Plan Underway To Import Farm Labor In County

A year-around farm labor plan under the joint arrangement of the Farm Security Administration and the Vocational Agriculture department of Texas is getting established and under way in Texas and New Mexico.

If the demand for farm labor in Floyd county is sufficient, year-around workers for production of war essential crops will be supplied through P. S. A. Region 12 of which Floyd county is a part. Arvol D. Hays, rural rehabilitation supervisor for Floyd county, with offices in the courthouse, said.

Not Migratory Labor
Farmers in the county who are in need of laborers can make application to Arvol D. Hays. One of the requirements of the farmer is that he furnish livable quarters that make for contentment and comfort to the extent of healthful surroundings.

The class of labor furnished are not the migratory class of people but recruits who will come from excess labor areas who are in need of employment. Transportation of families will be furnished by the P. S. A. after contract has been agreed and signed by the head of the family, Hays explained.

Recruits have been placed in Lamesa, Portales, New Mexico, and ten are now in vocational training preparatory to assignments in this region.

Mr. Hays attended a recent Farm Labor meeting in Lubbock when the set-up was established.

Mrs. Douglas Clark Suffers Loss Of Home By Fire

In addition to anxieties that accompany a Nation at war, Mrs. Douglas Clark of the Pleasant Valley community has suffered the loss of her husband, her mother and her home, all within the past few weeks.

Fourteen days after Mr. Clark's death on February 18, the Clark home and windmill tower was destroyed by fire. Origin of the fire was unknown. The Clark home was located six miles South of Lockney.

The barn and feed stacks were saved due to a strong wind at the time that blew the flames from the direction of the barn. The loss of the home was partially covered by insurance.

Mrs. Clark left Sunday for Denver City to be with her daughter Mrs. Blanche Phegley, the only remaining member of her immediate family.

Expect Quick Subscription March Red Cross War Fund

County Schools Will Have Part, Guffee Declares

Their goal 100 per cent representation on the list of the March Red Cross War fund drive, schools of the county are completely organized and most of them already active in making up donations for the fund. County Superintendent Clarence Guffee, who also is chairman of Floyd County Chapter, American Red Cross, is of the belief that the subscriptions through the school children may actually approach the 100 per cent mark. "The children are enthusiastic over getting a chance to have a part in the campaign and their nickels, dimes and quarters are going to count up," he declared.

Every school in the county has organized itself, with only a suggestion to go on, and the ball beginning to roll is going to result in quite substantial aid to the chapter funds. In similar manner to the adult subscriptions no set amount is required in the voluntary subscriptions of the children.

Rites At Lubbock For The Former Jaunita Houghton

M. Houghton. Rites were held at St. John's Methodist church with Rev. A. H. Carleton, pastor, officiating.

Mrs. Haynes, the mother of a five weeks old baby daughter, died in a Lubbock hospital March 3, following a major operation. She was the wife of Bruce Haynes in the U. S. Army, stationed near Washington, D. C. He arrived to be with his wife for the operation and was with her when she died.

Four Floydada Business Places Burglarized

Four burglaries that netted approximately $30 were reported by Floydada business men early Tuesday morning. The burglaries appeared to have been by someone familiar with the routine of the nightwatchman, Floydada officials state.

Sheriff Lee Howard reported three suspects, two in Amarillo and one at Sweetwater, however no arrests had been made up to Wednesday noon, he said.

Fingerprint officials from the Lubbock Highway patrol office were busy in Floydada Tuesday, making investigations.

Business houses robbed were Jones Pay & Pack Grocery, Curley's Cafe, Leonard's Cafe and Magnolia Station No. 2 operated by A. J. Cline.

Several hundred new taxpayers are making returns this year that heretofore have never made reports. Of these are single salaried employees with a gross income of more than $500 a year, married couples whose gross income exceeds $1200 a year and farmers who have had larger gross incomes the past year.

Severe penalties are imposed for failing to file a return, for late filings, or for filing a fraudulent return. Returns must be in the hands of the collector Monday.

County March War Bond Quota $26,800; "Let's Do It In The Face Of Taxes," Says Glad

Americans at home will be urged to match the sacrifices of the Americans on the fighting lines during 1943, said Glad Snodgrass, chairman of the County War Bond and Stamp sales committee this week in commenting on the progress of the sale of government securities in this county to help carry on the war.

"We exceeded our quota in 1942 by a margin of $570," he pointed out, total sales being $347,334 for the year. "However, the response was not such as to mean severe self-denial or sacrifice to anybody here. The time has come now when we must be induced to do more. The war savings program is becoming universal. We who have been proud of having more can now be proud of having less."

"Our March quota of war bonds and stamps is $26,800. We must make a strong effort to meet it. Taxpayers time is here and the demand will reduce the buying power of practically all of our pocketbooks but let's do it in the face of taxes. In 1942 we did our bit. The time has come now when we must do our best."

The allotment of bond sales to Floyd county for the entire year of 1943 has been set at $401,000, an increase of nearly $5,000 per month over the quota last year.

Monday Night Deadline For Tax Returns

Income tax experts, personal service men, lawyers and bankers who have been helping with income reports, have been swamped the past two weeks vying for time as the deadline approaches Monday night, when all reports shall have been filed in the Internal Revenue collector's office at Dallas.

Several hundred new taxpayers are making returns this year that heretofore have never made reports. Of these are single salaried employees with a gross income of more than $500 a year, married couples whose gross income exceeds $1200 a year and farmers who have had larger gross incomes the past year.

Severe penalties are imposed for failing to file a return, for late filings, or for filing a fraudulent return. Returns must be in the hands of the collector Monday.

Miller Children Narrowly Escape Being Burned

Mr. and Mrs. John L. West were notified this week of the loss of their house on a ranch recently purchased 11 miles east of Silverton. Two small boys and a baby girl, children of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Miller who resided on the farm, narrowly escaped injury or being burned to death.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller were busy with evening chores. W. L. was minding his sister when the other child, Orley Gayle crept upstairs and set fire to a stack of papers. By the time Mr. and Mrs. Miller reached the house the flames were beyond control.

Bedding that belonged to Mr. West was also listed with the loss of household belongings of Mr. and Mrs. Miller, and the six-room ranch house.

Mr. Miller is a brother of Mrs. Chester Fox who resides north of Floydada. They are staying temporarily with Mr. and Mrs. Buster McCord.

People Red Hot, Anxious To Help R. E. Fry Says

Not only will Floyd county citizens subscribe the $2,750 quota set for them in the March War Fund drive of the American Red Cross, they will exceed it, R. E. Fry, county chairman of the campaign confidently predicted this week. "People are red hot to show their boys in the armed forces they are for them, and anxious to do anything that will make the lot of the servicemen better," Mr. Fry declared. "Before the drive really gets under way we are already receiving in the mails and on the streets donations to the fund, donations that are in excess, in every instance, of the donation of the same person in the drive last year."

"It is evident that the only thing we've got to do is to see the rest of the people and give them an opportunity to help."

Organization Meetings Held

The organization for the county-wide drive has been completed. The final instructions and supplies were handed out Tuesday afternoon by the county chairman in an enthusiastic meeting held in the county court room here. In every community, it was indicated, somebody is going to take time off to see the citizenship and give all a chance to help. This in spite of gasoline rationing, manpower shortage and an accumulation of work on practically every farm and in every business house.

Mr. Fry said yesterday the idea is being encouraged to make donations through banks and the mails. "Every citizen who subscribes without being asked helps make the job of the canvassers that much easier," he said.

In Floydada and Lockney a sufficient number of canvassers are being named to make sure that no homes are overlooked, that every individual has his opportunity to have a part in the War Fund drive of the Red Cross.

Motorists Are Advised As To Care Of Car

Prompted by a noticeable tendency among car owners, particularly "A" card holders, to neglect proper servicing of their vehicles because of reduced usage under gas rationing conditions, Ed Hedner, national director of service for Chevrolet, offers timely advice to all three classes of drivers.

"A" card holders are advised to follow faithfully service procedures outlined in their instruction books on spark plugs, distributor, timing, fuel filter, crankcase lubrication, battery, hose connections, thermostats, anti-freeze, steering, and windshield wipers. Batteries should be watched closely, it is explained, because limited driving may prevent charging the battery sufficiently to replace the "juice" used by the starter, lights, heater or radio.

Items to be given special attention by "B" and "C" card holders are listed as follows: spark plugs, carburetor, air filter, fuel pump, oil pump, crankcase lubrication, generator, battery, ignition and battery cables, fan belt, hose connections, steering wheel alignment, chamber and wheel bearings, brakes, clutch, chassis lubrication, body, fenders and tires.

All owners are reminded that tire conservation is the primary purpose of gas rationing and they are advised to make sure that their tires are kept properly inflated, and that all cars, not permanently stored and raised up on jacks, should be operated regularly to prevent excessive tire deterioration. Rotation of tires every 4,000 to 5,000 miles, according to a standardized, approved plan, is also recommended.

Rats can be killed in a "rat control campaign" if you are lucky enough to find where they died. J. B. Fowler of Floydada community has proof that the poison distributed by the Agricultural Victory council was strong enough to kill the rats.

He placed the poison in an old well house on Wednesday night, February 24, according to directions and the next day he removed the old floor in this house to install a new one. There he found 14 dead rats, three sick ones and three that were not affected.

Mr. Fowler stated he would not have discovered these rats had he not removed the floor because they had returned to their nest to die.

A number of reports reaching this office indicate less rat damage since the poison was distributed. Many state they have observed less fresh holes being dug around buildings and haystacks.

It is good news to find some rats were killed. We have heard too many reports about killing cats, dogs and poultry.

J. W. Clonts, a purebred Hereford breeder of Starkey community, can give you the facts about cattle grub control, because he did a good job of destroying the grub that produces the female fly that is capable of laying 500 eggs in a season.

We are looking for more men like Mr. Clonts who are interested in producing more beef, more milk and more leather for the men who are fighting our battle for freedom.

If you do not realize the total damage grubs (ox warble) do to leather ask a boy or girl who is a Victory demonstrator.

Poultry troubles are coming to our attention every day. Some of these can be corrected easily. Others require the attention of a skilled veterinarian.

We have a Poultry Clinic scheduled for Friday, March 12 at 2:30 o'clock at which time Dr. W. A. Boone, Extension Poultry Veterinarian will discuss poultry problems and poultry diseases.

A poultry clinic can provide valuable information if diseased birds are brought to the meeting. We expect to have Dr. Boone identify the trouble and suggest the best methods for control.

Do yourself a good turn by attending this meeting if you have a poultry flock or expect to purchase baby chicks.

The fellow who had a complete farm record book for 1942 surely will have less gray hair after March 15.

Now is a good time to select a record book that will give you the details of your business for this year. We have samples of these books and will be glad to discuss the many advantages if you will provide the opportunity.

Mrs. J. M. Smith To Represent Club At District Meet

The Campbell-Fairview Home Demonstration club met Thursday March 4 in an all-day meeting with Mrs. Lee Rushing as hostess. A covered dish luncheon was served at the noon hour.

Roll call was answered with "My Neighbor I Have Helped" and "My Favorite Piece of Handwork."

The council report was given by Miss Edith Wilson. The registration of Miss Edna Mae Smith was accepted and Mrs. Malvin Jarboe was elected to membership.

Mrs. J. M. Smith, president, was elected as delegate to the district meeting to be held at Lubbock in the spring.

A member of the club in the Plainview sanitarium is to be remembered with a gift.

Demonstrations were given by Miss Wilson on remodeling chairs. Materials suitable to use for different type chairs and cushions was displayed, including a chair 90 years old which had been refinished and reupholstered to become a beautiful piece of furniture.

At the meeting Miss Wilson demonstrated how a chair could be reupholstered with Home Kong grass and stuffed with shucks. This was very interesting to the members.

Mrs. M. J. McNeill gave a demonstration on handwork which included hot mats made by covering pasteboard with 1/4 inch strips of shucks and edging this with a roll of shucks cut 1/2 inch wide. She also showed mats made of the shucks braided from 1/2 inch strips to form round and oblong mats. The shuck roll demonstrated on hot mats can also be used to upholster chairs.

Those present were Mrs. W. H. Bethel, Mrs. J. M. Smith, Mrs. M. J. McNeill, Mrs. L. D. Woodward, Mrs. Malvin Jarboe, Mrs. P. O. Conner, Mrs. Mal Jarboe, Miss Wilson and Mrs. Rushing, hostess.

STATE NOTE STAMP TAX LAW REPEALED IN TEXAS

People who draw up legal instruments will be interested in a repeal of the State Note Stamp law. The law required a tax of 10 cents on the $100 as described in mortgages and deeds of trust.

County Clerks of Texas have been notified by State Treasurer Jesse James to discontinue the sale of note stamps. Country Clerk Margaret Collier said.

The state's application for a writ governing the sale was refused by the Supreme court, the letter stated.

Mrs. Little Mills of Lorenzo, spent several days last week in Floydada visiting her cousins, Bob, Ham and Grover Smith and their families, leaving on Saturday for Dallas, where she will make her home for an indefinite time.

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Mateler of near Plainview, visited in Floydada Monday with their son, Leonard Mateler and family.

Miss Jimmie Poore of Lubbock was a business visitor in Floydada Monday.

Whether the cold that marked the first 10 days of March has been more severe or has just seemed that way, stockmen and dairy people say it has seemed to "hurt" more than freezing and low temperatures back in the winter time. Saturday morning when the thermometer read eight degrees above zero, was the hardest half-day out doors people recall in years. Many a man who went out to milk had to come in and warm between hitches. This was more especially true if the mules were trying to break out of the lot, or the calves or the cattle got mixed, or something else happened. Things do happen, you know, especially when the "old man" tries to take a shortcut on a cold morning and make the animals do a way they are not accustomed to do. A cow brute sure is a creature of habit, cold mornings the same as warm.

Look for people with itching fingers to get more troublesome as rationing goes along. Likely few, if any, will be really hungry, but as scarcity, real or apparent, becomes more pronounced, thievery will become more common. It is a part of human nature for miserliness and taking things to go together. Your cellar doors, your junk house, your odds and ends about the place may begin to disappear unexplainably. A lock on the doors may be helpful for the afternoon you are away from home. Also, you may wonder some morning what has become of that soap grease. As fats are rationed the soap supply will become more limited. People will have to learn again to make their own, you among the others. Which makes waste fats more precious and more likely to disappear.

Full planting of idle farm lands, a need that is made evident by the thoroughly alarming reports of food and feed shortage prospects, is a thing the farmer has his mind on as they get ready to go into the planting season. Some let-up in the cotton acreage allotment plan seems to be in the making for West Texas where the production of cotton (with the oils and protein in the seed) can be accomplished at the lowest cost per pound of any similar area. One thing the federal authorities are working on that we must hope will develop is an ample supply of men to help harvest when harvest time comes. With that in mind every farmer is going to plant every acre he feels he can plant and cultivate. We are beginning to realize the war could be lost on the home front and the farming man begins to realize that what he has been telling labor and industry is really true—the country lives off of what the farmer digs out of the ground.

For a good many people it has been easier and cheaper to use or sell all of their pea and bean seed and go to the seed dealer in the spring when they get ready to plant. However, this year to get seed from your dealer you will have to do a lot of signing and seeing the board and things of that kind before you can obtain seed without having to resort to your point rationing book, losing points in order to plan for summer and fall supply. However, everybody nearly has neighbors who have some seed and in all likelihood there will be more seed swapping this spring than ever before in this section.

A young woman in Boston dislocated her neck by yawning. We hope we never meet the bore who gave her such a pain in the neck.

If the Department of Agriculture had wanted people to take the Victory garden idea seriously they couldn't have done anything better to make people sit up and take notice, than to put peas and beans on the rationing list. This is true at least in the southwest. When peas and beans get short on the nation's food list the situation must be serious, is the average man's thought. He is going to plant a Victory garden and he is going to make every other row some kind of beans or peas. They're regular diet for folks in this part of the world. And next fall is not going to find many families without plenty in cans and on shelves and down in the cellar.

Superiority of American-made planes over the planes the Japs are now throwing against us in the Pacific is an encouraging sign. It may be the planes are not superior, but that the boys we send over are. Or it may be a combination of superiority of men and planes. Anyway more of our boys are coming out alive from the fights over the southwest region of the Pacific where the war is raging than we had reason to hope when the fighting first began. It is a most hopeful sign. It is hopeful as to the shipping situation, too, when MacArthur is able to put so many land-based planes of several types into the air at one time as he did in the Bismark sea last week.

How many boys does the high plains country have in the fighting in North Africa? Word is coming back slowly, but it is evident we have quite a number from Floyd county, who, if their training has been completed, are now or soon will be on the fighting fronts. For the sake of keeping military secrets from the enemy little news that really tells the story is leaking out from the pens of the men in Africa. Or if they are writing it the censor is using his eraser freely. It looks like a shame for a man's family not to know more about what their boy is doing but one leak might cost scores of lives, and all hands are teamed up to keep the enemy in the dark so far as possible.

Will the War Department and the Public Health authorities be able to head off the scourge of epidemic that always has, in every major war, killed off the population? It is a hard fight that is being made. Unless a new type of disease should hit, a new germ to play havoc before the medical men can learn about it and get it under control, we may have our first war in history that does not take its toll either during or immediately following the war. Remember, last time it was influenza. People who thought they were taking the old-fashioned gripe found themselves practically dead before realizing a new scourge was abroad in the land. One of the means the army is taking is to have the newly-inducted men given their "shots" for everything from yellow fever to small-pox and back again. Of the Four Horsemen it is difficult to say which is the worst, but pestilence is usually the hardest on the young and old left at home. But health authorities here can't help what may be happening in France or Yugo-Slavia or the Low Countries. Want is abroad in those areas, it is known, and undoubtedly the hell hole that was Poland is cooking up something that does not bode good for the health of the civilized world.

As A Farm Woman Thinks

By Nelle Witt Spikes

This for the weather report: We have not needed any fans for the last week. No forecast, government regulations. Of course I could if allowed.

The major problems on the farm this month have been trying to keep warm, wishing there were no cows to milk on cold mornings and nights, but the one that makes the farmers scratch his head and almost weep in despair is the same called making out an income tax. In vain he looks for such simple things as profit or loss on hogs or cows, milk and eggs. He is frightened away from A to H with such high-sounding words as "obsolescence," "fiduciary" and "amortization." I wonder if an income tax report blank could be made in simple, understandable English? There seems to me no good reason why an average person could not fill out his own income tax report if it were made clear.

It has been too cold to run in the hall, and pile things on the stairway as usual, so the other morning my husband came into the kitchen and said: "Wonder what you would do if there were no chairs for you to pile things on." And I said nary a word as I saw him toss his coat on one chair and his cap and gloves on another.

We have gone the Arkansawyer one better. He keeps his hogs under the house according to the "best" information, while we keep ours in the house near the fire. Two weeks ago we were left with five tiny white pigs to care for somehow, the weather turned bitter and cold. In the house they have to stay, "hog heaven," as Wilma calls it. One is very greedy and tries to knock off the rest from the nipple even after she is full and her white sides sticking out, two have to be enticed to drink a few drops. Trouble, yes. But hogs are needed and perhaps some day, these troublesome pigs will take their place on the market.

One of the feature articles on hats says: A hat that is worn high on the brow is the really newest important development in spring millinery. Of course it is a very extreme fashion after wearing many hats at least down to the eyebrows, but it is very smart and decidedly new and is particularly becoming to the great majority of women.

I think I quoted the following from Liberty Hyde Bailey last spring but it is even more fitting this year as there are so many new gardens. It shows that a garden grows more things than onion and potatoes, and this year, gardeners will find peace in a troubled world while working in their gardens, as well as vegetables for their food supply.

The Farm Garden

A garden is as new today as when men and women first grew plants long before history was recorded. It comes fresh from seeds and roots, grown of new rains and sunshine sprung from the tireless earth. The experience is different in every season. New hopes are to be fulfilled. New kind of plants are to be grown. We are relieved from the turmoil in which mankind lives, comforted by the calmness of growing things. A garden maintains our faith and confidence.

There is much work to be done around the place. Strawberries need to be dug and moved soon, there are some rose bushes to be moved from the lawn I planted last year. Iris roots need to be dug, thinned and reset and I want to plant sweet peas so they will bloom before hot weather. I find these tasks easier to think about than to do these cold days, however, but this will add to the work to do later. Of course we need to plant most of the space to garden sass, but do, please, plant some flowers. They will give beauty and comfort to all who pass as well as to the raiser. Zinnias give such a splash of color, a few dahila roots grow as easy as tomato plants and cosmos and petunias and marigolds are "Musts." Mrs. Polphrey of McCoy started me on flower raising. I went there for fruit and the children enjoyed the flowers so much, she said, "Why don't you raise flowers for them?" I had always wanted flowers but the yard was not fenced and I told her so. She said, "Why just plant some in the garden rows." I shall never forget being handed a bouquet of gay zinnias with ferny green asparagus by sweet Mrs. Martin of Emma every time I went to her house. So let's don't forget the flowers, especially for the children.

And So On

By Harriet Swayze
Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to his wife has said,
"Next week I'm going to mend that chair,
And tack that loose pad on the stair
And while I'm at it, guess I should
Fill up the bin with kindling wood
Yes, dear, I'll clean the cellar, too—
And build that shelf I promised you
What's that? you say the front door squeaks?
The faucet in the bathroom leaks?
Tomorrow night, as sure as fate,
(That is if I don't get home late),
I'll mend the fence, takes just one board,
And then I'll fix the iron cord,
A couple nails, a little glue,
Will make that kitchen stool like new.
I'll get all those odd jobs done yet,
Now where'd you put the sport page, pet."

MADE IN JAPAN

Your Gas Ration Book is a Gift from Hirohito!

As clearly as if the words "MADE IN JAPAN" were printed on your Gasoline Ration Book, you know that the Japs are responsible for the rationing of your tire mileage.

When the Tokyo toughs seized the Netherlands East Indies and Malaya, our chief sources of supply of raw rubber immediately disappeared.

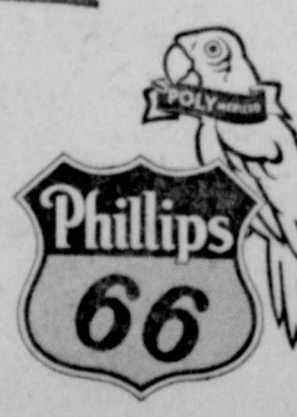

That is why your driving had to be drastically cut down. Not to save gasoline, which is plentiful in this area; but to save rubber, which is short all over the country. And rubber must be saved... or we risk losing the war.

The plain, patriotic fact is that rationing gasoline is the simple, direct way to accomplish the sincerely avowed purpose of Rubber Administrator Jeffers: "To keep automobiles on the road, not to take them off."

Gasoline rationing and the U. S. synthetic rubber program are both dedicated to supplying the rubber for the combat needs of our boys from Guadalcanal to Gafsa, as well as for essential transportation here at home. Phillips is proud that its resources, experience, and long peacetime research have qualified it for an important role in the wartime synthetic rubber program. To this vital job, and to the needed production of 100 octane aviation motor fuel, we are wholeheartedly giving our best efforts twenty-four hours a day.

For you and for us, winning the war comes first. Patriotic drivers have as willingly accepted the restrictions on buying gasoline as we have on selling it. And we confidently promise you that when victory comes, today's concentration on petroleum research will bring you almost undreamed of improvement in the Phillips 66 gasoline which will power your car and the Phillips rubber on which it will roll.

Cloyd McClung Writes Parents Of Many Trips

Rev. and Mrs. S. R. McClung of Perryton recently received the following letter from their son, Cloyd who has been in the U. S. service for the past year. The McClungs are former residents of Floydada, while Rev. McClung was pastor of the First Baptist church.

February 26, 1943.

Dearest Folks: Will you notice where I am and where I am writing this letter from. Really I am thrilled to death to visit here in the Baptist Sunday school board and I tell you that there is plenty that I am soaking in and enjoying all of it. Today B. B. McKinney took me out to dinner and I have a dinner date with his wife at their home for tomorrow night. Then on Sunday I am to eat dinner with the W. P. Phillips. I am joining the First Baptist church here on this Sunday and of course people here are perfectly grand to me. I think it has been a great thrill for me to visit the board here as it was to see the pyramids of Egypt.

I arrived back in the Continental United States on the 23rd of this month and had to immediately move to Nashville to my new address. So I was unable to write to you. I reported here and have been ill most of the time. I think what is wrong is that they have started giving me yellow fever, typhoid and tetanus shots again and I have been running a little temperature since arriving. However I have not been able to sleep very much and I have been a little restless even though I have been about worn out.

I have been to the following countries, since you last heard from me: Puerto Rico, British Guiana, Brazil, Netherlands Guiana, Africa, Nigeria, Egypt, Palestine and Iraq and Persia. Of course I have rocks from all of those places. Imagine what the porters would say when they carried my bag. They would ask if I was carrying rocks. Of course I would say yes. Of the trip was most wonderful and I was thrilled to death to be able to spend two days in the Holy Land and visit Jerusalem and Bethlehem.

I have made application for a leave but will not be able to get one this trip but maybe soon I shall be able to come home—maybe after the next trip. Airplanes are moving too quickly now. I have some gifts for all of you and will give them to you when I am able to come home. Also I will bring the rocks then. I may ship some of the things home soon but if I do I do not want you to get into them until I shall be able to tell you all about them. I have all kinds of foreign money and also am ready to sit down and start talking and just rattle on an on and on. If Carroll gets a leave let me know when he is to be home and I shall do my darndest to get on of those things that they call leaves at the same time he is to be there. Give regards to all the folks.

When I arrived here I had 71 letters and there was quite a time of reading all of them. They were from about 40 people so you can imagine how many letters I have to write to get caught up with my correspondence. However it was a great thrill to get all of those letters.

My goodness, we think over here we are feeling the war pinch a little but I can tell you that there is nothing at all compared to that which they are feeling over in the territory that I have been to. Disease and filth is everywhere that one may look. I would look around a little and even tho I had just taken a bath or shower—seldom done—I would feel filthy.

PITY THE POOR WAITRESS

There are many different types of restaurant customers who are anathema to waitresses, and according to some expert observers, they range from those who can't make up their minds during a terrible rush to the "stiff" who never tips.

Diners of these and other types have been listed in seventeen different categories and may lead the reader to feel that a "waitress' lot is not a happy one."

Mrs. Spignesi characterizes as "cafe Casanovas," those males who think the tips they leave entitle them to liberties or to make any kind of a remark.

"They're the ones," she writes, "who mistake a pleasant business manner for one of encouragement."

Then, of course, there are the brand of coffee sippers who, when the cup is nearly empty, growl, "the coffee is cold." That used to be good now and then for another cup. Not now, though. Rationing.

MARKS WRITES A MEMO TO REICHSKULTURKAMMER

Recently, in New York City, the Public Library held an exhibit called, "Books the Nazi Have Banned," and as the world knows, the list includes some of the world's greatest literature.

The Nazis have also performed a similar purge in the field of music, banning compositions of their own masters as well as American music, particularly if the composer was "non-Aryan," and especially if freedom and liberty were the theme.

But, as George Marek, points out, we in this country do not hesitate to continue enjoyment of German music.

"We believe in our form of government, in our method of living," writes Marek. "But in fighting for this belief we are not afraid of your 'German' music. Since the beginning of the war, German music has been played here as much as before the war. It has been listened to with unabated enthusiasm. We do not really care where Beethoven and Mozart and Brahms were born. We care only about what they set down on paper. We are playing even the works of your Composer-Laureate, Richard Strauss; though we detest the old fellow as a man, he did write some splendid music. Our Metropolitan gave Salome this season, with a French singer and a Czech conductor, both of whom had been driven away by you. All this saves us no end of trouble and gives us no end of pleasure."

The man who gets along best in this world is the one who can look happy when he isn't.

Acorns, the seeds which each oak tree drops annually by the hundreds, and which were used during the Revolutionary and Civil Wars as a coffee substitute, are again being used today as suitable for the same purpose. They are prepared as a beverage by being roasted and ground, and then boiled in the same manner as coffee.

Dinner: "Waiter, there's a fly in my ice cream!"

Waiter: "Let him freeze. He was in the soup last night."

Drastic over-cutting of the forests in Nazi Germany began shortly after German's conservative forest organizations were taken over by the government.

To clear forest lands for the growing of needed food crops, pioneer New York and Pennsylvania settlers had to fell about 6,000 trees per farm.

About half of the growth of new saw timber in the South consists of four favorite species of pine.

All trees have a period of youth when they grow rapidly, followed by a period in which growth slackens and is followed eventually by decay. The fastest growing tree in the world is the balsa which frequently attains a height of 75 feet in five years.

Point Rationing Accepted With Little Comment

Patrons in most cases have been slow in spending their points for rationed goods this week according to reports from Floydada grocerymen. They are either waiting to see how the thing works out or just reluctant to let their coupons get away, it appears.

Some housewives have spent the entire month's points while others are taking the advice of merchants in dividing their points into possibly three purchasing periods. At any rate point rationing has become an accepted feature of food purchasing, easily understood with a minimum of study and making little difference in the merchant's stock of goods, with the exception of a few high point items that had just as well be off the shelves, as one merchant stated.

THE ENZYME SAVES TIME

Department of Agriculture investigations of enzyme—nature's time savers that speed up chemical processes in plants and animals—have developed new processes for preparing these protein-digesting substances. They are used with foods and medicines and for other purposes. The Agricultural Research Administration. Special studies have been made of the enzymes that occur in the papaya and the pineapple. These are papain and bromelain.

The Enzyme Research Laboratory of the Bureau of Agricultural Chemistry and Engineering finds that papain—from the latex of green papaya—can be kept active longer by mixing salt with the paste. Sanitary preparation also helps. Ways have been found to produce pure crystals of papain, a product more desirable for medical use.

The commercial papain is now widely used as a meat tenderizer. It stands considerable heat, as in cooking, whereas the bromelain of the pineapple is destroyed by heat. Ripening of the papaya destroys this enzyme, but the ripe pineapple retains active bromelain, which explains why raw pineapple juice cannot be used to flavor gelatin desserts.

The enzyme digests the protein in all of these protein-digesting enzymes digest or "tenderize" meat. Various enzymes are used for various purposes, the Department scientists say. Diastase in malt, for example, is a factor in brewing beer. Rennin from the calf stomach is used in making certain kinds of cheese. Workers who handle figs and cantaloupes and some other fruits suffer from soreness around the finger nails, caused by enzymes that digest skin proteins. Raw pineapple has long been favored for "clearing out" a sore throat.

MORE FARM CROP INSURANCE POLICIES ARE EXPECTED

Increased participation in Federal cotton crop insurance is expected in 1943, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The Department has announced a new reduced premium plan and continued coverage of crop losses due to war risks and to shortages of labor, fertilizer, insecticides, and farm machinery when these cannot be obtained.

Last year growers on 172,000 farming units were insured for 75 percent—or 50 percent, if they chose—of their average yields of staple and cottonseed. Many suffered heavy damage or complete crop loss and were promptly paid by the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation.

Premium rates may be reduced as much as 50 percent for growers who insure their crops each year, without interruption, and do not sustain heavy crop losses during the period. In other words, producers accumulating a "premium backlog" will be permitted to draw on their premium reserves, in payment of future premiums, for as much as 50 percent.

County AAA committees are warning growers that to be sure of a guaranteed crop income this year they must sign insurance applications before seed is planted and before the closing date of the 1943 sign-up. Farmers desiring short term loans during the growing season will find that most banks and lending agencies consider their crop insurance contracts satisfactory collateral.

During the past year, the life insurance agents of the country set up war bond purchase plans for 34,000 workers daily, the average daily amount of sales and pledges being $5,500,000 bonds.

Mrs. Charlie Camden and little granddaughter Rose Marie Custer of Amarillo spent Wednesday and Thursday in Floydada with relatives.

Westex Teachers Assn. Makes Convention Plans

Instead of its annual Spring convention, the West Texas Teachers association is bringing its program directly to the teachers and people over the twenty-eight counties of this area, according to information released this week from the office of County Superintendent Clarence Guffee.

According to the plan travel for the teachers will be eliminated and more school interested people will have an opportunity to share its benefits. By bringing the convention to the teachers, some help can be given the new teachers. Since the schools constitute the strongest line of civilian defense during these critical days, the officials of the Teachers association feel that this is the time to strengthen this line.

This organization has secured the services of one of the most outstanding speakers and school men of the nation, Dr. Willis A. Sutton, Superintendent of Schools, Atlanta, Georgia, who will speak at eight places over the West Texas district. Dr. Sutton is an inspirational speaker who can help teachers and patrons solve the war problems now confronting education. All teachers, trustees, and friends of the public schools are invited to hear this man at the place nearest their school.

Dr. Sutton's itinerary will include: March 29 Big Spring, 3 p. m.; Odessa 8 p. m.; March 30 Lamesa 3 p. m., Brownfield 8 p. m.; March 31 Spur 3 p. m., Lubbock 8 p. m.; and April 1 Littlefield 3 p. m., and Plainview 8 p. m. Each of these places was selected on the basis of location in the district, availability to other schools, and size of the school where meeting will be held.

SHORT METHOD ESTIMATES ARMY RATIONS FOOD VALUE

A short cut method of estimating what vitamins and other food values are contained in the Army's market basket—that is, food delivered to the mess—has been worked out by home economists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with Army representatives. The streamlined computing method is now in use in Army posts over the country, and is nearly as accurate as the previous system of obtaining this information, which took five times as long.

Principles back of the short computing method have for some time been used in the Bureau of Home Economics in its dietary studies. For purposes of the method, foods—fresh or canned—are grouped into 17 classes and the average composition of each class is indicated. Making allowances for losses in nutritive value in preparation is the final step.

SAFEGUARDING SUPPLY

"Many city people may not realize what all farm people know, that agriculture is an occupation in which you have to look a long way ahead," said Secretary Wickard in asking for an increase in planting of feed grains this year. "That point came up early in January when we were discussing the plan for more corn acreage this year. The early part of 1943 is the time to head off a scarcity of feed that might develop into a scarcity of food two years later. By planting more feeds this year, farmers are safeguarding consumers against a meat and milk and egg shortage in 1945."

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Eubanks, Mrs. J. M. Summerlin and Mrs. Watt Seay visited Monday in Lubbock in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Eubanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Terry are here this week on a visit with Mr. Terry's mother, Mrs. J. R. Terry and other relatives and at Tulia. Terry is stationed with the signal corps at Drew field, Florida.

The per family stake in government war financing in this country now amounts to over $800, including $302 in war bonds and baby bonds directly owned, $284 through government bond holdings of the life insurance companies, and around $220 owned indirectly through savings deposits.

McLain Relates More George Klutz Yarns

(By R. E. L. McLain)

In my story about George Klutz, some time ago, I forgot some stories he vagaries of time had skipped my mind until Claude V. Hall of Commerce, Texas, a former Floyd county boy but now a part of the faculty of the East Texas Teachers college at Commerce, in a letter freshened up my old think tank, and I will here relate:

My people lived at Seymour and on one occasion Klutz passed through route to Denton and naturally stopped off for the night with the McLains and they enquired about old Baylor people who had migrated to Floyd and Briscoe and they asked about the Beelers. Bill Beeler, a relative of my mother by marriage, and a beautiful head of hair and one flowing beard in which he took much pride; besides his beard Beeler was possessed with the reputation of grossly exaggerating in all his conversations, and it was regarded as a penal offense to quote him in a crowd. Well, to get down to the story; Beeler in trying to bridge one of his horses became abusive of the animal and the horse threw his head around and struck Bill on the side of the head, on some nerve, and in a few days Bill's hair and beard fell out, leaving him as bald as an onion—no beard or hair on his head or face—and he continued that way to his death. In answer to the query about Beeler, Klutz remarked that Beeler accidentally told the truth one time and it so surprised him that his hair and beard just fell off. Later in the night, after the folks were almost asleep, George yelled out: "Colonel McLain, did you know that Beeler had the most remarkable cows in Briscoe county? Why, every one of them have twin calves."

Searches For Wife
Mr. Klutz revived this one: One cold, blustery day in 1891, Klutz drove down to Floydada in his buggy hitched to a span of paint horses. In those days Arbuckle Bros. brand of coffee signatures were exchanged for premiums. George was asked where he got that span of paints. George, as quick as a flash replied: "I sent Arbuckle signatures for them horses."

At another time, while George was searching for a wife, he attempted to date a young lady at Plainview for a drive but she turned him down. But he was not daunted in the least and dressed up a dummy girl and drove all afternoon with the dummy at his side, carrying on a one-sided conversation and attracting considerable attention from the populace, wondering who George was riding with.

Attends Wedding
Another time George was invited to the marriage of a relative down in Denton, and a grand time accompanied by an affair and formal entertainment was indulged in. Arriving just in time to take part in the dinner—the throng was large and everyone had to stand at the table—which everyone participated. George was dressed in an exaggerated cowboy style, and had on an old, greasy duck overcoat with a piece of rope for a belt. He hadn't shaved in several days and he made his appearance still more ludicrous by his demeanor, while he was gulping down the grub. He poured syrup into his plate, heked off the dripping pitcher spout with his tongue and kept up an animated chatter as he ate; talking and puffing to the amusement of the guests and the utter astonishment of relatives, but George made himself thoroughly at home.

Asks For a Wife
In 1889 settlers began moving into Motley county and among the number was J. H. Lizenby with his wife, two daughters and a son, and they settled on what was then called White Flat, northwest of the Matador ranch headquarters, and he built a dugout and the necessary pole sheds and corrals for his stock. It was not far from the section that George Klutz had taken up, for the benefit of the company, so George went over to investigate the new settlers. He rode up to the place and found one of the daughters sitting on the top pole of the corral, a fine looking young lady who afterward married Bob Echols. He hailed her with: "Who the hell is trying to live here?" She told him that her father, J. H. Lizenby, had settled on the section. "Well, you tell that old red-headed son-of-a-seacock to get his outfit out of here at once, or the Matadors will burn him out, or this is his land and no damneester can come in here." Then George stopped and said, "Say, gal, you are terribly pretty with that red hair and I want a wife." But the pretty miss did not give George any encouragement and he afterwards wanted Mr. Lizenby to invite him to call on the girls but the old man did not encourage George as a prospective son-in-law. They were however the best of friends afterwards.

New Story
Another story about George Klutz which has never been told till now is about two business partners who had overbought and decided to save themselves, had quite a number of horses which they transferred to a friend who was also a friend in need, and everything was passing off smoothly enough but the assistant became involved with the safety of a relative and insisted on leaving the community at once, so to keep matters in status quo, he transferred the title to the horses to George as an emergency. After all matters had cleared up the partners asked George to transfer the horses back to them and George just kept on owning the horses. He told them that they had tried to evade their just obligation and he would keep the horses as his reward for honesty but if they wanted to air the matter in public, "just crack your whip." That settled the controversy and George kept the horses.

Pay Roll Robbery

One day I was reading an account of a pay-roll robbery that had taken place in New Mexico a few days before and suspicion pointed to three men who had been employed by the Matador ranch and I looked up to the north of town, along the line fence which attached to the Quitaque pasture and ran south to a few miles east of where Floydada is now situated, and saw two men and a pack animal at a gate entering the Matadors, about three miles north of the town of Dellaplain. A suspicion entered my mind that those were the men who were suspected of the crime. I noticed that the men traveled in direction of the windmill that was the camp of John K. Fullingim, line rider for the ranch. The suspicion grew and I was obsessed of the desire to notify the ranch headquarters but had no means of immediate communication so I just waited. The next morning John K. came to town and told me that the two men had ate supper at his place and went on to the ranch and when the men arrived at the "bunk house," Joe Beckman, who was the first sheriff after organization of the county, and Jeff Boone, who was Joe's bedmate, walked into the bunk-house and arrested the two men and turned them over to the sheriff of Childress county who took them back to New Mexico where they were tried and convicted of the crime and executed by hanging. The men had been employed on the Matadors and had been transferred to the New Mexico ranch where they conspired up the plot to rob a mine paymaster of $75,000. Part of that money was buried in the sandhills of Bailey or Cochran counties and was never recovered. Joe Beckman was elected the first sheriff of the county when it was organized in 1889 and was a model officer until he accidentally shot his old bedmate, Boone, and was afterwards killed in a fight with the Texas Rangers at a Warmer dugout in the Comanche reservation which is now a part of Cotton county, Oklahoma, in 1895.

FARMER'S WIFE SAYS HUSBANDS DO WORK IN GARDENS SOMETIMES

Floydada, Texas, March 6, 1943.

Dear Sir:
The past two weeks you have said in your editorials that farm women will not let their husbands help make a garden. How many farm women can you name or point out, that won't let their husbands help in the garden, when they have time? My husband helps me when he has time and I sure let him, too. Did you realize that when it is about time to plant a garden, the farm men are busy listing their land or planting some crop?

You say that the town women telephone their husbands when they are busy to come home and get the garden seed into the ground. What is the wife doing that she couldn't do it? We farm women are not that helpless.

It would be foolish for a farm wife to go out and call her husband from the field listing or whatever he may be doing to come in and plant the garden, seed. We have more respect for his work than that. It would also look rather lazy, don't you think. I don't have to make my husband do my work. I am glad I am able to do it by myself if necessary.

Most town men get in from work early enough on the week days that they have time to work in the garden and enjoy it. But take a farmer that is listing, planting or plowing, he is at it from sun up until sundown. Then comes in and has cows to milk, hogs to feed and other chores to do. (Wives help them too). He doesn't find much time to help the wife to garden and most of us would appreciate his help. Most of us have more than a little 2 by 4 garden space in the back yard to work, too.

When my husband has time to help me, I don't chase him out to town to talk war and politics. But when he is busy at his work, I am not too helpless to do it by myself. I am sure he doesn't think that I am too, too cruel to him, because I don't call him from his work to do mine.

Yours truly,

A Farmer's Wife.

WE SELL WAR BONDS

3 letters spelling ACID

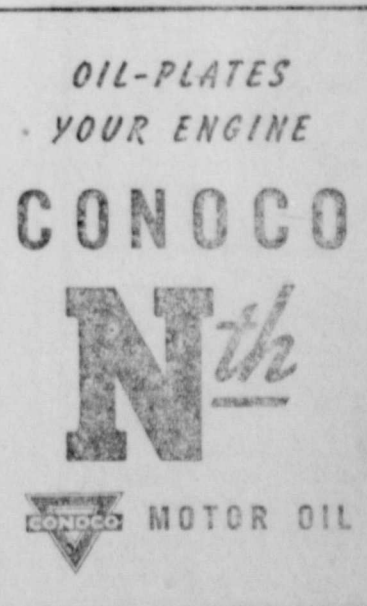

Your engine's cylinders can't stop empty. They'll either load up with fresh raw gas when you shut 'er off, or get caught with stale burned gas they can't belch out.

In those useless leftovers are corrosive acids, trapped in the engine you can't replace—along with moist "sweat" as the interior cools. Any chemistry freshman knows these causes of biting corrosion, always present—long before wartime. But when your car was in frequent use, at speeds that thoroughly warmed the engine, it helped to offset the worst acid effects. How different today, when mileage, speed, and average engine heat are all down—giving acid its chance to run riot!

You can't open the engine and keep sponging out any acids or other moisture, while your car stands little used nowadays. But without extra fuss or extravagance you can change to Conoco Nth motor oil and get your engine internally OIL-PLATED.

You're familiar with anti-corrosive plating...like chromium-plating. Just as closely, this protective OIL-PLATING will be kept surfaced to delicate parts by advanced synthetic means—as described in the celebrated patent on Conoco Nth. Though your gasoline-rationed car makes few runs, you can combat corrosion between times. For you can keep your engine OIL-PLATED by changing to Conoco Nth this Spring at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Continental Oil Company

Ration Board Issues Warning To Drivers

Approximately 600 applicants for gasoline rationing B and C books, whose books expired March 1 are violating rules and regulations of the War Price and Rationing board, and laying themselves liable to heavy fine, officials of the Rationing board warned this week.

Local gasoline dealers also are taking chances when they sell gas to holders of expired coupons. Written on the face of the rationing book is a notice that books must be returned to the rationing board within five days after expiration date, for renewal.

Applicants for renewal books are required to take with them their tire inspection record, and the expired book form. Civilians are also warned to consult the board if in doubt about the expiration date. He in no case should the applicant tamper with the date. The change must be made by officials of the board, only.
