TRUCK FIRE — This flatbed trailer loaded with roofing insulation was struck by lightening somewhere between Sweetwater and Roscoe this morning. Charles Dottery of Natchez, Miss., was driving a 2000 Peterbilt towing the flatbed when the incident occurred. (SDN Staff Photo by Joyce May)

Struck by lightning...

A Mississippi truck drive apparently drove from the other side of Roscoe to Snyder this morning while the cargo he was carrying slowly burned in the back.

Charles Dottery of Natchez, Miss., said his 2000 Peterbilt truck was struck by lightening somewhere between Sweetwater and Roscoe this morning, and he had not realized the roofing insulation he was hauling had caught on fire.

"I knew something happened," Dottery said. "My truck died and all of my warning lights and devices came on and then it started back."

Snyder Fire Department and local law enforcement responded to a report of an eighteen-wheeler on fire at Rip Griffin's around 9 this morning.

Only a small portion of the material on the back end of the truck burned.

The driver was on his way to Lubbock. He pulled into Rip Griffin's, and that is when he realized it was on fire. He then unhitched the truck from the flatbed trailer.

"Nobody told me," he said of the fire. "I passed an emergency vehicle and a milk tanker passed me, but no one told me I was on fire."

Rain was falling as firemen extinguished the small blaze.

Barak, Arafat agree to seek end to violence

SHARM EL-SHEIK, Egypt (AP) — Israel and the Palestinians agreed Tuesday to end the street violence that has torn their region apart for more than two weeks and to get back on the path toward a permanent solution to their conflict.

Both sides agreed to a cease-fire, but violence continued in the immediate aftermath.

Both sides also agreed to explore a resumption in the negotiations for a permanent peace agreement between Israel and the Palestinians.

"After 48 hours if we see there is calm in the field we will pull back our heavy equipment to the point where they were before the outbreak of the crisis and we will lift the closure" that has kept Palestinians out of his country ," Prime Minister Ehud Barak of Israel told a news conference upon his return home.

"Let me emphasize that the real test of all the understandings and agreements is implementation," the prime minister added.

For his part, Jibril Rajoub, the Palestinian security chief in the West Bank, said, "The ball is now in the Israeli court. It's they who created this crisis, they are the ones who used acts of killing and terrorism against our people. What is needed now is for them to take all the necessary measures to stop this violence."

As he returned to Gaza, Arafat said that the all-important question is whether the deal with be carried out, and added: "We expect that the implementation will be exactly as we agreed upon."

President Clinton did not use the term "cease-fire" in announcing the accord at the end of a two-day emergency summit meeting at this seaside resort. Instead, he said both sides agreed on "immediate concrete measures" to end the violence.

"I believe we have made real progress today," Clinton said. "Repairing the damage will take time."

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said Tuesday's agreement was supposed to result in a cease-fire. "A cease-fire should be happening within hours, immediately," she told CNN.

Additionally, within two weeks the two sides were to meet with American mediators to explore the possibility of resuming talks, Albright said.

Musing on the future in an interview with The Associated Press, Albright said it was not clear whether the two sides would do everything they could to implement the agreement and end the fighting. She paused briefly and then added firmly: "They will have to do it."

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "It's a shame to go through life with a catcher's mitt on both hands. Everybody needs to throw something back every now and then."

You can always tell the age of the coffee-drinking crowd by the topics of conversation.

There's less and less talk about the opposite sex and more and more discussion about which presidential candidate will do the most for social security or for prescription drugs.

One fellow said he's having lots of dreams lately. He doesn't know whether to interpret these dreams as something out of the past or some heavenly rapture.

He dreams about chocolate-chip cookies. He said he could eat a dozen at one sitting, but after becoming a diabetic, his wife has refused to bake 'em any more. The wife doesn't tempt him either, by buying them at the bakery.

One recent morning, our friend claims he was still lying in bed, trying to decide if his arthritis would allow him to get dressed and head for the coffee shop.

Suddenly, he smelled the aroma of chocolate-chip cookies. He must have been dreaming or died and gone to heaven, he reasoned. His wife would never allow the sugar-laden delicacies in her kitchen.

Was it really heaven? Or was it one final gesture of heroic love from his devoted wife.

Despite the aches and crackling, our friend said he forced himself out of bed, down the hall and into the kitchen where the aroma sent him to his knees, begging for a taste of the still-warm cookie.

Just as he reached for the plate of cookies on the table, already devouring the anticipation of the chocolate chip cookie in his mouth, his wife smacked him with a spatula.

"Stay out of those," she demanded. "I'm making these for the funeral."

It reminded us of the story about three friends who were discussing the travails of growing older.

One woman said, "Sometimes I catch myself with a jar of mayonnaise in my hand and can't remember whether I need to put it away, or to start making a sandwich." The second gal chimed in, "Yes, sometimes I find myself on the landing of the stairs and can't recall whether I was on my way up or down."

The third lady responded, "Well, I'm glad I don't have that problem...knock on wood."

Just as she rapped her knuckles on the table, she said, "Excuse me, that must be the door. I'll get it."

Welcome rain falls over county and West Texas

A slow, general rain dumped up to1.5 inches on Snyder and Scurry County. Light rain continued to fall in Snyder at noon today.

Shortly before noon, the city water plant had recored 1.15 inches and 1.06 had been measured near Dunn. No other totals were available.

The rainfall in Snyder shortly before 6 a.m.

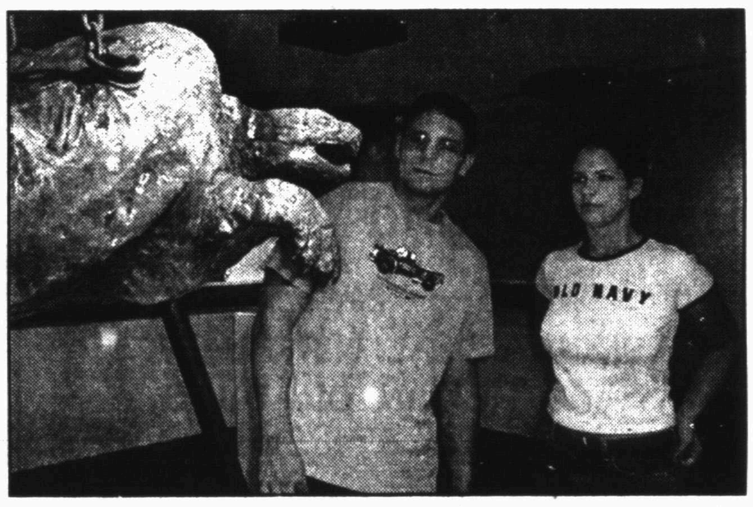

Ray Fagen, meteorologist with the U.S. Weather Bureau in Midland, said the moisture is the result of an upper level low over New Mexico.

"There has been an increase in moisture in the atmosphere and when the warm moisture meets the cold air aloft, we get the rain," said Fagen.

At mid-morning, it was raining in all of West Texas and parts of southeastern New Mexico, said Fagen.

"Midland and Odessa are receiving some moisture, as well as the Davis Mountains area," added Fagen.

The chance of rain continues throughout the day, but the chances this evening drop to 20 percent.

Regional development group...

Meeting is Wednesday

A regional conference for community leaders will be Wednesday in Abilene.

The event, to be held in the Abilene Civic Center, is sponsored by the Texas Midwest Community Network. The Development Corporation of Snyder is a member of that group.

Among the speakers will be Donna Fowler, executive director of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce. Also expected to attend is John DeLille, executive director of the DCOS.

The theme of the conference is "Regionalism – Pulling Together."

Nicki Harle, executive director of the TMCN, said the conference is an opportunity for community leaders and interested citizens in the region to find solutions to problems and concerns of rural towns. Seminars will focus on community-based planning, alternate sources of funding and spec buildings for economic development, planning for water needs and tourism ideas.

The network was formed in 1994 and the regional organization has a goal of economic development, tourism promotion, legislative awareness and regional education.

Besides Snyder, 41 other communities are members.

Jury selected

The trial of a Lubbock man accused of unlawful restraint and robbery is underway in 132nd District Court.

A seven-woman, five-man is hearing hear the case against Sigifred Parrilla Saenz of Lubbock.

The 19-year-old man is accused of attempting to steal a car from the United Supermarket parking lot on May 29.

Saenz' attempt was foiled when 11-year-old Brandon Robbins – a passenger in the car – started screaming.

The case is being presided over by District Judge Ernie Armstrong and prosecuted by District Attorney Dana Cooley.

Defense attorney is David Martinez of Lubbock.

In sheriff's race...

If vacancy exists, county will follow normal policy

With early voting just one week away, activity continues to be focused on the Scurry County sheriff's race where retired sheriff Keith Collier is being opposed by write-in candidates Cole Herring, Joe Salinas and Kirk Taylor.

Collier has said if he is elected, he will not take office and the post will become vacant on Jan. 1.

If this happens, the county commissioner's court will be faced with the task of appointing a sheriff to serve a two-year term – from Jan. 1, 2001 until Dec. 31, 2002.

County Judge Ricky Fritz said today that if the sheriff's post is vacant on Jan. 1, the court would follow the same procedure as with all county vacancies.

"The county will advertise the position as required by law, we'll take applications, and then interview if necessary," the judge said.

"Then we will appoint a sheriff for the two-year term," said Fritz.

Fritz said the court could appoint an interim sheriff on Jan. 1 to serve until a two-year appointment could be made.

"That is the procedure we used when a vacancy came up in JP Precinct 1," Fritz added.

Lawyers want tire lawsuits separate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers suing Bridgestone/Firestone Inc. over tires involved in 101 U.S. traffic deaths are fighting about how best to proceed with a glut of cases in which millions of dollars in judgments may be at stake.

The first issue, to be decided after a Tuesday hearing in Washington, is whether to combine in one federal court the hundreds of lawsuits already filed. Some attorneys for victims injured in accidents involving recalled Firestone tires want to keep their cases separate, arguing that a resolution could be held up for years if their lawsuits are lumped in with others.

Defense attorneys from Bridgestone/Firestone and Ford Motor Co. and some plaintiffs' attorneys say it would be more efficient to combine the cases during the discovery phase, when evidence would be gathered to be used during trials.

Hal Kleinman, a senior associate at a Chicago law firm that has filed class action suits on behalf of victims in the United States and overseas, said combining the cases would benefit all involved.

He said about 200 cases have been filed on Firestone tires nationwide, and all of the attorneys were going to need the documents and depositions of engineers and managers from Bridgestone/Firestone, which recalled 6.5 million ATX, ATX II and Wilderness AT tires on Aug. 9 after widespread complaints of tread separation, blowouts and other problems.

"If they have to be produced in over 200 cases for depositions, it would be impossible," Kleinman said. "Why have attorneys duplicating efforts?"

The government is investigating at least 101 deaths and more than 250 injuries linked to Firestone tires, many used on the Ford Explorer, the world's top-selling sport utility vehicle. There also have been deaths in Venezuela and the Middle East, although the total death toll is unclear.

Each of the deaths and injuries had a different circumstance that should be considered separately, argued Roger Braugh, a lawyer from Corpus Christi, Texas, who opposed combining the suits.

Braugh said many cases already had been through pretrial discovery and should not be held up waiting for other cases to go through that phase.

Missouri governor killed in plane crash

GOLDMAN, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Mel Carnahan, the Democratic candidate in one of the most hotly contested U.S. Senate races in the country, was killed when the plane shuttling him to a campaign rally crashed in rainy, foggy weather.

The Cessna 335, believed to have been carrying Carnahan, his son Roger and the governor's campaign adviser Chris Sifford, went down Monday night 25 miles south of St. Louis. They had been en route to a rally for Carnahan, 66, who was engaged in a heated battle with Republican Sen. John Ashcroft.

There were no survivors, Jerry Nachtigal, the governor's spokesman, said. Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board were expected to arrive Tuesday in St. Louis.

"We found wreckage in very small pieces spread over a large area. We have found some remains we cannot identify at this point," said Capt. Ed Kemp of the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department.

Frank Sifford, cousin of Chris Sifford, 37, said the family was told all three men had perished and that Roger Carnahan, 44, was flying the plane.

"They're taking it real hard," said Sifford, a Stoddard County commissioner. "It's such a tragedy for such outstanding people. It's heartbreaking. It's a very tough time."

Ashcroft's campaign immediately suspended all advertising "out of respect for Governor Carnahan and his family," Ashcroft campaign manager David Ayres said.

The NTSB said the twin-engine plane, a six-seater, was registered to a law firm where Roger Carnahan was a partner.

Carnahan had been expected at the campaign rally at 8 p.m. in New Madrid, about 125 miles south of the crash site, which was thick with trees, scattered farm houses and fields.

State Sen. Jerry Howard, who was at the rally, said Roy Temple, executive director of the Missouri Democratic Party, got a page around 8 p.m. from Sifford. Sifford told Temple that the governor's plane had encountered lightning and was going to return to St. Louis or Jefferson City, Howard said.

Tom Hunter, who lives near the crash site, told St. Louis TV station KMOV he heard the plane flying overhead.

"I thought, 'What a crazy person in this kind of weather.' Next thing, sounded like it was in a very steep dive, the engine was just screaming," Hunter said.

He said he heard a loud explosion and the sky turned red. "That was it," Hunter said. "It was total silence. I told my wife to call 911."

Carnahan won his first public election at age 26 as a municipal judge in his hometown of Rolla. He was elected to the Missouri House of Representatives two years later and served two terms before becoming state treasurer.

In 1988, Carnahan was elected lieutenant governor. In 1992, he won the governor's office in a landslide, and he won a second term in 1996.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

May-December romance chills with man's increasing infirmity

DEAR ABBY: I read with great interest the letter from "Confused in South Carolina," who, at the age of 52, had fallen in love with a 70-year-old man. I read her criteria for a "lifetime mate" and yes — he certainly has wonderful qualities.

Let me share a real-life scenario: When my father was 70, he took up with a lovely, caring woman 21 years younger. They had a wonderful life together and enjoyed each other enormously, until my aging father began to have a series of strokes that slowly eroded their relationship.

With each stroke he became more dependent, belligerent and less able to continue doing the things they so enjoyed in the beginning of their courtship. She soon tired of playing nursemaid, and the relationship fell apart.

The only advice I can offer "Confused" is to go ahead with this love of hers. But do it knowing that when you take up with an elderly gentleman, your final days could be filled with attending to his basic needs. And believe me, that will be the true test of your love for him. — DAUGHTER WHO KNOWS, RAPID CITY, S.D.

DEAR DAUGHTER: Your warning is sobering, but I'm pleased to report that of all the mail I received in response to that letter, your father's experience was in the distinct minority. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I have a warning for "Confused in South Carolina." CAUTION: Marry this older man only if you can stand to be adored, admired and cherished as a lover and best friend. I should know. I followed my heart and married Rick, who was 19 years my senior. Abby, that was 21 years ago, and I have never been happier. — SYLVIA CUMMINGS, L.A.

DEAR ABBY: I was 43 and my husband was 66 when we married. We had many happy years together and I would marry him again in a heartbeat. We both recognized that my husband would probably predecease me, and he was foresighted enough to make housing and financial arrangements for me after he was gone. If he hadn't, my stepchildren would have tossed me out immediately after the funeral.

If her intended has children, "Confused" should ensure that he has made suitable arrangements for her after he's gone. The first step would be a new will — not necessarily excluding his children, but making sure she'll be provided for. — TALLAHASSEE READER

DEAR ABBY: My wife of 32 years passed away in 1990. She had been manic depressive during most of the marriage, and it was no bed of roses. That same year I met the daughter of an old friend, and in 1992 she moved in with me. In 1993 we married. At the time she was 47 and I was 74. I am now 81 and she has reached the ripe old age of 54.

It has been a very successful marriage for both of us. I still work; she's a professional artist. We travel a lot (last year we went to China — Gobi desert and all). We share a common world view, a rich sense of humor and laugh a lot. I tell her every day how much I love her, and we both enjoy physical affection. I have been living in a state of euphoria the last eight years.

Of course, we both know that eventually Mother Nature will not be denied, but we're having a wonderful time. When my time comes I will go happily, and she'll have memories that will last the rest of her life. So, "Confused," get with it — before it's too late! — JOYFUL OCTOGENARIAN IN SAN FRANCISCO

"SAVE US LORD!"

"And they came to Him, and awoke Him, saying, 'Save us, Lord; we are perishing!" (Matthew 8:25). Jesus rebuked His disciples' little faith, then rebuked the winds and the sea, miraculously calming the storm.

A Coast Guard ready-shack received a terse radio message during a swirling snow storm with gusts up to 100 miles per hour, "Six men on a sinking dragger off Nantucket!" The helicopter commander could refuse to launch in such weather, but he knew the crew of Gannet could not survive five minutes in the cold sea. He set out and made an extremely difficult rescue.

Jesus commissioned us to tell His good news to everyone so some will be rescued. He will provide us opportunities today. Let us have the love and compassion to seek the lost!

All aces from the Five Aces

By Phillip Alder

An English publishing company under the modest title of Five Aces has been putting out good books. The latest is "Fit for a King," compiled by Sally Brock and Barry Rigal. It is a collection of brilliancies. First, you may test yourself, then read the original write-up by a well-known player or journalist.

This deal is one of my all-time favorites. Look at the North-South hands. You are in three no-trump. West leads the diamond two. How would you proceed?

You have only five top tricks, so you need the spade finesse to win and to collect three heart tricks. Yet even if East has the necessary spade king and ace-third of hearts, there are entry problems. Suppose, after winning with dummy's diamond queen, you lead a heart to your king, return to dummy with a club to the ace, and play a second heart. East can step in with the ace and return a diamond. With no dummy entry remaining, you cannot enjoy the 13th heart.

Jim Proctor, one of England's best tournament directors, saw the solution. After the diamond queen and a heart to the king, Proctor led his diamond king to dummy's ace, establishing the opponents' suit! But after a second heart, Proctor couldn't be defeated. East won with the ace, and the defenders cashed their three diamond tricks before switching to a club. However, Proctor won in hand, unblocked the heart queen, reached the dummy with a club, cashed the last heart, and took the spade finesse.

The book is $21.95 postpaid from Baron Barclay Bridge Supplies. Call (800) 274-2221 to order.

Perry wins fourth SCC golf crown

Snyder's Penny Perry wasn't ready to surrender her crown, just yet.

For the fourth consecutive year, Perry won the Snyder Country Club Ladies' Club Championship on Sunday.

Perry fired a two-round total of 152 to win the event, and posted the low net score of 144.

In the Championship Flight, Anita Talbott captured the low-gross title with a 166. Suzy Reed's 153 was the low net total.

Kaye Cypert carded a 187 to win the First Flight, while Jo Sterling turned in the low net total with a 149.

Carolyn Greene won the accuracy drive contest, and Perry and Cypert took home closest to the pin honors.

Local bowlers grab top spots at tournament

ABILENE — Twelve local competitors turned in strong performances over the weekend at the Area Special Olympic Bowling Tournament.

Jimmy Wells, Randy Underwood, Marvin Butler and Susie Mullen captured first-place finishes.

Tom Crawley, Bobby Wood and Brandon Garvin were runners-up, while Cameron Brown was third.

Alex Hancock, Michael Cotton and Marc Fisk finished fourth, and Rebekah Brown came in fifth.

The local athletes were coached by Tommy Cotton, Jerry Tucker, Juanita Glass and John Nix. John Partain acted as chaperone.

Aikman believes good days are still to come

IRVING (AP) — Troy Aikman was talking about his dreadful five-interception game, his aching back and how he'd handle being benched. As the conversation wound down, he couldn't help but laugh.

"I'm being asked to talk a lot about my eroding skills and when I'm not going to be around any longer," he said.

Aikman isn't thinking about leaving the Dallas Cowboys just yet, but the quarterback realizes his best days are behind him.

But he still believes there are some good ones left.

"I don't feel like I have some of the skills I had a few years ago," said Aikman, who turns 34 next month. "But as far as what I do have left and what I feel like I can do and whether I can play at a high level, I still have the confidence I can do that."

Aikman was put on the defensive after throwing four first-half interceptions and another in the second half of a 19-14 loss to the New York Giants on Sunday. Two more sure pickoffs were dropped.

The five interceptions were the most in his 12-year NFL career; it matched his total for the 11 games he played in 1998. It also tied the most in Dallas' 41-year history.

The most revealing aspect of his rough day was how it happened. All five throws could be blamed on a lack of arm strength, poor reads or both, all signs that his four-year slide is picking up speed.

Aikman

"I don't feel like some things are quite as effortless as what they once were," he said. "For someone who has been accustomed to playing at a very high level, that's really frustrating."

The Cowboys are 1-3 this season in games Aikman has started. He's thrown only two touchdowns and nine interceptions, more than he had in either of his last two Super Bowl seasons.

Since 1996, the last time Dallas won a playoff game, Aikman is 21-24 in the regular season and 0-2 in the postseason. He hasn't been to the Pro Bowl any of those years after going to six straight.

Nonetheless, Cowboys owner Jerry Jones insists that as long as No. 8 is healthy, he's No. 1. Coach Dave Campo said there was never any thought of turning to backup Randall Cunningham on Sunday, even though Cunningham has played well — arguably better than Aikman — in his three outings.

Campo compared Aikman to Roger Clemens, noting that the New York Yankees pitcher was hit hard late in the season then threw a 1-hitter against Seattle in the playoffs.

"I believe Troy Aikman gives us a chance to win football games," Campo said. "It's not going back to 1995 or '93, it's going back two weeks ago against the Carolina Panthers. He had the opportunity and did it."

Aikman said his pride could handle being pulled.

"I want them to do what's best for the team," he said. "I wouldn't like it, but I'd support whatever decision they make."

Mariners hope to keep series alive

NEW YORK (AP) — A kid from Brooklyn wants to keep the Bronx Bombers from meeting the team from Queens in a Subway Series.

John Halama, the Seattle Mariners pitcher who hails from Bay Ridge, has been in New York since Saturday, home for his sister's wedding.

On Tuesday night he pitches against Orlando Hernandez, trying to force a seventh game against the New York Yankees in the AL championship series.

"I had to be here, but my heart was in Seattle," Halama said Monday before the Mets finished off the St. Louis Cardinals to win the NL pennant.

Barbara Halama got married Saturday, so her brother took a redeye flight after Game 3 Friday night. He couldn't watch Game 4 because of the wedding.

"Someone had a Walkman and kept me updated, inning by inning, batter and everything," Halama said.

The Brooklynite, acquired by Seattle from Houston in the Randy Johnson trade, kept to his normal throwing routine, going out to a city park to toss a ball with his brother.

Sports Whirl

By SDN Sports Editor Eric Drennan

Looking ahead to the high school playoffs, while thinking back to when the Cowboys were America's Team.

The Snyder Lady Tigers can officially clinch a berth in the volleyball playoffs with a victory tonight over Plainview. Game time is set for 7 o'clock at the SHS gym.

Actually, there is only one scenario in which the Lady Tigers wouldn't make the playoffs.

Here's what would have to occur to keep SHS out of the postseason. The Lady Tigers would have to drop its final two matches, Big Spring would have to win its final two contests (including tonight's against 12-0 Lake View), and Andrews would have to beat Snyder on Saturday, but lose its match tonight against 0-12 Estacado.

If all of that happened, Snyder, Andrews and Big Spring would finish in a three-way tie, which would force a mini-tournament to be held to decide who advances.

The Lady Tigers would face a representative from District 3 in the bi-district round Oct. 27 or 28. Hereford is currently undefeated in 3-4A play and figures to take the title. Snyder would take on Dumas or Canyon Randall.

It's official. The Dallas Cowboys have the most stubborn owner and head coach in the NFL.

Despite Troy Aikman's performance this season, which has produced only two touchdown passes and nine interceptions, Jerry Jones and Dave Campo refuse to even consider starting back-up quarterback Randall Cunningham.

Jones and Campo are sticking with Aikman, because they say he is a "proven winner."

So was Tom Landry, but Jones didn't hesitate replacing him.

It's widely known that Seminole ISD has its fair share of money, and it's a good thing they do.

Seminole recently upgraded their football facility, known as Wigwam Stadium, to the tune of around $50,000. To Seminole's surprise, it now must dish out $100,000 to install an elevator for the press box.

Because the other upgrades were made, Seminole must provide the elevator to be in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

It seems the Snyder Tigers' game plan against Frenship two weeks ago, might be the best bet to knock off the state-ranked team.

Prior to last Friday's match-up with Frenship, Plainview receiver Adam Naron was asked whether the Bulldogs would opt for the ball-control attack that worked well for Snyder.

"We're not going to try to run a bunch of time off the clock just to stay close," Naron said in the Lubbock paper.

Frenship promptly throttled the Bulldogs, 56-12.

So much for that game plan.

Mets clinch World Series berth

NEW YORK (AP) — The Mets' clinching party started early and could stretch all the way to the Bronx as New York prepares for its wildest baseball week in years.

Mike Hampton pitched a three-hitter Monday night and the Mets stamped their ticket into a possible Subway Series by beating the St. Louis Cardinals 7-0 and winning the NL championship series 4-1.

All that's left for New York's dream World Series is for the Yankees to close out the Seattle Mariners in the ALCS. The Yankees lead the series 3-2 with Game 6 Tuesday night.

"I'm rooting for the Yankees, to be perfectly honest," said Mets first baseman Todd Zeile, who broke the game open with a three-run double in the fourth inning. "I'd love to see a Subway Series. We have some unfinished business with the Yankees."

New York won its fourth NL pennant and first since 1986, joining the 1997 Florida Marlins as the only wild card teams to make the World Series. Hampton won the MVP by pitching 16 scoreless innings and winning two games.

"The team needed a big game," Hampton said. "We're close. We're four wins away from fulfilling that fantasy."

The Mets also earned four days off before beginning the World Series on Saturday, either a train ride away at Yankee Stadium or across the country in Seattle.

"I hope the Yankees win in seven so they burn El Duque (Hernandez) and (Andy) Pettitte," Mets starter Al Leiter said.

The game got testy at the end when Dave Veres hit Jay Payton of the Mets in the helmet with a 1-2 pitch with two outs in the eighth inning. Payton, bleeding over his left eye, charged the mound and the dugouts and bullpens emptied as police in riot gear lined the field.

"There's only one person that ever knows the intent, but nobody's going to stand up and say they were throwing at somebody's head," Payton said.

That was the only thing that could dampen this night for the Mets, who ran a victory lap around a raucous Shea Stadium before heading to the clubhouse for a celebration that spilled back onto the field where Todd Pratt sprayed fans with champagne.

The three-run first off a rusty Pat Hentgen turned baseball's most dangerous pinch hitter into a non-factor once again. Mighty Mark McGwire, limited to pinch-hitting duty because of tendinitis in his right knee, didn't bat until the ninth with the Cardinals down by seven and he grounded out.

Rick Wilkins then flied to center where Timo Perez jumped three times, waving his arms, before making the catch. The Mets poured out of the dugout and bullpen for the second time — this time for a celebration.

Big Mac finished 0-for-2 with an intentional walk.

"In a short series, it comes down to pitching," McGwire said. "They shut us down."

Titans whip Jaguars

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Titans beat their favorite whipping boys, the Jacksonville Jaguars, 27-13 Monday night.

Eddie George ran for 165 yards on 30 carriees, Steve McNair threw for 234 yards and two touchdowns, and Frank Wycheck started things off by catching a TD pass flat on his back. The defense chipped in with five sacks in a game in which a lot of streaks continued.

It was the fifth straight win after an opening-game loss in Buffalo for Tennessee, putting the Titans in first place by themselves in the AFC Central, one-half game ahead of Baltimore.

Mourning out for season

MIAMI (AP) — A common but serious kidney ailment will keep five-time All-Star Alonzo Mourning sidelined for the entire season, depriving the Miami Heat of their biggest star and the key to their quest for an NBA title.

Doctors said that the illness was focal glomerulosclerosis, which leads to kidney failure in about half the cases.

They said there were no immediate plans for a kidney transplant or dialysis. Mourning's condition was discovered during a routine physical two weeks ago.

Dallas police investigate robbery, triple homicide

DALLAS (AP) — Blood soaking through an apartment ceiling led to an upstairs residence where two adults and an infant were found slain.

The trio, who had been dead for as long as five days, had multiple gunshot wounds in what law officers are calling an attack by robbers who took one of the victims' cars.

The decomposing bodies were found Monday night.

"This is very brutal, no justification," police Sgt. Gary Kirkpatrick told The Dallas Morning News in Tuesday's editions. "But to kill three people, we're talking about a cold-blooded killer.

"The baby was less than a year old," he said. "There's no rationalization for that."

Police were called to the scene after neighbors living downstairs noticed the foul smell — and saw the blood seeping through the ceiling.

One of the victims' cars, a light-colored Cadillac, has been listed on a national stolen car index.

Police have not yet released names of the 23-year-old man, a 22-year-old woman and their baby because their identifications Monday night were only tentative.

No arrests have been made.

Family members of the slain man arrived at the apartment complex late Monday but declined to comment.

Police late Monday were interviewing neighbors and identifying stolen property.

Neighbors in the Bent Creek apartment complex said the couple kept mostly to themselves but had a lot of visitors.

"There was a lot of traffic up and down the stairs," one neighbor who didn't want to be identified told the newspaper. "Sometimes it got a little noisy, but they weren't real loud people."

A neighbor who lived in the apartment below the slain family said she called police Monday after she saw blood dripping down the wall from her ceiling.

The woman, who feared for her safety and would not give her name, said she noticed a strong smell on Friday but thought it was only the trash. However, the odor got worse over the weekend and she called the apartment manager's office Monday. She then saw the blood when she returned from work Monday afternoon.

Violence in Mideast shocks tourists and travel industry

NEW YORK (AP) — They planned for months to walk in the footsteps of Jesus, but it took the Rev. Michael Nickolich and his congregants just a few wrenching moments to shelve their dreams of a pilgrimage to the Holy Land.

"I happen to be the shepherd of a flock and I don't want to lead my flock into harm's way," said Nickolich, whose church, Macedonia United Methodist in Alpharetta, Ga., canceled its journey to Israel a few days ago.

That decision reflects growing fears among travelers about violence in the Middle East, resulting in losses for both airlines and travel agents.

In the past few days, travel agents say, a wave of worried travelers have called with questions about safety and, increasingly, they are asking for refunds.

Barry Liben's New York ticketing agency has fielded cancellations from about 70 percent of customers with plans to go to Israel in the next six weeks.

"It's a great time to be there if you like a lot of legroom," said Liben, owner of Tzell Travel Specialists, which deals mostly with air tickets to Israel.

About 25 percent to 30 percent of El Al customers have backed out of travel plans since late last week, causing the Israeli flagship carrier to cut one of six flights from the United States last Wednesday, and one of three scheduled last Thursday and Sunday.

"I lost $25,000 today. That's significant, but it's something we'll get over," John Jansen II of Covenant Tours Inc. said Monday. The Atlanta-based company organizes church tours of the Middle East. "But we certainly can't afford to have weeks of this."

Travelers' fears have been heightened by news reports showing brutal images of bloodshed resulting from fighting in Israel and the Palestinian territories. Those fears have been reinforced by the U.S. State Department, which last week warned Americans to stay away from Israel and to "maintain a high level of vigilance" wherever they go overseas.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

As our Snyder FFA prepares to leave for another national convention to defend our first place title, I would like to remind everyone that this would not be possible if not for the hard work and dedication by our students and their outstanding coach David Frazier. Their continuous work before school, during lunch and after school has brought national recognition for several years. To get to national status they had to win at district, area and state, so you can see this is not just a flash in the pan. Not only do we have winners in team competition but Snyder also has national chorus members chosen from state chorus members. Texas alone had 65 chorus members this year and Snyder has the best. Thanks to David Frazier's encouragement and leadership, the nation will soon know why we have the best among Snyder FFA.

These students do not have a single objective — they have several goals to attain. They keep good grades, they are involved in other activities including athletics, drama, student council, and choir not to mention jobs after school that help pay the gas to get to practice. Mr. Frazier encourages them to be the best at any and everything they do.

Mr. Frazier purchased breeding stock with his own money to use in the animal science classes. Some of the pigs he raised were good enough to use as livestock show projects. He offered these animals to students that were looking for projects. Part of his job is to locate animals for students who want them, Some he finds at sales and most of those are very expensive. Most of our students simply could not afford to spend $500 (to well over $1,000 sometimes) for a pig. Many of the animals he raised he gave away free of charge for students who could not afford an animal but wanted to learn the responsibility of caring for an animal. Taking care of another life is not to be taken lightly. Some of these free animals went on to win and place in the sale, and all students who have animal projects understand the importance of daily, sometimes hourly, care of another life.

As soon as Snyder FFA gets back from nationals we begin contests for a chance to carry on our proud tradition next year at nationals. They have been practicing since August to get ready for 2001. That is dedication.

When you see our hard working students and their dedicated ag teacher tell them to keep up the good work representing our school to the nation.

Thank you,
Jimmy and Janet Stribling

Kellogg, Exxon fight over using tiger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Let the fur fly. Tony the Tiger can go to court against another well-known cartoon trademark: the tiger in the old "Put a Tiger in Your Tank" advertising campaign.

On Monday, oil giant Exxon Mobil Corp. lost a bid to head off a trial over whether its cartoon tiger violates cereal-maker Kellogg Co.'s trademark for Tony. The Supreme Court, without comment, let stand a lower court ruling that it isn't too late for Kellogg to make the trademark claim, even though both trademarked tigers have been around for more than 30 years.

Trial is set for Jan. 16 in federal court in Memphis, Tenn.

"We're pleased that we'll finally be able to present our case," Kellogg spokeswoman Chris Ervin said.

Kellogg contends Exxon retired its tiger in the 1980s, but then came out with new ads in the 1990s featuring a revised tiger promoting various food and convenience items sold at Exxon gas stations.

In a suit filed four years ago, Kellogg claimed the new tiger promotions infringe on the Tony trademark because Exxon was now using its unnamed tiger to sell food, not gasoline. Kellogg said consumers are confused by the similarity between the cartoon tigers and may conclude that Kellogg is somehow behind soda, coffee and other items for sale at Exxon's TigerMart stores.

Shoppers can tell the difference, Exxon spokesman Tom Cirigliano countered Monday.

"The Exxon cartoon tiger has peacefully coexisted with a number of tiger trademarks, including Tony, for many, many years," Cirigliano said. "We're quite confident that consumers recognize the Exxon cartoon tiger and do not confuse it with Tony the Tiger."

He would not speculate on the financial consequences to Exxon if it loses and is required to stop using the tiger to sell food. Kellogg is not trying to stop Exxon from using the figure to sell gasoline.

Tony the Tiger debuted in 1952 and has appeared on every box of Kellogg's Frosted Flakes since. Between 1952 and 1995, the company sold $5.3 billion worth of the cereal, Kellogg said. Millions of children also know Tony as the cereal's gruff-voiced TV pitchman during Saturday morning cartoons.

Exxon, then known as Standard Oil, introduced its cartoon tiger in 1964. The trademarked tiger was used in advertising and in promotional giveaways. Later, a real tiger was used in many ads.

The oil company, the world's largest, has been known as Exxon Mobil since its merger with Mobil Co. last year.

In the appeal acted on Monday, Exxon's lawyers had argued that Kellogg lost the right to sue by waiting so long to do so. Exxon cited a doctrine of law that says even a valid claim can be voided by negligence or laxness in pursuing it.

Exxon argued that other federal courts have interpreted the standard differently in trademark cases, and asked the Supreme Court to settle those differences by declaring the doctrine applies.

Kellogg lawyers, meanwhile, argued that the doctrine should not apply, saying they weren't lax since they were responding to the new ads in the 1990s.

The case now goes back where it started, for a trial before the same federal judge who threw out Kellogg's claims in 1998. The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals later resurrected the case.

Mark Crispin Miller, a New York University professor who studies popular culture and the media, said that while the dispute may seem silly, Kellogg probably has a point. Young children especially are easily confused by similar-looking products and promotions, even when a popular culture figure as famous as Tony the Tiger is involved, Miller said.

"I sort of think Kellogg's legal department would have better things to do, but the point they raise is an interesting one. We don't tend to scrutinize these icons all that carefully," he said. "I think that one vaguely anthropomorphic cartoon tiger looks pretty much like another to most people."

Schools closed and funerals banned as Ebola strikes Uganda

GULU, Uganda (AP) — Ugandan officials closed schools and banned funerals as another 10 Ebola cases were diagnosed Tuesday and the death toll from the deadly virus was at least 35.

Health workers and red cross volunteers attended crash courses on how to contain the epidemic before being sent out to warn people of the highly infectious disease and identify new cases.

At Locar Hospital, an isolation ward was set up for Ebola victims, where they were made as comfortable as possible as the disease takes its course. Nurses and doctors dressed in surgical gear attended to patients in the spartan, communal rooms. There is no cure for this type of hemorraghic fever, which kills up to 90 percent of its victims. It is transmitted through bodily contact, just like the common cold.

The total number of cases has risen to 81, with 35 people confirmed dead from the disease in Gulu district, said Okat Lokach, acting director of health services. He said two ambulances were being used to bring more suspected cases to two hospitals, but that training health workers how to deal with Ebola victims was the top priority.

One doctor and two nurses died while treating Ebola patients, before the diagnosis was made, said Lt. Col. Walter Ochola, chairman of Gulu district. He ordered all schools closed Tuesday and a list of students from the three most infected areas was being compiled.

Ochola said funerals had been banned because the ritual cleansing of the dead had contributed to the spread of the disease. The outbreak has been traced to a funeral, where an entire family had died, Ochola said. Those who took part later went back to their neighborhoods, where the outbreak spread like wildfire. The first case turned up at Locar Hospital on Oct. 8, he said.

What the district needs most is disinfectant, disposable gloves and garments to help stem the spread of the disease, Ochola said. He said they also needed body bags so that victims can be buried safely.

Two experts from the World Health Organization were advising local officials, while three more were expected to arrive in Kampala from Geneva on Tuesday and fly directly to Gulu, 225 miles north of the capital. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control also was sending experts.

"We need to train people to handle the patients before we send them into these areas," said Dr. Nestor Ndayimirije, a WHO epidemiologist. His colleague was training more than 100 health workers and Red Cross volunteers in a nearby meeting hall.

Two international aid organizations, the International Committee of the Red Cross and the U.S.-based Catholic Relief Services, have withdrawn expatriate staff from the affected region, officials said in Kampala.

Other agencies, including the U.N.'s World Food Program which feeds some 200,000 people displaced by rebel attacks in northern Uganda, were monitoring the situation.

There were reports that two people have died of the disease.

In the year ahead, a number of significant opportunities could be in the offing. Get busy developing them, and don't forget to give credit to those who helped you along the way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Any critical assignment or responsibility you neglect to take care of immediately today will come back and bite you in the face before the day is out. It won't be pretty.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Finding yourself with the same poor results in a similar social situation you didn't handle too well in the past is due to your inability to learn from your lessons.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Chances are you will be capable of holding your own in a testy situation that arises today, but at what cost? If it takes nasty treatment to get the upper hand, you'll be the loser in the end.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Choosing a poor social group today could put you in the company of people who'll make you feel either unwelcome or uncomfortable. Don't put yourself in that cage.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Situations where you utilize logic and reality have a chance of being successful today. However, in developments where your ego governs your actions, setbacks will be the order of the day.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Those who treat you the way you think you should be treated will be met with amicability today, but should you run into someone who disagrees with you, you won't hesitate to come down hard.

Alternative treatments for acne

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 19. For five years I've taken 1,000 milligrams of tetracycline daily for acne. Can this be harmful? Would L-lysine and bee-pollen tablets be a suitable alternative?

DEAR READER: Acne, a common skin disorder marked by a plugging of follicles leading to infection, is often helped by tetracycline. This antibiotic seems to have benefits over and above its germ-killing properties; it may actually alter the skin's chemistry, thereby reducing the tendency of inflammation.

Customarily, acne patients are prescribed tetracycline in full doses (250 mg four times a day on an empty stomach) and, as improvement appears, the dose of drug is reduced. This usually takes about a month.

Thereafter, patients are placed on maintenance (250 to 500 mg daily), depending on the severity of the skin disease and its response to therapy. At this low dose, tetracycline can safely be continued for years. The major side effects of tetracycline (vaginal yeast infections and sun sensitivity) are rarely a problem for patients taking one or two antibiotic pills a day.

You seem to be taking more than you need. Is your tetracycline not as effective as you had hoped? Is it losing its punch? If so, you might have more success with other prescription compounds, such as Tretinoin (Retin-A, a cream that causes the outer, dead layer of skin to shed, reducing infection) or Iso-tretinoin (Accutane, a pill that changes the secretion of skin oils and inhibits infection). Ask your doctor about these drugs — or, if you wish, see a dermatologist for further advice.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Since I married my wife about two years ago, we have enjoyed sex every day. Is this harmful to health? Now that she is five months pregnant, are we still permitted to have sex?

DEAR READER: There is no hard-and-fast (forgive the pun) rule about what frequency of sex is appropriate. Young couples, who are healthy and in their reproductive prime, have traditionally enjoyed frequent sex — often once or twice a day. This is not a health hazard in any way, providing both partners are willing participants. (Unfortunately, in some instances, the female is more likely to comply than to initiate, making sex seem more a duty than a treat. Such a problem would need to be worked out.)

As we age, sex becomes less frequent and — in middle-age and beyond — less intense. There are many reasons for this, including the effects of growing older, familiarity with a partner, depression, stress and so forth. Thus, as we move through adulthood, our patterns of sexual expression predictably change. This is a normal process to which each of us must, in one way or another, adapt.

The issue of sexual intercourse during pregnancy is one that I leave to the obstetrician to address on a case-by-case basis. The customary practice is to allow such relations until the wife is uncomfortable or there is some medical reason, such as a high-risk pregnancy, to desist. Of course, other methods of sexual release (that do not require penetration) are completely appropriate and have been used for centuries by expectant couples. Your wife should ask her obstetrician's advice about this very personal topic.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Where to Find Sex Information." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE VISITS — Darrell Clements, Republican candidate for the 17th congressional district, visited the Scurry County Republican headquarters Monday and chatted with county GOP chairman Drew Bullard (right). As a conservative voice in Washington, Clements said he would support tax relief, work for repeal of the marriage penalty, elimination of the death tax and a cut in the capital gains tax rate. Clements, who is challenging Democratic incumbent Charlie Stenholm, also supports protecting social security, strengthening national defense and would demand foreign aid accountability. Gore, Bush ready for third debate

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Republican George W. Bush and Democrat Al Gore prepared to perch on stools and take voters' questions in a crucial third debate, with the sudden death of Missouri Gov. Mel Carnahan casting a pall over their final meeting.

After talk of cancellation or postponement for mourning, plans were made early Tuesday to continue the 9 p.m. EDT event in St. Louis on schedule, officials of both campaigns said.

"We're all waking up, honestly, to the tragedy and the pain of it and the shock of it," Democratic vice presidential candidate Joseph Lieberman said Tuesday morning on CNN.

Carnahan, a Democrat who was running for the Senate, campaigned with Gore whenever the vice president was in Missouri and would have accompanied him aboard Air Force II to a Kansas City rally on Wednesday. Gore called Carnahan's wife, Jean, Monday night after news that the governor was killed in the crash of a small plane, aides said.

Bush's wife, Laura, canceled plans for a morning rally. Bush campaign officials also decided to tone down a post-debate rally, and were even considering canceling it. Gore hadn't planned any campaign events before the debate.

The Bush and Gore campaigns decided to continue the debate after a series of pre-dawn phone calls with the debate commission's executive director, Janet Brown. Eventually, Brown recommended that the event should go on, and both sides agreed, according to campaign officials who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The commission was expected to announce the plans later Tuesday, with each candidate given time at the debate's start to say a few words about Carnahan.

Bomb-making equipment found

ADEN, Yemen (AP) — Yemeni investigators have found bomb-making equipment in a house near the port of Aden and believe two men who spent several days there are linked to the bombing of the USS Cole, security officials said Tuesday.

Also Tuesday, the bodies of seven of the 17 victims were removed from the ship, leaving five still concealed in the wreckage.

The security officials identified the men believed linked to the blast, who have disappeared, only as non-Yemeni Arabs. Other Yemeni officials said they were Saudi.

The disclosure comes a day after Yemen reversed its earlier position and called the blast "a premeditated criminal act."

Yemen's new stance gave a crucial boost to the investigation. The country's security forces interrogated dozens of port workers and others Monday, including the head of the company that services U.S. warships.

Several people remained in a highly guarded camp on Aden's outskirts but it was unclear whether they were considered firm suspects in the explosion that tore a 40-by-40-foot hole in the destroyer.

The security officials bomb-making materials were found when the house was searched Monday. They did not elaborate on the materials.

The men were believed to have entered Yemen four days before Thursday's bombing, the officials said. They did not say which country the men had traveled from.

Involved were a 1996 Geo Prizm driven by Alvin Bennett, 53, of 4103 Midland and a 1994 Ford F-350 pickup pulling a 1996 utility flatbed trailer and driven by Jose Luis Carbajal, 35, of 115 Browning.

According to Blackley, the Geo was traveling south on 1609 in a double line no passing zone attempting to slow down and turn left when the Ford struck it on the rear left side.

Both drivers were transported by Snyder EMS to Cogdell Memorial Hospital for treatment.

At 5:57 p.m. Monday, a two-vehicle accident occurred in the 3700 block of College involving a 1996 Ford Ranger pickup and a 2000 Ford Taurus.
