.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: As a citizen who is in the public eye I feel it is your duty and responsibility to back up the government in its efforts to make mail delivery easier. I have been watching your column daily in hopes of seeing something added to your message, "IF YOU WANT A PERSONAL REPLY TO YOUR LETTER, PLEASE WRITE TO DEAR ABBY, P. O. BOX 3365, BEVERLY HILLS CALIFORNIA" Where is your ZIP CODE number, Abby? And what do you intend to do about it?

CIVIC-MINDED

DEAR CIVIC-MINDED: I intend to say, "My zip code number is 90212." And thank you!

11-Year-Old Bears Child

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—An 11-year-old girl who is a sixth-grade pupil gave birth to a stillborn infant Friday, police said.

Officials at Grace-New Haven Community Hospital refused to say anything about the birth, but police reported that the girl apparently experienced a normal, full-term pregnancy.

The sex of the dead infant was not disclosed.

Police said an investigation to determine the father was continuing. They quoted the girl's parents as saying they had no idea she was pregnant and that she had missed very little time from school.

In Chicago it was reported earlier this week that a 10-year-old girl there is in the final days of pregnancy. Since 1950, according to health records, there have been 15 instances in which 11-year - old girls have given birth.

The youngest mother mentioned in medical literature is a Peruvian girl who bore a son when she was only 5.

Sun Finally Sets On Old British Empire

By TOM OCHILTREE

LONDON (AP)—For 17 years the Union Jack has been coming down flagpoles over the world and the sun has slowly set on the old British Empire.

Kipling's white man's burden, dominion over palm and pine and the forflung battle line have gone the way of the Roman and other empires.

Now the empire - liquidation process is almost done. Only scattered colonies remain. The rest have been transformed into independent nations inside and outside the Commonwealth and it all came out about the way Kipling predicted in "The Recessional," a solemn poem he wrote in salute to Queen Victoria's 60th anniversary on the throne in 1897.

But the burdens are not ended for Britain's soldiers and taxpayers. They are as much involved as ever in the world's stresses and troubles—without the riches reaped at the high tide of empire.

Cutting the colonies loose from Britannia's apron strings is not always an easy, simple operation.

Sometimes she has to hurry back to protect a newly independent country from an angry neighbor, as is happening now in the Federation of Malaysia.

Or she may step in to restore order, as in Cyprus.

Lightning military operations also are mounted to aid the evacuation of British nationals from trouble spots such as Zanzibar and Tanganyika.

All these are current problems. The British have been involved in similar operations almost without pause since World War II.

Britain spends more now on overseas countries than it did at the height of empire. Since the war, the British government has distributed the sterling equivalent of $4.2 billion in loans and grants, with the overwhelming bulk of this money going to present and former colonies.

Recent troubles in Zanzibar and Tanganyika had British soldiers, sailors and marines and ships and planes hurrying to East Africa to protect British residents.

Britain's standing army of only 172,000 men, all volunteers, is stretched thin by these activities. In the immediate future it will have to struggle along with the men it has because neither the governing Conservative Party nor the oppostion Labor Party wants to call for reintroduction of the draft in an election year.

Yet the wind of change is blowing with gale force in various former British possessions in Africa. Uprisings touching off orgies of killing and destruction could begin in almost any of them at any time.

In addition to the Commonwealth countries, there are some parts of the old empire that have cut ties with Britain. Included in this list are Burma, the Palestine mandate territory (now divided between Jordan and Israel), Sudan, South Africa, Somaliland and the South Cameroons.

Even in some of those countries situations could arise that would bring the Tommies double timing it down the road to some riot-shaken capital.

As an old sergeant says: "It's a cockeyed world."

Lawyer Unable To Interview Baker

WASHINGTON (AP) — The special counsel for the Senate Rules Committee's probe into the business affairs of Robert G. Baker says he has been unsuccessful in trying to interview the former Senate aide.

"You can't interview a man who won't be interviewed," counsel L. P. McLendon told newsmen.

But he added that Carole Tyler, a former beauty contest winner and Baker's secretary, would be called later as a witness.

Baker, 35, quit under fire Oct. 7 as secretary of the Senate's Democrats. The committee is seeking to determine if he or any other Senate employes engaged in any impropriety or conflict of interest.

Earlier witnesses testified that Baker talked an insurance salesman into giving President Johnson a $500 stereo set in 1957.

Most of Friday's hearing was devoted to the fancy $28,800 town house that Baker turned over to Miss Tyler and one or two other girls.

C. W. Taylor, president of the cooperative housing development which built the 4-bedroom, 2-bath house in Washington's southeast area, says he has been trying unsuccessfully to sell it. The rules of the development require the owner to live in it, and Baker lives with his family in an expensive home in the northwest area.

The chief problem in selling it seems to be the French wallpaper and lavendar wall-to-wall carpeting which Baker installed.

Taylor said Baker became quite upset when informed he would have to sell the house. He said Baker phoned him Nov. 21 and "launched into this great outpouring in defense of himself and the young ladies."

Living in the house along with Miss Tyler was Mary Alice Martin, a former secretary for Sen. George Smathers, D-Fla. Previous testimony showed that Smathers let Baker in on a profitable Florida land investment venture several years ago. Miss Tyler is still living there.

Trick Too Realistic

CHESTERFIELD, England (AP)—Alyn Walker, 6, swallowed a marble, then tried to produce it behind one of his pals' ears.

He had watched carefully as his father had performed the trick the day before.

Alyn wasn't able to produce the marble he had swallowed for his pals, Paul 6, and Tony 9.

So Alyn swallowed another marble. He tried again to make it appear behind a pal's ear. Still no marble.

Undaunted, Alyn swallowed 14 more marbles. But still no luck.

That night Alyn got a stomach ache. Next day he was taken to a hospital for an X ray which showed that he still had 14 marbles inside.

The father, Geoffrey Walker, said Friday night:

"When I showed the trick to our four children I never thought any of them would try to do it, or I would have explained that I just pretended to swallow the marble. I have explained it now—particularly to Alyn."

Texas Completion Rate Increases

AUSTIN (AP) — Oil and gas well completions in Texas are at a faster rate than last year, the Railroad Commission said Saturday.

Oil well completions for the week totaled 127. The year total was 688, five ahead of 1963. Gas well completions totaled 32, to bring to 216 the year's total, compared to 177.

A total of 135 wells were plugged, including 90 dry holes. Seven oil and four gas wildcats each were drilled.

The total average calendar day allowable was 2,913,801 barrels, an increase of 10,519 over last week.

Prominent Arizonans Perish In Crash

BENSON, Ariz. (AP) — The publisher of one of the Southwest's legendary weeklies and two other prominent Arizonans died in the crash of a light airplane.

The bodies of Clayton Smith, 48, publisher of the Tombstone Epitaph, and educators T. C. Johnston, 44, and Donald Ensign, 49, were recovered Friday.

Their Piper Tri-Pacer went down in the rugged southeastern Arizona mountain country about eight miles southwest of Benson.

Abstainers Pay Dearly For Weed

By ROGER LANE
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A weed that grows wild in the Great Smokies is worth a fancy price because so many people are trying to quit smoking.

An alkaloid derived from the weed would bring $70 an ounce —if there was any to be had.

It's lobeline sulphate, main ingredient in most stop - smoking drugs. Ordinarily, it sells for about $40 an ounce. The herb it comes from, Lobelia Inflata which re-seeds itself annually, won't be gathered again until late summer.

Makers of tablets, lozenges, pastilles and special chewing gums to substitute for the cigarette habit say business is booming.

Two eastern drug chains confirm difficulty in keeping up with retail demand since the government report of Jan. 4 linking heavy cigarette smoking with cancer.

Booksellers, also trying to capitalize on the cigarette deterrent impulse, report fairly brisk sales of books which counsel for aspiring quitters.

Trade sources say about a dozen drug deterrents are sold nationally, and other regionally.

"Bantron," an aspirin - sized tablet containing lobeline sulphate and anti-acids intended to offset lobeline's tendency to produce nausea, has been marketed nationally for about 10 years.

Other specifics have names like "Nikoban," promoted through physician channels, 'Lobidram Computabs," "Smokurb," "Smokend," "Smoke Less Tablet," "Ban Smoke," "Beat-Nic" and the like.

Heart Drive Is Planned For Feb. 23

Joe Carroll, Scurry County Heart Fund Chairman, has announced that he has been informed of Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson's acceptance as Honorary National Heart Sunday Chairman.

The First Lady has long been active in the affairs of the Texas Heart Association and of the Washington (D.C.) Heart Association. It will be Mrs. Johnson's first year of service as Honorary National Sunday chairman.

Mrs. John F. Kennedy occupied the post for two years, and Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower filled a comparable position for four successive years.

Carroll and the Scurry County Heart Association are in preparations for holding the Heart Fund Drive house-to-house campaign in Snyder. These volunteers will help compose some of the 1,750,000 Heart Fund volunteers who will visit their neighbors in observance of Heart Sunday, Feb. 23, to advance the fight against heart and circulatory diseases.

Tradition Of Top Sergeant Takes Blow

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP)—The tradition of the Army top kick just isn't going to be the same since 1st Sgt. M. I. Stephen checked into Martin Army Hospital at Ft. Benning this week and gave birth to a seven-pound, 13 and -ounce daughter named Susan Cecelia.

The 39-year-old sergeant, a veteran of 19 years service, and daughter are doing fine.

"Mable calls her a little pixie. . .That baby has black hair and is cute as can be," the first sergeant's husband, M. Sgt. Max Stephen, said Friday.

His wife is top soldier of the 120-woman WAC company at Ft. Benning and the assistant of operations sergeant of the 197th Infantry Brigade headquarters. They were married in May 1960, at Orleans, France, and both were first sergeants then.

The baby was born Jan. 22. First Sgt. Stephen had taken leave for the event since October but will be back running the WAC company about March 6.

"It is fairly complicated having a baby, now. This is the first one. We had to guarantee the Army that we had a full-time maid for example."

11 Buckets Full Of Money Sought

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Officers were looking for 11 buckets full of change today. The coins comprise the heaviest part of the estimated $16,000 —including about $4,000 in bills —taken from three safes in a vending machine office.

Marvin Vandiver, a Georgia Bureau of Investigation agent, said three burglars entered the building Friday by cutting a hole in the roof.

The coins were in 11 one-gallon buckets.

Harlingen Judge Joins Carr's Staff

AUSTIN (AP) — Atty. Gen. Waggoner Carr said Saturday he has appointed Dist. Judge Hawthorne Phillips of Harlingen first assistant attorney general.

He replaces Albert Jones, who will return to the University of Texas Law School.

Phillips, 49, has been judge of the 107th District Court since 1955. He is a former assistant district attorney for Cameron County and a former special FBI agent.

Former Secretary Is Now Pharmacy School Student

IMO JEAN CLARK
... right at home again

WEATHERFORD, Okla. — Imo Jean Clark, formerly of Snyder, lives by the philosophy that a person should follow the profession that is most rewarding, regardless of the cost in time and difficulty. This philosophy is reflected in the determination and will power of this sophomore in the school of pharmacy.

Mrs. Clark first came to the Southwestern (Oklahoma) State campus in 1947 as secretary to R. H. Burton, then president. At that time she had completed office training at a Tulsa business college and was concentrating on helping her husband, Miles, through the Southwestern school of pharmacy.

"Miles had a degree in engineering," she recalls, "but he wasn't really satisfied with it. He's always wanted to be a pharmacist, so we knew that was what he had to do."

While she was working, Mrs. Clark still managed to collect a few odd hours' credit in business administration; when her late husband opened a pharmacy in Snyder, she took care of the bookkeeping end of the business.

"I loved association with people in the profession," she said, "and when Miles died the only clear way for me was to become a pharmacist myself. Besides, I couldn't imagine just sitting."

Mrs. Clark enrolled in prepharmacy in Sept., 1961, in the first class to begin the five-year program in Southwestern's school of pharmacy. She admits now that her greatest worry was an extreme lack of confidence.

"I was afraid of coming back and being out of place. I couldn't see myself feeling really among the students, but it wasn't like that at all. I knew at once that I was right at home again."

Last summer Mrs. Clark completed pre-pharmacy requirements and entered the school of pharmacy, her first major role. As well as maintaining honor grades, she is the mother of two daughters, Maurine 10, and Cherokee, 8.

"I'm so happy that I'm not depriving my daughters of a mother, though. The girls are independent and a great help to me. Everything works out perfectly and it's a beautiful arrangement. Cherokee even started school the same year I did."

Noting changes in the school of pharmacy since her husband was a student, Mrs. Clark praises the added facilities and the curriculum improvements, and comments upon a more practical approach to managing a pharmacy now taught in the program.

"I was delighted to find that there were so many women in pharmacy," she said. "Ten years ago it seemed that there were only three or four women taking pharmacy, and I always wondered why more didn't enter the field."

She also commented that Dean W. D. Strother and Dr. Charles Schwartz were the only members of the pharmacy faculty who were "still here" since she last lived on the campus.

Mrs. Clark is vice-president of the Kappa Epsilon, professional fraternity pledge group and has regular "study sessions" in her home with a number of students.

"I suppose, after all, I'm just a normal pharmacy student. I scream and beat my head against the wall sometimes, even though I love the courses. I'd rather anyone didn't even mention the word 'test.' I shrivel."

Brownwood Coliseum Is Visited

A trip to Brownwood Thursday was described as "most enlightening" by members of a group of Snyderites who inspected the coliseum there.

A delegation had met with the Scurry County commissioners court Monday to request that the court make the trip to study the Brownwood building with the thought in mind that a similar building might be feasible for Snyder sometime in the future.

Making the trip were County Judge Sterling Taylor and commissioners Thayne Mebane, Bill Hairston and Bill Herring.

Other interested citizens making the trip were C. A. Daugherty, Claude McCormick, Sr., Joe Glass, Herbert Feather, Guy Sullivan, John Boren, George Patterson and Felix Jones.

Also Delma Shelburne, Bobby McCormick, Woody Forrester, Mr. and Mrs. Cullen H. Toombs, Mrs. Clifford Terry, Mrs. Louise London, Mrs. Mal Andress, Mrs. John Leftwich and Mrs. J. T. Hughes.

Those making the tour reported a good reception from the Brownwood citizens and agreed that a good deal of study will be necessary before making any decision on a similar structure for Snyder.

Man, 80, Proud To Be Father Again

OPELIKA, Ala. (AP)—"I am proud, proud as an old man can be," said 80-year-old William Jordan Raughton, who is one of Opelika's newest fathers.

Grinning over his new addition, William Jr., the father admitted that the past week was a rough one. He is anxious to take his wife, Josie, and their son home.

The baby, born Jan. 16, was Raughton's first child in 47 years. He has three grown children, 12 grandchildren and 17 great grandchildren. The infant was born by Caesarean section and is reported in good condition.

Mrs. Raughton, 37, is his second wife.

Wallendas Return In Triumph

By FELIX WOLD

DETROIT (AP) — High overhead on their trembling high wire, the Great Wallendas scored a triumphal return.

It was the site where two members of their troupe plunged to their deaths two years ago.

But Karl Wallenda's famed troupe, including his lithe, dark-haired daughter, Jenny Faughnan—widowed in the 1962 tragedy here — performed Friday and Friday night before thousands without mishap.

"I'm so happy," Karl, 59, said Friday between the afternoon and night performances. "I'm the happiest man in the world."

"The first thing I'm going to do is call Mario and the family," he said.

On Jan. 30, 1962, Mario, now 24, Karl's son, was crippled for life when the Wallendas' sensational "pyramid" broke apart and most of the group plunged 40 feet to the ground.

Jenny's husband, Richard, 29, and Dieter Schepp, 23, were killed.

There was no fixed net to catch them, possibly save them.

There is no fixed net on this Wallendas' showing either. However, during a bicycle act, 16 men holding a net made of rope stand beneath.

Before the show, in their crowded little dressing room, Karl said he was hopeful of new success here.

"This is the starting point," he said. "If everything goes well today, it will be the beginning of a new act."

Rare Version Of Bible Is A Balm To 'Wife-Beaters'

By PHIL THOMAS

CHELSEA, Mich. (AP)—The man who whacks his wife and wants to salve his conscience can do so by referring to the Bible—that is, the "wife-beating Bible."

It is this rare version, printed in London in 1549, which contains a note to that effect in the text following Peter's instruction to wives to be chaste.

Says the note, in modern English:

"And if she be not obedient and helpful to him, endeavour to beat the fear of God into her head, that thereby she may be compelled to learn her duty and do it."

The Bible belongs to Ben R. Donaldson, 69, who has more than 800 Bibles in his collection. It is one of a number of Bibles in which notes were intentionally inserted by translators.

In his collection, Donaldson—a retired auto executive — has a number of bizarre or unique Bibles.

"I don't really recall how I got interested in Bible collecting," Donaldson says, "but I used to teach a Sunday School class about 35 years ago, and I suspect that somewhere about then I got interested in Bibles." He says his collection is believed to be the largest and most valuable private collection in the United States.

It includes the "Vinegar Bible," a name given to a magnificent, folio-size edition printed in 1717 by John Baskett in London. The edition was full of errors. One of these was a misprinting of the parable of the vineyard in the book of Luke as the "parable of the vinegar."

Donaldson says that in the early years of printing, the Roman Catholic Church was against translating the Bible from Latin to English. When the church realized it could not stop the trend it decided to issue its own English translation and in 1582 it issued the New Testament and in 1609-10 the Old Testament.

The first dated Bible appeared in 1462. Donaldson has a 1466. He has manuscript Bibles dating back to 1225; tiny Bibles that can be held in the palm of the hand; giant Bibles that are barely liftable; Bibles bound in silver and sprinkled with jewels, and Bibles bound in embroidered cloth.

One of Donaldson's manuscript Bibles, written in Latin by an apparently disgruntled monk, has at its end a penned in phrase, which loosely translated, reads: "The book finished, let us break the bones of the boss!"

Poll Tax Payment Still Safest Way To Qualify

The two-class voter system, pointed out as a distinct probability here several months ago, has come to pass in Texas with ratification of a constitutional amendment outlawing a poll tax as qualification for voting in federal elections.

This year, you may vote for such officials as Congressmen, U. S. Senators, the President and Vice President without a poll tax. It is illegal for a state to require a poll tax before permitting anyone otherwise qualified to vote to obtain a ballot.

At the same time, Texas still has a poll tax law because voters turned down a state constitutional amendment to do away with the poll tax last November. Therefore, voters in this state must have a paid poll tax receipt to obtain a ballot to vote for local, county and state officials. We say "paid" poll tax receipt, because apparently there are going to be two types of receipts issued in Texas this year. One will be the usual "paid" receipt which entitles the purchaser to vote in all elections. The other will be stamped "not paid," which will be a signal to election judges to give the bearer a ballot with all except candidates for federal offices marked out. There will be a limited period when those who have not paid their poll taxes may obtain one of the "not paid" receipts.

There is going to be some confusion, although state and county officials will do everything they can to make the two-class voting system work smoothly. The safest way to make certain that you are qualified to vote is to buy a poll tax receipt. Even if you happen to be interested in federal offices only it is the safest way in Texas for another year.

You still have five days to pay your poll tax.

Fertilizer Lure To Oil Industry

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP) — More and more oil firms are investing millions in the fertilizer industry.

One oil executive said this week the "corporate marriage" trend between fertilizer and petroleum results from the simplest kind of economic forces.

"It boils down to the fact each has certain things which the other requires and each has has needs which the other is capable of filling," said L. F. McCollum, president of the Continental Oil Co.

Continental is among the major oil firms which have invested or earmarked about $750 million the past year to acquire or build fertilizer plants.

Others include Socony Mobil, Cities Service, Gulf, and Standard Oil Co. New Jersey.

World Fertilizer consumption is expected to double within 10 years. Such forecasts have played major roles in petroleum's intensified drive to challenge the chemical industry's dominant position.

The new trend on the part of the oil firms indicates increased emphasis on the use of natural gas in the production of ammonia, a major source for the vital nitrogen component of most fertilizers.

In a $100 million transaction, Continental recently acquired the American Agricultural Chemical Co. McCollum said the purchase brought together great raw material potential, aggressive marketing, extensive resarch facilities, and a pool of management and technical personnel.

Continental earlier had acquired the Mid - South Chemical Corp., which distributes liquid nitrogen in 12 states.

The oil industry also is searching for other ways to serve agriculture.

Experiments are well advanced on the use of paraffins and other petroleum fractions for the control of plant fungas disease.

Selected fractions also are being developed as coating for fertilizers to control the rate of release of plant nutrients.

Jersey Standard's affiliate, Humble Oil, disclosed initial marketing plans last week for a new agricultural mulch which researchers have said can increase the yield from some crops 15 to 58 per cent.

The mulch costs about 35 cents a gallon and is sprayed over the seed beds.

The resin film absorbs solar radiation and retards evaporation of moisture from the seed zone.

Test Ground Dedicated At Laredo

By RONNIE THOMPSON

LAREDO (AP) — A big tire testing facility, used to determine how much "punishment" a tire can take, was dedicated today.

The multi-million-dollar facility, built by U. S. Rubber Co. and known as the U. S. Royal Tire Proving Ground, spreads over 6,900 acres of flat ranchland just north of this border city.

Secretary of State Crawford Martin, representative of Gov. John Connally, headed a group of state officials in Laredo for the ceremonies.

The facility represents an estimated $1 million annual income for Laredo.

Initial employment will be about 100. Future expansions may double this figure.

Harold Barrett, president of the U. S. Rubber Tire Co., said Thursday that the Laredo Proving ground "forms the core of a tire testing program that will log more than 400 million test miles each year."

At Laredo alone, a fleet of 80 cars will log more than 20 million of the total miles, he said.

Barrett called activities at the center "tire torture with a purpose."

Glamorous U2 Now A Drab Workhorse

By RALPH DIGHTON
Associated Press Science Writer

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—The once-mysterious U2, a winged Mata Hari originally built to vault cameras across the Iron Curtain is fast becoming a drab workhorse of near-space research.

Their "sky spy" function now largely taken over by Samos and Discoverer satellites, U2 pilots now spend many of their long, monotonous hours in the air on vital but unglamorous missions like these:

1. Laying eggs. From altitudes in excess of 60,000 feet, U2s drop 300-pound capsules which simulate the film-containing nose cones kicked away from reconnaissance satellites. Discoverer and Samos capsules are recovered over the Pacific. U2 capsules are dropped over land and cargo planes from this desert base practice snagging them as they parachute to earth.

2. Missile tracking. For the past three years U2s equipped with infrared (heat) measuring devices—they look like small pickle barrels mounted behind the pilot's cockpit—have monitored missile launches from Cape Kennedy, Fla., and Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif. This study is aimed at improving Midas satellites' ability to detect missile launchings and warn U.S. defense forces.

3. Double-checking the X15. On many of its high-speed flights, the U.S. space agency rocket plane carries an Air Force camera package. Pictures taken from the X15 are distorted by air friction heat which sometimes builds up to 1200 degrees Fahrenheit on the X15's skin. These are compared with undistorted photos of the same area taken at much lower speeds and altitudes from a U2.

4. Hunting storms. With its unique ability to loiter for hours at heights reportedly up to 17 miles, the U2 not only can photograph hurricanes from vantage points unattainable by ground-based weathermen, it can watch them develop over long periods—up to eight hours at a time. U2 photographs sharper and closer, frequently are used to pin-point potential storms detected by the Tiros weather satellite.

5. High altitude research. U2 pilots don't always know the purpose of the black boxes carried on their planes, but it's a good guess some of them are instruments being developed for super U2s which could police nuclear test ban agreements.

Under the heading of high-altitude research also falls a project, calling for 500 hours of flying, to investigate a turbulence found at heights where there is supposed to be little air. U2s are measuring this turbulence to assist in the design of proposed supersonic transports which will cruise at altitudes above 60,000 feet. Flights in this study have taken U2s from Alaska to the equator.

For the past three years—ever since the destruction of a U2 over the Soviet Union, May 1, 1960 brought an official promise they would not be used again to spy on Soviet territory—U2s have been channeled into an increasing research-and-development role.

Some still are used for military purposes: photographic reconnaissance over Cuba, Red China and other areas.

The growth of the U2 as a scientific tool is indicated, however by the establishment of a unit here at Edwards AFB, headed by Lt. Col. Harry Andonian, which is strictly for research. The unit has numbered as many as seven planes, currently has five.

Andonian says the three U2s normally based here and two others detached to Patrick Air Force Base, Fla., fly 25 to 30 missions a month, each lasting four to eight hours.

Andonian has a maintenance crew of 20, plus four navigators and three pilots. He is looking for more.

Volunteers qualified to fly in U2s are hard to find. The pilots must be graduates of a test pilot school and like the navigators, who really don't do much navigating but usually concentrate on running research instruments, they must be emotionally stable enough to endure long hours in the air and long trips away from home.

Learning to fly the U2 is hard enough. Its glider-like wings, so long they have to be supported by tip-wheels which drop away at take-off, carry much of the plane's fuel. This means the pilot must constantly be alert to pump fuel from one wing to the other in flight to maintain balance.

The really tricky part about flying the U2, however, is landing it.

"The big wings mean she can't land until she stalls," Andonian says. "The pilot has to make her stall just above the ground; and trained ground crews have to be on hand to grab the wing tips or she's likely to fall over.

"A new pilot coming into the unit has to make at least 50 practice landings before we feel he's properly checked out. We all make at least 10 landings a month just to keep in training."

The U2's 80-foot wingspread means another hazard for its occupants. Designed primarily to soar, the U2 can't land quickly, even in an emergency. Astronaut-like pressure suits have been developed to keep pilot and navigator alive should the cabin pressure fail.

Wind, Dust, Cold Plague Farmers

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Winds, dust, cold and spotted moisture plagued Texas farming during the past week.

Heavy snow and some rain helped the northeastern third of the state, said John Hutchison, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Rain fell in southeastern counties but the entire state still needs soaking rains, he said.

Cold and drought kept the growth of cool season plants at a standstill, increased livestock feeding and caused a further decline in pasturage, he said.

Only limited areas reported adequate surface moisture but subsoil moisture is short in practically every area, the director said.

The entire Panhandle was short on moisture. Wheat made no growth and the marketing of cattle from wheat pastures was heavy.

The South Plains is dry and the dryland counties need rain badly. About half the ranges are below average but range cattle are in average condition for this season. Irrigated wheat looks good but that on dryland needs moisture.

Nineteen of the 22 Rolling Plains counties need rain. Grain growth is slow and furnishing only limited grazing. Feeding is necessary.

Snow slightly improved the surface moisture situation in North Central Texas and there was hope the moisture would revive small grains. Heavy feeding goes on.

Snow and rain helped Northeast Texas but more is needed. Moisture ranges from very short to adequate. Oats are making slow growth due to the cold. Little or no grazing is available.

Last week was cold and dry in far West Texas. Moisture for winter grass growth is needed. Feeding is increasing but no unusual livestock losses are reported.

Moisture is very short in West Central Texas where small grains made little or no growth. Livestock are in fair condition. Feeding is heavy.

Snow gave some relief to parts of Central Texas and rain helped others. The moisture situation was spotted. Oats made no progress in the cold. Despite heavy feeding, much shrinkage in livestock was noted. Little or no grazing is available.

Moisture is short in East Texas. Livestock are in fair condition but ranges are below average.

Cold weather was hard on livestock in the upper

Moisture is short in East Texas. Livestock are in fair condition but ranges are below average.

Cold weather was hard on livestock in the upper Gulf Coast and Southeast Texas. A good fall of wet snow helped some countes. Surface moisture is generally good, but subsoil moisture is needed particularly in the west. Permanent pastures are providing little or no grazing. Feeding is heavy.

Only a few South Central Texas counties got rain. Low temperatures held back the growth of flax and range vegetation. Some cold damage to oats and seedling blight damage to flax was reported. Calving is on. Feeding is heavy and culling livestock is common.

Moisture in far South Texas is short to very short except in three counties. Harvesting of citrus and vegetables was slowed by cold, damp weather. Ranges are below average and cattle are being fed.

Experiment Ahead Of Schedule

So far, the Colorado River Municipal Water District's experiment in stockpiling water for summer use in Odessa is progressing slightly ahead of schedule.

Through Saturday, a total of 54,000,000 gallons of unfiltered water from Lake J. B. Thomas had been injected by gravity flow into two wells of the Martin County well field.

Occasionally, pumps in the wells are turned on to pump out suspended solids which may have lodged around the well bore. On each run, said O. H. Ivie, assistant general manager of CRMWD, the wells take the injection at the original rate. At this point the two wells are taking the water at about 13 per cent higher rate than anticipated. If this continues, by May 1, over 171,000,000 gallons will have been put in storage, and pipeline capacity is such between the Martin County well field and Odessa that this can be withdrawn intensively during the summer months when demands rise to peaks.

Ivie said that studies are being made on the amount of suspended solids going into the formation and being recovered by the backwashing when pumps are turned on. The lake water at this time of the year is almost totally clear. All water being injected into the wells is first chlorinated to insure purity and to control any bacteriological or organic growth.

Within two weeks, bids may be taken by the district on two wells to be drilled below the injections wells in order to insure maximum recovery of the water injected.

Girl Killed On Ride Home From Party

HOUSTON (AP)—A trip home from a mid - term graduation party ended in death Friday night for Miss Phyllis Perez, 19.

She received fatal head and internal injuries when her car, given to her last Tuesday, hit a light pole and two parked vehicles.

Investigators said the driver was Lucio Ayala, 16. Officers said Ayala told them he was driving Miss Perez home when the car skidded into the pole. Ayala was in fair condition.

Lacik VP Again For OIC Panel

Harold A. Lacik, Unit Manager of the Sharon Ridge Canyon Unit at Snyder, has been chosen to serve another year as Area Vice Chairman for the Oil Information Committee of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association. In this capacity he will head up OIC activities in Zone 2 of the West Texas Area.

His appointment was announced by Jim Shute of Gulf Oil Corporation in Midland, who is chairman of the 18-county West Texas Area. Shute said that Lacik's zone is comprised of Mitchell, Borden and Scurry Counties. Through Lacik's leadership, the Oil Information Committee will provide speakers, films and demonstrations to local clubs and organizations, make educational materials available to teachers and students in schools, and select teachers for the annual OIC workshop, a three - week fellowship at the University of Houston.

The Oil Information Committee seeks to make clear how well the people of this region are served by many oil businesses and gain support for conditions under which they can continue to be privately managed, fully competitive and financially sound.

Georgia Tech Withdraws From SEC

By MIKE BARRON
Associated Press Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) - The ranks of the big time independent football teams was increased by one today as Georgia Tech's 31-year tenure in the Southeastern Conference came to an abrupt end.

Dr. Edwin P. Harrison, Tech president, dropped a bombshell into the usually placid SEC meeting in Atlanta Friday by announcing Tech's withdrawal. Harrison didn't even give the SEC presidents a chance to vote on the controversial 140 scholarship rule.

In the swirl of controversy which followed Tech's action, the 140 rule was lost in the shuffle. It never did come up for a vote.

Now Tech faces the advantages and disadvantages of being a big time independent such as Notre Dame, Army, Navy and Miami, Fla.

Gone, as of June 30 when the withdrawal becomes official, are the comforting confines of a conference where a team can always be assured of scheduling a fellow member.

Gone, also, are the restrictions of a conference, where a team has to schedule a certain number of conference games to be eligible for the championship. Opportunities abound now for chances to play intersectional games with other schools.

Then, too, there is the fact that Tech no longer will have to share its slice of bowl earnings with the SEC and the remaining 11 schools.

Harrison and Bobby Dodd, head coach and athletic director, believed the advantages outweighed the disadvantages. But they didn't seem too happy about leaving, nor did the other members express joy at Tech's departure.

Up until Harrison's announcement shattered the composure of the meeting, there was hope for a compromise which would keep Tech in. But even though the 140 rule was never voted on, it was a virtual certainty that the conference intended to keep it. And that meant Tech was out.

Now the SEC is down to 11 teams, including Alabama, Auburn, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana State, Mississippi State, Mississippi, Tennessee, Vanderbilt and Tulane.

SEC Commissioner Bernie Moore says it will remain that way at least until next year, precluding the possibility that Florida State or Memphis State might take Tech's place this year.

Tigers Take Ponies 75-41

The Snyder Tigers remained undefeated in district play as they easily outmanned Sweetwater 75-41 in Tiger Gym Friday night. The win gave Ned Underwood's Tigers a 4-0 record in loop action.

In other conference activity Friday night Lamesa ran over the Colorado City Wolves 87-50 and Brownfield edged Lake View 65-63 in overtime. Lamesa and Brownfield are now tied for second place with 3-1 records.

It was strictly no contest for the Tigers as they jumped off to a 19-16 first quarter lead and then broke it wide open in the second period as they scored 15 points while holding the Mustangs to only four. Every member of the Snyder varsity saw action, and all of them hit the scoring column. The reserves played about half of the game.

Leslie Brown led the Tigers in scoring with 14 points. He garnered 11 of these during the second quarter. Leslie Anderson followed him with 12 points. Anderson led the Tiger rebounders as he gathered in 14 off the boards.

Benny Pace, Sweetwater's all-round athlete, topped all scorers with 17 points. He was followed by Doyle Bradbury with 8 points.

Rebounding was about even between the two teams during the first half, but the Tigers dominated the boards the last two stanzas and led in rebounds for the game 45-37. Sweetwater lost the ball 19 times without getting a shot during the contest, while Snyder lost it seven times.

The Tiger B team nosed out the Mustang B team 51-45 in the preliminary game. Bill Hartsfield's boys went to the locker room at halftime with a 27-16 lead, but the Mustangs made a contest of it during the second half and outscored the Tiger Bees in each of the last two quarters.

Glen Patterson led the Tiger B team scorers with 12 points, followed by Steve Crowell with 11, Ronnie Dietrich with 10, and Steve McMahan who had 9.

The Snyder varsity's record is all even now with 8 wins and 8 losses. The B team has won 8 and lost 5.

The Tigers will wind up the first round of district play Tuesday as they take on the always tough Brownfield Cubs in Brownfield.

Golf Is Normal; Arnie Is On Top

By DICK BARNES
Associated Press Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Golf is back to normal - Arnold Palmer is on top.

Minus the usual cigarettes but in possession of his sensational iron game for the first time this year, Palmer charged to the front of the $50,000 Lucky International Open Friday with a five under-par 66 and 133 total at the halfway mark.

He took a one-stroke lead over Don January into today's third round at rain-softened and footprint-pocked Harding Park municipal course. Seven other men were within five strokes of the lead.

Mason Rudolph, 135.

Dave Ragan and Ray Floyd, 136.

Jerry Steelsmith and Jack Rule, 137.

Tommy Jacobs and George Bayer, 138.

Rudolph, Ragan and Floyd each fired 67's Friday - second only to Palmer's bogeyless round.

"I was hitting the irons real close to the holes," said Palmer, golf's all-time money - winning king and earner of nearly $130,000 in 1963.

Indeed, he hit them so close that none of his birdie putts was longer than six feet. Twice he approached within a foot of the cup and another time planted the ball within two feet.

He seemed a different Palmer as for the second straight day he went without cigarettes, following a resolution he made Wednesday night.

Lincoln Wins Over Big Lake

Lincoln High downed Big Lake in both ends of a basketball doubleheader in Lincoln Gym Friday night. The Lincoln boys won 92-38 and the girls were victorious 54-14.

The Trojanettes are now in second place in District 2B-A with a 5-2 record. The Lincoln boys are currently in third place in the standings with a 4-3 record.

Linwood Durst led the Lincoln boys with 37 points, and Joseph Crayton had 24. Leroy Trader was high for Big Lake with 20. Vernon Clay of Lincoln led the rebounders as he pulled 10 off the boards.

Mary Goosby was high for the Lincoln girls as she hit the nets for 26 points. Cresa Watson had 10 points to lead the Big Lake girls. Louline Brookes led the Lincoln rebounders with 9.

PANAMANIAN ON GOOD TERMS WITH YANKS— Hector Lopez, New York Yankees outfielder who comes from Colon, Panama, comes to terms with Yankees General Manager Ralph Houk, left, and Manager Yogi Berra as he signs his 1964 contract in New York. He was tenth Yankee to sign this year. (AP Wirephoto)

NFL May Alter Rules

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — The National Football League will consider altering its rules to make ties count in the team standings at the annual meeting opening Tuesday.

The system of ignoring tie games and figuring standings strictly on a won and lost basis almost produced a big controversy in the final stages of the 1963 season.

With one game to go — Pittsburgh at New York—the Giants had a 10-3 record for .769 and the Steelers 7-3-3 which, ignoring the three ties, is 7-3 or .700. If the Steelers had won the last game they would have had an an 8-3-3 mark or .727 and the Giants 10-4 or .714. As it was the Giants won the game and the Eastern Conference championship and the Steelers wound up fourth.

A proposed amendment to the constitution would have tie games count one-half game won and one-half game lost. On that basis, a Pittsburgh victory in the final game still would have left the Steelers short of the title, for they would have had a 9½-4½ record for .679.

Several college conferences, including the Big Ten, use this formula in figuring out their standings.

The league will consider this amendment but the guessing is that it will fail. When the matter was discussed in mid-December several clubs said they saw no reason to change. To change the constitution 12 votes are needed. Thus, three clubs can beat an amendment.

A year ago when the league met it was under the shadow of the investigation on gambling on league games by players. Commissioner Pete Rozelle eventually suspended Green Bay's Paul Hornung and Detroit's Alex Karras for at least one year and fined others.

Rozelle has said he will not consider any reinstatement or further action on the suspensions until February. The matter is not scheduled to come up at the meetings for it is completely in the hands of the commissioner.

Although there has been considerable discussion about moving the title game to Florida or California, away from the frozen fields and snow and ice, there is no such proposal on the agenda.

No Strong Effort To Recruit Negroes

FORT WORTH (AP) - Texas Christian University head football Coach Abe Martin says he has no plans to make a strong effort to recruit Negro ahtletes this spring.

TCU trustees announced Thursday that all phases of the university's program will be integrated effective at once.

"The decision will have no effect on our present recruiting plans," Martin said Friday in reply to a reporter's question. "If we encounter a boy who is qualified and wants to come to TCU, we certainly will talk with him."

During spring training the Yankees will play two night games at their Fort Lauderdale base. They meet the Dodgers under lights on April 6 and the Senators on April 10.

Davis Leads In All-Star Bowling

DALLAS (AP) - Dave Davis of Phoenix and Laverne Carter of St. Louis held tenuous leads as the $100,000 All-Star bowling tournament headed into the fourth and final day of round robin matches today.

Davis, an almost gaunt southpaw, was only 98 pins in front of hard-pressing Bob Strample of Detroit.

Mrs. Carter, wife of four-time All-Star champion Don Carter, commanded the women's division by a 110-pin margin over Miami's Evelyn Teal.

Davis came out of Friday's 12th round with a record of 29 games won, 19 lost and a total pinfall of 10,587. He earned a 1,450 bonus-50 pins for every game won—to make his grand total 12,037.

Strample had won one more game but knocked down 14 fewer pins.

Dick Weber, defending champion from St. Louis, was still in contention in fourth place.

Tommy Tuttle, Rural Hall, N.C., who led the tournament for the first seven rounds, came to life again Friday and popped into third place. Tuttle had Friday's finest series, a 986.

Mrs Carter had won 17 and lost seven games while amassing a total of 4,840 pins. The tall blonde received an 850 pin bonus for her victories to boost her grand total to 5,690.

PAMPA, Tex. (AP) — Peter Carlos Pistol Pete Pedro, fullback of the West Texas State football team, and Miss Gloria Jean Quintero of Amarillo, were married here Friday.

The ceremony was performed by Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford in the Gray County courthouse.

Locals Win Four Golden Glove Bouts

ODESSA — Snyder boxers won four bouts while losing three in Golden Glove action here Thursday and Friday. Three of the wins were by decisions and one was a tehcnical knockout.

Jesse Costello won by a first round TKO. Winning by decisions were Eloy Benitez, Rudy Benitez, and Ruben Gonzales.

Snyder boys losing bouts were Andrew Trevino, Martin Benitez, and Pat Barber.

Scheduled to have bouts Saturday night were Jesse Costello and Freddie Benitez. Finals are set for Monday.

Spahn Sues For $175,000 Damages

NEW YORK (AP) — Warren Spahn, pitching ace of the Milwaukee Braves, is demanding $175,000 damages for what he terms a fictionalized biography of his life.

The 42-year-old left-hander appeared Friday in State Supreme Court in a suit against Milton J. Shapiro, author of "The Warren Spahn Story;" Julian N. Messner, Inc., publisher, and the firm's president, Katherine G. Messner.

Spahn contended the book was written without his consent, constituted an invasion of privacy, and contained inaccuracies.

The defendants entered a general denial. They held that Spahn is a public figure.

Justice Jacob Markowitz, hearing the case without a jury, adjourned proceedings until next month.

Loraine Defeats Fluvanna

FLUVANNA — Loraine defeated Fluvanna in both games of a basketball doubleheader here Friday night, winning the boys' contest 73-45 and the girls' game 36-33.

Bobby Stansell was high pointer for the Fluvanna boys with 15, followed by Belew who had 9. Moore of Lorane topped all scorers for the contest with 31, while James Wallingsford had 19.

Loraine's Cornutt led all scorers in the girls game with 17. Rinda Bruner was tops for Fluvanna with 14. Gwen Landrum had 10 and Oralia Ynguanzo garnered 9.

The Fluvanna boys have now won one while losing five in district 86-B action, and the girls have a 0-6 conference record. Loraine boys are leading the district, while the girls bracket is led by Ira.

Next activity for Fluvanna will come Tuesday night as the Buffs journey to Ira to take on the Bulldogs.

Winter Olympics Set For Opening

By JIM BECKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP)—Winter sports athletes from 35 countries, trained to the highest peak were poised for the opening of the ninth Winter Olympics in this Alpine capital Wednesday.

All but a few stragglers among the expected 1,270 athletes have checked into the modern apartments of the Olympic Village—the buildings are skyscrapers by Innsbruck standards—and have tested the practice runs.

The Olympic flame has arrived by plane from Greece, and is ready to light up the torch in the opening ceremonies Wednesday morning.

Only the snow is missing.

It hasn't snowed much in Innsbruck since mid-November, and the ski slopes for the games have been carefully packed by hand with snow trucked in from surrounding valleys.

Some 3,000 Austrian soldiers, dressed in spotted brown camouflage uniforms that blend into the snow-bare hills, did the packing job.

Officials still hope for snow, but they say the games are going on as scheduled whether they get any or not.

The men's giant slalom has been shifted down hill about 100 yards, and the women's downhill race has been shortened, because of the snow shortage.

Otherwise, all is ready, even though man-made.

The weather is predicted to be clear and cold most of the games.

The Russians, who are competing in their third Winter Olympics, are expected to dominate the unofficial team standings, but many of the nations entered have a speciality where they expect to win medals.

The host Austrians have trained harder than ever before. So have the French.

The Russians have pointed vigorously for the games. The Americans began sending teams to Europe well before Christmas, and have the best-honed team in history.

The Russian hockey team toured the states and the Czechs went to Canada. Others have played vigorous exhibition schedules.

The Russians far outdistanced the field at the 1960 games at Squaw Valley, Calif., with seven gold medals and 21 medals for the first three places.

Germany had four gold medals and eight over-all, and the United States had three golds and 10 over-all. Norway and Sweden also had three golds.

In the standings since the winter games began in 1924, Norway has 35 golds and 94 medals, the U.S. 22 golds and 63 medals. Finland is third with 17 and 51.

The Russians are world champions in ice hockey, and have strength in cross-country, speed skating and ski jumping.

Czechoslovakia and Sweden are expected to mount the major threat to the Russians in ice hockey, wtih the defending Olympic champion Americans rated little chance.

American hopes for gold medals are concentrated in Jean Saubert of Lakeview, Ore., and Bud Werner of Steamboat Springs, Colo., in the Alpine skiing events.

Second Death Recorded At Winter Games Site

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP)—Tragedy hit the Innsbruck Winter Olympics for a second time when an Australian skier died today after a fall on the men's downhill Olympic course.

Doctors at Innsbruck Hospital said that Ross Milne, 19-year-old Myrtleford, Victoria, tobacco farmer, was dead on admission to the hospital after he was flown to the clinic by helicopter from Mount Patscherkofel south of Innsbruck.

The United States incurred a damaging setback Friday as John Handly, senior pilot of the bobsled squad, suffered a compound fracture of three fingers of his left hand. He will be lost to the Americans for the games which start next Wednesday.

At the same time, a new and unusual development threatened to bother both officials and athletes. Snow fell early Friday, touching off fears that fresh snow might ruin the meticulously hand-made runs. Weekend weather forecasts also called for heavy falls.

Because of a lack of snow, officials have had the downhill and slalom ski courses handpacked with hundreds of tons of snow brought in by truck from remote areas. Skiers practicing on the runs Friday said the courses were excellent.

Bobsledder Handly was a victim of a freak accident. The 40-year-old Malone, N. Y., resident was returning from practice in an Austrian army truck when it hit a bump.

"I was bracing myself against a sled when the bob broke loose and banged against another bob," Handly explained. "It just happened that my fingers were right there, between the two sleds.

Coach Stan Benham said it will take at least a month for Handly's hand to heal.

Gene Kotlarek, who with John Balfanz will head the U.S. ski jumping team, was sidelined for at least two days with a twisted left ankle. Kotlarek, of Duluth, Minn., fell on the second of two practice jumps.

A victim of another fall last Sunday, Kitlarek said, "I may be better off if I quit jumping."

Not all of the news was bad for the United States. Balfanz, who had been out of action with a cold, worked out Friday, jumping 249 and 254 feet. Balfanz of Minneapolis, was outdistanced only by Dieter Neuendorf of West Germany who soared 256 feet.

Two other Americans resumed practice. Jean Saubert of Lakeview, Ore., the Alpine skier who is the United States' top hope for a gold medal, was back on skis after a bout with flu. Returning to the ice was Eddie Rudolph of Northbrook, Ill., speed skating star who had been sidelined with a severe head cold.

Dave Hicks of Duluth, Minn., another training casualty, was expected back on the ski jump today. He has recovered from back and shoulder injuries sustained Thursday.

Rocky Fires At Goldwater Again

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, using increasingly strong language, has fired another salvo at his chief Republican presidential rival — Sen. Barry Goldwater.

Winding up a swing through New Hampshire — scene of the nation's first presidential primary March 10 — the New York governor Friday night attacked Goldwater's suggestion this week that the United States should get out of the United Nations if Red China is admitted. Rockefeller called it a "half-baked notion."

And he accused Goldwater of an "attempt to distort, to deceive and to trick Republican voters of New Hampshire into voting for a candidate who does not stand as a true representative of the party that gave us Lincoln, Teddy Roosevelt and Eisenhower."

Goldwater," meanwhile, reserved his fire for President Johnson. Speaking to a Young Republican meeting in Washington, he called the President "a highwayman of the bureaucratic spoils system."

The Arizona senator charged the President's budget was "a spender's contraption of mirrors, tinsel and neon."

Goldwater also was the subject of some sharp language from a Democrat — Florida's Sen. George Smathers.

Appealing to Alabama Democrats to back President Johnson Smathers chided Goldwater, who is rated a strong contender in the South, as "the self - appointed savior of the South".

"This is the man who wants to sell the TVA while pushing for a $2 billion water program for Arizona; a strong advocate of the Civil Rights Commission and a senator who, in 1957 and 1960, cast 40 affirmative votes in favor of oppressive civil rights legislation and against the South," Smathers told a fund-raising dinner at Birmingham.

But his plea — echoed in a speech at Valdosta, Ga., by Georgia Sen. Richard B. Russell —apparently had little effect on Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace.

Wallace, who hopes the South can deadlock a presidential election and gain civil rights concessions if the contest is tossed into the House of Representatives, said Southern states should leave their electors free to vote against the national party nominee.

Russell, acknowledged leader of the Senate's Southern members, said he had no doubt Johnson was solidly committed to support civil rights legislation.

But, he said, aside from that issue, he agreed with the President on many things and thinks Johnson "has the potential to become one of the country's greatest presidents."

Pa., Gov. William W. Scranton — who has been prominently mentioned as a possible GOP candidate, met during the day with two fellow Republican governors — John Love of Colorado and Robert E. Smylie of Idaho.

Love and Smylie, who with Scranton form the executive committee of the Republican Governors' Association, indicated their home states were curious about Scranton, who has said he would accept an honest draft as the party's candidate.

But both said that at the moment Sen. Goldwater is ahead in their region. They said they expected to lead uncommitted delegations to the Republican convention in San Francisco in July.

In other political developments:

—The Cleveland Plain Dealer quoted Sen. Stephen M. Young, D-Ohio, as saying astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. voted for Republican presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon in 1960. Glenn is opposing Young in the May 5 primary for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

—The race for the Republican nomination for governor of Illinois changed complexion for the second time in a week, when Cook County (Chicago) GOP chairman Hayes Robertson withdrew in favor of state Treasurer William J. Scott. Scott, who calls himself conservative, will meet industrialist Charles H. Percy — a moderate — in the April 14 primary to oppose incumbent Democratic Gov. Otto Kerner. Earlier this week, GOP front-runner Charles F. Carpentier withdrew because of a heart attack.

— In Concord, N.H., American Nazi party leader George Lincoln Rockwell announced he would enter the state's New Hampshire presidential primary as the "most right wing Nazi you ever saw."

Petition For Alimony Is Quashed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge has quashed an alimony petition against tobacco heiress Doris Duke on grounds the process server served the wrong person.

Miss Duke, 51, is being sued for divorce by bandleader Joseph Armand Castro, who says he was her secret husband.

Castro also has filed a $150,000 damage suit against the heiress, charging she tried to kill him with a butcher knife last July.

In his divorce suit, Castro, 36, asked for reasonable alimony, estimating his expenses at $5,000 a month.

But at a hearing on temporary alimony Friday, lawyers for both sides said Miss Duke never had been served with the alimony petition. The process server had handed the document to the wife of Miss Duke's lawyer by mistake. The judge then quashed the petition.

Castro filed suit for divorce Jan. 10, stating he had married Miss Duke July 6, 1956 in Providence, R.I., and again Feb. 7, 1960, in Philadelphia.

Role As Martian Prompts Cheers

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A funny thing happened to Ray Walston at a movie premiere recently. He found himself cheered as loudly as Gregory Peck.

"Fantastic!" exclaimed the actor. "Nothing like this has ever happened to me before."

But then, he had never played a martian on television before. And that is the circumstance that has changed Walston's life.

Television viewers will agree that "My Favorite Martian" is one of the few new shows to make a dent on the ratings. The Sunday night CBS comedy appears set to return for the 1963-64 season.

This delights and amazes Walston, who scored as Luther Billis in "South Pacific" and the devil in "Damn Yankees" in both the stage and screen versions.

"It's a whole new world for me," said Walston. "I'm the kind of a guy who is used to walking out a stage door and watching the people flock around Gwen Verdon or some other star. Now it's happening to me.

"You know something? I like it. Don't believe those actors who claim they don't like the clamor of the public. As Ralph Bellamy once said, the only time actors don't like it is when it stops."

Walston has found another aspect that he enjoys: The lack of competition.

"Take the last show I did on Broadway, 'Who Was That Lady I Saw You With,' " he commented. "I played in it with Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healy, wonderful people who were schooled in the night clubs. Even with them you had to be on your toes at every minute or you could be crowded right off the stage. The same is true with Gwen Verdon or any top performer.

"But in television I feel at ease for the first time.

"I may be stuck with these antennae on my head for some time to come. Things could be worse."

LIGHTEST MEXICO

BY JOHN ABNEY

MEXICO CITY — One of the grand prizes of the travel agents convention here created a mild stir when they called out a number and a jolly fellow stood up waving his hand wildly.

The master of ceremonies smiled politely and said, "Come right up, sir. You have won a nice Ethiopian lion."

And a few moments later, the MC peered into the crowd and asked, "Is the gentleman who won the lion on his way up here?"

So a voice shouted back, "He was standing here in these pants I'm holding just a second ago but nobody could tell which way he went."

Then another number was drawn and a lady from California won the lion. It was several minutes before she regained consciousness so nobody could ask her what she intended doing with a lion in California.

Of course, this one is just a baby lion donated by the Ethiopian Tourist Oraganization (probably the last time they get invited) and cooped up in a house, he may never grow to be more than five feet tall nor weigh over 700 pounds.

Accompanying him, however, was a set of feeding instructions drawn up by several prominent lion pediatricians.

New-born lions are advised to stick to lion's milk for the first eight weeks so in case this little prize is still under age, the lucky lady can simply ask her dairy man to leave a couple of gallons of lion's milk each morning in addition to the normal supply of camel's milk for the rest of the family.

From eight weeks (sometimes referred to as "two Months" on the ancient Aztec calendar) to three months you steadily add things like evaporated milk (cow's) warm water, dextrose, vitamins and calcium syrup while gradually subtracting the lion's milk.

Apparently this is the way all baby lions are raised and the advice comes to us from the Society of Lion Pediatricians which recently held a convention in a Banyan tree in South Africa.

At any rate, toward the end of the three month period the owner can add pablum to her young lion's formula along with ground beef and, in case the jungle instincts appear dominant, a spoon of arsenic might as well be mixed in.

Lion pediatricians, like those for their human counterparts, differ on all opinions of everything from diet to dream interpretation of the young lion.

While I do not intend to understand all facets of lion psychology, I have done a modest amount of research and can tell you certain things baby lions do not like.

To start with, they don't care a hoot for ripe olives (especially the canned ones) even in chicken salad.

They also seem to dislike reindeer meat (when they have to go out in the snow and hunt for it), dill pickles, liederkranz cheese sandwitches, waffles and Hans Christian Anderson's stories at bed time.

It may seem curious but all lions have an insatiable thirst for good Scotch and tend to become alcoholics by the time they are eight or nine years old. Even five week old lions have been known to drink a quart of decent Scotch and hold it reasonaly well.

As a casual coincidence, this could be the solution if you ever win a lion at a convention of some sort. Just feed him three or four bottles of Scotch and stuff him in the suitcase.

After a week at a convention, you might as well arrive home with a drunk lion as the way you would be anyhow.

Trial Of Will Case Delayed By Judge

SARITA, Tex. (AP)—Probate Judge William Edwards has postponed the Sarita Kenedy East will case until early March.

The postponement was granted on motion of 43 plaintiffs and 70 intervenors.

Most of Mrs. East's multimillion dollar estate was left to the Maria Stella Kenedy Memorial Foundation for charitable uses. The estates involves oil-rich land in Jim Hogg County.

Mrs. East, who died in 1961, was the last descendant of Mifflin Kenedy, early partner of Capt. Richard King, founder of the King Ranch.

Little Change In Cattle Rustling

By JACK SCHREIBMAN

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—Way out West where men are men—who do their wives' shopping in shiny supermarkets and live in ranch (style)houses — some things don't change. Like cattle rustling.

The ancient Egyptians and the Chinese before Confucius worried about cattle stealing, and their Cadillac-owning atomic age counterparts of the mid-20th Century still have the problem.

Back in the 1800s, the American cattleman dealt with the rustler by way of a stout rope dangling over a tree limb, or a neat, 45-caliber hole between the eyes.

Today in California, the rustler doesn't have to worry about "cowman's justice." But he can draw up to 10 years in jail.

Cattle rustling in the Golden State is the business of a tall, craggy cowman named Carson L. Hubbard, chief of California's Bureau of Livestock Identification.

"Wherever you have cows, people will be trying to steal them," he said. "Last year there were 1,200 cases in the state. I'd call it one of the worst problems we have."

What Hubbard described was nothing like the cattle rustling of gold rush days, when gangs drove hundreds of animals into obscure canyons and prepared to sell them.

"Today," said Hubbard, "it's an individual thing—but serious. A man's hungry so he drives out, spots a lone cow which he butchers on the spot, then hauls home some steaks to his freezer."

Hubbard told of hunters who go out after deer but end up deliberately shooting a cow. The rightful owner thus is robbed of from $150 to $250.

The more organized rustlers work with trucks, which they drive onto ranges and load quickly with as many cattle as they can carry. In an hour they can be 60 miles away.

Some so-called cattle rustling is on paper only, for the benefit of the Internal Revenue Service, Hubbard said.

It's virtually impossible to get proof against a man who takes a loss on a cow he said was stolen or strayed away, he said.

"If we have any doubts, we always check the man's credit to see how he's doing."

Last year, Hubbard's department obtained about 40 grand theft convictions against rustlers.

The theft of any bovine in California—even a $5 calf—is a felony. Hubbard said this has been a great discouragement to would-be range robbers.

But the greatest discouragement of all to cattle rustling involves the cattle themselves. They are indelibly and permanently marked.

Identification of cattle, who graze on millions of acres of rangeland and are unconcerned about their ownership, is virtually the only way of protection for the men who annually supply Americans with about 1.5 billion pounds of beef.

British Like Only One Krush Point

LONDON (AP)—Britain today welcomed Soviet Premier Khrushchev's proposals for the peaceful settlement of border disputes, but said that Russian plan would have to be more specific.

Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas - Home said that only one of the four points proposed by Khrushchev in his peace message to world leaders on New Year was acceptable to the British.

This called for international commitments to solve all territorial disputes through peaceful mediation and negotiation under the U.N. charter.

The British reply to Khrushchev's message was released both in Moscow and London.

The British prime minister dismissed two of Khrushchev's proposals as too loosely drawn up, and the third as not going far enough.

Douglas - Home told Khrushchev it is "in our common interest" that all armed conflicts should be avoided and Britain welcomed any measures that would effectively outlaw the use of force.

But having agreed with the aim of Khrushchev's proposal, the British leader specified several changes which he insisted must be included in any such agreement.

Douglas - Home said they should consider "how the existing international machinery for keeping the peace can be improved so that any obvious threat of hostilities can be scotched."

Eddie Ready To Settle

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Eddie Fisher says he hopes to settle divorce arrangements with Elizabeth Taylor before he leaves for the Olympic Games on Monday.

Fisher flew here Friday from Hollywood and blasted a statement issued by Miss Taylor's lawyers that he would consent to a divorce for $1 million — $750,000 tax free and the use of $250,000 for 10 years.

Still in Hollywood were Miss Taylor and actor Richard Burton. She recently filed for a divorce in Mexico, where Burton was making a movie.

Fisher is scheduled to fly to Innsbruck, Austria, on Monday for the winter Olympics.

Fisher indicated a settlement of his marital difficulties may be near—"before I leave for Austria."

"As far as I'm concerned, I'm out of it," he said, apparently referring to the activities of his own attorneys.

Miss Taylor has been quoted as insisting she will not "pay for a divorce" so she can marry Burton.

Actress Wants To Portray Fannie Brice In Own Way

By WILLIAM GLOVER
Associated Press Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Barbra Streisand show world's hottest young star is about to portray Fanny Brice, all time Broadway great—in her own way.

"I don't want to imitate anybody," she said. "My ego's too big.

"Besides, this show is fate. the play is really about me. It simply happened to happen before to Fanny Brice. And anyway, it's fictionalized."

Such remarks, delivered in flat tones and accompanied by the unblinking gaze of pale blue eyes, are a clue to the Streisand phenomenon, a mix of bravado, ambition, candor and talent.

Like a three-stage rocket, the girl from Brooklyn zoomed into the theatrical firmament, baffling bystanders en route.

Between October and December she went from $2,500 to $8,000 for a single singing date. Her two albums are breaking sales records. She's the subject of countless interviews, and one amusement weekly named her as "entertainer of 1963."

Now 21, after just a single, supporting appearance previously on Broadway, she opens Feb. 27 at the Winter Garden as the star of "Funny Girl," which salutes the gifted comedienne of the Ziegfield Follies era. Her costar is Sydney Chaplin.

Miss Streisand has reached the top without those usual concomitants of girlish achievement glamor looks and tape-measure excitement.

"My first number in the show is 'If a Girl Isn't Pretty,' " said Barbra. "That about does it all."

Although Barbra insists that dramatic acting was her aim from the start her reputation thus far has been built on her way with a song.

"I've always had a good voice —never trained it and never thought about it. I sing as an actress. What I look for are songs with a beginning, a middle meaning and an end."

Then—like Fanny Brice—she won an amateur contest in a Greenwich Village nightclub, and began the climb through small nightclubs to the fancy circuit.

Miss Streisand is married to Elliot Gould, who was the star of her previous Broadway vehicle, and they recently began furnishing a duplex on Central Park West. Her only silent answer—a vigorous nod of the head—comes to a question about being a wife and mother as well as a star.

"There's only one thing I can't do," she said. "I can't wink. Whenever I try, my eyes just squeeze."

Auto Sales Hike Texas Retail Pace

AUSTIN (AP) — Heavy auto sales pulled all 1963 Texas retail sales to a new high of $13.1 billion.

The University of Texas Bureau of Business Research in a report by James Kelly, said showings in other categories indicate most of the high 1963 total stems from increased auto sales.

The report showed Austin and Fort Worth gaining 4 per cent over 1962 sales, the highest increase. Dallas was up 3 per cent and El Paso up 1 per cent. Houston and San Antonio sales were almost unchanged.

Sales of durable goods increased 7 per cent to $5 billion, mostly due to a 5 per cent increase in auto sales. Nondurable sales were up 1 per cent to $8.1 billion.

Auto sales were up 13 per cent in Dallas, 8 per cent in Fort Worth, 7 per cent in San Antonio, 6 per cent in Austin, 4 per cent in Houston and 2 per cent in El Paso.

December spending totaled $1.3 billion, 22 per cent ahead of November and 12 per cent above December, 1962, to push the 1963 total to $13.1 billion. This compares with the previous high of $12.7 billion last year.

'What's My Line?' Just Keeps Going

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—On a chill winter's night in 1950, a CBS newscaster turned entertainer uttered for the first time what has since become a famous line:

"Will our first contestant enter and sign in, please?"

It was the evening of Feb. 2, and the premiere show of that television institution, "What's My Line?"

The speaker was John Daly, and over the past 14 years, he has repeated, with minor variations, the same phrase more than 2,800 times in about 700 programs.

In a department of show business in which a two-year-old program is considered good and three years great, 14 seasons is a television miracle. "What's My Line?" shares longevity honors with only one other program, the Ed Sullivan Show that started about a year earlier.

The Sullivan show, however, has experienced many changes. About the only basic change that has occurred on "What's My Line?" has been in the composition of the panel.

Daly has been host and anchor man through the years and has missed only four performances during the entire period. Columnist Dorothy Kilgallen sat on the first panel and is still one of the vital ingredients of the program's continuing success. Arlene Francis, the other woman regular, joined the show for its second performance. Publisher Bennett Cerf was added in May 1951.

For the first six years, the four panelists were regulars. Now the fourth chair is reserved for guests on the theory that a combination of new faces and the regulars, give the program its perennial appeal.

Steve Allen was a permanent panelist for over a year between 1955 and 1956, alternating with Fred Allen, who stayed until his death.

Gil Fates, executive producer who has been with the show for 13 years, points out that the program now has contestants whose lines didn't even exist when it was born—an airman who spent seven days in a space chamber, the executive officer of an atomic submarine, a rock 'n' roll composer, the head of astronaut John H. Glenn's launch team and a director of the Peace Corps, among others.

"We've also had as contestants youngsters who were not even born when the program started," he adds.

For about the first five years, the show barred return engagements of its mystery guests.

"We try for people who are so well known that the audience recognizes them on sight," Fates says. "And we learned that there just were not enough of them so we let some return from time to time."

Close to 700 mystery guests have appeared on the program, a veritable "who's who" of celebrities.

Integration Of Church Is Urged

HOUSTON (AP)—The council of the Episcopal Diocese of Texas has directed its institutions, and has "strongly" urged its congregations to "eliminate race as a factor of participation in any portion of their life and activity."

Final passage of the resolution on race relations was watered down considerably from the originally proposed resolution that would have had the council directing "All institutions and congregations of the church of the diocese of Texas to eliminate race as a factor. . ."

Also amended out of the resolution was a passage that read: "Be it further resolved that we call on all our members to support civil rights legislation that reasonably and effectively administers social justice."

Ruby's Act Leaves Riddles

By BERNARD GAVZER

DALLAS (AP) — Jack Ruby killed more than a man. He killed a secret.

The bullet he fired Nov. 24 while millions watched on television, destroyed Lee Harvey Oswald and gave history an unanswerable riddle.

Why was President John F. Kennedy assassinated?

A mountain of evidence—circumstantial though it is—points to Oswald. But before Oswald could provide answers, Ruby pushed his way into the picture and killed Oswald.

Why?

There have been quick answers: He was insane with grief and killed impulsively to avenge the President. He killed to get publicity for himself and the strip joint he operarated. He was part of a super-plot.

Ruby's behavior in jail indicates he may be troubled, too. He apparently gives little thought to his fate.

"He talks, oh my, how he talks," says one of Ruby's visitors, "but not once have I heard him ask, 'What will happen to me.' He does ask, 'Do people approve of me?'

"Just this week, he spoke with me nearly two hours, and over and over he talked about that Sunday morning. It was like hearing a man talking about something that didn't happen to him, as though he was trying to figure out to whom it did happen. He goes over every single detail, over and over, as though he is trying to learn something or find something."

One of his most frequent visitors is his sister, Eva Grant. Her visits are welcome, but decades of brother-sister bickering do not vanish easily. Something about a recent visit caused Mrs. Grant to recall that when they lived in San Francisco in the early 1930s, Ruby got so angry with her one night he fled their apartment complaining, "If this was my wife, I'd divorce her, but how can you divorce a sister?"

He doesn't herald her visits with the pride and satisfaction that he displays for some people such as the rabbi of a substantial conservative synagogue in Dallas.

"Ah, see, you guys," he called out to jailers during a visit by Dr. Hillel Silverman of Congregation Shearith Israel, "I've got a classy visitor now."

Among others stamped classy by Ruby are the noted psychiatrist. Dr. Manfred Guttmacher of the University of Maryland and Johns Hopkins; Dr. Roy Schafer, a psychologist from Yale University; Melvin Belli, the handsome and articulate lawyer from San Francisco. Belli heads Ruby's defense; Schafer has given Ruby a battery of tests, and Guttmacher has examined him psychiatrically.

Prison routine hasn't cooled Ruby's passion for keeping trim. With close to 185 pounds on his 5-foot-9 frame, he is stocky. But exercise keeps him solid. His thinning hair worries him.

He still swings between emotional extremes. Old Dallas acquaintances say "Ruby is the kind of guy who reads a newspaper and lives it. He reads about a kid getting polio or a dog getting run over, and he cries. The same way in a movie. If the good guy gets double-crossed, Ruby acts like it happens to him."

Most of all he worries about what people think of him.

"When he reads letters from people who tell him he did right, or otherwise compliment him," says one of his visitors, "his spirits go way up. He says he has had no mail from anyone criticizing him. Maybe they only give him the complimentary mail. I don't know."

"Class" is an important word to Ruby.

A source close to the prosecution says:

"Ruby is a class-conscious nobody who saw an opportunity to do something that would put him in the public eye and even make him a hero. He was not insane. He was rational. But he figured wrong. He's not a hero; he's a heel. Because of fouling up history."

The defense seems to agree too. Indications are it will try to show that Ruby's preoccupation with class not only was irrational but at certain times bordered on insanity.

Ruby was the sixth of nine children born to Joseph Rubenstein, a carpenter from Sokolow, Poland, and his wife, Fannie. He was born March 25, 1911, in a flat on Johnson Street, now Peoria Street, in an area of Chicago known as the Maxwell Street ghetto.

They called the youngster Jake.

In the Smith Elementary School yard, young Jake learned the toughening games of buck-buck and run-sheep-run and kick-the-can. He also learned to fight the Italians who came down from Taylor Street in Little Sicily.

His sister, Eva, remembers him as a kid who moved lazily. She called him "Sparkplug," after a plug-horse in a popular comic strip. He also was called Jack.

The ghetto kids were shunted onto the street and stayed there until it got too dark or too cold. But one place the Rubenstein children always found a warm welcome was the Holy Family school.

"We played a lot in the basement at Holy Family," recalls Earl Ruby, now 48 and proprietor of a cleaning and dyeing business in Detroit. "The nuns were wonderful to us. They gave us milk and cookies in the afternoon."

The Rubensteins kept moving from flat to flat with their eight children. One daughter, Jeanette, died in 1909 at the age of 2 from injuries suffered when she was scalded in the kitchen.

By the time Jake entered the Shepard school, he apparently was a hellion. "Sparkplug" became Sparky, a name that has remained with him, specially among his Chicago friends.

"Sparky was a real scrapper, even when he was 10," says brother Earl. "He was always getting into fights and winning 'em. I think, that's the main reason pa liked him so much. He was the old man's favorite."

The boys — Hyman, now 61 and salesman of florist supplies in Chicago; Sam, now 50 and operator of a automatic laundry servicing business in Dallas; and Jack — all had to attend religious school after regular school hours.

"It was worse than anything," Earl recalls. "I don't know how many times Sparky took a hit on the head. We used to get such a hit with the ruler."

But Earl and another sister, Marian, called Mary by her brothers, agree there was a lot good that could be said for the old days.

"Listen, everybody was the same, everybody spoke the same language," Earl says. "When we lived on the West Side, away from Maxwell Street it was a place with compensations. There were wonderful places to eat. I think it was near the Gold Theater there was Fluky's where they had nickel hot dogs with everything on them—everything."

The family was having troubles the younger kids couldn't understand. Joseph and Fannie separated in 1923. Sparky, Earl, Sam and baby sister Eileen went to foster homes.

Ruby reached confirmation age, 13, while in a foster home. But he never had a bar mitzvah, the traditionally vital event in Jewish life.

Being 13 also meant a boy got his first long pants, and he could go into Davey Miller's, a popular poolroom hangout on the "great west side," as the area was called derisively, by its inhabitants.

The elder Rubensteins reconciled in 1925 and moved into a new flat on the West Side. Sparky and the others had their first Thanksgiving turkey in this flat, sister Marian says, "and ma also learned how to make chop suey with kosher food because we told her how delicious it was."

The big event in Jewish social life was the Sunday softball game. And, as though true to Dr. Delee's casual prediction, Sparky was good at it.

"Sparky wasn't just good, he had that extra something. He was a scrapper, a go-go guy," brother Earl says.

A scrapper was admired. Sparky's first hero was Barney Ross, later world welterweight and lightweight champion.

"When I was in the amateurs, Sparky was with me. He'd come around to carry my bags and go in free at the club fights," says Ross. "He was with me the night I won the Golden Gloves in '29. I've been his friend ever since."

Sparky had little knack for school. He dropped out at 16 after six months in high school.

The depression brought political zealots into the ghetto, but if the Rubensteins paid any attention it escaped notice.

"The only thing political I remembered," says Earl, "was wrestling at the Democratic party meetings for a couple of bucks.

"We were too busy hustling for every cent we could. We'd do everything. Scalp tickets at Wrigley Field and at Comiskey Park and at Soldier Field. At the football games we'd ask people if we could watch their cars. The idea was that if they didn't tell you okay, they could expect the air out of their tires."

The guys who used to hang out at Davey Miller's still remember the 1927 Dempsey - Tunney fight mostly for the guys who got in free. Sparky was one.

"We snuck in all right," says Benny Barrish, now a liquor Salesman in San Francisco. "But that story about Sparky having a metal plate in his head because a cop clobbered him with a night stick is bunk. A cop did throw a stick. But he didn't hit anyone."

In 1933, Sparky went West, along with Benny Barrish and a few others from the neighborhood.

"I was fighting as a featherweight," says Barrish, "and working my way West by fighting. But when we got to Frisco, we all went into the canvassing business, what they call 'conning the doors.'"

Brunei Holds To Backward Ways

By CONRAD FINK

BRUNEI TOWN, Sultanate of Brunei (AP)—Almost oblivious to the changing world and yet threatened by it, the Sultanate of Brunei moves along at almost a 19th Century clip.

So little happens in this northwest Borneo area that people gather in the doorways just to watch it rain. It rains a lot, up to 200 inches a year.

Even for Borneo, Brunei is a startling example of resistance to the 20th Century. Though the tiny nation is rich in oil, its citizens—about 80,000 by most estimates — make do with 87 miles of roads, a low standard of living, and a daily airline connection over the jungle to the outside world.

But a revolutionary fever of rapid political and economic change grips other states along the sweltering Borneo coast, threatening to swamp Brunei.

British troops have been fighting in the neighboring states of Sabah and Sarawak to crush terrorist bands attacking from Indonesian Borneo in an effort to shatter the new Federation of Malaysia.

Brunei, which rejected the federation in favor of continuing as an outright British protectorate, already has tasted its neighbors' trouble. More is almost certain to come.

A revolt in December 1962 nearly succeeded before Britain rushed in troops. Surviving rebels fled to Indonesia. They are there today, growling at Brunei and its ruler.

The ruler is the Sultan Sir Omar Lai Saifuddin Saadual Khairi Waddin, a dapper man of 49 who gives out medals with titles almost as long as his own.

The sultan, a Moslem, lives in an ornate hilltop palace. On ceremonial days it is awash with guards clad in red silk and carrying spears, swords and glittering shields. On these days the sultan dresses regally in the fashion of his royal ancestors who can be traced back to 1500.

On ordinary days he prefers London-tailored tweeds for puttering about in the air-conditioned game rooms of the palace. His great passion is gun and sword collecting, and he will spend hours telling visitors about his favorite weapons.

The sultan will talk less about threatening terrorism and the changing world that has seen Brunei shrink from onetime ruler of all Borneo island to a 2,226-square mile speck in the jungle.

"What has happened should not have happened," was as far as he would go in an interview.

In reply to a question on economic development, an interpreter replied that various plans are being considered, "as far as his highness knows."

The sultan's personal wealth is not known, but informed officials predict Brunei's income in 1964 will total about $35 million, almost all of it from oil pumped by Shell Petroleum Co.

December Sets Record For CRMWD

December set new records just as 1963 did for the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

During the month revenues amounted to $195,694, boosting to $2,297,584 the total receipts for the year. Of the total revenues, $1,507,443 came from member cities ($961,538 from Odessa, $422,259 from Big Spring and $104,070 from Snyder, plus $18,937 from rural users.) Another $727,281 came from sale of surplus water to six oil groups for waterflood operations. Rural installations returned $2,472 and recreational facilities produced $60,387.

For 1962, revenues had amounted to $2,053,168, of which $1,469,980 came from member cities, $522,124 from sales of surplus water to oil companies, $628 from rural installations and $60,435 from recreational facilities

December operating costs amounted to $65,264, making $755,635 for the year. The excess of revenues over operating expense was $1,541,949 compared to $1,348,013 the previous year. The difference was transferred to the various funds under the indenture, principally for the payment of principle and interest on the bonded debt. Electric power for running the pumps was the biggest item of operating expene, totaling $378,961. The other major item of expense was $216,188 for payroll.

Water sale figures (which are for November through December because they are collections for the previous month) showed 10,425,149,000 gallons metered to customers. Odessa drew 4,186,163,000, Big Spring 2,585,314,000, Snyder 778,135,000, the balance going to the oil companies. Of the total production 9,484,759,000 gallons came from Lake J. B. Thomas, 414,681,000 gallons from the Martin County well field, 93,877,000, from city lakes, and 431,832,000 from city well.

Country Cousins Square Dancers

The Snyder Country Cousins Square Dance Club is a fairly new club, having organized in January of 1962, but are one group with a great deal of enthusiasm. Their membership at present is 56, but this does not include the six-year-olds up to teens they are teaching the art. They also have a teen-age group that recently organized their own club. They welcome spectators and give lessons free to those who wish. If you are looking for a good clean sport, full of exercise and lots of fun, they extend an invitation to 'come on out'.

You Can Dress Up Those Neglected Walls

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Do-it-yourselvers looking for cold weather indoor projects might consider improving beat-up walls in neglected areas — stairway, stair landings, foyers.

Walls with their cracks, bumps and gouges are often rejected as projects when they are not in the living areas of the house. But these walls can be made an asset to the entire house and easily rejuvenated with a minimum of time and money.

Tearing out the entire wall is a big nuisance to the household, a dirty task for the do-it-yourselfer who must breathe in old plaster and a headache to the homemaker who must live with the mess. It is an expense no matter what course is pursued when a wall is torn out and replaced. New lathe and even additional new studs often are required, insulation, plaster or plasterboard and taping, and then the finish — paint or wall-covering — can chew up several hundred dollars.

An alternative that can be less expensive and eliminate the mess involves putting up either a finished plywood — walnut, teak, birch, etc. — or an ordinary plywood and covering it with one of the marvelous new wallcoverings.

Furring strips may be put up, plywood and then a finished decorative material to bring the cost down considerably. In addition, the handsome covering used can set a charm theme for the entire house.

An idea used by one well-known antiques buyer is a covering of deep gold burlap along the staircase wall of his little salt-box home and above the wainscoting of an attractive beamed living room.

The gold color is exactly right for his English antiques, paintings and other treasures and the cost of the material used was negligible.

The burlap was put up with a special adhesive and attached with staples at sides to establish evenness. This burlap is laminated to a backing which is then coated with the adhesive before application.

Deep red is another effective staircase wall covering, with either contemporary or modern furnishings.

There are narrow and wide, striped tickings, and more elegant fabric coverings — linens, brocades, grass cloth and moires. There are vinyl laminated and coated burlaps that defy grubby hands. They are scrubable and scuff resistant. These permit the use of light colors and white on walls and stairways.

Wall paneling can upgrade old bumpy living room walls. A good rich finish can be achieved, too, by using a rich color above a wainscoting of warm-tone paneled wood.

Dark colors can flatter a small living room. If the proper balance is used — dark wood along with a rich color and light, bright accents, results can be truly amazing. The warmth of wood can help make the room cozier than any other decorating scheme.

This technique should be studied carefully before it is used. The proper textures and accent colors must accompany dark wood. Burlap is a good choice, providing the color chosen is not muddy. White wainscoting is an excellent choice for a small room, using yellow, vibrant blue or red paper or burlap above it. One is helped in the choice of this laminated burlap because colors available are beautiful. It is difficult to make a wrong decision, unless it is an the harmony of other furnishings in the room.

Dead Trees Used In Landscaping

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Have a dead tree in your yard?

Well, put down that axe — it may add to the appearance of your home — says University of Oklahoma landscape architect Bob Rucker.

Rucker, recently planted two dead, but graceful junipers, for Dr. and Mrs. Norman A. Ricker of Norman. And he says the use of dead trees in landscaping is coming into vogue.

For example, Oklahoma City interior decorator Joe Riggs has decided to leave a huge dead blackjack oak beside his studio. The tree, which hangs over the studio, will be covered with vines.

And a gnarled elm next to the Oklahoma Highway Patrol Office in Oklahoma City will be left standing, although dead.

Rucker says the "deadwood" theme in landscaping is related to the driftwood vogue which started during the 1940s.

Because of its radical departure in concept from blossomy, traditional landscaping, deadwood would not be good in many conventional yards, Rucker said. It is particularly effective, he says, against "the clean, simple lines of contemporary architecture."

Just any old dead tree won't do for decorative purposes, however, says Rucker, but people with dead trees on their hands "ought to give a look."

Rucker is assisting in landscape planning for Oklahoma's exhibit at the 1964 World's Fair in New York where a live redbud tree was planted in dedication ceremonies recently. Rucker said he hoped the redbud would not become a "deadwood" exhibit.

A SINGULAR MAN. By J. P. Donleavy.

Singular, in several senses. Meaning unusual, odd or strange. Also solitary, lonely.

Odd and lonely is George Smith, the hero of his novel. It being the modern fashion to have heroes who are anti-heroes, George is that kind. Another character is a type that has cropped up a good many times in current fiction — a luckless, bumbling eccentric who attracts misfortune like a magnet.

In short, the story about this singular George is what people now call an experimental novel. Unconventional all the way.

You learn gradually that George is a businessman, stingy at times, lecherous, supporting his four children and his divorced wife, an overbearing snob; living with a Negro housekeeper, seducing his secretary. He falls in love with a glamorous promiscuous fashion model. But she is elusive, and much of the plot is concerned with his pursuit.

Incoherent things happen. George, stinking rich in some unidentified business, is building an elaborate mausoleum and rides in a bullet-proof limousine. For unexplained reasons, he gets mysterious, threatening notes. His lechery leads to several erotic scenes. Could George be a symbol of our sociologically disrupted era?

Donleavy has a staccato, impressionistic style. He weaves craftily through first and third person, past and present tense, in adjoining sentences. Unnerving. But once you get the hang of it, quite effective, for the author performs prodigiously.

A singular book. Unquestionably some readers will find it utterly baffling. Some presumably will find it quite brilliant. Few will be able to read it calmly.

Heat the oil in the skillet; add liver and cook over moderate heat until brown and barely cooked through; to turn easily, use a wide spatula. Serve liver around onions. Makes 4 servings.

Sands Of Marriage Shifts Crisis

A CHANGE OF PLEA. By Camilla R. Bittle.

The author of this novel shows remarkable understanding of her main theme—the gradual, drifting disintegration of a marriage, and the tenuous factors that can make it possible to salvage something hopeful out of the wreckage.

It is a story, set in a sultry Carolina summer, about a lawyer named Tom Richards, his wife Virginia and an attractive young Alanta matron named Miriam Henderson, who is fleeing from a distasteful alliance with a wealthy, brutal and unfeeling husband.

Tom has reached the point where he feels that Virginia—once a sacrificing helpmate—has settled down into nagging and pushing. He is the tired business man who feels frustrated by the captivity of patterned marriage; who cannot stand the nightly jabbering of his son Tad and his daughter Jennie, and at the same time feels guilty when he fumbles his parental relations with them.

Virginia feels that Tom has lost his devotion to her and is inheeding, self-centered. She is shattered and helpless when she learns that Tom has fallen into an affair with the visiting Miriam.

All this time, Tom is upset about a manslaugher case he has taken in behalf of a teenager named Rick, son of his friends Fred and Grace Stebbins. The marriage theme gets a contrasting light in this aspect of the story, for Grace is a real witch.

The crux of the story lies in the way Tom and Virginia—and particularly Tom—meet their crisis. This is no maudlin soap opera, no tear-jerking saga of suffering. It is a remarkably clear-eyed story about the abrasions, human weaknesses and confusions that married people sometimes experience.

Mrs. Bittle has an engrossing story. She writes with compassion—not bitter, nasty despair—about human emotions, and she gives them the reality of graphic, human experience. Few authors can write so well on such a complex theme.

BACON-BRAN CORNBREAD

1 cup cornmeal
1 cup milk
1 egg
2 tablespoons soft shortening
1 cup sifted flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
5 slices uncooked bacon, diced

Stir together the bran, cornmeal and milk, let stand until the bran and cornmeal absorb most of the milk. Add the egg and the shortening, beat well. Sift together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add to bran mixture, stirring only until flour mixture is moistened. Turn into a buttered 9-inch skillet with an oven-proof handle. Sprinkle with the diced bacon. Bake in a hot (425 degrees) oven about 20 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. If top crust and bacon are not browned, place under broiler for a few minutes. Cut into 10 wedges and remove with spatula, serving piping hot.

All Can Do Wonders In Decorating

Wonders in decorating can be performed even by amateur craftsmen nowadays.

A striking example is a damp, dark, dismal basement which, through the magic of modern paneling, lighting and other home improvement materials, can become a delightful family or recreation room.

Made bright and sparkling, it reflects the hospitality of the hosts.

Essential to the transformation are good planning, brand name products that have long life and easy care, and a dedicated craftsman or carpenter.

Home planning experts advise that the selection of a suitable wall surface is the key to success in this venture. Many families are using factory-finished, wood - grained hardboard. These handsome panels are dent and wear - resistant—just the thing for a fun - filled recreation room.

A wide selection of colors and grains is available at lumber and building supply dealers. They include cherry, walnut, teak, elm, pecan and oak.

For an accent panel, hardboard in the motif of travertine marble is recommended by interior decorators.

The craftsman overcomes the problem of overhead conduits by boxing them with light lumber and covering the framework with the same pattern woodgrained paneling used on the walls. Thus, the woodgrain is carried into the ceiling area to enhance the overall appearance.

Overhead or indirect lighting and a light - textured floor covering complete the major installations required in changing a cellar from nothing to "really something." As a final touch, put in furniture in keeping with the attractive room, and don't neglect the windows or fail to place a few well - chosen pictures on the walls, decorators advise.

Audubon's Originals Are On Display Now

By MILES A. SMITH
AP Arts Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — One hundred years ago one of America's art treasures entered the archives of the New-York Historical Society.

Now there is a bright new installation at the Society's headquarters for displaying examples of this treasure — the original water colors and drawings by John James Audubon, from which came a famous series of engravings called "The Birds of America."

The engravings, in a huge size called the elephant folio, published in London by Robert Havell in the 1820s and 1830s, made Audubon famous as both an artist and a naturalist.

It was a tremendous project, finally reaching 435 plates. Audubon himself helped find subscribers — including George IV — who paid $1,000 each for the whole set.

There were 161 sets, sent to subscribers five plates at a time, and a good many of these sets remain intact. Scholars know of 87 complete sets in the United States (including one now in the society's possession) and 5 in Canada.

The current market price of a full set of engravings in the elephant folio would be in the neighborhood of $35,000. When single engravings come on the market they bring anywhere from $25 for the lesser birds to several thousand dollars (providing they are in prime condition) for the more famous ones — such as the Wild Turkey, Plate No. 1.

The original water colors and drawings remained in the Audubon family after the artist's death in 1851. But in 1863 his widow, Lucy Bakewell Audubon, offered the collection for sale. There was a campaign for public contributions and the Society raised $4,000 to purchase them. In 1963, if a set of engravings would bring $35,000, the originals certainly would be valued at several times that sum.

Not quite all the originals were acquired. Three were missing, and there is no recorded explanation.

Researchers know now that the original of "The Condor," which became Plate No. 426, found its way into a private collection.

But the records describe as "whereabouts unknown" the originals of "The Blue - Gray Gnat - Catcher," which became Plate No. 84, and "The Black-Throated Blue Warbler," which became Plate No. 155.

Perhaps some attic still holds the two missing originals.

The Society does not have the space to exhibit the whole collection at once. For years it has displayed a few examples in a small gallery. Now it has created a large, well - lighted gallery, arranged in modern museum techniques for effective presentation.

It shows more than a score of the originals, but it also tells a story. There are biographical notes and examples of Audubon early drawings.

There also is an interesting contrast between an early representation of the Snowy Owl, and a later version which was used for the engraved series. It shows clearly Audubon's growing skill as an artist.

There also are some variants.

In one panel of the new exhibit there is a progressive series. First there is Audubon's water color of "The Bald Eagle," holding a goose in its talons. But the artist decided the bird should have another prey. The second example shows the eagle with a catfish in its grip. Interestingly, Audubon did more than change the prey, for the second version of the eagle is more finished.

Above these two originals there is a black and white engraving, as produced by Havell from the second water color, and finally, the finished product, — the engraving as colored by hand.

Broccoli With Golden Sauce

1 bunch broccoli, 1¼ pounds
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 teaspoon flour
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
½ teaspoon dry mustard
2 egg yolks
¾ cup milk
1 tablespoon lemon juice.

Cook broccoli stalks and keep warm. Melt butter in a heavy saucepan (about 1 quart) over low heat. Remove from heat. Stir in well the flour, salt, white pepper and dry mustard. Beat egg yolks slightly; add milk and beat enough to combine. Stir all at once into flour mixture. Cook and stir constantly over very low heat until slightly thickened and mixture will coat a silver spoon (as in custard); do not allow to boil. Stir in lemon juice off heat and pour over broccoli. Makes 4 servings.

Candied sweet potatoes are delicious when either orange juice of pineapple juice is added to the brown sugar and butter mixture. If orange juice is used, add a little of the grated orange rind as a pretty garnish.

Dress Up Meals, Add Nutrients

Heading your list of favorite basic recipes may well be a biscuit recipe. From one recipe you can bake scrumptious rolls and coffeecakes for family breakfasts, unusual entrees for guest and family luncheons and dinners and savory appetizers and snacks plus myriad other delicious items.

Whether you were taught by a wise mother to turn out a panful of flaky biscuits, you learned as a bride or are learning now, you are aware that best results come by following exact directions each time you bake. This includes measuring all ingredients accurately and taking care not to over-mix or handle the dough.

Knowing your nutritional ABC's is important, also. And putting your knowledge into practice is easy, when you bake biscuits and all other baked foods with enriched flour. The word "enriched" on the label of the flour bag and on the commercially prepared flour products you buy is your assurance of incorporating the B-vitamin thiamine, niacin and riboflavin and the mineral iron into every delicious product you bake.

NEW GALLERY at the New York Historical Society is used to display originals of John James Audubon's water colors, of which the society has 432, and black and white drawings.

ALL ABOUT BABIES

A Public Service of the National Baby Care Council

The Damp-Diaper Theories: Time for a Change

Dr. Raymond J. Spahr Director
Chix Baby Products Research
Chicopee Mills, Inc.

Anyone can tell you how to diaper your baby. And you won't go too far wrong, following the advice. Provided the diaper covers the right area, isn't too tight, and you don't stick the baby with a safety pin.

But when it comes to advising you how often to do the diapering, even the experts get stuck. . . on their damp - diaper theories.

First they inform you most babies don't mind lying around in wet or soiled diapers. And too much emphasis on dry diapers might even result in a lifetime neurosis, making baby feel his bodily functions are ugly and nasty. And so the authorities advise you to change baby's diapers only after feeding. To cover wet diapers with a warm blanket so baby won't feel cold. And to save yourself time and laundry in the bargain.

Fine. In theory.

But. The same experts admit that a baby with sensitive skin does get irritated lying around in wet or soiled diapers. And unless you're neurotic about bodily functions yourself, chances are you can change baby's diapers without upsetting his nervous system. They also admit that feeding a baby before his diapers have been changed can be pretty uncomfortable. For you. And if baby is active, he can kick off a warm blanket. In which case, he will feel cold. On the other hand, warm wet diapers provide a dandy breeding ground for germs that cause diaper rash.

Sound confusing? Wait till you hear what the treatment is, when diaper rash develops.

Change baby's diapers whenever they're damp. Boil them, dry them in the sun, use a special antiseptic on them. And use a special ointment on baby's rash.

Wouldn't it make more sense to keep baby dry in the first place?

You can still save time and laundry. Pre-folded diapers pin on and off in seconds. Diaper services can launder your diapers for you and give them rash preventing features in the process. And when you're on vacation, visiting, or having a sitter, you can rely on disposable diapers. And throw the whole problem away.

Aside from the obvious health motivation, keeping baby dry in clean, soft diapers makes sound psychological sense. Babies need to be cuddled. And who wants to snuggle a diaper - odored soggy - pants? With just a little extra effort, you can keep baby fresh and sweet. And ready for loving.

Is it worth the extra effort? Don't bother to ask the authorities. The answer puts its arms abound your neck.

Film Offers Rose Tour And Ideas

Garden clubs, rose societies and other groups can transport their members on a journey through the wonderful world of roses with showings of the new 16mm color film, "A Rose For You."

A cavalcade of the world's finest roses, leading up to the 1964 AARS winners, Granada and Saratoga, is a highlight of the movie which presents some of the most stunning color close-up views of roses ever captured on film.

The popular 15-minute sound motion picture, which has just been revised and brought up-to-date with many new color sequences, is made available free to groups of thirty or more by the film's sponsor, All-America Rose Selections. AARS, the national pre-testing organization that awards its coveted All - America Rose Selections honor each year to the best performing roses, is the leading authority and educational group on rose growing in the nation.

Highly entertaining, while informative and education, "A Rose For You" can serve as the perfect highlight for any meeting program. The movie, produced by an Academy Award winner, captures the fascinating story of today's modern roses in brilliant color photography.

The film offers new ideas in landscaping, in using roses creatively in the garden and in arrangements, and illustrates step by step planting technique as seen from "root level." The birth of a new rose variety from pollination to the final, grueling 2 year AARS trials is an entertaining feature.

Groups which have a 16mm movie projector available can book the film free through Mr. C. Lynn Meek, 1411 Slocum Street Dallas, Texas.

Patching the sidewalk in front of your house is a simple job even if you have had little experience with concrete repairs.

Before starting to work, you have to decide what kind of material to use. The choice lies among concrete, mortar and grout. A concrete patch is necessary when you have major repair, such as a large opening which extends right down to the earth. Use a mortar patch for medium breaks and grout for narrow cracks.

In any of the three cases, you can buy ready-mixed material which requires only the addition of water. If you wish to make your own mixture, use one part of portland cement, two parts of sand and three parts of gravel for concrete. Use one part of portland cement and three parts of sand for mortar. Just add water to cement to get grout.

The filling of cracks with grout is done simply by forcing it into the openings. For the mortar and concrete repairs, the area must be cleaned thoroughly of all loose pieces of the old sidewalk. The edges should be undercut with a cold chisel and a hammer so that the patching material will hold securely.

Since there is a slight shrinkage of the mixture during drying, be sure the concrete or mortar extends slightly above the surrounding surface. It can be leveled off with a trowel or wooden float a couple of hours later. Use a trowel for a smooth finish, a float for a rough one.

We don't have to tell you to find a way to keep anyone from walking on the patch for about a week. It is also imperative that, during this time, the area be kept moist with frequent sprinklings. Or better yet, cover the repair with wet burlap or wet grass and remoisten this covering a couple of times a day. This process, known as curing, prevents the next mixture from drying out too quickly. When curing is overlooked, the patch will be weak and will have a tendency to flake or crumble.

Sometimes you have a sidewalk condition where there is no damage to the existing concrete, but a sinking of one section. The lowered area should be built up, under the concrete, with sand and gravel. To lift the concrete sufficiently to force sand and gravel under it, use a board long enough to give plenty of leverage. Someone will have to hold the board while another person does the filling.

QUESTION: I recently bought a lathe and an still learning how to use it. Right now I'm in the middle of my most difficult task so far — making a wooden salad bowl. I'd like to know how to finish it to be sure that it is waterproof. Can you help me?

ANSWER: There are many different ways to waterproof a wooden salad bowl. A synthetic resin sealer does a good job of this. If you want an extra good result with a glossy finish, apply two coats of shellac, thinned 50 per cent with denatured alcohol. Sand lightly, then put on three coats of spar varnish with light sandings between each coat.

• • •

QUESTION: I'm making a dry well which will be attached to a downspout with pieces of pipe three feet long. Do the joints between the different pieces of pipe have to be waterproof?

ANSWER: No, since water will be flowing through the pipes every time it rains But it is important that the dirt which covers the pipes does not enter the joints and cause clogging. To prevent this, cover each joint with building paper or some similar material.

• • •

QUESTION: Should varnish be thinned with turpentine?

ANSWER: For most purposes, no. Use it as it comes from the can And avoid stirring it if possible, since this produces bubbles which will be transferred to the surface of the stock you are finishing.

WINTER is project time for many — a time to work on the attic spare room or basement recreation room or to set up the gift ping pong table or even install a darkroom.

Whatever the project, it is ideal material for a picture story. A series will preserve the frustrations — and their solutions — as well as the fun of family participation in any of the home work.

Many photographers consider it is sufficient to make just a "before and after" picture. Perhaps they get too involved in actual construction to take time out to make progress pictures. But that is where the heart of the picture series is. . . the running story of events as the project evolves.

This is true also of any hobby that the family shares or any games they play together. And, when it comes to an interesting story - telling set of photos, what can beat a candid series of Junior deeply absorbed in his pet project, perhaps building a model airplane or Sister dressing or nursing her brood of dolls?

Since we're dealing with wintertime indoor projects, illumination will be a matter either of using available light with high speed films or of shooting flash. For picture - taking projects, you can boost the level of room illumination with brighter lamps or put a reflector bulb in the room to "lighten" the work. With today's high - speed color films and certainly with black - and - white films, pictures by existing light are easy to make. Be sure to use Type B color slide films which are balanced for tungsten lighting. Use a light meter so that the entire roll of film is properly and consistently exposed.

If the existing light isn't bright enough for available light picture taking, you can shoot with flash. To avoid the monotony of straight flash-on-camera pictures, there are several ways to add variety to flash illumination. At the same time they produce more interesting results in the light and shadows.

The simplest technique is merely to remove the flash from the camera and hold it up high to one side of the camera. You must have a flash extension cord and attachment for your camera for this effective technique. It improves the facial lighting and separates the shadow from immediately behind the head when properly held. Sometimes another person can hold the flash while the photographer concentrates on the camera or the flash can be clamped in off - camera position for easier one - person operation.

Another technique to try is bounce flash. Here you aim the flash at a light - colored wall or ceiling so that the light bounces off and onto the subject. It provides a softer illumination but requires opening the lens about one and one - half stops to compensate in making the exposure.

Another way to soften the full force of direct flash is to remove the reflector from the flash and shoot with the bare flashbulb. When shooting very close, this — or spreading a handkerchief over the flash to diffuse the light — prevents "burned out" faces.

IF YOUR GARDEN SOIL is light and sandy and your vegetables and flowers do poorly despite ample water and fertilizer, the reason may be lack of humus. Humus improves the texture of the soil, provides food for the roots and helps prevent moisture from seeping downward beyond the depth where it will benefit your plants.

Humus is the soil conditioner. Technically, humus is thoroughly or partly decomposed vegetable matter. The topsoil in woodlands is largely humus. Forest fires annually destroy much valuable humus.

Ordinary subsoil contains little humus. Pure humus acts like a sponge for holding water. Mineral subsoil gives water off rapidly and easily.

Some plants should be grown in more acid humus. These include azaleas and rhododendrons. Your garden dealer has humus for sale and can advise the best for your garden. You may buy it in bales, boxes or bags.

Plowing in cover crops is an inexpensive way to add humus to your soil but this takes time. Decomposed or dried animal manure is a faster method.

MORE HOUSE PLANTS

We think the fuchsia is one of the brightest of indoor plants. Garden News describes the attractive blooms as "Ladies' Eardrops."

In the mild southern states and lower California fuchsias attain heights of 20 feet, but they aren't rugged enough to withstand outdoor frost. They like an indoor temperature of about 60 degrees, which may be provided on a windowsill, and require little attention.

After blooming indoors in the spring, the plants may be plunged into the garden for the summer and early fall.

Attractive varieties include Winston Churchill, with red petals and purple bells; Pride of Orion, red petals and white bells, and Mrs Marshall, white petals and pink bells.

Another suggestion is Heavenly Bamboo, the Nandina from Japan. It will survive northern winters, even when killed back to the ground, if it is heavily mulched. It is excellent for the South. Outdoors it will reach eight feet. It won't be as tall indoors.

The Nandina has pretty flowers but its biggest attraction is its clusters of bright red berries, which remain for several weeks.

Another stranger to many is the Calliandra, or Powder Puff, which is related to the acacias and mimosa and which is grown outdoors in the deep south. The indoor Calliandra has crimson flowers. It enjoys much sunshine and damp but not soaked soil.

Peperomia is suggested for the dry, warm apartment. It is available in olive green to silver, cream and yellow.

Try the Anthurium family for warm, humid atmosphere. These have rich red and orange, pink and rose blossoms.

More popular is the oxalis, for pot or hanging basket. It has long-stemmed foliage leaves of four-leaf clover appearance and pink blossoms. Transfer of the pot to the garden in spring will give this plant a boost.

Cocktail Cobbler

1 can (1 pound, 14 ounces) fruit cocktail
½ cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
1 cup sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 egg
½ cup granulated sugar
3 tablespoons milk
¼ teaspoon vanilla

Turn fruit cocktail into a strainer to drain thoroughly; use syrup in some other dish. Sprinkle the brown sugar into the bottom of 8 well - buttered six-ounce custard cups—1 tablespoon in each. Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt; cut in butter until it is in fine particles. Beat egg and granulated sugar until thick and ivory colored; beat in milk and vanilla. Fold into flour mixture; do not stir smooth. Spoon batter over fruit cocktail in custard cups. Bake in a moderate (375 degrees) oven until brown and cake tester inserted in cake portion comes out clean — 30 to 35 minutes. Cool slightly and turn out; reheat if made ahead. Serve with whipped cream.

Emma R. Law's Popovers

1 cup less 2 tablespoons water
¾ cup nonfat dry milk solids
2 eggs
1 tablespoon salad oil
¾ cup sifted flour
¼ cup yellow cornmeal
¼ teaspoon salt

In a mixing bowl dissolve the dry milk solids in the water. Add eggs and oil; beat well. Sift together the flour, cornmeal and salt; add all at once to liquid mixture. Beat until smooth and free of lumps. Pour into well-oiled muffin tins (2¾ inches across top and 2 inches deep—6 tablespoon capacity) Bake in a hot (425 degrees) oven until brown and firm — about 40 minutes. Serve at once. If necessary to keep popovers for a short while, puncture each with a sharp knife to let out steam, loosen and tip sideways in tins and leave in oven with heat turned off and door slightly ajar. Makes 8 large popovers.

O'Hara Writes Again

THE HAT ON THE BED. By John O'Hara.

After you have read all the way through a collection of O'Hara's short stories, you're apt to reflect that the people you've been meeting are a lot more real than a good many of the flesh and blood creatures around you.

And on second thought, it will occur to you that O'Hara often tells you as much about his characters' past lives as he does about their present. He likes to look back, often creating a rather melancholy, nostalgic atmosphere that reminds you of an old tune by Noel Coward.

This collection includes some more of the author's stories set in the mythical town of Gibbsville, Pa., or in nearby South Taqua. Gibbsville seems like the old home town.

Several of the other tales deal with some pretty scroungy types, but O'Hara also introduces you to the propertied set, the divorce set, a fading actor and a lonely old widow who is growing afraid of her maid. And there is a vivid story of the disintegration of a maverick movie director.

Often O'Hara weaves his magic through faultless dialogue, and sometimes he conjures up the social scene by using his computer - like memory for the little details of everyday living.

He is very prolific. Two years ago his collection "Assembly" was published, and last year "The Cape Cod Lighter." (The two volumes now have been combined into one Modern Library book titled "49 Stories.") This volume contains 24. And last June his latest novel, "Elizabeth Appleton," came out.

One thing you can count on. You'll enjoy O'Hara's tales.

NOT ON THE TABLE

West Is Believed To Have Slight Advantage In Power

By JOHN BAUSMAN

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—Ever since the cold war started, military strategists on opposite sides of the Iron Curtain have been trying to estimate the strength of their opponents.

In 1949, when the North Atlantic Treaty Organization was formed, the Soviet Union was reported to have an army of 175 divisions, excluding troops from its satellites. This report prodded the Western Allies into building up NATO's defenses.

When Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was in command at NATO in 1951 he said reliable intelligence reports placed the Soviet forces at four million men, ready to march.

How do the forces shape up today?

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara estimated last Nov. 18 that in 1955 the Soviet armed forces totaled 5.75 million. He said they have since been trimmed to 3.3 million with 2 million of them ground troops. Other members of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact could swell the ground force to about 3 million. The total Communist force in Europe was put at 4.5 million.

This compared with NATO's total manpower of 5 million men. NATO's ground force is put at 3.2 million, of which 2.2 million are deployed in strategic areas of Europe.

The British Institute for Strategic Studies, a nongovernment but authoritative body, reported recently the total service manpower for the Western alliance was 7.92 million compared with 7.52 million for the Communist bloc, including Red China.

European military sources interviewed by The Associated Press generally agree with McNamara's figures. Official figures are usually unavailable because of security reasons.

The European sources estimate the Soviet army at between 2 million and 2.25 million, organized in about 150 divisions plus nondivisional support troops. Half of the divisions are believed at full strength and battle-ready, a quarter near their full quota and the remainder at cadre strength, ready to be fielded 30 days after mobilization. By these estimates, satellite armies increase the total Communist force to about 3.25 million—a 250,000 increase over McNamara's estimate.

NATO's force in Western Europe was figured at 1.4 million, which could be quickly increased to more than 3 million with reinforcements rushed in from Italy, Greece, Turkey and the United States. The United States demonstrated last fall that it could fly a full division of about 15,000 men to Europe from Texas in less than three days.

Soviet divisions generally average 9,000-10,000 men. NATO divisions are 12,000-15,000 men, with U.S. infantry and armored divisions numbering 15,900 at full strength.

There is some uncertainty among the sources as to how the Communist troops are deployed. Some Soviet troops were reported shifted recently to the Soviet-Chinese border region, largely at the expense of reserve forces in the central U.S.S.R.

But the sources believe that 25 to 26 Soviet divisions are in Europe, mostly in East Germany with a few divisions in Poland and Hungary. These all are believed to be at full strength.

Another 75 to 90 divisions—about half of them below full strength—are believed to be in European U.S.S.R., west of the Urals, available for immediate front-line duty. The remainder of the Communist force is likely to be scattered around the Soviet Union and the Far East.

In time of emergency, the sources believe, the Soviet Union can raise 60-65 divisions among its East European satellites. But it is questionable whether the satellite forces are combat-ready.

NATO's frontline defense includes 24 divisions in West Germany, which could be reinforced by two divisions from France. Farther back from the Iron Curtain are seven Italian divisions and eight Greek divisions.

A key factor in judging armies is the comparative firepower.

The American divisions are regarded as the strongest. The West German army, which began building from scratch in 1955, is rated as below par. The three British divisions in Germany are each short one brigade.

Experts find no reason to underrate Soviet firepower and equipment. They figure the 25 Soviet divisions in Europe and probably 30-40 divisions in European U.S.S.R. are man-to-man on a par in conventional equipment and firepower with the West.

Junior Editors Quiz on SOUND

QUESTION: What is the difference between Hi Fi and stereophonic sound?

• • •

ANSWER: The difference is that Hi Fi (short for high fidelity) came first and is a way of making records sound more true in tone, while stereo came later and is based on recording sounds with two differently placed microphones and playing them back with two loudspeakers. The two can be combined; Hi Fi stereo gives the finest sound of all.

With Hi Fi, started in the 1950s, sounds from tape recorders (1) AM/FM radios (2), or records (3), are passed through several "components" to improve them. The preamplifier (4) gives volume control; the amplifier (5) provides power for the loudspeakers. There is a loudspeaker for the deep tones, the "woofer," and one for the high sounds, the "tweeter" (6). Stereo started in 1958. It begins in the recording studio where separate mikes are placed on each side of the performers (A, B). [illegible] from each mike are cut into the grooves of a single [illegible] one signal on each side of the groove. When played, [illegible] oove side is heard through separate loudspeakers. [illegible] ese have Hi Fi woofers and tweeters, the combined [illegible] amazingly true to that which was originally produced in [illegible] ecord studio.

• • •

FOR YOU TO DO: Watch out for a chance to listen to a stereo set and notice the effect when you sit in a place where both loudspeakers can reach you at the same time.

Pinkerton's Has Biggest Assignment

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP)—The "biggest security assignment in history."

That is how Pinkerton's National Detective Agency describes the job it has been given at the 1964-'65 New York World's Fair.

A force of 3,000, including patrolmen, detectives, policewomen, medical and fire department personnel, turnstile operators and clerks, is being organized for the task.

The agency said about half will be hired as guards, money handlers and other personnel by individual exhibitors.

The other 1,500-member division is being set up as a general security force.

It will function much like the public safety and service branches of a big city, watching over the daily crowds of visitors. There will even be a 33-bed emergency hospital.

Estimates put the daily fairground population at from 250,000 to 750,000 during its running seasons, mid-April to mid-October, in the two years.

The security forces will be under over-all command of John J. Manning, assisted by Alfred B. Novak. Both are veteran former FBI men.

Members of the 750-member police department will wear a specially designed uniform of light blue with visored cap and white gloves. They'll have a Pinkerton patch on one sleeve, a World's Fair patch on the other.

The force will include an honor guard of 110 officers, and a number of other special sections—30 detectives, 18 uniformed policewomen, plus matrons to attend lost children.

Describing its planned operations the Pinkerton agency said:

"Apart from emergencies and critical incidents that are bound to arise, fair police officials expect the major security problems will arise from concentrated crowds.

"Experience at past fairs indicates that runaway teen-agers and petty thieves will demand police attention. The entire security force will carry nightsticks and many of them will be armed."

Under special state legislation, the fair police are empowered to arrest violators, and hold them in custody to take them to the appropriate courts for disposition of their cases.

Salad Supper Planned By TOPerettes

The Snyder TOPerettes met at 7 p.m. in the gym at Stanfield Elementary Tuesday night with 30 regular members and two new members present.

Members were weighed in to begin the meeting and then met in their groups. Group 4 is still ahead in the group contest. The entertainment committee announced plans for a new contest beginning Feb. 1. This will be an individual contest and everyone is asked to bring ½ book of stamps of any choice. These books will be given to the group leader and then to the entertainment committee. Everyone is urged to participate in this contest.

It was decided to have a salad supper next week. Members are asked to come early as possible so there will be plenty of time to be weighed in. Also measurements will be taken next week as it has been a month since last time. It was decided that in order to save time the group leader would take measurements of her members.

Salmon Peek-A-Boos

Prepare Salmon Filling: Blend together 1 cup cooked drained slamon (8-ounce can), 1 chopped hard - cooked egg, 1 tablespoon mayonnaise or salad dressing and 2 teaspoons vinegar. Then prepare Basic Biscuit recipe through kneading step. Roll out dough ¼-inch thick. Cut out 16 circles with floured 3-inch cutter. Place 8 circles on ungreased baking sheet. In center of each biscuit place 1 rounded tablespoonful Salmon Filling. With sharp knife or pastry wheel cut a "C" in center of remaining biscuits. Place over filling and press edges together with fork to seal. Bake in very hot oven (450 degrees) 12 to 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Meanwhile, prepare Celery Sauce:

Blend together 1¼ cup condensed cream of celery soup (10 ½-ounce can) and 1-3 cup milk until smooth. Stir in 1½ cups cooked drained peas (10-ounce package, frozen). Heat to boiling and serve with Salmon Biscuits. If you don't sift and in the absence of other directions, spoon flour directly from container into a 1 cup dry measure, level off, then remove two level tablespoonfuls according to USDA recommendations.

NOTE: If self - rising flour is used, omit baking powder and salt.

Coddled Apples

12 small apples, about 2½ pounds
1 cup water
½ cup sugar
Dash of salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Choose apples that will hold their shape after cooking; pare, quarter and core. In a 10-inch skillet stir the water and sugar over low heat until sugar dissolves; heat to boiling. Add apples; cover and cook gently until apples are tender and translucent looking—about 20 to 30 minutes. Turn apples as necessary; they should absorb most of the syrup by the end of the cooking time. Mix vanilla with apples. Serve hot or cold with custard sauce. Makes 6 to 8 servings.
