U.S., Israel accused in Red Sea mining

Associated Press

Iran today accused the United States and Israel of orchestrating a mine-laying campaign in the Red Sea as part of a "new conspiracy" designed to discredit the Tehran government.

The statement by Iran's Foreign Ministry appeared to contradict a government radio report Tuesday that the extremist, anti-Western Islamic Jihad (Islamic Holy War) organization was responsible for the explosions. Tehran radio applauded the apparent minings and said they were directed against the "arrogant" United States, Britain and France.

Today, the Foreign Ministry said was quoted in a dispatch by the official Islamic Republic News Agency as saying that international organizations should "expose the agents behind these moves, so that security would return to the international waterway."

The statement said the recent explosions in the Red Sea and their "indirect attribution to Iran" were a reflection of the "U.S. and Israeli defeat" in Lebanon.

"Therefore, it was clear that in order to retaliate for their defeats and failure of their political and military schemes in the Persian Gulf, they would resort to such a move," the statement said.

At least 13 vessels have been damaged by explosions in the Red Sea in the past month — five in the Gulf of Suez, the northern end of the 1,450-mile-long sea, and the rest near the North Yemeni coast at the southern tip of the waterway.

At the request of Egypt, which owns the Suez Canal and encloses the Gulf of Suez, a U.S. squadron of minesweeping helicopters and a support ship will arrive in the Red Sea area within a week.

Egyptian and Western diplomatic sources in Cairo said Iran's praise of the explosions approached an admission of complicity. Last week, an anonymous caller claiming to represent Islamic Jihad told London news agencies that 190 mines had been planted in the Red Sea.

However, Prime Minister Hussein Musavi, in a statement quoted Tuesday by the official news agency, said "Iran has not been involved in this issue in any way."

IRNA, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, quoted Musavi as saying at a Tehran news conference that Islamic Jihad's "nature is unknown to the Iranian government."

IRNA also reported that Musavi also said two Iranian ships had been stopped and searched in the Suez Canal.

"The Islamic Republic could not sit and watch its ships halted in the Suez Canal while others sail freely. We warn that we cannot remain silent if these actions continue," he was quoted as saying.

He did not elaborate, but Egypt has said it is stopping ships from two nations. They are believed by diplomatic sources to be Iran and Libya, both with hard-line, anti-Western Islamic regimes.

In Moscow, the official Soviet media carried reports from the Middle East today suggesting that the United States was responsible for mining the Red Sea. The official news agency Tass and the Communist Party Central Committee newspaper Pravda quoted "unnamed observers" and a report published in a United Arab Emirates newspaper.

Tass quoted unnamed "observers" as saying, "As in the case with the Persian Gulf, the United States and its NATO partners will try to exploit the situation in the Red Sea to build up their military presence there."

Anonymous callers claiming to represent Islamic Jihad also have claimed responsibility for the kidnappings of three Americans in Beirut and the suicide bombings of French and the U.S. military headquarters in Lebanon last October.

British investigate spill cause

Associated Press

LAKE CHARLES, La. — With the mop-up of a massive oil spill along the Texas coast still under way, officials turned their attention today to finding what caused a British oil tanker to rupture, spilling some 1.8 million gallons of crude in to the Gulf of Mexico.

Capt. N.J. Bartlett of the British Department of Transportation will head the investigation, to include testimony from the tanker's radio operator, chief engineer, pilot and other ship personnel, Coast Guard spokesman Jim Kosch said Tuesday.

The British transportation official was expected to arrive in Lake Charles, La., to head the probe today into the incident that blackened Galveston Island's beaches last weekend.

Kosch said Coast Guard and National Transportation Safety Board representatives also would attend the meeting to investigate the July 30 incident in which the Alvenus, a British oil tanker split across the bow off the coast of Lake Charles.

The investigation was set up to determine whether anything unusual happened during the ship's voyage from Venezuela, Kosch said.

An official with the NTSB in Washington, Luigi Colucciello, said Tuesday the NTSB asked to be included in the investigation even though the accident took place in international waters.

"We do lack jurisdiction, but our best fallback is to assist the British the best way we can," said Colucciello, who heads the board's marine safety division.

Meanwhile, crews Tuesday were still trying to clean up the 2,500 tons to 3,500 tons of oily sludge, and one official said it could take as long as four weeks to clean up the mess.

An additional 1,000 tons to 1,500 tons are still in the surf zone off the seawall, said Coast Guard spokesman Gary Stark.

Part of city blacked out by storm

Most of southwest Midland was blacked out for a hour during Tuesday night's electrical storm after a Texas Electric Service Co. substation was severely damaged by lightning.

The blackout, which lasted from 10:21 p.m. to 11:25 p.m., affected 2,500 TESCO customers, according to the electric company's Gerald Gotcher.

Midland Memorial Hospital was within the affected area, "But we didn't encounter any major difficulties," said hospital spokesperson Katrina Neagle. "The emergency power system went right into action."

The storm dumped 1.25 inches of water on the city, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Normal rainfall for the entire month of August is usually only 1.60 inches. There's a 60 percent of more thunderstorms tonight, said a Weather Service spokesman.

Mondale challenges Reagan's 'mirrors'

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

ASHEVILLE, N.C. — Walter F. Mondale, on his second Southern tour in as many weeks, is accusing President Reagan of using "blue smoke and mirrors" to obscure high budget deficits — and the need for higher taxes to reduce them.

The Democratic presidential nominee challenged Reagan on Tuesday "to tell the truth to the American people now about the future" and the post-election tax increase Mondale contends the president is planning.

He also chided Reagan for the public differences his no-tax-increase statements have gotten him into with Vice President George Bush, who has said more tax revenues may be needed.

"I've challenged Mr. Reagan to six debates; today I'd like to add a seventh," Mondale told a friendly union audience in Philadelphia before flying here. "I'd like to see a debate between Ronald Reagan and George Bush.

"I'll promise to pay for the microphone, and let's see who's telling the truth about taxes."

Mondale, who has insisted since his nomination last month that new taxes will be needed in the next administration no matter who is president, was expected to keep up that theme today in stops in the two Carolinas.

He was appearing today at a farmers' market in this city set amidst North Carolina's Smoky Mountains. Mondale press secretary Maxine Isaacs said he would talk about farm policy, and he was certain to mention the impact federal deficits have on the small farmer.

Before flying here, Mondale was in Philadelphia speaking to the national convention of the Communications Workers of America, whose 4,000 delegates greeted Mondale warmly and waved small American flags.

Maintaining that higher taxes will be needed to stem "appalling and shameful" deficits, Mondale said Reagan's insistence that he has no plan to raise taxes after the election amounts to a "blue smoke and mirrors" cover.

Iran Air jetliner hijacked to Rome; More than 125 hostages freed

ROME — At least two sky pirates armed with a pistol and a grenade hijacked an Iran Air jetliner carrying 284 passengers bound for Saudi Arabia and freed 129 of their captives, including 44 children, today at a Rome airport, Italian authorities said.

An Italian airport official, who would not identify himself by name, said all the freed passengers, released in three groups starting at 2 p.m. (8 a.m. EDT), appeared in good health. He quoted the passengers as saying there were two hijackers.

"They are fine, they are only hungry," the airport official said of the released passengers, who were taken to the airport infirmary. He said among the 44 children were several infants, and airport workers were seen carrying four packs of disposable diapers to the infirmary.

Rome's Ciampino Airport, used mainly for charter and military flights, was closed and surrounded by security forces shortly after the blue and white plane touched down at 12:40 p.m. (6 a.m. EDT), stranding hundreds of tourists, including about 400 Americans. No one was allowed near the hijacked plane, which was parked at the end of a runway.

The Italian news agency ANSA said the hijackers identified themselves as opponents of Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Italian authorities said the hijackers had not identified themselves, and had only asked for food, medicine and fuel.

An Italian police official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there were 284 passengers on the plane before the hijackers released the first group of captives. The official Iranian news agency had said there were 304 people aboard when the flight was hijacked over Iran on a flight from Tehran on Tuesday night.

Although passengers told police they saw only two hijackers, police sources said more sky pirates might be aboard the plane. Initial reports put the number of hijackers at 18.

Iran's official news agency said the passengers of the French-made Airbus included 280 Moslem pilgrims when it left Tehran for Jidda. The pilgrims were en route to the Moslem holy cities of Mecca and Medina.

The plane's pilot, during a two-hour refueling stop this morning in Cairo, told Egyptian authorities there were 18 hijackers and that they had wired explosives around his body.

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency reported the hijackers' intended destination was Paris, but the French Foreign Ministry spokesman announced France did not want to receive the plane.

Sales tax rebates down from last year

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Sales tax rebates for August dropped in Midland and Odessa from the previous year. But sales totals for the first six months of the year still are above those of 1983, indicating a continued recovery, according to Midland's finarce director.

Troy Gifford said Midland's check for $911,189.04 fell short of last year's $977,000.39 and below his estimated $950,000 to $1 million. "I don't know why," he said. "But an average of last month's check with this month is a little ahead of what I had anticipated."

Total for the year to date — which reflects sales for the first six months of 1984 — is $5,398,465.56, which is 10.79 percent above last year's $4,872,615.21.

Odessa's check was written out for $828,686.76, which falls below last August's rebate of $881,004.14. However, as in Midland, the year's total is higher. The $5,029,796.35 is 2.12 percent above 1983's $4,925,577.01.

The August checks reflect sales made in June and collected in July. In the past year, the collection system was changed. Instead of several businesses sending in the tax once every three months, they now report it each month.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock, whose office collects the sales tax each month and prepares the reports, said the year-to-date comparisons can be made accurately, despite the bookkeeping changes. And most August payments were smaller than last year because of those bookkeeping changes.

This increase in 1984 total payments, he said, "is honest growth over last year because both this August payment and last August's are based on all sales reported during the first half of both years."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Showers are forecast through Thurdsay for Texas and the Southwest and from the Midwest to the lower Great Lakes and Pennsylvania, according to the National Weather Service. Sunny, warm weather is expected for the remainder of the nation.

STORM

Several accidents resulted from the storm, according to police, but no injuries were reported. The most notable accident involved an 18-wheel truck which jackknifed on Highway 80 near Midland Drive. The driver was unhurt, and the truck was quickly cleared from the road, police said.

Lightning also knocked out 15 smaller transformers scattered throughout the city. Most had been replaced by this morning, said Gotcher.

"We have had 20 or so employees out working all night long, and we'll continue to work until all the power is restored," he said.

Lightning also left the police station without the services of its new computer system.

"We don't know if the building was hit by lightning or a power surge caused by lightning," said Lt. Hank Norton. "It didn't do any damage" because the system shut itself off.

Although the storm's ill effects were felt all over Midland, its potentially beneficial effects for farmers east of the city were less in evidence.

"We got just a smidgen," said Leona Hall of the Midland Farmers Cooperative. "Maybe our time will be next."

STATE

A weak cold front stretching across the southern plains of West Texas and Trans Pecos region triggered rain over western sections of the state today, and scattered thunderstorms, some heavy, were expected to develop later.

The National Weather Service posted a flash flood watch today for western parts of the South Plains and the Trans Pecos as scattered showers and thunderstorms built over the area.

Thunderstorms had also developed over the northeast corner of the state as well as along the upper Gulf coast.

Islamic Jihad is believed to be a pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremist group. Shiism is the dominant Moslem sect in Farsi-speaking Iran, but a minority in most Arabic-speaking nations.

Diplomatic sources have speculated that more than one group may be using the name Islamic Jihad as a cover.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes did not blame Iran for the Red Sea explosions, but said of the Tehran radio report: "Praise for random acts of terrorism is outside the norms of civilized behavior."

The Reagan administration says it doesn't know how many mines there are or who placed them. "There's no way of knowing until after we look at what's in the water," an administration official said Tuesday night in Washington.

Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch said the roughly 200 U.S. military personnel were under orders to find and destroy mines, but not to prevent placement of new explosive devices.

The U.S. administration official said several European countries probably would help the United States clear the explosives. He said that since the mining appeared farflung, "Egypt did not want to be in the position of being responsible for the whole sea, north and south."

In Peking, China's official Xinhua news agency said Wednesday that two Chinese ships had struck mines in the Red Sea and one was seriously damaged.

South Texas town shaken

PLEASANTON, Texas (AP) — Residents of this South Texas city say a tremor briefly rattled dishes and furniture, but no serious damage or injuries were reported.

The tremor, reported at 8:31 p.m. Tuesday, alarmed some residents who telephoned police. The disturbance was similar to another incident March 16.

"I got three calls from three separate people about it," said David Pena, police dispatcher. "They asked me if we had an earthquake.

"I was in here and felt the chair move, and I didn't know what it was," he said. "But they started calling me and that's when we found out it was a small tremor."

He said the tremor only lasted "a second or two."

Pena said a Jourdanton police dispatcher told him she also received several calls about the tremor.

Officials at the National Earthquake Center in Colorado said the tremor was not strong enough to trigger an alarm on their seismographic equipment.

The Bureau of Economic Geology at the University of Texas at Austin has reported that a network of coastal faults underlies parts of South Texas.

Gifford is expecting the fiscal year to end Sept. 30 on an upward beat with the year's total to hit $7.684 million. This would be about $350,000 above 1983's $7.34 million. And for fiscal year 1985, the City Council is expecting to receive between $8.4-8.7 million.

Mayor G. Thane Akins said if the economic recovery continues in the next six to eight months and the city tax base expands, "it could make next year's budget a little ahead of last year's."

For 1983-84 and 1984-85, the city is dipping into its $9 million surplus to make up a shortfall that occurred when the sales tax revenues began dropping about two years ago.

U.S. begins minesweeping unsure of source, number in Red Sea

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, even while sending helicopters to look for mines in the Red Sea, is not sure how many there are or who put them there.

"There's no way of knowing until after we look at what's in the water," an administration official said late Tuesday.

He said a number of European countries probably would participate with the United States in helping Egypt clear the waterway of explosives.

At least 14 vessels have been damaged in the Red Sea in the past month. Tehran radio in Iran said the mines had been placed by the Islamic Jihad (holy war) organization and were aimed at the United States, Britain and France.

But the official, who discussed the situation on the condition he not be identified, said "the general consensus here in town is that we won't know for some time yet."

First, he said, the mines have to be examined for identifying features. "Even then, you might not know," the official said. "It's going to be very difficult to determine who put that stuff there."

Initially, the mines were thought to be remnants of the 1973 Mideast war, deposited by Egypt or Israel. But the frequent explosions appeared to rule out the possibility that the mines lurked in the Red Sea for nearly 12 years without a ship tripping over any of them.

The Pentagon on Tuesday airlifted the first two of four special Navy helicopters from Norfolk, Va., to search for mines. Spokesman Michael Burch said, however, the United States would not try to prevent the sowing of new ones.

"That's not part of our deployment," he said.

The RH-53D Sea Stallion helicopters are powered by twin turbines and equipped with gear that they tow in the water to detect mines by sonar and destroy them. The operation is expected to begin next week.

Operating from a Navy amphibious ship, the helicopters will be looking for mines that are set off by the sound of a vessel's engine, magnetically or by the pressure exerted in the water by the hulls of ships.

Egypt has also requested assistance from Britain and France.

The U.S. official, while declining to name any countries, said "we are getting some positive signals. What we want to know, specifically, is what they can do."

He said it was impossible to know how many mines are in the Red Sea, but since the problem was a big one "Egypt did not want to be in the position of being responsible for the whole sea, north and south."

The official said key members of Congress were consulted before the administration decided to dispatch the helicopters and no objections were raised.

In Santa Barbara, Calif, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes also declined to point a finger of blame, but he noted that Iran has spoken approvingly of the mining.

MARBLE FALLS, Texas — David, Houston's fabled Bubble Boy, "grew up knowing he was special because he was a member of a family and not because he lived in a bubble," his mother said in her first public comments since the 12-year-old boy died in February.

David's mother, who was introduced only as Carol, made her comments in brief remarks Tuesday before the summer meeting of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association.

David died Feb. 22. He suffered from severe combined immune deficiency syndrome, meaning his body was unable to produce antibodies to fight germs.

He lived all but the final 15 days of his life in a sterile plastic bubble, leaving only after doctors needed to treat him for complications following a bone marrow transplant from an older sister in October. Doctors had hoped the transplant would prompt his own body to produce the life-saving antibodies, allowing him to lead a normal life.

The boy's mother said her appearance Tuesday before the group of publishers primarily was to thank the press for allowing "our family our privacy and our time to grieve."

"There was virtually no intrusion and David's death was with much dignity," she said.

The family, which lives north of Houston in Shenandoah, released a similar statement following David's death.

The woman's participation at a session on press ethics and credibility was not announced until she came to the podium to speak.

David's death initially was attributed to heart failure although final autopsy results have not yet been released, spokeswoman Claire Bassett at Texas Children's Hospital said Tuesday.

When word of his plight was disclosed early in his life, David's parents indicated a desire for privacy. Pictures of his activities were released by his hospital or by Baylor College of Medicine only intermittently, usually on his birthday, and information about him was limited.

"There was virtually no intrusion (from the press) and David's death was with much dignity," his mother said.

"I cannot thank the media enough throughout David's life." She said there were "one or two exceptions, that really didn't matter.

"We made no great effort to hide ourselves. We had no tarp thrown over our home."

She said the family was aware some reporters knew of their identity but "we never had to turn anyone away from our home."

The woman, who said afterwards that she felt uncomfortable making the brief address, received a standing ovation.

"I guess, in effect, you were part of David's success," she said.

Family, friends, physicians "and you, who took an active role in protecting David," allowed him to "grow and mature into a loving boy," she said.

She said David was about 9 when he became aware that he had some notoriety.

Speakes won't elaborate on statement

By MAUREEN SANTINI
AP White House Correspondent

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Reagan's chief spokesman is refusing to spell out exactly what the president meant when he said he wouldn't tolerate plans for a post-election tax increase.

"He said what he meant and he meant what he said," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes declared Tuesday.

Speakes was referring to Reagan's statement Monday that "we have no plans for, nor will I allow plans for a tax increase."

His comment was made at his ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains as he posed for pictures with Vice President George Bush. It followed a pledge Saturday to veto any increase in income taxes.

But a couple hours after Reagan spoke, Bush told reporters that the president was keeping his options open.

The vice president had previously said that revenue increases — the same thing as tax increases — may be necessary next year.

At his daily press briefing, Speakes was repeatedly asked exactly how unequivocal Reagan had intended to be and why Bush was publicly disagreeing with his boss.

On the president's remarks, Speakes would only say: "He was very specific yesterday. You heard what he said. You have his words before you."

When questions persisted, the spokesman said: "He's the great communicator and you are the great interpreter and you can each play your role."

Asked whether the White House was happy with Bush's remarks, Speakes responded: "I have no word of expression. The president is always very pleased with his vice president. I am sure he is this morning."

Asked about the different positions of the men, Speakes said, "I don't think it's much different."

Bush interrupted a five-state campaign swing Monday to plot political strategy with Reagan at his vacation hideaway. When Bush was asked afterward if there would not be a need for a tax hike next year, he said, "... We have to wait and see what the conditions are at the time. I'm not saying yes and I'm not saying no."

He also was asked whether Reagan meant to rule out plans to raise taxes, while not ruling out the possibility of signing such a bill if it reached his desk.

"I don't know," he said. "I don't know how you'd read it. I'd ask him for clarification the next time he talks."

Meanwhile, the GOP campaign team Tuesday made its clearest commitment so far to a debate between Bush and his Democratic counterpart, Rep. Geraldine Ferraro.

"If there's going to be a debate between the president and Mr. Mondale, there's going to be a debate between the vice president and Mrs. Ferraro," Peter Teeley, Bush's press secretary, said in Denver during a campaign stopover.

"The vice president will be the one to make that decision. That decision will come after we're nominated. We've still got to go to our nominating convention" in Dallas later this month.

Reagan already has agreed in principle to debate Mondale, although the number of encounters has not been decided. Mondale has asked for six, while Reagan has suggested two.

MONDALE

"His present case is this: 'I won't cut the defense budget. I won't raise taxes. I won't hurt their safety net, and I'll have a balanced budget,'" Mondale said.

Then, in a reference to projections for annual deficits of more than $200 billion in coming years, Mondale said: "$289 billion, poof, just disappeared."

"Now that's exactly what they did to us in 1981. 'We're going to cut taxes, raise defense spending and have a balanced budget by 1983.' It never did make any sense," he said.

Reviving a term Bush invoked against Reagan in the GOP primaries four years ago, Mondale added: "It was voodoo economics, and we had the greatest recession in American history."

"These deficits must be cut down and that means two things," Mondale said. "It means the budget must be squeezed and taxes must be raised ... We have a right to know Mr. Reagan's tax plan. It's not a question taxes will go up. They will. The question is who will pay them."

Mondale began his trip Monday in Toledo, Ohio, where he said estimates of the federal dificit due Thursday from Reagan's Office of Management and Budget will reflect election-year politics, not reality.

"You've heard of 'cooked books.' This is going to be a cooked budget."

And he later questioned whether the Reagan deficit projections will be "a honest solid reflection of the facts that we face or if it is what you might call a Pinocchio projection of the future." The storybook character Pinocchio's nose got longer every time he told a lie.

Mondale is visiting three Southern states this week, stopping tonight in Columbia, S.C., for a meeting with Gov. Richard Riley.

Photographs indicate Soviet carrier may be ready by 1988

LONDON (AP) — Satellite photographs indicate construction work has been speeded up on the Soviet navy's first nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, which may be ready for sea trials by 1988, Jane's Defense Weekly reports.

The three photos, published by Jane's on Tuesday, show the 75,000-ton carrier being constructed in two halves at a Black Sea shipyard.

Western defense specialists say the carrier, which they believe will be called The Kremlin, is the first of up to eight Soviet carriers equal in size to the USS Enterprise, the largest American carrier.

The Soviet carriers will be "potentially formidable adversaries for the U.S. Navy's carrier battle groups," the weekly said.

Work began in January 1983 on the nuclear-powered carrier, which NATO code-named Black Com-2.

Jane's quoted intelligence sources as estimating the carrier will be ready for sea trials in early 1988, and operational by 1994.

WORLD

The weekly said that "clearly the carrier has been accorded priority by the commander-in-chief of the Soviet navy, Admiral of the Fleet Sergei Gorshkov."

Jane's spokesman Richard Coltart declined to say where the satellite photos were obtained.

Jane's editors are known to have an extensive network of sources in both the East and West. The weekly is produced by the Jane's Publishing Co., which issues military yearbooks considered authoritative by defense circles.

Capt. John Moore, editor of Jane's Fighting Ships, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview, "The carriers will add significantly to Soviet naval power."

The photographs show the carrier's hull in two parts — a 866-foot bow section with half of a flight deck and a 239-foot stern section with the other half of the flight deck.

Analysts believe the stern section will be mated to the bow section by September 1985.

One of the photos indicates the carrier, lying below two giant overhead cranes, will likely be armed with vertical silo-launched surface-to-air missiles forward of the ship's superstructure, Jane's said.

U.S. pushes theory of free market at population meeting

MEXICO CITY (AP) — U.S. delegates at a U.N. conference on population problems are trying to win support for the Reagan administration's controversial theory that free-market economies help lower birth rates.

Several delegates from other countries objected Tuesday to the U.S. representatives' proposal to include the theory among 85 recommendations for action by the conference.

James Buckley, head of the U.S. delegation, was scheduled to deliver a speech today, an opportunity to spell out the Reagan administration's position to the U.N. International Conference on Population. About 3,000 people from some 140 countries are at the week-long conference, which began Monday.

Buckley, a former U.S. senator from New York, defended the proposal, saying there was "total linkage" between economic problems and population. He said economics was "at least half the guts of what's being discussed at this conference."

The administration's policy, prepared for the conference and disclosed in July in Washington, advocates stopping U.S. aid to private family planning organizations that "promote" abortion, even if they use their own funds.

The policy says too much government intervention stifles economic growth and notes that birth rates have declined in industrialized nations.

Buckley spoke with reporters outside a conference hall at the Mexican Foreign Ministry, site of the meeting.

The proposed change in the introduction to a section on socio-economic development and population said a free-market economy leads to "significant economic growth."

"This testifies to the importance of fostering the conditions in which the human entrepreneurial and commercial spirit can flourish freely without unreasonable government restraint," it said.

"Energizing such a free economic environment typically has the indirect, often rapid effect of lowering fertility as well as improving the conditions of life," it argued.

"It's certainly an ideological addition and I think it would be preferable that no ideological addition would be made" to the recommendation draft, Petter Bjerve, a Norwegian delegate, said.

He said one reason industrialized countries, including the United States and the Scandinavian countries, initially hesitated about holding this conference was that ideological arguments dominated the last conference, 10 years ago in Bucharest, Romania.

In 1974, delegates from developing nations pressed their call for a world economic order that would redistribute wealth, saying population growth then would take care of itself.

"We have the U.S. statement today on this and the Russian proposal on disarmament," said the Norwegian delegate. "I think our delegation would like to stay out of this discussion."

Alexei Nevzorov, head of the Soviet delegation, delivered a lecture on the disarmament issue and an attack on imperialism to the conference on Tuesday.

Outlook unclear for Salvadoran aid bill in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is expressing optimism but a Republican senator says the outlook is unclear as the GOP-controlled Senate takes up a bill nearly doubling military aid for El Salvador in the current fiscal year.

"It looks good," William Schneider, undersecretary of state for security assistance, said Tuesday a few hours before the Senate began debate on a supplemental spending bill providing $117 million in Salvadoran aid. Congress has already appropriated $124 million for the fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30.

Sen. Rudy Boschwitz of Minnesota, a Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, supports the administration request. But he said it was not clear whether it would be approved as part of the $6.9 billion bill providing for worldwide and domestic spending.

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye of Hawaii, the senior Democrat on the subcommittee that screens foreign aid appropriations, has said he will offer an amendment to eliminate the Salvadoran military assistance. "I think we can handle it," said Schneider.

In debate on the bill Tuesday, the Senate considered only minor amendments. Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Appropriations Committee, said he would keep the senators in session until late tonight or early Thursday if necessary to complete action on the measure.

The Democrat-controlled House refused to grant any additional Salvadoran military aid, so Senate passage would send the issue to a conference committee, with leaders pressing for a settlement before Congress recesses later this week for the Republican National Convention.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said he would vote against the bill, which he noted is $1.5 billion more than the amount approved by the House.

Boschwitz and four Democratic members of the Foreign Relations Committee met privately Tuesday with Schneider; Thomas Pickering, U.S. ambassador to El Salvador; and Lt. Gen. Philip C. Gast, director of the Defense Security Assistance Agency.

Schneider said administration spokesmen told the senators that the funds are needed to carry out U.S. objectives in Central America.

Pickering confirmed that the supplemental appropriations bill was discussed at the meeting, but declined to elaborate.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., said he asked the administration representatives "whether or not we are going to find indirectly that Americans are involved" in El Salvador's struggle against a Marxist-led revolution.

"If reconnaissance flights are conducted, that's one thing," Biden said. "But if they are conducted in conjunction with an offensive action, that brings back shades of the bad old days of Vietnam."

Article says U.S. knew KAL jet would enter Soviet airspace

NEW YORK (AP) — An article in The Nation magazine says that either the U.S. government knew in advance that a Korean airliner shot down by the Soviet Union last year would intrude into Soviet territory, or a vast U.S.-Japan intelligence network suffered a "mind-boggling breakdown."

"At a minimum...the president and his administration misled the press and the world concerning what they knew...and when they knew it," David E. Pearson, a graduate student at Yale University, wrote in the Aug. 18 issue of The Nation.

Korean Air Lines flight 007 entered Soviet airspace while on a flight from Anchorage, Alaska, to Seoul, South Korea, on Sept. 1, 1983. It was shot down by a Soviet jet fighter, killing all 269 people aboard.

Pearson, a doctoral candidate in sociology who is specializing in defense issues, does not believe that the plane itself was spying, as the Soviets have charged, but rather that it strayed into Soviet airspace so Western intelligence could monitor the Soviet Air Defense Command's response to the intrusion.

Pearson said there should be a congressional inquiry to determine whether there was a cover-up by U.S. officials.

"We've addressed these sorts of allegations before and we've described them as absurd," Air Force Col. Robert O'Brien, a Pentagon spokesman, said Tuesday in response to the article. "They are absurd."

Pearson, who became involved in the study while doing his doctoral dissertation at Yale on the U.S. World Wide Military Command and Control System, said a large number of radar and satellite tracking systems could have warned the airliner it was dangerously off course.

If U.S. forces did not know the plane was in danger in time to correct its course, Pearson said, "it would mean that the most serious failure in the history of the U.S. early warning and communications, command, control and intelligence systems in history occurred that night."

A similar theory was put forth in a pseudonymous article in the British magazine, Defense Attache, which said KAL 007 entered Soviet airspace so that Western intelligence could monitor Soviet radar and electronic signals.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said in June that the British magazine had "apparently...picked up lock, stock and barrel the total set of lies that the Soviet Union published after the Korean jetliner was shot down."

Weinberger said then that the plane was on "absolutely nothing remotely resembling any kind of (intelligence) mission."

Likud leaders set conditions for coalition

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and other Likud bloc leaders agreed in a four-hour private meeting today that under certain conditions they would join a Labor-led government, a Likud parliament member said.

The formation of a coalition government, under consideration since the inconclusive general election on July 23, hinges on what concessions Labor would make in return for Likud's support, Knesset member Ehud Olmert told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from Jerusalem.

He declined to be specific about what concessions would be required, saying only: "We will have to split the major positions between the two parties."

But he added: "We are ready to participate in the national unity government. We have set no preconditions including the possibility of (Labor leader Shimon) Peres becoming prime minister."

Peres was named Sunday by President Chaim Herzog as prime minister-designate, giving him the right to try to form a government.

"Not that we are particularly anxious to have him (Peres) as prime minister, but we are ready to accept it," Olmert said. "I just came back from a consultation, and I heard no other view."

Transportation Minister Haim Corfu, who also attended the Likud meeting, said on Israel radio: "We will sit with Labor and do everything to form a national unity government. But if it doesn't work out, then Shamir will have to try his hand."

Two Israeli newspapers and Israel radio quoted unidentified Likud sources as saying the party was trying to draw out negotiations with Peres as long as possible so that the Labor chief would be unable to form a government within the 21 days alloted to him. Herzog could then turn to Shamir.

The daily Yediot Ahronot newspaper reported that the Likud bloc was split about whether it should join a Peres-led government. The newspaper said Shamir, the caretaker prime minister, and Defense Minister Moshe Arens appeared willing to join such a bipartisan government, while Deputy Prime Minister David Levy was opposed.

But Olmert denied that, as did a source close to Levy who was quoted by Yediot. The source quoted by the newspaper said Levy was "coordinating all his moves with the prime minister and believes that a national unity government should be formed and headed by Shamir."

Nevertheless, the issue of who will head a joint government is expected to be the main obstacle in the Likud-Labor talks which resume Thursday.

"All issues will be discussed in the talks — defense, foreign policy, economy and the make-up of the government," said Shamir's spokesman Yossi Ahimeir.

The election left Labor with 44 seats in the 120-member Knesset, or parliament. Likud got 41 seats, while the remaining 35 seats went to 13 small parties.

Edsel image changing, owners say

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — The cars were "so ugly they were beautiful" and are the brunt of jokes two decades after they went out of production, but some people still love the Edsel.

And although members of the International Edsel Club expect to hear a lot of jokes at their three-day convention here this week, they say they will have the last laugh.

"We like showing our cars off," said rally chairman David Shahan, who was born in 1958, the first of only three Edsel model years. "They've been a joke for so long. People have stopped laughing now and appreciate it as one of the most notable cars of the 1950s."

"I've always liked something unusual, and you can't get more unusual than the Edsel," said club member Charles Wells. "I appreciate a good joke, whether it's on me or someone else. You still hear jokes."

But Shahan says the tarnished image of the Edsel, made by Ford, is starting to change.

"They were reliable cars. They got a bad reputation which was sort of undeserved. Some of it was poor quality when they came out," he said.

The Edsel "is one car you can see a mile away," he added. "I think they're neat looking. They're the only 1958 car that didn't have fins.

"It's one car you look at that stands out," he said. "I've always said they were so ugly they were beautiful."

Shahan, of Greenville, bought his first Edsel when he was 14, but sold it. When he was a sophomore in high school, he bought another one, which now has only 54,000 miles on it and has taken third prize in a national show.

Wells, of Medina, has been a member of the Edsel club for 15 of its 16 years and has 15 Edsels, including a rare 1960 convertible.

Edsels are "becoming more scarce all the time. It's estimated there are only about 5,000 left in the country in good running condition," he said.

Part of the Edsels' appeal now are the relatively low prices they command. "We're a car club where anyone could find a car to get into," Shahan said.

Wells said an Edsel usable only for parts can cost as little as $100, with the rare 1960 convertible bringing $15,000 to $20,000. "There are approximately only 50 to 54 left in the country," he said.

Wells says he enjoys the car's humor and novelty. "Everyone (in the club) has a good sense of humor. You have to have. We love the jokes, we love the cartoons, the image of a born loser."

Wells and Shahan said the approximately 1,000-member club is a source of parts and cars, and information.

The convention begins today and runs through Saturday, and about 450 club members who have paid their $8 dues are expected, with about 125 cars on display.

The convention will include videotapes of the Bing Crosby Edsel Show and technical sessions on how to repair Edsels, Shahan said.

"We want to show people that the car is a nice car. We don't mind the jokes.

Two Germanys fight to improve relations despite Soviet criticism

An Analysis

By SUSAN J. SMITH

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Despite Soviet criticism, East and West Germany are struggling to improve relations. The question is whether the Soviet Union will allow East Germany to maintain the momentum.

In the past two weeks, both East and West Germany have publicly defended their rapprochement, and a nervous Soviet Union has repeatedly denounced the idea.

Now, West German officials and diplomats are wondering whether the Soviet Union will act to stop the inter-German flirtation — and perhaps order President Erich Honecker of Communist East Germany to cancel his planned visit to West Germany in September.

Some of the West German media have speculated that Moscow might "cancel" the Honecker government as well.

The Bild Zeitung newspaper last week headlined a story: "Will Honecker fall before his visit to us?"

"In Moscow, a fight is raging over Honecker's policy of rapprochement with Bonn. The hardliners in the Kremlin want to stop his visit and are considering bumping him off (from his job)," the Bild Zeitung story said, quoting West German "Kremlin experts."

West Germany's media recall how Honecker's predecessor, Walter Ulbricht, fell from power in 1971 after crossing the Soviets.

Ulbricht, who died in 1973, called Marxist-Leninist orthodoxy into question by saying socialism wasn't just a transitional phase from capitalism to Communism but a legitimate system its own right.

His government, at the end of the 1960s, also suggested to other Communist nations that East Germany could set an example for industrial countries who wanted to turn to socialism, thus competing with the Soviet economic model.

Bonn officials and diplomats doubt Honecker will go the way of Ulbricht, although they stress he is gambling by standing up to the Soviets on an important foreign policy matter.

"Honecker can only do this (improve relations with West Germany) if he has a solid majority in the (East German) Politburo for it," one West German official told The Associated Press. "If he were weak, he would not have tried it. Therefore, I don't think he is endangered.

"He must also have some indications of the power lineup in the Soviet Union, and believes it to be to his advantage," said the official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

"Honecker is taking a risk," said one Western diplomat, "and there's no doubt the Soviets could stop him. But they have to consider what the costs would be.

"The real outcome of this is that the two German states have identified common interests and continued to work for them, despite the Soviets," said the diplomat, who also spoke on condition of anonymity.

The warming relations between Bonn and East Berlin have been highlighted by a flurry of talks on cultural, environmental and scientific pacts and by two Western bank loans to East Germany within 13 months. The West German government has guaranteed both loans.

In response, East Germany has lifted some travel restrictions between the two German states, allowed more citizens to emigrate to the West and dismantled some of the automatic firing weapons along the East German border.

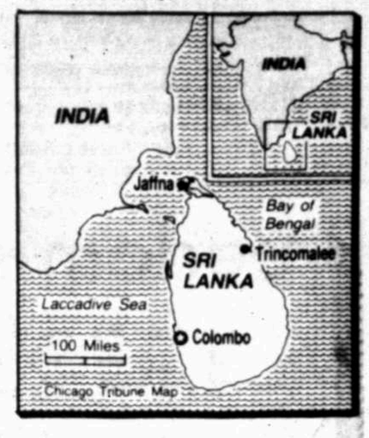
The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda charged last week that the Western loans are an example of "banking efforts to erode the socialist system."

Reflecting Kremlin unease, Pravda said West Germany has "revanchist" motives — that is, a desire to recover territory lost at the end of the World War II.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher hit back Monday at Soviet criticism, insisting that a "constructive relationship" between East and West Germany is in everyone's interest.

East Berlin defended its stance by writing in the official Communist Party organ Neues Deutschland last week that the goal of relations between the two Germanys is "safeguarding peace."

Sri Lankan army arrests scores of Tamil youths



COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Scores more Tamil youths were arrested in army sweeps through northern Sri Lanka today, the government said. It denied that the navy had shelled a coastal town in reprisal for a weekend guerrilla ambush.

Officials in Colombo, the capital, said at least 42 people, including seven navy and police personnel, had been killed in a new round of violence since last weekend in Northern province — home of the minority Tamil-speaking minority community in this island nation off India's southern tip.

Tamil rebels in Sri Lanka, formerly Ceylon, have been fighting for "Eelam," or an independent homeland. The Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, an insurgent group, has claimed that its men killed 20 military and police official in six separate attacks since last Saturday.

Army troops combing the countryside for Tamil separatists have arrested up to 600 suspects since the past weekend, officials said.

Sri Lankan security forces, meanwhile, opened fire and wounded five people today in Jaffna, the major city in Northern province, after Tamil militants raided a government bank and escaped with an iron safe-deposit box, the United News of India reported.

The news agency said the troops opened fired at the scene of the robbery "long after the militants had escaped in a van." Officials were not immediately available in Colombo for comment on the UNI report.

Authorities have imposed a virtual curfew across Northern province, ordering citizens to remain indoors during the continuing anti-terrorist military operations.

A Defense Ministry spokesman denied Indian news reports that as many as 110 people were killed Monday when the Sri Lankan navy shelled the coastal Tamil-populated town of Valvettiturai, 190 miles north of Colombo.

A senior government source earlier admitted a military "attack" on Valvettiturai, located on the northern tip of the island, but provided no casualty figures or other details.

UNI and the Times of India, a prestigious newspaper, reported Tuesday that many Valvettiturai houses were burned and hundreds of residents made homeless in the shelling. The Times said more than 100 civilians and 10 security men were slain in the attack.

But the Defense Ministry official said the town had only been cordoned off by the military in a search for Tamil extremists.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said violence was escalating in the Tamil-dominated north and threatening to engulf the entire country in civil strife.

UNI also reported that security forces fatally shot a Tamil restaurant owner and five of his employees in the town of Vavuniya in apparent reprisal for the terrorist slaying of the local police chief on Monday.

At least 400 Tamils were killed and property worth millions of dollars was destroyed in widespread ethnic rioting between Tamils and the Sinhalese majority in July 1983. According to news reports and witnesses, the Sri Lankan armed forces participated in the orgy of looting, arson and murder.

About 17 percent of Sri Lanka's 16 million population speaks Tamil. Unlike the majority Sinhalese Buddhist community, the Tamils are mostly Hindus and have strong cultural links with neighboring India.

The Colombo government has charged that Tamil rebels operating from India's southernmost state of Tamil Nadu have "declared war" on Sri Lanka. India claims it has only Tamil refugees, no terrorists.

An official source earlier reported that Israeli agents have started training Sri Lankan security men in Colombo in intelligence gathering and bomb disposal techniques.

President Junius R. Jayewardene said his government had asked Israel to help improve its intelligence-gathering operations because of increased terrorist attacks. He put the number of Israeli agents here as fewer than 10 and said they were not involved in combat training.

The rebels accuse the government of committing "military atrocities" against the Tamil minority and claim the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and Israelis are helping the government in such actions.

Cuban news media becoming more aggressive

HAVANA (AP) — While Fidel Castro appears increasingly defensive about outside criticism, his 25-year-old revolutionary government has told the state news media to become more aggressive in reporting problems inside Cuba.

In two recent speeches, Castro spent hours citng statistics showing improvements in Cuba since 1959 and claiming Cuba is much better off than its Latin neighbors.

"This is the reality. These are the figures. There is a series of so-called Cuba analysts who will deny them. They will cry, they will lie. They deny what we can see here for ourselves," the Cuban president said in a speech July 26 marking the 31st anniversary of the start of his revolution.

Meanwhile, the television, radio stations and newspapers have shown more frankness in airing complaints and problems.

Some Western diplomats here linked Castro's defense of his record and the increased local criticism to Radio Marti, a Reagan administration project that will beam programs to Cuba. The U.S.-based station will be largely staffed by anti-Castro Cuban exiles. The diplomats, speaking on condition that they would not be identified, said the Castro government wants to improve the news media to dissuade Cubans from listening to Radio Marti and to reduce any impact it might have.

Cuban officials, though, said Radio Marti wasn't a factor.

"We decided a long time ago that the news media have to become more interesting, more valuable. The spirit of criticism has become much stronger," said a member of the Communist Party Central Committee. He made the comment to a visiting correspondent on condition that the committe member remain anonymous.

"Radio Marti will have no effect here," said Foreign Ministry official Ariel Ricardo.

"We already hear Voice of America and the Miami stations. Some days you can pick up the Miami stations better than our stations," Ricardo added, referring to Miami's Spanish-language stations, which are stridently anti-Castro.

At a Festival of Radio and TV on Feb. 27-28, government officials urged island broadcasters to play a more important role in improving society.

"Whatever would be the threats and aggressions the enemy might make toward us, we will be able to meet it by strengthening our programming," said a conference statement which apparently referred to Radio Marti.

Since then, several steps have been taken. Radio and TV hours have been extended. The two major national radio stations were combined into one 24-hour station.

The two television stations now show more foreign movies, particularly much-requested American movies, mostly from the 1940s and 1950s. Brighter TV sets, more use of film, human-interest features and a wider range of timely, less-propagandistic reports have come to the news shows.

While there is no direct criticism of the government or Cuba's communist system, the news media which in the past stressed only the positive, now report and comment on problems they say are encountered by average citizens:

— Workers interviewed on a TV program featuring a cement plant in the port of Mariel complained that cement bags kept falling apart. Supervisors complained that they had been asking their superiors for years to repair an elevator at the factory.

— A newspaper cartoon lampooning slow service at restaurants showed a waiting couple with cobwebs.

Computers take byte out of hieroglyphics

Hieroglyphics have been computerized for the Egyptology department at Germany's Bonn University by physicist Norbert Stief. The technique transcribes hieroglyphics, using a typewriter keyboard, and provides a printout of what used to be laboriously hand-transcribed.

The hieroglyphics are printed out alongside Roman, Greek, Cyrillic and other scripts.

WORLD in brief

Series of explosions fell power lines in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Police say millions of homes were blacked out by a series of bomb explosions that felled power lines in central Chile.

The 30 dynamite and nitroglycerine blasts also damaged a U.S. government cultural institute in Valparaiso, a chocolate factory there, a Coca Cola distributor's offices in Santiago and a radio station in Valdivia.

Callers to Chilean news organizations said the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front, a communist-led guerrilla movement named for a Chilean independence hero, was responsible for the attacks late Monday and early Tuesday.

Power was quickly restored in this capital of 4 million people, but the blackouts lasted up to two hours elsewhere.

The communist guerrilla group, fighting the military regime that has ruled Chile since a coup in 1973, has claimed responsibility for scores of bombings.

Warship ban to be tested

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea (AP) — Prime Minister David Lange of New Zealand says his government's ban on U.S. nuclear-powered or nuclear-armed warships would be applied in allied defense exercises set for next February.

He said Tuesday the maneuvers would be a test of the ANZUS alliance formed in 1952 by Australia, New Zealand and the United States.

Lange was installed in office late last month after a landlside election victory by his Labor Party.

He said his government's anti-nuclear policy and its effect on the alliance must be dealt with before the February maneuvers off New Zealand.

Tight jeans may cause rash

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet dermatologists reportedly are concerned that young people who wear tight blue jeans may develop a "jeans rash."

An article Tuesday in Moskovskaya Pravda, a Moscow newspaper, linked the problem to the synthetic fabrics used in some jeans, saying the fibers trap perspiration next to the skin. The report cautioned readers that jeans were designed to be loose fitting for wear during physical labor.

Freedom's cost

On the one hand the members of Odessans for Decency who took to the streets Monday, picket signs in hand, to protest convenience stores selling what the group considers pornographic magazines have our wholehearted admiration. That kind of commitment to purpose is in short supply today and when it is in evidence, it should be lauded — loudly.

But the kind of commitment exhibited in recent months by members of the Odessa organization has a negative "flip side." It's the aspect of freedom that was alluded to by Justice Robert Jackson when he said: "The price of freedom of religion or of speech or of the press is that we must put up with, and even pay for, a good deal of rubbish."

What the justice was saying is that freedom requires restraint — and that to enjoy freedom one must be willing to accept some degree of the bad with the good. On occasion the line between the two may be fuzzy. But in this concern over what are viewed as pornographic magazines at neighborhood convenience stores, in ready reach of impressionable youngsters and offendable adults, surely the members of the Odessa organization are cognizant that moves to "clean up" an area of materials that offend community standards can be too wide-ranging. That has been a problem with organizations that seek to ban certain books down through the years; ironically, the same broom that sweeps away materials reasonably deemed offensive can also sweep away literature classics, the result being that society is hindered rather than helped.

It doesn't appear that the Odessans for Decency have gone overboard in their campaign and lost sight of their goal. As noted earlier, they have been reacting in admirable fashion: Making their complaint known in an obvious attempt to garner community support for their cause, which they undoubtedly hope would bring public pressure on the stores in question to stop selling the type of magazines now offered.

Oh that wouldn't mean the magazines could not be obtained, just that they would not be so readily available. Convenience stores probably wouldn't lose many customers just because they don't carry "girlie" magazines. Those who wanted to purchase the magazines still could do so and read them in the privacy of their homes. They might just have to subscribe to them by mail.

But doesn't that constitute a logical compromise? The magazines wouldn't be available at neighborhood convenience stores, but would not be banned completely. And organization members would continue to shop at those convenience stores, that probably would lose only a tiny fraction of their revenue from magazine sales?

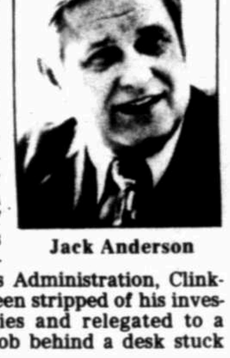
At least it seems to fit Justice Jackson's concept of freedom's cost.

JACK ANDERSON

Whistleblower still persecuted

WASHINGTON — Sometimes the good guys win.

A couple of years ago, I made a random check of two dozen government whistle blowers who had dared to accuse their superiors of wrongdoing. Every last one of them, I found, had subsequently been hounded and harassed by the government agency he had embarrassed. Some of them had even been forced, Soviet-style, to submit to psychiatric examinations.



Jack Anderson

One of these gutsy heroes is William Clinkscales, whose ordeal was cited by Ronald Reagan in the 1980 campaign. For treading on the toes of higher-ups in the General Services Administration, Clinkscales had been stripped of his investigative duties and relegated to a do-nothing job behind a desk stuck in a corridor.

Against the quiet but stubborn resistance of the agency, Clinkscales was "rehabilitated" by Reagan, appointed a senior policy adviser, then promoted to associate administrator. Last year he won a presidential award for saving the taxpayers more than $13 million.

All the while, Clinkscales found that his persecution was continuing unabated. In interviews with my associate Indy Badhwar, he cited several examples of harassment:

— Last month, two emissaries from the agency's inspector general marched into his office to grill him as part of an investigation that had been going on for nine months. The subject? Allegations that Clinkscales had billed the government for $148 worth of phone calls made from his home in 1980.

Clinkscales politely denied any knowledge of the calls. He then pulled out his home telephone bills for 1980, which showed they averaged about $108 a month. "And in the year of our Lord 1981, $106.79 was the average monthly cost," he said. "So if that $148 was to ease the pain of my own personal contract with the Bell System, I failed miserably."

— The continuing allegations against Clinkscales now make a file weighing close to 10 pounds. In a typically irreverent memo to his bosses, Clinkscales made this critique of the inspector general, Joseph Sickon:

"Our IG, Inspector Clouseau, has made a career out of investigating me or my organization. He hardly finishes one inquisition before he starts another, and only his ineptness has prevented the situation from getting totally out of hand."

— Clinkscales believes his harassment is the result of his repeated suggestions that Sickon is not doing his job properly. Last April, for example, Clinkscales denounced Sickon for maintaining video-camera surveillance on the fifth floor of the General Services Administration building during working hours. "This raises the specter of George Orwell's '1984,'" Clinkscales wrote to Sickon.

— A week earlier, Clinkscales excoriated the IG for investigating parking lot problems at GSA. "I consider it incredible that you would divert experienced auditors from the billions of dollars the agency handles in the contracting area when (other experts) are available to conduct parking studies," he wrote.

— In other memos over the years, Clinkscales has accused Sickon of failing to give GSA contracts proper scrutiny, of waging "turf battles" instead of preventing wrongdoing, of gutting the IG's contract inspector force from 70 to 40, and of overspending his budget so badly that investigations requiring travel expense have been shelved for the rest of the year.

Sickon's office denied Clinkscales' charges of harassment. But the unregenerate whistle blower's deliverance may be at hand. Sickon resigned a few days ago.

PINCHING PARAGUAY: The Reagan administration is quietly encouraging at least a verbal assault on the longest-lived Latin American dictatorship: the repressive regime of Paraguay's president, Gen. Alfredo Stroessner. Last month, he celebrated the 30th anniversary of his ascension to power.

The White House lodged an official protest with the Paraguayan embassy over the closing last March of the country's major independent newspaper, ABC Color. Expressions of outrage by the U.S. ambassador in Asuncion, Arthur H. Davis, have clearly been made with White House approval. The ambassador vented his anger over the newspaper's closing, for example, in a letter to Charles Perlik, president of the Newspaper Guild and chairman of the Council on Hemispheric Affairs, a human rights group.

And a Senate resolution expressing dismay at the closing of ABC Color, sponsored by Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., was supported by such GOP heavyweights as Sens. Robert Dole, Kan., Charles Percy, Ill., and Richard Lugar, Ind., indicating strong White House backing.

GENDER-GAPPING WITH GERRY: Democratic politicians hoping to appeal to women voters are already clutching at the coattails (apron strings?) of Geraldine Ferraro. Most interesting may be the strategy of Florida Gov. Bob Graham, who has asked for campaign appearances by the Democrats' vice-presidential nominee.

Graham, a tardy and unenthusiastic supporter of Walter Mondale, won't be running for the Senate against Republican incumbent Paula Hawkins until 1986, but he figures appearances with Ferraro will help even this early.

"He doesn't want to be gender-gapped," a Mondale aide explained.

The photo which appeared on the front page of the Midland Reporter-Telegram Saturday, July 28, requires a certain amount of background information in order to be properly understood.

An alarm came into the fire station around 9 p.m. the previous evening, of a reported structure fire at Canyon Creek Apartments. Upon arrival we found one apartment in the free-burn stage — that is flames coming out of the windows and engulfing the room. We rigged out to make an attack and began at the window and continued on inside as flames and heat eased back and the initial knock-down was completed.

At that time the gentleman in the photo came over and stated his wife was trapped inside and we began to search for her. After making several rounds of the apartment, no one was found.

Meanwhile, one of the firefighters was fighting the remaining fire which was confined to the closet and a second truck arrived and began to lay supply line to a hydrant. Also at this time ammunition stored in the closet began to detonate.

The gentleman in the photo, still thinking his wife inside but told otherwise, grabbed the nozzle, approached the window from behind a brick wall and sprayed into the apartment on the walls which were already out. The fireman in the photo noticed this and went over to the gentleman and told him he was wasting water. This is when the picture was taken.

He then took the nozzle from the gentleman and shut it off. But there was only a limited supply of water on the truck and it was depleted. The firefighters had to come out of the apartment having been put in a dangerous position, and the fire went unchecked for a few minutes until the supply lines were completed. The fire was then quickly extinguished. Because the initial attack was well exhausted, no further damage was done to the apartment during the time lag, and the fire did not spread into the attic.

When untrained personnel get involved at an emergency scene, the results are counter-productive at best. If this fire would have been more intense, the few minutes without water, could have put the entire structure in danger.

Please watch the angles in which you report these stories. They can be misleading!

Judge's court elicits comment

I noticed in the July 31 issue of the Midland Reporter-Telegram that Judge James Fitz-Gerald was asked to testify about a traffic ticket in district court.

That Judge Fitz-Gerald was asked to testify in a higher court about a specific traffic violation out of the over 40,000 that occur annually in Midland seems ludicrous to me.

I was called to serve for jury duty recently in Municipal Court and I was certainly impressed with the fair and impartial manner in which Judge Fitz-Gerald handles the tremendous volume that flows through our city court.

While other cities have fallen into speed trap citations with cash register justice, I was a proud witness to a court conducted with fairness and dignity. A senior citizen, a nervous teenager and a mother with small children all received thoughtful hearings while I was there.

Our City Council is to be commended on its choice of quality personnel and its vigilence in seeing that Midland, in this important area, remains a first-rate city.

Lift up more than a name

I am a black woman disagreeing with the proposed street improvement desires. I do not see the need at this time to be concerned to rename a street.

I prefer to look at the problem with Carver Street. The school for learning disabilities is on Carver Street and it also was named for one of our very enlightened men.

I want to lift up a name, too. Let's "lift" up Carver Street or lower it to the point that we are able to cross the railroad tracks even if Amtrack is on it.

Going for the gold

The financial markets seem to have been caught up in the Olympic spirit. Stock prices accelerated upward throughout the week, and the volume of trading on the New York Stock Exchange set successive records on Thursday and Friday. It echoes the kind of thing going on in the swimming competition in Los Angeles. A gold medal for Wall Street?

The numerologists of the financial world will note that this remarkable week fell a few days short of the second anniversary of the great stock market boom which began on Friday, Aug. 13, 1982, and ran more or less steadily until late last year. In both cases, the immediate trigger was the Federal Reserve Board's midyear review.

In the summer of 1982, because Congress was passing a tax increase, the Federal Reserve was able to relax its very tight grip on the money supply. After watching interest rates drop sharply for six weeks, investors decided that the world really had changed and the stock market took off. This year, after carefully observing the aftermath of the Federal Reserve's July meeting and listening to its chairman, Paul Volcker, testify before Congress, investors have evidently decided that at least he does not intend to go out of his way to raise rates. That counts as good news, and once again the market is responding.

To the extent that these investors expect business profits to keep rising smartly over the coming year, they are probably right. But to the extent that they expect stable or falling interest rates, their assumptions are far more speculative. At a time of heavy borrowing throughout the economy, and increasing reliance on a flow of foreign money to sustain it, interest rates are going to be unpredictable. The chances are greater that they will rise in the year ahead than that they will fall.

The most striking thing about the enormous volumes of stock being traded is the illustration of the power of the computer to transform the financial markets. In the late 1960s and early 1970s, some brokerage firms literally collapsed under the pressure of increased trading. They couldn't handle the paper fast enough. Today the numbers of shares routinely traded is six or seven times as high, and there is very little paper to handle. Tied together by phone lines, the computers now constitute a worldwide network of continuous trading. That's good for the markets, and probably good for the economy. But it permits very rapid movement of very large amounts of money. The result is the dramatic volatility that the markets demonstrated this week — volatility, this time, in the right direction.

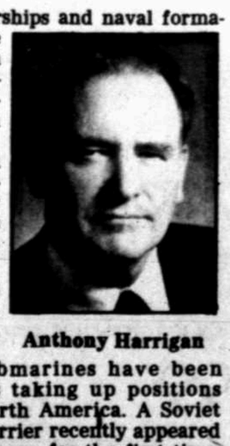
Soviet naval growth a threat

The recent presence of an armada of Soviet warships in the North Atlantic, for the purpose of maneuvers, ought to wake congressional liberals to the seriousness of the Soviet naval threat in the home waters of the NATO alliance. It's unlikely, however, that these liberals, who want to slash defense spending, will emerge from their dreamworld.



Anthony Harrigan

Soviet warships and naval formations are assuming a more menacing posture. In recent weeks, a Russian aircraft carrier fired flares at an American destroyer in the South China Sea. Soviet nuclear submarines have been reported as taking up positions closer to North America. A Soviet helicopter carrier recently appeared in the Caribbean for the first time. The high seas fleet of the USSR is large, heavily-armed and increasingly aggressive.

This grim reality has little or no impact on the hardshell peaceniks who are determined to dismantle U.S. defenses. The U.S. Navy's aircraft carriers seem to be a special target of the disarmers.

A few weeks ago, I had a post-lecture luncheon with faculty members at a liberal arts college. During the meal, the college chaplain sputtered with indignation when I praised President Reagan for accelerating naval construction. President Jimmy Carter, I noted, had cut the modest program in half.

The chaplain fumed at the very idea of aircraft carriers, saying that they were totally unnecessary. He chose to ignore the point that they offer the only means by which America's naval power can be projected into distant regions. I suppose that's why he is such an opponent of carriers. He is one of the new liberal isolationists who don't want American power to be used anywhere in defense of freedom.

The chaplain (and isn't it odd that a clergyman should regard himself as an expert on naval weaponry?) also ignored the Soviet Navy's increased use of carriers. There was time when Admiral Gorshkov, head of the Soviet Navy, dismissed the carrier as an obsolete weapon. Now, the Soviets had a large, nuclear-powered attack carrier to deploy off the Nicaraguan coast.

It's bad enough that the pulpit strategists are opposed to essential defense systems, but it's worse that the anti-carrier mentality is strong among the liberals on Capitol Hill. They could deprive the cause of freedom of an important weapon.

History-minded citizens will remember the opposition of the so-called Little Englanders in Great Britain early in the century who saw no need for construction of dreadnaughts. Had they prevailed, Britain would have been unable to defeat the German Navy.

For many years, the Soviets were thought of as a land power. Today, however, the Soviets well understand the influence of sea power upon history, which the American Admiral Alfred Thayer Mahan described long ago. Moscow plans to use its powerful navy to achieve political and military goals throughout the world. The United States must do everything within its means to strengthen its oceanic defenses.

Ex-astronaut launches campaign 'into orbit'

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

Ex-astronaut Jack Lousma launched his campaign against Democratic Sen. Carl Levin "into orbit" with a smashing victory in Michigan's Republican primary, while Missouri's attorney general and lieutenant governor survived that state's costliest gubernatorial primary in their bid to succeed Gov. Christopher Bond.

Lousma, who commanded the third space shuttle mission but has never held elective office, trounced former one-term Rep. Jim Dunn in Tuesday's voting after a campaign filled with charges of lying and mudslinging.

"With this victory, we have launched the Michigan mission into orbit," he told cheering supporters at Ann Arbor. "All systems are go ... we land in Washington in November."

Levin, who had no primary opposition in his bid for a second term, said at a rally in Detroit that was "looking forward" to running against Lousma. "There's a clear contrast here with my proven record and his unproven record."

Levin is regarded by the national GOP as among the most vulnerable of the 12 Democratic senators seeking re-election, and they expect to pour at least $500,000 into Lousma's campaign as part of their strategy for maintaining the Republicans's 55-45 edge in the Senate.

With 93 percent of Michigan's 6,630 precincts reporting, Lousma had 310,078 votes or 62 percent, while Dunn had 189,900 votes or 38 percent.

IN MISSOURI, where state law prohibited Bond, a Republican, from seeking a third term, Lt. Gov. Kenneth Rothman swamped six Democratic rivals and Attorney General John Ashcroft defeated one serious Republican challenger and one perennial candidate.

With 93 percent of the vote counted, Rothman, serving his first term, had 286,571 votes or 57 percent to state Treasurer Mel Carnahan's 102,900 votes or 20 percent. Former Senate President Pro Tem Norman Merrell of Monticello was third with 94,472 or 19 percent.

Ashcroft, completing his second term, had 243,011 votes or 68 percent and St. Louis County Executive Gene McNary had 114,933 votes or 32 percent.

Rothman predicted in a statement that he would defeat Ashcroft in November "because Missourians know the state is in decline and because they know this ... candidate has the vision and the specific workable plan to turn Missouri around."

He said the Republican primary had been "an embarrassment" by setting "race against race," in a campaign filled with charges and countercharges about a busing plan that required the state to share the cost of desegregating St. Louis schools.

IN FACT, Ashcroft and McNary became so strong in their sniping at each other that Vice President George Bush agreed to come to Kansas City today to help promote party unity.

Ashcroft said he would count on McNary's support "so we can continue to have Republican leadership" in Missouri.

The two leading Republicans and three Democrats had raised $3.95 million by the time the last campaign reports were filed July 26. During the 1980 primary, candidates spent $3.4 million.

In another Missouri race, state Sen. Harriett Woods, who narrowly lost a 1982 U.S. Senate race against Republican John C. Danforth, won the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor, trouncing state Rep. Leroy Braungardt.

IN KANSAS, Republican Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, one of two women in the Senate, was unopposed for nomination to a second term and Overland Park investments counselor James Maher had no challenger on the Democratic side.

In the state's 3rd Congressional District, where Republican Rep. Larry Winn Jr. is retiring after nine terms, Kansas City Mayor Jack Reardon ran away with the Democratic primary and state Sen. Jan Meyers won the GOP nomination.

Residents may lose war to stop 'survival game'

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Area residents have won a battle but may yet lose the war in their fight to block a military-like "survival game" they say would shatter the calm in their rural community.

Boggs Township attorney David Flood on Tuesday night upheld the residents' claim that a decision by a zoning board permitting the adult war game was technically flawed.

The board failed to give area residents proper notice of the case before ruling May 31 that Edward A. Davis, 23, could begin the game this month on a wooded, 50-acre tract of township land.

Flood made his decision during a meeting of the supervisors of the Centre County township.

Davis was given the option of resubmitting his case to the zoning board or dropping his request. He said he needed time to consult with his attorney before deciding.

Twenty residents who live near the proposed playing area attended the meeting to voice their opposition to the game, which they claim would bring noise, traffic and strangers into their neighborhood.

"I as a mother would be very concerned if there were that many strange people coming in — people coming from the big city or wherever," said resident Connie Fetzer. "You never know when some psycho is going to come in."

In the survival game, players form two teams and arm themselves with air pistols that shoot paint-filled capsules. The teams use strategy to try to "kill" each other with the capsules to capture each other's hidden flags. Players often don camouflage suits and are required to wear safety goggles.

"The game is basically a game of 'Capture the Flag' that you play when you are a child. Except it's an adult version," Davis said.

In a petition presented to the supervisors Tuesday night, 26 residents said that the game is "detrimental to building good character in the youth of Boggs Township."

Ferraro vows to make full financial disclosure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Geraldine Ferraro is promising to tell all about her husband's finances next week, while defending her decision to keep them secret when she filed her congressional disclosure forms over the past six years.

The Democratic vice presidential nominee said Tuesday that she regarded a conservative legal group's complaint to the House ethics committee about her financial reports "an attempt to politically embarrass me. I'm not embarrassed."

"I don't believe I have violated the law," she told reporters in the hallway outside her congressional office shortly after the director of the Washington Legal Foundation dropped off a copy of his complaint.

The three-term congresswoman said, "I still think I am qualified" to claim an exemption that allowed her to avoid listing the holdings of her husband, wealthy New York developer John A. Zaccaro, and her children. "I will not be changing that," she added.

But she renewed the promise she made shortly after Walter F. Mondale chose her as his running mate to make a complete disclosure of her own and her husband's finances, including copies of their tax returns. That will come in about a week and a half, she said, and all questions will be answered then.

THE LAW REQUIRES vice presidential candidates to make the same type disclosure as members of Congress within 30 days of their nomination. Ms. Ferraro said she will disclose more than the law requires.

"I want it to be full, I want it to be complete, I want it to be so that each one of you can read through it and get the answers yourselves without having to address them to me," she told reporters.

Paul D. Kamenar, executive legal director of the foundation, said it "strains credulity" for Ms. Ferraro to have claimed that she had no knowledge of her husband's holdings. She listed herself as a shareholder and corporate officer of a family firm, P. Zaccaro Co. Inc., and reported owning one share of stock worth between $5,000 and $15,000.

Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, the Democratic vice presidential candidate from New York, is followed by her aide Ann Wexler, as she leaves her Capitol Hill office to face reporters Tuesday. Ferraro said she would file a full financial disclosure statement within 30 days, in light of the Washington Legal Foundation filing a complaint alleging that she violated the Ethics in Government Act by not disclosing her husband's financial holdings.

Tony Essaye, a lawyer speaking on behalf of the Ferraro campaign, said Ms. Ferraro apparently claimed the exemption because P. Zaccaro Co., Inc., is a management company only and that Zaccaro owns buildings through another firm, Frajo Associates Inc., in which Ms. Ferraro has no interest.

TO GET AN exemption from the law's requirement for disclosure of spouse's income and holdings, a member must meet three tests:

— The member must have no knowledge of the spouse's holdings.

— The member must not have helped develop those assets.

— The member must not derive, or expect to inherit, any benefit from them.

Kamenar, who acknowledged he based his complaint largely on newspaper clippings, said Ms. Ferraro "is enjoying the benefits of the three expensive homes that her husband owns himself, or in joint ownership with her, as well as other benefits such as her housekeeper, vacations and the like."

He said there were apparent discrepancies in Ms. Ferraro's reporting of her own assets, including the $75,000 capital gain she made in 1978 in selling a property to her husband's business partner to repay loans her husband made illegally to her first congressional campaign.

Kamenar also said she should have disclosed her children's holdings, since she was able to dip into their trust accounts to pay for campaign expenses in 1978.

The House Republican Study Committee made arrangements for the Washington Legal Foundation to use a room just down the hall from Ms. Ferraro's own congressional office for its news conference. But Kamenar denied the White House or other GOP groups had instigated the complaint. "We're not a front for anybody," he said.

Kamenar said he would like to see Congress reprimand Ms. Ferraro, as it reprimanded Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, last week after he was convicted of criminal charges for concealing his and his wife's financial deals.

Karlita Maria Felix, age 4 months, is carried by her father Astolfo and accompanied by her mother Maricela upon her release from Children's Hospital Tuesday in San Diego. Karlita received wounds to the head, chest and abdomen during the July 18 attack on a San Ysidro McDonald's in which 22 persons died and 19 others wounded

Four-month-old survivor of McDonald's shooting released from hospital

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A 4-month-old girl who is the youngest survivor of the McDonald's massacre should recover with no physical or emotional defects, a social worker said as the infant was released from the hospital.

Wearing a powder blue dress and showing no visible marks of her wounds, Karlita Maria Felix left Children's Hospital on Tuesday after being treated to a going-home party in the hospital playroom.

The tot was hospitalized in critical condition with numerous shotgun pellets after James Oliver Huberty opened fire in a San Ysidro McDonald's on July 18, killing 21 people and wounding 19 others.

"Kids just seem to get better faster than adults," said head nurse Nance West. "Maybe they just don't know enough about being sick to know better."

Carmen Ayala, a bilingual social worker who interpreted for Spanish-speaking Maricela and Astolfo Felix, said the baby should recover completely.

"To begin with, they have a very strong family feeling. That is a very strong resource to have. Karlita is a very wanted baby and very much loved.

"There are some people who say that we remember everything that happens to us from birth. As far as Karlita's emotional well-being, she is a very sociable, adaptable baby. For instance, she has adapted very well to a grandmother taking care of her while her mother is recovering," Ms. Ayala said.

Karlita's parents, both struck by the same shotgun blast that wounded the baby, are still recovering from their wounds. But they said through Ms. Ayala that they were "very happy the day has finally come when we can take the baby and go home."

Of those injured in the barrage of gunfire by Huberty before he was killed by a police sharpshooter, only 11-year-old Aurora Pena remains hospitalized. Chula Vista Community Hospital spokeswoman Laura Brien said the child is in good condition and should be released within a week.

Astolfo Felix said he, his wife and daughter approached the McDonald's in the Mexican border community and were immediately struck by a shotgun blast. Astolfo, the least injured of the family, handed Karlita to a woman, who in turn rushed the baby to a police officer.

Patrolman Steve Pellegrino sped the critically injured infant to the Chula Vista hospital. Both Pellegrino and the woman, a Tijuana school teacher, visited Karlita in the hospital, Mrs. Felix said.

Another center involved in sexual abuse case

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo ordered state officials to investigate day care programs in New York City after 30 children at a Bronx day care center said they had been sexually abused and civil charges of abuse were filed against another center.

The inquiry would explore whether there was "a problem among more than one facility," said Michael Del Guidice, Cuomo's secretary.

Cuomo also joined Mayor Edward Koch in calling for stricter standards in hiring day care center workers.

At least 30 of the 135 youngsters enrolled at the PRACA Day Care Center in the Bronx have told investigators of sexual attacks since the arrest last week of three center employees.

And an attorney for six parents said he filed notices of civil complaint with the city charging that 3- and 4-year-old children were sexually assaulted at the Westchester Tremont Community Day Care Center, which rents space in the United Methodist Church in the Bronx.

The attorney, Steve Tannenbaum, said the former pastor of the church was among those involved in the charges, but he did not amplify.

The suit seeks $600 million in damages, naming as defendants the city, the church, the center and two teachers, who were identified only by last names. Neither the former pastor nor the other defendants were accused of any specific acts against the children.

The state supervises 890 day care centers outside the city, but those in the city are the responsibility of its Human Resources Administration.

Also on Tuesday, Gail Kong, head of the HRA's Office of Special Services for Children, resigned.

She had been reprimanded for mishandling an investigation into child abuse cases after disclosure of nine deaths among abused children in Brooklyn. But Ms. Kong has not been criticized in the Bronx day care case.

Also Tuesday, City Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin said the HRA was "out of control."

"There ought not to be layers of bureaucracy that allow the terror to go on," he said. "One solution has got to be the creation of an agency that deals just with children (or else) the problems of children will fall between the cracks."

The civil complaint involving the Westchester Tremont center accused the defendants of failing to "take steps necessary to protect the welfare, safety and well-being of the infants, causing, permitting and allowing the infants to be sexually assaulted and psychologically traumatized (and) allowing the infants to be repeatedly assaulted despite having knowledge of the assaults."

The church's former pastor, the Rev. Nathaniel Grady, is now pastor of St. Luke's United Methodist Church in New Rochelle and chaplain for the Yonkers Police Department.

Bishop Roy Nichols, in a statement issued by the United Methodist Church's area headquarters in White Plains, said Grady, 48, was in Virginia on Tuesday but telephoned the bishop and told him the accusations were groundless.

Investigators quiz inmates on possible Green River link

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An inmate who claims to have killed at least 16 young women in the Pacific Northwest says he is willing to take a lie detector test to prove his assertions.

Investigators on Tuesday voiced skepticism at claims made by Robert Matthias, 25, in a newspaper interview, that he has killed "16 and possibly more" women whom he described as street hustlers and "the type of people I hated the most."

Another inmate, Richard Carbone, 32, said in a separate interview that he helped Matthias in the slayings of 11 women.

Washington investigators questioned the pair Tuesday at the Hall of Justice to determine whether they were connected to the so-called Green River slayings of 26 young women in the Seattle area.

Several victims were prostitutes, and police say 15 other young women reported missing in the area may have fallen prey to the same killer or killers.

Matthias told the San Francisco Chronicle that he told investigators Tuesday he probably will "take a lie detector test on a couple of questions."

He said he avoided offering too much detail about his crimes to investigators because he wanted to learn how much information police had that might link him to any killings.

The inmates have said they decided to talk to the press because they wanted to ensure their safety in custody and make a deal with police to avoid the death penalty.

Both men are in jail on charges unrelated to the Green River killings, named for the southern King County river in Washington where the first five bodies were found in the summer of 1982.

Matthias was arrested in San Francisco on robbery and burglary charges. Carbone, facing robbery and rape charges in Alameda County, faces sentencing Aug. 23 in San Francisco on his convictons of one count of rape, one of burglary and other charges.

Carbone told the newspaper that Green River Task Force Detective Paul Smith of Seattle showed him a map and asked him to point out murder sites. Carbone said he did so in a general way.

Postmaster confident workers won't strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even though some 600,000 Postal Service employees are working without a contract, few would be likely to strike, says Postmaster General William F. Bolger.

Bolger, who has warned that he would fire any striking workers, said Tuesday that, "as for any work stoppage, the vast majority of postal employees do not want that."

Negotiations on a new contract ended in stalemate July 20. The issue has been subjected to fact-finding and subsequent binding arbitration, which could last until sometime around the middle of December. A strike by postal workers, who are federal employees, would be illegal.

Bolger told the board of governors of the U.S. Postal Service on Tuesday that the mail agency has updated contingency plans for continuing postal deliveries in the event of any walkout.

And in an interview with The Associated Press Radio network, the postmaster general expressed confidence that the dispute will be settled through arbitration.

Saying Americans should not worry about disruptions in their mail service, Bolger said " ... I think the legal process ... to resolve this dispute by arbitration if necessary will work.

"I don't think there's any chance that the vast majority of postal employees would withhold their services and interrupt the mail service," he added.

"My personal opinion is that the vast majority of postal employees are going to live up to the law, as they should," Bolger said.

While the fact-finding and arbitration process is under way, the postmaster general said, "there's nothing to prevent the parties from getting together ... to try to reach an agreement."

Postal management contended throughout the talks that postal workers are paid more than people who do similar work for private companies. Union leaders said the workers are entitled to raises because the Postal Service reported financial surpluses for the last two years.

Bolger said he has put into effect a new wage scale for newly-hired letter carriers. The scale includes a salary of $17,000 per year.

Senior Assistant Postmaster General for Finance Michael S. Coughlin said the Postal Service "will probably come close to breaking even in the first quarter of 1985." After that, without any increase in postal rates, "we are going to have a steep slide."

There is a surplus of $334 million so far this year.

The mail agency has asked the independent Postal Rate Commission to approve higher rates, including a 23-cent charge for first-class letters. The board has not acted yet, and Bolger has promised that there will be no rate increase until early next year.

Coughlin said mail volume increased 10.7 percent in the last quarter. "Volume has increased faster than work hours," he said.

James V. Jellison, senior assistant postmaster general for operations, said 92 percent of mail reaches the destination by the time the Postal Service says it should be there. Problems sometimes come because airplanes are delayed, he said.

American women paint basketball gold

LOS ANGELES (AP) — American women won gold in basketball Tuesday night while the women settled for silver in volleyball at the Summer Games as the U.S. Olympic women of 1984 continued to excel, building their medal count to 47.

In all, the American women have won 21 gold, 21 silver and five bronze medals at the Games, becoming one of the most successful U.S. women's Olympic teams ever. Twelve of the gold came in swimming.

There was disappointment for the men's baseball team, which was soundly beaten in the title game by Japan 6-3 on a three-run homer by Katsumi Hirosawa. Baseball was a demonstration sport in these Games.

The women basketball team, led by the spirited and dominating play of Cheryl Miller, who scored 16 points, outclassed its South Korean opponent for the second time at the Games. This time, the score was 85-55. Last time, the margin of victory was 37 points.

THE CLOSEST any opponent came to the Americans in six games was 28 points. Yugoslavia lost by that margin, 83-55.

The women's volleyball team had a disappointing finish. They beat the Chinese in an earlier match, and were expected to win the gold in the re-match.

It didn't happen. In fact, the Chinese won easily in three straight games, 16-14, 15-3, 15-9.

Still, with the success of the women in track and field, in swimming, and in basketball and volleyball, the U.S. Olympic women were having a very good year.

Even before the basketball final, the Koreans had virtually conceded an American victory.

And so it was. The result brought celebration on both sides. Both teams carried their coaches around the floor, and the crowd gave them a standing ovation.

There was also a poignant moment.

Pam McGee and her twin sister Paula of the University of Southern California had both tried out for the U.S. team. Pam made the team, Paula did not.

American Greg Louganis
...on his way to unchallenged gold

When it was all over, when Pam had gotten her gold, she walked over to Paula, sitting in the stands, and gave her the medal.

"I doubt if anything is every going to top this," said Miller, who had 11 rebounds and five assists in addition to leading the team's scoring.

MEANWHILE, GREG Louganis of the United States earned five perfect scores in springboard diving preliminaries, while South Korea threatened to withdraw its fighters in a dispute over alleged pro-American bias among boxing judges.

The threat cast a shadow of controversy over the lightest day so far at the Olympics, when there were no track and field events. With gymnastics and swimming events over, it became a day for the lesser known sports.

The United States won the gold medal in equestrian team jumping, while sailors from the United States, New Zealand and Spain clinched gold in three of the seven yachting classes. The yachting medals won't count in the countries' totals, however, until competition ends Wednesday.

U.S. teams continued to dominate the Olympics, and boxing was no exception.

Criticism of judging in fights including Americans reached a peak when Jerry Page of Columbus, Ohio, scored a 4-1 decision over Dong-Kil Kim in the 139-pound quarterfinals.

Kim filed a protest with the International Amateur Boxing Federation, and Soon-In Oh, vice president of the Korean Boxing Federation, said his nation might leave the Los Angeles Games.

"We are seriously considering pulling out," he said. "The judging has been quite unfair."

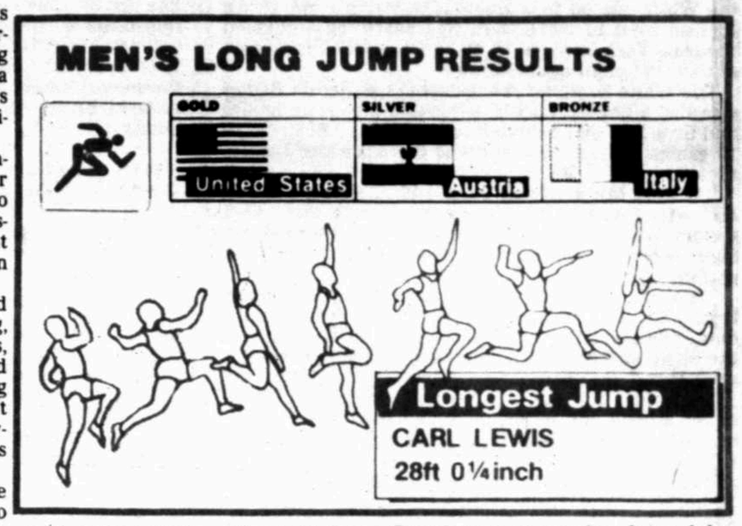
The Summer Games are scheduled to end Sunday. The next Games, in 1988, are set for Seoul, South Korea.

The Korean boxers have done well in Los Angeles, winning 17 of their first 21 bouts and posing the biggest obstacle to U.S. fighters in the lower weight classes.

LOUGANIS, meanwhile, soared through the day's 11 preliminary dives with five perfect scores of 10.0 — two for a reverse 1½ somersault with 3½ twists. He earned 92.07 points for that dive alone.

He finished the morning session with 249.27 points, then extended his lead in the six-dive evening session. He finished with 72.37 points just 3.12 short of the record 755.49 he accumulated at a meet last year.

In second was Ron Merriott of Ann Arbor, Mich., whose 11-dive total was 628.47, fewer than Louganis had atfter 10 dives.



In the Pacific Ocean, just off Long Beach, three sailors rolled up enough points to clinch the gold even with one day of competition remaining.

American Robbie Haines clinched in the Soling Class, Rob Sellers of New Zealand clinched in the Tornado class and Spain's Luis Doreste clinched in the 470 class.

Faultless rides in the final round by Joe Fargis aboard Touch of Class, Conrad Hemfeld on Abdullah and Melanie Smith atop Calypso clinched the United States a gold medal in team jumping competition. Britain won the silver and West Germany the bronze.

After completion of 17 track and field events Monday, only one other country, Finland, had as many gold medals as Carl Lewis, who is seeking four to match Jesse Owens' total in 1936 at Berlin.

TWENTY-FOUR track finals remain, with the finale on Sunday when the men's marathon ends as part of the closing ceremonies.

One casualty of the men's 800-meter race Monday was British middle-distance star Steve Ovett, who collapsed after finishing the final.

He was hospitalized and reported Tuesday as recovering from dehydration that doctors said was believed related to a case of bronchitis.

He was undergoing tests before doctors would recommend whether Ovett should run in the 1,500 on Saturday.

The Korean protest was not the first complaint about judging in boxing. Through Tuesday's early bouts, only one U.S. boxer had lost in the Olympic tournament, and the coach of the Malawi boxing team complained that American boxers are being favored by judges who score their fights.

Cardiff Gonde made the charge after his 112-pound fighter, Peter Ayesu, was beaten on as 5-0 decision by American Steve McCrory.

"When you're fighting an American, it's always 5-0," Gonde said. "You can't just say 5-0 like one guy is just standing and another is hitting."

In international amateur boxing, a 5-0 score means all five ringside judges favored one fighter, but it does not indicate how close each judge scores the bout.

The only U.S. boxer to lose so far was Robert Shannon, who dropped a 119-pound bout Sunday. The U.S. team is good, but its record undoubtedly is aided by the absence of the powerful Cuban team.

Cubs lose twice, head for home

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO— The Midland Cubs return from the road worse for the wear and tear after dropping a doubleheader here Tuesday to the San Antonio Dodgers.

Lack of offense plagued the Cubs as they were shut out 2-0 in the opener and then lost the nightcap 6-1.

On top of the twin setback, the Cubs had to travel to Midland for tonight's homestand opener against league leading Beaumont in a game scheduled for a 7:30 p.m. starting time.

The Dodgers captured the series by a 4-1 count, leaving the Cubs four games behind the Dodgers in last place in the Texas League West.

Midland managed only seven hits and one run against San Antonio in Tuesday's doubleheader loss. San Antonio pitchers Lovelace and Scudder allowed only two hits to the Cubs in the 2-0 shutout. Gary Varsho and David Denton were the only Cubs to get hits in that game.

In the 6-1 loss, Don Hyman collected two of Midland's five hits and scored Antonio Cordova with a single in the top of the seventh to end a scoreless string of 14 innings for the Cubs, who didn't score in the ninth inning Sunday against San Antonio.

The Dodgers scored two unearned runs off of tough luck loser Joe Housey in the first game to capture the victory.

Midland Elcor still unbeaten

Snyder earns chance at Midland in finals at Lee

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

OK, baseball fans. It's time for a little summer school, multiple-guess style.

The State Seniors Baseball Tournament will resume today with either: A) one game, between Midland Elcor and Snyder; B) two games, between Midland Elcor and Snyder; C) the completion of the game between Snyder and Eastland that was stopped by heavy rains in the sixth inning Tuesday; or D) none of the above.

Got your answers? No peeking.

The answer is probably at least A, possibly B and maybe even D. For those of you who picked C, the NFL season starts in four weeks.

Midland earned a spot in what could be the final with an unbeaten record, courtesy of a 14-2 blasting of Eastland Tuesday at Cubs Stadium.

Snyder had eliminated Eastland earlier, 7-6. When the downpour began before 10 p.m. Tuesday night, Eastland found themselves on the short end of a 9-3 count and time expired.

Thus, Snyder faces Midland Elcor today. Or do they? The Cubs Stadium venue is out due to the return of Midland's Bruins. Originally the finals that are scheduled for 10 a.m. Wednesday were to be at Lee High School. But the rain puts a big question mark on the situation. All efforts will be made to play the game, and Lee Diamond is the place.

Should Midland win the morning game, they will take the title. A Snyder victory means the whole shooting match would come down to a 3 p.m. final today.

Elcor spotted Eastland a fast 2-0 lead, but the visiting nine should have hoped for rain then. As it turned out, pitcher Mike Timlin had an outstanding performance on the mound and at the plate.

Timlin tossed a nifty three-hitter, and after surviving the first inning charge was never threatened. He struck out ten batters.

Even more awesome was Timlin's offensive output. He slugged a grand slam home run that sealed his victory.

Bryan Willis is expected to get some mound time today after pitching in the opener Monday.

Snyder withstood a late rally by North Garland in their 7-6 win. North Garland scored one in the first and two in the second to establish a 3-0 margin, but Snyder stormed back with four runs in the third on the strength of Charles Bollinger's second tournament grand slam. His shot was almost identical to the one he hit against Waco Monday, a blast to deep left center.

North Garland's Keith Darter went the distance and took the loss for North Garland. Darter's bat won't be missed by Elcor or Snyder. He finished the tournament with 11 hits in 14 at-bats.

Snyder exploded for six runs in the fifth of the rain-shortened game against Eastland. Eastland committed four errors in the loss.

Guidry turns back clock

Cajun cools off White Sox with 13 Ks

Associated Press

Ron Guidry hopes the Louisiana Lightning he fired at the Chicago White Sox won't turn out to be as elusive as a summer thunderstorm.

The slender Cajun, who will turn 34 later this month, turned back the clock Tuesday night by cooling off the White Sox on four singles and striking out 13, his highest total in more than five years. That enabled the New York Yankees to blank Chicago 7-0 for a split of their twi-night doubleheader.

The White Sox took the opener 6-3 as Harold Baines smashed a double, an RBI triple and a two-run homer and Greg Luzinski homered to extend his RBI streak to 10 games, falling three short of the American League record.

"At least this confirms I can still pitch, throw hard and win. Hopefully, I can carry on with this," said Guidry, who came into the game with a 4.24 earned run average after beginning the season with a career mark of 2.99.

"Tonight I wasn't trying to strike out anybody, I was trying to get outs. I had chances for other strikeouts early and I didn't go for them. It's fun to challenge the hitter and strike him out, but you can't get caught up in that."

Guidry did not walk a batter and struck out the side in the second and ninth innings — the latter time on nine pitches — for his 132nd triumph, snapping a tie with Allie Reynolds for eighth place on the Yankees' all-time victory list. Brian Dayett and Dave Winfield homered as the Yankees halted Chicago's six-game winning streak after the White Sox stopped New York's eight-game string in the opener.

"To be having a season like me that's been inconsistent really, you hope a game like that confirms something. While it seems I'm not having a great season, I can still throw the ball with authority," said Guidry.

In the first game, LaMarr Hoyt scattered seven hits in 8 1-3 innings as Chicago spoiled the major-league debut of loser Jim Deshaies with four runs in the fifth inning, including Baines' homer.

Red Sox 12-5, Tigers 7-7

Lance Parrish belted a two-run homer, his second of the game and third of the evening, with two out in the 11th inning, to give Detroit a split and unbeaten Aurelio Lopez his ninth victory. Boston won the opener as Bill Buckner and Tony Armas belted grand slam homers in the first two innings, tying the major-league record for most bases-loaded homers in one game.

The Tigers, who had dropped six of their last seven games, tied the nightcap 5-5 with an unearned run in the ninth. Pinch-hitter Dave Bergman blooped a double to left, took third on an infield out and scored on an error by first baseman Buckner.

Boston had taken a 5-4 lead in the seventh on consecutive home runs by Dwight Evans — a three-run shot — and Jim Rice. Boston's John Henry Johnson, making only his second start, allowed solo homers by Larry Herndon, Parrish and Kirk Gibson.

In the first game, Boston jumped on Detroit's Jack Morris for nine runs in less than two innings, including both grand slams. Parrish, Alan Trammell and Howard Johnson homered for Detroit, which outhomered Boston 11-10 in splitting two doubleheaders.

"Sometimes you have to dig down a little deeper and do a little extra," said Parrish, who caught both games. "We've been struggling, and now we're in a situation where we have to put the wins on the board."

Twins 2, A's 1

Mickey Hatcher doubled in the sixth inning for his third hit and scored the winning run on a sacrifice fly by Randy Bush while Frank Viola pitched a four-hitter to keep Minnesota one-half game ahead of second-place California in the AL West. Minnesota's Tom Brunansky hit his 21st homer of the season in the second inning and Oakland's Davey Lopes tied the score by hitting his eighth homer in the bottom of the inning.

Angels 7, Mariners 6

Fred Lynn's sacrifice fly capped a two-run rally in the ninth inning. Rod Carew started the rally with a single and Rob Picciolo ran for him. With one out, Daryl Sconiers doubled and Seattle center fielder Dave Henderson threw to second baseman Jack Perconte, whose relay was in time to nail Picciolo at the plate. But catcher Bob Kearney was unable to hold the ball and was charged with an error. Sconiers took third on the play and scored on Lynn's fly. Doug DeCinces drove in four runs for California with a sacrifice fly and homer while Steve Henderson homered for Seattle, which has lost six games in a row.

Royals 8, Brewers 5

Pinch-hitter Dane Iorg slammed a two-run homer and George Brett also hit a two-run shot that traveled 459 feet in Kansas City's five-run eighth inning that stretched Milwaukee's losing streak to 10 games, equaling the club record for futility. Both homers came off reliever Pete Ladd and offset a pair of two-run homers by Milwaukee's Robin Yount.

Brett, a career .316 hitter, came into the game with just one hit in 21 at-bats. His average had sunk to .273, including .216 in the last 12 games.

"I definitely have some flaws in my swing," Brett said. "We took extra batting practice on the road and nothing seemed to be working. Tonight, it just seemed like everything fell together. I felt confident and comfortable."

Rangers 7, Blue Jays 6

Gary Ward led off the bottom of the 10th inning with a triple off Toronto reliever Dennis Lamp and scored the winning run on George Wright's bloop single. The Rangers tied the score 6-6 in the seventh inning on Buddy Bell's sacrifice fly. Toronto had taken a 6-5 lead in the top of the inning on Cliff Johnson's two-run double.

Johnson homered in the fourth as Toronto led 2-0, but Texas got to Dave Stieb for five runs in the bottom of the fourth, three on a homer by Larry Parrish.

Indians 5, Orioles 4

Tony Bernazard, hitless in his previous 22 at-bats, delivered a tie-breaking single in the sixth inning and Chris Bando drove what proved to be the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the seventh as Cleveland ended a six-game losing streak. Winner Bert Blyleven allowed seven hits and struck out eight before giving way to Ernie Camacho with one out in the eighth. Scott McGregor suffered his fourth straight loss, allowing four runs in 5⅓ innings, including Joe Carter's solo homer.

Turmoil puts fire under Illinois

Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — If Illinois' Mike White is motivated by turmoil, as he says, the coach of the defending Big Ten football champions should be fired up this season.

Consider what has happened in 1984:

—The NCAA put Illinois on probation for recruiting violations, ending hope of a bowl bid this year. In addition, White and his top assistant are banned from off-campus recruiting and will lose 10 scholarships.

—Federal authorities charged safety Craig Swoope, a key to the Illini defense, with violating federal drug laws. He awaits trial.

—And UCLA gave Illinois an embarassing 45-9 whipping in the Rose Bowl.

"If you want to know the truth, the turmoil factor motivates me," said White, preparing for his fifth season at Illinois. "I don't like it and I don't look for it, but it only causes me to redouble my commitment and my effort."

White says he has the ability to be positive and lead his team around the problems, and the NCAA probation will not have a major effect on the football program.

"If anything, this will get the guys fired up," said linebacker Sam Ellsworth. "We have to learn to deal with adversity. Bowl games are nice, but we still have 11 games. The Big Ten is what counts."

Even without the other problems, Illinois was bound to have a different look this season — at least in the beginning.

Defense was the key in 1983, as the Illini rose from the depths of the Big Ten to win their first conference championship in 20 years. But the heart of that unit is gone.

"We will have to emphasize offense," said White, who is counting on returning quarterback Jack Trudeau to lead this experienced squad. "Early in the year, we will have to be more wide open on offense and rely on the offense until the defense comes around."

Joining the California signal-caller will be fullback Thomas Rooks, the leading rusher in 1983, and wide receiver David Williams, the top pass-catcher last season.

"The question mark will be the defense," said White. "We lost our front seven. The chemistry and attitude are gone. That puts pressure on us early and the first four games will be critical in developing our defense."

The bright spots include two newcomers — defensive tackle Guy Teafatiller, one of the top junior college linemen in the nation, and linebacker Jeff Martin, a leading prep player who was No. 1 on White's recruiting list.

If defensive coordinator Max McCartney can quickly rebuild that unit, White said the Illini again could be a contender in the conference.

NL East's romantic battle turns to ugly beanball

Associated Press

When the Mets and the Cubs start throwing baseballs at each other, you know the pennant race is for real.

The romantic battle between the National League East's Cinderella teams turned ugly Tuesday as the Cubs swept a doubleheader from their nearest pursuers.

First game loser Ron Darling hit Dave Owen with a pitch that drew warnings from the umpires, and second game loser Ed Lynch hit Keith Moreland, who had slugged a three-run homer in the opener, with a pitch that cleared both benches.

Chicago's Scott Sanderson was ejected from the second game after plunking Kelvin Chapman.

A six-run fifth inning helped the Cubs to an 8-6 victory in the opening game. A five-run fourth powered them to an 8-4 decision in the second.

The Cubs have now won five straight and 11 of 13. They opened a 3½-game lead over the Mets, from whom they have taken 8 of 11 games this year.

"I wasn't trying to hit him (Moreland)," said Lynch. "It was a fast ball in off the plate and he was leaning over. I was trying to set the tone for the at-bat. I can understand his feelings. He's a competitor and so am I."

"They're swinging some hot bats and we have one of the best pitching staffs in the league," added Mets Manager Dave Johnson, "and they roughed us up. Even their shock troops.

"I don't think it's flagrant to hit someone in the leg when you're getting roughed up."

Moreland merely wanted to make himself understood to Lynch.

"I have no hard feelings, I didn't want to hurt anybody," said Moreland. "I just wanted to get my point across that I don't like being thrown at."

After Lynch hit Moreland, the umpires issued both teams warnings. Sanderson then hit Chapman and he and Cubs Manager Jim Frey were shown the door.

"We did what we had to do under the circumstances," Frey said, "and the umpires had to do what they did to get things under control."

Tim Stoddard, 8-4, relieved after Sanderson's ejection and was credited with the victory in the second game. Lee Smith gained his 25th save.

The Cubs took a 5-0 lead in the fourth inning. Sanderson's single, second baseman Wally Backman's bases-loaded error, Thad Bosley's sacrifice fly and Ron Cey's two-run double accounted for the scoring.

The Mets made it 5-2 with two unearned runs in the fifth on Rusty Staub's sacrifice fly and Backman's single. Rafael Santana's two-run single in the sixth narrowed the gap to 5-4.

Cey's RBI single in the bottom of the sixth made it 6-4. Bosley's double and Smith's single in the eighth gave the Cubs their final runs.

Rick Sutcliffe, 9-1, was the winner in the first game and George Frazier picked up his second save as he retired the final seven batters.

George Foster put the Mets ahead with a two-run homer, his 15th, in the second inning. The Cubs tied it in their half of the inning with two runs, including Leon Durham's 16th homer.

Keith Hernandez's two-run double in the third put the Mets up 4-2.

Six fifth-inning runs gave the Cubs an 8-4 lead. Moreland's three-run shot complemented Cey's two-run homer. Bob Dernier's suicide squeeze single drove home the inning's final run.

The Mets added two runs in the seventh on doubles by Backman and Mookie Wilson and a single by Hernandez.

National League

Phillies 6-2, Expos 2-3

Dan Driessen doubled home one run and singled home the game-winner in the bottom of the eighth to help the Expos salvage a split. In the opener, Juan Samuel stroked an inside-the-park homer and Mike Schmidt hit one out in a four-run third inning.

The Expos entered the eighth inning of the nightcap trailing 2-1 but tied it on Gary Carter's single before Driessen drove Mike Stenhouse home to break the Expos' four-game losing streak.

Bobby Ramos hit his first major league homer in nearly two years in the first game.

Reds 8, Padres 7

The Reds rallied from 4-0 and 6-4 deficits to win. Nick Esasky's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth inning scored Dave Parker with the winning run.

Dave Concepcion led off the seventh inning with his first home run since April 27 to give the Reds their first lead of the game, 7-6. Tony Gwynn's single tied the game 7-7 in the top of the ninth, but reliever Greg Harris, 0-2, came in and the game was quickly untied.

The Padres scored four early runs off Andy McGaffigan, making his first start for Cincinnati. The Reds scored four times off Ed Whitson in the fifth, keyed by Parker's 10th homer.

Dodgers 2, Braves 1

A two-out single by Steve Yeager in the 11th inning scored Terry Whitfield from second base, after Ken Landreaux tied the game with a two-out, ninth-inning homer.

Landreaux's shot ruined a two-hit shutout bid by Pascual Perez. Donnie Moore, 2-3, came on in extra innings to get the loss. Ken Howell, 2-2, picked up the victory.

Cardinals 2, Pirates 1

Danny Cox allowed only three hits over seven innings and Terry Pendleton's sixth-inning triple drove in the winning run.

The victory was the 10th by St. Louis over the Pirates in 11 tries and the third in as many decisions by Cox, 6-9, who walked only one. Bruce Sutter got the last six outs for his league-leading 30th save and his eighth against Pittsburgh this year.

Giants 9, Astros 2

Jeff Leonard went 5-for-5 with three RBI and Mike Krukow won his fifth straight game, becoming the first San Francisco pitcher to win 10 games this season. Frank Williams and Gary Lavelle finished up.

Mike Scott, 4-10, took the loss, dropping his sixth consecutive decision.

On a delayed double steal in the eighth inning, Joel Youngblood stole home for the Giants' eighth run.

Baseball's Toyota takes gold away from American inventors, 6-3

By Bruce Schoenfeld
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — The Japanese Olympic baseball team, the Toyota of what had once been strictly an American industry, held a 6-3 lead over the United States in the last of the ninth Tuesday night in the final of the Olympic baseball tournament at Dodger Stadium, taking the gold in the Olympic demonstration sport.

Katsumi Hirosawa's three-run homer in the top of the eighth off of starter John Hoover just about put the game out of reach, but the United States hadn't led since Japan scored twice in the fourth to erase a 1-0 deficit.

Starter Akimitsu Ido set the Americans down in order through two innings, striking out the side in the second. UCLA's Shane Mack hit the ball in the third inning into the left field stands, but Ido settled back into a groove and retired the side on three grounders.

The Japanese got the run back in the top of the fourth, Kozo Shoda walking and stealing second. Shoda moved to third when catcher John Marzano tried a quick pickoff attempt and second baseman Flavio Alfaro wasn't covering and scored on Yukio Arai's sharp single.

Katsumi Hirosawa then singled home Termitsu Kumano, who had walked, and the Americans — who invented this sport — were down 2-1.

After Ito got the United States in order in the fourth, Japan made it 3-1. With two out, Shoda walked for the second time and scored when Munehiko Shimada lashed a double down the left field line. John Hoover got Kumano to fly to center to end the inning.

When Cory Snyder singled to open the fifth, the sellout crowd of 55,235 turned up the volume. But Ito, a 5-9 Teikyo High grad from Wako City, Japan, got Marzano to hit a grounder up the middle, and shortstop Yoshihiko Morita turned it into a double play.

Gary Green opened the bottom of the sixth by placing a bunt to Ito's right. But the 20-year-old can field, too. He sped of the mound, grabbed the ball and made the play, then walked back on the mound and struck out Alfaro and Oddibe McDowell.

Hoover made quick work of the Japanese in the seventh, and Chris Gwynn took three quick balls from Ito. He then took two quick strikes, and watched Ito's sixth pitch of the inning miss the outside corner by less than an inch.

That brought up Will Clark, America's Slugger, just his fourth homer of the tournament away from tying the game. And, surprisingly, it was the end of Ito. With the count 2-2 on Clark, Japanese manager Reiichi Matsunaga called a team meeting on the mound, outfielders excluded, and out of the conference walked Ito and in walked Katzutomo Miyamoto, who was handed the ball and a precarious 3-1 lead.

On the first pitch, Clark grounded to the right side of the infield. As Shoda made the play, Gwynn moved to second.

Ten seeds already out of Clay tourney

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — What can you expect when 10 seeded players have already been beaten and the most attention so far has gone to a 14-year-old amateur from Argentina?

"A tough match," said Lisa Bonder, who did not want to become the third straight upset victim of young Gabriela Sabatini, a wild-card entry who scored a pair of three-set victories in her first two rounds of the U.S. Open Clay Court tennis championships.

Bonder, 18, the women's No. 3 seed from Saline, Mich., moved into today's third round at the Indianapolis Sports Center by beating England's Annabel Croft 6-1, 6-2 on Tuesday.

"Obviously, she's got something," Bonder said of Sabatini, the top-ranked junior player in the world.

"I've never seen her play before, but she doesn't have anything to lose. Playing a seeded player, which I am, she has even less to lose."

Sabatini's earlier victims included No. 10 Camille Benjamin in the first round.

Other matches scheduled today included the women's No. 1 seed Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria against Debbie Spence of Cerritos, Calif., and No. 2 Zina Garrison of Houston against Yvonne Vermaak of South Africa.

The men's top seed, Andres Gomez of Ecuador, was set for his first appearance of the tourney today in a second-round match against unseeded Blaine Willenborg of Miami Shores, Fla.

Willenborg won his first match Tuesday, beating Tim Wilkison of Asheville, N.C., 3-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Garrison, the women's runner-up a year ago, survived five double-fault serves Tuesday and beat 16-year-old Shawn Foltz 6-1, 6-3 in the second round of the $574,000 tournament.

"I've been working very hard on my ground strokes, and not so hard on my serve. You could tell that today," said Garrison, 20.

Among other matches Tuesday, women's No. 6 seed Silvia Hanika of West Germany beat Anna Ivan of Palo Alto, Calif., 6-3, 6-2; men's No. 7 seed Jose Higueras of Spain, a former champion, outlasted countryman Alberto Tous 6-1, 6-7, 6-4; No. 16 seed Libor Pimek of Czechoslovakia advanced with a 6-0, 6-1 triumph over Pedro Rebolledo of Chile; and unseeded Ricardo Acuna of Chile won 3-6, 6-2, 4-0 after Jay Lapidus of Princeton, N.J., retired because of heat exhaustion.

Iva Budarova of Czechoslovakia, the women's No. 12 seed, was upset 6-3, 6-2 by unseeded Susan Mascarin of Grosse Point Shores, Mich.

Season ticket holders must renew by Friday

From Staff Reports

Last year's season ticket holders to Midland High and Midland Lee football games have until 5 p.m. Friday to renew those seats for the 1984 season, according to Edwin Nixon, assistant athletic director.

At 8 a.m. Monday, season ticket sales will open to the general public and former season ticket holders, who have not renewed options, will lose those options for this year.

Season ticket holders are expected to increase this year in view of the fact that season ticket holders get first choice at playoff tickets and many people remember last year's long playoff ticket lines.

Season tickets for all five Midland High home games are $20 per person, including the final matchup against Lee. Five home games for Lee are also $20, not including the MHS contest. Lee fans, however, may purchase tickets to the MHS game with season ticket purchases for $5 extra.

Season tickets are being sold at a rate of $4 per game while tickets this year will cost $5 on game days.

Tickets may be purchased at the Memorial Stadium ticket office between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Season tickets will only be sold to prior season ticket holders through Friday and all season tickets will be open to the general public on Monday.

Fashion Floors steps into national play

AMARILLO— Fashion Floors men's softball team qualified for the national softball tournament with a third place finish over the weekend at the United States Slow-Pitch Softball Association tournament in Amarillo.

Fashion fashioned a 9-2 record in the tourney, which included 70 teams from the state of Texas. The double elimination tournament allowed Fashion to come back from out of the losers bracket after a loss in their second game Saturday.

Fashion Floors won eight straight before falling Sunday afternoon to Wichita Falls, 11-1.

Red Fox Athletic Wear of Cedar Hill won the title. The win qualifies the top four finishers for the national tournament Labor Day Weekend in Lafayette, La.

Fashion was awarded the sportsmanship trophy, given by the tourney umpires.

Fashion Floors finished their season in the Midland Softball Association with a fourth-place finish. Courthouse Spa and Schumann Engineering of Midland also participated

Budd diary on hold after British team rule

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Zola Budd has run afoul of a British team rule, but officials say her eligibility for the Summer Games won't be compromised as long as a London newspaper stops publishing the South African-born teen-ager's Olympic diary.

British Olympic Association officials said their rules prohibit team members from acting as journalists "for gain," and Budd's reports, published in The Daily Mail, violated that rule.

"The diary will no longer be published," BOA spokesman Bob Ferrier said Tuesday. "That, in effect, is the end of the matter."

However, BOA Chairman Charles Palmer warned, "If the Zola Budd diary appears, saying Zola Budd did so and so, then she is out of the Games."

Budd, 18, took advantage of her grandfather's English birth earlier this year to become a British subject herself and qualify for the Olympics. The slender, barefoot runner holds unofficial world junior records at distances ranging from 1,500 meters to 5,000 meters and drew attention earlier this year by running about seven seconds faster than American Mary Decker's 5,000-meter world record of 15 minutes, 8.26 seconds.

Budd's time is not recognized as a record because of International Amateur Athleteic Federation sanctions against South Africa for its racial separation policies.

The Daily Mail paid for the Budd family's move to England in exchange for almost exclusive access to the runner.

The first edition of Tuesday's Daily Mail carried a six-line item about Budd entitled, "Zola Budd's Diary."

"Zola Budd runs in the qualifying round of the 3,000 meters in Los Angeles today," the story said. "She has gone into intensive preparation for the race and for the final on Friday. She is keeping her diary and it will appear in the Daily Mail after the final is over."

Budd was seen in the Olympic Village Tuesday, but she avoids reporters and the press interview area.

Britain also requires Olympic team members to get advance approval if they plan to act as journalists without pay, Ferrier said.

Other teams have no such rules. The United States, for example, allowed marathoner Julie Isphording and swimmer Jesse Vassallo to file Olympic reports to U.S. newspapers and magazines without any sanctions.

Palmer told the British Broadcasting Corp. that he settled the matter Tuesday in a meeting with Sir David English, editor of The Daily Mail.

"We became aware ... that Zola had ostensibly written a Zola Budd Diary. This is in breach of the rules that are laid on all the competitors," Palmer told the BBC.

AWOL veterans absent from NFL training camps

Associated Press

The contract talks between the Pittsburgh Steelers and veteran rushing back Franco Harris have been as silent as an automobile without gasoline in recent days.

With the start of the National Football League season less than three weeks away, Harris heads a list of unhappy veterans absent from their club's preseason training camps. In Indianapolis, fans of the Colts will see the team makes its NFL debut in its new home Saturday without the club's two top draft picks, cornerback Leonard Coleman and offensive lineman Ron Solt.

While most NFL players toil under the summer sun with dreams of sugar plums and Super Bowl appearances, Harris' agent is saying the 13-year veteran may put off chasing Jim Brown's career rushing record for another season.

"It is not inconceivable he would sit out," said agent Bart Beier, who says the two sides haven't discussed a contract for two weeks.

Harris, 34, is just 362 yards shy of Brown's record. He's in the option year of a three-year contract that would pay him $385,000, but reportedly wants a deal that would include the 1985 season with a huge pay increase for this year.

"I think the Steelers assumed he would not hold out," Beier said, adding that he is willing to negotiate 24 hours a day to end the holdout.

Other veterans AWOL and facing fines of $500-$1,000 per day include All-Pro tight end Todd Christensen of the Los Angeles Raiders and All-Pro defensive tackle Randy White of Dallas. The New York Jets are without wide receiver Wesley Walker, while the Detroit Lions have five holdouts.

One of the Detroit holdouts, defensive tackle Mike Dawson, may be reconsidering his decision. Coach Monte Clark said he has found strong replacements for Dawson, a free agent, and doesn't care if he rejoins the club.

The other missing Lions are middle linebacker Ken Fantetti, fullback Horace King, center Amos Fowler and wide receiver Leonard Thompson.

Also missing are defensive end Fred Dean of San Francisco, linebacker Thomas Howard of Kansas City, veteran defenders Doug Martin and Brad Van Pelt of Minnesota, tight end Junior Miller of Atlanta and kick returner Leon Bright of the New York Giants.

Howard, the Chiefs' starting linebacker the past six years, is home in Lubbock, Texas and Chiefs' spokesman Gary Heise says the effort to sign the 7-year-veteran is not "intense."

Martin, who led the Vikings in sacks for the third straight year last season, has not come to camp and reportedly is being wooed by the Philadelphia Stars and New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League.

"If I wanted to play in the USFL, I could have signed with them long ago," said Martin from his home in Seattle.

"Maybe (General Manager) Mike (Lynn), my agent (Howard Slusher) and myself can meet at some neutral spot and get the contract worked out. This has dragged on too long," he said.

Van Pelt, traded to Minnesota by the Giants last month, has asked to be traded to a city where he could have better business opportunities. But Lynn says he won't trade the 11-year veteran or exercise a contingency in the trade that would allows the Vikings to return Van Pelt to New York in exchange for two draft picks.

The absence of Christensen, who is seeking to renegotiate his contract for the second consecutive year, has surprised Coach Tom Flores.

"Obviously, Todd feels very strongly about what he's doing and that he'll get results this way," said Flores. "I have to disagree with that."

White reportedly wants the Cowboys to match the $800,000 contract the Jets gave Mark Gastineau. White, who had 67 individual stops and 33 assists last season, is in the option year of his contract.

"At this point White's holdout is not having any affect on the team," Cowboys spokesman Doug Todd said Monday.

Ovett future shrouded in mystery

By Wayne Lockwood
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — The cloud hanging over the Olympic future of British middle-distance runner Steve Ovett probably is not smog.

What it is, however, remains a mystery.

Ovett Tuesday underwent a battery of tests at Los Angeles' Orthopaedic Hospital to determine possible causes for the pulmonary problems which have troubled him for more than six weeks.

OVETT WAS hospitalized Monday night after finishing last in the men's 800-meter race. The defending Olympic champion in that event, Ovett walked across the finish line more than nine seconds behind winner Joaquim Cruz of Brazil.

"You all saw his performance," said Dr. Richard Greenspun, chief medical officer for the track and field venue.

"Following that, he nearly collapsed. He was taken to the sports medicine complex, where he vomited.

"He was found to be mildly dehydrated, but otherwise his vital signs were good. We felt that he was probably hyperventilating and had him hospitalized for testing and evaluation."

That evaluation will not be completed until this morning (Wednesday), at which time Ovett and the medical staff of the British Olympic team will determine whether or not he will attempt to compete in the 1,500-meter race Thursday. Ovett holds the world record at that distance.

"He would like to run," said Greenspun. "He's very determined about it.

"But he's also realistic about it. If he feels his health is in danger, he won't run."

Ovett is under the care of Dr. Steven Simons, a specialist in pulmonary disease at Orthopaedic Hospital.

"Clinically, he's doing fine,'g said Simons.

" "The business at hand is sorting out what's gone on and what the ideology of his problems is."

Neither Greenspun nor Simons believes those problems are traceable to Los Angeles smog.

"Approximately six weeks ago, while still in England, Steve developed a bronchitis, associated with a wheezing in his chest," said Greenspun.

"HE SAYS that since that time he has not felt the same. He has felt weak. He feels his competition has been affected.

"Approximately three weeks ago, he started developing some mild chest pains. Approximately four days ago, he began having numbness around his mouth, numbness and tingling in his fingertips and some light-headedness."

Although Ovett has no history of asthma, he was diagnosed as suffering mild asthmatic symptoms and has been taking Intal, an asthma-preventive medication approved by the International Olympic Committee.

"The issue is whether he developed a mild form of asthma at the time he was suffering bronchitis six weeks ago," said Simons.

"There had been a substantial amount of dust in his home, which was being remodeled. He suffered a fair amount of dust inhalaton."

Whatever the basis for Ovett's symptoms, they appear to grow worse before competition.

"The symptoms he's been having in warmups, prior to competition, are suggestive of hyperventilation," said Simons.

Tears flow from V-ballers

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — In the end there were tears, bitter tears born of defeat.

The U.S. women's volleyball team walked off the floor at the Long Beach Arena in small groups of two and three, hugging, embracing and crying.

The years of effort were over. The investment of time and energy in the pursuit of Olympic gold had come to an abrupt conclusion Tuesday night. The dream was shattered by China, 16-14, 15-3 and 15-9, and the disappointment was simply too much for some of the American players.

So they cried.

They cried for winning only a silver medal. They cried for losing the Olympic finale to the world champion Chinese squad, a team so finely tuned that it seemed to anticipate the Americans' every move and counter it immediately.

They cried in vain.

These American women have nothing to be ashamed about. They should hold their heads high. They accomplished something the United States has never managed before, an Olympic volleyball medal. The fact that it is silver instead of gold should not diminish the achievement one bit.

They should heed instead the words of their guru, Coach Arie Selinger, the demanding, driving architect of this team.

"I don't think the team should be sad," he said. "It accomplished a lot. They have won the first Olympic medal ever in the sport for the USA. That is something they cannot take away."

The tears were for the dream, the dream that Selinger had sold this team. He had worked them tirelessly, year-round, convincing them that the effort was necessary for Olympic success. He held them together through the boycott of 1980, retaining seven members of that team who put their lives on hold and devoted themselves to volleyball for four more years in quest of the Olympics.

Now the quest is over. Now they are free of Selinger's discipline, of the deep-seated eyes, the hollow cheeks, the glare that demanded more of them, more every time they stepped on the court.

Most of these women will leave volleyball behind and move on to the rest of their lives. It will not be done easily. Flo Hyman is 30. She has been a member of the U.S. squad for 11 years. Four of her teammates — Laurie Flachmeier, Sue Woodstra, Carolyn Becker and Debbie Green — have been at this for Uncle Sam for seven years. Julie Vollertsen is a six-year veteran of Selinger's 10-year program. You put that much time into something and it is tough to turn your back and walk blithely away from it.

To their credit, these American women did not leave easily. Trailing in the first set 14-9, one point away from losing, they battled back to tie the set. Then came a crucial mistake. Hou Yuzhu served and Paula Weishoff, thinking the ball was out of bounds, let it fall to the court. It was like taking a called third strike in the bottom of the ninth inning with the bases loaded. Lang Ping drilled the next point and China was ahead.

Blocking brilliantly, the Chinese completely controlled the second set and won 15-3. Now the Americans were faced with winning three straight sets, no simple task. But the way they played, you'd have thought they were ahead.

Gold medal better than national crown for Miller

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Cheryl Miller, the architect of the first American gold medal in women's basketball, was speechless — for a few brief, emotional moments.

"Right now, I'm at a loss for words. This is definitely 10 times better than winning a national (collegiate) championship," said Miller Tuesday night after her all-around play led an 85-55 rout of silver medalist South Korea.

Asked about playing the absent Soviet Union, Miller said, "I'd love to. There's no doubt in my mind it would have been a good game. I don't think anybody in the world could beat us."

Miller said her next goal is to help the University of Southern California win two more NCAA titles, but added: "I doubt if anything is ever going to top this. I've achieved my ultimate goal."

Seung-Youn Cho, South Korea's coach, said the Americans would have won the gold even if the Soviet Union had not boycotted the Games.

"Even if the Soviets had come," he said, "the U.S. would still have a big advantage. Their level of play and technique is the same, but the U.S. would have had the homecourt advantage. This is very important. The support of the spectators makes a big advantage."

Cho said the Americans' size was too much. "We tried to box them out, but it just didn't work,"" he said.

The American players erupted with glee when the final buzzer sounded. They hoisted their coach, Pat Head Summitt, skyward.

The U.S. players carried Summitt around the arena floor. From a prone position, the beaming coach her index fingers aloft, signifying the championship moment.

Summitt experienced the thrill of a silver medal as a player in the 1976 Olympics. Eight years later, it's a golden-edged championship.

"It's a different feeling," she said. "It definitely has to be the highlight in comparing it to the silver medal. I was proud as a player. As a coach, I'm just as proud."

The Forum crowd of 11,280 went wild when the Americans paraded two-abreast onto the floor for the medals ceremonies. Amidst a standing ovation, they chanted "USA, USA, USA" and waved small and large flags.

The most emotional moments for the American players came during the playing of the national anthem.

Miller closed her eyes and pursed her lips. Tears streamed down the cheeks of her Southern California teammate, Pam McGee. Kim Mulkey's eyes glistened with moisture.

"This is a dream come true. It's wonderful to be going out on top," said Mulkey, the little playmaker out of Louisiana Tech.

With Miller scoring 16 points, 11 rebounds and five assists, the United States hammered away inside for layups and forced South Korea to shoot outside.

The unbeaten United States, posting its second triumph over South Korea in six days, outscored the losers 16-2 in five minutes for a 28-14 lead in the opening half.

And, in typical fashion, seven different U.S. women scored in the streak. Only Anne Donovan, one of four 1980 Olympians on this team, scored two baskets in the spurt.

The American women, working inside against the 2-3 South Korean zone, often got two, three and four shots in a single possession.

Meanwhile, the United States used its intimidating man-to-man defense to force South Korea to shoot from long range. The losers frequently fired from 20 to 30 feet.

And only Hwa-Soon Kim, the tournament's leading scorer who had 15 points for a six-game total of 101, and Aei-Young Choi, with a team-leading 20 points, could hit with any consistency.

Janice Lawrence, a 6-foot-3 center who led Louisiana Tech to two national women's titles, used her quickness and jumping ability for 14 points, all from close range.

Substitute Cindy Noble, a 6-5 product of Tennessee, contributed 10.

The Americans, who came into the game winning by an average margin of 33 points, swept into a 42-27 halftime lead with Lawrence's 10 points leading the way.

In the second half, it was just a matter of how big the final margin would be, sending South Korean home from its first Olympic basketball competition with a 4-2 record.

When the South Koreans called a timeout with 13:38 left, and the score 58-38, the crowd roared its approval. The fans waved American flags and chanted, "USA, USA, USA."

Meanwhile, the bronze medal went to China, which defeated Canada 63-57 in the first game Tuesday night.

Song Xiaobo paced the Chinese with 16 points while Xiu Lijuan had 13, Li Xiaoqin 11 and Cong Xuedi 10.

Avenging a 66-61 preliminary-round loss to Canada last week, the Chinese built a 37-29 halftime lead and then withstood several Canadian rallies in the second half.

It was the first time the Chinese had participated in the Olympic women's basketball tournament. Canada finished last in 1976, but boycotted the 1980 Moscow Games.

China finished 3-3 in this tournament while Canada was 2-4.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Weekend exerciser needs more calories

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a moderately sedentary job but I make up for it on weekends with a few hours of really strenous racquetball. Should my diet be different on weekends than it is during the week? My weight is not a problem. — Craig, Washington, D.C.

Dear Craig: Strenous exercise such as you engage in probably has some effect on your calorie requirements but does not affect your need for other nutrients such as vitamins, minerals, and protein. A weekend athlete who engages in strenuous exerice may require as much as a thousand additional calories, but this should not carry over into the work week when your activity level is significantly diminished.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I brown-bag it to work every day, and I'm pretty much limited to carrying sandwiches. My standard lunch for years has been a cheese sandwich and a thermos of coffee. When I'm home on weekends, I'll eat cottage cheese, but you can't very easily make a sandwich of cottage cheese. Are there any cheeses that can be sliced and used in sandwiches that are low in fat? — Phil, Lansing, Mich.

Dear Phil: Hard cheeses generally have a high-fat content, a much as 40 percent by weight. Some, however, are made from part-skim milk and have about one-half as much fat as the others. These include Parmesan and part-skim milk Mozzarella. Of course their fat content is still higher than that of cottage cheese or farmer cheese.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter had been losing weight and losing weight until finally I got her to a doctor whom she trusted and was willing to listen to. He told us that if we had waited much longer, she would have been considered to have anorexia and treatment would have been much more complicated. I suppose that with any disease, the earlier you find out about it, the sooner you can do somethig about it. This is one lesson I won't forget. — Mrs. J.N., Moline, Ill.

Dear Mrs. N.: Anorexia nervosa is a difficult condition to treat since at this stage patients are completely preoccupied with thoughts of food and their bodily perception is distorted. Even extremely thin anorexic patients often feel that their bodies are too thick. Treatment is much easier if it can be instituted before the patient reaches this extreme state. The problem is that many people diet, and weight loss in itself often doesn't raise a red flag.

One clue to the development of anoxreia is the cessation of the menustrual period. This often happens before the patient has lost a great deal of weight and may alert physicians and parents to the need to intervene.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father was on aspirin for treatment of his arthritis for a few months, but he now tells me that his doctor has changed him to a prescription drug. Would you have any idea why? — Terry, Hartford, Conn.

Dear Terry: Obviously I cannot respond specifically to your question; however, I can speculate that the dosage of aspirin your father required for his condition may have produced adverse side effects that prompted the switch to another type of medication.

Some patients who have arthritis may require as many as 20 aspirin tablets a day before they can experience effective relief. Doses of this magnitude may result in stomach irritation and gastrointestinal bleeding. Other possible side effects of aspirin therapy include a ringing in the ears and some hearing loss. If your father experienced any of these side effects, his physician may have concluded that they outweighed any possible beneficial effects of the treatment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have two questions about asthma. First, is it inherited? And second, does it make any difference to a child who has asthma if one or both of the parents smoke? — Mr. W.S., Charlottesville, Va.

Dear Mr. S.: There is no hard evidence that asthma is inherited, but it does seem to run in families. If the parents had asthma, a child is more likely to develop it.

As for your second question, breathing the smoke from someone else's cigarette can trigger an attack of asthma. Parents of children with asthma who don't care enough about their own health to stop smoking should consider stopping for their children's sake.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine who now lives out of town and is in the police force there mentioned to me that he and his fellow officers sometimes have urine tests to see if they use marijuana. He says he doesn't use the stuff but he's afraid tht the test may give a false result. Is this a possibility? — Andrew, Port Arthur, Texas

Dear Andrew: The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta report that urine tests will detect the use of marijuana about 95 percent of the time; however, there is a four percent false-positive rate because of individual differences. The test does not show when the marijuana was used or the amount used.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Will you please explain the difference between primary and secondary amenorrhea? — Melba, Atlanta

Dear Melba: Amenorrhea refers to the absence of vaginal bleeding. Primary amenorrhea means that there has been no previous vaginal bleeding; in secondary amenorrhea, there has been spontaneous menstrual bleeding, but it has stopped.

For Mrs. T.M., San Antonio, Texas: Gestational diabetes is diabetes that develops during a pregnancy but disappears when the pregnancy ends. Obesity and a maternal age of more than 30 years are among the risk factors for the condition.

For Mrs. E.L., White Plains, N.Y.: Intolerance to milk does not have to be an all-or-nothing affair. Some individuals who are intolerant to larger quantities of milk find they are able to consume a small amount without developing any symptoms.

Surgeon would do free cataract surgery

FLORENCE, Ky. (AP) — Nobel peace prize-winner Mother Teresa of Calcutta canceled a scheduled eye operation so she could donate the money to the poor, but an ophthalmologist says he'll perform the cataract surgery for free.

Mother Teresa

Mother Teresa was scheduled to enter a Pittsburgh hospital this week, but said she didn't need surgery and would rather donate the money to poor people.

The ophthalmologist, Richard D. Levin, said he doesn't know where to reach Mother Teresa, but that he is willing to do the surgery for free, and two friends he would not identify have volunteered to provide the air fare.

Levin says he's not looking for publicity. "I don't think we'll get a lot of people from India," he said.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A spokesman for Frank Sinatra is dismissing statements that the singer was an "obnoxious bully" at a casino blackjack table as a "smokescreen."

What state Casino Commissioner Joel Jacobson really wanted when he launched the attack on Sinatra was to win support for a proposal to license entertainers in gaming halls, said Sinatra spokesman Lee Solters in Los Angeles, interviewed by telephone Tuesday.

Top entertainers then would have to submit to fingerprinting and background checks to work in Atlantic City casinos.

Solters said the casino commissioner wanted to grab headlines and exaggerated the involvement of Sinatra and Dean Martin in an illegally dealt blackjack game.

Jacobson was not in his office Tuesday, and his secretary said he was not available for comment.

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles is paying a visit to remote jungle provinces and plans to ride in a traditional war canoe.

The prince flew to Popondetta on the east coast today for the two-day visit. He was scheduled to visit Wewak in the East Sepik and then fly to Manus Island where he will be installed as a paramount chief and review a canoe regatta from an island war canoe.

He departs for London on Friday.

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Some of his friends are observing Smokey Bear's 40th birthday today, with this northern Arizona city celebrating with a parade, party and bear-shaped balloons.

Smokey will join Mayor Robert L. Moody, the grand marshal, in a parade. Afterward, there's a birthday party in honor of the bear who warns, "Only you can help prevent forest fires."

A balloon company planned to hand out bear-shaped balloons as the city, nestled in high-timber country, celebrates Smokey Bear Day.

Smoky, the character devised by the U.S. Forest Service for its campaign against forest fires, is 40 years old this year.

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Most people might find it annoying to answer the phone and find it just a wrong number, but Fred Mannion figures he's providing a national service for U.S. Sen. Warren Rudman.

Mannion, 69, a retired subway motorman, has a telephone number identical to that of the Washington office of Rudman, a New Hampshire Republican, except for a single digit difference in the area code.

So when callers dial 212, instead of 202, they get Mannion at his home in the New York City borough of Queens.

The Washington-bound calls come every 10 days or so, Mannion said Tuesday.

"I don't mind. He's one of our representatives and I respect that," Mannion said. "I figure I'm helping the country."

Besides, Mannion said, he has met some nice people on the phone. "Hey, the other night I got a guy from CBS, a nice, cultured fellow."

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Would-be space shuttle astronauts are being asked to live on a survival-training menu featuring delicacies such as grasshoppers, ants, earthworms and rabbit eyes.

Seventeen astronaut candidates began a rigorous training program Tuesday that was to end with a 48-hour foray into the wilderness of northeast Washington state, said Lt. John Boyle, spokesman for the Air Force's survival training school.

The students from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will learn how to build a shelter, start a fire, use a compass, find water and scrounge for food — skills they would need to survive if their T-38 jet trainers ever crashed in a remote area.

CELIGNY, Switzerland (AP) — Richard Burton, a Welsh flag covering his coffin, will be buried in a cemetary plot he bought here years ago, says a friend, and not in his native Wales as his family had hoped.

A brother of the actor said Tuesday that the family wished the burial would be in Ponthrydfen, Wales, where the actor was born Richard Jenkins 58 years ago, the 12th of 13 children of a coal miner. Burton's sister, Hilda Owen, said Sunday that her brother wanted to be buried in his native village.

However, Edouard Koessler, a banker whose wife is mayor here, said of Burton's purchase of a cemetery plot in Celigny: "I believe this proves that he wanted to be enterred here. He bought the concession at our village cemetery several years ago, paying 1,000 francs ($412) like everybody else who wants to be buried here."

Koessler said a Welsh flag will cover the coffin during the funeral Thursday at the 400-year-old village church in Celigny, which overlooks Lake Geneva.

Burton, whose heavy drinking and love affair with Elizabeth Taylor at times eclipsed attention paid to his superb stage acting, died from a brain hemorrhage Sunday in a Geneva hospital after becoming ill at his villa in Celigny.

At Heathrow airport, Mrs. Owen said she hoped Miss Taylor will stay away from the funeral "for Sally's sake," referring to Burton's widow, Sally Hay. Miss Taylor, who twice married Burton, has not announced whether she will attend the funeral.

HINDMAN, Ky. (AP) — Rep. Carl D. Perkins, who left the hills of Kentucky to serve in the halls of Congress for 36 years, was buried on a slope overlooking his clapboard farmhouse after being eulogized as "one of the few true giants in these times."

About 3,000 people packed a gymnasium Tuesday at Knott County High School to pay their respects to the Kentucky Democrat, who died Friday in Lexington. He was 71 and had represented the state's 7th District since 1948.

Six helicopters and three buses ferried 100 of Perkins' congressional colleagues to the service, while local officials and constituents traveled from the surrounding hills by car.

House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., told the mourners that Perkins had "an effervescent smile, a friendly manner about him, a quiet demeanor. He had a will of iron."

In addition to O'Neill and House Majority leader James Wright, the Capitol Hill entourage included Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Sens. Wendell Ford and Walter "Dee" Huddleston of Kentucky.

Gov. Martha Layne Collins, former Govs. John Y. Brown Jr., Julian Carroll, Bert Combs and Ned Breathitt also attended. The crowd included officials from every county and nearly every city in the eastern Kentucky district.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Roland Kibbee, a writer who won three Emmys in a career that spanned radio, feature films and television, died Sunday of cancer at the age of 70.

Kibbee began his career writing for radio on "The Grouch Club." He wrote for the movies, "A Night in Casablanca," "Angel on My Shoulder," "The Devil's Disciple," and "Valdez Is Coming." For television, Kibbee wrote and produced "The Bob Cummings Show," "The Virginian," "The Alfred Hitchcock Hour" and "The Family Holvak."

Vail's fishing pole 'one that got away'

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — A controversial proposal to erect a sculpture of a 60-foot-tall fishing pole in this posh mountain resort died a quiet death when the Town Council sided with the sculptor, who wanted to end the project.

The council's 4-3 vote Tuesday night ended a year of squabbles that began when avant garde sculptor Claes Oldenburg unveiled a model of the pole, with cable for fishing line and a 55-gallon "tin can" dangling in pristine Gore Creek.

Oldenburg wanted the sculpture painted orange and located near the gondola ski lift in west Vail.

However, the proposal sparked an often emotional debate about what's art and what's not among the community's 2,200 residents.

Last August, the Town Council endorsed the concept of the sculpture but voted to end taxpayer funding of the project and handed over a $50,000 National Endowment of the Arts grant to a private citizens group heading a fund drive.

Although the town controlled two-thirds of the land on the proposed sculpture site, the council voted last month to let the remaining property owners decide if they would approve changes in the area's protective covenants to allow the sculpture.

'Ice cream man is coming!'

CLUTE, Texas (AP) — The street is deserted. Sun glints off the chrome spokes of bicycles overturned in yards. Doors are closed, forming an air-conditioned barrier against the scorching heat.

Suddenly, the strains of "The Entertainer" break the mid-afternoon silence. Doors open, children race across hot sidewalks, clutching money in their hands.

In the words of comedian Eddie Murphy, "The ice-cream man is coming! The ice-cream man is coming! Ice cream! Ice cream!" It's a summer tradition buying frosty treats from the ice cream truck as it wends its way through neighborhoods.

And it's a tradition in no danger of fading away. The ice cream truck continues to work its magic today, drawing children like a modern-day Pied Piper.

In Clute, the holder of "the best job in town" is Pauline Mitchell, who got her first taste of the ice-cream business 10 years ago.

"My daughter was very young and I wanted a job I thought I could fit in without needing a baby sitter," she said. "I enjoyed it, but it wasn't what I needed at that time."

So she went into the fast-food business as a restaurant manager in New Jersey.

"My husband and I...were struggling like most young people do," she said. "We were both managing fast-food restaurants and making $13,000 each. We were barely making it."

Then she talked to her brother in Houston, who worked for Southern Ice Cream.

"He told us it was dynamite in Texas for ice cream," she said. "When we came down, we couldn't believe how much more lucrative this was.

"We had planned to stay for a year and make enough money to go back to New Jersey and open a restaurant. But we love it here. I've decided I'm going to be 80 years old and still selling ice cream."

Two pig-tailed little girls stand patiently by their mailbox, waiting for the ice-cream truck to arrive.

As the bright blue truck stops, one of the girls pulls a pink plastic Strawberry Shortcake purse from her pocket. Coins clatter on the truck's aluminum counter as she dumps the contents of her wallet.

"Two fudge bars, please," the little girl says as she tiptoes to peer over the counter.

Mrs. Mitchell deftly counts the coins, puts the left-over change back in the purse and, with a smile, hands it and the ice cream to the little girl.

Although ice cream is a summer staple, summer is the least busy time of their year, Mrs. Mitchell said.

"Spring and fall are our busy times," she said. "The kids are back in school and as soon as they come home, they do their homework, then they come out for a couple of hours to play.

"Now they're inside the air-conditioned house or at the pool or at summer camp."

Not only does the heat keep potential customers indoors, but it also makes the temperature in the metal trucks skyrocket.

"That's another reason we don't sell as much ice cream in the summer," she said. "You tend to drive faster, trying to get a breeze. I know that 5 mph is the speed to sell ice cream and 15 mph is the speed to get a breeze. But some days it sure is tempting."

A little Hispanic boy runs toward the truck waving a dollar bill.

"May I help you?" Mrs. Mitchell asks.

The boy looks puzzled and points to a picture of a Popsicle painted on the side of the truck.

"Cuantas?" she asks. "Una?"

He nods. She hands him the treat and with a delighted grin, he takes it and runs toward home.

"I'll bet you never have heard such bad Spanish with an English accent, have you?" she asked. "But it's a case of my Spanish being as bad as their English so we get along fine."

Mrs. Mitchell came to the United States from England 16 years ago, but has retained her lilting British accent. She has picked up a little Spanish "mostly numbers and flavors" but language never has been much of a barrier.

"Ice cream seems to be a universal language," she said. "Some kids are still in diapers, others don't know English, but they all know what the ice-cream truck means."

The blue truck Mrs. Mitchell drives is a 1983 model, the "Cadillac of ice cream trucks," she said.

And the truck is a sure sign that the business has come a long way in four years.

When she and her husband, Charles, came to Texas, they went to work for Southern Ice Cream and each were given a route in Houston.

Because they obviously enjoyed the work, they were asked to start a satellite operation.

"What you basically need to do is find an area without an operator," she said. "This was one of the areas suggested and we came down and liked it."

They started with two trucks. Adding at least one truck each year, they have expanded their operation throughout the county.

"It's taken a lot of hard work," she said. "The first few years, it would be 40 degrees and Charles and Iwould be out selling ice cream."

Now they own seven trucks. They lease them to drivers, who buy ice cream from them but act as independent operators.

Restaurant same for 50 years

KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Orlando Underbank was no fool — he knew when he had tasted success.

Underbank was one of a group of Humble Oil Co. seismologists working along a remote stretch of coastline near the King Ranch in the 1930s and feasting nightly on magical meals prepared by Blanche Wright.

Mrs. Wright learned to cook back home in France and brought her skills with her when she married a handsome young Texan during World War I and moved to the Texas Gulf Coast.

During the Great Depression, when Humble's offshore troops needed a cook, they recruited Mrs. Wright.

Underbank loved Mrs. Wright's cooking and knew others would, too. He told her if she'd keep cooking, he'd build her a restaurant right there on that spot. She agreed and so he did.

And now, almost 50 years later, people leave the King's Inn restaurant feeling like satisfied, stuffed shrimp thanks to the good cooking of Mrs. Wright and the good taste of Orlando Underbank.

The restaurant, the same blue-frame building constructed on the shores of Loyola Beach a half-century ago, is several miles off the state highway and 23 miles from the nearest town, Kingsville.

Black-eyed Susans line the two-lane blacktop that winds past cow pastures, chicken coops and whitewashed farmhouses on the way to King's Inn.

Despite the remote location and the single, inconspicuous sign on State Highway 77, determined diners from throughout the world still turn up at the restaurant's linen-covered tables.

Faye Ware, owner of the King's Inn for 39 years, said advertising is almost exclusively by word-of-mouth.

"Oh gracious, they come from everywhere," said Mrs. Ware, 73. "I guess they just hear about the food."

No wonder. Plates from the fragrant kitchen arrive heaped with succulant fried shrimp, moist oysters in a miracle cornmeal batter, juicy drum or other seafood, sweet onion rings and thick, tangy tomatoes.

Mrs. Ware and her late husband worked in the kitchen with Mrs. Wright developing recipes until the mid-1960s when Mrs. Wright died.

One item on the Kings' Inn menu is an unadulterated Mrs. Wright original. Forget Leonardo's Mona Lisa, true artistry is Mrs. Wright's fish sauce. But don't ask what's in the peppery, yet sweet, light white sauce.

"Oh, that's a secret," Mrs. Ware said, smiling slyly. "Mrs. Wright asked that we never give it out, but people ask anyway all the time."

Meals are served family style in one of three comfortable rooms lined in greenish paneling hung with paintings by local artists and photos of Mrs. Ware's children and grandchildren.

A meal of two kinds of fish, tomatoes, french fries, salad, onion rings and beer cost about $35.

Mrs. Ware now runs the restaurant with her son, Randy.

Despite recurring rumors that the restaurant might be sold, Mrs. Ware has no such plans. She has an obligation to her customers, she said.

"We have people who have been coming in here for years and years and they count on this place to be the same," she said.

Cycle 'gang' raises funds for crippled children

TULARE, Calif. (AP) — From a distance, the group looks like a motorcycle gang. But as members of Tulare County Family Travelers approach, their luxury motorcycles, helmets and clean-cut riders become visible.

The 120-member group is a touring club that takes excursions of about 100 miles several times a year and holds fund-raisers for the Crippled Children's Society.

"I can't believe I'm 47 years old and getting on one of these things," admits Liz Norton.

Members of the 11-year-old club range in age from their early 20s to late 70s, but most are middle-aged, said president Royce Gholson.

"My boss thinks I'm crazy," said Marilyn Cantrell, who rides with her husband, True. "It's something we can do together."

Vice president Tom Baker said the club, which also draws members from Fresno and Kings counties, was "one of the best things I ever joined."

About 90 percent of the members drive Hondas, many of which are equipped with windshields, stereos, padded seats, saddlebags, and even hitches to pull tent trailers.

Some members wear matching his-and-hers shirts and vests decorated with badges and pins denoting past trips.

"People who don't understand motorcycles will say, 'Oh, you're so brave,'" said Pat Helin. "We just think it's fun."

She and her husband, Don, were so excited about the club that they joined the day after accompanying members on a camping trip.

The biggest run of the year is a day trip through Sequoia-Kings Canyon National Park on Father's Day. About 700 people went this year, with non-members riding along.

Riders are given maps marked with routes and scheduled stops for rest breaks.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ◇.

The experienced bridge player hopes for the best while preparing for the worst. That attitude saves him thousands of points every year.

South was on the borderline of a jump to game, but chose the conservative course of an invitational jump to three hearts. North rightly decided that two aces opposite a hand that jumped was a fine holding indeed, so he went on to game. Note North's decision to respond one no trump rather than show his anemic four-card spade suit—a principle we heartily endorse.

West led the queen of diamonds, and we would wager most players would lose the contract by the time they had played to the second trick. They would win the ace of diamonds and cash the ace of hearts, and now the unlucky break would mean they could not score more than nine tricks.

The experienced player would realize the hand was laydown barring a 5-0 trump break. Therefore, he would direct his energies to seeing what he could do to counter that remote possibility.

Correct technique is to win the ace of diamonds and immediately ruff a diamond. Declarer then crosses to the ace of trumps. If both defenders follow to this trick, declarer simply draws trumps and claims his 10 tricks.

However, when West shows out on the first trump lead declarer is still in position to make his contract. He uses his second entry to dummy to ruff another diamond. Now declarer needs just one little slice of luck to bring home his contract—East must hold at least two spades and one club. When those three black-suit winners live, declarer has 10 tricks—four trumps and two ruffs, two spades and the minor-suit aces.

Separate jail cells for juveniles to be required

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

As of Dec. 8, 1985, counties holding juveniles in adult jails will be violating federal law and in danger of losing federal funding.

Midland County — one still bucking the trend toward separate facilities for prisoners 10-17 years old — has no maximum security cells at the Culver Youth Home.

Cells at the city and county jails have been set aside for temporary detention, with the under-aged inmates usually transferred to the youth home or the state juvenile facility for any long-term incarceration.

Under the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act, states will be expected by next December to comply with requirements that:

— "Status offenders," runaways or truants who would not be breaking the law if they were adults, be kept out of secure correction facilities. Currently, juveniles arrested by police are held temporarily in the city jail, while sheriff's deputies take them directly to the youth home, explained Adolfo Salcido, assistant chief probation officer for Midland County.

— "Sight and sound separation" from adult inmates and standard jailers be accomplished. While juveniles held in Midland jails are segregated from the regular jail population, Salcido said jailers and trustys (inmates entrusted to do jail chores) do come in contact with the temporary detainees.

— Juveniles not be held in adult jails at all after Dec. 8, 1985. (These regulations make exceptions in cases when the offense is of a serious or violent nature, when the area has too low a population density to justify a separate facility or when there is no alternative to putting the juvenile in the adult facility — but only for 48 hours.)

While Midland County has not progressed past the talking stage with plans to add security cells for juveniles as the deadline approaches, Ector County has had a separate juvenile center for 10 years.

"We're about 10 years ahead of the game," noted Danny Vanderburg, Chief Administrative Officer of the Ector County Juvenile Probation Department, "Everyone all over Texas is scrambling to build juvenile centers."

This 20-room center, which originally accepted out-of-county transfers (including some from Midland), has been expanded beyond detention to include rehabilitation and education programs under the same roof.

A model used by cities such as Lubbock, Tyler, Beaumont and Abilene which followed the trend toward protection of juvenile rights, discussion has begun of expanding it to a regional facility. Fort Stockton is constructing a multi-county center to bring the surrounding rural region into compliance.

One advantage of a local facility with the security cells is that the youth needing more than the standard 10-day stay (after which another detention hearing must be called), can serve the time locally.

Vanderburg pointed out the use of available local agencies keeps costs of detention down. From 1975-80, Ector County handled every local juvenile, rather than transferring any to the Texas Youth Center.

"Community-based rehabilitation is much better," said Vanderburg. "We deal sometimes as much with the parents as with the juvenile."

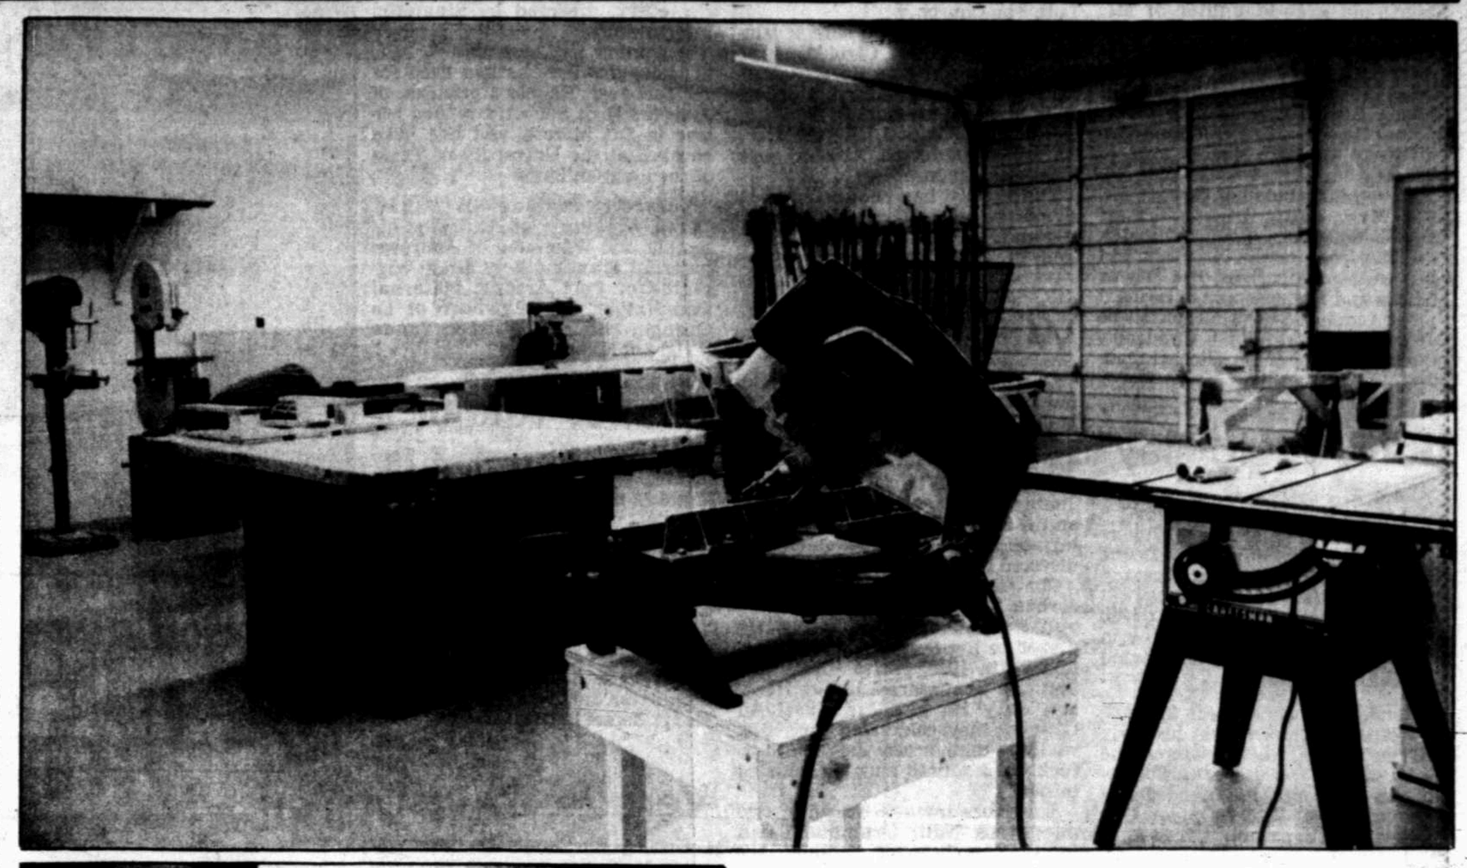
Working with the school district, the center provides schooling for detainees, who can be held until their 18th birthday. "Problem students" from the school system are bused to the Alternative Center for classes taught by special education teachers. Vocational programs are available at the facility next door.

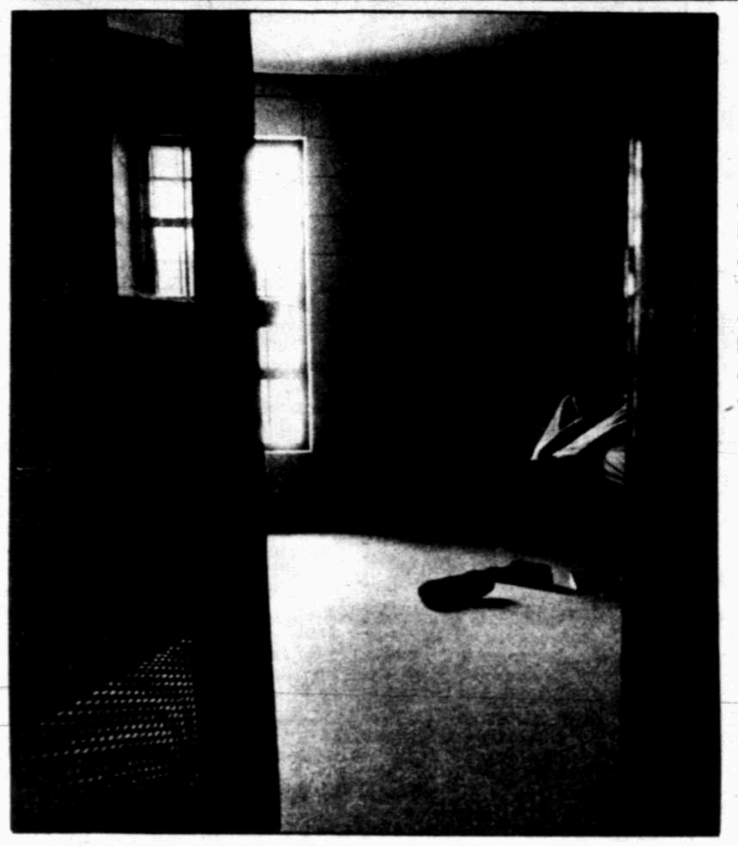
Long-term detention ends when the juveniles "earn their way out," said Vanderburg. Under a point system, the youngster progresses through four levels before qualifying for release.

Short-term detention is used like "shock probation," said Vanderburg. "Maybe that'll give them a taste of what it's like to be held in here."

While rehabilitation of Midland juveniles is dealt with by referral and detainees continue their education while at the 10-room Culver home, Salcido admitted the structured programs offered in Ector County have not been developed here.

Please see JAIL, Page 2C





Ector County juvenile offenders have been taken directly to the county's juvenile center since its opening in 1974. In addition to bringing the county in compliance with federal law, the facility offers educational programs, including Coordinated Vocational Academic Education, above, available at the center next door. The 10 rooms at the Culver Youth Home provide Midland County with a place to hold most juveniles, left. But the current practice of holding some offenders under 17 years old in city and county jails will be in violation of federal law after Dec. 8, 1985.

Need for not-for-profit nursing program researched

Gayle McComb

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Believing home health care should be available to all persons, a group of Midland professional health care workers and educators met Tuesday night to decide if there is a need for a not-for-profit visiting nurse program in this community.

Despite the establishment of five for-profit home health care agencies and organizations such as Hospice of Midland and charitable church-based groups which provide free services, home health care should be available for everyone, regardless of age, insurance and financial status, said Clara Usrey, one of the instigators of the meeting.

"Hospice takes care of people who are terminally ill from cancer but this group would see anybody and do anything at anytime," Ms. Usrey, who recently retired from the Midland College nursing program, said. Hospice of Midland, Inc., which limits its patients to those dying from their illnesses, discharged 20 of the 105 new patients during the fiscal year which ended April 30. Of the 97 patients who died, 90 had cancer, according to Hospice reports.

A visiting nurse program, such as one in Lubbock that accepts any referral for any type of procedure and takes payment on a sliding fee scale, private or federal insurance, allows nurses or health care aides to come into the home. Services range from changing a catheter to therapy to teaching a new mother how to take care of her baby.

This type of agency would be beneficial in treatment of patients dismissed from the hospital early who still need a dressing changed, to follow-up visits on patients of public and church-based health clinics, according to Betty Jackson of the Odessa College nursing program.

Sandra Haldeman, certified nurse midwife at Midland Memorial Hospital, said a hospital official estimated 50 percent of the obstetric/gynecological patients treated at MMH were either indigent, had no insurance or were considered bad debts. She cited problems in the hospital of following up on newborns when their mothers are discharged.

Priscilla Schaefer, registered nurse with the Midland City-County Health Department agreed. The health department's clinic follows up on a limited number of infants until they reach the age of two. But Ms. Schaefer said that about 50 percent of all of those visiting the clinic do not have phones, or have left town without contacting the clinic. "And we wonder why the mother doesn't bring the baby back in and then we remember the mother doesn't even have her (driver's) license," she said.

"I think the children we take care of do fairly well," she said, "but it's the multitude of those we don't see that I'm worried about."

Ms. Haldeman said she has 287 children on the southside of Midland between the ages of one and two. The health department, which works closely with MMH's midwifery program, can only accept 24-26 prenatal patients per month.

"There is no way these people could even enter the system," said Dr. Eileen Piwetz of the Midland College nursing program. "They don't even know what it is."

According to Gayle McComb, administrator of Visiting Nurse Service, Inc. of Lubbock, the agency can provide follow up care. The service was implemented in 1977 and was contested in its state application by a home health care agency.

City Council OKs tax increase

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Unless the Midland City Council changes its mind before Aug. 28, citizens will see an increase in their taxes.

In a meeting Tuesday morning at City Hall, the council voted to approve a tax increase of 7.94 percent, making the tax rate 39 cents per $100 valuation. The meeting was a formality in accordance with state law that requires the council to publicly announce its intent to raise taxes. A public hearing will be held at 10 a.m. Aug. 21 at City Hall.

City Finance Director Troy Gifford told the council the 1984 appraisal roll approved July 20 showed the tax base at $3,453,888,342, which was an increase over last year's tax base.

The effective tax rate — or the tax that would bring in the same amount of revenue as last year — would be 36.13 cents per $100 valuation, he said. The 7.94 percent increase would push the rate up to 39 cents.

Last year, the tax rate was 44 cents per $100 valuation.

Each one cent should bring in about $325,000 in revenue. Each 1 percent increase should amount to $125,000, he noted.

Mayor G. Thane Akins said the 7.94 percent increase "is a reasonable amount of revenue. We don't want a heavier burden on the taxpayer." If a 10 percent tax hike had been needed to balance the budget, he said, the council would have looked at cutting more out of it.

Even with the tax increase, Midland's tax rate stands as one of the lowest in Texas among cities its size, said the mayor.

The tax increase plus taking $1,197,920 from surplus will help the council balance next year's budget of $57 million. Akins said the $9 million surplus will be reduced to about $7 million after taking out of it for the 1983 and 1984 budgets.

The proposed budget for 1984-85 calls for revenues of $55,374,989 and expenditures of $57,268,775.

Vigil held to 'demonstrate love, caring'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Those who would make ploughshares out of swords peacefully held their weekend vigil on the outskirts of the Pantex Nuclear Weapons Assembly Plant near Amarillo.

Their immediate mission was not to shut down the plant, dismantle the nuclear weapons and convert armament into non-war uses.

Rather, it was, said Mike Gray, 32, of Midland and Kathryn Bowers, 39, of Gardendale, to raise the public "consciousness" of the nuclear weapons plant in the Panhandle — "to make the public aware that this facility exists."

The two who attended the rally said about 300 anti-nuclear "protesters" from the Southwest walked, bicycled and drove to the plant. Their vigil climaxed on Monday, which commemorated the 39th anniversary of the atom bomb dropping on Hiroshima, Japan. An estimated 118,000 people died from the heat, blast and radiation of the bomb which a United States B-29 dropped on Aug. 6, 1945.

Detonation of the bomb and that of another atom bomb three days later over Nagasaki was the Allied Forces' alternative to an invasion of Japan.

What Ms. Bowers called the "ultimate issue" is the proliferation of weapons far in excess of those needed to envelope the world in a nuclear holocaust.

Four hundred atomic and hydrogen bombs and warheads would be sufficient to "destroy all the major cities in the world," Ms. Bowers said.

By Gray's account, the United States has 30,000 nuclear weapons and Russia has 20,000.

"We're talking about overkill," he said.

Rather than just building weapons for defense and as a deterrent, the U.S. is building nuclear warheads with first-strike capabilities, Ms. Bowers noted.

Probe disputes woman's claim of dog attack

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

An internal affairs investigation disputes a woman burglary suspect's claim that police ordered one of their dogs to attack her after a break-in at a westside residence two months ago.

The woman, 26-year-old Dorothy Ward Epperson Chamblis of 2309 Brunson, remains in the county jail on burglary and forgery charges.

She claimed in a June 13 complaint to sheriff's deputies that city police ordered the dog to bite her in apparent attempt to get her to divulge the name of her accomplice.

She suffered a three-inch gash on her upper left arm that required several stitches to close and said in the complaint that she was handcuffed and on her knees when the attack took place.

"I started screaming at the officer to get the dog off of me," she added. "The officer then gave the dog a verbal command and the dog let go of me."

In written reports at the time, however, police said they received a call from a neighbor about a burglary in progress at 808 Sinclair. Officers had surrounded the house when two suspects emerged and began running east from the residence.

"Officer (Pat) Bostick released the dog which caught the second suspect," said a report by officer J. Lopez. The other suspect escaped during a foot chase.

Chief of Police Wayne Gideon said Tuesday that an internal affairs probe conducted by Sgt. Tom Hyde supports police accounts of the incident, which occurred the night of June 2.

In a witness statement taken by Hyde, a neighbor said he saw two people come out of the burglarized home and that one of them stumbled on the sidewalk about 10 to 12 feet from the front door.

"I saw a police dog there and I heard police hollering halt," the neighbor's statement continued. "I did not see the police dog attacking or bothering the subject on the ground. The dog was around her, but not bothering her."

The witness said he then went outside and "they were leading the dog to the station wagon. I never heard her holler one time, and neither did my wife."

In commenting on the investigation, Gideon said:

"There's one more witness we need to talk to, but our preliminary conclusion is that Ms. Chambliss was bitten while running from the scene of a burglary. The dog was not sicked on her."

VIGIL

Ms. Bowers said that the U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms talks halted last year after the Soviets "walked out" when the U.S. deployed nuclear warheads in Europe and within minutes of striking Russia.

"The word 'go' and one touch of a button is all it takes for the whole thing to begin," she said.

The gist of Gray's and Ms. Bowers' concern is that "there's no wise or safe use about it (nuclear weapons)."

At the gates of the Pantex plant, the vigil was marked by silent witnessing, inter-faith services and readings, by Pantex guards' taking down license-plate numbers of "protesters," and by feelings of fear more than hostility emanating from Pantex-area residents.

"We weren't even allowed to talk to the guards," Gray said.

"They (the guards) were real energetic" in collecting license-plate numbers, Ms. Bowers said.

Ms. Bowers said the fear they sensed among Americans is that they "honestly believe that if we stopped nuclear arms production,...the U.S.S.R. would bomb us and take us over.

"People honestly believe that the reason they don't bomb us is that we can bomb them back."

Gray speculated the U.S. and Russia are "just as eager" to stop building nuclear weapons and end the testing "for economic reasons if for nothing else."

The immediate aim of the peace pilgrimage, sponsored by the Red River Peace Network, is to make people aware of the nuclear weapons plants in Texas.

"This was a non-violent vigil," Ms. Bowers said. "We commited no civil disobedience. We were not there to harangue anyone. We were there to demonstrate our love and caring."

Literature published by the Red River Peace Network says, "Our nation does not need bombs; our nation needs progress in medicine, housing, jobs, agriculture, transportation, education and environmental protection."

The long-term aim of the movement is worldwide disarmament of nuclear weapons.

"People say we need nuclear weapons to be strong," Ms. Bowers said. "I say 'look at Dresden (World War II fire-bombing of Dresden, Germany), look at the destruction done to Vietnam...without nuclear weapons...

"There needs to be a multi-national halt to this insanity (nuclear proliferation)."

JAIL

"There's a lot of changes that will be coming our way" if plans go through to move the juvenile probation department into a separate juvenile center, said Salcido.

Ector County's must be better equipped, said Salcido, to handle the larger case load. Nearly twice as many juveniles were referred to the system in Ector County in 1982, 713 to 306 in Midland.

The December 1985 deadline calls for 75 percent reduction in the number of juveniles held in adult jails. The federal law calls for 100 percent compliance two years later.

Land being bought for unknown purposes

LIBERTY (AP) — In one of this quiet Southeast Texas town's biggest mysteries, it is rumored that someone is trying to buy up 70,000 acres of land for purposes unknown to county officials.

Some area landowners say they've been asked to sell both their land and their mineral rights for about $3,500 an acre, which is double or triple the lands' normal value.

"Farmers are in bad shape now because they're getting the same prices for their crops as they did back in the 1940s," said rice farmer Donald Haidusek, who has an option on parts of his land. "They see the land sale as a way of getting out of debt."

So far, officials say they are baffled about who could be behind the deal, and County Judge Dempsie Henley called the affair "the damndest mystery."

"Right now we're kind of waiting and see," Henley said. "But if the land transaction goes through, it could be good for the county. It might triple the taxes we collect by taking farmland off our tax rolls."

A spokesman for five brothers who own a large part of the land in question would only say he was approached "by a group of foreign investors" who wanted to purchase the land as a long-term investment.

Rumors offered to explain how the land will be used include: a top secret military base, an Arab-owned farm to send rice and soybeans back to the desert and a high-technology nuclear waste dump site.

But the most common speculation popping up in county talk these days is that Walt Disney Productions plans to open a new theme park.

A Walt Disney official in Burbank, however, has denied that possibility.

"The rumor's not true," said Erwin Okun, vice president of corporate communications. "We have no plans in Texas at this time."

MidTran gets grant

MidTran, Midland's bus service, Tuesday received a $306,527 grant from the Department of Transportation's Urban Mass Transit Administration.

The funds were for MidTran's operating assistance from Oct. 1, 1983, to Sept. 30, 1984.

Twelve-year-old victim of rabies dies

HOUSTON (AP) — A 12-year-old rabies victim has died after several weeks in a Houston hospital, a spokeswoman said today.

The Laotian immigrant died at 6:45 p.m. Tuesday of cardiac arrest, said the Texas Children's Hospital spokeswoman, who declined to be identified. The girl had been comatose and on life support systems for days.

Dr. Dixie Swanson, the physician who had been treating the girl, said she expressed her deepest sympathies for the girl and her family, the woman said.

Doctors have refused to release the girl's identity, other than to say she is from Laos and has been in the United States for about four years.

They have been unable to learn the source of her disease, but Houston Health Director Dr. James Haughton said he hoped to get results of tests by the end of this week which would reveal what kind of animal bit the child.

The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta was analyzing the girl's blood samples, he said.

Doctors treated the child with ribavirin, an anti-viral drug, for a time but abandoned it after a few days because the girl was getting no better.

"To the best of my knowledge, no one has ever used this drug in a patient who had rabies," Dr. Ralph Feigin, physician-in-chief for Texas Children's, said last week. But he said it had been effective in lab tests against the virus.

Ms. Swanson said the girl was far advanced in her disease when doctors reached a diagnosis last month. The girl's first symptoms were general and included a sore throat and headache, she said. The child was first hospitalized July 11 and transferred to Texas Children's July 16.

Firemen raised record amount for MDA

From Staff Reports

The Midland Fire Fighters stood in the streets in sweltering summer heat while raising more than $9,000 for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

According to Kerry Zubras, MDA program coordinator, the two competing shifts brought in more money July 21, than they ever have in past "Fill the Boot" fund raisers.

The A Team manned Midland's safety while the Killer Bs and the Super Cs stood on the streets where generous Midlanders tossed change into their boots. The B shift raised $5,494.76 and the C shift brought in $4,372.16 for a total of $9,866.92.

The local effort is "very important," said Zubras. "On the national level, the Fire Fighters as sponsors annually are one of the biggest contributors to MD."

Deputy Fire Chief Dean Williams said the three 20-member shifts rotated on which will be on duty while the other two stood on street corners from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

The shifts were located at the intersections of Andrews Highway and Illinois Avenue and at Midkiff Road and Wadley Avenue, where Imperial Liquors donated free soft drinks for the fire fighters.

The funds will go to the Permian Basin chapter's clinic and extensive patient service program, Zubras said. The chapter serves about 120 MD patients, providing wheelchairs, braces, medication and aides in the homes.

Also, funds go to sending young area MD patients to camp and older ones to the adult retreat.

The Big Spring and Odessa Fire Fighters have scheduled their "Fill the Boot" competitions on Aug. 25. The MDA Labor Day Telethon will be held Sept. 2-3.

NURSING

While representatives of home health care agencies maintained they provide the same types of health care and many of their services are given at no charge to the area's needy, Judy Bartley, R.N., said, "I've never called an agency and asked them to do something that they didn't ask first about the money."

The group, which specifically cited expanding well-child clinics to reach children up to the age of 5 and sick child clinics and beginning day care centers for the elderly as goals, will continue meeting to determine the best way to assist those who fall through the cracks of both private and public health care agencies.

Also to be discussed will be expanded prenatal, maternity and preventive education.

Seven people killed in accident

From Staff Reports

In delayed reports, seven members of a Midland man's family were killed in a three-vechicle accident near Houston last week.

Among those killed was 54-year-old Wanda Mitchell of Amarillo. She was the sister of 56-year-old Bill Cawthon, 500 W. Tennessee.

The other six members of Cawthon's family who died in the wreck were a 35-year-old niece and her three children, all of Columbus, and two children of another niece who lives in Lubbock. The children ranged from three years to eight years in age.

The accident occurred at 3:30 p.m. on Aug. 2 about 30 miles southwest of Houston in Brazoria County.

According to Department of Public Safety reports, a car driven by Mrs. Mitchell was hit head-on by a tractor-trailer rig after swerving to avoid a dump truck that had run a stop sign. Neither truck driver was injured.

Suspect in murder surrenders

From Staff Reports

KERMIT — The woman authorities have been searching for since her May indictment for soliciting her former husband's murder in Winkler County surrendered Tuesday to Odessa police.

Coleen Samford Costello, 53, Odessa, turned herself in about 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, but her current husband, Joseph Costello, 49, Odessa, remains on the loose.

The Costellos are charged with paying Edward Thomas Sparks II, Baytown, to murder John Eldon Samford in March 1976. Sparks was arrested in June in Picayune, Miss.

Bond was set at $50,000. Ms. Costello was transferred Tuesday to Kermit in the custody of the Winkler County Sheriff's Department.

Square-rigged ship recalls Galveston's past

GALVESTON (AP) — Ten years ago, Elissa was a heap of scrap in a Greek junkyard.

Now, after $3.6 million in donations and countless hours of elbow grease supplied by volunteers, the majestic 162-foot vessel is attracting some 100,000 visitors annually as one of only about 100 square-riged sailing ships in the world.

"She is one of the most beautiful things that man has ever made as far as a functional object is concerned," says David C. Brink, Elissa project director with the Galveston Historical Foundation.

The foundation, a non-profit organization geared at preserving Galveston's rich history, rescued the ship from Greece in 1974 for $40,000.

After two years of extensive hull renewal in Pireaus, Greece, it finally reached Galveston under tow in 1979.

"The overall impression (of the boat) was pretty depressing," Brink said.

But after the exhaustive efforts of hundreds of volunteers, the 430-ton Elissa was restored, and sailed on Labor Day 1982.

"You get her going about eight knots and it feels like a freight train. It's tremendously exciting," Brink said. "She's beautiful when you see her out in the water. She's really quite spectacular."

Since the first voyage two years ago, the ship — now 107 years old — has sailed about seven times, Brink said.

"The goal is to sail her once a year," he said. "If we don't sail her once a year, you lose the volunteers (who get to sail the vessel)."

Aside from representing Texas' maritime heritage, Brink said the Elissa, one of 10 floating museums in the United States, also represented skilled craftsmanship not to be found in modern vessels.

The 162-foot vessel, equipped with a mainmast that reaches 102 feet above deck, has 19 sails that total 12,000 square feet.

On Dec. 19, 1877, the Elissa left Liverpool, England, on its maiden voyage to deliver coal to present-day Recife, Brazil. It arrived in Brazil on January 24, 1878.

During its early years, the Elissa carried a 13-member crew to the eastern ports of the United States, South America and Canada. It was known as a "tramp vessel," meaning it hauled anything it could contract in order to survive.

The vessel was downrigged in 1918 and equipped with an engine. It was last used in 1961 to smuggle cigarettes from Italy to Yugoslavia, Brink said.

ENTERTAINING AMERICAN-STYLE ...ELEGANT AND EASY!

American cooking draws on the rich culinary traditions of many cultures, adding a special accent all its own. What better way to celebrate this delicious diversity, and make the most of those golden late summer/early fall days, than gathering a congenial group to dine — al fresco or indoors — on a feast prepared essentially in the open air.

This tempting and rather unusual menu combines several examples of the best and freshest ingredients America offers. Even when it's too chilly to eat outdoors, fresh air cooking gives that special seasoning... food is pretty and sophisticated enough to do justice to your fine china, linens and crystal. Each dish is distinguished by great taste, good looks and the grand simplicity that characterizes our finest cuisine.

Inspired by fabled Cajun chefs, Louisiana Grilled Salmon is dressed with a zesty marinade that combines the delicate flavor of fragrant Italian olive oil and the unique, aromatic qualities of Southern Comfort. Clear, golden Bertolli Olive Oil is the favorite of savvy cooks world-over. Southern Comfort, a highly versatile native American spirit, was born in New Orleans and is, to this day, distilled according to a closely guarded family recipe. Steaks — salmon or any thick-cut fish — are cooked alongside savory Yankee Squash on a spacious Weber covered barbecue kettle, preferably over a wood-smoke fire (see below). Just a few minutes before the main course is ready to serve, add skewers of Mediterranean Herbed Bread — a variation on the famed Italian bruschette.

Sprightly and colorful Chop Chop Salad has a West African heritage and provides a delightful counterpoint: pure olive oil — which, contrary to the myth, contains absolutely no cholesterol — complements the crisp vegetables and blends beautifully with the tart lemon juice.

To accompany the meal, a Pitcher of Cool Comfort marries the popular flavors of orange juice and Southern Comfort with the sparkle of club soda to create a refreshing spritzer. To cap it, Orange Cream Cake Deluxe pays homage to the scrumptious yet feathery light desserts of France and is crowned with two especially prized American fruits.

LOUISIANA GRILLED SALMON

6-8 salmon steaks, cut about 1-inch thick
1/2 cup cut-up onion
1/4 cup Worcestershire sauce
1 large clove garlic, cut into thirds
1 tablespoon cracked black pepper
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon Tabasco
1/2 cup Bertolli Olive Oil
3/4 cup Southern Comfort

Place fish in a single layer in a glass, pottery or stainless steel container. Place onion, garlic, Worcestershire sauce and seasonings in blender or food processor; blend or process until onion is pulverized. Add olive oil and blend or process a few seconds. Remove from container and add Southern Comfort. Pour over fish, turning steaks to coat. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate 3 or 4 hours, turning fish steaks once. Remove from marinade, brushing off excess. Grill over gray-ashed coals, using cover for 6-8 minutes. Carefully turn, baste with sauce. Cook another 6-10 minutes, or until fish flakes. Carefully remove from grill. Heat sauce and serve with fish. Serves 6-8. The amount of these ingredients may be reduced by half, for a less spicy flavor.

SAUCY RICE

1-1/2 cups converted rice
3 cups water
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2-2/3 cup fish marinade
1/3 cup currants

Combine rice, water and salt in a 3-quart saucepan. Bring to a boil, stir. Cover and simmer 20 minutes. Blend in marinade and currants. Serve with fish. Serves 6-8.

MEDITERRANEAN HERBED BREAD

1 lb. loaf crusty Italian-style bread
1/2 cup Bertolli Olive Oil
1-2 teaspoons anchovy paste
1 teaspoon chopped fresh or 1/2 teaspoon crushed dry oregano
1 teaspoon chopped fresh or 1/2 teaspoon crushed dry basil
1/8 teaspoon minced fresh garlic or dash of garlic powder

Cut bread into thick slices or large cubes. Beat together olive oil, anchovy paste, herbs and garlic. Brush cut bread surfaces with herbed oil mixture. Thread on long skewers. Toast over gray-ashed coals until crisp and brown. Serves 6-8.

TO PREPARE COVERED KETTLE GRILL

- Open all vents and leave open during cooking.
- Spread charcoal one layer deep on grill.
- Heap charcoal in center of grill.
- Saturate briquets with lighter fluid and wait a minute or two.
- Light briquets in several places to start (leave cover off kettle while charcoal is starting).
- When briquets have a light coating of gray ash (about 30 minutes) spread them in a single layer again.
- Put cooking grill in place.

NOTE: For a special flavor to the salmon, add mesquite barbecue chunks to the charcoal several minutes before salmon is placed on grill. Soak chunks three to four hours before adding to hot coals. Four to six pre-soaked mesquite chunks will be enough to add a distinctive, smoky taste.

YANKEE SQUASH

3 medium acorn or 2 butternut squash
1/3 cup Bertolli Olive Oil
1 tart apple, pared, cored and cut-up
4 green onions (scallions) or 1/4 of a small onion
1/3 cup parsley sprigs
1/3 cup Southern Comfort
1 tablespoon packed brown sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon grated nutmeg

Cut acorn squash in half and remove seeds or cut each butternut squash in half lengthwise. Brush cut surfaces of squash with olive oil. Wrap pieces of squash in aluminum foil. Cook over gray-ashed coals for 30 minutes. Put apple, onion and parsley in blender or food processor. Blend until finely chopped. Cook and stir over medium heat the apple mixture in remaining olive oil until tender, about 5 minutes. Add remaining ingredients, cooking until flavors blend and mixture thickens, about 3 minutes. (This mixture may be made ahead of time and reheated on the grill.) Open squash packets to check doneness. If squash is not yet tender, continue cooking. Spoon apple mixture into squash cavities. Cook for additional 10 minutes. Serves 6-8.

CHOP CHOP SALAD

2 tart apples, chopped
2 firm ripe tomatoes, seeded and chopped
1 large green pepper, chopped
2 small cucumbers, chopped
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup Bertolli Olive Oil
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon chopped fresh mint

Combine apples, tomatoes, green pepper, cucumber and onion in a large bowl, lined with fresh greens. Combine olive oil, lemon juice, salt and mint. Pour dressing over vegetables, refrigerate. Toss before serving — garnish with carrot curls, if desired. Serves 6-8.

PITCHER OF COOL COMFORT

Ice Cubes
1 6-ounce can frozen orange juice concentrate
1 cup Southern Comfort
1 28-ounce bottle club soda

Fill a pitcher half full of ice cubes. Add frozen orange juice concentrate and Southern Comfort, stir to blend. Fill pitcher with club soda. Serves 6-8.

KISS O'MINT — Crush 6-8 sprigs of mint with 1 teaspoon sugar — add to drink.

ORANGE CREAM CAKE DELUXE

6 eggs, separated
1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 cup sugar
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup orange juice
1 tablespoon shredded orange peel
1 recipe Comfort Syrup
1 recipe Cream Topping
2 oranges, cut in segments
1 pint raspberries (or strawberries)

With electric mixer, beat egg whites and cream of tartar until fluffy. Add 1/2 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating until stiff peaks form. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored; add 1/2 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating until pale yellow. Reduce speed. Combine flour, baking powder and salt; alternately add flour and orange juice to egg yolks, beating to mix. Remove from mixer and fold in egg whites and orange peel. Pour into an ungreased 9- or 10-inch tube pan. Bake in a 325° oven for 35-40 minutes. Cool. Remove from pan. Cut cake in half crosswise to make 2 layers. Spoon and brush Comfort Syrup over all cake surfaces. Place one layer on serving plate with cut surface up. Spread Cream Topping over surface; arrange half the orange segments and berries over cream. Place remaining cake layer, cut side down, over berries and cream. Spread remaining cream on top of cake, arranging remaining orange segments and berries attractively. Refrigerate until serving time. Serves 8-10.

COMFORT SYRUP

2 tablespoons sugar
1/4 cup orange juice
1/2 cup Southern Comfort

Combine sugar and orange juice in a small saucepan. Bring to a boil and cook until sugar dissolves and mixture thickens slightly. Add Southern Comfort.

CREAM TOPPING

1-1/2 cups whipping cream
2 tablespoons powdered sugar
2 teaspoons Southern Comfort
1 tablespoon shredded orange peel

Beat cream and sugar until soft peaks form. Beat in Southern Comfort, stir in orange peel.

Diet linked to cancer

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

The link between diet and cancer continues to be the target of considerable research throughout the world, and some significant factors have recently come to light.

The death rate from cancer is lower in vegetarians living in the same area than in those who eat foods that are high in animal protein, fat and refined carbohydrates (simple sugars and overprocessed flours). Such diets are also low in fiber, and unfortunately more Americans are apt to fall into this category than in the high-fiber vegetarian group.

The Diet, Nutrition and Cancer report of the National Academy of Science concluded that even if there is no proven cause-effect relationship between diet and cancer, some diets or their components tend to increase the risk, while other kinds of diets or their components tend to reduce the risk.

Does this mean that we should all become vegetarians in order to cut down the incidence of cancer? Not necessarily, but we may be able to reduce the risk by modifying our own diet, and increasing the components that are now thought to be anti-cancer.

What are they? Three important factors are apparent. Vitamin A, or carotene, vitamin C, or ascorbic acid, and fiber. All of these are found in fruits and vegetables. Whole grains, nuts and legumes are also high in fiber and protein. By including four servings daily of fruits and vegetables, plus four servings of whole grain bread or cereals, in the diet, it immediately provides the three anti-cancer factors.

Does this mean higher calories and a possible weight gain? No, just the opposite. These foods are actually lower in calories than meats that contain fat, and may satisfy hunger as well or better because they have greater bulk.

The components of a diet that may increase the risk of cancer are: high levels of fat (including saturated and unsaturated kinds), high cholesterol, high calories and low fiber. The kinds of food that produce these components are fatty meats, ice cream, creamy cheeses, sour cream, butter, egg yolks, pies, cakes, pastries, cream sauces, mayonnaise, gravies and rich salad dressings. These are foods that are dear to the hearts of many Americans, and the thought of doing without them is painful, if not intolerable.

It is not necessary to completely avoid a lot of favorite foods, but moderation is the name of the game. If you increase the amounts of anti-cancer foods, and decrease the amounts of pro-cancer foods, you can still enjoy a wide variety, but you have lowered the cancer risk.

There is no need to become a "dietary cripple" and live in fear of occasionally enjoying whatever you like, but don't make them your only foods, and don't serve them in large quantities to children.

Nutrition is also playing a greater role in the treatment of cancer today. At Indiana University School of Medicine, Dr. Karyl Rickard, Associate Professor of nutrition and dietetics, and her colleagues have recently noted significant improvement in the survival of children with cancer, when new, intensive total parenteral nutrition (TPN) was used. Compared to adult cancer patients, children may be at even greater risk for developing protein-energy malnutrition because they have a more rapid metabolic rate, greater caloric needs for growth and development and often need more aggressive cancer treatment.

Children's snacks healthy

By SHELLEY DAVIS
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

"Like all kids, mine like Fritos and french fries and candy and gum," Hedi Dill said, but for the most part she turns to healthy snack foods when hunger pangs strike her 9- and 10-year-old children.

So she took the recipes that her family has been "making for years" in its Alexandria, Va., household and volunteered to put them in a new booklet, "Nutritious Snacks for Children," published by the Fairfax County, Va., Department of Extension and Continuing Education.

"Growing children do burn a lot of calories and therefore get hungry between meals, but if allowed to raid the refrigerator and cupboards at will, they can turn the day into one continuous snack period," she writes.

"Snacks should be small but satisfying," and should take place at least 1½ hours before the next meal, Dill adds.

Her recipes are nutritious, low-fat, salt-free and easily made with a minimal number of ingredients.

Honey and brown sugar replace white sugar in the Super Nutritious Cookies (wheat germ, oats, raisins, nuts) and Good For You Cracker Jacks (popcorn, shelled peanuts and a light coating of honey and butter or margarine).

Age will determine whether the young chef can work alone in the kitchen, Dill said. Certainly, youngsters are capable of spreading peanut butter on apple wedges, but cutting the wedges may require some assistance.

While the booklet has its fill of cookies and candy, there are sandwiches, shakes and refreshingly filling drinks, too.

VERY BERRY SHAKE

1 cup berries
2 cups ice cold milk
4 tsps. honey

Wash berries and remove any stems. Put all the ingredients into a blender. Cover and blend on high speed for 30 seconds. Pour and serve.

Call 703-691-3433 or write to Extension and Continuing Education, Home Economics, 4000 Chain Bridge Rd., Fairfax, Va. 22030 to get a free copy of the booklet.

Peter Mondavi operates successful Charles Krug Winery

By NATHAN CHROMAN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Buried for years under tons of publicity for his highly visible brother, Robert, Peter Mondavi has been quietly and successfully operating the family's century-old Charles Krug Winery.

A superb example of Mondavi's wines is his Charles Krug, Cabernet Sauvignon, Vintage Selection, Lot F1 (Fay Vineyard), 1974, which is soon to be re-released at an understated tab of $35. Here is a silky, ready-to-drink Cab, with intense flavors that refuse to quit. It has good structure and a nose complexity that announces its presence even outside the glass.

With little tannin, the wine is an excellent sample of the winery's generally overlooked capability. (A Krug Vintage Selection represents the best of its Cabernet cuvees and is not an annual selection.) A 1978 Cabernet Vintage Selection is also showing well, but is not as big in structure or rich with flavor. It is subtle in aroma and in a lighter style; a fine table mate.

Another fine table mate is Charles Krug, Chardonnay, Napa, 1982. Made principally from Napa County's Carneros grapes, there is attractive austerity and crispness in taste here, with a subtle non-aggressive nose. It does not represent a buttery, overly apple-like style, but rather a softer textured, less intense flavor for easy imbibing. The wine spends three to four months in oak and offers a nice counterbalance to more fruity, higher-alcohol Chardonnays.

Not as interesting, or as crisp (perhaps a result of lower acid), yet more fruity and appley in style, is Charles Krug, Chardonnay, Sonoma 1982, a wine that may alter the course of the winery's Chardonnays. Peter feels Krug's Chardonnay future lies with its Carneros vineyards property in the rather healthy amount of 376 acres for both Chardonnay and Pinot Noir.

Very nicely done especially for the $6.50 tab, is Charles Krug, Fume Blanc, 1983 whch was aged in French barrels for three months. It has a light grassy style with a bit of oak showing. Crisp and dry, it shows good fruit, making it pleasurable for today's drinking.

Another Cabernet, from grapes from Yountyville and Childs Valley, is a steal at $6.50, though not a Vintage Selection. Cabernet Sauvignon, Napa Valley, 1979, has a smooth, supple claret-like style, good but not robust structure and fine flavor intensity. Perhaps more attractive than the more expensive '78 Vintage Selection, it is not a candidate for aging more than a decade. In fact, the wine is pleasant for today's drinking.

Not as integrated a wine as the '79 Cab, Zinfandel, 1979, does provide characteristic nose spice, but lacks structure. Good flavors make it most satisfactory for drinking now, especially at $4.75.

Better at the $4.75 tab is Gamay Beaujolais 1979. At 12.5 percent alcohol, it has a clean, aromatic nose in a pleasant light style.

Athletic meals Olympian task

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Back in 1932, when Los Angeles last hosted the Olympic Games, the Olympic Committee had given each nation its own dining room and kitchen with compatriot chefs serving their native foods. There were about 2,000 athletes from 39 countries that year. Women were housed at the Chapman Park Hotel (since torn down) on Wilshire Boulevard, the men on Olympiad Drive near Crenshaw Boulevard.

For the 1984 Olympic Games, a small army of about 3,000 food service staff was trained specifically to feed more than 12,000 athletes, coaches and trainers from 140 countries at Olympic Villages at UCLA, USC and Santa Barbara.

Also different from the 1932 Games is that California's bountiful, fresh and varied food supply will make it possible for athletes of different nations to dine royally, so to speak, at one table, from one menu.

"It just was not practical to develop 140 different menus, so we created a menu which would satisfy each athlete's nutritional requirements as well as taste preferences," said Faye Clarke, manager of athlete food service for ARA Services, the company designated to feed athletes during the 1984 Games.

ARA Services, which also provided food services at nine previous international sporting events, took advantage of California's produce bounty by creating a salad-and-fruit bar as well as a few California regional dishes such as cheese enchiladas, carrot cake and gazpacho.

"This is the first time we have introduced a salad bar. The variety of fruits and vegetables available here is absolutely mind-boggling."

All nine dining facilities (four each at USC and UCLA and one at Santa Barbara) serve the identical menu on a five-day rotating cycle, and there is something for virtually every ethnic taste.

Preparing the facilities for the serving of 60,000 meals daily (more than a million during the course of the Games) was a challenge for ARA Services, even in an era of technological advancement, according to William C. Grant, associate director of international facilities planning at ARA Services.

In 1932, only 20 athletes per dining room were served. Today, the seating capacity at one of USC's four dining facilities is 1,300 (Baron's Bistro).

The planning for expanding the not-quite-adequate dining facilities at USC, UCLA and Santa Barbara began two years ago. A 950-seat dining hall, built by the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee and designed to remain on the USC campus when the Games were over, was adapted to temporarily meet the needs of the Olympic athletes.

Each village contains one facility that remains open for 24 hours. At Baron's Bistro at USC and Sproul Hall at UCLA, an athlete may find abundant makings for salads, sandwiches and full meals. After 11 p.m., however, the menu is confined to hamburgers, cheeseburgers and the salad and fruit bars.

CHEESE ENCHILADAS

1 (14 1-2-ounce) can chicken broth
1 cup crushed canned tomatoes
1 tablespoon chili powder
¼ teaspoon dried crushed oregano leaves
⅛ teaspoon ground cumin
⅛ teaspoon garlic powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
3 cups shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
¾ cup finely chopped onion
Oil
16 (6-inch) corn tortillas
Olives
Sliced pitted black olives

In 1-quart saucepan, combine broth, tomatoes, chili powder, oregano, cumin, garlic powder and salt. Bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, 15 minutes. In small bowl, combine 2 half cups cheese and onion. In large skillet, heat 1-2 inch oil until hot. Fry tortillas, one at a time, about 5 seconds on each side just until they are softened. Drain on paper towels.

To assemble, place one tortilla on flat surface. Spread about 2 tablespoons cheese mixture in strip across center of tortilla. Roll tightly. Place, seam-side down, in 13x9x2-inch baking dish. Repeat for remaining tortillas. Pour sauce over all. Sprinkle with remaining half cup cheese. Cover with foil. Bake at 350 degrees 20 minutes. Serve garnished with olives. Makes 8 servings.

Each serving yields 284 calories 18 grams carbohydrate, 12 grams protein, 17 grams fat and 715 milligrams sodium.

DEAR ABBY

Reader says children should 'have no rights'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: It seems that lately in your attempts to "get with it," you are really screwing up. You defend a child's right to privacy, and say parents should not look at their children's yearbooks without permission.

Come on, Abby. Everyone knows that children have no rights. It is the responsibility of the parents to see that their children are reared in a clean and wholesome atmosphere.

Children need to be protected — not given rights to do wrong. — OUTRAGED IN ORANGE, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I differ with you on your views about children who don't want their parents to read their yearbooks.

You stated that the yearbook belongs to the child and should not be read by parents without the child's permission. Well, baloney! I paid for that yearbook, and if my son isn't brave enough to tell his friends to watch what they write in his yearbook, that is his problem. I will certainly look at his yearbook if I feel like it.

I also told him that I didn't want him writing filth or trash in other people's yearbooks. — DON'T USE MY NAME

DEAR ABBY: When I was in my last year of junior high school, a boy I had known since grade school wrote a filthy expression across my picture. I tried to erase the words and ended up erasing my picture. The words were still readable, so I had to cut them out with a razor blade.

When I asked the boy why he did it, he said he was just kidding. I was ashamed to show my yearbook to anyone because of the stupidity of one person. To this day I've never shown my yearbook to my parents or anyone else. — D. IN DENVER

DEAR ABBY: The question of privacy in yearbooks came up in our family the same week you mentioned it in your column.

I saw my granddaughter's yearbook and was appalled to see the filth written by some of her classmates. One boy she said she hardly knew except to say hi to wrote: "Dear Debbie, I only wish I had taken you up on your proposition. I really do want to make love to you. There's still time. Give me a call. Steve."

My granddaughter is a good student, well-liked and was never in any trouble that I knew about. When I told her I was shocked at some of the writings in her yearbook, she said, "Oh, Gram! You're so old-fashioned. Don't believe any of that stuff. The kids just make up things to write so they'll sound cool."

Well, Abby, I guess I'm just a 60-year-old fossil. What do I know? — APPALLED IN VIRGINIA

Italy brings own cooks to Olympics

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — It's not that they don't like American cooking. It's just that the Italian Olympic team likes its spaghetti.

And its ravioli and lasagna and rigatoni.

To that honored end, the Italians brought with them two pasta chefs, Carmine Landolfi and Mauro Mazzi, who currently are cooking two meals a day in the Olympic Village at the University of Southern California.

"We brought everything from Italy," Landolfi said during a break in the kitchen competition. His white apron, with Olympic emblem, was splattered with tomato sauce.

"We change sauce every day," Mazzi said, "depending on what kind of pasta we use. Sometimes we use ragu sauce."

American brand Ragu?

"No, no, no, no!" Mazzi said, gesturing with his arms. "Only the Italian."

The two chefs have been using a kitchen in one of the four USC village "restaurants." Under Olympic rules, teams can bring their own cooks only if they share the food with other athletes from other countries. Few teams are that generous.

But the Italians don't mind sharing a bit. "The word has spread that Italian cooks are cooking Italian food in this particular restaurant and it has become the most popular restaurant in the village," Landolfi said.

About 100 Italian athletes, and another 50 or so athletes of other countries, have been sharing in the Italian feast in the last few days.

Are they afraid of running out of supplies? "No, no, no, no!" Landolfi said. "We are prepared for a very abundant time."

The Italian Olympic team shipped 3,300 pounds of foodstuffs to Los Angeles — canned tomatoes, pasta, spices, olive oil, cheese, coffee and wine.

"It is the custom of the Italian athletes to bring their own cooks," Landolfi said. "It is not a matter that the American cooks could not fix the food, it's just that it's a different system and the system that is used in Italy is what the athletes are used to."

Landolfi, 34, has been cooking in hotel kitchens since he was 14. His partner, Mazzi, 41, has been cooking professionally since he was 18.

The two are employed by "Autogrill," a company that runs roadside restaurants in Italy. On their aprons, in Italian, is the motto, "Our cooks are with the Italian team."

Italian Puffs have ricotta filling

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

ITALIAN PUFFS

When this recipe was demonstrated at a cooking school in a Brooklyn department store it was most successful.

Bake cream puffs according to any standard recipe based on one cup of all-purpose flour. Cool completely.

Just before serving, cut off tops and fill with the following: Beat together until very smooth a 15- or 16-ounce container of ricotta, ½ cup confectioners' sugar and 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Stir in ¼ teaspoon lemon rind. Beat 1 cup heavy cream until stiff and fold in. Fill bottoms of puffs with mixture and replace tops; sprinkle with confectioners' sugar.

Note: The ricotta mixture also makes a delightful filling for layer cakes.

Blueberries can be versatile items on menu

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

My first food book, written 11 years ago, was devoted to one of my favorite fruits: berries. In researching the history of these delicious sweets, I was struck by the versatility of the blueberry, which the first colonists learned about from the American Indian.

The settlers quickly began making preserves and desserts with the blueberry, but the Indians taught them other uses that you don't hear much about anymore.

In 1616, Samuel de Champlain, the French explorer, encountered a group of Indians beating dried blueberries into a powder and adding it to a parched meal called sautauthig. And when Lewis and Clark made their historic journey into the Northwest Territory, a local tribe served them venison cured by pounding blueberries into the meat.

But the settlers used blueberries mostly for desserts, rarely in the main dish. Today, however, the blueberry is used for breakfast, lunch and dinner, not to mention late night snacks.

For breakfast, they are eaten topped with milk or cream, on cereal and in muffins and pancakes, as well as in jams and jellies.

The berries are becoming popular for diet luncheons, since they contain only 42 calories per cup. A shimmering blueberry salad, encased in gelatine, is often served. So is a mold of the berries mixed with cottage cheese and sour cream.

For dinner, game hen stuffed with blueberries is a favorite. Also, blueberry relish, a mixture of the berries, apples, vinegar, cloves and sweetening, is delicious on meat dishes.

CORNISH HENS

8 Cornish game hens
Salt and pepper
¼ cup oil
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ cup bitters
4 cups fresh blueberries
4 teaspoons sugar
½ cup butter
8 small bay leaves

Sprinkle game hens inside and out with salt and pepper. Mix oil, lemon juice and bitters and brush game hens with mixture inside and out. Fill each bird with ½ cup blueberries and ½ teaspoon sugar. Sew or skewer opening and place in shallow roasting pan. Spread soft butter over breasts of birds and place bay leaf on butter. Roast in preheated 350-degree oven for 1 hour or until drumstick is easily moved. Discard bay leaf. Serves 8.

Buttered corn discussed

By MARIAN BURROS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — At an informal dinner party in Washington last month where the hostess served the first local corn of the year, I watched in fascination as two guests took the proffered stick of butter and rolled their ears of corn directly on it. This prompted a discussion on the proper way to butter corn. The participants included people born in the Middle West, the Far West and the Northeast and, of course, there was no agreement. The whole-stick-of-butter school was subscribed to by the Middle Westerners. The Far Westerners melted butter in a shallow dish and rolled the corn in it. And those of us from the Northeast, more frugal, perhaps, than the others, used a butter knife to spread a pat of butter on the corn.

There was accord, however, on corn holders. No one thought much of them. Even though we had silver ones at home, fashioned as ears of corn, with prongs to stick into either end of the cob, I never saw my mother use them. Some of us feel corn never tastes as good as when you have it firmly gripped in your fingers, even if that risks a burn from a steaming cob. And then there are miniature brushes, presumably for spreading melted butter on corn. Someone gave me a set; I've never tried them.

As for corn cutters, the device that splits the kernels open to make creamed corn, it wasn't until I was grown up that I was introduced to one. Some people use the cutters to run over the kernels before eating them off the cob. This gives the corn a different texture, but hardly seems worth the effort unless the corn is old and tough.

I have set opinions about corn that derive from my childhood, when the only corn on the cob I ever ate at home had come from the field within two hours of picking. Not because we lived on a farm, but because my mother believed so strongly that its sweetness was in direct relationship to its freshness that she drove to the edge of town several times a week at about 4:30 or 5 p.m. to a roadside stand where it had just been picked. By 6:30 it was out of the kettle, steaming in a tea towel, awaiting its butter bath. My mother said corn older than that had already turned to starch.

In those days the most desirable variety was the white Country Gentleman. It seems to me it came later in the season. Mother peeled back a portion of the husk from every ear before she purchased it and punctured a kernel with a fingernail to test for toughness. No worms or old ears for her.

My standards for corn haven't changed much. I've never purchased an ear in a supermarket or even an Oriental market. Country Gentleman seems to have disappeared from the commercial market. Better strains have replaced it, they say. But they don't remember Country Gentleman the way I do. Now I buy Silver Queen and it is almost as good as the corn of my childhood.

What has changed is the way I eat and cook the corn. I stopped using butter because of the fat and calories. Then I discovered that the sweetness of a fresh young ear did not require additional embellishments. While most of the corn I am able to buy now is more than two hours old, it has always been picked the same day. The husks and silks are not removed until just before cooking because they act as a protective shield against the air. I do not put salt or sugar in the water and instead of boiling I steam for four minutes at the most.

If, after all this loving care, the corn is not sweet or tender, I fall back on the butter, but season it with a bit of cumin, allowing about 1 teaspoon of ground cumin for each 3 tablespoons of butter.

I am so partial to corn that I am prejudiced in favor of any dish that contains it. The revolution in American cooking finds corn in many dishes where it never appeared before: in soups and sauces for fish, in breads and salads.

Popularity of Belgian food spreads

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

While touring Europe's Lowlands this spring, I enjoyed Belgium's memorable cuisine, which is becoming familiar in many countries.

When you sample the game and pork dishes, accompanied by the sprightly baby carrots and white asparagus for which the country is famous, you understand why the great paintings of the Flemish masters so often depict lavish arrangements of food. Best known, perhaps, are Breughel's scenes of gargantuan feasting.

Southern Belgium is known for its game and pork, including ham, bacon and sausages. The north has made a name for itself with fish of almost every variety. All the delicacies of the sea, including oysters and lobsters, abound.

But mussels are among the Belgian favorites. Featured only in months with an "R" in them, like oysters in some lands, they are usually served as a main dish, accompanied by the "frites," or fried potatoes which most Belgians adore.

Belgian vegetables are being exported to many countries. Endives, popular far and wide, are said to be grown successfully only in Belgium. They are not only good in salads, but Belgians cook them in stews and soups and feature them as a separate dish blanketed with a smooth cream sauce.

Belgians love their asparagus and prepare it in an unusual way. They serve it with hard-boiled eggs, the yolks crushed in melted butter with black pepper.

Among Belgium's best-known stews is carbonnade, where diced beef and vegetables are simmered in beer. It is delicious, but I always add an equal amount of beef bouillon to the beer to give it more flavor.

Belgium offers tasty desserts, many of which date back centuries. I noted that the older recipes used honey instead of sugar. This is because sugar was scarce in Belgium until the 17th century, when it began to be imported from the Caribbean islands.

Here's a recipe for mussel salad, which is a luncheon favorite.

MUSSEL SALAD

6 pounds mussels
2 quarts water
6 small carrots, sliced
3 medium onions, chopped
3 leeks, sliced
3 stalks celery, chopped
1 tsp. mustard
5 tsps. white wine
2 tbsps. vinegar
5 tbsps. olive oil
2 sprigs parsley and 1 onion, chopped together

Quickly steam mussels in broth made of the water, carrots, onions, leeks and celery. In salad bowl prepare vinaigrette dressing made of the mustard, white wine, vinegar, oil, chopped onion and parsley. Place mussels in shells in the bowl and mix with dressing. Serve with chilled champagne. Serves 6.

Clam digging not difficult

By ANGUS PHILLIPS
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Has America lost the will to clam? We take you to the salt marshes of Block Island, R.I., in a shallow corner of the big harbor where fancy yachts from Newport and New York anchor for the night during their cruises through cool New England waters.

We take you to a place where the clear salt water is knee-deep and the sandy bottom is studded with occasional rocks, and put in your hands a 12-tine rake with an oak handle worn smooth by years of serious clamming.

Pull the rake through the sand. Feel that metallic "clink"? That's a Rhode Island quahog, partner. Didn't take long.

Lay the clam in the palm of your hand. Now take this Swiss army knife and put the sharp edge of the big blade between the lips of the clam shell and squeeze.

Split the shell, cut the meat from the muscle and right here under the New England summer sun slurp up one of the finest culinary treasures known to man, salty and sweet at the same time, and so fresh it tastes alive, which it all but is.

When you've caught enough, and it shouldn't take long, put your rake aside and let's walk up to the flats. It's low tide, and as you can see from here, the flats stretch from the low-tide line up to the marsh grass marking the reach of high tide.

See the little holes in the mud and sand? Some of these are the dwellings of worms, and others are the passages through which soft-shell clams, or "steamers," extend their snouts to the surface and feed on passing organic matter when the tide is up.

The way to tell the difference is to scrape the sand with a seashell. A worm hole disappears when scraped; a clam hole remains, and sometimes the clam will spray water up in an effort to frighten off intruders.

You will see that there are many, many clams living on these flats. To claim them, all we do is kneel, identify a clam hole and burrow in with bare hands.

Several inches to a foot down we'll feel the sharp top edge of the shell. Be careful here, because this shell, unlike the hard shell of the quahog, breaks easily. Dig around the edges and gently pull the clam out.

We must wait to enjoy the steamers. When we get a bucketful we'll cover them with salt water and leave them for an hour or two to "sand," or expel any grit.

Then we'll skim a couple cups of salt water to put in a big pot along with the clams, steam for 5 or 10 minutes until the clam bodies and snouts hang together in a fat morsel, then serve with drawn butter. Magnificent!

It is difficult to say which are better, fresh raw quahogs (in Rhode Island all hard clams are quahogs, whereas in other states they are graded by size into littlenecks, top necks, cherrystones and quahogs) or fresh steamers.

Both are intensely flavorful in entirely different ways. The quahogs are wild and buttery and need no sauce or condiment; the cooked steamers are musky, not as sweet and demand butter.

I love both with a passion, and whether we go for steamers or quahogs, two of us can fill a bucket, our legal limit and plenty to feed the family, in an hour. This is great clamming, and the question that arises is, Why, when we look around, are we practically the only ones here?

Block Island is booming. This year Interstate Navigation put on a new ferry from Point Judith that carries 1,300 people at a time, plus 30 cars and trucks.

This, in addition to the Providence ferry, two other boats from Point Judith, R. I., two from Montauk, N.Y., and one from New London, Conn., is turning the quiet little outpost off eastern Long Island into another Nantucket.

Yet for all the increase in summer population, the clam grounds seem emptier than ever.

Bob Sears, who lived on the island year-round for six years, says it's a different breed of people coming. "We had a guy bring a Ferrari over on the boat," he said. "Can you imagine trying to get a Ferrari fixed on Block Island?"

Well, Ferrari drivers don't go clamming, nor do people who pay $900 a week for a cottage, and the locals are so busy fleecing the tourists they haven't time to catch the clams.

Which leaves you and me, lonely revelers in clam paradise.

What's your pleasure? Quahogs or steamers?

THE BUTCHER

Contest proves that 'catfish ain't just for frying anymore'

By MERLE ELLIS

The Mississippi Delta, it is said, starts in the lobby of the Peabody Hotel in Memphis and runs to Vicksburg, "under the hill." And right in the middle of that, in and around towns like Belzoni, Indianola, Inverness, Greenville and Greenwood, is the heart of catfish country. Over 65,000 acres of the Mississippi Delta are covered with water in 20-acre ponds devoted to the raising of one of the finest eating fish in the world, the all-American catfish.

We visited the Delta early this summer for the National Farm-Raised Catfish Cooking contest to learn a bit about this fast-growing industry. They took us on a tour of a hatchery, some grow-out ponds and a feed mill. We watched the feeding and seining operations and visited the efficient and immaculate Delta Pride processing plant. But where we learned the most about today's farm-raised catfish was at the Crown Restaurant and the Antique Mall. The lesson was simply this: Catfish ain't just for fryin' anymore.

The Crown is just off Highway 82 about halfway between Greenville and Greenwood.

What taught me a lesson about the versatility of today's catfish was the Smoked Catfish Pate served by proprietors Evelyn and Tony Roughton. Molded in individual fish molds and served on crisp lettuce with thin slices of lemon, it was marvelous spread on crisp toast squares and washed down with a dry white Magnolia Muscadine wine. Catfish have come a long way from "hush puppies and slaw."

SMOKED CATFISH PATE

½ pound smoked catfish filets
½ pound cream cheese, softened
1 clove garlic, crushed
Juice of one lemon
Black pepper to taste
2 ounces of butter, softened
2 tablespoons red wine

Flake the catfish finely with a fork. Mix in remaining ingredients and blend well. Pack into individual buttered molds and chill. Turn out on lettuce leaves, garnish with thin lemon slices and serve with crisp toast.

Evelyn adds this note: "I use a dry smoked catfish filet that Tony puts in brine and smokes for us, then process the mixture in the food processor, adjusting the quantities if needed for a more firm pate or a softer mousse for a large mold for a party. My friend in England who gave me the original recipe adds a touch of whiskey and serves it in tiny individual crocks."

Fishland Farm-Raised Catfish Company in Inverness, Mississippi, processes smoked catfish, but if it's not available in your area, smoke your own. It's easy!

You can smoke fresh whole catfish in a covered barbecue in about 1½ or 2 hours. Filets take even less time. First soak the fish in a salt brine (1 cup of non-iodized salt per gallon of water) for about 30 minutes.

While the fish is soaking, put a few handsfull of hickory chips in a quart ofwater and let them soak. Build a fire with your favorite charcoal, but don't build it as big as you would to grill a steak — you don't need that much heat because 150- to 250-degrees is a good range for smoking fish.

When the coals are hot, put on a handful of wet chips to start the smoke. Dry the fish with paper towels and place them over the coals on the rack. The fish should be at least a foot from the heat. Smoke for about 1½ to 2 hours, depending on the thickness of the fish and the heat. A whole fish will take about two hours at 150 degrees and only 50 minutes to an hour at 250. Keep checking and keep the temperature constant. Add more coals and more wet chips as necessary. The catfish should flake easily and have a nice, rich, yellowish color when done.

If you don't have an outdoor barbecue or smoke oven, you can smoke catfish in your oven with liquid smoke. Prepare and cure the fish as described above. Then brush them with liquid smoke and bake in a 250-degree oven for 45 to 50 minutes.

Today's farm-raised catfish are about as versatile as any fish could possibly be. If you would like some additional recipes from the National Catfish Cooking Contest to prove it, send a self-addressed, legal-size stamped envelope to: Catfish, P.O. Box 907, Tiburon, CA 94920.

Stock prices mixed after frenzy

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed Tuesday, bouncing around erratically in the aftermath of the market's recent upsurge.

Trading slowed from its frenetic pace of the past several days.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.66 to 1,204.62, posting its sixth straight gain. But most other, broader market indicators showed small declines.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange dropped off to 127.95 million shares from 203.05 million Monday, which was the second busiest day in exchange history.

Early in Tuesday's trading, the average fell more than 10 points. An afternoon recovery carried it to a gain of about 8, but then it retreated again toward the close.

The Big Three auto stocks, which have taken a leading role in the market's revival of late, had another good day. General Motors rose 1⅛ to 75⅝; Ford Motor 1⅛ to 45⅝, and Chrysler ¾ to 30⅛, all in active trading.

Oil service and drilling issues, by contrast, were weak amid concern over recent downward pressure on oil prices. Halliburton fell 1¼ to 32⅞; Schlumberger 1⅛ to 44⅝; Hughes Tool ⅜ to 13⅜, and Baker International ¼ to 15⅞.

Digital Equipment jumped 3 to 96¼. The company reported earnings for the fiscal fourth quarter ended June 30 of $2.28 a share, up from $1.51 in the comparable period a year earlier.

Other office-equipment and technology issues turned in a mixed performance. International Business Machines dipped ⅛ to 121¼, while Hewlett-Packard picked up 1 to 41¾.

Columbia Gas System fell 2⅛ to 27⅛. Columbia Gas said its independent auditors may qualify their opinion of the company's financial statements if a dispute with federal regulators over its purchases of high-priced natural gas can't be settled.

In the daily tally on the Big Board, declines outpaced advances by about 5 to 4. The exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped .02 to 93.43.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 150.94 million shares.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index rose .12 to 162.72. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market lost .18 to 249.09. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 204.55, down .47.

Valero expands pipeline system in South Texas

SAN ANTONIO — Valero Transmission Co. has completed a major expansion of its Texas natural gas pipeline system. The expansion adds 160 million cubic feet per day of capacity and provides producers new opportunities to market gas developed in several South Texas areas where drilling has been active in recent years. The stretch of pipeline shown under construction was part of 57 miles of 24-inch pipe installed in DeWitt and Karnes counties. The system expansion also included the addition of approximately 17,000 horsepower of compression. Valero Transmission operates some 5,500 miles of gas pipeline throughout the state.

Reagan, Senate agree on Synfuels Corp.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has agreed to restore the membership of the Synthetic Fuels Corp. and keep the embattled agency alive in return for about $5 billion in spending cuts, a Republican senator announced Tuesday.

Sen. Charles H. Percy of Illinois said he had been told by Senate Energy Committee Chairman James McClure, R-Idaho, that administration officials had reached the pact with the GOP committee members.

No one was available in McClure's Capitol Hill office for comment on the agreement.

Aides to Percy said the agreement calls for Reagan to fill five vacancies on the seven-person synfuels board, giving it the quorum needed to approve projects. Resignations have left only two members serving on the board and Reagan has withheld appointments, in part as a lever to force financing cuts.

The administration and House critics of the corporation had sought up to $10 billion in cuts from the $13.2 billion left in the $20 billion program. However, the House voted last week to reduce spending by $5 billion, bringing the budget to about $8.3 billion.

Percy's office said the new pact, which must be approved by the Senate and House, would hold the cuts to about $5 billion. Aides said that under the agreement, Reagan would appoint enough members sympathetic to the corporation's goals to form a majority on the board.

The synfuels program was created by Congress in 1980 to encourage the development of fuels from alternative sources such as oil shale and tar sands. It was to carry out that mission by granting loans and government promises to make up the difference between market prices and prices necessary to make a profit.

But the synfuels agency has been beset by management problems and board resignations. It recently came under criticism with a report that the corporation planned to guarantee one oil company almost three times the market price of crude oil to develop an oil shale plant.

Percy aides said the new agreement with the White House calls for $2.5 billion to be set aside for future projects, with special priority going to coal-related projects from east of the Mississippi River.

Such a provision would keep alive the prospect for aid to a proposed $800 million coal gasification plant near Virden, Ill. Architects of the project have been seeking loan and price guarantees for the plant, which would convert coal into ammonia fertilizer.

Percy aides said the agreement also calls for half the savings of uncompleted synfuels projects approved by June 1984 to be returned to the corporation and the other half to be given to the government treasury.

New price guidelines to be used in approving projects would be established under the pact, according to Percy's office.

Texas oil spill probe starts today

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — With the mop-up of a massive oil spill along the Texas coast still under way, officials turned their attention today to finding what caused a British oil tanker to rupture, spilling some 1.8 million gallons of crude in to the Gulf of Mexico.

Capt. N.J. Bartlett of the British Department of Transportation will head the investigation, to include testimony from the tanker's radio operator, chief engineer, pilot and other ship personnel, Coast Guard spokesman Jim Kosch said Tuesday.

The British transportation official was expected to arrive in Lake Charles, La., to head the probe today into the incident that blackened Galveston Island's beaches last weekend.

Kosch said Coast Guard and National Transportation Safety Board representatives also would attend the meeting to investigate the July 30 incident in which the Alvenus, a British oil tanker split across the bow off the coast of Lake Charles.

The investigation was set up to determine whether anything unusual happened during the ship's voyage from Venezuela, Kosch said.

An official with the NTSB in Washington, Luigi Colucciello, said Tuesday the NTSB asked to be included in the investigation even though the accident took place in international waters.

"We do lack jurisdiction, but our best fallback is to assist the British the best way we can," said Colucciello, who heads the board's marine safety division.

Meanwhile, crews Tuesday were still trying to clean up the 2,500 tons to 3,500 tons of oily sludge, and one official said it could take as long as four weeks to clean up the mess.

An additional 1,000 tons to 1,500 tons are still in the surf zone off the seawall, said Coast Guard spokesman Gary Stark.

Cost for cleanup could run into the millions of dollars, but Coast Guard spokesman Larry Clark said a special federal oil cleanup fund is being used to pay for initial costs, which Alvenus Shipping of London, the owners of the vessel, has agreed to pay.

Cleanup crews, using bulldozers, road graders and dump trucks, continued work Tuesday on the hard-hit western end of Galveston Island, where 30-foot strips of oily sludge covered six miles of coastline.

Along Bolivar Peninsula, Stark said a crew of 65 people worked Tuesday to remove the sludge from the environmentally sensitive area, but he said there were no serious effects to shrimping beds or other marine wildlife.

A special Coast Guard Gulf strike team was brought to Galveston from Shreveport, La., to assist in the oil clean-up efforts, Stark said.

Aboard the Alvenus, crews worked Tuesday to remove oil left in the ship, Stark said.

Jack Bushong, director of the Galveston Convention and Visitors Bureau, said Tuesday that hotels on the island have experienced a 10 percent drop in occupancy this week, but reservations were running at capacity for the weekend.

Beaches along the east end of Galveston continued to remain clear of tar and oil, Bushong said, but crews were still deployed each morning to clean up any balls of oil.

"We will continue to clean up every day, and that may be true for the next six months," Bushong said. "You have to clear the beaches every day, usually just for litter. It was God-sent that we did not get it (heavy pollution) on the east."

OPEC overproduction aggravating oil gult

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Overproduction within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has aggravated a longstanding oil glut, sending world oil markets into turmoil as prices have plunged in the last two months, some analysts say.

OPEC countries, including Saudi Arabia, long the disciplinarian of the group, have ignored their production quotas, officially reaffirmed three weeks ago in Vienna. In June and July, the cartel, according to published reports, pumped at least 18.5 million barrels a day, a million barrels more than the members have agreed the world market can sustain at their current price of $29 a barrel.

The International Energy Agency in its latest monthly report said that in the second quarter world supplies were 1.9 million barrels a day above demand.

The result is the strongest downward pressure on prices since March 1983, when OPEC nations slashed $5 from the price of a barrel, the largest price cut since the OPEC price peaked at $34 a barrel in 1981.

Last week, the Soviet Union, an OPEC competitor, knocked $1.50 off its price, lowering it to $27.50 a barrel. On the spot market, where more than a third of the world's crude oil is sold, prices are hovering around $26 or $27.

Gasoline prices in the United States this summer are the lowest since 1979. At $1.19 a gallon in mid-July, the average price was 7 cents less than at the same time last year.

"Oil prices have started to weaken since mid-June," said John Lichtblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation. "At a certain point, things get out of control. They are fairly close to it now. It is far more precarious than it was three weeks ago."

"Some people are predicting that oil producers are going to return to the policies of the 1960s and go for volume when they need revenue, rather than for price," said Henry Schuler, an energy expert at Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies.

"I don't think that's going to happen," he said. "They haven't unlearned the lessons of the 1970s."

Robert Copaken, an international economist at the Energy Department, said, "I think they will weather this particular downturn, but I would expect the price to come down somewhat more."

Another official price reduction may be avoided, however, if OPEC production levels are cut. Lichtblau said that August's nominations, the amount that OPEC companies tell their buyers they will produce, project a reduction of 1.5 million barrels a day. "Corrective forces are already at work," he said.

Demand can be expected to increase in the fall because of need for heating oil.

The biggest culprit in the glut of the past two months, analysts say, is Saudi Arabia. "The Saudis were the swing producer in OPEC, adjusting their production to keep OPEC output in line with demand," Schuler said. "But over the last few months, the Saudis have been among the main cheaters on their quotas."

Saudi Arabia's quota has been 5 million barrels a day, he said, adding that for the last six months the Arab kingdom has produced 5.5 million barrels daily. "This has triggered a psychology among oil buyers to stay out of the market, on the assumption prices will go down," Schuler said.

Only three months ago, the talk was of potential oil shortages, as Iran and Iraq intensified their tanker war in the Persian Gulf, attacking oil carriers outside the immediate war zone. Oil companies, fearing future shortages, stepped up their purchases. But the war didn't flare out of control.

"In June there was overproduction by Saudi Arabia and others because of the fear that the Straits of Hormuz might be closed," Lichtblau said. "So everyone rushed to the gulf to pick up more oil. When it turned out there was no threat, production had been increased for no reason."

During the tanker fighting, Iran and Iraq discounted the price of their oil up to $3 a barrel, ostensibly to compensate for insurance increases prompted by the attacks. However, when insurance rates went down, the discounts remained.

more

In July, the Saudis maintained their high production levels, the analysts said, because of a barter deal to exchange oil for Boeing 747s and Rolls Royce aircraft engines.

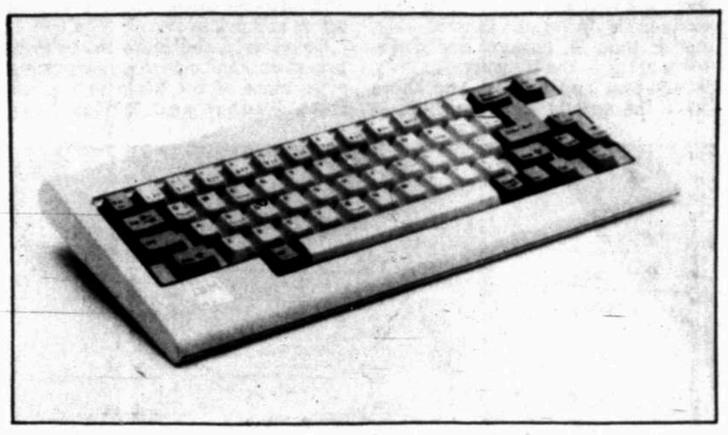
Government insures adjustable mortgages

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Mortgage bankers and other lenders across the country will begin offering adjustable rate mortgages (ARMs) insured by the federal government for the first time as federal regulations take effect.

Mark J. Riedy, Ph.D., executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America (MBA) said the new Federal Housing Administration insured loans "will offer one more financial tool for many middle — and moderate — income Americans to buy homes."



IBM reveals new PCjr keyboard features

BOCA RATON, Fla. — The new keyboard for the IBM features typewriter-like keys and the convenience of cordless operation using infrared signals to transmit information to the computer. It has 62 fully-programmable, full-travel, color-coded keys for easy use. The new keyboard is standard for all PCjr models being manufactured and will be made available at no charge to existing PCjr owners.

NAHB asks Congress to revise tax reforms

WASHINGTON — Congress should re-examine and substantially revise portions of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 which will "severely restrict the ability of many property owners to sell their property under the current high interest rate environment," according to the National Association of Home Builders.

John Koelemij, first vice president of NAHB and a home builder from Tallahassee, Florida, told a subcommittee of the Senate Finance Committee that the association supported the recently enacted deficit reduction tax package even though it placed "significant additional taxes on the real estate industry." And NAHB does not want to unravel that tax package, he said.

Mortgage rates too high for typical family

WASHINGTON — Home mortgage rates in June averaged nearly two percentage points too high for the typical American family to qualify for a loan on the median-priced existing home, according to the national Association of Realtors' most recent Housing Affordability Index.

If mortgage interest rates last month had been 10.26 percent or less, a family earning the national median income would have been able to afford the mortgage payments for that median-priced resale home, the association's monthly survey data showed.

Actually, however, the average effective interest rate on home loans closed in June was 12.25 percent, according to the federal Home Loan Bank Board's monthly survey of major lending institutions — meaning that the typical family could not afford the typical home.

NCR Corp.to open data center in Dallas

DALLAS — NCR Corp. has announced that the company has opened a new data center operation in Dallas, dedicated to providing online information processing services to commercial banks in Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, and Texas.

Regulators asked to tighten ARM standards

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Federal regulators must adopt stricter standards for disclosure on adjustable-rate mortgages, David O. Maxwell, chairman and chief executive officer of Fannie Mae (Federal National Mortgage Association), told a House subcommittee.

"The adjustable-rate mortgage, which generally has a lower initial interest rate and lower initial payment, is the only kind of home financing millions of Americans can afford," Maxwell said. "However, home buyers are justifiably confused by the many different kinds of ARMs available and the lack of information about them."

Hydrogen sulfide courses slated

During August and September, 1984, Safety International will conduct H2S certification courses at its headquarters in Midland. Classes start at 8 a.m. and are continued through 8 p.m. seven days per week. These courses are designed for any personnel directly or indirectly related to H2S in the drilling industry, including rig crews, service personnel and operators' representatives. For registration or further information, call 563-3770.

Faith in economy at lowest level

Associated Press

While the U.S. dollar was climbing to record highs, Americans' confidence in the economy fell in July to its lowest level in eight months, a business research group said.

The dollar continued its meteoric rise on Tuesday, hitting record highs against the currencies of France and Italy. Bolstered by stubbornly high U.S. interest rates, the dollar also hit an 11-year peak against the West German mark.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee, apparently agreeing that the federal income tax is too complex and riddled with loopholes, opened hearings Tuesday on plans for a fundamental overhaul of the income-tax system. But some committee members warned that the public not to expect a tax cut as a result.

The Conference Board, in a survey of 5,000 households nationwide, said the number of people describing business conditions and employment opportunities as good fell in July from June. The number who said they planned to buy cars, houses and major appliances in the near future also fell.

As a result, the business-supported research firm said its Consumer Confidence Index was 91.1 in July, down from 97.1 in June but up from 84.7 a year ago.

Results of the study indicate that the strong recovery "is now subsiding to a sturdy but sustainable pace," said Fabian Linden, executive director of the board's Consumer Research Center.

The dollar rose in European trading to a record high 8.9495 French francs, up from 8.8350 late Monday, and to an all-time peak of 1,788.92 Italian lire, up from 1,769.55.

Car rental prices becoming more competitive

NEW YORK — Travelers planning to fly into a city and rent a car are finding that automobile rental prices "are getting more and more like airline fares," says Sunny Murphy, a New York City travel consultant. The bewildering array of rental prices and conditions reflects the dramatic changes occurring in this mushrooming industry, and Miss Murphy says that consumers who shop around can find some attractive deals.

Finding a deal wasn't always so easy. For years, the auto rental industry had a fairly sedate three-tiered structure: There were the big three — Hertz, Avis and National — situated at every American airport and business district. They charged premium prices to provide new cars to business travelers. Then there were the national and regional moderate-price operations situated near, rather than in, airports and downtown areas — the Budgets, Thrifty's, Econo-cars and others. And there were the strictly local operators — the service stations and new car dealers who had a few cars they rented out.

But the old order has been shaken up. "The rental industry has been growing very rapidly," said Rajiv Tandon, "so there have been a lot of new entrants, and the players are redefining their traditional role in each arena." Tandon, corporate vice president and general manager of the car rental division of National Car Rental System Inc. of Minneapolis, added that the big three previously concentrated on business travelers and "used to concede the leisure market to your Budgets and your friendly local car dealer." But as that market grew, he said the big three began aggressively pursuing vacationers with low rates in such locations as Florida and California and with an assortment of special offers and prices.

Conversely, the more moderately priced national companies are going after more of the business market. Both Budget and Dollar have opened offices in a number of airline terminals alongside the big three. There's also been a proliferation of nationwide off-airport chains. Such companies as Alamo, General, Ajax, Greyhound and others are within easy reach of dozens of airports.

And the local tier has also changed. While the service station near the airport still quietly rents out cars, many local auto dealers have been expanding their rental fleets and marketing them more aggressively. The other new addition is the purveyor of slightly — or more than slightly — used cars. Rent-a-Wreck, with franchisees and imitators in many cities, offers somewhat shopworn but perfectly functional cars at bargain rates.

Tandon says he had found more than 700 car rental companies in the United States when he quit counting, and they're all competing for all segments of the market.

Thus, although the big three charge decidedly higher basic rates than the others, Miss Murphy says, "They are engaged in a price war every bit as much as the smaller companies." The major rental companies offer a variety of advance purchase rates and assorted other discounts. During the week of July 4, for example, Hertz charged $18 a day for a compact car with unlimited mileage in Pittsfield, Mass.; that's well below the rates of local competitors and also below Hertz's usual weekday price of $46.99.

One particularly attractive alternative many rental car companies now offer is the weekend special. The majority of business customers want cars only during weekdays, so to utilize their fleets on weekends, many rental concerns offer cut-rate deals. These are typically available from Thursday noon through Monday noon and require keeping the car at least two or three days. In Colorado Springs, for example, Hertz offers a compact car for $16.96 a day — well below its posted weekday price of $41.99 for the same car.

Dawson financial improves

Dawson Geophysical Co. has reported improved financial results for the first nine months and third quarter of fiscal 1984, ending June 30, 1984.

L. Decker Dawson, president and chief executive officer, said revenues of $7,467,000 for the first nine months of fiscal 1984 yielded net income of $701,000, or $.24 per common share outstanding. This compares to revenues of $8,490,000 and net income of $494,000, or $.17 per share, recorded for the same period a year ago.

For the three months ending June 30, 1984, revenues were $3,040,000, compared to $2,409,000 recorded during the third quarter of fiscal 1983. Net income for the three-month period was $371,000, compared to $87,000 a year ago, and earnings per share were $.13 compared to $.03 last year.

OPEC

The Saudis' actions created a psychological climate for the drop in spot prices, Lichtblau said. "When the watchdog violates the agreement, how can you expect other OPEC members to respect it?" he said.

Lichtblau said the world oil glut has grown over the last decade as the price went up, making it profitable to search for new oil and to switch to other fuels such as coal and gas, as well as to promote energy conservation in industries, homes and automobiles.

Worldwide oil consumption outside the Soviet bloc peaked in 1979 at 52 million barrels a day and has steadily declined, to 45 million barrels in 1983, he said. U.S. demand for oil peaked at 18.8 million barrels a day in 1978, dropping to 15.2 million barrels a day last year. U.S. imports dropped from a peak of 8.6 million barrels a day in 1977 to 4.2 million last year.

Whatever the cycles of oil price and supply, the consensus is good news ahead for consumers. If the Iran-Iraq war ends, both nations can be expected to step up production, thus putting more downward pressure on prices, Copaken said.

In any event, no price increases are foreseen. "The market is essentially oversupplied," Lichtblau said. "The best OPEC can do is maintain the price structure the way it is."

The company is spending more than $204 million to expand its chip-making and electronics manufacturing capacity.

ECONOMY

In opening the tax hearings, Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., said, "The time is ripe to devise a tax system that is simple, fair, and — most important — a system that will encourage savings and investment, to lay the groundwork for sustained economic growth for our nation and to create jobs and a better life for all of our citizens."

Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the committee, said a decline in voluntary compliance with the tax laws shows the need for major reform. But he added, "Everybody now thinks they're going to get a tax reduction. I don't think that's possible."

A series of Treasury Department hearings confirmed what members of Congress have been saying: Many Americans consider the tax system to be so complex that it is unworkable and so filled with exceptions, exemptions and deductions that it promotes a feeling that too many people are getting away without paying.

In other economic developments Tuesday:

—Pan American World Airways reported a $49.8 million loss for the second quuarter, largely from frequent flyer redemptions it wanted to clear away before its peak season. The airline earned $10.4 in the period a year ago.

—The Defense Logistics Agency said it lifted a threat to ban National Semiconductor Corp. from government contracts after the computer chip maker took "significant corrective actions" to meet government testing requirements. The company was convicted on 40 criminal counts "related to the company's 1978-1981 undertesting of microcircuits used in a large variety of aerospace and military applications."

Exxon planning Crane County tertiary project

Staff reports

Exxon Corp., Midland, has made application to the Texas Railroad Commission for a tertiary recovery project in Crane County.

Exxon is proposing to initiate a carbon dioxide flood of the Devonian formation in the Cordona Lake field. The Devonian is beneath the Fault Block "A" Unit and the Cordona Lake Unit.

In addition to current injection wells being used, Exxon proposes to convert 10 producing wells to injection wells and drill an additional six injection wells.

The proposed formation contains hydrogen sulfide gas which Exxon plans to produce and reinject with the carbon dioxide gas.

Noble to increases budget by 50 percent

ARDMORE, Okla. — Noble Affiliates Inc. has announced that it will increase its oil and gas capital budget for 1984 by 50 percent to $150 million.

George J. McLeod, president and chief executive officer of the company, said the decision reflects the success of Noble's exploration and development program. "We expect to cover these expenditures with internal cash flow and available cash reserves," McLeod said. "Our goal in 1984 is to substantially expand our reserve base, taking full advantage of the current low cost of doing business."

Decline in oil equipment exports levels off

HOUSTON — The two-year decline in U.S. exports of petroleum equipment appears to have bottomed out, according to Petroleum Information.

The dollar value of exports in June was $227 million compared with $228 million in June 1983, marking the first time since the decline began that monthly figures have been close to matching those of the previous year.

U.S. petroleum equipment exports are a barometer of worldwide oil and natural gas exploration and production operations.

Iran praises attacks on shipping

Iran on Tuesday praised the recent attacks on commercial ships in the Red Sea and said mines had been sown there by the same Moslem extremist group that claimed responsibility for the suicide bombing of the U.S. Marines in Beirut.

But it denied involvement in the attacks.

The White House said such praise was "outside the norms of civilized behavior."

The United States announced it was sending a squadron of minesweeping helicopters and a support ship to the Red Sea, at Egypt's request. Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch said the roughly 200 U.S. military personnel were under orders to find and destroy mines, but not to prevent the sowing of new explosive devices.

In the Saudi Arabian port of Jidda, a survivor of the Oceanic Energy, the latest ship damaged in what was believed to be a mine explosion, said a Taiwanese crewman was missing and presumed dead. He would be the first casualty since the mysterious explosions began last month.

At least 10 vessels have been damaged by explosions in the Red Sea in the past month, five in the Gulf of Suez, the northern end of the 1,450-mile-long sea, and the rest near the North Yemeni coast at the southern tip of the waterway.

Tehran radio said mines planted by the extremist Islamic Jihad (Islamic holy war) organization caused the explosions and said they were directed against the United States, ritain and France.

"All the arrogant powers are helpless, unable to save the dozens of ships facing destruction in the Gulf of Suez and the Red Sea every day," said official Tehran radio. It said the operation " ... added to the series of failures experienced by the arrogant powers in our Islamic region since the blow dealt by the Islamic Jihad organization in Beirut."

Egyptian and Western diplomatic sources in Cairo said Iran's applause of the explosions came close to an admission of guilt. Last week, an anonymous caller claiming to represent the group told London news agencies that 190 mines had been planted in the Red Sea.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes did not blame Iran, but commented: "Praise for random acts of terrorism is outside the norms of civilized behavior."

Islamic Jihad is believed to be a pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremist group. Shiism is the dominant Moslem sect in Farsi-speaking Iran, but a minority in most Arabic-speaking nations.

Diplomatic sources, however, have speculated that more than one group may be using the name Islamic Jihad as a cover.

Hussein Musavi, Iran's prime minister, later denied the Islamic Republic's government was involved in the minings that threaten shipping in the busy waterways connecting South and East Asia and Europe.

"Iran has not been involved in this issue in any way," he was quoted by the officials Islamic Republic News Agency as saying at a news conference in Tehran.

The agency report, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, said of Islamic Jihad: "It's nature is unknown to the Iranian government."

Anonymous callers claiming to represent the group have also claimed responsibility for the kidnappings of three Americans in Beirut and the suicide bombings of the French military headquarters in Lebanon on the same day as the Marne bombing, Oct. 23, and an Israeli military office in Lebanon.

Musavi also said two Iranian ships had been stopped and searched in the Suez Canal, the agency said:

"The Islamic Republic could not sit and watch its ships halted in the Suez Canal while others sail freely. We warn that we cannot remain silent if these actions continue," he was quoted as saying.

He did not elaborate, but Egypt, which owns the canal, has said it is stopping ships from two nations. They are believed to be Iran and Libya.

Burch said four RH-53D Sea Stallion helicopters and a support ship will be deployed in the Gulf of Suez. It said the force will cooperate with the Egyptians "to carry out mine countermeasure operations designed to enhance security of navigation in the area."

U.S. officials said the helicopters drag devices in the water that detect and destroy mines.

American Embassy officials in Cairo said the minesweeping helicopters were expected to arrive in Egypt within a week. Burch said two giant C-5 transport planes had already taken off with the first of the four helicopters.

He said there was "circumstantial evidence" — witness' reports of sea captains and other authorities — that mines had been planted in the Red Sea.

Exhumations didn't prove infants had been given drug

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A prosecutor says he has suspicions but no evidence to prove that two infants who mysteriously died in a San Antonio hospital had been given the drug that nurse Genene Jones used to kill a Kerrville infant.

But the exhumations that Bexar County District Attorney Sam Millsap hoped would confirm preliminary reports proved worthless. Several hours after the remains were recovered Tuesday, Millsap said the decomposition was too severe to allow further tissue tests.

"A piece of the puzzle that we had hoped might be in place as a result of these disinterments is not in place," Millsap said.

The two infants — not identified by Millsap — died in September 1981 and January 1982 during a string of suspicious deaths and illnesses in the pediatric intensive care unit of the county-owned Medical Center Hospital.

"I have every suspicion, but at this point nothing more than suspicion, that both of these cases were homicide," he said, refusing to comment on whether nurse Jones came in contact with the two infants.

Ms. Jones is awaiting trial on charges she used a blood-thinning drug to injure a small boy while she worked at the hospital. She has been sentenced to 99 years in prison in the September 1982 death of 15-month-old Chelsea McClellan, a patient at the Kerrville clinic where Ms. Jones worked after leaving San Antonio.

STATE

Scientists discovered succinylcholine, a powerful muscle relaxant, in tissue taken after the girl's remains were exhumed.

Millsap sought the Tuesday exhumations after Dr. Fredric Rieders, the Philadelphia toxicologist who helped find the drug in Chelsea's remains, found indications of it in brain tissues taken from the two children before burial.

"Succinylcholine was probably present" in the brain tissue of both children, Millsap said, adding that Rieders would have to find it in muscle and organ tissue in order to make a criminal case. But decomposition "has made it impossible to secure tissue samples of the quality required," Millsap told reporters.

"The doctor can say at this point that the succinylcholine is probably there, but he can't testify to a reasonable certainty that it's there," said the prosecutor.

Rieders and Swedish toxicologist Dr. Bo Holmstedt used new techniques to discover the difficult-to-trace drug in Chelsea's body.

Millsap said the 19-month investigation of the Medical Center deaths will continue.

"There are many, many different ways that cases of this type can be and are being investigated," he said.

He blamed hospital officials for delaying the investigation by not notifying the medical examiner of the suspicious deaths that occured while Ms. Jones worked at the facility.

"The deaths of these two infants were suspicious when they occurred," he said. "If ever there were cases that should have been turned over to the medical examiner because of the suspicious circumstances, these are those cases.

"As a result of the fact that that was not done, and the fact that the muscle and organ tissue were destroyed, it's impossible for us at this point to do the tests that were necessary," Millsap added.

The statute of limitations bars prosecution of hospital officials for failing to report the deaths, according to the prosecutor.

Carrier's mother sues teen-ager

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston woman is suing a teen-ager accused of killing her mail carrier daughter for $5 million alleging the slaying prompted her husband's death.

Bargara R. Schatz is seeking $5 million in actual damages — plus punitive damages to be determined by a jury — in a wrongful death suit filed Tuesday.

Mrs. Schatz is the mother of Debra Sue Schatz, 23, who disappeared June 7 while delivering mail in a fashionable west Houston neighborhood. Miss Schatz's body was found two days later in a remote, wooded area in northwest Harris County.

Mrs. Schatz's husband, Albert, 57, died Monday of a heart attack.

Defendants in the suit are 17-year-old David Port, who has been charged with murder, and Bernard and Odette Port, the youth's father and stepmother who have repeatedly refused to testify against their son.

David Port was charged with murder in the mail carrier's slaying and is free on $20,000 bond.

In the civil suit filed Tuesday, the Schatz family alleges that David Port's parents were negligent because they permitted him easy access to dangerous weapons.

The suit also claims that Miss Schatz' slaying led to the death of her father.

Houston attorney Joe Jamail, who filed the suit, said Albert Schatz had a heart condition that was being controlled medically, but that the emotional stress and grief caused by his daughter's death caused Schatz to decline rapidly and, finally, to die.

Jamail said if the Ports refuse to give the depositions he'll seek through the subpoena process, he'll aim for a directed settlement by a district court judge.

The elder Ports were jailed for 6 hours June 27 for refused to testify before a grand jury investigating Miss Schatz' murder. A state appeals court later ordered them freed.

Assistant District Attorney Brad Beers said Monday he will ask another grand jury to subpoena the Ports. Beers and the Port's lawyer, Randy Schaffer, said the issue of the Port testimony could again be carried to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

A new grand jury next week will hear evidence in the case as the state continues to seek an indictment against David Port.

Beers said the state will again try to force the testimony of Bernard and Odette Port because, he said, their statements are important to "the truth of the matter."

The couple claimed their Jewish beliefs prevented them from testifying before an earlier grand jury. They also claimed that a privilege of confidentiality existed between parent and child, just as it does between spouses.

Reagan, Bush attend public prayer breakfast

DALLAS (AP) — Republican Party leaders say President Reagan and Vice President George Bush will attend a public prayer breakfast on the last day of the Republican National Convention.

GOP officials said Tuesday the Aug. 23 breakfast at Reunion Arena, after Reagan's nomination but before his acceptance speech, is to be the biggest event outside the convention itself. About 14,000 tickets are available at $10 each.

"I am delighted with that news," said Dallas County Republican Chairman Fred Meyer, who also chairs the Republican Host Committee for the Convention. "We're going to have a super program at that Ecumenical Prayer Breakfast."

Meyer made the announcement at a gathering of nearly 2,500 people at the Convention Center arena who have offered to serve as host committee volunteers. The volunteers gathered for a pep talk and orientation.

"First of all, they're learning where the convention center is," Host Committee Vice Chairman Martha Weisend said in an interview. "They can get an idea of the layout, so they'll understand their assignments in advance. So we're killing two or three birds with one stone.

"Plus we're having a little bit of an old-fashioned pep rally," she said.

Meyer and other GOP leaders gave advance thanks to the volunteers, more than 15,000 of whom will serve as drivers, guides, ushers and perform other tasks during the convention.

Commission advises tougher standards

Violators may get higher fines

AUSTIN (AP) — The Sunset Advisory Commission is considering recommendations that the Texas Air Control Board get tough on air pollution standards, including penalties of up to $25,000 a day for violators.

Present law calls for daily fines of $50 to $1,000 which "do not provide an effective deterrent, particularly to large companies," the Sunset Advisory Commission staff said Tuesday.

"We certainly concur and think this would be a deterrent to violators," said Bill Stewart, executive director of the board.

The board is one of a number of state agencies being considered by the commission, which will make recommendations to the 1985 Legislature. Under the Sunset Act, state agencies are reviewed each 12 years by the commission, which recommends whether their operations be continued, discontinued or revised.

The commission will vote on the staff report at a later meeting.

"Enhancing the air quality of Texas is important for protection of the health and physical property of the state's population," the commission staff reported. "The regulatory functions of the TACB continue to be needed to ensure that the quality of the air meets acceptable standards to provide this protection."

However, the commission staff recommended several changes:

— Public hearings, which are not required now, should be held on all requested permits for emission of air pollutants.

— The board chairman should be appointed by the governor, not elected by other board members.

— The agency should be required to collect enough fees to offset the cost to the state of its operations.

— The board should be able to levy administrative penalties to obtain quicker compliance with its regulations and civil penalties should be increased for violators of board orders.

"The civil penalties in the statute were set in 1965 and authorized a minimum fine of $50 and a maximum fine of $1,000 per day, per violation," the staff report said. "The size of these penalties does not provide an effective deterrent, particularly to large companies. In addition, other state and federal pollution control agencies have significantly higher financial penalties available to deter non-compliance."

"For these reasons, the statute should be amended to increase the maximum fine to $25,000 per day, per violation," the staff said.

Ken Cramer, testifying for the Sierra Club in Texas, said there should be another deterrent added for non-compliance.

"Permits should have to be renewed about every 10 years," Cramer said, "and they should be tied to the compliance record of that firm in the past."

Cramer also said local cities and counties should be allowed to set air quality standards higher than state standards to fit local conditions. He pointed to Harris County which he said has one of the five worst records among the nation's largest cities in ozone pollution.

"We think the Air Control Board dragged its feet in Harris County," he said. "They should have gotten control of this situation 10 years ago instead of just now. We don't want that to happen in Dallas-Fort Worth and El Paso, which already have air pollution above federal levels."

Cramer said San Antonio and Austin still have air pollution levels below federal standards.

Lack of funds closes firefighters' museum

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — Lack of funding caused the Fire Museum of Texas to close after six years of operation, officials say.

"It was hit or miss as long as it lasted," staff member Mason Lankford said Tuesday.

The museum, which opened in 1978, had more than $500,000 in debts when it closed Friday. Lankford, 62, did everything from mop the floors to plan the exhibits of the museum as its only staffer, but is now out of a job.

The closing by the Firemen's and Fire Marshals' Association of Texas came despite efforts to raise money by association members and others, including Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

Robert Stubblefield, president of the Firemen's Association, said the museum's building and land will be put up for sale. But he said the museum may reopen in a few years at the association's Austin headquarters.

Association members and Lewis blamed the museum's failure on a lack of visitors, which numbered 22,000 in the museum's last year of operation and 18,000 the previous year.

"I doubt very seriously whether it could have been very profitable, given its nature," said Lewis. "I think it's a shrine to Texas firefighters, and it's a shame that they closed it down."

Lewis said he contacted foundations statewide to try to raise museum funds.

STATE in brief

Inmate stabs guard

HOUSTON (AP) — A Texas prison inmate was transferred out of Darrington prison unit after a guard was stabbed, a prison spokesman said.

The guard was stabbed in the forearm with a nail-like instrument and received lacerations to his right shoulder after Mohammed Gholamian allegedly confronted him while returning from a shower, said spokesman Charles Brown.

The stabbing occurred just hours after a team began searching the unit for illegal weapons, Brown said.

The 33-year-old guard, whose name was not immediately available, was in good condition in Angleton-Danberry Hospital in Rosharon, Brown said.

Brutality may be probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — League of United Latin American Citizens officials say they have asked two House subcommittees to investigate allegations of brutality by Dallas police.

LULAC officials said the request Tuesday was prompted by the fatal shooting July 28 of Guadalupe Martinez, 29, by Dallas police.

A LULAC statement said the subcommittee on criminal justice and the subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights, both subcommittees of the Judiciary Committee, were asked to conduct hearings in Dallas into "the excessive use of force by police officers against private citizens."

Police said Martinez was killed after he ignored repeated orders to stop his car and tried to run over an officer.

Parking will be problem

DALLAS (AP) — The arrival of delegates and officials for the Republican National Convention later this month will cause traffic congestion at about the same time many parents will be getting birth certificates downtown for children entering school, officials say.

The convention is scheduled the week before school begins, and officials urged parents to get school paperwork ready earlier this year.

"Parking is going to be the main problem," said Rick Risser, manager of the Dallas County Vital Statistics Bureau at City Hall. "They might have to park a few blocks away from City Hall and walk."

Meeting held on artificial intelligence

AUSTIN (AP) — A California expert on computer science says the basic theme of artificial intelligence is to tell computer programs what to know, not what to do.

Dr. Douglas Lanat, professor of computer sciences at Stanford University, was one of the speakers Tuesday at the national conference sponsored by the American Association of Artificial Intelligence.

At one research project at Stanford, researchers provided a computer system with knowledge to diagnose blood infections and meningitis and to recommend drug treatment based on rules and on the structure of the system for that task, he said. Researchers based the effectiveness of the project on the amount of knowledge of the expert system.

"We have seen some expert systems do quite well," Lenat said. "If we can build expert systems that have utilized the success of previous systems, we can design them successfully."

Lenat said "one of the real dangers of the lure of expert systems is how to get knowledge from the heads of experts to expert systems and how to evaluate the system once built."

Couple likes garlic around the house

HENDERSON (AP) — The first bulbs arrived from California at Skal Farms, Inc., of Henderson in January 1983. Eagerly, Clarence R. Skalnik and his wife Gen greeted the boxes of garlic which held their new start at life.

Skalnik, 63, a retired engineering consultant, moved to Joinerville from League City in 1979. The couple intended to settle down, relax and enjoy life in their retirement home in East Texas, Mrs. Skalnik's original home.

However, idleness wore on the Skalniks like a wool cloak on a hot day. Skalnik had no job to keep him busy, and the couple's children, Janis and Joel, had grown up and left home long ago.

So the Skalniks searched for new challenges, and opened Skal Farms, Inc.

Skal Farms is the home of Camelot Garlic Spread or Sauce, the couple's unique combination of garlic, margarine, lemon, parsley and pepper. Its uses range from gourmet recipes to classic garlic bread, said Skalnik.

The first samples of Camelot Garlic Butter came from the Skalniks' home kitchen in 1982.

"We used our palates and our friends' palates to see if what we had was good," said Skalnik. "We considered their suggestions even after the plant opened."

Though operations began in January 1983, the product did not go on the market until the following August, after surveys were conducted in Henderson to find what the public preferred, Skalnik said.

When Gibson's announced the grand opening of its food department in 1983, Skalnik jumped at the opportunity and got his first retail outlet. Today the garlic spread is retailed in stores throughout Texas, and Skalnik is in the process of confirming sales to grocery store chains, as well as to institutions, such as restaurants and hospitals.

In quest of the perfect blend, satisfying customer demands and discovering cost-effective production became the Skalniks' biggest challenges.

Today, the operation runs smoothly with only eight to 10 workers manning the machinery. The freezer currently holds about 6,000 pounds of margarine, which will soon be converted into about 15,000 eight-ounce containers for retail.

The first step in making the spread is crushing the whole garlic bulbs with a wooden board to get to the cloves.

"This may sound primeval, but it is the best way to get the cloves out of the bulb," Skalnik said.

The second step, peeling the garlic cloves, proved cumbersome and costly. When the plant first opened, the peeling was done by hand. Each employee would peel one pound of garlic cloves per hour. Skalnik called different places in California to see if there were not a faster way to peel the bulbs.

After considering various methods and suggestions, he used his own engineering skills to design a machine that can peel 30 pounds of cloves an hour.

The cloves are placed in a diamond-shaped metal dish. Once a lid has been bolted to its top, an air compressor is plugged into the bottom of the dish. The skins are simply blown out through a spout by the powerful air blast.

From there, the product continues down the assembly line for blending with other ingredients. Finally, it is placed in containers for retail sale.

It takes about half a day to blend 330 garlic bulbs and 650 pounds of butter into about 1,350 containers of marketable spread.

Skalnik is particular about the ingredients he uses. He says he prefers super jumbo garlic to elephant garlic because of the former's flavor. And he says he gets his garlic from California since that state provides the best garlic in the nation.

"We had to shop around to find the best supplier but now we have a good one," Skalnik said.

Lemon juice also must stand the test of Skalnik's particular taste buds.

"Some people say they can't taste a difference, but I can, and I want the best tasting on the market, so we use only the Real Lemon Juice."

The low-cholesterol margarine should appeal to the health-conscious consumer. Originally, the couple had planned to use butter, but when cholesterol received bad medical reports, they opted for a healthier substitute.

"This way it is a gourmet food that is good for you," Skalnik said.

The garlic spread can be used for preparing different meats and poultry, said Skalnik, as well as for scrambled eggs, and popcorn.

He does caution, "When oils of garlic get too hot, a bitter aftertaste is left. We recommend that the product be applied after the meats are cooked."

Garlic has a history of promoting better health, said Skalnik, who has researched his product. Egyptian slaves took this herb for strength and courage. The Chinese, the Greeks and the Romans found garlic effective in relieving everything from indigestion and rheumatism to rashes and respiratory difficulties.

Elephants are much in demand

DALLAS (AP) — Baby Star's hectic social calendar for the week of the Republican National Convention is enough to make the average social climber weep with envy.

With 50 dates coming up, Baby Star is practicing her dance steps and dusting off her harmonica.

"I'm still booking her for parties for some of the most elite people in Dallas," said Bruno Loyale, the trapeze artist-turned-tentmaker who owns Baby Star — a dainty, 750-pound performing elephant.

Independent oilman Jerry McCutchin Sr. and his wife Sharon snagged Baby Star for a party at their swanky 50-acre Las Colinas estate — but it wasn't easy.

"I think there is quite a demand for elephants," McCutchin said Tuesday. "Sharon had to pull some strings to get this elephant."

Loyale says Baby Star is also going to a party given by a member of the billionarie Hunt family, a party at the Fairmont Hotel that may be attended by the president and dozens of other public and private functions.

"I'll have her in beautiful red, white and blue wardrobe with a rhinestone tiara," Loyale said. "Her toenails will be painted white and she'll have an American flag to hold in her trunk."

Chere Hickock, the owner of the Animal Trackers talent agency in Dallas, said she has so many elephant bookings she had to put a chart on the wall to keep up.

The exclusive Corrigan Cup Polo Ball and a reception for the Michigan delegation are among the parties for which Hickock is providing pachyderms.

Karen Dillon, who is entertaining the Michigan delegation, says an elephant is a status symbol for many hosteses.

"I just hope the elephant doesn't take a swim in our pool," she said.

Terry Gonzales, public relations director for the International Wildlife Park, a safari-style amusement park in the Dallas suburb of Grand Prairie, said elephant inquiries began six months ago.

"You would not believe the barrage of requests we've had," she said.

Although the park has 22 elephants, only Emma, a 15-year-old, two-ton Asian elephant, and Dutch, a 350-pound orphan from Zimbabwe, are participating in the convention or related activities.

Gonzales said Emma will be on the convention floor on the final night, at a news conference held by the local welcoming committee and at the opening of an exhibition at the Dallas Museum of Natural History.

"She may look like Michael Jackson with his one glove," Gonzales said. "She hurt her foot several weeks ago and we had a custom boot made for her."

Dutch is going to a private party at the Neiman-Marcus department store the night before the convention begins, Gonzales said.

Cotton gins in operation 24 hours a day

CHAPMAN RANCH (AP) — After the summer harvest, the asphalt ribbon winding through the Chapman Ranch is trimmed in white.

Fields and farm roads are cloud-kissed and all trails lead to the high-tech version of Eli Whitney's masterwork, the cotton gin.

Ginning season began in South Texas about five weeks ago and all of the dozen or so gins operating in Nueces County are now running 24 hours a day, every day.

Trailer after trailer hauling blocks of cotton pour into the Chapman Gin where raw fiber is weighed on huge Toledo scales and sucked through galvanized pipe into a corrugated tin barn.

The gin is a battleship's boiler room of spinning belts, whirring fans and a constant jet engine roar. White fluff pours through the machines which separate seed and "plant trash" from the prized lint.

The fiber travels through a series of whirling blades and blowers, finally emerging as a soft cascading cloud from a mammoth machine two stories high.

K.R. Dossey, manager of the Chapman Gin, waits all year for the rush of the six-week season.

"Ginning gets in your blood, I guess," the 20-year veteran of the cotton business said.

Like the teen-age owner of a new sports car, Dossey proudly shows a visitor each machine and engine in the ginning process.

Chapman's Gin cleans 12 to 15 bales of cotton an hour with a staff of 20 men, Dossey said. Speed, the ability to get cotton baled and out of the weather, is what cotton gins sell, Dossey said.

The Chapman Gin is fast, but some gins can clean 25 to 30 bales an hour, said A.L. Higgins, president of the Texas Ginners Association.

"We used to think ginning 40 to 45 bales in 12 hours was really getting with it. Now the most modern gins can bale that much in two hours," he said.

State-of-the-art gins cost $1.5 to $2 million, Higgins said. With increased cost in labor, electricity and natural gas for drying cotton, small gins are finding it hard to survive, he said.

"Competition is fierce. There are about 645 gins operating in Texas but some people predict that before long there may be only a third of these gins still in business," he said.

For those who hang on, a few weeks of work can produce enough income to carry them through the whole year.

Higgins said cotton production is high and gins in many parts of the state are expecting a good year.

"The crops in the Rio Grande Valley are beautiful this year," Higgins said. "Money will be made."

He predicted the cotton harvest will also be abundant in sections of the High Plains.

"Around Plainview we have the best looking crops since '65," Higgins said. "This scares you because you know any moment you could be wiped out by hail."

Farmers in unirrigated sections of West Texas — around Abilene, Sweetwater, Snyder and Paducah — have almost nothing in their fields because of the prolonged drought, he said.

But Dossey is sitting pretty, surrounded by processed pillows of cotton that will total about 6,000 bales by season's end.

And what then?

"We get ready for next year," Dossey said.

This is an artist's conception of a space station proposed by President Ronald Reagan in an article in Popular Mechanics magazine. The shuttle-based station would include pods where NASA and European Space Agency astronauts could live and work. At left, a roll of crystalline metal floats outside of a foundry module as an astronaut in a jet powered chair prepares to load onto a Japanese ferry rocket.

Reagan: Space station 'next bold step'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, already on record favoring construction of a space station, has written a magazine article extolling the $8 billion project as "the next bold step" in space.

"We stand on the verge of realizing one of mankind's most ambitious dreams, that of building a permanently manned base in space," the president says in a bylined article scheduled to appear in the September issue of Popular Mechanics. "Such a space station will assure U.S. leadership in space into the next century."

Reagan writes that the economic benefits of America's space program far outweigh the cost and that the station will be "a major part of our strategy for conquering the frontier of space."

He predicted the space station will be a base for scientific and commercial activities, will promote international cooperation and will encourage American industry to move beyond Earth.

Reagan's article, a copy of which was sent to news organizations Tuesday, will be on the newsstands about the time that the Republican National Convention begins in Dallas on Aug. 20.

The magazine's Anne Beckenstein said "we were in negotiation with the White House for over a year and the fact that the story appears at this time is mostly coincidental."

The president endorsed a space station, to be in orbit by the early 1990s, in his State of the Union message in January and he has signed legislation appropriating $150 million to be spent on the project in the year that begins Oct. 1.

He writes that the space station program plays a major role in keeping the aerospace industry competitive and efficient and "is a powerful stimulus to our young people to study science and engineering."

He adds that "obstacles to private sector space activities will be removed and active steps will be taken to spur private investment ... Bringing into full play America's greatest asset — the vitality of our free enterprise system — will do more to spur development of space for the benefit of man than any of us can now imagine."

NATION IN BRIEF

Jet scrapes engine on runway

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A passenger described it as "really scary" when a People Express jumbo jet carrying 412 people scraped an engine on a runway while landing at Newark International Airport during a severe thunderstorm.

The airport was closed briefly Tuesday evening as emergency vehicles rushed to the Boeing 747 following the rough landing, which occurred as heavy rains and winds up to 45 mph hit. Flight 6 from Los Angeles taxied to the terminal under its own power after the landing, police said. No injuries or major damage were reported.

"It was really scary," said Prudence Albertus of Stony Brook, N.Y. "There was thunder and lightning and the plane hit really hard."

Budget cuts led to understaffing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — "Nickel and dime" federal budget cuts led to understaffing at North Carolina's warning system before tornadoes killed 59 people and injured 1,300 others in the Carolinas last spring, National Weather Service officials say.

James Campbell, a member of a National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration survey team that evaluated the performance of weather service employees at Raliegh-Durham airport, said Tuesday the staff performed well during the March 28 despite being shorthanded.

Congress has cut about 100 weather service jobs over four years.

A "warning-preparedness meteorologist" and more advanced weather radar could have resulted in earlier warnings, the report said.

Investigation breaks crime ring

MIAMI (AP) — A two-year investigation of international drug trafficking has broken a crime ring accused of smuggling 54 tons of methaqualone into the United States, federal officials say.

In four indictments issued Aug. 2 in U.S. District Court in Miami and unsealed Tuesday, 57 people were charged with continuing criminal enterprises, multiple conspiracies, or single counts in the illegal trafficking of marijuana, cocaine, or methaqualone, used to make Quaaludes, from 1979 to 1983, authorities said. Eighteen suspects in the case have been arrested so far, with more arrests expected.

A Drug Enforcement Agency spokesman said the drugs were seized in 24 shipments from 1979 to 1983. Police in West Germany, the Bahamas, Panama, Austria, Spain and Colombia assisted in the probe.

Jackson seeks South African trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Jesse L. Jackson has applied for a visa to visit South Africa, saying he hoped to "facilitate a dialogue" that might lead to changes in the white-ruled nation.

Jackson, the black civil rights leader who failed in his effort to capture the Democratic presidential nomination, said after meeting with the South African ambassador that he "didn't see any reason why in principle (the visa) would be rejected."

He said he was told the application would have to be submitted to the entire Cabinet for approval.

Jackson said he would like to make the trip in August, accompanied by a delegation of ministers and other human rights leaders, and said he would consult with the State Department before going.

Number of government workers up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of people working for government has resumed the gradual increase under way since World War II, following two years of unusual declines, the Census Bureau says.

Employment by federal, state and local governments totaled just over 16 million as of last October, up from 15.9 million a year earlier, the bureau reported Tuesday. The nation's overall work force was nearly 102 million in October, Labor Department figures show.

Local governments remain the biggest public employers, with 9.3 million workers as of last October, up 0.2 percent from 1982. State governments employed 5.3 million, up 1.8 percent, and the federal civilian work force rose 1 percent to nearly 2.9 million.

Candidate asks friends for help

WASHINGTON (AP) — J. Harvie Wilkinson III has acknowledged that he asked 14 friends and associates to use their influence on his behalf when he found out his nomination as a federal appeals judge was in trouble.

Wilkinson, 39, told the Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday that Justice Department officials had told him supposedly confidential information that an American Bar Association panel checking his references was split over whether he was qualified.

Jurors get contrasting picture of De Lorean

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The jury about to receive the case of John De Lorean has heard the automaker alternately portrayed as an American hero brought down by a devious government and a money-crazed madman in league with the devil.

The powerful summations, casting the De Lorean proceeding as a morality play with consequences for society, marked the close of defense and prosecution cases Tuesday in the 22-week cocaine-trafficking trial.

U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi said he would instruct jurors in the law today, then let them begin deliberations.

De Lorean, 59, was arrested after a "sting" operation by government undercover agents and charged with conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine in a desperate bid to save his auto company. If convicted on all charges, he could face 67 years in prison.

The silver-haired automaker sat silently in a packed courtroom Tuesday as his attorney, Howard Weitzman, lauded him as a businessman "who signifies the American dream," but one who has been stripped of his pride and humiliated.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James Walsh lashed out at De Lorean as the personification of evil, calling him a greedy man "with the conscience of a tomcat," corrupted by money.

"This case has a rich odor of corruption and decay," he said. "... This case stinks of money. ... Is there any question money was the great engine driving John De Lorean?"

Walsh, who spoke last, likened De Lorean's story to the legend of Faust, a man who sells his soul to the devil, accepting "eternal damnation for some earthly temporal benefit."

"He did, in every sense, shake hands with the devil," said Walsh.

Walsh showed jurors his favorite piece of evidence — the videotape of De Lorean's arrest in which he looks at a suitcase full of cocaine and laughingly declares it "better than gold.

"It's the laughter that chills," he said. "Discussing cocaine and heroin — it's the devil's laughter."

"If you look closely," the prosecutor continued, "I think you'll see the face of greed, the face of evil, a man driven mad by the need to escape failure at any cost.

"It's a handsome face in some ways," he added, "but utterly corrupt."

As jurors stared at him, De Lorean sat still, unflinching.

Earlier Tuesday, Weitzman accused Walsh of evading the question of De Lorean's guilt or innocence and dealing in character assasination instead.

Expert: Gator 'in his home' when child was attacked

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. (AP) — The river where an 11-year-old boy drowned after being hauled down by a quarter-ton alligator should have been off limits to swimmers, according to a reptile expert who said the animal was "in his home."

"Man causes the problem," said Tommy Gore, who is called in to snare nuisance alligators which threaten humans. "No children should be allowed to swim in the St. Lucie River. Three years ago, the largest alligator ever caught in that river — 13 feet, 9 inches — was within 15 yards of the rope swing near Prima Vista Boulevard. When you swim there you are in his home."

Robert Crespo, who was swimming in the St. Lucie River, died Monday in a 12½-foot gator's jaws. An autopsy found that Crespo died "as a result of drowning," not from wounds inflicted by the animal, officials said.

Rivergate Park, where the attack occurred, was closed Tuesday while park workers posted signs warning visitors to "Beware of Alligators," and "Do Not Feed The Alligators."

The park was scheduled to reopen today, said Port St. Lucie Police Cpl. Chuck Johnson, though officials can't guarantee another attack won't occur.

"There are probably a very large amount of alligators in that river," said Johnson. "It would be virtually impossible to ensure we would not have another alligator up that specific canal."

The boy was the sixth person to die in an alligator attack in Florida since 1957, said Lt. Biff Lampton of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

"This is the first case we've had like this in several years," said Capt. A.J. Ries of the fish commission.

Witnesses summoned police after they saw the alligator grab the boy and pull him under.

"It was terrible," said Mitchell Epstein, 26, of Port St. Lucie. "I could see the gator with the boy's hand sticking out of his mouth, and he was swimming with him down the river."

Rescuers recovered the child's body in about 12 feet of water and, about an hour later, officers shot and killed the reptile. It was 12 feet 5 inches long and weighed between 500 and 600 pounds, Johnson said.

"He was hungry," said wildlife officer Stoney Lee. "He was in poor shape, undernourished. He had saggy skin under his stomach."

You'll be wide-eyed at the versatility of the new Honda Civic Wagon.

All four seats fold down independently. For a total of 10 different seating and cargo arrangements. There's a drawer under the right front seat and a compartment in the rear floor. As well as child-proof rear door locks, remote liftgate lock release, a rear window wiper/washer and a spacious interior.

Out on the road anything goes, thanks to front-wheel drive and torsion bar front suspension with front and rear stabilizer bars. And you can choose automatic transmission with lock-up torque converter.

The 1984 Honda Civic Wagon. Consider the alternatives.
