Q—Wasn't the lottery supposed to help with school finance?

A—While there was some talk in the Legislature last year about mandating that lottery funds be directed into school finance, it was never made into law. Monies from the lottery go into the state's general fund.

'Baskervilles' opens tonight

"The Hound of the Baskervilles," the fall production of the Snyder High School drama department, opens this evening in Worsham Auditorium.

Additional performances are scheduled for Monday and Tuesday. All three performances began at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $3 for general admission and $5 for reserved seating.

The play is based on the famous novel by Conan Doyle and is considered one of the greatest of the Sherlock Holmes adventure stories.

Starring as Sherlock Holmes will be veteran SHS actor Sam Grimes. His sidekick, Dr. Watson, will be portrayed by Craig Row. Sir Henry Baskerville, inheritor of the vast Baskerville estate and all its problems, will be be played by Sam Cain.

Senior veterans Joellen King, Sara McDonald and Amy Beaver will play the female leads in the roles of Kathy Stapleton, Laura Lyons and Lady Agatha Mortimer. The role of Jack Stapleton will be played by another senior, J. Parker.

Supporting roles include Kevin Alejandro as the butler, Mr. Barrymore, and Katie Thornton as the housekeeper, Mrs. Barrymore. Stacy Wright will play the role of Perkins, the maid, while Marc Sparlin will play the role of a mystery intruder into the Baskerville mansion.

The play will feature a large set to resemble the mansion.. Lighting and special effects will be extensive in order to carry out the mysterious mood of the play. Although the play is a mystery thriller, it is suitable for all ages, said director Jerry Worsham.

Stage manager for the production will be Michael McQuerry. Also included in the technical crew are Mark Bullard, Steve Bollinger, Mike Baker, Marc Sparlin, Josh Palmer, Chris Mitchell, Amy Patterson, Jiletta Kubena and Kristen Rinker.

Selection of the play is in keeping with the SHS Drama Department tradition of giving young actors an opportunity to try their acting skills in works of high literary quality, said Worsham. The book was adapted for the stage by Tim Kelly, and is produced by special arrangement with Samuel French Publishers of New York.

Seating reservations can be made by calling the high school at 573-6301.

Ira trustees accept audit

Ira ISD trustees accepted the annual outside audit and approved senior trip plans but denied a request to purchase unbudgeted office equipment during their November board meeting Thursday.

The board had been requested to purchase an Ellis machine which makes various cut-outs and other items for use in instruction. Trustees denied the request and suggested that the Site-Based Decision Making Committee consider using funds recently awarded to Ira ISD by the state.

Also Thursday, the board agreed to hire part-time aide Olivia Alvarado on a full-time basis, and gave an okay to seek bids for the sale of a vacant lot.

Present Thursday were trustees Gwen Cumbie, Keith Clements, Ray Sorrells, Darryl Calley, Doug White and Sid Wall. Kirby Sterling was absent.

By 90 cents...

Cable TV fees to go up

Snyder Cablevision customers will see a 90-cent increase on their monthly bill beginning Dec. 1, according to the company's manager, Larson Lloyd.

Lloyd said rising costs in several areas were the reason for the adjustment. He said "overwhelming cost increases were attributed to higher license fees paid to program suppliers for basic services" such as CNN, ESPN and others.

The 90-cent a month increase for the company's basic 27-channel service will place rates at $18.85 for the first outlet, not including tax. All other cable rates will remain the same.

Lloyd said a study of area cable rates has been made and Snyder Cablevision's rates are "fortunately, still low compared to those in the state, and also compare extremely well to the costs of other forms of entertainment available in our area."

He said Snyder Cablevision has paid "close attention to customer satisfaction" and pointed out that company provides service calls at no additional charge to its customers.

Snyder Cablevision has approximately 4,700 customers.

The last rate hike imposed by Snyder Cablevision was in March of 1991. Rates went up $1 a month at that time.

Further information about the December rate increase will be available on the back of upcoming cable bills. Lloyd said that customers who pay cable bills annually in advance may do so at the current rate and save an additional five percent if they act by Friday, Dec. 23.

Anyone having questions about the increase is asked to visit Snyder Cablevision at 2211 Ave. R or call the office at 573-3536.

5 guilty pleas entered in 32nd District Court

Five guilty pleas, including one for burglary of a habitation, were entered Thursday in 132nd District Court.

Christopher Michael Silva, 18, of 1409 Ave. M was sentenced to six years in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice correctional division after pleading guilty to June 6 charges of burglary of a habitation. According to police reports, Silva stole a television from a residence belonging to Ray Reyes.

Eighteen-year-old Cornelio Balbuna Aviles of 1413 22nd St. pled guilty to Aug. 1 charges of felony theft, in connection with the report of a stolen vehicle belonging to Tony Warr. He received a 10-year probated sentence the TDCJ.

Ruben Sedillo, 46, of Grand Prairie pled guilty to Jan. 20 charges of theft of services from the Ponderosa Motel. He was sentenced to five years in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, probated, and a $500 fine.

Pleading guilty to felony charges of driving while intoxicated was 21-year-old Robert Elliot Thamez, who received a three-year probated sentence in the TDCJ, a $750 fine and 60 days in the Scurry County Jail Work Program.

Margarito Castillo, 42, of 2604 25th St. was sentenced to three years in the TDCJ, probated, and a $750 fine in connection with Sept. 2 charges of felony DWI.

Audit contends consolidation would save millions annually

AUSTIN (AP) — A new audit of Texas public school district spending has again brought up a word that the auditors say could mean big savings: consolidation.

"The sheer number of districts — some 1,053 in Texas — contributes to an inefficient school system," said the special audit given to the Legislature this week.

As legislators struggle to write a constitutional school finance plan, two of the audit's key recommendations — accounting for much of its $642 million in annual savings — were tied to reducing the number of small school districts.

One recommendation, to save $300 million annually by 1997, would eliminate the "small district adjustment" that the state now pays to districts with enrollments of less than 1,600 students, except those that are small due to remote locations.

"Our analysis shows that small school districts cost more per student to operate than larger districts," the audit said.

"Even though the state provides more funding for small districts, small districts do not provide a better basic education than large districts. In fact, they often do not provide the advanced curriculum that college-bound students need," it said.

The second recommendation was for drawing a new map of school districts.

The auditor recommended creating a school district reorganization commission to develop a consolidation plan. A reorganization could save $225 million annually by 1998, it said.

The audit noted Hill County as an example. The county has 12 school districts, only one of which has more than 1,600 students. Six of the 12 have fewer than 200 students.

"This means that for about 5,000 students, there are 12 superintendents, 12 school boards, 12 accounting departments and so on. And yet these smaller districts are not providing a better education, judging from the fact that eight of the 12 districts have state achievement test scores lower than the state average," the audit said.

While some school districts are small because of their remote location, Auditor Lawrence F. Alwin told lawmakers this week that wasn't true of most.

"In most cases, there's no economic, geographic or educational reason for the districts to remain small," he said.

But consolidation hasn't been politically popular.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, earlier this year found little support for his proposal to reduce the number of districts to 188, most of which would follow county lines.

Even though the plan was designed to give more control to

United Way volunteers still needed

Scurry County United Way is still in need of volunteers to help with fundraising efforts for local organizations.

According to local United Way president Jeff Fowler, the organization currently has less than 10 volunteers. "If we do not have more volunteers soon, we will go ahead and kick off our campaign," he said.

Due to a lack of funds, the organization recently announced it will be supporting only local organizations, including the Boy's Club, Noah Project, Snyder Day Care, Snyder Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse and Oil Patch Foster Parents.

Organizations which will not receive funding because a substantial part of the funds are sent outside the county are Red Cross, Salvation Army and Boy and Girl Scouts.

The local effort is keeping the United Way name, but will not send funds to the national organization this year, Fowler said.

Anyone interested in volunteering is asked to call Nancy LaRoux at Snyder Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse at 573-1141.

Candidates for a minister's job may have thought they were jinxed by Friday the 13th. Someone provided Hereford's O.G. Nieman with a search committee's report of candidates for the preaching job. Only one applicant fit the bill:

Noah--Has 120 years preaching experience, but no converts.

Moses--Stutters and former congregation says he loses his temper over trivialties.

Abraham--Took off to Egypt during hard times. We heard he got into trouble with the authorities and tried to lie his way out.

David--Unacceptable moral character. Might have been considered for minister of music, had he not fallen.

Solomon--Reputation for wisdom, but does not practice what he preaches.

Elijah--Inconsistent, known to fold under pressure.

Hosea--Home in shambles; divorced, remarried to prostitute.

Jeremiah--Too emotional, an alarmist; a "real pain in the neck" some say.

Amos--No training, suitable only as a fig picker.

John--Lacks tact and dresses like a hippie. Would not feel comfortable at pot-luck supper.

Peter--Horrible temper. Was overheard denying Christ.

Paul--Writings lack tact; too harsh; appearance contemptible; preaches too long.

Timothy--Has potential, but too young for the job.

Jesus--Often offends church members with his preachings, especially Bible scholars; too controversial; even offended the search committee with pointed questions.

Judas--Practical, cooperative, good with money, cares for the poor. Search committee agrees he is just the right man.

Clinton has his own way of doing things

By Jill Lawrence
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Clinton is sending early signals that business as usual may be unusual in his administration —. at least by Democratic standards.

He's already invited wary business executives to an economic retreat and hinted he'll put Republicans in high-level positions. He's planning a government-wide review to see if federal agencies should change what they do or how they do it.

He's also appointed a racially and politically diverse transition team devoid of representatives from the interest groups that traditionally pressure Democratic administrations. And while some of the team members have close ties to various constituencies, others have actively campaigned to keep them at bay.

Some Democrats see that mix as a masterstroke.

"There are going to be lots of people grousing and moaning, but no one can deny that this is a great list of people," said party strategist Mike McCurry. "This was the first hard-core political act of the president-elect, and he has passed with flying colors."

Among the many implications of Clinton's moves, both symbolic and strategic:

—His transition board and inaugural committee are headed by blacks — attorney Vernon Jordan and Democratic National Committee Chairman Ronald H. Brown, respectively. The Brown appointment is viewed as acknowledgment of the central role he and the party played in Clinton's march to victory.

—Alexis Herman, named one of two deputy transition directors, is a former DNC official who not only solidifies ties with the party but also is a close associate of Jesse Jackson. Some say her presence helps ensure that the unpredictable Jackson "doesn't go off the reservation."

—Feminists were disturbed that the six-member transition board only had one woman on it: former Vermont Gov. Madeleine Kunin. Clinton now has expanded the board to eight and added Doris Matsui, a volunteer activist for many causes, and Anne Cohn Donnelly, executive director of the National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse.

—The domestic policy transition team is headed by Al From, a campaign adviser who founded the centrist Democratic Leadership Council. He often has scolded his party for caving in to the demands of liberals, labor, minorities and other factions. His selection suggests Clinton may resist the inevitable interest-group pressures expected to crop up, at least during the transition period as personnel are put in place, and perhaps even after he is inaugurated.

—Robert Reich, the Harvard University professor chosen to head the economic policy transition team, like Clinton believes the country should invest money in education, training and infrastructure while gradually reducing the deficit. Clinton gave the reins to an academic rather than to more political advisers with conflicting theories on deficit reduction and other matters. The choice allowed him to avoid escalating the conflicts and communicate seriousness of purpose.

—Perhaps for similar reasons, Clinton chose an academic to lead his health-policy transition group, Georgetown University Professor Judith Feder, who took a leave to serve as staff director for the bipartisan Pepper Commission on comprehensive health care.

Bride Fears Crying Child Will Ruin Her Happy Day

DEAR ABBY: You have covered this topic numerous times in your column, but it just happened to me and I am stuck for a solution.

Our wedding is coming up soon, and we just received a response card on which the couple had penciled in " — and child."

Abby, their child is under 2 years old and the father is a colleague of my fiance. We both fear it would be rude if we asked the couple to please leave their child at home.

On the other hand, we do not want a crying child to ruin our formal church wedding. What other course of action can we take?

IN A BIND

DEAR IN: Because I'm sure you wouldn't want to offend your fiance's colleague, you could make arrangements to have someone look after the child in the church basement — or another room in the church — during the wedding ceremony. But first, you must inform the parents of your plan, and hope they agree to it.

Don't be surprised if they insist on having their child with them during the ceremony. People who are brazen enough to "pencil in" the news that they are bringing their child without asking permission to do so are capable of declining your offer to provide a sitter.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, I read a letter in your column expressing sadness over the rudeness of drivers to exchange obscene one-fingered salutes and the general lack of courtesy. She wanted to know if there was some way to promote courtesy and goodwill.

We all make errors in driving, either in judgment, lack of attention or knowledge. In the spirit of harmony, I am suggesting we might promote a language of hand gestures to communicate messages other than anger or irritation.

Your column reaches so many people, I am sure your readers could add to or improve on these. We need to make traveling our highways a pleasant and safe experience.

Thank you for anything you can do.

DODIE RUEGEMER

DEAR DODIE: How about a nod, a smile, and mouthing the words, "Thank you"?

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Please tell your readers that it is rude to stare. I am a 28-year-old adult who stands 4 foot 6 inches tall. I hate it when ill-mannered adults, and the children they raise, glare and gawk at me. It is painful and it hurts.

We "little people" thank you for the article that helped our organization a few years ago. I, too, was inspired. Please print it again.

LITTLE PACKAGE

DEAR LITTLE PACKAGE: Thank you for pointing out that making others, whatever their height, weight, ethnicity or adversity, feel they are the object of curiosity is insensitive an inappropriate. Senate approves proposed amendment

AUSTIN (AP) — Speaker Gib Lewis expects the House next week to consider a proposed constitutional amendment to reform school funding. But he says there is no agreement on the issue yet.

"I need all the help I can get. What we're dealing with here is very emotional," Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said.

A two-thirds vote of the Legislature is required to put a proposed amendment before voters.

The Senate approved with a 29-2 vote Thursday a proposal to allow local property tax money to be redistributed statewide from wealthier to poorer school districts.

The current system, which transfers funds among districts within counties, has been ruled unconstitutional by the Texas Supreme Court. The court gave lawmakers until June 1, 1993, to fix the system.

The Senate proposal also would require that 95 percent of state and local education money be equitably distributed based on school districts' local property tax rates. In addition, it would set up a state bond program to help build classrooms.

Just hours after the Senate passed its proposal, the House Public Education Committee approved a different measure.

The House committee version would take out the equity standard in response to concerns from poor school districts and others. To address concerns of wealthier districts, the House committee proposal also would limit how much local property tax money could be redistributed.

Although there are several school funding ideas proposed in the House, Lewis said, "Nobody's got a 100 votes." But he said lawmakers still are trying to reach a consensus.

Sen. Carl Parker, sponsor of the Senate proposal, said he's not "just all proud" of it. But he called it practical in light of strong opposition to such proposals as a statewide property tax.

School officials have said state leaders' reform plan would result in large property tax increases because it does not anticipate sufficient state funding to even account for enrollment growth.

Parker said his measure wouldn't mandate local tax increases, but that school districts would have to get the money somewhere to continue current funding levels.

He said he hoped the proposal would provide incentive for Texans to "push us to do what's right, and what's right in my opinion is for the state to be the primary source of support for a state (education) system."

Parker predicted his amendment would end up in a conference committee to work out differences with whatever is passed by the House.

"The worst thing that we could do in this called (special legislative) session is nothing, and I would go a long way to avoid that eventuality," said Parker, D-Port Arthur.

State leaders have said they believe the Supreme Court will close the public schools if lawmakers don't meet the June deadline.

But Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, said the so-called Robin Hood approach of transferring local property tax money isn't the way to go. He said the Legislature should look at other alternatives.

"We're digging the same hole deeper and deeper, and bigger and bigger, and it's still the same hole," he said. Leedom and Sen. Cyndi Krier, R-San Antonio, voted against the proposal.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said the 29 senators who approved the measure showed their willingness to get the issue moving and negotiate with the House.

He also said he was optimistic about chances for House approval. "Admittedly, at this point it is rather split," Bullock said. But he added, "We didn't have the votes on this when we started it."

Study: no damage

HOUSTON (AP) — The investigation of the five-million-gallon Mega Borg oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico is complete with scientists finding the 1990 release of oil from the crippled supertanker caused no ecological damage.

A report from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration shows just 125 gallons of the light crude oil from the Norwegian tanker made it to shore.

Scientists found no marine deaths, no decline in shrimp population, no adverse effects on turtles or dolphins and no beach oiling other than pellet-size tar balls collected on Holly Beach in southwestern Louisiana.

Officials credited favorable weather and currents, good cooperation between state and federal agencies and the collaboration of the ship's owners for aiding the cleanup and helping to avoid an ecological disaster.

Control sought for Legislature, schools

AUSTIN (AP) — A Republican state lawmaker is being accused of racism after proposing a constitutional amendment that he said will take the courts out of the school finance fight.

Rep. John Culberson of Houston has filed a constitutional amendment to give the Legislature and local school boards the power to decide if a school finance system is equitable.

But Culberson's plan was quickly attacked by other state leaders.

Sen. Carl Parker said Culberson's proposal was "a slap in the face to minorities" because he said it would deny poor school districts needed funding.

"I think it is racially motivated. I think it evidences a callous disregard for educational opportunity for many children in this state," said Parker, D-Port Arthur, and chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

Culberson, who is white, denied any racist motivation behind the plan. "That's outrageous, it's false and it's disappointing. And that's why the public I think is fed up with politicians. They're looking for answers," he said.

Culberson's plan also ignited emotions in the House.

After the chamber adjourned, Culberson and some of his backers talked with Speaker Gib Lewis on how to present the amendment to the members.

State Reps. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, and Gregory Luna, D-San Antonio, also were at the podium and berated Culberson's plan. "You will never pass it," Luna shouted at Culberson.

Berlanga called the proposal "a racist piece of (expletive)."

Later, Lewis said he favored the concept behind Culberson's amendment to prevent the courts from ordering around the Legislature, but said the measure has "flaws."

He said he told Culberson that he could try to pass the proposal in the House Public Education Committee or before the full House.

Culberson's amendment was tabled by the House Public Education Committee with no discussion Thursday afternoon. But Culberson said he will bring his plan before the full House for consideration Tuesday.

The plan, according to Culberson, would help all school district's by exempting them from meeting unfunded state requirements. The plan also would abolish the county education districts while providing a minimum amount of state funding.

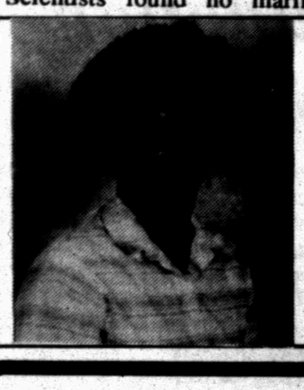

"Unlike any other constitutional amendment, our proposal will stabilize the school finance system by giving the Legislature and local school boards primary authority to define what is substantially equal," Culberson added.

But Bill Cryer, Gov. Ann Richard's press secretary, said the amendment would leave in place the state's flawed system for school financing.

"Our feeling about it all along has been that it does not in any way tackle the issue that the court has asked us to," Cryer said. "It's an escape valve, pure and simple."

Culberson said the so-called "fair share plan" proposed by Richards and legislative leaders will not end the lawsuits challenging the school finance system.

Fraternity members getting experience on railroad tracks

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — Members of the Zeta Psi fraternity at Texas A&M don't really wear capes with a big "S" emblazoned on the chest.

They just seem like Supermen as they dash, with increasing regularity, from their frat house to rescue cars stopped on the railroad track with a train bearing down on them.

The most recent heroism came late Monday, when a train horn sounded down the boulevard as a carload of frightened high school students fled from their car, leaving it to be crushed by the locomotive.

Then, appearing as if from nowhere, 30 Zeta Psi fraternity brothers came running down 27th Street. The Texas A&M students circled the 1965 Mustang, which was stuck on the tracks, and moved the vehicle along the tracks to a cross street where they could move the car from harm's way.

The fraternity moved last April into their new house, which is about 50 feet from the dark tracks, which occasionally are mistaken for a road.

Last spring, a car turned onto the tracks and got stuck when three tires went flat. Out of the Zeta Psi house barreled a dozen fraternity brothers, who lifted the car off the tracks, moved it to the side and watched the train rush past while the ground shook beneath them.

Several weeks later, another driver got trapped on the tracks and a fraternity member — who knew by the train schedule that one wouldn't be by for a while — grabbed a jack and rescued the car by himself.

The tracks run straight down the middle of a residential neighborhood and are bordered by cement curbs and a narrow, unlit road on both sides.

Hamilton Rothaus, a sophomore economics major, said the fraternity has security guards at their parties, not only to keep the peace but to warn drivers of the danger from the tracks.

"A lot of people (almost) do it all the time," Rothaus told the College Station-Bryan Eagle. "You can hear their bottoms of the cars scraping on the rail."

But guards can't always be there, and the fraternity members do have to go to class, so Zeta Psi house manager Bill Cozart, a construction science major, called Bryan City Hall earlier this week.

"We had to do something," Cozart said. "We know there's a possibility that someone could be killed out there."

Bryan's director of transportation, Howard Huggins, said signs probably wouldn't help, but — even though the tracks are owned by the railroad — the city will pay to paint the curbs a reflective yellow to warn drivers.

Meanwhile, the fraternity brothers said they plan to keep their ears open. When the last high school students got stuck, the fraternity was having a full membership meeting.

"Lincoln Harris, a pledge, came running inside and screamed, 'Train!'" Cozart said. "We didn't even think twice. We all just ran out there and were saying, 'Push, brother, push.'

"The people were standing outside their car already. After it was all over with, they were extremely thankful. It was well worth it."

Using oxygen therapy for emphysema

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please discuss emphysema and how it is detected. My husband suffers from this, and we question what his blood gasses must show before he can be placed on home oxygen for control.

DEAR READER: Emphysema is a chronic lung disorder, usually caused by inhaling polluted air or tobacco smoke, that is marked by trapping of stale air within the lungs. As a consequence, emphysema patients suffer from progressive breathlessness, worsened by exercise, because the lungs are unable to supply enough oxygen to the bloodstream.

The disease is customarily diagnosed by a chest X-ray (showing overexpansion of the lungs), pulmonary function tests (indicating an inability to inhale and exhale a normal amount of air), and arterial blood gasses (confirming a low oxygen content and a high level of carbon dioxide).

Patients with emphysema are often helped by supplemental oxygen, administered either during activity or intermittently to relieve shortness-of-breath. Medicare will partially reimburse the cost of oxygen therapy if the amount of oxygen in the patient's blood is less than 55 percent of normal.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Living With Chronic Lung Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Would you address the symptoms of megacolon in your column?

DEAR READER: The normal colon is supplied with several sets of nerves that cause peristalsis, the bowel contractions necessary for proper digestion and elimination.

Megacolon (marked colonic dilation) can result either from a congenital absence of colonic nerves or from prolonged stool retention.

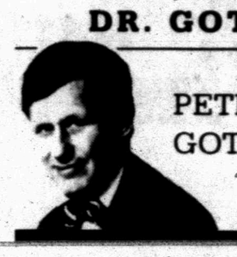

In the first situation, called Hirschsprung's disease, infants are born with an inability to empty the bowels, manifested primarily as constipation but also showing intermittent diarrhea and failure to thrive. The diagnosis is established by special X-rays of the colon; treatment consists of surgical removal of the dysfunctional portion of the colon.

In the second instance, so-called "acquired megacolon" is caused by severe mental retardation or emotional illness; the symptoms are the same as the congenital type. Treatment is principally psychiatric.

Megacolon may be seen as a complication of other bowel disorders, such as ulcerative colitis.

A useful aid at the table

By Phillip Alder

The computer industry has progressed more than any other in the last 10 years. The latest gizmo is called a Personal Digital Assistant (PDA), which is due to be marketed by Apple early next year under the codename of Newton. Presumably this is a tribute to Sir Isaac rather than Wayne or Fig.

It would be useful to have your own programmed PDA at the bridge table. If you weren't sure of the relative odds of two plays, you could look them up. Take today's deal. You reach four hearts and West leads the club king. Which is the best line of play?

You are faced with three losers: one spade and two clubs. If you lose a trump trick as well, you will go down, of course. The percentage play to avoid a heart loser is to cash the ace, allowing for West's having a singleton queen, and then to finesse twice through East. I am no great mathematician, but I make your chances in the heart suit alone just under 51 percent.

However, there's an alternative plan. You could cash the A-K of hearts and then play on diamonds. The contract will make if either opponent has a singleton or doubleton heart queen, or if the opponent with queen-third of hearts has at least two diamonds. (If an opponent holds queen-fourth in hearts, you can wave goodbye to your contract with this line.)

I calculate the probability of success to be almost 57 percent. It is clear which is the better line of play, but it would have been much easier if I had had a PDA at my fingertips.

What do you think is my middle initial?

Study: America most violent of industrialized countries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Criminal violence is more common in the United States than in any other industrialized country, and the fear of it has become a trait of American life, researchers say.

A National Research Council report Thursday said the specter of violence, ranging from assault to murder, has left people afraid to walk their neighborhoods at night, endangered children in their schools and caused many citizens to barricade themselves behind locked doors.

"The nation's anxiety on the subject of violence is not unfounded. In 1990, more than 23,000 people were homicide victims," the report said, although it noted that murder rates were higher earlier in this century, and higher still in some locations last century.

"Violent deaths and incidents that result in lesser injuries are sources of chronic fear and a high level of concern with the seeming inability of public authorities to prevent them," the report said.

The United States, the study found, is generally more violent than other societies.

"Homicide rates in the United States far exceed those in any other industrialized nation," the report said. "Among 16 industrialized countries surveyed in 1988, the United States had the highest prevalence rates for serious sexual assaults and for all other assaults, including threats of physical harm."

Despite this, the study said U.S. violence is not the worst it has ever been. The homicide rate peaked in the early 1930s and then dropped for the next 30 years, the study said. The rate rose again between 1979 and 1981, then declined, only to rise again in the late 1980s.

"Historical data suggests that certain cities may have experienced still higher homicide rates during the 19th century," the report said.

The study also found:

—Both victims and perpetrators of violent crime are more likely to be male and come from ethnic or racial minorities. Blacks are 41 percent and Hispanics 32 percent more likely to be victims than are whites.

—The most likely to commit violence are men in the age range of 25 to 29.

—In the majority of assaults, rapes and homicides, the perpetrator was an acquaintance of the victim.

—Homicide rates are five times higher among blacks than among whites, and the rate among Native Americans is almost double that of the rest of the population.

—It estimated these average costs per violent incident: rape, $54,000; robbery, $19,200, and assault, $16,000. This loss includes a value given to pain, suffering, psychological damage and the loss in quality of life.

Putting more people in prison for longer periods of time has had little effect on the rate of violence, the report said. Average prison time per violent crime tripled between 1975 and 1989, the report said, but the rate of violent crime still increased after 1985.

Instead, the study advocated certainty of punishment. "A 50 percent increase in the probability of incarceration would prevent twice as much violent crime as a 50 percent increase in the average term of incarceration."

Jury decides Halcion gets part of blame

DALLAS (AP) — The sleeping pill Halcion helped a man kill, a jury has ruled.

But the Dallas County jury on Thursday said the pill's maker, Upjohn Co., was only partially responsible for the man's action. And it divided liability for the $2.15 million judgment it recommended on behalf of his family.

The jury reached the decision after nearly two days of deliberation in the nation's first civil trial over alleged side effects of Halcion, the world best-selling and most-prescribed sleeping pill.

Similar cases are pending around the country against Upjohn. Spokeswoman Kaye Bennett said Kalamazoo, Mich.-based company would appeal the judgment.

The lawsuit was filed by William Freeman, former assistant police chief of Fort Stockton, Texas, and his family.

WTC-McDonald's Classic...

WTC opens Classic with rout

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

The Western Texas College Lady Dusters played the role of congenial hostesses Thursday, allowing the Ft. Sill Lady Cannoneers to play them to a tie...for the first five minutes.

The Dusters then cruised on a 40-8 run to halftime on their way to a 100-25 blowout victory on the first day of play in the WTC-McDonald's Classic women's basketball tournament.

"I really don't know what to say about a game like that," said WTC coach Ron Jones. "You want to get it over with and not get anybody hurt.

"We played everybody on the bench a lot, so there wasn't anything else we could really do.

"We have to get games like this out of the way and try to get up for other games."

After trading turnovers and fouls the first five minutes of the game, the Dusters defense suffocated the Ft. Sill squad, while the offense rolled.

Allison Garcia, who alone scored more than the entire Cannoneer team, started the rout with an offensive rebound and a short jumper to make it 8-6. Garcia finished the night with 27 points, including two of WTC's seven 3-pointers.

Peggy Huseman banged home a jumper to make it 10-6, then added a lay-in following a Garcia trey and Ft. Sill's Stephanie Tutton's 8-footer to set the tally at 15-8.

A 12-0 Western Texas run followed before Krystal Little of the Cannoneers hit a layup to end a scoring drought of over five minutes.

Paulita Murrell ended the first half with a flurry for the Dusters, grabbing an offensive board and banking in a deuce, then getting a lay-in as the first 20 minutes expired to give the Dusters a 46-14 halftime advantage.

The only suspense in the second half was whether the Lady Dusters could get 100 points.

They hit the century mark with :02 remaining when Lameshia Roland converted both ends of a 1-and-1.

The win lifts Western Texas to 5-1 on the season.

Double figure scorers for the Dusters Thursday, included Garcia, Ayesha Howard, who pumped in 16, and Jenny Crowell and Shelly Decker, each with 12.

Tutton was tops for Ft. Sill, managing 10 points.

In the tournament's other game Thursday, South Plains College ripped Ranger JC, 92-50.

Games begin in today's round of the annual Classic with a 4 p.m. battle between Ft. Sill and Howard College. South Plains College takes on AAU-Dallas at 6 p.m. followed by WTC vs. Ft. Bliss in the 8 p.m. nightcap.

The tourney winds up Saturday with Ft. Bliss battling SPC at 4 p.m., AAU-Dallas taking on Howard at 6 p.m., and Western Texas entertaining Ranger at 8 p.m.

Denver City faces Graham in 3A tilt at Tiger Stadium

The Graham Steers take on the Denver City Mustangs in a Class 3A clash at Snyder High's Tiger Stadium and Borden County battles Klondike in a 6-man tilt in a pair of grid playoff games set for today.

Denver City captured the District 3-3A championship with an 8-1 season mark, while Graham earned a trip to the playoffs as the District 4 runner-up with an 8-2 slate, including a 21-6 season-ending victory over Bowie last Friday.

Denver City was open last Friday.

The Mustangs come in with one of the area's top offenses, scoring over 26 points a game, while the Ponies' defense has limited opponents to only 88, an average of under 10 points an outing.

Denver City, behind the running tandem of Alphonso Hurtado and Greg Horton, are picking up over 355 yards a game.

Hurtado and Horton are both ranked in the area's top ten 3A rushers, gaining 935 and 933 yards, respectively.

Graham, which finished second in District 4 behind state-ranked Vernon, has given up just 73 points on the year, while scoring 140.

Game time is 7:30 p.m. at Tiger Stadium. Admission is $6 per person.

In 6-man action, Borden County, which whipped through the District 6 season without a loss, and was 9-1 overall, battles Klondike, 6-4, District 5 runner-up, at 7:30 p.m. today at Lamesa High School.

The Coyotes are led by senior running back Clint Wills, who rushed for over 2,000 yards this season.

In a non-district game in Week 5, Borden County drilled the Cougars, 64-18.

In other playoff contests of area interest, District 2-4A champion Estacado, 5-4-1, faces District 1 runner-up Canyon Randall, 7-3, at Canyon's Kimbrough Stadium, and District 2-4A runner-up Plainview, 9-1, squares off against District 1 champ Hereford, 8-2, at Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

Both Class 4A games start at 7:30 p.m.

SHS coach pleased with squad's effort

BIG SPRING — Snyder's first-year girls' basketball coach Jerry Tucker started the task of building a winning program at SHS Thursday with a scrimmage at Big Spring.

Tucker's crew played the Lady Steers in five simulated quarters and the coach was basically pleased with the results.

"Overall, I was pretty pleased," Tucker said. "Our hustle, our play, I'm not dissatisfied with that, at all.

"The kids' effort was outstanding. We did some good things. We ran our offense against their zone defense.

"They played a zone defense and we weren't prepared for that. We pressed them some, but they really put the vise on us," he added.

"What really happened was they out-pressed us.

""We didn't throw the ball away as often as I was afraid we would. We lost 15 turnovers, but we had 19 steals. So, that ratio is good.

"We played them five quarters and I was pleased with the play in three. They're a playoff caliber team," Tucker said of Big Spring. "We're not at that level yet.

"We need to work hard to get to that level, where we can beat a good team like Big Spring.

"We play them again just before Christmas and we'll use that as a gauge for our program."

No overall score was kept at the scrimmage.

The Lady Tigers scrimmage Roscoe Saturday at SHS. Freshman action starts at 10 a.m. followed the JV practice game and the varsity tilt.

The regular season begins Tuesday at San Angelo Lake View.

Aggies edge Coogs, 38-30

HOUSTON (AP) — Fourth-ranked Texas A&M remained unbeaten by staving off Houston's upset bid and defeating the Cougars 38-30 Thursday night.

The Aggies moved to 10-0 as Greg Hill had third-quarter touchdown runs of 10, 9 and 4 yards that finally shut off Houston's upset bid. Texas A&M didn't get its first lead until 3:41 remained in the third quarter when Hill skirted the right side for a 9-yard touchdown.

A final Cougars drive ended on downs near midfield with about 30 seconds left.

Cagers at weekend scrimmages

Both Snyder's high school varsity basketball teams will be in action Saturday.

The Lady Tigers will host Roscoe at 10 a.m. in the girls' second and final scrimmage before opening the season Tuesday at San Angelo Lake View.

The SHS boys' team will battle Lubbock Monterey in a practice game there beginning at 1 p.m.

The Monterey tilt is the boys' last preseason battle. They start the 1992-93 campaign Friday, Nov. 20 when Andrews visits.

SHS golfers entertain Lamesa in practice tilt

Coach Bob O'Day's Snyder High School golf team will tangle with Lamesa for the second straight week.

This weekend's match is set to tee off at 8 a.m. Saturday at Western Texas College.

Snyder dropped the last meeting between the two teams, 341-326, a week ago at Lamesa Country Club.

SHS senior Chad Jacobi was the medalist, firing a 74 in the wind and cold.

Jacobi has finished first, individually, in all seven of the fall matches he has played.

Last week, however, he got little support, with teammates shooting 83, 89, 95 and 95.

"Chad, again, had an outstanding round," said O'Day. "But, for the second week in a row, the Tigers' No. 1 golf team played very inconsistently."

Lamesa, defending District 2-4A champ, was led last week by a 78 from Bryan Hawkins.

Next week's visit to Plainview will end the fall links season for Snyder.

Heavyweight title bout...

Bowe, Holyfield square off for crown

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Another ghetto kid off the mean streets of Brownsville tries to grab the brass ring.

Riddick Bowe, the last of 13 children raised by his factory-worker mother in a Brooklyn housing project, gets a shot at boxing's biggest prize when he meets champion Evander Holyfield tonight for the heavyweight title.

The last youngster from the Brownsville district who used boxing as a ticket out of the ghetto to the top was Mike Tyson, who created other problems for himself and now is serving time for rape in Indiana.

"He would have knocked out Evander Holyfield in one or two rounds," Bowe said of Tyson. "I'm going to do the job that he didn't do."

The 25-year-old Bowe, who carries a 31-0 record with 27 knockouts into the bout against Holyfield (28-0, 22 knockouts), went to the same grammar school as Tyson.

"All I remember about him from those days is that he was big for his age, very tough and always carried a big bag of cookies around with him," Bowe said of Tyson, who lost the heavyweight crown when Buster Douglas scored a stunning knockout of him in Japan.

Tyson, meanwhile, sent along his best wishes to Bowe in his fight against Holyfield, telling a newspaper reporter by phone from Indiana that if Bowe wins the title, it would be good for Brownsville and good for showing that people can make it out of the ghetto.

Bowe said that he's dedicating the fight to Tyson and the people of Brownsville, among others.

Bowe, who hits with explosive power but whose determination has been questioned, appears the toughest challenger faced yet by Holyfield, who has been cast as a determined, dedicated fighter who does not have overpowering talent.

While tonight's bout is rated about even, Holyfield was favored in his three previous defenses. Since knocking out a bloated Douglas in October of 1990 to take the title, Holyfield has fought two fighters well past their prime — George Foreman and Larry Holmes — and unheralded Bert Cooper.

Holyfield had to go the distance to beat Foreman and Holmes, both in their 40s, and was knocked down by Cooper before rallying to stop the challenger in the seventh round.

Although he won those fights, Holyfield lost credibility as champion. He believes he can regain some of that respect with a victory over Bowe.

"I didn't get any credit for beating Larry Holmes or George Foreman," said the 30-year-old Holyfield. "They didn't really fight to win. Riddick Bowe wants to win, not just go the distance. When people say, 'You're fighting a tough fight,' it feels good. When my opponents don't get credibility, it takes away from my work."

Bowe takes some significant physical advantages into the fight. At 6-foot-5 and 235 pounds, he is three inches taller and 30 pounds heavier than the champion, at 205 his lightest since he fought as a cruiserweight in the 190-pound class.

"I'm not the strongest fighter, I'm not the quickest fighter. But if I put it all together, I might be the smartest fighter," Holyfield said.

Holyfield is guaranteed $5 million for the scheduled 12-round bout. Bowe is guaranteed $3 million. Both fighters also have percentage deals.

15-year-old surrenders in officer's death

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A 15-year-old boy wanted in connection with the fatal shooting of an off-duty Dallas police officer has surrendered, saying he feared he would be shot down or brutalized by police.

The teen-ager was taken into custody about 10:30 p.m. Thursday at his uncle's house in Fort Worth, but only after relatives made sure that television crews were present to film the arrest.

The development came hours after Dallas Police Chief William Rathburn got permission from juvenile court Judge Hal Gaither to release the boy's name and photo to the news media in hopes it would expedite his capture.

A department spokesman said it is the first time Dallas police had obtained a court order allowing them to release a juvenile suspect's name and picture.

The Texas Family Code allows the release of certain information about a juvenile who has been charged with a felony if a judge determines the release would be for a legitimate purpose, Gaither said. The information that can be released includes the suspect's name and description and a photograph.

The youth is suspected of killing police officer Reginald House, 29, and critically wounding the officer's friend, Lenny Allen, 31, early Sunday, minutes after the pair were robbed outside a south Dallas apartment building.

Allen was in serious condition Thursday in the intensive care unit of Parkland Memorial Hospital.

The 15-year-old was the fourth suspect arrested in the case.

Police arrested two other men by Tuesday in connection with the robbery of House and Allen.

And on Thursday, before the 15-year-old's surrender, police arrested a third robbery suspect, 18-year-old Laderrick Smith of suburban Duncanville. The three are charged with aggravated robbery and were in custody Thursday at the Lew Sterrett Justice Center in Dallas.

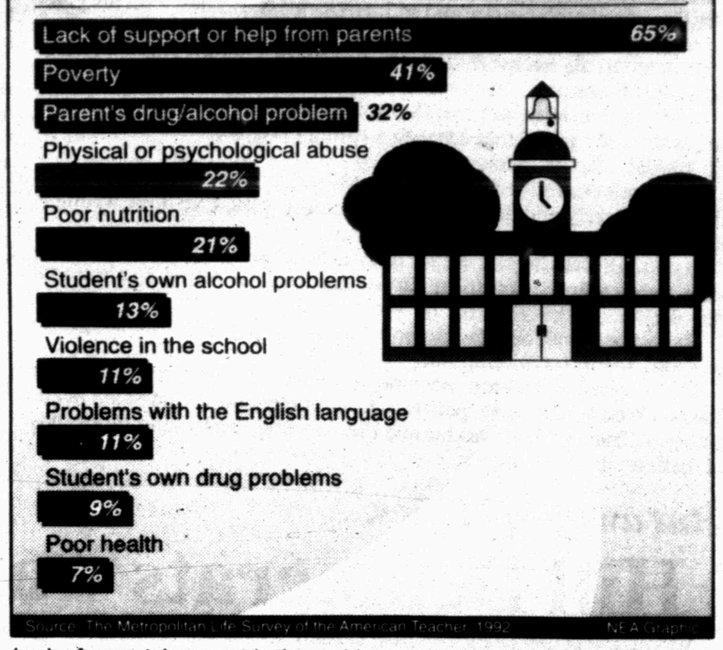

Police also sought a fifth person who may have seen the robbery but was not believed an active participant.

Thursday, police officials discussed for the first time publicly a police report that said House drove Allen to the apartment building where they were shot, and where Allen is suspected of having tried to buy crack cocaine.

Officials said there is no evidence that House, just 12 weeks out of the police academy, tried to buy illegal drugs before he and Allen were shot. A test of the officer's blood conducted after he was killed found no illegal drugs.

Strict ethics rules outlined by Clinton

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — President-elect Clinton, in an early gesture for clean government, is imposing ethics rules upon his transition aides to prevent them from moving into the lobbying world when he takes office in January.

Clinton, holding his first news conference Thursday since his election, pledged the strictest code of conduct in history for his administration, and said he hoped it would boost "the credibility of our decision-making."

Clinton today is expected to impose at least a six-month ban on lobbying for transition aides in any area of government where they had dealings during the transition. Top transition directors likely would be banned from all lobbying.

In addition, he is likely to order anyone who's on a corporate board to disqualify themselves from work on anything related to government.

Later, Clinton is expected to impose a five-year lobbying ban on anyone who takes a job in his administration. Right now, the ban is one year.

His vow of a three-step ethics approach — he also plans reform of lobbyist disclosure and campaign finance laws — follows a political year in which rivals Ross Perot and Jerry Brown touched a nerve with angry voters by attacking the special interest and lobby circuit of Washington.

Clinton gave the ethics preview during a 40-minute news conference in which he also vowed to quickly reverse President Bush's abortion counseling and Haitian refugee policies, allow homosexuals in the military and create more than a half-million jobs in his first year.

Clinton looked rested and confident nine days after his Election Day victory as he laid out a crowded agenda for reviving the nation's economy.

Republicans who were his biggest critics during the campaign found little to gripe about in his statements and struck a conciliatory, wait-and-see note.

Both Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas and House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia passed up a chance to counter Clinton's comments, and their spokesmen said they looked forward to working with him next year.

Gingrich is "not going to be in the business of badmouthing the president-elect just for the sake of it," said his spokesman, Tony Blankley.

Republicans might not approve of Clinton's plan to lift the Bush administration ban on abortion counseling at federally funded clinics, "but there's nothing we can do about that," Blankley said, adding that GOP lawmakers wanted to stay focused on economic areas where they could work with Clinton, such as investment tax credits.

Clinton also said he would revise Bush's Haiti policy to allow refugees now summarily returned to their country to petition for political refugee status.

Clinton said he would end the ban on gays in the military, but only after consulting "with a lot of people about what our options are, including people who may disagree with me about the ultimate merits."

Clinton announced four dozen additions to his transition team from both political and policy arenas.

Clinton broke little new ground in his news conference, and renewed his pledge to take "aggressive and prompt" action to revive the economy.

He said he remained committed to his campaign promise to offer a middle-class tax cut and an investment tax credit for new factories and equipment, which he predicted would create some 500,000 jobs in his first year. Clinton also predicted more jobs would come through his plan to speed up spending on road, bridge and other infrastructure work.

Hepburn released

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Audrey Hepburn has been released from the hospital with a good prognosis following surgery to remove a cancerous tumor and part of her colon.

"There is a strong feeling that surgeons removed all of the tumor and none of her organs were compromised. They feel they got all of the malignancy," Ron Wise, a spokesman for Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, said after Miss Hepburn's release Thursday.

Miss Hepburn, 63, entered Cedars-Sinai on Oct. 30 complaining of stomach problems believed to be associated with her recent visit to Somalia as goodwill ambassador for UNICEF.

Candidate for mayor takes refuge in U.S.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Rolando Martinez Calderoni, his eyes tinged red with fatigue and a hint of sadness, fiddled with his glasses as he sat in an American pancake restaurant early this morning.

He detailed the events that saw him go from a popular mayoral candidate in Matamoros, Mexico, to a fugitive hunted by federal police.

Hours earlier, Martinez had fled across the Rio Grande with what he said is the only proof that Mexico's ruling party stole the elections in the border city of Matamoros.

"I haven't committed any crime in Mexico," Martinez said, picking his words slowly and deliberately. "The only thing I've done wrong is being right" about the fraud.

Matamoros had been tense for days as the coalition made up of Mexico's two leading opposition parties accused the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) of vote fraud.

The accusations became demonstrations as the coalition sought to pressure the government into annulling the elections.

The mounting tension became violence as opposition loyalists clashed Wednesday with guards in front of election commission headquarters. They sacked and burned the building, destroying thousands of ballots in the process.

On Thursday morning, Federal Judicial Police began rounding up key party leaders and coalition members suspected of starting the riot. Eight people were detained and 10 others, including Martinez, were sought.

Martinez, the National Action Party (PAN) mayoral candidate, is wanted for allegedly intercepting phone conversations between PRI leaders, a charge he denies.

He said that authorities were also hunting for the voter registries and vote tallies they didn't know he was keeping in his office. These documents prove the elections were fixed, he said.

"They sent people from the attorney general's office to search our offices and our homes," Martinez told The Associated Press during an interview conducted just after midnight. "At that moment, we left the country."

Martinez, who just days earlier had addressed hundreds of cheering supporters at coalition rallies, became an exile in Brownsville.

He sent a taped message to be played to supporters rallying outside the Matamoros City Hall.

His shoulders sagged visibly and he shook his head sadly as he was told the man carrying the message was intercepted by police who raided the city hall plaza, arresting two coalition supporters.

But his almost palpable anger brought his head up again, turned his eyes away from the table top. His voice got a little stronger.

"In Matamoros there was an election," he said. "In that election the candidates thought we were running in a normal system.

"But Sunday night (election day) ... we felt that we were like some laboratory rats.

"We ran against people who didn't exist," he said, repeating opposition allegations that PRI supporters used counterfeit credentials to vote.

Martinez said the demonstrations in Mexico would have to continue until the governement resolves the election conflict.

But he said he realizes that he probably will be watching from the sidelines.

"I'm hoping the government, the president, the party will recognize the form in which this fraud was committed so we can return to our country free of any charges," he said.

Later, just before leaving with a handful of companions, he would add a little wistfully:

"I wish I could return tomorrow."

But await specifics...

Hill Democrats warm toward Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats are ready to pass a variety of bills to get President-elect Clinton off to a running start and burst the political gridlock of the Reagan-Bush era.

Among them are proposals to overhaul crime legislation, stiffen campaign-finance rules and entitle workers to unpaid leave when family emergencies occur.

But leaders of the majority Democrats also say they are awaiting specifics from the president-elect on the central issues of his campaign — jobs, the economy, the deficit and health care.

"Governor Clinton will enter this room or any other room in this Capitol to a friendly audience," Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said. "This is not a group that is hostile or needs be persuaded to be cooperative."

After 12 years of Republican presidents, Democratic leaders want to demonstrate their readiness to cooperate with the president-elect on priorities for next year.

But in doing so, they have skirted any real discussion of what will actually be in the economic recovery legislation or whether deficit control must take a back seat to economic stimulus.

Clinton has invited the top three congressional officers, House Speaker Tom Foley of Washington, House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri, and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine to visit him in Little Rock, Ark., on Sunday to talk about next year's agenda.

Several aides interviewed in recent days said the group will seek a signal from Clinton on whether he wants to move single-mindedly on the economy in early 1993, or instead pursue lesser issues to show progress through fast victories.

Clinton said after the election he would focus like a laser on the economy. His campaign proposals include $20 billion to rebuild America's infrastructure, a tax credit for investment in new equipment, a limited capital gains tax cut, $150 billion in new taxes on the wealthy and foreign corporations and a $60 billion middle class tax cut.

But he's getting conflicting advice on whether to emphasize stimulas proposals or those designed to contain the deficit.

"As soon as we know what signals the quarterback wants to call, the leadership will run the play," said Gephardt spokesman David Dreyer.

Aides say Democratic leaders in both houses are nearly united in wanting to pass a family leave bill again, after seeing President Bush successfully veto it twice in two years.

They also would like to revise campaign finance and ease voter registration, both of which Bush vetoed, and pass an anti-crime bill including a mandatory waiting period for the purchase of handguns. These aides spoke on condition of anonymity because the lawmakers themselves have not yet publicly said what legislation would be acted on early next year.

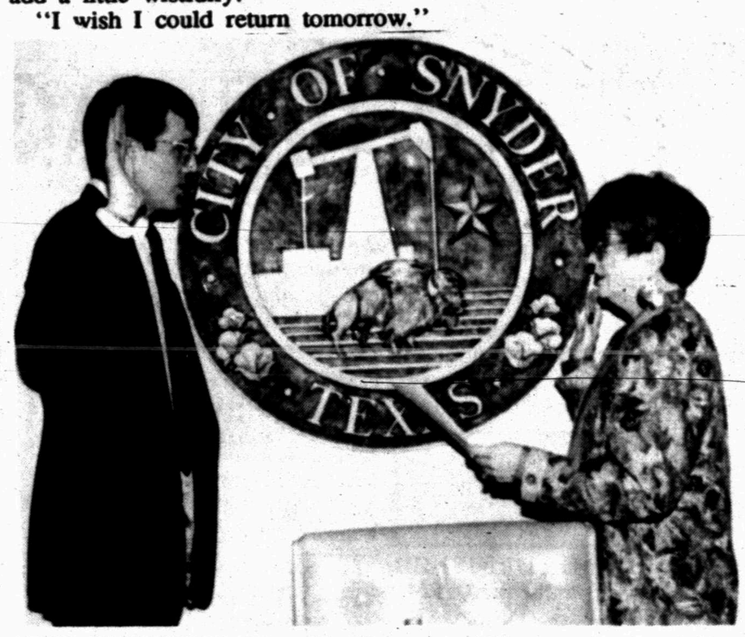

On health care, Democrats agree more on the shortcomings of the current system than on how to improve it. Just as with the deficit or taxes, any real action on health care will face a thicket of special-interest obstacles that will take time to navigate.

Republicans are bracing to mount early opposition.

"They'll trot out a great cage full of turkeys," predicted Sen. Alan Simpson of Wyoming, the deputy Republican leader. "And we'll be right there to strangle half of them."

Congress has to vote early next year to raise the federal debt ceiling to keep the government operating. Republicans plan to use that vote to pressure Democrats on one of their pet proposals — a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget.

Clinton has pledged to cut the deficit in half in four years.

Japan hints it may rethink shipments of plutonium

TOKYO (AP) — Admitting surprise at the international outcry over a shipment of plutonium coming from France, government officials hinted today they may reconsider plans for using the highly lethal fuel in nuclear power plants.

The comments came during a briefing on the plutonium program for foreign reporters called by officials at Japan's Foreign Ministry, Science and Technology Agency and Maritime Safety Agency.

The shipment of 1.7 tons of plutonium, which left France on Sunday, has become a diplomatic nightmare at a time when Japan is seeking a higher international profile to match its economic stature.

At least a dozen nations protested plans for the shipment before the cargo ship Akatsuki Maru left France last week with the plutonium. Environmentalists clashed with French police while the ship was being loaded, and a boat operated by the environmental group Greenpeace has been tailing the shipment to warn nations of its approach.

"Nobody who had been involved in the shipment in Japan or in other countries expected this shipment would get such kind of high public attention," said Toichi Sakata, director of the Science and Technology Agency's nuclear fuel division.

Another official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Japan Atomic Energy Commission had begun a review of the nuclear energy program and would reconsider the plutonium policy. The reaction to the shipment would be a factor, the official said.

It was the first indication the government might reconsider its plan for a major plutonium program for commercial nuclear power plants.

Japan is dependent on imports for almost all its energy needs, and the government saw the use of plutonium in fast-breeder reactors as the key to energy independence.

Most other countries, including the United States, have largely dropped plans to use plutonium as a fuel because natural uranium is cheaper and safer.

Environmental groups opposed to the plutonium shipment cite the risk of an accident that could leak the deadly material into the ocean, poisoning the food chain, or an attack by terrorists seeking nuclear weapons material.

Police work five thefts

Snyder police worked five cases of theft Thursday.

At 7:43 a.m., Elza Torres contacted police in reference to someone stealing an equalizer from a vehicle parked at 2905 Ave. G. At 3:51 a.m., Marie Torres came to the police department to complain that items were stolen from her vehicle while it was parked at the same address. Offense reports for Class B theft were filed in each case.

Police responded to a report of two juveniles shoplifting in Kmart at 4:32 p.m. Thursday. One youth was transported to the police department. The other juvenile, who had left the store before an officer arrived, was later brought to the police department by his mother. The stolen property was recovered and two offense reports of Class B theft were filed. The juveniles were released to relatives.

At 5:26 p.m., Abraham Arrellano notified police about a refrigerator and stove stolen from 2703 Ave. F. A report for Class A theft was filed.

Caroline Torres contacted police at 6:30 p.m. to report that someone had attempted to use a credit card that had been in her purse when it was stolen recently. A report for credit card theft was filed in the case.

Between 9:59 and 10:32 a.m., police transported three men from Municipal Court to the county jail to lay out fines. Taken into custody were a 60-year-old man and a 52-year-old man to lay out fines for public intoxication and a 17-year-old man to lay out fines for no seatbelt and no driver's license.

At 10:29 a.m., police were notified about a man on the north side of the courthouse square who appeared to be incoherent. A check on the 64-year-old man indicated there was a warrant out on him from Deaf Smith County. Police contacted sheriff's officers in Hereford, who refused to accept the subject because he was unstable. Local police later released the man to his brother.

In one other report Thursday, a woman came to the police department at 6:52 p.m. to complain that she had been harassed by a subject. A report for assault/threat was filed.

Schools

local schools while centralizing taxation, the idea didn't get far.

"It's talked about all the time, but generally speaking, no one thinks it's feasible because it's so emotional," Gov. Ann Richards said then. This week, opening the Legislature's special school finance session, Richards again noted that Lewis had received little support.

"I would say there are a number of people who recognize that it would solve a lot of our problems and it makes a great deal of common sense," said John Bender, Lewis' chief of staff.

"But realistically, there is overwhelming opposition from school superintendents, which is certainly understandable because 85 percent of them would probably lose their jobs under his proposal," Bender said.

Dan Casey, director of governmental relations for the Texas Association of School Boards, disagrees with the audit's recommendations and assumptions.

He said consolidation doesn't always mean savings.

"If you look at all the research in consolidation, to make it work you typically have to build a centrally located high school among the consolidated districts. The costs of doing that far exceed any savings you're going to get," Casey said.

He also disagreed with the audit's suggestion of lower student achievement in small districts. "I've never seen anything to indicate that it lags," he said.

"One of the other things that was missing (from the audit), is that there are a lot of areas of the state where you may not have more than 200 or 300 students in a county," Casey said. "It's great to talk about consolidation, but ..."

Casey said test results released last spring indicated that Texas students ranked "pretty close to the national average." They scored higher in the lower grades, a reflection of improvements made since passage of House Bill 72 school reforms, he said.

"We spend about $900 less per student than the national average. For the most part, when you look at it in those terms, you're getting national average results for below-average spending," he said.

Teacher's aide apologizes for affair with teenager

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 29-year-old former teacher's aide who pleaded guilty to carrying on a three-month sexual affair with a 14-year-old special education student has been sentenced to 10 years probation.

Elizabeth Sanchez apologized to the boy's family Thursday before State District Judge Pat Priest announced the punishment.

"I am sorry for what I have done," Mrs. Sanchez said. "I do apologize to the family for what I have done. I ask for deferred adjudication so I can get my life back on track."

Deferred adjudication is a type of probation in which an offense is erased from the record if a person stays out of trouble.

Assistant District Attorney Therese Huntzinger, who had agreed to probation for Mrs. Sanchez, balked at the lesser deferred adjudication, saying it could allow Mrs. Sanchez to return to the classroom someday.

Mrs. Sanchez pleaded guilty in August to sexual assault. As part of a plea bargain, prosecutors did not object to probation.

District Judge Pat Priest said he read a dozen letters sent to the court in support of Mrs. Sanchez, including one from her husband.

Along with the probation, Mrs. Sanchez was ordered to perform 150 hours' community service, to continue her psychiatric counseling and to stay away from the 14-year-old.

Still, he said, the more lenient sentence of deferred adjudication "would send an inappropriate message to the schools and the teachers and the students in those schools."

The teen's father said he wanted Mrs. Sanchez to spend some time in jail for the pain she has caused his family.

1st Church of Nazarene plans 'blitz' of services

Snyder's First Church of the Nazarene plans a "blitz" of services Wednesday through Sunday of next week.

The Wednesday through Saturday services will begin at 7:30 p.m. On Sunday, Nov. 22, Sunday School classes are slated for 9:30 a.m. to be followed by morning worship at 10:40 a.m.

Dinner on the grounds will be provided by the church and will follow morning worship.

Charles Jones, district superintendnent of the West Texas District Church of the Nazarene, will be the special speaker. Special music will be provided by local artists and Rev. Byron Brown of Hamlin.

Dennis Brackeen, who is working on his second album, will sing in a special concert slated Sunday afternoon, Nov. 22. He will be featured in a full concert that evening also. There will be no evening worship that night. Next Friday night, Nov. 20, will be youth night. Pizza will be served to the youth after the service.

1st United Methodist slates piano recital

Jane Womack will perform a piano recital in the sanctuary of First United Methodist Church at 1:30 p.m. Sunday. This special program is a preview of Womack's graduate recital which will be performed in Hemmle Recital Hall at Texas Tech University on Dec. 11.

The public is invited.

Compositions by Bach, Beethoven, Bartok, Ravel and Dello Joro will be featured. This body of music represents a wide range of musical periods: baroque, classical, impressionism and early 20th century.

A free will offering will be taken at the close of the concert. The money donated at this special event will be given by Mrs. Womack to the Lord's Acre Project of First United Methodist.

The proceeds of the annual Lord's Acre Festival, slated Nov. 21 at Scurry County Coliseum will be used to support the youth ministry of the congregation.

Unsafe sex could lead to epidemic of AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unprotected sex is so widespread in the United States that an AIDS epidemic is on the verge of exploding among heterosexuals, according to a national survey published today.

So many people are having sex with multiple partners and without using condoms that "it is just a matter of time before it (AIDS) will spread widely into the heterosexual community," said Joseph Catania, a University of California, San Francisco, researcher and an author of an analysis of the survey in the journal Science.

Most American AIDS patients now are homosexuals or intravenous drug users, but the survey shows that could change rapidly.

Catania said the conclusion is based on the largest sexual survey of Americans in more than 40 years.

More than 10,000 people were questioned by telephone about their sexual practices and about habits that could put them at risk of AIDS. Respondents were selected by a random digit-dialing system and represented people between the ages of 18 and 75, married and single, living in major cities and in rural areas.

Among the findings:

—Seven percent of respondents said they had had multiple sex partners in the previous year. Ten percent of those with added AIDS risk factors said they had had multiple partners.

Respondents considered at high AIDS risk were those with multiple sex partners, those with a high-risk primary partner, intravenous drug users, blood transfusion recipients and hemophiliacs.

—Among heterosexual adults with two or more sex partners in the last five years, 31 percent were at some level of risk of contracting the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which causes AIDS. In some metropolitan areas where the prevalence of AIDS is higher, the risk figure soared to 41 percent for this group.

—Among those with multiple sex partners, 17 percent used condoms all of the time. Among those with high-risk sexual partners, condom use was only 13 percent.

—People with multiple sexual partners are more likely to be male, African-American or non-Hispanic white, unmarried, highly educated and young adults. Whites and blacks were essentially the same in the number of sexual partners.

—Women and low-income people were most likely to have risky sexual partners. About 71 percent of those with such partners reported not using condoms.

"Women either don't recognize the risk or they are not in a position where they can really enforce safe sex practices," said Catania.

—The low rate of condom use among heterosexuals with multiple partners may result from "a denial of personal risk" and because "a segment of the population still believes it is a gay disease," said Catania.

"You have a situation where heterosexuals don't see themselves being at risk," he said. "Currently, they probably aren't at very high risk, but that situation isn't going to stay constant and that's the problem."

Catania said the United States could develop an AIDS picture similar to that of Africa, where 75 percent of all AIDS patients are heterosexual.

Your Birthday

Nov. 14, 1992

Major improvements in your social life are indicated in the year ahead. This could all begin when you make a new friend, who will introduce you to a new group.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Usually, you're a pragmatic person but today you could be more of a daydreamer than a visionary. Rely more on your logic than your imagination. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Business conditions are rather tricky today, but you should still be able to come out on the profit side of the ledger — if you conduct your affairs in a methodical manner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone you're not particularly fond of might be the instrument that leads you to something beneficial today. Don't let your prejudice or your emotions interfere.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your success today could be predicated upon the ante involved. If the stakes are high enough, drive and motivation could overwhelm fear and self-doubt.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Try not to unfavorably prejudge those you meet for the first time today. If given half a chance, they might turn out to be nice — like yourself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) False pride and ego might exert a strong influence on your decision-making processes today, which could lead to poor judgment. Try to take the "me" out of the picture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your doubts regarding whether someone you have a close relationship with really appreciates you could be eliminated today by this individual's sincere behavior.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In order to achieve two important objectives today, rely on yourself instead of others. You can succeed unaided — if you try.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be prepared to play the assertive role in a partnership today. If you provide the leadership, your cohort will provide the backup.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't jump to conclusions today; your first assessment might not be your best one. If you take time to analyze things thoroughly, you can avoid any miscalculations.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not expect more from friends today than they have a right to expect from you. Everybody may prefer to be a receiver instead of a giver.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Intangibles might confuse you today, because you may not be able to grasp their dimensions. However, you should fare well with anything you can touch or feel.

Dedication set Sunday in Fisher Co.

ROBY — The dedication of the Fisher County Veterans Memorial will be at 2 p.m. Sunday. Everyone is invited to attend the unveiling of monuments located on the lawn of the Fisher County Courthouse in Roby.

The center monument honors loved ones who died in combat while defending our nation. The six side monuments remembers veterans who served our country.

All present and former Fisher County residents are urged to attend.

Sidney Lumet to be honored

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Directors Guild of America will award its highest honor to Sidney Lumet, director of such films as "Twelve Angry Men," "Network" and "The Verdict."

Lumet will receive the D.W. Griffith Award at a dinner March 6, the organization said Thursday.

"Sidney Lumet has earned the respect and admiration of his peers with a remarkably diverse and visionary body of work," said Arthur Hiller, DGA president.

Past recipients include John Ford, Alfred Hitchcock, David Lean, Orson Welles and this year's winner, Akira Kurosawa.

Study finds 1.3 million Texas children lack health insurance

AUSTIN (AP) — A new study showing that more than 1.3 million Texas children lack health coverage points to the need for reforms in medical and social service area, experts say.

The study, conducted by the Southern Institute on Children and Families, also shows that one-tenth of all uninsured children in the United States live in Texas.

Diane Stewart, director for the Center for Public Policy Priorities, called the findings "very troubling."

"The study reveals the impact of the growing health-care crisis on those who are least able to help themselves, our children," Ms. Stewart said.

The study surveyed 17 southern states and the District of Columbia.

Thirty-four percent of uninsured children under the age of five are eligible for Medicaid benefits, but are not enrolled in the program, according to the study.

And 80 percent of uninsured children are in families with incomes 200 percent below the poverty level.

The figures all point to a need to change the state's method for providing health care for children, Ms. Stewart said.

"Early in a child's development is the time during which preventive care can be most crucial and catching small ailments before they become critical emergencies is still possible," Ms. Stewart said.

"Families of most of these children have no way of providing health care coverage to their children," she said.

Dr. David Smith, Texas Department of Health commissioner, said the medical community needs to change how it provides care.

"I think what we're seeing in these statistics is something that all of us have become familiar with if you've watched television over the last 12 or 15 years. It's called pay me now or pay me later," Smith said. "What we seeing with these statistics is, we've been paying later."

Moving toward a preventive-based, rather than reactive-based, health care system could save millions of dollars, Smith said.

Smith said the state should find new and unconventional means of providing health coverage to uninsured children, such as offering services at schools, churches and homeless shelters.

Nobel winner's brother reports death threats

CHIMEL, Guatemala (AP) — The brother of Nobel Peace Prize laureate Rigoberta Menchu says he's received death threats since she was honored last month for her work defending Guatemala's Indians.

Fear also stalks other family members in the western highlands, where military and paramilitary groups still operate freely and violently against suspected leftists despite six years of civilian government.

"Members of Voluntary Civil Patrols have sent word they want to end the Menchu lineage and will start with the oldest surviving brother first," Nicolas Menchu, 43, told The Associated Press. "I fear for my life."

Rightist security forces have targeted Guatemala's 5 million Indians on suspicion of harboring guerrilla sympathies.

Nicolas Menchu said he was in the hamlet of La Danta on Oct. 29 on his way to farm a small family plot in Chimel when a group of men armed with machetes and guns approached him. Menchu said the men were patrol commanders and they accused his sister of being a guerrilla and threatened to kill him if he returned to the area.

Rigoberta Menchu fled to Mexico after her parents were killed in 1981 and has lived there since in self-imposed exile.

Alejandro Lopezus, vice-mayor of Uspantan, where the family now lives, plays down the threats, but said the council began receiving anonymous threatening letters when it appeared sympathetic to Nicolas Menchu.

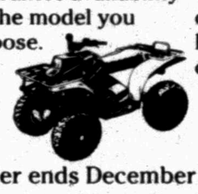

Lopezus said other threats came from men he knows as patrol members.

Christian Tomuschat, the U.N. representative investigating human rights violations in Guatemala, warned authorities recently that the military-directed Civilian Patrols must be controlled.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

WHEN THE ISRAELITES FIRST ASKED FOR A KING TO LEAD THEM AGAINST THEIR ENEMIES, SAMUEL, THE PROPHET, WHO WAS THE LAST OF A LONG LINE OF JUDGES, (SPIRITUAL LEADERS OF THE TRIBES) CAUTIONED THE PEOPLE (CIRCA B.C. 1000) HE EXPLAINED TO THEM ALL THE LIBERTIES, WHICH THEY ENJOYED, THAT THEY WOULD BE GIVING UP — ONCE THEY HAD A KING! (I SAMUEL 8:10-19)

AND NEVER DID A PROPHET PREDICT MORE TRULY! FOR IN THE FIVE HUNDRED YEARS THAT KINGS RULED OVER ISRAEL NEVER WERE THE PEOPLE FREE FROM BONDAGE. EACH MAN HAD TO WORK ONE MONTH OUT OF A YEAR FOR THE KING, TEN PERCENT OF ALL HIS CROPS AND CATTLE WENT TO THE THRONE, HIS BEST LANDS INVARIABLY WERE USED BY THE KING, HIS HEALTHIEST CHILDREN PUT TO WORK IN THE PALACES, AND EVEN WHEN HE WENT TO PRAY IN THE TEMPLE HE WAS TAXED! EVERYTHING SAMUEL HAD PREDICTED CAME TO HAPPEN!

NEXT WEEK: A PARABLE!
