Fire shuts A-plant

LACEY TOWNSHIP, N.J. — A brush fire blackened 5,000 acres, forcing the closure of a nuclear power plant and evacuation of a senior citizens development before it was contained Sunday. Tom Tansley, a state fire warden, said the blaze began in a dry wooded area and quickly spread across the Garden State Parkway toward the Oyster Creek Nuclear Generating Station. More than 10 miles of northbound and southbound lanes of the parkway were closed and the nearby senior citizen development was evacuated, Tansley said.

Dr. Lee Salk dies

NEW YORK — Dr. Lee Salk, the author of eight books on family relationships and a popular commentator on social change, domestic strife and changing family patterns, died Saturday at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in Manhattan. He was 65 and lived in Manhattan. He died of cancer, his wife, Mary Jane, said. A child psychologist, Salk made frequent television appearances. His wide-ranging reflections upon changing American values and fundamental human needs included everything from pop culture (the psychological significance of the cowboy archetype) to contemporary society (the trauma of divorce), to biology (the role and importance of a baby's cry).

Racism in ranks?

FORT WORTH — The Cooperative Baptist Fellowship, a moderate group of about 900 member churches nationwide, has taken a stand against racism within the denomination's ranks. "We reject forthrightly the racism which has persisted throughout our history as Southern Baptists, even to this present day," the group said in a resolution passed Saturday during a three-day meeting here. The group, based in Atlanta, is a fledgling organization of Baptists whose beliefs are more liberal than the fundamentalist-dominated Southern Baptist Convention.

Spending spree

KUWAIT — The Kuwaiti government is in the middle of a seemingly unrestrained multi-billion-dollar spending spree, raising fears among Kuwaiti economists and opposition figures that this once fabulously wealthy nation could end up in debt in a matter of just a few years. Much of the money is going to meet the huge expenses of the Persian Gulf War and rebuilding in the aftermath of the country's occupation by Iraq. /3A

Officials order probes into delays

By Rick Orlov
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and Gov. Pete Wilson have ordered separate inquiries into delays in the deployment of Los Angeles police officers and National Guard troops following the outbreak of violence last week.

The orders Sunday came amid growing criticism of Police Chief Daryl F. Gates over the way the Los Angeles Police Department responded to the outbreak of violence Wednesday afternoon and of state and local authorities for the delay in getting National Guard troops on the scene.

Mayor considers lifting dusk-to-dawn curfew today.

By Don Terry
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The streets of riot-weary Los Angeles were calm for a second day on Sunday, as federal troops joined law-enforcement patrols, and cleanup efforts accelerated. Mayor Tom Bradley said he hoped to lift the city's dusk-to-dawn curfew today.

Across the city, many grocery stores and gas stations shuttered during the riots were open but with added and armed security, and longer lines. Basketball courts and soccer fields were crowded for the first time in days, and the Los Angeles Unified School District announced that classes would resume today at the district's nearly 700 schools. Pastors at churches in South-Central Los Angeles, and indeed throughout the country, spoke of the need for healing and compassion.

But as the immediate crisis seemed to abate, the deeper problems that under-

Group cleans up city's south side

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

If Daniel and Katie McAfee's 10-year-old daughter wants to play barefoot in the sand at a local park, she doesn't have to worry about stepping on glass.

That's because her parents and about 10 others recently cleaned out the dangerous debris.

"We don't have jobs. This is our job, but we don't get paid for it," McAfee said.

Every Wednesday the group — which calls itself the Midland Black Action Group — can be found pulling weeds, picking up trash or whatever else is needed at southeast-side parks and vacant lots.

"If it needs cleaning, we go for it," member Brenda White said.

"We're doing it because it's an eyesore on this side of town," McAfee said.

"It's got to be done because it makes my community look good — look as good as the white community," he said.

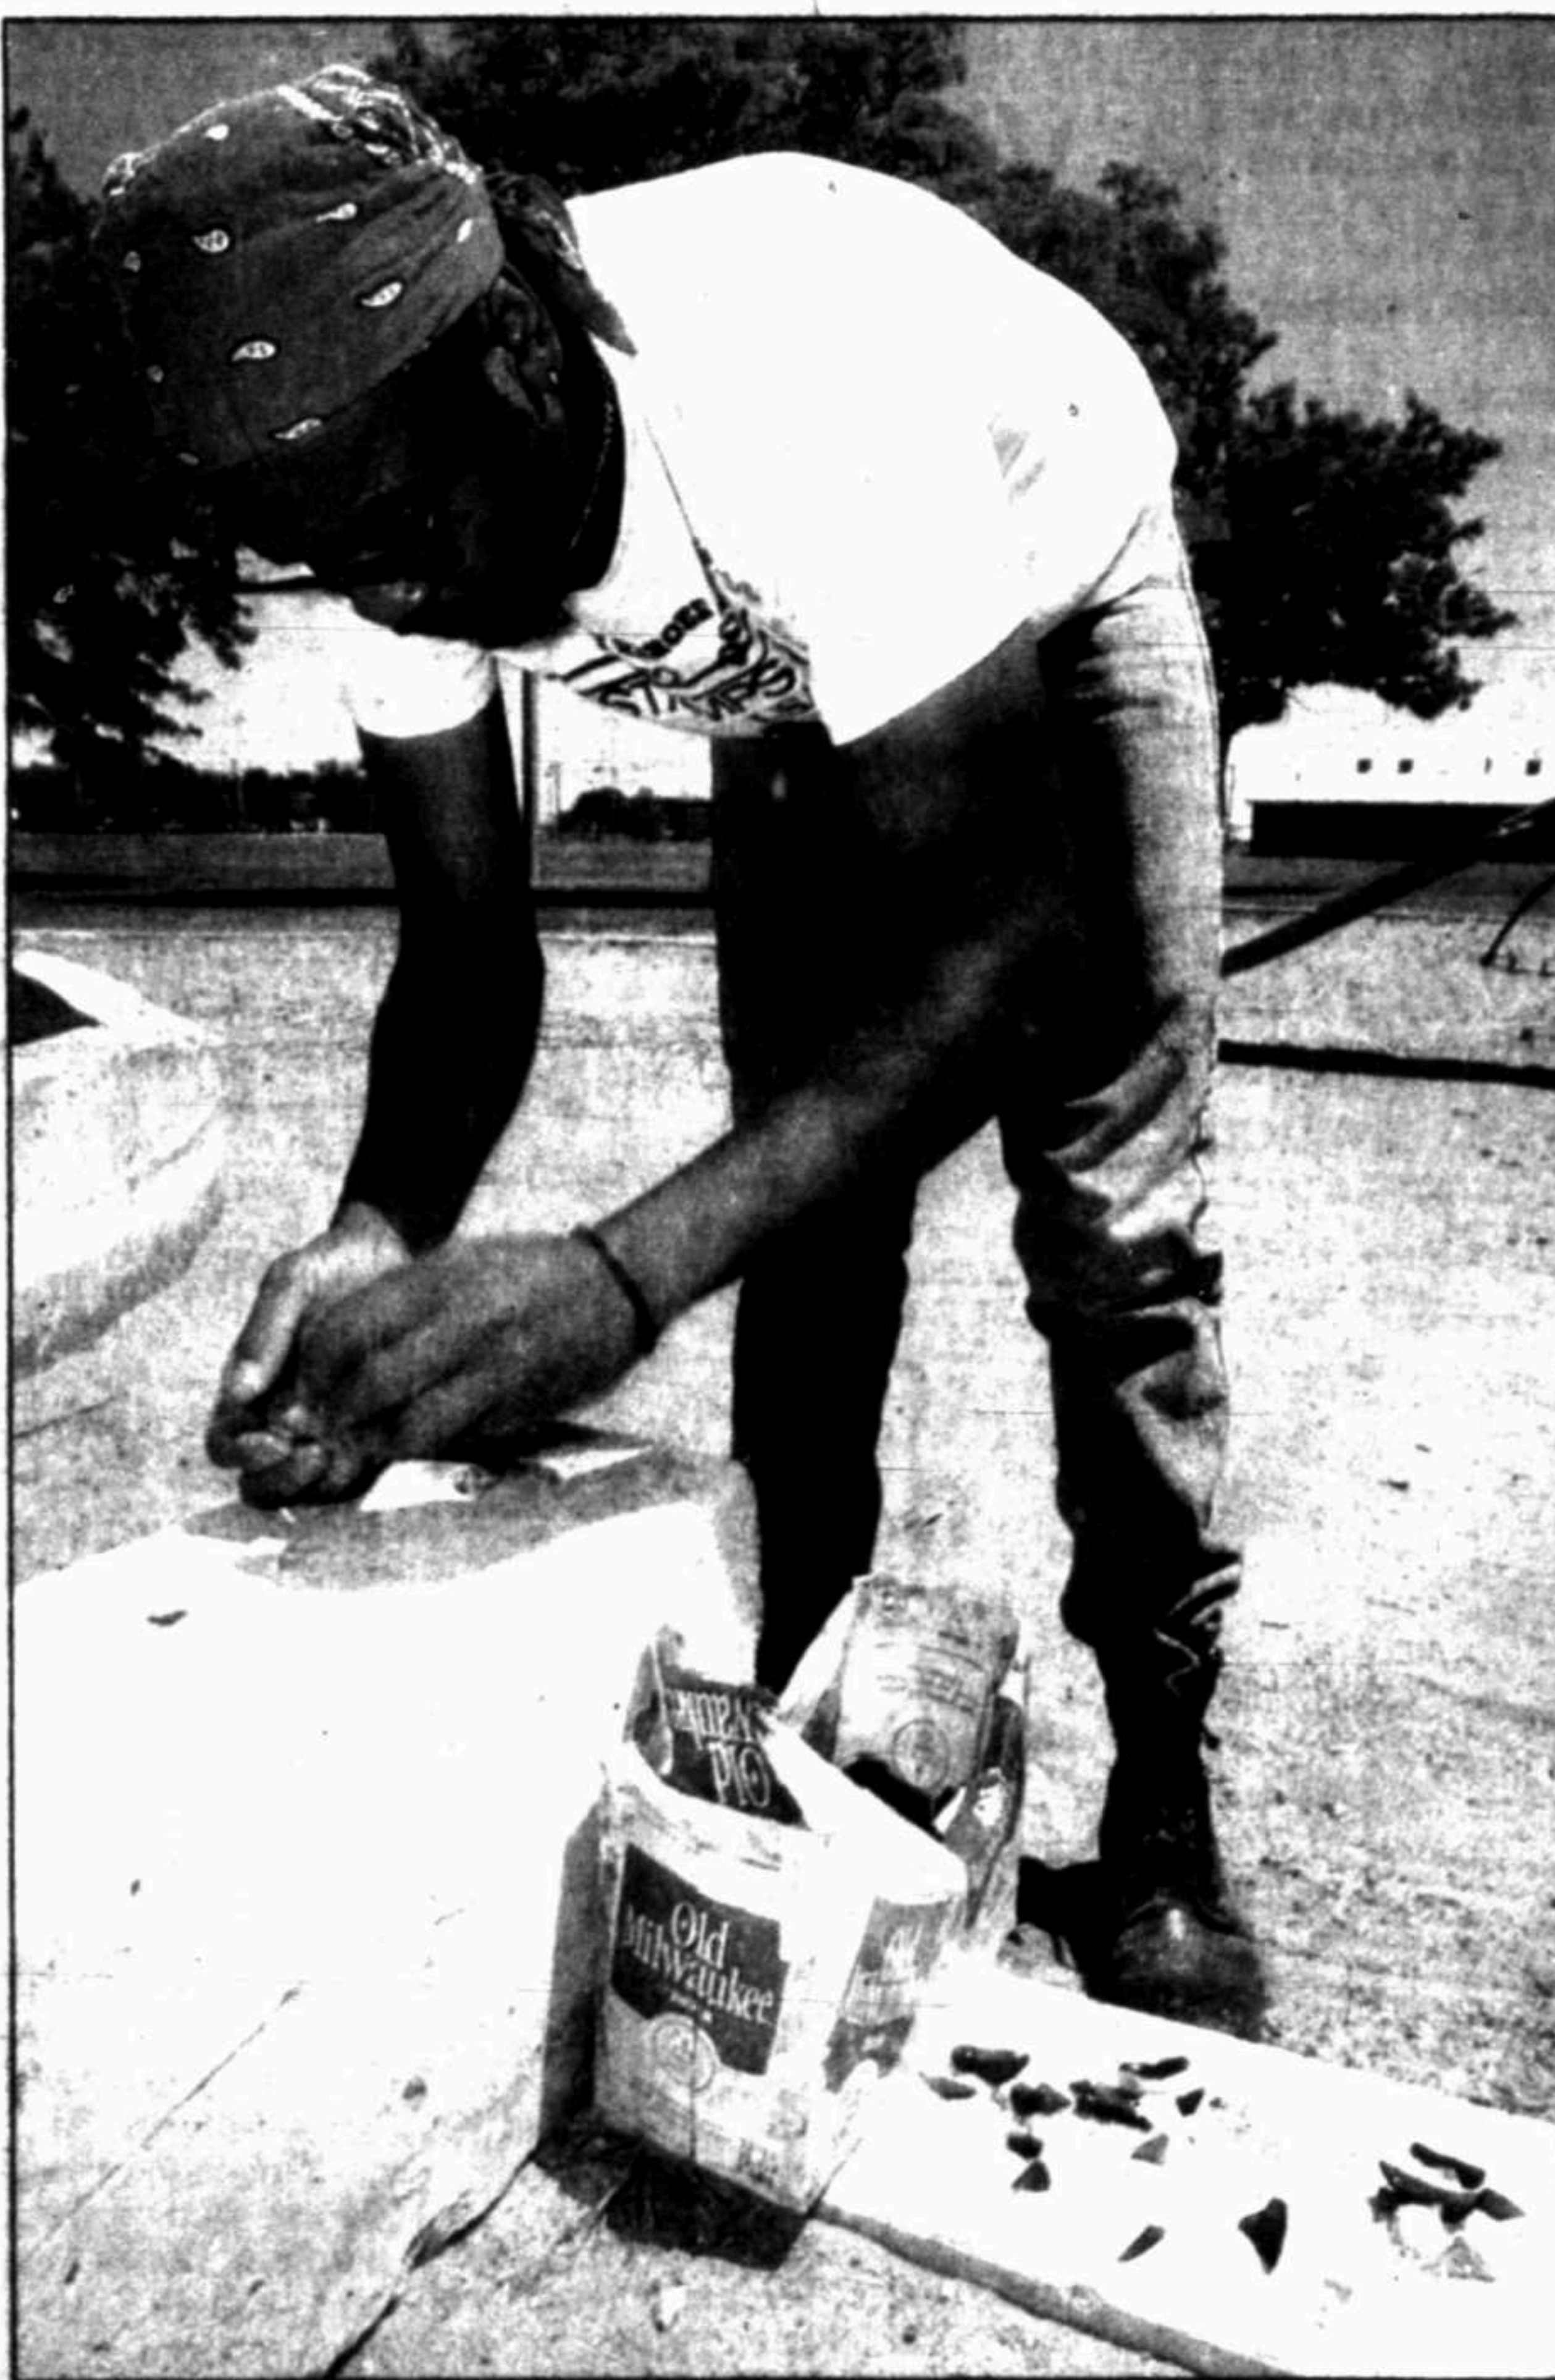

McAfee said he wants to clean his neighborhood not only for his community but for the respect and awareness of the rest of Midland.

Unfortunately, outsiders have negative views of the southeast side and stereotype the unemployed blacks as "hanging out" on street corners selling drugs, the group said. Many of the group are unemployed although not all.

"We want to change the view of black people, not just the south side," Frank Dunn said.

"All we want is positive because all we project is positive," McAfee said.

Soviets sank nuclear waste in Arctic seas, Russia reveals

By Patrick E. Tyler
N.Y. Times News Service

MURMANSK, Russia — For three decades the nuclear-powered Soviet navy and icebreaking fleet have dumped much of their radioactive waste in the Arctic, the Russian authorities now acknowledge.

The dumping, in the shallow waters of the Barents and Kara seas, has potentially serious consequences for the Arctic environment.

At greatest risk for Norway and Russia, two of the world's biggest fish exporters, are the bountiful Arctic fishing grounds.

Radioactive contamination in the shallow seas where the marine food chain begins could contaminate the fish population and endanger the industry, officials of both countries said in interviews.

Norwegian scientists who have been testing the Barents and Norwegian seas for several years have detected no significant radioactive contamination in the water and in fish.

But the director of the nuclear energy safety authority in Oslo said waters near the dumping sites had not been tested and sunken waste containers a few hundred feet below the surface could pose a serious environmental threat over decades as they begin to leak.

Reports about the dumping practices were first made last fall by a member of the old Soviet Parliament who is a radio-

Gorbachev visits Reagan at ranch

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev visited Ronald Reagan at his mountain ranch Sunday, and the old Cold War foes and their wives discussed such matters as travel, horses, home improvements and real estate prices.

"I'm very happy they're here. We've been waiting a long time for this," Reagan said as he and his wife, Nancy, posed with the former Soviet leader and his wife, Raisa, by the ranch's Lucky Lake and a canoe named Truluv.

Gorbachev, on a two-week U.S. tour, was taken for a spin around the 688-acre Rancho del Cielo in a Jeep bearing the license plate "GIPPER." Both former

Concern grows over older drivers, safety

By Barry Meier
N.Y. Times News Service

Federal and state regulators are struggling to deal with one of the most vexing and fastest-growing roadway safety issues — identifying the older drivers who pose a hazard while not discriminating against those who don't.

The number of motorists over 65 years old has doubled over the past 20 years. And while older people, as a group, have a lower rate of fatal accidents than teenagers, their fatal-accident rates based on miles driven are among the highest, according to federal data.

Scientific research also suggests that reflexes and cognitive skills critical to driving deteriorate markedly after age 75.

But groups representing older motorists, as well as many researchers, are fiercely opposed to additional driving tests for the aging. And they argue that in a society reliant on automobiles, older people not only need driver's licenses, but see them as powerful symbols of self-worth.

"As a nation, we have turned away from the problems of older people, and transportation is no exception," said Sam Yaksich Jr., executive director of the Automobile Association of America's Foundation for Traffic Safety. "Aging is something we don't like, and we've tried to block it out."

Nazi camp's survivors, liberators share tears

By Kevin Costelloe
Associated Press writer

DACHAU, Germany — Mendel Zack broke down in tears Sunday as memories of his captivity in Dachau overwhelmed him, and U.S. Army veteran Sol Feingold, standing nearby, reached out to comfort him.

The moment symbolized the bond shared by the notorious Nazi camp's survivors and their American rescuers, 41 of whom returned to Dachau for the unveiling of a plaque commemorating the camp's liberation on April 29, 1945.

Zack, a Polish-born Jew, remembers as if it was yesterday. He was too weak to walk, down to about 80 pounds, when the Americans arrived.

Clinton lays fall plans with gritty confidence

By Robin Toner

WASHINGTON — Bill Clinton says he will not be another Michael S. Dukakis. If President Bush's press secretary wants to throw around slurs like "Slippery Bill," as he did last week, Clinton says he will counter.

Very quickly, he demonstrates: Bush could be the "poster child of 1992 on slickness."

But in an interview last weekend, the Arkansas governor and likely Democratic nominee talked of bigger challenges than holding his own in partisan sniping. Before he can translate discontent into Democratic votes, he said, he must

Fears rise as Kuwait goes on spending spree

KUWAIT (NYT) — The Kuwaiti government is in the middle of a seemingly unrestrained multi-billion-dollar spending spree, raising fears among Kuwaiti economists and opposition figures that this once fabulously wealthy nation could end up in debt in a matter of just a few years.

While much of the money is going to meet the huge expenses of the Persian Gulf War and rebuilding in the aftermath of the country's occupation by Iraq, billions of dollars are committed to programs that critics are calling unwise.

For instance, the government plans to bail out private Kuwaiti banks by assuming all their bad loans to Kuwaitis, many of whom are said to be well-connected billionaires and members of the ruling royal family who could easily repay.

Recent government spending commitments add up to at least $65 billion, or more than two-thirds of Kuwait's estimated assets of $100 billion, held abroad in the form of real estate, stocks, treasury bonds and cash.

Government officials say the spending programs are vital to economic recovery and prudent in light of expected oil income.

But many Kuwaitis and foreign diplomats say that as spending rises and income from the vital oil industry remains relatively low because of heavy damage inflicted by the Iraqis, there is a clear risk that all of Kuwait's reserves will be quickly wiped out, stripping the country of financial security.

That could discourage Kuwaitis from investing in the country and prompt the government to reverse basic elements of the most generous welfare state in the world, one that imposes no taxes and provides free health care and schooling to its citizens.

"They are not broke, but they are like a billionaire who's been cut down to a millionaire," said a Western diplomat who follows Kuwaiti affairs closely, speaking on condition that he not be identified.

"They may be heading for rough times if they don't slow down, stretch out or cancel some programs in the next couple of years."

In the last two months, the Kuwaiti government has authorized arms purchases and repairs in the oil industry to the tune of up to $20 billion, and approved the bank bailout program covering $20 billion in bad loans owed by its citizens and businesses.

This month the government wrote off telephone, water and electricity bills that were past due to state-owned utilities over the last year and half.

And with the country's population nearly halved by the exodus brought on by the Iraqi invasion, the government is proposing to buy hundreds of empty apartment buildings from adversely affected Kuwaiti landlords, adding several hundred million dollars more to its obligations. In addition, significant increases in government salaries have been granted.

The total cost of rehabilitating Kuwait's oil industry is put at $8 billion to $10 billion, none of which is covered by insurance.

This year, for the first time in decades, the government approved a deficit in the federal budget, a shortfall of $18 billion in a spending plan of $21 billion.

"Do we have the money?" said Abdallah al-Nibari, an economist who is a former member of Parliament and a leading figure in the Democratic Forum, an opposition group. "This is a big question."

Rebels clash with militia; battles erupt near Kabul

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Radical guerrilla leader Gulbuddin Hekmatyar's troops fought with an unpopular militia on the outskirts of the capital Sunday, and a despised judge of the ousted Marxist regime was murdered.

Hekmatyar's fighters also were blamed for a series of rocket attacks on Kabul. But the rebel chieftain lifted a blockade, allowing grain and other desperately needed supplies to be trucked into the city Sunday.

Small-scale battles erupted sporadically on the southern approaches to Kabul. Hekmatyar's forces fired grenades and machine guns at troops of the Dostum militia, a formally pro-communist group that now backs the interim government that took power after the fall of President Najibullah.

Hekmatyar loyalists were forced out of Kabul last week after several days of intense fighting with Dostum troops and fighters in the rebel coalition led by Ahmed Shah Masood, a bitter rival of Hekmatyar.

Hekmatyar said Sunday that he would not support the interim government unless the Dostum militia was ousted from Kabul, an action that would seriously weaken Masood's force.

The persistent fighting highlights the problem the leaders of Afghanistan's various rebel factions are having in bringing peace after 14 years of war against a series of Soviet-backed governments.

Serb-led Yugoslav army frees Bosnia's president

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Federal army officials freed Bosnia's president Sunday in exchange for soldiers' safe passage from the capital, but militia fighters attacked the departing convoy.

President Alija Izetbegovic, a Muslim, was held for 24 hours by the Serb-led Yugoslav military while some of the worst clashes of the 2-month-old ethnic civil war raged in Sarajevo.

Izetbegovic arrived at the Bosnian presidency building as embattled federal soldiers pulled out of the city in a column of 20 trucks. White-painted U.N. armored personnel carriers accompanied the convoy.

But Muslim and ethnic Croat fighters trapped half the trucks and apparently commandeered some, said Colm Doyle, a European Community envoy who helped negotiate the swap.

Gen. Milutin Kukanjac, the local federal army commander, was at the head of the convoy, but escaped. Belgrade TV quoted him as saying some soldiers had been stripped and killed. Witnesses also said some drivers were shot and loads of weapons taken.

An army statement released early today in Belgrade said two army colonels were among those killed. The army accused Izetbegovic and two other members of Bosnia's collective presidency of planning the ambush.

The attack violated a cease-fire pact reached late Saturday and could threaten reported peace talks between Izetbegovic and Ku-kanjac scheduled for today.

Sarajevo was battered by federal artillery Saturday after Bosnian forces surrounded federal army compounds. Ethnic Serbs later attacked in fierce street fighting.

No full casualty figure was available, but at least seven federal soldiers were reported killed. The EC said at least 18 people died before fighting eased with a cease-fire agreement.

At least 350 people have died in fighting since Muslims and ethnic Croats voted Feb. 29 to split from Yugoslavia — a move opposed by ethnic Serbs, who make up about a third of the population.

Izetbegovic was detained in an army barracks on Sarajevo's outskirts after returning from EC-brokered peace talks in Portugal. His freedom came in exchange for the federal soldiers' safe passage.

DRIVERS: Regulators struggle with vexing, fast-growing issues consistent, even contradictory. While a few states require older motorists to take added tests, most do not. In some places, doctors are urged to alert regulators about patients who may pose a hazard behind the wheel; elsewhere, complaints from family members are ignored.

And while regulators and researchers search for answers, tens of thousands of Americans each year must decide what to do about an aging relative or friend whose driving skills are fading.

The issue has been brought to the fore by two recent incidents. On April 23, a 74-year-old woman lost control of her car and it careened through Washington Square Park in New York killing five people.

And on Thursday, a car driven by an 87-year-old man plowed into a group of third-graders at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago, killing a young girl and injuring dozens of others.

Investigators in both incidents are focusing on driver error as a possible cause, although the car in the Chicago accident had been recalled for an accelerator problem.

Both drivers reported stepping on the brakes but may have accidentally stepped on the accelerator at the same time.

To be sure, cars can malfunction, and motorists of all ages cause accidents. Drivers 16 to 19, for example, have the highest rate of traffic fatalities of all drivers, federal statistics show.

But accidents in which older drivers lose control of their vehicles are so common in retirement areas like Florida that they are sometimes referred to as cases of "s.e.a." or "sudden elder acceleration."

Multiple car crashes at intersections also increase markedly with age because older drivers often do not react quickly enough to stop at red lights or stop signs, according to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, an industry-sponsored research group in Arlington,

Va. "We see older people coming into here all the time," said Dr. Charles Hartness, an emergency room doctor at St. Vincent's Hospital in Portland, Ore. "Most of the time, the accident is not serious, but then you pull their record and find out they had an accident six months earlier and another one three months before that."

While many researchers say many older people are safe drivers who sense their declining skills and prefer not to drive at night or on high-speed roads, concerns are building as the American driver grows grayer.

In 1990, about 22 million of the 167 million licensed drivers in this country, or 13 percent, were over 65, according to federal data. And a number of studies predict that the percentage of older people driving will grow markedly in the years ahead, with the fastest-growing group those over 85.

A 1988 report on aging drivers by the National Research Council, an arm of the National Academy of Sciences, found that, while there was no basis to restrict driving on the basis of age alone, after age 75 drivers are twice as likely to be involved in an accident based on miles driven.

"It is not panic time," said Michael Brownlee, the associate director for traffic safety of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. "But older drivers are a greater presence on the road, and we need to prepare for it better."

Some small changes are already under way. Signs on some highways, like the New York State Thruway, are being enlarged or made more reflective so older motorists can see them better at night.

Most signs are designed to be visible at 50 feet, a standard too difficult for the eyesight of 40 percent of all drivers 65 to 74, the 1988 National Research Council report found.

But how policymakers will come to grips with monitoring an older driving population is not clear.

Though at least a dozen states, including Illinois, New Hampshire and California, have laws requiring more frequent physical examinations, road tests or license renewals for older motorists, similar rules in other states are unlikely, said most experts.

WASTE: Soviet dumping has potentially serious consequences

tion engineer with the state company that operates the icebreaking fleet from this port. The charges became more detailed through the winter as other witnesses stepped forward after the collapse of the Soviet Union.

After meetings last month between Russian and Norwegian government officials, the Russian environmental authorities told their Norwegian counterparts that the reports were essentially correct and that they would cooperate in what could be a huge and costly international cleanup effort.

The first scientific expedition to map the dumping sites and test for contamination is scheduled to start on July 10 and will include 20 researchers from six countries aboard a Russian ship.

"At this stage, we would like to go down to the bottom with diving equipment and really see the waste itself," said Knut Gussgard, Norway's nuclear safety director. "We would like to see whether it is barrels or parts of submarines and reactors and we would like to take measurements and samples because we are concerned about future contamination from really big sources over 10 to 100 years."

Norwegian authorities say fish testing near Norway's waters has shown radioactive contamination that barely registers and may be attributed to historic contamination from such sources as atmospheric testing and the Chernobyl disaster.

Some of the worst dumping occurred in the 1960s and 1970s, but radioactive wastes were dumped throughout the 1980s. The navy's dumping continued until last year, said Andrei Zolotkov, a radiation safety engineer in Murmansk Shipping Co., the state enterprise that operates the nuclear-powered icebreakers.

He first researched and compiled the dumping allegations while a member of the Soviet Parliament.

Other officials suspect that some dumping may still be going on, although in 1976 the Soviet Union signed an international protocol outlawing dumping in shallow seas.

One account of the dumping given by international environmental organizations by Zolotkov indicates that at least 12 nuclear reactors were disposed of in shallow gulfs off Novaya Zemlya, the large Arctic island that the Soviet Union has used as a nuclear test range since the early 1950s.

A complete submarine that suffered a major reactor accident is believed to be sunk nearby.

Jim Miller, sitting at the head of the table, has breakfast with fellow widowers from the Friends Who Care group. Jim participates in many of the group's activities.

Jim plays cards at Hospice House, which sponsors the Friends Who Care.

Starting Over

Listen, there isn't a Mrs. Miller," he tells the caller, a vacuum cleaner salesperson who wants to speak to the woman of the house.

In Jim Miller's case, that would be his dog, Heidi.

Miller's wife died of cancer three years ago. Now he and Heidi, an energetic, 8-year-old dachshund, share a small home in west Midland.

A former pharmacist, salesman and volunteer firefighter who still refurbishes antique furniture, Miller said he felt very lonely for at least a year after his wife's death. He joined a church and met a few people his age, but found they were all busy with their own lives.

"It's kind of a lonesome life, I'll tell you that," Miller said. He and Heidi moved to Midland just more than a year ago.

When they awaken, the two share breakfast. She drinks the milk left in his cereal bowl. After she takes a few minutes outside, they sit together in a chair and watch television.

"I used to not have much to do, so it was kind of like that every day,"

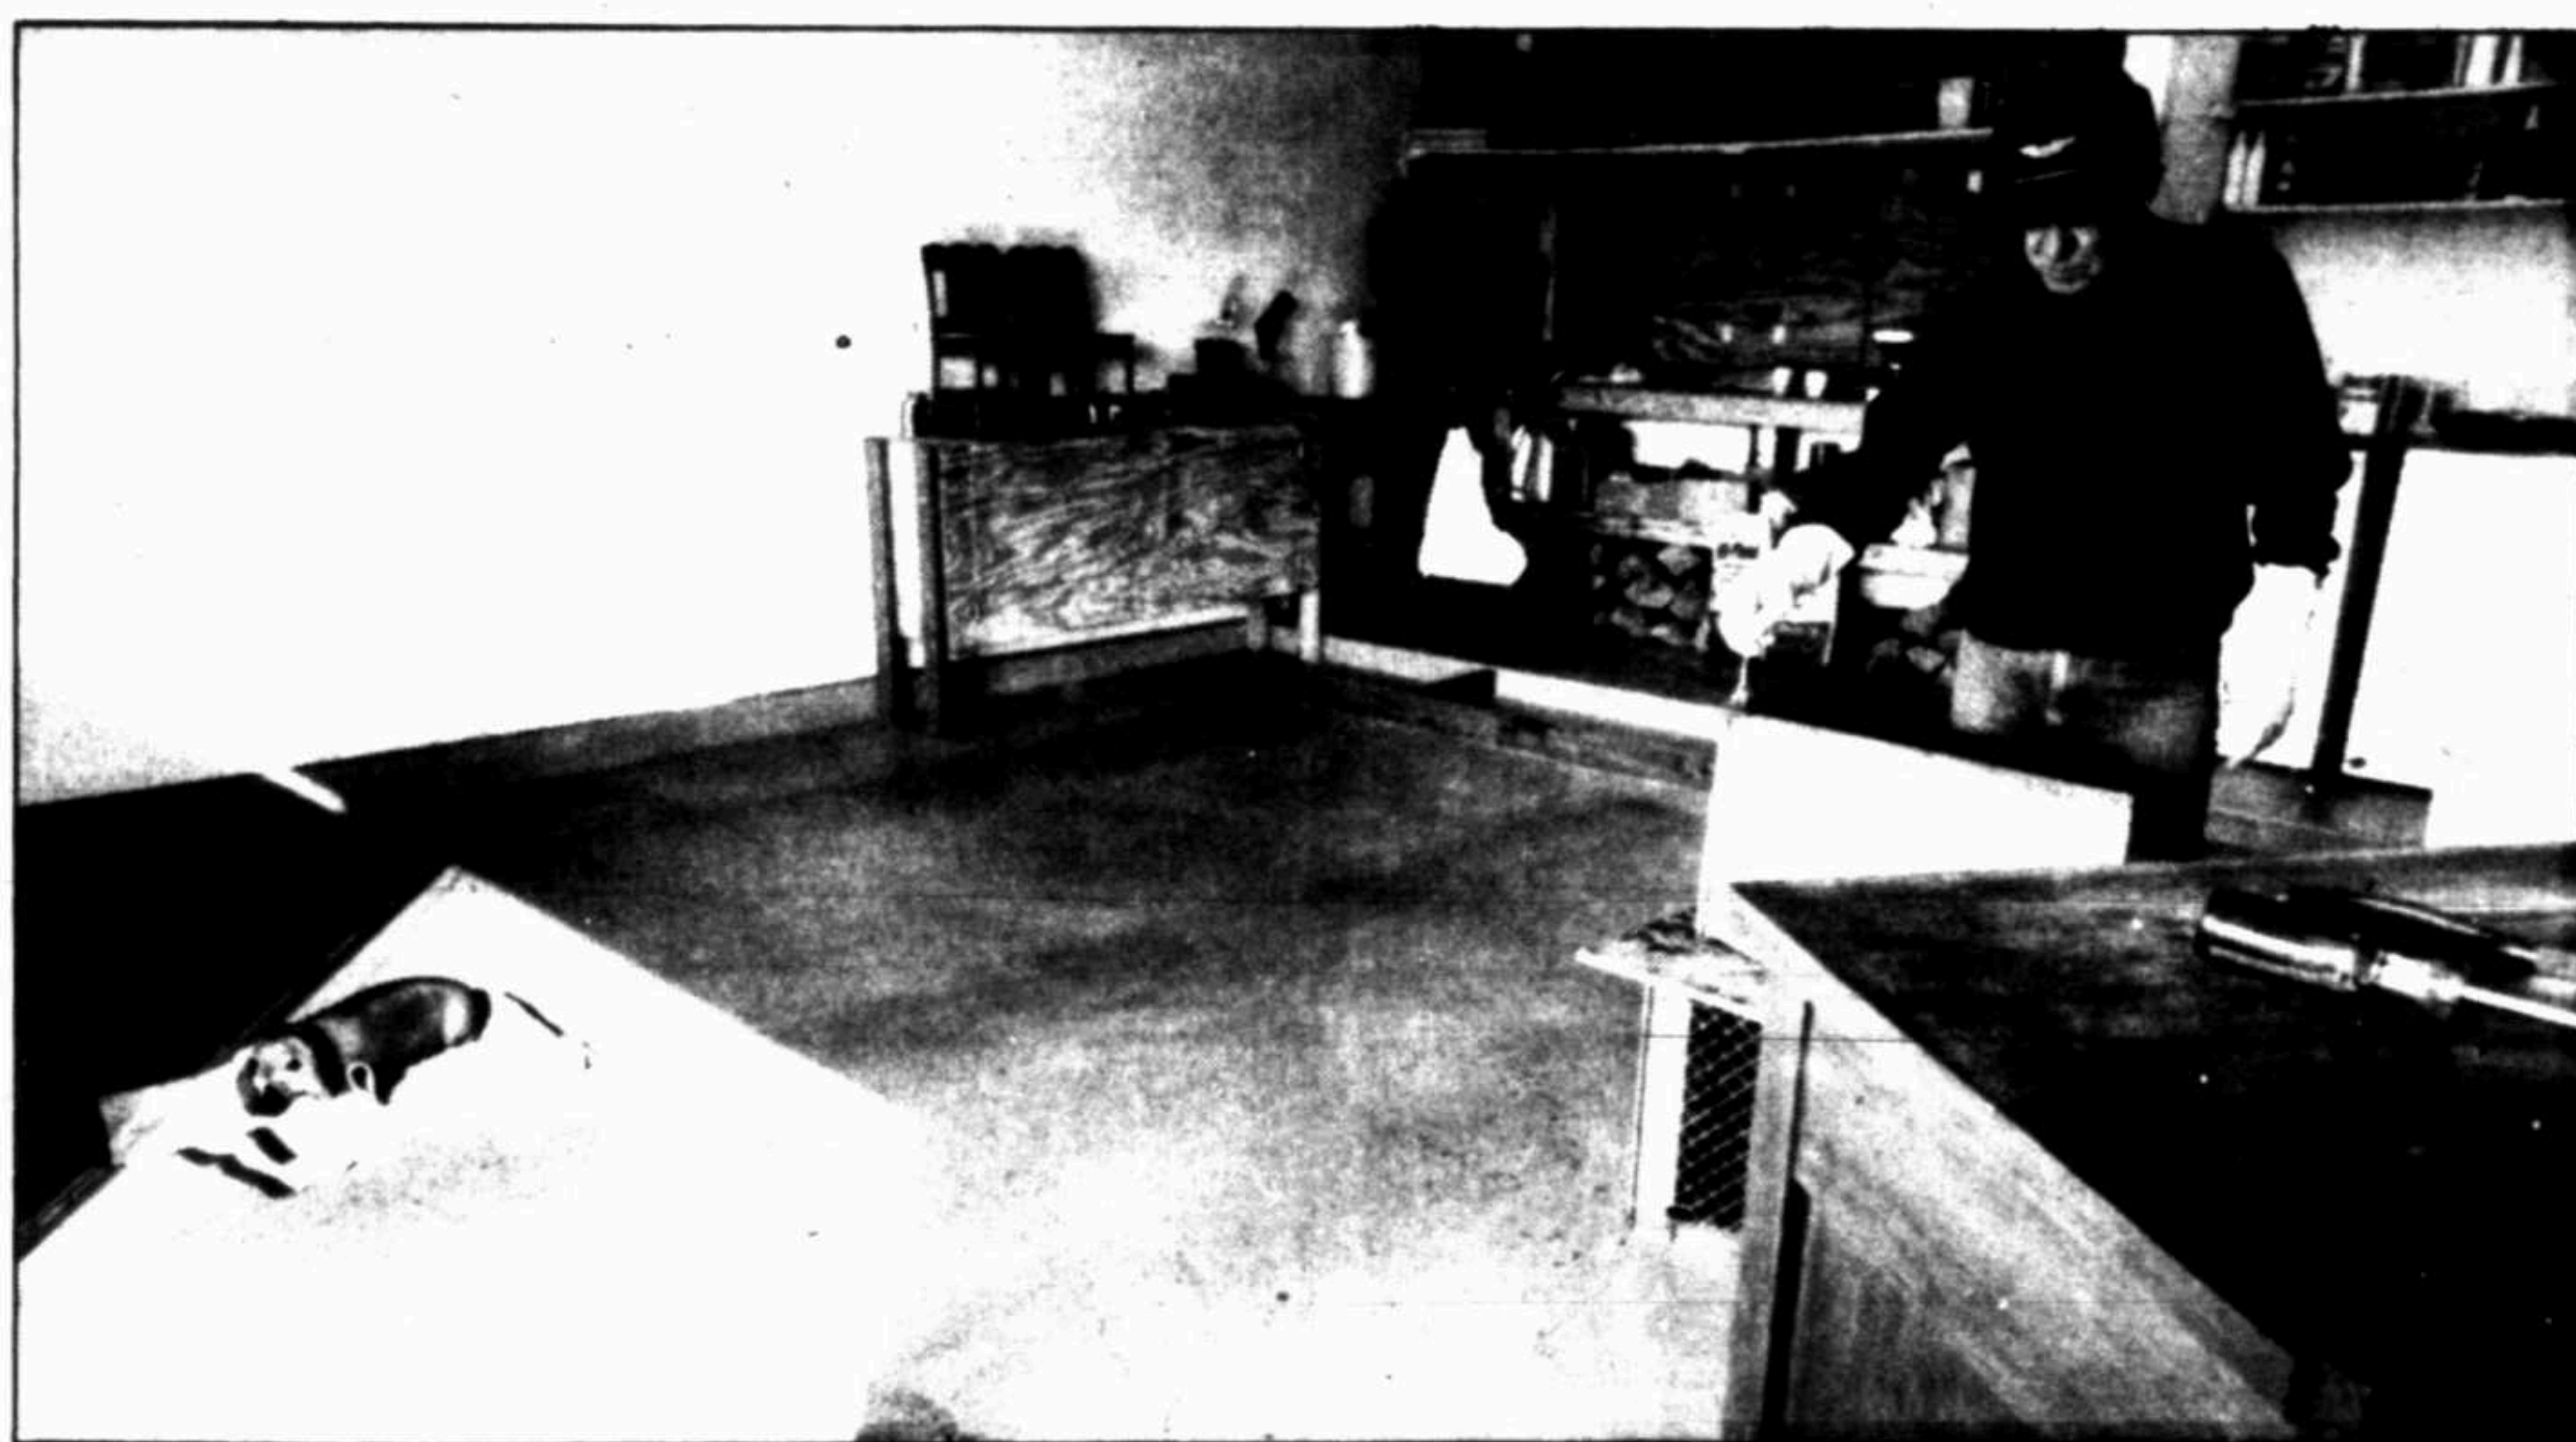

Miller said. "Now if I go somewhere, she usually stays right there in the chair and I leave the TV on for her."

Talking about his wife, Glendora, can still bring tears to Miller's eyes.

They knew each other in high school in St. Joseph, Mo., and began dating a few years after graduation. A youthful photo of her hangs on the wall of his study.

Ex-mayoral candidate remains in critical condition in Odessa

Staff report

ODESSA — The condition of Roy McCandless, who lost his bid to unseat incumbent Mayor Lorraine Perryman Saturday, was listed as critical at Medical Center Hospital late Sunday night after he was struck by a drunk driver Saturday night, Odessa police said.

McCandless was reportedly on his way to congratulate Ms. Perryman at election headquarters when his 1987 Volkswagen Jetta broke down in the 2200 block of East 8th Street and he stopped to inspect it after turning on the hazard lights, officials said.

At 9:48 p.m. his vehicle was struck by a 1979 black Chevrolet pickup driven by Ralph Padilla Banegas. The impact of the collision knocked the Volkswagen into McCandless, according to reports.

Police said Banegas failed to control his speed and was arrested for driving while intoxicated and causing serious bodily injury, his second drunken-driving offense.

Banegas' blood alcohol content was listed at 0.12. The legal limit in Texas is 0.10, police said.

He posted the $750 bond on Sunday.

Mail voting system doesn't get a stamp of approval from many election leaders

HOUSTON (AP) — An absentee ballot blitz that targeted the elderly helped state Sen. John Whitmire capture the Senate District 15 runoff last month, although he was outpolled on election day.

To a lesser extent, the tactic also pushed Gene Green over the edge in the Democratic runoff for the 29th Congressional District against City Councilman Ben Reyes.

The new form of electioneering is legal, but some are calling it questionable. The Houston Post reported in Sunday's editions. And the Hispanic candidates on the losing end of this strategy still are reeling from the results.

Whitmire and his consultants used big bucks, high technology and political know-how to design a powerful early voting machine.

A state election code provision allows the disabled, the elderly and those who know they'll be out of town on election day to vote early by mail. Historically, these people have made up only a modest share of the local vote.

But by bombarding senior citizens with mail ballot applications, campaign strategists were able to encourage an unprecedented number of elderly Houstonians to vote.

They began by poring over computerized voter registration rolls and didn't stop until they showed up on voters' doorsteps the day ballots arrived in the mail.

Tony Sirvello, a Harris County election supervisor, said it was "very, very distressing" that some Whitmire voters said campaign volunteers helped fill out their ballots, then sealed and mailed them.

While it's not a crime for somebody else to mail the ballot, state election officials say the law intends for voters to do it themselves. And if disabled or illiterate voters need help, assistants are required to sign an affidavit on the outside of the ballot envelope.

Ernestine Gee, who spearheaded Whitmire's mail vote drive in Houston's Acres Homes neighborhood, said neither she nor any of her volunteers saw any reason to sign their names. She also saw nothing wrong with sealing and mailing ballots for hundreds of senior citizens.

She's wrong, election officials told The Post. They also said such campaign tactics are causing concern over what appears to be a growing abuse of the mail ballot system.

MILLER: Widower finds friends in support group ranged dinner parties nearly every week.

"My wife loved people," Miller said. "Our house was always full of people. And she'd say, 'Let's go get this or that.' I'd say, 'Sure. Go ahead.' I went along.

"But the people — having our friends around, I miss that."

Ill with cancer for two years, Glen died under a nurse's care at their home after 52 years of marriage.

"I'm not an unhappy person now," said Miller, who, at 78, considers himself too old to think about remarrying.

With the help of a hospice support group for the widowed —

Friends Who Care — he rebuilt his life.

"This organization has just been great for me," Miller said. "It saved me." He goes to Monday-night bridge, men-only breakfasts, dinners and afternoon socials.

Miller admits the idea of moving to Midland did not please him at first. But, looking around the California town of Mi-Wuk Village after his wife's death, he realized he had few friends left there.

"After I thought about it, I said to myself, 'Now that Glen's gone, I'm not really happy here.'"

Now, he's near his daughter, Nancy Johnson.

"You kind of have to weigh these things," Miller said. "I have a good, active life. I like Midland."

"But you couldn't give my wife any part of West Texas," he said, breaking into laughter at the memory.

Once he was settled in town, he began regular lunches with his daughter, who told him about Friends Who Care while they were waiting in line at a favorite restaurant.

"The woman ahead of us, she knew about it too. She heard us, and couldn't wait to tell us how great she thought it was," Miller recalled.

"I just went right down there and made myself acquainted and got in one of their games," he said.

A salesman of more than 30 years and former Toastmaster, Miller is not shy.

Now, he goes to Friends activities regularly, attends church and visits his daughter.

"She looks after me," Miller said. "She's got to balance my checkbook," he grins.

And almost every morning he can be found in his garage, refinishing an old piece of furniture, with Heidi reclining on a blanket nearby.

Grateful for the years he's had, Miller now has days to look forward to again, like the surprises he finds in his antiques.

"Every piece is a challenge," Miller said recently, fingering the battered drawers of a pine chest. "You never know what it's going to be."

Panel scrutinizes death row defense center

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal panel is investigating complaints that the group which coordinates 11th-hour appeals for death row inmates has improperly represented its clients.

The Houston Chronicle in its Sunday editions reported that Texas Attorney General Dan Morales and Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr. have accused the Texas Resource Center of misrepresenting trial records and manipulating court procedure.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans is studying the complaints, the Chronicle reported.

The May execution calendar in Texas lists 14 names, the most ever. But before those names reach the death chamber, many could get a reprieve if the center's attorneys are granted appeals.

The Texas Resource Center, which is federally-funded, has 13 attorneys who focus on the lack of centralized oversight in the state's capital punishment system. It addresses issues like:

■ The lack of guidelines for trial courts to set execution dates.

■ Deadlines for filing court papers being driven by execution dates instead of court schedules.

■ Execution dates being set before inmates have appellate attorneys.

Morales and Holmes each have written letters to the appeals panel, supporting the concept of a resource center but complaining about the current system.

Holmes wrote the center suffers serious credibility problems with prosecutors, state attorneys and some judges.

"The obvious consequence of this loss of credibility is that the Resource Center is no longer in a position to effectively represent its clients, if those individuals and institutions with whom it has to deal no longer trust their lawyers," Holmes wrote in a March 23 letter.

The criticisms are dismissed by the center's executive director, Eden Harrington.

"Lawyers are victimized by the system perhaps as much as our clients," Ms. Harrington said. "Piecemeal filings are submitted, and last-minute litigation occurs.

That is not in the interest of anybody — not lawyers, clients or courts."

U.S. Circuit Judge Thomas M. Reavley of Austin, who is heading the federal court's review, declined comment on the matter.

The center emerged four years ago from the Capital Punishment Clinic at the University of Texas at Austin. The new system assured counsel in capital murder cases only for a defendant's direct appeal, the appellate phase that focuses on issues presented at the trial.

Because they could not afford an attorney, most death row inmates faced execution without pursuing their post-conviction appeals.

"The federal courts, particularly the 5th Circuit, had become very concerned about the fact that they were getting writs that were handwritten by the jail lawyer or the defendant. The courts had to turn those writs down because they were legally inadequate," said UT law professor Edward F. Sherman, who helped create the center.

The Texas center is one of 17 state death penalty resource centers receiving grants this year from the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts.

Austin park puts dinosaur tracks on display

AUSTIN (AP) — Kathy Scherer has seen firsthand the footprints that dinosaurs left in Texas more than 100 million years ago. And like thousands of others, she too, is amazed.

"I think it's pretty fascinating," Ms. Scherer said as she panned the rare geological find discovered in January just below the Zilker Botanical Gardens. "Just seeing evidence that dinosaurs existed, and seeing where they actually stepped. You can actually see their strides."

The more than 100 footprints were unveiled to the public recently during an annual floral show at Zilker Park's garden center.

Thousands of visitors of all ages have gone to marvel at the tracks of several different dinosaurs. Most of the tracks were made by theropods, which were similar to ostriches but had stubby front legs instead of wings and long tails. They lived largely off the eggs of other dinosaurs. There also are a few, less distinct tracks of the huge brachiosaurus.

The discovery of the tracks in several layers of limestone was purely accidental. Just as a huge storm probably preserved the tracks before they could disappear, the winter storms in Central Texas flooded away the brush and trash that had kept them covered.

The site was to be part of an expansion of the Zilker Botanical Gardens, but that plan was halted and experts were brought in to study and protect the discovery.

Scientists also found rare fossils of clams that died suddenly, fish scales, fossilized plants and possibly bird prints. Also, the shell and bones of a yard-wide marine turtle were carefully removed and studied. Casts of the turtle remains were made and replaced at the site in the same position they were found.

"There's a lot of information we can get from tracks generally," Wann Langston, professor emeritus at the Vertebrate Paleontology Laboratory of the Texas Memorial Museum, told the Austin American-Statesman. Langston has studied the tracks and the turtle remains.

"The real importance of tracks is this is something that an animal did. We can tell something about how the animal lived and behaved by studying its tracks that we could never tell simply by studying its bones."

Chris Durden, curator of geology and entomology at the museum, said, "It's very, very unusual to find so many different kinds of fossils together in such a useful locale."

DEAR ABBY

Reader's fish story will bowl you over

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter from "Bubbie" and her goldfish, Mahzel and Brocha, I had to write.

Twelve years ago, when I was 10 years old, I won a small goldfish at the county fair. Not knowing if it was male or female, I named it Fishface. After a while, thinking it might be lonesome, I bought another goldfish as a companion for Fishface, but after a few weeks, I found the companion floating on its side — dead. Three companions died on me, so I gave up.

Fishface must have been a baby fish when I got it because in the 12 years I've had it, I have had to buy a larger fishbowl three times. Fishface seems content and peppy as ever, and shows no signs of aging, but I would like to know how much longer I can expect it to live. Also, forgive the dumb question, Abby, but how can a person tell a male fish from a female fish? — CURIOUS IN WATERLOO, IOWA

Van Buren

DEAR CURIOUS: Small goldfish can be expected to live about 15 years — if they are healthy, well cared for and not overfed. Goldfish (like some humans) will continue to eat as long as food is available.

It is difficult to tell a male from a female fish — except in the spring, when the male gets little white bumps on his fins and starts chasing females.

Female fish are visibly plumper than males when they are full of roe (eggs) — in other words, pregnant.

I may be telling you more than you care to know, but my fish expert is a very knowledgeable and patient teacher, employed by The Aquarium Stock Co. in Los Angeles. And when I tell you his name, you will think I'm kidding. It's John Fish!

DEAR ABBY: With your years of experience in dealing with people from all over the United States, I am sure you have come across many who do not need to pray, "Slow Me Down, Lord," as Wilfred Peterson implored in his lovely poem.

I presume that there are many Chicagoans who are as slowly paced as the folks in Maine when they get behind the wheels of their pickup trucks on Route 4. Those pokey drivers may live to be 100 — but the drivers behind them stand a good chance of dying of heart attacks.

And so, Dear Abby, I offer this prayer with the hope that the Lord will hear it and provide a helpful response.

SPEED ME UP, LORD
Speed me up, Lord. Activate my sluggish pulse and brain. Get my feet moving faster, and remind me that today has only 24 hours in it, and if I'm going to get anything done, I'd better make it snappy.

Teach me that a little confusion is a heck of a lot better than the peace and tranquility of the grave. Get my nerves and muscles coordinated and flexed — ready for action. Warn me about the fatality of goofing off with endless cups of coffee and chewing the fat. Help me to lay the book down, put the dog out and get to work.

Speed me up, Lord, lest I get rooted to this spot like an old oak tree. — (REV.) JOSEPH R. MC KENNA, JAY, MAINE

NEW YORK — Crude oil finished unchanged Friday in largely uneventful trading.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas Intermediate for June delivery held at $20.85 a barrel, the highest level of the year. Crude oil gained 63 cents for the week.

Crude oil trading was strengthened by strikes in Germany and Russia that raised concerns about interrupted flows.

Natural gas rose .9 cent to $1.431 per 1,000 cubic feet on the Merc, up 4.5 cents for the week.

Lower-quality sour crude traded on the Merc fell 15 cents a barrel to $18.20, closing the week up 59 cents.

Dollar slumps

NEW YORK — The dollar fell in thin trading Friday, mostly on a disappointing report from the nation's purchasing executives.

In addition, trading was thin on Friday, a May Day holiday in Europe, where only London markets were open. Faust said the slim trading left the market vulnerable to speculation and rumor. Four Los Angeles police officers in the beating of a black motorist.

In New York, the dollar fell to 132.65 Japanese yen from 133.25 late Thursday.

Also in New York, the British pound rose to $1.7865 from $1.7780 Thursday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Thursday: 1.6415 German marks, down from 1.6480; 1.5010 Swiss francs, down from 1.5105; 5.5365 French francs, down from 5.5600; 1.233.75 Italian lire, down from 1.239.00; and 1.18975 Canadian dollars, down from 1.19235.

Market sinks

NEW YORK — Stock prices closed lower Friday as computerized sell programs kicked in gear and many Wall Street traders trekked home early, anxious about urban riots.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed down 23.03 at 3,336.09. But for the week, the index gained 11.63 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 7 to 6 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Channel's spoils plan draws attention

■ Galveston Bay 'beneficial use plan' is lauded by some, criticized by others.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — If a controversial plan to widen and deepen the Houston Ship Channel is implemented, enough mud, clay, sand and shell to fill the Astrodome more than twice will be dug out of Galveston Bay.

For two years, officials from eight agencies have been planning where to put the dredge. After numerous public meetings, they recently chose 17 sites in Galveston Bay to deposit the 57 million cubic yards of spoils from the proposed project.

Port of Houston officials long have maintained that the project — which, if approved and funded, would not occur for years — would be an economic boon to Houston and would keep the port competitive.

The spoils would be used to create wetlands, bird rookery islands, shoreline stabilization, breakwaters, beach nourishment and boater destination-recreation islands.

The "beneficial use plan," which still is under development, has been lauded by some.

"A lot of people around the nation are watching this to see if it's a success," Eddie Seidensticker, of the Soil Conservation Service, told The Houston Post in Sunday's editions. "Any progress or mistake is going to be viewed with a lot of scrutiny."

However, the proposal also is drawing fire from critics, who claim it's being used as a smokescreen to sell the $320 million plan to deepen the ship channel from 40 feet to 45 feet and to widen it from 400 feet to 530 feet.

Chief among them is the Galveston Bay Foundation, which has been skeptical from the outset about the project's economic advantages and its potential for ecological damage.

Jim Blackburn, a Houston attorney who represents the foundation, said his main concern is that the plan is being used as a public relations gimmick to gain public support.

"I have a lot of concerns about this concept," Blackburn said. "I think the (U.S. Army) Corps (of Engineers) and the Port of Houston are trying to sell the project by the beneficial use of spoils rather than on the merits of widening and deepening."

The Port of Houston Authority has agreed to spend up to $37 million of an approved $130 million bond issue to fund the beneficial uses project. The bonds, dedicated for use in the deepening and widening project, were approved by Harris County voters in November 1989. No bonds yet have been sold.

The widening project, first proposed in 1967, essentially is on hold while the corps conducts a second environmental impact statement on the effect of the enlargement on Galveston Bay. The first statement, finished in 1988, met with such opposition that a supplemental one was ordered.

The selection of the beneficial use sites could be critical to the future of the $64 million-a-year seafood industry generated by the bay, said Robert Nailon, county extension marine agent for Chambers and Harris counties.

"Everything we are doing now for environmental reasons will ultimately have economic implications," Nailon said.

It's possible to stash first home 'down'

By Andree Brooks

N.Y. Times News Service

Saving for a down payment when living expenses seem to constantly outstrip income is one of the perennial problems facing young couples eager to buy a first home.

Moreover, interest rates on savings are now so low that a small nest egg is unlikely to grow into anything usable for a long time.

Nevertheless, financial counselors and mortgage specialists insist there are still ways to make a saving plan work. Some believe part of the problem facing many young couples is lack of knowledge about managing personal finances, not lack of wherewithal.

"I see couples coming in with a combined income of nearly $100,000 telling me it's impossible to save," said Susan Blevins, sales manager with Prudential Connecticut Realty in Madison, Conn.

A good way to start, say the professionals, is with a meticulous accounting of every penny spent.

Couples who have managed to buy a first home agree that spending discipline is the key, along with a willingness to compromise living standards.

Macy's expects no more than 10 stores to close

NEW YORK (AP) — R.H. Macy & Co. Inc. expects to close about 10 of its 120 department stores during the course of its bankruptcy reorganization, a spokesman for the department store company said Sunday.

"Probably within the next 30 days ... they will announce which of the department stores will be closed," said Macy spokesman James Fingerhuth.

Fingerhuth disputed a story in the May 4-10 edition of Crain's New York Business that said the company was considering closing 15 to 30 stores.

Macy executives have been reviewing the performance of the stores, which include outlets of the flagship Macy chain and the California-based Bullock's stores, since the retailer filed for Chapter 11 protection from its creditors Jan. 27.

Clad in coveralls, special shoes and a face mask, a technician checks coating machines in a dust-free room at a Japanese factory that makes active-matrix liquid-crystal displays, better known as flat screens.

Hang-on-wall TVs hung up on particles

HIMEJI, Japan (AP) — "Particles," laments Hidenori Akiyoshi, his head hanging. "They're our biggest problem. ... When a machine is operating, it's always creating dust."

Akiyoshi's factory, built by IBM and Toshiba, makes hi-tech color display screens that go into laptop computers and someday may be used for flat televisions that hang on a wall like a Picasso.

Someday, that is, if Akiyoshi and other engineers can overcome some of the most daunting production problems in electronics today.

Despite a commanding lead and billions of dollars in investments, Japanese companies are finding that the flat screens — called active-matrix liquid-crystal displays — are harder to make than expected.

Even a microscopic speck of dust generated by the factory's gleaming machines can render one of the $2,250 10-inch color screens useless, Akiyoshi says.

Whether his company, Display Technologies Inc., or other manufacturers solve the production problems will determine who controls the market, which could become a gold mine because of flat screens' application to new technologies such as high-definition television.

The active-matrix color screens, only about an inch thick, are technically similar to simple LCDs used in digital watches or pocket calculators.

Growth stocks pay off for high-flying company

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Seated in a wingback chair in his penthouse office, James E. Stowers Jr. picks up a model of the 10-passenger company jet he recently bought.

The founder and president of Twentieth Century Investors Inc. recalls how he searched nationwide for a pilot who would be responsible for the lives of top executives on business trips.

Stowers listed pages of qualities he wanted for this person. One stood out: On command, the pilot would have to turn over the controls to Stowers.

"Now I fly it every week," the 68-year-old said with a smile.

Stowers' pilot search incorporated the same exhaustive detail he uses to pick stocks for the company's mutual funds. His methods have skillfully steered his high-flying funds into some of the fastest-growing and best-performing in the country.

Twentieth Century is best known for its aggressive-growth stock funds. Last year, three of them finished among the top 25 of a total 1,867 long-term taxable mutual funds, according to Lipper Analytical Services Inc.

With an average 63.25 percent rate of return for all 13 Twentieth Century funds, investors have been flooding the company with dollars.

More than 15,000 pieces of mail arrive each day. Callers are backed up on the phones. In the first quarter, assets under management grew by more than $1.2 billion to $16.2 billion.

And the company has been working overtime to hire new recruits. Employment has grown from 650 at the end of 1990 to more than 1,300 today.

The secret? The company zealously sticks to a stock-picking strategy Stowers devised 34 years ago.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

IRS waits to hear from those who 'hit it big'

By Bill Doyle

Q: What are the Internal Revenue Service rules concerning gambling winnings? Do I have to report them for the quarter I turn in my winning lottery tickets, parimutuel tickets and casino chips? Or can I wait until the end of the year and see where I stand? I might win early in the year and have some losses later.

I ask because I have a system for beating the ponies.

A: If you are one of those rare gamblers who "hits it big," you are required to file estimated federal income tax returns (Form 1040-ES) and pay up for the calendar quarters in which Dame Fortune smiles on you.

This year, estimated returns are due April 15, June 15 and Sept. 15, 1992, and Jan. 16, 1993. Large gambling payoffs fall into the category the revenooers call "unexpected income." But all types of income are subject to the estimated tax.

The rules on this are spelled out in the Form 1040-ES instruction booklet and, in greater detail, in IRS Publication 505, both of which are available at local IRS offices listed in the phone book.

Regulations scheduled for this year complicate this situation. Until this year, you could escape penalty if you based your estimated tax payments on 100 percent of your previous year's total tax.

That no longer applies if your 1992 adjusted gross income tops $75,000 ($37,500 if married and filing separately; your AGI increased by $40,000 or more ($20,000 if married and filing separately); or, anytime within the past three years, you filed an estimated return or were penalized for underpayment of tax.

Congress is considering repealing or revising the new regulations. But don't make book on it and when that will happen.

After decades of observing losses by horse-playing denizens of newspaper city rooms, my guess is you won't have to worry about an income tax bill.

Q: I have about $35,000 in my name, but in trust for my grandchildren. I like to keep these certificates of deposit in my name in case an emergency arises and I have to use the money.

I pay income tax on the CD interest. After my death, will my grandchildren have to pay income tax on the CDs they inherit?

A: An inheritance is never subject to income tax. However, assuming they do not cash in the CDs, your grandchildren will be required to report the interest the CDs pay as taxable income and pay whatever tax is due.

Depending on the size of your estate, a federal estate tax and a state estate or inheritance tax might be due. Those levies are different than income taxes.

The federal estate tax starts when you leave more than $600,000 to anyone other than your spouse. Everything a husband leaves to his wife or a wife leaves to her husband escapes that tax.

Q: Recently, I refinanced my 30-year home mortgage of $165,000 at 10.25 percent with another 30-year mortgage of $150,000 at 8.75 percent. My new mortgage payments are almost $300 lower per month.

Are any of the refinancing costs deductible for income tax purposes? I had to pay two points ($3,000) and other fees to secure the new mortgage.

A: Unlike a mortgage used to purchase a principal residence or a second home, you are not allowed a current deduction for points on a refinanced mortgage. Those points must be deducted "ratably" over the life of the loan. In your case, you get a $100 annual deduction for 30 years. Other refinancing costs are added to your home's "basis" — cost for tax purposes.

Allison takes 500

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Davey Allison, with dollar signs in his eyes and a perfect car in his hands, overwhelmed the competition Sunday to win his third Winston 500 and take the second big step toward a $1 million bonus.

Allison, who began the season with a win in the Daytona 500, started on the outside of the front row Sunday but was the man to beat throughout the 188-lap event at Talladega Superspeedway.

He led five times for a total of 110 laps, including the final 71 trips around the 2.66-mile oval.

The win, Allison's third of the season and 16th of his career, clinched a payoff of at least $100,000 for the 31-year-old, who now needs only to win one more of NASCAR's big four races, either the Coca-Cola 600 on May 24 or the Southern 500 on Sept. 6, to win the Winston Million.

Only Bill Elliott, in 1985, has taken the million dollar prize since it was first offered that season to a driver winning at least three of the big four events.

The leaders' last pit stops came on lap 144 during a caution period and Allison was in the lead, a spot he had held since lap 118, when the green flag came back out on lap 148.

By the end of that lap, the first five were again nose-to-tail, just as they had been before the caution flag, with Elliott second, followed by Dale Earnhardt, Morgan Shepherd and Sterling Marlin.

It's Ammaccapane

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Danielle Ammaccapane shot her fourth straight sub-70 round Sunday and held off three challengers by one stroke to win the richest tournament in women's golf — the $1.2 million Centel Classic.

The $180,000 winner's purse catapulted the 26-year-old atop the LPGA earnings list with $353,354 and marked her first tour victory outside of her hometown of Phoenix.

Ammaccapane shot a 3-under-par 69 in the final round to finish at 275, 13 under, and beat third-round leader Liselotte Neumann, Michelle Estill and gallery favorite Colleen Walker by one stroke.

Ammaccapane bounced back from her lone bogey Sunday when she dropped a 35-foot chip shot for a birdie at No. 15 to break a tie with Neumann for the last time.

Diablos claw Midland, 8-5

■ El Paso has lost the bulk of its 1991 power, but still manages to get the job done at Angels Stadium.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

The 1992 El Paso Diablos are as different as night and day when compared to the 1991 El Paso team that won the Texas League West Division championship, but at least in the early going, the results on the field are much the same.

The Diablos defeated the Midland Angels by an 8-5 margin Sunday night at Angels Stadium to take a 3-1 lead in this five-game series and El Paso has won seven of eight games on its current road trip and nine of its last 12.

And this is a team that has only four home runs to its credit through its first 24 games. The current joke is that John Jaha, the Texas League's power leader a year ago, had that many homers alone on opening night a year ago.

But Jaha is gone and this Diablo team scratches and claws at you for nine innings. They don't wait for the long ball. "There is no question that we had a power team a year ago," said El Paso's John Byington. "This year we have a lot different kind of personnel. We have players with an all-around kind of game and we go with the strengths we have and play a feisty type of game."

Byington was "feisty" enough against the Angels Sunday, coming up with a two-run single in the fourth to knot the game at 2-2 and a two-run double in El Paso's four-run eighth for a four RBI kind of night.

It was that fatal eighth inning that did the Angels in, despite the fact that Midland came back with three runs in the bottom of the eighth to cut the El Paso lead to 7-5.

As usual, the Diablos called in fire stopper Rob Wisniewski to finish up and he retired five of the six Angels he faced to earn his league leading eighth save. He has as many saves as the Angels have victories this year.

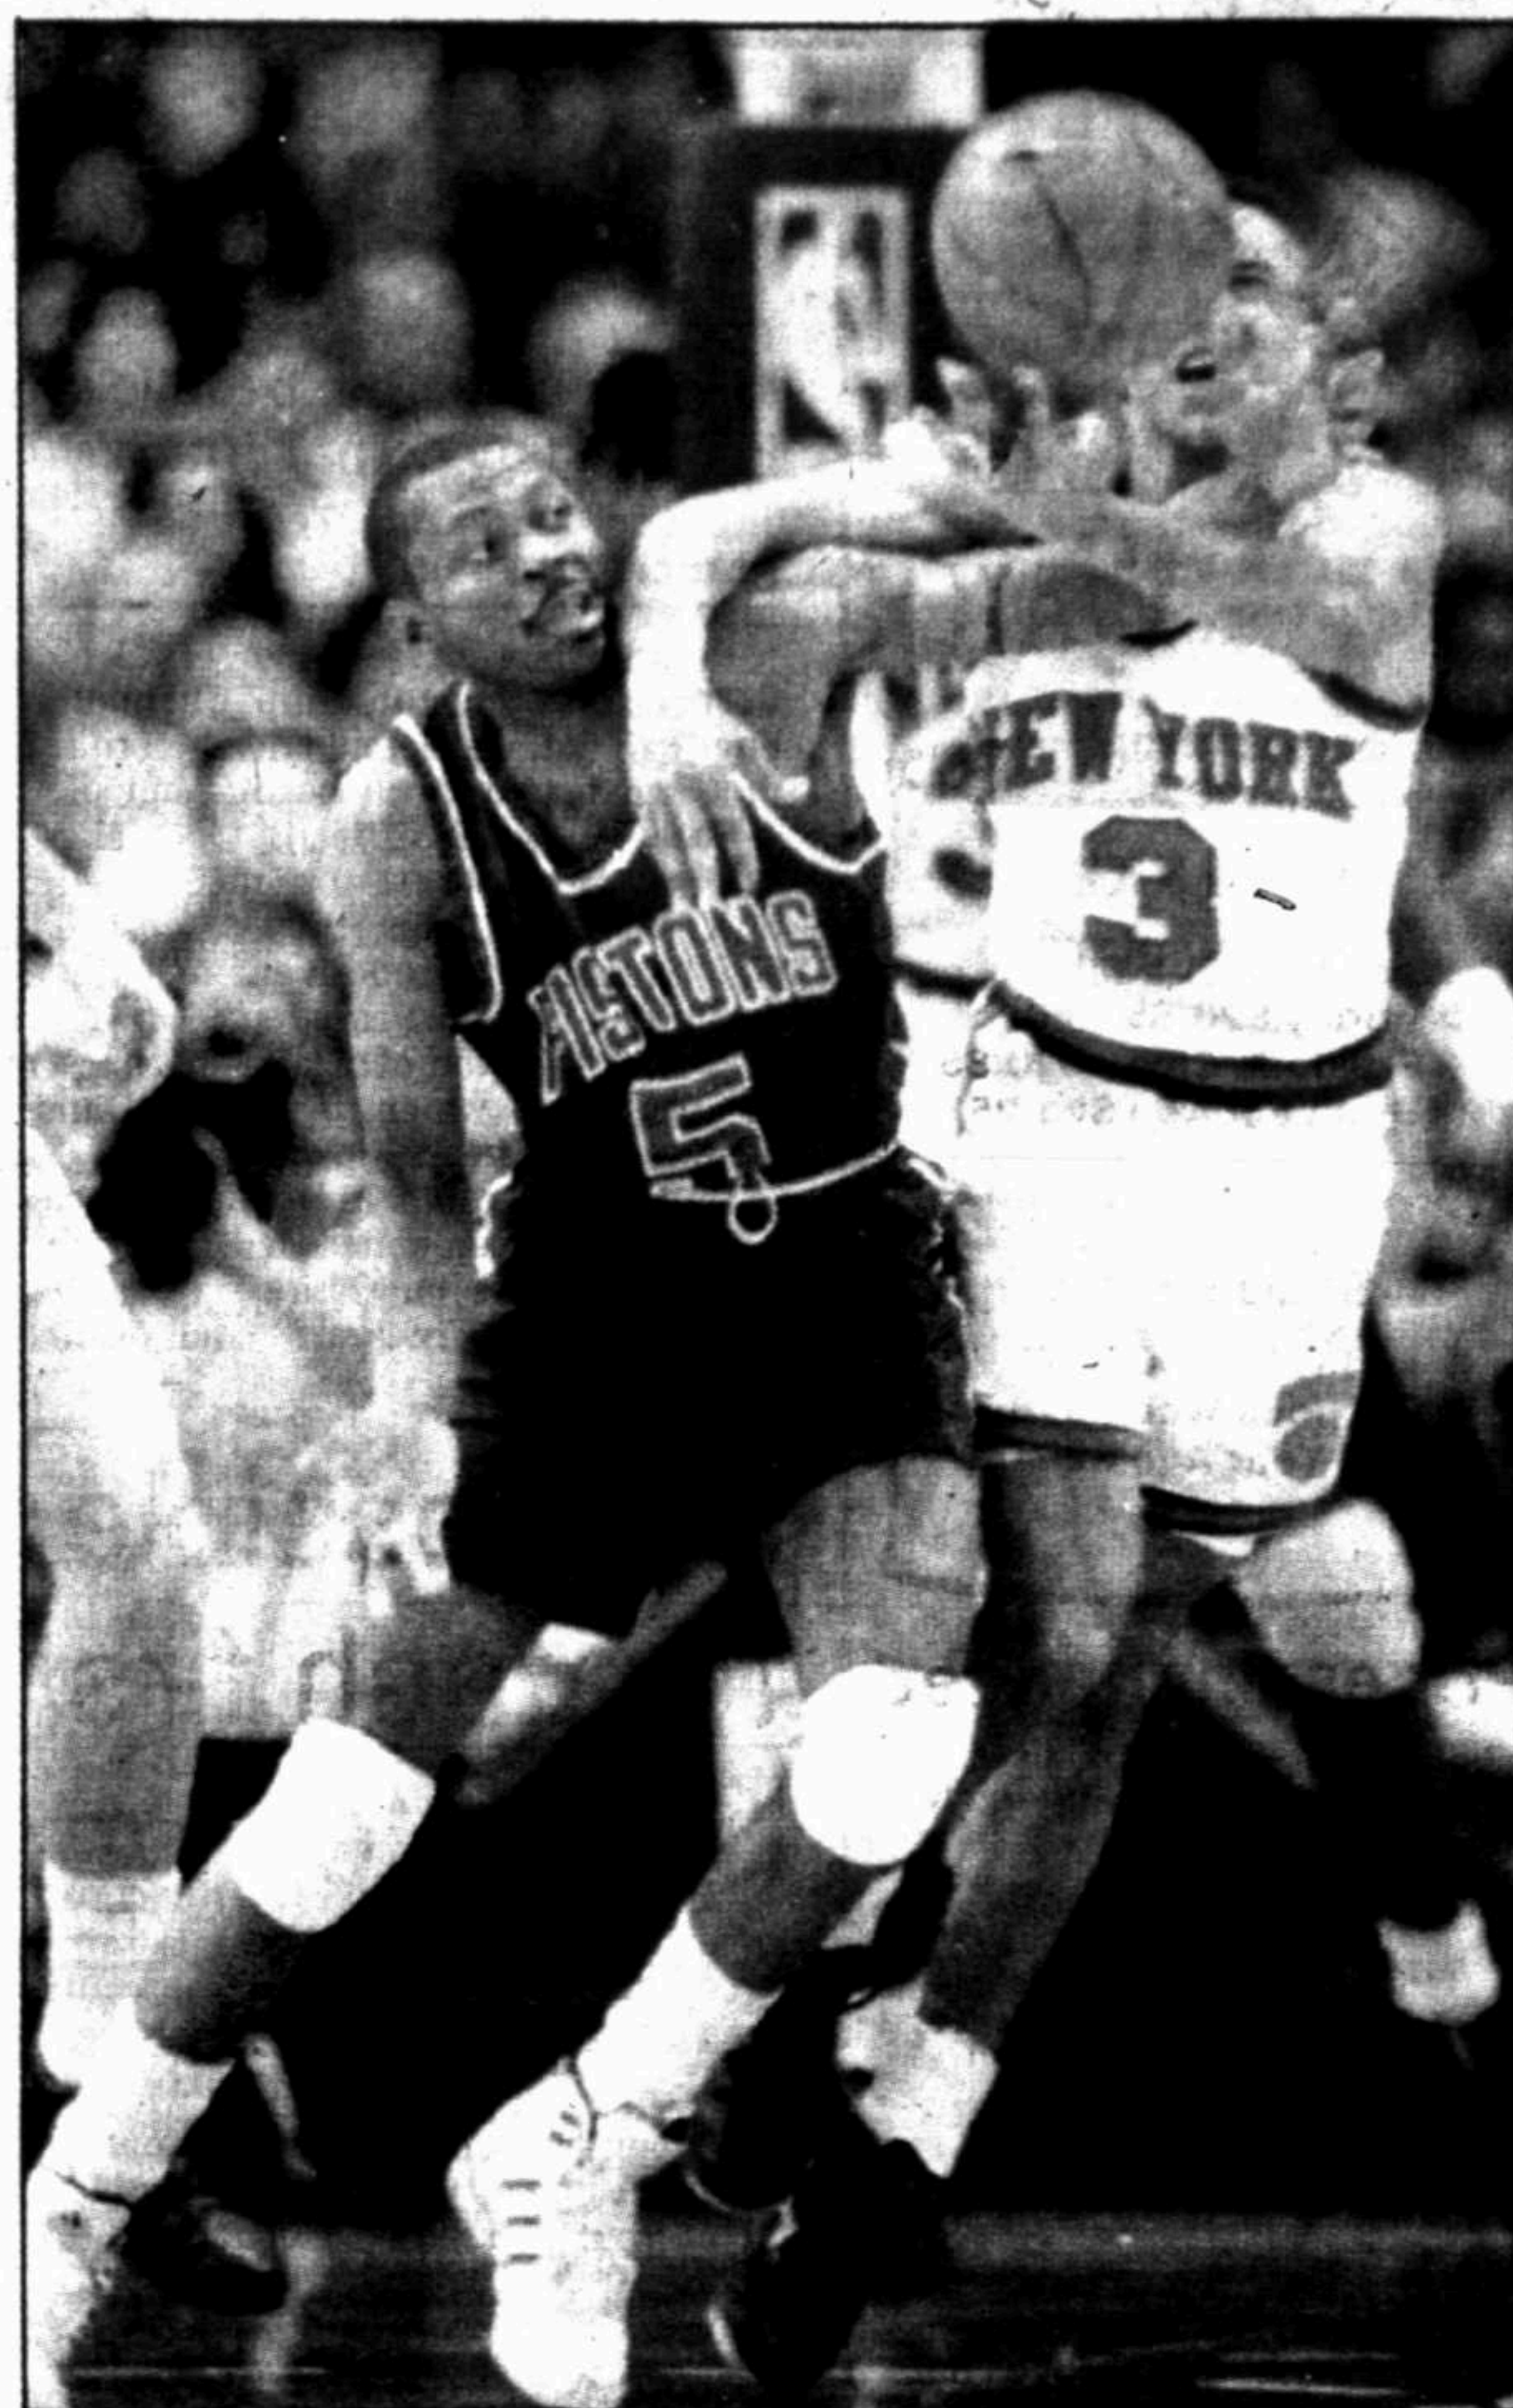

"I was only with this team 20 games last year, but it is a much different team we have this year," Wisniewski said. "The starting pitching is keeping us in the game and we don't have to have the nine-run inning to win. We have to do all the little things better this year, and I think that makes us a better club overall."

Midland took a 2-0 lead in the third inning on a run scoring single by Rod Correia and a fielder's choice grounder by John Jackson. That looked to be a good start the way Angel starter Dave Adams was pitching.

Adams gave up only five hits through seven innings, but he had also walked six Diablos. Three of those walks scored to and Adams took the loss as the Angels had to use three relief pitchers in the eighth to slow the runaway train from El Paso.

The Diablos scored an insurance run for Wisniewski in the ninth, but the Angels did turn a neat hidden-ball trick to nail Charlie Hillemann at second base on

Knicks end Detroit's playoff predominance

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New York Knicks closed an era of NBA success for Detroit and gave themselves the even bigger task of beating the Chicago Bulls.

Patrick Ewing had 31 points and 19 rebounds in the Knicks' series-clinching 94-87 victory on Sunday over the Pistons, who won two NBA championships and three conference titles and had five straight appearances in the Eastern Conference finals.

New York, with a 3-2 series victory, advanced to the second round, where the Bulls have been waiting for nearly a week after a sweep of Miami. The first game is Tuesday night at Chicago Stadium.

The Knicks appeared to be taking control early in the fourth quarter when a three-point play by Gerald Wilkins, who scored nine of his 13 points in a five-minute span, gave them a 68-60 lead with 10:48 remaining.

Two free throws by Isiah Thomas, who scored 21 of his 31 points in the final period, pulled Detroit to 74-72 before Ewing hit two baskets in a 9-1 'spurt' that gave New York an 83-73 margin with 4:25 left.

A 3-pointer by John Starks gave the Knicks their largest lead, 87-76, with 2:39 left, but the Pistons refused to quit, with Thomas hitting 3-pointers on consecutive possessions to make it 87-82. The Knicks then scored the next six points to seal the outcome although Thomas hit another 3-pointer in the final seconds and scored the Pistons' last 19 points.

Xavier McDaniel scored 19 points for the Knicks, matching his average in the series after he managed just 13.7 per game in the regular season. John Salley had 13 points and Orlando Woolridge and Joe Dumars 12 each for the Pistons.

McDaniel had 11 points, including four baskets on offensive rebounds, in the first 7:05 of the second half, but the Pistons kept pace at 51-51 as Salley and Woolridge combined for 14 in the

Colt lineman shot to death

Associated Press

CINCINNATI, Ohio — Shane Curry, the Indianapolis Colts' second draft pick last season, was shot and killed Sunday during an argument over a blocked vehicle, police said.

The Colts made Curry, 24, the 40th pick overall pick in the 1991 draft. He spent his first NFL season as a reserve defensive end, recording eight tackles — three solos — and one quarterback sack in nine games.

Curry, who played for Miami's national championship team in 1989, was shot in the head about 1 a.m. in the parking lot of the Armada Inn on the city's north side, said police Lt. Gregory Snider. Curry was pronounced dead about an hour later at University Hospital, nursing supervisor Vivian Mulvaney said.

Police initially charged a 15-year-old boy with felonious assault. The boy's name wasn't released.

It wasn't immediately clear whether Curry's vehicle was blocking another or was blocked itself. Police did not say what type of gun was used.

Curry, 6-foot-5 and 270 pounds, was doing well in the off-season conditioning program and was expected to play more this season, Colts spokesman Craig Kelley said. Curry had been expected at the Colts' minicamp next week.

Bryan, Whiteside claim MCC title

■ Past foes team to win the Midland Country Club Invitational on the final hole.

By Bill Price
Staff writer

When we last left Steve Whiteside and Larry Bryan, they had just duked it out for the Midland Men's City Golf Championship last August.

Bryan won that tournament, his second straight city title, to end the 1991 summer season. Sunday saw the finished product of the former foes' joining of forces, though, as Whiteside and Bryan won on the last hole of the Midland Country Club Invitational Golf Championship to open the 1992 Midland summer schedule.

Bryan, who admitted Whiteside was the muscle of the team Sunday, tapped in a short par putt after rolling a 25-footer to within inches on the 18th green, giving the pair a round of 70 and a 10-under, 206 three-day total.

The score was good enough by one stroke to defeat Odesans Marshall Morgan and Larry Nunez, who entered the final round with a two-stroke lead and spent most of the final nine holes tied with Whiteside and Bryan.

But a bogey on that last hole, after watching at least three previous putts flirt with the cup but dance out, was the Odessa team's undoing, as the two closed at 207. Defending champions Dennis Sledge and Mac McGee finished third at 208.

"I was definitely a little nervous on that last putt, but

Bases-loaded walks sink Texas, 5-3

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Kenny Rogers walked Craig Grebeck and Tim Raines with the bases loaded as the Chicago White Sox rallied for three runs in the eighth inning Sunday and beat the Texas Rangers 5-3.

Texas took a 3-2 lead in the top of the eighth when Jeff Huson doubled off Kirk McCaskill and scored on Ruben Sierra's single off Scott Radinsky (1-1).

Robin Ventura led off the bottom of the inning with his third hit, a double off Kevin Brown (4-2) and scored on Frank Thomas' single. Bell singled, Rogers relieved and pinch-hitter Mike Huff walked two outs later, loading the bases.

Grebeck then walked after falling behind 3-2 and Raines also walked on a 3-2 pitch. Steve Sax ended the inning with a groundout.

Texas got an unearned run in the third when Geno Petralli doubled, took third on Al Newman's sacrifice and scored as Sax booted Huson's two-out grounder to second.

Angels 6, Indians 3
CLEVELAND — Alvin Davis and Gary Gaetti hit consecutive

American

RBI singles during California's three-run ninth inning as the Angels beat Cleveland.

Scott Bailes (2-0) got the win for retiring the only two batters he faced in the eighth. Bryan Harvey finished for his eighth save.

Alex Cole had four hits for the Indians and matched his Cleveland record with five stolen bases.

Chad Curtis was walked by Derek Lilliquist (1-1) leading off the ninth and was sacrificed to second. Hubie Brooks was walked intentionally and Davis blooped a pinch-single to center off Ted Power, scoring Curtis. Gaetti singled and took second as center fielder Kenny Lofton bobbled the ball for Cleveland's fourth error, and Bobby Rose hit a sacrifice fly for a three-run lead.

Orioles 8, Mariners 6

BALTIMORE — Tim Lincecum hit a bases-loaded triple to cap a five-run first inning and Baltimore held for its fifth consecutive victory.

Randy Milligan and Cal Ripken homered for Baltimore, which has 11 homers in its last four games in Camden Yards. The victory gave Baltimore its first three-game home sweep against Seattle since September 1990.

Mike Mussina (4-0) allowed five runs in seven-plus innings and Gregg Olson got five outs for his fifth save. Rich DeLucia (1-3) gave up six runs and six hits in two innings.

Twins 4, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — Scott Erickson won for the first time in six starts this season.

A day after the Twins won 7-6 in a game featuring eight home runs, no one came close to connecting. Instead, the teams combined for a series of bloopers and opposite-field base hits in a tricky wind.

Erickson began the game with an 0-3 record and a 5.10 ERA, this after a year in which he went 20-8 with a 3.18 ERA. This time, he weaved in and out of trouble and left after the sixth inning with a 3-2 lead. Rick Aguilera got the last three outs for his seventh save in nine opportunities.

Royals 5, Red Sox 2

BOSTON — Kevin Appier pitched eight strong innings as the Kansas City Royals beat Boston for only their fourth victory in 23 games.

Kevin McReynolds hit a solo homer, his fourth, in a two-run seventh as the Royals ended Boston's four-game winning streak.

Appier, who was 0-2 despite a 1.27 ERA in five previous starts, scattered 10 hits and earned his first victory with the help of a wall-crashing catch by center fielder Brian McRae with two outs and the bases loaded in the fourth. Jeff Montgomery got the last three outs for his third save.

Tigers 8, Athletics 4

DETROIT — Tony Phillips hit a three-run homer in a five-run fourth inning as Detroit beat Oakland despite Mark McGwire's major league-leading 13th home run.

Eric King (2-3) allowed two runs and five hits in seven innings, struck out three and walked four. Mike Henneman got four outs for his fourth save.

Mike Moore (4-1) lost for the first time in nine decisions since Aug. 26, when he was beaten by Boston's Roger Clemens.

Blue Jays 4, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Dave Stieb pitched a three-hitter for his first win since back surgery, and Joe Carter homered twice for the victorious Blue Jays.

Stieb (1-2), who spent most of last season on the disabled list and had surgery on a disc Dec. 4, won for the first time since last May 11 against the Chicago White Sox.

Funk tackles The Woodlands

Associated Press

THE WOODLANDS — Fred Funk, a former college golf coach, shot a final-round 2-under-par 70 Sunday to win the Houston Open and become the event's third straight first-time winner.

Funk, winless in four years on the PGA Tour, shot a course-record 62 on Saturday and held steady over the final holes Sunday to beat Kirk Triplett by two shots after Funk had dueled most of the round with defending champion Fulton Allem.

Funk finished with a 72-hole total of 272, 16 under par, to earn the $216,000 first prize.

But Funk had to survive a scary 72nd hole before claiming his prize. He escaped disaster when his 175-yard second shot to the par-4 barely cleared a lake.

He then got down in two for the victory while Allem faded to fourth with his fourth bogey — all in the final nine holes. Allem was forced to play out of a difficult lie near the 18th green and had a final-round 73 for a 276 total.

Triplett started the day five shots off Funk's lead. He birdied the 72nd hole for a 67 and a 274 total.

Trevino captures third straight

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Lee Trevino became the first senior golfer in five years to win three consecutive tournaments when he shot a 67 on Sunday to beat Orville Moody by a stroke in the Las Vegas Senior Classic.

Seniors

Trevino, who came into this event off victories in The Tradition and the PGA Senior Championship, averted a playoff when he rolled in a birdie putt on the 18th hole to negate Moody's birdie on the final hole.

Trevino finished at 206, 10 under par for three tours of the Desert Inn Country Club.

Moody, who shared the 36-hole lead with Trevino, closed a final-round 68 with birdies on the last two holes.

Trevino is the first golfer to win three straight since Chi Chi Rodriguez captured three in a row in 1987. Rodriguez was going for his own triple this week as two-time defending Las Vegas champion.

Tewksbury stops San Diego on four hits

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Bob Tewksbury pitched a six-hitter for his first complete game of the season as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the San Diego Padres 7-1 Sunday.

Felix Jose had three hits and two RBIs, including a run-scoring triple, and Gerald Perry hit two run-scoring doubles for the Cardinals, who staked Tewksbury (3-0) to a 7-0 lead with three runs in the first inning and four more in the second.

Tewksbury, who struck out four and had no walks, allowed his only run in the fourth when Fred McGriff hit his eighth home run.

Tewksbury lowered his ERA to 1.46, third best in the National League, as the Cardinals finished their road trip with a 5-2 record.

The Cardinals battered starter Dave Eiland (0-2) for seven runs on nine hits in 1 1/2 innings.

Eiland, bothered by a muscles strain and back spasms in two earlier outings, has yet to go past 5 1/2 innings in any of his five starts. In 18 innings total, he has allowed 14 earned runs and 28 hits.

Astros 1, Pirates 0

HOUSTON — Steve Finley hit a home run with two outs in the eighth inning to give Houston a victory over Pittsburgh.

Finley's homer, his second of the season, came off reliever Roger Mason (1-2).

Al Osuna (3-0) pitched one-third of an inning for the victory. After Cecil Espy led off the ninth with a walk, Doug Jones relieved and finished for his seventh save in eight opportunities.

Reds 7, Cubs 1
CINCINNATI — Bill Doran and Paul O'Neill homered as Cincinnati beat Chicago in Jose Rijo's return from the disabled list.

The Cubs lost for the eighth time in 10 games and completed a miserable week that included four consecutive shutouts, a 36-inning scoreless streak and the one-run effort to conclude the series against the Reds.

Cincinnati has won seven of its last 10 and was buoyed by the return of Rijo. The right-hander came off the disabled list and went 4 2/3 innings, giving up six hits and one run while striking out four.

Mets 7, Braves 0

ATLANTA — Eddie Murray hit his 400th career home run and David Cone pitched a five-hitter for his second straight shutout.

Cone (3-1) struck out eight and walked four in recording his third straight victory. He also singled home two runs in a five-run fifth inning.

When Murray connected in the eighth inning off Marvin Freeman, the Braves' third pitcher, he became the 24th player in major league history and the second active player to reach 400 homers. Dave Winfield of the Toronto Blue Jays is the other with 410.

The victory was the Mets fifth in six games.

Phillies 12, Giants 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Mariano Duncan went 5 for 5, including a home run, as Philadelphia routed San Francisco.

John Kruk and Dale Sveum each added three RBIs for the Phillies, who had 15 hits. Kruk had a two-run single in a five-run sixth that gave Philadelphia an 11-1 lead.

NBA: Blazers eliminate Lakers same span.

Blazers 102, Lakers 76

LAS VEGAS — The strange, tragedy-marred season of the Los Angeles Lakers ended when Portland eliminated them from the NBA playoffs.

Clyde Drexler had 26 points, 10 rebounds and seven assists as the Trail Blazers won the best-of-five first-round series 3-1.

The Lakers' 1991-92 season closed with a "home" game at Thomas & Mack Center, UNLV's court.

Originally scheduled for last Friday night at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif., the game was postponed and switched 300 miles to Las Vegas after violence erupted Wednesday night in the Los Angeles area in the wake of the Rodney King verdict.

Portland, which lost 4-2 to Los Angeles in the Western Conference finals last year, took control Sunday by holding the Lakers to 33 points in the first half, a season low for Los Angeles and an all-time opponent low for the Trail Blazers in the playoffs.

The Trail Blazers, who play Phoenix in the second round, led 49-33 at the break and the Lakers didn't threaten afterward.

Danny Ainge, who finished with 19 points, came off the bench to help the Trail Blazers take command in the second quarter. They began the period ahead 22-18, then pulled steadily away as Ainge had 10 points, including a pair of 3-pointers, four assists and two steals in the quarter.

Los Angeles, meanwhile, scored just 15 points in the period, making 6 of 19 shots.

Sedale Threatt scored 17 points and Byron Scott 15 for the Lakers, whose season started with Magic Johnson's shocking announcement that he had tested positive for the virus that causes AIDS and was retiring.

By the time the Lakers made it to the playoffs — clinching the final remaining berth with an overtime victory over the Clippers in the last regular-season game — they also were without James Worthy and Sam Perkins because of injuries.

Clippers 115, Jazz 107

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The riots in the Los Angeles area cost the Los Angeles Clippers true homecourt advantage in the twice-delayed Game 4 of their playoff series against the Utah Jazz.

It didn't cost them a victory. The Clippers had their home floor and enough of their fans to make a difference as they beat Utah at the Anaheim Convention Center.

Danny Manning had 33 points and 10 rebounds to lead the way as the Clippers tied the series 2-2, forcing a fifth and deciding game Monday night at the Delta Center in Salt Lake City, where the Jazz are 39-4 this season, including decisive wins in the first two games of the series.

Only three teams have ever overcome an 0-2 deficit in a best-of-five NBA series.

The Clippers won by outscoring the Jazz 11-2 in the final 1:44. Doc Rivers, who had 11 of his 17 points in the fourth quarter, made two free throws with 54 seconds remaining and a three-point play with 24 seconds left to extend a one-point lead to six, clinching the victory.

Ron Harper scored 26 points for the Clippers, who won despite an outstanding performance by Utah's Karl Malone, who had a career playoff high 44 points and 11 rebounds.

Malone made 11 of 18 field goal attempts and 22 of 24 free throws and scored 14 points in the fourth quarter.

The game was originally scheduled for Thursday night at the Los Angeles Sports Arena. It was delayed until Saturday because of the civil unrest arising out of the acquittal of four white policemen in the beating of black motorist Rodney King.

Then it was delayed further and moved to the cozy facility in Anaheim, where a crowd of 7,148 made plenty of noise in rooting the Clippers on.

"After the second out, I went to cover third base and (catcher) Fausto (Tejeda) threw the ball to me to see if the runner had left too soon. I then walked toward the mound, but kept the ball and got the tag," Correia said.

ANGEL DUST: The Diablos and Angels meet again at 7 p.m. today with El Paso owning a 6-3 lead this season in games between the two teams. There will be an open date Tuesday before the Wichita Wranglers come to town for five games, beginning Wednesday...The Angels have lost seven of nine games at home this year...

Oilers halt Canucks in OT

Associated Press

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Joe Murphy scored at 8:36 of overtime on Sunday to give the Edmonton Oilers a 4-3 victory over the Vancouver Canucks in Game 1 of the Smythe Division finals.

NHL

Murphy intercepted a poor breakout pass by defenseman Dave Babych, raced into the Canucks' zone and snapped a 20-foot shot from between the circles over goaltender Kirk McLean's left shoulder for his fourth playoff goal.

Both goalies were tested in overtime, but Edmonton's Bill Ranford made the two best stops when he robbed Pavel Bure and Trevor Linden about two minutes apart.

Penguins 4, Rangers 2
NEW YORK — The New York Rangers controlled Mario Lemieux. They couldn't stop the rest of the Pittsburgh

Penguins.

The Penguins got a goal and an assist each from Kevin Stevens and Ron Francis and a 35-save performance by goaltender Tom Barrasso to beat the Rangers in the opener of the Patrick Division finals.

Barrasso outshone Rangers goaltender John Vanbiesbrouck, who had been practically unbeatable at Madison Square Garden in the second half of the season and was 4-0 against Pittsburgh during the regular season.

Bruins 6, Canadiens 4
MONTREAL — Steve Leach scored twice as the Boston Bruins capitalized on a rare off-night by Montreal goaltender Patrick Roy in the opener of the Adams Division final.

Roy, a two-time Vezina Trophy winner whose forte is consistency, was beaten on his first shot of the game from defenseman Gord Hynes and allowed five goals on the first 18 shots he faced.

MCC: Sudden death not needed

(From 1C)

Steve had been playing well all day and I was pretty sure of his ability to make that 10-foot par putt he had," said Bryan, a stock broker who finished his Division II All-American collegiate career at Abilene Christian last season.

"The course played a little long because they had the tees back. Before we went out today I felt a 68 would be a good score. Once we got out there I decided a 69 would be a good score. As it turned out, 70 worked for us," Whiteside said.

For Morgan and the long-hitting Nunez, the Fates seemed to be working overtime against them Sunday. On the par 4 14th, Nunez' eight-foot birdie putt rolled around the lip and kicked out, and the same thing happened to Morgan on the par 3 11th.

On the 16th, Nunez saw his 18-foot birdie putt stop an inch short of the hole, while his 20-foot putt par putt on 18 that would have sent the match to a sudden death playoff slipped just past the cup.

"We had some putts that were so close, but just didn't fall. Maybe we were forcing it a little bit. If just three or four of those putts would have gone in ...

"Even if we had gone to a play-off I felt it would have given us a little momentum for sudden death. I would have gotten pumped for that," Nunez said.

"We didn't get any breaks, but that's golf."

"We got our breaks yesterday and the day before," added Morgan, who with Nunez shot 67-67 in the first two rounds. "The ball didn't go in the hole for us today and Steve carried their team. He's probably been the best golfer in the whole area for the past 10 years."

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KQ732 ♠AQJ54 ♦63 ♣8
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—With a minimum opening bid facing a limited force, it's doubtful the combined assets are enough for slam. Therefore, there's no point in introducing your hearts. You've already found a playable fit, so bid four spades.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AJ854 ♠7652 ♦93 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Dbl ?

What action do you take?

A.—After an opposing takeout double, a jump in opener's suit would be preemptive. That action, however, should be reserved for hands that contain a singleton and few defensive values. Here you should make the same response you would have had there been no double. Raise to two hearts.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠72 ♠QJ83 ♦QJ62 ♣J43
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A.—Normally, you would show four-card suits up-the-line. However, when your hand is so weak that you intend making only one forward-going response, it is usually right to bid the major rather than the minor, especially if the red suits are involved. Bid one heart.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠6 ♠AKQ54 ♦AQJ854 ♣A
What is your opening bid?

A.—Two-suited hands are very difficult to bid if you start with an artificial forcing two clubs. This holding will be easier to describe if you open one diamond and reverse into hearts. If you play strong two-bids, by all means open two diamonds.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠5 ♠AKJ93 ♦AJ6 ♣9852
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Not very pretty. To rebid three hearts would show a six-card suit, and a raise to three no trump could be catastrophic. Bidding three diamonds to pinpoint your side strength might derail the auction, so that leaves only a bid of three clubs. We hate introducing such an anemic suit at the three-level, but at least it draws attention to the fact we have a distributional hand.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠83 ♠AKJ76 ♦954 ♣AJ8
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—An awkward hand. You can't raise spades, and a heart rebid would promise a six-bagger. Since bidding no trump with an un-stopped suit is unappealing, the only stratagem left is to make a temporizing bid of three clubs.

David Bowie secretly marries fashion model Iman in Lausanne

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — David Bowie has secretly married the fashion model Iman in Lausanne, a city official said Sunday.

Michel Perret said he supervised the brief city hall ceremony April 24 in this Lake Geneva city, where Bowie has a house. Two friends of the couple attended, but Perret said he does not know who they were.

Bowie, 46, and Somalia-born Iman, 36, have had previous marriages. They were engaged in November in Paris.

Iman, hiding behind sunglasses, wore a plain white pants suit with a black top and carried a bouquet of white flowers, according to the mass-circulation Sunday newspaper Sonntagsblick.

Bowie wore a black suit and tie with a white rose on his lapel, the paper said.

PARIS — Jacques Cousteau is France's most popular person, topping the list of 50 most popular French citizens with a 56-percent favorable rating, according to a weekly newspaper's poll.

Cousteau, 81, edged the Abbe Pierre, a 79-year-old priest who has devoted his life to the homeless, with 52 percent, and TV journalist Anne Sinclair with 32 percent, according to the Journal du Dimanche and the polling firm IFOP.

Cancer specialist Leon Schwartzberg, scientist and former Cabinet minister Haroun Tazieff and actor Jean-Paul Belmondo were next, according to the April 13 survey among 985 French older than 18.

There was no margin of error given.

President Francois Mitterrand, whose popularity has suffered in the face of high unemployment and sagging economy, was 30th place with a 16-percent favorable response, just ahead of flamboyant businessman Bernard Tapie, recently named to the government as urban minister.

NEW ORLEANS — Huey Lewis answered room service in his underwear and Gladys Knight arrived with a leather-clad entourage and 45 pieces of luggage, but that's business as usual at the Jazz Fest hotel.

For the second year, the Sheraton on downtown Canal Street was the official hotel of the New Orleans Jazz & Heritage Festival, ending Sunday night. About 25 acts were booked into the hotel.

"We found out if so-and-so wants his bed on the left side of the room or the right side of the room," said Beth Landry, Sheraton's spokeswoman.

Miss Knight, for example, had a refrigerator in her parlor and her bedroom, as requested, had nothing gray or brown in it. Despite the status of their celebrity status, the Sheraton staff says the stars tip just about the same as regular guests.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Oscar-winning actor Don Ameche says some of today's movies are made for the wrong reasons.

"Today what you see comes of a motivation based purely on money," the 84-year-old Ameche told The Tennessean in an interview published Sunday. "It's amazing when you think of the kinds of pictures they used to make and that they still could be making."

Ameche, who won an Academy Award for his supporting role in 1985's "Cocoon," was a romantic leading man in the 1930s with such co-stars as Loretta Young and Gene Tierney.

In "Folks," Ameche portrays the father of Tom Selleck, whose unexpected financial crisis requires him to have his parents move in with him.

HOUSTON — The Cold War has been won, Richard von Weizsacker, president of Germany, told more than 1,000 graduating Rice University students, and the choices for the world to come belong to the next generation.

"Competing against communism can no longer be the domineering guideline of your statehood," von Weizsacker said Saturday. "Competition, domineering, statehood — yours is to question all three."

"It is not what you got out of life that matters, but what you put into life," he said. "Getting something out of life is a solitary act, putting something into life makes you part of a team. A team in which you compete and share, not win and dominate."

Von Weizsacker has been president of the Federal Republic of Germany since 1984.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Actress Lisa Hartman will join her husband, country music singer Clint Black, actress Faith Ford, the Oak Ridge Boys and other celebrities for a charity benefit softball game.

The June 7 game will benefit the City of Hope Medical and Research Center in Duarte, Calif., and Nashville's W.O. Smith Community Music School, which offers 50-cent music lessons for underprivileged children.

Also scheduled to appear are Wynonna Judd, Brooks & Dunn, Suzy Bogguss, Steve Wariner, Exile, Travis Tritt, Sawyer Brown, Mark Collie, Diamond Rio, T. Graham Brown, Billy Dean, and Joe Diffie.
