ATLANTA (AP) — The investor who killed his family and nine people at two brokerage firms vowed in a note to kill "the people that greedily sought my distruction," police said today.

Mark O. Barton left the computer-generated note in the living room of his family's apartment in suburban Stockbridge, describing how he killed his wife and two children by hitting them in the head with a hammer Tuesday and Wednesday, said Jimmy Mercer, police chief in Henry County, where Stockbridge is located.

The note made no direct reference to the slayings at the two brokerage firms in Atlanta, except the veiled threat against greedy people.

Barton wrote that he killed his children — 11-year-old boy Matthew and 8-year-old girl Elizabeth Mychelle — to spare them the pain of living without parents.

"I forced myself to do it to keep them from suffering so much later," the note said. "No mother, no father, no relative."

Using a hammer "just seemed like a polite way to kill and a relatively painless way to die," he wrote. "There was little pain. All of them were dead in less than five minutes."

Barton also expressed regret for killing his wife, Leigh Ann, "my honey, my precious love."

"I killed Leigh Ann because she was one of the main reasons for my demise as I planned to kill the others. I really wish I hadn't killed her now. She really couldn't help it and I love her so much anyway," he wrote.

Barton, 44, killed himself Thursday evening as police closed in on him in Atlanta's northern suburbs about five hours after the shootings in Atlanta.

Twelve people were injured at the two brokerage firms, some by bullets and others by their frantic attempts to avoid the killer. Seven remained in critical condition today.

Six years ago, Barton was a suspect in the bludgeoning deaths of his first wife and her mother, authorities said. Mercer said Barton's note denied responsibility for those slayings.

Speculation on a motive has centered on Barton's work as a day trader, investors who dabble in risky, moment-by-moment changes in the stock market.

Maj. Phil Miller of the sheriff's department in Douglas County, west of Atlanta, said Barton lost $300,000 last year in day trading, or half of the money he had received from an insurance policy on his first wife.

The shooting rampage — the third in the Atlanta area in little more than two months — and the ensuing manhunt stunned the city of 3.1 million and quickly captured national attention. It was the latest in a grisly wave of mass slayings at schools and workplaces, and President Clinton today expressed sadness at the bloodshed.

Barton, dark-haired and 6-foot-4, was wearing khaki shorts when he walked into the Momentum Securities brokerage at the Two Securities Centre building in the trendy Buckhead section of Atlanta about 3 p.m. Thursday.

Four people were dead within minutes.

"I saw a lot of blood in the hallway," said Chris Carter, 32, who works on the building's third floor. "There was a trail of blood leading from one end of the hallway to the other." It wasn't immediately clear what relationship Barson had with the Momentum firm, if any.

Barton then walked across a busy six-lane road and into the All-Tech Investment Group, a day trading firm in the Piedmont Center building where he had been a client. Five died there.

Barton, who was carrying a pistol in each hand, at one point reportedly said: "I hope this doesn't upset your trading day."

Barton came into the office "and after speaking with our branch manager, suddenly stood up and for no reason opened fire on the manager and his secretary," Jai Ramoutar, director of All-Tech, said in a statement released from the company's headquarters in Montvale, N.J.

Nell Jones, 53, a day trader at All-Tech, said she was sitting at her computer when she heard shots.

"I was sitting outside the door when he exited, so I was the first person to look into his eyes," Ms. Jones told WSB-TV. "He was someone who was very calm and determined, no feelings. The bullet missed me and then he turned to shoot at other people, so I was able to escape,"

Campbell said the victims were shot with 9 mm and .45-caliber handguns.

OPEN HOUSE SET – Snyder National Bank will showcase its new drive in facilities Saturday as it hosts an open house from 9 a.m. until noon. The facility has six lanes for regular banking customers and two for commercial customers. (SDN Staff Photo)

Snyder National hosts open house Saturday

Scurry County residents will have an opportunity to see – inside and out- the recently-completed drive-in facility for Snyder National Bank.

The open house of the million-dollar drive in bank starts at 9 a.m. with a brief dedication ceremony in honor of the late Sue Mize, a long-time director.

Joe Jackson, SNB president and chief executive officer, says the public is invited to enjoy refreshments and entertainment, and register for one of many prizes that will be awarded during the morning.

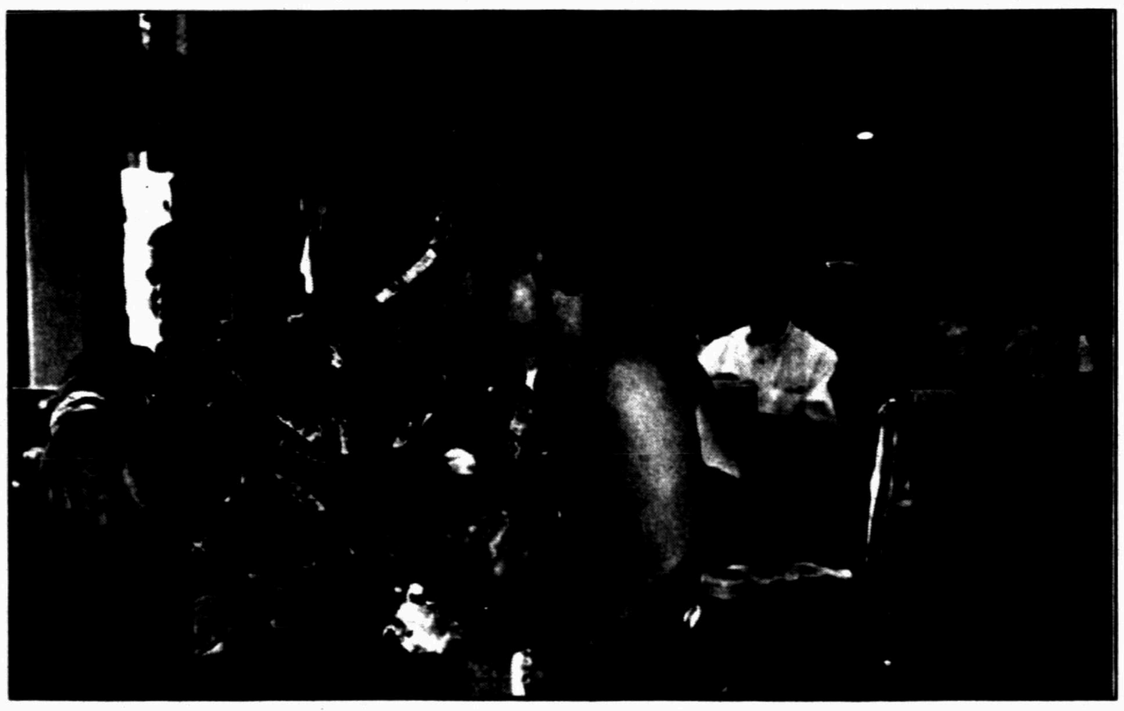

There will be a drawing for a vacation to Mexico for two, a drawing for $1,000 cash and two $500 drawings. There will also numerous drawings for other prizes.

The dedication of the drive-in facility to Mrs. Mize is because of her dedication to Snyder National Bank. Jackson added that Mrs. Mize was a major force behind the planning of a new motor bank. "She insisted that we build a first-class facility and design it so that it would enhance the appearance of downtown."

The facility features six express lanes on the west side of the facility, and two commercial lanes on the east side. Other features include a drive-up night depository and an automatic teller, or ATM machine, that will be available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The facility is fully-landscaped and features flag poles.

Snyder National Bank was established in 1905, and is the oldest financial institution in Snyder.

Knox, Gailey and Meador Inc. of Lubbock was the general contractor for the new facility which was designed by the Lubbock architectural firm of Stiles and Stiles.

Where there's a will there's a wedding

It wasn't exactly how it was planned, but Norma Duke became the bride of Larry Thompson.

It was supposed to be a small, private ceremony attended by only family members. But a motorcycle wreck Monday that resulted in life-threatening injuries changed all that.

Benjamin Elger, a retired Lutheran minister from Estes Park, Colo., Thursday morning pronounced the couple Mr. and Mrs. Larry Thompson to the applause of some 100 amazed staffers at St. Anthony's Hospital in Denver.

Thompson suffered a fractured skull and Norma sustained a broken hip when the motorcycle they were riding was hit head on by a car near their motel in Salida, Colo.

Thompson was taken by air ambulance to the Denver Hospital and initially placed on life support. He will be released from the hospital Saturday.

Norma was released from the hospital Thursday, just in time to be wheeled down the aisle by her brother, Mark Duke of Houston. Attendants were Thompson's daughter, Mindy, and her boyfriend, Scott Higby.

The couple had planned to marry in Colorado and had already purchased a marriage license. When the hospital learned of their remarkable recovery and marriage plans, the staff helped make the arrangements.

The retired minister is the father of the charge nurse in the intensive care unit where Thompson was treated. Also at the ceremony was the flight nurse that attended to Thompson following the accident

At the reception in a hospital conference room following the ceremony, the flight nurse said she would have given Thompson little chance of surviving, much less getting married three days later. "We didn't expect this happy of an ending."

The ceremony was also attended by Denver media, including TV stations and the Denver Post. The bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M.L. Duke of Snyder, watched the ceremony on the news Thursday afternoon.

And there were also wedding gifts. A Denver Harley-Davidson dealer presented the newlyweds with new motorcycle helmets.

Thompson said he intends to ride again, but Norma said her father had already given her different instructions.

Keeping tabs on our neighbors: Marshall Day, in the Gatesville Messenger, noted that most parents try to pass on lessons learned from the master teacher – experience.

Most adults, however, hope their children learn more quickly than they did.

You may remember all those weighty problems that kept you awake at night – like why a nickel is larger than a dime and still worth less.

Day has finally realized that the only people who want to get older are kids. If you're less than 10, you think in fractions. Only youngsters are two and a half.

You've never seen an adult who's 39 and a half, much less one that's 49 and eleven-twelfths.

Once you reach your teens, they can't hold you back. When you're 15, you tell folks you're actually 16 and so on. You could be 14, but soon you're gonna turn 18.

And then the big day happens, you become 21. Even the words sound like a cause for celebration.

But then you reach 30. Oh my! Some can even remember when parents were old and that age. It sounds like bad cottage cheese, the kind you hurry to the dumpster.

You become 21, then you turn 30. But watch out, 'cause before long you hit 40. That means you're pushing 50. And once you've stepped over the half-century mark, you are knocking on 60. Word is you build up momentum at this point.

Decades are really only 12 months long. After that, it's a day-to-day thing, says one of Day's friends.

You wake up, hit lunch, and turn 4:30. The clock has a race with the calendar – and it's a dead heat.

If you make it to 100, the clock and calendar begin to reverse. You become a little kid again and brag to folks that you're 100 and a half.

1948 crash wreckage located

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — For years, Marc Millican and Kevin McGregor have been fascinated with Northwest Airlines Flight 4422, which long ago plowed into a mountain peak, killing all 30 aboard.

The two pilots made it to the wreckage of the 1948 disaster on Saturday, reaching debris nestled in a remote valley buttressed by avalanche-prone walls and tucked under a glacier about 200 miles east of Anchorage.

They found not only bits of the flight's twisted propeller and shredded fuselage but human remains long preserved by ice and snow.

Alaska state troopers on Wednesday retrieved a human arm and hand from the wreckage, which Millican and McGregor found scattered about 10 miles inside Wrangell-St. Elias National Park and Preserve. The hand may be in good enough condition to be fingerprinted, said patrol spokesman Greg Wilkinson.

The wreckage for years had been too remote to reach safely. But a glacier has since pulled it down from its original 8,000-foot resting place on Mount Sanford, and it can be hiked to.

The DC-4 is believed to have collided with a near-vertical wall along the mountain's 16,237-foot peak on March 12, 1948.

The crash killed six crew members and 24 passengers, most of whom were members of the U.S. Merchant Marines who were returning from delivering a cargo ship to Shanghai. The flight was bound for Edmonton, Canada, and New York City.

More than the disaster's location has sat unresolved. Aviators still don't completely understand why a flight piloted by two veteran Alaska fliers airborne for just an hour would crash into a mountain in good weather, having sounded no distress report.

Only the aurora borealis has been blamed; it was shining that night like "the headlights of a car," a pilot who searched for the ill-fated flight told McGregor. Perhaps the pilots were blinded by the northern lights reflecting off a thin cloud layer atop Mount Sanford, investigators said at the time.

A few years ago, McGregor and Millican, both commercial pilots, began probing the debris' location after discovering their mutual interest in the disaster while attending an Air Force reunion.

"As we got more and more into it, I got more and more intrigued," Millican said.

Prior expeditions, some lured by rumors of gold aboard, had declared the wreckage too dangerous to approach. The pair located it only after repeatedly flying and hiking through the area.

"We took literally thousands of pictures, but we never saw it," Millican said.

The longtime friends said they discovered the wreckage in 1997 but waited to inspect it until receiving government clearance and unanimous consent from victims' families.

"It's a reopening," said Dorothy Denman of Anchorage, whose uncle, August Koistinen, was a passenger. "I've been crying."

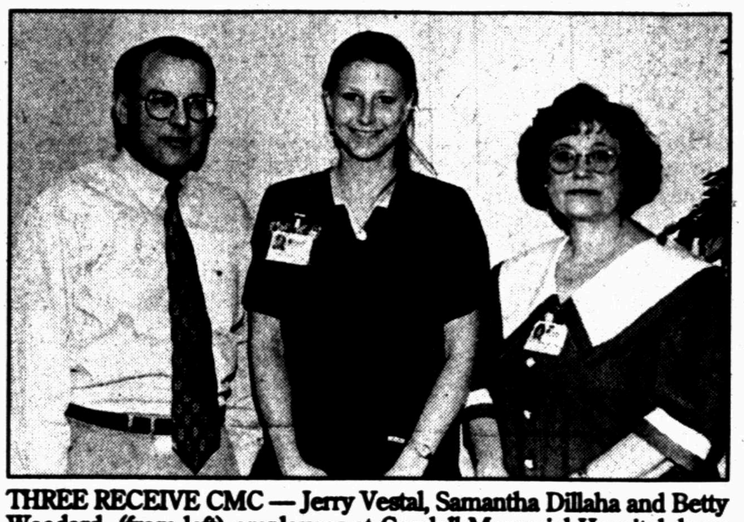

Millican, 42 and McGregor, 44, have been deliberately vague about the debris' location to safeguard it from the curious. They say they hope some wreckage they brought back — a twisted table knife with the old Northwest logo, an engine plate, a scrap of aluminum — can be displayed in a museum, or used in a memorial to the crash victims.

National Park Service officials have declared the area closed for two months while they decide how to handle any other visiting requests.

"We don't want treasure hunters in there out of respect for the families," said Jane Tranel, a National Park Service spokeswoman.

Shoemaker may get to be buried on the moon

HOUSTON (AP) — Eugene Shoemaker may finally get his lifelong wish to go to the moon.

If all goes as planned, a lipstick-sized vial carrying one ounce of the renowned astronomer-geologist's ashes will slam into the moon's south pole on Saturday.

The vial will be aboard NASA's Lunar Prospector, a moon-orbiting craft scientists hope will teach them about lunar water reserves.

Lunar Prospector is expected to hit the moon at 5:52 a.m. EDT Saturday.

It will be a fitting tribute for Shoemaker, 69, an authority on craters and the interplanetary collisions which cause them. The Arizona resident died in a 1997 car collision while crater-hunting in Australia.

Credited along with his wife for the discovery of about 20 comets and 800 asteroids, Shoemaker gained worldwide fame as a co-discoverer of comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 that slammed into Jupiter in 1994.

Carolyn Porco, a University of Arizona professor and Shoemaker's colleague on NASA's Voyager expeditions, spearheaded the tribute effort and designed an epigraph that accompanies Shoemaker's ashes.

"He is the very first human inhabitant of earth to be laid to rest on another celestial body," she said. "That's very significant because it says we have arrived at our place in the solar system, the solar system is our own and it's beckoning us."

David Morse, spokesman for NASA's Ames Research Center, called the memorial "a special honor for a special human being."

The container that carries Shoemaker's remains was manufactured by Celestis Inc., a Houston company that has used commercial rockets to launch into space the cremated remains of 55 people, including Star Trek creator Gene Roddenberry and 1960s drug guru Timothy Leary.

NASA officials expect the vial to pulverize on impact.

"If all goes well, it may literally be buried," said Lisa Chu-Thielbar, Prospector outreach coordinator.

Some of Shoemaker's ashes may rise in a cloud of soil and, perhaps, water vapor — the focus of the Lunar Prospector's swan-song experiment. NASA will use the Hubble Space Telescope to try to detect water from lunar ice in the plume created by Prospector's impact.

Shoemaker, a geologist by training, applied to be an astronaut in the 1960s but was rejected because of a medical problem. He later worked on several U.S. space missions, including the Apollo missions to the moon.

Top Y2K expert predicting extended failures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Don't expect the Year 2000 technology problem to disappear after Jan. 1. President Clinton's top Y2K expert said failures could extend well beyond New Year's Day.

Although John Koskinen predicts there will be a national "sigh of relief" in the early hours of Jan. 1, he also anticipates scattered electronic failures over the first days, weeks and even months of the new year.

Koskinen, chairman of the President's Council on Year 2000 Conversion, said in an interview Thursday with The Associated Press that some failures may not become obvious until the end of January, the first time after the date rollover that consumers review their monthly bank statements, credit-card bills and other financial paperwork.

"It won't evaporate until after that," Koskinen said. "Clearly, this is more than a January 1 problem." But he also slightly hedged his predictions: "None of us are really going to know until after January 1."

Unless repaired, some computers originally programmed to recognize only the last two digits of a year will not work properly beginning in 2000, when those machines will assume it is 1900.

Some computer systems may shut down quickly with obvious failures, and others may gradually experience subtle problems or degraded performance that may take weeks to notice.

"The more difficult problem will be where the system looks like it's doing it correctly but it's doing it all wrong," Koskinen said.

Some failures won't be recognized until the work week starts Monday, Jan. 3, as employees return to their offices and turn on their computers for the first time.

Repaired computers also will need to recognize 2000 as a leap year, even though most years ending in "00" don't need to adjust for Feb. 29, he said.

A new $40 million Information Coordination Center being organized down the street from the White House will operate until March, sharing information about failures with states, federal agencies, corporations and foreign governments.

Koskinen urged people to prepare for possible trouble as they might for a winter storm or a hurricane: Buy flashlights and batteries, keep enough cash, food and water for several days and make copies of financial and medical records.

But he also cautioned against stockpiling supplies, which could lead to local shortages, or draining bank accounts, which could strain the nation's financial system.

"If we get a couple hundred million Americans doing anything differently, we're going to create economic problems," he said.

An AP poll this month found most Americans don't expect major problems, but nearly a third plan to stock up on food, water and other supplies. About one-quarter of Americans planned to withdraw cash in case of trouble.

Koskinen predicted the most widespread problems will occur in developing nations that were slow to begin repair work. He named certain regions that recently suffered financial problems, including Southeast Asia, Eastern Europe and Russia. But he acknowledged that parts of Africa, Central America, South America and the Caribbean also were likely to suffer.

"Clearly, some of the developing countries of the world are going to have some difficulties," he said, adding that only 25 to 30 of the world's nations were well prepared. "Many more countries are going to have problems than not."

The State Department will begin issuing travel advisories in September for U.S. citizens about which countries to avoid.

Koskinen also disclosed that the government will consider evacuating American citizens from countries with widespread failures. He said each U.S. ambassador will make that decision.

Judge orders Clinton to pay $90,000

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — After five years of court battles and almost $1 million in remuneration from President Clinton, it's now up to Paula Jones' legal team to decide whether to push for more or put an end to her claims.

Clinton's lawyers say the president is willing to comply with a federal court order Thursday to pay about $90,000 in penalties for giving false testimony about his relationship with Monica Lewinsky.

But some in Mrs. Jones' camp, who had sought nearly $500,000, say they may appeal for more.

"We feel the court vastly underestimated the reasonable amount of time" spent working on perjury and obstruction-of-justice issues, the Dallas-based law firm of Rader, Campbell, Fisher & Pyke said in a statement. "In sum, we continue to assert that Ms. Jones' attorneys are entitled to the full amount of fees claimed, if not more."

Peter Lavallee, administrator of Clinton's legal fund, said the trustees wouldn't consider whether they could use the money they've raised for legal fees to pay the president's fine unless Clinton tells them he wants them to do so.

The award by U.S. District Judge Susan Webber Wright was on top of $850,000 Clinton paid to Mrs. Jones to settle the sexual harassment lawsuit she brought against him.

Clinton's testimony in the case led to his impeachment by the U.S. House and eventual acquittal in a Senate trial.

The judge in April issued a historic contempt ruling against Clinton and said she would order him to pay for costs that resulted from "false, misleading and evasive answers" in his January 1998 deposition in Mrs. Jones' lawsuit.

The president's lawyers argued that a reasonable sanction should be in the range of $12,300 to $33,737.

Mrs. Jones' lawyers, meanwhile, had requested $496,358 to cover costs incurred after Clinton's deposition.

In her order, Wright said the lawyers' claims were "excessive and must be reduced." She denied compensation for various news conferences held by Mrs. Jones' lawyers, as well as attorney expenses associated with Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's probe of Clinton.

The judge limited the sanctions to the costs most directly associated with Clinton's testimony about Ms. Lewinsky, beginning after a written statement he gave on Dec. 23, 1997. The judge said about 20 percent of Clinton's Jan. 17, 1998, deposition dealt with Ms. Lewinsky.

The Dallas firm said Thursday that it could have sought more than $1 million, "so the fees we requested are clearly fair and reasonable."

John Whitehead of the Rutherford Institute, a conservative group in Charlottesville, Va., that also represented Mrs. Jones' team, said he was pleased that Clinton was penalized but might appeal the amount.

John DiPippa, a constitutional law professor who has closely watched the case, said Mrs. Jones' lawyers should consider $90,000 a victory and put an end to the case.

"I think that the Jones attorneys come out better here in the end than the president," said DiPippa of the University of Arkansas at Little Rock. "(The judge) took a more generous view than the president's attorneys and did so as a way to send a message to the president's lawyers and other attorneys that they shouldn't act like this in deposition."

Wright wrote in her order that she took "no pleasure in imposing contempt sanctions" against Clinton, but they were necessary to "redress the president's misconduct and to deter others who might consider emulating the president's misconduct."

The Dallas law firm was awarded $79,999 and the Rutherford Institute $9,485. The judge also ordered Clinton to pay the court $1,202 for her trip to Washington at the president's request to preside over his deposition.

In her lawsuit, Mrs. Jones claimed that Clinton made an unwanted sexual advance in a Little Rock hotel room in 1991 while he was Arkansas governor and she was a state employee. Wright dismissed her suit on April 1, 1998, but Clinton agreed to the $850,000 settlement after Mrs. Jones appealed the dismissal.

Volunteer Hopes Public Will Get Clearer View of the Blind

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1999 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this on behalf of all people who are blind or visually impaired. You would be doing them a service if you would remind your readers that blind people are not "strange" or to be feared; they are ordinary people who, for whatever reason, cannot see.

I do volunteer work with the blind and hear the same stories over and over. I've finally concluded that most sighted people do not understand what blindness is all about.

1. Blindness is not contagious. My students tell me that people frequently back away from them when told they are blind.

2. Blind people are not hard of hearing; you don't have to raise your voice when you speak to them.

3. There are different degrees of visual impairment. Some have lost their peripheral vision, but can see straight ahead; others have only peripheral vision, while others have cloudy vision and can see only in bright light. Still others are totally blind.

4. Blind people cannot drive a car, but they can do just about everything else a sighted person can do, if given the chance.

The public needs to be educated on the white-cane laws. Only those with a visual impairment are allowed to carry white canes, and motorists are required to stop for anyone carrying one.

Guide dogs and service dogs, those wonderful creatures who give independence to the blind and other disabled people, are to be respected. Don't try to pet one when it is in harness. They don't bite, but by distracting the dog, the owner may be put in harm's way. If you feel you must pet one, ask permission first! And parents, for heaven's sake, teach your children never to pet the dogs. I have seen young children rush up to a guide dog and hug it.

Thank you, Abby, for spreading the word.

EILEEN PARLEE,
CATHEDRAL CITY, CALIF.

DEAR EILEEN: Thank you for a letter brimming with helpful information. There are many agencies nationwide that work with people who are blind or have a visual impairment. I would urge anyone who knows someone who has lost his or her sight to encourage that person to seek training so he or she can live independently. It can be done, and is being done.

DEAR ABBY: With reference to the letter about the 57-year-old grandmother raising a 7-year-old grandchild, let me tell you a wonderful story:

A young mother died giving birth to her third daughter. There was no one in the family to take the three girls, ages 6, 3 and 6 weeks old, into their homes. The great-grandmother came forward and took care of all three little girls. She was 83 years old at the time. How do I know this story is true? The 6-week-old child was my neighbor.

The great-grandmother lived until she was 99. So, Abby, all things are possible with the help of God.

DELORIS ROBINSON, DENVER

DEAR DELORIS: Thank you for an inspirational letter. I have received many letters over the years from people asking, "Abby, am I too old to ...?" Your letter proves that if the desire and determination are strong enough, no one is too old.

Bridge players are loath to apologize for error, but Hugh Ross, a Bermuda Bowl world championship winner in 1976, '85 and '87, does not fit this mold. He publicized this deal against himself.

First, with those West cards, what would you lead against three diamonds doubled?

Over East's three clubs (Stayman), if South had passed, East-West would have ended in three no-trump. Note, though, that they are laydown for six clubs, but this is very difficult (impossible?) to bid with a natural system.

If the opponents are sacrificing, it is usually best to lead a trump. Well, it wasn't here. After a black-suit attack, declarer can be held to five trump tricks for plus 1,100 to East-West.

However, having read all the textbooks, Ross led the diamond ace.

Now, a switch to the ace and another heart can net plus 500 from one trick in each suit and two heart ruffs. Yet not fancying any switch, Ross led a second trump. Disaster! Not only did this pick up his partner's jack, but after drawing trumps, declarer could drive out the heart ace and claim his contract. East-West was minus 670. The opening lead potentially made the small difference of 1,770 points!

It is a proof of strength

By Phillip Alder

Who wrote this? "I am being frank about myself in this book. I tell of my first mistake on page 850."

There are people who will never admit to having made a mistake, because they think it is a sign of weakness. In truth, it is the opposite: a sign of strength.

Sadly, bridge players are loath to apologize for error, but Hugh Ross, a Bermuda Bowl world championship winner in 1976, '85 and '87, does not fit this mold. He publicized this deal against himself.

First, with those West cards, what would you lead against three diamonds doubled?

Over East's three clubs (Stayman), if South had passed, East-West would have ended in three no-trump. Note,

English King John, who was illiterate, never signed the Magna Carta; he placed his seal upon it.

Motor bank opening dedicated to Sue Mize

Tomorrow's grand opening celebration of Snyder National Bank's drive-in facility is dedicated to the memory of Sue Mize.

Mrs. Mize served as a director of Snyder National Bank from 1987 until her death in 1997.

Mrs. Mize was an active member of the board of directors when planning started for the new motor bank.

Joe Jackson, president and chief executive officer, said Mrs. Mize remained the inspiration for the new facility.

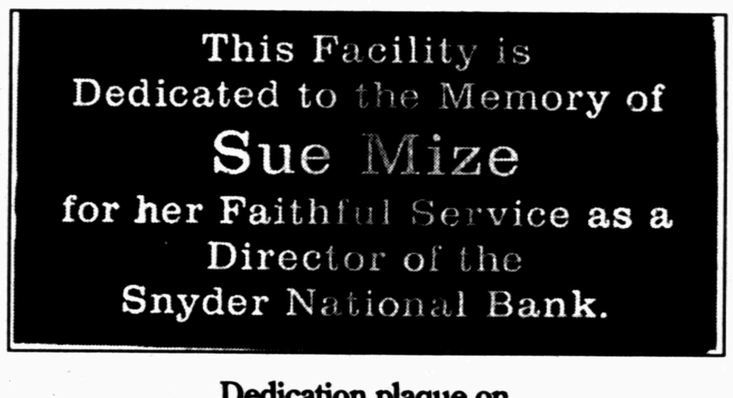

"Mrs. Mize envisioned a first-class facility – one that would not only serve the needs of our customers, but one that would enhance the appearance of the community," Jackson said.

What Mrs. Mize envisioned was not only a functional banking facility, but one that is well lighted and landscaped. Near the flagpoles, on the south side of the facility, is a dedication marker in honor of Mrs. Mize.

In addition to her service to the bank, Mrs. Mize was a longtime supporter of the community, especially Cogdell Memorial Hospital. She was a veteran Ladies Auxiliary member, and she was also appointed to serve on the hospital board of managers.

Mrs. Mize also served as a member of the Cogdell Foundation and spearheaded a financial drive to renovate portions of the hospital.

Mrs. Mize was a long-time member of Snyder's First Christian Church.

ATM machine available for SNB customers

The opening of the new million-dollar drive-in facility will now provide Snyder National Bank customers with the added service of an automatic teller machine (ATM).

The ATM allows customers the convenience of banking services 24-hours-a day, 7-days a week. The ATM never closes, bank officials said.

SNB customers wanting a ATM card and personal identification number should request one from the accounts department inside the main bank lobby.

Jack Gorman Jr., senior executive vice president, said there is no charge for obtaining an ATM card and there is no transaction fee when the card is used at a Snyder National Bank ATM.

During its 94 years, 10 persons have served as president of Snyder National Bank.

W.A. Fuller was Snyder National Bank's first chief executive officer, serving from 1905 to 1916. He was followed by P.L. Fuller who served as president until 1924.

The Fuller family connection continued when M.A. Fuller served from 1924 until 1939. Then came A.D. Erwin who served for 10 years, until 1939.

A fourth Fuller family member occupied the president's office starting in 1949 and W.M. Fuller served until 1953. A.C. Alexander was president from 1953-1957 and was followed by Roger B. Mize who served 13 years, until 1970. E.W. Schrader then became president of the bank for four years.

Roger Mize returned to Snyder National Bank in 1974 and served until his death in 1987. Mr. Mize was president of Snyder National Bank for a total of 26 years.

Rex Robinson then served as president of the bank from 1987-89. For the past 10 years, Joe Jackson has been the bank's president and chief executive officer.

Morgan fuels Ranger's victory over Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP) — Few people remember that Mike Morgan was selected 44 players ahead of Cal Ripken in the 1978 amateur draft. Although Ripken will one day be inducted to the Hall of Fame, Morgan has enjoyed a career worthy of the No. 4 overall pick.

Morgan made his 400th career start a memorable one, limiting the Baltimore Orioles to three hits in six innings Thursday and holding Ripken without his 400th homer in the Texas Rangers' 3-1 victory.

Morgan's lifetime 132-176 career can be attributed in part to the fact that he has played with more than a few bad teams. Now, however, Morgan is the winningest pitcher on a winning team and one of only 99 pitchers in baseball history to start 400 games.

"Over my career, the teams I've been on have won a lot of starts. That's why I'm still pitching," he said. "I guess 400 is an accomplishment. Good things have happened to me in the 21 years I've been pitching in this game. Eleven teams and 21 years. It's been nice."

In other AL games, Chicago beat New York 5-1 and Seattle stopped Kansas City 8-4.

While No. 400 proved noteworthy to Morgan, it remained elusive to Ripken, who went 1-for-3 and failed in a third straight game to attain his 400th homer.

Ripken came close in his first at-bat, driving a 3-2 pitch to the top of the left-field wall, but the ball bounded back onto the field, and he had to settle for a double.

"They built the wall just high enough," Morgan, 39, said with a grin. "It was a slider that backed up and he knocked the heck out of it. I caught a break."

One of the lousy teams Morgan played for was the 1988 Orioles, who lost their first 21 games. But Morgan fondly remembers that year, mainly because of Ripken.

"He's obviously one of the best ever, a class act and a great team player," Morgan said.

Roberto Kelly, Royce Clayton and Ivan Rodriguez hit solo homers for the Rangers, whose 10th win in 11 games expanded their lead in the AL West to a season-high nine games. Texas is 12-2 since the All-Star break.

Morgan (11-6) allowed one run, struck out two and walked two in taking over the team lead in wins. He was 4-10 lifetime against the Orioles, and had not won in Baltimore since September 1985. Earlier this year, he gave up eight runs in the first inning in a loss at Camden Yards.

John Wetteland pitched the ninth, completing the three-hitter for his major league-leading 31st save in 38 opportunities.

Juan Guzman (5-9) gave up three runs and six hits in 7 1-3 innings. He is rumored to be dealt by Sunday's trade deadline; if he goes, then his last pitch with Baltimore would have been the one that Rodriguez hit into the left-field seats to give Texas a 3-1 lead in the eighth.

"I'd like to stay here. I haven't had any problems here; they treat me first-class," Guzman said. "But if I have to go somewhere else I have to be a professional. I've been through this before, last year."

Guzman was obtained by the Orioles from Toronto last July before the trading deadline. If this was indeed an audition, then the only thing he didn't do was win the game.

"I felt like I did my job. I just didn't get any runs," Guzman said.

Kelly opened the third inning with his fifth homer, a shot to center estimated at 418 feet, but he gave the run back in the fourth when he lost Mike Bordick's fly to right in the sun. Bordick was credited with a triple and scored on a single by B.J. Surhoff.

SCC to host couples event

Some 44 teams are expected to tee off Saturday, the first day of the annual Raggedy Ann and Andy golf tournament at Snyder Country Club.

There will be a new champion this year as the defending champion duo of Ernie Armstrong and Brooke Lowrance are not entered this year.

There will be two tee times Saturday, at 8:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Teams will reverse tee times on Sunday.

Houston cooled by Rockies

DENVER (AP) — Vinny Castilla can empathize with Darryl Kile.

While Kile has struggled on the mound, prompting the Colorado Rockies to entertain trade offers, Castilla has floundered at the plate, hitting .203 since the All-Star break.

Both are hoping Thursday's 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros is a sign of things to come as the Rockies prepare to open a 12-game, 13-day road trip tonight in St. Louis.

Castilla homered and Kile (6-10) pitched eight strong innings to help the Rockies stop Houston's six-game winning streak and avoid going winless on their seven-game homestand.

"He threw a great game," Castilla said of Kile. "He's been like me. He's been through tough times. But you have to be professional and play hard every day."

Kile, who had given up 22 earned runs in his previous four starts, held his former team to two runs and seven hits in what might have been his final start in a Rockies uniform.

"I made a commitment to come here and pitch the best I can for as long as I'm here, and that's all I'm trying to do," Kile said. "You start thinking about other things and you're going to get out of your game."

In other NL games, Philadelphia defeated Florida 12-1 and Cincinnati beat Los Angeles 7-5.

Though Kile had a live fastball and retired the side in order four times, Astros manager Larry Dierker was hesitant to give him too much credit.

"I didn't think he threw the ball very well in the early part of the game," Dierker said. "I thought we went sleepwalking into the game and didn't really start getting some intensity until the middle innings. When we picked it up, (Kile) picked it up."

Kile cruised through the first seven innings, throwing 70 pitches and allowing just three hits, but he ran into trouble with a three-run lead in the eighth.

The Astros pulled to 4-2 on Matt Mieske's pinch-hit, RBI single and loaded the bases with two outs. After falling behind in the count, Kile escaped the jam when Richard Hidalgo flied out to right field.

"I'm tickled to death for (Kile)," Rockies manager Jim Leyland said. "I'm tickled to death for me. We needed to win a game — desperately. He came up big today."

Spellman gets second chance

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Alonzo Spellman lost his football career because he was having trouble handling his life. Now that he's got that under control, the Dallas Cowboys are bringing him back to the NFL.

Spellman, who missed all of last season following a summer filled with bizarre behavior, signed a one-year contract Thursday for the veteran minimum of $400,000.

There is no signing bonus, but the defensive end can make another $450,000 in incentives based on playing time and number of sacks.

"He's in the prime of his career," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said. "If he has success for us, he can play a lot of years. That's part of the upside."

Spellman was a first-round pick by the Chicago Bears in 1992 and an anchor on their defensive line for several seasons before being limited by injuries in 1997.

THE SNYDER DAILY NEWS

Navy to eliminate backlog of burials

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy will be sending a flotilla of ships to sea in a rush program to eliminate a backlog in burials at sea. The backlog was brought to light by the Navy's prompt burial of John F. Kennedy Jr., his wife and sister-in-law.

After the well-publicized burial off the Massachusetts coast July 22, the Navy fielded complaints from families who have deceased loved ones awaiting burial at sea, a privilege of sailors, veterans, their spouses and dependent children.

The Navy has 52 sets of remains in storage awaiting burial, some for several months, Rear Adm. Craig Quigley, a Pentagon spokesman, said Thursday. All but three of those are in storage at Portsmouth Naval Medical Center, Va. The rest are at Navy facilities on the West Coast.

Adm. J.P. Reason, commander of the U.S. Atlantic Fleet, ordered immediate action to eliminate the backlog after he learned of it, Quigley said.

"That was completely unacceptable to him and he's working very hard to remove that backlog," Quigley said. "Everyone involved in that would admit that this was not done very well and there's no really good reason for having that backlog there in the first place."

The burials of Kennedy, his wife, Carolyn Bessette Kennedy, and her sister Lauren Bessette occurred a day after their bodies were found in the waters off Martha's Vineyard, Mass., following the July 16 crash of Kennedy's private plane. Asked why the burials were handled without delay, Quigley said it was a case of an "unusual circumstance."

The destroyer USS Briscoe was at sea off the East Coast as the search for the Kennedy plane was under way.

"Because of the ability to be timely in that request, that was the decision that was made to send her north to accomplish the burials of those three at sea," Quigley said.

More than 10 ships will be involved in relieving the backlog of sea burials by Aug. 6. The only remains that won't be buried by then will be those for which families have requested a later date or set other special conditions, such as a specific burial location requiring more time, Quigley said.

The Navy said that no ships will be sent to sea just for burials but will conduct the ceremonies while deployed for other missions. The Navy blamed the backlog on several factors, including a reduced fleet and increased demands on remaining ships to participate in various operations.

Woman is accused of murder

DALLAS (AP) — A hospital worker is accused of murder today in the stabbing death of her 7-year-old daughter.

Decretsha Bowers, 25, remained jailed at Lew Sterrett Justice Center in lieu of $100,000 bond. Police said her daughter, Desiree, died Thursday night of multiple stab wounds to the abdomen.

Police say they don't expect anyone else to be charged in the slaying, but one other person was questioned earlier.

Investigators have not determined a reason why Ms. Bowers, who worked at Scottish Rite Hospital, would have harmed her own child.

"Several bad things have happened in her life, but certainly that does not excuse this type of behavior," said Dallas police Sgt. Jim Chandler. "She had been pretty depressed lately."

Church volunteer faces sex charges

GEORGETOWN (AP) — A one-time church youth volunteer has been indicted on 24 counts of molesting eight boys in Williamson County.

Most of the alleged victims were members of Austin's Riverbend Church, where Thomas Reid Jones, 28, had volunteered, said Ken Anderson, Williamson County district attorney.

The teen-aged boys, all younger than 17, were molested in 1998 and 1999, with one charge dating to 1993, Anderson said after Thursday's indictments.

Jones, who volunteered at the church for three to four years, was arrested in May on charges of sexually assaulting two boys. He remains jailed in Williamson County on $250,000 bond.
