Discusses Worthless Stock Found Around House

ROGER W. BABSON

Discusses Worthless Stocks

Now and again I receive a flood of questions from apparently worthless certificates that have been found around the house. How can you be sure, they want to know, whether or not these certificates have any value at all?

My advice to such people is to let go of such certificates for any amount unless you can check every possible certificate involved. I remember years ago that a Wall Street broker asked me if I could help him get some worthless stocks from readers of a magazine for a few pennies (not per share).

When I got into the situation, I found 49 out of 50 certificates were worthless. BUT one out of every 50 was worth as much as $100. This usually was a certificate issued by a company which had consolidated with another company.

I am in no position, of course, to tell my readers exactly what to do in such situations. I still insist that you should throw away any certificates just because some member of the family or some other person says it is worthless. Probably the best way to show it to your bank. You will know how to go about checking on the current value of any, or your certificates.

Will find that lots of your certificates that are in desk drawers or in attics represent old mining companies. Maybe they were any good, or perhaps they were issued by mines that were closed. Some companies have the money to buy back their own shares, so perhaps some rancher pay the price of the right to use the land so the company was forgotten after stockholders were told that it has "passed out."

But I can remember, for example, some instances in the 1950's when uranium was found on such lands, with an increase from, say, $5 an acre to $50,000 an acre resulting. Maybe an old timer who recalls the company gets himself a list of original stockholders and writes to them offering $10 a share for their certificates. Most families still having the certificates are probably glad to get $10 a share. What they don't know is that the shares may now be worth as much as $1,000 because of the new found uranium. Who can tell what new changes might come about for such undissolved companies

Disappearing Stockholders
I have often urged people who move from one address to another to be sure to write any company whose stock they hold and let them know of the change. If you have some "worthless" stock, spend 5c on a postage stamp and take the time to write a letter giving your new address. If you move too many times and such shifts are not reported, a company gets back the letters they send to you — marked "unknown" — and after a time the firm puts you down on its records as "deceased."

My family for some time had large holdings in a national retail corporation. At one time this firm had nearly 100 stockholders who could not be located. It may sound unlikely, but you actually might be one of these stockholders. There must be hundreds of other companies with the same difficulty. And don't forget that such stocks can double or triple in value, and you may not be found to be given your just share in the profits. Don't let that happen to you or your family.

Don't Dispose of Defaulted Bonds

While on this subject, let me warn you not to rush to sell bonds that you hold when they default. The price of the bond may plummet from par to 50c or so on the dollar, but I have seen many such bonds climb back up to $1,000 in the course of years. I remember that Sheraton Hotel chain bonds sold at $1,000 before the turn of the century, then they defaulted and fell to around $200 where they remained for years. Long after that, a courageous and imaginative financier named Earnest Henderson showed his faith in the hotel business by buying up these "undesirable" bonds. Since that time they have, of course, been paid off at par.

Wilbarger-Wichita SOIL CONSERVATION DISTRICT NEWS

Rotation Grazing

Rotation grazing is most suitable under irrigation, where sufficient water and fertilizer can be applied to keep growing plants in a lush state of growth, and where heavy production is desired.

One of our best crops suitable for the practice of rotation grazing is that of coastal bermudagrass, states James Park of the Iowa Park Soil Conservation Service.

Grazing in spring should be deferred until the early growth reaches a height of 6 to 10 inches tall. This will allow sufficient leaf surface to manufacture plant nutrients to produce a vigorous root system.

One the grass reaches a fast state of growth, sufficient numbers of livestock should be maintained to keep grass clipped 6 to 8 inches high to prevent grass from becoming coarse and unpalatable.

Where large pastures are grazed as a single unit, livestock will have a tendency to spot graze, allowing some areas to become coarse from overgrowth, rendering such areas useless for grazing and if hayed a poor quality of hay.

When one large pasture can be divided into two or more smaller pastures, livestock can be concentrated in numbers for 8 to 10 days to graze all pasture at a more uniform height. Also it assists in the application of water and fertilizer. It allows land to be irrigated and the soil to dry before turning back on the grass. This aids in preventing a greater amount of soil compaction and trampling much of the lush growth on the soil. Also, following a heavy application of nitrogen fertilizer the grass accumulates a high percentage of protein for the first 6 to 10 days of growth which can cause scouring and a slight loss of weight during such period.

Where livestock can be rotated, watering and fertilizing can be applied to pastures a few days before grazing is to begin.

As newcomers to the City of Burk Burnett, we wish to express our gratitude for the reception that was given to our cocker spaniel puppy on the day he was to be one year old, on the corner of 1st Street and Broyles a 5:15 on the 19th of August.

A blast of a shotgun must of made a colorful sight for the children in the neighborhood and brought a big sigh of accomplishment to the person or persons that could or would do this sort of thing.

Thanking you,

Roy W. Gustafson, Will Be Guest Speaker, Billy Graham's Broadcast "Hour Of Decision"

ROY W. GUSTAFSON
EVANGELIST

To be asked to speak for Billy Graham on "The Hour of Decision" broadcast is a privilege granted to only a few. And it is more than a privilege, it is a responsibility thrust upon those who have already demonstrated their devotion to the Scriptures and to the salvation of lost men and women.

Roy W. Gustafson is one of those who have been called upon to speak to listeners of a thousand radio stations, almost around the world. Born in North Easton, Mass., Roy was enrolled as a student at the Florida Bible Institute by the time he had reached his teens. Mingled with other memories, Roy recalls the hard days of the struggle through school, when he often had no suit of clothes to wear, but one that a fellow student had loaned him. That fellow was none other than Billy Graham.

Although a graduate of As-

Sparky says:
Get everyone out at the first sign of Smoke or Fire!

Don't give fire a place to start!

bury College, Roy's most important teacher has always been the Bible. As was the English evangelist of the few generations ago, John Wesley, so is Roy "the man of one Book." He has had a fruitful Bible teaching ministry first as a pastor and more recently as a conference speaker in great demand.

At his home in St. Petersburg, Florida, his family of three girls wait and pray for a Daddy they have given to God and His service.

Forbearance vs. Intransigence

The long drawn out and weary dispute over railroad work rules—the "featherbedding" issue—has produced an outstanding example of forbearance on one side, and of stubborn intransigence on the other.

The railroads have provided the forbearance. They have accepted all of the recommendations made by special commission after special commission—commissions which owed allegiance to neither side, and were concerned solely with the public and national interest—and have agreed to provide, at their expense, many valuable benefits for displaced workers. These include severance pay and retaining to fit men for necessary jobs.

The unions have offered only intransigence. They have refused all of the recommendations. They have said, in effect, that any substantial work rule change would result in a nationwide strike—a strike which could do almost immeasurable damage to the people of this country and the industries and enterprise which sustain us.

Most recently, the railroads accepted, albeit with understandable reluctance, a further delay in posting new and modern work rules, in order to give Congress ample time to deal with the Presidential proposal that the Interstate Commerce Commission be empowered to settle the problem. The unions vehemently opposed this, exactly as they have opposed all other steps to resolve the problem.

The railroads have lived up to their profound responsibility to the nation in this difficult and vexing matter. The unions, in their effort to turn the clock back and keep it there, have not.

Policyholder Questions Answered by the Institute of Life Insurance

Q. What is a "double protection" or "triple protection" life insurance policy? Is this like double indemnity?

A. No. These are policies which combine permanent, life-long insurance with enough additional level term insurance to provide two or three times the permanent insurance benefits if the policyholder should die within a specified period.

For example, a $10,000 "double protection to 65" policy would pay $20,000 if the policyholder died before reaching the age of 66, or $10,000 if he died thereafter.

With some policies, the double or triple protection runs for a specified number of years—for example, 10 to 20 years—rather than until the policyholder reaches a certain age.

Q. Why is it that I don't have to pass a medical examination for the life insurance I get where I work?

A. The group life insurance you get where you work is issued on the lives of all or most of the people who work for your employer. A life insurance company can provide this protection for every member of the group, regardless of his or her individual health, because of the law of averages. Although the health of some members of the group may be below average, many others will be in excellent health. So, on the average, the health of the entire group will be satisfactory. All members of the group are apparently well enough to go to work regularly. (If an employee is on sick leave at the time a new group policy is issued, he generally is not covered by it until he returns to work. However, when employees go on sick leave after a policy is in force, their life insurance protection is usually not affected.)

IT'S UP TO YOU

By
Howard E. Kershner, L.H.D.

THOSE who seem forever eager to make agreements with the Communists and co-exist with them should study carefully the following quotes from Lenin. They can, of course, be paralleled by quotes from Stalin, Khrushchev and other Communist leaders:

Dr. Kershner

"A Communist must be prepared to make every sacrifice . . . employ illegitimate methods, conceal the truth."

"The existence of the Soviet Republic side by side with imperialist states for a long time is unthinkable . . . No wonder Senator Dodd said, in connection with the proposed inspection of nuclear testing, ' . . . I take it as certain that the Soviet government, which is publicly committed to our destruction, which has violated more than a thousand treaties . . . will cheat.'"

"We commend this statement and the Lenin quotes given above to the attention of those who trust Communist rulers and strive to make agreements with them."

In this connection, the following comment by the distinguished French writer, Raymond Tournoux, is both pertinent and frightening:

"At this moment, at this tragic moment, the Russians and the Americans are in the course of concluding a new Yalta, a two-person Yalta. What has passed in Cuba is clear. Kennedy and Khrushchev, just the same as Roosevelt and Stalin in 1945, are coming to an agreement behind the back of the others and, specifically, behind the back of Europe. They are dividing the world—without us."

According to Senator Thomas J. Dodd of Connecticut, the United States has made one concession after another, amounting to about a score in all, in its retreat from the basic principle of inspection to make sure that any agreement against nuclear testing is observed. The total effect of these concessions is to do away with any possibility of adequate inspection. Senator Dodd declares that the way the matter stands now, the Russians would virtually be responsible for deciding whether or not they were cheating and whether or not to convey this information to the United States.

COMMENTS FROM THE CAPITOL

by Vant Neff

Had we been half as quick with our decisions and troops in Cuba as the Government was in sending them to the race-torn South, I think that there would be no Communistic bastion in the Caribbean to devil us.

I cannot understand how we, as a sovereign state, or the Organization of American States, can continue to do nothing while Castro agents repeatedly attempt to assassinate the President of Venezuela, Betancourt; blow up oil producing and storage sites; destroy property; and shoot up our embassy there. Worse, we restrain and take into custody free individuals who would oppose the people dedicated to burying us. Are we being conditioned to accept "co-existence" with Castro as well as with Khrushchev? If our appeasement policies are an effort to placate the Russians, we may well lose a continent while we achieve nothing.

The official reason for removing the land-based missiles in Italy and Turkey is that we are replacing them with Polaris Missiles, housed in submarines. However, in this era of "managed news" from the White House, it strikes me as very coincidental that Russia removed 42 missiles from Cuba and we 45 from strategic Italy and Turkey. Could this have been a deal?

I think it is unimportant whether there are 17,000 Russian troops in Cuba or 7,000. The fact is there are troops there. Can you imagine the hue-and-cry throughout the world if we maintained a similar number of troops across the Russian border in Finland?

It's funny how our long-haired thinkers periodically pick a Communistic line and spread it as a truism. Currently, it's "don't disturb Khrushchev — his successor might be much worse". Since when has Khrushchev been such a bargain? And who says his successor must be worse?

I'm all in favor of jawing instead of warring. But, will someone please explain the purpose of "arrangements" with the Soviets when you've got to play their way or they won't play at all, and they break agreements just as quickly as it suits their purpose.

General Thomas White, retired Air Force Chief of Staff, openly deplors the growing influence of the Whiz Kids, headed by Secretary McNamara, on high-level defense planning. He has no doubts about their competence in such matters as procurement, but feels that grand strategy calls for seasoned military judgment. Many of the mistakes that brought about the Cuban fiasco might well be traced to young civilian "experts", who substitute theory for practical experience.

Commenting on President Kennedy, James Reston, of The New York Times, writes, "He plays touch-government; he seems to touch everything and tackle nothing." Mr. Reston is a sometime admirer of Mr. Kennedy.

With Russia threatening us with the number and size of her atomic bombs . . . with the Communist arming and training discontents throughout the world . . . with Khrushchev's public reply to Red China, that the U.S. paper tiger has nuclear teeth, as his reason for not attacking us . . . how in the world can the workers at the Nevada atomic site, who went on strike, consider themselves patriotic Americans . . . or don't they care?

Representatives of the American Press contend that the Government has no right to lie to the people. Other writers have expressed themselves to the effect that, in our open society, the public has a right to know as much as the Government can tell them, without violating our real security. Hanson W. Baldwin, New York Times' Military Analyst, stated that people have no real freedom, if the press is handed "managed news". Everywhere, throughout the country, there have been forthright and outright expressions from the public that, if they are asked to make sacrifices for the Government, they have a right to know the factual news. The effect to date — nothing. The news still emanates from the White House, managed and frequently distorted. It seems to me that it is far more reprehensible for the Government to give false news than it is to tell the public nothing.

Almost one-fourth of the nation's forest land has poor stands of timber. Nearly one-half of this area is bare and needs to be replanted to restore it to productivity within a reasonable length of time. On the remainder, natural regeneration, improved protection and better management practices should be effective in reestablishing stands.

HEALTH AND SAFETY TIPS

From The American Medical Association

Back to School

It's back to school for millions of American youngsters in a few weeks.

It's starting school for the first time for the kindergarten of first graders, several million of them.

There's no one season of the year that is best for physical checkups. In fact, the health care of your family should be a constant affair throughout the year.

But if you have been putting off a visit to the family doctor, for your small fry, now is a good time to phone for an appointment, with reopening of school in the offing.

Your doctor will probably want to check the children's vision and hearing. Small children can and frequently do, suffer gradual changes in their eyes or loss of hearing without realizing it. Either of the conditions can play havoc with school grades and social adjustment in the classroom. If your child wears glasses, they should be rechecked to make certain his prescription is still suitable. The small child who can't see the blackboard clearly or can't hear the teacher's questions is frustrated and baffled.

A dental checkup also is important. Many schools now encourage pupils to bring a certificate from a dentist each year showing that an examination has been made. Small cavities can be filled, before they become major dental problems, and potentially serious dental troubles often can be corrected if discovered early.

Ask your doctor also whether your children are properly immunized against the various contagious diseases that threaten children and adults. A return to the indoor life of the school room exposes the child to infection to a much greater degree than the outdoor life of the summer months. Vaccines against smallpox, polio (lockjaw), whooping cough, diphtheria are now readily available in the market. Make certain your child is properly immunized. If your child is participating in vigorous sports, it is important that he be immunized against one of the sch-

LABOR DAY

America's prosperity, progress and power for peace rest in the loyal hands of America's workers.
Creating, then utilizing, the best of modern equipment, labor has helped, and will help, our country move ahead.

Proudly, we pay tribute to American labor. Since the first official Labor Day in 1882, both our industrial strength and standards of living have taken great strides forward . . . with the help of labor, in our national tradition of free men working together. We confidently look toward ever greater gains.

It's The Law In Texas

MISTAKE AND FRAUD

When you get the short end of a deal you may feel inclined to claim mistake or fraud to get out of the contract. But courts are not inclined to correct your business mistakes unless they also find serious injustices. For to charge the other party with fraud is serious since fraud is a crime as well as a civil cause of action. Our courts, therefore, demand more proof than usual in civil cases where one sues to get out of a contract on the grounds of fraud.

Suppose Smith and Black agree to do something in clear language, but Smith does not grasp the terms of a plain contract. This failure of Smith will not void the contract and our courts will enforce its terms.

But suppose instead Black well knew that Smith had made a mistake, and he still didn't explain it to Smith. Then if this can be proved, Black may have trouble enforcing his contract.

Both parties often make a mistake which may void the deal. In one case Raffles agreed to buy and Smith to sell goods arriving on a ship named the "Peerless." But it just so happened that two steamers had the same name. Raffles and Smith had in mind different steamers. No contract. Why?

No meeting of the minds. But to end such a contract both parties must make a mistake about something in the contract.

People often make oral agreements, and later write the terms down. Suppose they make a mistake in doing this. When they find such a mistake they can go into court and have the contract reformed.

To induce the other party to agree through fraud makes the contract void. For a court to act in a fraud case one must prove five things:

- (1) A false representation;
- (2) The speaker's knowledge of its falsity;
- (3) His intention to mislead the other party;
- (4) The other's innocent reliance on the statement; and
- (5) Damage resulting from the deception.

Except for guardians and others in positions of great trust, the law assumes that persons deal at arms length and have equal ability to protect themselves. The law, in short, expects you to use your head in checking out claims and facts. This goes to the ancient Roman principle: Caveat Emptor (let the buyer beware). The law expects you to look into the claims of the other party, and not to agree to any old paper shoved under your nose as a "standard" contract.

Normally the blood makes the entire circuit from the heart and through the arteries and veins and back to the heart in half a minute.

HELP IS NEEDED

By Needy Family

A family living in the Burk Haven housing project really needs help. A woman with four children, deserted by her husband, and paralyzed from her waist down, is an excellent seamstress and can also do embroidery work. If you have work the woman can do, or if you wish to help in any other way, contact Mr. Bob Browning at the housing project for further details.

IT'S UP TO YOU

By Howard E. Kershner, L.H.D.

WE would do well to remind ourselves of some wise words by one of the founders of our country, Benjamin Franklin, uttered in 1787 when it seemed that the Constitutional Convention was not making much progress toward setting up the new government for the 13 colonies that had won their independence from Great Britain. Franklin's words are just as applicable for today as they were then. We would do well to heed them.

"In this situation of this assembly groping as it were in the dark to find political truth, and scarce able to distinguish it when presented to us, how has it happened, sir, that we have not hitherto once thought of humbly applying to the Father of Light to illuminate our understandings? In the beginning of the contest with Great Britain, when we were sensible to danger, we had daily prayers in this room for Divine protection.

"Our prayers, sir, were heard, and they were graciously answered. All of us who were engaged in the struggle must have observed frequent instances of a superintending Providence in our favor. To that kind Providence we owe this happy opportunity of consulting in peace on the means of establishing our future national felicity. And have we now forgotten that powerful Friend? Or do we imagine that we no longer need His assistance? I have lived, sir, a long time, and the longer I live, the more convincing proofs I see of this truth — that God governs the affairs of men.

"And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His notice, is it probable an empire can rise without His aid? We have secured, sir, in the sacred Writings that except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it.

"I firmly believe this: and I also believe that without this concurring aid we shall succeed in this political building no better than the builders of Babel: We shall be divided by our partial little local interests: our projects shall be confounded and we ourselves shall become a byword down the future ages. And what is worse, mankind may hereafter, from this unfortunate instance, despair of establishing governments by human wisdom and leave it to chance, war, and conquest."

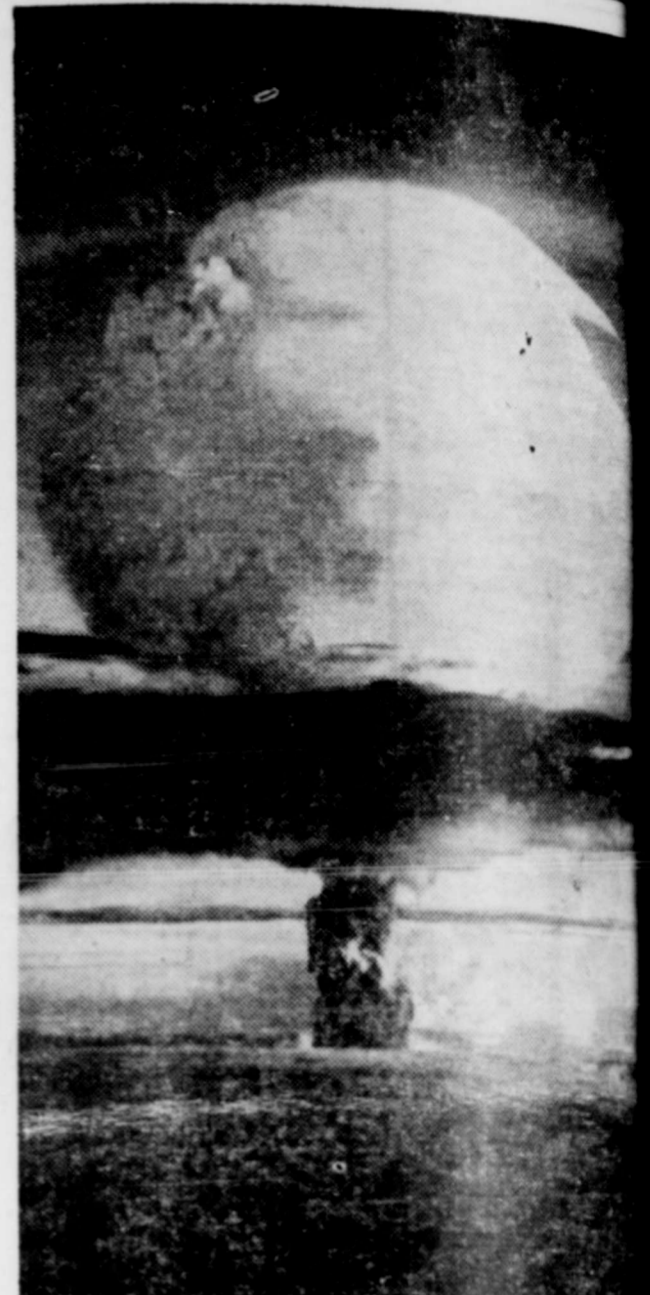

Howard Kershner's Commentaries, Inc., New York 19, N. Y.

This is one alternative to the United Nations

The U.N. isn't perfect but it's our one best hope. Below are facts about its work that you should know. Read how the U.N. works to prevent war.

THE U.N. helps put out brush fire wars before they can flare up and consume the world. In the Congo, for example, the U.N. helped restore order, to prevent Russia and other powers from taking over.

The U.N. offers a meeting place for nations. World leaders are "onstage" there, before the conscience of world opinion.

Behind the scenes, U.N. programs like UNICEF and UNESCO spread education and technical knowledge, help stamp out disease and hunger. The United Nations gets at the roots of war.

President Kennedy and Former President Eisenhower urge Americans to support the U.N.—not out of fear alone but out of understanding. You can help. Express your views about the U.N. to your neighbors, friends and representatives in government. Get the facts.

Gen. MacArthur Previews World's Fair

NEW YORK — General of the Army Douglas MacArthur accepts a gold medallion to commemorate his visit to 1964-1965 New York World's Fair. This medallion, usually served for Heads of State, is presented by Thomas J. Deane, Jr., (center) Chairman of the Fair's Executive Committee. Major General William E. Potter, U.S.A. (Ret.), (right) Fair's Executive Vice President described the exhibit played on the scale model of the Fair.

Opportunities
The old time plumber had enough listening complaints about how his work was for his young apprentice. "You think it's tough said the old timer. "I started, we would lay two lengths of pipe, then on the water and we'd stay ahead of it."

TIME IS MONEY . . .
Pay yourself every hour; only 3 hours per day will give you $9.48. More hours — more money. Call 322-4135. 50-CZ
