Tennessee Ernie Ford

'Ol' Ern' dies at 72

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Tennessee Ernie Ford, whose mellow charm and bottomless bass voice on songs like "Sixteen Tons" and "The Ballad of Davy Crockett" enchanted a generation of TV viewers, died Thursday. He was 72. Ford, whose mischievous grin accented an ever present mustache, died at HCA Reston Hospital in Reston, Va. He had been admitted there Sept. 28. Ford recorded more than 80 albums during a singing career of more than 40 years. Ford was the friendly next-door-neighbor type with homespun humor, who was invited into the homes of millions of TV viewers. "Bless your lil' pea-pickin' hearts," he told viewers every week. His "Sixteen Tons," written by Merle Travis, was a sensation in 1955, with its famous phrase:

"You load 16 tons, and what do you get?

"Another day older and deeper in debt."

"Saint Peter don't you call me, 'cause I can't go.

"I owe my soul to the company store."

Absentee voting

Only 34 people had voted absentee in this year's constitutional amendment election as of 5 p.m. Thursday, election officials said.

Early voting began on Wednesday. Eighteen persons voted on Wednesday and another 16 voted on Thursday. Early voting will continue until Nov. 1. The actual election is slated for Tuesday, Nov. 5.

Texans are voting on 13 constitutional amendments, including whether or not a state lottery should be authorized.

Persons wanting to vote early can cast ballots at the Elections Administration Office, 709 W. Washington Ave., Monday through Friday. The office will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., except for Oct. 31 and Nov. 1, when hours will be expanded to 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Group donates $20,000 to MC aviation program

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Amid the sounds of hammering and electric saws at Midland College's Hangar E Thursday afternoon, Forward Midland representatives announced a $20,000 contribution to Midland College.

The funds will be applied to the the college's Aviation Maintenance Technology Program's two-year, $1.4 million budget.

The aviation program will provide students with skills to become certified Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) mechanics and the opportunity to earn an associate of applied science in aviation maintenance technology.

"This type of program — which will train people in aviation — is a major asset to Midland. We hope it encourages people to relocate here," said Clarence Scharbauer III, chairman of Forward

Confessed rapist-killer, ex-wife vie for custody

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press writer

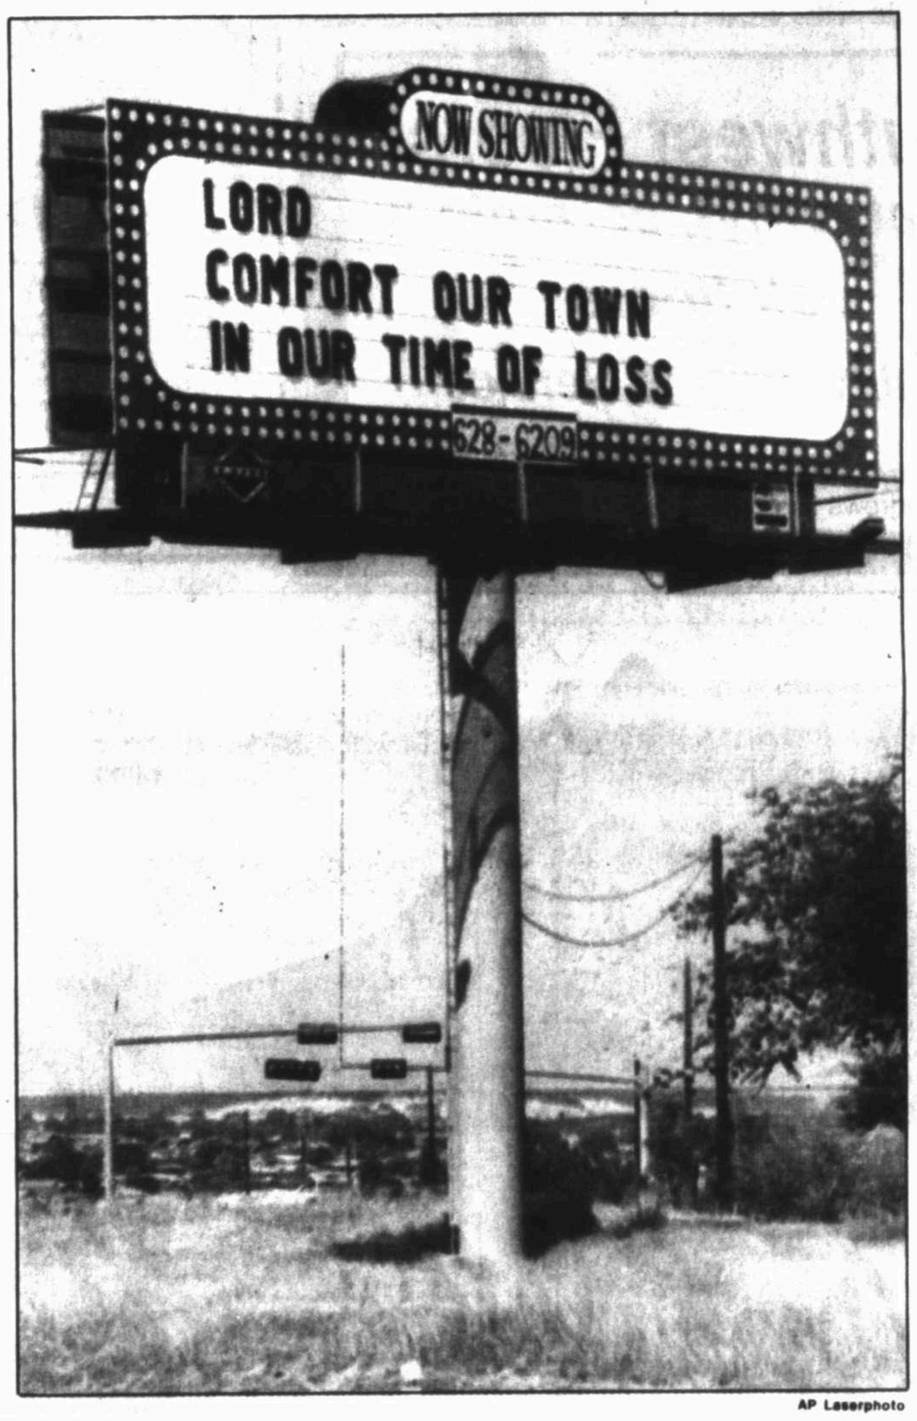

ATHENS — An East Texas mother is waging a fierce campaign to regain custody of two young children a divorce judge awarded her husband, a confessed rapist-killer.

She maintains that one of her children, a 5-year-old girl, may have been abused by a friend of the husband since the ruling here last June.

Authorities in two states are investigating the allegations of child abuse.

"This a horror story," says the mother, Janet Hefley, whose friends insist is a victim of a cruel irony. They say the judge took the children from a battered wife, ordered her to pay child support and gave the Police cite killer's fury at women

■ Much remains a mystery about gunman; town reels from tragedy.

KILLEEN — The gunman who massacred 22 people in a 10-minute barrage of semiautomatic gunfire may have been triggered by a fury against women, authorities said Thursday. And they said that as he exchanged shots with police who were closing in on him, the gunman saved one final bullet for himself.

■ House rejects gun ban/2A

Much remained a mystery about what caused George Hennard, one day after his 35th birthday, to drive his pickup through a plate-glass window at Luby's Cafeteria, jump out and methodically execute cowering victims with a pair of pistols. It ended in his suicide, and was the worst mass shooting in U.S. history.

Of 23 people wounded, at least 11 remained hospitalized Thursday, two in critical condition.

Fourteen of the dead were women, and residents of this central Texas town suggested Hennard was angry at women, citing a letter he had written last summer referring to "treacherous female vipers" and his comments during the rampage.

Navy apologizes to Hartwigs about 1989 Iowa blast blame

Hartwig

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years after the Navy accused a sailor of causing a deadly explosion aboard the USS Iowa, the service said Thursday there was no "clear and convincing proof" that Clayton Hartwig was to blame and apologized to his family.

"There is no certain answer to the question of what caused the tragedy," that killed 47 people, said Adm. Frank Kelso the chief of naval operations.

"I extend my sincere regrets to the family of (gunner's mate) Hartwig," Kelso said at a Pentagon briefing. "We're sorry Clayton Hartwig was accused of this."

Family members said they were pleased with the apology.

"They gave us the words I wanted to hear," Hartwig's mother, Evelyn, said in Cleveland. "I think they were sorry the way things went."

Kelso, reporting on a second round of investigation into the blast, said he rejects the finding that the 1989 explosion "most probably" was an act of suicidal sabotage brought on by

Bentsen backs legislation to stem health-care crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said Thursday he'll propose a short-term solution to the nation's health care crisis that relies on making insurance more affordable for small employers.

Bentsen, D-Texas, told reporters his proposals are "things that I think we can do now — not things that will block fundamental change later."

Though Bentsen favors comprehensive reform, "major overhaul is going to take some time . . . and in the meantime, lots of people are going to suffer." His plan would improve some of the problems now, he said.

Bentsen said he would introduce his bill in the next few days, and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., plans to introduce a similar bill in the House next week, according to

Students drum in no-drug message

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

The national Red Ribbon campaign promoting drug-abstinence kicked off locally Thursday night at the Chapparal Center at Midland College as youth throughout Midland gathered to listen to anti-drug messages and the music of Troupe RTF.

The campaign theme here is "Proud to be . . . Drug Free," and Troupe RTF (Road to Fame) relayed that theme to the audience.

"If you've got a boyfriend . . . then tell him you don't want to date a dope who messes with dope," one member told the females in the crowd. The band kept the audience dancing with several Top 40 songs.

Troupe RTF performs regularly at community service events, particularly programs centered around drug abuse awareness. Recently the members received a letter of commendation from Gov. Ann Richards and The Texans' War on Drugs "Be Smart, Don't Start" campaign.

Earlier, cheerleading squads from local schools and the Greater Midland Football League performed anti-drug cheers and the San Jacinto Junior High School band punctuated their performances with several songs.

Officially, Red Ribbon Week is Oct. 20-27. Midlanders are encouraged to wear red ribbons in support of drug-free choices. Beginning Oct. 21, red ribbons can be picked up at McCoy's Building Supply Centers.

Mayor Carroll Thomas read a proclamation commending the youth and announced his and the city council's support of Red Ribbon Week.

The Citywide PTA Council and the local Telephone Pioneers of America were in charge of the rally.

House rejects semiautomatic weapons ban

■ Lawmaker who represents Killeen changes stance on gun control.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The House on Thursday rejected a ban on semiautomatic assault weapons despite an emotional appeal from a Texas congressman who represents Killeen, scene of the worst mass shooting by a single gunman in the nation's history.

Rep. Chet Edwards, who traditionally opposes gun control, planned to vote against the ban but changed his mind after 23 people, including the gunman, died in a shooting spree Tuesday at a crowded Killeen restaurant.

"We can't bring back the lives lost in my district," the Waco Democrat told colleagues, "but perhaps you can save a life in your neighborhood."

But at the end of a debate punctuated by repeated references to the Texas slayings, the House voted 247-177 to strip the provision from a broad anti-crime bill. The outcome was a victory for the National Rifle Association, which lobbied against the ban.

The measure, sponsored by Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., would have banned the sale of 13 semiautomatic assault weapons and magazines that hold more than seven rounds of ammunition.

The Glock 9mm semiautomatic pistol used in the Killeen shootings was not included in the list. But the measure would have barred sale of the 17-round magazine commonly used in the Austrian-made weapon.

Members of the Texas delegation voted 22-5 against Schumer's provision, reflecting the state's deeply rooted pro-gun philosophy. Nevertheless, Texans on both sides of the issue acknowledged that the violence in their home state caused emotional soul-searching.

"Certainly the tragedy in Killeen made everybody think twice," said Rep. Pete Geren, D-Fort Worth. But, like other gun control opponents who voted against the ban, Geren said the provision was poorly drawn and would have allowed the federal government to include other weapons not on the list.

The vote came on an amendment by Rep. Harold L. Volkmer, D-Mo., to strip Schumer's provision from the crime legislation. Lawmakers will continue debating the anti-crime package next week.

Geren and Rep. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, circulated blue fact sheets on the House floor urging their colleagues to kill the ban.

The aftershock of the Killeen slayings further intensified the latest debate on gun control, always an emotional issue. Gun control advocates said "the Texas massacre" underscores the need to keep assault weapons from the public while NRA supporters said the ban would erode Americans' constitutional rights to bear arms.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, drew scattered applause by declaring that only "cowards, criminals and weirdos" use assault weapons. Rep. Chester Atkins, D-Mass., called the Glock 9mm a "murder machine," adding, "These weapons are made for carnage — not for protection."

But Sarpalius, while expressing sympathy for the Killeen victims and their families, said that Schumer's ban "will not stop people from killing people" and urged Congress to enact tougher laws to punish criminals.

House members listened quietly as Edwards, a freshman lawmaker, took the podium to tell colleagues how the tragedy in his home district had caused him to alter his views on gun control.

SCENE: Editor's wife recalls massacre in Killeen cafeteria

(From 1A)

I just held my breath.

The gunshots seemed to ring out for hours, even though it lasted only a matter of minutes.

Moments before the shooting began, we were finishing our lunch at Luby's cafeteria, having a good time and giving gifts to our boss for Bosses' Day.

The good time was quickly shattered by the sound of breaking glass as a blue pickup came crashing through the front windows at about 12:40 Wednesday afternoon.

Before it was over, our boss, James Swift, lay bleeding from a gunshot wound.

Mr. Swift, the director of KISD's Chapter 1-Bilingual-Adult Ed Program, survived the shooting. Two of his staff members did not.

One sat across the table from me at lunch. I was just talking to her when we heard the truck crash through the window.

After the ordeal was over and we were sure it was safe to get up, I grabbed her leg and shook it. I called out her name, but she didn't respond. I didn't realize how close the bullets came to me until that moment.

The truck was completely inside the building when it came to a stop, and it would've kept going if something hadn't forced it to stop. I don't know what it was.

I saw a glimpse of the gunman's head. He began shooting and yelling. "Look at what Belton's done to me!" he screamed.

The next thing I knew I was on the floor, as was everyone around me.

My face was pressed as far into the carpet as possible. I was getting as low to the ground as I could. I was trying to hide from him even though I knew I couldn't.

I kept my face to the ground and my eyes closed. The rest of the ordeal was a nightmare of sounds.

The sound of the bullets began to grow louder and louder. It seemed like they were getting closer to my head. Then the sound started moving away. He seemed to be circling the cafeteria's dining area. I didn't think he was going to leave any of us alive.

Then came a brief silence in the gunfire. He seemed to be taking a breather. I was hoping he was out of bullets. But then I heard a noise, the chilling sound of a gun being reloaded.

He began walking about the cafeteria again, and the terrifying sounds continued.

"Was it worth it?" he said. BAM. BAM-BAM-BAM, the gunfire blasted out.

"Tell me, was it worth it?" BAM-BAM-BAM-BAM-BAM.

"Wait 'til those f—ing women in Belton see this! I wonder if they'll think it was worth it!" he screamed.

He was overloaded with anger. He needed help before it came to this.

I wondered when his anger started, if he had been an angry child. As a counselor with the Chapter 1 program, I work hard for children. Some of them also have anger inside. I hope I am helping them deal with their anger appropriately.

The gunfire began to sound more and more distant. I heard screams and the sound of glass breaking. It seemed to be coming from the kitchen area.

Soon afterward, I heard a siren. It was quickly followed by several more sirens.

Then I heard a different voice. I kind of lifted myself up and saw a man with a rifle, but I still didn't know if it was safe. Other voices could soon be heard, and I could tell some people were moving around. I thought the police had arrived.

I heard the gunman's voice yelling out, "I've got two hostages!"

"No, you don't!" another voice screamed back.

A few more words were exchanged. Several shots were fired. And I heard someone say, "He shot himself."

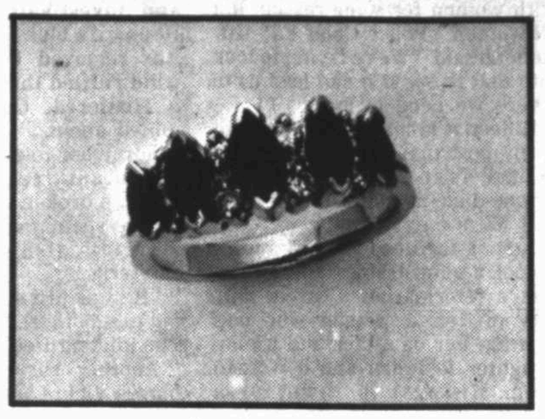

I was feeling like it was over, but still scared to get up.

A policeman came over to our area, his black cap said "POLICE" in white letters. He told us help was on the way.

I slowly stood up, and the police who were ushering us out of the building told us: "Don't look down.

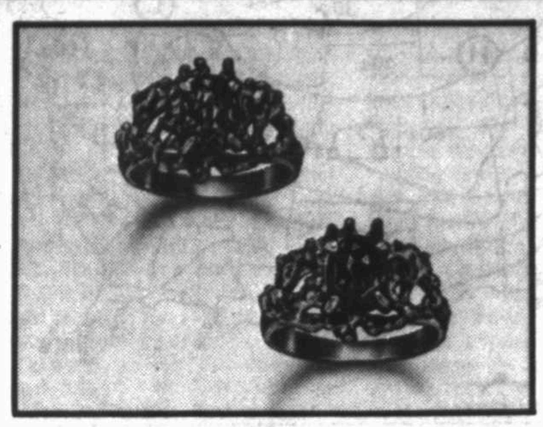

Once I got outside the door, I just screamed and cried after I had to hold it in for so long."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press

STATE

Texas enjoyed more unseasonably warm weather Thursday with sunny skies and blustery winds.

Winds aloft associated with an upper level ridge of high pressure continued to promote a dry atmosphere.

The circulation around an area of low pressure at the surface located over West Texas resulted in strong gusty south winds over western and central sections. Winds were generally 15 to 20 but gusted up to 30 miles an hour.

Temperatures climbed into the upper 80s in most areas with readings ranging from 80 degrees at Texarkana to 94 at Reese Air Force Base in Lubbock.

Amarillo's reading of 89 degrees was one degree higher than the 1988 record high and El Paso's 91 broke the 103-year-old record of 89 degrees set in 1888.

The North Texas forecast was for fair skies today and partly cloudy Saturday, when it will be cooler. Highs today were expected in the 80s with lows in the upper 40s to mid 50s. Highs Saturday were expected in the mid 70s.

NATION

Temperatures were cool Thursday in the snow-dusted West and heavy rain was accompanied by high wind in the mid-Atlantic states.

Light morning snow fell in the Big Horn mountains of north-central Wyoming.

Norfolk, Va., got more than 3.17 inches of rain since noon Wednesday. Heavy rain caused flooding in Annapolis, Md., and lightning started several fires in Harford County, Md.

Wind gusted to 40 mph at the Baltimore airport.

At midday, rain stretched from southern New England and southeast New York state to eastern Virginia.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Area forecast

West Texas: Mostly sunny today. Fair tonight. Mostly sunny Far West, partly cloudy elsewhere Saturday. Highs today mid-70s Panhandle to around 90 Far West. Lows tonight lower 40s Panhandle to lower 50s Concho Valley and Edwards plateau. Highs Saturday mostly 70s except mid-80s Panhandle and mid-80s Far West.

Extended forecast

West Texas: Texas Panhandle, fair with a warming trend. Highs in the lower 70s Sunday warming to the upper 70s by Tuesday. Lows in the mid- to upper 40s. South Plains, fair with a warming trend. Highs in the mid-70s Sunday warming to the lower 80s by Tuesday. Lows in the upper 40s. Permian Basin, fair. A little warmer Sunday. Highs around 80 each day. Lows in the upper 40s to the lower 50s. Concho Valley-Edwards Plateau, fair. A little warmer Sunday. Highs in the lower 80s. Lows in the mid-50s. Far West Texas, fair. Highs in the low to mid-80s. Lows in the upper 40s to lower 50s. Big Bend area, fair. Highs from the mid-70s mountains to the upper 80s along the Rio Grande. Lows from near 40 mountains to the mid-60s lower elevations.

FURY: Much remains a mystery about gunman

(From 1A)

Police said they are investigating his attitude toward women.

"He has an evident problem with women for some reason, not all women," Police Chief F.L. Giacomozzi said. "We're trying to look into that to see if it can lead us to where we need to look."

Killeen is home to Fort Hood, an Army post that sent 23,000 troops to the Persian Gulf War, only 10 of whom died in combat, less than half Wednesday's toll.

Among the dead at Luby's were school administrators and educators, a veterinarian, a career military officer, a woman who was treating her daughter and granddaughter to lunch and a woman from Missouri in town for a wedding.

Flags flew at half staff as an army of counselors, clergy and volunteers tried to console residents. Luby's remained roped off, and investigators were inside. Hennard's blue Ford pickup truck was removed before dawn, but wind ruffled through the window it shattered. Outside, onlookers milled about.

Survivors told of hiding in the restaurant freezer or jumping through broken windows. One employee spent the night in a commercial dishwasher at the cafeteria.

"He was just scared and was going to stay there," Giacomozzi said. The unidentified man was unhurt.

Another survivor, Luby's employee Vicki Large, said the tragedy has hit home. "I just see him coming through the window and shooting everywhere and it's like he's after me or something," she said Thursday.

Giacomozzi said Hennard used two 9mm semiautomatic pistols, with three ammunition clips for each. One, a Ruger P89, carried 15 rounds in each clip. Another, a Glock 17, had 17 rounds.

Police are unsure how many shots were fired, Giacomozzi said. But he added, "The gun was empty on the last round."

He said the guns were bought in February and March, in Henderson, Nev., where Hennard's mother lives, and may have been the only two guns Hennard owned. Neighbors in Henderson said Hennard had lived there as late as this summer.

Hennard bought the guns from Mike's Gun House, a mail-order gun business run out of a home.

Gun control advocates seized on the massacre to try an sway a crucial vote in Washington, where the House was debating a crime bill. But the portion of the bill that would have restricted the high-capacity ammunition clips used in the guns was defeated.

"The tragedy yesterday added some momentum in our direction, but at this point I don't think it is enough," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., chief supporter of the bill. Rep. Chet Edwards, a Democrat whose district includes Killeen, dropped his long standing opposition to the weapons ban.

NAVY: There is no 'clear proof,' service says

(From 1A)

Hartwig's despondency over a failed relationship with another sailor.

But he said the Navy's initial investigation was "an honest attempt" to weigh all the evidence it had at the time. He said he doubted anyone would ever know exactly what happened inside the second gun turret of the World War II-era battleship.

The investigation into the explosion, which occurred during a training exercise about 300 miles north of Puerto Rico, cost about $25 million, Kelso said.

He said two years of analysis and thousands of tests conducted by Navy and independent scientists could not find — nor rule out — "an intentional act nor an accidental cause" for the April 19, 1989, explosion.

Navy experts and independent scientists at the Sandia National Laboratories in Albuquerque, N.M., who have conducted hundreds of experiments to try to replicate the explosion, don't agree on a specific cause for the blast, Kelso said.

"Without clear and convincing proof, an opinion, no matter how equivocally stated, that an individual may have intentionally brought about his own death and the deaths of 46 of his shipmates is inappropriate," the admiral said.

That "qualified opinion ... was interpreted by many as a conclusive finding of wrongdoing," Kelso said. "For this, on behalf of the U.S. Navy, I extend my sincere regrets to (Hartwig's) family."

He also apologized to the families of the others who died in the blast, saying he regretted that "such a long period has passed, and despite all efforts, no certain answer ... can be found."

CUSTODY: Mother wages fierce campaign

(From 1A)

offspring to a husband who tormented her.

The husband, Charles Hefley, denies abusing his wife or contributing to her emotional problems, which presumably led to the judge's ruling.

"Janet is trying to make the whole issue my past," Hefley told a reporter by telephone. "But I'm not the deranged, mentally disturbed, confused 16-year-old I was 30 years ago."

The presiding judge refused last week to speak with an Associated Press reporter, saying through an aide that he would not comment because the case is still pending.

Mrs. Hefley's former lawyer likewise refused comment. When the reporter persisted, the lawyer ordered him from his office.

Her current attorney demanded a new trial, but was informed this week that his motion had been overruled. He said he would appeal.

Hefley, then a teen-ager, was indicted in 1964 for raping and stabbing a young Fort Worth woman and drowning her two infant sons in the Trinity River.

A truck driver found her the next morning. She had been beaten, stabbed, raped and left naked and close to death near the river bank, but had crawled to a clearing.

She survived but lost an eye.

"If somebody could do this to her, what could they do to the kids?" one investigator said during a search for the missing infants.

Although the story was front-page news for days, the mother did not learn at once that her boys' bodies had been recovered from the river.

A jury ruled Hefley was insane at the time of both the crime and his trial. He was committed to the the Rusk State Hospital and confined there for 10 years.

Released from the mental hospital in 1975, Hefley, now 43, married and divorced another woman before marrying Janet in 1980 in Las Vegas.

Mrs. Hefley blames her own history of mental problems on both physical and emotional abuse by Hefley, which he denies. He does admit one episode of violence.

"She was biting my thumb and I hit her on the forehead and I have hit her in the nose," Hefley said in a sworn statement last March.

In his June 11 divorce ruling, County Court-at-Law Judge Matt Livingston appointed Hefley "managing conservator" of his and Janet's two children, a daughter now 5 and a son now 3.

The Athens judge granted Mrs. Hefley "periods of possession" but ordered her to make child support payments of $200 a month.

Mrs. Hefley, 38, a native of Artesia, N.M., is now living in nearby Tyler with her fiance, a driver for a soft drink company. Hefley is living in Las Vegas, Nev., with the children.

He told the AP the youngsters are "healthy, happy, well-adjusted and intelligent little children" who enjoy living with him.

When the divorce petition was filed, the couple resided in the tiny Henderson County town of Chandler, between Athens and Tyler.

During the divorce proceedings, Mrs. Hefley's attorney, Henry Skelton, described Hefley's personality as "much like that of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and declared:

"Periodic violent outbursts, in which he would beat, strike, shove and revile Mrs. Hefley, would be followed by periods during which he would treat her with the utmost charm, courtesy and loving attention. ...

"This pattern of violent behavoir ... was a major cause of Mrs. Hefley's mental problems resulting in her hospitalization in 1985 and 1990."

Other than the one episode when she bit him, Hefley told the AP, his wife's claims of abuse are "pure fiction."

In his closing argument, Skelton, said:

"... It would be unthinkable to award custody of these small children to a man such as Mr. Hefley, an admitted murderer, con-artist and ne'er do well. In contrast, Mrs. Hefley, even under the most unfavorable interpretation of the evidence against her, has not been shown to have ever done anything that actually endangered the children.

"Instead, the evidence shows that she has never conducted herself ... in any manner other than as a caring, nurturing and loving mother, placing the children's welfare foremost in her life."

Skelton said she has submitted herself to therapy on an intensive basis, diligently attended counseling sessions and taken medication as directed.

Furthermore, he said, health care professionals testified she has shown "steady and marked emotional growth, which has led her to understand her situation as a battered woman and to take the steps necessary to free herself from the domination of her husband."

Hefley's lawyer, Allen Boswell of Athens, countered that there was scant evidence of marital abuse but substantial evidence of Mrs. Hefley's emotional problems.

The two most "serious" incidents involving Mrs. Hefley and the children are both vague. In one instance, the youngsters were covered with paint. And once the little girl, perhaps unattended, crawled into a garment bag and zipped it up.

Boswell said Mrs. Hefley did not have the capacity to properly supervise and care for the youngsters and that her neglect posed a danger to them.

Hefley maintains his wife is delusional and schizophrenic and that her mental problems are current while his are behind him.

"Chuck had problems in 1964, but was committed to Rusk State Hospital and released sane and not a danger," Boswell argued to the court. "Since then he has been a good husband and exceptional father to the children. ..."

But according to Skelton, Hefley also was convicted of assault on his first wife in California, involuntary manslaughter in Nevada and driving while intoxicated in Georgia.

After Judge Livingston ruled in favor of Hefley, Mrs. Hefley appealed for help to Gov. Ann Richards, Atty. Gen. Dan Morales and other state officials.

None came forward, although State Rep. Dan Kamel of Tyler did contact the Department of Human Resources on her behalf and volunteered his assistance to her new lawyer.

Robert Flowers, executive director of the State Commission on Judicial Conduct, said in a curt letter the commision had dismissed her complaint.

"... The commission noted," Flowers wrote, "that the decision made by the judge was within his discretion and that it is beyond the authority of the commission to change such decisions."

The attorney general's office, while expressing sympathy, told Mrs. Hefley it had no power to intervene and suggested she continue her efforts through the appeal process.

Bentsen: Senator backs short-term health solution

Bentsen's proposal would cost the federal government about $10 billion over five years, most of it from increasing the tax deduction for health care premiums from 25 percent to 100 percent for the self-employed. The rest, about $2.6 billion, would result from expanding Medicare benefits to include cancer screening, influenza immunizations and other preventive care services.

Bentsen said he had not settled on a way to finance the measure, and he declined to discuss the options he's considering.

His legislation would set minimum standards for health insurance sold to employers with up to 50 workers. Insurance companies would be barred from excluding individuals in a group from coverage and could not cancel policies because of claims experience or health problems.

Premiums for small employers would be controlled and increases would be limited. Also, people with ongoing health problems would be protected from losing their insurance coverage if they change jobs.

More than two dozen proposals to reform the health care system are circulating on Capitol Hill. But like Bentsen, many lawmakers predict that comprehensive solutions are years away from approval because it will be difficult to accommodate the various interests within the industry.

Some of the plans, including one offered by Senate Democratic leaders, would require employers to provide health insurance to their workers or contribute to a public insurance program, but Bentsen said he decided against such requirements "because I can't get that done now."

Under his plan, he said, the incentive for businesses to offer insurance would be competition among employers for workers.

"If you don't have health insurance, it's harder to get employees," he said.

DONATION: Forward Midland backs MC program

(From 1A)

Midland.

Scharbauer said the organization already presented the college with a $10,000 check and will offer the other $10,000 the first of the year.

"This is a two-year pledge," he said.

Scharbauer

"It's just phenomenal that the program is being all privately funded," said Bud Stapleton, aviation program director.

Stapleton stood in front of the Cessna 150 plane — donated in August to the aviation program — while he addressed media representatives.

The classroom construction began Wednesday, according to H.A. Tuck, MC spokesperson.

Stapleton said an Aztec Piper twin engine plane was expected to arrive in the hangar late Thursday afternoon and a helicopter would arrive before Nov. 15. Both the Piper and the helicopter were purchased by the college.

"The Piper, a multi-engine plane will add another facet to the program," Tuck said.

Forward Midland representatives said the aviation maintenance program could be a boon to the Midland economy.

"Because of new FAA regulations and the aging of fleets of airplanes, a need for maintenance is growing nationwide," said Janna King, Midland Chamber of Commerce president and chief executive officer.

Steve Davidson, chairman of the Midland College Foundation, said the college's aviation program is "a perfect mix for Midland."

Davidson

"One of the concepts behind Forward Midland is to bring dollars to mix with assets to the community," Davidson said.

Forward Midland is a four-year, $2.3 million economic diversification and job creation initiative of the Midland chamber.

The organization was created to improve and diversify the local economy, induce the relocation of businesses to Midland, generate payrolls for area citizens and attract capital investment to the Permian Basin, according to Scharbauer.

He said the organization has already raised pledges of almost $1.5 million.

"We are looking forward to working with Midland College as a team to help build the economy of the community," Ms. King said. "Midland College will help us by providing an appropriately trained labor force for the aviation industry."

"Midland has a long history of aviation," Ms. King said. "We had the bomardier base, the Windecker plane and Texas Instruments which produces military electronics, some of which are used in aviation and aerospace."

The chamber president and CEO noted that Midland's dry climate is advantageous for painting and maintaining aircraft.

"We also have a beautiful airport facility and available adjacent land," she said.

King

Ms. King said she hoped the aviation program will attract new aviation industries to the area.

"Aviation is one of the chamber's target industries," she said. "We now have a college training program and will provide labor force for the industry. We need to work on attracting industry to provide our college students — who graduate from the program — with jobs."

In the meantime, construction — which is expected to be completed in four to six weeks — of the college's aviation classrooms continue and MC officials will keep their eyes on the skies for several more light aircraft expected to arrive in coming months.

"Now all we will need are some jet engines," Tuck said.

Baker step closer to peace conference

JERUSALEM (AP) — Only one major issue — the final selection of Palestinian delegates and their appraisal by Israel — awaited settlement Thursday before President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announce a Middle East peace conference.

Leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organization were drafting a list of delegates at their headquarters in Tunisia, while Secretary of State James A. Baker III conferred separately here with Palestinians and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

"We had a very good meeting, we've made good progress," Baker said after meeting with Shamir for more than seven hours in the prime minister's office on a stony Jerusalem hillside.

Israeli spokesmen and other officials agreed with that assessment, but Baker's schedule is slipping after prolonged talks in Syria on Wednesday.

As co-sponsors, Bush and Gorbachev are determined to convene the peace conference by the end of October. Invitations will go out at least 10 days in advance.

A few days ago, Oct. 29 was circled on the calendar and Lausanne, Switzerland, was designated as the peace conference site.

Pushing against that deadline, Baker persuaded Syrian President Hafez Assad on Wednesday to approve U.S. terms for negotiations with Israel.

But Assad would not budge in his refusal to deal with Israel on arms buildups, scarce water supplies and other regional problems.

In Jerusalem, Baker has made headway — but slowly — with Shamir and the Palestinians.

Even so, Baker realized he could not be finished by the afternoon, so he made plans to spend tonight in Jerusalem.

To a large degree, the pace is being set by Yasser Arafat's PLO. Ten Palestinians are believed to have been selected for the peace talks, but final approval of four others is still being debated in Tunis.

Baker meanwhile sought to ease Israel's concerns about the Palestinians and Syrians.

Defense Minister Moshe Arens said Syria's boycott of the regional phase of the peace conference was "not a sign of a real desire for peace."

But there was no indication that the boycott would alter Israel's tentative decision to attend the conference.

Referring to the major issue of Palestinian representation at the talks, Zalman Shoval, the Israeli ambassador to the United States, said there were only questions — not problems — on other issues.

Ukraine rejects union agreement

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — The Ukraine on Thursday refused to join other Soviet republics in signing an agreement to form an economic union, throwing into doubt whether the nation can prevent its disintegration.

The pact, which would bind 10 of the remaining 12 the Soviet republics together in a shared economy, was to have been signed today. It was not immediately clear whether the decision by the Ukraine, the second most powerful Soviet republic behind Russia, would postpone the Kremlin signing ceremony by the other states.

In addition to the Ukraine, the republics of Moldavia and Georgia have also rejected the treaty, saying they want complete independence from Moscow.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has said he cannot imagine a Soviet Union without the Ukraine, which has more than 52 million people.

Since August's failed coup attempt that routed Communists from power, Gorbachev has made finalizing an economic union his highest political priority. As envisioned by Gorbachev, it would create a "single economic zone" that would have one monetary and banking system, coordinated customs rules and tariffs, and cooperation in fields such as energy, transportation and communications.

The Ukraine produces almost a quarter of the Soviet Union's food and its coal, and a fifth of its machinery and chemicals. Its most vital product is wheat.

However, the Ukraine is heavily dependent on Russia for oil.

Russia threatened Thursday to begin charging "former" Soviet republics in hard currency for its products if they failed to join the new economic structure.

The Ukraine, with a bad wheat harvest this autumn, has already said it does not have enough hard currency to buy wheat. Thus, it will be hard pressed to pay for its oil from Russia.

Ukrainian Deputy Parliamentary Chairman Vladimir Grinyov said the final economic treaty hadn't included enough of his state's proposals.

Grinyov and other Ukrainian officials said they want to maintain trade and economic ties with other republics. However, they said, the Ukraine insists on independence and will not join any economic or political union with the central government in Moscow.

The Ukraine also objected to a provision of the economic agreement that would divide responsibility for the Soviet Union's $65 billion foreign debt among the republics by January 1992. That could saddle the Ukraine with enormous debt payments.

Thursday's decision came as somewhat of a surprise since the Ukraine had earlier agreed to sign.

Some Russian government officials dismissed the Ukraine's sudden about-face, claiming it was a scare tactic. They said their neighboring republic simply hoped to extract last minute treaty concessions from Russia.

Russian Vice President Alexander Rutskoi brushed off the crisis. "I do not know if (the) Ukraine will survive without Russia," he said, "but Russia will survive without (the) Ukraine."

The Ukrainian parliament declared the republic independent in the midst of the chaos of last August's coup. However, the declaration has to be approved by the people in a Dec. 1 referendum.

Trains collide, killing at least 16

MELUN, France (AP) — An overnight passenger train from the Riviera to Paris smashed head-on into a freight train Thursday, killing at least 16 people, injuring dozens and littering a freight yard with twisted metal and smashed luggage.

Railway officials said the freight train rolled into the passenger train's path while switching tracks about 6:30 a.m. near the station in Melun, 30 miles southeast of Paris.

Jacques Fournier, president of the French national railway, said both trains were traveling 35-45 mph. However, a black box later recovered from the passenger train indicated it was going 25 mph at the time.

The passenger train from Nice, made up of four sleeper cars and several cars carrying automobiles, was knocked off the rails by the force of the collision with the 12-car, 900-ton freight train loaded with metal cables and beams.

The front sleeping car was hurled atop the passenger train's engine, and the crash left a 550-yard trail of buckled metal, blood-stained pillows and other debris.

"I was in the corridor in the second car when I felt a violent shock..

— Passenger

Fournier told a news conference the railroad was "fully responsible for the accident and must draw the necessary conclusions" regarding safety.

Among those killed was the engineer of the freight train. Most of the other casualties were in the lead sleeper car.

"I was in the corridor in the second car when I felt a violent shock and was thrown against the compartment wall," said one passenger, who did not give his name.

Fournier said 62 people were injured, 22 of them seriously. Police said 57 people were hurt.

Transport Minister Paul Quiles announced an immediate inquiry. Premier Edith Cresson visited the morgue and expressed condolences to grieving survivors, as did President Francois Mitterrand.

Scores of ambulances, rescue vehicles and helicopters converged on the scene with more than 200 firefighters and rescue workers.

"Some of the injured were totally panicked, and we had to comfort them before we could evacuate them," said Lt. Col. Guy Bernoux.

A crewman aboard the passenger train was killed, but its engineer, Christian Roye, was found alive, trapped in his cabin. His right leg was amputated in order to pull him from the wreckage, six hours after the crash, officials said.

The train was carrying about 100 passengers.

Texaco rig adrift in North Sea

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — A Texaco oil rig with 80 workers aboard broke free of towing lines in stormy weather Thursday night and went adrift in the North Sea, with winds in the area whipping waves 40 feet high, the Aberdeen Coast Guard reported.

It said in a statement in this northeast Scottish oil port city, "There are no reports of injuries and nobody is thought to be in any immediate danger."

The rig Borgny Bolphin was 95 miles northeast of the Shetland Islands, the statement said.

It said two helicopters were sent to take non-essential workers off the rig while efforts were made to stop its drift.

NATO slashes 700 warheads

N.Y. Times News Service

PARIS — NATO announced Thursday that it was following up on President Bush's nuclear arms initiative by slashing the Western alliance's nuclear arsenal in Europe by a further 700 warheads from a total of 3,600.

The stage was set for the move last month when Bush announced that the United States would remove or destroy all ground-based tactical nuclear weapons, including artillery shells and short-range missiles, which have long served as Western Europe's first line of nuclear defense.

At Thursday's meeting in the Sicilian resort of Taormina, the alliance's defense ministers went further by ordering the destruction of half the 1,400 nuclear bombs that are stockpiled in Europe for possible use aboard allied aircraft. Bush had specifically omitted aircraft bombs from the cuts he announced last month.

"The overall effect will be a reduction of some 80 percent," British Defense Secretary Tom King told reporters, adding that some American submarine-launched nuclear strategic missiles would still be available to defend Europe. Long-range missiles in the British and French nuclear arsenals were also unaffected by Thursday's announcement.

Although NATO has undertaken a drastic revision of its strategy since the collapse of the Warsaw Pact almost two years ago, the latest measures were prompted by the demise of Soviet communism since the failure of the August coup d'etat in Moscow.

They are also seen as a response to Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who answered Bush's announcement of unilateral arms cuts last month by offering to eliminate all short-range nuclear weapons.

Small Haitian town defies army control, backs Aristide

By Howard W. French
N.Y. Times News Service

JEREMIE, Haiti — Life is slowly returning to normal in Port-au-Prince, the capital, after the military coup that overthrew President Jean-Bertrand Aristide on Sept. 30, but in this small town a smoldering test of nerves between the army and a defiant population continues.

Even as military reinforcements arrive from the capital to hold this isolated region, a cradle of the leftist "liberation theology" that helped thrust Aristide forward as a leader in the fight against the Duvalier dictatorship, poor residents angrily vow never to submit to the army. To avoid the soldiers' bullets, they say, they sleep in the bush at night.

"They are clamping down there because there is a real fear of the Jeremie syndrome," a diplomat in Port-au-Prince said. He was referring to the town's resistance to Francois Duvalier, which led to the massacre of hundreds of people by the army in 1964.

The military's nervousness is fed by rumors in the capital that if all else fails, Aristide might put ashore here with armed followers and begin broadcasting calls for a popular uprising. If widely heeded, an uprising would stretch the small army to its limits.

In Port-au-Prince, soldiers shooting into crowds quickly put down demonstrations against the coup, but here thousands of residents filled the streets, shouting angrily and destroying buildings belonging to people believed to have links with the army.

Residents say that nightly raids by soldiers continue in this town of 18,000, which hugs a deep-blue Caribbean Sea 120 miles west of the capital. But the population, backed by a militant Roman Catholic diocese, is plotting its own campaign of resistance.

In the hillside slum of Ste. Helene, where cockfights still provide afternoon entertainment, deep trenches have been cut in dirt roads by residents to block the passage of army vehicles. "We're not dead yet," said a skinny boy in ragged clothing, tapping on his chest. "We're still here."

Killeen tragedy leaves questions

It was only a matter of time until it happened. Twenty-one people had died in a McDonald's restaurant at San Ysidro, Calif., in 1984. In the back of everyone's mind was the nagging question of when it would happen again — a bloody assault by a crazed individual with a load of grief to shed.

The answer came during the lunch hour Wednesday in Killeen, a central Texas community, when George Hennard of Belton drove a pickup truck through a window at a Luby's restaurant, stepped out and methodically began shooting those in the cafeteria. When he turned the 9mm Glock semiautomatic pistol on himself, he had already killed 22 others. Hennard now holds the "record," but there's no pride of accomplishment in this horrible tragedy, just 22 dead innocent people.

It could have been even worse, in fact might have been had not three undercover police officers been nearby. "Had they not arrived," acknowledged Killeen Police Chief F.L. Giacomozzi, "it's very evident that the shooting of innocent people would have continued." Hennard, whom cafeteria patrons said was obviously angry, was not out of bullets when he killed himself.

Others present noted that Hennard commented, "This is what Bell County has done to me" as he began shooting. Neighbors of his told how he scared them by running in front of their cars and writing letters to them. One woman, Jane Bugg, said he wrote a letter to her in which he stated in part, "It is very ironic about Belton. I found the best and the worst in women there. You and sister on the one side. Then the abundance of evil women that make up the worst on the other side. I would like to personally remind all of those vipers that I have civil rights too."

The killing is a tragedy of enormous proportions. As in the San Ysidro killing, there seems to be no rational reason for it. Why did the killer choose innocent people whom he likely did not even know or hold a grudge against? Was it as in many other cases a cry of desperation on the killer's part? Hopefully in coming weeks more evidence will become available to shed more light on Hennard's motivations.

For now there's only sympathy for the victims and their families. The tragedy of what happened in Killeen Wednesday can never be undone.

Thomas hearings showed our deceit

The American government has become a travesty unto God. "In God We Trust" is our national motto and to me that means we are to trust in God and the men on that Clarence Thomas panel keep saying, "How can we know who is really telling the truth?"

Have they forgotten to pray? Have we all forgotten that if one truly believes and trusts in God, he will reveal the truth? Have we forgotten what Jesus Christ did for us on the cross? Have some forgotten that the curtain was rent so that all those who believe and are of the truth might come into the Holy of Holies and have divine communication with him (John 18:37)?

I have read of another time in history when difference of opinion had everything at a standstill. This was a time when "Benjamin Franklin urged the necessity of imploring Divine assistance in a memorable speech." He said, "How has it happened that while groping so long in the dark, divided in our opinions, and now ready to separate without accomplishing the great object of this meeting, that we have hitherto not once thought of humbly applying to the Father of Lights to illuminate our understanding?" The meeting was adjourned for private prayer and reassembled for the signing of our Constitution.

A family, a city, nor a nation can stand on falsehood. At one time in history the great duty of America was to "civilize, to educate and to Christianize her people." To be a Christian means to be a "little Christ," to have a Christ-like character and there was not one word of deceit found in his mouth. The History Book reveals to me that he spent much time alone, much time in prayer and when he was in public he had strength and answers. The same is available for us when we listen and obey. So why not humble ourselves and take the time to pray. I have and if I were given the opportunity to cast a lot for Clarence Thomas for leadership today my vote would have to be a nay.

My prayer this morning is that men will learn to forgive women first as God did and that we can learn to respect life. There must be reverence for life.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Oct. 18, the 291st day of 1991. There are 74 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 18, 1767, the boundary between Maryland and Pennsylvania, the Mason-Dixon line, was agreed upon.

On this date:

In 1685, King Louis XIV of France revoked the Edict of Nantes, which had established the legal toleration of France's Protestant population, the Huguenots.

In 1867, the United States took formal possession of Alaska from Russia.

In 1873, representatives of Columbia, Princeton, Rutgers and Yale Universities drew up the first rules for intercollegiate football.

In 1898, the American flag was raised in Puerto Rico shortly before Spain formally relinquished control of the island to the United States.

In 1931, 60 years ago, inventor Thomas Alva Edison died in West Orange, N.J., at the age of 84.

Feds wise up to money-laundering plans

WASHINGTON — When authorities shut down the corrupt Bank of Credit and Commerce International, the world learned that BCCI had laundered money for drug lords and other sordid characters. But by the time the law caught up with BCCI, many money launderers had already stopped using the bank. They found craftier ways to hide their bucks.

Anderson

The challenge of the criminal who makes too much money is to find a way to mingle that money with legitimate funds and avoid calling attention to the bundles of ill-gotten gain. That means that a drug dealer can't walk up to the teller window with $50,000 in cash and expect to have no questions asked.

That means exercising enough creativity to keep one step ahead of the law. Here's an example:

A fisherman, who sells drugs on the side, hauls in a catch and then exaggerates the value of it with phony invoices, making it appear as though he sold $50,000 worth of fish when he sold only $20,000. That way he has disguised $30,000 in drug money as fish money.

The laundering technique with the most momentum these days is the use of unregulated financial institutions including store-front check-cashing services. Money launderers give their cash to cohorts who own some of these businesses. Unsuspecting customers then come into the stores to cash checks. They get the dirty money, and the crooks get a legitimate check that they can deposit in their bank account without attracting the attention of the law.

Casas de cambio — the currency exchange houses along the U.S.-Mexican border — are an even better way to launder money because so much cash flows through them. Federal officials estimate that up to 2,000 such money exchanges do business on the border, and many of them accommodate money launderers.

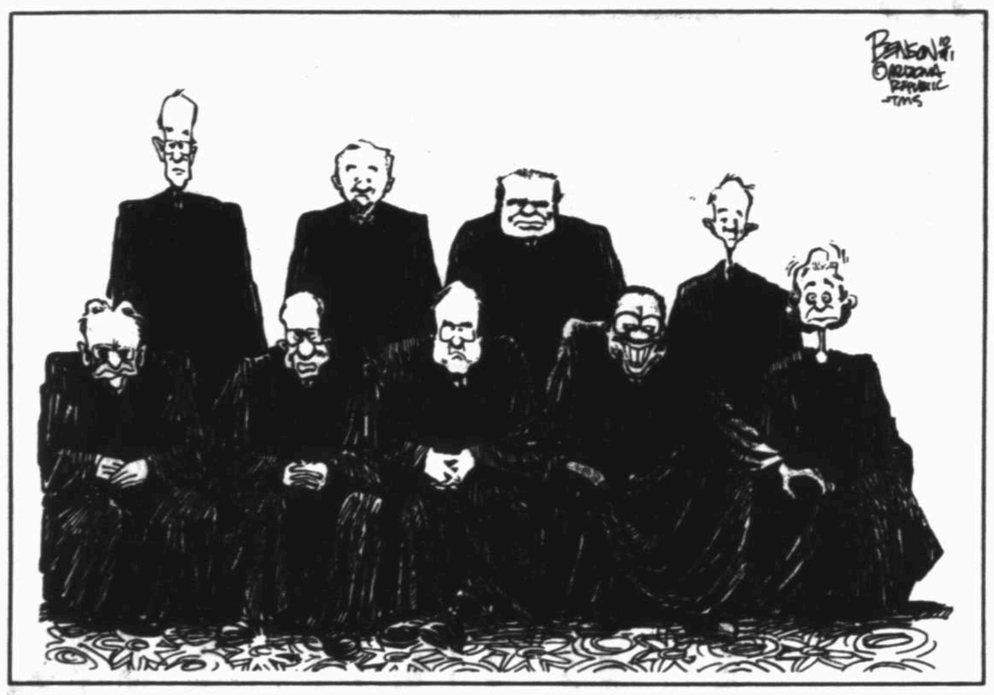

A drug dealer takes dollars to the border exchange. The exchanger puts the dollars in his Mexican bank and then wires the money to an American bank where the crook can get it.

Our associate Scott Sleek got an education in money laundering from the federal expert on the subject, Brian Bruh. He runs the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network, or FinCen, in the Treasury Department. FinCen is a new agency that pulls together the government's vast array of data on currency, banking and law enforcement and runs it through computers to search for money-laundering operations.

Here are some other techniques FinCen is wise to:

- Some food-stamp recipients trade their coupons for drugs on the street. The drug dealer then finds a grocer who is willing to pay cash for the stamps. The grocer makes a profit by buying the stamps for less than face value and cashing them in for full value.
- Some launderers make multiple advance payments on credit cards, generating a credit balance of up to $15,000. Then they buy items against the credit, cash out the card or request a refund from the issuing bank.
- Several travel agencies have been used to launder money. They mix ill-gotten gain with their income from ticket sales and then wire the money to an off-shore account. Then it is wired back to the United States.

It's time to limit terms of public servants

Sixty percent of us, according to a New York Times/CBS News poll, think the Thomas hearings were "an embarrassing spectacle that will result in nothing good."

Embarrassing, yes. But unproductive of good? What about all the intensified interest in term limitation?

Murchison

If the problem in Washington, D. C., is too much power, we must cut the ground from beneath the powerful. We must make them move on, whether they want to or not. That is what term limitation is about: showing public servants the door after a stipulated term of, ah, service. Twelve years per servant strikes me as about right.

We talk of bureaucracies, powerful and perpetual, in business, in government agencies, in the church. The bureaucratic establishment on Capitol Hill is too infrequently remarked upon. It is huge. There are 535 members in both houses of Congress. There is a support staff of around 37,400. This amounts to 69.906 staffers per member.

The congressional bureaucracy, according to William Safire of the New York Times, went after Clarence Thomas with hammer and tongs.

Anita Hill, writes Safire, confirming suggestions lodged by Republican interrogators, was recruited by aides to Sens. Kennedy ("that defender of womanhood") and Metzenbaum. Liberal activists had discovered "that Ms. Hill harbored a secret grudge against Judge Thomas. They called her and persuaded her to file the accusation that the reassembled Bork Brigade thought would bring him down." She was told "that her name would never be used publicly or even made known to her target." Ummmhmmm, we see how well THAT worked out.

The two perpetrators of the plot against Thomas should be hauled into some suitable forum and made to answer publicly for the outrage they committed privately. But we shouldn't suppose that preventing nomination-sabotage is the main purpose of term limitation.

The main purpose is keeping the tree of liberty well pruned: making room for fresh shoots by cutting away, at scheduled intervals, the heavier, more cumbrous branches.

To put it another way, the deck needs frequent reshuffling to ensure a fair deal. Yes, in so doing, we turn over knaves and kings alike. Maybe that is harsh, and, on the other hand, given the knaves' resources and ambitions, there's no surer way of making sure they get flipped.

The people, true enough, are entitled to vote out of office anybody they want to. But the power of bureaucracy and big money makes this dauntingly difficult. So, too, familiarity breeds resignation. In 1990, 99.3 percent of incumbents at the state and federal levels won re-election.

Opponents of term limitation urge the voters not to narrow their choices by barring an experienced 12-year incumbent from seeking re-election. But term limitations already apply in various venues, like city councils. The president of the United States is constitutionally restricted to eight years in office.

Experience doesn't guarantee quality in any case. Massachusetts has been represented for three decades by the "defender of womanhood" whose staffer helped inadvertently to make Anita Hill a household name.

The mind boggles most of all, I think, at the argument that Congressman A, and he or she only, can do the job in exemplary and patriotic fashion. Bologna!

My fellow Americans, it's time not just to denounce Congress but to punish it, make it hurt for its sins against the public weal. Good congressmen — there are some — will understand. Bad, or merely careless, congressmen — well, who cares what they think, any more than they cared about the emotional anguish they inflicted on Judge Clarence Thomas.

Big banks scheme away with pension funds

Large commercial banks, investment banking firms, and the U.S. Treasury Department are in the process of gang-raping the American people.

It is axiomatic in the 20th Century that while large money center banks never share their profits with the American taxpayers, they inevitably figure out a way to dump their losses on the taxpayers.

Reese

The savings and loan bailout is nothing more than a process by which the liabilities of savings and loan pirates are transferred to the American taxpayer. This caper is already saddling Americans with a new $160 billion of debt which will be bled from future generations by taxation.

That scheme, however, pales in comparison with what the commercial banks have in mind. It is a sweet deal for them, but it is likely to cause havoc, heartbreak and misery to millions of Americans who don't even realize what is about to be done to them.

Remember the Latin American debt? Remember the Brady Plan? Well, what the Brady Plan is apparently contemplating is transferring the bad debts of big banks to the pension funds of hard-working American men and women.

The scheme works this way. The big banks put themselves way out on a limb by lending more billions to Latin American countries than they can repay — now, next year, or in the next century.

Big problem for the big banks whose cronies and expensive lobbyists infest Washington and the Bush administration like termites in a fallen rain forest tree.

They got these bad loans which they are calling good because if they admit they are bad, the bank is rendered insolvent. Call them what they like, they can't collect the money. The Latin nations don't have it and can't earn it. What to do?

Along comes Nick Brady to the rescue. Let the Latin American debtors convert their bank debts to bonds. Sell the bonds at a discount to investment bankers who in turn will sell them to gullible Americans and to American pension funds. With the proceeds, pay the banks. The banks now got at least some of their money and are out of there, clean and free.

But who has the uncollectible debt? The American people who think when they retire, they will have a pension. If this scheme goes the way I think its perpetrators want it to go, American pension funds portfolios will soon be full of Latin American bonds.

For the exact same reason the Latin American governments couldn't pay back the loans, they won't be able to redeem the bonds.

Apparently that's perfectly OK as far as the banks and the Bush administration are concerned. What will collapse will be the pension funds and the dreams and future happiness of honest Americans. Bush and Brady will be long gone. The banks will act as if they had never heard of the scheme.

The Congress, which is allowing the Bush administration to commit this atrocity, will in the future act surprised and outraged and deny all responsibility for the wreakage of human lives.

So far this is a scheme in progress. Only Mexico and Venezuela have issued Brady bonds, but others are expected to follow suit. The investment banks which will peddle the bonds, taking their profits up front, are already beginning to tout them as a good investment for pension funds.

Congress could and ought to put a stop to this scheme by passing a law that no pension fund can invest in foreign bonds. Otherwise the same rape of innocent Americans which investment bankers pulled off in the 1920s — yes, they were peddling Latin American bonds back then like hotcakes — can be avoided.

Foreign bonds are a speculative investment at best, though applying speculative to Latin American bonds is actually using a euphemism. Nothing is certain in life but death. The likelihood those bonds will never be redeemed is a close second to death in the certainty department.

I am appalled at how far Wall Street and Washington will go in abusing and exploiting the American people. Both places are moral cesspools. It's enough to make a country boy turn revolutionary.

Social Security recipients receive 3.7 percent increase in benefits

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The 40 million Americans who receive Social Security benefits will get a 3.7 percent increase starting in January, the government announced Thursday. That is the smallest cost-of-living adjustment in five years.

The increase, while smaller than those allowed from 1988 through this year, is larger than the increases from 1984 through 1987.

Under federal law, the increase, intended to help beneficiaries keep up with rising living costs, is automatic. It is determined by increases in the Consumer Price Index.

For retired workers, the new cost-of-living adjustment will increase the average Social Security check by $22 a month, to $629 from $607. For an elderly couple, both receiving benefits, the average monthly Social Security check will rise by $38, to $1,067 from $1,029.

The same 3.7 percent increase will raise payments to nearly 10 million people receiving benefits under other federal programs. Among those who will receive the cost-of-living adjustment are 4.6 million aged, blind and disabled people enrolled in the Supplemental Security Income program; 2.2 million people who receive Civil Service retirement pay; 1.7 million people who get military retirement pay, and more than a million veterans who receive pensions based on financial need.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates that these automatic increases will cost the government at least $13.5 billion next year. Ten billion dollars of that amount is for Social Security. As a rule of thumb, each percentage point in the cost-of-living adjustment increases federal spending for Social Security benefits by $2.7 billion a year, Social Security officials said.

The American Association of Retired Persons, which has 33 million members, said the cost-of-living adjustment was relatively small because overall inflation was comparatively low in the last 12 months.

"While low inflation is good news for most Americans, a 3.7 percent increase does not offset health-care costs that are rising at double or more the rate of overall inflation," said Horace B. Deets, executive director of the association. "Twenty-two dollars may not be enough for even one month's medicine, much less needed medical treatment."

Medicare, the federal health insurance program for the elderly and disabled, generally does not pay the costs of drugs for people outside a hospital.

The monthly premium for Part B of Medicare, which covers doctors' services, will increase in January as a result of the comprehensive budget law approved last year by Congress and President Bush. The monthly premium, now $29.90, will rise to $31.80.

Panel to recommend Gates' confirmation

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A majority of the Senate Intelligence Committee is expected Friday to approve the nomination of Robert M. Gates as the next director of Central Intelligence.

The vote, which comes more than five months after President Bush named his deputy national security adviser to serve as the country's espionage chief, will move the nomination to the full Senate, where an intense debate is expected over Gates' fitness for a job he was denied in 1987.

Confirmation by the Senate hinges on the decision of crucial uncommitted Democrats, although the endorsement of the committee will boost Gates' chances. The Senate has not yet set a date to vote on the nomination, but the White House is pressing for an early decision, in the hope of avoiding a prolonged debate that opponents could use to erode support for the nominee.

Three weeks of hearings on the nomination raised questions about Gates' bleak view of Moscow, his stern management style and whether he misled Congress about his role in the Iran-Contra affair and slanted intelligence during his years as a senior CIA manager.

All seven Republicans on the 15-member committee have already said they would support Gates, who served in a number of top positions, including that of CIA deputy director before he went to the National Security Council.

In addition, Sen. David L. Boren, D-Okla., who is chairman of the committee, announced Thursday that he would vote "with enthusiasm" for the nominee when the committee votes today.

Noting that Gates had both experience and the confidence of Bush, Boren said, "We simply do not have the time for someone from the outside to learn all of the complexity of the intelligence community."

He praised Gates for his cooperation with the congressional oversight of intelligence, adding, "I don't think we've had anyone who's ever come before our committee nominated for this important post who has made a stronger commitment to the oversight process than has been made by Robert Gates."

Boren, who at the hearings warmly praised Gates for his cooperation with Congress while he was a senior manager at the agency, acknowledged that Gates "might be considered to be guilty of nonfeasance" because he did not aggressively pursue information on the Iran-Contra affair as it was unfolding.

But, he added that he did not think anyone who is "perfect" had ever come to a confirmation process and predicted that he would be confirmed by the full Senate.

At least one other Democrat, Sen. Alan Cranston of California, also said Thursday that he was unswayed by the charges about the nominee and would vote for him.

"I believe that his own intelligence, his many years of experience in intelligence work and what I trust he has learned in two rough, tough confirmation processes qualifies him."

Firefighters battle blazes in Northwest

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Evacuees began returning to their burned-out homes as gusting wind eased Thursday, helping firefighters battle wildfires that have destroyed more than 100 homes and killed five people across four states.

"Before the fire was letting us fight it on its terms, but now the tide has changed a little bit," U.S. Forest Service spokesman Kevin Kennedy said in Oregon. "This is a real big day for us."

More than 100 fires totaling about 250,000 acres of grass, brush and timber burned in Washington, Idaho, Montana and Oregon. More than 6,000 firefighters battled the blazes.

Most were ignited Wednesday by power lines downed in a fierce wind storm that gusted to more than 60 mph and kicked up heavy dust.

Killed were an eastern Washington woman trying to flee her home, two people crushed by heavy equipment in Idaho and Montana and the pilot and co-pilot aboard a California-based air tanker that crashed en route to firefighting duty in Montana. The wreckage was found Thursday.

Fire officials had said four people were missing after reporting fires in northern Spokane County, but they said Thursday there were no reports of anyone missing.

Governor race in Louisiana goes to wire

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Two days before the Louisiana primary, first-term Gov. Buddy Roemer appeared to be in a close race with ex-Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke and a former governor looking for a better place in history.

A Nov. 16 runoff is almost a certainty after Saturday's open primary in which all 12 candidates, regardless of party, bump heads. Unless someone gets 50 percent of the vote, the top two vote-getters will proceed to the runoff.

Most of the candidates are unknowns; only three have shown strength: Roemer, Duke and former Gov. Edwin Edwards.

Roemer recently turned Republican; Duke, a state representative, is a Republican but has been repudiated by the national party. Edwards is a populist Democrat.

"The street politicians say Roemer might not even make the runoff," said Gus Weill of Baton Rouge, dean of the state's political consultants. "Louisiana could become the theater of the absurd. We'd be the only state in the nation to seriously consider electing a Kluxxer. What a commentary!"

Ed Renwick, a pollster at the Loyola Institute of Politics, said Duke can't be accurately polled because of his "closet vote," the people who won't publicly say they'll pull the lever for a man who once led the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and hobnobbed with American Nazis.

A poll sponsored by newspapers and television stations before the 1990 U.S. Senate race showed Duke with 22 percent of the vote against the incumbent, Democratic Sen. J. Bennett Johnston. Duke wound up with 44 percent.

"I think I'm leading the field," Duke said Wednesday night at a rally attended by 500 in the Cajun community of Scott.

Both Roemer and Edwards acknowledge that the 41-year-old Duke is a new, strong force in Louisiana politics.

Roemer, 47, says Duke's support comes from whites who want to return to life in the 1950s when society was segregated and welfare wasn't seen as a problem.

"I don't claim to understand it," said Edwards, 64.

"They don't understand because they're out of touch with the people," Duke said. "We're not talking racism. We're talking equality for all. We're talking about fairness to those who pay the bills — the taxpayer."

Judge permanently bars blockades by anti-abortionists

BOSTON (AP) — A judge Thursday made permanent an injunction issued last year that prohibits anti-abortion activists from blocking access to Massachusetts clinics.

Judge Peter. M. Lauriat's 150-page decision compared anti-abortion protest tactics to those of segregationists who once blocked schools to black students.

The ruling bars the defendants or anyone acting with them from blocking access to clinics. Penalties include up to 2½ years in jail.

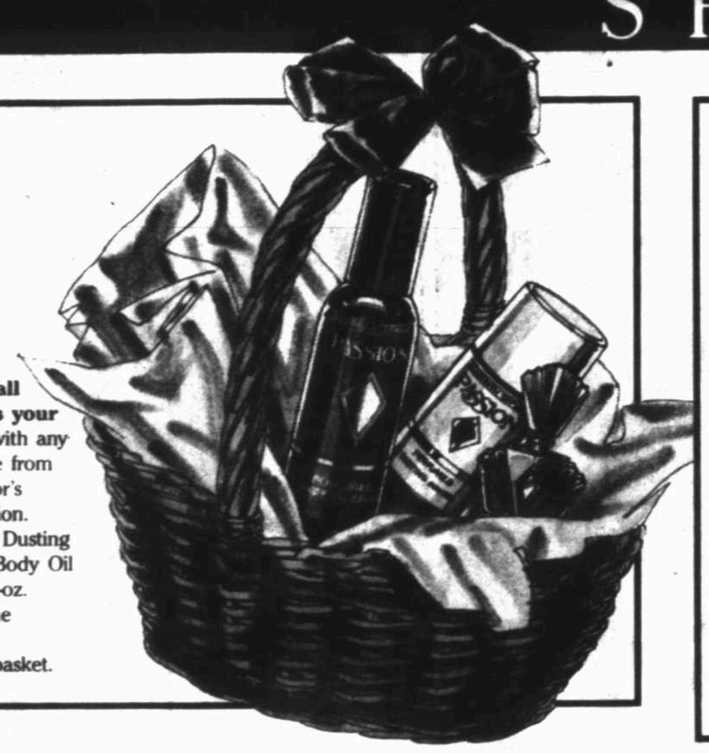

But even as the ruling was issued, police in Springfield on Thursday said they arrested about a dozen anti-abortion activists who staged a sit-in at Hampden Gynecological Clinic.

Named in the injunction were Operation Rescue Boston, the Pro-Life Action Network and 38 individual defendants.

Lauriat, a Middlesex County Superior Court judge, issued a preliminary injunction in May 1990 in the wake of several Operation Rescue protests that shut down abortion clinics.

"The defendants' harsh and angry defiance of the rule of law, and of the constitutionally and legally protected rights of their fellow citizens, is intolerable in this society," Lauriat wrote in Thursday's ruling.

Assistant airport director resigns her post

■ Marcelyn Blauvelt will leave her job Oct. 31 to move to Denver with her husband.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Marcelyn Blauvelt, assistant director of airports, has announced her resignation. Those with whom she worked closely said they were saddened by the news.

City officials say they haven't considered replacement possibilities.

Ms. Blauvelt, in her fifth year of employment with the city's airports, said she plans to move to Denver with her husband, a pilot for American Airlines. Her resignation is effective Oct. 31.

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said he and Ken Day, director of airports, had not discussed options for a replacement Thursday. Day could not be reached for comment.

Ed Vogler, chairman of the city's airport advisory board, said Ms. Blauvelt would be sorely missed.

"She is a very remarkable person, very knowledgable," Vogler said. He said her departure would "leave a tremendous void."

Vogler said he would urge city officials to look closely at the assistant director position for possible restructuring.

"She wasn't just an eight to five person," he said. "She did much more than that and gave many things to her work." He described her as an "amazing people person."

After beginning work at Midland International as an intern in April of 1988, Ms. Blauvelt worked as airport agent, administrative services manager and finally was promoted to assistant director for administration more than one year ago. Marvin Esterly is assistant director for operations and maintenance.

Vogler said Ms. Blauvelt's commitment went "up and beyond the call of duty." Airline station managers Bill Thurman, of American, and Marilyn Tucker, of Southwest, expressed their regrets at her departure, Vogler said.

Thane Akins, chairman of the expanded Permian Basin Airport Board, said Ms. Blauvelt was invaluable to that board.

"It's going to be difficult to replace her," he said, citing Ms. Blauvelt's intense regional marketing campaign. He said he hoped the attempts to promote the facility throughout the area would continue.

"I think it's something we're just now seeing the value of. She was very active in that," Akins said.

Ms. Blauvelt said work with the airport boards was among the most interesting of her Midland International duties.

"You get a chance to work with a lot of people in the community," she said. "For professional growth, I couldn't replace this experience."

A trained airline pilot who has a master's degree in aviation management, Ms. Blauvelt said she may pursue "other avenues" in Denver.

"I don't have a job lined up yet so I don't know what exactly I'm going to do," she said. "I may very well find myself again in airport management. There are a lot of small airports around the area as well as the big one."

Leaders said she was a much-needed source of support and information for the Confederate Air Force during its relocation and air show preparations.

Ms. Blauvelt said she plans to continue involvement with the Confederate Air Force, and hopes to return to Midland for the Dec. 7 grand opening of its headquarters and museum.

"At the same time I'm excited to be going on to something new, I'm really excited for the future of Midland," she said. "It's going to blossom."

United Way push clears 43 percent

■ Major oil and special gifts divisions reported the top totals.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

United Way of Midland volunteers have reached 43 percent of the fall campaign goal of $2.753 million, it was announced Thursday at the campaign's second report luncheon held at Centennial Plaza.

Organizers continued with the campaign's World War II theme, "Allied for Victory — The United Way," as Campaign Chairman K. Michael Conaway, portraying Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, reported that his ship was receiving heavy shelling in the Battle of Midway.

Conaway again battled with the evil Nagasaki Nasturtium, who attempted to persuade him to give up the fight.

Representatives from each division reported funds raised and then poured a symbolic bucket of water, representing their help with the Battle of Midway, into a barrel.

Leading the way with contributions of $303,825 and $303,476, respectively, were the major oil division and special gifts division.

Others included: UTC, $99,695; Real Estate and Finance, $89,233; Government and Services, $80,672; Business and Entertainment, $74,712; Petroleum Industry, $61,624; Professional, $46,621; CC Unit, $40,772; Retail, $35,147; Independent Oil, $31,420; and Residential, $16,001. Education has yet to report a total.

Also, Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. will match up to $50,000 for each new dollar contributed during the campaign.

Texaco representative Doug Van Pelt related the rewards he's received from volunteering for the Meals on Wheels program.

He told a story about one woman who makes it all worth while.

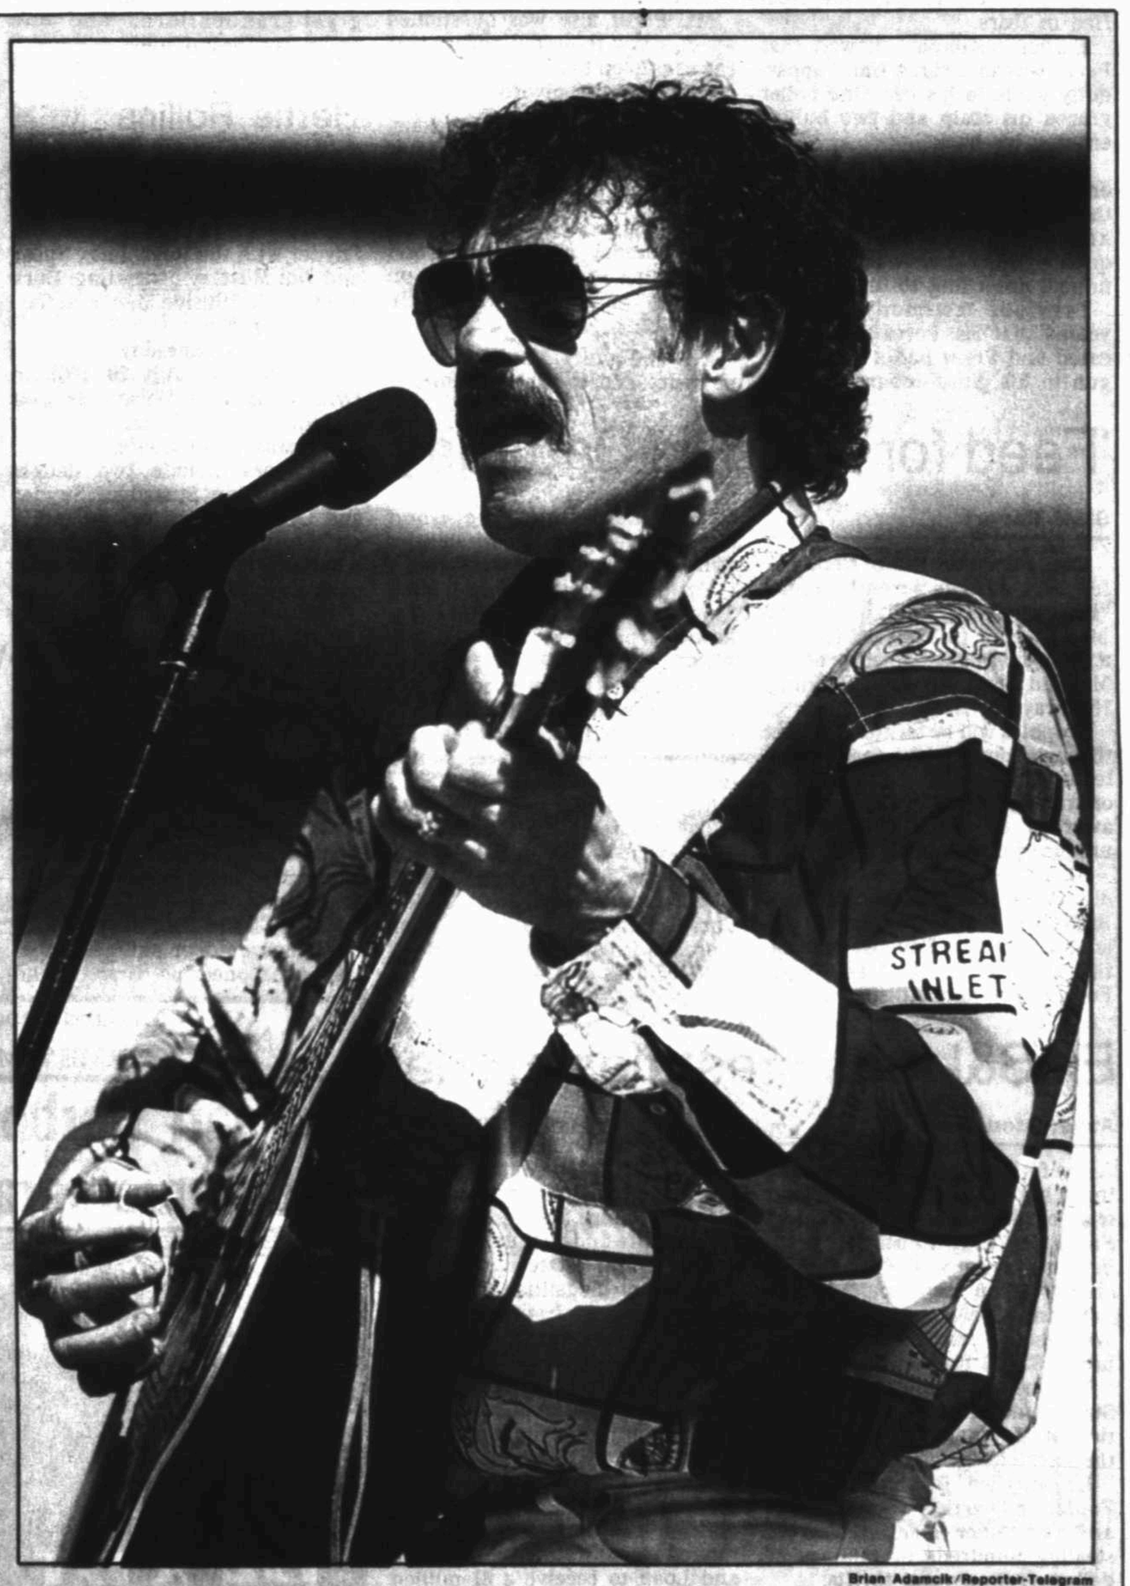

"Every time she sees me, I know she's appreciative because there's always a smile on her face," he said. "She always talks about the same things, like the weather, but seeing her smile is a good feeling."

Toward the end of the meeting, two volunteers surprised Master of Ceremonies Bill Dingus by dumping a barrel of, what was believed to be water, on him. Actually, it was full of paper.

Guitarist Doug Bailiff entertained the crowd with three songs at the start of the meeting.

Sponsoring the event were ARCO Oil and Gas Co.; Conoco, Inc.; Mr. and Mrs. Earle Craig Jr.; Enron Oil and Gas Co.; Gene Sledge Drilling Corporation; the Reporter-Telegram; Master Tubulars; Midland American Bank; KPMG Peat Marwick and NCNB Texas.

The next report luncheon will be held on Oct. 24 at 11:30 a.m. at the Centennial Plaza.

Crying witness details actions before shooting

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The day before the night of the shooting, Ms. Perez was preparing to visit Dallas with a female friend and her three children were to go on a fishing trip with their father (Perez), she testified.

A tearful 42-year-old Midland woman, on trial for murder, testified Thursday how she was beaten, threatened and dragged by the hair across her yard by her ex-husband just prior to the man being fatally shot.

But Celia Garcia Perez told a 12-person jury she doesn't remember firing the shots that killed Jesus Aguilar Perez, 47, on Aug. 23, 1990.

Ms. Perez pleaded not guilty to the murder charge in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court on Tuesday. Her attorney, Glen Aaron, claims his client acted in self-defense.

In addition to describing the events that occurred the day before the shooting, Ms. Perez testified how she had been mentally and physically abused for years by Perez.

On numerous occasions during cross examination by prosecuting attorney Jan Baker, Ms. Perez said she could not remember specific events, times and dates in relation to alleged incidents.

Ms. Perez, who had been married about 18 years and divorced in Nov. 1988, testified that Perez was abusive since early in their marriage.

And after their divorce his anger — and the incidence of beatings — grew, she testified.

"He blamed me for everything," Ms. Perez said.

Ms. Perez told jurors that since the divorce her ex-spouse raped her, beat her, made verbal threats to kill her, and expressed jealousy over her seeing another man.

The couple argued about money, the car, her working, her using her maiden name after the divorce and the man she was seeing, Ms. Perez testified.

Ms. Perez also testified that she had "three or four" miscarriages during her marriage and blamed them on beatings from Perez.

Conoco, Quail Unlimited develop wildlife habitat

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Wildlife and big oil can survive and thrive in concert.

And it was that cooperative spirit in which the federal Bureau of Land Management (BLM) on Thursday near Maljamar, N.M., honored Conoco Inc. and the Hobbs Chapter of Quail Unlimited for their work in developing a three- to five-acre fresh-water lake for waterfowl and associated habitat for game and non-game animals.

Mark Mosley, Conoco's Midland Division manager, accepted the BLM Director's Stewardship Award in behalf of Conoco.

"Conoco appreciates BLM recognition," said Conoco spokeswoman Janet Smith of Houston, "and that recognition will encourage us and other companies to continue to make similar efforts for the environment."

Conoco provided the labor, materials and equipment to construct a pipeline to carry fresh water from the Conoco's MCA carbon dioxide injection well field to the nearby desert-dry lake bottom on public lands.

'Reading fanatic' imparts her pleasure to her pupils

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Diana Boykin is a self-described reading fanatic.

But she admits that her love of the written word came late in life.

"If I would have read one good novel or had one good teacher to take the time to interest me in reading, I wouldn't have waited so late to become a reader," she said.

Ms. Boykin has been recognized for her efforts to be that "one good teacher" for elementary school pupils at DeZavala Elementary School. The Midland Chamber of Commerce named her Teacher of the Month for September.

Members of local organizations — including United Way and Midland Introspective — nominated the teacher for her participation in DeZavala College, the elementary school's summer project which increases the reading skills of children.

The teacher's classroom is decorated with slogans and colorful characters encouraging children to read. A circular bookrack overflows with books and a huge stuffed cow serves as a "reading sofa" for youngsters.

Ms. Boykin said the seven-week summer program gives pupils an edge when school starts in September.

"It initially was set up for first graders who weren't reading at grade level," she said. But it has been expanded to give a boost to students on every grade level.

Some of the youngsters who were in the summer program are now in Ms. Boykin's second grade class.

Although the teacher has taught students in first grade through high school in her 10 years of teaching, she said she prefers teaching second graders.

"At this age you can see when they learn something," she said. "It may be selfish or instant gratification, but I like seeing students read at the end of the year — when they came into the class not reading — and know that I had something to do with that."

The teacher's classroom is decorated with slogans and colorful characters encouraging children to read. A circular bookrack overflows with books and a huge stuffed cow serves as a "reading sofa" for youngsters.

"I also give out books as prizes and read aloud every day," Ms. Boykin said. "Many of my students don't have books at home and most them have only one parent at home. The parent may have two jobs and no time to read to their child."

Ms. Boykin said her biggest challenge is trying to keep pupils' attention.

"It's a challenge to get them to block out other problems in the classroom. If they gaze off I know they may be thinking about a problem at home. I practically have to have a pony show up here to keep them motivated," she said.

Pony show notwithstanding, Jane Wolf of the United Way wrote — in a nomination letter to the chamber — that Ms. Boykin is accomplished in capturing the attention of young minds.

Ms. Wolf, who observed Ms. Boykin in action during the summer program, wrote: "Her teaching methodology is participatory to the max; she keeps her students active, energized, attentive and on the edges of their chairs."

Ms. Boykin said she "theme teaches" to keep the children interested in subject matter.

"For example, instead of writing a sentence on the board such as 'Johnny found six cents,' I come up with a theme and build around it. We are working on a farm theme now, and I might write sentences about scarecrows — where the first one came from and how they are used on the farm."

The teacher said using "real language" which is used in everyday speech also helps her pupils — 16 in a class of 17 who are bilingual — learn English proficiency.

"Most of my students have exited the bilingual program and are trying to function in English," she said. "They learned to read in Spanish first."

Ms. Boykin said she couldn't overstate the importance of reading. "If someone can read, they can learn anything out there that there is to learn," she said.

The teacher also noted that a reading lesson on geography has expanded the horizons of her students. "Some of my students thought that Texas was a country and one thought that Africa was a city in Texas," she said. "Learning about the rest of the world is especially important for some students who may not have ever traveled outside of Texas."

She said incorporating themes into the curriculum "seems to tie everything all together."

"I can also blend facts on social studies and science into the reading lesson," she said.

Ms. Boykin said she comes from a family of teachers.

"My father teaches at Odessa High School, and my mom and sister are both teachers," she said.

At one point, Ms. Boykin, whose maiden name is Gallivan, was attending college with two other relatives who each had the first initial "D." Their report cards all arrived in the mail addressed to D. Boykin. "We had a deal not to open any of the report cards until all three of us were there," she said.

She said her parents were late bloomers in deciding to become educators and became teachers following her father's retirement from the military. Ms. Boykin was late herself in discovering the joy of reading.

Even though her discovery was made late in life, she said she "made the right choice."

"I just can't imagine doing anything else," she said. "I could be in a bad mood and walk into the classroom and the kids will get me up."

She said being named teacher of the month was "an extra bonus."

"It's great to enjoy teaching, and training other teachers for the summer program. But it's even better when people appreciate you," she said.

TRIAL: Accused tells events before shooting

(From 1B)

The day before the night of the shooting, Ms. Perez was preparing to visit Dallas with a female friend and her three children were to go on a fishing trip with their father (Perez), she testified.

After a series of phone calls and visits by Perez to Ms. Perez's home at 925 N. Weatherford St, Ms. Perez confronted her angry ex-husband outside the house, she testified.

He viciously told her she couldn't go to Dallas, Ms. Perez testified.

"He hit me and knocked me on the ground," she testified.

"He kept hitting me and kicking me," Ms. Perez continued.

"I ran to the back of the house but I didn't go into the house because the children were asleep," she said.

"I ran. I was afraid ... to the shed, I went in there and closed the door (to hide). I got in there and could feel my heart pounding so hard," Ms. Perez testified.

Perez then came in the shed and grabbed his ex-wife, who retrieved a .38-caliber revolver from a canister in the shed, her testimony indicated.

"He dragged me out by my hair and shirt and said, 'I'm going to kill you, you (expletive),' " she testified.

Ms. Perez recalled being hit and let go but not the shooting. Her next memory was holding her ex-husband, testimony showed.

"I remember holding Jessie and kept calling to him 'honey, honey, Jessie.' There was no response. I held him close to me," she testified in tears.

Earlier testimony showed that Perez was shot three times apparently while in his car. One bullet grazed his scalp and two bullets entered his back.

A fourth shot was fired apparently while Ms. Perez was holding the gun near her leg, injuring her knee, testimony revealed. Sequence of the shots was not determined, according to testimony.

Previous testimony also revealed that Ms. Perez was intoxicated and Perez had a .25-caliber gun in his glove compartment.

Upon cross-examination, Ms. Perez denied allegations that she had threatened her husband with deadly weapons and cursed women friends of her ex-husband.

Ms. Perez also was questioned about a few thousand dollars that she ran up on her husband's credit cards after the divorce.

A doctor testified that he examined Ms. Perez a few days after the shooting and she had several quarter-size bruises on her body.

The trial, which began testimony on Tuesday, resumes today and is expected to continue either on Saturday or Monday, court officials said.

If found guilty, Ms. Perez could be sentenced to life in prison.

LAKE: Cooperation aids wildlife

(From 1B)

"The project will contribute to population increases in upland game and migratory birds such as scaled quail, bob white quail, lesser prairie chickens as well as waterfowl and mourning dove that migrate through the area," said Barbara Bills, BLM public affairs officer in Roswell, N.M.

The Quail Unlimited chapter, which received the BLM Director's 1990 "Volunteer for Public Land" Award, undertook the fencing of the playa lake — the Wildlife Enhancement project at the Conoco MCA Playa Lake Project Site.

The site is six miles southeast of Maljamar in Lea County.

Presenting the awards was Dan Talbot, special assistant to the BLM director, and Larry Woodard, New Mexico BLM state director.

BLM is an agency of the United States Department of the Interior.

Archie has served as pastor of Macedonia since 1974 and had served as first vice moderator of the Lovely Sunset District since 1978. He presided over his first executive board meeting of the district earlier this month in Snyder.

The association consists of 22 churches from Midland, Odessa, Lubbock, El Paso, Abilene, Sweetwater, Snyder, Spur, Anson, Brownfield and others.

School bus, car collide in Kerrville

KERRVILLE (AP) — A dozen grade school pupils have been treated for minor injuries sustained in a collision between their school bus and a car.

The driver of the car, Martha Faddif, was listed Thursday in stable but guarded condition in the intensive care unit of Peterson Hospital, a spokesman said.

Authorities said 62 students were aboard the bus from Nimitz Elementary School when the accident occurred shortly after 3:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The 6- to 11-year-old children attend kindergarten through fifth grade.

Authorities say the car's driver turned into the path of the bus as she tried to enter a fast food restaurant's driveway.

Ex-S&L boss testifies at trial

Associated Press

The former head of an Arkansas thrift has testified in the Midland trial of developer D.L. "Danny" Faulkner that Faulkner once helped him get a $250,000 line of credit without collateral.

Tommy Nelson also testified Wednesday that Faulkner gave him a $7,000 Rolex watch.

Nelson was president of First State Building and Loan Association of Mountain Home, Ark., in the early 1980s.

He testified in the retrial of Faulkner, partner James Toler and two other men accused of stealing hundreds of millions of dollars from several thrifts.

Federal prosecutors said the real estate scheme involved condo developments along Interstate 30 east of Dallas.

In 1987, Nelson pleaded guilty to two counts relating to the condo scandal and served 28 months of a four-year prison sentence.

The four defendants — including Spencer Blain, former chairman of Empire Savings and Loan of Mesquite and Arthur Formann, a Condo real estate appraiser — denied any illegalities. They contend that any fraud was engineered by others, primarily Sinclair.

The defendants' 7-month trial in Lubbock ended in a mistrial in 1989, when jurors could not reach a verdict.

Nelson testified this week that Faulkner, Toler and Clifford Sinclair, a real estate broker, arranged for First State Building and Loan to receive a $1 million fee in return for granting investors in the condo projects $4 million in loans.

Faulkner and Sinclair, along with Toler, later helped arrange several similar transactions.

West Texas residents fear El Paso may grab aquifer

VALENTINE (AP) — Relaxing beneath a midnight sky, a group of visitors sway in rocking chairs on the porch of a historic West Texas hotel, their boot-clad feet propped on a rail while they enjoy longnecks and the idyllic night.

"Listen," says a visitor from Austin. "Do you hear that? It's so quiet here."

But in recent months, the tranquility of this vast West Texas land has been shaken by what locals call an urban intruder: water-hungry El Paso.

Two months ago, the city of El Paso's water utilities board announced it planned to purchase for $2 million the 25,000-acre Antelope Valley Farm, which sits on the tip of the Ryan Aquifer.

But West Texas residents have said the plans are tantamount to an invasion to rob their riches. They plan as their first counter-assault to pack a Friday meeting of the Rio Grande Council of Governments, hoping the voluntary body of officials from El Paso, Hudspeth, Culberson, Brewster and Presidio counties will pressure El Paso to drop the plans.

"It's our livelihood. Not only is the little town of Valentine dependent on that water supply but the ranchers in the area are dependent on that water supply," said Jody Miller at a recent Jeff Davis County town meeting. She and her husband, Clay, own a 36,000-acre ranch adjacent to the Antelope Valley Farm. "That's why it's important to us. And when that aquifer's drained, they'll drain another one."

In fact, area land owners are so serious about protecting their water supply some have proposed alliances with traditional foes, the government and wilderness groups, with hope of discovering an endangered species on the farm.

But Ed Archuleta, El Paso Water Utilities Public Service Board general manager, said El Paso does not intend to suck the aquifer dry. He said the ground water would be a supplemental water supply and is at the bottom of a list of options for the city.

"Part of our water planning is we're looking at all the combinations of options that would start with conservation, second would be surface water, third would be reuse of wastewater and then the ground water in the area. The other two options are importing and desalinization," he said.

He said El Paso was approached about buying the farm by its owner, Connecticut General Life Insurance Co., and has been offered other land in the area by West Texas ranchers.

"It's beautiful ranch country out there," he said. "There's no doubt about it, any use of minerals and water should be properly managed."

This is not the first time El Paso has enraged a neighbor as it has sought to ensure an adequate water supply for its growing population, expected to reach 1 million by the year 2040. In March, the city settled a multimillion-dollar lawsuit with New Mexico that began when El Paso tried to tap an aquifer in southern New Mexico.

The lawsuit was settled in part because El Paso had drawn up a water conservation plan that went into effect in April. Since it began, the city has dropped its water consumption 8 percent.

Water agencies file catfish farm lawsuit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A lawsuit filed against a controversial catfish farm claims the operation is wasting Edwards Aquifer water and polluting the San Antonio River.

Edwards Underground Water District and the San Antonio River Authority filed the suit Wednesday against the Living Waters Artesian Springs Ltd. catfish farm, which began operations in May.

Living Waters uses up to 45 million gallons of water daily from two Edwards Aquifer artesian wells to raise about 3 million pounds of catfish per year. After flowing through a series of fish tanks, the water is discharged into the river.

The water agencies are seeking an immediate halt to the water discharge and damages up to $20,000 per day for each day it continues.

But Ronald Pucek Jr., a partner in the catfish farm, on Thursday denied that the water is being wasted or polluted.

"I can't comment on something I haven't seen," he said, referring to the suit. But he said allegations that the water is being polluted "are not true, and we're not wasting any water."

The water agencies received a temporary restraining order allowing technicians and investigators to have continued access to the fish farm to collect data and evidence.

A judge also set an Oct. 31 hearing to consider a permanent restraining order.

Under an informal agreement, officials of the agencies and the Texas Water Commission have had free access to the fish farm for tests.

Couple admits hiring, slaying 7 girls

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — A Matamoros couple has confessed to killing seven girls they lured to their home with the promise of work, authorities said, and police Thursday were searching for more possible victims.

The couple, identified as Rodolfo Infante, 28, and Ana Maria Ruiz Villeda, 19, formerly of Brownsville, were arrested Wednesday night by Judicial State Police, said police agent Sergio Gonzalez.

The couple confessed to the killing of seven girls over the last two months, "but perhaps they have killed many more, so we have to continue the investigations," Gonzalez said.

A young girl working as a maid prompted an investigation that led to the arrests, Gonzalez told The Brownsville Herald.

Gonzalez said the couple is accused of luring the victims with the promise of hiring them to work as maids.

The victims were taken by taxis to the El Ebanito communal farm, where they were robbed of their possessions then drowned or bludgeoned, Gonzalez said.

"This couple would pick up the girls and would take them to the (communal farm) and this way they went about killing them one by one," said another police spokesman.

Four of the bodies of the slain young women were found in the past week in the Rio Grande and irrigation ditches.

Six days ago a body was found in El Sabino.

Brownsville gets colonia water grant

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Water Development Board on Thursday offered the city of Brownsville $6.4 million in grants and loan money to improve water and sewer services for a nearby colonia.

"Today is a great day for the people of the colonias and all Texans," said Gov. Ann Richards, who spoke to the board in support of the project.

Local funds also would go toward the city's proposed $7.2 million project for Cameron Park colonia, part of which has no water service, according to board staff.

If Brownsville approves the offer and submits a financial application, the water board would take final action in November.

"We are tired but happy. This has been a long struggle but we persevered and soon we will have both water and sewer service in the colonia," said Gloria Moreno of Valley Interfaith in a statement.

Members of the church-based community action organization traveled from the Rio Grande Valley to Austin for the board action.

Javier Parra of Valley Interfaith said that septic tanks in the colonia, or subdivision, now overflow when it rains.

"Kids play in this dirty water, and they get sick," Parra said.

The city's proposed wastewater construction would give Cameron Park residents adequate sewage treatment, and the area would no longer be in violation of Health Department regulations, according to board staff.

Water service also would be provided to the entire colonia, and facilities would be upgraded to give customers sufficient pressure and fire protection.

The water board's offer includes $4.5 million in grants and a $1.9 million loan.

Dues not taxable, Sharp says

AUSTIN (AP) — The Early Bird Bass Club and many other nonprofit groups that were worried about having to pay a new tax are off the hook.

State Comptroller John Sharp has said that dues and membership fees paid by fraternities, sororities, Scouts and similar service organizations are not subject to the sales tax on country clubs dues.

The law extending the tax to the dues took effect Oct. 1. It technically applied to all non-profit operations that are "for pleasure and recreational purposes" and fall under a particular section of the Internal Revenue Service code, the Austin American-Statesman reported Thursday.

That includes 1,150 organizations in Texas, said Andy Welch, a spokesman for the comptroller.

Fraternities and sororities had been concerned about the tax.

Cottonseed products have been used for more than 100 years as nutritional supplements to improve cattle production. Millions of tons of cottonseed products are fed annually to U.S. livestock.

Concern about cottonseed stems from its level of gossypol, a naturally occurring substance that can be toxic to some animals.

"Runinant animals can tolerate much greater quantitities of free gossypol than can monogastric animals. Pre-ruminant calves, under 8 weeks of age, should not be fed gossypol-containing products," says a report just released at Texas A&M Univeristy.

The source of gossypol and type of diet also affect the levels of gossypol tolerated by cattle.

Gossypol has been widely studied for its toxicity to some animals. But gossypol may also affect reproductive capabilities in cattle. These are the recommendations for feeding cattle:

■ Beef cows and range bulls: 2 pounds per head per day of direct solvent extracted; 4 pounds/head/day of expander processed; 4 pounds/head/day of screw-press processed meal; or 4-6 pounds/head/day of whole cottonseed.

■ Young bulls being grown or developed for breeding: Whole cottonseed should be limited to 15 percent to 20 percent of the total diet for most cattle and to 10 percent or less for young developed bulls. High free gossypol meal (0.3 percent or 3,000 parts per million) should be limited to 5 percent of the total diet. Screw press and expander process meal containing less than 0.1 percent or 1,000 parts per million can be used at up to 15 percent of the total diet.

If using a mixture of cotton products, the combined concentration of gossypol will need to be considered:

■ Embryo transfer: Producers with embryo transfer programs in which large sums of money are involved per animal may wish to use a conservative approach since other protein sources are available.

■ Pre-ruminant calves (under 8 weeks to be safe): These animals, especially dairy calves, should not be fed gossypol containing products until ongoing research establishes safe feeding levels.

Cattle raisers also should know that the method of oil extraction used on the cottonseed impacts the gossypol levels in the product. The expander process exposes the cottonseed to greater heat which in turn reduces the amount of free gossypol content to about one-third of the level in the oil direct solvent method. More than 95 percent of the cottonseed processed in Texas and Oklahoma today are from expander or screw-press operations.

Also, with high roughage or garage diets where slower passage takes place, cattle may be able to tolerate high levels of gossypol. Cottonseed hull-based diets may be an exception, however, because of their rapid rate of passage.

Researchers study farmer suicides in 1980s

WAUSAU, Wis. (AP) — More than 900 male farmers in the Upper Midwest committed suicide in the 1980s and some years the suicide rate for that group was nearly double the national average for white men, a study shows.

The National Farm Medicine Center, which conducted the nine-year study released Monday, said it planned further research to determine if there was a link between the farming crisis and the suicide rate, as some experts suspect.

The decade was a particularly stressful time for farmers with record indebtedness, unstable prices, declining land values and drought. There were thousands of foreclosures and bankruptcies.

Using information provided by public health agencies, the study found 44 suicides for every 100,000 farmers and ranchers occurred in 1980, researcher Paul Gunderson said.

Nationwide in 1980, 31 suicides occurred for every 100,000 white males age 20 or older, he said.

After peaking at 58 suicides per 100,000 farmers in 1982, the rate fell to 42 suicides in 1985.

In 1988, the last year figures were compiled, there were 48 farmer suicides per 100,000, compared to a national rate of 22.

Food for Peace plan unwrapped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deputy Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman has announced the types of agricultural commodities than will be available under the Food for Peace program during the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

The commodities are wheat and wheat products, rice and rice products, feed grains and feed grain products, protein meals, dry edible beans and peas, lentils, edible vegetable oils, soyfood products, peanuts, dairy products, Atlantic mackerel, edible and inedible tallow, cotton and solid wood products.

Under the Food for Peace program, agricultural commodities are donated or sold on favorable terms to foreign governments to meet humanitarian needs and assist in economic development.

NOTICE OF CONSERVATORSHIP OF ALPHA LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

Pursuant to Article 21.28-A of the Texas Insurance Code, the Commissioner of Insurance issued an official order, No. 91-1508, effective October 11, 1991, placing Alpha Life Insurance Company, Dallas, Texas, in a state of conservatorship. This company is a Chapter 3 insurance company. Alpha Life Insurance Company's primary lines of business are credit life and credit disability insurance policies involving credit unions.

Alpha Life Insurance Company was placed in conservatorship upon a determination by the Commissioner of Insurance that the condition of the company renders its continuation hazardous to the public. The statutory time limitations have caused the company's efforts to accomplish rehabilitation during supervision to be inadequate.

Under the order, the Conservator will assume control and operation of the company and will take all steps and legal measures necessary to preserve, protect, and recover the assets and property of the company. Efforts are being made for the assumption of the company's business by another insurance company for the protection of its policyholders and the public.

If you are a policyholder of this company, your insurance coverage continues in effect for as long as you pay your premiums. If the company is rehabilitated, your coverage will continue as though nothing had happened. If the company is not rehabilitated, it may be placed into receivership or its business reinsured, and you will be so notified. In either event, contractual claim obligations will be paid by the company, by the reinsurer, or by the guaranty fund subject to the limitations provided in law. The guaranty fund provides protection for covered claims up to the amounts specified in Article 21.28-D, Texas Insurance Code.

Courses of action available to policyholders include continuation or cancellation of their policies. Policyholders who wish to continue their coverage need do nothing more so long as their premiums are paid. If premiums are due, policyholders should continue to pay them in the same amount and manner as in the past in order to keep their coverage in force.

To avoid possible loss of coverage, policyholders must continue to pay premiums unless and until similar insurance can be obtained from another company. Policy provisions with respect to filing claims remain in force and must be observed.

Claims will continue to be handled in the standard process as specified in the insurance contracts issued by the company. Policyholders will be notified if there is any change in claims processing or handling.

Policyholders' rights are governed by the Texas Insurance Code, Texas Department of Insurance rules, and by policyholders' individual contracts of insurance. Policyholders with specific questions regarding policy provisions should seek independent legal advice. No action is required by policyholders under Commissioner's Order No. 91-1508. If any action should be required in the future, policyholders will be notified.

This notice is published pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5A, Texas Insurance Code (Acts 1989, 71st Legislature, Ch. 1082, Sec. 4.02, eff. September 1, 1989).

DEAR ABBY

Student learns facts about IQs

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What, exactly, is a person's "IQ," and how is it determined? — A STUDENT IN GREEN BAY, WIS.

Van Buren

DEAR STUDENT: "IQ" stands for intelligence quotient, and it is determined by assigning a number to the level of skills attained on a standardized test. This number, sometimes called the "mental age" or M.A., is divided by the chronological age (C.A.) and then multiplied by 100. The total reflects one's comparison to a standardized group of this age.

For educational purposes, the IQ scores are categorized as follows: 125 to 140 or higher — gifted; 115 or higher — highly intelligent; 100 — average.

Educable: An IQ of 50 to 75. One who can be educated academically to the level of an average child of 9 to 11 years of age, can socially adjust to family and home, and can occupationally support themselves totally or partly.

Trainable: An IQ of 25 to 50. One who can be trained to perform self-care skills such as dressing, feeding and toilette, can socially adjust to the home and neighborhood, and can gain some degree of ability such as routine tasks within the home or in a sheltered environment under supervision.

A person with an IQ under 25 usually requires nursing care, and is considered totally dependent.

DEAR ABBY: My grown daughter is my best friend. She has given me some of life's greatest joys — and sorrows. She is supportive, loving and generous, but she also "steals" from me. In spite of my arguments, threats and pleas, she fraudulently charges on my credit cards and is dishonest when confronted with her wrongs.

I am a widow on a fixed income and cannot continue to see my savings depleted to pay her bills. I've considered moving far away to protect myself, but am dependent on her for the good times, love and friendship we share, plus she is the mother of the grandson who is the light of my life.

I do not want to jeopardize her job or her marriage, but I am desperate to find a way to help her and protect my financial security. Please help me. — GOING DOWN THE DRAIN

DEAR GOING: Notify the stores where you have charge accounts that no one other than you may use your charge account. Then tell your daughter that in order to protect yourself from bankruptcy — and herself from humiliation and trouble with the law — she must not attempt to charge anything on your accounts.

Since your daughter is in counseling to overcome her compulsive spending, at least she's trying. Let's hope she succeeds.

DEAR ABBY: I'm only 13, but I really need your help. Recently, the mother of one of my friends was strangled in her home. She is a classmate of mine and I'll have to talk to her because the thought of ignoring it sounds unbelievably rude. The problem is, I have no idea what to say!

I don't want to hurt her. What should I say? Or would it be better to say nothing at all? — LOST FOR WORDS IN TENNESSEE

DEAR LOST: Say, "I'm sorry about your mom ..."

Expert says women should be aware of laws in workplace

By Shari Spires
N.Y. Times News Service

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — There are laws protecting women from sexual harassment in the workplace, but many women are unaware of them.

Patricia Lowry, a West Palm Beach attorney who specializes in labor law, said all employers should have a policy in place stating specifically that they will not tolerate sexual harassment as defined by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

That is: any sexual advance, request for sexual favors or remarks of any kind or conduct that would affect whether the woman would get a job or get promoted, or that interferes with work performance or creates a hostile, offensive or intimidating atmosphere.

"There should also be some procedure for a women to report sexual harassment without having to go to her direct supervisor," Lowry said. "Because, often it is the direct supervisor who is doing the harassing."

'One of the problems in a sexual harassment case, is that it is a woman's word against the man's. It comes down to a credibility issue.'

— Patricia Lowry, attorney

Any employer who gets a complaint should conduct an immediate investigation and attempt to learn as many facts as possible.

At a minimum, the employer should get back to the woman and let her know what the decision is. If there is reason to believe some type of harassment has occurred, there ought to be disciplinary action against that person.

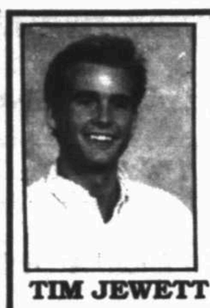

"One of the problems in a sexual harassment case, is that it is a woman's word against the man's," Lowry said. "It comes down to a credibility issue."

Lowry suggests women take the following steps if they feel they are being sexually harassed.

First, attempt to work it out with the man. Be assertive and let him know you are not interested.

If he persists, go to his supervisor or to the personnel department and have them look into it. That way a record is established that she tried to do something about it.

Keep your own records in the form of a diary, notes, memos, etc., of what happened and when. Then, if you do end up going to court, you have dates and events to back up your allegations.

FAMILY MATTERS

Differing opinions are normal

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: Can you give us some idea about what we can do about the big fight that we had? It all started when my husband got mad at our 16-year-old daughter for missing her curfew by 30 minutes. She tried to defend herself and make excuses about what happened. I agreed with her that it really wasn't her fault because she was riding with someone else but I didn't say anything in front of her.

May

The longer they talked the madder both of them got. They started yelling at each other and calling each other names. I couldn't believe it! They were acting just like two little kids. I finally couldn't stand it anymore and tried to step in. Now both of them are mad at me. Each of them wants me to take their side.

I don't want to take either side. I think that they are both wrong now. This was two weeks ago. My husband grounded our daughter from everything for a month. She just stays in her room and won't come out when he is around except to eat. All we do at supper is sit and eat. No one says anything. It's just terrible.

I have wanted to talk to my husband about this but I've been afraid to say anything. I don't want him to think that I'm taking my daughter's side and make him mad at me. I have told my daughter that she must just put up with it. She's crushed and angry because she is missing all the football games. I feel like the punishment is too harsh but I don't know what to do. I just don't want to go on like this. Do you have any ideas about what I can do? STUCK

DEAR STUCK: Yes I do. A family must be able to work out "regular old problems" without starting World War III. First, talk to your husband privately about your concerns over the severity of the consequences. The purpose of a consequence is usually lost if it is too severe. Consequences are used to change undesirable behavior, not to punish the person. The consequence also should "fit the crime." For example, an alternate consequence to coming in 30 minutes late would be to have to come in earlier the next outing.

Remember, you are a parent too. Both you and your husband are adults and have your own opinions. By sharing those opinions, the best solution can be found. Rarely is there a right or wrong. Try to reach a compromise with your husband on the consequence. You are not taking sides by simply expressing your opinion. Disagreeing with your spouse over a parenting concept is healthy and expected.

After the two of you have reached a compromise (hopefully), both of you share that compromise with your daughter. Encourage her to share her opinions too in a calm manner. By our actions we teach our children how to solve problems. They take our teachings into their adulthoods. This is a wonderful opportunity to demonstrate to your daughter how adults address conflict and difference of opinion in a responsible manner.

DEAR READERS: Recently two well-known men died one day apart. One contributed to the lives of millions of children around the world. The other destroyed the lives of many.

Each had choices to make about his life. One chose the light and the other the dark. One chose to see the humor in life and to share that humor with generations of children and adults. One chose to destroy life in a brutal and horrible manner.

I was struck by the path each of these men chose. While most of us will not have the opportunity to make such global choices, we do choose each day in many small ways whether we will spread the light or the darkness. Our opportunities present themselves in so many little ways — with our spouses, children, friends, business associates, acquaintances and strangers.

We may never have to make the choice between being a "Dr. Seuss" or a "Klaus Barbie" (the Butcher of Lyon), but we do have a choice about loving one another. As Christ said so beautifuly, "If you love me, feed my sheep."

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: If you do not feel you can call Alcoholics Anonymous about your husband's drinking problem, please call the Johnson Institute at 1-800-231-5165 and ask for their brochure,"Alcoholism: A Treatable Disease." You need to get the facts on alcoholism so you will be prepared to take the necessary steps to deal with the disease.

Fit, fashion make glasses more fun

NEW YORK (AP) — When it comes to children's eyewear, fashion is important, but so is fit.

Like adults, children don't like eyeglasses that slip down their face, pinch their nose or squeeze the sides of their head. And because a child's facial structure is constantly maturing, fit is important. Claudio Del Vecchio, executive vice president of the Luxottica Group, offers these tips:

- The temples of children's eyewear should fit snugly, but never be too tight or too loose.
- The bridge of eyeglasses should sit securely and comfortably on the nose without producing pressure. Soft-strap bridges and silicone nose pads offer maximum comfort at the bridge area.
- Eyeglass frames should be made of sturdy metal or plastic. Spring hinges, which are tiny, unobtrusive springs built into the temple piece, provide flexibility and often prevent temples from snapping or breaking off.

Program accepting nominations

Staff Report

For the sixth consecutive year, the Amateur Athletic Union/ Mars Milky Way High School All-American Award and college scholarship program will recognize outstanding high school seniors. The nationwide program honors well-rounded young men and women who excel in academics, athletics and community service. This year, 102 scholarships, ranging from $1,000 to $40,000 will be awarded.

One male and one female from each state will be selected as state recipients and will be awarded a $1,000 college sholarship. From those state recipients, eight regional recipients will be selected and each will be awarded a $10,000 scholarship. Two regional recipients will be named national recipients and each will be awarded a $40,000 scholarship over a four year period.

The eight regional recipients, along with their parents and a school representative also will be awarded an expense-paid trip to New York City in April. There, on April 27, 1992, the students will be recognized for their achievements at a special awards ceremony attended by prominent educators, Olympians and community leaders.

All graduating seniors are eligible for nomination. Nomination forms are available through high school guidance counselor offices, or from the Amateur Athletic Union, 3400 W. 86th Street, P.O. Box 68207, Indianapolis, Ind., 46268. All nominations must be postmarked no later than Dec. 2.

VOLUNTEER CENTER

The Volunteer Center, 1030 Andrews Hwy., has many opportunites for volunteers. Those interested in volunteering can call 697-8781 for information.

- Volunteers are needed to help adults learn to read. A local agency will be sponsoring training sessions for its adult literacy tutoring program 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. Call for specific dates.
- Several little girl dolls are in need of volunteers to dress them so that they can be given to needy children for Christmas. These dolls will be displayed the first week of December at Midland Park Mall. Help from individuals and groups are welcomed to help dress the dolls or assist in the mall display.
- A local senior citizens' agency needs volunteers to call or visit homebound elderly individuals. This is a flexible opportunity and can be taken on by an individual or partners.

Rural Alzheimer's patients studied

By Ray Formanek Jr.

DAYBROOK, W.Va. (AP) — James Jacobs tickled the foot of his 85-year-old mother, who was tethered to a bed in a second-floor room. But Irene Jacobs' pale, blue eyes remained focused out an open window.

"She doesn't recognize him," said James Jacobs' wife, Marie, as she spread a disposable diaper under her mother-in-law. "It hurts, real bad. But you have to remember, she doesn't know what she's doing."

The first inkling something was wrong came about seven years ago when Irene Jacobs began to have trouble telling time. Later, she forgot about food cooking on the stove, got lost in her backyard, and stripped in front of visitors.

Doctors diagnosed her symptoms as Alzheimer's disease.

"There are very few days when Mom really knows what's going on and that's really sad," said Marie Jacobs, 48. "She was really outgoing and loving before this started.

"Now, you could set food down in front of her and she'd starve to death because she doesn't know what to do with it," she said.

Alzheimer's affects up to 4 million Americans, most of them over 65. It results from the degeneration and death of nerve cells in areas of the brain that control thought, memory and speech. There is no cure and no prevention.

Women appear to be more likely than men to get Alzheimer's in several studies that allow for the fact that women generally live longer.

Alzheimer's is the fourth-leading cause of death for adults in the United States, and researchers say it could afflict as many as 14 million Americans by 2050.

Knowledge about patients in rural areas is virtually non-existent, according to Dr. Robert Keefover, a neuro-psychiatrist at West Virginia University Health Sciences Center.

"We don't know how many people out there have it or how their families deal with it," said Keefover, who is overseeing a $3.6 million project to find out just that information.

Financed by the National Institute on Aging, researchers from WVU and Marshall University will try to screen every person over 65 for Alzheimer's in three isolated West Virginia counties over the next three years.

Keefover said the project will test the effectiveness of several screening methods used to diagnose Alzheimer's.

"Ultimately, we'll know how to better find folks with Alzheimer's," Keefover said. "We'll also come up with better ways to help them, including the kinds of things that can be done without highly trained, expensive medical personnel."

West Virginia was chosen because of its mostly rural population, Keefover said. Lincoln, Morgan and Tucker counties were picked because they have no urban areas, Keefover said.

Elderly residents in the three counties will have access to free examinations to detect Alzheimer's. The study is expected to provide data about the prevalence and risk factors associated with Alzheimer's among the rural elderly.

Besides Alzheimer's, researchers will be looking for evidence of other diseases marked by dementia, a deterioration of mental processes including memory disorders, personality change, impaired reasoning and disorientation.

The study grew out of recommendations made by a statewide task force comprised of physicians at WVU, Marshall and other medical and social service groups around the state..

Dr. Joye Martin, an associate professor of family medicine and community health at Marshall, said the Jacobs family and others who care for rural Alzheimer's patients face special challenges.

"They don't have access to adult day care or other resources available in urban areas," Martin said. "They burn out. They get physically ill themselves. It's not unheard of for a caregiver to die before the Alzheimer's patient himself because it's so hard on them."

James Jacobs, 56, like many others in rural areas, takes pride that his mother is not in a nursing home.

"My brother wanted to put her in one but no way would I do that," Jacobs said. "It's caused a family feud. My brother never calls and has never come out to visit her, even though he's just 30 miles away."

Marie Jacobs said she recently changed her mind and allowed a county health department home aide into her home to give her and her disabled husband a break.

"I don't see too much of anybody," Mrs. Jacobs said. "My life is based around mother. I'm not used to leaving her with anyone else. Even when I leave, I'm still here because I'm not thinking about anything else.

"The way I look at it, the good Lord gave her to me and I wouldn't trade being with her for anything," she said. "They have feelings. They may not know what they've got but they do have feelings. When she squeezes my hand or tells me she loves me, that just makes it all worthwhile."

AARP seeks tax season volunteers

Staff Report

In preparation for the coming tax season, volunteers interested in helping older, low and moderate income people to receive free tax preparation assistance, are being recruited by the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP).

Almost 1.5 million people each year seek help from AARP's Tax-Aide program in order to complete their tax forms. Because of an expected increase in the numbers seeking help, additional volunteers are needed.

Adults of all ages can volunteer, and after successfully completing a free 40 hour training program, will be certified by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), and will be expected to assist tax-payers at an assigned site four hours per week during the tax season.

Those interested in helping should contact James W. Hull, 2804 Shandon, Midland, Texas, 79705 or call him at (915) 699-5563.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bobby Cox went into this season believing the Atlanta Braves could win a few more games.

They did, and because the Braves showed so much improvement, Cox won something else. On Thursday, he was named the Associated Press Manager of the Year.

"It's an honor, but I don't really know what I brought to the team," Cox said. "You can't do what we did without good players and good coaches, and we have the best."

The Braves had one of baseball's best records, going 94-68 and winning the NL West after finishing last season with the worst record in the majors at 65-97.

Atlanta and Minnesota became the first teams ever to rebound from last place to first.

Cox received 91 votes in nationwide balloting by newspapers. Minnesota's Tom Kelly, who has the Twins in the World Series, was second with 49.

Pittsburgh's Jim Leyland got 15 votes for performing a tough task, keeping the Pirates in first place with no dropoff, and St. Louis' Joe Torre was fourth with 13 after helping transform the Cardinals into contenders. Voting was completed before the playoffs began.

The Braves became the first team in major-league history to go from the worst record in the major leagues to first place. They captured the imagination and interest of fans everywhere.

International affair for Lee

■ The Rebels host the University of Chihuahua at Memorial Stadium.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

While tonight's 8 p.m. football game against the University of Chihuahua at Memorial Stadium presents Midland Lee with the opportunity to tinker a little with its offense and defense, it also does one other thing Rebel head coach Earl Miller deems important — get Lee's mind off Odessa Permian.

After a few years of having the District 4-5A open date before the Permian game to prepare for the Panthers, Miller filled the Rebs' idle weekend this year knowing it would come after their game against Mojo. And following last Friday's 33-0 defeat at the hands of the Panthers in Odessa, Miller said a game like this is oh so needed.

"We can get our minds off Permian. This way we can have some kind of game and forget about last week. And any time you play you have a chance to go out and execute, and make your offense and defense better," he said.

It also gives the Lee staff a chance to experiment a little, and that's exactly what the 5-1 Rebels will do against the Eagles tonight. Miller said sophomore quarterback Courtney Turner will alternate plays will senior Jimmy Patton.

Patton offers senior leadership and instinctive running ability in the Lee wishbone, but Turner can throw the ball better. And though expanding the wishbone passing game can be considered a somewhat dubious goal, alternating quarterbacks is not new to the Rebels in Miller's 5½-year tenure.

"We think we have a fine thrower in Turner, so we're going to go back and alternate at quarterback. We did that in 1986 and '87 before Vince Henderson came along. You can get your quarterbacks on the sideline and tell them what to expect. We won a lot of ball games that way," Miller said.

"Jimmy Patton has done a great job, but Turner does throw the ball a little better. We're just going to try it and see."

As far as injuries are concerned for the Rebels, Miller said linebacker James Ward is still hobbled by a bad ankle, but should see playing time.

"We're going to go ahead and play him. He seems to be in a lot better shape than he was in last week against

'Dogs confront Bobcats

■ Passing games clash as Midland High visits air-happy San Angelo.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

SAN ANGELO — This could be Air-Sho'91½ tonight.

Midland High will meet San Angelo at 8 p.m. today in a game that could blot out some radio air wave signals. Both teams are expected to pass, pass and pass.

The numbers are against the winless MHS Bulldogs again, but the Pack did discover the air waves last week as quarterback Geoff Simmons passed for 295 yards against Odessa High while receiver Dewayne Culpepper caught 10 passes for over 250 yards.

And San Angelo? Well, the unbeaten, but once tied, Bobcats discovered the pass about the same time as quarterback Shea Morenz took to the starting role a year ago. Morenz has already passed for 1,261 yards and 15 touchdowns this year as receivers Damon Carroll and Marcus Bibbs have caught 44 passes between them, accounting for nine of those touchdowns.

"We're going to try and throw the football," is the emphatic statement by MHS coach Davis Corley. "The key is getting the time to throw and our offensive line will have to play its best game for us to do that. We're showing some signs of improving in that area.

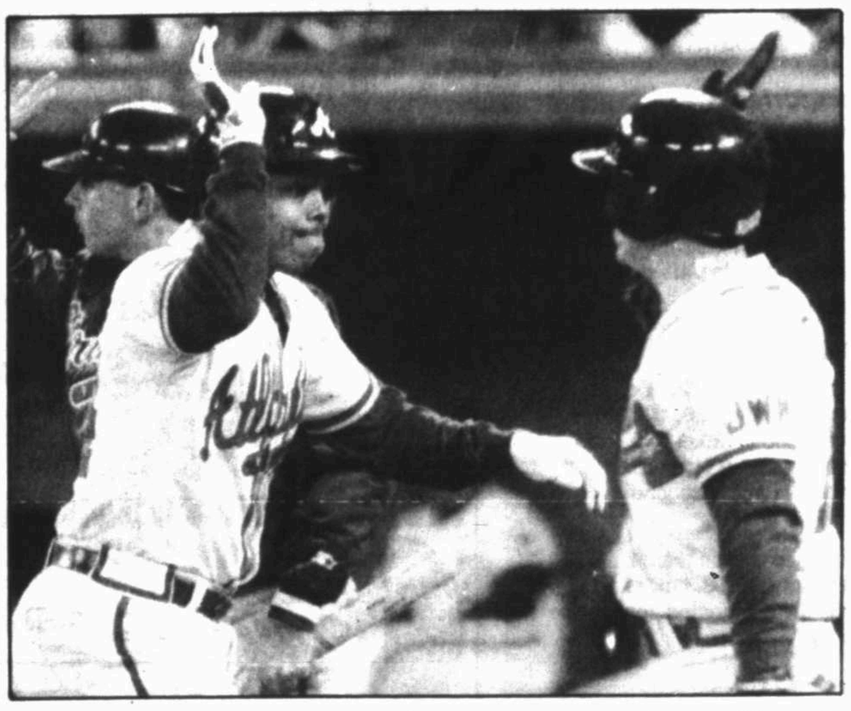

"But this is really going to be a tough test for our team," Corley said. "Offensively, they have the great skill people with a lot of experience in Mornez, Carroll and Bibbs, but it is their defense that has been surprising this year.

"San Angelo plays a man-to-man coverage and try to get a tremendous amount of pressure on your quarterback. That really concerns me. We'll really have to block well."

San Angelo coach Dan Gandy, who has his Bobcats off to a 5-0-1 start, also promises to fill the air waves.

"Well, we certainly are going to continue to do the things that have gotten us this far. So, yes, we will be throwing the football. This could be a real decathlon

Braves capture NL pennant, 4-0

■ John Smoltz leads Atlanta to its first World Series with a 4-0 shutout over the Pirates in the deciding seventh game of the NLCS.

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Atlanta Braves finally shucked their loser's image, shutting out Pittsburgh in Game 7 of the NL playoffs and setting up the most unlikely World Series ever.

Now, a season full of surprises ends with the biggest one yet. The Braves, baseball's poorest team last year, and the Minnesota Twins, the only other team this century to go from worst-to-first, meet in the World Series starting Saturday night in the Metrodome.

Brian Hunter's two-run homer capped a three-run first inning, and that was all Smoltz and the Braves needed. The Pirates' big hitters again went poof, and Pittsburgh was shut out for the second straight game.

"This club came a long way from spring training," the Braves' Terry Pendleton said. "People said we were out of it at the All-Star break, but we kept battling. They said we couldn't catch the Dodgers and we kept battling. This is a team that won't give up."

A day after NL playoffs MVP Steve

4-5A games getting longer and longer

Those planning to trek to San Angelo tonight for the MHS-San Angelo game might want to investigate a weekend in the Concho City because you won't be getting home at any reasonable hour.

Williamson

First, both teams plan to pass and that will make for a long game. It is also San Angelo's homecoming, which will make for a longer halftime. This game may not be over until Saturday.

By the way, what ever happened to the District 4-5A Executive Committee declaration that moves would be made to insure shorter halftime shows? Guess that went up in some smoke signal.

District 4-5A games are getting longer and longer with each passing season. Bands are going beyond allotted time permitted by the UIL without any apparent cubs. But instead of penalizing the bands, the district should just move the starting time of games to 7:30 p.m. That would finally be a move that would make everyone happy.

The blind may be leading the blind tonight when Midland Lee hosts the University of Chihuahua. Neither team exchanged films. There have been no scouting missions.

Lee sent offensive and defensive formations to Chihuahua this summer and received by fax Wednesday the same information from Chihuahua, leaving the Rebels two days to prepare for the game.

One Lee planning meeting went like this:

Lee coach Earl Miller: "Now, let's see. If we lived in Mexico, what kind of plays would we run?"

A Lee assistant coach: "How about an X-Veer, Wideout Split?"

Miller: "No, that play hasn't gotten that far South, yet."

So, now a look at this week's games in District 4-5A:

Midland Lee 21, U. of Chihuahua 12: But who really knows? I can guarantee Las Vegas doesn't have a line on this one. These teams have never played before and we are thankful it isn't being played in Chihuahua.

San Angelo 34, Midland High 7: The Bobkitties are unbeaten, headed for the playoffs and feeling stout. The Bulldogs are winless and facing a season ending schedule that approaches nightmare status. San Angelo leads the series since 1961 by an 18-11-1 margin.

Odessa High 30, Abilene Cooper 21: The winner stays in the championship hunt, the loser is eliminated. It's the biggest game of the week. Cooper leads the series 17-11-2.

Odessa Permian 50, Abilene High 0: Brutal. But anyone who faces this Mojo team is in for a rough night. Permian also leads the series by a 27-3-2 count.

Permian."

Miller also said that since it is a non-district game, he might play plenty of substitutes. But winning the game is also on his mind.

"We're going to play a lot of kids, but we might have to play the best we've got just to stay on the field with them," he said.

And that's the big question this week. Just what can Midland fans expect from this Mexican college team?

"They're a bunch of tough, wiry players and they're real physical," Miller said. "Many of the players they have probably work full-time and go to college part-time, so the may have some players with up to six or seven years of college ball."

And though Chihuahua head coach Roberto Paredes claims his oldest players are about 21, he admits that the Rebels should have the upper hand.

"It's going to be a very good experience against a team that really knows football. It's a matter of learning for our kids," said Paredes, who is in his third year of guiding the fledgling Eagle football program.

And while Miller observed the many Mexican teams have a propensity for throwing the ball, Paredes said his Eagles lean more toward the ground game.

"We have balance between throwing and running, but we're stronger in the running game," he said.

Chihuahua (5-0 against other Mexican institutions of higher learning) will line up in the 4-3 defense and a variant T-offense, and Paredes said his team's strengths are in line offensively and the linebackers defensively.

One the offensive line Paredes rates his best players as Erasmo Beltran (6-1, 220), Pedro Mendez (6-1, 253) and Jose Luis Rosales (5-6, 165). Defensively he touts linebackers Raymundo Mora (5-10, 185), Rene Hernandez (5-8, 180) and Hugo Maldonado (5-10, 207).

Paredes still insisted that the younger Lee players have a sounder technical base, giving the larger Rebels more of a psychological edge.

"For us to win, first of all our players have to think they can win. We're confident about the work we've been doing for three years. We just have to execute to win the ball game," said Paredes, sounding very much like his U.S. counterparts.

"It is an honor in to be in the United States and this invitation was greatly appreciated. We just hope to be able to give them a good game."

event, but we aren't going to change our game plan to make the game any shorter," Gandy said. "For six weeks, I've been pleased with these kids. We knew we had some good skill people back, but I think the key is our defense. We feel the defense has been better than we thought it would be. We've been able to run with some of the other teams."

But Gandy has some fears as he prepares his team for the meeting with MHS.

"Midland worries you as a coach because they haven't won a game, but they got things going offensively last week by changing the philosophy of their offensive attack," Gandy said. "We've been playing run oriented teams for the most part and really haven't played anyone who can throw the ball as well as they can."

It's also a homecoming contest for the Bobcats and that is more of a concern for Gandy than a positive.

"Youngsters tend to get caught up in how their girlfriends are going to look at homecoming. I'm not sure it's a good weekend for coaches. You just hope your kids are mature enough to play every Friday night."

Corley said the San Angelo homecoming isn't anything new for the Bulldogs.

"We're the homecoming game for every team we play," Corley said as his team will be playing before a third consecutive homecoming crowd.

A Midland High victory would be considered as a major district upset, but that doesn't go very far in comforting Gandy.

"This is a game everyone says you should win easily," Gandy notes. "We get a lot of help from writers and fans in that regard. But the real truth in this league is that you better be ready to play every Friday night. I think you can look at Baylor last Saturday and see what can happen."

This is the real teeth of the MHS schedule, playing undefeated teams two weeks in a row. No. 3 state ranked Odessa Permian is next on the list. MHS will end the season after that when the Bulldogs play Abilene Cooper.

"The next three weeks is pretty scary," Corley says. "We've got two of the top teams in the district the next two weeks and Cooper is playing so much better this year. Things are not going to get easier for us."

So, throw it up and take your best shot. Maybe a few of those passes will be lazer guided. For sure, it won't be a good night for low flying aircraft.

Baltimore shortstop earns AP Player of the Year honors

BALTIMORE (AP) — Cal Ripken, who proved this season that he could play every day without a dropoff in performance, is the landslide winner as the Associated Press Player of the Year.

The Baltimore Orioles shortstop achieved career highs with a .323 batting average, 34 homers and 114 RBIs. He also won the Most Valuable Player award in the All-Star Game and became only the sixth American Leaguer in the last 50 years to get at least 40 doubles and 30 homers in the same season.

Ripken, 31, received 80 votes from a panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. Cecil Fielder of the Detroit Tigers was second with 37 and Pittsburgh's Barry Bonds finished a distant third with 14. Atlanta's Terry Pendleton had 12, two more than Frank Thomas of the Chicago White Sox. Pittsburgh's Bobby Bonillia got seven votes.

"Obviously, it's a big honor and I feel very good about it," Ripken said.

Because Baltimore lost 95 games, Ripken may have a tough time winning the AL's MVP award. But no one was more consistent in hitting, fielding and durability. He led AL shortstops in fielding percentage for the second straight year.

Cowboys release veteran, rookie

IRVING (AP) — Third-year veteran receiver James Dixon and rookie defensive back Donald Smith were released Thursday by the Dallas Cowboys, the team said.

Defensive back Stan Smagala was re-signed to replace Smith.

Claimed on waivers from the Detroit Lions prior to the 1989 season, Dixon was used mainly as a kickoff returner.

Dixon, 24, averaged 22.1 yards per return in seven games this season.

NFL League (Women): Debbie Ellis 203; Leny Galon 214; Sharon Claxton 191 (126 avg.); Karen Jordan 246.

Ex-Boom Time Bowlers (Men): Terry Donathan 214—603; Woody Woodside 202; Charles Gaines 232; David Griffin 222; Brian Wilson 203; Don Dilcos 200; Tom Matchus 207.

Ex-Boom Time Bowlers (Women): Debra Ellis 205; Cheryl Becker 201; Dana Engelstad 182 (131 avg.); Jan Abbott 179 (118 avg.); Linda Powell 208.

Lone Star Ladies: Lisa Belson 224—624 (150 pins over avg. for three game set); Gail Pool 213; Lynn Morton 211; Ellen McKenna 179 (126 avg.).

Tuesday Trios: Mary Fitts 180—606 (159 avg.).

This week's bowling tip: After you've been bowling for awhile, you may notice that no matter how hard you try you just can't seem to improve your scores. The problem isn't you, it's your equipment. Here are a few suggestions to help you out of your rut:

1. Buy a new ball. Your old ball is worn out. A new ball will add a little life to your game, and will probably be better suited to today's changing lane conditions.

2. Switch from a conventional drilled ball to a fingertip ball. You'll get much better pin action and your scores will improve.

3. Check to see if your bowling shoes are in good shape. If they aren't, you'll lack that valuable support at the foul line which will affect the delivery of your ball.

You're only as good as the equipment you use, so make sure it's in first class condition.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: New financial security and romantic success lie just ahead! A job promotion in late fall will put you closer to the top. Play an active role in a family reunion over the Christmas holidays. Far-flung travel for business or pleasure is featured in early 1992. Although romance may have its rocky moments next spring, by late summer you could be walking down the aisle. Mend your fences with an older relative or former mentor.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stop playing with a loved one's emotions. Honesty is essential. Wipe the slate clean and turn over a new leaf. Set fresh domestic priorities for yourself. Assume the role of peacemaker.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep company secrets to yourself. Secure confidential facts and figures in a safe place. Although you are playing for high stakes, you will come through with flying colors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are surrounded by very interesting people, each with something special to offer. Accept people and situations as they are and do not blow minor setbacks out of proportion.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Forging new alliances is of prime importance in business. Give negative people a wide berth. This afternoon's events will have you guessing. Play the waiting game where romance is concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Deal carefully with a ticklish financial issue or controversial project. Keep your promises to yourself and others. A dear one is counting on your loving support and strength.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It may be necessary to rethink a project. Seek experts' advice to avoid wasting time on fruitless pursuits. Do not rely on past performances. Love is sublime!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You move into a position of power now. Use your authority wisely and be careful about cashing in on your new prestige. Avoid squabbling with adult offspring. Forget past grievances and omissions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The faster tempo at work could cause tension. Avoid quarreling with your neighbors and siblings. Someone may try to involve you in a peculiar situation. Keep your distance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A real estate sale may be delayed or canceled. Regroup. Know your own mind at work. Do not hide your light under the proverbial bushel. Communicate your ideas to those in authority.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Protect your health by learning more about preventive medicine. The financial picture shows steady improvement. Build savings. Hug the sidelines at work today instead of taking chances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Push your career interests for all they are worth. Interviews and conferences enjoy highly favorable influences. It may be time to hire a new assistant. Build fresh social and financial bridges.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are able to laugh at things that used to distress you. Comparison shop when buying new items for your wardrobe. A good evening to stay home and entertain close friends and family.

Opening lead: Two of ♣

Some plays are so obvious that even the best of players can overlook them. On this deal from the recent European Bridge Championships, we know of only one declarer at three no trump who found the simple way to nine tricks.

South had a considerable problem in choosing an opening bid. Despite the tenuous heart stopper, we think the choice of two no trump has much to recommend it. The bid is descriptive, and any other option could have led to major problems later in the auction.

There are seven fast tricks, and an eighth is readily available in hearts. Most declarers seized the first opportunity they had to run the jack of hearts, which obviously was allowed to hold the first trick. Flushed with success, most repeated the finesse and it was simply a question of whether or not the defenders erred later in the play.

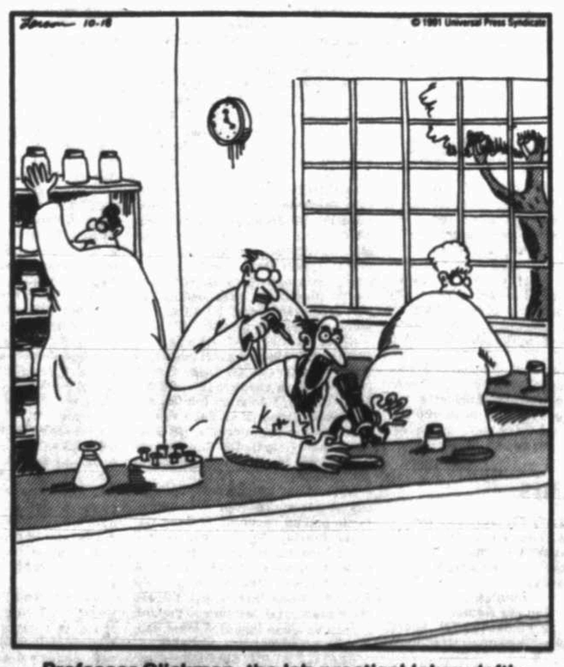

Britain's John Armstrong was the one who spotted that a ninth trick could be won by force in spades. After winning the first trick in hand, declarer simply plays the ace of spades and another, losing to the king. When declarer regains the lead, the jack of hearts is run and, after it wins, declarer reverts to spades, conceding a trick to the queen. The ace of hearts is still on the table as an entry to cash the good spade. In all, declarer takes two tricks in each major suit and the five obvious tricks in the minors.

All it requires to uncover this line is the ability to count to nine and the realization that spades must be started while there is still a heart entry to the board. The defenders are helpless.

Scorsese not counting on Oscar for latest film

NEW YORK — Martin Scorsese has directed 14 films and is in the midst of a six-year deal with Universal Pictures so he should be pretty happy. Right? Not quite.

Scorsese

Scorsese, 48, concedes in the November issue of Premier magazine that his anger may not be entirely work related.

"I look out the window, and I'm angry about the smog. I'm angry about — you name it, I'm angry. You get to the point where the anger in you can explode. You go into pieces. And then what — you're dead," he says. "Finally you realize that it's probably not worth it."

Scorsese's latest film, "Cape Fear," a remake of a classic thriller, will be released this fall. But the director's not counting on any Oscars.

"When I lost for 'Raging Bull,' that's when I realized what my place in the system would be ... outside looking in," he says.

"The Academy sent out a very strong message to the people who made 'GoodFellas' and 'The Grifters:' no matter how talented they are, that they may get some recognition but they will not get the award. It just turns out that I produced 'The Grifters.' And I certainly got the message," he said.

• • •

LOS ANGELES — Actor Adam Rich, who played Nicholas Bradford on television's "Eight Is Enough," was released on $20,000 bail after his arrest for investigation of taking a drug-filled syringe from a hospital.

Rich

In raising Rich's bail from $5,000 to $20,000, Van Nuys Superior Court Judge John S. Fisher said Wednesday the former child star should be treated "just like anybody else."

The judge noted that Rich has been arrested repeatedly while awaiting other criminal charges. Rich later put up the higher bail, his attorney said.

Rich's arrest Oct. 6 in the syringe case came just four days after he was ordered to stand trial in Fisher's court on charges he broke into a pharmacy in West Hills.

• • •

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Alan Jackson wants a federal judge to block the release of 11 demonstration recordings he made in the 1980s, saying the recordings are inferior and will harm his career.

A lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court names Amherst Records and several others as defendants and asks a judge to impound the recordings until the dispute is settled.

Jackson made five of the recordings in April 1986. Six others were recorded over existing tracks "in an inappropriate musical key" for Jackson's voice, according to the lawsuit filed Tuesday.

"The release of the recordings as master recordings ... will confuse and mislead the public," the lawsuit states.

An attorney representing the defendants said earlier this year that Jackson has no right to interfere with the release.

• • •

SARASOTA, Fla. — A judge excused actor Paul Reubens, who developed the nerdy bow-tied character Pee-wee Herman, from an Oct. 29 court appearance on indecent exposure charges.

Sarasota County Judge Judy Goldman on Wednesday excused Reubens from the pretrial conference so he can work on the new film "Nightmare Before Christmas."

The judge said the actor still is required to appear at other pretrial conferences and his expected December trial.

Reubens tried to plead guilty three days after his arrest in July, but a plea bargain fell through after sheriff's officials released his jail-booking photograph. The photo, depicting a shaggy-haired Reubens with a goatee, bears little resemblance to the Pee-wee Herman character.

"If there's a trial, he will be here," said defense attorney Richard Gerstein. "I assume he will come as Paul Reubens."

• • •

GREENVILLE, Miss. — Travel writer and historian Bern Keating says he is about 99 percent recovered from a stroke that incapacitated him three weeks ago.

Keating, 76, who has lived in Greenville since 1946, suffered a stroke in Atlanta on Sept. 28.

The author of 25 books and hundreds of magazine articles for publications such as National Geographic said he was grateful for the support he had from friends in the Mississippi Delta community during his recovery.

"That's the reason I live in Greenville," he said Wednesday. "Can you imagine my friends in New York doing that? They wouldn't know if I was alive."

Keating won the Western Heritage Award in 1978 for his book "Famous American Explorers." In 1987, he was recognized as an outstanding writer by the American Society of Journalists and Authors.

BRAVES: Bucs fail to score again

(From 1C)

Avery and Alejandro Pena shut down Pittsburgh 1-0, Smoltz won his second game of the series with a six-hitter. In reversing their history, the Braves also stopped the Pirates' series of Game 7 successes — Pittsburgh had played five previous deciding seventh games, and won them all.

"I'm glad this is over," Smoltz said. "I was a little nervous at the start."

It really was over early. After the Braves knocked out 20-game winner John Smiley in the first inning, the Pirates had their best chance when Orlando Merced and Jay Bell led off the first with singles.

But the big three of Andy Van Slyke, Bobby Bonilla and Barry Bonds each made outs, failing for the umpteenth time. They were a combined 0-for-33 with runners on base until Bonilla singled in the eighth.

The Pirates' 3-4-5 hitters were a combined 15-for-75, a .200 average, and didn't drive in any runs after the third inning of Game 1. In last year's playoffs, they were 12-for-63.

In the ninth, with 500 Braves fans chanting and chopping in the far reaches of the upper deck, Smoltz finished it quickly with a 1-2-3 inning. That set off an exhuberant celebration on the field, and triggered an ever wilder scene in the clubhouse.

For the Pirates, the loss marked another season of disappointment, far worse than last year's six-game playoff defeat by Cincinnati.

Pittsburgh was baseball's best team during the regular season at 98-64, and came into the playoffs calm and confident. The Pirates won the opener, took two of three in Atlanta and returned to Three Rivers Stadium this week with a 3-2 lead.

But that's where it stopped for the Pirates and started up for the Braves. Smoltz capped a streak of 27 straight scoreless innings for Pittsburgh at home.

The Braves won the fifth pennant in franchise history, and first since 1958 in Milwaukee. Atlanta had been swept in its only other playoff appearances in 1969 and 1982 before this year.

Owner Ted Turner, who bought the team in 1976, was beaming when he accepted the NL championship trophy.

"I had hoped for this sooner, but better late than never," he said.

The Pirates went meekly, and so did their fans. A crowd of just 46,932, more than 10,000 fewer than watched Game 1, saw the season end.

"You have to tip your hat to the Atlanta Braves," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "It's very disappointing. They're legitimate champs. What a great performance. What a great story for baseball."

Hunter, a rookie, drove in three runs. He hit a two-run homer after Ron Gant's sacrifice fly in the first inning, and added an RBI double in the fifth.

"I was looking for something over the plate and he got a pitch up and I just hit hit as hard as I could," Hunter said of the homer. "We're a big family here. We're a young club with veterans who have helped us out. We had no fear of losing."

Smoltz, in danger of losing his spot in the rotation in midseason when he was 2-11, won for the 14th time in 16 decisions since the All-Star break. He pitched his first shutout of the season — and Atlanta's third of the series — striking out eight and walking one.

His only trouble after the first inning came in the eighth when Bell singled with one out and Bonilla singled with two down. But Smoltz got Bonds on a routine fly.

Bears blank Packers

Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The Chicago Bears managed only one touchdown Thursday night. It was plenty against the Green Bay Packers.

The Bears shut down and shut out Green Bay's sputtering offense in a 10-0 victory. It was Chicago's 11th victory in the last 13 games against its long-time rival.

Jim Harbaugh's 8-yard touchdown pass to James Thornton late in the second quarter and Kevin Butler's 22-yard field goal early in the fourth sent the Bears (5-2) to a victory after two straight losses.

The Packers, who had 138 yards total offense and made just five first downs, fell to 1-6 with their fourth straight loss and 11th in 12 games dating back to last season.

Don Majkowski, in one the worst performances of his career, completed only three of 16 passes for 32 yards before he was replaced by former Bear Mike Tomczak in the fourth quarter.

The Packers' deepest drive all night only reached the Chicago 43.

Majkowski fumbled a snap out of the shotgun and Richard Dent recovered for the Bears at the Green Bay 14 with 30 seconds to go in the third quarter.

Consumer prices jump 0.4 percent

U.S. economy gets bad jolts on inflation, industrial production, trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, buffeted by higher costs for energy, food and housing, jumped 0.4 percent last month in the biggest inflation spurt since January, the government said Thursday.

In other bad economic news, industrial production rose a lackluster 0.1 percent in September while the country's merchandise trade deficit widened dramatically as overseas demand for American products took a nosedive.

Economists blamed the worse-than-expected inflation number for the most part on temporary factors, but they worried that the other reports depicted a listless economic recovery losing what little momentum it had.

Manufacturing and export sales had been among the few bright spots as the economy has struggled to break free of the 1990-91 recession.

"This is not a good report card on the performance of the U.S. economy," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co. "We are seeing a fading of momentum on the industrial side of the economy along with higher inflation than we had been running."

President Bush met with Republican leaders Thursday to put the finishing touches on an economic package of tax breaks and other proposals to spur economic growth.

Many elements of the GOP package, including a lower capital gains tax and tax breaks for first-time homeowners, were expected to be recycled from previous Bush plans that have so far been ignored by Congress.

While Bush told newspapers editors that a variety of economic statistics were showing an economic rebound, a new poll released by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce found that confidence among business leaders has plummeted to an 18-month low as business executives worried about weak demand.

The chamber said that just 29.6 percent of the business people surveyed believe their sales will increase in the next six months while only 13.2 percent said they planned to hire new workers over that time period.

"Business confidence on employment, sales and the economy deteriorated sharply in all areas of the country since August," Chamber economist Lawrence A. Hunter said in releasing the new results.

The administration has been looking for the Federal Reserve to once again cut interest rates in an effort to bolster consumer and business borrowing, but economists said the 0.4 percent spurt in consumer prices, because it raised doubts about inflation, will likely forestall any further credit easing until probably next month.

AT&T's restructuring, job cuts cause $1.8 billion loss

NEW YORK (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported a third-quarter loss of $1.8 billion Thursday due to restructuring costs, which will pay for 14,000 job cuts that stem partly from its recent purchase of NCR Corp.

Without the one-time $4 billion accounting charge against earnings, AT&T would have reported a record profit, excluding NCR's figures.

The telecommunications giant said the charge reduced profit by $2.65 billion after taxes. In addition to job reductions, it will pay for consolidation of office and warehouse space and other efficiencies.

The loss for the quarter ended Sept. 30 translates to $1.40 a share, roughly in line with the projections of industry analysts.

AT&T's profit for last year's third quarter, which has been restated to include the results of NCR, totaled $803 million, or 62 cents a share. AT&T completed its merger with the Dayton, Ohio-based computer maker Sept. 19.

Revenue of the two companies advanced 1.2 percent to $11.04 billion from $10.91 billion in last year's third quarter. AT&T's revenue alone rose 3.3 percent to $9.70 billion.

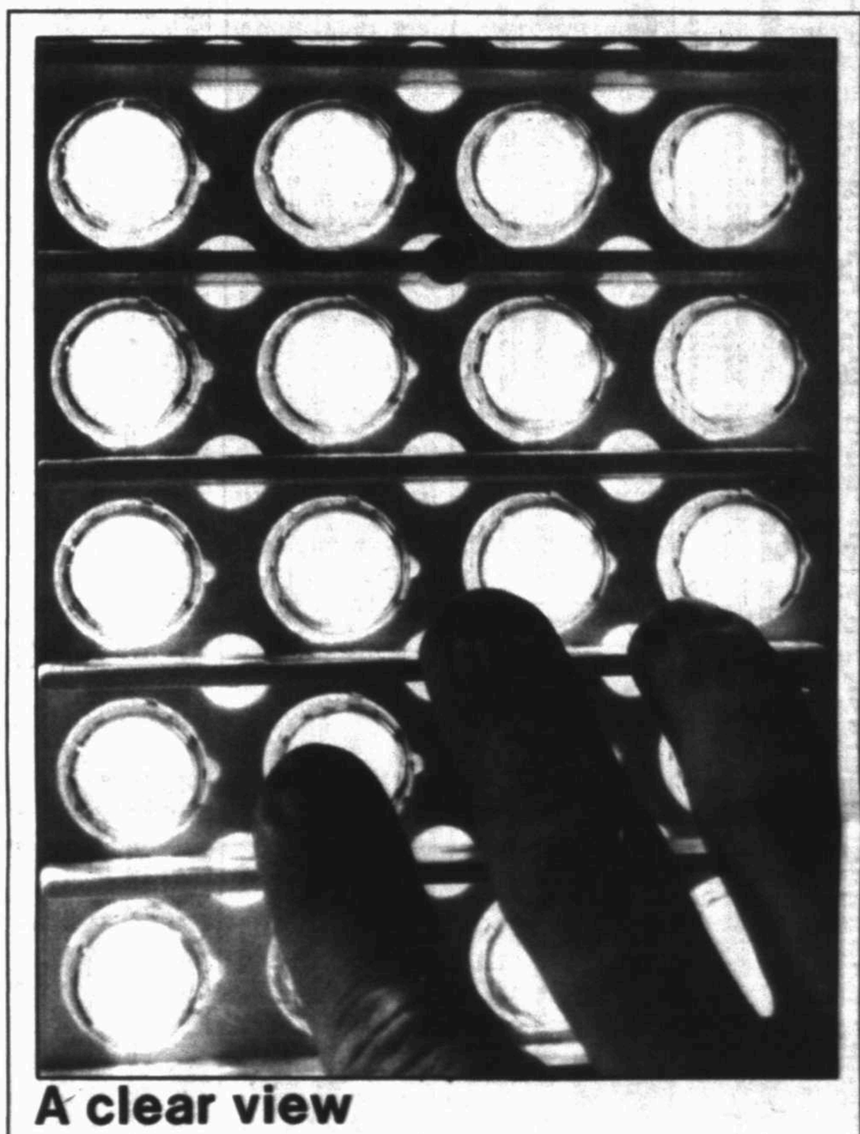

AT&T said for the first time that its restructuring, announced in July, would involve eliminating about 14,000 jobs through Jan. 1, 1994. Severance payments will be paid for by the restructuring charge.

AT&T employed about 325,000 at the end of September, including 55,000 NCR workers.

The company would not provide a breakdown of the job reductions, but said they would come primarily from divisions that make and sell office phone systems, which have been losing money; from among the 3,500 employees of its computer division who aren't moving into the NCR subsidiary; and from warehouse and distribution divisions.

"The good news is there was no more bad news. There was some worry there might be more shoes dropped — a higher (restructuring) charge or NCR was having some sort of problem," said Richard Toole, who follows AT&T for Merrill Lynch & Co.

AT&T shares, the most widely owned of any stock in the nation, fell 12.5 cents to $39 by the 4 p.m. EDT close of trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Excluding the charges and NCR's income, AT&T's third-quarter profit amounted to $808 million, or 73 cents a share, up from $712 million, or 65 cents a share, in the same period last year.

Bureau: Loan schemes cost more than $1 million a month

WASHINGTON (AP) — A "national epidemic" of loan scams stemming from the recession and the credit crunch is probably costing consumers and businesses more than $1 million a month, the Better Business Bureau said Thursday.

The bureau, based in the Washington suburb of Arlington, Va., said a survey this month showed that "advance-fee loan scams" account for the fastest growing category of complaints to the bureau's nationwide offices.

The bureau said scam operators usually offer signature loans to individuals and businesses that have difficulty obtaining credit elsewhere, in exchange for advance payment of a fee.

It cited the example of a Texas man who lost $400 to a pair of alleged brokers in New York state. The borrower said he was promised loans even though he said he couldn't make ends meet and would use the money to pay current bills.

The schemes are promoted through advertisements in newspapers and magazines and on radio and cable TV channels, the bureau said. Customers are told to call toll-free 800 telephone numbers or 900 numbers that result in charges on the customer's phone bill.

"It is likely that financially vulnerable consumers and business owners are losing $1 million or more each month as the result of this ruthless exploitation by con artists who dangle the false prospect of hard-to-find loan funds," the bureau said.

Bureau offices in New York and Dallas each have reported 4,000 calls about the loan scams, while Phoenix has received 6,000 calls and Cincinnati, 8,000.

"Even bureaus in smaller communities are reporting severe problems with phony loan brokers," the bureau said.

Consumers were cautioned not to confuse advance-fee loan schemes with loans offered by legitimate mortgage brokers, banks, thrift institutions and credit unions.

Bankers blast 'credit crunch' talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bankers told President Bush on Thursday that slack demand and not excess regulation is to blame for the so-called credit crunch.

The message delivered to Bush by a dozen banking executives at a White House meeting comes a week after the administration issued a set of proposals designed to prod banks into making more loans.

The package would provide a new way for banks to appeal unfavorable examinations and ease other regulatory burdens. The goal, Bush said at the time, was to "have sound banks make sound loans."

After Thursday's meeting, bankers said they told Bush they welcomed the initiative but cautioned that it would not get at the root causes of the slow growth in bank lending that some analysts believe is holding back the economic recovery.

"Bankers are quite willing to extend credit, are eager to extend credit, to anyone that is halfway creditworthy," said John Medlin, chairman of First Wachovia Corp., Winston-Salem, N.C. "There is simply not the demand coming forward."

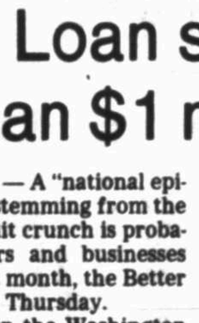

"I encouraged the president to abolish 'credit crunch' from the vocabulary of administration officials. . . . There is no credit crunch," he said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Tips on tracking mutual fund performance

By Bill Doyle

Q. I would like to compare the annual total returns of a number of mutual funds with each other and with the S&P 500. But fiscal years vary by month at different funds. Some start January 1, some February 1, etc. So it is difficult to find out which funds have done better than others.

Doyle

Is there any source of information for the total return, by month, of the S&P 500?

A. You can obtain that statistic from Standard & Poor's Corp., 25 Broadway, New York, NY 10004. Among other things, that company compiles the S&P Index of 500 Stocks, a good measurement of overall price movements in the market.

But you are going about this backwards. Information on S&P 500 annual total return is widely available. Many newspapers print it early every January. Total return, of course, means change in share value assuming dividends are reinvested to buy additional shares.

The same information, on a calendar year basis, is available for mutual funds — even funds with different fiscal years. The calculation on each fund takes into account the December 31 of one year to December 31 of the next year change in asset value per share and the dividends paid.

Many newspapers publish annual mutual fund total return figures in January. In fairness to my chosen trade, it must be pointed out there are thousands of mutual funds and printing total returns for all of them consumes precious and expensive newspaper space. Some newspapers are selective and publish results for, say, the top 50 and bottom 50 performing funds.

Q. I find it is impossible to determine which mutual funds have done well or poorly in a bull or bear market. Any suggestions?

A. That chore has been done for you by a number of publications. Here are two.

In its annual mutual fund ratings issue, usually printed in September, Forbes magazine grades mutual funds on how well them have done in periods of rising stock prices (bull markets) and in periods of falling stock prices (bear markets). If you can't get a copy at a newsstand, you're almost certain to find back issues at public libraries.

Every issue of NoLoad Fund X, a monthly newsletter put out by DAL Investment Co., 235 Montgomery St. San Francisco, CA 94104-2994, provides statistics on the bull and bear market performances of no-load mutual funds — those whose shares can be purchased without any commission charge.

Q. Is there any way I can find out which is the number one mutual fund?

A. You can learn which fund had the best total return for some past period of time easily enough. Just watch your newspaper for stories detailing fund performance figures.

But don't overlook the fact that past performance is no guarantee of future results. As is the case with big league sports, last year's pennant winner might be this year's last place finisher.

Q. My wife and I both have individual retirement accounts invested in mutual funds. She is the beneficiary of my IRA. I am the beneficiary of hers.

When we pass age 70 1/2 and are required to withdraw money for the IRAs, do we use the single life expectancy table or the joint life expectancy table in Internal Revenue Service Publication 590?

A. Take your pick. You can use either one.

It is almost always wiser to make the mandatory IRA withdrawals based on joint life expectancy, which is longer than single life expectancy. As a result, you are required to withdraw less money than would be the case if you used single life expectancy.

If you need more money than the withdrawals based on joint life expectancy provides, you can always withdraw more.

Prices rebound

NEW YORK — Energy prices rose Thursday with help from surging gasoline futures, but crude oil stopped short of its recent peak of $24 a barrel.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $23.93 per barrel, up 26 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. That erased crude's loss of 19 cents on Wednesday, resuming a rally that has pushed oil up by $1.72 a barrel over the past three weeks.

The market has been advancing on fears of supply disruptions this winter in the Soviet Union, the world's largest oil producer and a vital exporter to Europe. Soviet production has been in a steep decline, and its uncertain political future has stirred concerns about further drops in output.

Much of the market's motivation on Thursday came from rising gasoline futures, which were set into motion on reports that the U.S. supply fell sharply and unexpectedly last week.

The rally was fueled by several reports of refinery fires, although they either turned out to be unconfirmed or not as bad as initial rumors hitting the trading floor, Yu said.

News that North Sea oil shipments would be delayed by 36 to 48 hours because of rising seas was also giving energy prices a boost.

Natural gas prices were mostly higher, with contracts for delivery in November settling at $20.14 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 1.3 cents.

SW Bell earnings

ST. LOUIS — Southwestern Bell Corp. said on Thursday that strengthened cellular and Yellow Pages performances helped boost third-quarter earnings by more than 12 percent.

The company reported net third-quarter income of $363.1 million, or $1.21 per share, on revenues of $2.4 billion, up 12.2 percent from earnings of $323.6 million, or $1.08 per share, on revenues of $2.3 billion in the same period last year.

For the first nine months of 1991, however, the parent corporation's net income of $759.6 million was down 8.9 percent from $833.9 in the same period last year.

Dollar slips

NEW YORK — The dollar finished lower against most major currencies in domestic trading after posting some gains in European dealings.

The dollar finished at 129.45 yen in New York compared with 130.10 yen late Wednesday.

MC's Berthe tops women's singles at African Games

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Myriam Berthe, Midland College's No. 1 women's singles player, recently won the women's singles championship at the Old African Games in Cairo, Egypt.

The victory is Africa's equivalent to a gold medal in the Pan American Games, which were staged last summer in Cuba.

"It's her country's highest honor," MC tennis coach Joe Williams said. "Forty-two countries were represented and she had to win 13 matches to win the title."

Along the way, Berthe defeated a Zimbabwe native who currently plays for the University of Miami, and claimed the title by defeating an Algerian who's ranked No. 300 in the world.

Williams heard the news with mixed reactions. While he is obviously happy to possess one of the most talented women's tennis players in the world, Berthe's victory automatically qualified her to turn pro.

"She now will have full sponsorship to turn pro," Williams said. "A coach and management group or agent are included. The International Tennis Federation will pick up her expense if she decides to try and make it as a professional. Not too many tournaments offer that to their winners."

Williams said he has received Berthe's assurances that she will remain with the MC team through the spring semester before considering the offer to turn pro.

"There are some areas of her game (that need work) if she wants to take on the challenge of turning pro.

"I think she needs a lot of experience. I'm interested to see how it affects her drive and motivation. She hasn't been thoroughly tested, but I think she can compete with any girl in college tennis at any level."

Berthe, who was coached by her father, began playing tennis when she was five years old. Her brother, Fadel, is on the MC men's tennis team.

In other tennis news, former MC player Mohammed Ridoui became only the second ex-junior college player to win a major NCAA title. Ridoui, playing for the University of Mississippi and who played for MC two seasons ago, won the NCAA Division I Claycourt Championship in September.

Ridoui is the first player since Michael Pernfors, now a professional, to win an NCAA championship after playing on the JUCO level.

Humphrey ends holdout in Denver

Associated Press

DENVER — Running back Bobby Humphrey reported to the Denver Broncos on Thursday, ending a sometimes-acrimonious 97-day holdout.

Humphrey, a 1,000-yard rusher the past two seasons, walked out on the first day of training camp in July, demanding renegotiation of his four-year contract, which had two years remaining and which was to have paid him $315,000 this year.

The Broncos insisted that Humphrey report to the team before any contract adjustments would be considered, and a stalemate ensued.

Denver entertained numerous trade offers for Humphrey and appeared on the verge of unloading the third-year pro, but ultimately the team rejected such offers as inadequate. When the NFL trading deadline passed last week, Humphrey either had to report or sit out the rest of the season.

"It's great to be back," Humphrey said at a press conference shortly after his arrival at Broncos headquarters. "I'm happy to be around a football environment again. I'm here to play ball. There are no hard feelings ...

Humphrey, who began practicing immediately, said he was in good running condition but thought it might take two weeks for him to be ready to play.

"I got tired of playing football in my living room on Sundays, jumping around with no pads on, visualizing myself making good runs," he said. "I went through the same situation as a senior in college when I was injured, and I remembered how miserable I was."

He said his biggest regret as "holding out as long as I did, knowing deep down that I'm a competitor. I didn't think it would go as long as it did."

Chaparral women set early pace in El Paso

Staff Report

EL PASO — All the Midland College women advanced while the MC men had mixed results Thursday at the Cliff Inn Sun Bowl Adult Open tennis tournament here.

No. 1 seed Myriam Berthe and No. 2 seed Seiko Isioka used byes followed by easy wins to move into the quarterfinals, while Boba Tzvetkova, Caroline Reynolds and Adriana Isaza moved into the round of 16 with opening-day wins.

The Chaparral men found singles winners in Gene Highfield and Fadel Berthe, and Tom Erik Brun and Berthe teammed for one doubles win while Highfield and Robin van Beveran worked together for another.

Women's doubles begins for the Chaps today as both MC teams enjoyed first-round byes.

On a sour note for MC, No. 1 Chap singles player David Draper was hospitalized here Thursday morning with apparent dehydration symptoms. Draper was treated and released and may still see action in mixed doubles, MC tennis coach Joe Williams said.

Here are the results from the first day of action at the $4,000 Cliff Inn Sun Bowls Adult Open tennis tournament in El Paso.

Men's Singles

Tom Erik Brun lost to David Klembrith, San Francisco, 6-1, 6-4; Gene Highfield def. Chris Bongard, UTEP, 6-3, 6-4, and def. Jorge Flores, University of Arizona, 6-1, 6-0; Robin van Beveran def. Marco Tope, El Paso, 6-2, 6-1 and lost to Charles messon of New Mexico State, 7-5, 6-2; Fadel Berthe def. Brian Edgar of U. of Arizona, 6-1, 6-1 and def. Gabe Silva, El Paso, 6-1, 6-2.

Men's Doubles

Tom Erik Brun—Fadel Berthe def. Will Tankersley—Shay Coker, Texas Tech, 6-4, 6-4; Gene Highfield—Robin van Beveran def. Tim McNaney—John Perry, N.M. State, 7-5, 6-3.

Women's Singles

Myriam Berthe def. A. Yarbrough, Texas Tech, 6-0, 6-0; Seiko Isioka def. Tom Easterling, N.M. State, 6-1, 6-2; Caroline Reynolds def. Mary Faville, El Paso, 6-3, 6-4; Boba Tzvetkova def. Megan Pye, U. of New Mexico, 4-6, 6-1, 6-1; Adriana Isaza def. Jill Baron, U. of New Mexico, 6-2, 6-1.

MC golfers take control

Staff Report

BOSSIER CITY, La. — Midland College golfers Darren Eckhardt and Steven Armstrong each fired tourney-best 75s Thursday, leading the Chaparrals to an eight-stroke lead in the opening round of the Bossier Parrish Community College Golf Tournament.

MC compiled 302 strokes to take the lead over host Bossier CC (310) and Weatherford College (311).

Eckhardt and Armstrong tied Russell Jenkins of Paris Junior College — who also scored a 75 — for top individual honors after one round of the three-day event.

1. Midland College, 302; 2. Bossier Community College, 310; 3. Weatherford College, 311; 4. Paris Junior College, 315; 5. Lon Morris, 325; 6. Bavaro College, 326; 7. San Jacinto, 327; 8. Texarkana, 328; 9. Brookhaven, 330; 10. McLennon, 331; 11. Grayson College, 333.

Czechs remember 'little Shirley'

CITYLINE - 560-2400; NEWS - 1210

Ambassador Shirley Temple Black never expected so much change

By Ruthe Stein
N.Y. Times News Service

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — When Shirley Temple Black arrived in 1989 as the American ambassador to Czechoslovakia, she discovered there had been a Shirley Temple fan club here more than 50 years earlier.

Czechoslovaks would approach her at public functions, clutching their original membership cards, yellow with age, for her to autograph.

"They'd call me 'Shirleyka,' which is what they called me when I was little," Black said at her office at the American Embassy. "It means 'little Shirley.'"

The world's most famous child star is 63. She has been in government 22 years — she was ambassador to Ghana and chief of protocol and has trained diplomats for the State Department — three years longer than she made movies.

But she can't get away from "little Shirley" — not even 9,591 miles from Hollywood. Videotapes have made it possible for a new generation to become infatuated with that adorable tot with the dimples that won't quit.

THE ASSOCIATION has helped, providing what every diplomat can use: a foot in the door. Wherever she has gone, people feel as though they already know her.

Black arrived in Prague knowing almost no one and was greeted "like a returning relative," she says.

In the course of a two-hour interview, traces of little Shirley emerged: a flash of dimples when she exclaimed, "This is the best job I've ever had — it's just got everything"; the familiar pout whenever the topic of Communists came up; an expression that could have come out of the mouth of Little Miss Broadway or Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm.

"Nothing can destroy anything as visibly as a noisy, huffing, puffing, dirty, gigantic tank," Black said, discussing the tanks that crushed the 1968 attempt at liberalization known as the Prague Spring.

She is one of the few to have escaped childhood stardom unscathed. She did not just get married for the eighth time, but has had the same husband (albeit her second) for 41 years — Charles Black, chairman of the board of Mardela, a marine resource development corporation. He has gone with her on all her diplomatic assignments.

Nor has she had cause to check into the Betty Ford Center. Her worst vice is smoking, a habit she shares with Czechoslovak President Vaclav Havel. When Black accompanied him to the White House last year, she got special dispensation for him to smoke.

Some ambassadors may expect royal treatment, but not Black — perhaps because she had her fill of it as a child. She wears a photo ID on a chain around her neck like all other embassy employees. After lunch at the snack bar, she bused her own tray, marched back and grabbed another.

ON ONE wall in her office is a group picture of the Communist officials who were in power when Black arrived in August 1989. It has been hung upside down "so I can say I set the Communists on their head."

She never expected that three months after becoming ambassador, they would be gone.

"I thought at the time, it might be five to 10 years before there would really be a change in Czechoslovakia."

Her main concern then was human rights. "The human rights policy here was darn near nonexistent." The Velvet Revolution — so called because it was accomplished without bloodshed — revolutionized her job as well as the country.

"The human rights problems virtually disappeared," she said. "Now all of our focus is on economic interests and trade with the United States — joint ventures, investments."

The staff at the embassy has almost doubled, with most of the new hires involved in trade. Black spends about half her time helping Americans who want to do business here.

"About 100 U.S. business people contact us a week, either by fax, by phone or on foot. The fax seems to always break down right after the 'I'm arriving on ...' so you have no idea when anyone's coming."

THERE ARE more than 100 American businesses in Prague, compared with three when she arrived. But Black would like to see more.

"I want a big American hotel here — a Hyatt or a Ramada. All of us are waiting to see a Kentucky Fried Chicken or a Pizza Hut — all that good junk food."

She stops, considers what she has just said and diplomatically amends it to "fast food."

She said companies have hesitated because they are unsure who owns what in Czechoslovakia. But this has become clearer. "Privatization of small enterprises is well under way, and the privatization of large enterprises starts on Halloween."

Another part of her job is showing members of Congress around Prague. There has been a steady stream of delegations.

Black entertains them, along with American and Czechoslovak business people, at the ambassador's residence, a grand house about 10 miles from the embassy. She gives at least three receptions a week.

The honorary Oscar little Shirley won in 1934 sits on a bookshelf in the library. Black says her guests are fascinated by it.

"THEY TOUCH it, they stroke it, they even smell it."

"He's a Communist and a party animal. He loves parties, loves hors d'oeuvres. He is a very good host."

It's an exciting time to be in Prague, and Black, who serves at the pleasure of the president of the United States, would like to stay on as long as possible.

There are really just two things that could send her packing: a Democrat in the White House or her making a major mistake.

"I was a teacher at the Department of State. I figure if I can't get it right after eight years of training others, that's not very good."

Black never worries about the future, but that doesn't mean she hasn't given some thought to what she might do if she weren't an ambassador. She would like to write a sequel to her best-selling autobiography, "Child Star," about her life up until 1954.

"I had done an outline for book two when President Bush called and asked me to take this job. So book two went into the basement."

Stephen J. Cannell's 'Palace Guard' asleep on duty

By Scott Williams
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — There may be a second-tier James Bond movie that is sillier and more fatuous than tonight's premiere of "Palace Guard" on CBS, but it's not likely.

The premise of this pseudo-sophisticated suspense-comedy-drama is that dark, hunky, hotel thief Tommy Logan (D.W. Moffett), fresh out of a grand theft stretch in Attica, is hired by hotel magnate Arturo Taft (Tony LoBianco) to be his international Palace Hotel chain's chief of security.

This, presumably, will allow for lots of exotic location work at lush resorts in Europe, the Caribbean and Latin America. Not to mention tax deductible vacations for writers, directors and production excutives.

Anybody out there remember "It Takes a Thief"?

Yup, that's the spirit behind "Palace Guard," and it isn't even a very good knock-off.

Suave, devil-may-care, insouciant Tommy is put under the supervision of the hotel's executive vice president for publicity and public relations, the leggy, blonde, former B-movie actress Christy Cooper (Marcy Walker).

Moffett, who spends too much time barechested, gets lines like: "I'm sorry I wasn't there for you" and mumbo-jumbo like "You've got to protect your center." Sheesh.

Miss Walker, trapped in a dim, unrelentingly shrill character, is not equal to confecting their unlikely chemistry. She gets lines like: "Do I want to trade witty, sophisticated remarks with you?"

Yes, desperately, it would seem, for after the mandatory 10-minute chill and the four-minute late-night intimate chat, she's suddnely a big Tommy fan.

Remote, you say? No, this is television. And besides, there's certain to be some anticlimactic revelation in the last scene which makes it all seem, well ... even more unlikely.

"Con and Flack" might have been a better title. But's let's take up a few nasty little quibbles.

Where is it written in the code of suspense-comedy-mystery thrillers that:

■ A building's ventilation system must ALWAYS have man-sized air ducts with convenient, swing-out grilles?

■ That a sneak thief, no matter how familiar with computer systems and software, can instantly gain access to such a system, understand its software, gain access to its most sensitive files and immediately obtain a printout?

■ That a suave, devil-may-care, insouciant (and mighty darned attractive) thief can emerge from a world-class hellhole like Attica with his insouciance intact?

■ That a hotel chain dispatches its head of security by executive jet to investigate a suspicious death in Acapulco?

■ That, oh, by the way, while you're down there in Acapulco, would you look for the hotel magnate's missing 15-year-old daughter?

■ That a respectable woman — heck, even a disreputable woman — who has formed a dislike for a man newly freed from Attica would, when invited to share the Presidential Suite, smile and reply, "What the heck — why not?"

■ That an average man — hell, even a Cy Young award-winning pitcher — can throw, oh, let's say a "hand grenade," from one helicopter INTO another?

Moffett, who's a much better actor than his character deserves, at least has the grace to grimace and issue a pained yawp after knocking a man unconscious with his fist.

It is, alas, one of the few realistic moments among many egregious improbabilities in the first episode of "Palace Guard," written and created by executive producer Stephen J. Cannell, who should know better.

Henley struggles to save woods

NEW YORK (AP) — The fight over Walden Woods, Henry David Thoreau's 19th-century sanctuary, measures up as a heavyweight match Don King could produce.

In one corner: millionaire builders, painted by opponents as uncaring developers out to strip the world of beauty.

"This is not just some chump we're talking about here. It's Thoreau, and this place is the birthplace of his ideas," Henley said in an interview. "The place and the literature are inseparable. They're one and the same."

Henley has given not only his celebrity status but also much of his time and energy to the cause. He's been in the forefront of the battle since 1990 when he formed the Walden Woods Project, a nonprofit group trying to raise millions to preserve 2,680 acres in Concord and Lincoln, Mass.

Walden Pond itself has long been converted into a state park, overrun by weekend visitors from Boston and its suburbs. But the woods are the land where Thoreau once roamed, the place that inspired "Walden," and spawned Thoreau's theories on conservation and non-violent civil disobedience.

Henley had never been to the woods before he got involved in saving it. But that's the point, he said, explaining: "You never have to go there. You just have to know it's there."

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more! How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
