Crossing the line?

A state district judge in Amarillo Monday ordered a woman to speak English as well as Spanish to her 5-year-old daughter while raising her in the home. Not teaching her daughter English at home, Judge Samuel C. Kiser said, amounted to child abuse, relegated the child to "the position of housemaid" and would put the girl at a disadvantage in her English-speaking kindergarten class. Should a judge have authority to demand that English be taught in the privacy of the home? Or is the judge in this case overstepping his bounds? Call Cityline at 560-2400, Category 7655. If you feel Kiser's decision was correct and a judge should be allowed to instruct people on what to teach their children at home, press 1. If you feel he was incorrect in making such a ruling, press 2. You also may leave comments after your vote is cast. We ask that you leave your name, but that is your option. The non-scientific poll will remain open until noon Saturday. Results will appear in Sunday's edition. RELATED STORY/2B

Declaring horror and disgust at the Fuhrman tapes, Robert Tourtelot, the former detective's lawyer, quits.

In blow to defense, Ito bars most tapes

■ Panel to hear just two of 41 instances in which Detective Mark Fuhrman used racial slur for blacks, judge decides; infuriated O.J. Simpson attorneys decry ruling.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — In a major blow to the defense, O.J. Simpson's judge ruled Thursday that jurors can hear just two of 41 remarks in which retired LAPD Detective Mark Fuhrman uses a racial slur for blacks.

In throwing out the other 39 examples of the epithet, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito wrote: "The court finds the probative value of the remaining examples to be substantially and overwhelmingly outweighed by the danger of undue prejudice."

However, Ito ruled that aspiring screenwriter Laura Hart McKinny can tell the majority-black jury that Fuhrman used the word "nigger" 41 times during the interviews she has conducted since 1985 for a fictional project about the Los Angeles Police Department.

Fuhrman, who testified about finding a bloody glove near Simpson's mansion, denied under oath in March that he had used the word "nigger" during the past 10 years. Fuhrman is now retired and living in Idaho.

"Just as a defendant with prior felony convictions testifying before a jury is not entitled to a false aura of credibility, neither is Fuhrman," Ito wrote.

An outraged Johnnie Cochran Jr. called Ito's ruling "one of the cruelest, unfair decisions ever rendered in a criminal court in this country."

"For this judge to rule that only two of those incidents are admissible is outrageous, is specious, and it's unspeakable," Simpson's lead defense lawyer said.

However, Cochran said no decision

Permit, courses phase of state's gun law kicks in ■ Actual right to carry concealed weapon won't begin until Jan. 1, 1996.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The state's new concealed-handgun law will make Texans safer, Gov. George W. Bush declared Thursday, a day before the law goes into effect.

"I wouldn't have signed the bill if I didn't think it was going to make them safer," Bush said. "And I believe it's going to."

Beginning today, Texans may start applying for handgun permits and taking state-required training courses. Actual carrying of concealed guns won't be allowed until Jan. 1, 1996.

"We want people to understand that even though the law setting up the concealed-handgun licensing program is officially in effect as of Friday, this only means the licensing process may begin," said James R. Wilson, director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, which oversees implementation of the law.

The agency estimates that 200,000 Texans will apply for handgun permits.

So far, more than 30,000 people have mailed in postcards requesting applica-

Haleys sue Exxon over gas royalties

From Staff Reports

The Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library and members of the Haley family have filed a lawsuit in the 238th District Court against Exxon, charging that the oil company breached its contract with the defendants, failed to pay royalty properly, and that Exxon fraudulently concealed information in the matter.

The lawsuit charges that Exxon failed to use due diligence and reasonably market the gas from leases owned by the plaintiffs. While no specific amount of damages was named in the lawsuit, damages are expected to amount to millions of dollars. The plaintiffs are asking for actual damages, and exemplary 10 times, plus court costs.

Mass naturalization ceremony in Odessa greets 514 citizens

By Ed Todd

ODESSA — In an outdoor naturalization ceremony that lauded freedom, liberty and justice in America and that encouraged duty and responsibility, 514 aliens from 18 foreign lands — from Mexico and Venezuela to Great Britain and New Zealand — renounced their old allegiances and adopted the United States as their official homeland.

U. S. District Court Judge Royal Furgeson, in acknowledging the United States as the "land of the free and the home of the brave," told America's newest citizens that "we are not a perfect nation; we have made mistakes.

"But as a nation, at our best, we are the best. And now, we are even better because you are with us."

Furgeson, who presides in Midland, welcomed the new citizens, including four children, "to join us in our sacred mission to bring and to be an example of equality, freedom, peace and justice to all the peoples of all the countries of the world. God bless you, and God bless America."

Afterward, Paulino Salinas, at age 58 and in America for 43 years, said that it "feels great" to become an American citizen. Salinas, an Odessan who was born in Mexico and who once built oil-field derricks, said "they never asked me to become an American citizen. I just decided to be one."

"It's a great experience and a good feeling," 38-year-old Jesus Manuel Flores said. "I am proud of this county and

NATO air raids strike Serbs third day

Envoy pursuing diplomatic solution reports breakthrough

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — NATO jets struck at Bosnian Serb ammunition dumps around Sarajevo early today, the third straight day of airstrikes intended to punish the rebels for shelling civilians and push them toward a negotiated peace.

The heavy pounding appeared to be working to cool Serb defiance.

The rebels began pulling some tanks away from Sarajevo, the city they have held in a stranglehold since the Bosnian war began in 1992.

And a U.S. envoy pushing a peace plan reported a breakthrough late Thursday: Both sides now agreed to a division of the country that would give the Serbs less than half. But the tough job of actually drawing the map remained.

NATO said the bombing raids resumed at 2 a.m. (7 p.m. CDT).

"The operation is still going on, mostly reconnaissance flights, but we are dropping some bombs," said Capt. Jim Mitchell, a NATO spokesman in Naples, Italy.

Heavy cloud cover on Thursday prevented many raids from being carried out. But the skies cleared after midnight and NATO sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the jets were going back in to finish the job they had started.

NATO and the United Nations began their

Environmental experts warn Russian Nuclear community of possible power plant catastrophies

MOSCOW (AP) — The potential nuclear disaster that lurks in Russia is especially threatening in Moscow, where scores of reactors are not receiving adequate upkeep and are tended by poorly trained workers, environmental experts warned Thursday.

The experts told a news conference that severe nuclear accidents are possible at deteriorating facilities throughout the country. The main danger, they said, is from the country's 160 research reactors, 53 of which are in Moscow.

"No one makes any effort to modernize the aging equipment," said Vladimir Kuznetsov, head of the Russian Nuclear Emergency Prevention Center. Many of the research reactors are more than 40 years old.

"We also have a nuclear waste storage facility in Moscow with a capacity equaling the amount of radioactivity released in Chernobyl," he said.

In April 1986, a reactor at the Chernobyl power plant in Ukraine exploded in the world's worst nuclear disaster, spewing a radioactive cloud across Europe.

Kuznetsov, who headed the Moscow branch of the government's nuclear watchdog agency, was fired last year after he accused industry officials of neglecting safety standards.

Among other problems, Kuznetsov said, authorities recently decided to reopen an airport less than a mile from Moscow's Kurchatov Institute, the country's leading nuclear research center, which has several reactors.

"These facilities weren't built to withstand an aircraft falling on them," Kuznetsov said. "That plan is fraught with new disasters."

Of the 29 operating reactors at power plants, 11 are the same type as the one that exploded in Chernobyl. Efforts to modernize them have faltered and workers of 10 lack the training to operate the facilities safely, said Robert Tilles, chairman of the International Chernobyl Fund for Nuclear Safety, another non-government group.

'At the Kursk and Leningrad plants waste storage is filled to 95-96 percent.'

-Vladimir Kuznetsov, Russian nuclear emergency prevention center

Another serious problem is lack of capacity to store used nuclear fuel and other radioactive waste. The situation is especially alarming in the European part of Russia, where the waste storage facilities of three nuclear plants are filled almost to capacity.

"At the Kursk and Leningrad plants, waste storage is filled to 95-96 percent," said Kuznetsov. "In violation of the basic safety regulations, these plants don't even have a place to unload fuel from their reactors in case of emergency."

Vladislav Petrov, a spokesman for the Nuclear Power Ministry, denounced the environmentalists' claims as incompetent and unfounded.

"Don't try to scare us with new Chernobyls," he lashed out at the critics.

Alexei Yablokov, who heads the ecological safety commission of President Boris Yeltsin's Security Council, said the Russian nuclear establishment has grown increasingly secretive and aggressive, hatching plans to resume nuclear tests as well as underground nuclear explosions for industrial purposes.

Nuclear officials have even devised a concept of using underground nuclear blasts to dispose of the vast stockpiles of chemical weapons Russia has to destroy under international agreements, experts said.

Last Czar of Russia identified through DNA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bones unearthed in a shallow grave are beyond doubt those of Czar Nicholas II, DNA experts announced, clearing the way for the ceremonial burial of the Russian emperor executed 77 years ago by a revolutionary firing squad.

But the three-month U.S.-Russian investigation did not deal with another vexing question: Did Nicholas' daughter, Princess Anastasia, somehow escape the Bolsheviks' bullets?

Army Lt. Col. Victor W. Weedn, who runs the DNA laboratory for the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, told a news conference Thursday of the results of the DNA testing.

"A great murder mystery spanning most of the decade is solved," he said.

Agreed Pavel Ivanov, Russia's premier DNA scientist: "Beyond any reasonable doubt, the remains are those of Czar Nicholas and his family."

Weedn said DNA from the bones perfectly matched DNA taken from the skeleton of Nicholas' younger brother, George, who died at age 28 of tuberculosis in 1899. His skeleton was exhumed from a royal crypt last year.

The last of the ruling Romanovs were executed in 1918. The bodies were dumped into a pool of sulfuric acid 20 miles outside of the Ural Mountain city of Yekaterinburg.

The grave was located by a Russian geologist and a Moscow film-maker in 1979. Twelve years later, the bone fragments were unearthed.

'Beyond any reasonable doubt, the remains are those of Czar Nicholas and his family.'
— Ravel Ivanov, leading Russian DNA researcher

Investigators identified them as the remains of the czar, the Czarina Alexandra and three of their five children, as well as their doctor, valet, cook and maid. No trace was found of one daughter — either Anastasia or Marie — and the sickly son, Alexis.

If the DNA results are accepted as conclusive, church and state authorities in Russia will have to decide whether to rebury the remains at Yekaterinburg or in St. Petersburg, the final resting place of Romanov czars and empresses for more than 200 years. And church authorities also will have to decide whether to canonize the royal family as martyrs.

The burial had been scheduled for March in St. Petersburg, but delayed to allow the new investigation.

"We'd like a proper Christian burial," Prince Rostislav Romanov, a London investment banker and grandnephew of Nicholas, told historian Robert Massie, author of a forthcoming book on the royal Romanov family.

The new evidence did not satisfy all skeptics. Emigre Eugene Magerovsky, a retired Russian military intelligence officer, interrupted the news conference to say he was suspicious of how the bones "suddenly" came to light during the Soviet era.

"The Soviets have always been masters of all kinds of shenanigans," he said.

He suggested the investigators may have been given two bones from the same corpse, in which case the DNA would have had to match.

Weedn ruled that out. "What we have here is a lot of evidence saying this is the czar, besides the DNA itself," he said.

Checking the bones against George's became necessary because an earlier British DNA analysis could identify them as Nicholas' with only 98.5 percent certainty.

A mutation in the DNA had prevented a precise match with DNA drawn from two of Nicholas' distant maternal relatives — the Countess Xenia Cheremeteff-Sfiri, of Paris and Athens, and the Duke of Fife, of Scotland.

But the investigation stayed away from the Anastasia mystery. Since the grave yielded bones from only three of the five daughters, left unresolved was whether Anastasia, 17 at the time, or Marie, 19, might have survived, along with Alexis, 13.

Over the years legends have claimed that a bullet-deflecting, diamond-encrusted corset allowed Anastasia to survive the Bolshevik gunfire and that she escaped and lived abroad in anonymity.

Last year, however, a Russian government commission claimed "definite proof" that one of the skeletons was Anastasia's.

Some clouds, mid-90s on tap

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-90s and southeast winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 68, Thursday's high reached 94, compared to the record high for that date of 104 set in 1952. The record low was 56 set in 1944.

STATE

Skies were clear to partly cloudy across North and West Texas on Thursday and mostly cloudy across South Texas. A few showers and thunderstorms were located between Abilene and San Angelo and along the coastal bend.

Localized flooding was reported after two inches of rain fell across Atascosa and McMullen counties.

Temperatures were in the 80s and 90s across the state and at 3 p.m. ranged from a rain-cooled 76 degrees at Victoria and Lufkin to 97 in Greenville.

Winds were light and variable across South Texas and southeasterly from 5 to 10 mph in West Texas.

The forecast for North Texas is for partly cloudy skies Friday and Friday night with a slight chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms in the south and east. Highs from 94 to 101. Lows from 69 to 73. Saturday and Saturday night, it will be partly cloudy and a bit warmer with a high from 95 to 103 and a low from 70 to 76. thunderstorms will prevail across the region for the rest of the evening.

The South Texas forecast is for mostly cloudy skies through Friday with a chance for afternoon and evening showers and thunderstorms. Afternoon highs will reach into the lower to mid 90s. Overnight lows will drop into the lower 70s.

Forecasters said West Texas will be fair to partly cloudy through Saturday with showers and thunderstorms possible across the mountains and far west through Saturday. Highs Friday and Saturday from the mid 80s in the mountains to around 103 along the Big Bend. Lows Friday night mostly in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms lingered in the Plains on Thursday, while the remnants of Tropical Storm Jerry soaked Florida.

An estimated 1,000 people may be out of their homes for more than a month due to the heavy rain and flooding Jerry brought to the southwest Florida town of Bonita Springs.

Up to 16 inches of rain fell when Jerry crossed Florida for the first time last week. Remains of the tropical storm have continued to pelt Central and South Florida, and swollen rivers flowing south flooded low-lying neighborhoods in the Bonita Springs area this week.

On Thursday, 3 to 4 inches of rain fell in an hour in Florida's Pasco County, where witnesses reported a tornado sheared the roofs off two apartment complexes, said Michele Baker, director of the county's emergency office. No one was injured.

While Jerry emerged into the Gulf of Mexico on Thursday and was picking up strength once again, forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami monitored three hurricanes — Luis, Iris and Humberto — as well as Tropical Storm Karen, but none was an immediate threat to land.

In the Midwest, the strongest storms brought moderate to heavy rain and frequent lightning strikes to central and southern Nebraska and northwestern Missouri.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

this country." His wife said that she, too, was happy and plans to study for her citizenship status. Flores works for Ector County public schools.

Earlier in the ceremony, Odessa Mayor Lorraine Perryman, who noted that her mother had immigrated to America from Great Britain following World War II, said her mother's greatest experience "was becoming a citizen of this country, so she could fully participate in the greatest democracy on planet Earth."

In wishing the then-citizenship candidates "prosperity for yourself and your families" in their pursuit of the American dream, Mrs. Perryman said, "We honor you for your courage" in taking on a new experience and "welcome you as full citizens of the United States."

U.S. Magistrate Louis Guirola, who recalled that his parents became naturalized citizens in 1958 after immigrating to the United States from Cuba, said, "I share your pride even as I shared the joy and pride of my own mother and father" in their American citizenship.

"They sought what you seek: to raise their children in a land of freedom, in a land where they can seek out and find opportunity and realize their greatest dreams."

In pursuit of their dreams, Americans ought to guard and protect their freedoms and liberties, Guirola said. He paraphrased Irish-born English politician-writer Edmund Burke: "Always remember, ladies and gentlemen, that the only thing necessary for the triumph of evil and injustice is for the good men and women to sit back and do nothing."

In his talk, U.S. Rep. Henry Bonilla of San Antonio said, "America simply would not exist were it not for immigrants."

Bonilla, who said he grew up in a poor section of San Antonio where "everybody ate beans, rice and flour tortillas," said that individual dreams can be realized through education and hard work.

"Ladies and gentleman, it is that simple. ... Shoot for the stars. Good luck and godspeed."

Furgeson's court reporter, Denver Roden, sang the "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "America."

The Lone Star Brass, featuring trumpeters Mike Santorelli and Betsy Carter, French horn player Julia Pack, trombonist Jeannie Lee and tuba player Bill Nazzaro, performed "You're a Grand Old Flag."

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service Examiner Lali Chavez told the then-candidates for citizenship that America, the world's melting pot, is a composite of peoples of diverse cultures and ethnic backgrounds who have "blended together to make one strong nation" in which human life is respected and accorded dignity.

had been made about an appeal, and made it clear he wanted the case to get to the jury, which has been sequestered since January.

The defense had hoped to wrap up its case this week or early next week by playing the tapes to undermine Fuhrman's credibility. The defense portrays Fuhrman as a racist liar who sought to frame Simpson for the murders of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Legal analysts said Ito's ruling was a blow to the defense.

"Judge Ito has come to the rescue of the prosecution," said defense lawyer Marcia Morrissey. "He has severely limited the jury's ability to determine Fuhrman's credibility."

District Attorney Gil Garcetti praised the ruling.

"While we decry racism, these tapes are an issue for another forum, another time, and not this murder trial," he said.

But assistant prosecutor Christopher Darden, who is black, said admission of any of the comments could hurt the prosecution.

"This is the worst I could have anticipated. It is completely and totally irrelevant. I didn't expect any of it to come in. ... Just hearing one excerpt has an impact on me," Darden said.

The tapes were obtained by the defense from McKinny, a North Carolina professor.

In passages of the tapes played in court Tuesday outside the jury's presence, Fuhrman repeatedly used the word "nigger" and bragged about planting evidence and beating suspects.

Fuhrman's representatives have said the detective exaggerated his comments to make a better story for the screenplay and that he suffered a "mental block" when he denied using the epithet.

The defense had asked Ito to let the black-majority jury see or hear 61 excerpts from the tapes: 41 with the word "nigger," 18 about alleged police misconduct, and two about how Fuhrman felt about being a witness.

In the two examples admitted by Ito, Fuhrman says: "We have no niggers where I grew up." In the other, McKinny asks: "Why do they live in that area?" Fuhrman responds: "That's where niggers live." Both comments were made in April 1985.

In barring the statements about police misconduct, Ito ruled that the remarks were too inflammatory and the defense had failed to prove the incidents actually happened.

The defense had hoped to show that Fuhrman had the propensity to frame suspects and tamper with evidence to support their theory that Fuhrman moved the glove to frame Simpson. Ito flatly rejected that theory.

"This assertion is not supported by the record," Ito wrote. "The underlying assumption requires a leap in both law and logic that is too broad to be made based upon the evidence before the jury."

The judge also threw out statements in which Fuhrman describes himself as a "key witness in the biggest case of the century" and uses a vulgar expression for defense lawyer Robert Shapiro.

The NAACP has asked the Justice Department to investigate Fuhrman's allegations that police officers tampered with evidence in criminal arrests and singled out blacks for arrests without probable cause. The Justice Department said Thursday it was reviewing the request.

The trial, which had been at a virtual standstill while lawyers awaited the ruling, is to resume Friday morning.

In another development Thursday, lawyer Robert Tourtelot said that after hearing the tapes played in court this week, he could no longer represent Fuhrman.

"I was profoundly disgusted and horrified by the contents of Mr. Fuhrman's taped conversations," said Tourtelot, who had represented Fuhrman in a libel lawsuit against The New Yorker magazine and Shapiro.

The suit claims the detective's reputation was damaged by a report that outlined the defense plan to attack Fuhrman as a racist.

But the attorney said he remains convinced Fuhrman didn't tamper with evidence and that the evidence points to Simpson as the killer. Tourtelot remains a lawyer for members of the Goldman family in their wrongful death lawsuit against Simpson.

Another Fuhrman spokesman, private investigator Anthony Pellicano, wouldn't discuss Tourtelot's decision but said he was still with Fuhrman.

If Fuhrman is called back to testify, Pellicano said, he should tell the truth.

"If he gets up there and says, 'Listen, I'm sorry, I'm sorry that this apparently put this major speed bump in the trial. Hate me if you want to. But I didn't lie about planting that glove.'"

Fuhrman's denials about using a racial slur opened him to perjury charges, so he hired criminal attorney Darryl Mounger. When Mounger first appeared in court on Fuhrman's behalf in mid-August, he suggested Fuhrman might claim his Fifth Amendment right and not testify.

Calls have been pouring into DPS headquarters about the new law, Wilson said, prompting the agency to distribute a list of commonly asked questions and answers.

"The agency has been receiving so may telephone calls about this new law that our incoming trunk lines are often jammed," he said.

Bush said he expects some confusion as Texans get used to the law.

"It's going to create some consternation until the rules are finally worked out. As the new laws are implemented, there's going to be a certain period of adjustment," he said.

Legal opinions issued by Attorney General Dan Morales this week cleared up some questions regarding the law.

Morales ruled that transit authorities and businesses may ban guns. He also said counties may prohibit concealed handguns within county parks, but cities cannot do the same within city parks.

One of the law's authors, Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, said Texans "ought to feel very comfortable" with the way the measure has been implemented so far.

"The litmus test comes in January," he said.

Another author, Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, said the law is stringent and includes adequate safeguards.

"It's not just a simple matter of strapping it on Sept. 1 and walking down the street," he said. "We're going to have somebody who has a permit do something stupid with a handgun, but it happens now. When you start training these people, you're going to make things safer not less safe."

Firearms instructors and range operators who plan to offer the training classes said they're ready.

Calvin Tidwell, an instructor at Red's Indoor Range in Austin, begins teaching his first course on Sunday. With 700 people already signed up, Tidwell said he has three classes a week scheduled through the end of the year.

"I'm surprised that I only have 700 names," he said.

Tidwell said no one should expect the classes to run perfectly at first.

"It's going to be like anything else. When you first start teaching a course, you have a few bugs to work out," he said. "(The students) are not going to be trained as well as police officers, but they are going to have very good knowledge of the law."

RAIDS: NATO continues bombing Serb positions aggressive new strategy on Wednesday, flying more than 300 sorties the first day to take out Serb air defenses, artillery and other military targets. Thursday's sorties — more than 130, according to NATO sources — targeted Serb ammunition storage sites in three different areas around Sarajevo, some of which had also been targeted Wednesday.

Sources in Pale, the Bosnian Serb headquarters southeast of Sarajevo, told The Associated Press that an army barracks and arms depot about 10 miles away had been hit late Thursday.

Bosnian Serb radio claimed five civilians were killed Thursday in NATO air attacks north of Sarajevo.

But some aircraft returned to base Thursday without dropping their bombs because they could not see their intended targets, a senior Pentagon official said on condition of anonymity.

The continuing airstrikes seemed to be softening Serb intransigence.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said in a letter to the U.N. chief for former Yugoslavia, Yasushi Akashi, that his forces would not fire artillery at Bosnian "safe areas."

Serbs also appeared to be moving heavy weapons from around Sarajevo. Peacekeepers observed three tanks moving north and out of the 12 1/2-mile heavy weapons exclusion zone the United Nations wants around Sarajevo.

The United Nations established the zone in the winter of 1994 and the Serbs initially withdrew weapons. But they later moved back and the zone effectively collapsed this spring.

A U.N. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Serbs did not say they were doing it to comply with the zone, but called the development "a very welcome sign."

French President Jacques Chirac said he would propose making breaking the Serb siege of Sarajevo a main objective of the NATO raids.

In other good news: Bosnian Serb TV released a videotape Thursday showing alive the five European Union monitors who were feared dead. Bosnian Serb Information Minister Miroslav Toholj said the men had left Serb territory for home, but that could not be independently confirmed.

On Wednesday, Serbs had said the five — three Spaniards, one Irish and one Dutch — were killed during the airstrikes. Toholj said the men had to be protected from angry Serbs after the first NATO attack.

Alliance jets searched Thursday for two French pilots who were shot down Wednesday, but there was no word on their fate.

The Pentagon sent extra planes to reinforce the NATO arsenal arrayed against the Serbs. About 20 planes were being dispatched, including electronic warfare aircraft, fuel tankers, and command and control aircraft.

President Clinton, speaking in Honolulu, praised the new NATO bombing campaign as "the right response to the savagery in Sarajevo."

NATO Secretary-General Willy Claes told CBS News that "there is just one reasonable solution for the Bosnian Serbs, namely, to go back to the table of negotiation and to show willingness to accept a compromise which is equitable and which is viable."

GAS: Haleys file lawsuit against Exxon

(From 1A)

The defendants said Exxon failed to secure the highest possible gas price under a contract with Intratex, and entered into a contract with Intratex in which prices were less than those paid to other producers.

The lawsuit charges that other producers in the same area, with far less experience than the defendant, entered into contracts with Intratex that contained price escalation clauses, favored-nations clauses and price-redemption clauses.

The lawsuit also claims that Exxon breached its duties by failing to amend the contract with a price escalation clause, and that it recklessly concealed other contracts with Intratex.

From O.J. to Algerian women: Topics vary at women's jamboree

HUAIROU, China (AP) — In a tent at the world's largest women's gathering, Marnia Lazreg was describing to a silent, appalled audience the horror of being female in Algeria.

In another, a more boisterous crowd was attending, "O.J. Simpson: Black Women Speak on Black Men, Violence and Interracial Relationships."

They were just two of 300 workshops and seminars Thursday for more than 17,000 women who have come to Huairou, 30 miles from Beijing, to monitor and lobby the U.N. Fourth World Conference on Women.

Whether these exchanges have any influence on the official conference opening Monday remains to be seen. But they are, in a sense, the whole point of the Huairou gathering — a chance for the women of the world to share knowledge, form networks, and swap tales from the gender wars.

A multiracial group of about 100 women crammed an open air pavilion for the O.J. Simpson debate organized by Sisterlove, a women's AIDS support group in Atlanta.

It began with a straw poll, in which most of the women said they believed Simpson was guilty of murdering his ex-wife, Nicole, and Ronald Goldman. Most also said they believed he would be acquitted.

Rene Emily Dubose of Charlotte, N.C., had heard the tape recording of detective Mark Fuhrman's epithets about blacks on television the night before. It didn't change her belief that Simpson is guilty.

"Now that it's verified, it doesn't take away the fact that O.J. murdered that woman," she said to whoops and applause.

The topic soon broadened. A Danish woman protested that in the furor over actor Hugh Grant's indiscretion, too little attention was paid to the hardships of women prostitutes.

In contrast to the scene at Sisterlove's pavilion, the mood was somber at Professor Lazreg's workshop, where 30 listeners were told of the hundreds of women who have been killed by Muslim extremists.

In the campaign to force women to abandon Western ways for Islam, victims have been raped, their throats cut, their bodies scarred, their breasts cut off, said Lazreg. "They are the only women in the Middle East who are being targeted for death simply because they are women."

Lazreg, 52, left her native Algeria in 1968 but visits frequently. She teaches sociology at Hunter College in New York, and runs a support group called the Association for Research on Algerian Women and Cultural Change.

She said the United States is not generous in giving asylum to Algerian women who flee death threats, and appealed to her listeners to write to their legislators.

By the time Lazreg finished her lecture, a dozen women — Danish, French, English — had signed up for her mailing list. The support network she is trying to build had grown a little larger, and her journey to China for the women's conference had been worthwhile.

Back at the Sisterlove event, Dorothy Nairne said she was pleased, especially by the participation of non-American women.

"We came together and opened up a void, a silence that had existed before," she said.

Kazakhstan votes in new constitution

ALMATY, Kazakhstan (AP) — Voters in Kazakhstan overwhelmingly approved a new constitution that gives the president greater powers and is intended to bring stability to the former Soviet republic.

Preliminary results released Thursday by the Central Commission on the Referendum showed 89 percent of Kazakhstan's 9 million eligible voters approved the new constitution, the Interfax news agency said.

Voter turnout was high, with 90 percent of the electorate casting ballots in Wednesday's referendum, the agency reported.

The referendum is the second this year in the central Asian state. In April, President Nursultan Nazarbayev won the nation's approval to have his powers extended until 2000.

Kazakhstan has seen two parliaments disbanded and two constitutions annulled since it became independent after the 1991 Soviet collapse.

The new constitution gives the president the right to dissolve a two-chamber parliament. Legislators can impeach the president by a three-quarters vote at a joint session.

The document introduces private land ownership and upgrades the status of the Russian language in the country. After the Soviet collapse, nationalists tried to downgrade Russian in favor of Kazakh.

Nazarbayev, who took on powers to rule by decree after dissolving parliament this year, said he would approve an election law if the new constitution passed and hoped elections could be held by year's end.

MSG safe for almost everyone, FDA says

The report declares that there is no scientific evidence that any 'free glutamate' causes or exacerbates severe diseases.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although many people say they get sick from MSG, the flavor enhancer in Chinese food, the government concluded Thursday that it is safe for almost everyone and causes only mild, temporary reactions in a few people.

Scientific advisers to the Food and Drug Administration couldn't determine just who would experience these reactions — generally headaches and numbness or tingling — but said some asthma patients may be more susceptible.

The report by the panel also declared that there is no scientific evidence that any "free glutamate," the chemical family to which MSG belongs, causes or exacerbates severe diseases.

Still, the FDA said it would change the way some foods are labeled to include the free glutamate content, so that people who fear MSG and its relatives will know how much they're eating.

"For most people, this (glutamate) is not going to pose a problem," said FDA Commissioner David Kessler. However, he said, "We believe consumers should have information so they can avoid high quantities of glutamate."

The report infuriated some people who say MSG, or monosodium glutamate, makes them severely ill.

"When an individual only reacts when they ingest MSG, it's pretty clear" what is to blame, said Jack Samuels, 60, of Chicago, who says MSG causes his blood pressure to plummet suddenly to life-threatening levels.

He and 29 other MSG-sensitive people sued the FDA earlier this week, seeking to force food manufacturers to label the exact amounts of glutamate and bear a warning about MSG.

MSG is a salt form of the amino acid glutamate that is present in almost every food. MSG is commonly added to Oriental cooking, snack chips and other processed foods to enhance flavors. But "free glutamate" occurs naturally in everything from cheese to tomatoes.

MSG has been blamed for headaches, asthma, seizures, Alzheimer's disease and even death. But in 1980, scientists began declaring that MSG wasn't the culprit after studies showed people who reacted to MSG-laced drinks had the same symptoms when given a placebo.

The FDA hired a scientific panel in 1992 to analyze all MSG research to help it decide how strictly to label foods. Currently, foods must label only added MSG, not natural glutamate, and they don't have to disclose that such ingredients as "hydrolized proteins" harbor hidden MSG.

Thursday, the panel reported that a small number of Americans are MSG sensitive and experience mild, temporary reactions when they eat 3 grams or more of MSG or other free glutamates. Asthmatics whose disease is not controlled by medication may be more vulnerable, the report said.

The typical American eats half a gram of glutamate a day. But eating a number of glutamate-rich foods — a tomato sauce with lots of mushrooms and Parmesan cheese, plus a soy sauce-based salad dressing or a large bowl of soup as an appetizer — can equal 3 grams, Kessler said.

Reactions include headache, a burning or tingling sensation, numbness, palpitations, weakness and, only in asthmatics, spasms of the breathing tubes.

The FDA immediately began writing regulations to require foods high in free glutamate, whether from added MSG or the natural form, to reveal that content on the label. Just which foods and how detailed the labeling will be remains to be decided.

The food industry will oppose the label laws, said David Schmidt of the International Food Information Council. Labeling minute amounts of a compound that doesn't affect most people "would not be practical," he said.

Elizabeth Taylor, husband No. 7 agree to split up

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor says she and husband No. 7 Larry Fortensky "need our own space for a while" and are splitting up, four years after their lavish wedding at Michael Jackson's ranch.

"We have agreed to a trial separation. We both hope this is only temporary," Miss Taylor said in a statement Tuesday.

The 63-year-old violet-eyed actress told syndicated columnist Liz Smith: "I feel sad. I sincerely hope it will work out. ... But Larry and I need to work on things."

Fortensky, 43, was a twice-divorced construction worker when he met Miss Taylor in 1988 at the Betty Ford Clinic, where they being treated for substance abuse.

They were married Oct. 6, 1991, at Jackson's Neverland Ranch in front of such guests as Nancy Reagan. The paparazzi hovered in helicopters.

The breakup announcement came one day after Elizabeth Arden canceled the September launch of Miss Taylor's Black Pearls perfume in a dispute with department stores over sales clerks' commissions.

Miss Taylor, who won Oscars for "Butterfield 8" and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," underwent a second hip replacement surgery two months ago and has been using a cane.

Miss Taylor's previous husbands were hotel heir Conrad "Nicky" Hilton, actor Michael Wilding, Broadway producer Mike Todd, singer Eddie Fisher, Richard Burton — whom she married twice — and Virginia Sen. John Warner.

Judge sets Feb. 12 trial for Kevorkian

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A judge on Thursday set a Feb. 12 trial date for Jack Kevorkian on charges he assisted in the suicides of two terminally ill patients in 1993.

Kevorkian also faces two assisted suicide charges in the 1991 deaths of two women. No trial date has been set in those cases.

Oakland County Circuit Judge Jessica Cooper set the February trial date in the deaths of a man and a woman who died by inhaling carbon monoxide in an apartment Kevorkian leased in suburban Detroit.

Kevorkian's lawyer, Geoffrey Fieger, said the cases will be tried jointly before one jury.

Michigan's assisted suicide law took effect in February 1993 and expired last November. Cooper had dismissed the charges in January 1994, ruling that the law was unconstitutional. But the Michigan Supreme Court upheld the law in December.

On Wednesday, Circuit Judge David F. Breck ruled that Kevorkian should face assisted suicide charges in the 1991 deaths, instead of murder charges.

'Carrying law' will make crime risky

Texans may begin applying today for permits to carry a concealed handgun even though they cannot legally begin carrying such weapons until Jan. 1. While Texas Atty. Gen. Dan Morales was busily ruling that transit authorities and businesses may ban the carrying of guns, polls have shown only a small percentage of Texas residents will even apply for a permit.

In fact, Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, chief author of the carrying law, called Morales' ruling "much ado about nothing," adding that "anyone who has a permit to carry a concealed handgun and goes aboard a metro bus or in a county park has not violated a state law — period. Only if they're told to leave, then they're in violation of trespassing — a misdemeanor offense."

While there may be further fine-tuning of the concealed handgun law, essentially we believe it will help to "even the odds" between the general public and criminals who don't pay any attention to the laws of the state anyway. After the concealed weapons law takes effect Jan. 1, a criminal who attempts to rob , rape, murder or otherwise prey on an innocent person will not know whether that person may be carrying a concealed weapon, or whether some passerby is carrying a concealed weapon. The concealed weapon law will, in effect, make being a criminal a more dangerous occupation.

What made the concealed weapons law appeal to many has been the increase in crime, particularly violent crime. While society has become less willing to dish out the death penalty to criminals, people possess a right to be able to defend themselves against life-threatening assaults. Toward that end, the absence of a law permitting Texans to carry concealed handguns opened the door for criminals to prey on innocent, unarmed people.

The concealed weapons law will make life tougher on the criminal while providing a way for Texans to better protect themselves. That's as it should be.

American GIs come under fire in Korea

SEOUL, South Korea -- Relations are deteriorating between the 37,500 American soldiers stationed here and the people they're paid to protect. And it all started when an American soldier showed some affection for his wife.

Anderson

In recent months, public support for the American forces has dropped 20 percentage points, though a majority of Koreans still favor a U.S. presence here. American officials blame the drop on a biased local media and group of dissidents calling themselves the "headquarters to bring an end to crimes by U.S. military stationed in Korea." The dissidents have made local headlines by reporting every minor infraction by American GIs as a serious "crime."

The group has won extensive media attention here by exposing a crime wave by American troops that includes more than 800 offenses in the past year. What they fail to mention is that almost 65 percent of these "crimes" are parking or traffic violations, and that most of the others are minor incidents such as disorderly conduct.

But the most visible symbol of the frayed relations is the now-infamous "subway incident." American officials here, who spoke with our associate Jan Moller, claim the details of the incident are a far cry from what was reported in the Korean press:

According to these officials, several American soldiers were riding home on the subway after attending a party on the evening of May 19. Some of the officers were apparently singing, which prompted a 28-year-old Korean man, Cho Chong-Guk, to ask them to quiet down -- which the soldiers promptly did.

Chong-Guk later confronted the group again when he spotted one of the soldiers, Sgt. Frank Golinar, "assaulting" a Korean woman in the group. When Golinar explained that the woman he was "assaulting" was actually his Korean-born wife, Chong-Guk reportedly became belligerent.

The ensuing argument eventually spilled out of the train and into a local station, where Chong-Guk and other Koreans began insulting Mrs. Golinar. According to U.S. officials, one of the men slapped Mrs. Golinar and spit in her face.

"At that point, (Sgt. Golinar) did what most Americans would do in the same situation -- he decked him," one American official said.

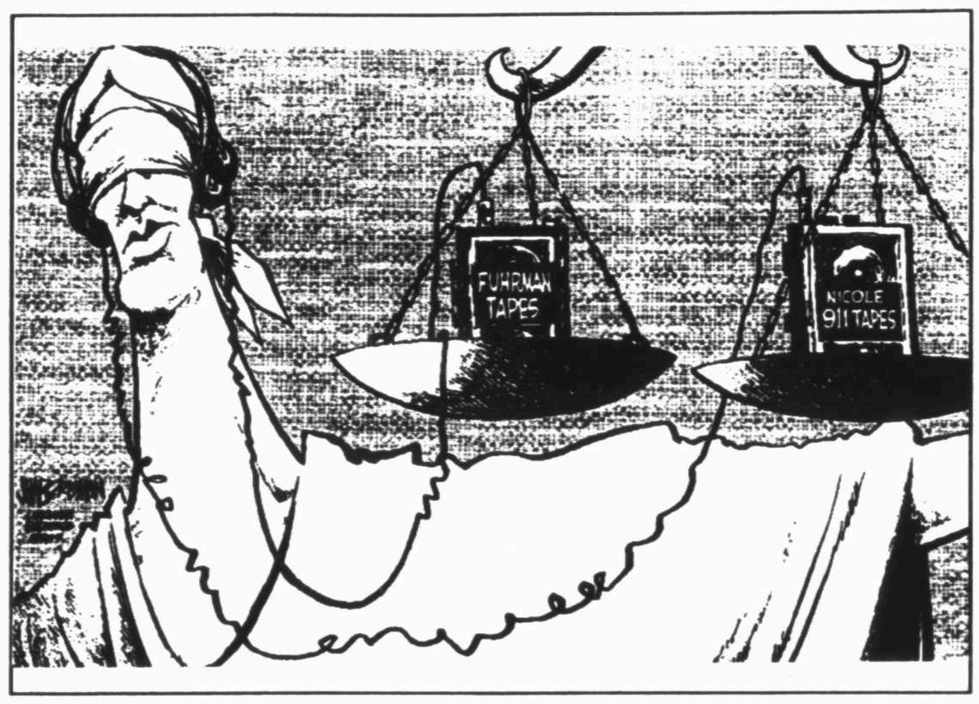

A full-scale brawl quickly ensued, as dozens of onlooking Koreans rushed in to help Chong-Guk, while the American GIs jumped in to help their colleague. Five U.S. servicemen and several Koreans ended up in the Chongbu Police Station, where 300 Koreans later gathered to protest the incident.

While American officials agree that both sides bear some blame for the brawl, what disturbs them most is how the incident has been treated by the Korean media and government officials. While four Americans have been indicted for assault, no Koreans have been charged with any wrongdoing. And while the American servicemen have been vilified in the press, Chong-Guk has been portrayed as an innocent martyr who was beaten for coming to the aid of a Korean woman in distress. Hardly any of the news accounts mentioned that the woman in question is the wife of an American soldier.

"It took us two weeks before the (local) press would even print our side of the story," one exasperated U.S. military official said. Even then, however, the Korean press accounts would lead off with Chong-Guk's version of the story, followed by the U.S. military rebuttal.

The subway incident has also made major news in communist North Korea, where the government news agency looks for any excuse to rail against the "American imperialists" whose military presence has helped maintain an uneasy truce between north and south for nearly half a century.

Government may have fudged on Iraq story

When it comes to oil and the Middle East, the U.S. government tends to lie like a fisherman.

The recent exercise of moving troops and equipment to the Middle East, allegedly because Iraq was going to invade Jordan or Kuwait, is one big hunk of government-made baloney.

Reese

The last thing in the world Iraq would do right now is invade Kuwait or Jordan. And, after all the troop movement and hype, the U.S. secretary of defense finally admitted that there was no evidence of any planned invasion.

Let me quote excepts from Defense Secretary William J. Perry's speech to the Council on Foreign Relations and show you what a bunch of baloney the Clinton administration is peddling.

Perry: "In and around the Persian Gulf lies nearly two-thirds of the world's proven petroleum reserves. The world's access to these reserves is threatened by land and by sea by two radical states -- Iraq and Iran."

First, of course, the oil reserves do not belong to the world, but to the states under whose territory they lie. But more important, what is Iran doing right now? It is selling oil to the world. What did it just do until the Clinton administration interfered? It gave a contract to develop more oil to an American-based company. Now how can a nation selling oil, awarding contracts to develop more oil, be said to "threaten the world's access" to oil?

What, pray tell, has Iraq been trying to do for the last four years? Iraq has been trying to get the U.N. embargo lifted so it can sell oil to the world. How can a country that was once one of the world's largest suppliers of oil and that desperately wants to get back into the world oil market be said to "threaten the world's access" to oil?

The answer is, it doesn't and it never has. Iraq's invasion of Kuwait had nothing whatsoever to do with any scheme to threaten world access to Persian Gulf oil. Kuwait was invaded because Kuwait was (a) stealing Iraqi oil, (b) demanding immediate payment of $12 billion in loans, (c) driving down the world price by exceeding its quota established by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and (d) publicly insulting Iraq.

In the face of propaganda, you have to use common sense. Oil that isn't sold is worthless. There are oil wells capped and large reserves undeveloped all over this planet because there is currently more oil than there is demand for it. What, after all, would Iran and Iraq do if they conceivably could cut off access to Persian Gulf oil? They would be impoverished.

The U.S. policy of dual containment of Iraq and Iran is nothing more than a fraud. The Persian Gulf oil -- except for Iran and Iraq's -- is under control of Western corporations and financial interests. These interests make sure the rulers of these pseudostates (Qatar, Bahrain, etc.) are flush with money while the oil revenue is otherwise invested in Western economies.

Both Iraq and Iran, whatever else you may say about those governments, are adamant that oil revenues should be invested in the region. Iraq feels particularly strongly that the Arab world, most of whose population is impoverished, should be the beneficiary of Arab oil revenues. That is a philosophical difference that has nothing to do with Saddam Hussein personally.

It is not necessary to approve of the governments in the Middle East. Most of them, including the United States' so-called allies, are dictatorships of varying degrees (as indeed most of the world's governments are). It is not even necessary for Americans to take sides in the region's quarrels.

What we Americans ought to be indignant about is our own government using tax dollars and American lives to pursue financial imperialism for an elite and lying to us to cover it up.

If we deal honestly with other nations, we will have few quarrels with anyone. The Clinton administration is playing Americans for suckers and is dealing dishonestly with Iraq and Iran.

ANOTHER VIEW

President Clinton's policy uses no stick on Vietnam

Speak softly and be certain your adversary knows you've thrown away your stick. That could be the motto for U.S. relations with Vietnam.

Just weeks after the Clinton administration formally reopened diplomatic relations with Vietnam, Hanoi took an opportunity to snub this country. A court in Ho Chi Minh City recently sentenced two Americans who also hold Vietnamese citizenship to four-year prison terms. They were charged with trying to overthrow the Vietnamese government. Though specific charges against the two aren't known, their sentences were in line with others handed down against Vietnamese who have merely dared to criticize the communist regime in public.

Washington's response was, well, not very strong. State Department spokesman David Johnson said the action was "certainly unwelcome."

Action planned in response to the arrests? "We've repeatedly voiced our support for peaceful expression of political views and urge the Vietnamese authorities to recognize that right," Johnson said.

Aware of his boss the president's desire to maintain relations with Vietnam no matter how outrageous that regime may be, Johnson probably couldn't say much more. Wouldn't want to go against official policy, would we?

WILLIAM MURCHISON

What do we want government for anyway?

President Clinton is threatening to shut down the federal government if Congress doesn't back away from some of the Republican spending cuts he sees as radical and unfair.

Murchison

Let's take him up on it. He may just have something there.

Not in the sense of who-needs-the-government-anyway; that's too glib. We know we have to have government of some kind, inasmuch as -- borrowing from James Madison -- men are not angels.

The Clintonites, who enjoy asserting that you can't love your country and hate your government, characterize the Republican budget cuts as libertarian frenzy.

Ah, but that ole dog won't hunt. The Clintonites are the frenzied ones. They know the Republicans really, truly have a plan to balance the budget three years earlier than the Clintonites would do it. This necessitates grand gestures like the president's threat to veto Every Republican Attempt to Throw Poor People on the Streets, Starve Undernourished Babies and Reincarnate the Governing Style of Attila the Hun.

Let 'em rave. There's no time like the present to initiate a discussion of the federal government's size, structure and mission.

The conversation we need to be having concerns what we really, truly want government to do for us -- as well as what government is suited to do.

The Founding Fathers envisioned a government of strictly limited powers -- one that would regulate interstate commerce, make war and peace and so forth. The government of the Founding Fathers had no social-welfare component. Its job was to maintain the conditions under which citizens could pursue their own private visions of "social welfare."

Such a government is cheap and barely noticeable. A social-welfare government, by contrast -- the kind we have been building since 1933 -- is expensive and omnipresent. Probably we didn't set out, with malice aforethought, to establish this second kind. But over time, we got it.

What should government do for us? What is its rightful job? The founders, I would suggest, were a lot closer to the mark than the White House speech-writing team.

The great delusion of the past 60 years is that the united power of the people -- as focused through the taxing and spending power of Congress -- makes life better for us all.

The facts don't support such a proposition. Welfare hasn't strengthened and preserved families; the evidence is strong that reliance on government munificence has sapped individual responsibility and torn families apart. Payments to farmers haven't kept the proportion of farm families from dwindling to near-invisibility. Social Security -- intended originally as a supplement to savings -- is going broke; the high rate of taxation necessary to support it discourages savings. Medicare -- as the system's own trustees acknowledge -- likewise faces bankruptcy; the promises made in its name can't be sustained.

How are we better for all this? Did the founders know something we don't know -- or refuse to admit -- namely, that government doesn't so much supplement as replace private endeavor, to the disparagement of liberty and even economic growth?

Let us think on thes things, Mr. Clinton, because we haven't thought on them, really. Our framework for discussion has been budgetary battles, like the ongoing one: so many programs, so many dollars to finance those programs.

This is hardly an invalid way to think about such matters. But we can't duck the essential questions: What is government good at, and what is it bad at? What do we want it for -- and what should it stay away from?

So the government -- on Clinton's behest -- shuts down, save for vital services. It will be for a few days at most. We can go on living. The urgent thing is that we should start talking -- forcefully, clearly, with history in our heads and our eyes fixed on the future. Where we are now is untenable: economically, politically, morally.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Sept. 1, the 244th day of 1995. There are 121 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Fifty years ago, on Sept. 1, 1945, Americans received word of Japan's formal surrender that ended World War II. (Because of the time difference, it was Sept. 2 in Tokyo Bay, where the ceremony took place.)

On this date:

In 1807, former Vice President Aaron Burr was found innocent of treason.

In 1894, a forest fire destroyed Hinckley, Minn., and about a dozen other towns, killing more than 400 people.

In 1905, Alberta and Saskatchewan entered Confederation as the eighth and ninth provinces of Canada.

In 1923, the Japanese cities of Tokyo and Yokohama were devastated by an earthquake that claimed some 150,000 lives.

In 1932, New York City Mayor James J. "Gentleman Jimmy" Walker resigned following charges of graft and corruption in his administration.

In 1939, World War II began as Nazi Germany invaded Poland.

In 1942, a federal judge in Sacramento, Calif., upheld the wartime detention of Japanese-Americans as well as Japanese nationals.

In 1951, the United States, Australia and New Zealand signed a mutual defense pact, the ANZUS treaty.

In 1969, a coup in Libya brought Moammar Gadhafi to power.

In 1972, American Bobby Fischer won the international chess crown in Reykjavik, Iceland, defeating Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union.

Russia's master embalmers persuaded to tackle ancient horseman

MOSCOW (AP) — He's more than 2,000 years old and they call him the Horseman. When Russia's master embalmers get through with the ancient nomad, he'll be ready to hit the road again.

After more than two millennia locked in the frozen earth of Siberia, he now lies in a thick glass tank in Moscow, soaking in a chemical cocktail much like the one that preserves Lenin.

In about a year, scientists hope, the Horseman will be ready to go on display throughout the world with another well-preserved ancient from the same corner of Siberia, an elaborately tattooed woman called the Princess.

The Horseman had been given a ceremonial burial in his fur coat and high leather boots alongside his horse in a log-lined chamber in the Altai Mountains. He also had his ax, quiver and dagger.

For someone who died about 2,500 years ago, the Horseman was in great shape when archaeologists found him last month under more than 7 feet of ice near the Chinese and Mongolian borders.

More than 6,500 feet above sea level, the Ukok Plateau is blanketed by a thick layer of rocks that helps keep the ground frozen year round.

"It's like a natural fridge," said Anatoly Derevyanko, head of the Russian Academy of Science's Institute of Archaeology and Ethnology in Novosibirsk.

The area is rich in ancient burial mounds, and teams from the institute have worked there for the past five summers. In July 1993, the plateau yielded the Princess, its first major mummy. She, too, is estimated to have died some 2,500 years ago.

The Princess was a spectacular find by any standard. But they almost lost her. Her flesh, fair and firm when she was found, began to darken and shrivel when exposed to heat and light.

The desperate archaeologists turned to the Biological Structures Research Institute, which tends Lenin's preserved remains, even though back then the lab's unique embalming process was reserved for communist leaders.

"It was still considered half-secret at the time," recalled Derevyanko. "It wasn't so easy to persuade them to tackle a job so new to them."

It took almost a year, but the embalmers saved the Princess. They reversed some of the thaw damage and even managed to lighten her skin so the ornate tattoos of winged dragons, deer and goats were clearly visible.

The Princess is now on tour, most recently appearing in an exhibit on ancient Asian cultures in Seoul, South Korea. It is likely the Horseman will eventually be exhibited with her, a prospect that moved several tabloids to dub him "The Bodyguard."

For a mummy, the Horseman is in even better shape than the Princess.

Most of the flesh on the exposed parts of his body — his face and hands — is gone, but the rest of the Horseman is still there, right down to his toenails, muscular legs, long braids and elaborate tattoo of a deer draping over his right shoulder.

The Horseman was buried lying on his right side, with his knees bent, on a platform covered in black felt, Derevyanko said. He was dressed in a heavy coat of lambskin-lined marmot fur, trousers and high leather boots.

His horse was buried in a harness richly decorated with figures of griffins and animals carved in wood and covered with gold foil.

The Horseman's internal organs, like those of the Princess, had been removed. Both had been embalmed by a method scientists do not yet understand.

Derevyanko believes the Princess and Horseman were Scythians, an ancient nomadic culture that flourished along the Black Sea but vanished without any written record. The legendary Amazons are said to have been Scythian warrior women.

Russia's master embalmers hope the Horseman and the Princess will attract worldwide attention — and new clients.

After decades in the shadows, they are ready to take on anyone who can afford the very best in a semblance of life after death. But, warns the embalming institute's director, Dr. Yuri Denisov, "it won't be cheap."

Punjab official, 12 others die in bomb blast

CHANDIGARH, India (AP) — Suspected Sikh militants blew up the car of Punjab's highest elected official Thursday, killing him and 12 others and raising fears that the state's separatist movement might revive.

Chief Minister Beant Singh was getting into his bulletproof car outside government headquarters in the capital, Chandigarh, when the explosion went off, Information Secretary S.S. Dawra told The Associated Press.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the blast, but Punjab Police Chief K.P.S. Gill said suspicion fell on two Sikh separatist groups, the Babbar Khalsa and the Khalistan Liberation Force.

Both groups are among the survivors of the dozen militant outfits that were demanding a Sikh homeland called Khalistan, or "Land of the Pure."

The daring attack in a heavily guarded building could embolden Sikh guerrillas to strike again and embarrass Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao's ruling Congress Party ahead of national elections.

The Congress Party had taken crece to Punjab, and Singh, the chief minister, had authorized a widespread crackdown on Sikh militants after he came to power in 1992.

As night fell, police in Punjab and the neighboring state of Haryana and the federal capital, New Delhi, went on alert, setting up road blocks at the state borders and checking all vehicles.

After initial confusion over the death toll, Gill told reporters that 13 people were killed and 16 injured. Most of the dead were the chief minister's armed guards. Singh's car and two other vehicles were ripped apart in the blast.

The bomb, which exploded as an estimated 15,000 people were preparing to leave work, blew out all the windows and spread panic throughout the 10-story building.

Gill also said police were investigating whether some of Singh's security guards were involved in the assassination. The chief minister leaves through a guarded door. His three cars are also guarded by elite commandos.

Gill said the explosion was caused by RDX, a chemical used in the 13 blasts that ripped Bombay in 1993.

Singh, 73, a Congress Party moderate, won the 1992 state legislature elections that ended years of federal rule.

Irish peace negotiators may have answer to end arms impasse

BELFAST — On the first anniversary of the IRA cease-fire, the Irish and British governments said Thursday that they believe they have found a way around the impasse over persuading paramilitary groups in Northern Ireland to consider turning in their weapons.

Patrick Mayhew, the British official in charge of Northern Ireland, and Prime Minister John Bruton of Ireland suggested that civil servants from their governments had succeeded in working out language that would provide for an international commission. That panel would explore how the Irish Republican Army and loyalist paramilitary groups could deplete their hidden arsenals.

Officials here and in Dublin and London expressed confidence that the plan, to be announced next week at a summit meeting outside London of Bruton and British Prime Minister John Major, will push the stalled peace process forward. But the political representatives of the IRA were less optimistic.

To mark the cease-fire anniversary, the republican leadership held a press conference at the Conway Mill complex in West Belfast, and accused the British of jeopardizing the peace process by putting unrealistic demands on the IRA to surrender its weapons unilaterally.

Martin McGuinness, Sinn Fein's negotiator with the British, said that while Sinn Fein would not rule out cooperating with an international panel on arms, "Sinn Fein will have nothing to do with the back-door surrender of IRA weapons."

McGuinness and other republican leaders stressed that weapons should be addressed as part of a wider discussion of issues, including the early release of prisoners and loosening of the security apparatus.

Sinn Fein officials say the British government is trying to humiliate the IRA by portraying the turning in of weapons as a surrender. Sinn Fein also says decommissioning should be part of all-party talks on the future of Northern Ireland. The British, backed by the Unionists who make up about 60 percent of the population in Northern Ireland, say the representatives of paramilitary groups cannot take part in talks until weapons are being surrendered.

Republicans staged protests across Northern Ireland Thursday, demanding all-party talks immediately. But the process hinted at by Mayhew and Bruton suggests a much slower pace, beginning first with talks among the governments and the various political parties in Northern Ireland. It is unlikely, however, that most Unionist parties would agree to sit down with a representative of the Irish government at this time.

Amid all the political machinations of the anniversary, a more somber reminder of the stakes was displayed on a screen above Belfast's Shaftesbury Square. The names of the 3,173 people whose deaths have been attributed to the conflict were flashed throughout the day.

Irish and British officials have been vague in explaining how the international commission would encourage the paramilitary groups to turn in weapons. The former Senate majority leader, George Mitchell of Maine, who has been President Clinton's special envoy for promoting economic investment in Ireland, has been mentioned as a possible head of the commission. While US officials here and in Dublin described the prospect of Mitchell heading the commission as speculation, they also would not rule it out.

Rate deregulation

Cap Rock Electric will hold a press conference today to announce the deregulation of rate-making for rural electric cooperatives in Texas. Midland-based Cap Rock, which serves 25,000 customers in 17 counties in West Texas, is expected to be the first cooperative in the state to deregulate. To mark the event, Cap Rock will stage a chain-cutting ceremony, at 11 a.m. today, at its Phillips sub-station located behind Pecan Grove Mobil Home Park at Loop 250 and Highway 80, east of Midland.

Another try

AUSTIN — Gov. George W. Bush is going to take another shot at dove hunting. But he hopes it won't be a repeat of last year's misadventure, when he accidentally brought down an out-of-season killdee instead of a dove. "I'm not going to kill a killdee this year," he laughed. That 20-gauge mistake cost him a $130 fine and some embarrassing publicity during his campaign against then-Democratic Gov. Ann Richards. "It was a humiliating experience," Bush said Thursday while discussing his plans to go hunting on Sunday, a year after the killdee killing. It was, he said, "The highest fine I've ever paid." Killdee are small birds in the plover family, also known as killdeer. Bush took the mistake in good humor, frequently making jokes about the errant shot. Several times during the campaign he told audiences, "It's a good thing I wasn't deer hunting. I might have shot a cow." Bush said he would be hunting on a ranch belonging to state Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo.

Sex offender names become public

New amendment in effect today allows release of information

■ Police Department to delay dissemination of identities of those in Midland.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

The names of registered, convicted sex offenders became public record in Texas today, according to an amendment passed by the Texas Legislature.

The amendment, made to the Texas Sex Offenders Registration Program, allows law-enforcement officials to release the names of registered sex offenders to the community in which the criminals live.

"This is a good, positive change," said Midland police Sgt. David Garcia. "People have the right to know about these sex offenders for their protection and for their children's protection."

Since September 1993, convicted sex offenders have been required to register with law-enforcement agencies in the community in which they live. However, officials could not release the names of the criminals to schools, businesses or the community at large.

"You would have 17-year-olds who were convicted sex offenders and still going to school," Garcia said. "And school officials were not allowed to know."

Federal judge blocks law that would limit access to police accident reports

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge Thursday temporarily blocked implementation of a new state law that restricts access to police accident reports.

Responding to a lawsuit filed by a group of attorneys and chiropractors, U.S. District Judge Kenneth Hoyt issued a temporary restraining order and set a Sept. 8 preliminary injunction hearing.

The lawsuit against the state of Texas and Attorney General Dan Morales also names 30 chiefs of police — including Midland Police Chief Richard Czech and Odessa Police Chief James Jenkins — who would be entrusted with executing the law beginning today.

"It was nothing personal against the police chiefs, from what I understand," said Midland police Sgt. David Garcia. "It was just a blanket case.

"Of course, we'll comply with the order, and it will be business as usual

State Comptroller John Sharp on Thursday demonstrates the Lone Star card, a debit-type card that will soon replace food stamps and welfare checks.

Sharp touts new card as alternate to food stamps

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A debit-type card — soon to replace food stamps and welfare checks in Midland/Odessa — was demonstrated by State Comptroller John Sharp at a south Odessa grocery store Thursday.

"After Oct. 1 food stamps will be a thing of the past" in Midland and Odessa, Sharp said during a news conference at Everybody's Fiesta Foods Store.

The new electronic system has been implemented in 122 counties. Another 79 counties — including Midland and Ector counties — will be added in coming weeks. The entire state should be on-line by the end of the year.

The cards will replace food stamps and checks issued though Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC).

Not only will the "Lone Star" cards facilitate use by recipients and merchants, it will reduce fraud and cut government costs, officials said.

When the Lone Star cards were first introduced in February in Houston, food sales increased from $29.1 million in one month to $33.4 million the next month. A few months later when the system went to Dallas, food sales jumped from $64.4 million one month to $70.1 million the next.

"The reason that occurs is this card doesn't work on a downtown Houston street corner for crack cocaine," Sharp said.

Another safety feature inherent in the card is it hinders unauthorized use if lost or stolen. Users must have a personal identification number to use the card. And a lost or stolen card can be canceled like a credit card and merchants alerted.

The practicality of the card system will also be a money saver through the elimination of paper use, printing, distribution and handling of food stamps, officials said. Sharp estimated an annual savings to Texas of as much as $14 million and another $80 million savings to the federal government.

Jay Lawrence — part-owner of Everybody's Fiesta Foods, which receives about $29,000 in food stamps weekly — said the card system will be

Prosecutors ask court to rethink verdict reversal for Henderson

■ 21-year-old Odessan was convicted of murder in November 1993 death of Angela Perkins-Belcher.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A Texas court has overturned the murder conviction of Odessan Sherry Henderson, 21, and Midland prosecutors are asking the court to reconsider its decision.

Ms. Henderson, who was found guilty of shooting Angela Perkins-Belcher at the Zodiac II Club on Nov. 27, 1993, was sentenced to 50 years following her August 1994 trial.

Ms. Henderson's appeal was filed by her attorney, Abner Burnett of Odessa, and Larry Zinn of San Antonio. They were not available for comment on Thursday.

Even though the conviction was overturned, Ms. Henderson will remain incarcerated in the state penitentiary, said Eric Kalenac, a prosecutor with the Midland District Attorney's office. "She stays in jail, pending the outcome...," he said.

Kalenac, along with co-council Brian Carney, prosecuted Ms. Henderson. Kalenac has filed a motion asking the court to reconsider its decision in the case, he said.

A decision is expected on that motion in about two weeks. Failing that, Kalenac then plans to appeal the decision — to overturn the conviction — to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

If that motion fails, the case will be remanded for a new trial, and Midland prosecutors will have no choice but to retry.

Testimony in the trial indicated that the shooting happened after an altercation in the club left Ms. Henderson's sister, Monique Henderson, with a bloody head wound.

Witnesses testified that Ms. Henderson retrieved a revolver from her car and went back to the club to find that her wounded sister was surrounded by a

Petroleum Museum names new director

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

After an extensive national search, Jane Phares, a longtime employee of the Petroleum Museum, on Thursday was named museum director.

Ms. Phares has been with the Petroleum Museum since 1986 and has served in a number of capacities including volunteer, assistant educator, director of education, director of programs and interim director.

In addition to her 8 1/2 years at the museum, she brings to the position decades of experience in the petroleum industry as the wife of a geologist. Thirteen of those years were spent overseas in Libya, Norway and Egypt, where her husband, Rod, worked for Mobil.

"I think I know the language, equipment and issues of the oil industry very well," said Ms. Phares, who has both studied and taught geology. "I feel I am thoroughly indoctrinated in the oil business after living with a geologist for 30 years."

'I think I know the language, equipment and issues of the oil industry very well. I feel I am thoroughly indoctrinated in the oil business after living with a geologist for 30 years.'

— Jane Phares, new director

She said the museum had been a part of her life for almost a decade and she was very happy to be able to continue working with people she liked at a place she liked.

Two men won't face murder charges after grand jury declines indictments

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A Midland County grand jury deliberated into the evening Wednesday before returning "no bills" on a man who reportedly killed his sister's assailant and a man who was involved in the stabbing death of a young man the day after his birthday.

The grand jury chose not to indict Scott Richardson, 22, and Jason Neil McClelland, 19, according to a district attorney's spokesman.

Richardson was arrested on murder charges the day after his sister and her estranged boyfriend were killed during a violent argument.

Richardson was involved in a fatal argument July 26 between his sister, 19-year-old Stefanie Richardson, and her estranged boyfriend, 20-year-old Billy John Heath Richardson.

Sgt. David Garcia said police found Ms. Richardson and Billy Richardson at Ms. Richardson's parents' residence at 3612 Jordan Ave. at about 7:15 p.m. They later located Scott Richardson and his wife at a neighbor's home.

Ms. Richardson and her sister-in-law were at the home when Billy Richardson showed up and broke down the door. During the confrontation, the sister-in-law ran into the front yard and called her husband and police on a cellular phone, police said.

Scott Richardson arrived a few minutes later and discovered Billy Richardson had shot Ms. Richardson in the face with a shotgun. Scott Richardson then stabbed Billy Richardson in the back with a Bowie knife, Garcia said.

Garcia said Scott Richardson would not talk to police following the altercation, so

Tax overhaul needs more than just his support, Bush says

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush said Thursday that he remains eager to overhaul the state's tax system to lower property taxes. But he said it's bigger than a one-man job.

Legislative leaders, lawmakers and taxpayers must get behind the idea, too, Bush said.

"I caution everybody. This is not going to move forward unless there's what I would refer to as collective will ... strong sentiments not only in the executive branch but in the legislative branch as well to address the problem," he said.

"This will succeed or fail depending upon the will of Texans. If Texans feel like their property taxes are choking them, I believe we can get something done."

The Republican governor scoffed at what he called Capitol rumors that he may be moving to abandon the tax reform issue.

"I'm very much interested in it. Please ignore Austin speculation and rumors that all of a sudden, the governor's not interested," Bush said.

"The reason I'm interested is because Texas is interested. The reason Texans are interested is because a lot of people feel like their property taxes are too high."

Bush frequently talks about spending "political capital" to achieve his goals. But despite high popularity ratings and good reviews about his performance during the 1995 Legislature, Bush said his desire alone can't bring changes in the tax system.

"If enough people agree, yes I've got enough (capital) to spend. But I don't have enough to do it on my own. It's not a one-man job."

Bush first raised the idea of tax reform in late May, after the Legislature had passed all four of his priorities: more local control for schools, tougher juvenile justice laws, welfare reform and lawsuit reform.

But taxes are the touchiest of political subjects.

Blue-ribbon committees have studied the Texas tax system, lawmakers have tinkered with it, rates have been raised and tax bases broadened. But state government continues to rely heavily on the sales tax, while schools and local governments lean on property taxes.

Texas remains one of the few states without a personal income tax, and Bush said that levy won't even come up for discussion.

Protesters rally against judge's order

AMARILLO (AP) — Several dozen people protested Thursday outside the courthouse where a judge ordered a Hispanic woman to speak English to her daughter.

Speakers at the rally called state District Judge Sam Kiser's order racist and reason for him to leave the bench.

"He's violated my human rights, my civil rights, every right," Marta Laureano said. "He's abusing his authority as a judge."

Kiser on Aug. 16 ordered Ms. Laureano to begin speaking English along with Spanish to her 5-year-old daughter. Ms. Laureano is a Mexican native and fluent in both languages.

The language issue came up during a child-custody hearing in which Kiser said Ms. Laureano was abusing the child and condemning her to ignorance by speaking only Spanish to her.

DECLINES: Grand jury returns 'no bills' for two men

(From 1B)

"our only recourse was to arrest Scott and charge him with murder since he had already admitted to us that he stabbed Billy Richardson."

Police said the deaths were the culmination of ongoing problems between the couple. Ms. Richardson had been living with Billy Richardson, but moved back into her parents' home. Police said Billy Richardson had harassed Ms. Richardson at her parents' home several days before the fatal attack.

Ms. Richardson notified police of the problems about 12:30 p.m. on the day she was killed. Later that afternoon, Ms. Richardson went to the police station to have photographs taken of bruises she said Billy Richardson had inflicted on her, Garcia said.

"Scott and his wife had been staying at the residence with his sister after what had happened over the weekend," Garcia said. "Her parents were in Colorado and had just headed back (the day she was killed) after hearing about her problems over the weekend. Her brother and sister-in-law were trying to give her a little protection."

Midland County Assistant District Attorney Robin Sams presented the case to the grand jury, which declined to issue an indictment.

Ms. Sams said she presented all the evidence including photos, offense reports and testimony from a police detective who gave details of the investigation.

"The evidence does tend to indicate that his action was in self-defense or in the defense of a third person," Ms. Sams said.

Ms. Sams also presented the murder charge on McClelland, whom the grand jury also declined to indict.

McClelland had been charged with murder in the stabbing death of James Irvin "Jip" Poole, 18. Also charged in that murder is Tommy John Rains, 17. His case was not presented Wednesday, but will be presented next week, Ms. Sams said.

Poole died from a single stab wound to the chest that penetrated his heart and lung, officials said. He was stabbed at 1010 S. County Road 1233 — the roadway leading to Midland Memorial Rehabilitation Hospital off Loop 250 — about 2 a.m. July 28.

Poole, a friend, McClelland and Rains met at the location with the intention of continuing a fight that began earlier in the day, police said.

Rains is reportedly the person who stabbed Poole with a hunting knife, officials said.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre said McClelland was not involved in the stabbing, but was at the site to have a fist-fight.

The cases heard Wednesday were the first heard for the 385th District Court.

more convenient for customers and cut costs associated with handling food stamps. "When we cut costs, that's the name of the game," he said.

Texas is the first major state to implement such a system; Maryland has also established a similar program, officials said.

Sharp — who proposed the Lone Star card in 1991 — said the electronic system utilized by the lottery sparked the idea. "This is pretty much the same way we ran the lottery," he said.

One obstacle in convincing the federal government to allow the card system came from opposing lobbyists who profited from the food stamp system, Sharp said.

Midlanders and Odessans will begin using the cards Oct. 1, and emergency food stamps recipients may begin using cards by Sept. 22. Recipients will be required to call a toll-free number to activate their cards.

Interested retailers who haven't made arrangements for the electronic equipment to accept the cards can contact Transactive Corp, the Austin-based operator of the Lone Star card, at 1-800-418-8000.

PUBLIC: Police to delay release of names of offenders in Midland

today, the Midland Police Department will not immediately begin releasing the names of the 60-70 sex offenders currently registered in Midland.

"We are going to release the information; however, we are seeking legal counsel on what the best way is to approach that," Garcia said. "Our attorneys will probably go to the attorney general to get an official word on it. We have to take into consideration that these people also have certain rights and we can't breach those rights."

Garcia said once the department has determined in what way the information can be released, the names will be given to those concerned.

"Citizens have a right to know if sex offenders are living in their neighborhoods," he said. "Schools have the right to know if these people are attending class."

(From 1B)

until we hear otherwise," Garcia said.

"My clients are pleased, but this is the first step, obviously," Peter Kennedy, the Austin attorney who filed the lawsuit, said Thursday. "They stood to lose business and clients as of (today). And of course documents that have traditionally been public won't become secret (today), which is what the law would have the effect of doing."

The Legislature's purpose in passing the law was to prohibit direct mail advertising, he said. The law, however, has the effect of keeping professionals from communicating with prospective clients through the mail, he said.

The reports previously were considered public information under the state's open records law.

House Bill 391, passed by the Legislature earlier this year, restricts access to accident reports unless the seeker can provide two of three categories of information to the Department of Public Safety or local police. The categories are the date of the accident, the full name of one of the people involved in the accident or the specific location of the accident.

REVERSAL: Prosecutors want court to reconsider ruling group of shouting people.

The jury found that Ms. Henderson fired one fatal round into Ms. Perkins-Belcher's chest.

The conviction was overturned, however, because certain testimony was ruled inadmissible and was never presented to the jury.

Facts of the ongoing terror campaign waged against Ms. Henderson by her ex-husband was heard outside of the presence of the jury before being ruled inadmissible.

Testimony indicated that both Ms. Henderson and her sister had been injured on numerous occasions by the ex-husband and that Ms. Henderson had purchased the handgun only four days earlier as protection against him.

Ms. Henderson testified that her first thought — when she heard that her sister had been beaten — was that it was her ex-husband who had committed the beating.

Burnett argued that if the jury could have heard this evidence, they might have found her guilty of a lesser offense than murder, or even found her innocent.

When district Judge John Hyde made the original ruling on this evidence, he sided with Carney and Kalenac, who maintained that the problems with the ex-husband were immaterial since he was not even at the club on the night of the shooting.

In closing arguments, Carney told jurors that Ms. Henderson's actions were in no way justified by the circumstances surrounding the shooting.

"You can't bring a gun to a fist-fight — that is not self-defense," he said during the trial.

rience because of her knowledge of the oil industry and her experience at the Petroleum Museum.

Members of the search committee were Nancy Anguish, Joan Baskin, Arthur Dinsmoor, Arlen Edgar, Bob Leibrock, Marsha Sheffield and Bill Snyder.

Leibrock, president of the board of trustees, said that under Ms. Phares' leadership the museum will now move forward with plans to hire a director of education and programs and will celebrate its 20th anniversary on Sept. 13. A special exhibit of the Tom Lovell collection, which includes working drawings, will open on that day.

"Our museum is the foremost source of petroleum industry history," Ms. Phares said. "It is the largest facility dedicated to the oil and gas story, and we want to make that a reality for the nation."

WORK, THE KEY TO HAPPINESS

Hope you've got a wonderful time planned for Labor Day 1995. This holiday is a bit different than most. It's in honor of those whose hard work and initiative made this country great. God said in Thessalonians 3:10 "if anyone will not work, neither shall he eat."

Some years ago the National Institute of Mental Health built a miniature "garden of Eden" for mice. Nothing was spared. Every convenience. Much food. Absolutely no work. They played, ate, and multiplied. What happened? Growth rate created major problems. Too many mice, and not enough for all. Sound familiar? Tests show that mice became lazy, hungry, frustrated, angry, even cannibalistic.

What's the answer? Honest, hard work that brings personal blessings. When you take it away, chaos comes. Solomon in Ecclesiastes 10:18 says, "If a man is lazy, the rafters sag; if his hands are idle, the house leaks." The joy of work brings a sense of self-worth and self-respect to all of us. Solomon concludes, "so I saw that there is nothing better for a man than to enjoy his work, because that is his lot." Ecclesiastes 3:22 Have a great Labor Day!

THE UNITED WAY OF MIDLAND FIRE REPORT

We have salvaged everything we could from our building. One office was completely gutted, two were severely damaged by heat, and the rest were heavily damaged by smoke. Our files will be completely restored by Friday afternoon thanks to ARMA, dozens of volunteers, and Parker and Parsley Petroleum Company. We now have duplicating and fax machines. We now have donated office furnishings and supplies enough to get us through the campaign.

As the weeks progress, we will take this opportunity to thank the numerous people who have so generously helped us; this list will change daily.

We would like to thank the following individuals and companies for their donations and their support.

- Texas Instruments for loaned computers, secretarial work, and staff hours for computer installation;
- Automated Financial Systems (J.C. Small) for computer recovery work;
- CMC Business Systems for copier, office supplies, and fax machine (Patrick Holeva, David Gonzalez, Danny Holeva and staff);
- Lynch, Chappell, and Alsup law firm (Calvin, James and Staff) for office supplies;
- Christian Church of Midland (Shurley Thigpen) for office supplies;
- Parker and Parsley Petroleum Company for record recovery and temporary record storage;
- ARMA for record recovery training and supervision;
- Bosworth (Jim Stovall, Jorgy Martin, Marty Pearcy, Travis Stovall, Marty Meurer, and Juan Terrazas) for partitions, and staff power in moving our office.
- Energas (Mike Clark, Billy McLaughlin, Ruben Ramos, Dennis Montgomery, and Brad Robbins) for staff power in moving our office;
- Copy Craft (Matt Bargsley, Ken and Leddy Craft) for donated supplies;
- Franklin Quest for donated calendars/planners;
- IMS Software for software reconfiguration;
- First Presbyterian Church (Rev. Jerry Hilton, Drew Anderson) for use of their computer system to make an emergency mail out deadline.
- IBM (Becky Moorehead, David Moorehead) for furniture and computer recovery.
- Herb Hall Company (David Hall) for computer recovery;
- Windecker Computers (Kerry Mansour) for computer recovery.

Our current needs are still computers (486 PC) and volunteer staff power in order for us to be fully up to speed by the end of next week.

If you can volunteer, please contact Carl Zapora at 682-4358

Police seize rifle from teacher who claims government out to get him

DONNA (AP) — Police say they've seized a sawed-off semi-automatic rifle from a high school chemistry teacher who claimed that high-level government officials were out to get him.

"It sounds like maybe the gentleman is living in a fantasy world," said police Cpl. Chris Benavides, who's heading the investigation.

> 'It sounds like maybe the gentleman is living in a fantasy world.'
> — Cpl. Chris Benavides, of Donna police

Security guards at Donna High School found the modified M-1 Garand in Karl Wudtke's car during a routine search Wednesday by a drug- and firearms-sniffing dog, Benavides said.

Wudtke, who told authorities that he carried the gun for protection, was suspended indefinitely Thursday by Superintendent Frank Gonzales.

Wudtke could not immediately be reached for comment.

Wudtke did not threaten anyone with the weapon. The gun had been modified with a pistol grip and its barrel was illegally sawed down to only 11 inches, Benavides said.

Police found two clips with .30-caliber ammunition in the car; neither clip was loaded into the gun.

Wudtke told officers that high-level officials in the U.S. government and the states of Montana and Wisconsin were after him to prevent disclosure of 20 years of research that he has done.

"He never mentioned any names, but he kept saying that these were people who go into the White House at any time and they can call Air Force One and say, 'Take me here and take me there,'" Benavides said.

Air Force One is the specially equipped Boeing 747 assigned to carry the president of the United States.

Police said Wudtke, 52, also stated that "they" had been following him in a stealth bomber.

He was charged with possession of a prohibited weapon and carrying of a weapon in a prohibited place, then released on $5,000 bond. Benavides said the Police Department will continue investigating him.

"He doesn't have a police record," Gonzales said. "I took action to suspend him until I complete my investigation."

Wudtke has worked in Donna for only three weeks.

The gun was detected by Cajun Trigger, a dog that Gonzales tried to sell last year.

Border agency OKs environmental project guidelines

EL PASO (AP) — With less than a month to go before it's slated to certify its first cleanup project, the border's newest environmental agency appeared far from ready to launch its work Thursday.

A months-long effort to finalize the Border Environment Cooperation Commission's criteria for recommending infrastructure projects for binational funding spilled over into the guideline ratification meeting. A vote was delayed when a BECC commissioner announced her intentions to oppose the plan.

No one seemed overly concerned, however.

"It's a dynamic process," Luis Raul Dominguez, the international agency's deputy general manager, said after the plan finally was approved unanimously.

BECC commissioners and staff members said they expect debate and even some level of controversy as they build up an agency that only existed on paper until just a few months ago.

The BECC was created in 1993 by the United States and Mexico under a side agreement to the North American Free Trade Agreement to address concerns that heightened trade will increase the border's environmental degradation.

The agency is intended to solicit, evaluate and assist in the development of environmental projects — primarily those dealing with water, wastewater treatment and solid waste management— by border communities, agencies and businesses. The best will be recommended for funding from the binational North American Development Bank (NADBank) or other sources.

The first projects are expected to be approved in late September during a meeting in Brownsville, but first the BECC had to ratify criteria shaped by more than two months of public debate.

BECC commissioners entered Thursday's public meeting ready to vote on the guidelines, which place an emphasis on projects that address critical health and environmental needs.

But Commissioner Lynda Taylor, an environmental activist from Albuquerque, stood firm against the latest draft, which left out a sustainable development ranking system sought by many environmental groups.

Sustainable development is a term for projects that have a high regard for environmental protection and for the impact they will have on future generations.

Original drafts of BECC guidelines included a ranking system in which projects with greater sustainable development efforts were given higher priority.

"It would have allowed the public to see why one project was favored over another," said Cyrus Reed of the Texas Center for Policy Studies, an environmental think-tank and self-appointed BECC watchdog.

But Dominguez said that provision was removed because BECC officials felt that projects given lower rankings would be at a disadvantage when it came time to seek funding, be it from NADBank or some other agency.

Commissioners finally reached a compromise where there would be no rankings, but sustainable development projects would receive special recognition, or a "gold star," as BECC Chairman Jorge Bustamante put it.

"I think on the rating issue, it (the compromise) achieves the goal," said Ms. Taylor, who believes special recognition will encourage the creation of sustainable projects.

Prices inch up

NEW YORK — Energy futures prices finished mixed on Thursday in a session dominated by the deadline to trade September delivery contracts for gasoline and heating oil.

The expiration of the contracts on the New York Mercantile Exchange sparked wide price swings as dealers sought to nullify earlier positions before the end of the day.

The increase pulled crude oil prices up as well. October West Texas Intermediate finished 5 cents per barrel higher at $17.84 after trading in a 26-cent range.

Natural gas prices finished higher with October contracts settling at $1.748 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 4.6 cents.

Midland resident Senaida Gomez won a 42-inch Sony Big Screen television set in the Sonic Drive-In and Coca-Cola-sponsored Batter Up game. She purchased her winning game piece from the Sonic Drive-in on Ranidn Highway in Midland.

ATMs to go

DALLAS — NationsBank said Thursday it will put an automatic teller machine in each of the 661 Stop-N-Go convenience stores in Texas.

The machines will be installed beginning in December in Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio. All are scheduled to be operating by next June, NationsBank said.

Dollar skids

NEW YORK — The dollar skidded Thursday after a surprise selloff in Asia as the trading day began.

There was no recovery as the day progressed and investors cashed in on earlier gains by selling dollars and waiting for a report Friday on the U.S. unemployment rate.

In late New York trading, the dollar fetched 97.34 Japanese yen, down sharply from 99.01 yen late Wednesday. The dollar also fell to 1.4677 German marks in New York from 1.4766 marks.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday: 1.2020 Swiss francs, down from 1.2122; 5.0430 French francs, down from 5.0670; 1,625 Italian lire, barely up from 1,624; and 1.3439 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3405.

The dollar fell against the British pound, with sterling quoted at $1.5505, up from $1.5475.

Markets higher

NEW YORK — Stocks edged higher in quiet trading Thursday.

But the gains lacked conviction, as many market participants were absent ahead of Monday's Labor Day holiday or waiting for Friday's report on August job creation and unemployment.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 5.99 to 4,610.56. Advancing issues led decliners by more than 4 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange, but a large number of issues were unchanged from Wednesday's closing prices.

Volume was 300.9 million shares on the Big Board, down from 329.78 million on Wednesday.

Broad-market indexes finished higher. The NYSE's composite index rose 0.60 to 302.00. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 0.96 to 561.88.

The Nasdaq composite index climbed 7.50 to 1,020.11, while the American Stock Exchange's market value index added 0.45 to 534.46.

Industry leaders headline conference

By John Paul Pitts
Business/oil editor

More than 170 participiants from around the basin and Texas were on hand for the Petroleum Asset Managers Conference, sponsored by Petroleum Strategies Inc., to hear industry leaders give words of wisdom on oil and gas acquisitions and divestitures.

Robert Watson, President of Abraxas Petroleum Co., the leadoff speaker, explained how to get the right mix of assets, beat out the competition and find value in properties.

Tony Best, president of Permian Arco, explained how companies can grow stronger through divestiture, and Scott Sheffield, chairman/president and CEO of Parker & Parsley, spoke on the challenges of rapid growth.

Break-out sessions dominated most of the afternoon; Randall and Dewey Inc. gave a session on trends in acquisitions, providing such information as who is buying and selling, where the money is coming from, sales packaging techniques and asset pricing.

Dinner speaker for the conference was Clayton Williams, who explained that relationships outlive deals and reminesed about friendships that had helped him in his business over the years.

Best said it was tough explaining to employees how selling properties would make for a better company, but that is exactly what had happened to Arco.

He said Arco had developed its present divestiture strategy in 1992, after a period of having little or no strategy.

He said Arco graded its properties in the Permian Basin into four categories and found that most of the company value was in three categories the company wanted to maintain: the anchor, or core fields, accounted for 75 percent of Arco value; premium fields, 12 percent; and harvest field, 10 percent. Divest fields, to be sold, accounted for only 5 percent of the company value.

"I believe our divestiture program helped Arco and some independents."

He said that once the fields were graded life plans were developed for each field that detailed plans about how they would be developed.

After one of the greatest divestitures in the history of the company, Best said Arco was still able to replace 75 percent of production without acquisitions.

Lessons learned, he noted, included the fact that one had to have discipline to make tough decisions; make survival decisions and develop an external focus.

"You can't afford the luxury of pride, or say this is how we have always done it. It's better to change yourself than have someone do it for you."

Sheffield explained that building Parker & Parsley from a company with 32 million barrels in reserves and a handful of employees, to one of the top 10 independents in the nation with 1.2 billion in reserves and 2,500 employees had not been without pitfalls.

He explained that the sudden growth of the company had caused the company G&A to increase to $37 million, had left the company with high-cost operated properties without core properties and had forced some readjustment.

He said the company had now made the adjustments by selling $200 million in properties, reducing employees to 1,100 and reducing G&A to $27 million, and bringing bank debt from $700 million to $200 million.

Sheffield said there were advantages and disadvantages to operating as a public company.

"It provides money for growth, but sometimes shareholders force you into makng short term decisions, when long term would be better. Also, everyone is watching you — from Wall Street on, and the stockholders change about every six months."

Williams gave a parcel of homespun advice to the dinner crowd.

"Put all your eggs in one basket — and watch that basket."

"Do business with good people."

He said the Boy Scout oath is about as good a code as one could find for doing business.

"Corporations change, policy changes, but people don't," Williams said.He noted that his employees became his best friends and his family. "The foundation for a good relationship is trust — two way trust."

He recalled with humor one bit of advice he received in 1986, when a friend told him: "Claytie, even if oil goes to $22 a barrel, we are still going to be OK."

Enron offers to restructure India project

By N.Y. Times News Service

BOMBAY, India — Enron Corp. said it told India's Maharashtra state government it is willing to change the terms of its $2.8 billion power project to save it from cancellation.

In a letter delivered to Maharashtra leaders, the Houston-based natural gas company offered to discuss environmental matters, sell a piece of the project to the state and cut electricity rates.

The talks came a month after the state government ordered Enron and its partners to stop work at the plant, which was supposed to be India's biggest foreign investment yet.

Enron's willingness to negotiate has changed Wall Street's assessment of the vulnerabilities of U.S. companies as they pursue power, telecommunications and construction projects in nations with a traditional antipathy toward foreigners.

"The lesson to be learned from these things is that the political scenery is probably more important than the economic scenery" said Michael Madden, vice chairman of PaineWebber Inc., which has advised Enron on other projects.

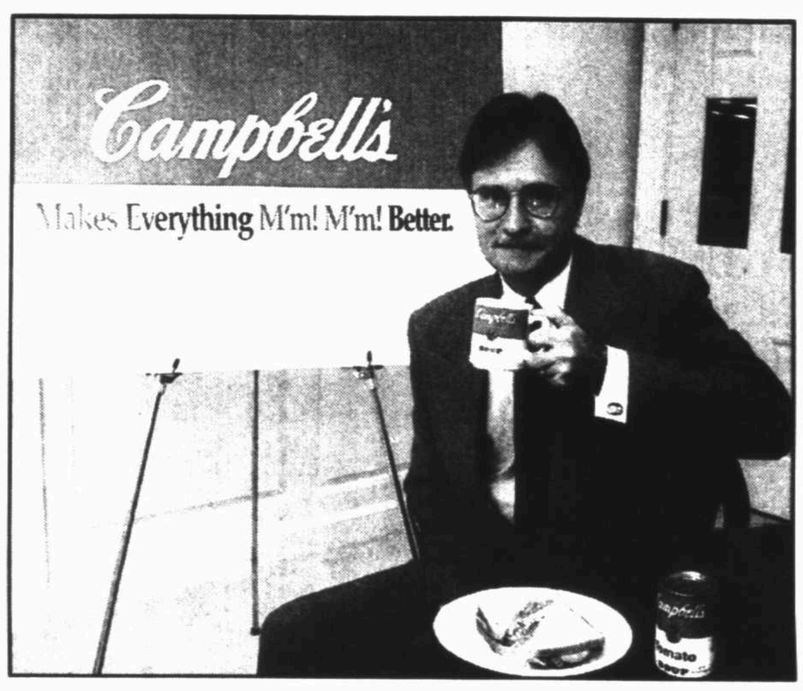

Enron pushed ahead with the plant last year even as the minority BJP party in India's Maharashtra state campaigned against it. Thursday's meeting came at Enron's request and follows statements it made Aug. 3 when the project was cancelled that it wanted to discuss the project with the government.

Rebecca Mark, chief executive of the Enron unit developing the project, met with Manohar Joshi, whose BJP party won power in the state earlier this year with Enron opposition a centerpiece of its campaign.

Enron plans to address concerns that power from the plant would be too expensive for average Indians, many of whom are used to either subsidized or free electricity. Mark also is willing to discuss concerns about protecting the environment and farmland around Dabhol and over the cost of the project.

To be sure, no concessions were made by Enron, and talks are at a preliminary stage. An Enron spokeswoman in Houston said the company can't say when the problems in Dabhol might be resolved.

Financiers who looked to big projects like Dabhol as a big new source of commissions now are adjusting their views too, said Andrew Stone, a director at Standard & Poor's Corp.

July incomes rise at more rapid pace

Spending doesn't make way to retailers

By James H. Rubin
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The income of Americans rose in July more rapidly than it has in six months even as consumer spending leveled off. Plunging factory orders, due largely to auto plant shutdowns, and new evidence of weak retail sales suggested the economy has not shaken off its sluggishness.

In a flurry of data on the eve of a key employment report, the government said Thursday that summertime hiring at restaurants and other retail establishments helped boost personal income 0.7 percent in July — the biggest increase since an 0.8 percent gain in January. Service industry payrolls soared at a rate that was nearly double June's increase.

But the Commerce Department also said spending advanced just 0.2 percent last month, the slowest pace since it was unchanged in April.

The department separately announced that severe cuts in automobile production helped push down manufacturing orders by 1.3 percent. That was the biggest drop in factory demand in three months and the fifth decline since January.

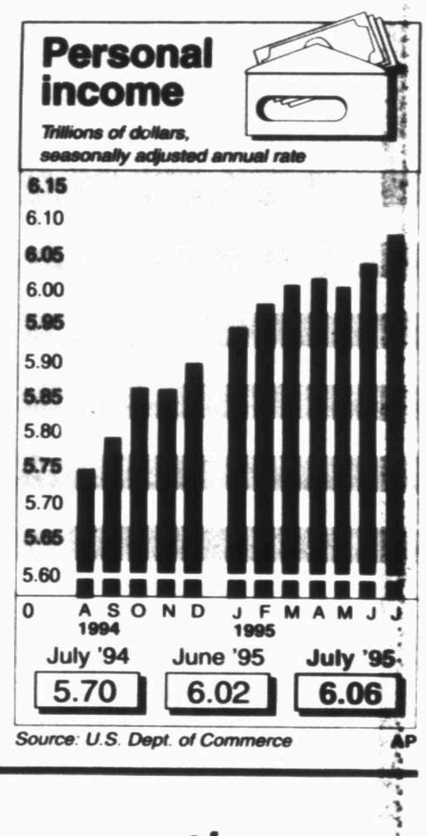

Meanwhile, the nation's largest retailers reported disappointing August sales, as hot weather weakened demand for fall clothing and home furnishings did not fare much better.

In another report, the Labor Department said the number of Americans filing first-time claims for unemployment benefits was unchanged last week at 349,000. The less volatile four-week average rose to 342,000 from 335,000 a week earlier.

"We're seeing the need for businesses to adjust from last year's boom level to more moderate growth," said economist Cynthia Latta of DRI-McGraw Hill, a forecasting service in Lexington, Mass. "Spending is soft. It's not just autos."

"With consumer spending starting off the third quarter at a sluggish pace, we continue to look for the Federal Reserve to ease monetary policy in September in order to ensure a future healthy economy," said Cheryl Katz, an economist with Merrill Lynch & Co.

The Fed's policy-making Open Market Committee meets Sept. 26 to consider whether to adjust short-term interest rates.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Settling estate can raise confusing tax questions

By Bill Doyle

Doyle

Q: After a very complicated and long settlement of our parents' estate, which consisted of a house and land, I received a $95,000 check from the sale of the house and a $21,000 check from the sale of the property. I am the middle child.

Do I have to pay income tax on the entire $116,000?

A: Not at all. Depending on the details, you'll be stuck for tax on only part of that money — or none at all.

For openers, inheritances are not subject to income tax. So, if those two checks represented inheritances, the $116,000 is yours free of income tax.

But "death taxes" are a different story. The federal estate tax hits estates of $600,000 and larger. Based on your letter, your parents' estate escapes that blow. However, all 50 states and the District of Columbia levy inheritance taxes, estate taxes or both.

Your return address indicates your share of the tax due was about $3,000. It's possible that tax was paid when the estate was settled.

Finally, you just might owe a capital-gains tax. You do, if you and your siblings inherited the house and land, took possession and then sold it at a profit.

In that case, you owe capital-gains tax only on your share of the profit from the sale — not the entire sales price. The profit, if any, was the difference between the basis — cost for tax purposes — of the house and land and the higher proceeds from the sale. That basis was established when the estate was settled.

It's clear that you need to learn more details about the settlement of your parents' estates before you will know what taxes — if any — you owe.

Obtain that information from the executor who settled the estate. For your sake, let's hope the executor is an expert on taxes. If not, you had better consult an experienced accountant or tax lawyer.

Q: After receiving an inheritance, I invested $90,000, which is doing extremely well. In only two months, the value of my wise investment has risen so that I have already made almost $3,000.

When do I pay tax on this investment money? I want to pay all the taxes I owe in 1995.

A: Although you're vague about it, that "investment" evidently is in stock, mutual-fund shares or something else on which prices are quoted daily. As the price climbed, the value of your investment rose to $93,000, as of the time you wrote your letter.

That $3,000 is an "unrealized gain" — also called a "paper profit." You won't owe any taxes on that $3,000 or any other unrealized gain until you sell and realize the profits.

Don't even think about paying tax on your unrealized gains.

If you do sell and pocket profits this year, you can settle up with the Internal Revenue Service by including your capital gain on your 1995 federal income tax return, filed by April 16, 1996.

Q: My husband is a full-time student and is not employed. I work and had gross salary income of $13,000 for the first six months of this year.

Will we have to pay a 28 percent capital-gains tax on profit we realize by selling an investment at a higher price than we paid for it?

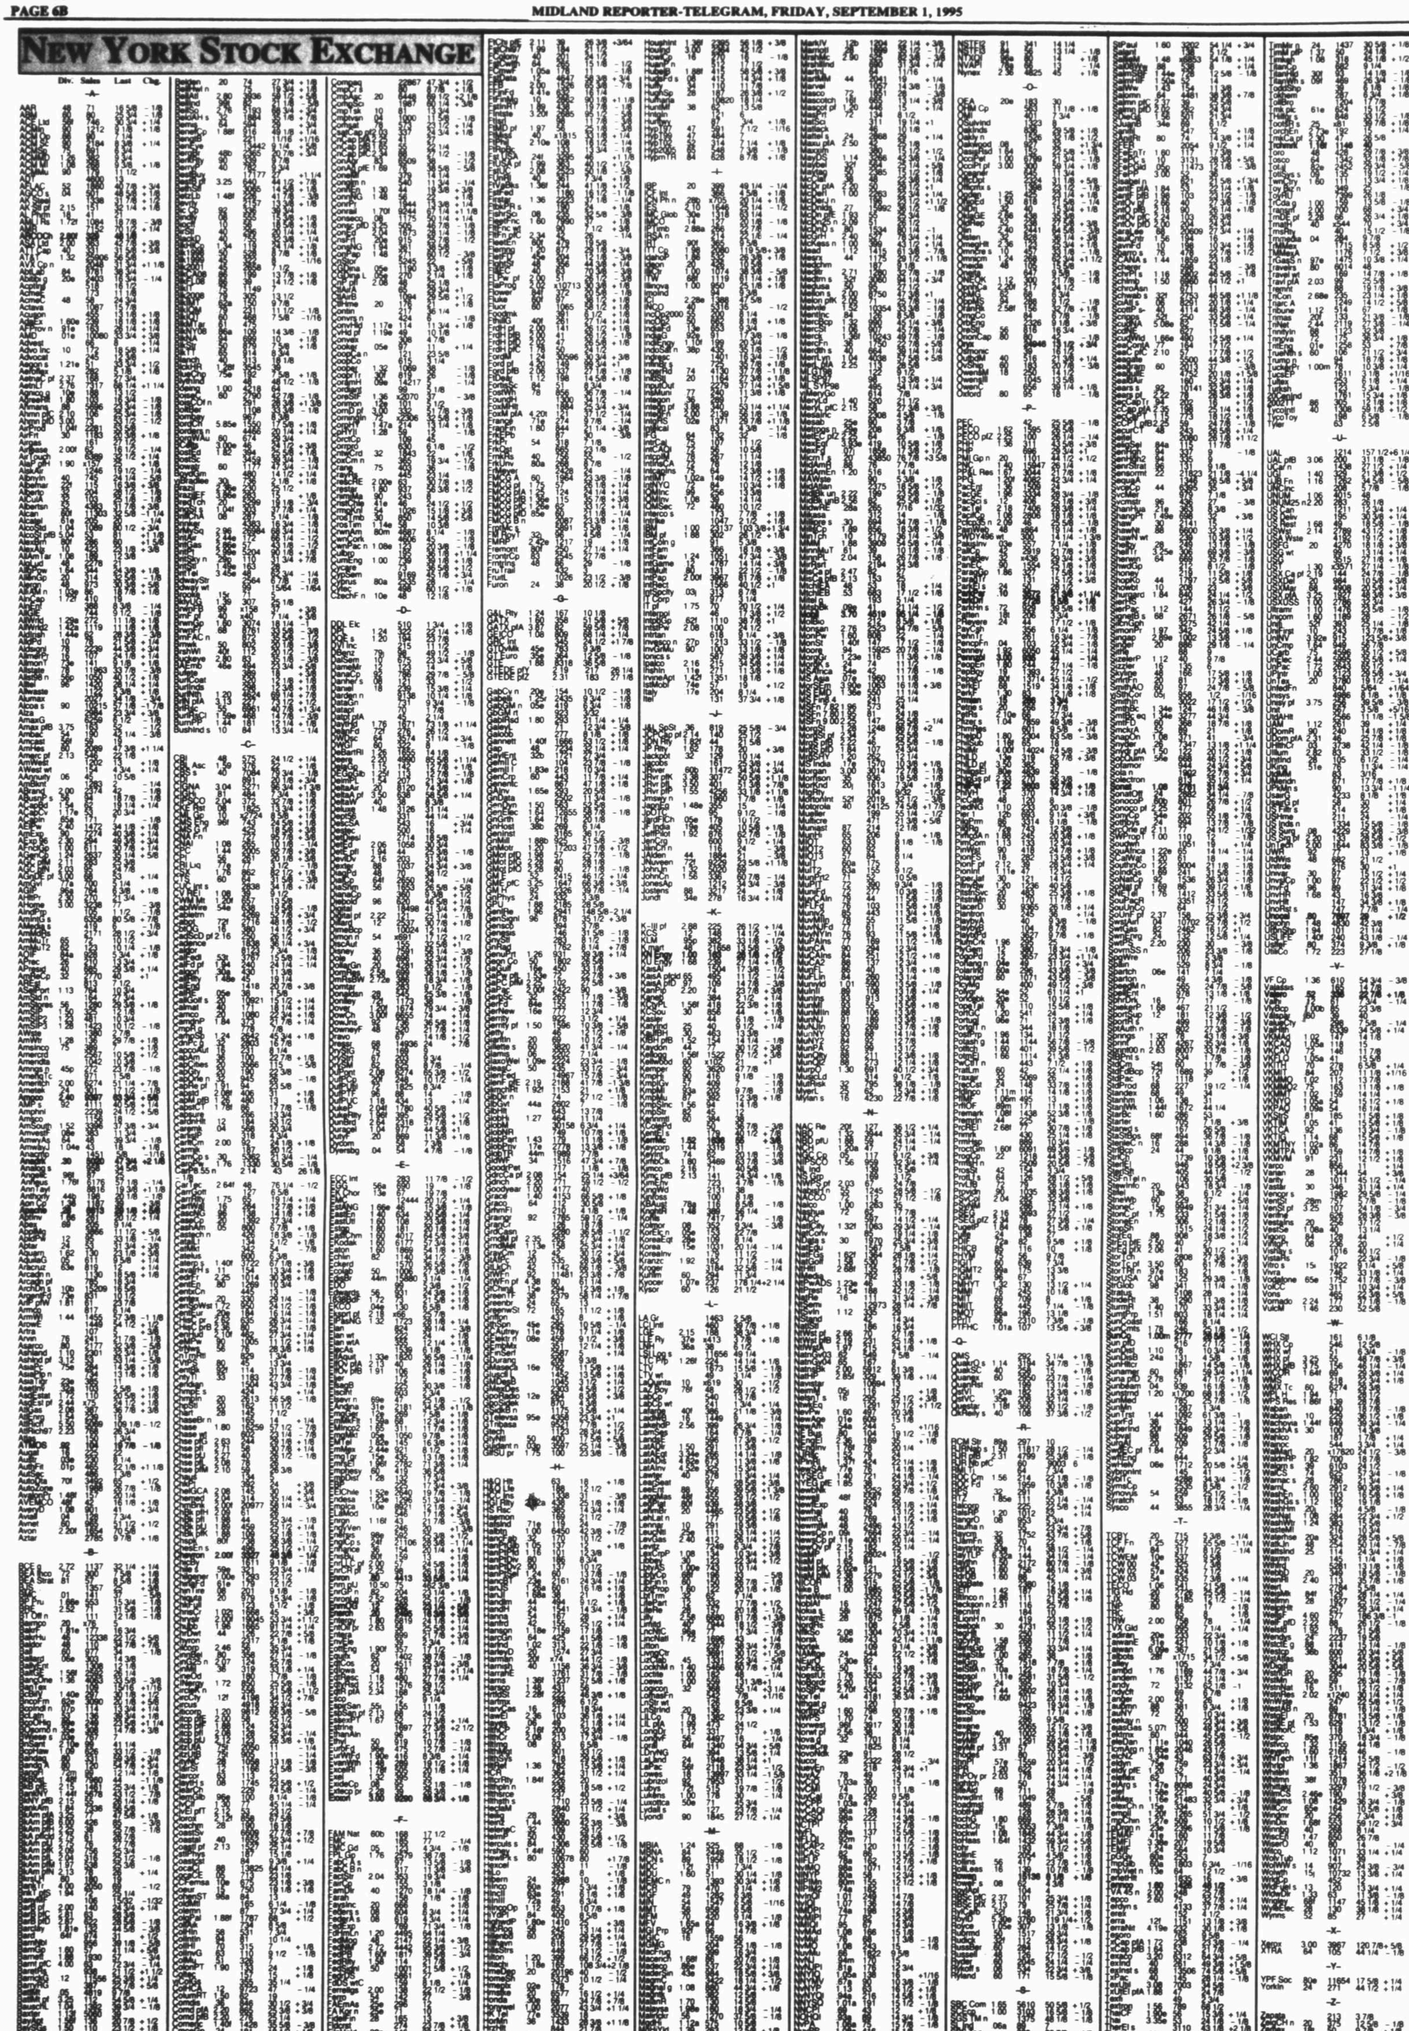

A: No! That 28 percent figure is the maximum tax on long-term capital gains, from the sale of assets owned for more than one year. Fortunate folks in the 31, 36 and 39.6 percent federal income tax brackets never have to fork over more than 28 percent of their realized long-term gains to the federal revenooers.

Your letter makes it clear you are in the 15 percent — the lowest — federal income tax bracket. You would owe 15 percent tax on your capital gains, be they long-term or short-term gains.

FAMILY MATTERS

Teasing at another's expense is harmful, hurtful

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My husband and I have an ongoing unresolved difference of opinion regarding teasing. He says it's fine and that I've got no sense of humor. I say that you don't tease at someone else's expense.

May

My husband recently told our 11-year-old son that his picture was in the newspaper. My son took the bait and said, "Let me see." My husband then showed him this enclosed photo (newspaper photograph of an overweight 3-year-old in his underwear eating an ice cream). My son happens to be a few pounds overweight and is sensitive about it. In fact, he is in the "pre-adolescent chubby period" that some kids experience. My other two children tease him also.

I am upset about this on a number of levels. My husband won't honor my wishes to not tease our son. My husband is modeling hurtful, immature behavior for the children. My kids see the lack of respect, and then their behavior reflects that lack. Please clarify this for me. I need to know what I can do. HURT AND ANGRY

DEAR HURT: Teasing in and of itself does not have to be necessarily harmful, but it is usually at someone else's expense. In some families, expressing how you feel about something or someone is not safe, so they "tease." There probably is a non-destructive way to tease, but so many "teases" are really put-downs or making fun of another person. Parents have to be especially careful if they are to going to tease their children. They must help the child see the humor in the situation rather than laugh at him or her.

Ask your husband to stop teasing your son about his weight. This teasing is obviously not helpful and hurts your son's feelings. Many wonderful individuals fight a lifelong battle with eating disorders, and we do not want to do anything that might create a future eating problem. I have worked with so many wonderful, intelligent people who attribute part if their problems with overeating to a negative childhood focus on their weight.

You may also want to ask your husband why he keeps choosing to disregard your specific requests to stop. If he is angry about his son's weight, that is one problem, but if he is angry at you about his son's weight, that is another issue. Doing something to a child that knowingly hurts his or her feelings is never appropriate or desirable — especially if it is a form of misdirected anger.

One of a parent's most important jobs is to help a child develop a positive, healthy self-concept and self-esteem. A parent needs to focus on the positive aspects of a child's physical appearance, not the negative. If your pediatrician believes your son is overweight, request an appropriate diet for his instead of focusing on the problem. His father needs to demonstrate "problem-solution" rather than just "problem-statement."

Constant teasing about weight also can damage a child's self-esteem by focusing on a perceived failure rather than on successes. Ask your husband to consider establishing a regular exercise program with his son — say, starting off slowly with daily walking and moving to running. He could take his son to play tennis or other active sports for exercise too. His direct participation in a positive problem-solving approach will help his son see himself as a success rather than as a failure. Parents should be sensitive to a child's feelings about himself or herself.

So in short, encourage your husband to get directly involved with his son — to be an active part of the solution!

THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES OFFER THE FOLLOWING COMMUNICATION TRAPS THAT PARENTS NEED TO CONSIDER:

- Giving commands often leads to defiance rather than solution.
- Tell your children what you want, not just what you don't want.
- Phrase your statements to emphasize the appropriate behavior — put the desired action toward the end of your statement. For example, "The sofa is for sitting."
- Try not to use the word "if," as in "If you don't pick up your toys, we won't go to the park."
- Express your expectations sensitively.
- "Why" sentences place blame and make kids feel attacked.
- Try to describe the situation and a solution — for example, "I see the juice spilled. You'll need a sponge."
- Do not point fingers, but instead help your child focus on what needs to be done to solve the problem.

'Great promise' finds its reward

NEW YORK (AP) — Mezzo-soprano Michelle DeYoung has won the 1995 Marian Anderson Award with its $25,000 stipend, the administrators of the prize announced recently.

The prize is given annually to an American singer "of great promise," as prize officials describe it, in opera, recital and the orchestra-oratorio repertory.

Candidates do not know they are being considered; nominations are made by music critics, and opera and orchestra directors and managers, and the awards are decided by a panel of judges from the music world.

DeYoung was raised in Colorado and California, and joined the Metropolitan Opera's Young Artist Development Program in 1992. She sang with the Wolf Trap Opera in July, and will sing in "Die Zauberflote," "Aida" and "Die Walkure" at the Metropolitan this season.

The Marian Anderson Prize was founded by friends of the late singer in 1989.

Volunteer finds joy in all aspects of her life

By Lana Cunningham

D. Theresa Mitchell not only knows what "joie de vivre" means, she lives it.

"I like to do," said the tall graying woman as she walked down the hall at Southeast Senior Center. And her emphasis was on the world "do."

Raised in New Orleans and fluent in French until she began speaking English at the age of 12, Mrs. Mitchell at 77 shares her laughter and carefree enjoyment of life with people at church, the Center, home and her travels.

An only child, she grew up in a loving family environment with her mother and grandmother. Her mother sent the daughter to a Catholic school, St. Joan of Arc, where she was educated by the Sisters of the Holy Family. "They made me think," she said. Between the two environments, Mrs. Mitchell learned her catechism, her ABC's, how to cook, enjoy life and laugh.

Mrs. Mitchell translated what she had learned into her work with a family. When she was given the responsibility for raising the daughter, she taught the girl discipline without physical punishment. And when that family moved to Midland, Mrs. Mitchell came, too. A widow, only her mother was left behind in New Orleans and eventually she joined Mrs. Mitchell in 1968.

"The people made me feel so welcome here in Midland. It was almost as if I never left home," she said. So she bought her house and stayed.

Soon after moving to Midland in 1967, Mrs. Mitchell began attending Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, where she immediately jumped into teaching eighth graders their religious classes. She quit only last year, after more than two decades.

"The people at Our Lady are affectionate ... just like it was at home," she recalled of her first Sunday there.

"Kids take things for granted," she said of her decision to teach the classes. "They don't know the how, why or where." Over the years, Mrs. Mitchell added adult classes to her list of activities. "Last year I taught a class of adult men who wanted to be married in the church, but they didn't understand the sacraments."

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

D. Theresa Mitchell enjoys all aspects of life, including family, travel and her volunteer work at Southeast Senior Center.

Young people have changed over the years, she noted. "Kids don't use their imagination today. They don't read; they watch TV."

She is not forgotten by her former students. "I get more invitations to quincineras, weddings and baby showers." She paused for a moment: "Oh, I almost forgot. I have a party to go to tonight."

Traveling is her hobby and she finds fun wherever she goes. "If I were rich, I'd go around the world," she said. Her destinations have included Hawaii, Portugal, France and Italy, just to mention a few.

"I always go by myself. I'm fancy free," she said. "If I have to do something, let me do it now. I only have today; I don't have tomorrow. And then I come back and I have all these wonderful memories.

"Rome? Eieee, yi, yi," she said. "My (tour group) hotel was across the street from the Vatican and I could see every night when the Pope put his light out at 11 p.m. John Paul II has had an influence on my life and I can't explain it. Oh, and I saw Michelangelo's paintings (in the Sistine Chapel) and they were so beautiful."

An evening service at Lourdes brought tears to her eyes. "There was a nighttime candlelight procession, and everyone was saying the same prayer in their own language. How can we hate each other if we all pray to the same Father? These are my brothers and sisters. I can't see why there is discord among families. I can't see why there is discord among nations."

She sees no difference in races, only differences in customs. "God is so wise. He made a bouquet."

Churches and shrines aren't the only sites Mrs. Mitchell likes to see on a trip. "I'm a bad girl," she said, giggling. On the last day in Paris she told the tour guide she didn't go to the city just to see churches. "Isn't there a nightclub in Paris we can go to? I want one good club." The surprised guide found it and took Mrs. Mitchell and a few others to it. "They had a wonderful show," she said with a grin.

When she's not traveling, Mrs. Mitchell volunteers at the Southeast Senior Center answering the phone or working in the kitchen. "Wherever they want me," she said.

She also serves as a board member for RSVP (Retired Senior Volunteer Program). "We plan things for the rest of the people and bring it to them to see if they want to do it. We need volunteers for the program."

"I'm always willing to help," she said for her efforts. "We can't live by ourselves. We have to live with each other."

Entertaining and having fun is what she does in her spare time. "I love feeding friends and I love to dance. I love people. When I have a dinner party, everyone comes."

"You've got to have humor with everything. No matter how serious, you have to have humor. It would be a sad world if we couldn't laugh," she said and with a giggle recounted her desire to be buried in a red velvet casket. When she saw one several years ago in New Orleans, her mother and husband "jumped on me about it. They're dead now. I'll get what I want."

Mrs. Mitchell plans to live for a long time and be useful to a lot of people. "I have to be active. God has given me certain gifts to share; I can't keep them to myself."

And she doesn't. She touches everyone with her joie de vivre.

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

The symphony of life all began with a big bang that resonated throughout the cosmic dome and was transposed into the harmonious music of the spheres as noted by that great mathematic genius, Pythagoras, in the sixth century B.C. More recently this phenomenon was expressed nicely by John Dryden in the 17th century:

Page

"From harmony, from heavenly harmony

"This universal frame began

"From harmony to harmony

"Through all the compass' of the notes it ran

"This diapason closing full in Man."

Thus, the fundamental role music plays in mankind becomes clearly apparent. Its very basic core nature allows it to survive when the more recently acquired attributes diminish due to age or illness. By developing and encouraging this residual asset, the lifestyle and content of many decrepit, ill individuals can be enhanced, and can bring them into the give and take of a more normal and happier existence.

Ongoing research in such agencies as the Institute for Music and Neurologic Function in the Bronx is now exploring how music affects brain development, concentration and learning, and also how and why some Alzheimer's patients can begin to sing and recall lyrics, and how some stroke patients learn to sing phrases expressing their needs. These provocative and stimulating questions literally cry out for explanation, and reveal the fact that the science of mnemonics remains in its infancy. This stimulus has brought many citizens to their feet as a carry-over from dancing; to resume communicatio nwith others; and to mingle once more with their fellow man. Hopefully, now that Midland possesses the whole gamut of support groups for long-term illness, it can provide fertile ground for research in this area.

Remember once again the old German proverb: "God gave us music that we may pray without words." Surely music constitutes one of the greatest gifts of all. "It asks nothing in return but that we listen."

In closing, I might add that it should be performed properly. For example, no hard rock while eating.

Confucius say:

"A world with no music to please

"Is like a kiss without a squeeze!"

Senior sings National Anthem at stadium

SAN DIEGO (AP) — How did 95-year-old Edna Lucas come to sing the "Star-Spangled Banner" before a recent Padres game at Jack Murphy Stadium?

Her hot-air balloon ride fell through.

Lucas had taken balloon rides to celebrate her 85th and 90th birthdays, and the owner of the balloon company promised her one for her 95th.

But the company went out of business.

So her granddaughter, Wendy Tapper, went searching for something else to mark the extraordinary milestone.

After a radio audition, the Padres agreed to let Lucas sing the national anthem before the Padres game against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

She even threw out the first ball. Lucas, wearing red, white and blue, said she wasn't the least bit nervous.

"It was thrilling," she said afterward.

DEAR ABBY

Family-free vacation is frazzled woman's dearest dream

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on vacation. She left behind some of her favorite letters from 1980.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a happily married woman, married 15 years and have two children. I have a dream. I want very much to go on a vacation with no husband, no children — just me alone! I want a week of doing whatever I want to do, with no pressure from anyone, without worrying if everyone else is happy and content.

Van Buren

I would dearly love freedom from all home responsibilities — to sleep when I like, and not have to explain why. A place at the beach would be my idea of heaven.

My husband thinks my "dream" of a one-week vacation all alone is "unnatural." He thinks a happily married woman who has this kind of dream is crazy.

Well, do I see a psychiatrist, or go to the beach? — NEEDS A BREAK

DEAR NEEDS: Assuming your children will be properly looked after, I see nothing unnatural about your dream. And surely, there is nothing "wrong" with anyone (male or female) who wants freedom from all responsibility for a week.

Go to the beach, and if your husband thinks you're crazy, send HIM to a psychiatrist.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Needs a Break," whose husband couldn't understand why his wife wanted a little vacation away from her family, prompted me to write.

My parents, both retired, live 420 miles from us. When our youngest child was out of diapers, my husband volunteered to look after our three children for a weekend so I could visit my parents and "get away from it all."

What a marvelous time I had sleeping late, visiting old friends, shopping and going out to dinner. My parents spoiled me rotten. Best of all, I didn't have to answer to "Mommy" all weekend.

I returned home completely refreshed with a wonderful new attitude toward my husband and children. My sweet husband has been doing this for seven years now. (We call it "Mom's R&R.")

It gives me a little vacation away from my routine at home, my parents love pampering me, and my husband and kids admit they enjoy getting rid of me for a few days.

After seeing that letter in your column, Abby, I just had to send in my support. — CINDY IN HUNTINGTON BEACH

DEAR CINDY: Three cheers for your sweet husband. What a terrific Mother's Day gift a "Mom's R&R" would be for mothers of small children — scheduled, of course, for any weekend during the year.

DEAR ABBY: "Needs a Break," the wife and mother who wanted a week's vacation alone at the beach, is doing things backward.

Instead of going to the beach by herself, and then having to spend three weeks cleaning up the mess at home made by her husband and children in her absence, she should send them to the beach and have a glorious, restful week at home.

For my birthday present one year, my husband took my children camping for three days. I had a great time, doing exactly what I wanted to do, when I felt like it, and I was as glad to see them come home as they were to see me again.

We were all revitalized, and appreciated each other more after that. — BEEN THERE IN ALEXANDRIA, VA.

Nurse founds elder care business

By John Hendren

OWINGS MILLS, Md. (AP) — Katherine, an 86-year-old woman who suffers from severe dementia and paranoia, was worried about the sounds she heard in her Baltimore home.

So she dialed 911 emergency dispatchers — more than 700 times in one month.

Police complained that they were sending a squad car every shift. Her children were desperate. They couldn't leave their jobs to look after her.

So they called Senior Connections, a senior care management company that has become part of a growing market for elderly care services.

Beth Scovill, a nurse who founded the business in honor of her father, who suffered from Alzheimer's disease, found Katherine a house with other elderly residents and recommended a doctor who gave her medication to control her paranoia.

Ms. Scovill acts as a referral service for often bewildered families with elder parents, helping them find in-home nurses, transportation, financial and legal advice, even a plumber.

"It's almost never impossible, if you're willing to take the time and handle the expense of caring for an elderly relative at home," said Ms. Scovill, 38.

She cautions, though, "It's not the best choice for everyone."

Senior Connections employs 24 people — nurses, social workers, program assistants; the majority of them work in the company's day care center.

Caring for the elderly is a growing concern as America's population ages, and family members tend to live farther away.

The average married couple at 40 has more parents than children, according to the American Association for Retired Persons.

Americans over 65 are growing at a rate two-thirds faster than that of younger Americans, the AARP says. Nationally, AARP estimates that the aged population will rise from 32.8 million now to 70.2 million in 2030.

In Maryland, the Office on Aging estimates that the proportion of residents over 60 will rise from 14.8 percent in 1995 to 22.9 percent in 2020.

And half of all seniors eventually need some form of long-term care, according to AARP.

Gary Goldman says having someone who knew what to do when his mother grew more confused and his father's health began failing helped save his marriage.

Senior Connections found a home caregiver — a native Russian like his father — to help out three days a week.

Compared with the cost of a nursing home — often $3,500 to $4,500 per resident a month — Goldman found the assortment of day care and other services a bargain.

Advice from a lawyer on how to administer a trust fund alone saved him several thousand dollars, Goldman said.

When his father died, "I felt like I lost both parents at the same time," Goldman said.

"My mother hardly knew me anymore."

His 85-year-old mother spent three weeks in a nursing home, where she lost her ability to walk and developed bedsores.

Senior Connections moved her to an assisted-living home with her own room, helped get her walking again and enrolled her in Senior Connections' adult day care center.

The day care center makes Senior Connections two businesses in one.

There, elderly visitors can meet other people their age, exercise and receive checkups by a family doctor.

The number of adult day care centers in Maryland has more than doubled since 1986, from 43 to more than 100. Nationwide there are 3,000 licensed adult care centers.

In the Senior Connections center recently, a smiling Anne Levinson stroked Elvis, an enormous Manx cat, on her lap as John Monohan of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals gave her and a circle of other patients a taste of animal therapy.

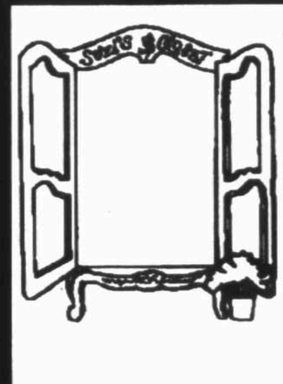

"People just light up when they see an animal," Monohan said.

"It seems to make people healthier just having them around."

Members take part in Bible study, the Yiddish club, subway trips to Baltimore's Lexington Market and video-assisted tours through such places as Hawaii and Italy, complete with Italian food.

They are taken to physical therapy and to a nearby beauty college for a $4 manicure and haircut.

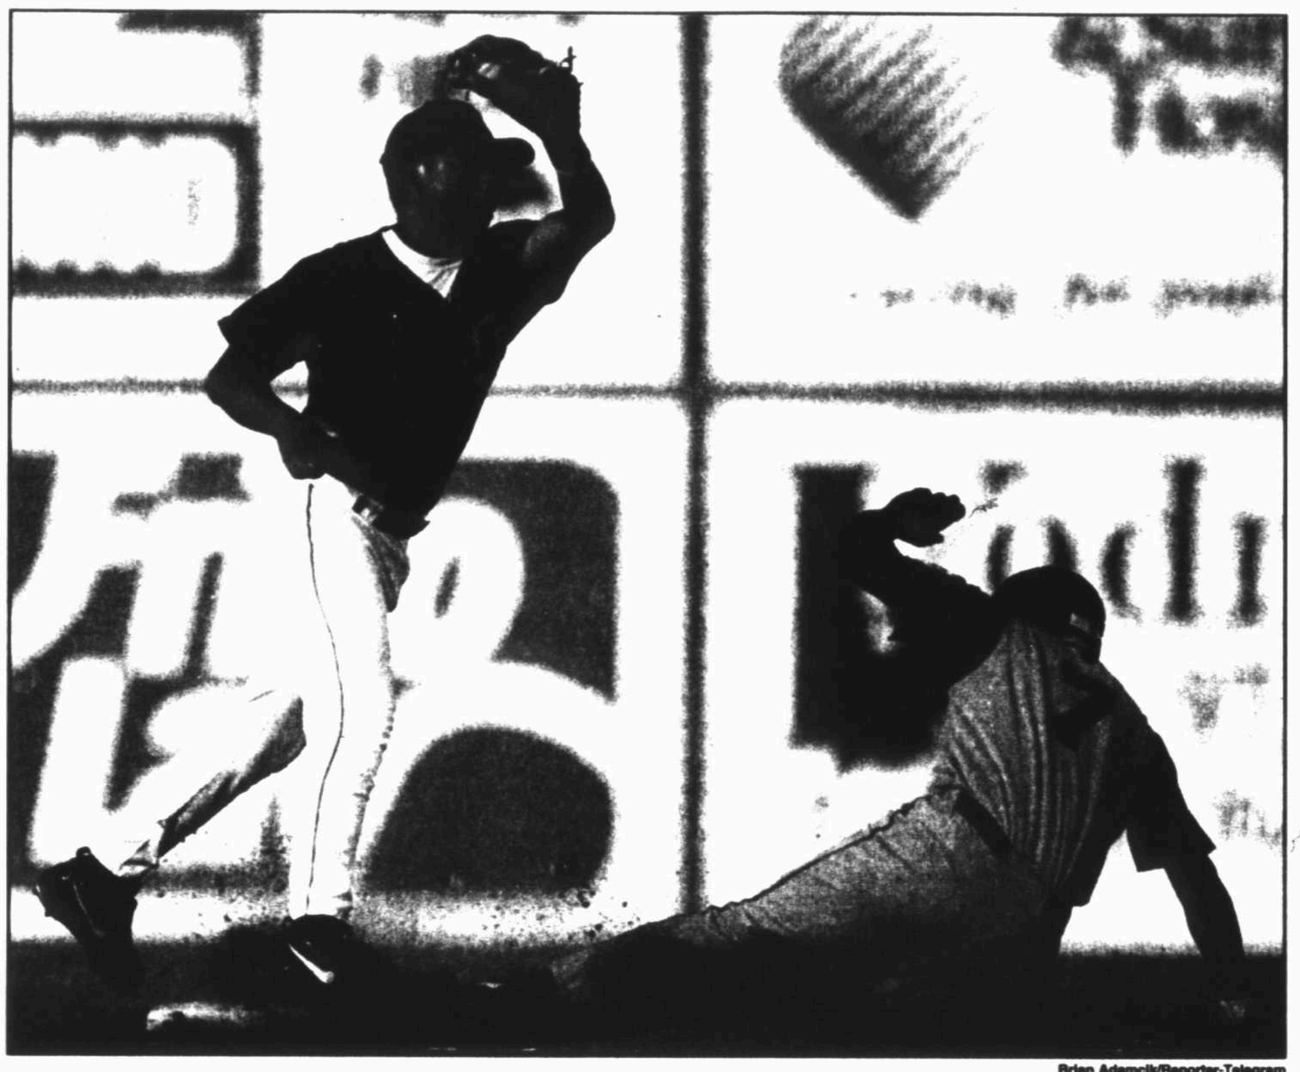

"We try not to let them sleep," said Sherri Widerman, who plans the activities. "Every day, every hour, we try to have a different structured activity."

Angels, Wranglers start series

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Wichita Wrangler Rod Myers successfully steals second as Midland Angels second baseman Orlando Munoz gets ready to apply the tag during Texas League Western Division action earlier this season. West first-half champ Midland and second-half champ Wichita begin a five-game series today at Christensen Stadium to determine who will meet Shreveport for the league title.

■ Midland hosts Wichita to start the Texas League Western Division playoffs at 7 p.m. tonight at Christensen Stadium.

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

On the day of the franchise's first home playoff in twenty years, the Midland Angels stand eight games under .500 and 11 games behind the team they play for the Western Division title. Is this any way to launch into the postseason?

Well, actually, yes. After winning the division's first half championship, Midland lost two key players and fell to the bottom half of the Texas League West standings. The Angels lost four of five games to the Wichita Wranglers last month at home. The same Wranglers and Angels start a best-of-five Western Division Playoff series tonight at 7 p.m. at Christensen Stadium.

But Midland has turned its game around lately. And representatives from both teams say last week's Midland-Wichita series, with five games decided by a total of seven runs, better indicates the evenness of the playoff matchup.

"You can't look at (the records) at all," said Wichita manager Ron Johnson, who led the Wranglers to the second half division championship and a 40-27 record going into Thursday's game. "We know what kind of ball club Midland is and you can throw that out. They played us tough all year."

The Angels may be playing their best ball of the second half. They took three of the first four games of their just completed series at San Antonio and had won eight of 14 before last night.

"The last three series we've had a chance to win all five games," Angel manager Mario Mendoza said. "We started playing better ever since we played El Paso at home."

Bagwell recalled

ATLANTA — Jeff Bagwell, last year's National League MVP who has been out for seven weeks with a broken hand, was recalled Thursday by the Houston Astros from a rehabilitation assignment in the minor leagues. Bagwell was hitting .283 with 16 homers and 66 RBIs when he was hit by a pitch from the Padres' Brian Williams on July 30 at San Diego. It broke the fourth metacarpal bone in his left hand, and he was placed on the 15-day disabled list on July 31.

Reid gun check

SAN ANTONIO — Spurs forward J.R. Reid was arrested Thursday when he attempted to board a flight at San Antonio International Airport with a gun in his carry-on luggage, officials said. Reid was going through an airport checkpoint about 7:45 a.m. when an unloaded .45-caliber handgun was detected by security personnel, said airport spokesman Tony Ronquillo. Reid was detained and turned over to the San Antonio Police Department. He was charged with felony possession of a prohibited weapon and was released on $2,000 bond.

"This (arrest) is something we do with anyone who tries to bring a weapon on board one of our scheduled airline flights," Ronquillo said. It is against the law to board a plane carrying a gun.

Midland High quarterback Jeremy Pinner (14) turns to hand off during the Bulldogs' first scrimmage of the 1995 season, against Big Spring, Thursday night at Memorial Stadium. The Steers won the practice game four touchdowns to two for MHS.

Big Spring bests Midland, 4-2

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland High's Bulldogs had their first taste of strangers at Memorial Stadium Thursday night and came away with a bit of a sour taste.

The Class 4A Big Spring Steers, which had an extra scrimmage and a week longer to work out, proved to be the team in better condition and ended up as a 4-2 victor.

The Steers' major advantage came in the final part of the scrimmage under game type conditions, minus the full kicking game, a major strength of the Bulldogs.

Big Spring marched to two touchdowns in the 15-minute quarter while MHS self-destructed and couldn't get a score.

"I thought we got whipped in the last 15 minute drill and we were our own worst enemy with a fumble, interception

Rebels make second Van Horn voyage

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

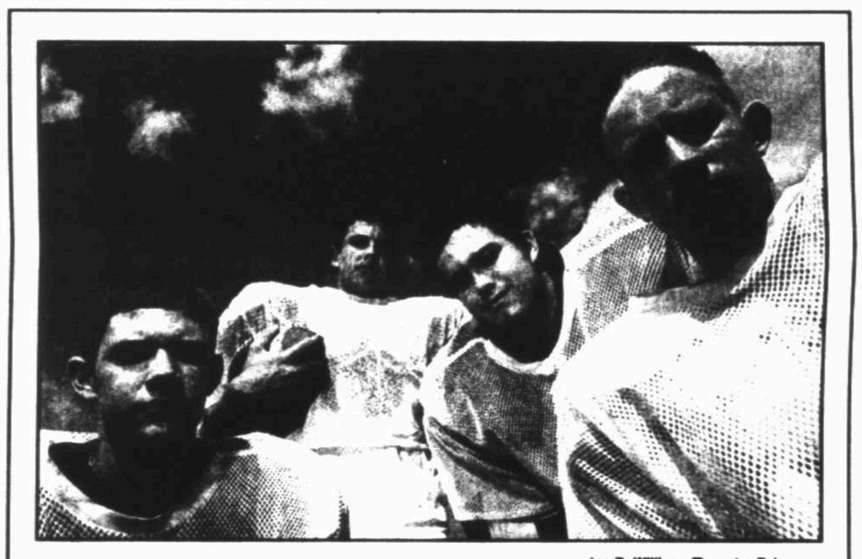

Everything seems to be set for the start of the regular season, but the Midland Lee football team will travel to Van Horn for the second straight week to finish out its preseason schedule against El Paso Socorro at 7:30 p.m.

Lee is coming off a scrimmage last week where they dominated the Troopers of El Paso Eastwood. The performance started the gelling process that Midland Lee Head Coach John Parchman wanted to see out of his offense and gave Lee's first-year head coach an idea of his new lineup on both sides of the ball.

"Last week, we were looking at getting the right people in the right place," said Parchman. "We have firmed everything up.

Chargers shoot for .500 mark

The Midland Trinity Chargers have learned to walk in their short, three-year existence, but the jump to running might be a couple of years away.

"We'll be fielding a real young team, and if the team keeps its attitude, a .500 record this year will be excellent for us," said new head coach Bill Young, who will be featuring four sophomores and four seniors this year. "We've got three seniors and one junior, but we'll be starting a lot of freshmen and sophomores."

Trinity begins its fourth season of football in District 1 six-man of the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools with its third head coach, four upperclassmen and having to replace all-state running back Matt Dickman.

Dickman, the team's leading rusher last year as a junior, accepted an

Angels begin hard road to league title

The Midland Angels hit a glory stride during May and June, which was good enough to land a rare Texas League playoff berth by winning the first half title in the TL West.

Williamson

But there was also the bust, falling well below the .500 mark in the second half, a slide, which coincidentally, started about the same time power hitter Todd Greene and base stealer Jovino Carvajal were promoted to Triple-A Vancouver.

Still, Midland faced little pressure to win in the second half with the knowledge that it had earned that glorious playoff berth and the home field advantage in the first two games of the five-game playoff against second half champion Wichita, which was the big bust in the first half before smoking the field down the stretch, thanks to winning four of five games against Midland in its last road trip before returning home for a huge 15-game homestand to end the season.

So, tonight the Texas League West Division playoff begins at 7 p.m. at Christensen Stadium, a mere week before the start of the high school football season, which remains as the Permian Basin's glory of highest honor.

It will be interesting to see just how well Midland supports this unique opportunity. Only once since 1972 (when the Texas League came to town with the Midland Cubs) has Midland hosted a playoff game. It isn't often on the early September menu.

Midland probably won't be seen on the odds board for this interesting series with Wichita. After all, Wichita comes in as the hottest team in the TL West while the Angels struggled in their wearisome second half collapse.

Some will say the loss of Greene and Carvajal broke the collective back of the Angels. However, Wichita lost its top two pitchers and star leadoff hitter Johnny Damon is now playing in Kansas City with the big boys. Wichita won four of five games against Midland without those players the last time these two teams came to town.

Some will also say that the Angels will arrive tonight with bad breath, knowing that this is a new start on the road to where the Texas League title will be determined. To win the TL title, Midland must win seven of its next 12 games. Shreveport, winner of both halves in the TL East, awaits this winner for the best-of-seven Championship Series.

It is also safe to say that there would have been more on-the-field fireworks if El Paso had won the second half. Midland and El Paso don't like each other very much. Just ask Leon Glenn, who played with the Diablos last season. Glenn might not talk, however.

Even Wichita doesn't appear to care much for El Paso. The last time the Wranglers were in town, Wichita manager Ron Johnson said, "We always enjoy coming to Midland because Mario Mendoza (Midland manager) runs a class operation over here. You can't say that about all the Texas League teams we play."

Johnson didn't comment on who the "bad" teams were, but that comment did come the day Wichita arrived in Midland after a series in — where else — El Paso. Everybody likes to beat El Paso. And that helps make this series even so much more interesting. The Diablos have been dismissed for the year. They aren't attending the party that they have owned in this current decade.

Things change. At least, the Midland Angels have proved that this season. Let the playoffs begin.

Young back in saddle after 19-year retirement party

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

A funny thing happened to Bill Young on the way to retirement.

After 19 years away from coaching, the former public school administrator has dived back into the coaching ranks, this time with private school TAPPS member Midland Trinity.

"I really had not planned to get back into coaching, but this was a great opportunity," said Young, who still resides in Stanton where his wife is a teacher there. "When it came up, I was excited to do it because I loved every minute I spent in coaching."

Young began his coaching career in Levelland after a collegiate career at Sul Ross State University in Alpine which took him to Clint, Van Horn and finally Stanton.

After a five-year stint with the Buffaloes, he got out of coaching and took an administrative post which he kept for 19 years. But when the coaching bug hit him again, he decided to take the plunge again with the private school Chargers.

I spent 33 years in public education, and this is the first time I've ever been associated with a private school," Young said. "It's an honor to work here because this is one of the, if not the, highest academically-rated schools in West Texas. Every one of our graduates go to college."

Young liked the idea of getting back into coaching for the teaching aspect. Trinity is in only its fourth year of athletic competition and Young likes the idea of giving the school a solid foundation to help prepare the kids.

"We're trying to develop the whole student here," said Young, who also works with the physcial education department at the schoool, and even an occasional substitute duty at the elementary level. "We're here to develop the mind as well as the body. We're here for the kids."

One of the joys Young has experienced so far this year has been the acceptance of the players to the new coach and their attitude about the program. After all, the Trinity players are working with their third head coach in only four seasons.

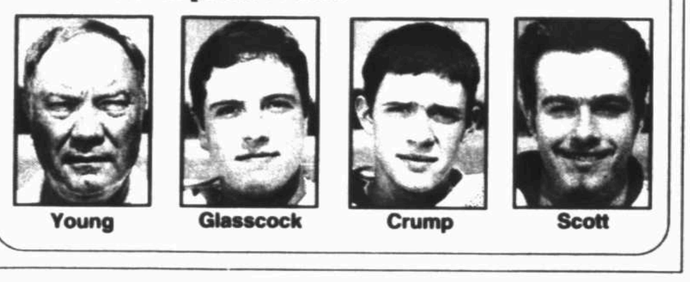

"I was really impressed with the kids' attitude and their work ethic. The kids came in and worked the hardest they have ever worked and they have a real positive attitude about everything," Young said. "It takes time to build a program and up until now there hasn't been any continuity in the coaching staff for them. Hopefully, we will be around for awhile."

From early signs, it doesn't look like is going anywhere soon. That just might be just what the Trinity athletic program needs.

TRINITY: Glasscock, Scott to pick up run where Dickman left off

academic scholarship to study in France for the fall semester leaving a big hole for the Chargers to fill.

"Matt was a great player last year but he won't be available to us," Young said. "We've got some kids, though, who played last year and got some experience."

Dickman rushed for 1,141 yards and caught passes for another 320 yards, which was a large majority of the Trinity offense in 1994.

Tailback Brad Glasscock leads a trio of returning running backs who had a modicum of success for the Chargers last season.

Glasscock was second to Dickman on the team in rushing with 403 yards and 10 touchdowns on just 81 carries and will be the feature back in the Chargers offense this year.

"He's a natural runner. He does things you can't coach," Young said. "If he gets to be all-state, I'm not going be able to take credit for it because he's the type of runner with those instincts."

Fullback Daniel Scott (16 carries, 66 yards in 1994) also returns as well as junior Mike Salgado, a little back with speed who should see a lot of playing time as both a running back and backup quarterback on offense.

"We've got some size on offense with Daniel (175 pounds) and Brad (165)," Young said. "Mike's small, but he's real quick. He's a tough little player."

The Chargers also have Michael Gensert returning in his role as starting quarterback. In 1994 as a junior, Gensert completed 25 of 54 passes for 295 yards and two touchdowns. He is also expected to see some time on defense."

"Michael's gotten bigger over the summer, and it looks like he'll be starting for us on defense at defensive end."

Also back is veteran center Amer Baluch, who returns as Trinity's best lineman. He also was used as a receiver last year, catching five passes for 72 yards. Kirk Whitehead, who caught nine balls for 103 yards in 1994, returns as another wideout for the Chargers.

Trinity has four returning starters on offense but don't expect the Chargers to be a scoring machine. Trinity won't win a bunch of scoring marathons, and Young believes the strength of the team lies in its defense.

"I don't think we can outscore everybody we play, but I think our offense will be better off than last year," he said. "Our strength though, is going to be our defense."

As is the case with most six-man programs, the offensive players are often the defensive players as well. Scott anchors the nucleus of the Chargers' 2-3 defense at middle linebacker, flanked by Glasscock and Whitehead at the corners. Will Crump is the down lineman, and Young said could be the team's biggest hitter and best defensive prospect..

"He's probably the best defensive player we have, but we've got some really outstanding defensive players," Young said.

Trinity has only 13 players on the varsity roster, so injuries will go a long way in determining if the Chargers have a shot at a .500 record.

"We've got some good teams in our district and we've got to stay away from injuries. If we don't, we might get '45'ed' this year," said Young, referring to the 45-point rule in which a game is called when one team has a 45-point lead on the other.

The Chargers were 45'ed a few times last year and 1995 might be some of the same if the younger players can't step up and contribute right away. Young said they're still in the process of building a program and a winning tradition at Trinity, and taking their lumps for a few years is par for the course.

"Our future is in the future. We've got a lot of freshmen and sophomores and about 20 kids in the JV program right now," Young said. "If the kids stay positive and keep building we should be competitive a couple of years from now."

But unfortunately for the Chargers, 1995 is in the here and now, and they might be playing in the toughest TAPPS six-man district in the state.

District 1 shapes up to be a competitive one with four-time, defending state champion Midland Christian, Abilene Christian and El Paso Faith Christian.

"I just hope we can stay on the field with those teams," Young said. "If we can do that, I'll be tickled to death."

Dallas wants revenge with, without Sanders

IRVING AP With or without Deion Sanders, the Dallas Cowboys think they can get revenge for what happened to them last January in San Francisco.

"This team has the talent to win the Super Bowl," said quarterback Troy Aikman. "Nothing less will be accepted. Deion is the best cornerback in the league. But we can win whether we have him or not."

Owner Jerry Jones is pursuing the free agent defensive back like he did the Cowboys before he bought them. Dallas came apart against Sanders and the 49ers in the title game.

The Cowboys had five turnovers, including a fumble by Michael Irvin, and lost 38-28 to San Francisco to see hopes of three consecutive Super Bowl titles crumble. Aikman passed for 380 yards and Irvin caught 12 passes for 192 yards, but all was for naught.

"Maybe the team got to thinking it was better than it was," said Aikman. "We just didn't have the discipline we had under Jimmy. We can't go on anymore feeling all we have to do is just show up. We have to prepare ourselves as in the past."

The Cowboys meet the 49ers again in the 10th week of the season, Nov. 12 in Texas Stadium.

"We have to make sure we've taken care of business getting to that game or it might not mean much," Aikman said. "We can't look ahead."

Dallas, 12-4 last year in the regular season, opens defense of its NFC East crown against the New York Giants in the Meadowlands on Monday night.

Coach Barry Switzer said after listening to his coaches talk about the Giants, "I got scared. It's like we don't have a chance."

He said the Giants will try to run over the Cowboys like they did last December in a 15-10 victory.

"They had a 15-play drive and we couldn't take the ball away from them," Switzer said. "They'll hammer at us with two tight ends. They think we are a finesse defense, that we can't get physical. We'll see."

The Cowboys play host to Denver in their first home game of the season on Sept. 10.

"It's imperative we stay focused," Aikman said.

Switzer is on the hot seat, although owner Jerry Jones said recently "Whether we win the Super Bowl or not, Barry Switzer will be our coach next year."

Switzer knows what he has to do, though, to keep in Jones' good graces.

"Winning championships is what is expected and that's what I expect," Switzer said.

Training camp answered two question marks. Erik Williams returned at right tackle, although his knee still isn't 100 per cent recovered from last October's car crash. Not having Williams in the lineup against the San Francisco pass rush put extra pressure on Aikman.

Williams played in the Cowboys' final exhibition game and blocked Houston rookie Anthony Cook dizzy. However, Williams was still stiff-legged and is not as agile as he was before the crash. Williams will start against the Giants.

"That was the big positive of our camp, having that guy back," Switzer said.

Another was the play of Brock Marion at safety, replacing James Washington, who went to Washington as a free agent. The Cowboys are hurting for backup talent, but Marion played well in camp.

The Cowboys also were impressed with rookie running back Sherman Williams, their top choice in the second round out of Alabama. Williams could take some heat off Emmitt Smith and catches the ball well coming out of the backfield.

Kevin Williams and Corey Fleming went into camp competing for the wide receiver job vacated by Alvin Harper, who took the free agency money at Tampa Bay. Williams won the spot opposite Irvin, one of the league's premier receivers.

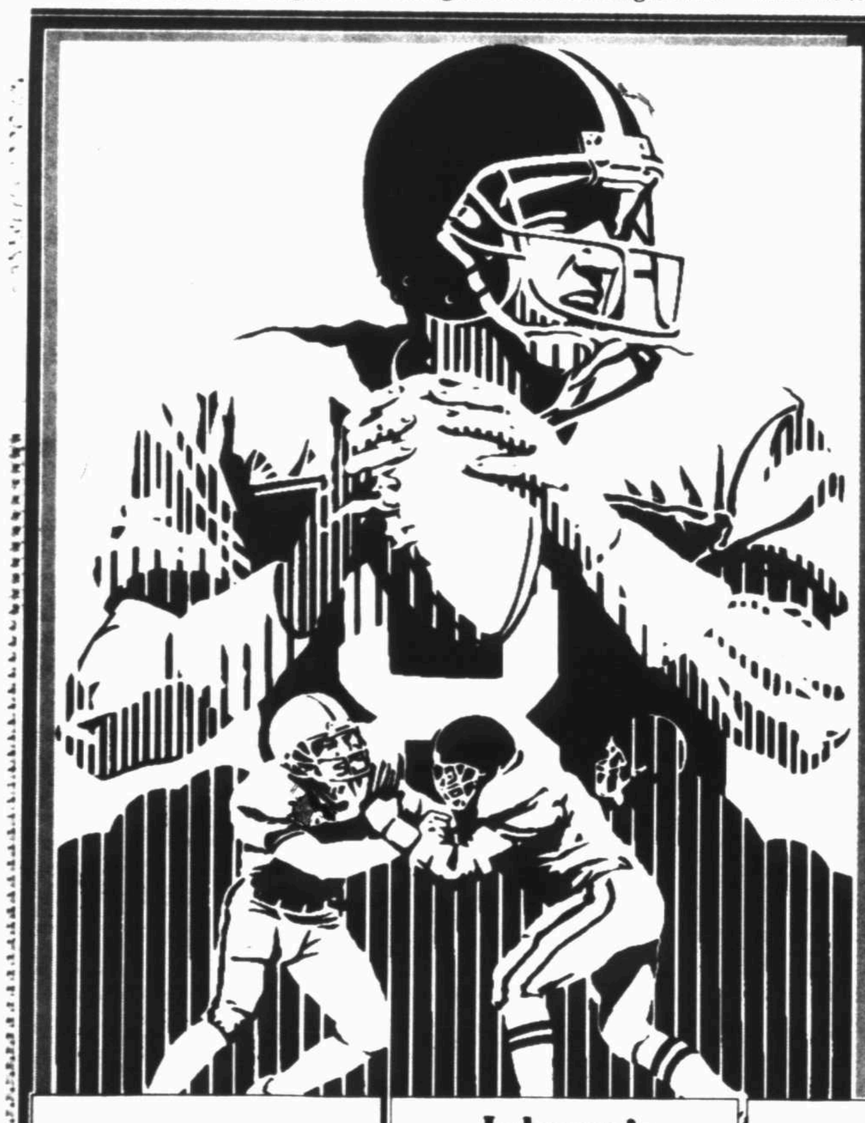

"Kevin was outstanding," said Aikman. "He has really stepped his game up a notch."

Dallas will be missing another starter at the outset of the season. Linebacker Darrin Smith, who is asking $400,000 more than the Cowboys are offering, missed all of training camp. Godfrey Myles will start in his place against the Giants.

Another unsettled item is special teams, which lost Kenny Gant, Matt Vanderbeek, and Joe Fishback. Special teams coach Joe Avezzano kept barefooted kickoff specialist Jon Baker to help the below-average Dallas kick teams.

"We are used to being among the elite in the NFL," Avezzano said. "We've got to get better. Having Baker with his deep kicks should help and give us maybe another 10 yards per kick."

Every little bit helps when you're chasing the 49ers.

Alabama players dodge suspensions

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama will not suspend athletes who got loan guarantees and cut-rate deals from a tire and auto accessories dealer. However, the university said Thursday it will continue its investigation.

Culpepper Clark, executive assistant to the school president, said the findings are "inconclusive at this time."

"As a result," he said, "all involved student athletes remain eligible."

Boyd Sutherland, owner of Bojo's Mag Wheels and Accessories told The Associated Press in August he routinely guaranteed finance company payments for players so they would be approved for loans and may have allowed some players to make purchases on credit without ever paying for them.

Playoff race brings Maldonado to Texas

■ Rangers bolster lineup with veteran outfielder from Toronto and pitcher Chris Howard from Boston.

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Rangers, trying to improve their depth while fighting for the AL wild card, on Thursday acquired veteran outfielder Candy Maldonado from Toronto and pitcher Chris Howard from Boston.

Maldonado was acquired for a player to be named. Texas gave the Red Sox outfielder Jack Voigt for Howard, who may not immediately join the major-league team.

Maldonado, who will turn 35 on Tuesday, hit .269 with seven homers and 25 RBIs in 61 games this year for Toronto.

He entered the season with a .253 career average, 137 home runs and 588 RBIs for Los Angeles, San Francisco, Cleveland, Milwaukee, the Chicago Cubs and Toronto.

Maldonado could help Texas because of his postseason experience. He's been in six League Championship Series, and he appeared in the 1989 World Series with San Francisco and the 1992 Series with the Blue Jays.

To make room for Maldonado, the Rangers optioned Luis Ortiz to Tulsa. He's expected to rejoin Texas on Friday when rosters expand to 40 players.

The Blue Jays activated right-handed reliever Danny Cox from the 15-day DL to take Maldonado's roster spot.

Howard, 29, will fly to Texas Friday. Team officials will then decide if he will immediately join the Rangers or go to Class AAA Oklahoma City. Voigt was assigned from Class AA Tulsa to Class AAA Pawtucket.

Howard strained his left forearm during spring training and started the season in extended spring training. He was 0-2 with a 5.23 ERA in 6 games at Sarasota. He was promoted to Pawtucket on July 2 and was 3-1 with a 3.92 ERA in 17 appearances. He was taken off Boston's major league roster and designated for assignment on Aug. 21.

Voigt was outrighted to Tulsa on Aug. 23 and hit .188 with one home run and 3 RBIs in four games with the Drillers.

The Rangers also announced Thursday that Domingo Jean has been assigned to the Cincinnati Reds, who claimed the right-handed pitcher by outright waivers.

Jean, acquired from Houston for Roger Luce May 18, was 3-8, 6.14 in 24 games (13 starts) at Oklahoma City and 2-1, 6.59 in 3 starts with Houston's Tucson club. Moody was 0-1, 6.23 in one start at Charlotte and has no record and a 6.75 ERA in 10 relief appearances at Tulsa.

In addition, left-handed pitcher Ritchie Moody has cleared waivers and been assigned outright to Tulsa.

Entering Thursday night's games, Texas' 59-57 record was good for a half-game lead over Kansas City, Milwaukee and Seattle. Oakland was 2 1/2 games behind and closing.

The Rangers also announced Thursday that pitchers Jose Alberro and Mark Brandenburg will rejoin the team Friday from Oklahoma City.

Also being recalled are designated hitter Sam Horn and catcher John Marzano, both of whom also were on the 89ers.

RHCC wins match

The Ranchland Hills Country Club team won a challenge match with Green Tree, Mission and Midland Country Clubs Thursday with a scoring average of 75.1. Liz Tinney (72) was low gross for Ranchland and Emily Goodfellow (66) low net. MCC's team was second at 76.3, Mission third at 76.4 and Green Tree fourth at 78.

Other low grosses: Betty Perkins (88, Mission Tri-na Albright (76), Green Tree; Laura Waits (73), Midland CC. Low nets were: LaDell Nolan (72) Mission; Julie Martin (70) Green Tree; Mary Emma Bennett (73), Midland CC.

DALLAS — A foursome from The Club at Mission Dorado will compete in the largest national amateur golf tournament for country clubs and resorts Sept. 6-10 at the E-Z GO/Textron Associate Club Team Championship. The tournament is at the Pinehurst Resort and Country Club in North Carolina. Odessa's Tommy Darland and Midland's Jay Floyd, Tom Hill, William Hill and James Newton will compete for the Odessa club.

Maddux stops Astros after two wins

The Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

ATLANTA — Greg Maddux posted his 13th victory in his last 14 decisions and became the NL's top winner as the Atlanta Braves beat the Houston Astros 5-2 Thursday.

Maddux (15-2) checked the Astros on six hits as he pitched his third straight complete game and his major league-leading ninth. Maddux, who had four strikeouts and one intentional walk, got 21 of the 27 outs on ground balls.

Pirates 6, Reds 4, (10)

CINCINNATI — Jeff King hit a two-run homer in the 10th inning, his fourth hit of the game, as Pittsburgh rallied against closer Jeff Brantley for the win.

Brantley (3-2) failed to hold a 4-3 lead in the ninth, only his third blown save in 28 chances. Midre Cummings and Nelson Liriano had pinch singles and Jacob Brumfield hit a sacrifice fly.

Phillies 6, Giants 0

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sid Fernandez and two relievers held San Francisco to five hits and Gregg Jefferies and Mark Whiten hit back-to-back as Philadelphia won 6-0 Thursday. Fernandez (6-1), who has won his last six decisions, allowed three hits in 6 2-3 innings before leaving with stiffness in his upper back. Ricky Bottalico got four outs and Heathcliff Slocumb pitched the ninth.

Expos 5, Padres 4, (10)

SAN DIEGO — Darrin Fletcher hit a solo homer with two outs in the top of the 10th.

Rookie reliever Ron Villone (1-1) retired the first two batters before Fletcher hit his 10th homer.

Willie Fraser (1-1) pitched one inning and Mel Rojas worked the 10th for his 24th save.

Cubs 12, Marlins 3

MIAMI — Jose Hernandez hit a grand slam and a solo homer to lead Chicago to a victory over Florida. Steve Traschel (6-10) allowed five hits and one run while striking out two and walking five over six innings in the game, which was delayed 71 minutes by rain. He was 1-3 with a 3.77 ERA in five starts against the Marlins coming into the game. Hernandez's solo homer in the fourth made it 3-0.

Belle rings in another Cleveland extra-inning win

The Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

CLEVELAND — Albert Belle homered in extra innings for the second straight night, hitting a two-run shot in the 10th to give Cleveland a 6-4 win Thursday night.

It marked the ninth time this year the Indians ended a home game with a homer. Belle has done it three times.

Mariners 11, Red Sox 2

BOSTON — Edgar Martinez, Vince Coleman, Dan Wilson and Luis Sojo each had three hits and everybody else in the Seattle lineup had at least one.

Seattle's Randy Johnson scratched from his start when he couldn't get loose warming up.

Athletics 8, Orioles 7

BALTIMORE — Mike Bordick hit a two-run homer in the eighth to lead Oakland to its first series sweep of Baltimore in three years.

The victory was Oakland's ninth in 11 games and gave the A's their first three-game sweep of the Orioles since May 1992.

Royals 7, Brewers 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Tommy Goodwin, who doubled following Johnny Damon's game-tying leadoff homer in the ninth, scored on Mike Fetters' errant pick-off attempt to third.

Damon's first major league homer tied it 6-6 after the Brewers had scored three in the ninth to take a one-run lead.

Yankees 11, Angels 6

NEW YORK — Paul O'Neill drove in eight runs with three home runs and a single as the Angels lost their sixth straight.

O'Neill, who raised his season homer total to 19, hit a three-run shot in each of the first two innings off starter Brian Anderson (6-7) as the Yankees built a 7-0 lead.

White Sox 9, Tigers 0

CHICAGO — Ozzie Guillen's three-run single was the key hit as Chicago scored eight runs with two outs in the second inning of a win over Detroit Tigers.

Chicago sent 13 batters to the plate and had six hits against Mike Moore and Brian Bohanon in its highest scoring inning this season.

ANGELS: Mendoza says satisfaction, loss of key players contributed to second-half slide

(From 1C)

The Angels finished 36-32 in the first half while Wichita brought up the rear in the West at 31-37. Both teams have lost key players since then.

"Right now we're the closest to where we were in the first half," Angel shortstop Tim Harkrider said. "We've gotten some of the momentum back. It's not who has what record when you go to the playoffs, but who's peaking at the right time."

Mendoza feels his club matches up with the Wranglers better than the other two teams in the West. The Angels will throw right-hander Korey Keling (8-5, 3.46 ERA) against Wrangler righty Kris Ralston (9-4, 3.56) tonight.

"We feel more confident in beating Wichita than El Paso or San Antonio because we played them better than El Paso or San Antonio the whole year," Mendoza said. "That's the way the whole team feels."

The Midland manager also likes his team's chances in Wichita, where it will have to win at least one game to take the series. Games 1 and 2 are in Midland with the rest of the game's coming in Wichita.

"Even if we split at home, I feel like we can beat them in Wichita," Mendoza said. "We've done it before and we could have done it last time."

Harkrider doesn't feel pressure to sweep the two games at home either.

"Of course everybody wants to sweep," he said. "But we've played pretty well at their place. You have to look at it like this: We know we can't win it at home so we have to get what we can at home and finish the rest up at their place."

The Angels admitted that clinching a playoff spot with a first-half title may have hurt their motivation in the second half.

"Right after we won the first half, it didn't," Harkrider said. "But when we hit hard times and started struggling, it was easy for everybody to say, 'Hey, we've already won the first half.' That could have been one of the reasons our slide continued."

Said Mendoza: "We kind of got satisfied. We did talk and talk and had meetings and tried to get these guys to go the same way we did in the first half, but we couldn't. Also taking (Todd) Greene and (Jovino) Carvajal up to Triple-A, that did really affect us also."

Greene led the league in home runs and Carvajal in stolen bases. Angel third baseman George Arias may have suffered the most for Greene's absence. He hit in front of the Angel catcher and went into a slump sometime after Greene left.

Wichita had Texas League MVP candidate Johnny Damon, a power-hitting, speedy outfielder, promoted to the Kansas City Royals in the second half and lost save leader Jamie Bluma to a Triple-A promotion.

One thing Midland baseball fans won't see in the series is a heated rivalry. The two club's members have all but started a mutual admiration society.

"(Johnson's) a great guy," Mendoza said. "It's not much of a rivalry like El Paso (where) we always get into trouble ... fights and all. The people are going to see clean baseball."

Johnson said the pressure is off his team now that it's won the second half. And playing in Midland just gets Wichita off the hook even more.

"Our clubs get along real well, which is interesting," Johnson said. "I think Mario is a great guy. To me it's real relaxing playing these guys. Whoever wins, we can shake hands and say, 'See you down the road.' "

The Angels hope Johnson's experience in Midland isn't too relaxing.

"You don't want to go in looking like crap in the playoffs," Angel centerfielder Michael Wolff said. "So we're trying to gain some semblance of the way we were playing in the first half."

Angels vs. Wranglers

Playoff Notes

Midland will be without second baseman J.D. Ramirez and outfielder Emmitt Cohick for the series. Both were promoted to Triple-A Vancouver Thursday. Utility infielder Freddy Diaz rejoins the team from Single-A Lake Elsinore to help fill the void.

Whatever team wins the series, one city's mayor will stay warmer this winter. Midland mayor Bobby Burns and Wichita mayor Bob Knight have wagered team jackets on the outcome of the series.

Angel manager Mario Mendoza said he may play Luis Raven in left field to get Pedro Guerrero in the lineup as the designated hitter. Guerrero was the 1981 World Series co-MVP and Mendoza would like his playoff experience in the game.

The Midland franchise is 3-6 in the playoffs and Wichita is 16-11. The last time Midland won a playoff game was in '79 against San Antonio in a series it lost two games to one.

Midland Notes

OFFENSE: Centerfielder Michael Wolff has been the Angels' best bat in the second half hitting .333 with eight home runs and 33 RBIs through Thursday. Third baseman George Arias leads the team in home runs (30) and RBIs (104). Second baseman Orlando Munoz is hitting .313.

PITCHING: Reliever Mike Schooler has closed 20 of 22 opportunities since winning the closer's role. Starters Korey Kelling and Ryan Hancock have the most experience of a young Midland staff.

Wichita Notes

OFFENSE: Designated hitter Mandy Romero leads Wichita with 21 home runs and 82 RBIs through Thursday. Third baseman Line Diaz was hitting .347 with 41 RBIs. He hit .556 Aug. 14-20 to gain Texas League player-of-the-week honors. Catcher Sal Fasano leads the team with 66 RBIs. Manager Ron Johnson calls outfielder Rod Myers (.308, 61 RBIs, 28 stolen bases) the team MVP. Shortstop Felix Martinez has 44 stolen bases.

PITCHING: Kris Ralston is the team's current leader in wins with nine and had a 19 inning scoreless streak in the second half. Closer Don Strange has used a split-finger fastball to effectively fill in for Jamie Bluma.

Pitching Rotation

Times and pitching rotation for Games 2 through 5 are:

Game 2—Wichita (Mike Bovee, 8-8, 4.81 ERA) at Midland (Willard Brown, 9-10, 5.18), 7 p.m.

Game 3—Midland (Ryan Hancock, 12-9, 4.56) at Wichita (Brian Bevil, 5-7, 4.18), 6:15 p.m.

Game 4—(if necessary) Midland (Geoff Edsell, 2-3, 5.91) at Wichita (TBA), 6:15 p.m.

Game 5—(if necessary) Midland (TBA) at Wichita (TBA), 7:15 p.m.

Angels fall 4-2 to San Antonio Missions to end regular season

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — The Midland Angels fell to San Antonio 4-2 Thursday in their final regular season game of 1995. Midland ends the second half of the Texas League Western Division at 30-38 and will begin its playoff series with Wichita tonight in Midland. The Missions finish the year at 29-39 in last place in the West.

Mission starter Jose Prado (7-11) took a no-hitter into the sixth. Midland fell behind 4-0 before breaking through against Prado in the sixth for its two runs. Angel Luis Raven struck out with the bases loaded in the seventh inning to end the Angels' threat.

The Angels' runs came when Orlando Munoz and Tim Harkrider hit back-to-back singles and were later driven in by Pedro Guerrero. Midland first baseman Leon Glenn was the Angel catcher in the last game and threw out one of two base stealers.

Agassi survives his worst match of year at U.S. Open

AP Laserphoto

Zina Garrison Jackson returns a shot against Lindsey Davenport.

NEW YORK (AP) — Andre Agassi played his worst match of the past year Thursday night against an inspired opponent playing the match of his life in a second-round shocker that came perilously close to toppling the U.S. Open defending champion.

Overpowering the ball, rushing the net wildly and double-faulting like a hacker on key points, Agassi dug himself into a hole, got furious with himself and somehow crawled out with a 5-7, 6-3, 5-7, 6-0, 6-2 victory over Alex Corretja of Spain.

What Agassi and the crowd may remember most about this match will be the backward, over-the-head shot he drilled off a lob in the last game of his fourth-set sweep and the forehand he ripped on the final point that Corretja chased futilely before collapsing with leg cramps.

But what Agassi would no doubt like to forget is how he double-faulted two straight times to lose a first set filled with his 21 errors, how he started the third set with six errors to fall behind a break, and how he kept brazenly slugging balls with no purpose or rhythm.

"I didn't feel great about a lot of that stuff out there tonight," said Agassi, explaining why he slammed a water bottle to the court after the match. "I was just ticked off. It was 11 o'clock at night. I shouldn't be out there like that."

Agassi was not the only favorite to have trouble. Crouching low, eyes squinting in the sun, the swirling wind tossing her curly hair, Monica Seles stood poised to pounce on serves, then hesitated as if unsure, the familiar suddenly alien. She pushed balls back softly instead of slugging them, and when it was her turn to serve she settled for safety rather than power.

Against any of the top 20 players, Seles might have been knocked out of the Open, her comeback interrupted in the second round on a day when two seeded men — No. 11 Sergi Bruguera and No. 16 Andrei Medvedev— and one seeded woman — No. 10 Lindsay Davenport — lost.

Luckily for her, she played Erika de Lone, ranked No. 113 and playing in the Open for the first time in four years after taking a hiatus from Harvard. Seles beat her easily when they played once as 17 year olds in 1991, and she beat her just as easily again this time, 6-2, 6-1.

The score aside, Seles was not as impressive as she's been in winning all her matches since returning to tournament play two weeks ago. It wasn't a case of nerves, which might have accounted for her breathlessness Monday night in her first-round match.

"The only thing today that was really bugging me was the wind because it was swirling," she said. "I couldn't control the ball, where to go, or the ball toss, or everything."

Some other seeded players were not so lucky to escape. No. 10 Lindsay Davenport lost 6-1, 6-3 to Zina Garrison Jackson, who put off plans of retirement and decided to rededicate herself to the game. In other women's matches, No. 4 Conchita Martinez beat Kimberly Po 6-1, 6-4; No. 5 Jana Novotna routed Asa Carlsson 6-1, 6-2; No. 7 Kimiko Date beat Lisa Raymond 6-2, 1-6, 6-4; No. 11 Anke Huber downed Anne Miller 6-0, 7-5; and No. 16 Brenda Schultz-McCarthy eliminated Lindsay Lee 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Among the men, No. 7 Yevgeny Kafelnikov took Nuno Marques 6-3, 6-4, 6-4; No. 11 Sergi Bruguera was upset by Daniel Vacek 6-2, 6-3, 6-4; No. 13 Marc Rosset defeated Patrick Rafter 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3; No. 16 Andrei Medvedev lost 1-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4 to Sargis Sargsian; and the unseeded Edberg beat Daniel Nestor 6-1, 7-6 (7-4), 2-6, 6-1.

Unser needs heroics at Vancouver Molson Indy

■ Last year the Indy-car star fought off food poisoning to win.

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Al Unser Jr. needs another heroic weekend in Canada.

A year ago, the second-generation Indy-car star, on the road to his second PPG Cup championship, fought off food poisoning to win the Vancouver Molson Indy.

This week, he needs a win to have any chance of overtaking series leader Jacques Villeneuve in the 1995 title chase.

Actually, the 24-year-old Villeneuve may already have wrapped up the PPG Cup, depending on the outcome of an final appeal by Unser's Marlboro Penske team.

In June at Portland, Ore., Unser ran away with an easy victory only to have it taken away by CART officials several hours later when they determined his car had a technical violation.

That gave the victory to runner-up Jimmy Vasser, his first, and stripped Unser of 21 points — 20 for the win and one for leading the most laps.

Going into Friday's opening day of practice and qualifying on Vancouver's nine-turn temporary circuit at the downtown Pacific Place, Unser trails Villeneuve 168-113 — an insurmountable lead with only two races and a total of 44 points remaining.

But, should an independent appeals panel find for the Penske team in their appeal, still unscheduled, Unser would regain those 21 points and be trailing Villeneuve 168-134. Even then, though, Unser would face an uphill battle.

"I do not consider the championship mine until all the numbers are final," Villeneuve said. "But, if we can win, or at least finish in the top three our four, we can win it in Vancouver. That would be great for me and for Team Green."

'Huskers dominate OSU Cowboys

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — No. 2 Nebraska opened defense of its national championship with a dominating performance Thursday night, getting three first-half touchdowns from Lawrence Phillips in a 64-21 victory over Oklahoma State.

Phillips, cleared Tuesday by the NCAA to play, had 125 yards at halftime and finished with 153 on 12 carries as the Cornhuskers rolled up 671 yards and beat Oklahoma State for the 22nd straight time. They have not lost to the Cowboys since 1961, the only break a tie in 1973.

Tommie Frazier added two touchdown passes and scored once on the ground. The Cornhuskers, 13-0 last year, won their 26th straight regular-season game — the longest streak in the country — and 18th in a row in Big Eight play.

First-year coach Bob Simmons saw his Cowboys, 3-7-1 in 1994, get mauled from the outset and lose their 19th straight conference game. Oklahoma State had 1 yard of offense in the first quarter, and five times during the game had possessions of 5 yards or less.

Zokol zaps 65 for first-round lead

■ Greater Milwaukee Open

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Richard Zokol, whose best finish this year was a tie for 40th place, shot a 6-under-par 65 Thursday to hold a one-stroke lead after the first round of the Greater Milwaukee Open. Zokol won this tournament in 1992, but this year he is 246th on the PGA money list with $11,571 and is trying to come back after losing exempt status in 1994.

Billy Mayfair, the 1993 champion, was in second place at 66. British Open champion John Daly joined Dick Mast, Robert Gamez and Gary Hallberg at 67.

Zokol had a poor practice round and said he decided to "relax, take it easy, not press." He sank two 25-foot putts, including one on the first hole at Brown Deer Park Golf Course, and finished with seven birdies.

Zokol's top results this year were 40th place in the Buick Classic and the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic. Mayfair is ninth on the money list with $827,441 and won the Western Open, finished second in the Phoenix Open and tied for second in the World Series of Golf.

Daly's round included six birdies and two bogeys. A crowd started gathering at dawn to watch him hit the course at 8:26 a.m.

MHS: Reeger wants Bulldogs in better condition and a lot of penalties," MHS coach Ronnie Reeger said. "We didn't help our defense out at all.

(From 1C)

"I think our kids wanted to go out and have a good showing, but I think they are disappointed with this. Hopefully, it will get the kids' attention. I know it has the attention of the coaches.

"It's obvious that we played a team that was in better physical condition and we have to get that corrected."

Big Spring erupted in the 15-minute drill when flashy returning starting quarterback Bucky Crenshaw burned the MHS secondary with a 49-yard TD pass to star tailback Toma McVae. T.J. Rios kicked the extra point. Later, Big Spring scored when Crenshaw hit Mark Decker with a 10-yard scoring pass. Crenshaw ended the game completing eight of 13 passes for 130 yards and two TDs. McVae had 17 carries for a game high 114 yards.

"We are farther along than we were at this time last year, but we have to defend the option better," Big Spring coach Dwight Butler said. "We said from the start that our defense was going to give up some big plays. We also have preached that they have to react when that happens and the defense got us a fumble during the quarter drill."

The two teams fought to a 2-2 tie during the scrimmage format at the start. Big Spring scored first with McVae scoring from six yards out. The Steer defense came up with another big play when Donnie Hill converted an MHS fumble into a touchdown when Jerome Eldridge couldn't handle a pitchout.

Then the Bulldogs took control. Quarterback Russell Dunlavy set up his own 4-yard TD run with a 45-yard pass to Sam Powell. MHS quarterback Ky Edwards later scored on an eight-yard run after a 34-yard pass to Jerivan McDaniel.

The Bulldogs are one week away from opening the season against Class 4A Frenship, and it looks like the quarterback war still rages. The junior Dunlavy had the best numbers, rushing for an MHS best 63 yards, completing his only pass for 45 yards, but he also had the key fumble on a good drive in the 15-minute period. Jeremy Pinner rushed for 15 yards and threw one interception in five attempts. Edwards completed one of two passes for 34 yards and Steven Potter completed one of two passes for 22 yards.

"Pinner, Dunlavy and Edwards all bring something to the table for us," Reeger said. "As much option as we run, we expect that we will end up using more than one quarterback anyway."

One of the disappointing aspects of the scrimmage for MHS was the lack of production from the running backs. Dunlavy's 63 yards rushing and Edwards' 32 yards were tops among the backs and both are quarterbacks. Second teamer Jeffery Arnold had 31 yards rushing. However, MHS used seven running backs in the scrimmage.

Defensively, MHS got a fumble recovery from Chris Vasquez and a wrestling interception from sophomore Eric McCright.

Big Spring faces Top 10 power Borger in its season opener on the road next week.

"We needed this scrimmage because we have Borger next week and we know Midland High will hit you," Butler said. "Against Borger, we have to figure out a way to control the clock and keep the defense off the field."

MHS travels past Lubbock to Frenship to meet a team that beat them late in the game last season.

"We start tomorrow (Friday) preparing for Frenship," Reeger said. "Now we know where we need to go to work. If we play like we did tonight in the last 15 minutes, we could be in trouble."

LEE: Rebels want to build continuity with final scrimmage improvement, hope to get better at what were doing and hope things click a little bit. We want to build continuity."

The format of the scrimmage will differ from last week. First, the teams will bring around 45 players a piece. Last week, the Rebels took 70 to the scrimmage. Secondly, the first and second teams will get one 15-play set and then the teams will play a in a game-type situation for at least one quarter.

Parchman, who left the Socorro football program seven years ago, knows a few things about the Bulldogs' program. The Bulldogs are a big team that will play physical, so it should give the Rebels a different challenge than the quicker Eastwood team.

"I used to coach there so I know a little of what to expect," said Parchman. "They will be bigger, stronger and more physical than Eastwood. It (Socorro) is a good place and they are serious about their football."

Socorro is returning 13 starters from 1994's 5-5 team. The Bulldogs have been picked by some publications to finish fifth in District 2-5A behind Eastwood.

Lee is returning seven starters on the defensive side of the ball. The Rebels' first-team defense was dominating last week, allowing just three first downs and keeping the Troopers silent on the ground.

The Rebels offense, which returns four starters from last year, found the end zone twice last Saturday. The first came on a long run by running back Alex Strambler and the second came through the air as quarterback John Thurman hit Antwan Alexander for a 70-yard strike. Thurman finished the game with 7-of-11 passing.

Lee will open the regular season next week when the Rebels host District 1-5A favorite, El Paso Irvin. The opener will take place at 7:30 p.m. at Midland Memorial Stadium.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your career will be in a state of flux. Make the right choices and you will enjoy astounding success! A new business partnership will show a profit sooner than expected. Guard your health by eating and exercising correctly. 1996 will bring a promotion and new perks. Make up your mind about marriage. Is a longtime alliance worth preserving?

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: actress Lily Tomlin, boxing great Rocky Marciano, singer Gloria Estefan, country singer Conway Twitty.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep a close eye on your money. Someone who wants to sell you something could stretch the truth. Go slow when entering into new relationships. The timing might be wrong. Play a waiting game.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your obligations to yourself are of prime importance now. Rely on tried-and-true procedures at work. Say "no" to shopping sprees and friends' hair-brained schemes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A wonderful day lies ahead if you play your cards right. Meet with VIPs privately and spell out your terms. A pleasant surprise is in store. You get what you want! Pursue romance this evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Steer clear of people who make you tense. Taking careless chances could cost you money or someone's respect. Say "no" to a dare. Ask someone else to drive if you have been drinking. Virtue triumphs!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Giving your best on the job is a must. No matter what you hear, be kind and helpful. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences. People instinctively like you; be yourself. Know your own heart and mind.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A financial matter should not be taken lightly. Give the books a thorough going-over. Discussing a problem face-to-face is better than using the phone. Turn your feet towards home this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your personal relationships should flourish now. Be attentive to your mate's needs. A work-related event could thrust you into the public eye. Your popularity soars!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Indecision could be a problem in business negotiations. Decide what you really want and you will probably get a fair shake. A friend of a friend does you a favor. Show your heartfelt gratitude.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your star is rising in certain circles. Assisting other people will help your own career. Approach people in powerful positions without being obvious about it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Mix and mingle today. A bounty of good will awaits you! The more people you know, the better your chances of prosperity. Forge alliances with individuals who share your goals. Establish a network of contacts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Go easy when buying gifts. Avoid being "generous to a fault." Careful planning will make your weekend more fun. Arrange a brunch date for Sunday. Someone who scoffs at romance has been bitterly disappointed.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your luck changes for the better. You are able to put together the deal you have long desired. Be receptive to advice from experts and parents — they could know something you do not.

Opening lead: Five of ◇

The club had prepared a special event. A selection of hands from the 1995 European Championship was included in the regular boards for the Tuesday night duplicate. One of the entrants was Trump Coup Tommy, who, as our readers know, is at best an average player except in one case: When trumps break badly, Tommy performs miracles at the table.

It was Tommy's lucky night. The first hand he played involved a 5-0 trump division and, as usual, Tommy was at his sparkling best. He had arrived at four hearts on the auction shown and West's double was a sure indicator that trumps were not going to behave kindly.

West led a low diamond, suggesting that the defender was void in clubs. Tommy won in hand with the ace, crossed to the king of diamonds, then cashed three top spades, discarding the table's remaining diamond. After ruffing a diamond low, declarer led a club from the table and ruffed with the ace as West parted with a spade. A spade ruff in dummy brought declarer's trick total to eight and produced the unusual position where declarer and West held nothing but trumps, while dummy and East had only clubs.

A club was led from dummy and ruffed in the closed hand with the ten. West overruffed with the queen and returned the five of trumps, taken by declarer's eight. Tommy now tucked West in with a low trump, and there was no way West could prevent Tommy from scoring the jack of hearts for the fulfilling trick!

Grateful Dead's Jerry Garcia died smiling, at peace, his widow says

NEW YORK — Jerry Garcia died smiling.

"It's strange to say, but he looked so peaceful," Deborah Koons Garcia wrote in the Sept. 21 issue of Rolling Stone.

"I said to the guy at the funeral home, 'Look, he's smiling. Did you do that to him?' And he said, 'No, that's exactly the way I found him.' His face was so at peace."

The magazine invited Koons to write a column after Garcia died of a heart attack Aug. 9 at a drug rehabilitation clinic at age 53.

The Grateful Dead leader decided last summer to confront his heroin addiction, his widow wrote.

"It's a pain in the butt. ... I don't want to do it for the rest of my life," she quoted him as saying.

Garcia checked into the Betty Ford Clinic in late July, spent two weeks there and checked himself out, she wrote. He then checked into Serenity Knolls near San Francisco when "he found himself drawn back, wanting to do drugs again because his body hurt so much." He died at that clinic.

Garcia had used heroin shortly before his death but hardening of the arteries killed him, a coroner said.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — In the "I swear it's true category": the ocean rescue of a suicidal man by Michael Jackson's plastic surgeon as Heidi Fleiss ran for a phone to call 911.

Heidi Fleiss called 911 while struggle in water went on.

The surgeon, Dr. Steven Hoefflin, said he and Fleiss were in a group walking off dinner on Santa Monica Pier early Thursday when they saw a man with his hands cuffed behind his back jump into the water.

"I just went right in. He was going to drown if I didn't do something," said Hoefflin, who had been at the same fashionable restaurant as Fleiss but had never met the woman convicted of running a call girl ring for the rich and famous.

Hoefflin struggled with the man in 56-degree water for 30 minutes, joined by a second person in their group. A Harbor Patrol boat was used to fish the three out. Hoefflin's hand was cut but all were otherwise unhurt.

Fleiss called 911 as the struggle went on in the water.

The identity of the suicidal man wasn't released. Police said he was despondent over financial matters and hospitalized for psychiatric evaluation.

Fleiss, 29, was convicted earlier this month of conspiracy, tax evasion and money laundering. She was released without bail pending her sentencing Nov. 13. She already had been sentenced to three years on state pandering charges.

MATTHEWS, N.C. — Nadia Comaneci urged a roomful of aspiring young gymnasts to hit the mat regardless of skill.

Nadia Comaneci urges aspiring gymnasts to hit the mat.

"You may be a talent or you may not be a talent," she told about 100 children Wednesday at the International Sports Center. "You're still going to accomplish more than any normal kid who stays home and watches TV."

Comaneci, a 1976 Olympic gold medalist, is 33 now and engaged to another Olympic champ, Bart Conner. They live in Oklahoma and run a gymnastics camp.

The couple was in suburban Charlotte for an exhibition.

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Milton Rhodes resigned as general manager of the Spoleto Festival U.S.A. following a season that left the arts fest $900,000 deeper in debt.

Rhodes will remain as a consultant for six months, drawing his regular monthly pay of about $10,400, said Homer Burrous, chairman of the festival board.

A consultant's report earlier held Rhodes responsible for $900,000 in excessive expenses, but Burrous would say only, "Milton Rhodes has done some very good things for the festival. We wish him well."

Rhodes, who was hired early last year, didn't return phone messages left Thursday at his Spoleto office or home in Mount Pleasant.

He replaced composer Gian Carlo Menotti, who left the festival in a dispute over finances and artistic control. The festival has a total deficit of $1.8 million.

they were much more complex than what had gone on before.

"Their attitude was they kept changing keys, and there was lots of modulation, which made the tunes more interesting tonally."

Eric Clapton

"Heck of a guitarist and a good musician who could've done anything he wanted, but chose to go into this. Rock music has given people like him an avenue to pursue."

Madonna

"What can you say about a girl who wears her underwear outside her clothing? She's a perfomer; a show person, and that's something you can't divorce from this whole thing. You may not like what she does, but it works. Sex is what people are interested in. Sex sells and it sells big time in this country."

Bruce Springsteen

"The ultimate all-American guy, he symbolizes more than anything the American move back to the right. Musically, he writes very, very simple tunes. He tries to break things down to their bare essense."

Bob Dylan

"Dylan typifies the older American left, although he underwent a religious conversion like so many Americans who are seeing a great awakening as far as religion is concerned. Dylan typifies that moving away from the left through conversion."

The Rolling Stones

"The Stones were always sort of the bad boys, and I guess they still are. They brought that anti-social statement and they brought expressionism into rock. The Stones sort of developed that element of hard rock and punk so they are, in a sense, responsible for the punk movement.

"They also helped move rock away from the '50s — when we were so nice and clean — and into this naughty generation."

The Who

"The Who is different from the Stones; they're not quite as naughty, but still into that kind of expressionist thing. Their opera, 'Tommy,' was a major influence."

Jerry Lee Lewis

"The snake-oil salesman of rock. That whole family is wild. When you talk about American religion, you have to talk about the showman/snake-oil aspect of it. He and cousin (Jimmy Swaggart) typify that; Jerry Lee sees (religion) as snake oil and that's how come he rejects it. You can always ask for forgiveness, and as a result, Jerry Lee tended to be pretty skeptical. But he wrote some great stuff."

Elvis Presley

"Elvis is an icon so you cant condemn the man and I don't want to condemn him. He certainly was one of the biggest influences and one of the biggest names. He was human and he really died of a drug addiction.

"There are plenty of black people around who sang better and were better than Elvis, but they were black. Elvis took rock music's African roots — and he was one of the first to realize it was an African art — and from there he basically was a white man who sang like black man. Because of that, he was wildly successful. Back then, if a black man sang like a black man, no one paid attention. A black man who sang like a white man no one would noticed. He moved like a black man, he not only sang like one, but he moved like one."

Michael Jackson

"Like Madonna, he's another performer. He's a tremendous performer and entertainer. He's a businessman, too, and business is an important element, too. It does look like he's gone too far sometimes, but how far is far?"

Jerry Garcia

"The Grateful Dead, they may be the best musicians — maybe better than the Beatles — that have ever been rock musicians. They are so adaptable; they just did everything. They were able to adapt all kinds of sounds that wouldn't have been rock and roll and turned it into rock and roll."

The Eagles

"The Eagles are another band like the Grateful Dead, in that they are a bunch of good musicians who are interested in so much more than rock. They are also interested in bringing good singing into it. They aren't these guys who have burned themselves out vocally. They can sing and perform, and are very educated, sophisticated musicians."

Nirvana

"There's a band that has a lot of emotions around it because (former lead singer Kurt) Cobain committed suicide. Frankly I don't think they're nearly as good quality as some of the other bands today, but they're a symbol. Nirvana has become a symbol for a generation. There's all of that emotional stuff around Cobain and his drug addiction ... but he was a common, garden variety drug addict who was real fortunate to be as popular as he was. But he was able to say things that the younger generation agrees with."

Selena

"She, too, was a symbol of an entire emerging subculture, and another person who died and became a symbol."

Neil Diamond

"One of the greatest tune writers is Neil Diamond. That guy could write tunes."

CITYLINE — The Talk of the Town

SISTERS: Acting long a strength of cast

(From 10C)

concede the plots' baroque nature.

"The show itself is not real," Lipman says. "It's very theatrical, it's very hyped, a lot of comedy stuff, fantasy stuff. My partner and I were playwrights in the theater and we tried to incorporate" theatricality in the series.

"But in saying that, the important thing we've always told the writers, directors and actors is the relationships are absolutely real, those emotions are true, no matter what craziness is going around," he said.

"Sisters" also borrows stylistically from the theater: pushing walls away, allowing characters to step outside and observe themselves, Lipman said. "And the audience comes along with us," he adds.

This season's traumas seem a bit more mundane, at least at the outset. Georgie, seeking a new direction in life after her divorce, finds love in the arms of a younger man (Joe Flanigan).

Kurtz, who shines as a socialite-turned-stalwart, owns a collector's set of stage awards, including two Tonys. Kalember, endearing as the former model homemaker who made a bad choice in therapists, has her own share of theater credits and honors; Sela Ward won an Emmy for her role as the beautiful-but-troubled artist last season.

Kelley, who made her mark on "L.A. Law" as Arnie Becker's secretary Gwen, replaces Jo Anderson as her half-sister.

SAVITCH: Neither show all that good

lowing at 9 p.m. CDT is "Intimate Portrait: Jessica Savitch," a one-hour documentary.

Neither film is outstanding, but together they effectively frame issues TV news has never been able to put to rest: How much of the news biz is rightly show biz? How much of informing is necessarily performing? And in a game where looks are so important, what are the rules for the "fairer sex"?

If you doubt such questions remain unresolved, just recall the recent debacle at CBS when Dan Rather was teamed at the "Evening News" anchor desk with Connie Chung — who, by the way, was an NBC News comer during the final days of the woman who paved the way.

Based on the excellent 1988 biography by Gwenda Blair, "Almost Golden" stars a bleached and lacquered Sela Ward ("Sisters") as Jessica, and a dismally miscast Ron Silver as her devoted but destructive love, Ron Kershaw.

Rock at MC: From Elvis to Hootie

Likenesses of "The Who" stand in the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. According to MC instructor Michael Jordan, The Who was one of the early influential expressionist groups out of Britain.

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff Writer

Rock music has come a long way through the generations. From Bobby Darin's "Mac the Knife" to Bill Haley's "Rock Around the Clock" to The Beatles, the Rolling Stones, Led Zeppelin and Hootie and the Blowfish.

Through it all, many people have never looked at the art form as just that — art. Instead, rock music has been viewed as anything from a necessry evil to downright evil to a music that is responsible for the downfall of our culture.

Rock nd roll will not likely bring an end to civilization as we know it. But it has given — and will continue to give — parents fits. It has done such a fine job at doing that for the better part of four decades.

The music has endured through the protest songs of the '60s, the disco of the '70s, the power pop/new wave/punk of the '80s and the gunge age of the '90s. Grunge is still in, and rock music will outlast that, too, and there will be another sub-genre that will follow.

What is immediate and real for rock music is that this weekend marks the opening of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in Cleveland, a building in the works for years and a project that finally comes to fruition with a massive concert on HBO Saturday night.

Locally, Midland College is now even offering a course that studies the history of rock music as an art form.

Michael Jordan, self-described "frustrated opera singer" and fine arts instructor at MC, will teach the course. History and rock music have ben two of his hobbies.

His views on the following artists will allow insight into what may be topics for discussion in his class. All of the views on the following arists are Jordan's:

The Beatles

"They revitalized the art and sort of sent it off in a new direction. Musically, they were one of the most rewarding groups. A lot of their tunes were folk songs and

"Rock Music: Recent American History" satisfies the humanities elective at Midland College.

The course, taught by fine arts instructor Michael Jordan, is a three-hour course costing $114 (not including books, fees).

Late registration at MC runs through Sept. 7.

Class times are T-Th, 9:30-10:50 a.m., and T-Th, 5:30-6:50 p.m.

Alison Krauss revitalizes the bluegrass sound

Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Alison Krauss gets a lot of advice.

Critics, music biz weasels and bluegrass fans all have opinions — some even seem to feel a passionate stake — as to how this 24-year-old fiddler-vocalist-producer should use her impossibly sweet soprano and other formidable talents.

Even the Country Music Association has taken notice of Alison Krauss' extraordinary bluegrass talent, nominating her for four awards.

Here's what Entertainment Weekly had to say when Krauss stretched out from bluegrass to renditions of songs by Bad Company and The Foundations replete with drums and electric bass:

"Krauss ought to know that to douse the (bluegrass) fire in pop is to cut out its very heart. Refinement has its virtues but only to a point."

Krauss, outwardly shy but with a dictator's resolve about her music, was unimpressed: "I don't see that," she shrugged, perplexed that she has been miscast as a bluegrass purist.

As a kid growing up in the 1970s in Champaign, Ill., Krauss was winning fiddle contests at bluegrass festivals by day and roller-skating on Friday and Saturday nights to a Top 40 soundtrack. "Yeah," she smiles, "Bad Company, Free, Foreigner, Lynyrd Skynyrd."

"Now That I've Found You: The Collection," which compiles highlights from Krauss' bluegrass albums with band Union Station and other old and new Krauss material, sent her career into orbit. It's sold over 1 million copies and produced hit country singles — "When You Say Nothing At All" and the current "Baby Now That I've Found You," a remake of a 1968 pop hit for The Foundations.

The compilation was a marketing move by Rounder Records that worked splendidly, capitalizing on the mainstream hit Krauss had recorded with the group Shenandoah, "Somewhere in the Vicinity of the Heart."

The Country Music Association even took note of the hits. The organization, which ignores modern bluegrass, nominated Krauss for four awards, including female vocalist of the year in which she'll compete with biggies like Reba McEntire and Mary Chapin Carpenter. "Now That I've Found You: The Collection" was originally nominated for best album, until CMA officials realized it wasn't eligible because much of the material was released previously.

'Sisters' enters sixth season of family angst

By Lynn Elber
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — It's so easy to take family for granted. The kid brother who's always broke but never fails to make you laugh. The sister who swiped your clothes and kept your childhood secrets.

Or the jealous sibling who scrawls "slut" on your Porsche. The sister requiring rescue from a therapist's lewd clutches. Or the other sister who decides unilaterally to put your ailing dad to sleep for good.

Wait a minute — we're definitely talking marketable dysfunction here, the kind that gets Jenny Jones and her talk-show cohorts salivating.

Well, tough for them: All that angst belongs to "Sisters," which on Sept. 23 begins its sixth season of taking family drama to operatic heights.

The durable NBC series returns in the 10 p.m. EDT Saturday slot that has become home to the Reed sisters — Alex (Swoosie Kurtz), Georgie (Patricia Kalember), Teddy (Sela Ward) and Charley (series newcomer Sheila Kelley).

The siblings are equally durable. In addition to the above-mentioned turmoil, they've been beset by cancer, alcoholism, various neuroses, rebellious children and a parade of only occasionally worthy men.

No scarlet letters or locusts yet, but be patient.

'Almost Golden,' documentary honor Savitch

By Frazier Moore
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — The story of Jessica Savitch, so-called Golden Girl, is a parable of the fool's gold she struck in television news.

It's the story of a TV anchorwoman (arguably the first) who made magic on the air. A proud pioneer in a man's domain. A victim. A blonde barracuda. A patsy. A star whose act failed her and finally did her in.

The story is heartbreaking. It's also instructive.

Savitch's life, which ended at age 36 in a bizarre auto accident a dozen years ago, will be spotlighted Monday by back-to-back programs on the Lifetime cable network.

First is "Almost Golden: The Jessica Savitch Story," a made-for-TV movie that begins at 7 p.m. CDT. Fol-

Nothing stands between Calvin and his profits

By Phil Rosenthal
Los Angeles Daily News

LOS ANGELES — So, we're supposed to believe that Calvin Klein had no idea anyone would be offended by the desperate teen-age runaway look he's using in his new ads?

Sure, Cal. Whatever you say.

Next thing you know, he's going to want us to believe that his blue jeans aren't inferior to Levi's, his underwear isn't overpriced and that the samples of his signature fragrance stuck between the pages of magazines like Details, GQ and Vanity Fair don't reek.

If pictures of glassy-eyed, greasy-haired, emaciated youths in suggestive poses, various stages of undress and bad lighting offer what Klein considers a "positive message" about "the spirit, independence and inner worth of today's young people," as his company maintained Monday, Klein and his pals are spending way too much time loitering in Times Square.

Just as disturbing as the ads themselves — produced by Klein's in-house ad agency and shot by photographer Steven Meisel, using all the subtlety he lent to Madonna's "Sex" book — is the apparent belief that we're all too stupid to see the trend, that we don't see the manipulation.

This week, it's Klein's company claiming to be "taken aback" by reaction to its ads and abruptly ending the campaign, which it claims "has been misunderstood by some."

The other day, it was the general manager of Los Angeles' KXEZ-FM (100.3) claiming he was surprised that people objected to ads featuring prostitute Divine Brown and pulling them off the air because "in no way did we want this spot to lend any credence that the way to get ahead in this world is through promiscuity."

Before that, it was Fox apologizing for an ad because it implied fat people weren't cool and Michael Jackson taking out the anti-Semitic lyrics on one of his jingles "because of the unforeseen reaction to specific words in my song by many people around the world."

Anybody remember the good old days when people thought things through BEFORE they expressed them publicly, thereby avoiding the need to retreat and issue apologies?

It wouldn't have taken a school marm to have predicted the firestorm of protest that met the Klein campaign.

One of the ads showed a youngster with her skirt hiked up and her underwear showing. Another had a boy in a denim vest and underwear, sans the jeans he was supposedly selling. We've come an awful long way since 1980, when Klein had 15-year-old Brooke Shields purr that nothing came between her and her Calvins — the emphasis being on "awful" as opposed to "long way."

There can be only two explanations for Klein's latest misstep.

One is that Klein and company are so far removed from the real world that they didn't see how ads playing off teen-age sexuality and evoking low-rent nudie magazines might offend people.

The other is that they did know it would offend some people and thought the windfall of publicity — even bad publicity — would be worth it.

Either way, the message is clear: They must think we're all incredibly stupid.

Stupid enough, at least, to spend $17 for cotton undershorts with someone else's name on them.

East Texas attorney keeps courthouse smiling with his caricatures

By Nicole Ponder
The Lufkin Daily News

LUFKIN — Bailiff Debbie Pittman, who spends much of her work day within the sober walls of Angelina County's courtrooms, smiled at an exaggerated, comical drawing of herself.

In the drawing, a menacing caricature of Ms. Pittman aims a gun into the courtroom. From the background, a cartoon judge speaks to her.

"I said sit them down, not shoot them down," the caption read.

The drawing is the work of Lufkin attorney Jerry Whiteker, and most courthouse employees are familiar with his cartoons. Whiteker has been creating his own courtroom comedy for about 22 years.

'The more serious the event, the more likely it's going to get a drawing. It's something to do during a trial, something to make people laugh.'

— Jerry Whieker, attorney

He said he has been drawing cartoons since he was about 8 years old, and incorporates his talent into his work as a way to relieve stress and provide comic relief.

"The more serious the event," Whiteker said, "the more likely it's going to get a drawing. It's something to do during a trial, something to make people laugh."

Rendered mostly on scraps of paper during court, the Whiteker collection is kept on the courthouse's many bulletin boards and in desk drawers. Judges are a favorite subject of Whiteker's art, which includes a caricature of State District Judge David Wilson wearing an executioner's robe complete with hood.

Wilson's secretary, Dorothy Due, displayed a caricature of herself drawn by Whiteker. In the drawing, a frazzled-looking Ms. Due holds two telephone receivers. "Can you be on both lines?" the caption reads.

Everyone in the judges' office has at least one drawing devoted to them.

"We should have kept all of his drawings over the years," Wilson said.

Court reporter Candice Parke kept a comical drawing of herself at work in the courtroom.

"Sometimes he draws pictures on the court docket before we go in — to make me laugh," she said.

Whiteker admits he has a bizarre sense of humor, and says some situations just "strike him as funny." He prefers to work mostly with ink and pencil although he has worked with oil and charcoal.

His drawings have gained fame in the courthouse, but he said he has no regrets about becoming a lawyer instead of an artist.

"There are some days, I wish I had," Whiteker said. "But artists starve — even the good ones. I think I'm doing what I'm supposed to be doing. The drawings are just fun along the way."

Crowd, cheers greet winning Houston bagpipe band's return

HOUSTON (AP) — Members of the St. Thomas' Episcopal School Bagpipe and Drum Band were greeted with fresh-cut flowers, balloons and kisses as they returned from Scotland, where they clinched the world championship.

The 28-member corps defeated seven bands to win the juvenile division of the World Pipe Band Championship earlier this month in Glasgow.

The students came home to a cheering crowd of about 250 late Monday at Houston Intercontinental Airport.

The school had captured the top honors in 1985 and fourth place during its trip to Scotland in 1993.

"It's nice to do it once, but if you can do it a second time, that solidifies it," said Michael Cusack, director of the band at the private school.

"Having won it two of three times isn't too bad. If I can keep that record up, I'll be blessed."

The weary dancers, drummers, pipers and chaperones carried trophies as they got off the plane.

Their parents, who had been waiting at the airport for more than two hours, sounded like a chorus when the band members and dancers walked through the gate.

"We heard them (from the) time we got off the plane," said Elaine McDonald, 14, a dancer.

"This is fantastic. These boys have really, really worked hard," said Peg Collins, grandmother of Ryan Klaftemegger, a piper.

St. Thomas' beat six Scottish bands and the Milton Optimist Pipe Band of Ontario, Canada, the defending world champions. St. Thomas' won first in three of four categories — piping, drumming and ensemble play.

The only American band to win the world piping championship, St. Thomas' also garnered trophies in five other competitions during its tour of Scotland.

In addition, McDonald, Michelle Cumagun and Nancy Fredrickson took home trophies in highland dancing. Cumagun won the Scottish Championship, making her the top 13-year-old highland dancer in the world.

"It was hard competition," she said. "I'm happy to be back home."

The bagpipe and drum band will lead the M.D. Anderson Cancer Center's Children's Art Project kickoff parade in October. The band plans to participate at the annual Dickens on The Strand festival in Galveston during the first week of December.

"The group showed they could take something difficult to do and do it well," said Henry Walters Jr., St. Thomas' headmaster. "I hope they will remember that for the rest of their lives, because they will have a lot of mountains to climb."

Visitors overload popular state park

FREDERICKSBURG (AP) — Enchanted Rock State Park will limit the number of daily visitors beginning today to reduce wear and tear on the popular park, state officials say.

"We're experiencing a lot of erosion problems, soil compaction and tree loss due to root exposure. And, our septic system and park staff are being taxed heavily," said Harold Lemons, assistant park manager.

The park had more than 350,000 visitors in the past year, exceeding the number projected when the park was built. The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department has concluded visitation should be limited to avoid additional damage to the park's environment and aging infrastructure.

"This measure will help protect our park's resources and provide a safer environment for park visitors," Lemons said.

The new policy will temporarily close the park when it reaches capacity during heavy use periods, such as weekends, holidays and spring break. On days the park is temporarily closed it will reopen to visitors at 5 p.m.

Park hours are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

Campers with reservations for one of the 106 tent camp sites will be permitted to enter. Visitors who are turned away will be given flyers explaining the policy.

AGENDA
ZONING BOARD OF ADJUSTMENT
SEPTEMBER 14, 1995

Notice is hereby given that the public hearing scheduled for Thursday, September 14, 1995 by the Zoning Board of Adjustment of the City of Midland, Texas, has been rescheduled for Thursday August 3, 1995, in the Council Chambers, City Hall, 300 N. Loraine, beginning at 3:00 P.M., to consider the following:

BD-95-011 Consider a request by Bill D. Wilson for a Variance from the City Zoning Code concerning the side yard setback requirements on the West 58.56 feet of Lot 9, Block 9, Oxford Heights Addition, City and County of Midland, Texas, located at the northeast corner of the intersection of Ohio Avenue and Delmar Street, addressed as 3714 W. Ohio Avenue.

Discuss a letter addressed to the Board concerning an existing non-conforming condition.

NOTE:
The meeting facility is accessible to disabled persons. A wheelchair entry ramp is located at the southeast entrance to City Hall. A parking space designated for use by disabled persons is available neat the southeast entrance doors. Any disabled person needing special accommodations or hearing impaired persons wishing to have an interpreter should request services through the Administrative Services Department at least 48 hours prior to the scheduled meeting by contacting David Hunter, Compliance Coordinator for the City of Midland, at (915) 685-7248. If communication via TDD is required, please call 1-800-735-2989.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

Notice is hereby given that the public hearing before the City Council, City of Midland, in the Council Chamber, City Hall at 11:00 AM, o'clock on the 12th of September, 1995 for the purpose of determining whether each building described below is a dangerous structure and a public nuisance, at which hearing the owners of the lots that appear below or persons interested are hereby notified to appear and testify as to the issue to be decided.
