Lithuanian declaration alarms Gorbachev

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev today called Lithuania's declaration of independence "alarming" but gave no indication he plans any action to prevent the Baltic republic from breaking away.

He did not, however, acknowledge the legality of the move, continuing to refer to Lithuania as a Soviet republic and not by the new name adopted by Lithuania's legislature.

Another member of the ruling Communist Party Politburo told reporters that the Kremlin will deal peacefully with Lithuania.

"We will not use force," Yegor K. Ligachev told reporters at the Congress of People's Deputies in Moscow. "We must resolve this by political means." Ligachev is believed to be one of the more conservative members of the party's ruling body.

Gorbachev, opening a new session of the congress, noted that the chairman of the Lithuanian delegation was absent from his chair on the stage with other members of the Presidium.

"The information coming from Lithuania is alarming, and momentous decisions are being made there that will affect both Lithuania and the Soviet Union," Gorbachev told more than 2,000 deputies.

The lawmakers had assembled in Moscow today to consider constitutional amendments that would create a new, extraordinarily powerful Soviet president and revoke the Communist Party's monopoly on power.

Gorbachev said the Congress should study the "decisions adopted in the Lithuanian Soviet Socialist Republic," ignoring the republic legislature's action Sunday declaring a sovereign "Republic of Lithuania."

Just two weeks after pro-independence candidates won a two-third majority in Lithuania's legislature, the body met in the Lithuanian capital, Vilnius, and voted to restore sovereignty after 50 years of Soviet rule.

Lithuanian lawmakers acknowledge, though, that true independence can only be won after long, difficult negotiations with the Kremlin.

The hasty vote to secede was prompted by the convening of the Congress to consider giving a new president powers that would include the authority to dissolve republic parliaments and nullify their actions.

The newly elected legislature of the Baltic republic of 3.7 million people voted 124-0 with six abstentions to secede. It also chose Vytautas Landsbergis, chairman of the nationalist Sajudis movement, as president.

"Expressing the will of the people, the Supreme Council of the Republic of Lithuania decrees and solemnly declares the restoration of the exercise of the sovereign powers of the Lithuanian state, which were annulled by foreign force in 1940," the legislature decreed.

"And from this moment, Lithuania again becomes a sovereign state."

The Lithuanian decree proclaims that the local KGB and police, for most of five decades instruments of Soviet terror and repression, must now obey Lithuania rather than Moscow.

After it was approved, legislators stood and joined hands, chanting "Lietuva, Lietuva" (Lithuania). Outside, a small crowd broke into wild cheers. Earlier, people tore down a metal Soviet hammer-and-

Former military cargo plane reborn for disaster relief work

A former military air-cargo transport plane that was flown in drug-smuggling operations is being converted to emergency-medical and disaster-relief operations by a Christian-based organization, Grace-Aire Medical Foundation Inc. of Corpus Christi.

The aircraft, a four-engine Boeing C-97, currently is based at Midland International Airport, where it is being readied for a flight to its new home at Corpus Christi International Airport.

The aircraft will be used to fly medical teams, supplies and equipment to areas struck by earthquakes, hurricanes and other disasters. In addition, Grace-Aire flies plastic surgeons to operate on children with cleft-lip and palate birth defects.

"We are Christians, and we just feel like the Lord is leading us to do that," Dr. Terry Elder, president and founder of Grace-Aire, said today. "I know he is. That's what he has put in our hearts to do, so we better go do it."

Grace-Aire purchased the C-97 for $71,108 in a U.S. Marshals Service's sealed-bid sale.

The aircraft, which is in "excellent overall condition" and has relative low airtime, has a useful payload of 80,000 pounds or 40 tons, has a range of 4,000 miles, and can cruise up to 300 mph.

The C-97 has a self-contained loading ramp for transporting vehicles and other cargo.

In late April, the aircraft is to be used to transport clothes and Bibles to Honduras refugee camps.

Haitian leader leaves on U.S. plane; Woman may rule nation

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril left Haiti today aboard a U.S. Air Force transport, two days after the military ruler was driven from power by widespread unrest.

The deposed leader and his family arrived this morning at Homestead Air Force Base, 25 miles south of Miami, the State Department said. An Air Force spokesman in Washington, Lt. Col. Darrell Hayes, said Avril was being driven to Boca Raton, Fla., after which he was "on his own."

After Avril left, the opposition coalition known as the Unity Assembly reportedly picked Ertha Pascal-Trouillot, the only woman on the 12-member Supreme Court, as its choice for provisional president.

The army's choice is Supreme Court president Gilbert Austin, but he has been rejected by the coalition as too close to Avril. The deadline for announcing a provisional president is Tuesday, when Maj. Gen. Herard Abraham, who took over from Avril, is to transfer power to a civilian.

The new president will serve until an election is held.

Thousands of people milled about Port-au-Prince, the capital, but the mood was more one of disbelief than celebration.

"He's gone, he's gone," people were heard saying.

The Rev. Bertrand Aristide, a Roman Catholic priest and staunch critic of the military government, said residents should remain alert to the possibility of army reprisals.

"We can smile, but we can't laugh yet," Aristide said on Radio Haiti Inter after Avril's departure.

At least 24 people were killed in seven days of protests and clashes that have left this Caribbean nation without a leader and in turmoil. Most of the victims have been civilians slain by soldiers or police.

"The people have shown how much they love democracy by dying for it," Aristide said earlier.

A leading member of the Unity Assembly, Jean-Claude Roy, said Ms. Pascal-Trouillot was the coalition's choice for provisional president. Radio reports said Austin — under the constitution next in line for the presidency — resigned from the court to make way for Ms. Pascal-Trouillot.

A widower, Ms. Pascal-Trouillot was Haiti's first woman judge and is an author. Her best-known book, written in 1973, was "The Judicial Status of Haitian Women in Social Legislation."

If she is chosen as provisional president she would be the first woman to hold the post in Haiti's history.

Earlier, residents of the capital retreated behind shuttered windows after sundown Sunday and the streets were deserted. Soldiers in pickup trucks drove around the city and gunshots were heard occasionally.

"I'm afraid for my husband and I fear the Macoutes will come out of the walls," said the wife of a well-known politician, speaking on condition of anonymity. The Tonton Macoutes were the feared secret police of the Duvalier family, which ruled Haiti for 29 years.

Numbering about 30,000, the Macoutes were disbanded after Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to exile in France in February 1986. Later, several hundred were integrated into the army and police as special agents.

Tele-Haiti, a private television station, urged viewers to stay indoors Sunday night because "there are gangs of marauding gunmen in the streets" and politicians and religious leaders urged citizens to form neighborhood defense groups.

Census worker sings new Hispanic tune

HARLINGEN (AP) — The Census Bureau is counting on a Spanish-language song recorded by one of its employees to boost Hispanic participation in the tally.

Three versions of the song "Cuenta Conmigo" (Count on Me) will go out to Spanish-language radio stations nationwide, said Art Zuniga, the Census employee who sings it.

The versions include recordings in the polka-based "Tejano" style popular in Texas, a more mainstream pop version with flutes for the California market and a Caribbean "salsa" variation for Florida, Zuniga said.

Zuniga has experience conveying government messages in song. While working for the INS two years ago, he recorded a Spanish-language tune, "Amnistia," promoting participation in the amnesty program offered under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986.

Zuniga's full-time, non-musical Census job is promoting participation in the 1990 population count in the Lower Rio Grande Valley of far South Texas, where the population is about 85 percent Mexican-American.

"We have a lot of Hispanic population that listens to radio," Zuniga said. "Through song, we hope that they can get a clear message of

Easier-to-read news type being introduced today

Today's edition marks the introduction of several typographical improvements in the Reporter-Telegram news columns.

Changes include a slightly different headline type and larger story type as well as a new style for bylines, reference lines and other minor elements that make up the newspaper's style.

The changes, and others to be announced later, are intended to not only give the Reporter-Telegram a crisper, cleaner look but to make reading the newspaper and moving through it easier for readers.

Absentee votes total 11 percent

Staff Report

Taking advantage of a "liberalized" absentee voting law, 11 percent of Midland County's registered voters already have cast their ballots in the primary election, county officials said today.

Elections Administrator Bettye Calvert said 5,124 Republicans and 544 Democrats turned in absentee ballots between Feb. 21 and March 9. There are about 52,000 registered voters in Midland County.

Ms. Calvert said only 4,382 voters cast absentee ballots in the 1988 presidential primary, before

Clear skies in forecast

Staff Report

Clear skies are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport, becoming mostly cloudy near morning. The low will be in the lower 50s and winds will be from the south at 10-20 mph.

Tuesday is expected to be mostly cloudy and windy with the high in the lower 70s and winds from the south-southwest increasing to 20-30 mph and gusty by noon.

Sunday's high of 73 was 18 degrees cooler than the record high of 91 set for that date in 1989. The overnight low of 50 was 35 degrees warmer than the record low of 15 set for this date in 1948.

STATE

The weather in Texas had a split personality early today.

Everything was dry and cool to the north and west of a line that stretched from just west of Wichita Falls to north of Lubbock then turned south to Marfa. Residents in that area also woke up to find clear skies overhead.

But on the other side of the dry line, there was warm, moist air blanketing much of the state.

There were patches of fog and drizzle along the Coastal Plains, Southeast Texas and some parts of South Central Texas. Widely scattered showers were present in the northeast corner of the state.

Only a few clear spots were present early today, mainly in North Texas and in the Central Rio Grande Valley.

Marfa was the cool spot overnight, with a reading of 43 degrees at 4 a.m. The warmest report came from McAllen, which had a temperature of 75 degrees.

NATION

Warm, wet air brought flooding and thunderstorms to the Midwest this morning, while a cold front dumped heavy snow on the Rockies.

Rain sprinkled coastal Oregon and California this morning, with snow in the Sierra Nevada.

The cold front was bringing some of the heaviest snowfall of the year this morning to Western mountains from Montana to Arizona. A foot of snow fell Sunday night in parts of Utah and up to 12 inches more were forecast.

Snow advisories were in effect for mountainous areas of Colorado, Arizona, Wyoming and Montana and the Black Hills of North Dakota.

Record high temperatures were set Sunday in 40 cities from North Dakota to Maine. Thunderstorms drenched Oklahoma, Texas and parts of Nebraska, Kansas and Louisiana. Rain fell from Iowa across Missouri and into Arkansas.

In Kansas, tornadoes touched down near Hurchinson, Raymond, Lyons, Geneseo and Brookville. In Alden, a twister ripped the porch off a house.

Flooding was reported in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Texas, Arkansas and Kansas.

Thunderstorms with winds up to 50 mph raked parts of central Illinois.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

what the Census means, how it impacts their community, their family and a lot of different social and educational services."

Participation in the Census is required by law, but Zuniga said the government knows that a lot of people go uncounted in the decennial survey, particularly minorities.

Hispanics and blacks have responded to the count at a much lower rate than the rest of the population because of a poor understanding of what the Census can do for them and a frequent mistrust of government, Zuniga said.

The Bureau of the Census, which is part of the U.S. Department of Commerce, estimates that about 6 percent of those two ethnic groups traditionally never are counted in Census questionnaires. That is way above the estimated overall national undercount of 1 percent, Zuniga said.

"People perceive that since we're a governmental agency, they tend to think that we might pass this information to other governmental units, such as the IRS, a police department if somebody has a criminal record, or the Immigration and Naturalization Service," he said.

The song emphasizes that Census questionnaires are kept confidential and that "being counted means having votes, rights and betterment."

Those who could gain the most from an accurate Census tend to suffer most from an undercount, Zuniga said.

The government uses of Census data include apportionment of the U.S. House of Representatives, redistricting of state and local election districts and allocating billions of dollars in federal and state program funds to county and city governments.

Zuniga, 40, of Harlingen, plays bass and sings in a country-and-western band. He said he hopes his latest effort will further his musical aspirations.

"Cuenta Conmigo" was sponsored by Tichenor Media, which owns a chain of Spanish-language radio stations. Jesse Acosta, a city planner in El Paso, wrote the lyrics. Studio musicians produced the melody at TMCI Studio in Dallas, where the song was recorded.

The Census Bureau will send tapes of the song, along with shorter cuts for public-service announcements, to 300 radio stations in areas with large Hispanic populations, Zuniga said.

HAITI: Coalition reportedly picks supreme court judge

(From 1A)

The state hospital said it treated about 100 people, mostly for gunshot wounds, over the weekend. Radio reports said soldiers firing from a speeding truck killed five pedestrians on Sunday.

In another incident, witnesses said police looking for the killers of Maj. Renaud St. Bert stopped a passer-by, shot him four times and sat under a tree for more than an hour watching him die.

Radio Metropole said St. Bert was killed by unknown assailants in a lottery booth in the suburb of Delmas.

Avril was brought to power in a September 1988 revolt by soldiers who professed disdain for political killings and other abuses by the previous military ruler, Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy.

Namphy had ruled the country — among the poorest in the hemisphere — for most of the 2½ years since the popular uprising that ousted Jeane-Claude Duvalier.

This Caribbean nation of 6 million people has been ruled mainly by the military since it gained independence from France in 1804, and opposition leaders said after a January crackdown they did not trust Avril to oversee presidential elections he promised for the fall.

Avril agreed to step down after negotiations reportedly involving the U.S. and French embassies, the Roman Catholic Church and opposition political parties.

When Avril assumed power, he promised democratic reforms and elections.

But opposition groups refused to participate in elections after the January crackdown, in which the government jailed and beat dozens of dissidents, exiling seven.

In Haiti's last attempt at elections, overseen by Namphy in November 1987, voting was canceled after thugs backed by soldiers killed at least 34 voters.

Protests against Avril broke out one week ago after a soldier killed an 11-year-old girl, apparently by accident.

Eugene Lang poses in his New York office in 1986 with a photo of some of the schoolchildren he has helped. Ninety percent of the Class of 1981 at East Harlem's P.S. 121 has graduated from high school; half of those students have gone on to college, spurred by the millionaire's vow to pay their tuition.

Students realize dream begun eight years ago

NEW YORK (AP) — Thanks to Eugene Lang's impulsive promise at a grade-school graduation, 90 percent of the Class of 1981 at East Harlem's P.S. 121 now has graduated from high school.

Half have gone on to Bard, Swarthmore, Barnard and other universities, spurred by the millionaire's vow to pay the college tuition of each of the 61 students if they got high school diplomas. And around the country, others have copied Lang's largesse.

Lang doesn't take credit for the inroads made by his young proteges. Their own hard work and dedication brought them this far, he says. But like a proud grandfather, he brags about what they've accomplished.

"I fully expect two-thirds of the class to complete at least two years of college," he says.

In 1981, he said, "I asked the principal of the school how many of these kids would go to college, and he told me maybe one."

The avuncular Lang wasn't always so upbeat. At a 1985 lunch with Harlem social worker Dorothy Stoneman, Lang recalls bemoaning what he saw as a lack of progress: smart-aleck truants, apathetic parents, uninterested students.

"You don't know how to look," Stoneman interrupted. "Dammit, Gene, wake up — don't you realize that every one of your kids is still in school?"

It was true. The track record of Lang's kids was phenomenal in a neighborhood where one in every two students drops out.

Stoneman's dressing-down left the millionaire entrepreneur feeling terrific. He decided to parlay his impulsive personal adventure into a national program, the I Have a Dream Foundation. At latest count, 130 sponsors in 32 cities are backing more than 8,000 dreamers.

Sponsors range from New York investment banker Felix Rohatyn to presidential nephew James Bush. Others patch together the required $300,000 with contributions from churches, civic groups and friends.

DECREE: Lithuanians cheer end of Soviet regime

Vytautas Landsbergis, leader of the Sajudis movement, speaks to the Lithuanian Parliament Sunday after his election as the country's new president.

sickle seal over the building's door and some stamped on it.

"That's the end of the Soviet regime," said a jubilant deputy looking on.

By itself, the decree changes little in the relationship between the Baltic republic and the Kremlin. But it was the first crack in the union of 15 Soviet republics and more than 100 nationalities as a result of the burgeoning demands for autonomy fostered by Gorbachev's reforms.

In Washington, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the United States would urge the Kremlin to "respect the will of the citizens of Lithuania." The United States has never recognized the forcible 1940 annexation of the three Soviet republics — Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

In Estonia Sunday, an unofficial congress of delegates elected by a majority of the republic's people denounced the Soviet annexation and sought U.N. assistance in achieving independence.

In addition to changing their homeland's name, the Lithuanian legislators dropped the old seal that included a Soviet hammer, sickle and star, replacing it with one showing a white knight on a dark shield.

Today, they were to consider a declaration touching the thousands of Soviet soldiers on Lithuanian soil.

Lithuania's declaration of independence represents perhaps the biggest crisis yet for Gorbachev, who marked his fifth anniversary as Soviet leader Sunday.

The outgoing president of Lithuania's parliament, Communist Party chief Algirdas Brazauskas, said before the vote that approval of secession could have a "contagious effect" on other republics.

Gorbachev's troubles include rumblings for independence elsewhere, serious economic problems and ethnic strife in many areas of the nation.

Leaders of Sajudis, which dominates the new Lithuanian legislature, acknowledged that full independence would have to be won in long, difficult negotiations.

They acknowledged that their decrees will mean little if they cannot successfully complete tough negotiations with Gorbachev.

"How soon we can implement this law depends not only on us," Landsbergis told a news conference.

"We have to sit down at the table," he told legislators in a statement. "We're not going to be beating our fists, but we have to start settling accounts."

Gorbachev has said Lithuania will have to pay the Kremlin $34 billion for the factories and other infrastructure built during a half-century of Soviet rule. Lithuanians say their bill for decades of Soviet repression — including mass deportations to Siberia under Stalin — will be even higher.

Landsbergis, a 57-year-old music professor, received 91 votes for the presidency in Sunday's vote, with 42 against.

Brazauskas got 38 votes, with 95 against. He had led Lithuanian Communists into splitting off from the Soviet party in December and joining the drive for restoration of the independence.

"Our other goal is to be able to establish communications in an area that has been devastated by an earthquake or hurricane."

Before acquiring the four-engine transport, Grace-Aire flew the twin-engine Cessna 320 and the single-engine Cessna 210 in its medical-relief work.

"With the new airplane," said Elder, "we will be able to expand our program throughout this hemisphere."

VOTE: New law boosts totals

the new absentee voting law went into effect.

She said that under the new law, enacted in 1989, people wishing to vote before election day can do so without an excuse. Previously, absentee voters were required to claim a disability or absence which would prevent them from going to the polls.

Absentee ballots will be counted Tuesday after polls open in the regular primary election, Ms. Calvert said.

Primary voting will be from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. Tuesday.

New Chilean leader calls for end to violence

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Patricio Aylwin called for an end to violence and hate as he took over from long-ruling Gen. Augusto Pinochet, but street disturbances marred the celebration of an end to military rule.

"Chile doesn't want more violence, it doesn't want more war," Aylwin declared late Sunday from the balcony of the presidential palace after his inauguration earlier in the day.

Thousands below cheered the end of Pinochet's 16-year rule.

"This infant being born, this liberty we are reconquering, we have to take care of it," said the 71-year-old Aylwin. He said that would require "knowing how to respect one another, never again having Chileans divided into enemies."

Aylwin's first official act was to pardon all political prisoners. His government also restored diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union, East Germany, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

Chile is the last in a series of South American countries to restore elected civilian rule in the last decade.

But Pinochet, 74, who seized power in a bloody 1973 coup that toppled Marxist President Salvador Allende, plans to stay on as commander of the powerful 60,000-man army and has rejected Aylwin's requests he retire from the military.

Aylwin, who won office in December with the backing of centrist and moderate leftist groups, assumed office to thunderous cheers and applause in a half-finished congressional building in the seaport of Valparaiso, 70 miles northwest of Santiago.

Beside him during the ceremony was Pinochet, his dark blue military uniform bedecked with gold medals. The general shook Aylwin's hand after Aylwin, a centrist Christian Democrat, slipped on the presidential sash.

Aylwin has vowed to restore respect for human rights and civil liberties and put more emphasis on social services. But he plans no major changes in Pinochet's largely successful free-market economic program.

A newly elected congress, dominated by foes of Pinochet, also took power Sunday.

Vice President Dan Quayle said Pinochet assured him he will obey the new civilian government. Quayle, who attended the inauguration, was jeered earlier Sunday by Pinochet supporters upon arriving for a 35-minute meeting at the general's walled residence.

"Go Away!" they shouted. "Son of a whore!" and "Pinochet, Pinochet!"

A U.S. arms embargo placed on Chile since 1976 because of human rights violations remains in effect. The embargo was proposed by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who also was at the inauguration.

Pinochet was forced to call elections when a proposal to extend his rule to 1997 was rejected in a 1988 referendum. He entered the new congress as supporters chanted his name and detractors in the gallery shouted "Murderer, murderer!"

Earlier, a group of demonstrators tossed tomatoes and rocks at Pinochet's open-topped convertible limousine. He was not injured in the incident.

After the ceremony, Aylwin returned to Santiago, the capital, and hundreds of thousands of people lined the route into the city to cheer as he passed in an open car.

The celebrants waved red, white and blue Chilean flags and chanted anti-Pinochet slogans including "He's fallen now, he's fallen now."

Colombian party picks candidate

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A former aide to the presidential candidate assassinated by drug bosses has won the governing party's presidential nomination, and heads into the May general election as the front-runner.

Cesar Gaviria of the governing Liberal Party claimed victory in Sunday's presidential primary, the first in the country's history, after all five of his rivals conceded defeat. He is favored to win the general election in May.

"This was Luis Carlos Galan's victory," Gaviria said, referring to the popular candidate whose slaying in August touched off a bloody war between the government and drug barons.

Speaking to reporters late Sunday at a victory celebration at his Bogota headquarters, the 43-year-old Gaviria added that the win was bittersweet because Galan had died before "the triumph of his ideas."

Gaviria had been Galan's campaign manager.

An economist by training, Gaviria has pledged to follow Galan's political program, including his strong commitment to fighting the power of the country's cocaine cartels.

FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

NICK TAYLOR AND LEADERSHIP...

LEADERSHIP IN INTEGRITY:

Nick believes the court should be fair to everyone. Maintaining the integrity of the court is important and he has refused to accept campaign contributions from any personal injury, criminal defense or other trial lawyers who will appear before the court.

LEADERSHIP IN HIS PROFESSION:

Nick is one of Midland's leading attorneys. He has practiced for 26 years. He has been a partner in one of West Texas' largest law firms where he has been head of Practice Management for many of the firms departments. This leadership prepared Nick to handle the cases that come before this court.

LEADERSHIP IN EFFICIENT USE OF THE COURTS:

Nick will unclog the backlog of pending cases. This will save time and money in the courts and cut costs for both the litigants and the taxpayer.

LEADERSHIP IN THE WAR ON DRUGS:

Nick was appointed to the Midland Crime Prevention Commission by the Midland City Council. As President of the Commission, Nick worked out the details of a plan to reduce drug related crime by testing probated criminals for illegal drug use. This gets them into treatment and/or off the streets. Under his leadership the commission conducted the first crime poll in Midland.

LEADERSHIP IN HIS COMMUNITY:

Nick has taken leadership roles in many community organizations. Nick has served as:

-Chairman of the Chaparral District (Midland), Boy Scouts of America
-Chancellor - Holy Trinity Church
-President Midland Crime Prevention Commission

Soviet Congress debates new, powerful presidency

MOSCOW (AP) — A divided Soviet Congress today debated the powerful presidency championed by Mikhail S. Gorbachev as essential for democracy, and the proposal faced possible rejection for lack of the required two-thirds majority.

But one progressive deputy who has fought placing so much power in the hands of one man said he would have to cave in if Gorbachev were to stake his own leadership on the issue.

And Gorbachev's vice president argued that the proposal for a new presidency "rules out personal dictatorship."

The divisions in the 2,250-member Congress of People's Deputies reflected the turmoil in Soviet politics as Gorbachev begins his sixth year as Soviet leader.

The president and Communist Party chief told the 2,087 deputies present that they would be asked to amend the constitution to revoke the party's monopoly on power, create a new presidency and, if the presidency proposal is adopted, to elect the new president.

"We find ourselves in a paralysis of power," said Sergei Alexeyev, chairman of the congress' Constitutional Committee, who took the floor in support of Gorbachev. "The presidency is the only way to transfer the real power from the party to the government."

AP Laserphotc

If the presidency issue is resolved positively, "we can get down to drafting a new constitution immediately which will confirm human rights, democracy and conversion to a market economy," he said.

The president will have the power to veto laws, appoint a Cabinet, declare a state of emergency and presidential rule. Opponents say that concentrates too much power in the hands of one person.

Progressive Moscow parliamentarian Alexei Yablokov predicted a boycott of the vote on the presidency by many of the deputies from Georgia, Moldavia, Azerbaijan, Estonia and Latvia.

Friday, Georgia's parliament denounced the office as "authoritarian presidential rule."

Before the session began, progressive parliamentarian Sergei Stankevich said he expected about a third of the deputies to abstain from voting on the expanded presidency.

Stankevich said Gorbachev could turn the presidency issue into a vote of confidence in his own stewardship.

The legislator, who strongly objects to the specific powers given to the president in the draft, said that if Gorbachev threatened to resign, he would throw his support behind him.

Gorbachev has said the new presidency is necessary to ensure that his campaign for democratization and domestic reform do not fail.

Entire Mongolian Politburo resigns

ULAN BATOR, Mongolia (AP) — The entire Communist Party leadership resigned today in response to opposition demands and the leader of the longtime Soviet client state said the ruling party must renew itself to head off crisis.

The five-man Politburo of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party voted to abolish the constitutional clause declaring the party the leading force in society.

It also set April 10 as the date for a special party congress to elect a new Central Committee that, in the words of party General Secretary Zhambyn Batmonh, should be younger and in favor of reform.

The Politburo voted to hold early elections this year for the new legislature, the Great People's Hural. An exact date was not set.

The moves were obvious concessions to protesters who crowded the central square of the capital, Ulan Bator, Friday to demand change in the party's leadership and an emergency party congress.

The demonstrations, shown on Soviet television, were evidence that the winds of democratic change that swept through Eastern Europe last year have reached Asia. Mongolia is a sparsely populated nation on the Soviet-Chinese border.

The Mongolian Democratic Union, an organization similar to the grassroots citizens groups that have sprung up in the Soviet Union, is demanding an end to the Communist Party's 69-year-old monopoly on power, a mutiparty system and resignation of the premier, Cabinet and legislature.

It has also called for new elections and for the withdrawal of Soviet troops.

Two years ago, Mongolia's leaders followed the lead of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and embarked on political and economic reforms, but critics say it has been moving too slowly.

Batmonh announced the Politburo decision in a speech to the 120-member Central Committee that was broadcast live. He also said he was giving up his No. 1 job in the party, though Mongolian officials did not rule out the possibility that those who resigned might be re-elected.

As chairman of the Hural's Presidium, Batmonh is also Mongolia's head of state, and that job was not affected by today's announcement.

The Politburo decisions must be approved by the Central Committee but all are expected to pass. The committee, which began meeting after the Politburo session, will continue its meeting on Tuesday.

Batmonh said the party's main task "is to build human and democratic socialism on the soil of Mongolia. It is important to renew our party leadership with younger people... people who are clever and constructive and for perestroika."

He said the party should be the leading force in society but should acquire that status "by its work and not from a constitutional article."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Estonian Congress asks for U.N. help

TALLINN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Estonians have appealed to the United Nations for help in breaking away from Moscow, calling for peacekeeping forces that would monitor an end to what they called 50 years of Soviet occupation.

The proclamation Sunday by the unsanctioned but popularly elected congress came the same day Baltic neighbor Lithuania declared independence from the Soviet Union and two days after the republic of Georgia condemned the Soviet annexation of its territory.

Today, the Estonian congress was scheduled to discuss the republic's borders and the status of non-Estonian residents. It is to elect a 77-member council, which will be charged with negotiating independence with officials in Moscow.

The 499-member congress has no formal political power. But it considers itself the highest representative body of ethnic Estonians living in the republic and abroad.

Troops leaving Hungary

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — The first of nearly 50,000 Soviet troops stationed in Hungary prepared to leave for home today after Moscow and Budapest signed an agreement on the total withdrawal of Red Army soldiers by mid-1991.

Hungary Saturday became the second Warsaw Pact country to negotiate a complete pullout of Soviet troops from its territory.

Last month, Prague and Moscow agreed that the Kremlin would bring home all its 73,500 troops stationed in Czechoslovakia. The pullout there began Feb. 26.

The withdrawal from both countries is due to be completed by June 30, 1991.

Israel split over peace

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli media said today that Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir may fire all Labor ministers in his Cabinet if the left-leaning party moves to bring down the government.

Religion Minister Zevulun Hammer, head of the National Religious Party, met separately with Israel's four top political leaders to try to mediate a compromise in the crisis, Israel radio said.

There was no immediate comment on Hammer's efforts from Shamir, who heads the right-wing Likud bloc, or Vice Premier Shimon Peres, leader of the Labor Party.

North back on stand for more questioning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North was returning to the witness stand today to testify about former national security adviser John Poindexter's alleged coverup of a November 1985 shipment of Hawk anti-aircraft missiles to Iran.

North

North kept Poindexter, his boss on the National Security Council staff, informed of the missile shipment at the time it occurred. Poindexter, however, told the House and Senate intelligence committees on Nov. 21, 1986 that he did not learn of the delivery until more than a month after it was completed.

Poindexter is being tried on charges of obstructing Congress and making false statements in connection with his comments on the Hawk shipment. He says he gave incorrect information to the committees because he had simply forgotten a year later that he knew of the shipment beforehand.

Iran-Contra prosecutors are unfairly bringing charges against Poindexter for "a five-week mistake," defense attorney Richard Beckler said in opening arguments last week.

The CIA-assisted delivery was authorized retroactively by a presidential document that Poindexter destroyed the same day he made his incorrect statements to the intelligence committees.

The politically embarrassing document, known as a "finding," depicted the U.S. government as being involved in a straight arms-for-hostages deal with Iran.

North testified at his own trial last year that he watched Poindexter destroy the paper.

"I saw the finding torn up," North said then. "I saw him tear it in two."

The government alleges the existence of the document was Poindexter's motive for concealing from Congress U.S. involvement in the November 1985 missile.

But at a pretrial hearing in Poindexter's case last December, North said he understood the destroyed document was the finding only after watching Poindexter testify about it in nationally televised congressional hearings.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene said North was "prevaricating" at the December hearing in an attempt avoid having to testify against his ex-boss.

Poindexter was granted conditional immunity by Congress for his testimony, and no part of a prosecution may be derived from the immunized testimony of a defendant.

Greene, however, said North's testimony at the December hearing was not believable and that prosecutors would be allowed to elicit North's testimony on the destruction of the document.

On Friday, North reluctantly testified that Poindexter directed him "to take care of" congressional inquiries about whether he was assisting the Nicaraguan Contra rebels militarily.

But North insisted that he himself made the decision to lie when he met with the congressmen and that neither Poindexter nor anyone else ordered him to do so.

Monsignor Stephen Blaire speaks to the press in Los Angeles Sunday and confirmed that Los Angeles Roman Catholic Archbishop Roger Mahony sent a letter to priests and nuns in his archdiocese asking for volunteers to test a new AIDS vaccine.

Vaccine volunteer search too hasty, expert says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Roman Catholic archbishop of Los Angeles acted too hastily in sending letters to elderly priests and nuns seeking volunteers to test an experimental AIDS vaccine, a key researcher said.

Even the prototype vaccine's developer, Dr. Jonas Salk, the 75-year-old pioneer of the polio vaccine, was unaware of the appeal by Archbishop Roger Mahony, said Dr. Alexandra Levine of the University of Southern California.

"A plan to send letters seeking volunteers from the clergy had been agreed upon," Levine said. "But we had no intention of sending the letters until after all of the necessary approvals for the study had been granted."

Mahony, in Italy for a visit to the Vatican, confirmed he sent letters to 2,500 priests and nuns in January.

Mahony said he was contacted by Dr. Brian Henderson of the Norris Cancer Institute at the University of Southern California, who was working with Salk and seeking volunteers. Levine works with Henderson and Salk.

"(You're) looking for people who would want to volunteer for something that could be very risky," Mahony said in an interview. "You're really looking for people who have a commitment to humankind and willingness to take risks to benefit others."

Because the vaccine contains deactivated AIDS virus, there is a possibility that people injected with it could become infected, just as many Americans were infected with polio in the early 1950s when Salk used the same technique to develop the vaccine that eventually saved thousands from the crippling disease.

The infections resulted because some traces of the virus contained in the polio vaccine hadn't been killed.

Alcohol expert to testify for Hazelwood this week

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The final week of testimony in the Joseph Hazelwood trial promised jurors a refresher course in subjects they have studied for five weeks — alcohol and seamanship on the Exxon Valdez.

But the facts presented now come from the defense, and their aim is to prove the skipper innocent of four charges stemming from the nation's worst oil spill.

An alcohol expert and other tanker captains were on the list of potential witnesses for the defense this week.

The prosecution was to resume cross-examination today of a former tanker captain now working as a marine pilot who had praised Hazelwood's command of the Exxon Valdez in direct testimony on Friday.

Shiras Walker of Jacksonville, Fla., said he reviewed documents and testimony about the March 24 Exxon Valdez grounding and could find no fault with Hazelwood's performance as captain of the 987-foot ship.

"I would have done exactly what Captain Hazelwood did," Walker said several times as a defense attorney reviewed each action Hazelwood took from the time he boarded the ship to the hours after it struck a jagged reef and dumped nearly 11 million gallons of Alaska crude oil into Prince William Sound.

The spill devastated fisheries and the area's rich wildlife population and left hundreds of miles of rocky shore smeared with black goo.

Hazelwood, 43, of Huntington, N.Y., was the only crew member charged. He is accused of criminal mischief, reckless endangerment, operating a vessel while intoxicated and negligent discharge of oil. If convicted, he could receive 7¼ years in prison and $61,000 in fines.

Prosecution witnesses testified they considered Hazelwood reckless in many of his actions on the crucial night.

Deaths linked to new AIDS drug part of trial phase

NEW YORK (AP) — AIDS patients taking an experimental drug under their own doctors' supervision have been dying at more than 10 times the rate of those taking the drug in clinical tests, The New York Times reported today.

Out of 8,000 patients taking the new drug in an expanded distribution program, 290 have died, the newspaper said.

But in clinical trials by the drug's manufacturer, Bristol-Myers Squibb, only two of the 700 patients taking DDI, or dideoxyinosine, have died, the company said.

The Food and Drug Administration set up the expanded access program last August.

Bush urges Gorbachev to talk with Lithuania

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is not yet formally recognizing the breakaway government in Lithuania, but it is urging the Soviet Union to "respect the will of the citizens" of the Baltic republic.

It also urged Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to enter "immediate constructive negotiations" with the Lithuanians, whose new parliament voted unanimously Sunday to secede from the Soviet Union.

"The United States has never recognized the forcible incorporation of the independent states of Estonia, Latvia or Lithuania into the U.S.S.R. We have consistently supported the Baltic peoples' inalienable right to peaceful self-determination," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said following the vote in Vilnius, the Lithuanian capital.

A Lithuanian diplomat in Washington said Western governments are likely to wait to recognize Lithuania's declaration of independence until its leaders resolve disputes with Moscow and establish control over their country.

Stasys Lozoraitis, charge d'affaires for Lithuania, said U.S. officials had told him beforehand "they want to see the government take over effective control" before formally recognizing it.

"All Western powers are inclined to wait," the Lithuanian diplomat said. But he predicted recognition could come "after one month or two."

The United States and other Western nations have never recognized the Soviet Union's forcible annexation of Lithuania and its Baltic neighbors while under Red Army occupation. The three states, once part of czarist Russia, had gained independence after World War I.

In 1940, a year after the infamous non-aggression pact between Stalin's Soviet Union and Hitler's Germany, the Soviet Army imposed regimes that rubber-stamped the three republics' incorporation into the Soviet Union.

The Baltic states were overrun by Hitler's Nazi troops and subject to terror and death camps, and terrorized again by Stalin's secret police.

There's still time to cast your ballot

As predicted, absentee voting for Tuesday's primary election was running ahead of that for all previous elections in Midland County. But the candidates shouldn't get their hopes up that turnout for the finale will also be astounding.

Elections Administrator Bettye Calvert noted that this is the first year for open absentee voting, meaning that registered voters have had the opportunity to vote during an extended period prior to the election without the necessity of claiming they will be out of town or ill on election day, or using one of the other legally permissible excuses.

Obviously the change was to the liking of a number of Midlanders since by today more than 6,000 had already voted early. But since none of the previous elections were conducted with open absentee balloting, Ms. Calvert could not predict what the actual turnout will be Tuesday, based on this amount of absentee voting. There is no previous standard by which to gauge it.

Few election officials seem to believe that the voting tally will meet that of the 1988 presidential election. But Texans are choosing party nominees for governor, U.S. senator, a number of U.S. congressmen and other state officials as well as various local county officials. So interest has been high.

While we'll have to wait until Wednesday to find out just how many people actually cast their ballots, there is another aspect of Tuesday's voting that can be addressed now with certainty: The importance of casting a ballot.

Doing that truly is the fulfillment of a voter's citizenship. It is participation in the selection of those who will lead this country, from the courthouse to the statehouse. It is having a voice in your government.

That may seem like a quaint notion since this country has a long and noteworthy history of the cherished right to vote. But as we've seen in just the past year in places like Czechoslovakia, Russia, and Nicaragua, it is not a privilege to be taken lightly.

If you have not already exercised your right to vote in the primary elections, please do so on Tuesday. Make your voice heard in the operation of this government.

Planet takes priority

Shrimpers have suffered another setback: U.S. District Judge Hayden W. Head Jr. refused to block enforcement of federal regulations requiring the use of controversial turtle-excluder devices, which the shrimpers say will deprive them of their livelihood.

This battle has been going on for months, with conservationists pushing for TEDs requirements and shrimpers just as vehemently resisting. What it all boils down to is the question of whether the shrimpers' wishes should take priority over the cause of preserving endangered forms of wildlife — in this instance, sea turtles which can be scooped up and asphyxiated in shrimp nets which are not equipped with TEDs.

On this planet, up to now, mankind has had things pretty much its own way. Approaching the year 2000, however, humanity is bumping up against some limits: Witness the continuing concern over the greenhouse effect, global warming, air and water pollution, and so on.

Not the least of the issues which the people — and governments — of the world must confront is that of just what humanity owes to the other species with which it shares the planet.

In the end the greater concern, that of striving to preserve the earth in somewhat the same condition in which man found it, must take precedence. The TEDs regulations should remain in force.

State needs tax revenues

Texas legislators should dust off their report from the 1987-88 Select Committee on Tax Equity and bone up quickly on new-tax possibilities.

It appears they will have to find some more revenue in special session this month or next, plus a whole lot more in 1991. A tax bill of $600 million to $1 billion will probably be needed now, and $3 billion or more next year.

Meanwhile, Gov. Bill Clements should get off his no-new-taxes political high horse. He should drop his veto threat and let the Legislature pass whatever small tax increase is needed this year to satisfy the court order for enactment of a new school-financing system by May 1, and to take care of the other urgent revenue-deficiency problems.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, March 12, the 71st day of 1990. There are 294 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on March 12, 1940, Finland and the Soviet Union concluded an armistice during World War II under which the Finns ceded part of their territory to the Soviets. Fighting between the two countries flared again the following year.

On this date:

In 1664, New Jersey became a British colony as King Charles II granted land in the New World to his brother James, the Duke of York.

In 1912, Juliette Gordon Low founded an organization in Savannah, Ga., called the Girl Guides, which later became the Girl Scouts of America.

In 1925, Chinese revolutionary leader Sun Yat-sen died.

In 1930, Indian political and spiritual leader Mohandas K. Gandhi began a 200-mile march to protest a British tax on salt.

In 1932, the so-called "Swedish Match King," Ivar Kreuger, committed suicide in Paris, leaving behind a financial empire that turned out to be worthless.

In 1933, President Franklin D. Roosevelt delivered the first of his "fireside chats," telling Americans in a radio broadcast what was being done to deal with the nation's financial crisis.

In 1938, German troops entered Austria, completing what Adolf Hitler described as his mission to restore his homeland — he was born in Branau — to the Third Reich.

In 1939, Pope Pius XII was formally crowned in ceremonies at the Vatican.

Gorbachev sends mid-night message

WASHINGTON — One doesn't wake the president of the United States in the middle of the night without good cause. And sometimes, even an urgent message from the leader of the Soviet Union isn't good enough.

Anderson

We have learned of one such late-night message from one superpower to another that set the White House staff scrambling while George Bush slept through it all.

At 1 a.m. last June 13, a functionary in the White House situation room woke up the National Security Council duty officer with a critical phone call. Soviet Ambassador Yuri Dubinin had just called the White House and said he had an urgent message from Mikhail Gorbachev to Bush that had to be delivered immediately.

The groggy NSC man kicked the message upstairs to his boss, National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft, who dragged himself out of bed and hurried to the White House to meet Dubinin.

The ambassador insisted that Bush be awakened and given the envelope containing the critical communique. But Scowcroft did something for which he will probably forever pat himself on the back. He insisted on knowing what was in the envelope first.

Scowcroft was prepared for something of extraordinary importance. But what dropped out was a greeting card that read, "Best wishes and many happy returns, Mr. President."

The day before, June 12, had been Bush's 65th birthday.

Scowcroft was not amused, and Dubinin was clearly embarrassed. He may not have known that the urgent message from one world leader to another was a simple birthday card.

Someone in Moscow, maybe Gorbachev himself, had delayed sending Bush his birthday greetings, and probably pushed the panic button. The resulting order to get the message to Bush immediately was taken literally in Washington.

Bush had received thousands of birthday greetings on June 12, but our White House sources say the absence of a card from Gorbachev had caused mild curiosity. Some had openly wondered if Gorbachev was subtly chilling his relationship with Bush.

In the interest of future superpower relations, not to mention uninterrupted presidential slumber, someone should tell Gorbachev the Russian word for "belated" in case he forgets Bush's birthday this year.

The president's last birthday officially made him a senior citizen, along with 31 million other Americans. When he was inaugurated at the age of 64, Bush became the fourth oldest man to be president of the United States.

The oldest was Ronald Reagan who signed on at 69, followed by William Henry Harrison (68) and James Buchanan (65).

In spite of his new status as a senior, Bush's age does not appear to bother American voters. That is probably because he succeeds the oldest president in history, and because Bush keeps up a vigorous program of exercise that would weary younger people.

White House physician Dr. Burton Lee, who has known Bush for a long time, has observed that the president's body is about 10 years younger than his years.

Part of the credit should go to the fact that Bush gets a good night's sleep while others handle weighty matters of state.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Some U.S. senators, depending on what state they come from, have to raise $10,000 a day in campaign contributions just to be geared up for the next election. That's bad, but it could be worse. In Japan, candidates and parties just spent about $4 billion on their last election. By contrast, U.S. Senate and House races in 1988 cost $458 million. We can be thankful that in the United States, the conflict of interest arising from the donations is merely blatant. In Japan it is immoral.

CHARLEY REESE

Ortega least smart Communist dictator

The reaction of American liberals to the Nicaraguan election is a great temptation to take up a life of crime, or at least, a career of selling junk bonds or quack cures.

Reese

I mean if that many people are so gullible and forgiving why work for a living? It brings to mind that great line of Eli Wallach in the shoot-em-up movie, "The Magnificent Seven," which was based on a Japanese cut-em-up. Wallach, playing a bandit, speculated that it might even be sacrilegious not to plunder the villagers. "If God didn't want them shorn, then why did he make them sheep?"

I've wondered the same thing about American liberals. Here, after 10 years of military, economic and diplomatic pressures, Daniel Ortega, Marxist-Leninist, is prodded into holding an election.

He thinks he's going to win. He invites in a lot of monitors. The pollsters and American leftist chums tell him he's got it made. So why rig it? He didn't, and he lost. Sure, it seems to have been a fair election. Most American pols don't resort to cheating when they think they're a sure winner. One sure sign of stupidity is when a person begins to believe his own propaganda.

Of all the communist dictators who have crawled out of the ideological slime onto the post-war world stage, Ortega is clearly the least smart. He was as stunned as Tom Dewey by his defeat. And with his mentor, Jimmy Carter, whispering advice into his ear and the world's TV cameras on him, he semi-graciously conceded defeat and promised to hand over power.

Maybe he actually will, and if he does, I'll gladly eat crow. But if you take 10 years of Ortega statements and divide them into true ones and lies, the lies outnumber the true ones by a ratio of about 900 to 1.

He lost the election Feb. 26. He hands over power April 25. I'll wait until the end of April before I celebrate the arrival of democracy in Nicaragua. If Ortega hangs on to the army and the police, both of which belong to the Sandinista party, then there will be no cause for celebration.

Of course common sense and modern liberalism — I consider myself an old-fashioned liberal — are a contradiction in terms. Any communist dictator can stop beating his children and torturing his wife, and American liberals are ready to nominate him as Family Man of the Century.

Guess I'm old fashioned. When a tyrant pauses from beating up on people because he's exhausted or because his whip breaks, I don't consider that proof that he's become a nice guy.

Ortega will have to do more than inadvertently allow a fair election after ten years of pressure before I proclaim him a nice guy. I don't think a man earns any merit by being pressured into doing what decent people do without pressure.

It seems clear to me that when Mikhail Gorbachev, for example, decides to substitute Afghan killers for Soviet killers, that's a tactical — not a humanitarian decision. Ortega made a tactical error — he thought he could win the election and put the U.S. in the awkward position of having to support the people they've tried to overthrow. He made a mistake but that is not a conversion to democracy.

Of course now the left is trying to put the best face on the debacle. Instead of admitting that the Sandinistas did not have all the support they claimed, the left is focusing on praising Ortega for blundering into a fair election. They are trying to deny the Contras any role at all, though in fact it wasn't until the Contras were starting to win militarily, that the left jumped on the idea of elections.

We waited 10 years for an election. Now let's wait two months to see if the Sandinistas actually give up power.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Good girls went on date with 'The List'

The other day, one of those morning television talk shows featured a lady from the National Chastity Association.

Grizzard

Yes, the National Chastity Association. It was formed in Illinois, and members are against sort of fooling around out of wedlock, including no holding hands, no hugging, no kissing, no playing footsie under the table, as well as no going all the way.

And, even if you indulged in all that before, you can join the NCA and wipe your slate clean.

There was a National Chastity Association when I was growing up.

It didn't have that name, but it certainly existed and it was run by individuals whose dedication to chastity was legend.

The difference was, it wasn't their purity they were concerned with, it was the purity of their daughters.

Yes, we are talking mothers with daughters. More precisely, mothers with daughters I dated.

This was the time of Mother's Ten Points to Remember while you're on a date, which all mothers wrote out on a sheet of paper and stuffed in their daughter's bras before what's-his-name with that look in his eye came by to pick up Precious.

The idea was before anything got out of hand, daughters could consult their lists to make certain their chastity remained intact.

It took some doing, but I managed to contact an old classmate, Wilamena "Deep Freeze" Lacewell, whose idea of heavy petting was when she scratched her cat.

Boys were afraid to get near her. You could catch cold in temperatures like that.

Wilamena, who never married, is currently a veterinarian in Blue Nose, Nebraska. She said she still had her mother's Ten Points and consults it to this day whenever, as she puts it, confronted by "a wild-eyed rascal" at the Blue Nose Bowl-a-rama.

She was kind enough to read The List:

1. Boys have only one thing on their minds when they take you on a date.

2. And it's not discussing Thursday's algebra pop quiz, the rotten little slimebag.

3. I don't care what they taught you in biology class, you can get pregnant by slow dancing.

4. Back seats are for sluts.

5. Sluts do not get into good sororities and wind up marrying shoe salesmen.

6. If you allow a boy certain liberties, he will no longer respect you and I will kick his butt all over town.

7. If you have any questions as to how to act on a date, pretend I am there looking over your shoulder.

8. That's not a bad idea. What time is Pickle-face picking us up.

9. If a boy tries to touch you where he shouldn't, grab your file and go for the eyes.

10. Save yourself for your husband, as I did for your father, who at least still has one good eye.

It might be a good idea for mothers in the '90s to acquaint their daughters with The List. And if it's to late to save their purity they can always join the National Chastity Association and, poof, born-again virginity.

'Homeless' census stirs debate

NEW YORK (AP) — The Tompkins Square Park band shell is filled each night with piles of ragged blankets. A passerby might hear sneezes and snores and realize there are people underneath, but certainly wouldn't know how many, or their sex, race or age.

That is what census workers are being asked to find out — without waking anyone up — from 2 a.m. to 4 a.m. March 21 at parks and other outdoor sites where the homeless congregate.

The survey is part of an unprecedented nationwide count in shelters, parks, subways, vacant buildings, doorways and bank-machine vestibules. The plan's critics call it poorly designed and doomed to undercount the homeless, estimated by the Coalition for the Homeless to number 70,000 to 90,000 in New York City alone.

The Census Bureau already has issued a disclaimer.

"We are deliberately staying away from defining this as a census of the homeless," said Kenneth Meyer, assistant regional census manager. "Nor are we saying that we expect to get 100 percent count of the homeless. It's going to give us some idea of the characteristics of this group but not necessarily the true size of it."

Still, advocates for the homeless and city officials fear a low count will be used to justify social service budget cuts.

Some homeless advocates have refused to cooperate with the Census Bureau plan; others believe they must participate to legitimize any objections afterward.

"Hopefully this exercise, fraught with problems before it starts, is not going to be used to justify yet another estimate from the government that is tragically low on how many homeless there are in the nation," said Peter Smith, president of the Partnership for the Homeless. "If it is, we will just have to say: We told you so."

AP Laserphoto

A homeless man, identified as Jojo, stands by his shelter in Tompkins Square Park last December. The people who reside in such locales make accurate accounting of the homeless an almost impossible census task.

City officials and advocates for the homeless have a long list of complaints about the count's timing, organization, the data to be collected and the recruitment of people to do the counting.

From 6 p.m. to about midnight March 20, census workers will visit shelters and hotels used by the homeless.

The 2 a.m.-to-4 a.m. outdoor count will be followed by a 4 a.m.-to-6:30 a.m. count of those leaving abandoned buildings. For safety's sake, enumerators will not be sent inside. Critics want the counters to stay later.

"Homeless people, like everyone else, sleep at night," said Kristin Morse, assistant director at the Coalition for the Homeless.

In shelters, enumerators will help homeless people fill out the same forms everyone else gets in the mail. But enumerators counting homeless people in places like streets and parks need only record age, sex, race, marital status and whether the person is of Hispanic origin. If the homeless person is sleeping, the counter must guess.

In places like Tompkins Square on Manhattan's Lower East Side, where the homeless wrap themselves in piles of blankets, this will be hard. Yet, said Meyer, "We don't want them pulling a blanket off someone and find they are staring at a knife or pistol."

Enumerators are forbidden to ask people whether they are homeless, and may miss people as a result.

"Part of surviving on the street is being able to hide or being able to look like they're not homeless," said Morse.

Even if asked, many homeless people would not admit they have no place to live, Meyer said.

In New York, city officials, homeless advocates, transit police and others compiled a list of 2,167 sites where homeless people congregate. But for safety reasons, some of those places, such as train tunnels, will not be surveyed.

"I understand why they're not doing it," said Morse. "The tunnels can be very dangerous." But they are going to miss a lot of people.

Estimates of the number of homeless nationwide have ranged from 250,000 to 3 million in recent years. A decade ago census takers went to shelters but did not try to count people living in alleys, under bridges and in similar locations.

The Census Bureau is trying to include the homeless and people who work with them as counters. The $7- to $10-an-hour jobs have been advertised in New York City in Street News, a non-profit newspaper sold by the homeless, eliciting hundreds of inquiries from homeless people.

Critics say the application process poses many hurdles. Applicants must fill out a four-page form, produce two pieces of identification, provide a social security number, an address and phone number, and are asked to have five years of job experience and no criminal record.

Meyer says the Census Bureau will help the homeless obtain Social Security numbers, and is flexible about an uneven work history.

The bureau also is funding a five-city assessment of the survey, which will be used to refine any future count of "elusive populations," said Kim Hopper, the primary researcher in New York.

'Bottom line' forces Gallup poll change

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — In the opinion of Gallup Poll executives, the grandfather of public surveys has changed to keep up with the times.

Many top executives are gone. Interviewing operations have moved from Princeton headquarters to Lincoln, Neb. Staffs have been assembled in Moscow and Budapest, and the new owners have plans to make the now-weekly poll daily.

But some former employees have a different view. They say that what the company describes as an overdue overhaul is a sacrifice of quality for profits.

Since its purchase 18 months ago by Nebraska-based Selection Research Inc., the Gallup Organization has begun moving away from public opinion polls to concentrate on more lucrative market research, former executive Neil Upmeyer said.

"I believe it is their view that, because market research is more profitable, more efficient, if they de-emphasize social reseach and give additional attention to market research they would have a better bottom line," he said.

Upmeyer, a vice president of public affairs research before his departure, now works for the Center for Analysis of Public Issues in Princeton.

He said the new Gallup owners are trying to use the poll's good name to open more doors for private research on less engaging topics like toothpaste preferences.

Pursuit of bigger profits, he said, "is a perfectly legitimate thing for them to do. But from my point of view ... it negates the purpose for having built this institution for the last 50 years. It has the potential for irreparably damaging the Gallup name."

Also departing with unflattering words for the new owners were Andrew Kohut, president of the Gallup Organization before the SRI acquisition, and Diane Colasanto, former vice president for opinion research.

Jim Clifton, a former SRI executive who became chief executive officer of the Gallup Organization after the acquisition, dismissed it all as "bitterness talking."

He said Upmeyer had his position "upgraded" — a euphemism for being fired. The old Gallup organization, he added, was badly in need of a management overhaul to ensure the profitability necessary to continue the costly stock-in-trade public opinion surveys.

Like the housecleaning in executive positions, he said the move of the telephone interviewing staff to Nebraska was aimed at getting better people on board. A regional labor shortage, he said, doomed the Princeton-based interviewing headquarters to a poorly qualified staff with rapid turnover.

The now-weekly public opinion polls will soon go daily, Clifton said. The quick assembly of polling teams in Moscow last year and Budapest in January, he added, are hardly signs of a diminished commitment.

Also in the works is a 60-nation poll on attitudes about the environment, which Clifton bills as the largest public opinion survey ever done.

Harvard, Stanford, Yale top grad schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — Harvard has the nation's top medical school, Stanford offers the finest business training, Yale has the premium law school, and Massachusetts Institute of Technology is the best place for a graduate degree in engineering, says a survey released today.

A school's reputation among educators and in the outside world was a major subjective factor, said U.S. News & World Report in releasing the results of a survey evaluating U.S. graduate education in its March 19 issue. The magazine emphasized that the institutions receiving top ranking in the survey "do not exercise a monopoly on quality education."

Harvard, in addition to being tops in medicine, ranked second in business and fifth in law. Stanford ranked second in engineering and third among law schools in addition to its top rating for business.

The magazine developed its rankings after interviewing faculty members and deans across the country since last fall.

SPELLING BEE 1990

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1990 Regional Spelling Bee March 31 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 30. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

ə-prĕn´tĭs

apprentice (noun) — A person who learns an art or trade by working under a skilled master for a period of time is called an apprentice. The apprentice system began with the craft guilds of medieval times. During colonial times Ben Franklin was apprenticed to learn the printing trade. Today more than 90 trades offer apprenticeship training in more than 200 skilled occupations. Our modern word can be traced to a Latin word meaning "to grasp mentally."

NATION IN BRIEF

A large tornado roars along the ground five miles southeast of Alden, Kans., Sunday afternoon. The twister was one of five that descended from a fast-moving storm that caused damage across the state.

Hill Country storm claims teen's life

Utah's biggest winter storm of the season dumped more snow today, while Kansans cleaned up tornado damage and scores of people in Illinois waited for floods to subside so they could return to their homes.

In Texas, a 13-year-old boy drowned in a rain-swollen creek and a fisherman was rescued from the raging Llano River.

The heavy, wet snow in Utah — at least 10 inches at Salt Lake International Airport — delayed airline flights and clogged freeways Sunday.

In central Kansas, at least three tornados touched down Sunday evening in Rice County, damaging some buildings. No injuries were reported.

Flash flooding was reported after about 2 inches or rain fell in Kansas. Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Texas, Arkansas and Kansas also had flooding.

In Texas, 13-year-old Paul Cooley drowned Sunday night after falling into a creek in the southwest Denton County suburb of Trophy Club.

Brother surrenders

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — A 19-year-old tennis pro charged with his brother in the shotgun slayings of their millionaire parents returned home from a tournament in Israel and surrendered to police waiting at the airport.

Eric Menendez, 19, was arrested early Sunday after arranging the surrender through his attorney, said police Lt. Bob Curtis. Menendez was booked for investigation of murder and jailed without bail.

His brother, 22-year-old Lyle Menendez, was arrested Thursday. He was held without bail for arraignment today.

The brothers were charge with two counts of homicide each in the slayings of their parents, Jose Menendez, 45, and Mary Louise "Kitty" Menendez, 44.

The couple were shot to death Aug. 20 in their $5 million Beverly Hills mansion. The sons reported finding the bodies upon returning from a night on the town.

The young men are heirs to the $14 million estate of Jose Menendez, an executive of Live Entertainment Inc., a video distribution company.

Bush's grades low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservation groups gave President Bush an overall grade of D on an environmental report card compiled by U.S. News & World Report.

Bush, who campaigned for president as an environmentalist, did not fare much better at the hands of business groups. They gave him a mark of C in the survey.

The magazine, for its March 19 issue, asked 10 conservation groups and 10 business and industry organizations to rate Bush's performance in a dozen areas.

The magazine tallied the overall grades as a D and C.

Striking teachers could lose jobs

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — West Virginia's biggest teachers union refused to call off its strike despite a warning from the governor that those who didn't come back today could lose their jobs.

A proposed settlement of the state's first teacher walkout collapsed over the weekend.

The strike over pay began Wednesday and by Friday spread to 40 of the state's 55 counties. At least 100,000 pupils, about a third of the state's enrollment, were unable to attend class because of the walkout.

Leaders of the 16,000-member West Virginia Education Association recommended continuing the strike until Gov. Gaston Caperton promises to call a special legislative session to consider pay raises. But Caperton said he won't consider calling a special session until the teachers go back to work.

Last week, Attorney General Roger Tompkins declared the strike illegal and said any teachers who walk off the job can be suspended, fired, barred from teaching for a year and charged with misdemeanors.

After the proposed settlement collapsed, Caperton said he would ask county superintendents to begin disciplinary action against any teachers who continue to strike.

State School Superintendent Hank Marockie met on Sunday with the 55 county superintendents but said he would wait to see how many teachers returned today before deciding what action to recommend.

Teachers are employed by county school boards, and it is up to county school superintendents to take any action against striking teachers, including suspension or firing.

Association members voted overwhelmingly Saturday to go back to work for 30 days if Caperton called a special legislative session. But Association President Kayetta Meadows accused the governor of reneging on a promise to call a special session, and she said late Saturday, "We have no choice but to continue a statewide strike."

Caperton termed Meadows' accusation "a total lie."

Flyin' Brian Pillman exults after triumphing in a tag-team contest.

Believe it or not, these guys are for real.

Despite their slick names, flamboyant attire and hardball theatrics, the members of the National Wrestling Alliance's World Championship squad have got what it takes — brains, brawn and personality — to excite the crowds.

"I've trained with these guys, and I've never known an athlete that can do what these guys do," said promoter Tim Willett, who played football at Texas A&M University and with the now-defunct United States Football League.

Willett brought The Main Event troupe, based in Atlanta and owned by Ted Turner, to the Permian Basin last week for its first showing at the Midland College Chaparral Center.

The local wrestling war was preceded by a sellout crowd in Lubbock the night before. It featured six U.S. Tag-Team Title matches and a Chicago Street Fight between The Road Warriors and Doom.

Among the stars performing here were The Rock'n'Roll Express vs. The Midnight Express, Tommy Rich vs. Bud Sawyer, Norman vs. Cactus Jack, Mil Mascaras vs. The Cuban Assassin and Ranger Ross and Eddie Gilbert vs. The Samoan Swat Team.

As an added performance, Flyin' Brian Pillman and the legendary Z Man brought down the house, as the high-flying combination clobbered the The Fabulous Freebirds to remain undefeated.

Though they're young and less experienced than their wrestling peers, the duo believes that with a lot of hard work, they'll eventually get a shot at the world title.

He's 'just a street counselor'

Houston man providing discipline for youth in his neighborhood

HOUSTON (AP) — DeLoyd Parker fights drugs and thugs. He says he's no vigilante, just a street counselor.

During the past year, Parker has led a band of volunteers in taking on a neighborhood filled with gang fights and drug brawls — and he's winning.

"We're not vigilantes," said Parker, founder and executive director of the SHAPE Community Center in the city's impoverished Third Ward. "We're trying to keep our children drug-free and safe. We're concerned about drug-free schools. We're concerned about safe school zones."

Wearing white sweat shirts with their logo, the Harambee Community Watch volunteers have become daily fixtures around Ryan Middle School and Blackshear Elementary School.

They stand in the streets helping children cross as they chat with parents and teachers and watch for skirmishes. They've been known to pull up in a van at gatherings of 40 or 50 teen-agers spoiling for a fight and break it up, sending the headliners off to settle their differences by talking.

The program, named for the Swahili word that means community pulling together, has attracted the attention of the White House. Parker is among 26 "local heroes" honored for fighting the War on Drugs who were invited to meet with federal drug czar William Bennett in Washington last week.

Parker refers to his work as "street counseling." Students are as likely to give him a hug now as they are to shove him for a fight.

But Parker is noticing the changes. One non-student who was encouraging two 15-year-old girls to fight at a recent gathering came at Parker with fists clenched when the counselor broke up the confrontation.

"It's over," Parker told the teenager.

"You can't tell me what to do," the teen responded, adding a string of obscenities. But as he stood chest-to-chest with Parker, he realized the man would not back down. As he walked away, he shouted back to Parker, "You'll see me again."

Later, Parker assessed the situation.

"That kid was just angry," Parker said. "To turn him around, first of all, he has to know that we care. Once a kid knows that we care, I don't care how angry that kid gets, he or she is going to come around sooner or later. But we have to be persistent."

"We've been threatened many times," Tanner said. "I had a boy tell me once, 'If you ever touch me again, I'll blow your damn head off.'"

3 whizkids crowned in Nintendo tourney

DALLAS (AP) — Three whizkids emerged from thousands of nimble-fingered competitors and were crowned champions at the finals of the Nintendo World Championships' stop in Dallas, the first on a 34-city tour.

The three become the players first eligible to participate in a national competition in Orlando, Fla., in November, organizers said.

The winners were:

- Peter Carter, 10, Garland, in the 11-and-under category.
- Jeff Baker, 17, Euless, in the 12-to-17 category.
- Ray White, 18, Dallas, in the 18-and-over category.

Their trip to Florida will be paid for by the video game manufacturer, spokeswoman Cathy Prather said.

The competition in a Dallas exhibition hall began Thursday night. Organizers expected 40,000 to take a crack at Nintendo glory during the four-day Dallas stop. Ms. Prather said the number of people who participated is "somewhere near that."

"Kids kept going back and competing again and again and again," she said.

Visitors to the show paid a fee to try new Nintendo products and enter the competition.

STATE IN BRIEF

Women slain in San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two women were found shot to death execution-style today at an apartment complex, and police searched for a third woman for questioning, officials said.

The two women were found slain about 6:30 a.m. at the Stone Creek apartments, said police spokeswoman Leticia Martinez. Further details were not immediately available, she said.

Police at the scene said one woman was shot in the head at close range and found sprawled in a parking lot near her car.

About 200 feet away, the naked body of another woman shot in the head was found in a bathtub, police said. Both women were said to be in their mid-20s.

Police said they were searching for a third woman, who is a former military police officer, after her acquaintances called police.

Apartment complex residents said prior to the shootings they heard women arguing.

Pizza war inches on

FORT WORTH (AP) — Taking off inches may be fine for dieters, but it's confusing in pizza wars.

Richard Perroti, who owns two pizzerias in Fort Worth, said he can no longer honor competitors' coupons although he was among the first to do so in his city.

He said he's stopping the practice because he finds some companies' large pizzas just aren't what they used to be,

Domino's, the national pizza chain, started a trend toward smaller pies when it reduced the size of its large pizzas from 16 inches in diameter to 14 inches. A Domino's representative said "that's what the customers wanted."

But Perroti said the size reduction was costing him some extra dough — in more ways than one — when he attempted to honor Domino's coupons.

Testimony to begin

CONROE (AP) — Testimony is scheduled to begin today in the capital murder trial of a man who has confessed to killing three women in three different counties.

State prison inmate Daniel Lee Corwin, 31, of Temple, has confessed to the 1987 slayings. He will be tried in State District Judge James Keeshan's court in Montgomery County under a law allowing capital prosecution for multiple slayings.

Corwin already is serving a 99-year sentence for the Oct. 20, 1988, attempted capital murder of a Texas A&M coed who was raped, tied to a tree and stabbed in the throat.

A sociologist arranged for Corwin to speak to A.P. Merillat, then a Huntsville police detective, who developed a rapport with the prisoner. That relationship led to confessions from Corwin, who repeatedly told Merillat he wanted to tell the slayings to "get it off my chest."

Punishment debated

HOUSTON (AP) — The punishment phase is scheduled today in the trial of a 17-year-old man convicted of killing a youth who refused to surrender a pair of Nike Air basketball shoes.

Jurors in State District Judge Norman Langford's court convicted Demetrick James Walker of murder Thursday.

Evidence in the trail showed Walker shot 16-year-old Johnny Bates as Bates waited at a bus stop April 1.

Walker marched up to Bates and demanded, "Give me those shoes."

When Bates refused, Walker used a .22-caliber pistol to shoot him in the head.

Walker then ran away but without the shoes, testimony showed. He later told some girls he would sleep well that night because he had shot someone who had refused to give up shoes and also killed someone who lived in a rival neighborhood.

New trial considered

BROWNWOOD (AP) — Prosecutors are still considering whether to seek another trial for a Bangs High School teacher accused of trying to obtain a nude photograph of a student.

Brown County District Attorney Fred Franklin said a decision had not yet been reached by Saturday.

Stacey Walker, 31, was charged with official oppression in April after a 15-year-old sophomore girl said he had requested that she take a nude photograph of herself and give it to him.

She testified in a trial last week, along with another female student who said Walker had made the same request of her.

But a jury announced after 9½ hours of deliberation on Friday that it could not make a decision in the case and a mistrial was declared. All were agreed except for one juror, but they agreed not to reveal whether the majority was for conviction or for acquittal.

Car, pickup burn after Sunday chase

Staff Report

An apparent chase involving a pickup truck and a car late Sunday ended with both vehicles engulfed in flames, Sheriff's Department and Fire Department reports show.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said the pickup apparently tried to force the car, described as a 1981 Ford Fairmont, off southbound South County Road 1210 about two miles south of Interstate 20.

Both cars left the road and caught fire after the pickup's gas tank ruptured, Painter said. No injuries were reported in the incident, and the pickup's occupants apparently fled the scene on foot.

Painter said the incident may have been related to a domestic dispute between occupants of the two vehicles.

At least one of the vehicles struck a power pole, leaving some county residents temporarily without electricity, Painter said.

Man killed in morning mishap

Staff Report

A Midland man was killed in a traffic accident on West Front Street about 7:30 a.m. today, hospital and police officials confirmed this morning.

Police said Paul Thomas Gainey, 51, was killed after his pickup truck struck a vacant building at 2900 W. Front St.

Gainey apparently was traveling east on Front Street when he left the raod, struck a power pole, veered back across the road and struck the building.

He was pronounced dead about 8:40 a.m. at Midland Memorial Hospital by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe, police department spokesman Cpl. Jim White said. Gainey was not wearing a seatbelt at the time of the accident, White said.

White said the cause of the accident is under investigation and that no other vehicles were involved in the crash.

Area ground water to be discussed

Staff Report

A neighborhood meeting for south Midland County residents is planned for 7 p.m. Tuesday at the West Kentucky Street Baptist Church, 1507 W. Kentucky Ave., concerning possible ground water contamination.

The purpose of the meeting will be to plan and organize future direction of action which will aid in resolution of the health program.

DEATHS

Marjorie L. Snider

Funeral services for Marjorie L. (Morgan) Snider of Midland have been set for 9 a.m. Tuesday at the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield of West Kentucky Street Baptist Church officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Snider died Saturday at a local hospital.

She was born March 14, 1927, in Anton where she was raised and attended school. She received her nursing training at West Texas Hospital in Lubbock. She graduated in 1947 with a R.N. degree. She married John Phillip Snider in Anton on June 18, 1948. They lived in Lubbock for two years, then in Hobbs, N.M., for one year before moving to Van Nuys, Calif.

Mrs. Snider was a homemaker while her children were young, then continued her nursing career in 1968, at the Encino, Calif. She retired as Quality Assurance Manager in 1982. Following her retirement, she and her husband traveled across the United States for 6½ years. They moved to Midland in 1987 and have been residents here since that time.

Survivors include her husband; one son, Jim Snider of Sacramento, Calif.; three daughters, Cathy Murphree of Fullerton, Calif., Donna Guziak of Martinez, Calif., and Carla Hendren of Sacramento, Calif.; two brothers, Thomas Morgan of Portland, Ore.; and Charles Morgan of Clovis, N.M.; three sisters, Bonnie Tidwell of Clovis, Patricia Watson of Muleshoe and Wanda Wilson of Mesquite; seven grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

Carson Lee

Funeral services for Carson Lee of Midland have been set for 11 a.m. Tuesday at the Ellis Chapel with Rev. Jim Field of Cottonflat Baptist Church officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

He died Friday in Lubbock.

He was born July 2, 1956, in Lubbock. He was raised and attended school in Midland. He was employed with Basin Sales and Service at the time of his death.

Survivors include his wife, Cynthia Lee of Midland; two sons, Jerimiah Wayne Lee and Jonathan Jason Lee, both of Midland; one stepson, Nick A. Tenney of Midland; two daughters, Patricia Amanda Lee and Jerica Ann Lee, both of Littleton, Colo.; one step-daughter, Dominique Tenney of Midland; his parents, Clifton and Georgia Lee of Midland; one brother, Clayton Lee of Midland; one sister, Carmen Green of Midland; his grandmother, Eva Mae Owens of Midland; and several uncles, nieces and nephews.

Thomas Aguilar

RANKIN — Funeral services for Thomas Samaniego Aguilar, 83, of Rankin were to be at 2 p.m. today at the Rankin Park Building in Rankin under the direction of Richard Box Funeral Home.

He died Saturday at his home. He was a 65-year Rankin resident.

He was born Jan. 31, 1907, in Presidio and married Rose Ross in 1925. He worked for the county and for Santa Fe Railroad. He was a member of the St. Thomas Catholic Church.

He is survived by his wife, Rose Aguilar; seven sons, Joe Aguilar of Midland, Cayetano Aguilar of El Paso, Nieves Aguilar of Oklahoma City, Adolpho Aguilar of Odessa, Fred Aguilar of Crane, Tom Aguilar of Odessa and Sal Aguilar of Rankin; 17 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren.

George W. Mayes

Funeral services for George W. Mayes of Midland were to be at 3 p.m. today at Holy Trinity Episcopal Church with Rev. Marshall Mason officiating. Interment was to follow at Resthaven Memorial with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

He died Saturday at a local hospital following a lengthy illness.

Pallbearers were to be Louis Furche, Dick Guenther, Tim O'Connor, Craig O'Connor, Denis O'Connor and Edward Franke.

Honorary pallbearers were to be Dr. Richard Reese, Mike Mayes, Robert Mayes, Art Minnick and Wallace Jackson.

Martha E. Greene

Services for Martha E. Greene of Midland were to be at 11 a.m. today at St. Mark's United Methodist Church with the Rev. Earl Ball officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were to be Sam Owens, Floyd Hansen, Chock Williams, Jerry Lanier, Connie Patterson, Bud Lindsey and Robert Pickett.

Unknown soldiers buried

Unidentified soldiers killed in World War II and the Korean War were buried at Arlington National Cemetery May 30, 1958.

WRESTLE: Partner wins praise

(From 1B)

Said Pillman: "Many wrestlers stay either in singles for the most part or tag-teams. We're going to specialize in both and hopefully we'll be ready for anything that comes our way."

A wrestler most of his life, Z Man says he's never had a partner with the athletic ability of Pillman.

"The guy is just amazing and he gets me to try even harder, because he's just so enthusiastic," he said. "We're going for it. The Freebirds started something, and we're going to finish it."

A steady stream of sightseers parades through Biggs Field at El Paso's Fort Bliss Sunday for a view of the space shuttle Atlantis.

Piggy-back shuttle Atlantis grounded by Texas storms

FORT BLISS (AP) — NASA planned a weather briefing today to determine the best route for space shuttle Atlantis, strapped to the back of a modified Boeing 747, to continue its return trip to Florida.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said thunderstorms and showers across the South forced officials to keep the shuttle overnight at Biggs.

The shuttle stopped at Biggs for refueling on its way back to Kennedy Space Center Sunday afternoon.

The piggyback plane and shuttle landed here after taking off from Edwards Air Force Base, 60 miles north of downtown Los Angeles.

One more refueling would be needed before reaching Florida, NASA said. The base for the second refueling will be chosen after a review of the weather.

Atlantis touched down at Edwards on Wednesday, completing a secret four-day, 10-hour military mission that included the release of a $500 million spy satellite.

Nicaraguan president-elect cheered at Houston church

HOUSTON (AP) — More than 1,000 displaced Nicaraguans rallied at a Roman Catholic church where Nicaraguan President-elect Violeta Barrios de Chamorro pledged to end the draft and provide amnesty for countrymen in exile.

Chanting 'Viva Dona Violeta!" and "Viva Nicaragua!" the supporters joined Mrs. Chamorro in singing Nicaragua's national anthem Sunday night.

Mrs. Chamorro, who is using a wheelchair while recovering from knee surgery, greeted several supporters with kisses and handshakes. She addressed the crowd after a Mass at St. Thomas More Catholic Church.

But as she tried to tell them of changes she planned in her homeland, her words were drowned by cheers.

"We want to show her our support," said Doraldina Arguello Schiene. "As American Nicaraguans, we want to show her we support her in her victory and that we trust her to do the job. I feel very confident that 99 percent of the Nicaraguans who were here today were here to show her their support."

Mrs. Chamorro fell and broke her right kneecap on New Year's Eve and underwent knee surgery in a Houston hospital Jan. 4. She returned to Nicaragua on Jan. 16 and campaigned on crutches as the National Opposition Union candidate against Sandinista President Daniel Ortega.

Violeta Barrios de Chamorro

Mrs. Chamorro defeated Ortega in an upset in the Feb. 25 election. She takes office April 25.

She returned to Houston on Thursday and orthopedic surgeon Dr. Malcolm W. Granberry removed her brace Friday.

Contra leader Adolfo Calero flew in from Miami to join the supporters.

"All Nicaraguans are very happy and enthusiastic about Violeta Chamorro's triumph," Calero said.

Calero joined Mrs. Chamorro in calling for disbanding of both Contra forces and the Sandinista military.

Calero said all the Nicaraguans in exile will be watching the country in the next month, hoping to see concrete signs that they can return to their country in safety.

"They want to see that there is peace — that's the most important thing — peace," he said.

Coleman fights Clements' goal for nuclear dump

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has told the Nuclear Regulatory Commission that Texas could be storing its radioactive wastes in a desert dump 12 miles from the Rio Grande by June 1993.

But not if Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, can convince Secretary of State James A. Baker III that the proposed low-level radioactive waste site in Fort Hancock could jeopardize the United States' relations with Mexico if an accident were to spill radioactive material down the Rio Grande.

Coleman, who is fighting the site on several fronts in Washington, took his case to Baker last week, saying in a letter that although Congress left disposal of low-level radioactive wastes to the states in 1982, "I do not believe the federal government can avoid responsibility when the issue is in a border state and concerns another country."

WATER QUALITY NOTICE
Water Quality is a growing problem in West Texas. Municipal Water is, for the most part, safe to drink, however it is extremely hard and it often tastes bad.
Many area water treating companys are using less than desirable tactics to sell their systems.
This in turn gives the water quality industry a bad image and makes it hard for honest, reputable dealers to represent their products in a straight forward and dignified manner.
We at Jack Holt and Associates/Best Water Products have been helping West Texas people solve their water problems for the past 15 years.
We don't sell bells & whistles, use scare tactics or offer free gifts.
We simply sell quality water treating products at the lowest possible prices and service what we sell. If you are interested in improving water quality for your family or business please give us a call for a free estimate at 1-800-342-5419 or 332-8939. Thank You. Jack Holt & Associates - Odessa.

What has been happening amounts to a virtual Social Revolution where smoking and drinking are concerned. And whether they do or don't participate, most people have strong feelings about it.

City children learn about street smarts

By Carol Lawson
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — It was 4 o'clock on a Friday afternoon, normally a time for doing homework, playing basketball or practicing the piano. But for one group of 8-year-olds in New York City, it was time to learn about kidnappers.

"What does a kidnapper look like?" their teacher, Candy Camacho, asked in her deep-in-the-Bronx accent.

"Someone who wears a trenchcoat and a hat and walks with hunched shoulders," one boy replied.

"A black man in black clothes," another said.

"A white man in dirty, ugly clothes," another child said.

"You are all wrong," Ms. Camacho said, peering at her class through rose-tinted glasses. "A kidnapper can look like anyone. I could be a kidnapper."

The children's eyes widened with surprise as Ms. Camacho drove home yet another of the bold, blunt lessons that she says will equip her students to protect themselves.

Ms. Camacho teaches a private after-school class for boys and girls that has a title guaranteed to grab a parent's attention: "Secure Your Child."

It is an eight-week program designed to teach street awareness and some basic techniques of self-defense to children from 6 to 12 years old.

MS. CAMACHO teaches techniques that she says could help children avoid falling victim to street crime or improve their chances of escaping unhurt if they are attacked.

In cities across the country, reports of muggings, kidnappings and child abuse have made the safety of children outside the home a major concern of parents.

That concern is particularly acute in New York, where children move about on foot or public transportation and are constantly exposed to life in the streets.

"I grew up in Manhattan and went to school by myself on the bus when I was 8 years old," said one mother whose son is enrolled in Ms. Camacho's class. "But I cannot imagine sending my 8-year-old child to school by himself on the bus. The environment of the city is very threatening. I don't even let my child go in the elevator by himself when he comes home from school."

Many communities offer some form of safety education, ranging from talks given by police officers in schools on how to interact with strangers to karate classes or a lecture in street awareness at a YMCA.

"Secure Your Child" seems to take a more comprehensive appoach and is lengthier than many other safety education efforts.

Each class begins with a discussion.

Topics range from various types of crimes and child abuse to self-protection when a child is home alone, how to seek help on the street, and how to distinguish between an authentic police officer's uniform and a costume version.

The second half of each class is devoted to self defense. Students learn how to take a fall if they are pushed and how to break out of a stranger's hold on them.

"IF SOMEONE grabs you and picks you up," Ms. Camacho told a class the other day, "you have three choices to free yourself. You can go for the ears, the eyes or the nose. It's gross to try to poke someone's eyes out, but it's worse for someone to take you to their house."

The instructor further advised her students that once they break free, they must scream "Fire!" as they run away. "If you yell 'Help!' no one will pay attention," she said.

Not everyone likes the idea of a class in street safety for children.

"It feeds on the insecurities we all have as parents in a big city," said Dr. Betsy Weaver, an educator and the publisher of The Boston Parents' Paper and The Rhode Island Parents' Paper.

"Our kids need to be savvy, but it is more important to make kids secure in their world than to make them fear someone is lurking behind a bush and will kidnap them. You want them to feel good about themselves, not increase their anxiety about the world."

Ms. Camacho, a 36-year-old mother of three children, holds a black belt in jujitsu.

SHE BEGAN teaching "Secure Your Child" six years ago. She developed the course with her husband, Hector, a private investigator, and two friends, Detective Don King of the New York City Police Department and Joel Ross, a psychologist.

"We didn't want to scare children," said Ms. Camacho, an energetic woman with long dark hair. "We wanted to make them feel safer."

"Candy is not teaching a child to take on five guys at one time," King said. "She is teaching a child techniques to get free if someone grabs an arm and tries to get him into an elevator or a car."

Ms. Camacho has taught her class as an after-school program primarily in the Bronx at a YMCA, the Mosholu Montefiore Community Center and the Amalgamated Housing Cooperative.

Stepparents have difficult role

By Chris Smith
N.Y. Times News Service

SANTA ROSA, Calif. — Though Nick would introduce me as his son, he never came right out and asked me to call him Dad. I was glad he didn't, because I couldn't have done it.

From the first time Mom brought Nick home to meet us kids, I liked him.

I liked his white Ford Galaxy and the incredible muscles he'd built by mining copper as a young man and by operating his own moving and storage business.

I really did like him. He taught me to shake a man's hand firmly, like I meant it. He was gentle, honest, gracious.

But I was 13 years old and I had a Dad, though he lived 50 miles away and we saw him one or two weekends a month.

I was happy that Mom married Nick, and the two of us became close during the five or six years we were in the same house, but I just couldn't bring myself to call him Dad.

Maybe it was just my imagination that he'd have liked me to.

At any rate, watching him made me realize it's tough to be a stepparent.

Although he worked to support us kids and he was the man of the family, he wasn't really our parent. I seem to recall that if he and Mom would fight over how we should be disciplined, she'd sometimes let him know it wasn't his concern.

NICK GOT into some nasty battles with my twin sister and with my grandfather.

He was stoic, so I never knew how he felt when we kids would get all excited that my Dad was coming to take us to lunch and a movie, or whatever. Maybe it didn't bother him, but I suspect he felt his attempts to be a father figure went largely unrewarded.

Looking back, I think he did a fine job walking the stepparent's mine field, trying to fulfill his ambiguous family role without overstepping his bounds.

I wish it had occurred to someone to ask if he might go for the name, Stepdad.

Stepfamilies were fairly rare when I was a kid. Of all of us neighborhood kids, only Dick Saxton and I had stepparents.

And although I liked my stepfather a lot, Dick was convinced the woman who married his father was the wicked stepmother right out of Cinderella.

Over the years, as stepfamilies have become so common, I've seen that some stepparents really do a miserable job.

Some resent their new mates' children and make little effort to conceal it. Some allow their own fears of rejection by the children to turn them into ogres.

Too often in the news business we hear of stepparents who physically or sexually abuse their stepchildren.

But those are the tiny minority.

It seems to me that most stepparents, like Nick, come into their newly restructured families with their hearts open and their hopes high.

And even the best of them often find heartache and conflict they'd never imagined.

IF YOU'RE in a stepfamily, you know what sorts of problems can arise between the newlyweds and the kids, problems that can't help but impact the marriage.

Imagine a new household where the kids live with their Dad and their new stepmother. Quite possibly, the kids feel a loyalty to their Mom so they build a wall between themselves and their stepmom.

"The younger they are, the harder it is for them to understand they can love more than one person," Joanna Quintrell, head of the Sonoma County Stepfamilies, told me.

"It's like, 'I'm not going to let you in my heart because my Mom's already there, and I only need one Mom.' "

That's just one problem the stepmother in this scenario might face.

If she has children of her own in the house, all of the kids can feel threatened by the competition, and can revolt.

All sorts of things can stir trouble in the house: Dad's guilt for breaking up the original family, the kids' resentment at being forced to move or to split their time between Dad's house and Mom's house, financial quarreling, lingering bitterness from the divorce, the kids' contempt at seeing Dad show affection to another woman, the stepmother's fear of rejection by the kids, the kids' outrage at being disciplined by "that woman."

Joanna, whose son was aged 2 when she married her second husband five years ago, said, "You know, The Brady Bunch is really a lie."

She said, "Living in a stepfamily is an entirely different planet."

FOR PEOPLE just arriving on that strange new planet, Santa Rosa child psychologist Bill Finnegan's best advice is, "Go slow."

He said there's a propensity for new stepfathers, especially, to want to sit his new wife's kid down and say, "You call me Dad and I'll call you daughter and we'll all be happy."

That's too much too fast, Bill said.

The adult and the kid need time to check each other out, to figure out if they even like each other.

Bill also said it's crucial that stepmothers honor the children's relationships with their mother, and that stepfathers not denigrate the children's true father.

But most important, he said, is that new stepparents not try to rush into a relationship with their stepchildren.

That same theme is carried by Joanna Quintrell.

She said many stepparents enter their new family lives with the false expectation that their love for their new mates will automatically and immediately spread to the mates' children.

In fact, she said, "It takes the average stepfamily two to seven years for that bonding to happen that makes the family feel stable."

SHE SAID a new stepparent often will move quickly to establish behavioral standards, and to impose discipline. And it backfires.

"You have to earn the right to discipline somebody," she said. "You don't do that by just coming in with your guns blazing."

Reading readiness harmful, educator believes

NEW YORK (AP) — Dividing kindergarten children and first graders into reading readiness groups is insidious, says an education professor at Claremont Graduate School in California.

In "Learning to Read: the Quest for Meaning" (Teachers College Press, 1990, $22.95), Malcolm P. Douglass says reading groups based on supposed ability carry with them "all the odious qualities of real-world segregation policies."

Groupings of kindergarten and first-grade children, Douglass says, are usually based on tests that give an "incomplete report on reading ability or achievement." Yet, teachers and administrators use these tests in a mistaken belief that children learn best when they learn with others of the same ability.

Some teachers even designate groups with names such as "bluebirds," "yellowbirds," and "crows," Douglass says. "Even small children know that everyone would rather be a bluebird than a crow," he says.

In reality, Douglass says, with young children just learning to read, differences in ability are slight and "human variation is so great it is not possible to form a truly 'homogenous' group on any measure."

Yet, he says, once these groups are formed, they are likely to label students in a way that will last beyond their elementary school years.

Studies have shown that when a child moves from one group to another, he generally is shifted to one of lower expectations, not higher.

"From the beginning, each youngster is assigned a status, an implied sense of worth, one that, because of its relative permanance of the groupings thus formed, will be reinforced as years go by."

Students' 'thinking' skills are neglected

BALTIMORE (AP) — Many of the nation's public schools remain unresponsive to the needs of young adolescents in the middle grades, according to a study published in the recent issue of Kappan, a journal for educators.

The survey of 2,400 principals of public schools that include grade seven was conducted in 1988 by the Johns Hopkins University's Center for Research on Elementary and Middle Schools and is the largest such study to date.

Despite many calls for reform to increase middle school students' critical thinking skills and their commitment to school, most schools continue to emphasize basic skills and drills, the study says.

Douglas J. MacIver, associate research scientist, found, for example, that only 10 percent of schools showed a strong commitment to team teaching.

Many middle schools have a narrow curriculum and focus on rote skills rather than critical thinking skills, says Henry J. Becker, principal research scientist.

"If students receive no instruction about such aspects of our culture as music, foreign language or computer technology, and if their classroom time is spent mainly listening to lectures and doing repetitive seatwork that deals with isolated facts," he says, "many of them will leave school with little cultural understanding and an impoverished sense of what learning is like."

DETERMINE YOUR DECADE

Welcome in the 1990's and decide what you want to make of your new decade. Jewelry is a time-honored way to create the kind of impressions you want to create in the 1990's, to say to the world who you are and how well you've succeeded in your life.

1. Your watch. The time is now for you to state your status with the kind of watch you wear. Whether you choose fun, functional, sophisticated, or elegant, your choice in a watch expresses where you see yourself in your professional life.

2. Your rings. For man or woman, your rings reveal details about your style and sophistication. Do you choose the traditional classics or do you choose a unique design? Your preference in metals and center stones tell the people in your world what you value about quality, even how you feel about yourself.

3. Your accessory jewelry. Men's tie tacks and cuff links, ladies' brooches, lapel pins, necklaces, or hair accessories provide the completion to the look you choose for yourself for business or for a night out. Bracelets add a special finish for those special presentations.

As you consider a New Year and a New Decade, consider the statements you make with your jewelry. If you're ready to update your message, come talk with us.

Young are 'post' generation

Twentysomething crowd '10 years late for everything'

By Shann Nix
N.Y. Times News Service

They are the generation with no name.

Defined mostly by the things they're not, they are post-yuppie, post-hippie, post-modern, post-industrial, post-punk. Their lifestyle is post-AIDS, post-Vietnam, post-sexual revolution. Chronically culturally tardy, they were born after the largest demographic swell of recent history, and they're about 10 years late for everything.

Call them the postes.

They're here. They're now. And they don't appreciate being confused with their predecessors.

"We're not the dollar-hungry, no-soul, I-don't-care-as-long-as-I-make-money types, like the yuppies," says Michael Shower, 21, a Berkeley student.

"Money isn't our primary concern. It's personal happiness we're after."

"A yuppie once said to me, 'My Rolex says TIME,' " says Joe Karr, 28, a San Francisco cafe manager. "I told him, 'My Timex says you're too late.' "

Money — the lack of it and the attitudes surrounding it — is a major point of difference between the yuppies and the posties. But there are others.

Posties live in a complex swirl of social convergence: neo-new wave transvestites, Reaganism, cultural activism, frivolity, polkas, slam dancing, multiple piercings, bowling, slash-thrash-and-burn music, vertiginous post-modern thought and the overstimulated rush of trendy-today-gone-tomorrow styles.

They are a bizarre combination of retro chic, high-tech, idealism and impossible sophistication. Innocent they're not.

"THE MORE we learn about what's going on around us, the more hopeless we are," says Chris Esparza, 23, a San Francisco club manager.

Their horizons close in on them as they watch, and they have little choice but to eschew the goals set by the boomers before them.

The William T. Grant Commission on Work, Family and Citizenship reports that posties can expect to earn an average of 25 percent less throughout their lifetimes than the generation 10 years before them.

Only half of the young people today are headed for college — the commission has coined the term "the forgotten half" to refer to the other 20 million 16- to 24-year-olds now making the transition from school to the workplace. These young workers equipped with only a high school diploma are far more constrained than were their peers 15 years ago, the commission reports.

Eighty-two percent of 20- to 24-year-olds are in the workforce, most underemployed in part-time, low-paying jobs that cannot adequately support a family.

"We know we have fewer options," says 24-year-old Keith Todd, a Stanford student.

"We accept that we can't have the same standard of living as the people before us did. So we're not into the skyrocketing-salary concept."

Between 1973 and 1986, young families headed by a 20- to 24-year-old experienced a 27 percent decline in income — equal to the drop in personal income during the Great Depression. During that same period, income for all families in the United States dropped by only 1 percent.

POSTIES HAVE all the confusions you might expect in a band of children who, equipped with great expectations and little else, have been set adrift in a world of shifting equilibriums and screaming tensions.

"Life is complex for us," says Mark Gabbay, 23, a San Francisco State student.

"You're uncertain to begin with, and then there's all this information thrown at you. Things are changing so rapidly, you wonder, 'Who am I?' You can't get a bearing."

Posties tread a narrow path between the fast trackers and the hippies.

"I don't want my kids to go hungry, but I'm not into buying them Polo shirts either," says Storm Denny, 21, a San Francisco nightclub doorman.

"We take care of our own like the yuppies do, but our own encompasses more — it means our community and our planet, too."

"There's nothing wrong with having money," says Marcel Karimi, 22, a Berkeley student.

"But we want financial security, not luxury. It's a matter of scale. We're satisfied with less."

"The yuppie phase is this fever for luxury," says Terry Bidelspach of Antioch, 25, a student at San Francisco State. "It has to level out."

These products of a post-modern age have been blitzed with pulsing images from videos and TV and the big screen. Their attention span is brief, and their areas of knowledge specific and highly defined.

"A lot of kids don't know the classics, but they can recite every 'Brady Bunch' episode," says Shower.

"This is the age of information," says Huber. "Everyone's been bombed with data till we can hardly think."

POSTIES HAVE been hard hit by the modern dearth of rules and regulations.

Living without solid family or religious structures, in an almost complete void of social limits or guidance, they are sometimes seized with the paralysis of their unlimited options.

"We have so much possibility, and no rules," says Cecillia Hong of Oakland, a 21-year-old Berkeley student. "It causes apathy."

"There's no fit. There's no guidelines, no rules like they had in the '50s," says Jon Omori, 26, a Berkeley student. "You have to develop your own path."

The febrile, chaotic stew of nonvalues in which they live leads many posties to predict another social revolution is on its way.

"The '80s were like the '50s, and the '90s are going to be like the '60s," says Karr. "It's all coming around again."

"I think we're going back in time," says Bidelspach. But there are major differences between the posties and the young people who engineered the rebellion of the '60s.

"Sixties kids rebelled against the structure," says Hong. "We're not going after the structure. We're changing ourselves."

Posties tend to avoid organized protests, preferring to contribute to social change in personal ways. For example, only 20 percent of freshmen entering Berkeley this year are interested in demonstrations, while 77 percent have done volunteer work.

When it comes to the big political picture, posties consider themselves "educated but apathetic," says Karr.

"We are concerned, but we don't do anything. We look at the government and feel hopelessly overpowered."

"We want to be politically active," agrees Bidelspach. "But it seems like such a farce. Yuppies talk so much about issues but don't seem to do anything. It's like a puppet show."

THERE IS no one acceptable way to dress these days, although many of the posties wear black.

"Halfway through their first semester in college, kids figure out the world and they start wearing black," says J.M. Massi of Mountain View, 29.

"We call them the tragic freshmen."

But the shape and style of the black clothing vary widely. With all the images and fashions of world history available to them via VCR, the posties' mental closet includes a wide scope of decades.

They dress less than they costume — today it might be the bowling shirt from the '50s, tomorrow the fringed dress of the '20s.

"You can be any character in fashion or clothing," says Bidelspach.

Their music runs as wide a gamut as their clothing, featuring a not-so-subtle relish for a nihilistic ethos, a thumping, primal beat, electronic sounds and hardcore lyrics.

Listen to a postie music discussion and you'll hear phrases like "house," "acid house," "industrial rock," "thrash funk," "death rock" and "garage rock."

Popular groups include the Pixies, the B-52s, Soul II Soul, Sisters of Mercy, Iggy Pop, Bauhaus, This Mortal Coil, and Love and Rockets — ranging from fiercely political rap music to crashing machine soundtracks.

The issue at stake for most posties is morality vs. materialism.

What they want, they say in a fantastic display of hopeful innocence and hothouse-bloom sophistication, is to do good and be happy. They call this urge "The Daisy Age."

ODDLY ENOUGH, what unites the posties is their desire to be individuals — that paradoxical warp on rebellion that creates conformists out of a mass of separatists.

"The in thing is to be different," says Thomas Dignan, 17, a San Francisco State student.

"Individualism is what we all want to do. We're more independent than the yuppies. We have no stereotype."

"We're all looking for something for ourselves, that's the common thing," says Hong. "But what everyone wants is different, and that's a lonely thing."

DEAR ABBY

Most men look but don't touch

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The business of women feeling threatened because their men look at otherwomen keeps coming up. Now it's "Confused in Oregon," whose boyfriend, a police officer, goes to topless bars for coffee while on duty. Let me explain:

Van Buren

Men like to look. Some enjoy looking at horses, paintings, football and cars. But they are all genetically programmed to enjoy looking at women. It's in our hormones; it hits us when they heat up at about age 14 and stays with us for the rest of our lives.

You ladies spend countless hours — and dollars — to make yourselves look good, so we men will keep looking. So what's the problem?

You feel threatened because your man isn't content to confine his looking only at you. Lighten up. All this looking doesn't mean a thing — except that he's human.

Your man doesn't compare you to the topless bar girls, because he loves you. He loves you for a thousand reasons, one of which is because you don't get up on a stage and prance around bare-bosomed, where anyone with the price of a cup of coffee can look at you. — WARREN JAMISON, MARINA DEL REY, CALIF.

DEAR WARREN: Hold everything. I just happen to have a letter from one of those topless bar girls who prances around bare-bosomed, where anyone with the price of a cup of coffee can look at her. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Why do women dance topless at bars? I can speak only for myself. As an eighth-grade dropout and single parent whose husband was an abuser, boozer and user, that job kept me off welfare, off the street selling illegal substances and out of jail. I never had to live in substandard housing. I was able to buy good clothes for my children, feed them nutritious food, give them good health care and make sure they were educated. Eleven years in the nightclub business sent me to college to obtain a Ph.D. — a little late but better late than never.

Abby, girls don't end up stripping for money because they had a storybook childhood. Most girls I worked with had bills to pay, a man, a family or a habit to support. They were not tramps. Men are attracted to us because they want to "rescue" us or take care of us. Some men come in for comfort. Some are severely handicapped men whom most women wouldn't look at. Servicemen, far from home, come in because they're lonesome.

Some policemen come in to watch the cash register, looking for skimming that would give the tax people a good reason to shut the place down.

Topless bars do not attract the cream of society, but it's a good place to pick up leads to drug arrests and other helpful information. I think you get the idea. Enough said. Sign me ... ANY DANCER, U.S.A.

Volunteers teach knitting to kids

NEW YORK (AP) — A retired U.S. Marine sergeant-major, who has been knitting since childhood, is one of a corps of volunteers teaching needlework to children throughout the country.

Milo Rodosovich, who teaches at Crafts Unlimited in Duncanville, Texas, says he opted for the program because he wants to see the craft passed along to the next generation and because "knitting keeps children's hands busy and out of trouble."

A New Vision for Texas

A New Vision for Governor

"This is a time of change and challenge for Texas. This is a time for men and women of experience, leaders with a record of achievement, to step forward. This is the time for a Governor with a New Vision for Texas. I am that leader."

Kent Hance

For a Republican Victory . . . Keeping the Governor's office in Republican hands is critical for our state's future and for the future of the Republican Party, especially with redistricting around the corner.

Only one candidate for Governor has won statewide office as a Republican.

Only one man has the experience as a Congressman, State Senator and statewide elected official it will take to be a good Governor.

That man can win, if you help him.

Kent Hance is that man.

Kent Hance is a strong manager who runs a major state agency with a $35 million budget and nearly 1,000 employees.

For Better Schools . . . As Governor, Kent Hance will build on the education reforms of the last eight years with new, innovative proposals to improve our schools.

He'll stress more local control with more input by teachers and parents.

He'll emphasize the educational basics and help Texas schools challenge all students.

He'll make the State Education Commissioner elective, not appointive.

Kent believes local school districts should be able to select textbooks, rather than having them dictated by a bureaucracy in Austin.

And he will see there's a complete review of all state mandates to eliminate unnecessary paperwork and red tape and to foster innovation.

"I do not accept and will not tolerate an education system that fails. Quality education is a key to the future of Texas and to more jobs for Texans."

Kent Hance: Experience That Works For Texas

- U.S. Congressman: Sponsor of the Reagan/Bush 25% Tax Cut.
- State Senator: Wrote tough laws to make food stamp and welfare fraud felonies.
- Professor: Taught at Texas Tech for five years.
- Now, as Texas Railroad Commission Chairman, fought against foreign government control of Texas energy industry.

As a Congressman, Kent was a principal sponsor of the Reagan-Bush Income Tax Cut. For his leadership on the issue, Reagan praised Kent by saying, "the country is indebted to you and I am indebted to you."

Kent with Barbara and President Bush at the White House. Kent was the President's Texas Co-Chairman.

For More Jobs . . . Texas is one of a few states without an Income Tax—a big advantage attracting industry and creating jobs.

Kent Hance will keep it that way. He backs a Constitutional ban of the State Income Tax to guarantee a good business climate, especially for small business and high tech.

Kent proposes a "Tax Free Start Program" to suspend the state franchise tax for new investments.

He also suggested tax relief and incentives to help existing Texas businesses.

Kent will establish a Natural Gas Marketing Fund to open up new markets for our plentiful Texas natural gas.

For Safer Neighborhoods . . . Kent Hance backs mandatory jail time for drug users, the death penalty for major drug dealers and a Constitutional amendment to deny bail to drug dealers.

He'll build 25,000 more prison beds to stop early release of violent prisoners from Texas prisons. Experts agree there should be ample new revenue from our economic recovery to pay for this vital prison expansion.

Kent was the first to suggest 24-hour "drug courts" to deal with cases faster and end delays in our criminal justice system.

A New Vision for Texas' Future

- No State Income Tax. Only candidate to favor a Constitutional ban.
- Dedicate 60% of new state revenues to education. New reforms to restore local control, increase excellence, and involve parents more.
- Stop early release of dangerous criminals from our prisons and step up drug rehabilitation in prisons to break cycle of crime.

Kent Hance is the first Republican in over 100 years to win a down ballot statewide office. With 15 years in public service, Kent Hance has the experience that works for Texas.

MHS, Lee meet Tuesday to start 4-5A campaign

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Tuesday's baseball matchup between Midland Lee and Midland High may contain the high-octane element of the MHS-Lee rivalry.

But something far more significant will be at stake when the two teams take to the Angels Stadium field at 4 p.m., like winning the District 4-5A opener.

In other league games Tuesday, intra-city games are the rule with Abilene High and Abilene Cooper squaring off, while Odessa High plays Odessa Permian.

Getting out of the gate fast in the 4-5A race will be of tantamount importance if either Midland team is to have a shot at postseason play. The only problem is, one will walk away from Tuesday's match with a tally in the L win column.

Lee (5-4) and MHS (8-5) are both coming off recent successes at this weekend's Carlsbad, N.M., tournament, where Lee advanced to the championship game before losing Saturday to the host Cavemen, 6-0. After losing their first game, the Bulldogs romped throught the losers bracket competition to take a 4-1 victory over Plainview and the consolation championship.

In the Tournament of Champions March 1-3 at Angels Stadium, the scenario was reversed. MHS marched to the final, where it lost to Fort Worth Southwest, while Lee won the consolation after suffering an early loss.

Expected to be on the mound Tuesday for the 'Dogs is Gabriel Salazar (4-1), a righthander who has so far been MHS' most stable starter.

For the Rebels, Jeff Johnston, also 4-1, is the likely starter. The lefthanded junior has been the Rebs' No. 1 hurler all season, and could provide some trouble for a MHS batting order that has shown a weakness against left-handed pitching.

"That's because we never get to see it (left-handed pitching)," said Tim Whalen, MHS coach. "We don't have any lefthanders to even take batting practice against. We can set the pitching machine for it, but it's just not the same."

If anything, though, the Bulldogs have seen plenty of southpaws in non-district play. MHS has faced no less than four leftys since beginning the Tournament of Champions.

Despite the fact that cleanup hitter Will Sowders has had little chance to practice his newfound switch-hitting, the experience should see MHS batters improved against lefthanders.

"Hopefully that will help, and we can be ready for it by district play," Whalen said.

Another possible boost to the Bulldog order will be second baseman Scott Melzer. After missing the first part of baseball because he played basketball for MHS, Melzer has worked his way back into the lineup. As a junior, he batted over .300 in 4-5A play a year ago.

Lee coach Ernie Johnson is beginning his 29th and final 4-5A tour with a Rebel lineup that has shown little trouble hitting or scoring. The Rebs have scored more than five runs in four of their last five games, and had the starters average more than .300 as a team in the Tournament of Champions.

Senior centefielder J.J. Johnson has been swinging a big stick of late, and slammed a home run and two doubles in a win over Lubbock Coronado last Tuesday.

Monday's Question: Before Jim Bunning was elected to Congress in 1986, the last ex-big leaguer to serve as a representative left the House in 1975. Who?

Sunday's Answer: Sen. Bill Bradley (D-N.J.), and Reps. Tom McMillen (D-Md.) and Jim Bunning (D-Ky.) all played professional sports before becoming congressmen.

Baseball Today...

The postponement of opening day is almost a foregone conclusion, and baseball's 26-day lockout is getting nasty.

Commissioner Fay Vincent and union chief Donald Fehr met twice over the weekend without progress. No negotiations are scheduled and both sides are privately sniping at each other more than ever.

It's just three weeks from the start of the regular season, and baseball might soon announce that the April 2 openers are off.

When District 3 soccer front-runners Abilene Cooper, San Angelo and Abilene High won their respective matches, both Midland Lee and Midland High were mathematically eliminated from post-season competition.

Midland High was aced out of post-season possibilities by a 3-1 loss at San Angelo, while Lee was forced out of the playoff picture without even suiting up.

The Rebels suffered through a tough open date after wins by the front-runners put Coach Eddie Bull's team too far back with too little time to catch up. Cooper's win over Odessa Permian, AHS' win over Odessa High and the San Angelo win put the three top teams two games ahead of Lee in the loss column going into the final week of the season.

Cooper, 8-2-1, hasn't quite clinched a playoff berth, but the Cougars can stay ahead of fourth-place Lee, 4-4-2, simply because they have only one more match.

But what really kills Rebel hopes is the fact that San Angelo, 7-2-1, and Abilene, 6-2-2, play each other Tuesday. That means one of the teams can't possibly match the Rebels' four losses.

Still, there are matches to be played for both local teams Tuesday. Midland High hosts Odessa High, while Lee visits Odessa Permian.

Arkansas captures SWC tourney title

DALLAS (AP) — Arkansas panicked Houston into 17 turnovers — leading to 22 points — to capture the Southwest Conference tournament championship 96-84 Sunday.

Todd Day, the tournament's Most Valuable Player, provided the offensive firepower with a game-high 22 points for the ninth-ranked Razorbacks.

"We wanted to do something special for our fans," said Richardson. "We just turned up the defensive pressure. That was the difference."

The Hogs will be the No. 4 seed in the Midwest and play No. 13 seed Princeton on March 15 in Austin.

Houston, which had a 14-game winning streak until Sunday, will be the No. 8 seed in the Southeast Regional and will play Cal-Santa Barbara on March 15 in Knoxville.

"I thought we would be seeded higher," Richardson said. "I'm disappointed because I thought we played a tough schedule. Still, it will be nice going to Austin although I really didn't care to go there again until next year. I hope the state of Texas fans pull for us."

Arkansas, the regular season SWC champion, increased its record to 26-4.

Last games help clear NCAA field

Associated Press

A victory in the Big East championship landed Connecticut in its backyard for the NCAA tournament.

A fews hours after beating No. 4 Syracuse 78-75 Sunday for their first Big East title, the eighth-ranked Huskies were selected the No. 1 seed in the East. Connecticut will play in Hartford against Boston University on Thursday in an all-New England matchup.

"Since we won the Big East tournament, we more or less forced the selection committee to go by its own rule book that says you can play on a court if you play less than half of your home games there," Coach Jim Calhoun said. "Moving the Big East champion out of the East wouldn't make sense."

The Huskies played most of their home games in nearby Storrs, Conn.

Top-ranked Oklahoma beat upstart Colorado 92-80 to win the Big Eight Conference and was made the No. 1 seed in the Midwest Regional against Towson State.

Colorado saw its remarkable run through the tournament come to an end. The Buffaloes (12-18) upset top seed Missouri in the first round and Oklahoma State in the semifinals for Coach Tom Miller, dismissed prior to the end of the regular season.

"All we're gonna do is play Towson State like they're anybody else, like Kansas or Missouri," Oklahoma forward Skeeter Henry said. "We're gonna go out and play hard for 40 minutes and hopefully come out on top."

UNLV emerged as the top seed in the West by beating Long Beach State 92-74 in the Big West tournament final.

"I told the players before the game that this is a great test of our character because the outcome of the game meant nothing to UNLV and had no bearing on the (NCAA) tournament," UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian said. "We were the No. 1 seed before the game and the players knew that the only thing we had at stake was our personal pride."

Michigan State won its first outright Big Ten championship since 1978 with a 72-70 victory over Purdue. The Big Ten does not play a conference tournament, so Michigan State got the automatic NCAA berth and was selected the top seed in the Southeast Regional.

NCAA party has familiar guest list

By Chris Clarey
Copley News Service

Notre Dame, with 16 victories, is in. Southern Illinois, with 26, is out. A record seven members of the Big Ten are in. All but the champion in 17 other conferences are out.

Let "the party" begin.

The 64-team field for the 1990 NCAA men's basketball tournament was announced Sunday (March 11) in Kansas City, Mo. Big Eight tournament champion Oklahoma, the nation's top-ranked team, is the No. 1 seed in the Mideast Regional. Big East champion Connecticut is seeded first in the East. Big West champion Nevada-Las Vegas is first in the West, and Big Ten champion Michigan State is No. 1 in the Midwest.

All four No. 1 seeds will play first-round games Thursday, the opening day of the 18-day tournament that concludes in Denver's McNichols Sports Arena on April 2.

As usual, the nation's most celebrated conferences are well-represented. The Big Ten has seven teams, an NCAA Tournament record. Its representatives are Michigan State, Purdue, defending NCAA champion Michigan, Illinois, Minnesota, Ohio State and Indiana. The Big East has six representatives, the Atlantic Coast five and the Big Eight four. Among them, those four conferences accounted for 18 of the 34 at-large berths.

It was a banner day for the West, as well. The Pac-10 has four teams in the tournament: Arizona, UCLA, Oregon State and Cal, which will be making its first appearance since 1960. The Big West and Western Athletic conferences each received three bids.

"We felt there was growing strength in the West," said Big Ten commissioner James Delany, the chairman of the men's basketball committee that selected the field. "There's been a lot of debate about that in the last five to eight years, but analysis clearly shows the West has made great progress — not just in terms of seeds but in terms of multiple representation."

The WAC's three bids were the most surprising development. Texas-El Paso clinched the conference's automatic berth by winning the WAC tournament Saturday. But Colorado State (21-8) and Brigham Young University (21-8), which both received at-large bids, were upset in the first round of the tournament. Neither team has played a particularly taxing schedule.

"We had the WAC rated approximately seventh out of 32 conferences, and all the statistical material we had available indicated that BYU and Colorado State were in the top 50 in the country," said committee member Tom Frericks, the athletic director at Dayton. "Both those schools had fine years."

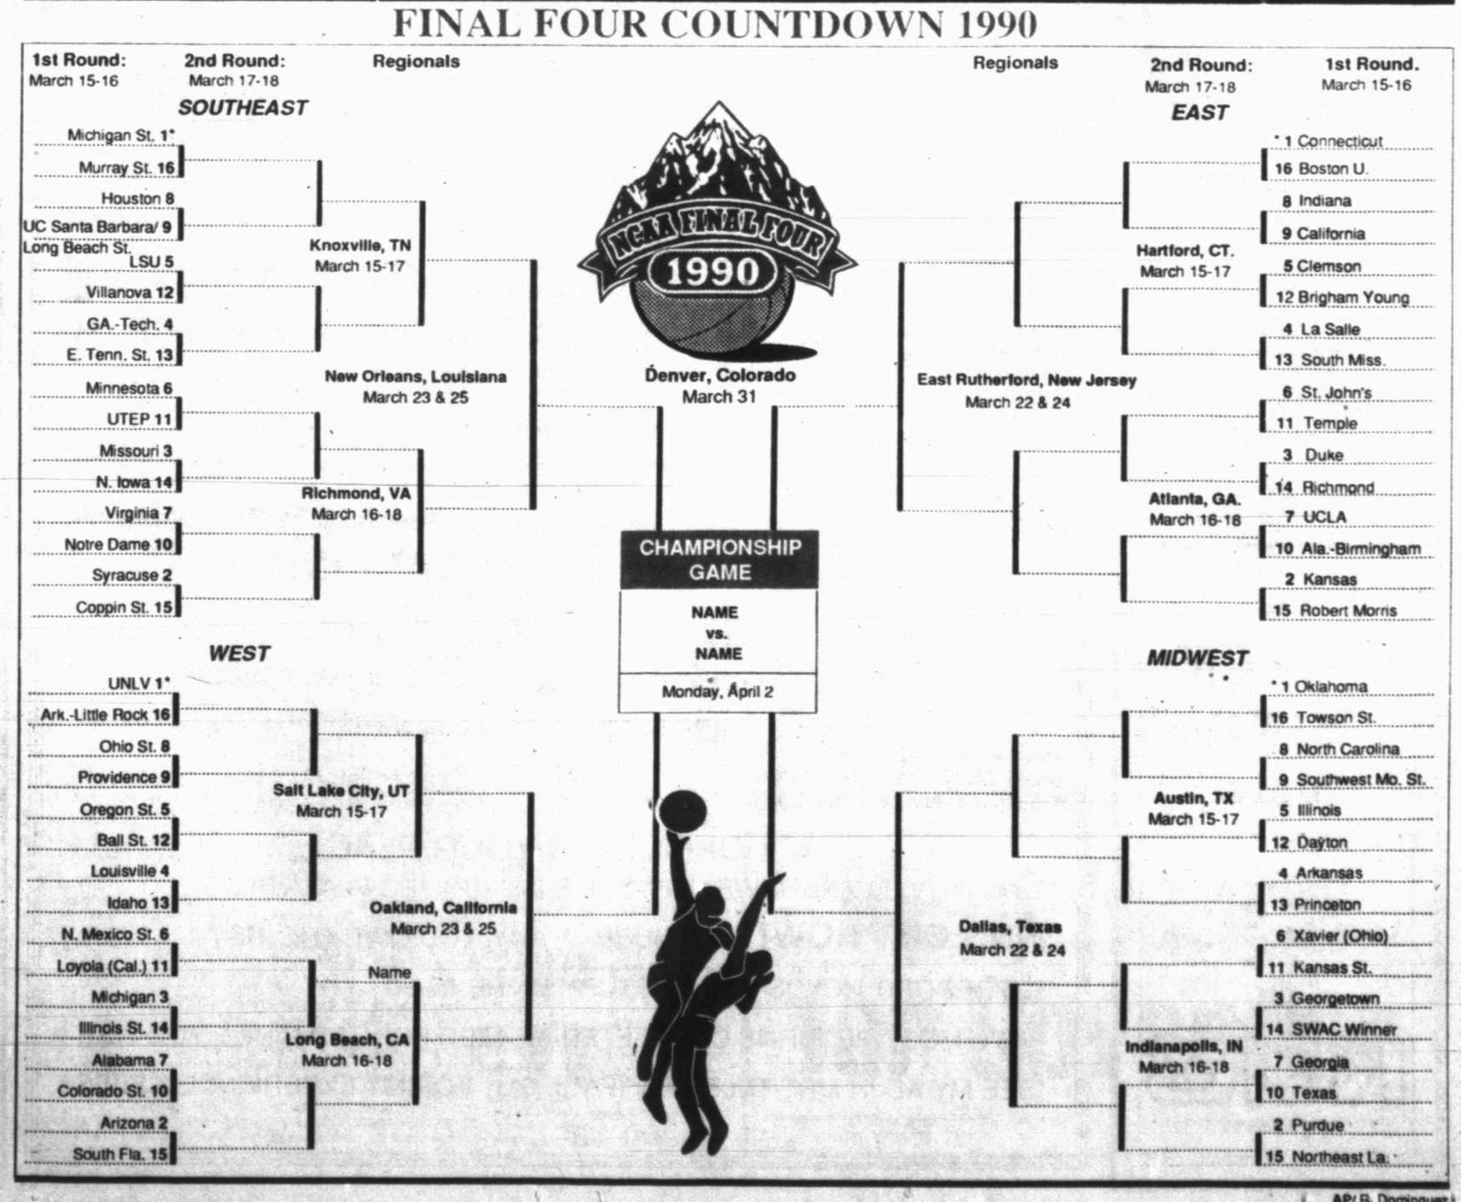
FINAL FOUR COUNTDOWN 1990



MAR 12 90

NCAA: Huge 64-team field set for Final Four run and $1.3 million

(From 1C)

The committee's decisions evoked the customary range of responses, from elation to frustration. They were cheering at Indiana, where the Hoosiers (18-10) made the field despite a losing record (8-10) in Big Ten play. They were commiserating at DePaul, where the Blue Demons (18-14) failed to receive a bid for the first time since 1983.

"We had more good information this year than we've ever had, and more parity," Delany said. "The decision on the last five to seven spots was the most difficult in my five years with this committee."

The 64 teams in the tournament each will receive a minimum of $250,000 this year after expenses. Those that advance to the Final Four in Denver are expected to receive $1.3 million apiece.

Notre Dame, which lost to DePaul twice this season, was the only independent to receive an at-large bid. According to Delany, the Irish's upsets of Missouri and Syracuse were the deciding factor. Other teams left out of the field included Maryland (18-13), Hawaii (23-9) and Oklahoma State (16-13). In all, 16 teams with 20 or more victories failed to make the tournament. But nobody was more upset than Southern Illinois coach Rich Herrin, whose team won the Missouri Valley Conference's regular-season title and finished 26-7.

"There's no question that we didn't get a fair shake," said Herrin. "I just can't believe we didn't get a bid. I've been in athletics for 30 years, and there's just no justification for it that I can see. I question the honesty and integrity of the committee."

The Salukis, who were upset by Illinois State in the final of the conference tournament, were listed 47th among 293 Division I teams in the most recent USA Today power ratings. Four teams with lower power ratings received at-large berths: Virginia (49), Cal (50), Villanova (51) and BYU (54). But in the end, the Salukis had to settle for the National Invitation Tournament.

"That's probably one of the more difficult ones that we agonized over," Frericks said. "They certainly had an impressive record, but their schedule strength just didn't stand up to some of the other teams. The number of teams they played that were rated below 150 was not in their favor, but they were definitely one of the last seven we looked at."

Other decisions raised a few eyebrows, too. No. 21 Loyola Marymount, which nearly turned down its automatic bid after the death of star center Hank Gathers, was seeded only 11th in the West Regional. The Lions will play 23rd-ranked New Mexico State in Long Beach on Friday. Frericks said the loss of Gathers affected the Lions' seeding. "The committee did consider that very seriously," he said.

Connecticut, the No. 1 seed in the East, received an early advantage when the committee placed it in Hartford for the first round.

"We felt that being the No. 1 seed, they should stay close to their geographic location," Frericks said. "The alternative was to put them in Atlanta, and the committee felt everything was in order for them to play in Hartford."

Delany criticized the Big West for the scheduling of its tournament final, in which UNLV defeated Long Beach State. The game still was in progress when the field was announced.

seconds; Smith had 20 points and earned most outstanding player of the tournament, and Gwynn had 16 in reserve. The three also helped force 20 turnovers.

BIG EIGHT

No. 1 Oklahoma 92, Colorado 80

Oklahoma opened a 17-point second-half lead on the shooting of William Davis and Jackie Jones, then held on. Davis and Jones scored 26 points apiece as Oklahoma (26-4) won the championship for the second time in three years.

Oklahoma opened the second half with a 10-2 run that gave the Sooners their widest lead, 51-34, with 16 minutes remaining.

BIG WEST

No. 3 UNLV 92, Long Beach St. 74

David Butler scored 19 points and UNLV won its sixth Big West tournament championship in nine years by defeating Long Beach State on the 49ers' home court.

The loss broke a nine-game winning streak for the 49ers (22-8), who learned at halftime that UC Santa Barbara of the Big West would go to the tournament unless they defeated UNLV. The 49ers have not made the NCAAs since 1977.

Lucious Harris' free throw pulled the 49ers within 46-45 with 16:31 to play. UNLV then took command with a 15-0 run to go ahead 61-45 with 11:55 left.

BIG TEN

No. 7 Michigan St. 72, No. 10 Purdue 70

Dwayne Stephens' steal and basket with 20 seconds left put Michigan State ahead 71-70, and Steve Smith, who had 22 points, added a free throw 17 seconds later.

The Spartans (26-5, 15-3 in the conference) last had a piece of the Big Ten title in 1979, when Magic Johnson took Michigan State to an NCAA championship. Purdue (21-7, 13-5) was led by Tony Jones with 21 points.

PACIFIC 10

No. 15 Arizona 94, UCLA 78

Arizona won its third consecutive Pac-10 tournament as Jud Buechler scored 22 points. UCLA won the first Pac-10 tournament in 1987 but Arizona won the final three. The Pac-10 will join the Big Ten and the Ivy League next year as the only conferences without postseason tournaments.

Arizona (24-6) built a 46-32 halftime lead with a combination of inside shooting, 3-pointers and layups off steals.

Despite the loss, UCLA was picked for the NCAA tournament and will play Alabama-Birmingham in the East Regional.

ATLANTIC COAST

No. 14 Ga. Tech 70, Virginia 61

Dennis Scott and Kenny Anderson scored 18 points apiece, leading the Yellow Jackets to their first ACC tournament title since 1985. The game was the last ACC game for Virginia coach Terry Holland, who returns to Davidson next year as athletic director.

Georgia Tech (24-6) went on a 17-4 run that ended with 2:08 to play and put the game away.

SOUTHEASTERN

Alabama 70, Mississippi 51

Alabama went to its inside strength of Melvin Cheatum, David Benoit and Robert Horry to beat Mississippi and capture the conference tournament for the third time in four years.

NBA Roundup

Kleine shakes outhouse image

Associated Press

For both the Boston Celtics and Joe Kleine, it was high time.

"In 15 seconds, I went from the outhouse to the main house," Kleine said after scoring the winning basket in the Celtics' 107-105 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers on Sunday. "It's been a long time since I've made a winning shot."

Kleine, a backup center who played 38 minutes only because Robert Parish had injured himself earlier in the game, had made just two of his other 11 shots before hitting the game-winner with eight seconds left after grabbing an offensive rebound.

That dramatic shot at Boston Garden provided the struggling Celtics with their first home-court victory in four games. The Celtics had lost their last three games, all at home. It was their longest home losing streak since 1978-79, the year before Larry Bird joined them.

"Maybe it's good we go on the road" for the next three games, said Boston's Kevin McHale, who scored 27 points.

With the score tied at 105, Boston tried to get the ball to Larry Bird, who led all scorers with 41 points. But he couldn't get open and Reggie Lewis fired a 15-footer from the left side that bounced off the rim.

Kleine, who had 10 rebounds, grabbed the rebound along the baseline and immediately put up the winning shot. Parish left the game for good with a hyperextended right knee with 9:35 left in the second quarter.

On the 76ers' last possession, Charles Barkley, the NBA leader in shooting percentage, shot an airball from near the foul line with 3.2 seconds left. The ball then hit Philadelphia's Rick Mahorn and sailed out of bounds as time expired.

Pistons 98, Hornets 88

Joe Dumars and James Edwards scored 21 points apiece, leading the Pistons to their eighth straight victory.

The Pistons led 87-78 after Bill Laimbeer's 3-point shot, but had to fight off a late Charlotte rally for their 21st victory in 22 games.

Charlotte came back to 89-86 on Dell Curry's jumper with 6:33 left. But Dumars scored Detroit's next six points and the Hornets missed their last six shots and didn't score in the closing 5:53 en route to their fifth consecutive loss and 11th in the last 12 games.

Dell Curry had 21 points and Armon Gilliam had 20 for Charlotte.

Lakers 123, Hawks 115

Magic Johnson scored 32 points and had 14 assists and James Worthy added 30 points as the Lakers overcame an early 13-point deficit to beat the Hawks at the Omni.

It was the Lakers' third victory in a row and 11th in their last 13 games.

Cavaliers 107, Bucks 96

Mark Price scored 31 points and visiting Cleveland used a strong third quarter to beat Milwaukee and snap a six-game losing streak.

The Cavaliers outscored Milwaukee 39-18 in the third quarter and went on to hand the Bucks their sixth straight loss.

Ricky Pierce led Milwaukee with 26 points.

Warriors 123, Kings 116

Chris Mullin scored 32 points and Mitch Richmond had 12 of his 28 in the fourth quarter as Golden State held off a late Sacramento surge in Oakland.

A layup by Antoine Carr, who paced Sacramento with 27 points, cut the Warriors' lead to 99-94 with just under 10 minutes to play. Four minutes later, Sacramento trimmed Golden State's lead to 104-102 when Pervis Ellison made two free throws. But the Kings could get no closer.

Knicks 106, Heat 90

Patrick Ewing scored 30 points, including three straight fourth-quarter baskets, as the visiting Knicks held off a Miami rally.

With the Knicks leading 81-61 late in the third quarter, Miami launched an 18-3 run that featured six points, four rebounds and two assists by Billy Thompson. That trimmed New York's lead to 84-79 with 6:04 left.

Jazz 110, Nuggets 109

John Stockton's 3-pointer with 4.9 seconds left climaxed a late Utah rally that deprived Nuggets coach Doug Moe of his 600th victory.

The Nuggets appeared to be in control after a 16-footer by Fat Lever gave them a 107-100 lead with 2:11 to play.

But Stockton, who had 17 points, connected on a 19-foot jumper with 1:52 left, then converted a pair of free throws with 1:26 to go, cutting Denver's lead to 107-104.

NFL approves TV pact

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The 28 NFL teams have nearly doubled their television revenue. Now they're beginning to worry about how much they'll have to pay their players.

Almost as soon as the owners unanimously approved the new contract, which will bring in $3.64 billion over the next four years — an average of $32 million per team — they began to think about the likely escalation of salaries.

The new TV contract and the expanded schedule — two new playoff teams, plus 16 games over 17 weeks for the next two years and 18 weeks thereafter — was approved in about an hour

TUESDAY, MARCH 13, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The delights of home and family will be even more precious to you in the coming months. The business outlook is brightest in early May. Your confidence grows and rubs off on your associates. A new venture or career move in June will increase your earnings substantially. Count on a burst of energy to carry you forward on all fronts. Any fear of failure will be wiped away by December. A love affair could culminate in marriage.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: publisher Walter Annenberg, golfer Andy Bean, actress Deborah Raffin, songwriter Neil Sedaka.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Happiness comes in small packages for those in new jobs. A surprise telephone call puts you in a cheerful mood. Your anxiety over bills can be relieved if you stick to your budget.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your writing skills will come in handy when preparing an annual report. Effort counts for more than personality. Strengthen your position with your loved ones. Use your creative talents judiciously.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Try to be more thick-skinned in your search for career advancement. Family members look to you for leadership. Romance has its ups and downs. Go slow. Impulsive behavior could cause embarrassment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A close friend announces a major change in lifestyle. Do not voice any doubts. Opposition will only make this person more determined! A temporary disappointment could work to your advantage.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Unusual circumstances could cause temporary delays. An out-of-town visitor brings you a new viewpoint. Look at your financial transactions from every angle. Consult experts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be discreet about any past errors in judgment. If thinking of remodeling or redecorating your home, get several estimates in writing. Enlist the help of your mate in keeping entertainment expenses down.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Tend to pressing business affairs. Your associates are apt to be demanding. Someone could accidentally shortchange you. Correct mistakes as soon as they are spotted. Romance looks rosy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Others may grumble, but you look forward to changes on the job. Check the fine print when going over important papers. A friend who has been reliable in the past may make a mistake.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Continue to forge ahead while the going is good. Today's events can lead to larger financial rewards. Some travel may have to be postponed. A sibling needs more attention and affection.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Strike a better balance between work and play. Loved ones may feel you are "all business." Keep abreast of developments in your field. Be patient with someone beset by personal problems.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Trust your hunches; they are apt to prove profitable. Greater career or business success depends on your learning to be less modest. If you entertain this week, everything should go smoothly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your talents as a poet or artisan may be recognized by someone with considerable prestige. Loved ones rally around. Lend a helping hand to someone swamped with work. Partner pays you a compliment.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠5 ♡963 ◇AK9852 ♣KJ6
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with a weak two-heart-bid. What action do you take?
A.—Treat an opening weak two-bid much as if opener had bid one of the suit. You would have overcalled one heart with two diamonds, so bid three diamonds over two hearts.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK63 ♡87 ◇1043 ♣A984
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
2 ♡*	3 ◇	Pass	?

*—Weak
What do you bid now?
A.—You want to tell partner you have game aspirations but you don't want to bypass three no trump, which might be your only makable game should partner have a heart stopper. The way to convey that information is to cue-bid three hearts, which indicates a strong hand, but says nothing about control of the suit itself.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠5 ♡963 ◇AK9852 ♣KJ6
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
2 ♡*	3 ◇	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	?

*—Weak
What do you bid now?
A.—You have a dead minimum for an overcall at the three-level. As is usual in situations where you have already bid your values, sign off in the cheapest strain available. Bid four diamonds.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK63 ♡87 ◇1043 ♣A984
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
2 ♡*	3 ◇	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	4 ◇	Pass	?

*—Weak
What action do you take?
A.—Don't bid the same values twice! Your three-heart cue-bid already showed game-interest and you could hardly have less for that action than what you hold. Pass; if partner couldn't bid game it's unlikely you can score 11 tricks.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ4 ♡Q5 ◇832 ♣105432
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Fie on you if you thought we were setting a trap. This is simply a matter of whether you rate your hand worth another bid. Since the queen of hearts should be upgraded and your fifth club is a great card, three clubs gets our nod.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A983 ♡J4 ◇A93 ♣K965
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Another question of valuation. Point counters will tell you that you should raise to two no trump with 12 points. However, we feel your jack in partner's suit should be upgraded and your intermediates are good, so we would opt for three no trump.

Cosby, Barr 'People's Choice' for television comedy shows

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bill Cosby and "The Cosby Show" dominated the People's Choice Awards with three trophies, while Roseanne Barr and "Batman" picked up two awards each.

Meryl Streep, Tom Cruise and Dustin Hoffman captured the top awards Sunday in the movie categories, while musical honors went to Paula Abdul, Bobby Brown, Kenny Rogers and Randy Travis.

Arsenio Hall took the first-time category as favorite late-night talk show host for his syndicated show, beating out Johnny Carson and David Letterman.

Barr

Cosby won his sixth straight trophy for favorite male TV performer. He was also named as favorite all-around male entertainer.

Miss Barr captured the same two awards in the female category, beating out Phylicia Rashad of "The Cosby Show" for favorite all-around female TV performer.

The awards, determined by a nationwide Gallup Organization poll, were announced during a two-hour broadcast on CBS. The 22 categories spanned the entertainment world, from television, film and music.

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Timothy Busfield says he draws on his own personality in playing Elliott Weston, the yuppie jerk, in ABC's "thirtysomething."

Busfield

"That's who I am," Busfield said in an interview in the March 17 edition of TV Guide.

"I'm a jerk, first and foremost. I don't know the answers. I'm an idiot. I make mistakes. I stick my foot in my mouth. I'm insensitive when I don't want to be."

But Busfield said he has more than an emotional identification to Elliot.

Elliot has a failed business behind him and two small children he struggles to know. He chases other women and at one point separated from his wife.

When the role was offered to him, Busfield was in the throes of his own failed marriage, had trouble connecting with his own young son and had watched his children's theater project go under.

This season, Elliot has reconciled with his wife, is back working with his old partner and has reached an understanding with his children. And Busfield has remarried, has a second son and his children's theater company is thriving.

He said he people he meets recognize him as Elliot. He gets Bibles in the mail from those offended by the character's philandering, and one time a woman walked up to him in a supermarket, said "Oh, it's you!" and slapped him.

People are "emotionally disturbed by Elliot, yet they're completely enthralled by the character," Busfield said. "He gets under their skin."

NEW YORK (AP) — Rob Lowe says he's worried about how moviegoers will react to his first appearance on the big screen since a videotape of his sexual escapades was splashed across TV screens.

Lowe

"There's no way that you can know how embarrassing it was," Lowe says in the March 19 issue of People. "No matter what adjective I choose, it would be trivializing it."

Lowe says he went underground to escape the publicity surrounding an X-rated videotape of himself and two women — one of whom was a minor — made in an Atlanta hotel room in 1988.

He doesn't dispute that he videotaped his guests and says they knew they were being recorded. He denies, however, having sex with the 16-year-old. A lawsuit is pending in that case.

The district attorney in Atlanta chose not to prosecute Lowe. In exchange, Lowe agreed to do 20 hours of community service.

With the release of his new movie, "Bad Influence," Lowe says he is hoping the public will forgive and forget.

"I'm real nervous," said Lowe, who turns 26 today.

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Christy Fichtner-Alhadef, Miss USA 1986, says she was exploited during her yearlong reign, making her the second former beauty queen to criticize the pageant operation.

"No one is pushed that hard, not Miss Universe, not the chaperones, just Miss USA," she told The Wichita Eagle in a recent interview.

Miss USA 1989, Gretchen Polhemus, also complained about her treatment when she wore the crown. Pageant management was changed in 1988, but many of the complaints were similar, centering on long hours and few days off.

The day after the new Miss USA, Carole Gist, was crowned March 2 in a televised show from Wichita, Ms. Polhemus, 24, aired her gripes.

"She was the first one to be honest and say something negative about the pageant," Ms. Fichtner-Alhadef, 27, said from her Dallas home last week. "You get trained and conditioned to say the right thing. I don't care anymore."

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Oliver Stone, whose films often follow tortuous paths to the screen, said winning the Directors Guild of America award for "Born on the Fourth of July" should speed his filmmaking process.

"It's giving me more freedom," Stone said Saturday night after collecting the guild's top honor at its annual awards ceremony, a bellwether for the Academy Awards.

Energy futures continue decline

The West Texas intermediate posted price held at $19.50 over the weekend. Although energy futures prices slipped 8 cents to $20.35.

The crude oil and gasoline markets fell drastically in the past week. Fears about overbuilding of inventories pulled gasoline prices down, which in turn depressed crude prices. "The products were very weak and put a lot of pressure on the crude market," a trader said. Market players seem to feel that further declines are likely this week, particularly if the strong buildup in crude and gasoline stocks continues. It is normal to build stocks this time of year ahead of the summer driving season, but traders say the increases have been larger than expected.

Crude fell through several technical support levels during the week, as West Texas intermediate for April delivery wound up at $20.43 a barrel, down 35 cents Friday and off nearly $1 for the week on the New York Mercantile Exchange. By the end of the week, many major oil companies had reduced the price they were willing to pay for a barrel of West Texas intermediate by $1 to $19.50.

Gasoline finished the week at 54.99 cents a gallon, down $1.15 Friday and off about $1.50 a gallon for the week.

Dollar, gold rise, yen weak

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose in calm trading in Europe late this morning, bolstered by a weak yen, uncertainty about the West German mark and stronger-than-expected U.S. employment figures released last week. Gold prices also rose.

Investors were cautious, waiting to see if central banks would return to the market after last week's repeated interventions to curb the dollar, traders said.

Exchange Rates

- 1.7069 West German marks
- 1.5130 Swiss francs
- 5.7700 French francs
- 1.9205 Dutch guilders
- 1,261.00 Italian lire
- 1.1800 Canadian dollars

The dollar rose to 152 yen in Tokyo, its highest rate in more than 2½ years, and that pulled the U.S. currency up against the West German mark in Europe, dealers said.

But one Milan trader said: "There's fear that the (West German) Bundesbank is going to step in and knock the dollar lower."

In London, the dollar rose strongly against the British pound, which was quoted at $1.6080, compared with $1.6183 late Friday. Dealers cited Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's recent decline in the opinion polls, reported jitters among Cabinet members about her leadership and last week's violent protests against the government's new local tax on individuals.

Other dollar rates at midmorning compared with late Friday:

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose 0.85 yen to a closing 152.00 yen. That was its highest level since August 1987. Later, in London, it was quoted at a higher rate of 152.25 yen.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $399.50 a troy ounce, up from $399.05 bid late Friday. At midmorning, the city's major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $400.40.

Stock market slips 12.84 points

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices slumped Friday after unexpectedly strong employment news touched off new interest rate worries on Wall Street.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 12.84 to 2,683.33, cutting its gain for the week to 22.97 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by a little less than 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 602 up, 876 down and 484 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 150.41 million shares, down from 170.90 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market,totaled 180.54 million shares.

The Labor Department reported that the civilian unemployment rate held steady at 5.3 percent in February, while nonfarm payroll employment swelled 372,00 on top of an upward-revised increase in January.

The pace of job growth substantially exceeded advance estimates.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Drexel creditors oppose SEC intervention

NEW YORK (AP) — Drexel Burnham Lambert Group Inc. creditors will receive confidential company information but no veto power over asset sales under a bankruptcy court agreement on managing liquidation of the collapsed Wall Street firm.

Also, attorneys for Drexel's unsecured creditors said Friday they would oppose a move by the Securities and Exchange Commission to join their committee. Drexel still owes the SEC $150 million from its 1989 settlement of securities fraud charges.

Shareholders may oust Exxon chairman

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp. shareholders and environmentalists said that their attempts to prod the giant oil company into a more environmentally sensitive direction could include a call at Exxon's annual meeting to oust its chairman.

Six shareholder proposals on environmental issues have been cleared by the Securities and Exchange Commission for inclusion in Exxon's proxy statement and will be voted on at the company's April 25 annual meeting, the groups said Friday. The company opposes all the proposals.

Hughes obtains Pentagon documents

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Hughes Aircraft Co. has admitted that it unlawfully obtained classified Pentagon budget documents and agreed to pay the government $3.67 million, officials said.

Hughes, which pleaded guilty Friday to two felony counts, is the fourth major defense contractor to admit to such charges.

Corrosion plagues Alaska pipeline

Could cost up to $1.5 billion to repair weak spots

N.Y. Times News Service

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Buried in a mountain range deep in the Arctic Circle and completed in 40-below weather, critical sections of the nation's main oil pipeline are corroding and will require years of costly repair work.

In their rush to finish the $7.7 billion trans-Alaska pipeline in the 1970s, workers did not adequately coat parts of it, state and federal investigators say.

The pipe carries 25 percent of the nation's domestic oil supply.

"They were in a real hurry to turn the sucker on and start getting a cash flow when they misapplied the pipe's protective coating," said Robert LaResche, who has been the chief investigator for the state of Alaska on recent problems with the oil industry.

Federal officials and oil industry experts say there is no immediate threat of a rupture in the 800-mile-long pipeline, but they were astonished by corrosion in a line only 13 years old.

The cost of repairs has been put at $600 million to $1.5 billion.

But both federal officials and Alyeska, the pipeline service company that runs the line for the seven oil companies that own the oil, said they were confident that the rust was not far enough advanced to cause a major leak in the delicate arctic environment.

"We think we're on top of the problem, and we're quite certain we won't have a leak," said Bill Howitt, the engineering manager for Alyeska.

When the pipeline was opened in 1977, linking the rich North Slope oilfield at Prudhoe Bay and the port of Valdez, it was termed virtually rust-proof for its first 30 to 40 years.

But in the past year, Alyeska officials have found hundreds of corroded spots in the pipe's steel walls.

Repair work is under way and will take at least four years.

The corrosion problem figures in the debate over the future of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, a northern Alaska wilderness area that the oil industry wants to develop.

If drilling is allowed in the refuge, the oil would be moved through a feeder pipe into the main oil line that runs from the North Slope to Valdez.

Congress is not expected to consider the issue this year.

The pipeline, a 48-inch-wide tube of half-inch thick steel, crosses three mountain ranges, 800 rivers and streams and goes over terrain where the weather can range from 90 degrees in summer to 75 below in winter.

Half the pipeline is buried and half runs above ground on trestles.

About 80 million gallons of heated North Slope crude pass through the line every day.

Because the pipeline carries warm oil, it heats and melts the the encompassing soil's frost and rust develops where moisture touches steel that is not sufficient-

A Jacksonville Sheriff's officer inspects the interior of a greyhound bus that was struck by gunfire Sunday evening along U.S. Route 1. Eight persons were reported injured.

Greyhound strike becomes violent

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Authorities believe a gunshot that tore into a Greyhound bus injuring at least seven passengers was linked to a strike by the company's drivers, but union officials say their members had nothing to do with the incident.

The shooting Sunday night on a Greyhound bus en route to Daytona Beach from Jacksonville came on the eve of a meeting called in Washington by federal mediators with officials of the striking Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions.

That meeting was announced Saturday in the latest bid to end the 1½-week-old strike. The union, which represents 6,300 drivers and more than 3,000 office and maintenance workers, went on strike March 2.

Greyhound officials also may be called to a separate meeting in Washington, but no meeting had been arranged as of Sunday night between the company and mediators, according to Greyhound spokeswoman Elizabeth Hale.

Negotiations on a new three-year contract broke down March 1 and the two sides have only sporadic telephone contact since.

The shot was fired shortly before 8 p.m. EST, according to Sheriff's spokesman Steve Weintraub. He said the bus was carrying 41 passengers and was on U.S. Route 1 about 10 miles south of Jacksonville when the shot showered passengers with glass and debris.

The single shot apparently was fired from the Interstate 95 overpass, Weintraub said, and none of the injuries appeared life-threatening. All seven injured passengers were taken to area hospitals, and two underwent surgery for shrapnel wounds to the throat and side, according to Weintraub.

At Greyhound's Dallas headquarters, company spokesman George Gravley said late Sunday initial reports indicated eight people were injured in the incident.

There were no immediate arrests, said Weintraub, who was asked if the gunshot on the bus appeared strike-related.

"I think it is," he said. "I don't know why anybody would want to shoot a Greyhound bus."

In an earlier incident in the strike, a striking driver was crushed to death on a picket line in Redding, Calif., by a bus driven by a replacement driver.

But an executive board member of the Jacksonville local of the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, said Sunday night he didn't believe strikers were behind the shooting.

"As far as I'm concerned it wasn't one of our strikers. ... They've been like choirboys," Bill Nicholson said.

In Dallas, union spokesman Jeffrey Nelson echoed that view.

PBPA to hear airline exec

Staff Report

Brown

David L. Brown, director of public relations for Southwest Airlines, will be the guest speaker at Thursday's luncheon meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association Board of Directors and Advisors luncheon.

The meeting will be at the Green Tree Country Club beginning at noon.

Brown joined Southwest in February 1988. An 18-year veteran of the airline industry, he has held various marketing and public relations positions with United, Swiftair, Texas International and other carriers. He was also editor for "Airline Executive" and "Commuter Air" magazines.

He is a native of El Paso and earned his bachelor's degree from California State University and his master's degree in journalism from Berkley.

The luncheon is open to all PBPA members and reservations may be made by calling the office at 684-6345.

Airline will offer hourly newspaper

N.Y. Times News Service

All-news cable television and radio stations have obliged compulsive Americans to follow current events during midnight snacks, at the dinner table and even, for owners of waterproof radios, in the shower.

Now even the afternoon flight home from an out-of-town meeting, a quiet respite in the sky from the tumult of information below, may have its own hourly newspaper.

The Pan Am Shuttle plans to distribute free copies of a 20-page newspaper next month to passengers on four hourly flights from Washington to New York.

United Press International, the States News Service, and Financial World magazine will jointly produce the newspaper, The Latest News, which will be edited and rewritten hourly to include news articles, stock prices and weather reports from the two wire services.

As reported Friday by The Washington Post, The Latest News will be distributed on a test basis for one month, beginning April 2, and will cover events that occur after morning newspapers are printed.

Whether shuttle passengers will want to read news summaries after a long day of meetings remains to be seen.

"It may be eye-exhausting," said Daniel M. Kasper, a Boston consultant who flies the shuttle several times a month to New York and Washington. "I'm not sure it

Toyota building largest track

N.Y. Times News Service

DETROIT — In a move reflecting its push for growth in the United States and other markets, Toyota Motor Corp. will build the world's biggest automotive proving ground near Phoenix, auto industry executives say.

These executives said Toyota would announce Monday that it was applying for local permits in Maricopa County, Ariz., for a 12,000-acre test area 47 miles northwest of Phoenix that will include a 10-mile test track and roads simulating various driving terrains.

Toyota also wants to build a 6,600-foot airstrip on the property so it can ship test vehicles to the track.

An automotive executive said the cost of the test track would be about $20 million.

Construction of the track and test facilities is expected to begin in 1991 and take two years to complete. The test track will eventually employ about 150 workers, the auto industry officials said.

The proving ground, which would join several in the southwest United States established by auto makers for testing vehicles in desert climate, will serve as a testing facility for Toyota car and truck models intended for the United States, European and Japanese markets.

Toyota operates a large test track in Shibetsu, Japan.

In recent years Toyota, which has more than 35 percent of the Japanese automotive market, has said it is trying to capture 10 percent of the world automotive market.

To reach that goal, Toyota would need substantially higher sales in the United States, as well as in Europe, where its presence is embryonic.

To increase sales in the United States, where the company has about 7.3 percent of the market, Toyota is building an independent American auto-making company with design, engineering and manufacturing responsibilities. This strategy is typified by the opening last year of an assembly plant in Georgetown, Ky.

A company spokesman said recently that Toyota wanted to be able to create distinct vehicle models for its three main markets — North America, Japan and Europe — as well as models that are similar and use the same name but vary according to local tastes and product requirements.

The recently introduced Previa van was designed in California, is built in Japan and will be sold on all three continents.

The most conservative of Japan's auto makers, Toyota lags slightly behind Nissan Motor Corp. and Honda Motor Co. in establishing a full-fledged U.S. auto-making entity.

Toyota started operations in the United States 30 years ago, primarily as an importer of Japanese-made vehicles.

Mosbacher heads to Japan with urgent message

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Commerce Secretary Robert A. Mosbacher left Sunday for trade talks in Tokyo, saying he wanted to convey to the Japanese "a certain sense of urgency about the trade problem."

His visit comes a week after President Bush and Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu of Japan met in Palm Springs, Calif., to discuss the trade tensions between the two countries.

After their meeting, Bush emphasized that the United States was eager to increase its exports to Japan and wanted Japanese markets opened.

Kaifu promised that his new Cabinet would give priority to some structural changes in society that the United States believes will open the country's markets.

Mosbacher, meeting with reporters Friday, said, "We want to make sure we translate very fine rhetoric into activity."

But in Japan, Kaifu has run into heavy criticism from opponents who accuse him of makng excessive commitments to Bush.

Mosbacher said: "We don't want to get involved in their politics at all. But I'd be remiss if I didn't talk about trade things. That's my job."

Later this week, Bush is scheduled to meet with former Prime Minister Noburu Takeshita, who will be visiting the United States.

Takeshita resigned as prime minister after criticism of his role in the Recruit stock and influence-peddling scandal, but he still a leader of the largest faction of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party and has a broader base of power than Kaifu.

GM may enter East German auto venture

N.Y. Times News Service

GM announced tentative plans for a venture in East Germany with Automobil-Werk Eisenach, the country's No. 1 car maker. GM said the venture could ultimately produce 150,000 cars a year at Eisenach, about 100 miles northeast of Frankfurt.

Hungary is leading the way in shifting trade away from the Soviet Union and toward the West. The abrupt about-face has jolted many Hungarian companies that grew fat and happy relying on the huge Soviet market.

The Czechoslovak Parliament is expected to pass liberal new private enterprise laws this week that will take effect in April.

Commerce Secretary Mosbacher left for trade talks in Tokyo, saying he wanted to convey to the Japanese "a certain sense of urgency about the trade problem." Knotholes apparently were not discussed by President Bush and Prime Minister Kaifu at their meeting last weekend. But a flood of questions about how specific the talks were has stirred a furor in Japan's Parliament.

Venezuela and its commercial bankers are moving toward a debt agreement that is expected to include a provision for substantial — but temporary — debt relief.

ALASKA: Pipeline rotting

ly coated.

Federal officials are investigating Alyeska for possible violations of the law that requires the operator to monitor and report corrosion in five days.

The company had said before the pipeline opened that it had an adequate rust-detection system, but it now says that only in the last year has an adequate system come into use.

Alyeska denies violating any federal laws.

Company officials attribute the sudden proliferation of rust spots to new technology that detects corrosion in earliest phases.

Rust is now detected by an ultrasonic monitor that runs through the pipeline once a year and records any thinning of the pipeline's walls caused by rust.

The General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, has been investigating the government's watch over the pipeline.

"Our eyes are open now," said George W. Tenley, director of the Office of Pipeline Safety in the Department of Transportation, which regulates and inspects 155,000 miles of American pipeline.

"What's surprising to us is the degree of corrosion. I don't think anybody expected to see this much rust this soon."

He said it was due to sloppy work in the mid-1970s, when the workers were rushing to complete a section high in the Brooks Mountain Range north of the Arctic Circle with winter closing in.

Alyeska officials say the most extensive corrosion is in a nine-mile stretch of pipe in the Brooks Range, about 160 miles south of Prudhoe Bay.

All nine miles will have to be dug up and the pipe replaced or resealed, said Howitt, the Alyeska manager.

Officials here who represent the Bureau of Land Management, which has responsiblity for overseeing the line, said some rust spots are the size of a quarter while other whole sections are dotted with smaller spots.

Nonetheless, federal officials said they were not overly concerned about the possibility of a leak.

STRIKE: Bus fired upon

(From 6C)

"We believe it's important for the public to understand that this is a strike against the company, not against the traveling public," Nelson said.

"I thought we were shot or something," said Niki Johnston, 18, of Perry, Ohio, who was traveling with her sister to Naples. "A man was holding his throat. I thought he was shot."

"Everybody was hollering, 'I'm hit, I'm hit,' " said passenger Ronald Hill, 25. Hill and Kevin Covington, 35, said they yelled to other passengers to get down.

"I yelled for everybody to get down, and I told the bus driver to put his accelerator pedal to the floor," Covington said.

The bus driver pulled the bus in safely at a convenience store about two miles after the shooting. The store's night manager, Roger Ennis, said passengers covered in blood ran in and told him to call 911.

Ennis said he gave the injured napkins and a first-aid kit while they waited for rescue units.

Police refused to identify the injured passengers, pending notification of their families. But other passengers aboard the bus identified two of the injured as Ms. Johnston's sister, Kelly Charleston, 16, of Perry, and Lisa Bleil, 20, of Indiana, Pa.

Both were discharged late Sunday after being treated at St. Luke's Hospital.

Earlier Sunday, Greyhound announced it has restored bus service to an additional 120 communities that lost regular runs when the strike began.

Company spokeswoman Hale said Greyhound managed to add routes Sunday in parts of the Southeast and Southwest following graduation from training courses by a new class of drivers.

But Ms. Hale said she didn't know how many of the 9,500 communities the bus line served before the strike were being served as of Sunday night.

On Saturday, Greyhound reported carrying 38 percent of the number of passengers it handled on the same Saturday last year. It also operated one-third of the number of departing buses, according to Ms. Hale.

Figures for Sunday would be available today, she said.

Greyhound has been able to serve big cities virtually since the strike began, with Sunday's additions including smaller cities and small towns along routes between metropolitan areas, Ms. Hale said.

Sunday's expansion also included separate southern and northern transcontinental routes, one from Washington, D.C., to Los Angeles, and one from New York to Los Angeles.

would ruffle the brain cells much."

Pan Am's marketing department plans to conduct surveys to determine customers' reactions, Harris K. Herman, the president of the Pan Am Shuttle, said Sunday.

The carrier would then meet with the producers in order to tailor the newspaper more closely to its market, and decide whether to make it a permanent feature, he added.

Financial World will run the advertising, UPI will provide most of the news, and States News will choose the articles and print the newspaper, said Milton F. Capps, UPI's senior vice president for corporate affairs.

Like many newsletters, The Latest News will be written and edited on a computer and then duplicated on notebook-size paper using a photocopying machine at UPI Washington office, then trucked to National Airport.

More than 80 percent of the passengers on the flights, which depart from 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m., are people traveling on business.

"When this idea came up, we thought many of those people returning home in the afternoon might not have been in touch with the news for many hours," Herman said.

The newspaper may also increase demand for telephones aboard the Pan Am Shuttle, as business executives and politicians react to what they read, Capps said.

"It will accelerate the response time of some of the decision makers who fly on these planes," he added.

If the test next month is successful, the joint venture producing The Latest News would begin distributing it on Pan Am Shuttle flights originating in New York and Boston, Capps said.

The joint venture is also studying other routes, including St. Louis to Chicago, Dallas to Houston and Los Angeles to San Francisco.

Parks can't coast on coaster claims

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Thrill seekers are being lured to ride the "world's tallest roller coaster," but the summons are coming from two amusement parks doing battle over the title.

And the issue may end up being settled in the courts, not on the tracks.

The Texas Giant ride had barely completed its test runs before it drew threats of a lawsuit from an Allentown, Pa., amusement park that claims it has the tallest wooden roller coaster.

Whether the new attraction at Six Flags Over Texas or the Hercules at Dorney Park & Wildwater Kingdom has the right to the title is a bit confusing. There is no certifying agency and no universally correct way to measure a roller coaster.

Texas Giant has the highest first hill, at 143 feet. Six Flags officials measure the ride from the loading station to the top of the first hill, or lift. Hercules sports a lift of only 100 feet.

But the Allentown Park says the correct way to size up a roller coaster is by the length of its vertical drop. Hercules riders wind up 157 feet lower than the height to which they are towed. The Texas Giant's vertical drop is 137 feet.

Dorney Park spokesman Harry Schmerling said the park plans to protest the Texas Giant's claim as being false and to defend Hercules' reputation as being No. 1. He said attorneys representing his park are continuing to "actively study" the legal aspects of the roller coaster tussle.

"It's a major difference between being the world's tallest wooden roller coaster and not being the world's tallest wooden roller coaster," Schmerling said.

The Arlington Convention and Visitors Bureau already is circulating materials promoting the new attraction in the Dallas-Fort Worth area as being the world's tallest. Sandy LaPlant said her agency won't change those materials unless ordered to do so by Six Flags management.

Randy Geisler, president of the American Coaster Enthusiasts club in St. Paul, Minn., hasn't taken sides, but he does plan to take a spot in line. His group plans to hold its annual convention in Arlington in June, and more than 400 members are ready to test the Texas Giant, tallest or not.

Ha! sign-on April Fool's Day

NEW YORK (AP) — The president of television's second all-comedy channel will find out soon whether viewers are laughing with him or at him.

Edward Bennett's Ha! network, owned by Viacom's MTV Networks, goes on the air April Fools' Day, testing whether the cable industry can support two 24-hour comedy channels.

Ha! will compete for laughs with The Comedy Channel, which Home Box Office started Nov. 15. The Comedy Channel claims to serve more than 6 million homes.

Bennett last week unveiled the April-May schedules of the network, which cost $80 million and is expected be seen initially in 5 to 10 million homes.

Most systems that have agreed to carry "Ha!" will run it as a 24-hour service, Bennett said, while others will show it for only 12 hours, from 4 p.m. to 4 a.m. EST.

Ha!, advised by former network programming expert Fred Silverman, will have no hosts and rely on entire programs and movies.

Stop 'The Hop'?

GRANBURY, Texas (AP) — "The Bunny Hop" has been banned on the Granbury Queen Riverboat for fear the bouncy swing number will capsize the dinner-cruise ship.

The 74-foot paddlewheeler began bouncing around wildly on Lake Granbury, near Fort Worth, one night last year. Owner Gary Miller left the pilot house and rushed toward the main deck.

"I couldn't figure it out until I looked downstairs and saw these people doing 'The Bunny Hop,'" he said.

The boat band still takes requests, but "The Bunny Hop" is verboten, Miller said this week.

Donald Trelford, center, editor of the Observer, leaves the Iraqi embassy in London Sunday after delivering a letter pleading with officials to quash a death sentence passed on reporter Farzad Bazoft and a 15-year jail term assessed nurse Daphne Parish.

Can international efforts save life of condemned journalist?

By Leslie Shepherd

LONDON (AP) — Journalists, relatives and government leaders appealed Sunday to Iraq to grant clemency to a London-based journalist sentenced to death on espionage charges and to a British woman ordered imprisoned for 15 years.

A delegation of European Economic Community ambassadors went to the Foreign Ministry in Baghdad to make a "humanitarian appeal" on behalf of Farzad Bazoft and Daphne Parish, the EEC said in a statement.

British Ambassador Harold Walker said he made a separate trip to the ministry to deliver a personal appeal from Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

A Foreign Office spokesman said Britain would also be talking with its allies in the next few days "to see what support they will give us in pressuring the Iraqis."

King Hussein of Jordan, who met with Mrs. Thatcher on Sunday, volunteered to see what he could do to help, according to government sources quoted by Press Association, the British domestic news agency. Hussein is believed to have good relations with the Iraqi president.

Bazoft, 31, was arrested in September and charged with spying for foreign powers after making an unauthorized trip to a military complex where a huge explosion had been reported. He was in Iraq on an assignment for the The Observer, a London newspaper.

Mrs. Parish, 52, a senior nursing administrator for an Irish-run hospital in Baghdad, was accused of helping Bazoft by driving him to the Al-Iskandaria military complex south of Baghdad. She was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Under Iraqi law, no court appeal is allowed against the sentences. They were imposed by a revolutionary court Saturday after a closed trial.

There was no indication when Bazoft might be executed.

Observer editor Donald Trelford said he delivered a letter to the Iraqi Embassy on Sunday, calling on Ambassador Dr. Azmi Al-Salihi to urge Hussein to commute the sentences.

Trelford said he had a "heated exchange" with the embassy's second-ranking official, whom he identified as Zuhir Ibrahim.

"He said that Farzad had taken soil samples from the military site and was therefore not acting properly. I argued I had heard nothing to suggest he had acted in any way other than as a journalist," said Trelford.

Reports in London said as many as 700 people were killed in an explosion at the complex. The Iraqis later said 19 people were killed in a fuel depot blast.

About 50 of Bazoft's friends and colleagues gathered outside the Iraqi Embassy, as did Michelle de Vries, the 21-year-old daughter of Mrs. Parish.

"Only two weeks ago I got a letter from the Iraqis saying the trial would be fair, which it has obviously not been," Miss de Vries said.

Trelford said he stressed the innocence of both Bazoft and Mrs. Parish and requested that a representative of the newspaper be allowed to visit Bazoft.

"Farzad has no immediate family so his colleagues at the Observer are his family and we are asking to see him as members of a family should be allowed to," Trelford said.

Bazoft is an Iranian exile who has lived in Britain since 1975 and travels on British documents.

The British ambassador said in a British Broadcasting Corp. radio interview the Iraqi Foreign Ministry assured him Mrs. Thatcher's appeal "would be passed on as a matter of urgency."

Mandela, ANC's Tambo reunited

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Nelson Mandela and fellow African National Congress leader Oliver Tambo held an emotional reunion today after 28 years of separation.

A jubilant crowd of Swedes and Africans greeted Mandela and his wife, Winnie, at Stockholm airport. Standing in the remains of an overnight snowfall, they performed the toyi'toyi foot-stamping dance made popular by South African activists.

Mandela and Tambo, once law partners, had not seen each other since Mandela was jailed in South Africa 27 years ago and Tambo went into exile. South African President F. W. de Klerk freed Mandela and legalized the ANC last month in moves intended to promote white-black negotiations.

ANC spokesman David Kgabang described today's meeting as emotional.

"They were in university together, they started the ANC Youth League together, they opened the first black law practice in Johannesburg, they were in the heart of the struggle in the 1950s," Kgabang said.

Quayle labels talk pleasant

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle met briefly this morning with Nicaragua's outgoing President Daniel Ortega, the leftist leader long shunned by the United States, for what Quayle said was a "very pleasant" chat.

"I personally congratulated him for the way he conducted himself, especially his statement that democracy is won and will be implemented in Nicaragua," Quayle said.

The two were to meet later at a luncheon hosted by Chile's new President Patricio Aylwin and hold talks on the transfer of power in Nicaragua.

The meeting occurred as both men waited for the beginning of Mass in the municipal cathedral where dignitaries gathered to celebrate Aylwin's inauguration.

The scene was in contrast to past diplomatic occasions when high-level U.S. officials, including Quayle and Bush, shunned Ortega. At a meeting in Costa Rica last October, Bush referred to Ortega as a "little man" trying to crash the party.

Quayle later told reporters that their chat of less than one minute was "very pleasant."

PART-TIME JOB$ AVAILABLE APRIL 1

Effective April 2, the Midland Reporter-Telegram will become a morning newspaper instead of an afternoon newspaper. As a result we have several routes which will need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Due to this one-time large number of routes becoming available, now is the best time ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 50% adult and 50% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- adults who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- youths who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $150 to $500 monthly! Some motor routes make even more, although currently none are expected to be available. Depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Some collecting in person will be necessary though.

When do the papers have to be delivered by?

6:00 am Monday - Friday, and 7:00 am Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
