

News, police begin new era of coverage

By ANTHONY RANGLES
Editor

A ban on coverage of the Pampa Police Department that lasted more than two months ended today after Police Chief J.J. Ryzman set up a new system of making public documents available to the public and the press.

The new procedures came as a result of an opinion by Attorney General Jim Mattox that backed up a formal request for documents by The Pampa News. Pampa police will now prepare and make public 1. a jail roster, giving the name, age, dates, offenses, and bail information on anyone being held in city jail; 2. arrest reports, with the same information on anyone being arrested; and 3. a radio log, listing the complaints coming in to the police department, their time, location, and disposition. Previously, these were prepared in the officer's handwriting for the benefit and eyes of the police department. Now, Ryzman said, they will be typed and made available to the public.

The attorney general's opinion is more far-reaching than just Pampa's dispute between the police department and the newspaper. The opinion applies to all state and local law enforcement agencies in the state, meaning more information should be available to the press and public alike.

Ryzman told Pampa News Publisher Louise Fletcher and Managing Editor Anthony Randles in a meeting Monday afternoon that the new disclosure ruling meant hiring a typist to do the work that officers previously had done by hand, but that he was willing to comply with the ruling in full.

To implement the state's order, and lessen the burden on office procedures, Ryzman said the public will have access to these new documents by request each weekday morning from 8:30 to 10:30, and on Saturday from 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. A clerk will be on hand to supervise and answer any questions.

In a two-page directive written to officers on the police force, Ryzman said police officers will now have the right to answer questions at the scene of an accident, if they choose to do so.

The newspaper dropped its coverage of police department activities May 27 when it was learned certain names were not being released to the media for publication. The people whose names were omitted were members of influential or well-to-do families in Pampa. The newspaper was criticized for not printing these names by people who knew the arrests had been made, and for that reason the paper ceased its coverage until guarantees that all names would be released to the public had been made.

In Monday's meeting, Ryzman assured the newspaper executives that any omissions in the past had been accidental, and has directed his staff to release the names off all arrestees except for juveniles, and all victims except those who are victims of rape or other sexual offenses.

This was completely agreeable to the newspaper representatives, as the paper wouldn't print those names even if they were furnished.

The attorney general's ruling followed the original denial of the newspaper's request by the City of Pampa and its forwarding the paper's request to Mattox's office.

Ma Bell goofs...

But guess who gets to pay for it...?

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Texas telephone customers statewide may end up chipping in extra money to pay for a $250,000 goof made in compiling the new San Antonio telephone directory, Southwestern Bell Co. officials say.

A "computer glitch" was responsible for leaving 177 customers out of the directory, including Randolph Air Force Base, the United States Automobile Association, the University of Texas Health Science Center and Trinity and St. Mary's universities, according to Bell spokesman Marco Gilliam.

"People make computers glitch," he said. "That's the first thing we checked."

The 177 customers have about 1,500 different phone numbers that normally are included in the directory, Gilliam said.

The estimated $250,000 cost of inserting the numbers is "the normal cost of doing business" and company officials may attempt to recoup the money in some future rate hike request to the Public Utility Commission, he said.

Any attempt to recover the cost would be spread out to customers statewide, not just San Antonio, he said.

The $250,000 cannot be included in the company's rate hike request totaling $1.7 billion, which currently is pending before the commission, he said.

A four-page section — specially printed on pink paper — will be inserted in the local white pages listing the telephone numbers of the customers accidentally dropped from the directory, Gilliam said.

A sticker also will be pasted on the front of the book to alert customers to the insert, he said.

The directories are printed and bound by an independent company in Houston, but the type is set by phone company computers in Dallas.

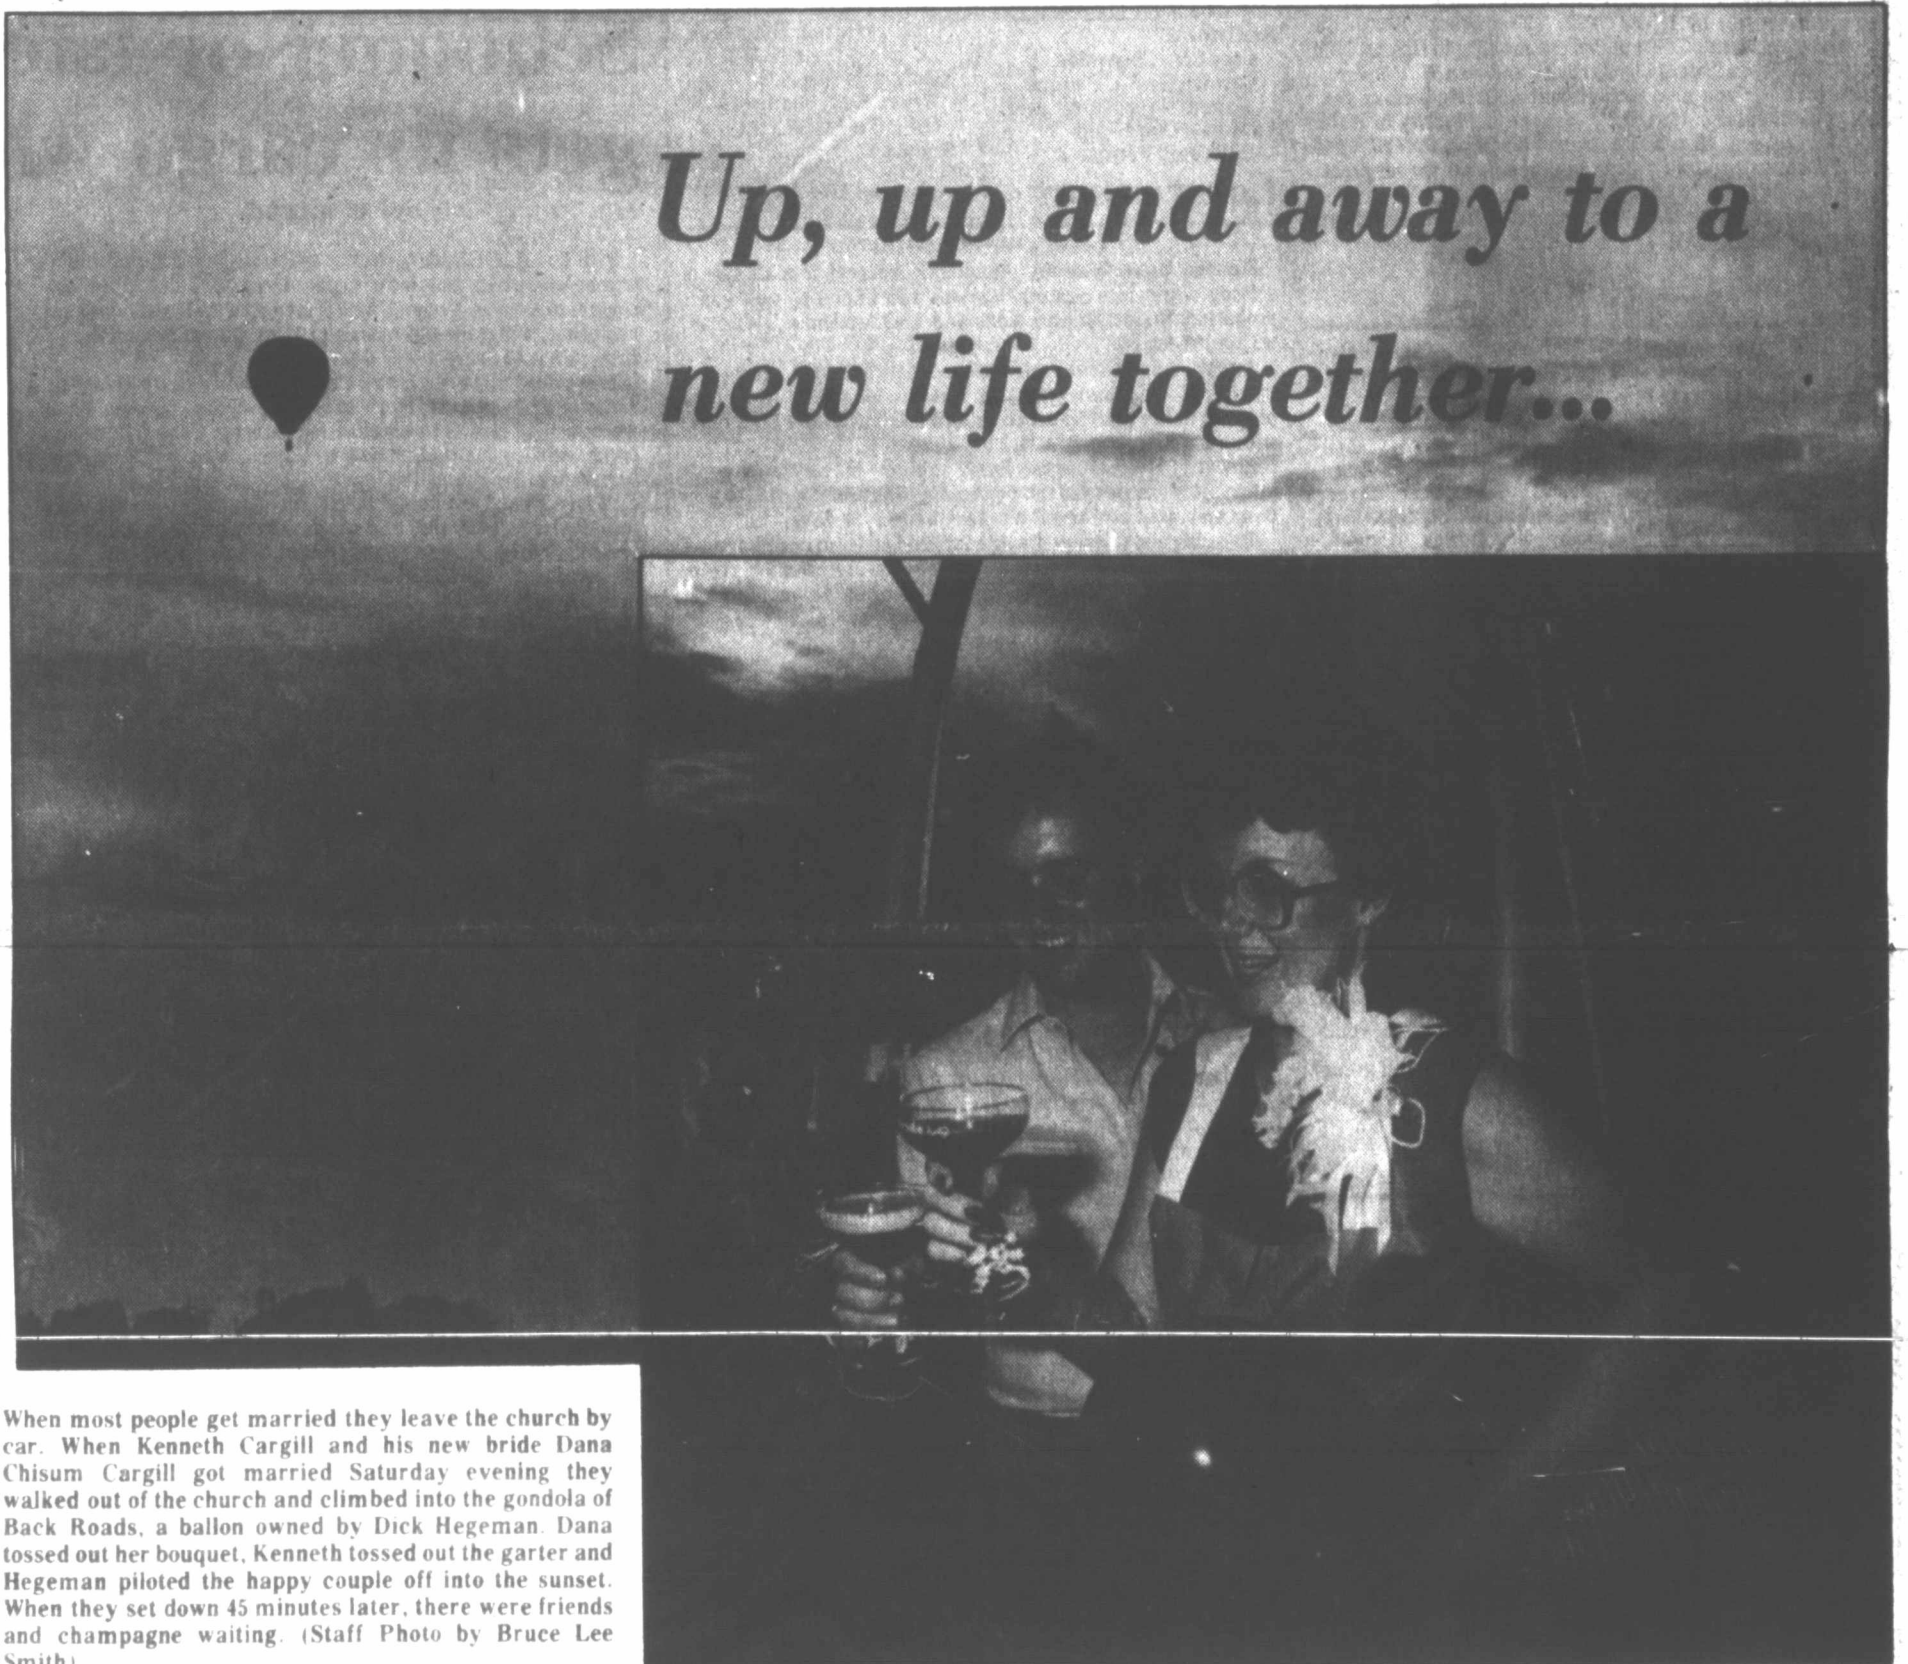

A printer in Dallas began work on the insert Monday, with Sept. 1 set as the target date to complete delivery of the directories, Gilliam said.

About 55,000 incomplete directories were delivered late last week before the mistake was caught. Gilliam said the phone company would hand-deliver the special inserts to those customers.

When most people get married they leave the church by car. When Kenneth Cargill and his new bride Dana Chisum Cargill got married Saturday evening they walked out of the church and climbed into the gondola of Back Roads, a balloon owned by Dick Hegeman. Dana tossed out her bouquet, Kenneth tossed out the garter and Hegeman piloted the happy couple off into the sunset. When they set down 45 minutes later, there were friends and champagne waiting. Hopes dwindle for stolen baby

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Day by day, an FBI agent says, chances grow slimmer that Andrew and Penny Kennedy will ever see their baby again. And day by day, the Kennedys cling to hope they will again see their only child.

The couple's 7-month-old daughter, Cherie Ann, was kidnapped May 10 from John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth. Investigators say that the case is very rare — and puzzling.

"It would be a lot easier to handle death than to handle this, because that little baby's going to heaven, no doubt about that, because that little baby's nothing but an angel," said Mrs. Kennedy.

"It's just not knowing, that's what so hard."

"The longer this goes on, the less chance of success we have," said FBI agent Darrell Shaver, the one FBI agent left on the case.

"However, that does not preclude success, because if we get the right telephone call, the right information gets to us, we're positive we can still identify the child."

The Kennedys say the unbearable slowly is becoming bearable.

"I think about her every day," Mrs. Kennedy said in a recent interview. "I think about her at least in the morning, every day, and mainly at nighttime, when I'm in bed."

The Kennedys were waiting to see a doctor at the hospital when a woman dressed like a nurse approached them to admire the baby. She left but later returned and asked to show Cherie Ann to her friends. The couple never saw their child again.

In late May, private investigator William Dear, who gained national prominence four years ago by locating a missing teen-age computer genius, offered to help find Cherie Ann. But last week, one of Dear's investigators, Dick Riddle, said the number of calls on the case has dwindled.

The Kennedys say they are still confident the baby will be found. Time, they say, has taught them patience.

"I go off to the bathroom and shut the door if I feel like crying," said Mrs. Kennedy, 21. "Sometimes we get mad at each other; it's hard when one's trying to pull for the other and the other one's going crazy."

The Kennedys say they seldom enter the baby's room anymore. The swing set, bathtub and bassinet have all been put away.

"Every now and then, I'll sweep it," Mrs. Kennedy said. "Ain't nothing to do in here."

Kennedy, 23, works as a machinist at a furniture store. His wife does not work, so most of the day she stays home in their simple apartment in the back of a house in southern Fort Worth.

She goes swimming or sits in the sun and can't keep her thoughts from wandering to the baby.

"I'm afraid when I do see her I'm not going to know what she looks like," she says. "Babies grow too fast, they change."

She won't entertain the thought that the kidnapper may have killed her baby, she says.

Responds to allegations

Dallas County election administrator Conny Drake responds Monday at a press conference in Dallas to Justice Department allegations of improper voting procedures during the November 1982 election which federal officials charge violated the rights of minority voters in Dallas. (AP Laserphoto)

Justice Department claims election method violates law

DALLAS (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department charged that "many" black and Hispanic Dallas County residents were prevented from voting in the November 1982 — a charge denied by a top county elections official.

The Justice Department also said in a letter made public Monday that continued use of a balloting system implemented by Dallas County Election Administrator Conny Drake would violate the federal Voting Rights Act.

The Justice Department said that a preliminary investigation revealed that election procedures "had a disparate impact on black and Hispanic voters and actually precluded many minority citizens from voting."

Ms. Drake switched to the offensive Monday afternoon and defended her handling of the election, saying that despite widespread voting-day problems, she knew of no person denied the right to cast a ballot.

"I'm concerned because I think any investigation should be based on facts and not conjecture or certainly not misstatements of fact," she said of the Justice Department inquiry.

The Justice Department said ballot shortages occurred in many minority precincts, some precincts ran out of ballots, substitute ballots were mishandled and not properly tabulated and signs warning of possible repercussions of illegal voting were posted in minority precincts.

"Our investigation has revealed that over 80 percent of the precincts in minority residential areas experienced shortages, and a majority of the larger shortages occurred in these precincts," the Justice Department said.

The charges came in a letter from William Bradford Reynolds, assistant attorney general in the civil rights division, to Ms. Drake.

"We did have problems," Ms. Drake said. "I wrote a 50-page report that outlined the problems we did have. We didn't try to deny those."

Many of the ballot distribution problems resulted from a breakdown in the network of officials set up to resupply polls. Dallas County switched from voting machines to punch-card ballots for the November 1982 general election.

"We have no proof that the ballot allocation formula precluded people from voting," Ms. Drake said. "I would like to see them have some proof."

Ms. Drake said ballots were allocated to precincts based on past voter turnout.

"We did comply with the law and we have complied with the Voting Rights Act," Ms. Drake said.

The Justice Department said that the method of ballot distribution used in November did not have Justice Department "pre-clearance."

Ms. Drake said the Justice Department approved of Dallas County's voting procedures in an Aug. 27, 1982 letter, also signed by Reynolds. "The Attorney General does not interpose any objections to the changes in question," the letter stated.

Dallas County precincts were allocated ballots for between 30 and 45 percent of registered voters in the November election, she said. Ballots for 100 percent of voters were distributed in an April mayoral race, and ballots for 80 percent of voters have been prepared for an Aug. 13 mass transit election.

Reynolds' letter to Drake asked her to respond to its allegations within 30 days.

"I'm going to respond to what we have always complied with the Justice Department requirements," Ms. Drake said. "We have always submitted timely Justice Department submissions. We have a file full of preclearance letters from them saying we have complied."

The Justice Department said that at some precincts, sheriff's deputies had to deliver ballots and "it appears that many precincts were without ballots for significant periods of time and that many black and Hispanic voters left the polling place without having been able to vote."

Ms. Drake said local officials expected problems with the new voting system. "We feel like we were under a new voting system. We followed the law. We didn't know exactly how to run the system. We had to learn," she said.

'Sexist' books attacked, algebra book praised

AUSTIN (AP) — Three educators and a father with three children in public school say an algebra textbook proposed for statewide use is working wonders in the classroom.

The author himself, John Saxon, appeared before the State Textbook Committee on Monday to tout his book, which he said already is being used in California, Colorado, South Carolina and other states.

The 27-member committee switched its attention today to a showdown on world history textbooks between People for the American Way and textbook critics Mel and Norma Gabler of Longview.

The committee is reviewing $36.3 million in proposed texts for Texas, which is the single largest purchaser of textbooks in the nation. Replacements for books already adopted, Braille books, and freight and other costs will raise the total textbook bill to $65.5 million. American Way, a national anti-censorship group, lobbied successfully during the 1983 Legislature for a bill to allow people to testify in favor of — as well as against — textbooks proposed for adoption.

Without the law, witnesses probably would have been prohibited from appearing on behalf of such books as Saxon's algebra text.

Houston real estate broker Gerald Robbins, the father of three, said, "Scholarly research and the enormous variety of extremely positive test results have shown the Saxon format is virtually the Salk vaccine for math education."

Saxon, a retired Air Force colonel who teaches at an Oklahoma City junior college, told the committee he is preparing a special math text for Texas, and he added, "I'll put anything in it you want." Sister Mary Magdalene Baca, a math teacher at Alamo High School in Amarillo, said the Saxon text is so good, "I don't even hear the normal complaints which accompany homework assignments."

Another teacher, Jane Andrajack of Sherman, said she had one class use a "popular, state-approved text" for algebra and another class of equal-ability students use the Saxon text, which is not in regular use in Texas schools.

She said on one 30-problem test, "Saxon" students averaged 21.26 correct answers, and the other students averaged 9.36. On a 168-problem test, "Saxon" students got 69 percent correct, the other students 55 percent.

Michael Metke of Texas State Technical Institute at Harlingen said students using the Saxon book had raised their algebra competency levels by three years within six months.

Asked later in an interview what was so unique about his textbook, Saxon said, "Algebra is not difficult, it is different. And time is required for things different to become familiar. The standard book presents a topic, has the topic test and moves to the next topic. I said what would happen if we had a book that reviewed everything every night for the entire year?" Saxon was asked if the book makes the difference, not the teacher, and he replied, "Oh, certainly — the teachers will tell you that. Jane Andrajack, Sister Mary Magdalene they will tell you that an English teacher using my book can teach math just as well as they can using my book."

Textbook criticism Monday focused on alleged "sexism" in English, vocational agriculture, construction trades, geometry, trigonometry and algebra books.

New procedures at Astroworld

HOUSTON (AP) — Astroworld officials plan to implement new procedures on the Texas Cyclone roller coaster ride to try to prevent accidents similar to one that claimed the life of one amusement park employee and injured three others.

A new train carrying 15 park employees on a test ride rolled back into its elevated storage shed and plunged to the ground Friday night.

"We are going to do everything possible to make sure it doesn't happen again," Astroworld General Manager Lamar Parker said Monday.

Three new safeguards will be installed to make sure the track is in place, replacing the current braking system, Parker said. A backup system also will be installed and bumpers put at the end of the storage shed, which is about 15 feet above the ground, he said.

None of the procedures will affect the public portion of the track since the accident involved the section only accessible to employees, Parker said. However, the rest of the ride is being routinely re-examined, he said.

He predicted it would be reopened by Friday or Saturday.

Astroworld officials said employees were testing a new four-car train being added in anticipation of a large number of passengers from a crowd which had attended a rock concert in the park.

When employees pushed the new train from the shed to the ride's starting point a short distance away, Parker said, someone forgot to replace the transfer track that guides the train onto the roller coaster.

In addition, he said, an employee helping push the train out of the shed left an 18-inch board resting atop a nearby manual brake switch, deactivating the switch. Parker refused to specify the number or identify of the errant employees.

The mistakes weren't noticed until the train started up and coasted out of control at 10 mph back through the shed.

Frank Wamble Jr., 22, of Deer Park, was trapped under one of the two cars that crashed to the ground and killed. The injured were also riding in the front two cars.

Seeking the truth on MIAs

Well, which is it to be? Are those who insist that there's a chance some U.S. soldiers may still be imprisoned in Southeast Asia publicity seeking damagages dealing in false hopes - or are they the only people willing to seek the truth?

The U.S. government's attitude toward efforts by former Green Beret Bo Gritz and others to document the belief that some Americans are still imprisoned has been distinctly schizophrenic. They may be getting some cooperation at the lower echelons, but various Pentagon spokesmen occasionally go out of their way to denigrate or denounce "free-lancers" who have the odd notion that a free American should have the right to proceed with or without government assistance or permission.

The other day an anonymous (of course) government spokesman in Bangkok came as close as anybody with a title has come to admitting that the evidence is pretty sound that some Americans may still be languishing in Asian captivity. He said that more than 200 reports from refugees who claim to have seen imprisoned Americans, many supported by polygraph tests, can't be dismissed out of hand. Up to now the government attitude has been generally skeptical of such reports, but the information supporting the attitude has amounted to a blanket request to "trust us."

The backing and filling was occasioned by an offhand remark from a government higher-up, Secretary of State George Shultz. At a news conference after a meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in Bangkok, Shultz said the U.S. government was for "any means that can be effective" to locate and recover the 2,944 American MIAs and even refused to rule out government support for a mission by Bo Gritz.

Immediately afterwards, of course, some of Shultz's underlings busily explained to the press that the boss may not have really meant what he seemed to have been saying, and that he hadn't been thoroughly briefed on Gritz's history. Somewhere in that "clarification" process, however, some official requested anonymity and explained that perhaps Gritz and others who believe some Americans are still alive may not have gone off the deep end after all.

So what is it to be? Does the U.S. government have any intention of pursuing the truth wherever it may lead, up to the efforts to rescue those who (if they really are alive) have perhaps suffered most excruciatingly from our Vietnam misadventure? Or is this just another exercise in obfuscation, a brief moment when the veil was torn away ever so slightly that officials hope will soon be forgotten?

In denigrating the efforts of private citizens to discover and document the existence of imprisoned Americans, government spokesmen have repeatedly asked the families of MIAs to trust them. They forget that while decent folks may give others the benefit of the doubt for awhile, trust must be earned.

Bok saw the need for a place for reflection

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

LAKE WALES, Fla. - One of the most peaceful spots in America is the Bok Tower Gardens on the top of Iron Mountain, a sandy hill overlooking miles of orange groves. Where pines and scrub palmettos once grew, one finds a superb natural garden built around a carillon tower with a marble frieze depicting flamingoes, geese and swans.

The carillon and the garden were donated to the nation by Edward Bok, an immigrant who wrote "The Americanization of Edward Bok." In 1929, the tower was dedicated by President Coolidge. The Bok Tower Gardens have brought peace of mind to countless Americans since that time.

This is one of the choice regions of Florida, with its rolling hills and numerous small lakes caused by the subsidence of underground limestone structures. The Lake Wales area produces more citrus fruit than Texas and almost as much as California. It is a quiet, productive and unspoiled region well off the route taken by armies of tourists.

In a country characterized by driving energy, it is pleasant and necessary to find locations that provide appropriate settings for reflection. Mr. Bok thought of the gardens as a sanctuary from a hectic world, and, happily, they have remained that way. The area has not been caught up in the super-organized, busy world of the 1980s.

The surrounding lands are rich, of course, but they offer a quiet productivity that is characterized of the agricultural regions of the U.S. Indeed Americans often forget that much of America's wealth is in grain, beef, sugar, dairy products, tobacco, peanuts, mushrooms, oranges and other products of field, vine, bush and tree. These products have become even more important to the economic health of the U.S. than they were fifty years ago. The U.S. is the dominant agricultural exporter in the world. Our oranges, for example, are exported to such faraway places as Japan.

With the world becoming an ever more crowded and, insofar as the Third World is concerned, a more hungry place, the need for America's agricultural abundance will increase in the decades ahead. How the poorer countries will manage to pay for our agricultural products is the question.

Michel Fribourg, president of the Continental Grain Co., believes "We must learn better to barter our agricultural products in exchange for their metals." However, some very complicated economic arrangements must be made in future if this type of trade is to come to pass.

The Bok Tower Gardens are a good place to think about the future. In the hustle and bustle of the contemporary world, it's difficult to think in long-range terms about the nature of our society and economic system. The historian Arnold Toynbee has reminded us that periods of withdrawal are necessary for individuals if they are to come up with fresh responses to problems confronting them. In his wisdom, Edward Bok saw the need for a place where reflection is possible in a turbulent century.

U.S. faces invasion of parasites

By PAUL HARVEY

We had it made. Our U.S. of America enjoyed a charmed existence for 200 years.

Our tiny 6 percent of the earth's land surface was an island paradise, sheltered by wide oceans. Within our borders we grew strong, virile, vigorous.

While most of the rest of the world population was debilitated by climate, crowding and disease, we eradicated or controlled most of our diseases and excluded theirs.

Until now. Now our peripatetic population plus uncontrolled immigration have resulted in a massive invasion of our nation by parasites.

Microscopic parasites. Parasitic diseases are the most widespread of all mankind's diseases - historically diseases mostly of Asia, Africa, South America and the Caribbean.

They're here now. Most medical students graduating this year will never see even one of a dozen childhood diseases which used to be commonplace. With medicine, sanitation and nutrition we vanquished those historic enemies.

But American doctors will be seeing symptoms of a whole new generation of parasitic diseases - malaria, schistosomiasis, trypanosomiasis, filariasis, onchocerciasis, leishmaniasis.

For these diseases Americans have no acquired immunity.

So "sheltered" have we been that very few physicians or lab technicians are presently competent even to recognize malaria when they see it. They'd better learn to.

Presently our nation has been no public alert - yet, leprosy is a rapidly increasing stateside menace. And TB and foot-long intestinal worms.

Essentially, progress against parasites has been nil since the first discovery of the malarial cycle in a primitive laboratory in Punjab in 1898.

The state of our knowledge of parasitic diseases is woefully primitive.

We do know this: These diseases worldwide threaten three billion people and stateside 130 million Americans are already infected or affected.

Parasitic diseases can be painful, debilitating, disfiguring - deadly.

There is no known treatment for leishmaniasis, an infection in which the nose and mouth are eaten away. Schistosomiasis causes irreversible damage to liver and kidneys.

We are "not doing nothing" about this menacing invasion. Meager efforts by the World Health Organization and our government are being supplemented by private foundation grants directed toward a better understanding of and response to these microscopic enemies.

Hopefully, we have enough time. (c) 1983, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Today's couples plan divorce before wedding

By RUSTY BROWN

With half the marriages in America hitting the skids these days, some people feel it's a good idea to plan the divorce before the wedding.

I agree. The best way to do it is with a prenuptial agreement, a procedure favored in second or late marriages.

Prenuptial agreements, or marriage contracts, spell out each person's right to cars, houses, jewelry, furniture and business interests. Property is defined as individual or marital.

A contract may provide for children from a previous marriage, or provide for a division of assets or alimony in the event of divorce, or specify an amount of money for the surviving spouse in case of death. Some recent prenuptial agreements grant the wife a share in the value of her husband's medical degree, especially if she supported him through his education and training. Even child support has been determined in some prenuptial agreements.

Just six years ago, when I first wrote about his - and - her contracts, an attorney told me that only about 5 percent of couples used them. Since then, New York passed the Equitable Distribution Act of 1980, which makes it possible for a mate to obtain up to 100 percent of the other's business. Now, thousands of Empire State couples are drawing up marriage contracts. Contracts are on the increase in other states as well and for good reason: They make sense.

People who marry or remarry in their 30s or 40s, or later, often have accumulated some wealth: stocks, bonds or real estate. They often have children. The man may have a business partner; the woman could be an officer in a company that gives her stock options and a handsome pension plan. They want to protect themselves in case the marriage founders, or if one of them dies.

I read that Goldie Hawn and Jane Powell had to pay former husbands huge sums in divorce settlements. A Los Angeles attorney said that prenuptial agreements might have saved each of the film stars a lot of money.

Marriage contracts are not new. One, in fact, ended up in the Ohio courts in 1844. Mostly, however, we have associated them in the past with aging millionaires who married young starlets.

In the 70s, prenuptial agreements got a boost from the feminist movement. Some women added lifestyle clauses that pertained to dividing household and child-care responsibilities and allowing for careers outside the home.

A Cleveland attorney, Carey Gordon, tells me that, at first, judges were sympathetic to women who challenged prenuptial agreements on the grounds that they didn't really understand them or didn't know what they were signing.

"But in recent years," says Gordon, "the courts are abiding by them more frequently."

It is important, therefore, that women bone up on these agreements. Gordon passes along some recommendations:

Prenuptial agreements should be in writing and both parties should be represented by individual attorneys.

Prenuptial agreements must include a full and honest disclosure of each party's assets, including their nature, extent and value. Less-than-honest disclosure may mean a court case later on.

They should specify the rights each spouse is giving up in case of divorce or death - rights that might be guaranteed in the state's divorce or inheritance laws.

Both parties should fully understand the agreement in all its legal technicalities and ramifications.

The contract should be written before the wedding invitations are in the mail and before it's too late to cancel the caterers.

(By the way, it is possible to write a contract after the wedding. Then it's called a postnuptial agreement.)

Some may be offended by prenuptial agreements, considering them cold and calculating. I think they are preferable to expensive, lengthy and ugly divorce cases with both sides fighting over money and the oriental rugs.

Let's face it, starry eyes at the altar may be enduring, but promises on legal bond are more enduring.

Border discussion

Child abduction-murder strikes home in small town

VERDUNVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — In this coal town where "everybody knows everybody," folks never expected the national tragedy of child killing to touch them — until one of their own was found abused and slain in a hollow near her home.

The discovery of 12-year-old Tanya Lynn Johnson's battered body July 23 shattered the calm of this community of 900 citizens about 90 miles southeast of Charleston, where parents had felt safe to let their children roam the surrounding hills to go berry-picking or catch lightning bugs.

"Not here!" said Pam Browning, the mother of an 11-year-old girl. "That's something you'd expect in the big cities, but not here in Verdunville. Why, everybody's related and everybody knows everybody else."

"Nobody's letting their kids get very far away from them right now. And the kids, they're scared, too. My little girl won't even walk up the hollow by herself since that happened."

Easter Johnson, Tanya's mother, spent 10 agonized days waiting for her daughter's body to be found.

"I don't think I ever got more than 15 minutes' sleep on any of those nights," Mrs. Johnson said, a photo of Tanya in her hand. "Night after night I kept lying there, waiting for her to walk through the door and tell me where she'd been."

She looked down at the photograph of the blonde, curly-haired girl wearing a cowboy hat.

On a wall calendar above Mrs. Johnson a circle has been drawn around a date: July 13.

"The evening of that day was the last time I ever saw her alive," the mother of nine said. "It was sometime after 7 o'clock — I know it wasn't 8 o'clock because she wanted to see the Elvis Presley movie that came on then — that she came in and said Cleve Hiram was across the road and had asked her to go berry-picking with him."

Mrs. Johnson said she was upset by the invitation, because it came from a man in his 20s.

"I told her to never go off with a man alone in the bushes," she said. "And she told me, 'Okay, mommy, I won't go.'"

The friendly fifth-grader did leave the tiny yard, however.

Ten days later, a member of a search party found the girl's body in a thicket less than a mile from home.

Authorities said Tanya, nude from the waist down when found, apparently had been sexually assaulted before she was killed.

"Tanya didn't fool with boys any, she was just a little girl," said her mother. "I think Cleve Hiram lured her up that hollow."

The next day, authorities charged Cleve Hiram Messer, a 26-year-old Mount Gay resident, with murder. But the arrest has done little to assuage the community's fear of the Johnson family's grief.

Mrs. Johnson says she has been haunted by visions of her daughter, calling vainly for help.

High lead levels found in soil

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Preliminary test results of soil and water samples at Port Drum Co. refurbishing plant showed high concentrations of lead in soil lining a drainage ditch, health officials said.

City Health Department Administrator Carl Clark said Monday that the official results should be released by the Texas Department of Health in Austin later this week.

Clark said preliminary results revealed nothing unexpected. Blood tests on workers and residents living near the plant have not shown unsafe lead levels, he said.

The federal Environmental Protection Agency found high levels of lead in the ditch three years ago but failed to follow up with plans to instruct the company to clean up the area, Clark said.

Curfew temporarily lifted by government

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — The government lifted a two-day nationwide curfew to let people buy food, at soaring prices, following a week of ethnic violence that has left more than 200 people dead.

Douglas Liyanage, secretary of the Ministry of State, said Monday that arrest warrants were issued for "a number" of members of the Communist Party and two other banned leftist parties, the Janatha Vimukthi Peramusa and Nova Sana Samaj. He refused to say how many were picked up.

Officials have indicated they believe the three parties caused the violence between minority Tamils and majority Sinhalese by taking advantage of Sinhalese anger over the killing of 13 soldiers July 23. Tamils were blamed for the killings.

The government appears to believe leftists aim to wreck the economy and overthrow President Junius Jayewardene's conservative government. The Communists have one seat in the 168-member Parliament and the other two parties have none.

Cabinet ministers say there is evidence "foreign elements" masterminded the alleged plot. The Colombo Sun in an editorial Monday called for the closing of all Soviet bloc embassies.

Government officials estimate 50,000 people were left homeless by arson in the past week, and some 150,000 jobs have been lost because of arson and looting at 17 major factories and thousands of small businesses.

When the curfew was lifted for nine hours Monday, the streets quickly filled with people and there were long lines throughout the market area, particularly at government cooperatives where most staple foods are distributed.

In New Delhi, India, Monday, Sri Lankan Foreign Minister A.C.S. Hameed told Prime Minister Indira Gandhi on Monday that "the law and order situation is steadily improving" in his island nation, just off Indian's southeastern coast. Some politicians in the southernmost Indian state of Tamil Nadu have demanded India intervene to protect the Tamils.

The Tamil ambush that sparked the rioting was blamed on the movement for a separate state for the Tamil minority in northern Sri Lanka. The Parliament is expected to adopt a constitutional amendment Thursday banning separatist political activity.

The target is the Tamil United Liberation Front, the biggest opposition party. It has 16 seats to 143 for Jayewardene's United National Party. The 16 Tamil members would be required to swear that they do not advocate a separate state in order to remain active in politics.

Liyanage announced a broadening of censorship to include "other materials" — presumably photographs — in addition to news reports. He said the use of cameras was restricted and journalists during the curfew hours could only travel between their hotels and the Ministry of Information.

"Personal use" gadgets geared to single lifestyles

Few Americans today are unaware that new types of consumers are influencing the development of home furnishings products offered for sale.

Manufacturers and marketing consultants have spoken often about consumers who are single by choice and live alone or with another unrelated adult; couples who both work and can't stay home to wait for a repairman; individuals who prefer to do their own repairs to save time and money, and those inner-directed persons who have money to pay for services but prefer to spend it on other things.

To appeal to the perceived needs of these consumers, appliance manufacturers have initiated do-it-yourself repair programs, housewares makers have designed small appliances for preparation of one or two servings, and furniture makers have produced furniture the individual can take home in a box and put together himself.

Taken together, these various items geared to single, affluent, well-educated, do-it-yourself oriented individuals are sometimes known as "personal use" or "lifestyle" products.

Recently, Singer Co. entered the field with four new "personal use" sewing gadgets designed to handle all or most of an individual's mending chores.

Singer is best known as a maker of sewing machines, but the company points out that its new "Easy Menders" product line is not aimed at sewing enthusiasts.

The four new products are not sewing machines, but were engineered specifically to do one or two mending jobs. They are aimed at those who do not necessarily know how to sew and who don't necessarily wish to learn.

Instead, they are for men and women who have neither the time nor inclination to mend clothing but who would like an alternative to paying a tailor to do minor clothing repairs, explained a spokesman for Singer.

At $80, the most expensive item in the line is a portable, 6-pound electric machine which looks like a small sewing machine but can only go forward. It is preset for mending, patching and minor alterations and will stitch through several fabric layers.

The other products include a hand-held patching machine which will hide holes, tears and cigarette burns; a device that attaches two-, three- and four-hole buttons with thread, and an appliance that tacks hems and seams in an emergency. Each of the latter three products sells for $29.95 and weighs less than a pound.

All four products fit the guidelines established for personal-use products. They are easy to handle, lightweight, require no special skill to use, come with a simply written instruction booklet, and come in "gift oriented" cartons. The company intends to promote them as gifts as well as for personal use.

National distribution is to begin late this summer, at first through housewares departments in major department stores, and eventually through chain stores, hardware outlets and discount stores.

One way the new items differ from traditional new products for the home is that they were designed by consumers, not engineers.

The line grew out of consumer comments made in focus groups which Singer had organized to discuss mending concepts. Since fewer American women are now sewing their own clothes, the company decided to investigate the development of other products that would meet consumer demands.

The focus groups established that mending is a problem for both men and women. As more women have gone to work outside the home and more men have begun living on their own, the necessary skills are often not available to those who need to mend their clothing.

The rising cost of professional alterations has priced them outside the means of some individuals.

Furthermore, the inconvenience of taking garments for professional repair and then having to wait for them was mentioned by some consumers in the discussions.

The groups also expressed a desire to do mending tasks as they come up rather than letting them accumulate. Those who had access to a sewing machine spoke of the annoyance of having to get it out and set it up to handle a small chore.

Taken all together, the consumer information appeared to suggest that uncomplicated appliances that could be kept handy and could handle one or two simple mending chores would meet with consumer approval. Based on these guidelines the company came up with the products, showed them to other consumers and eventually prepared them for the marketplace.

WTSU cheerleaders to host clinic Aug. 13

WTSU, Canyon — Cheerleaders at West Texas State University are to host a clinic for cheerleaders of Panhandle area junior high schools and high school Sat., Aug. 13.

Cheerleaders from 35 schools in the area have been invited to the clinic beginning at 9 a.m. at the WTSU Activities Center. The clinic will continue until 5 p.m.

WTSU's 12 cheerleaders for the 1983-84 academic year will instruct clinic participants in cheers, sideline chants, pyramids, mini-trampoline jumps and dance routines to taped music, said Faith McDonald, WTSU physical education instructor.

Trophies will be awarded to outstanding squads, she said. Participants may attend as a member of a cheerleading squad or as individuals. Cost of the clinic is $10 per person for up to five members in a squad and $5 for each additional person. Participants should register in advance by mail before Aug. 6 and may pay the day of the clinic. The cost includes lunch.

Sponsors may attend at no charge. The WTSU cheerleaders are sponsoring the clinic to raise funds for traveling expenses to out-of-town athletic games. McDonald said she plans to continue the clinic as an annual fund-raising event.

This is the first year for the WTSU cheerleading squad to include 12 students. The number of participants selected was raised last spring semester from eight.

WTSU cheerleaders will attend a cheerleading camp at Southern Methodist University in Dallas before they host the clinic.

Additional information concerning the clinic may be obtained by calling the WTSU Activities Center.

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

This coming year you are likely to involve yourself with several new social groups. This is well and good, provided you don't neglect your old buddies.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be extremely careful today about giving friends unsolicited financial advice. If your suggestions fail, you might be held accountable. Leo predictions for the year ahead are now ready. Romance, career, luck, earnings, travel and much more are discussed. Send $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker. These reveal romantic compatibilities for all signs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't enter the fray today just because you think you have strong supporters to back you up. The ranks behind your banner may collapse under fire.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be extremely attentive today if someone is disclosing important information. In fact, you'd better make notes rather than trust to your memory.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Pals with complicated problems are apt to look to you today to bail them out. Regrettably, you might not have enough buckets on board to do the job.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't bring outsiders in today to help resolve issues which should be settled privately between you and your mate. They'll hinder, not help.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Malingers will be looking to dump their duties on your broad shoulders today. If you allow this, they may add more straws than any camel can carry.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is one of those days when you'll have to be careful not to take a position where everyone may gang up against you. Walk the middle line.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Even if it's a fait accompli, don't boast about your achievement today. This might incite a jealous associate to take devious measures.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If someone says something about you today which you feel is unwarranted, it may be wise to let it go unchallenged rather than to make an issue of it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you feel you have to buy friends today, you'll find it won't be worth the money spent if persons don't accept you for what you are.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your judgment might not be up to par today. Unfortunately, this may also be true of your companions. Avoid making hasty agreements.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) True humility is a virtue, but humbling yourself unbecomingly is not. Rather than using pretense, let your ego shine through.

Surveys used in demoting TV anchor biased

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The man conducting a viewer survey that led to a woman's demotion from a TV anchor job made remarks such as "Is she a mutt?" and "Let's spend 30 seconds destroying Christine Craft," according to testimony.

A producer at KMBC-TV recalled in other testimony Monday in Ms. Craft's $1.2 million sex discrimination suit that station officials' emphasis on her wardrobe took up considerable time.

And a former KMBC producer testified the appearance of women newscasters was the station's "number-one priority."

Ms. Craft filed a federal suit against Metromedia Inc., former owner of the Kansas City station, claiming she lost her job because the audience survey suggested she was not attractive or deferential enough to men.

She charges her demotion from the anchor desk to reporter, which led to her resignation two years ago, was discrimination based on sex.

A communications expert Monday criticized as biased and unscientific the viewer surveys used as the basis for demoting Ms. Craft.

Thomas Beisecker, chairman of the Communication Studies Department at the University of Kansas, testified the survey was poorly conducted and its conclusions were not in line with the results.

Beisecker said he based his opinion on a review of tapes from some May 1981 "focus sessions" where viewers roughly in the same age group were brought together to discuss local TV newscasters, and on the results of a July 1981 telephone survey of 400 viewers.

Beisecker said that Steve Meacham of Media Associates, a consulting firm hired by KMBC-TV, made such comments during the sessions as: "Is she a mutt?" and "Let's be honest about this."

"Let's spend 30 seconds destroying Christine Craft. Move her back to California? If we all chip in, can we buy her a ticket?"

"I would never under any circumstances allow any of my students to make such a statement," Beisecker testified. "The statement itself indicates bias."

Under cross-examination from Mark Johnson, an attorney for the defendants, Beisecker acknowledged that the remark about buying Ms. Craft a ticket to California came after someone in the group said "send her back." He said the "mutt" reference came in response to a comment that Ms. Craft was unattractive, but added that Meacham's statement was "much more extreme."

Members of such groups can easily be influenced when they are discussing an issue with which they aren't deeply involved or about which they haven't formed an opinion, Beisecker said.

KMBC's contention that the panels had an extremely negative reaction to Ms. Craft "is unsupported by the focus group tapes to which I listened," he said.

Referring to a conclusion of the telephone survey that Ms. Craft's appearance on KMBC-TV was driving viewers to a competing station, Beisecker said, "There is no basis for that." Viewers were not asked if they had started watching a competing station, he said.

Ms. Craft, 38, alleges Metromedia paid her less than her male co-anchor and that KMBC-TV misrepresented the job when she was hired.

After being demoted Aug. 14, 1981, Ms. Craft resigned.

Sandra Woodward, a producer for KMBC-TV, testified the emphasis on Ms. Craft's wardrobe "got to be a growing, increasing concern."

Claim some diplomats keep slaves in homes

LONDON (AP) — Some diplomats keep slaves at their residences in Western countries and escape prosecution by claiming diplomatic immunity, a former official of Britain's Anti-Slavery Society contends.

Patrick Montgomery, who retired as secretary of the organization in 1980 but remains a member of the society, said during an interview Monday with The Associated Press that slaves are kept for sex and for domestic work.

He said cases had been reported in recent years from Washington, New York, Geneva and London. He said most of the slaves are Asian but declined to reveal the nationality of the diplomats allegedly involved.

In a letter published in the London Times last Saturday as part of a running debate in the newspaper about breaches of diplomatic conduct, Montgomery wrote: "Slave owning became illegal in England in 1772. Yet twice in recent years I have been given first-hand evidence of slave-owning by persons of diplomatic status living or staying in London."

"In one case, the matron of a well-known clinic was required to allow a patient to have his slave sleeping across his doorway. Believing that the slave was about to break down for lack of rest, the matron offered to provide a relief. 'She stays here at my pleasure,' was the reply."

Montgomery, who did not identify the clinic, added in the letter: "In an adjacent street a girl emerged briefly from a diplomat's flat (apartment) to seize an opportunity to show to the wife of a friend of mine bite marks on her arm and a brand mark on the crown of her head."

"She was on several occasions seen being dragged out screaming to be lent to the diplomat's men friends. The police declined to take action. My friend protested and the diplomat moved."

"The incidence of this abuse... is not uncommon in capital cities."

American League roundup

(AP) — Greg Luzinski was virtually a bull in a china shop against the New York Yankees.

Hitting two of the longest and loudest home runs ever seen at Chicago's Comiskey Park, the player known as "The Bull" was a one-man wrecking crew Monday night in pouncing the White Sox to a 4-1 victory over the Yankees.

"I've never hit one as high or as far as the first one," said Luzinski of his two-run shot in the first inning that landed on the roof in left field, a drive of more than 475 feet. "If the ball hadn't hit the light tower it would have sailed over the roof."

Luzinski's second home run, his 20th of the year, landed in the upper deck in the third inning.

Indians 6, Blue Jays 0

In Toronto, Len Barker shackled Toronto on three hits and Mike Hargrove drove in two runs with one of six Cleveland doubles as the Indians beat the Blue Jays. The victory was the second straight for the Indians under new manager Pat Corrales, who replaced the fired Mike Ferraro on Sunday.

National League roundup

(AP) — Bobby Brown is back in the major leagues and celebrating in style.

Brown was recalled from Las Vegas of the Pacific Coast League over the weekend when San Diego first baseman Steve Garvey injured his thumb. In his first game with the Padres, the one-time member of the Met, Yankee, Blue Jay and Mariner organizations homered, singled and scored three times.

He followed that performance with another sensational game. His three-run homer in the 10th inning lifted the Padres over Houston 7-4 Monday night. Earlier, Brown had singled twice, walked and stolen a base.

Phillies 2, Cubs 1

Carlton passed the 10-victory mark for his 16th consecutive season to boost the Phils within a half-game of first-place Pittsburgh in the East. A lesson with Philadelphia

Brewers 6, Red Sox 2

In Boston, Robin Yount broke a tie with a sacrifice fly and Milwaukee added three more runs in a decisive sixth inning for a victory over the Red Sox despite four hits by AL batting leader Wade Boggs.

Angels 12-0, Twins 6-7

In Minneapolis, Steve Lubratich knocked in four runs to lead California over Minnesota in the first game of a doubleheader. Mike Witt, 5-8, earned the victory, giving up 12 hits, striking out five and walking four in notching his first complete game of the season.

Tigers 3, Royals 2

In Detroit, Lance Parrish's tie-breaking solo home run in the eighth boosted Detroit over Kansas City. With the score tied 2-2 in the eighth, Parrish hit a two-out shot into the lower left field seats at Tiger Stadium, his 15th homer of the season, on a 1-0 pitch off Kansas City reliever Don Hood. 2-2.

A's 4, Mariners 3

Dave Lopes walked with two out and the bases loaded in the ninth inning to boost the A's to victory. Seattle relief ace Bill Caudill walked Lopes on a 3-1 pitch.

Axed Kuhn sprouts new head

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Jocko Conlan said he'd like to buy a half-page space in all the nation's major newspapers for a eulogy to baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

"Integrity — you can't buy integrity — or genuine love for the game," said the colorful 63-year-old former umpire, whose career reached back to the reign of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

George Kell found it hard to believe that club owners would want to replace a man who has presided over the game's phenomenal growth.

Duke Snider said he thought it would be hard to find a man as capable as the present commissioner and Bill Terry expressed the opinion that Kuhn, with a shaky start, had grown in his 14 years in office and should be more qualified than ever to hold the job.

A strong "Don't Dump Bowie" movement surfaced during the Hall of Fame induction ceremonies here over the weekend — either spontaneously or by design — and increased the uncertainty of the scheduled changing of the guard this week in Boston.

"What they are doing to this man is terrible," said the stocky, outspoken Conlan, who delivered the most impassioned plea at the exclusive Hall of Fame dinner Sunday night.

"Bowie Kuhn is the best commissioner we've ever had and I've served under them all. He is smart. He is honest. He has a great feel for the game dating back to when he was scoreboard boy at Griffith Stadium in Washington."

The Kuhn accolades may have fallen on the deaf ears of that militant segment of owners determined to put a new man in the office. A screening committee is supposed to present names of prospective successors at the Boston meetings.

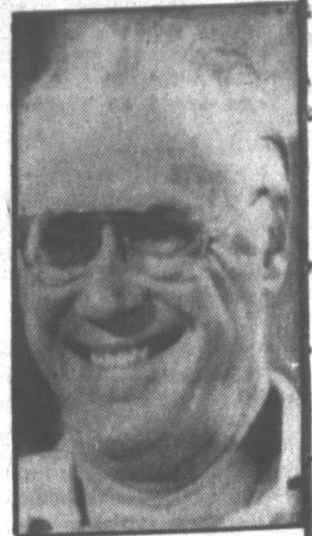

Kuhn's second seven-year contract expires Aug. 12 and he technically already has been fired, failing to win enough votes for reelection.

Word spreading through the baseball world is that no strong, viable and acceptable candidate has been produced and baseball may face a period of headlessness until the fragmented owners, all protecting varied private interests, can reach accord.

Kuhn has insisted he will not serve as an interim commissioner. But he has allowed reports to circulate that he wouldn't be averse to a shorter term — possibly two or three years.

This has raised conjecture in many knowledgeable quarters that the commissioner might escape the fall of the axe, if only briefly.

Kuhn's fate appears in the hands of influential St. Louis Cardinal owner Augie Busch, said to control part of the National League voting bloc that axed Bowie in the first place.

A strong "Don't Dump Bowie" movement surfaced during the Hall of Fame induction ceremonies at Cooperstown, N.Y., over the weekend. Baseball owners have "fired" Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, but some may be having second thoughts as Kuhn's contract nears expiration. (AP Laserphoto)

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Bette Midler was singing so much attention in hospital that it ruined her act, so "the Divine Miss M" is gone into seclusion to recover from exhaustion, her manager says.

The raucous pop singer, whose slogan is "trash with a twist," collapsed off stage last week during a concert in Pontiac, Mich.

"She's just in seclusion and resting comfortably, but her doctor says she ought to rest for at least this week," her manager, Ramon Hervey, said Monday. He said Ms. Midler is not hospitalized, but declined to say where she is "for security purposes."

"When she was in the hospital in Detroit, so many people called that it interfered with her rest," he said.

Ms. Midler, in her 30s, canceled a concert in Minneapolis last Friday on doctors' advice. Hervey said she hopes to make her next concert scheduled in Denver this weekend.

She's tired after being "on and off the road since this time last year," Hervey said. "She performed through March, then went into the studio to finish her new album, 'No Frills,' which should be out next week."

Ms. Midler also just completed a children's fantasy book, "The Saga of Baby Divine," due out in September, Hervey said.

LONDON (AP) — The Duchess of Kent, wife of Queen Elizabeth II's cousin the Duke of Kent, just wanted to "get away from it all," and she chose Canada for a two-week vacation.

The 50-year-old duchess flew with her 13-year-old son, Lord Nicholas of Kent, to Montreal on Monday.

"We are going on holiday, just the two of us together, away from it all," said the duchess as she left London's Heathrow Airport.

In April, after an operation to remove an ovarian cyst, the duchess canceled all public engagements for two months. Her spokesman said her convalescence was taking longer than expected.

"I'm feeling fine," she said Monday as she boarded a British Airways flight.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Byron Janis, the first American concert pianist to tour the Soviet Union, says he dislikes the distinctions made between "popular music" and "classical music."

Janis visits Philadelphia tonight for one of a series of U.S. concerts celebrating the 40th year of his career. He shared a few observations on his music.

"The Rachmaninoff second piano concerto is probably the most popular selection in the world. And Chopin accounts for more sales of sheet music than any one else."

"Let some more years go by, and we'll see what music is still around," he added. "If what is called popular music lasts as long as Chopin has, well, maybe we'll call it classical music by then, too."

Janis, now 55, was 15 when he made his debut with Toscanini's NBC Symphony Orchestra in 1943. It was nearly 20 years ago that he made his visit to the Soviet Union.

"They knew nothing about American artists at all," Janis recalls. "And it was right after the American U-2 spy plane incident, so there was a lot of feeling."

"At the intermission of the opening concert, the American ambassador came backstage, he was so happy and relieved that it was going well."

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has suffered damage to her right eye and will be examined by an eye specialist Wednesday to determine if she needs laser surgery.

Speech making profitable for politicians

By T. LEE HUGHES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — During the past 15 years, Sen. John Tower of Texas has earned more than $274,000 giving speeches and, occasionally, writing an article. Over the years, House Majority Leader Jim Wright, also of Texas, has earned more than $98,000 the same way.

For Texas Reps. Phil Gramm and Kent Hance, similar activity has earned them each about $40,000, even though both are relatively new to Congress.

The fees they have collected for their speeches — up to $2,000 a speech — are known as honoraria, and often have come from organizations with a stake in issues or legislation before Congress.

Such honoraria are a congressional tradition that has endured despite periodic controversy over the propriety of accepting payment for giving speeches to such interest groups.

That controversy flared again recently when the Senate voted to delay until Jan. 1 limiting such honoraria to 30 percent of a senator's government salary, similar to a ceiling already in effect in the House.

During debate, Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., urged higher congressional salaries and an end to all honoraria, calling the honoraria system "a corruption waiting to happen."

Some senators, including Tower, countered that a limit on honoraria would give unfair advantage to wealthy senators, whose income from financial investments would not be similarly curbed. Tower complained that "we are fast becoming a body in which only the most affluent can survive."

Over the years, a majority of the current 29-member Texas congressional delegation has accepted such honoraria, though the amounts vary widely, according to an Associated Press analysis of members' honoraria reports since 1968.

Tower has easily received more in honoraria than any other current delegation member, an average of about $18,300 a year since 1968, the first year such honoraria were required to be reported by senators.

However, Tower's income from honoraria remains modest in comparison with some senators from other states. Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., for example, received $135,000 in honoraria last year alone.

In contrast, Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat and multimillionaire first elected in 1970, got $519 for a speech at Austin College in 1971 but has never accepted an honorarium since.

In some instances, congressmen have received honoraria from organizations which appear to have a clear interest in the actions of a committee to which the congressman belongs.

For example, in the past two years, Rep. Charles Stenholm, a Stamford Democrat and a member of the House Agriculture Committee, has received more than $7,000 in honoraria from organizations with a stake in agricultural issues, such as the Cotton Warehouse Association of America and the National Milk Producers.

Rep. Mickey Leland, a Houston Democrat and member of the House committee which oversees cable television operations, received $3,000 in honoraria in the past two years from the National Cable Television Association.

And last year Rep. Charles Wilson, a Lufkin Democrat and member of the House defense appropriations subcommittee, received $3,000 in honoraria from Pratt & Whitney and General Electric, both major defense contractors.

In other instances, the amount of honoraria appear to have increased after a congressman moved into a position of increased influence, fame, or both.

For example, Wright, first elected in 1954, has had a noticeable jump in honoraria since being elected to the powerful post of House majority leader in late 1976. In the five years between 1971, when House members were first required to begin reporting honoraria, and 1975, Wright reported receiving a total of just $10,225 in such fees — an average of a little over $2,000 a year.

Wright's financial disclosure report for 1976 shows he was paid for 16 speeches, but does not specify the amounts. However, during his service as majority leader between 1977 and 1982 Wright received more than $83,000 in such honoraria — an average of more than $13,000 a year.

Kika de la Garza, a Democrat from Mission, reported receiving a total of only $3,300 in honoraria from 1971 through 1980, an average of $330 a year. But after he became chairman of the House Agriculture Committee in early 1981, his honoraria jumped to $9,000 that year and $10,500 last year, largely from organizations with a stake in agricultural issues.

Hance, a Lubbock Democrat elected in 1978, received a total of only $6,150 in honoraria during his first two years in Congress, an average of a little over $3,000 a year.

But in mid-1981 Hance bolted Democratic ranks to co-sponsor President Reagan's tax-cut legislation, a proposal popular with the business community. Hance's honoraria jumped to $14,150 that year and again to $19,750 last year, largely from business-oriented organizations.

Gramm, a Democrat-turned Republican from College Station, similarly co-sponsored Reagan's budget cutting program in 1981. That year Gramm's honoraria held steady at what they had been the year before, about $9,000. But last year they nearly doubled, to $17,650.

As a deputy Republican whip, Rep. Tom Loeffler of Hunt played a key role in bringing together Democratic conservatives and Republicans in support of that Reagan financial package in 1981. His honoraria totaled only $1,700 in that year, but leaped to $11,600 in 1982.

However, because many members of Congress from Texas have extensive income from various investments, such speaking fees still make up a small portion of the overall outside income received by delegation.

Besides their congressional salaries of $60,662, the 23 current members of the delegation who also held office last year reported average outside income of at least $97,500 and possibly more than $165,000 each in 1982, according to their financial disclosure reports.

Of that, only an average of about $6,800 was from honoraria, those reports show.

Excluding the six new members of the delegation elected last year, and who thus had no opportunity to earn congressional honoraria, four current congressmen from Texas report never having received such honoraria: Reps. Ralph Hall, a Rockwall Democrat; Bill Archer, a Houston Republican; Bill Patman, a Ganado Democrat, and Abraham Kazen, a Laredo Democrat.

Rep. Marvin Leath, a Marlin Democrat, reported receiving $5,525 in honoraria since 1979, but gave all except $500 of it to charity. Contributions to charity have also been reported by Wright, $1,350; Hance, $1,500, and Stenholm, $3,000.

Following is a list of honoraria reported over the years by current members of Congress from Texas, beginning either with the year they took office, or with 1968, the year senators first began reporting honoraria, or with 1971, the year House members first began such reports. In a few cases, part of the income from honoraria has been contributed to charity, a figure indicated in parentheses.

Sen. John Tower, $274,676; Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, $519; Reps. Sam B. Hall, $7,950; Charles Wilson, at least $14,738; Steve Bartlett, 0; Ralph Hall, 0; John Bryant, 0; Phil Gramm, $39,550; Bill Archer, 0; Jack Fields, $7,000; Jack Brooks, at least $13,400; Jake Pickle, at least $15,175; Marvin Leath, $5,525 (5,025); Jim Wright, at least $98,100 ($1,350); Jack Hightower, $4,000; Bill Patman, 0.

Reps. Kika de la Garza, $22,800; Ron Coleman, 0; Charles Stenholm, $25,797 ($3,000); Mickey Leland, $22,900; Kent Hance, $40,050 ($1,560); Henry B. Young driver leads chase GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A 13-year-old Pasadena girl driving a stolen pickup truck led Galveston County law enforcement officers on a 110-mph chase before ramming the truck into two patrol cars and injuring a police officer, authorities said.

Galveston police officer J.W. Jennings was treated and released from Clear Lake Hospital after the girl rammed into his patrol car early Sunday, causing it to bounce off a utility pole, said Galveston Police officer Lynette Ostermayer.

Three local law enforcement departments and six officers were involved in the 30-minute chase, which began in Galveston and ended in League City when the girl lost control of the truck.
