City Policemen Shoot, Capture Heist Suspect

By TRAVIS BROWN and JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

AN OFF duty policeman ended an armed robbery-kidnapping attempt Wednesday when he shot a man who tried to rob a Lubbock pharmacy and take the pharmacy's owner as hostage.

Joe Allen Disheroon, 34, of Dallas, was listed in "very critical" condition late Wednesday at Health Sciences Center Hospital with two gunshot wounds to the chest, according to a hospital spokesman.

Disheroon was charged Wednesday night with aggravated robbery and aggravated kidnapping, said Criminal District Attorney John Montford. Bond of $250,000 for each charge was set by Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack.

The incident began shortly after 4 p.m. Wednesday, as owner F.B. "Chris" Christensen, 56, stepped outside of Chris' Rexall Drugs, 332 N. University Ave., in the Town and Country shopping center.

A white male, wearing a red jacket "walked in, pushed a gun into my stomach and said, 'Give me your narcotics,'" Christensen said.

Christensen said he began sacking up morphine, dilaudad and other drugs, while two other employees, Newt Logan, 54, and Vicki Gordon, 24, hid behind stock shelves and activated the police alarm.

The pharmacy owner handed the bag to the robber, who said, "Okay, who's got a car here?"

Christensen said no one volunteered a car, so the man told him, "Okay, we're taking your car."

The pharmacist told the robber the battery in his car was dead. After a short protest, the robber demanded the keys to Logan's car, grabbed Christensen and said, "You're coming with me."

Two off duty Lubbock police officers, Cpl. Ron Sowell and officer Roger Hearron, were in separate police cars near the intersection of Fourth Street and University Avenue when they heard the alarm call. "We both were at the store in less than 45 seconds," Sowell said.

Logan said he told the officers as they entered the store, "He's got a big gun on Chris," and pointed at the back door.

Behind the store, Disheroon was forcing Christensen into the driver's side of Logan's car.

"We peeked out the back door, and I knew he hadn't seen us," Sowell said. "I came around the front of the black Blazer (parked between the door and Logan's car) and Officer Hearron went around behind it."

"The guy was just getting into the passenger seat," Hearron said, "And his door was open about six inches. I snuck up from the rear, pointed my gun at him and yelled 'Freeze.'"

But the man didn't freeze, officers said. Instead, he spun around in the seat and allegedly pointed his gun at Hearron. "I saw him whip around with that gun cocked, and I ducked," Hearron said. "Just as I did, I heard two shots and I knew Sowell had got him."

Of the shooting Sowell said, "It was a split second thing. I just didn't have time to think about it."

The two bullets shattered the passenger window glass and struck Disheroon in the chest. Police recovered a cocked .357 revolver from the car, said police information officer Bill Morgan.

Christensen, sitting next to Disheroon during the shooting, was not injured. "There wasn't time to do anything but just sit there," he said.

Wayne Has 'Routine' Surgery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hollywood legend John Wayne underwent surgery for the second time in five months Wednesday, this time to relieve an intestinal obstruction found during a routine check of his cancer surgery, UCLA Medical Center said.

"An examination of Mr. Wayne after his admission for a routine check revealed a partial intestinal obstruction that was relieved in an operation this morning," said hospital spokeswoman Bonnie Whitham.

She said the actor was in stable condition after the morning operation, and added doctors have not reported finding any further traces of the cancer they found in the January operation.

Admitted Tuesday Night

Wayne was admitted to the hospital Tuesday night for a scheduled follow-up exam, said nursing supervisor Barbara Stone.

The veteran actor, who will be 72 on May 26, was admitted to the Los Angeles facility late Tuesday after reportedly being taken to Hoag Memorial Hospital near his Newport Beach home with stomach pains. However, UCLA spokesman Al Hicks said the exam had been scheduled in advance and was among several periodic medical checks.

Hicks described Wayne's condition as "not serious." Wayne's son Michael was at the hospital Wednesday morning, said a spokeswoman at the actor's office.

A Los Angeles television station reported Tuesday night that Wayne had been taken to Hoag with "abdominal pains" or "possibly a gas bubble." Hoag spokeswoman Nancy Lorance denied that report, but UCLA spokesman Al Hicks said he believed it was correct.

Occupies Same Room

Wayne is staying in the same room he occupied while recuperating from the Jan. 12 surgery that revealed cancer in his stomach and surrounding lymph nodes, said Hicks. Doctors removed the malignant organs during a 9½-hour operation.

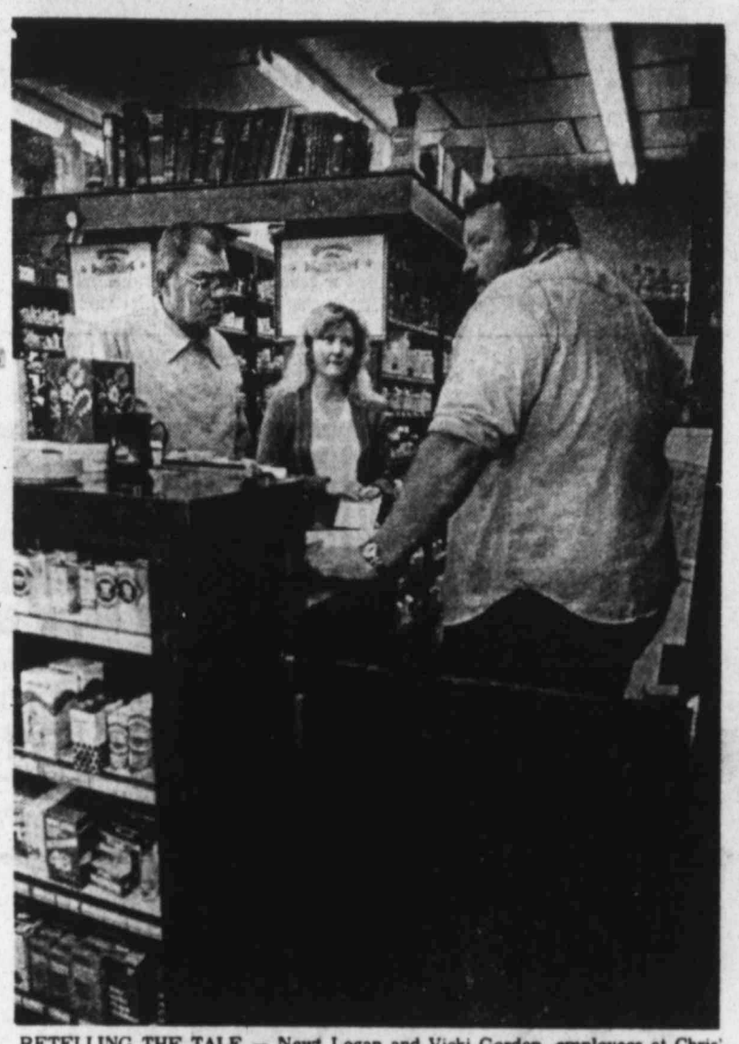

The actor, whose career dates back to the silent movies of the late 1920s, was released from UCLA on Feb. 10.

He later was hospitalized at the Newport Beach facility for bronchitis, which flared up shortly after he presented best movie honors at Hollywood's 51st Annual Academy Awards ceremony. He was released from Hoag April 25.

His oldest sons, Michael and Patrick, said then they were certain their father would weather his latest bout with cancer. "He's been down this road before, and he's come back before," said Patrick, 39.

Wayne has appeared in about 200 movies that earned more than $700 million in his 50-year career. In 1970, he won an Oscar for his role in "True Grit."

State Bill May Jinx City Park Provision

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

LEGISLATION pending before a Senate committee could bring Lubbock's acquisition of park land to a screeching halt, city officials say.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Chet Brooks of Pasadena, would prevent cities from requiring developers to dedicate parts of new subdivisions as park land.

The Senate Intergovernmental Affairs Committee will hold a hearing on the legislation this morning.

Lubbock developers are required to dedicate 70 percent of property subdivision which lies under the high water mark, parks director John Alford said.

Since 1973 when that requirement was enacted, Alford said the city has received 74 percent of its park land through dedication, Alford said.

Of 254 acres of park land acquired since 1973, 188 acres have been dedicated to the city, he said.

Without benefit of the "playa lakes ordinance," Alford said funds now being used for development of parks would have to be used to purchase park land.

"It's going to be real detrimental," Alford said. "Obviously we get most of our property (through dedication) and our plans for the future very much rely on the dedication of park properties through the playa lakes ordinance," he said.

With two exceptions, there are no long-range plans to purchase any park land, he said.

"If we have to start purchasing land, there will be less money for development and development (of parks) will be slowed down," Alford said.

"It's absolutely necessary land be purchased, otherwise subdivisions develop and there are no possible park properties left," he said.

Once an area develops, acquisition of land is "more costly," Alford said, largely because relocation expenses must be paid.

Benefits City, Developer

Alford and city planning director Jim Bertram agreed the dedication of high water land is a benefit both to the city and to developers.

The land dedicated to the city is "more a headache" to developers, Bertram said. Once the land becomes a city park "it becomes a selling point for houses and gets rid of a maintenance problem," he said.

Most developers are "glad to get rid

Measure Backed To Expel Unruly Foreign Students

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

TEXAS TECH regents and administrators agree with a bill authorizing expulsion of foreign students convicted of certain illegal acts, but they disagree with who the bill empowers to dismiss the students.

Sponsored by State Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka, the bill allows Texas college and university regents to expel foreign students convicted for rioting or intentionally destroying property.

The legislation easily passed the Senate Education Committee Wednesday and is expected to be uncontested when it goes before the full Senate.

Tech officials and regents interviewed Wednesday called the bill "reasonable." But they disagreed with its stipulation that regents be the ones to expel the foreign students.

Administration Choice Urged

"The administration should be given that choice and decision, not the regents," said board member Don Workman of Lubbock.

"This does not fall into the policy-making responsibility of the regents. I can't see the logic of it," Workman said.

Charles Hardwick, Tech's vice president for academic affairs, agreed. "Expelling a student is not normally brought before the board of regents. It should be handled through normal academic channels."

The bill authorizes the governing boards to expel any foreign student who is finally convicted of "disorderly conduct, rioting, obstructing highways or other passageways, disrupting a meeting or procession, desecration of a venerated object or intentional reckless destruction of property," according to Short.

Foreigners Escape Rules

Colleges and university already have the authority to expel any resident student convicted of such offenses, a spokesman for the senator said, but the law did not include the power to expel foreign students.

"Any rule that applies to resident students should apply to foreign students. They should be treated the same," Workman said.

But both administrators and regents agreed that as in the case of resident students, the dismissal of foreign students should be handled by the university administration.

"I wouldn't want the regents to be placed in the position of judge and jury of an individual student's actions," said

Oklahoma Twister Rips Small Town

LAHOMA, Okla. (AP) — Tornadoes ripped through northwestern Oklahoma Wednesday, killing at least one person and wrecking a school, a city hall and more than 40 homes.

The heaviest damage was reported in this tiny town of 299 residents, where the tornado struck at just before 6 p.m., ripping the roof from the school and dumping six inches of water in the building.

Other twisters were sighted in nearby communities, and some damage was reported in Enid, just east of Lahoma.

The storm that accompanied the tornadoes swept through the nearby communities of Meno, Perry Acres and Waukomis, bringing flooding and winds up to 75 mph in some areas. Baseball-size hail was reported smashing through windows near Waynoka.

Oil Decontrol Foes Stage Strong Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foes of President Carter's decision to lift controls on oil prices showed unexpected strength Wednesday, coming within a single vote of winning a key committee battle to block the plan.

After the vote, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill declared he would not stand in the way of those seeking to torpedo Carter's oil decontrol plan although he expressed doubts that the effort would succeed.

In the most serious attack to date on the plan, key Democrats on the House Commerce Committee, including its chairman, Rep. Harley O. Staggers, D-W.Va., openly broke ranks with the president and joined a move against decontrol led by Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn.

Ban Fails On Tie

Moffett's attempt to attach an oil decontrol prohibition onto a bill authorizing various Energy Department programs for fiscal 1980 failed on a 21-21 tie vote in committee.

And, in a statement that appeared likely to produce groans at the White House, O'Neill said that had he been on the committee, "I would have voted with Moffett."

"I've always been against deregulation," O'Neill said. However, he expressed doubts that Congress could overturn the president's decision to lift oil price controls.

He said Congress should spend its time trying to strengthen Carter's proposed "windfall profits tax" on oil industry revenues rather than to block his decontrol move.

Meanwhile, the Senate voted 89-3 to give Carter authority to order thermostats in public buildings set to no more than 65 degrees in winter or less than 80 degrees in the summer.

House Action Due

Administration officials have indicated the president will invoke this authority once congressional action is completed. The House is expected to act on the measure within the next few days.

Senators also went along with a recommendation of the Senate Energy Committee by rejecting, 70-23, a controversial proposal to give Carter the authority to ban outdoor electric advertising.

The closeness of the House committee vote clearly surprised both sides and spelled potential trouble for the president's recent initiative to raise U.S. oil prices to world levels.

Both Carter forces and decontrol foes had predicted before the vote that the stop-decontrol move would fail by a wider margin. Before the meeting, Moffett said he could count only 17 votes for his proposal.

Moffett later told reporters the vote was a big moral victory for decontrol opponents and he vowed to step up his campaign. He said another committee vote would be engineered and that he also intends to try to get the full Democratic House membership to go on record against decontrol at its next caucus.

"We think the momentum is going to come from the American people," Moffett said.

Similar efforts were being made in the Senate by the chairman of the Energy Committee, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

While nearly all the committee's Re-

House Approves Bill To End Power Rate Authority Of Cities

AUSTIN (AP) — City councils would lose their authority to grant or deny rate increases sought by electric power companies under a bill passed Wednesday by the Texas House.

A 74-65 vote sent the measure to the Senate, where a similar bill has been approved by a committee but has not yet reached a floor vote.

If the bill passes, electric companies would take their requests for rate increases directly to the Texas Public Utility Commission, which now receives them only on appeal from city council decisions.

The upshot would be elimination of delays of several months, even a year or more, between the time a rate increase is proposed and when consumers start paying it.

Tendency To Reject

In recent years, city councils have tended to reject rate increases, and base rates have remained the same for months afterward until the commission acted on company appeals.

The commission generally has granted at least part of the increases sought by the power companies.

The bill would allow cities the right to go before the commission to challenge rate increases. They would have access to utility company records and any documents filed with the commission.

"This bill is like a cow chip in an open field. You can paint it red, shape it like a rose, but you can't change the smell," said Rep. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington.

His words were met by loud applause and shouts of "Kill! Kill!"

"Rosebud On Cow Chip"

But Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, said, "You could put a rosebud on a cow chip and make something beautiful out of that cow chip, and that's what has been done with this bill."

Washington said vesting total jurisdiction over electric rates in the utility commission was "the only far way to solve the situation and have equal and uniform rates around the state."

He said the commission alone had the staff and the expertise to make informed decisions on electric rates.

(Lubbock City officials said passage of the bill could mean higher electric rates and less input from local citizens on what those rates will be.

To "Increase Costs"

("We feel very strongly it will do nothing but increase costs, not decrease costs," City Manager Larry Cunningham said.

(Councilman Bill McAlister said it is "a bad bill as far as the citizens of Lubbock because it would take away more local control."

(Electric companies in the state are lobbying hard for the legislation because they are after higher rates, Cunningham said.

("It can't mean anything but they want higher rates," he said. "What other reason would there be? It's surely not for better rate regulation," he said.

("If they didn't have good rate regulation at the local level, they wouldn't be asking for this," Cunningham said. "If they were being granted the rates they wanted, they wouldn't need this."

(The electric companies want rate cases heard by a body more removed from the ratepayers and a body which is "not as politically sensitive" as locally elected officials," Cunningham said.

(McAlister and Cunningham agreed the legislation will have the effect of "discouraging" cities from participating in

Rain Chance, Cooler Air Due Today

A COLD FRONT, combined with an upper level disturbance that created isolated thunderstorms in the Lubbock area late Wednesday, is bringing a 40 percent chance for rain today and a 30 percent chance tonight.

The system will cool temperatures, which reached 81 on Wednesday, down to the upper 60s this afternoon. Tonight's low will fall near 50 and temperatures should return to the 60s on Friday, as winds blow from the north at 10 to 15 mph.

Although National Weather Service radar Wednesday indicated a line of thunderstorms stretching across the northern South Plains from New Mexico to Oklahoma, residents in those areas reported no more than a few sprinkles as the thunderclouds moved northeast at about 25 mph.

Cottle and King Counties remained under a tornado watch until 10 p.m. Wednesday, as threatening clouds loomed over that area.

Isolated storms farther east in Texas were spawning possible tornadoes. Weather officials posted tornado warnings until 9 p.m. Wednesday for Nolan County, where radar indicated a possible tornado five miles west-southwest of Roscoe at 7:45 p.m.

A tornado warning was in effect until 10:30 p.m. for Taylor County, where radar indicated a tornado 23 miles west of Abilene. The Merkel Fire Department spotter group also reported the tornado, as golf-ball-size hail pounded along the Nolan/Taylor county line.

South Africa Acts To Eliminate Racial Bias In Trade Unionism

CAPE TOWN (AP) — South Africa said Wednesday it will support legislation to end racial segregation in the nation's industrial work force. It would be the first official step to dismantling this white-ruled nation's apartheid system.

Labor Minister Fanie Botha told a news conference the government accepts recommendations by a government-appointed panel that would give blacks the right to join unions and compete for skilled jobs previously reserved for whites. He said it accepts "in principle" the possibility of implementing other recommendations, including establishment of apprenticeships for blacks and creation of integrated work facilities.

The minister said legislation based on a report by the 14-member Wiehahn Commission was being prepared for submission next week to Parliament.

The 60-page Wiehahn Commission report, released Tuesday, is the first of several scheduled to be released this year and deals only with urban blacks in industrial jobs. Later reports by the commission will address farming, migrant workers and miners, officials said. The panel is headed by Nic Wiehahn, a white South African professor and labor expert.

There was no indication when Parliament might vote on the measures, but any government-sponsored measure is virtually assured of approval because the ruling National Party controls 135 of the legislative body's 165 seats.

The recommendations said nothing of giving South Africa's 19 million blacks equal political rights with the 4.4 million whites, including citizenship and the vote. Organized black labor, obtaining a form of political and economic power through unions, could become the country's most potent force for change in the apartheid system of racial segregation.

One argument for bringing blacks into the white labor system has been that black unionism should be controlled so it cannot be used as a political force. Botha said laws forbidding unions from engaging in politics would be extended to black unions recognized under new legislation.

The report advocates recognition of existing black unions, the right of blacks to join already-existing white unions and elimination of the so-called principle of statutory job reservation, in which skilled jobs are reserved for whites. Those provisions were accepted by the government, Botha indicated.

Other proposals for black apprenticeship programs and for integrated facilities in work areas were accepted "in principle," Botha said, and could be decided though future negotiations between labor and management, rather than through legislation.

The commission left the initiative for integrating unions to the workers. Unions retain their right to closed shops, which could allow white labor groups to ban blacks from their ranks despite any new legislation.

Black workers, 70 percent of the estimated six million-member force, now have about 30 unregistered unions representing 70,000 workers. The unions are not recognized as legal bargaining units.

The government also accepted the principle of a proposed national manpower commission, which would implement the labor proposals and advise the government.

There was speculation the government would meet some resistance during parliamentary debate from minority right-wing parties and supporters of conservative trade unions, but it was expected they could be appeased by assurances that white workers would not be pushed out of their jobs.

One white union leader voiced prompt criticism of the proposals. Wessel Borman, chief secretary of the Iron, Steel and Allied Industries Union, called the Wiehahn report "the greatest embarrassment and slap in the face ever administered to white trade unions and white workers in the history of South Africa.

"If this is accepted by the government, one wonders how long it will take before other legislation very near and dear to the heart of the whites will also disappear," he said.

After-Horsemen Wear Tuxedos

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — As even racing fans in this city famous for horses know, when nature calls even a horse must respond.

But when a horse responds in front of 250,000 parade onlookers, the Kentucky Derby Festival comes up with a blacktie approach to an awkward situation.

The answer is a 21-member manure cleanup contingent of honor students from Lousiville's Trinity High School, armed with shovels, dressed in tuxedos and riding in golf carts behind horses taking part in the Pegasus Parade.

However, when this year's Pegasus Parade kicks off Thursday afternoon, the straight-A students from Trinity won't be as active as in past years, but not because fewer horses are taking part.

It seems that the boys became so involved in adding a touch of theatrics to their cleanup routine that it was detracting from the likes of Cesar Romero, Foster Brooks and other celebrities who take part in the parade.

"When they step out and pick up a load there are blocks of people who will applaud for them because they are doing this and they do it with great aplomb," said William P. Bradford II, moderator of the National Honor Society at Trinity.

"The boys were very good, and they entered into the spirit of the whole theatricality of the parade."

Does the notoriety of taking part in the parade overcome the nature of the job? "Oh, yes," Bradford insisted. "They clamor at me for the opportunity to do it."

Teeth, Animals, Ashes Left On Japanese Trains

The railway said the abandoned animals included rabbits and bantam roosters.

It said umbrellas, numbering 470,000, topped the list of lost articles, followed by 360,000 pieces of clothing, 250,000 books and assorted stationery, 210,000 personal ornaments and 170,000 purses.

A ring worth $363,636 and a purse containing marijuana were also among found items.

The railroad said cash left behind in its trains and stations hit an all-time record of 2.4 billion yen ($10.9 million), up seven percent over the previous year. Seventy-eight percent of the cash was returned to the owners.

Mailed Bomb Kills Police Officer, Injures Three

BESSEMER, Ala. (AP) — A mailed package bomb exploded in the police commissioner's office Wednesday as a lieutenant cut the string to open it, officials said. He was killed, the commissioner was critically injured and a mayor's aide and a janitor were also hurt.

A fire official said the box apparently contained dynamite.

Officials said the package, the size of a shoebox, had been delivered to Police Commissioner Max Williams by the mayor's executive secretary, Gene Lint, along with other morning mail.

Lt. Clifford T. Hill tried to help by cutting the string with his pocket knife.

Then came the blast, and Williams was lying on the floor of the office, yelling:

"Oh God, who could do anything like this ... Help me."

A fireman said the office "was turned inside out" by the blast.

Police Commissioner Williams lost his left hand and two fingers and part of a third on his right hand. He also suffered extensive chest and abdominal injuries and underwent surgery.

Lint suffered facal cuts ad wounds over most of his body. He was in stable condition after surgery.

Dumfounded officials said they could not think of any motive for the attack. "Things have been going real well lately," Mayor Ed Porter said. "It wasn't politics. I just don't know what to think. God only knows what happened."

A major strike of city employees had begun a few hours earlier in neighboring Birmingham, but there was no indication of any tie-in. The Birmingham Police Department bomb squad abandoned its strike temporarily to offer assistance.

"If you could see that office you could tell it's going to be difficult" to investigate, Porter said.

Jones, who was cleaning up Porter's office at the time, said:

"I heard a big ole blast. It knocked me down in the mayor's office and it knocked all the pictures off the walls in the mayor's office.

"I could hear them hollering in Mr. Williams's office. I heard Mr. Williams hollering like he was hurt real bad."

Jones said he ran toward Williams's office, yelling Williams's and Lint's names.

"But they didn't answer me," he said. "I tried to get into the office, but there was so much smoke and everything I just couldn't get through."

He said the odor in the hallway "smelled like blasting power to me, a kind of smell that put the idea of dynamite in my mind."

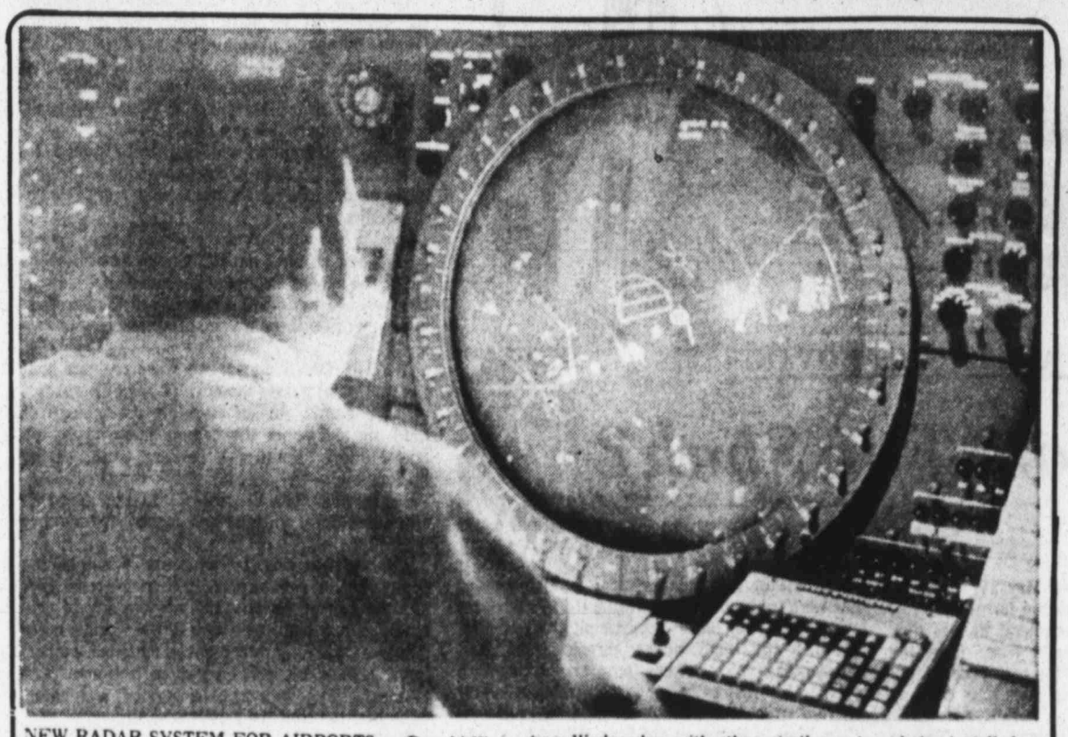

"It's just one of those unheard-of situations," Mayor Porter said. "You feel like it can happen in other people's cities but you never feel that something like that can happen here."

Former Nazi On Trial For Alleged War Crime

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — A 72-year-old former SS officer, described as Adolf Hitler's top counterfeit expert, has gone on trial on charges of murdering a fellow worker during World War II.

Friedrich Schwend, pleaded innocent to charges he killed the worker near Merano, Italy, in August 1944. Schwend returned to West Germany in 1976 after years of self-imposed exile in Peru.

According to court records, Schwend, using the code name "Dr. Wendig," operated a secret printing house at Labers Castle near Merano, which turned out counterfeit British pounds and other banknotes for use by German agents during the war.

NEW RADAR SYSTEM FOR AIRPORTS — Donald Worden, an air traffic controller at Harrisburg, Pa.'s Capital City Airport, monitors a newly installed radar system. The new system was unveiled by the Federal Aviation Administration, Wednesday, with other, similar systems being installed in airports throughout the country. The FAA announced the radar as improving air traffic control and as a major step toward safer flight. (AP Laserphoto)

New, Mid-Size Airport Radar Shown

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration exhibited a radar system for medium-size airports here Wednesday, touting it as a major step toward safer flights and improved air traffic control.

The system enhances existing radar units by giving automatic aircraft identification and altitude readings.

The nation's 64 busiest airports already have fancier systems that also compute an airplane's course and ground speed, noted William Flener, FAA associate administrator.

The unit installed at Capital City airport here is also going to 74 other medium-to-low density airports. The first such unit, which costs about $450,000, was commissioned last December at Toledo, Ohio.

Forty-six other airports are to receive less sophisticated units.

Airplanes are identified when a ground-based radar signal triggers a response from a airplane-mounted unit called a transponder. A computer decodes the signal and displays the information on the controller's radar screen.

Without the system, called automated radar terminal system (ARTS), controllers must ask pilots to identify themselves and give their altitude.

Birmingham Employees Join 500 City Policemen In Walkout

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — About 1,000 street and sanitation workers joined a strike by nearly 500 policemen Wednesday to protest a change in health insurance plans. A judge ordered a halt to the walkout and the mayor threatened dismissals, but there was no immediate movement back to work.

The strike was called to protest a City Council decision to switch employees' health insurance coverage from Blue Cross-Blue Shield to Liberty National Life Insurance Co.

But Liberty National chairman Frank P. Samford Jr. told the city Wednesday the firm doesn't want the contract becuase the company is "particularly distressed" that the situation reached a strike "harmful to the employees and the citizens of Birmingham.

"We have come to the conclusion that the administration of the city's health plan by this company under these circumstances would be extremely difficult."

After the insurance company backed out of the contract, Mayor David Vann said he believes city workers were "tuned" for a walkout and only seized on the issue of health benefits.

He said his administration would consider proposals from other insurance companies. And he apologized to Liberty National, saying it was "disappointing that city employees have inappropriately and wrongfully attacked and criticized this company."

"We came out on strike because we feel Blue Cross is our best insuring agent, and we intend to stay out on strike until we get it," said Paul Hamilton, vice president of the Fraternal Order of Police.

Hamilton said his union had "no ax to grind against Liberty National. We felt Liberty National was not our best bet with health insurance. Blue Cross was, and that's who we want to stay with."

Most services were shut down in this city of 320,000, pickets were up at city offices, and National Guardsmen were lined up outside City Hall.

"They are here to provide emergency assistance," Offa Nichols, Vann's top assistant, said of the guardsmen. "We would be foolish not to expect trouble."

Vann, however, said, "There is no danger to the public's safety."

The city's 650 firefighters scheduled a strike vote for Thursday night, and union president Billy Gray said he expected his men to walk out then.

Jefferson County Circuit Judge William A. Thompson issued a temporary back-to-work order and set a hearing for Monday on whether to make it permanent.

City Attorney James Baker said officers were attempting to serve the order on union leaders, but when asked whether he expected compliance, he said: "They have their lawyers and I suppose they'll have their interpretation of the ruling."

The police department's personnel office estimated that at least 95 percent of 507 patrolmen on the force failed to report for duty. Only skeleton crews of sergeants, lieutenants and captains were working at the four precincts.

On Wednesday morning, all but 12 of the approximately 1,000 sanitation workers joined the walkout, as did a few employees at the jail, zoo and airport. The zoo was closed but the other operations were not severely affected.

Vann pushed the move to change companies after Blue Cross-Blue Shield moved its Alabama offices out of the city to a suburb. Vann contends city employees would get the same benefits they have had, but they disagree.

State troopers were stationed at the precincts, helping man patrol cars alongside supervisory personnel. A spokesman for the troopers said 16 officers were on duty and others would be sent if necessary.

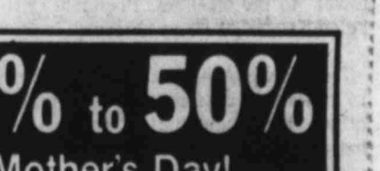

Vann said striking employees "will be considered absent without leave and subject to appropriate disciplinary action, including dismissal."

Complaints On Amtrak Show Marked Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission reports that complaints about Amtrak passenger rail service have shown a marked decline.

The ICC said it received 8,466 complaints about Amtrak last year, down 43 percent from 14,757 the year before. By comparison, Amtrak ridership in 1978 was 18.9 million, down only slightly from 19.2 million in 1977.

Saudi Prince Planning Iceberg Tows

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Prince Mohammed al Faisal said Wednesday he hopes to begin towing icebergs from Antarctica to Saudi Arabia early next year in a project he predicts could triple food production in his country and make the desert bloom.

Mohammed said the iceberg project could yield a flow of water "equal to 22 times that of the Nile."

Mohammed, a leading Saudi businessman and director of the Union of Islamic Banks, explained the project in an interview with UPI and the London-based Arabic-language newspaper Ash Sharq al Awsat (The Middle East).

Mohammed said experts from the United States, Europe, Egypt and Lebanon had proved the feasibility of the project.

"When being towed, a film of water (coating the ice) acts as heat resistor to protect the pure ice of the Antarctic," he said. "We found out that it takes longer to melt than we had expected."

In the interview at his office in this Red Sea port, Mohammed said he hoped to begin contracting to supply water from icebergs commercially early next year.

He said he hoped to get started following a December meeting of polar experts at Cambridge, England, during which reports would be submitted on the exploitation of the Antarctic ice cap. He has already founded a company called Iceberg Transport International.

Although research and the cost of towing an iceberg to Saudi Arabia would amount to $100 million, the prince estimated he could earn about $30 million a year.

By the year 2000, Mohammed said, Saudi Arabia will need more than 4 billion tons of water. He contended icebergs would be a more practical source of water than desalination plants or pipelines because labor, technology and other costs for those methods "dwarf even the budget of Saudi Arabia to raise 500 million tons of water a year."

"It will improve the environment by increasing vegetation and there will be no pollution emitted from power plants," Mohammed said.

AN EDITORIAL:

Inflation Is Catching...On

TO READ the financial pages, the United States virtually has become a basket case while Western Europe and Japan have gained the economic upper hand.

However, history seems to be repeating itself in a small way. The inflation that has preoccupied policy makers in the U.S. is beginning to do the same in its economic partners, according to a survey in The Wall Street Journal.

It's not that these are strangers to the problem; inflation has been chronic in Britain, Italy and, to a lesser extent, France during much of the postwar era.

But this time around, it is not restricted to a few shaky economies. This time it's general. Furthermore, The WSJ found that inflation is beginning to be the primary cause of concern in countries that had been the most stable.

WEST GERMANY is moving to tighten credit and restrict the money supply. Switzerland, with its money supply up a reported 17 percent over a year ago and the premium-valued franc actually falling against the dollar, is moving in the same direction.

Dealing with a creeping inflation (wholesale prices up 0.9 percent last month) that might be bearable by American standards, makes the trade-dependent Japanese nervous.

Part of the blame is laid on the dollar —specifically the multi-national support effort initiated last fall that has halted the dollar's decline but at a cost of something like $30 billion to participating central banks. These have been buying up excess dollars but inflating their own money supplies in the process.

ANOTHER MAJOR influence is oil, with current price increases decreed by the producers hitting Europe and Japan much more painfully than the United States.

As a consequence, much of the plan agreed upon at last year's Bonn summit has had to be scrapped.

That called for vigorous stimulation of the German and Japanese economies and somewhat more moderate action by other countries to equalize growth rates (with a slowing United States) and gradually equalize trade imbalances.

But instead of stimulation, planners are turning to thoughts of applying the economic brakes. Unfortunately, a consequence of that could be renewed pressure on the dollar, a shrinking of the market for U.S. goods abroad and continuing trade deficits.

So huge and so dominant is the American economy, a truism has it, that when the U.S. sneezes the rest of the world is likely to catch pneumonia. In a word, gesundheit.

AN EDITORIAL:

The Jimmy And Teddy Show

THE FIRST real salvos of what could be the political showdown between President Carter and Sen. Teddy Kennedy came this week over the oil and energy issue.

The sharp clash, which probably will escalate before it cools off, most likely will set the tone for the "confrontation" between the White House incumbent and the Democrat who may well challenge him.

Both the President and Sen. Kennedy, D-Mass., discounted any political implications in their disagreement over how to deregulate oil and its effect on inflation.

But, the message was clear.

Reacting angrily to Sen. Kennedy's charges that the administration was "throwing in the towel" to the oil lobby, President Carter labeled Kennedy's claim "baloney."

THE EXCHANGE was the most pointed in a months-long feud which has touched on other "bread and butter" matters such as national health insurance, jobs, inflation and consumerism in general.

Both the White House and Sen. Kennedy subsequently took great pains to explain that nothing should be read into their remarks of a political nature. Sen. Kennedy even went so far as to say that he still felt the President would be renominated and re-elected. The White House suggested Sen. Kennedy's remarks may have been taken out of context.

The truth is that while Sen. Kennedy may or may not be running, both men are jockeying for both popular and Congressional support for their favorite programs, which happen to be political.

SEN. KENNEDY still is the darling of the liberal wing of the Democrat party. As such he can bargain for and gain concessions from the administration.

Mr. Carter has to be looking down the road in almost every decision he makes these days, although he has made some, and must make others, which will cost him votes with certain segments of the electorate.

The danger is that both men may lose sight of the real issue here, if they haven't already —and that is what is best in the national interest, not what will put Sen. Kennedy or President Carter in a better bargaining position, in Congress, before the nation, or in front of the nominating convention.

The plus point to come out of the more open confrontation at this point is that the American people will be given an opportunity to learn more about how each man stands and judge him accordingly.

Fortunately, as matters now stand, both Congress and the people have alternate choices—Congress in framing its own energy program to meet the nation's needs, the people in choosing an alternate occupant for the White House in 1980.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Elections In Rhodesia Punctuated By Gunfire

BELINGWE, Rhodesia—One man, one vote elections in Zimbabwe, Rhodesia are rather different from voting in the United States.

Just how different was driven home to a group of reporters and observers, including this writer, in the rural area near this village. As the plane in which we were riding approached its designated landing spot, it suddenly went into a violent, twisting dive.

The small Dakota (on loan from South Africa) plunged toward the ground at terrific speed, pinning its human cargo against the seats and walls.

The reason for this maneuver, we were told, was to avoid the SAM missiles used by guerrillas in the area. The missiles home in on the infrared profile of the airplane.

THEY NEED three seconds to lock in to their targets, and can't follow the twists and turns of a diving object.

(For the same reason, helicopters in which we rode buzzed along close to the ground, hedge-hopping over ridges, to merge their image with the surrounding landscape.)

As our plane pulled out for landing, we could hear the crackle of gunfire. This turned out to be the final stages of a skirmish between guerrillas and security forces which, as usual, the security forces won.

The guerrillas, we were later told, had opened up on a line of people waiting to vote. As per instructions, the voters hit the ground, and the security forces returned the fire, driving the assailants off. The voters got back up and continued with the election.

THIS HAD been the second guerrilla attack in the vicinity that day. Despite that fact, our group watched rural tribesmen continue to trudge across the fields to vote.

The presiding officer told us that, as of 1 p.m., 123 people had voted at this tiny rural station. As we arrived, a young woman was casting her vote, and four others walked up as we were talking. I wondered how many Americans would bother to cast their ballots under similar conditions.

The SAM missiles we were intent on avoiding are not to be taken lightly. Like most of the arms used by the guerrillas, they are provided by the Communists.

In recent months, they have knocked down two civilian airliners in Rhodesia. In one case the pilot was able to bring the plane down despite the damage, only to have civilian survivors slaughtered by guerrillas.

IT WAS A typical foray for the "freedom fighters," who go after soft targets but run away when the security forces show up.

Small arms fire has also been directed at civilian aircraft, and we found out about this before we ever got to Salisbury.

As our Air Rhodesia flight from Johannesburg neared the Rhodesian capital, the pilot came on the squawk box and asked passengers seated near the windows to pull the blinds, as "a security measure."

Lights from within the plane could give guerrillas a convenient target as we were landing. Needless to say, we hastened to comply with the pilot's request.

Once landed, we were hustled to a lounge and given a stern security briefing: Stay away from windows in your hotel rooms, keep the blinds drawn at night, don't go out in the streets without a security escort.

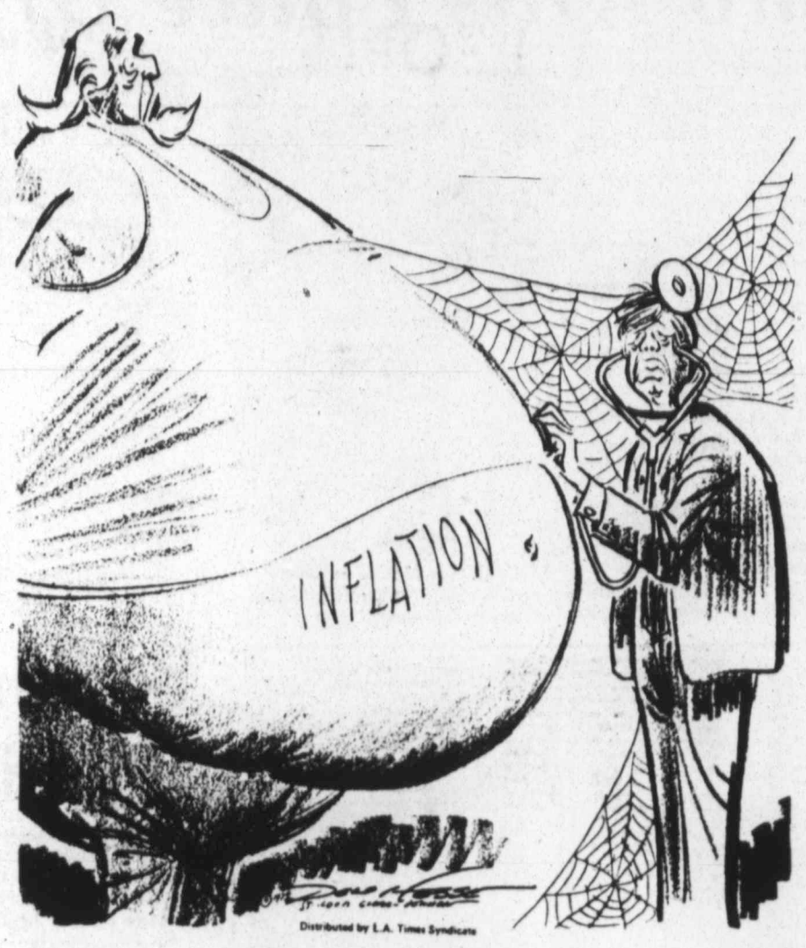

IN ADDITION, we were told, guards would be stationed in the hallways on a 24-hour basis, and no one would be allowed off the elevators onto our floors without credentials.

The reason for these precautions was matter-of-factly explained to me by a Rhodesian official: "You're a target, you know."

He meant not just me, but all observers—on the theory that the guerrillas would dearly love to bag a foreign observer or two to show that the government could not protect its visitors.

The government was just as determined to prevent such a thing from happening. I liked the government version better.

'Hmmm--Hmmmm--Umm Hmmm-Hmmm'

No Room For Shah?

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Despite a May 10 departure deadline quietly imposed on the former shah of Iran by the Bahamas government, he has now been privately informed by a letter from the Carter administration that "the high probability" of anti-American reprisals in Iran rules out any early admission to the U.S.

The decision has caused anguish here. That is true not only for American politicians who feel the U.S. had a clear obligation to help its erstwhile Persian Gulf protector who repeatedly stuck his own neck out for American Presidents.

It is even more true for foreign governments watching the behavior of Jimmy Carter in a tight fix: would he behave in a principled fashion despite heavy political pressure both from Tehran and from shah-haters in the U.S.? Or would he duck the U.S. obligation?

A new offer of asylum by Mexico does not take the Carter administration off the hook.

In one example abroad, it is known that Carter's refusal to give asylum to the shah made an impressionistic and harmful impact on the Saudi Arabian government where the U.S. connection has become frazzled.

Also, Metin Toker, a powerful Turkish senator now here to discuss deteriorating U.S.-Turkish relations with the State Department, told us that rejecting the shah under threats from Iran "guarantees your citizens now are even more likely to be mistreated, not in Tehran but everywhere."

The May 10 Bahamas deadline at first hand had been perceived here as a possible break for the wandering shah by Americans ashamed at President Carter's rewriting of the ancient U.S. tradition of political asylum.

WITH THE shah's stay in the Bahamas terminating in 10 days, these Americans hoped Carter would see fit to open America's once-hospitable doors.

That is not to be, despite the Carter administration's public declaration of human rights.

The unsigned letter to the shah, dated April 19, was delivered in the Bahamas before the shah learned about Mexico's willingness to accept him and his family.

It informed the shah that "we do not say we would submit" to political blackmail against the U.S. by the revolutionary government of Iran —the threat of violence against American citizens in Iran unless the shah were returned forthwith for trial and probable execution in Tehran.

"BUT THESE actions would cause serious problems for all," the letter said. "We find it is in everyone's interest to wait until conditions in Iran provide a greater degree of order and security."

If that was an effort to offer a delayed welcome signal, it failed. It could be many months and possibly years before the revolution in Iran is consolidated and violence ends.

Even worse are the poisoned darts being slyly tossed in the direction of the deposed shah by high officials here.

The shah gave the U.S. extraordinary help that could have come from nowhere else during his long reign.

In the Arab-Israeli war of 1973, for example, the shah secretly dispatched oil that enabled the U.S. carrier task force to continue patrolling the Indian Ocean.

HE ALSO SENT his army to the border of Iraq during that same October war to tie down Iraqi troops and prevent their use against Israel.

"Sure," said one diplomatic official, "but he made us pay through the nose for his kindness."

Another criticized the shah for killing so much time in Egypt after his Jan. 16 departure from Tehran. "He was hoping to be called back," he said. "If he had come here right away, we would have let him in."

That may be true, but it is revealingly self-serving and implies that the shah had no right to hope that he might yet have maneuvered himself back to power.

BUT THAT has nothing to do with the political decisions made here that blocked his entry to the U.S. in violation of what a House foreign affairs subcommittee (in a Feb. 4, 1971, report) called "the long-established American principle of asylum."

Barring last-minute change, the unfortunate shah and his family are now headed for residence in Mexico.

But the way he got there has gravely damaged the U.S. with its dwindling band of friends abroad, and struck yet another blow to Carter's once-acclaimed policy of human rights.

ANDREW TULLY:

Tip Gets His Due

WASHINGTON—Ah, but the Irish are getting some of their own back in their relations with the British Sassenach.

In the old days the cops and soldiery slugged the bejabbers out of them if they talked back and more than a few of the boys were introduced to the inside of a jail for cussing out a Limey.

But now the professional wearers of the Green —American division—have had the audacity to tell the British how to run that part of their country called Northern Ireland.

The critics bear names that would get them into any Irish wake without being frisked: House Speaker Tip O'Neill, Sen. Teddy Kennedy, New York Gov. Hugh Carey, and Sen. Pat Moynihan, D-N.Y.

ASSUMING THE role of spokesman for what the London Daily Mail called "the Irish American Gang of Four," O'Neill gave her Majesty's Government conniption fits by demanding that it stop using Ulster as a "political football."

Furious, assorted British politicians and newspapers told O'Neill & Co. to stop electioneering in their own country by making a fuss on Irish soil, their last stop on a foreign junket.

Oh, it was a rare bit of fun, one of the best parties since Gladstone came out in favor of Home Rule and sent Queen Victoria to bed with a sick headache. Of course the tourists had an eye and an ear cocked for the Irish vote in the States.

Besides, the situation in Ulster is still a mess after 10 long years of strife, and Britain's ruling establishment has yet to convince the owners and operators of Northern Ireland to extend full rights to the Catholic minority.

NOT THAT the minority is without sin. It has engaged in or tolerated some of the most vicious terrorism in the world.

Most of the terrorists are members of the outlawed Irish Revolutionary Army, but Dublin has been just as feckless in controlling the IRA as London has in putting down the violent nuts on the Protestant side.

But while the British yelp under the O'Neill group's scorn, they are with Washington in high-handed meddling in the internal affairs of Rhodesia, and the coddling of black guerrilla terrorists not only in Rhodesia and South Africa but in other neighborhoods of the continent.

LIKE WASHINGTON, too, London is ever eager to denounce violations of human rights in Afghanistan, Pakistan, Iran—and, of course, assorted South American countries.

But we always seem to be out for lunch when the Irish—Protestant and Catholic—are getting it in the neck. So I salute Britain's Financial Times, which noted an irony.

Our political tourists, it said, "achieved what all the IRA bombs have failed to do..." They "got British political leaders to talk about Northern Ireland."

Timely Quotes...

A big game hunter from Dayton went to Africa. He took his wife and mother-in-law along. They hired a guide who took them on a safari into the jungle. One night, a week after they were out, the husband and wife awoke to find Mama was missing.

Well, after searching frantically for more than an hour, they found her cowering in a clearing, a huge lion standing over her.

"What are we going to do?" the horrified wife asked.

"Nothing," said the husband. "The lion got himself into this fix—now let him get himself out."

A Stop At Bombay

BOMBAY, INDIA—Once in the not-so-long ago, it was the Orient Express, wending its way from Paris to Budapest and Istanbul, with connections for points East.

Today, it is Air India's Boeing 747s, along with other carriers, flying out of New York and London, piloting a path across some of the more exotic and fabled cities and kingdoms of the ancient world.

The names slide off the captain's tongue—Brussels, Belgrade, Istanbul, Ankara, Teheran, Pakistan...an introduction to an Aladdin's Lamp journey into the past and present...

We left New York's JFK airport at 8:30 p.m. on a Saturday, made a brief stop in London the next morning, then took off on the non-stop leg to New Delhi. We landed in the Indian capital at 10:40 p.m. Sunday as lightning from a rare thunderstorm flickered in the background.

AFTER AN hour, there was a 90-minute hop to Bombay on India's west coast. It was the start of a fabulous two weeks in a world we had only read about.

The "cultural shock" came almost the second we stepped off the plane, the Emperor Chandra Gupta. Bombay's huge airport was alive with activity. Planes with insignias of nations around the world were in profusion—British Airways, Air Singapore, Australia's Quantas, Swissair, Kuwait, and many others...all at 2 a.m.

Inside the terminal, with help from India's Department of Tourism people, we made it through customs and to a car for the 15-mile trip to downtown Bombay.

Hardly had we started the journey than we got our second cultural needle. Hundreds of persons could be seen sleeping on sidewalks, lawns, porches. Most chose this because of the weather, others because there was no other place...

IN THE DAYS ahead, we were to learn that the route also passes the edge of one of Bombay's massive slums, an unbelievable assemblage of mud, tin and paper shacks housing an estimated one million "squatters" seeking work, asking "baksheesh"—the beggar's plea—or just existing.

But Bombay, like the rest of India, including its cities and rural villages and farms, has another face.

Bombay, boasting, or tolerating a burgeoning population of some seven million persons, is a modern metropolis in many ways, a city of new buildings and high rises, two of the world's more fabulous hotels, government sanctioned emporiums, fashionable and chic shops, top-notch restaurants, some with 24-hour service, and entertainment that runs the gamut of desire.

Bombay also is one of the world's busiest harbors, as it has been for centuries. And, as merchants and tourists pass the fabled "Gateway to India," they enter in many ways another world.

THE CITY, capital of the state of Maharashtra, is a blend of the East and West.

It has a modern industrial complex, with giant business houses with worldwide connections, a vast film industry, stock exchange, colorful bazaars, sprawling green parks, one with a "hanging gardens" effect.

Palms line the city's main promenade and from Malabar Hill, the view at night of Marine Drive is like a sparkling necklace worn by the sea.

As dawn breaks over the already bustling city, the skeletons of new buildings can be seen dotting the already skyscraper-like skyline.

Ten kilometers off Bombay, after an interesting boat ride through Bombay's crowded harbor and within shouting distance of India's Tarapur atomic power complex, may be found the small island of Elephanta, site of famous 7th Century cave temples containing magnificent sculptures and a salute to a proud past.

On the one hand, one comes face to face with one of the world's most busy, thriving metropolises. On the other, the pervasive population explosion begs for a solution.

Here, much of the trade with the rest of the nation and world takes place. Businessmen in shirt sleeves or light coats transact trades worth a few rupees or perhaps millions. Chic women, mostly in India's traditional and colorful sarees, may be found in offices, eating places or strolling the streets.

Transports, from warships, tankers and cargo carriers, dot the harbor. Ashore, trucks, with the ever-present "Public Carrier" sign above the cab, small taxis, three-wheeled motorcycle cabs, pedicabs, bicycles—all move in a seeming mass confusion to the tune of honking horns, narrow escapes, yet most incredibly reaching safe destinations.

Here may be found one of the world's more unusual and publicized hotels, the Taj Mahal, along with the ultra modern Oberoi Towers, until recently associated with the Sheraton chain.

BOMBAY IS MORE than just a major metropolis. It is a melange of the subcontinent's myriad cultures within the melting pot that is India.

Within a few short miles, one can find the depressing slums, looking much like sprawling, red-tinged ant hills from the air, and nearby, beautiful homes and apartments.

Just outside the city is an archaeological treasure, reached by a drive through an urban national park. There, one may view huge caves carved out of the red and dark stone hills, salutes to a past age and culture, today a tourist attraction.

Not far away may be found a modern miracle, the Arrey Milk Colony, an area of 3,500 acres of greenery, flowers, trees, buildings, the home for what we were told are 16,000 Buffalo and regular cows, a key supplier of wholesome milk for Bombay's millions.

Bombay today, as it has been since its inception, is the "Gateway to India." For us, at least, it was "open sesame" for a magic carpet journey unlike anything we have ever experienced.

...Pass It On

JOHN S. PEMBERTON brewed up some mighty fancy concoctions in his day. Globe of Flower Cough Syrup. Indian Queen Hair Dye. Triplex Liver Pills. Gingerine. And Extract of Stillinger, a blood medication. None of these though, gained the popularity of his most famous creation: Coca-Cola.

It's not that San Diego has more eligible bachelors than any other big town in the country. Rather, it's that San Diego has so many more unmarried men than unmarried women. The ratio was 120 bachelors 14 and over to every 100 unmarried women.

$850,000 For Belly Button

NEW YORK (AP) — A Manhattan jury awarded $850,000 Wednesday to a woman who complained that an internationally known plastic surgeon botched an operation to "tighten" her stomach and left her belly button two inches off center.

Virginia O'Hare, who maintains homes in Poughkeepsie and Fort Lauderdale, Fla., claimed the operation left her belly button "a large deformed hole in her stomach."

The jury of four men and two women deliberated two hours in state Supreme Court in Manhattan before awarding the money to Mrs. O'Hare.

Mrs. O'Hare claimed she awoke "in extreme pain" following the operation by Dr. Howard Bellin at Manhattan's Midtown Hospital on Nov. 8, 1974.

"The umbilicus was off center," Mrs. O'Hare told the jury.

Bellin's attorney, Steven E. North, claimed that the woman was a "schizoid" who had had several cosmetic operations.

Money Crises Deluge Columnist

ANN LANDERS

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Ann Landers says that after 25 years of writing her advice column, she has noticed a new concern expressed in her readers' letters. Money.

"People never used to write to me about their money problems before, but they do now," she said. "They ask, 'What am I going to do?' "

Her comments were made Tuesday in an interview before visiting a friend, Gov. Ella Grasso.

Orthodox Bishop Installed

CHICAGO (AP) — In ceremonies first used during ancient times, Bishop Iakovos has been enthroned as head of the Greek Orthodox Diocese of Chicago.

"This is the first time in (almost) 50 years that there has been a bishop in Chicago of the Greek Orthodox Church," said the Very Rev. Isaiah Chronopoulos, diocesan chancellor. "The last time was in 1931."

Sixty clergymen of the diocese clustered at the entrance of Annunciation Greek Orthodox Cathedral on Tuesday night to greet Bishop Iakovos. The senior priest gave him the shepherd staff and the clergy marched in procession into the church for hymns and prayers.

Holdout Gets Snowplow

SIDNEY, Neb. (AP) — After all this western Nebraska town went through to get a new — and little — snowplow, Wednesday's unveiling of the shiny yellow machine was anticlimactic.

"It was a matter of sticking to our guns and getting what we wanted," Dr. Jim Garcia, the mayor, told a small gathering of about 30 persons at the airport.

It's what Sidney wanted, but not what the federal bureaucrats wanted the town to have to replace its old snowplow, a 1936 Civil Defense truck.

Sidney won the hearts of bureaucracy battlers nationwide when its plight became known last fall.

In a nutshell, the Federal Aviation Administration had certain specifications which needed to be met before it would help a town purchase a snowplow. Those specifications, however, carried a price tag of more than $100,000 when an expensive building to house a large snowplow and an airport layout plan were included.

All Sidney wanted was a little snowplow, one costing about $20,000 or so. The town battled the feds for more than 18 months.

Finally, Sidney won. City Manager Merle Strouse said the final cost came to $20,371.20, "just what we wanted."

OPEN AIR MASS — Pope John Paul II raises the chalice as he celebrates an open air mass at an altar set up on a tree trunk in the countryside south of Rome, where the pontiff was visiting the Divine Love shrine. (AP Laserphoto)

Pope To Visit Polish Shrine

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II said on Wednesday that he will visit Poland's national shrine at Jasna Gora, Czestochowa, on June 4-5 during a trip to his homeland.

The pontiff referred to the visit in an address to a crowd of 50,000 attending his weekly open-air audience in St. Peter's Square.

John Paul said he was glad he could visit and pray at Jasna Gora as he has done each year when he was at home. He recalled that the feastday of St. Mary as patron of Poland falls on May 3, when special celebrations are held at the Czestochowa shrine.

"I went there every year on a pilgrimage on May 3, which is the feastday of the Queen of Poland" the pontiff recalled. "Every year I celebrated there a solemn Mass during which Cardinal (Stefan) Wyszynski, the primate of Poland, before the bishops and the huge crowd of pilgrims, renewed the act of consecration of Poland to the 'motherly servitude' of Our Lady."

The Vatican has not yet revealed the detailed program of the first papal visit to a Communist nation. According to reports, Pope John Paul will fly to Poland in an Alitalia jetliner and return in a Soviet-made Tupolev jet of the Polish Airline LOT.

Legal Tips Free In Grocery

BOISE (AP) — Along with midweek specials on dog food and peanut butter, shoppers in a Boise grocery store were offered another bargain: free legal advice.

As part of Boise's observance of Law Day, Idaho Attorney General David Leroy set up a card table in a grocery store and a sign offering free legal advice.

Billy's Daughter To Wed

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Billy Carter's 22-year-old daughter, Katherine Kim Carter, will marry a 24-year-old Carter family employee on June 30, the groom's parents announced Wednesday.

Miss Carter, a speech and English teacher in Lee County, Ala., will wed Mark William Fuller in ceremonies at her grandmother Lillian Carter's home, it was announced.

Fuller is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne R. Fuller of Columbus. A family spokesman said the younger Fuller was employed by Carter Enterprises in Plains, Ga.

Class Observes Mock Trial

RENO (AP) — The defendants, looking surly and draped in chains, were led into U.S. District Court to face charges of dealing in narcotics and attempted murder in an attempt to buy $3 million in counterfeit money from a wealthy Incline Village discotheque owner.

But under the grim facade, one defendant was a fed. The other was a narc. They were participating in a mock tral for Washoe County high school pupils to commemorate Law Day.

Some of the county's top lawyers showed their colors, following a pre-arranged scenario to compress a three-day trial into three hours.

A jury of 12 high school pupils heard the evidence against and defense of "defendants" Carl Olson, a special agent for the FBI, and Dennis Cameron, an agent for the Drug Enforcement Administration.

The attorneys attacked the trial directly, bypassing the usual bickering over motions. And Assistant U.S. Attorney Sam Coon explained that the chains on the defendants were only for effect, as no defense attorney would allow a client to appear before a jury in chains.

The defendants, by the way, got off.

Carson Not Leaving, Yet

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Carson told a cheering "Tonight Show" audience Wednesday he will not leave the late night television program in 1979, saying "I love the show ...I would miss it."

But the NBC star said nothing that would indicate he intends to complete his contract — which expires in the spring of 1981.

"We are still having discussions with NBC as to how long I will remain with the show. I had originally expressed an intention to leave at the end of our 17th year which would have been Oct. 1 of this year. I intend to stay past that time," Carson said during the taping of Wednesday night's show.

"I think I owe something to the show and I think I owe something to NBC also. I have terribly ambivalent feelings. I would probably miss the show terribly and may regret walking away from it. So all I can say is I will certainly continue through the 17th year and possibly on into next year. As to any longer than that, I really can't tell you," the entertainer said.

The news about two weeks ago that Carson wanted to leave the "Tonight Show" shook NBC, which has been losing in the ratings. Carson is the network's biggest star, and "Tonight" is one of its best revenue earners.

Davis Calls Vegas 'Racist'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Entertainer Sammy Davis Jr., for years one of the top draws on the Las Vegas Strip, has branded the glittering resort city as racist because only a few of its thousands of entertainers are minorities.

DAVIS

"This town is supposed to be the king of entertainment in America," Davis said Tuesday. "Then show me an American picture. It's embarrassing when you don't see black or Chicano kids on stage."

Davis, 53, made his comments in an hour-long talk to a hotel entertainment class at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

Although Davis is one of a number of black headliners in Strip hotels, where Bill Cosby, Diahann Carroll and Diana Ross frequently appear, he said producers of the lavish "production numbers" at a number of clubs fail to hire minorities.

"It's mostly management," Davis said. "They are still carrying around the old bugaboos...A lot of old habits hang on you like barnacles."

'Romeo Relief' Defeated

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Bob Bush won an 86-51 House vote Wednesday against what he called a "Romeo Relief Act" that would have eliminated the right to sue for alienation of affections.

The House removed the alienation of affections provision from a Senate-approved bill that updates Texas Family Code provisions dealing with support of spouses and children.

After Bush's victory, the bill won tentative approval on voice vote.

Bush, D-Sherman, said the House should make sure the bill does not "give our Romeos relief."

He said husbands and wives should keep the right to sue someone who breaks up their marriages for money damages.

House Approves Auto Liability Insurance Bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House passed a bill Wednesday that would require every motorist to buy auto liability insurance or risk paying a fine.

A 129-8 vote sent the bill to the Senate. If it becomes law, each car would have to be covered by a policy providing at least $5,000 for property damage and $20,000 for deaths and injuries inflicted by the negligence of its driver.

When insurance companies deliver policies, they also would deliver stickers to be placed on windshields of insured cars.

A car without an up-to-date insurance sticker could not receive a vehicle inspection sticker. A car cannot be driven on Texas highways without an inspection sticker.

Drivers caught without insurance would be subject to fines of $50 to $200 on first offense. The fine would rise to $1,000 for future violations.

Some 30 percent of the vehicles in Texas are uninsured now, according to Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, sponsor of the bill.

Insurance companies oppose the bill, contending that drivers who do not voluntarily buy liability coverage tend to have more accidents than insured motorists.

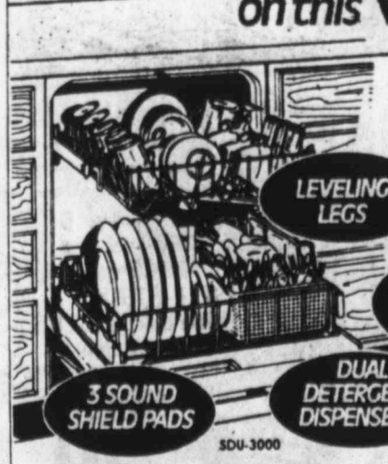

Green acknowledged that liability rates probably would rise if his bill passes. He contends, however, the increase might be offset by lower premiums for collision and uninsured motorist coverage as well as reduced out-of-pocket costs of accidents.

Failure To Allow Plea Brings Trial Overturn

AUSTIN (UPI) — The failure of a trial court to allow a Dallas man to claim self defense during a shotgun shooting prompted the Texas Court of Criminal of Appeals Wednesday to overturn his five-year prison sentence.

James Lorenzo Williams was convicted on assault charges for firing a shotgun at one of two men who had threatened him in the parking lot of a tennis facility. He testified that Edward Mathis and Thomas Mason confronted him. Williams said Mason, with Mathis' backing, threatened him with a tree limb and two beer bottles.

When the two men prevented him from getting into his car, Williams fled, but returned a few minutes later with a shotgun. He said he saw Mathis crouched over in a squatting position near his car, which had been locked. Williams loaded the shotgun and fired one shot in front of Mathis. When Mathis lunged at him, Williams fired another shot in the air.

Judge Wendall A. Odom said that Mathis and Mason had contradicted Williams' testimony, but ruled the jury should have been allowed to consider the possibility that Williams had been threatened by the two men before he returned with the shotgun. If he was threatened, Odom said, Williams was entitled to claim self defense.

The criminal appeals court also upheld the 50-year sentence for aggravated rape assessed against Joe Allen Sparkman of Houston, ruling that testimony concerning the man's reputation was admissable during the punishment phase of the trial.

Sparkman appealed on grounds the tri. judge had allowed an assistant attorney general, Calvin Botley, to testify on Sparkman's reputation as a law-abiding citizen. In 1969, Botley had presented the state's case in a felony theft indictment against Sparkman. The decision was later overturned because Sparkman's attorney had been found incompetent.

During the aggravated rape trial, Botley testified he had talked to several persons who knew Sparkman and who claimed he was "a little wild."

Sparkman's attorneys claimed Botley's testimony was inadmissable because it related to Sparkman's 1969 conviction, which was later overturned.

However, the criminal appeals court ruled that Botley's testimony related to his personal investigation of Sparkman's personal reputation, not to the facts of the 1969 robbery case. The court also ruled that an independent investigation of a person's background and character are required to determine proper punishment.

High Court To Mull Tank Truck Suit

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court says in the coming weeks it will hear oral arguments over whether a manufacturing firm is to be sued in Lubbock or Val Verde for damages allegedly caused by a tank truck explosion in South Texas.

If it is to be sued, Lubbock Manufacturing Co. says, it wants to stand trial in a Lubbock district court.

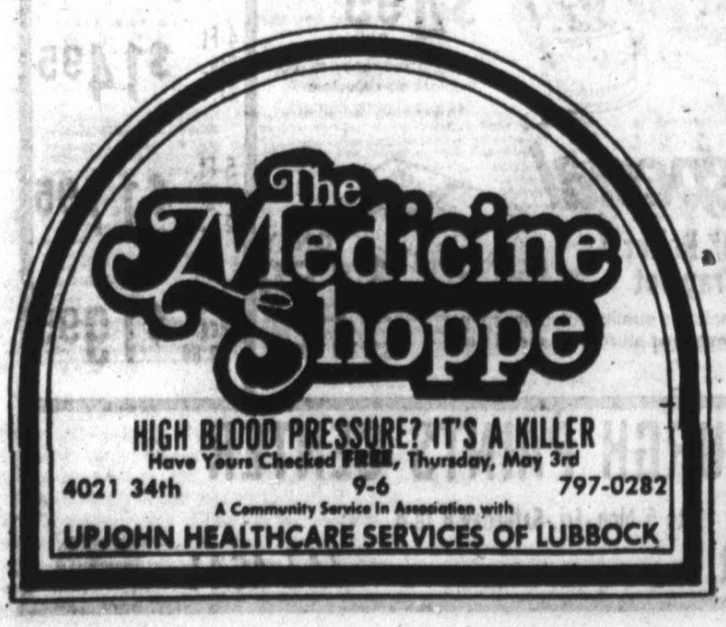

The company is being sued in Maverick County district court by the estate of a truck driver. A tractor-trailer manufactured by the Lubbock firm overturned, exploded and killed several persons.

A Val Verde trial court and the Beaumont Court of Civil Appeals say that suit should be tried in Maverick County, but the Texas Supreme Court said Wednesday it wants to consider the jurisdictional dispute. It has not announced a date for doing so.

Talmadge's Financial Secretary Says Some Funds Likely Mixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Herman E. Talmadge's financial secretary testified Wednesday that some of $80,000 transferred into the senator's personal account in 1975 likely came from falsely-claimed reimbursements for Senate expenses.

Allyne Tisdale described under oath a complex chain of money transfers in which personal investments and expense funds received from the Senate were regularly mixed over a period of several years.

She testified before the Senate Ethics Committee, which is hearing evidence on five specific allegations of financial wrongdoing by Talmadge, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Last year, after the investigation into Talmadge's affairs had begun, Talmadge's office accounts were audited and the Georgia Democrat agreed to pay back $37,125 in expense claims made against the Senate from 1972 to 1978.

Talmadge has characterized the over-reimbursements as resulting from staff error and confusion over Senate rules on legitimate expenses.

His precise role in the handling of his finances is not clear. Mrs. Tisdale said the senator sometimes reviewed Senate expense vouchers in detail and at other times was too busy and left it to his staff.

The $37,125 in refunds to the Senate resulted largely from a practice in which expenditures were claimed for the senator's Georgia office, although the money was not actually spent.

Mrs. Tisdale, who has worked off and on for Talmadge since 1966, was asked a series of detailed questions about Talmadge's finances by Carl Eardley, special counsel of the ethics panel.

In a soft Georgia drawl, she said $25,000 of the $37,125 was surplus money for which Talmadge had been over-reimbursed. The remaining $12,125 was the result of a "ruthless audit," that is, expense claims which might have been legitimate under some interpretations of Senate rules.

Eardley asked if reimbursements for expenses were deposited in a special office account which also included fees for speeches given by Talmadge and an $80,000 certificate of deposit purchased from the Trust Co. of Georgia.

Mrs. Tisdale: "Yes sir."

Education Service Gets High Marks

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Region XVII Education Service Center has received high marks from the superintendents of the school districts it serves, a report released Wednesday shows.

The evaluation of the services supplied by the Lubbock-based center to 64 school districts in the state was introduced at a meeting of the joint committee and the board of directors for the center.

Of the 64 districts served, superintendents from 61 responded to the request for evaluation of the programs provided by the state-created agency during the 1977-78 school year.

The center, which provides services on a voluntary basis through federal, state and local funds, received marks that were generally in the "excellent" and "good" range for the specific programs offered.

Dr. O.R. Douglas, executive director of the center, said following the meeting that the ratings were "very good. The overall perception is that it (the evaluation) is very supportive."

He added that the several "poor" and "fair" marks given in some categories were not indicative of the quality of service because the majority of respondents still graded the category as good or excellent.

In bilingual education, for example, of the 42 superintendents who said they received service in that area, one rated the program as poor; four as fair, 27 as good and nine as excellent.

Other services evaluated included adult basic education, crime prevention and drug education, driver education and guidance and student services.

The joint committee also noted a number of recommendations from the report for follow-up by the service center:

—Continue to stay aware of the problems and changes in migrant and bilingual education and provide technical assistance to schools.

—Continue to offer summer programs for professionals.

—Provide workshops and conferences on new school laws and legislation.

—Continue to provide curriculum development and assistance.

In other business, the board of directors adopted a set of goals for the service center as recommended by the joint committee and the board.

Douglas said the action simply formalized the goals to which the center has already been adhering.

Goals include the provision of consultative and technical assistance for school personnel in the region, provision of appropriate and related instructional materials and services to assist in fulfilling the needs of students and the provision of an organized commitment of personnel and resources to support the improvement of school district programs.

In further business, Robert McKelvy of Lubbock was elected to Place 1 on the board of directors. He replaced Owen Hamilton of Lubbock, who requested that he not be re-elected.

Lubbock Christian's President Pruitt Heads State Group

Lubbock Christian College President Harvie M. Pruitt has been named president of the Texas Council of Church-Related Colleges.

The council was organized in 1937 and now has 40 college and university members.

Dr. Pruitt, who had been vice president of the council, will serve until March 1980. Other officers elected were Dr. Morris J. Paschal, vice president of Southwestern Assemblies of God College in Waxahachie, to a three-year term as secretary-treasurer, and Dr. Charles H. Oestreich, president of Texas Lutheran College, to a one-year term as vice president. The immediate past president is Dr. Donald McAdams, president of Southwestern Adventist College in Keene.

The purpose of the council is to provide a fellowship among those who work in the tradition of church-related colleges and universities; to provide a place for study and a forum for discussion of issues and problems that are common to church-related colleges and universities; to encourage cooperation among the church-related colleges and universities of Texas toward such goals as can mutually be agreed upon; and to encourage a spirit of cooperation among all public, private and church-related institutions in Texas.

Farm Loan Guarantee Bill Passes

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The State Legislature passed Wednesday and sent to the governor enabling legislation under which the state would guarantee the loans young farmers make to purchase land.

Under the bill, sponsored by Pampa Sen. Bob Price, the state would guarantee loans of up to $100,000 for 90 per cent of their amount.

The loans, themselves, would still be made by private lending institutions.

However, before the Farm Loan Guarantee Program can become effective, voters still must approve an amendment to the Texas Constitution.

Two Men, One A Policeman, Sought In Abduction, Shooting Of Couple

SHAKER HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — Authorities issued murder and kidnapping warrants for two men Wednesday after supermarket executive Julius Kravitz died of wounds suffered when he and his wife were abducted and shot by gunmen seeking $1 million ransom.

Kravitz, 68, and his wife Georgina, 56, were taken from their home Tuesday. Mrs. Kravitz, shot once in each arm, was listed in satisfactory condition.

"I'm glad you made it ... I hope I make it ... I hope I live to see you ... I love you," the newspaper said Kravitz told his wife.

Shaker Heights Law Director Paul R. Donaldson said warrants were issued naming John A. File, 26, who police believe lives in Cleveland, and Michael G. Levine, 35, of Lyndhurst, Ohio. The warrants charged each with aggravated murder, attempted aggravated murder and two counts of kidnapping.

Detectives said Levine was a Cleveland Heights auxiliary policeman in good standing, which means he spent at least 16 hours each month on "lower echelon duties," such as directing traffic.

Mrs. Kravitz described the two men for Gates Mills Police Chief George J. Hughes as young, tall, clean-shaven and nice looking. They demanded "around $1 million," she said, but got no money.

She said one of the men was wearing a uniform, which she believed had a Cleveland Heights police shoulder patch, police said.

The abduction began when two men forced their way into the couple's 12-room, three-floor Shaker Heights apartment at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday.

At about 9 a.m., after Kravitz was unable to raise the money by telephone, the couple was taken to a motel in North Randall, Mrs. Kravitz told police.

Detectives said one of the kidnappers had used a credit card to pay for the room earlier.

More calls were made, but they were back in the car in the afternoon. At about 1:15 p.m. they were being driven through Gates Mills.

"All of a sudden, he (the gunman on the passenger side) turned around and started shooting," Mrs. Kravitz told Hughes. Kravitz was hit first, then his wife was wounded.

"I pushed the door open and shoved myself out of the car," Hughes quoted Mrs. Kravitz as saying.

She told Gates Mills police Sgt. Jesse E. Vatty, who found her: "I've been shot. They've killed my husband."

Kravitz was found in the back seat of the car, abandoned in a parking lot in North Randall. "How is my wife?" he asked a patrolman.

He underwent surgery for three gunshot wounds to the chest Tuesday night, but died of heart failure at 8:15 a.m. Wednesday, a spokesman for Brentwood Hospital said.

Kravitz, who began his career at the age of 11 as a clerk in an uncle's grocery store, opened his first store in 1932 at age 20.

He later started a small grocery chain called Foodtown, was an executive with Stop-N-Shop Supermarkets Inc. and helped build Fisher Foods Inc. into a major chain.

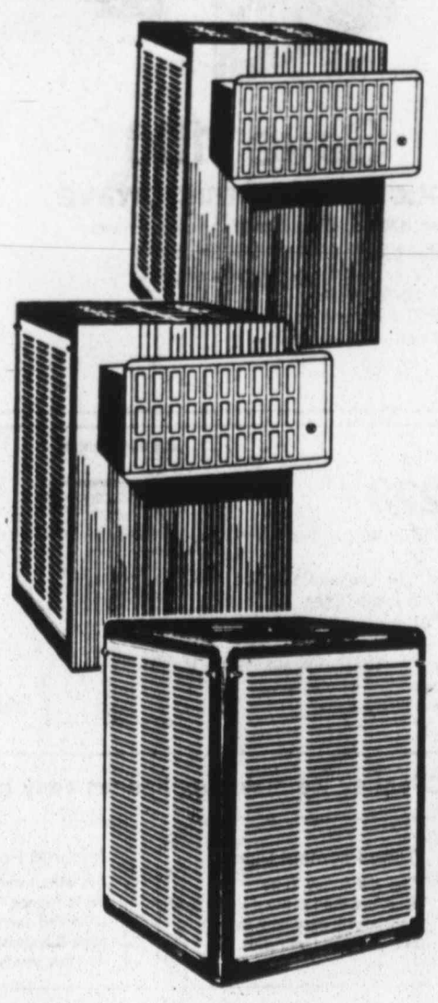

He said he was retiring in 1971. But with the help of friends and investors, he bought the Pick-N-Pay chain from Cook United Inc. less than a year later. Pick-N-Pay merged with the First National Supermarkets in April 1978, and he became chairman of the $1.3 billion, 287-store chain.

Petitions By Ton Mark Southwest Airlines Bid For New Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — Southwest Airlines opened its bid for the Civil Aviation Board's approval of interstate flights from Dallas' Love Field Wednesday by hauling in thousands of pounds of petitions it said represented the support of Texas customers.

The airline pioneered low-cost flights from in-city airports between Texas points, and has applied to fly from Love Field to New Orleans under the 1978 Airline Deregulation Act. Southwest began its first full-scale interstate service in February between Houston's Hobby Airport and New Orleans.

Interstate flights have been banned from Love Field since Dallas-Fort Worth Airport opened in 1974.

American Airlines lawyer Al Prather, who opposed the Southwest request, called the mound of documents a "scandalous" breach of CAB decorum. Charles C. Wells, attorney for D-FW Airport and the cities of Dallas and Fort Worth, said he could gather the same amount of signatures in a week's time.

Paul Seligson, Southwest lawyer, said the petitions were provoked by letters from his opponents at D-FW directly to CAB board members claiming the airline's request did not have the support of the region's residents.

"The process was not initiated by Southwest Airlines," he said. "The public does have a right to be heard at CAB proceedings."

Herbert Kelleher, Southwest's chairman of the board, said about 75,000 signatures were collected in a six-day campaign that ended Monday on the airline flights and on street corners.

The estimated ton and a half of documents were brought in by two small chartered aircraft. Each set of original petitions filled two boxes, but dozens of copies were needed for each party to the suit and CAB records.

The airline applied for the Dallas-New Orleans service under the automatic market entry provision of the deregulation act, which says an airline can file for service for one route each year for three years.

The CAB ordered a hearing after objections were raised that automatic entry did not allow an airline to choose a specific airport.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth, who was the first witness at the hearing Wednesday, testified that Congress did not intend the provision to allow airline to choose their airports — only their market.

The CAB hearing is expected to last well into next week. The board has asked hearing Judge William A. Kane Jr. to expedite a decision for submission by May 22.

Opponents of the request claim allowing interstate service at Love Field would harm D-FW Airport by cutting into its market. Neighborhood groups have objected to the extra noise within the Dallas city limits.

A decision on Air Florida's request to start service to Love Field is pending.

Bar Ratings Issued On Texas Judicial Nominees

WASHINGTON (AP) -Three of five nominees for Southern District federal judgeships in Texas learned Wednesday the American Bar Association's review committee rated them "qualified" — the third of four possible ratings.

George Cire of Houston and George Kazen of Laredo received "well qualified" ratings, the second-highest.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., announced the ratings at the start of the Senate Judiciary Committee's public hearing on the nominees, necessary before Senate confirmation can take place.

The ABA ratings gave the "qualified" mark to Gabrielle McDonald and Norman Black of Houston and James DeAnda of McAllen.

Congress added 10 federal judgeships for Texas last year.

"The candidates before the committee today are, in my opinion, uniformly and exceptionally well qualified to serve as federal judges," U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said in introducing the five nominees.

President Carter made the nominations for Texas judgeships on Bentsen's recommendations.

"I sincerely believe, and I hope the committee will agree, that the five candidates I have introduced today meet and exceed the high standards you have established for service in the cause of justice," Bentsen said.

Cire, 56, is a judge on the 14th Court of Civil Appeals in Houston.

DeAnda, 53, maintains a private law practice in McAllen. He is a board member of the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund.

Mrs. McDonald, 37, is a partner with her husband in a Houston law firm active in civil rights cases. She will become Texas's first black federal judge when her nomination is confirmed.

Kazen, 39, is a lawyer in private practice in Laredo who said many of his cases are personal injury suits. His uncle, U.S. Rep. Abraham "Chick" Kazen of Laredo, was present for the hearing.

The Senate last week confirmed Robert M. Parker of Longview for the Eastern District and Mary Lou Robinson of Amarillo, David O. Belew Jr. of Fort Worth and Barefoot Sanders of Dallas for Northern District judgeships.

The nomination is pending for Bentsen's 10th recommendation, that of 226th District Judge Ted Butler, 51, of San Antonio.

Deputy Convicted In Rights matter

TYLER (AP) — A federal court jury convicted former Cherokee County sheriff's deputy Thomas H. Glass Jr. Wednesday of violating the civil rights of a man beaten up last January.

Glass resigned his job three days before his arrest. He still faces state charges alleging kidnapping and assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the attack Jan. 9 on Robert J. Antonacci, the owner of a Tyler construction company.

Antonacci alleged he was beaten by Glass and abducted in a car driven by Cherokee County Sheriff Danny Stallings, who also resigned in connection with the incident. Stallings, 29, entered guilty pleas and was assessed 18 months probation on a misdemeanor federal civil rights charge. He received five years probation and was fined $4,000 on a state charge of felony aggravated assault.

CRASH TOLL RISES TO NINE

BALTIMORE (AP) — The death of a 15-year-old Fort Meade youth has brought to nine the number of teen-agers killed in the April 23 crash of a pickup truck along an isolated road in Anne Arundel County. Eugene Renaud died Monday at University of Maryland's Shock Trauma Unit. Tina Neal, 15, of Fort Meade, remained in satisfactory condition at the hospital.

Jews in New Amsterdam (now New York City) were granted equal rights and privileges as citizens in 1657.

San Antonio Sniper Had History Of Tranquilizer Treatment

SAN ANTONIO AP) — Police found 19 bottles — almost all of them full — of a tranquilizer used to treat "anxiety, aggression and tension" while searching the motor home from which sniper Ira Attebery fired along a crowded parade route.

The sniper also had a gas mask and two oxygen containers he "possibly" intended to use last Friday to protect himself from police tear gas, Patrolman John Moryl said Wednesday.

Two spectators were killed when Attebery, 64, armed with 15 guns, fired from the parked camper into a crowd of thousands. At least another 50 were wounded or injured. Atteberry killed himself after a furious gun battle with police.

The 19 bottles of Thorazine were prescribed from April 4, 1974, to April 14, 1977, said Moryl. "The bottles were almost all full. We think maybe he just stopped taking it," he said.

The prescriptions, all dispensed from the Veterans Administration hospital in Poplar Bluff, Mo., advised Attebery to take a 25-miligram tablet three times a day.

Attebery, of southeastern Missouri, was buried Tuesday in Poplar Bluff. He had been treated at the hospital since 1969 on an outpatient basis, officials said.

Tim Vordenbaumen, president of the Texas Pharmaceutical Association, said Attebery's prescribed dose was "about average for the treatment of anxiety, aggression and tension."

"I guess the whole series of symptoms would probably be related to paranoia," he said.

The physician who prescribed the drugs, Dr. Frank Boyle, was no longer at the hospital and could not be reached for comment.

Gary Harrod, assistant chief medical administrator, would not discuss the specifics of Attebery's treatment, but confirmed that Attebery was a patient "for a number of years." His last visit, said Harrod, was in June 1978.

The Physicians Desk Reference, a reference book on drugs and their effects, says Thorazine is used to control "moderate to severe agitation, hyperactivity or aggression."

Family members have said Attebery, a retired trucker, developed paranoid delusions of being followed by police after he was involved in an accident in Ohio eight years ago. His truck hit a car that had run a red light, killing the two women, said his brother Howard.

Six police officers were the first wounded by Attebery's shots.

Attebery also took prescription medicine for a heart condition, police said, and had been treated at veterans hospitals in Missouri, Wisconsin and in San Antonio. Officials at the San Antonio hospital said Attebery had never received psychiatric treatment there, making his last visit there April 5 for a tooth extraction.

Moryl said police also found 10 electric razors, with which Attebery kept his head shaved.

Although Attebery exchanged fire with police about 30 minutes, the self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head was the only wound on his body, said Santos.

Several witnesses, including some police officers, had reported seeing the sniper hit by police fire.

A .22-caliber bullet from a target shooting mishap several years earlier was found lodged in Attebery's chest wall, but Santos said it was not near the heart and caused no danger or discomfort.

Probe Of Road Oil Slated

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, said Wednesday a congressional subcommittee will look into allegations of dangerous chemicals' being mixed with oil sludge for use on rural roads.

The Lufkin Democrat said an investigation will start within the next 30 days.

"If they're dumping in East Texas, they've picked the wrong district. I'll wear them out," he told the Port Arthur News, which broke the story last week.

The contaminated road oil was discovered in Corrigan, in Wilson's congressional district.

The State Department of Water Resources has now found 15 sites in Southeast Texas where possibly contaminated sludge was spread on roadbeds. The road oil was given to whoever asked, mostly subdivison developers. But the News said some was also given to Tyler and Jasper Counties.

The waste sludge came from Browning-Ferris of Houston, which is investigating the problem along with state and federal agencies.

David Nelson, a staffer on the House subcommittee on investigations, said preliminary research into the reports has already begun.

"Our interest is that it is part of an ongoing probe into the problems of hazardous waste disposal," Nelson said, noting that investigations are already focused on Louisiana, Michigan, California and Tennessee.

Wilson will make an on-site inspection at Corrigan Saturday.

Rubber Workers Sue To Break Guidelines

SEEKS TO BLOCK CARTER — United Rubber Workers President Peter Bommarito clutches legal papers as he enters U.S. District Court in Washington, Wednesday, seeking an injunction to prevent President Carter from pressuring the tire industry into obeying the government's anti-inflation guidelines. (AP Laserphoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Rubber Workers, accusing the government of fostering a strike through illegal tactics, went to court Wednesday to stop President Carter from enforcing his anti-inflation guidelines.

URW President Peter Bommarito, who has set a weekend strike deadline against Uniroyal Inc., asked the U.S. District Court here for a temporary restraining order to bar Carter from threatening to take away federal contracts if tire makers violate the wage guidelines.

Uniroyal has $37 million worth of government business at stake.

The court challenge, based on an earlier suit brought by the AFL-CIO and nine member unions, seeks to throw a major hurdle against Carter's "voluntary" anti-inflation effort by stripping it of allegedly illegal penalties for non-compliance.

A decision on the original suit, filed March 13, was not expected for at least a month. Wednesday's action was designed to force a temporary ruling within a few days.

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker scheduled a conference with attorneys for Thursday to decide on the next step in the litigation.

"We are seeking an injunction to keep the government away from our (contract) negotiations," Bommarito said after appearing in person to file the court order.

The union leader said he hoped a judge would issue a restraining order before 12:01 a.m. Saturday, when 8,200 workers are scheduled to strike 12 Uniroyal plants unless bargainers settle on a new contract before then.

Bommarito said talks might resume Thursday, but no definite plans had been set. The two sides have not met since April 26, when federal mediators halted the talks for lack of progress.

"The government's intervention in the rubber industry negotiations has brought the parties from the prospect of a peaceful settlement acceptable to both sides to the brink of a strike that no one desires," the union and AFL-CIO said in their court papers.

Bommarito contended that his union and Uniroyal had reached a tentative contract agreement that far exceeded Carter's seven percent annual wage guidelines, but that Uniroyal backed down two weeks ago after the administration threatened to stop buying tires from the company.

In a telegram to Carter on Tuesday, Bommarito said the president's economic adviser are involved in the talks "up to their necks."

Carter's program calls on companies to hold annual wage and fringe benefit increases to seven percent a year, a figure that Bommarito said is inadequate for the 55,000 URW members employed at the "Big Four" tire companies — Goodyear, Firestone, Uniroyal and Goodrich.

To win compliance with the program, the administration has threatened to deny federal contracts to any company that exceeds the guidelines. In the case of the rubber industry, $278 million worth of contracts are involved, according to administration officials.

The lawsuit brought by the AFL-CIO, Rubber Workers and other unions contends that threats of penalties converts Carter's "voluntary" program into a system of mandatory wage controls, which the administration cannot impose without congressional authorizaton.

Seal Begins Annual Trip Along Coast

MARBLEHEAD, Mass. (AP) — Andre the Seal plopped into Marblehead Harbor Wednesday to begin his sixth annual 160-mile swim along the Atlantic Coast to his summer home in Rockport, Maine.

After splashing excited school children who chased him into the water, Andre circled the harbor several times before he swam by a lighthouse at the harbor's northeastern point and headed out to sea.

Harry Goodridge, who adopted Andre about 18 years go after he seal was apparently abandoned by his mother, said Wednesday afternoon: "I told him to go on home. I'm just a little worried about him, but not that much because he's been here many times before."

Jackie Beuhler, Andre's volunteer trainer at the New England Aquarium in Boston, where he spends his winters, predicted Andre would be home in Maine by May 10.

Last year, Andre made the trip in 4½ days.

Aquarium workers had to struggle with an uncooperative but entertaining Andre as they put him in his cage for the first stage of his annual trip.

"He showed no interest in the cage," said aquarium trustee Betty Perry after a crowd of several hundred children and adults watched the 220-pound harbor seal turn down the fish which the aquarium workers used as bait to draw him to the pen.

Finally, after the workers drained the pool outside the aquarium, three divers in wetsuits grabbed Andre by his hind flippers, slid him across the pool to the cage and then pushed him in for the trip to Riverhead Beach in Marblehead, less than an hour's drive from Boston.

Cabot Spot, an orphaned seal like Andre, will also spend the summer in Rockport. If the two seals get along this year, they will make the trip up the New England coast together in 1980, aquarium officials said.

STATE PROSECUTION FORBIDDEN

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The state Court of Criminal Appeals has barred the state of Oklahoma from prosecuting a youth charged with murder at the Chilocco Indian School on the grounds that the school is Indian country. "We must say that Chilocco meets the definition of a dependent Indian community and that the state of Oklahoma has no jurisdiction over crimes committed there," the three-member court said in an unanimous ruling Tuesday.

Elephant Hunters Scour Big Apple

NEW YORK (UPI) — "We know there's an elephant out there. We just can't find it," insisted Marvin Bogner of the city's Health Department.

Bogner admitted Wednesday that he hadn't seen the beast, but said he had to take the reports seriously because of their source. No less than two governmental agencies, including the Department of Environmental Conservation, had phoned in independent reports, he said, as well as several citizens.

"We are convinced this is not a prank or a hoax because reports have come into us from private citizens and other governmental agencies," he said.

The mayor's office had already been informed.

"Hey, have you heard about the elephant?" queried mayoral aide Maureen Connelly as she sauntered into the City Hall press room.

She explained to the group of politely incredulous reporters that the mayor's office had been informed by a city agency that there was an elephant on the loose somewhere in Brooklyn's Bay Ridge section and that a search was indeed under way.

"Well, he should feel at home — it's Republican territory," said an amused Mayor Edward Koch.

According to Bogner, the first report came at 10 a.m., when "requests for help" were telephoned from two citizens and the conservation department. An elephant had been sighted, the callers said, behind a warehouse at 44th Street and Third Avenue.

Dr. Alan Beck, the Health Department's Director of Animal Affairs, immediately left with staff people to begin a search.

Ann Dorphwick, a secretary at Precise Metal Products Corp. on 44th Street, was emphatic. "There is no elephant," she said. "I've been getting calls all morning and I hung up the first time somebody asked about it. Believe me, there's no elephant here."

Someone got a brainstorm: call the Ringling Brothers, Barnum & Bailey Circus, which is in town. No, circus officials said; no animals — elephant or otherwise — had been reported missing.

Police said they had received no official notice and wouldn't begin looking — as one officer put it — "until someone complains it's in their back yard."

17-Year-Old Lubbock Woman Reports Robbery, Rape Try

A 17-year-old Lubbock woman told police that a man attempted to rob and rape her at her home shortly after noon Wednesday.

The woman said that she and a male friend were in a bedroom of her home when she heard a knock at the door. Because she was dressed and her companion was not, she got up to go to the door, she told officers.

When she entered the hallway, a young Mexican male grabbed her, pinned her arms behind her and placed a hand over her mouth.

"Be quiet. Shut up. I just want some money," the man said, according to police reports.

The intruder took the woman to a second bedroom of the house, where he began taking her clothes off, she said. At this time, the man in the other bedroom became aware of the intruder.

He dressed, and went into the kitchen to look for a weapon, but couldn't find one. So he went outside to get a piece of pipe out of his car.

When he returned and went into the second bedroom, he found the intruder trying to rape the woman.

She told police that the intruder then jumped up from the bed, and appeared very frightened.

"Hey, man, I've got the wrong house, I've got the wrong person," she said the intruder said.

When the woman's friend approached the intruder with the piece of pipe, he told the couple he had a gun.

Then the friend hit the intruder on the neck with the pipe. But the would-be rapist ran out of the house and down the street.

The woman said she had seen the man in her neighborhood several times in the past.

A 22-year-old Lubbock woman told police she was confronted Tuesday night by a former boyfriend, who grabbed her in front of her apartment and began tearing at her clothes.

She said she had returned home about 9:45 p.m. when the man grabbed her from behind while she was attempting to open her door. The man allegedly hit the woman in the eye after she pushed him away.

The victim said she managed to open her door, back into her residence and close the door. But reports indicate the man kicked the door open, entered and began tearing the woman's clothes off.

After ripping her clothing, the man reportedly fled the apartment. The victim notified police, as well as her boyfriend and father.

In other activity, Martin L. Tamez, 24, of 2620 Auburn St. was hospitalized after an assault by three Mexican men about 1:45 a.m. Wednesday at Auburn and Boston Avenue, police said.

Tamez was listed in satisfactory condition today at Health Sciences Center Hospital. He told police he was walking near the intersection when three Mexican-Americans, in their late teens or early 20s, drove up, jumped out of their car and began hitting and kicking him.

Tamez said one of his attackers also cut him on the right side with an unknown object. After the beating, the suspects got into a brown Chevrolet and drove off.

Two 17-year-old males were arrested about 8:20 p.m. Tuesday after an off-duty policeman reportedly spotted them betting on a pool game in a game room at the South Plains Mall, 6200 Slide Road.

The officer, working as a security guard at the mall, reported that he witnessed one of the teen-agers lose the game and throw a $1 bill on top of the pool table.

The officer escorted the two youths into an office and informed them they were under arrest. However, reports indicate one of the youths was more concerned about money he said his companion owed him.

Danny Rather of 4413 76th St. told police that about 2:30 a.m. Wednesday someone shot out several windows at his residence, causing about $400 damage. He said he had received a phone call about an hour earlier in which the caller threatened to damage his house.

In a recent break-in, Deborah Irene Griffin of 2311 Fifth St. said she suffered a $1,200 loss when house burglars stole jewelry, a typewriter, portable television and $100 cash.

Albert Marmolejo of 29121 Dartmouth St., remained in serious condition Wednesday in Methodist Hospital with a bullet wound.

Marmolejo was shot once with a small-caliber revolver about 10 a.m. Tuesday after an altercation with four Mexican-American men in front of Furr's Supermarket in the Town and Country Shopping Center at Fourth Street and University Avenue.

Body Found In Granary

A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD — Rescue workers recovered the body of a 34-year-old Hereford man about 1:30 a.m. Wednesday, nine hours after he fell into about 300,000 pounds of finely powdered corn in a grain elevator at the Big Tex Cattle and Grain Co., just west of Summerfield in Parmer County.

Juan N. Ramirez was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Wayne Spears of Bovina. He said the man apparently suffocated.

Parmer County Deputy Bob Davis said Ramirez was in a chair, suspended by a cable, breaking loose grain inside the elevator when he apparently lost his balance and fell.

The accident occurred about 4:15 p.m. Tuesday.

He was a foreman at the Big Tex Cattle and Grain Co. and had worked there 10 years.

The Del Rio native had lived in Hereford since 1955. He was a member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church here.

Survivors include his wife, Maria; a son, Roberto of the home; his mother, Herlinda Ramirez of Hereford; two sisters, Maria Castillo and Elvia Cuellar, both of Hereford; and four brothers, Jesse V. Ramirez Jr. and Matt Ramirez, both of Lubbock, Stevan Ramirez of LaVilla, and Jesse Zertuche of San Jose, Calif.

Five Charged In Burglary

Five Lubbock men Wednesday were charged with burglary in a Tuesday garage break-in in which a large quantity of tools and the building burglar alarm were stolen.

Charged were Harvey Bynum, 27, David Ray Boyd, 19, Roscoe Boyd Jr., 22, Tony Joe Boyd, 17, and Willie Earl Ross, 28, all of 2403 E. Sixth St.

The criminal district attorney's office is recommending bonds of $7,500 each against Tony Joe Boyd and Roscoe Boyd Jr., $15,000 each against Bynum and David Ray Boyd and $20,000 against Ross.

They are accused of breaking into Charles' Auto Clinic and taking 100 wrench sockets, four adjustable wrenches, two body hammers, 10 combination wrenches and other tools in addition to the burglar alarm.

Other charges Wednesday included one for aggravated assault against James Guerra, 17, of 2903 Auburn St., who is accused in the shooting of 20-year-old Albert Marmolejo Tuesday at Town and Country Shopping Center.

George Z. Archulita, 20, of 2008 E. Fifth St. was charged with burglary of a habitation in a reported April 9 home burglary in the 3500 block of 21st Street, in which $1,000 in stereo equipment was stolen.

Isaac Ray Mahuron, 25, and Royce Dan Thorne, 17, both of 3004 Baylor St., were charged with forgery in reported April 10 and April 29 forgeries on the bank account of a Lubbock woman.

Hydrogen Powered Car Shown In D.C.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A California developer brought an automobile powered by liquid hydrogen to the Capitol and the White House Wednesday.

The firm has sued Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger, the Energy Department and the General Services Administration for a chance to successfully bid for a $5 million federal government contract to convert government cars to run on hydrogen.

An Energy Department official advised GSA, the government's supply manager, that the hydrogen-fueled car wasn't feasible, according to copies of letters given reporters.

The price of the fuel would be about 49 cents a gallon in today's market, they said, plus 10 cents a gallon to cover the cost of the conversion.

Manslaughter Ruled In Fatal Car Wreck

The death of a Dallas woman in a traffic accident here Wednesday was ruled involuntary manslaughter by Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack.

Margaret H. DeHart, 39, suffered fatal injuries at 12:08 a.m. Wednesday in a one-car accident in the 4600-block of North Quirt Avenue.

Mrs. DeHart's death was the sixth of the year and the second since last Thursday, when a Lubbock man died after a motorcycle-truck collision in the city.

Mrs. DeHart was killed when the car in which she was a passenger ran off the road into a muddy shoulder. The driver lost control of the car, which skidded back across the road, jumped a median and wrapped around a light pole, police said.

Mrs. DeHart was pinned in the 1979 Ford Granada for almost an hour before Lubbock firemen freed her.

The woman was pronounced dead at the scene by Judge Blalack. The driver and only other occupant of the car was in satisfactory condition late Wednesday at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Senate Committee Approves $20.8 Billion Budget For Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — State government would spend $20.8 billion in 1980-1981 under a budget bill approved Wednesday by the Senate Finance Committee.

The bill next goes to the Senate floor for debate, expected next week.

The total exceeds by $500 million a $20.3 billion House proposal that Gov. Bill Clements has termed "totally unacceptable."

Jim Oliver, assistant director of the Legislative Budget Board, said the finance committee version will leave about $50 million "unobligated and available for other purposes."

Clements proposed a $19.8 billion budget and a plan to cut state taxes by $1 billion.

A major difference from the House budget is a 5.1 percent pay raise for state teachers, compared to seven percent approved by the House. That and other differences will be worked out by a House-Senate conference committee.

Both the House and finance committee proposals include the step-up increases for teachers at various experience levels that Clements has criticized as unnecessary and unfair to other state employees.

Committee members decided to raise state employees' salaries by 5.1 percent a year. The House bill provides money to raise state employees seven percent, but only on the first $20,000 of their salaries.

The committee voted to give 5.1 percent pay raises to state university faculty and staff making $15,000 or less. School presidents would decide whether to grant raises to persons making more than $15,000.

Sen. A.R. "Babe" Schwartz, D-Galveston, objected to leaving any raises for college employees to the whims of administrators. He promised a floor fight to raise the ceiling to $20,000.

"We don't do this for other state employees," Schwartz said. "I really can't distinguish between a University of Texas Medical Branch employee and a highway department worker."

The ceiling has been used to be sure college administrators give raises to those who need them most, instead of spending the money to hire new employees, said Sen. Pete Snelson, D-Midland.

Sen. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, persuaded fellow committee members to add $330,000 for the biennium to raise reseachers' salaries at the Texas A&M Agricultural Extension Service. He said a researcher holding a Ph.D. makes less than a professor with a doctorate.

"If you put this in, it's a guarantee I'll be back in two years, and I'm worth every bit of it," said Moore, whose district includes Texas A&M.

Committee members also agreed to remove language already deleted by the House that would have prohibited use of state college facilities by homosexual organizations.

The finance panel earlier decided to grant a $2,700 annual increase for the 18 judges of the Supreme Court and Court of Criminal Appeals. The judges would make $56,700 annually with the raise, with an extra $500 for the Supreme Court chief justice and presiding judge of the appeals court.

District judges would be limited to a 5.1 percent annual pay hike, compared to a 19.8 percent raise voted by the House.

Oliver said the biggest single item difference between the House and finance commitee proposals is the amount of state money flowing to local school districts.

He said the finance committee approved $269 million more for local schools than the total voted by the House.

"I don't think the (other) overall differences are as large as they may seem," he said. "That's the biggest difference and after that," raises and higher spending levels are scattered throughout the bill, he added.

Among biennial totals of state and federal funds approved by the finance committee for different state agencies are $4.6 billion for health, welfare and rehabilitation programs; $2.6 billion for highways; and $10.8 billion for public and higher education.

Bill Promotes Students For School Boards

AUSTIN (AP) — Local school boards would have the option of seating a non-voting student member under a bill approved Wednesday by a Senate committee.

The measure by Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, would allow a district's high school students to elect a senior as their official school board representative.

"At the present time, students are merely spectators and must receive permission from the chair to speak," Truan told the Senate Education Committee. "It is hoped this legislation would initiate interest among young people in the electoral process."

The student member, who would serve in a non-voting capacity, would be excluded from executive school board sessions, which include discussions of legal, personnel, and disciplinary matters.

Each school board would have the option of holding an election for a student representative. The process also could be initiated by five percent of the registered voters in each district.

The bill was drafted at the request of the senior civics class at King High School in Kingsville, Truan said. Several Kingsville students testified in favor of the proposal.

"This is not a quest for power by the students," Randy Rapstein said. "It's an attempt to link communications (between students and administration). Rapstein said the representative would be effective in conveying and explaining school board actions to students.

Kimberly Scott, student body president of King High School, said, "As opposed to a decade of rebellion that we all remember, young people are now ready to sit beside their elders in helping to make decisions."

ILLINOIS REORGANIZES PRISON

CHICAGO (AP) — The Illinois Department of Corrections has finished a reorganization of Stateville Correctional Center aimed at wresting control of the prison from gang members, a spokesman says. Under the plan, the prison's 2,011 convicts were placed in three categories: most aggressive, least aggressive and normal, department spokesman Russ Mitchell said Tuesday. Authorities confined the prisoners to their cells from Feb. 24 to early last month while conducting an intensive search for contraband believed brought in by guards and visitors.

State Paid Fees On Successful Open Records Cases Proposed

AUSTIN (AP) — Citizens who win open records suits could collect their attorneys' fees from state and local government agencies under a bill approved Wednesday by the Texas House.

The bill (SB1025) advanced on a voice vote after the House rejected an attempt to weaken it.

A final vote is expected Thursday. That would send the measure back to the Senate for action on House amendments.

The bill is virtually identical to one that passed last session only to be vetoed by former Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

Key provisions of the bill would:

— Authorize judges to award attorneys' fees to citizens who win lawsuits to force release of government documents that the attorney general has ruled must be disclosed under the Texas Open Records Act.

— Repeal a provision of the act that subjects government employees to up to six months in jail and a fine of up to $1,000 for disclosing information deemed confidential by law.

— Provide penalties of up to 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine for custodians of records who refuse to grant access to documents that are public by law.

— Clarify that the news media have standing in court to sue to prevent government bodies from meeting in secret.

Rep. Pete Patterson, D-Brookston, tried to remove the attorney fee provision.

But Rep. John Wilson, D-LaGrange, won reconsideration of the amendment, and it was tabled, 109-24.

Wilson said the attorney fee provision was the "heart of the bill."

"A lot of people can't afford to pay what we attorneys charge, even as a retainer fee," agreed Rep. Bill Harrison, D-Corpus Christi.

Patterson said, however, "I don't think it is right for the state or other political entities to have to pick up attorney fees on every case we are talking about."

The House removed a provision that would have allowed an agency to close records if opening them would cause the loss of federal funds, services or essential information.

Rep. Dave Allred, D-Wichita Falls, called it "a loophole big enough to drive a General Sherman tank through."

He said bureaucrats would use the provision as an excuse to deny access to records even when disclosure would not jeopardize federal funds.

Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, sponsor of the bill, said loss of federal funds would be "a situation that could be pretty unbearable to all of us."

After Allred won a test vote, Lewis offered an amendment that would have required a court finding that federal funds would be lost before documents could be withheld. The amendment failed, 66-68.

Allred's amendment to strike the entire federal funds provision then carried on a voice vote.

No Action Anticipated In Solon Assault Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee will take no disciplinary proceedings against Rep. Michael O. Myers, D-Pa., accused of assaulting cocktail lounge employees after a swearing-in celebration.

Myers pleaded no contest last month to one count of disorderly conduct in connection with the incident in an Arlington motel.

Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., said, "I feel an incident of this nature does not rise to the level of severity to warrant a recommendation of disciplinary action to the House." Bennett, ethics committee chairman, told the panel he would take no further action unless there were an objection.

A lounge hostess and another employee told police they were struck by the congressman and other members of his party during the Jan. 16 incident.

Lawn Sprinkler License Upheld

AUSTIN (AP) — In its first action under the Sunset Act, the House voted 94-45 Wednesday to continue state licensing of lawn sprinkler companies. A final vote is expected today.

Landscape irrigators now are regulated by the Board of Landscape Architects. The Sunset Advisory Commission, four senators and four representatives, recommended no further regulation of the lawn sprinkler installers.

The Senate-passed bill would set up a Texas Board of Irrigators under the Texas Water Commission, which would provide all its administrative services.

Two members of the board would represent the general public, and four would be landscape irrigators.

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, contended the bill's intent was not to protect the public but to "cut down on competition, to grant a select few a monopoly."

Rep. Lance Lalor, D-Houston, a member of the Sunset Advisory Commission, said two-thirds of the lawn sprinkler companies are in "rich suburbs of Dallas and Houston."

"They (customers) are able to protect themselves. They don't need us in Austin writing a bill to protect them," said Peveto.

Rep.Charles Evans, D-Fort Worth, said said the bill would provide "protection for the public, not just for gardeners" because lawn sprinkler companies tap into water mains.

"There are a lot of people in the public who are for a cleaner water supply," Evans said.

The House also voted preliminary approval, 73-69, to a bill designed to require that licensed plumbers do all plumbing work in unincorporated areas of counties with 80,000 or more people.

But the measure was amended to limit the application of the bill only to Harris County, home of the sponsors, Sen. Jack Ogg and Rep. Gene Green, both Democrats of Houston.

"If they (Harris County) have a problem and want to solve it, they can," said Rep. Fred Agnich, R-Dallas, who put on the amendment.

"I once read the Houston plumbing code and the only thing I learned from it was payday is on Friday and sewage won't run uphill," he added.

Clements Seeks $6.1 Million For Depleted Fund

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements Wednesday asked the Legislature for an additional $6.1 million to supplement the state disaster contingency fund left depleted from the recent Wichita Falls tornado and Southeast Texas flooding.

"No one could anticipate two disasters within two weeks in this state," he said of his emergency request.

Clements last week requested $750,000 to shore up the disaster fund for grant payments to tornado victims.

"New figures have come in on Wichita Falls," Clements said in a message to legislators. "The total estimated damage there was $241 million." The state paid out $1,650,000 in individual family grants of $500 each. In addition, the state is providing 2,000 temporary housing sites for an additional $2 million.

"This makes the Wichita Falls-Vernon area state cost run to $3,650,000," the governor said.

The floods around Beaumont, Houston and Conroe resulted in $500 million in damage, he added. The state's share of individual family grants to flood victims comes to $1,875,000 and housing costs were $500,000 for a total expenditure of $2,375,000, Clements said.

In addition to paying for tornado and flooding damage, Clements said he wanted to restore the contingency fund to $2 million "to take care of any future disasters."

Bill To Compensate Victims Of Crimes Sent To Clements

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate sent to the governor Wednesday a bill that would use money taken from the pockets of criminals to pay victims of violent crime.

Victims of criminal violence or their survivors could receive up to $50,000 from the state for medical or funeral expenses, lost wages and rehabilitation expenses.

To qualify, a victim would have to report the crime within 72 hours.

Money for compensating victims would come from court costs of $10 by persons convicted of serious misdemeanors and $15 paid by convicted felons.

Only families whose economic losses resulted in financial hardship for themselves or their families could collect.

One House amendment would see to it that a criminal's profits from writing about his experiences were available to compensate people he injured.

The Texas Industrial Accident Board, which decides workers' compensation claims, would administer the crime victim program.

Motor Fuel Moratorium Mulled By Dealerships

NEW YORK (AP) — Many of the nation's gasoline station operators are planning a "gasless weekend" May 17-20 to protest federal controls on their profits.

It is unclear how many dealers might participate, but it is supported by associations in California, Connecticut, Illinois, Idaho, Iowa, Washington, Nevada, Louisiana and Arizona, according to officials of the associations.

The movement began in California and service station industry officials said Wednesday they expect most of that state's dealers to participate.

"Basically, we're sick of all this talk of gouging when we, the dealers, are the ones who are still under controls and will be even after decontrol of the oil companies takes effect," said Wayne Konitshek, president of the Connecticut Gasoline Retailers Association.

"There's a definite feeling toward doing something," said Charles Matties, who operates an Exxon station in West Hartford, Conn. He is a former president of the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers.

"If something isn't forthcoming from the Department of Energy, many dealers may join the movement," said Matties.

The gas station operators and owners admit the closings would inconvenience drivers, but say they hope the public will fill their gas tanks beforehand.

"It wasn't our intention to hurt the public, but we don't know what else we can do," said Don Skilling, a spokesman for the California Service Station Association, which represents 2,000 of the state's 14,000 dealers.

The dealers hope the action will force the government to loosen controls on the mark-up they are allowed to take on gasoline sales.

Presently, that mark-up — known as "dealer margin" — cannot exceed the amount it was in May 1973, before the Arab oil embargo, plus three cents. Dealers have been allowed to add small amounts to cover some other costs.

The dealers want that system dropped and replaced with a straight 25 percent mark-up over the wholesale price.

Coping With Gasoline Shortage Difficult

By The Associated Press

When a woman in San Carlos, Calif., was stopped for driving 75 mph in a 35 mph zone, she told the officer she was almost out of gas and was trying to build momentum to coast the last few miles home.

That was just one of the measures Americans resorted to in recent days while trying to cope with gasoline shortages and high prices.

Hesh, who is in serious condition, told the intruder it "wasn't cool" to cut in front of him. A shoving match followed, and Hesh, 25, was stabbed with a pocket knife. Police are holding two men on $10,000 bail for investigation of attempted murder.

Gasoline is selling for $1 a gallon in parts of California and in New York, Chicago and Hawaii. Premium-grade gasoline is expected to reach that price across the country by year's end. Gas supplies are getting tighter, and many analysts are predicting a severe crunch by the end of summer.

A preview of that may be close; many gasoline dealers in several states are calling for a four-day shutdown of service station May 17-20 to protest government price controls

Hardware stores once again report a booming business in gasoline cans and locking gas caps. Service stations say customers are topping off their tanks more often than a few months ago.

And everybody seems to have a gasoline story already:

—In Miami, a service station was closed but the pumps were not locked. People were filling up and driving away. Joel Hirschorn, a lawyer, got fed up and told the freeloaders they were stealing. His 9-year-old son, Bennett, began collecting money and stuffed $48 into the station's mail slot.

Station owner Earl Lane, who said $113 worth of gas was missing, praised Hirschorn.

"There wasn't much else he could do," said Lane. "He couldn't stop the people ... somebody would have hit him in the head with a nozzle."

—Hollywood radio station KPOL bought 3,000 gallons of gas at 90 cents a gallon and sold it for 26.9 cents a gallon as a three-hour promotional gimmick. The result was a line a mile long on Sunset Boulevard.

—Jerry Miles skipped a doctor's appointment for the chance to buy the cheap gas, explaining: "I have to put the gas before my health."

—While motorists were trying to conserve fuel, the manager of T.J. Doss Exxon in Norfolk, Va., was trying to sell as much as he could, even cutting his price a nickel to attract business. The reason is that the amount of fuel a station gets each month is based on how much it sold in the same month a year ago. Manager Johnny James said he wanted to qualify for as much gas as possible next April.

"If you've got it, there's no sense in letting it sit in the ground and collect dust," he said.

—In Cranston, R.I, Helen Drew is having trouble selling her Chevrolet van because it gets only 13 miles per gallon. Even her friends don't want it.

"I was thinking about buying Helen's car but I can't because the gas costs too much," said Francine Connolly, who now drives a Buick Electra that gets 10 miles a gallon.

Like many Americans, Mrs. Connolly, a social worker, has no choice but to get around by car, so gas mileage and economy are important to her. She's been forced to cut out most non-essential driving.

"I'm on the road all the time because of my work," she said. "I don't drive much in non-working hours any more."

CATHEDRAL CENTENNIAL SET

NEW YORK (AP) — Five cardinals, 60 bishops, hundreds of priests and a representative of the Pope will formally commemorate the 100th anniversary of the opening of St. Patrick's Cathedral by celebrating High Mass there on May 12. Cardinal Terence Cooke, Roman Catholic archbishop of New York, will be joined in concelebrating the mass by Archbishop Jean Jadot, the apostolic delegate to the United States from the Vatican, and by priests from more than 400 parishes. A large ecumenical representation from other faiths also is expected, said a spokesman for the archdiocese.

Gas Well Blazes In Louisiana

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A gas well flamed from a coastal marsh Wednesday as men who specialize in taming wild wells tried to find a way to shut it off and extinguish the blaze.

A spokesman for Texaco Inc., owner of the well, said there would be no decision until the firm of Boots and Coots of Houston studies the situation.

It was the third oil well fire in the area in a month.

The well is about 50 miles south of New Orleans, in a canal that intersects Bayou LaFourche at Leeville. The bayou is a busy waterway for shrimp boats. The Coast Guard said there was no threat to navigation.

The well, designated the City of New Orleans No. 50, erupted Tuesday after the crew pulled the drill up from a depth of 14,376 feet and prepared to lower a sensor device.

An unexpected burst of gas came up the pipe. Spokesman Max Hebert said automatic blowout preventor valves cut in, but a spark set the gas afire.

Four members of the drilling crew were burned. The derrick of the barge-mounted drilling rig, owned by Noble Drilling Corp. of New Orleans, melted and toppled over. The four injured men were reported in stable condition at a New Orleans hospital.

Gas Allocation Rules Altered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Energy amended its rules Wednesday to make gasoline allocations, during a shortage, match more closely the recent needs of individual gas stations.

David J. Bardin, head of the department's Economic Regulatory Administration, said the changes would shift some gasoline into areas where demand has grown greatly in recent years, away from areas of low growth, if shortages restrict the overall demand.

Bardin said he understood that western areas and rural areas might benefit from such shifts, but he had no other analysis of the geographic effects.

When gasoline supplies are insufficient to meet demand, suppliers are required by federal regulations to allocate the available supply among retail outlets equally, as some percentage of past deliveries.

Bardin said this historic "base-period" has been the corresponding month in the period from July 1977 through June 1978. One amendment announced Wednesday revises the base period so any allocations in July, August and September this year will be based on deliveries made in July, August and September of 1978 instead of 1977.

In addition, Bardin said, an amendment allows for an automatic allocation adjustment to match an individual service station's unusually high demand growth.

President Carter and other key administration officials have repeatedly warned of the probability of tight gasoline supplies this summer, so the new allocation rules may exert a real influence on the availability of gasoline at specific locations, although Bardin could not predict exact effects.

Bardin said the administration was surveying the plans of refiners for stockpiling enough home heating oil and diesel fuel to get through next winter, hoping they will voluntarily meet the administration's nationwide goal of a 240 million gallon stock.

If they do not, Bardin said, the administration might take other steps. This was understood to mean the possibility of ordering refiners to produce more of these fuels, perhaps at the expense of gasoline and other products.

But Bardin said he could not estimate how much these efforts to stockpile fuel oil might cut into summer gasoline supplies.

Oregon Gets First Quantity Gas Well

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — A wildcat well in northwestern Oregon has struck commercial quantities of natural gas which could be heating homes by 1981, it was announced Wednesday.

"There is a commercial quantity out of this well," Gov. Vic Atiyeh said of the discovery in Columbia County, northwest of Portland. "It is the first commercial discovery in Oregon. I don't expect we'll get to be another Oklahoma or Texas, but it's good news."

He was joined by officials of Northwest Natural Gas and the Reichhold Energy Corp. in warning that further exploration of the area is needed to determine whether there is enough gas to justify construction of a pipeline.

Ronald Miller, president of the gas utility, said it would take several months to gauge the amount of gas and then would take several months to build a pipeline.

"Gas could be flowing through it by the 1980-81 winter season," he said. "There is a good possibility it will allow us to provide energy at a lower cost."

New Book Features Indians Of Northeast

Although listed as Volume 15 in a 20-volume set, the edition on Northeast indians is only the second book in the set to be published.

Chapters discuss the individual tribes, the Iroquois culture, languages, the longhouse, religion and other topics.

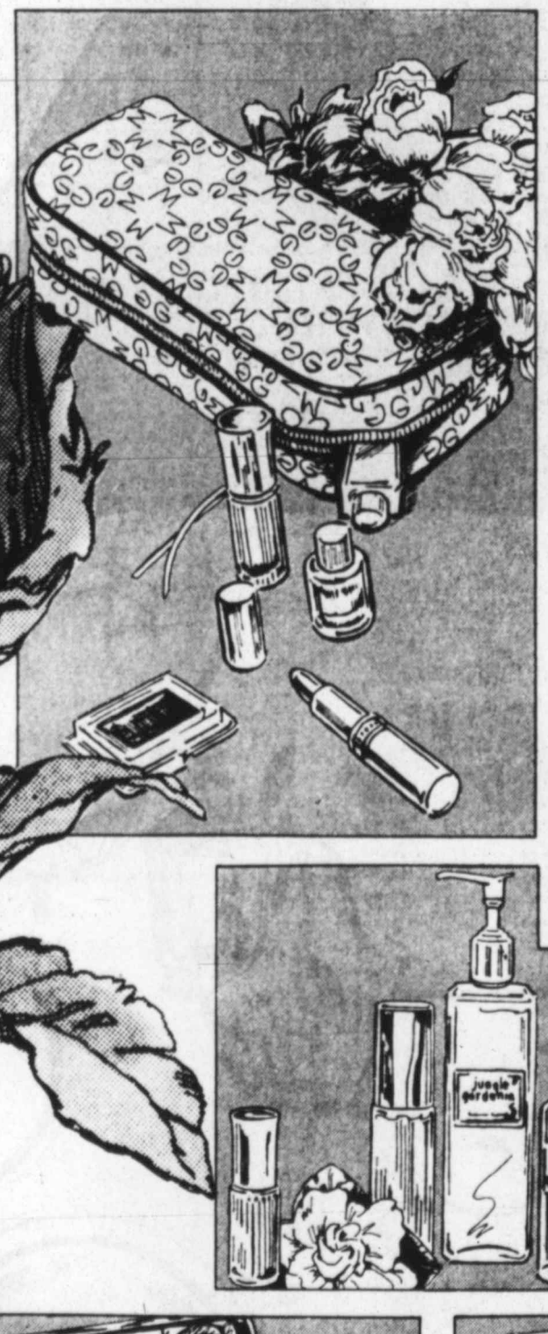

Previously issued in the set was Volume 8, the Indians of California. Both can be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402. Order by stock number:

New Mexico Withdraws From Gas-Control Suit

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico has pulled out of a lawsuit challenging the federal government's authority to regulate the wellhead price of natural gas produced and consumed within a state.

Texas and Oklahoma initiated the suit challenging the National Gas Pricing Act's provisions dealing with intrastate gas. Former Attorney General Toney Anaya brought New Mexico into the case in the final weeks of his term last year, against the wishes of then-Gov. Jerry Apodaca.

Attorney General Jeff Bingaman announced his decision to pull New Mexico out of the suit Wednesday.

The attorney general acknowledged that the action means New Mexico concedes that the federal government can regulate natural gas prices within the state.

"It was questionable how strong our legal argument was, and it would take substantial resources to do the case right," Bingaman said. "I was not sure what benefits would result to the state. It's not a case where the probabilities of success justify the committment of resources."

The lawsuit challenges the constitutionality of the federal government's regulating wellhead prices of natural gas produced and consumed in a state when the gas does not enter interstate commerce.

New Mexico has its own unique wellhead price ceiling law, which was promoted by Anaya. Intrastate prices are unregulated in Texas and other states.

Bingaman said Gov. Bruce King and his Energy and Minerals Department secretary, Larry Kehoe, agreed with the decision to withdraw New Mexico from the case.

Before his election, Bingaman, along with former Gov. Jack Campbell, was an attorney for independent New Mexico natural gas producers who sued to increase wellhead prices and who opposed strict price controls by the state after they won the case.

Asked whether withdrawal from the federal case was something producers wanted, Bingaman said, "Just the opposite. I think the producers were very much for this litigation and are in the other states. That's why Texas is very much into it. They're getting higher prices in Texas than they would under the act."

He said one factor in the decision to withdraw was that certain arguments against federal control of intrastate wellhead prices could be turned later against state control of the same prices.

New Mexico's position as an intervenor in the case was such that the state could voluntarily withdraw without approval of the judge or other litigants, Bingaman noted.

Gas Pump Meters Can't Handle Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — It will take three years or more to convert the nation's 1.3 million gasoline pumps to accommodate prices of more than $1 a gallon, a federal agency was told Wednesday.

That doesn't mean, however, that motorists will necessarily be deprived of pumps that will tell them just how expensive gasoline has become.

Three representatives of a meter manufacturer said 100,000 pump computers that can handle prices up to $2 a gallon already are in use and that their firm can produce up to a half million more in a year.

"These computers can be shipped into high price level areas for immediate use in gasoline dispensers handling premium fuel," a spokesman for the Veeder-Root Co. told the U.S. Metric Board. "This will provide immediate pricing capability in the areas where it is needed."

The Metric Board is holding two days of hearings to decide what to do about the problem of the $1-a-gallon-or-more gasoline. While the board does not have the authority to require any changes, it is charged with helping coordinate the nation's changeover to metric measurements.

Ronald H. Berlind of the Amoco Oil Co. said "the imminent prospect" of breaking the dollar barrier "comes at a time when as many as 95 to 97 percent of all the gasoline outlets in the country are not equipped to display a dollar or more per gallon price on their meters."

Board chairman Louis F. Polk said there are at least five options for converting pump computers: to register prices above 99.9 cents a gallon; to calculate price per half-gallon, per liter, per quart or to calculate whole number prices and drop the tenths-of-a-cent.

The Veeder-Root representatives, B. Huckman, Alfred C. Evans and Robert Nix, said the conversion of all gasoline pumps will take three years with careful planning and longer without.

Conversion gear boxes already are available for their equipment, they said, if metric conversion is chosen.

Whatever the short-term solution, Berlind said, there will be a conversion to metric dispensing in the end.

"At present prices, Amoco estimates its cost would be about $13 more to make a two-stage conversion — first to a dollar or more a gallon, and then later to a metric system — than it would be to convert to metric now," he said.

But G.W. Billman of Chevron testified that "changing station pumps to accommodate prices on the basis of liters instead of gallons cannot occur in isolation, but rather requires many related changes and actions, all with their own costs."

Conversion to metric will affect the way the industry collects and accounts for taxes, bills its dealers, and reports its operations to governmental agencies, he said.

The use of "half price posting," where each half gallon is reported or the gallon price doubled, "appears to be a practical, interim solution to the pricing problem facing the industry," Billman said.

A spokesman for the Department of Energy, James L. Kelley, said the rise of gasoline above a dollar a gallon is the first major practical opportunity to convert to metric measure in the energy area.

"It is not possible to forecast when most retail gasoline prices will reach that level," he said. "But we must prepare."

Gasoline Inventories Continue To Decline, But More Slowly

NEW YORK (AP) — Inventories of gasoline continued to decline but not as sharply as in recent weeks, according to the latest weekly supply bulletin from the American Petroleum Institute.

For the week ended April 27, gasoline inventories fell to 231.8 million barrels from 233.3 million barrels a week earlier.

The 1.5 million barrel decline, however, was not as steep as the five million to seven million decline of a few weeks ago.

Supplies still are well below the 252.5 million barrels of gasoline on hand at this time last year. Supplies of distillate used mainly for home heating rose in the latest week to 115.5 million barrels from 114.4 million in the previous week, reflecting the arrival of warmer weather around the country.

The nation's refiners, however, are continuing to produce distillate at high levels in an effort to rebuild stocks for next fall. Because of recent crude supply problems, stocks of distillate had declined to record low levels in recent weeks.

Western Oil Consumption Climbing

PARIS (AP) — Oil consumption in major Western countries rose 4.2 percent in February and January, the height of the Iranian crisis, according to figures released Wednesday by the International Energy Agency.

The rise was 4.1 percent in the United States, 3.8 in Japan and 4.5 in a group of five European countries — Britain, France, West Germany, Italy and the Netherlands, the figures showed.

The rise was mainly in use of gasoline and heavy fuel. Gasoline consumption during the first two months was 5 percent above a year earlier. The sharpest increase was registered in Japan with 10 percent. Consumption of heavy fuel in the seven countries was up 3.9 percent compared with a decline of 0.4 percent in the corresponding 1978 period.

The IEA, formed by Western consuming nations after the 1973 Arab oil embargo, says first estimates "suggest rather weaker consumption" in the United States in March.

Toward the end of 1978 net imports of the seven countries rose faster than consumption, resulting in a sharp buildup of stocks, the IEA said, then partly because of lost Iranian production there was a drop in net imports in January and February despite the rise in consumption.

The IEA said that after a significant rise in Western domestic oil production in the fourth quarter of 1978, output in the first two months of this year began to decline because of reduced production in Alaska caused by bad weather.

AFTERMATH — Lubbbock police officer Roger Hearron, left, relates the events of an attempted armed robbery-kidnapping incident Wednesday afternoon to Sgt. K.T. Privett (in uniform) and police information officer Bill Morgan. Hearron and Cpl. Ron Sowell, both off-duty at the time, shot the suspect before he could leave Chris' Rexall Drug in the Town and Country shopping center. In the second photo, an unidentified policeman watches over the car the suspect attempted his getaway in. The passenger window was shot out by Sowell when he fired at the suspect, who had turned his gun on Hearron. (Staff photos by Gary Davis).

House Panel Approves Education Agency Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee yielded to heavy lobbying by the Carter administration Wednesday and approved by a one-vote margin a bill creating a separate Department of Education.

The House Government Operations Committee narrowly approved the measure by a 20-19 vote and sent it to the full House. Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, committee chairman and chief House sponsor of the bill, predicted that it will pass.

Opponents of the new Education Department had counted on the House panel to kill the legislation, saying the most concentrated congressional opposition to the idea was to be found among the committee's members.

"We have now passed the toughest hurdle in our efforts to pass a separate Department of Education," said a White House official who declined to be identified publicly.

Before it approved the legislation Wednesday, the House committee made a controversial change in the bill by endorsing the transfer of Indian education programs from the Interior Department.

Indian education and certain other functions like Head Start, veterans education and child nutrition were omitted from transfer to the proposed Education Department because of spirited opposition by certain interest groups.

The Senate version of the bill calls for the new department to conduct a study on whether Indian Education should remain with the Bureau of Indian Affairs or be added to the new department's jurisdiction.

The new department, which would become the nation's 13th, would have a budget of around $14 billion and more than 15,000 employees. It would be larger than five existing departments — Energy, Interior, Commerce, Justice and State.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare is the Cabinet-level agency from which most of the new department's activities would be derived. But more than half of the Education Department's personnel would come from the transfer of the Overseas Dependent Schools from the Department of Defense.

Other agencies which would lose programs to the Education department include the departments of Justice, Housing and Urban Development, Agriculture and Labor, and the National Science Foundation.

Backers of the department maintain it would increase efficiency and accountability, streamline the government's management of education activities, save as much as $100 million eventually and reduce personnel by some 450 persons without usurping state and local authority over education.

But the opposition contends the department is bound to lead to a federal education policy. They also argue that the department's base would be too narrowly drawn, making it responsive to only one set of interest groups.

"In my opinion we are enacting another monster in the federal government," Rep. L.H. Fountain, D-N.C., said. "It's going to grow and grow and grow."

A ceiling on the number of employees the new department can have was endorsed on a voice vote. By fiscal year 1982, the department could hire no more than the present work force of the agencies which will be transferred to it less 450 persons.

Congress would have to approve the addition of more than 50 persons per year to the new department.

The education community is divided over whether the department should be created. The National Education Association, the nation's largest teachers organization, is it's biggest booster. But the rival American Federation of Teachers led the opposition.

"We are confident that the tactics that were successful for the administration and NEA in committee will not work in the full House," AFT President Albert Shanker said.

The AFT pinpointed Rep. Lyle Williams, R-Ohio, as the person who cast the deciding vote Wednesday. An earlier AFT head count had the committee split 19-19.

Decontrol Foes Show Strength In Panel Vote

publican members sided with Carter on the decontrol issue, both liberals and many moderate Democrats on the panel threw their suport behind Moffett — including Staggers, a past administration loyalist on energy issues but also a staunch defender of oil price lids.

Carter's plan would begin lifting oil price controls on June 1 and gradually phase them out by September, 1981. Some of the additional revenues received by oil companies would be captured by Carter's proposed "windfall profits tax."

But recent revelations that the tax would have a smaller bite on oil companies than had been thought previously intensified congressional efforts to stop decontrol.

Carter's plan "is plain and simple a sellout to the oil companies, who are the crybabies of American business," said Rep. Andrew Maguire, D-N.J. "He's giving the oil companies exactly what they want."

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., main defender of the Carter plan on the panel, argued that Moffett should make his move in a separate bill — instead of trying to amend an authorization bill that only applies to fiscal 1980, which begins Oct. 1.

Meanwhile, Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger defended Carter's energy proposals to a group of House Republicans, telling them that despite the recent reports of large oil industry profits, the oil industry overall recognizes a smaller rate of return than the average U.S. manufacturer.

"Since 1974 in real terms the profits of major oil companies have been going down," the energy secretary said.

In an hour-long, free-wheeling discussion, Schlesinger also told the GOP members:

—The administration would "use whatever powers we have" to guarantee enough diesel fuel is available to farm states so crops can be harvested.

—Congress should relax the current ban on exporting Alaska oil so that anything above the current 1.2 million barrel-a-day production from Alaska's North Slope could be swapped with Japan for a share of Japan's oil from the Mideast.

—That Carter's call for Americans to drive 15 miles less each week and to conserve other forms of energy has been " a partial failure" but that there are no immediate plans to take mandatory steps to help conserve gas.

Clements Pondering 'Distasteful' Crisis In Home Mortgages

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Wednesday he still doesn't have an answer to the crisis in home mortgage lending in Texas and he doesn't know when he will have.

Clements, who threatened two weeks ago to veto any legislative bill that would increase Texas' home interest rates from 10 percent to 12 percent, commented after a closed-door talk with sponsors of the bill.

"It is a very complex situation and very distasteful so far as I am concerned," Clements told reporters after talking with Sen. Bill Meier, D-Euless, and Rep. Jerry Donaldson, D-Gatesville.

"Reassess Situation"

"We re making every effort to reassess the situation," he said."I have made no decision at this time, and I can't tell you when I will."

Clements said he was hopeful he would get an answer from Attorney General Mark White to a legal question asked by Donaldson.

The attorney general's office could give no indication when the legal opinion might be issued.

Clements said if he has to abandon his stand against any increase in the state's usury limit, he felt a "floating rate" of interest would be "the most interesting. That is just one of the things we are discussing. Almost all of us are inclined toward a floating rate instead of a fixed rate if a change is made."

No Loans Accepted

Texas' constitution does not permit loans that charge more than 10 percent interest annually. Last week the Federal National Mortgage Association — known as Fannie Mae — said it would accept no more FHA and VA loans from Texas mortgage dealers because of the current practice of charging "points" or special charges for processing a loan in addition to the 10 percent interest.

Meier, who has said his bill to increase rates has no chance of success without Clements' blessing, said Wednesday "the governor was interested in the concept of a floating system. I gave him a copy of a draft of a bill with a floating ceiling."

Meier said he proposed tying the floating rate to the monthly rate of 10-year U.S. Treasury bonds and notes. The average interest rate of the 10-year bond or note would be added to 3 "points" to obtain the monthly mortgage loan interest limit in Texas. If the note average was 8 percent, plus 3 points, the maximum allowable interest would be 11 percent.

Meier said there would be a 12 percent "cap" or maximum.

"Rep. Donaldson and I feel this is a comfortable approach that would allow us to move forward in this area," Meier told reporters.

Donaldson said "we talked generally and assessed the crisis. We gave him our input and agreed to stay close in contact."

Overcharges Alleged To Oil Firms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government Wednesday accused seven major oil companies of overcharging their customers nearly $1.7 billion during a 5½-year period and said the money should be refunded.

The Energy Department proposed orders to make the oil companies return the alleged crude oil overcharges, either to customers or to the federal treasury.

Paul Bloom, special Energy Department counsel for compliance, said no charges of criminal activity were involved.

The companies were accused of violating federal price controls on crude oil, mainly by incorrectly classifying oil into categories that would allow it to be sold at higher prices.

Some Alleged Earlier

Bloom said the total of nearly $1.7 billion in overcharges included about $500 million previously alleged as possible overcharges. He said the $500 million is now included in the new enforcement actions seeking refunds from the companies.

He said the proposed orders seek refunds totalling $888,328,889 from Texaco; $577,959,477 from Gulf Oil; $101,618,243 from Standard Oil of California; $42,023,718 from Atlantic Richfield; $29,063,516 from Marathon Oil; $24,139,927 from Standard Oil of Indiana; and $16,969,403 from Standard Oil of Ohio.

A spokeswoman for Gulf, Dorothy Brown, said her company "categorically denies it has violated Department of Energy regulations concerning prices obtained for domestic crude oil and that as a result any purchaser was overcharged."

Contest Vowed

Gulf said the allegations were an outgrowth of "complex and vague pricing regulations" and vowed to "vigorously contest these allegations."

Texaco spokesman Mike McDermott said Texaco "believes that it has acted properly." He said the Energy Department allegations "represent a further attempt by the department to retroactively interpret and enforce ambiguous regulations."

A Marathon Oil spokesman commented that the overcharging allegation was "completely untrue." Spokesman Bill Ryder said his company would "vigorously oppose" any refund order.

Standard Oil of California said it has abided by the Energy Deparment's rules and regulations, but could not comment specifically because it had not seen the proposed order.

Inadequate Opportunity

Standard Oil of Indiana issued a statement saying company officials had not yet seen the proposed order and could not comment specifically. But the statement said the Energy Department has given the company inadequate opportunity to explain its pricing actions.

Standard Oil of Ohio also had no comment.

Bloom told a news conference that legal representatives of all seven companies were notified of the proposed orders by telephone Tuesday afternoon and had received copies of the proposed orders Wednesday morning in Washington.

Bloom said some 67 enforcement actions had previously been taken, alleging a total of some $2.3 billion in overcharges for crude oil.

Total Climbs

Since about $500 million of the $1.7 billion in Wednesday's proposed orders was included in the earlier actions, the total of alleged overcharges now has climbed to about $3.5 billion, Bloom said.

The allegations have stemmed from audits of the major refiners to check their compliance with federal price regulations from August, 1973 through March, 1979.

Bloom said most of the alleged pricing violations involved incorrect designation of oil producing property in which oil that should have been classified as "old" oil was sold as new oil at a higher price.

He said other violations involved classification of some oil as having come from so-called "stripper wells" — low production wells that are exempt from federal price ceilings.

Boundaries Cited

The Energy Department said some of the companies redrew boundaries of their oil fields in order to increase the amount of oil that could be classified as "new oil" — that produced from wells placed in operation after 1972.

Production added to an oil field after 1972 can be sold at the "new" oil price of $13 per barrel, while "old" oil is limited under price controls to $6 per barrel.

The oil companies have 40 days to file objections to the allegations and seek agency review. If unsatisfied with that review, they can eventually take the cases into federal court.

If overcharges are confirmed, the Energy Department wants the money refunded directly to customers whose claims can be identified.

Electric Rate Authority Bill Passes House rate cases and prevent local citizens from having input in rate cases.

("The key point is the fact that any time an element of control is taken away from elected officials, people lose their voice," McAlister said.

("A board or commission is much more abstract than people they (citizens) vote on every four years," he said.

(Lubbockites have no access to PUC members because "the people in Lubbock didn't put them there," McAlister said .

(Amendments to the bill which would require local hearings on rate cases and allow cities to intervene in rates cases before the PUC with their costs of hiring experts and attorneys paid by the electric companies are designed to "pacify" critics of the bill, McAlister said.

(The amendments "sound real good and sound good politically," Cunningham said, but added "it's not a practical way — it's not rate regulation by local jurisdictions. We'll be having to do everything 400 miles away.

("Instead of talking to the people who know about the situation," he said. "There's not any way cities can spend that kind of time and cities don't have that kind of staff."

(Cunningham said the legislation "penalizes" cities which did a good job regulating rates because some cities have "not done the job adequately."

(Currently, cities which don't have the desire or expertise to regulate rates can turn that authority over to the PUC, he said.

("I don't see any good in it for Lubbock," McAlister said. "The whole concept is bad."

(However, if the bill must become law, McAlister said he would like it amended to allow citizens of Texas cities to vote on a local option basis whether their electric rates should be set by city councils or by the PUC.

("If we've got to have the bill, I'd like at least the local option to let the people decide," he said.

(Because municipally-owned electric companies like Lubbock Power and Light wouldn't be affected by the bill, it is unknown exactly what effect PUC control would have on the rates of competing Southwestern Public Service.

(Traditionally, the rates charged by the two companies have been the same.

City's Recruitment Policies Defended

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

City personnel representatives Wednesday night defended local minority recruitment efforts for fire fighters and police officers, despite sharp criticism from Human Relations Commission members about the lack of minority candidates for the departments.

Personnel director Tom Witt and assistant Rita Harmon responded to complaints from commission members ranging from the lack of minority officers in East Lubbock to the lack of promotions given the few minorities now in office.

"We go above and beyond any efforts to recruit minorities," Mrs. Harmon said, noting the personnel department since the beginning of this year advertised in all Lubbock newspapers, received public service announcement time on radio and television stations and recruited in predominately minority junior colleges in Texas and New Mexico in order to find new applicants.

Officers Man Booth

"We do considerably more (for the police and fire departments) than we usually do for other departments," she said. "This weekend, for example, we will have a booth at the (South Plains) mall, staffed by the minority officers we have, which will dispense general information."

Mrs. Harmon and Witt explained testing procedures used in both departments, saying that the test used for police candidates is one which was developed through a $600,000 grant to the Texas Law Enforcement Agency.

Commission members strongly disagreed with Mrs. Harmon's explanation that "applicant number one must be rejected or accepted before looking at applicant number two," indicating that things in other cities are being done to combat this procedure without violating state laws.

HRC ad hoc advisory committee member Harold Chatman stressed the importance of promotions for minority officers, saying children may look at minority officers who have not been promoted and say "maybe there is not the chance for me to better myself if I join."

Seniority Plan Hit

One major disadvantage to the promotion procedure, HRC members said, is that extra points are awarded officers with seniority who take a promotional exam. This adversely affects young and minority officers, members said.

The personnel officers both acknowledged the problems surrounding minority recruiting, and agreed to work with HRC on solutions.

"Our gains have been very slow," Mrs. Harmon admitted.

In other business, commission members heard Criminal District Attorney John Montford report that "approximately 90 percent of the juries and panels since January 1 have had minority persons."

"We have found, very pleasantly, that we encourage minority participation," Montford said. "There is no policy in my office and there never will be regarding minority exclusion."

Montford further said his office has been "very encouraged by minority participation and that if there is a problem in terms of percentages it may be in voter registration."

Montford said his office has found, however, an excessive amount of intimidation against minority witnesses and an unwillingness to get involved.

"We find this problem occuring weekly," Montford said, "and any help from the commission would be greatly appreciated from me and my staff."

Motor Home Used To Haul Stolen Loot

Burglars filled a motor home parked in a Lubbock warehouse with 1,676 gallons of expensive herbicide, and then drove off with $94,000 in stolen goods.

The stolen herbicide retails for $60 per gallon.

"There's a big market in the field for this herbicide," said Charles Robertson, owner of the warehouse. "Whoever took this could sell it to any farmer in West Texas."

The burglars entered the steel building by slicing a hole in the south side with a cutting torch, police said.

Then they stripped a 23-foot motor home parked in the warehouse of all furnishings. The home, valued at $15,000, belonged to Robertson.

After emptying the motor home, the burglars stuffed it with herbicides stored in the warehouse. The stolen herbicide, valued at $79,000, is used to kill Johnson grass and other weeds in cotton fields.

Missing from the warehouse Wednesday were 319 five-gallon cans of Roundup herbicide, 36 one-gallon jugs of Roundup, and 10 five-gallon cans of Prowl herbicide.

Police are searching for the 1977 GMC motor home, which is believed to be damaged on both sides. When the home was driven out of the warehouse, it hit one side of the exit frame, and a 30-gallon drum, police said.

Robertson estimated that it would have taken two men between one and two hours to unload the motor home, and then load it with the herbicide.

He told police the burglary occurred between 5:15 p.m. Tuesday and 7:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Short's Bill

board member Clint Formby of Hereford.

"I would prefer that the matter be handled through the administration," Formby said. If the board got involved at all, he added, it only should be after hearing the administration's recommendation.

Short said he introduced the bill because he was concerned with the conduct of Iranian students in Beverly Hills, Calif., and the threatened demonstrations by Iranians in Lubbock when the son of the shah of Iran lived here.

"These continuous threats to people and property by foreign students who are in our country to acquire an education can no longer be tolerated in our society," Short said.

Davis Trial Move Seen

FORT WORTH (AP) — Prosecutors say they want to move the murder-for-hire trial of Fort Worth industrialist Cullen Davis out of Tarrant County because of what they called influences that favor the defendant and danger to the lives of witnesses.

Lead prosecutor Jack Strickland, who filed a motion for a change of venue this week, said having the trial in Tarrant County would "jeopardize the lives of witnesses..."

$1-Day Prison Bill Advances

AUSTIN (AP) — House members reversed themselves Wednesday and voted preliminary approval to a bill authorizing wages of up to $1 a day for state prison inmates.

The bill advanced, 81-53. Final passage is expected later this week. That would send it to the Senate for further action.

An earlier version of the bill that made a $1-a-day wage mandatory for prison labor was defeated Monday, 69-59. The House voted Wednesday to reconsider.

The version approved Wednesday authorizes payment of up to $1, with the director of the state prison system to decide how much to pay.

Also in the revised bill is a provision setting aside half a prisoner's wages for restitution of victims of the crime for which he was imprisoned.

Rep. Bob Maloney, R-Dallas, said putting earnings in a prisoner's pocket would give him "a little bit of dignity. ... It's the one thing that separates him from a beast of burden."

Park Acquisitions Policy Threatened

of" the land dedicated to the city, Alford said, adding the half-dozen playa lakes which don't belong to the city are "weed-infested dumpgrounds" which are health and safety hazards.

Bertram said the legislation may be in response to cities which require developers to pay the city in lieu of dedicating land if the city has no need for park land at certain locations.

However, the bill would "throw the baby out with the bath water" when in comes to Lubbock's ordinance, Bertram said.

Developers are telling legislators the required dedications are a "great burden," Bertram said, but "like other development expenses, those costs are passed onto the home buyers."

With the "Proposition 13 mentality" in most cities now, Bertram said the legislation "for all practical purposes would send Lubbock's park land acquisition down the tube."

"Because of the tough squeeze on tax funds, we may have to start doing without neighborhood parks," he said. When parks compete for funds with the health department, steets or water and sewer, Bertam said some people will consider the parks "not necessary and something we can do without."

Intention To End Trade Probems Proclaimed By Carter, Ohira

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira agreed Wednesday to move decisively to resolve "contentious bilateral economic issues" which have threatened relations between the two nations.

In almost three hours of meetings during Ohira's official visit here, Carter expressed deep concern over the inability of the two nations to reach agreement on ways to end Japan's persistent trade surplus.

Henry Owen, an economic adviser to Carter, said the president expressed hope that the major issue in dispute could be resolved before the economic summit set for Tokyo next month.

That issue centers on Japan's refusal to permit foreign suppliers to bid for some $600 million annually in Japanese government procurement contracts. Most of the equipment involves highly sophisticated technology in which U.S. suppliers are believed to be competitive.

The two governments had hoped to resolve the dispute last week to ensure that Ohira's visit here would be a success. But the United States rejected what Japan described as a final offer and Ohira said Japan would make "no more concessions."

But Owen disclosed that the talks resumed here Tuesday at the sub-cabinet level.

Associate Press Secretary Jerrold Schecter said Carter and Ohira had "instructed their negotiators to continue their discussions diligently about the few remaining issues and to setle them in a mutually acceptable fahion." Japan apparently aquiesced to American pressure to resume the talks quickly. Last week, after the two sides had engaged in acrimonious exchanges about the procurement issue, Ohira had recommended a "cooling-off period" before the talks resumed.

A communique issued by the two leaders said "joint action to establish a new and stronger basis for economic cooperation will enhance the well-being of their peoples and promote widening trade.

"It will make it possible to remove contentious bilateral economic issues from the forefront of their relations and to mount cooperative efforts to resolve problems common to their societies."

Ohira and Carter had met before when Carter was governor of Georgia but it was their first meeting since both became heads of government. After a 20-minute welcoming ceremony on the White House south lawn, the two leaders had morning and afternoon meetings, devoting most of their time to economic issues. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke said it would be a mistake to assume that the conflict over trade has affected other areas of the two countries' relationship.

Holbrooke told reporters that, on global security issues, the two countries are in greater agreement than at any time in recent memory.

Japan's trade surplus with the United States was $12 billion for the year ending March 31, prompting calls in the U.S. Congress for measures to restrict Japanese access to American markets.

In the joint communique, Ohira pledged that Japan will continue its efforts to reduce its surplus with the United States and other countries by increasing domestic demand and to open its markets to manufactured goods.

Carter, in turn, promised efforts to reduce the U.S. trade deficit through policies aimed at reducing inflation, restraining oil imports and the promotion of U.S. exports.

The two leaders also agreed that accomplishment of these goals will require several years. The communique said a "small group of distinguished persons" from private life will be chosen in other countries to offer advice to their respective governments on ways to maintain healthy economic relations. Owen said the objective of the series of measures agreed to is to "take the economic issue out of the day-to-day traffic" in relations between the two countries.

Through "broad agreements," he said, Japan and the United States will be able to "stop bugging each other about details."

Pork, Bison Served At White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter hosted the White House's first rooftop pig and buffalo roast Wednesday in honor of visiting Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira.

On a balmy evening, the president, wearing a tuxedo, met Ohira at the mansion's front door and took him upstairs for an informal chat before making their entrance at the banquet.

Six suckling pigs, a 124-pound hind quarter of buffalo and an untold number of chickens were put on the fire at 7 a.m. Wednesday, more than 12 hours before the dinner.

The sauce for the barbecue was made by Ambassador and Mrs. Robert Strauss of Texas, and additional barbecue sauce was imported from Carter's home state of Georgia.

The meat was roasted behind tall potted ficus trees carted in for the occasion. The trees divided the makeshift barbecue pit from the round tables decorated with bright green cloths for the 180 guests, seated not far from the new solar heating panels on the roof.

Chef Henry Haller appeared on the roof above the press room in late afternoon to show reporters a preview of the meat and his avocado pear stuffed with seafood, which will be served on a plate centered with a rose.

Gretchen Posten, White House social secretary, explained that Rosalynn Carter wanted to serve three meats because that is a traditional Southern barbecue.

"Because of the prime minister's keen interest in a truly American type dinner, the Carters have chosen barbecued meats as the focal point for the state dinner," according to a statement from the first lady's office.

After the outdoor dinner on the so-called West Terrace, the guests were to go inside to the East Room for entertainment by pianist Bobby Short. The guests included actor Peter Falk and Bill Rodgers, winner of the Boston Marathon.

Rosalynn Asks Attitude Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rosalynn Carter declared Wednesday that as a grandmother, "I am not ready to sit down and rock," and urged society to change its attitude toward the elderly.

In a speech to the Linen Supply Association, Mrs. Carter said the elderly "have so much to offer. They are a great resource for the country."

Mrs. Carter told the group of about 1,000 persons at a Washington hotel that she tossed out her prepared speech because it was boring, and spoke instead about life at the White House.

She announced that she'd decided to take 11-year-old daughter Amy to Switzerland and Italy on Saturday. That came as a surprise to at least one member of the audience — Mary Hoyt, Mrs. Carter's press secretary.

After the speech, Mrs. Carter returned to the White House and placed a conference telephone call to a third grade class at Mimosa school in Rosslyn, Ga.

She told the class she decided on Tuesday night to take Amy on the trip because there will be testing in her public school and she will not miss any classes.

President Carter will be traveling in California this weekend when Mrs. Carter and Amy embark on the week-long journey. Mrs. Carter will address the World Health Organization in Geneva and have an audience with Pope John Paul II in Rome.

Mrs. Carter also said Amy is taking a calligraphy course and has developed a new interest in the appearance of her school papers. The first lady recommended such a course to any parents in the audience whose children may not hold neatness in high esteem.

In her speech at a Washington hotel, Mrs. Carter said she is enjoying White House life and the opportunities it presents immensely, and repeated an oft-stated line that she is very proud of her husband and thinks he's a "great president."

In the conference call to Georgia Mrs. Carer answered questions from the third graders, including Michelle Brannon, the granddaughter of President Carter's Aunt Sissy.

She told the children the Carter family uses china from Woodrow Wilson's administration each night, but rotates use of service plates among all the presidential china.

Asked whether she'd like to change places with anyone else, Mrs. Carter replied that though she's enjoying her life, "at times I would like to just wander around and have a picnic in the park. But I don't have the privacy to do that."

Meter Maid Enforces 'Honor System'

PERRY, Fla. (UPI) — Meter maid Lena Murphy has written a lot of tickets in the last 11 years, which wouldn't be strange if this rural north Florida town had parking meters.

Mrs. Murphy, 57, enforces the "honor system" implemented several years ago when the City Council lopped the tops off the town's parking meters at the request of downtown merchants.

To replace the meters, city fathers put up signs limiting parking to two hours.

While many motorists try to ignore the time limit, few succeed without being slapped by a 50-cent fine, courtesy of Mrs. Murphy.

"You'd be surprised how many of them run rather than pay the 50 cents," she said. "Then there are others that will just pay rather than walk a bit."

Her vigilance has become a source of revenue for the town, according to Joe Yarbrough, city council president and a near victim of Mrs. Murphy's pad and pen.

"I jumped into the car and was off before she could get over to me," Yarbrough said.

"She brings in about $30 to $50 a month," Yarbrough said, but added her presence is more valuable to Perry's downtown merchants.

"She knows everybody by name. The merchants are interested in keeping the spaces in front of their stores clear. She helps."

'Counter-Revolutionaries' Draw Blame In Iranian Assassination

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini blamed "corrupt and treacherous people" Wednesday for the assassination of one of Iran's top Islamic leaders and declared terrorists will "have to assassinate the whole nation" to stop his revolution.

Jail inmates held parts of a downtown jail overnight and exchanged gunfire briefly with militiamen, but late Wednesday Tehran's revolutionary committee said the disturbance had been quelled.

In a state radio broadcast, Khomeini, the Shiite patriarch who led the revolution to topple Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, told the killers of Ayatollah Morteza Motahari:

"The whole program of Islam from the beginning to now has been based on the principle of brave martyrdom. With these martyrs we just become more determined in our fight against corruption and imperialism," he said.

Iran's provisional government said Thursday would be a day of national mourning for Motahari, a member of the revolutionary regime's secret ruling politburo and the second prominent member official to be assassinated within nine days.

Motahari, reputed to be among the 20 most influential of Iran's approximately 100 Shiite Moslem ayatollahs, was shot in the head Tuesday night as he left a dinner party in Tehran. He died early Wednesday in Torfeh Hospital.

State radio said shops and businesses were closed Wednesday in the holy city of Qom and thousands of people mourning Motahari's death marched to Khomeini's residence there. The broadcast blamed the slaying on "counter-revolutionaries."

An anonymous telephone caller told the newspaper Ayendegan the assassination was the work of Forghan, the secret organization that claimed to have killed Gen. Mohammad Vali Gharani, the first post-revolution army chief of staff, on April 23.

The caller said the two killings "are the first step in proving our point." He said Forghan's next victims will be senior government officials and other revolutionary council members.

According to the caller, Motahari was head of the Islamic Revolutionary Council, which Khomeini set up as the supreme power in the country.

The official Pars news agency said only that he was a member of the council, whose membership has been a closely guarded secret, and did not explain his rank.

The council supervises the Islamic revolutionary courts that have ordered the executions of 164 persons after quick trials in which defendants had no attorneys.

Forghan reportedly was formed about 18 months ago, and little is known about it. The name can mean either "holy book" or "distinction between truth and falsehood."

It appears to be opposed to the religious domination of the revolution and after Gen. Gharani's assassination accused him of cooperating with the "mullahs' dictatorship."

No injuries were reported and, a short time after the shooting halted, a busload of prisoners, escorted by an armed convoy, sped out of the jail compound.

Revolutionary officials said a group of troublesome inmates, including a number of drug addicts, were moved to nearby Qasr Prison to separate them from their previous inmates and to begin treatment.

Several walls inside the prison were destroyed in the disturbances, the officials said, and they blamed the fighting on rebel "elements" whom they declined to further identify.

It was unknown if any of the prisoners moved were among the exiled shah's SAVAK secret police agents reported to be held at the jail.

Tech's Seminar On Energy Crisis Wide Ranging

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Although lenders are cautious about financing solar homes, underground homes and other unconventional housing, preliminary results from a Texas Tech survey show Lubbock lending institutions are willing to finance such projects.

Speakers at Wednesday afternoon's portion of the two-day seminar "Coping with the West Texas Energy Crisis" said lenders use caution in making such loans because of the uncertainity of resale value and the uncertainty of the cost of maintenance and repair of such homes.

Susan Mason, a research assistant in the home economics department at Tech, said Lubbock lending institutions approved six loans for solar homes in 1977 and four loans for innovative housing, including underground and dome-type homes.

Dr. William Gustafson, a Tech professor involved in the survey, said lenders themselves are willing to finance such homes but that appraisers have difficulty in assessing the homes.

Meanwhile, those with conventional homes faced with rising utility costs can get tips on energy conservation from Jane Cohen of the Texas Energy Extension Service in Lubbock.

Mrs. Cohen said her office helps individuals interpret information on weatherstripping, insulation, ventilation, air leakage, efficient appliance use and other home energy matters.

While consumers know the energy crisis on a personal basis of rising utility bills, those in the energy industry and government are working on long-term solutions to the problems.

John Poerner, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates the state's oil and gas production, said heavy reliance on imported oil has reached the point that every 12 minutes the United States spends $1 million on imported oil — a total of $2 billion per month.

Other energy statistics affecting the complexity of the energy crisis include the prediction that by the year 2,000 the country will be using one-third of its energy supply in producing energy.

Poerner said coal mining does concern environmentalists and that the Three Mile Island incident has frightened many Americans about nuclear power. But, he said, by 1985 the nation is expected to obtain 70 percent of its electricity from coal and nuclear power.

"Nuclear power will continue to generate controversy, but it will also continue to generate power," he said.

He said the chance of a person being killed in a nuclear accident is one in 300 million — the same risk as being hit by a meteor. Poerner said the risk of dying in a car crash is 75,000 times greater.

Poerner discussed several energy resources, including geothermal and solar, and the rising interest in diesel-engine cars. But, he noted, "We can't be totally dependent on any single source."

One of the principal suppliers of energy to the West Texas-Panhandle area is Southwestern Public Service Company, which serves 290,000 customers.

Company spokesman Ed Weber said "Maybe it will go away" are the five most dangerous words for consumers to think about the energy situation.

"Unless changes are made soon you're going to wind up paying more for less and that scares us to death because we're not at the top of the Hit Parade now," he said.

The changes Weber referred to are government regulations which he said are forcing the utility companies to pass along the rising cost of enforcing such regulations. This, he said, raises utility companies' costs, which are in turn passed along to customers.

Weber said increased government reporting by the industry will cost his company's users an additional $35 per year.

Bob Mills of Pioneer Natural Gas Company echoed Weber's comments on government regulations, calling interpretation of them confusing and warning that penalizing profits kills incentive to solve energy problems.

Because of congressional controls, Mills said, his company will have to pass along at least a 10 percent increase in costs annually.

Mills said solar, geothermal and other energy sources are "a long way" from being fully developed and that the short-term source of energy until that time remains with oil, gas and coal — all of which are growing more expensive to produce.

Compromises between environmentalists and industry will be essential in solving energy problems, he said.

Ed Thompson, executive vice president of Permian Basin Petroleum Association in Midland, discussed what he called President Carter's "non-energy policy."

Thompson blasted Department of Energy officials for their credentials, saying, "There ain't nobody there that knows nothin' about the oil and gas industry."

He said a person undergoing a hospital operation expects to be seen by a surgeon, and that DOE should be run by oil and gas experts but is not because of fear of conflict of interest charges.

Thompson also blasted the Environmental Protection Agency, saying again that the organization is unfamiliar with the oil and gas industry.

The EPA recently issued a list of hazardous wastes from oilfields and included drilling mud and oil production brine, he said.

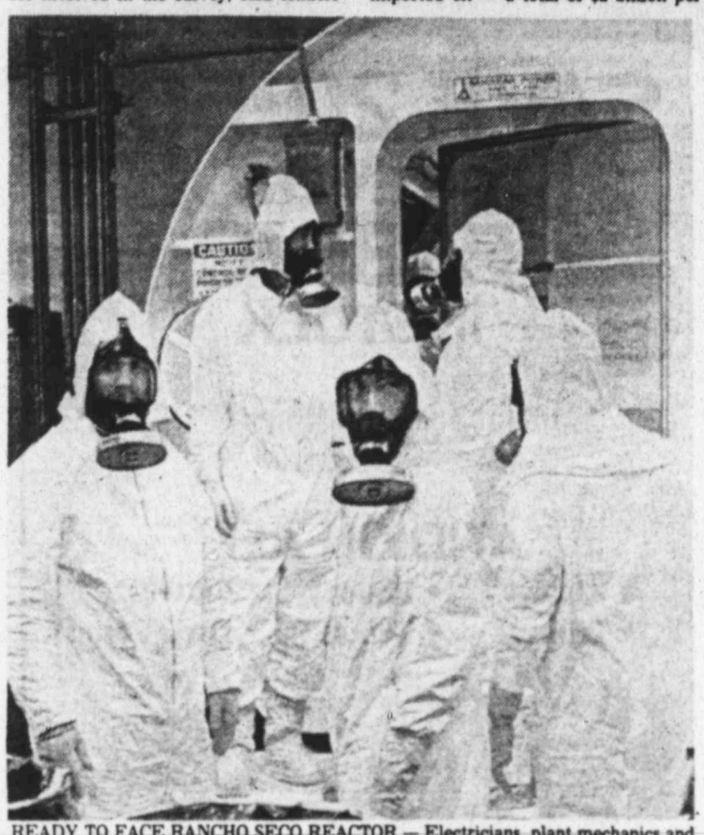

When Thompson's company president was asked to comment on the list, Thompson said he replied, "Of course it will kill you. But we don't hire idiots in the oilfields who will eat drilling mud or drink brine."

Thompson said oil industry leaders have asked Carter at least eight times for a meeting "to explain to a peanut farmer why the country can't run on hot air or peanut oil" but Thompson said Carter refused because the oil industry is a biased segment of the population.

"In other words, 'Don't confuse me with the facts,'" Thompson said of the refusal.

W.I. "Butch" Parker of Exxon Corporation said his company projects that by 1990 one-fourth of domestic oil must come from reserves yet to be discovered, yet oil companies have been less successfull than originally expected in finding new oil.

Synthetic oil is being researched, but Parker said it will not be commercially available for several years and that by 1990 it will supply only 1 percent of the United States' energy supply. Over 50 percent of the nation's oil is now imported, he said, and with the uncertainty of price on imported oil it is important to provide incentives for domestic oil production and exploration.

READY TO FACE RANCHO SECO REACTOR — Electricians, plant mechanics and health technicians, wearing breathing gear and protective clothing, entered an air lock, Tuesday, leading to the reactor at Sacramento's Rancho Seco Nuclear Power Facility, shut down last week by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. Britain Considers Soviet Citizens' Asylum Request

LONDON (AP) — The Home Office said Wednesday it was considering the requests of a Soviet journalist and an interpreter with a folk dance troupe to stay in Britain.

The two were identified as Alexander Istomin, 31, a trainee with the Novosti news agency, and Miss Galina Orionova, 32, an interpreter with the touring Soviet Folk Dance Group.

Istomin reportedly walked into a London police station April 13 and asked for political asylum. Miss Orionova reportedly slipped away from the dance group Monday at London's Heathrow Airport.

Tech Students To Rodeo Today

Members of the Texas Tech Rodeo Association will compete in the last southwest regional intercollegiate rodeo of the season today through Saturday at New Mexico Junior College at Hobbs.

Buddy Reynolds, who competes in bareback and saddle bronc riding for the Texas Tech team, will go into the rodeo ranked first in the nation in bareback riding and in sixth place as All-Around Cowboy.

Reynolds also is ranked as All-Around Cowboy of the southwest region and will compete in the National Intercollegiate finals in August.

At West Texas College in Snyder last week Reynolds took third place in bareback riding. Danny Mason claimed first place in bull riding.

The scores held the Texas Tech men's team in third place, but the team must be ranked second in the region after this weekend's rodeo to go to the finals as a team.

Texas Tech's womens team dropped out of the top regional rankings after the Snyder rodeo, with Gina Burns placing third in goat tying and Candy Middleton taking fifth in breakaway roping.

Interconnect Negotiations 'Compatible'

Negotiations that began Wednesday between Southwestern Public Service Co. and City of Lubbock officials about a possible interconnect between SPS and Lubbock Power and Light were "very compatible," Carroll McDonald, LP&L director of sales and service said.

"They told us exactly what they'd do and what we'd pay (for power), which would be in line with what other wholesale power customers pay," McDonald said.

The meeting was closed to the news media, but negotiators were expected to discuss the possibility of SPS' supplying 50 megawatts of power to LP&L.

McDonald said the cost for an interconnect would be higher than he previously had estimated, and that cost will determine whether LP&L can afford such an interconnect.

Earlier estimates ranged from $1.4 million if LP&L interconnected with SPS near the city's Holly Avenue Plant to $3.5 million if the connection were made near SPS' Jones Station six miles away.

However, following Wednesday's meeting, McDonald said the Holly Avenue interconnection was discarded as impractical and said his cost estimates had risen about $500,000.

"We've got to do some projections on the cost to see if we can do it," McDonald said.

The LP&L Study Committee recommended that the city-owned utility be interconnected with another power company at the "earliest possible date," and the Electric Utilities Board reluctantly concurred.

The Lubbock City Council formally authorized the start of negotiations at its April 12 meeting.

Studies have indicated that LP&L needs an additional source of power before 1982 to meet demands for electricity, and the study committee and utility board recommended an interconnect pending construction of another generating plant.

'Gators Eager Eaters At Houston's Zoo

HOUSTON (UPI) — Zookeepers Wednesday fed the first meal in eight months to the 25 alligators at the Houston Zoo. The reptiles, ranging from a few inches to 12 feet in length, consumed about 150 pounds of fish in 15 minutes.

"A crowd of 600 or 700 persons gathered out there to watch," said zoo spokesman Barbara Dillingham. "They (the alligators) ate 150 pounds of fish in about 15 minutes. Snap. Snap. Snap.

"They'll get fed 150 pounds a week from now until September, when they go back in hibernation. They spend about four months wandering around the pond and about eight months at the bottom, not eating.

"If you feed them while they're hibernating, the food rots in their stomachs and they die, so we don't feed them," Mrs. Dillingham said. "They're conscious but their metabolism slows down so much."

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: Several months ago I had a mild heart attack. It resulted in small damage to the lower left side of the heart. Besides daily medication of Isordil, Nitro-Bid and Inderal, I must go walking every day for exercise. Can you tell me why I don't have to carry nitroglycerine tablets (the kind you put under your tongue). My doctor says I don't need them. Yet everyone with heart problems that I know tells me it is a must with them. Will you please explain? — Mrs. O.K.

Sublingual (under-the-tongue) pills are for people who report heart difficulties from normal activity (angina pectoris). The Isordil (isosorbide) relaxes the smooth muscles in the arteries. Your Nitro-Bid is a form of nitroglycerine. It has the same effect but is longer acting. Inderal propranolol decreases blood pressure and heart rate. If these are working for you, you probably don't need the other kind. Angina is unpredictable, though. Some doctors give sublingual pills to all patients with this problem as a little insurance against an attack. Patients often carry the pills for years and never need them. But the pills are dated and do lose potency with time, so they have to be replenished even if not used.

Your exercise, within limits, is helpful after a heart attack. See my booklet on angina. Send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Six months ago I underwent breast surgery for cancer. It was discovered early. The lymph nodes under the arm were negative for cancer. I did not require chemotherapy. I am now 46.

My periods are somewhat irregular, such as two periods in one month. Others are always early. I have had two D and C's in the past. My doctor will not give me any hormones for menopause. He suggests a hysterectomy, since I would be getting rid of another major cancer site. I am also anemic and am taking a high potency iron supplement. What are you comments? — Mrs. A.J.

The negative report regarding the lymph nodes is good news. It means you have a good chance of complete cure from the surgery. Your doctor is following standard practice by not giving you hormones, which are not advised for a person with a history of breast cancer.

The vaginal bleeding is a matter of concern, however. It is probably causing your anemia (loss of blood that is not being replaced). The D and C's (scraping of the womb) have not helped, apparently. This fact by itself might warrant the hysterectomy (removal of your uterus) so long as the bleeding cannot be brought under control. The uterus, as your doctor said, is another site for cancer. Since at your age you probably do not contemplate more children, the resulting sterility is not a concern. You appear to be a likely candidate for the hysterectomy.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I need to know if this is a serious problem to be checked by a doctor. I am only 37 years old. I have many tiny, bright red blood spots underneath the top layer of skin. They never surface or break. My skin isn't over-dry or itchy. I've had them for a long time. Please advise. — Mrs. D.S.

Red spots have to be examined to see if this is actually bleeding under the skin. Yours sound very much like bleeding from a very low blood platelet count. Platelets are the blood's chief clotting substance. You should be examined to find the cause. Sometimes blood vessels become fragile and will bleed easily with certain illnesses or drugs.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Can ear noises be caused by a tumor of the brain? I can't get this idea out of my husband's head. — J.S.

The likelihood of ear noises being caused by a brain tumor is very remote. There are so many varied causes of this common disturbance that a brain tumor would be one of the last considerations unless your husband had other, more disturbing symptoms than ear ringing or buzzing. Perhaps only a visit to a doctor will get this idea out of your husband's head. It might even get at the root of the ear symptoms.

Are you bothered with ringing in the ears? If so, write to Dr. Ruble, P. O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 6161l, for his booklet, "Ear Noises — Their Causes and Cures." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

When you use weak two bids in rubber bridge it is very good general practice to make sure that you have a good suit. In match point duplicate the same rule should apply but you can afford to relax it if the spirit moves you.

Today's weak two bid would result in tragedy for North and South at either game.

Left to themselves East and West would probably have wound up in a part score. Three notrump can be made but it might go down and is not a good contract.

West had no bid over the two-spade opening but East could afford to make a takeout double and did just that whereupon West converted it to a penalty double by passing.

Clubs were opened and continued. South took the second club and lost the heart finesse. East promptly led his singleton trump. Eventually South did make two trump tricks and three outside aces.

The game was rubber bridge and East-West scored 500 for the penalty plus 100 honors for a nice plus of 600.

South explained that he had saved the rubber for a mere 600.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: The price of gasoline might be $1 a gallon by the time this letter hits print. Will you please print a message that many American car-owners would appreciate?

"Dear Passenger: I don't mind picking you up and taking you to work — and driving you home. Nor do I mind having you come along when I do my marketing, go to a meeting, church services or a social event. You seem to enjoy my company and I enjoy yours — but you should realize that a car does not run on love.

"It would be nice if you'd offer to fill the tank once in a while — or pay for parking — or put your hand in your pocket or purse when we approach a toll bridge.

"If you think two can ride as cheaply as one — try it. I'm paying a higher rate of insurance because you ride with me. This is to protect me in case you decide to sue if I have an accident.

"Aside from installing a meter in my car, is there any way I can convey to you, my friendly passenger, that it would be nice to be handed a few dollars now and then? A box of candy at Christmas doesn't do it." — Your Free Livery Service

Dear Liv: I've received many letters from people who tell me they read my column aloud to the car pool on the way to work. Today's would be a dandy. If you get me in the evening paper, bring it along and hand it to one of your passengers to read aloud the following morning. Or — mail the column to your friendly ride-alongs with a note saying, "Good idea..." or something equally unsubtle. Some folks need to be hit right between the eyes. Under certain circumstances, I see nothing wrong with doing it.

Dear Ann Landers: Our good friend (we'll call her Pat) is 13 years old. She has this problem of wetting her pants whenever she gets to laughing hard. We have never said anything to her about it because we don't want to embarrass the girl, but she has ruined several chairs and sofas and some carpeting.

What causes this sort of thing to happen and what can be done about it? — Friends Who Want To Help

Dear Friends: In "The Ann Landers Encyclopedia," there is a chapter called, 'Laughter and Wet Pants.' It was written by a distinguished urologist, Russell Roth, of Erie, Penn. He points out that this embarrassing thing often happens to women who have had a number of children when the musculature in that area has broken down. In younger girls, it's usually because they drink great quantities of liquids and then get too busy to "go." Women who have this problem should see a urologist. Often a few stitches (done in a doctor's office) will solve the problem. In Pat's case, a doctor might emphasize the importance of changing her bladder habits.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: My mother never told me anything about sex and there's no one I can ask. So, Ann, will you please tell me the time of the month a girl can have intercourse without getting pregnant? It's time I found out. — Sweet 16

Dear 16: If a girl's menstrual periods are irregular, there is NO safe time. I hope you will look up Planned Parenthood or Family Service in the phone book and make an appointment for some counseling.

• • •

Confused about what's right and what's wrong in today's "new morality"? You're not alone. If you want honest, down-to earth information on your sex questions, read Ann Landers' new booklet, "High School Sex and How to Deal With It — A Guide for Teens and Their Parents." Send 50 cents plus a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Hints from Heloise

HI THERE:

If you are starting out on your own, moving into your own apartment and feeling free as a bird, just maybe you don't know how to sort your clothes for washing.

In the long run, you are much better off if you take the time to sort clothes very carefully.

Put all whites and lights, such as bedding in pastel prints or stripes with white background, underwear, towels, etc. in one washload. White permanent press and man-made fabrics have a tendency to pick up the least little bit of color that's left in the water so it's best to wash them separately.

Delicate fabrics such as knits, sheers, etc. should be washed separately and require gentle agitation.

Mix your wash load. By that I mean a couple of sheets with pillow cases, underwear, T-shirts. The clothes must have room to move around in order to get clean.

Always launder heavily soiled clothes together because if you mix them with just slightly soiled garments the latter will come out of the wash looking dingy.

Close all zippers and hooks to prevent their snagging other articles. Remove all pins, ornaments of any kind, and belts.

Whatever you do, check pockets and remove tissues or any papers from pockets because wet paper is hard to remove from fabric.

If you follow these rules, your laundry should turn out real pretty. Have a good day. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I am writing to thank you for something I had read in your column a long time ago. Your article said to keep several boxes of baking soda in your kitchen because it is good for grease fires.

I was broiling a steak when the grease caught on fire and flames started shooting out of my broiler-oven. I was stunned for a minute but then I remembered baking soda for smothering flames. I opened a box and threw the soda in the oven all over the broiler pan.

It worked!! Thanks to your article the fire was put out and no damage done. — Ann Selowitz

I'm happy you remembered in time to avoid any damage being done. Thanks for letting us know. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When mixing salad dressing or anything that is likely to spatter with my electric mixer, I slip a large brown paper bag (with the bottom out out) over the mixer and bowl.

This eliminates spatters getting on the counter and me. All that fly-away stuff is on the inside of the little brown bag. — Ollie B. Saffer

DEAR HELOISE:

When you put on a shirt or blouse, pull it together in the front with your hands — then button it.

If you pull it together by grabbing the buttons, that's when you pull the buttons off — get the picture? — Mercedes Carter

You know, I never thought of it that way, but you certainly are right! — Heloise

Symposium To Focus On White-Collar Crime

Businessmen looking for ways to minimize problems with white-collar crime may profit from the Business Crimes Symposium today in Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

The event, which will be held in separate morning and afternoon sessions, coincides with the kickoff this week of Operation Identification, a countywide effort planned by the Lubbock County Crime Prevention Council to reduce home burglaries.

The symposium is being co-sponsored by the LCCPC, the Better Business Bureau of the South Plains, the Chamber of Commerce and the Retail Merchants Association.

The morning session is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and the afternoon session from 1:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tickets are $10 for each session.

Mal Cleland, Better Business Bureau director and president of the LCCPC, said there will be plenty of tickets available at the door.

Frank Abagnale Jr., a former con artist and master forger who passed $2.5 million in bad checks in six countries before being caught, will be the guest speaker.

Abagnale now assists vulnerable businesses, both big and small, in halting white-collar crime.

Meanwhile, Mayor Dirk West Wednesday declared May Crime Prevention Month.

New Maxey Trial Result Of Ruling

The Texas Supreme Court has denied a rehearing of applications for writs of error in the case of Homer G. Maxey, a former Lubbock millionaire now living in Dallas, against a Lubbock bank.

The effect of the ruling is that the case definitely will be retried in a Lubbock County district court.

The high court in March upheld an appellate court reversal of the $2 million judgment Maxey won against the old Citizens National Bank (CNB) and remanded the case back for trial at the district court level.

Both parties had filed applications — Maxey for the Supreme Court to award a judgment of about $5 million, including interest since the case was filed in 1966, and the bank for a judgment that no damages be awarded against it.

Maxey attorney Harold Hammett of Fort Worth said today that the case probably will be retried — for the third time — in 72nd District Court this September.

The case turns on whether or not CNB disposed of Maxey's properties for an adequate price after a Feb. 16, 1966, foreclosure.

Fathers Of Tech Grads May Get Diplomas

Many fathers of 1979 Texas Tech graduates will be eligible for special diplomas at the same time commencement exercises are conducted by colleges of the university, May 12, according to James D. Eppler, president-elect of the Texas Tech Dads Association.

A father is eligible if he has a son or daughter graduating, is a life member of the Texas Tech Dads Association, is a four-year member of the association, or has paid annual membership dues during the past four years.

Members who meet the requirements, according to James G. Allen, executive director of the association, may contact the Texas Tech Dads Association at 742-3630, for their diplomas.

"It would seem only right," Allen said, "that when his son or daughter gets a diploma at the end of four years of study, Dad should also get a diploma certifying that for the past four years he has supported a student at Texas Tech and the Dads Association as a dues paying member."

Qualifying members are invited to visit the office of the Dads Association, Room 164, Administration Building, on commencement day to pick up their diplomas.

Lubbockite Unharmed In Belly Landing

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — A Lubbock pilot, Eugene Skalanker, walked away unharmed from a belly landing at the Big Spring Airport Wednesday morning.

According to Big Spring Fire Marshall Jim Ryals, the plane's alarm system failed to warn Skalanker that his landing gear was not down.

Big Spring police and fire officials arrived on the scene after the plane belly landed and skidded down the runway about 250 feet.

The amount of damage to the craft, a single-engine plane, has not been determined.

Musical Set Friday In Plains

PLAINS (Special) — The Tsa Mo Ga Club is presenting a musical extravaganza, featuring songs from the 1900s to today's disco music, at 8 p.m. Friday in the Plains High School auditorium.

The musical, directed by Mrs. Bob Blundell, will feature performances by members of the club and area citizens.

Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children 12 and under.

Advice On Countering Drug Use Offered

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In order to battle the effect on children of the "tremendous commercialization of the drug culture" in this country, school counselors and parents must confront their kids with hard-hitting, relevant information, according to a Georgia drug education expert.

Dr. Marsha Schuchard told Lubbock public school counselors Wednesday that they must inform youngsters about areas of marijuana and drug research that "kids can relate to in their own experience.

"You must have a good peg to hang an argument on," said Dr. Schuchard, who has participated in several university and federal drug education programs.

She said that parents and educators have been fighting a losing battle against marijuana use by their children "because we don't know enough about it. And when we lose it on marijuana, we lose it on drinking and smoking too."

Marijuana smoking "has been such a normalized behavior for kids," she said, "and this situation has developed rapidly in the last few years, particularly in the junior highs.

"Parents and counselors need to recognize that from the sixth grade on, there is pressure to smoke pot as well as drink and smoke cigarettes," she said.

The drug educator said that a large part of the problem of fighting drug abuse by school children is that the introduction of drugs in their lives "comes in a form that's not frightening." Pushers are no longer the dirty old men in raincoats. Children can get it (drugs) from their friends and parents who are users too. They can get involved in a fun, non-frightening manner," she said.

Dr. Schuchard said that children enter the drug scene often "in complete innocence."

She displayed various advertising gimmicks and pot smoking paraphernalia sold in stores that she said glamorize the use of drugs. Included were a Christmas stocking filled with pot and hashish-smoking paraphernalia, a plastic space gun that releases smoke in large puffs and a game that she said "shows children how to be school-yard dealers."

She said that the rock music so popular with children is "increasingly oriented toward blatant drug propaganda. The message is coming all the time to the children. It becomes a fun, attractive kind of culture for kids."

She said that statistics released by the National Institute on Drug Abuse reveal that six out of 10 high school seniors have tried pot by their senior year. She added that one of nine are smoking every day.

"This means that one of nine are stoned 365 days a year," said Dr. Schuchard.

She encouraged parents and schools to "set up a cooperative relationship to work together" to fight drug abuse in schools.

"Counselors must diffuse the hostility and defensiveness of kids by letting them know we care about them," she said.

Dr. Schuchard said that findings by different research labs in the nation that may make children listen to parents and counselors include:

— Marijuana smoke causes damage to lungs. She said that it's been found that one joint "does as much damage as a pack of cigarettes." The active chemicals in marijuana are absorbed into the lung cells and subsequently lead to respiratory problems.

— Regular use of marijuana leads to the depression of some hormones, especially testosterone, which is a male hormone. She said that research labs have issued warnings to adolescent boys concerning the dangers of regular marijuana usage.

She said the possible damage to testosterone, "the strengthening and energizing hormone" can be frightening to young boys "because of the overriding sexual vanity of senior high and junior high boys."

Dr. Schuchard will give a presentation at 7:30 p.m. today in Lubbock High Auditorium which will be open to the public free of charge.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Daytime is fine for planning to increase the scope of your activities both in personal and career life. Make sure you organize your efforts toward this worthwhile goal. Compliment others now to get their best cooperation.

ARIES (Mar.21 to Apr. 19) Plan how to become more proficient at your talents and gain more benefits therefrom. Set up recreational activities for the near future. Good day to put across a business deal.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan how to make the situation at home more enviable and show that you are most devoted to kin. Study a new project that could bring you greater benefits.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Talk over with allies your finest aims and how best to gain them. Also a good time to pay visits, whether to trade or with close ties.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Elevate your consciousness so that you can attain greater wealth in the future. Sit down with a monetary expert and get good advice, ideas.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) If you expend more effort you can realize personal aims more easily now. Get in touch with good friends and plan recreation you like together.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept.22) Plan how to handle a specific problem in a clever way. Listen to what an expert has to suggest. Avoid whoever is apt to get you into some kind of an argument.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Know what your most innate desires are and plan how to go after them successfully. Make plans now for social gatherings you want to have in the near future. Avoid the tendency to exaggerate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact bigwigs for the support you need in civic matters and get the right results. Improve career affairs also. Become interested in a hobby that will hold your interest and relax you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan how to expand in your career work. Don't limit youself so much. Study a new method that could prove to be good for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get at those tasks ahead of you and they are soon behind you. Show you can be efficient when you want to be. Try to be more encouraging with loved one and get better results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You now understand better what partners want of you and can coordinate efforts very well. A situation arises that can give you more prestige if you handle it wisely.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make sure your surroundings are more comfortable and charming and add art pieces that are distinctive. Show coworkers you appreciate their cooperation and get more of it.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...he or she will do very well at public, government work and should have the education slanted along such lines. Be certain to praise your progeny for any exceptional work done and raise the incentive. A fascinating chart here, even fame.

Parent-Artists Assist Volunteer Program

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Their works may never be featured in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, but a team of creative volunteers in one city elementary school has found enthusiastic patrons in the teachers and students they serve.

These community volunteers participate in monthly Special Projects Day sessions at Parsons Elementary School where they assist teachers and counselors in completing arts and crafts projects for use in the classrooms.

The volunteers, made up mostly of parents of school-age children, drop in anytime during the loosely structured 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. workshop once a month to tackle the ample supply of projects that have been collected for the day's work.

Since November, when the special day was initiated, some six to eight volunteers per session have completed more than 90 projects. Assistants — some with formal art training and some without — perform tasks from the simplest cutting and pasting to the more difficult drawing.

According to Beverly Moreland, coordinator of the Parsons School Volunteer Program, the demand for the artistic assistants by school personnel will probably necessitate two workshops each month during the next school year.

The projects day is just one of the services of Lubbock's School Volunteer Program which serves 13 of the city's 38 elementary schools. The program has established eight job categories in which any citizen may aid a teachers who has requested assistance.

About 300 volunteers currently assist teachers as clerical, arts and crafts, classroom, library and supervision assistants; as language arts, reading and mathematics tutors; and as special course instructors.

The Special Projects Day, which is unique to Parsons, was initiated as an alternative to having arts and crafts assistants for various teachers. According to Mrs. Moreland, the supply of volunteers willing to work specific hours as arts and crafts aides did not meet the demand at the school and so a more flexible program was established in that area.

The projects day allows anyone who cannot volunteer on a regular basis to drop in on the session at their convenience. The special day has especially been a boon to working parents who can come in when their schedule permits. Many of the volunteers even give up all or part of their off days to assist in the projects.

Sally Ramirez is one such career parent who works every morning in a daycare center and then shifts her attention to the projects day in the afternoon. She is, in fact, coordinator of the special day and is responsible for gathering the games, posters and teaching aids to be cut, pasted, drawn and laminated.

Yet Mrs. Ramirez insists she has plenty of time to get everything done in the different areas of her life. "It doesn't bother me because I enjoy it," she said. "I was also new here last year and it was a good way to get involved."

An added attraction of the flexible program for Mrs. Ramirez and other parents is that they can bring along their preschool children and thus eliminate the need for a babysitter.

Another ardent supporter of the projects program is Parsons parent Carolyn Harding who is able, through the program set-up to give her time as it is available. She is especially thrilled with the opportunity to get a grasp of what's happening in her child's life at school.

"We learn a great deal about what's going on," said Mrs. Harding. "The school is so large, but by helping in this way, it makes it seem smaller. It makes us feel a part of the school."

Both she and volunteer Jennifer Burdette said that in their children's eyes, they are a welcome addition to their schoolday.

Slide Road Zoning Decision Set Today

Planning and Zoning Commission is expected to reach a verdict today on whether light commercial development should be permitted east of Slide Road between 54th and 62nd Street. The property is now zoned for single family residences.

Homeowners in the area want no changes in the zoning or the Land Use Plan regarding the neighborhood, but other property owners have asked the commission to consider some other uses for the property.

Because of the property's proximity to South Plains Mall across Slide Road, speculative buying has been rampant in anticipation that the land eventually will be zoned for commercial development.

However, requests for zone changes on the property repeatedly have been denied by the commission.

Commissioners are expected to examine two alternatives at their meeting.

First, to leave the zoning and Land Use Plan as it is or, to consider allowing light commercial and/or offices along Slide Road, buffered from the single family dwellings by duplexes.

Also at the commission meeting at 7 p.m. in city council chambers, the panel is expected to consider allowing grocery stores of any size in local retail (C-2) zoning districts. Currently only grocery stores up to 35,000 square feet in size are permitted in C-2 districts.

The commission also will consider amending the zoning ordinance to require Zoning Board of Adjustment approval for garden centers in a general retail (C-3) zoning district and to require alley paving any time there is alley access to a home or development.

Zone requests to be decided by the commission are:

—C.A. Henson to change property north of 37th Street and west of Avenue P from multi-family (R-3) to commercial (C-4) to allow a wholesale furniture and office building.

—Superior Steel Buildings for Bob Montgomery to change property east of Avenue H and south of 22nd Street from C-4 to C-4 Specific Use to permit miniwarehouses.

—Danny D. McLarty, for B.R. Griffin, to change property south of 46th Stteet and east of Avenue A from two family (R-2) to light manufacturing (M-1).

—Dennis Olson for Hollis Cogburn to change property north of 50th Street and east of Avenue A from R-2 to M-1.

—Maxine Bray for C.B. Bray Estate to change property north of Harvard Street and west of Clovis Road from C-3 to C-4 to allow construction of an automobile repair shop.

Volunteer Revives Talent In Wood

Last year, because of simple boredom and an ad in a school newspaper, Dick Kilroy awakened a dormant talent that has kept him busy ever since.

The advertisement was for school volunteers and Kilroy turned to woodworking to answer that request.

He is now a member of the School Volunteer Program at Parsons Elementary School whose teachers keep him constantly busy with orders for custom-made wooden toys and puzzles.

The popularity of his simple clean designs has grown through word of mouth mostly, and he currently fills orders for several city daycare centers as well.

Kilroy's newfound occupation was born of boredom because of his inability to pursue a regular daily job. His work on a rescue squad in Potsdam, N.Y., where he "lifted too many stretchers," resulted in total disability from an injured back.

After moving to Lubbock last summer, he noticed an advertisement for community volunteers in the public schools, and dug out his woodworking tools to create samples he would later show to the teachers at Parsons. The orders for his work have never stopped since.

Kilroy said that other than shop class in school, he has never had formal woodworking training. He is from a family of carpenters, but his education was in accounting. In fact, he has pursued several occupations throughout his life.

The popular woodworker makes 11 different types of wooden trucks and a number of wooden puzzles. He either designs his creations himself or copies them from patterns in magazines. His wife Carol adds a finishing touch to some of the puzzles with her painting talents.

Although the cost of his toys in time alone might normally be high — he can work only three to four hours at a time due to his disability — Kilroy charges the schools only the expense of his supplies.

Rise Of Dollar, Fall Of Yen May Encourage American Tourists

TOKYO (AP) — Six months ago, when tourists were getting 172 yen for an American dollar, the price of a meal for four in a Tokyo hotel came to the equivalent of $308. Thanks to the present recovery of the American currency, that same meal now would cost $238.74.

The interbank trading rate of the dollar Wednesday hit a record high for the year at 225.80 yen, or just about the same value as in late May last year. Tourists at banks and hotels were getting 222.20 yen per dollar.

An American travel agent in Tokyo predicted that the decline in the value of the yen will bring back many of the American tourists who struck Japan off their travel list because of this country's notoriously high prices.

"The strong dollar will definitely make a difference," said Joe Grace, formerly of Brockton, Mass., the manager of Tokyo's Travel Center.

He said the higher dollar also will have a beneficial effect on the sales of airline tickets in Japan, which for the past several years have been calculated in high yen.

Tourists this summer will find some solace in the decrease in the dollar equivalent of a ticket on Japan's super-express bullet train from Tokyo to the ancient capital of Kyoto. Last fall, the second class fare was $105 while this spring the price is a little more than $81.

A first class hotel room in Tokyo cost $20 less Wednesday than last October, but coffee that cost more than $2 last fall still commands $1.50 per cup — with no free refills. And Americans craving the taste of California oranges will have to pay $1.13 per orange at Tokyo supermarkets.

Last year, neighboring South Korea for the first time reported a greater number of tourists than did Japan. Travel agents attributed the decrease in Japan's tourism to a combination of high prices and adverse currency exchange rates.

Businessmen in Tokyo had mixed reactions to the 28 percent increase in the value of the dollar. Spokesmen for the export-oriented Japanese automobile industry are optimistic, but others fear that a cheaper yen will cause a sudden increase in the cost of Japan's imports.

A spokesman for a leading automobile exporter said, "We are already worried about the success of our cars in the U.S. market this March." The share imported cars hold in the U.S. car market topped the 22 percent mark that month.

"We are afraid that Japan will again be accused of flooding the U.S. market with cheap imports," he said. The spokesman said his firm had no plans to cut retail prices of its cars in the United States, but he agreed that the stronger dollar will result in windfall profits.

A steel industry source said Japanese exports to the United States should rise as a result of the dollar's gain. "The trigger price is set at 196 yen and that ought to give a 30 yen (14 cents) profit on the dollar for exporters," said the source, who asked that his name not be used.

One American businessman in Tokyo, however, complained that fluctuating currency values had been disruptive for his business. The man, who previously made most of his money exporting Japanese products, started to import American products to Japan last year.

"I had a nice balance going until the dollar started to soar last month," he said.

Financial experts in Tokyo have attributed the rise of the dollar to psychological factors. One banker said, "We are experiencing the same thing this year with the dollar that we saw last year with the yen." President Carter put an end to speculation on the American dollar in part by getting the central banks of Japan, West Germany and Switzerland to cooperate by buying dollars and raising its price in order to discourage speculators.

Recently, however, the Japanese central bank has been selling dollars in an attempt to prevent the American currency from rising too fast. Japanese government economists are said to be worried that the rising dollar will mean higher oil prices for Japanese buyers. Japan imports 98 percent of its petroleum, which is purchased in dollars. High import prices are said to be behind the recent double-digit rise in the wholesale price index.

Aspirin Aids Monkey Veins, Says Scientist

CHICAGO (UPI) — An aspirin a day may help keep arteries and blood vessels open and prevent heart attacks and strokes, a Michael Reese Hospital researcher reports.

Preliminary experiments on monkeys show that a substance in aspirin makes blood platelets slippery and prevents buildups that clog arteries and can lead to heart attacks and strokes, Dr. Ruth Pick said.

"It would be nice to be able to prevent heart attacks and strokes by taking an aspirin a day from childhood," the research scientist said. "But we are not there yet."

Earlier studies have shown that daily use of aspirin by heart attack or stroke victims can reduce the chances of a recurrence. However, Dr. Pick's work — published in the Journal of Clinical Investigation — is the first to hint that daily doses of aspirin can prevent the initial onset of the problems.

In the research, 11 cynomolgus monkeys were fed a high holesterol diet usually associated with artery-narrowing plaques. Five of the monkeys were given an orange-flavored child's aspirin each day.

Six months later, an examination showed the coronary arteries in the hearts of those monkeys not given daily aspirin were about twice as narrow as those of the monkeys that were on the aspirin diet.

Dr. Pick said the aspirin prevented blood platelets from building up and choking off blood vessels.

Plaque that forms on blood vessel walls normally attracts platelets from the circulating blood. Many platelets amassed on the plaque can form a thrombus, which can clog the blood vessel and cut off the flow of oxygen to tissue below the clog.

When the starved tissue is heart muscle, the result is a heart attack. When it is brain tissue, the result is a stroke.

Dr. Pick said she plans research to determine the best daily dosage of aspirin. Blood platelets, she said, become slippery only when the correct amount of aspirin is taken. Also, overdosage in some patients can result in stomach upset, or even stomach bleeding.

Dr. Pick further speculated that, because of aspirin's ability to enlarge constricted blood vessels, cigarette smokers may be well advised to take the drug to reduce the possibility of heart problems.

She said it will be difficult for any one researcher to see the results of a comprehensive human study on the use of aspirin as a deterrent to heart attack or stroke because such a study would demand following an entire generation, preferably a family with a history of heart problems.

No Recession Seen Yet, Official Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nothing has happened yet in the economy to indicate a recession is imminent, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said Wednesday. "For the time being, none of the statistics indicate we're headed for anything but a slowdown, not a recession," Blumenthal told a group of Michigan Democrats.

Blumenthal pledged the Carter administration will never fight inflation by purposely causing a recession and high unmployment, which he called "the Republican solution."

"It is not the goal of our policy; We don't think our policy will cause it," he said.

Blumenthal said the economy is now in the fifth year of its recovery from the last recession, which he said is almost an unprecedented length of time without another recession.

U.S. Dollar Posts Strong Gains In Money Markets

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. dollar continued mostly firmer in foreign exchange trading Wednesday and hit a second consecutive high for the year against the Japanese yen in Tokyo.

Gold prices were mixed, rising in Zurich to $246.875 a Troy ounce from $245.375 Monday while remaining unchanged at $246.75 for the third straight day in London, Europe's other major market.

In Tokyo, the dollar peaked at a 1979 high of 225.80 yen. But after central bank intervention it subsided to close at 224.65 yen, up from 223.775 yen Tuesday.

The dollar has risen about 28 percent in Tokyo from its record postwar low of 176.05 yen last Oct. 31 and has regained its status of about 11 months ago. Dealers say selling pressure on the yen has been spurred by several negative reports about the Japanese economy.

In New York, the dollar closed at 225.08 yen, up from 224.78 yen Tuesday.

The dollar drew general strength from indications that the Federal Reserve was tightening monetary policy by raising interest rates, an anti-inflationary move welcomed by dollar traders. "The dollar continues to benefit from the tighter monetary policy," said a New York dealer.

European dealers said that after the May Day holiday in many capitals the dollar was starting to benefit from better-than-expected American foreign trade figures announced just before the weekend.

Paris — 4.3690 French francs (4.37475-Monday)

Amsterdam — 2.0605 guilders (2.0585 Tuesday)

Milan — 847.05 lire (846.45-Monday)

The American currency turned in a weak performance against the British pound, however. The pound rose in London to wind up at $2.06735, compared to $2.061 the day before. In New York, the pound closed at $2.0685, up from $2.0615. Analysts said there is much hesitancy in trading in the pound pending the outcome of this week's general elections in Great Britain.

French francs — 4.3700, down from 4.3713.

Canadian dollar — 0.8713, down from 0.8760.

The Canadian dollar fell sharply in late trading on news that the government of Quebec will proceed with legislation that would permit it to expropriate Asbestos Corp. of Montreal, 55 percent of which is owned by General Dynamics Corp. of St. Louis.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. You have explained that interest, dividends, rents and other "investment income" cannot be put into an Individual Retirement Account (IRA). Isn't there any way a housewife who is not employed as a wage earner can use an IRA or some other investment plan, so that part of her income from interest and dividends can be tax-free until her retirement years?

It seems so unfair that housewives with their own income cannot partake in tax-free pension plans, as wage earners can. My husband is a wage earner and has a pension plan with his company. Why shouldn't I be able to set up my own pension plan?

A. I agree that it's unfair. But, under the present income tax rules, there's no way you — and millions of other American wives — can set up an IRA or any other tax-sheltered retirement plan.

The Internal Revenue Code is explicit on this. Money that goes into an IRA must come from what the Internal Revenue Service calls "earned income" — wages, salaries, tips, commissions and such. Investment income — what the IRS calls "unearned income" — does not qualify.

If you took a part-time job not covered by a qualified retirement plan, you could put 15 percent of that "earned income" — up to $1,500 a year — into an IRA. You would not pay income tax on the money you put in or on the money your IRA earns until you start withdrawing after retirement time.

• • •

Q. Until recently, I reinvested the dividends paid on a stock I own to buy more shares through that company's dividend reinvestment program. I have now cancelled the reinvestments and am receiving the dividends by check every three months.

The bank which administers the reinvestment program has sent me a stock certificate for the shares I acquired by reinvesting. For record purposes, how do I calculate my cost of those shares?

A. From the statements the bank sent to you. Each time you reinvested a dividend, the bank sent you a "confirmation statement," showing the number of full and fractional shares your dividend purchased.

You should have saved all those confirmation statements. They are the records of your costs. You'll need that information, if you ever sell the stock, so that you can figure your capital gain or capital loss for tax purposes.

If you didn't keep those statements, write to the bank and ask for a complete record of your dividend reinvestment account. Then, put that information and your stock certificates in a secure place, such as a safe deposit box. That's where securities and confirmation statements belong — in the lockbox.

• • •

Q. You answered a question from a 26-year-old unemployed female who received money in settlement of a lawsuit. Having too much money can be a problem. But I think not having a job is far worse. I would like to offer that individual an opportunity for employment. Is it too much to ask you to send me her name and address or telephone number?

A. Indeed it is. This column never puts one reader in touch with others. All letters are kept in strict confidence.

• • •

Q. Where can I get information about "U.S. Retirement Plan Bonds," which I understand are ideal investments for "Keogh" plans for the self-employed?

A. You can get the details by reading a U.S. Treasury Department circular — Public Debt Series No. 1-63. For the same information on "U.S. Individual Retirement Bonds" — for IRA accounts — the circular is No. 1-75.

Those circulars are available from the Bureau of the Public Debt, 200 Third St., Parkersburg, West Va., 26101.

But, where did you get the notion those bonds are "ideal." They pay low interest and have all kinds of complications. There are many better Keogh and IRA investments available.

Major Battle For Woolworth Goes To Court

NEW YORK (AP) — The merger fight involving two Canadian companies and F.W. Woolworth Co. moved toward more legal entanglements Wednesday amid a new round of acrimonious charges and counter-charges.

Brascan Ltd., a Toronto company seeking to buy Woolworth for $1.1 billion in cash, promised to do battle on two fronts in the wake of continued opposition from the management of its target Woolworth and a new challenge from Edper Equities Ltd.

Edper, which is bitterly opposed to the Woolworth deal, purchased 6.8 million shares of Brascan stock on the open market earlier this week, increasing its ownership of Brascan from about 5 percent to 31 percent. It said it will force a special shareholders meeting of Brascan on the Woolworth question if the management didn't back off.

But Brascan Chairman J.H. Moore said the company "intends to vigorously pursue" its Woolworth bid and announced that Brascan had obtained a temporary restraining order preventing Edper from completing the purchase of shares bought this week on the American Stock Exchange. A hearing on a preliminary injunction was scheduled for Thursday in U.S. Distict Court.

A spokesman for Edper said the company would have no comment until it had seen complaints filed in the suit against it and received the injunction.

Brascan is a Toronto-based company which recently sold its major holding, a Brazilian utility, for about $380 million. It is a widely diversified company with interests in oil, gas, insurance and brewing.

Edper, an investment company largely owned by members of the Bronfman family of the Seagram liquor empire, last month made two attempts to bid $28 a share for close to 12 million shares, or enough to give it more than 50 percent of the voting power. Brascan's management has resisted those offers saying it was more in the company's interest to expand by acquiring Woolworth than itself be acquired by Edper.

Late April Votes Of Area Congressmen Recorded

By Roll Call Report

HOUSE

LOTTERY DEVICES The House passed, 269 for and 121 against, a bill enabling U.S. manufacturers to sell lottery materials such as instant-winner tickets and bingo cards in foreign countries. The bill (HR 1301) was sent to the Senate.

Rep. George Danielson, D-Calif., a supporter, said: "Pass this law and create a few more jobs for American workers. Add a little bit to our own side of the balance of payments and raise some more taxes to help meet our budget deficit."

Rep. Carlos Moorhead, R-Calif., an opponent, said passage of the bill "would place Congress in the posture of encouraging the development and expansion of the lottery services industry throughout the U.S."

Reps. Charles Wilson, D-2, Jim Mattox, D-5, and J. Marvin Leath, D-11, did not vote.

UNITED NATIONS The House rejected, 187 for and 214 against, an attempt to eliminate the $41 million "technical assistance" contribution the U.S. is scheduled to make to the United Nations in fiscal 1980. Technical assistance programs, to be distinguished from the U.N.'s peacekeeping function, mostly benefit Third World countries. The vote came during debate on HR 3363, a State Department spending bill later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. John Rousselot, R-Calif., said "the American people need relief from the mandatory assessments" for technical assistance...an 'international income tax' designed to redistribute the world's wealth."

Rep. Edward Derwinski, R-Ill., an opponent, said: "This amendment would not shave anybody's taxes. It would not work to the advantage of the American taxpayer. It will impede us and embarrass us and weaken our leadership at the U.N."

Members voting "yea" wanted to eliminate the U.S. contribution to the United Nations for "technical assistance" programs.

Mattox and Leath did not vote.

SENATE

SHIPS FOR IRAN The Senate rejected, 26 for and 62 against, an amendment to eliminate budget authority for destroyers which the shah of Iran ordered several years ago from a U.S. shipbuilder. The new Iranian government no longer wants the warships, and the Armed Services Committee has called their air defense system "clearly inadequate." The effect of this vote is that budget authority exists for the U.S. Navy to acquire them. At issue are four Spruance-class destroyers under construction at the Ingalls Shipbuilding Division of Litton Industries in Pascagoula, Miss. Total estimated price tag for the four is $1.35 billion. This vote occurred during debate on S Con Res 22, which set congressional spending ceilings through fiscal 1982.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., the sponsor of the amendment, said: "We are going to take these ships off the Iranian government's hands, obsolete though they are for our needs, and we are going to buy them out."

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., an opponent, said that "anyone who has paid attention to evolving Soviet naval doctrine over the past 25 years could come to no conclusion other than that we should avail ourselves of the opportunity to acquire these four (destroyers)."

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D, John Tower, R, and Pete Domenici, R (N.M.),voted "nay."

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R (N.M.), did not vote.

FEDERAL TRAVEL The Senate rejected, 41 for and 44 against, an amendment to reduce fiscal 1980 budget authority by cutting out $500 million earmarked for federal employes' travel, $200 million for filmmaking by federal agencies and $200 million in overtime for federal workers The amendment also sought to reduce the federal work force by one per cent through attrition at a projected fiscal 1980 saving of $200 million. It was proposed to S Con Res 22 (see vote above).

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, the sponsor, said his amendment would cut expenditures on "items considered extravagant by the American taxpayers."

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, an opponent, said the amendment had not been brought up in the Budget Committee, and that he was therefore "not about to just act blindly" and vote for it.

Tower and Domenici voted "yea."

Bentsen voted "nay."

Schmitt did not vote.

CRIME MONEY The Senate rejected, 38 for and 46 against, an amendment to increase the fiscal 1980 authority for the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration from $446 million recommended by the Budget Committee to $546 million. The agency awards grants to and works with state and local law enforcement agencies in hopes of cutting crime. The amendment was proposed to S Cn Res 22 (see votes above).

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., the sponsor, said the agency deserves more money because "in the last five years there has been extraordinary success in the LEAA program."

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., an oponent, said "the program has not reduced crime," and that the agency should not get more money "at a time when it is necessary to exercise federal restraint" over the budget.

Senators voting "nay" were opposed to additional funding authority.

Tower and Domenici voted "nay."

Schmitt did not vote.

Message To Washington

MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON — I am having difficulty with the Philippines government in regard to a single-engine airplane I purchased here in the Philippines. I am a Texan, stationed at Clark Air Base, and I keep the plane here. But in order to fly it, I must have an "Operating Authority" that is predicated on an Airworthiness Certificate and a radio station license. The Philippines Telecommunications Bureau will not issue a radio station license to a foreigner. Therefore, I have an expensive plane that legally cannot be flown in this country. I am hopeful that you can help. Lt. J.O. — Clark Air Base, The Philippines

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — The State Department suggests that you change the registration of the aircraft to the United States. In that way our Federal Communications Commission can license the radio aboard the aircraft. You should first entact the Federal Aviation Administration to make arrangements for transferring the registration. Write to: F.A.A., General Aviation Air Worthiness Branch (AFS 830), 800 Independence Avenue, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20590.

MESSAGE — I am planning a caravan of 25-30 travel trailers to the Guadalupe Mountains National Park thi summer. We will spend two weeks going from Zavalla, Tex., to Las Cruces, N.M., and the park is our midway point. We would like to spend the night in our totally self-contained trailers in a parking lot there at the park. I have written the park director for information, but received no reply. Can you help us get into the park? Thank you. R.A. — Houston

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — The Guadalupe Mountains National Park is still primitive and does not have a parking area adequate for the needs of a group your size. However, park officials advise me that you could park on a gravel road one mile to the south. Water is available at the park itself for filling containers. I am sending along brochures with additional information and a map showing the location of the gravel road. Should you need any additional help, please feel free to call on me again. I hope your trip is an much fun as it sounds.

CHEVY CITATION

Citation goes a long way on a tank of gas. But that's just the start. Citation has the traction of front wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, front disc brakes, and a transverse mounted engine that's cradled in rubber cushioned mountings to reduce engine vibration. Sleek Citation is easy to park, yet big enough for five adults and lots of cargo. See Chevy Citation for yourself. And to really appreciate it, get behind the wheel!

EPA ESTIMATED MPG
CITY ESTIMATE 24
38 HIGHWAY ESTIMATE
With standard 4-cylinder engine and manual transmission.

Remember: Compare the estimated MPG to the "estimated MPG" of other cars. You may get different mileage depending on your speed, trip length, and weather. Your actual mileage will be lower in heavy city traffic, and your actual highway mileage will probably be less than the estimated highway fuel economy, the "estimated MPG" is more likely to reflect actual overall mileage than the "combined estimate".

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
The City of Lubbock, P.O. Box 2000, Lubbock, Texas 79457, Tel. 762-6411 proposes to request the Department of Housing and Urban Development to release federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) to be used for the following project:
Senior Citizens Title VII Nutrition Program-$45,000.00
It has been determined that the request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and, accordingly, the City of Lubbock has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL-91-190).
The reasons for the decision not to prepare a Statement are as follows: (a) overall effects of the projects are beneficial; (b) beneficial effects are long-term and the adverse effects are short term and environmentally insignificant, being related primarily to activities necessary to construct the projects; (c) since the projects will occur at the neighborhood level, the short-term adverse effects will be confined to limited numbers of people; (d) historic and environmentally critical areas will not be affected; (e) no viable alternatives to the projects, including the no-action alternative, exist.
An Environmental Review Record for the projects has been made by the City which documents the environmental review of

Kent State Affair Yields Differing Memories

KENT, Ohio (AP) — It will be nine years Friday since a rifle bullet tore through Dean Kahler's left lung and ripped into his spine.

James W. Farriss was there, too, one of the National Guardsmen who opened fire at Kent State University. But Farriss fired only into the air.

The two men have different impressions of that day — May 4, 1970.

• • •

The bullet that ripped through Dean Kahler made him a symbol of the day when four persons were killed and another nine injured by Ohio National Guardsmen during an anti-war protest.

Kahler is confined to a wheelchair and was a focal point in litigation surrounding the shooting. Other plaintiffs said they settled with the state of Ohio to ensure Kahler would get some compensation for his injuries — $350,000.

That trial, which opened in federal court in Cleveland in December and ended Jan. 4 with the settlement, was the last court case involving the Kent State shootings.

"I will use it to survive," Kahler said of the money. "If the money helps me to live a little longer, then that will be a little longer that I have to understand life around me. I want to live. I want to be an old man."

Kalher lives in Albany, Ohio, with his wife Valerie and works as a consultant for the handicapped on the Industrial Commission of Ohio. He is a 1977 graduate of Kent State with degrees in social studies and secondary education. He was 20 years old and a freshman when he was shot.

BREAK FROM CHORES — Dean Kahler, injured in the Kent State shooting incident, takes a break from gardening at his Albany, Ohio, home to look at flowers gathered by his wife, Valerie. (AP Laserphoto)

Kahler said he went through a "sort of spiritual transformation" shortly after he got out of the hospital.

"Since that time, I have tried my hardest to understand something out of all of it," he said. "And I think that I have changed to where I can forgive."

Even when doctors told him his life might be shortened by as much as 20 years because of his injuries, he said, "I just felt that I could understand. I just want to live as long as I can and I dedicate myself to that every day."

But not everyone involved in the Kent State suit can understand or forgive. "No amount of settlement is enough for me, because there is only one thing that can satisfy me" said Elaine Miller Holstein, of Plainview, N.Y., whose son was killed that day.

"How can I replace my son? The state and the governor can pay their money, but it is little comfort; none really. I guess you could say I've had my faith shaken."

• • •

James W. Farriss admits he was excited when he heard his National Guard unit was going to Kent State. He had never been on a college campus.

He recalls now that when he got to campus he was repelled by the students' obscene gestures and filthy language. As a soldier sent to protect property, he was outraged to see it destroyed.

"It seemed like all the young women were shouting obscenities or giving obscene gestures. I have never seen that before," said Farriss. "I've heard a few men talk like that, but not women."

There were 75 guardsmen beside Farriss on the hill alongside Taylor Hall, according to Guard reports. A 13-second fusillade stilled the din of an anti-war protest.

Because Farriss said he fired two rounds, he was among defendants in the damage suit brought by wounded students and their parents. But he was dismissed as a defendant after attorneys for those filing suit were satisfied he hadn't fired at anyone, only up in the air.

"I saw no necessity in firing straight ahead," he said. He added that when he saw what had happened, he cried.

"Because of my faith, I think I look at things differently," he said recently. "I don't agree with people who think we should have opened up and shot every student in sight. But I also don't think the guardsmen have been given a fair shake in the media.

"It seems like newspapers and television have tried to make the guardsmen out as monsters."

Farriss said that experience has changed his plans about the education of his son and four daughters.

"After that I made up my mind I'd never send my children to Kent State or any state school. I'll send them to a Christian school," said Farriss, who lives on a farm near here.

He left the Army National Guard in 1971 but recently joined the Air National Guard.

"I enjoy the guard," he said. "It's been good to me. In all the years, almost all the memories are good — all except that day at Kent State."

Mississippi Slates Execution Date For Two Convicted Men

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The Mississippi Supreme Court on Wednesday set May 28 as the date for two convicted murderers to die in the gas chamber, but attorneys expected the courts to block the executions.

"It could take a year or longer for these men to exhaust all state and federal appeals," said Marvin White, a special assistant in the state attorney general's office.

The state high court reset the executions of Johnny Lewis Washington and John Buford Irving III after the U.S. Supreme Court last month refused to review their cases. But White said that decision had opened the door for more state and federal court proceedings.

Washington was sentenced to die in the state gas chamber for the March 26, 1977, shooting death of Columbus store owner J.K. Woods. Irving was convicted in the March, 1976, shotgunmurder of Gambrell Ray, during an armed robbery at his store in Pontotoc County.

U.S. Steel Imports Record Drop In First Quarter

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Steel imports dropped about 36 percent in the first quarter compared to the same period of 1978, a drop that has given a boost to U.S. producers and caused steel importers to complain about America's efforts to limit the imports.

According to the Washington-based American Iron and Steel Institute, 3.7 million tons of foreign steel was imported in the first three months. Last year the figure was a record 5.7 million tons. For all of 1978, 21.1 million tons was imported.

"We're pleased that imports are down from the extremely high levels of the last couple of years. But we're not at all clear on the reasons," an AISI spokesman said in a telephone interview after the figures were released.

"Obviously some credit must be given to the trigger price mechanism (TPM). It apparently is screening out some steel that would have been dumped," he said.

"Demand overseas also is getting stronger and it appears that there is not as much pressure as there once was for foreign producers to export since their own markets are getting stronger," the AISI spokesman said.

Kurt Orban, the president of the American Institute for Imported Steel, said the import drop reflects what he called "high U.S. government trigger prices" and tight supply.

Noting that strong domestic demand has U.S. mills running at full tilt, Orban said delivery times for buyers have lengthened dramatically. "The institute believes these delays in steel delivery may cause distortions in the production schedules of American steel users," he said.

TPM sets minimum prices at which foreign steel can be sold here. It was established by the Carter administration last spring to stop the sale of what the government considered to be excessively cheap imports.

The decline in imports, coupled with brisk domestic demand, has helped boost steelmakers' first quarter earnings. Top-ranked U.S. steel earned $42 million in the quarter, compared with a $59 million loss in the same period of 1978. Bethlehem Steel saw its earnings rise from $1.1 million to $59.2 million. Profits in the 1978 period were depressed by the coal strike and bad weather.

The TPM at first drew fire from American steelmakers, who said it was ineffective in 1978. They threatened to file formal dumping charges under the 1974 Trade Act, which would have effectively killed TPM.

Dumping means foreign producers sell their steel here for less than it costs to produce, which is illegal under the trade act. Since most foreign mills are government-owned or get large subsidies, they have been willing to undercut domestic prices in times of slack demand to keep their workers on the job.

Just last December, U.S. Steel chairman David Roderick complained that trigger prices were not being "fully applied and aggressively enforced."

But the latest three-month results apparently have softened his view. At a press conference Tuesday, the head of the nation's largest steel company acknowledged the import decline and said he was "very pleased" about it.

"The trigger price mechanism does appear to be becoming more effective," he said, adding that he believed it still could be strengthened. As for anti-dumping suits, Roderick said U.S. Steel is keeping its cases up to date.

Britain Notes Shrink In Foreign Currency

LONDON (AP) — Great Britain's reserves of foreign currency declined $480 million last month after repayment of more than $1 billion to the International Monetary Fund, the government said Wednesday.

This was the last important financial announcement bearing on the state of the economy prior to today's national elections.

The repayment of $1.004 billion to the fund was the final liquidation of the $3.9 billion borrowed late in 1976 when the pound sterling was under severe pressure.

That the reserves only fell by $480 million last month was an indication of the amount of foreign currency taken in by the Treasury in its bid to keep the pound from rising too fast.

The government said the nation's reserves at the end of April were $21.467 billion.

Hicks Plays Waiting Game With NFL

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

On the whole, Victor Hicks would rather be in Philadelphia.

But the former Estacado High School football standout admits the chances of that wish coming about are one-in-28.

Book has been made on worse odds, though, he said.

On the eve of today's National Football League draft of college grid talent, the three-year starter for the University of Oklahoma was at a Norman, Okla. apartment already starting a wait he hopes will end with a phone call informing him he'd been drafted in one of the first three rounds — by the Eagles.

"Los Angeles, Seattle and Philadelphia have all showed a lot of interest in me," said the only Lubbockite expected to be picked up by the pros. "I know I don't have a choice who'll draft me, but I hope it's Philly."

Then the 6-3, 255-pound Sooner tight end started listing his reasons, why:

"At Philly, they need a tight end. I think I can step right in there and play right off the bat. Plus I used to live there when I was a kid. I like it up there. And on top of that, Philly is going to be a contender in the near future. It is really an ideal situation for me."

But Hicks admitted he might never sniff Philly, or L.A., or Seattle. The way the draft works, he might be in anyone of the other 25 pro football cities.

"I was talking the other night with (former OU All-America Joe) Washington," recalls Hicks, "and he said San Diego never showed him any interest at all. Now looks where he's at...San Diego. So, I guess, anything can happen.

"Whoever wants you the worst is going to get you."

The draft gets underway at 11 a.m. today in New York City. Buffalo picks first as a result of its trade last year of running back O.J. Simpson to the San Francisco and all indications point to Ohio State linebacker Tom Cousineau as the first choice.

Kansas City will follow the Bills, then Cincinnati, Chicago (from Tampa Bay), Buffalo, Baltimore, New York Giants, St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, New Orleans, Cincinnati (from Washington), Cleveland, New York Jets, Green Bay, Minnesota, Atlanta, Seattle, Los Angeles (from Oakland), San Diego, Philadelphia, Denver, Houston, Miami, New England, Los Angeles, Dallas and Pittsburgh.

Hicks says he expects to go no lower than the third round. But he indicated should something happen and he goes in the fifth round or lower then he may spend next year in Canada.

"If they think you're worth having they'll pick you high," said Hicks. "That means they're going to give you a good shot. If somebody doesn't think enough of Victor Hicks to pick him high, I might go to Canada.

"I've got a lot to offer some team," continued Hicks. "That's why I expect to go in the first, second or third rounds. I didn't have the kind of year I expected because I was hurt. But hey, I'm 6-3, 256 and I run a 4.7 in the 40. Plus, I know what to do when I get the football.

"Whoever gets me is going to get a lot. I can do a lot more than block."

Hicks said some scouts hinted he might be moved to a guard position at training camp. Although Hicks that that would be fine, he thinks it would be a bad move on the team's part.

"They'd be wasting a lot of talent," said Hicks. "I know I'll be drafted as a tight end. I just hope they give me a chance to play there. They didn't throw the ball to me a lot at OU, so some of the scouts are wondering if I can catch it. 'I can catch it,' I tell them. I caught five last year and three were for touchdowns."

Hicks, not lacking an iota in the confidence department, then added, "Hey, I've got the ability to be a great one."

Where he gets that chance, will be decided today.

Keeping Up With The Joneses

EVERY YEAR ABOUT this time, Kayla Jones jumps in a car and heads for Austin. It seems like every year; she's done it for the past two springs and will start the 400-mile journey again this morning.

The previous years, she has returned not quite as happy as she had hoped. This time, there could be a change in all that.

Miss Jones, a senior at Cooper High School, went to Austin as a sophomore with little or no fanfare. Last year, she was better known, but today, when the bus pulls out, she will be going as one of the nation's top high school runners, and the spotlight will be on her in UT's Memorial Stadium Friday night.

Last Saturday, in Waco, Miss Jones ran what was believed to be the fifth fastest high school 880-yard dash in the country. She won in 2:13.1 — which would win a few boys' district meets. And, according to Track & Field News, only four schoolgirls had run faster prior to that week.

One of those, however, is in Texas. According to the Interscholastic League, Disa Lewis of Houston Memorial ran 2:12.93 in winning here Class AAAA regional two weeks ago.

But national times and national records?

No sir, not for Kayla this week. That gold medal issued by the UIL is in her mind now. The records will just have to come in connection with the medal.

• • •

AS A SOPHOMORE, Miss Jones ran the half in 2:17.3 for fourth place in the Class AA state meet. Last year, she ran 2:17.6 and moved up to second behind Sandra Brown of Cotulla, now running at Texas A&M.

KAYLA JONES

"The year before (1977), Sandra won it by coming from behind," Miss Jones recalled Wednesday. "Last year, she just took the lead at the start and held it. But, now that she's gone, I'm not going to shoot for the times; I'm just trying to win."

Kayla has been running track since the seventh grade, but she has concentrated

Spurs End 76ers NBA Season

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — George Gervin and Larry Kenon combined for 60 points and Mike Green had 11 fourth-quarter points Wednesday night as the San Antonio Spurs snapped a playoff jinx with a 111-108 victory over Philadelphia in the decisive seventh game of a National Basketball Association Eastern Conference semi-final series.

The victory, which snapped a 10-year playoff losing streak by Dallas-San Antonio pro franchise, sends the Spurs against Washington in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference finals.

Gervin, the NBA's scoring champion, exploded for 33 points and Kenon had 27, 18 of them in the second half.

San Antonio, which had lead by as many as 18 points in the second quarter, lost the lead in the fourth quarter, but tied it at 104-104 with 1:59 remaining when Mark Olberding hit one of two free throws.

Thirty-two seconds later, Gervin converted one of two free throws to put San Antonio ahead by a point.

The skinny, 6-foot-10, 200 pound Green, starting in place of injured San Antonio center Billy Paultz, was then fouled by Philadelphia's Bobby Jones with 1:04 remaining. Green hit both free throws to give the Spurs a three point bulge, 107-104.

After Julius Erving pulled Philadelphia to within a point again, Green banked in a 20-foot jumper to extend San Antonio's lead to 109-106. Gervin put the game out of reach with a pair of free throws with 11 seconds remaining, igniting the sellout crowd of more than 16,000.

Green finished with 20 points.

Philadelphia, which had fought back from a 3-1 San Antonio lead in the best-of-seven series, trailed by nine points, 56-47 at halftime. But the 76ers outscored San Antonio 34-22 in the third quarter and held an 81-78 lead at the end of three periods.

Erving lead the 76ers with 34 points and Maurice Cheeks had 20. Reserve Steve Mix finished with 16, 14 in the second half.

The Spurs had lost in the first round of either the ABA or NBA playoffs since they came to San Antonio in 1973. As the Dallas Chaparrals, the club won its first playoff series in 1968 and had not won since although making the playoffs in 11 of 12 years.

"Hek, I don't know what happened at the end except we had more points," said San Antonio Coach Doug Moe, holding a can of beer in each hand.

Errors Help Cards Beat Astros

By The Associated Press

The St. Louis Cardinals capitalized on a Houston error for two unearned runs in the fifth inning that helped them to a 5-2 victory over the Astros.

John Denny, 2-2, who pitched out of several early jams, was the winner while Astros starter Ken Forsch suffered his first loss this season after three victories.

An error by Astros shortstop Craig Reynolds opened the way for the tying and go-ahead runs for St. Louis. Dane Iorg opened the fifth with a grounder that glanced off Reynolds' glove. After one out, Mike Tyson doubled home a run to tie the score at 2-2. Tyson moved to third on a groundout and dashed home with the deciding run on a single to center by Garry Templeton.

The Astros went quickly in front with a first-inning run, the 13th time in 23 games they have scored in the opening frame. Reynolds drew a one-out walk, was balked to second by Denny and scored on Cesar Cedeno's double. Denny then walked Jose Cruz and Enos Cabell to load the bases, but he got Bob Watson to hit into a double play.

REDS 4, CUBS 1

Mike LaCoss hurled five innings of perfect ball and the Cincinnati Reds' revised lineup backed him with nine hits in a 4-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

LaCoss had a perfect game until he walked Barry Foote at the start of the Cubs' sixth. Ted Sizemore followed with a single, advancing pinch-runner Steve Dillard to third, and Dillard scored on an infield out.

LaCoss, 2-0, allowed three hits in 7 2-3 innings before getting relief help from Doug

TWINS 7, BLUE JAYS 5

Ken Landreaux drove in four runs with a pair of hits and the Minnesota Twins won their fourth straight game with a 7-5 beating of the Toronto Blue Jays.

Landreaux drove in two runs with a single in the third inning and another two runs with a double in the fifth that gave the Twins a 5-4 lead.

Minnesota's Ron Jackson hit a solo homer in the fourth inning as Dave Goltz, 3-3, picked up the victory after surviving a shaky start.

Mike Marshall notched his ninth save when he came in in the eighth inning to relieve Goltz with runners at first and third and nobody out.

Phil Huffman, 2-2, was the loser.

PIRATES 10, BRAVES 2

A pair of two-run homers by Bill Robinson and John Candelaria's pitching keyed the Pittsburgh Pirates to an easy 10-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Candelaria, 1-1, helped himself with his first hit of the season, a two-run double.

Starter Mickey Mahler, 0-2, took the loss.

Robinson's homers, his third and fourth of the season, both were hit with Dave Parker on base. In the first inning, Parker doubled while he reached on a fielder's choice in the fourth.

The Pirates nailed down the lopsided game in the third inning when they scored five runs.

Tim Foli, Parker and Robinson all singled to fill the bases and Lee Lacy scored Foli with a sacrifice fly. After Phil Garner struck out, Rennie Stennett doubled to score Parker and Robinson.

RANGERS 3, ROYALS 2

Al Oliver smashed a 425-foot solo homer to help the Texas Rangers take a rain-soaked 3-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

The Rangers, expected to challenge Kansas City's three-year grip on the American League West, took the first season series between the rivals, 2-1.

Steve Comer, 2-3, scattered eight hits in 7 1-3 innings as a light-to-heavy rain fell steadily throughout the game. Sparky Lyle finished up for the Rangers, gaining his fourth save.

Dennis Leonard, 3-3, who was in trouble constantly during the early innings, was the loser.

Johnny Grubb singled in the Texas first and came around on Buddy Bell's double for a 1-0 Ranger lead and Texas added a run in the fourth on Pat Putnam's double and Bill Sample's sacrifice bunt. Oliver's home run, his third, made it 3-1 in the fifth.

BREWERS 6, INDIANS 1

Gorman Thomas slapped four singles to lead a 14-hit Milwaukee attack and Moose Haas posted his first major league victory in more than a year as the Brewers defeated the Cleveland Indians 6-1.

Haas, 1-1, struck out six, walked three and allowed only five hits in going the distance for his first victory since April 12, 1978. Cleveland starter and loser Wayne Garland, 0-3, was tagged for three runs and eight hits before he was relieved by Dan Spillner with none out in the fourth.

RED SOX 2, A'S 1

Dwight Evans' solo home run in the eighth inning settled a pitching duel between Boston's Mike Torrez and Oakland's Matt Keough, giving the Red Sox a 2-1 victory over the A's.

Torrez, 2-1, threw a four-hitter, but the second A's hit was a homer by Jim Essian that tied the score in the bottom of the seventh. A double play helped him get out of serious trouble after the A's loaded the bases with nobody out in the eighth.

TAKING TO THE BOTTLE—Cleveland Indian manager Jeff Torberg warms his hands with a hot water bottle during Wednesday night's major league game against the Milwaukee Brewers in Cleveland. The Indians have been in the American League cellar all season and there are rumors that Torberg might be fired soon. (AP Laserphoto) on the half for the past three seasons.

"I don't know what would be the main thing," commented Miss Jones. "Endurance, I guess. I do a lot of work on overdistance.

"In my races, I try to sprint the first 110 yards, set the pace, and then sprint the last 110.

"So far, I've been in the lead (in races) and haven't had to come from behind."

• • •

IN THE RACE at Waco last week, a state qualifiers meet with athletes from all classifications, Kayla didn't have to come from behind, leading the entire distance.

Second to her was Tina Lopez of Sweetwater, who will be competing in the Class AAA division at Austin. Miss Lopez finished a full two seconds behind Kayla in the Waco race.

With her credentials, Miss Jones is hoping for more running, although the state meet could be her last competition for this year. Collegiate competition could be in the future.

"I think I'll probably go to Texas Tech and run," she said. "They seem to have a program that is getting pretty good. And they have a two-mile relay that I could run on."

The time at Waco was no fluke, as Kayla had run 2:13.5 in the preliminaries at the regional meet here two weeks ago. She only ran 2:16.1 in the finals and won by a full ten seconds.

"We'll run Friday night," said Miss Davis of Kayla's try at the state Class AA championship in Austin.

Connors Posts WCT Victory

DALLAS (AP) — Hard-pressed Jimmy Connors finally clicked on his radar control backhand Wednesday night to subdue unheralded New Yorker Gene Mayer 6-7, 6-1, 6-4, 6-1 in the quarterfinals of the World Championship of Tennis.

Connors, the number 2 ranked player in the world, will meet stormy John McEnroe in the semifinals Friday night. McEnroe took a straight set victory Tuesday night from John Alexander of Australia.

After Mayer took th first set on a tie-breaker, the first rated Connors took charge and totally dominated the last three sets. Mayer's big serve weakened into double faults and easily returnable second serves.

Mayer, who only qualified for the WCT finals two weeks ago and is best known as a doubles player, pinned Connors to the baseline in the first set with a succession of pin-point backhands.

Lorenzo Field Narrows

LORENZO (Special) — Entry deadline is not until Friday, but pro Dennis Allen has only about 15 more spots open in this weekend's Lorenzo Partnership Golf Tournament.

"We'll probably shut down with about 60 teams," Allen commented, "and we have about 45 already signed up (Wednesday afternoon)."

The two-day meet will be held at Lorenzo Country Club, and entry fee is $60 per team. Deadline for entering is Friday at 3 p.m., or when the field is filled.

Teams will be flighted by lower handicap of team, with championship and first flights to take the course at 2 p.m. both days. Second and third flights will start at 8:30 a.m. All flights will be split after Saturday's round for consolation play.

Chaps Keep Top Ranking

Despite dropping a weekend series to Texas Wesleyan College, Lubbock Christian College remained the top-rated club in the district and the tenth-ranked team in the nation in NAIA circles.

This week's ratings show the Chaparrals in front in Dist. VIII with 31 points, ahead of Dallas Baptist with 27. Paul Quinn is third and University of Dallas fourth. Prairie View, Austin College, TWC, Jarvis Christian and Midwestern followed.

LCC has won the Texas Athletic Conference, and University of Dallas in the central zone champion.

The district tournament will be held in Arlington May 11-13. The field will have the Chaparrals, DBC, Prairie View or Paul Quinn, and University of Dallas.

Nationally, Grand Canyon remains the top-rated club, with Williams Carey (Miss.) second, followed by Davie Lipscomb (Tenn.), Coastal Carolina (S.C.), Southeastern Oklahoma, Birmingham Southern, Francis-Marion (S.C.) Lavern (Calif.), Sam Houston State, and LCC.

NBC Features Bird

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC will broadcast Saturday's game between Detroit and Minnesota, featuring the return of the Tigers' Mark "the Bird" Fidrych, the network announced Wednesday.

The main national game remains Seattle at Boston, but the switch will allow NBC to show the Detroit game to some parts of the country and updates on Fidrych's outing to the rest of the nation.

Fidrych has not pitched in a regular season game since a shoulder ailment sidelined him in April, 1978.

Browns Sign Thompson

CLEVELAND (AP) — Running back Woody Thompson, 26, was signed by the Cleveland Browns Wednesday, a spokesman for the National Football League team announced.

He was the Atlanta Falcons' third round draft choice in 1975 and played three seasons in Atlanta before being released.

The 6-foot-1, 228-pound Thompson, who played college ball at the University of Minnesota, carried the ball 132 times for 478 yards and a 3.6-yard average for Atlanta in 1977, his best pro season.

Kelcher Claims Grid Home

SAN DIEGO (AP) -All-Pro defensive tackle Louie Kelcher says his football future is in San Diego, the site of his walkout from camp in a salary dispute last summer. He has signed a new, long-term contract.

The San Diego Chargers said only that the National Football League team and Kelcher, who was voted the American Conference defensive lineman of the year by the NFL Players Association, agreed to "a series of one-year contracts."

As the Chargers' second-round draft choice out of Southern Methodist in 1975, the 285-pound Kelcher signed a four-year pact. But after being named to the Pro Bowl in 1977, he left training camp briefly, saying he might play out his option in 1979.

"The future looks very good," said Kelcher after the new agreement was announced Wednesday. "I plan to be here a while." He and his agent, Bert Flashnick, "feel we have been justly rewarded," the big tackle added.

Lucas Fights For Life

ATLANTA (AP) — Bill Lucas, the 43-year-old leader of the Atlanta Braves' front office and the highest ranked black executive in major league baseball, remained in critical condition Wednesday after suffering a heart attack and massive brain hemorrhage earlier in the morning.

Dr. Arturo Corso, in a statement released at 1 p.m., 12 hours after Lucas was rushed to Atlanta's South Fulton Hospital, said, "Bill Lucas has suffered a cardiac arrest with massive brain hemorrhage. His condition is very critical and the prognosis is guarded."

Lucas, vice president and director of player personnel for the Braves, has been in a coma since his collapse shortly after midnight after watching Atlanta defeat Pittsburgh 5-2 on television as Phil Niekro won his 200th major league game, according to Braves spokesman Bob Hope.

Isaacs Explains Reasons For 220-Dash Success

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Along with the personal satisfaction that goes along with it, Jerry Isaacs has a couple of other reasons why he enjoys winning the 220-yard dash so much, and so often.

"I got married last June," recalled the Dunbar senior, "and I sure enjoy my wife feeling proud of me everytime I win."

That's reason uno.

"Now I've got a little son," continued Isaacs, "and when I get out of high school I want to have something to show him about what I did."

And that's reason two.

If things go according to Isaacs' plans, the DHS sprinter will have a few more medals to show off to his sibling in a few years. Along with running on the Panther sprint relay team which garnered a state-meet berth, Isaacs will also head to Austin in both the 220 and 100-yard dashes. And he feels his chances of capturing gold in each event is "pretty good."

"I think my best chance (of winning) will come in the 220," said the 5-6, 135-pounder. "I know in the 100 (Estacado sprinter Robert) Humphrey is going to be awfully hard to beat."

A Running Battle

Isaacs and Humphrey have kept a running battle going all season in the 100. However, up until this point Isaacs has come out on the short end, beating Humphrey only once (and that came after the Matador sprinter had been disqualified for jumping the gun at the Levelland Relays). But in the 220, things have been quite a bit different, since Humphrey doesn't run the longer sprint anymore.

Explaining his success this year in the 220, Isaacs commented: "Since I'm short I can really lean into the curve more than the taller runners can. You have to know how to run the curve...and I do. I can really get after it on the curve."

If the 100 was run as a curve race, instead on the straightaway, Isaacs feels he might be unbeatable.

Isaacs' name has popped in and out of the state's top times all season, starting back in late March when he recorded a 9.7 clocking in the 100-yard dash. Since then, Isaacs has run a 9.6 in the 100 and a 21.7 in the 220 (both school records). He also holds school marks in the 100-meter dash (10.5) and the 200-meter (21.5).

Since The Middle Of March

Since the middle of March, Isaacs has worked out as a quartermiler under the direction of DHS coach John Ford. And both Ford and Isaacs feel its been those harder workouts that has helped develope him into a class sprinter.

"It has made my legs a lot stronger," said Isaacs, adding he hasn't had a serious injury yet this season. "Also when I come down the straightaways I have a lot more extra kick than I had last year.

Because of that extra strength Isaacs feels a 21.4 clocking isn't out of the question. "At Austin, I think I can run a 21.5," commented Isaacs, "and maybe if everything is just right, a 21.4."

While there are those who don't enjoy a Big Dog running right next to them, Isaacs says that extra pressure makes him run just a little bit harder.

"I love pressure," said Isaacs. "The more the pressure the harder I run. I just hate to come in last."

Asked if he'd ever brought up the rear in a race, Isaacs smiled and said: "No. And I hope to keep it like that."

Dunes Glad To See Hawks Go

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Police and the International Dunes Hotel were glad to see the last of the Dallas Black Hawks Wednesday.

Police broke up the Blackhawks' celebration of their 1979 Central Hockey League championship victory over the Salt Lake Golden Eagles at 6 a.m. but not before three $75 chairs had been thrown from a seventh floor balcony, along with a picture ripped from a hotel wall, and beer cans and bottles littered the sidewalk and hotel parking lot.

Two Dallas goalies — Curt Ridley, the playoff's most valuable player, and Ed Walsh — were arrested by police.

Ridley was booked into the County Jail on a public intoxication charge. But the complaint was dropped under the city's first-offense statutes. Walsh was arrested on a disorderly conduct charge and freed on $108 bail.

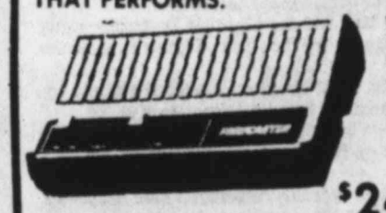

Police said two other Dallas players, held briefly at the hotel, were not booked.

A hotel spokesman estimated the damage at about $400. "We had one consolation, if there was one. At least they opened the windows before they threw the chairs out."

The Black Hawks defeated Salt Lake 6-4 Tuesday night to claim the CHL's Adams Cup Trophy with a 4-1 record in the best-of-seven championship series. They were ushered out of the hotel by 7 a.m. to catch an early flight back to Dallas.

The hotel spokesman said the company did not plan to press charges.

Westerners, Bulldogs Split...

PLAINVIEW (Special)—Noel Jaime drove in four runs with a homer and third baseman Sammy Chavez had three more RBIs and Oscar Lopez had three more hits as the Lubbock High Westerners defeated the Plainview Bulldogs 15-1 in a game called after five innings because of the 10-run run in the first game of a 4-AAAA doubleheader Wednesday afternoon.

The Bulldogs, however, rebounded in the second contest to gain a split in the action. Plainview took the second contest 5-3.

Every player on the Lubbock High team was able to get a hit during the first contest. Pitcher David Rush, meanwhile, was able to keep the Bulldog batters at bay with six strikeouts. Rush only faced 24 batters.

In the second game, it seemed at first that the Westerners were going to sweep the twinbill by building a 3-0 lead afer three innings.

Terrell then took his turn at the plate and walked as Vera came home to narrow the deficit to a run. Lubbock High pitcher Rush threw a wild pitch bringing Kline home with the tieing run.

Plainview, which concluded its season, wound up with the most successful year in the school's history. Bulldogs finished with a 5-3 second half record and 9-7 during the district race. Plainview is 14-14 on the season.

...Matadors Fall

LEVELLAND (Special)—David Bulls struckout 12 batters and came within one out of a no-hitter as the Levelland Lobos moved into a tie for first place in the 1-AAA baseball race by defeating the Estacado Matadors 4-0 in a makeup baseball game Wednesday afternoon.

Bulls had two strikes on Estacado second bseman Tony Gutierrez with two outs in Estacado's last chance to bat in the top of the seventh.

The victory gives Levelland a share of the loop lead with Dumas and Borger. All three teams sport 7-3 district records. The loss drops Estacado to 3-7 in loop play.

With one out, first baseman Tim Nichols walked and moved to third when designated hitter Wes Harley doubled to left field. Estacado then intentionally passed Lobo pitcher Bulls to load the bases.

The final two runs occurred when catcher Britt Long grounded to Estacado shortstop Hector Limon. Limon bobbled the ball allowing both Dockery and second baseman Robert Leaks to score.

The only Estacado threat came in the second inning, when the Matadors got the first two runners on base via errors. However, Bulls got out of trouble by getting Kenneth Davis to pop out, and both Dewayne Slaughter and Michael Sykes struckout.

"Bulls just blew the ball by us," said Estacado coach Vince Buffamonte. "We played good defense, but we batted like freshmen. There was two good pitching performances. Parker threw well for us. But Bulls pitched better than any high school pitcher we've faced this season."

Actually only two of the runs Levelland scored on Parker were earned.

Tech Women Lose In Dallas Action

DALLAS (Special) — Janie Bowen of Texas Christian defeated Debbie Donley of Texas Tech 6-4, 6-2 during the opening round of the TAIAW singles tennis tournament here Wednesday afternoon.

The loss drops Miss Donley into the consolation bracket where she meets Adreana Salaros of Lamar today at 8 p.m.

No Tech netter managed to win an opening-round match as Linda Gomez of North Texas defeated Karen Schuchard of Tech 6-3, 4-6, 6-3; and Melissa Zolley of Houston downed Peggy O'Neal 6-7, 6-3, 7-5.

NEW BOWLING CENTER — As part of groundbreaking ceremonies for the new South Plains Lanes, a new bowling facility to be constructed at 5150 69th St., Jim Pennington, Brunswick district manager from Denver, hands a ball to Norma Beauchamp, one of the guests attending the ceremonies. Various guests tried their skills on a portable lane, and for every ball to hit the ribbon in center of the lane, the firm donated $20 to the local Muscular Dystrophy fund. Mahaffey, Trevino Head Field In Houston Open Tournament

HOUSTON (AP) — The comeback try of John Mahaffey and the presence of irrepressible Lee Trevino spice a field that has been weakened by withdrawals for the $300,000 Houston Open Golf Tournament.

Tom Weiskopf and Johnny Miller pulled out of the 156-man lineup Wednesday, citing personal reasons. Former champion Lee Elder, who is having some fluid drained from a knee, and Andy Bean, who said he was exhausted, were the top attractions who had withdrawn earlier.

The four men who have scored multiple victories on the tour this year — Tom Watson, Lanny Wadkins, Masters champ Fuzzy Zoeller and Hubert Green, a winner last week — were not entered.

That left Trevino the outstanding figure in the chase for a $54,000 first prize that begins Thursday on the Woodlands Country Club course. The course has been trimmed down to 6,918 yards and changed to a par 71. The 10th hole has been converted from a relatively easy par-5 to a difficult par-4, measuring 460 yards.

"I've played awfully well all year," Trevino said. "I've been hitting the ball really well. And now I'm getting some putts to fall.

"I made 14 birdies last week (in New Orleans), didn't make a bogey for the tournament and didn't win. I can't cry, but that's kind of discouraging — to play that good and not win.

"But what can you do? Just go on to the next one and try again. You can't quit."

Trevino obviously approaching a peak in his game, was a runnerup for the second time this season and said improved putting has helped build his confidence. "And when you've got confidence in your putting, it goes right through the rest of your game. It helps you on every club."

Mahaffey, the current PGA champ and winner of the Bob Hope Desert Classic that opened the 1979 season, is trying a comeback from a hand injury that has sidelined him for the last 12 weeks.

But Mahaffey, a product of the University of Houston who makes his home here and is a local favorite, said he plans "to tough it out for a while and see what happens. It's either that or put it in a cast for six to eight weeks and I don't want to do that. I'll play this week even if I can't break 100."

Among the other standouts are defending champion Gary Player of South Africa, U.S. Open titleholder Andy North, Arnold Palmer, Hale Irwin, Tom Kite, recent winner Chi Chi Rodriguez, Lon Hinkle and Bruce Lietzke, a runnerup in his last two starts and a decided threat.

NBC will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Ceremonies Held For Bowling Lanes

Groundbreaking ceremonies for a $1.8-million, 40-lane bowling facility were held Wednesday at 5150 69th St., future site of South Plains Lanes.

Construction is expected to be completed in August, according to manager Gerry Wilson. League bowling will start Labor Day weekend, he said.

The 36,000 square-foot building will also include a six-table billiard room, pro shop, lane for the handicapped, 180 rental lockers, a meeting room, lounge, snack bar, glass-enclosed game room, an awards program for league bowlers, and supervised preschoolers' playroom.

Marilyn Harrison will be the office manager, having moved here from Denver to assist in setting up the new facility. Already, nine leagues have applied to use the facility with league applications are still being invited.

Wilson also came here from Colorado (Boulder) where he managed a 24-lane operation. Wilson said an assistant manager will be named in the near future.

The groundbreaking featured a portable lane and the Muscular Dystrophy poster child rolled the first ball. Dignitaries also got to try their luck, and the lane owners contributed $20 for each hit to the MD fund.

Twenty-two of the dignitaries scored "hits," but Brunswick pitched $20 into the MD treasury for all 55 attending the groundbreaking for a total donation of $1,100.

Brunswick officials on hand for the program include Jim Chauncey, western reginal manager for operations west of the Mississippi River, and district manager Jim Pennington, both of Denver.

"In this building we have a modern approach to family recreation," said Brunswick president Bernard Rudo. "From the children in the supervised playroom to the seniors in Club 55, our programs have been tailored to the special needs and desires of those involved.

"We have developed these programs, and all our programs out of the fact that we really have only one business — enjoyment."

General Assembly Beats Daddy's Time

In fact, General Assembly turned in a better Kentucky Derby workout than Secretariat did six years ago today.

General Assembly flashed five-eighths of a mile in 572-5 and went out three quarters in 1:101-5. The fractions were 23 for the quarter and 454-5 for the half-mile.

"Secretariat went five-eighths in 582-5 the Wednesday before the Derby," said trainer LeRoy Jolley, who got that fact from a book about Secretariat, winner of the Derby May 5, 1973, with a track record 1:592-5 for 1¼ miles.

General Assembly's racing career has been erratic and pales in comparison to Secretariat's brilliant career. But the similarities between father and son in connection with the Derby have to be a hunch player's delight.

Secretariat won the Gotham Stakes, was upset as the favorite in the Wood Memorial, had a fast workout three days before the Derby May 5, then won it. General Assembly, owned by Bertram Firestone, won the Gotham, was beaten as the favorite in the Wood Memorial, had a swift workout three days before the Derby May 5, then ..

But Secretariat's loss in the Wood was considered a fluke and he was still the horse to beat in the Derby. General Assembly's loss in the Wood was only a mild upset and his spotty record makes him a marked underdog to Spectacular Bid and Flying Paster.

One Derby starter — there are expected to be nine — who definitely won't be on or near the pace is Golden Act, a stretch-runner who captured the Arkansas Derby and the Louisiana Derby.

"That's for sure," said Loren Rettele, Golden Act's trainer. "That's one you can bet on."

Cotton Council Activity Cited

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

Personal contact with foreigners, making adequate self-supportive credit available to foreign buyers and cooperative advertising and promotion are three of the activities of Cotton Council International, according to David C. Hull, executive director of CCI.

Hull was in Lubbock Wednesday to address about 400 people at the 22nd annual Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. membership meeting at the Southpark Inn.

"With the support and participation of industry leaders, U. S. cotton has been authorized a record $252.3 million in Commodity Credit Corp. credit thus far in fiscal year 1979 and it is helping to move a lot of your cotton overseas," Hull told the cotton producers and cotton-related businessmen.

Under Hull's direction, CCI organizes and supervises trade teams, mill technical services and other cotton promotion programs in countries around the world.

"CCI's cooperating mills abroad, your customers, put up $1.3 million in 1978 as their share of the costs of cooperative advertisements featuring products made with your cotton," Hull said, showing slides from several countries demonstrating examples of the ads.

A basic responsibility of CCI, Hull pointed out, is to bring American exporters and foreign buyers together through trade teams and orientation programs.

Hull recalled a visit made by a U. S. trade team to Peking in May 1978 that resulted in China's purchase of 55,000 bales and another purchase of 150,000 bales by the Chinese after the Chinatex — China's raw cotton buying agency — toured the Cotton Belt last October.

"Building and maintaining the confidence and respect of our foreign customers and appropriate government officials," Hull commented, "is accomplished through personal contacts, through long-term association and through an understanding of the deep-rooted customs and attitudes of our foreign friends."

Such foundations with overseas buyers have built a good reputation with Korea and Japan, the two largest overseas customers, Hull said. Export commitments as of April 15, he noted, amount to 6½ million bales.

"In recognition of the growing importance of your export market, we have moved forward to further strengthen U. S. cotton's export thrust in 1979 and in future years," he said.

The meeting also heard an address by John Garner of Liverpool, England, owner and editor of Cotton Outlook.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

AN INTERNATIONAL COTTON COMMENTATOR and analyst pointed out here Wednesday that the world of cotton exporting basically is divided these days into three parts.

John Garner of Liverpool, England, editor of Cotton Outlook, noted that about half the market is shared in varying proportions by the United States and Russia and the remainder by the developing countries.

A fashionable view of what will happen to the U. S. competitors, he noted, is that Russia, the only really significant Communist exporter, is almost certain to expand her output. "The wheels of the current production plans were set in motion years ago," he commented, "and are neither designed nor driven in such a manner as to respond to small matters like price fluctuations and the state of the world economy.

"But elsewhere, things are different — the economies generally are under pressure, but populations are still rising, so domestic needs rise too, and most developing raw cotton producers look first to textiles as a means of expanding industrial exports. Man-made fiber prices are increasing, so the urge to grow more cotton will be strong.

"SO AS A DISTILLATION FROM ALL these...ideas, I am left with the belief that cotton will not have an easy time during the next few years, since continuing economic difficulties will inhibit growth of the fiber market as a whole, but that its competitive position against the man-made fibers will improve a little, provided its price is not allowed to rise too quickly. I assume that the boom days for denim are over, yet that the continuing popularity of such cloth and of cotton in leisure wear will help to maintain sales of the coarser count yarns for which your cottons are still principally used.

"I am aware that in a good season, the Plains now can produce a fair volume of cotton stapling 1 1/16 inches, and that you are wisely continuing to improve your staple length. Such improvement gives you a wider range of outlets. But you will, I think, readily concede that medium and longer staples are not yet your speciality. We may therefore for our current purpose exclude from our calculations Egypt and the Sudan, Mexico, Colombia and Iran, and much of Central America. However, we should be wise...to introduce India. If I could tabulate them neatly, I would retain also the many African countries producing at least some of your styles of cotton, but it is most difficult to segregate such cotton from the mass of their production.

"There remains the hard core of contenders for the custom of the coarse count trade — Argentina, Brazil, Turkey, Pakistan, some African countries. Notice that there is not a single oil producing country among them. That may, for you, be a fortunate and highly significant fact.

"THERE IS PRESSURE, AS WE HAVE SAID, upon their economies. Cotton is for several of them the backbone of their foreign exchange earnings — inflation is rife. If you chafe, as I do, under a domestic inflation rate of around 10 percent, what effect upon your confidence would you feel as a Brazilian with 40 percent, a Turk with probably over 50 percent, or an Argentine with 170 percent?

May I remind you that these are the burgeoning cotton producers of earlier decades. Their output of cotton exploded in the 1950s and 1960s. This was the era of cheap oil, plentiful fertilizer and herbicides, and (in Africa and Asia) of agricultural research conducted under the aegis of vestigial colonial paternalism. The British are not poor at all things — they and the French were highly successful as cotton breeders.

"It was, however, the era, too, of an even more significant influence — that of a high loan rate in the U. S. I cannot, in all honesty, emphasize too strongly the consequence of that fact. A producer in the developing world could at that time wait for Uncle Sam to announce the season's export price, breathe a happy sigh of relief at finding it to be well above his production cost, and plant cotton confident in the knowledge that the U. S. loan would absorb the 'residual' world supply. It was all so easy — governments had little need of price support mechanisms of their own."

Garner said the impact of rising oil prices in these countries "will be immediate and severe: Gasoline will shortly cost the farmer around $2 per gallon, and the associated cost of herbicides and insecticides is increasing sharply. The whole energy cost base outside the United States is rising with quite terrifying rapidity."

SPEAKING CONFIDENTLY OF THE FUTURE of High Plains cotton producers, Garner remarked:

"I think that the market for your cottons will at least persist, that you are pursuing the right policies in both research and sales, and that traditional foreign competitors are in difficulty. In matters of domestic loan supports, you are converts..to the right system. This season for the first time since World War II, U. S. exports may exceed domestic consumption. Your exports go principally to the Far East, to my mind the right direction. Why then do I not say that you can complacently demand much higher prices, and that both you and the deserving Third World will thereby benefit?

"Firstly, I think that in doing so you would provide the incentives and capital resources that the less fortunate producers need to regain their equilibrium. And, secondly, I do not yet think that competition from man-made fibers will be obliterated by the oil price increases."

Garner also warned of "effective competition to come." He said India, which until now has not been a consistent exporter of spinnable cotton, "will be a power to contend with" if she has good rains this summer." India has the largest acreage and the lowest yield — among significant producers — in the world, he pointed out. Lack of moisture is her principal disadvantage. Yet for some years now she has been extending her irrigation and making good progress with the improvement of her varieties, Garner said. "No longer does she import either long or medium staple cottons as she once did in huge quantity to sustain her vast domestic industry. She produces a bewildering array of shorter types. Her crop will reach record proportions this season, leaving a significant quantity for export."

There also is Russia, Garner emphasized.

"It is Russia with whom you, as a nation, share half the export market, and with whom you have above all to contend. I cannot speak consolingly of inflation rates and of oil in the context of Russia, since she has her own oil and her own unique methods of deciding at what price she should sell. You will be wise to remember her."

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures soared Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade as talk of new export business and damage to current crops spurred speculative buying.

Wheat gained 9¼ to 17 cents a bushel, scoring new life-of-contract highs. Analysts cited talk of damage to the Soviet Union's winter wheat crop, plus planting delays for spring wheat in both the Soviet Union and the United States, which spurred local and commission house buying.

Also, reports that Iran would be in the market for a large amount of wheat later this month fueled bullish sentiments.

Corn futures also rose sharply on forecasts of continued rain in some corn-growing states, where the Agriculture Department says planting already is some 50 percent behind average.

Recent large export purchases of corn destined for "unknown destinations," under the government's export reporting system, plus published reports of cold weather in China's grain belt, triggered a spate of rumors about the possibility of expanded export business with both the Soviet Union and China.

Cattle Futures Decline On Chicago Exchange

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 75 to 145 points lower on 33,518 cars Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. June led the decline after tumbling the 150 limit along with August and October. The market weakened after gaining 40 in early trade.

Prices fell to the lowest in more than one week, off 3 cents from recent highs, on the downturn in beef following record high prices. Traders also feared consumer resistance would lead to a further backup of supplies.

Wholesale beef was off one at 113½ cents a pound. Cash cattle were unchanged to up 50 cents with the best top $78 per hundredweight at Omaha. Slaughter was 108,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 10,100 head today.

Feeder cattle futures closed 135 to 150 lower, with all contracts except January and March posting limit level declines. Sales totaled 5,029 lots.

Late selling followed limit-lower live cattle futures as beef turned downward on resistance to record high prices. The high cost of cash feeder cattle was also noted.

NO CARS IN PARKS

For the protection of women and children, an ordinance was passed in Boston in 1900 forbidding automobiles from entering the city parks between 10 a.m. and 9 p.m.

Deliveries total 71 thus far. Cash feeders were unchanged to up $3 with the best top $145 per hundredweight at Louisville. About 6,100 head are expected today at the major terminals.

Hog futures closed 30 higher to 20 lower on sales of 6,458 contracts. Distant July was up the most with August at the most loss.

Prices held within narrow ranges, gaining 45 and losing 35 at times.

Light hog runs and higher prices brought support. Traders were cautious, however, in view of the premium over cash and weakness in cattle futures and pork products.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to off ¼ at 70¼ to 74 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were unchanged to up $1 with the best top $46.50 per hundredweight at Peoria. Kill was 342,000 head. Receipts at the major markets today are expected to total 30,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 40 to 127 lower led by May on sales of 5,237 cars. Prices weakened the second day in a row and fell to the lowest in a week.

The market fell after early gains of 47 on light hog runs and higher prices. Traders noted meager storings locally and light input out of town. However, pressure followed heavy kill and lower trend to cash bellies and cattle futures.

There have been 35 deliveries thus far. Wholesale bacon was unchanged to off ¼ at 49 to 56½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

New Meat-Import System Gets Nod

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee Wednesday approved a proposed new meat-import system that government officials say will allow more foreign beef to reach the U.S. market.

President Carter reportedly is willing to accept the new system.

The bill was approved by the Ways and Means Committee's trade subcommittee on a voice vote after inclusion of a series of changes sought by the administration.

White House aides had said Carter will sign the bill with the changes included.

Carter last fall vetoed an effort to change the meat-import law because he said he would be tied to formulas that did not take into account all economic situations.

The measure approved Tuesday will help consumers by allowing more meat into the country during the early 1980s while U.S. ranchers are rebuilding their herds, a cycle that reduces the amount of available beef, Agriculture Department officials say.

The herd rebuilding cycle is considered to be in an opening stage following more than a year of rapidly rising retail beef prices. The higher prices are the market's response to herd reductions that ranchers began in 1975 because of low prices.

Little extra foreign beef is available to be shipped into the country at this time, industry and government experts say.

The bill calls for increased imports when domestic supplies are tight and prices high and reduced imports when U.S. cattlemen are marketing large numbers of animals.

Present law is just the reverse — higher import levels when supplies are heavy.

Under the current law, a president has wide discretion to suspend the formula that sets import levels and allow more meat, mostly low grade beef used for hamburger, to enter the country. That invariably has brought a storm of protest from cattle states.

The bill requires minimum imports of 1.3 billion pounds a year, compared to 1.57 billion allowed in this year and the 1.2 billion floor sought by some key subcommittee members. That level, a condition Carter set for approval, was adopted by a 12-9 vote.

By voice vote, the panel voted to allow Carter to override a new formula based on changes in U.S. cow slaughter if it does not reflect market disruptions.

He can also suspend it in national emergencies and natural disasters but not when herds are being liquidated.

A proposal by Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., to repeal the meat-import law entirely and "get the governmnt out of this business" was rejected.

PARK FEES RETAINED

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Interior Committee moved Wednesday to block a Carter administration plan to hike entrance fees at some national parks. By voice vote the committee approved legislation managed by Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., to freeze entrance fees at present levels for all national parks, monuments, historic sites and national seashores.

Sen. Baker Sees 'Best Chance For GOP Since 1952' Next Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. predicted Wednesday that he would win the Republican presidential nomination and that former California Gov. Ronald Reagan would be "my principal competitor in the home stretch."

"This is probably the best opportunity the Republicans have had since 1952 to get not only the presidential office but also win control of the Senate," the Tennessee Republican told the annual conference of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

The predictions came three days after Baker said flatly on the CBS program "Face the Nation" last Sunday: "I am a candidate for the Republican nomination." But he added at that time that his formal announcement would come later, saying he still intends to stage a ceremonial announcement and make it "a media event."

Baker's office in Washington said his statement to the editors didn't put him any closer to a formal announcement than his statement to CBS.

Baker has been saying since March 8, in Manhattan, Kan., that he plans to run for president. He has been a legal candidate since Jan. 31, when a Baker for President campaign committee registered with the Federal Election Commission.

Reagan has made no formal announcement of candidacy, although his campaign committee has been registered with the commission since March 5.

Baker also said he was "suspicious" of the proposed SALT II treaty and said that "it would take more convincing for me to vote for it than against it."

Baker said he was concerned because the pact would limit the United States to developing only one new weapons system and that, he said, might freeze America's arms development and limit the country's technological future. He said that if the Senate were to vote on the pact today his guess is that it would be rejected.

Baker also criticized Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's opposition to President Carter's oil decontrol plan, calling it "100 percent off the mark." Baker said decontrol and increased production "will bring to bear a downward pressure on prices."

Earlier, Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh had told the editors that America must learn to control nuclear power or "do without it."

He said it was still too early to predict the future of nuclear power in the wake of the recent Three Mile Island incident because results of six investigations are not yet in.

"I still see a middle ground between those who would abandon it and those who would expand it tomorrow. The question is not yes or no, but how best we could use it and keep it under control," the Republican governor said.

"If we can't prepare ourselves to control it, then we must prepare ourselves to do without it. Because I, for one, don't want to go through a Three Mile Island again."

Singer Wilson Pickett Jr. Acquitted

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Soul singer Wilson Pickett Jr. was acquitted Wednesday of hitting a former band member with a 12-gauge shotgun.

The Bergen County jury deliberated 45 minutes before finding Pickett, 38, innocent on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. He was charged with hitting Nathaniel Grant, 31, of New York City with a shotgun during a fight at Pickett's Englewood home March 25, 1978.

Grant, an organ player and arranger, said Pickett hit him with the gun, a blow he said sent him flying out a screen door. Authorities said Pickett and Grant were working on a song when the argument erupted.

Rogers, Loretta Lynn Vie For Award

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Kenny Rogers' song about a hardboiled gambler and Loretta Lynn's "Out of My Head and Back in My Bed," put both popular singers in a duel for the 14th annual Academy of Country Music's entertainer of the year award.

It was the first time the awards were to be televised nationally. The two-hour show was to be broadcast live to the east from the Hollywood Palladium on NBC at 9 p.m EDT. The show was tapedelayed on the West Coast.

More than 2,000 academy members cast ballots for nine performing "Hat" awards. In addition, three special awards will be presented during the broadcast, hosted by Barbara Mandrell, Roy Clark and Dennis Weaver.

Rogers was nominated for top male vocalist, entertainer of the year and, along with Dottie West, vocal group of the year. His song of wary and hardboiled philosophy, "The Gambler," was nominated for song of the year. Miss Lynn is also nominated for entertainer of the year, vocal group of the year with Conway Twitty, top female vocalist. "Out of My Head and Back in My Bed" was up for top single of the year.

In the running for album of the year award were The Oak Ridge Boys, who began as a gospel quartet but moved to the top of the country charts with a song about a bar, "The Y'All Come Back Saloon."

Patti Page will present the academy's Pioneer Award, given for efforts in promoting country music, and Dinah Shore will present the Humanitarian Award, presented to the country personality who has done the most to benefit mankind. The Jim Reeves Memorial Award will go to the person who has done the most to benefit country music.

Categories and nominees included:

Top Male Vocalist: Kenny Rogers, Larry Gatlin, Merle Haggard, Eddie Rabbit and Don Williams.

Top Female Vocalist: Dolly Parton, Crystal Gayle, Loretta Lynn, Barbara Mandrell and Anne Murray.

Vocal Group of the Year: The Oak Ridge Boys, The Statler Brothers, Dave and Sugar, Kenny Rogers and Dottie West, and Conway Twitty and Loretta Lynn.

"Hurricane." Screenplay by Lorenzo Semple, Jr.; based on the novel by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall. Cinematography by Sven Nykvist. Edited by Sam O'Steen. Music by Nino Rota. Choreography by Coco. Special effects by Glen Robinson, Aldo Puccini and Joe Day. Produced by Dino De Laurentiis. Directed by Jan Troell. Stars Jason Robards, Dayton Ka'ne, Mia Farrow, Max Von Sydow, Trevor Howard and Timothy Bottoms. Rated PG. At the Fox Fourplex.

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

It's raining hard as the ship docks in Pago Pago during the opening scene in "Hurricane," and that's only fitting in that the entire story that follows is all wet. A $20 million travelogue for the South Seas, it is producer Dino De Laurentiis' worst film since "King Kong," a ridiculous tale of passion, bigotry, miscegenation, suppressed incest, restless natives and water, water everywhere.

KA'NE

The fact that so many extremely talented filmmakers — director Jan Troell, cinematographer Sven Nykvist, composer Nino Rota, editor Sam O'Steen and actors Max Von Sydow, Jason Robards and Timothy Bottoms — chose to involve themselves with this slop only serves as a testament to greed. In short, Dino must have made them a monetary offer they couldn't refuse, not to mention a film location that might afford a little sightseeing.

The movie was made in Bora Bora, standing in for 1920 Pago Pago when the natives were under the rule of the United States Navy. In this case, Robards is the strict and racist governor, uttering such original dialogue as "these people are all children" while anxiously awaiting the arrival of his daughter Charlotte, played in true dead-fish fashion by Mia Farrow. Robards doesn't hide the fact he'd like to express his love for the girl in physical terms, but there's little chance of that happening after she meets young island chief Matangi, played by screen newcomer Dayton Ka'ne.

We see Charlotte and Matangi swim in the sea together. We see them play in the sand, and listen to seashells. ("What does it sing to you?") We see them play underwater with all the brightly colored fishes. We see them make love in the bushes. Now she steps on coral, says "ouch" and finds the muscular native bending down to kiss her foot and make it all better — all the while forgetting stereotypical priest Trevor Howard and his prophetic, if somewhat stupid, warning of, "In the tropics, take passion in light doses and always with a grain of salt."

ALL WET — Screen newcomer Dayton Ka'ne and Mia Farrow find themselves soaked but breathing while a tropical storm bombards Pago Pago in the current film "Hurricane." The Dino De Laurentiis production, rated PG and currently at the Fox Fourplex, has also been deemed all wet by A-J film critic William Kerns.

Naturally, daddy doesn't approve. So when Ka'ne's chosen native bride is given a rather graphic tribal virginity test — thrown in, some say, to assure a PG rating — Robards mutters "we've got to tighten our ship" and decides to get rid of the young chief by throwing him in prison for four years of hard labor. There follow thwarted escapes, more proclamations of love and the ultimate big winds.

The emphasis in this picture is on spectacle, sunsets and effects, with Dino thinking he can smooth over Lorenzo Semple's simple screenplay by throwing in a few tribal ceremonies and a bunch of Samoans performing pelvic-thrusting dances that never would have cleared Ed Sullivan's censors. I can't tell you how many closeups of palm leaves and sand crabs we're given. The acting is universally poor, the sole exception being an adequate portrayal of a young Navy ensign by Timothy Bottoms, which is buried by surrounding mediocrity.

Robards, who won two consecutive Academy Awards for his work in "All The President's Men" and "Julia," takes a break here, snarling in grade-B Captain Bligh style. And Max Von Sydow seems constantly to be looking around for a way out.

Mia Farrow, coming off an inept performance in "Avalanche" and a small one in Altman's "A Wedding," never makes us believe in her feelings or convictions. She is but a blank expression on two legs, and one can't help but somewhat chauvinistically feel she may have been cast because she's one of the few actresses who can walk through three quarters of a movie soaking wet without fear of boosting the rating. As for Dayton Ka'ne, publicity states he was found surfing in Hawaii and had never acted before. That's the believable part. It goes on to say he was given acting lessons under the tutelage of Jeff Corey.

Not that Ka'ne's horrible performance has left Dino disillusioned. No, the rich producer immediately signed the surfer to a three-picture contract, announcing plans to star him as Lion Man in his remake of "Flash Gordon" and in the title role in "Shark Boy Of Bora Bora" (which will probably wind up being filmed in Pago Pago). But then, Dino predicted stardom for another no-talent discovery, Jessica Lange, after the release of the execrable "King Kong" in 1976 — and you know how much we've seen of her since then.

A-J FILM REVIEW

And what of the hurricane, you ask? Well, the film's title force arrives during the last 30 minutes of the two-hour story, culminating with one of the most laughable endings ever placed on a screen.

The gale forces hit, naturally, just as our Romeo and Juliet are trying to escape Daddy & The Sailor Hordes. Robards orders a gunboat crew to pursue the lovers to a nearby island and, though palm trees are uprooted and huts are blown away and the huge Navy vessel is fighting a losing battle with the elements, he and his men manage to get to shore safely in a rowboat. That's part of the problem. Nykvist films all these gigantic, rolling, crushing tidal waves, and yet the cast is still walking about as though attempting nothing more difficult than crossing the road in a West Texas sand storm.

While the waves start knocking off natives right and left — sometimes it seems the SAME natives right and left — Robards walks out in chest-deep water and suffers a head-on collision with his ship, which later crashes through the stone walls of an inland church and wipes out the remaining natives and the priest. But not before Howard can turn eyes upward and say, "So much death. Why are these lambs being punished?"

Of course, two clever lambs manage to tie themselves to the branches of a tree, hold hands a while (how about a closeup of their fingers touching?) and then fall asleep until the hurricane blows over. They then drift ashore on a sand bar and, like Charlton Heston making his discovery at the end of "Planet Of The Apes," surprise us all by finding out that's it, folks. They're the only two left. No islands remain, no village, no trees, no people, no boats, no corpses, not even a coconut or banana to snack on.

But unlike Heston, who vented his fury against fate's betrayal by pounding his fist into the sand, these two survivors — who we can't help but feel will either quickly starve to death or come back in a sequel called "Swiss Family Matangi" — just say what-the-hey and settle down to hug each other. Can you guess who they are?

Judge Approves Merger Newspaper

WASHINGTON (AP) — The financially troubled Cincinnati Post should be permitted to operate jointly with its rival, the Cincinnati Enquirer, an administrative law judge recommended Wednesday to Attorney General Griffin B. Bell.

"The past operating results of the Cincinnati Post and those reasonably to be expected in the future are such as to demonstrate that it is in probable danger of financial failure," said administrative law judge Donald R. Moore in a 143-page opinion.

It is now up to Bell to decide if Cincinnati's only newspapers can join their printing and commercial facilities, while maintaining separate editorial staffs.

Bell is required by law to wait at least 45 days before deciding to give opponents of the joint operation an opportunity to challenge Moore's conclusions.

Moore rejected the contention of The Newspaper Guild and the International Typographical Union that the E.W. Scripps Co., the owner of the Post, has "monopoly ambitions."

The Post has reported losses of $11 million since 1970, although it has cut its losses in half each year since the national recession of 1974.

The newspaper, with a daily circulation of about 190,000, asked the Justice Department in October 1977 to approve the joint operation under the Newspaper Preservation Act of 1970.

The Enquirer, which alone publishes a Sunday edition that sells 290,000 copies, is financially healthy. The Enquirer is Cincinnati's only morning daily and has been publishing since 1841. The Post, which began publishing in 1881, is the city's only afternoon newspaper. Moore, a Washington lawyer and a newspaperman for five years in the late 1930s and early 1940s, was appointed by the Justice Department to review the Post's application. He had been an administrative law judge for the Federal Trade Commission for 14 years before retiring in 1975.

Moore said that "Scripps has exhausted all means reasonably available to it to make the Post a profitable newspaper."

He also said there was no evidence of any prospective buyers willng to take over the newspaper to maintain its total separation from the Enquirer.

British Polls Predict Electoral Cliffhanger Today

THATCHER PRO AND CON — With the general election a scant 24 hours away, British newspapers Wednesday reflected support or opposition to Margaret Thatcher in front page layouts. A conservative victory would render Mrs. Thatcher Britain's first female prime minister. (AP Laserphoto)

LONDON (AP) — Britain's 41 million voters decide Thursday whether the country will continue along a moderate socialist path under the Laborites of Prime Minister James Callaghan or take a sharp turn to the right under the Conservatives of Margaret Thatcher.

Late opinion polls indicated a fairly even split among the country's 41 million voters, raising the prospect of a "hung Parliament," with neither the Laborites nor the Conservatives winning an overall majority to govern the country for the next five years.

Four last-minute polls in Thursday's morning newspapers predicted Mrs. Thatcher will topple Callaghan.

Three polls backed a Conservative forecast of a 25 to 30 seat majority in the 635-member House of Commons, while the established Gallup Poll predicted the Tories will win only a slight margin, and probably not enough for an overall majority.

Before the polls were published, both Callaghan and Mrs. Thatcher cautiously claimed their parties would triumph.

"We have considerable grounds for cautious optimism," said Mrs. Thatcher at her final pre-electon news conference Wednesday.

Callaghan closed the campaign after a visit to his own parliamentary district in Cardiff, Wales. "If you vote Conservative you'll vote for change with chaos," he said in a speech Wednesday night. "Tomorrow's vote is going to determine the shape of our society in the 1980s."

Both leaders must run for re-election to the House of Parliament in their own election districts. Mrs. Thatcher's district is in suburban London.

Callaghan has been fighting an uphill battle since a no-confidence vote forced dissolution of Parliament in March. Mrs. Thatcher at first seemed confident in her quest to become Europe's first woman prime minister.

But the polls showed that the early 22 percent commanding lead of the Conservatives, or Tories, as they are called, was steadily whittled down during the month of campaigning.

The National Opinion Poll published Thursday put the latest Tory lead over Labor at 7 percentage points, Marplan Poll at 6 points and Market Opinion and Research International Poll at 5.6 percent. The NOP figure was an unexplained switch after its estimate 24 hours earlier that that Labor had nosed ahead to a lead of 0.7 of a percentage point.

Voting ends at 5 p.m. EDT, with first returns expected at 6 p.m. If the voting is close, the outcome might not be known until midday Friday.

The parties need at least 318 seats to win a majority. Recent polls have shown the Liberals, who held 14 seats in the last Parliament, gaining ground, apparently at the expense of the Conservatives, who held 282.

The 67-year-old Callaghan, who has hinted that this may be his last electoral battle, has said he does not want to find himself in the situation he inherited from Sir Harold Wilson in 1976 of having no overall majority in the Commons.

Labor won in October 1976, with a five-seat majority over the Tories. That bare majority was steadily eroded by deaths and party defection until he was heading a minority government that depended on small parties like the middle-road Liberals and the Scottish Nationalists to stay in power.

Another minority party, Northern Ireland's Ulster Unionists, said Wednesday it would throw its support to one of the major parties in return for restoration of the embattled province's Protestant-dominated parliament, suspended six years ago. Both major parties have rejected restoring the local legislative body. Th Unionists, Northern Ireland's main Protestant political group, held seven seats when the House of Commons was dissolved in March.

The election campaign has been dominated by bread-and-butter issues of prices and jobs. Most prices have doubled in the last five years and unemployment statistics show 1.3 million persons are out of work, 5.6 percent of the work force, with higher percentages in Northern Ireland, Scotland and northeast England.

Taxation also has been a key issue. Britons are taxed at a minimum of 33 percent, rising to 83 percent for any income over $48,000. Investment income is taxed up to 98 percent—a bracket that these days only affects movie and rock stars, business tycoons and in some cases Britain's battered aristocracy.

The Conservative formula for repairing the economy includes restrictions on labor unions and reform of the Labor-inspired social welfare system.

The Conservatives also have made a big play over Labor's cutback in Britain's defenses and its NATO commitment at a time when Western Europe is becoming increasingly concerned over how much it can depend on U.S. protection. Callaghan has forged close links with the Carter administration and has given unswerving support to Carter's human rights crusade.

The country's major legal bookmakers reported Britons had bet more than $6 million on the election by Wednesday evening and said the bets were still coming in.

One of the leading firms, Mecca, gave the Conservatives odds of 1 to 4, meaning a bet of four pounds would win one pound plus the stake money back. A spokesman for another major bookmaker, Ladbroke's, reported taking two bets of $20,000 each for a Tory triumph.

Commercial Artists Called Problem Solvers

Design communicators — sometimes called commercial artists — combine artistic skills with specialized problem-solving processes to create design solutions ranging from corporate identity programs to book covers.

Design communicators are often confused with advertising artists. Although these two disciplines both require problem-solving skills, they represent different branches of applied art, according to Frank Cheatham, Texas Tech University art professor and member of the university's design communication area.

"Advertising artists work with ad agencies and they design advertisements to sell products or services to large numbers of people through the mass media. Design communication artists work in design studios and usually their work is directed toward smaller audiences — such as those who view the business card of a corporation, or a shopper whose eye is caught by a well-designed container," the art professor explains.

Cheatham maintains that Texas Tech has one of the best design communications schools in the country — as good or better than many private art schools. "Our graduates compete favorably in the market with graduates of the more prestigious art schools," he said.

The university's design communication majors and graduates are achieving prominence through nationwide exhibitions of their work, which includes such varied designs as packages, trademarks, illustrations and posters. "Our students learn to create items that meet a client's needs — anything that needs to be designed, be it record album covers, brochures or exhibit designs."

In the terminology of art the client's specified need is called a "problem" that must be extensively examined before the artist can decide how to solve it and produce a solution that meets the client's needs.

"Intense intellectual involvement is required. The problem-solving process is a matter of analysis, generating ideas and finding an appropriate and effective solution.

"We try to give our students a basis on which to formulate a problem-solving philosophy. We encourage them not to follow rules or accept limitations without first asking 'why?'

"If no one ever asked why, or was afraid to break the rules, no progress would ever be made anywhere."

The department is good because of faculty effectiveness, Cheatham said. "All the faculty have worked with design studios or freelanced extensively. They have a close professional relationship with students, one that many times does not end with the class period."

The curriculum also contributes to the excellence of the department, Cheatham said. "In most schools students have to wait until they're juniors or seniors to take design communication courses. Our students can start when they're sophomores."

Standards are high for design communication students, the professor pointed out, because the art world demands excellence. "Since design students are hired on the basis of their portfolios, we review junior and senior portfolios every semester, and students are not allowed to proceed to higher level courses unless their portfolios meet very high standards."

AUSTRIA SPAWNS ANTI—FASCISTS

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — An "anti-fascist movement" claimed responsibility Wednesday for two fires this week in the city's commercial center, the Austrian Press Agency reported. The claim said the fires in downtown shops were part of a campaign against "the centers of the capitalists for recreation, heavy eating and buying." No injuries were reported.

Mart Drifts Unchanged

NEW YORK (AP) — Two pharmaceutical issues were the most prominent losers as the stock market drifted through another inconclusive session Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which has fluctuated in a narrow band between 855 and 880 ever since the last week of March, closed at 855.51, unchanged from Tuesday.

The biggest decline on the active list was recorded by Smithkline, down 5 3/4 at 88 3/4 as of the 4 p.m. close in New York.

A medical journal reported that a study of seven men taking the company's ulcer drug Tagamet showed a reduction in their sperm counts. Smithkline said the drug was "safe and effective."

Squibb, also heavily traded, lost 2% to 30 3/4. The company said it presumed that the drop stemmed from a statement it sent to doctors about a possible side effect of its new drug Captopril for treatment of hypertension.

Squibb added that tests were continuing.

Analysts said the sluggish behavior of the market over the past several weeks had dampened trading interest.

Temporary Sterility May Follow Ulcer Drug Use

BOSTON (AP) — Cimetidine, an ulcer medicine that is one of the nation's most widely prescribed drugs, can be expected to cause temporary sterility in some men, doctors who conducted a study of seven men warn.

Dr. David H. Van Thiel, who directed the research, said the study showed use of cimetidine will cut nearly in half the sperm count of most men.

He added in an interview that it can be expected to cause sterility in about 10 percent of men who take it, because sperm counts in that proportion of the male population are normally low.

But he said the medicine, which reduces secretion of stomach acid to allow the ulcer to heal, apparently does not cause permanent damage to the reproductive organs if taken in the recommended dosage, and he said it is still worth taking to treat peptic ulcers.

"If you take it for six weeks, you are not under significant risk," he said. "People's sperm counts return to normal. I think it's probably a reasonable risk."

Dr. Roger Crossley, clinical director for Smith Kline Corp., which makes cimetidine, said of the report:

"This is a mild change and in the normal limit. We really don't think there is a sterility issue here at all. If there is a reduction in sperm count, there is a chance that the occasional patient could be tipped temporarily from being okay to not being okay."

The stock of Smith Kline Corp. fell sharply Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange after word of the study leaked out in advance of its publication Thursday in the New England Journal of Medicine.

In an editorial accompanying the report, three FDA physicians, Robert J. Temple, Judith K. Jones and J. Richard Crout, called the findings "unsettling."

"It is clearly a potentially important factor in considering the role of cimetidine in the long-term therapy of ulcer disease," they wrote.

"It's one of the most widely prescribed drugs in the United States," Van Thiel said in an interview. "Just about everyone who has ulcers takes it."

Men's sperm counts return to normal if they stop taking the medicine within six weeks, the duration of treatment approved by the Food and Drug Administration, he said. However, the effects of longer use are not known.

The drug was approved for general use in the United States in August 1977, and is on the market is more than 90 countries.

Smith Kline, which sells it under the brand name Tagamet, says the drug has been taken by 10 million people around the world.

Researchers who conducted the latest study at the University of Pittsburgh Medical School found an average reduction of 43 percent in the sperm counts of the seven men studied.

Van Thiel wrote that his team's research was prompted by studies of animals indicating such an effect, and by reports from other doctors that they strongly suspected such an effect in humans.

In a letter to the journal last January, Dr. M. Michael Wolfe of the Medical College of Pennsylvania reported that a 43-year-old patient lost interest in sex and became impotent, apparently as a result of cimetidine. He said the man's sex drive returned to normal two weeks after he stopped taking the medicine.

However, Van Thiel said the men who took part in his test did not notice any difference in their sex drives.

Nine In Pickup Die As Truck Strikes High Tree Limb

YOUNG, Ariz. (AP) — A club cab pickup truck carrying 10 persons ran off the road and struck a tree with such force that it "sheared the cab off," the state Highway Patrol said Wednesday. Authorities said nine persons were killed.

The crash on State Route 288 about 33 miles south of this northeastern Gila County community was discovered at 8:15 a.m., but the patrol said it was uncertain when it occurred.

The patrol said the truck ran off the side of the road, became airborne and hit a tree 15 feet up. The sole survivor was taken to a hospital in Globe.

Identification of the victims, all said to be from the Young area, was withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Muzorewa Denies Money Received From SAVAK

SALISBURY, Rodesia (A) — Rhodesia's black prime minister-elect, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Wednesday denied charges by the Iranian government that he received money from the now-disbanded secret police agency, SAVAK.

"It's absolute nonsense," a spokesman for Muzorewa said. "He had no contacts with Iran."

The Iranian foreign ministry Tuesday accused Muzorewa of receiving an undisclosed amount of money from SAVAK, disbanded when Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was driven from power. The ministry said it would not recognize Muzorewa's government, due to take office next month.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR MAY 3, 1979

PHYSICAL
Highs:	1-9, 23-32, 46-55, 69-75	Endurance dominates day
Lows:	11-21, 34-44, 57-67	Not your best at sports
EMOTIONAL
Criticals:	12, 26, 40, 54, 68, 82	Judgment impaired
Highs:	1-11, 27-39, 55-67, 83-85	Good working with others
INTELLECTUAL
Criticals:	16, 33, 49, 66, 82	Accident prone, watch out
Highs:	1-15, 34-48, 67-81	An alert day for you
Lows:	17-32, 50-65, 83-95	Don't start new projects

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.
