U.S. Officials Question Soviet Motive For Freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's instant rejection of a new nuclear freeze proposal by Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev is based on a judgment that it would undercut the current U.S. military buildup and allow the Soviets to maintain their superiority in European missile strength.

Interviews with administration officials and public statements by President Reagan and his spokesmen show deep distrust of the Kremlin's motives and concern that Brezhnev is strengthening the hand of anti-nuclear forces in the United States and Western Europe.

Although preferring that the two superpowers deal with their differences quietly in Geneva, the administration is having to deal publicly with Brezhnev's proposals lest it lose the propaganda battle.

U.S. arms control chief Eugene V. Rostow, a veteran of the Johnson administration, acknowledges that the Soviet leader's overture naturally appeals to people with "a perfectly real and natural fear of wars."

Reflecting in his State Department office, Rostow said the Soviets "are clearly playing to the galleries...trying to play this entirely as a propaganda effort."

Rostow, 68, and the other officials, who preferred to remain anonymous, raised a number of points to explain the rejection of Brezhnev's overture.

"First, we have made it clear that a freeze is not good enough," said a senior official who helped shape Reagan's response to Brezhnev. "We are unhappy with the buildup in Soviet military capabilities, the massive expansion of nuclear forces in the last decade. So we want reductions."

The way to get reductions, he said, is "to give the Soviets incentives to agree." As an example, he cited development of the U.S. antiballistic missile defense system that led to the 1972 SALT treaty limiting some nuclear weapons systems.

Similarly, that official asked, "Do you think we would be in Geneva had not the NATO alliance in 1979 agreed to deploy cruise and Pershing II missiles?"

Brezhnev's proposals are viewed here as an effort to disrupt the scheduled deployment of those missiles beginning in December 1983 and to interrupt in general the administration's military buildup.

The Soviet leader, in his speech at the Kremlin Tuesday, said his nation's unilateral moratorium on deploying more missiles in Europe would end if the United States undertakes "practical preparations to deploy" Pershing II and cruise missiles.

The 572 Pershing II and cruise missiles, to be based in West Germany, Britain and Italy, are designed to offset the 300 mobile SS-20 missiles targeted on western Europe.

After a slow start in the Geneva negotiations, which opened Nov. 30, the Soviets "are coming forward with some data about their own forces," Rostow said. After declining to identify their intermediate-range weapons, the Soviets are now "getting more specific about the categories," he said.

However, Rostow said, "they have all kinds of tricks."

These include counting various U.S. planes as intermediate-range missiles but including only a few Soviet bombers. And, he said, the Soviets so far have excluded their SS-20 missiles based in Central Asia. These are understood to amount to about one-third of their force of 900 SS-20 warheads.

President Reagan told the Oklahoma Legislature Tuesday that "a freeze simply isn't good enough because it doesn't go far enough. We must go beyond a freeze."

His spokesman, Larry Speakes, took an even stronger line in a statement that said the proposal "is neither evidence of Soviet restraint nor is it designed to foster an arms control agreement."

"Like previous such Soviet freeze proposals, this one seeks to legitimize Soviet superiority, to leave the Soviet Union free to continue its buildup, to divide the NATO alliance, to stop U.S. deployments, and thus to secure for the Soviet Union unchallenged hegemony over Europe," the statement added.

TWO INJURED—Jimmy Prince of Rt. 1, Snyder and Natasha Pfalser, also of Snyder, were injured in a major two-vehicle accident at the Circle Inn Grocery west of Snyder on the Lamesa highway around 8:30 this morning. According to reports, Phalser was driving a late model Pontiac west bound when it struck the Prince vehicle, a 1976 Chevrolet truck. Prince was reportedly standing by his truck, parked at the store's gas pumps, when the accident occurred. The force of the impact spun the Prince vehicle around and it came to rest near the store's front door. Prince was reportedly thrown over his truck and into the Coke machine in front of the store. A front bumper from the truck, being carried in the bed, flew through the front door of the store. Pfalser was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital by a private vehicle and Prince was transported to the hospital by units of Scurry County EMS. Prince was admitted to the hospital for treatment of a fractured vertebra and Pfalser was treated and released. No injuries were reported to any of the several persons in the store at the time of the mishap. (SDN Staff Photos)

They have so many award programs on television now that we don't attempt to watch all of them. In fact, the television at our house had not even been turned on Monday night when the Movie Awards show came on.

That is, it was not turned on until we got a telephone call.

"Are you watching the Movie Awards on NBC?" asked Del Hirst.

When told that we weren't watching anything, he said, "Turn it on and see Brad Maule."

We did, and there he (Brad) was, singing to that big audience in the awards hall, plus the millions watching on their televisions.

Brad Maule, of course, is one of several Snyder High School graduates who have "made it" in the entertainment field. We heard that his appearance on the Movie Awards show was unexpected---someone had to cancel because of illness, or something. Nevertheless, it was another exposure on national television, and Brad made the most of it.

There's been quite a hassle going on in and around Fort Worth, and throughout the country for that matter, over the firing of Bill Mack, popular late night disc jockey on WBAP Radio. Mack has been on from 11 p. m. to 5 a.m. for years, and has a big following, particularly among truckers.

We overheard an irate waitress say, "It was a Yankee from California that done it."

She was referring to Sandy Beach, WBAP program director who had come from San Francisco to join the station about seven months ago. The Star-Telegram said Warren Potash, station manager, claimed only one complaint had been received. But the S-T uncovered a WBAP receptionist who said she answered "about 200 calls" in one night. And a waitress at a Mesquite truck stop wrote a letter of protest on a roll of toilet paper. She said about 100 truckers signed it.

The last we heard, predictions around Fort Worth were that Mack would "land on his feet."

Moral: Don't mess with sports heroes and disc jockeys.

Ask Us

Q.—Is it true that Snyder got the title "Sparkle City" when an astronaut in orbit took photographs from space and noted how clean it was?

A.—No. The "Sparkle City" title was bestowed by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce when Snyder won its "Operation Sparkle" contest in which all West Texas cities were urged to spruce up for tourists during San Antonio's Hemis-Fair in 1968. A few months later, Snyder's "Operation Sparkle" projects won an All-America City award.

By Appraisal District...

School To Ask Price For Collecting Taxes

Snyder School Trustees last night voted to request cost figures from the Scurry County Appraisal District for collection of taxes, and approved textbook adoptions as recommended by the school district's textbook committee.

Scurry County, which collected taxes for all taxing entities in the county for the past year, advised recently that its collection fee would be increased from .6 of one percent to one percent. That would increase the Snyder School District's cost from $39,972.67 to an estimated $66,621.12.

Supt. Bill J. Hood said that representatives of the county commissioners court had indicated that the school's fee might be reduced to $60,000. However, that still would have the school paying more than $20,000 above costs for collecting the 1981 taxes.

The school board also agreed to seek a meeting of executive officers and board presidents of all entities in an attempt to keep one collection agency for all entities.

It was noted that the Ira School District already had requested the appraisal district to collect its taxes, and officials of other entities have indicated that they would be interested in pursuing such a proposal.

The school board approved the purchase of 35 additional band uniforms and 30 citation cords for the junior high school band. In his request for the purchase, Sam Robertson, director of bands for the school system, said projected enrollment for the junior high band next fall is 135 students. At present, the junior high has 107 band uniforms.

The board adopted a school policy concerning hearings in connection with non-renewal of contracts, as required by Senate Bill 341. This is the last of the policy changes required under the new legislation.

Board members expressed concern over an offer by the city for a 10-year lease on the Humble-Smith School property. The school board had requested a 50-year lease in view of plans for adding some permanent facilities there. However, the city council rejected the proposal and instead offered a 10-year lease. The property involved was given to the city by Humble Oil and Refining Co. (now Exxon) when it closed its district offices that had occupied the property several years ago. It has been used as a special education facility by the schools ever since and the facility was given the name "Humble-Smith" in recognition of the donor of the property and to honor Nellie Smith, who pioneered the special education services in the public schools here.

The board approved a proposal for a representative of the board to con-

30-Year Term Assessed In Burglary Case

Stanley Wayne Johnson was assessed a 30-year prison term Tuesday after he was convicted in 132nd District Court on a burglary charge.

Johnson, who already had served time on charges of armed robbery, was found guilty Tuesday morning by the jury, and later was assessed the 30-year term after the jury heard testimony in the punishment phase of the trial.

He was charged with burglary of the apartment of Darrell Wilson last Oct. 18.

A jury was being selected this morning for another burglary trial. The defendant in the trial beginning today is Ted Eugene Morris, who is charged with the burglary of the house of Lew Bob Wood last Dec. 24.

Sales Tax Check Shows Big Gain

Snyder's retail sales tax rebates keep on growing, according to Bob Bullock, state comptroller of public accounts.

Bullock reported that he sent checks totalling $48.9 million to 962 cities as their share of the one-percent city sales tax for March. That represents a 29 percent increase over the same period in 1981.

For Snyder, it was even better. Its March check of $60,119 represented an increase of 50 percent over the $40,284 for the corresponding period last year.

The March check ran Snyder's total for the year to $251,124, compared to $206,294 at this stage last year.

Snyder continued to lead area cities in its population bracket in sales tax rebates.

Figures for other area cities reported by Bullock, with the March check and the total for the year, in order, follow:

Levelland, $49,694 and $200,281; Andrews, $42,176 and $146,225; Pecos, $39,071 and $200,281; Monahans, $36,671 and $151,892; Sweetwater, $33,646 and $162,349; Brownfield, $31,085 and $130,344; Lamesa, $29,077 and $150,861.

Colorado City got a check for $15,173, running its total for the year to $62,162, while Post's figures were $11,792 and $52,999. Rotan's report was $2,125 and $16,268, Roscoe $1,241 and $10,447, and Roby $1,056 and $3,557.

Ag Day Dinner Set Thursday

Barbecued beef brisket will be featured on the menu for a buffet dinner for members of the Tejas CowBelles and the Scurry County Museum Association on Thursday night.

The dinner is being planned in observance of Agriculture Day and is a highlight of the Texas Nutrition Exhibit now being shown in the Scurry County Museum at Western Texas College. The dinner will be served in the museum from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m., with red beans, coleslaw, potato rolls, peach cobbler and pound cake rounding out the menu.

Providing musical entertainment for the evening will be an instrumental group from the WTC music department.

The Texas Nutrition Exhibit, prepared by the CowBelles, features information on a variety of Texas agricultural products and especially beef. A demonstration on cutting beef at home will be given by Tommy Hester in the museum Monday evening, and the public is invited to attend. By buying larger portions of beef, the homemaker can obtain more choice cuts of meat at a lower cost if she knows how to cut the meat, the Texas Agriculture Department points out. The demonstration will illustrate cutting techniques.

Middle-American Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, seeking support for his embattled budget, is tailoring his appeal to the lower- and middle-income voters who were so important to his election but are now starting to express second thoughts about his economic policies.

During his 2-day trip to Alabama, Tennessee, Oklahoma and Indiana, Reagan emphasized that Congress may have given him too little, too late in the way of a tax cut and stressed that his economic program has barely gone into effect.

Tick Inspector Shot

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — A federal border tick inspector who told Congress he needed a firearm to protect himself against armed smugglers, rustlers and illegal aliens was shot while on a horseback patrol along the Rio Grande.

Mark Smith, 24, was released from the Val Verde Memorial Hospital Tuesday where he was treated for a gunshot wound in the shoulder he received on patrol Monday.

Val Verde County sheriff's deputies said Smith was shot from behind, but still managed to load his horse into a trailer and drive toward Del Rio. He was met by Deputy Sheriff Jack Salter, who took him to the hospital.

Smith and two others who work for the U.S. Department of Agriculture in its tick control program, told a congressional subcommittee March 4 that their job was so dangerous they needed to carry firearms. They spoke in behalf of a bill recently introduced by U.S. Rep. Abraham Kazen of Laredo.

For Proposed '83 Budget...

Bipartisan Solution Being Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican and Democratic senators are putting their heads together in an effort to find a bipartisan alternative to President Reagan's proposed 1983 budget — which one top Democrat is calling "unacceptable to everyone."

After the senators from both parties held a private meeting Tuesday, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings said, "We're going to try to work on a bipartisan thing...I think it's going to have to be done." The South Carolinian is the top Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee.

Before that meeting, all 53 of the Senate's Republicans met to review a list of proposals aimed at reducing the federal deficit — which according to the latest administration projection would be $96.4 billion next year under Reagan's proposed budget.

Options being considered by the GOP senators include higher taxes, slower growth in defense spending and a two-year freeze in cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients.

The Senate's Democrats, meanwhile, voted unanimously to send a letter to Reagan asking him to submit a new spending plan "incorporating lower deficits and a commitment to a balanced budget."

With the budget issue still far from resolution, the White House sidestepped another confrontation with Congress by saying it will allow members of a House subcommittee to review Interior Department documents that had been withheld under executive privilige.

By making that decision the administration apparently has avoided a House vote on whether Interior Secretary James G. Watt should be cited for contempt.

In other congressional business Tuesday:

—Assistant Energy Secretary William A. Vaughan was questioned sharply at a Senate Energy and Natural Resources subcommittee hearing about his recommendation that Reagan veto legislation giving the president standby authority to allocate petroleum supplies during a severe shortage.

Vaughan said such authority is "clearly unnecessary" because there are numerous contingency plans, but Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., argued that "we could be in a very difficult bind if we have a cutoff" of foreign oil.

Misleading bust enlargers

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 16 years old and am wondering about using a bust increasing method to enlarge my bustline. Do you think that if I did increase my bustline that it would be harmful or maybe cause breast cancer later? My bust is now 34 inches and I'd like to increase to 36 or 37 inches. Could you please tell me more about this, if I should have it done or not? Do these methods really work?

DEAR READER — The size of a woman's breasts is dependent upon inherited characteristics, hormones that develop the gland tissue and the fat stored within the breast. Unless she is nursing a baby; then the milk content is a factor, of course.

Those enlargers that are so highly advertised are usually misleading. If you have a hormone imbalance or deficiency then you need hormones, not some advertised gimmick. Some women do need additional hormones but they usually also have other medical indications of a hormone imbalance other than small breasts.

Many advertised schemes depend upon a diet that makes a woman gain weight and increases the fat stores in the breasts. But the fat may develop in the wrong places, not the right ones. Other programs include a series of exercises. These may help but they don't enlarge the breasts; they can increase the size of the muscles over the chest wall behind them. As the chest muscles enlarge the bustline increases even if the breasts themselves remain the same size.

You can improve your appearance by improved posture. A good example is standing up straight with your shoulders back. You can do a lot of the exercises to enlarge the muscles over your chest yourself at home. So I don't recommend those advertised methods for breast enlargement. That includes cups, sprays, salves and the whole gamut of devices. They won't cause cancer but you will be disappointed.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 18-12, Breast Basics, which includes exercises and information on what controls breast size. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is there any chance for me and other older ladies who hate what is happening to them to achieve some visible improvement in appearance? I am a very active 63. I'm 5 feet 6 and weigh 130 but my body looks like an ice cream cake that was put in the oven instead of the freezer. Everything is several inches lower than it used to be.

Although I take care of a large house, walk about 15 miles a week and play golf once a week, the flesh on my thighs hangs down as does the flesh on my upper arms, back, my bust, my buttocks and my face. I don't expect to look like 20 but can anything be done?

DEAR READER — You can get rid of unwanted fat deposits by weight control and you can increase the size of your muscles by strength training, but that loose skin at your age is there to stay. Perhaps one day science will find a substance that causes skin to shrink and turn young but it does not exist today.

The only really effective way to eliminate excess skin is to cut it off, a body tailoring job. Plastic surgeons can do wonders today. If a person, whether man or woman, wants to look better and has it done I'm all for them. Why not look your best if you have the chance?

Man Faces Life Sentence

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — A 29-year-old man faces life in prison after being convicted of raping an 11-year-old girl who became pregnant and was later denied an abortion by a county probate judge.

Alvin Zackery was convicted Tuesday of first-degree criminal sexual conduct. The girl, now 12, went to court last fall to get permission to have an abortion, but Judge Donald Halstead refused. The National Organization for Women is now seeking his removal from the bench.

Zackery testified he lived off and on with the girl, her sister and the girls' mother since moving from Chicago to Kalamazoo in 1972. He said the girl's sister regularly slept in his bed, but that he slept with the victim only once, and they did not have sex.

To The Honest Christian Citizens of Snyder

The American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars are made up of men and women who fought for this United States of America. Some of you might not be here today if it were not for them.

Both of these are Non-Profit Organizations. The money they make through Bingo is all used for a number of worthwhile projects:

1. Sending deserving boys and girls to Boys State or Girls State to learn more about how our State Government is run.
2. Provide Wheelchairs, Breathing Machines and Hospital Beds to people who cannot afford to buy or rent them and are not on Medi-Care.
3. Each and every month they take refreshments and entertainment to patients in the Veterans Administration Hospital in Big Spring. Also every Christmas they take gifts to the hospital for the patients.

Therefore I would appreciate it if you would keep helping these organizations. Without your help these projects can't go onward.

A "Yes" vote for Bingo means this work can go on.

A "No" vote means it will be discontinued.

So it will be left up to "You", the people of Snyder and Scurry County.

I thank you for giving me your attention for a few moments.

If you are interested in an easily-made low-calorie seafood stew, you may want to consider trying the following new recipe.

It calls for reasonably priced monkfish (called "lotte" in France) or lingcod, available in some markets. If these fish aren't at hand, you may want to use scallops, as we did. After preparing the stew with the scallops and serving a couple of portions of it hot, we stored the rest in the refrigerator. Because I am wary about reheating scallops — they toughen so easily over heat — I tasted the stew cold and found it delicious. So good, in fact that I have a strong feeling I may make it next summer to offer cold.

LOW-CALORIE SEAFOOD STEW

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 large onion, sliced
2 cups cubed (about ½ inch) eggplant
1½ cups sliced (⅛ to ¼ inch) zucchini
1 medium green pepper, cut in 1-inch squares
1 large clove garlic, minced
4 cups cocktail-vegetable juice (tomato base)
¼ cup minced parsley
¼ teaspoon crushed dried thyme
1 small bay leaf
1 pound monkfish or lingcod fillets (cut in about 2-inch pieces) or bay scallops

In a 4-or 5-quart saucepot heat the oil; add the onion, eggplant, zucchini, green pepper and garlic and cook gently just until tender. Add the cocktail vegetable juice, parsley, thyme and bay leaf and heat until bubbling; reduce to simmering. Add the fish or scallops and cook gently just until cooked through — 5 to 10 minutes for the fish and about 1 minute for the scallops. Serve at once. Makes 7 to 8 cups.

Opening lead: ♣Q

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Today's hand is from a humorous article in "International Popular Bridge." South has sold his soul to the devil in return for good luck at bridge.

He is not much of a player so after getting to seven spades and receiving a queen of clubs lead, he makes the hand by finding East with specifically the K-Q-J-4-3 of hearts.

The play he uses is to lead a heart from dummy at trick two. East plays his jack. Now South takes his ace, plays two rounds of trumps and the ace-king of diamonds to get to discard his nine of hearts. Then the 10 of hearts from dummy gives him a chance to ruff East's queen.

Back to dummy with the last high club to lead the seven and pick up East's king. Now he gets to discard his losing club on the five of hearts.

The hand doesn't require any of this luck. After the club lead there is a perfect double squeeze available. Actually, it has been set up for him in simple form. All he must do is run off his seven trumps and discard three hearts and the four of clubs from dummy. Each opponent is down to three diamonds while West must hold two clubs and East two hearts.

Now a club to dummy squeezes East out of a diamond. A heart back to his hand squeezes West out of a diamond. He must retain a club. So dummy's three diamonds take the last three tricks.

"The Dark Horse"...

Tale Of Racing Lore

THE DARK HORSE. By Rumer Godden. Viking. 202 Pages. $11.95.

"The Dark Horse" is an attractively told story, based on true events, for readers of all ages.

The title is both literal and figurative — Dark Invader is a splendid young, dark-brown racehorse whose reputation in racing circles generally is that of an unridable mount, a loser. But his stable lad, a new owner and the new owner's trainer have confidence in his quality and stake their faith on his being a winner.

The time is the 1930s and the story begins in England where Dark Invader's behavior makes a bad impression at the racecourses. But the British still rule India and that's where the main action of the story develops.

The English colony in Calcutta includes John Quillan, an expatriate racehorse trainer, and his neighbors and friends, an order of nuns doing good works, the Sisters of Poverty.

Dark Invader is bought by the immensely rich Casimir Alaric Bruce Leventine of Calcutta and is shipped out to India to Quillan's stables. Along with the Dark Invader goes his middle-aged stable "lad," Ted Mullins, the horse's staunchest champion, probably the only person who can ride him and coax him to show his true form.

So there is a group of "outsiders": the disparaged horse; Quillan, who had ruined his army career and social standing when he married a Eurasian; Mullins, who'd lost his license to race years before through no fault of his own; the insecure and ambitious Leventine; the humble sisters carrying out their mission in poverty.

But these are clearly the characters the reader is to care about and most readers won't find it too hard to care about them as their hopes and fears and actions coincide.

The horse lore is woven into the book lightly and interestingly, even for those whose enthusiasm for turf and stable matters usually burns dimly. The characters are believably human, not idealized, and there's just the right amount of heartache and suspense before things work out. Joan Brunskill Associated Press

Are you a member of a re-established family?

A major difference exists between families reconstituted as a result of death and those re-established because of divorce, says Diane Welch, a family life education specialist. After death, the deceased parent is replaced to some extent. After divorce, the step-parent is more likely to add to the role of a biological parent, she explains.

Welch is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Will Appeal Conviction...

Von Bulow Faces Up To 40 Years In Prison

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Claus von Bulow left behind the lunch-hour throng that chanted he was innocent, the lawyers who attacked and defended him and the jury that found he tried to kill his wife, and sadly went home to his luxury apartment.

The jury decided Tuesday that von Bulow had twice tried to kill Martha von Bulow by secretely injecting her with insulin so he could inherit $14 million of her fortune and marry his ex-actress lover. Instead, Mrs. von Bulow fell into two comas.

On each of the two counts he faces from two to 20 years behind the stone walls of the century-old state prison, which stands 30 miles from the stone mansion in Newport where he and "Sunny" von Bulow spent vacations and where, the jury found, he injected her.

Mrs. von Bulow, who with her husband once breezed through a high-society world of big money and exclusive clubs, lies comatose on a hospital bed in New York City. Her hospital is not far from the building with wrought iron doors on Manhattan's Fifth Avenue, where the von Bulows have an apartment.

Von Bulow arrived there in a van Tuesday evening and two doormen grasped his arms and eased him through the crowd of reporters waiting outside. He said nothing, but his lawyer, Herald P. Fahringer, stayed inside the van and said von Bulow was feeling "sad."

Fahringer said earlier that von Bulow "was obviously saddened but he took it like a man."

Von Bulow, a financial consultant, remains free on $100,000 bond and stripped of his Danish passport, despite prosecutor Stephen R. Famiglietti's arguments he might find it "irresistable" to flee the country, considering his international contacts and fluency in four languages.

Judge Thomas H. Needham was to rule today on a defense motion for a judgment of acquittal filed during the course of the nine-week trial. The action marks von Bulow's first step toward an appeal of his conviction on two counts of assault with intent to murder.

After deliberating for a total of 36 hours, the seven men and five women on the jury took a single vote Tuesday and found von Bulow guilty. Jury spokesman David A. Taffs said reaching a guilty verdict "would have been more difficult" without the testimony of former soap opera actress Alexandra Isles, von Bulow's ex-lover.

Mrs. Isles testified she gave von Bulow a six-month deadline for marriage, telling him she wanted them to be together by October 1979. Mrs. von Bulow slipped into her first, brief coma three months later.

More than 100 people, many of them housewives or workers on lunch hours, chanted "Free Claus!" when von Bulow left the Superior Courthouse after his conviction. The crowd booed Famiglietti as he left. Some shouted "Not guilty!"

"Most people are very disappointed with the verdict," said Katherine Escallier, who stopped by the courthouse with friends returning from an exercise class. "You feel that you know him after reading about the trial day after day."

"I'm pretty sure we didn't let his wealth or status affect our decision," said Taffs, a computer analyst who wears his long hair in a ponytail. "I think it was fair. I'm still nervous, but I think it was fair."

Mrs. von Bulow was found Dec. 21, 1980, sprawled on the marble floor of her bathroom in the opulent mansion named Clarendon Court. The coma, termed irreversible by doctors, was remarkably similar to one on Dec. 27, 1979, from which she recovered.

Attorney General Dennis J. Roberts II said at a news conference Tuesday that von Bulow "should face heavy jail sentences." No date has been set for sentencing, but Needham said he would hear a defense motion for a new trial on April 2.

"I'd like to think that it's not a whodunit anymore," said Famiglietti, a volatile 34-year-old who led the prosecution.

The suspicions of Maria Shrallhammer, Mrs. von Bulow's maid for 23 years, convinced the heiress' children by her first marriage to an impoverished Austrian nobleman to ask former Manhattan prosecutor Richard Kuh to conduct an inquiry. The inquiry, which cost the family almost $100,000, led to the charges.

"Their reaction was one of relief and quiet satisfaction that justice was done," Kuh said after telephoning the verdict to von Bulow's stepchildren.

Tragic Singer Hopes 'Last Kiss' Wasn't Final One

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — J. Frank Wilson's voice was still clear and strong as he sat on the bed of his $35-a-week Lufkin motel room and sang "Last Kiss" a capella:

"We were out on a date in my daddy's car.

We hadn't driven very far.

There in the road, straight ahead —

The car was stalled, the engine was dead.

I couldn't stop, so I swerved to the right.

I'll never forget the sound that night —

The cryin' tires, the bustin' glass,

The painful scream that I heard last."

"Last Kiss" was a song of tragedy, of a promising young life erased in a car wreck. Wilson and his group, the Cavaliers, rode it to the top of the record charts in 1964.

But fame was indeed fleeting. Since his days as a 22-year-old teen idol, aspects of Wilson's own life — if put to music — would produce a mournful song.

Wilson, 40, has traded last kisses with seven wives and has fought lingering bottle fatigue. Flipping open an attache case, he displays the 12 types of pills he says he takes daily to fight diabetes, pancreatitis and other ailments that come and go.

But J. Frank, whose face mirrors his past misfortunes, is hanging in there. He is working steady on an offshore oil rig, and he hopes to reclaim the prestige he enjoyed when all of teenage America was wiping away a tear over that final kiss.

Wilson recalls with dismay that his problems began on a night in October 1964, the same day, he says, that "Last Kiss" became No. 1.

The band was traveling through Ohio at night when the driver fell asleep and the car slammed into the rear of a truck. Wilson suffered head injuries, broken ribs and a broken ankle. His manager was killed and other band members were injured critically.

After recovering, Wilson said, he continued to play concerts, and "I made good money for a couple of years. But I started to go downhill. I couldn't eat and I couldn't sleep. I hit the bottle."

He complains that people took advantage of him, because he was "gullible," and that he only received $2,700 from the record company for "Last Kiss."

"You're talking about a 15 million seller," he said. "Hell, I'm out $3 million."

"Last Kiss" was followed by an album that sold well, he said, and two follow-up singles also moved briskly, but none was as successful as "Last Kiss."

After his fame ebbed, Wilson and his wife moved back to San Angelo, where the song had been recorded, then to his home town of Lufkin in 1968 to work at a mobile home plant.

Later, after a divorce, the music bug bit again and he moved to Hollywood, playing at such clubs as the Whiskey A Go Go and Cinnamon Cinder, Wilson said. But he met with little success and returned to Lufkin and the factory.

Over the years, "the drinking took its toll," he said, telling of the time he and some friends "got drunk and the next thing I know I had four tattoos."

Sitting bare-chested, Wilson pointed to a tattoo on his right shoulder of a microphone and musical notes.

"I can work the hell out of a microphone," he said.

Wilson said he held several jobs in the 70s, including orderly duties at rest homes and working with mentally retarded children at Lufkin State School.

All the while, he was falling in and out of love. One of his seven marriages lasted only a month, he remembered with a sheepish grin.

On his television, he frequently sees advertisements for record anthologies that include "Last Kiss," and "you can hear the damn thing every day on the radio," he said.

Last year, he recorded another version of the song, called "Last Kiss 1981," and several other songs for small record companies, but they didn't sell, said Wilson.

He blames recent record producers for not allowing him to choose his own material.

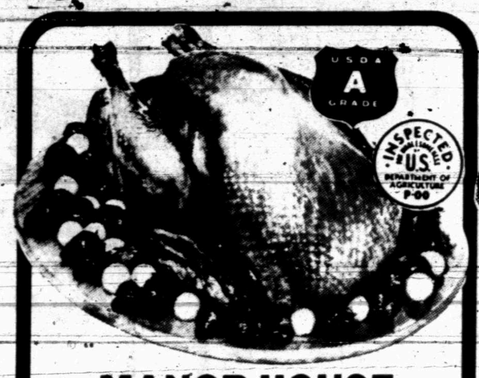

"I believe I could pick me a hit," he said.

In his cluttered room, where musical mementoes hang on the wall next to several neatly pressed shirts, Wilson keeps an album of clippings and photos.

One is a 1964 concert poster that says "J. Frank Wilson" in large bold type. Listed beneath it, in much smaller type, are Wilson's supporting acts — B.J. Thomas and Mickey Gilley — both of whom have built and sustained their careers.

Said Wilson, lighting another cigarette, "I love to sing. When I see B.J. and Mickey having it so good, I wonder why in the hell I'm not there.

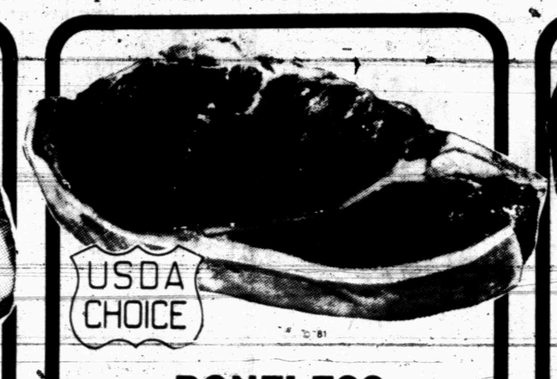

"I used to be real bitter, but I learned to say 'the hell with it.'"

Some Are Worried About Dust Bowl Coming Back

FLAGLER, Colo. (AP) — Leonard Smith and his father spent 10 years rebuilding their farm after the dust storms of the "Dirty '30s."

Fifty years after the dust "billowed up into the sky and blotted out the sun," Smith looks nervously over the fence at his neighbors' land and wonders if his 2-year-old granddaughter will grow up through another dust bowl.

"I was only a little boy, but I remember how we used to stuff wet sheets and rags around the windows and doors to keep the dust out," Smith said recently, sitting with his family in a sprawling stucco farmhouse on the high, arid plains of eastern Colorado.

Just west of the Smith property is an 8,000-acre ranch that has been purchased by a corporation whose directors ordered the fragile grassland plowed up and planted in winter wheat.

Smith says he wishes he knew the owners so he could tell them how that kind of overzealous farming helped bring on a dust bowl 50 years ago.

Experts are not predicting a disaster of the same proportions that hit Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Colorado in the 1930s. Most of America's farmland has been restored since the Dust Bowl era and conservation practices are well entrenched.

But many farmers in eastern Colorado are afraid a new trend toward "plowouts" will bring back hard times. They believe they are facing an onslaught of investors who live far away, are interested only in profit and do not know anything about conditions in eastern Colorado.

As in the days before the Dust Bowl, huge tracts of newly purchased land are being plowed up and planted corner-to-corner with wheat. The fields stand in stark contrast to the surrounding farmland, which is planted in narrow strips sandwiched between areas of fallow ground.

"The outfit that bought the land west of us came in here with big four-wheel drive tractors and 60-foot plows," Smith said. "They plowed straight up and down hills, through fences, in and out of gullies."

Federal conservation officials say they have seen similar scenes across eastern Colorado during the past three years as more than 400,000 acres of virgin prairie have been plowed out.

That exceeds even the Dust Bowl days, when 300,000 acres went under the till in eastern Colorado.

The motive then and now was the same: Get as much profit as possible out of the land during the short term.

"What we're seeing here is the beginning of a movement," said David Miller, district conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service. "The biggest buyers are Germans and Canadians, who want to make big bucks fast, and that usually means abusing the land. They think that all they have to do to get abundant crops is put a plow on the land."

The problem with plowouts, Miller explained, is that the land is not rich enough to support intensive farming. In most places, the grasslands are covered only with sparse tufts of blue-green prairie grass, used for grazing cattle.

The thin topsoil lacks moisture and nutrients and lies over a hard bed of shale. Eastern Colorado averages only about 12 inches of rainfall annually and farmers must use all the available conservation methods to coax a wheat crop out of the ground.

"Those who are born and raised here use windstrip cropping, alternating between thin sections of fallow ground," said Miller. "The method lets the ground rest every other year, conserves moisture and leaves only small areas naked to the wind."

Terraces are built to prevent water from racing down fields and forming deep gullies during infrequent rainstorms.

Despite the inhospitality of the land, foreign investors are attracted to the area.

Cultivated farmland is much more valuable than pastures. Investors have been able to purchase the grassland for $300 an acre, but the going price for plowed cropland is $500 per acre.

Because prices continue to decline for beef and wheat while the costs of production spiral, many farmers find the market pressure too great to keep their land and snap up offers from out-of-state buyers.

Real estate agent Joe Hendricks helped a local farmer sell a 16,000-acre ranch to a group of investors from Canada and West Germany.

Tornado Destroyed Home...

Family Saved By Bulletin

By The Associated Press

Eddie Beard was watching television with his family when the program was interrupted with a weather bulletin that may have saved their lives.

A tornado warning just before 8 p.m. prompted Beard and his family to push a kitchen table toward the southwest corner of their Mulberry, Kansas, home for protection. Beard, his pregnant wife and two small children huddled there with a blanket and a flashlight, waiting for the storm to pass.

"I told them I loved them," Beard said Tuesday as he walked through the remains of his battered home. The tornado that ripped through the town of 700 people Monday night picked up Beard's house and dropped it.

Although their house was demolished, the Beards escaped serious injury.

"God protected my family," Beard said. "Just be thankful for what you've got and realize it is possible for this to happen to anyone."

Three people died in the barrage of tornadoes that tore through Mulberry, Hallowell and Tyro in southeast Kansas. The twisters caused millions of dollars in damage to homes and businesses in the area.

Another person died and more than 90 people were injured when tornadoes touched down in Ada and Bartlesville, Okla., and and an elderly woman was killed when tornadoes blew through western Missouri Monday night.

"I've been chasing hurricanes and tornadoes for more than 30 years and I've never seen so few injuries for so much damage," Maj. Cecil Brown of the Salvation Army said from Bartlesville.

The twisters caused more than $20 million in damages to Bartlesville and about about $1 million in damages to Ada.

Ralph Smith, Bartlesville Civil Defense director, said Tuesday night that clean-up crews from "nine different entities of government" were working through the night to clear away debris. National Guardsmen said they would continue to patrol the streets today.

Kansas Gov. John Carlin toured Mulberry Tuesday as residents began cleaning up debris scattered by the storms. Telephone service still had not been restored to the city Tuesday night and a dusk-to-dawn curfew was in effect.

Unemployment Up In 41 States Since '80

WASHINGTON (AP) — During Ronald Reagan's first year in the White House, unemployment went up in 41 states and the District of Columbia, government figures show.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, comparing state-by-state jobless rates in January with the levels of unemployment a year earlier, also reported that in 19 of the 41 states the number of people thrown out of work in a year's time reached double-digit levels.

Nationally, unemployment reached 8.8 percent of the labor force in February, based on seasonally adjusted figures.

President Reagan has said on many occasions he sympathizes with people who are unable to find work but that his economic program eventually will revitalize U.S. business and create millions of jobs.

In a dozen states — six of them in the South — joblessness increased over the year by a full 2 percentage points.

The bureau said employment declines were concentrated in manufacturing and that the durable goods sector — such as autos and steel — were hardest hit.

Fifteen of the 19 states with overall unemployment rates of 10 percent or more in January were in an area extending from Iowa eastward to Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania and southward to the Gulf Coast states of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

13 Honored At Dinner By Chevron

Chevron U. S. A. gave special recognition to 13 long-service employees at SACROC Unit with a dinner at the Snyder Country club.

Five employees were honored for 30 years of service. They are A. E. Orr, H. Parker, R. H. Stewart, T. T. Withers and H. A. Smith. Mantle clocks and wrist watches will be awarded these employees.

A 20-year pin went to G. H. Thomas, and receiving awards for 15 years of service were R. E. Barbee, S. M. Cox Jr. and C. E. Masters.

SACROC Unit Superintendent G. H. Thomas also congratulated G. P. Ator, Owen Dickey, Mairl McFaul and D. B. Tankersley on their recent retirement and thanked them for their many contributions to Chevron U. S. A.

Your Birthday

March 18, 1982

This coming year you will be making many new friends from all walks of life. Interestingly, the little guy will prove as helpful to you as the big guys.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Even though you may be eager to involve an influential friend in your present plans, today is not the best day to make your presentation. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in each of the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Joint ventures should prove more fortunate for you today than things you tackle single-handed. However, be sure to share the acclaim and rewards.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your ideas and plans for doing things today will be good, but you may not execute them in accordance with your blueprints, and thus may fall short.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In matters that pertain to your career and finances, keep frivolities out of the picture today. Fun and games could cause problems.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) People outside of the home will find you amicable and agreeable today. Try to maintain that same warm touch when dealing with family members.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Things should go rather smoothly today because others will be there to help you over the rough spots, yet you may not give them proper recognition.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Lady Luck will back you up today in situations where you use good judgment. She may pretend she doesn't know you, however, if you take wild risks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Materially, this should be a beneficial day. You're endowed with the golden touch. Should you reap a lucky harvest, don't keep it all for yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Unless you can speak well of others today it's best to say nothing at all, even though you might know something about another of whom you're not overly fond.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your logic and hunches regarding ways to add to your means should be accurate today. You'd be wise to heed them instead of gambling on a friend's advice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Things will work out more successfully today if you try to build good will with those with whom you're involved. Pushing and shoving to get your way won't work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Keep a low profile today in matters relating to your career or finances. If you begin to make waves you could do yourself more harm than good.

I don't know what I expected.

I was invited to address the convention of the National Automobile Dealers Association.

Automobile dealers have suffered 32 months of hard times. Nobody has been pinched more painfully by high interest rates.

Most Americans imagine that the community Ford dealer is part of the Ford Motor Company sales force.

He's not -- whatever car or cars he sells -- that dealer is an independent hometown businessman.

He buys cars from the manufacturer -- with borrowed money -- so that he can show them off for you.

And just the interest on that borrowed money is now costing the average dealer $13,000 a month!

A lot of them have collapsed under that overhead.

Because they were underfinanced or undermanaged -- or because it just isn't fun anymore -- 3,200 of those dealers are no longer in the business.

But that leaves 22,000 who are.

And I went to Atlanta to meet with those survivors not knowing what to expect.

You talk about gallantry under fire!

Your neighborhood car dealer paid his way to Atlanta in greater numbers this year than ever. And he's not here for fun and games. He's here attending workshops on cash management and leasing, on inventory control and streamlining the body shop.

And where the conference rooms are overcrowded, no matter. He squeezes in and stands in the back to learn all he can about how to do and make do -- about personnel training and motivation, about reconditioning used cars and making the most of new computers.

I hear no whining -- no pining -- nobody on the self-pity pot. Everywhere, instead, animated conversation about the big turnaround in most markets over Washington's birthday weekend. Enough dealers to encourage all dealers with reports of increased sales -- two hundred percent -- three hundred percent.

Has the dam broke on the pent-up demand? If it hasn't eventually it has to!

Whether they're selling home-made or foreign cars, on some things there's a consensus.

And there is on this:

Today's new car is always safer, stronger and more economical. A better car by any measure than ours or any nation has ever produced before.

And today's car buyer works fewer hours for enough money to buy a new car -- 300 fewer hours than 20 years ago!

Nobody wants to say that the car business was overdue for some pruning because it was not all deadwood that fell away.

Some dealers' only sin was being in the wrong place at the wrong time.

But I have been two days with the survivors -- and I haven't seen this much gung'ho, get-up-and-go since the long ago days when we used to put mothballs in the gas tank of a Model-T.

Men and women of the NADA, lead on!

Hearings To Begin

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The first in a series of statewide hearings on alcohol and drug abuse among Texas youth is scheduled for Thursday.

Rep. Frank Madla, chairman of a House subcommittee examining the problem, called the hearings "long overdue."

Dear Abby

Doctor Calls Pregnancy A Two-Way Affair

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: You recently stated that if the parents of an unborn child cannot agree whether or not to terminate the pregnancy, the decision should be the mother's "because it is her body." I disagree. Pregnancy is not simply a state of a woman's body. It is also a stage in another person's life, and that person has not only his/her own identity, but another parent whose contribution to and interest in that person are every bit as vital as those of the mother.

The whole issue of abortion is difficult enough when both parents agree. But to deny one parent his share in that decision, just because he doesn't agree with the other parent who by biological accident happens to be in control, is unconscionable.

If the father is willing to assume responsibility for childrearing, his wishes should carry the same weight as the mother's. Some way should be found to compensate the mother for the inconvenience and potential hazard of the pregnancy.

After all, you could not claim as your own another person's car parked in your garage.

HERBERT S. HEINEMAN, M.D., PHILADELPHIA

DEAR DR. HEINEMAN: So what happens if the woman insists on terminating the pregnancy even though the man is opposed to it? Since there can be no compromise, the woman's wishes should prevail, assuming she finds no amount of compensation acceptable for the "inconvenience and potential hazard of the pregnancy" — in addition to bearing a child she does not want. And by the way, Dr. Heineman, a woman's body is not a garage that can be rented by the week or month.

DEAR ABBY: I tried to surprise my boyfriend with an engagement ring for Valentine's Day, and he refused to accept it. I was really hurt. We're not kids, Abby. I'm 27 and he's 26, and we've been dating for nearly two years.

We're both working, but I make more than he makes, so I figured I could better afford to give him a ring. So I went ahead and bought one.

I wasn't really trying to pressure him into getting married right away, but I guess he thought I was because he's cooled off quite a bit since then.

Do you think I was too pushy? How should I handle things now?

HURTING IN HOUSTON

DEAR HURTING: Apparently your boyfriend wasn't ready for a formal engagement, which is what a ring usually signifies. Back off, and let him call the signals. Your valentine has a rather pushy ring to it.

DEAR ABBY: I have a suggestion to all those wives who complain because their husbands watch football all weekend. My solution proved to be a salvation to our relationship and to my sanity.

I calmly, without giving him any notice, began to plan activities away from home during the time football games were being watched. This way, I and my children had something fun to do, it kept the children out of my husband's hair, and I didn't have to nag or be his servant while he was glued to the tube. The kids and I have entertained ourselves with concerts, movies, horseback riding, picnics, etc.

After a while, my husband started to feel left out. Also, without me there to provide snacks and background noise, football watching wasn't that much fun.

He still watches football, but not nearly so much. About half the time he joins us, and we're all much happier. So the solution is simple: Learn to entertain yourself. You'll be setting a great example for the kids in the process.

Tourney Begins Thursday...

Cooper Runs Past Snyder, 12-1

ABILENE -- Snyder's Tigers will have to come up with stronger pitching and hitting if they intend to take the Snyder Baseball Tournament crown this weekend. They certainly can't keep their present pace.

Snyder lost its second game in a row here yesterday afternoon, ducking behind powerful Abilene Cooper 12-1. It was the second straight loss in which the Tigers scored only one run.

Thursday's first-round tournament action pairs Andrews and Canyon in the opener at 11 a.m., followed by Plainview and Estacado at 1:30, Odessa Ector and Lubbock Dunbar at 4 and Levelland and host Snyder in the feature game at 7.

The three-day tournament will be held at Moffett Field.

Snyder's lone run here came in the first inning as Brent Roemisch led off with a walk and John Wilson singled him in. From that time on, Cooper pitcher Billy Mitchell kept the Tiger batsmen under raps, allowing just five more hits and recording nine strikeouts.

Cooper made the most of the bottom half of the inning to march in front, 5-1. The Cougars added insurance runs in the second, third and fifth innings, but they weren't necessary.

Monte Gambol, Snyder's young lefthander, took the loss after pitching only one-third of the first inning. Snyder got relief from Tommy Gressett for another three and two-thirds, while Wilson hurled the final two.

John Williams led off the bottom of the first with a walk for Abilene and Robert Wagstaff and Mitchell each added a single. A fielder's choice put Mitchell out and David Scarbrough aboard, and Jeff Blackburn, Arnold Blackenship and Tommy Clemens answered with base-grabbing shots before the nightmare inning began to come to an end.

Cooper banged in one more run in the second and third innings, before blitzing the Tigers with five more in the fifth.

This time Clemons singled, Chuck Cathey walked, Brad Morrison was hit by a pitch and Williams came up with his second basehit of the day. One out later, Mitchell finished out the mele with a home run.

Snyder left five men stranded on the bases, but only three batters ever reached third base after Roemisch scored in the first inning. Britt Vincent, leftfielder, was two-for-three to lead the Tigers. Jesse Hernandez was one of four players who hit one-for-three. His double makes his plate appearances 21 of 32 for the season to date.

Cooper's win gives the Cougars a 12-3 record, while Snyder is 6-4.

Oliver Will Talk Again

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Al Oliver said he will meet with Texas Ranger officials one more time today before he demands to be traded.

Oliver, who has averaged .319 at the plate since joining the Rangers in 1978, said he will ask to be traded if the Rangers refuse to renegotiate or extend his current contract which runs through 1985.

Eddie Robinson, Texas' executive vice president, and manager Don Zimmer were to meet with Oliver and his agent, Howard Mandell, today in Orlando.

NCAA Cage Action...

BC Turning Some Heads

by The Associated Press

Most recent headlines concerning Boston College's basketball team left something to be desired...until last weekend, that is.

Bradley Coach Dick Versace riffed the Eagles' schedule when they were selected for the NCAA Tournament and his team was bypassed. Versace intimated that BC was picked as one of four teams from the Big East Conference because Dave Gavitt, the league's commissioner, also is chairman of the NCAA Division I Basketball Committee.

But there has been a sharp turnaround ever since Boston College stunned second-ranked DePaul 82-75 Sunday to advance to the Midwest Regional semifinals in St. Louis this weekend against Kansas State. There was a noisy campus rally Monday and "Meet Me in St. Louie" signs greeted the team when it returned home.

"It's a great experience," said Coach Tom Davis. "It's the excitement of life. It's what sport is all about...trying your best.

"We were 5-6 at one time, but I did not think we were playing poorly. We lost on the road to some very fine basketball teams. I think the players just kept working. Accepting the losses made us work harder."

Boston College isn't the only one of the 16 remaining teams which may not be household name to college basketball afficionados. Idaho and Fresno State aren't traditional powers, either, although they are ranked eighth and 11th nationally.

The other Midwest semifinal sends fifth-ranked Missouri against Houston. In the East Regional at Raleigh, N.C., top-rated North Carolina meets No.13 Alabama and ninth-ranked Memphis State faces Villanova.

The Mideast Regional at Birmingham, Ala., sends third-ranked Virginia against No.17 Alabama-Birmingham and seventh-rated Minnesota against No.20 Louiville. And in the West Regional at Provo, Utah, No. 6 Georgetown takes on Fresno State and Idaho goes against fourth-ranked Oregon State.

That game will be a rematch. Idaho's Vandals, with a skinny 6-foot-6 center and no super scorer, embarrassed OSU 71-49 in the Far West Classic last December.

Fresno State expects 1,500 or more of its rabid fans — the Red Wave has become almost as well known as the team — to follow the Bulldogs to Provo for the game against Georgetown, the top-seeded team in the West Regional.

The Bulldogs will ask 6-7 Rod Higgins to go against Patrick Ewing, Georgetown's heralded 7-foot freshman center.

The shortest trip will be that of Alabama-Birmingham. The Blazers' campus is about a mile from the Jefferson County Civic Center and, says Coach Geneu about the meeting with Virginia and 7-4 Ralph Sampson, "I feel very good going into Birmingham."

UAB ousted defending champion Indiana over the weekend.

Purdue Coming Alive In NIT

by The Associated Press

Nobody in the original 32-team field had a worse record than Purdue's 14-13. Yet the Boilermakers are still alive for the third round of the National Invitation Tournament and seem to be getting stronger.

A couple of factors are working in their favor as they prepare to host Texas A&M Friday night.

First, they're coming off an impressive 98-65 romp over Rutgers. Second, they have a strong postseason tradition, having finished second in the NIT in 1979, third in the NCAA in 1980 and third in the NIT last year.

"We want to get this next game and get to New York City," said sophomore guard Ricky Hall. "This is our seniors' last year. They've been in three Final Fours and they've never won, so we definitely want to go this year and send them out right."

The Boilermakers are led by senior guard Keith Edmonson, the Big Ten Conference leading scorer, who had 29 points in the Rutgers blowout.

The game between Purdue and Texas A&M, 20-10, will cap the third round, which begins Thursday night with Virginia Tech, 20-10, at Georgia, 18-11; Tulane, 19-8, at Bradley, 23-10; and Dayton, 21-8, at Oklahoma, 21-10.

Winners of those games will converge on New York's Madison Square Garden for Monday night's semifinals.

Texas A&M is coming off a 69-65 win over Washington in which Claude Riley scored 17 points including three key jumpers down the stretch.

The Aggies had two players foul out late in the game, and Coach Shelby Metcalf promised his team would prepare better for Purdue.

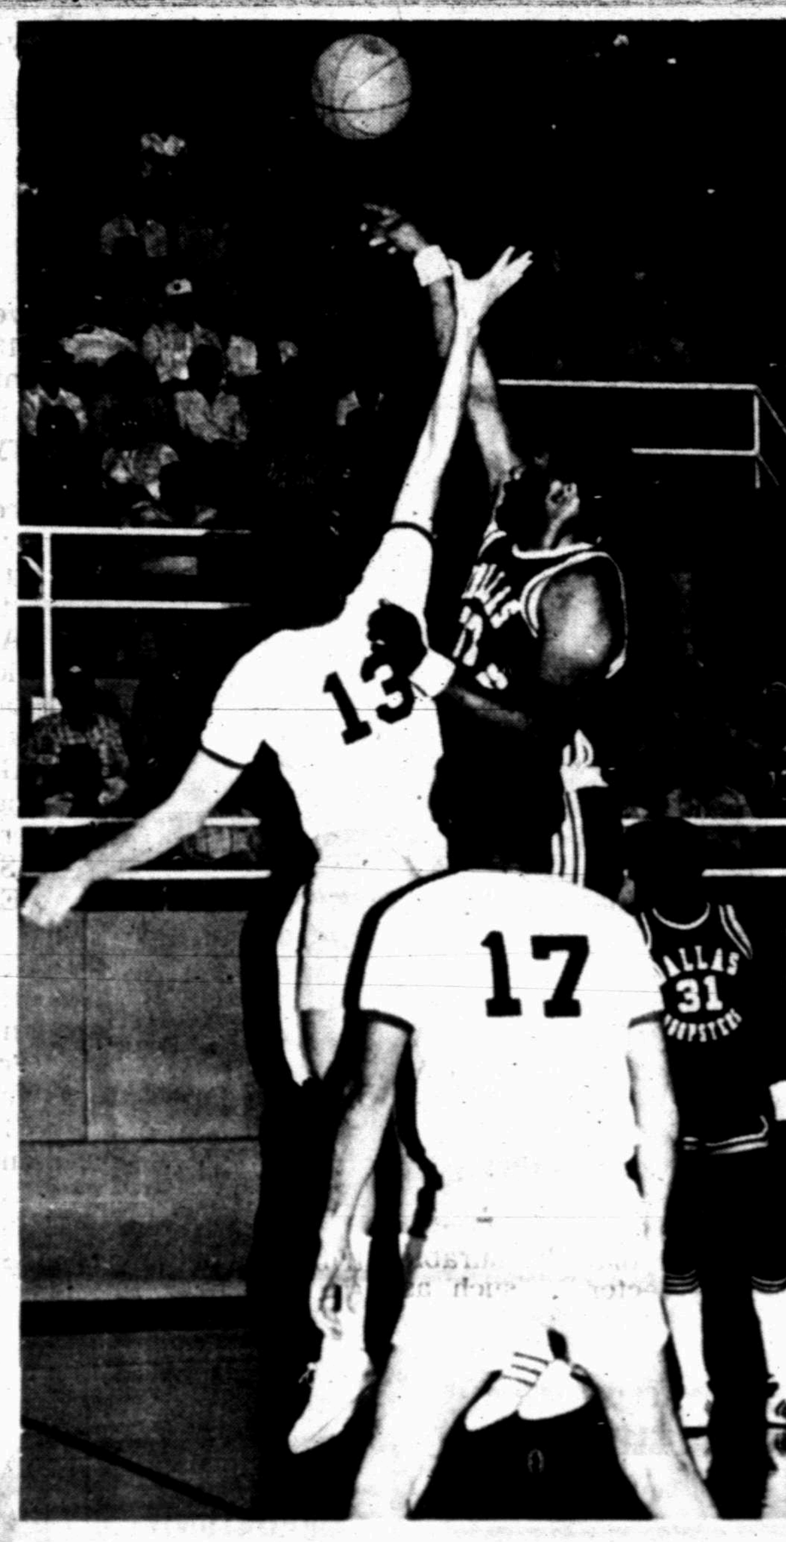

"One more win and we go to the Garden," he said.

Metcalf's sentiments were echoed by Bradley Coach Dick Versace his Braves knocked off Syracuse he said, "Just one more game and we're in New York. I've always liked New York."

Bradley's opponent, Tulane, will be playing for the third straight game on the road, a situation not to the liking of Coach Ned Fowler.

"It's a shame we have to play three tough games in a row in very hostile environments, instead of getting to play maybe one game in the Louisiana Superdome, where we'd have an advantage," Fowler said after his team's 56-51 second-round win at Nevada-Las Vegas.

Dayton, with the best season record of the surviving teams, has the unenviable task of playing at Oklahoma, where the crowd acted like a sixth man as the Sooners edged Cal-Irvine 80-77 in the second round.

TIP -- Dallas' Bruce Thornton gets a little pushoff from Snyder basketball coach Larry Scott (13) as action tipped off in the Dallas Hoopsters-Scurry All-Stars game held here last night. Also shown are SHS girls basketball coach Ken Housden (17) and Benny Barnes (31).

Tigers Second In 2-4A Meet

FORT STOCKTON -- Snyder High School girls golf team placed second in the first District 2-4A match of the season, held here Monday.

The Tigers return to district action again March 22 at Monahans.

Snyder fired a 378 to finish in second place behind host Fort Stockton, which rolled a 371. Pecos shot a 391 to take third place in the 18-hole meet while Andrews placed fourth with a 440 and Lamesa was fifth with a 573.

Fort Stockton's Monica McLain earned medalist honors with her 84. Snyder's Lisa Franklin was runnerup with an 86.

Snyder's girls also placed second to Fort Stockton in the Blue Ribbon City Classic, held last weekend in Fort Stockton.

In that meet, Snyder carded a 376 to rip third place Pecos by 21 strokes. Pecos turned in a 397. Fort Stockton's winning score was 368.

Kim Deerfield of Fort Stockton took medalist honors with an 86. Snyder's Theresa Hildreth was runnerup with an 87, while Franklin had an 88.

Other Snyder team members are Laurie Donelson, Tracey O'Day, Diane Risenhoover, Karen Dodson and Vickie Gregory.

Walker Won't Fight; He'll Remain A Bulldog

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) - Georgia Coach Vince Dooley and the National Football League can breathe easier now that two-time All-American tailback Herschel Walker has decided not to fight the system.

Walker, who two weeks ago said there was a "70-30" chance he would challenge the NFL rule that prohibits the drafting of collegiate undergraduates, announced Tuesday he would not take the case to court and would stay at Georgia for his junior season.

"I have weighed all the facts and have decided that I will remain at Georgia and will not challenge the NFL underclassman rule," the 6-foot-1, 222-pound Walker told a jammed news conference.

"I still feel the NFL rule is basically unconstitutional. However, I don't want to interfere with the system that's designed to be the best for the majority of people involved," he said.

Walker never said he wanted to play in the NFL before his college eligibility ran out, but had expressed a desire to have the right to play pro football if he so desired before his college class graduated.

Jim Heffernan, the NFL's public relations director, said from his New York office: "He's made his decision, and we wish him continued success." When asked what the NFL's response might be if the undergraduate rule wre challenged at another time, Heffernan replied: "If someone does, we'll consider it at that point."

Dooley, also at the news conference, said was glad to again have the services of the 20-year-old Walker, who has amassed 3,741 rushing yards and 35 touchdowns in two seasons at Georgia.

AWARD WINNING DE STUDENTS— Students in the marketing and distributive education program at Snyder High School set a school record by taking five first place awards at the Area Marketing and Distributive Education Conference in San Angelo last weekend. Jill Donelson took a first place award in finance and credit and Sherry Holt earned a first in apparel and accessories. Ann Melton's individual free enterprise project earned her a first place award in food service. Jim Simmons contributed to the record setting effort with an individual second place award in the petroleum marketing contest. The student's free enterprise group project also took a first place award. Frist place winners in the individual events will represent SHS in the state finals in April. Pictured with their awards are Jim Simmons, Ann Melton, Sherry Holt, Jill Donelson and SHS distributive education teacher Jim Rosson. (SDN Staff Photo)

MEMENTOS OF IRELAND--Today is St. Patrick's Day and to avoid being pinched everyone usually wears something green. One person who followed that time honored tradition is Father Tom Jordan, a native of Ireland, who came to America in 1967. This past summer he returned to Galway County, Ireland for a brief stay to visit family and friends. He is pointing to several post cards, mementos of his recent trip. (SDN Staff Photo)

Warnings Tell Reagan Program Not Working

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has the word from Wall Street, Capitol Hill and even from within his administration: his economic program may fail to spur sustained recovery of an economy bogged down by high interest rates.

The warnings come as top Senate Republicans and Democrats begin preliminary talks aimed at seeking a bipartisan alternative to Reagan's big-deficit budget.

And, all Senate Democrats are calling on the president to send a new spending plan to Congress that includes lower deficits and points the way to a balanced budget.

Uneasiness over the economic situation is not limited to critics of Reagan's budget recommendations and its record deficits.

Some of Reagan's top advisers are publicly raising concerns that pressures from continued high interest rates will prevent the start of sustained economic recovery this spring, as the president had predicted.

"I think there's no question we have the seeds of an economic recovery that have been planted...and this recovery can be non-inflationary," White House counselor Edwin Meese III said Tuesday. "But that's not going to happen until we see some further progress in getting the interest rates down."

Murray L. Weidenbaum, chairman of Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers, acknowledged, "These interest rates are affecting the timing, speed, strength and duration of the recovery." His comments were published in The New York Times Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Henry Kaufman, chief economist for Salomon Brothers Inc. in New York and one of Wall Street's most influential analysts, told the House Budget Committee that the administration's program "will move the economy up" later this year. But he said he foresees "some stalling in economic activity either late this year or early next year."

According to most administration officials and private economists, projected high deficits are largely responsible for keeping interest rates so high.

Forecasts of economic recovery have assumed that interest rates would drop as the inflation rate declines and there is a recession-dampened demand for credit. However, many key interest rates, after declining significantly last fall, are now at about the same high levels as at the end of 1981.

On Monday, interest rates on short-term Treasury bills rose nearly a full point to just under 13 percent.

Snyder Police Arrest 2 Men

Snyder police arrested two twenty year old men Tuesday and cleared a Saturday theft reported Tuesday morning.

According to the investigating officer, the pair had stolen a cigarette machine from the Bunkhouse Saturday afternoon. Since then, the two had been selling the cigarettes around town for fifty cents a pack.

Officers arrested one of the suspects at 11:15 a.m. Tuesday, less than an hour after the theft was reported. The second suspect was collared while waiting for a customer to arrive in Towle Park around 3 p.m.

Officers recovered some of the stolen cigarettes in the park and later recovered the machine from the city dump where routine operations had already buried it. Total value of the stolen goods and damages to the machine were pegged at $621.

Local police also received three other theft reports Tuesday.

The other major theft of the day involved the theft of two tool boxes and tools from a Homco Company truck while it was parked at the company yard. This theft is reported to have occurred between 3 p.m. Saturday and 5:30 p.m. Monday. No estimate of value for the tools was available.

Bill Line called police around 1:30 Tuesday and reported the theft of a battery from a 1976 Chevrolet one ton truck parked at his business at 2200 Avenue R.

Later, around 1:50 p.m., Mandy Tubb of 1509 Avenue T called local police and reported the burglary of her residence. Listed as missing in the incident was an HBO box taken from her television.

J. O. Morrison, an employee of the Snyder Post Office, called police around 1:30 p.m. Tuesday and reported the vandalism of Xerox machine at the post office. Police are investigating this report as an incident of criminal mischief.

In more routine action, Snyder police investigated four minor traffic mishaps yesterday.

The first accident of the day occurred in the 500 block of 24th St. around 9:30 a.m. A gas meter owned by lone Star Gas and valued at $85 was reportedly run over by a vehicle which fled the scene.

The 2300 block of Avenue R was the scene of a minor two vehicle mishap around 10 a.m. yesterday. Involved in this accident were a 1976 Datsun driven by Cherie Ann Rosas of the Arah Rt. and a 1979 Buick driven by Linda Young Martin of 2210 Sunset.

A second hit and run accident was reported at 9:45 p.m. in the coliseum parking lot. In this incident, a 1980 Oldsmobile owned by Tommy Fletcher of Snyder was reportedly hit by an unidentified vehicle which fled the scene of the mishap.

The 1400 block of College Avenue was the scene of Tuesday's final mishap around 11:50 p.m. David Wayne McClure of 801 Avenue Q left the scene of the accident after his 1977 Ford pickup was in collison with a utility pole owned by Southwestern Bell. Local officers were sucessful in locating the driver a short time later. Major damages were reported to both the pole and the McClure truck.

No injuries were reported in any of Tuesday's accidents. The first three mishaps resulted in only minor damages the vehicles involved.

fer with the city council concerning the lease.

The appointment of Shirley Joann Pylant as music teacher at North Elementary School was approved.

Following adjournment, the board conferred informally with representatives of Gary and Co. Architects on plans for improvements to school facilities. Preliminary plans for a kindergarten facility at Northeast Elementary were studied, and board members indicated that the project was on the right track. Also, in discussion of the Northeast building, it was agreed that work proceed on eliminating excess windows and making other alterations to conserve energy and improve classroom conditions during periods of cold weather.

Bill Seale, president of the board, presided over the meeting. Board members attending were Jerry McWilliams, Mike Reed, Lillie Sullivan, J. D. Hinton, Roy McQueen and G. A. Parks Jr. Among invited guests at the meeting was Dr. Leslie Butler, who is running unopposed in the April 3 election for a place on the board.

114 Inmates Transferred

BUSHNELL, Fla. (AP) — Officials at the Sumter Correctional Institution have transferred 114 young inmates to the Florida state Prison at Starke to quell two nights of racial fighting.

The prison was calm Tuesday after off-duty guards were called in to search for contraband.

Judge Closes Pretrial Hearing For Lawmaker

FREDERICKSBURG, Texas (AP) — A state judge who earlier ruled that news coverage has not compromised Rep. Mike Martin's right to a fair trial here has decided to throw reporters and the public out of the courtroom.

State District Judge Robert Barton on Tuesday granted a defense request to shut the door on a pretrial hearing of Martin's motions to suppress evidence and dismiss the aggravated perjury indictment against him.

Barton began listening to closed-door testimony Tuesday and planned to continue today.

The judge's action drew the criticism of the Society of Professional Journalists in Austin, which reminded Barton that Tuesday was declared Freedom of Information Day by Gov. Bill Clements.

Martin, R-Longview, is charged with lying to Travis County grand jurors in August when he denied staging his own shooting. Martin was wounded in the left elbow on July 31 in Austin when he was hit by shotgun fire near the recreational vehicle he lived in during a summer session of the Legislature.

The 30-year-old Martin offered several stories about the shooting, but his cousin Charles Goff later said the legislator planned the shooting as a publicity stunt. Goff said he fired the shots.

After denying Martin's motion to move the trial from here because of extensive publicity, Barton met behind closed doors with lawyers in the case.

When they returned to the courtroom, defense lawyer Frank Maloney asked Barton to bar the public and press because evidence to be used at the trial, scheduled for April 19, would be revealed during the pretrial hearing.

Maloney said news coverage of the testimony would "severely prejudice" Martin's right to a fair trial.

Prosecutor Bill Williams did not object, but reporters in the courtroom asked for time to contact their lawyers. Barton listened to the reporters' objections, but ordered the hearing closed.

Barton said Maloney had told him in the judge's office that the evidence to be presented "touches upon the merits of the case."

"The court finds that the presentation of that evidence in open court and the disclosure and dissemination of that evidence publicly would create a reasonable probability of prejudice to the defendant," said Barton.

The closed-door testimony was to include apperances by Goff and law enforcement officials who worked on the case.

Launch Is Threatened By More Rain

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — More rain was forecast for the space shuttle's already-soaked desert landing strip, but officials delayed a decision on Columbia's third scheduled flight in hopes that high winds would dry out the clay.

The launch is scheduled for Monday with landing seven days later on Rogers Dry Lakebed, which received a half-inch of rain Tuesday that aggravated muddy conditions left over from weekend downpours.

A second rainstorm was expected to hit today. The National Weather Service said skies should start to clear Thursday.

But the Mojave Desert landing site must be dry even before Columbia's March 29 touchdown in case an emergency forces an early landing. If the lakebed isn't dry, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration apparently has two options: postponing the flight or choosing another landing site.

"If we don't get that (much rain), we're in pretty good shape," Les Reinertson of NASA's Dryden Flight Research Center said Tuesday as rain spattered the 44-square-mile lakebed.

"If we get that with wind, we're probably in fair shape," he said. "We're working on a day-to-day basis here. It depends on the wind really."

Winds frequently sweep the barren air force base, literally sucking moisture from the caliche clay. The weather service issued a welcome forecast for winds gusting up to 35 mph today.

"I've seen it dry significantly in a matter of hours" with strong winds, Reinertson said.

Mother Joins 50-Mile March

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Luella Hernandez says she has to leave her home in the Rio Grande Valley to earn the minimum wage as a farmworker.

"Every year I go north to Michigan, Ohio, Wyoming and Colorado for four to six months. We make at least the minimum of $3.35 an hour," said the 40-year-old mother of 10. "But when we go out to cut onions here, we make less money because they pay by the bag."

Mrs. Hernandez of Pharr was one of about 100 farmworkers and supporters who followed Cesar Chavez, United Farm Workers Union national president, at the start Tuesday of a six-day, 50-mile march for higher wages.

"Viva la union, Viva la huelga," (long live the union, long live the strike) marchers cried out along the way.

"We'll do anything that's legal and that's needed to get the wages up," Chavez told reporters. UFW officials contend that a wage survey shows Valley farmworkers earning an average $2.45 an hour.

"If we're forced to go into a boycott, we'll go for more money," he said. "Citrus would be a good shot, onions a good one (for a boycott)."

Under federal minimum wage laws, farmers who use less than 500 man-days of labor in a three-month period are exempt from the minimum wage. A man-day is considered any time period that a person works, whether it is one or 14 hours a day.

Reagan Says Press Is To Be Blamed

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — President Reagan says erroneous news stories have painted him as a "Scrooge," while network television news irresponsibly hurts his economic recovery program when it interviews many people who have just lost their jobs.

"Is it news that some fella out in South Succotash someplace has just been laid off, that he should be interviewed nationwide?" he asked during an exclusive interview with the publisher and two editors of The Daily Oklahoman and Times.

"The constant downbeat can contribute psychologically to slowing down the recovery," Reagan said in the interview, which was published in today's editions of The Daily Oklahoman.

Reagan aimed most of his criticism at television networks.

Trace President's Roots To Ireland; Await Visit

BALLYPOREEN, Ireland (AP) — The main street in this tidy Tipperary town, which may be the widest in all Ireland, is poised, painted and all prettied up for the president of the United States to come parading past the Ronald Reagan pub in celebration of his Irish roots.

Like the pope showing up in Ireland a few years back on the strength of an invitation to tea from a monsignor in County Mayo, the townfolk are sure the visit will happen before long. Having a pub named for you is the closest a non-Catholic can get to beatification in this part of the world.

The pub, which now flies both the Irish and American flags, has become Ballyporeen's main and some say only [illegible]. It changed its name from O'Farrell's Lounge to the Ronald Reagan and added an upstairs gift shop selling presidential T-shirts as well as the traditional cable-knit wool sweaters a few weeks after Ragnall O'Riagain, the Gaelic spelling of the name, was elected Uactarian, which means president.

Reagan's great-grandfather, Michael Regan, was baptized in the gray granite parish church here on Sept. 3, 1829. He moved to London about the time of the Great Potato Famine, where he put the first "A" back in the family name, and in 1858 emigrated to Illinois as a farmer.

Situated in a lovely green valley between the Galty and Knockmealdown Mountains, Ballyporeen looks as if it had been made to order by the Irish Tourist Board for a presidential visit.

The wide main street, just waiting to be panned by TV color cameras against a background of fleecy sheep, purple glens and emerald fields, has six pubs to accommodate the world press. The friendly, always quotable natives in their Donegal tweeds and cloth caps might have drifted over from the set of a John Ford film. The low slate roofs of the now pastel-painted houses, sending up a tangy furl of turf smoke from their chimneys, seem to have been designed for easy surveillance by the Secret Service. With, of course, plenty of room in the middle for the big parade.

No one in town seems to have any doubt that Ronald Reagan will turn up one of these days in a scream of sirens and skirl of bagpipes. Didn't John Kennedy, another third-generation Irishman who got the Big Job out in America, make the scene at New Ross, only 80 miles away? Didn't Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon discover some Hibernian branches in the family tree when the going got tough in the Oval Office?

"The minute a Yankee president's popularity starts to skid in the polls, he feels this urge to commune with his Irish ancestors," says one of the regulars at the Ronald Reagan Lounge. "I look for your man Reagan to be here any week now. And he'll bring Pat O'Brien with him, to make sure the telly crews don't miss a frame."

By the wildest of Hibernian coincidences that not even Hollywood could invent, both Ronald Reagan and Pat O'Brien have their roots in Ballyporeen. Think of it: the Gipper and his crusty old coach Knute Rockne sprung from the same green sod long before football or the movie camera was invented.

If anything, the O'Briens have a tighter hold on the town than the Reagans or Regans, no matter which way you spell it. Four shops have the name O'Brien over the door, and there is an O'Brien headstone in the old parish graveyard at Doolis, a few miles out of the town. But none with the name of Reagan or Regan. Nor has any house, barn or shed been traced to the family.

Teams of researchers from Debretts' Ancestry Research and the Hibernian Research Co. Ltd. had to pore over the baptismal registers of 27 Tipperary parishes to trace the president back to Michael Reagan, son of Thomas Regan, a poor, landless farm laborer also buried in an unknown grave on the windswept hill called Doolis.

It took seven genealogists 34 hours of intensive squinting down long illegible columns to end the search at last in the scratchy Latin scrawled by Father Martin Redmond in the fading ledger book of Assumption parish, attesting that on Sept. 3, 1829, "I baptized Michael, son of Thomas Regan and Margaret Murphy of Doolis. Godparents: William Regan and Catherine Walsh."

At that, the scholars were lucky in the time frame in which they had to do their work. The present-day church had opened only the year before, and Michael Regan must have been among the first baptized at its font. The old church at Doolis has lain in ruins among the tumbled gravestones since the worst days of Catholic persecution, when hunted priests with a price on their heads said Mass on rocks in the woods and bogs.

In those brutal, bigoted times, keeping Catholic church records was a dangerous, traitorous affront to the English established religion of Protestantism. The Penal Laws were relaxed and finally repealed in 1829. But it wasn't until 1864 that births, marriages and deaths of Irish Catholics were deemed legal or important enough to be registered by the British civil authorities, which is why the search had to be confined to rare and irregularly kept parish records.

Father Eanna Condon, curate at the Church of the Assumption, still has the old parish journals in his keeping and unveils them with great ceremony and fireside hospitality for visiting Americans. An amateur historian himself, he has written an excellent pamphlet on the Reagan family tree and was instrumental in leading Debretts' team to the Ballyporeen connection.

The yellowing baptismal records reflect the heart-wrenching emigration statistics that reduced Ireland's population by more than half in the generations after the Great Famine. Before the potato crop failed in the late 1840s, the parishioners numbered more than 5,000. The church today, the curate says, serves a population of about 1,400.

Father Condon drew a map showing how to get to the little churchyard at Doolis, but warned not to waste my time looking for pre-presidential artifacts. He thinks that the Reagan or Regan tombstones either sunk from sight in the loamy clay soil or else the family was too poor to have the stonecutters erect any.

President Reagan recently told the American Irish Historical Society he knew very little about his family tree until the genealogists traced its tap roots all the way back to Brian Boru, the Celtic warrior king who beat the Danes with one hand (having a cross in the other) at the battle of Clontarf, outside Dublin, in 1014.

"My father was orphaned at age 6," he told the Society while accepting its gold medal. "He knew very little about his family history. And so I grew up knowing nothing more beyond him than an old photograph, a single photo that he had of his mother and father and no knowledge of that family history.

"But somehow a funny thing happened to me on the way to Washington, when I changed my line of work about a year ago. It seems that I became of a certain interest to the people in Ireland who very kindly began to fill me in."

Aside from the handsome pub, the White House imagemakers will have their work cut out for them finding local landmarks for the president to visit.
