Indictments List Four For Murder

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche Journal Staff

MURDER indictments against four persons and theft indictments against five others accused of stealing watches, calculators and gold ingots from Texas Instruments in Lubbock were among 120 indictments returned Thursday by a 237th District Court grand jury.

Charles Walter Hill, 29, of 3604 Zenith Ave. was indicted for murder in the April 1, 1978, shooting death of 29-year-old Robert Rios Rivera in a field east of Lubbock.

Another man, Gary Lynn Vester, 20, already has been found guilty in connection with Rivera's death and last week was given a 50-year sentence in 137th District Court.

Nightclub Shooting

Robert Reyes Rangel, 26, of 1316 33rd St. was indicted in the April 5 shooting death of 34-year-old Ramon S. Guerra Jr. at a 508 Amarillo Highway nightclub.

Murder indictments also were returned against Grace James, 51, of 2730 Erskine St. in connection with the March 17 shooting death of 57-year-old Robert Lee Johnson outside a club at 2819 Clovis Road, and Jerry Martin Ewings, 28, of 1810 Third St., No. 228, in connection with the death of Sylvester Kilpatrick, 37, who was shot March 17 outside a nightclub in the 2200 block of East 37th Street and died March 21 at a Lubbock hospital.

Former TI employees Delbert Eugene Hall, 30, of 2212 Fifth St. and Herman G. Baca, 26, of 2304 Fifth St., No. 114, were indicted for theft in the reported March 28 loss of $1,000 in gold ingots from the TI plant.

Hurbert Thompson, 19, of 2512 Globe, Michael E. Wofford, 17, of 1112-B 46th St. and former TI security guard Jimmie E. Jackson, 21, of 1112-B 46th St. were indicted for in connection with the reported theft of numerous watches and calculators at TI late last year through early this year.

Four Persons No-Billed

The grand jury no-billed or declined to indict four persons: Ramiro Ramon Jr., address unavailable, accused of theft of service; Gary House, 31, of Idalou, ac-

GRISLY SEARCH CONTINUES — Rescue workers are continuing their search for victims of Tuesday's killer tornadoes which struck Wichita Falls and Vernon. Here, a worker picks through the rubble of a Wichita Falls residence almost completely leveled by the deadly storm. As of late Thursday 47 bodies have been found in Wichita Falls and 11 more in Vernon. Spokesmen in the Wichita Falls mayors office said they hoped to release a list of persons missing since the tempest, and though no official totals had been given, that number is expected to run well into the hundreds. Estimates of damage caused by the tornadoes are far from complete, but some disaster crewmen report losses "well into the millions" for the unlucky cities.(Staff Photo by Milton Adams).

Trio Given Orders To Leave

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha charged Thursday that some U.S. Egnbassy personnel have snooped on sensitive areas of South Africa with a specially equipped "spy plane," and he ordered them to leave the country within a week.

The embassy said it would have no comment, but the State Department in Washington said three U.S. Air Force personnel assigned to the embassy were ordered out.

The prime minister identified the spy plane as the private aircraft of U.S. Ambassador William P. Edmonson. He did not announce the name of anyone charged with spying, nor did he say how many people were allegedly involved.

Apology Expected

Botha said in a nationally televised announcement it was the kind of conduct South Africa "would expect from the Soviet Union" but not from the United States. He said he expects an official apology from the Carter administration.

A State Department spokesman in Washington refused comment on the substance of the charges.

The U.S. Embassy in Pretoria said the plane, a twin engine C-12A, was assigned to the embassy. A spokesman said it is equipped with a camera and took aerial photographs, but he said he would not call the photography espionage.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said, "It is particularly unfortunate that the South African government chose to act as it did at a time when we are engaged with it in seeking solutions to the problems in Namibia (South-West Africa) and elsewhere in Southern Africa."

Trio Ordered Out

The State Department said those asked to leave South Africa are: Col. Alvin M. Crews, a defense attache; Maj. Berad McConnell, an assistant air attache; and Master Sgt. Horace E. Wyatt Jr., crew chief of the plane. It said the plane was assigned to crews. No hometowns were given.

Botha, appearing unexpectedly on the country's 8 p.m. television news broadcast, accused the embassy of using Edmondson's airplane as a "spy plane" to take pictures of "very sensitive areas" of South African territory.

He did not say how his government learned of the alleged "spy plane." He gave no details of what was photographed, but said "we have the necessary exhibits and will show them if need be."

Leave Within Week

Edmondson was summoned to the Foreign Ministry and was told the American diplomats involved must leave South Africa within a week, the prime minister said.

The plane "was converted for use as a spy plane by the installation of an aerial survey camera under the seat of the copilot," Botha told his countrymen. "In flight, the device enabled the camera to take pictures of the ground below.

"Photographs in our possession reveal that the embassy aircraft was engaged in

Storm-Hit Wichita Falls Declared Disaster Area

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — President Carter on Thursday declared this ravaged city a disaster area and city officials instituted a dusk-to-dawn curfew and a price freeze in the aftermath of one of the most devastating tornadoes in the nation's history.

Meanwhile, crews searching the eight-mile-long section damaged by Tuesday night's twister here recovered the body of a 43rd victim Thursday, identified as Arden J. Turner, 33, of Wichita Falls.

But they later boosted the count to 47, saying a woman's body identified as that of Catheryne McKee, had been overlooked in the counting.

And while the recovery work went on, new tornadoes Thursday damaged several homes at Steens, Miss., and the National Weather Service said tornadoes were spotted at Cave Spring and Rome, Ga., and Canton, Miss. No injuries were reported. Minor injuries were reported in an early morning tornado at Florence, Ala.

And the storm system which spawned the tornadoes caused flooding which was blamed for three deaths near Louisville, Miss., two in Missouri and one in Alabama.

"Maybe I'm speaking from a standpoint of fear rather than knowledge, but we're going to be very fortunate if there were not 100 killed," said Mayor Kenneth Hill.

Storms also struck in nearby communities Tuesday night, claiming the lives of another 15 persons, 11 in Vernon, one in Harrold and three in Lawton, Okla., across the Red River.

As many as 800 persons were injured, almost 700 of them in Wichita Falls.

"From what I've heard so far, this ranks in terms of damage only behind the tornadoes that hit Topeka in 1966, Lubbock in 1970, Omaha in 1975 and Xenia, Ohio, in 1975," said Kansas tornado specialist Joe Eagleman. "It's only the fifth tornado to cause more than $100 million in damage in history."

Gov. Bill Clements toured the city Wednesday and estimated damage up to $300 million. On Thursday, Carter declared the city a disaster area, making victims and local government eligible for federal aid.

Power and water were restored to about 50 percent of the city Thursday. But Mayor Hill said it may be four to five days before electricity is restored to all areas, and water pressure remained below the level needed to fight fires.

Fire Destroys House

"If we had a fire now, we'd just have to let it burn," Hil said. A tornado-damaged house was ignited by an unknown cause Wednesday night, and slowly burned to the ground.

Some gas stations, retail stores and restaurants reopened. Under an emergency city ordinance adopted Wednesday, retail prices were frozen to prevent price gouging.

Three persons were arrested for looting Thursday, and officials said they would impose for the second night a dusk-to-dawn curfew on unnecessary travel in hopes of curbing vandalism and looting.

In a small act of defiance, a district judge surveyed the wreckage of his two-story brick home, then he and his son mounted an American flag on what once had been a wall of his son's room.

"For Sale" Sign

One family erected a "For Sale" sign atop a pile of rubbish. It was once their home.

The storm left behind a sad lexicon of human vignettes passed on by the survivors:

— A church was reduced to rubble. Trapped underneath was the church's secretary.

— A man and his teen-age son took refuge in a drainage ditch. Thinking the storm had passed, the man raised his head. A board, propelled by the winds, killed him.

— A young woman attempted to outrun the storm in her late model car. The tornado overtook her, smashed the car flat and deposited it near the No. 2 tee-box on the Weeks Park golf course. She was killed.

— One family of five fled to the home of a relative in their van. The tornado swept it from the road and dropped it in the relative's back yard, it's occupants unharmed.

There was quiet resignation. "When you live in Wichita Falls," said a nurse whose home was blown away, "it's not if you'll be hit by a tornado but when."

Families Face Uprooted Lives After Twisters

WICHITA FALLS — They lived through the worst of a tornado's grasp and now they must live through the tumultuous, frustrating aftermath.

It is frustrating for Annie and Vernon Fite because right now they are caught in a Catch-22 situation, and tumultuous because it means further uprooting in an already disrupted life.

For the Fites, a stout-hearted elderly couple, the terror of the tornado has been exchanged for the troublesome problem of finding another home on short notice, transportation to replace their destroyed car and new furnishings.

All will involve insurance claims, and for now, that places the Fites in a Catch-22 dilemma.

Shards litter the floor and ground glass makes sitting anywhere uncomfortable.

There is no water or power in the wrecked apartment.

There is no food. By noon Thursday, they had had no meals for 30 hours. They munched on bean dip and corn chips.

And the cool night breeze and the daily

Contractors, Union Exchange Charges

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

CHARGES have been filed with the National Labor Relations Board against a laborers union that has struck a number of construction sites in Texas and New Mexico in the past 11 days, the Avalanche-Journal learned Thursday.

The Lubbock firm of Page & Wirtz Construction Company Wednesday filed unfair picketing charges with the Albuquerque NLRB office against Laborers International Union Local 1253.

Peter Maydanis, resident officer at that office, said the charges are still being investigated to ascertain whether a violation did occur. He said he hopes to have a decision today on whether the NRLB will file charges against the union.

In addition, a spokesman for local contractors said "racial overtones" were being injected into the labor dispute after 12 area Mexican-American organizations announced Thursday morning that they supported union demands.

H.R. Bundock said the press conference called by the 12-member Conference of Organizations "doesn't contribute anything to getting this thing settled."

"It would be more productive to stay with the issue at hand," Bundock said. "The union is injecting racial overtones into collective bargaining."

At the conference, Bidal Aguero of the La Raza Unida Party said that the dozen organizations will aid in raising money to support strikers' families and will lend moral support to pickets should the strike continue much longer.

Gilbert Herrera, spokesman for the Brown Berets, said his group will act as a security force to protect pickets from any threats of violence. He said anyone who threatens strikers has "got to go through us."

Bundock called Herrera's statement "utterly ridiculous."

"Who's going to bother the pickets unless it's other union people who want to go back to work?" Bundock said.

The charges leveled at the union by

Residents Flee Gas Well Fire

SARITA (AP) — About 150 residents in this tiny Kenedy County town were evacuated from their wooden frame homes Thursday as a gas well fire nearby spewed flames 200 feet into the air.

Kenedy County Deputy Sheriff Clark Slater said the residents in the homes about 100 yards from the massive blaze were taken to area motels. No injuries were reported.

Exxon officials called in a crew of Red Adair's well firefighters from Houston to try to put the blaze out.

An Exxon official at the site, who asked not to be identified, called the fire a "premature blowout." He said Exxon workers were trying to dig a diagonal hole that will enable them to flood the fire. He said the tedious operation could last four to five days.

City, Schools Share Funding Of Project

THE PROBLEM of a pesky alley adjacent to Parsons Elementary School finally was solved Thursday when the Lubbock City Council and the Lubbock school board agreed to share the cost for paving the alley.

The alley, located south of the school between Elgin and Canton Avenues, has been a thorn in the side of city officials for some time before the decision was made to pave the alley at the council's annual paving hearing Thursday.

Residents whose homes back up to the caliche alley wanted it paved, complaining that parents picking up or delivering their children at the school drive down the alley, leaving clouds of dust and creating a safety hazard.

However, the residents of the 2800 block of 60th Street refused to pay for part of the paving and they reiterated that refusal at the council hearing.

"It's not an alley any more, it's a street," said Bill Phillips of 2802 60th Street. "We didn't create the problem — it's a community problem," he said, emphasizing the community should bear the paving cost.

"I don't feel like 13 people on that block should pay for it," he said.

Phillips and other 60th Street residents recounted horror stories to the council of living near the alley.

"In the morning 300 cars drive up and down (the alley)," Phillips said. "If you want to take your trash out on Saturday, you'd better be quick or you'll get run over," he said.

"I planted trees out there and one's already been run over, even though they've only been out two weeks," Phillips said.

"We eat caliche three times a day," Richard Duncan, another neighbor, added.

The traffic in the alley is so bad, Duncan said he was forced to climb atop a dumpster once to avoid being hit by a parent who was delivering a student at Parsons.

Derry Harding, president of the Parsons PTA, agreed that paving the alley was the solution to the problem, but said his organization was unprepared to pick up the paving tab.

"We feel very strongly the alley needs to be paved," he said, citing the large number of Parsons students who live south of Loop 289 and must be driven to school.

"The alley serves a very vital purpose as far as parents are concerned because

BURNING WRECKAGE — Reese Air Force Base firemen wash down the wreckage of a T-38 fighter plane that crashed in a field southeast of Ropesville about 10 a.m. Thursday. The plane's pilot, Capt. Tom Christiansen, 29, successfully ejected from the craft before it plowed into the field and burst into flames. Christiansen, chief of maintenance quality control at Reese AFB, was not injured in the mishap. (Staff Photo by Paul Moseley)

Air Force Pilot Abandons Ship Over Ropesville

A Reese Air Force Base captain parachuted 10,000 feet to safety Thursday morning after ejecting from a supersonic jet shortly before it crashed in a field three miles southeast of Ropesville.

Capt. Tom Christiansen, 29, of Vienna, Va., was alone in the T-38 jet at the time of the incident, about 10 a.m. He was admitted to the Reese AFB hospital for a precautionary physical, but base doctors pronounced his condition as good.

The captain, who has headed up the maintenance quality control for the base's training planes for only a month, reportedly was checking out the plane before turning it over to a trainee.

Another Reese pilot flying in the same vicinity witnessed the chain of events, and was able to provide the base with a running account, but could not determine what caused the plane to become distressed, said Reese public information officer Bill Tynan.

An Air Force board of investigators was at the scene during the afternoon, but had not determined the cause of the crash late Thursday.

Buford Moore, a Ropesville farmer, said he asked the pilot what had happened, and that Christiansen had replied, "The engine just quit...and some other things."

Christiansen was first met by Ropesville farmer Lavoid Lowrie about two miles from the wreckage. Several farmers at the scene said the pilot did not appear to be fazed by the accident.

"This is too damned real," he reportedly told bystanders before being taken back to the base.

Benny Gray of Levelland said at about 10 a.m., "There was just a pop and I looked up and saw an orange ball which was his parachute."

Gray said the plane circled once before plunging to the ground, which it hit belly-first. The jet fuel tanks, which have a 750-gallon capacity, exploded upon impact.

Sunshine Predicted For Lubbock Area

Sunshine and warmer temperatures will bring more springlike weather to the South Plains today, and forecasters say wind speeds will be considerably less than the 30 to 40 mph gusts reported across the area Thursday.

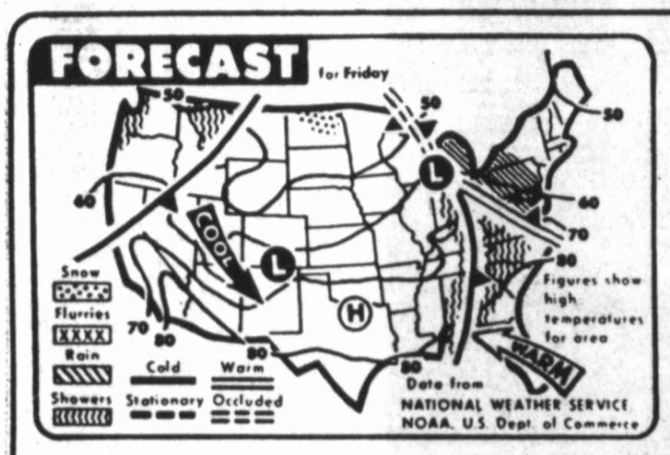
Although there is no rain in today's forecast, light rain fell from 30 miles north of New Mexico east to 15 miles south of Lubbock Thursday night as a weak upper level disturbance moved east at 35 mph.

Temperatures today will reach the lower 70s while readings tonight will dip to the lower 40s. Winds will be westerly at 10 to 15 mph.

A strong wind shift line moved into the Lubbock area shortly after 4 p.m. Thursday, increasing wind speeds to 43 mph, stirring dust and reducing visibilities.

At 6 p.m. Thursday, 46 mph winds and blowing dust were reported in Midland while shortly after 6 p.m., the wind was averaging 30 to 60 mph, gusting to 80 and 90 mph in Snyder. Shortly before 7 p.m., Don Cheek of the Snyder Police Department said no damages had been reported from the high winds.

At 6:40 p.m. the Potter County Sheriff's Office reported heavy rain at Interstate 40 and Lakeside Drive and the ground covered with marble-size hail. The storm was moving to the east at 20 mph.



WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are forecast today in the Pacific Northwest, western Montana, and from west Florida north into the Virginias, according to the National Weather Service. There it will blend into rain extending through the Lakes Area. Snow is due in North Dakota. (AP Laserphoto)

Terrorists Kill U.S. Soldier In Turkey

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Gunmen believed to be leftwing terrorists killed a U.S. serviceman and wounded another on a crowded street Thursday in Izmir, officials said.

Izmir Gov. Necdet Calp said a large force of police was mobilized for a manhunt that spread to shantytown areas of Izmir on Turkey's Aegean coast.

The slain serviceman was identified as Master Sgt. Edward A. Claypool, 23, of Richards, Mo. Wounded in the attack was Staff Sgt. Jeffrey P. Vail, 22, of Myrtle Beach, S.C. Vail was reported in satisfactory condition following surgery at a local hospital.

Officials said the masked gunmen fired from a speeding automobile at the soldiers, who were both in uniform and returning to their quarters from duty at the Tuslog (Turkish-U.S.-Logistics) offices annexed to the NATO base facing the bay of Izmir.

No organization claimed responsibility for the assassination, but police sources said they suspected an extreme left-wing underground group active in the province.

Police set up roadblocks on routes to the city, Turkey's third largest with over one million inhabitants.

Within hours, more than 10 persons were arrested on suspicion of participating in the ambush attack near the entrance to the local trade fair complex, officials said.

Police quoted witnesses as saying a Turkish-made sedan approached the fair complex and four men inside opened fire with automatic weapons, cutting down the two Americans. Officers said they recovered spent cartridges from a Russian-made automatic weapon.

Claypool died instantly of multiple bullet wounds, officials said. Vail, also shot several times, was first taken to a nearby American Hospital. Due to lack of surgery equipment, he was moved to a clinic of the Aegean University Hospital where he was reported in satisfactory condition following surgery to remove bullets in the upper parts of his body.

Police also said Claypool's car recently was smashed and windows of his residence broken by unknown assailants.

Officials said privately many extremist bands have shifted their activity to Izmir and other western Turkish regions unaffected by the martial law declared in 13 of Turkey's 67 provinces in December.

It was a rare armed attack against American military personnel attached to the NATO facility in Turkey.

In Washington, a Pentagon spokesman said there were about 40 minor incidents involving Americans in Turkey in 1978, but no reports of personal injuries.

Lubbock Man Injured In Air Mishap

A Lubbock man remained in critical condition Thursday night with injuries he suffered after he was forced to land his small plane Wednesday in an open field southwest of Spur.

James Strange Jr., 29, of 2717 Third St., No. 208, left Fort Worth at 7:30 a.m. Wednesday en route to Lubbock when his single-engine Beechcraft Bonanza apparently ran out of gas as he neared White River Lake.

The craft was found by investigators about 8:30 p.m., its nose buried in the field about 20 miles southwest of Spur, just inside Kent County.

Strange, however, already was undergoing treatment at Garza Memorial Hospital in Post by the time officials discovered his plane.

The pilot had been picked up about 1 1/2 hours earlier by a couple who was checking oil pumps on nearby leases. The couple drove the injured man to the W.W. McArthur ranch near Kalgary, where Department of Public Safety troopers and an ambulance from Spur were called.

Strange received emergency treatment at the Post hospital before being transferred to Lubbock.

Mrs. McArthur said Strange was conscious when he was brought to her residence, but that he appeared to be suffering from shock. She said he was unable to tell them why or when his craft went down.

Mrs. McArthur said the couple told her they had seen a plane fly over the area "a good while" before they spotted the injured pilot, who was the only occupant of the craft. The couple, however, said they did not hear a crash, she said.

DPS trooper Gary Briley of Post said it appeared the craft had run out of gas and that Strange was trying to make a forced landing on a county dirt road.

Wednesday's 40-mph wind gusts, however, apparently blew the craft off course, Briley said, and the plane landed about 75 feet off the dirt road. He said the small plane, which had its landing gear lowered, apparently spun around once before ending up on its nose.

Briley speculated that the craft had crashed several hours before officials were notified of its location.

He said his office was contacted by Lubbock DPS officials about 5:30 p.m. after they received a teletype that Strange's plane was overdue at Lubbock's Town and Country airport.

Teacher Pay Claims Disputed

When a cost-of-living differential is considered, the Texas average of $12,534 compares with the adjusted national average of $12,497, the governor told his weekly news conference.

Clements used the figures to support his claim that teachers are entitled to no more than a 5.1 percent annual raise. Teacher organizations also want step-up increases already provided by state law.

"Since the House of Representatives is scheduled to begin its consideration of the appropriations bill early next week, I feel duty-bound to clarify some of the facts surrounding the matter of pay raises and I want to correct a misleading representation being fostered about the national ranking of teacher salaries in Texas," Clements said.

The governor's budget staff used figures from the National Education Association to show Texas teachers are better paid than some believe, Clements said.

Staff members studied 13 cities around the country and compared their cost of living and statewide average teacher salaries to those of Dallas and Texas overall, he explained.

Only the base state pay was use to compute rankings, Clements said. Texas would compare more favorably if local salary supplements were included, he added.

"Whether they make $15,000 or $25,000 or $50,000 is not the discussion," the governor responded to questions of whether the salary average was adequate.

"The discussion, according to the Texas State Teachers Association, is that we were 37th or 38th in teacher salaries," he said. "For a nine-month job, that's a good average salary."

If the Legislature passes a budget with more than a 5.1 percent teacher pay raise, Clements said he would veto it.

"I have made this absolutely clear to Speaker Clayton, Lt. Gov. Hobby, Grant Jones and others in the Legislature," the governor repeated. "This proposal (5.1 percent) is reasonable and equitable with that given other state employees."

Governor Seeking Youth Home Solution

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Thursday he wants to find an overall solution to the problem of church-run youth homes — such as Lester Roloff's facilities — that resist state regulation.

"It's a question of how are we going to address the problem and not do injury to an institution that is doing good," Clements told a news conference.

The governor and Attorney General Mark White visited Roloff's Rebekah Home for Girls Tuesday in Corpus Christi.

"There is a service being performed, a very useful service," Clements said. "No one can go down there to that home and come away with any other impression."

He said the controversial evangelist is having second thoughts about not reporting an incident last July when five teenage-girls stabbed a sixth resident. The girl recovered but was not taken to a hospital.

Roloff said the five girls later accepted Christ as their savior and were now saved.

"I am confident Brother Roloff is having second thoughts about that decision," the governor said.

It is unfair to second-guess Roloff's decision not to notify authorities, Clements maintained.

"Ultimately, it depends on whether the (stabbed) child's parents want to make a charge or if the child wants to make a charge," he said.

Money Down Panama Drain?

SOME OF THE mish-mash, and added costs, of the Panama Canal giveaway are coming home to roost.

The resultant battle now shaping up in the House of Representatives over what the controversial treaties are really going to cost may find the administration winding up with egg on its face.

If implemented as Panama and the Carter administration interprets it, the treaties could wind up costing the U.S. taxpayers up to a possible $4 billion in subsidies, as well as loss of valuable equipment and property.

TO FORESTALL this, a Panama Canal measure headed for House action would cut Panama's profits and keep the canal under Pentagon direction until the Central Americans obtain the waterway in the year 2000.

The bill, necessary under the Constitution, implements the treaties by setting up a U.S.-controlled Panama Canal Commission to run the canal until Panama gets it.

The measure also provides for U.S. military operation of the canal in wartime and would put peacetime operations under the direction of the U.S. Secretary of Defense. It also would virtually wipe out $10 million worth of Panama's annual profits.

All of this, President Carter's people, as well as the Panamanian envoy to Washington, say would violate the treaty's spirit.

ONE HAS TO go back to last year's heated battle over the Panama pacts to understand fully what is at stake.

It will be recalled that one of the big "pitches" of Mr. Carter and his arm-twisting cohorts in the Senate was that implementation of the treaties "will not cost the American taxpayer one dollar..."

Last month, U.S. Amb. to Panama Ambler Moss appeared before the House Panama Canal Subcommittee and praised Panama for showing "a spirit of partnership in our common enterprise."

Rep. Bob Bauman, R-Md., a subcommittee member, who visited Panama sees it a bit differently—a gigantic rip-off to be blunt.

REP. BAUMAN has charged that from his findings in Panama, the administration has known all along that the implementation of the treaties, as envisioned by Panama, would be costly and that the administration was "either derelict or deliberately lied..."

Rep. Bauman says Panama claims the right to tax U.S. businesses in the Canal Zone retroactively to 1903, that Panamanian officials claim they are entitled to possess all movable equipment and property in the Canal Zone, that the Panamanians say the U.S. must bring up to usable condition all buildings to be turned over.

As things now stand, the new legislation blocking most of these provisions has been approved by the House Merchant Marine Committee. The measure now goes to the full House. Perhaps it is still not too late to salvage our tax dollars, if not our self-respect, from the whole Panama debacle.

AN EDITORIAL:

A Consumer 'Balancing' Act

TRYING TO FIND the proper balance between the rights of consumers and the rights of sellers is a delicate problem and one with which the Texas Legislature has wrestled for years.

Senators have approved and sent to the House a reform of the 1973 Consumer Protection Act reforms which, in the view of the 23-8 majority, went too far.

Opponents in the Senate complained that the 1979 measure "guts" the 1973 act and will turn loose on an unsuspecting public all manner of beady-eyed businessmen intent on cheating consumers out of their life savings.

IT IS UNFORTUNATE that the pendulum always seems to swing too far in one direction or another when it comes to trying to regulate by government decree relations between and among citizens.

Consumer protectionism was spawned by the same climate in America that produced street demonstrations on behalf of civil rights and against the war in Vietnam.

Swept up in the enthusiasm of the moment, with the Ralph Nader types painting the products of American manufacture as unsafe even standing still let alone at any speed, lawmakers put the consumer in the driver's seat.

They encouraged a plethora of litigation by dangling before dissatisfied consumers the sweet aroma of triple damages—and before the plaintiffs' lawyers the juicy prospect of fat contingency fees if they won their cases, even when the original amount in dispute was small.

Thus, in order to correct abuses by some makers and sellers of goods and services, the Legislature laid the businessman bare to what he soon came to believe was an unfair vulnerability to liability suits.

THE LATEST REFORMS approved by the Senate are intended to bring about a better balance between the parties in a dispute or lawsuit.

Consumers would have a harder burden of proof that they had been victimized by deceptive trade practices.

As a way to restore equal treatment of disputants under the law, and to remind consumers that they have a responsibility to protect themselves rather than expect Big Brother to do it for them, Sen. Bill Meier's Senate-passed measure appears worthy of House endorsement and the governor's signature into law.

M. STANTON EVANS:

'Sex-Ed' Involves More Than Just Smutty Talk

WASHINGTON—It's been a while since "sex education" was in the news, but the issue has by no means gone away.

On the contrary, the sex-ed promoters continue to vend their wares in schools around the country, and appear to have made substantial progress since the initial flare-ups on the topic.

As in disputes over busing, textbooks, etc., the social planning types have managed to hunker down and weather the original blast of public outrage, then returned in dogged fashion to their efforts once public notice got diverted elsewhere.

How far these efforts have proceeded—and the motivations behind them—are spelled out in an informative survey in the current issue of "The Public Interest."

JACQUELINE KASUN, professor of economics at Humboldt State University in California, examines the sex-ed programs conducted in her community, citing chapter and verse from the textbooks employed and instructions given. On at least three different levels, the picture is a disturbing one.

First, Prof. Kasun writes, the materials used are incredibly explicit. Beginning at very early ages, pupils are instructed in virtually every physical detail concerning sexual intercourse, including descriptions and discussions of genitalia, masturbation, homosexuality, etc.

In one sexuality class, high school students are called upon to draw pictures of male and female reproductive organs, then to compare these to pictures of the organs in question to gauge inaccuracies.

The physiology of the matter, however, is only the beginning.

SHE QUOTES several textbooks and study guides which stress the importance of having a purely "personal standard of sexual behavior."

Among the examples cited is a pamphlet from Planned Parenthood, recommended for high school use by Prof. Kasun's county health department. This document advises youthful readers, "If you feel sexy, for heaven's sake, admit it to yourself. If the feeling and tension bother you, you can masturbate. Masturbation cannot hurt you and it will make you feel more relaxed."

An article distributed by Planned Parenthood to high school teachers says "our society must strive to sanction and support various forms of intimacy between members of the same sex."

PHASE THREE of the program concerns the ultimate goals of the sex-ed promoters. As Prof. Kasun describes it, much more is involved here than smutty talk, or even "new morality" notions about sex.

What is at stake is nothing less than an attempted transformation of values at the most fundamental level, respecting such basic issues as the nature of human relationships, love and marriage, and the institution of the family.

The dominant theme that runs through much of this material is the desirability of separating sex from reproduction.

The common element uniting homosexuality, masturbation, and abortion—all recommended by the sex-ed promoters—is the fact that each forestalls the ultimate evil of having babies.

THE THING to be avoided, on the materials reviewed by Kasun, are pregnancy and further propagation of the human species.

This emphasis on population control is made explicit in the materials. Babies are derided as expensive, messy, and the source of great societal distress.

The population "explosion" is depicted as the "major problem of our times," while an official federal document touts sex education as a means to "effective fertility control."

In sum, says Prof. Kasun, a particular interest group with its own perception of the population "crisis" is using the sex-ed movement to hammer home its opinions to the young—usually with minimal in-put from parents.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Fission And Fusion

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—In the privacy of the White House, Jimmy Carter has put the Three Mile Island power plant accident and the surrounding hysteria into proper perspective with blunt language seldom heard from him by the public—and not likely to be heard in connection with nuclear power.

President Carter met with cabinet officers and other advisers April 3 for finishing touches on his energy message, only two days after he had gone to Pennsylvania.

He was confident of his facts, and of this conclusion: an airline passenger receives more radiation than the President had in inspecting the plant, but the news media was responsible for whipping up a frenzy. Carter left no doubt he still regards nuclear power as an indispensable energy option.

But the energy speech worked over that morning at the White House contained no such plain talk.

It is simply not Carter's style to publicly confront political difficulty, and key political advisers will urge him not to further alienate his party's left wing. Therein may lie much of what is wrong with the Carter presidency.

Actually, Carter always has been ambivalent on nuclear power. On the one hand the former naval atomic specialist has seen the necessity for a strong nuclear arm to the nation's energy program.

On the other hand, the party politician seeking to mollify the Democratic left wing has been chary about offending anti-nuclear activists.

But behind the scenes lately, the President has been resolving these contradictions in favor of the nuclear option.

WHILE IMPORTANT aides want to avoid clashing with anti-nuclear activists, Carter demonstrated a much different attitude when he joined his senior associates for the energy meeting at 9 a.m. Tuesday, April 3.

Unburdened by the indigestible prose of a committee-written speech, the President used the crisp diction of an engineer with the facts in hand.

He had been only 1,000 feet from the disabled core of the Three Mile Island reactor Sunday, said Carter, and had received less than one-third the radiation of a passenger on a commercial jetliner flying through the stratosphere.

What about Trade Ambassador Robert Strauss, someone asked, flying across the Atlantic on the high-priced Concorde?

Even worse, replied Carter, adding that a casual encounter with X-rays in a doctor's office generates far more radiation than his visit to Pennsylvania.

WHY THEN ALL the fuss? The President told his advisers he holds media coverage, particularly television, largely responsible for widespread public anxiety.

Among adjectives used Tuesday morning in referring to this coverage were "exaggerated," "irresponsible" and "outrageous."

Moreover, the President and cabinet members agree that if the anti-nuclear movement capitalizes on this opportunity, the calamitous effects on energy would dwarf the impact of the Iranian revolution.

U.S. nuclear power—on line, under construction and planned—amounts to 5 million barrels of oil a day, the entire production of pre-revolutionary Iran.

The President then turned to his energy speech, which contained little on this subject and referred to energy produced by "fission and fusion," a mouthful difficult for Carter or anybody else to pronounce.

It was explained that this was a euphemism for "nuclear," which quickly has become politically taboo.

THE ENERGY message was supposed to include much more than the mere word "nuclear."

Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger had made progress on two fronts: first, in convincing the nuclear power industry to drop its insistence on fast breeder reactors and go along with the President on light water reactors; second, in whittling away at the President's political inhibitions over nuclear power.

Even after the Pennsylvania accident, Schlesinger insisted that plans to ease licensing of nuclear power plants must go forward.

"That was not very smart," commented a presidential aide, suggesting that Schlesinger once more revealed his political naivete.

One senior White House aide, apparently unaware of the President's views, told us the problem was not exaggeration by TV but cover-up by the power company.

These murmurs reflect the new lease on life the Pennsylvania accident has given Ralph Nader, Jane Fonda and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. in fighting nuclear power.

ANDREW TULLY:

Double Dribble

WASHINGTON—Sometimes you have no choice. You put on your best Supreme Court manner, polish up some pear-shaped syllables, and sit down to the typewriter to launch a bolt from your personal Sinai.

The subject is over-emphasis of high school sports, especially in football and basketball. I'm against it, and was all set to say so in sulphuric language.

But Dave Kindred, a sports columnist for the Washington Post, beat me to it. The job he did may well stand as the definitive commentary on a national coldsore. Let me share it with you.

Kindred's column has as its leading man a 17-year-old named Koco Eaton, who used to play basketball for Washington's De Matha High, one of the country's top-notch secondary learning factories.

HE USED to play basketball, that is, until as a senior last fall he was cut from the squad so the coach (incidentally, a man of considerable class) could bring up some promising lower classmen.

But it's Kindred's day in this space. Please read on, as he quotes young Koco:

"...I was in what is called an existential vacuum. A feeling of worthlessness. I couldn't sleep that night. One whole part of my life had been amputated...That feeling of not being worth anything ran-rampant."

And now Kindred, writing: "They played the Capital Classic last night. That is an all-star game for high school basketball players. Some 19,035 people paid to see kids 17-18 years old.

"SUCH GAMES are proliferating. They are an aberration of what high school basketball ought to be all about and someone should stop them.

To Kindred, "It isn't that important. Koco Eaton knows. He learned painfully." Koco phoned Kindred. He said he wanted to tell other guys that the end of basketball was not the end of the world.

Said Koco: "For me, it pretty much was—for a moment. But I found strength in my family. You won't find me passing out flowers in church, but I did pray a lot...

"That really ugly feeling of worthlessness lasted only a day...I decided I was not a failure."

Now Kindred again: "Not a failure? For crying out loud, he is on the verge of success that some of these Capital Classic hotshots will never know. Koco Eaton ranks sixth in a class of 235...

HIS FATHER is a chemist and his mother a biochemist, and Koco aims to be a pediatrician—after winning a Rhodes scholarship, that is.

Koco Eaton: "I'd love to play basketball in college (he's 6-foot-5 and 205 pounds) but I've applied to some six-year medical programs and if I get in one, there'd be no time. Basketball would be a thing I used to do."

Writes Kindred: "He said it firmly and without pain."

What's left for me to say, except that the college that gets Koco Eaton will get somebody special. In the money-mad world of such promotions as the Capital Classic, he found a sense of values.

JAY HARRIS:

A Deadly Blow...

ALTHOUGH MOST persons regard earth's weather as quiet and nice, the truth is that the elements often play a "spoiler" role for millions.

Whether it is a drouth in the Midwest wheat belt, a monsoon in India, a series of tornadoes in Texas or a hurricane on the Gulf, weather can be both a boon and a killer.

Quite often in the nation's history it has been the latter.

We have just witnessed the unbridled destruction which the savage winds of a tornado can cause. The tragedy which hit Wichita Falls, Vernon, Lawton and other communities in the Texas-Oklahoma Red River Valley can't be measured in dollars and cents alone.

Nor can the eventual recovery from such devastation. Lubbock residents, despite the passage of almost nine years since a similar tragedy, can sympathize, pray with and at the same time hold out the message of hope for those in the storm area.

IRONICALLY, THE following words appeared in this paper little more than a month ago:

"The storm came right up the street, peeling up houses, cement, people, poles, anything and everything. Peeling it all up like you would peel a potato. I don't know how I got out, how I lived at all."

Those were the words of a dazed survivor of a series of twisters which swept through three Midwest states on March 18-19, 1925, taking the lives of 746 persons. That still stands as the worst tornado toll in the nation.

In the half century since that catastrophe, thousands of persons have been killed and damage has soared into the billions as a result of the vicious, swirling storms which annually rake an area from the Southwest to the Atlantic.

IT WAS ONLY a month ago that the National Weather Service warned that tornadoes this year would take another 100 lives if 1979 turned out to be "normal."

Almost that entire total has been chalked up in the blow at Vernon, Wichita Falls and Lawton and the season is just getting underway. In making its grim forecast, the NWS said tornado deaths could be reduced by keeping the public informed, and by the public reacting in a calm, objective manner.

But, the destruction was so complete in Wichita Falls that many of those who thought they had found safety still were killed or injured. The Wichita Falls storm, like the "mega-twister," or twisters, which hit Lubbock, was unusually wide and cut a swath 6 miles long.

Last year, only 53 Americans died in tornadoes. NWS officials had feared the low toll might lull some into a false security.

IN LOOKING at the current season, NWS officials say they expect some 700 tornadoes in the U.S. from March through June, with almost all states vulnerable. In 1978, a total of 788 twisters touched down in 42 states.

One of the more massive outbreaks of tornadoes, and one of the more damaging since that killer 50 years ago, occured in an 18-hour period in April 1974.

In that period, some 148 tornadoes struck in 13 states, and Canada, leaving 313 dead, 6,000 injured and damages of more than $600 million. Among the hardest hit points were Xenia and Dayton, Ohio, Louisville, Ky., and in Alabama.

The weather service says the 1974 disaster was spawned by "one of the most violent meteorological episodes in U.S. history." The third most destructive series of storms was on Palm Sunday April 11, 1965, when 30 twisters took 256 lives in five states.

WEATHER EXPERTS have learned much about the unusual, swirling winds in recent years and are now able to forecast with a great degree of accuracy areas most likely to be hit in a given period.

It is the "maxi-tornadoes," giant funnels with winds of more than 200-mph and which stay on the ground for more than 30 miles which cause the most deaths and damage, NWS officials say.

While such "giants" account for only about three percent of all twisters, they cause about 90 percent of the tornado deaths. Both the Lubbock and Wichita Falls storms were in this category.

Tornadoes are spawned in hot, humid air and occur most frequently in areas east of the Rocky Mountains. States most often hit include Oklahoma, Kansas, Texas, Missouri, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Florida.

NWS OFFICIAL Herbert Lieb says the twisters are a world-wide problem.

He says there are frequent reports of the storms in such diverse places as India, Australia and Europe, where they are sometimes referred to as cyclones. But, they occur most often in the United States.

"No other country has as many tornadoes as the U.S.," Lieb says. "The ingredients that a tornado needs are more frequently found here than in other parts of the globe."

More and more, scientists are learning what set of circumstances spawn the deadly twisters. In addition to hot, humid weather, an eerie green sky often is a hint of things to come. Rapidly swirling clouds, towering several miles into the sky often are fertile breeding places. Heavy hail and unusual, heavy lightning also are hallmarks.

There is no "guaranteed safe" spot to hide, perhaps, short of a bomb shelter, dugout or basement. But, certain precautions can be taken. In the Lubbock Tornado, it was learned that the center of a building or house, preferably under a mattress, in a closet or inner room offers some degree of protection. Never, never stay in a car, or a mobile home. Be wary, don't panic. And pray.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

WIDOWS IN New Guinea during mourning wear strings of coconut shells around their necks. The shells are filled with rotten lard. The odor supposedly serves as a warning to the men thereabouts that such widows don't want undue romantic attention at this time. Or such used to be the custom, any rate. Maybe still is.

The literal meaning of "diamond" is "indestructible."

Women in general bruise more easily than men, and blond women bruise more easily than brunette women.

Insurance Agencies Besieged By Claims

blowing dust brought the uncomfortable outdoors inside.

But the Fites, both of whom are in their 70s, must stay in their home.

"If we leave our apartment and looters come in, we don't collect one penny worth of insurance," Mrs. Fite explained.

"We've got to stay."

That stay, uncomfortable as it will be, will last at least through the weekend because the Fites cannot find anyone to move their belongings to the new apartment they rented until at least Monday.

The apartment, which they found after making about 20 unproductive phone calls, was snapped up sight unseen. The price tag is $550 a month for the unfurnished two-bedroom abode.

"That's all we could do," Mrs. Fite said. "And now we can't get anyone to move us."

The apartment complex they are in has been condemned because of the extensive damage. But they will stay until they can move, which is when they will get their insurance claim filed.

Many Wichita Falls residents are in the same situation. Motels, hotels and vacant apartments are scarce. Transportation is difficult because of wrecked cars.

Some have no clothing, others, no food and many, no cash.

The result is a rush to the insurance claims adjusters.

The rush, which started Wednesday afternoon as the residents shook off the numbing effects of their tragedies, quickly stepped up by Thursday morning.

An Avalanche-Journal survey of several city insurance offices revealed that most have set up disaster teams and have flown in extra adjusters to handle the onslaught of claimants.

Delmar England, an adjuster for Allstate Insurance Company, said "people are lined up" for advances on their claims.

Allstate and all other companies contacted said they will make advances so the homeless can rent hotel rooms, buy clothing, food and other necessities.

"If people need them, we're going to do it," England said. Asked how the people were responding to the financial impact of their personal tragedy, he said, "I don't think they're really out of shock yet."

Betty Evans, office secretary of Continental Insurance Co., said there are, "hundreds and hundreds" of people at the office.

That also was the story at Williams-Dwyer, which handles insurance for seven major United States companies.

Louis Bloodworth Jr., manager of the insurance company, said, "Quite a number of people are walking in" and have done so since Wednesday, less than 24 hours after the deadly tornado struck.

The telephone service to Williams-Dwyer was restored late Thursday morning, and within 90 minutes "very heavy telephone traffic" started, he said.

Bloodworth said the company has been filling out claims reports for people who have not even inquired about them. He explained that because the company knows the heavily damaged areas in which houses were completely destroyed, his office is filling out the claims in anticipation.

At the State Farm Insurance Agency, adjusters are advancing claimants living money and advising them to inventory their houses room by room, noting all insured items that are gone as well as those damaged.

John Webb, manager of the State Farm office, said the adjusters are "trying to get to the severe and most hardship cases first. If it is total loss," he said, he will try to get to those people first to try to get them some money.

"We hope for the cooperation and understanding of everyone else," he said.

Mrs. Evans echoed his concern for patience on the part of other claimants.

"Everyone be patient," should be the watchword of the agencies, she said. Because there are so many claims on so many types of items such as homes, autos and personal belongings, she and England said, it will be quite a while before all the paperwork can be processed.

"There's no telling how long it's going to take," England added.

For those who have not made it to the insurance agencies yet, there are banks ready to help.

Nadell McGlaughn, administrative officer of First Wichita National Bank, said the bank "stands ready to help everyone in any way."

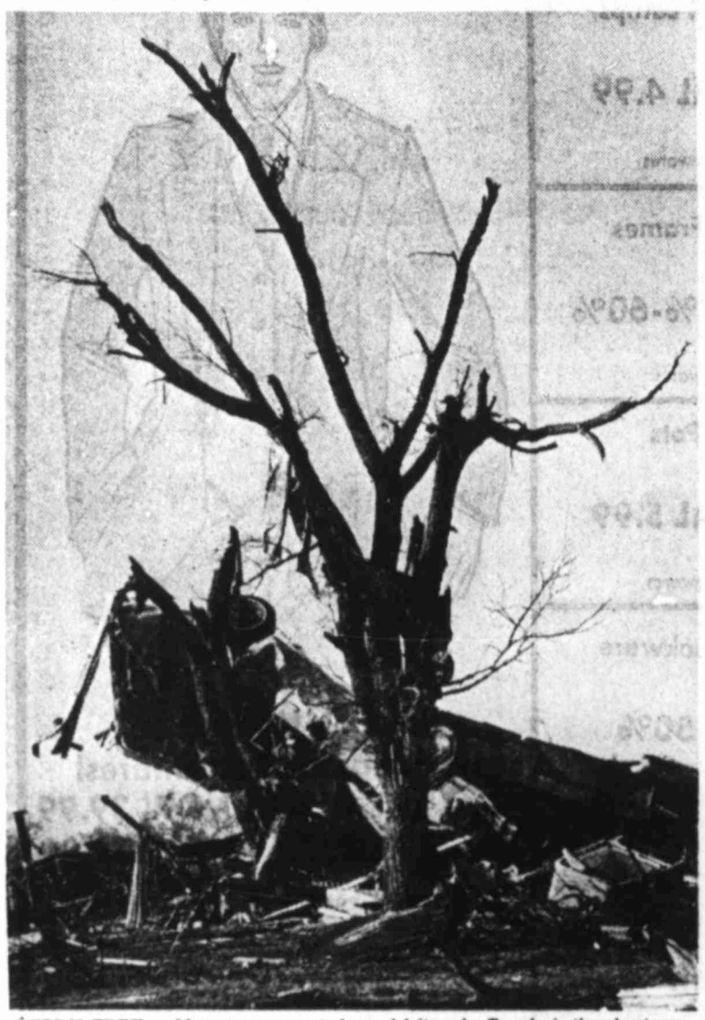
The bank was closed for regular business Wednesday, handling only emergency activities, she said. But today First Wichita, as well as the city's other banks, is open for business as usual.

Wichitans are taking advantage of the chance to cash checks for money to buy gasoline and food.

Spokesmen at American National Bank and City National Bank agreed with Mrs. McGlaughn that more people than usual were cashing checks or taking money out of their accounts. Mrs. McGlaughn also said First Wichita is honoring checks from customers of Southwest National Bank, which was levelled by the tornado.

Out-of-town work crews in Wichita Falls to clear debris also can cash checks at the bank, she said.

The Federal Reserve Bank in Dallas has representatives at Wichita Falls banks to help with the expected rash of customers, she said.



DEBRIS TREE — Many trees, swept clean of foliage by Tuesday's thunderstorms, took on new and unnatural coats of debris. Search For Bodies Continues Unchecked

By TRAVIS BROWN

WICHITA FALLS — Homeless residents here continued searching Thursday for salvageable possession in the ruins of their houses.

Another group of searchers, however, looked for something they didn't want to find — dead bodies.

The bodies of six victims of the tornado were recovered by search teams Wednesday. Those bodies increased the fatality count to 43 persons

Police Thursday reported only one body recovered by searchers. A man's body was found in the rubble of a house that had already been searched once.

Searchers found the body with the aid of a bulldozer, which was used to dissect the heap of lumber, bricks and cars.

Wichita Falls Mayor Kenneth Hill predicted that many more bodies will be discovered.

"We're going to find numerous other casualties," the mayor said. "I can't see all these buildings being as flat as they are and not finding more bodies. Many people took shelter in bathrooms when the tornado hit. But if the bathrooms are gone, where are all the people?"

The mayor said that the city will not begin to keep a list of missing persons until 48 hours after the disaster occurred, which will be this evening.

"But we haven't had many calls from people looking for anyone," he said. "This is a good sign."

Thursday, search parties were investigating reports of two possible bodies. One was thought to be under the ruins of a grain elevator.

What may have been another body was spotted by searchers under a mountain of smashed autos and steel beams.

Searchers saw what appeared to be a woman's head far back in a crevice under the rubble. A bulldozer was being used to push the debris apart.

Most of the people killed by the tornado were in their cars when they died, said Mark Wilson, Civil Defense director.

Wilson said there was a tremendous volume of traffic on several major streets that lay in the path of the tornado.

Most of these vehicles were trying to escape the tornado, Wilson said. But many drivers were confused and were driving in the direction the tornado was going, and not out of its path, he said.

Wilson said he was in his car driving in the area the tornado hit. He said he was caught in a jam of panic drivers, but he was able to drive out of the tornado's path.

The Wichita Falls mayor said that 20 percent of the area stricken by the twister has not been searched.

Three search teams of about 15 members each were searching for a second time through the most severely damaged area today.

The search teams were comprised of an array of officials from almost every state and local agency. Medical examiners accompanied each search party.

Officials said it may be days before bulldozers can dig through the rubble.

WANTED: WOMENSWEAR

Women have stepped up their purchases of clothing in recent years, observes The Conference Board. Outlays for female apparel rose by 4.2 percent annually (not counting inflation) over the past 10 years. Sales of both menswear and consumer goods in general increased much slower. Spurring the trend is the rise in working women, who need a larger wardrobe than those staying at home and have more money to pay for it. Also important are the growing number of young adults,

Planning Shattered By Tornado's Fury

By TRAVIS BROWN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WICHITA FALLS — Before Tuesday's tornado, city fathers here thought they were well prepared to meet any disaster.

They had scores of volunteers organized to cope with any situation.

Supplies were ready for refugee centers and the city had provisions stored to supply the homeless with food, shelter and dry clothing.

A week before disaster struck, the city's emergency corps even held a disaster drill. Volunteers practiced removing the injured from rubble.

But all the city's plans had to be scrapped when the tornado hit. Because of an electrical blackout, city officials were unable to fight the disaster.

All the city's rescue plans hinged on commands issued by radio from police headquarters, said Mark Wilson, civil defense director. The tornado, however, ripped up the city's main electrical trunk line.

City Blacked Out

The entire city was blacked out, and in the police station, those expected to command sat silently before dead radios.

Without radio communication, the distribution of supplies to refugee centers was delayed, Wilson said.

Wilson said the city did not have adequate auxilliary generators that it needed. He organized a group of ham radio operators to relay commands to the areas hit by the tornado.

Total Blackout Discounted

Wilson admitted that the city's rescue plans had excluded the possibility of a total electrical blackout.

"We had to be realistic," Wilson said. "How often does a tornado hit here? The last one was 14 years ago."

Wilson said the tough competition for dollars from the city budget resulted in the absence of the necessary auxiliary generators.

"It's very diffucult to fight for an $80,000 generator that may never be used, when you are competing against a new water plant," Wilson said. "When you're in a contest like that, you know who's going to win."

Despite the communication problems, the confusion and delays were held to a minimum because of the use of ham radio operators, Wilson said.

Wichita Falls Mayor Kenneth Hill said Thursday the loss of electricty was "a blessing in disguise."

"We were lucky, because if the tornado had hit and the electricty was still on, we would have had fires everywhere, and probably persons electrocuted," Hill said.

Generators Elsewhere

The mayor said the city had enough auxiliary generators. But he added that they were not where they were needed when the tornado hit.

The tornado also knocked out water service for the entire city and limited phone service severely.

By late Thursday, 90 percent of electrical service had been restored, Hill said. Telephone service was operating at 50 percent capacity.

All sections of the city had water Thursday but many broken water lines made the pressure low. City officials also warned people to boil water before drinking because of possible contamination.

44 Named As Twister Fatalities

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Public Safety has released the names of 44 persons known to be victims of the tornado in Wichita Falls and of 11 persons known dead at Vernon.

But, Wichita Falls Mayor Kenneth Hill said late Thursday that three more bodies were retrieved from the rubble, which brings the death toll there to 47.

The mayor's office also is expected to release the number of persons still missing after the storm, and some estimated that number may reach as high as several hundred.

The death list as of Thursday afternoon:

Looters Hardly Wait For Dust To Settle

By PAT R. TEAGUE

WICHITA FALLS (UPI) — For some residents of Wichita Falls, the horror of an Easter Week tornado didn't stop when the black roaring wind finally moved back into the clouds.

After the dark funnel was gone the black night descended on the ravaged city, and with it dark figures that lurked outside destroyed homes — hanging back until they could tell if anyone were alive within.

"I stayed here the first night and there were people walking around who didn't belong," said Randolph Duke, sitting with a shotgun in the rubble of his home to protect what little was left of it.

"Three guys came across the ditch at the rear of this property. I stopped them with my shotgun and told them they'd better get back across or ... well, I didn't have to explain with that shotgun."

Duke's wife said she watched from the dark house as vans and pickup trucks roamed the streets at will.

City officials said looting began within minutes of when the tornado lifted. Emergency ordinances were passed and extra police patrols were put on duty. The National Guard was mobilized to walk the streets of the damaged areas.

Even those patrols, however, didn't stop all the looting.

Down the street in his hard-hit middle class neighborhood, Duke said, one man searched the rubble of his home and found a priceless gun collection. He said he left the collection and a television outside his home and walked up the street to get a pickup.

"When he got back it was gone," Duke said.

A block away a woman said her son and some of his fraternity brothers were staying at her house. She said she had found family pictures, heirlooms and rings left untouched by tornado but now had nowhere to keep them.

Victims Cause Backlog For Funeral Directors

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WICHITA FALLS — Wichita Falls tornado survivors are tallying their dead but not burying them yet.

With the confirmed death toll at 43 and expected to rise as more debris is sifted, two Wichita Falls funeral homes are acting as temporary morgues and as funeral arrangers.

The work is backlogging.

Zetta Bryan of Owens-Brumley Funeral Home said, "The (morticians) haven't been to bed yet."

"They worked all night long" after the tornado by the light of candles and Coleman lamps to handle the deluge of victims, she said.

The funeral home so far has received 25 bodies, all of which have been identified.

Most of the families have made tentative arrangements but no funerals or burials have been arranged and probably won't be until "everything kind of gets settled down," she said.

That probably will be Friday at the earliest, said Bob Hampton of Hampton-Vaughn Funeral Home.

Funeral services for about half of the 16 victims at Hampton-Vaughn have been arranged, he said, with the earliest slated for Friday.

Morticians at the funeral home, which also serves as the city's temporary morgue, used three gas-powered generators for light to process the bodies.

Water had to be imported in bottles to Owens-Brumley, and water was pumped from a tank to Hampton-Vaughn.

Bodies were taken directly from the sites of death, except for one woman, Sanona Stone, a victim who died at Wichita General Hospital Wednesday and whose body was taken to Owens-Brumley.

Three persons, two women between 45-50, and one between 50-60, remained unidentified at the funeral home today.

WAR ZONE? — The Candlewood Trailer Park in Wichita Falls resembles a war zone, with the presence of the military and debris, but Mother Nature won the only battle fought here. Members of the National Guard cruise the area guarding against looters, although in the case of the trailer park there is little left worth looting. City officials have placed damage estimated in the millions. (Staff photo by Milton Adams).

Davis Murder-For-Hire Trial Sent To Fort Worth

HOUSTON (AP) — The judge who currently has jurisdiction over industrialist Cullen Davis' murder-for-hire case said Thursday he will send the case back to Fort Worth.

The presiding judge in the Fort Worth district can then decide to move it elsewhere if he desires, said State District Judge Wallace Moore after a hearing with lawyers for the state and Davis.

Davis was tried in Moore's court on charges he tried to have the judge in his divorce case killed. A three-month trial ended in a hung jury. The jury vote was 8-4 in favor of conviction.

The defense claimed the inordinate amount of publicity in Harris County made it impossible for Davis to get a fair trial here. The prosecution wants the case to remain in Houston.

"I think it's a mistake to move it out of Harris County," Assistant Tarrant County District Attorney Jack Strickland said.

However, he said he did not expect the trial to be held in Fort Worth.

"Presumeably somebody will file a motion for a change of venue in Fort Worth. There would be no one more suprised in the state of Texas than I would if it were tried in Fort Worth," the prosecutor said.

At a hearing Thursday, prosecutors introduced as evidence the voting roll of Harris County, containing the names of almost one million people.

However, defense lawyer Phil Burleson called two Houston lawyers to the stand to back his claim that the trial should be moved.

The first attorney to testify was Michael Ramsey who said, "The probability is very high that Cullen Davis could not receive a fair trial in Harris County.

"It would be very hard for him to find a fair trial anywhere in Texas," he said.

City Council Approves Increase For EMS Emergency Runs

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock city council members approved higher rates for Emergency Medical Service runs Thursday, but vetoed the idea that EMS units operate out of city fire stations still occupied by the fire department.

However EMS units may be housed in a soon-to-be vacated fire station at 30th Street and Texas Avenue if city and Lubbock County Hospital District officials can agree on the amount of rent to be charged.

A debate between the council and LCHD officials about the city helping fund the heavily subsidized ambulance service failed to materialize.

However LCHD board chairman Jack Strong emphasized he still thinks the city ought to fund the ambulance service.

"Of course that's my feeling, but that's not what we're here for," Strong said.

But the council's fear that allowing EMS units to use city fire stations would lead to a city takeover of the ambulance service was an underlying reason for the council's objection to the hospital district's suggestion.

Strong told the council the hospital district and the city both are "spending taxpayers' money," and that allowing EMS units to use city fire stations would lessen the taxpayers' burden.

The hospital district was especially interested in renting the 30th and Texas station, which will be closed early this summer when a new central fire station is completed. Strong said EMS units have to abandon their operation from West Texas hospital June 1 and the district is searching for a site in the same vicinity.

Also, Strong said the hospital district was interested in using other fire stations in the future, particularly the station located at 50th Street and Utica Avenue.

"We'd pay our own way and it would save us from having to build a new building," Strong said. "We'd pay our own way, but use existing facilities."

The hospital district's only alternative in Southwest Lubbock is to purchase a mobile home for approximately $10,000 and place it on the site of a community center owned by Lubbock County.

Although council members seemed concerned about the hospital district's dilemma, they still opposed the use of city fire stations by EMS.

"We live in fear of getting a piece of the action (paying for the service)," Mayor Dirk West said. The fire stations are not designed to house the ambulances and have no space for the added personnel and equipment, he said.

Fire Chief Tom Foster also opposed the suggestion, saying it's been tried elsewhere unsuccessfully.

"Those people in the stations are under the control of the fire chief," he said, adding that the EMS attendants would "not be under my control."

In other cities where the cohabitation has been tried it's been "real sad situations," Foster said.

He likened it to living with in-laws. "Two to three days is as long as you can do it and still remain friends. We want to keep them (EMS personnel) our friends."

"If we put it under the control of the fire department, we put it in the city budget and that's when I get nervous," West said.

Strong said he recognized the potential problems of EMS units operating from fire stations, but said he is "grasping at straws. I'm looking for something that will save taxpayer's money.

"I'm willing to listen to anything that will give us better response time."

Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan suggested the possibility that the hospital district be permitted to use city land, but that would necessitate either construction or purchase of a building.

"We're trying to get away from capital improvements," Strong said.

LCHD executive director Gerald Bosworth ominously warned the council that EMS service may have to be reduced if the hospital district has to pay rent on future locations and "if we are not able to increase revenue beyond what is projected."

The hospital district pays no rent on the West Texas Hospital EMS site.

The higher EMS rates approved by the council would increase the base charge more than 28 percent from $45 to $60 and hike other fees even more steeply.

Bosworth said the higher rates are needed in an attempt to recoup what EMS services actually cost the hospital district.

However, Bosworth said, if the hospital district had collected all it was owed last year "we would still be $100,000 short."

Council members questioned Bosworth regarding EMS collections and he said several changes, including the use of credit cards, had been instituted with the hope that collections will improve.

"As the budget is not able to keep pace with inflation," Bosworth said the hospital district will have to reduce service.

The council members also okayed initial talks about an interconnect between Lubbock Power & Light and Southwestern Public Service.

Another request by the Electric Utility Board for a feasibility study on future generation needs for LP&L also was approved.

This afternoon the council was to hold its annual paving hearing.

TAXI PROTEST

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Taxi drivers protesting the arrest of a colleague blocked streets with their cabs and caused huge traffic jams Thursday in the narrow streets of Amsterdam's 17th-century city center, a police spokesman said. The cabby was arrested when he failed to obey an officer's order to remove his taxi from a no-stopping area in front of the central railroad station. But before being taken in he called other cabbies by radio, police said. He was released about noon, two hours after his arrest, and traffic was reported normal an hour later.

Five Earth Family Members Struck By Storm Disaster

Five members of an Earth family including a former Lubbock resident, en route to Electra to visit a relative, were in the path of the tornado which struck Vernon at about 3:50 p.m. Tuesday.

Vivian Lorene Kelley, 53, was dead at the scene and four others traveling in the Mercury Cougar, including an infant, are in two different hospitals with injuries suffered when the twister hit their automobile on the highway.

Reports from family members indicate the injured victims were found in scattered areas and that the car was not found until at least 24 hours after the incident.

Mrs. Kelley's husband, Chester, 64, was reported in critical condition Thursday in Wichita Falls General Hospital suffering from internal injuries.

The couple's son, John, 25, was also in Wichita Falls General Hospital with a broken arm and eye injuries.

His 23-year-old wife, Vicki Eubanks Kelley, formerly of Lubbock and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Eubanks, was in stable condition with hed injuries in Jackson County Memorial Hospital in Altus, Okla. Her 5-month-old daughter, Sarah, was in good condition in the same hospital suffering from injuries including two fractured arms.

The family was about 20 miles from its destination when the twister hit Vernon, killing 10, in addition to Mrs. Kelley. One unidentified person was killed at Harrold, mid-way between Vernon and Wichita Falls. About 70 persons were reported injured in Vernon where the tornado flattened a half-mile path through the city of 11,500 residents.

Services for Mrs. Kelley will be at 2:30 p.m. today at Earth First Baptist Church with the Rev. David Burum officiating. Burial will be in Earth Cemetery under the direction of Parsons-Ellis-Singleton Funeral Home.

Mrs. Kelley, whose maiden name was Park, married Chester Kelley May 18, 1940, in Eldorado, Okla. She had been a resident of Earth since 1941 where she was a member of the First Baptist Church.

Survivors, in addition to those injured in the tornado, include a son, Dewitt of Earth; three daughters, Mrs. Bob Landis and Mrs. Sam Allison, both of Clovis, N.M., and Mrs. Donnie Stevens of Goldsmith; her mother, Helen Steele of Electra; four sisters, Jo Ann Thurman of Fort Worth, Mary Wallace of Quanah, Jean Largent of Houston and Geraldene Burkhart of Electra; two brothers, Leo Park of Earth and Bill Park of Dallas; and 11 other grandchildren.

Firewoman Turns Down Job Offers

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Firewoman Linda Eaton turned down four higher paying jobs Thursday and said she was ready for a drawn-out court fight to win the right to breastfeed her baby during unscheduled work time.

"I am prepared to go through a long legal battle if that's what it must be to get this thing settled," Miss Eaton told reporters. "I think I can hold up. We're going on about our lives but it's very disruptive."

The city offered Miss Eaton employment as a bus driver, maintenance worker, animal control officer or police dispatcher. The hourly wages of the other jobs ranged from $4.61 to $4.78. She is paid $4.08 an hour as a firefighter.

Her attorneys, Jane Eikleberry and Clara Oleson, turned down all of the city's offers.

Susan Hester, president of the Johnson County-Iowa City chapter of the National Organization for Women, called on the City Council to intervene and settle the Eaton case before a month long conciliation period set by the Iowa Civil Rights Commission ends May 4.

The city's proposed settlement, offered to Miss Eaton and her attorneys April 4 and made public Thursday, upholds Fire Chief Robert Keating's authority over his department and offers Miss Eaton three alternatives to breast-feeding her son at the fire station.

Iranian Government Dumps U.S. Navy Training Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new Iranian government has canceled a program under which the U.S. Navy has been training Iranian sailors to operate U.S.-supplied ships and shore facilities, Pentagon spokesman Thomas Ross said Thursday.

He said 800 Iranian naval students are expected to return home in May.

He said he has no knowledge how many, if any, may have asked for asylum in the United States on political or any other grounds. The training programs originated under the now-ousted government of the shah, who sought to make Iran a major naval power in the Persian Gulf and the Indian Ocean areas.

The Pentagon spokesman recalled that the Bakhtiar government, which followed the shah's departure and was itself overturned by the Ayatollah Khomeini's Islamic revolution, had canceled four new destroyers and two diesel-powered submarines that Iran had planned to buy from the United States.

The Bakhtiar government notified this country in February that it was canceling $7 billion out of $12 billion in outstanding, as yet undelivered, military equipment orders.

Since then, top Iranian officials have been quoted from Tehran as saying they intended to wipe out virtually all pending arms purchases from the United States, Britain and West Germany.

But Ross said the United States has received no formal notification beyond the $7 billion in cancellations and that the remaining $5 billion is still regarded as on the books.

He also said that there have been no recent discussions with the Iranians on an Iranian proposal to sell back to the United States 78 advanced F-14 fighters, their sophisticated Phoenix missiles and highly secret electronic-guidance devices. The United States is interested in the possibility of such a repurchase, Ross indicated.

The Pentagon said there also are 52 Iranian army personnel in military schools in the United States, but that none has been recalled home by their government.

Figures on Iranian air force students in the United States were not immediately available.

Reported Kidnapping Investigated

City police and Amarillo investigators are looking for a 22-year-old man believed to have been kidnapped at gunpoint from his home Tuesday night.

James Keith Stallings of 1115-B 41st St. was last seen about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday by his wife. She told police here that two white men, one about 25 and the other in his early 30s, came to the couple's home and forced her husband to go with them.

The wife told detectives in Lubbock that one of her husband's abductors came to the front door and the other man, brandishing a pistol, broke through a back entrance.

She said the intruders told Stallings they wanted $850 cash and $150 in drugs, or they were going to take him to Plainview to see another man. The abductors told Mrs. Stallings her husband would be home within six hours and promised not to kill him, according to Lubbock Det. Ted Daniels.

Stallings had not been seen since.

Lubbock police were not aware of the reported kidnapping until Wednesday afternoon when they received word from Amarillo detectives that Stallings had called his mother there.

Stallings reportedly called his mother Wednesday and asked if she would loan him between $1,000 and $1,300 cash. His mother told authorities her son said he was in Amarillo, but not say where in the city.

Stallings' mother and his sister, also of Amarillo, told police they feel the Lubbock man was being held by force. Det. Gary Richards, who is investigating the alleged abduction in Amarillo, could not be reached Thursday afternoon.

The missing man's wife was contacted by Lubbock police after they learned of the incident. She told them she called the police department here after her husband left with the two suspect, and that she waited for an officer at a grocery store at 50th Street and Avenue H.

She said, however, that she waited for about an hour, but went home after no policeman showed up. After checking records, city police learned Stallings' wife did ask to see an officer Tuesday night, but the location they had for the meeting was at a convenience store at 47th Street and Avenue H.

The officer dispatched to that location reported that he could not find the complainant.

Mobile Home Removed From Sales Location

Lubbock police Thursday were investigating a case of theft in which the perpetrator obviously didn't walk off with the loot in his pocket.

Police said someone drove off with a 14-foot by 56-foot mobile home.

The home, worth $12,500, was removed from the 1607 N. University Ave. lot of Hi-Lo Mobile Homes, according to Russell Taylor of that firm.

Burglars also struck other transportation-related locations early Thursday, including the truck lot of Gene Messer Ford, 3100 Ave. H.

Burglars cut through several padlocks to remove 13 sets of tires and wheels from trucks sitting in the lot, according to police reports.

The wheels and tires together were worth about $1,300, and several hundred dollars in damages were done to the locks, the reports said.

Mary Helen Elverz told police Thursday she was shopping in the K-Mart at 3201 Ave. Q Tuesday when someone took her purse from her shopping cart.

Intruders ransacked Eustacio Padron's house at 3005 Duke early Thursday and took a TV set, said police reports. The set was worth about $120.

A 19-year-old Lubbock man is in serious condition at West Texas Hospital after undergoing surgery Thursday after he was stabbed at a convenience store at Fourth Street and Avenue H.

David Lorenzo Rivera, 19, of 4312 Southeast Drive, told police he was jumped by three Mexican-American men as he walked out of the store about 5:30 a.m. Thursday. He said one of the suspects stabbed him once in the abdomen.

Police were still seeking Rivera's attackers Thursday afternoon.

A customer at a hamburger restaurant, apparently angered when he found the eatery's front door locked when he tried to leave Wednesday night, punched a 16-year-old employee in the nose after the youth unlocked the door for him.

Tony W. Vaughn, employed at The Brittany, 2424 14th St., told police it was closing time and he had to unlock the door for the customer. After he did so, the man, wearing a gray jogging suit, allegedly hit Vaughn in the nose and was last seen running across the Texas Tech campus.

Another seemingly minor incident earlier Wednesday erupted into a confrontation between two men, with one getting beaten in the face.

George Louis Lucero, 21, of 2020 Fifth St., Apt. 51, told police that about 3 p.m. he slipped into a parking place near his apartment, barely getting the spot ahead of another motorist.

The other driver, apparently upset because he missed out on the space, allegedly got out of his car and assaulted Lucero.

The victim, who was not seriously injured, called police and gave them his alleged assailant's name and address. Upon checking records, officers learned Lucero's attacker was wanted on an arrest warrant for a threat to kill.

Officers took the man into custody at his apartment and transported him to the county jail.

Robert Greenhill of 6129 Lynnhaven Drive walked out of his residence about 5:45 a.m. today and found his car set up on bricks and all four wheels stolen.

Greenhill, who parked his vehicle about 10:30 p.m. Wednesday, estimated his loss at $950.

An officer, stopping a car about 9:20 p.m. Wednesday in the 2000-block of Sixth Street, found a loaded rifle on the car seat and arrested the four men and one woman inside the vehicle for suspicion of unlawful concealment of a weapon.

The arresting officer said he spotted the vehicle speeding in the 2200-block of Fourth Street, and it took about five minutes to get the driver stopped. The driver also was charged with several traffic violations and one of the passengers was booked on suspicion of public intoxication.

THE DAY CHRIST DIED

Stunned, Herod Surrenders Jesus To Crucifixion Demand

By JIM BISHOP

The priests could hardly believe their ears when Pilate told them to take Jesus before Herod.

This amounted to dangerous meddling in the affairs of Palestine. The mock Messiah was a Jew, charged with a religious crime in Jerusalem, to which was added a crime against the Empire. How then could He be brought before Herod, whose jurisdiction was confined to Galilee?

Pilate stood. He had, he thought, done a bright thing.

At the gate of Fortress Antonia the priests argued among themselves about what should have been said to Pilate, and what had been said. They were very worried. The more time that passed, the more of Jesus' sympathizers might find out what was happening.

There was nothing to do, however, but proceed to Herod. Caiphas dispatched a courier to run ahead and acquaint the Tetrarch with the circumstances.

When King Herod heard the news from the courier he was so elated that he at once resolved to heal the breach between himself and Pilate. (They were steadfast friends after this day.) He thought it was usually diplomatic of the Procurator to send the Galilean to the King of the Galileans. Then, too, he welcomed the chance to meet the Man who had once referred to him as "That fox!"

The appelation "fox" was apt. Herod was crafty, a schemer. He was not cruel, as Pilate could be cruel, or mercenary, as Annas could be mercenary. He may have been mentally disordered.

The big party of marchers arrived at the gates of the palace of Herod. Herod treated the prisoner as a guest. The King was cordial: he admitted that he had heard much about Jesus. If Jesus of Nazareth had indeed been sent by God, Herod would be happy to witness a few simple demonstrations of this power. Would Jesus mind performing? There was no answer.

Antipas had an idea. He called one of his assistants and whispered to him. In a few minutes the aide returned with a beautiful cloak, a garish red garment such as might be worn by the king of a nomadic tribe. It was more theatrical than kingly.

With a friendly smile, Herod swung it over the shoulders of Jesus and tied the red ropes at the collar. It was comic. Even the high priests were forced to smile. Jesus made the most sorrowful and ridiculous king any of them had seen.

10 a.m., April 7, A.D. 30

The high priests were in a dilemma, and their only consolation was that Pontius Pilate was in an even worse one. He had refused to dispose of Jesus's case, and had sent it to Herod, the King of the Galileans. Now the case was coming back to his doorstep and he would be forced to judge, one way or another.

"You brough this Man before my tribunal," Pontius Pilate said loudly," on the ground that he incited the nation to revolt. In your presence I conducted this hearing, but detected no guilt in Him regarding the charges you preferred against Him."

The people listened, but they were already muttering. "Nor did Herod either!" the Procurator shouted, and then, subsiding, said: "This, then, is the verdict: He has done nothing to deserve the penalty of death." The crowd, on signal, began to cry for vengeance. "Accordingly," shrilled Pilate, "I will discipline Him, and then set Him free."

He stood, having pronounced a second verdict. But the bedlam of venom from the crowd was so shattering that, for an instant, Pontius Pilate lost his poise and become a frightened man. Out of the roar of sound, Pilate heard snatches of words, and became aware that some were asking a Passover pardon for a prisoner named Bar-Abbas.

It was the custom to pardon a prisoner annually at the inception of the Feast of the Passover. Pilate had forgotten about it.

Pilate decided to use the Passover pardon to close the case against Jesus. He would give the people their choice of freeing Bar-Abbas, a known murderer, or

The scourged Messiah becomes the object of pranks by soldiers.

Jesus, a Man of obvious gentleness. Pilate was certain that they choose to free Jesus.

The Roman turned back to the people. "Which do you want me to release as you choice, Bar-Abbas or Jesus called the Messiah" — a fatal question to a crowd composed only of enemies of Jesus and friends of Bar-Abbas.

"Bar-Abbas!" they shouted, almost in a chorus.

Pilate was shocked. "Then what am I to do with Jesus called the Messiah?" he said plaintively.

"Crucify Him!" they roared.

Pilate correctly judged the temper of the people to be getting out of hand. So he ordered the centurion to release Bar-Abbas at once, and to proceed with the scourging of Jesus.

Jesus was standing, bent over the short column and tied to it securely. The soldier who performed flagellations for the Jerusalem garrison moved to a position about six feet behind Jesus, and spread his legs. The flagellum was brought all the way back and whistled forward and made a dull drum sound as the strips of leather smashed against the back of the rib cage.

A moan escaped the lips of Jesus and He almost collapsed. The lips of Jesus seemed to be moving in prayer. The flagellum now moved in slow heavy rhythm.

Finally, the Tribune, whose responsibility it was to stop the "discipline" when he thought the guilty one might not be revived, stopped the executioner and went over to examine Jesus. The Messiah was unconscious.

It was the custom after scourgings for the soldiers at the fortress to play pranks on the prisoner. And now several of them approached Jesus. They were carrying the scarlet cloak, a heavy reed, and a hat cleverly fashioned out of thorns.

This Man had pretended to be a king, and they were going to costume Him like a king — a comic king.

11 a.m., April 7, A.D. 30

The crowd around the Fortress Antonia arches thinned after the soldiers took Jesus away for the scourging.

The high priests stood in front and conversed in whispers. They were certain that when Pilate had completed the flagellation of the prisoner he would tell them that this was punishment enough.

The were whispering about this when Pilate came down the steps for the third time. Once more, the Governor sat in his chair. This time he seemed impatient. Angrily he said: "Now look! I am bringing this so-called Messiah out to you, and you must understand that I find no guilt in Him!"

The crowd looked, and sucked in its breath. This Man was a shocking sight. The face was so marked that individual featues were almost indistinguishable. The top of the garment under the cloak was stained.

Pilate looked at the crowd, and saw the natural pity of common people for suffering. The Roman wanted to capitalize on the pity and the revulsion. He stood up and walked over to Jesus.

"Behold the Man!" he shouted to the crowd.

The high priests and the crowd chanted: "To the cross! To the cross!" Shocked, Pilate could not believe that, even under the tutelage of Caiphas, the crowd could be so callous in the face of what was left of this human being.

The Governor was at his wit's end. He turned and walked back into the praetorium, ordering Abenadar to bring the prisoner to him.

Inside, it was Pilate who appeared to be harried. Now a cold fright laid hold of him and he could not understand what frightened him. He studied the wounded Man standing before him and said gently:

"What is your origin?"

Jesus seemed to gather a little strength. He studied the Roman briefly, then lowered His head and did not answer.

"Do You not know," Pilate said through set teeth, "that I have power to set You free and power to crucify You?"

The dry, broken lips moved. The voice was hoarse. "You have no power whatever to harm Me," said Jesus, "unless it is granted to you from above... He who surrendered Me to you is guilty of a graver offense."

The Governor had Jesus brought out again before the remaining crowd. Pilate raised his hand and the noise died slowly. "Look," he said in sarcasm, "there is your king!" The people shouted: "Away with Him! Away with Him! Crucify Him!"

Pilate had a basim with water brought to him and he stood, dipped both hands into it, and looking directly at Caiphas said: "I am innocent of the blood of this just Man. The responsibility is yours!"

Nicaraguan Troops Conduct Military Strikes Against Sandanista Guerrillas

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — National guard troops used air strikes and armored vehicles Thursday to try to blast stubborn Sandinista guerrillas from dug-in positions in the embattled town of Esteli.

Military sources, the Red Cross and the refugees said there were casualties but none could provide exact figures of dead and wounded. On Monday the guard said 77 people including seven guardsmen had died in the three previous days of fighting.

Witnesses said the heavily armed guerrillas of the Sandinista National Liberation Front were holding out behind stone barricades and in deep trenches. They said parts of Esteli were sown with booby traps.

Col. Aquiles Aranda Escobar, the national guard spokesman, denied reports by fleeing residents that the guerillas had destroyed a World War II-vintage Sherman tank

The guard launched a fierce counter-attack Wednesday to try to dislodge the guerrillas who seized the town Saturday. Esteli, a town of 35,000, is 90 miles north of Managua.

The national guard is President Anastasio Somoza's 10,000-man military and police force. The Sandinistas have been trying for a decade to oust him and end his authoritarian rule. Somoza is in Florida for an Easter Week vacation.

Military sources reported brief clashes between the guerrillas and guard patrols in other parts of Nicaragua.

Guardsmen retook the southeastern town of San Rafael del Norte Wednesday night, Aranda Escobar said. The guerrillas burned several public buildings first, he said, adding that four guerrillas and one guardsman were killed in the that fighting.

He also reported skirmishes in the southern towns of Cardenas and Colon near the Costa Rican border. He said in both cases the guerrillas fled into Costa Rica. He would not say if there were casualties.

Radio Augusto Sandino, the clandestine rebel radio station, claimed 32 guardsmen were killed in the Costa Rican border area and said the guerrillas held the towns of Orosi and Sapoa near the frontier.

A military source who asked not to be identified said guerrillas burned a police station Tuesday night in Ticuantepec, nine miles south of Managua, and that two soldiers and one guerrilla were killed and several guardsmen were wounded.

Aranda Escobar said the guerrillas in Esteli were entrenched in two key points controlling the city, one of them near San Juan de Dios Hospital.

The guerrillas took the city Saturday and kept the guard bottled up in its barracks. Guard reinformements encircled the city.

The Red Cross Thursday asked the government for permission to try again to send medical supplies and food to Red Cross stations and the hospital in Esteli. A convoy reached the city Wednesday but could not deliver the supplies because of intense fighting.

A Red Cross spokesman in Managua estimated that more than 2,000 refugees were jammed into the hospital and the Red Cross center in Esteli and said medical and food supplies were dwindling.

There were unconfirmed reports that a family of four Americans was trapped in Esteli. They were not identified.

Doctor Develops Enzyme-Based Leukemia Test

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another in a series of stories dealing with cancer research grants in Texas. April has been declared "Cancer Control Month" nationwide. For further information on cancer questions, call 762-0825. Contributions may be made to the American Cancer Society, Area 1 Office, 1902 Ave. M, Lubbock, 79405.)

DALLAS, (Special) — A test to measure enzyme activity that ccurs more frequently in children with acute leukemia is being completed at the University of Texas Southwest Medical School here and will be used to follow recovery or predict relapse of patients under treatment.

The technique was devised by Dr. R. Graham Smith, Assistant Professor of Internal Medicine, with support of a research grant from the American Cancer Society. The test depends on reaction of an enzyme TdT (terminal deoxynucleotidyl transferase) with "T" cells, a trype related to those active in the body's natural immune system against disease.

TdT derives from a cell that was "descended" from a primitive one which may have been the ancestor of the leukemia cell, Dr. Smith said. The enzyme reaction is not exclusive to leukemia cells. Normal thymus gland and bone marrow cells also produce TdT, however in small-to measure TdT reactions in acute lymphatic leukemia, the type that strikes children most frequently. A decrease in TdT or a return to normal levels would indicate that treatment was becoming effective. Also, a child successfully treated with chemotherapy, could be tested with the TdT method to forewarn of any relapse.

Dr. Smith expects to use the test eventually in combination with two methods already developed in other laboratories, which by themselves are not always entirely conclusive. These tests measure the quantity of leukemic cells in the blood and the activity of a protein found on the surface of cells in the immune system. The three methods together will provide a complex that gives an extremely accurate profile of the course or presence of leukemia, Dr. Smith predicted.

CHECK TAKES BIG BOUNCE

TULSA (AP) — Cliff Lamkin picked up a scrap of paper in the yard of his home Wednesday evening and started to crumple it and toss it in the trash. Then he looked closer. It was a personal check written by a woman from Wichita Falls. The check apparently had been carrid by swirling winds from the Texas-Oklahoma border.

Luke 13:28-35, The Living Bible

28 And there will be great weeping and gnashing of teeth as you stand outside and see Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the prophets within the Kingdom of God —

29 For people will come from all over the world to take their places in the Kingdom of God.

30 And note this: some who are despised now will be greatly honored then; and some who are highly thought of now will be least important then."

31 A few minutes later some Pharisees said to Him, "Get out of here if You want to live, for King Herod is after You!"

32 "Go tell that fox," Jesus said, "that I will keep on casting out demons and doing miracles of healing today and tomorrow; and the third day I will reach my destination.

33 Yes, today, tomorrow, and the next day! For it wouldn't do for a prophet of God to be killed except in Jerusalem!

34 O Jerusalem, Jerusalem! The city that murders the prophets! The city that stones those sent to help her! How often I have wanted to gather your children together, even as a hen protects her brood under her wings, but you wouldn't let Me.

35 And now — now your house is left desolate. And you will never again see Me until you say, 'Welcome to Him who comes in the name of the Lord.'"

Wells Ends ASCS Career

'Times Have Changed,' Veteran Reflects

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

"When I was a boy, if a person went broke in town, he could always start farming," Walter Wells remembered about Texas in the early 1900s. "But that certainly isn't so now."

Wells, who began a career with the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service as a committeeman on the old wheat program in 1933, will retire as Lubbock County executive director April 20.

"In some ways the farm program has changed drastically," Wells said, "but in other ways it is still very similar."

"With wheat and cotton allotments limiting the number of acres a person could plant then, a person more or less had to participate or be penalized.

"Now the program is voluntary. If a farmer doesn't participate, he simply is not eligible for benefits."

Born on a farm some 20 miles west of Graham in Young County, Wells graduated from Newcastle High School and attended Tarleton State College, graduating with a degree in business administration in 1930.

"That was the beginning of the depression and I wasn't able to go any further in college," Wells explained, "so I went back to farming."

The farm program started in 1933 and Wells was elected to serve on the wheat committee the following year. With the economic situation, Wells worked some measuring farms with a plane table and also worked some in the county office.

"I made $3 a day and furnished my own car," Wells noted. "Finally, because I only had a quarter section and thought an office job sounded better, I put in my application with ASCS."

The Wells era began Feb. 15, 1939, when he was appointed administrative officer in King County.

"There were about 98 farms in King County," Wells remembered, "and it was a one-man office. There was no training program, so I had to learn everything for myself."

After six months at Guthrie, Wells returned from a trip to find another man sitting at his desk with orders for Wells to move to the county office in Throckmorton. Wells served 19 months there then was transferred to Lubbock in March 1941.

"By this time, World War II was near and the district manager was called to the service," he said. "The Lubbock County office manager moved to the district position and I came in to fill his place."

Lubbock had a population of about 35,000 then and was quite a large city compared to his home town of Newcastle. But the size of the city and the drastically different scenery became a part of Wells for the next 38 years.

Through the years, Wells said, farmers have always said they would like to fire the secretary of agriculture, but he said, the secretaries he's worked under have generally tried to administer what was already established by Congress.

"The changes in farm programs, over the years," Wells pointed out, "came with a change in administrations, not a change in secretaries."

In 1956, Wells received the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Superior Service Award, the second highest honor the USDA confers. Wells, who was one of the first county ASCS office managers in the nation to receive the award, said the honor was given to him for the "continuous broadcasting of an agricultural program."

"Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benton made the presentation," Wells recalled.

The trip to Washington for the honor was not the only dealings Wells had with the federal administration. Dissatisfaction among ASCS employees grew because they were considered neither federal nor county employees.

"We were handling a tremendous amount of federal money, " Wells explained, "yet we were not eligible for government benefits and did not receive raises when other government employees did."

As a result, Wells helped to organize the Texas Association of County ASCS Employees (TASCOE) in an attempt to strive for civil service classification and therefore eligibility for government insurance, leave of absences and raises.

Wells served as first president of TASCOE, which is still in existence with about 97 percent of county ASCS employees holding membership.

"After a trip to Washington in 1958, officials assured us there was no way we would achieve civil service status," Wells said.

Returning from the discouraging meeting, Wells said his position as treasurer for Calvary Baptist Church led him to American State Bank to establish a loan. One of the bank officials, however, had other reasons for wanting to talk with Wells. He offered Wells a banking position.

"All I knew about banking," Wells admitted, "was that every month I deposited a check. So I told him I wasn't interested.

"But since we had been told the ASCS would never make civil service and since I was already 50 years old," he said, "I decided to leave the ASCS in 1959 to become an assistant cashier for ASB."

The banking profession was short-lived for Wells, though. Six months after leaving ASCS, civil service status was designated to the agency.

"I just liked working with farmers more than I liked working at a bank," Wells noted, "so when the office manager position came open in 1965, I went back to work with ASCS."

Wells said the current farm program is probably not bad, but everyone wants higher prices for commodities. The reason for wanting higher prices is that everything the farmer has to buy is so high, Wells believes.

"You have to have farm programs," Wells said. "Large automobile makers, for example, can control their inventory and cut back on production if making more is not profitable. But there are thousands of farmers, each operating his own industry."

Wells said the changing economy, not farm policies, has been a factor in creating fewer, larger farms. The higher costs of machinery, for example, makes it necessary for a farmer to be larger to afford the equipment.

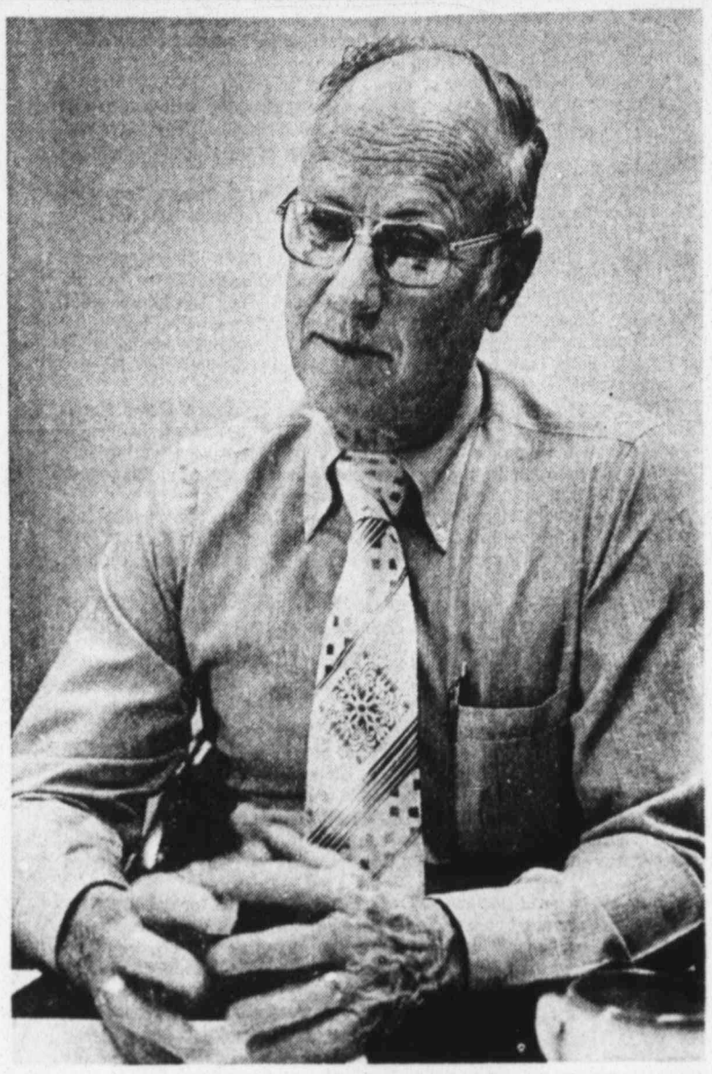
"Current target prices should probably be increased some," Wells said, "but if they go too high, it will result in larger deficiency payments which will pull more money from the government.

"Right now it looks like there will be deficiency payments made this year on cotton, corn, grain sorghum and wheat," he noted.

According to Wells, about 98 percent of the farmers in Lubbock County participate in the farm program because they are in a high risk area. The retiring executive director said about $5 million in disaster payments was distributed last year alone in Lubbock County.

In addition to his work with ASCS, Wells has been involved with the Southwest Junior Livestock Show since 1942, the Panhandle South Plains Fair agriculture displays since 1943, and is a member of the Lubbock Agricultural Club and the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce agriculture committee.

Wells and his wife, Velda, plan to take an extended trip through the Southeast upon his retirement. He said he will probably continue to work with the SWJLS and the fair for a couple of years. But mostly, after a 46-year affiliation with the ASCS, Wells said he mainly plans to "do nothing at all."



ENDING AN ERA — After a 46-year affiliation with the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, Lubbock County executive director Walter Wells will retire April 20. Wells said although there have been some major changes in the farm program through the years, current policies are still similar with those of the past. (Staff Photo by Paul Moseley).

A CALL FOR "BEEFLESS WEDNESDAYS" represents another ill-conceived attempt to vent the nation's frustration with inflation on a single commodity, a Texas cattleman said this week.

John B. Armstrong, president of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association, was referring to a campaign by the New York City Department of Consumer Affairs that calls for consumer boycotts of beef on Wednesday.

Armstrong also criticized government officials who have "highlighted" beef prices as a leading contributor to inflation.

"Consumers and government officials must realize that beef prices do not cause inflation," he said. "Inflation is caused by continued deficit spending by government, unfavorable foreign trade balances and union wage demands which exceed increased productivity."

THE LEADER OF 13,000 LIVESTOCK producers in Texas, Oklahoma and surrounding states called for a hands-off attitude from government and challenged consumers to sharpen their shopping skills.

"The lesser-priced beef cuts like stew meat, liver and the variety meats are just as nutritious as the higher-priced cuts," he said. "Consumers also should consider alternate ways of cooking."

The cattleman emphasized that one hour's wages, after taxes, today will buy the average consumer 1.67 pounds of beef, compared with nine-tenths pound in 1949.

"The fact remains that only in recent months have beef prices, from farm to retail, begun to catch up with other prices," he said.

FOR THE LAST FIVE YEARS, CATTLEMEN have been "subsidizing consumers with bargain prices while they (cattlemen), in turn, have taken a financial bloodbath."

The only long-term solution to rising beef prices, Armstrong said, is the rebuilding of the nation's cattle herds.

Cattlemen are rebuilding their herds, down 8 million head from 1974, but warn any attempts to hold beef prices through boycotts and price ceilings, as was done in 1973 with diastrous effects, would force further reductions and higher beef prices.

"All that we, as cattle producers, want from anyone is the freedom to conduct our business within the economic framework of supply and demand," Armstrong said.

A PROPOSAL TO ALLOW GRAINS to be grown on set-aside acreage for the production of gasohol is under consideration by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

No immediate action is expected on the study, and it is considered unlikely that it would be applied to 1979 crops.

The present law prohibits the growing of wheat or corn on idled acreage. Any substantial use of set-aside acreage for gasohol would necessitate the building of alcohol conversion plants, a two-year process, according to a USDA official.

Tech Receives Ag Program Federal Grant

Texas Tech University has received an initial grant of $100,000 under a special federal program to support the growth of the university and its capability to participate in international development.

The program will be in operation for the next five years, by the end of which the university may have received a total of $500,000. The monies will be obligated on an annual basis.

Funds are provided by the Board of International Food and Agricultural Development (BIFAD) of the U.S. Department of State.

Texas Tech was among the first group of 18 universities, and the only one in Texas, selected for participation in BIFAD's programs. A total of 51 universities applied for the grant.

The federal funds will increase support for library materials, language training facilities, research, visiting professorships, and conferences, "resulting in an overall development of the university in areas related to food production and nutrition," Dr. Harold E. Dregne, director of Tech's International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies (ICASALS), said.

ICASALS coordinated and developed the university-wide proposal submitted by Texas Tech and involving the Colleges of Agricultural Sciences, Business Administration, Home Economics, Engineering, Education, and Arts and Sciences, and the School of Medicine.

One of the basic objectives of Texas Tech's proposal was to establish the university as a focal point for training and technical assistance in food and agricultural areas for the less developed countries in arid and semi-arid regions of the world.

BIFAD, the authority which approved Texas Tech's proposal, was established within the Agency for International Development (AID) under the International Development and Food Assistance act of 1975.

Herbicides Applied Via Center Pivots

By ROBERT L. HANEY
Texas Agricultural Experiment Station

Applying herbicides through center-pivot irrigation systems is a new technology that is catching on fast.

Herbicides work well, applied this way, because moisture leaches them into the soil, giving maximum weed control.

Researchers and extension specialists in Nebraska, Colorado, Kansas and Texas estimate there are 330,000 acres of corn land with center-pivot irrigation that are treated with herbicides through the system.

That's about 12 percent of acreage using such irrigation systems in these four states.

Research and practical experience in the Great Plains show that advantages of applying preemergence herbicides through center-pivot systems are (1) economy, (2) the method fits well with limited and no-tillage systems, and (3) water leaches herbicides into the soil where weed seed germinate.

But the method also has problems according to Dr. Allan Wiese, weed research scientist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Bushland.

"I found it easy to get an air lock in the line between the herbicide reserve tank and injection pump," Wiese said. "Dr. D. D. Dowler of Tifton, Ga. told me he had problems with air leaks in injector pumps.

"It is important to connect the injector pump to the safety system to stop the operation when something goes wrong. People object to spending the time, day and night, to make sure everything is working properly.

"Another thing, it is impossible to vary hebicide rate for different soil types in the field. It's also hard to prevent uneven herbicide application near edges of fields or when the wind changes.

"And if wind or rain prevents operation of the sprinkler system, preemergence herbicide application may be delayed too long for good weed control.

"During the past two years we have conducted two experiments at Bushland with center-pivot sprinkler irrigation systems to find why some herbicides work and others do not.

"In addition, we have conducted a field trial with corn.

"Don Crutchfield, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station technician and Dr. Nolan Clark, U. S. Department of Agriculture Engineer, helped with the first two studies.

"In the fall of 1975, we applied atrazine and Treflan through a sprinkler system and caught some of the water in mini-rain gauges at the soil surface.

"About 12 percent of the water evaporated before it reached the ground. Only 10 percent of the atrazine was lost, but 85 percent of the Treflan was lost between the sprinkler nozzle and the soil surface.

"The study was conducted on a calm, cool day when air temperature was 75 degrees, wind speed 5 miles per hour and relatively humidity 30 percent. Losses would have been greater on a hot, windy day.

"Following that we devised a system in the laboratory to test herbicide losses under conditions of high evaportion. Evaporation of herbicides from the greatest to the least was Treflan, Tolban, Prowl, Basalin, Amex, and Cobex. There was no loss of atrazine.

"In this experiment, increasing herbicide concentration in water decreased percentage loss but increased total loss.

"Of the herbicides we tested, Cobex would be the best dinitroaniline herbicide for possible application through sprinkler irrigation system.

"Herbicides presently labled for use in the western U.S. are Eradicane, atrazine, Lasso, and mixtures of: Sutan with atrazine, Sutan with Bladex, and Lasso with atrazine. Labels expected for corn in the near future are Dual, Bicep and mixtures of Eradicane with Bladex and Eradicane with atrazine.

"Labels expected for potatoes, with center-pivot application, are Lasso and Lasso mixed with Sencor. Eptam is labeled for use in floor irrigation of alfalfa.

"In the future, Sutan and Eradicane may be labeled for furrow-irrigated corn.

"This, and other research I've done, plus contacts with other scientists and specialists have me convinced that using herbicides through center-pivot systems will probably increase as time passes.

"Specialists who furnished acreage figures predict slow growth because management problems are hard to overcome and mistakes are easily made.

"However, I think the practice will expand regardless of problems because it is a cheap and effective way to distribute herbicides," Wiese concluded.

GHANA

The african nation Ghuana is named after an earlier state that flourished along the Niger river between 800 and 1076 A.D. The modern nation covers 92,100 square miles, slightly smaller than the state of Oregon, with a population of some 10 million, principally members of the Adansi, Akwamu and Ga tribes. Ruled by Great Britain as the Gold Coast for 113 years, it was the first British African colony to be granted full independence, in 1951.

QUAPAW cotton
EARLY MATURING Variety
GOOD COLD TOLERANCE
Reports from growers say that Quapaw can withstand more adverse conditions than most varieties resulting in "less plant over."
GOOD HERBICIDE TOLERANCE
GOOD MICRONAIRE
Quapaw's early maturity gives consistent good fiber with micronaire normally between 3.8 and 4.5.
GOOD PRODUCTION
Quapaw has a consistent high lint yield with approximately 85 pounds per bale more seed production than most other varieties.
GOOD STAPLE
QUAPAW cotton matures early resulting in consistency of fiber elongation. Staple length normally 31/32 to 1-1/16. QUAPAW is a mature fiber of high natural luster. "The mills like it."

Livestock Futures Up Sharply; April Achieves Historic Peak

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 37 to 145 points higher led by April which was up the 150 limit level for a time Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Sales totaled 37,140 cars.

Prices were higher from the start and rose to a new season's highs across the board with April at a new historic high at 78.32.

Record high cash cattle and beef sparked aggressive short covering and other buying ahead of the holiday weekend.

There have been 247 deliveries thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 110 to 110½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points, which is a record high. Cash cattle were up 50 cents with the best top $76.50 per hundredweight at Illinois Direct, which is a new record high.

Slaughter was 115,000 head. The major markets today are expecting about 3,700 head.

Feeder cattle futures closed 72 to 132 higher led by April after March was up the 150 limit. Volume was 5,279 contracts.

All contracts except April set new highs for the season.

Record high cash cattle and beef prices along with limit level advance in live cattle futures touched off short covering and other buying here ahead of the holidays. Continued light pace of kill and short receipts were also positive.

Deliveries total 341 thus far. Cash feeder cattle were steady to up $1 with the best top $139 per hundredweight at Louisville. Receipts at the major terminals are expected to be 600 head.

Hog futures closed 47 lower to 25 higher on 6,608 lots. June was off the most at the day's low with October up the most.

Earlier, distant April rose 80. The market reacted after three-week highs with evening-up ahead of the weekend bringing late pressure. Traders also noted premium of futures to cash and the possibility of expanded marketings next week. Strong cattle aided the initial advance.

There have been six deliveries thus far. Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 1 cent at 68 to 74½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were steady to up $1 with the best top $47.25 per hundredweight at Peoria. Kill was 345,000 head. About 12,500 head are expected at the major markets today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 20 to 82 lower led by August with most contracts at the day's lows. Volume was 4,202 cars.

Reaction followed an early gain of 135 to three-week highs, up more than six cents recently.

Reduced hog arrivals and higher prices combined with firmer cash bellies and record high beef to spur outset buying. Late reaction related to fears of heavy hog runs next week.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 1½ cent at 45 to 53½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Lubbock County Farmer's Land Condemnation Award Upheld

AUSTIN — A Lubbock man can be awarded a total of $135,000 for the state to acquire eight-tenths of one acre of his land in the construction of Interstate Highway 27, the Texas Supreme Court agreed Wednesday.

State highway officials had not appealed that portion of the judgement awarding Willis Dunn $55,000 for the actual condemnation of the property, but they did object to paying an additional $80,000 for damages to other property.

Both a Lubbock trial court and the Amarillo Court of Civil Appeals agreed, however, with the supplemental $80,000 judgement, and the Supreme Court let the verdict stand.

Dunn owns a 160-acre tract in Lubbock County, and said the small slice to be used for the interstate highway would cause him to relocate pump facilities and irirgation equipment, at a cost of some $80,000.

Eight More Shah's Backers Executed

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Revolutionary firing squads shot eight more of the exiled shah's men before dawn Thursday and hours later a tribunal passed death and prison sentences on six police officers charged with torturing political prisoners, the state radio said.

The radio said another court Thursday levied a death sentence on Gen. Hashem Berenjian, former head of the Iranian air force counter-intelligence service.

The shootings brought to 109 the number of persons confirmed as executed since Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary government took power Feb. 12 and began secret Islamic trials that order the sentences carried out immediately, without appeal.

State radio reported Mahmoud Moini, former chief of the SAVAK secret police in the holy city of Qom, was executed for "corruption to the core, fighting against clergymen and warring with God and his emissaries."

Similar charges were listed for the executions of army officer Abbas Kamali, 53, in the northwestern city of Zanjan, and in the southwestern oil center of Ahwaz for the former mayor of nearby Bustan, Shaey Mazrae; Mazrae's brother, Hamid; Ali Reza Shojai, not further identified, and Hossein Rahimi, a military officer involved in energy work.

In the northwestern city of Ardebil, two police corporals were executed for killing anti-shah demonstrators, the radio said.

Late Thursday an Islamic court held in Qasr Prison sentenced to death police Gen. Bijan Yahyai, former chief of the political prisoner section of the same jail, state radio said. It said five of his colleagues were sentenced to prison terms of one and two years.

The radio listed the charges as torture, interference with prisoners' prayer, insulting of prisoners, and misuse of authority. The trial began Wednesday afternoon and lasted most of Thursday.

Witnesses said six judges, four of them Moslem priests, presided at the trial and more than 100 persons packed the courtroom.

Appeals For Evidence

For two days before the trial the radio had appealed for people with evidence against the accused to come forward.

Prison sentences of two years were handed down against police Lt. Ahmad Sholevar, Lt. Mohammad Ghahri, police officer Mohammad Abdi and officer Behzad Nazari, the radio said. Lt. Ali Reza Azari received a one-year term.

More than 4,000 prisoners of the new regime are believed held in the prison, which has been a main center of Islamic court trials this month.

Tehran's Kayhan newspaper reported the roundup of 141 persons in Tehran and elsewhere since Tuesday, including an ex-deputy prime minister, two senators, university professors and a Moslem clergyman.

No Charges Given

No charges against those arrested were given in the report, but it appeared that like others they were suspected supporters of or participants in the government of ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Eleven men were executed in Tehran Wednesday. Khomeini's provisional government leaders say they approve of the executions despite international protest.

Khomeini said the Islamic regime is "respected by all those who have concern for humanity and human rights" but U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, Amnesty International and a number of foreign governments have called for an end to the executions and secret trials.

Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan almost resigned last month because of the executions, which he called "inhumane, irreligious and disgraceful," but he has apparently changed that position.

He was quoted Thursday in the West German newspaper Bild Zeitung as saying:

"That's the business of the courts. We don't stick our noses in there," but I hope these revolutionary courts will stop within a year and that our Justice Ministry will take over this work after that."

In another development Thursday, Deputy Prime Minister Abbas Amir-Entezam said Iran has made no commitment to provide military assistance to the Palestine Liberation Organization or to employ PLO experts in the country's security services or military.

Amir-Entezam said the government was reviewing its policy towards PLO activities in Iran, adding: "our warm and friendly welcome for the Palestinians could have caused some misunderstandings for them as far as their stand and activities in Iran are concerned." He did not elaborate.

Doctor Claims Rudolf Hess Impostor

BERLIN (AP) — A British surgeon's claim that the man imprisoned as Rudolf Hess is an impostor adds a bizarre chapter to the saga of a lonely old man who has spent nearly half his life in Berlin's Spandau Prison for service to Adolf Hitler.

Hess's wife and son rejected the claim Thursday.

In a book to be published next month, Dr. Hugh Thomas, 43, formerly a member of the four-nation medical team at Spandau, says he has no idea who the prisoner is.

"What I do know is that he cannot be Hess. It is essential that a surgeon ... with the requisite experience should examine the prisoner as soon as possible before it is too late," he said.

Hess will be 85 on April 26

The man jailed as Hess, who as Nazi Germany's deputy Reichsfuehrer was Hitler's closest comrade, is serving a life term for "waging aggressive war."

Thomas' book is titled "The Murder of Rudolf Hess."

Former guards say Hess spends his days following a monotonous routine of feeding the birds, walking in the garden when his strength allows, reading and watching color television.

His wife Ilse and son Wolf-Ruediger visit him occasionally and lobby for his release through a group called the "Free Rudolf Hess Committee."

A spokesman for the son said, the younger Hess has "no doubt about the identity of his father."

But Thomas, a former senior military surgeon, disputes the assumption that the man who parachuted into Scotland on an apparent peace mission in 1941 claiming to be Rudolf Hess was actually Rudolf Hess.

His claim, which he says is based on medical records and five years of research, was greeted with derision by Hess' wife, his lawyer and a retired American colonel who was once his guard.

"Hugh Thomas doesn't have all his cups in his closet," said Mrs. Hess. "The man is completely crazy." She said she had tried to get him to stop writing the book.

Alfred Seidl, who has represented Hess since his arraignment in 1946 before the Nuremberg war crimes tribunal, dismissed the allegation as "a joke." Eugene K. Bird, a retired U.S. Army colonel and author of a book on his former charge, said Thomas' claim "is not worthy of comment."

Lubbock Residents Sending Supplies To Twister Areas

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Three semi-tractor trailor rigs loaded with food, clothing, bedding and supplies are leaving Lubbock this morning to deliver the donations to tornado victims in Wichita Falls and Vernon.

Despite sporadic communications with the North Texas cities, Lubbockites — retaining memories of a similar disaster in their own city just nine years ago — are sending donations by the truckload to the tornado-stricken area while volunteer medical teams and pints of blood remain on standby.

Two rigs provided by South Plains International Trucks will leave around 7 or 8 a.m. today from KLLL Radio Station where area residents have been contributing needed supplies for victims of the devastated area.

A spokesman said a second trailor was needed Thursday afternoon when the contributions had filled the first rig originally scheduled to transport the goods today, but said the second trailer would only be about half filled.

Another trailor is being filled with donations accepted by the Salvation Army and All Saints School. It was filled by mid-afternoon Thursday.

"People have been very generous," said Donna Murphy, wife of Salvation Army commanding officer, Phillip Murphy.

The trailer, filled with clothing, mattresses and box springs donated by a Lubbock bedding company, and canned goods furnished by a local super market, is expected to arrive at Wichita Falls by noon today, according to Mrs. Murphy.

The organization also is trying to make arrangements to send another truckload of supplies to the tornado victims because other calls offering donations and extra supplies have been received at the office.

More than 300 pints of blood are on standby this morning at South Plains Blood Services, according to Janice Hassell, donor recruiter.

The recruiter added that she expects a request for the blood within the next few days for continued care of victims in the two cities.

Blood Requests Expected

Officials are expected to request the blood within within days because they are unable to store the blood without electricity, she explained.

Persons wanting to give donations today may take them to the U.S. Navy Reserve, 29303 Fourth St., or to the Second Baptist Church.

The church-sponsored trailor, originally scheduled to leave Sunday, instead will depart for the Wichita Falls area Saturday morning.

The trailer already was two-thirds full with donations from individuals and other churchs by Thursday afternoon, said a church spokesman.

A standby team of seven medical volunteers led by a physician were awaiting word from Dallas late Thursday or this morning, to relieve a team sent by Lubbock Chapter of the American Red Cross Tuesday night, according to Walt Ahrens, executive director.

About 10 other Red Cross volunteers will begin taking calls shortly after noon today on relatives hospitalized in the stricken area and will take calls until late today if necessary.

Area Linemen Sent

Roy Holmes, district manager in Lubbock for Southwestern Public Service Co., said the 16 linemen sent from this area will be working on transmission lines that were blown down by the tornado between Vernon and Wichita Falls.

He said it will take at least a week with the men working 14-to 16-hour shifts before service can be restored.

Holmes said one substation in the area was completely destroyed, leaving only steel and concrete remnants behind.

Lubbock Power & Light also dispatched a crew of eight workmen to Wichita Falls to help repair power lines in the area. They took along two "bucket" trucks, a boom truck, a holedigger and a 100-kw generator.

Telephone service between Lubbock and Wichita Falls was not totally disrupted but the chances of getting a call through are very slight, according to Jim Goodwin, public relations manager for Southwestern Bell of Lubbock.

"We did lose some long distance circuits in the storm but the problem is that so many people are trying to phone relatives living there."

Conflicting Charges Traded In Strike

Page & Wirtz state that since April 9 and continuing to the date the charges were filed the union picketed two New Mexico hospital construction sites "without written notification required by Section 8G" of the National Labor Relations Act.

According to Maydanis, Section 8G of the act states that a labor organization that strikes or pickets a health care institution must notify the institution in writing of that intention "not less than 10 days prior to that action."

The provision also states that "notification shall state the date and time that such action will commence."

Jack Wirtz said Thursday that the union did notify the hospital of intent to picket, but "they didn't wait 10 days and they didn't state the date and day" that picketing would begin. He said the telegram sent to the hospital stated that picketing would begin in the "immediate future."

According to union officials, that section of the act does not apply to picketing done by construction workers. Abel Gonzalez, union spokesman, said the provision applies only to hospital employee unions. "We're not affecting anybody in the hospital," he said.

Thus, union officials said, they sent their notification telegram only as "a courtesy" to the hospital.

Wirtz said, however, that any picketing that "affects the completion of a medical faciltiy and affects medical treatment" is under the jurisdiction of the act.

The contractor said also that the act applies only to operating hospitals and does not include construction of new facilities.

Maydanis said that the the two hospital construction sites affected by the charges are existing facilities undergoing expansion and alterations.

He said that Wirtz's contention that only operating facilities are affected may be true, but that he "isn't far enough along in the litigation" to be sure yet. He said that point is not really the issue in this case, however, because the hospital sites in question are existing facilities.

Maydanis said this case is completely separate from the case in which the union filed charges of not bargaining in good faith against area contractors. Those charges were filed in the NLRB Fort Worth office on March 30.

The union began picketing sites worked by about 20 contractors several days after the contract between the two parties expired. The strike signaled the halt to six weeks of negotiations prior to expiration of the contract.

MASHED MOTEL — Travelers passing through Vernon won't be staying at the Sands Motel for a while. The popular stopping place was literally exploded by the tornado that struck the town Tuesday. Workers and volunteers are pictured sifting through the rubble, searching for bodies and for property worth salvaging. A mangled car, flung into the motel during the storm, lies upside down at the upper left. (Staff photo by Milton Adams).

U.S. Trio Accused Of Spying

a systematic program of photography of vast areas of South Africa, including some of our most sensitive installations."

Edmondson was not available for comment.

A State Department official in Washington, who asked not to be identified, said he did not know exactly what areas of South Africa had been photographed by the plane, or whether they were considered classified by the South African government.

"We didn't check with them before we took pictures of something," the official said.

The official said the plane was used by Edmondson and "a lot of other" embassy staff.

Sources close to the embassy said embassy officials were taken by surprise by Botha's announcement.

"It was very strong, but one assumes that it was made after much thought and that it has more far-reaching overtones than just an embassy plane," said one of the sources, who declined to be named.

Plane Went "Everywhere"

The sources said the plane had "gone everywhere" on official U.S. business, including to other African countries.

The aircraft reportedly was in Salisbury, Rhodesia, earlier this week, but the sources said they were not sure why. The United States does not recognize the Rhodesian government.

The charges follow a report by a Rhodesian newspaper Wednesday suggesting the plane had been used for spying in that country. The article in Salisbury's National Observer said the plane carried photographic surveillance equipment and it quoted a "highly placed" Rhodesian offical as saying "this is an appalling state of affairs."

Privilege "Terminated"

Botha said the embassy's privilege to use the aircraft had been "summarily terminated," and the aircraft also must leave the country once South African technicians ensure "all photographic equipment has been removed" so the plane does not take pictures on its outward flight.

At a later news conference here, Botha said the "spy plane" incident would not necessarily mean severing diplomatic relations with the United States, but he expects an official apology.

Observers noted the photography could have been aimed at making a general aerial survey of broad stretches of territory for intelligence records, or at photographing specific targets — which perhaps might include South Africa's top secret nuclear facility in the Kalahari Desert, or defense installations related to South Africa's war against guerrillas in South-West Africa.

Relations Strained

Relations between the United States and South Africa have grown strained in recent years because of U.S. criticism of the ruling white minority's official policies of racial segregation. In 1977, the United States voted in the U.N. Security Council to enact the current world arms embargo against South Africa.

In an unexplained move earlier this week, the South African ambassadors to the United States and to the United Nations were suddenly called home for "consultations."

The United States and South Africa are at odds over the political future of South-West Africa, a South African-controlled territory also known as Namibia. The Carter administration is backing a U.N. plan for Namibian independence to which South Africa has refused to commit itself.

City, Schools Share Cost Of Project

of the volume of traffic there and the limited curb area," he said.

Under the city's assessment program, the city contributes half the cost for paving an alley in a residential area, while property owners on either side of the alley split the remaining cost equally.

In this case, the 13 property owners would have to pay one-fourth of the total cost (about $5,600) and the school district would pay one-fourth.

The solution to financing the alley paving, Phillips suggested, was to up the school district's share to half the total cost, or $11,200.

However, Mayor Dirk West said the school board previously had refused such an arrangment.

But Duncan quoted school board president Charles Waters as saying the school board was prepared to pay half the cost.

Contacted by phone, Waters agreed that the school board would pay half the total cost and the Parsons alley dilemma seemed solved.

Residents Make Requests

But, residents now want the direction of the one-way designation of the alley changed and have requested a stop sign at one end of the alley.

The council will take that up at their next meeting.

A portion of the hotel-motel tax, designated for special arts projects, will be used to help finance the Lubbock Arts Festival April 27-29, council members decided.

The council okayed using up to $10,000, nearly all of what has been collected, to help fund the festival which is expected to cost about $50,000.

Lubbock Mayor Pro Tem Alan Henry, who abstained from the discussion of the funds, is chairman of the arts festival.

STAY SOUGHT

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — An appeal signed by condemned murder John Louis Evans III, seeking a stay of the death sentence he once welcomed, was received by the U.S. District Court here Thursday.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My wife and I jointly own Series E, U.S. Savings Bonds, most of which were bought in the 1940s. At the end of last year, these bonds were worth $36,480 — including $26,317.50 interest. Because we are in the 37 percent federal income tax bracket, we naturally would rather not cash any of these bonds and pay federal income tax on the accrued interest.

My concern is what will happen upon my death. Will all the E bond interest be taxed that year? If so, the tax would be very high and it might be wise to cash a significant portion of the bonds each year.

A. You write that the bonds are jointly owned. I have to take that to mean that they are in coownership form — registered in your name and your wife's name.

If either one of you dies, the other coowner becomes the sole and absolute owner of those E bonds. No income tax will have to be paid on the interest at that time.

Then, when the surviving co-owner passes on the bonds go to your heirs. Again, no income tax will have to be paid on the E bond interest at that time — unless the person filing the final income tax return of the second co-owner elects to include that interest on the tax return.

In most cases, however, no income tax is due when E bond owners die. Their heirs get the bonds and are required to pay federal income tax on the accrued interest at some later date — when the bonds are redeemed or reach their final maturities.

Now that the U.S. Treasury Department has refused to grant further extended maturities to older E bonds, those E bonds you bought in the 1940s will reach their final maturities in the 1980s. At that point, you, your wife or your heirs will be faced with the choice of either paying fat federal income taxes on the accrued interest or exchanging your E bonds for the new HH bonds which will come into being on Jan. 2, 1980.

When you and your wife pass on, of course, the value of those bonds will be included in your estates for state inheritance tax and federal estate tax purposes. Those "death" taxes are different than income taxes.

And, if you leave this vale of tears before your wife, she may be hit with death tax levies on the value of those E bonds. The taxing authorities insist on including the value of jointly-owned assets in the husband's estate — if he was the only wage earner.

Q. I inherited several tax-free municipal bonds, issued by the city in which we live, from my parents. These bonds are in bearer form and were never reported on our inheritance tax. The bonds will mature soon.

This is my problem. I would like to use the money from the bonds to invest in six-month savings certificates. Will this cause any problems with the Internal Revenue Service?

A. You're asking me if, by putting a bundle of money — at least $10,000 — into six-month savings certificates, you will cause the IRS to question where your newly-disclosed wealth came from. I can't answer that, for sure, but I do know that the revenooers have all kinds of "red flags" they watch for.

For instance, when you report the taxable interest on savings certificates for 1979, the IRS might haul you in to explain where the money was in 1978 and previous years. You could say the money was in tax-free municipal bonds.

The revenooers could then ask, "Where did you get those bonds?" That could lead to audits of your previous income tax, inheritance tax and estate tax returns.

My advice is to come clean. File an amended state inheritance tax return and — if your parents' estate was big enough — an amended federal estate tax return, including the value those municipal bonds left to you.

Publisher Of 'Look' Cautious Optimist

NEW YORK (AP) — Ads for the reborn "Look" magazine ask consumers to "Look Again." And publisher Boris Troyan is hoping advertisers will look again at a lavishly illustrated newsmagazine — a medium many thought reached the end of its life several years ago.

"We think that we can pull it off because we think we've got a good product and we think we've analyzed what went wrong in the past," said Troyan. "We feel that photojournalism as a means of presentation is a very viable business."

Troyan, 38 and balding, comes to Look after 10 years with various French magazines. A graduate of Yale, he's spent about half of his life in Europe, experience he says allows him to see beyond the United States and focus on the world market.

He was in France when the original Look folded in 1971, the victim of high costs and low advertiser demand. Look — and its competitor from Time Inc., Life — were white elephants, general-interest anachronisms in an age when specialization was the key to a successful magazine.

Advertisers found that they could get more return on their dollars by placing ads in the specialized magazines or with television rather than Look or Life. Cowles Communications, the original publisher of Look, and Time Inc. began slicing off subscribers, trying to build their magazines' image. But ultimately they decided to kill the publications.

"They panicked," said Troyan. "They decided that from an advertising point of view they had to compete in the numbers game." The large-scale cuts in circulation, he said, wiped out the magazines' credibility.

Troyan hopes the new Look can avoid the problems the old Look had by shooting for a more select audience than before — with a circulation of 1.2 million rather than the old 6 million. More emphasis will be put on making the newsstand cost of the magazine a key source of income, rather than offering cut-rate subscriptions and making advertisers pay most of the freight, as was done in the past.

at its own game of delivering millions of consumers at a cheap price. "We view our magazine as being complimentary to television," Troyan said. "I think we have the impact and forcefulness of TV and have the lasting power of print."

Troyan points to the success of magazines with similar formats in Europe, notably Paris Match. Not coincidentally, Paris Match owner Daniel Filipacchi is also the owner of Look, having bought the rights to the name from the old owner, Cowles Communications. Filipacchi two years ago began building from the ashes, with Troyan in charge.

"What was so difficult in our case was that we started out with nothing and our ambitions were so great," said Troyan.

Unlike Life, which is published monthly and is almost entirely feature oriented, Look, which comes out twice monthly, works with shorter deadlines that allow it to cover news stories more like the weekly newsmagazines.

"We're going to stay as news-oriented as the events allow us to be," he said. "If there isn't much news, we'll be more feature-oriented." Stories done so far by the magazine's 50-member staff cover subjects like the Kennedy family, Patty Hearst, Nelson Rockefeller and the Arab-Israeli peace agreement.

Troyan is cautiously optimistic about the new Look surviving where its predecessor failed. Circulation, after five issues, is running above 700,000 copies an issue, with each issue so far containing about 18 pages of advertising — not great, but encouraging.

But Troyan expects Look to lose $16 million before it begins breaking even. "Toward the end of the third year, if you believe in the scenario, we'll start making money," he said. "It's Atlantic City and Las Vegas and all those things wrapped together."

Troyan believes that the revival of Look and Life, and the start-up of several other magazines in recent months, represent a renaissance in the magazine business.

NTSU President Resigns At Emergency Meeting Of Regents

AUSTIN (AP) — C.C. "Jitter" Nolen resigned as president of North Texas State University Thursday at an emergency meeting of the school's board of regents.

John L. Carter Jr., university vice president for fiscal affairs, was named acting president.

Nolen's resignation letter was accepted a few hours before he and other NTSU officials were to appear before a House committee investigating the school's relationship to a private foundation.

The House General Investigating Committee also ordered James A. Reid, NTSU Education Foundation executive director, to bring foundation records.

"It was planned for the board to come down here and talk to the people (investigating committee) and then this (resignation) came up," said A.M. Willis Jr., regents chairman.

"I welcome this investigation," Willis said. "All I want to do is get the final facts."

The non-profit foundation is supposed to raise money for the school from private donations.

Nolen became NTSU president in 1971 and promised to increase the amount of private contributions to the fourth-largest state-supported university. The foundation was chartered in 1972 and contributions have risen from about $85,000 that year to $700,000 in 1978.

Carter has said that checks originally made out to the university have been altered to make them payable to the foundation. Reid says the donors agreed to the change, but Carter disputes that.

Rep. Richard Slack, investigating committee chairman, said he was concerned about the NTSU president also being head of the Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine. The medical school is affiliated with North Texas State University.

"There could be a tremendous conflict of interest," said Slack, D-Pecos. "We want to be sure both schools are being treated fairly."

Speaker Bill Clayton told the five-member committee it has a grave task even though Nolen has resigned.

"We don't want a whitewash, but at the same time we're not on a witch hunt," Clayton added.

Mountain Team Battles Unscaled Nepal Peak

B / NEWS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Friday, April 13, 1979

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Gaurishankar is there — and that's reason enough for John Roskelley to want to do something about it.

The 30-year-old mountaineer left recently for an assault on the 23,000-foot virgin peak in Nepal. And after that joint American-Nepalese project is completed, Roskelley said he plans to lead an expedition to the top of the 20,000-foot Uli Biaho Tower in the Karakoram range in Pakistan.

"It's compulsive. It's not something I want to go out and do every day, but it sits in the back of my mind and I have to go," he explained before leaving for Nepal. "I don't think many athletes can tell you why they do what they do. They know they are drawn, but not why.

"In my sport, if you don't prepare for it every day, you are not ready for it mentally, and you aren't as willing or as well equipped to risk your neck."

A mountaineer can handle only about two major climbs a year, he said. The average international climb takes about two months.

A veteran Himalayan climber, Roskelley has scaled two of the 10 highest peaks in the world, but he's still plagued by the question, "When are you going to climb Everest?"

"Everest is not the hardest, it's the highest," said Roskelley, a graduate of Washington State University. "There have been more people on top of Everest than almost any mountain around."

But unclimbed mountains offer no more challenge to Roskelley than those ascended many times by other climbers, he said, and he looks forward to each new climb as though it were his first. "I know I'm very good at it, but I still get this queasy feeling."

Few adventurers are paid for climbing mountains, but the best often receive, without charge, the gear they use and promote. And Roskelley's peak-top photography and country-wide lectures are beginning to pay off — or at least foot the bill to the next peak.

Leaving his wife, Joyce, and their daughter, Dawn, 12, for extended periods is not easy. "It tears me up, especially the first few hours," he said. But he said his wife understands. He met her climbing, though she has since given up the sport.

An ideal climber is competitive but cautious, pleasant, patient and hard-working with a sense of humor, Roskelley said.

"Climbing a mountain is only 25 percent of the job," he said. "You spend your time in freezing weather, making or breaking camp, putting on or taking off soggy, bulky clothes (which can take an hour), and getting the cramps out of your legs.

"You spend night after night in the same sleeping bag, and the snow never packs under your hips so they fit."

A climber never knows when he'll get hit by a rock or buried alive in an avalanche, but often mishaps are more the fault of the man than the mountain, Roskelley said.

The alpinist remembers only too well those expeditions which claimed the lives of fellow climbers.

"In 1974, we were on a slope on Peak 19 in the Russian Pamirs (a then unclimbed face). It was our last camp before the summit."

While heavy winds slammed into falling snow, the four Americans on the expedition set up two tents and made camp. At 2 a.m., an avalanche buried one tent and inundated the other. Roskelley and his partner rescued one climber, but another died.

Roskelley said the exhilaration felt on the way up a mountain can turn to depression on the way down. "The joy is in the achievement and returning to the humdrum business of mowing lawns and washing dishes is kind of a let down," he said. "And realizing you have to wait six months to go after another peak doesn't help."

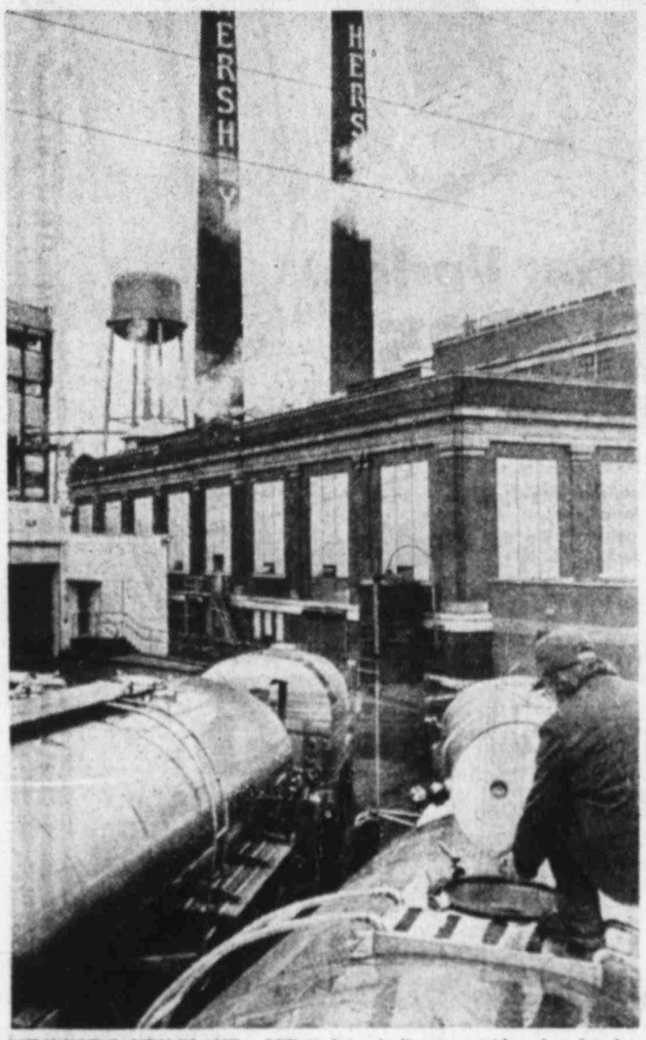
Hershey Milk Escapes Radiation Leak



MILK FOR CANDY PLANT — Milk tank trucks line up outside a chocolate factory in Hershey, Pa., to deliver milk to the plant for use in making chocolate bars. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

As you would expect, there's a lot of milk in milk chocolate.

So when the nation's most serious nuclear accident released radiation into the air 11 miles from Hershey Foods Corp. on East Chocolate Avenue late last month, there was an obvious question.

"Is the milk all right?" asked Hersey Chief Executive William E. Dearden, who satisfies his sweet tooth by eating chocolate every day.

Today's FOCUS

The company also wondered whether Americans scared by the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant might stop buying Hershey bars. Both Hershey and stores that sell lots of candy say that has not happened.

But the milk, 116,000 gallons of it a day, was a ticklish problem.

The company says 11 percent of that milk comes from farms within 20 miles of the power plant. The remainder comes from up to 70 miles from the nuclear station. Hershey traditionally has kept secret how much milk goes into its chocolate. Some of the 116,000 gallons a day is turned into powdered milk and sold.

State officials say radiation levels in samples of milk taken in the area of the nuclear plant area have ranged from nil to far below danger levels. Hershey says its milk is "absolutely safe," but it nonetheless is taking "ultra-conservative" precautions.

Dearden said in an interview the firm does not plan an advertising campaign assuring the public its products are wholesome. But the company sent a letter to employees and shareholders saying its facilities and products are "safe and free of radioactive contamination."

"We are carefully monitoring all products leaving our plant," said the letter. "You can have complete confidence that all products we manufacture are absolutely safe and that we will take every precaution to insure the continuing safety of all products."

The White House, while not naming Hershey, also issued a statement saying "the food from the Three Mile Island area is safe to produce, buy, transport, prepare and eat as the food available at any other place in the U.S."

Hershey's 4,500 employees were calm during the incident. "Over 90 percent of our workforce" was on duty by the Monday after the accident, said Dearden. "There was no more absenteeism than there would be on a snow day."

Dearden said "at the beginning there were people who were concerned" that Hershey's sales might slide because of customer worries over the safety of the company's candies and other products. But there have been no sales cancellations since the accident, he said.

A spot check by The Associated Press found no instance where customers had steered clear of Hershey chocolate out of fear of radiation.

"I just finished eating a chocolate bar and I'm not glowing," quipped one Wall Street analyst who follows Hershey's fortunes.

The costs to Hershey of milk tests and changes in production schedules are "not significant," said Dearden, who declined to say exactly how much the testing and other items have cost.

Health officials' main fear has been that milk from the Harrisburg area might

Holiday Bid Killed By Tech

Classes will be held at Texas Tech University as scheduled on Monday, the day after Easter, according to Dr. Charles S. Hardwick, vice president for Academic Affairs.

The announcement was made this week following passage of a resolution by the Student Association requesting that the day be declared a holiday so that students going home for the Easter weekend would not have to return to Texas Tech on Sunday.

Hardwick explained that the administration believed the extra holiday would be disruptive to the academic schedule so near the end of the semester. "The effect of such an extra day of no classes at this time of the semester was the administration's primary consideration in making the decision," Hardwick said.

Hardwick said a survey of deans reflected similar views that the day off would not be "academically sound" and that it would be in the best interest of students to hold classes as scheduled.

No decision has been announced concerning the possibility of cancellation of classes at noon on Good Friday. Former Gov. Dolph Briscoe released public schools at noon last year and some officials around the state are expecting Gov. Bill Clements to extend the same holiday this year.

City Hall Workers Get Holiday Today

Lubbock's City Hall workers will be the only employees of various governmental agencies and institutions to get a holiday today for Good Friday.

The Lubbock County Courthouse, state offices, U.S. governmental agencies, local banks and savings and loan associations will all be open normal hours today and on Monday, following Easter Sunday.

Lubbock public schools are holding classes on a normal schedule today and Monday, also.

The Post Office will be making regular deliveries during the period.

Stock markets will be closed today, however, so there will be no market page in this evening's and Saturday morning editions of The Avalanche-Journal.

Krueger Named Mexican Affairs Coordinator

AUSTIN (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger has been appointed Special Coordinator for Mexican Affairs by President Carter to oversee multi-agency negotiations between the United States and Mexico, a top White House official disclosed Thursday.

Prior to the announcement, there was speculation Krueger would replace U.S. Ambassador to Mexico Patrick Lucey.

The details of Krueger's assignment will not be completed until he and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance confer with the president when he returns from a 10-day vacation, presidential aide Hamilton Jordan said.

The post was filled expeditiously because of the meeting between Carter and Mexican President Joe Lopez Portillo in June, an administration source said.

Krueger, a 43-year-old Democrat who narrowly lost a challenge to Sen. John Tower last November, was recently mentioned as a candidate to replace Lucey.

DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: Please explain the difference between a blood tumor and a birthmark. How serious is a blood tumor and should it be removed immediately? — Mrs. E.E.

There are many types of birthmarks, but most are hemangiomas, those blood vessel tumors to which you refer. The word "tumor" scares many laymen, who think it refers only to cancer. Most tumors and hemangiomas are quite benign. Of the hemangiomas, the strawberry mark is the most common. These occur most frequently on the head, neck, and trunk, and you may find from one to four on any child. They are various shades of red and may be visible at birth or shortly after. They tend to increase in size the first six months, then get smaller over the next six to 12 months. Between 75 and 95 percent of them disappear in the first year of life.

Patient waiting for the natural disappearance is better than premature tinkering. But it is during this waiting period that some parents get into disputes with their doctors.

The question is what to do about the few hemangiomas that don't disappear and pose cosmetic problems. After age 11 it is unlikely for one to disappear without treatment. It is best to let the doctor, preferably a plastic surgeon, judge matters and tell you whether removal would result in scarring worse than the original mark. You can expect some scarring, dimpling of the skin, or wrinkling in the area after any kind of treatment.

Treatment consists of closing off the little blood vessels (capillaries) that caused the tumor. Dry ice, cortisone, laser beam, cryosurgery and x-rays have been used successfully. The possible side effects of cortisone or x-ray make those less popular among doctors. There have been reports of some success by using bandages and applying pressure to the area. Sometimes further plastic surgery or local treatment after removal is necessary.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Is it true that the nutrient value of canned vegetables is lost if one discards the liquid the vegetables are canned in? — N.V.

Yes, there may be a considerable amount of the vitamin and mineral content in the liquid in which it is packed.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Can one have surgery to correct protruding ears, even when one is an adult? — K.G.

Yes, but it's best done at an earlier age.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Volunteers are like yachts.

No matter where they are, they arouse your curiosity. Who are they? Where do they come from? Why are they here?

They could stay moored where it's safe and still justify their being, but they choose to cut through the rough waters, ride out storms and take chances.

They have style. They're fiercely independent. If you have to ask how much they cost, you can't afford them.

Volunteers and yachts have a lot more in common these days. They're both a part of an aristocratic era that is disappearing from the American scene. They're both a luxury in a world that has become very practical.

Day by day, the number of volunteers decreases in this country as more and more of them equate their worth in terms of dollars and cents.

Three years ago I did a column on volunteers in an effort to point out that they don't contribute to our civilization. They ARE civilization — at least the only part worth talking about.

They are the only human beings on the face of this ear who reflect this nation's compassion, unselfishness, caring, patience, need and just plain loving one another. Their very presence transcends politics, religion, ethnic background, marital status, sexism, even smokers vs. non-smokers.

Maybe, like the yacht, the volunteer was a luxury. And luxuries are too often taken for granted.

One has to wonder. Did we, as a nation, remember to say to the volunteers, "Thank you for our symphony hall. Thank you for the six dialysis machines. Thank you for sitting up with a 16-year-old who overdosed and begged to die. Thank you for the hot chocolate at the scout meeting. Thanks for reading to the blind. Thanks for using your station wagon to transport a group of strangers to a ballgame. Thanks for knocking on doors in the rain. Thanks for hugging the winners of the Special Olympics. Thanks for pushing the wheelchair into the sun. Thanks for being."

Did the media stand behind them when they needed a boost? Did the professionals make it a point to tell them they did a good job? Did the recipients of their time and talent ever express their gratitude?

It frightens me, somehow, to imagine what the world will be like without them.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: I have a 22-year-old unmarried daughter who is expecting a baby. Her friends all seem delighted for her. My husband and I are old-fashioned enough to be embarrassed.

From what you know of the world today, will you tell us in your column if the word "illegitimate" is still as bad for a child as it used to be? And please compare the word to "abortion" in your answer.

If you feel you will be stirring up a hornet's nest by making the comparison, just answer the question. That will be sufficient. — Less Than Thrilled In Memphis

Dear Less Than: The word "illegitimate" means "not sanctioned by law" or "born out of wedlock."

All children deserve acceptance — whether their parents are married or not. And this means acceptance by grandparents as well.

To attempt to compare the word "illegitimate" with "abortion" would be like comparing the Brooklyn Bridge with the Lincoln Park Zoo. One has nothing whatsoever to do with the other.

Dear Ann Landers: Two of my friends have gone into business. My husband thinks they are crazy. What do you think?

Sandy and Myra have started a message service. They will deliver by mail or telephone any message so long as it is not threatening or obscene. The fee is $5. Same-day hand-delivery is $10. The idea is to help people who, for some reason or other, cannot tell a friend, neighbor, colleague or relative something they ought to be told. (In the sender's opinion.)

The service is called "Chicken Wire." Messages sent in the mail are printed on yellow cards. Attached are pieces of real chicken wire and a few white feathers. If the sender wishes to keep his or her identity a secret, confidentiality is guaranteed.

Types of chicken wires sent, for example, are messages saying, "You have bad breath." Or, "Your gum-popping and knuckle-cracking is driving us crazy." Or, "If you are romantically involved, wear a scarf around your neck tomorrow. If not, and you would like a dinner date, leave the scarf off."

Is this a crazy business or not? — Columbus, Ohio Reader

Dear Reader: It sounds like a fairly inexpensive way to get something off your chest, relay a message that could do some good, or put a burr under Cupid's saddle. I rather like it.

Dear Ann Landers: You are older than my grandmother but I think you still have all your buttons. I need some advice.

I'm 17 and dropped out of high school five months ago to go to work. The job lasted five weeks and I've been looking ever since. I saw an ad in a magazine that says, "Overseas employment in exciting places. No high school diploma or college degree necessary. Earn from $500 to $2500 a month. Expenses paid." It also said, "Send $5 for information and forms." How does this sound to you? — Buddy

Dear Buddy: Great! For the people who are running the ad. If they can collect $5 from 300 suckers a day, they make half a million dollars a year.

Get back into school and graduate or you'll be looking at ads for the rest of your life — and kicking yourself a lot.

PARSLEY

If you have a sunny kitchen window, you can successfully grow a pot of parsley on it. You can start the parsley from seed. Keep the soil moist, but don't be an over-achiever when it comes to watering! After the sprigs are tall enough to cut, new ones spring up fairly rapidly.

Book Offers Magnificent Views Of Manhattan

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

When I left New York City on New Year's Day 1979 after 71 years, I brought a lot of memories and pictures with me to my new home in Delray Beach, Fla.

I also brought a new book of magnificent Manhattan views that is an amazing record of one area of the city photographed from one vantage point over a period of almost a quarter of a century. I highly recommend it to anyone who has lived in, vacationed in, or ever dreamed of visiting, America's most exciting metropolis.

The book is "A World Through My Window" by Ruth Orkin, published by Harper & Row ($19.95). Her window was on the 15th floor of an apartment house overlooking Central Park. From it she documented in Kodachrome's complete painter's palette the remarkable range of subtle colors and moods that Mother Nature assembled in the park for 23 years in all of its seasonal and weather changes. Many of the colorful scenes are unique one-of-a-kind happenings that were never seen before or since — such as the 3 p.m. brown rainstorm that briefly lashed the city in crazy gusts in 1969, or the early morning lavender haze which bathed Fifth Avenue buildings across the park in the early 1970s.

Miss Orkin stresses the fact that she used no filters and no tricks to get the unusual color images and the pictures that are pink, yellow, blue, brown or lavender actually looked that way in the original setting. Of the 55 color photographs in the book, almost half were taken with the normal 50mm lens; about one-third were shot with a 135mm telephoto; three pictures are wide-angle views with a 28mm lens; and three others are the result of experimenting with borrowed lenses — an 8mm fisheye, a 500mm telephoto and a 270mm lens with an extender.

Her basic equipment, therefore, is that used by many serious camera fans but what she added was a consistent point of view; an artistic eye for subtle changes in lighting; persistence, patience and enthusiasm; and a careful or practical method of keeping track of all the results with dates and notes so that they could be retrieved and used any time later.

Ruth Orkin had no idea when she moved into her apartment in 1955 that the views from the window would make a book. Back in California, she had been a filmmaker who, with her husband, Morris Engel, had produced award-winning films, "The Fugitive" and "Lovers and Lollipops."

She was also a freelance photojournalist whose work appeared in Life, Look and other publications; was represented in Edward Steichen's memorable "Family of Man" exhibition; and has been acquired by collectors and several museums.

In her new apartment in New York City, Miss Orkin became a homemaker, raising two children, with a gorgeous view of Central Park. Her photographic energy was divided between focusing on the children and the view. At a 6 a.m. feeding, she also got a record of the mist hovering over the Central Park Sheep Meadow. At 2 p.m. playpen time, she'd check the scene and it might be kite-flying day in the park, or a pruner lopping off tree branches, or a circus press conference complete with a herd of elephants and other carnival trappings. At 5 p.m. bath time, dusk was setting in and the reflected glow of sunset sometimes swathed the park's surrounding buildings in pink hues as room lights twinkled. At 10 p.m., a picture of a child asleep in bed could be followed by a night shot with the park and building lights sparkling in a snowy winter setting.

A camera was always kept ready and loaded with the fastest daylight-type Kodachrome film near the living room window, the only window used because it was the only one without an air-conditioner. Shooting was always done with the window open — never through the glass, even during rain or snow storms. Because of a low sill, the window had iron bars with an 11-inch shooting space between them. For long, night-time exposures, the camera was clamped to the top window bar and while she sometimes used a cable release, most often Miss Orkin held the shutter release for seconds, and even up to four minutes during the New York City blackout in 1965.

"Sounds take me to the window, too," she says, "voices on loudspeakers announcing events in the park, symphony rehearsals, bongo drums, the oompah of a parade band, helicopter motors, thunder and lightning, the agonized screech of tires on the street below, and the full, utter silence that follows a big snow."

The changing kaleidoscope of events, the seasons, the weather, the colors and the illumination which she captured bring her immense personal satisfaction.

"It's fun, too," she adds, "knowing that I've had the power, through my camera, to stop something long enough in order to see it properly at all. Cloud movements, erratic storms, lightning, all occur so fleetingly that only the photograph holds them still long enough to be savored."

I see "A World Through My Window" by Ruth Orkin as a fine lesson for other camera enthusiasts. Its message is: Follow your instincts, shoot what appeals to you and build a collection of images with a unifying theme. Remember, in unity there is strength. In photography, such unity is called a photo essay or pictorial story. With enough substance, a photo essay could wind up as a book or an exhibition.

Concept Of Latch Hooking Growing In Popularity Today

Latch hooking is one of the most popular crafts today and is continually growing in popularity. Yet, the basic concept of handhooking a rug is centuries old.

Hooked fabrics were in use in Egypt as early as the fifth century. Hooked rugs (or wall hangings) as we know them today desceded from the hooked clothing and bedcovers of the Bronze Age Scandinavians. It was during the invasion of the British Isles that they itroduced hooking to the Britons. The Swedish word "rugge," meaning coarse or rough, became the English word "Rug," meaning cloak or wrap. The colonial housewives began hooking floor covers and the modern meaning of "rug" came to being.

Latch hooking has changed in recent decades. You can purchase an array of evenly cut yarn pieces in a wide variety of colors instead of cutting pieces of rags. And latch hooking as we know it today is usually done by using a piece of polyester canvas mesh instead of the firmly woven burlap.

The great thing about latch hooking is that it isn't hard to master. After a few simple practice punches with the hook, you'll be on your way. The secret to a successful creative finish is to keep the yarn evenly knotted.

The Butterflies and Pussy Willows latch hook measuring a splendid 20" x 27" and is a grand place to start learning this new skill. If you've already hooked many pieces, it's still a fine place to continue with the craft.

The kit combines two butterflies flitting among delicate pussywillows.

The kit contains acrylic rug yarn, canvas with stamped designed, and complete instructions. Order Kit. No. 14821 for $22.99 plus $1.95 postage and handling. If you need a latch hook (needed to complete the kit), order latch hook No. 03029 for $1.49 plus $.95 postage and handling. Creative Home Crafts is required to pay and collect sales tax in Texas.

Columnist Recommends Complete Refinishing

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q. — Our kitchen cabinets are of white oak. They have a white finish with the wood grain showing through and apparently are covered with varnish. Around the handles and knobs, the white part has worn off. Also, everything has a yellowish appearance. Should I touch up the white spots, remove all the old finish or what? And can you tell me which finish will not turn yellow in time?

A. — If you touch up only the worn spots, it will be very difficult to get a perfect match with the surrounding surfaces. You might try a single spot to see how it turns out. If you can't get a good result, then a complete refinishing can be done. As to which finishes will not turn yellow, that's a difficult question to answer because a lot depends on how well the surface is maintained in an area so susceptible to grease and grime as a kitchen. Manufacturers of some of the urethane finishes say their products resist yellowing. Whatever you use, if you keep the surface waxed, it will then be easier to keep clean. However, periodic removals of the old wax must be made, as a wax buildup by itself might get a yellowish tinge.

Q. — Is there any estimate of how valuable storm windows are from the standpoint of saving money on fuel?

A. — The National Bureau of Standards says that an investment in storm windows in an area where the temperatures in winter are about the same as those in Washington, D.C., will pay for itself in about 10 years. In colder areas, the payback will occur in about seven years.

Q. — What should be used to cut mineral-wool batts of insulation?

A. — Any sharp knife will do, including a serrated-edge kitchen knife.

(Where and how to insulate are included in Andy Lang's booklet, "Save Money by Insulating," available by sending 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Indian Stamps Honor 'Year Of Child'

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

"The International Year of the Child" provides an excellent opportunity for countries throughout the world to publicize this universal appeal via their postage stamps.

Each stamp bears the "IYC" symbol and the inscription "Happy Child — Nation's Pride" and "International Year of the Child."

Also issuing a stamp set for the IYC is the Republic of Maldives. The designs depict a child with a balloon, a child with a toy bear, a child with sail boat and a child playing with a model train.

Four well known British dogs are featured on that country's first special stamps for 1979. Seen in an appropriate landscape are an Old English Sheepdog on the 9-pence stamp, a Welsh Springer Spaniel on the 10½-pence, a West Highland Terrier on the 11-pence and an Irish Setter on the 15-pence.

This new set was issued to coincide with Cruft's Dog Show in London as the stamps continue the British Post Office's popular animal series introduced by the British Wildlife issue of 1977. Another set in the series portraying horses is scheduled for release in July.

For many years, Helen Parker of Troy, N.Y., has been urging the U.S. Postal Service to print the year of issue on each stamp, — but to no avail. Mrs. Parker is determined to win her cause, and we're on her side.

"Several years ago I wrote to you about putting a year date on stamps to help everyone in sorting out look-alike issues. Your department's campaign now is to get young and-or new people interested in saving stamps. Wouldn't this be a good guide for them?

"In going over some stamps yesterday, I found a French blue and maroon with '1975 Postes' placed on one side and also an Austrian with 1975 at the bottom in fine print. Are the French and Austrians ahead of us?"

The Netherlands hails the 400th anniversary of the Union of Utrecht with a special 55-cent stamp. The Union of Utrecht was a declaration of solidarity signed by a number of Dutch provinces in their struggle against Spanish rule.

The new stamp depicts two hands against a background of arrows, according to the World Wide Philatelic Agency.

From now until June the town of Utrecht will have many celebrations to honor the fourth centenary of the famous document.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The odds are that Terence Reese made up today's hand. In any event, North and South overbid a trifle to reach six spades after East opens with a third-hand psychic bid of one diamond.

Not that there isn't a pretty good play for the slam, assuming that West's diamond lead was a singleton. All South needs is a 2-2 break in trumps or failing that to have the club queen drop under the ace-king.

South takes the first diamond and leads out the ace and king of trumps to find that the suit breaks 3-1. There is no reason not to draw the last trump, so South draws it.

Now he cashes the ace and king of clubs and the queen fails to make her appearance. Is there anything South can do?

He can if he risks a two-trick set. He leads his 10 of hearts and finesses dummy's jack. Then he leads the jack of clubs and chucks his ace of hearts.

West is in with the queen of clubs and South is home with game, slam and rubber. West has to lead a club or heart and South gets to chuck his nine and six of diamonds.

CAUSES OF TOOTHGRINDING

MIAMI (UPI) — Toothgrinding is three times more common in children with asthma or allergies than in those who are allergy and asthma-free, says Dr. Meyer B. Marks of the University of Miami allergy clinic. Marks says desensitizing the children reduces or stops tooth-grinding. He says the causes of the trouble include allergic disorders of the respirators tract, especially those affecting the middle ear and eustachian tube.

BOMB DEATHS

THIENE, Italy (AP) — A bomb blew up in a house here Wednesday, destroying the house and killing three young terrorists police said were assembling the explosive device. The three, two men and a woman, were identified as members of the leftist Autonomia (Autonomy) group.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Having limited closet space, at the end of each season I have to pack my out-of-season clothes in boxes to store.

Last spring I packed my vinyl jacket with other coats and jackets. Since some of them were wool or wool blends, I placed a supply of mothballs throughout the box as I do every year.

Apparently some of the mothballs rested on my vinyl jacket, for when I unpacked it this past winter, there were blue splotches all over it. My conclusion was that the chemicals in the mothballs caused a reaction on the vinyl.

I felt I had to write you to let you warn others who have to pack garments away to be careful of what they pack in mothballs. — A.M.

With all the man-made materials on the market now, this could be a problem, I'm sure. If you're in doubt as to what non-wool garments can be packed in mothballs, it might be best to use a substitute, such as cedar chips. — Heloise

For the mothers and grandmothers who buy gift stationery for their children who live far away, address and stamp a few of the envelopes to yourself.

DEAR HELOISE:

About two years ago my two little girls came home from a fair with first prize — a pair of goldfish!

The problem was where to put them. I found a pretty terrarium bowl which for some reason my plants hated, so I put the fish in it.

This worked fine for awhile until my 10-month-old put a whole box of fish food into the bowl and then stirred the fish and the food with a fork.

Drastic action was called for, so we took a large hook and put it into a beam in the ceiling. Next I put the bowl into a pretty macrame plant holder and hung it up.

I've gotten many compliments, but I'm reminded of what my mother used to say, "When you have a baby, you have to hang everything from the ceiling." Mother knows best! — Margaret Montemayor

DEAR HELOISE:

Next time you pass one of those copying machines in the shopping mall and such places, stop!

Take all the credit cards, social security card, bank cards, and other important papers you may have with you, and line them up in the machine with the account numbers and name visible to the printing meohanism.

You now have a record of all your important cards in case you lose them or they are stolen. If the name and address of the company is printed on the back of the card, turn them over and print the other side. If not, write the name and address on the copy.

Put the copy(s) in a safe plaoe for future reference. — Irene Gildart

LCC Band Receives Uniforms

Lubbock Christian College band director Eddie Chance received an "extra" birthday gift last week when an aunt, Mrs. Leona Moffitt of Paducah, donated 68 band uniforms to the college.

Chance was hopeful of having donations for 100 band uniforms for LCC's first football season next fall, but when time came to order the uniforms, donations for only 32 had been received.

April 3rd was Chance's 33rd birthday and he received a small gift from Mrs. Moffitt, who saved her surprise for the LCC Band Banquet last Saturday.

Mrs. Moffitt made the presentation in memory of her late husband, Wylie A. Moffitt, who died in November of 1977, and in honor of Chance, who has been band director at LCHS since 1968, when the received his Bachelor of Music Education Degree from Abilene Christian. Chance began directing the Royal Blue Band of LCC in 1975.

Mrs. Moffitt encouraged band members to "put forth their best effort and work hard to make the first LCC marching band the best band you have ever been associated with" at the band banquet.

Chance, who attended LCC when the College was a junior college and took his Masters of Education degree from Texas Tech in 1970, designed the uniform, which resembles a drum and bugle corps uniform.

The pants and western style hat are royal blue, the shirt is white with a blue collar, stripe and cuff. The breastplate, waistband and sheath are red with LCC lettering on the sheath and Chap lettering on the waistband in white. The pants have a white stripe down the leg and the shoes are also white.

Only a day before the "surprise" came, LCC's Interclub Council had presented the band with a challenge. The ICC had told the band members they would donate $2,000 toward the uniforms if they could raise $2,000.

Since Mrs. Moffitt's gift, the ICC has donated the $2,000 toward the purchase of needed instruments for the band.

"I think a gift of this sort is great," LCC President Dr. Harvie M. Pruitt said. "People from all walks of life are interested in a Christian College and their needs, if you'll just inform them of what you need and why and this is an excellent example of what can happen when people know your needs."

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR APR. 13, 1979

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 2, 13, 25, 36, 48, 59, 71 ... Reduced reaction time
Highs: 3-12, 26-35, 49-58, 72-75 ... Gymnastics a snap
Lows: 1, 14-24, 37-47, 60-70 ... Likely to be tired

EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 6, 20, 34, 48, 62, 76 ... Easily blue - depressing
Highs: 7-19, 35-47, 63-75 ... Positive day emotionally
Lows: 1-5, 21-33, 49-61, 77-85 ... You've got the blues

INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 13, 29, 46, 62, 79, 95 ... Mentally you're off
Highs: 14-28, 47-61, 80-94 ... Propitious day
Lows: 1-12, 30-45, 63-78 ... Perception minus time

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Heartline

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 East Dayton Street, West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: I am 60 years old. I am the common-law wife of a man who will turn 65 this year and start drawing Social Security benefits. We have two children who are 12 and 13 years old. When my husband retires, will my children be eligible for Social Security benefits on their father's work record? — V.H.

They may be. In many states a child born of a common-law marriage may be recognized for inheritance purposes even if the state does not recognize the validity of the common-law marriage. If the child has inheritance rights with respect to his father and he is living with or receiving contributions from his father, he can receive dependent children's benefits.

Even if the child is not eligible under the applicable state law, there are other alternatives. If your common-law husband has been declared the father by a court action, or is ordered to pay support because he is the father or if he has acknowledged your children in writing, the children can qualify. In addition, if you have other evidence to show that he is the father of your children and he is living with or contributing to the support of the children, they can qualify for benefits on his earnings record. To be sure, contact your nearest Social Security office.

HEARTLINE: I am going to turn 65 very soon and I will be under Medicare. I have heard that a person is only covered for 90 lifetime days in the hospital under Medicare. Is this true? — J.T.

You are confusing your regular 90-day benefit with the 60-day lifetime reserve which was explained in a previous column. Under the regular 90-day benefit, you have up to 90 days of hospital coverage during one benefit period. A benefit period begins when you go into the hospital and ends When you leave the hospital and are at home for at least 60 days. For example, if you go into the hospital for 25 days, then are released and have been at home for 60 days, your benefit period has ended and you will then be eligible for a new benefit period and 90 more days of coverage.

HEARTLINE: As a senior citizen, I am thoroughly confused regarding Social Security benefits for a husband and wife. I am receiving a Social Security check of my own. My wife has worked and paid into Social Security for over 25 years. She intends to apply for benefits at age 62 (1980). Will her Social Security benefits be less because I am receiving my own benefit? Will my benefits be recomputed? — R.E.

Your wife can apply for benefits at age 62 on her own work record and also on your work record. She will be awarded the highest benefit of the two, but not both. Whichever she receives, it will have no effect on your benefits and your benefit will have no effect on her benefits.

HEARTLINE: Does a widow or widower lose entitlement for life to VA benefits if he or she remarries? — T.J.

No. A widow or widower may reclaim elgibility for VA benefits if the remarriage is terminated by death, divorce or annulment.

Ordinance Declared Unconstitutional

CLEVELAND (AP) — A federal judge has struck down as unconstitutional an ordinance that gave the mayor of Niles, Ohio, sole authority to issue solicitation permits to groups like the Unification Church.

The church had challenged the ordinance and similar ones in eight other Ohio cities. In a ruling this week, U.S. District Judge William K. Thomas cited the First Amendment guarantee of free speech. Church attorney Eugene S. Bayer said four of the cities — North Canton, Galion, New Philadelphia and Youngstown — have agreed to modify their ordinances. Bayer said he would ask Bucyrus, Girard, Lisbon and Massillon to modify theirs. Niles Mayor Arthur M. Doutt said he stopped issuing permits to Unification Church members because citizens complained of harrassment by solicitors.

STUDENTS EVACUATED

FRANKFORT, Ind. (AP) — About 1,000 students at Frankfort High School were evacuated Thursday when teachers found a quantity of a potentially explosive chemical in a laboratory, authorities said. Assistant principal John Milholland said the students filed out about 10 a.m. CST, after chemistry teacher Margaret Bures found a container of picric acid, a chemical with an explosive potential similar to TNT. The chemical becomes more unstable with age and if it is heated, Milholland said. A U.S. Army bomb disposal unit from Indianapolis was called to dispose of the chemical.

Presidential Aide To Quit Position

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rick Inderfurth, one of the top-ranking aides on the White House National Security Council, quit the White House staff Thursday to begin work on Capitol Hill.

His resignation is the second in recent days from the staff of Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security affairs adviser.

Associate White House press secretary Jerrold Schecter, spokesman for the security council, said Inderfurth, 32, would become deputy staff director of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

He had been a special assistant to Brzezinski, who planned to attend a farewell party for him Friday evening.

Schecter confirmed on Thursday that Jessica Tuchman Mathews, a National Security Council staff member specializing in nuclear proliferation, human rights and arms sales, would leave her post next month.

She had worked on the presidential campaign staff of Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., in 1976 when Udall challenged Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Schecter said she would leave the White House staff "for personal reasons."

Week's Record Of Major Roll Call Votes By Area Congressmen

HOUSE

PANAMA The House adopted, 272 for and 117 against, an amendment eliminating $2.5 million military aid to Panama. The vote came during debate on HR 3173, a foreign military-aid bill later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., sponsor of the amendment, said that under the new Panama Canal Treaty the Panamanian government next year would receive at least $65 million in canal tolls. Partly because of this "new direct income" it no longer needs U.S. military aid, he said.

Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wisc., an opponent, said the amendment would harm U.S. security, because loss of U.S. military aid would make it difficult for Panama "to fulfill its obligation in the joint defense of the canal."

Most of those voting "yea" were either conservatives who disliked the new treaty or members who objected to the repression of human rights by the Panamanian military dictatorship.

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, Charles Wilson, D-2, James Collins, R-3, Ray Roberts, D-4, Jim Mattox, D-5, Phil Gramm, D-6, Bill Archer, R-7, Jake Pickle, D-10, J. Marvin Leath, D-11, Jack Hightower, D-13, Joe Wyatt, D-14, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Richard White, D-16, Charles Stenholm, D-17, Kent Hance, D-19, Tom Loeffler, R-21, Ron Paul, R-22, Abraham Kazen, D-23, and Martin Frost, D-24, voted "yea."

Reps. Bob Eckhardt, D-8, James Wright, D-12, Mickey Leland, D-18, Rep. Mauel Lujan, R-1 and Henry Gonzalez, D-20, voted "nay."

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-9 and Rep. Harold Runnels, D-2, did not vote.

OCS COMMITTE The House voted, 194 for and 172 against, to extend the life of the Select Committee on the Outer Continental Shelf through June 30, 1980. The annual budget, not counting staff salaries, is about $300,000. Originally the panel was created on a temporary basis, to write a law governing the development of offshore oil and gas resources. In its extended life, it will conduct oversight in an effort to see the law fully implemented.

Rep. Edwin Forsythe, R-N. J., a supporter, said that "if we are going to have an accelerated program to insure development of any energy potential from the Outer Continental Shelf ... we need the OCS committee ... to make sure that those processes are not foiled by the bureaucracy."

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., an opponent, noted that other House committees already perform the proposed OCS committee mission. He added: "If members want to save the taxpayers some money and put an end to a committee that has done its job ... they will vote against the select committee."

Members voting "nay" were opposed to continuing the select committee.

Roberts, Mattox, Exkhardt, Pickle, Hightower, Stenholm, Leland, Paul, Kazen, Lujan and Frost voted "nay."

Brooks and Runnels did not vote.

OPEC AID The House rejected, 175 for and 222 against, an amendment to eliminate foreign aid to members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). The amendment was proposed to HR 3324, the fiscal 1981 foreign aid bill, which was headed toward final passage. OPEC nations, which recently increased the price of their oil by at least nine per cent, would get $100 million in direct and indirect non-military aid from the bill.

Rep. Joseph Minish, D-N., a supporter of the cut, said "it is about time that the U.S. put a halt to OPEC'S greedy price gouging and profiteering ... it is total contradictory that we cite OPEC as a major cause for the inflation we face today and then turn around and give those countries" foreign aid.

Rep. Gerry Studs, D-Mass., an opponent, said; "We have members ... weep tears about the gouging of the American people. I suspect the same members are fervently in favor of decontrolling the price of U.S. crude oil and gasoline, which would, of course, further gouge the American people."

Mattock, Eckhardt, Brooks, Pickle, Wright, Leland, Gonzalez and Frost voted "nay."

Hightower, Wyatt, Runnels and de la Garza did not vote.

SENATE

RENEGOTIATION BOARD The Senate failed, 28 for and 56 against, to keep alive the Renegotiation Board. The agency, which went out of business a few days before this vote, for the past 25 years has recaptured what it judged to be excess profits earned by defense companies on government contracts. The vote occurred during debate on HR 2283 (see vote below).

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wisc., a supporter of the agency, said it brings in ten dollars for every dollar it costs. He termed it "ironic" that congressmen "who want to see the federal budget balanced are also going along with the movement to abolish" the board.

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., said: "Two of the best days this country has had this year were the two days it snowed (in Washington). Nobody could get in here to do anything ... It is about time we start ... reducing bureaucracy, balancing the budget ..."

Senators voting "nay" were opposed to keeping the Renegotiation Board in existence.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D, Pete Domenici, R, and John Tower, R, voted "nay."

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R, did not vote.

WAGE COUNCIL The Senate passed, 62 for and 22 against, a bill (HR 2283) extending the Life of the Council on Wage and Price Stability for another year. The bill, which increases the council staff from 39 to 233 and sets an annual budget level of $8.48 million, was sent back to the House for final congressional action. The council, an arm of the White House, oversees President Carter's wage and price guidelines.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wisc., a supporter, said "we should not kill the only agency we have ... to fight inflation."

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., an opponent, said: "An enlarged role for the council will bring even more changes, rules, regulations and reports ... when the business community is already reeling" from previous council actions.

Bentsen and Dominici voted "yea."

Tower voted "nay."

Schmitt did not vote.

Actress To Leave Detective Series

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Kate Jackson, reportedly unhappy with being one of TV's "Charlie's Angels," will not return to the show next season.

The popular series about a trio of pretty, bouncy female detectives has just completed its third season.

"It's just that we feel it's best for Kate Jackson and 'Charlie's Angels' to bring in a new angel next year," said Marvin Katz, of Spelling-Goldberg Productions, which makes the show for ABC. "We just didn't exercise her option. Beyond that, we have no commment."

Miss Jackson's press agent, Mark Landia, said his client was not fired from the show, but he would not comment further. He did say that Miss Jackson was working on a TV movie and that she might be involved in another Spelling-Goldberg television series currently in the works.

Miss Jackson is the second "Angel" to leave the series in three years, following Farrah Fawcett-Majors, who was replaced after one season by Cheryl Ladd.

Auditions were being planned to find a replacement for Miss Jackson for next season. The other regulars — David Doyle, who plays unit leader to ladies, Miss Ladd and Jaclyn Smith, the only original "Angel," will remain on the show.

Truck Weight Limit Discussed In Austin

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Farm trailers and semi-trailers could carry more weight, and operate temporarily on state highways, under legislation by Rep. Mike Ezzell, Synder, which was tentatively approved Wednesday by the House.

A final House vote will send the legislation to the Senate for action.

Currently, farm trailers weighing under 15,000 pounds may operate temporarily on state highways without paying vehicle registration fees.

Tech Debate Team Sets Forum Today

The Texas University Forum will feature a debate today on the motion, "Resolved, that fair trials are more important than a free press," from 12:15 to 1:15 p.m. in the University Center Ballroom.

Speakers will be Mary John Cherry, senior, for the motion and Mark Lanier, freshman, against. Both are members of the Texas Tech intercollegiate debate teams.

Prof. John F. Deethardt of the Speech Communications faculty will chair the debate which is open to the public.

Onion Harvest Continues Despite Local Strike

RAYMONDVILLE (AP) — Striking onion field workers, upset when a grower replaced them with pickers who said they were from Mexico, Thursday swarmed a Willacy County field in an effort to convince the pickers to leave.

Law enforcement officials from several agencies looked on as about 100 members of the Texas Farm Workers Union spoke to about 75 pickers.

"Yes I anticipate trouble " said Oscar Correa, Willacy County Sheriff. He had said earlier in the day. "A whole bunch of it but I don't know when."

Earlier Thursday, the TFWU added picket lines at two local banks.

Pickets also continued at a packing shed and onion field owned by Charles Wetegrove. The strikers are demanding increased pay, better working conditions and collective bargaining rights.

The picket lines at the two banks were in answer to bank officials who Wednesday volunteered their services at the packing shed.

After a morning meeting, where Correa promised protection for workers who want to return to the fields but are afraid, the strikers boarded their bus and headed for a western Willacy County field.

TFWU members walked off the field last week. Strikers said the field was owned by Wetegrove when they left.

When the bus arrived at the sun-baked field, workers there said they had been brought from Reynosa, Mexico, and were being paid 25 cents per bag of onions.

TFWU is demanding $1 per bag.

"We thought that everything had stopped," strike leader Jesus Moya said as he looked out over a field dotted with 1,500 bags of picked onions ready to be packed.

After a few minutes of talking to the workers, the strikers were confronted by a man who said he was a field hand for Griffin and Brand Produce of McAllen.

The man said the McAllen firm had recently purchased the field and informed the TFWU members they were trespassing.

The field hand drove off and the strikers retreated to a public road nearby.

Within 45 minutes the onion field, about 200 yards square, was lined by law enforcement officers.

The strikers, their number having dwindled to about a dozen, then returned to the field and Sheriff Correa warned them to leave.

"We're going to try everything not to arrest them," the sheriff said.

However, the strikers would not leave and Correa then told four TFWU members they were to be arrested.

At that moment the workers boarded their bus and left and the union members left the field. No arrests were made.

Correa said three arrests had been made since the strike began last week.

"A lot of windshields have been broken and a lot of rocks have been thrown," he said.

OLD EL PASO

AT LAST.
THRILLS & CHILIES
IN REFRIED BEANS.

Refried bean lovers, Old El Paso's about to put a little spice in your life. And a whole lot of temptation.

Introducing our new Refried Beans with Green Chilies. The first refried beans with mild, juicy chili peppers. Plus a pinch of onion. And a delectable dash of garlic.

Serve them alone for a lively side dish that's a snap to make. Or use them to give your favorite recipes extra snappy flavor.

Cook up an exciting Acapulco pizza.

What do you get when you cross an Italian pizza with spicy Mexican flavor? A new, easy meal that's doubly tempting.

For 4 to 6 servings, place a large flour tortilla on an ungreased cookie sheet and bake for 2 minutes. At the same time, brown 1 lb. ground beef and drain. Stir in 5 tablespoons Old El Paso Taco Seasoning and ¾ cup water; bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, another 10–15 minutes.

Pour 1 can Old El Paso Refried Beans with Green Chilies over the tortilla, top with meat. Bake at 425° for 8–10 minutes. Top with 1 cup shredded cheese and bake 2 more minutes. Sprinkle lettuce, tomato, green peppers and Hot or Mild Old El Paso Taco Sauce on top.

Turn out scrumptious cheese turnovers.

For 12, cut 6 oz. of Monterey Jack cheese into a dozen 3x1x¼" strips. On each of 12 Old El Paso Corn Tortillas spread 1 tbs. of Old El Paso Refried Beans with Green Chilies. Top each tortilla with a slice of cheese, fold in half and secure with a toothpick. Heat 2 tbs. cooking oil in a skillet. Then brown turnovers 2 minutes on each side.

More about our mouthwatering beans.

Old El Paso also makes savory Refried Beans with Sausage. And, of course, there's our original delicious Refried Beans. Look for them in our convenient section in your store.

Stocks Fall In Slow Day

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.21 to 870.50, concluding the week with a net loss of 5.19 points.

New York Stock Exchange volume slowed to a 2½-week low of 26.78 million shares, against 32.90 million Wednesday.

One notable exception to the generally sluggish trend was Cyprus Mines, a producer of copper, lead and zinc, which jumped 9⅜ to 36⅞ as of the 4 p.m. close in New York.

Standard Oil of Indiana agreed to acquire the company, whose stock traded as low as 16⅝ two years ago, for $42 a share.

In its most recent review of Cyprus Mines, the Value Line Investment Survey described it as "our favorite among copper stocks," noting that after problems in recent years, stemming partly from depressed metals prices, it was "well on the way to recovery."

The Dow Jones industrial average had fallen 7.01 points Wednesday as International Business Machines, the No. 1 holding of investing institutions, reported a 13.2 percent first-quarter earnings increase that came in well short of many analysts' advance estimates.

New York (AP) — Thursday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues at Consolidated Tape close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

First Quarter Lubbock Bank Deposits Show 2.5 Percent Increase

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock Banks registered record first quarter deposits in the midst of rising inflation and high interest rates, according to quarterly records.

Totals for the nine Lubbock banks at the end of March 1979 reached $1,095,884,565 — approximately a 2.5 percent increase over first quarter deposits in 1978 of $1,069,609,750.

Deposits after March 31 did show a decrease of $9,011,182, or one percent, from the total reached during the last quarter of 1978. Deposits at the end of December 1978 were $1,104,895,747.

Several bank presidents who reported first quarter figures below those of December attributed the change to fluctuations due to the agricultural economy.

Tommie Stevens, president of Texas Commerce Bank, said there is normally a decline in first quarter holdings as the volume of agricultural commodities handled drops. "The cotton season is over by the end of the first quarter," he explained.

Wayne Finnell, president of Lubbock National Bank, said the first quarter was "slow due to late crop harvest, poor weather and generally unsettled business conditions on an international and national level."

He added that the drop in his bank's deposits from $277,743,002 at the end of March last year to $272,566,491 in first quarter holdings this year was "primarily due to a drop in public funds."

Other bank presidents who reported figures above those of quarters ending both March and December 1978, said that the increases represented normal growth for their banks.

"We were up $16-17 million over the fourth quarter last year," said Howard Yandell, president of First National Bank. "We feel like, for our deposit structure, that it's normal growth at this time."

He said that some of the increase from last quarter was due to the late cotton harvest. "Agricultural depositors were late getting their commodities sold. There was a carry-over from the fourth quarter into this quarter," he said.

W.R. Collier, president of American State Bank, said the institution's increase of about $7 million from last March and $9 million from last December was normal growth, reflecting "the prosperity of our depositors." Collier added, "We're optimistic for the coming years."

Other bankers expressed satisfaction with deposit growth and the state of the Lubbock economy.

"I would say our figures represent a healthy increase in demand deposits over the same time a year ago," said Rodney Joy, president of Bank of the West. "Our local economy is running at full force." He added that consumer spending is "still strong."

The president of Lubbock's newest bank credited the increase in deposits from its first report in December to the bank's understanding of the needs of the business community.

Bill Horton of Southwest Lubbock National Bank said, "We're quite pleased with our progress in the growth of deposits. The majority of our growth is due to the fact that we're tuned into the needs of business, commerce and professional trade of this area. We feel we have an understanding of their needs and we're filling those needs."

Horton also reported "good growth" in individual accounts at Southwest, which opened in November 1978.

The city bankers gave a number of different reasons for the growth and strength of the Lubbock economy despite a slightly dim national economic picture.

"There is a broader diversification of the economic base in Lubbock," said Horton. "With the injection of industry into the city, we've seen a diversification...so we're not totally reliant on one segment."

Said Sherlan Selke, vice president at Security National Bank, "We don't have to depend on big heavy industry and big labor for the survival of our city."

Finnell said that "earnings and volume-wise, merchants had a good first quarter. People are buying vigorously in anticipation of inflation and that causes inventories to run down so that merchants are borrowing for inventory purposes."

The economic outlook for the coming year is positive, according to most of the bankers, though some tempered their predictions with a few reservations.

"We're optimistic for the coming year," said Collier. "But it's tempered somewhat with the continued problems of inflation and high fuel costs."

He added that "there is a problem of the high cost of funds payable to depositors, which in turn leads to a high cost to borrowers. And that adds to the tightening up of money."

Joy said that if problems such as layoffs occur, "we could see a slowdown in our economy and in consumer spending. But in the next six months, I don't see a significant change in the Lubbock economy."

T.J. Wallace, president of Plains National Bank, said the agricultural outlook is good and the unemployment rate remains low. He said the economy "will be good all year."

"We're optimistic going into the spring planting season with the good moisture we've had," said Yandell. "As long as we see good crops, our deposits will hold pretty stable."

Health Officials Say Milk Okay

contain radioactive iodine-131, a compound that can travel through the air to pastures where cows graze. The compound then can travel through cows' milk into the human thyroid gland. An overdose of the radioactive material could cause cancer.

Fortunately, said Dearden, "the cows here weren't on pasture because there's no grass around here yet. They were eating feed grown last year and put in silos."

Hershey's first move came right after the accident. It stopped taking in milk for immediate use in the candy factories. Instead, it kept production lines moving by using inventories of partially processed chocolate, containing milk received before the accident.

The milk that normally would go into the kitchens went instead to nearby plants, where it was made into powder and set aside to allow any radioactivity to deteriorate.

The waiting period isn't long. Iodine-131 is short-lived, and after eight days, half a given amount will have decayed. Eight days later, half of the remainder will be gone, and so on. Hershey has resumed using milk coming from more than 40 miles from the power plant.

Milk from less than 40 miles from Three Mile Island is being converted into powder "rather than take a chance," Dearden said, adding it will be "held and checked long before it is used."

Farm Water Pollution Targeted By Project

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $4.3 million pilot project to help curb water pollution on farms will be operated in selected counties in 20 states and Puerto Rico, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has announced.

The project will be carried out as part of the department's $190 million Agricultural Conservation Program and is intended as part of a broader goal of improving the nation's water quality.

Measures will include lagoons to help dispose of animal feedlot wastes, ditches, diversion pipes, vegetative cover, land grading and shaping, tree planting and terracing.

AIR FARES MAY INCREASE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board said Thursday it will permit a 4 percent across-the-board fare increase asked by most of the nation's airlines.

Lubbock has a lot of personality.

You don't have to be in Lubbock long before you realize that Lubbock has a dynamic personality. Everywhere you look, you see the combination of attributes that makes Lubbock both an agricultural center, and an expanding industrial center.

From Texas Tech Football to the ballet in the Theatre Center to your Little League, Lubbock is a town that cares about the future and lives very much in the present, too.

Perhaps that's what gives you your very unique personality.

And that's why we're glad to bring Mardi Gras® paper towels and napkins to Lubbock. Because, like you, we think we have "a lot of personality," too.

When you look at our towels and napkins, you'll see what we mean. They're unique. Different. A little more exciting than what you could buy before.

With more patterns and more color combinations than any other paper towel or napkin you can buy, we're sure you'll find a Mardi Gras design to match YOUR personality, no matter what mood your in.

But don't take our word for it. Take our money. We'll give you 20¢ to try our checks, ginghams, flowers, paisleys, plaids, or any Mardi Gras personality you like.

MISSING SAILING VESSEL — The Clipper ship replica Pride of Baltimore has become the focus of worried attention. She is four days overdue at Norfolk, Va. on the last leg of a return trip from a winter cruise in the Caribbean. The Coast Guard has launched an extensive air search for the Clipper replica, built during the Bicentennial as a goodwill Ambassador for the city of Baltimore, she is shown here cruising Chesapeake Bay in happier days. (AP Laserphoto)

Sailing Ship Feared Lost During Caribbean Cruise

BALTIMORE (AP) — The two-masted wooden schooner Pride of Baltimore was missing at sea Thursday with a seasoned captain and a crew of 10 sailors. But officials hoped it was just an echo of a hazard that has always plagued sailing ships — the whim of the weather.

City officials said the replica of an 18th-century Baltimore clipper — 136 feet long, with masts 100 feet tall and rigged with square topsails — may have tried to avoid a weekend storm off the Carolinas and headed out to sea, making it late for an appointment in Norfolk, Va.

The vessel's small engine left it vulnerable to changes in wind direction, and its small radio left it vulnerable to losing touch.

The Coast Guard broadened its search Thursday from Cape Hatteras, N.C., to Chincoteague, Va., spanning both sides of the entry to the Chesapeake Bay, and as much as 100 miles offshore or more, according to Chief Chuck Kern. Earlier, a Coast Guard plane had searched from Wilmington, N.C., to Norfolk.

The schooner was three days overdue in Norfolk.

City officials predicted the ship was probably 180 miles southeast of Norfolk, and should arrive there Friday.

And Thomas Norton, director of Operation Sail, which runs the ship as a promotion for the city, speculated "that she ran into bad weather Saturday and ran offshore. She'll probably turn up almost 200 miles offshore."

"I'm really not surprised they haven't found it. Have you ever tried to find a ship from the air? It's a big ocean. I suspect they'll find her if they go far enough off shore," Norton added.

He said he would not begin worrying about the vessel's fate unless there were still no word from the crew by the weekend.

The Pride left Wilmington last Thursday and encountered two days of high winds, peaking at 50 miles per hour, according to the National Weather Service. In addition, a cold front moved in Saturday, prompting small craft warnings because of choppy waters.

Coast Guard messages were repeated every three hours on distress frequencies to ocean-going vessels, urging them to be on a sharp lookout for the Baltimore clipper — a type of vessel used during the War of 1812 for privateering because they were built for speed. They also carried small but valuable cargoes to China.

But there was no guarantee the calls were getting through to the Pride. Its radio is "a small VHF rig that has a range of 20 to 30 miles at best," Norton said.

The Pride, built by the city during the Bicentennial, was on the last leg of a 7,000-mile winter cruise to the Caribbean. It left its home berth Oct. 19 and was due to dock at the Port of Baltimore Saturday.

Capt. Charles Whitcomb, 52, who helped build it, rejoined it for the final days' journey. Norton said two or three others aboard the Pride had been on its maiden voyage, and most of the crew members, in their 20s, have had some sailing experience.

"She's very much a vessel of the 1812 era. The crew members don't sleep on bunks, they sleep on hammocks and there's no shower," Norton said.

Officials Call Damage At Nuke Plant Minimal

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Lab tests show that at most an "insignificant" amount of uranium melted in the Three Mile Island nuclear plant's reactor core after a March 28 accident, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Thursday.

"It indicated no fuel melting occurred. Or if it did, it was exceedingly small, and that's good news," said NRC spokesman James Hanchett after tests were run on samples drawn from the primary cooling system of the plant's crippled number two reactor.

"The amounts of uranium are in the range of parts per billion. If you had significant fuel melting, you would expect to see uranium in parts per million," he added.

Meanwhile, business near the nuclear plant started to pick up again, a sign that things are returning to normal. Shoppers browsed for holiday hams, Easter eggs and new suits.

"They're anxious to have something else occupy their times and minds, such as Easter coming up," said Bill Fox, manager of a Middletown grocery store. "Business is about back to normal."

The tests on core damage were done at nuclear laboratories in Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Savannah River, S.C. If samples drawn from the reactor's primary cooling system showed uranium deposits, it would indicate severe contamination.

The latest tests supported earlier findings on cooling water drawn by technicians.

But the NRC has said the uranium fuel's zirconium shields, known as cladding, were badly damaged. A series of mechanical and human errors exposed the core when its vital cooling water was cut off.

The actual extent of core damage won't be known until the reactor can be physically inspected, the NRC said.

"That's months and months away," said Hanchett.

Engineers from American Nuclear Insurers said Thursday that preliminary estimates indicate it will cost $140 million to decontaminate and repair the nuclear core. The plant is insured for $300 million.

The NRC said the latest effort to remove hydrogen gas bubbles from the cooling system was successfully completed. If tests show gas levels are sufficiently reduced, final shutdown could begin by the weekend.

"They described the condition of the water as very stiff, which means they are getting the gas out," said Hanchett.

The cooling system pumps will be turned off and a natural convection system will take heat away from the core in the five-day operation.

"It works like a Mr. Coffee. You pour in cold water, which forces the hot water up and out. The hot water rises, is forced out and is in turn cooled. Then it flows back to the core and sort of keeps going over and over," said Hanchett.

In Middletown, three miles from the nuclear plant, the NRC said it has found not one case of abnormal body radiation. More than 200 people have been tested so far.

Merchants welcomed the return of shoppers.

"It's getting a little better," said Emma Kiehl, owner of Elma's House of Flowers. "Things are starting to look up. You can't keep the people in this town down."

Richard Bates, a salesman at David Martin's Men's Store, spotted a change too. The only real business had been the 150 dozen T-shirts proclaiming "I Survived The Super Duper Leaker."

Now, he said, "We getting more business. For two weeks, we didn't do anything. We're selling some Easter clothes now. We didn't sell a suit for over a week," he said.

State and federal officials said milk sales were normal.

Wayne Pines, a spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration, said 260 samples of milk from 28 farms have been tested.

"None of the tests showed anything close to a dangerous level of iodine. The largest report we've had was one sample that showed a radioactive level of 41 or 42 picocuries per liter," he said.

FDA standards say that 1,000 picocuries are cause for concern and 12,000 picocuries would be an emergency.

Radio War Continues Despite Fall Of Amin's Capital City

KAMPALA Uganda (AP) — A frenzy of looting swept Kampala Thursday and thousands of joyous Ugandans rallied in a city square to cheer the fall of Idi Amin. Their new rulers called on all Ugandans to help hunt down the dictator "wherever he is."

Amin and his victorious enemies Tanzanians and Ugandan rebels — continued to wage a radio war. From his broadcasting point in eastern Uganda, Amin insisted the country was still his, and the capital's new rulers said over Kampala radio, "Idi Amin has killed hundreds of our brothers and sisters."

"Amin has looted Uganda more than any other human being has done in the world," the radio said. "All Ugandans who love their motherland must from now on help find Idi Amin wherever he is. He deserves the gallows."

It accused Amin, whose eight-year rule was marked by military bragging, of being "afraid to say where he is," and gave his officers two hours to turn themselves in, with their weapons, "or they will be dealt with accordingly."

From his radio transmitter at Soroti, 200 miles northeast near the Kenyan border, Amin said,"We have got our soldiers controlling the country." His troops were reported streaming toward the Kenyan border in a chaotic rout, however, fleeing the Tanzanian forces and Ugandan rebels who captured Kampala late Tuesday.

Amin blasted the invaders saying they destroyed hospitals, homes, utilities and "(for) killing everybody." "The invaders have stolen property from shops," he said, "and then they call themselves a legal government."

In Dar Es Salaam, Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere became the first African leader to recognize the new government his troops put into power. He likened Amin to Adolf Hitler and said it was Ugandans who unanimously decided Amin "had to go."

Within hours, Zambia, Botswana and Mozambique followed Tanzania's lead and recognized the Ugandan provisional government under Yussufu Lule.

Nyerere, who has long hated Amin, launched the invasion of Uganda after his troops drove out Ugandan forces who seized 710 square miles of territory in northwest Tanzania last October. Anti-Amin exiles joined the Tanzanian push into Uganda and on to Kampala.

Residents of towns east of the capital said the ragged soldiers of Amin's forces were looting, harassing local residents at gunpoint, stealing cars and retreating beyond Jinja, the city 50 miles east of here that is said to be Amin's new headquarters, to Mbale and Tororo near Kenya.

A gunfight at a Jinja bus station reportedly left 15 soldiers dead.

Much of Uganda, including all of Amin's home territory in the north, was still beyond Tanzanian lines.

In the capital, residents said Tanzanian troops joined Kampalans in plundering that shifted Thursday from already stripped shops to residential areas and government offices.

Soldiers had to be called to keep looters from breaking into the Cuban Embassy, residents said.

An estimated 10,000 Kampalans — toting looted typewriters on their heads and sitting in stolen office chairs — filled a square in front of the Ugandan Parliament for five hours of denunciation of Amin and praise for Tanzania and the new provisional government announced Wednesday.

"We'd like to see another demonstration tomorrow with people marching back to government offices with the things they've taken," the information chief of the new anti-Amin administration, Robert Sebunya, appealed to the crowd.

The looting reflected years under Amin when luxuries were restricted to high-ranking loyalists, the presidents's Nubian mercenaries, diplomats and white business families.

Residents said looters had entered at least one house that was still occupied, taking watches and radios, but there were no reports that any foreigners had been assaulted.

The Tanzanians estimated that about 30 Ugandan soldiers and no Tanzanians were killed in the final assault on Kampala. A West German U.N. official and his wife who were said Wednesday to have been killed were reported Thursday to be still alive. U.N. officials said two bodies apparently were misidentified as the German couple.

In New York Thursday, Uganda's deputy ambassador to the United Nations, Idi Osman, peacefully handed over the country's U.N. mission to the new government at the request of Andrew Kayira, who has just been named Uganda's deputy minister of the interior.

In Kampala Tanzanian forces were reported to have freed at least some prisoners from the Capital's jails. They claimed to have freed 3,800 people from one prison.

International human rights groups say tens of thousands of Ugandans were slaughtered under Amin's brutal regime.

"The dictator is nowhere to be found in Uganda," Nyerere told a cheering rally in Dar es Salaam. "He is on the run."

Moore Show To Leave Air

MISS MOORE

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Mary Tyler Moore Hour," a comedy-variety show begun by CBS in mid-season, will leave the air in May and Miss Moore will begin work on a new situation comedy series to premiere in the fall of 1980, the network said Thursday.

Broadcast Sundays at 9 p.m. CST, "The Mary Tyler Moore Hour" had suffered in the ratings in recent weeks. It was Miss Moore's second attempt at a series this season. A variety hour, "Mary," was broadcast briefly in the fall to an unenthusiastic reception.

Robert Daly, president of CBS Entertainment, said Miss Moore, whose highly successful "Mary Tyler Moore Show" left the air in 1977 after eight seasons, probably will appear in dramatic presentations on CBS in the coming season. She received critical acclaim for her role in Betty Rollin's "First You Cry," broadcast last fall.

Roller Skater Arrested

MAHOPAC, N.Y. (AP) — A sporting goods salesman on roller skates was arrested on a highway, where police said he kept doing 360-degree spins, tying up auto traffic.

Police said the skater, Eric Myrman, 31, explained that he had intended to skate 12 miles to Yorktown Heights where his automobile was being repaired.

Police said Myrman, who said he works at a sporting goods store in Hartford, Conn., was charged with disorderly conduct.

Manholes Require Study

KERMAN, Calif. (AP) — Federal environmental regulations have forced local officials to conduct an environmental study before installing seven manholes in this small Central California community.

A federal official defended the regulations even though a new law would exempt small projects from the report requirement. "It's possible one of those manholes could be affecting a historic site," said Tad Mascaoka of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

More than $200 was spent sending out questionnaires on the project and preparing reports, said Katie Bearden, a Fresno County planning analyst. In the end, Mrs. Bearden concluded that the project would have no significant impact on the environment.

Steamboat Fighter Out

CINCINNATI (AP) — Betty Blake, who helped wage a successful fight to keep the 50-year-old Delta Queen steamboat in business, says she will step down on June 30 as president of the Delta Queen Steamboat Co.

Mrs. Blake denied any disagreement or disputes with the managers of Delta Queen's parent company, the Coca-Cola Bottling Co., of New York. She said her contract expires on June 30 and "neither party is renewing it."

Mrs. Blake led a successful fight in Congress to exempt the Delta Queen from the federal Safety at Sea Act, which banned overnight passenger craft made from wood.

Purloined Steak Trailed

NEW YORK (AP) — City Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin is hot on the trail of the missing steaks.

Goldin's auditors have calculated that about 6,000 steaks a month have vanished from the freezers of the city's Correction Department. The food was taken from stores used to feed guards and other employees. Inmates are not allowed steak because the officials don't trust them with steak knives.

The missing filets mignon, rib and short steaks are costing the taxpayers, many of whom cannot afford chuck steak, $135,000 a year, Goldin said.

Hedy Suing Publications

NEW YORK (AP) — Former cinema sex queen Hedy Lamarr has sued two publications for $20 million, alleging they have damaged her "reputation and image as the very personification, essence and epitome of beauty."

HEDY LAMARR

Miss Lamarr's lawyer, Irwin Klein, filed the papers in state Supreme Court here on behalf of the 63-year-old Vienna-born actress against the San Francisco Chronicle and the National Enquirer.

Each suit demanded $10 million in damages. The defendants have 30 days to respond.

The suit against the Chronicle alleges it damaged her reputation when it published a photograph and a news article last Jan. 26 about a rare, two-headed goat named "Hedy Lamarr."

Miss Lamarr also expressed distress over a June 27, 1978, article in the National Enquirer that described her as "old and ugly" and a "pathetic recluse" who "lives in an unkempt one-room apartment."

City Agency Discusses Dismissal In Secret

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock Housing Authority board members met for almost three hours Thursday in a closed-door executive session to discuss circumstances surrounding the dismissal of former Housing Authority employee Adolphus Cleveland.

Housing Authority Director D.C. Fair refused to comment on the apparent conflict between Cleveland and the housing authority, or Cleveland's term as Community Services director between Nov. 15, 1976 and Nov. 2, 1978.

"I'm just not in a position to talk about it," Fair said after the regular meeting closed shortly after the executive session. "No comment would be the best comment at this time."

Cleveland and his attorney met with board members and their representing atorney from 12:10 p.m. to 3 p.m. A court reporter was present to record the session.

Cleveland was not available for comment.

In other business, the authority voted to submit a request to the Office of Housing and Urban Development to transfer the location of 40 proposed units of Section 8 new construction from 24th Street and Albany Avenue to an alternate site at 71st Street and Quaker Avenue.

The request for the alternate site came after it was determined the original site was not zoned for the planned duplex dwellings and the zoning could not be changed.

Board members also voted to request an HEW loan of $26,400 to study the possible construction of 132 units of low-rent public housing. The authority followed HEW guidelines in determining there is such a need in Lubbock for the proposed housing.

Authority board members agreed to request additional HEW funding to complete a modernization program in Greenfair Manor and Hub Homes. Original funding has run out, according to Fair, leaving the modernization work 95 percent complete at Greenfair and 70 percent complete at Hub Homes.

Rushing to conclude the lengthy meeting, board members heard a brief review of a public meeting held Monday to hear discussion on the authority's proposed bond program to finance low to middle-income housing. Fair and the board members agreed the public meeting was helpful, but suggested smaller meetings for Lubbock lending institutions might be more successful in drumming up support for the program.

Cheerleaders Elected By Lubbock Christian

Carolyn Lund and Lisa Boothe have been re-elected cheerleaders at Lubbock Christian College. Six cheerleaders were chosen from the field of nine candidates in the student body voting.

Others elected were freshmen Annette Warren of Aurora, Colo., and Donna Waters of Austin and sophomores Nola Bowley of Morton and Lisa Robertson of Seymour.

MERGER STAKES GROWING

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas International Airlines announced Thursday it is making a revised merger offer to National Airlines in its continuing attempts to gain control of the carrier. A Texas International spokesman said the new offer consists of $15 cash and $35 principal amount of an 11 3/4 per cent senior sinking fund debenture due in 1989 in exchange for each share of National stock it does not currently own.

Lietzke Shoots Way Into Masters Lead

...Trying To Master Augusta

OLD AND YOUNG—Arnold Palmer, left, found himself in a tight situation during the opening round of the Masters golf tournament Thursday afternoon and was forced to take a shot from behind an Azalea tree. Palmer, a four-time winner here, fired a 74. Meanwhile, Bruce Lietzke watches closely as he sinks a birdie putt on the 15th hold. Lietzke finished the first round with a five-under-par 67 and a one-shot lead. (AP Laserphotos)

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Bruce Lietzke, a front-runner but strangely lacking in confidence, converted his cross-handed putting stroke and a self-induced trance into a 67 and the first-round lead Thursday in the 43rd Masters golf tournament.

"I don't have enough confidence in my swing right now to win the golf tournament," Lietzke said.

But that could change quickly, he said.

"This could be the start of a confidence-building program for me," he said after establishing a one-stroke advantage.

"I can build that much confidence, as much as I need, in the next couple of days."

He paused and smiled.

"I can build it particularly easily if I get about 12 more strokes in front the next couple of days.

"I haven't played well for a couple of months, but today I felt I played mistake-free golf. But the confidence wasn't there. I don't know where the shots came from."

D / SPORTS

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Friday, April 13, 1979

But they came with solid regularity.

The key to his effort was a string of four consecutive birdies coming down the stretch, a string he didn't even know he was building.

"I missed a 5-footer for birdie on the 17th hole and that broke the trance," said Lietzke, the current Canadian Open champion and winner of the Tucson Open earlier this year.

"I was standing on the 18th tee and I said to myself, 'let's see. You're 6-under. Now how did you get there?' Then I started counting back and found out I'd birdied four in a row. I really didn't know it before."

Perhaps shaken by that knowledge, he proceeded to bogey the 18th, missing the green, and said he lacks "the confidence in my swing to win the golf tournament. I have a lot of confidence-building I have to do."

Should his confidence falter or fail to build, the two top performers in the world — Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus — are poised and primed to take command in the chase for the green jacket that goes to the winner of this, the first of the world's four major tests of golfing greatness.

The gritty Watson, twice a British Open champion and winner of the Masters in 1977, scored seven birdies on the way to a 68 on the perfectly conditioned, 7,040 yards of hills, flowers and budding trees that make up the Augusta National Golf Club course.

And the mighty Nicklaus, trying to fight his way out of one of the worst slumps of his unmatched career, birdied all four of the par-5 holes and shot a 69 that left him only two shots back.

Watson, who birdied five of six holes in one stretch on the back, shared the No. 2 spot with Leonard Thompson, Joe Inman and smooth Ed Sneed, also with 68s in the ideal playing conditions.

Ray Floyd, a winner last week in Greensboro and a former Masters and PGA titleholder, topped the group at 70.

Hale Irwin and U.S. Open champion Andy North matched par 72 in the hot, muggy weather under overcast skies that failed to produce the forecast showers and thunderstorms.

Among those at 73 were Lee Trevino, Ben Crenshaw, Tom Weiskopf and bitterly disappointed Lanny Wadkins, who once had it 4 under par for the day before blowing it all on that awesome stretch of holes beginning the back nine, the famed "Amen Corner."

He missed the green and eventually 3-putted from the fringe for a double bogey on No. 10. He bogeyed the 11th, again missing the green. And he double bogeyed the 12th, hitting into the water.

Hubert Green and Arnold Palmer, a four-time winner here, were well back at 74.

Watson, generally picked as the man most likely to succeed Nicklaus as the ruler or world golf, said he was, as usual "nervous and excited about playing in the Masters. I didn't play at ease all day today."

He'd matched two birdies with as many bogeys going to the par-5 eighth which he reached with a 4-wood second shot and 2-putted for birdie. He rolled in an 18-footer for birdie on the next and holed from 10 feet on the next.

He dropped a 15-footer on the 12th and 2-putted for birdie-4 on the 13th for his fifth birdie in six holes.

But the key, he said, were the ones on Nos. 10 and 12, part of "Amen Corner."

"That's where you win or lose the golf tournament," he said. "If you can get through those holes in par, if you've got two pars and you're on the green in regulation on No. 12, you say 'Amen'. I played 'em 2 under, and that's like stealing."

Watson, winner of the Heritage Classic in his last start and the Player of the Year for the last two seasons, bogeyed the 15th, however, when the wind turned and knocked his 6-iron second shot into the water, dropping him back into a share of second.

"I'm delighted," said Nicklaus. "I haven't played well this spring, and 69 is a good opening round in the Masters. I drove the ball well, hit the irons well and putted well, even though I didn't really make anything. I hit good putts, but I didn't make anything longer than five feet.

"And I can understand that. There were several times out there — seven, in fact — where if you take a run at a putt, trying to make it, you can putt it right off the green.

"But I'm pleased. Off the way I've been playing, I was a little apprehensive starting out. I wanted to get a decent round in. And I played a good, solid round of golf."

. . .Of Waivers And Woody

IT'LL BE NEW scenery for Rodney Allison next fall, and it could be all south of the Canadian border. Allison, who quarterbacked for the Toronto Argonauts in the Canadian grid league last year, was given his release this week.

He was put on waivers last Friday, which means other clubs in that league have until today to claim him. Otherwise, he's a free agent, and he has already made some opening contacts with NFL clubs, he said.

"I'm on a pretty good contract, and there are only two or three clubs in Canada that would be willing to take up my contract — and that's what they'd have to do if they took me," said Allison, now back at Tech and helping coach the Raiders in spring training.

"I was beginning to wonder what the deal was. It's only about five weeks until camp, and I hadn't heard a thing. And they had signed five quarterbacks, so I just called up there, and they told me that I had been put on waivers. They have new owners, new general manager, new coach: Looks like they're making a clean sweep. I guess now was the time they wanted to get rid of me. The way my contract was set up, I was to get some more money if I reported for camp.

"But," he said, "I'm doing some talking to some NFL clubs — Coach Sloan is helping me — and maybe something will work out. But, even if it doesn't, I've had a pretty good career. The world won't come to an end."

Allison, even before his release, had made some business moves in Midland, but he still plans to make a run at the NFL. Allison is being released even though he started some games for the Argonauts last season. . .

WHEN TIME AND space run short. . . Recruiting? Sometimes it gets to be a headache. Not only is Michael Carter of Dallas Jefferson an outstanding football lineman, but he is national record-holder in the shot put. He has signed with SMU in football, but of his days of recruiting in the winter: "The worst part was coming home from a (campus) visit. I'd. . .know the phone calls were going to start again. My weight went from 245 to 262 during recruiting, because everyone was feeding me. Everytime I looked up, they were pushing another steak in my face." . . But, from the other side of the recruiting fence: Terry Donahue (UCLA): "I've never talked to a football coach yet who said he had a bad year recruiting. He would be asking for trouble." . .

After being ejected from a game at Goodwell, Okla., against Panhandle State earlier this week, LCC's Larry Hays has picked up a new nickname. Students around the campus now are calling him Woody. Nope, Larry didn't hit anyone in his vigorous argument, however. . . Lou Holtz, the humorist-coach at Arkansas,

Coaching Staff Gets Face Lift

By DON HENRY

Debbie Drown couldn't believe the circumstances which led to her being selected to coach the Red team in Saturday's Texas Tech spring game.

Fact is, she couldn't believe that someone wasn't playing a joke on here when she was notified Thursday morning.

But, Debbie, a junior business management major at Texas Tech, learned it was all on the level when ushered into the Raiders' conference room with the 50 members of "her" squad.

Miss Drown will join Lubbock insurance salesman Mike Davis, a former basketball player at Monterey, as honorary coaches for the Red team. And coaching on the White team will be postal employee Kent Thompson and a Tech fan and auto salesman from the Panhandle, Howard Naugle of Stratford.

The four were drawn at random from persons purchasing advance tickets to the Saturday spring game.

But, for Miss Drown, it was a circuitous route to the athletic offices.

Originally, J.E. Waller, a local banker, was chosen, but he is scheduled to be out of the city Saturday and couldn't serve. So, Miss Drown's name was drawn.

"I couldn't believe it," the Tech student exclaimed Thursday, after meeting her team. Then, she explained how she came to be involved in the name-selection.

"I was talking to this guy, who had bought three tickets. But, he couldn't go to the game, so he wrote my name on his three tickets.

"I didn't expect it at all," she said. "And, then when they called this (Thursday) morning, I thought it was a joke.

"Football's my favorite sport anyway," said Miss Drown, who went to high school at Arlington.

"This other guy I work with went out and bought seven or eight for us. He put my name on three of them. Think he's

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The way to describe Monterey's baseball season so far may very well be how coach Bobby Moegle fares on a fishing trip this weekend.

If the big one gets away as many times as the Plainsmen have scored runs, then it's going to be a rather long weekend.

Despite a .364 team batting average, the Plainsmen have failed to win a couple of big ones and are currently two games out of first place in the first half of the 4-AAAA baseball race with a 4-2 record.

And since Monterey has a bye Saturday from loop action, Moegle took the time to reflect on his team and the race, while gathering his fishing gear.

"It's not that were 4-2 that's been the big disappointment," said Moegle. "It's losing games when we've scored six and eight runs.

"Our pitchers' earned run averages are almost as high as the team batting."

In regard to the district race, Moegle claims that the weather has prevented all the loop teams from playing their best baseball.

"I just can't say anything at this time, because Coronado still has a lot of games to play," said Moegle. "If things go according to plan, then we're going to need a sweep in the showdown Tuesday."

According to plan means that Coronado will have swept Plainview and Hereford to bring a 6-0 record into the Monterey game.

"In 20 years of coaching, this is the longest into the season that I can remember that bad weather has lasted," said Moegle. "Strong winds have made baseball do funny things this year. Like when we played in Hereford Tuesday, the wind was blowing between 40 and 60 miles per hour at times."

Obviously, if the Plainsmen are scoring 6 and 8 runs a game and are still losing, then Monterey's pitching has been suspect.

"How do you teach a kid arm strength?" asked Moegle. "You can't. We can teach them finese. We just don't have any strong-armed pitchers like in the past."

Asked if he was changing his practice routines this week to correct any weaknesses, Moegle smiled and said, "Yes. We're working on being off. The only changes we've made is to give the kids Tuesday, Friday and Saturday off. I think being off before the Coronado game will help our kids in giving them the chance to clear their minds."

When Monterey opened the district season against Lubbock High, the Plainsmen committed 12 errors during the doubleheader. Since that time, Monterey has only made four defensive mistakes.

"Our defense has been suspect at times," said Moegle. "But we don't have any injuries so I can't make any excuses."

And his thoughts about Coronado. . .

"You know that they're going to throw Segrest in the first game," smiled Moegle. "He just may hold us to one run. With our fat pitching, I just don't know."

However, Moegle isn't ready to concede defeat yet.

"We spend a lot of time working on hitting," said Moegle. "We've been working with these kids (on his team now) since they were 8 and 9 years old."

IT'LL BE MORE than just a track meet at Levelland Saturday. With two high school divisions and one for jucos, the attention will be focused on the high jump pit, and there'll be a penalty for being late. Saturday morning, 9:30: It's defending state champion Chuck Perry of Monterey vs. state leader Kenneth Storey of Plainview. Perry cleared 7 feet last year, Storey has hit that magic mark this spring. Seats around the pit should be at a premium. . . Don't forget that equipment is the motto now, especially around LCC. Seems the Chaparrals packed everything except baseballs when they went to play Panhandle State earlier this week. Had to borrow a few from the hosts for pregame batting practice. . .

THINK COLLEGIATE ATHLETIC administration hasn't undergone a change over the last few years, thanks to injunctions, damage suits, Title IX, enforcement? "Six years ago, every time I needed our lawyer," claims NCAA boss Walter Byers, "I had to look up his number in the phone directory. Now, we have a staff here in Kansas City and one in Washington, and we're running up a bill of $600,000 a year." . . Out of the past: The Raiders' White team (for the annual spring game Saturday) worked out Thursday in football britches left over from the old All-America Football all-star game. .

Tech Meets UH In SWC Action

HOUSTON (Special) — Still trying to regroup with its crippled mound corps, Texas Tech opens a three-game Southwest Conference baseball series with the University of Houston here today.

The two teams are scheduled to play one game today, beginning at 3 p.m., then come back with a doubleheader Saturday afternoon.

And the objective for both teams will be to move up a step and make it to the SWC's four-team postseason tournament.

Currently, the Raiders are 7-8 in the league, good for fifth (behind Texas, 11-1, Arkansas, 14-4, A&M, 7-4, and Baylor, 8-8), with UH a step back of the Raiders at 8-10.

Baylor is at Rice this weekend, SMU at A&M, and TCU at Texas, thus the Raiders and UH will be watching closely the results from across the city.

The Raiders are coming here after dividing a pair of nonconference games, falling Tuesday to St. Mary's 8-6 on a bottom-of-the-ninth homer, then whipping Trinity University 9-1 Wednesday.

But, because of a shortage of pitchers, the St. Mary's and Trinity series were shortened from doubleheaders to single games. Also, the Raiders had to borrow a pitcher for last Sunday's exhibition loss to the Texas League Amarillo Gold Sox.

That shortage of pitchers led to an outfielder and a catcher working some on the mound this week. And in last Saturday's doubleheader (which Tech lost), coach Kal Segrist was so short of pitchers that he had to allow his starters to absorb all the runs against Arkansas.

It is expected that Jamie Miller (1-2) will work today's game for Tech. Miller was the starter in last Friday's game with the Razorbacks.

Saturday's hurlers could be Robert Bryant (3-1) and Mark Johnston (4-3). Gary Moyer and Chuck Johnson were out with injuries last week, but Moyer should be ready to pitch after having shoulder problems.

Hitting, which led to the win over Arkansas last Friday, is expected to be the key to victory again today.

Tech, as a team, is hitting .280, and UH is able to manage but a .232 average in conference.

And although he lost his SWC batting-average lead, Raider outfielder Larry Selby continues among the league's top hitters. Selby is hitting .404 in conference games, but he is tied for the lead in hits, with 23.

Newton is hitting .368 for average for the year, and Craig Noonan is the new leader with a .378 average for the season. Newton is .361 in conference.

Segrist will pick his catch from Dan Hejl (who worked two innings on the mound against Trinity), Kevin Rucker and Scott Leimgruber.

Lietzke Leads Masters

He birdied all of the par-5 holes, chipping close on No. 8 and reaching the others in 2. He flipped an 8-iron shot to four feet and birdied the 17th, after missing a six-footer for birdie on the 16th.

His bogeys came on the ninth, where he missed the green to the right, and the 11th, where he 3-putted.

Lietzke, 26, 6-foot-2 and perhaps te tour's most eligible bachelor, also birdied all the par 5s and, until he broke his trance on the 18th hole, hadn't made a bogey and hadn't made a "5."

When he discovered where he was, however, he bogeyed immediately.

He missed the green with his second shot on the 18th and saw his lead dwindle from two shots to one with a missed five-foot putt.

Coaches Named For Tech Tilt

kinda mad that I won after he went and got them," joked Thompson of his selection to coach in the game.

Thompson is a former Tech student, as is Davis.

As soon as Davis was notified of his selection, he called a friend who had a little bit of football knowledge. "Joe gave me a couple of trick plays," related Davis. "Only thing, Joe's plays were for 12 guys on the field.

"We had to do a little adapting."

Joe turned out to be Joe Barnes, the former Tech all-Southwest Conference quarterback now playing with Montreal in the Canadian Football League.

Davis and Miss Drown diagrammed their trick plays for the Red team Thursday afternoon. Thompson and Naugle had to hold their coaching strategy session over the telephone, as Naugle will not be coming to Lubbock until Saturday for the 1:30 p.m. contest.

The teams worked with their respective coaches — honorary and regular Tech aides — Thursday in preparation forthe game.

Meanwhile, tickets to the game are on sale at $4 each. That ticket will admit one adult and a school-age youngster.

Teams were divided Wednesday, with James Hadnot and Andy Thomas co-captains of the White team and Howie Lewis and Jeff Copeland in charge of the Reds.

CART Submits Indy Entries

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Championship Auto Racing Teams submitted 44 entries for the Indianapolis 500-mile race on Thursday, but the dissident group of car owners and drivers vowed to press its demands on the U.S. Auto Club and the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The deadline for entering the 500 is midnight Sunday. Pat Patrick, a car owner and president of CART, said he decided to submit the entry forms on time in order to prevent a technical disqualification.

"In the meantime, I have instructed our attorney to advise us on our options in the event that our differences with USAC and the Speedway are not satisfactorily resolved."

CART earlier threatened to boycott the May 27 Indy 500 altogether and stage its own $1 million race the same day. Speedway and USAC officials refused to back down to the threat and said there would be no rules changes and no entry deadline extension.

The 44 entries, plus 11 others received Thursday from non-CART racing teams, pushed the entry list to 83.

The CART entries were delivered by Jim Melvin, president of Michigan International Speedway and executive director of the breakaway organization.

Before Thursday's announcement, four-time winner A.J. Foyt, an original director of CART who had defected back to the USAC, was the only big-name driver entered in the May 27 classic.

The CART entries included cars for former Indy winners Al and Bobby Unser, Johnny Rutherford and Gordon Johncock, two-time USAC national champion Tom Sneva, and other top drivers such as Danny Ongais, Wally Dallenbach, Rick Mears, Mike Mosley, Pancho Carter, Salt Walther and Larry Cannon.

Patrick, said the entries were submitted only to meet the technical requirements of the Speedway entry blanks. But he said CART and its members would not give up in their battle against USAC, which he claimed is "manipulating the boost pressure formula at Indianapolis to the detriment of Indy-car racing as a whole and CART members in particular."

USAC recently lowered the allowable manifold pressure for all turbocharged engines to make them more equivalent to each other and to the stock block engines. Maximum pressures were pegged at 50 inches for 8-cylinder turbocharged engines, 55 inches for 4-cylinder engines and 58 inches for the stock blocks. CART, whose cars are mainly powered by the 8-cylinder engines, wants the boost raised to 70 inches and wants equal voice with USAC in technical inspection of the racers.

Midwestern, LCC Games Postponed

Because of the tornado which hit Wichita Falls and the Midwestern State campus, this weekend's baseball series between Lubbock Christian and MSU has been postponed, LCC officials reported.

LCC coach Larry Hays said the games will be played as doubleheaders here on May 4-5.

Those originally were the dates for the District VIII NAIA tournament at Arlington, but because of a conflict of dates, the district tourney has been moved to May 11-13.

Murdock Puts Title On Line Tonight

International champion Dick Murdock will defend his title against Mr. Pogo in the main event during wrestling action tonight at the Fair Park Coliseum. The action is set to get underway at 8 p.m.

In other matches, Ricky Romero goes against Akio Sato, Black Jack Mulligan will take on Dennis Stamp, Alex Perez, will battle Akihisa, with Ratamyus and Manny Fernandez rounding out the card.

Mike Chatham headlined the evening by winning the Most Valuable Player award at the Estacado athletic banquet Thursday night at the Civic Center.

In football, Kelvin White was named the outstanding back, Dewey Turner and Manuel Escamilla shared the offensive lineman honor, Mike Esquivel won the fighting heart award, with Winston Gipson taking the academic honor.

Other awards presented in boys sports went to Gipson in basketball, Robert Humphrey in track, Mike Soto was honored in cross country, with Escamilla and Hector Limon cited for their efforts in baseball.

Baylor Fired By Jazz

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Jazz fired head Coach Elgin Baylor Thursday saying it was time for a change for the team that finished 26-56 this season, at the bottom of the National Basketball Association.

The announcement put a formal stamp on a personnel decision that was made weeks ago.

Baylor was not available for comment, but he said privately in the final weeks of the season that he understood that he was not going to be kept with the team.

Baylor's dismissal was announced in a statement from Larry Hatfield of Los Angeles, managing partner of the NBA team.

"Many of the ballclub's problems had nothing to do with Elgin's ability as a coach, but it is our feeling that a change is needed at this time to benefit all involved," Hatfield said.

"The ownership of the Jazz has enjoyed its relationship with Elgin over the past few years. He is truly a class guy."

Hatfield said the team would honor the remaining two years on Baylor's contract. The two years came in the form of an extension given Baylor in November as a vote of confidence from the owners.

Baylor, one of the NBA's all-time greats as a player at Los Angeles, was hired as an assistant coach before the 1974 season, the team's first in the NBA.

He was under Scotty Robertson for the first games of that initial season, then under Butch van Breda Kolff, who replaced Robertson. Baylor took over as head coach on Dec. 14, 1976, when van Breda Kolff was fired.

The Jazz finished 1976-77 with a 35-47 record, in a season marked by turmoil caused by van Breda Kolff's firing and a series of injuries — including several in a cab wreck — that left the team with only seven players in uniform at one point.

In his first full year as head coach, Baylor led the Jazz to a 39-43 record, only two games out of the playoffs. The team was without star guard Pete Maravich, who was sidelined with a knee injury for the last half of that 1977-'78 season.

Baylor was one of six coaches to get votes as NBA coach of the year after that season.

...While NMSU Elevates Aide

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Not wanting to get left too far behind in the college basketball recruiting wars, New Mexico State University wasted little time in naming Aggie assistant coach Weldon Drew to replace Ken Hayes as head coach.

NMSU President Gerald Thomas and Athletic Director Keith Colson announced Thursday Drew was being elevated to the head job to fill the vacancy created Wednesday by the resignation of Hayes.

Hayes, who had brought Drew to NMSU as an assistant four years ago, resigned to accept the head coaching post at Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla.

Wednesday was the first day for the signing of players to national letters of intent and the Aggies failed to sign any players.

"The instability of the coaching situation has hurt the recruiting a little bit," admitted Drew at a news conference called Thursday to announce his appointment as head coach.

"We've missed some but that's part of the game. But things are really looking good," he added in indicating he has hopes of signing some players in the near future.

Drew left immediately after the news conference to hit the recruiting trail. He was headed for Houston, Texas, and said he had some good prospects.

"We have some high hopes of landing a big man but we only have an outside chance of getting one," he said.

He was one of the most successful high school coaches ever in the southwest. Prior to joining Hayes in the college ranks, Drew was the coach at Kashmere High School in Houston from 1958-75. His teams at Kashmere posted a 435-135 record. At the end of his prep coaching career his teams won 78 straight games and back-to-back Class AAAA state crowns in 1974 and 1975.

Drew, a graduate of Houston's Wheatley High School, was captain of both the basketball and golf teams while working on his bachelor's degree at Fisk University in Tennessee. He also has a master's degree in education from Texas Southern University.

Rangers Still Unbeaten

By The Associated Press

Third baseman Toby Harrah's bases-loaded error opened the gates for three Texas runs in the third inning, and the Rangers remained major league baseball's only unbeaten team with a 5-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Ferguson Jenkins, who scattered six hits and struck out 10 batters before getting last-out relief help from Sparky Lyle, earned his second victory without a loss.

Stallings To Speak At LCC Sports Fete

Gene Stallings, defensive backfield coach for the Dallas Cowboys, will be speaker for the Lubbock Christian College all-sports banquet, to be held April 23.

The banquet, sponsored by the newly formed Chaparral Club, will begin at 6:30 p.m. at the Hancock Student Center on the LCC campus.

Athletes from all Chaparral teams will be honored and introduced, and various awards will be presented.

Baseball, basketball, volleyball, tennis and track honors will be presented by coaches Larry Hays, Larry Rogers, Hugh Rhodes and Doug Hubbard.

Stalling has spent seven years with the Cowboys after serving as head coach at Texas A&M. Stallings was coach of the last Aggie team to play in the Cotton Bowl, on Jan. 1, 1968, when the Aggies upset Alabama.

GENE STALLINGS
...LCC Banquet Speaker

Stallings played for Bear Bryant at A&M, making all-Southwest Conference.

The Cowboys coach will be making a fast trip to speak. His plan is expected to land here at 6:30 p.m. the night of the banquet, and he will be returning to Dallas at 8:45 p.m.

Segrest Leads As CHS Wins

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Gene Segrest hurled a four-hitter and chipped in with a double in leading Coronado to a 4-1 win over Plainview in the first half of a schedule District 4-AAAA doubleheader.

Because of weather conditions, the second game was postponed until next Thursday at 4 p.m. Thursday's game was played after being originally scheduled for Tuesday and then delayed another day from Wednesday.

Plainview got its only run in the bottom of the fourth, but the Ponies came back with another run in the fifth.

Segrest, in running his season record to 6-0, struck out ten Bulldog batters.

Thursday's win brought Coronado's season record to 13-5, and the Mustangs will host Hereford Saturday in a doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m. Plainview will play at Lubbock High Saturday afternoon.

Frenship Takes District Title

DENVER CITY (Special) — A third-place finish in the mile relay allowed Frenship to outdistance Slaton boys for the District 5-AA track championship Thursday afternoon.

Slaton won the mile relay, and the 20 points from it pushed the Tigers' total to 115 points. But, Frenship picked up 12 points for third, and it won with 122 points.

However, for the upcoming regional meet, Slaton placed both relays and six individual spots, to five indivual spots and one relay for Frenship.

Rossman Defends Boxing Crown

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Just a little more than 48 hours after getting the spangled belt symbolizing his light heavyweight championship, Mike Rossman has to defend it against Victor Galindez.

The two meet Saturday in a nationally televised (ABC-4 p.m. CST) rematch of their Sept. 15 World Boxing Association title fight.

Galindez said it will be his last fight if he loses and that he would only fight another time or two if he wins.

Rossman got his belt Thursday. His camp had complained that the belt was seven months overdue and blamed heavy Latin American influence in the WBA for the failure to give the new champion the reward.

Galindez, of Argentina, was WBA champion for five years before losing to Rossman seven months ago, and he was never given a championship belt either, his manager said.

Rossman and Galindez were originally scheduled to fight in February in Las Vegas, but Rossman was left standing in the ring when the Galindez camp pulled out in a dispute over officials.

Both fighters say they are ready now.

"The last time, I had some problems," Galindez said. "This time, no problems."

Galindez said he had domestic problems and trouble making the 175-pound limit for the Sept. 15 fight.

Rossman also says he's fit. "I don't expect to lose, but there'll be no excuses if I do," he said.

Galindez has been loose and playful in training sessions, Rossman deadly serious.

Rossman said he expects the fight to go much as it did on Sept. 15 when the bout was stopped in the 13th round because of cuts over Galindez' eyes — cuts that Galindez said were caused by butts.

"He knows I can fight inside a bit, but I don't think he'll change his style that much," Rossman said. "His style means he has to come in to punch, and while he's coming in, I'm out bop, bop, bop — picking my shots.

"When he gets in, I'll try to match him. He bores in, hits you on the elbow, hits you on the shoulder, and he hurts you.

"He's been fighting that style for a number of years, and I don't think he'll change."

After Galindez lost his crown, he was booed when he went home to Argentina. He said this fight is a crusade for his country.

"If he's got an Argentine crusade, I've got an American crusade," said Rossman of Turnersville, N.J.

Mets Call For 'Squeeze Play'

By HAL BOCK

Washington, D.C., which has been without a baseball team for some time now, will be pleased to learn that at least one major league club is spearheading the nation's fight against inflation.

The New York Mets have become a low budget operation, with a save-a-buck philosophy that is evident everywhere. No frills baseball is the new Shea Stadium style.

AP Sports Analysis

Now understand that the Mets never exactly have been your basic big spenders. The team still is trying to solve the escalating player salary dilemma and even with Willie Montanez's $300,000 contract and the $200,000 they pay Elliott Maddox and Richie Hebner, the Mets have one of the lowest payrolls in baseball. Right now, though, management is tossing dimes around as easily as they would manhole covers.

Economies realized by previous belt-tightening techniques such as spending as little as possible on players have not been enough. So others were ordered.

Most clubs include both their traveling secretary and public relations man on road trips. The Mets decided that only one of those two is needed. So they rotate. All clubs distribute press guides to media covering the club. The Mets' guide carries an informative $2 price tag in the corner and is for sale to fans. Next year, they'll probably sell them to the media, too. The press room operation at Shea also is on austerity.

There was a report this week that at one of the staff meetings where cost-cutting ideas were solicited, Bebe de Roulet, the team's assistant controller and daughter of the chairman of the board, had a unique suggestion. "Why," she wondered, "do we have to use new baseballs for every game?"

That, of course, is a brilliant stroke. When kids go out for a game, they use the same baseball, day after day, carefully taping it to preserve its longevity. If it's good enough for the sandlot kids, why not the Mets?

The single ball idea has generated a host of other suggestions on ways that the poor Mets can save a sheckel or two here and there. Remember, a penny saved is a penny earned.

The logical next step if you're going to use one baseball is to get rid of all those extra bats. How many bats did your kid's team have at the last game they played? One? Two? Maybe three, if you live in a rich neighborhood. Why do the Mets need more, especially the way they hit? That's a major savings right there.

Then there is the matter of those fancy, double knit uniforms. Let the guys play in their jeans and T-shirts. It'll be more homey.

Night games pose a major problem. Electricity is expensive. The solution is either to play more day games or, failing that, turn the lights on just before the first pitch. That, of course, would eliminate batting practice but with only one bat on hand, you wouldn't want to risk breaking it before the game starts, anyway.

In their first two home games this season, the Mets played a pair of extra inning contests and that offers another area for stimulating fresh income.

How about enforcing a new rule that every time a game goes beyond the standard nine innings, the fans have to pay a second admission? After all, fans pay for nine innings of baseball. Why should they get get the extra innings for free?

Understand, the Mets do spend money here and there. Why this year they've even introduced a mascot to brighten the dreary days at their empty ballpark. He is, of all things, a miniature mule and he is named Arthur. He celebrated Opening Day at Shea by racing around the outfield track. The 10,406 fans didn't quite know what to make of that scene.

Arthur is not expensive to keep up and probably will survive the Mets' economy drive. All he eats is oats. If his diet grows, however, they can always send him packing.

Needless to say, given the team's financial exigencies, all of these cost-cutting suggestions are supplied free of charge.

Matadors Suffer Setback

BORGER (Special)—Greg Flemming only allowed one hit as the Borger Bulldogs defeated the Estacado Matadors in a 1-AAA makeup opening baseball game Thursday afternoon 11-1.

Fleming struckout eight and walked four as the Bulldogs raised their record to 5-11 and 1-0. The loss drops Estacado to 9-9 and 0-1.

The Matadors will try to get on the winning track Saturday when they host the Levelland Lobos in a doubleheader. The action will start at 1 p.m.

KROC SURVEYS WALLS — Ray Kroc, the hamburger baron who owns the San Diego Padres, inspects his latest addition to San Diego Stadiu: an ivy curtain covering the centerfield fense. Kroc, who has turned the National League team around in five years, has also provided a non-smoking section for the fans and a row for the handicapped person who needs a wheelchair. (AP Laserphoto)

Kroc Wins Fans' Support

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It's been five years since Ray Kroc, crusty millionaire owner of the San Diego Padres, lost his temper and won a town.

Angered at a bush league play by the team he had just purchased, Kroc commandeered a press box microphone and apologized to the crowd, calling his team a bunch of hamburgers.

"I said it was the most miserable game I've seen in my life," said Kroc. "I used no profanity, but I was mad enough to use a whole book."

"The press said I was drunk. I wasn't. I was mad," said Kroc, mastermind behind McDonald's fast food empire.

But then, Kroc has made a fortune by pleasing the customer.

The Padres were packed and ready to be moved to Washington, D.C. when Kroc stepped in at the last minute and kept the franchise in California.

Vowing he would not be "an absentee owner," Kroc began charting a new course for the rag-tag expansion team that averaged about 8,000 fans per game in its first five years.

And how do you merchandize a last place team that lost 110 games in 1969 — the Padres' maiden season?

"Winning is No. 1, but promotion is No. 2," said Kroc, who watched the Padres' attendance climb from a single season high of 644,272 in 1972 to almost 1.1 million in 1974.

Since then, attendance has been over a million a year for five straight years and "this year, if we stay in the race, we could draw 2 million. And that's two million from a drawing area of one million."

Staying in the race is no longer a fantasy. The Padres, who stage their home opener Friday night against the Cincinnati Reds, are laughing matters no more.

After years of residing in the National League West basement, San Diego broke .500 for the first time in 1978, finishing fourth with an 84-78 record.

It came after what Kroc calls "my biggest mistake."

He believes hiring Alvin Dark as manager in 1977 set the franchise back. "I think I let my memories of baseball get in the way of good judgment. I hired him on the basis of his record as a baseball player. But he had difficulty delegating authority and communicating."

Kroc fired John McNamara after a 20-28 start in 1977 and replaced him with Dark. But, after the Padres finished the season with 93 losses, Kroc dismissed Dark midway through spring training in 1978, installing Roger Craig as manager.

"I delegate all authority," said Kroc, "but I reserve the right to butt in at any time — and I do."

He splits his work day between a McDonald's regional office in San Diego, where he keeps tabs of the 5,000 restaurant operation, and San Diego Stadium.

When he isn't involved in day-to-day baseball details, he will inspect the stadium, ever looking for new ideas.

"Each year I like to come up with new things that add to the atmosphere and environment," he said.

This year a blanket of ivy hangs from the center field fence. "I grew up in Chicago and one year saw nearly every Cubs' home game at Wrigley Field. I've always been fond of that ivy wall."

Other new additions include a non-smoking section in the stands and a row for fans in wheel chairs.

"My desire is to be known as a good baseball owner who looked out of the people."

Rose Makes Most Of Third Spot

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two guys were engaged in a needling session during spring training at the Philadelphia Phillies' camp.

One said that 38-year-old Pete Rose would hit .260.

There was some good natured ribbing, and the guy who thought Rose is the greatest invention since the electric light, refused to put his money where his mouth is.

But apparently the mouth wagged the .260 prediction to Rose.

The guy who made the .260 remark hadn't seen Rose for two weeks. The new Philadelphia Phillies' first baseman probably had answered a thousand questions in the interim, made TV commercials, was even allowed some time for batting practice.

But that .260 remark rankled the $800,000 per year Rose.

He finally caught up with the guy who said it.

Rose had three hits opening night at home against Pittsburgh this week. The media gathered around his locker space like a bunch of locusts. Rose obviously was waiting for "Mr. .260."

The guy dutifully appeared, asked a question, but before Rose replied, he said good naturedly, "Hey, how do like your bet that I'll hit .260?"

Rose was informed there was no bet.

It was just another indication of Rose's intensity, his pride, his confidence.

Then, Rose answered the original question, which was how he felt being switched from leadoff to third in the batting order.

"The manager makes the lineup," Rose said. "First, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, I hit where he writes in my name."

Rose, however, thought it was a good move. It placed Bake McBride in the leadoff spot, and McBride is faster than Rose. Rose, who hadn't batted regularly from the third hole since 1969, felt he would do very well in that spot.

"I bat from both sides (he's a switchhitter). I'm a patient man (at the plate) with a runner on third. You know, you don't have to be a home run hitter to bat third ... But you can't play us like Punch and Judy hitters.

"We all have power. There are two types of power hitters. The ones who hit home runs and those who get a lot of total bases. I like the opportunity to hit in front of (Greg) Luzinski," Rose said.

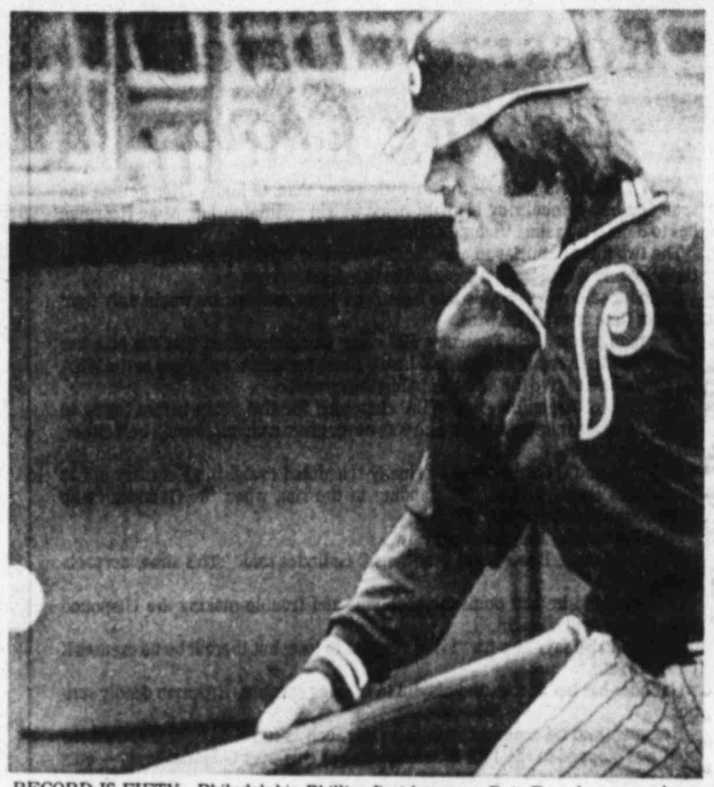
Rose said he had the ability to make things happen in the third slot, or any other batting spot.

The guy who started the .260 controversy inquired if Rose tried just a little harder in this first game before the home folks.

"No harder than last night," he replied. "I play every game like it might be my last."

Doesn't all that money create more pressure?

"Hey, I wasn't exactly a pauper last year," Rose snapped. "And by the way, I haven't got any Philadelphia money yet. Payday is the first and 15th."



RECORD IS FIFTY—Philadelphia Phillies first baseman Pete Rose bounces a baseball off the end of his bat while waiting to take batting practice before a game against the Pittsburgh Phillies. Rose said the unofficial record for consecutive bounces is 50. (AP Laserphoto)

Bird May Try Baseball

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — All-American Larry Bird, college basketball's player of the year, may play for Indiana State's baseball team in a varsity doubleheader against Butler on April 29.

"We're trying to arrange it for the 29th," assistant sports information director Craig McKee said Thursday. "Nothing has been confirmed yet, although it looks very positive."

The 6-foot-9 Bird, who led the Sycamore basketball team through an undefeated regular season and the nation's No. 1 ranking before losing to Michigan State in the championship game of the NCAA tournament, has not played baseball since high school.

But he has played slow-pitch softball in a city league, and last year batted 12 home runs and had 48 RBIs in 20 games, playing the outfield and first base.

He probably would be used as a designated hitter or at first base against Butler, McKee said.

"Anyone can be added to the roster, as long as they meet the basic requirements of the NCAA," McKee said of Bird's possible one-day collegiate baseball career. "His situation would be no different than a walk-on."

Nets, Sixers Set For 'Round Two'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers vs. the New Jersey Nets reminds you of a hockey joke told by comedian Rodney Dangerfield.

"I went to a fight one night and a hockey game broke out," quipped Dangerfield, the man who claims he gets no respect.

Just change the word "hockey" to "basketball" and you have a good picture of the Sixers vs. the Nets, a mushrooming rivalry between two teams about 60 miles apart as the Pennsylvania-New Jersey turnpikes fly.

The 76ers beat the Nets 122-114 Wednesday night in the first game of their best-of-three mini National Basketball Association playoff series. It was a rough, tough, no holds barred game.

There were seven technical fouls called, three Nets ejected, including Coach Kevin Loughery and trainer Fritz Massman. John Williamson, who scored 38 points for New Jersey, also was banished.

"I hope we have strong officials in New Jersey," remarked 76ers' coach Billy Cunningham after his team's opening triumph.

"I don't want to see the game get out of hand," said Cunningham of Friday night's second in the set. "I know intensity in playoff games reaches a higher level, but I don't want to see fights, or someone get hurt."

Loughery is a marked man, considering his 42 technicals during the regular season, and his kamikaze attitude toward the officials. There were two veterans handling the game Wednesday night — Earl Strom and Joe Gushue. They had their whistles and thumbs in constant action.

"The ejection will have no bearing on the next game because we'll have new officials," said Loughery.

What did he think of the officiating by Strom and Gushue?

"I'm not allowed to talk about officials. It's a league rule," Loughery replied.

Then, he added, "The officiating by two top officials was fantastic," the sarcasm dripping from his lips.

The two main antagonists were the 76ers' Henry Bibby, a 6-foot-1 inch tenacious defender, against the Nets' 6-2 Williamson, a prolific scorer.

"I was not out there to fight Bibby," said Williamson. "He likes to grab my jersey, hold on, lean on me from one end (of the court) to the other. That's why we almost came to blows."

Williamson said he was ejected for his tone of voice, not what he said.

"I said, 'that's a great call (on an out of bounds play).' Gushue didn't like the way I said it. He said, 'yeh, that's a great call, you're out.'

Williamson, however, wasn't about to blame the Nets' loss on the officials.

"We've got to to come out more agressive," Williamson said.

Bibby said of Williamson, "I don't mind being pushed around. That's part of the game. It happens all the time."

Jazz Faces Possible Law Suit

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The man who runs the Superdome said Thursday that he'll sue the New Orleans Jazz and the National Basketball Association if the team goes ahead with plans to move out of the $163 million sports palace.

"We have a 10-year contract that in our opinion and in the opinion of our legal advisers is binding, and there are six years to run on that agreement," said Denzil Skinner, head of Hyatt Management Corp.

He said the Jazz pays a base rent of $2,400 a game, plus a percentage of the gate after attendance reaches a figure that was attained only once or twice this past season.

But he said the possibility of the team buying its way out of the contract was not the issue.

"Whenever you get involved in interstate — and this is interstate — it gets much more involved than just a simple agreement," he said.

Skinner said he has yet to hear from Jazz owners that they plan to move, getting all his information from reports of press conferences held by managing partner Larry Hatfield in Salt Lake City.

He sent a telegram to NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien telling him that Hyatt Management will sue the team, the league, league officials, every NBA club and every city which "tampers" with the Jazz.

He sent copies of the telegram to city and state officials as well as to members of the Louisiana congressional delegation, soliciting their help in keeping the Jazz in the Superdome.

In announcing plans to move to Salt Lake City, Hatfield said the stadium was booked so solid with trade shows and conventions that the team was unable to get suitable February playing dates.

Bass Anglers Find Cuba 'Paradise'

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Outdoor Editor

It's a bass angler's paradise — a place where 3- and 4-pound largemouth bass are allowed to throw a bait so the fisherman can concentrate on hooking a really big lunker.

Cuba — to the general public the name has been synonymous with cigars, rum and the government of Fidel Castro — now equated with top notch bass fishing as more and more anglers test the waters of Lake Zaza and Treasure Lake.

Walter Crowell and Gregory E. Curry, both of Lubbock, recently returned from a fishing trip to Cuba and have pictures to prove that the fishing is great. In their instance, the big one didn't get away.

"There's two different kinds of bass fishing down there," noted Curry. "You go for the big ones or you fish for quantity. Usually the angler that goes on that type of fishing trip fishes for the 'hawgs' — they want El Grande! We were there for quality and not quantity."

"Our party of 38 anglers caught plenty of lunkers," said Crowell. "The two of us landed four good size fish at Treasure Lake. Two of the fish were over 8 pounds, while the other two weighed 7 1/2 and 6 pounds."

After 2 1/2 days of fishing at Treasure Lake (the lake is approximately 100 miles long and 15 miles wide), the Lubbock anglers went to Zaza (over 30,000 surface acres), where the action produced lunkers that tipped the scales at 8 and 7 pounds consistantly.

The best baits proved to be plastic worms with the popular colors being red, dark purple, and black. The smaller bass announced their size by nibbling on the 9-inch worms, while the "hawgs" usually inhaled the bait.

Both men carried three rods and reels with 20-pound test line. The light tackle was the same type that anglers would use at Amistad Lake near Del Rio. Only two lures were lost during the trip, although most anglers have a much higher loss rate because of the heavy brush and weeds in the two lakes.

Curry said, "The lakes are quite different. The deepest water at Treasure was about 18 feet and it is filled with weed beds. You don't find the weed beds in Zaza, and it has deeper water with some depths of 90 feet."

"Treasure is a natural lake in Zapata Swamp," explained Crowell, "but Zaza is a man-made lake with some dead trees standing up in it."

In the middle of a lush jungle, Treasure Lake has had no commercial fishing pressure for 20 years, and even now the sport fishing is limited to seasons and number of anglers. Most fishing experts agree that Treasure Lake has the greatest potential worldwide for trophy bass. It could well be the home of a new world record.

For continuous excitement of lunker after lunker, Lake Zaza seems to have no equal. During one of the first American fishing trips following better relations between Cuba and the United States, a total of 3,261 bass were caught by 18 anglers during a five-day trip. Two dozen of the bass weighed over 10 pounds, with the best lunker hitting 11 pounds 9 ounces. The majority of the total catch exceeded 4 pounds per fish.

Initial arrangements for the Lubbock men to fish at Treasure and Zaza were handled by Kathy Egenbacher at World Wide Travel in Lubbock. The itinerary, accommodations and fishing services were under the auspices of Cuba Tours USA, based in Houston.

Cuba Tours USA encourages their angler clients to release all small fish. The firm will only allow trophy fish to be brought out by its clients. Mrs. Bob (Shirley) Gatewood, a member of Bass 'N Gals, returned to her hometown of Houston with a 12 pound trophy.

In their post-trip evaluation, Crowell and Curry said their fishing guides were knowledgeable and patient. Despite previous reports of poor performance of the outboard motors on the 14-foot boats, little motor trouble was encountered.

HEADING IN FOR LUNCH — The thatched-roof structure in the distance is the main restaurant on the south side of Treasure Lake. The cabinsare on the water, allowing guides to pick up anglers at their front door.

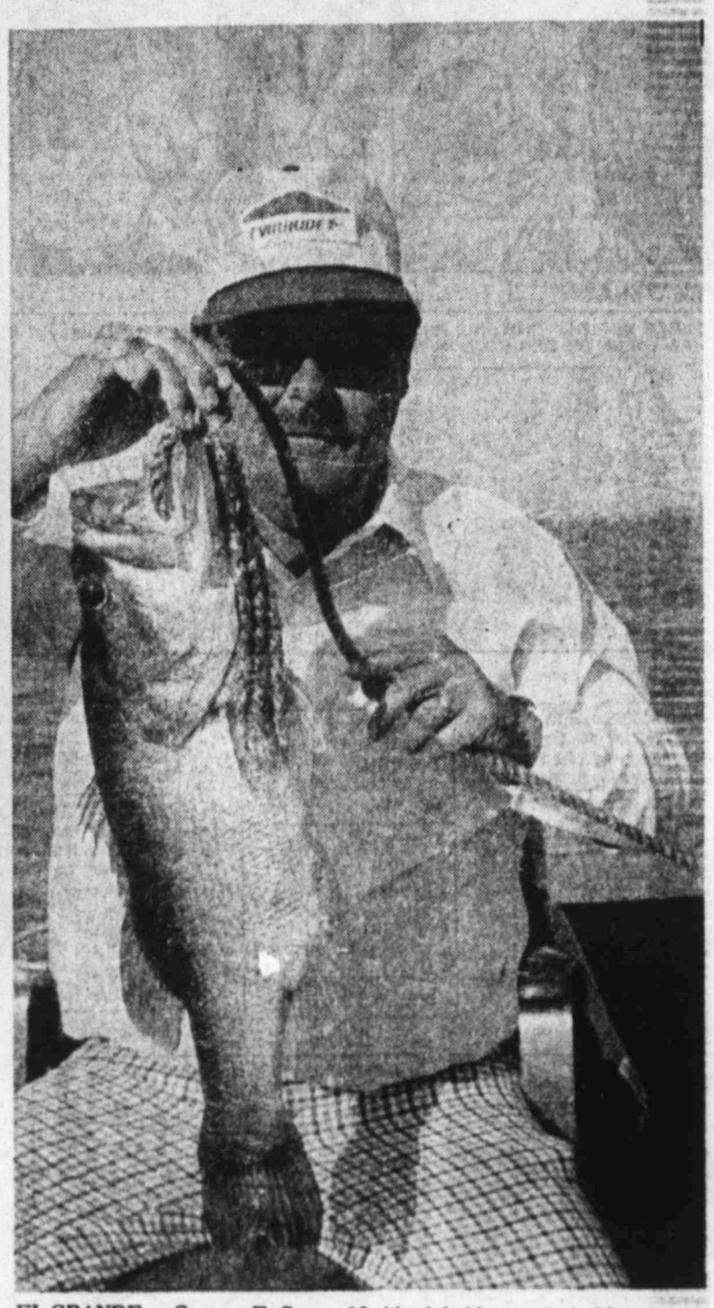
There was agreement among the Lubbockites that the food could be improved in variety and quantity, but two steak dinners were rated as being very good to excellent. It was noted that the coffee had a strong chicory flavor to it.

Curry suggested that anglers take along an ice cooler filled with snacks, and use the cooler to bring back frozen trophy fish. Snack foods will be appreciated during the fishing days that begin at 6:30 a.m. and end at 7 p.m., although there is a lunch break from about noon till 2 p.m.

During the Cuba visit, there was no trouble with the drinking water. There was one instance of no in-room hot water for bathing, but most of the accmmodations were acceptable with the usual resort features.

The anglers that represented several areas of the U.S. and many occupations encountered no Castro, Communist, or Cuba propaganda. There was no problem with customs.

"We'd go again," noted Curry.
Crowell agreed and added, "It was fantastic!"



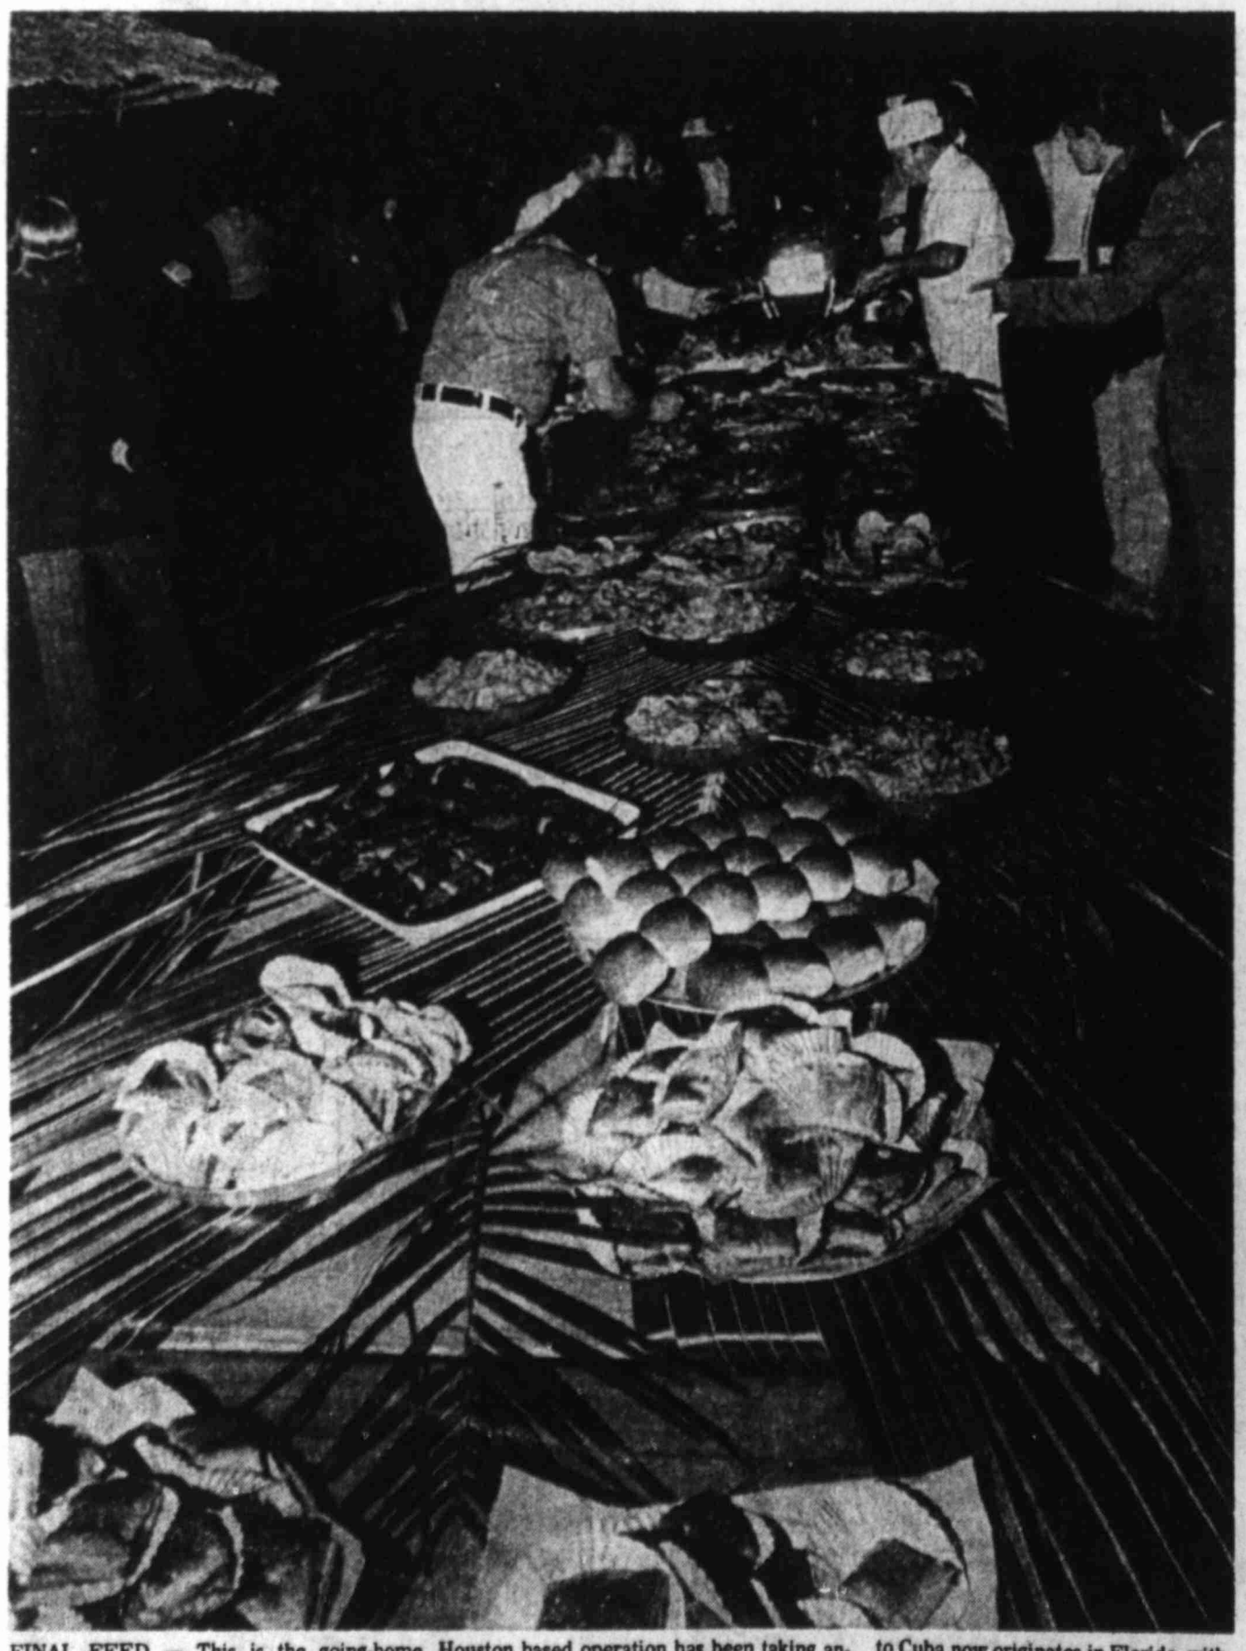
EL GRANDE — Gregory E. Curry of Lubbock holds up a typical largemouth bass that can be found at Treasure Lake or Lake Zaza in Cuba. Plastic worms proved to be the best bait.

Bass Fishing Film Offered On Request

A film pertaining to bass fishing in Cuba is available free of charge to sportsman and civic clubs.

Titled the "Cuba Connection...for Grande Bass," the 25-minute color production with sound was filmed at Treasure Lake and Zaza. Most of the footage illustrates the big bass action at Zaza, but the scene then shifts to Treasure Lake, in the vast Zapata Swamp, so that anglers can see the contrast in the two famous fishing holes.

Persons interested in the film should write to Cuba Travel USA, P.O. Box 60394, Houston 77205, or call (713) 443-8778. There is no charge for the use of the film, but requests should be made well in advance.



FINAL FEED — This is the going-home spread arranged by Cuba Tours USA. The Houston based operation has been taking anglers to Cuba since October of 1977. The trip to Cuba now originates in Florida, with only a passport needed for fishing clients.

'The Champ' Tells Old Fashioned Story Of Love

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

There may be flood warnings issued soon at the Winchester Theater, as the father-son love story called "The Champ" continues to pummel the tear ducts of audiences on a nightly basis. A remake of King Vidor's 1931 film of the same name, Franco Zeffirelli's "The Champ" is a gorgeous old-fashioned story of love and loyalty, of sacrifice and shame, and is without a doubt the tearjerker to end all tearjerkers. Overly sentimental? Oh yes, no question about it. But Zeffirelli uses exaggerated situations to draw very real emotional responses from his viewers. The result is a film which transcends political issues, car chases and sexual diversions, concentrating instead on a screen humanity too long neglected.

A-J FILM REVIEW

Indeed, "The Champ" does not make us think. It makes us feel. It forces us to lower our protective shields and celebrate the fact that we really can care — not just at the end of the film, but throughout the course of its two-hour running time.

As with the 1931 picture, which starred Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper, casting was an all-important factor. Zeffirelli originally cast Ryan O'Neal in the title role but, in a fit of ego, the actor dropped out of the production when his son was not cast in the pivotal role. Call it an act of God, because there's no way O'Neal, with those boring long-distance stares he used in "Love Story" and "Oliver's Story," could have made this film work. Cast in his place was Academy Award winner Jon Voight, who captures us from start to finish. Voight is that rare and gifted actor who can adapt to any role — a naive Texan seeking success as a New York stud in "Midnight Cowboy," a Southern teacher fighting tradition and trying to help the illiterate in "Conrack," a bitter paraplegic Vietnam veteran in "Coming Home" and, here, a former champion boxer who lives for the love of his son.

The father-son relationship is the very core of "The Champ," and Zeffirelli ensured success by casting 8-year-old Ricky Schroder as the boxer's son, T.J. Boasting unbelievably appealing freckles and blue eyes, the youngster could probably draw tears from a cigar store's wooden Indian. His lines are oftentimes corny, yes, as when his horse is injured and, fearing it must be destroyed, he pleads, "I want to keep him no matter what. I'll brush him and feed him every day."

But the rapport the lad shares with Voight, the hero-worship he so obviously feels for his father, is too genuine to disregard.

The story finds Voight as Billy Flynn, a former boxing champ now working for petty cash with friends at the Hialeah racetrack. He's got faults, the most obvious being a liking for booze and gambling, but they never interfere with his affection for the boy. Voight plays Flynn in old-fashioned pugilist style, granting his body a look of broken submission, of memories of too many punches endured. He is satisfied to dream, sparked by his son's adoration, of a comeback in the ring. But his life is not changed until the re-appearance of the wife which abandoned both him and T.J. seven years back.

If the film has a flaw, it is the performance of Faye Dunaway as the woman who wants her career first, her family second. She is introduced as a rich fashion designer, married now to an even wealthier gerontologist, and she turns her character into such an icy East Coast high-society type that it is not only impossible to believe she was ever married to Billy, but also impossible to accept her as a likeable character. She threatens the film throughout but, thankfully, is consistently overshadowed by the better acting of both Voight and Schroder.

Voight, especially, is a character we can believe in, one caught in a struggle for his own son but still vulnerable enough to ask, "What about MY heart? ... What about ME?"

Director Zeffirelli, making a comeback of his own after a concentration on Shakespeare ("Romeo And Juliet") and religious films ("Brother Sun, Sister Moon" and TV's "Jesus Of Nazareth"), never hides the fact he is manipulating us. His closeups are many and obvious, and his bills for glycerin must have boosted the budget considerably. But he still manages to move us with the familiar tale of a poor father having to compete with a rich mother for the affection of the son caught in the middle. The scene in which Voight wins the lad a teddy bear, only to discard it after seeing the boy's happiness with a more expensive gift from his mother, is perhaps overdone. But it helps develop both story and character.

The real key, however, is the confrontations between father and son: the shame Voight feels at being arrested in front of his son, the heartbreaking sacrificial exchange in jail, the loving re-uniting afterward, and the father's final noble decision to re-enter the ring in hopes of winning enough prize money to create a good life for his son.

The scenes at the racetrack (good commercial time for Hiahleah, if the truth be told) and in the boxing ring are full of exhuberance and excitement. The supporting performances from Jack Warden (an Oscar nominee in virtually the same part in another re-make, "Heaven Can Wait"), Arthur Hill, Mary Jo Catlett and Joan Blondell are notable, and the music by Dave Grusin (another "Heaven Can Wait" nominee) consistently helps in the creating of mood. But what the film finally boils down to is Voight and Schroder: father and son, hero and worshiper, familial love.

The finale of this picture varies very little from the ending of King Vidor's 1931 classic and yet, even knowing in advance what would happen, I couldn't block the tears.

Indeed, "The Champ" is an old-fashioned tearjerker which tears at your heartstrings and dares you to surrender to emotion in a darkened theater. Frankly, I didn't know I had that many tears left in me, and I worry about the robots who can walk out of the theater saying they felt nothing. This is a movie fathers and sons can relate to on a personal level, a picture which will grab anyone who appreciates a good love story. It is overly sentimental, corny at times and thouroughly manipulative — but it works. And the resulting flood of salty tears serves as cleansing proof of our own humanity.

Actor Brings Intensity To Television Role

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — John Hurley worked frantically for a piece of the "American Dream," but what he got was a heart attack.

Kevin Dobson plays Hurley in the CBS movie "Transplant" with a fierce intensity, a man who thrived on pressures and problems, too many cigarettes and too many martinis. When the crisis came, he didn't want to let go.

The two-hour movie, which airs Saturday on CBS, is in essence a docu-drama based on an actual case. It is a taut story, written for the screen by John Gay from the book by Philip Dossick, and directed by William A. Graham.

The film also stars Melinda Dillon, Granville Van Dusen, Ronny Cox and Bibi Besch.

Dobson, once an aspiring baseball player, most recently played Detective Bobby Crocker in "Kojak." He still sees things in sports terms.

"I have no regrets I didn't stay in sports," he says. "I just realized that the thing I was looking for I found in acting — confidence. I thought I was a good ball player, but I realized through acting that the No. 1 thing is confidence. That's what I had missed in playing ball.

"In acting you're constantly exposing yourself and finding new areas. It's a challenge — I was going to say battle. Obtaining the true values within a scene is like hitting a home run with the bases loaded. With Melinda Dillon it was a great team. It was a team effort."

Dobson spent several years struggling to make it as an actor. In New York, he worked as a ticket-taker for the Long Island Railroad, and even after coming to Hollywood he was a fireman for the Santa Fe railroad on its Los Angeles to San Diego run.

"I look at my career like a ballplayer looks at his," he says. "You want to get into the major leagues, then on the all star team, and you want to play regular. It can be done with a lot of hard work, a lot of drive. The thing is to achieve goals for yourself, not to give up."

Did he see landing a regular part on "Kojak" as the big leagues?

"I knew I was on a winning team," he says. "I wanted to do the best I could, to prove myself. I was a supporting player. I respected that. I didn't want to go beyond it. I wasn't after Telly Savalas' job. If it had run for 20 years I would have done it. It was right for me. It was a training ground. Telly Savalas became an international star, and I was five feet away studying him.

"I knew if I did my job the best I could I'd get an opportunity. Like 'Transplant.' If you want something bad enough you'll get it. You have to be ready. It doesn't come around that often."

All of which makes Kevin Dobson sound like John Hurley.

"I guess I'm an A-type person," he says. "I recognize it in me. I want to control it more. I want to relax. You never know when it's coming, so I'm going to live my life as best I can. I care for my family and I'm open to the needs of other people."

Though a stage and movie veteran, Dobson, 35, says he considers "Transplant" his first starring role.

Actually, a pilot called "Stranded" holds that distinction, but Dobson would like to forget that one.

"They kept offering it to me and I kept saying no," he says. "My agent said it would be good for me. I said I wasn't trying to build up a reputation as an actor to do something like that. Finally my agent persuaded me to take it. It turned out to be a dramatic 'Gilligan's Island.' Still, it was worth the experience.

"I think of 'Transplant' as my first starring role," he says. "It's more involved. It's more a stretch of more character. It's more creative. Maybe I feel now that I'm heading to take on a leading role in a series."

Dobson is working with a writer on a possible series for CBS. He doesn't want to reveal too much, saying only, "It's a cross between 'The Fugtive' and 'Dirty Harry'."

Adams Offers Amended Rail Deregulation Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said Thursday the Carter administration's railroad deregulation proposal can solve many of the industry's problems, but is "not the total answer."

"To benefit fully from a less regulated environment, the industry must modernize its physical plant, its operations, its labor relations and every other way it conducts its business," Adams told a Senate subcommittee.

The administration bill would curb the Interstate Commerce Commission's power to regulate railroad freight rates, make railroad mergers subject to the antitrust laws and set new rules for abandoning unprofitable lines.

BOARD RECONSIDERS

CUMBERLAND, R.I. (AP) — The Cumberland school committee is reconsidering its refusal to give a hearing to an 17-year-old homosexual boy who wants to take a male escort to the junior prom. The committee decided earlier this week to cancel a hearing on the question, because the boy's father objected to his going to the Cumberland High School Prom with a male friend next month. "We're weighing whether the constitutional issues compel us to give a hearing on the merits," school committee attorney V. James Santaniello said Thursday.

Legendary Director John Huston Remembers Hollywood Actors

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — If a director were judged by the number of great stars and Oscar winners he's put through their paces, John Huston might be the best director who ever lived.

A grizzled, craggy faced man with frosty hair and beard, Huston, 72, has youthful, puckish eyes. His latest film is "Wise Blood," his first directorial assignment since "The Man Who Would Be King" in 1975.

Huston likes to say he does as little directing as possible — "Most of my direction is done in casting, which comes out of the script."

Few directors have cast as many Oscar winners and nominees. A partial list includes Marlon Brando, Humphrey Bogart, Katharine Hepburn, Montgomery Clift, Paul Newman, Edward G. Robinson, Deborah Kerr, Clark Gable, Gergory Peck, John Wayne, Elizabeth Taylor and George C. Scott.

"There is no finer actor in the world than Robert Mitchum," Huston said without qualification. "I learned that when we did 'Heaven Knows Mr. Allison.' He has a great wealth of talent and enormous discipline. Very underrated.

"I remember one scene where I asked Mitch to crawl through high grass on his belly for three takes. He did so without question. When I told him we had a print, he stood up and blood was running down his chest.

"I couldn't believe my eyes. He'd been crawling over stinging nettles without flinching. In my book Mitch compares with Brando any time in the week.

"Marlon and I got along very well doing 'Reflections in a Golden Eye.' But then I got along with almost every one of the actors and actresses I've worked with. For the most part there were no difficulties at all. You don't have trouble with good people."

Huston has a reputation for never raising his voice on the set. He guides his actors with quiet direction. When there are differences of opinion, he takes the star aside for a discussion.

Of the scores of stars he has directed the only one he does not praise unstintingly is John Wayne. He said, "There was not much love lost between us on 'The Barbarian and the Geisha.' There was no difficulty but I just felt he disliked me as much as I disliked him.

"Oh, there were problems with Monty Clift but they were understandable. He was not a well man when we did 'Freud.'

"As for Bogart, the only picture I 'directed' him in was 'The African Queen.' In the others ('The Maltese Falcon' and 'The Treasure of Sierra Madre') Bogey was being himself, not acting. Still, he was a wonderful artist who managed to combine being a great actor and personality.

"Marilyn Monroe was something else again. She was ill and we had to close down production for a few weeks on 'The Misfits.' Gable was a dream to work with. He was on the set on time, in wardrobe and knew his lines every day.

"Billy Wilder said about Marilyn being late and unprepared when he directed her in 'Some Like It Hot' that he had an aunt who could get to the set on time every day but nobody would pay a cent to see her in a movie."

Huston's happy accord with actors might be partly due to the fact that he is an actor himself — "The Bible," "China Town" — but doesn't think of himself as a performer. He acts from time to time because he is offered huge salaries.

He has no preference when it comes to working with actresses or actors, saying, "They are all actors before they have a sex. They all look to the director for guidance and approval. The director is their first audience.

"Actresses have no more temperament than actors. Working with Elizabeth Taylor was a joy. She is a mistress of her art as well as an exceptional beauty.

"I cast my actors for professional reasons, not personal ones. Obviously."

Cosmonauts Return Safely To Earth After Space Linkup Attempt Fails

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet and a Bulgarian cosmonaut returned safely to Earth in an unusual night landing Thursday after aborting their attempted linkup with an orbiting space laboratory, Moscow radio reported.

The broadcast said the Soyuz 33 spacecraft, launched late Tuesday, deployed its parachutes normally and made a soft landing in the steppes in the targeted area of Kazakhstan, about 1,800 miles southwest of Moscow.

Georgy Ivanov, the first Bulgarian in space, and Soviet commander Nikolai Rukavishnikov were reported feeling fine and the broadcast said the night landing caused no problems.

The failure was the first in four Intercosmos operations and dampened Thursday's celebrations here of the 18th anniversary of the first manned space flight — that of Russia's Yuri Gagarin.

At the moment Soviet television viewers were being told of the flight's failure and the cosmonauts' return to Earth, fireworks were going off in the night sky above Moscow to mark "Cosmonautics Day."

The Soviet news agency Tass said a malfunction in the "approach correction power unit" of the space capsule caused the last-moment cancellation of a docking with the Salyut 6 space station, where two other Soviets have been in orbit for 6½ weeks. Western space experts here said it appeared the craft was unable to make the tricky approach maneuver and that similar problems in the past appeared to be the result of a Soyuz booster rocket inadequacy.

After a blastoff which was nearly postponed because of 40-mph winds, the Soyuz 33 had corrected its course twice and was set for a docking "by midnight" Wednesday, Tass reported.

Early Thursday, Tass reported that "in the process of approach there arose deviations from the regular mode of operation of the approach-correction power unit...and the linkup was canceled."

The Intercosmos program, in which East Bloc cosmonauts are trained in Moscow, has involved previous successful launchings of spacemen from Czechoslovakia, Poland and East Germany. Romanian, Cuban and Mongolian pilots are reported in training for future launchings. In October 1977, Soyuz 25 failed in a docking attempt and the observers said that failure, coupled with Thursday's, points up a weakness in the ability of Soviet vehicles to maneuver precisely to allow formation an orbiting "sausage" comprised of several vehicles.

Such a approach involves a trickier docking procedure than the American plan to fly a space shuttle back and forth to permanent orbiting facility.

Tass reported Wednesday that Rukavishnikov, who was on his third spaceflight, switched off the engines during their fourth and fifth orbits, putting the Soyuz on course for the approach to Salyut 6, where Soviet cosmonauts Vladimir Lyakhov and Valeri Ryumin were waiting.

The Soyuz-Salyut program of manned space laboratories has been plagued by trouble since its inauguration. The first Soyuz spacecraft, developed in 1967 to carry cosmonauts to and from orbiting space stations, crashed on its return, killing cosmonaut Vladimir Komarov.

The first attempt to dock with a space station was aborted in 1971 without explanation. The next manned shot, Soyuz 11, put three men aboard the space station Salyut 1, the world's first orbiting research lab. But the cosmonauts were killed on their return to Earth when their cabin lost its pressurization.

After the docking failures the Soviets gave only very sketchy descriptions of the problems, and the Western experts could only guess at their nature.

But when cosmonauts were killed in the Soyuz 1 and Soyuz 11 launches, the causes were investigated and relatively full accounts were made public.

Networks Say Earnings Skid During Year

NEW YORK (AP) — RCA Corp. reported record first quarter earnings on Wednesday, but said profits of its NBC subsidiary were down. CBS reported a decline in profits.

Both companies said higher programming costs for their television networks caused broadcasting profits to decline despite higher advertising revenues.

RCA profits for the first three months of the year were $62.1 million or 81 cents a share, up 13.1 percent from $54.9 million or 72 cents a share in the same quarter of 1978. Revenues climbed 20 percent from $1.5 billion to $1.8 billion.

CBS reported earnings declined 47.3 percent to $17.8 million or 64 cents a share from $33.8 million or 64 cents a share in the same period of 1978. Revenues increased 11.3 percent from $744.2 million to $828.3 million.

"First quarter operations were impacted by a unique combination of negative factors," stated CBS Chairman William Paley and CBS President John Backe, "but we remain confident that 1979 will be another record year for CBS both in revenue and in earnings."

CBS said profits were down in all its areas, with the sharpest declines in the broadcast and record groups. It did not disclose specific results, but said the record drop reflected industry problems and pointed to higher programming costs in broadcasting.

RCA did not disclose the quarterly earnings for NBC, but said they were below the figures for the 1978 quarter despite an increase in revenue caused by strong demand for advertising time.

In all of 1978, NBC earned $122.1 million before taxes,

Second Generation Actress Decides Acting 'Isn't So Bad'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Another addition to the growing throng of second-generation of movie performers: Amanda Plummer.

Just turned 22, she possesses the classic handsomeness of her father, Christopher Plummer. But when she speaks, the voice is pure Tammy Grimes, who is her mother.

The budding career of Amanda Plummer is taking a big jump with her casting in "Cattle Annie and Little Britches," a large-scale western also starring Burt Lancaster and John Savage, the latter a hot actor because of "The Deer Hunter' and "Hair."

Amanda plays Cattle Annie, and Little Britches is 14-year-old Diana Lane, soon to be seen in George Roy Hill's "A Little Romance." The title characters are real-life figures before the turn of the century.

Before leaving for location in Durango, Mexico, Amanda Plummer was in town for costume fittings and conferences with director Lamont Johnson and Rupert Hitzig, who is producing "Cattle Annie and Little Britches" with Alan King.

With a hairdo resembling an unkempt haystack and an obtuse way of looking at things, she bore some similarity to her mother. But obviously she has a mind of her own.

"I hated acting as a child," Amanda remarked, "Both my parents were actors, and for that reason they were never around. Actors were people I was introduced to at parties, and I had no desire to be like them,"

Plummer and Grimes divorced when their daughter was 4 years old, and she said, "From the time I was seven until four years ago, I never saw my father. Since then we have been together on a few occasions." She added that her mother has remarried once, her father "three or four times," but neither has had more children.

Having known a solitary childhood, Amanda experienced a teen-age crisis. She described that as "confusion between imagination and reality; I was too fragile, I needed to discover more about myself."

Three years at Middlebury College in Vermont helped sort out her life. An English major, she did a lot of reading and writing, finally concluded that acting wasn't so bad after all.

"My parents took me seriously, because they know I'm a serious person," she said. "Both talked negatively about acting as an occupation, pointing out the pitfalls. I understood what they were saying, but I wasn't dissuaded."

Realizing the need for training, she enrolled at New York's famed Neighborhood Playhouse drama school but dropped out because of "too much talk." She decided to learn by doing, and she spent last summer with the Williamstown, Mass., Theater Festival.

Then she won a role in a play, "A Month in the Country," to appear at Princeton and Philadelphia. When she reported the news to her mother, Tammy replied, "Guess who else is going to be in it? Me."

Amanda was appearing off-Broadway in "Artichoke" when Hitzig and King chose her to play the frontier groupie in "Cattle Annie and Little Britches." A horse rider since the age of five, she would like to do all her riding in the film, especially a spectacular transfer from one horse to another.

"You can do it," agreed producer Hitzig, "but on the last day of shooting, after all your other scenes are done,"

Another second-generation performer has been signed for "Cattle Annie and Little Britches" — Steven Ford, whose mother once danced with the Martha Graham troupe and whose father posed for magazine ads. Young Ford will play a deputy U.S. marshal who helps track down the outlaws.

Young Professor Makes Living On Sing-A-Gram

Mike Fredrickson, delivering a singing telegram from the groom's mother, suggested the couple "Start Misbehavin'". The newlyweds were speechless, Fredrickson recalls.

That visit was all in a day's work for Fredrickson, 34, the brains and lungs behind Sing-A-Gram, a thriving business run out of a roomy, high-ceilinged old apartment in Minneapolis.

His credentials are what you might call impeccable: Magna cum laude grad in English from Macalester College, two years on a Rhodes scholarship at Oxford, a master's degree in medieval literature from the University of Toronto.

Fredrickson started singing telegrams as a lark two years ago. Now he has a full-time business, grossing several thousand dollars a month. His brother Steven, a Redwood Falls businessman, is a partner in the enterprise, and another brother, Mark, is one of three performers he hires to help out.

Fredrickson charges $25 to deliver a singing telegram in person in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, a little more in the suburbs. A message delivered by phone costs $10.

He and his colleagues are doing 30 or 40 telegrams a week, mostly in person, in the Twin Cities area, and he recently hired three performers and opened a branch in Detroit. He also tapes copies of his performance for $3.50 apiece.

His lyrics, delivered in a mellow baritone, often go beyond mere doggerel.

"I am, after all, an English professor," he points out with a grin. As a sometime entertainer in Twin Cities nightspots, he often is able to write musical messages with a professional ring to them.

Fredrickson says the results have been more profitable than running a 30-acre subsistence farm on New Brunswick's Bay of Fundy, which he did for five years before returning to Minnesota two years ago. And a lot more intriguing than teaching Chaucer at a small New Brunswick college, which he did for two years before that.

There was his introduction to Arthur, for example:

"These people called me up and asked me to deliver a singing birthday greeting to this Arthur," Fredrickson says.

He usually asks for some information about the recipient so he can tailor the lyrics to the subject, "but all they'd tell me was that Arthur was placid and sort of untalkative."

At the appointed hour, Fredrickson found himself crooning to a goldfish, whose owners had forked over $25 for the privilege.

Authenticity, Acting Give 'Boulevard Nights' Wide Appeal

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

There is an aura of authenticity surrounding "Boulevard Nights," and it is this factor which pulls the film through even when the storyline begins to border on the too familiar. The gang life, the daily struggle for something in which to believe, has always lurked in the Chicano communities of east Los Angeles, but filmmakers have ignored this subject matter for fear it would lack a universal (i.e. Anglo) audience. "Boulevard Nights" may change all that.

A-J FILM REVIEW

By casting Hispanic unknowns, director Michael Pressman has not only achieved realism, but also discovered an Oscar candidate in young newcomer Danny De La Paz. He is further blessed by Desmond Nakano's script, which captures the feel not only of the streets but of the people walking upon them. Indeed, only when the motion picture leaves the barrio and explores the love relationship between Raymond (Richard Yniguez) and Shady (Marta Du Bois) does east LA begin to look too much like Hollywood.

The film revolves around two brothers, Raymond and Chuko (De La Paz). Raymond is struggling to be a steadying factor without giving up the good times. He, too, knows the appeal of gang life, having once been a member of the VGVs. But, as he says to his fiancee, "I knew when to get out. I'm not a 'cholo' anymore. But I don't know about Chuko." Indeed, Chuko must not only find his way of walking the streets proudly, he must do so in the shadow of his older brother. Whereas his brother also earns respect for his knowledge of cars, Chuko's only option is to make his name as a wild man, a "homeboy" to be feared.

And if the future promises success only in the form of working at a car shop for minimum wage, doing tuck and roll on a stranger's wheels, he wants no part of it.

Through camera angles and an astute exploration of family life, director Pressman aptly shows us how a striving for machismo can become a number one priority. As Raymond drives toward the boulevard, we look out the windows at the look-alike shacks lining the street, the glowing hypnotic television sets visible through the doorways. We see family success measured in terms of reproduction. When Raymond and Shady decide to marry, relatives immediately urge them to "start a family." Even sexual love in the barrio must be expressed in motel rooms, as the only option would be the back seat of a car.

And the cars are a binding measure of machismo as well. Most owners have installed hydraulic lifts which can raise, lower and even bounce the car; the automobiles boast tuck and roll upholstery, insignias painted on the trunk, the outside door handles removed to emphasize the sleek "low rider" appearance. Life is five working days leading up to Friday and Saturday nights spent cruising Whittier Boulevard, and Pressman does not neglect to show us the boulevard nights in a scene of bumper-to-bumper dreamers we won't soon forget.

But though "Boulevard Nights" is not even remotely as violence-oriented as, say, "The Warriors," Chicano gang life remains the foundation of the film. It's a part of growing up, a dangerous ritual of manhood. Being a gang member means you belong, it means you're brave, it means you are respected. The cars have insignias, but so do the individuals in the form of tattoos. And the gang life is ingrained, never really shed completely.

Raymond has left the VGVs far behind him. But when his family is caught in a burst of gunfire, the "cholo" in him returns to the surface and he ignores the police, takes up arms and seeks revenge like any vindictive homeboy. That Pressman manages to make this statement without glorifying gang life helps "Boulevard Nights" achieve a responsible status.

Another reason is the performance of Danny De La Paz, reminiscent of nothing more than an Hispanic early Marlon Brando. He is electrifying in his search for pride and manhood, heartbreaking as we see him teeter on the brink of falling into the trap of angel dust and sniffing acrylics, and masterful in his resultant confusion. "I just get real mad sometimes," he admits, "and I don't know what to do." His presence even makes up for the Hollywood story which is Raymond and Shady's affair; with her bemoaning his late-in-life love for cruising and cars, he is just another Tony Manero realizing he's got to stop dancing and grow up.

All in all, the acting is universally good. The script, surprisingly enough written by a Japanese-American, is both concise and astutely aware, and the direction stresses reality over stereotypes. If the ending is a violent showdown, we can accept it, too, because of the inherent violence of the community. No doubt better, more insightful films may still be made about Chicano life in the California barrios. If so, "Boulevard Nights" will be remembered as the motion picture which opened the door. And Danny De La Paz may be remembered even sooner, probably when voting begins in the supporting categories for next year's Oscar nominees.

Bands Score In Competition

Seminole and Hutchsinson junior high school bands took top honors in the Region XVI University Interscholastic League competition held this week at Coronado High School.

The two schools received number one ratings of superior in both concert and sightreading contests.

Concert judges were Gary Wylie of San Angelo, Gary Larramore of Stratford and Coy Cook of Sunray, all band directors. Dave Pennock of the Abilene Christian University music faculty was the sightreading judge.

Schools receiving a number one rating in one of the two categories were Lockney and Evans second group, which were rated superior in sightreading; and Lamesa Middle School, Brownfield, Evans first group, Wilson first group and MacKenzie, which all won superior ratings in concert contests.

Other schools participating in the event were Plainview, Abernathy, Littlefield, Farwell, Morton, Muleshoe, Friona, Plainview Estacado, Denver City, Idalou, Bovina, Ralls, Roosevelt, Levelland, Alderson, Thompson, Atkins, Matthews, Wilson and O.L. Slaton.

Washington Police Nab Heroin Ring Suspects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three men have been arrested by District of Columbia narcotics detectives in what they describe as an effort to break up a heroin distribution ring operating out of New York City.

Police identified the men as James Arthur Davis, 27, also known as Nathaniel Kronsky, and Sammy Tisdale, 20, both of New York City. Police also arrested Terry Hodge, 20, of Washington.

Authorities said all three were charged with possession of heroin with intent to distribute.

Bossa Nova is a style of music that combines the Brazilian samba with modern jazz.

Geneticist To Speak On Chromosome Research

Dr. George H. Mickey, a prominent specialist in human genetics, and John Luton, an environmental biologist, will speak on the Lubbock Christian College campus next Friday.

Mickey will speak to a technical writing class at 8 a.m. and then present slides and a lecture on human chromosome research to Dr. Gary Estep's genetics class at 1 p.m.

Luton will appear before the technical writing class of Carisse Berryhill at 8 a.m. on April 18, and will meet with the biology faculty and interesed students at noon in the Chaparral Room of the Betty Hancock Campus center.

Mickey, head of the genetics counseling program at Duke University Medical Center, will discuss issues and ethics in communicating scientific material to non-scientific audiences.

Genetics counseling is a relatively new branch of biology which tries to help parents determine if their unborn child is likely to have a chromosome problem that could cause retardation or other birth defects. Genetics counselors also try to help families with these problems find the medical and social support they need.

Mickey served as the Graduate Dean of the New England Institute for Medical Research in Ridgefield, Conn., where his work was mainly in cancer research. He also held research positions at Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Tennessee and at M.D. Anderson Cancer Research Hospital in Houston.

Luton will discuss the efforts of the steel industry to turn around the common view that big industries are environmentally destructive. Luton is visiting the campus through the Steel Fellows program sponsored by his employer, Armco, Inc., a steel manufacturing industry.

From 3-5 p.m. on April 18, Luton will meet with freshman biology majors class of Bob Kerchner to discuss the role of the steel industry in the conflicts between ecology and economy and in general the impact of technology on a healthful environment.

The discussions will be open to the general public at no cost. Both of the technical writing classes will be held in the Room 103 of the Mabee American Heritage Center. Contact Mrs. Berryhill or the Public Information Office for the sites of the other meetings.

Vast Treasure Revealed By Scientists

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Soviet-sponsored archaeological expedition has stumbled onto a veritable King Tut's treasure trove of 20,000 pieces of gold jewelry and ornaments in a 1st century royal burial ground in northern Afghanistan.

Soviet and Afghan experts had been carrying out routine excavations of an ancient 3,000 to 4,000-year-old complex on Mount Tillia-Tape for 10 years when they uncovered the secret royal burial ground, which dated back only about 1,900 years.

The graves were excavated between October and February, and Soviet archaeologists told the Novosti Press Agency this week that they recovered 20,000 pieces of gold jewelry, some of which weighed as much as one kilogram (2.2 pounds).

The Soviet team called the discovery one of the largest this century and said it compared with the opening of King Tutankhamen's tomb in Egypt.

Novosti said the discovery is in northern Afghanistan near the town of Shibargan, 50 miles south of the border with the Soviet Uzbekistan republic.

The expedition included seven Soviet and four Afghan archaeologists and a team of 150 Afghan workers.

The Soviets said the treasures belongs to the government of Afghanistan while the Soviet Union, as the sponsor, will hold a monopoly right to publication of the find.

The treasure trove came from six burial sites. Within two weeks after the end of digging, a seventh burial site was discovered. It was placed under guard until it, too, can be excavated.

The graves yielded solid gold plates, platters, decorative gold trees, gold crowns, fine gold pendants, cups, rings, chest plates, leg bracelets, daggers and brooches — some embellished with turquoise, pearls, carnelian, lapis lazuli and garnets.

The Soviet archaeologists said the graves were discovered accidentally while digging on the much older 2000 B.C. complex. The kings were apparently buried in secret, without monument or burial mound, in order to protect the treasure from grave robbers.

"The deceased were wrapped in two or three garments sewn all over with gold plates and all kinds of ornaments," Novosti reported. "The head of the buried king lay on a large gold platter with a small decorative gold tree.

Victor Sarianidi of the Institute of Archaeology of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, said the graves dated to the 1st and 2nd centuries A.D. — and reflected the influence of a number of cultures, including Greek, Bactrian, Roman, Indian and Chinese.

Mayor 'Delighted' With Chinese Plan

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward I. Koch said Thursday that he was delighted by an announcement that China intends to open its first trade office in New York.

"Anything that brings business to New York, I'm for," Koch said.

The mayor noted that he plans to visit the Chinese mainland in September to discuss trade relations.

On Wednesday, Chai Zemin, the Chinese ambassador, said his government intended to open the trade office here after meeting with a group of New York businessmen.

Koch said that he was informed that China would be buying and selling here.

"I hope they buy more than they sell," the mayor said.

The mayor was asked to comment on reports that the Chinese often express initial enthusiasm for trade projects, but later back away.

Marlon Brando made his New York stage debut Oct. 19, 1944, playing Nels in the Broadway hit "I Remember Mama."
