COMBEST

Combest will visit this week

U.S. Rep. Larry Combest (R-Lubbock) will have a full day in Hereford on Wednesday.

Combest will hold a "town hall" meeting at 10 a.m.; speak to the Hereford Lions Club at noon, and meet with many ag-related groups at 1:30 p.m. All events will be held at the Hereford Community Center.

Combest will be in the district for the traditional Easter break for Congress and is hosting meetings throughout the 19th District.

Combest said the town hall meeting helps him know what his constituents think about issues, and also help the constituents know how he feels.

"By sharing our view in person, through letters and in frequent visits, I can represent the people of our region by listening when I cast their vote in Congress," said Combest.

The town hall meeting is open to the public, and no issue is off-limits for the meeting.

Combest will speak to the Hereford Lions Club and invited guests at noon.

At 1:30 p.m., Combest will speak to persons with an interest in agriculture, the meeting is sponsored by the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District. Jim Conkright of Hereford, a HPUWCD director, said the group has invited representatives of several organizations and businesses for more private visit with Combest.

Early voting starts Monday

Early voting in three elections to be held in Deaf Smith County on May 2 will begin Monday in the office of County Clerk David Ruland.

Residents of Hereford will elect four city commissioners and Hereford Independent School District voters will choose two trustees. Four seats on the Deaf Smith County Hospital District board also will be filled.

The entities conduct separate elections but voters may cast ballots early in a central location, the county clerk's office on the second floor of the courthouse.

Five candidates are seeking two at-large seats while Irene Cantu, Place 2, and Wayne Winget, Place 4, are unopposed in their bids to return to the City Commission. Running for the two at-large seats are incumbents Emory Brownlow and Roger Eades, as well as Robert Griego, Raul Valdez and Carey Black.

In the HSD board election, Mike Veazey is unopposed for re-election to Place 4 while another incumbent, Steve Wright, is facing Joe Flood for the Place 5 seat.

Four candidates, Boyd M. Foster and John Perrin, incumbents, Paul Abalos and Merle Clark, are on the ballot for election to four places on the hospital district board. Dr. Stan Fry and Craig Smith are not asking re-election to the board.

Leaders disappointed over prison, but planning ahead

By JOHN BROOKS
 Managing Editor

Local leaders were disappointed, but not too terribly depressed, about a site near Hereford not being chosen for a new state prison.

West Texas fared well in the selections made Friday by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice board, but the southwest Panhandle was left out. Bids from Hereford, Dimmitt and Muleshoe weren't chosen for the 24 facilities awarded.

"Sure, we're disappointed, but we've got to pick up and carry on," said F. Michael Carr, executive vice president of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, on Friday.

"Everything is in place for us to go on to something bigger," Carr said. "I think anyone who has participated in the process, anyone who was at the public hearing two weeks ago, sees the community is ready to work for bigger and better things."

Mike Hatley, coordinator for the Hereford Prison Task Force, felt Hereford gave the project its best shot.

"I don't know what more we could have done," Hatley said. "We knew TDCJ was very interested in our agriculture, and I think the committee did an excellent job of addressing those needs expressed by the TDCJ staff."

"They told us they were very interested in vegetables. I talked to the ag director and he told me how his kraut vats stayed empty a few months out of the year, and we showed him when our season was and how he'd be able to have kraut all year long. We showed them how we could fill their niche for potatoes and other vegetables."

"Maybe the board was just looking at the bottom line, and you can't blame them for that. When you look at someone's proposal and you see three sections of land priced at $1,000 an acre, that's hard not to consider."

Dalhart, a successful bidder in its third try for a prison, offered the three sections as part of its incentive package.

The local package included $150,000 for the TDCJ to buy or rent land (at its option) for vegetable production. Speedy Nieman, chairman of the local task force, said the incentive was put together so TDCJ would not be locked into land and have no place to go for crop rotation.

"If they wanted to lease a different place each year for 10 years, or whatever they wanted to do, that was fine with us," Nieman said.

Cancer drive very important to Reeve

By GEORGIA TYLER
 Staff Writer

A young Hereford wife, mother and teacher volunteers her time and talent to the American Cancer Society for a very special reason.

Jan Reeve has experienced the pain of losing a loved one to the dread disease and knows that the ACS can make a difference to cancer patients and their families.

Reeve will work Sunday with about 100 other volunteers in the annual door-to-door campaign in the Cancer Crusade. Nicky Walser is chairman of the Walk-a-Block drive and Reeve is serving as co-chairman.

Jan Reeve watched with that helpless feeling many have known as her mother, Joan Harwell, died in 1987 as a result of a massive assault of cancer on her body.

"My mother didn't have any insurance after she had a radical mastectomy in 1982," said Reeve, "and it would have been very difficult to pay for some things that the cancer society provided."

Sickroom items, such as a hospital bed and wheelchair, among others, were furnished the family by the ACS. Assistance on expense for at least one trip to Houston also was given by the support organization.

Reeve was newly married, to Mitch Reeve, and living in Friona when her mother learned cancer had invaded several parts of her body. She went to Houston's M.D. Anderson Hospital for treatment.

Members of the family united in their efforts to take care of Mrs. Harwell during her illness.

The daughter became acutely aware of the danger signals of cancer and has taken every opportunity, from serving with the ACS drive to giving a speech in a class at West Texas State University to call attention to the need for regular checkups.

"I'm not embarrassed to talk about it," she declared. "I made a talk on self-examination for breast cancer in a speech class at WT."

She encourages her friends and family members to have regular check-ups and mammograms at specified intervals. Having witnessed the illness of her mother as well as an aunt who died of breast cancer, Reeve is an activist, of the best kind.

"So many people don't understand what you go through and what it costs," said the 25-year-old Aikman school teacher.

Besides accepting donations for the American Cancer Society, workers Sunday afternoon will deliver educational materials about the disease and the organization.

Jan Reeve has worked with Nicky Walser to recruit clubs and groups to accept responsibility for areas of Hereford and to enlist individuals for a city block or two.

She admits to chastising some of her friends who say, "I just can't do that," when asked to participate in the drive.

"I understand what they mean, but if people had to go through what my family did and could see what happens, they wouldn't feel that way," she said.

Reeve was expecting her only child, Kinsey Joan, when her mother died in December 1987. Since then, she and her husband moved to Hereford and she returned to college, receiving her bachelor's degree last August from WTSU.

Busy as she is with teaching and keeping her home, Reeve is dedicated to making others aware of the disease that struck so closely in her life.

If enough volunteers are not available for all the blocks of Hereford, she will take her turn at ringing doorbells, too.

Volunteers in the campaign will pick up their packets at the Hereford State Bank hospitality room Sunday at 1:30 p.m. During the next three hours, until 4:30 p.m., the volunteers will knock on doors all over Hereford.

A nametag clearly marked with the American Cancer Society logo will identify each worker.

Nicky Walser said some homes in Hereford have received solicitation letters for cancer donations but the organization is not the American Cancer Society.

"I don't know who is doing it, but the ACS is not sending letters asking for money," she reminded. The ACS symbol, the inverted sword, appears on all legitimate society materials.

While accepting contributions is a part of the Walk-a-Block program, at least as important is distribution of educational pamphlets and brochures.

Attention this year is focused, in particular, on breast cancer and skin cancer.

Services of the American Cancer Society are listed in a guide for Deaf Smith County patients and their families.

For Jan Reeve, there seems not to be any one facet of the ACS program more important than another. Having seen so closely the ravages of cancer, though, she is devoted to educating as many persons as possible about the disease and to explaining services of the ACS.

Volunteer knows ACS value

Jan Reeve, co-chairman of the American Cancer Society's Walk-a-Block campaign Sunday afternoon in Hereford, gives her time to the ACS because she knows, personally, the benefits the ACS offers cancer victims and their families.

USDA lowers forecast on wheat

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's wheat reserves continue to dwindle toward record lows while consumer prices for cereals and baked goods keep increasing, the government reports.

The Agriculture Department on Friday lowered its estimate of U.S. wheat supplies, citing slightly higher export prospects.

It now expects 366 million bushels in storage bins when the next crop year begins June 1, down from earlier estimates of 390 million bushels.

The 366 million bushels would leave the country with its smallest wheat reserves since June 1974. But domestic and international demand for wheat is greater today than two decades ago.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department said Friday that consumer prices for cereals and bakery products rose again in March, the third increase in as many months.

A consumer activist said prices for bread and baked goods could increase sharply this spring, especially if the Agriculture Department continues to subsidize wheat exports aggressively.

Rod Leonard, executive director of the Community Nutrition Institute, called on USDA to stop using subsidies to sell U.S. wheat abroad.

"These's no justification to subsidize exports at a time when the grain situation is going to be pushing up bread and baked good prices, and generally pushing up food prices," he said.

"It's like playing Russian roulette, but you're putting two bullets in the chamber instead of one," he said. Consumers are now paying twice - their taxes finance the subsidies and they spend more at the grocery store.

Leonard said it's now a seller's market for wheat and "it's going to remain that way all through this year."

Lowest wheat reserves since 1974 may send prices very high

But USDA spokesman Roger Runnington said the department has no plans to call off its subsidized wheat sales. USDA officials contend the sales send an important signal to the European Community, which also subsidizes exports, during international trade talks.

Analysts, however, worry that this year's crop will be unable to replenish the falling wheat stocks if there is a drought or other unusual weather. Winter wheat plantings this year are off slightly from 1991, although the spring wheat crop is expected to be greater than a year earlier.

The Labor Department said consumer prices for cereals and baked goods were up 0.3 percent in March. Prices for those goods were also up 0.3 percent in February, and 1 percent in January. Wheat prices have also been increasing steadily at the farm.

Bush says no sleaze is planned

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush says politics will drive his legislative agenda this year, but he insists he wants to focus on those issues - not the negative attacks critics say characterized his 1988 campaign for the White House.

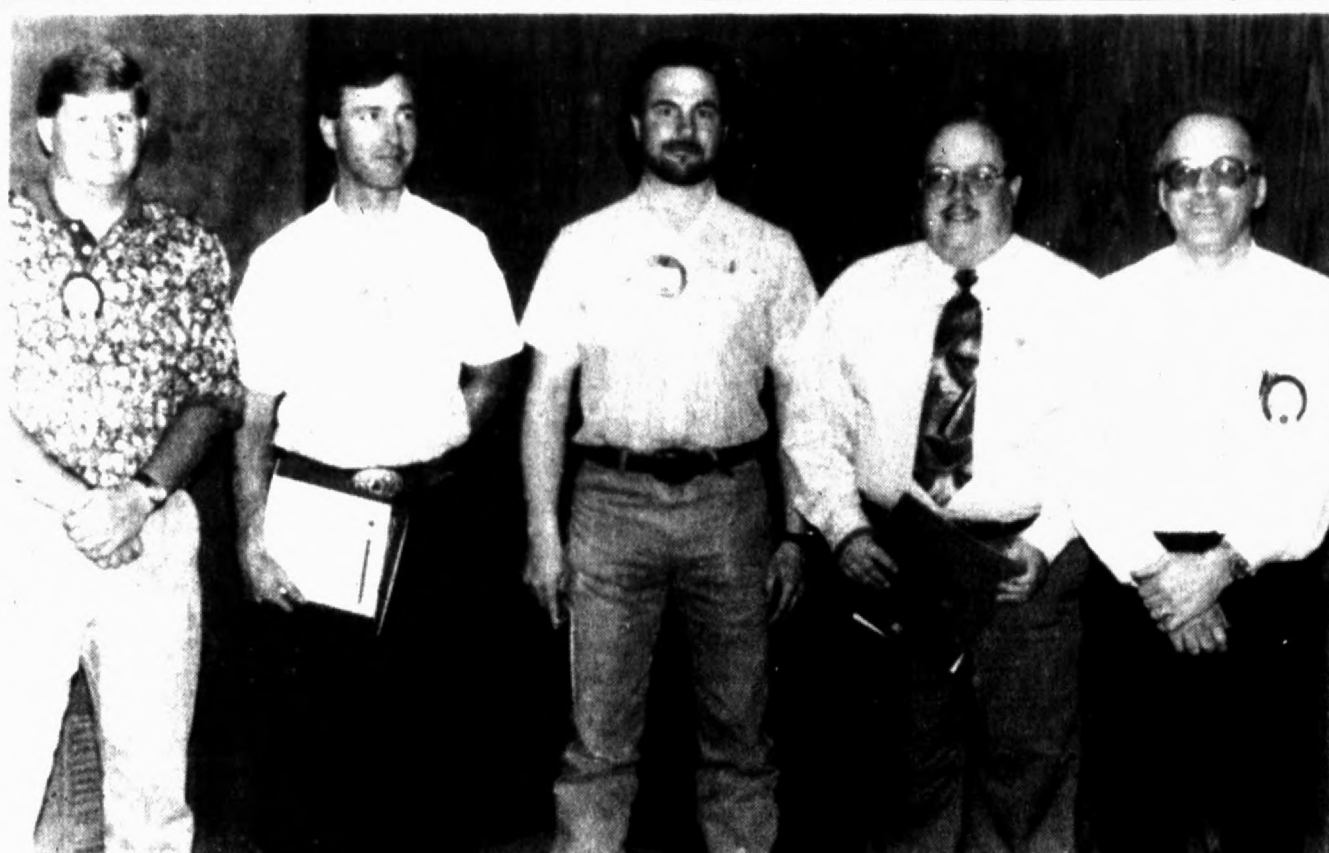

At a news conference Friday, Bush also heatedly denied that the White House and his own campaign were in disarray, as has been widely reported.

"If I were dissatisfied, you'd know about it loud and clear," the president said. He made a point of denying a story that he had summoned his son George to help sort out

TEA team to visit schools

An accreditation team from the Texas Education Agency will be working on a pilot project in Hereford this week.

The team will hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the high school auditorium. The hearing will be an opportunity for the public to learn about the new accreditation process planned by TEA, and to give input about student performance.

During the week, the team will focus on student performance and planning at the campus and district levels. The accreditation team will not make any specific official findings, but will help the district with its site-based management plan and other new campus programs.

Counterfeit chic is big business

EDITOR'S NOTE - Cheap imitations of luxury items with famous labels are as easy to buy on the streets these days as a hot dog. Indeed, the international trade in counterfeit merchandise amounts to as much as $100 billion a year. So it's small wonder that agents of brand-name manufacturers are searching the globe to ferret out fakes.

By MARILYN AUGUST
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) - Is it or isn't it? Is it Chanel, Cartier or Louis Vuitton? Or is it some cheesy imitation hawked by a sidewalk vendor to status-seeking, bargain-hunting tourists?

From Mexican workshops run by seasoned Korean craftsmen to seedy basement sweatshops in Bangkok, Thailand, counterfeit luxury items - hundreds of thousands each year - flood the international market.

French makers of luxury products, anxious to protect what has mushroomed into the country's second-largest export industry, have hired a battalion of lawyers, private detectives, computer wizards and highly paid executives who crisscross the globe combating copycats.

"Counterfeiting is no mom-and-pop business. It's linked to organized crime and it's often a business used to launder money," says Philippe Boutron, head of the legal department at the Louis Vuitton leather goods house.

The knockoff business has spread to such diverse sectors as pharmaceuticals, spare automobile and airplane parts, computer software, pesticides, and audiovisual, medical and electrical equipment.

Counterfeiting has cost 100,000 jobs in Europe and 130,000 in the United States, according to estimates by Cartier, one of Europe's leading jewelers and watchmakers.

"Counterfeiting is an economic phenomenon that will flourish as long as the risk is small and the profit great. With loopholes in the law and lax authorities almost everywhere, the temptation is just too great," says Marc Frisanco, who heads legal services at Cartier.

In 1991, counterfeiting involving 60 countries totaled an estimated $70 billion to $100 billion, roughly 5 percent of the world trade, according to officials in the luxury industry.

Cracking down on the copycats is big business too. Chanel vice president Bernard Lehmann oversees a full-time anti-counterfeit squad of eight, a huge computer, and a fleet of globe-trotting inspectors and agents armed with tape recorders, cameras and locals who buy the fakes for evidence.

The yearly cost of this operation for Chanel, perhaps the world's most-copied firm, is about $5.3 million.

Lehmann himself has had plenty of experience in the back alleys workshops. On a recent trip to Korea to ferret out a clever imitator of the classic, two-tone Chanel flat-heeled shoes, he posed as a South African retailer.

"We waited until all but the last worker had left the factory. Either I or my partner, our detective, would distract him, while the other rifled drawers and closets. We never found the shoes, but we did lay our hands on something even better - rolls of authentic Chanel labels," he recalls.

STREET VENDOR IN NEW YORK'S CHINATOWN
...Selling scarves with the Chanel label.

"We grabbed them and ran. I've never been so scared in my life."

The major French firms pool their resources abroad and share information to bring the counterfeiters to justice.

"Almost every time we've tracked down a manufacturer, he's usually sewing not only Louis Vuitton bags, but Fendi, Chanel, Dior and others," Boutron says.

Given the fierce competition among the luxury houses, each label has adopted its own anti-counterfeit strategies.

Cartier has been destroying fakes with great fanfare for the past 10 years. Once a year, Chanel proudly advertises the results of its court cases in a double-page newspaper spread.

"When manufacturers learn that one of their colleagues got caught, fined and ordered to pay us 1 million francs ($178,000) in damages, they think twice," Lehmann says.

Vuitton, with a team of more than 100, also targets consumers. On the walls of Boutron's handsome office is a poster showing a stylish Japanese woman carrying two LV bags with one hand and hiding her face in her passport with the other. The caption reads: "This girl has lost face because she's bringing counterfeit goods into her country."

The poster, and others like it from France, are prominently displayed at major Japanese airports.

Industry executives emphasize that purchasing fakes - whether Lacoste shirts, Cartier watches or quilted Chanel handbags - is as much a crime as manufacturing and selling them.

"Theoretically, you could get a fine and three-year jail sentence for knowingly purchasing and carrying a fake Chanel bag," Lehmann says. He displayed three closets full of fake merchandise, including wine and champagne, which, of course, Chanel does not produce.

Criminal prosecution seems a remote threat to the multitude of Western tourists around the world whose prize vacation souvenirs often include the cheap rip-offs.

And cheap they are. Imitation Chanel perfume - which smells genuine but lacks staying power - costs only a few dollars in Indonesia, where it is made, while the real fragrance purchased on the Champs-Elysees in Paris runs about $60.

A fake Louis Vuitton bag hawked on Manhattan's Lower East Side costs $100 while uptown, Saks Fifth Avenue sells the real McCoy for about $1,000.

Creators of luxury goods say their high prices are justified by their use of only the finest materials and most skilled craftsmen. Cartier adds that they spend up to four years developing a new design. In addition, the products are made in France by workers who earn considerably more than their Third World sweatshop counterparts. Finally, consumers pay for snob appeal, ownership of a real Chanel bag or Cartier watch or Vuitton bag.

"Going after the counterfeiters is a form of after-sales service for our customers," Boutron says. "An elegant woman doesn't want to have her cleaning lady show up toting the same bag she does."

A Turkish lawyer representing several foreign companies says a large majority of counterfeit operations cater specifically to the demands of tourist resorts.

"The retailers tell the producers, 'I need 2,000 Boss shirts, so many handbags, this many hats, for the coming season,' and orders are compiled and produced during the winter," says the lawyer, who requested anonymity.

In Thailand, home to some of the world's worst offenders, along with Korea, officials say they simply supply what the tourists want. The counterfeit industry is believed to be vast, though no figures are available on how many jobs it provides.

"In a single raid we confiscated 100,000 spare watch parts worth $1 million," Frisanco says. "That should give some indication of the enormity of the phenomenon and its importance to Thailand's overall economy."

Cartier manufactures about 300,000 watches a year. In a single raid in Paraguay last year, local authorities seized 40,000 fakes.

Texas prison board decisions please some, anger others

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Board of Criminal Justice on Friday enacted a massive prison expansion plan that would add more than 25,000 prison beds in 29 communities.

The project includes the proposed purchase of six controversial prison facilities from N-Group Inc., which are located in remote areas of the state.

The nine-member panel also accepted a facility and site from Pampa to create a 300- to 400-bed pre-parole prison, and approved building a 550-bed psychiatric hospital in Lubbock.

"When we get through with these next 25,000 beds, we will have probably - consistent with the California prison program - the largest prison system in America," said Selden Hale, the board's chairman.

The California Department of Corrections system is authorized to have just under 82,000 beds by October 1993, said CDC spokesperson Christine May.

Texas jails will have more than 70,000 beds following this expansion of 30 sites in 29 cities.

The corrections system estimates it will spend nearly $642 million over the next four to five years to build the prisons, with each unit taking between 18 months and two years to construct.

State lawmakers voted last summer for the board to create 25,000 prison beds, including 12,000 intended for substance abuse rehabilitation. The 3,000 beds to be bought from the N-Group comes from that allocation, officials said.

Several board members said they feared entering an agreement with N-Group because of the company's tainted reputation, while others voiced concerns with the remote locations of the firm's six sites.

Patrick and Michael Graham, brothers who headed N-Group, were indicted in Pecos County in October for state antitrust violations for not taking bids on their construction and management contracts.

"This is a poor decision that would affect the system long-term. It is nothing more than a bail out by a quick-talking, snake oil salesman," said board member Allan Polunsky of San Antonio.

Polunsky suggested the state try leasing the buildings, a plan he said would "immediately" relieve county jail overcrowding but would not burden the state with ownership of the property. His motion failed.

Prison executive director James Lynaugh said leasing the prisons could cost the state as much as $900,000 per month. He said by owning them instead, "we could use (the sites) for four or five years and come out with no loss to the taxpayers."

Panelist Ellen Halbert of Austin said the "reality is that we're in a crises situation and we need the beds." Her motion to purchase the site was approved 7-2.

N-Group's facilities are in Cotulla, Fort Stockton, Lufkin, Marlin, San Saba and Tulia.

Bowie County, Karnes County, Wichita Falls received 2,250-bed maximum-security prisons and six others were awarded minimum- or medium-security sites.

Those areas include Amarillo, Cuero, Dalhart, Fort Stockton, Colorado City County and Rusk.

Four 1,000-bed substance abuse treatment centers were apportioned for Beaumont, Bryan-College Station, Edinburg and Bonham.

The 500-bed rehabilitation prisons will be in Breckenridge, Brownfield, Brownwood, El Paso, Hondo, Jasper, Liberty, Plainview, San Diego and Wood County.

The Pampa facility was donated by the city, which purchased the land and site where the jail will be built. Chairman Hale said the deal is a "true give" which does not count against the mandated 25,000 beds.

Representatives from many of the 47 cities on the board's short-list of finalists for the various facilities attended Friday's meeting. Many supporters cheered when their cities were named.

"The image of prisons has changed in the last five or six years," said Charles Walters, a development official from Texarkana involved in Bowie County's winning bid. "Prisons are good neighbors... they're like any other industry, and are good citizens."

A 2,250-bed unit will provide 800 jobs and an annual payroll of $16 million, while a 1,000-bed unit would generate a $6 million yearly payroll and 317 jobs, officials said.

"It's been a real political feud. Politics came into play more than they should have," said Robert Raney, of Overton, which was unsuccessful in its prison bid.

Weight Loss Surprises Researchers

WASHINGTON --A nutrition organization was hopeful that a nutritionally complete "hi-tech" food tablet would help erase world hunger problems, until a study revealed that one of the ingredients could cause significant weight loss.

Although other studies and scientists may not agree, researchers in Europe found that the ingredient, a natural plant colloid, actually caused people to lose weight, even though specifically instructed not to alter normal eating patterns, according to one study published in the prestigious British Journal of Nutrition. Researchers in an earlier study had speculated that the weight loss was due to a decrease in the intestinal absorption of calories.

While the project of National Dietary Research, aptly named Food Source One, would not be used to successfully fulfill its original goal, the formula, which has since been improved with other natural colloids has been a windfall for some overweight people. A Daytona Beach, Florida woman fighting a weight battle for 12 years used the product on the recommendation of her physician and lost 30 pounds. She stated, "Not only have I lost 30 pounds but my cholesterol has dropped from 232 to 143. I have two closets full of clothes which have not fit me in two years that I can now wear." In a separate report, a telephone interview revealed that a Wilmington, North Carolina pharmacist lost 14 pounds in 3 weeks on the product and was never hungry.

Food Source One tablets are part of National Dietary Research's comprehensive plan to bring a rapid end to obesity in this country. A variety of nutritionally sound diet plans, specially prepared by NDR, accompany each bottle and provide a natural, drug free alternative for confronting the problem of obesity.

Local TEC office wins two awards

The Hereford office of the Texas Employment Commission received two awards at the recent convention of the International Association of Personnel in Employment Security in Austin.

David Hernandez and Troyce Workman attended the convention. They received honors for meeting all placement standards and an American Legion honor for work with veterans.

"The awards are significant for Hereford because we were in competition with all TEC offices in the state," said Hernandez.

Hernandez has been area manager for TEC in Hereford for three years. He is president of the Amarillo chapter of IAPES, which serves the Panhandle and South Plains.

Workman is classroom training coordinator for the Job Training Partnership Act here.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says setting a good example for your children takes all the fun out of middle age.

If the meek shall inherit the earth, so be it. We just hope they stay meek after they get it.

We were on the way home from a five-day golfing and sightseeing trip Friday when we learned the disappointing news--Hereford was not chosen for a prison site.

The quest for a prison facility was a different type of industrial development experience but one factor remains constant in the search for new industry--it's a longrange project and one that is sometimes very complex.

We're happy for Dalhart, since we didn't land a facility. Dalhart had the edge on incentives and apparently the edge on political connections. Dalhart offered 2,000 acres of land with some center pivot irrigation units. If they come out ahead after what they paid, then more power to them.

The TDCJ board's decision to buy six private prisons hurt the chances of landing a facility. We hope they got them at a bargain after they discussed how poorly constructed they were and termed them as "white elephants" sitting in the communities.

The Hereford task force decided from the start of the project to offer only what we could justify in landing such a facility. With the importance that TDCJ placed on agriculture, we thought Deaf Smith County had a real chance. After all, either Deaf Smith or Hidalgo County rank first and second in ag products year after year.

The disappointment will soon pass for those who worked so hard on putting this proposal together. We'll go back to the drawing board and start planning to attract some other type of industry.

With spring approaching, a young man's fancy turns to love. But young men should remember that appearances are important.

Roy McQueen of the Snyder Daily News tells the story about a young college student riding next to an older man on an airplane. The young man asked his elder for the time of day. The old man continued to look out the window and didn't respond.

Assuming that his question hadn't been heard, the young man again, in a louder voice, asked for the time. "Well," mumbled the young man, "I guess the old geezer is deaf."

"No I ain't deaf," snapped the man. The young man was embarrassed and tried to explain that he has asked the question twice without an answer.

"Sonny, if I told you what time it is, we'd likely start chatting and chances are we'd get friendly. At the airport, I'd probably introduce you to my daughter waiting to pick me up."

"Being a generous man, I'd probably invite you to eat dinner with us and I'd likely offer you a place to spend the night. You definitely would think my daughter is beautiful, and you'd likely get friendly. Before long, you'd come calling to my house on a regular basis, and that might be okay with me and maybe not."

"Then you'd have a spark in your eyes, and before long you'd probably ask my permission to marry my daughter. I might even say 'yes' and that's the reason I ain't going to tell you the time. I don't want my beautiful daughter to marry any worthless bum that can't even afford a watch."

Babbling Brooks

Okay, I've heard three leaders say we need to do something while we have all this cohesiveness and blah blah.

Let's do something different this time.

Let's do something. To Chamber President Charles Greenawalt:

The plans and goals are already in place. Let's implement them.

After the Department of Energy announced they weren't dumping any nuclear waste out northwest of here, many people in this county shared in the process of planning for the future. There were economic goals and social goals. Committees were formed and stuff was looked at; you know how all of that works.

They came up with the plan, and the plan was good.

Then it got filed on the shelf, right next to Goals For Progress, also known as GoPro. GoPro had been done about 10 years before. Committees were formed and they looked at stuff. They came up with economic goals and social goals and plans. It was all good stuff.

It went on the shelf--right next to a plan that was done in the 1960s by some guy down state. The guy down state had some lousy projections (something about Hereford being 100,000 by now), but guess what? He had the same social and economic goals and plans as GoPro and the post-nuke group.

We've planned and goaled ourselves to death.

I addressed the beginning of this to Mr. Greenawalt only because he mentioned the need for goals and plans at the Chamber banquet. I hope Charles can maybe use what is in place and get us, together, going.

It's time for the rest of us to put our work where our mouths are.

It is so easy to sit back and criticize. That darn Chamber, when are they going to do something? Those guys down at the city, the county, the school. Blah blah blah blah blah.

You can do it. You had a taste of what it takes with the deal over the prison. We didn't get the prison. It's time to get going, right now, on something for us.

And don't sit there whining and moaning about Plainview got something again and we didn't, and those guys in Amarillo got something and we didn't, and Tulia, good grief, Tulia? And Dalhart? Oh, my.

It's time to get up, dust ourselves off, take what is in place and get to work.

The town we save may be our own.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

I would like to thank City Commissioner James McDowell for causing the Hotel-motel Tax issue to be made public. This tax is levied for the purpose of generating funds to be used for promotion of tourism activities in Hereford.

I question the Chamber of Commerce defense of these issues. If the money the City gives the Chamber to promote tourism in Hereford is public tax dollars, then what was wrong with questioning these expenditures in public?

I, personally, hope that when the City Commission and the Chamber of Commerce get together on creating a budget for these funds, that they direct the funds more directly to programs that will benefit tourism and less for the purpose of administration.

Everyone would like to support the Chamber of Commerce and the city Commission in Hereford. Making information public is the fastest way to create trust and generate positive attitudes.

Thanks, again, to Mr. McDowell.

Sincerely,
Ron Weishaar

An AP News Analysis

It's tough to jump-start campaign

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - Jump-starting a stalled, suspended presidential campaign isn't necessarily impossible. But nobody's succeeded at it.

Paul Tsongas wasn't likely to break the pattern. His flirtation with rejoining the race ended on Thursday, three weeks after he suspended his campaign.

So he is back on hold, a candidate but not a campaigner, essentially conceding the Democratic nomination to Bill Clinton. Tsongas is on most of the remaining presidential primary ballots, and he said if people still want to vote for him, fine, it will serve to reinforce his economic growth message.

"I intend to have my voice heard," he said.

In differing circumstances, other candidates have tried to take the same role in prior campaigns, to little avail. They shared the same problem: they weren't winning and money was running short.

Gary Hart quit, came back, and got trounced in 1988. Edmund S. Muskie suspended his battered 1972 campaign but didn't end it, hoping that the party might ultimately turn back to him, a call that never came.

"I don't think like normal politicians think," the former Massachusetts senator said during the will-he-or-won't-he guessing game he invited.

But in the exercise, Tsongas sounded more like a standard candidate than when he was campaigning as the different Democrat, the one risking unpopular positions to tell his party that it must change and make business its ally to become a force for economic growth.

Tsongas said his message was a winner even if he was not. "The messenger was sacrificed to the message," he said.

He spoke of calls from Democrats around the country, urging him back to the race.

"We did not have the money, we had to get out," he had said in Washington on Tuesday. Hours later, after a running a surprising second in the New York primary, he said money wasn't the question and that he could get enough for a campaign that would be "something more low key."

As he outpolled the campaigning

Jerry Brown in New York, 29 percent to 26 percent, Tsongas said the question was one of analyzing Clinton's showing.

That wasn't very complex: Clinton won New York and three other primaries.

"The reality is that if you look at the delegates, the role that I was faced with is simply trying to prevent someone from a first ballot victory," he said Thursday, announcing that he wouldn't resume the campaign.

He said that would have made him a spoiler, and marked him as just another politician.

"If we had the money, we would have won," Tsongas told the American Business Conference in Washington on Tuesday, before New York voted. "...To get out because I didn't have the money was excruciating."

"If I made some major blunder or it was the wrong message, then you could get out and live happily ever after," he said. "But when you get out because you didn't have the money to carry a message that was working is the most difficult decision I ever made in my life."

It takes money to win. The opposite also is true: winning attracts money. Tsongas said he really lost in 1991, for lack of the funds to set up state organizations. By the time the election year began, he said, "we were a poverty-stricken campaign, entered 1992 in debt, with no field organization..."

When Gary Hart renewed his quest for the 1988 nomination, after quitting in controversy in an "other women" controversy not unlike the one Clinton weathered last winter, he said he was back because of his message on issues.

"I have the power of ideas and I can govern this country," he said. "Let the people decide."

They decided against him, and after a marginal showing in the New Hampshire primary, Hart dropped from the active campaign, although he did not withdraw as a candidate until late spring.

Muskie entered the 1972 campaign as the odds-on favorite, but stumbled in the primaries and ended "active participation" in the campaign late that April. Muskie said he didn't have the money to keep campaigning, but that he wasn't withdrawing, and would continue to speak on the issues.

He tried, but he was not a factor in the balance of the campaign that led to the nomination and landslide defeat of Sen. George McGovern.

Twenty years later, Tsongas is in a similar situation, far behind a candidate who seems flawed but keeps widening his lead.

But giving up is hard to do. Besides, there's always next time.

Will he seek the nomination again if it's open in 1996?

"I will answer that question in mid-November."

THE VOICE OF BUSINESS

A REGULATORY DEVIL'S ADVOCATE

by Dr. Richard L. Leshner, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON -- The three-month moratorium on new regulations announced by the Bush administration comes as a welcome respite, and will no doubt produce some limited benefits to the economy, but the basic problem of excessive regulation remains.

Thomas Hopkins, a former economist for the Office of Management and Budget, has estimated that federal regulation costs taxpayers more than $400 billion every year, or upwards of $4,000 per household. This year will see that extraordinary burden increased by some $70 billion.

Even now, some 122,400 employees of 52 federal regulatory agencies are grinding out new regulations by the barrel, far surpassing the notorious regulatory explosion that occurred during the Carter administration. Against such an avalanche of new rules, a three-month moratorium offers only limited, temporary relief.

Even worse, the really expensive new regulations that do the most damage to our economy are required by law and are thus beyond the reach of the moratorium. The most obvious example is environmental regulation which accounts for 40 percent of the government's regulatory budget, and exacts an annual toll of $100 billion on our economy. In only three years, spending by the Environmental Protection Agency has soared 31 percent. The new Clean Air Act approved in 1990 will add another $25 billion per year to that total.

Meanwhile, business is looking down the barrel of new regulatory programs that threaten to impose vast expenses on the private sector -- the 1990 Americans with Disabilities Act, the 1990 Nutrition Labeling and Education Act, and the 1990 Pollution Prevention Act. These laws are kicking into effect now; their impact will be felt in terms of higher prices and lost jobs within a few months.

In light of the prolonged recession, and the awesome cost of regulatory programs, Congress should be looking for ways to alleviate the impact of regulation on our economy. Instead, Congress is plotting even more new regulatory laws.

Without question, federal regulatory programs are born of the best of intentions. Also, many regulations related to safety and environmental protection are worthwhile, necessary and cost effective.

But it is equally clear that many of these rules produce little discernible benefit, and that some -- such as the rule requiring asbestos be removed from buildings -- probably create more hazards than they eliminate.

There is something fundamentally wrong with a system that permits so many foolish rules to see the light of day. We need some sort of regulatory devil's advocate empowered to challenge these programs on the drawing board, subjecting them to a no nonsense cost-benefit test, and to kill the ones that don't pass.

YOUR first CHOICE IN HOME IMPROVEMENT LOANS

There's no place like home. But you've let it go, you've put it off, you've looked the other way as long as you can. With the help of First National Bank there is no excuse for ignoring that leaky faucet, the chipped paint, those cracks in the concrete another day. Oh! You were thinking a little bigger? Maybe a sun deck? How 'bout a fireplace or a new covered patio? Well if there is one thing better than a new home, it's making improvements and adding special touches to the home you already live in and love. So don't put it off another day. Start planning, and see the First, first about a Home Improvement Loan. Who knows? With a touch of paint, a shingle or two, and a little help from First National, something old could feel like something new again.

—YOUR EYES—

EYEGLASSES/SUNGLASSES

For people who don't like to have to switch between snow tires and regular ones, there are all-weather tires. And for folks who don't want to have to change between sunglasses and regular glasses, there are photochromatic lenses that can function as sunglasses or regular glasses depending on ambient light conditions.

These lenses contain millions of light-sensitive crystals that react to both visible and ultraviolet light. As you go outdoors in the sunlight, the glasses automatically darken within about 60 seconds; indoors, they lighten again. The lenses darken more on sunny days than on cloudy ones, because the ambient light is brighter.

These "magic" lenses are available in brown or gray tints for most prescriptions, and they are just as effective for bifocals as for single-vision glasses. It takes very little time for wearers to become accustomed to this automatic sunlight protection that offers clear vision indoors and out.

8th graders win Hereford JH track meet

At least there's a race for second

Hereford seventh-grader Anthony Castillo approaches the finish-line in the 800-meter run in the Hereford Junior High track meet held Friday at Whiteface Stadium. Castillo won the event by nearly nine seconds.

Hereford's eighth grade track team dominated the junior high track meet held Friday at Whiteface Stadium, scoring more than twice as many points as the second-place team.

Hereford's eighth graders accumulated 197 points. Borger, in second, had 95.

"Today, these guys wanted it," Coach Chris Christopher said. "It was the home crowd, the home parents, the home coaches. You could see it in their eyes. They really wanted it."

"We've improved. The first meet we had 182 (points). The second meet we had 186. You can see progress with what they're doing. Everybody's moving up."

Hereford's seventh grade team finished third in the seventh grade division with 64 points. Plainview with 192 and Pampa with 158 1/2 got the lion's share of points in the division.

The Hereford seventh graders got wins in two events. Anthony Castillo blew away the field in the 800-meter run. His time of 2 minutes and 15.18 seconds beat the second-place finisher by nearly nine seconds.

Anthony Puente won the 110 hurdles in 19.23 seconds.

The eighth grade team got three wins from Joe Ricenbaw. He took the 110 hurdles in 17.67 seconds, the 300 hurdles in 44.59 and the long jump with a leap of 18 feet, 2 1/4 inches.

Marquise Brown got the other individual win, in the 100-meter dash with a time of 11.23 seconds.

Hereford's eighth-graders swept the relays. Wins in relays are worth 20 points each.

The 400-meter relay team was Ricenbaw, Brown, Todd Radford and Freddy Valdez. They won in 46.77 seconds--a second and a half faster than Borger.

The 800 relay team of Radford, Valdez, Jason Escamilla and Armando Zambrano won in 1:39.79--two seconds ahead of Pampa.

The 1,600 team of Brown, Zambrano, Hugo Reyes and Jacob Moreno won in 3:47.74--14 seconds ahead of Plainview.

Pampa nips Herd JV on bad ruling

A controversial play in the top of the seventh helped Pampa's junior varsity score a run to beat Hereford's JV 3-2 Friday at Whiteface Field.

Pampa had a man on first and no outs. A Pampa batter hit a long fly ball to left field, where it bounced over the fence for a ground-rule double. The runner who was on first-- possibly seeing the ball go over--held up at third, as he should have, but home plate umpire Bill Watts waved him home, saying the runner had "established second base." According to the rules of baseball, the runner should have gotten two bases from where he was when the play started. He should have stayed at third.

Hereford got something going in the bottom of the seventh, but the ball didn't bounce the Whitefaces' way. With two outs, Shama Hernandez drew a walk. Hernandez, one of the team's speediest players, didn't go on the first pitch, but did try to steal on the second pitch. Elijah Walker hit a grounder up the middle that would have been a hit if the shortstop were playing his normal position. With the shortstop covering the steal attempt, Walker was an easy out at first.

Ray Hastings pitched the complete game for Hereford and picked up his first loss (5-1). He struck out four, gave up four hits and allowed no walks.

Pampa scored its first two runs in the second and third innings--both times on triples to center field combined with a throwing error to third base.

Hereford scored single runs in the second and fourth. In the second Andrew Tijerina tripled and scored on Josh Tice's single. In the fourth, Hastings singled, went to third on Tice's single and scored on Castillo's single.

"It was a real good defensive ball game on both sides," Coach Henry Perez said. "We play them again today (Saturday) and I think we'll come out on top."

Boys' golf team back in 2nd

The Hereford boys' golf team moved into second place in the district race Friday.

Hereford totaled 315 at Palo Duro Creek (formerly Hunsley Hills) in Canyon in the third of five district rounds.

Borger shot a 322 Friday, giving the Bulldogs a three-round total of 964. Hereford's 315 made its total 960. Pampa stretched its lead to 30 strokes with a 300 Friday, giving the Harvesters a total of 930.

Randall is in fourth place at 1,047 after a 349 Friday, which means it's probably a three-team race for the two regional berths. Next is Hereford's junior varsity at 1,079 (after a 352 today); Pampa's JV at 1,086; Caprock at 1,108; Randall's JV at 1,118; Dumas at 1,119; Borger's JV at 1,183; and Dumas' JV at 1,238.

Hereford's Jayson Mines shot a 74

Friday to stay in the middle of a pack that's fighting for individual honors. Mines' 74 gives him a three-round 230. Cory Reneau of Borger and Brandon Brashears of Pampa are at 228, Pampa's Jay Earp is at 229, and Mines is tied with Cory Stone of Pampa at 230.

Hereford's Cory Newton is a relatively distant sixth at 236, but he's still in the hunt with two rounds to go--including the last one in Hereford April 18.

The girls' team took a week off from district competition to play in the Amarillo Relays. The Lady Whitefaces stand third with a 376. Borger is second at 368, but Amarillo High is way ahead at 323.

Two teams trail Hereford but are within range to overtake the Lady Whitefaces. Pampa is fourth with a 383, and Plainview is fifth at 390.

Individually, Hereford's Paula Britten is seventh at 90, behind all five Sandie golfers and Rebecca Holcomb of Borger (89). Also playing for the Herd Friday were Jennifer Prater, 92; Kelly Kelso, 95; Cecelia Albracht, 99; and Dusty Saul, 99.

Listed below are the boys' scores Friday and the varsity players' three round totals.

Varsity:

Jayson Mines: 74--230

Cory Newton: 79--236

Mikel Walser: 81--243

Kevin Kelso: 81--252

Clay Cantrell: 84--258

Rangers lose first of season

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

When a batter gets beamed, there's no telling how much hitter will ever get back in the box.

Tony Conigliaro had his season stopped by a fastball to the face in 1967, and his stay in the majors was shortened. Dickie Thon and Paul Blair also had part of their careers taken away by hits in the head.

Ron Cey, meanwhile, bounced back without a trace after being beamed by Rich Gossage in the World Series. Andre Dawson and, more recently, Terry Steinbach and Don Slaught also showed no effects after getting hit in the head.

So the Minnesota Twins did not know what to expect when Shane Mack stepped in to start the bottom of the first inning Friday night.

Five pitches later, they got their answer.

Mack, playing for the first time since getting hit in the helmet by a pitch from Milwaukee's Mike Fetters on Wednesday, led off with a home run and later added three more hits that sent the Twins past Texas 7-1.

"I was confident," Mack said after his second career four-hit game. "I didn't feel intimidated. I just put it behind me. I didn't feel any jitters."

"I've taken some pretty good hits in high school football. And I've been hit in the head before from a guy who threw harder than (Fetters)," he said.

The World Series champion Twins won their home opener behind Kevin Tapani and Mack. Tapani (1-0) silenced the hottest bats in the majors, holding the Rangers to one run on six hits in seven innings.

Texas had won its first four games, scoring 38 runs on 50 hits against Seattle. But against Tapani, Ruben Sierra was the only hitter who was successful, getting a home run, double and single.

Mack also had an RBI single, stole a base and made a diving catch in left field. His leadoff homer came against Bobby Witt (0-1).

In other games, Oakland beat Chicago 6-5, Seattle defeated Kansas City 9-3, Milwaukee topped California 5-4, New York downed Detroit 7-3 and Toronto topped Baltimore 4-3.

Ken Griffey Jr. and Edgar Martinez each hit two-run homers and Seattle gave Bill Plummer his first victory as a major league manager.

Martinez homered in the second inning and hit a two-run double in the sixth. Griffey, who began the game batting .091, homered into the upper deck in the Kingdome in the sixth inning.

Rich DeLucia (1-0) went 5 1-3 innings for the victory.

Black sports apparel means plenty of green for licensors

By ROBERT WYNNE
The San Antonio Light
SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Sports apparel is going back to black. That's a fact.

In the past few years, the Atlanta Falcons, Chicago White Sox, Los Angeles Kings and Minnesota North Stars have changed their colors to black. The New Jersey Devils will "black out" next year. New franchises, like the Colorado Rockies and the Florida Marlins of Major League Baseball, will splash it onto their uniforms.

In most cases, black means green, as in greenbacks. The Los Angeles Raiders, the silver and black bad boys, sell more sports apparel than any other football team. Other No. 1s dipped in black include baseball's White Sox, hockey's San Jose Sharks (teal and black) and basketball's Chicago Bulls (red and black). Black caps and black shirts can be found for almost every team, regardless of the team's colors.

The trend may be more than a fashion statement. Some see it as a black eye on society. "Black is secretive. It's dark, it's foreboding," says Gerry Celente, executive director of the Socio-Economic Research Institute, a trend-tracking think tank in Rhinebeck, N.Y.

"Black is certainly a mean color," Celente says. "They're selling this image that this is going to make you tough and therefore you'll be a survivor. When you're a commando, it does fulfill the gang needs. You don't put on bright colors so people can see you."

Gangs. The dirty little secret of the multimillion dollar sports apparel industry is that some of the best customers for jackets, caps and T-shirts are teen-age gang members. Look on any street corner in any city. Tough-looking youths wearing black sports apparel can be found.

"They don't come in and directly state that they are gang members, (but) you can tell if they are all wearing the same caps," says Ralph Stevens of Sports Fantasy at Rivercenter. "It's kind of half and half. There's a group of gang members who are buying and some other people who are buying (black caps). Black seems to be the color right now."

A popular notion exists that black uniforms make teams meaner and more aggressive. According to a Cornell University study published in USA Today, NFL and NHL teams wearing black drew more penalties than the league average between 1970 and 1986. That same study concluded that football referees were more likely to call late hits on teams wearing black.

Though black may seem to toughen up the average team, it does not necessarily make them winners. None of the teams who recently changed to black won a league title this past season in any major sport, though the North Stars made it to the Stanley Cup finals last year. The Los Angeles Raiders haven't been to a Super Bowl since 1984.

Barry Larkin, Chris Sabo, and Hal Morris of the Cincinnati Reds all played baseball at the University of Michigan.

Stevens says the Raiders, rightly or wrongly, are linked to the "black-makes-you-tough-and-makes-you-a-winner" myth. "It probably goes back to the Oakland Raiders and their macho image, the bad boy image. The (Detroit) Pistons and other teams have used it (and) it's also been used by some of the gangs. That pushes it along as well and other kids have picked it up. ... They think it looks hip, it looks nice. Maybe they just have a streak of rebellion in them."

Lee High School Principal Bill Fish says rebellion is just the start. "We can show a definite connection between gang-related behavior and apparel," says the father of two daughters age 9 and 12. "My children will not wear something like that because of the mistaken identity problems that kids get into to."

Younger kids emulating negative role models wear those symbols and sometimes get themselves in over their heads by giving the wrong signs or getting into fights. It's not long before you change from a wannabe into a gang member.

Fish says sports leagues and their marketing arms did not start the gang fire but they fan the flames. "I think they (sports leagues) have to take a courageous stand as far as making a change. ... Symbols are very powerful. They are very provocative. They (should) emulate the positive instead of the negative. I don't think there's any question that some of their symbols are negative."

Not all black-uniformed teams conjure up gang images. The Spurs don't. Maybe it's because David Robinson, Sean Elliott and Terry Cummings are seen more as athletes than thugs. The same cannot be said of former Raiders such as John Matuszak, Jack Tatum and George Atkinson or Atlanta Falcons coach Jerry Glanville, who has built his image around his black wardrobe.

NBA spokesman Seth Sylvan says the Spurs' fiesta colors actually sell as well or better than their black merchandise.

While few dispute the fact that gangs in San Antonio, Los Angeles or other cities buy black team merchandise, sports leagues deny they market directly to gangs. "We have never promoted or marketed to that element or tried to be associated with it," says Fred Scalera, general manager of retail licensing for the National Hockey League.

"It's a very wearable color, you can do a lot with it. ... If you go back a couple of years ago, neon and bright colorations were popular. Historically, white was used as a base color. Now it's changed to black."

In order to widen the gap between the violence on the field and the fans in the stands, the National Football League has sent a rapper to schools across the country. NFL spokesman Rusty Hawley told Sports Illustrated that "NFL merchandise is meant to be a message of goodwill and not a uniform of war and gangs."

But only the most naive would assume that wearing the uniform of a violent team says nothing about the wearer. The symbol of the Sharks - the NHL's best seller - features a shark with bared teeth biting a hockey stick in half on a teal and black background, hardly a benign fashion statement.

And hockey's prevailing image is of two or more thugs squaring off on the ice while referees watch from a safe distance.

Despite the negative overtones, some feel the trend will continue. "To be really cynical they go with what sells," Fish says. "They can always hide behind 'We don't mean anything bad, it's what people read into it.'"

Celente feels the trend cuts deeper than fashion or gangs.

"Unfortunately, it's going to grow because the economy is going to continue to decline and the underclass is growing. These are the type of people who buy black merchandise. It fills a void."

"They are not growing in other areas, they don't have a lot of hope for the future. By embracing the toughness that black represents, black fills an emotional void. But it's a false emotion. The color does nothing to solve the problem. The color is cosmetic."

Astros leading trend of trimming salaries

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - What will those trend-setting Houston Astros do next?

They started the age of the million dollar salaries by paying Nolan Ryan $1.1 million in 1980 and then were front-runners in jettisoning big salaries to start the 1990s.

Now General Manager Bill Wood says new strategies are needed for teams without megabucks to survive. The Astros made a major blunder by allowing Ryan to move on to their country-cousin Texas Rangers, but then owner John McMullen continued his cost-cutting by ridding the team of all its millionaires.

The Astros had no millionaires on last year's team; three salaries have crept about $1 million this year. Only the Cleveland Indians have a lower payroll than the Astros' $13 million. McMullen and the Astros were accused of sacrificing winning to save money. Fans have never forgiven McMullen for losing Ryan but now other teams are watching their free agents migrate to the major-media markets.

"I see the future as being totally different," Wood said. "I see us building a new way to build a winner. But it'll take several years for the (general) managers in the industry to understand what it means to try to compete year after year."

Wood winces at the thought of facing a Pittsburgh Pirates problem in several years when promising Astros players reach free agency. The Pirates watched as Bobby Bonilla signed with the New York Mets and Cubs second baseman Ryne Sandberg got a $7.1 million per year deal.

Can the first $10 million man be far behind? The New York Mets' $44.4 payroll is a major league record and the average league salary topped $1 million for the first time at $1.08 million.

"You don't want to be turning around trading a prime player right in the prime of his career when you need him the most but financially that may be what you're forced to do," Wood said.

It could get worse before it gets better, Wood said, with perhaps a four-tiered star system.

"I think there will be structured salary levels," Wood said. "Your premier all-star type players, the cream of the crop, will make a tremendous amount."

"Your bona fide regular players that make a contribution to a winning record every year make pretty good money and then the bench guys and some of the bull pen guys are in the lower strata and trading places every year, trying to keep a job."

"A fourth category coming up is the rookies that you develop."

Wood hopes something can be worked out with the players before his forecasts come true.

"I feel we may be entering an era where the situation could be unhealthy for the game," Wood said. "It's just a forecast and there's been plenty of doomsday comments."

"I just don't want to see us continuing to price segments of American society out of our ball parks. We started as a working man's game and my personal view is I'd like to see that continue."

"It'll always be the fan who has to bear the brunt. I just hope we can get an arrangement with the union where that makes some sense where the players don't give up anything major but at the same time we can bring some sanity to the game."

Wood can see the day when the Astros will no longer be able to afford the services of rookie of the year Jeff Bagwell, left fielder Luis Gonzalez, second baseman Craig Biggio or third baseman Ken Caminiti - basically the heart of the team.

"You worry about how a non-major market keeps its major player because most of the big contracts this season were by the major market teams," Wood said. "You worry about what happens when the Pittsburgh-type clubs come face to face with the Bonilla-Barry Bonds type situation."

Wood thinks fans are beginning to understand the problems facing the small and medium markets.

"They are still confused by it but I sit in the stands in spring training and I hear the fans say 'this guy's making $5 million, nobody's worth that,'" Wood said.

"But if you're a fan, you want your club to be successful no matter what the ground rules are. They want THEIR club to be competitive."

Opening day finds Palermo watching TV

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) - Opening day this year found Steve Palermo - who many say is baseball's best umpire - battling his body and his emotions and watching on television as best friend Rich Garcia worked the plate in Detroit.

No green fields yet for Palermo, who can now walk unaided for short distances as he recovers from the robber's bullet that paralyzed him last July.

"Richie, Richie, Richie," Palermo cries out with the delight that only someone who knows what it feels like could when Garcia bends over in the exquisite pain of a foul ball off the foot.

Palermo's pain this day is something different.

"I keep telling my body not to hurt like this," Palermo says as he watches the Blue Jays and Tigers on TV from his suburban Kansas City home.

His normal five-hour day of rehabilitation had to be canceled because the pain is too great.

"It feels like electric shocks shooting down into my knees," the 41-year-old Palermo says. "It's like somebody attached battery cables to my legs and is sending shocks. It's kind of like you are being tortured a little bit."

ESPN flashes highlights of the Twins-Brewers game from Milwaukee County Stadium.

"That's where I'm supposed to be today," Palermo says softly, his dark brown eyes showing the hurt he feels of being taken out of the game in what would have been the start of his 15th major league season.

He's been an umpire all his life, starting with Little League games at age 13. An umpire scout saw him when he was 18, and Palermo was at third base in Fenway Park six years later.

Palermo is over being angry at the person who shot him one night in July in Dallas. He hasn't become a crusader against guns, although he talks to school kids and asks them to think about the consequences of what they do.

Palermo just wants to get back into the game.

"In each town, you have friends," he says, rubbing his legs as he sits back in a black leather chair, his wheelchair standing nearby. "That's the hardest part of this whole thing. It's a ritual. If you're in Milwaukee, you know you're going to meet Dennis, Mike, Johnnie."

"Naturally, it's the game itself. The fact that you are asked to do something humanly impossible - get everything right."

"It's the friends. Irreplaceable," he says after a long pause, a hint of a tear in his eyes. "Those are the great parts of the game - the people. Every night, it's a challenge. Every night is very demanding. From before the game to the start of the game through the game, the concentration is so high that you have a headache at the end."

Palermo tells a story he swears is true. He's calling balls and strikes, and Lou Piniella has a different opinion about one of the strike calls.

"Where was that pitch at?" Piniella asks.

Palermo responds by telling Piniella he never should finish a sentence with a preposition.

Piniella repeats the question, this time finishing it with a description of Palermo most people would find unfavorable.

"I told him you're an intelligent man, you're well-bred, you have an understanding," Palermo says. "Sometimes you just have to do something to show it's not life or death. Sometimes you have to be a lawyer and choose your words very carefully. Sometimes you have to be a psychologist. Sometimes you have to be a judge."

"The game is very important. But it's not life or death. Lying on a sidewalk and contemplating whether or not you're going to ever see your wife and your family again - that's life and death."

The story has been told a hundred times. Palermo and friends are leaving a restaurant frequented by baseball types when they visit Dallas. Two waitresses get mugged in the parking lot. Palermo and his friends run to help.

"It's a human reaction," he says.

Three others drive up, and a shot is fired. The bullet enters Palermo in the side and injures his spinal cord.

"It's not like you see on TV, where it's choo, choo, choo and a little spurt of blood," Palermo says. "It was like scissors cutting the strings on a puppet, on a marionette. Clip. Clip. Clip. It was like an elastic band that suddenly unsnaped. All of a sudden there was no semblance of order to muscle control."

A long stay in a Dallas hospital followed. The high point there was the two little kids who would crawl into bed with him to watch baseball games and listen in rapture as Palermo divulged inside information.

The days now involve trips to nearby Midwest Rehabilitation Institute. Sessions begin with 90 minutes in the pool and continue with arduous stretching exercises.

Asked how he's progressing, Palermo puts a video into the VCR that shows him unable to walk, then able to walk only haltingly with the help of crutches and now able to walk on his own for short distances.

Palermo and his wife, Debbie, were married only five months when he was wounded. He credits her with keeping him going.

"My wife," Palermo says when asked how he faces each day. "She'll say, 'Let's go, hon. Breakfast is on the table and we need to leave in 20 minutes.' She knows how much it means to me. When I met her, she knew what my life was. She knew I enjoyed it."

"You'll find that as good a people as umpires are, the wives are much nicer. They're sitting in the stands listening to their husbands being called every name that's ever been invented so they have to be very gutsy people too."

Debbie Palermo had a spinal condition when she was a teen-ager that forced her to wear a brace for four years from the time she was 13.

It prompted her grandmother to coin the phrase she now repeats to her husband: "Inch by inch, life's a cinch."

Every day, the couple head for the hospital.

"There are days that are horrible," she says. "I have the ability to focus on one day at a time. I can't let myself look into the future because that is not productive. It would be a waste of energy. We don't know. We have to focus on today. We don't have a choice."

The trip to the hospital sometimes takes them past a golf course. Palermo was in a car with his wife and in-laws on a beautiful spring day the other day and the course was crowded.

"That's the other devastating thing about this," Palermo says of not being able to indulge his passion for golf. "I was trying to hide my feelings, but my mother-in-law knew what I was thinking," he says.

"She tapped me on the shoulder and said: 'Soon, Steve. Soon.'"

Life!

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: If you are looking for a laugh or some light reading, please skip my column today. It's deadly serious. But it could be the most important thing you will ever read--a matter of life and death. The subject is AIDS.

What appears below is from a recent Department of Health and Human Services report. No frills. No baloney. Just the facts.

About 1 million Americans are now infected with the HIV virus that causes AIDS. In the last 10 years, more than 200,000 Americans have been diagnosed with AIDS. Approximately 64 percent of them have died. Worldwide, an estimated 8 million to 10 million people are now HIV-infected.

The average length of time between HIV infection and the development of full-blown AIDS is 10 years. Although engaging in male-to-male sexual contact and intravenous drug use remain the highest risk factors, heterosexual transmission is showing the greatest rate of increase.

In the United States, AIDS is now the second leading killer of men and the fifth leading killer of women from 25 to 44 years of age. It has hit some minority populations the hardest. More than one-fourth of those diagnosed with AIDS are black and 16 percent are Hispanic.

As of December 1991, there were 40,362 reported cases of AIDS among men and women between the ages of 20 and 29. There were 789 cases of AIDS reported among persons from 13 to 19 years of age. The most disturbing fact in this report is that the incidence of HIV infection is growing rapidly among teenagers.

In spite of efforts by the government, the medical community and civic-minded groups, high-risk behavior among U.S. teens is widespread. More than 40 percent of high school students polled say they have had multiple sex partners. Although condom use has increased significantly, only one-third of the sexually active teens say they use them.

It should be noted that only latex condoms can provide protection against sexually transmitted disease. And condoms are not 100 percent effective--they can leak, break or come off.

The two most common forms of transmission are sexual intercourse--anal, vaginal and oral--and the sharing of needles. The virus also can be acquired through blood transfusion. Such occurrences have been rare since 1985, when careful screening of blood began.

HIV is NOT transmitted through casual contact--kissing, touching door handles, phones, drinking fountains or toilet seats or getting an insect bite.

At this moment, there is no vaccine to protect a person against the HIV virus and no cure for AIDS. A massive effort, however, is in progress in research laboratories all over the world.

The drugs AZT and ddI have proven successful in delaying the onset of AIDS, improving the quality of life dramatically for some AIDS sufferers and extending their life expectancy.

What can YOU do to protect yourself against AIDS? Do not share needles. Have a monogamous relationship with a person who is healthy and totally trustworthy.

If you want further information, call the Centers for Disease Control National AIDS Hotline. The number is 1-800-342-AIDS. (Spanish-speaking: 1-800-344-7432; TDD for the hearing impaired: 1-800-243-7889).

DEAR ANN LANDERS: As you already know, unemployment is a major problem in this country. I am a recent victim. When people lose their jobs their self-esteem is at an all-time low. They feel worthless, as if being unemployed is their fault.

It's also scary. One thing that isn't mentioned much is the attitude of the people who work in unemployment offices.

The company I worked for made a 10 percent personnel cut across the board. Being one of the laid off, I was one of the first to go. The minute I sat down with the unemployment counselor, she asked, "What did you do that caused you to lose your job?"

Please inform these so-called "counselors" that sometimes people are laid off for no reason other than the economy is bad. Business is slow. Also, they should try to be considerate of our feelings. Unemployed people are simply out of work, so please don't treat us like criminals--Feeling Low in Illinois

DEAR ILLINOIS: I've received very few letters critical of unemployment agency personnel. It sounds to me as though you ran into a real lemon. Good luck to you. I hope you find something soon.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am saddened every time I read about an adopted person who is trying to locate a birth mother--even more so when contact is made and the child is rejected. I offer this advice to all such persons:

Adoption is a binding, lifetime contract. Biological parents release children for adoption for valid reasons. The primary one is to give them a better life than the birth parents can offer.

If one of my two adopted children ever wants to contact a birth mother, I will offer this advice: She gave you life and parents, possibly at greater personal sacrifice. What more could you ask of her? Don't tarnish that gift by meddling in her private life after all these years. Respect her and pray for her well-being as I do. The best gift you can give her now is the gift of privacy.--Thankful in S.C.

DEAR S.C.: Beautiful. Thanks for speaking so eloquently for those who cannot speak for themselves.

The name "geometry" comes from the Greek words for "earth" and "to measure."

Friona hosts recent legion convention

The American Legion and Auxiliary's 18th District Convention was held April 4-5 in the Friona's Post Home #206. Seventy-seven members were present.

District President Betty Wilhelm of Nazareth presided during Saturday's session. Troyce Hanna of Hereford gave the opening prayer and also presented the program on flag folding and flag etiquette. She said, "The flag is flown from sunrise to sunset and may be flown at night if it is fully lighted. Every day is a good day to fly the flag, to see Old Glory flying in a blue sky brings such a patriotic emotion to a person."

Clara Trowbridge, president of the Hereford American Legion Auxiliary, gave one of several unit reports.

The banquet meal Saturday was provided for the 75 guests by the Friona Auxiliary members. Rita Beene sang several selections including one to the District Commander J.P. Sims of Friona, "You Made Me Love You."

Commander Sims introduced several dignitaries including Mayor Clarence Monroe and wife, Peggy, of Friona.

Fourth Division Commander Billy Bonds of Brownfield delivered the main address. He said that the American Legion was born on March 15, 1919, in Paris, France. He also explained that the American Legion Auxiliary is serving the community, state and nation and teaches patriotism. The Legion of today is people helping people/Americans helping Americans. He said, "The needs are great and the Legion makes a difference whether it be with monies or volunteer services."

The speaker continued by saying that there are 27 million veterans. Some of the concerns include the future of VA health care, down size of the military, POW/MIA controversy, protection of the flag amendment and HCR 1300 elimination of health care to veterans. He urged those present to call and write their legislators to let opinions be known. He said, "We hope the veteran will not be forgotten due to indifference. Catch the volunteer spirit. American Legion needs you!"

On Sunday the joint memorial address was given by Rev. Tom Shirve of Friona. He recalled that in the 1940s he was a winner of the oratorical contest sponsored by the American Legion. He attended New York Boy's State.

Commander Sims led the memorial service where a display was setup showing a flag draped casket in a cemetery setting with white crosses. As each unit was called to remember the names of the deceased, a flag was posted for the legion and auxiliary member. Five auxiliary and 35 legion members were remembered from Amarillo, Shamrock, Vega, Hereford, Friona, Tulia, Dumas and Borger. Taps then sounded.

The business session was called to order by Friona Unit 206 President Christine Mann. District President Betty Wilhelm introduced Division Commander Bonds. He asked that those present remember the Fourth Division President Patsy Woodard in the loss of her husband. The group was also invited to the Fourth Division Convention May 15-17 in Brownfield.

Past National Commander Jack Flynt of Dimmitt gave the credentials and qualifications of a longtime friend who will be taking the office of auxiliary national president in 1993, Helen Holcomb of Texas.

JoNell Sims of Friona gave the welcome and Secretary Betty McKone called roll. The Hereford unit was represented by three people.

The VA Hospital report was given by Frances Velasquez of Amarillo. Mary Jones is the patient representative and can be contacted at the hospital. There are currently 125 patients in the Veteran's Hospital Nursing Home. Outpatient care is being specialized to the wards making the outpatient flow smoother in the clinic.

District President Wilhelm called for reports of credentials, rules, resolutions, and grievance and appeal. She gave the president report. Several announcements were made. It was noted that Bluebonnet Girl's State will be held June 16-26 in Seguin. There have been 23 registrations from the 18th district. Membership is at 95.6 percent. Granddaughters and great-granddaughters may be contacted for membership. The department convention is planned July 17-19 in Dallas.

Unit reports were heard from President Jackie Florer of Borger, President Christine Mann of Friona, Betty McKone of Tulia and President Wilhelm of Nazareth.

Extension News

BY BEVERLY HARDER

Spring means warmer weather is coming and it is time to clean and store your winter clothing. Clean all items before storing. Even tiny spots of soil or food make the fabric more susceptible to staining, mildew and insect infestations. Launder washable items and garments, but avoid using laundry additives such as fabric softener and starch. Fabric softeners tend to yellow with age and starch attracts insects.

Reduce dry cleaning costs by having "dry clean only" garments cleaned, but not pressed. Store wool garments in moth repellent (balls, flakes, or crystals), but avoid putting moth repellent in baby or children's cotton clothing.

Tailored and professional clothing should be stored on padded hangers protected in a cloth garment bag. Avoid storing garments in plastic whenever possible. Plastic garment bags and dry cleaner bags trap moisture during the humid summer season and sometimes cause garments to become yellowed and discolored. The print from dry cleaner bags has been known to degrade onto garments leaving an ink stain.

If you do not have closet space available for winter garments, then stuff the sleeves and shoulders with tissue paper. Store in a tissue lined box. Choose large flat boxes so that the garments may be folded fewer times and are not crushed by the weight of other garments. Store the heaviest garments on the bottom and lighter weight garments on top.

Good places to store out-of-season garments include the "far end" of a bedroom closet, under the bed, and the top shelves of a clothes closet. Avoid hot attics, damp basements and damp garages, because mold and mildew grow in humid conditions. Also, avoid storing good clothes next to the outside wall because outside walls tend to draw dampness with outside temperature fluctuations.

ORANGETOWN, N.Y. (AP) - Al Pacino landed in the doghouse for letting his canines run loose and was fined $50.

The actor's lawyers entered a guilty plea on his behalf Tuesday to violating town leash laws, court clerk Sharon Macaulay said Wednesday.

Pacino's dogs ran loose in Orangetown, a suburb north of New York City where he owns property, on Feb. 6, March 20 and March 25. During the last incident, his dog bit another dog.

ELAINE REINART, MORRIE MARINO

Marriage planned

July 11 is the wedding date set by former Hereford resident, Elaine Reinart of Westmont, Ill., and Morrie Marino, also of Westmont. The couple plans to exchange vows in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Clara and Leander Reinart of Route 3, Hereford, and the prospective bridegroom is the son of June and Morris Marino of Westmont.

Miss Reinart, a 1982 graduate of Hereford High School, received a BBA degree in finance in 1986 from West Texas State University. She worked for five years in Dallas as a commercial property underwriter for Employers Insurance of Texas and as a risk manager for National Realty Advisors. She recently moved to the Chicago, Ill. area.

Marino graduated in 1982 from James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Va. with a BBA in management information systems and received a MBA from the institution in 1984. He is currently self-employed as a computer consultant and software developer.

Four candidates hoping to be selected as Bluebonnet Girls State delegates gave presentations to members of the American Legion Auxiliary when the group met in regular session Tuesday evening at the Unit 192 Post Home.

Presenting their resumes and giving their qualifications were Emily Fuston, daughter of John and Joan Fuston; Sara Zinck, daughter of Cherie Zinck; Dusty Saul, daughter of Roland and Sandra Saul; and Chasaidy Weddel, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Weddel.

Seventeen-year-old Fuston is a junior at Hereford High School where she serves as a cheerleader and is a member of Keywanettes, PALS, the D.A.R.E. program, and the tennis team. She is a member of First United Methodist Church. She plans to pursue a political career. She told the group that she is able to make decisions on her own and not just follow the crowd.

Because of her involvement in the HHS band where she plays the saxophone, Weddel says she knows what teamwork is all about. She is a member of Student Council and is active on the SMILE committee. Her participation in speech competition and Student Congress helps her set priorities. She is in the top 10 percent of her class. She believes that young people today can make a difference. She hopes to attend the Air Force Academy or Rice University following graduation. She is a member of Central Church of Christ.

Annual benefit sale planned

Each year L'Allegra Study Club members have an annual geranium sale with proceeds used to benefit the community. Proceeds from the sale this spring, which is planned Friday and Saturday, April 24-25 at The Atrium, will be used to build a gazebo in Mother's Park. To help defray the additional cost of the gazebo, members will also be selling frozen casseroles and chances for a quilt which is a 1930's bow tie pattern collectible. Displaying the quilt are club members, from left, Judy Wall, Suzanne Smith and Hilda Perales. Those wishing to place advance geranium orders may contact any club member or call 364-7542.

Today is Palm Sunday, Friday is Good Friday, Saturday is Passover, and Sunday is Easter. We have all kinds of books on religious subjects including craft ideas, Ideals magazines, picture books, ideological treatises, archaeological discoveries, guidance books, Bibles study guides...the list goes on. If you need something to give an Easter project a special touch, see us.

Ready for a good cry? Come by the library this Thursday evening for the Family Film Where The Red Fern Grows. I've not yet seen this movie myself. A lot of people have told me that it's very good, and a few have mentioned that it is so sad they couldn't bear watching it again. We'll see, I guess. The story, publicized as true, is about a boy's quest to acquire a couple of hunting dogs. Through the struggle to save the money to buy them, and the hard road to train them, the boy (and the viewer) form a bond until...NOPE! You'll have to come watch to find out how it ends. Thursday, 7pm, Library basement.

The literary world lost a major contributor last week - Isaac Asimov. Most people think of him only as a science fiction writer, and that's certainly where he made his name. (He's probably best remembered for Fantastic Voyage in which a team of scientists were reduced to microscopic size and injected into a human body). The Associated Press, in his obit, reported that Asimov was also a "widely read popularizer of science fact, as well as a prolific writer on...literature, humor and opera." Apparently the man was able to write just about anything. A cursory glance through his non-sci-fi titles in the Deaf Smith County library include: Asimov's Guide to Shakespeare, Asimov's Guide to the Bible, Birth of the United States 1763-1816, Constantinople: The Forgotten Empire, Greeks: A Great Adventure, A Glossary of Limericks.

If the 400+ titles to date are not enough, several are awaiting posthumous publication.

In the spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of...baseball! And what a time to read The Last Yankee: The Turbulent Life of Billy Martin. Much maligned, and probably justifiably so, it's hard not to have an opinion about Billy Martin. Once described as "a mouse studying to be a rat", Martin's fights on and off the field have become legend. Author David Falkner paints a thorough portrait of the man and the demons inside that exploded out.

A number of years ago, I worked with a gentle old man who told me he had been raised in Southeastern Oklahoma. I mentioned that the area had seen its share of tough characters and desperadoes and asked if he had known any.

"Yes," he drawled. "The land we farmed was once worked by the family of Belle Starr, and I went to school with a fellow named Charles Floyd--some folks called him Pretty Boy."

After I got my mouth closed, I asked this saintly old baptist deacon some questions, expecting him to revile Floyd and his way of life. To my surprise, he was, if not supportive, at least tolerant of the bandit, and was himself a victim of the economic policies that drove men to extremes.

All that to say this: Pretty Boy by Michael Wallis is the latest and maybe the most thorough work on Charles Floyd, the Depression-era bank robber. Well researched and well written.

By the way...the library will be closed this Friday and Saturday.

GARBAGE DISPOSAL

Dear Heloise: Every time I see an article on a smelly garbage disposal, I wonder if anyone has the type I ran across.

The black rubber gasket over the sink opening was not the removable type; therefore, after trying many remedies I found the underside was slimy and very smelly and after scrubbing it the smell was gone. Now I know to clean this area on a regular basis. — Elaine Wohl-gamuth, Naples, Fla.

Pentagon reviews methods to better handle information

WTRT gives checks, honors three

Allen Hyer, left, computer programmer with West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative, checks a printer for hundreds of capital credit checks recently mailed to customers. Checks for more than $91,000 were issued. Below, three WTRT employees received service awards recently. From left are LaNell Kendrick, secretary and administrative assistant in charge of Hereford Long Distance, 10 years; Mike Harris, installation and repair supervisor, 15 years; and Dick Thompson, plant superintendent, 15 years.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Saddam Hussein's army escaped from the Gulf War with far more vehicles than first thought, the Pentagon said Friday in a massive self-examination of the war effort.

It also said allied bombers inflicted unnecessary damage on Iraqi power plants because of poor battlefield intelligence.

The nation's vast intelligence community was "not prepared to cope" with wartime demands for information, producing duplicative or contradictory reports that failed to meet the needs of commanders on the battlefield, the Pentagon said in its 1,300-page study of the war.

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf had complained to Congress in open hearings about the problems of gathering and distributing wartime intelligence. However, the military hadn't said previously that the problem resulted in unnecessary bombing runs.

The Pentagon sent Congress its full report on the effort to reverse Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, and released an unclassified version. The latter noted that it wouldn't contain information on all shortcomings of weapon systems, since such information could aid a potential enemy.

Overall, the report offered a glowing account of the victory over Saddam and lauded the contributions of each branch of the armed service as well as the U.S. allies.

"The combined coalition forces - ground, air, naval, special and supporting forces - had won one of the fastest and most complete victories in military history," it said.

But it also painted a telling portrait of the confusion, mistakes and problems encountered when a bureaucracy sends 540,000 men and women to war.

The report cites as examples: -U.S. forces destroyed only 1,450 of Saddam Hussein's armored troop carriers instead of the 2,400 originally reported.

The overcount was due to the "rapid rate of advance coupled with the violence with which enemy forces were encountered and suppressed," the report said.

-U.S. commanders ordered unnecessary air strikes on targets already hit - such as electrical power plants - because intelligence reports about damage on the battlefield were late or inadequate.

Critics of the Gulf War have faulted the allies for crippling electricity and water supplies, and for causing great suffering among Iraqi civilians for months after the war's end.

-The intelligence community - such as the National Intelligence Council, the Defense Intelligence Agency and the Central Intelligence Agency - adhered to their peacetime habits of offering competing analyses.

While this may be appropriate for high-level policymakers, it "presents too broad a picture and too wide a range of options" for a battlefield commander, the report said.

The report didn't estimate Iraqi civilian casualties, although one section referred to "the apparently low number," without further explanation or detail. It said extraordinary attempts were made to minimize civilian casualties but acknowledged that the efforts were not always successful.

Nor did the study offer an estimate for Iraqi military casualties.

Some analysts have estimated they were as high as 100,000, while Gen. Charles Horner, the air war commander, has said the number could be as low as 10,000.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

The Name Game

A common problem all entrepreneurs face when they decide to start a business is coming up with a good name. Every business needs one, but all too often we base our choices on emotion rather than careful planning.

Frequently, we see business names selected by ego: The Jane Doe Company or John Doe Manufacturing. It is also common to see businesses names based on spouse's pet names, family initials or coined words or acronyms that do nothing to promote the business.

Choosing your company name is an important decision. A bad name may confuse prospects, create a negative first impression or keep potential customers from finding you at all. A good choice can boost sales, help develop a positive image, speed business growth and make your business stand out from the competition.

You should consider several elements when choosing a name. First, will it be easy for your customers to remember? Second, does your business name tell potential customers what you do? Third, will this name help convey a positive image to your customer? Fourth, does it give you flexibility to grow without changing the name. Fifth, is anyone else using the name you've chosen? Perhaps a discussion of the most often selected types would help you in your considerations.

Most Common Types

An often used strategy is creating a business name by using the owner's name. Eric Jones and Company, The Jack Owen Group, Bill Dyer and Associates, Janice Doe, Ltd., are all good examples. If you are well known and have an excellent reputation in your field, this name type may work for you. However, it won't help if a potential client doesn't know you. In addition, it doesn't tell what your business does.

Perhaps the most common type is a combination of the owner's name and the business activity. For example: Bob Day's Transmission Service, Carol's Custom Photography or Francis Jones' Insurance. This type has the advantage of letting people know you own the business and what products or services you provide. The major drawback is it limits expansion into other areas without a name change.

Another type is a name that describes your company's primary activity or benefit to the customer. Some examples might include: Letter Perfect Word Processing, Accuracy Bookkeeping Service, Quick Buck Check Cashing and While You're Gone Pet Care. This name type offers the benefit of giving a mini-commercial for the business each time you use it. The main disadvantages are limited expansion opportunities and the possibility of conveying a negative image. For example, Quick Buck Check Cashing might imply that you are making a "quick buck" at the expense of your customer.

The final type is a purely fictional or made-up name: Nugen (New Generation) Corporation, The STAR (partner's 4 initials) Group, and AAAA (an attempt to be first in the phone book) Service. This name type does give the user a lot of flexibility, however, it gives no clue to what the business actually does.

Keep your customers in mind when selecting your business name. Make it easy to remember and descriptive of what you do. Make certain it conveys a strong, positive image.

Just For Fun

Here are some business names you'll probably never see. We made them up just for fun. I hope you enjoy them.

SMALL NARROW LOT PLAN IS VIEW ORIENTED

FEATURE HOMES

© BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

A small entry leads to the open living room and dining room. Glass sliding doors lead to a private terrace from the dining room and the same type of terrace access is also provided from the breakfast room.

There are only two bedrooms shown for this plan but each is spacious. The master bedroom is provided with a luxury bath and a central bath near the laundry room accommodates daytime and the remaining bedroom.

The plan is designed to fit a narrow lot, the attractive front entry garage and chimney adding to the beauty of the plan. Exterior finish is stucco and the roof design is combined hip and gable style.

The plan is Number 468. It includes only 1,449 square feet of heated area. It is a computer generated plan. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency.

For further information write W. D. Farmer, P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Question-Answer

Q: I have two brick steps at the side of my house that have become porous. Some time ago, I watched workers applying a nonskid cement coating on subway steps. This would be a perfect material to coat my brick steps.

A: I've checked and learned that the material I saw being used is made exclusively for transit systems by Edison Cement. Is there a similar product I can purchase and use at my home?

A: There are several products that will produce a nonskid protective coating for floors and steps. However, since a section of your steps is presumably on grade level, and subjected to freezing temperatures, it is important that the coating is able to "breathe" and not act as a vapor barrier.

The Sika Corp., has a product called Sikatop 121 Broadcast Overlay that can be applied to steps to produce a slip-resistant coating. It is an acrylic copolymer that allows vapor to pass through and thus will not trap moisture. Write to Sika Corp., 201 Polito Avenue, Lyndhurst, NJ 07071.

Surface preparation is very important for proper bonding. If the bricks are glazed or hard-burned, the surface must be roughened first. A wire brush mounted in an electric drill should do the job. In any event, it is recommended that you apply a small amount of the product to a test section to check the bonding before covering all the steps.

CBS' 'Stompin' doesn't make the noise it should

By Steven Alan McGaw

On March 12, 1926, in the middle of that cultural flowering known as "the Harlem Renaissance," the Savoy Ballroom opened its doors. Like the Cotton Club, the Savoy was a haven for black musicians, singers and dancers, and instrumental to the careers of entertainers like Ella Fitzgerald and bandleader Chick Webb. Its closing, in 1958, truly marked the end of an era.

Now, the celebrated ballroom comes back to life in Stompin' at the Savoy, premiering Sunday, April 12, on CBS. Directed by Debbie Allen, the film is set in the years just before World War II and focuses on four young women whose lives are punctuated by cherished nights spent at the Savoy.

"During the Depression," says actor Michael Warren, "the Savoy was one of those surreal places that, when you walked in, whatever was happening outside those doors ceased to exist." Warren appears as Calvin Hunter, a ruthless entrepreneur ("opportunistic slimeball," the actor laughs) who determines to romance Pauline, an aspiring singer played by Vanessa Williams.

Lynn Whitfield (The Josephine Baker Story) plays Esther, whose romance with handsome restaurateur Walter Turner (Mario Van Peebles) is secondary to her fierce determination to open her own beauty salon. Jasmine Guy is Alice, a country girl in love with New York and a guy named Ernest, played by Darnell Williams. Vanessa Bell Calloway completes the quartet as Dorothy, a mild-mannered housekeeper unprepared for interracial romance with successful white actor Bill Jerome (John Di Aquino).

The Savoy, itself almost another character in the film, is the scene of several enjoyable musical sequences.

Dawnn Lewis portrays jazz great Ella Fitzgerald in Debbie Allen's Stompin' at the Savoy.

When it came to choreography, Allen deferred to Norma Miller and Frankie Manning, two of the original Savoy dancers and founders of the New York Swing Dance Society.

Actress/singer Dawnn Lewis, a longtime Allen associate on A Different World, appears as jazz great Ella Fitzgerald. For Lewis, playing the inimitable, innovative singer was an unforgettable experience.

"They were well into shooting," Lewis says, "and Debbie called me and said, 'I need a favor.'" Lewis admits that playing Fitzgerald was intimidating, particularly on short notice. Still, she leapt at the chance, and familiarity with the music was no problem. "As soon as I hung up the phone, I went over to my CDs and cassettes. I've got Ella forever."

In Warren's estimation, the Stompin' script, written by Beverly Sawyer,

"really warranted being a feature film." He credits Allen with assembling "an exquisite cast on a shoestring budget," and says costumers and art direction people "went to great pains to duplicate the period."

Costumes and period details, of course, do not a movie make. Stompin' at the Savoy is at its best when doing just that: swinging and dancing to the timeless music for which the club was known. Less engaging, however, are scenes advancing the four intertwining stories, which seem to lack energy and aim. Of the actors, only Whitfield, Van Peebles and Warren consistently deliver urgency and appeal.

CABLE NEWS

Discover 'Truth' about TV lies

By Dan Rice

The boob tube is said to be connected to 98 percent of American households, and though some may deny it, every citizen feels the impact of television. On Sunday, April 12, The Discovery Channel reveals The Truth About Lies — The Tube is Reality, in which our "culture of culturelessness" is debated by critics and academics.

It's Showtime this week for a variety of programming making its debut on the cable network. First we hear from Bob Newhart: Off the Record on Sunday, April 12. In this one-hour special, the prime-time star returns to his stand-up comedy roots by performing many of his best routines from his popular comedy records. Then on Thursday, April 16, the Showtime 30-Minute Movie features the Oscar-nominated short film Session Man, a poignant tale of a studio musician who gets his big break with a famous rock band. That dastardly duo of Pottsylvania spies is called to live-action when Dave Thomas and Sally Kellerman star as Boris and Natasha. Drawn from the animated characters on The Rocky & Bullwinkle series, this campy Cold War comedy debuts on Friday, April 17. And on Saturday, April 18, Chuck Norris is host of Combat Karate: The World Championships. The lineup of furious kick-boxing bouts includes world champ Kathy "The Princess of Pain" Long vs. Nora Daigle.

Reader sick of Jennifer and Jack

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: How much longer do we have to put up with Jennifer and Jack on Days of Our Lives? Please help! I want them off the show. —M.R., Novi, Mich.

Dear Reader: Jack (Matt Ashford) and Jennifer (Melissa Reeves) are one of the most popular couples on daytime TV, especially among the younger viewers. You will get a reprieve soon though, as Melissa Reeves will be leaving in June to have her baby.

Dear Candace: I would like to know more about Ricky Paul Goldin. He plays Dean on Another World. I would like to know his birthday and marital status. What did he do before AW? How old is he?

I would also like to know whatever happened to Robert Kelker-Kelly, who played Sam Fowler on AW. —Ketta Mays, Texarkana, Texas.

Dear Reader: Goldin began his acting career in the theater. He made his stage debut in 1977, starring opposite JoBeth Williams in the long-running production of Three Plays by Thornton Wilder. He has also starred in the stage version of On Golden Pond, with Frances Sternhagen and Tom Aldridge, the off-Broadway hit Feathered Serpent and several other plays.

Before accepting the role of Dean Frame, Goldin appeared on a variety of television sitcoms and movies. His first soap opera part was on Ryan's Hope, where he originated the role of Rick. He has also been in several feature films including One Cup of Coffee, Mirror, Mirror, Lambada, The Unsinkable Shecky and the remake of The Blob.

Goldin is dating One Life to Live's Yasmine Bleeth. He has never been married. His birthday is Jan. 5, and he is in his 20s.

You can now see Robert Kelker-Kelly as Bo Brady on Days of Our Lives. He has done a terrific job of stepping into the character of Bo after the departure of Peter Reckell, whom he greatly resembles. When he left, Reckell made the comment that he didn't think anyone could take over the part he created, but Kelker-Kelly has proved him wrong.

Send your comments to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, P.O. Box 961009, Fort Worth, Texas, 76161-1009.

Did democracy go to highest bidder?

'Frontline' looks at government in crisis

By Suzanne Gill

It takes votes to get elected, but it takes money to campaign, and there's the root of evil in our democratic system, according to prize-winning author and broadcast journalist William Grieder. In a Frontline special airing Wednesday, April 15, on most PBS affiliates, Grieder is smart enough to let the lobbyists and legislators speak for themselves.

"Elected officials perceive that they need votes," observes Curtis Moore, former Republican counsel to the Senate Environment Committee, "and the source of that is from voters. And they need money, and the source of that is basically corporations. If you're forced to choose one or the other, it's a lot easier to fool the public than it is to fool the money."

Former Democratic party loyalists say no politician will stoop to claim a campaign contribution of less than $1,000. Graying blue-collar and middle-class voters agree that they are voiceless victims in a system where money talks and campaigning is a rich man's sport. Most startling of all is the arid observation of a former aide to the Carter administration. "Of course people can't play in democracy," he says, without trace of irony.

Has Lincoln's "government of the people, by the people and for the people" truly perished? Greider seems to be saying that heroic measures will be required to resuscitate what he calls our "shared civic faith."

The Betrayal of Democracy is a strong dose of medicine, but these two hours will be more enlightening than any speech or debate between now and November. To its credit, the show also focuses attention on the politics of print journalism in a thoughtful discussion with Bob Woodward of The Washington Post.

While Grieder's premises and proofs merit discussion if not outright argument, his conclusions have the ring of truth: Citizens, he says, have been forced to take to the streets, whether to protest toxic dumps or teacher cutbacks. They have become political guerrillas in the country they are supposed to govern.

Q: I'm really hoping you can help me out. I'm a big fan of Linda Hamilton, and I have not been successful in obtaining her fan club address or obtaining any kind of address to send her some fan mail. I've seen her on Late Night With David Letterman and she talked about how she enjoyed receiving things from her fans, and I've written and recorded a song for her. It's just my way of saying thanks for her talents and for entertaining me in her movies and

Q: Has ABC canceled The Young Riders? The way they keep changing their programming, it is hard to keep up. My family really loved the show and missed seeing it. It was a nice change from all the look-a-like sitcoms and soap opera-ish dramas that prevail on the tube. Where can we write to express our views? — C.B. Norman, Nacogdoches, Texas.

A: The show has been canceled. I agree, it's difficult to keep up with the network shuffle. For example, Homefront has only been on a short while, but already it has been moved from Tuesdays to Wednesdays. ABC isn't the only network that moves their programs around, but they do seem to be one of the worst. It's too late for The Young Riders, but go ahead and write ABC at 77 West 66th Street, New York, N.Y., 10023.

TIME OUT

Masters tourney an American crusade

By Steve Paschal

Throughout its 55-year history, the Masters golf tournament has yielded some of the most dramatic moments in PGA history. However, few have equalled last year's improbable finish. Five American challengers fell to Augusta's treacherous back nine, while Ian Woosnam held on to make it four straight years that the traditional green winner's blazer was worn by a player from the United Kingdom.

Eagles flew with astounding regularity during the roller coaster final round. But both the brilliance and the bungling displayed on those decisive final holes were overshadowed by the wave of anti-European sentiment that swept the gallery at the supposedly-staid Augusta National Golf Club. Fans, frustrated with America's poor showing, vented their emotions on the man his countrymen call "Wee Woosie."

This year's Masters has become somewhat of an American crusade. Encouraged by a field that includes the red-hot Fred Couples and reigning PGA champion John Daly, the Americans are poised to retake Augusta and apply some salve to their wounded pride.

Airing Sunday, April 12, for the 37th consecutive year, CBS Sports will broadcast live the Masters final round, with Pat Summerall heading the team of commentators. □ TV Listing Inc.

The Ice Pirates ★★ Space pirates try to save the universe by stealing galactic ice cubes. Robert Urich, Mary Crosby PG Profanity, Violence, Adult Themes. 2:00. (1984) □ April 17 12:05pm.

STAR NOTES

Marshall thinks 'Billy' relieves workers' stress

By Dan Rice

Dallas native Marie Marshall stars with Billy Connolly in Billy, a comedy about a divorced mother who enters a marriage of convenience with an immigrant professor in order to supplement her income. Billy airs Saturday nights on ABC.

The acting bug bit Marshall early in life, "when I realized you could choose that as a career. 'Wow, this is fun,' I thought, and if you take it in school there's no homework."

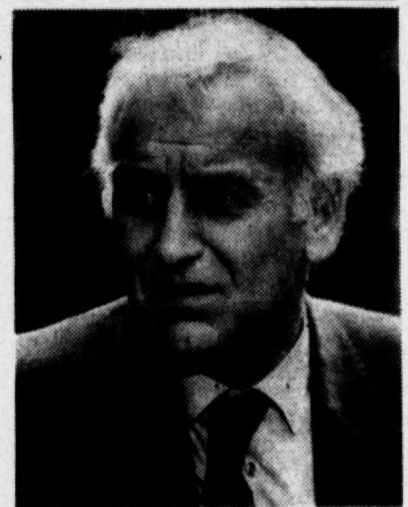

After studying theater at the University of North Texas, Marshall moved to New York, where she worked odd jobs while making auditions and hoping for that big break. Her persistence won her parts in commercials and on daytime dramas, plus roles on the stage.

The 10 years spent in New York had a surprising effect upon Marshall.

"I auditioned for the Oliver Stone movie (JFK), and I realized that I'd been in New York too long when I could do a Brooklyn accent better than my native Texan accent. It crushed me. I thought, 'Oh no, I've lost my roots.'"

The same casting director who got her a guest shot on NBC's Wings set her up with the audition for Billy, which Marshall describes as more realistic than The Cosby Show. She believes that "comedies are strong this year because people need to to come home and be able to laugh and be distracted from what's going on in the workaday world."

Will hand-me-down roles fit Mel Gibson?

Everything old is new again, at least for Mel Gibson. Not only does the actor have another film sequel for his signature role in Lethal Weapon 3 coming out in May of this year, but the word is that Gibson may sign on as the new James Bond. While his screen image may be tougher than the Bonds of Roger Moore or Timothy Dalton, some would argue that the Road Warrior is still quite a stretch from 007 as defined by Sean Connery.

And it seems that Gibson is reaching even further than a license to kill — how about a license to deal? Believe it or not, Gibson will play Texas gambler Bret Maverick in a film to be produced by Gibson's own Icon Productions for release by Warner Bros. James Garner, who created the comedic role in the TV western series of the '50s and '60s, will have a supporting part in the picture.

Mel Gibson

Incidentally, Roger Moore also played a Maverick on the old series — Bret and Bart's English cousin, Beau.

It's prime time, do you know where your children are? Production has been completed in San Jose, Calif., for the made-for-CBS movie Baby Snatcher, starring Veronica Hamel and Nancy McKeon. Another harrowing drama based on a true story, Baby Snatcher concerns a desperate woman (Hamel) who fakes a pregnancy to save her failing marriage to a much-absent Air Force captain. When it's time for the blessed event, she poses as a baby sitter to abduct the newborn baby of a divorced mother of three (McKeon). While the pseudo-mom tries to explain her absence of stretch marks, the real mother frantically searches high and low for her missing infant.

TV ignores or distorts lives of most people

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's psychologists said today that commercial television doesn't portray children, the elderly, minorities and women as they really are.

And television doesn't even try to appeal to many groups in society, they said.

Instead, television is fixated on appealing to young and affluent Americans, those with enough money to buy sponsors' products, a task force appointed by the 108,000-member American Psychology Association said.

"The major flaw in American broadcasting is that commercial television must generate revenue through programming that attracts large, heterogeneous, affluent audiences which do not represent the majority of viewers," the panel said in a report on the impact of television on society.

"So long as the primary goal of programming is to lure audiences to advertisements, the needs of many demographic and ethnic minorities will not be met."

To broaden television's reach, the report called for returning to the original philosophy of the Communications Act of 1934, the basic law regulating broadcasting. It said that philosophy - requiring that broadcasters serve the public interest, convenience and necessity - had withered away in the deregulatory trend of the 1980s.

The report acknowledged, however, that researchers still can't agree on TV's impact. Some see it as trivial, innocuous and irrelevant; others argue that television affects how people think and "induces a generally passive, intellectually lazy approach to dealing with the world."

The authors said the most needed change is to increase non-commercial sources of funding to break television's dependency on commercials.

They welcomed creation by Congress last year of the National Endowment for Children's Television but said more along those lines was needed to meet the desires of other groups for information and entertainment.

Recapping the findings of years of research, the report said:

-The "model female on TV" is not like women. On television, she is "beautiful, dependent, helpless, passive, concerned with interpersonal relations, warm and valued for her appearance more than for her capabilities and competencies."

-Constant portrayals of sexual violence "leads to increased acceptance of rape" and "can instigate antisocial values and behavior."

-The average child watches three hours a day and witnesses 8,000 murders and 100,000 other acts of violence by seventh grade.

-Violent incidents occur of five or six times an hour on prime time and 20 to 25 times an hour on children's Saturday morning programs.

-While blacks are now appearing in more major and positive roles on TV, ethnic minorities are "virtually absent" from the screen. Those who appear are stereotyped as criminals, dangerous characters or victims of violence.

-Most "implied sexual activity" on television involves unmarried couples "with little emotional attachment or commitment to one another."

It's a great world.
But the daytime, Sunday, Tuesday and Wednesday the weekend it every day on...

TRIVIA, ETC.

What did Wizard's balloon say?

By Steven Alan McGaw

Questions:

1. What words were painted on the hot air balloon seen at the end of The Wizard of Oz?
2. Name the actor who played Paul Bratter in Barefoot in the Park.
3. In 1967's Hotel, who played the manager? (Bonus: Where was the film set and what was the name of the hotel?)
4. How many times did Dorothy have to click the heels of the ruby slippers to get home?
5. Identify the following characters and the film in which they are found: Raymond Shaw, Bennett Marco. (Here's a hint, sort of: The actress who played Shaw's mother now stars in a popular TV series. Name her and the rest is easy.)
6. Name the unlucky actor who played the captain in Airport '77.

Answers:

1. The balloon read, "State Fair Omaha."
2. Robert Redford.
3. Rod Taylor played the manager of New Orleans' St. Gregory Hotel.
4. Three.
5. Laurence Harvey plays Shaw, while Frank Sinatra takes the role of Marco. Angela Lansbury, of CBS' Murder She Wrote, enacts the manipulative Mrs. Shaw in 1967's The Manchurian Candidate.
6. Jack Lemmon.
