Massive earthquake rocks central Chile

A couple strolls past the El Salvador Catholic Church in Santiago, Chile, this morning. The 18th-century church was badly damaged by a massive earthquake Sunday.

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — After shocks of a major earthquake rumbled through central Chile this morning, threatening to topple weakened buildings. The government said at least 124 people have been killed and 2,000 injured.

The capital, Santiago, and the major Pacific coast cities of Valparaiso and Vina del Mar — with a combined population of about 6 million — appeared to be the hardest hit by the quake, which struck at 7:47 p.m. (4:47 p.m. CST) Sunday.

The National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said the quake measured 7.4 on the Richter Scale. Within six hours, Santiago residents had felt about 48 aftershocks, some of them so strong they rocked highrises. Milder tremors continued through the night.

The government imposed a midnight to 5 a.m. curfew in the earthquake zone to prevent looting.

At midmorning Monday, chief government spokesman Francisco Cuadra announced that the death toll had been raised to 124, counting only newly found victims in Santiago and Valparaiso. As communications are restored and reports arrive from remote areas, the government feared the death toll would increase. Officials said that at least 2,000 people were hurt.

Melipilla, a town southwest of Santiago, was heavily damaged, the government said.

The situation in dozens of small rural communities in central Chile remained confused because of the communications failures.

People camped in the debris in city streets, away from their weakened homes. Authorities warned that walls in many of the adobe homes in towns near Santiago were cracked, and that they might collapse in the aftershocks.

"Our house may collapse anytime. I think I'll stay outside at least until daylight," said Monica Garrico, a housewife who was camping with neighbors on a sidewalk in a Santiago suburb. "The walls are full of cracks," she said.

After daybreak, workers started removing rubble from the streets of the capital and of Valparaiso and Vina del Mar. Public transportation was close to normal in Santiago, but by midmorning workers were still sweeping plaster and glass from streets.

When the quake struck Santiago, thousands of people ran screaming from their homes and broken glass showered the streets.

Ten people died when the front section of a church collapsed during Mass in San Bernardo, just outside Santiago, said Jaime Garcia, governor of the capital.

The quake shook Santiago for about five minutes. Jose Carcamo, who lives on the sixth floor of a downtown Santiago apartment building, said: "All of a sudden, this huge cloud of reddish dust came from nowhere. I thought it was the end of the world."

Santiago and the twin cities of Valparaiso and Vina del Mar on the Pacific coast appeared to have suffered the most, said the Government Emergency Office. Deaths also were reported in the cities of Rancagua and San Antonio.

Chilean officials said the quake's epicenter was 25 miles off the coastal resort city of Algarrobo, 88 miles northwest of Santiago.

In a nationwide radio and television address today President Augusto Pinochet announced the appointment of a high-ranking committee to coordinate assistance to the homeless and restore basic services.

Pinochet called on Chileans to remain calm as you have done in the last difficult hours, and to show solidarity to your brothers who have been hit by tragedy.

Electrical power was knocked out and telephone lines were jammed in Chile, making it difficult to gather information.

Reagan steps up fight for MX missile

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan isn't toning down his tough talk toward the Soviet Union as he enters a series of meetings leading up to the U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms talks in Geneva next week.

And, hoping to add leverage to those talks, the president is stepping up his fight for the MX missile today by formally asking Congress to pay for 21 additional nuclear-tipped weapons.

White House officials said today that Reagan intends to meet with several congressional groups this week to lobby for the missile.

"We're certainly not confident of victory in either house, that's why the president is getting involved," Sims told reporters.

icy-making body later this week and send the presidential negotiating team off to Geneva, told a group of conservative supporters the Soviet Union was "attempting to give legitimacy to its tyranny" around the world.

"Throughout the world, the Soviet Union and its agents, client states, and satellites are on the defensive — on the moral defensive, the intellectual defensive, and the political and economic defensive," Reagan declared in the speech last week.

Banks' failure creates economic wastelands in rural America

By FRED BAYLES

MOUNT Ayr, Iowa (AP) — The R&R Cafe on Highway 2 stands vacant, a sun-bleached "For Sale" sign in a window. Tractors sit in the R&R Implements lot west of town, but the business closed months ago. The FDIC now owns the equipment.

Mount Ayr is dying piece by piece. Two machinery dealers are gone. One of the town's three feed and grain businesses is closing. But the biggest shock to the 1,500 residents of this county seat came when their bank failed.

State officials declared the Tingley State Savings Bank insolvent last August, adding it to the corpses on Highway 2. Its furniture was carted off, its signs stripped from the building. Only the billboard flashing time and temperature remains.

The failures of Tingley State, which had assets of less than $20 million, and other small banks are creating economic wastelands in rural America, forcing farmers from their land and closing Main Street stores.

The nation's farm banks are failing at a rate unseen since the Depression. Twenty-five of the record 79 banks that closed last year were farm banks, institutions with more than 25 percent of their loans in agriculture.

ALTHOUGH THE bank failures represent only a fraction of the nation's 4,300 farm banks, the situation is worsening. Tingley State was one of three banks to close in Iowa last year, three banks have failed already this year. Eight farm banks have failed nationally.

"A bank failure just upends a community," said Iowa Banking Commissioner Tom Huston, whose department lists 141 of the state's 530 banks as having excessive debt-to-capital ratios. "More and more farmers and businessmen go broke — what you see happening slowly is the collapse of an economy."

The townspeople and farmers of Mount Ayr, an oasis in the rolling hills of corn and soybean fields near the Missouri border, know the problem firsthand.

"If we don't get something done soon we're not going to have a community left in six weeks," said Don Small, owner of the Small Corral restaurant and bar on a corner of the town square.

Empty windows from several failed shops stare across the square at the Ringgold County Courthouse. A handwritten sign at the Princess Theater says "Closed. No Show." It has become too expensive to heat the tiny movie theater.

Compromise talks on water plan begin

AUSTIN (AP) — Compromise talks on the Senate and House versions of the statewide water program were to begin today with the expected naming of five Senate conferees.

The Senate was scheduled to meet at 11 a.m. and the House at 2 p.m.

The House on Friday refused to accept the Senate-passed version and named its five representatives who will sit on the 10-member conference committee.

The House conferees are Reps. Tom Craddick, R-Midland; Gerald Geistweidt, R-Mason; Henry Clark, D-Buna; J.W. Buchanan, D-Dumas; and Chip Stanislavski, R-Amarillo.

The Senate bill from Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, calls for $1.2 billion in water bonds and passed 29-1 on Wednesday. Craddick's House bill calling for $800 million in water development bonds plus $250 million in loan guarantees passed about two weeks ago.

The Senate version includes $400 million in bonds for state participation in local projects; $200 million for water supply projects; $200 million for water quality projects; $200 million for flood control, and $200 million for agriculture conservation loans.

The House bill has $400 million for water supply projects, $200 million for water quality projects and $200 million for flood control.

The Senate bill would allow the state to regulate ground water pumping if local voters failed to do so, while the House bill lets local voters reject controls on ground water pumping.

The Senate bill has $15 million for research into agricultural conservation with a $5 million pilot program of loans to farmers that could be expanded to $200 million by the 1987 Legislature.

The House bill appropriates $10 million for research into agricultural water conservation.

Man arrested in Pittsburgh theft

By MARK LEWIS and HALLIE JORDAN
Staff Writers

A 32-year-old Midland man was arrested Sunday night by police who staked out his northeast residence during a month-long investigation into the alleged theft of $2 million in government funds.

Shabbir Syed, 4735 Boulder, remains in city jail awaiting extradition to Pittsburgh on charges of theft of government property, according to Lt. Earl Luckey, who headed the Midland Police Department end of the investigation.

Syed, a Pakistani national who became a U.S. citizen in October, is suspected in the misappropriation of $82,742 from the Greater Pittsburgh Business Development Corp., according to the Allegheny County District Attorney's Office.

"We do intend to extradite him and bring him back to Pennsylvania," said Tony Bittner, assistant district attorney for Allegheny County, which includes Pittsburgh.

Georgeann Cherpes of the Allegheny DA's Office said this morning "it's quite possible" that they will request that bond be denied or set high because of the possibility of Syed fleeing the country.

Syed left Pittsburgh in July 1982, five months before the theft was reported to police. In Midland, he was employed as a part-time bookkeeper with Rittenhouse Oil and Gas Co. until last December, according to a company spokesman.

Luckey, who said the police department began surveillance of Syed in December, said Syed and his wife were seen packing and leaving their house about three weeks ago.

Luckey said the couple returned to their Midland home Sunday night and Syed was arrested. No charges were filed against his wife.

Contacted in December by the Reporter-Telegram in connection with the investigation, Syed declined to comment and referred all calls and questions to Midland attorney James Boldrick. But Boldrick said this morning he was no longer representing Syed.

"He never did employ me," Boldrick said. "I have no knowledge of the facts (regarding Syed's arrest)."

Syed declined to decide if he would waive extradition until he acquires an attorney. Luckey said today. Even if he does not waive extradition, he could be held as a fugitive from justice for as long as extradition proceedings take, which could be up to three months. The Allegheny DA's office may choose to file the charges in the U.S. District Court in Midland.

Haydon's setback could speed recovery

NATION IN BRIEF

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — William Schroeder today marked his 100th day with an artificial heart and doctors said surgery to stop bleeding around Murray Haydon's plastic pump was a temporary setback that would speed his recovery in the long run.

Schroeder, the world's second recipient of a permanent artificial heart, was listed in satisfactory condition Sunday and doctors still held out hope that he would be able to attend his son's wedding on March 16. That would be Schroeder 112th day with the heart, exactly how long pioneer patient Barney Clark lived with his device.

Meanwhile, Dr. William C. DeVries and other doctors are "generally satisfied" with results of the 90-minute operation performed Saturday night to staunch bleeding from a pinhead-sized hole in Haydon's right atrium, or upper heart chamber, Humana Inc. spokesman Robert Irvine told reporters at a briefing Sunday.

NATION

"Dr. DeVries feels the bleeding had actually slowed Murray Haydon's progress and the building up of his strength," Irvine said.

The operation is expected to put Haydon back three to four days, but "in terms of the overall recovery plan, it probably will go faster now that they've got the bleeding problem generally corrected," he said.

Doctors expect the 58-year-old retired autoworker from Louisville to regain strength and weight more rapidly with the bleeding stopped. An X-ray Sunday showed no additional fluid buildup in his chest, a spokeswoman said.

Haydon continued to breathe with a respirator although he will be weaned from the support system over the next two to three days, Irvine said.

Doctors hope to move Haydon out of the coronary care unit at Humana Hospital Audobon within the next week and he was expected to get out of bed Monday or Tuesday, he said.

Haydon's family visited him Sunday, Irvine said. During Haydon's surgery, his family was visited by Margaret Schroeder, the wife of Haydon's only living peer.

Schroeder enjoyed a wheelchair ride in a hallway Sunday afternoon and visited with his wife and other family members, said Humana spokeswoman Linda Broadus.

Schroeder's sons spent part of the weekend learning to operate a customized van that will be available once he is strong enough.

"Our first hope is that he'll be able to take a van ride in the next few days," Irvine said.

Hospital officials hope the next step will be a move to a transitional apartment and then a trip to his son Terry's wedding in Jasper, Ind., he said. "But we've seen enough ... to know we really have to take Bill Schroeder's recovery one day at a time, one week at a time."

Schroeder, who received the Jarvik-7 implant Nov. 25, was in satisfactory condition, while Haydon was in critical but stable condition Sunday.

Haydon's vital signs were normal, and his kidney function had returned to the same level he had before the artificial-heart implant Feb. 17.

Police officers charged in murder of club owner

HIALEAH, Fla. (AP) — Two police officers and a third man have been charged in the armed robbery and murder of a former night club owner and a woman, whose partially decomposed bodies were found at least a week later, police said.

Officers Richard Bannister Caride, 26, and Carlos Ramon Simon, 28, were charged Saturday in the deaths of Michael Corso, 47, and Buelah Del Panta, 32, Metro-Dade police announced.

Also charged in the murders was Luis Perez, 32, who police said confessed to the crime. Police say the motive in the deaths was drugs and money and that both officers have been suspended without pay.

Fireman saves children

NEW YORK (AP) — An off-duty fireman hung by one arm from a fourth-story window and used the other to pluck to safety three children trapped in their burning apartment, a fire chief said.

"I've never seen anything quite like it," Chief George Marron said Sunday after Dennis Williams, 34, rescued Tyesha Adams, 2, and her sisters Serina, 3, and Deslaun, 6. The children were treated for smoke inhalation.

The fire started in the children's bedroom and "more than likely" was caused by children playing with matches, Marron said. The girls' father and his 10-year-old son were rescued by firefighters using a ladder truck.

Beauty queen resigns

MERRIMACK, N.H. (AP) — Miss New Hampshire-USA Rhonda Niles says she resigned for "personal reasons" after being charged with receiving stolen property, and that pageant officials did not force her out.

Meanwhile, Ms. Niles' attorney, William Hopkins, said Sunday that the clothing store from which the items were allegedly stolen does not want to prosecute and "police will be closing their file."

Ms. Niles, 19, was arrested Tuesday in her Plymouth State College dormitory room on the misdemeanor charge. She had been crowned three days earlier. The runner-up, Janice LaCroix, 21, of Manchester, is in line for the title.

Amputee takes hostage

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A double-leg amputee who claimed to have weapons and explosives and demanded drugs took a hospital patient hostage, but surrendered about 90 minutes later after receiving a pain-killer, police said.

Leonard Bellecourt, 36, was taken to Hennepin County Medical Center security ward and will be charged with making terroristic threats and assault, police Lt. Larry Ward said after the incident Saturday.

About 60 patients, 20 of them in the intensive care unit where the standoff occurred, were evacuated from rooms in Abbot Northwestern Hospital during the incident, officials said. Bellecourt was in a wheelchair.

Protesters face hearings

BRIDGEPORT, Pa. (AP) — Sixty-one anti-abortion protesters face preliminary hearings next month after they were charged with criminal trespass during a demonstration at a facility where abortions are performed, police said.

Those arrested Sunday at the Women's Medical Center were freed on their own recognizance, said police officer John Cane. About half of the 61 were among the 46 people arrested Feb. 23 after they occupied the building, Cane said.

One of those arrested Sunday also was charged with simple assault, he said. The protesters did not get inside the building Sunday.

Authorities rescue teen

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — Authorities rescued a 14-year-old boy trying to save his brother, two sisters and a cousin from a house fire, but were unable to break through smoke and flames to the rest of the children, officials said.

Edward McDonald was saved by police officers John Jugus and Greg Policare, who dashed into the burning house where Melinda McDonald, 13, her 9-year-old brother Kenneth, her sister Doreen, 7, and cousin John McDonald, 13, died.

The blaze apparently started in an unoccupied bedroom in the rear of the upper floor, said Pittsburg Fire Chief Joseph Keating. Investigators said Sunday they had not determined what caused the fire.

Blood banks receive tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Blood banks nationwide began receiving a new test designed to help prevent blood donors from passing AIDS to transfusion recipients.

The Food and Drug Administration and the Health and Human Services Department on Saturday approved a new AIDS test kit manufactured by Abbott Laboratories of North Chicago, Ill.

HHS Secretary Margaret M. Heckler said the test was the "answer to the prayers of thousands of Americans facing surgery or otherwise requiring blood."

Abbott officials said the kits, which will test for antibodies to the virus that causes the usually fatal acquired immunity deficiency syndrome, were being shipped to blood banks in Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Half of new jobs expected in 30 communities

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Job seekers should continue to look to the Sun Belt states, with cities such as Houston and Anaheim, Calif., expected to lead the growth in employment through the year 2000, a national research group reports.

A new study released Sunday by the National Planning Association anticipates that half of all new jobs created by 2000 will occur in just 30 metropolitan areas.

California is host of seven of these growing communities, while Florida and Texas each include five of the places expected to be big job gainers.

The planning association, a private, non-profit research group, said Houston will lead the way in new jobs, gaining 1,268,700 by the year 2000.

In general, the South and West will continue to attract employers, explained the association's Nestor Terlecky.

New industries are behind the development of many cities where rapid growth is forecast, such as energy in Houston and high-technology in New England and California.

In addition, Terlecky noted that "population for the most part follows jobs. So when we have increased employment in some areas we have increased population, and that generates more jobs."

Those new jobs, he commented, are often in the housing and construction industries or in service businesses.

However, Terlecky stressed that such trends cannot be followed blindly by statisticians, because none of them can persist forever.

"Otherwise," he said, "we will wind up with New York and Michigan being empty and everyone going to Nevada."

Instead, he noted, there has been somewhat of a revival in Michigan with the population beginning to grow again in the last year or two. And New England is doing better than in recent years.

Still, Houston is projected to be the biggest gainer, despite a recent slowdown. The only other community expected to gain more than a million jobs is the Anaheim-Santa Ana, Calif., region, the planning association said.

Besides Houston, four other Texas communities are expected to be big gainers: Dallas, Austin, San Antonio and the Fort Worth-Arlington area.

California growth leaders, besides Anaheim, are expected to be the Los Angeles-Long Beach area, San Jose, San Diego, San Francisco, Oakland and the Riverside-San Bernardino area.

Florida also did well, placing five metropolitan areas on the list. Those are Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fort Lauderdale, Miami, Orlando and Palm Beach.

Here is a rundown of the 30 metropolitan areas expected to lead in job growth through the year 2000 and the number of new jobs expected:

Community	Job Increase
1. Houston	1,268,700

2. Anaheim, Calif.	1,004,300

Students' deaths may be linked to measles

ELSAH, Ill. (AP) — A third Principia College student has died during an outbreak of measles that has affected 96 people since Jan. 11 at the southern Illinois college run by Christian Scientists, officials say.

Jennifer Evans, 16, of Elsie, died Friday in her college dormitory, Jersey County Deputy Coroner Richard W. Young said Sunday. Final autopsy results for the two previous victims are expected this week, Young said.

Scott A. Shadrack, 19, of Holliston, Mass., died at the school Feb. 22 and an autopsy showed signs of pneumonia in Shadrack's lung tissue, said Coroner Paul Schroeder.

On Feb. 5, Charlotte Bertleson, 23, of Tucson, Ariz., became the first student to die during the measles outbreak. Her death certificate listed the cause as heart failure preceded by pneumonia, Schroeder said.

An autopsy was not performed and officials say they are investigating both of the earlier deaths to determine whether they are linked to measles.

Measles is a common and highly contagious viral disease of childhood which tends to recur in epidemics every two to four years. Pneumonia is the most frequent cause of death in measles, according to Van Nostrand's Scientific Encyclopedia.

College officials say the outbreak which has affected 96 students, is the first to hit the small school in 50 years.

Principia is not officially connected with the Christian Science Church, but students and faculty must accept church's teachings, which include that death, disease and sin can be overcome through prayer. College President John Boyman, however, has said the faith does not deny freedom of choice and that students may receive immunizations.

Osmar first out of Skwentna; Moose forces Butcher out of race

By DAVID FOSTER

SKWENTNA, Alaska (AP) — While an ornery moose knocked Susan Butcher out of the running, rookie Tim Osmar raced ahead to lead the pack out of Skwentna as the 1,100-mile Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race crossed the 148-mile mark.

Osmar, the 18-year-old "Kid from Clam Gulch," rushed into this checkpoint on the Skwentna River at Sunday and left about six hours later. He beat his closest rival, Lavon Barve, into Skwentna by 40 minutes.

Ms. Butcher, who grabbed an early lead Saturday out of Anchorage, ran into bad luck that evening when a moose waded into her team of 17 dogs, killing one and injuring at least seven others about 100 miles into the race.

"I was having a beautiful run and the trail was perfect," Ms. Butcher said. "I didn't even see the moose until she was in the team."

"She came stomping through the team and wouldn't leave. She killed one of the dogs pretty quickly so I couldn't get the dogs to go by her. They got all tangled and twisted."

Ms. Butcher and the moose stared at each other for 20 minutes until musher Duane Halverson came along. He shot the moose and the two racers gutted it as required by rules, then continued on to Rabbit Lake.

Ms. Butcher continued 34 miles to Skwentna, but noticed more dogs were limping and others had signs of internal injury. Sunday night, she decided to scratch from the race.

She was the third musher to call it quits. A rock near a curve in the trail before Eagle River sent Italian musher Armen Katchikian sprawling Saturday and caused him to scratch because of an injured shoulder. Norman Vaughan, at 80 the race's oldest musher, took a spill at the same spot, hurting his knee. He continued on until Rabbit Lake, then quit.

The same rock tumbled Joe Redington into a tree. The spill crippled his right arm, but the 68-year-old "Father of the Iditarod" pushed on.

"I guess I'm getting used to being banged up," Redington said as he fed his dogs at Skwentna, his right arm held close to his side. "Been banged up so many times, I come to expect it. If it had been my left arm, it wouldn't have been so bad. Never could use my left arm. But I guess I'll learn now."

Three men arraigned for wire thefts

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Three men arrested in Utah are being questioned about copper wire stolen from railroad yards here and in five other states, state authorities say.

The three, arrested Tuesday when police said they tried to sell a carload of copper wire at the Utah Metal Works, 905 W. Everett, faced a Monday arraignment here on fugitive warrants issued by courts in Roundup and Billings, Mont.

Edgar H. Sherman, 46, Yellville, Ark.; Carl E. Hyder, 22, Atlanta; and Roger Davis, 24, Helena, Mont., were booked into the Salt Lake County Jail for investigation of "theft by receiving."

Agent Steve Vojtecky of the state Bureau of Organized Crime and Criminal Information said the three men and another being held in the Musselshell County, Mont., jail were being questioned about a series of railroad equipment thefts and incidents of train engine vandalism over the past five or six weeks.

The incidents have taken place in Utah, Idaho, California, Arizona, Texas and Montana at yards belonging to the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Burlington Northern railroads, officials said.

"(Thieves) would travel around from state to state and steal things from the railroads," mainly copper and communications wire later sold for salvage, Vojtecky said.

In Utah, copper wire was stripped from five or six train engines Feb. 12 at the Union Pacific yard in Salt Lake City, causing more than $30,000 in damage, the agent said.

"(The thieves) do all this damage and get so little out of it. They damaged far more than they stole," Vojtecky said. "They'd steal maybe $5,000 worth of stuff, while causing maybe $30,000 damage, and then they'd sell it for salvage for maybe $500."

Vojtecky said similar incidents were reported in Tucson, Ariz., and Sacramento.

Authorities confiscated about 3,000 pounds of copper wire, worth about 30 cents per pound, from the car apprehended Tuesday, along with railroad hardhats bearing the Southern Pacific logo.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Postpone arranging a legal settlement until more information is available. A Scorpio could bring up arguments you are not prepared to answer. Play for time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20):

Partnerships and alliances can be sensitive. A Leo makes an intriguing proposal. Advance original ideas and you could reap new rewards. Be realistic about romance. Someone else may have a prior claim.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An unusual business or career situation arises. Make sure your passport is current. A close relative boosts your standing at home. Entertaining your business associates is a shrewd move.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A sudden boost in your personal resources makes the future look rosy. A stranger offers the financial backing you need to launch a pet project. Go slow; there could be strings attached.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A Leo does you a tremendous favor. Confirm all appointments and travel arrangements. Last-minute changes could throw you off schedule. Romance holds a delightful surprise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A Gemini's odd behavior could lead to an important discovery. Good fortune arrives in the form of a check or small gift. Evening brings a romantic adventure. Avoid making impulsive promises.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21):

Information obtained from a former employee puts you in line for a promotion or raise. Your efforts behind the scenes begin to pay off. Romance takes a big leap forward.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You need to be subtle when dealing with close associates, especially around noon. Squash a tendency to daydream, and zero in on important work. Developing a natural talent boosts your career.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You find it easy to combine business with pleasure today. Contact with an influential person will give you new resources. An investigation reveals startling facts about a loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone who works behind the scenes could try to undermine your reputation. Confront this person face-to-face. A stranger proves to be a reliable witness. Romance soars to new heights.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Contacting people overseas proves both informative and profitable. Influential person gives an artistic project "the green light." Romance deepens. Share your hopes and dreams with those closest to your heart.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦J5 ♥A85 ♦QJ643 ♠A75

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	2 ♦	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♦	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—North's bidding shows a good six-card spade suit and four diamonds. Under the circumstances, there is no reason why you should want to get out of four spades — there are hands where you can make 10 tricks, but not 11.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♦6 ♥AJ9763 ♦A32 ♠963

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

A.—You know where you want to play this hand — four hearts. So you should simply go ahead and bid it. We won't fault you too much if you bid only three hearts, but there is no logic in that action. Three hearts should either suggest that three no trump is a possible contract, or that you are interested in slam.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦5 ♥KJ982 ♦A765 ♠KJ3

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Dble	3 ♥	Pass
Pass	3 ♦	Pass	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—If you bid again, you must have misread the auction. Partner's jump to three hearts over the takeout double showed at least four hearts and scant defensive values. You have no reason to think you can make four hearts, and even less to suppose you might defeat four spades. Pass while you are well off.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦J762 ♥AK95 ♦J5 ♠A103

What is your opening bid?

A.—Your heart suit could be bid, but we would not open one heart. Should partner respond two diamonds, you would be awkwardly placed. A convenient one club opening bid will enable you to handle any response partner makes.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦J762 ♥AK95 ♦J5 ♠A103

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	2 ♦	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Since partner did not show a new suit at the one-level, and did not respond one no trump, it is more than likely that he has a five-card or longer club suit. With a minimum hand, there is no reason to venture on. Pass.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♦A1053 ♥AQ4 ♦K87 ♠K63

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	Pass	2 ♦

What action do you take?

A.—You have a minimum no trump opening bid and, even though you probably have two trump tricks, it is illogical to suppose that your side can beat two spades — bear in mind that partner did not act over your opening. Pass, and let partner decide if he wants to compete.

Town responds to low-culture label

SHARON, Pa. (AP) — Some folks might be outraged to have their town rated the least-cultured place in the country. But in Sharon, where things are quiet "and we like it that way," culture is in the eye of the beholder — among other places.

"Why, once not too long ago we had a major power outage and culture sprang up in every refrigerator in town," the Sharon Herald said in an open letter.

"Have you's ever been to one of our midnight bingo games at the firehall, gathered with a bunch of friends to drink Iron City and soak up some 'Family Feud,' or watched a championship arm wrestling match?"

Rand McNally, in its 1985 "Places Rated Almanac" released last week, made the surprise choice of Pittsburgh, 60 miles south of Sharon, as the nation's best place to live. Sharon finished last among the 329 cities in culture.

In a letter published Saturday from the fictitious group Bring Arts to Sharon, the Herald took Rand McNally to task.

"What do youse mean that we ain't got no culture here?" BATS asked.

"We watch MTV just like the rest of America and a few people have even reported stumbling across a Public Television channel (this is unconfirmed because they couldn't remember the number)."

Sharon "has a Lotto machine within a 20-minute drive of almost everyone and is even working on getting the National Enquirer into the public libraries," the letter said.

"Now, we admit that we don't have an opera or a ballet troupe, but we've got a peck of country-and-western bars and singers like you've never heard before. Being ranked last, it noted, means "there's only one way to go."

DENNIS THE MENACE

"SHE'S GOT A LOT OF SUGAR AN SPICE, BUT SHE'S SHORT ON THE EVERYTHING NICE."

HEATHCLIFF

"OUT, WITH THE BASKETBALL!"

MARMADUKE

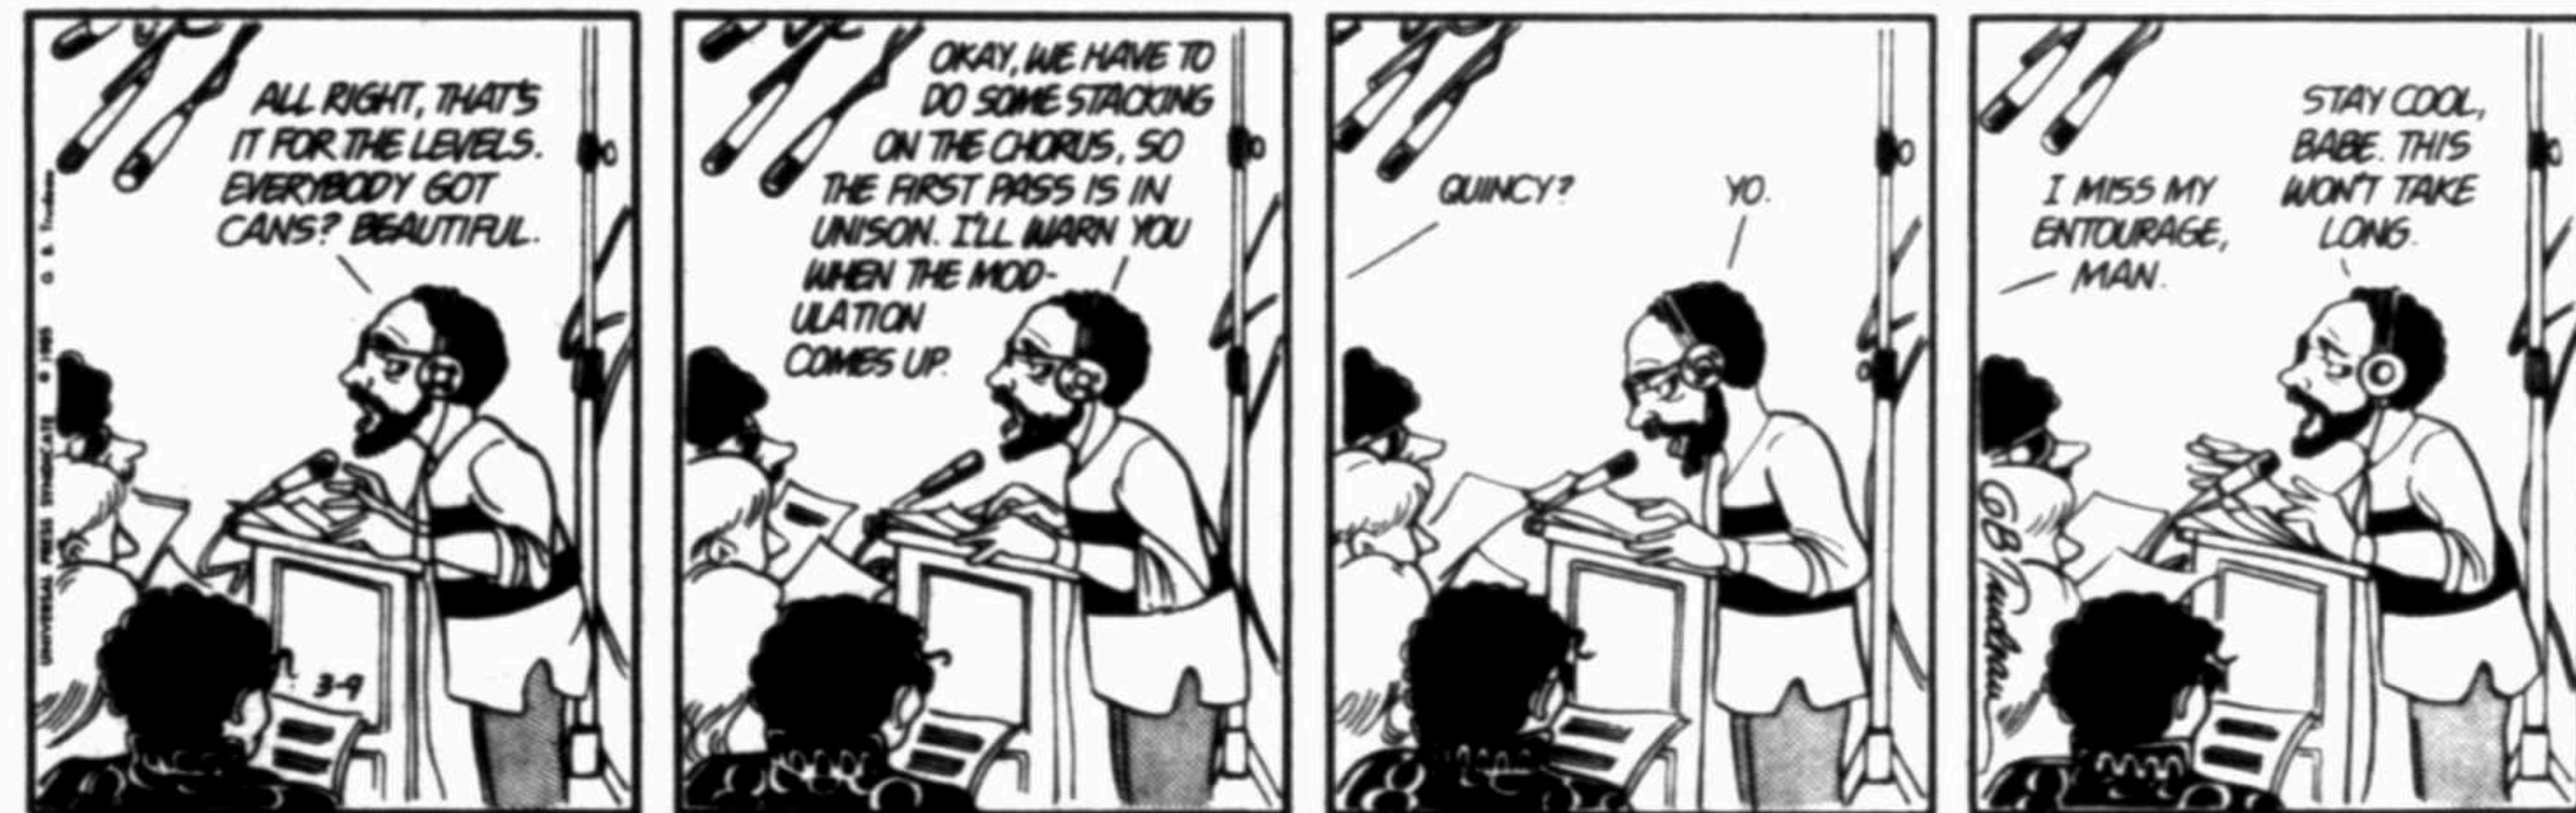

"I wish the school would do away with the annual pet show."

FAMILY CIRCUS

"Oooo-oooo! I know! I know that one! Can I answer? Oooo-ooooo!"

Rehnquist loves to be compared to Douglas

NEW YORK (AP) — Although they were poles apart ideologically, U.S. Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist says he would be "flattered in many respects" to be compared with the late Justice William O. Douglas.

"I think Justice Douglas was a remarkably able and interesting person," Rehnquist said in an interview published Sunday in The New York Times Magazine.

However, the conservative justice noted that Douglas, a liberal, was "very much of an iconoclast. You know, really not caring a great deal whether anybody else agreed with him or not."

"In fact, sometimes we used to say at conference that we thought he was disappointed if he was in the majority, because then he would have to write something that he would have to get other people's agreement with."

"I don't see myself as being that way," Rehnquist said. "I still think that one's major contribution comes by putting something together yourself or joining something someone else puts together that commands a court opinion."

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Opera star Dorothy Kirsten French ended a four-year absence from the stage to perform in a benefit for victims of Alzheimer's disease, from which her husband, Dr. John Douglas French, suffers.

French, a neurosurgeon who conducted research into the disease and "has authored more than 100 important medical articles dealing with the brain, can no longer write, read or speak," Miss Kirsten said in a statement.

"I watched him wither as the things he loved best were taken away from him one by one — his work, his car, golf and the life we used to have together."

More than 1,100 people, including entertainers Jack Lemmon, Dick Shawn and Rhonda Fleming, attended the benefit Sunday sponsored by the John Douglas French Foundation, founded by Miss Kirsten in 1983.

Miss Kirsten, who for 30 years was a diva with the Metropolitan Opera, sang "Un Bel Di" from "Madame Butterfly." Julie Andrews, who was host of the event, and Lemmon, both performed.

Alzheimer's is an ailment which causes senility and is often fatal.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John B. Kelly Jr., U.S. Olympic Committee president, collapsed on a city street Saturday and died. He was 57.

Kelly, scion of one of Philadelphia's most prominent families and brother of the late Princess Grace of Monaco, was an Olympic bronze medal winner and son of a three-time Olympic rowing champion. He was elected president of the USOC last month. He served as vice president of the organization of the 38 national governing bodies of amateur sports from 1980-84.

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Tenor Luciano Pavarotti opened his 1985 world tour to standing ovations and a four-encore performance before nearly 11,000 people in the Lawlor Events Center.

Holding a white handkerchief, as he does in every recital, the ebullient singer stretched out his arms in warm response to the enthusiastic audience and to the Reno Philharmonic, conducted by Emerson Buckley, which accompanied him.

His performance here Friday included classical selections from "Rigoletto," "I Pagliacci," "Lucia Di Lammermoor," "Il Trovatore," "Orfeo Ed Euridice," along with light classical songs, including some from his most recent album, "Mamma."

Pavarotti appeared Saturday in Las Vegas and has scheduled concerts in New York, Atlantic City, N.J., St. Louis and other U.S. cities, Toronto, Paris, Berlin, Hamburg and Munich.

A school teacher until making his operatic debut in "La Boheme" in 1961, Pavarotti developed an international reputation by the late 1960s.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro says her appearance in a Diet Pepsi commercial was "terrific" and a party official says it can do nothing but help her political future.

In the commercial, Ms. Ferraro tells daughters Laura and Donna that women today have choices and "can be anything you want to be." Pepsi would not reveal how much she was paid for the ad.

"I think it's terrific and I think the reaction here is marvelous," she said during a cocktail party in honor of Democratic National Committee Chairman Paul G.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Dr. William Stringfellow, an author, lawyer and activist who was arrested in 1970 for harboring the Rev. Daniel Berrigan, has died at the age of 56.

Berrigan had been sought by the FBI for two years after being convicted of burning draft cards in Catonsville, Md. The charge against Stringfellow and Anthony Towne, a poet and satirist who lived at Stringfellow's Block Island home, were later dismissed.

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Sander Scheiber, an internationally famed Hebraic scholar and director of the Soviet bloc's only rabbinical college, died after a long illness, state-run television announced Sunday. He was 72.

Scheiber assumed the post as director of the Budapest rabbinical college in 1950. The college, whose library on Jewish subjects is one of the world's most complete, also trains rabbis for other Soviet-bloc countries.

Fighting crime

Fighting crime in the United States is a never-ending challenge. It's a challenge that the good officers of the Federal Bureau of Investigation never give up.

The bureau once again has reaffirmed its commitment in the fight for law and order. Its latest efforts resulted this week in a 15-count federal indictment against nine reputed leaders of five New York Mafia "families."

The task hasn't been easy by any means, for in some instances the FBI devoted more than five years to the painstaking investigation and digging out evidence. It finally paid off by pointing the finger at some of the nation's most notorious crime figures. The FBI did not do it all and did not take all the credit, having the help of the police and other enforcement officers, but the bureau played a major role in the probes.

Those indicted were charged with supervising a "commission" accused of involvement in gambling, drug trafficking, extortion, loan-sharking and labor racketeering — crimes which, in one way or another, affect the lives of countless Americans. Prosecutors said evidence was gathered in a number of ways, including electronic surveillance devices, or "bugs," undercover agents and witnesses, and telephone wiretaps.

United States attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani of New York has referred to the indictments as "a major blow against the Mafia in New York." William H. Webster, the FBI director who attended the news conference announcing the indictments, said: "We're taking out the top players."

Those indicted, under America's fair judicial system are, of course, innocent until proven otherwise, but the action should remind all Americans of the persistence of the FBI.

Its agents take daily risks so that citizens can live in safety. The Federal Bureau of Investigation deserves a salute this week, as always, for its never-ending fight against crime.

Going too far

Civil rights unquestionably constitute one of the bulwarks of a working democracy such as that which is enjoyed in the United States. From time to time, however, some groups, in their zeal to preserve those rights, exert pressures in directions which border on the ludicrous with the end of demeaning the spirit of our constitutional freedoms.

An example of this has occurred in Rhode Island where the American Civil Liberties Union was called in to push a grievance which essentially concerned the governing of behavior in a school cafeteria. The parents of a youngster who takes her lunch to school protested a rule which required the "brown baggers" to occupy tables in the cafeteria separate from the kids who buy their lunches. The practice, the parents insisted, spelled discrimination.

This was a situation which clearly could have been worked out in consultations between parents and school officials. Obviously the school administration had no intention of making outcasts of the youngsters who bring their lunches. It was simply a plan to localize the cleanup problems after the luncheon period.

The parents, though, enlisted the aid of the ACLU which took the protest all the way to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. This department wisely ruled that no discrimination was taking place and supported the school in its tables regulation.

It is hoped the controversy, if it can be called that, ends there and does not end up in the courts. Appeals courts already are cluttered with trivia which could have been adequately resolved in private, head-to-head discussions.

Another View: Month of miracles

If there is any year in the history of music comparable, say, to 1666 in England, or 1776 in America, or 1789 in France, it is 1685, the year of birth for both George Frederick Handel and Johann Sebastian Bach. The two were born 26 days and less than 100 miles apart in what is now East Germany, Handel on Feb. 23 in Halle, Bach on March 21 in Eisenach.

Each was a miracle, far transcending what seems like the creative limits of an ordinary mortal, the first a worldly man recognized almost immediately, especially in England, where he spent much of his life and whose citizen he became; the other an organist and choirmaster whose keyboard talents were widely known but whose towering stature as a composer was almost unrecognized for almost 80 years after his death. It was not until 1829, when the young Mendelssohn discovered and conducted the St. Matthew Passion in Berlin, that Bach was fully appreciated beyond the bounds of Leipzig, where he composed most of his greatest works, as the giant he was.

Bach and Handel never met, though Bach, who deeply admired Handel's work, twice made the attempt. Both went blind toward the end of their lives; ironically, the same surgeon operated on both of them, in each case with no success.

Because they are so transcendent, there is no way for anyone fully to appraise the influence of either on music, much less on Western civilization generally. Bach particularly is such an enormous figure that no catalog of works, no analysis of technical innovations, no tracing of style can more than hint at the whole of it. As one biographer put it, "His was the most subtle and universal force in the development of music."

In the coming months, there will be no end of concerts, seminars, conferences and reappraisals of the works and influence of Bach and Handel, all of them trying to recognize and encompass what their music meant. None of them will completely succeed because, in the civilization of the past 300 years, there is finally nothing to compare them with except themselves.

SALT causes memory lapses

WASHINGTON — With a columnist's presumption, I have for 38 years been straightening out presidents and reminding them of facts they would rather forget. I'm happy to provide this unwanted service to President Reagan, whose memory failed him at his last press conference.

He was asked by UPI's veteran White House correspondent, Helen Thomas, about the unratified SALT II arms-control agreement.

Jack Anderson said in his column today that in 1981 you passed the word to Moscow that, even if the Senate ratified SALT II, you would not sign it, she explained. "Then in 1982, Moscow told you that they are no longer bound by the SALT II treaty, and they began to build up their arsenal over the limit."

"Is that true?" she asked. "I read that myself this morning," Reagan responded, "and I went into the office and I said, 'Where is all of this coming from?' I do not remember any statement from the Soviet Union of that kind."

I don't blame the president for his confusion. I have read dozens of classified documents dealing with the SALT II negotiations. I frankly got lost, too, in the jungle of impenetrable verbiage, entangling phrases and dense, technical underbrush.

Out of this wilderness, rumors leaked that Reagan had reached a secret understanding with the Soviet Union in 1981 and had neglected to mention this to the Senate, which should have been consulted.

Regan wants change at HHS

WASHINGTON — Reagan administration insiders are predicting Margaret Heckler will be gone as secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS) by May, a sign of the clout exercised by Donald T. Regan as White House chief of staff.

President Regan, though notorious for never firing anybody, has given Regan carte blanche to rearrange the administration's furniture. The new staff chief wants a change at HHS not because of unfavorable publicity resulting from Heckler's messy divorce suit but because of her record in running one of the government's largest departments.

The best prospect to succeed Heckler if she goes would be John Svahn, her former under secretary and now head of domestic policy at the White House. Not only is Reganite Svahn more conservative than Heckler but his policy spot could be filled by one of Regan's closest advisers, Al Kingston, who is now Cabinet secretary.

SHULTZ BEATS COMMERCE Word seeping out that House Minority Leader Bob Michel of Illinois almost surely will seek reelection to Congress in 1986 makes it likely that the second-ranking House Republican, Minority Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi, will go for the Senate.

What rankles the Commerce Department is the way Shultz did it: a private letter to the president. Shultz contended that if the duties now handled by a special trade representative were moved anywhere, it should be to the State Department rather than Commerce.

Commerce insiders, who have worked hard to centralize trade relations in their department, were furious at Shultz (who entered their bad graces late last year by seizing top-level control of U.S.-Japanese trade relations). But given Shultz's influence with Reagan, Commerce had no recourse.

THE VISITING RUSSIAN Inner-sanctum Kremlin power politics may be behind a highly unusual March 4 visit to Washington by Vladimir Shcherbitskiy, member of the Soviet Politburo.

Kremlinologists suspect Shcherbitskiy may be part of the Kremlin faction striving to keep Mikhail Gorbachev, 53, from succeeding ailing Konstantin Chernenko as Soviet leader. When Gorbachev toured Great Britain late last year, he elevated his prospects by getting worldwide attention.

In return Shcherbitskiy will get the full treatment here, meeting President Reagan and being spotlighted as guest of honor at Capitol Hill receptions given by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole. The 67-year-old Politburo member is not himself a candidate for succession, but his treatment here might help the anti-Gorbachev faction.

HOUSE GOP SHUFFLE Word seeping out that House Minority Leader Bob Michel of Illinois almost surely will seek reelection to Congress in 1986 makes it

Some concerned senators began making discreet inquiries six months ago.

On Feb. 1, the senators got a secret, sensitive report from the White House confirming the rumors. The document, of course, put the secret accommodation in the most favorable possible language.

But it concedes that Reagan notified the Soviet Union he would not go ahead with the SALT II treaty, that the Soviets then began building intercontinental missiles as fast as they could, that the Pentagon dutifully dismantled old weapons to stay within the limits of the unratified treaty, and that this unilateral disarmament was kept secret until suspicious senators began demanding answers.

All the while, the White House encouraged the American people to believe that the United States and Soviet Union had agreed to abide by the unratified treaty.

My associate Dale Van Atta has examined the secret record. To refresh the president's memory, here are some exact quotes:

"In September 1981, the U.S. notified the U.S.S.R. that it would not seek ratification of SALT II, thus relieving both parties under international law of any obligation with respect to the treaty." The treaty would have limited each side to 2,250 "strategic nuclear-delivery vehicles," which are called SNDVs.

By the following June, the Soviets had already accumulated 2,500 SNDVs. This led to a meeting between then-Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on June 18-19, 1982. Confides the belated report to the Senate: "Both sides would abide by SALT II with some exceptions."

The exceptions, the White House report explains, "were agreed to be obsolete with the passage of time." Use of the word "agreed" shows that both sides were aware that SALT II's limits had been breached.

Apparently, the administration naively believed the Soviets would not build any more SNDVs, but would be satisfied with the 2,500 they had already deployed. Confesses the report: "The logic of the U.S. and U.S.S.R.'s 1982 statements to abide by SALT II assumes that some numerical ceiling on SNDVs exists, even though there was not explicit agreement on what that ceiling would be."

STRICTLY PERSONAL: A Washington, D.C., businessman was astonished at the fancy "information" packet he got recently from the U.S. Treasury, announcing the new, multicolored, supposedly counterfeit-proof government checks that will be replacing the old green punched cards familiar to millions of Americans.

Why, the businessman wanted to know, was the government spending such an obvious pile of money to publicize its new checks?

Well, I learned that the packets mailed out to some 15,000 businessmen across the country — mostly liquor store owners and others who cash government checks for customers — were only a small part of the Treasury's campaign to sell the public about its new checks. The packets of glossy posters and flyers cost "about $5 apiece," according to a Treasury official.

The total price tag for the public-relations effort will come to $500,000, the official said. Asked why such a campaign was necessary, the official explained, "If you're using a certain check for 40 years, it takes a public awareness campaign" to make a change. Otherwise, recipients — and check cashers — might worry, she said.

GARY HART'S RISE Sen. Gary Hart, getting an early start in his campaign for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination, has grabbed his party's ranking spot on the Strategic Subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee but at the price of irritating a powerful colleague.

Hart seized Democratic leadership of the Strategic Subcommittee away from Sen. J. James Exon of Nebraska, who is one notch below Hart in seniority. That incurred the wrath of Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, Exon's fellow moderate and top Democrat on the full committee. Hart ignored Nunn's pleas not to push out Exon.

That could set up a long-range power struggle for 1988. Neo-liberal Hart is considered the early front-runner for the presidential nomination. Nunn is taking an active part in national party affairs for the first time and could end up on the ticket himself.

CHARLEY REESE

Alliance a two-way street

New Zealand has banned American warships from its ports. This is improper behavior for an ally. We should do more than refuse to allow New Zealand to participate in naval exercises. We should kick New Zealand out of the alliance and ban all New Zealand imports.

It's about bloody time we stopped acting as if other nations were doing us a favor to allow us to protect them. It's about bloody time we started collecting some long overdue debts.

We should send the same message to Europe: If you don't want American missiles stationed in your country, then get out of NATO.

When a nation says it does not want American nuclear forces in its country, it is telegraphing a very clear message: we want you to protect us if we are attacked, but if you get into a war with the Soviet Union, we want to stay out of it.

That's okay. Countries like Belgium or New Zealand wouldn't count for much in a major war anyway except as depots, weapons platforms or rest and recreation areas. But an alliance has to be a two-way street. If we are going to go to war for their sake, then they must go to war for ours; if we are going to take risks for them, they must take risks for us.

New Zealand's leftist prime minister, David Lange, is actually surprised at even the mild U.S. reaction thus far. What Lange wants is for Americans to be prepared to die in defense of New Zealand but not for New Zealanders to take any risks on their behalf.

He can go to hell. Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., the new chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, wants to clarify American foreign policy. There is a very easy way to do that.

We announce to the world that nations should declare their choice: to be a U.S. ally, a Soviet ally, or a neutral. The rules are simple: Soviet allies are enemies and we neither aid nor defend neutrals. As for allies, they must share fully the cost of alliance — in defense expenditures and in taking the risks.

This nonsense of paying so-called allies exorbitant prices for military bases should be halted. If you have to bribe your allies to get them to allow you to defend them, they aren't allies. Greece and the Philippines are two examples of countries which are gouging us for bases.

Our so-called allies should realize that we are in a much better position to play the isolation game than they are. If we adopted as policy simply defending our own shores, we could save billions of dollars. The NATO commitment, for example, costs us about $100 billion.

If New Zealand's bad behavior causes us to re-assess our alliances, the New Zealanders will have done us a favor. Many of them, I suspect, are about as useful as a broken leg. The present Greek government is farther to the left than some communist countries. I, for one, would not hold my breath waiting on the French to spring to our defense, if we were attacked and they were not. Among our NATO allies, we might be able to count on Canada, Britain, West Germany, Norway and Turkey.

Even so, George Washington was correct when he warned that you can trust no country any farther than its own selfish interests. He warned us to avoid entangling alliances. It has already cost us untold billions of dollars and nearly 500,000 American lives to disregard that advice.

I am not ready to say we should abandon all alliances, but it is certainly time to abandon false and useless alliances and to put the rest on a realistic basis.

New Zealand should be the first but by no means the last to be cut loose from Uncle Sam's apron strings.

Sandy leap

Twelve-year-old Marino Guarnelo of Galveston, leaps into the air off a large mound of sand at the base of the Seawall at 53d. Street Sunday afternoon. The youth jumped and rolled in the sand for fun along with friends while enjoying the sunny and warm weather on the island. The sand is not naturally there in such large amounts at that location. Developer George Mitchell paid to have the sand trucked in to place in front of his new luxury hotel, The San Luis.

Mattox optimistic about outcome of bribery trial

AUSTIN (AP) — The commercial bribery trial of Attorney General Jim Mattox was scheduled to resume today, and Mattox says he is optimistic about how the case will turn out. "I feel good about where we are," Mattox said last week.

"A couple of witnesses have had a very difficult time remembering what has taken place," he added. "It was a fight between lawyers. He (Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle) allowed himself to be sucked into it, and that's unfortunate."

Mattox said he expects to take the witness stand when the defense presents its side of the case.

Prosecutors have presented more than two dozen witnesses so far, and Assistant Travis County District Attorney Phil Nelson indicated last week they may be about finished.

Mattox is accused of threatening to withhold his needed approval of public bonds handled by the Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski in June 1983.

Prosecutors contend he was angry with the conduct of Fulbright & Jaworski lawyer Thomas McDade in a South Texas oil lease case involving Mobil Oil, rancher Clinton Manges and the state.

They contend that Mattox said he would ruin the firm's lucrative bond business unless McDade, representing Mobil, stopped trying to question Mattox's sister, Janice, in the lease dispute.

Mattox has described the incident as nothing more than "a spitting contest between lawyers" and repeatedly predicted he will be found innocent by the eight-woman, four-man jury.

He said last week that he expected the trial to last two or three more weeks.

Commercial bribery is a felony, with a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Free movies for students is bribery, say officials

HOUSTON (AP) — An incentive program that offered free movie tickets to Houston school students with perfect attendance has been labeled bribery by some Houston-area school officials.

But Billy Reagan, superintendent of the Houston Independent School District, says the unorthodox plan is based on sound, American principles. The program increased daily attendance by 2,500 and boosted state funding by more than $4 million, he said.

"A good part of the American free enterprise system is based on positive incentives," Reagan said. "If enhancing productivity is bribery, then most of what is going on in America today is bribery."

HISD officials admitted the plan was an attempt to increase state funding, which is based largely on daily student attendance in the month of October.

Other Houston-area school districts like Pasadena and Baytown followed with similar incentives.

Jury selection begins today

ANDREWS — Jury selection was to begin today in the trial of a 41-year-old Andrews woman accused of killing her estranged husband 15 months ago.

Larry Delbert O'Connor, 44, owner of an Andrews trucking company, died in a hospital the day after he was shot in a mobile home near his firm.

Sheriff's deputies recovered a .25-caliber weapon believed to have been used in the Nov. 27, 1983 shooting, and Catherine O'Connor, 41, was arrested later in Lovington, N.M. She was released a short time later on a $50,000 bond.

The couple, which had three children, had been in the process of divorcing when the shooting occurred, Andrews County Attorney James Rex said.

Odessa attorney Warren Burnett will be defending Mrs. O'Connor.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Conditions forecast for 7 a.m. Tuesday

Basin warms up to spring temperatures

From Staff and Wire Reports

A cool night will be followed by a warm spring day Tuesday as winter continues to recede from the Permian Basin. Tonight will be fair with a low in the mid-30s and winds from the southeast at 5-10 mph, but Tuesday will be sunny and warmer with a high in the mid-70s and winds from the south at 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Sunday's high of 80 was 9 degrees below the record for the date of 89 set in 1974, while the overnight low of 38 was 18 degrees above the 1965 record of 20.

STATE

Scattered showers and isolated thunderstorms triggered by a cold front were reported today over the eastern half of North Texas extending southward into South Central Texas.

The cold front was located at dawn along a line from near Dallas-Fort Worth to San Antonio.

It was the same front that, coupled with an intense low pressure area, triggered howling winds and a tornado watch late Sunday for much of North Texas and North Central Texas.

The low pressure area moved to the east during the night, causing winds to diminish across the area.

There were no reports of tornadoes and the watch, issued Sunday by the National Severe Storms Center, was cancelled several hours ahead of schedule.

Winds gusted to about 60 mph at Comanche in Comanche County, to 44 at Waco and to as high as 35-40 mph at many points, including Dallas-Fort Worth, Wichita Falls and Abilene.

About 890 homes were without power in Arlington after wind-blown power lines caused a short circuit. Scattered power outages were reported at Fort Worth and a portion of the roof of a lumber company blew away onto a railroad track at Fort Worth.

Another cold front with much colder air was moving southward through the northern high plains early today. Skies were cloudy over the eastern two-thirds of the state and mostly clear over West Texas early today.

NATION

A storm unleashed three tiers of misery — snow, freezing rain and a mix of rain and thunderstorms — on a large part of the nation today while another storm threatened the West.

Snow extended from southern Wyoming across Colorado, the Dakotas, Minnesota and the upper Great Lakes.

Freezing rain hit northern Iowa, southern Wisconsin, northern Indiana and northern Ohio.

Rain and scattered thunderstorms stretched from central Texas to West Virginia and rain spread along the northern Pacific Coast.

In the West, a winter storm warning was issued for the mountains of northeast California and the Tahoe Valley of west central Nevada, much of Oregon and the Olympic and Cascade mountains of Washington.

Where were you at 3:21 p.m. yesterday?

You probably were among the approximately 64,900 Midland men and women who were working. At 3:21 p.m. yesterday a local commercial was aired on television. You didn't see it. Neither did the approximately 64,899 other Midland residents. As a result that retailer wasted valuable dollars because only a small number of Midlanders were watching television at that time. What's more, of those who were, many were not tuned to that particular channel.

SMU completes collapse

Raiders enjoy surprise title

Associated Press

The experts who got surprised when Texas Tech won the Southwest Conference basketball title have gotten another jolt.

The Southern Methodist Mustangs completed their late-season collapse with a 79-76 loss to the Houston Cougars Sunday and allowed the Texas Aggies and the Arkansas Razorbacks to share second place with Coach Dave Bliss' crew.

THE PAIRINGS are now complete for Friday's SWC Post-Season Classic pairings in Dallas.

Texas A&M and Texas Christian will kick things off at 12:08 p.m. in Reunion Arena; champion Tech follows at 2:08 p.m. against Baylor; Arkansas, the No. 2 seed, gets into action at 7:08 p.m. against Texas; and SMU faces Houston at 9:08 p.m.

The semifinals will be held Saturday afternoon with the finals scheduled for 1:08 p.m. on Sunday. Raycom will televise all the games regionally.

Meanwhile, Tech Coach Gerald Myers was savoring his team's first SWC basketball title in 12 years.

TECH'S 61-53 win over Texas Christian on Saturday produced an outright title and the Red Raiders' first 20-victory season since 1977, only the sixth in the school's history. Tech beat SMU in Dallas Wednesday night to set things up.

"I'm not even going to think about the conference tournament until Monday," said Myers. "We won our game against SMU (last Wednesday) and really didn't get to enjoy it because we had this one (TCU) coming up and wanted to concentrate on it. We want to enjoy it."

SWC Roundup

SMU finished the regular season by losing six of its last nine games.

In other games on Saturday, Texas A&M crushed Rice 79-62 to clinch the No. 4 seed in the tournament while Arkansas ripped Baylor 106-71.

The Red Raiders, picked in the preseason to finish fourth behind Southern Methodist, Houston, and Arkansas bounced TCU, then gave their coach a shower with his suit on.

"It was worth it," beamed Myers. "It's a great feeling to win the championship. We came into the game wanting to win it outright and were able to do that."

"I'm happy for our fans and players who have waited a long time since we did this last and I'm glad that we've been able to give them something they can enjoy."

BUBBA JENNINGS hit six straight free throws down the stretch.

"It was a great reward for our seniors who worked hard and have gone through some tough times," said Myers. "That was the big thing to me; we won it for those guys."

Vince Taylor, who had a game-high 15 points for the Red Raiders said, "Coach Myers told us two years ago we would finish in the top four last year and that we would win the conference the next. Look what happened."

Houston found its "mini-momentum" with its victory over No. 13 SMU.

Alvin Franklin hit four crucial free throws in the final minute and Eric Dickens scored 24 points to overpower the Mustangs, who have lost six of their last nine games.

"This is our mini-momentum," said Houston

Coach Guy Lewis. "The free throws at the end and offensive patience did it. SMU is awfully good. They could regroup and get to the Final Four."

FRANKLIN connected for 16 points.

"When they were up by 9 (54-45) we just kept playing hard and didn't quit. We proved we could play with any team in the conference. This win gives us a lot of momentum going into the conference tournament."

SMU Coach Dave Bliss said he was happy the team didn't give up.

"We came in knowing we'd lost the conference championship (Saturday) so I was glad to see us play hard. Now we just have to turn around and get ready to play Houston again."

SMU Center Jon Koncak scored 24 points, becoming the third all-time leading scorer in SMU history with 1,720.

"No question we would have liked to have won, but we've played good basketball before and we still have some good basketball left," Koncak said.

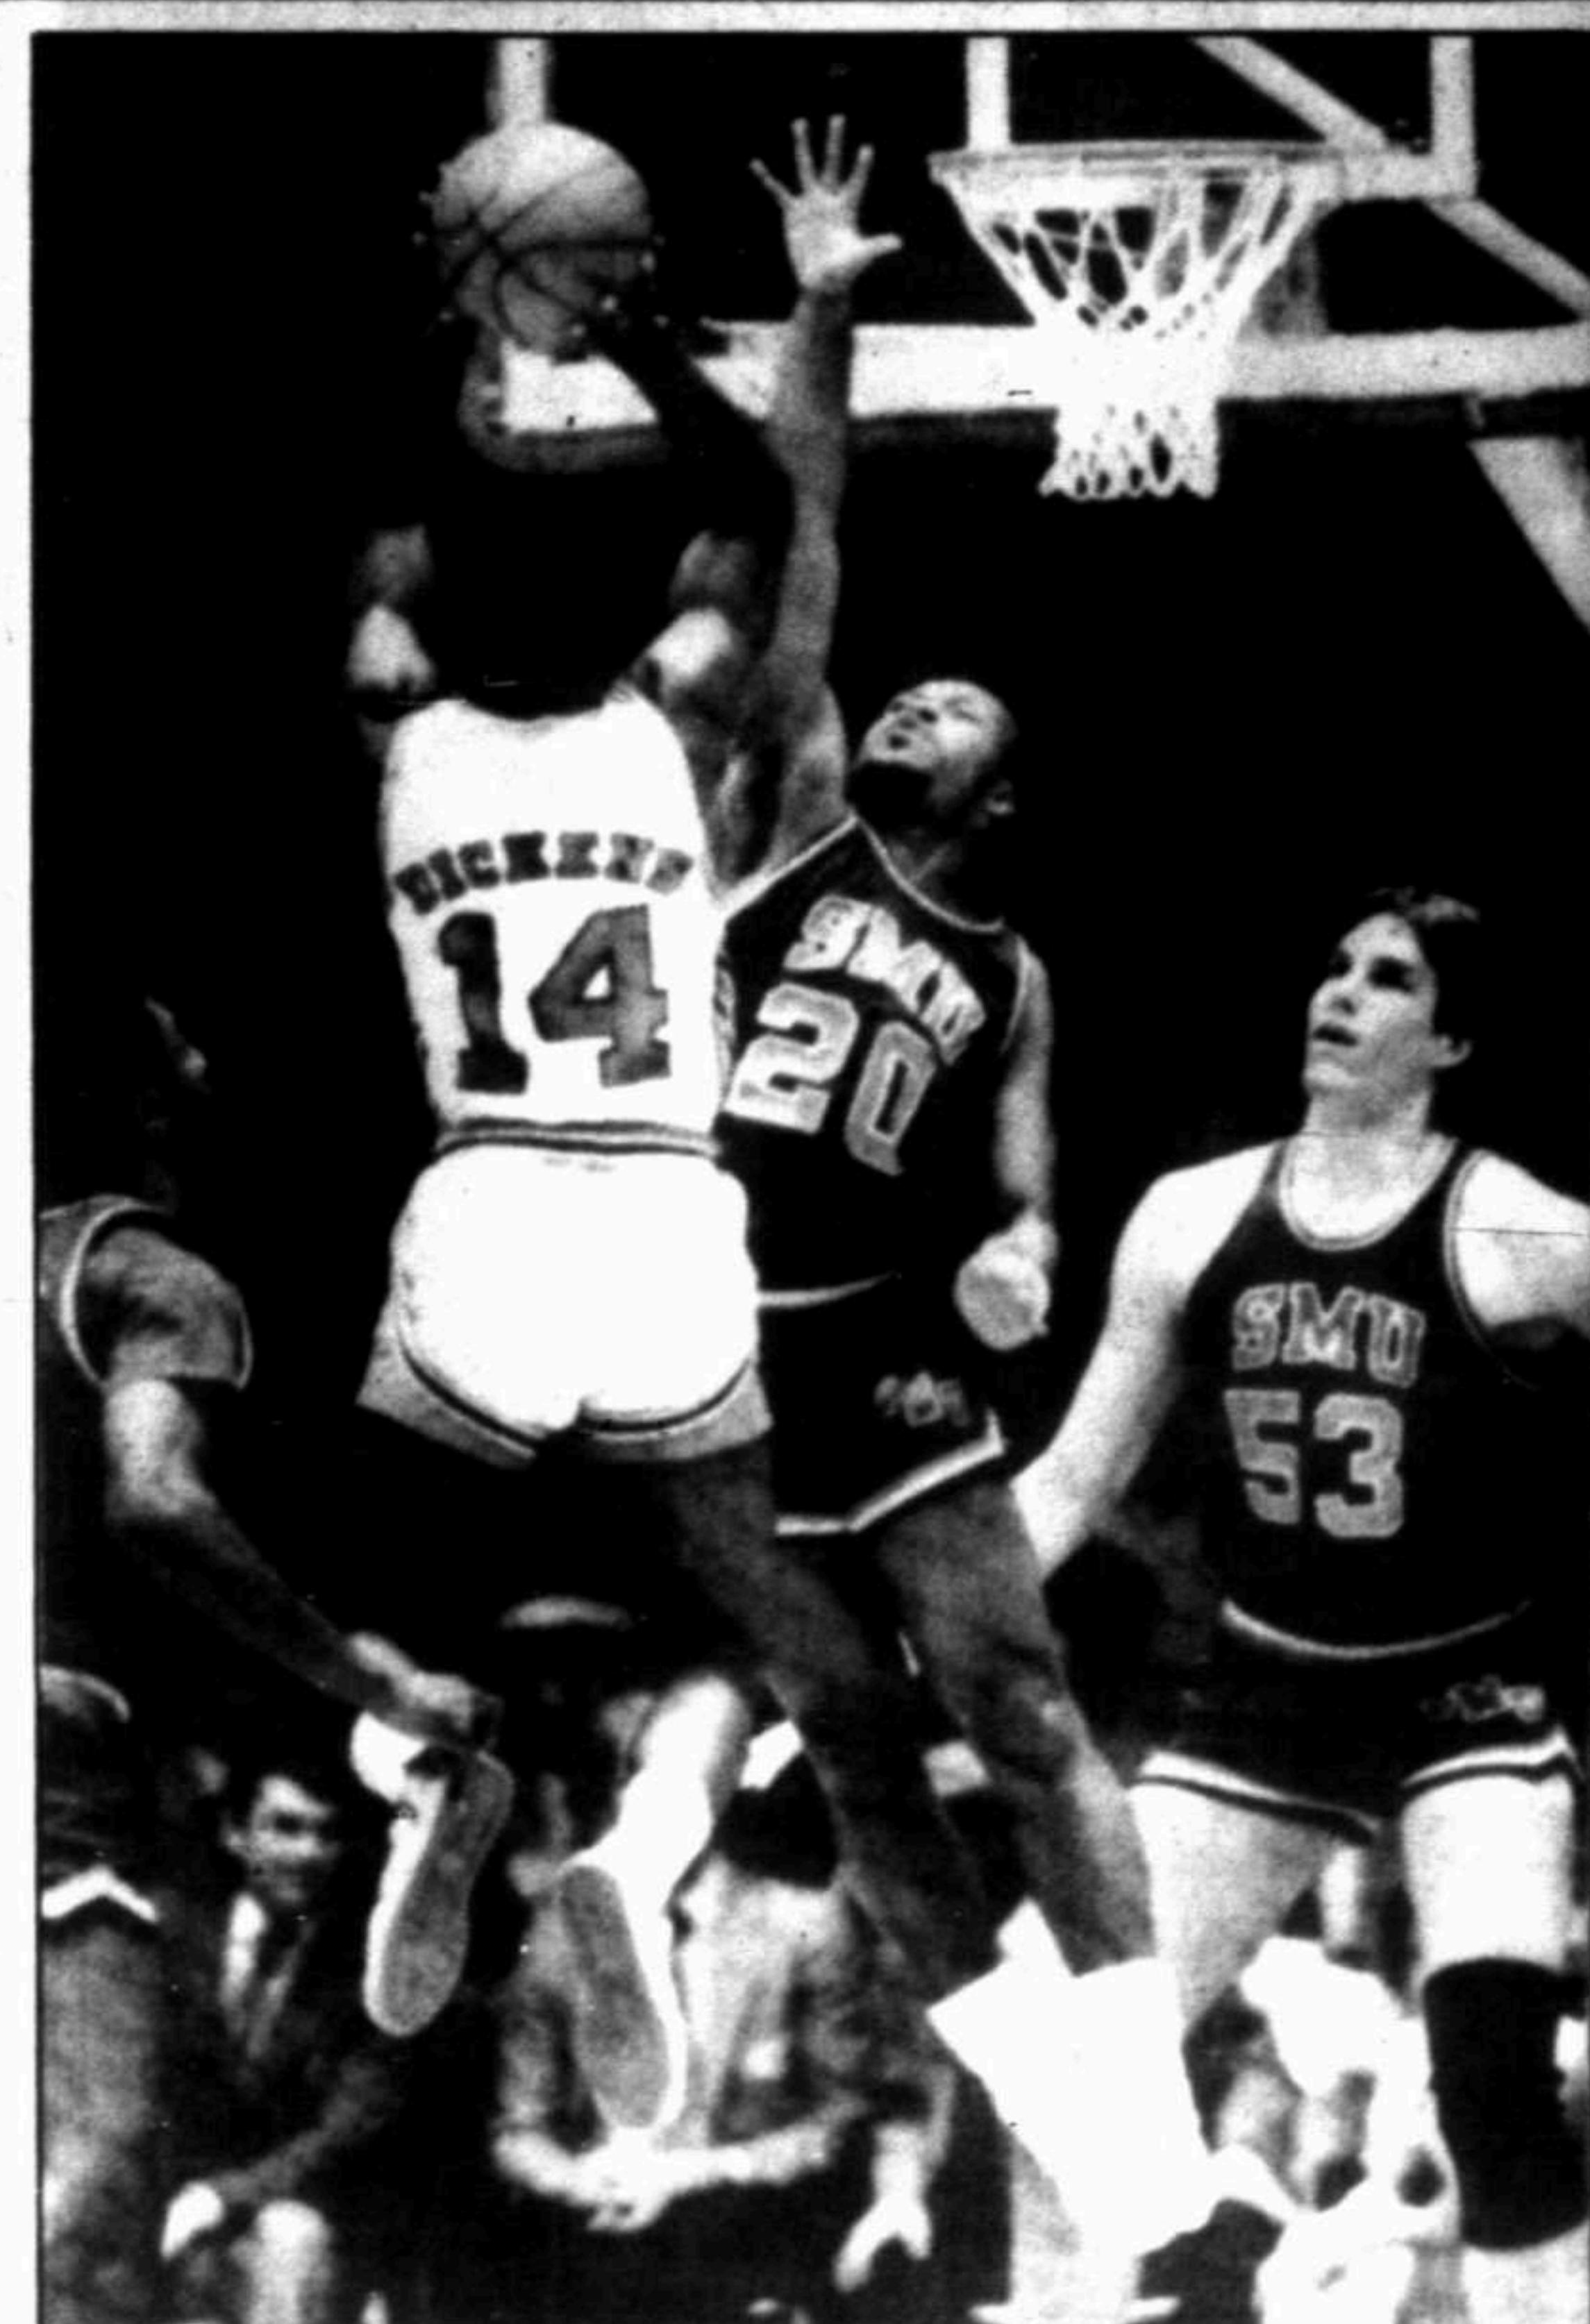

SMU HELD a 54-45 advantage early in the fourth quarter. But Dickens scored six straight points and the Cougars ran off a 19-6 streak to take a 64-62 lead with 8:50 remaining in the game.

Franklin was fouled twice in the final minute and put the game away for the Cougars with four free throws.

Greg Anderson added 19 points for Houston, which finished the regular season with a 16-12 record overall and 8-8 in the conference.

The Mustangs, 21-8 overall and 10-6 in SWC play, were paced by Jon Koncak, who poured in 24 points. Carl Wright had 22 and Larry Davis added 18.

Houston will meet SMU again Friday in the conference tournament.

Houston guard Eric Dickens (14) aims his jump shot over SMU's Butch Moore (20) and Jon Koncak (53) enroute to 24 points Sunday in SWC basketball finale.

'Mouse' attack strikes 40-karat Gold in Birmingham

Associated Press

Denver's new run-and-shoot offense may also be termed lost-and-found.

It was non-existent in an opening-game 31-10 loss to the Oakland Invaders but it didn't take long to surface Sunday — just one play.

"Offensively, we were given a big boost since we got down so close to scoring and scored at the beginning of the game," said quarterback Vince Evans, who flipped a 55-yard screen pass to Bill Johnson on Denver's first play that took the ball to the one-yard line. Johnson scored on the next play and the Gold was en route to a 40-23 United States Football League drubbing of the Birmingham Stallions in Birmingham.

"This has to be an added punch for our offense, especially after last week," Evans added. "I knew I had confidence in our offense. We needed just a little more time to master it, and I was very encouraged by our progress."

EVANS PASSED for two touchdowns and ran for another in directing a 564-yard Denver attack. He completed 14 of 27 passes for 284 yards, including touchdowns of 48 yards to Vincent White and 39 yards to Leonard Harris.

The Gold led 26-21 and broke the game open with drives of 78 and 56 yards, capped by scoring runs of one yard by Evans and eight yards by Johnson.

"Vince obviously did a good job and I was pleased very much with his win," said Denver Coach Darrell "Mouse" Davis, who installed Houston's run-and-shoot attack last year as the Gambler's offensive coordinator.

Gambler's 50, Bandits 28

Davis' former team unleashed an offensive show of its own as Jim Kelly passed for 261 yards and four touchdowns and Clarence Verdin and Gerald McNeil returned kicks for scores. Verdin, who returned a kickoff 94 yards, and McNeil, who scored on a 79-yard punt return, also caught touchdown passes from Kelly, who has thrown for 835 yards and nine TDs in two games.

Kelly teamed with McNeil on a 58-yard bomb for a 38-21 lead 5:52 into the third quarter and fired a 20-yard strike to Verdin less than three minutes later. Kelly also tossed touchdown passes of four and 13 yards to Richard Johnson and Vince Courville, respectively.

The Houston defense, meanwhile, intercepted Tampa Bay quarterbacks John Reaves and Jimmy Jordan six times as the teams attempted a USFL record 103 passes.

"I didn't set any records," said Kelly, who passed for a professional record 574 yards against Los Angeles a week ago, "but as long as we win that's all that counts with me."

fourth period, forcing the game into a scoreless overtime session. The Invaders, who trailed 17-0 late in the third period, drove 59 yards in 31 seconds for their final touchdown, which was followed by Novo Bojovic's extra point.

With 4:25 left in overtime, David Trout of the Stars missed a 49-yard field goal attempt. Bojovic tried a 48-yarder with 1:47 left and the kick was blocked by Baltimore's George Cooper.

Oakland managed only five first downs and 101 yards before Hebert hit Gordon Banks on a 42-yard touchdown pass as time ran out in the third quarter. Bojovic kicked a 40-yard field goal to make it 17-10.

Gunslingers 16, Outlaws 14

Defensive lineman Jeff Chaffin sacked Arizona quarterback Doug Williams for a game-winning safety with 1:08 remaining. San Antonio was scoreless until the fourth quarter when it capitalized on a bad punt snap for one touchdown and a 69-yard pass from Rick Neuheisel to Danny Buggs for another.

Breakers 14, Express 10

Buford Jordan bulled for 110 yards and scored the game-winning touchdown on a four-yard run early in the fourth quarter as Portland made its home debut a success. A crowd of 25,232 watched the USFL's first Portland performance on a cool, clear Saturday night in 32,500-seat Civic Stadium.

Generals 28, Renegades 10

On Friday, Doug Flutie tossed three of his scoring passes to wide receiver Clarence Collins as New Jersey rolled up 449 yards in total offense. The Generals, who also got 201 yards rushing from the tandem of Herschel Walker and Maurice Carthon, built a 21-0 halftime lead.

Bonnett leaps over No. 13 racing hurdle

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Neil Bonnett isn't superstitious, but the No. 13 weighed heavily on his mind for more than a year.

That's the number of career Grand National stock car victories that Bonnett had been stalled at since winning a race at Atlanta in November of 1983.

No. 14 finally came Sunday when the 35-year-old driver from Hueytown, Ala., barely outdueled Harry Gant to win the Carolina 500 by less than a foot.

Midland's Bobby Hill Jr. finished 24th after starting the season with ninth and 11th place finishes.

"There's no doubt I questioned myself a lot in the last year," Bonnett said. "I won two IROC (International Race of Champions) races and a Busch Clash, but I wasn't winning like I'm supposed to on the Grand National circuit."

Bonnett drives one of two Budweiser-sponsored cars for the team owned and operated by Junior Johnson. Last season, teammate Darrell Waltrip led all Grand National drivers with seven victories while Bonnett was struggling just to finish races most of the time.

"Just to get this first one (victory) with Junior Johnson, like I'm supposed to, is a relief," Bonnett said. "But Junior has been very understanding. I offered to quit near the end of last year, but Junior said to stick with it and we'd win races."

Sunday's race was a wild, three-way duel over the last 50 laps, with Bonnett battling Gant and defending Winston Cup champion Terry Labonte at the front.

The green flag came out with 35 laps remaining following the last of 10 caution periods in the 492-lap race.

Bonnett wrestled the lead from Gant on lap 463, then Labonte moved on top on lap 477. Bonnett regained the top spot the next time around North Carolina Motor Speedway's 1.017-mile, high-banked oval, but Gant moved ahead again two laps from the end.

And there was plenty of fender-bumping going on as the leaders jockeyed for position.

Bonnett picked up $35,505 as he became the third different winner in as many races this season.

McEnroe spills Curren for $60,000 payoff

HOUSTON (AP) — If John McEnroe were to write a book on how to defeat himself, Kevin Curren likely would be among the first in line to buy a copy.

Curren, ranked No. 11 in the world, is winless in seven career matches against McEnroe following McEnroe's 7-5, 6-1, 7-6 victory Sunday in the finals of the $375,000 World Championship Tennis Shootout.

But McEnroe isn't ready to tell all. "I don't tell people how to play me," McEnroe said. "I'm not going to write any books on tennis tips until I'm finished in the game. I'm not going to tell people how to beat me."

With the exception of a third-set charge, Curren could have benefited from a few tips and admitted as much following the match.

"I literally had to guess on his serves and most of the time I didn't guess right," Curren said. "I thought John dominated the whole match. I felt like I was on the ropes the whole match and never in control."

McEnroe, ranked No. 1 in the world, hit only 45 percent of his first serves against Curren but scored 15 aces and kept his South African opponent off-balance throughout the match.

"Curren tries to keep you off balance but I thought I kept him off balance more than he did me," McEnroe said. "I thought I hit the ball really good today and had good concentration."

Curren battled McEnroe through the first set until he was broken in the 12th game of the set.

Then Curren wilted, losing the second set in a runaway.

"I played a bad second game of the third set and he broke me," Curren said. "Once he did that, he played his best tennis in the second set. I was hitting passing shots on the run or off my feet. You can't beat anyone that way."

But Curren did rally in the third set when McEnroe briefly lost his concentration.

McEnroe earned $60,000 for his singles victory and then teamed with England's Peter Fleming to beat Hank Pfister and Ben Testerman 6-3, 6-2 for the doubles title and a share of another $18,000 in prize money.

McHale goes on 56-point binge

Associated Press

After winning the Sixth-Man award as the best off-the-bench player in the National Basketball Association last year, Kevin McHale is proving he isn't too shabby as a starter, either.

McHale, starting his sixth consecutive game because of an injury to Cedric Maxwell, set an all-time Boston Celtics scoring record with 56 points Sunday in a 138-129 victory over Detroit. He surpassed the team's regular-season mark of 53 by Larry Bird and the playoff standard of 54 by John Havlicek.

"It's a snowball effect," said McHale, who hit 22 of 28 field-goal attempts, 12 of 13 free throws and added 16 rebounds. "When you start getting hot the ball has a magnet on it... I was really in the flow. After a while, you start getting a feeling you can't be stopped."

"It was Kevin's show today," said Bird, who scored 53 points on March 30, 1983.

"I suppose it'll sink in tonight that there are so many legends, so many great players and I'm up there with them for one day," McHale said.

McHALE, WHO scored after pulling down nine of his 10 offensive rebounds, served notice immediately that it would be a special day for him as he had 22 points in the first quarter and 31 at halftime.

Once he got going, McHale's teammates deferred to him.

"When we saw that Kevin was hot, I just moved out of the way and got (Detroit center Bill) Laimbeer out of there to give Kevin more room so he could go 1-on-1," said Boston center Robert Parish, who scored 20 points.

Bird played a major role in replacing himself in the club record book. Besides his 30 points, he had 15 rebounds and 10 assists, including passes for McHale's last three baskets.

"Larry just said, 'Keep going down low. I'll get you the ball,'" said McHale, whose previous career-high was 33 points.

"We tried to front him and bring the guard down to double team him," said center Earl Cureton, one of three Pistons to guard McHale. "McHale is one of the toughest postup players in the league... He has the size and the reach."

Boston led 70-60 at halftime but trailed 106-105 with 10:50 left in the game after Pistons guard Isiah Thomas scored 17 of his 33 points in the third period.

Bird then hit a jumper to launch a 14-2 spurt in which he scored seven points as Boston grabbed a 119-108 lead. It never fell below nine points the rest of the way.

Rockets 99, 76ers 90

Houston knocked Philadelphia 1½ games behind Boston in the Atlantic Division as Twin Towers Ralph Sampson and rookie Akeem Olajuwon combined to outduel Moses Malone and rookie Charles Barkley.

Sampson had 25 points and 12 rebounds and Olajuwon 22 points and 15 rebounds for the Rockets. Malone had 25 points and 10 rebounds and Barkley 18 points and 12 rebounds for the 76ers.

Houston led by as many as 18 points in the fourth quarter before Philadelphia rallied to get as close as seven.

Nets 117, Bulls 113

Guards Otis Birdsong and Micheal Ray Richardson scored 30 and 28 points, respectively, to lift New Jersey over Chicago.

The Nets, winners of four straight games, took the lead for good at 111-109 on Mike Gminski's basket. Michael Jordan, who led all scorers with 37 points, twice pulled the Bulls to a one-point deficit by hitting four free throws in the final minute, the second time with just 17 seconds remaining.

But Birdsong responded with two free throws with 13 seconds left.

Trail Blazers 121, Jazz 93

Portland got strong relief performances from rookie Steve Colter and Clyde Drexler to easily defeat Utah.

Colter scored a season-high 25 points and added seven assists and five steals while starting in place of injured point guard Darnell Valentine. Drexler had 19 points, 12 rebounds and six assists after moving from small forward to the other guard spot because of an injury to Jim Paxson.

Thurl Bailey had 20 points to lead the Jazz, who never recovered after falling behind 61-42 at halftime.

Kings 126, Clippers 122

Eddie Johnson scored 10 of his 40 points in overtime to boost Kansas City past Los Angeles.

The Kings never trailed in the five-minute extra period as Johnson opened the overtime with a three-point field goal. He later gave Kansas City a 123-118 lead with 46 seconds remaining with a three-point play.

Marques Johnson's basket with two seconds left in regulation had given the Clippers a 109-107 lead, but Larry Drew, who finished with 22 points, hit an 18-footer at the buzzer to force the overtime.

The Clippers, who got 35 points from Derek Smith, led by as many as 15 points in the game and by as much as 11 in the final period before the Kings rallied.

Olympic gold medalist Mary Lou Retton became the first woman gymnast to win three American Cup titles Sunday.

Retton, Daggett still flying high

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mary Lou Retton was by far the class act of the American Cup Meet, while her trainer accused the Soviet Union and Romania of dodging his Olympic gold medal winner.

Returning to international competition for the first time since the Summer Games, Retton and Tim Daggett captured the individual titles Sunday at the first major showcase of international talent since Los Angeles.

The 17-year-old Retton, who launched her climb to the top of women's gymnastics in this same meet two years ago, trounced a field of young challengers.

And Daggett, a member of the Olympic men's team that upset the Chinese in Los Angeles, beat China's Yang Yueshan in a battle that went down to the final event.

"Why did the Russians not send anybody and why did Romania not send (Ecaterina) Szabo?" asked Bela Karolyi, Retton's coach, who immigrated from Romania.

INSTEAD OF Szabo, who finished second to Retton in the all-around at Los Angeles, Romania was represented by two of its younger stars, 14-year-old Daniela Silivas and 15-year-old Camelia Voinea.

Silivas, a seemingly fearless 4-foot-5 daredevil who thrives on the balance beam, finished third behind Retton and China's Yu Feng.

Flashing the familiar smile and form that has made her a household word in America, Retton took nothing for granted in the two-day meet at Market Square Arena.

She was the top scorer in Saturday's qualifying round, then buried her competition in the finals with the same insatiable spirit that carried her to the Olympic all-around gold medal.

"As long as she wants to, she will go on winning," said Karolyi. "It is not in her nature to give up."

Retton, who has signed lucrative endorsement contracts since her victory in Los Angeles and did not return to fulltime training until January, won all four events Sunday.

"For her to have lost here would have been devastating," said Karolyi.

Though Retton was the only Olympic medalist among the 16 women in the American Cup, Karolyi insisted the challengers were formidable.

SHE FACED a new generation of gymnasts and they are extremely tough," said Karolyi. "They came here with nothing to lose and all the pressure was on Mary Lou."

Retton said she viewed her win as a measure of credibility.

"I was very pleased with myself," she said. "For myself, I wanted self-assurance."

Daggett, who unlike most of his Olympic teammates has not been lured by retirement or promotional contracts, was at his best Sunday after a slow start in the qualifying round.

"I needed yesterday (Saturday) to get back into it," he said. "Getting back into gymnastics is hard after you've been going to banquets every night and being a celebrity."

Retton finished with 39.350 points. Feng was a distant second with 38.650 and Silivas third with 38.325 points.

She said she was especially happy with her performance on the balance beam, where she scored a 9.825, despite the tougher judging rules adopted in the wake of the 44 perfect scores recorded at the Olympics.

"That's the best beam I ever did in my life," said Retton. "I'm not a beamer, that's just not Mary Lou. But we've worked on it very hard and it paid off."

Daggett and Yang were tied after five events but the UCLA psychology major won it with a 9.70 score in the high bar. It was the same apparatus in which Daggett scored a 10.00 at Los Angeles to cement the U.S. team's gold medal victory over China.

Daggett finished with 57.350. Yang was second with 57.300 and Japanese Olympian Koji Sotomura was third with 56.850.

Daggett's victory also marked the ninth time in the 10-year history of the American Cup that a U.S. gymnast had won the men's title.

"There was pressure there," said Daggett. "It's not the same type I felt in the Olympics, but it was there."

Thirteen nations were represented in the two-day meet, but attrition cut the list of challengers.

King takes playoff win

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Betsy King was on the eighth hole and going nowhere fast when she shook her head and told her caddy "sometimes you wonder if it's your day."

Eleven holes later, King pranced off the first sudden-death hole with the winner's check and her fourth career victory.

"I couldn't believe it," King said. And neither could Patty Sheehan, who led King by two shots Sunday going into the last hole of regulation play.

But Sheehan bogeyed the par-4, 362-yard 18th hole and King dropped a 30-foot birdie putt from the fringe to tie at 280 for 72 holes. Both shot one-under-par 71 for Sunday's regulation 18 holes. King canned a six-foot putt for an eagle 3 on No. 15, the sudden-death hole.

Ironically, King placed second last week in Tucson when Amy Alcott beat her with an eight-foot eagle putt on the last hole.

THE VICTORY was worth $22,500 for King, who is in second place on this year's Ladies Professional Golf Association earnings list with $54,737. Sheehan, who received $13,875 for second place, is the leading money winner on the tour this year with $60,525.

Debbie Massey and Donna White tied for third, two shots back at 282. White shot a 71 and Massey a 70 on the par-72, 6,246-yard Arizona Biltmore Adobe course.

LPGA Hall of Famer Kathy Whitworth was one of three players tied for fifth at 284. The others were Jo Ann Washam and Alice Miller.

Bonnie Lauer and Anne-Marie Palli finished six strokes back at 286. "When I teed off the 18th I didn't think I had a chance," King said.

Sheehan pulled a wedge left on the 18th and chunked her third shot just barely on the green, 12 feet away. In Sheehan's words, the putt "took a jag where I didn't think it would jag" and went by for an eventual bogey.

King knocked a 6-iron 30-feet past the hole, then sank the putt to force the extra hole.

"Any time she stands over a putt I figure it's makeable," Sheehan said of King's birdie putt.

Sheehan drove into the rough on the first sudden-death hole, the par-five, 15th. The winningest player the past two years then sliced a 4-wood to the right in front of a trap and flipped her chip shot into the bunker.

King, who has pulled her tee shot behind a tree on No. 15 the previous two days, finally hit one into the fairway and then clubbed a 3-iron six-feet away which she made for the winning eagle putt.

"That's not the type of putt you make every day. It was a great putt," King admitted.

Despite the loss, Sheehan enjoyed the round.

"It was a fun day because that's what I thrive on — competition," she said. "I get a kick out of being in the hunt: getting birdies, bogeys, in the lead, tied for the lead. It makes it more interesting for me."

bad a birthday present."

Strange, who had shared the second and third round leads with Fred Couples, admitted he "was struggling," over the last few holes.

A bogey on the 17th, a putt that spun 180 degrees around the cup and stopped on the lip, "put me in a state of shock," he said.

It also dropped him back into a tie with Jacobsen and, after Strange had preserved that position with a gritty 6-footer on the final hole, set up a sudden death playoff.

"Curtis let me in," said Jacobsen, who came out of the pack with a no-hogey, 4-under-par 68 in the final round.

Strange, who opened the gates for Jacobsen's late challenge with a double bogey from the water on the seventh hole, had a scrambling 74 over the last 18 holes of regulation and matched Jacobsen's 275 total, 13 shots under par on the Eagle Trace Club course.

While the tournament was decided in the playoff, the turning point could have been the par-3 seventh.

Strange and Couples were tied for the lead and five in front of everyone else when they went to the tee with a gusty, swirling wind signalling the approach of a rain shower.

It's Strange...but true

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — Curtis Strange had his victory and the big check that went with it.

Still, he mused: "Nobody ever lets it be easy." Sunday it was Peter Jacobsen, just back from a five-week injury absence, who gave Strange anxious moments. Jacobsen was trying to provide himself with a surprise birthday present in the Honda Classic golf classic.

In a way, he did. In a way, he didn't. Jacobsen, who said he "didn't even think about winning until the last nine holes," made up a 6-shot deficit in the final round and found himself in a playoff with Strange for the title and the $90,000 first prize.

But Jacobsen, who is 31 today, 3-putted for bogey on the first extra hole and allowed Strange to escape with the title on a routine 2-putt par.

"I kind of let him off the hook on the playoff hole," said Jacobsen, who had been sidelined for more than a month with pulled muscles in the rib cage.

"But I really didn't expect to win my first week back. It takes some time to get sharp, get the edge again. I'm very, very happy with the way I played. Very pleased," he said, and then flashed a big smile.

"And I guess $54,000 (the second place check) isn't too

British coal miners return to work, end 357-day strike

LONDON (AP) — Britain's 357-day coal strike has ended with union delegates voting to return to work without winning concessions on Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's plan to close unprofitable mines and cut 20,000 jobs.

It was the longest and most violent strike in British history. Delegates to a convention of the National Union of Mineworkers voted Sunday to send strikers back to work on Tuesday, a week shy of the strike's first anniversary.

The vote was 88,000 in favor of returning to work and 91,000 against. Delegates made block votes for their regional membership.

The government claimed that more than half the nation's miners were already back on the job in defiance of the union, and many strikers were expected to jump the gun and head back to work today. The government said the number of miners dropped from 188,000 to 186,000 during the strike.

Mrs. Thatcher, the Conservative leader who took a hard line against the strike, praised the decision as a "victory for common sense," and said the next task is to make the coal industry profitable.

"We had to make certain that violence and intimidation and impossible demands couldn't win. There would have been neither freedom nor order in Britain if we'd given in to violence," she said.

Last December the government estimated the cost of the strike at $1.6 billion, but independent analysts estimated it at $3.2 billion to $3.75 billion. Coal Board spokesman Michael Eaton said it would take between three and six months for the coal industry to return to normal operation.

British newspapers called the decision to end the strike a crushing blow for Marxist union President Arthur Scargill and a major setback for the labor movement.

However, Scargill said the walkout had been "a tremendous achievement" because it got the government's National Coal Board to review the proposed closure of several mines.

Energy Secretary Peter Walker said in a British Broadcasting Corp. television interview that the government still planned to close money-losing mines.

"What's going to happen now if the miners collaborate, as I hope they will, is that we're going to have the biggest investment program in the mining industry...and of course the most uneconomic pits, as they have under all governments...will be closed down," he said.

Scargill and the union had said mines should only be closed when they become exhausted or unsafe.

At the height of the strike, three-quarters of Britain's 174 state-owned mines were closed. But a hard core of non-striking miners from the profitable Nottinghamshire region of central England was swelled by a growing number of strikers returning to work.

Last week when nearly 10,000 workers abandoned the walkout, and by the end of the week, the government said 52 percent of the miners were working and declared the strike over.

Prior to Sunday's conference, a majority of union districts had called for a return to work.

West German minister meets with Gromyko

MOSCOW (AP) — West Germany's foreign minister met with Soviet Minister Andrei A. Gromyko today during a surprise visit that was among a flurry of East-West contacts prior to the start of new U.S.-Soviet arms talks next week.

A West German diplomat, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said the meeting began at 10:30 a.m. (2:30 a.m. EST).

Gromyko returned to the Soviet Union on Saturday from a trip to Rome and Madrid, where he sought to convince officials to oppose President Reagan's "Star Wars" space-based anti-missile system.

U.S. and Soviet negotiators will discuss strategic and medium-range nuclear weapons, as well as space weapons when they begin talks in Geneva on March 12. Soviet officials and news media have concentrated on the space weapons issue in the weeks prior to the beginning of the Geneva talks. Diplomats in Moscow said Gromyko probably would raise that issue with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, and that Genscher would outline West Germany's position on the Geneva talks.

Only hours before Genscher arrived in the Soviet capital, Politburo member Vladimir V. Shcherbitsky left Moscow for the United States. Shcherbitsky meets Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz on Thursday.

The official news agency Tass said Genscher arrived Sunday evening for a short working visit, but it gave no details. West German Embassy officials had said Genscher would meet Gromyko at the Foreign Ministry guest house.

Sources in Bonn, the West German capital, said early Sunday that Genscher would go to Moscow and also squeeze in a six-hour trip to Warsaw, Poland, between scheduled visits to Helsinki, Finland, and the Bulgarian capital, Sofia.

The last-minute additions to Genscher's itinerary reflected West Germany's effort to mend relations with the Soviet bloc. Those relations have been damaged by NATO deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles, and by a dispute over charges that West Germany wants to recover territory lost to Soviet bloc countries after World War II.

Genscher was expected to tell Gromyko that the 40th anniversary of the Allied triumph over Nazi Germany this year, which will be widely celebrated in the Soviet Union, should not revive old animosities.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl took a step toward reducing tension with the Soviet bloc last week by reaffirming in a speech to Parliament that his country has no plans to forcibly regain territory lost to Eastern Europe at the end of World War II.

Genscher was last in Moscow in May 1984 for talks with Gromyko and Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko. He ended that visit skeptical that the superpowers would resume arms control talks in 1984.

West Germany continued to cultivate relations with East European countries, but pressure from Moscow prompted East German leader Erich Honecker and Bulgarian leader Todor Zhivkov to cancel planned visits to Bonn last fall.

Diplomatic sources said Genscher's trips to Moscow and Warsaw reflect West German concern that East Germany and Poland should not be ignored in efforts to resume East-West dialogue.

Genscher will meet Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski and Foreign Minister Stefan Olszowski in Warsaw for talks aimed at reducing tensions arising from the cancellation of his planned visit to Poland in November, Bonn sources said.

In the past three months, Genscher has visited Czechoslovakia and Romania. He goes to Hungary in June. Last week in Bonn he met Hermann Axen, No. 2 man in the East German Politburo.

Annual ANZUS meeting postponed

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Prime Minister Bob Hawke said today that an annual meeting of the Australia-New Zealand-United States defense alliance has been postponed and that the alliance has virtually ceased to function because of a dispute between Australia's two partners.

The 33-year-old alliance, known as ANZUS, has been thrown into chaos by New Zealand's decision to ban visits by nuclear-powered or nuclear-armed warships. New Zealand's prime minister, David Lange, says visits by those ships make New Zealand a nuclear target.

As a matter of policy, the United States refused to confirm or deny whether any of its ships carry nuclear arms, and it has withdrawn from ANZUS exercise in protest of New Zealand's decision.

"Australia has decided it is necessary to announce the postponement of the ANZUS council meeting," Hawke said today in a statement. Later, he told reporters: "In so far as ANZUS is a trilateral relationship, virtually nothing of it is operative now."

Hawke said there was no point in holding the annual meeting among the U.S. secretary of state and the foreign ministers of Australia and New Zealand. It had been scheduled for Canberra in July.

"In the light of the New Zealand decision (on nuclear ships) and the U.S. response to that decision...it is clear that the holding of a regular ANZUS council meeting at present would be impractical," Hawke said. The postponement is indefinite, he said.

Australian newspapers today quoted government officials, whom they did not identify, as saying the United States had told Australia it would not take part in the annual meeting.

New Zealand issued a statement in Wellington saying that it "regretted" the cancellation. Lange, who is visiting London, said in an interview on Australian television that the alliance was intact and that none of the partners had given the required 12 months notice of withdrawal.

"New Zealand is prepared to consult with its allies forthwith or in the future," said Lange.

Hawke agreed that the continuation of the alliance was not at issue. "The ANZUS treaty remains. It needs to be emphasized that this point is not in dispute between any of the ANZUS partners," he said.

However, he said, "the pre-eminent responsibility of the Australian government is to ensure the protection of Australia's essential national security interests and it will now do this through bilateral channels with both partners while the present circumstances prevail."

Lange banned visits by nuclear warships after being elected prime minister last July. He has insisted that New Zealand wants to remain in ANZUS, and that the ban is anti-nuclear rather than anti-American.

The United States, after giving New Zealand six months to reconsider its decision, asked last month for permission to send a conventionally-powered destroyer on a port visit after ANZUS exercises.

Lange refused to admit the ship, the USS Buchanan, because the United States would not break with its policy against confirming or denying whether the ship carried nuclear weapons. The United States protested by withdrawing from ANZUS exercises and reducing the amount of intelligence it shared with New Zealand.

Anti-nuclear protesters harass U.S. warships

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Anti-nuclear protesters in a dozen small boats tried to surround and halt two arriving U.S. warships today, but they were driven off by police who rammed their vessels and then pushed them away with grappling hooks.

The protesters yelled obscenities at sailors aboard the destroyers USS Buchanan and USS John Young as they motored alongside the warships in their small boats.

Several nuclear protest groups had vowed to prevent the U.S. ships from entering the harbor at Sydney, and Australian authorities were prepared for them.

The destroyers arrived about 20 minutes apart, and marine police guided them through the protesters, using long hooks to shove away boats that got too close. They are due to remain in Sydney until Friday, and then leave with Australian warships to take part in a naval exercise code-named "Flying Fish."

Two members of the Greenpeace environmental group were arrested by police after they cut across the bow of the USS Buchanan, police said. The Nuclear Disarmament Party and People for Nuclear Disarmament also took part in the protest.

About 100 more anti-nuclear protesters with banners and flags greeted the ships when they arrived at the Garden Island navy dockyard. The protesters say they will maintain a constant vigil until the warships leave.

Mayor of Juarez moves family to squatters' colony

JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — The prosperous mayor of this city across from El Paso has moved his family into a house without electricity or running water — a move an opponent derides as just putting on a show.

Mayor Francisco Barrio Terrazas says he moved into the squatter's colony to learn firsthand about the life of the poor so he can help them and protect them from intimidation by local political groups.

The mayor, who owns a comfortable home in this border city of 1 million, moved into a borrowed house in the Nuevo Hipodromo colonia last week with his wife and four daughters.

"I felt a need to help these people, to try to raise their hopes," he said.

Critics decry the move as a publicity stunt by a conservative and ambitious politician whose main support comes from wealthy merchants.

"It is something he's doing to further his career," Raymundo Lopez, a leader of the People's Defense Committee, a leftist group based in the colony. "He hasn't done anything to help the poor."

Nuevo Hipodromo is one of dozens of squatters' communities in Juarez. It is home to about 2,500 families, many living in houses of cardboard, tin or wood on land they do not own. Most people in the colonias, which are home to an estimated one-fourth of the city's residents, live in fear of eviction.

The mayor's borrowed dwelling is a modest, three-room brick house with cement floors, one of the better homes in the colonia. It has no running water or electricity.

Freed political prisoner says he may return to South Africa

New York Times News Service

KIRYAT SHEMONA, Israel — A leader of the banned African National Congress who was released from prison in South Africa and allowed to fly to Israel said Sunday that he might one day return to South Africa to continue his political struggle.

The freed man, Dennis Goldberg, said in an interview, "Perhaps when I feel more recovered and a little more energetic, I might find that some fears may not be so important."

The South African-born engineer accepted a conditional amnesty offered by President P.W. Botha on Jan. 31. Goldberg said of those prisoners, including Nelson Mandela, the head of the ANC, who declined the offer: "I'm not as strong as they are. I ask for their understanding."

Goldberg, 55 years old, who was one of the longest-serving white political prisoners, was freed Thursday. He was interviewed at Maayan Baruch kibbutz near here, where he came to visit his daughter, Hilary, 30.

Goldberg was arrested in 1962 and convicted and sentenced in 1964 on charges of making bombs for the anti-apartheid underground. He denied making any bombs. He served 22 years of a life sentence he received along with Mandela and other black leaders at a mass trial of ANC members charged with plotting violent acts.

Goldberg said he did not want to settle in Israel. He said he deplored Israel's support for South Africa and said he had come here only to be with his daughter.

Asked to comment on a statement from ANC members in Zambia that he owed his comrades an explanation for accepting the amnesty, Goldberg said he had been tired and simply had to get out. He said imprisoned comrades had told him to accept the amnesty because he had "had enough."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Chinese visit Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — A Chinese parliamentary delegation has arrived for an official visit to the Soviet Union, the latest sign of increasing contacts between the estranged communist neighbors.

The Chinese official news agency Xinhua said the National People's Congress group led by standing committee member Zhang Chengkian was invited by the Supreme Soviet, the Soviet Union's Parliament, "for a friendly visit."

The Soviet official news agency Tass quoted the Chinese delegation's leader as saying, "We are convinced that our visit will play a positive role for the deepening of mutual understanding between us, for the development of friendship between the peoples of our two countries, as well as for the development of contacts between the two parliaments."

Bush fires kill two people

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Bush fires burning along a 62-mile front between Sydney and Canberra claimed two lives were brought under control today, fire brigade officials reported.

They said some 270 firemen, many flown into the area by helicopters Sunday night, had blocked the advancing flames and residents who had been evacuated were returning to their homes.

The fires, whipped by strong winds, flared Saturday and destroyed several homes.

Police said a volunteer fireman was trapped by flames and burned to death while battling a blaze near the Googong Dam south of Canberra, the Australian capital that is 155 miles southwest of Sydney. They reported the other victim was a farmer who died of a heart attack while helping firemen save his home.

Khadafy threatens nations

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafy has warned that Libya will retaliate against European countries that harbor anti-Libyan "terrorists" by backing Irish, West German and Italian guerrillas, the official Libyan news agency JANA reported.

The radical Arab leader also reiterated support for black and Indian separatist nations in the United States.

Julie Rogers sits at the loom given by her grandmother eight years ago. It was the beginning of her interest in fiber artistry.

Weaving tradition

The loom was only a beginning for her, its intricate interlacing of horizontal and vertical lines serving as a form for weaving her innermost thoughts and ideas into concrete shapes.

Eight years after receiving the antique loom from her grandmother, Julie Rogers is still weaving, but often in a more contemporary manner as she creates art for the walls.

No longer just a weaver, she is classified as a fiber artist. But her work is created from the same ingredient — thread.

"Grandmother worked on this loom all her life, and my great aunt, also," Ms. Rogers says of her New England relatives. "They did functional things for the home, such as table linens."

That's what Ms. Rogers started doing at first, too, but then she began to expand her abilities.

"I just had a natural affinity toward it, and took some weaving workshops," she says.

Now she works off the loom on wall hangings using an art known as needleweaving, but incorporates a lot of the techniques she learned from the loom. "There's more of a market for it," she says.

A contemporary Plexiglas design hanging on the wall is typical of her expanding talents. The vertical pieces of plexiglass are wrapped in hand-dyed yarns with the salmon, gray, orange, peach and rust hues forming a design.

Half-finished is a navy-suede fabric canvas with cream-colored silk threads of various textures painting a free-spirited design.

The weaving room is filled with tools of the trade and the shelves are piled up with yarn in more colors than the rainbow — there's a shelf of blues, another of peaches and pinks, another of browns and rusts.

Yarn dyed in various hues fill the shelves in Ms. Rogers' studio.

Selling through the Sol Del Rio Art Gallery in San Antonio, her work was noticed by a group of Saudi Arabians who subsequently consulted with Ms. Rogers on designing silk and gold tapestries for the interior of an aircraft for the Saudi royal family.

Several fabric weavers were interviewed for the work, and Ms. Rogers wasn't chosen. "It was disappointing not to get it," she says of the commission. "But just getting to see it and meet the people was well worth it. They had wanted a curved design with different textures for the 747. These tapestries were to be installed on the wall of the plane."

Although she never saw the inside of the plane — which was stored in a hangar and watched by armed guards — Ms. Rogers viewed the cardboard and wood mockups.

Her work has been on exhibit at Southern Methodist University; Cary Windsor Gallery in Richmond, Va.; Gallery 1114 in Midland; London Historical Museum in Ontario, Canada; Tennessee State Museum at Nashville; and Mississippi Museum of Art at Jackson.

She teaches weaving classes at Midland College, which draws about eight to 10 students each semester. And each year Ms. Rogers tries to learn a new technique to avoid repetition.

"The basic techniques are not hard to master. But it takes time and patience," says the weaver, who used to work at the art almost all day when she began.

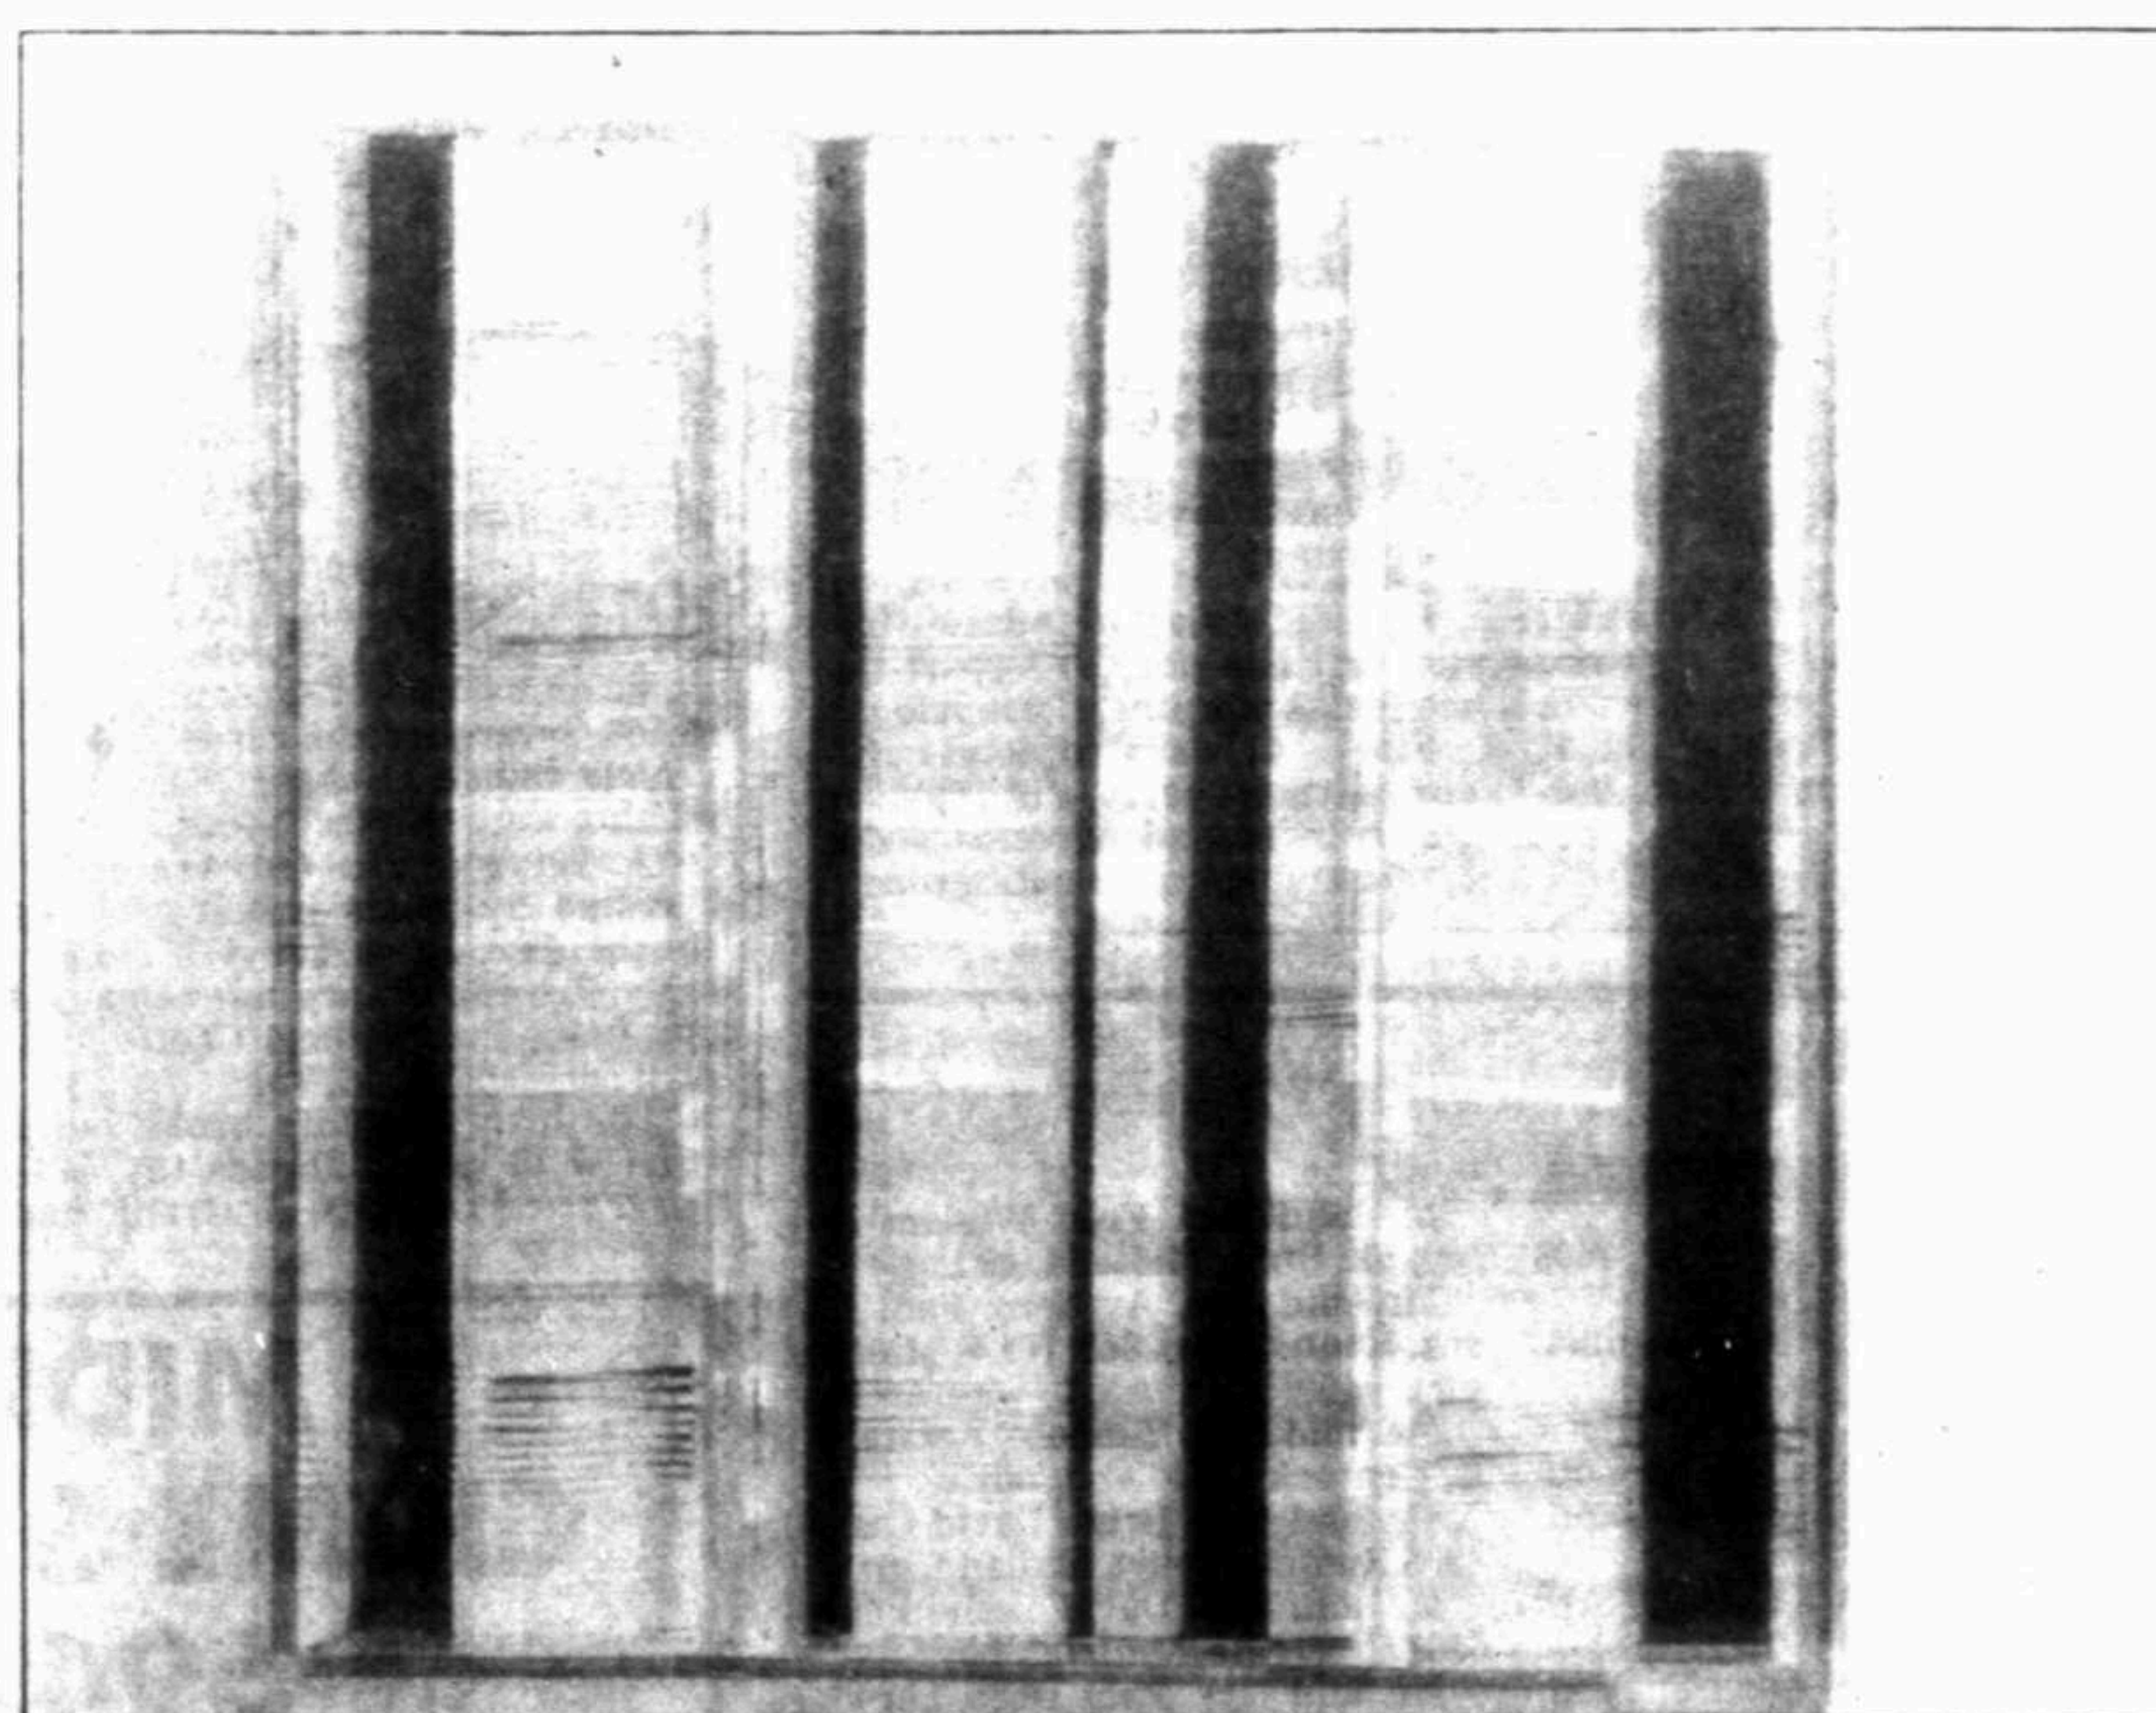

"Midland has a good ratio of people who are interested in fiber art," she says, and cites the Midland Fiber Guild as one outlet for these people to exchange and learn new ideas.

Although it is an ancient art, weaving now incorporates tools of the 20th century. Ms. Rogers uses graph paper to draw out her designs before picking up the needle or working the loom. But even that is being abandoned for the computer age.

Arraignment of robbery suspect expected today

From Staff Reports

Arraignment of a 28-year-old Midland man suspected in the Friday night robbery of a convenience store is expected today.

Charges of aggravated robbery and aggravated assault on a peace officer were expected to be filed against the man, who was arrested a few blocks from the convenience store at 3302 W. Illinois Ave.

According to police, the man entered the store at 1:10 p.m., pointed a gun at the clerk and demanded money. Police called to the scene chased the man, who pointed the gun at officers several times. The man, who gave police an address in 3700 block of Monty, was apprehended in the back yard of a residence at 300 Thomas.

The gun was later determined to be a pellet gun, according to reports.

Another 28-year-old Midland man was arrested Friday morning in connection with the burglary of a vacant house at 208 Spruce.

According to reports, a neighbor saw the man enter and exit the house, owned by Salvador Acosta of Kermit, through a window. Police were called to the scene and apprehended a man matching the description a few blocks west of the house.

The man, who gave police an address in the 400 block of Dengar, was taken back to the scene, where he was identified by the neighbor as the man seen in the house.

A Midland man stopped for traffic violations was charged with possession of a controlled substance after police found 100 white pills believed to be methamphetamine in his vehicle.

The 24-year-old, expected to be arraigned today, gave police an address in the 700 block of North Lee.

A Levelland woman reported to police a man known to her had assaulted her Sunday night with a handgun, which he also used to fire at her although the gun was empty.

According to reports, police responded to the Kent Station at the intersection of Cuthbert Avenue and North Midkiff Road where they found Jan Timmons with blood running down her face from cuts on her forehead.

Ms. Timmons told police the man had hit her with the handgun and had pointed the gun at her and pulled the trigger several times. According to her, the gun clicked and the man turned to a friend and said, "If you hadn't taken out the bullets, she'd be dead."

The woman was taken to a shelter and aggravated assault charges are expected to be filed today.

Raul Reyes, 922 N. Fort Worth, reported the burglary of his 1978 Pontiac Sunday morning. According to reports, the unlocked car was parked on the street in front of his residence between 10 p.m. Saturday and 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

A screwdriver kept in the glove compartment apparently was used in an attempt to remove a stereo system from the car, according to reports. About $1,200 worth of damage was reported.

Policemen injured in copter crash

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two San Antonio police officers were in fair condition at Medical Center Hospital here today after their helicopter crashed at Stinson Field during a training flight.

Pilot Joe Garza, 42, and Gregory Koch, 38, were injured Saturday night when their helicopter crashed while attempting to land near the center of the general aviation airfield, according to police Sgt. Billy Anders.

Anders said the patrolmen were practicing maneuvering around a training site marked by car tires before the helicopter dropped 50 feet to the ground.

The accident was being investigated by the Federal Aviation Administration. Police said the Hughes 300-C helicopter lost power.

The crash was the first in the 14 years the helicopter unit has been in operation. San Antonio police use three helicopters for surveillance and routine traffic patrol.

Crash site inspection resumes

STIGLER, Okla. (AP) — Authorities were to resume their inspection today of a crash site east of Stigler where four Arkansians in a single engine plane died.

Haskell County authorities said Larry and Judy Flocks and his sons, Larry Flocks Jr. and Chris Flocks, all of Fort Smith, died in the accident.

Jeff Crase of the Haskell County sheriff's office said the 1984 Piper Seneca 3 went down in a field about 5 1/2 miles east of Stigler about 4 p.m. Flocks was flying the private plane from Lubbock, Texas, to Fort Smith.

The cause of the accident was not known, but Crase said high winds were prevalent in the area at the time of the crash.

Sheriff's Deputy Jim Terrell of Haskell County saw the crash and told authorities he saw the wings of the plane fold up just before the aircraft dived nose-first into the ground.

Federal Aviation Administration officials were to inspect the scene this morning, Crase said.

Flocks, 42, was a corporate officer with Beverly Enterprises which owns and operates about 1,000 nursing homes nationwide.

Shooting, thefts reported

From Staff Reports

No charges have been filed in connection with a disturbance Saturday night in which shots were fired, according to reports from the Midland County Sheriff's Office.

Delores Jurado, 1704 S. McKenzie, told deputies she was involved in a civil dispute with a man known to her who fired two shots at her. No injuries were reported and the man was not arrested, reports said. The investigation is continuing.

A gold watch and gold bracelet, valued at a total of $3,200, were reported stolen Thursday night from a Midland motel.

According to reports, Ronald Ralph Winkler of Dallas, said his unlocked room at the Executel Motel, was entered between 9 p.m. and 11 p.m. Thursday, and the jewelry stolen.

David Piffle, 3306 Princeton, told sheriff's officers a welder, 150 feet of welding leads, a cutting torch and gauges valued at $1,900 were stolen from a business, name not available, at No. 20 Berry Road, between Feb. 26 and Friday.

A.J. Gendron of Alderwood,

Wash., reported the theft of two rubber-coated tarps from the trailer of his 1980 GMC tractor-trailer while it was parked at the Warfield Truck Terminal at about 3 p.m. Sunday. The tarps were valued at $500 each.

Two female chihuahuas were reported stolen between 7 p.m. and 11 p.m. Friday from a kennel behind 1202 Fairpark Road. According to reports filed by Dessie Wilson of the same address, the dogs were valued at a total of $800.

They were described as a 4-month-old cream-colored female and a 1-month-old fawn female with a black mask.

A burglary at McClatchy Bros., Inc., 44 W. Industrial, was reported by J.A. McClatchy, 3307 Terrace. The business was entered by prying open a door to a storage shed between Saturday and Sunday, reports said. An unknown number of drill bits, value undetermined, were reported missing.

Jerry Bryant, Star Route A, Box 51 V 55, told sheriff's officer his 1981 Cutlass Supreme was hit with eggs while parked in the driveway at his residence. About $900 worth of damage was reported.

Green Stamps, car stolen

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police today continued to seek a vehicle stolen sometime late Saturday night or early Sunday morning from the north side residence of the manager of the Odessa S&H Green Stamp store.

Don R. Wright, 1200 E. 52nd Street, told investigating officers he arrived home shortly after midnight Sunday and noticed his 1983 Ford LTD was not parked in the driveway. He told officers he assumed it was in the garage, didn't think anyone about it until about 9 a.m., when he checked and found the vehicle missing.

Wright estimated total loss at $42,040, which included about $35,000 worth of Green Stamps, three guns valued at more than $1,100, several credit cards and the vehicle valued at about $6,000. Also missing were checks checks.

A 19-year-old Odessa man, arrested by police inside a closed southside Odessa service station early Saturday morning, remained hospitalized at Medical Center Hospital early today.

The man allegedly broke out a window to gain entrance to Wall's Texaco station, 1700 S. Grant, and cut his arm in doing so.

He was taken into custody by officers who observed him inside the service station using the telephone.

Officers recovered 12 cans of a soft drink, 10 cartons and about 150 individual packs of cigarettes, some from a vehicle registered to McDonald, which was parked on the Interstate 20 service road west of the station.

The owner of the service station, Dolores C. Wall, told investigating officers she wouldn't know exactly what had been taken until she had a chance to check her inventory.

According to Odessa police spokesman Rusty Baker, charges of burglary of a building are pending against the suspect.

A 17-year-old Odessan, Sammy Lynn Walker, 313 E. 44th Street, remained in critical condition at Medical Center Hospital early today as a result of injuries sustained when he was struck by a car about 11:32 p.m. Saturday.

According to Baker, Walker was on the street in the 4100 block of Andrews Highway, when he was struck by a car driven by Deanna Dawn Cameron, 16, 3101 Century.

Walker suffered serious head injuries in the incident.

Passion play, town a match

GLEN ROSE (AP) — Residents of this community of 2,000 say they are happy that an outdoor musical about the life of Christ has come to town to stay.

"It's the right kind of thing for Glen Rose, instead of beer joints and dance halls," said 72-year-old Georgia Oldham at the senior citizen center in Glen Rose, near the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant.

The passion play and the community are a match made in heaven, said R. Keith Owens, chairman of the board of Kingdom Properties Inc., a company formed by 15 investors who say faith in God and business acumen brought about the move.

But residents of Granbury, 16 miles away, had shunned the passion play, which they called "Six Flags Over Jesus".

"God worked it out for us. He didn't want us in Granbury," said Owens, who is still stunned by the flap the passion play kicked up there.

Granbury residents criticized plans by Owens' group to negotiate the purchase of property at Comanche Peak, a mesa on the outskirts of Granbury. They said the play would disturb a butte sacred to the Comanche Indians as an ancient burial ground.

The play was a tourist attraction masquerading as a religion, residents claimed, adding it would tarnish Granbury's reputation as a picturesque little town.

Some thought the play would be a good idea, and increase business at local stores. But as negotiations continued, Kingdom Properties began looking for another site. Down Highway 144, a 752-acre parcel at Glen Rose looked promising.

Owner Larry Smith, a sometime-rancher and businessman, was willing to sell.

"If I had known who I was selling to, they might have bought it a little cheaper," Smith said. "I'm not going to stand in the way of the Lord's work."

Kingdom Properties quietly bought surrounding parcels until it had acquired 921 acres for about $1 million. "The Lord moved us 16 miles south and gave us another shot," Owens said.

"They see the dollar signs mainly, the people in town," she said. "It will put a strain on our city services. It's sure going to change Glen Rose, and I'm not against that. I just don't want it to be for the worse."

Man shoots self in restroom

From Staff Reports

A 46-year-old Midland man remains in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital after he accidentally shot himself Saturday night.

Ignacio Morin Brito, 1200 E. Walnut Lane, had apparently gone into the restroom of Mi Contraria bar at 200 E. Kentucky Ave., during an argument.

According to police, Brito pulled a .380-caliber automatic pistol from the waistband of his pants when the gun hung on his pants and discharged. Brito suffered a gun shot wound and powder burns to the groin area.

Charles Manuel Rocha, 40, of Odessa, who happened to be in the restroom at the same time, was shot in the right foot by the bullet which exited Brito. He was released from Midland Memorial Hospital, a spokeswoman said.

According to witnesses, Brito was seen arguing with a man at a table when he loaded his gun and tucked it into his waistband before going into the restroom, reports said.

"You can graph it on a computer and see what it would look like."

Most of her work is what she calls "free form," and the graph paper or computer is necessary to help her see how the design will appear before she begins; it is also a tool in setting up the loom for her new designs. "At first you work with already established patterns on the loom to learn how the yarn interacts," she says. And the graphing shows where the threads should be placed to weave a new design.

Or, she uses another method for designing. "I'll design something as I'm working. I'll be using a particular technique that will suggest something to me. Most weaving processes are non-thinking, so I'll think of new designs while I'm weaving."

"Each piece I do is a little better than the previous one. The color, the textures, all the time are becoming more refined. Each piece is a totally different challenge."

The public's interest in fiber art is expanding, she says. "Fiber art is a relative new medium, although people have been making clothing for thousands of years."

Art workshops scheduled

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Jerry Williams, an instructor for the Robert Garden School of Art in Irving will be conducting a free public demonstration, "The Ease of Oil Painting," today at 1 and 7 p.m. at the Holiday Inn Parkway here.

The "quick draw" style of painting which Williams uses has been popularized throughout the United States by the Robert Garden School for the past 30 years.

He also will offer special painting-along workshops from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday at the Holiday Inn Parkway. Evening workshops are scheduled from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Students participating in these workshops will complete two realistic oil paintings in each day session and one during the evening class.

Williams said that by using certain time-saving techniques and by following simple instructions, paintings are possible at the first lesson. He said 90 percent of art talent is simply the student's desire to paint, and 8 percent is technique which can be learned while 2 percent is the God-given ability to draw.

The Garden process uses special paints and medium to make the painting easier and also permits the painting to dry faster. Some of the time-saving techniques are double loading the brush to achieve shadow and highlight in one stroke, the dirty brush to achieve color alignment which is more consistent with nature, the fan brush to obtain startling special effects.

Williams is a graduate of Howard College and has studied at Wayland College, Texas Tech, University of Texas and Sophia University in Japan. He is a graduate of the Robert Garden School of Art and has studied with Susan Rogers. He has won awards in oil painting and watercolors.

Bush supports early primary

WACO, Texas (AP) — Vice President George Bush has signaled his support for adopting an early presidential primary in Texas, saying it could give him an important early boost over other Republican candidates in 1988.

The vice president said he conferred with friends and supporters, during a three-day tour through Texas that ended Saturday, about undertaking "a few prudent steps" for an expected 1988 presidential campaign.

"I haven't decided what I'm going to do in '88, but in terms of an early primary, I think that might be to my advantage," he said in an interview aboard Air Force Two with the Waco Tribune-Herald.

Bush also said he opposes splitting the presidential primary from the state primary in Texas because of the increased costs.

If truth be known, daily lying common for most

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — People are surprisingly inept, new research shows, at detecting lies.

One reason is that most of the supposed clues to deceit, such as shifty eyes or nervousness, seldom, in fact, accompany a premeditated lie. Another reason is that people generally have not been aware of the more reliable indicators, which psychologists have only now begun to identify.

While people frequently expect a liar to give himself away through nervous gestures, for example, the new studies discern that liars are more likely to attempt to inhibit all such nervous movements, and so appear more composed. "Most liars can fool most people most of the time," according to Paul Ekman, a psychologist at the University of California at San Francisco.

Nevertheless, researchers have found that there are some specific physical signs that the purveyor of untruth cannot suppress.

LYING ACTUALLY takes many forms: hedges, evasions, exaggerations, half-truths, and outright falsehoods among them. Social lies — the fictional previous engagement, for example — make life work more smoothly or prevent hurt feelings, and so are tacitly ignored. Daily life is rife with lies, many benign and some malicious.

"People tell about two lies a day, or at least that is how many they will admit to," according to Bella DePaulo, a psychologist at the University of Virginia, who in one study is having people keep a daily diary of the lies they tell.

One of the consistent findings of the new research, which is being conducted by psychologists at several universities, is that people think they are better detectors of lies than they really are. Dozens of studies have found that people's accuracy at detecting lies usually exceeds chance by very little. While guessing alone would give a rate of 50 percent accuracy, in the recent studies the best rate of accuracy for any group has never exceeded 80 percent, and is most often near chance.

This is true even for those in professions where lie detection is at a premium. In a study done at Cornell University, for example, customs inspectors proved no better than college students at guessing which people were trying to smuggle contraband. Likewise, a study at Auburn University in Alabama found that police detectives were no more successful in judging people lying about a mock crime than were students.

ANOTHER STUDY found that a group of seasoned federal law enforcement officers from the Secret Service and the Criminal Investigation Divisions of the armed forces were no more accurate in

Lies not always easy to spot, psychology professor says

Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — People lie for a lot of reasons — and others believe them, or are taken in, for a lot more. But you need not be among those who fall for the "line."

According to Paul Ekman, professor of psychology at the University of California at San Francisco, there are at least 36 ways in which you can tell you are being lied to.

Still, he adds, it's not easy to sort the truth from the fiction, and so some folks may decide that maybe it isn't worth the effort after all.

Ekman tells all about it in a new book, "Telling Lies," now available in book stores. (Released Feb. 26 by Norton Press.)

"There are some natural-born liars who never can be caught," he warns, "masters of deceit who comprise about 5 percent of the population." These people, he points out, however, can make "wonderful actors, statesmen, diplomats and spies."

The rest of the liar population, though, can be spotted by many points of betrayal, Ekman says. "Through facial expressions and gesture, voice sounds, slips of the tongue, subtle body language and micro-expressions that flash by in seconds on the liar's face," he said.

In fact, Ekman says, the very act of telling a lie can make it harder to keep misleading victims. "Anytime the liar has to conceal emotions — fear of being caught, guilt about lying or delight in fooling his victims — it becomes harder for him."

On the other hand, he adds, some victims can easily be misled. Some actually cooperate in being deceived, he says, either because they fear to know the truth or because they find it hard to believe that persons they hold in high esteem are capable of distorting the truth.

Ekman says that his book is the first to discuss lies in any terms other than whether the deceiver is moral or immoral. In his own case, he refrains from calling them either.

The subject came to mind, he recalled, when he began teaching psychiatry students at the University of California at San Francisco how they can learn from patients' non-verbal messages. "I knew it would be particularly useful to doctors talking to suicidal patients who were trying to conceal their true feelings and intents," he said.

And he decided to put it all in a book, he added, to "prevent the material he had developed from being misused." He explained that he has been approached to see if he could train guards to recognize terrorists before they struck, and from the Federal Bureau of Investigation to learn if he could help police officers learn to determine whether a suspect is lying.

To stop enthusiasts from trying to use his findings too uncritically, he said, he decided to write a book explaining how hard it is to really know when someone is lying.

He's also worried that his findings may act in reverse — by enabling liars to become better ones. "They may be encouraged to find out how easy it is to get away with a lie or may learn how to avoid the mistakes they are most likely to make."

But, although that is a possibility, Ekman concluded, his overall findings are more likely to help the lie-catcher than the liar. "It will be easier to improve one's ability to detect deceit than to perpetrate it."

insurance investigators. However, as some of the researchers acknowledge, these laboratory tests of the ability to detect lies may not be a true indication of a person's proficiency in a true life situation, where he or she can observe and question the suspected person freely.

Much of the new data have come from the work of Ekman, who describes his research on what he claims are reliable clues to lying in "Telling Lies," to be published this month by W.W. Norton.

According to Ekman, whose theory is generally accepted by other experts, the least dependable indicators of lying are those channels of expression that a person can control most fully. Thus, words are far less accurate clues than tone of voice, because it is easier to rehearse what one will say than it is to control the pitch of voice while saying it.

BY FAR THE MOST reliable clues to lying, Ekman said, are the responses a person makes automatically, and which are subject to little or no control. Such responses are most likely during lies that are more important to the liar and in which he has an emotional stake.

For example, Ekman's research has identified certain movements of facial muscles that very few people can make deliberately. Unlike most facial muscles, these seem to be regulated by a more primitive part of the brain, which makes it nearly impossible to control them voluntarily. As a result, when that muscle movement is part of an emotional expression, people are unable to conceal it.

Ekman believes at least three such muscle movements are telltale signs of emotional reactions that people who are lying often try to conceal: distress, fear and anger.

The signal of distress or worry is the lifting of just the inner part of the eyebrows. "Fewer than 15 percent of people can control this movement at will," Ekman said in an interview. "Woody Allen is one; it gives him the ability to seem particularly sympathetic or vulnerable. But in most people, this movement of the brows happens only when a person feels genuine distress. It can also signal guilt. Ordinarily, this movement will appear despite a person's best attempts to conceal these feelings."

ANOTHER SUCH reliable facial signal is for fear. In this movement the eyebrows are raised and pulled together. "Not a single person we've tested can produce this movement deliberately," Ekman said.

The third such clue is to anger. An angry person often narrows and tightens the red margin of the lips. Ekman says this muscle action frequently appears just as someone starts to get angry, even before the person is aware of the feeling. It is, however, a subtle and fleeting movement.

Pathological liars can fool others or just be foolish

Associated Press

Pathological liars can be antisocial psychopaths or likable social liars — it all depends on why they lie and what the rest of their personality displays.

"The definition of pathological is a little like the definition of alcoholic," Sarnoff Mednick, professor of psychology at the University of California in Los Angeles, said in the March issue of Cosmopolitan. "It suggests a lack of control."

Some chronic liars are psychopaths with serious personality disorders who feel no guilt about antisocial behavior.

"What distinguishes such people is that they deliberately lie without any conscious conflict," said Dr. William Offenkrantz, professor of psychoanalysis at the Medical College of Wisconsin and medical director of the Wisconsin Psychoanalytic Foundation, both in Milwaukee.

detecting deceit than were newly recruited officers who had just joined those agencies. The one difference between the groups, though, was that the seasoned officers, who averaged seven years of service, felt more confident of their ability to detect lying, even though they were no more accurate. Studies such as these have revealed that people are poor at detecting lies in large part because they base their judgment on the wrong clues. For example, in the

"The classic example is a career crook for whom lying is a way of life. These are not the kind of people who show up in a psychiatrist's office, because they suffer no mental pain — only fear of external punishment."

Much more common is the likable social liar.

"There's no hard data," said Dr. Steven Hyler, assistant clinical professor of psychiatry at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons, "but it's clinical folklore that liars, like gamblers, are charming."

One antisocial trait does not constitute a personality disorder, he said, adding, "If lying is the only antisocial symptom, it's a trait, and most traits don't come to the attention of a psychologist unless they're full-blown and causing real problems."

Some compulsive liars are classified as "hysterical personalities."

While psychopaths are likely to be male, hysterics are most often women who like to make their lives sound more exciting.

"This is a character type, not a hysterical neurosis," Offenkrantz said. "Such people aren't mentally ill — they just display extreme emotions. Hysterics tend to be extravagant, flamboyant and powerfully exhibitionistic."

"Most of them aren't consciously lying — it's just their personal style. For them, nothing is good enough without embellishment, and the embellishment is a lie."

Hysterics who go further and pretend to be someone they are not — someone richer, more talented, more successful — are monumentally insecure.

"Pathological liars lie to impress others and are probably sensitive to additional ways in which to please people," USC's Mednick said. "They have a poor relationship to reality and get carried away with the desire to make a momentary impression, even though they're aware they're perceived as fools."

Chronic liars lie to themselves as well as everybody else, and lying becomes a self-protective way of relating to the world, according to Chicago psychotherapist Karen Bloomberg.

When chronic lying gets out of hand, the liar usually gets caught, although some clever liars can fool friends and lovers indefinitely. Others subconsciously want to get caught.

"Psychiatrists would say that if you scratch below the surface, you'd see that liars want to be found out," Hyler told Cosmopolitan. "But most of them don't stay in therapy because they don't want to change — they're reinforced by knowing they're considered charming."

"They think they'd be dull otherwise — which may be true."

more proficient at detecting lies, Dr. DePaulo found. One major reason for this, she said, is that they get no systematic information about which of their judgments are right. Of those people they let pass without inspection, an unknown number carry contraband; of those they check, another unknown number of the guilty nevertheless evade detection.

THE CUSTOM inspectors' occasional successes, Dr. DePaulo said, give them reinforcement for whatever grounds for judgment they may happen to use. "However," she added, "it is possible that their success occurred in spite of their beliefs about cues to deception — beliefs which may have actually been erroneous."

The same holds, in theory, for those in other occupations where the detection of lies is routine, such as courtroom lawyers, detectives or

Art by Walne to be shown

Art works by Katie Walne will be exhibited throughout March at the Midland Woman's Club in Hogan Park.

Mrs. Walne has studied oil painting for 15 years at Midland College. Some of her instructors have been Betty Martin, Inez Parker, Betty Lynch, Dorothy Peterson, Marilyn Todd, Denny Pickett, Stan Jacobs and Warren Taylor.

She has attended workshops with Dr. Stewart, Dr. Kincaid, Bill Earle and Walter McGown.

DTP vaccine still in short supply

ATLANTA (AP) — DTP vaccine, for use against diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough, continues to run short in doctors' offices nationwide following controversy and lawsuits over its side-effects, officials say.

Eighteen states have supplies of one month or less and about one-third of doctors contacted in a recent check said they had trouble getting vaccine for their patients, the national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday.

The CDC has recommended that the last two shots in the five-shot DTP regimen — the boosters at 18 months and 4-to-6 years — be delayed until vaccine supplies are restored.

U.S. demand for DTP vaccine runs about 1.5 million doses a month. Shortages likely will continue until mid- to late 1985, the CDC said.

Supplies began running low last year when two of the three U.S. manufacturers curtailed production or distribution amid a flood of lawsuits from parents alleging nerve and brain damage to children.

Young Democrats meeting set

Young Democrats of Midland County will meet at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in the conference room of the Republic National Bank Building. Agenda will include discussion on state Young Democrats convention and its proposed platform, and nomination of convention delegates.

All interested persons are invited to attend. For more information call 683-6133 or 687-1210.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My parents will be celebrating their golden wedding anniversary this summer, and we (their children) want to observe the day in some special way. The problem is that Mama has been in a nursing home for the last four years — so senile she doesn't remember who we are half the time. Dad is fine. He has a live-in companion who has been an angel to him.

We discussed the various options with Dad. We considered having a lovely dinner with just close family members at the restaurant near the nursing home, but Mama is terrified of riding in a car, and her table manners are non-existent at this point. We could have a nice catered dinner for just the family right in the nursing home. Many couples give a golden wedding dance, and that's what Dad would like, but we have mixed emotions about it because obviously Mama can't be there, and if Dad hosts a dance without her he says he wants his lady-friend with him, which would take away from the reason for celebrating.

We decided to ask for your advice. — MIXED EMOTIONS

DEAR MIXED: A nice catered dinner at the nursing home with close family members is by far the best choice. And since your mother isn't able to participate in a golden wedding dance, it would be most inappropriate for your father to host such a party with his ladyfriend by his side.

DEAR ABBY: After breaking up with my boyfriend of two years, I returned to the nightclub scene because I enjoy dancing and I didn't want to just drop out of sight. I go to fairly high-class clubs, but I'm offended by these men who talk to a girl for five minutes, then ask her if she would like to go to bed.

I'm not talking about just one guy; I'm talking about a whole series of them. One evening I had seven propositions. One conceited jerk had the nerve to say: "Don't play hard to get; this is your last chance. If you don't come with me, I'm leaving with the girl over there." Then he pointed to her. I said no, so he went over to her and said, "OK, let's go," and they left together.

I'm no prude, Abby, but I'm no pushover, either. I look like a lady, act like a lady and talk like a lady. So where are all the gentlemen? — OFFENDED IN NAZARETH, PA.

Golden anniversary deserves proper luster

DEAR OFFENDED: Obviously you're not at the clubs where you've been hanging out. If you enjoy dancing, keep looking until you find a higher-class club.

DEAR ABBY: My son is happily married to a fine young professional woman. When they married, "Mary" did not take my son's name ("Smith"). She wants to be known as "Dr. Mary Jones" — Jones being her maiden name.

They are expecting a baby, and she wants their child to bear her maiden name — Mary or Johnny Jones — not his surname of "Smith."

I may be old-fashioned, but I do not like the idea of my son's child bearing his mother's maiden name instead of his father's surname. People who don't know better may assume that the child was born out of wedlock.

Also, what is the correct way to address mail to my son and his wife, since he does not have a "Doctor"

title, but she has? — GRANDMA-TO-BE

DEAR GRANDMA: Many professional women prefer to keep their maiden names, and if they have children, they use a hyphenated combination of their name and their husband's name (Johnny Jones-Smith).

Address their mail to "Dr. Mary Jones and Mr. John Smith."

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." MARKETS MONEY

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar turned in a mixed showing today against the major currencies in Europe. Gold prices were up by about $2 an ounce.

The dealers reported heavy trading and frequent rate fluctuations as their markets waited to see if the West German central bank would intervene to protect the mark.

The dollar was hit in the last three trading sessions last week after concerted intervention led by the Deutsche Bundesbank in which an estimated $4 billion were sold on the world's foreign exchanges.

Dealers said there was a strong commercial demand for dollars which was pushing prices up and they expected the rates to rise on a technical reaction following the American currency's sharp drop last week.

In London, sterling was boosted by one cent with the end of the year-long coal strike. The British pound was quoted at $1.0815, more expensive for buyers than Friday's late $1.0715.

Sterling also rose against other currencies but not substantially and dealers said there was still nervousness about the pound because major issues in the coal strike were unresolved.

The issues included the closure of money-losing mines, the demand for an amnesty for miners sacked because of court convictions for picket-line offenses and the continuing ban on overtime.

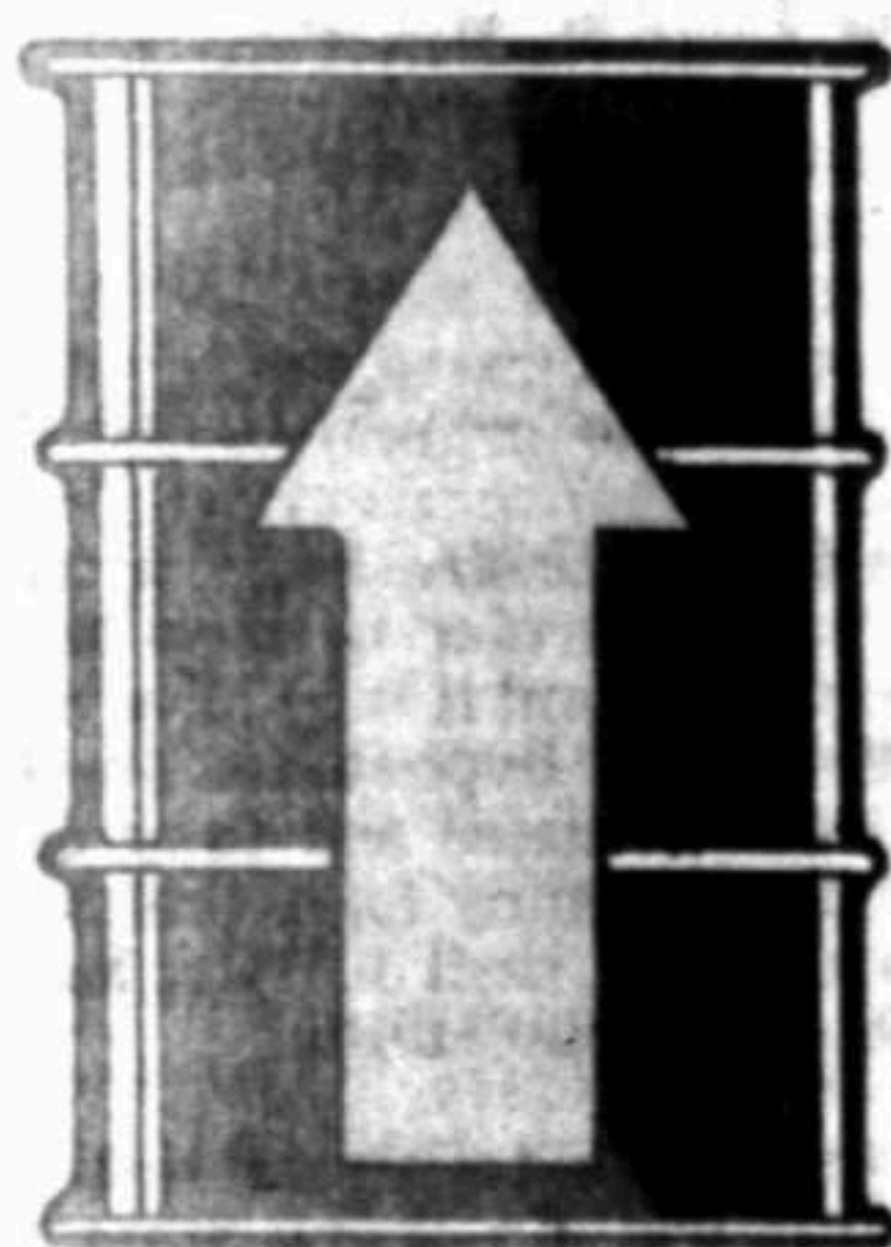

Sterling would weaken again if North Sea oil prices fall. A decline is expected because British power stations were certain to switch back to cheaper coal after burning oil during the strike.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar declined to 260.05 Japanese yen, down from 260.50 late Friday. Later in London it was quoted at 260.10.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Friday:

- 3.3580 West German marks, down from 3.3600.
- 2.8842 Swiss francs, up from 2.8755.
- 10.2895 French francs, up from 10.2700.
- 3.8020 Dutch guilders, up from 3.7975.
- 2,094.5 Italian lire, down from 2,095.00.

Phillips says Icahn to drop his takeover bid

NEW YORK (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. said today that financier Carl Icahn agreed to drop his hostile bid to acquire the nation's eighth-largest company, the second unwelcome takeover assault in less than three months.

The announcement of a settlement came after Phillips launched a sweetened, $4.5 billion offer to buy back nearly half of its stock and also disclosed that its shareholders had rejected an earlier plan to keep the company independent.

Icahn agreed to withdraw his offer of $60 a share for 70 million shares of Phillips, which was part of an $8.06 billion bid for the company, Phillips said.

Icahn also said he would not go through with an attempt to unseat Phillips' board and agreed not to launch another bid for Phillips during the next eight years, according to the company.

Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., Icahn's financial adviser, agreed not to finance any takeover attempt against Phillips for the next three years, Phillips said in announcing the settlement. Both Phillips and Icahn agreed to dismiss lawsuits filed in the takeover attempt that began Feb. 4.

Under the settlement, Phillips will pay up to $25 million of Icahn's expenses.

In December, Phillips negotiated a settlement of a takeover attempt led by T. Boone Pickens Jr., the chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co.

The settlement with Icahn was reached after Phillips began an offer to exchange 72.5 million shares of its stock for securities with a value of $62 a share. It also said it planned to increase the dividend on common stock from $2.40 a share to $3 a share, and to issue $300 million in preferred stock to the holders of the remaining 73.1 million shares of Phillips' common stock.

Phillips also announced Sunday night that it would seek shareholder authorization for issuing more common stock so it could implement a 3-for-1 stock split for each share remaining after the stock buyback.

But Phillips dropped plans for selling a controlling interest in its stock to its employees, although it said it still planned to sell $2 billion of its assets.

That compared with an earlier plan put together in the December settlement with Pickens, which provided for Phillips to buy back 58.8 million shares of its stock with securities having a face value of $60 a share. In that plan, Phillips would have sold up to 39 percent of its stock to its employees — enough to block any unwelcome suitor under proposed new by-laws.

Voting on that plan was completed Wednesday at Phillips' headquarters in Bartlesville, Okla., and results were to be released today.

In a statement issued in New York late Sunday, Phillips' chairman, William Douce, said there was strong support for the plan. "However, it appears that the proposal did not get the approval of the majority of our total outstanding shares," he said. A vote count was not disclosed.

Douce, in describing the company's latest proposal, said, "Many of our shareholders wanted a different type of transaction, and our new proposal is designed to deliver the value we believe they want. It involves the exchange of a greater number of shares for securities having higher interest rates, permits shareholders to retain an equity interest, and keeps the company together as a vital, competitive entity."

Phillips predicted earnings per share, which were $5.26 last year, would rise to $7.04 a share in 1985, $7.92 a share in 1986 and $10.28 in 1987, the company said.

Icahn owns 4.85 percent of Phillips stock, or 7.5 million shares. On Friday, Phillips stock closed at $49.37 1/2 a share.

Report says industrial economy showing continued improvement

NEW YORK (AP) — The industrial economy showed signs of continued improvement in February, but some areas of concern remained, the National Association of Purchasing Management reported Sunday.

The organization of executives who purchase raw materials and other supplies for industry reported "a healthy increase" in new orders and slight improvements in production and employment.

For the third straight month, the purchasing managers reported more price declines than increases, "sending a strong signal that inflation will not be a problem for the foreseeable future," according to the association's monthly Report on Business.

The report is closely followed by economists as an indicator of current conditions. Government reports covering the performance of various segments of the economy during the month of February will be issued in the weeks ahead.

As for the future outlook, the Commerce Department said Friday that its index of Leading Economic Indicators, the government's main economic barometer, rose 1.7 percent in January — the steepest monthly rise since June 1983.

"After slowing during the first half of 1984, in February, the economy continued the improvement which began in January," the purchasing agents' report said.

But it also said that there was some concern about a drop in its seasonally adjusted Purchasing Manager's Composite Index, which fell to 49.7 percent in February from 52.5 percent the previous month.

The index, based on an analysis by the Commerce Department, adjusts five components of the purchasing agents' survey — new orders, production, employment, the performance of suppliers and inventories — for normal seasonal variations and applies various weights to each figure. A reading below 50 percent indicates the economy is in a declining phase while a reading above 50 percent points to an expansion.

It was the first drop below 50 percent since January 1983, but the group noted that the figures for February reflected recent revisions in seasonal adjustment factors.

"The economy continues to appear healthy and we should see a respectable first quarter," said Robert Bretz, director of corporate purchasing for Pitney Bowes Inc. and chairman of association's committee that prepares the report.

The report also said that the purchasing managers surveyed from 250 industrial companies did not appear to be particularly concerned about the March 31 scheduled expiration of a nationwide contract between the Teamsters union and the trucking industry.

"By a margin of 2-to-1, purchasers indicated they did not plan to increase inventories in anticipation of the contract expiration," the report said.

Struck airline trying to keep flying

LONDON (AP) — A strike by U.S. ground crews has forced Pan American World Airways to cancel a number of international flights, but passengers are being accommodated on other flights and there has been little disruption, officials say.

"It has gone better than we expected," Oswald Kuhn, weekend marketing and reservations director for Pan Am in Frankfurt said. "The passengers have been very friendly, polite and understanding."

Because the strike is taking place in the off-season for world travel, the airline in many capitals been able to combine flights and avoid bumping passengers. In the instances where some passengers can't be booked with Pan Am, they are re-booked on other airlines, whose flights also are far from full.

The airline was forced to ground most scheduled service originating in the United States, where 5,753 mechanics, baggage handlers, flight dispatchers and food service workers began a strike Thursday after rejecting a 20-percent wage increase tied to increased productivity and reduced benefits. Pilots and flight attendants have been honoring the picket lines.

Some flights originating outside the United States have been canceled, too, because not enough planes and flight crews have flown from America to keep the schedule operating.

In London, a company spokesman said four of seven daily flights were operating, with all passengers being accommodated either by Pan Am or others.

Paris' single flight to New York Sunday went on schedule.

In Rome, the one flight to New York Sunday did not fly, but its passengers were carried by Alitalia and TWA.

In Frankfurt, two of three scheduled flights to America Sunday were canceled, but all passengers were accommodated on the third — a jumbo jet which left two hours late with all but six seats filled.

In Vienna, passengers to New York Saturday were given tickets on other airlines and had to fly via London, Frankfurt or Zurich.

In Sydney, three-times-weekly non-stop flights to Los Angeles have been going but flights via New Zealand and Honolulu were canceled. Four of Pan Am's seven weekly flights into Australia have been grounded.

In Tokyo, five of nine incoming flights were canceled Monday and three of seven outgoing flights were canceled. But Katsuro Isa, manager for public relations and sales, said arrival and departure times have not been affected. All passengers are being accommodated.

One exception to the pattern was Manila, where last Friday, a flight crew refused to work out of sympathy with the domestic U.S. strike.

EPA passes controls to ban leaded fuel

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's taken a decade, but the Environmental Protection Agency is finally getting the lead out — or most of it — from gasoline.

The agency has adopted final regulations reducing the permissible lead concentration of leaded fuel from 1.1 grams per gallon to 0.5 gram effective July 1 and 0.1 gram next Jan. 1, according to EPA sources who spoke on condition they not be identified.

The EPA for the time being has rejected a complete ban on leaded fuel, but also rejected the option of delaying action until 1988. The agency will ask for public comment on banning lead entirely, possibly as early as 1988.

The 0.1 gram of lead will permit pre-1971 cars that might require leaded fuel to remain on the road. EPA believes that only such engines, running under heavy load, really require lead to prevent valve damage.

Lead has long been known as a poison, causing mental deterioration, kidney damage and anemia in high concentrations. The acceptable level of lead concentrations in the blood has been lowered several times in recent years.

The EPA believes its action will mean 172,000 fewer children will have blood lead concentrations above the new definition of lead poisoning adopted late last year by the Centers for Disease Control. The Centers for Disease Control lowered that definition from a concentration of 30 micrograms per tenth of a liter of blood to 25 micrograms.

Children below the age of about 8 are far more vulnerable than adults. Most of their blood lead concentrations comes from chewing on flakes of lead-based paint. But EPA believes that in cities, lead in the air from auto exhaust makes a sizeable contribution.

EPA estimated last year that the IQ scores of 42,000 children under age 7 would rise an average of 2.2 points under its 0.1-gram option. That estimate assumed there would be no gain if blood concentrations of lead were above 30 micrograms.

The EPA believes its action also will mean net economic benefits to the economy of nearly $900 million a year in the form of reduced medical costs and lower maintenance costs for engines now fueled unnecessarily with leaded gasoline.

The Reagan administration took office calling for a relaxation of lead rules, but then-EPA administrator Anne Burford reversed course to halve the permissible concentration.

Lead poses another problem for EPA — destruction of the effectiveness of the catalytic converters on all cars to reduce exhaust pollution. A survey of 1983 drivers showed that 16 percent of cars supposed to use lead-free fuel had been fueled with leaded gasoline. Many motorists apparently buy leaded gasoline because it is several cents cheaper.

Lead compounds are far and away the cheapest way to raise octane ratings to prevent engine knock. EPA, however, estimates the cost of making gasoline will increase by less than 1 percent.

Representative encourages airline buyout offer

DENVER (AP) — Rep. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., has urged the largest shareholder of Frontier Airlines to give "very serious consideration" to a $192 million buyout offer made by airline employees and four investment firms.

Wirth sent a telegram Sunday to M. Gerald O'Neill, chairman of GenCorp of Akron, Ohio, which owns 45 percent of Frontier's parent firm and has wanted to sell its stake for more than a year.

The offer "serves the interests of the shareholders, Frontier's employees and the Denver community," the telegram said. "As you well know, the loss of over 4,000 jobs would be a serious blow to the Denver metropolitan area's economy. In addition, the loss of Frontier's service would have a severe impact in a number of other Western states."

The buyout offer was to be presented during a meeting in Denver today to O'Neill and other board members of Frontier Holdings Inc., the airline's parent company.

Frontier's five-union employee coalition and the investors announced the offer Saturday. It would divide ownership equally between the employees and the investment group, and it would keep Frontier in Denver.

The announcement came just one day after Frontier Holdings reported it lost $21.1 million during the last quarter of 1984 and had a net loss of $31.1 million for the year.

The investment group consists of Frates Enterprises of Tulsa, Okla., the Denver-based Associated Inns and Restaurants Co. of America; Asset Management Inc. of New York City; and JDM Holdings Inc. of Chicago.

Jack Sherman, new owner of Frank See Chevrolet, stands near cars at his dealership at 4100 W. Wall.

Car dealership changes owners

Frank See Chevrolet, 4100 W. Wall, has changed ownership and is now named Jack Sherman Chevrolet, said Sherman.

A native of Dallas, Sherman is co-owner of the Chevrolet dealership with Lou Grubb of Phoenix.

Sherman has been associated with Chevrolet for 31 years. He has served in management positions in Dallas, Oklahoma City, Detroit and Houston. Most recently, he has worked in San Diego. Sherman said he has a great deal of confidence in the economy and the growth of Midland. He plans to sell 2,400 new cars and trucks in 1985.
