Residents reminded of rules along roadways at schools

Pampa Police Chief Jim Laramore has issued a warning that police will be enforcing traffic control signs around Pampa Middle School and other school campuses.

Chief Laramore said he recently received a complaint from a citizen about not being able to drive down 23rd Avenue at certain hours of the day due to traffic congestion on the south side of the middle school.

The police chief said there are signs posted forbidding parking or standing along a section of the avenue during school hours. Laramore said the restrictions were put in place by the city after a recommendation from the Traffic Commission.

Similar restrictions are also in place along streets around a number of the elementary school campuses, he said.

"We want to make people aware that those signs are there and that they should pay attention to the signs," Laramore said.

He said the police are reminding residents that parking or standing in the restricted areas during certain hours are a violation of city ordinances and the police will be enforcing the law regarding them.

"We're going to do what we have to do," Laramore said.

The chief said in the past police have stopped and talked to some residents and drawn their attention to the signs.

But the violations have continued, creating traffic congestion problems around some schools. The problem is especially bad during the early morning when students are going to school and in the afternoon when students are being dismissed from the school day.

Because of such problems, police will begin enforcing the restrictions and citing those in violation, he said.

Laramore also reminded residents there are other restrictions regarding parking in designated school bus zones and slowing down vehicle speed in designated school zones during certain time periods. Those restrictions also will be enforced.

Regulations regarding traffic and pedestrians around schools are designed for the safety of students and others during regular school hours.

Pampa joins in observance of Fire Prevention Week

"Fire won't wait - plan your escape," theme for 1991 Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 6-12, encourages families to be prepared in the event of fire, said officials of the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA), a private non-profit fire safety advocate.

Pampa Fire Department and Fire Marshal Tom Adams will be observing Fire Prevention Week by providing educational programs at the city's schools, Adams said.

"Approximately 80 percent of all fire fatalities in this country occur in our homes," says Meri-K Appy, NFPA assistant vice president for public affairs and education. "There is clear evidence that early detection and warning, coupled with a well-rehearsed home escape plan, can, and do, provide precious extra time to escape a fire. Seconds count, and the less time spent deciding who will carry the baby or trying to open a painted-shut window, the more time you have to get out safely."

It is not enough to simply install a smoke detector and forget about it, Appy says.

"Households can be lulled into a false sense of security once they purchase the required smoke detectors," she says. "It's important for people to understand that smoke detectors are only one aspect, albeit an invaluable one, of a comprehensive home fire safety plan. In addition to installing, maintaining and testing smoke detectors properly, a well-planned and frequently rehearsed home fire escape plan is absolutely vital to the safety of all household members."

In an effort to emphasize the importance of planning a fire escape before the fire, the NFPA has chosen "Fire won't wait - plan your escape" as the theme for this year's Fire Prevention Week.

Proclaimed in 1922 by President Warren G. Harding to commemorate the Great Chicago Fire of 1871, Fire Prevention Week is sponsored nationally by the NFPA every year to focus attention on the need for fire prevention education.

"Because such a large share of U.S. fires occur in the home, it is especially important that home fire drills be planned and conducted in all households, but fire escape planning should not be limited to the home," Appy says.

Gorbachev announces arms cuts in response to pledge by Bush

By SERGEI SHARGORODSKY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Saturday announced sweeping cuts in nuclear weapons on land and sea that appeared to surpass President Bush's pledge to destroy many U.S. tactical nuclear weapons.

Gorbachev, speaking on Soviet TV, pledged to disarm all short-range nuclear weapons and eliminate most, and slash the number of ballistic missiles below the limit permitted under a recently signed U.S.-Soviet arms control treaty.

In a move that challenged Bush to go further than the U.S. president had gone, Gorbachev announced "effective today a one-year moratorium on nuclear testing," and said he would ask the other nuclear powers to follow suit.

Reading from a statement, Gorbachev also announced plans to cut 700,000 troops from the 3.7-million Soviet armed forces.

The weapons cuts would affect virtually all categories of the Soviet nuclear arsenal. Together, the pledges by the two superpowers would amount to the biggest reduction of nuclear armaments since the Cold War began.

Gorbachev said he spoke with Bush to inform him of the Soviet steps and discussed the possibility of holding a new summit.

In Washington, Bush welcomed Gorbachev's announcement as "good news for the whole world" and said U.S. and Soviet officials would be meeting to discuss arms reductions at an unspecified date.

"It's very positive," Bush told reporters after talking with Gorbachev by telephone. "They've come a long way."

Bush indicated he was amenable to the idea of a superpower meeting, but that "there's work to do before we sit down at a summit."

Gorbachev's announcement, carried by the Tass news agency, was the Soviet Union's first detailed response to the ambitious reductions Bush announced on Sept. 27.

The U.S. president said Washington would eliminate all its ground-launched, short-range nuclear weapons; withdraw all tactical nuclear arms from U.S. ships; take strategic bombers off alert; and cancel the development of the mobile MX missile.

Bush had called on the Soviets to take similar steps and to enter negotiations to eliminate intercontinental ballistic missiles with multiple warheads.

In a sign of his growing recognition of the Soviet republics' sovereignty, Gorbachev said the measures were made in conjunction with Russian President Boris Yeltsin and other republic leaders.

The wide distribution of the nuclear arsenal throughout the Soviet republic has been an object of concern since the abortive Kremlin coup that briefly toppled Gorbachev in August and led to further crumbling of the union.

The world had been waiting for Moscow to respond to Bush.

Specifically, Gorbachev said, the Soviet Union will:

— liquidate all nuclear artillery shells and nuclear warheads from tactical missiles;

— move nuclear warheads from surface-to-air missiles stationed with battle-ready forces to central bases and liquidate "some of them." All nuclear mines also will be liquidated;

— remove all tactical nuclear weapons from ships and multi-purpose submarines, as well as from land-based navy planes, and store them at centralized warehouses where "some will be liquidated."

— Take off heavy bombers similar to the U.S. long-range B-52 and B-1 bombers from battle alert and store their nuclear weapons at army warehouses.

— freeze the number of railroad-based intercontinental ballistic missiles with multiple warheads, place them at fixed locations and halt their modernization;

— remove from service three nuclear missile submarines with 48 launchers aboard.

Gorbachev, after taking a week to study Bush's announcement, came up with the initiative.

He called for "intensive negotiations on further radical reductions in offensive strategic weapons — cutting (their number) by about one-half."

He suggested the United States "fully liquidate, on a bilateral basis, all tactical nuclear weapons of the Navy."

"We could also, on a bilateral basis, remove from the forward military aviation units all (tactical) nuclear weapons (bombs and rockets) and place them at centralized warehouses."

Gorbachev said the Soviet Union will stop the development of a "modified nuclear short-range missile" for the heavy bombers and of "a mobile small-dimension intercontinental ballistic missile."

In other moves, Gorbachev mentioned development of a joint Soviet-U.S. early warning system based on land and in space, a joint non-nuclear anti-missile defense system and negotiations on a controlled reduction in the production of all fissionable weapons material.

Gorbachev made the announcement after meeting with a U.S. delegation, headed by Undersecretary of State Reginald Bartholomew.

Four candidates file campaign treasurers' paperwork

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Four people, including two who want to be the next Gray County sheriff, have filed paperwork in the Gray County Clerk's Office appointing their campaign treasurers for the May 1992 primary election.

Filing dates for getting on the primary ballot are Dec. 2 to Jan. 2, according to the Gray County Clerk's Office.

A campaign treasurer, by state law, must be designated and paperwork filed in the county clerk's office prior to any campaign contributions being accepted by any candidate.

Randy Stubblefield and Fred G. Brown have both filed their paperwork appointing their campaign treasurers. Both men have indicated on their forms that they plan to seek the office of sheriff.

Two incumbents, County Attorney Bob McPherson and County Tax Assessor/Collector Margie Gray, have also filed paperwork appointing their campaign treasurers for their respective offices.

Stubblefield filed his paperwork, appointing Debra Stubblefield as campaign treasurer, on Sept. 17.

Brown's campaign treasurer will be Carol Brown. He filed his paperwork on Friday.

Gray designated Helen Danner as her campaign treasurer and she filed her appointment paperwork on Aug. 22.

McPherson, who named himself as the campaign treasurer, filed his paperwork on Sept. 9.

Offices up for election in 1992 in Texas include all district attorneys, sheriffs, tax assessor/collectors, county attorneys, public weighers, county commissioners in Precincts 1 and 3 and all constables.

In Gray County, the office of sheriff is expected to draw a large number of candidates. Numerous names have popped up in discussions at coffee shops recently of possible candidates for the job.

Gray County Sheriff Jim Free won election on a write-in bid in November 1988 to defeat longtime Sheriff Rufe Jordan, who died earlier this year.

Nationwide, the country will elect a president in 1992. All 30

U.S. representatives positions in Texas will be up for election.

Statewide on the ballots will be the Railroad Commissioner Lena Guerrero's spot; three Supreme Court positions, currently held by Jack Hightower, Oscar Mauzy and Eugene A. Cook; and three Court of Criminal Appeals positions, currently held by Morris L. Overstreet, Charles F. (Charlie) Baird and Fortunato P. Benavides.

All 31 state senator positions and all 150 state representative positions will be on the ballot. All 15 positions of the State Board of Education will be up for election.

Various district judges, criminal district judges and court of appeals judges will also be up for election.

Yugoslav troops redouble efforts against Croatia

By NESHA STARCEVIC
Associated Press Writer

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Fighting raged across Croatia Saturday after the secessionist republic and federal forces failed to agree on a truce to end the mounting death and destruction.

Federal troops advanced on the Adriatic port of Dubrovnik and redoubled efforts to seize Croatian strongholds in the east of the republic, where hundreds have died since independence was declared on June 25.

Meanwhile, the four pro-Serb members of Yugoslavia's eight-member federal presidency who have taken control of the government ordered special military courts to deal harshly with any draft-dodgers or other offenders against the army.

Serbia's ruling Socialist Party also appealed to all Serbs to join federal forces, whose ranks have been depleted by desertion.

Federal Defense Minister Gen. Veljko Kadijevic and Croatian President Franjo Tudjman failed to agree on the implementation of a cease-fire worked out Friday by the European Community and Yugoslav leaders.

Kadijevic appeared to insist that the Croats first lift their blockade of federal garrisons, according to the Croatian news agency HINA. Tudjman reiterated his desire for a simultaneous cease-fire, but accepted Kadijevic's offer of a meeting in Sarajevo on Monday to discuss details.

It would be the seventh truce since the conflict began three months ago. Lord Carrington, the EC's chief mediator, said its success depended on whether the rival Croats and Serbs could control their fighters.

The timetable for the truce was left up to the Croats and the federal army, which backs the Serbs.

Many of Croatia's 600,000 ethnic Serbs refuse to live in an independent Croatia because they fear discrimination.

Croats fear Serbian expansionism. Serbia's authoritarian president, Slobodan Milosevic, is seen as the mastermind behind the military advances into Croatia and the Serb seizure Thursday of what remains of federal authority.

Saturday's battles were concentrated around Dubrovnik, the east Croatian strongholds of Vukovar and Vinkovci, and the towns of Karlovac and Sisak, 30 miles southwest and southeast of Zagreb, the Croatian capital.

If Karlovac and Sisak fell, there would be little to stop an army advance upon Zagreb, where authorities ordered schools closed Saturday, lights out at night and shops and restaurants closed by 6 p.m.

Gen. Andrija Raseta, the district's deputy commander, told reporters he could not rule out a drive toward the city of 1 million.

Air Force jets struck for a second day at a TV transmission tower just north of Zagreb, where a 75-minute air raid alarm sent residents dashing to shelters. Warning sirens sounded in at least six other Croatian towns.

At least 12 people were killed Friday in Karlovac and Novska, an embattled town along the main Zagreb-Belgrade highway.

Bogus president's death report shakes up students

DALLAS (AP) — Officials of a suburban school district will investigate a class project in which students were given a false report that the president had been killed.

"Having been through the War of the Worlds, I know the fright of that," said Don Sheffield, board president of the Carrollton-Farmers Branch Independent School District.

An eighth-grade class at Charles M. Blalack Jr. High School had been studying the effect of the infamous 1938 Orson Welles radio play in which people were confused into thinking that Martians had landed in New Jersey.

Principal Lora Folsom agreed to let a similar startling announcement to be made Friday morning after teachers were briefed to expect a shock.

Assistant principal Dara Stewart came over the intercom system at 8:50 a.m., said Shane Speakman, 14, who was in his eighth-grade home room.

"It sounded like she was crying," he said. "She said, 'An historic event has taken place: the president of the United States has been assassinated.'" Speakman said.

Some students laughed, he said. Others took it seriously and sobbed.

"I was shocked," said Chantelle Lindlie. "I got tears in my eyes and everything. I couldn't believe it was happening."

Her mother, Boni Lindlie, wanted to know why officials would lie about deaths.

"It would be like them, the kids, coming in and saying, 'Hey everybody, the field trip of all the seniors that were leaving this morning ... the bus crashed and they were all killed,'" Mrs. Lindlie said.

Teachers, who apparently had been told the announcement would be about an unscheduled school holiday, also reacted strongly, Speakman said.

"I heard a teacher scream and start crying," he said. "Some of the teachers went out in the hall."

Four minutes later, a second announcement reassured the students that the report was false — a deliberate lie to test reactions.

"Because of what the kids were doing, we wanted an announcement that would have a similar or some kind of reaction," Ms. Folsom told KDFW-TV Friday night.

The reaction of surprise quickly turned to anger, students said.

"I was mad. I was furious," Ms. Lindlie said. "I could not believe. I don't think you should kid about death."

During lunch period, about 50 students walked out of the school in protest, Speakman said.

"We didn't think it was right that they did it," he said. "They were just playing with our emotions."

The students returned to classes and Ms. Folsom made an announcement apologizing for the experiment, Speakman said.

Gorbachev

On the multiple warhead issue, in which the United States believes the Soviet Union has an advantage, Gorbachev said he would remove from battle alert status 503 intercontinental ballistic missiles, including 134 missiles with multiple warheads.

Bush has rejected earlier Gorbachev suggestions of a nuclear test ban, arguing that the United States must test and develop new nuclear weapons as long as they are required to deter a Soviet attack. Last week, however, the State Department said the United States is willing to take up the Soviet request.

Gorbachev has long proposed outlawing all weapons tests, and unilaterally halted Soviet testing from August 1985 until February 1987. The Soviets have carried out only one detectable test in the past two years. The United States has exploded a half-dozen nuclear devices in Nevada this year.

In his statement, Gorbachev said the reductions will go further than cuts called for under a strategic arms control treaty signed last July.

"The number of our strategic nuclear (weapons) will amount to 5,000 units and not 6,000 as agreed in the treaty," Gorbachev said. "We would welcome a similar approach on the part of the United States."

Western and Soviet officials have expressed concern over a possible loss of control over the Soviet nuclear arsenal spread out in the republics. Most nuclear weapons are stationed in Russia, the Ukraine, Byelorussia and Kazakhstan.

"With the aim of increasing the reliability of control over nuclear weapons, we are uniting all the strategic nuclear forces under a single operative command," assured Gorbachev. "We are including strategic defensive systems into a single type of armed forces."

In Washington, President Bush said Saturday that Gorbachev's announcement on nuclear arms reductions was "good news for the whole world." He said U.S. officials were sitting down to talk over details with their Soviet counterparts.

SWCD schedules Zone 3 director election

An election of a Soil and Water Conservation District director to serve in Zone 3 on the Gray County SWCD is scheduled for Thursday.

The election will be held at 7 p.m. at the Gray County Annex on East Frederic in Pampa, announced Troy Ritter, board chairman.

State law decrees that to be eligible to vote in a SWCD director election, a person must own agricultural land within the district where the election is being held. The person also must live in a county all or part of which is in the district and the voter must be at least 18 years old.

Legal qualifications state that a candidate for the office must own land in the zone he represents, be at least 18 years old and be actively engaged in farming or ranching. He must also live in a county all or part of which is in the district.

District directors serve four-year terms of office.

The term of Tony Smitherman, Zone 3 district director, is up for election. Zone 3 of the district includes McClellan Creek and Lefors area.

Ritter said the purpose of the Gray County SWCD is to promote soil and water conservation programs on agricultural lands within the district and to serve as a voice for farmers, ranchers and local community entities on conservation matters.

The district board of directors coordinates the conservation efforts of various local, state and federal agencies and other organizations and has authority to enter into working agreements with these governmental agencies and private concerns to carry out its purpose.

All conservation programs managed by the district are of a voluntary nature to the landowner or operator or other potential users of the SWCD's program.

Pampa, Gray County unemployment rate rises slightly Pampa's and Gray County's unemployment rates increased slightly from July to August, according to figures recently released by the local Texas Employment Commission office.

Rodney Springer, local TEC office manager, said Pampa recorded a 4.9 percent unemployment rate for August, up slightly from the 4.5 percent listed in August.

Gray County had an August unemployment rate of 5 percent, up from the 4.6 percent recorded in July.

Making the best showing in the surrounding area was Wheeler County, whose unemployment rate decreased 2 percent. In August, the county had a rate of 4.4 percent, dropping from the 6.4 percent reported for July.

Hemphill County's unemployment rate fell 1 percent. Its August rate was listed at 3.5 percent, down from the 4.5 percent for July.

Carson County's rate dropped slightly over 1 percent. In August, it had an unemployment rate of 3.3 percent, down 1.1 percent from the 4.4 percent rate registered in July.

Roberts County had a 2.5 percent unemployment rate for August, up a half percent from the 2.0 percent rate recorded in July.

Sarpalius files bill to give relief to rural areas from landfill rules

WASHINGTON—U.S. Rep. Bill Sarpalius has filed legislation aimed at giving small, rural communities relief in meeting regulations of state and federal agencies regarding sanitary landfill operations.

The bill, introduced in the U.S. House last week, would exempt smaller cities and counties from the requirement to line their solid waste landfills with plastic or clay if they are "a municipality with a population of 5,000 or less, a county will have a population of 10,000 or less, or fewer than 20 persons per square mile, and not within a metropolitan area."

"I certainly agree that environmental controls on landfills are important," said Sarpalius, D-Amarillo. "But, by the same token, some of these very small communities are faced with this single regulation that would require them to increase their budget by as much as 50 percent, just to meet this regulation."

"The bottom line," the congressman said, "is that people will be forced to quit using a landfill operation that meets all other federal and state criteria and they will start individually dumping their trash in a much less acceptable manner."

Sarpalius pointed out that many of these areas have a disproportionate share of the population that is elderly and living on fixed incomes that would result in an extreme hardship if such a regulation was imposed.

"My bill provides an option that I believe will result in a cleaner environment than if these landfill operations were forced to shut down and the residents had no place to bury their refuse," he said.

Sarpalius said he plans to ask other congressmen to support his proposed legislation.

"I would think that this problem is not isolated to rural Texas, but exists in many congressional districts throughout the nation," he said.

The bill will be referred to appropriate committees "within a few days," Sarpalius said.

Gambling foes blast lottery director ad

AUSTIN (AP)—Lottery foes are criticizing State Comptroller John Sharp for advertising for a state lottery director even before voters have decided whether they want the gambling game.

The position of chief executive officer of the lottery division could pay an annual salary of $90,000. With benefits and bonuses, the job could surpass Gov. Ann Richards' salary of $93,500 per year.

On Nov. 5, voters will decide whether to authorize a state lottery to help fund government.

Lottery opponents expressed "strong objections" to ads seeking lottery director candidates that were placed in major Texas newspapers, two lottery trade magazines and The Wall Street Journal.

Sue Cox, director of Texans Who Care, which is leading the fight against a lottery, said it was wrong for Sharp to place the ads "before the voters have had an opportunity to reject the lottery."

But Sharp's spokesman Greg Hartman said the ads will enable the state to start a lottery quicker if voters approve it.

"The sooner it's up and running, the more revenue the state gets," he said.

Ms. Cox also complained that the ad promises salary bonuses if the director is able to increase lottery sales.

"And increased sales come from creating new gamblers or encouraging existing gamblers to gamble more. We seriously question whether this is a proper role of our state government," she said.

Hartman responded, "If the voters decide that the State of Texas needs a lottery, then it's our job to make sure that the lottery produces as much money as possible."

Technology catches up with the gas pump

By KELLY VARNER EBEL

It's Saturday morning. You're packed and ready to go on a much needed weekend outing. After getting the kids and suitcases in the car, it suddenly hits you. "Cash ... I forgot to get cash!" No sweat.

On the way out, you pull up to any automated bank teller machine, stick your plastic credit card in the slot, follow the directions and pull the green paper out. Simple. And convenient.

Now, convenience has come to the gas pump.

Attendant-free gas stations are popping up all over the country, including Pampa. The Citgo station located at 2109 Alcock Street recently had its grand opening as an attendant-free station. And the convenience speaks for itself.

There is no more "pay first" rules. And you can get gas any time of the day or night. The pumps are open seven days a week, 24 hours a day. All you need is a credit card: Visa, Mastercard, Discover or AFCO. If you fill up at a Conoco station using the pumps, a Conoco card will work.

AFCO also doles out "Frequent Filler" discount cards to regular customers.

The process is simple: First, you put your frequent filler card into the slot (if you don't have one, start with your credit cards), then remove it and insert your credit card. A readout will inform you of each next step toward the completion of the transaction.

When you have filled up with gas, reinsert your credit card into the slot and a detailed receipt is processed. Should you forget your receipt, you may return hours later to pick it up. Just reinsert your credit card and the receipt will be given.

Another convenient feature is your monthly statement.

You get your regular information such as the date and time of the transaction, and the cost and gallons used. You also get the number of gallons dispensed each transaction, type of fuel dispensed, automatic miles-per-gallon calculation, miles since last fueling, odometer reading—the list goes on and on.

The pumps, by AFCO Auto Fuel Company, are the most sophisticated, as far as Ray Simpson, area manager, is concerned. Simpson manages stations in Amarillo, Canyon, Clarendon, Hereford and Pampa.

There are, of course, some drawbacks to consider: Vandalism, fire, etc. There are no posted security guards. Fortunately, these areas were thought out ahead of time.

Complying with state bylaws, the station is equipped with an automatic dialer that dials Simpson should anything occur.

An electronic heat sensor sounds an alarm and shuts the station down should fire erupt. Also, if the glass to the fire extinguisher is broken, the automatic shutdown goes into effect.

Another safeguard of the pump provides a shut-off to the gas line should a customer accidentally drive off with the nozzle still attached to his car. This prevents gas from spilling out onto the ground. There also is an automatic shutoff so the tanks cannot be overfilled.

And Simpson can call up a computerized readout that offers him viable information internally.

"The tank monitor tells me, anytime I want it to, how many gallons of fuel we've got in there," explained Simpson.

The readout also lets Simpson know if there is a leak underground, which is part of the oil company's way of solving environmental problems. Leaks have been detected in older gas stations whose tanks are being dug up and repaired.

Marketing representative Jerrie Hill, left, and area manager Ray Simpson check out the operations of the automated gas pumps at the new Citgo station on Alcock.

Hill believes that although the attendant-free stations will multiply, this type of station is not for everyone.

"There will always be a few conventional stations because a lot of people like to have their car serviced. They want their oil changed or their car washed. It's (attendant-free station) just another facet that meets the needs of the people."

Residents say Galveston earned its high livability rating

GALVESTON (AP)—Mayor Barbara Crews took offense to jabs from Biloxi Mayor Pete Halat about Galveston being rated the nation's 13th best place to live by Money magazine.

"I've never been to Biloxi, and now it's even lower on my list of places to go," she said.

Halat said Galveston has nothing over his city, which failed to make Money's list.

"People who would choose to live in Galveston instead of Biloxi are the same type of people who drink New Coke, eat tofu, play platform tennis for exercise, wear pajama tops and bottoms in the summer and prefer Slim Whitman to rock 'n' roll," Halat said Friday.

Ms. Crews said Halat's statements were unfair.

"I agreed with the Money rating.

Galveston is a great place to live, and quality of life ranks very high when people talk about why they live in Galveston," she said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the covenanted commandment.

One's 'dream' will finally be realized

Sen. John Danforth of Missouri, friend and mentor of Clarence Thomas, remarked of him: "What Clarence is all about is that in this country you should have the freedom to think what you want to think, whether you're black, white or anything else." Now Americans are getting to see just what Judge Thomas thinks.

Likely, they will approve of him. He thinks for himself, to the surprise of many "civil rights" advocates, who wish him to rubber-stamp such anti-civil rights policies as racial quotas. Some opponents charge that Judge Thomas himself has benefited from affirmative action quotas — when in fact his own merits and hard work, along with affirmative action, pushed him forward in the world. Indeed, this very accusation — that he has done well only because of affirmative action — illustrates the major problem with the program: It forever stains those it is supposed to "benefit."

But even if Judge Thomas has benefited from affirmative action, why shouldn't he be able to criticize it? Most of us use the federal freeways and the federal U.S. Postal Service. Does that bar us from criticizing them — or from calling for them to be privatized?

Even if President Bush did, as Judge Thomas's smug opponents charge, tap Thomas because he is black, that is not affirmative action or a quota. When John F. Kennedy picked a southern politician, Lyndon B. Johnson, to be his running mate in 1960, did that mean JFK and his "Harvard mafia" thought half of all the federal jobs should go to Southerners? Hardly. He was balancing the ticket. He was not imposing quotas on the people.

Much has been made of Judge Thomas's support of "natural law." But natural is nothing more than the common sense belief "that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness" — as our Declaration of Independence so eloquently words it.

Far from rejecting such beliefs, as some contend, our Constitution writes them into law. "In order to form a more perfect union," Judge Thomas has indicated that such is his philosophy, and when he enunciates it before a national audience, most Americans will nod their heads and say, "That's what we've believed all along."

Such assent by the people will be heard in Washington. It should move doubting senators to vote yea. Within a few weeks Judge Thomas should justly become Justice Thomas.

From the bench, the rulings of this son of Georgia should help bring us closer to the image of America painted by Martin Luther King Jr. when he intoned, "I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slaveowners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood." For table, substitute bench.

Tiny steps toward communism

Communism is crumbling. Let's look into the horse's mouth to see what communism is all about. In 1848, Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels collaborated to write the Manifesto of the Communist Party. They condemned capitalism and gave 10 objectives for the proletariat struggle. Just for fun, let's see how close our country has come to achieving Marx's objectives.

The first was, "Abolition of property in land and the application of all rents of land to public purposes." In many cities, we have rent-control laws banning condominium conversion and building demolition. With the Environmental Protection Agency's wetlands policy, increasing amounts of private land are being controlled in the name of protecting the environment. Widespread land regulation is just a tiny step away from confiscation.

Marx called for "a heavy progressive or graduated income tax." That's the same thing congressional Democrats call for, and if it weren't for the efforts of the Reagan administration, which saw a 70 percent marginal tax rate in 1980, we might be looking at a 90 percent rate now instead of 33 percent.

Marx wanted "centralization of credit in the hands of the state, by means of a national bank with state capital and an exclusive monopoly." He couldn't have done much better than our Federal Reserve Bank and its monopoly on money and credit.

Walter Williams

"Williams," you say, "we need the Federal Reserve to prevent bank failures and to maintain price stability!" Check it out. The Federal Reserve system was started in 1913. There were far fewer bank failures and greater price stability before 1913 than afterward.

What about Marx's call for "centralization of the means of communication and transportation in the hands of the state." We have two large bureaucracies to implement this Marxist dream: the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) and the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC). Only lately have controls over transportation been relaxed, but the FCC maintains its tight-fisted, cartelizing control over the radio, television and telephone industries.

One Marxist dream has yet to be realized, but a number of congressmen are working on it — "Equal obligation of all to work. Establishment of industrial armies, especially for agriculture." To me that seems awfully close to congressional calls for national service, a program requiring all young people to work for free doing something in the national interest.

The Communist Manifesto also called for "free education for all children in public schools" and "abolition of child labor in its present form." We've achieved this in spades — free corrupt education for our kids and, through minimum wage laws, labor regulations and union collective bargaining agreements, reduction of work opportunities for children. Laws that used to protect kids from working in dangerous mines and factories now "protect" them from working in air-conditioned buildings with plush carpets.

The U.S.S.R. has spent 70 years trying to make communism work. They can't be faulted for effort. After all, they slaughtered 30 million or more of their own people and kept the rest captive or enslaved. Communism is not a failure because of lack of effort. Successful communism, like constructing a building from the roof down, is inherently impossible.

While we've adopted many Marxist principles, we are not yet a communist nation. But with increasing government controls over our lives, we're headed, tiny steps at a time, toward communism. And remember that even if you take tiny steps toward a goal, sooner or later you're going to be there. For the sake of our children, let's change directions.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Oct. 6, the 279th day of 1991. There are 86 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

One hundred years ago, on Oct. 6, 1891, Charles Stewart Parnell, the "Uncrowned King of Ireland," died in Brighton, England.

On this date:

In 1683, 13 families from Krefeld, Germany, arrived in present-day Philadelphia to begin Germantown, one of America's oldest settlements.

In 1863, the first Turkish bath in the United States opened. (It had only one customer its first day.)

In 1884, the Naval War College was established in Newport, R.I.

In 1927, the era of talking pictures arrived with the opening of The Jazz Singer, starring Al Jolson.

In 1939, in an address to the Reichstag, Adolf Hitler denied having any intention of war against France and Britain, and said he would agree to peace with the two nations.

The Attack of the Killer Bees

It has happened. They have come. No living thing is safe from them. Forget radon gas. Stop worrying about cholesterol. Asbestos? Minor problem. The killer bees are here.

For years I've been following their odyssey northward toward us from Africa and South America. These bees aren't normal bees. A normal bee stings only in self defense. Normal bees are content to a life of making a little honey.

But not killer bees. They're like the dreaded copperhead water rattler snake. They're mean. They're aggressive. If Hitler had been an insect, he would have been a killer bee.

If you try to run from killer bees, they will chase you. If you make it to your house safely, they'll wait in your yard until you come out the next morning.

If you check into a Holiday Inn in an effort to escape them, they will take the room next to you. God help us all.

It was on an inside page of a paper I was reading ... It should have been in massive type on the front. JAPS BOMB PEARL HARBOR! KENNEDY SLAIN! MAN WALKS ON THE MOON! KILLER BEES IN TEXAS!

It happened in McAllen, Texas. The Associate Press reported it thusly:

"Africanized bees attacked and stung a 65-year-old man more than 300 times in the first major attack by so-called killer bees in the United States, authorities said."

Lewis Grizzard

The victim was Adan Garza. He was attacked near McAllen while clearing brush near an abandoned shack, the report said.

"The killer bees had built a hive in the brush," said Kathleen Davis, a spokeswoman from the Texas A&M Department of Agricultural Communications. "He ran but he was unable to outrun them."

Luckily for Adan Garza the killer bees didn't kill him. But they did put him in the hospital.

There was more scary stuff in the AP report.

"The Africanized bees, aggressive insects known to attack in swarms and pursue prey for up to a mile ... They have been spreading through the Americas since 1957 when African queen bees escaped from an experiment in Brazil and began breeding with more docile European bees ... About six hundred deaths have been attributed to the bees, mostly in South America."

Now, they're in Texas. Where will they go next? North to Oklahoma? West to New Mexico, east to Louisiana? When will they reach you?

Imagine living with killer bees around. Will I have to wear one of those bee keeper outfits with the hood every time I go out of my house?

Will it be safe to play golf?

"A 44-year-old Atlanta man, Lewis Grizzard, while putting for par, was attacked by a swarm of killer bees. After stinging him 4,116 times, they carried the golfer off to parts unknown. Authorities said the bees, who made a daring, daylight escape from a Brazilian experiment in 1957 by disguising themselves as cockroaches, are known to carry off people and animals and take them back to their hives where they are stung and tortured in what are believed to be weird, sick, satanic rituals."

We don't have the commies to worry about anymore. Besides, how many times did you hear of a swarm of commies attacking somebody and stinging them 300 times?

I want the government to get involved in this thing and figure out a way to halt the deadly march of the killer bees.

Burn 'em, drown 'em, nuke 'em, if necessary. Just get them back south of the border. They probably came across the Rio Grande with an illegal Mexican alien in the first place.

Iran invaded Kuwait. The killer bees have invaded Texas. Get Schwarzkopf out of retirement. Operation Buzz Off.

More from Peter Arnett in Austin at the top of the hour.

A nuclear game of Russian roulette

The Bush administration is trying to minimize the nuclear disaster that might have terrorized the West when a junta temporarily seized the seat of Soviet power — and with it, the computer codes to launch the Soviet Union's more than 27,000 nuclear missiles.

President Bush said recently there was "no official concern" about a missile attack from the Soviet Union during the August coup.

Well, how about some unofficial concern? Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev admitted that for about 60 hours he was separated from the "Kremlin football," that is, the briefcase containing the nuclear launch codes. He didn't know who had it, and hardly anyone else in the Soviet Union did, either.

Who was carrying the football, and could it have been fumbled?

Nobody really knows for certain. It is assumed that a host of controls — from electronic locks to the consent of the military guardians of the warheads — would block an order to launch a nuclear attack.

Whoever controlled the nuclear codes, whether it was one of the coup leaders or lower-echelon technicians, the football was loose in a chaotic playing field. The military and KGB people who could have executed a launch order were split between supporters and opponents of the coup. Chances are that no one knew the loyalties of others around him.

It is in such an atmosphere of uneasiness and suspicion that tragic mistakes are made. That's probably why Gorbachev's science advisor recently called for the international community to help the Soviet Union control its nuclear warheads.

The country's military arsenal is "unstable, especially in times of crises," says Yevgeny Velikhov, vice president of the Soviet Union's academy of Sciences.

Let this fact soak in: The botched Soviet coup has singlehandedly undermined 40 years of U.S. defense strategy — the strategy of mutual deterrence. With political and social stability a long way off in the Soviet Union, we no longer can count on the presence of cool, rational fingers on the nuclear button. Add to this the increased availability of chemical and nuclear weapons to terrorist groups and renegade nations like Iraq, and you have a formula for disaster.

Incredibly, America still lacks the weapons to defend itself against nuclear missile attack. Our combined armed forces could not intercept a single intercontinental nuclear missile.

However, the United States need not be held hostage to Soviet instability. We have the technical ability to produce and deploy defensive weapons — thanks to the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) program begun under President Reagan.

But we need a renewed commitment to developing strategic defense. Earlier in the year, the administration proposed deploying a limited defense against ballistic missile attacks, called Global Protection Against Limited Strikes. The House of Representatives voted to kill the program but the Senate voted to move ahead with its own version. The differences are to be worked out this fall.

They had better be worked out soon. Linking U.S. security to a Soviet Union that is dissolving into perhaps a dozen new nuclear powers is like playing a bizarre game of nuclear Russian roulette — sooner or later you lose.

Letters to the editor

Vickie Walls resigns her district clerk post

To the editor:

After serious consideration, I have reached a definite decision to resign from my position of Gray County district clerk, effective Dec. 1, 1991.

You will readily understand my decision in view of my personal and financial obligations. I feel that greater opportunities would be available to me with Government Services Automation, where I would be able to widen my experience. This opportunity became available because of the computer experience I've had with Gray County and because I have become personally fascinated by the role and advantages automation brings to a courthouse.

I will miss working for Gray County. My five years serving the voters of Gray County have been very pleasant and, until my recent personal difficulties arose, provided a stimulating challenge. I sincerely appreciate the opportunities and cooperation given to me by the voters and the officeholders of Gray County. I enjoyed working with you all, and I regret very much the necessity of leaving. Only the extreme economic and personal pressures placed on me could have brought me to this decision.

I hope that the new procedures and modernization I introduced into the District Clerk's Office have proved that I was worthy of the confidence you placed in me.

I will, of course, help in training the person appointed to fill the position of Gray County district clerk. If at any future time a problem should arise, I shall be happy to assist in any way I can.

Disabled don't need to be kept in closets

To the editor:

Bear Mills' article on disability was rather interesting. I find it a little appalling to live in a Christian society and find that we look with contempt on a person with a birth defect or disability of which they are not at fault.

Are we to take the disabled veterans and kick them out because they served their country? They don't start the wars! They just serve their country.

Should retarded children be destroyed simply because they can't spell as well as Bear Mills? Should a disabled child be destroyed because he can't run or see as well as Bear Mills? These children deserve the right to prove themselves and make a life for themselves.

I have had a disability since I was seven years old, but I never let it keep me from living a full life. Even as a child I had to prove myself equal or better at things. I raised a family and did it without the need of your social services. The doctors said with my line of work I wouldn't live to be 40. Well, I have beat it by several years. I had to accept Social Security after paying it for over 30 years (because of a bad fall). Whether I liked it or not!

So don't holler loud, Mr. Mills. I earned what I receive.

A person being disabled does not give you the right to hide him in the closet or destroy him. Personally, Mr. Mills, I would find it interesting to see you with a disabled child of your own and then see your attitude!

DAV is a silent 'Angel of Mercy'

To the editor:

I would like to give recognition to an organization in Pampa which is often overlooked but which has many times been a silent "Angel of Mercy."

The Disabled American Veterans is comprised of veterans who suffer with service-connected disabilities. You may have bought a "forget-me-not" from them during one of their annual fund-raisers. They have used the funds over the years to help fellow veterans in need by providing food, paying a utility bill, helping with medical expenses, etc.

Their most recent act of mercy was to provide funds and a gift certificate for food at a local grocery to a terminally ill veteran and his wife and three small children.

May God richly bless those who have suffered so much in order that we can enjoy the freedom we have today and who are continuing to reach out to others who are suffering. This is truly what "American" is all about.

Weight Loss Surprises Researchers

WASHINGTON --A nutrition organization was hopeful that a nutritionally complete "hi-tech" food tablet would help erase world hunger problems, until a study revealed that one of the ingredients could cause significant weight loss.

Although other studies and scientists may not agree, researchers in Europe found that the ingredient, a natural plant colloid, actually caused people to lose weight, even though specifically instructed not to alter normal eating patterns, according to one study published in the prestigious British Journal of Nutrition. Researchers in an earlier study had speculated that the weight loss was due to a decrease in the intestinal absorption of calories.

While the project of National Dietary Research, aptly named Food Source One, would not be used to successfully fulfill its original goal, the formula which has since been improved with other natural colloids has been a windfall for some overweight people. A Daytona Beach, Florida woman fighting a weight battle for 12 years used the product on the recommendation of her physician and lost 30 pounds. She stated, "Not only have I lost 30 pounds but my cholesterol has dropped from 232 to 143. I have two closets full of clothes which have not fit me in two years that I can now wear." In a separate report, a telephone interview revealed that a Wilmington, North Carolina pharmacist lost 14 pounds in 3 weeks on the product and was never hungry.

Food Source One tablets are part of National Dietary Research's comprehensive plan to bring a rapid end to obesity in this country. A variety of nutritionally sound diet plans, specially prepared by NDR, accompany each bottle and provide a natural, drug free alternative for confronting the problem of obesity.

Co-homecoming queens

Michelle Shedeck crowns Stephanie Lock, a junior, as Lefors High School co-homecoming queen during a Friday pep rally as Brandi Steele and Gary Wyatt look on. Lock is the daughter of Pam Moler of Pampa and the late Leonard Lock. She is the granddaughter of Clayton and Dorothy Lock of Lefors. Lock's cousin, Shawna Lock, a freshman, is the co-homecoming queen. She was crowned during homecoming festivities on Sept. 27 when her name was inadvertently read over the loud speaker. Lefors ISD Superintendent Joe Roper said Friday that Stephanie Lock was awarded a crown, banner and roses Friday in attempt to make amends for the mistake and that the girls would serve as co-homecoming queens.

Southwestern Bell honors telephone operators

Telephone operators help thousands of Texans each day.

To honor these professionals, Southwestern Bell Telephone has declared Oct. 7-11 "Operator Recognition Week" in honor of the nearly 3,000 Southwestern Bell Telephone (SWBT) directory assistance and long distance operators who serve the public.

"We want to let our operators know how much their outstanding work is appreciated and let our customers know the professional manner in which they do their job," said Gary Stevens, area manager for external affairs.

"Each of our directory assistance and local/long distance operators handle nearly 900 to 1,200 calls per day," said Stevens. "Statewide that's almost two million calls we deal with day in and day out. We take pride in handling those calls in a friendly and efficient way."

Operators provide a vital service to millions of customers who depend on their telephone for their livelihood, security or pleasure, according to Stevens.

"Our operators are specially trained to give friendly service that's efficient and accurate," said Stevens. "To help our operators do a better job, here are a few simple tips we'd like to pass along."

• Have information ready when billing a call to a third number, calling card or making a collect call.

• Have plenty of change when calling from a pay phone.

• Give directory assistance operators as much information as possible, including the spelling of a name and address.

• In an emergency, stay calm, tell the operator what kind of help is needed and the location.

Natural gas producers seek an altered state in move to bolster prices

By MARIA HALKIAS
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS (AP) — In 1931, the East Texas field flooded oil markets, dropping crude prices to 10 cents a barrel. Gov. Ross Sterling declared martial law and sent troops to the field, which produced 1 million barrels of oil per day.

That started legal and legislative wheels turning, eventually giving the Texas Railroad Commission authority to set oil production to meet market demand.

It was all done in the spirit of preventing waste of a valuable state natural resource. An important side effect: decades of relatively stable prices until OPEC took over in the 1970s.

Sixty years after oil flowed unchecked, the Railroad Commission is being asked to step in again — this time for natural gas.

Although Gov. Ann Richards won't send troops to the state's natural gas fields, some producers probably would stand up and applaud her if she did.

Natural gas producers desperately want something done about a market that pays them the lowest prices in a dozen years.

Prices are below replacement cost, a condition that can't continue much longer, producers say.

Some critics suggest the situation would improve if the railroad commission would simply do a better job.

"All we're asking is that the commission do what the law says it should do," to match production with perceived demand, said Julian Martin, Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association executive vice president.

"The Railroad Commission has been sloppy," Martin said. "It's laughable in our opinion."

The state is wasting its natural resource, the association argues. The industry depression has caused premature abandonment of natural gas wells, discouraged new drilling, resulted in the bypassing of smaller reserves and left undone remedial work on wells needed to improve production, Martin said.

Railroad Commission chairman Lena Guerrero has scheduled a hearing in Austin this month to review the complex issue, saying "allegations of waste shouldn't be taken lightly." Chairman Guerrero and commissioners James E. Nugent and Robert Krueger have publicly supported association allegations.

The natural gas proration issue is complex. Simplified, it boils down to producers believing that the commission has failed to set production limits, known as allowables, to match market demand.

Each month, buyers of natural gas, largely pipelines and utilities, tell the Railroad Commission how much natural gas they plan to purchase the following month.

That number is used to set production allowables for the coming month. However, nominations have been as high as 43 percent above production and market demand. And Railroad Commission allowables have been off by as much as 18 percent.

That much excess natural gas in the marketplace is partly to blame for the depression in the natural gas industry, which is being compared to the oil price crash of 1986. Texas produces about one-fourth of the nation's natural gas consumed.

This isn't a new subject for the commission. At least two blue ribbon committees have failed to produce a plan to prorate natural gas production since the late 1970s.

David Biegler, president of Dallas-based Enserch Corp. and chairman and chief executive of Enserch subsidiary, Lone Star Gas Co., served on both of those committees.

"Somebody has to get the production side of this in order," Biegler said. "The commission needs to assume its role as a stabilizing party to put rational thinking back into this market."

Lone Star Gas sued the Texas Railroad Commission in 1986, alleging existing natural gas proration is unconstitutional and needs to be thrown out.

And like many Oil Patch issues, this one pits independents against the majors.

Most majors favor the status quo, Biegler said.

But representatives of the independent gas producers have been working with the larger companies to come up with a compromise to present to the Railroad Commission, Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association's Martin said.

That may not be easy, but it should be, others said.

"It's hard to oppose this request, when you're asking the commission to do its job," said Forrest E. Hoglund, chairman, chief executive officer and president of Enron Oil & Gas Co., a subsidiary of Houston-based Enron Corp. He said that such a unified stance should be supported as a Texas issue.

"We just had a huge tax bill in this state," Mr. Hoglund said. If the natural gas prices improve to parity with crude oil, that could mean as much as $1 billion in new economic activity in Texas, which would generate additional tax revenues, he said.

"It's a complicated, complex issue," commission chairman Guerrero said. "While many people agree something needs to be done, not everyone agrees what should be done."

The Railroad Commission probably won't take any action on the issue until after this winter, she said.

Some want to see quick action. It won't happen. But regulators and industry officials hope the winter months will buy the process some time.

State Comptroller abolishes sales tax permit fee, effective Oct. 1

AUSTIN — "New businesses that open their doors on or after Oct. 1 and have already paid the $25 sales tax permit fee, will have their money refunded," State Comptroller John Sharp said today. "The same applies to existing businesses that have already filed to have their sales tax permit renewed on or after October 1."

The refunds coincide with the announcement that the annual $25 sales tax filing fee paid to the Comptroller's Office is abolished, effective Oct. 1.

"Not only will the $25 fee be abolished, but we're also going to issue a sales tax permit to a business for an indefinite period of time. As long as they are making sales and sending their taxes to the state, businesses won't be required to renew those permits every year, as they are now," Sharp said.

According to Mickey Moore, president of the Texas Association of Retailers, merchants are delighted to see the permit fee abolished. "They felt all along that it was inappropriate to ask them to pay a fee for the privilege of collecting sales tax for the state," Moore said.

"Since it was first enacted by the Legislature in 1987, the $25 annual sales tax permit fee has generated more mail from angry business people than any issue handled by this agency in the last 20 years," Sharp said.

"Hundreds upon hundreds of business owners were mad that they had to pay a $25 fee every year to collect taxes for the State of Texas. It didn't make any sense to me either, but that was the law — a law that needed changing," he said.

"While the fee generated substantial state revenue — estimated at $12.6 million in 1992 and $14 million in 1993 — it also generated more animosity among Texas business people toward state government than you can place a dollar value on," Sharp said.

Also eliminated is the requirement that sales tax permits be renewed annually. Beginning Oct. 1, the permits will only be cancelled if a taxpayer reports no sales or taxable purchases to the state for a year's time, or if the business does not file its sales tax returns and remit the taxes it collected to the state.

Gainesville turns PHS miscues into 35-21 win

WICHITA FALLS — The Pampa Harvesters suffered their first loss of the season Saturday night, 35-21, to a powerhouse Gainesville squad in a game closer than the final score indicates.

Trailing Gainesville most of the contest, the scrappy Pampa team evened the score at 21-21 with seven minutes remaining.

However, the Gainesville Leopards took advantage of a Pampa miscue on the Harvesters' 9-yard line with less than two minutes to go in the contest, recovered the fumble and pushed the ball into the end zone on a quarterback sneak by Chad Mitchell. The PAT attempt was good and Gainesville led 28-21.

Pampa again bobbled the ball with 20 seconds left on the clock and the Leopards turned the mistake into a TD. The PAT was good and Gainesville led 35-21.

Pampa's Sammy Laury carried the ball 27 times for 159 yards and Zach Thomas accounted for 76 yards rushing on 11 attempts.

Gainesville stunned the Harvesters early by scoring two touchdowns in the first two minutes of the game — the first TD with only seven seconds off the clock.

The Leopards' first score came on a Pampa miscue on the game's opening kickoff. Gainesville recovered the football in the end zone for a touchdown at 11:53. The PAT attempt was good and Gainesville led 7-0.

Unable to make a first down, Pampa punted. Gainesville fielded the punt deep in their own territory and returned it to the Pampa 4-yard line.

Gainesville's power running back Paul Oatts scored on his team's first play from scrimmage and a successful PAT made it 14-0 at 10:02.

The Harvesters pushed the ball on the artificial surface to mid field, but were forced to punt.

Oatts, in the next series of plays, scampered 69 yards for Gainesville's third touchdown. The PAT attempt was good and Gainesville led 21-0 at 6:42 in the first quarter.

Laury returned the kickoff 20 yards to Pampa's 25-yard line, but three plays later the Harvesters were forced to punt.

Gainesville failed to capitalize on its possession, punted, and the Harvesters took over on the Gainesville 40.

Laury, on two carries, moved the ball to the 30-yard line for a first down. The next play, Laury galloped 30 yards for Pampa's first score. The Todd McCavit PAT attempt was good and Gainesville led 21-7 at 1:43 of the first stanza.

The two Class 4A teams swapped possessions and, with minutes remaining in the first half, Pampa started a drive on their own 14 after a Gainesville punt.

Laury took off on a 24-yard jaunt for a first down on the Pampa 38. The Harvesters advanced the ball to the Gainesville 1-yard line on a series of rushes and Zach Thomas powered it in for a touchdown with less than 30 seconds remaining in the first half. The PAT attempt was good.

Time ran out in the half with Gainesville leading 21-14.

Two minutes into the third quarter, Pampa took over on a Gainesville punt but was forced to punt.

Gainesville fumbled on their own 42-yard line and Pampa recovered.

With seven minutes remaining in the game, Zach Thomas scrambled for 42 yards and the TD. The McCavit PAT knotted the score at 21-21.

Key Pampa miscues in the final two minutes opened the door for Gainesville to score and notch their fourth victory in five starts.

Pampa recorded 259 total yards, all rushing, and Gainesville had 149 yards rushing and 94 yards in the air for a total of 243 yards.

Harvesters quarterback Andy Cavalier (4) drops back to pass as the offensive line pass blocks at a game earlier this season.

Groom rips Amherst; Lefors, McLean and Canadian win

Groom 56, Amherst 14
GROOM — Groom closed out non-district action Friday night with a 56-14 trouncing of Amherst.

Paul McLaughlin and Brian Baker led Groom's offense, combining for seven touchdowns. McLaughlin had four touchdowns and 122 yards rushing. Three of his TDs came on runs of 45, 10 and 5 yards. He also caught a 26-yard TD pass from Bruce Britten.

Brian Baker accounted for three Tiger TDs on an 18-yard run, a 60-yard interception return and a fumble recovery in the end zone. Baker was Groom's top rusher with 133 yards on 22 carries.

"Our defense played well, but our offense was a little sluggish at times," said Groom assistant Jay Lamb.

Baker, Britten and Kirk Webb picked off three Amherst passes for Groom, which held Amherst to only five first downs.

Groom has a 4-1 record in the six-man ranks. The Tigers open District 1-A play next Friday night against Higgins.

"Higgins has a pretty well-rounded team. They've got a couple of kids who can run pretty well and they can pass pretty good. It should be an exciting game," Lamb said.

Chillicothe 44, Miami 25
CHILICOTHE — Miami fell to Chillicothe, 44-25, in a six-man game Friday night.

Chillicothe scored 24 points in the second half after leading Miami, 20-12 at halftime.

Chillicothe's attack was led by Anthony Jackson, who scored seven touchdowns and rushed for 315 yards.

Greg Kauk and Aaron McReynolds paced Miami, scoring two touchdowns apiece.

Aggies down Tech

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK(AP) — Bucky Richardson rushed for three touchdowns and No. 23 Texas A&M gave up just 8 yards on the ground in defeating Texas Tech 37-14 Saturday in the Southwest Conference.

The Aggies moved the ball at will against the outmanned Red Raiders.

When Richardson wasn't handing off to a host of A&M running backs, he dodged tacklers and scrambled for first downs.

Texas A&M (3-1 overall, 1-0 SWC) rolled up 443 yards of offense and held a 7-minute advantage in possession time. Tech (1-1, 0-2) mustered only 220 yards total offense.

Most of A&M's attack came on the ground led by freshman Greg Hill, who rushed for 137 yards, including a dazzling 42-yard touchdown run through the heart of Tech's defense.

Richardson rushed for 76 yards with touchdown runs of 1, 1 and 5 yards, all in the first half. A&M led 24-0 at intermission and wasn't seriously threatened.

Terry Venetoulis kicked field goals of 30, 27 and 43 yards for the Aggies.

Texas Tech's troubles on offense began immediately. The Red Raiders' first two drives went for minus-10 yards. And starting quarterback Jamie Gill was knocked out of the game early in the first quarter with a bruised left shoulder after a blindside sack by A&M's Sam Adams.

When the Red Raiders seemed to gain some momentum, they self-destructed with three turnovers. The Aggies converted two fumbles into touchdowns.

Louis Sheffield scored Tech's first touchdown on a 2-yard run midway through the third quarter. Rodney Blackshear recovered a fumble in the end zone in the final minutes for Tech's only other score.

The Red Raiders' star may have been punter Mark Bounds, who averaged 52.5 yards on six kicks, breaking his own SWC record of 52 yards on seven kicks earlier this year against Wyoming.

Tech backup quarterback Robert Hall completed 15 of 31 passes for 199 yards with one interception. Hall was sacked four times.

Richardson threw sparingly but for big yards, hitting six of 13 for 121 yards.

Completions of 39 and 28 yards to Brian Mitchell each put the ball at the Tech 1 to set up Richardson's 1-yard scoring dives.

Wheeler Mustangs poll Vega Longhorns 69-6

By J. ALAN BRZYS
Sports Writer

WHEELER — The Wheeler High Mustangs completed their undefeated gallop over and through non-district foes Friday night by pistol-whipping the Vega Longhorns 69-6.

Ranked fifth in the state by the Harris Ratings System, the Mustangs dominated the game in all areas during first-half and the junior varsity offensive squad played the entire second half.

Senior running back Nathan Willeford accounted for four touchdowns, including a 95-yard kickoff return three seconds into the second half.

Vega opted to receive the opening kickoff and three plays later was forced to punt.

Wheeler marched down the field and, at 8:25, Willeford scored a TD on a 4-yard run to give the Mustangs a 6-0 lead. The PAT attempt failed.

Vega quarterback Codi Cleavinger, forced by a feisty Wheeler defense to hurry his passes, threw on second-and-15 at his own 20 and was intercepted by the Mustangs' Brandon Chick.

Wheeler quarterback Jason Beers then hit Chick with a 9-yard pass for a score at 7:13. The Ike Finsterwald kick was good for a 13-0 lead.

The Longhorns fumbled on the ensuing kickoff and Wheeler took over on the Vega 29.

Flagged for several penalties, Wheeler lost ground, but on a third-and-12 at the Vega 31 Beers ran the quarterback keeper and took it 31 yards for the touchdown. The successful PAT gave Wheeler a 20-0 advantage at 6:38 in the first quarter.

After a lengthy Wheeler drive, Mark Marshall rushed one yard for a

TD. With the successful PAT, the Mustangs led 27-0 at 10:16 in the second quarter.

At 5:26, Marshall scooted 24 yards for another score. The PAT attempt was good and Wheeler led 34-0.

Vega continued to pass unsuccessfully.

With two minutes left in the half, Wheeler's Willeford scampered left behind solid blocking for a 71-yard scoring run. The PAT was good and Wheeler led 41-0.

At 1:57, Vega's Shannon Tanck returned the kickoff 80 yards for the Longhorns' only score. A two-point conversion run attempt was foiled and Wheeler led 41-6.

Chick ran the Vega kickoff more than 50 yards, but was stopped by the only remaining Vega tackler. Marshall ran the ball to the Vega 6 and Willeford scored at 0:52 on a rush up the middle behind big Beryle Brister and his fellow linemen.

The Mustangs led 49-6 at the half after Beers ran the keeper for the two-point conversion.

Karcher said Vega coaches complained about piling on the score with the two-point try, but explained, "I didn't call the play."

"We tell our kids, if the play's there ... (they) call it on the field. We work on that 'swinging-gate' (play) in practice."

Second-half scores included Willeford's opening-kickoff 95-yard jaunt; a one-yard run by Sophomore fullback Jason Hink set up by a 37-yard pass from Freshman Chad Rives to Sophomore Todd Baize; and a 45-yard pass interception and TD return by Sophomore quarterback Chad Dunnam.

Wheeler head coach Ronnie Karcher, after the lopsided victory, said the 'Stangs' three touchdowns in the first six minutes of the contest "set the tone."

"We're executing. We scored a lot of points," said Karcher. However, he said the performance was flawed by the 163 penalty yards levied against his team.

"I told them their (next opponents) are not going to be like the team they played tonight or last week (Quanah). It's not going to be that easy."

"We're going to be playing a lot better football teams in our district and we can't get by with that."

"I thought the secondary looked pretty good tonight," said the Mustangs fourth-year head football coach. "We intercepted several (5) passes."

"Our quarterbacks (Beers and Dunnam) are throwing the ball better and we've got pretty good receivers if we can get them open."

Karcher hesitated in naming outstanding individual performances - most likely because there were so many - but said Willeford, who started in place of injured Mack Marshall, "did a good job."

"Their (the team's) goal, when they started the year, is to win the state championship," said Karcher. "We've got to break it down in steps - district first and take it game by game."

"It (a state championship) is possible," he said. "In '87 we didn't know what was going to happen and it (the state title) happened. At this point in time we may have as good a team as we had in '87."

"We've got to get down to the nitty-gritty. That's what I told them," said the Wheeler coach. "That's just an old cliché, but it's the truth. What we've done to this point doesn't mean anything."

"Everybody in our district knows us and they're going to be getting after us ... they're going to play us harder than they play anybody else. It always works that way."

Baylor hands Houston 3rd loss

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback J.J. Joe opened Baylor's bag of tricks and accounted for three touchdowns and the defense intercepted three passes and recovered four fumbles as the 11th ranked Bears ended three years of frustration with a 38-21 victory over Houston Saturday.

Houston (1-3, 0-1 in the Southwest Conference) had beaten Baylor by a combined 124-49 over the past three years, including 66-10 in 1989, but Joe triggered the Bears' option offense with trick plays and key passes for a 17-14 halftime lead.

Baylor (5-0, 2-0) turned opportunist in the second half, using an interception by Brian Hand and a fumble recovery by Albert Fontenot to take a 31-21 lead in handling the Cougars their third consecutive loss.

After Hand's theft, Joe ran nine yards on an option keeper untouched into the Houston end zone. Fontenot's recovery at the Houston 30 preceded Joe's 7-yard touchdown pass to David Mims, who caught a flat pass and outran defensive end Tracy Gentry to the end zone.

Joe completed a 77-yard touchdown pass to Melvin Bonner with 8:20 left to play and Bonner, adding salt to the Cougar wound.

All three interceptions and two of the fumbles were attributed to Houston quarterback David Klingler, who completed 35 of 57 passes for 470 yards.

Joe completed 16 of 23 passes for 262 yards, including nine passes to Bonner for 169 yards.

Baylor used trickery and bombs to key their 17-14 halftime lead.

Joe's 44-yard pass to Lee Miles gave Baylor a first down at Houston's 22 in the first quarter prior to Miles' two-yard touchdown run on a reverse on fourth down with 1:43 left in the period.

Bonner ran under a 45-yard bomb from Joe to the Houston 1 to set up John Henry's 1-yard run in the second quarter for a 14-7 lead in the second quarter.

The Cougars, trying to snap a two-game losing streak that toppled them from the national rankings, got on the board in the second quarter on a 2-yard run by Ostell Miles following a 54-yard fingertip catch by Marcus Grant to the Baylor 5-yard line.

They tied the score on Grant's 3-yard touchdown catch from Klingler with 5:31 left in the half. Klingler threw a 50-yard pass to John Brown III to the Baylor 3.

The Bears used more trickery to take the halftime lead. Joe pitched to Miles, who started to his left on an apparent end-around but pulled up and hit David Mims with a 29-yard pass to the Cougar 17.

Ireland's 27-yard field goal with 27 seconds left, gave Baylor its half-time bulge.

N.C. State edges Ga. Tech 28-21

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Last season must seem light years away for Georgia Tech.

Last year's team that went 11-0-1 and finished No. 2 is facing disaster only five games into 1991.

The 21st-ranked Yellow Jackets dropped their third game 28-21 on Saturday to No. 19 North Carolina State, committing three key penalties in the Wolfpack's winning drive late in the fourth quarter.

Redshirt freshman Geoff Bender's 2-yard keeper with 2:43 left in his first start kept North Carolina State unbeaten and atop the ACC standings.

Seminoles cruise past Syracuse

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Casey Weldon passed for a career-high 347 yards and three touchdowns as top-ranked Florida State routed No. 10 Syracuse 46-14 Saturday, extending the nation's longest winning streak to 11.

The Seminoles (5-0) scored the final 39 points after Qadry (Missile) Ismail's 95-yard kickoff return put Syracuse (4-1) ahead 14-7 late in the first quarter.

Florida State rolled up 642 yards against one of the nation's stingiest defenses, a unit that was giving up only 12 points and 291 yards per game. It was the most yards ever allowed by the Orange-men, topping the record of 587 by Florida State in 1978.

Syracuse beat Florida 38-21 two weeks ago, but couldn't pull off a Sunshine State sweep against the Seminoles, who are off to a 5-0 start for the first time since their perfect 1979 regular season.

The Seminoles, who led 17-14 at halftime, broke it open in the third quarter on a 1-yard TD run by Edgar Bennett and a 50-yard scoring toss from Weldon to Shannon Baker.

The Seminoles, who have won 14 straight home games, put the game away in the fourth period on a safety by Toddrick McIntosh, a 12-yard touchdown run by Sean Jackson and a 15-yard TD pass from Brad Johnson to Lonnie Johnson.

Weldon, 11-0 as a starter, completed 22 of 35 passes, including TD tosses of 12 yards to Matt Frier and 7 yards to Bennett. His previous high for passing yardage was 325 against Florida last season.

The Seminoles, who never trailed during their previous 10 games, fell behind on the second play from scrimmage Saturday. After David Walker ran for 36 yards on the opening play, Graves and Ismail connected on a 44-yard flea-flicker to give Syracuse a 7-0 lead.

Walker took a handoff from Marvin Graves and pitched it back to the quarterback, who then lofted a perfect pass to Ismail, younger brother of former Notre Dame star Rocket Ismail.

The junior receiver, tightly covered by safety Richard Coes, caught the ball on the Florida State 5 and raced into the end zone.

Florida State tied it on Frier's TD catch with 1:18 left in the first quarter. But Ismail took the ensuing kickoff, eluded three tacklers and raced 95 yards to put Syracuse back in front 14-7.

Ismail cut up the middle, bounced off Terrell Buckley at his 35, eluded John Davis near midfield, escaped the lunging grasp of Ken Alexander at the Florida State 40 and raced down the right sideline for the score.

Florida State evened it at 14 on the TD pass from Weldon to Bennett with 7:32 remaining in the first half. Weldon rolled right and Bennett made a jumping catch in heavy traffic.

Dan Mowrey's 27-yard field goal with 4:29 left gave the Seminoles a 17-14 lead. Syracuse drove to the Florida State 34 shortly before halftime, but Buckley halted the drive with a leaping interception, grabbing the ball away from Ismail.

Gardere passes UT to win over Rice

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas lived up to its reputation on defense and started to build one on offense in defeating Rice Saturday for the 26th straight year, 28-7, in the Southwest Conference opener for both teams.

"We controlled the line of scrimmage," said Texas coach David McWilliams.

He singled out 283-pound defensive tackle Tommy Jeter. "Jeter may have made every tackle out there for awhile. He had a great game," McWilliams said.

"When you're 0-2, you're searching for something to make things change," Jeter said. "I think we finally found it. We had to win this game or the season might be doomed."

Harvesters blank Randall 18-0 in strong tennis performance

The Pampa High tennis team blanked Randall High 18-0 Saturday at Pampa.

"It was a great team effort," said PHS tennis coach Pat Trueblood. "No matches were lost."

"I'm very pleased with the way they played," he added. "There were only two 3-set matches."

Pampa's Joe Wellborn was a standout in singles play, winning a Texas (1-2) had only scored one touchdown in losses to Mississippi State and Auburn but quarterback Peter Gardere scored his first rushing touchdown and threw his first scoring pass of the season against Rice.

For Texas fans, Gardere's performance offered a ray of hope for the Longhorns against No. 5-ranked Oklahoma in their annual game, next week at Dallas.

Gardere completed 11 of 20 passes for 103 yards with no interceptions. "Somebody came up to me after the game and said, 'Welcome back!' I said, 'We've been here, it's just been a little slow,'" Gardere said.

Texas' defense, ranked 12th nationally, held college football's top rusher, Trevor Cobb, to 68 yards on 28 carries.

Cobb, who had averaged 216 yards in Rice's three previous games, never had running room with a 12-yarder his longest gain.

Rice coach Fred Goldsmith said, "I had the sense for the first time since I've coached at Rice that Texas was ready to play us. I was concerned about that all week."

Cobb, a junior, said the Texas defense is "probably the best defense I've seen against me since I've been here at Rice."

Texas' secondary intercepted four passes — two by cornerback Mark Berry. Texas had only one interception, by a linebacker, in the first two games.

Adrian Walker had a 37-yard scoring run in the second quarter to break a 0-0 tie and Shane Childers and Gardere added 1-yard scoring runs in the second half.

Rice (2-2), trailing 21-0 in the third quarter, scored its only touchdown after freshman Josh LaRocca relieved starter Greg Willig and guided the Owls 80 yards. The touchdown came on a 26-yard fourth-and-9 pass to freshman Jimmy Lee.

Gardere threw his first touchdown pass, for 14 yards to flanker Darrick Duke, with 16 seconds left in the half.

Braves go from worst to first; face Pirates in NL playoffs

Atlanta beats Houston 5-2

By TOM SALADINO
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Believe it! The Braves are best in the West.

Atlanta, the team that refused to lose, completed one of the most amazing turnarounds in baseball history Saturday, clinching the NL West title with a 5-2 victory over the Houston Astros.

Behind John Smoltz's pitching and Ron Gant's hitting, the Braves won their season-high eighth straight game. And when second-place Los Angeles lost to San Francisco 4-0 just 3 1/2 minutes later, the last pennant race was over.

The Braves, whose 65-97 record last year was worst in the majors, joined Minnesota this season as the only teams to rebound from last place to first.

Atlanta will start the NL playoffs Wednesday night in Pittsburgh.

Atlanta made up 9 1/2 games on the Dodgers since the All-Star break, compiling the best record in the majors the second half at 55-27 while winning 21 of 28 down the stretch.

"You just had that feeling that you're going to win every time out," Braves manager Bobby Cox said.

Atlanta duelled the Dodgers down the stretch and went into the final weekend tied. The Braves won Friday night while Los Angeles lost, and then wrapped up the third NL

West title in their 26-year history in Atlanta, and first since 1982.

As soon as right fielder David Justice caught the final ball in Atlanta, the Braves gathered on the field to watch the end of the Dodgers-Giants game on the scoreboard. Their wait was a short one, setting another celebration for the players and the sellout crowd of 44,994.

The fans began chanting, tomahawk-chopping and beating drums in the first inning as the Braves took a 2-0 lead off Mark Portugal (10-12).

Smoltz (14-13) won his sixth straight decision, allowing eight hits with two strikeouts and no walks. Like the Braves, Smoltz made a remarkable comeback, too. He is 12-2 since the All-Star break.

Lonnie Smith led off the Atlanta first with a single, Mark Lemke followed with another and Terry Pendleton singled for a 1-0 lead. Justice reached on an error and Ron Gant hit a sacrifice fly. Smith doubled home a run in the second for a 3-0 edge.

The Braves, who have won nine straight over the Astros for a 13-4 season series edge, made it 4-0 in the third with the help of an error by shortstop Andruw Cedeño, his fifth in two games.

The Astros scored twice in the fourth on Cedeño's RBI double and Casey Candaele's run-scoring single. But Gant responded with his 32nd home run in the fifth, making it 5-2.

After allowing a bunt single to Ken Lofton in the fifth, then picking him off, Smoltz retired the next 11 batters before Jeff Bagwell led off the ninth with a single.

Dodgers lose to SF Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Dodgers' dream of a pennant died Saturday at Candlestick Park.

Los Angeles lost to its long-time rival for the second time in less than 20 hours and was eliminated from the NL West race with a 4-0 loss to the San Francisco Giants. The amazing Atlanta Braves clinched the division with a 5-2 victory over visiting Houston.

The Giants were determined not to let the Dodgers celebrate on their turf and Roger Craig managed like it was the World Series.

Trevor Wilson (13-11) held the Dodgers to two hits and did not allow Los Angeles a runner from the third until the ninth, as the Giants eliminated the Dodgers, who had held first place for 134 days.

Gary Carter singled in the third inning and Kal Daniels doubled with one out ninth off Wilson. Darryl Strawberry fanned for the second out of the inning and Eddie Murray grounded out to end the game and the Dodgers' hopes.

The Giants turned a 1-0 advantage into a 4-0 lead with three runs in the sixth inning as Carter appeared to misjudge home plate on one play and had the ball kicked out of his glove on the next.

Willie McGee began the sixth-inning rally with a one-out single off Mike Morgan (14-10) and a steal of second before Will Clark was walked intentionally.

Williams then hit a soft liner just beyond the reach of a diving shortstop Lenny Harris, scoring McGee.

McGee was called safe at home by home plate umpire Jim Quick even though Brett Butler's throw clearly beat McGee. Replays showed that McGee stepped on the plate just before crashing into Carter.

After Kevin Bass was walked intentionally, Robby Thompson flew out to left fielder Daniels, whose throw to the plate was in time to retire Clark. Carter lunged attempting to tag Clark but was thwarted when Clark kicked the ball out of his glove. Williams was able to score before the ball was retrieved in front of the Giants dugout.

The Candlestick Park crowd of 42,712 saluted the Dodgers with a relentless wave of Tomahawk chops, the symbol of the Braves' unexpected pennant drive, in the middle of the eighth inning as the song "Louie, Louie" cascaded through the stadium.

The Giants took a 1-0 lead with one out in the fourth inning. Clark tripled into the right-field corner, and scored when Matt Williams lined Morgan's next pitch into left field for a single.

Infante: Packers must avoid turnovers to beat Cowboys

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The last time they met in 1989, the Green Bay Packers were on the way back and the Dallas Cowboys were starting over.

The Packers, behind quarterback Don Majkowski, beat the Cowboys twice in a 10-victory season and then just missed the playoffs. Certainly, the post-season couldn't be far off.

The Cowboys, meanwhile, were suffering through a 1-15 season that could only leave room for improvement. Their rebuilding under Jimmy Johnson would take some time, even though rookie quarterback Troy Aikman showed the promise that had made him the top pick in the draft.

But today when the teams meet again at Milwaukee County Stadium, it's the Cowboys who appear closer to a playoff team than the Packers.

Dallas (3-2) is coming off a 21-16 victory last week over the defending Super Bowl champion Giants.

"It's one of the biggest wins since we've been here. It really gave our guys some confidence," said Johnson.

"It's let us know, kind of reaffirms, that we are headed in the right direction," said Aikman.

Aikman, the center of the Cowboys comeback, could have been a Packer. Green Bay beat Phoenix in the final game of the 1988 season, giving the Cowboys and not the Packers the first pick in 1989's draft. Dallas took Aikman and Green Bay got Tony Mandarich, who was a disappointment in his first two seasons.

"I have thought about it on occasion and it's really kind of strange the way the whole situation unfolded," said Aikman. "I wanted to play here (Dallas) mainly because I'm from Oklahoma and this is close to my hometown and my family is able to get here and watch me play."

"I think (Green Bay) Coach (Lindy) Infante has done a good job there and it's really difficult to predict what would have happened. I know Majkowski was all-pro the following season and I might have been sitting on the bench had I been there."

Aikman didn't let the disappointment of his first season slow his progress. Dallas improved to 7-9 last season, just missing the playoffs. Now the Cowboys have taken some of the pressure off Aikman with a running game featuring Emmitt Smith.

"My rookie season we didn't have much of a running game at all. And it makes it real difficult on you when teams know that in order for you to beat them, you have line up and throw the football," said Aikman.

Majkowski and the Packers are learning that lesson, as well. They've had little or no running game for two years and are averaging just under 70 yards rushing in five games this season. All the pressure is on the quarterback and it's one reason the Packers are 1-4.

In fact, Smith's 517 rushing yards are 168 more than the Packers have as a team. The Cowboys' running game is better and so is Aikman, who completed 20 of 27 passes for 277 yards last week against New York.

"Troy's a very special player but the biggest improvement in Troy is that we have upgraded his supporting cast," said Johnson.

"Troy's going into the time of a quarterback's career where they tend to blossom," said Infante.

"I think he has steadily gotten better. He's impressive. We knew that when he was coming out in the draft three years ago. I felt, working the guy out, that he was a can't-miss quarterback."

The Packers' offensive problems go deeper than the lack of a running game. Their defense has played well, despite the absence of holdout linebacker Tim Harris, who was finally traded to San Francisco last week. Majkowski hurt his left shoulder running for a touchdown last week in a 23-21 loss to the Rams. Coming off rotator cuff surgery on his right shoulder, he's struggled, completing 78 of 153 passes with two touchdowns and seven interceptions. He's also been sacked 16 times. Blair Kiel will start Sunday in his place.

And the Packers are mostly hurting themselves. Two fumbles cost them 14 points in a span of seven seconds last week. The week before in Miami, Majkowski simply dropped the ball in the end zone and the Dolphins got an easy touchdown.

"We are not suffering from an incurable disease here. What we have to do is take the cure," said Infante. "The cure is to play better and play more consistently and to play without turning the ball over."

Harvesters fall in VB matches

Pampa's varsity and junior varsity teams lost their matches against Hereford in district volleyball games held here Saturday in the McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Harvester varsity squad fell to Hereford 15-5 and 15-1. "We played in spurts," said volleyball coach Denise Reed. "We didn't play as poorly as the score indicates. You just can't afford to have mental lapses against that good of a team."

Scoring for Pampa in the two matches were Kristen Becker, LaTonya Jeffrey and Jodi Millican, each getting two points.

Saturday's game brings the varsity volleyball team to a 10-9 overall record for the season and 0-3 in district competition.

In junior varsity action, Hereford won 15-12 and 15-5.

Gaining points for the Harvesters were Misti Plunk, 6; Lara Adams, 4; Emily Brooks and Courtney Smith, 3 each; and Tammy Chesser, 1.

"Those kids played an awfully good game in the first one," Reed said, adding that the team "kind of had a letdown in the second one."

The JV team now has a 7-4 overall record and stands 1-2 in district play.

The Harvester volleyball teams will be playing Randall High School in district action beginning at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the McNeely Fieldhouse.

Coronado Hospital using new gallbladder surgery technique

Dr. Charles Ashby assists in a recent surgery using the new Olympus Laparoscopic Cholecystectomy System with high-resolution optics for gallbladder surgery.

Removal of the gallbladder through a small incision, an alternative to traditional major surgery, is now available at Coronado Hospital, according to Bruce W. Reinhardt, administrator.

The new method, called laparoscopic cholecystectomy, was first introduced in the United States in 1988, but until recently was available in only metropolitan areas. Coronado Hospital recently received the Olympus Laparoscopic Cholecystectomy System, which is a leader in high-resolution optics.

The new technique reduces hospitalization and convalescent time from several weeks to a few days, according to Vijay Mohan, MD, who performed the first procedure at Coronado last summer. Dr. Mohan, Alfredo Juan, MD, and Charles Ashby, MD, attended a seminar in San Antonio in April to learn the new procedures. They were joined at the seminar by personnel from Coronado Hospital's operating room.

"Not all patients who have gallbladder disease are good subjects for this procedure. Mrs. Aldepha Silva, who was the first patient at Coronado Hospital to receive the surgery, was an ideal candidate because she had not had previous abdominal surgeries, she had no breathing problems, and her gallbladder disease was uncomplicated," Dr. Mohan said.

Mohan explained that during the procedure the patient is put to sleep under a general anesthesia. The procedure involves three punctures in the upper abdomen and one in the navel, instead of the traditional 6- to 8-inch incision over the gallbladder area.

To perform the procedure, the surgeon places a fiber optic tube-like device that serves as a camera into the umbilical puncture to video the gallbladder, and then uses an electrocautery in another port to dissect the gallbladder off of the liver and seal the blood vessels to avoid the need for stitches. The gallbladder is then removed with the stones through the tiny opening at the navel.

Laparoscopic cholecystectomy offers several significant advantages for the patient, according to Mohan, in addition to the reduced length of stay.

"The patient usually stays in the hospital overnight, his recovery time is usually about five days, he suffers less post-operative pain and discomfort, and he has fewer wound complications than with the other surgery," he said.

"Most patients can resume normal activities, even go back to work, soon after returning home. Patients who might not be able to have this type of procedure would be those with a history of a prior upper abdominal surgery, acute infection of the gallbladder, an abdominal malignancy, or inflammatory bowel disease. The surgeon really has to make the decision based on what is best for the patient," he said.

Dr. Ashby, who has performed several of the new surgeries and assisted on most of the others, said that the surgery is really a team effort. "We use two surgeons so that we have one to work the camera, and the other to do the cutting," he said.

Several procedures were performed at Coronado Hospital during the summer using equipment supplied by various companies, so that surgeons could evaluate the best type for purchase in Pampa.

"Laparoscopic cholecystectomy is rapidly becoming the procedure of choice for surgical treatment of gallbladder disease," said Dr. Juan, who has assisted on most of the procedures. "The advantages for the patient are so significant that we are really excited about being able to offer the technique here."

Ashby also commented that the surgeons can switch to the regular gallbladder surgery during the procedure if they encounter a problem.

"Since the procedure is performed under anesthesia and in the regular operating room, we can immediately switch to the conventional type surgery if we find something unexpected," he said.

According to health experts, gallbladder surgery is the second most common operation in the United States, with more than 500,000 procedures performed each year. More than 10 percent of Americans suffer from gallstones and one million cases develop each year.

Sometimes persons with gallbladder disease have few symptoms. Most patients, however, will have one or more of the following symptoms: frequent bouts of indigestion, especially after eating fatty or greasy foods or certain vegetables such as cabbage, radishes or pickles; nausea or heartburn; sharp pain in the upper right of the abdomen; or jaundice (yellowing of the skin).

Patients should consult their physician about these symptoms, Dr. Mohan said.

States up to their necks in red ink

BY CHANGING TIMES

For AP Newsfeatures

At least 30 states are up to their necks in red ink, and others are dipping their toes in it. With tax revenues trailing estimates, the layoff of state employees and pay freezes won't balance the books. So legislators everywhere face the need for more taxes as well as spending cuts. Meanwhile, governors and leading legislators are irate over Congress's throwing more costs to the states while raising federal excise taxes — a move that will further trim state revenues by discouraging consumption of gasoline and liquor.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Wife escapes from husband before death could part them

DEAR ABBY: It hurts to be criticized for not having left an abusive mate after the first time the abuse occurred.

You consistently advise your readers to seek help from their minister, priest or rabbi. It is my sincere hope that the counselors in the church are more enlightened today than the one my ex-husband and I saw in the late 1960s.

After taking considerable physical abuse from my husband, I threatened to leave him unless he sought counseling with me. He finally agreed, and we went together to our clergyman. After I described the many episodes of brutal beatings that put me in the hospital, my minister reminded me that the Bible said, "Turn the other cheek."

Abby, this minister had one of the largest congregations in this country. Of course, my husband continued to beat me, thinking it was his right as the head of the household, and I was convinced that the church knew best. Thank God, I finally came to my senses and divorced the bully.

NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Obviously, you no longer subscribe to the biblical injunction to "turn the other cheek." There is hardly a passage in the Old or New Testament that hasn't been interpreted in more ways than one. I would never advise turning the other cheek if the first one was black and blue. Nor would most clergy in the 1990s.

a chuckle in the newsroom; perhaps your readers also might find it amusing. It was submitted by James R. Inwood of South Bend.

KAREN MURPHY, INDIANAPOLIS STAR

DEAR KAREN: This exchange of letters typifies the particularly subtle form of communication that parents and children often share:

DEAR DAD: Things are pretty good here at school, but they could be better. Some things are needed most desperately. I hope you can guess what I mean and send some soon.

DEAR SON: Nothing is new here. I know that you are doing better NOW than you have been. Write another letter soon. I want to get this off in the NOon mail, so I'll sign off NOW.

Love, Dad

CONFIDENTIAL TO LOST AND HELPLESS, THE 14-YEAR-OLD GIRL WHO WROTE FROM TORONTO, CANADA: You have done nothing wrong, so, please, do not be embarrassed to tell your parents—or a school nurse! Your brother needs help immediately, or he may become a full-fledged child molester. You did not give me your name or address or I would return the money you sent. I cannot accept it. My advice is free. Please write again.

Baten is serving as city council president. Martin is a new member of Preceptor Chi. Her sister's said of her, "She takes responsibility like one who has been a member for years. Carol brings new ideas and eagerness to work." Martin serves as chapter recording secretary.

'Wayland Night' set for Oct. 15

Wayland Baptist University announces "Wayland Night" planned for 7 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 15, at Mr. Gatti's Pizza. The university is offering free pizza for juniors and seniors in the Pampa area along with the opportunity for them to examine college programs, financial aid, degree plans and campus life.

Wayland faculty, admissions counselors, and financial aid personnel will be on hand along with Pampa-area alumni and students currently attending Wayland.

"The program is intended to provide answers to the many questions high school students have about college, and to put prospective students in touch with college faculty, staff, and students," said Bobby Hall, executive director of university relations at WBU.

Pension plans on solid ground

BY CHANGING TIMES
For AP Newsfeatures

Pension funds are flinching from the real estate slump, low fixed-income yields and weakness in stocks. Reserves — assets in excess of the minimum amount actuaries believe necessary to fund known obligations — are down some since early 1990. Nevertheless, pension funds still look like the Rock of Gibraltar.

Private defined-benefit pension plans, the kind in which the employer promises a monthly check of a certain size regardless of investment results of the plan's portfolio, have assets totaling 140 percent of liabilities, up from 125 percent in 1980.

"Wayland is interested not only in attracting new students, but also in providing a service by going into the region with informational seminars."

Wayland alumni in Pampa and the surrounding area are involved in organizing the program, which will feature the free pizza buffet, information from Wayland students, audiovisual presentation and an opportunity for questions and answers.

Week emphasizing fire prevention begins today

Today marks the opening of National Fire Prevention Week. This week, set aside each year, is always scheduled to include Oct. 9, the anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire of 1871. Tips for prevention of fires follows.

Ten Tips For Fire Prevention

DO's

1. DO have enough smoke detectors to adequately protect your home. There should be at least one smoke detector on every floor of your house, including the basement and attic.
2. DO replace the batteries in all of your smoke detectors twice a year. Remember to install fresh batteries in the fall and spring, on the same day that clocks are set backward or forward one hour. Check batteries once a month by pushing the battery check button, and replace batteries immediately if your smoke detector starts to signal a weak battery by "chirping."
3. DO have a plan for getting out of your house in the event of a fire. If possible, have at least two exits from every room. Hold family fire drills to practice escape routes.
4. DO have a prearranged meeting place outside near your home where everyone in your family knows to gather. Remember, infants, young children, the elderly and the handicapped need extra help.
5. DO have a fire extinguisher in your home at every location where a fire is likely to start. Purchase fire extinguishers that are rated "ABC," and, therefore, appropriate for all three of the basic types of fire: wood and paper, grease and flammable liquids, or electrical. Make sure the fire extinguisher you buy bears the seal of an independent testing laboratory. Once installed, check fire extinguishers periodically to ensure adequate pressure.

DON'T's

6. DO NOT place flammable materials, such as curtains, potholders or containers of grease, near stoves or other sources of fire.
7. DO NOT store flammable liquids or rags soaked in flammable liquids any place in your home.
8. DO NOT attempt to put out a fire yourself unless the fire is very small and easily contained. No matter how small the fire may be, make sure you have an unobstructed exit; even small fires can spread quickly, trapping you before you know it. If you have any doubt about your ability to extinguish a fire, raise the alarm, evacuate the premises and call the fire department from a neighbor's house.
9. DO NOT attempt to rescue pets or retrieve valuables before exiting a burning building.
10. DO NOT go back into a burning building for any reason whatsoever.

Autumn arrives with fun for Pampa folks

A new month arrived a few days ago with a flurry of activities to tell about. Why don't we sneak a peek around town at our friends and neighbors?

Leah and Rick Pearson took time out of Pampa Jaycees' Club work to have a little girl, Samantha Nicole, also welcomed by big brother, Jeron, of Amarillo. The wee one in three short days asserts herself in a loud voice, when necessary. Belated congratulations to the happy family! A tacked on p.s.: Rick and Leah have high praise for the obstetrical staff at Corom Hospital.

Excitement runs high for the Jaycees' Haunted House project in the former Vance Hall location in the Pampa Mall. It will be open on Oct. 26, 30, 31 after lots of hard work on the Jaycees' part. If you have appropriate items to donate or lend and/or are willing to help in the manual work, call the Pearsons and volunteer your services. For adults there will be a costume party/dance at the Heritage room on Oct. 25. Both activities are two of the club's fall biggies. If you are between 21 and 40, male or female, call the Pearsons' and join 35 more Jaycees in worthwhile community service.

About 15 Jaycees rode bikes and six more drove rest stretch cars from Perryton to Amarillo last weekend to benefit the Pampa Shrine Hospital Travel Fund. Hardee's fed them breakfast and the Kiwa Temple Shriners fed them lunch in Amarillo. Two riders by riding over 60 miles brought in extra donations from generous merchants and individuals.

Craig Tanner's enthusiasm starts doing push-ups every time he mentions his and Nancy's new baby girl Caitlyn Danielle. Grandparents, so proud they can hardly sit still are Chuck and Jackie Tanner, who welcomed their first granddaughter, and second grandchild, when their first grandchild was 12 years old. As much as they would like to, Craig and Chuck find it a bit difficult to hold the little one at the same time. In spite of a steady stream of visitors, Craig has trouble understanding why he can't take the baby around town to show her off to the whole town.

Lisa Carroll assumed Nancy's position as office manager for Dr. Ann Harrell. Patients are happy to see Dr. Harrell back in practice and doing well after surgery.

Corky and Linda Godfrey attended the Bronco game in Ft. Collins, Colo., where they received the good news that they would be grandparents in late spring. Corky lost no time when he won the Name the Score football game in The Pampa News in purchasing a pair of boots from Wayne's with his $25 gift certificate as a start. A three-in-one story, huh?

For Bob Long's birthday, DeAnn gave him cruise tickets to San Juan, Puerto Rico, St. Thomas, and Nassau in the Virgin Islands. They have tans and pictures to prove what a good time they had and how many people they met. On the last cruise night they celebrated the one-year-anniversary of their meeting.

Belated 84th birthday congratulations to Effie Johnston! Patsy Poole, her daughter, and husband Virgil Poole, hosted a family dinner for 16 and later cake and ice cream for 20 to celebrate the occasion.

A warm Pampa "Welcome!!!" to Bill and Sue Freeman, formerly of Post. Bill is the new manager of Highland Pumps. One of their two grown children, a son and daughter-in-law will make them eligible for the New Grandparents Club a few months from now. Bill enjoys piddling with and racing cars and Sue is into crocheting and cross-stitching. Church preference is Baptist. Both are pleased to be here and part of a friendly community.

Bernice and Sam Goodlett recently visited Bernice's sister in Phoenix to celebrate Bernice's and the sister's birthdays. Belated 75th birthday wishes to Bernice! Bernice and Sam are faithful hospital auxiliary volunteers and have been for years.

Spied Ann Kenney and Lilith Brainard, both former employees of Celanese, having dinner together one evening this week. Ann, a longtime chemist, was here doing a bit of work for Celanese. Did you know Lilith was secretary to the plant manager when the plant opened in 1953?

Vivian Brak Hollingsworth of Shalmer, Fla., visited her aunt Hil-dred Cook, cousin Jan Allen, and aunt Alice Haiduk, of White Deer last weekend. Vivian was the beautiful football queen of 1951.

Fran and Vernon Stellman, Christopher and Taylor, are enjoying giving and receiving hugs from friends while renewing acquaintances. The family recently moved back to make Pampa home after a stay in Atlanta for a couple of years. A warm Pampa "Welcome home!!!" to this fine family. Fran is employed at the Pampa Learning Center and Vernon at IRI, Inc.

It's good to see Lora Barber on her feet and going after suffering a broken bone a few weeks ago. Lora is a known goer and doer.

Spied Ginger Ackfield being helpful fitting a lady with a pair of spiffy shoes.

Agnes Homer, a retired LVN of Groom, has made 160 lap robes from thread and fabrics given by friends and neighbors, which she distributed to area nursing homes: Palo Duro, Claude, McLean Care Center; and St. Ann's of Panhandle. There's more! She has 120 more in the making. What a thoughtful thing to do!

Tom Spencer of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. did his fair share in the United Way check-in time by appearing as Vanna White. One kind gentleman graciously opened the door for him/her. Chamber president Mike Keagy and several others looked at him as if her were an invader from Mars for several minutes before identifying him. No, Tom didn't cut off his moustache, but he WAS a scream, a BIG one!

The south will never be the same again! Driving through the southern states and New York City will be Marie Boyd and Elnora Tyre. Their friends will be anxiously awaiting their return.

The Blue Bonnet Friendship Club celebrated Elnora Tyre's birthday with a party at Coronado Nursing Center. On the menu were brown beans, fried potatoes, fresh onions, corn bread - and pink birthday cake.

Belated birthday wishes to Lois Rogers, Robert Ward, Pearl Fields and Madeline Rowntree.

The W.M.U. of Central Baptist Church are planning some exciting and fun programs for both nursing centers. A grateful staff and residents await the happy months ahead.

October birthday wishes to Blanche Jenkins, Thelma Ball, Jewel Greer, Charles King, Wesley Lane, Ruth Rosenbaum, Bessie Tackett and Hiley Armstead.

A hamburger cookout is planned for this month with staff assisting Coyle Ford.

New resident of Coronado Nursing Center is Mildred Miller who comes to Pampa via Silverton, Colo.

She discussed memories of ice skating. That's a first for sure.

John (Tommie) Dawes celebrated his 94th birthday recently with two events hosted by his daughter Julia Reeves. For the first celebration, Julia hosted a surprise dinner and "entertainment" attended by family from Amarillo, Shamrock and Pampa. At this party a unique gift as "old as he was" was given to Mr. Dawes. The gift was a copy of an 1897 magazine, The Century Illustrated Monthly Magazine. It resembles to today's National Geographic.

The second celebration was a "drop in" with refreshments for close friends and relatives in the Dawes' home.

All week long Mr. Dawes was deluged with cards and calls from friends and relatives from near and far. All cards, pictures, mementoes of the celebration and the "original" Old Man Dawes song written and sung for him, were all placed in a "94th birthday memories" book presented to him by Julia. Out of towners attending the two events were Audrine Olsen, Amarillo; Junior and Wanda Vinyard, Shamrock; W.H. and Clela Riley, Shamrock; Loyd and June Anderson, Shamrock; Jim and Sherri Ferree, Melissa Ferree and Brandon Wilmarth, Enid, Okla.

Others joining the celebration were Dawes' wife, Cecil, Joe and Norma Autry, Don Lane, George and Barbara Whitten, Don and Clara Nestrel, Vernon and Bonnie Stuckey, Nancy Condo and daughter Doris Mims of Lubbock, and Della Reeves.

What a birthday! Cappie Thut celebrated her 95th birthday Thursday with 50 friends and relatives partying with her. Her son Dale and wife, Helen Thut of Tyler; grandson Richard Thut with wife, Kim, and daughter Chelsea, Fort Worth; and Cappie's granddaughters Kathy Thut, Arlington, and Brenda Thut, San Antonio were with her for the big day. Nine tables of bridge were played with winners Marchelene Nachlinger taking first prize, second prize by Mary McCreary, and Cappie, herself, taking third prize.

Peggy Soukup made the terrific prizes. Hosts and hostesses were Dorothy and Charles Shelton, Clyde and Lola Medkeef, Jack and Margaret Shumate, and Pauline Denham.

Community Concerts opens tomorrow night with "On Broadway" featuring Jack and Sally Jenkins. Isn't it great that good music is available to our community?

Remember two important local events this month, the Arts and Crafts Show, Pampa Fine Arts Association, and the Chamber of Commerce Country Fair, Oct. 19. See you at both places. Katie.

An evening along the Great White Way

Georgie Ames, a Community Concerts volunteer, looks over the sign at Furr's Emporium which announces the first concert at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Oct. 7, at M.K. Brown Auditorium. The concert features Jack and Sally Jenkins with a selection of Broadway favorites.

Tent caterpillars increasing in Pampa area

During recent years it seems we are having an increasing number of "Tent" caterpillars in various trees in our area. These tent caterpillars produce unsightly webs, or tents which detract from the home landscape. Trees with substantial defoliation will have reduced growth and vigor.

The key to eliminating tent caterpillar problems is early detection and the use of appropriate cultural or chemical control.

If tent caterpillars have been allowed to feed and have completed their development, it is useless to spray, such is the current situation in most cases. However, removal of the tent will eliminate the unsightliness of the tent.

Control programs should be based on the need to eliminate unsightly webs, defoliation and/or the nuisance caused by caterpillars. A combination of cultural and chemical techniques may be necessary.

Trees should be inspected for egg masses during the winter season. These egg masses may contain from 150 to 350 eggs, are tapered on both ends and partially encircle the twig. These masses appear as swelling on small, bare twigs and are cemented together, then covered with a glue-like substance which hardens to a varnished finish. Pruning can and should be done to remove these egg masses before they hatch in the spring.

Eggs hatch in the spring when trees are leaved out. Examine trees for the small webs in the spring as the caterpillars start to build their tents. If you have just a few colonies, try removing them by hand or with a long pole with nails in it to destroy the web. Make sure all small caterpillars have been removed or destroyed.

If you choose to try chemical control, try to spray when the tents are first being formed. Spot spray the tent and foliage within one to two feet of the tent. Broadcast treatments are unnecessary and wasteful except during widespread outbreaks. One carefully applied treatment, properly timed, is sufficient for control.

There are several insecticides that will do a good job of chemical control. Read and check the label on most garden insecticides. A nice Extension Leaflet 1637 on "Tent Caterpillars", lists labeled insecticides and more details on their life cycle. Call or come by the Extension Office for your copy.

HOW ARE YOUR MUMS?

Poor results with hardy chrysanthemums can usually be attributed to the following causes: improper location of bed, low soil fertility, improper watering methods, or diseased plants. Most mum varieties have initiated buds and many are blooming. If your mums have not produced buds, there is little you can do this year except try to find out what is wrong and correct the problem next year. This may involve starting with new plants in another location. It may be that they were located near a street light or yard light which prevented their biological clock from working properly. They may have short days before they will initiate flower buds.

In choosing a location for your mums, select one with full sunlight throughout the day, good air circulation, well-drained soil, and in an area that is free of competitive tree roots. Also look for an area that does not have supplemental night lights.

Study your watering methods. A good thorough soaking every few days is much more effective than a light watering every evening. Avoid wetting foliage, as wet foliage is conducive to many leaf diseases. Make notes of your observations so you won't repeat the same mistakes next year.

After you say "I do."

Give your wedding gown a treatment that can make it last a lifetime. Our heirloom cleaning process captures and preserves the original beauty of your wedding gown. After cleaning, your gown is specially boxed for safe keeping.

The next meeting will be a workshop at 10:30 a.m., Oct. 15, Pampa Community Center with Mrs. Don Fletcher as hostess.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Individuals with whom you're involved today will expect you to follow through once you make definite commitments. Peers will lose respect for you — if promises are unfulfilled. Major changes are ahead for Libra in the coming year. Send for Libra's Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might receive information from an unusual source today that will be given to you along with the expectations that it be kept secret. Don't betray the trust.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A friend who is promoting an innovative endeavor may invite you to participate today. It could have possibilities, but it might also require a lot of work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your chances for fulfilling your ambitious aspirations look promising today, but there is also a warning not to use tactics which could impair your reputation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Instead of thinking up new ways to get around present obstacles, you might try again the methods that have failed to work in the past. Be more adventuresome and imaginative.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It could be a seller's market where you're concerned today, so be very careful if you do business with unfamiliar individuals. You might be more vulnerable than you realize.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You can still fare well in the wake of crushing events today, as long as you don't let your emotions overrule your logic. View developments from a realistic perspective.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You must keep your mind on what you're doing in professional involvements today. You might have to contend with more distractions than usual, and deviations will throw you off course.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Individuals you socialize with today can help you achieve the objectives to which you aspire. Play it loose and friendly, but don't let your hair down too soon — or too far.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Guard against inclinations today to deliberately veer off course just when your destination is within sight. Variations will work against you, not for you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) An imaginative friend might be able to help you resolve a complicated matter today. However, don't blindly accept everything this individual says as being part of the cure.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You might feel like you can't lose, and this is OK — if it isn't carried to extremes today. Be positive, but also be prudent and realistic.

New listeners rediscovering blues great Leadbelly

"Sometimes I live in the country
Sometimes I live in the town
Sometimes I get a great notion to jump in the river and drown."
—Leadbelly, "Goodnight, Irene."

By DAVID GERMAIN
Associated Press Writer

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — He came out of the post-Reconstruction South, a defiant black troubadour who slung a guitar as well as he plucked his oversized 12-string guitar.

He went to prison for killing a man in a quarrel over a woman, and legend has it he sang his way to a pardon by enrapturing the Texas governor with a plaintive blues appeal.

He was sprung from another Southern prison by a genteel white folklorist who brought him North, where he dressed as a convict and played the blues for white audiences at colleges and nightclubs.

Huddie Ledbetter, better known as Leadbelly, was the quintessential blues man, who lived what he sang and died on the fringes of stardom.

A year after Leadbelly's death from Lou Gehrig's disease in 1949, the Weavers' recording of his best-known song, "Goodnight, Irene," had sold 2 million copies, success that had eluded Leadbelly.

"Generally, people don't know who Leadbelly is, and they should," said Sean Killen, who last year started publishing the Leadbelly Letter out of his home in the central New York city of Ithaca.

A mythic figure, Leadbelly has ascended into the pantheon with such early blues musicians as Robert Johnson, Bessie Smith and Leadbelly's own mentor, Blind Lemon Jefferson. Long the house gods to hard-core blues fans, Leadbelly and company are being rediscovered by general listeners.

Columbia's boxed set of Johnson's complete recordings has sold 600,000 copies, said Lawrence Cohn, producer of the label's roots and blues series. A similar set of Smith's first recordings was released this year, the first in a series of Smith re-issues.

Last month, Columbia issued a one-disc Leadbelly compilation, featuring previously unreleased songs and alternate takes. Late this year, Rounder Records is releasing a three-disc set of Leadbelly's Library of Congress recordings, featuring such Leadbelly standards as "Irene," "Frankie and Albert" and

"The Midnight Special."

In 1989, Folkways Records released A Vision Shared, a collection of songs by Leadbelly and his friend, Woody Guthrie, covered by Bob Dylan, Bruce Springsteen, U2 and others.

"Leadbelly is an icon in terms of the great past blues singers," said Alex Haley, author of Roots. Haley wrote an article on Leadbelly in 1961 and is on the editorial advisory board for the Leadbelly Letter.

Leadbelly "is kind of the Mount Everest of blues singers," Haley said.

Born in Mooringsport, La., about 1889, Huddie Ledbetter developed early interests in guitars, guns, women and booze. From his midteens through his late 20s, Huddie barrelhoused through the South, playing in black saloons throughout Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas.

"His life was kind of like Billie Holiday's. They lived what they sang about," Haley said. "Leadbelly lived in juke joints, where you might have to dive under a table at any time during the course of the evening."

In 1917, Leadbelly gunned down a man in a fight over a woman. He was sentenced to 30 years on the chain gang in Texas.

He gained the nickname Leadbelly in prison. For the newsletter, Killen divides it into two words, Lead Belly, claiming that's the way the singer was originally billed.

In prison, Leadbelly's music was popular among inmates and guards. Inmates jailed for decades were repositories of music past, the way songs had been on the outside years ago. By listening to those inmates sing, Leadbelly captured songs "frozen in time," Killen said.

Most of the songs Leadbelly is credited with writing — from "Irene" to "Rock Island Line" to "C.C. Rider" — had their roots in traditional black work songs, blues and spirituals.

According to legend, Leadbelly was pardoned in 1925 by Texas Gov. Pat Neff, who was captivated by Leadbelly's singing.

In 1930, Leadbelly was sentenced to 10 years in a Louisiana prison for attempted murder. Library of Congress folklorist John Lomax and his son, Alan, discovered Leadbelly there during a tour of Southern prisons to gather black folk songs.

Lomax helped arrange for Leadbelly's release and hired him as chauffeur for the rest of his Southern tour. They came North, where Leadbelly continued to chauffeur for Lomax between performances. Leadbelly's wife, Martha, worked as a housekeeper at Lomax's Connecticut home.

The late blues singer, Huddie Ledbetter, better known as Leadbelly, now has a newsletter devoted to him.

Lomax himself was born into the Reconstruction South, two years after the Civil War ended. He appointed himself benevolent overseer of Leadbelly's career. An uneasy, servant-master relationship developed between the aristocratic ballad hunter and the rebellious folksinger.

"When he first started, he didn't like the way the Lomaxes handled him, like a child," said Leadbelly's niece, Tiny Robinson of Brentwood, Tenn. "But he never said one hard word against them."

If Lomax "hadn't discovered him, I don't know if he ever would have been discovered," Robinson said. "I think that's why Leadbelly never hated him for what he did."

Leadbelly signed a contract with Lomax giving the folklorist half the singer's earnings, said Kip Lornell, a folklorist who is co-writing a Leadbelly biography.

"Huddie was an intelligent man, he could read and write, he was shrewd," said Lornell, who did postdoctoral research at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. "He quickly saw that the contract to turn over 50 percent of everything he made was not a wise one, and he tried to wriggle out of it."

Lomax and Leadbelly eventually reached a new agreement, but the dispute soured their relationship. By the late 1930s, they had severed their ties.

Joseph Hickerson, Lomax's heir at the Library of Congress, said Lomax "tried to be fair with Leadbelly and do what he thought was right."

Lomax presented Leadbelly to audiences of eager, affluent, educated whites, many of them thrill seekers hoping to experience a bit of the unbridled South. Under Lomax's direction, Leadbelly catered to that, performing in his prison uniform and baring a long knife scar on his throat.

Leadbelly was "billed as a convict, dark, dangerous, ominous, foreboding, lethal," Killen said. "The idea was to have people wondering, 'Is he going to jump off the stage and cut someone's throat or shoot everybody?'"

He never attacked anyone at his concerts, but Leadbelly did a year in Riker's Island prison for assaulting a man in 1939.

Leadbelly mellowed in his later years, his niece said. Besides Martha, Leadbelly's only true passion in his last decade was his guitar, which he played four or five hours a day in his New York City apartment, Robinson said.

"He was not that man that some people painted him as, vicious and ready to kill," Robinson said. "That's in no way true."

In those last years, Leadbelly played throughout the United States and Europe. He vainly tried to break into the movies as a singing cowboy, feeling he could outride, outshoot and outsing Gene Autry or Roy Rogers. Hollywood felt it could live without a black cowboy. One studio executive's rejection — a suggestion that Leadbelly call him at "45 to 9" — led the singer to write a song of lament, "4, 5 and 9."

Leadbelly died poor after a decade off and on welfare. He was buried near Mooringsport, where a small stone marks his grave. His niece wants to raise money to put up a monument.

Performers from Frank Sinatra and Roger Williams to Creedence Clearwater Revival and Van Morrison recorded Leadbelly songs — the latter two failing to credit him for their versions of "The Midnight Special." Royalties from Leadbelly covers provided for his wife, probably better than the singer had been able to provide for her during his life.

"It's really shameful he didn't have that kind of success when he was alive," Columbia's Cohn said.

Former Lefors grad records latest tape at Port Aransas

Patsy Winegeart Jones, former Pampa area resident, wants it to be known that the Class of '58 at Lefors High School is still being heard from.

Now living at Port Aransas on the Texas coast, Jones is entertaining customers with songs at the Crazy Cajun, a family restaurant in Port Aransas, and says she is having "great response" to her latest cassette recording.

Titled Patsy Jones Without the Bait & Tackle Choir, the recording made at Mustang Island Studio in Port Aransas contains "Texas Panhandle," a song Jones and her sister Jo Ann first wrote back in Lefors

"years ago." She says the song has been "freshened up for the tape."

All the material on the tape is original songs by Jones, except for "Post Time" and "Whispering Pines" by H. Crockett, who also has "Honky Tonk Man" for one of his latest efforts.

Other songs on the album include "Little Boy Grown Tall," "Angel of the Night," "The Book John Wrote," "That's My Island," "You Know Where You Can Go" and "I'm Tied Around Your Finger."

Jones is the daughter of George and Gertrude Winegeart of Pampa. She is a 1958 graduate of Lefors High School.

"Thank you, Pampa and Lefors, for buying my tape!" she said. "There's no place like home folks!"

She invited area residents to drop by the Crazy Cajun when they make it down to Port Aransas.

"I'm living on island time," Jones said. "Y'all come on down and be in my Bait & Tackle Choir!"

Information concerning her tapes can be had by writing Jones at P.O. Box 376, Port Aransas, Texas 78373.

Texas BIC to monitor Mexico-U.S. beef trade

AUSTIN — U.S. beef sales to Mexico are booming. Recent USDA figures show volume is up 86 percent and value is up 111 percent in just the first six months of 1991.

The increased activity has already benefited Texas. S.M. True, president of the Texas Beef Industry Council, said.

"Texas shares an 889-mile border with Mexico," True said. "It is the No. 1 cattle producing state with 13.4 million head. Mexico is a country of 89 million persons who love beef. With Mexico's interest in U.S. beef at an all-time high, we must keep the intensity going. The best way to do that is for Texas beef producers and Mexican meat marketers to open lines of communications."

True announced that the Texas BIC board of directors will do just that by holding its Oct. 7-8 board meeting in Monterrey, Nuevo Leon, Mexico. In conjunction with the board meeting, Texas BIC's board members will host a reception at Monterrey's world trade center, CINTERMEX, for Mexican beef marketers from northern Mexico and Mexico City. The board members will also tour several modern beef facilities in the Monterrey area — Mexico's leading beef producing area.

"The board members strongly believe that Mexico will become a strong market for U.S. beef," True said. "The first step in developing this market is understanding the needs of the other side. That's why the board voted to meet in Monterrey. As president of the Texas Beef Industry Council, I am proud that such leaders are on this board. No checkoff dollars can be used for their expenses to board meetings, yet they are willing to pay their own expenses to the special meeting in Monterrey to foster better understanding between our two industries."

Texas BIC's regular board meeting will take place the afternoon of Monday, Oct. 7. On Tuesday, Oct. 8, the directors will take a bus tour to a ranch, feedlot, packing plant and retail store run by Visa Pecuaría, the livestock division of one of the largest companies in Mexico. Visa produces several brands of beer through its Cuauhtemoc Cerveceria division. The barley byproducts from the brewing process are fed to cattle at a feedyard outside Monterrey. The manure from the feedyard is collected and spread on nearby ranchland, where a portion of the cattle fed through the company are raised. The bulls used on the ranch are of U.S. breeding.

The company also has built a state-of-the-art packing facility that will slaughter 350 head per day when it is in full operation. The beef is packaged and then sold through Visa's retail food store, Bif. Bif has 27 stores in Monterrey, Torreon, Saltillo and Mexico City. Eighty percent of its sales come from beef. Even though the company is vertically integrated, it does purchase about one load of U.S. beef — primarily Choice and Select rounds — every two weeks.

The tour will also show the board members the new and old ways Mexico markets beef. One stop will take them to Mercado Colon, an open-air market where the Mexican shopper traditionally purchases beef byproducts and lesser cuts. The next stop will be at Soriana-Hipermart, a 28-store, Mexican supermarket.

That evening, the Texas BIC board members will host Mexican meat marketers at CINTERMEX, Monterrey's international trade mart. The theme of the reception will be "Building an International Partnership."

True and Mark Ellison, Texas Department of Agriculture assistant commissioner for marketing and development, will address the group. Dr. L. Sandoval, an economist at Monterrey Tech University, will also speak on the economic impact of the proposed Free Trade Agreement to U.S. and Mexican beef producers and marketers.

WATCH WHEAT FOR WORMS

I have been hearing reports for the last three weeks about some wheat fields in Western Oklahoma being completely destroyed by fall armyworms.

According to Dr. Carl Patrick, Extension entomologist, Amarillo, very heavy to light infestations of fall armyworm have been reported from isolated wheat fields throughout the Texas Panhandle.

The fall armyworm moth, which has a wing span of about 1 1/2 inches, lays egg masses on leaves and then covers the eggs with scales from her body. Eggs hatch in 3-5 days. Larvae will feed for about 20 days and grow to a length of about 1 1/2 inches.

Four to five larvae per square foot is considered the economic threshold. Ethyl and methyl parathion, Lannate and Sevin are labeled for fall armyworm control in wheat. The fall armyworm will be active until a killing frost is received.

Very isolated greenbug infestations have been reported in seedling wheat. Keep a close watch on this situation, for relatively few greenbugs can be devastating on seedling wheat.

Check fall seeded alfalfa for presence of fall armyworm also.

OLD WORLD BLUESTEM

The September rains have certainly given most all grasses a boost going into the winter. One of the most noticeable grasses now is the Old World Bluestem fields, most of which are in CRP.

I get quite a few questions from folks who are planting one of the old World Bluestems — W.W. Spar, Ironmaster or Plains, to name a few. Most of these questions are from folks who are not in the CRP program but plan on using the OWB for cattle grazing.

Getting a good stand of any grass the year it is planted can be real tricky. Weather conditions play a big part — getting adequate rainfall at the right time is the key unless you have irrigation.

A lot of other factors also enter in — weed control, seedbed preparation are two more very important practices.

I have heard it said to not ever plow up a thin, poor standby OWB — that it will thicken itself up in two to three years. I am about to become convinced of that myself this year. Next year, I should be convinced for sure, if a stand thickens up as much next year as it has this year.

The OWB grasses do make a lot of seed, and where there is not a sod of native grass already there, they do have the ability to re-seed and thicken up so that they form a sod in a few years time. This is particularly true where cattle are allowed to graze at times to help incorporate the seed in the top soil and keep the ground firmed up.

Cattle grazing can also aid in keeping some weeds grazed down to manageable levels.

Extension Service starts project to aid Hispanic families

By SANDRA AVANT
Extension Service

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service is launching a pilot project to enhance the quality of life of Hispanic families in Texas.

The Una Vida Mejor (A Better Life) project is being funded by a $1.4 million grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Mich.

Una Vida Mejor will help Hispanic families assess their needs and acquire knowledge and skills to meet them. The grant will be used to help Hispanics improve their quality of life by enhancing leadership, education, parenting skills, diet, money management and community environments.

The pilot project will be conducted initially in Hidalgo, Cameron and Webb counties in South Texas.

"Texas has an Hispanic population that is growing at twice the rate of the overall population," said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, Extension Service director. "This puts the Extension Service in a unique position to address model programming for Hispanics that will have application throughout Texas and across the nation."

The Una Vida Mejor product will place special emphasis on identifying approaches to help young people stay in school, resulting in a lower dropout rate. The project also will seek to increase the leadership skills of limited-resource Hispanics so they can attain greater self-sufficiency and function from their own strengths.

The Extension Service was selected for the grant because of its strong record of education and genuine commitment to work with Hispanic audiences, Carpenter said.

"The Extension Service has a wealth of information and educational programs that are of interest to Hispanic audiences. These resources will be adapted to better meet specific needs, and additional programs will be tested during the pilot project," he said.

The Kellogg grant will be used to employ technical assistants who will recruit and train volunteers. The volunteers will teach families and youth and support local neighborhood groups with leadership and educational experiences.

"The Extension Service is in a position to foster relationships with other institutions, agencies and industries skilled in and committed to working with Hispanic audiences," Carpenter said. "We will be cooperating with these groups to provide new opportunities, change existing services and help secure additional resources to try to meet the needs of Hispanic families."

Project results will measure the increased leadership of Hispanics, school participation of young people from targeted areas, effectiveness of educational programs, and increased ability of the Extension Service to work with Hispanic audiences, Carpenter said.

Based on project results, Una Vida Mejor will be replicated across the state, and ultimately, around the country.

Farmer supplies native grain to Ethiopian immigrants

By CLIFF HADLEY
Associated Press Writer

CALDWELL, Idaho (AP) — Folks passing Wayne Carlson's fields may cluck in sympathy at his sorry-looking harvest.

But Carlson says his scruffy, matted crop of an ancient grain from Ethiopia is a tribute to a tough and enduring people.

The 45-year-old Caldwell man grows teff, a cultural cornerstone in a nation where farmers still rely on yoked oxen and wooden, single-bottom plows.

"All anybody here has heard of Ethiopia is starving children," Carlson said. "We assume they ate dirt for thousands of years."

Carlson and his wife, Elisabeth, run the largest commercial teff operation outside Ethiopia. In five years it has grown from 30 acres to more than 800 in tracts scattered in Idaho and eastern Oregon.

Teff means "lost." That's what happens when the seed is dropped; 150 teff grains weigh as much as a single grain of wheat.

What teff that takes root is high in protein and minerals and flourishes even in harsh conditions. "It'll grow a crop that will sustain you when other crops fail," Carlson said.

But in recent years, failure has become a watchword in Ethiopia.

Thirty years of civil war and drought meant calamity. Farmers abandoned their fields. Those able to plant watched their crops dry up and blow away. What food there was went to soldiers first. Millions died.

The Carlsons responded in 1988 by giving 25,000 pounds of teff seed to a relief agency working in the East African nation.

(AP Laserphoto)

Wayne Carlson kneels amid his crop of teff near Caldwell, Idaho.

"We're used to getting phone calls from people wanting to give quilts and clothing," said Jeff Whisenant, who handled the shipment for Lutheran World Relief in New York. "But we're not used to donations from teff farmers."

The Ethiopians were surprised that grain they grew exclusively for 5,000 years was being shipped from the United States. There was enough seed to plant thousands of acres.

Many of the 40,000 Ethiopians living in the United States now buy teff flour from the Carlsons to make a sour-tasting flatbread called injera.

"They go crazy," said Zeny Alemayehou of Los Angeles, who bakes 450 loaves of injera daily for four shops. "Until this time, we were not eating the real bread, but substitutes."

Ethiopian restaurants and health-food outlets also have become steady customers.

Carlson learned about teff as a biologist in Ethiopia in the early 1970s. The sunny days, cool nights and reliable irrigation along the Idaho-Oregon border persuaded him to take a chance on teff even though any new crop is risky.

"The risks are phenomenal," he said. "But it didn't seem so risky to me because a population of 30 million have been living on it for thousands of years."

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Jackie Onassis may cherish her privacy but she keeps a telescope focused on Central Park because she likes to watch people from her Fifth Avenue apartment, USA Weekend says.

"She has always been a gossip-monger, adores hearing tidbits about the rich and famous, though in fact she hates it when anybody writes or talks about her own adventures," literary agent Marianne Strong says in the new edition of USA Weekend.

Onassis, an editor at Doubleday & Co., persuaded Michael Jackson, Carly Simon and ballerina Gelsey Kirkland to write autobiographies. Now she's trying to persuade Frank Sinatra and Barbara Walters, the magazine said.

CHICAGO (AP) — Sean Penn, who has directed his first film, says he's trying to cut acting and alcohol out of his life and hasn't seen the film Truth or Dare about his ex-wife, Madonna.

"My drinking now is very intermittent," Penn said in the November issue of Playboy. "I'll have a little something four days a week and once every two months, I'll binge. In the past, I binged for years."

Penn, 31, whose films include State of Grace, At Close Range, The Falcon and The Snowman and Fast Times at Ridgemont High, says he became addicted to acting and burned out.

He directed The Indian Runner, which was released last month.

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian David Brenner won temporary custody of his son, Cole, after the boy's mother refused to take a court-ordered drug test.

"Charisse Brody's refusal ... was simply tantamount to an admission by her of her continued use of cocaine," State Supreme Court Justice David Saxe said.

Brenner, who admits he used drugs for years, has been fighting Brody, his former girlfriend, for custody of their son for the past five years. The boy is 9.

Brody, 34, told Saxe during a hearing last week that she does not use drugs. Saxe ordered drug tests for her and Brenner, who tested negative.

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. (AP) — The Rev. Robert H. Schuller, in his first message to his congregation since suffering a brain hemorrhage, was lighthearted but offered thanks for prayers he said kept him alive.

A four-minute videotape, released to the media, was made at Schuller's home earlier last week for broadcast Sunday during his syndicated Hour of Power television show.

"No, this is not Rev. Willard Scott Schuller," the 65-year-old evangelist joked on the tape, referring to the bald Today show weatherman. He lifted a baseball cap to show his shorn hair, the result of two operations to relieve pressure on his brain.

"Thank you, dear friends, for your prayers," he said. "I kind of feel I'm alive because of them."

Schuller, who was stricken in Holland Sept. 1, said he hopes to return to the pulpit in a month.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Dravecky, the former major league pitcher who had his left arm and shoulder amputated because of cancer last summer, said at first he couldn't bear to look in the mirror.

"The day after the surgery, I got up and walked into the bathroom with my gown on and I didn't want to look in the mirror," Dravecky said in an interview aired on ABC's 20-20 Friday night.

"But I knew I had to. And when I did, it was a shock what I saw because it looked like the entire left side of my body was gone. I just said to God, 'OK, this is what you've given me to deal with; this is what you've given me to live with; now let me go forward from here,'" he said.

Dravecky, who pitched for the San Francisco Giants when the cancer was discovered in 1988, was honored Saturday at Candlestick Park.

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan isn't flying very high with a columnist who cried foul because the Chicago Bulls star was a no-show at a meeting with President Bush last week.

Jordan said that he was vacationing with his family Tuesday when his National Basketball Association championship teammates gathered in the White House Rose Garden.

The presidential snub was "about the most disturbing, irresponsible and irrational thing Jordan has ever done in public life," wrote Chicago Sun-Times columnist Jay Mariotti.

Nonsense, said Chicago Tribune columnist Mike Royko.

System eyed in wake of abused kids' torture

By KILEY ARMSTRONG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When the torture of 8-year-old Taisha Carter came to light, critics charged that the system had ignored her. Now, a baby has died despite a call to a child abuse hotline — which was flooded because of heightened awareness.

"The system isn't working; the city should be ashamed," Leah Harrison said. She directs the privately funded Montefiore Child Protection Center, which diagnoses, treats and tracks 1,000 abused and neglected children a year.

The state hotline normally refers cases to a local social service agency. Investigations must begin within 24 hours and the local agency has 90 days to report to the state.

"There's no indication there's a problem systematically," countered state Assemblyman Albert Vann, who heads the Assembly's committee on children and families.

This much is known: Myriam Orellane, 33, of the Bronx, was charged with murder Thursday in her daughter's death.

The city medical examiner's office said 8-month-old Ashlei Myriam Orellane died from a beating. An autopsy revealed signs of long-term abuse.

The New York Times obtained documents showing a man called the hotline to report Ashlei's abuse at 1:02 p.m. Tuesday. The hotline operator determined the child was not in immediate danger and returned the man's call at 4:10 p.m., but got no answer.

Four hours later, police received a call that Ashlei was having trouble breathing. She was taken to a hospital, where she died.

The Times reported Friday that Ashlei was hospitalized with severe bruises two months ago. Hospital employees told child welfare officials, but no action was taken, the newspaper said.

Terry McGrath, a spokesman for the state Social Services Department, said he couldn't comment on specific cases.

But he said a screening process was being used on the hotline this week because of heavy volume.

The hotline heats up whenever a case gets wide publicity. It received 1,500 calls a day statewide last week, about 250 more than average. Last year, 40 percent of the accusations proved true.

This time the publicity surrounded Taisha Carter, who was rescued from her Bronx home Friday night.

Taisha was beaten with a hammer, handcuffed, and burned with scalding water, authorities said. Police said her body was almost completely covered with scars.

Marilyn Carter and her boyfriend, John Medina, were indicted Thursday on charges of first-degree assault, endangering the welfare of a minor and unlawful imprisonment.

The Bronx district attorney was investigating how Taisha's case slipped through bureaucratic cracks.

The Board of Education said Taisha's school called the hotline about her case in June 1990. When she didn't return for school in September, relatives said she'd moved.

Marilyn Carter's attorney, Harvey Slovis, said child welfare authorities shouldn't have returned Taisha to her mother when she was released from jail in 1987.

Carter was jailed in 1985 for beating and scalding a child in her custody because the boy helped himself to food. She allegedly fed him once a week. He now lives with a legal guardian.

Slovis charged that Carter called child welfare officials several times for help with Taisha, and social workers never followed up.

"It happens a lot," said Norman Siegel, executive director of the New York Civil Liberties Union.

Harrison, of the Child Protection Center, blamed an overworked staff at the city Human Resources Administration.

"HRA has had terrible budget cuts, a lot of morale problems," she said.

Vann conceded that at times, the resources of the child welfare agencies are overburdened. "But I am very pleased with the direction HRA is moving in under the new administration."

Siegel and Harrison said the answer is money for prevention, treatment and tracking. They want the government to reallocate funds.

Unemployment down to 6.7 percent in September

By KAREN BALL
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate, frozen for two months, edged down slightly to 6.7 percent in September, according to government statistics that showed little hiring activity in an economy trying to snap back from recession.

President Bush had an upbeat assessment of Friday's Labor Department report, calling it "one more sign that the economy is strengthening."

"While I believe that the economy is on the right track, let me be the first to say that all is not well. I'm deeply concerned about those who are out of work," Bush said at a news conference to discuss the nation's economy.

Still, he again said he opposed a Democratic benefits bill and said instead Congress should back a less generous Republican plan.

Democrats and private analysts said Friday's numbers show a stagnant economy unable to put workers back on the job.

The numbers "confirm what the country already knows — this recession is not over. The economy is still hurting," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

The drop in the unemployment rate was probably caused by more of a statistical and seasonal fluke rather than any underlying improvement in the jobs picture, said Allen Sinai, chief economist at the Boston Co.

"The story was puny recovery at best," Sinai said. "The economy is going nowhere fast. There is some recovery, but still lots of flatness and recession."

The 0.1 percentage point decline in the jobless rate, which had been at 6.8 percent in July and August, came despite a failure by U.S. companies to hire back many workers during the month, the Labor Department said.

The Labor Department said a separate payroll survey showed just 24,000 jobs added — a relatively small gain for an economy trying to snap back from a recession.

"While there has been no further worsening ... since spring, we have yet to see any sustained signs of a rebound in the labor market," said Janet Norwood, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The jobless numbered 8.4 million in September, about 1.6 million higher than when the recession started in July 1990, the Labor Department said.

The jobless rate can go down at the same time companies report flat hiring because the numbers are derived from different surveys. The unemployment level comes from a survey of households while a survey of business establishments determines the payroll number. The payroll survey is considered a more accurate barometer of economic health.

While there was little movement in employment last month, there was deterioration in two related figures, Mrs. Norwood said.

The number of people working part time who would have preferred fulltime work surged by nearly 500,000 over the month to 6.4 million, she said.

Meanwhile, the ranks of so-called discouraged workers — or people who abandon the job hunt because they think no jobs exist — swelled by 100,000 in the July-September period, rising to 1.1 million, Mrs. Norwood said.

The report showed that in September, job losses in the goods-producing sector and in state and local government mostly offset payroll gains in the private service-producing sector.

Factory jobs, after posting a brief rally during the summer, fell by 22,000 in September. A slide in the number of electronic equipment and aircraft manufacturing jobs continued, and employment in the food processing industry also decreased, today's report showed.

Employment in the services industry increased by 76,000, marking the fifth consecutive month of gains. Government jobs tumbled by 27,000.

There was little growth in retail trade, which has inched up by 35,000 jobs since April after suffering job losses of nearly 400,000 earlier in the recession.

In weak news, the average manufacturing work week fell slightly, from 41 hours to 40.9 hours. Factory overtime fell, too, from 3.8 hours to 3.7 hours.

Labor costs rose moderately in September. The average hourly worker earned $10.42 an hour in September, compared to $10.40 an hour in August, the government said.

The report showed that in

Commission rejects stamp price hike to 30 cents — again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Will the price of a stamp rise to 30 cents?

After 18 months of debate, the question went back to the U.S. Postal Service on Friday.

Action could come as soon as Tuesday, when the agency's governing board meets in Flushing, N.Y. The agency said, however, that no date has been set for a decision.

The 30-cent price was proposed as part of a massive rate package on March 6, 1990. But the independent Postal Rate Commission early this year approved only a 29-cent stamp.

In February the Postal Service adopted that rate, and other changes approved by the commission, under protest. It appealed for the extra penny, asserting that the one-cent difference would mean a loss of $800 million annually.

The Rate Commission turned down the appeal in June, and a second appeal was rejected Friday, sending the matter back to the Postal Service.

The Rate Commission said that it would agree to a series of small increases in a variety of rates, but that adding another penny to the cost of a first-class stamp would place too great a burden on those mailers.

Under the complex rules governing postage rates, the matter now rests with the board of governors of the Postal Service itself, which can overrule the rate commission — but only if the nine governors agree unanimously. That has happened once previously, in 1981.

"The Postal Service is reviewing and assessing the Postal Rate Commission action. The final determination in the matter now rests with the postal governors and no date has been set for their decision," the Postal Service said in a statement.

While the governors meet this week, even if they did vote to overrule the Rate Commission it could take some time to put any new rate into effect.

Because of continuing confusion over when rates might change, this year's Christmas stamps have been printed without a price on them. However, Postmaster General Anthony Frank said that it could take a month or more to put higher rates into effect if they were approved because of the lack of stamps.

In its decision Friday, the rate commission said it would approve a series of rate increases that would net $333 million more for the Postal Service. Those proposed rates will also be considered by the postal governors.

Among those would be an increase in the cost of heavier first-class mail. Now the rate is 29 cents for the first ounce and 23 cents for each additional ounce. The commission would raise the rate to 24 cents for the additional ounces.

The commission also suggested a 27 percent increase in the library book rate and small increases for second-class newspapers and magazines and third-class advertising mail.

Seventeen states to take part in federal anti-smoking program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials announced that 17 states will take part in the largest-ever national anti-smoking program, helping communities apply proven strategies to control tobacco use.

The health departments in the selected states will receive a total of $115 million over seven years to identify those groups most likely to smoke and determine how best to reach them with anti-smoking messages and activities.

The states are: Colorado, Indiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

The program is a collaborative effort between the National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society. Besides the $115 million in grants to the states, NCI will spend $20 million for national coordination and evaluation of the program. The cancer society has committed $25 million to $30 million in additional funds and resources to the program.

The program's emphasis is on developing community-based coalitions throughout entire states because "ultimately it will be our communities and individuals who decide how best to tackle their tobacco problems," said Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan.

The program "will empower them by providing the information and help that they need to change attitudes about smoking and to counter the sinister marketing strategies of the tobacco industry," he said.

The American Stop Smoking Intervention Study, or ASSIST as the program is called, will make use of the cancer institute's research efforts to find the best ways to help people stop smoking and to prevent them from starting, said Dr. Peter Greenwald, director of cancer prevention at NCI.

In 10 years of research involving 60 large studies, NCI scientists have identified which anti-smoking strategies and approaches are most effective, he said.

The goal of the project is to help about 4.5 million adults stop smoking and prevent about 2 million young people from starting, official said.

Smoking now accounts for one in five deaths in the United States. An estimated 434,000 Americans are expected to die from tobacco-related diseases this year.

Experts seek proof bike helmets won't roll off in accidents

By IRA DREYFUSS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an accident, will a bike rider's helmet stay in place well enough to protect his head? You'll have to rely on your best guess — agencies that certify crashworthiness of helmets have no standard to guide you.

A private certification organization, the American Society for Testing and Materials, is developing a safety test on what's called roll off.

ASTM would be a third entry in the helmet certification field. But neither group that now sets voluntary standards, the Snell Memorial Foundation and the American National Standards Institute, has a rule on roll off. Certification of roll off protection is a long way off.

An ASTM task force hopes to have a draft testing procedure approved at its December meeting, Dean Fisher, task force chairman and senior vice president of Bell Sports Inc., said from the helmet manufacturer's offices in Norwalk, Calif.

"A roll off test will undoubtedly be a part of all standards eventually," Fisher said. "The only reason it's not right now is that there haven't been enough people working with it."

One problem is determining exactly what happens to a helmet in an accident.

"No police department gathers that data in a way that anybody could use," said Randy Swart, director of the Bicycle Helmet Safety Institute in Arlington, Va. "You have to go by anecdotal evidence. What you're hearing is that sometimes helmets do come off."

Some countries have roll off standards, but their tests vary.

Canada checks whether a helmet will be dislodged by a constant tugging, such as might occur as a rider scrapes the ground after impact, said Greg Makowiecki, engineering technologist for the Canadian Standards Association, a private organization in Toronto. This could offer protection against abrasion.

The possible ASTM standard, however, is more concerned with the risk that the helmet may be jerked out of place, exposing a rider's head to impact, as he is banged around in an accident.

Consumers Union official Donald L. Mays said the ASTM has a better approach.

"Abrasion heals pretty readily — brain damage doesn't," said Mays, who heads the product testing agency's recreation and home improvement division in Yonkers, N.Y.

"Protecting against impact is what you really want the helmet to do."

Rule makers also differ on how much movement should be allowed. The Canadian standard regards a helmet as unfit if it moves enough to bare a significant amount of head. The possible ASTM standard would not reject a helmet unless it comes off.

As a result, helmets that could pass one standard could fail another. The Consumer Product Safety Commission put six helmets through the procedures used in Canada and proposed by ASTM. It found all passed the possible U.S. standard, but four failed the Canadian test.

Another question is whether the tests will allow for the varied shapes of human heads. Headforms could test basically whether the helmet would stay on an average head, Fisher said.

So, even when a standard is developed, it will still be up to the consumer to make sure his helmet fits. "Fit is the most important thing that a consumer does when he chooses to put a helmet on," Swart said.

Fall marks hay fever alert

Fall. A time of beauty as the foliage changes colors. 'Tis also the season to be sneezy if you are allergic to ragweed pollen.

Airborne molds are more common in the fall, but by far the most prevalent allergen is ragweed pollen. Ragweed season usually begins in mid-August and lasts until the first frost.

The ability of a person's body to have an allergic reaction is hereditary. Once genetically susceptible people are exposed to an allergen, they become sensitized and start to produce antibodies to that allergen.

These allergic antibodies interact with the surface of mast cells, which line the mucous membranes of the respiratory tract, gastrointestinal tract, and skin. These cells in turn release over 20 chemicals, including histamine, which cause the allergic reaction.

Most people are familiar with the sneezing, swelling, and itching of allergies. Other allergy complaints include general malaise, depression, drowsiness, or loss of hearing or sense of smell. These symptoms are due to a sensitivity which can affect the entire body.

The simplest measure for avoiding pollen is to stay in a room with air conditioning. Avoid driving in the country, especially with the car windows open, and avoid jogging between sunrise and 9 a.m., when pollen is at its peak.

Most people first try to relieve allergies with over-the-counter medications, usually antihistamines, decongestants or a combination of both. If these are not effective or produce bothersome side effects, people often seek medical attention.

The allergist diagnoses allergies based on the patient's complaints and physical examination and confirms the diagnosis using skin tests or, in some cases, blood tests called RAST tests.

A first line of treatment for hay fever is a prescription drug called cromolyn, used in the form of a nasal spray, inhalant, or eye drops. It effectively prevents the allergic reaction by preventing the mast cells from releasing their chemicals. It takes a few days to alleviate symptoms and must be used daily.

There also are corticosteroid drugs which are administered by nasal sprays or inhalants, do not enter the bloodstream in significant amounts and therefore do not cause significant side effects.

Antihistamine pills are often used to treat hay fever but may make people drowsy. Decongestants, on the other hand, tend to pep people up. These drugs are frequently combined to balance out the side effects. Some newer antihistamines do not cause drowsiness.

Women at risk for becoming pregnant should consult their physician before taking antihistamines or any other medication.

If these measures are ineffective or inconvenient, people may undertake allergy desensitization — injections of increasing amounts of the allergen to desensitize them. This treatment should gradually reduce symptoms related to the allergen.

The term "hay fever" is misleading in that it isn't caused by hay and is not associated with a fever. If you have a fever, it's not an allergy but more probably an infection.
