DOCTORS HERE HAVE QUEER CASE

ADDITIONAL PAVING SCHEDULED HERE

$50,000 REMAINS READY FOR USE; COMMENT IS FOR MORE PAVING

Much comment has been heard here recently in regard to more paving on the residential streets of the city, and it is understood that a renewal of the program finished up here just the past few weeks probably will be started in the near future.

The city now has on hand approximately $50,000 brought over from the election last July that was not needed in finishing up the original program and extension in this program, and although city officials have not yet expressed themselves on the matter, it is understood that they are awaiting action on the part of property owners in sections of the city that want paving.

Several petitions of some many residential streets have been presented for approval of the Commission in recent months, but the most of them came under the original plan of paving whereby the city paid one-fourth of the cost, and it is understood that new petitions by property owners will now be necessary since passage of the ordinance setting out that the city will pay only one-tenth of the cost.

Petitions from Fourteenth, Sixteenth and Nineteenth streets are known to have been presented, and as far as can be learned it is immaterial with officials which street is paved first. The amount of city funds now available for paving will effect about thirty blocks, according to Harry N. McWilliams, Consulting Engineer of the City, who has supervised the program just completed.

Interested property owners on several streets, especially those mentioned above are now beginning negotiations whereby their streets may be designated under the program, and it is understood that petitions will be started on these streets within the next day or two.

Costs to the property owner under the new plan of procedure will of course be a little heavier, but those interested in the program insist that it will be worth the price in increased valuation of affected property, explaining that the entire cost of paving a fifty foot lot will be approximately $250, which would be payable over a five year period.

OFFICERS FIND TWO SLAIN IN SNOW

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Feb. 11.—Dominic Russo and Sari Russo, cousins, both 25, were found brutally murdered on the outskirts of the city today, the result, police believe of either a liquor feud or a secret society plot.

The bodies were in Russo's automobile. Around the neck of each man was twisted a rope so tightly that it had cut into the flesh. Both skulls were crushed, clothing bloodstained, and the automobile splattered with blood. The bodies were frozen together and police had decided that the car stood out 12 hours.

Dominic Russo left here at 8 o'clock last night, he was going to meet his cousin, Sari's movements have not been traced.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Feb. 11.—The frozen bodies of two men, bearing evidence of great violence, were found in an automobile a few miles from here today. Officials expressed the opinion the men were hanged or beaten to death.

A finger on the hand of one was mutilated, apparently in an effort to identify the man, but no identification has been made. Police said the automobile had been left at the spot for 12 hours.

Police are working on the theory that a liquor feud was responsible for the death of the men.

TRANSFUSION OF BLOOD MAY SAVE LORENE WALDROP

SCHOOL MATES OFFER TO GIVE THEIR BLOOD TO SAVE HER LIFE

One of the most unusual medical cases that has been met in Lubbock is that of Lorene Waldrop, 12-year-old daughter of R. L. Waldrop, 1609 34th street, according to Dr. M. C. Overton, attending physician. Miss Waldrop has a disease of the blood which causes her blood to ooze from her skin and from the mucous membranes of her body.

Blood has been injected into the muscles of her body by the physicians and it is thought likely that blood transfusion will be necessary within a day or so, Dr. Overton said. For this reason, a number of her friends had their blood typed at the Lubbock sanitarium Thursday and have expressed a willingness to give their blood for the transfusion. Blood for the muscle injection was given by her two brothers, M. L. and R. M. Waldrop. This was done Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Condition Is Serious. Miss Waldrop is in a very serious condition, according to Dr. Overton. She has been sick for about two weeks and has been growing weaker this week from the loss of blood. This disease is extremely unusual and sometimes the removal of the spleen has been found to be a remedy, Dr. Overton said.

Miss Waldrop's blood has been typed and is of the most unusual type, thus making transfusion more difficult than it is in some cases. There are several "types" of blood, according to bacteriologists, and in transfusion blood must be injected of the same type as that in the patient. If transfusion is found necessary, it will be Friday or Saturday, the doctor said.

PRISON FARMS TO BE OIL LEASES

AUSTIN, Feb. 11.—Governor Miriam A. Ferguson today prepared to place her prison system in the oil business. The Roxanna Oil Company of Houston, subsidiary of the Dutch Shell interests, announced that it had leased two prison farms in Brazoria County, Texas, for oil drilling operations. The consideration is $44,925 and one eighth royalty. Twenty two thousand acres are involved.

Leasing negotiations were conducted with the state prison commission and James E. Ferguson, husband of the governor. The prison system, which was the subject of controversy in the last legislature, started under Mrs. Ferguson's administration with a $100,000 debt. It is said good crops have enabled the governor to pay off this debt, and it is believed the proposed oil operations will bring a substantial surplus into the prison coffers, which for years have been empty.

The deal involves approximately 15,000 acres on the Ramsey farm and 7,500 acres on the Retrieve farm. Drilling is to commence by July 1, 1927, on both farms, the company being held to drill at least one well on each, with a $2 rental per acre after the first wells.

NEAR RIOT BREAKS OUT IN CASE IN DALLAS WHEN LAWYER OFFERS PHYSICAL VIOLENCE FOR RIVAL

(By The Associated Press) DALLAS, Feb. 11.—An attorney for the defense was fined $10 for contempt of court, every attorney in the case and one witness were threatened with violence and the sheriff called extra deputies as the L. E. Arnold murder case almost developed a riot here today. Arnold is charged with the murder of his wife. The defense attorney, Monroe, was fined $10 by Judge Felix Robertson. A few months ago while defending W. A. Martin, sentenced to 99 years for killing R. B. Parsons, at Denton, Monroe was fined $100 by Judge Charles Phippen. Today's clash resulted from an attempt of George Pierson, assistant district attorney to prove by Shelly Cox, who was the witness, that Arnold murdered his wife because of jealousy. Pierson rolled up his sleeve. Monroe turned to the packed court room and said: "I want all you good people to know that the two prosecutors in this case are candidates for district attorney, tell your friends just what kind of men they are. They might as well take Arnold out and hang him to a tree if Your Honor can't give him a fair trial and make the prosecutors obey your ruling." The last was addressed to Judge Robertson. "Mr. Monroe, you are entirely out of order," said the judge. "I fine you $10 for contempt of court. Please pay the clerk." Cavin Muse, candidate for district attorney, who was seated at the defense table, pulled out a $10 bill and paid the fine for Monroe.

RIX IS SELECTED AS DISTRIBUTOR BY APEX CO.

The Rix Furniture and Undertaking Company, of this city, has been designated as one of five distributors of Apex Vacuum Sweepers and Rotarex Washers in the State of Texas. It was announced here Thursday following signing of a contract with A. L. Peters, representative of the Apex Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, who is here.

The territory allotted to the local firm comprises the entire South Plains section and sub-dealers at various points throughout the territory will be selected by the local company. Mr. Peters is now working with representatives of the Rix Company lining up these dealers. W. F. Haynie, well known local salesman, has been added to the Rix sales force, and will devote the greater part of his time to these two household commodities.

A large stock of both sweepers and washing machines will be kept here by the Rix Company, and also a part department will be maintained to offer one-day service to sub-dealers throughout the territory.

The move on the part of the Apex Company is taken to mean reiteration of the oft expressed statement that Lubbock is recognized by the commercial world as the logical distribution point for this entire section of the state, and in the opinion of Mr. Peters, no better connection has ever been made by them than with the Rix Furniture and Undertaking Company, which is recognized as among the leading business firms of West Texas.

CANNES, France, Feb. 11. (AP)—For the third successive day, all the matches in the Carlton Club lawn tennis tournament were postponed today because of rain.

CASTLES IN SPAIN

Every man is more or less of a dreamer. Some dream in one way and some in another.

Napoleon had a dream of a world dominion—a dream which nearly came true. Marconi dreamed of wireless; Fulton of a steam propelled boat and Edison of a phonograph, and their dreams, commercial though they were, came true.

But how about us ordinary folks, don't we dream, too?

Dreams of financial independence—dreams of honor—dreams of unlimited success and dreams of love. Find a man, no matter how much of a "hard-headed business man" he may be, who does not, down in the innermost corners of his heart, dream and hope.

It can't be done. You can't find one. True, our castles in Spain nearly always vanish into thin air as the years buffet us about, but even though they often fail to materialize, aren't they worth it in the end?

Life, as we know, is just what we make it. If we can make it any better, any sweeter, by dreaming, let us dream—let us build our castles in Spain even though their walls be of the ethereal and their foundations of hope. Some day one of our dreams might come true—and when it does we shall find that the dream come true is not one whit more pleasing than the anticipation of it.

ANCIENT AND MODERN BOXERS

The story of boxing contests in the Olympic games was carried by runners, and was weeks in reaching interested cities of Greece. The outcome of cestus fights in Roman arenas was reported to the outside world by racing horsemen and rushing galleys, and weeks were consumed in carrying the news to the waiting fans. In the early years of the last century results of ring battles were spread by relay express riders, who required weeks to reach some localities. After 1831, along rapidly extending lines, the news for a decade or more was quickened by railroad.

Next the bulletins were communicated by telegraph in the twinkling of an eye after they were on the wire, but with minutes sometimes running into hours consumed in running the "copy" to the sending offices and in placing the message before the people. Nowadays one hears radio reports, direct and instantaneous, from the ringside; hears of the blows, of the knockdowns, of the knockouts, only a fraction of a second later than they are witnessed by persons at the ringside.

Having followed the marvelous development of communication from the runner to radio, look back some thousands of years to the sculptured boxers and cestuarii. Comparison with the bodies of modern boxing champions shows little, if any, advance. The progress of man is not in muscle and brawn, but in the mind and through its works.

By the way, what has become of the second-honor man in that famous cockfighting contest, the Hon. Magnus Johnson—Marion Star.

In a walking race non-smokers beat the smokers. Presumably the former did less puffing.—Pittsburgh Gazette-Times

Another Good Way of Killing a Goose

The YELLOW STUB by Ernest Lynn

HENRY RAND, 55, a business man, is found murdered in a cheap hotel in GRAFTON. Police find woman's handkerchief and a yellow ticket stub from a theatre in CLEVELAND. JIMMY RAND, Henry's son, goes to CLEVELAND. The ticket stub is traced to a THOMAS FORTY, who says he gave it to OLGA MAYNARD, a cabaret singer. Police search for her. Jimmy meets and falls in love with MARY LOWELL and gets a job at her office. Later he encounters Olga Maynard and she faints when he tells her she is suspected of murder. Mary, out with SAMUEL CHURCH, a wealthy lawyer, sees Jimmy lifting Olga into a taxi. The next day she doesn't speak to him. He is discharged later that day. Police arrest Olga and confront her with the ticket stub and handkerchief. She admits they are hers but believes a man who took her to a cabaret two nights before the murder might have got hold of them. OLGA GOES ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIV Olga Maynard stared unseeingly at the handkerchief O'Day held in his hand. She was silent. "Who was the man?" O'Day repeated. "I don't know." She lifted her arms helplessly and let them drop. "What do you mean, you don't know who it was?" O'Day began angrily. "You—"

Then he saw the envelope on the telephone stand. It was sealed but unaddressed.

"You expect me to believe that?" The lieutenant had risen to his feet. He was bending over her menacingly. "Look here—either you're lying when you say you weren't in the Canfield Hotel or you're lying when you say you don't know who this man was. Which is it?" "I told you it would sound like a weak alibi. I knew you'd think I was lying. If you'll listen I'll explain. You still don't believe me, I guess, but every word's true. I swear it is." "Go ahead, Miss Maynard," encouraged Jimmy. "We're listening." "You probably get the idea from the lieutenant, Mr. Rand, she said, "that I'm not a very nice woman. All right, maybe I'm not, according to your way of thinking. The man I went out with that night spoke to me in the lobby of the Paragon Theatre as I was coming out. He picked me up, if you want to put it that way."

She looked appealingly at Jimmy. He nodded his head. "Go on," he said. "Maybe you've never been broke and lonesome, and out of a job," she continued, half to herself. "It isn't a very nice feeling. "When he asked me to go some place where we could eat and dance. I went with him. He had a bottle of liquor with him, and he got drunk. He tried to make me drink and I wouldn't. That's why he got mad. I never drink unless I know who I'm with. He said a few things to me that I didn't like, so I got my pocket-book from him and went home. "That's all there is to it," she finished. "A fine story," scoffed Lieutenant O'Day. "I suppose you'll say next that you don't know what he looked like. Do you suppose you could tell us that, or did you forget that too?" "I remember what he looked like. He was a big man—a regular giant—with long arms and big, freckled hands. I was afraid of him when he got to drinking."

"What kind of hair did he have?" Jimmy asked. "Red hair. Light red. It was cut short at the sides. Just long enough on top to part." "Lieutenant," said Jimmy, "I think she's telling the truth. That's the description the hotel clerk gave of the man who registered as H. A. Jones of New York. He said the man had his hat on—julled down over his eyes so he couldn't see much of his face, but he described him as a big man with close cut red hair. He said he had rather large ears. Did you notice Miss Maynard?" "Yes, He did."

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

TALE ABOUT GRANT TOLD BY A FORMER BARKEEPER

By CHARLES P. STEWART NEA Service Writer.

WASHINGTON. — Michael Scanlon has run a billiard saloon in Washington for 42 years. "From Lincoln on down," he told me, "I've shaken the hand of every elected president, excepting only Samuel J. Tilden's."

"I said every man ever elected president," replied the veteran.

Veteran is right, in more ways than one.

Scanlon had just been mustered out of General Grant's army, at the Civil War's end, when he opened his place in the capital. "A great man was Grant," he observed. "See, here's his billiard cue." He lifted it from the rack and exhibited it, with the initial, "G" ornately carved on the butt, just as the general laid it down, after the last game he ever played in "Scanlon's Billiard Parlor."

"He was a good player, too," continued the old man. "I installed a table for him at the White House. It cost $1100, which was a lot of money in those days."

"I suppose you know Grant was a Democrat, though the Democrats, by mistake, as usual, let the Republicans nominate him for President."

"He didn't like to be called 'President' though. He preferred the title of 'general.'"

CATHOLICS NOT TO ENTER FUSS

Compulsory Prohibition Will Not Be Favored In Word Of Boston Cardinal

(By The Associated Press.) NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—A new note on prohibition which has been agitating the Episcopal church, has been struck in a pronouncement by Cardinal O'Donnell of Boston that the Roman Catholic church applauds voluntary abstinence but opposes compulsory prohibition.

Warns Protestants

He confined himself to defining the position of his church and warning Protestant prohibition leaders that the Catholic church would not allow itself to be entangled in the compulsory total abstinence movement.

Although the Catholic church has long been fighting against intemperance, the cardinal said, compulsory prohibition is a different matter.

Opposed To Catholicism

"For compulsory prohibition," he said, "in general is flatly opposed to holy scripture and to Catholic tradition."

Dr. James Empringham, national secretary of the church temperance movement, said yesterday his organization would continue its work to modify the Volstead Act. Only 19 out of 141 bishops thus far have publicly opposed the society's stand, he said.

At Lancaster, Pa., W. A. (Pinefoot) Johnson, discussed Dr. Empringham's stand for light wines and beer said, "There are some people who get tired of being good long at one time."

CINEMA PROBLEMS TO COME BEFORE SCIENCE

CHICAGO, Feb. 11. (AP)—The problem of the movie is to be analyzed and a scientific treatise prepared at the fourth National Motion Picture conference here February 10-12, under the auspices of the Federal Motion Picture Council. Taking up the motion picture, its psychological and sociological aspects, the international phase, the moral phase and existing regulation and future legislation will be considered.

Speakers will include Prof. E. A. Ross, of the University of Wisconsin; Mayor Kettleson, of Madison, Wis.; Prof. George Mead and Prof. Ellisworth Parls, of the University of Chicago; Dr. Herman Adler, of the Chicago Institute of Juvenile Research and Rev. Charles W. Gilkey, of Chicago.

Rev. Charles Scanlon, chairman of the Moral Welfare department of the Presbyterian church, is president of the council and Rev. William Sheaf Chase, of Brooklyn, is its general secretary.

HOMES ARE BEING MADE OF BARNS IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Feb. 11. (AP)—Many of London's aristocracy are busy converting disused stables and attics in Mayfair into stylish mansions for their own use and the Duke and Duchess of York indirectly are responsible.

Since these members of the King's family settled in Mayfair there has been a stampede of those who wish to live near enough to bask in the Royal smiles. There is a great shortage of houses in this section, and those available mostly are enormous, old fashioned mansions, costly to lease and expensive to maintain. Hence the conversion of stables.

Mayfair has, of course, long been the home of the elite. It is in London what Park Avenue and Fifth Avenue are to New York.

In the old days, there were many mansions filled with small buildings in which the blooded horses and the fine carriages of the aristocracy were housed. Since the automobile has come into such common use, however, the glossy steeds and the gorgeous, uniformed lackeys have largely joined the other picturesque relics of the by day of blue blood. Now there are few mansions in Mayfair these days which do not house distinguished families.

Waiters and Cooks In England Are to Patronize Schools

LONDON, Feb. 11. (AP)—To keep up with the times, English cafe waiters and cooks are going to school again to learn the fine points of their jobs.

Several technical schools for cooks and waiters have been started by the London County Council, with the backing of all the larger hotels and restaurants.

British subjects only are admissible and one of the aims of the enterprise is to improve the art of waiting so that foreigners will not be able to flock to the English cities and select all the first class positions because of their cleverness and polite manners.

FAMILY OF DEAD WOMAN BATTLE FOR SPOUSE

DALLAS, Feb. 11. (AP)—The family of Mrs. Meri Arnold, whose husband, L. E. Arnold, is charged with her death, came to his defense at the trial here today. The dead woman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Faulk, of Rockwall, and her four brothers and two sisters all testified that he had been a good husband to their daughter and sister.

The defense asked them if they believed Arnold shot his wife or she committed suicide but the court stopped the answer on objection from the state.

While the family of the dead woman testified, an attorney, C. M. Isbell, of Rockwall, sat at the defense table, having been employed by Mrs. Arnold's family to defend her husband.

Mrs. Arnold was killed December 15 while returning from a Christmas shopping tour. They were riding in an automobile and the woman was shot while the baby lay asleep in her lap. The defense claims she killed herself while despondent over lack of funds and illness.

Society Girl Joins Dope Ring to Save Sweetheart From Pen - - - BUT THE MAN WASN'T WORTH IT!

PICTURE STORY OF GIRL WHO ENTERED UNDERWORLD FOR LOVE

By NEA Service.
NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 11.—The lights on the wharves of old New Orleans gleam fitfully across the dark flood of the restless Mississippi. They light the passage of countless ships, carriers of the freight of a nation's inland empire. And, at times, they touch the dark form of one of those ships of night that carry contraband cargo; the ships that slip in silently, laden with tragedy and evil.

But never have they seen a more tragic chain of events than those which make up the story of Mabel Langford.

For Mabel Langford is the girl who left a home of wealth and culture to lose herself in the dark byways that hedge in the waterfront. She did it because she loved a man; and then, at the last, she found that the man wasn't worth it.

How It Started.

Mabel Langford is the daughter of an old Louisiana family living in the northern part of the state. She is a college graduate and mingled in the most exclusive society circles. She was to have been married to a young man who lived in Meriden, Miss.

Just before the day set for the marriage Miss Langford went to visit her fiancé's family. While she was there, a strange man came to call on her. He was a federal narcotic agent. He told her he wanted to save her from disgrace by informing her that her fiancé was a "dope-runner," that the federal agents had sufficient evidence to send him to prison. Miss Langford was a girl of spirit. She got the federal agent to take her to his superiors. And with them she made a bargain; that if they would agree not to prosecute her fiancé, she would find out who the real heads of the narcotic-smuggling ring were and get evidence that would enable the government to send them to prison. The officials agreed.

And so Mabel Langford left her home, came down to New Orleans' waterfront byways and mingled with the dope peddlers. She fulfilled her promise. In a short time she turned in evidence that sent the leaders to the penitentiary. Her sweetheart was saved.

And then he ran away and married another girl! Mabel Langford was heartbroken. To forget—that was her sole aim. So she came to New Orleans again, this time becoming a member of the federal prohibition enforcement agency. Down to the dark waterfront she went once more.

With the Rum Ring.

"I won myself a place of confidence in the heart of the underworld's rum ring," she says. "I even lived in the old plantation mansion, far uptown, looking out over the Mississippi river, where cargoes of alcohol were taken off swift rum boats, and overnight, with labels and seals and corks, were transformed in the rooms of that old mansion into 'choice imported liquors.'"

"I learned that one man, known only to his associates as 'Mr. W.' is the rum king of New Orleans and directs a traffic totalling millions from his home on Broadway, in the heart of the rich residential district. I learned that two brothers-in-law, posing as wealthy New Orleans business men, are his lieutenants. "I learned the name of every one of the fleet of six ships that bring the liquors and raw alcohol from Cuba to New Orleans.

"In that house, the last day I was there, was $13,700 worth of raw alcohol. In two adjoining houses were $3,500 worth of manufactured whiskey and 2,000 cases of genuine whiskey for the richest trade in the South.

Under Suspicion.

"I was the pal of the rum king's wife. We even slept together night after night. Then, I don't know how, I came under the suspicion of the underworld.

"The rum king's wife and I were doing some Christmas shopping. Suddenly, in the midst of the crowded store, she whispered in my ear: 'They have tipped me you aren't a real crook. If you are prove it. Take some of these gloves.' I had told them, you see, that I used to be a shoplifter.

"I took a pair of gloves from a counter. And the store detective saw me. I was arrested."

Then Miss Langford appealed to the prohibition director for help. And he refused to help her, denying that she was a prohibition agent!

She promptly turned to the newspapers with her story. New Orleans caught its breath as her tale of rum-running operations came out. The prohibition headquarters was besieged with questions.

Charge is Pending.

At first the officials continued to deny she was an agent. Then they admitted she was a "paid informer." And finally, under pressure, they admitted she was a full-fledged, duly commissioned enforcement agent.

And there the affair stands now. The charge of shoplifting is still pending. Whether the government officials will use their influence to have it dropped or will let her go to jail is still uncertain.

"If those charges are dropped I'm never coming back to New Orleans," says Miss Langford. "It's a big country and I need excitement after this kind of life. I'll find it somewhere. Only I'm sorry for my family.

"You know, when a girl loves a man she'll go down to hell for him. And fighting to save the man I love is what put me where I am today."

ITALIANS CLAIM MUSSOLINI IS WINNER IN INTERNATIONAL ROW WITH STRESMAN OVER PROVINCE

NEWSPAPERS ARE CAREFUL TO SAY, HOWEVER, THAT ENTIRE CONTROVERSY IS CARRIED ON IN THE INTEREST OF WORLD PEACE

(By The Associated Press)
ROME, Feb. 11.—The chorus of the pro-government newspapers today, in commenting on Premier Mussolini's last shot in the Italo-German controversy over Southern Tyrol, runs to the refrain:

"Mussolini has triumphed personally over Stresman; Fascist Italy has triumphed over social Democratic Germany, and Latifinity has showed itself superior to Teutonism."

Peace is stressed. The papers, however, are careful to add that the triumph is all in cause of international peace.

If Impero extreme fascist prints a striking picture of Mussolini captioned "The Masculine Latin Leader" and a grotesque caricature of Foreign Minister Stresmann of Germany which it entitles the "Darwinian contradiction of our leader."

Berlin Papers Heard From
BERLIN, Feb. 11. (AP)—A mixture of ignorance and brutal arrogance is the comment on Premier Mussolini's speech today by the Tagliche Rundschau, which paper Mussolini referred to as the personal organ of Foreign Minister Stresmann.

The Lokal Anzeiger recognizes that Mussolini adopted a polite tone than in his first speech, but observes that he does not recede a bit from his stand point, regarding the paper terms "the suppression of the minorities in Southern Tyrol."

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says:

"These new insults and charges cannot wipe out the impression that Mussolini's case is weak. It is time for a quiet survey of the difference."

Verwartz, the socialist organ, also pleads for a return to correct official German-Italian relations.

Tyrolese Is For Italy
BERLIN, Feb. 11. (AP)—Former Premier Nitti of Italy, in an interview with the Paris correspondent of Verwartz, expressed conviction that the Southern Tyrolese will never be disloyal to Italy, provided they are treated fairly.

He remarks that there were never unwelcome incidents in the Tyrol while he was premier and takes a slap at Mussolini by declaring that "only ignorance could dare to belittle German culture."

The measures taken against the Southern Tyrol minorities are like those taken against opponents of fascism he says.

His Parliamentary speech was apparently inaccurately reported, he said. He had merely asked that Italy accord to the German speaking population of Southern Tyrol the same rights as to language, schools and religious instruction as were given other citizens of Italy and her colonies. He denied emphatically that any boycott movement against Italy had been officially sponsored by the Bavarian government, and expressed the opinion that even the unofficial movement would be abandoned if liberty of language were given the Germans in Southern Tyrol.

First Commercial Oil Well Drilled in 1859

In 1859, at Titusville, Pennsylvania, Edwin L. Drake, "The Founder of the Petroleum Industry," drilled the first commercial oil well in the world.

At a cost of only $1,000 this well was completed at a depth of 69 feet. 25 barrels a day was the initial production.

It is a far cry from the thousand-dollar, 69-foot Drake well to the $100,000, 5,000-foot wells of today. The petroleum industry has grown and improved by leaps and bounds to care for the constant rising demand for its products.

Price Reductions On Ford Closed Models Are Received

Notice of reduction on all closed models produced by the Ford Motor Company was received here Thursday by Geo. E. Benson, of the Lubbock Auto Company, South Plains distributor. Open models, however, took a slight increase. The new prices go into effect at once.

The Four-door Sedan was reduced $95; the Two-door Sedan $60, and the Coupe $29. The price of the runabout was increased $30, and that of the touring car increased $20.

With the improved quality, both in beauty lines and in material used, Ford now will set another new high mark in sales this year, in the opinion of Mr. Benson.

FORD'S PURCHASE OF SHIPS UP

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11. (AP)—A charge that his shipping board "jobbed" other bidders so that the Ford Motor Company would purchase 200 ships was made today before the senate commerce commission by L. B. Miller, a Baltimore attorney.

Appearing for the Boston Iron and Metal Company of Baltimore which bid on the ships, Miller declared it was "contemplated at the start that the Ford Motor Company should be the successful bidder," although when bids were first opened no tender from that company was received.

A senate investigation of the sale which is proposed in a resolution by Senator Bruce, Democrat, Maryland, was urged by Mr. Miller, who insisted that the board in marketing the sale to the Ford Company had "acted in direct violation of the merchant marine act."

Miller agreed with Chairman that the records of the shipping board would disclose the facts and these will be obtained by the committee before it acts on the resolution. The attorney reviewed the successive stages of the negotiations for the sale of the ships to the Ford Motor Company for $1,796,000.

SYSTEM OF FARM ACCOUNTS VERY NECESSARY TO EFFICIENCY OF ALL DEPARTMENTS OF RURAL HOME

(By Walter B. Remley) Agricultural Extension Department International Harvester Company

In discussing the subject of How Farm Accounting Helps, I shall not attempt to recommend any particular method of farm accounting, but rather briefly outline the many advantages that inevitably follow any efficient and carefully kept system of farm accounts.

The farmer is a business man. He is more than a ordinary business man because he is at once a capitalist, a laborer, a manufacturer, and a merchant. In any sphere outside of agriculture Capital may command a return in interest on loans or investments without labor; labor may command a wage without capital; the manufacturer and the merchant depend upon the careful management of their business rather than upon their own physical labor or their own limited capital for their profits. But the farmer, to be successful, must secure a return in all of the quadruple capacities. He must secure a fair return on his investment; he must earn a reasonable wage for his labor. In order to do these things he must know what to produce and how to produce it and he must know something about merchandising. As a result of the agricultural depression of the last few years the average farmer is giving more careful attention than ever before to what he produces and it is encouraging to note that he is learning many things about the selling end of his business.

Accounting System Necessary No business man can achieve the maximum degree of success unless he maintains an efficient system of accounting and the farmer is no exception to the rule.

No system of farm accounting can of itself guarantee a profit at the end of the year or turn a loss into a profit. It cannot of itself make a successful farmer out of an unsuccessful one or convert a run-down farm into a good farm. Farm accounting is only the means to an end but it is a very efficient means to a most important end.

Every farmer, like every other business man is constantly confronted by two questions: First, "Is my business as at present conducted, making me any money?" Second, "What can I do to make it more profitable?" Unless he keeps some kind of a record of his income and his expenditures, his assets and his liabilities, and takes an annual inventory of his property he can never answer the first of these questions, and until he knows how his profits, if any, have been made and how his losses, if any, have been incurred, he can not make any intelligent effort to increase his profits.

Practically every farmer keeps some kind of a record, but in most cases it is a simple financial record which shows little about the real condition of the business. If the farmer's bank balance is larger at the end of the year than it was at the beginning, he is apt to conclude that the year was a profitable one. If it is smaller or if his indebtedness has been incurred during the year, the inference may be that the year's operations were not so successful. In both instances the conclusion drawn may be far from the truth.

Annual Inventory Aids

No set of records can clearly and accurately show a farmer's net gain or loss during the year or enable him to know both the most profitable and the least profitable of his farm operations unless it includes an annual farm inventory or property list. No accurate knowledge regarding a farmer's financial progress can be gained unless he takes into consideration any decrease or increase in the value of all his property.

The store keeper is well aware of this fact and his annual "stock taking" is simply the taking of an inventory. Because of increased costs of operation and the consequent need for a very economy in production and hauling, many of our industrial and commercial organizations maintain detailed cost accounting systems, but this is not yet necessary for successful farm accounting.

A farm inventory need be only a simple, itemized statement of all the property owned together with its fair market value at the time the inventory is taken. By itself it does not necessarily give very much definite or accurate information as to a farmer's financial worth, but two such annual inventories, the one at the start of the year and the other at the close, when considered in connection with other farm records furnish reliable evidence of both the farmer's financial responsibility and the earnings of his business and this information is often very useful in securing loans or credit in time of need.

Let me repeat. Any accounting system at most is simply a statement of profit and loss. Inventories considered together furnish an important part of this statement but do not furnish it all. The cash account, the record of other assets earned and of liabilities incurred and other records furnish the balance of the necessary information. All are needed to determine whether a profit or loss has resulted from the year's operations.

Slow To Install System For several reasons farmers, as a class, have been slow to install a system of farm accounting. The need for carefully kept farm records was not so manifest in former years when the average farm was larger, the land more virgin and less capital to the acre was invested in the business. Farmers, also as a rule, have had only a meager knowledge of accounting, have felt they did not have the time to give to it and have been unable to combine the clerical work necessary with their hard physical labor to which they have been accustomed. Then, too, most of the accounting systems devised for the use of farmers have been so complicated as to call for too much labor and too much clerical skill.

But with the advent of the income tax, the increased cost of labor, equipment and supplies, higher taxes and a higher standard of living (which of itself is most commendable and desirable) farmers generally are becoming more convinced of the imperative need of comprehensive farm accounts. They realize that the old hit-or-miss system spells failure and that success depends on an accurate knowledge of facts and conditions as they exist.
