Pint-sized recruiter earning her stripes

CEDAR LAKE, Ind. (AP) — At 7½ years of age Adeia Dickinson seems a little young to be an Army recruiter, but she's already put two people in uniform and earned a certificate of thanks from Uncle Sam.

Several months ago, wearing an "Army Brat" T-shirt and matching olive drab pants, Adeia bragged to fellow first-graders that "My daddy can get people jobs."

In economically depressed northwest Indiana, when many of the daddies of first-graders at Jane Ball Grade School were out of work, her sales pitch got quick results.

Billy Yardley went home and told his father, William Yardley, and Nicholas Slager told his father, Richard Slager.

The next day the men called Adeia's home and asked for her father, Sgt. 1st Class Dennis Dickinson, the Army recruiter in nearby Crown Point. In his three years at the job, he had never got any recruiting help from his daughter.

"I'm glad to have the assistance," Dickinson said Tuesday. "At the same time I'm kind of happy. We're getting 28- and 29-year-old men, some with high school and some with college educations. The Army is getting a little security."

Dickinson met the two fathers, and Slager is now a pharmaceutical specialist at Fort Jackson, S.C., while Yardley leaves today for the Army.

Gene Welter, Billy Yardley's uncle, is investigating joining the Army when he graduates from Hanover Central High School this May, and Al Jager, whose daughter is a grade ahead of Adeia, says he will also sign up.

When news of Adeia's recruiting reached Dickinson's superiors, she received a T-shirt that says "Army" from Sgt. Maj. William C. Bussely and a certificate, signed by Capt. Edward Rock, praising Adeia "for exceptional assistance in the field of recruiting."

The framed document also offers Adeia "promotion to Private 2 ... effective upon entry into the regular Army."

That means if Adeia ever signs up, she won't go in as a buck private — she will already have earned a stripe.

Dickinson said his daughter will make her own decision on whether to sign up, but said she has been raised with the Army around her.

"By the time she was 2, she could tell by the sound of the rotary blades what type of helicopter was flying by," he said. "She likes the Army. The whole family does."

Adeia may soon be able to try her hand at recruiting overseas. Dickinson, his wife Jo Myers Dickinson, and their children are leaving in July for a tour of duty in West Germany.

Also wearing an "Army Brat" T-shirt and pants is Adeia's brother, Ben, 2½. So far Ben hasn't recruited anyone, perhaps because he hasn't quite learned to talk.

Council won't buy city zoning change

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Convenience and traffic congestion squared off in a main event Tuesday as Midland City Council wrestled with proposed zoning ordinance changes that would permit convenience stores to sell gas and alcohol in areas zoned Neighborhood Service District.

When the bell rang at match's end, convenience was the clear loser as the council — voting to keep neighborhood traffic flow a bit more "neighborly" — rejected the proposed changes.

Richard Hennessy, city planning director, said the NS district is designed to provide a transition between residential and retail zoning. He said the council reviewed its zoning regulations in 1978 and eliminated one local retail classification in favor of the NS district.

He said an NS district allows residents of a neighborhood access to "convenient" retail outlets — like a convenience store, barber shop, bakery — without producing the cross-city traffic generated by a local retail development.

The Planning and Zoning Commission recommended the changes because consideration of NS developments over recent years has indicated that gas and alcohol sales have become "an expected activity of the NS district."

Convenience stores, often the focal point of an NS development, have been unwilling to locate in NS districts because of the restrictions, said Hennessy, who added that other businesses are unwilling to open outlets where the traffic generated by a convenience store is absent.

"We're not finding the NS district to be of any benefit because it's not being developed," said Hennessy, who noted that of about a dozen NS districts in Midland, only one is presently developed.

He said the lack of NS development has increased congestion at Midland's main street intersections, where businesses suited for an NS zone are locating to avoid the NS restrictions.

Mayor G. Thane Akins, who opposed the changes, questioned whether generating business traffic in a neighborhood was the intent of the NS zoning. Akins said gas and alcohol sales might generate excess — and potentially undesirable — activity in a neighborhood.

Akins suggested that instead of changing the NS zoning, those districts be eliminated and replaced with local retail zones, where such sales are permitted.

Hennessy said, "I see a significant deterioration of the control of our neighborhood atmosphere" if NS districts are replaced by local retail zoning, which would permit a wider variety of retail outlets, including restaurants, bowling alleys and movie theaters.

Councilman Gordon Marcum II voiced his opposition to the changes, explaining that after working with a local agency on the issue of alcohol abuse among teens, it became apparent to him that convenience stores selling alcohol to minors are contributing to the problem.

New 'game plan' calls for 'academic coaches'

DALLAS (AP) — Borrowing an idea from the football field, a suburban school district is turning this autumn to "academic coaches" — about 128 faculty members who will work more days and teach more hours while earning more money.

The program by the Garland School District, believed to be the first of its kind in the nation, was approved by the school board on Feb. 17. School officials said it is intended to improve education and recruit better teachers — particularly in the math and science fields.

On Tuesday, National Commission on Excellence in Education issued a scathing report on a "rising tide of mediocrity" in U.S. schools. The report said the United States needs tougher educational standards, more homework and a longer school day and school year.

It also recommended 11-month contracts and higher pay for teachers, saying they earn an average of only $17,000 after 12 years.

In Garland, academic coaches will still teach regular classes but will have additional duties, said Jill Shugart, assistant superintendent for educational operations in the suburban district east of Dallas.

"If the teacher is a fourth-grade teacher, he or she will still teach the class, but would also work with students before and after class, including summer school and developing curriculum activities," Mrs. Shugart said Tuesday.

The name "academic coaches" came up because "we should give the same high priorities to academics as we do to athletics," Mrs. Shugart said.

She said the added pay could raise teachers' salaries up to $5,000 a year, depending on experience, putting them on the scale of "what an assistant varsity football coach makes."

With a $1,500 bonus, a teacher with master's degree could earn about $38,000 a year, Mrs. Shugart said.

Garland's program would extend a teacher's 183-day contract to between 202 and 220 days a year, including summer school.

"It is not a matter of being dissatisfied with school programs, it is a matter of doing more," said Mrs. Shugart. "As a matter of fact, our trend has been for test scores to be up, not down, in comparison to other districts."

The Garland district's 30,000 students are 82 percent white, 7.5 percent black and 7.5 percent Hispanic.

Reagan takes aim at Central American communism

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in a move that an adversary says "has turned up the heat" in the debate over Central America, is asking a restive Congress to help combat communist advances in the war-plagued region.

Using a tactic reserved for rare occasions, Reagan speaks to a joint session of the House and Senate tonight on his administration's policies regarding the leftists in power in Nicaragua and those seeking power in El Salvador.

On both fronts, Congress is showing reluctance to give him what he is asking for.

The House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations cut his request for a $60 million diversion of military aid to the beleaguered Salvadoran regime in half Tuesday, voting by only a 7-5 margin to approve even that much.

But in an interview with Gannett News Service published today, Reagan said he would push for restoration of the full $60 million. "The cup's half full. We Meanwhile, Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, proposed to cut off all aid to insurgents fighting the leftist government in Nicaragua after 45 days.

And Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., emerging from a closed Senate session that he requested, said he found a "very, very high" level of concern about what he charges is illegal administration support for the Nicaraguan guerrillas.

"Clearly the president has turned up the heat," Dodd said. "This is a rare use of the joint session of Congress. It has only been used, I think, nine times in the last 25 years, normally to announce some good news."

In the Gannett interview which was conducted Tuesday, Reagan said he intends to make it "difficult, in fact, impossible" for Nicaragua to arm guerrilla movements in El Salvador and the region.

If anti-government forces in Nicaragua say they are using U.S.-supplied arms to overthrow the Managua government, he said, "We can't control what they say." His intention, he insisted, is only to stop the flow of arms.

"The arms and the training and even the direction of guerrilla military movements are all centered in Nicaragua.... The operation of Salvadoran guerrillas are directed by radio from the capital of, near the capital of Nicaragua," Reagan said.

Dodd asked for the closed Senate session, which lasted an hour and 40 minutes, so senators could get an Intelligence Committee briefing on covert operations that he says illegally seek the overthrow of the Nicaraguan government.

Administration lobbyists were distributing to congressional Republicans a newspaper article by United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick outlining what she said is "a plan to create a communist Central America." She said Congress "seems unwilling to make a serious effort" to prevent this from happening.

State officials prepare windfall profits arguments

By SARAH McCLENDON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Texas oil and gas associations and two representatives of the Texas Attorney General's office attended a strategy with some 30 organizations from other affected states to prepare for oral arguments before the U.S. Supreme Court early this afternoon on the constitutionality of windfall profits.

The case is on appeal from Judge Ewing Kerr's decision last year at Cheyenne, Wyoming where he ruled in favor Of the complaint starred in 1980 by the Independent Petroleum Association of America, later joined by 30 other state and local associations.

The issue is the claim of IPAA that to be valid a tax must be evenly applied and because of certain types of crude produced in Alaska, there were exceptions in the application of the tax. The Justice Department appealed the case to the Supreme Court.

Professor Stephen Willeams of the University of Colorado School of Law will argue the case for IPAA and associates.

The Texas attorney general, James Mattox, sent Cindy Sullivan and Walter Davis here to represent him. They attended the strategy meeting but it is not expected that any one will argue the case but Williams.

Reagan asks publishers to watch economic signs, spread good news

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan urged newspaper publishers today to keep in mind the signs of a rebounding economy when they encounter "pleas from Washington and maybe your own editorial writers" for more spending and higher taxes.

The president also sought to enlist the publishers in his campaign to publicize what is right about the United States and said: "I think the generosity and compassion of most Americans towards those who suffered during the recent recession deserves a little more news coverage that it's received."

The president made his remarks in a speech to the 97th annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association before returning to Washington.

Three robbery suspects captured

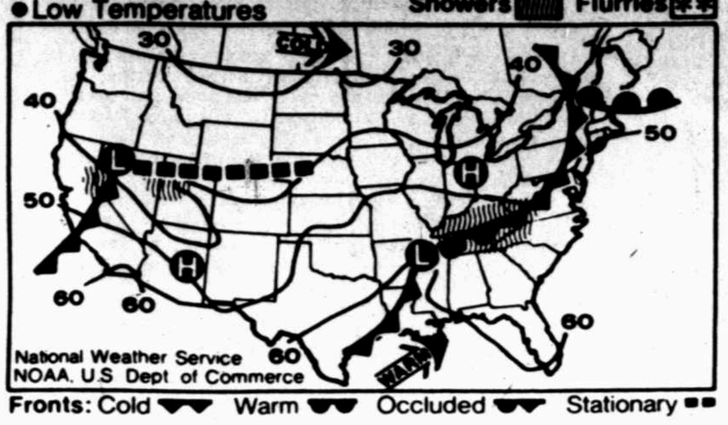

Police captured three armed robbery suspects after a high-speed chase on the far westside late this morning.

In sketchy reports, the robbery occurred in the 2600 block of Sinclair shortly before 11 a.m. and the suspects were cornered near Midland Park Mall about 11:45 a.m.

No other details were available by press time.

Fair skies are forecast for most of the nation through Thursday, according to the National Weather Service. Small areas of showers are predicted in the West and East.

Temperature could climb to 90s

Those good ol' summer days don't seem to be far off as Permian Basin residents will see fair skies and 90 degree temperatures for the next few days.

Lows in the area will be 50-60, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Winds should blow through at 10-20 mph.

The Permian Basin experienced sweltering spring temperatures Tuesday, with Midland having a high of 90, only seven degrees off the alltime record for the date set in 1959.

The low of 59, meanwhile, was well above the record 36 of 1946.

No precipitation was recorded, leaving the monthly total at 0.06 inch and the yearly amount at 1.67 inches.

Commitment to Israel underscored

AP Laserphoto

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz declared today that while the United States wants Israeli forces out of Lebanon, the Reagan administration is "committed without qualification to Israel's survival, security and well-being."

In a statement at Ben-Gurion International Airport, Shultz said: "President Reagan has sent me here to work closely with you on new steps toward peace... Our immediate task is bringing peace to Lebanon, restoring Lebanese sovereignty, withdrawing all foreign forces, and ensuring peace and security on Israel's northern border."

Shultz went immediately by motorcade for a meeting with Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

A meeting with Prime Minister Menachem Begin, scheduled for later in the day, will be Shultz's first with the Israeli leader.

Shamir welcomed Shultz at the airport on his arrival from Cairo, saying his trip here "demonstrates the American commitment to peace and stability in our region."

Indicating some flexibility in Israel's position on a withdrawal of its 25,000 troops from Lebanon, Shamir predicted Shultz's visit would "contribute to a solution of pending problems in Lebanon."

In his remarks, Shultz said a "number of difficult issues remain" in the negotiations on a troop withdrawal but "so much has already been accomplished in this negotiation that none of us can allow it to fail."

Shultz told reporters during the flight from Cairo — the first stop on his current Middle East tour — that he will meet with Begin twice before going to Lebanon on Thursday where he will confer with President Amin Gemayel on the withdrawal talks.

He made clear his talks with Begin will be important in shaping the direction of his mission here.

"I expect by the time I go to Beirut to have a very clear idea of things that Israel considers important and where the critical elements of the negotiations are as they see it," he said.

He said he thinks there is "a very good chance of getting a troop withdrawal agreement on this trip."

An agreement between Israel and Lebanon for a withdrawal of Israeli troops is "the first thing we are concentrating on," Shultz said. He will then turn his attention to an agreement for withdrawal of Syrian troops and Palestinian guerrillas.

He told reporters he hopes to go to Syria to meet with President Hafez Assad. The Beirut newspaper Al-Sharq said Assad agreed to meet with Shultz when the secretary goes to Damascus, probably after his visit to Beirut on Thursday.

State Department spokesman John Hughes cautioned that Syria is likely to decide the status of its 38,000-man Lebanon force based on the kind of conditions Israel sets for withdrawing its troops. He said the Palestinians, with an estimated 7,000 fighters in Lebanon, are likely to do whatever the Syrians decide.

Lebanon has a population of less than 3 million.

A senior State Department official who asked not to be identified said Begin may be pressured to withdraw by "growing restiveness in Israel over the mounting number of Israeli casualties in Lebanon."

The Israelis invaded Lebanon last summer to drive out Palestinian guerrillas. The Syrians have had troops in Lebanon since the end of the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war.

In another development today, Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan left Beirut for hurriedly arranged consultations with King Fahd of Saudi Arabia about Shultz's trip.

The decision to dispatch Wazzan and five senior aides was made during a four-hour conference Gemayel held Tuesday night with chief advisers on the upcoming talks with Shultz.

At the Cairo airport, before flying to Israel, Shultz said his stopover in Egypt gave him with "renewed enthusiasm and greater determination to do everything possible to seek a greater element of peace in the Middle East."

He spoke of the "overriding importance" of "bringing an environment where Lebanon is sovereign territory and free of all forces."

So far the Israelis have insisted that any withdrawal from Lebanon be conditional on letting their Lebanese ally, Maj. Saad Haddad, command forces in the southern part of the country bordering Israel. The Lebanese government rejects this as undermining its army and its sovereignty.

City Council rejects change in city zoning ordinance

Marcum said permitting alcohol sales in NS districts might spread the problem across the city.

Councilman Tom Sloan followed Marcum's comments by stating that while "I'm not trying to legislate temperance," he also opposed the zoning changes.

Bob Batte, one of three developers behind a proposed NS development on the northwest corner of Sinclair Avenue and Midland Drive, said the council's vote may have killed their $1.5 million project.

Batte, representing Midland Industrial Partnership, said gas sales constitute a third of all convenience store revenue. He said such a store would be unlikely to participate in their development without permission to sell gas.

Mary Jane Cavenaugh, another party in the proposed development, said: "What the mayor seems to be saying is that he'd rather have a vacant lot than a convenience for the neighbors."

Cliff Rowe, a third representative, said they originally planned to seek rezoning of their proposed site, but instead sought the NS changes as recommended by Hennessy and the planning and zoning staff.

"We tried to go along with the city planners on this," said Rowe, who added that maintaining existing contracts while spending several more months seeking a rezoning may be impossible.

Akins told Rowe the developers could have applied for both the NS alterations and a rezoning to local retail. Rowe said he was unaware that concurrent applications could be filed.

Following the meeting, Hennessy said the Planning and Zoning Commission rejected the site in question for local retail zoning and instead designated it NS in July 1981. He said that after discussing options with the developers, he advised them that seeking NS changes rather than a rezoning would likely be their best chance at obtaining council approval.

Hennessy said NS districts require a balance between activity and convenience.

Although the commission voted to tilt the balance toward convenience he said, "The council saw the balance differently. It's a very legitimate judgment question."

Researchers confirm lava pool

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. — A long-suspected pool of molten rock beneath this earthquake-prone mountain resort area is being confirmed by new research, scientists report.

Although no researchers are predicting whether the magma chamber will generate a volcanic eruption, nearly all seem to agree the chamber exists and the magma is stirring.

"We haven't seen direct evidence of magma; we've only seen indirect evidence. But the evidence is pretty ... strong," John Rundle of Sandia National Laboratories said Tuesday at a scientists' meeting. "Something's happening, that's fairly clear. We really haven't seen anything like this before and we don't know how to interpret it," he said in an interview.

Sandia Labs of Albuquerque, N.M., is sponsoring the three-day conference on the frequent earthquake activity and any relationship to volcanic activity miles beneath the east face of the Sierra Nevada range.

Rundle said Sandia plans to drill a hole in search of the magma in hopes of finally proving its existence. He said one goal of the conference, which drew about 25 scientists from colleges and federal agencies, is to find the best place to drill.

The drilling is part of the U.S. Energy Department's Continental Scientific Drilling Program.

Scientific interest in the region has been building since 1980 when swarms of earthquakes and other evidence began suggesting underground magma movement.

Mammoth Lakes, with about 3,000 permanent residents and tens of thousands of skiers on prime winter weekends, sits on the southwest edge of Long Valley, a 10-by-30-mile depression formed by a gigantic volcanic eruption 700,000 years ago.

Smaller eruptions have been popping every few hundred years between here and Mono Lake, 30 miles north.

Scientists assume the magma chamber is the remains of the giant eruption.

They also suspect it is swelling and causing a bulge over most of the valley floor. The land has risen at least 18 inches since 1975.

The U.S. Geological Survey issued a "notice of potential volcanic hazard," lowest of official concern last May.

An intense swarm of quakes in January brought scientists and reporters swarming over the snowy slopes as concern over possible volcanic activity rose sharply.

The swarm of quakes has tapered off but gauges and monitors scattered over the landscape are feeding every tremor to computers.

Probably the strongest evidence for a magma pool was presented by Chris Sanders of the California Institute of Technology who is working this year at the University of Nevada at Reno.

By analyzing nearly 200 small quakes between August 1982 and March 1983 he concluded, "we have been able to find a body, probably magma that ... is located, at its shallowest, probably 4.6 kilometers," or 2.75 miles beneath the surface. This, he said in a subsequent interview, "is the first solid evidence it's this shallow."

He pictured a sort of underground magma mountain with its base at least eight miles deep. At this depth, he said, it is a dense pool six miles across and three miles high.

From there, it narrows to a mile or more across and less than three miles deep.

The top few miles seem "much less massive (and) more diffuse, like it's moving through cracks."

The apparent chamber is beneath an area about three miles southeast of Mammoth Lakes, where most of the earthquake swarms center, Sanders said.

Area farmers now eligible for aid in 1982 damage

Midland County farmers who suffered crop losses due to hail and heavy rains in the spring of 1982 now are eligible for Farmers Home Administration disaster assistance.

"He (the farmer) is trying to bail out of debt — to (recoup) his losses," noted Midland County Agricultural Agent Earnest Kiker.

Last year, the U.S. Department of Agriculture granted FmHA disaster assistance to South and High Plains and Panhandle farmers who suffered heavy cotton crop losses due to adverse weather, noted Kiker. Recently, the counties of Midland, Hale, Swisher, Terry, Yoakum, Wichita and Young have been added to the list of disaster-stricken zones, according to U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block.

Texas Sen. John Tower had requested the USDA to review a number of Texas counties to determine their eligibility for FmHA assistance. Towers' request was made due to the extensive damage to crops by rain and hail storms in the spring of 1982.

"I'm very pleased that the Department of Agriculture is continuing to expedite its review process and that it has declared seven more counties eligible for disaster loans," Tower said. "The timing is critical during the planting season, and we must take whatever measures we can to ensure the recovery of the agriculture industry in our state. This is but one more step toward that end."

The interest rates applicable to the seven counties will be as follows: 8 percent for farmers who request no more than $500,000 and cannot secure credit from any other lending institution; 14¼ percent for farmers who can secure credit from other lending institutions; and 13½ percent for farmers who owed money to the FmHA on Dec. 15, 1979, and fall into the grandfather clause.

Photographer's works 'tattoo' museum walls

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mark Perrott specializes in photography from the waist up, portraying more than 600 men and women, young and old, lean and fat, as their bodies glisten with the bright-colored dyes of new tattoos.

The designs he captures flow up arms, down necks, across chests. They show hearts, dragons, demons, flames, swirls and names, all meant to last forever.

"I'm not specifically interested in tattoos," said the 37-year-old Perrott, who has an exhibit at Carnegie Institute's Museum of Art and the Allentown Art Museum. "I'm very interested in people who get tattooed. How they feel before and after, how they look just afterward. It's a very important process to go through. It's a celebration, with a meaning only to themselves."

Perrott, a free-lance corporate photographer who makes advertisements and annual reports, began stalking tattoo shops on weekends with his cameras after he drove past a parlor three years ago in nearby McKees Rocks and stopped in for a look. He was enthralled by the shop, its owner and its customers and asked permission to return.

"The idea of photographing people just after they were tattooed became a compulsion," he said.

To meet other tattooists and learn more about their art, Perrott attended several conventions. He came away with a list of hundreds of tattoo parlors, visiting them on weekends in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Washington, D.C.

Whether adorned for love or might, the newly tattooed all welcomed the opportunity to be photographed, Perrott found.

"For them, it's like a wedding ceremony, a graduation or a birthday photograph. It records an important moment in their life," he said. He gives his subjects a Polaroid snapshot as a souvenir.

People act differently after being tattooed, according to Perrott, who claims he isn't tattooed because he can't "think of one design that would make me comfortable forever."

"Once applied to the skin, the tattoo is no longer a separate and distinct emblem as it is on the tattooist's flash sheet. The tattoo becomes part of the bearer and his acceptance of it changes him," he said.

Officials want to round up mobile home tire thieves

The sheriff's department is asking for help in combating a marked increase in the theft of mobile home tires.

A ring of about 11 persons has been operating in the Permian Basin for the past year, according to Lt. Bryan Cook of the department's criminal investigation division, with losses in the Midland-Odessa area exceeding $50,000.

"They usually knock on doors to see if anyone's home," said Cook. "Then they remove the skirting and take the tires, which are normally stacked under the mobile home.

"Sometimes they'll ask homeowners if they've got any tires for sale. Then they'll come back and steal them when no one is home."

The stolen tires, which can cost up to $50 apiece new, are sold to second parties for $10 or $15 apiece. In turn, they're sold to often unsuspecting mobile home dealers and movers, according to Cook, who said his department is working with law enforcement agencies throughout the Permian Basin to stop the thefts.

But arrests are hard to come by, he added. "Most people don't mark their tires and it's hard to identify them. The only way to stop it is to catch someone in the act. What we need is for people to call us if they see any suspicious persons or vehicles in their neighborhood."

The sheriff's department phone number is 682-9774. The Silent Witness program, which guarantees anonymity to callers and provides rewards for information leading to the arrest of criminals, can also be used. That number is 685-1190.

Group considering food bank

The Human Relations Council will bring Zy Weinberg, director of the Anti-Hunger Coalition of Texas in Austin, to Midland at 2 p.m. Thursday to speak on starting a food bank in Midland.

The meeting will be held at the Junior League of Midland headquarters, 902 W. Dengar Ave. The Junior League, which is not sponsoring the event, is loaning its facilities to accommodate those attending.

According to HRC Executive Director Gloria Ellis, Weinberg is establishing food banks in Lubbock and Pecos. Abilene already has a food bank.

Ms. Ellis said one is needed in Midland and Weinberg offered to stop through town to help organize it and answer any questions.

The public is invited.

TESCO employee averts robbery

ODESSA — A quick-thinking Texas Electric Service Co. employee thwarted a robbery here Tuesday by dropping to the floor of the company's drive-in window and pressing the alarm button.

Police said the employee, Cynthia Hodges, no age available, was working at TESCO's drive-in window at 520 N. Lincoln when a Hispanic man in his early 20s pulled up shortly after 3 p.m. and brandished a blue steel revolver.

He drove off in a light blue car after she dropped to the floor and pressed the alarm. He was further described as thin, having ear-length hair and wearing a blue denim shirt.

Two mink coats reported stolen

In one of three major theft and burglary complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, an employee of Janee's Boutique at 2302 N. Big Spring St. said two mink coats worth a total of $3,095 were missing from the store. The theft was discovered Tuesday.

Carlos Urias, owner of the Mid-Tex Janitorial Service, 2208 N. Big Spring, reported the theft of a $2,400 floor buffer.

And Ole Olson of 2506 Quail Run told officers a Lockee Mini-Terminal computer was taken from a hangar at Midland Regional Terminal sometime in the past week. The machine was valued at $3,000.

Capitol construction criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — A plan to replace a crumbling facade of the U.S. Capitol with a new west wall is being criticized by an architects' group as a "step toward eventual desecration of this national symbol."

A House subcommittee Tuesday approved $70.5 million to build the new wall to replace a crumbling facade that includes some of the original sandstone of 1800.

The approval by a House Appropriations subcommittee is the latest chapter of a decades-long debate over the future of the west front, which looks out on The Mall and the Washington Monument.

The measure goes next to the full House Appropriations Committee and, if it passes there, to the House floor. There was no official vote on the $70.5 million, which was part of a larger money bill. The Senate Appropriations Committee also is studying the question.

A plan to extend the west front has won approval from the full House before, but has never made it through the Senate.

Debate often has raged between supporters of the new wall and those who favor shoring up the current wall by drilling holes and inserting steel rods.

After the subcommittee action, Robert Broshar, president of the American Institute of Architects, said, "The subcommittee's action today represents a major step away from preserving the Capitol's architectural integrity and a step toward eventual desecration of this national symbol.

"Only by restoring the west front as it was originally designed and constructed can the Capitol's architectural integrity be preserved."

Elliott Carroll, executive assistant to Capitol Architect George White, said it would take four years to complete the extension project.

Oregon Pharmacist

Develops New Wrinkle Cream

By RICHARD MORRELL
Feature Writer

(Special). It's an exciting story of an Oregon pharmacist who developed a wrinkle cream which all of the Northwest has clamored for...and which soon the rest of the country may receive in limited quantities.

Robert Heldfond, a Portland pharmacist, developer of many national products, used knowledge from pharmacy school and years of experience to compound Formula EB5 wrinkle cream, which has produced dramatic results in symptoms of aging skin.

Women started besieging Mr. Heldfond's pharmacy when the word got around about its wonderful results in helping women look younger. The phones never stopped ringing and letters poured in, praising the results with Formula EB5 wrinkle cream.

Users reported..."I wish I had some before and after pictures so I could really show the difference"... "Thank you for helping an older woman look younger"..."My husband says I look years younger, I, never want to be without EB5"..."My skin feels soft and velvety, almost shines"..., and even, "It made a difference in my life."

Formula EB5 contains natural ingredients, including Li Progen*, collagen and Lipo-protein, plus Vitamins E and B5, and other fine aids to help slow the aging look and help impart a more youthful appearance to the skin. Heldfond's base for the cream penetrates and absorbs quickly, leaving the skin, as the woman says, soft and velvety.

ANSWER TO AGING SKIN?
Pharmacist Robert Heldfond displays jar of his wrinkle cream he spent 12 years developing.

Because of the unique method of compounding it, Pharmacist Heldfond was able to produce Formula EB5 only in small quantities, but now production is allowing limited quantities in other areas. If your skin is aging too fast, try in your area to find Formula EB5.

NOTE: Formula EB5 is available in limited quantities in Midland at Dunlaps, phone (694-8888) while supply lasts.

Barefoot's lawyer: Court not receptive

WASHINGTON (AP) — An attorney for convicted Texas murderer Thomas Barefoot says the Supreme Court was "obviously" hostile to his arguments against the use of psychiatric testimony in sentencing Barefoot to death.

However, William E. Gray Jr., of Houston, indicated Tuesday he felt the court was more receptive to arguments that a federal appeals court acted too hastily in refusing to stay Barefoot's execution while his appeal was heard.

"I think we'll win on that," Gray told reporters after the Supreme Court heard oral arguments in the case. "At least they'll cut out these expedited matters."

The court is expected to rule by July in the case, which raises the issue of how federal appeals courts should decide whether to postpone an execution while considering a convicted murderer's appeal.

Barefoot, 37, of New Iberia, La., was sentenced to die for the Aug. 7, 1978, shooting death of a policeman who had been investigating a night club fire in Harker Heights.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans refused in January to block Barefoot's execution, saying his appeal raised no substantial issue that appeared likely to succeed.

Barefoot contended his appeal should have been fully considered anyhow, and the Supreme Court agreed to consider the issue.

But some of the liveliest discussion during Tuesday's oral arguments centered on Gray's contention that, before sentencing Barefoot to death, the jury had been improperly exposed to psychiatric testimony concerning his probable future behavior.

Justices peppered Gray with questions as he contended that admission of such testimony was unreliable, unconstitutional and unfairly prejudiced the jury against Barefoot.

Gray specifically objected to testimony from two prosecution psychiatrists, neither who had examined Barefoot but were asked to predict the future behavior of a hypothetical individual with a past similar to Barefoot's.

Both psychiatrists indicated that such a person could not be rehabilitated. One of them, Dr. James P. Grigson, of Dallas, said it was "one hundred percent and absolute" that such a person would commit future violent criminal acts, according to court briefs.

"(Grigson) didn't even say 'in his opinion,' " Gray told justices, arguing that such testimony presented in a medical guise "removes any discretion that the jury may have had" in deciding Barefoot's sentence.

However, Chief Justice Warren Burger countered that "the jury could disbelieve the testimony, could they not?" And Justice Sandra Day O'Connor asked whether another psychiatrist could not be put on the stand to counter such testimony.

Convicted killer's lawyer files appeal

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A young farmer who testified at his murder trial that he killed in a moment of insanity out of love for a child remains imprisoned while his attorneys prepare to appeal his conviction.

A notice of appeal was filed Tuesday in behalf of 21-year-old Paul Wolf of La Feria, said Carlota Hopinks, deputy court clerk in charge of criminal records.

Wolf was convicted of murder April 20 in the death of schoolteacher Leticia Castro. He was sentenced to life in prison and fined $10,000.

Defense attorney James Mardis of Harlingen said the appeal will contend State District Judge Darrell Hester erred when he refused to allow a separate jury determine Wolf's competency to stand trial.

Wolf spoke indistinctly during cross-examination at his trial and seemed confused. Hester said he had to presume Wolf had taken alcohol or drugs and ordered him to remain in the Cameron County Jail during the trial. Wolf had been free on bond.

Hester refused Mardis' request to have Wolf examined by a doctor at state expense to determine if he had consumed drugs or alcohol.

Mardis said a blood test performed on Wolf the day he was ordered to jail revealed no drugs or alcohol in his system.

But, Mardis said, "There's no question there was something wrong with Paul...the way he was acting on the stand."

Mardis said Wolf could have suffered a mental breakdown.

He said Hester should have stopped the murder trial and called a separate jury to determine if Wolf was mentally able to help with his own defense.

Mardis says he will examine the trial transcript to determine if other bases for the appeal exist.

Wolf is not eligible for release on bond pending the appeal.

He faces trial with his wife, Sherry, July 25 for the slaying of Miss Castro's fiance, Billy Staton, who tape recorded his own death.

Mrs. Wolf is free on two $35,000 surety bonds.

Shooting victim testifies

SIERRA BLANCA (AP) — An enraged Hudspeth County Commissioner trailed a man he had argued with over a barstool and shot him twice in the back, a witness has testified.

Talley Davis, 50, argued in two bars with oil worker David Copeland on Jan. 7, then shot the victim at point-blank range on a deserted road near Dell City, Paul Moore, Copeland's companion, testified Tuesday.

Davis is charged with attempting to kill Copeland, 43, because the man sat down where Davis' girlfriend had been seated.

Copeland said he and Moore were driving home and stopped when a vehicle with flashing lights roared up from behind them.

Copeland said he got out of the car and saw Davis in the vehicle with his arm raised peculiarly.

Lubbock lawmaker: 'The ponies are coming'

AUSTIN (AP) — A West Texas senator looking out for his own switched his vote and enabled the Senate to approve a bill that would legalize pari-mutuel betting on horse races in Texas for the first time in 46 years.

"Sometimes, being from West Texas, you've got to fight for what you get, so here we are," said Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock.

Rep. Froy Salinas, D-Lubbock, brought word of the bill's passage to the House on Tuesday — "I have a message for the House. The ponies are coming."

Senate bill sponsor O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, said Montford volunteered to switch his vote and give Harris the two-thirds — or 21-10 — count he needed to get the horse race bill before the Senate for final passage.

After that vote on suspension of the rules, Montford won 25-6 approval of an amendment that would raise the state's share of the proceeds from total horse race bets from 5 percent to 8 percent. The extra 3 percent would go to the state water development fund, which could be important to Montford's water-short area.

The other 5 percent of the state's share would be used for welfare payments to families with dependent children. The track and race winners each would get 5 percent, and the rest would go to bettors.

The bill was finally approved 18-13, with Montford voting against the measure, but at that point Harris only needed a majority.

Asked how he felt about the water amendment, Harris said, "I'd rather not have it, but it was important to take it — not only for the vote but for the cause which he was shooting for, which I'm in sympathy with."

The Senate bill would legalize betting on a local-option basis if voters pass a November 1984 statewide referendum.

Harris had been trying since Thursday, when the Senate tentatively approved the bill 17-12, to collect enough votes to bring it up for a final vote, but he said he would not have made the attempt Tuesday if Montford had not offered to switch.

'I'm against horse racing," Montford told reporters, "but we're not really voting on horse racing or pari-mutuel betting. I think the issue is shall we give the people the right to vote on it."

Although a majority of eight members of the 15-member House Committee on Urban Affairs are on record against the bill, Harris says he has heard "from good sources over there that things will change when we get the momentum going here and get the bill over to them."

Bill would extend farmworkers' benefits

AUSTIN (AP) — A Democrat from one of the state's poorest areas and a Republican from a well-to-do Houston suburb have resurrected a measure that would extend workers' compensation benefits to many Texas farmworkers.

Reps. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, and Ed Emmett, R-Kingwood, persuaded the House on Tuesday to approve by an 83-57 margin Hinojosa's bill — two hours after a 70-61 House vote that appeared to kill it.

In every session since 1977, the Legislature has refused to extend workers' compensation to farmworkers. Hinojosa now believes he is two votes short of the two-thirds vote needed to get the bill to debate in the Senate, where he believes a majority favors the measure.

"These are poor, powerless people who get hurt on the job and whose annual wages are $3,600," he said of farmworkers.

"The problem is that any time you have a farmworker bill, just the word farmworker gets a negative reaction from most (House) members," said Hinojosa, a Rio Grande Valley native who journeyed to Illinois to do farm work as a youth.

The bill requires farmers with more than 12 employees and an annual payroll of more than $50,000 to buy workers' compensation coverage for the farmworkers.

Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, said the coverage is "very, very expensive insurance" that could put farmers out of business.

"Farmers today are being gouged from every side," he said. "Financially, this is one more little burden on them that's going to put some folks out of business."

But Hinojosa said the bill does not require the insurance for workers on small and family farms.

"We're talking about corporate farms, agribusiness, Tenneco," he said.

Hinojosa later said the bill would cover 45 percent of the state's estimated 100,000 farmworkers, but less than 5 percent of the farms.

Emmett, drawing applause from colleagues as he took the microphone, said there's no reason to feel more sorry for farmers than for other Texas businessmen.

"I think everybody in this room needs to understand something, all businesses are hurting to some degree. (Stafford Rep. Tom) DeLay's pest control business might be hurting. My advertising agency with four employees is certainly hurting," he said. "We're covered by workers' compensation.

"There's no reason for us to come down here year after year after year and separate out farmers who, in many instances, will tell us that they are in business like everybody else, and then in the other instance they tell us, 'But we dont want to have the same rules apply,'" Emmett said.

Women to have Pentagon tribute

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Maria Elena Torralva, Community Director for Channel 4, the NBC affiliate in San Antonio, and the immediate past chair of the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services, will see her dream come true, with the approval by the Depatment of Defense of a Woman's Corridor in the Pentagon.

Secretary of defense Caspar Weinberger announced to the women Monday that he has instructed the Army, as agent for DOD, to obtain bids for building the museum cases. Dedication will be sometime between Nov. 8 and 15 to coincide with Veterans Day celebrations in the capital.

The corridor, like ones previously dedicated to the memory of Gen. Douglas MacArthur and U.S.-Australian-New Zealand relations, will depict women's part in U.S. wars.

San Antonians to discuss bases

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Thirty members of the Military Affairs committee of the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce will come to Washington next week for their annual good will reception for members of Congress whose votes have helped keep San Antonio the military capital of the country.

The Military Affairs committee will be talking with individual congressmen from Texas and other states about the services provided at San Antonio military installations.

Democratic Rep. Henry Gonzalez' office reported no base in San Antonio is having problems now but of course there is the matter of multi-millions that will be sought for either a new or greatly expanded Brooke Army Medical Center.

Bill would alter voting frequency

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has tentatively approved a bill aimed at making Texans go to the polls less frequently.

Bill sponsor Gerald Hill, D-Austin, said his constituents went to the polls 12 times last year. His measure would do away with many of the exceptions now allowed to the state law which has set four specific election dates — January, April, August and November.

The House, in a voice vote, tentatively approved Hill's bill, which faces another vote before going to the Senate.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, April 28, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Playwright Robert Anderson, Swedish actress Ann-Margret, Oakland A's coach Charlie Metro, "Capitol's" Carolyn Jones and Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: U.S. President James Monroe and actors Lionel Barrymore and Sidney Toler ("Charlie Chan"). Your objectives come into clearer focus in the months ahead. Past roadblocks disappear. Romance colors many of the decisions you make. Be careful not to overextend yourself financially. Parents who make unreasonable demands on their children will lose out. Let friends mediate what seems to be a hopeless dispute. A legal matter is resolved in your favor. Improve your communication skills.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be more prudent in your speech and others will become more responsive. Contradictions make it difficult for you to quickly reach a decision in an important matter.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Asking too many questions can leave you vulnerable. Let others make the first move. Contract disputes are resolved in your favor. A scholarship is possible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): In a business deal, check out your suspicions. Jumping to conclusions will only complicate things. Your intuition helps you make the right choice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Surround yourself with positive people. You need to keep your spirits high to meet the challenges ahead. Refuse to pick up the check for someone who invited you to lunch.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The field is clear for you to gain a leadership post. Keep your emotions under control. The less you say now the better. A romantic entanglement is sapping your energy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Today is a day of reckoning. The final results will give you both peace of mind and lasting financial rewards. Family ties grow stronger.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put your credit cards away until you have more money coming in. Take a more practical approach to business decisions. Do not believe everything you hear.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Not a good time to change jobs. You will do better to stay put a while longer. A hunch brings you extra cash. A homemaker enjoys great success when she returns to school.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Household projects involving both husband and wife prove successful. You get another chance at something that appeared to be lost forever. Swallow your pride and ask for help.

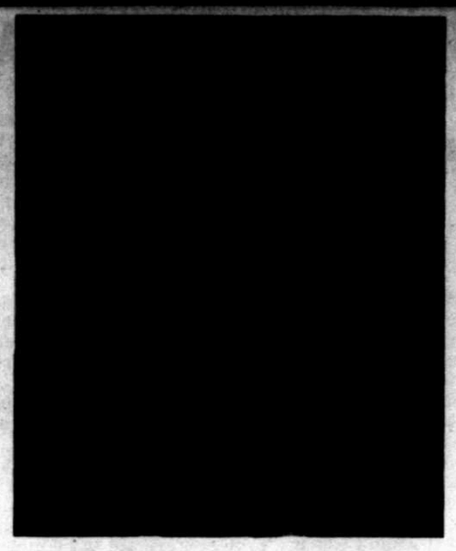

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not let a romantic interlude distract you from your goals. Family members resent the amount of time you spend working. Try to strike a better balance between career and home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): End a partnership where you do all the work while your partner grabs the glory. An invention's success opens up many new avenues. A vacation is so much fun you forget the expense.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A change of scenery proves beneficial. Friends respect your firm stand on a policy matter. You could get a cash reward for something you do on your own time.

NBC gaining repute

NEW YORK (AP) — For a long time, the jokes have been on NBC. Some called it the fourth-rated network behind CBS, ABC and Atari. One producer, who had two series on NBC last season, referred to it as the National Biscuit Company.

Sure, NBC would be No. 1 if the ratings were read upside down, but things are looking better. NBC still is third in viewers, ad revenues and profits — although its 1982 profits are up $60 million over 1981 — but the network is reaching a different audience, and advertisers are noticing.

"NBC has improved its demographics this year," says Bob Igiel of the NW Ayer advertising agency. "NBC apparently is appealing to younger adults and male viewers. It makes them a viable buy. They're still not on a par with ABC and CBS, but they've made strides."

The end of the prime-time ratings race last week put NBC a distant third, but, in comparison with the 1981-82 season, the network was the only one whose national audience did not decline. NBC also was the only network to gain viewers in the five largest markets, and increase its share of higher-income viewers nationwide.

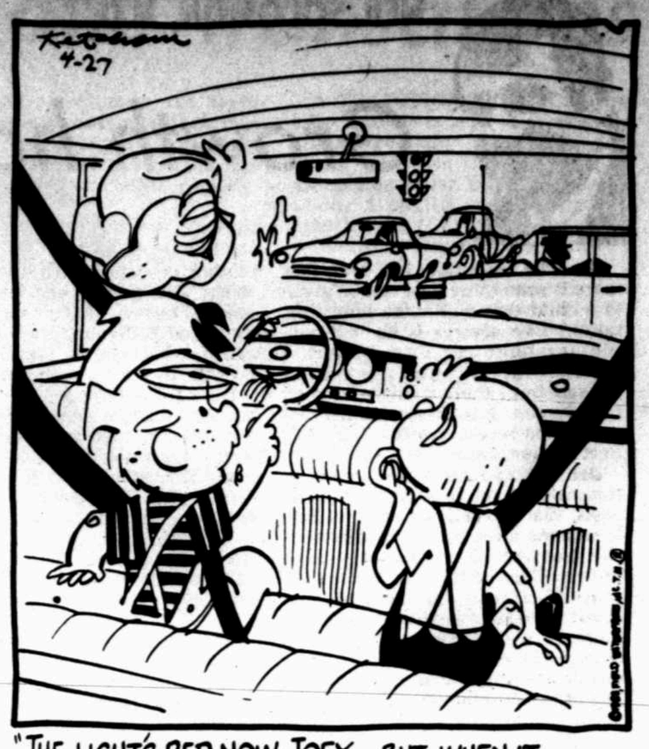

Although CBS was clearly the leader in over-all audiences and ABC was most popular with young-adult niewers, NBC showed prime-time strength with the hard-to-find male adults. In fact, NBC was second to ABC in males 18-49.

NBC's award-winning "Hill Street Blues" was second behind "Monday Night Football" on ABC in attracting male viewers. The program also was most popular in homes with cable hookups, suggesting that quality may be one answer to the networks' dwindling share of the viewing audience.

And then there's tonight's "A Team," fourth in popularity among male viewers and this season's highest-rated new show. It also was NBC's top-rated program. Although "A Team" is colorfully offbeat, it doesn't challenge the mind like NBC's other Tuesday night series, "Remington Steele" and "St. Elsewhere."

Grant Tinker, NBC's chairman, isn't convinced that quality programs won't attract substantial viewers. But, he says, "I'm a little disappointed by how long it's taken for people to find them."

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

Third prize in the Bols Brilliancy competition went to Gabriel Chagas of Brazil for this effort from the recent World Olympiad in Biarritz, France. The reporter was our good friend, Jose Le Dentu.

South's strange opening bid was not the result of looking too deeply into a glass of Bols before sitting down to play. Rather, it is typical Mixed Pairs strategy — the male half of the pair likes to open one no trump, both to make it easier for his partner to respond and, perhaps, so that he can get to play the hand.

Since this was a pairs tournament, overtricks were critical. Dummy's ten of clubs won the first trick, and a heart to the king held. When the diamond jack dropped under the king, Chagas entered dummy with a club finesse and ran the ten of diamonds. He continued with the nine, covered by the queen and taken by the ace. West, meanwhile, discarded two clubs.

Declarer returned to dummy with a diamond to cash dummy's good clubs, sluffing the king and queen of spades from hand as East discarded his remaining spade. He then led the jack of spades to the ace, bringing about this position:

East knew that declarer had only hearts left, so in an attempt to win two of the last three tricks, he returned a low heart. But "Angel Gabriel" had a clever counter — he played a low heart. West was forced to win the trick with the ten of hearts and surrender the last two tricks to dummy's spades!

Growth hormones may alter glucose tolerance

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that there is something that can be given to a child that will make him grow taller? I've always been self-conscious about my own height. I wouldn't expect to use this stuff at my age, but I think it might be good for my son. Is this something that you would recommend? — Mr. A.J., Port Arthur, Texas

Dear Mr. J.: As I have noted in this column on a number of occasions, the potential benefits of any treatment must be weighed against the possibility of adverse side effects. This holds true for human growth hormone. For example, some studies of the use of synthetic human growth hormone have shown changes in glucose tolerance and in insulin secretion that were suggestive of the development of diabetes.

The point is that human growth hormone, like any drug, should be used judiciously. It should not be considered a benign form of treatment that can be used indiscriminately in any youngster who is self-conscious about his or her height. This is a subject that should be discussed in detail with the pediatrician who knows your son and his medical history. If after such discussion, your pediatrician would like to call me, I would be pleased to discuss the treatment with him.

Dear Dr. Solomon: You answered a question about hemorrhoids, but I am still not sure what they are. I would appreciate an explanation. — Many Thanks. — T.D., Chicago

Dear T.D.: The digestive tract — from the intestine to the anal canal — is lined by a network of veins that aid in digestion and absorption of food. Hemorrhoidal veins — specialized vascular cushions — are found in the area of the lower rectum at the junction with the anal canal. These cushions can become swollen and bulge out beneath the thin layer of tissue that covers them, forming tender, painful hemorrhoids. There are two types of hemorrhoids: internal and external. Most sufferers have both types in varying degrees. Internal hemorrhoids occur in the upper portion of the anal canal and may cause pain, burning, itching, or aching in the area. A person might notice some bright, red blood on the stool or on toilet tissue after a bowel movement. This may mean internal hemorrhoids are present. Sometimes internal hemorrhoids become "prolapsed." They are pushed down the anal canal during bowel movements and protrude through the anus. This increases the painful symptoms. In the early stages, the protruding hemorrhoids usually return to their original position by themselves. If they remain prolapsed, internal hemorrhoids can become very painful indeed, and a physician should be consulted. External hemorrhoids occur under the surface of the skin at the anal opening. They tend to disappear after a few days but frequently recur. External hemorrhoids result from disruption of the spongy tissue of a superficial hemorrhoidal vein. This produces pain and swelling, burning and itching of the overlying skin. In most cases, pain and swelling disappear in a few days. Sometimes severe pain or infection develops from external hemorrhoids and a physician should be consulted.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I was in college in the early seventies, I would occasionally use marijuana. To tell the truth, I never really experienced any great effect from it. I had not used any since college until I met some classmates recently at a class reunion. To be brief, the marijuana really affected me and I had to ask someone to drive me home. I'm only 35 years old, but is it possible I'm more susceptible to marijuana now than I was when I was in college? — Matt, New York City

Dear Matt: There is another possible explanation of your more intense reaction to marijuana today than when you were in college; the marijuana itself may be more potent. At least this has been suggested by Dr. Ronald J. Dougherty, of the State University of New York Upstate Medical Center in Syracuse.

You should be commended for realizing your condition and for having someone drive you home. The use of marijuana has been found to affect the ability of a person to trace moving lights. An individual who smokes marijuana and then gets behind the wheel of a car is an accident waiting to happen. Unfortunately, innocent people as well as the driver often suffer as a result of such reckless behavior.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Do psychological problems complicate aesthetic surgery? — Mr. L.L., Dallas

Dear Mr. L.: The patient's psyche is an important factor in all surgery. The nature of aesthetic surgery is such that the patient's psychological problems are apt to be magnified to some degree. Patients may look to surgery to solve their social, sexual and business difficulties and are quite disappointed to find their problems still exist. Other patients with psychological problems will tend to be hypercritical, and will worry over what they consider to be defects following surgery, not visible to anyone else. Others will consult the plastic surgeon and will request surgery that is completely unrealistic, in view of the tissues and features at hand. They are often angry and upset when the surgeon refuses to operate. Psychiatric help or consultation is frequently advisable, but these patients are often unwilling to seek such device. A stable emotional base should exist before one undergoes aesthetic surgery.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My brother-in-law had an operation and he tells me they put something like a band-aid on him to keep him from getting nauseous after the operation. Do you have any idea about what he's talking about? — Sid, Chicago

Dear Sid: Your brother-in-law may be referring to the transdermal (through the skin) administration of a drug called scopolamine, which is used to prevent nausea. It is administered by means of a skin patch behind the ear, the same technique used by our astronauts to prevent motion sickness while on a mission.

For Dolores, Petersburg, Va.: The Papanicolaou (Pap) test has helped reduce cancer of the cervix by 70 percent. There is no valid reason for any woman not to take advantage of this important means of prevention.

Financial institutions 'bank on' automatic transations

LOS ANGELES — When a Santa Cruz, Calif., automated teller machine "miraculously" deposited more than $4 million into a bank account in 1981, the account holder called it the answer to his prayers. Unfortunately for him, police called it grand theft.

Bank officials concluded later that it was possible to manipulate their automated teller because of a defect in the system. The man is scheduled to stand trial May 31.

In an attempt to curtail such "miraculous" transfers of money and improve service, banks have initiated a number of changes in the ever-expanding automated-teller network. The revisions have changed not only automated tellers, but the entire face of banking as well.

"The whole technological revolution is changing banking — how we do banking, not what we do," said Keith Flavetta, vice president of Versatel administration at Bank of America.

Automated tellers first appeared on the retail banking scene to a skeptical California market in the late 1970s. They have reduced the number of tellers banks will have to employ in the future and shortened lines in bank branches.

The machines have also cut down on paper processing, something that could eventually result in smaller service charges for consumers. In fact, many banks are already charging more for checks than for electronic transactions. What's more, there is every indication that more changes are ahead as automated tellers continue to proliferate.

HOW MANY automated tellers actually exist is difficult to determine, but Security Pacific National Bank, for example, installed its first automated unit in August 1980, and now has almost 400.

At first, consumers were intimidated by these mechanized devices. To conquer such fears, the industry mounted a multimillion-dollar advertising campaign extolling the machines' virtues. Some banks even offered gifts and vacation packages to encourage use of automated tellers.

The plan worked: Today there are about 35 million teller cards in the United States, and many bank customers use them more often than they use their MasterCard or Visa.

Consumers are more willing to use automated tellers in part because they have become far more dependable. Many banks say they have fewer errors with the electronic machines than with human tellers.

SOME PEOPLE are still intimidated, though. One Los Angeles resident who has had an automated teller card for a year and a half says she has never used it because she was afraid the machine would do something horrible if she tried.

Computer down time, the most common problem with automated tellers, has been reduced. However, banks caution that percentage figures in this area are somewhat deceiving as they encompass each bank's entire automated teller network. Since these networks are now so extensive, percentages can neglect to show a major problem with a single system. For instance, if one terminal went down for a month, but all the bank's other terminals were working, the one major malfunction would not significantly effect industry statistics.

Nevertheless, most banks said their automated tellers are now available 90 percent to 98 percent of the time each day. That means that consumers are able to transact business 20 to 23 1-2 hours a day, seven days a week.

Another problem bank customers had when automated tellers were introduced was with unauthorized withdrawals. In many cases, the banks said, the customers had unintentionally provided access to their card and code numbers. Sometimes a customer would leave a card at home and a roommate or family member would use it but neglect to advise the cardholder. Banks would investigate the complaints and those banks with cameras installed in their terminals often came back to the customer with a picture of a relative or friend using the card. In other cases it was impossible to tell who had made the unauthorized withdrawal. Banks would either settle with the customer, or customers would simply accept the loss.

Now, with a number of added security measures, banks have significantly cut down on complaints.

CONVENIENCE IS another important reason for the growing acceptance of automated tellers.

Ed Caliendo, vice president and manager of First Interstate Bank's Day and Night teller program, said, "In a 24-hour working town like Los Angeles, an ATM is really convenient."

Customers are also using their automated teller cards during banking hours, a factor that is decreasing the lines in branches, according to Caliendo.

Branch customers still have to wait in lines. However, tellers and bank executives alike see a shortening of the lines as automated tellers become more accepted. The use of automated tellers has reached the stage where customers are beginning to encounter lines at their electronic terminals. Lines at these machines have created a whole new etiquette, electronic banking-style.

INSTEAD OF LINING up right behind the user at an automated teller, customers generally give the user several feet of breathing space.

A benefit for some banks is that they have been able to reduce branch hours, and replace some walk-up windows with automated tellers.

Bank executives are quick to point out that automated tellers have not resulted in mass layoffs of human tellers. However, the machines have significantly decreased the numbers they must employ to keep up with normal growth.

"It's more of what you didn't have to employ," said Christopher Farrell, vice president and product manager for Security Pacific's automated teller system.

Another way banks save is in one of the most expensive aspects of retail banking, the processing of the many paper entries generated by each branch transaction. When a customer uses an automated teller, he generates what is termed a "paperless entry." There is nothing to fill out. Nothing to send. Nothing to file.

A TRADITIONAL CHECK costs a bank 30 cents to $2 to process. An automated teller withdrawal generally costs less than 25 cents. If automated teller machines handle about 5 million transactions a month, which Flavetta says is the number of transactions done on automated tellers at Bank of America, the bank could save $250,000 to $8.75 million every month.

The bank's savings are also likely to result in savings for the customer.

Financial institutions are also trying to make the use of automated tellers more attractive in other ways. They are installing more machines, some of them free standing, miles from a branch. Some machines have been placed in offices and factories. For example, Wells Fargo has 13 Bank at Work automated tellers. These give employees of participating companies all the benefits of a full-service branch within the workplace. One California bank plans to program some of its automated tellers to handle transactions in Spanish, an approach already used by Citibank in New York.

The real winners in the growth of electronic banking are the companies that manufacture most of the machines.

Paved in silver

Texas legislators face a tremendous task finding enough tax revenue to provide all the improvements the state needs. Making ends meet won't be easy in Austin this session, but lawmakers certainly should not overlook the state highway system.

The Texas Good Roads and Transportation Association says the state is in a highway crisis that threatens its citizens' ability to move about efficiently and safely. The association has suggested funding needs for the highway system be met through one or more of several taxing alternatives on those who use the highways. One of the alternatives the association suggests is a five-cent hike in the motor fuel tax and increasing the vehicle registration fee to $25 a year.

A tax is a tax and Texans are right to oppose additional taxation in most instances. A user tax probably is as equitable as any because motorists are taxed only to the extent they use the thoroughfares. But there are many who believe the economic situation currently stresses the need to keep taxation at a minimum and we agree.

Congress has passed a five-cent motor fuels tax increase and the Lone Star State will receive about $400 million more annually for its highways. But those funds only address interstate and U.S. highways and Texas must provide matching funds for the projects.

Rep. David Cain (D-Dallas) is sponsoring a bill in the House designed to provide $700 million annually for repair and improvement of the state highway system, roads the federal monies don't touch like the vastly important farm-to-market system.

"There are a number of ways the Legislature can provide the funds," Cain noted, "but the one alternative we can't afford is to do nothing. We must fix our roads now or face disaster. The longer we wait the worse it becomes and the more costly it is to make repairs or reconstruct."

Determining how much money is needed and available for the state highway system is the job of legislators. In the legislative process of give and take, state spending can be controlled on a priority basis. It should be obvious to anyone who drives on the system that Texas' roads are in need of repairs.

Legislators should make adequate funding available because Texas roads are a priority.

Blood on peace plan

The fragile peace process in the Middle East has been dealt two sickening jolts.

In Jordan on April 10th, King Hussein rejected involvement in the Reagan peace initiative, after Palestinian Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat refused to let Hussein negotiate in the name of the PLO for a Palestinian homeland.

Mr. Reagan had proposed the establishment of a Palestinian entity on the West Bank, with ties to Jordan, if the Palestinians would recognize the right of Israel to exist behind secure borders. Arafat had wavered over acceptance of Jordan to represent the PLO, but extremists within the PLO who opposed the plan finally won out. Israel rejected the Reagan peace plan from the beginning, but some believed that if Jordan would enter negotiations, Israel would join in the peace process.

In Portugal, Palestinian moderate Dr. Issam Sartawi was assassinated in cold blood. Sartawi was a PLO moderate who believed in direct negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians. Sartawi had set up a precedent-breaking meeting between three Israeli peace activists, including Maj. Gen. Mattityahu Peled, and Arafat in Tunis in February.

A radical Palestinian terrorist group led by Abu Nidal and based in Iraq claimed responsibility for the Sartawi killing. Abu Nidal's group was responsible for the shooting of the Israeli ambassador in London last year, an attack which in part provoked the Israeli invasion of Lebanon. Abu Nidal had pronounced death sentences on both Sartawi and Arafat because they dared to meet with Israelis.

Coming as it did on the day Husseyn retreated from involvement in the Reagan plan, the assassination of Sartawi was a clear indication of what extremists would try to do to Arafat, Hussein or any other Arab leader should they negotiate with the Israelis.

Sartawi is dead, but the peace initiative must not be allowed to die. Only courage on the part of moderate Arab and Israeli leaders can save it. They must resist the threats of extremist groups.

Palestinian extremists who reject Israel strengthen the hand of the Israeli extremists who want to take over the West Bank and expel the Arabs. Palestinian and Israeli extremists are on the same side, the side of war.

But there is another side to the Middle East, the side of Israelis and Palestinians who want peace but are afraid to speak up. Sartawi said his views represented those of the "Palestinian silent majority." His Israeli counterpart, Peled, said that when the Peace Now movement called a demonstration to protest the invasion of Lebanon, 400,000 Israelis — one-tenth of the population — attended.

Until Israeli and Palestinian moderates make contact across the chasm of fear that divides their people, there will be no peace in the Middle East, only rejection, violence and horror.

Another View: No rest for Nessie

Once again scientists are trying to learn if there really is a Loch Ness monster. This time they are using a blimp.

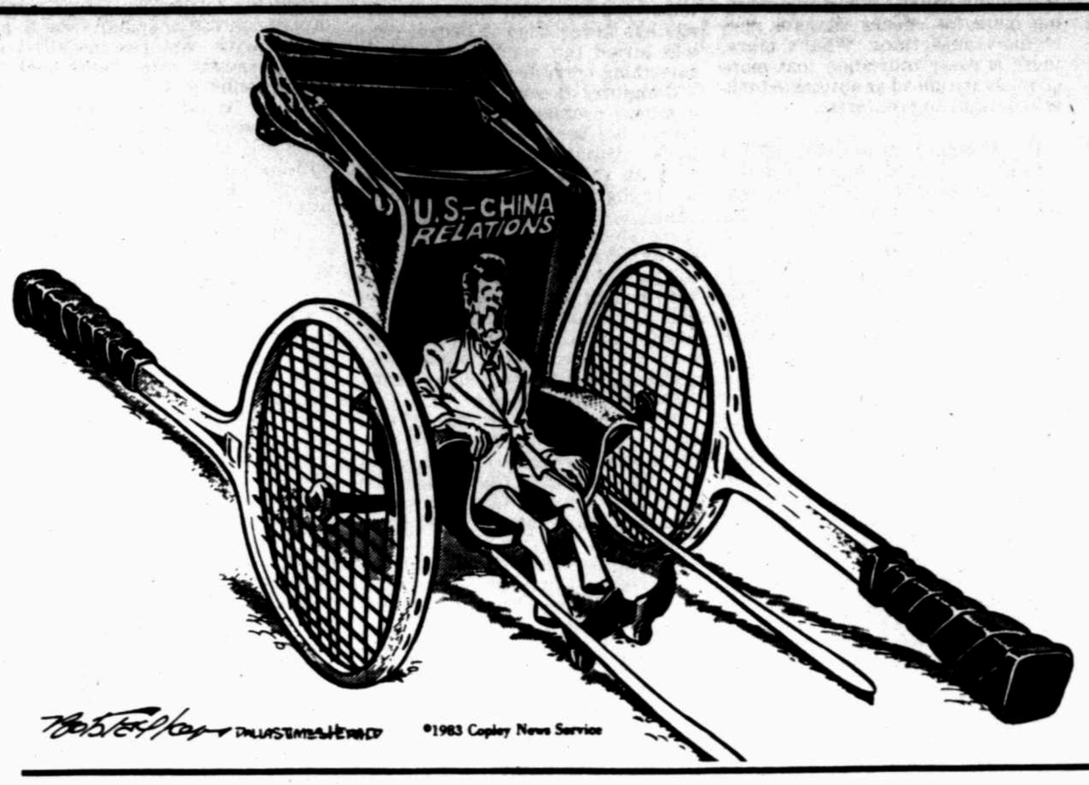

The British Scientific Exploration Society plans to take pictures of the lake from the air in hopes of sighting the monster that has been the subject of rumor and fable for hundreds of years.

Each summer, Nessie is sighted by visitors to the beautiful lake. Vaguely suggestive photographs have been taken from great distances. Scientists have argued pro and con. And the lake has become a great tourist attraction. But no one knows the truth.

We really do not think it matters whether there is a Loch Ness monster, or a family of monsters. More important is the mystery that feeds the human imagination, for we need mysteries and romance.

It would be exciting if a real creature is found. But we prefer the romance of the unknown. We would rather use our imagination and muse about the annual stories of strange and unexplainable creatures lurking beyond the realms of science.

ART BUCHWALD
Robotics sneaking up on employers

Widget was very excited and told me to come over to his sneaker factory right away. "I just hired my first robot system, and I want you to see it."

Art Buchwald

The gate to the factory was closed, but when I drove up to it a voice, almost human, said, "Can I help you?"

"I'm here to see Mr. Widget," and I gave my name.

In 10 seconds the voice responded, "You may drive to the main building and park in visitor's slot number two."

Widget was waiting at the door, all smiles. He put a plastic card into a slot, a door opened, and we walked into his factory. There wasn't a human being in sight, but sneakers were flying off the assembly line and being stuffed into boxes.

"IT'S PRETTY NOISY," I said.

"DOESN'T BOTHER THE ROBOTS," Widget yelled. "THEY DON'T KNOW THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN MACHINE NOISE AND MUZAK."

We went up some stairs to a glass-enclosed booth.

When Widget shut the door he said, "I want you to meet my Master Robot, Turnbill. He is programmed to program the robots on the floor."

Turnbill gave me a steely look and reluctantly put out his arm which I shook.

"How many sneakers did we make today, Turnbill?" Widget asked.

Turnbill's lights blinked, and a deep voice said, "12,890."

Widget rubbed his hands. "I used to make that many in a week. And I had to pay overtime for three shifts. Now I can manufacture the same number in a day, and I don't even have to worry about the robots taking coffee breaks. No social security, no health care payments, no pensions," Widget said, patting Turnbill's back. "And every one of my robots is tax-depreciable, which is more than I could say for my ex-workers."

Turnbill started spitting out a readout. "Glitch on shoelace hole maker, third robot malfunctioning on line one."

Widget said, "It would have taken me a month to find out who was screwing up my shoelace holes if I had a human being on the line. Now I know in matter of seconds."

"What will you do?"

"We'll dump him, and replace him with a robot who can do the job. The sneaker union would never allow me to fire anybody, no matter how bad the person was screwing up my shoes. Nice work, Turnbill. I'm going to make you a vice president."

"Thank you, sir," Turnbill's voice synthesizer said. "Any decision on an assistant microprocessor to help me in packaging?"

"I'm taking it up with the board next week, Turnbill. As I told you, the board has ordered me to put a freeze on buying new microprocessors."

"Why is that?" I asked.

"We're making more sneakers than we ever made before. But we can't seem to sell them."

"Maybe the reason is that robots don't wear sneakers."

"What does that mean?"

"Well, you've laid off your workers and now they don't have money to buy sneakers."

"There are lots of workers in other factories that need sneakers."

"Yes, but they're being replaced by robots as well. Robots are great for what they do, but they're lousy consumers."

Widget looked over at Turnbill nervously. "Don't talk so loud," he whispered to me.

"I don't care," I said.

"This country's success was based on the fact that the people who made our products could afford to buy them. You've replaced your workers with robots and you're saving a fortune in salaries, but you're now up to your ears in sneakers."

"But if I don't have robots making my sneakers, I can't afford to compete with the sneakers that are being imported from abroad," Widget said tearfully. "What should I do?"

"Why don't you ask Turnbill?"

Widget hit several buttons on Turnbill's head.

Turnbill blinked several times and then said, "I'm sorry, I'm in production — not sales."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND
Congressmen deny drug usage

WASHINGTON — Several current and former members of Congress, including such nationally known figures as Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and ex-Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., R-Calif., stand accused of violating the narcotics laws they have prescribed for the rest of us.

Jack Anderson

Those who could be reached for comment have vigorously denied the charges.

I have known the names for more than a year but have withheld them for lack of sworn testimony. I discovered the Capitol dope ring and arranged congressional cover for a narcotics agent who worked closely with my associates Indy Badhwar and Jack Mitchell.

The detective, Mike Hubbard, helped to break the narcotics ring, arrested the alleged ringleaders and seized a quarter-million dollars worth of cocaine. The two suspected ringleaders, Douglas Marshall and Troy Todd, fled to Australia after they were busted but have now been extradited.

An investigative document dated July 3, 1982, named the nine legislators. "More than one source has indicated the following members of Congress may be using controlled substances purchased through (the) distribution organization," it stated.

Now the names have been presented to a federal grand jury and the House Ethics Committee. In the following cases, incriminating evidence of involvement has been provided to investigators by at least three informants:

— Kennedy has been identified by informants as one of the drug ring's alleged customers. Spokesmen quoted the Senator as saying the accusation was "absolutely unfounded, untrue and unfair." He was described as "outraged." His daughter also allegedly bought drugs from a member of the narcotics ring and paid with a check. A spokesman said the daughter was asked about the allegation and replied that "she had no recollection of any such thing."

— Goldwater was secretly taped discussing narcotics with a federal informant named Devon Dupree, who is now in the Justice Department's witness protection program. Officials, nevertheless, have recommended against prosecution. Goldwater has issued a denial of wrongdoing but has refused requests for an interview.

— Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., has been accused in sworn testimony of purchasing cocaine on the floor of the House. One witness against him, ex-House employee Robert T. Yesh, has been sentenced to a year in prison. Yesh's statements implicating Dellums reportedly have been corroborated by a taped conversation. But Dellums has angrily denied the charges.

— Ex-Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., is serving time in federal prison on unrelated charges. But former members of his congressional staff have told a federal grand jury that he had asked them to buy drugs for him.

— Ex-Rep. John Burton, D-Calif., who was named by informants, replied: "Honest to God, I didn't know them. All I know is what I read in the papers."

— Ex-Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., was also identified by informants. He said that he had briefly employed one suspect who had refused to testify before the grand jury. "I've never even sampled marijuana, nor been approached (for drug purchases). This couldn't in the least be based in fact," Van Deerlin swore.

— Also named by three or more informants were Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Tex., Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., and Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md. Except for the statements of the informants, there is no supporting evidence against these congressman so far as I know.

Both the grand jury and the House Ethics Committee have heard secret testimony identifying more than a score of participants in the dope ring run by Todd and Marshall.

WHOSE AIR IS IT?: Pending approval by the Environmental Protection Agency, Utah state authorities plan to let the Kennecott Copper Co. continue the release of sulphur dioxide fumes over about 280 acres of land around the Great Salt Lake. Justification for the air-poisoning is that the land now belongs to Kennecott — thanks to a swap of Kennecott property for federally owned land.

Longstanding EPA policy is that the air over a company's own land doesn't have to be as clean as air outside the company gates. So Kennecott swapped 1,366 acres of corporate land for 1,473 acres of government-owned land. The result is that the dirty air is now over Kennecott-owned property.

Some EPA officials are afraid the dirty-air land swap may become a precedent. They think it will let polluters evade stringent federal air-quality standards.

A Kennecott spokesman insisted that the land swap last year had nothing to do with air-quality standards, but had been in the works for years.

IVAN THE CHEAPSKATE: Like every special United Nations operation, the peace-keeping force in southern Lebanon is funded largely by assessments on individual U.N. members. But according to U.N. accountants, the Soviet bloc has been seriously remiss in its contributions to the peace-keeping force's expenses. Through 1982, the Soviets and their allies owe something more than $206 million to the peace-keeping bill in Lebanon and elsewhere.

State Department sources say the Kremlin's reluctance to ante up its share of the cost is not necessarily political. It is more probably due, they think, to Soviet desire to save a few rubles whenever other governments can be counted on to pick up the tab.

HEMISPHERE REPORT
Central America a political issue

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's Central America has become another U.S. political issue.

William Giandoni

The president's critics no longer seem convinced by the warnings he has voiced, which have been tacitly confirmed even by Sandinista spokesmen in Managua, that Nicaragua has been made into a Marxist subversion base in Central America.

Rather than try to deny the obvious, the administration's opponents have taken up the cry that alleged U.S. covert actions in Central America violate the law.

Government spokesmen, from Secretary of State George P. Shultz on down, deny that, and Democratic efforts to amend the law suggest that the administration is on solid ground.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, addressed the subject rather comprehensively in a recent speech to the Senate.

"The media," the Arizona Republican said, "has been filled with stories ... that the United States is supporting an effort to overthrow the Sandinistas' Marxist-inspired military dictatorship in Nicaragua."

One major newspaper even published what it claimed was "a top-secret National Security Council document relating to these allegations," Goldwater said.

He protested that "what would appear to be the nation's secrets are so little regarded and so poorly protected that they daily become grist for the media mill" and reminded his colleagues "of their obligation to protect the legitimate secrets of this nation regardless of the apparent importance of an issue or the heat of debate."

"The unauthorized disclosure of classified information may give one or the other of us a short-term advantage in debates of this sort, but the long-term beneficiaries of this practice are usually the enemies of the United States," Goldwater said.

He noted that the president does have legal authority to conduct covert operations and, also, that Congress' "power of the purse" gives it the means "to shut off any programs which we deem to be contrary to the best interests of the United States."

Like other informed officials, Goldwater said he was "constrained from discussing (alleged actions against the Sandinista regime) in any useful detail in an open forum."

But he insisted that the House and Senate Intelligence committees have been briefed several times in recent months on the situation in Central America and said "I concur" that the U.S. government is not breaking the law "in the context of alleged covert action directed against the Marxist regime in Nicaragua."

What concerns some observers is the so-called Boland Amendment, passed late one evening last December as Congress sought to adjourn for its Christmas holiday.

That amendment declares that "none of the funds provided in this act may be used by the Central Intelligence Agency or the Department of Defense ... for the purpose of overthrowing the government of Nicaragua or provoking a military exchange between Nicaragua and Honduras."

Goldwater told reporters that "a key element of this law relates to the purpose of the U.S. government and not to the expressed purpose of the recipients of any such support." He also said he had been assured by CIA Director William Casey that no U.S. activities are for the purpose of overthrowing the Sandinistas.

To close that loophole, Rep. Michael Barnes, the Maryland Democrat who is chairman of the House Western Hemisphere Affairs subcommittee, recommended that the language of the amendment be revised, changing "for the purpose of" to "has the effect of supporting the overthrow of the government of Nicaragua."

Goldwater talked of Congress "trying to make political brownie points with the media," and The New York Times made mention of "voice votes along party lines" on Latin American policy.

Sen. Jesse Helms, the conservative Republican from North Carolina, protested that some congressional debate and action "had the clear intention of frustrating administration foreign policy."

Shultz objected that "the moves being made (in Congress) seem to be destined to prevent us from continuing to support our friends in El Salvador and elsewhere in Central America in their effort to provide a military security shield."

Rep. Henry Hyde, an Illinois Republican on the Western Hemisphere affairs group, declared that "we have rendered vulnerable the democratically elected government of El Salvador and protected the Marxist government of Nicaragua."

Divers rescue eight trapped in flooded cave for 72 hours

MOUNT VERNON, Ky. (AP) — Eight spelunkers trapped for three days in a flooded cave said they weren't sure anyone was looking for them until they heard the sound of divers who finally rescued them safely.

The amateur explorers, all belonging to the Greater Cincinnati Grotto of an Ohio spelunking club, crawled out of the dank, cold cave on Tuesday morning, 72 hours after rising water trapped them 1,800 feet from the entrance.

"Until we discovered the pump noise and the diver's line, we didn't know what was going on. There could have been no one out there for all we knew," said Jack Hissong, co-leader of the group.

In fact, their disappearance touched off a massive rescue effort which included divers from as far away as Bloomington, Ind.

By Monday night, the rescuers had made contact with the group, which had taken shelter in another part of the cave from the water that flooded the entrance. By noon Tuesday, all eight of the spelunkers were free.

Jill Vedder, 24, the youngest explorer, was the first to emerge around 10 a.m. from the Rockcastle County cave.

Though the spelunkers were concerned about food and fuel, Ms. Vedder, an advertising agency employee from Cincinnati, said, "We always knew somebody was going to come in and get us or we would get ourselves out."

Although Ms. Vedder was only on her third caving expedition, two members of the group had a combined 40 years experience in exploring caves. They and others in the group had visited it before.

After the trapped explorers moved to a ledge and stored their supplies, they sang, told jokes and ate to pass the time.

"We talked to each other about positive things, when we could expect you, when we could expect the water to go down and for most of the time, people's spirts were up," Ms. Vedder told rescuers. "We told all the jokes we knew and we talked about food."

"I literally shook for 48 to 50 hours," said Mark Rocklin. "We were getting cold, a little bit hypothermic. A lot of it probably was nerves, not knowing what was going on outside."

The biggest problem after the second day "was the exhaustion setting in," Rocklin said. "I really didn't sleep but about two hours."

Feminist's lawyer to ask for bail

GRETNA, La. (AP) — A lawyer for feminist Ginny Foat, who spent three months in a California jail while unsuccessfully fighting extradition to Louisiana to face charges in a 1965 murder, said he would seek her immediate release on bail.

Ms. Foat, 41, who arrived here Tuesday from Los Angeles, was whisked from New Orleans International Airport to the Jefferson Parish Correctional Center and spent the night in a small, single cell furnished with only a mattress on the floor.

Ms. Foat was to be arraigned here today. John Reed, her New Orleans lawyer, said he would ask Judge Robert J. Burns to release her on bond immediately.

It was not immediately known whether the public would be allowed to attend today's arraignment, although a sheriff's captain said such hearings are usually conducted in private.

Ms. Foat took leave from her post as president of the California chapter of the National Organization for Women after her arrest Jan. 11.

A few days after her arrest, she was indicted in the tire-iron bludgeoning of Moises Chayo, an Argentine businessman killed in the western New Orleans suburb of Metairie. At the time, Ms. Foat was working as a New Orleans barmaid, authorities said.

Her ex-husband, John Sidote, allegedly told New York police in 1977 that when he and Ms. Foat were still together, she killed Chayo in New Orleans and Donald Fitting in Lake Tahoe, Nev., in 1965.

Flowerpot explodes at U.S. war college

WASHINGTON (AP) — After repeated telephone warnings, a bomb exploded in a flowerpot at the National War College at Fort McNair, destroying the vessel and shattering windows but causing no injuries.

The bomb went off Tuesday night as members of the 67th Ordnance Detachment, a bomb-disposal unit based at the fort, were on their way to the three-story brick building, said Col. Jamie Walton, spokesman for the Military District of Washington.

Fort McNair, which lies along the bank of the Anacostia River, is the home of several high-ranking military officers.

Authorities had been alerted by three calls to the Pentagon that a bomb was to be set off at the National War College — "evidently a tape-recorded message," according to Walton.

General discusses retirement system

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Gen. John A. Wickham, Jr., who will become Army chief of staff in July, said today he senses "a tremendous effort on the part of informed people in Congress to change the retirement system of people in the military."

Wickham, currently Army vice chief of staff, was questioned about the military retirement system by members of the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services (DACOWITS) at its spring meeting at the Pentagon.

He said "$20 to $30 billion is involved" in the retirement system.

"The goal of most of these people is that we must move to compress this present system. I think we must approach adjustment in the retirement system with great caution" Wickham said.

"I see this planned change aided by uninformed media seeking to use the military as a whipping boy.

"Here I'd like to point out that this may be a deterrent to young people joining our service if they see the retirement system changed. The most successful corporations in the United States know that the best management system is taking care of their people.

"I'm going to make caring for our people my highest priority, including their pay emoluments and human quality of life."

Asked about the military pay freeze, Wickham said, "This is a stop-gap measure for fiscal year 1984 only, which the president decided upon, which most of our officers understand.

"We have decided that we will make it up to them in 1985. This is just a one time gap in 1984."

Housing bills still under construction

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, — Three housing bills, which are eagerly awaited by the national housing industry and many would-be home owners, are expected to get action in Congress soon.

Tuesday the House is expected to wind up debate and vote favorably on an Emergency Housing measure, HR 1983, brought to the House floor by Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D., San Antonio, chairman of the housing subcommittee. It provides funds for paying mortgages on homes of the poor or unemployed who are about to lose their homes through foreclosure. It also offers money for temporary shelters for the homeless.

Another Gonzalez-led movement is to finish drafting the Housing Authorization bill for the year. Urging committee members to attend the meeting and work hard, Gonzalez said "I think we can finish in three hours."

The other housing bill is proposed by Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., chairman of the housing subcommittee of the Senate. He will soon hold hearings on this but has not yet announced the date. He is getting many requests to testify on his unique plan to permit taxpayers to devote a portion of their tax-deferred Individual Retirement Account (IRA) investments toward the down payment for a new principal residence. This is called the Mortgage Retirement Account act of 1983.

It is being hailed already by leaders in the industry as a means of selling more homes and curing the ills of unemployment and production of goods. He has the support already of 16 Democrats and Republicans on the committee.

Tower's office said they had "not yet analyzed the bill" as to how it would specifically affect Texas.

Feinstein: Election victory a 'mandate for courage'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mayor Dianne Feinstein, forced into a recall election by a fringe group opposed to gun control, says her landslide victory at the polls is a "mandate for courage" in her administration.

Appearing before a crowd of about 1,000 cheering supporters as the election results came in Tuesday night, Ms. Feinstein promised that she would be "a mayor that's not going to let the tail wag the dog."

The election was sparked by the White Panther Party, a tiny group angered by Ms. Feinstein's support of a handgun ban. Its 20 members circulated recall petitions even after a court nullified the ban.

Letter brings presidential price

NEW YORK (AP) — Publisher Malcolm Forbes paid $132,000 for an 1841 letter opened by President William Henry Harrison, the highest price ever paid for a presidential letter at auction, an auction house spokeswoman said.

The letter initially was estimated as worth between $30,000 and $50,000, said Batya Knapp, a spokeswoman for Sotheby's gallery, after Tuesday's sale.

She said Harrison's presidential letters are valuable because there are so few of them.

Midland High third baseman Judd Ryan completes a double play after tagging Abilene High's George Shannon on a throw from Wade Perry during District 4-5A baseball game Tuesday at Memorial Stadium diamond.

Rebels stumble into 5A playoffs

ABILENE — Thanks to a 14-13 victory by Midland High over Abilene High Tuesday, the Midland Lee Rebels are in the Class 5A playoffs, despite losing to Abilene Cooper, 8-5.

To be guaranteed a state berth, Lee had to either win or have Abilene High lose.

The Rebels still have a shot at winning the District 4-5A title, but they need help from Big Spring on Saturday to get it. The Steers travel to San Angelo to face the Bobcats. Lee will host Midland High. Should Lee win and San Angelo lose, a one-game playoff next week will be scheduled to determine an outright champion.

Abilene Cooper jumped all over Lee starter Kerry Robertson in the first inning for seven runs and, from there, never trailed. Lee picked up a run in the second and two in the sixth and seventh for their five.

Robertson suffered the loss, his first of the year while Greg Galbraith claimed the win.

IN OTHER 4-5A games, San Angelo used 11 hits while holding Odessa High to three to lead the way to a 9-3 victory and Big Spring edged past Odessa Permian, 5-4.

The Bobcats scored seven runs in the first three innings off loser Tommy Olivas. Jeff Schkade pitched five innings for the victory before getting relief help from Lance Harris.

San Angelo catcher Henry Klepac had a big day at the plate with two doubles and a home run.

Big Spring picked up one run in the bottom of the seventh to break a 4-4 deadlock and claim the 5-4 victory.

Tommy Tyler, the third Permian pitcher in the third inning, ended up suffering the loss while Adam Rodriquez took the win in relief.

'Dogs finally deal with prosperity

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

"We can't stand prosperity," has been Midland High coach Tim Whalen's favorite expression all season long. The Bulldogs couldn't stand it Tuesday, but they dealt with it.

With the help of two big innings, highlighted by Keith Clay's grand slam in the third and Mike Timlin's two-run shot in the fourth, Midland High jumped out to a 12-1 lead.

Sound too good to be true? It was. The Bulldogs had to score two more runs in the bottom of the seventh to claim a 14-13 District 4-5A victory at Memorial Stadium Field.

"I'm just glad to see us win one," said Whalen. "Them poor kids (Bulldogs) try hard, but they don't seem to get the job done sometimes."

His Bulldogs had dropped four straight, losing the last three in extra innings.

MAKING THE error in critical situations or failing to come up with the needed hit with runners in scoring position have been two of the big problems Midland High has suffered in this 4-9 season. Tuesday it was Abilene High's turn to stumble around the field, committing six errors — four in the six-run third inning and two in the seventh.

"That's the trouble with the swirling wind at Doggie Diamond," said Whalen about four easy pop ups Abilene High dropped. "If you don't practice here all the time you have trouble with it because the stadium (Memorial Stadium) blocks the wind from the field."

Abilene High coach Bob Harmon had a similar comment. "It was a combination of the way it (the wind) moves around up there and the way the sun shines," he said. "Maybe it (the errors) had something to do with our intensity. We were trying so hard because we knew we still had a shot at the playoffs."

The Bulldogs ended that shot in the bottom of the seventh inning when two errors cost the Eagles the tying and winning runs.

With one out, Jose Carrasco beat out an infield single and went to second on a wild pitch. Tim Davis reached first on a fielding error by Abilene third baseman David Oden to put runners on the corners and, after Davis stole second, Carrasco tied the game on Abilene relief pitcher Greg Ray's second wild pitch of the inning.

After Ray walked Mike Timlin and hit Tommy Davis, James Pitts punched the first pitch down the third base line. Oden bobbled it and Tim Davis scored the winner despite freezing on the bases-loaded grounder.

"I think because Tim froze on the play is what caused their third baseman to misplay the ball," said Whalen. "He tried to grab the ball and tag Tim but he left the ball behind."

"No doubt Midland High was due to win one like this," said Harmon. "They've lost a few times like this. I just wish it wasn't against us."

NEITHER TEAM was able to come up with a stopper on the mound. The Bulldogs tagged loser Jay Gravens with nine hits for 11 runs before Ray was called upon in the fourth. Ray gave up five more hits and three runs.

Bulldog starter John Covarrubias went four innings, pitching a three-hit ball game before Abilene High sent him to the showers. Releiver Mike Timlin came in from right field for three batters, put all three on base and returned to right, leaving only Jose Carrasco to finish the game. He gave up six more runs.

"They were probably tired from the extra inning game against San Angelo," said Whalen about Covarrubias and Timlin. "And, you know Jose, he's been pitching all year."

What the two teams lacked on the pitching mound, they made up for at the plate. When Carrasco finally got the third out in the fifth inning, Midland High's 11-run lead was gone. Fifteen batters went to the plate and 10 runs scored on eight hits.

The Eagles were paced by George Shannon and Oden with three hits each and every Abilene player scored a run. Carrasco was three-for-five, including a double, and Clay was two-for-two for six RBI for the Bulldogs. Tim Davis, in four at bats, had two doubles.

Elway still says 'No!' to Baltimore

NEW YORK (AP) — The Baltimore Colts, unable to strike the right deal for the No. 1 choice in the National Football League draft, gambled and apparently lost Tuesday when they picked Stanford quarterback John Elway.

Just as they turned down trades, Elway turned down the Colts.

Elway, a pure dropback passer who was called the biggest quarterback prize since Joe Namath, said he would forgo football for a baseball career with the New York Yankees unless the Colts trade him to a West Coast team in the next few days.

"As I stand here now, it's going to be baseball," the 6-foot-2½ All-American told a news conference in San Jose, Calif. "I haven't ruled out football yet, but I'm a lot closer to baseball than I was before."

The Colts, however, insisted they did not draft Elway just to trade him elsewhere.

Elway told the Colts before the draft he didn't want to play for them and he left no doubt Tuesday in telling Baltimore Coach Frank Kush that he would not change his mind.

"I don't want to be a jerk, but I told Mr. Kush, 'You've been offered three ones (first-round picks) and a quarterback, and now you have nothing.' And then I hung up."

Elway said his agent, Marvin Demoff, had been talking with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner about a five-year escalating-salary deal that would average about $500,000 a year. Jack Elway, John's father, said there was an argeement in principle with the Yankees but John said no contract has been signed.

Arizona State's Jim Jeffcoat
...Cowboys' No. 1 draft choice

The selection of Elway began a quarterback parade unmatched in NFL draft history. On three occasions, four of them had been picked in the opening round. This time it was six, one going to each of the five teams in the American Conference's Eastern Division, including the Colts.

Six defensive backs also were taken in the first round, along with five offensive linemen; four running backs, including No. 2 pick Eric Dickerson of Southern Methodist, to the Los Angeles Rams, and No. 3 Curt Warner of Penn State to Seattle; three defensive linemen, two wide receivers, one tight end and one linebacker.

The first star of the rival United States Football League to be chosen was wide receiver Trumaine Johnson of Grambling State, the league's leading receiver. Johnson, who would have been a sure first-round choice if he had not signed with the USFL's Chicago Blitz, was picked first on the sixth round by the San Diego Chargers.

But the player who counted to the NFL, the one who dominated pre-draft maneuvering, was Elway, and his status was just has unclear after as it was before.

When San Diego's offensive-minded Chargers signed record-breaking Dan Fouts, their free-agent quarterback, on Tuesday, they decided giving up the first of their three first-round picks, No. 5 overall, was too valuable to trade away.

They used it to draft the most dominant defensive player available, linebacker Billy Ray Smith from Arkansas.

Chicago and Houston, two teams with exceptional runners but poor blocking for them, chose offensive linemen. The Bears took tackle Jimbo Covert from Pitt to open the holes for Walter Payton and the Oilers put Southern California guard Bruce Matthews in front of Earl Campbell.

The Pittsburgh Steelers, in transition to a 3-4 defense, selected the nation's leading collegiate nose tackle in Texas Tech's Gabriel Rivera. And the Dallas Cowboys, whose defensive front four all are more than 30 years old, picked defensive end Jim Jeffcoat from Arizona State.

Dallas opts for need during draft session

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys needed a linebacker. They got a linebacker.

The Cowboys needed a defensive lineman. They got two defensive linemen.

They needed a tight end. They got a tight end.

Dallas, which prides itself on drafting the best athlete available when the National Football League has its annual lottery, opted for need Tuesday.

An just for kicks they took a quarterback playing in the United States Football League, Reggie Collier of Southern Mississippi and Birmingham, in the sixth round.

Collier's selection came in the sixth round and club President Tex Schramm said "You never know what might happen. We waited four years on Roger Staubach when he was in the Navy and it paid off. Reggie is a great player. Maybe we'll get him some day."

The Cowboys drafted Arizona State defensive end Jim Jeffcoat in the first round and took Oregon linebacker Mike Walter in the second.

In the third round, they grabbed Jeffcoat's teammate, a starter at the other end, 6-5, 240-pound Bryan Caldwell.

In the fourth round, they selected Florida tight end Chris Faulkner because Jay Saldi is unhappy being a Cowboy.

Personnel director Gil Brandt called Jeffcoat and Walter both "surefire, can't miss" prospects.

Brandt also predicted Walter would be starting by the time Dallas entered the regular season at strongside linebacker

VDS turns Atlanta's near-disaster into near-victory

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Count Rudy Van der Straten's VDS racing team made its Indy-car debut recently in the Atlanta 200, pulling a near-victory (third place) out of the mouth of near-disaster. And the next saga for the Midland-based team is the Indianapolis 500.

VDS arrived at the Atlanta 200 as the new kid on the racing block, making its first run on an oval track that used to characterize the Indy circuit. The VDS driver was Indy-car rookie John Paul Jr., a 22-year-old road racing wizard who had never raced an Indy-car on an oval track.

The skeptics probably had a field day with Paul Jr. after he crashed the VDS entry into the wall during a qualifying practice run on a Saturday prior to the Sunday race.

VDS HAD to pull out its backup car to qualify and Paul Jr. made it this time, but with a low 16th spot on the starting grid. For the "experts" it was easy to say, "VDS isn't a race factor."

Paul Jr. ended up third, only one lap down to winner Gordon Johncock and less to Al Unser Sr., the former driver for both Midland's Jim Hall and Bobby Hillin. The third place came in the backup car that was set up for a Phoneix race that was flooded out.

"We just wanted to qualify and finish the race with eyes on a Top 10 finish, but we were extremely excited about finishing third overall," said VDS' Franz Weis. "Wrecking the first car was a bad note for the team, but the kid (Paul Jr.) just came back and did a great job.

"In fact, if all the times had remained the same and we had our top car in the race, we might have won it. The backup car was set up for the Phoenix race and we were getting only 46 inches of boost while the others were running at 48 inches. That's about 15 horse power per inch.

"We wanted Paul Jr. to be comfortable and finish the race, but he was really competitive even though the manifold pressure was not up to boost."

VDS HAD no engine problems during the race and the car performed well even with the boost problems.

"We were low in boost, but we had no practice time to speak of," said VDS chief mechanic Phil Casey. "We had two warmup laps and two to qualify, so we had only four laps in the car. The car worked very well. About the only thing we did in the race was change tires about halfway through and that helped the car work better.

"He (Paul Jr.) did a good job of driving in traffic and passed (Mario) Andretti a couple of times. The team did well also. We had three pit stops in the 12 to 16 second range."

Weis said it is hard to blame Paul Jr. for the practice crackup. "Andretti crashed his car in the same place and Mario has a lot of experience. The Atlanta course is one of the worst and there is a bump in one turn that if you hit it, you are out."

So with one race under the belt, VDS takes its newfound confidence to the Indy 500. Paul Jr., being a rookie driver, still has one leg left to qualify as a driver for the Indy 500. He has passed two stages, but still must drive 20 laps at speeds above 180 miles per hour.

Both cars, however, will be set up for the Indy run and both Weis and Casey are comfortable with the VDS equipment.

"We're really pleased with the Indy prospects. It would have been better to have had the Phoenix race behind us also, but the weather got that one," Casey noted.

"Mr. Van der Straten was elated with the third place since it was his first oval experience. He got into Indy-car racing because of the added road races. CART will have five this year and maybe eight next year. We could be very strong in those races with John Paul. But now things are looking good in the oval tracks also," Weis said.

THE INDY marathon begins May 7 for VDS when Paul Jr. is scheduled to complete his rookie test. Open practice will follow for all the Indy teams until May 14 when the first day of qualifying is held. May 14 is the key date for VDS. That's when they want to earn its qualifying time to insure a respectable starting berth in the 33-car field.

And speaking of starts, VDS is off and flying. A near-disaster has turned into a third place finish. Not bad for a bunch of rookies, Weis and Casey not withstanding. Those two have enough gray hair to supply several Indy teams. You are in good hands with VDS.

Gators nip Cubs in 12

BEAUMONT — The Beaumont Gators scored a 12th inning run here Tuesday night to nip the Midland Cubs, 4-3, in a Texas League game that stopped Midland's brief two-game winning streak.

Beaumont won the game on the heroics of Mark Gillapsie, who singled in the 12th, stole second, advanced to third on an error by Midland second baseman Trey Brooks and scored on a single by Pat Casey.

Gillapsie's single came off losing pitcher Neil Bryant, 0-2, to open the 12th and Casey's winning hit came off Ken Pryce, who faced only one batter.

Mark Williamson, 1-1, got the victory with one inning of relief work.

Beaumont held a 1-0 lead through the first seven innings of play, but the Cubs had a lock on a victory when they came up with three eighth inning runs off two Beaumont pitchers.

Brooks drove in both Tom Lombarski and Hill with a double to center in the eighth. Lombarski, being used as a pinch hitter, had driven in Bill Hatcher with a key single earlier in the inning.

However, the Cubs let the lead get away in the bottom of the inning with two runs, neither of which was earned as Midland committed two errors in the inning.

The current series is tied at 2-2, heading into tonight's rubber game.

Midland is now 2½ games out of first place in the Texas League West, trailing San Antonio.

Sorensen, Knepper end skid

Texas' Smithson notches third victory

By The Associated Press

Lary Sorensen and Bob Knepper both snapped long dry spells Tuesday, pitching the Cleveland Indians and Houston Astros to victories while Texas Ranger pitcher Mike Smithson became a three-game winner.

Sorensen ended a personal 10-game losing streak with a three-hitter as the Indians whipped Minnesota 7-1. The veteran right-hander had lost his final seven decisions last season and his first three this year. He struck out three and walked two.

Cleveland clinched the victory with five runs in the seventh inning, breaking a 1-1 tie. Miguel Dilone singled home two of the runs and two more scored on a triple by Manny Trillo.

KNEPPER PITCHED a four-hitter to defeat Montreal 2-0 for his first shutout since 1980 and his first victory since last Aug. 14. The Astros' left-hander was in constant trouble, though, because of seven walks, five of them to leadoff batters.

Houston's runs came in the first when Omar Moreno opened with a triple and scored on Dickie Thon's sacrifice fly, and the ninth on a bases-empty homer by Jose Cruz.

Smithson hurled a five-hitter to move his perfect record to 3-0 and Buddy Bell and Mickey Rivers each doubled in a run to pace the Texas Rangers to a 2-1 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

In the only other day game played Tuesday, Terry Kennedy, Steve Garvey and Tim Flannery slugged home runs leading the San Diego Padres to a 10-8 victory over the Chicago Cubs. Gary Woods and Steve Lake homered for the Cubs.

In National League night games, Larry McWilliams threw a one-hitter — a fifth-inning single by Bob Brenly — as the Pittsburgh Pirates downed the San Francisco Giants 3-0. McWilliams struck out eight, walked five and was helped by three double plays, along with Bill Madlock's two-run double and Johnny Ray's solo homer.

Dale Murphy homered and singled and drove in four runs as the Atlanta Braves unleashed a 19-hit attack in beating the Philadelphia Phillies 10-4 for their 10th straight win at home, tying a club record set in 1966. The Braves were helped by five Philadelphia errors, including two by usually sure-handed center fielder Garry Maddox.

Bruce Berenyi tossed a five-hitter, spoiling Tom Seaver's return to Cincinnati as the Reds routed the New York Mets 7-0. Seaver, 1-1, gave up five runs in five innings in his first game back in Cincinnati since the Reds traded him to the Mets in the off-season. New York is now 0-9 on the road this season.

Ben Oglivie homered leading off the ninth inning to give the Milwaukee Brewers a 4-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox in an American League game. Cecil Cooper's two-run single in the eighth had given Milwaukee a 3-3 tie.

IN AL night games, George Brett homered and extended his hitting streak to 14 games as the Kansas City Royals belted the New York Yankees 10-4. Larry Gura ran his record to 4-0 with a complete game.

Islanders claw Boston Bruins, 5-2

BOSTON (AP) — Tomas Jonsson, Mike Bossy and Duane Sutter scored goals within a decisive seven-minute span in the second period and the New York Islanders hung on Tuesday night for a 5-2 victory over the Boston Bruins in the opening game Wales Conference final round.

The Islanders, bidding for a fourth consecutive Stanbley Cup championship, also got goals from Brent Sutter and Bob Bourne in jumping to a quick lead in the best-of-seven series.

Trailing 4-0, the Bruins made a game attempt to come back in the final period. Barry Pederson and Ray Bourque scored 17 seconds apart atr the six-minute mark.

However, led by goalie Billy Smith, the Islanders held off the Bruins until Bourne dashed Boston's last hopes by blocking a pass and scoring his sixth playoff goal of the season on a breakaway at 17:27.

San Antonio's Gene Banks (20) goes over Denver's Danny Schayes (34) and Alex English in the opening best-of-seven NBA playoff between the two teams.

Spurs, Nuggets roll in 285 points

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — To hear San Antonio's Mike Mitchell tell it, his team's record-breaking National Basketball Association playoff game with the Denver Nuggets was, ho hum, high scoring.

"The high score didn't surprise me," Mitchell said. "I think the whole series will be like that."

The Spurs dominated the Nuggets throughout Tuesday's first game of their best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal game, winning 152-133.

The teams meet again here tonight.

San Antonio's George Gervin had 42 points and 10 rebounds, but he was only looking forward.

"Denver will play better ball tomorrow," he said. "They know if they win tomorrow, they go home with a split and that's good for a series on the road."

Gervin's game-high points were one highlight of the record-breaking game, in which playoff marks were set for most points and most assists by both teams in a game and most points by one team in the first half.

The combined 285 points bettered by six the 279 points St. Louis and San Francisco scored in a 1967 playoff game. The Spurs' 82 points at intermission was five more than Milwaukee scored against Philadelphia in 1970.

The Spurs and Nuggets combined for 78 assists to break the mark of 76 set by Milwaukee and Denver in 1978 and tied by Phoenix and Los Angeles in 1980.

San Antonio's biggest lead Tuesday came in the fourth quarter, when Gervin hit an 18-foot jumper to put the Spurs up 146-123 with 2:51 left in the game.

Johnny Moore had 24 points and 17 assists for the Spurs, and Mitchell and Gene Banks both added 22.

Dan Issel was high scorer for Denver with 28 points and Kiki Vandeweghe had 22.

Kareem impresses himself

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Even Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was impressed with his statistics in the Los Angeles Lakers' 112-106 National Basketball Association playoff victory Tuesday night over the Portland Trail Blazers.

"Hey, look at that, I was the team leader in assists," the Laker center said as he perused a scoring sheet.

Abdul-Jabbar, with two or three men guarding him when he had the ball, had seven assists — and 37 points — as the Lakers ran up a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven Western Conference semifinals against Portland.

In the first game of the series, he'd scored 32 as the Trail Blazers generally kept just one man on him.

"The only big difference that the double-coverage made was that I passed off more, thus the assists," said Abdul-Jabbar.

Portland Coach Jack Ramsay, whose strategy of defending Abdul-Jabbar didn't work again, said, "I don't know if I've ever seen Kareem play a better game."

Asked if the two consecutive losses might have disheartened his club, Ramsay answered: "On the contrary. A game like this shows we can beat them...'It was a big improvement over last Sunday."

Oilers sting Black Hawks

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Mark Messier scored three goals to set a National Hockey League record for playoff hat tricks and Glenn Anderson scored four times Tuesday night to pace the Edmonton Oilers to an 8-2 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks and a 2-0 lead in their Campbell Conference final.

Tourney honors Allison

Midland Country Club will host the first annual Jimmy Allison Memorial Golf Tournament Tuesday, May 10, as a fund raiser for the Midland Unit of the American Cancer Society.

Entry fee for the tournament is $150 per person and is tax deductible. Entries will benefit the American Cancer Society and will be used for cancer research in addition to local public and professional education and services for cancer patients.

Registration forms may be picked up at any of the country club pro shops or at Hogan Municipal Golf Course. Further information may be obtained by calling David Hurta at 682-3717, Randy Martin at 685-0738 or Jim Chase at 684-5844.

The tournament will be limited to 40 two-man teams with a 1 p.m. shotgun tee off. Prizes will be awarded for the longest drive, closest to the pin and hole-in-one. The top three teams in each division will also receive prizes.

The format will be two-man best ball, low net, full handicap with A and B divisions. A cold plate lunch will be served at 11:30 a.m. with an awards ceremony following the tournament.

In previous years, the Midland Unit participated in the National Walter Hogan Memorial Tournament held every year in August, but the Midland Unit of the ACS has decided to change the tournament date to commemorate Allison.

Allison was president and publisher of The Midland Reporter-Telegram and a prominent civic leader. Allison died August 31, 1978, from pneumonia, one month after cancer surgery.

Allison was active in Midland business and community organizations and deeply involved in local and national politics.

The Allison family has become recognized locally for contributions to cancer treatment and services.

WEST TEXAS SPORTS

Chap athletes to be honored

The Midland College Chaparral Athletic Awards banquet will be held 7 p.m. May 4 at the Chaparral Center. Athletes in all MC sports will be honored.

Tickets will be on sale until noon Monday at Bill Williams Tire Center (682-1671), Chaparral Center (684-9811), and the MC Athletic Office (684-7851).

Members of the MC Region V basketball champions, the WJCC women's tennis champions, the men's golf and tennis teams will be honored at the annual fete.

New Moto track to open

The grand opening of the new Midland Chaparral Bicycle Motocross race park is scheduled for 3:15 p.m. Saturday at Ulmer Park, 2700 West Holloway.

Races will begin at 4 p.m. with fees $6, classes; $4, beginners; $4, open.

The new track replaces the old one, maintained by the Odessa-Midland BMX Association and Peyton's Bicycle Shop, on Highway 80 west of Midland.

The use of the undeveloped area of Ulmer community playfield park was offered for the new track. The Association and BMX prepared a plan and cost estimate for review. Peyton's contributed $5,448 and the association did most of the work. The City contributed approximately $2,000 to complete the project. The association will continue to finance the operation of the track with the assistance of the Parks and Recreation Dept.

UTPB sets Fun Run

ODESSA—The second annual Permian Basin Fun Run is scheduled at the University of Texas Permian Basin Saturday. Three running events are scheduled over distances of one mile, five kilometers and 10 kilometers.

Registration is 8 a.m. in the UTPB gym lobby and the competition begins at 9 a.m. at the gym/swimming pool parking lot. Entry fee is $5, to be donated to the Muscular Dystrophy Association. Competition is for male and female from six and under to 50 and over.

Women added to card

ODESSA—Women boxers will fight on the undercard to Thursday's James Martinez-Carlos Villicana bout at the International Club on the Andrews Highway.

Martinez, Odessa, is 56-16 and a two-time national Golden Gloves featherweight champion. He holds a victory over Danny "Little Red" Lopez. Also on the card is former Odessa High football player David Clark, who will make his pro debut against Razorblade Jackson of El Paso.

In what is billed as the first women's match in West Texas, Kara Weber, Los Angeles, 12-0, meets Toni Rodriquez. Other bouts match James Cleveland-Victor Gomez, featherweights; Cheto Ramos-Manuel Torres, junior-middleweight; and Benito Banda-Chino Rodriquez.

Softball entries due

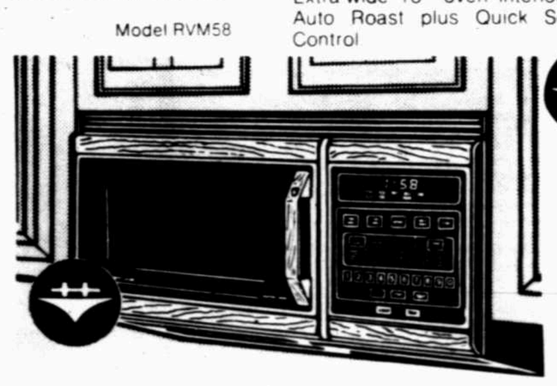

The second annual Danny's T-Top slowpitch softball tournament will be played May 6-8 in Big Spring. Entry fee for the double elimination men's tourney is $85, due May 3. Contact Danny Heckler at 267-1061 or 263-1195 after 5 p.m.

There are even risks in alternative energy

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Audubon Society warned recently that solar power and other renewable energy sources present "environmental risks" which must be evaluated as the United States begins a major push for alternatives to fossil fuels.

The environmental group's findings, which ran counter to those of other scientists engaged in the study of energy development, cautioned that though renewable energy holds great promise for reducing the use of fossil fuels, the nation ought to be aware of potential hazards.

In a study funded by the National Science Foundation, the society suggested that the manufacturing of solar photovoltaic cells could create shortages of cadmium and gallium; wood-burning and biomass energy production from animal wastes and plants could lead to destruction of forests, while wind power could cause noise pollution and interfere with radio and television receptions.

Damning of rivers for hydroelectric power, the study claimed, could cause soil erosion and stagnation of streams; tapping of water and steam heat deep in the earth to get geothermal energy could cause earthquakes, release toxic gases and that ocean thermal energy conversion could disrupt marine life cycles and cause weather changes.

The environmental group's study notwithstanding, most scientists believe that alternative energy sources are ecologically safer and have fewer negative environmental consequences than do conventional energy resources.

THE ARGUMENTS IN favor of a program to accelerate renewable energy sources development are well known. They produce no radioactive wastes. They do not threaten a planetary greenhouse effect. Solar sources tend to be labor-intensive, stable and resilient.

But just as with synfuels, there has been a dramatic slowdown in the development of alternative sources of energy, partly due to the Reagan administration's decision to slash their research and development funds.

The administration's concerns are fiscal and philosophical. The president firmly subscribes to the free market philosophy. Thus, early on in his term, the administration decided to try to cut nearly 90 percent of federal funds allocated for alternative energy and fuel conservation efforts.

The White House felt that private industry would take over the most promising research programs funded by the government since the solar, wind, geothermal, alcohol fuels and other unconvential technologies captured the imagination of many investors and flourished through the late 1970s.

But this has not been the case. Private industry, hit hard by the oil glut, refused to invest funds in untried projects and programs, though the Solar Energy Research Institute suggests that 2.1 to 3.8 billion barrels of oil equivalent — or as much as one third of projected energy demand in the year 2000 — could be met by renewable energy resources.

WHAT'S HOLDING THE research and development of new energy sources? A Battelle Memorial Institute's 1980 study estimated the government and the industry would have to invest $207 billion in subsidies to non-renewable energy technologies to make the programs financially solvent.

"The message from the private sector was one of inability or unwillingness to take up the Reagan cuts slack," says Jack Conway, chairman of the nonprofit Renewable Energy Institute. "The marketplace has turned out to be even more cruel than shifting government policies."

One of the problems is that the average solar business is a small or intermediate-sized firm that possesses only limited capital resources and need federal assistance to keep functioning.

The administration is once again seeking drastic cuts in federal solar and conservation programs. The administration's proposed fiscal 1984 budget reduces Department of Energy solar programs by 57 percent to $86 million.

The House Energy and Technology Subcommittee earlier this month recommended a $203 million solar research and development budget.

Energy for the U.S.

A Reporter-Telegram series

THE SUBCOMMITTEE proposed $59 million for photovoltaic electricity, $51 million for solar thermal energy systems, $23.5 million for solar building energy research, $29 million for biomass and alcohol fuels, $20 million for wind energy and $9 million for ocean thermal energy conversion.

The proposal to boost the spending was made by Rep. Don Fuqua, D.-Fla., subcommittee chairman, practically on the same day Energy Secretary Donald Hodel asked Congress to defer $9.5 million in solar and conservation funds appropriated fo fiscal 1983.

Others think federal investment in research and development would go a long way toward helping ease the nation's unemployment problems. For example, the Coalition of Northeast Governors said last week that solar development over 10 years could save 73 million barrels of oil per year and create 40,000 jobs in their region alone.

Using wood energy could create 40,000 other jobs and save 20 million barrels of oil per year and wind power could create 47,000 jobs and save up 50 million barrels, said the governors.

A newly published book, entitled "Renewable Energy; The Power to Choose" claims that "efforts to harness renewable energy continue to gather momentum and with proper management, renewable energy sources can easily supplant as much energy as the world currently uses."

"A global breakthrough in harnessing wind power is occuring in California," noted the two year study written by Daniel Deudney and Christopher Flavin. "Over a thousand wind machines are hooked up to the California electricity grid in 1982. A range of newer technologies for harnessing sunlight are also enjoying success. Salt-gradient solar ponds for heat and electricity generation are being readied for commercial development in Israel and the U.S. Southwest. The manufacture of solar photovoltaic cells that directly convert sunlight to electricity has expanded at an annual rate of 50 percent since the early seventies."

THE STUDY CONTENDS that "wood energy consumption in the U.S. has risen 50 percent since the early seventies and provides twice as much delivered energy as does nuclear power. Hydropower supplies one-quarter of the world's electricity.

According to the industry, the prohibitive cost of converting sunlight directly into electricity has held back the fledgling photovoltaic industry. But the industry, and the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, agree that despite Reagan cutbacks the outlook for the widespread use of photovoltaic energy in this century appears favorable."

The Worldwatch Institute contends that photovoltaic industry may well be the world's next high-technology battlefield and become a multi-billion dollar business by the early 1990s.

Wood, grasses, agricultural crops and their residues, animal wastes and other sources of biomass currently supply almost 2 percent of U.S. energy consumption. The Congressional Office of Technology Assessment claims proper investment could raise it to 20 percent of consumption by the year 2000.

The best known product of biomass is gasohol, a blend of gasoline and from 10 to 20 percent alcohol that can be used in automobiles. The first comprehensive survey of gasohol consumption has found that gasohol sales skyrocketed in 1982, increasing by 224 percent in one year. The federal government and 34 states provide subsidies to encourage gasohol consumption.

GEOTHERMAL ENERGY is also "steaming" ahead toward wider commercial use here. Projects tapping earth's natural reservoirs of hot water and steam to genrate electricity are under way in about 15 sites in western states.

The Reagan administration has been trying to sell a legislative and regulatory program that it hoped will ease the nuclear industry's woes. But last week's Supreme Court decision, upholding the right of California and other states to ban nuclear power development, may have dealt a serious blow to the administration's plans.

Volcker to Congress: Stabilize banks

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker yesterday told the Senate Banking Committee that Congress should put a moratorium on future gyrations in the industry while it shapes a roadmap for the future — and act fast before events moved beyond them.

Citing "unpleasant choices" of either a slow recovery that leaves banks and Third World nations in shaky condition or a fast recovery that increases interest rates and ultimately aborts the upturn itself, Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., asked Volcker if further deregulation should be blocked for now.

"I think what's urgent is that the Congress look at it and channel it in the direction you want to go and give weight to the safety and soundness factor," Volcker said.

"There is going to be an evolution. Technology is forcing it, the market is forcing it and that's what this is all about," Volcker said.

He cautioned against "jumping suddenly to enormous divergence" and said history should be a guide in preventing too much risk or too rapid an escalation of new activities.

Congressional banking committees are debating whether to revamp the entire structure of the financial institutions to recognize the revolutionary changes caused both by technology and the spread of such "non-bank banks" as brokerage firms into territory previously dominated by banks and thrift institutions.

However, some critics have called for the government to adopt a total hands-off attitude as department stores take on banking functions and banks and savings and loans try to move into new fields such as selling insurance or underwriting revenue bonds.

"Do you have any fear that by deregulating banks that we put them into an unstable situation, capital-wise, so there is a danger of banks in this country becoming insolvent?" asked Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., who said the deregulation had been as destabilizing as the recession and was causing consumers a bad case of the jitters.

Volcker denied that, saying "we have a basically strong system and the apparatus for correcting this--but this should be factored into your study. The time to wory about them is before you have the problems. It is kind of late to deal with them when you have them–as in the international (debt) situation," Volcker said.

Volcker labeled a spate of news stories and television documentaries about a mounting crisis in the banking system as erroneous and "sensationalism."

"Obviously we do have problems but they are plain and they are manageable," Volcker said.

If the U.S. recovery does not continue or if it does not bring along a similar recovery in the rest of the world, "you have a less happy situation...but you have the whole system of protections in place," Volcker said. "They have been used in selective cases but they have not really been tested."

Volcker's alarm stems less from the prospect of a wave of bank failures than from the rampant challenges to existing banking rules forbidding interstate banking, for instance, or prohibiting banks from engaging in specific activities such as selling insurance – which bank holding companies such as Citicorp are circumventing.

Generally, Volcker said, he still opposes interstate banking and contended that permitting it to begin now might cause enormous new confusion in an already chaotic banking atmosphere.

He was questioned by Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., about the proposed takeover of his state's largest and most troubled bank, Seafirst Corp., by the California-based BankAmerica. Volcker said ordinarily two factors would be uppermost in evaluating such a proposal: the financial capability of the acquiring institution and competitive factors.

The fact that Seafirst is the largest bank in Washington is an obvious retardant to instate acquisition possibilities, Volcker said, and the urgency of the rescue effort is still another issue.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., asked Volcker to spell out the consequences of unrestricted national branch banking.

Interest Rates Going Up...Or Down?

These days nobody knows for sure. But one thing is certain, whatever happens, First Federal can provide a means for you to make the most of your money.

If you think interest rates will go up, First Federal has Money Fund Accounts or short-term certificates that provide early maturities . . . giving you the option of withdrawal if rates escalate.

If you think interest rates will continue to fall in the future, First Federal has Money Market Certificates with long-term, fixed rates that will safely lock up high interest rates now. And, if you like, interest from these can be distributed to your First Federal savings or checking account. With the safety of FSLIC insured funds, you can't go wrong whether you choose long-term or short-term certificates at First Federal Savings.

Foreign oil equipment sales may help U.S. firms over hump

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

International trade is one way to keep American drillsite technology strong until the domestic drilling industry recovers in a year or two, said the president of a national oilfield supply firm visiting Odessa this week.

"We see the next couple of years, in fact, probably the whole decade, as one of international trade," said Bill Selvig, president of National Drilling Equipment Division, a part of Armco's National Supply Company. He was in Odessa at National Supply's machinery center to talk shop.

"The strength of America will be to develop new products and services as the Chinese and others develop their own industry. Our edge will be innovation to develop the second generation of equipment.

"I don't think they'll beat us at that game."

National and its parent company, Armco, have suffered setbacks from the downturn in drilling activity. About 50 percent of the workforce worldwide has been laid off.

Selvig said his goal is to get back to business basics, learn how to operate in a vastly changed buyers' market, and maintain American dominance in drilling equipment technology overseas.

"For drilling machinery, the market is still primarily dominated by the U.S.," Selvig said, "but the trend is for foreign countries to demand that equipment be manufactured in their countries." National has operations in Brazil and Britain among others.

Although the oil industry is developing in places like China and India, the U.S. and Canada are the worst hit by the recession, he added. For American manufacturers to stay ahead, they will have to continue to be the innovators, Selvig said.

It will be some time before the Chinese, for example, build up a mature manufacturing industry, so U.S. firms should be able to successfully compete, he said.

In the U.S., things look bad for the next year or two, Selvig said. "A lot of people think it will be four to six more weeks of decrease in the rig count before it bottoms out and begins to level off, with maybe an increase at the end of the year.

"But, none of the forecasters have hit it right in recent years," he said ruefully.

"It's a matter of just waiting and seeing."

Selvig thinks the drilling equipment industry has not bottomed out yet, but is near it. The domestic rig fleet is around 5,000, yet there are fewer than 2,000 rigs actually working, he said.

As a result, National has had to lay off about 50 percent of its workforce world wide, and financial results for the quarter ended March 31 were "very bad," he said.

"We've been going through the sharpest drop-off in our company's history. We've just got a couple of very tough years to work through." National was formed in 1894.

The company began more than a year ago to adjust its inventory. Selvig said he sees another year or two before inventories will be back in balance.

Inventories of larger, higher horsepower equipment could be back in line by the end of this year, he said, but specialized commodity items will take longer — possibly as much as two years.

"There is such a surplus of rigs and equipment, that until auctions and liquidations take place, it will be quite a long time before we build domestic rigs," he said.

Stock market flies beyond 1,200 benchmark

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — The stock market passed a milestone Tuesday as the Dow Jones industrial average closed above the 1,200 level, building upon a strong bull market that has lifted the closely watched index more than 50 percent since last summer.

Defying a growing band of Wall Street naysayers who had predicted an imminent fall in stock prices, the Dow average of 30 industrial stocks rose 22.25 points to reach a record 1,209.46. Most other market indicators also set new highs.

Trading on the New York Stock Exchange rose to 97.25 million shares from 90.15 million Monday. Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 112.50 million shares.

The surge Tuesday, coming after a week in which the Dow index seemed to hesitate as it approached the 1,200 level, evoked new enthusiasm among many market analysts who predicted that the index could now advance at least an additional 100 points without a significant pullback.

"What it says is that the bull market is alive and well," said Hildegard Zagorski, analyst at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., a New York brokerage. "There's so much cash on the sidelines.... Every time the market backs off, all this cash comes flowing back to the market."

A number of analysts said temporary declines in the stock market are consistently proving to be choice opportunities for buying rather than early warning signals that the market has run out of steam.

"You don't play cute in a bull market," said Steve Einhorn, vice chairman of the investment policy committee at Goldman, Sachs & Co. in New York. "The advice has been, and remains, participate when the market lets you."

After two consecutive trading days in which the Dow industrials declined, many speculators were counting on the market to finally weaken. When Digital Equipment Corp. on Tuesday reported disappointing earnings, initially sending its stock down about $6, traders acted quickly to place bets that stock prices would decline — "selling short," in the jargon of Wall Street.

But bargain hunters stepped in. Digital Equipment, a minicomputer-maker based in Maynard, Mass., recouped most of its loss, closing down only 2 1-2 at 115 5-8. Other stocks that short sellers figured would move in lock step with Digital — Hewlett-Packard, Commodore and IBM, for example — defied the speculators and advanced. One analyst said traders then engaged in a "mad rush" to cover their bets on price declines, buying up stocks and propelling the market even higher.

For the first time in weeks, oil stocks helped to lead the advance as a 50-cent-per-barrel price increase announced earlier this week by the Soviet Union furnished more evidence that oil prices are firming.

Great Salt Lake reclaiming ancient lake bed

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Great Salt Lake, swollen by record rainfall and the spring runoff of melted snow, is swallowing beaches and lapping against dikes in a slow-motion disaster that may cost $60 million in damage.

The 75-mile long, 50-mile wide lake is expected to reach 4,204 feet above sea level in June — its highest level in 62 years. Earlier, authorities predicted a peak of 4,203 feet and $30 million in damage. The extra foot of water has doubled the damage estimate.

The lake, a remnant of ancient Lake Bonneville, which covered parts of Utah, Idaho and Nevada 12,000 years ago, has no natural outlet and depends on evaporation to rid itself of excess water.

That made the precipitation this week even more unwelcome.

Gerald Williams, a National Weather Service hydrologist, predicted "three to four days of rain and snow. It will have a significant effect. Not only does it contribute precipitation, but it slows evaporation."

J. Stanley Elmer, field operations planner with the state Lands and Forestry Division, warned the lake could go even higher than 4,204 feet.

"We've got lots of water up there in the mountains and lots more to come down," Elmer said.

State officials have estimated damage could reach $150 million if the shallow lake, which averaged 35 feet in depth, topped 4,205 feet above sea level.

The Department of Natural Resources is studying several ideas to stem the flooding, including a scheme to pump water into the state's western desert.

Scientists battle aquarium infection

MYSTIC, Conn. (AP) — Scientists at Mystic Marinelife Aquarium are trying to stop a bacterial infection that has already killed two dolphins, including one that was a prize attraction.

While trainers treat two beluga whales and four remaining dolphins against infection, scientists are working to identify the strain of staphylococcus blamed for the deaths, aquarium spokeswoman Julie Quinn said earlier this week.

The severity of the problem became clear when an autopsy showed that Kimo, an Atlantic bottle-nose dolphin, had died of pneumonia caused by a staph infection, Ms. Quinn said.

Kimo, believed to be 14 years old, had been a favorite with visitors since the aquarium opened in 1973.

"Kimo had not been eating real well, but dolphins go on and off their food now and then," Ms. Quinn said. "We did a blood test and found the white cell count normal, so there was no warning" that the dolphin was critically ill before it died a week ago.

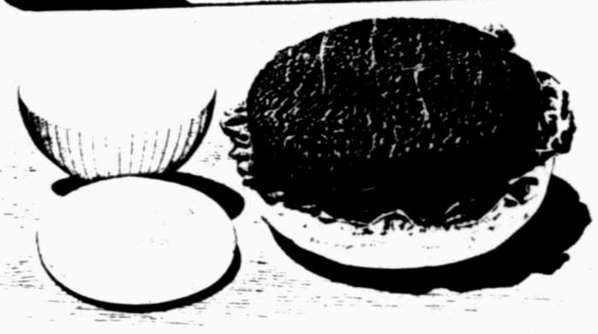

A white-beaked dolphin died from the bacterial infection April 16.

Two other white-beaked dolphins, among four rescued from ice-choked waters off Newfoundland on March 28, also died this month.

Steeplechasing rite of spring in Maryland countryside

BUTLER, Md. (AP) — Riders no longer race from one church steeple to the next in Maryland's rolling hunt country, but the time-honored running of steeplechases goes on as it has since colonial days.

Timber races, run across open ground over distances of about three or four miles with riders jumping wooden fences and often other obstacles, such as ditches or small ponds, are as much a rite of spring as they are a sporting event.

Steeplechasing is tougher and more demanding than any other type of racing and its rewards are few.

"It's very risky and there is no reward really other than the glory," said Snowden Carter, editor of Maryland Horse, a publication for the considerable number of Marylanders who love horses. "But it's very thrilling."

No one knows that thrill better than Charles Fenwick Jr.

If Maryland boasts the toughest timber racing, it also has perhaps the finest amateur steeplechase jockey in the United States in the 35-year-old Fenwick.

"As a timber rider, I guess you'd have to put him at the top of the game right now," says Charles Colgan, executive secretary of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association in Elmont, N.Y.

The steeplechase season here starts in early April and culminates this year on April 30 with the 87th running of the Maryland Hunt Cup, which Carter says is the world's toughest timber race.

The first three horses automatically qualify for the English Grand National at Aintree, the most prestigious steeplechase in the world.

Fenwick, who is scheduled to ride in this year's race, has won the Maryland Hunt Cup three times. He often travels to England to race.

He is a man obsessed with the steeplechase.

"Every year I call a friend in England and he puts the telephone by the television so that I can hear the race," he says, referring to the English Grand National.

With nearly two decades of competitive racing behind him, Fenwick, a wiry, athletic man, is one of only two Americans to win that race.

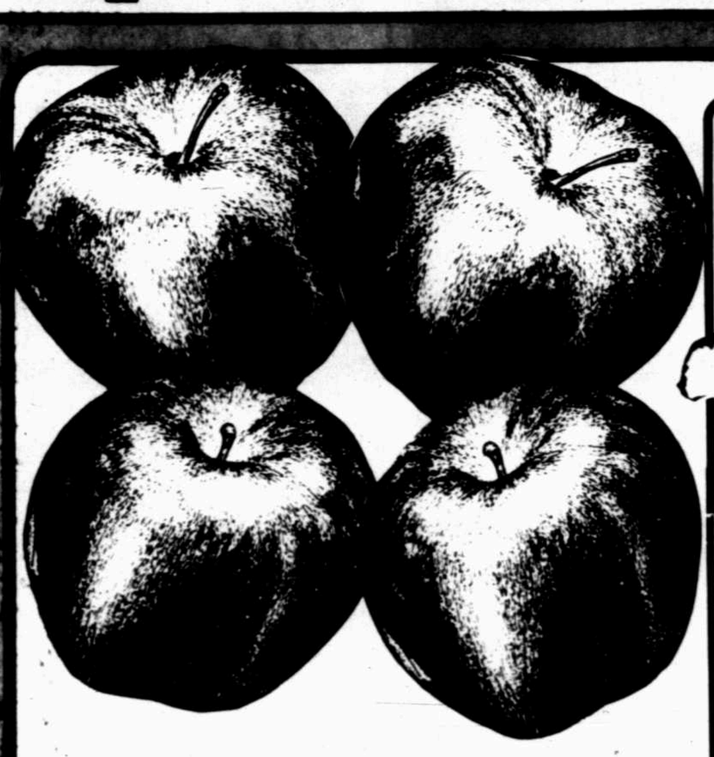

In 1980, the little known Fenwick rode Ben Nevis II to victory at the historic race course near Liverpool.

The British tabloids recorded the rare victory by an American rider with banner headlines reading "A Bonanza For The Bookies" and "Big Ben Strikes At 40-1."

Fenwick recalls his record-book ride with great modesty, although he will tell visitors that he is a good steeplechase jockey because he works very hard at it. He also points out that he rode at Aintree the previous year without success.

"He was a good horse, I was an OK rider and we had a lot of luck," Fenwick recalled, adding: "What we didn't have was bad luck; 26 horses fell that day."

Israeli ambassador shuns 'diplomatic' approach

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

JERUSALEM — In Paris, where diplomacy retains some of the formality of the 19th Century, Israeli Ambassador Meir Rosenne was something of a sensation.

Shunning the genteel ambiguities practiced by his colleagues, Rosenne took Israel's case directly to the French public, by means of television interviews, regular contacts with the press and frequent public speeches.

At the beginning of his tenure, which began in 1979, other diplomats were heard to say, "It just isn't done." But, according to a former associate, the French finally got used to Rosenne's flamboyant style.

Sometime in the next few weeks, the 52-year-old career diplomat will move his base of operations from Paris to Washington, where high-profile Israeli ambassadors have been a fixture of the diplomatic scene since at least 1950, when Abba Eban held the post.

The Israeli Cabinet has approved Rosenne's appointment to succeed Moshe Arens in Washington. Arens became Israel's minister of defense in February.

Dr. David Laxar, a Hebrew University political scientist who worked under Rosenne as cultural affairs counselor at the embassy in Paris, described him in a recent interview.

"The man is a tough person," Laxar said. "He is very, very clever. He certainly knows how to not answer a question that he doesn't want to answer.

"He has a very well-developed sense of humor. He is a very good story-teller. He is a master of Jewish jokes, which can be very funny. I wouldn't say he is a particularly warm person but maybe that impression is part of the very formal atmosphere that you find in France."

Yoav Toker, Israel Television's Paris correspondent, said Rosenne was popular with the French press because he was always ready with a statement.

"No one doubts that he will do very well in the media and in contacts with the American Jewish community," Toker said in a telephone interview. "Some people are not as sure how he will do in the give-and-take behind the scenes. Personally, I don't think that will be a problem."

Born in Romania in 1931, Rosenne was educated in Paris, earning a Ph.D. degree from the Sorbonne in 1957. He is a career diplomat and an expert in international law. Between diplomatic postings, he was legal adviser to the Foreign Ministry and a lecturer in international law at Tel Aviv and Haifa universities.

"He is a bit of a jurist, a bit of a public relations man, a bit of a politician and a bit of a career diplomat," Toker said.

In the 1950s, when Rosenne was in school in Paris, relations between France and Israel were extremely close. But by 1979, when he returned as ambassador, the relationship had cooled. The French government, then under President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, had moved much closer to the Arabs.

Laxar recalls that early in Rosenne's tenure, France refused, despite an Israeli protest, to take action against the Palestinian terrorists suspected of directing the massacre of Israeli athletes at the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich. Later, Laxar said, France sharply criticized Israel's peace treaty with Egypt.

Laxar said that Rosenne handled both situations with aplomb even though he was personally angered by them.

In some ways, Rosenne's experience with the United States has followed a similar pattern. He was consul general in New York between 1961 and 1967, a period of close ties between the United States and Israel. But as ambassador, he will be taking up his post at a low point in relations between the two countries.

Since leaving the consul general post, Rosenne has kept up his contacts with the United States

Teacher Gadelay Serralta helps Jean Paul Perez, 12, with some math problems recently at a Miami elementary school. Though Perez arrived with some 125,000 Cuban refugees in the 1980 Mariel boatlift, and spoke no English at the time, he now reads at a 5th-grade-level in English.

AP Laserphoto

Children of boatlift sail into American dream

MIAMI (AP) — In clear English that is almost accent-free, Lazaro Prieto and his classmates at Miramar Elementary School speak of the riches of American childhood: movies, bicycles, school lunches, gum and candy.

They are some of the children of Mariel, a generation leading the way into the melting pot for the 125,000 Cuban refugees who sailed into the United States on the boatlift that began three years ago this month.

"I can have a bike here. In Cuba I couldn't have a bike," said Lazaro, 11. "I don't miss Cuba. Here I have many things that were not in Cuba."

After a year of intensive, separate instruction, the Cuban youngsters have been "mainstreamed" into regular classes with English-speaking teachers and are doing fine, said Maria Santamaria, a spokeswoman for Dade County public schools.

"They had a very positive attitude and were willing to learn and fit in and adapt," added Gadelay Serralta, a Cuban exile of the 1960s who taught the Mariel children at Miramar. "That kind of people you can do a lot with."

"By the end of that first year, they were fully Americanized and talking about the latest movies," said Miramar Principal Meri Hegler.

But the adults haven't melted in so easily. While many have found some kind of work, most still don't speak much English and need even more time to adjust to a new, alien society, officials say.

"If having a job and not being a public charge is assimilation, then a large percentage of that population has been assimilated," said Assistant County Manager Sergio Pereira, who helped advise President Carter in 1980 when this country was flooded with illegal Cuban aliens from the "Freedom Flotilla" sealift.

"But if you talk in terms of becoming an integral part of the total community, then they are not assimilated," Pereira said. "It will be another six or seven years before that happens."

Dade County reeled from April to June of 1980, as boatload after boatload of refugees — as many as 20,000 in some weeks — sailed into Key West from the port of Mariel.

Relatives and sponsors took in many of the refugees, but thousands were later turned out. Cubans roamed the streets or camped under bleachers at the Orange Bowl and, later, under a downtown expressway.

Crime soared. William Wilbanks, a criminal justice professor at Florida International University, said the Miami area crime rate soared 60 percent between 1970 and 1980, and contended the Mariel refugees were responsible for a quarter of that increase.

This artist's drawing of the mini-type submarine and its mother carrier operating in Sweden's Hors Bay was made public at a news conference in Stockholm Tuesday. The Swedish Navy Submarine Commission released the drawing following its investigation of violations of Swedish territorial waters by foreign submarines in 1982.

Mexico to let firms have dollar accounts

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Central Bank has announced that Mexican businesses will be able to open dollar accounts in the country's nationalized banks beginning May 2.

A Tuesday night report on the independent Televisa television network, quoting a bulletin from the bank, said that the dollar deposits would only be payable outside of Mexico, thus maintaining a freeze on withdrawls from dollar accounts within Mexico.

Currently, withdrawls from dollar accounts can only be made in pesos.

Copies of the statement were not immediately available.

Banks that receive the new dollar accounts will be able to extend credit in dollars to businesses which export goods and services, the report quoted the bank as saying.

The banks will be required to invest dollars not used for export credits in foreign financial markets as a way to help the country obtain new sources of foreign exchange.

Mexico, currently gripped by its worst economic crisis in 40 years, needs the foreign exchange to pay off its huge $83 billion foreign debt.

The decision to lift the freeze on the new dollar accounts was made after the government received various petitions from the private sector, the report quoted the bank as saying.

Minimum deposits of $5,000 can be made through the transaction of documents, the transfer of the money to foreign accounts or in person, the report said.

The accounts will pay interest at 1 percent over the current London rate, the bank said.

The freeze on new dollar accounts has been in effect since August 13 when the government announced the foreign exchange market would be closed temporarily and withdrawls from dollar accounts could only be made in pesos.

Soviet research vessel expelled from Norway's Oslo harbor

OSLO, Norway (AP) — A Soviet research vessel was expelled from Norwegian territorial waters after entering Oslo harbor without a required diplomatic clearance.

Oslo police official Bjorn Bigset said the captain of the 70-foot vessel agreed to pay a fine of $1,125 before his ship was escorted out of Norwegian waters Tuesday evening.

The narrow Oslofjord is a restricted area for all foreign vessels, which need special permission from the Foreign Ministry to enter. The Soviet ship Ayu-Dag has made authorized port calls in Oslo in 1978 and 1981.

This time it arrived Tuesday with a crew of 49 and a Norwegian pilot on board.

The Oslo newspaper Aftenposten reported today that the Soviet captain told police the Ayu-Dag was engaged in research projects in cooperation with the Oslo University.

On Tuesday, the Soviet Union received harsher treatment from another Scandinavian country, neutral Sweden, which released a report charging that six Soviet submarines violated Swedish waters last October.

Sweden warned the Kremlin that it will destroy the next Soviet submarine that violates Swedish waters and called its ambassador home from Moscow for consultations. Prime Minister Olof Palme handed a strong protest note to Soviet Ambassador Boris Pankin.

"Those who violate (Swedish waters) will have to take into account that the government will order the military to try and sink the vessel," Palme said.

Pankin, in an interview with Swedish television, denied the accusation.

Israeli says 'Sharon still casts large shadow' in government

JERUSALEM (AP) — Ariel Sharon is starting a public comeback after sitting quietly in the shadows of power since his ouster as defense minister 2½ months ago.

After his dismissal, Sharon dropped out of the political spotlight, but well-informed Israelis say he has been playing an important backstage role in the negotiations on troop withdrawal from Lebanon, prodding the government to follow a hawkish line.

"Sharon still casts a large shadow," said one source. "The others are afraid to make too many concessions for fear of what Sharon might say."

Sharon was forced to leave his post in February after a judicial commission found him indirectly responsible for the murder of Palestinian refugees in Beirut by Israeli-backed Lebanese militiamen.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin resisted public pressure to fire Sharon, and kept him in the Cabinet as a minister without portfolio. Sharon kept his seats on the Cabinet's defense committee and on the steering committee guiding the negotiators in the withdrawal talks with Lebanon.

Begin has refused to convene the six-man steering commitee, which is divided between hardliners and those more amenable to concessions. Instead, he reactivated the dormant defense committee, whose meetings are kept secret by law, but where Sharon's views may carry more weight.

Sharon, who at the peak of his power designed the Lebanon invasion and landscaped the occupied West Bank with Jewish settlements, refused to comment publicly after he lost the Defense portfolio.

But he still appealed to voters. A recent poll said a majority of Israelis questioned thought the recommendation to oust Sharon was too severe, and 56 percent endorsed Begin's decision to keep him in the Cabinet.

Sharon himself, asked by a reporter for an interview, politely offered to talk about his ranch, but not about politics.

"I have returned to my farm. Do you want to talk about agriculture?" he asked with a grin.

Sotheby fears U.S. takeover

LONDON (AP) — Sotheby Parke Bernet's British directors asked its stockholders today to reject a lucrative offer from two Americans trying to take over the world's largest fine art auction house.

But London newspapers predicted victory for carpet and furniture tycoons Marshall Cogan and Stephen Swid because their offer of $8.16 a share was considered generous.

Three weeks ago, 134 Sotheby's art experts and middle managers in 14 European and South African cities signed a statement threatening to quit the company if Cogan and Swid took over.

The two Americans "know nothing about the art auction business and nothing about Britain," chief executive Graham Llewellyn said.

The board of directors agreed, saying in a letter to stockholders today that if they accept the $94 million takeover offer, "the future of Sotheby's and the art market in the United Kingdom would be in jeopardy."

Yet, barring an intervention by the British government's Monopolies and Mergers Commission, "it looks as if the predators will succeed," The Guardian newspaper said.

The Financial Times reported that through share purchase in London, Cogan and Swid raised their holding of Sotheby's shares from 16.9 percent on Monday to "well above 20 percent" today.

In addition, up to 40 percent of shares in Sotheby's are held in the United States, it said, and it is thought that many American stockholders will sell.

Sotheby's nosedived into the red in 1982, but said in today's letter to stockholders that its prospects are now "excellent," its "financial position is strong" and it is reaping the benefits of cost-cutting and an upturn in the art market.

The Daily Express was unimpressed, finding "little in Sotheby's defense document to put new fire in the hearts of any wavering shareholder."

"Sotheby's know there is scant sentiment in the auction room," the Daily Mail agreed. "There's no more in the City (London's financial district) and Wall Street."

Cogan and Swid, who sit on the boards of a string of U.S. museums and art galleries, are co-chairmen of Knoll International Holdings Inc., a subsidiary of the Delaware-based group that includes General Felt Industries carpets and Knoll office furniture.

The Times of London today called Sotheby's a "paper tiger" and said chairman Gordon Brunton is unlikely to find a "white knight to save them from Cogan and Swid."

City Council votes to relieve tow-trucking headache

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Lt. Herman Wicker, head of Midland's police traffic division, told the City Council Tuesday afternoon that the city's multi-wrecker rotation system for towing wrecked and abandoned cars is "my biggest headache."

About two hours later, after much agonizing and intense debate, the council voted Wicker some relief — spelled "O-N-E W-R-E-C-K-E-R" — by accepting a one-year towing contract with B&J Wrecker Co.

In other action, the council voted to purchase signal lights for several major intersections, approved a 300-foot strip of "no parking" on Princeton Avenue and discussed the possiblity of operating a jail in cooperation with the county.

Wicker approached the council March 13 with four bids on a proposed one-year, 24-hour-a-day towing contract with a single wrecker company. He said the police department preferred contracting with a single company, rather than the eight wrecker companies which participate in the present rotation.

WICKER SAID THE proposed wrecker agreement would free the police from excessive paperwork and time-consuming trips to the vehicle impoundment lot, and also set a standard towing fee — eliminating citizen's complaints of price-gouging by some companies in the rotation.

The plan, patterned after a system adopted by the city of Richardson, calls for the company to staff the city's impoundment lot around-the-clock, collect fees and remit storage payments to the city.

The council deferred a decision at its April 13 meeting, allowing wrecker operators time to submit a counter proposal.

Allen Frasier, owner of ARC Truck and Auto Body, said the proposal would set a $40 standard towing fee, have each wrecker company store towed vehicles on its own lot and remove much of the paperwork from Wicker's office.

Towing the line

Looking at it from the car's point of view, Jack Harvey of B&J Wrecker prepares to hook up a car to his towing truck. His company was selected Tuesday by the Midland City Council for a one-year contract to do all city towing.

FRASIER SAID some companies may be driven out of business if they lose the rotation, which has each participating company on call for two weeks at a time.

Don Reid, of Reid Wrecker Co., said: "If you're getting complaints on a specific wrecker company, then I think we ought to look at that particular company as far as overcharging. Let's don't take money out of everybody's pocket because of one, two or three (companies)."

Mayor G. Thane Akins, who had to leave the meeting before the final vote, at one point asked for a show of hands from the wrecker operators assembled. Six hands shot up in support of the rotation system while only Jack Harvey Jr., owner of B&J Wrecker, voted for the one-company contract.

Councilman Tom Sloan eventually moved the council accept the B&J bid, which proposes a $35 standard rate for cars and light trucks. The council voted 5-0 to accept the bid for the contract, estimated to be worth about $100,000.

OTHER BIDS submitted and the standard towing fee quoted included: Angel Wrecker Co., $27.50; F&F Wrecker, $36.50; and Midland Radiator Wrecker, $50.

Wicker said he recommended B&J's bid rather than that submitted by Angel Wrecker because the latter charged more for heavy-duty service and lacked sufficient indoor storage space for damaged vehicles that must be shielded from the elements.

The council also voted to advertise for bids on signal lights for several intersections, all of which witnessed a large number of accidents during recent traffic studies. The intersections include Midkiff Road, Bankhead and Industrial, Carver and Front Streets, Golf Course and Lamesa Roads, Ohio Avenue and Big Spring Street, I Street and Wadley Avenue and Andrews and Whitney Drive.

Councilman Carroll Thomas, during the last meeting before he relinquishes his seat to Councilman-elect David Godfrey, suggested the city also investigate installing temporary signals at "I" and Wadley during the several-month wait before delivery of the lights.

THE COUNCIL voted to prohibit parking on the north side of Princeton Avenue about 300 feet east from Loop 250 to permit large trucks more maneuvering room.

In other action during its meeting in City Hall, the council:

—Discussed informally the possibility of operating a jail in cooperation with the county. Midland voters Saturday defeated the county's bid for an $11.69 million bond issue to finance a courthouse and jail expansion.

The council discussed the idea of a jointly-operated jail run by an operating committee and an administrator. Akins said he has been approached by county officials about a joint jail operation.

"I think something ought to be considered," said Akins, "because there's just no question about the savings to the taxpayer."

—Rearranged an existing assessment paving agreement to accommodate paving of a three-lane park road to connect Hogan Park and Lamesa Roads and serve a new four-field softball complex inside the park. The city also agreed to spend $10,000, originally earmarked for walkways at Hogan Park, on paving the road. Midland Softball Association will foot the remainder of the paving bill.

—Approved a specific use permit for Isidro Trevino, owner of the Club Granada, to build a nightclub that will seat about 500 people on the south side of Franklin Avenue at Crestview Road.

—Approved a request by Manor Park developers for an amended Planned District for their proposed senior citizen housing, health-care and recreation complex on the northeast corner of Sinclair Avenue and Loop 250 West.

—Adopted the 1982 editions of the gas and mechanical codes of the Southern Building Code Congress.

—Approved a lease amendment with Jay H. Floyd Jr., to allow additional uses of the city-owned Cinema I theater building.

Dr. Kirby Tarry explains the procedure of vasovasectomies which is a reversal of the male sterilization process.

Doctor: Microsurgery makes process easier

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

A male sterilization procedure once thought to be permanent is now reversible and available in Midland.

Men who opted to have a vasectomy as a form of birth control can re-establish fertility, according to a local physician.

Although vasovasostomies — reversal vasectomies — are not uncommon, microsurgery has brought a higher success rate for this procedure.

Dr. Kirby Tarry, a Midland urologist, said the fertility success rate is reaching 70 to 80 percent with the use of microsurgery.

But the interval of time between the vasectomy and reversing the operation is vital.

"If a vasectomy has been done in the past five years or less, chances of success are good," Tarry said.

"It's easier than a tubal ligation where we have to go into the abdomen," Tarry said, referring to a common surgical sterilization procedure for women.

"It's not a major operation, not any more major than a vasectomy," Tarry said, explaining that the reversal operation involves reattaching vessels.

But unlike a vasectomy, which can be performed in the doctor's office, this three-hour operation requires a general anesthetic and a short hospital stay.

Tarry, who recently performed a vasovasotomy in Midland, is preparing to do another.

"This is not new, but to my knowledge, it's not being done in the Midland and Odessa area," he said.

The use of vasectomy for birth control has increased significantly in the last two decades. But because more older men are beginning to remarry and want a second family, there have been requests for vasectomy reversals.

Microsurgery allows the physician to repair the vas, the tube that carries the sperm.

"Microsurgery makes the reapproximation easier, more exact," Tarry said, adding that 10 years ago normal surgical techniques achieved 20 to 25 percent pregnancy rates. Today, pregancy rates have increased up to 80 percent.

Usually with a vasectomy, a small portion of the vas is removed and the ends are blocked to stop sperm.

"This is the most common procedure, and it can be reversed," Tarry said. "But if the vas has been cauterized, it makes the procedure more difficult."

Men considering a vasectomy reversal should be healthy with proven prior fertility, and should have sperm present at the site of the vasectomy.

Joint city-county jail considered

Just one option to alleviate over-crowding

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

When water keeps building up behind a dam, something's got to give or the dam will burst.

In the case of the swelling inmate population at the county jail, however, there doesn't seem to be much "give" left.

After Saturday's defeat of a proposed bond issue that would have permitted construction of additional jail space, Sheriff Dallas Smith is "exploring options" to alleviate the problem — including the possiblitiy of a joint city-county jail.

The county jail population has shown an overall climb from a daily average of 37.8 inmates in 1976 to 95.3 at the close of 1982, according to figures compiled by Smith.

This year looks like it will be even worse. On Tuesday, the jail held 98 prisoners; its basic capacity is 85, as set by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

The commission is scheduled to conduct a routine inspection Monday. And Smith, a commission director, knows what the results will be: "They're gonna tell us we're in violation."

Should the commission so rule, the county has 10 days to appeal. If the appeal fails, the commission can file suit and a court could order county officials to come into compliance or be cited for contempt of court.

But as things stand, according to Smith, about the only way to comply is to pay other counties to hold Midland's excess — a move that would substantially increase the price of jail operations.

The cost of transporting and housing inmates at other jails — assuming they have room — is about $50 per day, according to jail commission Executive Director Bob Viterna.

Overcrowding in the county jail could get worse than it is now if the state prison system — as it did for a time last year because of overcrowding problems of its own — refuses to accept any more prisoners.

"If that happens," said Smith, "things will back up even more. We'll be forced into crisis management and still wind up with the basic problem not solved."

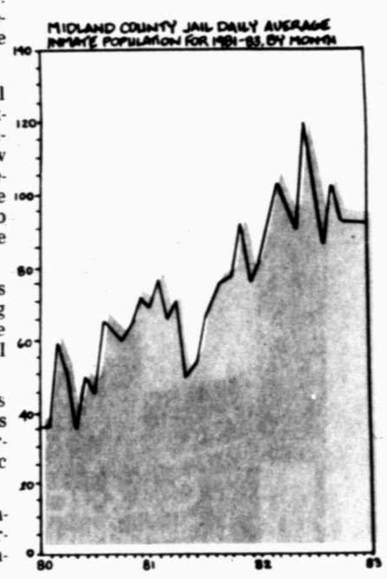

Combining city and county jail operations under one roof saves taxpayer money by avoiding duplication of services and is not a new idea in the annals of law enforcement, according to County Judge Bill Ahders, a former FBI agent who has worked in different parts of the country.

"Places like Denver and Kansas City have had one jail for a long time now.," said Ahders. "There have been no problems at all that I know of."

Ahders added that he has broached the topic to city officials and their reaction was "not unfavorable, but not overly enthusiastic either."

Among the difficulties in combining jails is determining the proportionate share of construction, operation and maintenance costs.

"It's in the talk stage now," said Ahders. "That's all I can say."

Trustees to discuss GEM expansion

Expansion of the gifted and talented program to include third and eighth grade students will be discussed when Midland Independent School District trustees meet at 1:30 p.m. Thursday.

If the expansion is approved, gifted third graders who are in classes where lessons are taught at or below their level will have a chance to gain advanced skills. Meanwhile, eighth graders will have continuity between the seventh grade gifted program and ninth grade honors courses.

The regularly scheduled Tuesday meeting was delayed until Thursday because trustees were attending the National School Board Convention and Exposition for 1983 in San Francisco, Calif.

Also to be discussed Thursday is a comprehensive plan for computer literacy, to be implemented in all grade levels and schools. Estimated cost of the system will be $144,600. Actual cost is expected to be less, assuming bid prices come in lower.

Other items on the agenda include approval of the annually updated special education three-year plan and formal adoption of comparability between Chapter I and regular schools in the areas of teacher/pupil ratio, average teacher salary and supplies and materials. A district security plan and plans for construction of the Instructional Materials Center also will be considered.

Expansion of GEM (Gifted Education in Midland) would not cost the district additional funds during the first year, 1983-84, according to Patricia Alexander, GEM coordinator.

The program presently pulls gifted students in the fourth through sixth grade out of regular classes twice a week for participation. GEM seventh graders participate in advanced English and math classes.

If the expansion is approved, third graders will be pulled from regular classes once a week while eighth graders will enroll in advanced English. Eighth graders already have algebra as an option to math, according to Ms. Alexander.

About 52 students will be selected for the third grade program — representing the top 4 percent of the current third grade class. Fifty-two fourth graders also will be selected although 89 now are enrolled in the GEM program.

Fewer students will be selected to keep the GEM teaching staff the same, she said. The three-member staff will teach both third and fourth graders on a rotating basis. Most likely, two teachers will work with the fourth grade group while one will work with the third graders, she explained. The teachers will rotate and the groups will work together on occasions.

In addition, third graders will travel on the same buses the fourth graders use, thereby eliminating further transportation costs, she said.

Third graders will be eligible to apply if they score above the top 95 percentile on the California Achievement Test on two out of the three subtests: reading, math and total.

However, in schools where there are fewer than 3 percent of the students who score above 95 percent on the tests — such as in minority schools — the top 3 percent or a minimum of five students will be nominated for consideration.

"We're trying to open up the screening process for groups of children who might otherwise be overlooked," Ms. Alexander said. "I have a problem with a program that only draws students from half of the schools in the district."

Students who score above the 95 percentile or in the top 3 percent of their class will then be evaluated by their present teachers. Those teachers will rate the students on the following characteristics: learning, motivation, creativity and leadership.

At the eighth grade level, students will be selected for participation in the same way seventh graders presently are selected. The expansion will provide an opportunity for enrichment, learning the essential elements of English, provide continuity between the elementary GEM and secondary honors classes and continue the concept established at the seventh grade level.

OC president doesn't testify at hearings

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Although Lubbock Sen. John Montford blamed junior college associations with stalling one of his bills Tuesday, at least one area community college did not participate in the hearings in Austin. And one senator believes no more action will be taken this week on the bill to turn University of Texas of the Permian Basin into a four-year institution.

A similar bill introduced in the House Higher Education Committee Monday by Odessa Rep. Jay Gibson, also calling for four-year status for UTPB, received strong opposition through the testimony of presidents of Midland College, Texarkana Community College, Tyler Junior College and the director of Texas Community College Association.

Odessa College President Phil Speegle, however, is stuck in a tight spot — and it isn't in Austin.

Following approval by education committees in the Senate and the House, the Senate bill was passed twice by the full Senate Tuesday: 21-9 and 18-12.

On the third reading, however, eight senators voted against suspending the rules to consider final passage.

According to a spokeswoman in Montford's office, a four-fifths majority is needed to suspend the rule requiring bills be read on three separate days.

Montford blamed the votes on junior college associations which have "started such a pandemonium" because "they felt so threatened."

Those opposing the bills say changing the Odessa upper-level university to a four-year school would hurt enrollment at community colleges and start a chain of requests from other upper-level institutions.

"Education is not to be construed as a negative progress," Montford said after the vote which stalled SB 1014 Tuesday. He said assumptions that junior colleges enrollment would suffer if UTPB began offering undergraduate courses "one of the silliest arguments in terms of education I've ever heard."

The Senate Education Committee approved the bill two weeks ago, despite testimony from MC President Jess Parrish, Texas Community College Association Director Robert Clinton, Texas Junior Colleges Teachers Association Immediate Past President Roger Griffin and National Association of Junior College Trustees President Reagan Legg.

OC President Phil Speegle, however, did not testify — he was present, but remained in the gallery instead of on the floor.

Monday, when the House subcommittee approved the bill, Speegle was not present. Nor was he Tuesday when the bill came up before the full Senate.

"The community leadership over here wants it (four-year status for UTPB)," Speegle told the Reporter-Telegram Tuesday afternoon from Odessa. "The leadership in Odessa knows I have some concerns about what it'll do to Odessa College. So I've agreed to stay out of it.

"That's why I'm here and not there," he said.

Oil field worker dies

BIG SPRING — A construction worker was killed near here late Tuesday afternoon when a crude oil storage tank blew up as he was attempting to weld a vent pipe on top of the tank.

Randy Wallace, a 24-year-old employee of the Universal Construction Co., was pronounced dead at the scene by Howard County Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin.

According to Heflin and sketchy Howard County Sheriff's Department reports, Wallace was working on the tank shortly before 5 p.m. when the top blew off, throwing him 50 to 60 feet into the air.

DEATHS

August Frusak

ST. LAWRENCE — Services for August M. Frysak, 61, of St. Lawrence will be at 3 p.m. Friday in the St. Lawrence Catholic Church with the Rev. Russell Schultz, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in St. Lawrence Cemetery, directed by Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

Frysak, a stockfarmer, died Monday in Las Vegas, Nev.

He was born Sept. 21, 1921, in Moulton, moved to San Angelo in 1936 and then to St. Lawrence in 1959. He was a member of St. Lawrence Catholic Church.

Survivors include his wife, Jerline; three daughters, Theresa Frysak of St. Lawrence, Sharon Lange of Olfen and Kathleen Schniers of Rowena; two sons, Kervin Frysak of Midkiff and Mark Frysak of St. Lawrence; two grandsons and several nieces and nephews.

Cecil C. Smith

Services for Cecil C. Smith, 83, of 1803 W. Ohio Ave., will be at 3:30 p.m. Thursday at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Dr. Kenneth Hall of Crestview Baptist Church officiating and Dr. James Reid of San Antonio assisting. Gravedside services will be at 3:30 p.m. Friday in Fort Worth with Dr. James Reid officiating.

He died Wednesday morning in a Midland hospital.

Smith grew up in Greenville, where he attended school and played football when Greenville was state champion. He enlisted in the Army during World War I and served in the 36th Division in France. Upon discharge he returned to Greenville, where he married in 1919.

In the early 1920s he moved to Fort Worth and worked for Pittsburgh Plate Glass. He transferred to Midland in 1950 and worked as manager of the West Texas division of Pittsburgh Plate Glass. He retired in 1961. In 1974 he married Eula Mask. He was a member of the Crestview Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Eula Smith of Midland; a son, Cecil C. Smith Jr., of Houston; two daughters, Mrs. Jack Schuler of Midland and Mrs. James Reid of San Antonio; two brothers, Clifford Smith of Dennison and Dwight Smith of Longview; and a sister, Elizabeth Smith of Kilgore.

Derrel Van Perry

Derrel Van Perry, 47, of Route 2 died Tuesday morning in Houston after an illness.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Thursday in Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Perry was born Jan. 3, 1936, in Brownfield. He attended Odessa Junior College and Texas Tech University, then served two years in the U.S. Army. He married Jane Miller in Odessa on Dec. 21, 1957.

He had lived in Midland since 1970. He worked for several years for the Borden Co., and had been assistant manager of Tall City Vending Co. since 1976.

He has served as president of Big Spring Optimist Club, member of the Southwest Football Officials Association and president of Tower Little League in Midland. He recently was made an Honorary Chapter Farmer by Lee High School FFA and served on the Adult Advisory Council for Vocational Programs. He was a member of Wilshire Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Larry Perry and Paul Perry, both of Midland; a daughter, Connie Perry of Midland; two brothers, Max Perry of Midland and Roach Perry of Lockney; a sister, Monah King of Abilene; two grandchildren, a niece and a nephew.

Louis Zinterhofer

Services for Dr. Louis Zinterhofer, 78, of 4605 Andrews Highway, were to be at 10 a.m. today at St. Ann's Catholic Church, with burial to follow in Danevang Cemetery at Danevang, directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home. A rosary was recited Tuesday night in the Ellis Chapel.

Zinterhofer died of a brief illness Monday night in a Midland hospital.

Pallbearers were to be Ernest Qualia, Maurice Kennedy, Ron Britton, Dr. Henry Page, Al Vogel and Clarence Kerth.

Honorary pallbearers were to be W.D. Yarbrough, Murray Fasken, Francis McGuigan, Lynn Durham and Dr. Durwood Clader.

Odessa lawyer has been disbarred

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

An Odessa attorney, who has been in legal work for more than 30 years, has been suspended from practicing law in Texas, stricken from the federal court roster and forbidden from applying the terms "attorney at law," counselor at law" or "lawyer" to himself.

The suspended attorney, Joseph J. Rey Sr., was rebuked following his conviction in El Paso federal court in November 1982 for conspiracy to possess heroin with intent to distribute the narcotic in 1979, according to federal court records.

Rey, about 60, was sentenced to four years in prison and was fined $5,000 but is free while his conviction is being appealed.

He was convicted in a second trial on the heroin charge after a "hung jury" case ended in a mistrial. In the subsequent trial, Rey's co-defendant, Edmundo Lozano, who had pleaded guilty to the charge, testified against Rey.

In a state disbarment proceeding against Rey, 210th State District Court Judge Sam Paxson of El Paso earlier this month ordered Rey "suspended from practice of law" in Texas while his conviction is under appeal.

"The defendant is ordered to return all files, papers, monies and other property belonging to clients and former clients in the defendant's (Rey's) possession to the respective clients or former clients or to another attorney at (each)...client's or former client's request," the judge's order says.

Rey was also ordered to surrender his Texas State Bar license.

Following Rey's conviction last November, U.S. District Judge Harry Lee Hudspeth ordered Rey's license to practice law in federal court revoked. Rey had been permitted to practice law in federal court since February 1951.

In his legal practice, Rey reportedly specialized in handling immigration cases.

Convicted rapist sues Sheriff's Office

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Midland County man, who 1½ years ago was sentenced to 25 years in prison for raping a 21-year-old neighbor, has filed a $1 million lawsuit in federal court against the Midland County Sheriff's Office and former Deputy Sheriff Les Hunter.

The man, Walter Ray Webb, is alleging that he was denied the reading of his rights as an accused person and was not presented with a search warrant prior to the search of his house on Aug. 23, 1980 — the day after he allegedly raped the neighbor, a housewife, as he threatened her with a knife.

In his petition, submitted to U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton of the Midland-Odessa Division of federal court, Webb says that lawmen first took him to the Midland Courthouse for questioning about the assault and then drove him out to

"There were no Miranda warning, search warrent (sic), etc. I was just taken and told to turn them (his belongings) over...," says Webb, who was 18 when he was convicted of rape. "I want to file a million-dollar lawsuit against Midland County Sheriff's Office and Leslie Eugene Hunter for coming into my home without a Miranda warning nor presenting me with a search warrent (sic). This is causing me a lot of mental anguis(h)."

In September 1981, a five-woman, seven-man jury in Midland's 238th State District Court convicted Webb of the aggravated rape of the woman.

Webb, who did not testify in his trial, was prosecuted in Judge Vann Culp's 238th State District Court by Assistant District Attorney David Joers and Jim Rex. His defense attorneys were Bob Freeman and John Hyde.

Stress seminar to be conducted

The YMCA Positive Lifestyle Center will conduct a seminar on the causes of stress, the problems it can create and what can be done to reduce it.

Some of the most effective antidotes to stress will be emphasized, such as self persuasion and positive self-talk, progressive relaxation and self-hypnosis, according to Charles Silverman, program director.

In general, the program will offer guidelines for maintaining a low-stress lifestyle.

The eight-hour program will consist of four two-hour sessions, beginning Saturday at 10 a.m. Registration must be done in advance. For more information call 682-2551.

OC president does not testify

The Senate bill allows the University of Texas System regents to establish a four-year institution at UTPB and to emphasize the teaching of energy-related sciences and engineering courses.

During floor debate on the bill, Sen. Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi asked Montford about the effect of his legislation on area junior colleges. The Lubbock senator noted "they are not supplying a sufficient number of students" to the university.

"These schools will complement each other," Montford told fellow legislators.

San Angelo Sen. Bill Sims, who represents Midland, questioned Montford about the estimated cost of expanding UTPB. Montford said modification would cost "nothing this session" because the bill could not take effect until 1986.

"It's cheaper to taxpayers if you have a university which cultivates a four-year curriculum," Montford said. "You can have a four-year school for the same price if you put a pencil to it."

Both Sims and Truan voted against suspension of the rules to take up the bill on the third reading the same day. Also voting against suspending the rules were Sens. Lloyd Doggett of Austin, Grant Jones of Abilene, John Leedom of Dallas, Oscar Mauzy of Grand Prairie, Bill Sarpalius of Amarillo and Craig Washington of Houston.

Washington, who consistently votes against suspending the rule requiring bills be read on three separate days for constitutional reasons, said he does not oppose the bill.

Montford said Tuesday he plans to bring the bill up again for consideration today. A spokeswoman in his office confirmed the bill probably will be brought up for final consideration sometime this week.

"I don't think it's coming up this week," Sims told the Reporter-Telegram early today, adding the bill is listed on the intent calendar. I think maybe he (Montford) will bring it down for awhile. It's kind of a stalemate."

When questioned about different votes in the first two hearing, Sims explained senators often vote to bring up a bill out of order "as a courtesy."

The third and final vote is the one that counts.

"I think we've got enough votes to hold it off this week," Sims said.

CIA repairs home of former program worker

By DIANE BOOTH
Lifestyle Writer

For 45 years Callie Mae York has given her time, energy and heart to Midland. When she needed help, Christmas in April returned the favor by being right there to lend a hand.

Mrs. York, who celebrates her 77th birthday Wednesday, is not only a grateful recipient of the volunteer house repair program, but she has been a worker of the CIA since it began a decade ago.

Every year the active Midlander cooks up a batch of beans and fixes some of her other specialties to deliver to Washington Park to help feed volunteers on the CIA workday.

"Wherever they are working I carry food to help people stay on the job."

Mrs. York bubbles over with praise for the program which strives to upgrade conditions in the homes of Midland's elderly and handicapped.

"It started just from little people like me," she said, "and it spread."

But the widow gives most of the credit for CIA's success to its founder and president, Bobby Trimble.

"He is a man who loves people," Mrs. York said. "As long as someone is old or needs help he is there. Even if he is the only one to do the job, he is there."

About three years ago, Trimble learned the roof on the widow's home was leaking, he organized a work party to do the repairs, and volunteered his own time to pound nails and replace shingles. "Even Mrs. Trimble got up on the roof and helped," she recalled.

Recently her water heater erupted and Trimble found out about it. He showed up at her house, examined the broken heater, left the house and Mrs. York said within a half hour he returned lugging a new appliance and made sure she found someone to install it, Mrs. York said.

"I wish every town in the U.S. had a Bobby Trimble," she said. "That man has a heart."

Most of Midland's civic and social organizations have jumped on the CIA bandwagon, Mrs. York said. "They see the need and want to be a part of it."

Although Trimble has been the key to the success of CIA, Mrs. York said she believes it is possible for all cities to establish similar programs.

The diminutive Midland woman is big on helping people.

"I have worked to help people since I have been in Midland." Mrs. York looks around her living room and dining room and points to the numerous bags and boxes which clutter her home.

Perhaps she is so well-known in the community because of her involvement in so many areas. The items are brought to her by people who want her to give them to others who need clothing, shoes, household goods and other discarded but still useful items.

If she is given something she thinks a family or someone can use, such as children's clothing, kitchen utensils, pots or pans, she said, she contacts them.

"Whatever they see they can use they can have it," she said.

Art auction slated Sunday

A poolside auction to benefit the Permian Civic Ballet is scheduled this Sunday, P1 Deerfield Court.

The auction will feature the paintings of Jeanette Ulrich, who is painting the portrait of Anne Burton which will be presented by the ballet at Ms. Burton's retirement performance.

The poolside auction is open to all ballet and art lovers in West Texas. Wine and cheese will be served at the preview from 2-3 p.m.

The artist recently moved to Midland after being commissioned to create a series of paintings by a West Texas businessman and art collector. Born in Chile, Ms. Ulrich maintains her fast-paced New York studio and her secluded island home in the Carribbean as well as a Midland residence.

Ms. Ulrich's schooling includes the Escuela Nacional de Bellas Artes in Lima, Peru and the Art Students League and Parsons Institute in New York City. Her work has been exhibited by Bergdorf Goodman, Trevis Gallery in Italy, the Ghendini and Carmelart Galleries in New York and Gallery "10" for Newsweek Magazine, among others.

A lover of ballet since she took dance as a child, Ms. Ulrich delighted in painting Anne Burton's portrait. "She has a wonderful face," Ms. Ulrich said, "The painting of Anne just flew by because she is the perfect subject, a joy to work with."

Ms. Ulrich works in oils, pastels and charcoal and has recently experimented with three-dimensional work to achieve a sculptural effect. Her works incorporate the old master and modern styles, with realism as the basis of her technique. She inherited her love of realism from her grandfather, Charles Frederick Ulrich, whose work is hung at the Metropolitan Museum in the Rockefeller Collection and at the Corcoran in Washington.

CWC presents 'color' program

Linnie Donnelly

A program on "Color Me Beautiful" will be presented by Linnie Donnelly at the Christian's Women's Club luncheon, May 4. Mrs. Donnelly is the regional coordinator for Color Me Beautiful and instructs women on their personal skin tone and coloring and how to dress and wear make-up to enhance their appearance.

The luncheon if from noon — 2 p.m., Wednesday at the Midland Country Club. Music will be provided by Sue Green, a voice and piano teacher, who will be accompanied on the piano by Doris Bruce.

Francis Kingsley, a Dallas housewife and mother, will be the keynote speaker.

Reservations for the meeting and nursery are available by calling 682-5851 or 683-7074 by Monday. The luncheon is $10.

Shoes pace up, down

NEW YORK (AP) — Shoes do a lot more than cover the feet. Throughout history, shoes have had tremendous social significance, and they tell an amazing story of mankind's ingenuity, craftsmanship and artistic imagination, researchers at The Footwear Council have found.

From the Council comes this collection of footwear fact and fancy — sometimes bizarre, sometimes laughable, and sometimes highly practical:

— Platform shoes and sandals are far from a recent trend. In ancient Greece, actors wore 4-inch platforms for that "heroic" appearance on stage. They also used their thick soles to accommodate novelty noise-making devices. They created soles that squeezed like bellows, producing musical sounds with every step and others that clicked like castanets.

— The chopine, with an elevation of 2 to 12 inches or more, spread from Turkey, where it originated, to Venice and then to England. It was popular in the 16th and early 17th centuries.

— Back in the days of King Tutankhamen, highly decorated sandals were one of the privileges of royalty. They had a rather macabre purpose as well: the sole of a sandal might be painted with the effigy of the enemy, the intention being to crush the hated person with every step — rather like a walking voodoo doll.

— Oriental platform shoes looked like soles on stilts. At his coronation in 1926, Emperor Hirohito of Japan rose to truly imperial heights shod in "getas" 12 inches tall.

— In Britain during the third century, a humble shoemaker named Crispin made shoes for the poor by night and preached by day. Because he did not charge for the shoes he made, it was supposed that the leather for them was being miraculously supplied by an angel. In 287 A.D., Crispin was martyred, presumably for not revealing his source, and thus became the patron saint of shoemakers.

— Catherine de Medici, 1519-89, is said to have introduced the high heel and ballet dancing to France. The first high heels had a problem: They were simply flat-soled ballet slippers with a heel attached. Inevitably, the heel would buckle and give out from underneath. One of the first solutions was to mount the entire heeled slipper on a full sole to hold the heel in position.

DEATHS

August Frusak

ST. LAWRENCE — Services for August M. Frysak, 61, of St. Lawrence will be at 3 p.m. Friday in the St. Lawrence Catholic Church with the Rev. Russell Schultz, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in St. Lawrence Cemetery, directed by Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

Frysak, a stockfarmer, died Monday in Las Vegas, Nev.

He was born Sept. 21, 1921, in Moulton, moved to San Angelo in 1936 and then to St. Lawrence in 1959. He was a member of St. Lawrence Catholic Church.

Survivors include his wife, Jerline; three daughters, Theresa Frysak of St. Lawrence, Sharon Lange of Olfen and Kathleen Schniers of Rowena; two sons, Kervin Frysak of Midkiff and Mark Frysak of St. Lawrence; two grandsons and several nieces and nephews.

Cecil C. Smith

Services for Cecil C. Smith, 83, of 1803 W. Ohio Ave., will be at 3:30 p.m. Thursday at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Dr. Kenneth Hall of Crestview Baptist Church officiating and Dr. James Reid of San Antonio assisting. Gravedside services will be at 3:30 p.m. Friday in Fort Worth with Dr. James Reid officiating.

He died Wednesday morning in a Midland hospital.

Smith grew up in Greenville, where he attended school and played football when Greenville was state champion. He enlisted in the Army during World War I and served in the 36th Division in France. Upon discharge he returned to Greenville, where he married in 1919.

In the early 1920s he moved to Fort Worth and worked for Pittsburgh Plate Glass. He transferred to Midland in 1950 and worked as manager of the West Texas division of Pittsburgh Plate Glass. He retired in 1961. In 1974 he married Eula Mask. He was a member of the Crestview Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Eula Smith of Midland; a son, Cecil C. Smith Jr., of Houston; two daughters, Mrs. Jack Schuler of Midland and Mrs. James Reid of San Antonio; two brothers, Clifford Smith of Dennison and Dwight Smith of Longview; and a sister, Elizabeth Smith of Kilgore.

Derrel Van Perry

Derrel Van Perry, 47, of Route 2 died Tuesday morning in Houston after an illness.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Thursday in Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Perry was born Jan. 3, 1936, in Brownfield. He attended Odessa Junior College and Texas Tech University, then served two years in the U.S. Army. He married Jane Miller in Odessa on Dec. 21, 1957.

He had lived in Midland since 1970. He worked for several years for the Borden Co., and had been assistant manager of Tall City Vending Co. since 1976.

He has served as president of Big Spring Optimist Club, member of the Southwest Football Officials Association and president of Tower Little League in Midland. He recently was made an Honorary Chapter Farmer by Lee High School FFA and served on the Adult Advisory Council for Vocational Programs. He was a member of Wilshire Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Larry Perry and Paul Perry, both of Midland; a daughter, Connie Perry of Midland; two brothers, Max Perry of Midland and Roach Perry of Lockney; a sister, Monah King of Abilene; two grandchildren, a niece and a nephew.

Louis Zinterhofer

Services for Dr. Louis Zinterhofer, 78, of 4605 Andrews Highway, were to be at 10 a.m. today at St. Ann's Catholic Church, with burial to follow in Danevang Cemetery at Danevang, directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home. A rosary was recited Tuesday night in the Ellis Chapel.

Zinterhofer died of a brief illness Monday night in a Midland hospital.

Pallbearers were to be Ernest Qualia, Maurice Kennedy, Ron Britton, Dr. Henry Page, Al Vogel and Clarence Kerth.

Honorary pallbearers were to be W.D. Yarbrough, Murray Fasken, Francis McGuigan, Lynn Durham and Dr. Durwood Clader.

Odessa lawyer has been disbarred

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

An Odessa attorney, who has been in legal work for more than 30 years, has been suspended from practicing law in Texas, stricken from the federal court roster and forbidden from applying the terms "attorney at law," counselor at law" or "lawyer" to himself.

The suspended attorney, Joseph J. Rey Sr., was rebuked following his conviction in El Paso federal court in November 1982 for conspiracy to possess heroin with intent to distribute the narcotic in 1979, according to federal court records.

Rey, about 60, was sentenced to four years in prison and was fined $5,000 but is free while his conviction is being appealed.

He was convicted in a second trial on the heroin charge after a "hung jury" case ended in a mistrial. In the subsequent trial, Rey's co-defendant, Edmundo Lozano, who had pleaded guilty to the charge, testified against Rey.

In a state disbarment proceeding against Rey, 210th State District Court Judge Sam Paxson of El Paso earlier this month ordered Rey "suspended from practice of law" in Texas while his conviction is under appeal.

"The defendant is ordered to return all files, papers, monies and other property belonging to clients and former clients in the defendant's (Rey's) possession to the respective clients or former clients or to another attorney at (each)...client's or former client's request," the judge's order says.

Rey was also ordered to surrender his Texas State Bar license.

Following Rey's conviction last November, U.S. District Judge Harry Lee Hudspeth ordered Rey's license to practice law in federal court revoked. Rey had been permitted to practice law in federal court since February 1951.

In his legal practice, Rey reportedly specialized in handling immigration cases.

The Senate bill allows the University of Texas System regents to establish a four-year institution at UTPB and to emphasize the teaching of energy-related sciences and engineering courses.

During floor debate on the bill, Sen. Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi asked Montford about the effect of his legislation on area junior colleges. The Lubbock senator noted "they are not supplying a sufficient number of students" to the university.

"These schools will complement each other," Montford told fellow legislators.

San Angelo Sen. Bill Sims, who represents Midland, questioned Montford about the estimated cost of expanding UTPB. Montford said modification would cost "nothing this session" because the bill could not take effect until 1986.

"It's cheaper to taxpayers if you have a university which cultivates a four-year curriculum," Montford said. "You can have a four-year school for the same price if you put a pencil to it."

Both Sims and Truan voted against suspension of the rules to take up the bill on the third reading the same day. Also voting against suspending the rules were Sens. Lloyd Doggett of Austin, Grant Jones of Abilene, John Leedom of Dallas, Oscar Mauzy of Grand Prairie, Bill Sarpalius of Amarillo and Craig Washington of Houston.

Washington, who consistently votes against suspending the rule requiring bills be read on three separate days for constitutional reasons, said he does not oppose the bill.

Montford said Tuesday he plans to bring the bill up again for consideration today. A spokeswoman in his office confirmed the bill probably will be brought up for final consideration sometime this week.

"I don't think it's coming up this week," Sims told the Reporter-Telegram early today, adding the bill is listed on the intent calendar. I think maybe he (Montford) will bring it down for awhile. It's kind of a stalemate."

When questioned about different votes in the first two hearing, Sims explained senators often vote to bring up a bill out of order "as a courtesy."

The third and final vote is the one that counts.

"I think we've got enough votes to hold it off this week," Sims said.

Convicted rapist sues Sheriff's Office

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Midland County man, who 1½ years ago was sentenced to 25 years in prison for raping a 21-year-old neighbor, has filed a $1 million lawsuit in federal court against the Midland County Sheriff's Office and former Deputy Sheriff Les Hunter.

The man, Walter Ray Webb, is alleging that he was denied the reading of his rights as an accused person and was not presented with a search warrant prior to the search of his house on Aug. 23, 1980 — the day after he allegedly raped the neighbor, a housewife, as he threatened her with a knife.

In his petition, submitted to U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton of the Midland-Odessa Division of federal court, Webb says that lawmen first took him to the Midland Courthouse for questioning about the assault and then drove him out to "There were no Miranda warning, search warrent (sic), etc. I was just taken and told to turn them (his belongings) over...," says Webb, who was 18 when he was convicted of rape. "I want to file a million-dollar lawsuit against Midland County Sheriff's Office and Leslie Eugene Hunter for coming into my home without a Miranda warning nor presenting me with a search warrent (sic). This is causing me a lot of mental anguis(h)."

In September 1981, a five-woman, seven-man jury in Midland's 238th State District Court convicted Webb of the aggravated rape of the woman.

Webb, who did not testify in his trial, was prosecuted in Judge Vann Culp's 238th State District Court by Assistant District Attorney David Joers and Jim Rex. His defense attorneys were Bob Freeman and John Hyde.

Stress seminar to be conducted

The YMCA Positive Lifestyle Center will conduct a seminar on the causes of stress, the problems it can create and what can be done to reduce it.

Some of the most effective antidotes to stress will be emphasized, such as self persuasion and positive self-talk, progressive relaxation and self-hypnosis, according to Charles Silverman, program director.

In general, the program will offer guidelines for maintaining a low-stress lifestyle.

The eight-hour program will consist of four two-hour sessions, beginning Saturday at 10 a.m. Registration must be done in advance. For more information call 682-2551.

CIA repairs home of former program worker

By DIANE BOOTH
Lifestyle Writer

For 45 years Callie Mae York has given her time, energy and heart to Midland. When she needed help, Christmas in April returned the favor by being right there to lend a hand.

Mrs. York, who celebrates her 77th birthday Wednesday, is not only a grateful recipient of the volunteer house repair program, but she has been a worker of the CIA since it began a decade ago.

Every year the active Midlander cooks up a batch of beans and fixes some of her other specialties to deliver to Washington Park to help feed volunteers on the CIA workday.

"Wherever they are working I carry food to help people stay on the job."

Mrs. York bubbles over with praise for the program which strives to upgrade conditions in the homes of Midland's elderly and handicapped.

"It started just from little people like me," she said, "and it spread."

But the widow gives most of the credit for CIA's success to its founder and president, Bobby Trimble.

"He is a man who loves people," Mrs. York said. "As long as someone is old or needs help he is there. Even if he is the only one to do the job, he is there."

About three years ago, Trimble learned the roof on the widow's home was leaking, he organized a work party to do the repairs, and volunteered his own time to pound nails and replace shingles. "Even Mrs. Trimble got up on the roof and helped," she recalled.

Recently her water heater erupted and Trimble found out about it. He showed up at her house, examined the broken heater, left the house and Mrs. York said within a half hour he returned lugging a new appliance and made sure she found someone to install it, Mrs. York said.

"I wish every town in the U.S. had a Bobby Trimble," she said. "That man has a heart."

Most of Midland's civic and social organizations have jumped on the CIA bandwagon, Mrs. York said. "They see the need and want to be a part of it."

Although Trimble has been the key to the success of CIA, Mrs. York said she believes it is possible for all cities to establish similar programs.

The diminutive Midland woman is big on helping people.

"I have worked to help people since I have been in Midland." Mrs. York looks around her living room and dining room and points to the numerous bags and boxes which clutter her home.

Perhaps she is so well-known in the community because of her involvement in so many areas. The items are brought to her by people who want her to give them to others who need clothing, shoes, household goods and other discarded but still useful items.

If she is given something she thinks a family or someone can use, such as children's clothing, kitchen utensils, pots or pans, she said, she contacts them.

"Whatever they see they can use they can have it," she said.

Art auction slated Sunday

A poolside auction to benefit the Permian Civic Ballet is scheduled this Sunday, P1 Deerfield Court.

The auction will feature the paintings of Jeanette Ulrich, who is painting the portrait of Anne Burton which will be presented by the ballet at Ms. Burton's retirement performance.

The poolside auction is open to all ballet and art lovers in West Texas. Wine and cheese will be served at the preview from 2-3 p.m.

The artist recently moved to Midland after being commissioned to create a series of paintings by a West Texas businessman and art collector. Born in Chile, Ms. Ulrich maintains her fast-paced New York studio and her secluded island home in the Carribbean as well as a Midland residence.

Ms. Ulrich's schooling includes the Escuela Nacional de Bellas Artes in Lima, Peru and the Art Students League and Parsons Institute in New York City. Her work has been exhibited by Bergdorf Goodman, Trevis Gallery in Italy, the Ghendini and Carmelart Galleries in New York and Gallery "10" for Newsweek Magazine, among others.

A lover of ballet since she took dance as a child, Ms. Ulrich delighted in painting Anne Burton's portrait. "She has a wonderful face," Ms. Ulrich said, "The painting of Anne just flew by because she is the perfect subject, a joy to work with."

Ms. Ulrich works in oils, pastels and charcoal and has recently experimented with three-dimensional work to achieve a sculptural effect. Her works incorporate the old master and modern styles, with realism as the basis of her technique. She inherited her love of realism from her grandfather, Charles Frederick Ulrich, whose work is hung at the Metropolitan Museum in the Rockefeller Collection and at the Corcoran in Washington.

CWC presents 'color' program

Linnie Donnelly

A program on "Color Me Beautiful" will be presented by Linnie Donnelly at the Christian's Women's Club luncheon, May 4. Mrs. Donnelly is the regional coordinator for Color Me Beautiful and instructs women on their personal skin tone and coloring and how to dress and wear make-up to enhance their appearance.

The luncheon if from noon — 2 p.m., Wednesday at the Midland Country Club. Music will be provided by Sue Green, a voice and piano teacher, who will be accompanied on the piano by Doris Bruce.

Francis Kingsley, a Dallas housewife and mother, will be the keynote speaker.

Reservations for the meeting and nursery are available by calling 682-5851 or 683-7074 by Monday. The luncheon is $10.

Shoes pace up, down

NEW YORK (AP) — Shoes do a lot more than cover the feet. Throughout history, shoes have had tremendous social significance, and they tell an amazing story of mankind's ingenuity, craftsmanship and artistic imagination, researchers at The Footwear Council have found.

From the Council comes this collection of footwear fact and fancy — sometimes bizarre, sometimes laughable, and sometimes highly practical:

— Platform shoes and sandals are far from a recent trend. In ancient Greece, actors wore 4-inch platforms for that "heroic" appearance on stage. They also used their thick soles to accommodate novelty noise-making devices. They created soles that squeezed like bellows, producing musical sounds with every step and others that clicked like castanets.

— The chopine, with an elevation of 2 to 12 inches or more, spread from Turkey, where it originated, to Venice and then to England. It was popular in the 16th and early 17th centuries.

— Back in the days of King Tutankhamen, highly decorated sandals were one of the privileges of royalty. They had a rather macabre purpose as well: the sole of a sandal might be painted with the effigy of the enemy, the intention being to crush the hated person with every step — rather like a walking voodoo doll.

— Oriental platform shoes looked like soles on stilts. At his coronation in 1926, Emperor Hirohito of Japan rose to truly imperial heights shod in "getas" 12 inches tall.

— In Britain during the third century, a humble shoemaker named Crispin made shoes for the poor by night and preached by day. Because he did not charge for the shoes he made, it was supposed that the leather for them was being miraculously supplied by an angel. In 287 A.D., Crispin was martyred, presumably for not revealing his source, and thus became the patron saint of shoemakers.

— Catherine de Medici, 1519-89, is said to have introduced the high heel and ballet dancing to France. The first high heels had a problem: They were simply flat-soled ballet slippers with a heel attached. Inevitably, the heel would buckle and give out from underneath. One of the first solutions was to mount the entire heeled slipper on a full sole to hold the heel in position.

Honey has been an ingredient in recipes for generations. It is the secret to the light, sweet taste in this orange-honey cake. The bees' labor of love brings out the best in baked goods, sauces and whatever dish, dessert or confection calls for sweetening with a lot of flavor.

Honey - loved by generations

Hearst Feature Service

Honey is not only sinfully delicious, it's part of American history.

One of my favorite cookbooks, "Secrets of New England Cooking," by Ella Shannon Bowles and Dorothy S. Towle, says in a chapter on maple and honey: "Accustomed as they were to honey, it must have been a great surprise to the early settlers to find that there were no honey bees in the New World."

But, according to the authors, bees were regarded as valuable possessions and hives were brought to America within a few years. Furthermore, "when the first escaping bees made their nests in hollow trees, the Indians were much amazed at the Englishman's 'fly.' But so great was their love of sweets that, in spite of stings, they robbed the wild-bee trees just as the bears did, often eating the comb also."

I couldn't believe there were no native honey bees on this continent, so I wrote the best beekeeper I know, Robert Taylor in Cass City, Mich., who wrote back:

"The native American bee was a jet-black bee, very well adapted to its native habitat. The Pilgrims looked upon this bee as an undesirable insect, not realizing that it would be resistant, if not immune, to the bee pests and ills of this country. Therefore, they sent for bees that they were familiar with and destroyed any American bees they could find. The net result was (foreign) bee colonies with no resistance to American foulbrood, an organism that attacks the sealed brood and results in destruction of the colony. Now, if we find any evidence of it at all, we destroy both hive and bees.

"When bee breeders realized what had been done to our native bee," he continues, "they offered a standing reward of $10,000 for any native colony of black bees that could be found, but with no luck."

English bees obviously became acclimated because honey survived; indeed, it's never been more popular. Health-food stores carry shelves of different varieties – clover, sage, even pine – depending on what the bees were eating.

Golden raisins piquant touch

Associated Press

A delicious way to give chicken — broiled, pan-fried or baked — a piquant touch is to accompany it with curried rice plus the sweetness of golden raisins.

CURRIED RICE

3 tablespoons butter
1 small (about 3 ounces) onion, finely chopped (about ½ cup)
1 large rib celery, thinly sliced (about 1-3rd cup)
2 teaspoons curry powder
1 cup long-grain rice
2 cups clear, fat-free chicken broth
½ cup golden raisins
2 tablespoons minced parsley
3 tablespoons toasted slivered almonds

In a 10-inch skillet, over medium heat, melt butter; stir in onion and celery; cook until wilted — about 5 minutes. Stir in curry powder and rice; cook, stirring a few times, for another 5 minutes. Add broth and raisins; bring to a boil; cover. Simmer until liquid has evaporated and rice is cooked through — about 20 minutes. Let stand off heat, covered, for 5 to 10 minutes. Garnish with parsley and almonds; serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

Chef's captivating recipe

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

One of the most captivating vegetable recipes I have ever tried comes from "Michel Guerard's Cuisine Gourmande" by Michel Guerard (Morrow).

MICHEL GUERARD'S ONION CONFITURE

¼ pound butter
1½ pounds medium-size white onions (about 18), peeled and finely sliced
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
2-3rds cup granulated sugar
⅓ cup sherry vinegar
2 tablespoons grenadine syrup, see Comments
1 cup red wine

Heat the butter in a large frying pan or saute pan until it turns light brown and no longer sizzles. Add the onions, salt, pepper and sugar. Stir well, then cover the pan and lower the heat. Simmer the onions, stirring occasionally, for 30 minutes, then add the sherry vinegar, grenadine syrup and red wine. Uncover the pan and continue cooking 30 minutes more over low heat.

Super, simple supper

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

NOODLE MIX

4 ounces spinach egg noodles
6 ounces egg noodles
15½-ounce jar spaghetti sauce with mushrooms
15 or 16 ounces ricotta cheese (about 2 cups)
8 ounces mozzarella cheese, sliced
¾ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Cook and drain both spinach and egg noodles according to package directions. Over the bottom of a shallow 2-quart baking dish (11¾ by 7½ by 1¾ inches) spread about 1-3rd cup spaghetti sauce. Add half the spinach noodles, egg noodles, ricotta, mozarella, half the remaining spaghetti sauce and half the Parmesan. Repeat layers. Bake, uncovered, in a preheated 375-degree oven until hot — 20 to 30 minutes.

Lunch break

Break out of the brown bag lunch rut with nourishing, low-calorie pasta dishes that offer variety in totable meals.

Are you and others in your family among the millions who take lunch to school and the office?

Pack a hot entree. Vermicelli with white clam sauce is the answer. It is quick to make. The sauce goes together while the pasta cooks. Toss and pack. You can savor this specialty at only 285 calories a portion.

Do you find it difficult to create variety in the totables, tiring of the usual sandwich? If so, you will welcome some new suggestions. Calorie counters should take special note.

Pasta provides protein, niacin, thiamine, riboflavin and iron. It is low in fat and sodium.

Pasta is one of our most healthful foods.

VERMICELLI WITH WHITE CLAM SAUCE

8 ounces vermicelli
1 tablespoon salt
3 quarts boiling water
1 tablespoon olive or salad oil
1 clove garlic, minced
1 cup chopped parsley
1 can (6½ ounces) minced clams
1 bottle (8 ounces) clam juice

Gradually add vermicelli and salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander.

While vermicelli is cooking, heat oil in a medium-size saucepan. Add garlic and sauce 1 to 2 minutes, stirring frequently.

Add parsely. Drain clams; pour clam liquid into saucepan. Set aside clams. Add clam juice and cook about 10 minutes. Add clams and heat through. Mix sauce with vermicelli.

Makes four servings.

DEAR ABBY

Readers abuzz over ringing ears problem

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for the letter signed "Hearing Things in Illinois," from the elderly couple who described a high-pitched, humming, ringing, buzzing-type noise that seemed to come from inside their heads. They said they heard it constantly but were ashamed to mention it to their doctor for fear they'd be told they were "going crazy."

As a result of that column, all day I've been hearing from people saying they have had that problem for years but were also reluctant to mention it.

You explained that they probably had a condition called "tinnitus," from which literally millions of people suffer.

In addition to the many causes you listed, the use of ASPIRIN – yes, plain old ordinary aspirin – should be listed. It's especially important because so many older patients take large doses of aspirin to ease the pain of arthritis. This information will not stop the ringing in their ears, but it may comfort them to know that they're not imagining things or going crazy.

It also helps people to know that they're not the only ones afflicted with this annoying problem. And it sure makes my job a lot easier. – PHARMACIST IN IOWA CITY

DEAR PHARMACIST: Many physicians wrote to suggest that I mention aspirin as a possible cause for tinnitus. This may give the manufacturers of aspirin an Excedrin headache, but I feel an obligation to pass the information along to my readers.

I also heard from many in the dental profession informing me that "buzzing in the head" is sometimes caused by ill-fitting dentures, tooth grinding or malocclusion (abnormality in the "bite"). Dentists who focus on the treatment of TMJ (temporomandibular joint) have also offered some relief from tinnitus.

Readers: Now, also is heard an encouraging word:

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Hearing Things in Illinois" and the millions of others suffering from tinnitus about the American Tinnitus Association. It supports tinnitus research and provides information and referrals to health care providers who can help some sufferers. Referrals can also be made to one of the many tinnitus self-help groups that have sprung up all over the United States and Canada.

Research into the possible causes and cures for tinnitus is being carried out at several universities in this country and abroad. Patients should, however, be wary of those who make extravagant claims because at present there is no universal "cure" for tinnitus.

Patients should feel free to make further inquiry by writing to the American Tinnitus Association, P.O. Box 5, Portland, Ore. 97207. This is a non-profit organization, so please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. -- GLORIA REICH, M.S., EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

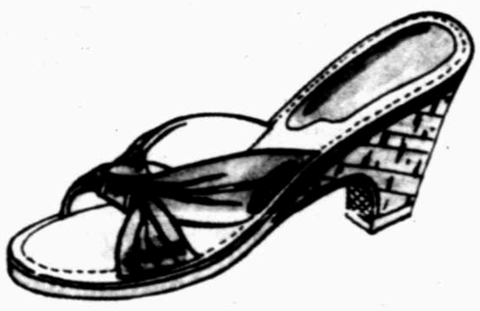

CONFIDENTIAL TO HURTING IN WORTHINGTON, MINN.: It takes a friend and an enemy to really hurt you: the enemy to say something rotten about you, and the "friend" to tell you about it.

Expert says microwave oven not miracle or magic

Hearst Feature Service

Donovan Fandre leans over and peers into the microwave oven as food sizzles merrily inside.

"Aren't you afraid of the radiation?" a bystander asks.

"Radiation? Oh my god!" he gasps in mock terror, shielding his face.

Later, mixing ingredients with his hands, he stops and says, "It's OK, my hands are sterile. I cook with microwaves."

Although this is one microwave oven expert who doesn't take things too seriously, Fandre does have some definite ideas about how to use the appliance intelligently. He has parlayed those ideas into two successful books and a cable television program.

Fandre is a cook who sees the limitations of the microwave oven as well as the possibilities. And he has little patience with oven manufacturers who promise more than the machine can deliver.

"They made a big mistake promoting miracle cooking in the microwave oven. It's not a miracle. It just directs energy to the food to cook it, the same as a stove. All this business of programmable cards and ovens that flash lights to tell you when to stir your food is nonsense. You gotta poke, stir, feel and taste food as you cook it in a microwave, just like any other kind of cooking."

Fandre's message is that a microwave oven is just another way of applying heat to food. "It has some limitations, but it does some things extremely well. Fish, vegetables, seafood and big pieces of meat do especially well. Moist vegetables like corn or broccoli do better than dry vegetables like carrots or beans," he adds.

"Bread comes out lousy in a microwave oven. Pasta is terrible because it's hard to keep that much water boiling in there. Souffles can be made, but I prefer a hot oven. You can dehydrate fruit, but it's not a very efficient way to do it. You can't do huge volumes of food in a microwave oven.

"Think of it this way. You wouldn't try to cook a prime rib in a wok, would you? You don't try to bake in a microwave oven. Yet every microwave cookbook has a chapter on baking bread in the microwave."

Fandre has developed some simple techniques that take advantage of the microwave oven's idiosyncracies.

He cooked mussels, for example, with a splash of white wine, a finely chopped garlic clove, a finely chopped chunk of ginger and a sprinkle of red pepper flakes — and a layer of aluminum foil on top.

Aluminum foil? Metal in a microwave? Isn't that verboten?

"Microwave energy won't go through metal, so don't put the food in metal pans or it won't cook," Fandre says. "But with shellfish, the microwave causes some to dry out, while others are not done yet. I put foil on top so the mussels cook in the steam generated from the bottom."

When Fandre teaches microwave cooking classes, somebody always asks, "Well, what about arcing?"

"I'll show you an arc," he says. He crumpled up some aluminum foil and splayed it out, put it in the oven in a pan of water and turned it on. A blue flash crackled.

"See? Whoopee, an arc. It doesn't hurt the oven. It doesn't hurt you. It won't hurt the food. My kids put all kinds of metal things in the oven to see what will make the neatest arc."

Barbara Harris, who has written a highly regarded book on microwave cooking ("Let's Cook Microwave") points out, however, that arcing can ignite wrappings or burn food. "It's really a lightning storm in the oven," she said. "China with gold or silver rims can arc and lift the metal right off the plate. A good arc can burn a hole right through the metal wall of the oven."

What other concerns do people have?

"Radiation is the big concern. I wish they had just called it energy impulses or something," says Fandre, a former lecturer with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"Most people are scared stiff of the word radiation, but they don't understand the difference between ionizing and non-ionizing radiation. Ionizing radiation is what you get from a nuclear bomb. Microwave radiation is not radioactive. A gas stove cooks by radiation — radiation of heat. It's a tricky word."

Other authorities express concern about the effect of microwaves on the cornea. Most commercial microwave ovens also carry warnings to anyone wearing a pacemaker not to get too close.

One of the things microwave ovens are supposed to do well is defrost frozen food, but Fandre isn't so sure.

"It does a good job, but it's tricky," he says. "The outer edge will sometimes cook before the interior is thawed. With fish, I would rather thaw it under running water. I defrost chicken just until I can get the package of giblets out, otherwise it can start to cook. Beef does just fine."

Fandre also gets annoyed with cookbooks that give precise timings for the microwave oven.

"Every microwave oven is different," he says. "Your oven will produce less power at 6 p.m., when everyone else is cooking dinner at the same time. And the temperature of the food when you put it in the oven will vary.

"My golden rule for microwave cooking is, 'Always undercook.' You can always put it back for a few more minutes. Once it's overcooked, you might as well throw it out. I always advice people to buy a big dog when they buy a microwave oven, because you always make mistakes."

To avoid those mistakes, Fandre has some helpful advice.

"First think about what you want to do. If you want moist heat, cover the food. It will steam. If you want dry heat, leave it uncovered. The moisture will evaporate in the heat. Second, buy an instant-read meat thermometer, and use it to tell whether the food is done.

"Finally, use common sense. If you're cooking something like a spaghetti sauce on top of the stove, you turn up the heat until it starts to boil, then turn it down to let it simmer. Do the same in a microwave oven. Start it on high, then reduce the power so it simmers."

And for some specific foods:

Vegetables of uneven shape will cook unevenly. Even out the cooking by reversing the direction some of the vegetables face. When cooking asparagus, for example, turn half the spears so the tips are nestled next to the other spears' stems.

To cook a whole chicken, cut it down the back and lay it flat on a cutting board. Hit the breastbone with your palm to flatten it slightly and place it in a covered plastic pan.

Any kind of mixture, such as a casserole, does better in a ring-shaped pan than in a flat pan. The reason is that microwave energy hits the food from top, bottom and side along the edge, but in the middle, it's just hitting the food from the top. The middle always takes longer to cook. The ring shape removes the middle.

The main thing to remember, Fandre concludes, is that the "microwave oven is not magic. You can only program it to regulate time and temperature. It can't regulate tenderness or taste. That's up to the cook."

This "Baked Tuna Sandwich Mexicali" is an oven-baked treat made with cheese and tuna filling and egg-dipped and crumbed. Topped with a slice of canned pineapple, prepared in the same way, it is then baked until hot and crispy. Served a with thinly sliced red onion, cucumber and radish in an oil and vinegar dressing, it makes a handsome hot lunch.

Tangy lemon roll dish

Lemon Filling, see recipe below.
1-3rd cup all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons corn starch
3 large eggs
1-3rd cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
1½ teaspoons grated lemon rind
1 tablespoon butter, melted and cooled
Confectioners' sugar
Whipped cream (sweetened to taste and flavored with vanilla)

Prepare the Lemon Filling.

With wax paper line the bottom of a 15 by 10 by 1-inch jelly roll pan.

Sift together the flour and cornstarch; return to sifter and reserve.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, at high speed, beat together the eggs, sugar and vanilla until thickened and ivory color — about 8 minutes. Sift the reserved flour mixture, about ½ at a time, over the egg mixture, gently folding it in with a rubber spatula after each addition. Sprinkle with the lemon rind and drizzle the butter over the batter; gently fold in.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until surface springs back when lightly touched — 20 to 25 minutes. With a small metal spatula, loosen sides. At once turn out onto a tea towel well covered with confectioners' sugar; remove wax paper from cake. Starting at long side, roll cake and towel together. Place cake, seam side down and rolled in a towel, on a wire rack; cool completely. Unroll cake and spread with lemon filling; roll up cake; cut in half crosswise and arrange on a serving plate. Cover and store in the refrigerator.

LEMON FILLING: In a 1- or 1½-quart saucepan stir together ½ cup sugar and 2 tablespoons cornstarch. Gradually stir in ¾ cup water, keeping smooth. Vigorously stir in 2 large egg yolks until blended. Over medium-low heat, stir constantly until the mixture shows it is boiling because it bubbles and sputters, is as least as thick as mayonnaise and mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Off heat, stir in the butter, then the lemon rind and lemon juice. Very lightly place a sheet of saran over the mixture. Chill at least 1 hour.

Lime flavored bars

1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1-3rd cup butter
2 large eggs
1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
½ cup chopped (medium-fine) walnuts
½ cup flaked coconut
2-3rds cup confectioners' sugar
1 teaspoon grated lime rind
5 teaspoons (about) fresh lime juice

In a medium bowl stir together flour and granulated sugar; with a pastry blender, cut in butter until it is in fine particles. Press firmly over bottom of a buttered 9 by 9 by 1¾-inch cake pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until this crust is golden — 15 minutes. In a small bowl beat eggs until foamy; add brown sugar and beat just until combined; stir in walnuts and coconut. Pour over hot crust. Continue baking at 350 degrees until browned — 30 minutes or longer. Loosen edges; cool 15 minutes. Beat together confectioners' sugar, lime rind and enough lime juice to make spreading consistency; spread over top; let set and cut in bars. — (AP)

Rhubarb sherbet

1½ pounds pink or red rhubarb, trimmed
½ cup maple syrup
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup orange juice
¼ teaspoon salt
2 large eggs
1 cup sugar

Cut rhubarb crosswise into ½-inch slices — there should be 3 to 4 cups. In a 3-quart saucepot bring rhubarb and 1 cup water to a boil; simmer, uncovered, until rhubarb disintegrates — about 10 minutes. Stir in maple syrup, lemon rind, lemon juice and orange juice; stirring constantly, bring to a boil; stir in salt. Place in freezer until cool. Beat eggs until foamy; gradually beat in sugar until thick and ivory color; stir into rhubarb mixture. Freeze in a 2-quart ice cream freezer, according to manufacturer's directions. Makes 2 quarts. —(AP)

Wine drinkers find real bargains

Copley News Service

It's discount time in the wine business.

The California wine industry is in a period of protracted agony. The surplus is still there and prices for imports are dropping, due in part to the strength of the dollar vs. foreign currencies.

So California wine makers know they have to cut prices to stimulate sales, but many are stubborn. They look at their neighbors who are charging great sums for certain products and getting it, and they wonder why they shouldn't keep their prices up, too.

Robert Mondavi said in an interview, "We must make more wine available in the $5 to $6 range." He acknowledged that imports, especially from France (which has had three devaluations of the franc in the last two years) and Italy (which subsidizes the export wine business), represent a great threat to California's wine industry.

Yet certain producers set trends for both style and high price — and can get away with it. Mondavi, for example, can release a bottle of Cabernet Sauvignon at $40 a bottle and the public respects the wine. It does, after all, have that prestigious label on it, and it is good wine.

But is it four times as good as some of the $10 Cabernets on the market? Of course not — yet Mondavi and some others are above the market pressures since they sell all they make regardless of price.

For most, though, the pinch is on. Many wineries now are cutting wholesale prices, and some retailers pass those cuts on to consumers. The result may eventually be an end to the mom and pop wine shop that cannot take advantage of the lower prices because they can't buy in large quantities.

Let's say a winery makes a Cabernet with a suggested price of $12, but for various reasons (lack of image, not as great a quality as the wine maker believed, etc.) the wine sells slowly.

So the wine maker offers discounts for multiple purchases — say 15 percent for those who buy 15 cases at one time. This isn't a new idea, but in recently it has become epidemic. Large chain outlets can buy in quantity without problem, and sell the $12 wine for $10 and still make full markup.

But it doesn't stop there. Besides the percentage discount, some wineries offer "post-off" inducements. A post-off is a per-case discount ($1 or $2, sometimes more) for multiple purchases.

This permits retailers to offer $12 bottles for $9.75 or even less — and still make a full markup. If the retailer wishes to take a smaller markup, the $12 wine could be offered at $8.95.

Many small wine shop chains buy close-out wines, special-discount wines or private label wines. Close-outs are wines a winery doesn't plan to produce again; special-discount items can be last year's vintage that's still available when this year's vintage is about to be released.

The "bombers," shops that traditionally offer wine at huge discounts, have found it profitable to go out on a limb by buying huge quantities of certain items and offering them at ludicrously low prices.

Private label wines also are making inroads. These are wines that are "made" by California negociants, who buy excess lots of wine from large wineries and have it bottled with their labels on it. Souverain has been the production center for many of these labels over the years, one of which was the successful North Coast Cellars label.

Souverain is a limited partnership of grape growers, and over the years has had much wine of a slightly lesser quality than the regular Souverain line. About a year ago, the North Coast Cellars line was developed as a "second label," and as an introductory price, each of the wines in the line was offered at wholesale at $14 a case — equivalent to $1.17 a bottle. These wines were sold at a number of locations, including department stores, at $1.99 a bottle.

Meanwhile, all over California, wineries with excess Cabernet Sauvignon, Chardonnay, Sauvignon Blanc, Zinfandel and other varieties are offering these wines, already bottled, to negociants at very low figures. Church and Forsyth, a San Francisco-based negociant, made a splash with a 1981 Chardonnay last year that sold for $6.99.

Chinese pork truly authentic

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Twenty-four year old Xiong Yang has been living in New York City for about two years. I met him shortly after he arrived from Shanghai, China. His aunt, Florence Lin, the well-known cookbook author and one of my good friends, was our interpreter.

In this country, Xiong Yang calls himself Henry. He named himself after the Henry Hudson Parkway, where, as he says, "I live with my aunt in a large and beautiful apartment, located in the Riverdale section of the Bronx."

Now Henry is a sophomore at Manhattan College, studying electrical engineering and hoping to go to graduate school. When he completes his university education he will go back to China and, he told me, "use the knowledge I have gained to make a contribution to China's modernization."

Henry was seven when the Cultural Revolution swept through China. By the time he finished high school, university education was closed to all except workers with several years' practical experience in a field of technology. Because he was eager to continue his studies, Henry entered a technical school.

Exactly one year later, the law changed: ironically, university education was now open to everyone under 25 except technical school students. They had to graduate from technical school, work two years in a plant, then apply to the plant for permission to attend a university.

After another year in school and two years of work, Henry was again disappointed when the plant where he was working refused to release him to attend university. It was at this heartbreaking moment that the complex arrangements for his western education were made.

It was Henry's father who taught him how to make an unusual dish — thinly sliced pork dipped in a crisp, delicate batter and fried. When Henry offered to cook this delicious dish at my house, I jumped at the opportunity.

XIONG YANG'S PORK

1½ pounds boneless pork loin
3 large eggs
1 teaspoon sherry
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
½ cup corn oil

Thinly slice pork into 24 slices. With dull edge of knife or a cleaver pound each pork slice in a crisscross pattern until very thin.

Beat eggs until foamy; stir in sherry, cornstarch, salt and pepper; beat gently until batter is smooth.

In an electric skillet, heat corn oil to 350 degrees. Dip pork slices, one at a time, into batter; drain off excess batter. Carefully add to oil, a few slices at a time. Fry, turning once, until cooked through and golden brown — about 2 minutes. Drain on paper towels and keep hot in a warm oven. Makes 4 to 6 servings. Serve with boiled Chinese noodles and stir-fried snow peas with mushrooms.

Chinese stir-fried and steamed vegetables are convenient Oriental side dishes. Stir-frying involves placing the vegetables in a hot, oiled skillet or wok and moving them constantly with a spatula to cook quickly and evenly. For steaming, the vegetables are arranged in a basket which is placed in covered saucepan with an inch or two of gently boiling water. The Chinese always undercook slightly for the best flavor.

Table manners not minded

By RALPH SCHOENSTEIN
Hearst Feature Service

At the dinner table last night I happened to notice that my eldest daughter's elbows straddled her plate like the legs of the Jolly Green Giant, while my youngest daughter's arm was extended in a lunge for the salt that looked like the highlight of an Olympic fencing match. The sight of these postures affected me so deeply that I suddenly burst into song:

Children, childen, if you're able,
Keep your elbows off the table;
And a reach for salt that way
Is clearly dining declasse'.

"Mom," said my daughter Jill through a mouth filtered by bread, "I think that something has slipped in Dad."

"The only thing that's slipped," I said, "is our manners. I know it's fun to eat like Vikings, but it wouldn't be a bad idea to use some of the manners that my grandmother taught me. Why, I can hear her right now telling me that even my little song was bad manners because it's rude to sing at the table, just as it's rude to put your elbows on it."

"But that's where they fit," said Jill, preparing to swallow a spoonful of peas.

Just then, my youngest daughter rose and launched herself toward the living room.

"Yes, Lori," I called. "You may be excused."

I am well aware that table manners in America often make no sense, that eating peas with a fork, for example, is a way to recycle them to your plate; but I am driven to such elegant dumbness by something planted deep in my brain by my grandmother, who would have eaten pizza only with the proper knife. And so, no matter how hard I try to fall into step with the pig-out generation, I am etiquette's piteous slave, forever forced to march to the orders of Emily Post.

Such indoctrination lingers on like a smallpox shot. I can still see myself sitting down to one of my grandmother's meals and being pierced by her glare because I had reached the table a full 47 seconds after being called. I often wonder how my grandmother would have enriched her glare for my daughters, who arrive at meals with the speed of the mail. Their lag, in fact, has grown so great that I have been moving up their invitations. One day last week, as we were finishing lunch, I said, "Dinner is served."

"Start without me," Jill replied.

Start without me. How my grandmother would have sputtered at that! She never grew tired of telling me that no dinner table should be disgraced by a spontaneous stuffing of mouths. Chewing should always be triggered by the hostess, who takes the meal's inaugural bite, a modest piece of food whose journey towards the esophagus must never be slowed by the winds of conversation.

If starting the appetizer before the hostess was a sin, then starting the dessert before she did meant an instant consignment to hell. One might as well grab an olive during grace. My daughters start dessert the moment they can find it, a hunt that often precedes the meal; but I am the one who watches his ice cream turn into a little chocolate pond while the hostess takes a long distance call.

Once the meal had officially begun, I delighted my grandmother by smartly putting down my knife and changing hands with my fork after cutting each piece of meat. It was a little like shifting gears in a Volkswagen. I was well aware that people who kept forks in their hands after cutting meat were probably from Borneo.

One evening, my right arm got tired halfway through a steak and I suddenly stopped switching my fork.

"Ralph, is that your left hand I see brandishing your meat like a cannibal?"

"Sorry, grandma," I said. "I sprained the right one during the soup."

It was of course, possible to sprain your right hand while eating soup because you had to remember to keep moving the hand away from you and not towards you, as if you were skimming the bowl for mosquitoes. This was almost as much exercise as the shifting of a meat-filled fork and it gave me the kind of wrist I could have used at Wimbledon. Sometimes, though, I found myself so anxious for the soup to reach my mouth during its long trip that I tried to meet it halfway. And then my grandmother would say, "Ralph, soup to mouth, not mouth to soup."

One day in 1943, I happened to learn that the Japanese always moved their heads towards their soup, a habit that struck me as having the wisdom of the Orient.

"Grandma!" I said to her that night. "Did you know that the Japanese get their faces right down in their soup?"

"And that," she coldly replied, "is why we must win the war."

Even when you remember not to bow to the soup or left-hand the fork or lunge for the salt or talk through your food or use your fork for cutting meat, there were still other rules that helped to keep you from enjoying a meal. And of all these rules for nervous dining that were hammered into me, the one dictating the use of a fork to lift vegetables was the rule that must have been conceived by the Russian secret police.

I haven't forgotten, grandma. The rules are so ingrained in me that even during a recent power blackout in my town, I passed up a splendid chance to use a piece of bread to get some peas on a fork. I could hear my grandmother saying, "Even in the dark, bad manners will always be seen." Were I invited to the wildest Roman bacchanal, I would still be wondering if my grandmother allowed the fingers for picking up the grapes.

Quick but classy microwave meals

Hearst Feature Service

MICROWAVED TROUT

2 trout, 8 inches each
juice of 1/2 lemon

Place the trout side-by-side on a large plate, arranging them so they alternate on the plate, nose to tail. Squeeze the lemon juice over them and cover the plate tightly with plastic wrap. Microwave on high two minutes. Let the trout stand for 1 minute, then cut away the plastic. Serve hot or cold.

BROCCOLI-CAULIFLOWER BEEHIVE

1 large head cauliflower
2 bunches broccoli

Break the cauliflower into four or five pieces. Cut the broccoli about the same depth as the cauliflower and break it into similar-size pieces. Alternate layers of cauliflower and broccoli in a plastic or glass round-bottom bowl, with the stems facing inward, so it forms an upside-down dome. Cover the dish tightly with plastic wrap. Microwave 12 minutes on high. Test the doneness with a skewer in the center of the vegetables. Release the steam and compress the vegetables inside the mold with a small saucer. Let it cool about five minutes, then drain off any water. Invert the mold onto a platter and remove the baking dish. Top it with a cheese sauce, if you like.

MUSSELS VIETNAMESE

2 pounds fresh mussels, cleaned
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 piece fresh ginger, about walnut size, finely chopped
1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon red pepper flakes
1/4 cup dry white wine

Combine the ingredients in a deep plastic or glass bowl. Place a sheet of aluminum foil over the mussels and cover the bowl with plastic wrap. Microwave on high five minutes, or until the mussels open up. Serve in bowls with some of the juices.

Mitterrand seeking aid from U.S.

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst European Bureau

PARIS — In one of the more striking political ironies of recent times, arch-conservative Ronald Reagan increasingly looks like the only person who can save France's socialist regime from crumbling.

What's more, it may be essential to America's interests for him to do it.

Without an active assist from the Reagan administration, it is beginning to appear more and more doubtful whether French President Francois Mitterrand can re-balance his country's badly out-of-whack economy. If he can't, the outlook is for a split among his own Socialist Party followers, disorders in a France that is always potentially volatile, and a revival of working class support for the Communist Party which Mitterrand's rise helped so much to weaken.

American policy-makers might be able to take even so dire a turn of events in their stride, except for one thing. In a Europe drifting toward political apathy and neutralism, Mitterrand during his two years in power has stood out as a tower of strength resisting Soviet blandishments and insisting on the need to bolster Western defenses against growing Soviet military power.

THE FRENCH leader is given credit for having almost single-handedly torpedoed the anti-nuclear arms stance of his fellow socialists in West Germany on a visit there during last winter's election campaign, helping to ensure the victory of the pro-NATO Kohl government. In one of the most influential speeches in memory, Mitterrand destroyed the German Socialists' arguments in favor of refusing deployment of new NATO nuclear arms in Central Europe when Russia was refusing to eliminate its already existing nuclear arsenal.

For that alone, President Reagan owes Mitterrand a great deal. While the French are too discreet to suggest so openly, they are looking to next month's Western economic summit conference at Williamsburg, Virginia as the place where the debt can be re-paid.

IN MOST respects, Williamsburg shows every sign of proving an unpromising repetition of last year's Versailles summit of the seven major Western economic powers. The fundamental issues, papered over at the Versailles extravaganza, remain the same: the strong dollar's allegedly nefarious influence on the internal economies of the European nations, the not-so-creeping protectionism being practiced by the European Common Market and Japan, and America's alarm at the increasingly intimate economic links between its allies and the Soviet Union, as symbolized by the Siberian natural gas pipeline to Western Europe. (An as yet unpublished report by the International Energy Agency here appears to substantiate American government warnings that the pipeline will make countries like West Germany and France too dependent on Soviet energy supplies and thus render them susceptible to political blackmail by Moscow.)

However, in at least one significant way, the Williamsburg climate will differ from Versailles'. During the past year, economic recovery, although tentative, seems to have begun in most of the participating nations. The one glaring exception is France which, in the interval, happens also to be the country that has become politically more essential to the U.S.

If a recovering West Germany and a starkly trimmed down Britain can surmount the problems supposedly resulting from an over-valued dollar, the same is clearly not the case for France. Economically and, possibly even more, psychologically, Mitterrand needs a boost from the Reagan administration as he attempts to struggle out of the morass created by his government's disastrously misplaced efforts to spend its way out of the slump.

THE BOOST he needs most is a lower dollar. That would give the French at least a modicum of hope — they have none at present — of reducing their titanic balance of payments deficit by cutting what they have to pay for many essential commodities, including imported oil.

Without that, Mitterrand's desperation 'austerity' program, imposed at the eleventh hour, may be doomed, and along with it, his own chances of political survival in a country growing more disenchanted daily with the once-glowing promises of socialism.

Ideology aside, there are a number of reasons why President Reagan is likely to be temperamentally indisposed to helping the French. Their worst problems are almost wholly of their own making, a consequence of blind reliance on socialist dogma. Attacks on the dollar, whether it has been strong or weak, have long been a kind of national alibi employed by all French governments to excuse their own errors and difficulties.

FURTHERMORE, as staunch as Mitterrand has proven in the main event, the East-West contest in Europe, his government has been an irritant to Washington by its proclivity for meddling on the side of "revolutionary liberation" in Latin America and its refusal to accept the Reagan administration's view of the dangers of economic involvement with the Soviets.

Alleged assassin of police official thought to be hiding in Sikh temple

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Punjab state police say the assassin of one of their high officials is taking refuge in the Sikhs' Golden Temple at Amritsar and they have demanded, by mail, that the killer be surrendered.

The management of the temple, the holiest shrine of the Sikh religion, has acknowledged receiving the registered letter from police but denied today that the killer is harbored at the temple, 250 miles northwest of New Delhi.

Indian police normally do not enter places of worship and their resort to a demand by mail dramatized the delicacy of the matter.

Home Affairs Minister P.C. Sethi said Monday's fatal shooting of police deputy inspector general A.S. Atwal at the main gate of the temple indicated dangerous criminals were taking sanctuary in religious places. He told Parliament Tuesday that the government wants to avoid escalating tension in Punjab state, where the Sikhs are agitating for political and religious concessions.

King: Men, women shall not mix

MECCA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — King Fahd has "re-instructed" government departments and private businesses not to employ women in jobs where they might mix with men, a Saudi newspaper reported today.

Islamic laws forbid employing women in jobs "not suiting their feminine nature," Al-Nadwa newspaper quoted the king's official circular as stating.

The circular was issued because "some official bodies" had requested permission to employ women in jobs where they would come into contact with men, it said.

Saudi officials said the king's order pertained to Saudi and foreign women alike.

British resort to nude sunbathing

LONDON (AP) — A score of British resorts plan to open beaches for nude and topless sunbathing this summer, the London Daily Mirror reported today.

The south coast resort of Brighton pioneered the move in 1980, on one section of its beach hidden from strollers on the promenade by mounds of stones. Its legal department at city hall spent months checking indecency laws before opening the East Beach to nudists.

Since then, nude bathing has spread to eight other places in England and Scotland.Nudity will be allowed next in Cornwall, Devon, Dorset, Hampshire, Norfolk and Suffolk, the report said.

For sale: Wordsworth Cottage

CARLISLE, England (AP) — A 17th century house by Lake Ullswater once occupied by poet William Wordsworth will be auctioned in June, auctioneers Smiths Gore of Carlisle said today.

Known as Wordsworth Cottage, the house with three reception rooms and four bedrooms stands in five acres in the heart of the Lake District of northwest England.

The poet, who died in 1850, lived there before making his final home at nearby Grasmere, now a museum dedicated to him.

Time says deal for Hitler's diaries collapsed

NEW YORK (AP) — Time magazine says it negotiated to buy the rights to the purported diaries of Adolf Hitler from the West German news magazine Stern, but the deal collapsed when the two sides could not agree on a price.

"We never came close to an agreement on the price," said Brian Brown, publicity manager for Time. "We were unable to resolve the differences between Time's and Stern's closing deadlines, and because of our inability to do that, we would have been unable to insure that some other publication did not steal the property. And there was insufficient time for us to conduct our own investigation into the legitimacy of the documents."

"We were unable to resolve the differences between Time's and Stern's closing deadlines... And there was insufficient time for us to conduct our own investigation into the legitimacy of the documents."

The diaries, whose authenticity has been questioned, had been tracked down by a reporter for the German magazine in East Germany.

Newsweek magazine also decided not to buy the diaries because of questions "of how to authenticate the materials," an unidentified senior editor told The New York Times.

Newsweek decided Friday to publish the magazine this week with the disputed diaries on its cover after The Times of London and The New York Post, both owned by Rupert Murdoch, began breaking the story. Murdoch paid $400,000 to excerpt the diaries.

A Newsweek editor said the decision to give the diaries such extensive coverage was motivated on the chance the documents were authntic and because much of the story was in the public domain.

The 13-page Newsweek article was based on information in The Sunday Times of London. "We happened to luck out," the unidentified editor told The New York Times. "We were engaged in negotiations, in a position where a lot of things were in public domain. Otherwise, ethically we wouldn't have done it."

The Time article on the diaries runs one and one-third pages.

The documents have touched off a storm of dispute bewteen historians, Hitler experts and handwriting analysts who have seen some of the documents. Some defended the documents, but many questioned them or said they were fakes.

Did Uncle Milty really light fire under Gleason's home?

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Entertainer Jackie Gleason has turned amateur detective, lightheartedly speculating on a suspect in a fire that caused $250,000 damage at his sprawling Fort Lauderdale home.

"The only one I can think of would be Milton Berle," Gleason quipped during a telephone interview from the hospital where he was recovering from artery-bypass surgery on his legs two weeks ago.

Gleason

Gleason, 67, said he was "feeling great" and preparing to make another film.

The Broward County sheriff's office said the fire Tuesday at the house in Inverrary, an exclusive Fort Lauderdale suburb, was of unknown origin.

A maid in the house at the time was unhurt, Gleason said.

Gleason said he has been walking for the past week. He was listed in good condition at Imperial Point Medical Center.

"For the blood to get from my torso to my legs, it had to go through Hackensack, N.J.," Gleason joked about the surgery. "Now it just has to go through Passaic, N.J."

FISHERVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Country singer Kenny Rogers didn't want an ordinary rocking horse for his little boy. So thanks to Phyllis George Brown, wife of Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown, the entertainer has a toy resembling his own Arabian horses.

Rogers, 42, got the idea for the rocking horse for his 2-year-old son Christopher after Mrs. Brown showed him a handmade rocking horse she bought for her 2-year-old son Lincoln.

But creator Jim Massie had to change the style of the rocking horse for Rogers' son, the same age.

"Phyllis said Kenny Rogers saw hers and asked if one could be made to look like an Arabian (horse)," Massie said. "It's my interpretation of an Arabian as a result of visiting farms and studying the type of horse."

Massie delivered the horse Tuesday to Kentucky's first lady in Frankfort, and Mrs. Brown was going to have it shipped to Rogers.

"The Arabian rocker was a belated Christmas gift from the Browns to Kenny, his wife Marianne and their son Christopher Cody," Karen Horseman, a spokeswoman for Mrs. Brown said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nick Nolte's former live-in lover is suing the movie and TV actor for $4.5 million, saying he should have given her "more than two dresses and a kick out the door" when they broke up.

Karen Eklund, 37, an actress and model who said she lived with Nolte for 5½ years before he became successful, said Tuesday that she is not interested "in hurting or slandering Nick's image."

"I am suing for $4½ million," Miss Eklund said. "I feel that's half, and my goal is to get equal rights."

Ms. Eklund spoke with reporters outside the courtroom where her lawyer, David Sabih, met with Nolte's lawyer and a judge in an effort to settle the case.

MATHEMATICS

CHANGING A PERCENT TO A DECIMAL

Percent means per hundred. The sign, %, is read "percent." Any percent can be written as a decimal. Any decimal can be written as a percent. To write a percent as a decimal:

1. Drop the percent sign.
2. Move the decimal point two places to the left. Add zeros if necessary.

75% = .75; 5% = .05; 125% = 1.25; 4.6% = .046

PROBLEM 1

Change 5.40% to a decimal.

PROBLEM 2

Change 100% to a decimal.

CHANGING A DECIMAL TO A PERCENT

1. Move the decimal point two places to the right. Add zeros if necessary.
2. Place the percent sign to the right of the number.

.23 = 23%; 4 = 400%; .125 = 12.5%

PROBLEM 1

Change .75 to a percent.

PROBLEM 2

Change .0625 to a percent.

CHANGING A FRACTION TO A PERCENT

1. Change the fraction to a decimal by dividing the denominator into the numerator.
2. Move the decimal point two places to the right.
3. Place the percent sign to the right of the number.

$\frac{3}{5}$ = .6 = 60. = 60%

$\frac{1}{20}$ = .05 = 5. = 5%

CHANGING A PERCENT TO A FRACTION

1. Drop the percent sign.
2. Place the number over 100 as a fraction.
3. Reduce when possible.

$45\% = \frac{45}{100} = \frac{9}{20}$

FINDING PERCENT OF A NUMBER

One hundred percent means the whole amount. A score of 100% on a test means that all the answers were correct. Less than 100% means that all answers were not correct. To find the percent of a number, change the percent to a decimal and multiply. Remember that "of" means multiply.

Example:
80% of 45 is ?
.80 X 45 = 36

Example:
40% of $\frac{1}{2}$ is ?

.40 X .5 = .20

PROBLEM 1:
What is 50% of $\frac{1}{4}$?

PROBLEM 2:
There is a 5% sales tax on furniture. You buy $355 worth of furniture. How much sales tax must you pay?

PROBLEM 3:
A 3-pound jar of mixed nuts is 60% peanuts. How many pounds of mixed nuts are peanuts?

DISCOUNT

Rather than paying the original price for an item, a discount would reduce the original price. To figure a discount, change the percent to a decimal and multiply.

An appliance store advertises 15% off all refrigerators. The price of the refrigerator you want is $375. 1. How much will you save? 2. How much will you have to pay after the discount has been taken away?

1. 15% of $375 is
   15 X $375 = $56.25 (saved)
2. $375.00 - 56.25 = $318.75 (paid after discount)

PROBLEM 1:
Many stores sell cooked hams. A cook will tell you that a ham shrinks while cooking. If a 16 pound ham loses 12 ½% while cooking, how many pounds will it lose? What will the ham weigh after cooking?

FINDING PERCENT OF INCREASE OR DECREASE

When finding percent change (increase or decrease) follow these steps:

1. Divide the original amount into the amount of change.
2. Change the decimal quotient to a percent.

Example:
What is the percent of decrease of a $500 item on sale for $400?
The change is $500 − $400 or $100

$$500\overline{)100.0}$$

2. .2 = 20% (answer)

PROBLEM 1:
Last year we had a total rainfall of 9.6 inches. This year we had a total of 7.2 inches. What is the percent of decrease in rainfall?

FIGURING SIMPLE INTEREST

Interest is an amount paid for the use of money. It can be either money earned for you or money paid by you.

PRINCIPAL (P). The amount of money that is borrowed or deposited.

RATE (r). The % of interest earned per year.

TIME (t). The length of time interest is earned in years.

To find interest (I), multiply the principal and the rate and the time together (I = p r t). For example: What is the interest of $400.00 at 5% interest for 2 years and 6 months? (2 years and 6 months is 2½ or 2.5 years)

THINK:
I = p r t
I = 400 X 5% X 2.5
I = 400 X .05 X 2.5
I = $50.00 (answer)

PROBLEM 1:
Find the interest on $300 at 5.5% for 2 years and 3 months.

FIGURING COMPOUND INTEREST

Compound interest means that the computation is done more than once. Most interest today is compounded. This means that the computer figures the amount of interest today at a specific time and then adds that interest to the principal. The larger principal now draws interest for another specific time. For example, Julia has $300 in a bank earning 4% which is compounded semiannually (twice a year or every 6 months). How much money will she have at the end of one year?

THINK: If the bank will compound (figure) the interest twice a year and the money will be in the bank for one year, compute twice.

1. For the first 6 months:
   I = p r t
   I = 300 X 4% X 6 months
   I = 300 X .04 X .5
   I = $6.00
2. Add $6.00 to the old principal. ($300 + $6 = $306.00)
3. For the second 6 months:
   I = p r t
   I = 306 X 4% X 6 months
   I = 306 X .04 X .5
   I = $6.12
4. Add the interest ($6.12) to the principal ($306 + $6.12 = $312.12)
5. answer $312.12

PROBLEM 1:
Frank has $500 in a savings account and is paid 5% semiannually. How much will he have at the beginning of the second year?

WRITING SKILLS

PRONOUNS

A pronoun is a word that can take the place of a noun and should be used in the same way as the noun it replaces.

Rules for Prounoun Use:

1. When a pronoun is the subject of a sentence, use only a nominative pronoun. All pronouns other than those for subjects are objective or possessive.
2. With the phrases "It is ____" and "It was ____", use nominative pronouns. This applies to any other form of these phrases, too. (It was they. Wasn't it she? Is it not he?)

PRONOUN CHART

Nominative (Subject)		Objective (Object)		Possessive (Ownership)
singular	plural	singular	plural	singular	plural
I	we	me	us	my, mine	our, ours
you	you	you	you	your, yours	your, yours
he, she, it	they	him, her, it	them	his, her, hers, its	their, theirs

Do not confuse the possessive pronoun its with the contraction it's which means it is.

PROBLEMS:

Underline the pronouns and tell whether they are nominative, objective, or possessive.

1. Thomas here is a package for you and me.
2. Was it he?
3. It was not they.
4. Sit between him and me.
5. Its pages are torn.

PROBLEMS:

Cross out the incorrect pronoun.

1. Helen and (I, me) helped with the puppets.
2. Why can't Lucille and (I, me) go with them?
3. The lady told Barry and (I, me) to come for her old magazines.
4. It was (she, her).
5. Susan and (I, me) are going with (she, her) to the park.
6. Sue and (I,me) are going skating this afternoon.
7. Did you see Mary and (I,me) when we passed your house?
8. Kay and (I,me) were five minutes late yesterday.
9. Jake invited John and (I,me) to one of the club picnics.
10. I am going to ask Doris and (she,her) about our assignment.
11. Was it (she,her)?
12. That dinner was prepared by Steve and (I, we, us).
13. Stand between her and (I,me).
14. Miss Jones praised John and (I,me) for our work in the yard.
15. (He,Him) and (I,me) are getting some groceries for Mother.
16. Do you and (she, her) play a better game than (they, them)?
17. The fault is neither (their's, theirs) nor (our's, ours).
18. I have found little kindness in either (him, he) or (her, she).
19. Look for Wesley and (me, I) on the television program.
20. When you answer, say, "This is (she, her)."

Study the lessons and complete the problems. To receive the answers, participants should mail a self-addressed, stamped envelope to:

Adeia Dickinson displays her certificate.

Pint-sized recruiter earning her stripes

CEDAR LAKE, Ind. (AP) — At 7½ years of age Adeia Dickinson seems a little young to be an Army recruiter, but she's already put two people in uniform and earned a certificate of thanks from Uncle Sam.

Several months ago, wearing an "Army Brat" T-shirt and matching olive drab pants, Adeia bragged to fellow first-graders that "My daddy can get people jobs."

In economically depressed northwest Indiana, when many of the daddies of first-graders at Jane Ball Grade School were out of work, her sales pitch got quick results.

Billy Yardley went home and told his father, William Yardley, and Nicholas Slager told his father, Richard Slager.

The next day the men called Adeia's home and asked for her father, Sgt. 1st Class Dennis Dickinson, the Army recruiter in nearby Crown Point. In his three years at the job, he had never got any recruiting help from his daughter.

"I'm glad to have the assistance," Dickinson said Tuesday. "At the same time I'm kind of happy. We're getting 28- and 29-year-old men, some with high school and some with college educations. The Army is getting a little security."

Dickinson met the two fathers, and Slager is now a pharmaceutical specialist at Fort Jackson, S.C., while Yardley leaves today for the Army.

Gene Welter, Billy Yardley's uncle, is investigating joining the Army when he graduates from Hanover Central High School this May, and Al Jager, whose daughter is a grade ahead of Adeia, says he will also sign up.

When news of Adeia's recruiting reached Dickinson's superiors, she received a T-shirt that says "Army" from Sgt. Maj. William C. Bussely and a certificate, signed by Capt. Edward Rock, praising Adeia "for exceptional assistance in the field of recruiting."

The framed document also offers Adeia "promotion to Private 2 ... effective upon entry into the regular Army."

That means if Adeia ever signs up, she won't go in as a buck private — she will already have earned a stripe.

Dickinson said his daughter will make her own decision on whether to sign up, but said she has been raised with the Army around her.

"By the time she was 2, she could tell by the sound of the rotary blades what type of helicopter was flying by," he said. "She likes the Army. The whole family does."

Adeia may soon be able to try her hand at recruiting overseas. Dickinson, his wife Jo Myers Dickinson, and their children are leaving in July for a tour of duty in West Germany.

Also wearing an "Army Brat" T-shirt and pants is Adeia's brother, Ben, 2½. So far Ben hasn't recruited anyone, perhaps because he hasn't quite learned to talk.

Council won't buy city zoning change

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Convenience and traffic congestion squared off in a main event Tuesday as Midland City Council wrestled with proposed zoning ordinance changes that would permit convenience stores to sell gas and alcohol in areas zoned Neighborhood Service District.

When the bell rang at match's end, convenience was the clear loser as the council — voting to keep neighborhood traffic flow a bit more "neighborly" — rejected the proposed changes.

Richard Hennessy, city planning director, said the NS district is designed to provide a transition between residential and retail zoning. He said the council reviewed its zoning regulations in 1978 and eliminated one local retail classification in favor of the NS district.

He said an NS district allows residents of a neighborhood access to "convenient" retail outlets — like a convenience store, barber shop, bakery — without producing the cross-city traffic generated by a local retail development.

The Planning and Zoning Commission recommended the changes because consideration of NS developments over recent years has indicated that gas and alcohol sales have become "an expected activity of the NS district."

Convenience stores, often the focal point of an NS development, have been unwilling to locate in NS districts because of the restrictions, said Hennessy, who added that other businesses are unwilling to open outlets where the traffic generated by a convenience store is absent.

"We're not finding the NS district to be of any benefit because it's not being developed," said Hennessy, who noted that of about a dozen NS districts in Midland, only one is presently developed.

He said the lack of NS development has increased congestion at Midland's main street intersections, where businesses suited for an NS zone are locating to avoid the NS restrictions.

Mayor G. Thane Akins, who opposed the changes, questioned whether generating business traffic in a neighborhood was the intent of the NS zoning. Akins said gas and alcohol sales might generate excess — and potentially undesirable — activity in a neighborhood.

Akins suggested that instead of changing the NS zoning, those districts be eliminated and replaced with local retail zones, where such sales are permitted.

Hennessy said, "I see a significant deterioration of the control of our neighborhood atmosphere" if NS districts are replaced by local retail zoning, which would permit a wider variety of retail outlets, including restaurants, bowling alleys and movie theaters.

Councilman Gordon Marcum II voiced his opposition to the changes, explaining that after working with a local agency on the issue of alcohol abuse among teens, it became apparent to him that convenience stores selling alcohol to minors are contributing to the problem.

New 'game plan' calls for 'academic coaches'

DALLAS (AP) — Borrowing an idea from the football field, a suburban school district is turning this autumn to "academic coaches" — about 128 faculty members who will work more days and teach more hours while earning more money.

The program by the Garland School District, believed to be the first of its kind in the nation, was approved by the school board on Feb. 17. School officials said it is intended to improve education and recruit better teachers — particularly in the math and science fields.

On Tuesday, National Commission on Excellence in Education issued a scathing report on a "rising tide of mediocrity" in U.S. schools. The report said the United States needs tougher educational standards, more homework and a longer school day and school year.

It also recommended 11-month contracts and higher pay for teachers, saying they earn an average of only $17,000 after 12 years.

In Garland, academic coaches will still teach regular classes but will have additional duties, said Jill Shugart, assistant superintendent for educational operations in the suburban district east of Dallas.

"If the teacher is a fourth-grade teacher, he or she will still teach the class, but would also work with students before and after class, including summer school and developing curriculum activities," Mrs. Shugart said Tuesday.

The name "academic coaches" came up because "we should give the same high priorities to academics as we do to athletics," Mrs. Shugart said.

She said the added pay could raise teachers' salaries up to $5,000 a year, depending on experience, putting them on the scale of "what an assistant varsity football coach makes."

With a $1,500 bonus, a teacher with master's degree could earn about $38,000 a year, Mrs. Shugart said.

Garland's program would extend a teacher's 183-day contract to between 202 and 220 days a year, including summer school.

"It is not a matter of being dissatisfied with school programs, it is a matter of doing more," said Mrs. Shugart. "As a matter of fact, our trend has been for test scores to be up, not down, in comparison to other districts."

The Garland district's 30,000 students are 82 percent white, 7.5 percent black and 7.5 percent Hispanic.

Reagan takes aim at Central American communism

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in a move that an adversary says "has turned up the heat" in the debate over Central America, is asking a restive Congress to help combat communist advances in the war-plagued region.

Using a tactic reserved for rare occasions, Reagan speaks to a joint session of the House and Senate tonight on his administration's policies regarding the leftists in power in Nicaragua and those seeking power in El Salvador.

On both fronts, Congress is showing reluctance to give him what he is asking for.

The House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations cut his request for a $60 million diversion of military aid to the beleaguered Salvadoran regime in half Tuesday, voting by only a 7-5 margin to approve even that much.

But in an interview with Gannett News Service published today, Reagan said he would push for restoration of the full $60 million. "The cup's half full. We Meanwhile, Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, proposed to cut off all aid to insurgents fighting the leftist government in Nicaragua after 45 days.

And Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., emerging from a closed Senate session that he requested, said he found a "very, very high" level of concern about what he charges is illegal administration support for the Nicaraguan guerrillas.

"Clearly the president has turned up the heat," Dodd said. "This is a rare use of the joint session of Congress. It has only been used, I think, nine times in the last 25 years, normally to announce some good news."

In the Gannett interview which was conducted Tuesday, Reagan said he intends to make it "difficult, in fact, impossible" for Nicaragua to arm guerrilla movements in El Salvador and the region.

If anti-government forces in Nicaragua say they are using U.S.-supplied arms to overthrow the Managua government, he said, "We can't control what they say." His intention, he insisted, is only to stop the flow of arms.

"The arms and the training and even the direction of guerrilla military movements are all centered in Nicaragua.... The operation of Salvadoran guerrillas are directed by radio from the capital of, near the capital of Nicaragua," Reagan said.

Dodd asked for the closed Senate session, which lasted an hour and 40 minutes, so senators could get an Intelligence Committee briefing on covert operations that he says illegally seek the overthrow of the Nicaraguan government.

Administration lobbyists were distributing to congressional Republicans a newspaper article by United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick outlining what she said is "a plan to create a communist Central America." She said Congress "seems unwilling to make a serious effort" to prevent this from happening.

State officials prepare windfall profits arguments

By SARAH McCLENDON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Texas oil and gas associations and two representatives of the Texas Attorney General's office attended a strategy with some 30 organizations from other affected states to prepare for oral arguments before the U.S. Supreme Court early this afternoon on the constitutionality of windfall profits.

The case is on appeal from Judge Ewing Kerr's decision last year at Cheyenne, Wyoming where he ruled in favor Of the complaint starred in 1980 by the Independent Petroleum Association of America, later joined by 30 other state and local associations.

The issue is the claim of IPAA that to be valid a tax must be evenly applied and because of certain types of crude produced in Alaska, there were exceptions in the application of the tax. The Justice Department appealed the case to the Supreme Court.

Professor Stephen Willeams of the University of Colorado School of Law will argue the case for IPAA and associates.

The Texas attorney general, James Mattox, sent Cindy Sullivan and Walter Davis here to represent him. They attended the strategy meeting but it is not expected that any one will argue the case but Williams.

Reagan asks publishers to watch economic 'signs'

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan urged newspaper publishers today to keep in mind the signs of a rebounding economy when they encounter "pleas from Washington and maybe your own editorial writers" for more spending and higher taxes.

The president also sought to enlist the publishers in his campaign to publicize what is right about the United States and said: "I think the generosity and compassion of most Americans towards those who suffered during the recent recession deserves a little more news coverage that it's received."

The president made his remarks in a speech to the 97th annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association before returning to Washington where he planned to deliver a speech to Congress tonight on his Central American program.

"We are not accustomed to worrying about a military threat in our own hemisphere," Reagan said. "We have almost taken for granted friendly, independent neighbors."

"But we can no longer ignore the fire that is burning in our own front yard. We must respond both with unity and firmness of purpose. The peoples of this hemisphere are all Americans, and all of us share a vital stake in a future of democracy and freedom," he said.

Fair skies are forecast for most of the nation through Thursday, according to the National Weather Service. Small areas of showers are predicted in the West and East.

Temperature could climb to 90s

Those good ol' summer days don't seem to be far off as Permian Basin residents will see fair skies and 90 degree temperatures for the next few days.

Lows in the area will be 50-60, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Winds should blow through at 10-20 mph.

The Permian Basin experienced sweltering spring temperatures Tuesday, with Midland having a high of 90, only seven degrees off the alltime record for the date set in 1959.

The low of 59, meanwhile, was well above the record 36 of 1946.

No precipitation was recorded, leaving the monthly total at 0.06 inch and the yearly amount at 1.67 inches.

Commitment to Israel underscored

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz declared today that while the United States wants Israeli forces out of Lebanon, the Reagan administration is "committed without qualification to Israel's survival, security and well-being."

In a statement at Ben-Gurion International Airport, Shultz said: "President Reagan has sent me here to work closely with you on new steps toward peace... Our immediate task is bringing peace to Lebanon, restoring Lebanese sovereignty, withdrawing all foreign forces, and ensuring peace and security on Israel's northern border."

Shultz went immediately by motorcade for a meeting with Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

A meeting with Prime Minister Menachem Begin, scheduled for later in the day, will be Shultz's first with the Israeli leader.

Shamir welcomed Shultz at the airport on his arrival from Cairo, saying his trip here "demonstrates the American commitment to peace and stability in our region."

Indicating some flexibility in Israel's position on a withdrawal of its 25,000 troops from Lebanon, Shamir predicted Shultz's visit would "contribute to a solution of pending problems in Lebanon."

In his remarks, Shultz said a "number of difficult issues remain" in the negotiations on a troop withdrawal but "so much has already been accomplished in this negotiation that none of us can allow it to fail."

Shultz told reporters during the flight from Cairo — the first stop on his current Middle East tour — that he will meet with Begin twice before going to Lebanon on Thursday where he will confer with President Amin Gemayel on the withdrawal talks.

He made clear his talks with Begin will be important in shaping the direction of his mission here.

"I expect by the time I go to Beirut to have a very clear idea of things that Israel considers important and where the critical elements of the negotiations are as they see it," he said.

He said he thinks there is "a very good chance of getting a troop withdrawal agreement on this trip."

An agreement between Israel and Lebanon for a withdrawal of Israeli troops is "the first thing we are concentrating on," Shultz said. He will then turn his attention to an agreement for withdrawal of Syrian troops and Palestinian guerrillas.

He told reporters he hopes to go to Syria to meet with President Hafez Assad. The Beirut newspaper Al-Sharq said Assad agreed to meet with Shultz when the secretary goes to Damascus, probably after his visit to Beirut on Thursday.

State Department spokesman John Hughes cautioned that Syria is likely to decide the status of its 38,000-man Lebanon force based on the kind of conditions Israel sets for withdrawing its troops. He said the Palestinians, with an estimated 7,000 fighters in Lebanon, are likely to do whatever the Syrians decide.

Lebanon has a population of less than 3 million.

A senior State Department official who asked not to be identified said Begin may be pressured to withdraw by "growing restiveness in Israel over the mounting number of Israeli casualties in Lebanon."

The Israelis invaded Lebanon last summer to drive out Palestinian guerrillas. The Syrians have had troops in Lebanon since the end of the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war.

In another development today, Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan left Beirut for hurriedly arranged consultations with King Fahd of Saudi Arabia about Shultz's trip.

The decision to dispatch Wazzan and five senior aides was made during a four-hour conference Gemayel held Tuesday night with chief advisers on the upcoming talks with Shultz.

At the Cairo airport, before flying to Israel, Shultz said his stopover in Egypt gave him with "renewed enthusiasm and greater determination to do everything possible to seek a greater element of peace in the Middle East."

He spoke of the "overriding importance" of "bringing an environment where Lebanon is sovereign territory and free of all forces."

So far the Israelis have insisted that any withdrawal from Lebanon be conditional on letting their Lebanese ally, Maj. Saad Haddad, command forces in the southern part of the country bordering Israel. The Lebanese government rejects this as undermining its army and its sovereignty.

Researchers confirm lava pool

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. — A long-suspected pool of molten rock beneath this earthquake-prone mountain resort area is being confirmed by new research, scientists report.

Although no researchers are predicting whether the magma chamber will generate a volcanic eruption, nearly all seem to agree the chamber exists and the magma is stirring.

"We haven't seen direct evidence of magma; we've only seen indirect evidence. But the evidence is pretty ... strong," John Rundle of Sandia National Laboratories said Tuesday at a scientists' meeting. "Something's happening, that's fairly clear. We really haven't seen anything like this before and we don't know how to interpret it," he said in an interview.

Sandia Labs of Albuquerque, N.M., is sponsoring the three-day conference on the frequent earthquake activity and any relationship to volcanic activity miles beneath the east face of the Sierra Nevada range.

Rundle said Sandia plans to drill a hole in search of the magma in hopes of finally proving its existence. He said one goal of the conference, which drew about 25 scientists from colleges and federal agencies, is to find the best place to drill.

The drilling is part of the U.S. Energy Department's Continental Scientific Drilling Program.

Scientific interest in the region has been building since 1980 when swarms of earthquakes and other evidence began suggesting underground magma movement.

Mammoth Lakes, with about 3,000 permanent residents and tens of thousands of skiers on prime winter weekends, sits on the southwest edge of Long Valley, a 10-by-30-mile depression formed by a gigantic volcanic eruption 700,000 years ago.

Smaller eruptions have been popping every few hundred years between here and Mono Lake, 30 miles north.

Scientists assume the magma chamber is the remains of the giant eruption.

They also suspect it is swelling and causing a bulge over most of the valley floor. The land has risen at least 18 inches since 1975.

The U.S. Geological Survey issued a "notice of potential volcanic hazard," lowest of official concern last May.

An intense swarm of quakes in January brought scientists and reporters swarming over the snowy slopes as concern over possible volcanic activity rose sharply.

The swarm of quakes has tapered off but gauges and monitors scattered over the landscape are feeding every tremor to computers.

Probably the strongest evidence for a magma pool was presented by Chris Sanders of the California Institute of Technology who is working this year at the University of Nevada at Reno.

By analyzing nearly 200 small quakes between August 1982 and March 1983 he concluded, "we have been able to find a body, probably magma that ... is located, at its shallowest, probably 4.6 kilometers," or 2.75 miles beneath the surface. This, he said in a subsequent interview, "is the first solid evidence it's this shallow."

He pictured a sort of underground magma mountain with its base at least eight miles deep. At this depth, he said, it is a dense pool six miles across and three miles high.

From there, it narrows to a mile or more across and less than three miles deep.

The top few miles seem "much less massive (and) more diffuse, like it's moving through cracks."

The apparent chamber is beneath an area about three miles southeast of Mammoth Lakes, where most of the earthquake swarms center, Sanders said.

Photographer's works 'tattoo' museum walls

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mark Perrott specializes in photography from the waist up, portraying more than 600 men and women, young and old, lean and fat, as their bodies glisten with the bright-colored dyes of new tattoos.

The designs he captures flow up arms, down necks, across chests. They show hearts, dragons, demons, flames, swirls and names, all meant to last forever.

"I'm not specifically interested in tattoos," said the 37-year-old Perrott, who has an exhibit at Carnegie Institute's Museum of Art and the Allentown Art Museum. "I'm very interested in people who get tattooed. How they feel before and after, how they look just afterward. It's a very important process to go through. It's a celebration, with a meaning only to themselves."

Perrott, a free-lance corporate photographer who makes advertisements and annual reports, began stalking tattoo shops on weekends with his cameras after he drove past a parlor three years ago in nearby McKees Rocks and stopped in for a look. He was enthralled by the shop, its owner and its customers and asked permission to return.

"The idea of photographing people just after they were tattooed became a compulsion," he said.

To meet other tattooists and learn more about their art, Perrott attended several conventions. He came away with a list of hundreds of tattoo parlors, visiting them on weekends in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Washington, D.C.

Whether adorned for love or might, the newly tattooed all welcomed the opportunity to be photographed, Perrott found.

"For them, it's like a wedding ceremony, a graduation or a birthday photograph. It records an important moment in their life," he said. He gives his subjects a Polaroid snapshot as a souvenir.

People act differently after being tattooed, according to Perrott, who claims he isn't tattooed because he can't "think of one design that would make me comfortable forever."

"Once applied to the skin, the tattoo is no longer a separate and distinct emblem as it is on the tattooist's flash sheet. The tattoo becomes part of the bearer and his acceptance of it changes him," he said.

Officials want to round up mobile home tire thieves

The sheriff's department is asking for help in combating a marked increase in the theft of mobile home tires.

A ring of about 11 persons has been operating in the Permian Basin for the past year, according to Lt. Bryan Cook of the department's criminal investigation division, with losses in the Midland-Odessa area exceeding $50,000.

"They usually knock on doors to see if anyone's home," said Cook. "Then they remove the skirting and take the tires, which are normally stacked under the mobile home.

"Sometimes they'll ask homeowners if they've got any tires for sale. Then they'll come back and steal them when no one is home."

The stolen tires, which can cost up to $50 apiece new, are sold to second parties for $10 or $15 apiece. In turn, they're sold to often unsuspecting mobile home dealers and movers, according to Cook, who said his department is working with law enforcement agencies throughout the Permian Basin to stop the thefts.

But arrests are hard to come by, he added. "Most people don't mark their tires and it's hard to identify them. The only way to stop it is to catch someone in the act. What we need is for people to call us if they see any suspicious persons or vehicles in their neighborhood."

The sheriff's department phone number is 682-9774. The Silent Witness program, which guarantees anonymity to callers and provides rewards for information leading to the arrest of criminals, can also be used. That number is 685-1190.

Former prosecutor fights indictment

ATLANTA (AP) — A former federal prosecutor accused of attempting to sell information about a government drug probe will plead innocent and fight the indictment "vigorously," his attorney says.

U.S. Attorney General William French Smith said the two-count grand jury indictment was returned in U.S. District Court here Tuesday against Frank Robin, 30, who was fired Oct. 15 as a Justice Department prosecutor in Houston.

The indictment alleges that Robin tried to sell sensitive information about the probe to its subjects for $200,000.

Justice Department spokesman John Russell said in Washington that Robin was the first federal prosecutor indicted for actions in the line of duty since Attorney General John Mitchell was indicted during the Watergate scandal.

City Council rejects change in city zoning ordinance

Marcum said permitting alcohol sales in NS districts might spread the problem across the city.

Councilman Tom Sloan followed Marcum's comments by stating that while "I'm not trying to legislate temperance," he also opposed the zoning changes.

Bob Batte, one of three developers behind a proposed NS development on the northwest corner of Sinclair Avenue and Midland Drive, said the council's vote may have killed their $1.5 million project.

Batte, representing Midland Industrial Partnership, said gas sales constitute a third of all convenience store revenue. He said such a store would be unlikely to participate in their development without permission to sell gas.

Mary Jane Cavenaugh, another party in the proposed development, said: "What the mayor seems to be saying is that he'd rather have a vacant lot than a convenience for the neighbors."

Cliff Rowe, a third representative, said they originally planned to seek rezoning of their proposed site, but instead sought the NS changes as recommended by Hennessy and the planning and zoning staff.

"We tried to go along with the city planners on this," said Rowe, who added that maintaining existing contracts while spending several more months seeking a rezoning may be impossible.

Akins told Rowe the developers could have applied for both the NS alterations and a rezoning to local retail. Rowe said he was unaware that concurrent applications could be filed.

Following the meeting, Hennessy said the Planning and Zoning Commission rejected the site in question for local retail zoning and instead designated it NS in July 1981. He said that after discussing options with the developers, he advised them that seeking NS changes rather than a rezoning would likely be their best chance at obtaining council approval.

Hennessy said NS districts require a balance between activity and convenience.

Although the commission voted to tilt the balance toward convenience, he said, "The council saw the balance differently. It's a very legitimate judgment question."

Capitol construction criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — A plan to replace a crumbling facade of the U.S. Capitol with a new west wall is being criticized by an architects' group as a "step toward eventual desecration of this national symbol."

A House subcommittee Tuesday approved $70.5 million to build the new wall to replace a crumbling facade that includes some of the original sandstone of 1800.

The approval by a House Appropriations subcommittee is the latest chapter of a decades-long debate over the future of the west front, which looks out on The Mall and the Washington Monument.

The measure goes next to the full House Appropriations Committee and, if it passes there, to the House floor. There was no official vote on the $70.5 million, which was part of a larger money bill. The Senate Appropriations Committee also is studying the question.

A plan to extend the west front has won approval from the full House before, but has never made it through the Senate.

Debate often has raged between supporters of the new wall and those who favor shoring up the current wall by drilling holes and inserting steel rods.

After the subcommittee action, Robert Broshar, president of the American Institute of Architects, said, "The subcommittee's action today represents a major step away from preserving the Capitol's architectural integrity and a step toward eventual desecration of this national symbol.

"Only by restoring the west front as it was originally designed and constructed can the Capitol's architectural integrity be preserved."

Elliott Carroll, executive assistant to Capitol Architect George White, said it would take four years to complete the extension project.

There are even risks in alternative energy

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Audubon Society warned recently that solar power and other renewable energy sources present "environmental risks" which must be evaluated as the United States begins a major push for alternatives to fossil fuels.

The environmental group's findings, which ran counter to those of other scientists engaged in the study of energy development, cautioned that though renewable energy holds great promise for reducing the use of fossil fuels, the nation ought to be aware of potential hazards.

In a study funded by the National Science Foundation, the society suggested that the manufacturing of solar photovoltaic cells could create shortages of cadmium and gallium; wood-burning and biomass energy production from animal wastes and plants could lead to destruction of forests, while wind power could cause noise pollution and interfere with radio and television receptions.

Damning of rivers for hydroelectric power, the study claimed, could cause soil erosion and stagnation of streams; tapping of water and steam heat deep in the earth to get geothermal energy could cause earthquakes, release toxic gases and that ocean thermal energy conversion could disrupt marine life cycles and cause weather changes.

The environmental group's study notwithstanding, most scientists believe that alternative energy sources are ecologically safer and have fewer negative environmental consequences than do conventional energy resources.

THE ARGUMENTS IN favor of a program to accelerate renewable energy sources development are well known. They produce no radioactive wastes. They do not threaten a planetary greenhouse effect. Solar sources tend to be labor-intensive, stable and resilient.

But just as with synfuels, there has been a dramatic slowdown in the development of alternative sources of energy, partly due to the Reagan administration's decision to slash their research and development funds.

The administration's concerns are fiscal and philosophical. The president firmly subscribes to the free market philosophy. Thus, early on in his term, the administration decided to try to cut nearly 90 percent of federal funds allocated for alternative energy and fuel conservation efforts.

The White House felt that private industry would take over the most promising research programs funded by the government since the solar, wind, geothermal, alcohol fuels and other unconvential technologies captured the imagination of many investors and flourished through the late 1970s.

But this has not been the case. Private industry, hit hard by the oil glut, refuse to invest funds in untried projects and programs, though the Solar Energy Research Institute suggests that 2.1 to 3.8 billion barrels oil equivalent — or as much as on third of projected energy demand in the year 2000 — could be met by renewable energy resources.

WHAT'S HOLDING THE research and development of new energy source? A Battelle Memorial Institute's 19 study estimated the government and the industry would have to invest $207 billion in subsidies to non-renewable energy technologies to make the programs financially solvent.

"The message from the private sector was not of inability or unwillingness to take up the Reagan cuts slack," says Jack Conway, chairman of the nonprofit Renewable Energy Institute. "The marketplace has turned out to be even more cruel than shifting government policies."

One of the problems is that the average solar business is a small or intermediate-sized firm that possesses only limited capital resources and need federal assistance to keep functioning.

The administration is once again seeking drastic cuts in federal solar and conservation programs. The administration proposed fiscal 1984 budget reduces Department of Energy solar programs by 57 percent to $86 million.

The House Energy and Technology Subcommittee earlier this month recommended a $203 million solar research and development budget.

Energy for the U.S.

A Reporter-Telegram series

THE SUBCOMMITTEE proposed $59 million for photovoltaic electricity, $51 million for solar thermal energy systems, $23.5 million for solar building energy research, $29 million for biomass and alcohol fuels, $20 million for wind energy and $9 million for ocean thermal energy conversion.

The proposal to boost the spending was made by Rep. Don Fuqua, D.-Fla., subcommittee chairman, practically on the same day Energy Secretary Donald Hodel asked Congress to defer $9.5 million in solar and conservation funds appropriated fo fiscal 1983.

Others think federal investment in research and development would go a long way toward helping ease the nation's unemployment problems. For example, the Coalition of Northeast Governors said last week that solar development over 10 years could save 73 million barrels of oil per year and create 40,000 jobs in their region alone.

Using wood energy could create 40,000 other jobs and save 20 million barrels of oil per year and wind power could create 47,000 jobs and save up 50 million barrels, said the governors.

A newly published book, entitled "Renewable Energy; The Power to Choose" claims that "efforts to harness renewable energy continue to gather momentum and with proper management, renewable energy sources can easily supplant as much energy as the world currently uses."

"A global breakthrough in harnessing wind power is occuring in California," noted the two year study written by Daniel Deudney and Christopher Flavin. "Over a thousand wind machines are hooked up to the California electricity grid in 1982. A range of newer technologies for harnessing sunlight are also enjoying success. Salt-gradient solar ponds for heat and electricity generation are being readied for commercial development in Israel and the U.S. Southwest. The manufacture of solar photovoltaic cells that directly convert sunlight to electricity has expanded at an annual rate of 50 percent since the early seventies."

THE STUDY CONTENDS that "wood energy consumption in the U.S. has risen 50 percent since the early seventies and provides twice as much delivered energy as does nuclear power. Hydropower supplies one-quarter of the world's electricity.

According to the industry, the prohibitive cost of converting sunlight directly into electricity has held back the fledgling photovoltaic industry. But the industry, and the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, agree that despite Reagan cutbacks the outlook for the widespread use of photovoltaic energy in this century appears favorable."

The Worldwatch Institute contends that photovoltaic industry may well be the world's next high-technology battlefield and become a multi-billion dollar business by the early 1990s.

Wood, grasses, agricultural crops and their residues, animal wastes and other sources of biomass currently supply almost 2 percent of U.S. energy consumption. The Congressional Office of Technology Assessment claims proper investment could raise it to 20 percent of consumption by the year 2000.

The best known product of biomass is gasohol, a blend of gasoline and from 10 to 20 percent alcohol that can be used in automobiles. The first comprehensive survey of gasohol consumption has found that gasohol sales skyrocketed in 1982, increasing by 224 percent in one year. The federal government and 34 states provide subsidies to encourage gasohol consumption.

GEOTHERMAL ENERGY is also "steaming" ahead toward wider commercial use here. Projects tapping earth's natural reservoirs of hot water and steam to genrate electricity are under way in about 15 sites in western states.

The Reagan administration has been trying to sell a legislative and regulatory program that it hoped will ease the nuclear industry's woes. But last week's Supreme Court decision, upholding the right of California and other states to ban nuclear power development, may have dealt a serious blow to the administration's plans.

Volcker to Congress: Stabilize banks

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker yesterday told the Senate Banking Committee that Congress should put a moratorium on future gyrations in the industry while it shapes a roadmap for the future — and act fast before events moved beyond them.

Citing "unpleasant choices" of either a slow recovery that leaves banks and Third World nations in shaky condition or a fast recovery that increases interest rates and ultimately aborts the upturn itself, Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., asked Volcker if further deregulation should be blocked for now.

"I think what's urgent is that the Congress look at it and channel it in the direction you want to go and give weight to the safety and soundness factor," Volcker said.

"There is going to be an evolution. Technology is forcing it, the market is forcing it and that's what this is all about," Volcker said.

He cautioned against "jumping suddenly to enormous divergence" and said history should be a guide in preventing too much risk or too rapid an escalation of new activities.

Congressional banking committees are debating whether to revamp the entire structure of the financial institutions to recognize the revolutionary changes caused both by technology and the spread of such "non-bank banks" as brokerage firms into territory previously dominated by banks and thrift institutions.

However, some critics have called for the government to adopt a total hands-off attitude as department stores take on banking functions and banks and savings and loans try to move into new fields such as selling insurance or underwriting revenue bonds.

"Do you have any fear that by deregulating banks that we put them into an unstable situation, capital-wise, so there is a danger of banks in this country becoming insolvent?" asked Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., who said the deregulation had been as destabilizing as the recession and was causing consumers a bad case of the jitters.

Volcker denied that, saying "we have a basically strong system and the apparatus for correcting this--but this should be factored into your study. The time to worry about them is before you have the problems. It is kind of late to deal with them when you have them--as in the international (debt) situation," Volcker said.

Volcker labeled a spate of news stories and television documentaries about a bunting crisis in the banking system as erroneous and "sensationalism."

"Obviously we do have problems but they are plain and they are manageable," Volcker said.

If the U.S. recovery does not continue or if it does not bring along a similar recovery in the rest of the world, "you have a less happy situation...but you have the whole system of protections in place," Volcker said. "They have been used in selective cases but they have not really been tested."

Volcker's alarm stems less from the prospect of a wave of bank failures than from the rampant challenges to existing banking rules forbidding interstate banking, for instance, or prohibiting banks from engaging in specific activities such as selling insurance – which bank holding companies such as Citicorp are circumventing.

Generally, Volcker said, he still opposes interstate banking and contended that permitting it to begin now might cause enormous new confusion in an already chaotic banking atmosphere.

He was questioned by Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., about the proposed takeover of his state's largest and most troubled bank, Seafirst Corp., by the California-based BankAmerica. Volcker said ordinarily two factors would be uppermost in evaluating such a proposal: the financial capability of the acquiring institution and competitive factors.

The fact that Seafirst is the largest bank in Washington is an obvious retardant to in-state acquisition possibilities, Volcker said, and the urgency of the rescue effort is still another issue.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., asked Volcker to spell out the consequences of unrestricted national branch banking.

Interest Rates Going Up...Or Down?

These days nobody knows for sure. But one thing is certain, whatever happens, First Federal can provide a means for you to make the most of your money.

If you think interest rates will go up, First Federal has Money Fund Accounts or short-term certificates that provide early maturities . . . giving you the option of withdrawal if rates escalate.

If you think interest rates will continue to fall in the future, First Federal has Money Market Certificates with long-term, fixed rates that will safely lock up high interest rates now. And, if you like, interest from these can be distributed to your First Federal savings or checking account. With the safety of FSLIC insured funds, you can't go wrong whether you choose long-term or short-term certificates at First Federal Savings.

City Council votes to relieve tow-trucking headache

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Lt. Herman Wicker, head of Midland's police traffic division, told the City Council Tuesday afternoon that the city's multi-wrecker rotation system for towing wrecked and abandoned cars is "my biggest headache."

About two hours later, after much agonizing and intense debate, the council voted Wicker some relief — spelled "O-N-E W-R-E-C-K-E—R" — by accepting a one-year towing contract with B&J Wrecker Co.

In other action, the council voted to purchase signal lights for several major intersections, approved a 300-foot strip of "no parking" on Princeton Avenue and discussed the possiblity of operating a jail in cooperation with the county.

Wicker approached the council March 13 with four bids on a proposed one-year, 24-hour-a-day towing contract with a single wrecker company. He said the police department preferred contracting with a single company, rather than the eight wrecker companies which participate in the present rotation.

WICKER SAID THE proposed wrecker agreement would free the police from excessive paperwork and time-consuming trips to the vehicle impoundment lot, and also set a standard towing fee — eliminating citizen's complaints of price-gouging by some companies in the rotation.

The plan, patterned after a system adopted by the city of Richardson, calls for the company to staff the city's impoundment lot around-the-clock, collect fees and remit storage payments to the city.

The council deferred a decision at its April 13 meeting, allowing wrecker operators time to submit a counter proposal.

Allen Frasier, owner of ARC Truck and Auto Body, said the proposal would set a $40 standard towing fee, have each wrecker company store towed vehicles on its own lot and remove much of the paperwork from Wicker's office.

FRASIER SAID some companies may be driven out of business if they lose the rotation, which has each participating company on call for two weeks at a time.

Don Reid, of Reid Wrecker Co., said: "If you're getting complaints on a specific wrecker company, then I think we ought to look at that particular company as far as overcharging. Let's don't take money out of everybody's pocket because of one, two or three (companies)."

Mayor G. Thane Akins, who had to leave the meeting before the final vote, at one point asked for a show of hands from the wrecker operators assembled. Six hands shot up in support of the rotation system while only Jack Harvey Jr., owner of B&J Wrecker, voted for the one-company contract.

Councilman Tom Sloan eventually moved the council accept the B&J bid, which proposes a $35 standard rate for cars and light trucks. The council voted 5-0 to accept the bid for the contract, estimated to be worth about $100,000.

OTHER BIDS submitted and the standard towing fee quoted included: Angel Wrecker Co., $27.50; F&F Wrecker, $36.50; and Midland Radiator Wrecker, $50.

Wicker said he recommended B&J's bid rather than that submitted by Angel Wrecker because the latter charged more for heavy-duty service and lacked sufficient indoor storage space for damaged vehicles that must be shielded from the elements.

The council also voted to advertise for bids on signal lights for several intersections, all of which witnessed a large number of accidents during recent traffic studies. The intersections include Midkiff Road, Bankhead and Industrial, Carver and Front Streets, Golf Course and Lamesa Roads, Ohio Avenue and Big Spring Street, I Street and Wadley Avenue and Andrews and Whitney Drive.

Councilman Carroll Thomas, during the last meeting before he relinquishes his seat to Councilman-elect David Godfrey, suggested the city also investigate installing temporary signals at "I" and Wadley during the several-month wait before delivery of the lights.

THE COUNCIL voted to prohibit parking on the north side of Princeton Avenue about 300 feet east from Loop 250 to permit large trucks more maneuvering room.

In other action during its meeting in City Hall, the council:

—Discussed informally the possibility of operating a jail in cooperation with the county. Midland voters Saturday defeated the county's bid for an $11.69 million bond issue to finance a courthouse and jail expansion.

The council discussed the idea of a jointly-operated jail run by an operating committee and an administrator. Akins said he has been approached by county officials about a joint jail operation.

"I think something ought to be considered," said Akins, "because there's just no question about the savings to the taxpayer."

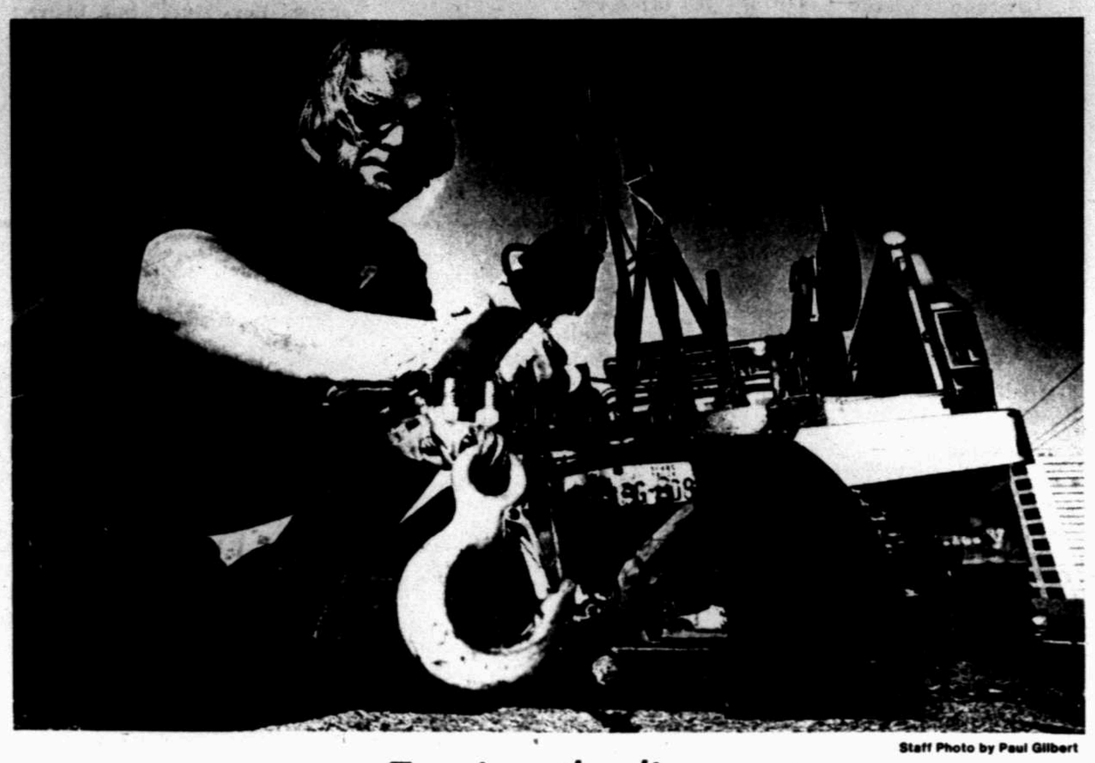

—Rearranged an existing assessment paving agreement to accommodate paving of a three-lane park road to connect Hogan Park and Lamesa Roads and serve a new four-field softball complex inside the park. The city also agreed to spend $10,000, originally earmarked for walkways at Hogan Park, on paving the road. Midland Softball Association will foot the remainder of the paving bill.

—Approved a specific use permit for Isidro Trevino, owner of the Club Granada, to build a nightclub that will seat about 500 people on the south side of Franklin Avenue at Crestview Road.

—Approved a request by Manor Park developers for an amended Planned District for their proposed senior citizen housing, health-care and recreation complex on the northeast corner of Sinclair Avenue and Loop 250 West.

—Adopted the 1982 editions of the gas and mechanical codes of the Southern Building Code Congress.

—Approved a lease amendment with Jay H. Floyd Jr., to allow additional uses of the city-owned Cinema I theater building.

Joint city-county jail considered

Just one option to alleviate over-crowding

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

When water keeps building up behind a dam, something's got to give or the dam will burst.

In the case of the swelling inmate population at the county jail, however, there doesn't seem to be much "give" left.

After Saturday's defeat of a proposed bond issue that would have permitted construction of additional jail space, Sheriff Dallas Smith is "exploring options" to alleviate the problem — including the possiblitiy of a joint city-county jail.

The county jail population has shown an overall climb from a daily average of 37.8 inmates in 1976 to 95.3 at the close of 1982, according to figures compiled by Smith.

This year looks like it will be even worse. On Tuesday, the jail held 98 prisoners; its basic capacity is 85, as set by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

The commission is scheduled to conduct a routine inspection Monday. And Smith, a commission director, knows what the results will be: "They're gonna tell us we're in violation."

Should the commission so rule, the county has 10 days to appeal. If the appeal fails, the commission can file suit and a court could order county officials to come into compliance or be cited for contempt of court.

But as things stand, according to Smith, about the only way to comply is to pay other counties to hold Midland's excess — a move that would substantially increase the price of jail operations.

The cost of transporting and housing inmates at other jails — assuming they have room — is about $50 per day, according to jail commission Executive Director Bob Viterna.

Overcrowding in the county jail could get worse than it is now if the state prison system — as it did for a time last year because of overcrowding problems of its own — refuses to accept any more prisoners.

"If that happens," said Smith, "things will back up even more. We'll be forced into crisis management and still wind up with the basic problem not solved."

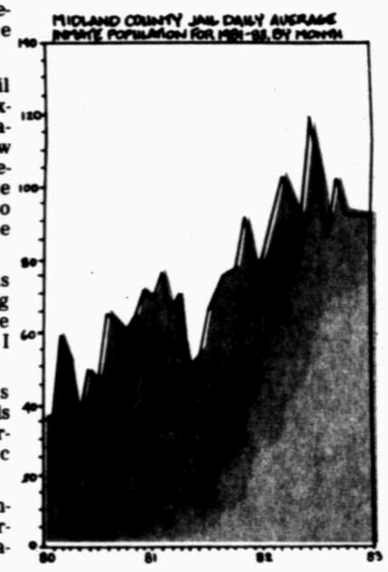

Combining city and county jail operations under one roof saves taxpayer money by avoiding duplication of services and is not a new idea in the annals of law enforcement, according to County Judge Bill Ahders, a former FBI agent who has worked in different parts of the country.

"Places like Denver and Kansas City have had one jail for a long time now.," said Ahders. "There have been no problems at all that I know of."

Ahders added that he has broached the topic to city officials and their reaction was "not unfavorable, but not overly enthusiastic either."

Among the difficulties in combining jails is determining the proportionate share of construction, operation and maintenance costs.

"It's in the talk stage now," said Ahders. "That's all I can say."

Dr. Kirby Tarry explains the procedure of vasovasectomies which is a reversal of the male sterilazation process.

Doctor: Microsurgery makes process easier

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

A male sterilization procedure once thought to be permanent is now reversible and available in Midland.

Men who opted to have a vasectomy as a form of birth control can re-establish fertility, according to a local physician.

Although vasovasostomies — reversal vasectomies — are not uncommon, microsurgery has brought a higher success rate for this procedure.

Dr. Kirby Tarry, a Midland urologist, said the fertility success rate is reaching 70 to 80 percent with the use of microsurgery.

But the interval of time between the vasectomy and reversing the operation is vital.

"If a vasectomy has been done in the past five years or less, chances of success are good," Tarry said.

"It's easier than a tubal ligation where we have to go into the abdomen," Tarry said, referring to a common surgical sterilization procedure for women.

"It's not a major operation, not any more major than a vasectomy," Tarry said, explaining that the reversal operation involves reattaching vessels.

But unlike a vasectomy, which can be performed in the doctor's office, this three-hour operation requires a general anesthetic and a short hospital stay.

Tarry, who recently performed a vasovasotomy in Midland, is preparing to do another.

"This is not new, but to my knowledge, it's not being done in the Midland and Odessa area," he said.

The use of vasectomy for birth control has increased significantly in the last two decades. But because more older men are beginning to remarry and want a second family, there have been requests for vasectomy reversals.

Microsurgery allows the physician to repair the vas, the tube that carries the sperm.

"Microsurgery makes the reapproximation easier, more exact," Tarry said, adding that 10 years ago normal surgical techniques achieved 20 to 25 percent pregnancy rates. Today, pregancy rates have increased up to 80 percent.

Usually with a vasectomy, a small portion of the vas is removed and the ends are blocked to stop sperm.

"This is the most common procedure, and it can be reversed," Tarry said. "But if the vas has been cauterized, it makes the procedure more difficult."

Men considering a vasectomy reversal should be healthy with proven prior fertility, and should have sperm present at the site of the vasectomy.

Trustees to discuss GEM expansion

Expansion of the gifted and talented program to include third and eighth grade students will be discussed when Midland Independent School District trustees meet at 1:30 p.m. Thursday.

If the expansion is approved, gifted third graders who are in classes where lessons are taught at or below their level will have a chance to gain advanced skills. Meanwhile, eighth graders will have continuity between the seventh grade gifted program and ninth grade honors courses.

The regularly scheduled Tuesday meeting was delayed until Thursday because trustees were attending the National School Board Convention and Exposition for 1983 in San Francisco, Calif.

Also to be discussed Thursday is a comprehensive plan for computer literacy, to be implemented in all grade levels and schools. Estimated cost of the system will be $144,600. Actual cost is expected to be less, assuming bid prices come in lower.

Other items on the agenda include approval of the annually updated special education three-year plan and formal adoption of comparability between Chapter I and regular schools in the areas of teacher/pupil ratio, average teacher salary and supplies and materials. A district security plan and plans for construction of the Instructional Materials Center also will be considered.

Expansion of GEM (Gifted Education in Midland) would not cost the district additional funds during the first year, 1983-84, according to Patricia Alexander, GEM coordinator.

The program presently pulls gifted students in the fourth through sixth grade out of regular classes twice a week for participation. GEM seventh graders participate in advanced English and math classes.

If the expansion is approved, third graders will be pulled from regular classes once a week while eighth graders will enroll in advanced English. Eighth graders already have algebra as an option to math, according to Ms. Alexander.

About 52 students will be selected for the third grade program — representing the top 4 percent of the current third grade class. Fifty-two fourth graders also will be selected although 89 now are enrolled in the GEM program.

Fewer students will be selected to keep the GEM teaching staff the same, she said. The three-member staff will teach both third and fourth graders on a rotating basis. Most likely, two teachers will work with the fourth grade group while one will work with the third graders, she explained. The teachers will rotate and the groups will work together on occasions.

In addition, third graders will travel on the same buses the fourth graders use, thereby eliminating further transportation costs, she said.

Third graders will be eligible to apply if they score above the top 95 percentile on the California Achievement Test on two out of the three subtests: reading, math and total.

However, in schools where there are fewer than 3 percent of the students who score above 95 percent on the tests — such as in minority schools — the top 3 percent or a minimum of five students will be nominated for consideration.

"We're trying to open up the screening process for groups of children who might otherwise be overlooked," Ms. Alexander said. "I have a problem with a program that only draws students from half of the schools in the district."

Students who score above the 95 percentile or in the top 3 percent of their class will then be evaluated by their present teachers. Those teachers will rate the students on the following characteristics: learning, motivation, creativity and leadership.

At the eighth grade level, students will be selected for participation in the same way seventh graders presently are selected. The expansion will provide an opportunity for enrichment, learning the essential elements of English, provide continuity between the elementary GEM and secondary honors classes and continue the concept established at the seventh grade level.

OC president refrains from testifying at hearings

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Although Lubbock Sen. John Montford blamed junior college associations with the stalling of one of his bills Tuesday, at least one area community college did not participate in the hearings in Austin.

A similar bill introduced in the House Higher Education Committee Monday by Odessa Rep. Jay Gibson, also calling for four-year status for The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, received strong opposition through the testimony of presidents of Midland College, Texarkana Community College, Tyler Junior College and the director of Texas Community College Association.

Odessa College President Phil Speegle, however, is stuck in a tight spot — and it isn't in Austin.

Following approval by education committees in the Senate and the House, the Senate bill was passed twice by the full Senate Tuesday: 21-9 and 18-12.

On the third reading, however, eight senators voted against suspending the rules to consider final passage.

According to a spokeswoman in Montford's office, a four-fifths majority is needed to suspend the rule requiring bills be read on three separate days.

Montford blamed the votes on junior college associations which have "started such a pandemonium" because "they felt so threatened."

Those opposing the bills say changing the Odessa upper-level university to a four-year school would hurt enrollment at community colleges and start a chain of requests from other upper-level institutions.

"Education is not to be construed as a negative progress," Montford said after the vote which stalled SB 1014 Tuesday. He said assumptions that junior colleges enrollment would suffer if UTPB began offering undergraduate courses "one of the silliest arguments in terms of education I've ever heard."

The Senate Education Committee approved the bill two weeks ago, despite testimony from MC President Jess Parrish, Texas Community College Association Director Robert Clinton, Texas Junior Colleges Teachers Association Immediate Past President Roger Griffin and National Association of Junior College Trustees President Reagan Legg.

Odessa College President Phil Speegle did not testify — he was present, but remained in the gallery instead of on the floor.

Monday, when the House subcommittee approved the bill, Speegle was not present. Nor was he Tuesday when the bill came up before the full Senate.

"The community leadership over here wants it (four-year status for UTPB)," Speegle told the Reporter-Telegram Tuesday afternoon from Odessa. "The leadership in Odessa knows I have some concerns about what it'll do to Odessa College. So I've agreed to stay out of it.

"That's why I'm here and not there," he said.

The Senate bill allows the University of Texas System regents to establish a four-year institution at UTPB and to emphasize the teaching of energy-related sciences and engineering courses.

During floor debate on the bill, Sen. Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi asked Montford about the effect of his legislation on area junior colleges. The Lubbock senator noted "they are not supplying a sufficient number of students" to the university.

"These schools will complement each other," Montford told fellow legislators.

DEATHS

Louis Zinterhofer

Services for Dr. Louis Zinterhofer, 78, of 4605 Andrews Highway, were to be at 10 a.m. today at St. Ann's Catholic Church, with burial to follow in Danevang Cemetery at Danevang, directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home. A rosary was recited Tuesday night in the Ellis Chapel.

Zinterhofer died of a brief illness Monday night in a Midland hospital.

He was born March 8, 1905, in Bay City, Mich., and spent his early life in Detroit. He attended the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and Georgetown Medical School in Washington, D.C. He took surgical residencies at Harvard Medical School and the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. He practiced surgery for many years in Detroit and moved to Midland in 1953. He was one of the first ham radio operators in this area and was a member of St. Ann's Catholic Church.

Survivors include his wife, Dr. Martha Madsen Zinterhofer of Midland; a son, Dr. Louis J.M. Zinterhofer of Rumson, N.J.; three sisters, Clara Kemper of Detroit, Barbara Reynolds of Toledo, Ohio, and Anne Chatterson of Alexandria, Ind.; and two grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, Tx. 79702.

W.H. Conkling

ABILENE — Services for W.H. (Henry) Conkling, 83, of Abilene and formerly of Midland, were Tuesday at the Elliott-Hamil Funeral Home in Abilene with Dr. Charles Fisher, minister of Brookhollow Christian Church in Abilene, officiating. Graveside services were Tuesday today at Rising Star Cemetery in Rising Star.

Conkling died early Monday morning in an Abilene hospital.

He was born March 17, 1900, near Lexington, Okla. He attended schools in Norman, Okla. He graduated from Oklahoma University in 1921 with a degree in petroleum geology. He moved to Texas in 1923 and married Mary Scott Shults Feb. 1, 1925, in Eastland. They lived in Midland for a number of years before moving to Abilene in 1952.

He had worked for Shell Oil, Sun Oil and several other oil firms. He also was an independent consulting geologist. He was instrumental in the exploration and development of Jameson Field in West Texas in 1946.

He was a member of Sigma Gamma Epsilon Fraternity and the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. He was a past president and an honorary member of the Midland Geological Society and the West Texas Geological Society. He was a member of Midland and Abilene Kiwanas Club with 25 years of perfect attendance. He was past president of the Midland Kiwanas Club and a member of Brookhollow Christian Church in Abilene. He was an elder and an adult Sunday school teacher in Midland and Abilene. He was preceded in death by four brothers and two sisters.

Survivors include his wife of Abilene; a daughter, Barbara Bailey of Abilene; a son, Dr. William S. Conkling of Navasota; seven grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers were to be his grandsons and nephews.

August Frusak

ST. LAWRENCE — Services for August M. Frysak, 61, of St. Lawrence will be at 3 p.m. Friday in the St. Lawrence Catholic Church with the Rev. Russell Schultz, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in St. Lawrence Cemetery, directed by Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

Frysak, a stockfarmer, died Monday in Las Vegas, Nev.

He was born Sept. 21, 1921, in Moulton, moved to San Angelo in 1936 and then to St. Lawrence in 1959. He was a member of St. Lawrence Catholic Church.

Survivors include his wife, Jerline; three daughters, Theresa Frysak of St. Lawrence, Sharon Lange of Olfen and Kathleen Schniers of Rowena; two sons, Kervin Frysak of Midkiff and Mark Frysak of St. Lawrence; two grandsons and several nieces and nephews.

Mary Stanley

Mary Stanley, 79, of 1507 W. College died Saturday afternoon at Midland Memorial Hospital after a short illness.

Services were Tuesday in Glass Chapel of First United Methodist Church with Dr. Charles E. Lutrick, pastor, officiating. Burial was in Fairview Cemetery, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers were John Stanley, J.R. Stanley, Allen Voliva, Jimmy Furman, Richard Davis and O. Ike Fitzgerald.

Thelma McDaniel

Services for Thelma McDaniel, 73, of 410 Hicks Ave., were Tuesday in Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Roy R. Roach of Travis Baptist Church officiating. Burial was in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. McDaniel died Sunday in a Midland hospital.

Pallbearers were John Wayne Huntley, Darwin Corder, Carter Phillips, Richard Proctor, Fred Phillips and Newt McGee.

Odessa lawyer has been disbarred

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

An Odessa attorney, who has been in legal work for more than 30 years, has been suspended from practicing law in Texas, stricken from the federal court roster and forbidden from applying the terms "attorney at law," counselor at law" or "lawyer" to himself.

The suspended attorney, Joseph J. Rey Sr., was rebuked following his conviction in El Paso federal court in November 1982 for conspiracy to possess heroin with intent to distribute the narcotic in 1979, according to federal court records.

Rey, about 60, was sentenced to four years in prison and was fined $5,000 but is free while his conviction is being appealed.

He was convicted in a second trial on the heroin charge after a "hung jury" case ended in a mistrial. In the subsequent trial, Rey's co-defendant, Edmundo Lozano, who had pleaded guilty to the charge, testified against Rey.

In a state disbarment proceeding against Rey, 210th State District Court Judge Sam Paxson of El Paso earlier this month ordered Rey "suspended from practice of law" in Texas while his conviction is under appeal.

"The defendant is ordered to return all files, papers, monies and other property belonging to clients and former clients in the defendant's (Rey's) possession to the respective clients or former clients or to another attorney at (each)...client's or former client's request," the judge's order says.

Rey was also ordered to surrender his Texas State Bar license.

Following Rey's conviction last November, U.S. District Judge Harry Lee Hudspeth ordered Rey's license to practice law in federal court revoked. Rey had been permitted to practice law in federal court since February 1951.

In his legal practice, Rey reportedly specialized in handling immigration cases.

Stress seminar to be conducted

The YMCA Positive Lifestyle Center will conduct a seminar on the causes of stress, the problems it can create and what can be done to reduce it.

Some of the most effective antidotes to stress will be emphasized, such as self persuasion and positive self-talk, progressive relaxation and self-hypnosis, according to Charles Silverman, program director.

In general, the program will offer guidelines for maintaining a low-stress lifestyle.

The eight-hour program will consist of four two-hour sessions, beginning Saturday at 10 a.m. Registration must be done in advance. For more information call 682-2551.

San Angelo Sen. Bill Sims, who represents Midland, questioned Montford about the estimated cost of expanding UTPB. Montford said modification would cost "nothing this session" because the bill could not take effect until 1986.

"It's cheaper to taxpayers if you have a university which cultivates a four-year curriculum," Montford said. "You can have a four-year school for the same price if you put a pencil to it."

Both Sims and Truan voted against suspension of the rules to take up the bill on the third reading the same day. Also voting against suspending the rules were Sens. Lloyd Doggett of Austin, Grant Jones of Abilene, John Leedom of Dallas, Oscar Mauzy of Grand Prairie, Bill Sarpalius of Amarillo and Craig Washington of Houston.

Washington, who consistently votes against suspending the rule requiring bills be read on three separate days for constitutional reasons, said he does not oppose the bill.

Montford said Tuesday he plans to bring the bill up again for consideration today. A spokeswoman in his office confirmed the bill probably will be brought up for final consideration sometime this week.

Convicted rapist sues Sheriff's Office

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Midland County man, who 1½ years ago was sentenced to 25 years in prison for raping a 21-year-old neighbor, has filed a $1 million lawsuit in federal court against the Midland County Sheriff's Office and former Deputy Sheriff Les Hunter.

The man, Walter Ray Webb, is alleging that he was denied the reading of his rights as an accused person and was not presented with a search warrant prior to the search of his house on Aug. 23, 1980 — the day after he allegedly raped the neighbor, a housewife, as he threatened her with a knife.

In his petition, submitted to U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton of the Midland-Odessa Division of federal court, Webb says that lawmen first took him to the Midland Courthouse for questioning about the assault and then drove him out to his home in far west Midland County.

"There were no Miranda warning, search warrent (sic), etc. I was just taken and told to turn them (his belongings) over...," says Webb, who was 18 when he was convicted of rape. "I want to file a million-dollar lawsuit against Midland County Sheriff's Office and Leslie Eugene Hunter for coming into my home without a Miranda warning nor presenting me with a search warrent (sic). This is causing me a lot of mental anguis(h)."

In September 1981, a five-woman, seven-man jury in Midland's 238th State District Court convicted Webb of the aggravated rape of the woman.

Webb, who did not testify in his trial, was prosecuted in Judge Vann Culp's 238th State District Court by Assistant District Attorney David Joers and Jim Rex. His defense attorneys were Bob Freeman and John Hyde.
