Midland Police Chief Richard Czech says after his first year on the job, the force is becoming more efficient, more modern, and that communication between officers and himself, while often encouraged, is finally being realized.

Finding problems, gaining trust Czech's chief issues

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

After his first year — and many changes — as head of the police department, Chief Richard Czech said Tuesday he believes he has finally gained his officers' trust.

"I'm convincing officers that they don't have to be suspicious of me," Czech said. "I think they know that I need their input to run this department. I think we are beginning to turn the corner, and officers are beginning to come forward with ideas."

Czech, a veteran Tucson, Ariz., police captain, was hired to lead the force following a nationwide search prompted by a very critical management study released in May 1986. In sum, the report said the department under long-time Chief Wayne Gideon was poorly run, behind the times and in need of an infusion of modern police methodology.

"I think that I approached the department to find out what the problems were, then isolate them," Czech said. "One of the most important things was to introduce a philosophy of change that says there are ways police work can be done other than the way it's been done the last 20 years."

One of the first tasks for Czech has turned out to be one of his biggest struggles — trying to tame the department's information management system, including the computer system and records.

"We've been frustrated with that, there's no doubt about it," he said. "The computer's been a disappointment. We will have to improve the capacity of the computer — or get a new one. The problem is, that computer is several years old now, and no one ever found out what it was supposed to do.

Candidates seek signs of success in debate

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Republican and Democratic presidential candidates campaigned today in crucial early voting states, each looking for signs they gained ground from a two-hour debate that sharpened their battle lines.

There were plenty of victory claims as soon as Tuesday night's nationally televised confrontation ended, but there was no clear signal which of the 12 candidates drew the most applause in the millions of homes where it was seen.

Republican Pat Robertson flew to New Hampshire today to receive the endorsement of former Gov. Meldrim Thomson, a conservative leader in the state that holds the nation's first primary.

Democratic Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts had appearances scheduled in New Hampshire. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., headed for Iowa.

During an appearance on the CBS show, "This Morning," Simon defended his economic proposals which came under fire during the debate.

He said his proposal for an $8 billion jobs bill "would take only one-fourth of 1 percent of the budget."

Asked whether he thought he might be hurt by his appearance as the bespectacled, bow-tie candidate, Simon replied:

"They tell me to get rid of the horn-rim glasses, get rid of the bow-tie. I just go to a plain old barber. I don't accommodate my views to the latest public opinion polls."

"Nobody got bloodied," said GOP Senate leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

"I think the Democrats won tonight," said Gephardt. "I think we got some important points across."

NBC officials estimated that up to 25 million people watched the debate and the candidates took advantage of that massive exposure to preview the issues striking the most sparks as the campaign moves swiftly toward the first tests in primary and caucus states.

The discussion was shadowed by next week's summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, with the Democratic candidates offering more backing than the Republicans for the arms control treaty the two leaders plan to sign.

"It is nothing short of appalling that five of the six Republican candidates refuse to support the new arms control agreement," said Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn.

"Every Democrat here is for the INF (Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces) treaty. I hope you will ask (the Republicans) why only one of them is supporting their president," said Gephardt.

Vice President George Bush was the only Republican to offer unreserved backing for the treaty.

Referring to Dole's contention that he wants to read the treaty before deciding how to vote on it, Bush said, "I happen to have read the treaty.... I've read it and I believe it's good."

Indictment issue unlikely to delay Fonseca's trial

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The trial of accused arms dealer Victor Fonseca may not be delayed even though the indictment against him was quashed Tuesday, his defense attorney said this morning.

"We are anticipating going to trial in January, if we go to trial," attorney Jeff Hinkley said. "We had been talking about late, late December or January anyway. I don't think things have been disrupted terribly."

On Tuesday, State District Judge Vann Culp threw out the indictment against Fonseca, who was charged with conspiracy to commit theft over $20,000 in an alleged plan to buy missile parts needed by Iran.

In the motion, Hinkley and co-counsel Sandy Torres urged Culp to quash the indictment because it was too general, did not specify the owner of the allegedly stolen parts, and did not describe them adequately. Because of that, Hinkley argued, Fonseca could not prepare an adequate defense.

"This ruling, of course, makes the state walk a finer line at trial time," Hinkley said. "If they allege specific component parts of a missile system, they have to prove that. They also have to prove the owner of the property alleged in the indictment."

Fonseca was arrested Aug. 19 at Midland International Airport following an elaborate five-month sting operation conducted by the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

He was arrested as he inspected crates filled with what was supposed to be appear to be the missile parts — but instead were barrels filled with sand and gravel.

The case attracted national publicity, and widespread praise and criticism for Sheriff Gary Painter.

Culp's ruling was expected, prosecutor Ralph Petty and Hinkley agreed.

Dec. 11 arraignment anticipated for Fish in Getty land deal probe

From Staff Reports

District 3 City Councilman Kelly Fish likely will be arraigned Dec. 11 on felony theft charges following his indictment Monday by a Midland grand jury, a spokeswoman in State District Judge Vann Culp's office said today.

Becky Sizemore said arraignment proceedings likely will occur next week after Fish's name failed to appear on a list of persons to be arraigned Friday.

Fish, 29, surrendered to Midland County sheriff's deputies Monday night after a grand jury handed down two indictments, charging the councilman with theft of $20,000 and theft over $20,000 — both second-degree felonies.

The indictment followed a lengthy investigation of land deals that were executed before the 1985 merger of Getty Oil Co. and Texaco Inc. Texaco investigators have said an internal audit after the merger turned up questionable activities between 1980 and 1985.

Atlanta inmates release hostage; Talks continuing

ATLANTA (AP) — Cuban inmates freed one of their 90 hostages in a good-will gesture, and a lawyer who helped win the man's release said today he was trying to clarify for the rebellious prisoners an emerging agreement to end the siege.

"I think a lot of points have been settled. I think there are still a couple of hard points," Gary Leshaw of the Atlanta Legal Aid Society said at an early morning news conference outside the U.S. Penitentiary where the standoff dragged into a 10th day.

"We hope to get all the answers we need to answer their questions. Hopefully, we're close to the end of it," said Leshaw, who described his role in the negotiations as explaining legal matters to the inmates.

Reagan looking forward to arms accord — not 'detente'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is willing to sign a historic arms control accord with the Soviets, but says he won't be fooled into believing in a renewed era of detente.

Reagan also is laughing off Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's network television interview this week, the opening salvo in a pre-summit propaganda blitz.

"I don't resent his popularity or anything else — Good Lord, I co-starred with Errol Flynn once," Reagan said Tuesday.

However, the president will avail himself of a similar forum by taping an interview with four network anchormen for broadcast Thursday evening. CBS, ABC, NBC and Cable News Network will participate, said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

■ Related story — 7A

Reagan, who is under attack from conservatives opposed to the U.S.-Soviet treaty banning medium-range missiles, defended his arms control policy during a trip Tuesday to Jacksonville, Fla.

He also accused the Soviets of repression at home and brutality abroad. It was the latest attempt by Reagan to persuade his conservative supporters that he has not dropped his hard-line stance toward the Soviets, even though he plans to sign the arms treaty with Gorbachev during next week's summit meeting in Washington.

"In the excitement of the summit, the treaty signing and all the rest, we must not forget that peace means more than arms reduction," Reagan told a group of Jacksonville high school students and their parents.

He said he knew that during the warming of U.S.-Soviet relations more than a decade ago — dubbed the era of detente — the Soviets were "talking friendship" but also "worked even faster on the largest military buildup in world history."

"They stepped up their aggression around the world, and they became more aggressive at home," Reagan said.

Long arms race may have inhibited Soviet-U.S. relations

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the fourth in a five-part serialization of excerpts from Mikhail Gorbachev's new book. The excerpts were released in preparation for the upcoming summit between Gorbachev and U.S. President Ronald Reagan.

By MIKHAIL GORBACHEV

Pondering the question of what stands in the way of good Soviet-American relations, one arrives at the conclusion that, for the most part, it is the arms race. I am not going to describe its history. Let me just note that at almost all its stages the Soviet Union has been the party catching up.

By the beginning of the '70s we reached approximate military-strategic parity, but on a level that is really frightening. Both the Soviet Union and the United States now have the capacity to destroy each other many times over.

It would seem logical, in the face of a strategic stalemate, to halt the arms race and get down to disarmament. But the reality is different. Armories already overflowing continue to be filled with sophisticated new types of weapons, and new areas of military technology are being developed.

I shall not disclose any secret if I tell you the Soviet Union is doing all that is necessary to maintain up-to-date and reliable defenses. This is our duty to our own people and our allies. At the same time I wish to say quite definitely that this is not our choice. It has been imposed upon us.

All kinds of doubts are being spread among Americans about Soviet intentions in the field of disarmament. But history shows that we can keep the word we gave and that we honor the obligations assumed.

It is crystal clear that in the world we live in, the world of nuclear weapons, any attempt to use them to solve Soviet-American problems would spell suicide. This is a fact. I do not think U.S. politicians are unaware of it. Moreover, a truly paradoxical situation has now developed. Even if one country engages in a steady arms build-up while the other does nothing, the side that arms itself will all the same gain nothing. Any striving for military superiority means chasing one's own tail. It can't be be used in real politics.

Nor is the U.S. in any hurry to part with another illusion. I mean its immoral intentions to bleed the Soviet Union white economically, to prevent us from carrying out our plans of construction by dragging us ever deeper into the quagmire of the arms race.

I ask you to take a look at the experience of post-war decades. The Soviet Union emerged from the Second World War in very difficult condition.

Two killed, hundreds evacuated in hotel fire

LONDON (AP) — Fire broke out today in a popular six-story hotel near Buckingham Palace, killing two people and forcing the evacuation of more than 300 guests and hotel workers, the London Fire Brigade said.

Scotland Yard said the fire, which hat gutted three floors of the Rubens Hotel, may have been arson. There were no immediate arrests.

Guests evacuated from the hotel complained of confusion resulting from a false fire alarm that went off about three hours before the fire broke out. There was no immediate indication the false alarm was linked to the fire.

Brigade spokeswoman Liz Cook said one man was injured, though not seriously, after being rescued from a fourth-floor window ledge.

The fire broke out about 9:30 a.m., filling the fourth and fifth floors with smoke, Ms. Cook said. About 50 firefighters brought it under control within an hour.

CUBANS

He would not discuss specifics as to what kind of agreement might be reached, or what remained to be defined or settled. But he said negotiations were further along than at any point so far.

The 1,108 Cuban detainees still in the prison have been holding hostages since rioting Nov. 23 to protest a U.S.-Cuban agreement that could lead to their deportation as excludable aliens. One inmate was killed and three buildings burned.

Tuesday night's release of senior corrections officer Abdul-Saboor Rushdan, 36, followed an appeal by Leshaw and some inmate wives on a radio talk show popular among the prisoners. The Cubans were asked to free a hostage to bolster Leshaw's credibility and as a birthday present to Carla Dudeck, 29-year-old coordinator of Atlanta's Coalition to Support Cuban Detainees.

The Cubans, who released four hostages Sunday after a similar appeal on the show on radio station WRFG, shouted from a rooftop Tuesday night that only a fair agreement will win release of the others.

When Ms. Dudeck appeared outside the prison, the detainees serenaded her with a birthday song in Spanish and then shouted via public address system that one hostage would be released for her.

About two hours later, Rushdan walked out and was taken to a hospital for a checkup and to be reunited with his family.

"I think it's great," Ms. Dudeck said. "It helps establish our credibility."

The release came a few hours after four representatives of the Cubans met with government negotiators and reached substantial agreement on a number of unspecified issues, a Justice Department spokesman said.

The spokesman, Patrick Korten, said the meeting was "considerably more encouraging than others we have had in the last few days."

Korten would not be specific on the points of agreement, but said the influence wielded by about 100 radicals, who blocked an earlier mass hostage release, seemed to wane.

"This one (session) did not have the grandstanding and role-playing" that has been exhibited in the past by the dissident faction, Korten said.

Shortly after Korten's statements Tuesday, the detainees announced through their makeshift rooftop public address system that they wished to resolve the crisis, but only on their terms.

More than 280 Cuban inmates have surrendered, but only two did so Tuesday.

"We are confident that very soon that this crisis will end and the resolution will be favorable, morally and justly, to everyone involved," an unidentified prisoner said in English.

The inmate criticized the agreement that ended a similar hostage siege in Oakdale, La., where Cuban prisoners released their 26 hostages on Sunday.

"We fear that our Cuban detainee brothers in Oakdale have been cheated and deprived of their legal rights again," he said. "What happened at Oakdale was that the government brought the crisis to an end without really addressing the concerns of the Marielitos."

The detainee referred to immigrants who sailed from the Cubans port of Mariel to the United States in 1980.

"The defense attacked the indictment," Petty said. "The Court has granted the defense motion — in effect, telling the State to go back and re-draft the indictment. The State does not quarrel with the Court."

A grand jury may re-hear evidence in the case, including testimony from witnesses, as early as Dec. 16, Petty said.

"This is a matter we will look at very carefully," the prosecutor said of the setback. "In a sense, we are back to square one, but all of the motions, papers, etc., will be carried over."

Petty said he prepared a draft of a new, more specific indictment in anticipation of Culp's ruling.

"I thought the hearing was rather successful," Hinkley said.

Although no longer indicted, Fonseca remains jailed in lieu of $500,000 bond on the original charge of engaging in organized activity.

Earlier in the hearing, Culp also granted a defense motion to suppress recordings of telephone calls made from the airport which included Fonseca as a party.

Two conversations were discussed, both of which occurred Aug. 19, the day of the arrest. One was between Fonseca and Marcellino DeBrito, the other between Fonseca and Achmed Kashani. DeBrito and Kashani were both named in the indictment against Fonseca as co-conspirators in the plot to buy the missile parts.

Petty argued that since undercover officers heard Fonseca's portion of the conversation, that could not be suppressed.

"Anything he said in the presence of investigators is not suppressible because there was no expectation of privacy," the prosecutor told Culp.

FISH

Fish worked for Getty as a landman from 1980 through 1985. He interned with the company in 1978, prior to his graduation in 1979 from the University of Texas at Austin.

Fish is charged with collecting commissions from the sale of oil and gas leases to Getty without the knowledge of his employer. The councilman was not entitled to any proceeds from those sales, according to the indictment.

Fish said Monday he is eager to go to trial and prove his innocence. Despite the indictment, Fish will not resign his council seat, he said.

Also coming out of Monday's grand jury session were several other indictments, District Clerk Vivian Wood said. However, she could not specify today whether they are related to the Texaco investigation.

Under the district clerk's procedures, the names of persons indicted by a grand jury cannot be released until arrest warrants are prepared and served by sheriff's deputies, Ms. Wood said Monday.

If convicted of the charges, Fish could face a maximum 20 years in prison on each count and a $20,000 fine.

"We are looking for efficiency here — we want to have control of the information. Where the information is, and how to get to it."

The department, which once numbered over 200, has been cut back to 191 positions, which is "not quite what I would like," the chief said.

"We need a few more officers, in patrol, in narcotics and intelligence," he said. "We could also use a few more civilian employees in the records section."

"We've just hired four officers since I came here. There is a lot of interest in staying in the department, and of course the weak economy helps that interest."

Czech's 5-year plan is ambitious, and includes proposals for a new police building, communications complex which would include the fire and ambulance dispatchers, an upgrade of the firearms training center, and a driving track.

While he understands that an already-stretched city budget makes realization of the plan difficult, the needs of the department are real, and will have to be met sooner or later.

"The communications building, which has been proposed to the City Council as a capital improvement project, is viable, and they are considering it now," Czech said, adding that the complex could be built for under $3.5 million.

"And we do need a new physical plant. The working conditions are not good here for these people," the chief said. "There is no place in the building where you can go for privacy.

"The detectives — where are they going to go to question a suspect? In traffic division, there is no room in there."

Czech has been highly visible in the community, and wants citizens — and his employees — to know that the department is going where he wants it to.

"I am happy with the good progress we have made," he said. "We have good people doing good jobs. Sometimes, though, it gets a little frustrating when things go slower than you think they should.

"But, we are getting there."

Hearst reporter honored for policy coverage

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — John P. Wallach, foreign affairs editor of the Hearst Newspapers, was awarded the 1987 Edwin Hood prize Tuesday for "excellence in the reporting of American foreign policy."

The honor was bestowed upon Wallach for his 1985-86 stories reporting initial clandestine contacts between the United States and Iran and the secret sale of arms to that country in a move to win the freedom of American hostages.

His dispatches also dealt with covert U.S. efforts, masterminded from the National Security Council by Lt. Col. Oliver North, to aid the Nicaragun contras. At the time Wallach wrote his stories, President Reagan and other administration officials were denying that the United States was involved in the sale of weapons to Iran or in surreptitious assistance to the contras.

In addition to honoring Wallach, the judges commended the Washington Bureau of the Hearst Newspapers for supporting his journalistic endeavors.

While Wallach, 44, won the Hood award for print journalism, the winner in the broadcast category was Stuart Loory, chief Washington correspondent for Cable News Network, for a television series on the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

The prize, named in honor of the late Associated Press diplomatic correspondent, was presented at a National Press Club luncheon at which the guest speaker was Harrison Salisbury, former New York Times foreign correspondent and past recipient of the Hood award.

Ray Wilkonson (cq) and Rod Norland of Newsweek were named runners-up to Wallach for their coverage of terrorism.

Wallach's previous commendations include Overseas Press Club awards in 1979 and 1982; the Raymond Clapper Memorial Award in 1978 for his coverage of the Camp David summit accords; the Edward Weintal Award for diplomatic reporting in 1980 and the B'Nai B'Rith Humanitarian Award in 1978.

BOOK

Whereas not a single enemy bomb was dropped and not a single enemy shot was heard on the U.S. mainland, a large part of our country was an arena for the fiercest battles. Our losses — both human and material — were enormous. Nevertheless, we succeeded in restoring what had been destroyed, in building our economic potential and in confidently tackling our defensive tasks. Is this not a lesson for the future?

It is inadmissible that states should base their policies on mistaken views. We know there is an opinion current in the U.S. and the West generally that the threat from the Soviet Union comes not because it possesses nuclear weapons.

The reasoning is as follows: The Soviets well know that if they attack the U.S., they can't escape retaliation. The U.S. is equally well aware that retaliation will follow an attack on the U.S.S.R. Therefore, only a mad man would unleash nuclear war.

The real threat, according to these people, will arise if the Soviet Union accomplishes its plans for accelerating socio-economic development and shows its new economic and political potential. Hence the desire to exhaust the Soviet Union economically.

We sincerely advise Americans: Try to get rid of such an approach to our country. Hopes of using any advantages in technology or advanced equipment so as to gain superiority over our country are futile. To act on the assumption the Soviet Union is in a "hopeless position" and that it is necessary just to press it harder to squeeze out everything the U.S. wants is to err profoundly. Nothing will come of these plans.

In real politics there can be no wishful thinking. If the Soviet Union, when it was much weaker than now, was in a position to meet all the challenges that it faces, then indeed only a blind person would be unable to see that our capacity to maintain strong defenses and simultaneously resolve social and other tasks has enormously increased.

I shall repeat that as far as United States foreign policy is concerned, it is based on at least two delusions. The first is the belief that the economic system of the Soviet Union is about to crumble and that the U.S.S.R. will not succeed in restructuring. The second is calculated on Western superiority in equipment and technology and, eventually, in the military field. These illusions nourish a policy geared toward exhausting us through the arms race, so as to dictate terms later. Such is the scheme; it is naive.

Curent Western policies aren't responsible enough, and lack the new mode of thinking. I am outspoken about this. If we don't stop now and start practical disarmament, we may all find ourselves on the edge of a precipice.

WEDNESDAY: To a nuclear-free world

SUMMIT

The president said he will insist in his third summit with Gorbachev that "we do not want mere words. This time, we're after true peace."

The president said he planned to talk tough with the Soviet leader, promising to "have a few words" about persecution of political and religious activists as well as Soviet military activity around the world.

Citing the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan as an example of "what communist oppression means," Reagan said he will tell Gorbachev that the Soviet Union "has no legitimate purpose" in that nation and press him to set a date to withdraw the 115,000 Soviet troops that have been battling the Afghan rebels since 1979.

"I will also say it's time for them to leave Cambodia, Ethiopia, Angola and Nicaragua," Reagan promised.

Defending his drive for an arms control accord, Reagan chided those who said he wasn't sincere when he first proposed the elimination of the medium-range missiles, the so-called "zero option."

"They sneered and said I couldn't be serious. It was a sure sign, they said, that I was against arms reductions altogether," Reagan said.

Reagan said he plans "to keep right on marching" on the arms control path, pledging to keep negotiators working on an accord to cut in half the arsenals of long-range strategic missiles, as well as reducing the level of forces in Europe.

Reagan's appearance came one day after Gorbachev granted an hour-long television interview to NBC-TV, in which he pledged to match U.S. research efforts on a space-based, anti-missile defense system, but not to deploy it.

Reagan has pledged to move ahead with his "Star Wars" system, and has rejected Soviet efforts to limit it in return for cuts in long-range nuclear weapons.

Correction

In Tuesday's edition, the Reporter-Telegram incorrectly reported that a Midland grand jury Monday returned at least five indictments against persons suspected of involvement in Getty Oil Co. land transactions made over a five-year period beginning in 1980.

District Clerk Vivian Wood said the grand jury handed down other indictments Monday, but the cases they relate to are unspecified.

Mexican American groups to sue state over alleged discrimination

AUSTIN (AP) — Three Mexican American organizations, backed by several legislators, plan to file suit Thursday against the state to reverse what they say have been decades of discrimination in Texas universities.

State Rep. Alex Moreno, a Democrat and attorney from Edinburg, confirmed that a press conference scheduled for Thursday will coincide with the filing of a suit alleging unequal expenditure of state higher-education funds in areas of Texas with high concentrations of Mexican Americans.

The suit will charge that Texas and its public universities have failed to live up to the provisions of a 1983 out-of-court settlement with the U.S. Department of Education that requires the universities to recruit and retain minority students, the Austin American-Statesman reported today.

The Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund drafted the suit. The group has filed several suits in Texas cities that successfully challenged educational and political systems that discriminated against minorities.

Joining MALDEF in the legal action are the two oldest and most powerful Mexican American organizations in Texas — the League of United Latin American Citizens, or LULAC, and the American GI Forum.

The suit will contend that by providing less money for higher education in South Texas, the state is violating the equal protection clause of the Texas Constitution, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, sex or creed.

Gerald Hill, a former state legislator who is now a lobbyist for the University of Texas System, said he was told that several Hispanic legislators would join the suit.

"I have heard for some time that they (Mexican American organizations) are going to file suit jointly, and it relates to funding patterns of higher education," Hill said Tuesday.

The filing will comes at a time when UT System officials — including Chancellor Hans Mark and Hill — and Texas A&M University officials have been visiting South Texas colleges as part of a legislative mandate to improve higher education in the region, which has the highest percentage of Mexican Americans in the state.

One state senator who asked not to be identified told the newspaper the timing of the suit is not accidental.

"This is a shotgun wedding, in the sense that Hans Mark and company know this lawsuit is coming," the senator said.

Space station to give Houston about 1,000 jobs

HOUSTON (AP) — Construction of a U.S. space station will provide jobs for about 1,000 people in the Houston area, says a major contractor chosen to build part of the Earth's first permanent orbiting suburb.

Tuesday, a division of McDonnell Douglas Corp. was selected by NASA to build major components for the space station, while three other companies were selected as prime contractors for other parts of the project.

The $1.9 billion contract won by the McDonnell Douglas Astronautics Co. will mean about 1,000 jobs around Houston in coming years, said William Hayes, director of the company's space station division.

Hayes spoke during a news conference at the company's Houston offices following announcement of the contracts by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire and Gerry Griffin, president of the Greater Houston Chamber of Commerce, also attended the news conference, where a small-scale model of the space station was prominently displayed.

"All of us in Houston are very excited to be a part of the future this country has in space," Mrs. Whitmire said. "We're happy to be here, to celebrate with the winning team's members."

Griffin said that while the contract would help diversify the city's economic base and bring jobs to the area, the space station project also is a symbolic shot in the arm to a space-faring nation traumatized by the January 1986 explosion of the space shuttle Challenger.

"I think the signal it really sends is one the country needs very badly — that the country is getting back on track with the space program," Griffin said. "I say, let's get on with it as quick as we can."

The news conference was held simultaneously with McDonnell Douglas officials in St. Louis, Mo., and Huntington Beach, Calif., and carried by television between the three locations.

While hiring in the early stages of the program in Houston could be expected to total about 1,000 workers, more may be hired as activity increases locally later in the program. The space station is scheduled to be deployed in the mid-1990s.

"The center of gravity will move to Houston in the out (later) years of the program," Hayes said.

Official still backs castration for AIDS despite controversy

EL PASO (AP) — An El Paso County commissioner's suggestion that AIDS victims be castrated to prevent the disease's spread has provoked a storm of protest, but he says he doesn't plan to change his mind.

Orlando Fonseca's suggestion came during a Nov. 2 commissioners court meeting, when he said his Catholic upbringing taught him that homosexuality is morally wrong. Gay men comprise one of the groups most susceptible to AIDS.

In the weeks following Fonseca's remark, homosexuals' rights groups and 16 El Paso religious leaders representing nine Protestant churches and two synagogues asked him to be more compassionate toward AIDS victims.

But Fonseca has remained steadfast in his opinion, even when a Catholic priest criticized him at Monday's meeting.

The Rev. James Hall, director of Marriage and Family Life Ministries for the El Paso Catholic diocese, read excerpts from church communications denouncing prejudice based upon sexual orientation.

"It is wasteful to let energies better spent in continued care for the suffering to be used up in fighting prejudices that don't belong in 1987," Hall told Fonseca. "Prejudice, in all its forms, falls short of the Christian morality."

But Fonseca compared homosexuals to some of the lower animals.

"I know that God created all creatures — lizards, spiders, cockroaches — but to be a child of Jesus is not to be a creature of God," the commissioner said.

Ex-convicts indicted on hazardous waste charges

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal grand jury indicted three former Bastrop Federal Correctional Institute employees, charging that they illegally disposed of hazardous wastes from the prison as part of a scheme to defraud the government.

The case marked the first time that current or former federal employees have been indicted on charges of illegal waste disposal at a federal facility, the Environmental Protection Agency said.

The grand jury Tuesday indicted Lee Bradley Grubbs, 40, of Round Rock; Robert Perry Kruse, 37, of Taylor; and Carol Kaye Kisamore, 40, of Elgin. They were charged with conspiracy, mail fraud, false claims and illegal handling of hazardous waste, EPA spokeswoman Karen Brown said.

Kruse declined comment. Grubbs and Kisamore referred comments to attorney Carl Hughes of Oklahoma City, Okla., who could not be reached Tuesday night.

According to the indictments, a fictitious company was set up to dispose of hazardous waste from the prison and the government paid for the work.

Grubbs was responsible for arranging for proper disposal of hazardous waste at the prison, a medium-security institution, the indictments said. Grubbs was superintendent of industries in the Unicor Inc. factory at the prison.

Unicor is the corporate name of Federal Prison Industries, which uses prison laborers to make products that are sold to other government agencies, Brown said.

The indictments allege that a fictitious company, Central Texas Disposal Systems, was created as part of the conspiracy and that the three ex-employees had papers drawn up indicating the company had disposed of 60 barrels of hazardous waste from the prison.

Grubbs and Kisamore assured prison officials the waste disposal was being handled legally, the indictment said. Kruse was plastics worker foreman, and Kisamore was the factory's business manager.

The barrels were taken to Kruse's property in Williamson County in January 1986, Ms. Brown said. She said that according to the indictment, Kruse later received a $12,000 payment through the fictitious company from the government for disposal of the waste.

Three of the counts charged the ex-employees with illegally transporting hazardous waste to a facility that did not have a permit, transporting the waste without a manifest and disposing of it without a permit, Brown said.

The wastes found at Kruse's property included the toxic chemicals methyl ethyl ketone, methylene chloride toluene and acetone. The chemicals were solvents used at the factory in production of Army helmets under a contract with the Defense Department, Ms. Brown said.

Federal Prison Industries spent more than $3,000 to remove drums and contaminated soil from the Williamson County site, she said, adding the dumping was discovered by the Texas Water Commission.

Most of Davis' debts expected to be resolved

FORT WORTH (AP) — A lawyer says oil heir T. Cullen Davis was expected to be relieved of more than $850 million in debts today and left with only three unresolved major debts amounting to less than $15 million following a hearing in U.S. Bankrupcy Court.

Davis, once considered one of the world's wealthiest men with a fortune estimated to be worth about $100 million, filed Chapter 7 bankruptcy July 2, listing debts of $865 million and property worth only $1.8 million.

Davis lost most of his fortune on ill-fated real estate investments, court papers filed Sept. 10 indicated.

The bankruptcy petition protected Davis from 46 creditors and also insulated him from civil suits filed by his ex-wife, Priscilla Davis, and other central figures in the Aug. 2, 1976, shooting spree by a mysterious "man in black" at the Davis mansion.

Eddie Roush Jr., a lawyer who represents Davis, said most of the debts are expected to be discharged at today's hearing.

Twalla J. Dupriest, the court-appointed trustee of Davis' petition, has until mid-January to raise objections to the actions taken at the hearing.

Two disputed debts stem from the 1976 shooting, in which Andrea Wilborn, 12, and Stan Farr were killed. The child was Priscilla Davis' daughter from a previous marriage and Farr was identified as her boyfriend.

A mistrial was declared June 22 in a civil trial of combined wrongful death suits filed by Jack Wilborn, Andrea's father, and Priscilla Davis. Jurors had deadlocked 8-4 against Davis.

Teacher admits 'wrong'

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — An intermediate school English teacher asked a jury for probation after pleading guilty to charges that he sexually assaulted two boys.

"I realize I've done wrong, but I believe everybody deserves a chance to prove himself," Raymond Earl Watts said during the punishment phase of his trial Tuesday.

Punishment proceedings were set to continue this morning.

Watts, 37, who taught seventh- and eighth-grade English at Faulk Intermediate School in Brownsville, had faced eight grand jury indictments accusing him of sexual assault and indecency with boys before he pleaded guilty to two of the charges Tuesday.

He faces punishment of up to 20 years and a $10,000 fine for each of the two charges of sexual assault of a minor.

Doctor claims discrimination

HOUSTON (AP) — A Pasadena physician stripped of his medical license after two of his fat-removal surgery patients died claims he was the victim of discrimination because he is Hispanic, attorneys say.

Tuesday, attorneys representing Dr. Hugo A. Ramirez asked U.S. District Judge Lynn N. Hughes to restore his medical license.

Hughes is conducting a non-jury trial in Ramirez's lawsuit against the Texas Board of Medical Examiners, which suspended Ramirez' license in April and then revoked it.

A witness called by Ramirez's attorneys testified Tuesday that an analysis of the board's disciplinary actions indicated the board was more likely to revoke licenses of physicians who met certain "discriminatory factors."

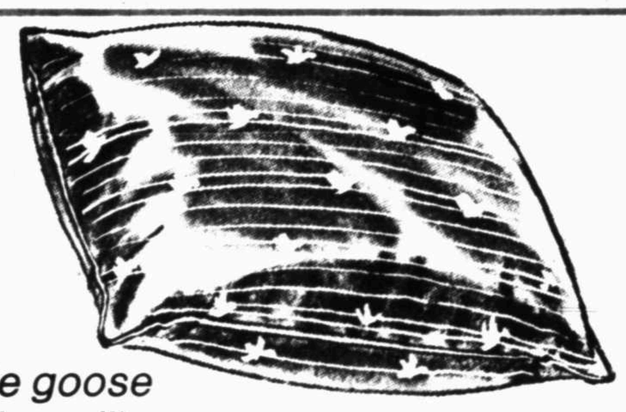

But Joe Franco, the board's director of investigations, testified that the board did not consider a doctor's national background in investigating a claim. Franco said he was of Mexican descent and that several board investigators are also Hispanic.

Cisneros to get award

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Mayor Henry Cisneros will receive the Local Government Leader of the Year award from American City and County magazine during the National League of Cities conference in Las Vegas Dec. 11-15.

"Mayor Cisneros has exhibited superior leadership qualities in the economic turnaround of his own city and has also shown outstanding strength in establishing and promoting the national agenda for local issues," said Ken Anderberg, editor and associate publisher of the magazine, in announcing the selection Tuesday.

Atlanta-based American City and County magazine is distributed monthly by more than 60,000 local government managers.

U.S. wants 'more than promise' about troops in Afghanistan

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev says he wants to pull his troops out of Afghanistan, but the United States wants more than a promise. It is looking for a specific timetable, preferrably when the Soviet leader calls on President Reagan next week.

The dispute over Afghanistan — one of the biggest barriers to better U.S.-Soviet relations — has been the subject of more presummit maneuvering than any issue except arms control.

Gorbachev said this week the whole Afghanistan problem could be settled "quickly" if the United States and the Soviets could work out an agreement.

Najibullah, the Soviet-backed president of Afghanistan, actually suggested a timetable — 12 months for the withdrawal of the estimated 115,000 Soviet forces in the country.

At the core of their statements was a willingness to withdraw the troops as long as the United States agreed to stop providing assistance to Afghan resistance forces that have used Western weapons to grind down the Soviet and Afghan Army troops.

Najibullah also said the 12-month timetable could be reduced if the rebels would agree to a cease-fire, an offer not likely to be taken up by resistance forces that have been fighting since Soviet troops entered the country in December 1979.

The United States responded to the Soviet and Afghan proposals with a simple message: set a date for withdrawal.

"Pack up, pull out and go home," Reagan said Monday in a speech to conservative supporters. "It's time they set a date certain for the complete withdrawal of all troops from Afghanistan."

The view was amplified by Michael Armacost, undersecretary of state for political affairs. He told reporters that long-running, United Nations-sponsored negotiations had made progress on some of the major elements of a settlement, but that Soviet unwillingness to specify a withdrawal date has been the sticking point for many months.

Still, both sides have come a long way since the November 1985 summit in Geneva when Reagan first met Gorbachev and made his first personal appeal for a Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan.

"Two years ago it was accepted wisdom that time was on the Soviets' side; that if Moscow stuck to its guns the resistance would fade and the Soviet-backed regime would become established," said a State Department official who studies Afghan affairs.

"Now it seems clear to everyone — including the Soviets — that the longer they stay the more difficult their eventual and inevitable withdrawal will be," said the official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

The Afghan struggle became a global issue in December 1979 when Soviet Army forces intervened on behalf of Moscow-backed politicians in Kabul.

Since then, resistance forces aided by the United States, Pakistan and China have been battling the Soviet divisions and Afghan Army units in a classic guerrilla war that gives the Soviets control of the big cities while the resistance forces operate with considerable freedom in parts of the countryside.

Private and State Department analysts credit the resistance's success to its ability to shoot down Soviet airplanes and helicopters with anti-aircraft arsenals that include sophisticated U.S. Stinger missiles.

The inability of the Soviet forces to crush the resistance — drawing comparisons between the inability of American soldiers to defeat Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces in the 1960s and 1970s — has been accompanied in recent months by settlement talks sponsored by the United Nations.

Sawyer now acting mayor of Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Eugene Sawyer, Chicago's longest serving black alderman, was elected acting mayor today after a chaotic 6½-hour City Council meeting marked by spectators waving dollar bills and shouting "No Deals!"

Sawyer, who succeeds the late Mayor Harold Washington, the city's first black mayor, was elected with the help of white aldermen who once had vigorously opposed his predecessor.

The council vote, which came at 4 a.m., was 29-19, with two not voting.

At one point during the wrangling, an alderman stood on his desk in an attempt to be recognized.

Sawyer, who has ties to the regular Democratic organization, sat quietly in the chambers as aldermen wrangled through the night over whether he or Timothy Evans, another black alderman and Washington's former floor leader, should be elected to lead the nation's third-largest city.

Sawyer and Evans shook hands after the vote. But motions to make it unanimous drew shouts of "No!" from Evans supporters.

The meeting, which began 9:30 p.m. Tuesday, became bogged down by procedural arguments, courtroom maneuvering, and an angry but peaceful demonstration by thousands outside City Hall.

After rejecting repeated motions to adjourn about midnight, aldermen began a marathon debate of the qualifications of Sawyer and Evans.

Sawyer, 54, was scorned by most of the estimated 5,000 people who jammed City Hall corridors and forced the closing of LaSalle Street during rush-hour Tuesday.

The council didn't begin seriously moving toward electing a successor to Washington, who died suddenly of a heart attack a week ago today at age 65, until after the crowd had dwindled to about 1,000.

Allies of Evans used one procedural move after another as they tried unsuccessfully to postpone a vote until Friday, giving their candidate more time to gather support.

Sawyer had sought to forge a coalition with white and Hispanic aldermen that would give him the votes he needed. But his supporters, though contending he had enough voted to be elected, said he needed more support among the black community.

With his family and interim mayor David Orr standing nearby, Sawyer took the oath of office in the council chambers, and then promised to carry on Washington's policies.

He defended himself against charges that he was tied to old-line machine politics.

"You have heard questions about my support of the reform movement," he said. "Let me end all speculation now.

"The reform movement intiated by Harold Washington shall remain intact and go forward. It will continue untainted by special interests. This city government will be an open city goverment...there shall be no cronyism or favoritism."

"When Harold Washington proclaimed the machine is dead, he was speaking the absolute truth."

Word of politicking and supposed backroom deals to fashion the majority vote of the 50-member council attracted many of the demonstrators, most of whom were pro-Evans and worried that Sawyer's candidacy was a return to machine politics.

"I'm afraid," said Kate Lane, 50. "And it's not an issue of black and white. It's about open government. In the old days, if you didn't know the right people, you didn't get anything for your neighborhood.

"Harold Washington changed all that and if we lose, what do we go back to?" she said.

"While Mayor Washington was dying we were looking at the resurrection of the 29," declared Evans supporter Alderwoman Dorothy Tilman, referring to the bloc of aldermen who had opposed Washington in the so-called Council Wars that marked his first term.

"My name ain't Monty Hall. This ain't 'Let's Make a Deal,'" she said.

Evans, 44, was elected as an alderman in 1973 after campaigning for former Mayor Richard J. Daley in the late 1960s and early 70s. But he shook off the machine to side with Washington's new coalition and now describes himself as a reformer.

At one point during the all-night meeting, Alderman Richard Mell, a Sawyer supporter, stood atop his desk and shouted in an attempt to be recognized as the council argued over procedural moves.

A crowd police estimated at up to 5,000, many Evans supporters, gathered outside, some yelling, "Remember Harold! No deals!" Many carried signs with messages such as "No More Uncle Toms" and "Don't Sell the Legacy."

NATION IN BRIEF

Children's peace summit coincides with big one

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dozens of youngsters aged 11 to 16 are in Washington for a Children's Peace Summit that will coincide with the U.S.-Soviet summit.

During their stay, which ends Dec. 10, the children plan to visit local schools, participate in a "human bridge" rally in support of U.S.-Soviet cooperation and participate in services at the Washington Cathedral.

Participants are from West Germany, Poland, Sweden, Finland, Great Britain, Japan, Afghanistan, Holland, Austria, Switzerland, Spain, the United States and the Soviet Union, organizers said Tuesday.

"The goal is that the most powerful people of the world give part of their time to answer questions of the most powerless," said Holger Gussefeld, of the Peace Bird movement based in West Germany.

Americans still distrustful

WASHINGTON (AP) — American voters believe Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev wants to reduce nuclear weapons but they still think the Soviets cheat on treaties and stir up trouble around the world, a poll shows.

The poll, released Tuesday, found that 71 percent of those surveyed feel Gorbachev "is different from other Soviet leaders." And respondents, by a margin of 57 percent to 32 percent feel he is sincere in saying he wants to reduce nuclear arsenals.

The poll, conducted by Marttila & Kiley, Inc. of Boston, found that Americans favored negotiating with the Soviets while still believing the Soviets violate existing treaties and are behind trouble spots in the world.

The poll, conducted on Oct. 15, 16 and 18, was based on telephone interviews with 1,002 registered American voters. It had a potential sampling margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points, sponsors said.

Pilots under tighter rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — New restrictions on small, private planes mean that all planes flying near 14 major airports must be equipped with devices that automatically provide altitude information to air traffic controllers.

The tighter restrictions went into effect Tuesday for pilots of small aircraft flying in controlled airspace, known as terminal control areas, near the airports.

The Federal Aviation Administration announced the new restrictions, effective Dec. 1, last January as part of its response to concerns about small planes and commercial jetliners mixing in crowded airspace.

The nine busiest TCAs have all along required aircraft to have altitude-reporting equipment. But the FAA decided to impose the same requirements on an additional 14 TCAs at somewhat smaller airports.

Enforcement of FOI urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two organizations of journalists are proposing that an independent agency be created to resolve disputes over access to government files under the Freedom of Information Act.

At a hearing Tuesday of the House Government Operations Subcommittee on Information, representatives of the groups said the Justice Department has failed to enforce the act.

Testifying were Jane E. Kirtley, executive director of The Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, and Paul K. McMasters, chairman of the freedom of information committee of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi.

Both endorsed a proposal for an independent, non-partisan ombudsman agency within the executive branch to mediate conflicts over release of government information.

Committee urged to drop tax increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic chairman and ranking Republican on the Senate Finance Committee today pledged swift action as the panel drafts tax increases to help achieve $76 billion in deficit cuts over two years.

The Reagan administration, meanwhile, is urging the committee to drop more than a third of the tax increases in its deficit-reduction package, including a boost in the payroll tax on 8 million workers.

But both Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the chairman, and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the ranking minority member, said they wished White House and congressional negotiators had requested bigger reductions in the federal budget's red ink.

"I think it's going to be easy for our part of the package," Packwood said of the committee's charge to find $23 billion in new tax revenues. "My disapointment is that the whole package when it's all done is so much less than we should have done."

Bentsen, interviewed along with Packwood on CBS-TV's "This Morning" program, expressed hope the committee would complete its work this week, but added, "We should have gone for much more."

If the administration successfully presses its request to substantially cut proposed tax increases, the committee might be forced to look at other taxes — including higher excise taxes on alcohol and tobaccco — to make up the difference. But there is no indication that will happen.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III arranged to meet with the committee today to spell out specific objections to the tax-increase bill that the panel approved in October. The deficit-reduction plan that the committee hopes to approve this week is likely to be built around the October bill.

That means it will not include any increase in income-tax rates.

President Reagan, meanwhile, said in a letter to House leaders Tuesday that he will have "no hesitation" in vetoing the huge spending bill expected to come to the floor for consideration Thursday, if the bill is not brought into line with the deficit-reduction pact.

In a letter to House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., Reagan said the current version of the bill "clearly violates both the spirit and the terms" of the deficit-reduction agreement.

House officials have said, however, that they intend to amend the bill to conform with the agreement.

The provision in the tax-increase bill affecting the greatest number of individuals would extend for three years the expiring 3 percent tax on telephone service. Most of the burden would fall on upper-income people and corporations.

The administration contends the limited increase in the payroll tax, which finances the Medicare program, could be especially harmful to small business. Half the tax increase would be paid by every employee earning over $45,000 a year and half by the employer.

Under present law, the Medicare tax of 1.45 percent applies only to the first $45,000 of wages that a worker earns in 1988. The provision in the Finance Comittee bill would eliminate that wage ceiling and apply the tax to all earnings. That would bring in $8.5 billion over two years.

Shultz claims Soviets are not giving up data

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has failed to turn over all the data required to close a nuclear missile agreement at next week's summit meeting, Secretary of State George P. Shultz says.

"We must have that data," Shultz said Tuesday as he also sharply criticized Iran for the way it has dealt with a U.N. call for a cease-fire in the Persian Gulf.

"The Iranians, I think, are deliberately making a monkey out of the United Nations and I don't like that," Shultz said in an interview with three news agencies.

He also criticized the Soviets, saying they had helped Iran give U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and the U.N. Security Council "a runaround."

Shultz referred to Iran's hedging on whether it intends to observe a cease-fire in its seven-year war with Iraq that the Security Council ordered on July 20.

The Soviets had promised to turn over the missile information by the end of last week. Shultz said he could not explain the holdup.

"We don't quite see what is so difficult," Shultz said. "We don't know why."

The data concern the number and location of some of the missiles to be outlawed in the impending U.S.-Soviet treaty on intermediate-range weapons.

The issue was one of the last Shultz resolved last week in Geneva with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze as they cleared the way for the treaty to be signed next week at the White House.

"I know they are having trouble getting it in satisfactory form," Shultz said.

The data relate to about 10 percent of the approximately 1,450 medium-range warheads the Soviets have in storage. Another 1,565 warheads are deployed on 683 missiles and will be withdrawn over three years.

The United States, meanwhile, will dismantle 364 missiles with 364 warheads.

Shultz also told reporters from The Associated Press, United Press International and Reuters that he found nothing new in Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's interview broadcast Monday night on NBC television.

Gorbachev's comment during U.S. interview censored from Soviet TV

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet television censored Mikhail S. Gorbachev's comment to NBC News that he and his wife discuss top government affairs, but broadcast in full his statements on touchy topics such as Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

The exchange between the Soviet leader and NBC anchorman Tom Brokaw about Raisa Gorbachev took just a brief part of the private, hour-long interview taped Saturday at the Kremlin and broadcast in full in the United States.

The fact that part of the passage on Mrs. Gorbachev was deleted when the interview was broadcast Tuesday night in the Soviet Union indicates how sensitive her role is in Soviet society.

Mrs. Gorbachev's stylish clothes and frequent presence at her husband's side have delighted the West but caused some grumbling in the Soviet Union, where families of top politicians have traditionally maintained a low profile.

Gorbachev also has broken from the traditional style of Soviet leaders, pushing for greater openness on certain topics and sweeping economic reforms.

During the interview, which was broadcast Monday night in the United States, Gorbachev spoke about such sensitive subjects as arms control, human rights and Afghanistan. The Associated Press obtained from NBC News an English-language text of the interview and compared it with the Soviet television program that was broadcast at 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Near the end of the NBC text, Brokaw asked Gorbachev:

"We've all noticed the conspicuous presence of Mrs. Gorbachev in your travels. Do you go home in the evening and discuss with her national policies, political difficulties and so on in this country?"

"We discuss everything," Gorbachev responded.

But the NBC text continued with the following exchange, which was deleted from the Soviet TV tape:

Brokaw: "Including Soviet affairs at the highest level?"

Gorbachev: "I think that I have answered your question in total. We discuss everything."

The Soviet tape picks up after the first response, with Brokaw saying, "I'll accept your answer," and going on to the next question on how Gorbachev learns about the United States.

North Korea accused of jet sabotage

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan said today indications are growing that communist North Korea may have sabotaged a missing South Korean airliner to disrupt elections and the 1988 Olympics here.

The jet with 115 people aboard disappeared Sunday over Burma, and officials in Seoul say there are strong suspicions a bomb destroyed the aircraft.

"It is a plain fact that North Korea has intensified its provocative moves to obstruct the upcoming presidential election and the Seoul Olympics," Chun told a special Cabinet meeting in Seoul.

On Tuesday, a mysterious Asian couple took poison pills just before being questioned in Bahrain about the jetliner, which they had left shortly before it disappeared. The man died and the woman was in critical condition.

Both were traveling with false passports.

Officials said the couple boarded Korean Air flight 858 at Baghdad, Iraq, where it originated, and got off at Abu Dhabi before the Boeing 707 headed across Asia toward Seoul. The plane vanished near the Burma-Thailand border, before a scheduled refueling stop in Bangkok.

A search in the area has not located any wreckage of the plane.

Officials in Bahrain say the man was traveling under the name Shinichi Hachiya, 69, and the woman as Mayumi Hachiya, 27, both of Okayama, Japan.

South Korea's Foreign Ministry said today it appeared the couple were members of the large Korean community in Japan, and that they had possible links to pro-North Korean groups.

News reports in Japan today quoted police as saying they suspected the dead man of being Akira Miyamoto, a Korean residing in Japan who was questioned about the forging of passports for an alleged North Korean spy ring in 1985.

A Tokyo Metropolitan Police official said he could not release the names of people questioned in the case. Government officials and police said they had no confirmation the man who died in Bahrain was Miyamoto, and they did not know the identity of the woman, but that both passports were forgeries.

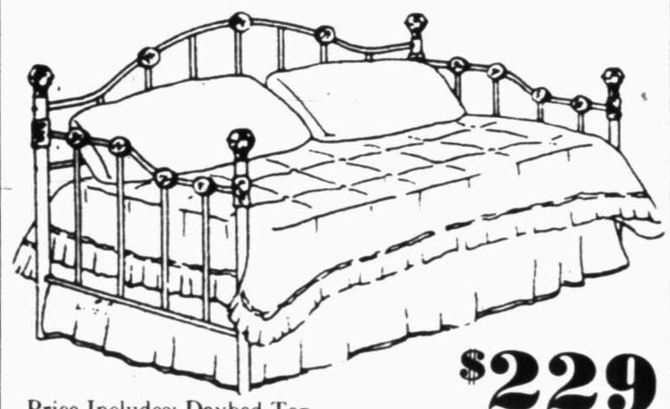

South Korea's government broadcasting service said authorities were checking possible links between the woman and Chosen Soren, a pro-North Korea organization of Koreans living in Japan.

"It is a stupid claim," said Choe Kwan Ick, of Chosen Soren's International Bureau in Japan. "Our organization has nothing to do with that kind of terrorism."

Chosen Soren operates schools and credit unions for Koreans in Japan, and, some say, trains spies on the side. The group has a membership equal to about one third of the 600,000 Koreans living in Japan, although others estimate that two-thirds of Koreans in Japan sympathize with the group.

While the predecessors of Chosen Soren engaged in terrorism during the Korean War, the group now mostly looks after the welfare of their Korean members who, because of Japan's lack of official ties to the North, are officially stateless.

Texas-style justice needs to be tamed

Texas-style justice has taken a beating in recent weeks, what with the Texas Supreme Court declining to reopen the Texaco-Pennzoil case. That decision, coming on the heels of the shenanigans pulled in lower courts earlier in the case, certainly did leave the impression that the state's high court was in session somewhere west of the Pecos.

Now Texaco is appealing to the U.S. Supreme Court, hoping to find a forum for its case. We hope it can because this case has only become more confused and muddied as time has passed.

Texaco's original court fight to have a $10.3 billion judgment against it overturned has become a larger battle: One that has drawn Texas' system of justice into question. The case has reeked with scandalous actions: Pennzoil lawyer Joe Jamail became the major contributor to the re-election campaign of Judge Anthony Farris who was assigned the case; Farris became ill late in the trial and was replaced by Judge Solomon Casseb Jr. who embraced Pennzoil's proposed jury instructions but later admitted in a speech that he didn't read the precedents cited by Texaco and that he probably erred in the New York law being applied in the case; and, now, Texas' highest court's refusal to do anything about the case seemingly asserts that Texas isn't interested in the law or in the integrity of the judicial system.

According to a comment in The Wall Street Journal on Nov. 5th, "Texaco's lawyers now will petition the U.S. Supreme Court. They will argue that the due-process clause of the 14th Amendment ensures impartial judges, yet the Texas Appeals Court mysteriously held that 'mere bias or prejudice' doesn't disqualify a judge. The full faith and credit clause means states must conscientiously apply each other's laws, meaning that Texas should have correctly applied New York law, since that is the law that covered Pennzoil's alleged deal with Getty. The commerce clause prohibits local favoritism."

It didn't happen, of course, to this state's judicial shame. It's more than interesting that attorneys general from 20 states including New York have filed briefs saying that the judge in the Texaco-Pennzoil case failed to follow relevant law. Now the U.S. Supreme Court has the responsibility of clearing up this mess.

Texas, on the other hand, also has a grave responsibility, which is to rebuild its justice system in order to regain the confidence of those who come here to do business and expect to find justice in the state's courts.

Without that confidence, all those who live and work in Texas have to assume that they are subject to law west of the Pecos.

Vaccine of democracy

Now we know why the military strongman ruling the small South American nation of Suriname was so skeptical about democracy.

The Surinamese are not ready for democracy, Lt. Col. Desi Bouterse grumbled recently, as his countrymen prepared to go to the polls for the first time since 1980. The colonel, an army physical education instructor when he seized power, did say that he would abide by the results of the election.

Last Thursday, a three-party opposition coalition in Suriname won a landslide victory, a popular rebuke to Bouterse's seven years of military dictatorship. Unofficial results gave the coalition 38 to 40 of the 51 seats in the National Assembly and most of the municipal and provincial seats. Bouterse's recently formed National Democratic Party trailed far behind.

The newly elected government pledged to rebuild the country's economy and to re-establish relations with the Netherlands. The Netherlands suspended $110 million a year in aid to its former colony — formerly called Dutch Guiana — after Bouterse's government executed 15 political dissidents and community leaders in 1982.

The United States, which called on Col. Bouterse to respect the election results, should take this revival of democracy as an opportunity. The United States should help solidify what is obviously the will of the Surinamese people.

An observation from the late Frank Church, the senator from Idaho who chaired the Foreign Relations Committee, suggests a basic approach — toward Suriname and toward all Latin American nations struggling to consolidate democracy. Church called for an American foreign policy that helped create "conditions in which the logic of geographic proximity, access to American capital and technology and cultural opportunity can begin to exert their inexorable long-term pull."

What we can offer, in other words, is an effective vaccine against totalitarianism. That vaccine is democracy.

Another View:

Famine worsening

Famine is becoming more of a problem in Ethiopia and other parts of East Africa. Some of the man-made problems that contributed to the widespread starvation and malnutrition in 1984 and 1985 have, if anything, grown worse.

Deforestation continues to disrupt rainfall patterns and make the land less productive. Political instability and runaway overpopulation make the work of relief agencies more difficult. Foolish wars and corrupt, inefficient governments waste resources, further contributing to the suffering.

Lester Brown of the Worldwatch Institute has said that Africa is providing the first test of the world's ability to deal with the breakdown of the environment in an area affecting millions of people. The crisis there also is providing a lesson to the rest of the world in the importance of achieving a balance with the environment.

The West has responded generously to the suffering of famine-stricken Africans. Unless the man-made problems of overpopulation, deforestation and political instability are addressed on a broader scale, however, starvation and malnutrition are likely to persist and become more frequent.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Dec. 2, the 336th day of 1987. There are 29 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Five years ago, on Dec. 2, 1982, in the first operation of its kind, doctors at the University of Utah Medical Center implanted a permanent artificial heart in the chest of retired dentist Barney Clark. Clark lived for 112 days with the device.

On this date:

In 1804, Napoleon was crowned emperor of France in a glittering ceremony at the Cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris.

In 1816, the first savings bank in the United States, the Philadelphia Savings Fund Society, opened for business.

In 1823, President James Monroe outlined his doctrine opposing European expansion in the Western Hemisphere.

In 1859, militant abolitionist John Brown was hanged for his raid on Harper's Ferry the previous October.

KGB spies warned of AIDS danger

WASHINGTON — Pillow talk can be expensive; it can cost you your life, the CIA has warned its secret agents around the world. The danger, of course, is AIDS.

Jack Anderson

The problem is that, unlike officials of other, less devious agencies, the CIA brass hats can't take the straight-arrow approach and urge their spies: "Just say no." The CIA is well aware that an undercover agent is sometimes exactly that, extracting information from susceptible, seducible targets who get carried away in the passion of the moment.

Even the KGB's notorious Delilahs must be growing a little nervous these days as the AIDS epidemic spreads inexorably throughout areas of East-West confrontation. They are surely aware that their next conquest in the service of the Kremlin could turn out to be a suicidal dalliance.

Faced with this mission-vs.-medicine dilemma, the CIA's Office of Medical Services has come down on the side of protection — but without coming right out and saying so.

"AIDS is 100 percent preventable," secret agents and other employees were assured in a bulletin issued in June. "Scientists who study the transmission of disease point out that the pattern of HIV (Human Immunodeficiency Virus, the current name for the virus) dissemination has been well investigated, and the virus relies entirely on sexual contact, parenteral infusion or perinatal circumstances. Were it otherwise, the types of patients seen would be different."

So, the CIA medical bulletin explained, "while an AIDS vaccine or a disease cure is not yet a reality, preventive measures are very effective."

The bulletin then proceeded to offer seven specific precautions that agents can take to protect themselves from the deadly virus. How the suggested measures will complicate any particular espionage caper is a problem that the medics don't go into.

The first rule: "Do not participate in unprotected vaginal intercourse unless it is within a stable relationship; otherwise use condoms and spermicide." But this could easily rob the boudoir opportunity of the very spontaneity that has disarmed the quarry.

Second: "Avoid any intercourse with high-risk individuals or individuals from high-risk areas of the world." Following this sensible precaution would place Africa and most of Europe off limits, as well as rule out gay men and intravenous drug users, historically among those deemed susceptible to romantic overtures and/or blackmail.

Third: "Do not accept any transfusion of blood or any blood product that has not been screened for AIDS." That's fine if the agent needs a pint of blood in Switzerland, but not if he's in a primitive Third World clinic where the doctors have neither the equipment nor the know-how to test for AIDS antibodies in the blood.

Fourth: "Do not accept any treatment involving a needle or injection unless you are certain the facility uses sterile disposable needles." Again, this is a bit unrealistic in many parts of the world — including Eastern Europe — where CIA agents operate.

Fifth ("Avoid unprotected anal intercourse") and sixth ("Be aware that oral-genital contact carries a risk of transmission") offer no special obstacles to the clever spy, while Rule No. 7 is merely common sense:

"In a situation where a potential sex partner may be infected, assume they are. A test for HIV antibody may be negative because the partner has not yet developed the antibody. In fact, there are rare infected individuals who are incapable of making the antibody at any time."

In short, the CIA bulletin warns: "Know your partner."

Well, of course, in the espionage game the whole idea is to get to know your target well. But asking a potential paramour to take a test for the AIDS virus may not be a secret agent's most productive followup to "What's your sign?"

ECONOMIC OUTLOOK — If the U.S. trade deficit in fact caused the stock market's roller-coaster ride, as many economic savants insist, there's no quick or easy rememdy in sight. Commerce Department sources point out that even if foreign governments rescinded overnight all the measures that help to create that imbalance — tariffs, quotas, government subsidies and red tape — the U.S. trade deficit would decline by only 10 percent. Even a trade surplus with Japan would solve only a small part of the crisis.

In fact, one particularly gloomy department report concludes that American industries "may no longer be able to compete in international markets."

The experts warn that the trade deficit can't be cured just by lowering the dollar's value in Europe and Japan. The short-term effect will make our exports more competitive, but in the long run this will bring inflation and higher interest rates.

Meanwhile, as Latin American countries boost their exports and stop buying U.S. goods to pay off their debts to U.S. banks, the United States' foreign debt continues to increase; it now exceeds the foreign debts of Brazil, Mexico and Argentina combined.

Gorby's visit should make him feel at home!

The White House is burning the midnight oil trying to put together an itinerary for Mikhail Gorbachev.

"Scratch Gorby's address to a joint session of Congress. They won't let him speak there."

Art Buchwald

"Now they tell us. Well, we have to let him speak somewhere. What about asking him to address a day school in Fairfax, Va.?"

"Better still, the Daughters of the American Revolution. They're always looking for an inspiring message."

"I'm not sure the DAR would give him a standing ovation. We have to arrange a forum for Gorbachev befitting his position as chief of the U.S.S.R."

"Perhaps he could address a $1,000-a-plate prayer breakfast for Jerry Falwell."

"Won't it disturb Jerry to share scrambled eggs with the No. 1 Commie in the world?"

"No. Even if he isn't Christian, Gorbachev sells a lot of tables."

"Well, let's look into it. Now, we promised the Kremlin that Gorby would get TV exposure. What shows do we book him on?"

"What about "Wheel of Fortune"? It would be great for Soviet-American relations if Gorby won a Jeep on the show and Vanna White gave him the keys."

"I'd rather see him on the Phil Donahue show. It's more serious. Phil could ask what it's like to be Red rather than dead."

"Why would Gorby do it?"

"He just wrote a book on glasnost and he knows Donahue has the best show to promote it."

"I prefer to book him on Johnny Carson. Johnny could do an anti-Soviet monologue and have Gorby in stitches."

"Wouldn't it be better to put him on Ted Koppel?"

"We're trying to lighten up the summit. With Koppel you don't get laughs."

"I'd rather go with Geraldo Rivera. He could open a safe underwater in the Soviet Embassy and have Gorby describe the contents."

"Okay, that takes care of TV. Now what do we do for sightseeing?"

"How about Jim and Tammy Bakker's Heritage U.S.A. park? Gorby would not only get a chance to ride on some very scary amusements, but he could see how we raise money for religion in the United States."

"I'd rather send him to Disneyland."

"We wouldn't let Khrushchev go to Disneyland, so why should we let Gorbachev. Best he attend a pro football game and let him see our fans in action. That should scare the hell out of the U.S.S.R."

"Are we still dragging him down to Wall Street?"

"No way. All he has to do is show his face on the floor of the exchange and we'll have another Black Monday."

"There would be no harm in letting him go to Las Vegas. Everyone in Russia says Gorbachev's a crapshooter."

"Hold it. Suppose he loses and demands on-site inspection of all the roulette wheels? What then?"

"We give him a ringside table to see Frank Sinatra and have Frank ask him to stand up in the middle of the show."

"Good idea. Well, the calendar is filling up. Here is the last item. We have to find a typical American family for Gorbachev to visit. Anybody have any ideas?"

"How about Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos?"

Art Buchwald is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Now Reagan's reduced to selling symbols

WASHINGTON — When the Reagan Revolution was in its formative stage in the late 70s, and its outriders were starry-eyed about cutting the monster called Big Government down to size, Cap Weinberger used to regale Reaganauts with the Legend of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

William Safire

Seems that an outsider stumbled into the musty bureau one day. As far as the eye could see, rows of bureaucrats sat staring at little piles of paper. Every hour or so, noiselessly, each gray-faced bureaucrat would pass his stack of paper on to the next desk and stare dully at the new stack on his own. All was serene routine; but then the visitor spotted a commotion in the back of the vast room.

"Why is that man crying?" he wondered. Sure enough, one of the bureaucrats was hunched over his desk, sobbing, as if bereft of his reason for being.

The visitor accompanied the bureau's administrator down the long row of desks to the devastated official. Asked why he was distressed, the bureaucrat replied, "My Indian died!"

Cap's story drew a laugh because it had a point: All that waste would be swept aside when the Reaganauts rode into town. Tax-saving efficiency would replace the environment of entitlement that had encrusted Washington. Agencies, even whole departments, would be abolished in the general streamlining.

I remembered that story told by the recently departed Reagan loyalist when reading that the president had come to a "personal decision" to elevate the Veterans Administration, with its quarter-million bureaucrats, to the level of a department with its administrator added to the cabinet.

That was kind of a crusher for more than a few of us.

We had winced, years ago, when Reagan debauched the Medal of Freedom by pinning it on a Hollywood buddy who has been a lifetime associate of Mafia hoods. We were dismayed at the president's surprise embrace of the detested polygraph. We forced down his refusal to cancel the obscenity at Bitburg arranged by his possibly drunk advance man. We gagged but did not bail out completely when he secretly paid ransom to the Ayatollah.

Through all this, loyalists reminded themselves of the triumphs of the "real" Reagan. He accepted a necessary recession to stop the double-digit inflation ruining America, and then reversed the seemingly inexorable rise of tax rates; he prevented the communization of the seabeds by stopping the infamous Law of the Sea Treaty; he rebuilt our defenses and, with the brilliant Strategic Defense Initiative, brought the Russians to the negotiating table on our terms; he went down the line for the right judges even unto Ginsbork.

But in the end, it's the little things that get you. Although we knew he had not reduced the size of government, and could not deliver on his promised abolition of the Energy Department, we liked to think that he understood the principle at stake: Never glorify Big Government. Never let it win the battle of symbols, because then it will win the war of the budget.

When the decision memo went to the president on the big-spenders' plan to elevate the VA to cabinet status, the White House staff made the customary conservative recommendation: It's a Trojan horse to infiltrate the government with new entitlements for the baby boomers, so shoot it down. But Ronald Reagan, influenced by patronage-hungry Sen. Strom Thurmond, signed on to the scheme.

I'm a Reagan-style veteran; we both served easy time and never heard a shot fired in anger. We're not like the small percentage of combat-duty veterans harmed during their service and who deserve long-term help; on the contrary, Army life was a democratizing experience for most of us, and we do not present the nation a belated bill for doing our duty.

Does anyone imagine the vast new clout given the professional veterans' lobby will not cost all taxpayers (including vets not seeking the public trough) billions in the future? This is Washington; a place at the cabinet table cannot fail to put bread on the constituency's table.

Dwight Eisenhower, in the twilight of his presidency, ruefully asked Sherman Adams: "What happened to all those fine young people with stars in their eyes who sailed balloons and rang doorbells for us in 1952?"

Almost every leader disappoints his ardent early supporters. Having compromised too many principles, Reagan is now reduced to selling out symbols. Years from now, some political crusader at the head of an anti-bureaucratic movement will be telling a joke with the punchline: "My veteran died!"

Council won't sanction Junta-held election

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The military-dominated junta violated the constitution when it dismissed the independent Provisional Electoral Council and is barred by law from holding new elections, the council said.

The council also said Tuesday that Haitians would welcome foreign intervention if there is a repeat of the violence that forced the cancellation Sunday of the nation's first presidential election in 30 years.

Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, the junta leader, says he wants to hold new elections and hand power to a civilian president and National Assembly on Feb. 7, the second anniversary of the flight of dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier.

Namphy issued a decree Sunday dismissing the nine members of the electoral council after it canceled the election then in progress when bands of men with guns and machetes killed at least 34 people, many of them at voting stations.

He accused the council of overstepping its authority.

On Tuesday, the council said in a statement read on Radio Metropole that it "declares null any election that is not organized by the Electoral Council as it was composed before" the junta's unconstitutional decree disbanding it.

"The mission of the Provisional Electoral Council cannot be interrupted under any circumstances ...before the newly elected president takes office, according to the constitution," the statement said.

The council's statement was signed by members Philippe Jules, Ammanuel Ambroise and Marc Guerrier. Council spokesman Rene Belance said the other six members agreed with the communique but were in hiding and could not sign it.

The junta also was condemned Tuesday in Miami by more than 50 people who had observed the aborted election in Haiti on Sunday.

"In the view of every observer that I know of, the Namphy government has totally disgraced itself. He has staged a coup," said Robert White, a former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador and co-leader of the delegation. He said he plans to go to Washington "and start raising hell."

The election-day violence was "clearly orchestrated to frustrate the voting process," the observers said in a prepared statement, adding that the armed forces and police "tolerated and abetted" the violence.

While the delegation stopped short of backing military intervention as a solution, it has not ruled out that possibility.

"All the options ought to be carefully considered on an urgent basis," observer Bryan Atwood, president of the Washington, D.C.-based National Democratic Institute, said at a news conference in Miami.

West Germans OK plan to boost economy

BONN, West Germany (AP) — After weeks of pressure from the United States to expand its slow-growing economy, the West German government today approved a plan that would sharply increase domestic spending.

The move is designed to boost the demand for foreign goods here, thus helping ease the huge U.S. trade deficit and bolster the falling dollar.

The Finance and Economics ministries released a statement announcing approval of the plan, which provides an extra $13.1 billion for domestic spending. Officials were expected to discuss the decision later with reporters.

The plan, drawn up by key ministers on Tuesday, is likely to be followed later in the week by a one-half percentage point cut in the West German central bank's important discount rate, said a senior government official.

"I would not be at all surprised if there is a strong signal given" when the bank's independent governing board meets Thursday to consider interest rate cuts, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. Asked about the size of the reduction, the official said the Bundesbank would probably not accept anything less than a one-half percentage point.

A cut in the discount rate, the rate charged for loans to other banks, also would help expand the domestic economy by making it cheaper for companies to obtain capital. The Bundesbank has twice reduced interest rates since the Oct. 19 worldwide stock market crash.

The spending plan and expected cut in the interest rate follow weeks of pressure on West Germany from industrialized nations, led by the United States, to expand its slow-growing domestic economy.

Foreign nations have called on West Germany, one of the world's richest nations and biggest exporters, to stimulate its economy to help correct the worldwide trade imbalance and stabilize the dollar.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Train crash death toll 'high'

MOSCOW (AP) — Newspaper reports today indicated the death toll was high when a freight train whose engineer was sleeping slammed into the back of a passenger train in Soviet Georgia, crushing a sleeping car full of soldiers and injuring 92 people.

The only deaths reported in the pre-dawn accident in the Caucasus mountains Sunday were those of the engineer and his mate, who also was said to be dozing.

The newspaper accounts said the sleeping car was wrecked in the crash and that it had been crowded with army recruits — suggesting great loss of life. They also said the freight train engineer, like many in his profession, regularly worked overtime and had once been dismissed for sleeping on the job.

First word of the crash early 24 miles southeast of the Georgian capital of Tbilisi came Monday in a brief report by the official news agency Tass. Izvestia and the newspaper Socialist Industry reported today that train was traveling at between 30 and 36 mph on impact.

Prisoners riot 'black hole'

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — About 250 inmates set fire to their cells and burned the kitchen at Boggo Road Jail today to protest the reopening of the notorious "black hole" underground detention unit, authorities said.

No injuries were reported in the two-hour riot, which began around noon.

Police fired shots over the heads of rampaging prisoners, some of whom had seized weight-lifting equipment to smash furniture, said Bill Irvine, the jail's superintendent.

Dozens of police were rushed to the prison along with firefighters to contain the riot, the second in less than a year at the prison that was built for 250 inmates but which houses 500.

Escapee caught in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Authorities say a convicted murderer from Oklahoma who escaped from the Jackson County Jail in October has been recaptured in Acapulco, Mexico.

District Attorney Steve Suttle said Daniel Juan Revilla was recaptured in the Mexican city on Monday after a month-long search by Mexican and American authorities.

Suttle said Revilla is being held at a detention center in Mexico City and could be extradited to the United States in the next couple of days.

Revilla escaped from the Altus jail Oct. 13 after putting a makeshift dummy in his jail cell and jimmying a lock to get out. He had been convicted and sentenced to death in September for the beating death of 13-month-old Mark Gomez.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Clear skies due in Permian Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Clear skies are in store for the Midland area tonight, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. Winds will blow from the south to southwest at five to 15 mph.

Thursday's forecast calls for more of the same, with skies remaining clear and a high expected to reach near 80. Winds will continue to be westerly and southwesterly at five to 15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 63 was 16 degrees cooler than the record high of 79, which was set for that date in 1950. Today's low of 26 was nine degrees warmer than the record low set for this date in 1985.

STATE

Unseasonably warm temperatures are expected across Texas through Thursday as temperatures were expected to climb into the 80s across a vast area of the state.

Forecasts called for clear skies and a warming trend through Thursday. There's no mention of any sort of precipitation through Thursday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 30s and 40s, ranging from the upper 20s in the Panhandle to the 50s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and across most of South Texas.

Highs Thursday will be in the 70s across North Texas, the mid 60s in the mountains of West Texas, the 70s in the Panhandle and the 80s in Southwest Texas and in the 70s across northern portions of South Texas and in the 80s across the remainder of South Texas.

High level clouds were scattered over the Trans-Pecos, the Permian Basin and South Plains at dawn today, but most of the state had clear skies.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 30s and 40s, ranging from the mid 20s in the Panhandle to the mid 50s in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 24 at Amarillo to 54 at Corpus Christi.

NATION

A powerful low pressure off southeast Alaska sent snow and rain across the Northwest today, after rain in northern California eased fears of drought while causing a minor landslide.

Rain continued today across northern California and western Washington and Oregon. Rain was scattered across the northern Rockies and snow was falling at higher elevations of the Northwest.

Elswhere, snowshowers were scattered across the Great Lakes region, the Ohio Valley and the Appalachians.

FCC indecency ruling 'can of worms'

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Three Permian Basin broadcasters agreed Tuesday that a recent Federal Communications Commission ruling loosening on-the-air indecency standards after midnight won't affect what audiences see and hear on their stations.

But two of the broadcasters — station managers at KOSA-TV in Odessa and Midland's KMID-TV — are upset with the FCC decision nonetheless.

"I know that the government can't control morality, but there will be broadcasters around the country that will test this new ruling," said Tom Hughes, KOSA general manager.

"I think we've opened up the gates for non-professional broadcasters to do some things that shouldn't be done," he said.

Agreed John Foster, KMID general manager, "There's going to be a gray area. There's going to be some testing.

"They have just totally opened up a can of worms as far as what could hit the air — what's going to hit the air," said Foster.

"I totally disagree with it," he said. "It's an awfully bad ruling."

According to Associated Press reports, the FCC Nov. 22 effectively gave radio and TV stations permission to broadcast indecent material between midnight and 6 a.m.

The federal regulatory commission left where to draw the line between indecent and obscene material up to broadcasters, the AP reported.

"All the commission said is that we would expect after midnight that we could rely on parents to supervise any children in the audience," FCC General Counsel Diane Killory said.

The commission, in a 4-0 decision, indicated that the midnight-6 a.m. slot is a time when programming is unlikely to be seen or heard by children — the guiding principle for airing indecent material, the wire service reported.

Last April, the FCC said it no longer would rely on the "seven dirty words" of comedian George Carlin's monologue — which became the basis of a 1978 Supreme Court decision — to determine whether programming was indecent.

The Nov. 22 ruling came in clarification of the April decision, the AP reported.

John Roman, operations manager at Odessa's KQIP radio station, called the commission's decision "a toughie," but added that "it really doesn't affect us too much."

"We get enough complaints off of the things we do now that I would say it won't get any worse at our radio station — deregulation or not," he said. "We're not going to add any sex shows or dirty talk — pillow talk or whatever you want to call it."

While acknowledging that stations in larger markets might be tempted to stretch the limits of decency, Roman said that in general, "the audience probably isn't going to allow it."

"People get tired of it," he said.

Hughes said the effect of loosening indecency standards on programming decisions at KOSA is "absolutely none."

Echoed KMID's Foster, "As far as that kind of thing is concerned, I'm not interested in doing anything along that line."

Foster added that one area of concern for the station is the editing that packages of movies receive before they are purchased by the station for late-night broadcasting.

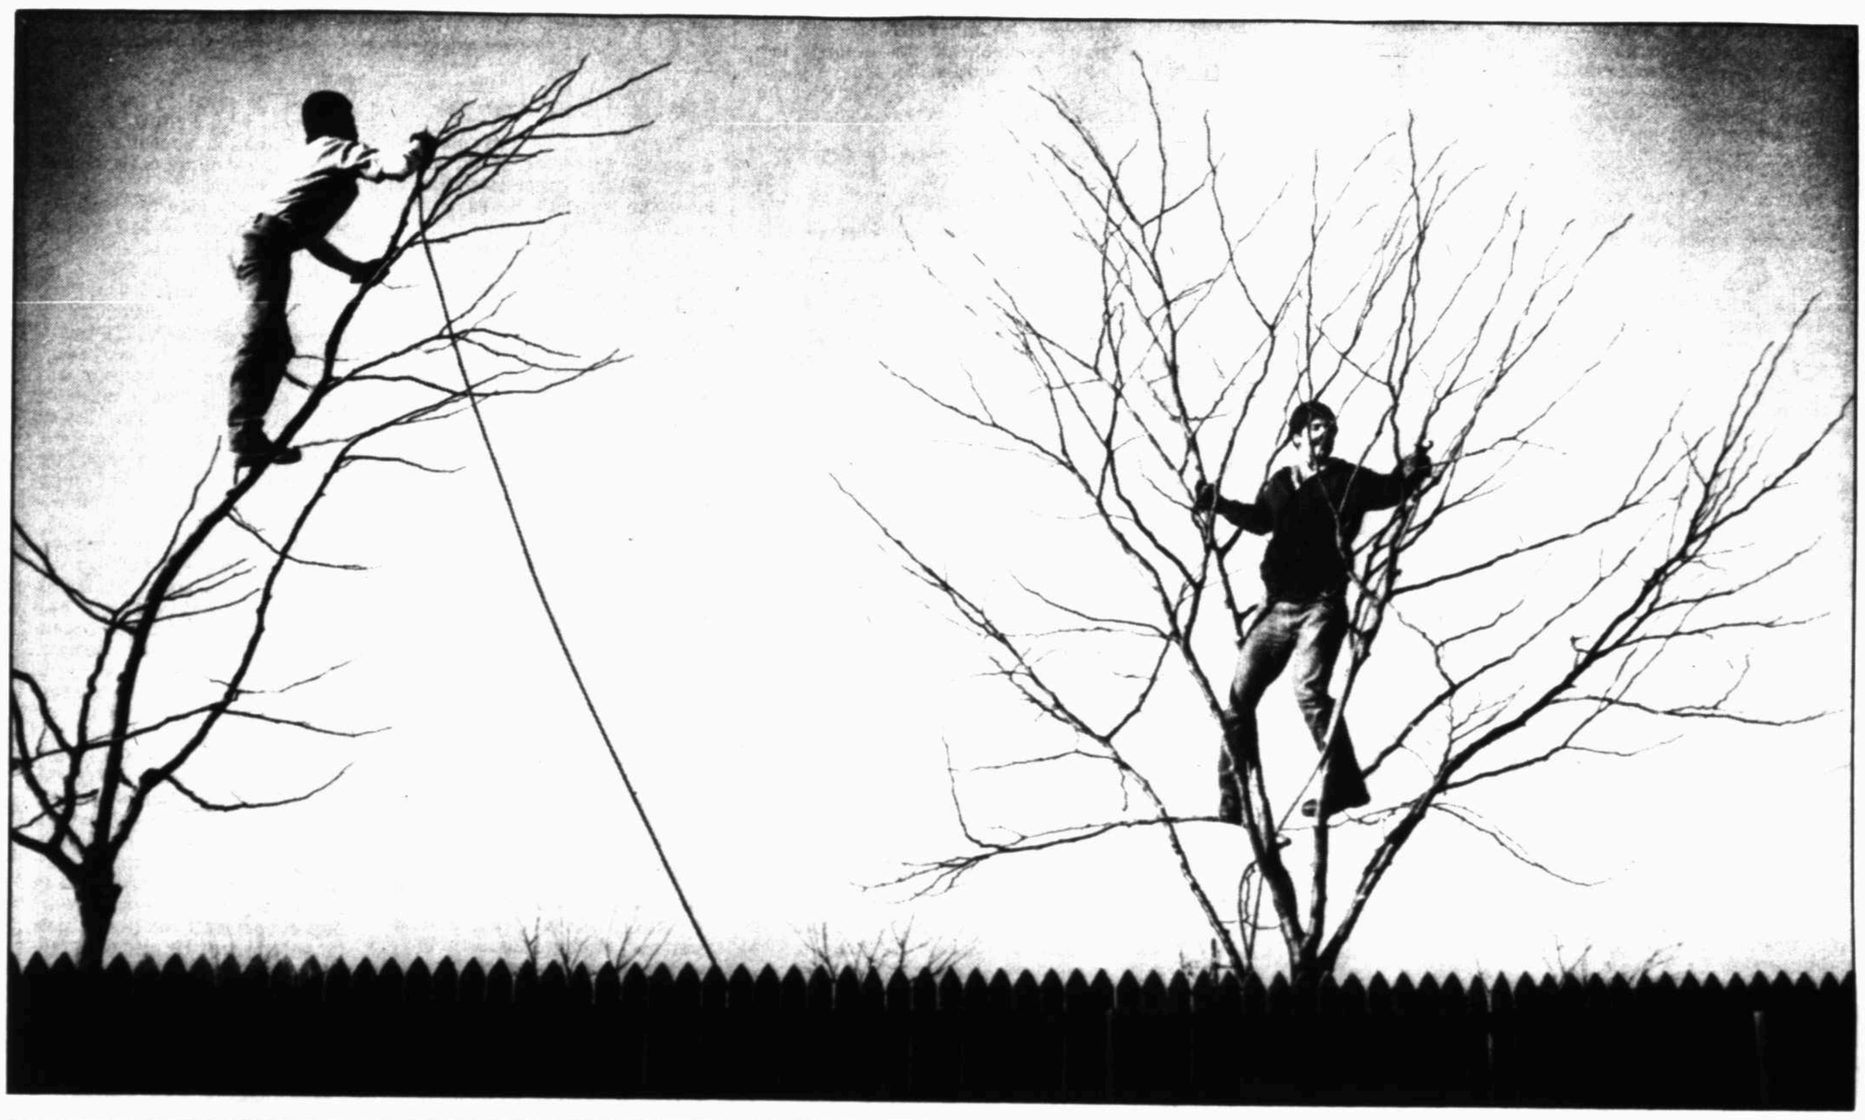

"We look for movies that are edited for television," said Foster. Whether that editing in the future will reflect looser decency standards remains to be seen, he said.

The FCC decision "is going to put more responsibility on the broadcaster to watch what he puts on for movies," he said.

An additional concern comes in cases where station signals overlap into earlier time zones, he said. Stations that take advantage of the deregulation may be unaware that their programming will be heard an hour earlier in a nearby state.

Foster hoped that most Permian Basin programmers will not take advantage of the new ruling.

"I would hope that they would look at the makeup of our community and stay away from it and just practice good broadcasting standards," he said.

Park for handicapped on drawing board but needs funding

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A park for the handicapped that could "expand some people's worlds," is on the city drawing boards, but the funding for the park's construction is still up in the air, city officials said.

City landscape designer Steve Withrow said a local foundation, which wants to remain anonymous, may pay for part of the 1.3-acre park planned to be placed at Tumbleweed Park, 1300 Ventura Ave., or on private land nearby.

"It's something we want to get going. It's something we want to do as soon as we're able," Withrow said of the park estimated to cost $342,789.

While the city would maintain the park, the cost of construction must be paid for by private fund-raisers, he said.

The park is needed and could be used by many members of the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens, 2701 North A St., who use wheelchairs and by children at the nearby Cerebral Palsy Center, 802 Ventura Ave., said officials from both organizations.

MARC Executive Director Ray Unterbrink said, "It would open up recreational space for people who can't fully utilize what is available."

Since wheelchairs cannot cross sand, which makes up the many play areas in Midland parks, the planned park would have an AstroTurf surface, Withrow said.

Special playground equipment for handicapped children and special picnic facilities for handicapped adults are also planned to be included in the park, Withrow said.

"The play equipment will have to be of a resilient surface and allow for wheelchairs and kids in braces to go back from one place to another," he said.

Such equipment would include a swing set built for children who cannot use their legs. Special swing sets with platforms to allow children to hoist themselves from wheelchairs into swings and propel themselves by pushing of an arm bar would also be included, Withrow said.

Also slides with high edges on both sides could be installed for children who have balance problems and might fall off a regular slide, he said.

About 70 percent of the equipment in the park would be for handicapped persons and the remainder would be regular swing sets and equipment to "mainstream" handicapped children with other children, Withrow said.

"One goal in the recreational industry is trying to mainstream or get kids to mix," Withrow said.

Such mixing concerned at-large council member Katie Heck, who worried during a recent City Council briefing session on the park, about liability problems to the city if a child was injured.

But Unterbrink said, "Handicapped kids aren't any more fragile. They are as tough as any kid and maybe tougher."

If the park isn't located at Tumbleweed, it may be placed on four acres of nearby MARC-owned land and MARC officials are negotiating with the city, Unterbrink said.

"It is our interest that this park be put in place. We're willing to make a good faith gesture which includes donating property," he said.

Airport security finds loaded gun in man's bag

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Midland police are holding an Odessa man who allegedly resisted arrest Tuesday night after Midland International Airport Security detected a loaded handgun in his bag and found him carrying heroin, Lt. Jerry Morris said today.

Police do not think the 31-year-old man planned to hijack the plane he was listed as a passenger on, — Southwest Airlines Flight 229, scheduled to leave Midland for Austin at 8:45 p.m. Tuesday, Morris said.

"I think he probably just thought he could get the gun on the plane. We don't have suspicion of a hijack," Morris said.

The .25 caliber automatic pistol, loaded with eight rounds of ammunition, was found in a handbag the man sent through security screening, Morris said.

On the average, airport security detects up to four weapons a month with a screening machine set up to X-ray all passengers and their luggage before they board planes, Morris said.

"Some try to beat the system and some just are honestly ignorant of the law," he said.

Along with finding a handgun in the man's bag, police found 16 grams of heroin worth about $9,000 after searching the man, Morris said.

Ector County Coliseum renovation defeated

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Ector County Coliseum renovation proposal went down to defeat Tuesday as voters turned out in unexpectedly high numbers to overwhelmingly reject the $18 million bond issue.

The final unofficial tally showed 12,290 county residents, about 24 percent of those eligible to vote, turned out to reject the proposal.

The final count showed 58 percent cast ballots against increasing taxes about an average of $3 per person per year for a program that would have renovated and expanded the 33-year-old coliseum complex.

A total of 7,160 votes were cast against the proposal while 5,085 favored it.

This is the second time in five years Ector County voters have rejected a proposal for a multi-purpose public facility. In 1982, when the area economy was in far better shape than it is today, slightly more than 66 percent percent of 15,838 voters rejected a proposal to build a convention-civic center that would have encompassed about a 13-block area in downtown Odessa.

Backers of the latest proposal contended the renovation-expansion of the coliseum complex was an economic issue vital to the enhancement of the city's quality of life and future prosperity.

LULAC in Monahans suing Ward County over precincts

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Minority representatives in Monahans have filed a federal suit seeking to redistrict county precinct lines.

Ward County Judge Richard Sitz, named in the document along with six other county officials, said today he has not been served with the suit.

The suit was filed by the Monahans chapter of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

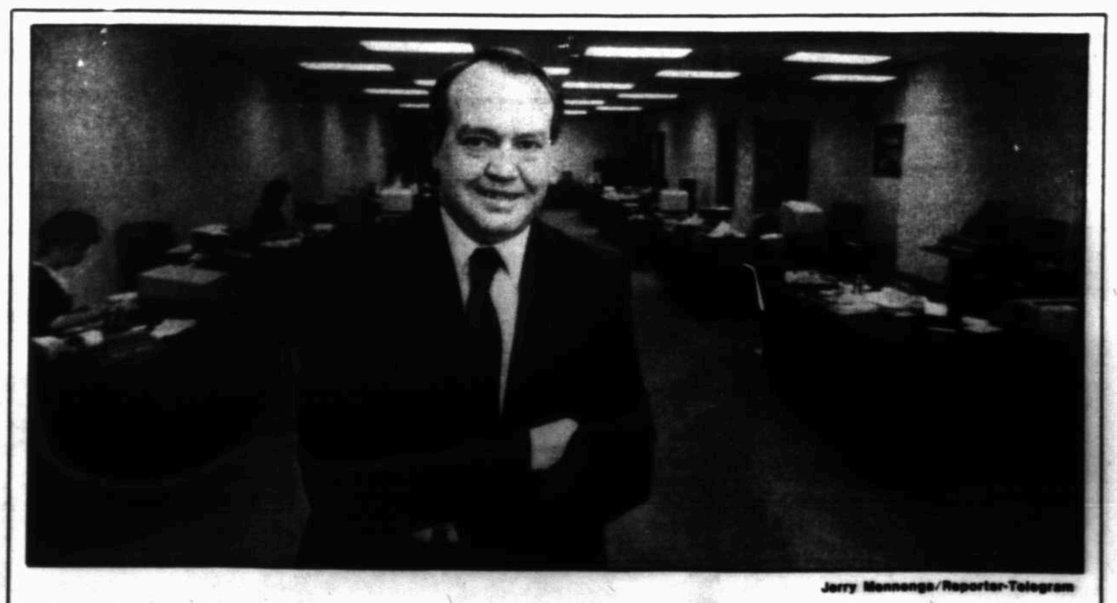

"They (LULAC) didn't even come to talk about this. If they thought something was out of whack they should have done that first," Sitz said.

The suit, filed in a Pecos County federal district court, says the four Ward county precincts need to be reapportioned to better represent the county's population, Sitz said.

By law, reapportionment should be done after every ten-year census, Sitz said.

"But we didn't after the last one (in 1980) because there's not been that much change," the county judge said.

Ron Stegall, 39, has been appointed chief appraiser of the Midland Central Appraisal District.

Insider promoted to Midland County's most taxing position

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Ron Stegall has been appointed chief appraiser of the Midland Central Appraisal District in succeeding his former boss, Roland Wilkinson.

Wilkinson, 39, resigned the chief appraiser's post, which he had held since October 1982, last September.

"I'm responsible for all ad valorem tax appraisals in Midland County," said the 39-year-old Stegall, who was Wilkinson's assistant and the district's director of collections and director of administration.

Stegall joined the appraisal district in 1981 as an appraiser, became director of collections in 1982, director of administration in 1985, and was promoted to assistant chief appraiser in 1986.

"I never did give up anything," Stegall said of his duties. "I just got added to."

The appraisal district board last month unanimously approved Stegall's appointment to the $54,000-a-year job.

"We found, as we looked into it (the appointment), Ron had been doing a great part of the day-to-day operations as assistant to the chief appraiser," Gil Tompson, chairman of the five-member appraisal district board, said Tuesday.

DEATHS

Lillian N. Lohse

Services for Lillian N. Lohse, 89, of Midland, were conducted at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Ellis Funeral Home with the Rev. Dean Kelm of Odessa officiating.

Additional services will be at 2 p.m. Friday in the First Lutheran Church in Floresville. Burial will follow in Floresville Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Monday afternoon at a local nursing home.

Born April 21, 1898, in Breslau, she moved with her family, the Henry Alberts, to Floresville in 1904, where she attended school.

She married Emil H. Lohse, a building contractor, of Floresville, in 1918 and continued to make their home there until his death in 1975. She then moved to Midland to be near her daughter.

She was a member of the First Lutheran Church in Floresville.

Survivors include one son, Henry C. Lohse of Skidmore; one daughter, Dona Bea Schneider of Midland; two brothers, Herbert Albert and Houston Albert, both of Floresville; three sisters, Nita Wehman of Kingsville, Helen Fisbeck of Jourdanton and Evelyn Boening of Floresville; six grandchildren; 14 great-grandchildren; five step-grandchildren; and two step-great-great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Tape Lending Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped, 202 North 'C', Midland, 79701.

Carroll Campbell

mServices for Carroll Campbell, of Midland, are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Campbell died this morning at a local hospital.

Ballet Midland to perform 'Nutcracker' this weekend

From Staff Reports

Ballet Midland's first performance of the 1987-88 season, "The Nutcracker" is scheduled for this Friday, Saturday, Sunday, and then Dec. 11, 12, and 13 at the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium at Midland College. This is the first of three season performances by Ballet Midland, which in addition to "The Nutcracker" includes a winter performance, Feb. 19-21, and a spring performance, April 29-May 1.

Ballet Midland is celebrating the 20th anniversary of ballet in Midland. The opening night performance of "The Nutcracker" will be dedicated to the memory of Georgia Goss Harston who was a founding member of the Civic Ballet in Midland.

The Georgia Harston Adopt a Dancer Memorial Fund has been set up in her honor. Donations to the fund will be used to help talented children who cannot afford dance instructions. Checks should be mailed to Ballet Midland, P.O. Box 7115, Midland, 79708.

The all new production of the "The Nutcracker" will be presented under the direction of Ballet Midland's new artistic director, Diane Gaddy, former prima ballerina with the National Classical Dance Company of Mexico City. Ms. Gaddy brings a new vision to the performance plus a higher level of technique.

Ballet Midland's Production Director/Assistant Artistic Director James Cramer has been in the process of completely reworking the sets and costumes to fit the elegance of the Romantic Period of the 1830s.

He has used lithographs of the time and written information about this period to recreate the beauty of the times.

This vision of "The Nutcracker" does not re-create the original production which was first produced in 1892 but uses the choreography of Petipa as a springboard for a timeless vision.

Children ages 3-8 will have an opportunity to join the Nutcracker Club. A special Nutcracker Club card will be issued to each child for $5 which will entitle them to attend a party following the 2 p.m. matinee performance either Saturday, Dec. 5 or Dec. 12. The children will enjoy special treats, receive gifts, and have their picture taken with the Sugar Plum Fairy and cast of "The Nutcracker."

For information concerning "The Nutcracker" and season subscriptions, call Ballet Midland at 686-0731.

COLISEUM

Assessing the results of Tuesday's election, Woody Gregory, chairman of the Save The Coliseum campaign committee, said proponents of the bond program apparently "did not present a package that they (the voters) could accept."

Earlier, Gregory expressed the belief the proposal was "a one shot deal." He acknowledged Tuesday night the Save The Coliseum Committee had no plans for a future effort.

One of those who was very vocal in opposition of the $18 million bond proposal, Jack Crider, a resident of West Odessa, expressed belief the timing was wrong because of the state of the local economy. Crider says he realizes the coliseum needs refurbishment, but he opposed expansion of the complex.

The ambitious program would have added a theater and meeting rooms in front of the existing coliseum building, rebuilt the livestock exhibit-barn area, replaced the coliseum air conditioning system and generally upgrade the entire complex in an effort to encourage greater utilization.

Prior to initiating the Save The Coliseum effort earlier this year, proponents commissioned a survey of county residents to determine how much support existed for the proposal.

The survey showed about 66 percent of those polled responded they would support the proposal.

According to Dr. Lee Buice, it was the results of the survey that convinced committee members the bond program had a good chance of success and they should go ahead with the effort.

With the final unofficial vote tallied Tuesday night, only 41 percent of those casting ballots favored the $18 million bond proposal.

'Dead' infant now Christmas baby

DALLAS (AP) — An infant left for dead in a south Dallas trash bin has become the city's Christmas season miracle baby, drawing a flood of donations and requests for adoption to Parkland Memorial Hospital.

"It's just been phenomenal," said Valencia Gill-Hooper, the hospital's adoption social worker. "A lot of people want to adopt this baby."

There have been so many calls from people wanting to help that Karen Robbins of the Texas Department of Human Services named the child Natalie Christine, a name inspired by the season.

"It seemed kind of sad to send donations to 'Baby Girl,'" Ms. Robbins said. "She didn't have a very good start. Maybe her luck will change with a strong name."

GUN

Security procedures will not be changed because of the incident, Morris said.

"It was just another incident. Just one where we had trouble with him," Morris said.

Midland police have one officer stationed at the airport patrolling, Morris said.

Marcy Baluvelt, airport administrative services supervisor, said three people usually work at the security checkpoint area.

The airlines pay for the security screening and run the operation through a security committee, Ms. Baluvelt said.

Police said charges were expected to be filed against the man later today.

LULAC

Their research has shown, LULAC representatives claim, the present method of election violates the one-man, one vote ethic because some precincts are more populous than others.

About 14,000 people live in the county and 35 percent of them are Hispanic or black, Sitz said.

Minorities have run for county commissioner seats, but never have won, he said.

Ward County precincts one and four are minority strongholds, Sitz said. "They could elect their own person if they could get their business together."

Others named in the suit are County Clerk Pat Finley, Sheriff D. Hall and commissioners H.A. Collins, Bill Middlebrooks, J.H. Raglin and Bob J. Meek.

Monahans LULAC President Marcos Lujan could not be reached for comment today, nor could Rolando Rios, attorney for the Southwest Voters Registration Project in San Antonio.

Rios represented Midland's LULAC chapter in their successful voting rights suit against the Midland Independent School District.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

MC to present concert

From Staff Reports

A variety of music is scheduled when the Commercial Music Department at Midland College presents its fall concert at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 9.

The free event will be held in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium.

Several different ensembles will play popular, country, and rock selections during the 90-minute program.

Jerry Tubb, instructor in the Commercial Music Program, serves as program coordinator and director of the several of the groups.

Commercial Music students not only polish their musical skills as performers, but learn other aspects of professional music. This includes audio technology for both live performances and recording as well as the business aspects of the profession.

Midland College has an excellent recording studio, largely constructed by Tubb and his students. One of its newest programs is in Audio Technology, which blends a combination of music, sound theory, and electronics.

Midlander dies from burns

From Staff Reports

A 63-year-old Midland man died this morning from burns he received Tuesday after he apparently tried to put out a grass fire that blew out of control, fire officials said.

Ray Ford was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital with second and third degree burns over 70 to 80 percent of his body, and was transferred to the Lubbock General Hospital Burn unit in critical condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

He died this morning, the spokeswoman said.

Firefighters were called to the scene of the blaze just before 1 p.m., reports said.

"It appears he was burning his fence row near his backyard," Assistant Fire Marshal Lon Dominguez said. "He had a water hose, but apparently the fire got away from him. He may have been trying to stomp out the fire, nobody saw it.

"When they found him, 100 yards northeast of his trailer house, the fire was past him," Dominguez said. "About the actual cause, I have no idea."

Odessa kidnapping probed

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police juvenile officers today continue to investigate the alleged kidnapping of a 12-year-old girl Monday evening.

Police spokesman Cpl. John McAhon said this morning details of the incident remain sketchy. A preliminary report, he said, indicates the girl was walking in the vicinity of West 5th Street and Golder Avenue about 6 p.m. Monday when two men pulled up beside her, produced a gun and ordered her to get in their car.

The girl was found about 11:45 p.m. Tuesday at a Kettle Restaurant, apparently unharmed, though reports available do not indicate her physical condition, McAhon stated.

Additional information may be available later today, he added.

Forum to have speaker

From Staff Reports

Rose Mary Boulter, wife of U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, will be the guest speaker at this week's Permian Basin Eagle Forum meeting.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Texian Inn conference room.

Mrs. Boulter's topic of discussion will be "Christianity is Alive and Well in Washington D.C."

Christmas lighting set for MC

From Staff Reports

For the first time since it was created, Christmas lights will adorn parts of the Midland College campus. A ceremony starting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday includes turning on lights decorating the Hodge Carillon Tower and the Murray Fasken Learning Resource Center.

"We invite the public to come for the 'Midland College Merry Christmas' celebration," said Dr. Jess Parrish, college president. "There won't be any speeches; it's just a celebration of the season for everyone in Midland and the Permian Basin."

For the first time since it was dedicated in October, 1975, the Hodge Carillon Tower will ring out with live music. Dr. Betty Morris, keyboard instructor at Midland College, will begin playing the melodic carillon keyboard at 6:15 p.m.

As visitors arrive, they'll be greeted with lines of luminarios along the sidewalks leading to the carillon.

A brief performance by the Midland College Community Chorale, directed by Dr. Michel Jordan, starts immediately after the special lights are turned on. That will be followed with carol singing by the chorale and audience.

Refreshments of hot wassail and Christmas cookies will conclude the ceremony.

Classes which normally last until 7 p.m. will be dismissed at 6:30 p.m. and those which are scheduled to start at 7 p.m. won't begin until 7:30 p.m. that evening.

The Midland College-New Mexico Military Institute basketball game in Chaparral Center will have a 7:45 p.m. start.

Jerry Tubb, instructor in the Commercial Music Department, served as a chairman of the MCMC planning committee. Student Senate members are building the luminarios and members of the faculty will be serving the refreshments.

State court rejects mom's appeal

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today rejected an appeal from a mother who said her religious beliefs as a Jehovah's Witness unfairly were made an issue during a custody trial that ended with her losing custody of her two sons.

The Supreme Court, without writing an opinion, said there was no reversible error in the lower court rulings against Marianne Rutland Chaisson.

Jurors in Dallas had awarded custody of the children, then ages 5 and 6, to Lawrence Rutland.

During questioning of Mrs. Chaisson, who has remarried, Rutland's lawyers honed in on her religious beliefs. She said as a Jehovah's Witness she does not celebrate Christmas because of its "pagan" connections and does not celebrate birthdays because "Jehovah God does not approve of birthday celebrations."

She also testified that, because of her religious beliefs, she does not approve of military toys and would not allow her children to sing "God Bless America" because "we are not patriotic."

The 5th Court of Appeals in Dallas upheld the jury decision to appoint Rutland as managing conservator of the boys. The court said Mrs. Chaisson had failed to object at the trial to the questioning about her religious beliefs.

The Dallas court also noted that Mrs. Chaisson testified she had punished her sons for lying by placing hot pepper juice on their tongues and that the boys had been spanked with a belt and a paint stick, sometimes leaving welts and bruises.

TDC has few options to halt overcrowding crisis

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — At least 10 months away from opening any new cells, the Texas Department of Corrections has few easy options to handle a projected Dec. 19 prison overcrowding crisis, state officials said Tuesday.

A Board of Pardons and Paroles report, prepared the day before Gov. Bill Clements announced his plan to admit and release 150 inmates a day from the state's prisons, estimates the TDC will run out of eligible, nonviolent prisoners to parole within three weeks. Clements' office and prison leaders dispute the date but say they have not yet come up with a "battle plan" to prevent the prison doors from closing for the 23rd time this year.

"The governor will take quick and effective action to resolve that situation if it does arrive at that time," Clements' spokesman Reggie Bashur said Tuesday.

The TDC doors have remained open since the governor announced his 150-a-day plan Sept. 24. That plan combined a controlled-admission policy with the granting of extra "good conduct time" to about 5,220 inmates to maintain the prison population at the maximum 95 percent of capacity limit set by federal court order.

Clements and parole board have "a wide assortment of powers," including clemency and the shortening of sentences, to increase the flow of inmates leaving the system, Attorney General Jim Mattox said Tuesday. "If they want to let more people out, they obviously can," Mattox said.

"Whether or not it is appropriate to use those tools because of the nature of the prisoners is another question. Some of us think that we ought to be keeping some of these people a good bit longer period of time."

The extra-good-time plan Clements used earlier applies only to non-violent offenders. The release dates of inmates convicted of 31 more serious crimes — ranging from murder to narcotics offenses to promotion of prostitution — cannot be accelerated under that law.

POST

"We feel he (Stegall) is going to do a good job for us," said Tompson, a Midland engineer who has been the district's board chairman since 1980.

Tompson said some out-of-town applicants for the post had "impressive credentials" but that the board preferred to promote from within the appraisal district's 28-member staff. Wilkinson had "leaned on him (Stegall) pretty heavily," Tompson said.

Wilkinson was "very highly thought of" by the Texas State Property Tax Board and by "as high as the governor's office," Tompson said.

"Roland did us a great job — a very good job," Tompson said. "He took a tough situation (in the early years of reorganizing the appraisal district) and turned it around in a hurry and gave us a first-class operation here."

Stegall is the district's third chief appraiser. The first, 57-year-old Virgil Jones Jr., who had been the city's tax assessor-collector, served from 1980 until late 1982, when Wilkinson was appointed to the job.

Stegall said Jones "really knew how to appraise" property and that Wilkinson was "a master of communications."

"What I admired about Roland was his communications ability, which always works for the district's advantage," Stegall said. "He (Wilkinson) was always good about picking out strong staff members to do the job. From the top to the bottom, our staff is very strong, very competent."

Stegall, who manages the office's $1.13-million annual operating budget for property appraisals and tax collections, said that the office is "very cost-efficient." For example, he said, the per-parcel cost of appraisals in Midland County averages $6.41, while the statewide average is $10 per parcel. "Our board keeps pretty tight reins on the budget," Stegall said.

The appraisal of property is "an on-going process all of the time," Stegall said. "We have appraisers out in the field on a daily basis." Stegall's office appraises real estate and business-related personal property and contracts with Pritchard & Abbott, valuation consultants, for the appraisal of minerals, including oil and gas.

The county-wide tax base for Midland County is $4.2 billion, which is a decrease from the high of $5.1-billion in 1985 — after oil prices started dropping. "We're pretty well driven by oil prices," Stegall said. "It has a large bearing (on the tax base)."

Stegall annually collects $52 million to $53 million in taxes for four taxing entities: The City of Midland, the Midland Independent School District, Midland College, and the Midland County Hospital District (Midland Memorial Hospital).

Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield annually collects about $10.5 million in property taxes for Midland County and the Greenwood Independent School District.

"Our main aim is to be as courteous and cooperative as we can," said Stegall.

Stegall, a native of Crosbyton in the Lubbock area, was graduated from West Texas State University in Canyon in 1972 with a bachelor's degree in mathematics and chemistry. Stegall, who earned a teaching certificate in secondary education, taught high-school mathematics in Ralls for three years. He also did graduate work at Texas Tech University.

"My educational background in mathematics makes me well suited for this type of work," said Stegall, who noted that he is "well qualified" for the job. "I work with numbers constantly in one facet or the other."

In 1975, Stegall moved to Midland, where for the next four years he was an insurance adjuster "of all things." He joined the City of Midland's Tax Office in 1979 as an appraiser. Two years later, he was working for the Midland Central Appraisal District, which absorbed the city tax office in the centralization of the property appraisals.

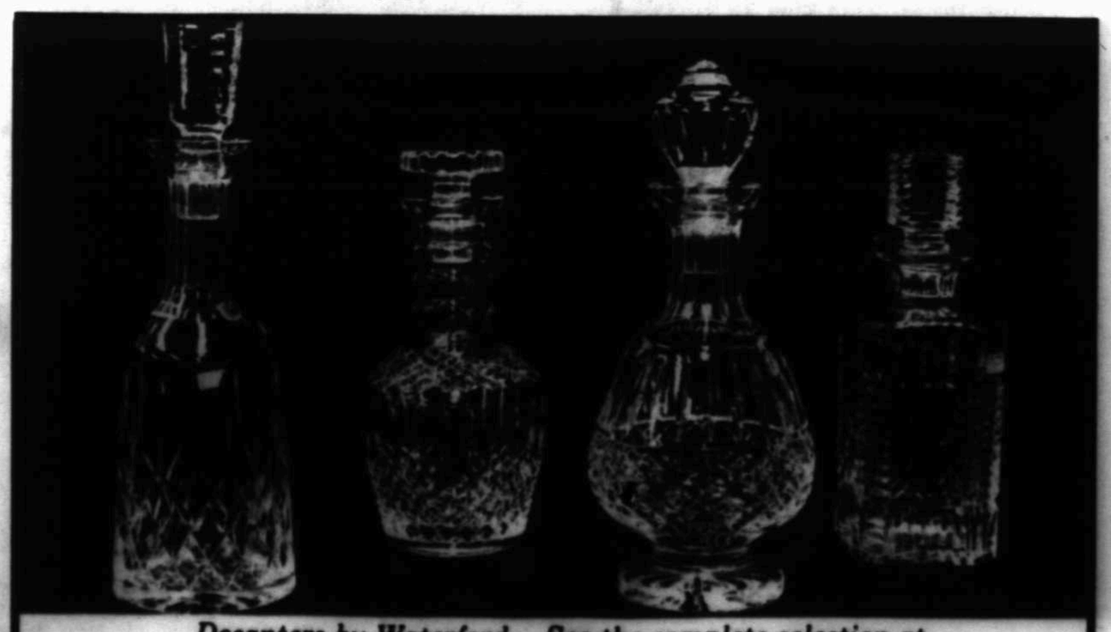

"I've been here so long now that it's definitely home," Stegall said. "We're here to serve the public the best way that we can."

Just when you think you know men, along comes a strange one

By CAROL RUST

BEAUMONT (AP) — I know men well enough to know they'll come into your life when you least need them and leave you calling their names in the dark to a silent telephone.

I know men well enough to know all the tears I cried when I was a little girl wouldn't make even one little puddle up against the ones I'd cry once I got old enough to put on a prom dress.

I know men well enough to know they'll change like a chameleon and leave you hanging without even an apology as consolation.

Some I thought I knew well enough to spend time with or even marry, but then one day or night or fight I found I didn't know them at all.

I built skyscrapers of emotion around some and all I had, looking back, was a handful of dust and a couple of years, maybe, where I had some pictures to show and a name to mention if I felt like it.

I know them well enough to know I don't know them at all, very much.

And that's the way I chose to keep it, because there's just so many miles you can put on one heart, in my way of thinking.

And then this one man who listens for the sounds of trains in the darkness and waits for the leaves to turn in autumn and points out a pretty sunset or a red-headed woodpecker in the tree out front and doesn't mind my picking up seashells at the beach even if they're all broken and likes me even though I give away all the banana bread I baked or stay up cooking until the wee hours of the morning — this man shuffled into my life with a black German shepherd named Annie on a leash and a talent for making biscuits and was real nice and even put up with me for a while.

Knowing men like I did, I figured I'd just enjoy it for the duration and shrug my shoulders when it was all over like I'd learned to do so well with all the practice I'd had.

And then something funny happened — he stayed around.

He tolerated my being grumpy in the mornings and my watching "I Love Lucy" reruns until 3 a.m. and borrowing his car and losing it in Austin one awful weekend and, well, he put up with me and seemed to enjoy it (all except for the car, which, fortunately the police found.)

And then, an even funnier thing happened. We were sitting on the back porch watching the sun come up and Annie was running around the yard going nowhere in particular and we were remarking on what a fine Halloween party we'd had the night before, gazing at a yard strewn with beer cups, Coke cans, orange streamers and a renegade balloon against the fence, and he asked me to marry him.

I know men well enough to know that if you can find just one who listens for the sound of trains in the darkness, and waits for the leaves to change in the autumn and doesn't mind if you make your coffee cajun strong and will wait for you to get out of the bathroom or off your high horse and will walk down and back up 50 bezillion steps in the Superdome in New Orleans to go to the first-aid station and find you some aspirin just because you have a ferocious headache even though it's during the NCAA Final Four basketball playoffs, that's a guy you'd better keep around.

So I said OK.

Colson warns religious right to be tolerant

By DON LATTIN
Hearst News and Feature Service

Before Pat Robertson announced his presidential candidacy, Charles Colson advised the former TV preacher to resign his Southern Baptist ordination and drop "the Rev." from his name.

Robertson listened to Colson.

Before the Rev. Jerry Falwell announced he was getting out of politics, Colson advised the founder of the Moral Majority that he'd "gone too far in this political business."

Falwell listened to Colson.

Before the high living and sexual antics of Jim and Tammy Bakker brought down their television empire, Colson publicly warned the charismatic couple that their glitzy brand of "prosperity theology" was corrupting evangelical Christianity.

The Bakkers didn't listen to Colson.

Now Colson, the convicted Watergate felon turned born-again Christian, has come out with another 375 pages of advice: "Kingdoms in Conflict: An Insider's Challenging View of Politics, Power and the Pulpit."

Colson begins his book with a frightening, fictional prologue about how a 1996 candidate of the new Christian Republican Party is elected president and brings the nation to the brink of nuclear war with his desire to fulfill the biblical prophecy of Armageddon.

Colson, who has become one of the more respected superstars of evangelical Christianity, is well aware that many readers will see Robertson in President Shelby Hopkins, the fictional commander-in-chief in his prologue.

During his years as host of the 700 Club, Robertson sought divine intervention to halt everything from his viewers' hemorrhoids to hurricanes threatening his television studio. Robertson says God told him to run for president.

"I wasn't writing about Pat, but if the shoe fits, put it on," said Colson, who has been a guest host of Robertson's 700 Club. "If people have an Armageddon theology, the people ought to know that before they run for president. I showed Pat the prologue and asked, 'Pat, is this you? He said, 'No, as president, I would not do that.' "

Colson, special counsel to President Richard Nixon, served seven months in federal prison on a Watergate-related charge. Colson, whose main ministry for the last 12 years has been helping other convicts find Christ through his successful Prison Fellowship Inc., is warning Christian Right leaders to tone down their rhetoric and be a bit more tolerant toward Americans with other religious persuasions — or those with none at all.

"Some people in the Religious Right are saying today that we want a president who will speak for God," Colson said in a recent interview. "Christians belong in government, but not attempting to take over the government in order to impose an agenda. We live in a pluralistic society."

As a fundamentalist evangelical who views the Bible as being without error, Colson believes in a future Armageddon and the cataclysmic second coming prophesied by the Apostle John in the New Testament Book of Revelations — the decisive battle between the forces of good and evil.

"I believe in the scripture that Armageddon will take place, but I wouldn't feel as president that I should help bring it about," Colson said. "Until God retakes the world, sin reigns in the meantime. God has ordained government to restrain sin, preserve order and promote justice."

Asked which Christian Right leader has gone over the line with rhetoric about "Christianizing America," Colson singled out the Rev. Tim LaHaye, leader of the American Coalition for Traditional Values and one of the co-founders of Falwell's Moral Majority.

"Tim LaHaye is basically theonomous. It's 'Let's take the government for God,' " Colson said.

In the prologue to "Kingdoms in Conflict," the Israeli government is forced into a coalition with a militant Jewish extremist party. Part of the political deal is that the Israeli government agrees to look the other way while messianic Jewish commandos retake the Temple Mount in Jerusalem and blow up the Arab-controlled Dome of the Rock, which is built on the site of the ancient Jewish temple and is sacred to both Jews and Muslims.

President Hopkins, who ran on the platform "Return America to God," fails to intervene because he sees these events as fulfilling biblical prophecy. His delay in stopping the Israeli move ignites a new Arab-Israel War and threatens to draw the superpowers into a nuclear Armageddon.

Falwell and other fundamentalist ministers close to Reagan have publicly interpreted the rise of the atheistic Communist government in the Soviet Union, the formation of the state of Israel in 1948 and the reunification of Jerusalem in 1967 as signs that Armageddon will come in this generation. Under this interpretation of 20th century history, the time is rapidly approaching when Soviet, Iranian and African armies — representing the forces of evil — will invade Israel. These satanic forces will be destroyed in a nuclear war, but a remnant of true Christians will be lifted up and united with Jesus.

While Colson said he does not think Robertson would imitate President Hopkins, he said he's not too sure how a "President Falwell" would react to the book's all-too-believable Israeli scenario. Colson said he was glad to hear that Falwell had decided to put preaching before politicking.

Petition seeks relief for oil industry

TIPRO: Imports threat to national security

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Oil imports are a grave threat to national security, says a petition submitted Wednesday to the Department of Commerce by the National Energy Security Committee, a coalition of oil industry associations including the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

The petition to require that the Department of Commerce investigate the danger of oil imports to the domestic petroleum industry presented by Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association, maintains that even under optimum conditions — utilizing all its resources — the U.S. would still have an extreme shortfall of energy in the event of a national crisis or world war.

"The petition offers two scenarios," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "The first is a one-year nationalization plan that calls for continued normal production and a draw-down of the Strategic Petroleum Reserves in the event of an oil shutoff by OPEC. Under the condition of this plan, the U.S. would still have to import 7.4 million barrels per day to meet its energy needs," said Spannaus.

He added that the second plan, to be put into effect in the event of a world war, is even more depressing. With all-out domestic production, rationing, conservation and drawing down the SPR to zero, the U.S. would still have to import 2.7 million barrels daily, Spannaus explained.

"The possibility of our oil supplies drying up in a conflict at the same time the country's domestic industry is rapidly pulling back, with operating wells being capped and relatively little exploration and new drilling, should scare the daylights out of serious national security planners," said TIPRO President John E. Watson in a press release.

"A revitalized U.S. oil and gas producing industry is absolutely essential to promote and protect America's security."

Watson said increasing oil imports have devastated America's domestic industry and created a national security crisis.

The petition warns: "Today, in 1987, our national security is again threatened by rapidly increasing oil imports, stimulated in turn by the dramatic fall in world oil prices at the beginning of 1986. The United States now finds itself more vulnerable to political and economic blackmail, real or implied, on the part of unreliable suppliers."

However, a spokesman for the Department of Energy today disagreed with the conclusions of the petition, saying there is no clear threat to national security at present.

Spannaus said the petition effort, initiated by Enserch Corp., a Dallas-based energy company, TIPRO and others in the coalition, was filed under Section 232 of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962, as amended. Although several presidents have initiated action under Section 232 with respect to oil imports, this is the first time the industry itself has filed such an action.

He said the petition requires the Commerce Secretary to launch an import impact investigation on the national security, and to present findings and recommendations to the President. The President then has one year to determine what actions, if any, are necessary to adjust the impact of oil imports.

Spannaus said he expected hearings to begin on the petition almost immediately and that PBPA and members of the Permian Basin oil industry would be called to testify.

In addition to PBPA and TIPRO, the oil and gas groups which have joined the petition effort include: Society of Independent & Professional Earth Scientists, North Texas Oil & Gas Association, East Texas Producers & Royalty Owners, Oklahoma Independent Petroleum Association, Nebraska Independent Oil & Gas Association, Petroleum Equipment Suppliers Association, International Association of Drilling Contractors, Association of Oilwell Service Contractors and 10 major independent oil companies.

Tight labor market threatens growth

New York Times News Service

BOSTON — After years of virtually full employment, some economists expect a labor shortage to crimp New England's growth next year and possibly for years to come.

Manufacturing employment, long in decline, will continue a turnaround begun this year on the strength of rising exports, according to recent forecasts. But expansion will drop sharply in the service sector, which has fueled much of the region's growth since 1983.

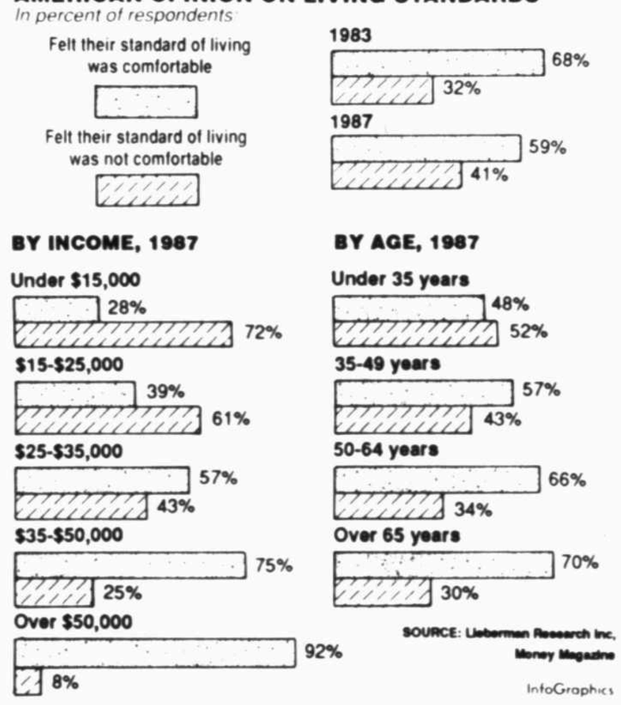

States in southern New England, particularly Massachusetts and Connecticut, will experience the sharpest slowdowns, according to Edward J. Deak of Fairfield University and Benjamin Chinitz of the Lincoln Institute of Land Policy. Both cited tight labor markets as a principal factor that would constrict growth next year.

Deak, a professor of economics, and Chinitz, until recently dean of the University of Lowell's management school, monitor the economies of their states and made their projections using a model prepared by Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass. The two joined six other economists to review the progress of the region and to outline its future at the fall meeting of the New England Economic Project, a nonprofit group of business, government and academic specialists.

Is your household living comfortably on its income?

In 1987, 59 percent of those responding to a survey said they were "comfortable" with their standard of living, down from 68 percent in 1983. In 1987, more than half of those younger than 35 didn't feel comfortable with their living standard. Nearly 61 percent of those earning between $15-$25,000 did not feel that they had a comfortable standard of living.

AMERICAN OPINION ON LIVING STANDARDS

Wages have risen, but so has the cost of living, and New England's harsh climate and cultural quirks deter job seekers from moving here, said Frederick Breimyer, vice president and chief economist for the State Street Bank. Hunts seek Chapter 11 for trusts

DALLAS (AP) — The Hunt brothers moved to improve their chance of reorganizing more than $714 million in debts by putting the personal trusts of Lamar and Nelson Bunker Hunt under Chapter 11 of the federal Bankruptcy Code.

The Tuesday filings came three days before U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Harold Abramson is expected to choose one of two competing debt reorganization plans for the trust estate of third brother William Herbert Hunt, which was placed in Chapter 11 in August 1986.

Nelson Hunt

Lamar Hunt

Estate officials hope the filing, which will place the trusts in the Abramson's hands, will allow him to choose the plan they proposed in July.

When the Hunts filed that plan, which combines the three trusts and other Hunt entities to pay off bank loans, Abramson questioned whether he could allow a plan using assets not under his control.

"The trustees of the estates decided then to place the Lamar and Nelson trusts in Chapter 11 and petition that they be placed in Judge Abramson's court," Tom Whitaker, a Hunt Energy Corp. vice president, said Tuesday.

Creditors OK Texaco proposal

By STEPHEN LABATON
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The committee of general creditors of Texaco Inc. Tuesday approved an interim settlement proposal in the oil company's three-year battle with the Pennzoil Co., but it declined to disclose its terms until a crucial showdown in bankruptcy court today.

The court is scheduled to hear pleas by Texaco to extend a critical deadline in the oil giant's bankruptcy proceeding. Pennzoil and the committee of oil industry creditors said they would oppose the effort to extend the deadline, while a committee representing Texaco shareholders said it supported a limited extension.

The general creditors' proposal is expected to be less costly than the Pennzoil proposal, sources involved in the bankruptcy proceeding said. Under the Pennzoil proposal, which has been filed with the Federal Bankruptcy Court in White Plains, N.Y, Texaco would make a non-refundable payment of $1.5 billion.

In exchange, Pennzoil would limit its $10.53 billion claim to $5 billion.

Shearson to buy Hutton

NEW YORK (AP) — Shearson Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc. has agreed to acquire E.F. Hutton Group Inc. in a deal worth about $1 billion, Dow Jones News Service said today.

The two securities firms reached a tentative understanding on the merger late Tuesday, and intend to sign formal papers this morning, the news service said, quoting unidentified sources close to the negotiations.

Shearson's offer consists of $25 per share in cash and $8 in preferred Shearson stock, which carries a market value of about $5 per share, the sources were quoted as saying.

Based on Hutton's 34.2 million common shares outstanding, such an offer would have an indicated value of about $1.03 billion.

Hutton shares dipped 25 cents to $27.37½ in early New York Stock Exchange trading. Shearson, which is about 60 percent owned by American Express Co., jumped 87½ cents to $15.37½.

Tennis pro serves up sportswear shop

By MELLA McEWEN

Mission Square shopping center, 4400 N. Big Spring, has gained a new tenant: BARRY STEPHENS SPORTSWEAR.

Owned by Barry Stephens, the former tennis pro at The Midlander, the store carries tennis and racquetball wear and equipment as well as jogging suits. Stephens also restrings rackets and can arrange for tennis lessons.

Stephens said he hopes to add skiwear and aerobics clothing to the store's inventory. "I'm looking for this to be a multi-sportswear store," he stated. The store, open a little more than a week, is open from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

Opening in early January will be PALS HAIR DESIGNS, a new beauty salon owned by Midlander Phyllis Lewis and located at 1601 N. Big Spring.

Lewis said she plans to specialize not only in contemporary hairstyles, but ethnic hair design as well. "Being black myself," she commented, "I saw the need for good black hair care. I think this will fill the gap." She added that she believes the customers she gained during her work at Regis and J.C. Penney's hair salons will follow her to her own salon.

The new location will have room for six hairstylists and two barbers, and Lewis plans to also employ a manicurist and a nail sculptor.

Midlander Tony Smith has relocated his BMW SERVICE CENTER to 3200 Commercial, which is just east of Midkiff Road.

Smith and two mechanics offer full mechanical service — no paint or body work — on European cars, such as the BMW, Saab, Porsche, and Jaguar. He also has his own parts department, he said.

He recently left Southwestern Bell to concentrate on car repair: "I've worked on cars all my life, and I've worked on these types of cars for 11 years. I've also owned two BMWs, two Porsches and a Volvo, so I have a lot of first-hand knowledge."

•••

When the Center for Energy & Economic Diversification moves from University of Texas of the Permian Basin campus, SOUTHWESTERN BELL will provide a fiber-optic communication system for the new facility.

In addition, Southwestern Bell has pledged $30,000 to the Center's capital fund drive.

Los Angeles-based Times Mirror, which owns Midland's cable company, has acquired four magazines from Diamandis Communications.

The magazines include Field & Stream, Home Mechanix, Skiing and Yachting, and were acquired for $167.5 million and the assumption of deferred liability.

Times Mirror also publishes Popular Science, Outdoor Life, Ski, Golf and The Sporting News.

OPEC worries drive prices lower

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices slipped lower Tuesday in a light selloff precipitated by worries about the upcoming OPEC meeting.

Analysts said the market appeared cautious in anticipation of the Dec. 9 meeting of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which they said was unlikely to resolve the cartel's oversupply problems.

"The market is treating the upcoming OPEC meeting somewhat pessimistically," said analyst James Steel of Refco Inc. Commodities.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the January delivery price of West Texas Intermediate, the main U.S. crude oil, fell 5 cents a barrel to $18.46. Trading in crude was described as quiet, and prices moved in a narrow range throughout the day.

Dollar bolstered by bank support

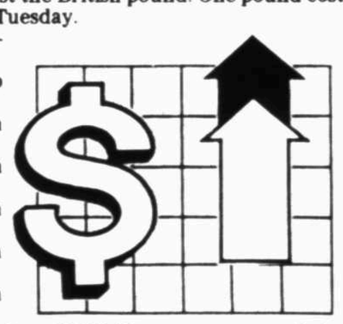

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose in quiet European trading today, bolstered by concerted support for the dollar by European central banks on Tuesday and the belief that the West German central bank will cut a key interest rate.

Gold prices were unchanged in Zurich but slightly lower in London.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 1.28 yen to a closing 133.70 yen. Later in London, it traded at 133.42 yen.

In London, the dollar gained against the British pound. One pound cost $1.8035, cheaper than $1.8225 late Tuesday.

Other dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Tuesday's rates:

—1.6605 West German marks, up from 1.6525

—1.3615 Swiss francs, up from 1.3520

—5.6503 French francs, up from 5.6145

—1.8779 Dutch guilders, up from 1.8580

—1,225.50 Italian lire, up from 1,218.75

—1.3135 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3133

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $488.10 a troy ounce and the city's five major bullion dealers later fixed a recommended price of $490.00, both down from Tuesday's late bid price of $492.30.

Bullion dealers said there was some good investor buying.

In Zurich, gold was selling at a bid $489.50, unchanged from Tuesday's late bid.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $1.17 to close at a bid $489.02.

Silver bullion was selling on the London market at a bid price of $6.94 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $7.05.

Meager rally adds 9 points to Dow

NEW YORK (AP) — The battered stock market regained some composure Tuesday after opening the week with big losses, but it lacked the strength to sustain at least two attempts to rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which tumbled nearly 77 points in heavy trading on Monday, ended the day up 8.79 points to 1,842.34.

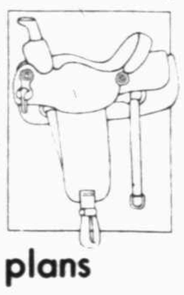

Trading volume on the New York Stock Exchange slowed, with 149.87 million shares changing hands compared to 268.91 million on Monday.

Broader market measures showed signs of stability. About 10 stocks rose in value for every nine that fell on the NYSE, with 813 up, 748 down and 397 unchanged.

Texas Business cites business non-leadership

To display its disappointment at a lack of powerful statewide leadership during 1987, the editors of Texas Business magazine have chosen an empty saddle as its annual "Texan of the Year."

Editor-in-chief Brux Austin stated that "We narrowed the list of candidates to 12. But in a year when Texas desperately needed great leadership, none of these individuals truly transcended their own jobs or tasks at hand."

Southland amends buyout plans

DALLAS (AP) — A debt plan has revived Southland Corp.'s $4.9 billion leveraged buyout that was postponed last month because buyers could not be found for the high-yield "junk bonds" needed to complete financing.

An investor group led by Southland's founding Thompson family filed an amended debt registration statement Tuesday with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Under the plan, Southland — the Dallas-based parent of the 7-Eleven convenience store chain — will borrow $1.5 billion and issue more than 26 million warrants to purchase Southland common stock under certain conditions.

MediaNews completes Denver Post deal

DALLAS (AP) — A MediaNews Group Inc. subsidiary has completed the purchase of the Denver Post from Times Mirror Co., MediaNews president William Dean Singleton said Tuesday.

Denver Newspapers Inc., the newly formed MediaNews subsidiary, acquired the Post for $95 million in cash and notes. Media General Inc., of Richmond, Va., is also a participant in the purchase.

Los Angeles-based Times Mirror retained ownership of the Denver Post's downtown land and buildings, currently valued at about $20 million, and will lease the facilities to the Post for up to five years.

HUNTS

Whitaker placed the value of the trust estates "in the hundreds of millions of dollars."

"They consist of oil and gas holdings, real estate development property, office buildings, raw land and similar-type assets," he said.

Whitaker said that because of the combined usage of the trust estates in the reorganization plan, the new filings are not expected to significantly affect the reorganization process.

He said the filings will have a salutary effect since many businesses and real estate interests are owned jointly by the trust estates. With all three estates in Chapter 11, a more thorough and less complicated reorganization should result, Whitaker said.

The Hunts put the William Herbert Hunt Trust, along with their Placid Oil Co., in Chapter 11 to guard against foreclosure after they sued their bank lenders in July 1986, claiming fraud in connection with $1.5 billion in loans.

The Hunt brothers face a flurry of lawsuits and investigations charging that the wealthy Texans tried to corner the world silver market illegally.

The brothers already have mortgaged much of their share of the family legacy to cover $1.1 billion in losses from the market crash on Silver Tuesday in March 1980. Court documents show the Hunts owned a third of the world supply of silver bullion at their apex in 1980.

The Hunt brothers' financial troubles extend beyond the colossal lawsuit and bankruptcies in Dallas.

Breimyer said, "New England is distinctive — not everyone wants to live here."

In a survey of 800 New England business, academic and government leaders, "the cost of housing nudged out the availability of a skilled work force" as the No. 1 problem facing the region, according to John C. Hoy, president of the New England Board of Higher Education.

"The issue of cost of housing and the impact it is having on the capacity to recruit is clearly a critical problem," Hoy told the New England Council.

Tight labor markets and higher wages could make it harder for the region's manufacturers to compete, according to Donald W. Walls, vice president and chief regional economist for Data Resources.

Since the late 1970s, he said, average factory wages in southern New England have risen from well below the national average to match or exceed that level.

"It will cause long-term growth to slow because we're competing away our advantages," Walls said. "The labor that's here is no longer cheap."

James M. Howell, chief economist for the Bank of Boston, said New England service industry wages were "way out of line" with the rest of the economy.

Despite higher wage levels, some growth is expected if a recession is avoided.

Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems

the cellular advantage

This holiday season, give yourself peace on earth.

Give your teenager a private phone line.

Peace on earth.

If your teenager loves to talk on the phone, it's the hardest thing on earth to find. Because you're always waiting to make calls. Or worrying about missing them.

That's why, this holiday season, you should give your teenager a gift that will make your whole family happy. A private phone line, with a separate phone number, from Southwestern Bell Telephone.

With a private phone line, your teenager could talk to his heart's content. And you'd be content because your phone line would never be tied up.

What's more, a private phone line's a small price to pay for something as precious as peace on earth. So call Southwestern Bell Telephone today.

And make your teenager the happiest kid on earth.

Southwestern Bell Telephone

The one to call on.

Available in most areas. Equipment not included.

Holiday Breads

Gifts in good taste

Fill your home with the wonderful aromas of the season by baking these special holiday breads. This collection of fast and easy recipes, as delicious as those from Grandma's kitchen, will add a personal touch to your holiday gift giving. And, since each recipe uses Rapid-Rise™ Yeast, you'll enjoy the precious gift of time . . . as rising time is reduced up to 50 percent.

These traditional holiday breads are flavored with the season's favorite baking ingredients – California raisins and walnuts. Naturally sweet raisins and crunchy walnuts will add a wonderful texture and flavor to all of your holiday baking.

Showcased here is a variety of breads that are sure to please those on your Christmas gift-giving list. The Walnut Yule Bread, based on a Norwegian recipe known as Julkaka (Yool-Kaga), is flavored with the rich spice of cardamom and walnuts. The Holiday Raisin Stollen, a Christmas cake traditionally exchanged throughout Germany, is flavored with the natural sweetness of golden and dark raisins.

A generous amount of raisins and walnuts is kneaded into part of the dough and then wrapped in a thin layer of plain dough for a dramatic presentation in our Holiday Bread. Chocolate Crescents dusted with powdered sugar complete this festive collection of holiday breads.

It doesn't take much to add a special touch to your homemade gifts. By including the recipe or even canisters filled with special ingredients, your gift will be all the more appreciated. In addition to good taste, these recipes come with storage tips – that way you'll be sure your holiday gifts are eaten at their best!

Special Tips For Freezing Breads

Cool completely. Do not frost before freezing. Wrap in airtight, moisture-proof wrap. Thaw at room temperature.

Storage and Handling Tips For Raisins and Walnuts

Both raisins and shelled walnuts are best kept cool and dry. Store them in separate air-tight containers or moisture-proof bags in the refrigerator or freezer.

Raisins and walnuts will retain their flavor, color and nutritive value up to 15 months if stored properly.

Walnut Yule Bread

Makes 1 bread

- 3 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 package RapidRise Yeast
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon ground cardamom
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup softened butter or margarine
- 3/4 cup half-and-half
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup finely chopped walnuts
- Walnut halves, for garnish
- 3 tablespoons crushed sugar cubes

In a large bowl, mix 2 cups flour, yeast, sugar, cardamom and salt. Heat butter and half-and-half until hot to touch (125–130°F). Stir into dry mixture. Stir in one egg, slightly beaten. Stir in chopped walnuts and remaining flour to make soft dough.

Knead dough on lightly floured surface until smooth and elastic, about 8 minutes. Cover; let rest 10 minutes. On lightly floured surface, roll dough into a rope 36 inches long. Starting with one end of the rope in center of a greased baking sheet, coil into a snail shape. Press to seal outside end of coil. Beat the remaining egg and brush on bread. Garnish with walnut halves; sprinkle with crushed sugar cubes. With scissors, snip at 1-inch intervals around the edge. Cover; let rise in warm draft-free place until almost doubled in size, about 40 minutes.

Bake in lower third of oven at 375°F for 25 to 30 minutes until browned. If needed, cover with foil to prevent overbrowning. Cool on rack. Slice, or cut into wedges to serve.

Holiday Bread

Makes 1 bread

- 2 cups raisins
- 3 tablespoons orange-flavored brandy
- 3-1/2 to 3-3/4 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 package RapidRise Yeast
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup very warm water (125 to 130°F)
- 6 tablespoons softened butter or margarine
- 2 cups chopped walnuts
- 1-1/2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 1-1/2 teaspoons grated orange peel
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- Melted butter, optional

Combine raisins and brandy in large bowl; stir occasionally.

In separate large bowl, mix 2 cups flour, yeast, sugar and salt. Stir in warm water and butter; blend well. Stir in enough remaining flour to make soft dough.

Knead dough on lightly floured surface until smooth and elastic, about 8 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft until doubled in size, about 30 minutes.

Punch dough down. Slice off one-third of dough; roll on lightly floured surface to 12-inch circle; reserve. Remove about 1/3 cup dough from remaining two-thirds dough; set aside to decorate top. Stir walnuts, cinnamon, orange and lemon peel into raisins. Add remaining two-thirds dough; knead until raisins and walnuts are evenly distributed in dough. Shape into 7-inch ball. Place ball in center of dough circle. Pull edge of dough circle up to completely enclose ball. Pleat dough and pinch together in center to seal. Flatten pleats to smooth surface. Place dough, seam side down, in greased 8-inch pie plate. Decorate top of dough.* With skewer or long needle, pierce bun through to bottom all over to allow steam to escape. Bake at 350°F for 1-1/4 to 1-1/2 hours. If needed, cover with foil to prevent overbrowning. Remove from pan; cool on wire rack. Brush warm bread with melted butter, if desired.

To Decorate Top: Divide reserved dough into 4 pieces. Roll 3 pieces into 10-inch ropes. Twist ropes to form "S" shapes. Place on top of bread, crossing in center. Roll remaining piece into 6 small balls. Arrange balls on bread.

Chocolate Crescents

Makes 10 crescents

- 3-1/4 to 3-1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 package RapidRise Yeast
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 3/4 cup milk
- 3/4 cup semi-sweet chocolate chips
- 1/4 cup water
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- Chocolate Filling (recipe follows)
- Confectioners sugar

In large bowl, mix 2 cups flour, yeast, sugar and salt.

Combine milk, chocolate chips, water and butter in small saucepan. Stir over medium-low heat until chocolate melts and temperature reaches 125 to 130°F. Gradually add to dry ingredients; blend well. Stir in enough remaining flour to make soft dough.

Knead dough on lightly floured surface 4 minutes or until smooth and elastic. Cover; let rest 10 minutes. While dough rests, prepare Chocolate Filling (recipe follows).

Divide dough into 10 pieces. Roll each piece into 4 x 8-inch oval. Crumble about 3 tablespoons Chocolate Filling over each oval. Roll up from short end. Pinch seam to seal. Place rolls, seam side down, on greased baking sheets. With sharp knife, make 5 slits in top of each roll, cutting halfway through roll. Curve ends to make crescent shape.

Cover, let rise in warm place, free from draft until almost doubled in size, about 45 minutes. Bake at 375°F for 15 to 18 minutes or until done. Cool on wire rack. Sprinkle with confectioners sugar.

Chocolate Filling: In small bowl combine 1 cup flour, 3/4 cup sugar and 3 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa. With fork or pastry blender, blend in 1/4 cup butter or margarine. Stir in 3 egg yolks.

Holiday Raisin Stollen

Makes 1 bread

- 3/4 cup natural raisins
- 3/4 cup golden raisins
- 3 tablespoons rum, brandy or orange juice
- 3 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 package RapidRise Yeast
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon each salt and nutmeg
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/3 cup softened butter or margarine
- 1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
- 2 eggs, beaten
- Lemon Glaze (recipe follows)
- Raisins and candied fruits, for garnish

Mix raisins and rum; let stand at least 1 hour.

In a large bowl, mix 2 cups flour, yeast, sugar, salt and nutmeg. Heat milk, butter and lemon peel until hot to touch (125–130°F). Stir in dry mixture. Mix in eggs. Stir in enough remaining flour to make soft dough.

Knead on lightly floured surface 5 minutes. Add raisins to dough and knead 3 to 5 minutes longer until smooth and elastic. Cover; let rest 10 minutes.

Roll dough on lightly floured surface into 8 x 12-inch oval. Fold dough in half lengthwise to within 1/2 inch of opposite side; press closed. Transfer to greased baking sheet. Cover and let rise in warm, draft-free place until almost doubled in size, about 40 minutes.

Bake at 375°F for 25 to 35 minutes until browned. Cool on rack. Drizzle with Lemon Glaze and garnish with raisins and candied fruits. Slice to serve.

Lemon Glaze: Mix 1 cup confectioners sugar with enough lemon juice (2 to 3 teaspoons) to make a spreadable glaze.

Re-evaluating sauces adds flavor to dieting

By JONATHAN PROBBER
New York Times News Service

Sauces can be a problem for the diet-conscious. This is not at all in keeping with their mission, which is to add flavor, visual appeal and textural interest to a dish.

Most diet books call for the elimination of sauces and gravies from the diet, charging that they are made largely from fat. Standard sauces and gravies do depend on fat; flavorful fat, but fat nonetheless.

A common technique for making sauce involves stirring flour into fat to form a roux, which thickens whatever liquid is then added. The idea is the same, whether flour and butter are used to thicken milk (a bechamel sauce) or flour is stirred into pan drippings for roast-meat gravy.

The fat enables the flour to thicken the liquid evenly. As many of us have discovered, dumping flour directly into hot stock results in nothing we want to serve, let alone eat.

Another popular class of sauce involves the emulsification of two fats. Hollandaise and mayonnaise are the two leading examples; both are dense with calories.

So what is a weight-conscious cook to do? The answer involves a change of reference points, as does so much of diet modification. Stop thinking of a sauce as a smothering, near-gelatinous garb.

If you saute a piece of fish, for example, your French reflexes might tell you to add shallots, white wine, reduce those and then add heavy cream. Then reduce that until nearly butter, and proceed to shorten your life by clogging your arteries.

Instead, calm yourself and your taste buds by remembering that the food, not the sauce, reigns supreme. Saute the fish in a nonstick pan in a little olive oil (replete with those good monounsaturates). Remove the fish, throw in the shallots, saute until they take a little color and add white vermouth.

This sauce will not reduce so that it coats the back of a spoon.

While you may choose to drop those heavy bechamels that served as the base for your favorite cheese sauces and other dishes, a low-fat version can serve as a dietary compromise. This recipe is adapted from "Cook It Light" by Jeanne Jones (Macmillan, 1987). It is not particularly ground-breaking, but it is a respectable lower-fat alternative to bechamel. Returning to our fish example, you might stir in a couple of tablespoons of the white sauce to the reduced vermouth for a creamier affair.

WHITE SAUCE

1 tablespoon corn oil margarine
3 tablespoons flour
2½ cups skim milk, heated to simmering
⅛ teaspoon salt, if desired

Melt margarine over low heat. Add flour and cook for 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Do not brown. Remove from heat and add milk slowly, stirring with wire whisk. Add salt and cook slowly over low heat for 15 to 20 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Avocados, grapefruit provide light fare, free seeds

By MARIE HAMMOCK
Hearst News Service

Avocados and grapefruit should be in plentiful supply during the coming weeks. They're good candidates for salads — which we should all turn to between those fattening holiday feasts — and also a source of free seedlings for the indoor forest.

Avocados can serve as either the salad or the dressing. My friend Millie discovered this when, just before serving dinner, she found she was out of salad oil. As an experiment, she threw a peeled and pitted avocado in the blender with a little lemon juice, seasoned it with salt and pepper, and found she had a quite acceptable salad dressing.

She's experimented with different ingredients accompanying the avocado, but finds that lemon juice works best; it takes the curse off the oiliness of the avocado and thins it sufficiently. Her favorite seasonings are garlic salt and lemon pepper.

Avocado pits can be encouraged to root in plain water. Remember the old trick of supporting the pit with three toothpicks at the top of a glass of water? But if you have a ripe one, and there's a bit of root growth peeping through, there's no reason why you can't plant it directly in a container of sterile potting soil. Just keep it moist to the touch for a couple of weeks to encourage root growth. Don't let it dry out completely until top growth is showing.

I've had good luck getting grapefruit seeds to sprout, too. The seedlings don't shoot up as fast as the avocado, once it gets started. But they make nice foliage plants for a few years. If you get an entire forest growing, share with your friends.

Just put them in a pot of sterile planting mix, and remember the rule of thumb for planting seeds: Cover the seeds with a layer of soil three times the diameter of one seed. Grapefruit has big seeds, so that means about ½- to ¾-inch covering of soil. Put the pot aside, and keep it moist until the sprouts appear — it takes a couple of weeks — and then be sure your seedlings get a half day's sun. When they get 3 or 4 inches high, put them in separate pots.

Half an avocado contains around 150 calories — not exactly a dieter's delight. But it's a source of potassium, one of the great nutritional needs of older people, or anyone taking diuretics; also folic acid, Vitamin B6, Vitamins A and C, but absolutely no cholesterol.

Half a grapefruit, on the other hand, contains perhaps 40 calories; also potassium, some Vitamin A and an excellent source of Vitamin C.

Here's an avocado and grapefruit salad recipe from "The Fresh Start," the newsletter published by Fresh Western Marketing, Inc., of Salinas, Calif.

AVOCADO AND GRAPEFRUIT SALAD

3 large grapefruits
2 large avocados
½ sweet red onion
1 head butter lettuce
Vinaigrette:
¼ cup oil
2 tablespoons honey
¼ cup grapefruit juice
2 tablespoons rice wine vinegar
½ teaspoon celery seed
⅛ teaspoon paprika
Salt and pepper to taste

Peel and section grapefruit. Peel and slice avocados into lengthwise sections. Slice onion into rings. Wash, dry and arrange butter lettuce on salad plates. Top with grapefruit sections, then several slices of avocado, then several onion rings. Combine ingredients for the vinaigrette, top each serving with dressing and serve.

Sweet potato dish eases hassles

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

One way to beat the holiday meal hassle is to keep side dishes simple. Here's an easy variation of traditional candied sweet potatoes.

CRANBERRY-APPLE SWEET POTATOES

5 to 6 medium sweet potatoes, peeled, or two 18-ounce cans sweet potatoes, drained and cut into bite-size pieces
1 (21-ounce) can apple pie filling
1 (8-ounce) can whole cranberry sauce
2 tablespoons apricot preserves
2 tablespoons orange marmalade

Cut fresh potatoes into bite-size pieces. In large saucepan cook potatoes, covered, in enough boiling salted water to cover, about 15 minutes or until tender. Drain and set aside. Spread pie filling in 8x8x2-inch baking dish; arrange cooked fresh or canned sweet potatoes on top. In a small mixing bowl stir together cranberry sauce, apricot preserves and orange marmalade; spoon over sweet potatoes. Bake, uncovered, in 350-degree oven for 20 to 25 minutes or until heated through.

Candies flavored with coffee, orange

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

We halved the cooking time for these candies by using sweetened condensed milk instead of cream. The candies make great gifts for the holidays.

SHORTCUT CAPPUCCINO CARAMELS

1 cup margarine or butter
1 (16-ounce) package (2¼ cups packed) brown sugar
1 (14-ounce) can (1¼ cups) sweetened condensed milk
1 cup light corn syrup
3 tablespoons instant coffee crystals
½ to 1 teaspoon finely shredded orange peel
1 cup chopped walnuts
1 teaspoon vanilla

In heavy 3-quart saucepan melt margarine over low heat. Stir in brown sugar, sweetened condensed milk, corn syrup, coffee crystals and orange peel. Carefully clip candy thermometer to side of saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring frequently, until thermometer registers 248 degrees, firm-ball stage (about 15 to 20 minutes).

Remove saucepan from heat; remove candy thermometer from saucepan. Immediately stir in walnuts and vanilla.

Quickly pour caramel mixture into a foil-lined and buttered 8x8x2-inch baking pan. When caramel is firm, use foil to lift out of pan. Use buttered knife to cut candy into ¾-inch squares.

Wrap each piece in clear plastic wrap. Tie with colorful ribbons. Makes about 100 ¾-inch squares, 3 pounds.

Nutrition information per ¾-inch piece: 65 cal., 10 g carbo., 2 g fat, 1 mg chol., 30 mg sodium.

Cookbook author suggests giving gifts created in kitchen

By LORNA SASS
Copley News Service

When John Hadamuscin was growing up on the family farm in Willard, Ohio, Christmas was a holiday to be remembered. His mother was a great cook and spent endless hours on holiday food preparation, holding forth in a kitchen so huge that it comfortably accommodated a freezer 10 feet long.

The updated old family recipes — handed down from generations of relatives with polyglot Czechoslovakian, Yugoslavian and Dutch backgrounds — now form the core of Hadamuscin's first and very handsome cookbook, "The Holidays: 21 Menus for Elegant Entertaining from Thanksgiving to Twelfth Night" (Harmony, $12.95).

"It was a case of rheumatic fever when I was 12 years old that got me started cooking," reminisced Hadamuscin, 46, over a cup of hot tea in his adopted home — New York's Manhattan. "I was hanging around the house, unable to do very much for 10 months and I began helping my mother in the kitchen," he recalled.

From then on, Hadamuscin was delighted to participate in the preparation of daily and holiday fare.

Christmas cooking always started early in the Hadamuscin household. Even before Thanksgiving, John's mother and Aunt Florence would prepare the fruitcakes and plum puddings and put them up to age for the next few months. After Thanksgiving, the cookie making would begin.

"We would bake cookies every single night producing over a thousand cookies between Thanksgiving and New Year," Hadamuscin said. "It would be assembly-line production, with my mother and grandmother making and rolling the dough, and the four of us kids stamping out the shapes and decorating them."

Among the family's collections of cookie cutters, John's favorites were those for Santa Claus figures. (Today, he owns a collection of more than 300 Santa Clauses in all sizes and shapes).

The cookies were stored by the hundreds in huge lard cans. Many of these home-baked cookies were given as food gifts during the holiday season, along with made-from-scratch hard-rock candy and mincemeat.

The tradition of Christmas food gifts is one in that is still very much a part of Hadamuscin's holiday spirit, and his cookbook is filled with fine ideas for preparations that may be done well in advance, leaving celebrants free to enjoy themselves during the height of the holiday season.

Here are some of his favorite recipes for made-ahead food gifts

CRANBERRY LIQUEUR

2 cups sugar
1 cup water
3 cups (1 12-ounce package) cranberries, coarsely chopped
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
3 cups vodka

Combine sugar and water in medium saucepan over low heat and bring to boil. Lower heat and simmer, stirring constantly, until all sugar has dissolved. Stir in cranberries and orange rind and remove from heat. Cool to room temperature.

In large glass container, combine syrup-cranberry mixture with vodka and cover tightly. Store 3 to 4 weeks in cook dark place shaking the container or stirring every 2 or 3 days.

Place a sieve over a bowl and drain berries, reserving the liquid. Press berries against the sieve to extract as much liquid as possible. Discard berries.

Strain liquid through a double thickness of cheesecloth and repeat process until liquid is clear. Pour liquid into 1-quart bottle or decanter or 2 1-pint bottles; cover tightly and store in a cool, dark place for 2 weeks before using.

BOURBON BALLS

2 cups crushed vanilla wafers
1 cup confectioners' sugar
1 cup chopped walnuts or pecans
2 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa powder
2 tablespoons light corn syrup or honey
¼-½ cup bourbon
Garnish: Additional confectioner's sugar

Mix crushed wafers, confectioners' sugar, nuts, cocoa, corn syrup and bourbon together until well blended. The mixture should be moist but not soggy.

Roll dough by approximate teaspoonsful into small balls. Roll balls in additional confectioners' sugar. Store balls in tightly covered tins in a cool, dry place.

GRANDMOTHER STAPLETON'S BOHEMIAN BUTTER COOKIES

1 cup sugar
2 cups (4 sticks) butter
4 large eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
4 cups all-purpose flour
Assorted colored sugars for decoration

In large mixing bowl, cream sugar and butter together until light and smooth. Separate 3 of the eggs; beat 3 egg yolks and remaining whole egg into butter/sugar mixture. Reserve 3 egg whites.

Beat in vanilla; then gradually add flour and mix well. Gather dough into ball, wrap in plastic wrap and chill in refrigerator for 3 hours or overnight.

On floured surface, roll out dough to thickness of ⅛ inch. Cut out shapes with floured cookie cutters, removing cookies to sheet of waxed paper. Re-roll scraps until all dough is used up. Lightly beat egg whites. Using a pastry brush, glaze surfaces of cookies with egg whites. Decorate each cookie with a sprinkling of colored sugar.

With spatula, transfer cookies to greased cookie sheet and bake in oven preheated to 350 degrees for 8 to 10 minutes or until edges of cookies are lightly browned.

Remove cookies to wire racks to cool. Store in tins or freezer until needed.

Yields 3 to 4 dozen.

NUT BRITTLE

1 cup light corn syrup
2¼ cups sugar
1 cup water
2 cups chopped unsalted nuts
¾ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon baking soda
2 teaspoons vanilla extract

In heavy saucepan, combine corn syrup, sugar and water and stir to blend. Place over medium high heat and bring to boil. Stir until sugar has dissolved. Then continue cooking without stirring until the mixture reaches 250 degrees on a candy thermometer.

Stir in nuts and continue cooking until mixture reaches 300 degrees, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and quickly, yet thoroughly, stir in salt, butter, baking soda and vanilla.

Working quickly, pour mixture onto greased baking sheet and spread into as thin a layer as possible. As candy begins to cool, turn it over with your hands and stretch it out even more until it is very thin and translucent.

Allow candy to cool completely; then break it up into rough, bite-size pieces. Store in tightly covered containers lined with wax paper.

Yields 2 pounds.

Booklet answers questions on sweeteners

By MICHAEL COLIN
Copley News Service

For answers to all those questions you've been asking about sweeteners in low-calorie foods and beverages, here's Sweet Choices.

With names like aspartame, cyclamate, thaumatin and stevioside, the sweeteners currently being used may sound a little intimidating to chemical-conscious consumers. This 10-page booklet poses and answers 24 question designed to take away some of the uncertanty surrounding these products.

Besides outlining the whats and wherefores of the various sweeteners we eat and drink every day, Sweet Choices answers questions about why people crave sweetness, how the desire for sweetness is satisfied, what constitutes a "low-calorie" sweetener.

So before you sprinkle some cyclamate on your breakfast cereal or stir a teaspoon of aspartame in your tea, read up on your Sweet Choices.

Send a No. 10 stamped, self-addressed envelope to Calorie Control Council, Suite 500-D, 5775 Peachtree-Dunwoody Road, Atlanta, Ga. 30342. Ask for Sweet Choices brochure. (Limit: One per request).

NOW APPEARING BARBARA HUMPHREY

The best way to describe this beautiful, blonde entertainer is style...And maybe energetic, sensitive, animated, creative, flirtatious, and last but definitely not least, talented.
Miss Humphrey's repertoire extends a vast selection of material from the 40's to the 80's. Perhaps her forte is the gusty blues and jazz tunes of such greats as Billy Holiday, Fats Waller, Nat King Cole, Dinah Washington and Gershwin. But her style translates equally as well on renditions of her favorite Motown artists: Sam Cooke, Marvin Gaye, Odis Redding and Aretha Franklin, not to mention such country greats as Patsy Cline and Hank Williams. Barbara loves to sing the soulful sounds of the 80's from artists like Whitney Houston, Anita Baker, Al Jarreau and Sade. Undoubtedly though, Miss Humphrey shines her brightest when performing her own original material. Lyrically moving and musically "finger-snappin' and foot-tappin'" good.

DEAR ABBY

Chain-smokers ruin holidays for suffering guest

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I expect the Christmas holidays will be a lonely time — my own choice. Although I would thoroughly enjoy the companionship and festivities, I shall decline invitations for one reason: Chain-smokers make the air lethal.

Last year I spent the day after Christmas taking costly tests to determine that my chest pains, irregular heartbeat and inability to breathe were not a heart attack, but severe acute bronchitis, induced by several hours in a smoke-filled room. I never told my hostess this; she's a chain-smoker.

Abby, I will be a hermit forever rather than risk that again. The pain is unbelievable.

To ask people to refrain from smoking in their own homes is unthinkable. They would defend their right to smoke, and my right to stay home!

If I ask people not to smoke in my home, they won't accept my invitations.

Since families consist of both smokers and non-smokers, this is a socially divisive issue. Tell me, Abby, how do you and your readers handle it? — STILL BREATHING

DEAR STILL: Here's how I handle it: There are no ashtrays, cigarettes, matches or lighters visible in our home. When smokers ask if we "mind" if they smoke, we escort them out on the patio where they will find the customary patio furniture, and ashtrays as big as birdbaths.

And, when I am guest in the home of people who permit smoking, I keep my mouth shut, and avoid smokers as much as possible.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has been laid off for nearly a year and we are having a really rough time of it. Is there a tactful way to stop exchanging Christmas gifts? We can't afford to send any gifts this year, and we don't want anyone to send us anything. So how can we get the word out? — SHORT IN FORT WORTH

DEAR SHORT: I've made this suggestion in previous years: Come early December, write a note to those on your Christmas gift list saying: "We are thankful for folks with whom we can be honest. We're not in a position to send Christmas gifts this year (nor do we expect any), but please accept our love and sincere good wishes for a happy, healthy, blessed holiday."

DEAR ABBY: I have a 13-year-old son who is in the eighth grade. Yesterday he talked in study hall, so as a punishment, he had to stand at the chalkboard with a small piece of chalk between his nose and the blackboard for a half-hour for three days in a row.

The person who imposed this punishment on him was not a regular teacher; she just watches the kids during study hall period.

What I want to know is this: Would that be considered some kind of child abuse? If so, how can I stop this from happening again? I am very upset about this and need to know. — VIOLET

DEAR VIOLET: It doesn't matter what you call it; humiliating a student in the manner you described is inappropriate punishment for any kind of misconduct. Report her to the school principal.

DEAR ABBY: Four and a half years ago, my brother (age 49) — an aerospace executive — borrowed 50 record albums from my mother and me. These albums belong to us.

After two years and no return, I asked my mother to please ask my brother to return the record albums. Brother brought them back in anger, without a word of thanks, and at the same time he asked to borrow 50 more albums!

It's been two years, and still no return of the 50 albums, so I called my brother, and his wife answered the phone. I very politely reminded her that her husband had 50 albums of mine and I would appreciate having them.

She said, "I thought we brought those back."

I replied, "No, you didn't."

Then she had the nerve to say, "Well, you shouldn't loan things to people if you're going to worry about getting them back."

Abby, we enjoy sharing our videocassettes and records, but we would like them returned after a reasonable length of time. How should we handle this if they want to borrow something in the future? — LENDER

DEAR LENDER: When you lend something, have a clear understanding of when it should be returned. And if the borrower "forgets," remind him.

DEAR ABBY: I chuckled when I read the letter from "Greta's Guy in Gardena." Tell him not to worry about Greta's height. It's attitude — not altitude — that makes a marriage.

I'm several inches taller than my wonderful husband and several years older, too. We've been married for 20 years and raised three beautiful children.

We've been through good times and bad times, but height or age was never an issue because our love is based on love for God and each other. And by the way, I wore heels at our wedding. — BIG MAMA IN CHARLOTTE, N.C.

Six-layer bars made in microwave

Associated Press

This microwave version of a popular bar cookie recipe bakes in an 8x8x2-inch dish, which fits in all but the smallest compact ovens.

SIX-LAYER BARS

¼ cup margarine or butter
1 cup finely crushed graham crackers (about 14 squares)
½ of a 6-ounce package (½ cup) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
½ cup almond brickle pieces
½ cup coconut
½ cup chopped nuts
½ of a 14-ounce can (about ⅔ cup) sweetened condensed milk

In 8x8x2-inch baking dish cook margarine, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 45 to 60 seconds or until melted. Stir in crushed graham crackers. Pat into even layer in bottom of dish. Cook, uncovered, on high about 1 minute or until set. Layer chocolate pieces, almond brickle pieces, coconut and nuts on top of graham cracker layer. Pour sweetened condensed milk over all.

Cook, uncovered, on 50 percent power (medium) 6 to 7 minutes or until set, giving dish half-turn after 4 minutes. Cool on a wire rack.

New cookbook features Texas recipes

Associated Press

NANNY'S TEXAS TABLE. By Larry Ross. Simon and Schuster. 251 Pages. $18.95.

As a boy, Larry Ross spent summers on the Houghton Ranch, one of the oldest, largest, working cattle ranches in the Texas Panhandle. His book is a tribute to Martha (or Nanny, as she preferred to be called) Houghton's home cooking.

The cookbook was compiled from Nanny's handwritten files and from recipes recalled by friends and relatives. Some of the recipes were left in their original form while others were updated. Interspersed throughout the book are short and amusing anecdotes.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Get away from the hustle and bustle from time to time. You will be more productive when you return to work. Someone is waiting to help you. The trick will be to find out who. An element of good luck supports your efforts. Forget past disappointments. A close relationship improves as you regain confidence. Lighten your workload by delegating routine chores to others. Learn more about a job opportunity before making a long-term commitment.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Max Baer, aviator Pappy Boyington, actor Jeff Bridges, historian Thomas Carlyle, Spanish dictator Francisco Franco, actress Lillian Russell, TV host Wink Martindale, slugger Harvey Kuenn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not bother to look for excitement today. It is an ideal time to catch up on phone calls and paperwork. Persist until the boss sees the merit of your suggestion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You have the answers but should wait for others to come to you. A relationship reaches the boiling point. Do not let a petty dispute stand in the way of love. Postpone travel.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your competitive lead may be cut, but keep a steady hand on the throttle and you will win. Others are waiting for you to make the first move. Confound them by laying back.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keeping a journal is an excellent idea. Write down your impressions. Let yourself go in social situations. Whatever you do today, do it with style! You should not be tied down. Expand your horizons.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The day starts out promising, but could fizzle out. Lying low is probably a good idea now. Hold your ground in a financial matter. The evidence is on your side. Persevere.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Valuable assistance can be yours for the asking. Do not let foolish pride keep you from admitting a lack of knowledge or expertise. Love beckons. Do not dismiss a May-December romance,

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Trust your intuition when dealing with people, but rely on logic when handling investments. Your quick wit will save you from embarrassment. Enjoy a new friendship without commitment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Use extra caution when handling money. Someone may be eager to spend your funds for you. A friend's opinion may be biased. Follow your heart but do not forget to use your head, too.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Creative and artistic projects deserve top priority. Be on the lookout for unique employment and investment opportunities. Distant affairs prove easy to handle. A good time to forge new alliances.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A great day for making new contacts and signing contracts. Spend some time thinking about the future. Extra effort is needed to make something good become a permanent part of your life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid taking unnecessary risks. Listen to the advice of experts before making investments. Romance with an older person could be surprising. Discard any preconceived ideas. Love conquers all.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Determination is the key to greater success. Stifle a sudden urge to splurge on luxuries. Loved one may need a small loan soon. Patience will help you solve a child-parent problem.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
3 ◇	3 ♠	Pass	6 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

Preemptive bids are two-edged swords. They will, on occasion, throw a wrench in the opposition's bidding machinery. But if the enemy buys the contract, they will often leave a blueprint of the hand to guide the opponents in the play.

After East's three-diamond preempt, South had a normal three-spade overcall. With first- or second-round control of every suit, North wasted no time in getting to where he wanted.

Before looking at the East-West hands, how do you rate South's chances of bringing home his slam? Unless East is pulling a fast one, and West's opening lead suggests that that is not the case, declarer can claim his contract without having to play to a single trick!

The hand is a simple elimination. Win the ace of hearts and draw trumps in as many rounds as it takes. Cash the ace-king of clubs and ruff the jack of clubs, then cross to the king of hearts. That leaves the North-South hands with nothing but trumps and diamonds, and East is down to five diamonds and a heart.

Since East originally started with seven diamonds for his preempt (confirmed by the fact that West did not lead his partner's suit) and the lead is in the dummy, all declarer has to do to secure his slam is lead a low diamond from the ace toward his jack.

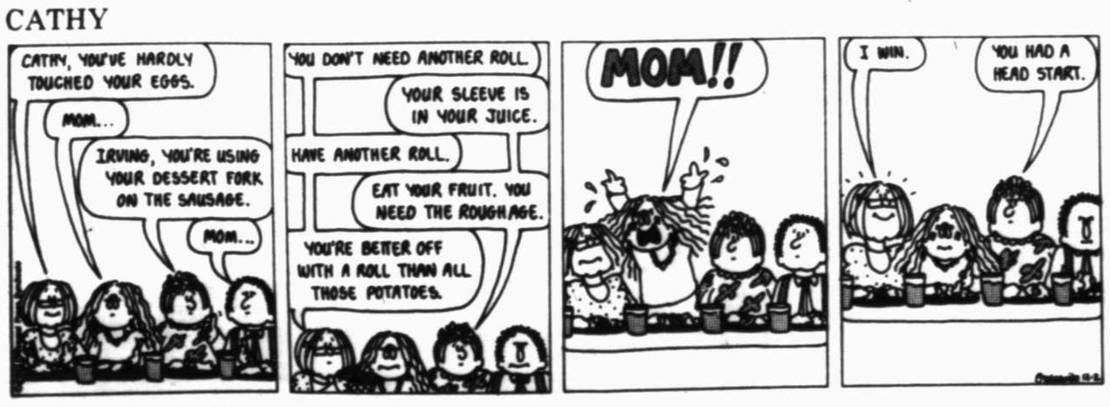

East can win the trick with a high honor, but he is well and truly end played. A heart return will allow declarer to sluff a diamond loser from one hand while ruffing in the other, while a diamond will be away from the remaining honor into declarer's combined ace-jack tenace. Either way, declarer will lose no more than one diamond trick.

Joan Rivers plans libel suit against GQ

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Joan Rivers said Tuesday she will file a $50 million libel suit against Gentlemen's Quarterly magazine and the author of what she called "a vicious article" that said she had wished her husband dead prior to his suicide.

The story in GQ's December issue, which also quoted her as saying her marriage to Edgar Rosenberg had been near an end, "is not just inaccurate, but 100 percent false," Miss Rivers said at a news conference, in tears and flanked by attorney Bob Chapman and daughter Melissa Rosenberg.

She said the magazine admitted Tuesday morning that the name of the author, Bert Hacker, was a pseudonym. She said she was offering a $5,000 reward for anyone who would provide the real name of the author to her publicist, Richard Grant.

Miss Rivers also demanded an immediate and total retraction of the article.

A spokeswoman for GQ in New York, who spoke on condition she not be identified, said the magazine would make no statment until court papers had been received.

DALLAS (AP) — Decorated Army colonel and philanthropist E.E. Fogelson, an oilman married to noted film actress Greer Garson, has died after a lengthy battle with Parkinson's disease. He was 87.

Fogelson died Tuesday at Presbyterian Hospital with Ms. Garson at his side, said his publicist, Jean Carpenter. A funeral service is scheduled for Thursday at Highland Park Presbyterian Church in Dallas.

Fogelson served as a colonel on General Dwight D. Eisenhower's staff during World War II and was partially responsible for the oil pipeline that made possible the Allied invasion and rapid advance in Europe.

He later was appointed by President Truman as a member of the Allied Commission on Reparations. His military citations included the Croix de Guerre avec Palme from President de Gaulle and the Highest Rank of Knighthood, Suurmestari, in the prestigious Order of the White Rose, from the President of Finland.

A native of College View, Neb., Fogelson studied at the University of Nebraska but left before graduating to work in Texas oil fields. Later, he earned degrees from Texas Christian University and the School of Military Government at the University of Virginia.

In addition to his wife, Fogelson is survived by a son, Gayle Fogelson of Dallas; a sister, Gertrude Solomon of Joplin, Mo.; a niece, Roseanne Taylor, of Los Angeles; and two nephews: Sanford Dorbin of Willitts, Calif., and Jerry Dorbin of Santa Fe, N.M.

Madison letter discusses ratification effort

From The Associated Press

Sunday, Dec. 2, 1787

1787 Constitution Daybook

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

On this clear, cold day, Jacob Hiltzheimer went twice to church.

Matthew Clarkson, who, as mayor of Philadelphia in 1793, stayed to deal with an outbreak of yellow fever which killed one of every 10 inhabitants, came and spent the evening.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

Congress didn't meet today, it being Sunday.

RATIFICATION TODAY

James Madison wrote from New York to Gov. Edmund Randolph to report on the status of ratification — a letter probably intended to at least keep Randolph from more active opposition to ratification.

"No recent indications of the view of the States as to the Constitution have come to knowledge. The elections in Connecticut are over and as far as the returns are known, a large majority are friendly to it. Docr. Johnson says, it will be pretty certainly adopted; but there will be opposition. The power of taxing any thing but imports appears to be the most popular among the adversaries. The Convention of Pennsylvania is sitting. The result there will not reach you first through my hands. The divisions on preparatory questions, as they are published in the newspapers, shew that the party in favor of the Constitution have 44 or 45. vs. 22 or 24. or thereabouts."

DELEGATES TODAY

George Washington was at home all day. G.W. Lewis and George Steptoe Washington, who had come for dinner yesterday and stayed over, left for home this afternoon.

Robert Morris (Pa.) wrote to his wife from Richmond, Va., where he and Gouverneur Morris were trying to straighten out his business affairs.

Daniel Carrol (Md.) wrote from Annapolis to Benjamin Franklin, a letter he expected to have James McHenry deliver. The Maryland House of Delegates had summoned the state's convention delegates to tell the House about the Convention. Such motives were imputed by members of the Maryland House to Franklin and Washington that Carroll had been forced to read Franklin's remarks before the Committee on Representation and let McHenry read the speech Franklin had given on Sept. 17. He wanted Franklin's retroactive permission.

LOOKING BACK

18th Century Social Customs

There are ferw better indications of 18th century social customs than today's letter from Robert Morris to his wife of 18 years, Mary White Morris.

"This I believe is the third letter which I have addressed to my dearest Friend, the partner of my happy moments & the Sharer in my sorrowful hours, since our Separation. How often & how much I think of you and my Dear children (seven, ranging in age from 3 to almost 18) I need not, indeed I cannot tell you, for believe me my Dear Molly, you are the Constant Companion of my thoughts in solitude & often, very often, when engaged in business or Company.

"I shall however continue in this Country until my Accounts with Mr. Braxton, Mr. Bealle or others are intirely settled. My presence here had become more necessary then I was aware of, indeed it was indespensably so; as every kind of attempt has been made to take advantage of my absence & I really rejoice that I took the determination to come....

"I have now taken up my Quarters at B. Harrison's. Gouverneur & I lodge in the same Room (different beds) and are very Comfortably lodged. We live well as to eating & drinking, but being closely engaged in business we do not mix much with Society yet not totally out of it.

" ...The Governor is very attentive & civil. He has lent me a House & Stables, I use our room to write in, another for the Servants to Sleep in, and I am buying Hay & oats so as to take my Horses from the Tavern & keep them here. This House is close by Mr. Harrison consequently very convenient. He (the Govr.) calls this moment to ask us to dine with him today (Sunday) but we have promised Mr. Alexander who lives three miles off & holds a Sunday dinner constantly to which he invites large Companies, gives good dinners & wines &ca but does not assort or pick his companies well....

"Pray how goes on your Petit Supper, does the Doctor attend & partake of them & who else is of your parties. & how goes on the Wednesday Night parties or do they go on at all. Kiss my Dear children for me, my mind will never know perfect contentment untill I rejoin you & them. God Bless & preserve you all is the constant prayer of your most affectionate."

WHAT'S COOKING

Cook fixes Middle Eastern dishes

EDITOR'S NOTE: This series of "What's Cooking" interviews will feature nonprofit organizations that have published cookbooks. This is the seventh article in a series of interviews with members of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church.

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

Visible through the large glass kitchen window of Lucy Lee's kitchen is a courtyard filled with plants, and her kitchen area is decorated with hanging greenery, huge succulents and floor plants.

This is just a part of the surroundings where Mrs. Lee cooks up some exotic Middle Eastern dishes. Mrs. Lee, whose mother was Lebanese and father was from Ramalah, Pakistan, said she "loves to cook dishes from the Old Country."

She uses traditional Arabic ingredients — grape leaves, cracked wheat, tahini (sesame seed paste), Greek olives, lentils and rich cheeses — in her cooking.

Some of Mrs. Lee's dishes have been sold at bazaars and she had a recipe included in St. Nicholas Episcopal Church's cookbook. Mrs. Lee and her husband, W.D. (Dub), residents of Midland since 1977, have been members of the church for three years.

She is secretary for the Association of Church Women, a soprano in the church choir, a member of Exxon Wives (her husband has been with Exxon 34 years), an lifetime inactive Beta Sigma Phi member, and a member of Community Bible Study.

Mrs. Lee said, one of her favorite organizations that she is involved in is the non-denominational Community Bible Study, which meets at First Baptist Church.

"It's wonderful for the community," she said, "We had 250 people at one of our recent meetings."

Although Mrs. Lee also enjoys the theater and gardening, she never lets her activities take time away from planning her meals. Because some of the Arabic ingredients are difficult to find on grocery shelves, Mrs. Lee tries to "stock ahead to have everything on hand."

"I order Syrian bread, similar to pita bread, 12 loaves at a time from New York or Houston," she said. One of her children's favorite recipes, Zah-tah, involves dipping Syrian bread in oil.

Other family favorites include Ribi (rolled grape leaves), Kibi Na-Yee (meat loaf), baked eggplant and Mamol (large cream of wheat cookies).

"Mamol is traditionally served at Christmas time," Mrs. Lee said.

Although the Lee's daughter, Jessica, attends Howard College, she still lives at home, and the Lees plan family get-togethers with their son, Doug, who is attending Texas Tech.

Mrs. Lee included some of her favorite recipes.

TABOOLI

(salad)
1 cup cracked wheat, soaked in hot water
1 bunch of green onions
4 or 5 tomatoes
Juice of 3 lemons
1 bunch of parsley
1 cup chopped mint
⅓ cup olive oil
Salt to taste

Finely chop all vegetables. Drain cracked wheat, squeeze water out and add to vegetables. Mix lemon juice, oil and salt. Add to vegetables. Arrange on a bed of lettuce and serve.

STUFFED SQUASH

8-10 plump zucchini squash or yellow squash
1½-pound of chili ground beef
1 medium can of tomatoes
⅓ cup rice
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon allspice

Wash squash, slice off stem and core leaving a ¼-inch shell. Be careful not to break the shell. Mix rice and beef, add salt, pepper and allspice. Stuff squash loosely — do not overstuff. Arrange in large pot and add stewed tomatoes. Place dish on top to hold squash in place. Cover pot and cook over medium flame for 45 minutes. Serve hot.

SAUCE FOR BAKED FISH

1 cup tahini (sesame paste)
4 tablespoons water
Juice of 3 lemons
1 clove garlic
½ teaspoon salt

Stir sesame paste in can. Put one cup in large bowl and add water. Add lemon juice a little at a time, stirring into a smooth sauce. Mash garlic with salt and mix with sauce. Pour over baked fish and warm in oven for ten minutes.

KIBBI NA-YEE

1 pound ground lean beef or lamb
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ cup mint, fresh
1 cup cracked wheat
1 large onion
Pepper to taste
Olive oil

Soak wheat in water to soften. Mix meat with salt, pepper, cinnamon and mint. Add cracked wheat by squeezing water out first between palms of hands. Mix and kneed well. Add water to soften mixture. Smooth mixture onto flat serving dish, make dent in center and pour in oil. Garnish with parsley and scallion and serve with Tabooli and Arabic bread. Kibbi Na-Yee can be served as an appetizer or main dish.

NOTE: This dish is to be eaten raw and can be refrigerated but should be eaten within 2-3 days. Leftovers can be fried.

LENTILS AND RICE

1 cup lentils
¾ cup rice
1 large onion
½ cup oil olive
1 tablespoon salt

Cover lentils with six cups of water, add salt and cook over medium heat for 20 minutes. Meanwhile, cut onion and brown in skillet with ½ cup oil. Drain oil from onions, reserve and drop on lentils. Take about ½ cup water from lentils and add to onion in skillet. Mash and simmer onion for about two minutes. Then drop onion on lentils.

Add washed, uncooked rice and cook for another 15 minutes over very low flame, covered. Stir occasionally to prevent burning or sticking. Most of the cooking liquid will have evaporated by this time. If not, remove cover and cook a few more minutes longer. Serve hot, cold or at room temperature.

BLUE GOO PIE

1 envelope of powdered desert topping
4 ounces cream cheese
1 cup sugar
2 bananas
½ can of blueberry pie filling

Mix dessert topping according to directions. Add other indgredients and mix with electric mixer. Line prebaked pie shell with thin sliced bananas. Pour whipped cream mixture over bananas and top with blueberry pie filling.

CELERY SEED DRESSING

1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon paprika
2 teaspoons celery seed
1 teaspoon salt
5 tablespoons vinegar
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 medium grated onion
¾ cup oil

Mix all ingredients in blender and serve over spinach leaves.

Jamica has own version of traditional fruitcake

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Caribbean cuisine is the newest food import to catch America's fancy. Here's a luscious sample of that fruit-full cooking style.

This recipe; Jamaica's adaptation of the traditional fruitcake brought to the island by early English planters, is flavored with rum and allspice.

Despite its name, allspice is not a blend, but a single spice with a mellow, clovelike taste.

JAMAICAN BLACK FRUITCAKE

One 16-ounce carton diced mixed candied fruits (2¾ cups)
One 12-ounce package pitted prunes, snipped (2¾ cups)
One 8-ounce package dried figs, snipped (1½ cups)
One 8-ounce package pitted dates, snipped (1 and 1-3rd cups)
1 cup raisins
1½ cups dark rum
1 cup packed brown sugar
½ cup margarine or butter, softened
3 eggs
1¼ cups all-purpose flour
4 teaspoons ground allspice
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
One 4-ounce can blanched almonds, chopped

In a large bowl combine candied fruits, prunes, figs, dates, raisins and rum; let stand 5 hours or overnight until rum is absorbed.

Grease two 8- by 4- by 2-inch loaf pans. Line bottoms with brown paper; grease well.

In a large mixer bowl beat sugar and margarine with electric mixer on high speed until mixture is well combined.

Add eggs, one at a time, beating until light. Stir together flour, allspice, baking powder and salt; reserve ¼ cup of mixture.

Stir remaining flour mixture into beaten mixture just until blended. Stir almonds and reserved flour mixture into fruits; fold into batter. Pour into prepared pan.

Bake in 300-degree oven about 1 hour. Cover with foil and bake 40 minutes more. Cool in pan on wire rack for 30 minutes. Remove from pan; cool completely. Wrap in foil; refrigerate. Makes 2 loaves, 16 servings each.

Rebels slip by Panthers in OT, 83-81

From Staff Reports

LUBBOCK — The Midland Lee Rebels needed an extra quarter Tuesday night but, in the end, ran their record to 6-1 with an 83-81 victory here over Lubbock Dunbar.

The Rebels jumped out to a big first half lead, 21-15 in the opening quarter and 48-35 at the half before Dunbar mounted a rally. The Panthers cut the margin to 65-58 after three and outscored Lee 16-9 in the fourth to tie the game, forcing the extra period of play.

The Rebs won the final three minutes, 8-6 to claim the victory for a 6-1 season record. Dunbar fell to 2-5.

Andrews transfer Damon Clay led the Rebel offensive attack with 24 points while Jared Edwards added 20.

Greenwood roughs up Iraan Braves

From Staff Reports

The Greenwood Rangers sent the Iraan Braves home unhappy Tuesday night after posting four varsity and junior varsity victories.

For the Ranger boys, without the services of Randy Donnell, the team's second leading scorer out with a thigh bruise, it was 69-62 victory.

The Rangers built a 28-21 lead at the half only to see most of it slip away in the third quarter as the Braves pulled within one, 46-45. Greenwood outgunned Iraan in the fourth 23-17 to preserve the win.

For Iraan, Juan Flores provided most of the offensive output with 26 points while John Graham added 11.

CHERYL MARTIN held the hot hand for the Greenwood girls, scoring 25 in a 49-36 victory.

The Rangerettes jumped out to an 18-8 first quarter lead and never looked back in running their record to 3-0 while handing Iraan its first loss and a 3-1 mark.

Tournament action is next for both the boys and girls as the Rangers head for the Coahoma Tournament Thursday and a 5:30 p.m. date with Colorado City. The girls play in the Reagan County Tournament, starting with El Dorado 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Iowa's Jeff Moe (20) loses the ball after being fouled by Drake's David Zingg (21) Tuesday.

Edwards' aim keeps Hoosiers ahead of Irish

Associated Press

Now that Steve Alford is in the NBA, Indiana University Coach Bobby Knight is looking for a new sharpshooter. He may have one in freshman guard Jay Edwards.

After spending the first half on the bench, Edwards entered the game with 9:49 to play Tuesday night with the fifth-ranked Hoosiers leading Notre Dame 58-53. Once down by 14 points in the second half, Notre Dame eventually narrowed the margin to 60-56 with 5:50 remaining.

"We needed this game," the 6-foot-4 Edwards said. "This was our first big game this season. We've got to prove to the rest of the collegiate level that we're ready to play."

Edwards proved he was ready, scoring seven consecutive points and 12 of Indiana's final 16 as the Hoosiers short-circuited the Irish comeback to emerge with a 76-59 victory.

"I came in there prepared to play. I kept my mind in the game, the first half when I didn't get in," Edwards said.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 2 Kentucky whipped Cincinnati 101-77, No. 6 Iowa stopped Drake 70-59, No. 16 Kansas crushed Pomona-Pitzer 94-38 and No. 18 Oklahoma routed Penn State 93-59.

Edwards had two 3-pointers in his spurt and was 5-of-6 from the field.

"I felt that in the last five minutes we didn't do some things right at both ends," Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps said. "Then Edwards gave them a spark."

College Roundup

The loss left Phelps 1-7 against Indiana and winless in six games at Bloomington, where the homestanding Hoosiers have won 22 straight.

"We just broke down defensively and we missed some key shots. We were not active on the boards," Phelps said.

Indiana, 2-0, spoiled the season-opener for Notre Dame by outscoring the visitors 16-3 in the final 5:07.

Keith Smart led the Hoosiers with 18 points while assigned to guard Notre Dame's David Rivers, who scored 24.

"I think Rivers is a very, very tough player to play against," Knight said. "He's one of the handful of individual players around the country that really commands your attention. You figure out defensively what you're going to do and as the game unfolds. He mades the game difficult to play because you've got to help out on him."

Rivers' outside shooting kept the Irish in the game early. The 6-foot guard scored 14 of Notre Dame's first 21 points and his fourth 3-pointer of the night gave the Irish a 21-20 lead with 9:35 remaining in the first half.

But Indiana switched Smart to Rivers and the Irish star went more than 14 minutes without scoring. But Rivers had a 3-point goal and a three-

Aggies place seven on All-SWC first team

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Defensive Player of the Year John Roper led a seven-man Texas A&M contingent on The Associated Press All-Southwest Conference 1987 first team as selected by the league's eight football coaches.

Roper, a junior from Houston, was the heart of Texas A&M's "Wrecking Crew" defense which carried the Aggies to their third consecutive SWC football title.

Playing both end and linebacker, Roper led the team in tackles and sacks as A&M topped the SWC in total defense.

Other Aggies on the first team included wide receiver Rod Harris, center Matt Wilson, offensive tackle Louis Cheek, placekicker Scott Slater, noseguard Sammy O'Brient, and safety Kip Corrington.

Jackie Sherrill, taking the Aggies' to their third consecutive Cotton Bowl, was named Coach of the Year. He clinched the title Thanksgiving night with a 20-13 victory over the Texas Longhorns.

A&M running back Darrin Lewis, a freshman, was named Offensive Newcomer of the Year. Baylor quarterback Brad Goebel was runner-up in the voting.

OTHER FIRST teamers included Offensive Player of the Year Eric Metcalf of Texas, a multi-purpose junior back who averaged five yards per run, seven yards per pass reception, and 14 yards per punt return, and Texas Tech sophomore James Gray in the backfield.

TCU's Tony Jeffery was relegated to a second team role although he was the SWC's leading rusher. Jeffery was suspended for his final collegiate game because of revelations regarding a professional agent. Only three SWC coaches nominated Jeffery for All-SWC honors.

Metcalf, Gray and Jeffery all rushed for over 1,000 yards.

Jason Phillips of Houston, who caught 99 passes, and Texas Tech's Wayne Walker rounded out the wide receiver corps.

Texas Tech's Billy Joe Tolliver, who passed for 177 yards per game, was the first team quarterback.

Others on offense included tackle Brian Brazil of TCU, and guards Paul Jetton of Texas, and Mike McBride of Texas Tech.

ARKANSAS' TONY Cherico and TCU's David Spradlin were first team lineman. Linebackers Britt Hager (an Odessa Permian grad) of Texas, Rickey Williams of Arkansas and Gary McGuire of Houston were first teamers.

The secondary besides Corrington, who is also a first team All-Academic All-American, included Falanda Newton, TCU, John Hagy, Texas, and a tie between Johnny Jackson of Houston and Robert Blackmon of Baylor. Jackson drew the national spotlight when he returned three interceptions for touchdowns in a game against Texas.

The punter was Chris Becker of TCU.

The Defensive Newcomer of the Year was hard-hitting Texas Tech secondary star Donald Harris.

Five Aggies led the second team.

Warriors stop Jordan so Bulls turn to rookies

AP Laserphoto

Houston forward Rodney McCray is pressured by Denver's Alex English (right) and Michael Adams Tuesday at the Summit.

Associated Press

The Golden State Warriors, who are bullish on stopping Michael Jordan, couldn't stop Chicago's new rookie stars.

The Warriors held Jordan to 16 points, nine fewer than his previous season low, but rookie Scottie Pippen scored on a driving layup with seven seconds left, giving the Bulls a 98-97 NBA victory Tuesday night. Pippen scored 16 points on 8-for-10 shooting and fellow-rookie Horace Grant was 7-for-8 and scored 17.

"Give the Warriors a lot of credit," Bulls Coach Doug Collins said. "They did a great job defensively, particularly against Michael."

Jordan, leading the league with 33 points per game, was limited to 15 shots from the field, nine below his season average.

Ben McDonald, a 6-foot-8 forward, spent most of the night guarding Jordan.

"I'm particularly proud of Ben McDonald's performance," Warriors Coach George Karl said. "He is having a great season and played some outstanding defense on Jordan."

NBA Roundup

An 18-2 streak gave Chicago, now 7-1 on the road, a 51-26 lead in the second quarter. But the Warriors, with the NBA's worst record at 2-11, reduced the deficit to 77-67 after three periods and took the lead at 91-89 with 3:52 left on two free throws by Rod Higgins, who had 18 points.

After Pippen's go-ahead layup, the Warriors had a chance to win in the final seconds, but Sleepy Floyd's layup with one second left rolled around the rim and off as time expired.

Rockets 106, Nuggets 101

Ralph Sampson says he doesn't see any end to the booing by fans who don't think he does enough for the Houston Rockets.

But Sampson had an answer for the "boo birds" when he scored 18 points, including the go-ahead basket with 36 seconds remaining, in the second half to lead the Rockets to a victory over the Denver Nuggets.

Rockets fans booed him soundly in the first half when he ended up with only two points and the Rockets trailed, 55-52.

"The fans have been on me all my life, and I'm sure they will be on me from now until whenever," Sampson said. "A lot of people still don't think I do enough. I'm sure they think I should do more because I'm 7-4."

"I can do a lot of other things, like grab the lob and run the court that don't get looked at," Sampson added. "We started off slowly but I felt we had a comeback in us. I started going to the boards harder in the second half."

In addition to the 20 points, Sampson pulled down 17 rebounds.

Akeem Olajuwon had 24 points and 14 rebounds.

"The twin towers really came through for us in the fourth quarter" said Houston guard Purvis Short.

Rockets coach Bill Fitch defended Olajuwon, who has struggled recently as a result of a nagging shoulder injury.

Party time and no party to attend

This WAS supposed to be the BIG week. Odessa Permian vs. Midland Lee. Exodus III. Lubbock bound.Petroplex in the rear view mirror.

Funny thing. We did all that worrying about whether Permian could get past undefeated Denton. That seemed to be the only obstacle in the way of a third Lee-Permian quarterfinal shootout.

Funny thing. Arlington 27, Midland Lee 7. About as funny as a sharp stab to the funny bone.

Funny thing. Odessa Permian 16, Denton 3 and quarterfinal bound — against Arlington, not Lee. In Texas Stadium, not in Lubbock's Jones Stadium.

THERE IS no 42-21 rematch. Permian reigns supreme by Lee default. There will be no possible match between No. 1 Plano and one-time No. 2 Lee in the semifinals.

There just has to be a conspiracy here somewhere. After all, Midland merchants were up in arms over the possibility of Lee and Permian leaving the Permian Basin for Lubbock during one of the hottest shopping weekends of the Christmas season. Midland retailers sigh with relief as the Rebels come to the rescue.

Also gone is another great chance to show Midlanders the need for a new football stadium — one that insures keeping Lee and Permian at home when they meet in the state playoffs.

Gone is the chance for these 1987 Rebels to prove that they were the best team in school history. Gone is the chance to put three backs over the 1,000-yard mark for the first time.

The worst cut this team will live with in the future is the fact they didn't make it to the rematch with Permian.

BUT TOTAL history will be kind to these Rebels. They gave us an undisputed District 4-5A title, the first since 1976.

They set single game rushing records twice with 522 yards against Plainview and 574 yards against El Paso Eastwood. They also set a single game total offense mark with 624 yards against Eastwood.

This team also posted its first undefeated regular season and ran that string to 11-0 before the kick from the Colts.

Never before has a Lee team run up and down the field like this one. They gave us a weekly explosion until the fourth down blues in Amon Carter Stadium last Saturday.

And they beat Permian 42-21 on the road. And Mojo will probably be recorded in history as the better team in 1987 by virtue of advancing further in the state playoffs. Permian made the quarterfinals and Lee didn't.

OLD MOJO is now in position to get the last snicker of the season with a win over Arlington Saturday. Permian catches Arlington after an emotional victory, but has to travel into enemy territory again. That seems to have little effect on these Panthers, however.

Mojo waded into the home lair of unbeaten Denton and waved its magic wand with Shawn Crow and a sophomore Lloyd Hill. Denton passed out.

It doesn't seem like that long ago when the fans of Permian were doing some heavy duty crying. And now we plan a party and only Permian shows up.

I'll never figure out this season — or make that trip to Lubbock.

The Atlanta Hawks made 14 steals in a 120-106 victory over the Boston Celtics and committed just eight turnovers ... The Detroit Pistons made 14 steals against 12 turnovers, against New Jersey.

Dallas wants healthy White or no White

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Coach Tom Landry says quarterback Danny White, beset by injuries that have diminished both his playing time and performance the last two seasons, won't return to the Dallas Cowboys in 1988 unless he's healthy.

White's erratic performances with a damaged right wrist have taxed even Landry's legendary patience. He says he does not want an injured quarterback on the roster.

"His whole future rests on that, and I think he recognizes it," Landry said Tuesday. "He throws well 95 percent of the time, but the other 5 percent kills us."

White, in his 12th season with the Cowboys, says he hopes to play two or three more years, and added that he is considering surgery on his wrist.

"I don't think he (White) will come back unless he is 100 percent healthy," Landry said. "If he is, then he will battle for the starting job."

White, who lost a ligament when his wrist was broken last season, threw four touchdown passes against Minnesota on Thanksgiving Day but suffered two critical interceptions the Vikings parlayed into a 44-38 overtime victory.

"Danny has a blockage in his wrist and doesn't know whether the ball will go up or down when he throws it," Landry said. "We have to protect ourself. We will not go into next season fully behind Danny unless he is ready."

Landry said he wasn't ordering White to undergo surgery but added "something has to happen. The wrist has to improve itself either through rest or an operation."

The coach said he was determined to bring the Cowboys back on top of the NFL.

"I've committed myself for three years," Landry said. "We'll be much improved next year."

He said White had done as good a job as anyone could have following in Hall-of-Famer Roger Staubach's footsteps.

"He plays his heart out," Landry said of White.

Steve Pelluer is the heir apparent, but after going all the way in a 20-14 loss to Miami, he didn't play a down against the Vikings.

Landry said both quarterbacks would play, but refused to name a starter for Sunday's game in Texas Stadium against the 2-9 Atlanta Falcons.

"I will move Steve in at a certain pace," Landry said. "He needs to regain his confidence. I've seen enough of him to think he has a future with us. How we handle him right now is the important thing. I know all I need to know about him."

Landry said even if he started Pelluer against the Falcons, who lead the NFL in points allowed, he could still bring White on as a reliever.

"We are going to look at our young players, but the important thing is to win some games," Landry said. "If you lose too much, it becomes a habit in this business. Not many people would put us in the playoffs right now. But we will be stronger next year if we can win some football games."

The Cowboys, who are 5-6 in the NFC East, are 10-point favorites over the Falcons.

SAN ANTONIO — The San Antonio Spurs waived rookie guard Nate Blackwell to make room for forward Mike Mitchell, who had been on the injured reserve list most of the season.

Blackwell, a 6-4, 170-pound standout at Temple, was selected in the second round last spring. He averaged 3.7 points in 10 games in the NBA.

Mitchell, a nine-year veteran, played in one game this season, but has been on the IR since undergoing arthroscopic knee surgery Nov. 12.

HOUSTON — The Houston Rockets activated forward Jim Petersen and put guard Andre Turner on the IR list.

Petersen was activated for Tuesday's game against Denver in Houston.

Petersen, put on the injured list in October during the exhibition season, had surgery to remove bone spurs from his left ankle...

DALLAS — Southern Methodist forward Carlton McKinney was named the season's first SWC men's basketball player of the week.

McKinney, a senior from Nixon, Texas, helped lead the Mustangs to two victories last weekend and the Southwest Missouri Invitational championship.

He accounted for 42 points, eight rebounds, 14 assists and six steals in SMU's 121-89 victory over James Madison and 69-58 win over host Southwest Missouri State...

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Donald Curry, former world welterweight champion, has signed for a series of three fights, with the long-range plan a shot at the WBC super welterweight title.

Curry, of Fort Worth, will begin the series Dec. 8 against Rigoberto Lopez of El Cajun, Calif., in a scheduled 10-rounder at the Chuck Landis Country Club in Reseda, Calif.

Baylor eases past North Texas, 72-63

Associated Press

DENTON — Michael Williams and Darryl Middleton scored 21 points each as Baylor defeated North Texas State 72-63 in a non-conference basketball game.

Baylor improved to 2-2, while North Texas dropped to 1-1.

Middleton, a 6-9 center, connected on 8-of-14 from the field, while Williams, a 6-3 guard, hit 8-of-13 from the field and led the Bears with nine rebounds.

Tony Worrell led North Texas State, also with 21 points. Wendell Williams added 16 points and Ronnie Morgan 10 points for the Eagles. William Smith led NTSU in rebounding with nine.

The Baylor-North Texas game was the only game involving a Southwest Conference team Tuesday night.

Three SWC teams will be in action tonight. Mississippi State visits Rice, Texas A&M travels to Nebraska and Texas Christian will host Idaho State.

"He's been the victim of a lot of bad street talk. But the only thing wrong with him is that he is not in shape," Fitch said. "He's spent the summer with a bad shoulder and he didn't run the way he should. As far as his habits and lifestyle, they're A-1."

Hawks 120, Celtics 106

Kevin McHale scored 22 points in 22 minutes in his first game for Boston after foot surgery, but it wasn't enough to beat Atlanta.

Dominique Wilkins scored 22 points and Tree Rollins, who had scored a total of 19 points in his first eight games this season, added 20 for the Hawks.

Atlanta took control of the game by outscoring the Celtics 15-0 in a 3½-minute span of the first and second quarters.

Lakers 125, Kings 120

Los Angeles beat Sacramento for the 25th consecutive time, but the Lakers needed a 3-point goal by Magic Johnson with eight seconds left in regulation to force the overtime.

The Lakers outscored the Kings 16-8 to start the extra period as A.C. Green had five points and three rebounds.

Trail Blazers 102, Suns 100

Portland won its sixth straight game, all at home, when Terry Porter sank an 18-foot jumper from the top of the key with 22 seconds left against Phoenix.

Clyde Drexler scored 35 points for the Trail Blazers, who played without Kiki Vandeweghe for the sixth straight game because of a back injury and lost center Steve Johnson in the first half with a foot injury. Porter had 24 points and 12 assists.

The Suns had two chances to tie the game after Porter's basket, but both Bernard Thompson and Larry Nance missed. Nance, playing for the first time this season after suffering a hand injury in the exhibition season, scored 19 points.

Pistons 124, Nets 115

Detroit handed New Jersey its sixth straight loss as Adrian Dantley scored four of his 31 points in overtime.

The Pistons rallied from a 10-point deficit in the third period and tied the game at 110 on a jump shot by Vinnie Johnson with 13 seconds to go in regulation. Buck Williams missed a 12-footer for the Nets with three seconds left, forcing the overtime.

SuperSonics 112, Knicks 109

Seattle, playing without Xavier McDaniel because of a sprained ankle, got 37 points from Dale Ellis and 32 from Tom Chambers.

With the SuperSonics trailing 109-107, Ellis' three-point play with 1:02 left put Seattle in front to stay after New York had overcome a 102-88 deficit with a 19-3 spurt.

Gerald Wilkins, who led the Knicks with 26 points, missed two free throws with 44 seconds remaining and New York missed another chance to pull ahead when Seattle's Danny Young stole the ball from Rick Carlisle and passed to Kevin Williams for an insurance basket with nine seconds left.

Once again Rice seniors leave with losing record

HOUSTON (AP) — Thirteen Rice University seniors completed their college football careers last week, joining every Owl class since 1963 in failing to produce a winning season.

The Owls showed promise with a 4-7 record in 1986 and Coach Jerry Berndt predicted before this season his team could win five and possibly six games.

But it ended like all the other seasons with a 2-9 record, ending with Saturday's 45-21 loss to Houston. Rice's only victories were to NCAA Division II schools.

Quarterback Mark Comalander and running back Todd Jones are among the seniors leaving with broken dreams.

"This is not the way I wanted to go out," Comalander said. "The main reason I chose Rice was that I wanted to be one of the ones that turned it around.

"My only regret is I came to help the program turn around and we've made some strides but seasons are judged by wins and losses.

"Nobody's going to give us anything. I just wish I could stick around four more years to help out."

Jones finished the season as the Owls' second leading rusher and No. 4 receiver. He too, would come to Rice if he had another four years.

"I can't say this was a positive experience," Jones said. "You always expect to win more than the sports writers predict. This one was real tough."

"I had a chance to go lot other schools but I'm still glad I came to Rice.

"I came here because I knew we were going to turn it around and I know this program will turn around and I think the students know it too."

The Owls were worn down in the closing minutes against the Cougars, starting with a 75-yard blocked field goal return for a touchdown by Johnny Jackson.

Fading in the stretch is a pattern oft-repeated by the Owls, who yearly have problems with depth when injuries mount.

"The program has progressed," Comalander said. "But when we start getting some continuity something happened to bring us down."

Dallas wants healthy White or no White

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Coach Tom Landry says quarterback Danny White, beset by injuries that have diminished both his playing time and performance the last two seasons, won't return to the Dallas Cowboys in 1988 unless he's healthy.

White's erratic performances with a damaged right wrist have taxed even Landry's legendary patience. He says he does not want an injured quarterback on the roster.

"His whole future rests on that, and I think he recognizes it," Landry said Tuesday. "He throws well 95 percent of the time, but the other 5 percent kills us."

White, in his 12th season with the Cowboys, says he hopes to play two or three more years, and added that he is considering surgery on his wrist.

"I don't think he (White) will come back unless he is 100 percent healthy," Landry said. "If he is, then he will battle for the starting job."

White, who lost a ligament when his wrist was broken last season, threw four touchdown passes against Minnesota on Thanksgiving Day but suffered two critical interceptions the Vikings parlayed into a 44-38 overtime victory.

"Danny has a blockage in his wrist and doesn't know whether the ball will go up or down when he throws it," Landry said. "We have to protect ourself. We will not go into next season fully behind Danny unless he is ready."

Landry said he wasn't ordering White to undergo surgery but added "something has to happen. The wrist has to improve itself either through rest or an operation."

The coach said he was determined to bring the Cowboys back on top of the NFL.

"I've committed myself for three years," Landry said. "We'll be much improved next year."

He said White had done as good a job as anyone could have following in Hall-of-Famer Roger Staubach's footsteps.

"He plays his heart out," Landry said of White.

Steve Pelluer is the heir apparent, but after going all the way in a 20-14 loss to Miami, he didn't play a down against the Vikings.

Landry said both quarterbacks would play, but refused to name a starter for Sunday's game in Texas Stadium against the 2-9 Atlanta Falcons.

"I will move Steve in at a certain pace," Landry said. "He needs to regain his confidence. I've seen enough of him to think he has a future with us. How we handle him right now is the important thing. I know all I need to know about him."

Landry said even if he started Pelluer against the Falcons, who lead the NFL in points allowed, he could still bring White on as a reliever.

"We are going to look at our young players, but the important thing is to win some games," Landry said. "If you lose too much, it becomes a habit in this business. Not many people would put us in the playoffs right now. But we will be stronger next year if we can win some football games."

The Cowboys, who are 5-6 in the NFC East, are 10-point favorites over the Falcons.

Sports in Brief

Basketball

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The San Antonio Spurs waived rookie guard Nate Blackwell to make room for forward Mike Mitchell, who had been on the injured reserve list most of the season.

Blackwell, a 6-4, 170-pound standout at Temple, was selected in the second round last spring. He averaged 3.7 points in 10 games in the NBA.

Mitchell, a nine-year veteran, played in one game this season, but has been on the IR since undergoing arthroscopic knee surgery Nov. 12.

HOUSTON — The Houston Rockets activated forward Jim Petersen and put guard Andre Turner on the IR list.

Petersen was activated for Tuesday's game against Denver in Houston.

Petersen, put on the injured list in October during the exhibition season, had surgery to remove bone spurs from his left ankle...

DALLAS — Southern Methodist forward Carlton McKinney was named the season's first SWC men's basketball player of the week.

McKinney, a senior from Nixon, Texas, helped lead the Mustangs to two victories last weekend and the Southwest Missouri Invitational championship.

He accounted for 42 points, eight rebounds, 14 assists and six steals in SMU's 121-89 victory over James Madison and 69-58 win over host Southwest Missouri State...

Boxing

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Donald Curry, former world welterweight champion, has signed for a series of three fights, with the long-range plan a shot at the WBC super welterweight title.

Curry, of Fort Worth, will begin the series Dec. 8 against Rigoberto Lopez of El Cajun, Calif., in a scheduled 10-rounder at the Chuck Landis Country Club in Reseda, Calif.

Baylor eases past North Texas, 72-63

Associated Press

DENTON — Michael Williams and Darryl Middleton scored 21 points each as Baylor defeated North Texas State 72-63 in a non-conference basketball game.

Baylor improved to 2-2, while North Texas dropped to 1-1.

Middleton, a 6-9 center, connected on 8-of-14 from the field, while Williams, a 6-3 guard, hit 8-of-13 from the field and led the Bears with nine rebounds.

Tony Worrell led North Texas State, also with 21 points. Wendell Williams added 16 points and Ronnie Morgan 10 points for the Eagles. William Smith led NTSU in rebounding with nine.

The Baylor-North Texas game was the only game involving a Southwest Conference team Tuesday night.

Three SWC teams will be in action tonight. Mississippi State visits Rice, Texas A&M travels to Nebraska and Texas Christian will host Idaho State.

The win upped Dallas Baptist's record to 5-3, while McMurry fell to 3-5. Jay Mizell scored a game-high 27 points for McMurry.

Dallas Baptist led 42-39 at intermission, and McMurry trailed throughout the second half.

MHS girls out gun Fort Stockton

From Staff Reports

FORT STOCKTON — The Midland High girls pushed their pre-district record to 4-2 with a 47-40 win over Fort Stockton Tuesday night.

Kim Jackson and Sheryl Spirling led the way for the Lady Bulldogs with 11 points apiece. MHS took the lead in the first period and held on the rest of the way as the Panthers could never mount a challenging rally.

The Lady Bulldogs will return to action Friday night when they host Lamesa at Chaparral Center at 8 p.m.

"He's been the victim of a lot of bad street talk. But the only thing wrong with him is that he is not in shape," Fitch said. "He's spent the summer with a bad shoulder and he didn't run the way he should. As far as his habits and lifestyle, they're A-1."

Hawks 120, Celtics 106

Kevin McHale scored 22 points in 22 minutes in his first game for Boston after foot surgery, but it wasn't enough to beat Atlanta.

Dominique Wilkins scored 22 points and Tree Rollins, who had scored a total of 19 points in his first eight games this season, added 20 for the Hawks.

Atlanta took control of the game by outscoring the Celtics 15-0 in a 3½-minute span of the first and second quarters.

Lakers 125, Kings 120

Los Angeles beat Sacramento for the 25th consecutive time, but the Lakers needed a 3-point goal by Magic Johnson with eight seconds left in regulation to force the overtime.

The Lakers outscored the Kings 16-8 to start the extra period as A.C. Green had five points and three rebounds.

Trail Blazers 102, Suns 100

Portland won its sixth straight game, all at home, when Terry Porter sank an 18-foot jumper from the top of the key with 22 seconds left against Phoenix.

Clyde Drexler scored 35 points for the Trail Blazers, who played without Kiki Vandeweghe for the sixth straight game because of a back injury and lost center Steve Johnson in the first half with a foot injury. Porter had 24 points and 12 assists.

The Suns had two chances to tie the game after Porter's basket, but both Bernard Thompson and Larry Nance missed. Nance, playing for the first time this season after suffering a hand injury in the exhibition season, scored 19 points.

Pistons 124, Nets 115

Detroit handed New Jersey its sixth straight loss as Adrian Dantley scored four of his 31 points in overtime.

The Pistons rallied from a 10-point deficit in the third period and tied the game at 110 on a jump shot by Vinnie Johnson with 13 seconds to go in regulation. Buck Williams missed a 12-footer for the Nets with three seconds left, forcing the overtime.

SuperSonics 112, Knicks 109

Seattle, playing without Xavier McDaniel because of a sprained ankle, got 37 points from Dale Ellis and 32 from Tom Chambers.

With the SuperSonics trailing 109-107, Ellis' three-point play with 1:02 left put Seattle in front to stay after New York had overcome a 102-88 deficit with a 19-3 spurt.

Gerald Wilkins, who led the Knicks with 26 points, missed two free throws with 44 seconds remaining and New York missed another chance to pull ahead when Seattle's Danny Young stole the ball from Rick Carlisle and passed to Kevin Williams for an insurance basket with nine seconds left.

Once again Rice seniors leave with losing record

HOUSTON (AP) — Thirteen Rice University seniors completed their college football careers last week, joining every Owl class since 1963 in failing to produce a winning season.

The Owls showed promise with a 4-7 record in 1986 and Coach Jerry Berndt predicted before this season his team could win five and possibly six games.

But it ended like all the other seasons with a 2-9 record, ending with Saturday's 45-21 loss to Houston. Rice's only victories were to NCAA Division II schools.

Quarterback Mark Comalander and running back Todd Jones are among the seniors leaving with broken dreams.

"This is not the way I wanted to go out," Comalander said. "The main reason I chose Rice was that I wanted to be one of the ones that turned it around.

"My only regret is I came to help the program turn around and we've made some strides but seasons are judged by wins and losses.

"Nobody's going to give us anything. I just wish I could stick around four more years to help out."

Jones finished the season as the Owls' second leading rusher and No. 4 receiver. He too, would come to Rice if he had another four years.

"I can't say this was a positive experience," Jones said. "You always expect to win more than the sports writers predict. This one was real tough."

"I had a chance to go lot other schools but I'm still glad I came to Rice.

"I came here because I knew we were going to turn it around and I know this program will turn around and I think the students know it too."

The Owls were worn down in the closing minutes against the Cougars, starting with a 75-yard blocked field goal return for a touchdown by Johnny Jackson.

Fading in the stretch is a pattern oft-repeated by the Owls, who yearly have problems with depth when injuries mount.

"The program has progressed," Comalander said. "But when we start getting some continuity something happened to bring us down."

NOTICE
TO THE REAL AND TRUE OWNERS OF PROPERTY ABUTTING UPON THE HEREINAFTER DESCRIBED AND DEFINED PORTIONS OF STREETS, AVENUES, AND/OR ALLEYS IN THE CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS, AND TO ALL OWNING OR CLAIMING ANY SUCH ABUTTING PROPERTY OR AN INTEREST THEREIN, AND TO ALL INTERESTED IN ANY OF THE PROCEEDINGS, CONTRACTS OR OTHER MATTERS HEREINAFTER MENTIONED

Notice is hereby given to the real and true owners of property abutting upon the hereinafter named streets, avenues, and/or alleys within the limits defined, in the City of Midland, Texas, and to all persons owning or claiming any interest therein, and to all railroads and all others claiming, or interested in, any of said property, or in any of the proceedings, contracts and matters herein mentioned that:

The City of Midland, Texas, acting through its City Council by duly enacted Ordinance No. 6810 has determined the necessity for, and has ordered the permanent improvement of portions of various streets, avenues, and/or alleys in the City of Midland, described and defined in the City Engineer's schedule of cost estimates, hereinafter set out in this notice, by raising, grading, filling, widening, permanently paving, or repaving same by construction, reconstruction, repairing or realigning concrete curbs and gutters in the manner and where the City Engineer determines that adequate curbs and gutters are not now installed on proper grade and line, and by construction of such drains and incidentals and appurtenances as deemed necessary by said Engineer, said permanent paving to consist of an adequate asphaltic wearing surface upon a substantial caliche base, both of such type, construction, materials and thickness as is deemed adequate and proper by said City Engineer, all of such improvements to be constructed according to such specifications and standards as the City Engineer deems adequate and suitable, and to be constructed in the manner and as provided for in plans and specifications and the contract agreement, covering the construction of said improvements, now on file in the office of the City Secretary.

That said City Council, by said ordinance, has further determined the necessity of levying assessments for a portion of the costs of the construction of said improvements against the properties abutting upon said streets, avenues, and/or alleys within the limits of said improvement units hereinafter defined, and against the real and true owners thereof, and has adopted the proposed apportionment of costs hereinafter set out between the City and said abutting properties and their owners; that the portion of said costs proposed to be so assessed will be in accordance with the Front Foot Rule or Plan, provided it does not result in injustice or inequality or cause an assessment in excess of the special benefit in enhanced value to be received by such parcels of property, and said City Council has further adopted the following proposed rates and estimates of said costs in reference to each of said streets, avenues, and/or alleys within the limits defined, and as set out in the following schedule to wit:

CITY OF MIDLAND
ESTIMATED COST OF STREET IMPROVEMENTS
STREET PROJECT NO. 280

Unit No.	Width in ft.	STREET DESCRIPTION
208-1	37'	RIDGLEA STREET from Douglas Ave. to 1 block south (1" HMAC, no C&G)

Total amt. fr. ft. for said impvt. agst. prop. owners
$12.33
13.50

Total Cost of impvt.
$10,000.

Each portion of said streets, avenue, and/or alleys as designated by unit number constitutes a separate and independant unit of said improvements and shall be improved, and the improvement constructed therein, separately and independent from each and every other improvement unit and assessments to be levied for said improvements in each unit shall be altogether separate, distinct and independent of and from the assessments to be levied in every other improvement unit; and, in making and levying assessments against property abutting upon one of said units, no matter or circumstance in connection with any other of said units shall be considered, or have any effect upon the other, all as fully, and to the same extent, as if separate proceedings and contracts had been had and executed with reference to the improvements to be made in each of said units.

A hearing will be given and held by and before the City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, in the Council Chamber of the City Hall in the City of Midland, Texas, on the 12th day of January, 1987, at 11:15 o'clock, a.m., to the real and true owners, whether named or correctly named in the assessment proceedings or not, of all property abutting upon said streets, avenues, and/or alleys within the limits to be improved, and to all lien holders or other persons owning or claiming any such abutting property, or any interest therein, and to all railways occupying any portions of said streets, avenues, and/or alleys within any improvement unit as above defined, and to all others interested in any of the proceedings, contracts, or matters and things herein mentioned, or incident or related thereto or the contract for the construction of improvements herein referred to.

At said time and place, all such persons, firms, corporations, railways, and estates, and their agents and attorneys, shall have the right to appear and to be heard and offer testimony as to the said assessments, and as to the amount thereof proposed to be assessed against abutting property and the real and true owners thereof, and as to the lien and charge of personal liability to secure payments of said assessment, the special benefits to accrue to each such abutting property and the owner or owners there by virtue of said improvements, if any, or concerning any error, invalidity, irregularity or deficiency in any proceedings or contract in reference to said improvements and said proposed amendments, and concerning any other matters or thing as to which a hearing is constitutional prerequisite to the validity of said assessment, proceedings and improvements and on which the owner or owners are entitled to a hearing under the constitution and laws of the State of Texas and the proceedings of said City Council.

Following such hearing, such assessments will be levied against each and every parcel or property abutting upon said streets, avenues, and/or alleys within the limits above defined, and the real and true owners thereof, for that portion of the cost of said improvements determined by said City Council to be assessed against such abutting properties, and the real and true owners thereof, and against railways occupying any portion of said units, and said assessments shall be and constitute first and prior liens upon said abutting properties, from the date said improvements were ordered by said City Council and a personal liability and charge against the real and true owners thereof, as of said date, whether such property be described or correctly described, or such real and true owners be named, in such proceedings, or not and no error or mistake or discrepancy in the names of such owner of owners, or in describing said property in any of such proceedings with reference to said improvements, shall invalidate any assessment or certificate issued in evidence thereof; but, nevertheless, each parcel of property abutting upon said streets, avenues, and/or alleys and the real and true owner or owners thereof and each railroad shall be charged with and be liable for said assessment, which shall be valid whether or not such owner or owners be names or correctly names or such property be described or correctly described and as provided for under Article 1105-b of the Revised Civil Statutes of Texas, as amended, heretofore adopted by said City Council as the law under which such improvements, proceedings and assessments are being constructed, performed and levied.

DONE by order of the City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, this 24th day of November, 1987.

B.C. Clanton, City Secretary
