PAMPA — Fire caused moderate to heavy damage to a utility room and moderate smoke damage Sunday to a house at 832 S. Banks.

Three units and seven firefighters responded to the call which came in at 6:56 p.m.

A spokesperson with the Pampa Fire Department said the cause of the fire is not yet determined.

No injuries were reported.

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Democrats are coming to Cowtown. So are the Republicans.

Within a week next month, Fort Worth will play host to the state party conventions for the rival political groups. Apparently, the two sides agree on something.

"It all makes for a wonderful opportunity for a city like this," said Doug Harman, president of the Fort Worth Convention and Visitors Bureau. "We're delighted to see events that bring this many people for this many nights."

About 9,000 Democrats will arrive for their two-day convention June 3. A week later, roughly 10,000 Republicans will assemble for the GOP event.

Hotels are booked solid both weekends and officials estimate the political gatherings could pump at least $1 million into the Tarrant County economy.

AUSTIN (AP) — There's a new secret to political campaigning in Texas: have the spokesperson say all the mean stuff.

That apparently is the strategy candidates are taking to take shots at their foes without putting their reputation and rating on the line, some experts say.

"The advantage of speaking through a surrogate is that you can say sulfurous things about your opponent and put that on the record without taking personal responsibility for it," said Roderick Hart, a University of Texas professor of communications and government.

Today's political landscape is lined with examples of surrogate-speak:

— George W. Bush's gubernatorial campaign routinely sends out news releases where campaign staffers knock Gov. Ann Richards;

ABILENE, Texas (AP) – Hope is glimmering once again for Martin Garcia who watched a "phenomenal" turnout of potential bone marrow donors come to be tested for a match with his 11-year-old son.

"It's a good sign for us," the 40-year-old cook and father of five said. "People are pitching in. I appreciate it. I'm encouraged that something good is going to happen."

Jacob was diagnosed with leukemia in 1991 after clumps of his hair began falling out. Doctors thought the deadly disease was in remission until two weeks ago, when the fifth-grader suffered a relapse on Mother's Day.

Luanne Howard, a representative with the program, said the chance of matching a donor and patient are 20,000-to-1. But among minorities, whose members represent the smallest percentage in the donor's registry, the odds skyrocket to one in 1 million.

"You can't even imagine your own kid going through that," Garcia said. "My wife and I wished it was one of us when we found out our child was dying at 8 years old. It's something you don't ever expect.

HOUSTON (AP) — For hundreds of Houston high school students, the academic day starts at night.

In 1975, Houston Night High opened as the state's only year-round high school open five nights a week. The school has been occupying space at Milby High School since 1980, where students range in age from 15 to 21.

For at-risk students or those who are employed, married or raising children, the Houston Independent School District's nighttime high school classes are a chance to secure a diploma.

"Students here take life seriously," said Ray Phillips, the school's librarian. "It's their last chance to get a full high school diploma rather than a GED (General Equivalency Diploma)."

Twelve teachers instruct about 400 full- and part-time students each semester.

HOUSTON (AP) — Oil prices are on the rise, but job cuts in the oilfield continue.

A Houston Chronicle survey of 24 companies with large operations in Houston found that last year they cut more than 3,400 jobs, or 3.6 percent of their total Houston work forces.

"By the time you hit 35 to 36 years old you better be looking over your shoulder," said Michael Carmichael, 51, who produced training films for Conoco and received a pink slip in November. "The day when a person went to work for a company and was there until retirement is over."

Justices bar challenge to military base-closing decisions

By LAURIE ASSEO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) – Federal courts cannot second-guess the government's decisions on which military installations will be closed, the Supreme Court decided today.

Federal law enacted by Congress gives judges no authority to intervene, the court ruled in rejecting Sen. Arlen Specter's legal challenge to the closing of a shipyard in his home state of Pennsylvania.

In other actions today, the justices:

— Ruled that nurses who direct less-skilled employees as part of their duties are "supervisors" and therefore not protected by federal labor law.

— Let stand an $11.5 million wrongful-death award against white supremacist Tom Metzger and his son for inciting skinheads to beat a black Oregon man to death in 1988.

— Ruled that debtors who have their property sold for failing to pay the mortgage cannot cancel the sale after filing for bankruptcy protection.

In the base-closing case, the court ruled for the Clinton administration, which argued that letting judges step in would make it impossible to act quickly to achieve a trimmer post-Cold War military.

The federal base-closing law does not require the president to determine whether the procedure for recommending base-closings was flawed, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the unanimous court.

"Indeed, nothing in (the law) prevents the president from approving or disapproving the recommendations for whatever reason he sees fit," the chief justice wrote. "How the president chooses to exercise the discretion Congress has granted him is not a matter for our review."

"Our conclusion that judicial review is not available for (Specter's) claim follows from our interpretation of an act of Congress, by which we and all federal courts are bound," Rehnquist wrote.

Today's ruling reversed a federal appeals court decision that allowed Specter, a Pennsylvania Republican, to challenge the government's decision to close the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard.

Since 1991, Congress and the president have decided to close 250 military bases and realign 152 others, and a third round of base-closing decisions is planned next year. However, the Clinton administration is considering delaying some of next year's closings until 1997.

The 1990 Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act requires the defense secretary to make recommendations to a special commission, which holds public hearings and sends a closing list to the president.

The president can accept or reject the list for any reason. If he approves the base closings, Congress has 45 days to veto them. The law requires the president and Congress to act on the list as a whole, with no revisions.

Solicitor General Drew S. Days III said that provision was intended to avoid "cherry picking" by lawmakers trying to save military installations in their home districts.

Specter, a former district attorney, argued on his own behalf in March, marking the first time in 22 years that a U.S. senator had faced the high court.

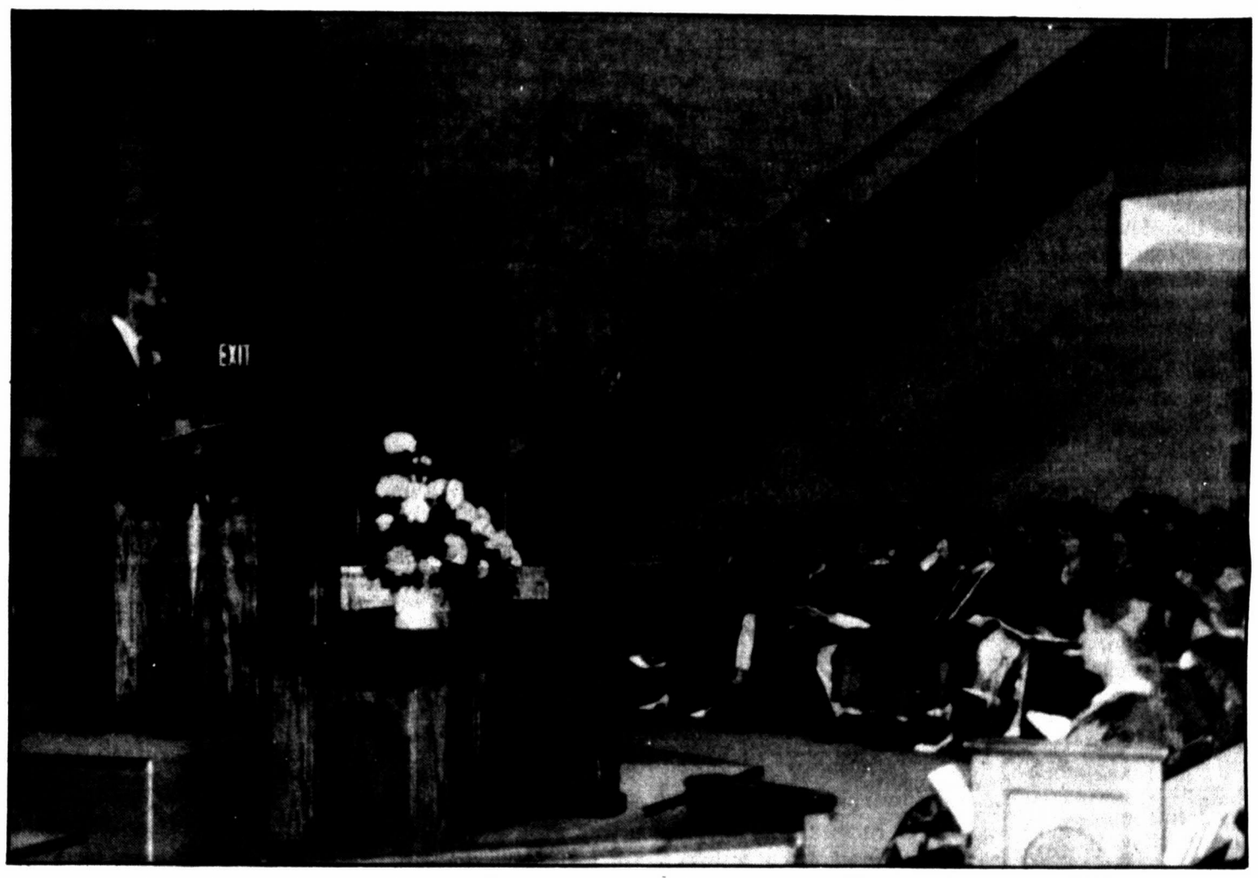
He contended the fast-track procedure keeps the president and Congress from examining whether the decision to close a particular base was fair. Such questions should be decided in court, Specter said.

The lawsuit over the Philadelphia shipyard was joined by the states of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware as well as other lawmakers and union leaders. They said federal officials violated the base-closing procedure by withholding information in favor of keeping the shipyard open.

A federal judge dismissed the lawsuit in 1991, saying the law did not allow courts to intervene.

But the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reinstated the case, saying court review is allowed under the constitutional separation of powers doctrine. The president cannot take action that is not authorized by the Constitution or federal law, it said.

Vespers for Class of '94



Pastor Art Hill of the Zion Lutheran Church gives the sermon during the annual Vespers service for graduating Pampa High School seniors Sunday afternoon at First Baptist Church. Hill told the seniors that competence, confidence and compassion were three attributes they should take past graduation. Another highlight of the service was a duet by senior choir members Kerrey Brown and Tyler Kendall. (Pampa News photo by Jeff Carruth)

Policeman suspended pending probe

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS

A 14 year veteran of the Pampa Police Department is suspended with pay as he awaits the results of an internal affairs investigation into his handling of a mid-May domestic call.

Lt. Allan Smith, 44, was suspended at 6 p.m. Saturday as the result of a complaint generated inside the department, said Pampa Police Chief Chuck Flemins.

Flemins ordered the internal affairs staff of the department to investigate the handling of a May 10 incident involving a double assault between a man and woman in a domestic dispute, he said.

About a week after the incident occurred, Flemins said, an officer came to him and indicated his discomfort with Smith's handling of the incident. Parties involved in the dispute were contacted for clarification.

Based on that information, Flemins said, he authorized the internal affairs investigation to clarify the incident.

"I have sufficient information that would lead me to want to look into this situation further," Flemins said.

Whether Smith violated departmental policies or engaged in criminal violations has not been determined at this time, he said.

"I think it's vitally important we not make any judgments," Flemins said.

He expects the investigation to last five to seven days. Investigating the case are Civilian Investigator Tom Kernan, Administrative Assistant Connie Ogle and Deputy Chief John Ellen.

Ellen said his job is to facilitate the investigation while Kernan and Ogle do the actual investigation. Neither Ogle nor Kernan are in the line of command under Smith.

Smith joined the force Sept. 24, 1982 as a patrol officer. He advanced to senior patrolman in 1986, corporal in 1987, sergeant in 1988 and to lieutenant in 1992. The lieutenant has been assigned to midnights for several months.

Neither Flemins nor Ellen know whether Smith has been subject to discipline in the past.

While on suspension, the officer is required to be available from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. for investigators. His annual pay is $27,752.92.

Flemins emphasized that mechanisms such as the investigation are in place to handle internal and external complaints against an officer.

"If there is misconduct or a situation that violates policies, we are going to investigate to the fullest," he said.

More taxes going to prisons; schools left out in the cold

HOUSTON (AP) – As state prison inmates in Beaumont access new computers in immaculate classrooms, middle school children write for the school newsletter and struggle with math amid broken windows and peeling paint.

Texas taxpayers still pay four times more for schools than prisons. But state records show education's share of the budgetary pie is shrinking, while the take for criminals is rising gradually, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

"People in general are more scared about safety than they are (concerned) about education," said state Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, for whom the $75 million, one-year-old Mark Stiles Unit prison in his hometown is named.

"The attention of the public has been on the criminal justice system and its crisis," Stiles said. "But there needs to be an alarm sounded about the crisis in education."

A few miles away from Mark Stiles Unit, at Crockett Middle School, window shades are drawn and lights are dimmed in the computer classroom, because the building's 20-year-old air conditioning system needs all the help it can get.

"We have been suffering, staying in this building too long," laments Principal Clifford Hardeman. "Every day when I come to work and get out of my car, I get depressed ... This old building should have been replaced a long time ago ... It's just rotten."

In the last eight or nine years, the public safety and corrections share of the state budget increased from about 4 percent to 6 percent, while education's share dropped from 31 percent to 25 percent.

"This is particularly disturbing, given the obvious correlation between low educational achievement and criminal behavior," Comptroller John Sharp said in the recent report of his yearlong audit of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Those appropriations for the correctional system don't take into account $3 billion in tax-backed bonds that Texas voters have approved for prison construction since 1987.

By large margins, voters endorsed four separate prison bond issues to finance construction that will give Texas 143,000 corrections beds, eventually making it the nation's largest prison system.

But voters haven't always been so eager to approve bonds for new classrooms and other school improvements. A year ago, only six months before Texans overwhelmingly approved the latest $1 billion installment in prison bonds, they rejected a constitutional amendment to issue $750 million in construction bonds for poor school districts.

Goodbye to Jackie

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) – Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis was remembered today as a woman with a spirit of adventure and love of family, one who gave "a lesson to the world on how to do things right."

Family and friends gathered inside a Park Avenue church to mourn the former first lady in a private service, while hundreds of people stood outside to say a final goodbye.

John F. Kennedy Jr., in a steady voice, paid tribute to his mother's "love of words, bonds of home and family and her spirit of adventure." Then he read from the prophet Isaiah.

"On that day it will be said, behold our God whom we look to save us," he read. "Let us rejoice and be glad he saved us."

Mrs. Onassis, 64, widow of President Kennedy and of millionaire Aristotle Onassis, died at her Fifth Avenue home Thursday night of cancer. She was to be buried later today in Arlington National Cemetery, next to her first husband.

In his eulogy, Sen. Edward Kennedy said his sister-in-law "was always there – for all our family – in her special way."

"She was a blessing to us and to the nation – and a lesson to the world on how to do things right, how to be a mother, how to appreciate history, how to be courageous."

"I often think of what she said about Jack in December after he died: 'They made him a legend, when he would have preferred to be a man,'" the senator said. "Jackie would have preferred to be just herself, but the world insisted that she be a legend too. She never wanted public notice – in part, I think because it brought back painful memories of an unbearable sorrow, endured in the glare of a million lights."

"She graced our history," he said. "And for those of us who knew and loved her – she graced our lives."

A private wake was held inside Mrs. Onassis' Fifth Avenue apartment Sunday evening. Then, at exactly 10 a.m. today, a hearse carrying a dark mahogany casket covered with ferns and a cross of white flowers arrived at St. Ignatius Loyola Church. It was followed by four limousines carrying the Kennedy entourage and a police escort.

Among those attending the funeral were the current first lady, Hillary Rodham Clinton, and former first lady Lady Bird Johnson. Also speaking today were Mrs. Onassis' companion of many years, Maurice Tempelsman, and daughter Caroline. Each read a poem.

Though today's service was private, it didn't stop ordinary people from coming to say good-bye. Some listened to the service on portable radios.

Analysts predict good economic growth

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy, propelled by productivity-boosting gains in business investment, should enjoy its best growth year since 1988, the nation's top business economists predicted today.

In a forecast certain to please the White House, the National Association of Business Economists boosted its estimate for growth this year. The experts' conclusion: the economy should keep expanding at a respectable rate in 1995, despite a series of credit-tightening moves by the Federal Reserve.

The better-than-expected growth will translate into higher corporate profits, a smaller federal budget deficit and, best of all in political terms, a lower unemployment rate for the year, the NABE forecasting panel said.

"The current expansion, which began as perhaps the most maligned one on record, has steadily gained strength," NABE said in its latest quarterly outlook.

The economists said it was especially encouraging that so much of the strength this year will be concentrated in spending on new equipment and factories — projected to rise by 10.9 percent, faster than any other sector.

These investments boost a country's long-term productivity by replacing outmoded equipment with more modern machinery and also expand operating capacity, which helps to keep inflationary bottlenecks at bay.

"It is a lovely way to grow. It's what the Japanese did for a decade," said William Dunkelberg, NABE president and dean of the business school at Temple University.

The NABE forecast predicted that the overall economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, will expand 3.6 percent this year, the best performance since a 3.9 percent increase in 1988.

The forecasting panel said that after the torrid 7 percent growth rate of the final three months of last year and the slowdown to a rate of 2.6 percent in the January-March quarter, the economy is probably expanding at a rate of 3.4 percent in the current quarter.

This pace will slow to 3 percent in the final half of the year, and slow further in 1995, as the Fed's string of four credit tightening moves this year begins to have its full impact on consumer and business borrowing.

For all of 1995, the business forecasters said they expected the economy would expand by 2.8 percent, a rate that was unchanged from the February survey.

For this year, the economists saw the biggest source of strength coming from a continued surge in business investment. Also providing support for the expansion will be a big jump in residential construction, which the economists predict will rise by 9.9 percent. They forecast construction will be started on 1.4 million new homes and apartments.

However, next year, the forecast expects a much slower 2 percent rise in residential construction as a result of the rise in interest rates.

The unemployment rate, which averaged 6.8 percent last year, should decline to 6.4 percent in 1994 and fall even further to 6.1 percent in 1995, the economists said.

The higher activity will push the federal budget deficit down to $215 billion this year and $185 billion next year, compared to a 1993 deficit of $255 billion. Corporate profits should shoot up 11.4 percent this year, even better than last year's 10.5 percent increase.

The stronger economic performance will not lead to higher inflation, at least for this year. The forecast was for consumer prices to rise by 2.8 percent, compared to 3 percent in 1993. However, for 1995, the economists saw a slightly higher inflation rate of 3.4 percent.

In light of the Fed's short-term boost in interest rates and the even steeper rises in long-term rates by nervous financial markets, the economists increased their interest rate forecast, showing 30-year Treasury bonds should average 7.2 percent this year, up from a February forecast of 6.4 percent. For 1995, the economists said they expected 30-year bonds to average 7.3 percent.

The NABE outlook is prepared by a panel of 35 leading business forecasters selected from the organization's total membership of 3,400 economists.

U.S. soldiers, families leave Panama Canal

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) – Some 1,300 U.S. soldiers and their families will leave Panama in the coming months, a new wave in the gradual withdrawal of all American troops from the strategic canal area by the end of the decade.

By the end of next year, the current force of approximately 10,000 will be cut to about 6,000, according to officials in the Pentagon and U.S. Southern Command, which has responsibility for the region.

And after 1999, no U.S. soldiers will remain in the country, except for the handful of Marines protecting the U.S. embassy.

That represents a massive reduction from the force of 26,000 troops who took part in "Operation Just Cause," the 1989 invasion ousting Gen. Manuel Noriega from power.

By the end of the decade, all remaining U.S. military installations – some 4,290 buildings and 77,000 acres of land – will have been turned over to the Panamanians "at a relatively even pace," said William Ormsbee, a spokesman for the Southern Command in Panama.

The U.S. plan for completing the move is periodically updated and reviewed by Gen. Barry McCaffrey, the four-star commander in chief of the Southern Command based in Panama.

A scheduled trip by Defense Secretary William Perry to Panama later this week to visit U.S. installations and hold talks with McCaffrey was postponed Monday. No reason was immediately given, but the trip is to be rescheduled within the next several weeks, said Pentagon officials who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Still undecided is the location for a new Southern Command headquarters, something of keen interest to cities in the United States hit by base closures.

Under the 1977 Panama Canal Treaty, Panama assumed general territorial jurisdiction over the canal zone. The waterway will be transferred to Panama formally at noon on Dec. 31, 1999.

Another pact, the Treaty on the Permanent Neutrality and Operation of the Panama Canal, guarantees the neutrality of the canal indefinitely, and commits both Panama and the United States to continue to defend the strategic waterway.

Dean Hinton, former U.S. ambassador to Panama, said that Panamanians "are of mixed minds" about the withdrawal.

"Some say the bases are contributing to the local economy and we can't do without them. Others say the ... stability of the region is endangered if we don't stay," he said in an interview.

"Others say the imperialists have been here for 90 years and it's time for them to get the hell out."

The canal is of vital economic importance to the United States because so much of the commerce that flows through it affects U.S. businesses, said the ambassador, who left the country last year.

The forces stationed there also handle U.S. military contacts with the nations of Central and South America, and have taken part in the war against drugs.

But the need to station troops near the canal may not be so necessary in the post-Cold War world, Hinton said.

"We have a right, and a duty, to continue to defend the canal," he said. "But there's little chance anyone will attack it. ... We can get back to Panama very quickly if we need to."

Potter County no longer interested in pathologist

AMARILLO (AP) – Potter County commissioners are rethinking their decision to hire Joseph Patrick Garceau as pathologist and medical examiner following published complaints from his former colleagues.

Commissioners voted to give the job to Garceau on May 9 and will vote again on the issue June 13, but Potter County Judge Arthur Ware called Garceau on Friday to tell him the offer was off.

Ware said he made the decision after speaking to two officials in the Virgin Islands, where Garceau had served as medical examiner for the Justice Department and as a pathologist for St. Thomas Hospital.

Complaints about Garceau surfaced in an investigation by the Amarillo Globe-News.

Garceau, 39, denies some of the complaints and says he doesn't have enough information to respond to others.

Dr. Wilbur Callender, medical director of St. Thomas Hospital since September 1987, told the newspaper that Garceau was a part-time pathologist at the hospital while working full time for the Justice Department.

Callender, who said he was responsible for hiring Garceau, said he would rate Garceau's work at the hospital "average to poor."

"In many, many situations, his work was less than satisfactory," Callender said. "He was undependable, he wasn't here when he was supposed to be here many times. Physicians complained about the quality of work that he provided. The work was not done on a timely basis.

"People were happy to see him leave," he said.

Garceau's resume says he worked at the hospital from January 1989 to January 1993; Callender said his records show that Garceau worked at the hospital from March 1990 until September 1992.

More gripes came from Alva Swan, deputy attorney general for the Justice Department in the Virgin Islands who joined the office about six months after Garceau left.

Although the two never worked together, Swan said he heard enough complaints to launch an internal audit into Garceau's work. He said Garceau left behind about seven unfinished autopsies.

Garceau said he did not leave behind unfinished autopsy work and that he did leave a forwarding address with the Justice Department in the Virgin Islands.

Stephen Monsanto, who was Garceau's supervisor for about six months as director of operations for the Virgin Islands' Justice Department office, said the government has a lawsuit pending against Garceau in Territorial court in the Virgin Islands for damage to a department vehicle.

The lawsuit alleges unauthorized use of a pickup truck – used for removing bodies – that was damaged in an accident while Garceau was driving, Monsanto said. He estimated the damage at $5,000 to $6,000.

Garceau has not answered the lawsuit, which is pending, Monsanto said.

Garceau has a supporter in Dr. Robert Brissie, professor of pathology at the University of Alabama-Birmingham and chief coroner/medical examiner for Jefferson County.

Brissie said he was Garceau's boss when Garceau was an assistant medical examiner and associate chief coroner there in the mid- to late 1980s.

Brissie said Garceau was a "hard worker" and "seemed to do good work." Brissie also said Garceau is "quite bright."

Bastrop sheriff arrested at dogfight

BASTROP (AP) – Law enforcement officers say a busted dogfight in the rural part of the county may be part of a vicious and bloody moving attraction involving gambling.

Five pit bull dogs were recovered and 24 people were arrested from the event broken up late Saturday, said Capt. Charlie R. Littleton of the Bastrop County sheriff's department.

Among the people taken into custody was Kinney County Sheriff Norman Hooten, whose county is more than 200 miles away, making him one of a large group of people that traveled far to the dogfight, Littleton said.

Others taken into custody were from all parts of Texas and some from Oklahoma and Louisiana, he said.

"Somehow, they've got them a network to draw them that many people," said Littleton, adding that the Texas Department of Public Safety is assisting in the investigation.

Another reason to believe this was an established event was the ring's portable construction, Littleton said.

He described it as a 20-foot-by-20-foot-by-2-foot pen made from plywood panels and held together by pins. There was a blood-stained carpet in the middle that could be rolled up.

"That pit's been used before judging by the way they had it set up," he said. "They had benches around the whole pit and people were lined up, both sitting and standing. Sometimes it was two-deep watching them go at it."

Suspects were expected to be charged today with criminal trespass, a Class B misdemeanor punishable by up to 180 days in jail and a $1,500 fine, and attending a dogfight, a Class C misdemeanor with a fine of up to $500, Littleton said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Clinton is groping for policy on Haiti

The Clinton administration seems to be groping – responding more to domestic political pressure than to any coherent idea about what constitutes the United States' national interest (if any) in who misrules Haiti – in its attempt to deal with that country. The key danger for ordinary Americans is that an administration that seems, as former Secretary of State James Baker puts it, "uncomfortable with the concept of American power" could end up blundering into a situation in which military force seems to be the only option. How many Americans believe this administration can use military power decisively?

The United Nations Security Council, under pressure from the Clinton administration, tightened up a Haitian trade embargo in place since the Bush administration. And the Clinton administration announced that it will change the way it treats Haitian refugees. Rather than intercept refugees on the high seas and return all of them to Haiti immediately, it will conduct interviews on U.S. warships to determine if some qualify for political asylum. U.S. officials still expert to return about 90 percent of the refugees the Coast Guard and Navy intercept.

These actions come in the wake of increasing pressure from the Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide, elected president in a relatively democratic election but ousted by a military coup in 1991. It is fascinating that Aristide's supporters urge actions calculated to make poor Haitians, the victims and pawns in all this maneuvering, even more miserable. The new embargo promises some direct hits on the military rulers (such as attempts to freeze overseas bank accounts), but the major impact will be to make the lives of ordinary Haitians even more unlivable.

The new policy towards refugees reflects confusion and indecision. The Bush administration tried shipboard interviews and found them unreliable. It also ended a short-lived plan to interview Haitian refugees at the U.S. base in Guantanamo in Cuba. Candidate Clinton denounced the Bush policy as cruel during the 1992 campaign, then adopted it before entering the White House.

Congressional critics have urged more forceful action to return Aristide to power, including a military invasion. Clinton needs to engage the American public in a serious discussion about U.S. interests in Haiti. Granted, Aristide was elected. But if returned to power, he might be no more effective, benign or popular than the thugs who rule today. Coups and power-plays are hardly rare in today's world. Is it worth an investment of American prestige, money and blood to install this ruler instead of those thugs? If it is, the administration must design an effective policy to get it done. If it isn't, we should lift the embargo and wish Aristide good luck, making it clear that we don't intend to meddle on his behalf.

Meantime, why not eliminate the invidious and artificial distinction between "political" and "economic" refugees? Economic misery is almost always caused by political misrule; that is decidedly the case in Haiti. The U.S. should accept refugees who reach our shores, but not help them to get here or subsidize them once they arrive. Under such a policy, only such refugees who intend to be independent rather than a drain on American resources would be accepted.

The alternative to a real discussion is all too likely to be continued policy drift followed by a poorly thought-out, desperate military action.

"But enough of my little jokes. You're probably wondering why I asked you to come by my office!"

Better to pay Paula Jones off

William F. Buckley Jr.

The appearance of Anita Hill and Robert Bork on television (Face the Nation) was a blow to the Clinton position on the sex suit.

It was expected that Professor Hill would find an exonerative formula, one that simultaneously a) justified her retroactively in making public her charges against Clarence Thomas, and b) suggested it was plain that the charges of Paula Jones are merely an expression of ideological animus, plus also a little profiteering.

No, said Hill, we do not know anything about the merits of Jones' complaint until her case is heard in court. Merely to say that there is after all a possibility that the moon is made of green cheese greatly sets back the cause of those who urge us all to believe that the lady is a tramp and has gone to court insisting the moon is made of green cheese.

And then Judge Bork made two arresting observations. The first: that he can think of no way in which to remove citizen Bill Clinton from this fusillade, inasmuch as the Constitution nowhere grants a president immunity from the reach of the law in pursuit of a wrongdoing committed before assuming office. That, and then Bork's advice that one would naturally expect the plaintiffs would present in court such as Gennifer Flowers. Her testimony would have to do with the question of character and reliability.

Some viewers learned for the first time that the complaint alleges familiarity with parts of the body conventionally clothed. The program's host, Bob Schieffer, explained that there were passages in the complaint he would not feel free to read over the air.

And then Professor Charles Ogletree of Harvard, who had served as counsel for Anita Hill during the Thomas proceedings, made a reference to the "Michael Jackson precedent." This was picked up by another analyst, and what we were being reminded of is that the plaintiff in the Jackson case professed a familiarity with Jackson's body not available to the public at large.

A tough and ingenious advocate might come up with fancy explanations for familiarity of that kind (Gennifer Flowers might have ratted to Paula Jones); the birthmark (if that is what Jones is talking about) might not be there the day Clinton drops his pants before the jury (the ultimate success in shredding?). But the whole thing argues a very urgent need for perspective.

Robert Bennett, the high-powered lawyer of Clinton, evidently recognized quickly the need for effective action in the principal arena, which is not the courtroom but the bar of public opinion. It is said of him in Washington that he considers himself a failure when a client even has to go to trial. The idea is to keep this from happening on the grounds that whatever happened at a trial, merely to have been subjected to the process can be gravely damaging.

Accordingly, there were exchanges between lawyers before the suit was actually filed. If the account in The New York Times is correct, we gather that the president was willing to conceded that yes, he had seen Paula Jones, but that if he had said anything she misconstrued as a sexual innuendo, he apologized for it.

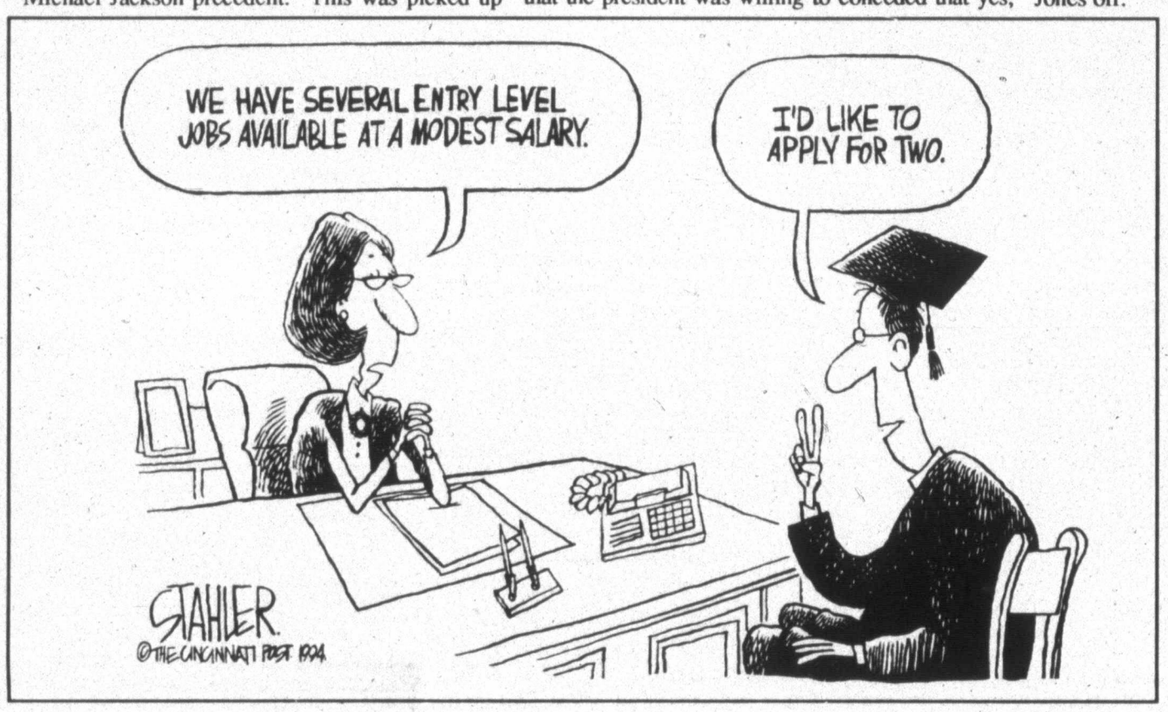
Jones was not willing to settle for this. If she had, one is told, any future spin on the story engineered by the White House would leave her out in the cold, given that the statute of limitations on filing suit would have passed. She wanted more, and Clinton refused to give her more.

The anti-Jones people are stressing the role that money is playing in her motivations. She evidently told her sister at one point that there was "money" in this case. But she did not tell her sister, as far as we know, that Paula Jones was inclined to make up a charge against Clinton because there would then be money. What she was saying confirms that she wants money, but doesn't discredit the charges she has made.

And in any case, it is naive to wonder that she wants money. She is, after all, suing for money – $700,000. Her official case is: What Clinton did caused me psychological stress and embarrassment, for which I am entitled to $300,000; moreover, I want $400,000 as punishment for doing to me something that is against the law. She now steps forward to say she will contribute any excess money awarded, over the cost of litigation, to charity. No charity is going to get rich off that hypothetical pot of gold.

If ever there was a case that called for expeditious treatment, surely it is here. Either party can move for "expediting" – and either party can object. A judge decides.

Better no trial at all. The whole thing is embarrassing, and it would be a sign of political health if a bipartisan fund drive were undertaken to pay Jones off.



Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, May 23rd, the 143rd day of 1994. There are 222 days left in the year. This is Victoria Day in Canada.

Today's Highlight in History:

Sixty years ago, on May 23rd, 1934, bank robbers Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow were shot to death in a police ambush as they were driving a stolen Ford Deluxe along a road in Bienville Parish, La.

On this date:

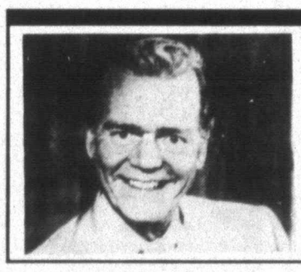
In 1430, Joan of Arc was captured by the Burgundians, who sold her to the English.

In 1533, the marriage of England's King Henry VIII to Catherine of Aragon was declared null and void.

In 1701, Capt. William Kidd was hanged in London after he was convicted of piracy and murder.

In 1788, South Carolina became the eighth state to ratify the U.S.

Eating well to prevent sickness



Paul Harvey

The year 1994 is yet young, yet the "news" of most lasting significance may well be the thrilling progress we're making in preventing sickness.

All our anxiety about escalating costs of health care would be behind us if we could learn to "prevent" and not have to "cure."

We are learning. And many of the measures proving effective are not derived from extensive, expensive laboratory formulae.

Johns Hopkins discovers, for example, that our risk of breast cancer may be lessened "by eating broccoli." The National Cancer Institute discovers that the risk of lung cancer may be reduced by eating carrot, cantaloupe or apricots.

Nutrition is not a new science at Mayo Clinic, where the relationship between food and disease has been researched for half a century. Now Mayo finds that vitamin D (specifically D-3) is useful in treating psoriasis.

Cornell research reveals that the vitamin C in tomatoes, green peppers and strawberries is an effective cancer fighter.

Dr. Joseph Hotchkiss says that "the relationship between diet and cancer is well established."

It was a shotgun wedding between the sciences of medicine and nutrition, but it is proving to be a compatible marriage, bearing "fruitful" offspring.

Columbia University's venerable College of Physicians and Surgeons, 226 years old, has now created a center for "alternative medicine."

Some new knowledge is contradicting some old knowledge.

Until this year, it was thought that children eating sugar became hyperactive. This year, the New England Journal of Medicine presents evidence that sugar might, in fact, have a calming effect.

The British medical publication Lancet in February noted that antioxidants called "flavonoids" may reduce the risk of heart disease. Flavonoids occur in apples, onions and some teas.

A Harvard study affirms that what we eat may be a significant factor in the incidence of prostate cancer; diets that include much red meat and butter may increase the risk by three times.

The conservative Journal of the American Medical Association now urges member physicians to "take seriously folk medicine" including such asthma relievers as jarabe maguey, made from plants and sugar syrup.

The Journal of Investigative Dermatology concedes that an extract from the aloe vera plant, applied after exposure to the sun, "does limit sun damage."

From Boston University: "Garlic is effective against 14 strains of bacteria. The garlic will kill some that cannot be killed by antibiotics."

The University of Florida will make and market a powder which, blended with any beverage, will cut cholesterol levels. It is ProFibe – made from grapefruit fiber.

New Harvard research in the AMA Journal confirms cranberry juice "reduces the risk of bladder infection 500 percent."

Johns Hopkins researchers are convinced that regular meals of oatmeal or buckwheat can lower blood pressure at any age.

V.A. research recommends megadoeses of beta carotene to prevent mouth cancer.

University of California research indicates that bad cholesterol is reduced by including vitamin E and olive oil in the diet.

Now, as Paul Junior would say, the REST OF THE STORY:

Many of these nutrition recommendations that have appeared in responsible medical journals this year were included in the Foxfire books on folk medicine and were used by Appalachian mountain people a hundred years ago.

Plant-based medicines Piecac and quinine and aspirin and a variety of cancer-controlling compounds derived from the May apple were discovered and used by native Americans for generations before Columbus.

A book called Nanise includes 100 plant remedies – now medically confirmed – used by American Indians for more than a thousand years.

At least politics in California isn't dull

William A. Rusher

California is the 800-pound gorilla of American states – its population is bigger than Canada's. So if Republican Gov. Pete Wilson can contrive to get re-elected this November, he will automatically become a major contender in the Republican presidential sweepstakes of 1996.

A year ago Wilson's chances of re-election were estimated as somewhere south of zero. Today, however, his stock has risen noticeably, partly because he is perceived as having performed well in the floods, fires and earthquakes that have recently besieged Southern California, and partly because his likely Democratic opponent, State Treasurer Kathleen Brown, has failed to make much of an impression. Polls now suggest that they are running neck and neck.

Wilson is blessed, moreover, with some strong running mates in the Republican ticket. Attorney General Dan Lungren, who is also running for re-election, is a first-rate public servant and a favorite of the state's conservatives. And in Matthew Fong, the able young Chinese-American who is running for treasurer, the party has what it has long badly needed: an impressive candidate of Asian descent, to lure that fast-growing and basically conservative community into the Republican fold. For that reason alone, Fong's is one of the most important races being run this year.

Until very recently, it was assumed that Wilson would have no serious opposition in the Republican primary. Now, however, Ron Unz, a young (32), wealthy and solidly conservative Silicon Valley entrepreneur, has tossed his hat into the ring and is reportedly plunking down a million dollars to buy TV time for a primary battle against Wilson.

It seems hardly conceivable that someone so young and unknown could unhorse Wilson in the primary. But stranger things have happened, and in any case Unz's candidacy will force Wilson to pay special attention to the conservative wing of the state GOP. The California Republican Assembly, a conservative grassroots organization, has already endorsed Unz.

In addition, Unz has shown a shrewd appreciation of issues with which he can put Wilson on the spot. Regular readers of this column will remember my reports last fall on the California Civil Rights Initiative – the proposal to amend the state constitution by popular referendum to prohibit discrimination for or against any individual or group by reason of race, sex, color, ethnicity or national origin in public employment, public education or public contracting. In short, it would eliminate all quotas masquerading as "affirmative action."

The CCRI's supporters had hoped to gather the necessary 616,000 signatures to put it on the state ballot this November; but that proved impractical, in a view of the time constraints. But as the existence of CCRI became more widely known, an impressive range of Republican leaders, from staunch conservatives to such a reputedly liberal Republican as state Sen. Tom Campbell, came out in favor of it, and last month the Republican state convention endorsed it unanimously. It now seems sure to appear on the California ballot either in the primary elections in March 1996 or in the general election that November. Either way, it should split the Democratic Party right down the middle.

On April 30 Ron Unz held a press conference announcing his support of CCRI. That puts the ball in Gov. Wilson's court, and it will be interesting to see what he does with it. Given the support CCRI has already won, he can hardly come out against it. Nor would it seem in his interest to do so, since the measure is so enormously popular among the voters who might be expected to support Wilson over Brown. (Pause here to shed a tear for Ms. Brown, who will enrage half of her supporters whichever way she jumps on the issue.)

Well, whoever said California was dull?

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: As a medical assistant in a foot clinic, I was appalled recently when a patient explained why her feet were in such bad shape. The little toes on both feet were swollen and red from the high-heeled shoes she must wear on her job. She is an airline stewardess, and the airline for which she works requires its female staff to wear high-heeled pumps while on duty on the plane.

As a result, this woman must cram her feet into these shoes for five- and six-hour shifts, while she must smile and be polite. I personally would not care if she wore tennis shoes, but she says that's out of the question. I am furious that the airlines would be so pitifully image-conscious and sexist as to require such foolish footwear for women.

The patient told me that her company will allow her to wear "dressy flats" if she produces a letter from her doctor. So, Abby, for the benefit of all female airline stewardesses, please print your opinion of this regulation.

APPALLED IN BEAVERTON, ORE.

DEAR APPALLED: I have done a lot of flying, and I know of no airline that requires its flight attendants to wear high-heeled shoes while flying. Mark Ables, vice president of communications at Northwest Airlines, told me that the only shoe requirements his airline has for female flight attendants are that the heels be 1 1/2 inches high and the shoes black. Attendants can wear higher heels if they choose.

By the way, flight attendants have not been called "stewardesses" since Eddie Rickenbacker was the first president of Eastern Airlines.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 25-year-old, happily married woman with a little one on the way. I, too, am a thumb-sucker, but I don't just suck my thumb at night; I suck my thumb when driving the car or reading a book. I find it very relaxing, and it sure beats alcohol or pills.

I recently quit smoking, and my thumb comes in handy when I get the urge to smoke.

As a child, I was teased by close family members who knew I sucked my thumb. I was told that if I didn't stop sucking my thumb by the time I got married, I'd look silly walking down the church aisle with my thumb in my mouth.

My older brother used to tell me I'd grow up looking like Bugs Bunny. Well, I'm married now, and I don't resemble Bugs Bunny in the least!

My husband has given me a lot of support in this. He says it doesn't bother him that I suck my thumb.

I don't walk up to somebody I've just met and say, "Guess what? I suck my thumb!" But if the subject comes up, I'll be the first to admit it.

So here's my response to "Embarrassed," who also sucks her thumb: "You are not alone. I, too, thought I was the only grown person who sucked her thumb until several years ago, when I read a letter in the Dear Abby column from a teenager who confessed she secretly sucked her thumb at night."

You told her it was OK, so thumbs up to you, Abigail!

Meet the pressed: Wrinkle-free cottons

By WENDI WINTERS
For AP Special Features

What's the latest wrinkle in fashion? Try all-cotton clothing that claims to be wrinkle-resistant.

These casual separates for men and women, including pants, shorts, skirts, blazers and shirts, are supposed to come out of the clothes dryer ready to wear, no ironing needed.

"It's what today's busy consumer wants: great-looking clothes without the fuss," says Tom Julian, a trend analyst with Fallon McElligott, a Minneapolis ad agency.

It's a trend that many manufacturers and stores are rushing to catch up to and big-name designers are coolly ignoring.

How new is it, though?

In the 1960s and '70s, stores were flooded with permanent-press fashions knitted or woven with synthetic fibers such as polyester or nylon, or blends of natural fibers and synthetics. Remember the leisure suit? By the mid-70s, the crisp, clean-cut synthetics were history. It was hip to be clad in pure cottons, silks and linens, looking as rumpled as an unmade bed.

This time, however, consumer demand triggered development of clothes made of natural fiber fabrics that claim to shed wrinkles and are thus easier to care for at home.

"Because of the growing numbers of dual-income couples, easy care will play an increasingly important role in apparel purchasing decisions," Mike Restaino says. Restaino is a buyer for J.C. Penney Co. Inc., the national retail chain based in Dallas. "This product is a major opportunity to respond to the lifestyle trends of the '90s."

Sarah Bevel, a menswear buyer at Sears, Roebuck and Co., Chicago, says: "Helping to fuel sales of our wrinkle-resistant slacks is the growing influence of 'Friday dressing.' Men can wear casual slacks to the office and look good."

Last year, the Haggar Apparel Co. coined the phrase "wrinkle-free" for the line of all-cotton men's slacks it launched with great fanfare and a multimillion-dollar advertising campaign. They were a hit, and Haggar now claims a lion's share of the wrinkle-free business in stores around the country.

Wrinkle-resistant men's slacks were also introduced by major brand names such as the Lee Co., Levi's Travelers and Farah's Savane. Wrinkle-resistant casual and dress shirts are being ballyhooed by well-known shirt manufacturers including Arrow, Oxxford and Van Heusen. More recently, women's wear manufacturers Eddie Haggar Limited, Chic by HIS, Jantzen and Cherokee have produced wrinkle-resistant collections, and kids will soon find their own no-iron fashions in stores, too.

How are wrinkle-resistant all-cotton fabrics created? There's a lot of mumbo jumbo about "secret recipes" and "patent pending processes," but, simply, the effect is achieved by using high-tech yarn-spinning processes and special weaving or knitting techniques to produce fabrics less likely to wrinkle. Next, wrinkle-resistant chemical resins are applied to the fabrics, which are then baked or cured in giant ovens.

Surprisingly, the technology is not new. According to Frank Bracken of the Dallas-based Haggar Apparel Co., "Permanent pressed cottons have been around 27 years but never caught on until now."

Not everyone is singing praises of the wrinkle-resistant revolution. While national retailers such as Macy's, Sears and Penney are successful with the wrinkle-resistant styles, specialty stores such as Saks Fifth Avenue won't carry them. They say they'll wait until one of the big-name designers introduces a wrinkle-shedding collection.

"Wrinkle-resistant clothes are geared toward the mass market, and we're not in that at all," says Mark Scarborough, vice president of men's design for Joseph Abboud. "There's also a trade-off for easy care in the hand — the feel — of the fabric."

Donna Karan, meanwhile, is satisfied that her collections "are not wrinkle-free, they're hassle-free.

"Clothes without wrinkles are artificial-looking."

Julien Dupré's La Fermiere is among the featured paintings in an exhibit at the James M. Haney Gallery.

Gallery presents paintings

AMARILLO- The James M. Haney Gallery in association with Don and Anne Reid and Don Griffith will be presenting an exhibition of European and American paintings from the 19th and 20th centuries along with a display of jewelry and precious stones.

Among the paintings chosen for this exhibition is La Fermiere by Julien Dupré (1851-1910). Considered one of the leading exponents of the second generation French Realists, Dupré's work carries on the tradition of Millet and Breton.

A portrait of the racehorse Prince Plausible on the racecourse with a jockey by the British sporting artist Harry Hall (1814 - 1882) will also be featured. In 1845, Hall moved to Newmarket, England, then the hub of the racing scene.

While there, he began receiving commissions to paint all of the great racehorses, many of which were used for engravings in "The Sporting Magazine."

Other artists who will be featured are Alfred Thompson Bricher; Henry T. Alken; Daniel Ridgway Knight; Louis Aston Knight; Edward Ladell; and Herbert Sidney.

The paintings went on display May 19 and will be exhibited until May 31.

The jewelry exhibit was on display for three days and featured some of the most beautiful and interesting pieces of jewelry available today.

On display were necklaces, bracelets, broaches, rings and loose stones. A group of 18 karat yellow gold and diamond charms, created after Fabergé Eggs, were also exhibited.

Book review

Nanny recalls life with Mia and Woody

By CAROL DEEGAN
Associated Press Writer

"Mia & Woody: Love and Betrayal" provides an "insider's" account of the years when Mia Farrow and Woody Allen's private lives became public.

It is not intended as an objective account of the couple's headline-grabbing breakup.

Written by Kristi Groteke, who worked as Farrow's nanny, and Marjorie Rosen, a journalist and screenwriter, it tells of the troubles that began when Farrow learned of Allen's affair with her adopted daughter, Soon-Yi Previn, followed by 7-year-old Dylan Farrow's accusations that Allen had molested her.

Groteke writes: "I have no idea whether or not Woody actually abused his daughter. ... All I know is that after Aug. 4 (1992), Dylan began to behave strangely. Was it because Woody had actually touched her? Or because Mia kept pressing her as to whether or not Woody touched her?"

More interesting than the rehashing of events reported by the media are Groteke's descriptions of life in the Farrow household, photos from the author's personal collection and an "update" on what has happened to the various members of Farrow's family.

Among the tidbits: Groteke received $10 an hour when Allen was paying the bills but was cut back to $7 an hour after Farrow took over paying her salary.

Farrow's average monthly budget totaled $19,900, including $500 for city taxis, $1,100 for clothing and shoes for 11 adopted and biological children, and $1,000 in spending money for five of the older children.

Groteke is not one of Allen's fans. And she eventually grows a little tired of Farrow.

At the end of a trip to Miami, Groteke writes: "I found myself counting the days. The Friday before Christmas couldn't have arrived soon enough."

The appendix contains Allen's petition filed against Farrow in New York County Supreme Court, including Justice Elliott Wilk's findings of fact, custody, visitation and counsel fees.

Among other things, this document describes Allen as "self-absorbed, untrustworthy and insensitive" and states: "We do not ... demand perfection as a qualification for parenting. Ironically, Ms. Farrow's principal shortcoming with respect to responsible parenting appears to have been her continued relationship with Mr. Allen."

Club News

The Civic Culture Club recently elected officers for 1994-95. They are: (back row, left) Georgia Holden, secretary; Eva Dennis, reporter; (front row, left) Teresa Reed, president; Marilyn Butler, vice president; Helene Hogan, parliamentarian and outgoing president.

El Progresso

El Progresso Club members met in the conference room of Dawkins Engeries, Inc., on May 10 for a luncheon and installation services.

Julia Dawkins announced that three history books, Panhandle Pilgrimage by Pauline and R.L. Robertson have been purchased for the three Texas history students in the seventh grade who are Erik Bennett, Tiffany Lamberth, and Thann Scoggin.

These books were presented to the students in their classes.

This is the twentieth year that the club has made the book presentations to outstanding students.

Riehart used a "Tuzzy-Muzzy" theme and presented nosegays as she gave a charge to the following officers for the 1994-95 year: Edna Hickman, president; Jo Scoggin, vice president; Carolyn Smith, secretary and reporter; Eloise Lane, treasurer; and Julia Dawkins, parliamentarian.

This meeting concluded the 1993-94 program.

Pampa Rotary Club

The Pampa Rotary Club will have Judge Lee Waters of Pampa as their program speaker this Wednesday during their regular luncheon at the Starlight room of the Coronado Inn.

He will be speaking on the "The State of the Judiciary and/or the Judiciary of the State."

Boldly going where no video game has gone before

By WILLIAM SCHIFFMANN
Associated Press Writer

Have you always pictured yourself in one of those cool Star Trek uniforms? Have you always wanted to flip your phaser to "stun" and zap a Klingon? Do you dream of the day you'll be "transported" to another world?

If you answered "yes" to any of the above, you're ready to take the helm of the starship Enterprise and zoom into space, courtesy of Star Trek: The Next Generation — "Future's Past" (around $70 from Spectrum Holobyte for Super Nintendo).

This 16-meg, one-player overhead epic is probably as close as any of us will get to intergalactic travel — and given all the problems our plucky band encounters, maybe that's not such a bad thing.

I'm not a big fan of role-playing games — I prefer my gratification a bit more instant — but I got really enmeshed in Star Trek.

Here's the deal: While you are nominally under the command of the Federation, and Federation officials often send you off on missions, you can actually travel to any of seemingly hundreds of planets and interact with the locals.

You start all action on the bridge. If you've seen any Star Trek episodes, you'll be familiar with its positions — the conn, the viewscreen, engineering, communications, the door to the transporter room ... You move left or right around the bridge, depending on which function you need.

A second screen comes up whenever you are under attack. This grid shows the combatants and allows you to control the battle. The first time I trashed a Romulan, some Federation hotshot yelled at me, so be careful. Sometimes it's better to just run them off or bust them up a little.

The third aspect of the game is the planetary visits by a selected Away Team.

These missions basically are mazes. You can select from one to four people to make the trip, on which your goal is to collect information or objects while fending off the locals and nuking aliens with your phaser. If you take a group, a command icon designates which of the Away Team is in charge, and that person can move around by him or herself, or take the whole gang along.

I found it easiest to travel alone, although that raises other problems, like having the rest of the Away Team whacked while you're busy exploring, since they can't function without direction.

The game doesn't follow the show faithfully, which may be a problem for die-hard Trekkers. For instance, when's the last time Picard just opened fire without at least an attempt at chatting with those cranky Romulans? There's no opportunity to try and reason with them; it's a kill-or-be-killed mentality that doesn't exist on TV.

But you'll forget about those drawbacks as you go about the endless tasks involved in running a Starship — repairing damage after combat, healing injured crew members with your tricorder, kicking in warp drive for your next mission.

The graphics are excellent — though the Away Team characters are a bit on the small side — control generally is good and sound, especially the music from the show itself, is great.

What we have here is a game that Trekkers will love and RPG fans will enjoy, too. It's got something for everyone.

Except Romulans.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Responsibilities or critical tasks you've been sweeping under the rug lately might pop their heads up through the seams today and make their presence felt. Unattended, they could get nastier.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone with whom you're presently involved might make a play at this time to make your friends his/hers. Sharing is one thing, but acing you out is another.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You have good leadership qualities today, but they might be too self-serving. Victory is likely to be much more gratifying if it encompasses everyone involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You don't like it when someone puts you in a position where you have to defend every statement you make. Bare this in mind today if someone makes statements with which you don't agree.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're now in a favorable cycle for joint endeavors, but there are conditions attached. Parity is a must and your counterpart must be able to offer what you can.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today regarding a matter of mutual concern your mate and you might be diametrically opposed. A compromise will be required, but neither may be prepared to offer one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A weightier burden than you anticipated might be your lot in life today, because someone for whom you're responsible failed to take care of something and passed the buck onto you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Even though you'll be a welcome addition to any social situation today, don't be the last one to leave the party. Start for the door before your host/hostess yawns a second time.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In order to achieve an important objective today, you'll have to be methodical, bold and organized. If you aren't endowed with these qualities in proper proportion, you might not succeed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Avoid the company of associates today who like to impose their views and ideas on others. Your tolerance for self-appointed bossy types is slightly above zero.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Take extra pains at this time to manage your resources as prudently as possible. Trying to pay off new obligations could put the squeeze on you at a critical period.

Tabasco Cat wins Preakness

BALTIMORE (AP) — There will never be another Tabasco Cat. The folks who make Tabasco sauce have seen to that.

On Saturday, Tabasco Cat won the Preakness by three-quarters of a length over the Kentucky Derby-winning favorite, Go for Gin, applying the final brush stroke to a classic work of equine art.

It ended trainer D. Wayne Lukas' 2 1/2-year winless streak in Grade I stakes, while erasing the memory of one year ago, when his horse, Union City, broke down in the Preakness and had to be destroyed on the track.

And, even more dramatically, the victory proved to be some measure of redemption for the colt that last year ran over Lukas' son and assistant trainer, Jeff, nearly killing him.

Yes, the folks at McIlhenny Co., in Louisiana are just tickled to have a horse named after their hot sauce, but no more, please.

"Their attorney called after we'd won some races," Lukas said. "I thought, oh no. But he assured me it would be a pleasant call.

"He said they were elated over the exposure, and they weren't going to do anything about the trademark. But in the future. ... Well, they didn't want them to start naming a lot of Tabascos. I think they called the Jockey Club, so there won't be anymore Tabascos."

Now, it's on to the Belmont Stakes, third jewel of the Triple Crown, in New York on June 11. Tabasco Cat and Go for Gin will renew their rivalry, and they'll be joined again by Strodes Creek and Brocco, both of whom skipped the Preakness.

Strodes Creek was second in the Derby and Brocco, who beat Tabasco Cat in the Santa Anita Derby last April 9, was fourth, unable to handle the sloppy track at Churchill Downs.

Knicks end Bulls' NBA reign

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks finally took the torch from the Chicago Bulls. And the three-time NBA champions did not pass it willingly.

The Knicks, who spent the three previous years fruitlessly chasing the Bulls, had to scratch and claw for every point before Chicago succumbed 87-77 Sunday in yet another fourth-quarter blitz.

In winning the series four games to three, New York advanced to the Eastern Conference finals against the Indiana Pacers, starting Tuesday night at Madison Square Garden.

"We had to beat the world champions," Knicks coach Pat Riley said. "If we really aspire to what the Bulls tried so hard to achieve, we have to keep going. We have so much more work ahead of us. We haven't accomplished anything yet."

Chicago's bid for a fourth title lasted longer than many expected with superstar Michael Jordan in retirement, but the Knicks' inside strength finally proved too much. The Bulls scored 14 points on 6-for-20 shooting in the fourth quarter, marking the sixth straight time this season they failed to reach 20 in the final period at New York.

Chicago lost all six of those games, including four in the playoffs, as the home team won all seven in the series.

"I was wrong, the home-court advantage does mean something in the seventh game," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "They beat us, but we're not defeated. They took us out of what we do best. Their aggressiveness made us come apart at the seams in the fourth quarter."

New York finally got a breakthrough performance behind Patrick Ewing and Charles Oakley. Ewing, scoreless in the first half, had 18 points and 17 rebounds while Oakley finished with 17 points and 20 rebounds.

"We just kept fighting and fighting," Oakley said. "But we're not over the hump yet. We still have a long way to go."

The Knicks drew away in the fourth quarter, a period in which they've allowed an average of just 17.3 points in the playoffs.

Scottie Pippen had 20 points and 16 rebounds for the Bulls, but he didn't score in the fourth quarter until there just 3:13 remained, after the Knicks stretched a two-point lead to 82-72.

"It's tough being on this side of the fence," Pippen said. "There's a lot of pain for a lot of us inside this locker room right now. It's something when the expectations start to get greater because you want to do so much. This was just one of those days when we just didn't do the right things."

Horace Grant scored 17 points and Pete Myers, Jordan's replacement at guard, had 15 for the Bulls, whose beloved Chicago Stadium is closing now that their season is over.

"It took hard work, I'll tell you that," said Oakley, a former Bull. "They didn't die. They played hard and executed hard."

After Pippen's only basket of the fourth quarter, Greg Anthony's free throw gave the Knicks an 83-74 lead with 2:30 left. A 3-pointer by Toni Kukoc with 1:22 remaining made it 83-77, but Chicago didn't score again.

This the Bulls' earliest playoff exit since 1988. Before winning championships in 1991, 1992 and 1993, they lost to Detroit in the Eastern Conference finals in 1989 and 1990.

"I told the players it was the first time we've bee unemployed this early for years," Jackson said.

Urged on by their fans, who might be matched in fervor only by Chicago's, the Knicks became the 18th consecutive team to win a Game 7 at home. The last time a road team won a seventh game was in 1982 when Philadelphia won the Eastern Conference finals at Boston.

Ewing, urged on from the sidelines by college coach John Thompson, came alive in the third period with 13 points. But it made little difference in the closeness of the game as neither team led by more than four points in the quarter.

"I was doing other things — rebounding and blocking shots — so I knew the offense would come," Ewing said of his scoreless first half. "The fans were great today, but they probably wanted to kill me at halftime."

The Bulls scored six straight points to open a 57-53 lead with 4:57 left in the period, and they still led 63-59 with 2:35 to go, but New York finished the quarter with an 8-0 run, The burst was capped by Anthony's 3-pointer with 3.7 seconds remaining that he released with one second left on the shot clock.

Ewing and John Starks, the Knicks' leading scorers during the regular season, went 0-for-3 and 0-for-5 from the field in the first half, but the Bulls trailed by one at the half although they outshot New York 44 percent to 35 percent.

The Knicks stayed close in the first quarter despite losing Ewing to two fouls in the first 2 1/2 minutes, then took a 24-19 lead with an 8-1 run started by consecutive jumpers by Anthony Mason and Derek Harper.

A 14-6 burst, including three baskets from Kukoc, gave Chicago a 33-30 edge with 3:49 left. A tip-in and jumper by Oakley rallied New York to a 38-37 advantage at halftime.

Dunlap Industrial edges Cabot in pitching duel

Dunlap Industrial beat Cabot, 3-2, in a strong pitcher's duel last week in the Major Bambino League.

Greg Lindsey got the win for Dunlap, going the distance and allowing two runs while striking out eleven and walking two. Casey Owens took the loss for Cabot, allowing three runs on two hits while walking four and striking out six in going the distance.

Cabot took the lead in the top of the first inning when Jeremy Hall hit a double and later scored on an error.

Dunlap came back in the bottom of the first inning when Jason Roark drew a walk and went to third on a single by Caleb Snellgrooes. Roark then scored on a passed ball to tie the game.

The game remained tied until the bottom of the fourth when Dunlap pushed two runs across the plate. Lindsey and Justin Barnes started the inning with walks with Lindsey scoring on a double by Erik Black and Barnes scoring on a groundout by Justin Leos.

Cabot made one last comeback in the top of the sixth on a walk to Gonzalo Salazar, who scored on a long misplayed flyball hit by Jeremy Hall. Dunlap finally finished the game on a groundout by Owens.

Dunlap's next game is Saturday against Celanese while Cabot plays Dean's also-on Saturday.

Glo-Valve rallied behind the hitting and pitching of Shawn Strate to overwhelm Curtis Well Service, 14-3, Saturday to lead off the games for the official opening day in the Optimist Major Bambino League.

Strate relieved Cody Shepard with the bases loaded and one out in the second inning. He allowed no runs, two hits and one walk while striking out four in 2 and 2/3rds innings of relief to receive credit for the victory.

With one out in the bottom of the first, Strate walked and came home on a towering home run by Shepard.

Curtis took the lead in the second inning with three runs, featuring four walks, an error and a hit by Jacob Musgrave before Strate put out the fire.

Optimist roundup

Jonathan Brockington and Isaiah Manzanares led off the bottom of the second for Glo-Valve with singles and advanced to second and third on a wild pitch. Brockington scored on a single by Kyle Keith and Manzanares moved to third. Keith took second on a fielder's choice. Manzanares and Keith in turn scored on consecutive flies by Kyle McCullough and Strate, which were dropped. McCullough scored on a wild pitch and Strate came home on an infield out by Eric Lemons. Shepard was walked intentionally, went to second on a fielder's choice, to third on a groundout by Lemons and scored the sixth Glo-Valve run of the inning on a wild pitch.

With one out in the third inning, Aaron Childress tripled to right field, but Glo-Valve's Josue' Silva chased the ball down and made a perfect relay throw to Shepard, who gunned down Childress at the plate.

Brockington led off the Glo-Valve third with a single, but was stranded at second.

Strate opened the scoring floodgate for Glo-Valve in the fourth by leading off with a double. Shepard was walked intentionally and Lemons ruined the strategy with a ringing double to right centerfield, scoring Strate. Silva was safe on an error, which scored Shepard. Lemons scored on a single by Heath Keeton while Silva moved to third. Brockington walked and went to second on a fielder's choice. Keeton came home on a single by Taylor Harris while Brockington took third. Brockington scored the final run for Glo-Valve on a single by McCullough.

Glo-Valve evened its record at 1-1, tied for second place in the National Major Bambino League with Cabot Corporation and Dunlap Industrial. Curtis Well Service dropped to 0-2. Hoechst Celanese Chemical Group leads the National League with a 2-0 record.

Moose Lodge downed Celanese, 8-3, Saturday in a Minor Bambino (9-10 year old) League game.

Winning pitcher was Jered Snellgrooes, who didn't allow a hit while striking out eight and walking six.

Snelgrooes, Ryan Zemanek, Matthew Robben and Blake Helms were the leading hitters for Moose.

Losing pitcher was Justin Waggoner, who gave up three hits while striking out five and walking four.

Mr. Gattis defeated Max's, 25-4, Saturday in 10-12 year-old girls' softball action.

Jill Forman pitched the first three innings for Mr. Gattis, holding Max's to just one run. She gave up two hits while striking out five and walking three. Angela Brown pitched the final inning to pick up the save. The game was called after four innings due to the 10-run rule.

Mr. Gattis batters combined for a total of 16 base hits, including five for extra bases. Forman had a home run and two singles; Kimberly Clark, double and two singles; Sabrina Johnson and Ashley Derington, three singles each.

Mr. Gattis improved its record to 2-0.

Both Rockets, Jazz have traveled rocky playoff road

Game one tonight in Western final

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets and Utah Jazz have traveled a rocky road to the Western Conference final.

After blowing big leads and losing the first two games at home against Phoenix, the Rockets rebounded and won the series Saturday with a 104-94 victory in Game 7.

"The media counted us out, but we never counted ourselves out," said Houston star Hakeem Olajuwon, who had 37 points and 17 rebounds in Game 7. "I hope the media learned something from this series."

The Jazz almost became the first team in NBA history to blow a 3-0 series lead before finally eliminating the Denver Nuggets 91-81 Saturday in Game 7.

But the Rockets and Jazz start with clean slates tonight when they meet in Game 1 of the Western final in Houston.

Utah's biggest task will be containing Olajuwon, a leading contender for MVP honors this season.

"Hakeem is so active and quick, he plays like a forward," said Utah center Felton Spencer. "I've just got to try to meet him early and hope for the best."

Karl Malone led the Jazz in Game 7 against Denver with 31 points and 14 rebounds.

"Houston will be tough, but the neat thing is that there are only four teams left now and we're one of them," Malone said. "We have to play with patience and poise against them. We know what kind of work we have to do."

Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich expects "a tough, tough series" against Utah, which split six games with the Rockets in the regular season.

"They gave us a lot of problems during the regular season and they've got two All-Stars (Malone and guard John Stockton) who are playing great right now," Tomjanovich said. "It's going to be every bit as tough as this series was."

Neither team is expecting a letdown after completing energy-draining series.

"Not when we're this close to the ring," Rockets guard Mario Elie said. "If we win all our home games, we can bring this city a championship. Right now, we're halfway there."

The Rockets are making their third appearance in the Western final. They lost to Boston in the NBA final in 1981 and 1986, both times in six games.

Utah will be appearing in its second conference final. In 1992, the Jazz lost in six games to Portland.

One losing streak ends, another continues

By The Associated Press

San Diego's sorry streak finally ended, while Colorado's winless woes continued against Atlanta.

The Padres snapped a club-record, 13-game losing streak Sunday, beating the Houston Astros 7-6 on Phil Plantier's two-run homer in the eighth inning.

"You could just sense that the guys were wondering, 'How are we going to blow it today,'" said San Diego's Tony Gwynn. "When Plantier hit the home run, it was more just a feeling of relief that we had gotten the lead back."

Colorado fell to 0-16 lifetime against Atlanta with an 8-3 loss. Greg Maddux struck out nine batters in seven innings as the Braves swept the three-game series in Denver.

"Pitching is the reason for a record like that," said Rockies manager Don Baylor. "With their pitching, they find a way to keep hanging around and beat you."

In other games, it was St. Louis 10, Florida 9; Philadelphia 8, New York 3; Montreal 3, Pittsburgh 2; Los Angeles 10, Cincinnati 3; and Chicago 6, San Francisco 5 in 11 innings.

Plantier fouled off several pitches from Mitch Williams before hitting a 1-2 pitch deep into the right-centerfield pavilion for his 13th homer of the season.

"I don't normally get excited about home runs, but this one was big," Plantier said.

Padres manager Jim Riggleman called it "a huge at-bat for us."

"To do it against a left-hander with two strikes in the count — it doesn't get any more clutch than that," Riggleman said.

NL roundup

San Diego moved ahead 5-3 lead with four runs in the fifth, but Houston came back to take a 6-5 lead on Luis Gonzalez's two-run double in the seventh.

Williams (1-4), whose ERA soared to 8.00, went one inning and took the loss. Pedro Martinez (1-1) worked two innings for the win, and Trevor Hoffman pitched a perfect ninth for his fourth save.

Phillies 8, Mets 3

Lenny Dykstra, Pete Incaviglia and Darren Daulton led off innings with home runs as Philadelphia completed a three-game sweep and an 8-2 homestand.

Tommy Greene (2-0) allowed three runs on four hits and struck out six before leaving the game after 5 1-3 innings.

Philadelphia's Dave Hollins broke his left hand while sliding into first in the third inning, and is expected to be out six weeks.

Expos 3, Pirates 2

Pedro Martinez got the victory and his first major-league hit, tripling in three runs to lead visiting Montreal over Pittsburgh.

Martinez was hitless in 22 career at-bats before tripling with the bases-loaded in the fourth. On the mound, Martinez (3-3) gave up two runs and six hits in six innings.

Pittsburgh starter Denny Neagle also got his first big-league hit, breaking an 0-for-40 slump.

Cardinals 10, Marlins 9

Gregg Jefferies' two-run double capped a four-run ninth inning that gave visiting St. Louis the victory in a brawl-marred game.

Marlins reliever Jeremy Hernandez (2-3) entered the ninth inning with a 9-6 lead, but couldn't hold it. The Cardinals went ahead on a pinch-hit double by Mark Whiten, Ray Lankford's RBI single and Jefferies' double.

Four players were ejected following a second-inning brawl, triggered when St. Louis starter Allen Watson hit a batter after giving up three homers in the inning. Luis Alicea had five hits for the Cardinals.

Dodgers 10, Reds 3

Brett Butler singled, tripled and homered, and Mike Piazza hit a three-run homer as Los Angeles won for the ninth time in 11 games.

Winner Pedro Astacio (3-3) gave up seven hits and one run in eight innings. He had a shutout until giving up an RBI triple to Hal Morris in the eighth.

The visiting Dodgers scored their first four runs off Reds' starter Tim Pugh (3-2), who has given up 11 runs in the first inning in his last five starts.

Cubs 6, Giants 5, 11 innings

Derrick May made a great catch in the top of the 11th, then hit a leadoff homer in the bottom of the inning to give Chicago its sixth straight victory.

May slammed into the left field wall to catch Kirt Manwaring's deep fly ball in the Giants' 11th at Wrigley Field. He won it in the bottom of the inning, hitting a 2-0 pitch from Rod Beck (1-2) into the leftfield bleachers.

Jim Bullinger (2-0) pitched two innings for the victory. Cubs starter Anthony Young gave up six hits over seven innings, and left with a 5-4 lead.

Braves 8, Rockies 3

Maddux (7-2) limited Colorado to five hits before giving way to Mark Wohlers in the eighth inning. He finished off all seven innings with strikeouts, including his third in a row of Howard Johnson to escape from a bases-loaded jam in the sixth.

Lance Painter, making his first appearance for the Rockies this season after being called up from Class AAA Colorado Springs, gave up three runs in the third, including Terry Pendleton's two-run homer.

Slumping Brewers slipping out of contention

By TOM WITHERS
Associated Press Writer

Like their mascot Bernie, who slides into a faux mug of beer after every Milwaukee home run at County Stadium, the Brewers are slipping out of the picture in the AL Central.

The Brewers lost their 11th straight game Sunday as Travis Fryman drove in four runs and rookie Chris Gomez went 3-for-4 to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 9-6 victory.

"It's a little early to start panicking, but we have to get going soon," said Milwaukee first baseman John Jaha. "You get deeper and deeper into a hole and it starts getting harder to get out."

The Brewers 11-game skid is the second longest in club history and one shy of the team record set in 1987. Milwaukee will try to avoid matching the record Monday night against Baltimore's seven-game winner Ben McDonald.

Detroit, which has won three straight, used a Milwaukee blunder to score three runs in the fourth. The play epitomized the Brewers' mounting frustration.

Fryman singled home Milt Cuyler with two outs to tie the game at 4, and continued to run to second on the play not realizing that Tony Phillips was already standing on the bag.

The Brewers quickly got the two involved in a rundown but botched it, allowing Phillips to get to second safely as Fryman scurried back to first. Cecil Fielder followed with a two-run double.

"Only does something like that happen in an 11-game losing streak," Milwaukee manager Phil Garner said. "You get caught with your shorts down.

Al roundup

"We failed to get a double play in that inning, too," he added. "We gave them five outs in that inning and that's the kind of crap that has to stop. We got the lead back and it has to stop right there. We're not doing it. Instead we're bleeding like crazy."

During their slump, Milwaukee is batting .232 (93-for-396), and the pitching staff has given up 128 hits and 66 walks.

"It's been everything," Jaha said. "Something goes right, but then something always goes wrong."

Tim Belcher (2-7) gave up four runs and six hits in 5 2-3 innings for his second straight win and first at home after starting the year 0-7. Mike Gardiner, Detroit's fifth pitcher, got the final out for his third save.

Cal Eldred (3-6) allowed seven runs and 10 hits in dropping his third straight decision and fifth in his last six outings. He struck out eight in six innings.

Greg Vaughn was the lone bright spot for Milwaukee, hitting two homers.

Elsewhere in the AL it was: Kansas City 4, California 0; Cleveland 8, Toronto 0; Boston 9, Minnesota 2; Baltimore 6, New York 5 in 10 innings; Chicago 5, Oakland 2; and Seattle 8, Texas 2.

Royals 4, Angels 0

At Anaheim, Calif., David Cone pitched a one-hitter for his third straight shutout.

Cone (8-1) surrendered only a leadoff single to Chili Davis in the fifth and faced just 29 batters to become the AL's first eight-game winner.

Cone has won eight straight since dropping a 4-2 decision to Baltimore on April 6 — his first start of the season.

Terry Shumpert and Dave Henderson hit home runs in the third inning off Mark Langston (2-2).

Indians 8, Blue Jays 0

At Toronto, Dennis Martinez pitched a seven-hit shutout, his first in the AL in nearly 10 years, as the Indians snapped a seven-game road losing streak.

Martinez (3-4) struck out three and walked three for the 24th shutout of his career. Martinez, who last faced the Blue Jays as a Baltimore Oriole, allowed only two runners to reach second.

Albert Belle homered and drove in two runs and Carlos Baerga added two RBIs for the Indians.

Juan Guzman (4-5) allowed five runs and 11 hits in five innings.

Red Sox 9, Twins 2

At Minneapolis, Roger Clemens limited Minnesota to five hits in eight innings as the Red Sox stopped the Twins' winning streak at seven.

Clemens (5-2), who has allowed eight runs in 61 innings over his last eight starts, walked four and struck out seven in handing the Twins their first home loss in 10 games.

Damon Berryhill, Andre Dawson and Mo Vaughn homered for the Red Sox.

Jim Deshaies (2-5) allowed eight hits in six innings.

Orioles 6, Yankees 5, 10 innings

At New York, Jack Voigt's two-run single capped a two-out 10th inning rally as the Orioles snapped the Yankees' nine-game home winning streak.

With two out in the 10th, Harold Baines singled off Xavier Hernandez (2-2) and Leo Gomez doubled before Voigt singled in pinch-runner Lonnie Smith and Gomez.

Mark Williamson (2-0) allowed a tying homer to Jim Leyritz in the eighth but got the win. Lee Smith gave up Paul O'Neill's 10th homer in the 10th but closed it out for his major league-leading 17th save.

O'Neill went 3-for-4 to raise his major league-leading average to .475.

White Sox 5, Athletics 2

At Oakland, Calif., Frank Thomas drove in two runs to give the White Sox a sweep of the three-game series.

Jason Bere (5-1) allowed one run over six-plus innings to win his third consecutive start for the White Sox, who have won six of their last seven.

Canucks blank Maple Leafs, 2-0

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Cliff Ronning broke open a scoreless game with a goal at 17:35 of the third period and the Vancouver Canucks went on to a 2-0 victory over Toronto and a 3-1 lead over the Maple Leafs in the NHL Western Conference finals.

Ronning took a return pass from Sergio Momesso and beat goaltender Felix Potvin.

"It is a huge win for our club," Ronning said. "We still have to win one more game to get to where we all dream about playing," which is the NHL finals. Vancouver hasn't been in the finals since 1982.

Pavel Bure added an empty-net goal in the last minute, his playoff-high 13th.

Vancouver goaltender Kirk McLean recorded his second consecutive shutout and tied an NHL record with his fourth of the playoffs by stopping 29 shots. McLean hasn't allowed a goal in 135 minutes, 23 seconds.

The Canucks can win the best-of-7 series with a victory in Game 5 Tuesday at the Pacific Coliseum.

McLean was sharp in the opening period when the Leafs outshot Vancouver 11-7. McLean was tested in the second minute when Chris Govedaris broke in from the right boards, but the goalie easily handled the shot.

Govedaris, recalled May 11 from the minors, replaced winger Ken Baumgartner on Toronto's second line with Dave Andreychuk and Mike Eastwood.

Mike Gartner tried to instill a spark in the Leafs' attack with several hard-skating shifts in the first 10 minutes. Toronto also tried to get an edge by double-shifting Doug Gilmour, the playoff scoring leader with 27 points.

Vancouver's best scoring chance came late in the first when Ronning twice had shots from close range, including a rebound on which he fired wide.

Toronto had the better chances while outshooting Vancouver 9-4 in the second period. Mike Krushelnyski and Bill Berg both shot wide on scoring chances while killing a Toronto penalty.

Gartner also fired wide after Gilmour stripped the puck from Vancouver defenseman Brian Glynn and passed it to Gartner.

Vancouver captain Trevor Linden left the game briefly late in the second period when struck in the face by a puck that glanced off the stick of Eastwood.

Thousands call for action at AIDS vigil

By LISA ALCALAY KLUG
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) – As thousands of people lit up an evening AIDS rally with candles burning in paper cups, Jim Beitzel held up a sign explaining why he was there: "I miss 'em!" it said.

"My lover, Scott, my brother Bill, and too many friends, Roger, Jason, John, Robert, Fred, Scott T., Paul H., Bobby, Paul W., Winfried and Reny," the sign continued.

The 11th International AIDS Candlelight Memorial and Mobilization in San Francisco included a march from the city's largely gay Castro District to a rally at City Hall. Organizers said similar events took place Sunday in 243 cities worldwide, and, for the first time, in every U.S. state.

"It's an evening of public mourning, a celebration of lives passed, a renewal of commitment, a reminder to all those not attending that AIDS still has a major impact," said Amy Saisselin, 26, who helped organize the event.

In New York, about 30,000 people raised more than $5 million in a 6.2-mile walk that began and ended in Central Park, organizers said. The money goes to the Gay Men's Health Crisis, which provides AIDS services and education.

Some of the candlelight vigils were solemn, others spirited.

In Washington, demonstrators held a vigil across from the White House, then walked silently, candles in hand, down Pennsylvania Avenue to the Capitol.

In Los Angeles, people carried candles and chanted "Two, four, six, eight, we want a cure, we can't wait."

In New Orleans, Miguelina Vasconez was among the hundreds of people carrying candles through the French Quarter. Vasconez recalled her son, Jorge, who died Saturday of AIDS at the age of 39.

"We keep together so Jorge's spirit will always be here," said Vasconez, who marched with her sisters and friends.

Some of the 50 people with AIDS and their supporters who brought candles to a hospital in Johnstown, Pa., about 50 miles east of Pittsburgh, said they wanted to fight the idea that AIDS is only a big-city disease.

"There's this strange denial that HIV is affecting this area," said Bernice Adams, president of the Laurel Highlands AIDS Resource Council. "If you say people you work with are infected, people you go to school with, they don't believe it."

She said more than 60 people in Cambria and neighboring Somerset counties have been diagnosed with AIDS since 1981.

Michael Dunn spoke out at a prayer service attended by two dozen people in Johnson City, Tenn., where 80 people have died of AIDS.

"We are mindful of those who have suffered the tragedy and pain not only of a terrible disease, but also of the injustice of an uncaring world," said Dunn, of Downtown Christian Church.

More than 15 million people worldwide have been infected with HIV – the virus that causes AIDS – since the condition was recognized in the early 1980s, the World Health Organization says. About 350,000 AIDS cases have been reported in the United States.

North claims major victory in Yemen

SAN'A, Yemen (AP) – Northern Yemen today claimed to have seized an important, oil-rich province in its advance on Aden, capital of the breakaway south.

Meanwhile, international relief agencies prepared to move up to 5,000 Somali refugees from in and around a camp on the front lines in Yemen's nearly 3-week-old civil war.

Refugees say at least 175 Somalis have been killed in the cross fire. U.N. officials confirm some deaths there but say they do not know how many.

Yemen collapsed into all-out war between northern and southern forces May 5. The conservative north united with the formerly Marxist south on May 22, 1990 to form the first multiparty democracy on the Arabian peninsula.

But the alliance has been fraught with disagreements, and the south has accused the north of trying to dominate.

In a broadcast on the north's San'a radio, an official military source said northern troops Sunday seized a major military base in Ataq, the capital of oil-producing Shabwa province.

The official said the base was captured "with all its arms, ammunitions and installations," putting the entire province "under total control of the north."

Both sides have issued exaggerated claims throughout the fighting, and it was not possible to confirm the report.

Oil is the economic mainstay of this impoverished desert nation of 14 million people, and Shabwa has the most reserves, estimated at 5 billion barrels. The Saudi oil company Nimr, the French company Total, and Canadian Occidental have oil-prospecting concessions in the province.

The south on Friday announced it was seceding, a declaration rejected by the north.

Ali Salem al-Beidh, who was vice president of unified Yemen, was named president of the south's newly declared Democratic Republic of Yemen.

But a top assistant to President Ali Abdullah Saleh, the northern leader, warned that any international recognition of the south as independent would leave the 350,000 people in Aden exposed to "a consuming war."

Three people were killed and seven wounded when a northern missile hit a residential area near Aden airport Sunday, according to Aden radio. But the north denied it had targeted civilians.

Planning Minister Abdul-Karim el-Eryani, a senior Saleh aide, said Sunday the north's SS-21 missiles hit Aden airport, destroying about 80 percent of the southern air force's operating capabilities.

Saleh has demanded Beidh and his aides surrender for trial or leave the country to avert a bloodbath in Aden.

But Beidh vowed Sunday to fight on.

It was not known how long it would take the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees and the International Committee of the Red Cross to move the refugees from al-Kowt, 18 miles east of Aden, to their new camp at Ja'ar, 31 miles north.

About 1,500 people are believed still in the camp, while 1,200 mostly women and children live in a nearby village and several thousand others are believed to have fled into the surrounding desert.

Justices leave intact ruling condoning juror exclusion based on religious bias

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Supreme Court, which last month barred lawyers from keeping people off juries because of their sex, today left intact a Minnesota ruling that condoned a potential juror's exclusion based on his religion.

The justices, over two dissenting votes, refused to review a prosecutor's use of a peremptory, or automatic, challenge to exclude a man from jury service because he is a Jehovah's Witness.

The appeal turned down today called the prosecutor's action "court-sanctioned bigotry."

Today's action is not a ruling on the merits of the Minnesota case, and does not necessarily mean the justices will be content in future cases to let religion-based exclusions of potential jurors continue.

But Justice Clarence Thomas, in a dissenting opinion joined by Justice Antonin Scalia, said the court should have sent the Minnesota case back for further study in light of last month's decision.

In its April 19 ruling, the court said lawyers cannot use their peremptory, or automatic, challenges to potential jurors to exclude people solely because of their sex.

In a series of decisions since 1986, the court also had outlawed the use of such challenges to exclude people based on their race.

Edward Lee Davis was convicted of the Aug. 1, 1991, armed robbery of a fast food restaurant in St. Paul. He was sentenced to seven years and four months in prison.

During jury selection at Davis' trial, a state prosecutor used one peremptory challenge to exclude a black man.

Davis' lawyer objected to that challenge, invoking a series of Supreme Court rulings that bar lawyers from excluding potential jurors based on their race.

When asked by the judge to explain the peremptory challenge, the prosecutor said she had not relied on the man's race – but on his religion.

"I have a great deal of familiarity with the sect ... I would never, if I had a peremptory challenge left, fail to strike a Jehovah Witness from my jury," the prosecutor said.

"The Jehovah's Witness faith is of a mind the higher powers will take care of all things necessary. In my experience, Jehovah's Witness(es) are reluctant to exercise authority over their fellow human beings in this courthouse," she said.

The prosecutor had not questioned the excluded man about his faith. She later said she thought that would be inappropriate.

The Minnesota Supreme Court upheld Davis' ensuing conviction by a 4-3 vote. The state court ruled that Supreme Court rulings on race-based juror exclusions don't necessarily apply to religion-based exclusions.

"A juror's religious beliefs are inviolate, but when they are the basis for a person's moral value and produce societal views on such matters as the use of intoxicating liquor, cohabitation, necessity of medical treatment, civil disobedience and the like, it would not seem a peremptory strike based on those societal views should be attributed to a pernicious religious bias," the state court ruled.

The case is Davis vs. Minnesota, 93-6577.

Park's sale of beer worries parents

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) – Wet'N Wild's decision to sell beer this year at its Arlington park has drawn complaints from parents who wish the water park would have remained dry.

Three people have complained about the policy since the water slide park opened for the season May 15.

"It's just such a danger," said Linda Rosenberry, a teacher whose 16-year-old daughter, Alison, is a lifeguard trainee there.

Bill Monty, Wet'N Wild's marketing director, says there is no reason for concern. Parks in Las Vegas and Orlando, Fla., have sold beer for years without safety problems, Monty said.

Under the new policy, beer is available at the park from 10 a.m. until one hour before closing, Monty said. Beer drinkers must show identification and wear a special wristband, he said.

But that doesn't comfort some.

"In the past Wet'N Wild has been a baby-sitting service, even though people don't like to admit it," said Dani Van Wig, also a parent and teacher. "You buy your pass and you leave your kids there and take them to Six Flags the next day."
