Briscoe to decide by weekend

Hill, Clements favor calling special legislative session

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It appeared today that Gov. Dolph Briscoe — pondering hours of talk with legislative leaders — would decide before the weekend whether to call a special session to cut taxes.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton both favor a 30-day session, probably starting July 10.

Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements also urged the governor to call lawmakers back to town "to provide meaningful tax relief."

Clayton said he had talked to Attorney General John Hill, the Democratic nominee for governor, by phone to "assure him we want his participation in the process."

In a Chamber of Commerce address in Dallas Wednesday, Hill said he favors the special session and thinks legislators ought to address themselves to at least four areas of tax reform.

He suggested that if the session is called, it should address repeal of the 4 percent state sales tax on residential utility bills; consider tax assessments on small farms and ranches on the basis of productivity and not market value; consider an increase in inheritance tax exemptions on farms and ranches from $60,000 to $200,000; and consider establishing a mandatory $5,000 school district property tax exemption for elderly homeowners.

Hill proposed delegating a "reasonable amount" of state oil and gas taxes to local school districts to relieve district property taxes.

Hill said he spoke with Clayton last week on the idea of a special session, and he told reporters he was "not concerned" with the cost of an off-year legislative meeting.

"It doesn't matter whether Gov. Dolph Briscoe or Gov. John Hill passes special legislation in favor of the taxpayer," he said.

The surge of legislative interest in reducing taxes began after Californians approved Proposition 13, a referendum to cut taxes.

In July it will have been a year since the last special session, which was primarily concerned with adopting a school finance bill.

Hobby met with Briscoe for 2½ hours on Wednesday and told a news conference the governor had not "made a firm decision" to call a special session, but if Hobby had to speculate he would say there would be one.

Hobby said he favored a session to repeal the 10-cent state property tax and the sales tax on utility bills and to raise the amount of inheritance that is free from estate taxes.

Gas rationing plan revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A standby gasoline rationing plan that would distribute coupons on the basis of the number of cars a family or business owned was announced Thursday by Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger.

Schlesinger told a news conference the plan would only be used in the event of a major supply disruption like the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo.

The standby plan, on the drawing boards for several months, was required by a 1975 law passed by Congress to deal with an energy emergency.

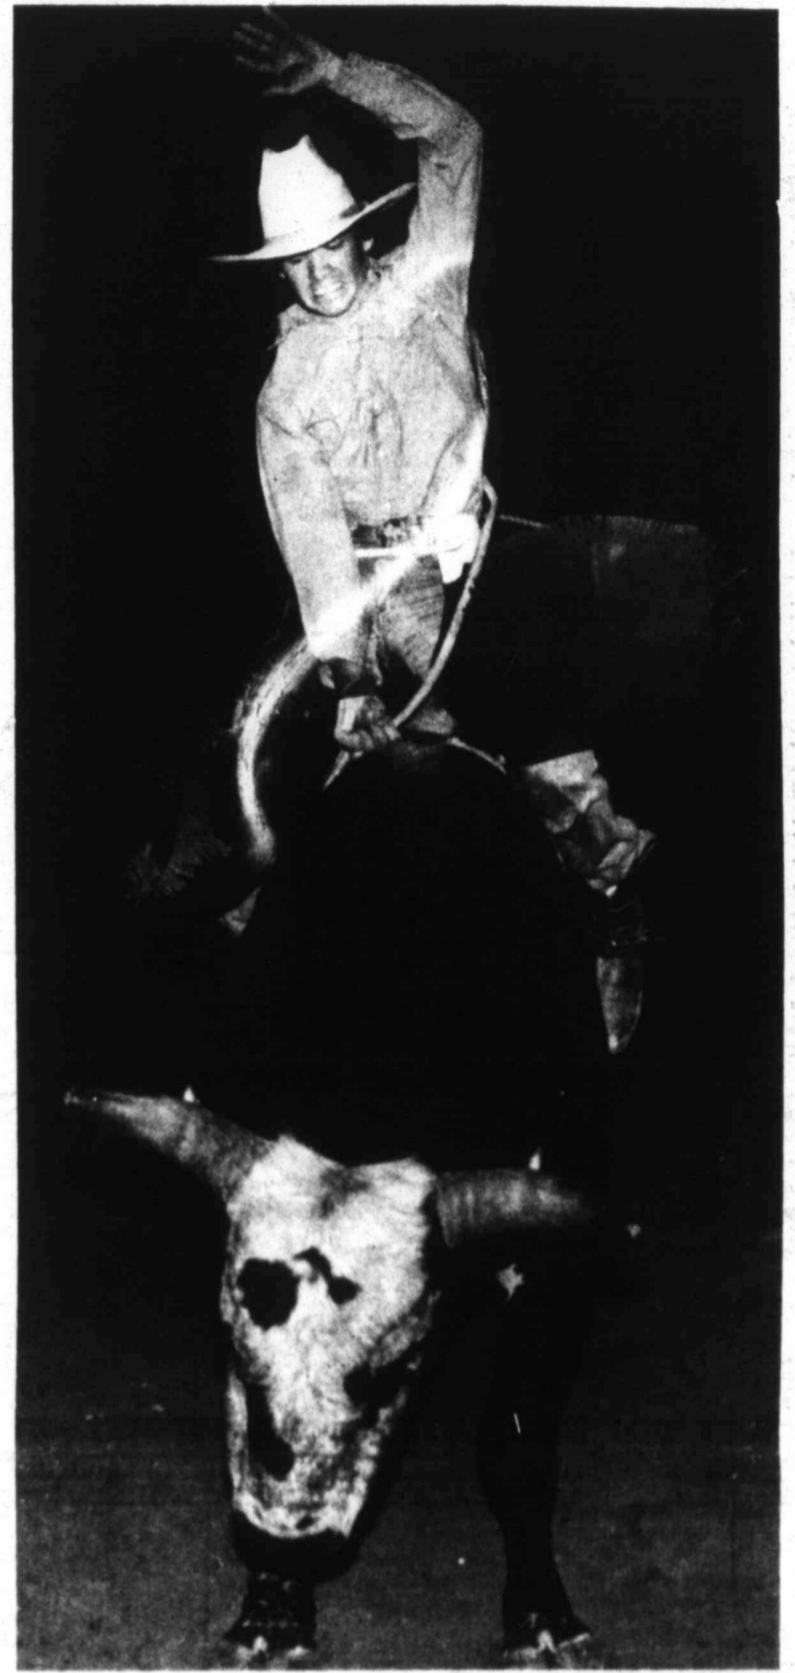

Under the plan, which Schlesinger said he anticipated would be sent to Congress early next year, the government would mail ration checks to motor vehicle owners every three months.

These checks, in turn, could be cashed in at banks and other financial institutions for actual ration coupons, Schlesinger said.

He said the coupons would then be required to purchase gas at service stations.

The decision on how much fuel would be allocated for each vehicle would depend on how serious the supply shortage is, the energy secretary said.

However, Schlesinger said that a cutback in petroleum products of 25 percent — which he anticipated might be the effect of another Arab embargo — would probably mean that the average automobile would be permitted two gallons per day.

BEAT THE CHAMP — Darryl Darnall of Memphis, Tenn., beat the world champion bull rider, Don Gay, here on opening night, but still was not winner of the event. The top rider turned out to be Denny Flynn of Charleston, Ark., who scored a high 85. Darnall collected 76 points and Gay 72 for the three top rides.

LULAC head claims to be on Carter's enemy list

HOUSTON (AP) — Ruben Bonilla, the head of the Texas League of United Latin American Citizens said he was not invited to a Friday meeting in Houston with President Carter because he is on what he termed the president's "enemies list."

Bonilla, of Corpus Christi, said Mexican Americans who have criticized Carter were placed on an enemies list and not invited to the meeting.

Carter is to arrive Friday for a Democratic fund-raising dinner. He also is to speak Saturday in Beaumont at the dedication of a new federal building and post office.

"People were not invited based on their past knowledge or their intense community involvement," Bonilla said. "The meeting seems to be one of a partisan nature."

Eonilla said those invited to the meeting are Mexican American Democratic Party loyalists. He also said the invitations smacked of "cronyism."

However there are many people upset about the invitations, according to state Rep. Ben Reyes of Houston, who was invited.

"The invitation list leans heavily toward the Houston community," Reyes said. "I think the people invited are a good cross section of Democrats actively involved in the community."

Reyes said he did not know what Bonilla meant by the term "loyalists," but he believes those invited to be "loyal Democrats."

He said he does not believe the invitations smack of "cronyism."

Two persons killed in wreck nine miles east of Garden City

Two persons were killed in a two vehicle wreck nine miles east of Garden City on Texas 158 at 4 a.m. today when a car swerved into the wrong lane and struck a truck head-on.

Delma Ramirez, 27, of 313 Fiesta, Midland, was driver of the east bound vehicle when it struck the truck. She was dead at the scene as was Crecencio Hernandez, 27, of Seminole, a passenger in the car.

Both persons were pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace J.E. Wooten of Garden City. The bodies were taken to Newnie-Ellis

Funeral Home in Midland.

The truck was driven by Marvin Alfred Brown, Jr. of San Angelo, and was headed west when the accident occurred.

Ben Lockhart was investigating trooper at the accident. The accident report stated that the driver of the car may have gone to sleep and swerved into the path of the oncoming truck.

The two persons killed were both thrown from the vehicle following the crash.

Glasscock County has recorded six traffic fatalities this year including one killed near St. Lawrence, one on S87 in Glasscock County, one west of Garden City and two east of Garden City. This is a large number of fatalities for the sparsely populated county, according to Sheriff Booger Pruitt.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Wasted water

Q. Considering the short supply of water in Lakes Thomas and Spence, why can't the city stop the water leak at Second and Scurry Streets?

A. "If there is a water main leak at Second and Scurry, we have probably already fixed it," said Bill Brown, assistant city manager. "We have a crew that's just itching to jump on something like that any hour of the day or night," he added.

He explained that in most cases the crew will be summoned immediately to repair the leak. If the leak is less serious, and it occurs during the night, the repair will be made the next morning.

Brown suggested that the leak may actually be runoff water from a faucet at a Second Street business, and if it is, that's the business's business.

Offbeat: Jay arrives in style

UTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Feigeri Corona arrived at the local Toronto Blue Jays' baseball farm club in style from his native Dominican Republic — but the last leg of the trip was expensive.

Corona, who does not speak English, had trouble explaining to officials of the Utica Blue Jays the problems he faced after arriving in the United States, but the driver of the cab in which he arrived from New York was sure of the price — $393.

When Corona arrived in New York he could not locate his baggage, which contained his visa. By the time he found his visa he could not find his wife.

But Corona did find taxi driver Victor Gonzalez, who also has trouble speaking English, but who helped Corona find his wife and drove the Coronas the 240 miles to Utica.

Tops on TV: Phase IV

Tonight's the night for realism and serious drama. First a woman is hunted by a bunch of weird ants that have super powers allowing them to destroy all natural enemies. Bounces, ropes to lead in two rodeo events

Bode sets pace for cowboys

By MARJ CARPENTER

Butch Bode from Milano set a fierce pace for cowboys competing in the opening night of rodeo here Wednesday, when he collected winning time in both the calf roping and the bulldogging.

Bode swept in during the calf roping and collected an 8.8 seconds to set the pace for 11 other ropers, all of whom caught their calves, which in itself is unusual in a rodeo.

He roared back in to be the first contestant in the steer wrestling and again nabbed best time with 4.3. The bull riding event was terrific and held all kinds of drama for the fans.

Jim Watkins of Odessa drew the toughest bull and the bull won with Watkins going by ambulance to the emergency room of the hospital where he was treated for bruises and walked out.

Don Gay, world champion bull rider made it look easy as he posted 72, but he was bested by both Darryl Darnall of Memphis, Tenn., with a 76 and Denny Flynn of Charleston, Ark., who ended the show with a big 85 mark. Flynn is a cowboy who came back to bull riding after a stint in the hospital from injuries.

Gary Payne of Ingals, Kan., scored 71 to win the opening night on the bareback broncs. A Louisiana cowboy was second when Glen Webb posted 69 and Bob Logue of Kaufman was third with 68.

Nancy Anderson of Colorado City led the barrel racing with 17.43 followed by Big Spring's own Wanda Driver with 18.60 and Sandy Retz of Randlett, Okla., with 18.61.

Winning the show times in calf roping were Bode with 8.8 followed by Fred Garrett of Louise with 10.1 and Larry Riddle of Frisco with 11 flat. These times may have been bested during the slack roping which follows each show due to the large number of entrants in the competition.

Entry lists are so high that barrel riders and bull riders have only one ride each this year in the show, which has three more nights with performances starting at 8:30 nightly.

Rick Whorton of Springdale, Ark., posted 73 to win the saddle bronc riding followed by Rick Carpenter of Jasper, Ala., with a 71 and Mike O'Neil of Branbury with a 67. Gene

Reed almost had the best ride, but the San Antonio cowboy went over the head of his bronc right before the buzzer.

In the dogging, Bode was winner followed by Delbert McKenzie of Austin with a 5.9 and Chuck Garrett of Denver City with a six flat. The sheriff of Mitchell County, Bill McGuire and Joe Anderson, also from Colorado City, were just out of the money with 6.9.

Team roping was not the swiftest event of the evening as the first three teams missed their calves and the next three caught the heel instead of the head. But Charley Price of Hobbs, N.M. and Dan Fisher, son of Junior Fisher, an earlier West Texas roper from Andrews, posted the best time with 12.5. This duo recently won the roping in Del Rio, which like Big Spring, is roping country.

The rodeo officials introduced in the arena included Charlie Creighton, president; Toots Mansfield, seven times world champion cowboy and Bob Steiner, bull riding champion and representing the Steiner Rodeo producers who put on the show here.

Renee Crisp, queen of the American Association of Sheriff's Poses and riding clubs was introduced in the arena. Other special posse sweethearts include Becky Alberts, Lubbock, princess for the region and district sweethearts including Inga Stewart, San Angelo and Julia Johnson, Lubbock. Marka Highley is the Howard County Sheriff's posse queen.

Quail Dobbs was a great favorite of the crowd and did two special presentations in addition to fighting bulls with Tommy Sheffield, one of the best in this category.

Expert trick riding by Christy Brown, Micki McNutt and Vickie Tyer was well received by the crowd.

The big star for the evening was Judy Lynn, country western star from Las Vegas, who put on quite a show for a crowd of around 6,000 people at the opener. She had a large crowd at the dance that followed.

Billy Walker, country western singer called the tall Texan, is the star of the show tonight. On Friday night, Fiddling Frenchie Burke returns by popular demand and Saturday features Hoyle Nix.

YOUNGEST PRINCESS — Little Sandy Richardson from Post was the youngest princess in the parade and grand entry. The winning posse were Scurry County, San Angelo and Dawson County, in that order, but the Post posse was the most lively as they rode down the streets of Big Spring, with cowboys hollering all the way.

DID GET A BAND — Melodie Choate and Kristi Taylor carry the colors down the street at the parade, followed by a volunteer band gotten together by Jim Griffin, president of the high school band. It included members of Big Spring, Coahoma and Forsan bands and marched smartly down the street playing the theme from "Bonanza" and other western tunes.

LONG ARM OF THE LAW — Bill McGuire, sheriff of Mitchell County, wrestles his steer in 6.9 as shown above during the opening night of rodeo in Big Spring. Best time for the evening in the dogging event was Butch Bode of Milano with 4.3.

HELLO QUAIL — This Coahoma citizen, Quail Dobbs, is a well-known and well-loved rodeo cowboy all over the circuit and is especially welcome each rodeo season in Big Spring where the home fans love his antics.

Deaths

Inez Luce

STANTON — Inez Webb Luce, 83, Midland, a native of Martin County, died Wednesday in a Midland hospital following an extended illness.

Services are scheduled for 10 a.m., Friday in Newbie Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Roy A. Carley, retired Baptist minister, officiating.

Burial will take place in the Evergreen Cemetery in Stanton.

Ms. Luce was a retired elementary school principal. She grew up in Martin County and attended West Texas State University.

Survivors include four sisters, Pearl Hardy, Hobbs, N.M., Flossie Gaskins, Artesia, N.M., and Lillie Harvard and Ova Webb, both of Midland.

Doyle Mensch

LAMESA — Services for Doyle Mensch, 55, of Lamesa will be at 10 a.m. Friday in Bryan Street Baptist Church with the Rev. Fred Heath, pastor, and the Rev. Ray Smith of Lubbock officiating. Burial will be in Lamesa Memorial Park under the direction of Branon Funeral Home.

Mensch died at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday in Medical Arts Hospital after a sudden illness.

A Texan, Mensch was a resident of Dawson County 52 years. He was a veteran of World War II and a 21-year member of Bryan Street Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Lola; three daughters, Mrs. Beth Leatherwood of Lamesa, Mrs. Nancy Maudin of Artesia, N.M., and Mrs. Brenda Richter of Midland; a son, Gary of Jacksonville; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S.A. Mensch of Tahoka; three sisters, Mrs. Pierce Mayes of Tahoka, Mrs. Geraldine Yandell of Hereford and Mrs. Faye Bradshaw of Graham; four brothers, Otis of O'Donnell, Clem of Lorenzo, Alvis of Carlsbad, N.M., and Leroy of Lamesa; six grandchildren and two step-grandchildren.

Energy

Strike finalized in Martin County

A discovery in Dawson County continued to test. A strike was finalized in Martin County and a re-entry was scheduled in Borden County this week.

Mitchell Energy Corp., Midland, No. 1-6 Waldrop, in 6-34-5n-T&P, Dawson County, unidentified oil discovery, probably lower Spraberry or Dean, approximately 1,500 feet north and slightly east of the depleted one-well Key, North (Spraberry) field, 1 1/2 miles east-northeast of the Walls (Wolfcamp) field and 5 1/2 miles northeast of Lamesa, flowed 54 barrels of oil and six barrels of water in nine hours.

Flow gas through an unreported choke and perforations a 7,288-292 feet. Testing continued.

The Key, North opener, Texas National Petroleum Co., No. 1 R.F. Jackson, a Pennsylvania failure, was drilled to 8,928 feet and finished Aug. 12, 1960 to pump 60.03 barrels of 40.2 gravity oil, plus 60 percent salt water with gas-oil ratio of 912-1 through perforations at 7,010-70 feet.

IN MARTIN COUNTY, a portion of the Hutex multipay field gained its fifth Dean producer and a 3/4 mile southwest extension to that pay with completion of Rial

Oil Co., Midland, No. 1-39-University, 1/2 mile southeast of Dean production in the Lacaff multipay field and 17 miles northwest of Stanton to pump 76 barrels of 40 gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio of 740-1. Production was through perforations at 9,625-629 feet, which had been acidized with 5,000 gallons.

Locatin is 660 feet from the north and 1,980 feet from the east lines of 39-7-University Lands.

IN BORDEN COUNTY, Shell Oil Co. will re-enter and clean out to 8,102 feet for recompletion attempt as a third Straw producer and a 1 1/2 mile northeast extension to that pay in the Dumigan field at its No. 1-B Slaughter, former Ellenberger opener of the U-Lazy S field, 12 miles north of Gail.

Original completion was Oct. 15, 1958 for 189 barrels of oil through a 6-64-inch choke and perforations at 8,633-42 feet. It flowed oil on two tests and recovered oil on two tests in the Pennsylvania.

Location is 665 feet from the north and 662 feet from the east lines of 16-30-6n-T&P.

JCPenny contributes $300 million

DALLAS — Marvin L. Tanner, regional vice president of JCPenny Company, Inc., has announced that the company contributed more than $312 million to Texas' economy during 1977.

Purchases from state manufacturers accounted for $216.9 million in merchandise which was distributed throughout the company's 2,090 JCPenny. The Treasury and Thrift Drug stores in the U.S., he said.

Combined payrolls in Texas amounted to more than $89 million, going to approximately 28,544 full and part-time associates. The company employs 186,000 full-time nationally and overseas.

Tanner said the retailer paid about $5.7 million in corporate, property, use and unemployment insurance taxes in Texas.

"Additionally, our retail stores collected many millions of dollars in sales taxes for state and local governments," he said. "Texas has been very important to our company throughout the years. We opened our first store in the state at Dalhart in 1917 and we've always tried to operate in a manner that best benefits our Texas customers," Tanner added.

At year-end JCPenny operated 200 retail support units in the state. Included are 134 JCPenny department store, 3 Treasury stores, 23 Thrift Drug stores and 40 other facilities and offices.

Tanner indicated that the company is greatly pleased with its growth in the state over the past 61 years. Our continued growth and expansion in Texas will be in direct relationship to the continued growth of the Texas economy and a healthy Texas business climate.

LAMESA YOUTH — Some folks have all the luck and young Jade Fromman from Lamesa gets a kiss from Judy Lynn at the opening performance of the Big Spring rodeo. Her band and singing drew a large crowd to the first night's dance. Tonight's star is Billy Walker, the tall Texan.

Float built by Girl Scouts chosen first place in parade

A float built by the Girl Scouts was chosen as the top float in Wednesday's Big Spring rodeo parade. The float makers received $100 from the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce for their efforts on the float entitled "Home on the Range."

Second place and $60 went to Security State Bank for their "People Like You" float while First Federal Savings and Loan's "Hayride" took third and $40.

Judges placing the floats for the Chamber were Tom Watson, Faye Read, and Pat Tallant.

Howard College rodeo team in contention

Howard College rodeo men's team is in contention for the championship in the College National Rodeo Finals Rodeo being held this week in Bozeman, Mont.

Mack Altizer, son of the roping great, Jim Bob Altizer of Del Rio, is sitting in first place after two rounds with 9.1 and 9.3. Guy Miller, also of Howard College, is going into the short run Saturday night after leading the first round with 8.8 and adding a 10.2 in the second to be in third place.

Skipper Driver, rodeo coach, who stayed behind to help with the local rodeo this week said, "The men's team is doing great for Big Spring in Montana."

Other leaders include: Steer Wrestling — 1, Samuel Edmonson, Cal State-Fresno, 14.90, 2, Olin Smith, Southeastern Oklahoma, 14.80, 3, Ned Kayser, Walla Walla College, 17.00, 4, (tie), Mike Fuller, Blue Mountain College, and Rory Brown, Dickinson State College, 18.50. Kerrville city manager quits

KERRVILLE — Jack Garrison has resigned as city manager of Kerrville, citing tensions connected with the job as his reason for quitting. Garrison will formally step down Sept. 15. Garrison, who has been city manager since March 1976, said he plans to stay in Kerrville.

Downtown Lions Club to install officers

Downtown Lions Club will have wives and other guests at their meeting Tuesday 7 p.m. in the Cactus Room at Howard College. This will take the place of the regular meeting Wednesday noon, June 28.

The Ladies Night affair also will be the occasion for installation of new officers, headed by Morris Rhodes, who will succeed M.A. Barber as president.

At the meeting Wednesday noon, Barber summed up humanitarian activities of the club for the past year. Approximately $4,000 has been spent by the club, including over $1,400 for eye glasses, principally for school children. The club also gave nearly $800 to the Lions state camp for crippled and diabetic children; $200 to the Boys Club, and sizeable amounts supporting Boy Scouts, the YMCA, Teen-age baseball, football, and various Lions projects such as the eye bank, teletypes for deaf people, CARE and Lions International Foundation. Barber also handed out several awards for media assistance and outstanding committee work.

Scouts selling fireworks

The Senior Girl Scout Troop 360 is selling fireworks at a location on the Lamesa highway. The Scouts are attempting to raise funds to visit the Swiss Chalet in Switzerland next year.

The stand will be open June 23 through July 4 on June 23, it will be open from 6-10 p.m. On June 24-29 it will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. except Sunday when it opens at noon.

From June 30 to July 4, it will be open from 10 a.m. to midnight.

Prof might face charges

PELHAM, Mass. (AP) — A professor of veterinary and animal science faces possible charges of cruelty to animals after four apparently malnourished horses were seized from her pasture. The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals took custody of the horses Wednesday, alleging that they were being mistreated by Peggy McConnell, a University of Massachusetts professor. Society officials were awaiting results of a veterinarian's examination of the four horses before deciding today whether to file criminal charges against the woman.

Ford won't seek presidency

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford had a poorly planned and executed campaign in 1976 and will not seek the presidency in 1980, Sen. Barry Goldwater says.

The Arizona Republican said at a news conference Wednesday that his impression was that Ford was not even out to win in 1976. The Republican Party's unsuccessful presidential candidate in 1964 told an earlier fund-raising dinner for Wyoming Treasurer Ed Witzemberger that Ford "doesn't have the stomach" for another presidential campaign.

A new minority?

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Paul E. Dozier has filed suit on behalf of what he calls "the minority sex — men — demanding the city of Jacksonville create a Mayor's Advisory Committee on the Status of Men to match the existing Mayor's Advisory Committee on the Status of Women." Dozier declared in the suit filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court that "to tax the men of America for a concern in which they are excluded by sex... and then to further evaluate the status of women without evaluating the status of men equates to taxation without representation."

Minister runs for Senate

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The Rev. Betty Bone Schiess, who several years ago became an Episcopal priest in a controversial ordination in Philadelphia, has been chosen to run for the New York Senate.

The Onondaga County Democratic Committee endorsed the Syracuse University chaplain Wednesday to run against Republican incumbent Martin Auer in the 49th District, which covers Madison County and part of Onondaga County.

Life terms begin today

KINGSTON, N.Y. (AP) — Anthony "Tony Pro" Provenzano and his associate, Harold Konigsberg, begin serving life sentences today at Dannemora State Prison for the murder of a union rival 17 years ago.

Provenzano, 60, and Konigsberg, 49, were sentenced to life imprisonment Wednesday for their roles in the strangling death of Anthony "Three Fingers Tony" Castellito, secretary-treasurer of Teamsters' Union Local 506 in New Jersey. Provenzano was the branch's president at the time.

President of mayors urges states to share with cities

ATLANTA (AP) — The new president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors is urging state governments to share their wealth with local communities threatened with financial woes as a result of the taxpayers' revolt against property taxes.

Mayor William H. McNichols of Denver called for the in-state revenue sharing as the annual meeting of the mayors' conference ended Wednesday.

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps warned the mayors that a tax rebellion triggered by California's Proposition 13 could generate panic that might destroy the nation's cities. Proposition 13, overwhelmingly approved June 6, would cut property taxes in California by 57 percent.

McNichols specifically urged states to share their income tax revenue with municipalities, which traditionally rely heavily on property taxes.

Some states, he said, "are so jealous of this (income) tax they refuse to share it, in which case they could at least enact a statewide state-collected sales tax which would be returned to the point of collection."

Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson agreed, saying local governments are being forced to pay for state-mandated programs.

"If the states are going to say, 'Cities, do this and do that and do that,' states ought to give the cities the means with which to do those things," Jackson said.

The mayors adopted a resolution endorsing property tax reform but pledging to work to insure that future tax-cut initiatives, such as Proposition 13, include means for replacing lost revenue.

Mrs. Kreps said she hopes the tax revolt will encourage Hill's opinion disregarded

Houston to grant exemptions

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston school district still intends to grant additional tax exemptions to senior citizens with fixed or low incomes despite an opinion by Atty. Gen. John Hill that such exemptions are not constitutional, according to board president Bill Harwell.

"His opinion is, of course, just that," Harwell said. "It is an opinion issued by the attorney general, but this does not change our board policy nor does it mean our board policy is illegal."

The Houston Independent School District board voted in February to increase the homestead property tax states to assume a larger share of the cost of urban services and thus reduce the dependence of local governments on property taxes.

Should the tax rebellion force a reduction of essential city services, she warned, "panic out-migrations of firms and residents" will result, "further diminishing the tax base and further reducing the ability of affected cities to meet minimum needs."

"It is potentially the most vicious of cycles," she said.

In another resolution, the mayors sidestepped a showdown between "sunbelt" and "snowbelt" cities over the distribution of federal dollars — an issue that had been simmering throughout the five-day conference.

President Carter's urban policy calls for focusing federal aid on areas with the most need, rather than spreading it around evenly.

Some mayors voiced concern that the criteria for funneling the federal aid might be so narrow that their cities would be denied assistance.

In their resolution, the mayors suggested that unemployment statistics, as well as under-employment figures, be used to determine how the federal dollars are allocated.

McNichols told reporters he intends to create a task force to study the problems of "sunbelt" cities "that have, indeed, problems that are as acute as those of the so-called 'horror stories' — New York and what have you."

He said the conference should "recognize that some programs are for cities that are on the verge of being bankrupt. Other programs are for cities that have the wisdom and the will ... to keep from being bankrupt."

Members of the conference's ERA task force announced Wednesday they will campaign for an extension of the ratifying deadline for the Equal Rights Amendment.

"We, as mayors, recognize that the ERA is not a women's issue or a man's issue but concerns the equality of all persons under the law," said Mayor Lila Cockrell of San Antonio, Texas, who heads the task force.

She told reporters that task force members plan to write letters to members of the House and Senate judiciary committees seeking a seven-year extension of the March 22, 1979, ratification deadline.

Mayors who belong to the conference also will be urged to support the extension drive, she said.

And, Mrs. Cockrell said, the task force plans to "lend assistance to the efforts to achieve ratification" in states that have not approved the ERA.

The mayors' conference has come under fire for holding its convention in Georgia, which is among those states that have not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment. About a dozen mayors boycotted the meeting because of its location, a spokesman for the conference said.

Other members of the ERA task force are Mayors David Vann of Birmingham, Ala.; Richard Carver of Peoria, Ill.; Jackson of Atlanta; Frank Logue of New Haven, Conn.; Henry Maier of Milwaukee; Carole McClellan of Austin; Thomas Moody of Columbus; Charles Royer of Seattle, and Coleman Young of Detroit.

As the conference came to an end, the delegates shelved a resolution criticizing a trip by 17 mayors, other city officials and conference staff to Cuba.

changes in the tax code later. As part of the agreement with the Democratic congressional leaders, the administration received assurances that there would be separate floor votes on some of the "reform" proposals, congressional sources said.

These sources, who asked not to be identified, saw Carter as apparently trying to trade off the reform proposals for a chance to get the tax cut bill out of the House Ways and Means Committee, where it has languished for months amid a dispute over cutting capital gains taxes.

The administration source, who also asked to remain unnamed, said that Carter remains firm in his opposition to a cut in capital gains taxes on profits from the sale of such items as homes and stocks.

"That's the sticking point in all of this — the capital gains tax," said a committee source Wednesday night. He said the administration is gambling that the offer to reduce in tax write-offs out of the bill may sway enough Democratic votes in the committee.

A spokesman for Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said the House speaker was ready to push for the Carter compromise.

Police end stakeout

VOLUNTOWN, Conn. (AP) — Police called off a stakeout around a hijacked trailer truck today and awaited the arrival of fingerprint experts before opening the trailer to see if its contents of $1.6 million in gold and silver remained untouched.

Police believed the truck, hijacked by two men on Interstate 95 in North Stoughton early Wednesday, still contained a load of the precious metals destined for a refinery in Massachusetts. A seal on the truck remained unbroken and there were no signs that anyone had gotten inside by means other than the sealed door, said State Trooper John McLeod.

With a massive air and land search, police located the truck at 1 p.m. about 10 miles from the hijack site Wednesday. It was partially hidden in a heavily overgrown area, McLeod said.

The hijack occurred at 6 a.m. Wednesday when the truck driver, George A. Smith, had stopped to check an unspecified possible defect. Two masked men armed with guns forced him out of the truck and tied him to a tree, police said. He freed himself and called police after 15 minutes, officials said.

The haul of unrefined gold and silver was traveling from a Handy & Harmon plant in Fairfield to the company's refinery in Attleboro, Mass.

Handy & Harmon makes daily shipments of precious metals between the two locations, said Richard Daniel, company vice president.

Bill Fisher, candidate for Congress in the 17th District, recently reacted to the people's tax revolt in California. He said, "The voters, in essence, said to government, 'we will cut taxes if you won't. And government had better listen to the people.'"

Proposition 13 came about, Fisher said, because the people were saddled with taxes they didn't need, want or ask for. They are fed up with taxes, he added. Fisher pointed out that he advocated tax relief and lower tax rates long before it was a popular subject. Many since then have "jumped on the bandwagon" in support of lower taxes and tax rates.

Fisher commented that California's handling of the situation is foolish. The state

Bikes with defective brakes are recalled

Huffy Corporation in cooperation with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission announced a voluntary recall of certain 24-, 26-, and 27-inch, 10-speed bicycles that may have a defective pedal crank. The recall involves 54,000 bicycles sold between March 1977, and May 25, 1978, under the brand names Huffy, JC Penney, Omega and Coast King.

The crank is part of a new front free wheeling system that permits the shifting of gears without pedaling. Once the gears are shifted and the rider begins pedaling, substantial pressure is absorbed at the shoulder of the crank. If the bicycle contains a defective crank, the crank shoulder may likely break with possible loss of bicycle control and injury to the rider. The defective pedal crank can be identified by the crank arm that has two flat sides and a rectangular appearance. The finish is smooth and polished.

Owners of these bicycles should contact the retailer, from which they purchased the bicycle, or the nearest Huffy dealer. If this is not feasible, they should write to Huffy Bike Customer Service Department, P.O. Box 1204, Dayton, Ohio 45401.

Sam Schulze, Manager of Penney's here advises that only JCPenney model numbers 2131, 2141, 2180, 2380, and 2381 may have the defective crank.

Tax compromise could destroy reform pledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, trying to pry some form of tax-cut legislation from a congressional committee, is offering a compromise which, for the time being, scuttles his campaign pledge for tax reform.

Administration sources said the Carter plan, presented to House Democratic leaders on Wednesday, calls for a "no frills" $15 billion to $20 billion tax reduction for next year.

Although the compromise is a retreat from Carter's earlier demands for tax reform legislation, the administration source said Carter was not abandoning the effort and would seek changes in the tax code later. As part of the agreement with the Democratic congressional leaders, the administration received assurances that there would be separate floor votes on some of the "reform" proposals, congressional sources said.

These sources, who asked not to be identified, saw Carter as apparently trying to trade off the reform proposals for a chance to get the tax cut bill out of the House Ways and Means Committee, where it has languished for months amid a dispute over cutting capital gains taxes.

Train, truck collide; ends in explosion

FORT WORTH (AP) — A train carrying airplane fuel collided with a truck in southwest Fort Worth and exploded today. Police ordered the area for four to five miles around the site of the accident evacuated.

Police said one man was burned and another suffered a broken leg. Several other minor injuries were reported.

"The train was loaded with flight fuel for Carswell Air Force Base," said police dispatcher Dorothy Stewart. "We're evacuating a four to five mile radius of that area. It is mostly residential."

Police said the train was on a spur of the Southern Pacific track.

Weather

Southeast Texas has only rain in state

By the Associated Press: Widely scattered thundershowers were expected in extreme Southeast Texas today, but most of the state expected continued mostly clear skies and hot temperatures.

Some isolated thundershowers erupted during the night in West Texas and along the Red River in Northeast Texas, but the remainder of the state had clear skies. The thunderstorm activity died out before dawn.

Forecasts called for mostly clear skies and continued hot temperature readings statewide. Highs were expected to be mostly in the 90s with readings expected to reach the 100-degree mark in some of West Texas and near the 110-degree mark in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s with extremes ranging from 68 at Houston to 79 at Galveston.

Some early morning readings included 72 at Amarillo, 76 at Wichita Falls, 73 at Texarkana, 77 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 72 at Austin, 73 at Corpus Christi, 75 at McAllen, 77 at Del Rio, 75 at San Angelo, 70 at El Paso and 74 at Lubbock.

They're learning little about oil gamble

That dry hole drilled by Conoco Oil Company in the Baltimore Canyon area of the Atlantic Seaboard of New York can't be written off as a dead loss.

If it serves no other purpose, it increases the awareness of the people along the East Coast that oil exploration, whether or not there is a strike, isn't undertaken on a shoestring budget.

The oil firms gamble with big stakes. If they hit, the environmentalists and some of the students of politics gang up on them. If they wind up recovering nothing on their investment, their critics are prone to say the people in the industry can write it off and never suffer for it.

THE CONOCO WELL was the first completed in the Atlantic area. The site, 77 miles east of Atlantic City, is in the area of the first Atlantic leases auctioned by the Department of the Interior.

It is estimated that 800 million barrels of oil and 13.3 trillion cubic feet of gas are located somewhere beneath the tracts. It is natural then that the curious kept their eyes on the venture, both those inside and outside the oil industry.

The well, unfortunately, came up dry after having been drilled to 12,000 feet. Conoco is out $4 million on the venture. The East Coast, temporarily at least, is denied proof that it does have offshore oil reserves which can lower its energy costs, ease the nation's dependence on Middle East petroleum, help stabilize the dollar (which could certainly use some help) and contribute in countless other ways toward the good of the country.

Even if oil had flowed from the well in great quantities, it is important to remember that none of these benefits would have flowed automatically and immediately from it. Production would still be years away.

Even if a well should be brought in tomorrow, it could not go on stream for years. If the field turned out as productive as was originally hoped, the nation would not realize its full potential for another ten years.

WE WOULD have to go right on running up trade deficits for foreign oil for an unlimited amount of time because, let's face it, our appetites for energy have not been lessened in the slightest in recent years.

Despite Conoco's luckless venture, other companies are not dismantling their rigs and moving elsewhere. Work is going on at three other wells. Still more drilling will shortly get under way. In each instance, the drillers are taking expensive risks that might or might not pay off.

West Texans know in going for oil that drilling is a lot more involved than hammering a stick into the ground, then running a hose from there to your car or housing heating system.

The risk of failure is high, even in this era of advanced technology. Only one wildcat in five pays off, and each represents a multi-million dollar investment.

It's high time the people in the east learn what Texas and the other oil-producing states discovered a long time ago, that the oil business is a game for the high rollers and the pickers had better stay away. And the people in those areas, too, should start paying their way in the fight for enough energy to keep this country productive.

Style and eclat

Around the rim

James Werrell

Ah kittens! Ah parenthood! I was a fanatic dog lover for most of my formative years. I ended up thinking cats were something to drown: the old Irish bath; plop, plop, flush; give my regards to the tidy-bowl man.

Then along came Roscoe. A feline par excellence: with style and eclat, oh what a cat. Savoir faire? He had it to spare (Hey baby, pass me my bongos).

But really, he was an amazing cat. Take for example this time Roscoe and I were sitting home alone, drinking a couple of beers, watching the Reds play the Dodgers.

GARVEY WAS ON first, and things were looking bad for the Reds. Cey steps up to the bag, and I told Roscoe that Seaver would give him a slider.

Roscoe tells me I'm crazy, and calls a pitch-out, figuring Garvey will try for second.

We put a sardine on it, and sure enough, Bench catches Garvey going, gets the third out, and Seaver's in the clear.

"Son of a gun, you really called that one, Rosc," I said, laughing. He reached over and slashed my face with his claws, and said, "OK, pay up turkey!"

He'd be really temperamental sometimes.

This other amazing thing happened one time when Roscoe and I were alone, riding around in the car. Stupid me; I forgot to put brake fluid in the master cylinder, and we were doing about sixty before I remembered.

We were coming up real fast on this truck hauling nitro-glycerine, and I stepped on my brakes, and it was just like stepping on a Hostess Twinkie. Boy, I'll tell you, I was scared! But old Roscoe was cool as spinster's kiss.

Without a blink, he reached over and pulled on the emergency brake just in the nick of time.

"Roscoe, I owe you my life," I drooled.

"Get a grip, Mario Andretti Junior! You forget, I'm a passenger in this deathmobile, and I watch out for numero uno," he said, rolling his eyes disgustedly.

BUT ROSCOE'S luck ran out on him one misty Saturday in February. He had been doing the town with a foxy number across the street. She had a reputation, but it didn't seem to bother Roscoe.

Who knows? Maybe he had a little too much to drink. Maybe they lingered a little too long in the moonlight. Maybe ... maybe it hurts too much to try to remember. All I know is that Roscoe never knew what hit him.

We found him lying in the road with a note still clutched in his paw. He had probably planned to tack it to our door:

Dear Morons,

I'd rather eat dead birds than that slop you try to shove down my throat. What is this, Alcatraz? And who taught you how to cook a steak, anyway? That last one tasted like leftover Joan of Arc. Wise up or I'm leaving.

As always, your prisoner,
Roscoe

So, old Rosc was gone, and there will never be another one like him. So what am I, an avowed cat hater, doing with two new kittens?

I don't know, but believe it or not, I am getting sort of attached to the little buggers. Why just the other day, the three of us were sitting around alone in the living room, playing a little high-low split, and they had cleaned me out of about six bucks, and...

Protecting Americans

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — President Carter's reorganization plan taking civil defense out of the Pentagon and putting it in the White House will soon be followed by a secret National Security Council (NSC) study demolishing the arms control lobby's arguments that Soviet civil defense does not matter.

The reorganization plan was fought to the end by Secretary of Defense Harold Brown, a confirmed skeptic about civil defense. The NSC study is passionately opposed by chief disarmament negotiator Paul Warnke, who contends that civil defense is useless. Taken together, the two moves suggest a radical and wholly unexpected shift in Carter administration policy.

However, this is only a beginning. As unconvinced defense-oriented members of Congress point out, there is no money commitment approaching what the Russians spend to protect their people. But Mr. Carter now has the organizational and theoretical base to generate public support for civil defense, if he desires.

CIVIL DEFENSE has been dead in this country for 15 years, killed the last year of the Kennedy administration. Mr. Carter seemed ready to bury it for good March 30, 1977, when he announced U.S.-Soviet plans to "mutually agree on forgoing major efforts in civil defense." Secretary Brown publicly belittled Soviet civil defense and privately muzzled Air Force intelligence officers worried about it.

Intentionally or not, this fit the arms control theory which holds U.S.-Soviet agreements are possible only if American citizens perceive that civil defense cannot prevent mutual destruction. Adam Yaromolinsky, counselor of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA), privately contends that advocates of civil defense are saying "a nuclear war could be no worse than a bad cold."

Change was generated last year from an unlikely source: Bardly Tirana, a liberal Washington lawyer with no military background who opposed the Vietnam war and supported George McGovern. Named head of civil defense in the Pentagon by his own and the military's consternation, Tirana quickly concluded that Jimmy Carter could not take a position countenancing a mass slaughter of Americans in a nuclear war. Thus, Tirana became an energetic convert for civil defense.

Simultaneously, NSC staffers, led by former Harvard Prof. Samuel Huntington, began drafting Presidential Review Memorandum (PRM) 32 as a rebuttal to the arms control theory. The preliminary draft for the first time has the U.S. government recognizing the Kremlin's real outlook.

"The Soviets do not subscribe to the view that mutual vulnerability is stabilizing," says the PRM-32 draft, classified secret. "To the contrary, they believe that deterrence requires, in addition to offensive forces, a double defense from attack. In their view, a lack of significant damage-limiting capability inhibits the credibility of retaliation."

PRM-32 also argues that the "essential equivalence" of strategic strength between the U.S. and the Soviet Union "must also involve equivalent survivability of the two societies." Therefore, "a civilian defense program directed towards the goal of equivalent survivability is a necessary corollary to U.S. strategic forces policy."

To arms control theologians, this is Martin Luther tacking up his theses at Wittenberg. ACDA Director Warnke "is really screaming," according to one senior official, and will file a strenuous dissent to PRM-132.

To rock or not to rock

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a 16-month-old son whom I have always rocked to sleep. About nine months ago he had three ear infections in a row and was just miserable. The only way to get him to sleep was to rock him. I still hold him for his naps. I realize now what a problem I have caused.

I have been told to let him cry and he'll give in. No matter how wrong I know I am I just cannot let him cry. If it's a choice between his crying or my holding him, I hold him. At night it is different. It takes me about two minutes to rock him and he is down for the night. He refuses a pacifier, doesn't take a bottle, and doesn't have a favorite blanket. I am his security blanket. Please, any other suggestions besides letting him cry would be greatly appreciated. — Mrs. M.O.

I have never seen a case where rocking has been harmful to health. Rock away. He will probably be ready to end the partnership before you are. Rocking should be an enjoyable experience to both the mother (or father) and the child. You are not harming him emotionally. If the ear aches recur, have his tonsils and adenoids looked at.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I and many other readers would like to know more about hair and its care. I am an 18-year-old male who is already going gray. Are there other factors besides stress which can cause this? Is it hereditary, and can anything be done to slow the process? Also, does washing your hair often cause it to secrete more oil? Do you have material on hair care? — R.A.

You probably can find some premature graying in your family tree. It is hereditary and I doubt stress has much to do with it. In any event, there is little you can do to help except at the cosmetics counter. My booklet on hair health is not a cosmetics manual, but lists some of the prime causes of hair problems. Washing hair will not cause it to secrete more oil. The hair doesn't secrete oil. The tiny hair follicles under the skin surface do this. Washing removes oil that collects on the shafts. Except where glandular insufficiency, pregnancy, malnutrition, or drug reactions are involved, it is a matter of improper grooming. For the booklet, "Good Health for Your Hair," send 25 cents and a stamped self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband had a checkup at a clinic twice in five years and they said his electrocardiogram was abnormal. Yet when he went to see a heart doctor he was told his blood pressure was 130 over 70 and his cholesterol normal. Why the difference of opinion? — Mrs. S.B.

I think you're trying to add apples and oranges. The electrocardiogram doesn't measure blood pressure. Your husband's 130 over 70 blood pressure reading is excellent. However, it is possible to have normal blood pressure and an abnormal electrocardiogram reading. Anxiety at the time of testing can cause temporary irregularities. What does the doctor say about his ECG?

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What would you think about a normal, healthy 15-year-old girl who had one period when she was 13 and has never had any more? She doesn't date. — R.P.

Irregularity, even of this kind, is not unusual in girls her age. An examination might be in order, however, if only to ease your mind and the girl's. Treatment is rarely needed prior to the 18th year. By that time she very likely will establish her cycle. If the periods do not become regularized within the next two years, she should be checked more thoroughly.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When I put an eye examination the doctor puts drops in my eyes to enlarge the pupils. Why? After that my eyes turn red for a few days. My friends tell me the drops harm your eyes. Will you comment? — F.D.

Some such drops can irritate the eyes temporarily. But they do not harm the eyes or vision. Mention the situation to the ophthalmologist the next time you are treated. A counteracting drop can be used. Dilator drugs (in the drops) "open the window" of the eye so the doctor can inspect the interior closely, noting, for example, the status of the tiny blood vessels nourishing it.

To find out what causes high blood pressure and what can be done to treat it, send for a copy of "Controlling Your Blood Pressure (Hypertension)" by Dr. Thosteson. Write to him in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters.

Dear Editor:

We are being asked to report anyone deliberately destroying the trees in the esplanade on Washington Boulevard.

This is city property and guilty parties, if apprehended will be made to pay damages.

Please report such people to the proper authorities.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Some people from a small cult came to my door the other day. I was very rude to them and demanded that they leave. My husband feels I was not a good witness to them, but I strongly disagree with their teaching. Was I right in what I did? — P.W.

DEAR P.W.: I don't know the full circumstances, of course. But if these people were very aggressive and rude to you, it might have been necessary to be firm to get them to leave. However, even in such situations, I do not believe rudeness is ever in order.

Paul uses a little phrase that I have found very helpful many times, he tells us we should be "speaking the truth in love" (Ephesians 4:15). Yes, we are told to speak the truth, and we should never forget that we stand for the truth of Jesus Christ against all the distortions and heresies men may devise. But we also are to speak in love. That means we should have the other person's welfare in mind. From what you indicate, your visitors have become involved in a counterfeit religion, which will eventually mean their eternal separation from God.

Were you really concerned for them and their eternal salvation, or were you merely concerned to get them out of your way?

What should you do if such people come to your door again? If you do not know very much about their doctrines, it may not be wise to engage them in too much conversation, since they often will distort Bible passages to suit their ideas and will only confuse you.

On the other hand, remember that you have the privilege of asking questions, and one you should not be afraid to ask is, "Who do you believe Jesus Christ is, and how can we be saved?" As a Christian you know that Jesus is the divine Son of God, and we are saved only by faith in Him. A simple word of testimony, sincerely given, may have more impact than all the arguments you can muster.

Coast Watergate?

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — It is the nature of politics that an occasional putrefying odor will bubble up from below to foul the atmosphere. Such an emanation, with a strong smell of Watergate, has now been detected in California. It could create a huge political stink.

It has all the unsavory ingredients of Watergate — illegal campaign contributions, laundered cash, secret manipulations, influence peddling. There has even been a cover-up.

The evidence is contained in a stack of affidavits, investigative reports and other documents that we have obtained. A Senate committee has been digging into the case. The FBI and the Federal Election Commission (FEC) are also investigating.

THE CASE REVOLVES around Earl Brian, a staunch conservative with an imperious air, who was a top aide and political protégé of ex-Gov. Ronald Reagan. Brian ran California's giant Health and Welfare Agency and then, with Reagan's active support, tried to gain the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate.

Before he left the welfare agency in 1974 to run for the Senate, Brian made two moves that investigators are now reviewing. He granted an increase in Medicaid payments to the state's nursing homes. He also considered a pilot project to pay nursing homes to care for severely impaired patients.

The California Association of Nursing Homes, whose clients would benefit, wanted the pilot project so badly that the association formed a special committee to lobby for it in Sacramento. The committee was headed by Robert Glenn Olels, owner of the Glenhaven chain of seven nursing homes. Another prominent member was William Bauer, who owns seven Casa Blanca nursing homes.

SHORTLY AFTER Brian resigned from the welfare agency, two nursing homes owned by Olels and Bauer were mysteriously selected for the project. Also chosen were two other facilities owned by association members who had been lobbying for the project.

The fact that Brian had formally cut his ties, apparently, did not diminish his influence inside the agency. As Reagan's favored Senate candidate, he continued to pack a wallop. This was impressed upon nursing home owners who were quietly pressured to contribute to Brian's Senate campaign.

Olels and Bauer, presumably grateful for their state blessings, began soliciting contributions from other owners. Some donations were laundered to disguise their sources; others were drawn illegally from corporate funds.

Yet all this cash, plus Reagan's political boosting, did not save Brian from an ignominious defeat in the 1974 Republican primary. The wounded political warhorse was also left saddled with $50,000 in campaign debts.

His financial need coincided with a decline in the fortunes of the pilot project. State health officials were muttering that the project was illegal, and it looked as if the whole program would expire. All the elements were present for a political fix.

The message was communicated to the nursing home owners that they would be expected to help make up Brian's campaign deficit if they wanted the program extended. A Senate staff memo, stamped "Confidential," explains the situation in raw political language: "Brian wanted help from the principal nursing home association members, who had been the beneficiaries of the...pilot program, to make good his losses."

ALTHOUGH BRIAN was out of office, the memo adds, "he was perceived as having tremendous influence" in the Reagan administration. They thought he had life-or-death power over the lucrative program. This "is alleged to have provided Brian with great leverage over the nursing home owners," the memo relates.

Olels and Bauer delivered the message to their fellow nursing home owners at a secret meeting on July 12, 1974, at the Velvet Turtle restaurant in Long Beach, Calif. One nursing home owner, Robert H. Brown, swore in an affidavit: "Olels and Bauer invited us to contribute a minimum of $5,000 each to pay Brian's campaign debts." The affidavit also charged that "Olels and Bauer made us aware of Brian's demands, that if we contributed, we could expect Brian to take action quickly...that Brian had this kind of authority and power even though he was no longer head of the Health and Welfare Agency." Brown said he had agreed to kick in $5,000 in three checks.

Another nursing home owner who attended the secret meetings, Victor Backus, told his story to an investigator for the Senate Committee on Aging. He confirmed that "we were told by Bauer and Olels that we would be expected to contribute a minimum of $5,000 to help Brian pay off his campaign debts."

Backus confided that Olels "instructed me to obtain a cashier's check for $5,000" because "personal checks would not be acceptable." Added Backus: "I thought the payment of money was a good investment."

Just two months after the secret meeting, the contributions had been collected and the campaign debt reduced. Then Brian's former colleagues at the health department came through. They declared an emergency and extended the pilot program, without bothering to hold public hearings.

Footnote: Olels told our associate Howie Kurtz that "there are no facts in these allegations." Brian and Bauer did not return our calls.

Mamas knew cure for head cold

Mothers have known it all along. Researchers are just getting around to discovering the fact.

We're speaking about a patented cure for an "efficacious upper respiratory tract infection" — chicken soup.

It took a $2,730 grant from the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute to make it official — chicken soup will help clear up your head cold.

A physician in Mount Sinai Hospital in Miami Beach came to such a conclusion after extensive research. Other liquids were tried but the chicken soup combination worked the best.

If Dr. Sacker had only listened to his mother, the research wouldn't have been needed.

Handicapped need equal education

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — An emotionally handicapped child has a right to a free and appropriate education that allows him as much contact as possible with his non-handicapped peers, according to a ruling by a federal judge which is expected to have a far-reaching effect.

In a preliminary injunction Wednesday U.S. District Court Judge Finis Cowan ordered the Friendswood Independent School District to provide an education for a 16-year-old youth expelled from school for behavioral problems in 1977. In their suit against the district, the youth's parents claimed his behavior was attributable to his emotional disorder.

In keeping with recent federal legislation on the rights of handicapped persons, Cowan ordered the district to evaluate the youth, named only as Douglas S. in the suit, immediately and draw up a plan for his education. Cowan said the district could take on responsibility for Douglas' education or pay someone else to provide it.

The judge also said the district has to pay the $2,400 a month it costs to keep Douglas in a private institution in Austin until his new educational program is underway. In addition, Cowan said the district is responsible for the cost of Douglas' education since he was expelled in January 1977.

Douglas' parents brought suit against the Galveston County district when the private institution threatened to discharge him because they could no longer pay the tuition.

Patrick Wiseman, attorney for Douglas S., said the youth has normal intelligence but suffers from minimal brain damage which affects his attention span and makes it difficult for him to follow instructions.

Wiseman had argued the school district and state education agency had failed to implement provisions of recently adopted federal legislation guaranteeing all handicapped students a free and appropriate education.

"There are about half a dozen to a dozen cases like this around the nation," Wiseman said. "This case is most significant because it protects a particular child. It has collateral benefit of putting school districts on notice to stop obstructing the law," he said.

Four persons die in hotel fire Wednesday

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Flames possibly set by an arsonist ripped through a fire-plagued hotel Wednesday, killing four persons as dozens jumped screaming and weeping into the smoky night on seedy Mission Street.

At least nine persons were treated at hospitals for burns, smoke inhalation or injuries from the fire at the low-rent Miramonte Hotel, which occupied three floors above a row of shops.

Residents asleep in the small furnished apartments were awakened by the smell of smoke or the shouts of "fire, fire." The four killed by smoke inhalation or flames were found in their rooms or hallways, fire officials said. About 30 of the 45 apartments were occupied.

Identities of the victims were not immediately available.

"It's a possible arson," said fire investigator John Hopkins, who confirmed reports by some tenants that "there have been numerous fires at the hotel over the years."

Hopkins said at least one suspect was to be questioned, but the exact cause of the blaze had not been determined.

"When they're set, fires move faster. Something made this one move fast," Hopkins said.

"My old lady was screaming and woke me up," said Thomas Tobin, 24, a second-floor resident, whose 17-year-old wife, Beyette, was treated at a hospital. She is three months pregnant.

"I opened the door to see what was happening. She ran toward a window to get on the ledge. I tried to grab her. She went down. I held her for two or three seconds before she fell. She was screaming and crying. I stayed until the firemen came with ladders on the ledge," Tobin said.

Miami airline flight has 'special' attraction

MIAMI (AP) — National Airlines Flight 51 was high above the plains of Texas when a vision, of sorts, appeared in the aisle. Passengers gasped. Flight attendants stared.

Before them was a young woman. Blonde, lovely, very happy — and nude. "She had a beautiful body," said a woman passenger who declined to give her name. "She perched on top of Row 27, guzzling champagne, and the passengers started laughing and clapping. She said she had just inherited $5 million and that's why she was doing it."

The DC-10 was midway on its trip from Miami to Los Angeles last Thursday night when the woman, described as — among other things — about 25, streaked down the aisle of the

"no frills" tourist section from first-class.

Passengers told the Miami News the woman climbed over six rows of seats in the widebody jet, whooping and waving a champagne bottle.

The woman's traveling companion, a young man, "just crawled under the seat," said a passenger. "He didn't ever go after her or anything."

The chief stewardess grabbed a blanket and went after the streaker, but the blonde eluded capture. Passengers applauded as the chase wound up and down the aisles.

After 15 minutes, the stewardess and blanket won out and the young woman was taken back to a seat, where crew members helped dress her. The pilot, Capt. Ed Mitchell, came out and tried to restore decorum. The blonde slept peacefully the rest of the way to Los Angeles.

The rest of the passengers? "I never saw so many grins in my life," said one woman. "For the rest of the flight we just sat there and smiled." National declined to identify the young woman but said no charges would be pressed.

Care of illegal aliens causes controversy

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — An illegal alien suffering from dehydration is found unconscious in the desert by the local Border Patrol.

An ambulance is called, and the alien is transported to Yuma Regional Medical Center for treatment. The patient is indigent and cannot pay his bill.

The question is: Who is responsible for this unpaid medical bill? Local hospitals say the Border Patrol should pick up the tab. The Border Patrol says it is not responsible.

So in the meantime, the hospital's paying patients are the ones taking care of the illegal aliens' medical bills through increase hospital rates. And hospital officials are calling it unfair.

"Our patients shouldn't have to pay for this," says Charles McConnell, hospital administrator. "Some other agency should be paying."

Speaking before the Yuma County Board of Supervisors this week, McConnell and members of the hospital board said the laws that require medical treatment of indigent illegal aliens should make some provision for payment of those services.

Claiming that there's no equity in the law, McConnell said the government passes bill requiring treatment and "they don't pass grants with money to go along with the bills."

McConnell explained that the Border Patrol is not responsible for the hospital bill of an indigent alien unless that person is in custody at the time of hospitalization.

But McConnell pointed out that the aliens are not taken into custody until after they leave the hospital. He said the Border Patrol should make that determination of custody before the patient leaves the hospital.

"Based on the information we've received, what we see is a lack of border officials placing (indigent aliens) in custody before transporting them to the hospital for medical attention," said Supervisor Chairman Bob Kennerly.

"They're placing them in custody after the medical bill has occurred."

Kennerly added that the Border Patrol was "evading what the real responsibility is."

But Harry Surface, chief patrol agent in the Yuma sector for the Border Patrol, said, "In order for us to determine three things: that the person is an alien, that the person is in the United States in violation of law and whether there is a likelihood they will escape prior to obtaining a warrant for arrest."

Surface explained that if a person is found unconscious on the desert, the Border Patrol is not able to determine whether that person is deportable.

Asked Kennerly: "Why wait until they walk out the door (of the hospital)? Why not determine if they're illegal aliens and take them into custody while they're still in the hospital?"

Professor Jerome A. Cohen, associate dean of the Harvard Law School, said the campaign's ultimate aim is to get all China's people to participate in making the country a modern power by the year 2000.

Cohen, director of Harvard's East Asian legal studies department, just returned from China, where he met officials of the new institute of law of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences and saw a criminal trial in Shanghai.

In an interview with The Associated Press, he said China's leaders realize that to get the enthusiastic participation of the masses, they must develop a legal system "with some kind of minimum security and order so that people will have confidence that they will not be subjected to arbitrary deprivations or sanctions by the state."

Modern China's 29-year history has witnessed vast pendulum swings with periods of relative freedom followed by periods of severe repression.

To overcome this, Cohen said, the Chinese leadership has recognized that the country needs a complex legal system to ensure that there is "a population of specialized and talented people who feel good enough about the state to enthusiastically participate in its development."

"For this reason, they're using the term human rights again and they're using it in precisely the terms we mean it. Now they're talking about political and legal rights — not economic and social rights."

He said the People's Republic of China is still a Communist dictatorship but it "is trying to moderate the worst excesses and go back to the degree of freedom that existed in the 1950s."

"They feel a deep resentment against the state and how it acted to them and their families. They feel they're really being asked to build an unjust society — that they may be arrested, dragged away at any time, held indefinitely, not know the charges against them, be subjected to torture," he added.

"They feel they can't put forth any ideas, make any innovations, articulate any genuine criticism without a month or a year later suffering severe consequences for what they were asked to do."

New laws in China allow more freedom

HONG KONG (AP) — China's new leadership is reviving legal institutions and talking favorably of "human rights" in what one American legal expert says is a campaign to convince millions of Chinese that speaking out won't mean arrest and torture as before.

Professor Jerome A. Cohen, associate dean of the Harvard Law School, said the campaign's ultimate aim is to get all China's people to participate in making the country a modern power by the year 2000.

Consumer credit one reason Retail sales down

NEW YORK (AP) — It isn't the ring of cash registers but their silence that's bothering analysts of retail sales, which have been holding up more strongly than many had anticipated.

The seeming paradox results, as you may have suspected, from the use of credit cards and other instruments of delayed payment that permit the luxury of purchases now and the worries of payment later.

Consumer credit has been soaring in recent months, and some retailers are concerned it soon will reach its limit, leading to a pronounced slowdown in sales later this summer or fall.

Furthermore, they say, some of today's purchases are in anticipation of higher prices later. In other words, today's good times could be at the expense of tomorrow's sales; in effect, may be borrowed.

While the level of outstanding credit had been growing at a $2.6 billion rate for many months, it surged to $4.1 billion in March and $3.7 billion in April, considered by many to be unsustainable rates.

Perhaps a more significant surge has occurred in the amount of new credit extended. That rate surged 7 percent in March and 2.4 percent in April, the latter amounting to a total of $2.1 billion.

Citibank's "Economic Week" observes that since December, "extensions have grown at an astounding 33 percent average annual rate," nearly twice the average growth during the economic expansion.

The surge has focused the eyes of economists on the consumer's debt burden, measured as the ratio of credit extensions to personal income. It reached 15.8 in April, despite increases in personal incomes.

Many economists feel that level is near the limit of consumer endurance and that it foreshadows a downturn, as was the case when it reached that level early in 1973 before the most recent recession. Automotive analysts are especially concerned. An industry authority, Sindlinger & Co., said this week that "those who can afford to buy now to beat rising prices are creating (a) record hedge."

Sindlinger sees the automotive hedging as restricted to upper income families, indicating still another problem. "They represent about the only households who can afford to hedge buy," said Albert Sindlinger.

Despite concern and even fear, some economists believe the situation hasn't reached a point of no return.

Administration approves merger of steel firms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, in its first major antitrust decision, has approved a merger that will create one of the nation's largest steel producers.

Attorney General Griffin Bell personally approved the merger of Lykes Corp. and LTV Corp. Wednesday, saying it was justified to keep Lykes from going broke.

Lykes owns Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., the eighth-largest steel company in the United States. LTV, a diversified aerospace company, operates Jones & Laughlin Co., the seventh largest.

The steel operations of the new company will be about the size of both Bethlehem and National steel companies, the third- and fourth-largest steel producers.

Seven percent pay boost for Ector employees likely ODESSA — The majority of Ector County employees will likely get a seven percent pay increase during the next fiscal year.

A tax increase had been proposed as a method for raising the money but apparently such a boost will not be necessary, although the budget would be left with a smaller surplus.

The across-the-board salary hike would cost the county about $281,291 annually, not including pay increases for some appointed employees and department heads.

Putt Choate

Had a long talk with Coahoma's Putt Choate Tuesday afternoon. The potential All-American linebacker from Southern Methodist University is working in Big Spring this summer, and will complete a four-year sterling gridiron career at that Southwest Conference school this fall.

Most of what Putt had to say will be in Sunday's sports section, contained in the new weekly feature "Speaking of Sports"...strictly an interview, a la Playboy (no dirty pictures of course).

PUTT CHOATE interviewed Sunday

Upon meeting Putt for the first time, the word BIG automatically comes to mind. He doesn't tower over everyone at 6-1, but his 230 pounds is sheer muscle. Compare him to Dallas' Bob Breunig, only Breunig is not quite as heavy or strong.

Putt and his big brother Dusty entertain the family from time to time pulling up old fence posts by hand out on the old homestead. What do you expect from someone who lifts weights (little brother has a 750 pound set at the house) two hours a day.

Those of you who don't remember Putt from his brilliant days on the Coahoma football field, might remember him from a couple of televised games where he got raked out of the Chevrolet Defensive Player of the Game Award against Texas A&M and Baylor.

The second word that comes to mind after talking to Putt for a while is "intelligence." Unlike many college and pro players, he enjoys talking about his sport and his life away from the field. No "duhs" and "uhs" from him.

He is also a purposeful individual. He has a goal and he has dedicated most of his life towards achieving that goal. I think you'll find his comments concerning football, the press, etc., very interesting and revealing. Check out part one this Sunday on the "Sports Personalities" page in the Big Spring Herald Sports Section.

INDISCRIMINATELY SPEAKING

In the old days of hockey, the referee had to place the puck on the ice between the sticks for a face-off. By the end of a game, his hands and knuckles were often black and blue from the battering from the hockey sticks. The current rule, allowing the drop of the puck, was instituted in 1914.

Back in the salad days of baseball, almost a 100 years ago, most fans insisted that there was no such thing as a curve ball. They claimed it was nothing more than an optical illusion. A pitcher named Fred Goldsmith proved them wrong, however.

Almost a century ago, at the old Capitoline Grounds in Brooklyn, Goldsmith staked three poles into the ground in a straight line. He then threw a pitch that passed to the right of the first pole, the left of the second pole, and back to the right of the third pole.

REMARKABILITIES

"Some 5,000 fans returned their tickets for refunds in Philadelphia for a Saturday night game that had been switched to Saturday afternoon to accommodate NBC's Game of the Week. Too long have baseball and other sports been downright rude to cash customers while pandering to the TV buck." — DICK YOUNG.

"Charlie Johnson shot Santa Claus. He also kicked the Easter Bunny down six flights of stairs, ambushed Cinderella, mugged the Tooth Fairy, foreclosed the mortgage on a widow with nine kids and cancelled Captain Kangaroo." — JOE GILMARTIN, regarding the Washington Bullet sharpshooter's shattering of the Seattle SuperSonic's dream for an NBA championship.

It took Dave Machemer seven years to reach the major leagues and more than a week to get in a game, but when he finally did it was well worth the wait. California's 27-year-old rookie infielder, called up from the minors early last week when Carney Lansford was injured, was the first batter of the game Wednesday night.

He lined a 3-2 pitch from Minnesota's Geoff Zahn just inside the left field foul pole, becoming the 46th player in major league history to homer in his first at-bat. Don Baylor added a two-run homer in the first inning, his 17th, and the Angels went on to defeat the Twins 5-2.

Eisewhere in the American League, the Cleveland Indians beat Kansas City 4-2, slicing the Royals' lead over California in the AL West to one-half game; the Boston Red Sox crushed the New York Yankees 9-2, the Milwaukee Brewers cooled off the Baltimore Orioles 5-3 and the Detroit Tigers outlasted the Toronto Blue Jays 10-8.

Paul Dade's checked-swing grounder scored Jim Norris with the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and newly acquired Dan Spillner hurled three innings of one-hit relief. Spillner, acquired last week from San Diego, replaced Don Hood with the bases loaded and two out in the fourth, retired Pete LaCock on a fly ball and did not give up a hit until Fred Patek's one-out single in the seventh.

Red Sox 9, Yankees 2 Carl Yastrzemski and Carlton Fisk keyed a six-run third inning with consecutive doubles and Butch Hobson, Fred Lynn and George Scott homered as the Red Sox whipped the Yankees behind the six-hit pitching of Dennis Eckersley.

The victory, Boston's 11th in the last 13 games and 21st in 27, enabled the Red Sox to take the rubber match of a threegame series in their first 1978 showdown with New York's defending world champions, who are in third place in the AL East, eight games behind Boston.

Brewers 3, Orioles 3 Larry Hise slapped a two-run single in the third inning and Buck Martinez drove in the decisive run with a sixth-inning sacrifice fly as Milwaukee ended Baltimore's four-game winning streak. Winner Larry Sorensen took a 5-0 lead and a three-hitter into the eighth but was chased when the Orioles scored three times on five consecutive singles and a sacrifice fly.

Tigers 10, Blue Jays 8 Alan Trammell's solo homer triggered a five-run sixth inning for Detroit that erased a 6-5 Toronto lead. After Trammell's homer, consecutive singles by Lou Whitaker — his third hit — and Ron LeFlore plus a double by Steve Kemp chased Don Kirkwood, who had taken over in the fifth

Revived Yeager leads Dodgers past Astros, 5-4

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steve Yeager was on the bench when the game started, put there by a .195 batting average. But nearly four hours later, in the bottom of the 11th inning Wednesday night, it was Yeager's pinch single that scored Billy North with the winning run in Los Angeles' 5-4 victory over Houston.

"There's no question my offense has been down," understated Yeager, who had but eight hits in his last 65 at bats. "Maybe this will help me come out of it. It was a pressure situation and I was just trying to hit the ball hard someplace."

Yeager's game-winning hit gave rookie right-hander Bob Welch his first major league victory. Welch, the fourth Dodger pitcher, worked two strong innings, giving up just one hit while striking out four. Welch has fanned six batters in only two appearances since joining the Dodgers on Tuesday.

"He's got a tremendous fast ball, he's able to locate it," said Yeager, who caught Welch Tuesday night. "I don't know what they have in mind for him. I think he's a starting pitcher, but we've already got five outstanding starters."

The Dodgers' game-winning rally began when North opened the 11th with a double off loser Joe Sambito, 3-4. North still has a bad back, but insisted on playing, even writing his own name on the lineup card.

Jerry Grote sacrificed North to third and then Yeager, hitting for Welch, drilled an 0-2 pitch for a single. "It's certainly been hectic around the house," said Yeager. "I don't know how my wife puts up with me. It gets tiring driving home each night 0-for-3 or 0-for-4."

"It's been a nightmare for me, being in a slump this long." Joe Ferguson slugged a two-run homer off Dodger starter Rick Rhoden in the second inning for a 2-1 Houston lead.

Dusty Baker tied the game with his fourth homer of the year, leading off the fourth inning. Then run-scoring singles by Baker and Lee Lacy in the fifth put Los Angeles in front 4-2.

The Astros were restricted to just three hits through seven innings by Rhoden, but a single by Terry Puhl and Dave Lopes' error on Dennis Walling's low liner put runners at first and third and brought Charlie Hough into the game.

Hough had allowed only four earned runs in his previous 15 appearances, but after getting the first two outs — with Puhl scoring on Jose Cruz' grounder to second — Hough hit Bob Watson and then walked Art Howe and pinch-hitter Jesus Alou to force in Walling with the tying run.

The clubs were to conclude their three-game series this afternoon with Doug Rau, 7-2, starting for Los Angeles and Joe Niekro, 3-4, going for Houston.

Holland makes finals

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — For a man who makes a monkey of himself, it's always nice to come back and be the hero — especially when the whole world is watching.

Ernie Brandts, the Dutch soccer star, made one of the blunders of his career Wednesday and thought he had cost his team its chance of winning the World Cup. But later he made one of the plays that sent Holland into next Sunday's final against Argentina.

In a vital game against Italy, Brandts tried to stop ace forward Roberto Bettiga from scoring and accidentally sent the ball rolling into his own net. In scoring against his own team he crashed into his goalkeeper, Pieter Schrijvers, and put him out of the match. Schrijvers was carried off and a substitute took his place.

"This kind of thing doesn't usually happen to me," Brandts said. "I only looked at the ball and didn't realize Schrijvers had come out of his goal so far. I was shocked by what happened."

In the 49th minute the world suddenly looked a bright place again for Brandts. With an Italian challenging him on either side, he took aim from about 100 feet and sent a wonder-shot flashing into the top corner of Italy's net.

"This never happened to me before either," the red-haired Dutchman said. "I don't normally score goals. That is the job of the forwards. But when I saw that one go in it was the greatest thrill of my life."

Arend Haan completed the good work for Holland by firing one in from 120 feet and the Dutch downed Italy 2-1.

In the other Group A match, Austria downed West Germany 3-2, and in Group B, Argentina swamped Peru 6-0, and Brazil beat Poland 3-1.

The two spectacular Dutch goals were as good as anything seen in the 3-week-old tournament.

But for Argentine soccer fans — and at this feverish time that means the whole nation — the goals that mattered most were the six scored by Argentina over Peru.

Under the complicated scoring rules of the tournament, Argentina needed to win by at least 4-0 to overhaul Brazil and reach the final.

As each goal went in, Argentines watching the game on television throughout the land became more frenzied. The center of Buenos Aires became a seething mass of noisy revellers.

Brazil, three-time winner of the trophy, was the only team among the 16 starters that went through six games without being defeated — and yet it didn't make the final.

ALI EN ROUTE — Former heavyweight champ Muhammad Ali gestures Wednesday as he spots cameraman during news conference at New York's Kennedy International Airport. Ali, and his wife, Veronica, were making a brief stopover en route back to Chicago from a 10 day visit to Moscow, during which Ali met Soviet Premier Leonid Brezhnev.

As Yanks, Sox fight, Earl sits and waits

By the Associated Press

While New York and Boston, the two rich kids on the block, are whaling away at each other with the shiny marbles that represent the American League baseball pennant, there's a sneaky ragamuffin peeking around the corner, ready to pick up the spoils.

Don't sell him short. His name is Earl Weaver. He is manager of the Baltimore Orioles, considered by many the best strategist in baseball. While the Yankees and Red Sox are slugging it out, Earl and his overlooked minions could take it all.

The Orioles, who lost millions of dollars' worth of talent in the free agent draft and made no effort to enter the high-bidding sweepstakes, have assembled a young, aggressive team intent on destroying the legend that championships can be purchased.

Through Tuesday's play, they had won 17 of their last 18 games and moved into second place in the AL race, behind the fence-rattling Red Sox and ahead of the feuding Yankees, the defending world champions.

How have they done it? "No mirrors," insists Weaver, a puckish, round-cheeked dugout wizard whose genius is compared with that of the late Joe McCarthy. "Just good pitching and defense."

There is another factor strongly in the Orioles' favor. Except for pitcher Jim Palmer, a three-time Cy Young winner, there is no recognized superstar on the squad. What other gilded talent the Orioles had socked away in the closet was gobbled up in the free agent draft.

In the past two years, such highly-prized baseball flesh as Reggie Jackson ($2.9 million), Wayne Garland ($2.3 million), Bobby Grich ($1.2 million) and Ross Grimsley ($1.3 million) has been plucked from the Orioles by the game's big spenders.

This has produced advantages that apparently overshadow the disadvantages.

For one thing, the Orioles aren't beset with a flock of malcontents as in the case of the Yankees, or racial tensions, which outfielder Jim Rice recently said existed with the Red Sox.

Absence of multimillionaire draftees has negated any prima donna influence on the Baltimore squad. You don't have a manager refusing to communicate with the players. You don't have the manager and key players swapping poison darts 20 paces away from each other in the dressing room after a bitter defeat. You don't have a star outfielder saying he is discriminated against because of the color of his skin.

Weaver, in his 11th year as manager of the Orioles, is one of the most underrated field generals in the business.

'Terrific's' streak screeches to halt, Reds lose

By the Associated Press

Tom Seaver's winning streak finally came to an end — only because Ed Halicki started a mean streak. "I just decided to go out there with hate," said Halicki after pitching the San Francisco Giants to a 3-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds and their ace pitcher Wednesday night. "I decided no more buddy-buddy stuff." Halicki was in the right frame of mind for the Reds after the kind of sorry work he's done against them in the past — a 1-7 lifetime record and inauspicious 6.53 earned run average. Plus, he had the added incentive of facing Seaver, an illustrious pitcher who had won seven straight games, including a no-hit beauty his last time out against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Another classic performance was not in the cards this time for the fancy right-hander. Seaver gave up a second-inning single to Jack Clark to break up any no-hit intentions he might have had, then he allowed three runs in the fourth. It might have been a 1-0 game had not a fourth-inning drive by Roger Metzger gone between center fielder Cesar Geronimo and right fielder Ken Griffey.

"When the ball went up I thought it would be caught," said Seaver.

So did the two outfielders, but each thought the other would make the catch.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Chicago Cubs 2-1, the Montreal Expos defeated the New York Mets 2-1 in a game shortened by rain in the seventh inning, the Atlanta Braves blanked the San Diego Padres 2-0 and the Los Angeles Dodgers nipped the Houston Astros 5-4 in 11 innings. The Philadelphia-St. Louis game was postponed by rain.

Halicki allowed leadoff batters to reach base in four innings, but no Cincinnati baserunner got past second.

Tennis biggies advance

EASTBOURNE, England — Chris Evert, Martina Navratilova and Billie Jean King moved into the quarter-finals of the Eastbourne Grand Prix tennis tournament, but young Tracy Austin let victory slip from her grasp.

Evert, the No. 1 seed, defeated Lea Antonopolis of the United States 6-3, 6-1 while Navratilova, seeded second, had no trouble in beating American Joanne Russell 6-1, 6-4.

King beat Swedish youngster Elisabeth Ekblom 4-6, 6-1, 6-1.

But Austin was edged 7-6, 0-6, 7-5 by Michele Tyler of Britain.

Virginia Wade of Britain won 7-5, 6-2 over Lesley Hunt of Australia.

Two other seeds who reached the quarters were Wendy Turnbull of Australia and Betty Stove of the Netherlands.

Turnbull defeated another seeded Australian, Dianne Fromholtz, 6-3, 6-4, while Stove beat Francoise Durr of France 6-4, 6-3.

In the other third-round match, 18-year-old Britain Ann Hobbs put out Virginia Ruzici, the 15th seed from Romania, 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

LONDON — Vic Amaya of Holland, Mich., was blown out of the $125,000 Queen's Club international tennis tournament, losing a third-round match 6-1, 7-5 to Australian Colin Dibley.

In other action, second-seeded American Sandy Mayer struggled past Australian Ross Case 7-5, 3-6, 6-2. No. 2 British player John Lloyd, the 11th seed, beat seventh-seeded John Newcomb of Australia 6-4, 6-4.

Dietrich dead at 68

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — William J. Dietrich, who pitched for the Philadelphia Athletics during the 1930s and later with the Chicago White Sox, is dead at the age of 68.

Dietrich, who died Tuesday at his home here, compiled a 108-122 record during his 15-year career, including a no-hitter.

Merritt innocent of murder

CLEVELAND (AP) — A jury has found professional boxer Jeff Merritt of Cleveland innocent on charges of attempted murder in connection with a shooting last October in front of a downtown bar.

The jury deliberated less than 30 minutes Wednesday before returning the innocent verdict for Merritt, who said he shot James Ward in self defense on Oct. 5, 1977.

Merritt was ranked No. 5 among heavyweights in 1974 by the World Boxing Association. He had a 29-3 record, with 17 knockouts.

One of Merritt's victories was over Ernie Shavers. He also has worked as sparring partner for Larry Holmes, now the WBA heavyweight champ.

Johnson on disable list

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Relief pitcher Tom Johnson has been placed on the 21-day disabled list by the Minnesota Twins and replaced on the roster by 31-year-old Roric Harrison.

Johnson, 27, has suffered from chronic shoulder problems all season and appeared in only 16 games. His record is 1-4, with a 5.17 earned run average.

In 1977, Johnson led the major leagues in victories for a relief pitcher with 16 and was one short of Sparky Lyle's leadership in appearances.

Harrison, who has been in the majors with Baltimore, Atlanta and Cleveland, was 3-2 at Toledo with a 2.89 ERA. His lifetime major-league record is 30-34.

He will join the Twins Friday night in Chicago.

Touch football in Central Park

By the Associated Press
Johnny Unitas fades back, steps around a hot dog vendor and peers down field. Raymond Berry sprints over the turf, cuts left at the baby carriage and slips past a dachshund. Unitas fires. Berry makes the catch, tumbles over a trash barrel, scrapes his elbow on the pavement but holds on to the ball.

This scenario could result from the latest brainstorm in the expanding world of television sports.

Lee Trevino wants Open

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Lee Trevino, the happy collector of national titles, would like to start a third sweep this week in the $250,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship.

"I've won two Canadian Opens, two U.S. Opens, two British Opens, two Mexican Opens," Trevino said before teeing off today as the defending champion in the Canadian National championship. "This would be as good a place as any to start a third time around."

And, he said, his chances are very good.

"It's a long course. There aren't all those lay-up holes like last week (in the U.S. Open). They won't be standing up there with irons in their hands. They're going to have to pull the driver out of the bag."

"And they're looking at a lot of rough. If they get in the rough, they're going to lose a shot. That's fine. That's the way it's supposed to be. And that gives me an advantage, 'cause I can hit it as straight as anybody."

George Knudson heads a 21-man Canadian contingent. In addition to Trevino, top entrants are Jack Nicklaus, who designed the 7,096-yard, par-71 Glen Abbey course that will serve as a permanent site for this national championship, plus two-time Canadian champ Tom Weiskopf, South African Gary Player, newly-crowned U.S. Open champion Andy North, and J.C. Snead, who chased him to the title last week in Denver.

Other standouts include big Andy Bean, a two-time winner, Hubert Green, former U.S. and Canadian champion, Jerry Pate, Jim Simons, Bill Rogers, Arnold Palmer and Bill Kratzert.

television sports. The idea belongs to Jack Dolph, former commissioner of the American Basketball Association and current head of Jack Dolph Associates, packagers of various and sundry television fare.

Dolph, always on the lookout for new ways to mix sports and entertainment, has come up with a new wrinkle — a touch football game between the Baltimore Colts and New York Giants, who played in the 1958 National Football League championship game, considered by many as the greatest pro game ever played.

Dolph has sold the idea to CBS which will run it on an upcoming "Sports Spectacular." He has commitments from a host of players and will tape the game July 7. Among those who have agreed to play are ex-Colts Unitas, Berry, Alan Ameche, Lenny Moore and Gino Marchetti, and ex-Giants Frank Gifford, Charlie Conerly, Kyle Rote, Pat Summerall and Rosey Brown.

"These guys are going to play regulation six-man football," says Dolph. "It will be competition but basically they'll be playing for fun. I mean, there'll be a keg of beer in the middle of the field."

Dolph plans to spice the action by putting microphones on the players, adding film clips of the title game and taping a rap session in which the participants will talk about their current endeavors. He says the game will be a charity affair for the Big Brothers of America and, to be on the safe side, he has taken out lots of insurance.

Dolph, who formed his own company in 1972 after three years as ABA commissioner, enjoys life as a TV packager. "Basketball was a dynamite three years," he says, "but I'm a fast 5-foot-9 and I don't know a hell of a lot about basketball. I like what I'm doing now."

NBC continues its coverage of golf's sensational Nancy Lopez this weekend, sending announcer Charlie Jones and three mini-cams to Hershey, Pa., where she will be gunning for an unprecedented sixth straight triumph on the women's pro tour. She is the nation's hottest athlete right now and her victory last weekend largely overshadowed the prestigious men's U.S. Open.

NBC carried 18 inserts, amounting to about 12 minutes, on Lopez last Saturday, then carried eight inserts amounting to another 12 minutes on Sunday's "SportsWorld."

Beta Kappas return home from convention

Twenty members of the Beta Kappa Chapter of The Delta Kappa Gamma Society International have recently returned from the 49th annual Alpha (Texas) State Convention of the organization. Held in Abilene, the convention attracted 1,000 key women teachers from all parts of the state as well as guest members from several other states.

Newly-elected presidents of the 256 local chapters participated in a Leadership Development Workshop held on the campus of Hardin-Simmons University at the beginning of the convention. State president Mrs. Laginia Hale of Austin and vice-presidents Mrs. Bettye Mischen of Plano and Mrs. Mary Rowlette of Lubbock directed the workshop. Planning for the twelve area fall workshops took place the second day of the convention with incoming presidents and area coordinators participating.

The Abilene Night reception, held in the foyer of the Civic Center on Thursday evening, had Abilene Delta Kappa Gamma members and their husbands demonstrating a variety of square dances, called by Joel Wilson. A typical Western Night, complete with a barbecue dinner and western entertainment by students of Abilene Christian University, entertained the guests on Friday evening. Dr. Gloria R. Little, Southwest Regional Director from Scottsdale, Arizona, addressed the ladies during their 49th annual Birthday Luncheon. Husbands of convention participants followed a special schedule of activities while their wives attended workshops and business sessions.

The General Business Session was held in the auditorium of the Civic Center. The colors were presented by an Abilene Girl Scout troop. The delegates to the Alpha State Convention were welcomed to Abilene, the Key City, by Mayor Oliver Howard.

Mrs. Fern Alexander, incoming president of the local chapter, Mrs. Jean Wilder, incoming first vice-president, and Mrs. Corinne Buckner, parliamentarian and a past president, attended workshops to prepare for the 1978-79 activities.

As a climax to the convention, the 253 outgoing presidents received special recognition during the final banquet in their honor. Among those honored by being spotlighted on the balcony were Beta Kappa president Mrs. Dorothy Smith and an Amarillo chapter president Mrs. Helen Hamilton, daughter of Mrs. Linnie Keese and the late B.M. Keese. Miss Agnes Currie, charter member of the local chapter, visited with charter members of other chapters at the banquet and reception following.

Get Off This Ride And Start Anew!

DEAR ABBY: I have been receiving financial help from a married man. (He's my boss. I work in his office.) He is also my No. 1 boyfriend. He says he loves me, and that the only difference between our relationship and marriage is that he has to get up and go home.

I love him in a way, but a girl gets awfully tired hiding all the time. I would like to be able to get dressed up and go out with my man where I can see people and they can see me. And I would eventually like to be married.

Other men have asked me out, but I don't dare accept because it might get back to my boss.

What can I do? Am I destined to be stuck with this man behind closed doors for the rest of my life because I have accepted financial help from him? How does a woman get off this kind of merry-go-round?

TRAPPED IN TACOMA

DEAR TRAPPED: She walks out of his office and out of his life and finds another job. Then she supports herself without "help," like millions of other self-respecting women do. And if she's wise, she moves out of the city and leaves no forwarding address.

All you can expect from the kind of merry-go-round you're on is a brass ring. Try for a gold one.

DEAR ABBY: A famous British novelist who was known to be a singularly unlovable man, presented an interesting problem in etiquette for which perhaps you can provide a solution.

It was reported that at a dinner party he was seated beside an American woman who, in an effort to initiate some pleasant conversation, praised his most recent novel.

His response was, "I thought it was quite good, but now that I know that a common, vulgar American woman such as you likes it, I'm not so sure."

The question: If I were the lady's husband, or escort, what should I do? Duelling is out, for obvious reasons. Should I ignore the remark? Complain to the hostess? Leave the premises, taking the lady with me? Call him an unmannerly swine? Or empty my soup bowl over his head?

VILLANOVA, PA.

DEAR VILL: Your question suggests that you are still living in the days when dueling was "in." Today, women do not need men to protect them in social situations.

If I were the lady in question, I would assume that the man was either very drunk, an ill-mannered snob, or both. And I'd have given him the back of my head for the duration of the dinner. (P.S. Just because a dog barks, doesn't mean you have to answer him.)

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Teens disagree

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Teens: Several weeks ago a boy from Galesburg, Ill., wrote and said that boys called him a "priss" and always made fun of him and I told him the time had come for him to defend himself and to build himself up with weights for a month or so and then to punch the next guy in the nose who called him a priss or a sissy.

I finalized my answer by saying that violence was deplorable ... but the time had come to defend himself. I still would give the same advice but want those who wrote disagreeing to have their say.

From San Rafael, Calif.: When I was 14, I wish that priss was the only thing I was called. I was never in a fight and I'm now 21 and a very happy person. — Peter D.

From Spokane, Wash.: How dare you tell a boy to strike another. Violence never solved anything. — Nancy V.

From Indio, Calif.: You brute. How could a doctor of education preach brutality? — Jill C.

From St. Louis, Mo.: I think you must have been ill when you gave this advice. I'm sure when you recover you will print a retraction. — Joe T.

From Calgary, Alberta: I would rather be called a priss than strike another human. — Rich F.

From Porterville, Calif.: The Bible teaches us to turn the other cheek. — Lynda C.

From Scottsbluff, Neb.: I'm glad you were not the principal of the school my Timothy attends. — Marion R.

From Sacramento, Calif.: Did you ever hear the saying of "sticks and stones"? If you haven't, it ends with "names will never hurt me." — Debby W.

DAVA installs new officers

The Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary met at 6:30 p.m., June 19, at the VFW Hall, Driver Rd., for a dinner followed by an installation of new officers.

The officers were installed by Region No. 1 Commander Merle Lucy of El Paso. Special guests were members of Unit No. 7 of San Angelo.

A gift was presented to outgoing unit commander Katie Spivey for her service during the past four years. In turn, Ms. Spivey presented members of the local unit a gift of her appreciation.

Oletha O'Neal reported on the State Convention which she attended in McAllen. Nelda Burkhardt, hospital chairman, reported that cake and coffee were served to 90 patients at the V.A. Hospital by Fannie Clark, Barbara Viera, Pat Johnson and Ms. Burkhardt.

She also reported that three canteen books, donated by Unit Boarderland No. 10 of El Paso, were given away through a drawing.

Mrs. Smith scores high

The Rook Club met June 16 at Coker's Restaurant with Mrs. Pat Allen serving as hostess.

Two tables were in play. High score was won by Mrs. Felton Smith.

A guest, Twilla Lomax, attended. Refreshments were served at the close of the games.

Mrs. S.R. Nobles will be the hostess of the July 21 meeting.

Workshop announced

The Big Spring Rebekah Lodge No. 284 met at 7:30 p.m., June 20, at the I.O.O.F. Hall, 9th and San Antonio. District Deputy President

Family fetes

Mrs. Martinez

Mrs. Guadalupe Marquez and sons Richard and Albert Marquez of Las Vegas, Nev., hosted a family dinner at the home of her sister and brother, Adela Rosales and M.G. Rosales, 606 North Main, on June 29.

The dinner was in honor of a sister, Amelia R. Martinez, who was visiting here from Redland, Calif.

Others attending were Mr. and Mrs. Rosendo C. Santellan and Mr. and Mrs. A.V. Puente of Big Spring. Another sister, Mrs. Chon Rodriguez of Big Spring, was unable to attend.

Eat it, make it, or put it in a pie

Ice cream is top Texas heat treat

By EILEEN MCGUIRE
Family News Editor

Julius Caesar is credited with the invention of ice cream. Ice cream has changed in taste and texture since he first brought snow down from the mountains to make it and it has grown into the number one summertime treat.

In Texas and other parts of the south, ice cream sales double and sometimes triple in the summer. And most of the ice cream Texans eat is made in Texas. According to Texas Agricultural Commissioner Reagan V. Brown, 35 million gallons of ice cream were produced in Texas in 1977.

Along with being a leader in ice cream production, Texas is among the top milk producers, ranking ninth out of 10 states in 1977. Because of this, Texas deserves a special salute during June, National Dairy Month. And because it's hot outside, so does ice cream.

What can you do with ice cream besides eat it? According to the Comanche Trail Ladies' Golf Association, you can make it. According to Baskin Robbins, you can use it to make ice cream cakes and pies. And according to some of Big Spring's younger set, you can just about tell the temperature outside by how fast it melts.

Several members of the Ladies' Golf Association remember when whole parties were organized around ice cream. Ice cream socials aren't as popular today as they once were, but every once in awhile, someone remembers how good homemade ice cream tastes.

"There's a cross section of the Men's and Ladies' Golf Association, known as the Twilighters, that gets together every Thursday night to play golf," said June Waters, vice president of the ladies' association. "Usually a covered dish supper accompanies the golf playing. Sometimes, the meal is built around homemade ice cream. We each bring some ice cream and that, plus sandwiches, is our supper."

"It's not really an ice cream social, — not the kind we used to have when I was growing up. Back then, a lot of people made their own ice cream. There's so much commercially-made ice cream now, that's it's easier and just as inexpensive to buy it."

Mrs. Waters said that limited freezer space was the real inventor of ice cream socials. Homemade ice cream was made often because the ingredients, such as cream, were always on hand in most households and the ice cream had to be quickly eaten, usually shared at a social, because the only available freezer space was usually occupied by something the family really needed. Ice cream was a luxury.

"It takes a good hour to make ice cream," she said. "And a lot of people don't have an extra hour for it anymore. Everyone is always rushing around so. It's just more convenient to buy it already made."

Minnesota Man renamed

For years, the University of Minnesota proudly displayed the state's oldest archaeological find, the several-thousand-year-old Minnesota Man Skeleton. However, after careful examination, the skeleton was properly renamed Minnesota Minnie. — from the Virginia Slims Book of Days.

GOLF AND ICE CREAM — Patsy Sharpnack, left, and Myrle St. John, right, are members of the Comanche Trail Ladies' Golf Association and a group called the Twilighters that gets together every Thursday night for a covered dish or ice cream supper and their favorite sport. Ice cream socials are largely a thing of the past, according to the association members, but most of them still make a lot of homemade ice cream because it's the best kind of ice cream there is.

Myrle St. John, president of the Ladies' Golf Association, still takes the time to make ice cream because, she says, it's better than store-bought. "We make it all the time at my house," she said. "Usually I make vanilla so everyone can use their favorite toppings, although you can add anything to vanilla for variations."

It was Mrs. St. John's love of homemade ice cream, her favorite food, that reunited her with a friend when the St. Johns moved to Tulsa, Okla. "I've always eaten ice cream with soda crackers. One day, we came home and there was a note on the door. It said if you're the St. Johns who like homemade ice cream with soda crackers, call this number. One of our friends whom we'd lost track of saw our names in the newcomers section of the paper. The soda crackers identified us as the right St. Johns."

Mrs. St. John said she learned how to make homemade ice cream from her mother.

"It's an old family recipe. They've been making ice cream in my family as far back as I can remember."

Debbie Felts, secretary and treasurer of the association, agrees that homemade ice cream is worth the trouble because it's better than what you can buy.

"If you eat homemade ice cream," she said, "You'll never buy it again. If you don't want to make it, Baskin-Robbins is the closest to homemade of any other kind."

The association's newest member, Patsy Sharpnack, doesn't make homemade ice cream, but her husband does.

"Joe made some just last Thursday night for the Twilighter's ice cream supper. He just started making it and it was pretty good."

While her husband learns how to make ice cream, Mrs. Sharpnack recently bought some golf clubs and says she's taking up the game seriously now after a year of instructions from her husband.

"It's good exercise. Today, I took a golf cart, but usually I walk. It makes me feel good — the exercise and the challenge. It's a difficult game to learn, but the challenge makes it worthwhile."

The ladies in the golf association are eager to have add ice and salt alternately until frozen.

Six-Quart Vanilla Ice Cream
By MYRLE ST. JOHN
6 eggs
3 cups sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1 package junket ice cream mix
1 large can Carnation milk
1 pint Half and Half milk
1 tablespoon vanilla
Whole milk
Beat eggs until light and fluffy. Add sugar, flour and ice cream mix. Mix in Carnation milk. Half and Half and vanilla. Add whole milk to fill line on ice cream can. Freeze.

Banana Nut Ice Cream
By GLENODINE WILLIAMS
6 eggs, well beaten
1 can unsweetened condensed milk
1 package vanilla junket ice cream mix
2 cups sugar
2 bananas, mashed
½ cup crushed nuts
1 small can Pet milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Sweet milk
Mix all of above and finish filling container with sweet milk. Freeze.

Cherry Nut Ice Cream
By DEBBIE FELTS
6 eggs, beaten
1 can Eagle Brand milk
1 small jar cherries

½ cup nuts
1 1-3rd cup sugar
Mix above and add whole milk to fill freezer. Freeze.
If you don't have the time or desire to make homemade ice cream, the ladies suggest Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream which gives you another whole realm of possibilities in the form of ice cream pies. The following pies are easy to make and can be made ahead of time and kept in the freezer for future celebrations if desired. Just remember to always use a good, hand-packed ice cream because the airy fluffy kinds melt down.

Brownie Banana Ice Cream Pie
1½ quarts Baskin-Robbins Banana Jungle Ice Cream

1 15¼-oz. package brownie mix
¾ cup chunky peanut butter
½ cup banana chips or fresh banana slices
1 9-ounce jar hot fudge sauce
Prepare brownie mix as package directs. Pour batter into greased 8-inch round waxed paper or parchment lined bottom. Bake in center of moderate oven (350 degrees) 30 minutes, until brownie tests done. Remove from oven and let stand 15 minutes, then turn out onto wire rack. Remove paper liner and cool brownie.
Spread top with peanut butter. At serving time, spoon ice cream over peanut butter, using ice cream spade or metal spoon. Smooth sides with spatula and decorate top with banana chips or fresh banana slices. Cut into wedges and serve with hot fudge sauce. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Mud Pie
1½ quarts Baskin-Robbins Jamoca Almond Fudge Ice Cream
1 9-inch graham cracker crust
1 9-ounce jar hot fudge sauce at room temperature
¾ cup heavy cream
½ cup slivered or sliced almonds
Freeze graham cracker crust. Remove Jamoca Ice Cream from freezer and let soften slightly. Spread a layer of the fudge sauce over the bottom of crust about ¼ inch thick. Spade or scoop ice cream into frozen crust, smoothing the top with a spoon. Freeze at least 1 hour.

Spread a layer of the fudge sauce (at room temperature) over the ice cream. Freeze 30 minutes. Meanwhile, whip the cream. Mound whipped cream on pie, sprinkle with almonds. Freeze at least 3 hours. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Peach Melba Pie
1½ quarts Baskin-Robbins Peach Ice Cream
1 9-inch graham cracker pie crust, frozen
1 cup raspberry jam
2 10-ounce packages frozen raspberries, thawed
½ pint heavy cream, whipped
Remove pie crust from freezer and spread with a layer of raspberry jam, covering the bottom of the crust. Reserve 3 tablespoons of the raspberry jam to use in the Melba Sauce below. Carefully and quickly spoon or spade the Peach Ice Cream into the pie shell, mounding it gradually higher in the center of the pie. Return to the freezer for at least 3 hours before serving.

Remove from the freezer and decorate with swirls of whipped cream. Serve the pretty Melba Sauce (recipe follows) in a glass pitcher. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Melba Sauce
Puree in blender 2 packages of frozen slightly thawed raspberries with 2 tablespoons of raspberry jam. Strain and place in a serving pitcher.

NEW PRO IN TOWN — From left to right, Bobbye and Bobby Maxwell inspire Ladies' Golf Association members June Waters and Debbie Felts with plaques. The Maxwells moved from Abilene to Big Spring this month where Bobby is the new superintendent and golf pro at Comanche Trail Golf Course. He's not really a newcomer, however, since he and his brother, Billy, were practically raised on this very same golf course which his father once operated. Billy has gone on to play on tour with such greats as Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicholas. He's won about a half a dozen tournaments including the Dallas Open and Bob Hope Classic. Need some help with your golf swing? Bobby's got the background for it.

Sugar tax may lead to clash between Carter, Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight members of Congress want President Carter to make foreign sugar more expensive in this country, a move that would help domestic producers while raising costs for consumers and business.
Six senators, led by Russell Long, D-La., and Frank Church, D-Idaho, are meeting with Carter today to present their arguments for placing higher tariffs or import quotas on foreign sugar.
Such a move would be intended to drive up the price of imported sugar and make domestically produced sugar competitive on the U.S. market. The impact, measured in millions of dollars, might mean a few extra pennies a pound for supermarket shoppers and much more for the profit margins of big soft drink companies.
Several sources described the White House meeting today as a last-ditch effort to avoid a major clash between the president and senior congressional Democrats. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, a former member of Congress from Minnesota, is working frantically behind the scenes to find a compromise that might defuse the situation.
However, one congressional source who asked not to be named said, "You can't watch this too long without getting the feeling that Bergland has been cut out of the pattern on sugar policy."
Members of Congress from sugar-producing states want the government to peg the domestic sugar price at about 17 cents a pound and to make sure that imports do not enter the country at a lower price.
Heightening the significance of the struggle is the effect that sugar prices have on the administration's anti-inflation campaign.

Dolphin trainer's job fascinating

MYSTIC, Conn. (AP) — Anybody who has ever tried to housebreak a puppy, and tried and tried and tried, can only marvel at what Curt Horton accomplishes.
Horton is a trainer of whales and dolphins made to do as he commands. He is as fascinated with his job as all who watch in awe as he does it.
"I got into this work by accident," he said. "Now I know it's what I want to do. I can't imagine ever getting tired of it."
Horton works at the Mystic Aquarium, an ironic institution for this town.
Mystic is a salty old coastal village, a restored whaling port. Tourists climb aboard antique whaling ships, built in an earlier day for the killing of sea creatures, then walk down a cobbled street to the aquarium, built for the care and study of them.
Several times a day Horton puts his charges through their paces. At the touch of a finger to a fin, or at the sound of a whistle, dolphins jump through hoops, seals catch balls, whales leap and cavort.
"It isn't quite right to say that what we do is teach an animal to do a trick," Horton said, "although they indeed do tricks. What we do, technically, is called behavior modification."
"It takes a lot of time and a lot of patience and it is based simply on rewarding them when their behavior is what you want it to be and withholding reward when it isn't."
When the creatures get good at it, according to Horton, they take on a certain independence, like pampered movie stars.
"Take Sassy, for instance. She's a dolphin. She has four behaviors and she knows I call for them in a certain order and give her a nice fat fish after each one."

Ridin' fence — I'm not interesting

with Marj Carpenter

A lot of times people will tell you that. And even though, Ruth Beasley kept telling me that, I just didn't believe her.

She says she's not interesting, but this 76-year-old woman was born down on the Colorado River in McCulloch County where her grandfather John Beasley moved in 1873, and helped to settle Brady in the heart of Texas.

She says she's not interesting, but her dad was an early banker in that location and she was raised in Mercury. There's not much there anymore. She and her sister recently went back to Mercury to visit. The school where she went through the 5th grade is gone and so are most of the old families. The little town was two or three miles from the Colorado River and it was bypassed by the highway, so it lost ground fast.

She'd say it wasn't interesting, but she was selected to be a student in two different lab schools in high school. She moved with her parents and family to Brownwood and she was in a lab school taught by Howard Payne.

Then her father decided to send her out to visit her uncle in Los Angeles and let her attend the Harvard School for Girls. While there she met Cecil B. DeMille's sisters, who were some of her classmates. She returned and completed her high school education at the Texas Women's University lab school.

She then attended TWU and obtained her degree in chemistry in 1924. It was rare in those days for a girl to obtain a degree in chemistry. She later went back to North Texas State and took library work.

She would say it wasn't interesting, but she began work as a lab technician at Baylor Hospital in Dallas and later at Methodist Hospital in Houston for a 30-year period. She still has lots of good friends and relatives in Houston and thinks nothing of driving down to Houston and visiting them.

How many 76-year-old women do you know that will drive in Houston? "I used to know every street in Houston," she said "and still know my old trails, but Houston has grown a little bit."

At Christmas time in 1944, she came home to visit her mother who had moved to Big Spring, Mrs. Annie Beasley, and her sister, Mrs. W.C. Blankenship, wife of the school superintendent here at that time.

She kind of wanted to move back with her family and Supt. Blankenship convinced her that he definitely needed a biology teacher at the high school. He wasn't kidding. It was war time and teachers were scarce and "they didn't even have anybody to call the roll," Miss Beasley recalled.

She'd say it wasn't interesting, but after 30 years of doing hospital lab work, she did a complete turn around and began to teach school. She taught in high school and later at Goliad.

And after her brother-in-law left as superintendent, she taught on until her retirement. She traveled for a while after she retired.

She'd say it wasn't interesting, but she changed her career completely for the third time after she was 65. The late Dr. Preston Harrison knew her and asked her to come out to the Big Spring State Hospital and do something about both their medical library and their patient library.

She decided to go out there for a little while to help them out. She still works at both libraries and they are two blocks apart. She runs back and forth.

She'd also say it wasn't the least bit interesting that she has a fox terrier named Serendipity. But it is kind of interesting. Serendipity is something that they all say in her family when they run across something that is unexpected and turns out to be great.

At the time that she obtained this pet, her favorite dog had just died. She said she didn't want another. But her great-nephew brought the dog and put it in her hands and said, "We got it for you and you have to take him." Ruth Beasley replied, "Serendipity." And that's what she named that dog.

Now serendipity is a perfectly good word. It's in the dictionary. It's the state or quality of remaining serene and tranquil.

Ruth Beasley is perfect for that word. She has remained serene and tranquil through a lifetime. She has loved every job she ever had and loves the one she has now.

She loves her family and is especially pleased that her niece, Mrs. Mark Harwell lives here.

She has come from the banks of the Colorado to the busy streets of Dallas and Houston to the corridors at the state hospital.

Serendipity. Life is wonderful to Ruth Beasley. And she says she's not interesting. But I'm going to have to argue.

Ruth Beasley is an extremely well-read, well-educated, friendly person with a capacity for enjoying life that is amazing. And I love writing about her — out where I ride fence.

Judge declares change of venue

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Three of eight defendants named in federal indictments alleging misuse of federal Manpower funds will not be tried here.

U.S. District Judge Reynaldo Garza Wednesday approved change of venue motions sought on behalf of Harlingen brothers Don and Clarence Gray and Cruz Castillo, also of Harlingen.

But the judge delayed selection of a site for the trials. He said he would pick a location after talking with other federal judges in Texas. Garza said the cases will probably go to Victoria, Houston or Dallas.

Assistant U.S. Attorney John Smith told Garza the prosecution prefers Galveston for the trials. Defense attorney Tom Upchurch said the Grays and Miss Castillo want to be tried in Houston.

The three defendants have been named in multiple federal indictments charging misapplication of federal funds. Don Gray is business manager of a Harlingen-based plumbers and pipefitters union. Clarence Gray ran a trade school associated with the union. Miss Castillo was a program director there.

Garza also said defendants named with the Grays and Miss Castillo in the federal indictments — but not seeking venue change — will be tried here separately.

Those not seeking venue change were: Eliseo Sandoval, director of the Associated City County Economic Development Corp., of Edinburg; Ed Romero, former ACCEDC auditor; Nick Ramirez, former Hidalgo County Manpower director; A.M. Fernandez, director of the South Texas Enterprises of Jim Hogg County; and Fernando Salinas, director of the South Texas Economic Program of Jim Hogg County.

Sandoval is on leave from his ACCEDC post and has agreed to testify for the prosecution. Smith has said all but two federal charges against Sandoval will be dismissed in exchange for his testimony.

Briscoe names three directors

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe has named three new directors of the University System of South Texas, one each from Laredo, Corpus Christi and San Antonio.

Those appointed Wednesday included:

William H. Baker, publisher of the Laredo Times, was named to a term expiring Aug. 31, 1983. He replaces former Laredo Mayor J.C. Martin Jr., whose term actually expired in 1977.

Mrs. Paul R. Haas, Corpus Christi, was named to a term expiring Aug. 31, 1983, replacing Charles C. Butt, Corpus Christi, who resigned. Mrs. Haas is a trustee of the A&I Development Foundation and a director of Public Television Station Channel 16.

Carter not alone with translator troubles

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter can take solace in the fact he's not the only chief of state to have problems with translators.

Carter, who experienced much-publicized translation difficulties in Poland last December, was toasted by Colombia's Spanish-speaking president at a state dinner in Panama last weekend.

White House reporters listening to a simultaneous English translation of the toast by President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen were startled to hear the woman translator interrupt herself with the exasperated explanation, "I can't hear this!"

Carter, before offering a toast of his own, was overheard saying into an open microphone — he had trouble with one of those in India, remember — "I'll be briefed in one minute's time."

The listening reporters, who were in another building, could not guess at the cause of Carter's comment. However, the U.S. president began his toast about a minute later.

Walking out of Sunday school at the First Baptist Church here this week, Carter was brought up short by a woman's voice behind him saying, "Jimmy, Jimmy."

Pausing and tilting his head, the president responded, "Yes, ma'am?" Reporters got the impression he did not immediately recognize the voice of his wife, Rosalynn. Understandable, perhaps, because she was not alone in calling out to him.

Carter continues to battle, not always with success, for clarity and proper grammar in federal documents.

Earlier this month, the president sent the Senate a message urging ratification of an agreement involving North Pacific fisheries "between the United States, Canada and Japan..."

A spokesman for the National Security Council, which sent the message to the Oval Office for Carter's signature, acknowledged that the rules of grammar are not suspended in diplomatic usage.

Spokesman Ed Penney said the document obviously should have referred to an agreement "among" the three nations.

The White House playground has been expanded. First there was Amy's new tree house to go with the tennis court and swimming pool Daddy inherited from previous tenants.
