COMMISSIONERS INVESTIGATE

County Possible Sugar Producer

The possibility of Mitchell County becoming a sugar beet producing area is being investigated by the Mitchell County Commissioners' Court.

The Court is currently taking under consideration a suggestion to issue a resolution favoring action by the U. S. Congress to extend the present stop-gap sugar law for only 9 months as a boost to domestic sugar production.

The resolution under consideration, if passed, would favor a 9-month extension to the present stop-gap sugar law instead of a proposed 21-month extension which would prevent passage of a long-range sugar law this year.

A 9-month extension would mean that action on the long-range law would come this year.

There is currently a conflict of interest between old sugar beet growers in the nation and those who wish to become new growers.

Rep. George Mahon reports in a letter to West Texans that efforts are being made to achieve "unity between these 2 groups because, if we do not increase our domestic production of sugar, everybody is going to be left but in the cold.

Construction Begins on Westbrook Truck Stop

Work began last week on a new Standard of Texas truck stop in Westbrook.

The site of the new service station is on the east side of Westbrook on U. S. Interstate Highway 20. It is on the south side of the highway at the Donelson road intersection with Interstate 20.

The $35,000 building, owned by Standard distributor J. W. (Hack) Wright of Big Spring, will be of all-metal construction. Wright stated the building was a "pre-fab, all-metal" affair and will be a "pretty nice station."

Westbrook resident David Anderson will be operator of the station. Anderson said the station would be a truck stop and would offer all facilities of a truck stop except showers and truck beds for trucks. The Agard Top Cafe is located next door and east of the station site.

Weight estimated the building would be completed and the station opened by this time about June 15. Anderson said he hoped to have the station in about 45 days.

Jack Jones of Midland is the general contractor for the building. Lake Shore Development Co., located between Colorado City and Westbrook, is the contractor for the dirt work and other parts of the construction.

Dirt work began last week, Feb. 14. More than 5,000 cubic feet of dirt is expected to be moved in preparing the site.

Wright announced that the station would be topped by a 40-foot, 14-foot high canopy. The canopy will be visible from both east and west from the highway and will contain the station's main sign.

Brotherhood Week Program Tuesday

Douglas Morris, regional director of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, will be the guest speaker at special Brotherhood Week programs here next week.

Morris will address a joint meeting and luncheon of the Kiwanis Club, the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Lions Club at noon Tuesday in the Civic House.

He will also present programs at Colorado City High School and Junior High School.

The theme of this year's Brotherhood Week is Brotherhood—Believe It!—Live It!—Support It!

The local program will be just one of more than 10,000 such programs all over the nation honoring Brotherhood Week. The programs will extend the work of the National Conference, which stimulates year-round projects in schools and colleges, churches and synagogues, labor-management and community organizations, and in newspapers, magazines, motion pictures, radio and television.

The purpose of Brotherhood Week is to give people an opportunity to re-dedicate themselves as individuals to the ideals of respect for people and human rights, according to the National Conference president, Dr. Lewis Webster Jones.

Jones states that the aim of the Week is to urge people to do more than give mere lip service to the principles of brotherhood.

Speaker Morris, 31, is a native of Hillsboro and grew up on a farm and ranch.

He is a graduate of Mansfield High School, Texas Wesleyan College and Perkins School of Theology, Southern Methodist University.

The guest speaker is a Methodist layman, a Mason, Rotarian, and was counselor and member of the faculty at Texas Wesleyan for 3 years. Morris is also writer and moderator of a Dallas-television series, "The Nation's Future."

Measures Favored By 5 to 3 Margin

Colorado City went to the polls Saturday and voted to allow the city to issue $435,000 in bonds for water and street improvements.

Two proposals—(1) $385,000 for water intake, water treatment plant and water distribution facilities; and (2) $50,000 for resurfacing about 100 blocks of street thoroughfares and the city's part for new paving petitioned by residents—were okayed by the voters.

A total of 878 ballots were cast in the election with both proposals passing at about a 5 to 3 margin.

Ballots favoring the water proposal totaled 527 with 332 ballots cast against the proposal. The street proposal passed with 519 votes for and 331 ballots against.

The City Council will begin circulating the bonds at its next regular meeting, Monday, Mar. 13.

At that time the Council will canvass the ballots from the election and then go into conference with the City's fiscal advisor, First Southwestern Investment Corp., to choose the time to request bids on the water bonds.

The two bond issues will be handled separately by the City. The water bonds will be acted upon first.

This is being done so that all water pipes may be laid before any street work begins. Also the water improvements are definitely set while consideration is still being given to which streets will be paved and resurfaced.

The City will take bids for the water improvements contract between the March and April meetings. The bids will be opened at the meeting April 10.

The City will study the bids for 2 weeks to 30 days before purchasing. The major contractor, who will probably sublet parts of the contract, will then be named.

Construction on the water department facilities is expected to begin around May 1. Street construction is expected to begin soon afterward.

The City will request petitions from interested persons before determining which streets will be paved.

The first petition has already been received by the City. It is from Jack Jordan for the 900 block of Marshall St. which is located in the Eastover Addition. The entire much to his distaste, of Mrs. Lucretia Klunkide of Alaska, to keep from being murdered for the answer.

Although no one is supposed to know his identity, the first guest he meets at the resort is Charlie Kennan, an old school chum. Not only that, but Whinnie's girl friend, lovely Madge Van Loom, who was supposed to keep the deep, dark secret of his whereabouts has broadcast the information and she and her girl friend are coming to visit him. Not only can he not tell his sweetheart that he is Lucretia Klunkide, but two men of the resort get overly amorous in their pursuit of him. Then, the two crooks appear on the scene looking for the answer to the contest. But, leaving is out of the question since Madge is on her way and he hasn't seen her for two whole weeks.

Madge becomes worried when Whinnie doesn't meet her and threatens to call the police. To forestall that possibility, Whinnie drops his disguise temporarily. Before he can do it again, things begin to get exciting. From here, things move faster and faster until Whinnie, purely by accident, brings it all to a happy conclusion.

Me chase rabbits?

I should say not!

My home is cool in the summer and warm in the winter with electricity from the electric cooperative my master and mistress helped to organize. They borrowed money at interest and they built their own electric system. Now my blanket is washed in an electric washer, my bath water is heated electrically and even my bones taste better when the roast is cooked on an electric range. We still romp in the fields occasionally, but we do most of that romping now by the TV set.

Me Chase Rabbits? I'd as soon bay at the moon. Either way, I'd have to go outside and that kind of life is for the birds. Give me an all electric home everytime. It's a doggone good way to live.

The envy of local high school girls and students... that's what we call MISS JANIE FAYE REED, who represented Colorado City in the Texas Junior Miss Pageant at the Driscoll Hotel in Corpus Christi Saturday.

Janie Faye, energetic and determined high school senior, is the seventeen year-old daughter of Mrs. R. M. Reed, teacher at Hutchinson Elementary School. Among other things, she is a member of Future Teachers of America, secretary and treasurer of mixed chorus, ensemble member and member of Wolverines. She is an active member of several school organizations.

The opportunity came for Janie Faye to enter the state contest when she was chosen from a field of local senior girls by out-of-town judges to represent our town.

Being chosen to represent their home town in such a contest is the dream of quite a few teenage girls... but the way I hear it... Miss Reed wouldn't even consider entering the contest until PORTER RICHARDSON and WINN TALLEY... because of the small number of girls in the local contest... put her name on the entree list and announced it over the radio, along with the other girls who had entered the event. To her surprise, she heard her name announced over the air and finally decided to be a contestant... with a vocal number.

However, it must have turned out for the best, for when Janie Faye returned home from the state contest at Corpus Christi, we learned that she had won a tuition paid, four-year musical scholarship to Corpus Christi University. Again, luck was with the Colorado miss... for one of the contest judges just happened to be head of the voice department at the university and offered her the scholarship after hearing her number.

By the way... the trip to the contest wasn't all business, either. Even though the group making the trip... MR. AND MRS. TALLEY, MRS. REED and MARTHA RUSSELL, who accompanied her at the piano... were rushed for time... the C-Citians took time off to go to the ocean and walk along the beach lined with palm trees.

For the contest, Miss Reed was judged on appearance, personality and talent. Her talent was a vocal selection, "Over the Rainbow," which she also sang in the local contest.

We understand that one thing that seems to impress an audience hearing Miss Reed sing is that she has never taken voice lessons, although she does study piano.

We feel also that thanks should go to the JUNIOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE and JAYCEE-ETTES for sponsoring the local contest and financing the trip to the state event.

Youth of our town are lucky to have organizations backing them... and making it possible for talented teenagers in our town to make way for success.

Out-of-state visitors in Colorado City this week was Mrs. Jackie Sanford of Lovington, N. M., who is visiting here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. K. McKinnon.

Coming Sunday, Mrs. Sanford will return home Thursday afternoon (today).

CHEVROLET REPORTS

Auto Sales Jump For Texas Zone

The important contributions of the Dallas zone to Chevrolet's sales performance has drawn from K. E. Staley, general sales manager of the company.

Staley voiced his commendations during a talk before zone dealers at the Baker Hotel, one of the meeting stops scheduled on a nationwide tour by top Chevrolet officials. "From the introduction of our 1961 models last Oct. 10 through Jan. 31, passenger car sales here have jumped 70 per cent over a year ago," Staley reported. "In other words, against 8,788 units delivered to customers in the 1959-60 period, you have sold 14,934."

Staley also pointed out that the zone's volume in 1960 played a prominent part in the all-time industry record set by Chevrolet.

"While the national volume was, of course, an organization accomplishment," he said, "it would have been impossible without exceptional showings in local markets. Chevrolet passenger car sales here went from 41,922 in 1959 to 47,948 last year."

Present Dallas zone boundaries cover 180 dealers in Texas, including Colorado City.

Staley reported the anticipation of another strong sales year in 1961. He based his confidence on the to-date acceptance of new Chevrolet models, a conviction that the present business lull is due to temporary uncertainty, and belief of an energetic upsurge in business later this year.

"Currently," said Staley, "our economy is riding on a somewhat level plateau, with key strengths generally balancing our weaknesses in some sectors. Although inventory adjustments, have slowed some activities, particularly in manufacturing, most other areas in the economy have continued to move forward."

"While we recognize this period of economic adjustment has not yet run its course, the current level of business certainly forms the basis for predicting that 1961 will be a very successful year. This is particularly true of the second half of 1961, although we definitely expect a pickup to begin early in the Spring."

THAT-WILL MISUSE HIS FREEDOM

Dostoevsky Writes of Man as A Creature of Height and Depth

Editor's Note: Here is another in a series of reviews of books from the shelves of the Mitchell County Federation Library, prepared especially for Colorado City Record readers by Rev. John Brand. This book, "Crime and Punishment" by Dostoevsky, the story of a murder, is available to readers from the Federation Library.

By JOHN BRAND
Record Book Reviewer

It has been said that Dostoevsky, like Shakespeare, demands eternal comment. One cannot, without questionable reasons, disagree with this statement.

Dostoevsky, a literary giant of 19th century Russia, demands comment and attention from his to our age, and even beyond. A reader will naturally question another's enthusiasm for any writer, but, in our case, a 19th century Russian writer sharpens one's inclination to challenge the expressed enthusiasm.

The best reply to any challenges of Dostoevsky's eternally valid message is that he has accurately presented a picture of Man. While there are flaws in his art, his view of Man as a creature torn between good and evil cannot be invalidated. He writes of Man as a creature of height and depth, and of varying dimensions. He insists that this creature, left to himself, will invariably misuse his freedom and play havoc with the world and all its inhabitants.

This stress appears in his first major novel, "Crime and Punishment," the story of a murder. The hero of the novel is Raskolnikov, barely an adult, but of somewhat exceptional ability, who murders to prove his superiority and is left to cope with the act he has committed.

"Crime and Punishment" has as its theme Raskolnikov's murder of a greedy money lender and her sister, with analyses of the murder, and with the effects of the murder on the murderer. Throughout the novel one sees emerging the problem of the ego's relation to the surrounding world, of the individual to society. As the novel concludes, one is somewhat edgy with the realization that there is less difference between him and Raskolnikov than he originally thought.

Raskolnikov is a creature who toys with an idea, that of his superiority. According to him, the superior person has the right, "that is not an official right, but an inner right to decide in his own conscience to overstep . . ." It is the inferior person who conforms, is conservative in temperament and law-abiding. The superior one, on the other hand, transgresses the law. He has "the gift or the talent to utter a new word", that is, to bring about "the destruction of the present for the sake of the better."

Hearing the hero speak, a reader may be taken aback with his apparent abjectness, but he sees as well that Raskolnikov is not a terrible fellow. He has a desire to better humanity, as whatever wrong he commits is, in the long run, a positive betterment of the human society.

It is not long, however, before Raskov's altruism is something altogether different. We learn that he did not murder the old money lender and her sister simply to help humanity, but rather that he did it to prove a theory, that of his own superiority. The superior person not only has the right, but the power to commit crime, he thought. Were he able to murder, he would therein prove his superior existence.

What we learn is that his crime is not a selfless betterment of the social state, but rather a senseless, self-centered atrocity. "I wanted to have the daring . . . and I killed her. That was the whole cause of it! . . . I wanted to murder without casuistry, to murder for my own sake, for myself alone! . . . I wanted to find out then and quickly whether I was a louse like everybody else or a man. Whether I can step over barriers or not, whether I dare stoop to pick up or not, whether I am a trembling creature or whether I have the right . . ." Raskolnikov commits his crime, but in so doing falls completely to pieces. He himself belittles his superiority. The rest of the novel has to do with the effect of the crime upon the criminal. Can he endure the thought of his wretchedness?

It is here that Dostoevsky's concept of the centrality of suffering emerges. The superior person is not he who commits extraordinary acts, but rather he who atones for the wrong he has done, a wrong expiable only by the prolonged agony of human suffering.

Raskolnikov cannot endure living with his conscience. He realizes too well the truth of his own words, "And how could such an atrocious thing come into my head? What filthy things my heart is capable of. Yes, filthy above all, disgusting, loathsome loathsome!" Is his desire to prove himself a superman and to prove his right to transgress moral conventions, he has proven only his mediocrity and the sole right to penitence.

For his crime arose from the thirst for individual self-satisfaction, a drive that always injures, a segment, if not the whole of the world about, society at large. Raskolnikov is "saved" by and through his suffering. If he is the embodiment of self-assertion, Sonia, whom he loves and who loves him, is the embodiment of self-submission. It is she who dogs his in an attempt to wrest from his the pangs of penitence and confession. It is she who proves not only the superiority, but also the redemptive character of the self-submissive life. While Raskolnikov destroys human community life, Sonia is a creative and sustaining force. She is something of a Christ who humbles and is humbled, but in so doing is a redeemer.

The more moving scenes in the novel are between the two. Sonia has become part of Raskolnikov, suffering with him and demanding from him the proper expression of his tormented conscience: confession. Raskolnikov bows and kisses her foot, and, in reply to her surprise, says, "I do not bow down to you, I bowed down to all the suffering of humanity."

At this point he manifests an inkling of the import of suffering—of penitential suffering that atones for a wrong done to humanity. He is a great sinner. He must suffer greatly.

"What are you to do?" asks Sonia. "Stand up! . . . Go at once, this very minute, stand at the cross-roads, bow down to all the world and say to all men aloud, 'I am a murderer!' Then God will send you life again. Will you go, will you go? . . . Suffer and expiate your sin by it, that's what you must do."

Shortly thereafter, the two exchange crosses, symbolic of suffering experience, but suffering shared. Sonia is no longer something of a Christ; she, to Dostoevsky, is the Christ.

Booths Or Blinders For Voters

You may have voted like your neighbor, or you could have marked the ballot just the opposite. But one thing for certain Saturday, when you went to vote in City Hall you could vote in private.

The manner of voting here in previous elections has been a sorry spectacle for citizens who are supposed to have the right of secret ballot. Without booths, citizens mark their ballots on flat tables, against the wall or in some other makeshift manner.

Unused Allotments - Community Concern

Cotton is a commodity which creates a good "multiplier" effect in the economy because most of the cotton farmer's dollar is usually dropped into the money stream of the community. Though the dollar's identity may be quickly lost, it tends to circulate through all the avenues of trade and commerce.

The state has been divided into five zones by the State Agricultural Stabilization Committee and final dates set in each for releasing cotton acreage. The final date for releasing allotments in the San Antonio, Corp's Christi, Laredo area is February 17. In Zone 2, the Austin-Houston area, the final date is February 24. Final date in Zone 3, Northeast third of the state, is March 3. April 7 is the final date for Zone 4, far West and West Central Texas and April 14 is the last day cotton producers in Zone 5, Northwest Texas, can release allotments.

TAYLOR - MADE By RICK TAYLOR Record News Editor

In East Orange, N. J., 16 persons were arrested as delinquent borrowers from the East Orange public library about a week or so ago. That not only brought an influx of books back into the East Orange library, it had its effects right here in Colorado City - and probably numerous other libraries over the country as newspapers carried stories of the arrests.

Undoubtedly some that can't read the date can read the newspapers. REV. ALAN CONLEY stated before the local bond election that some people were missing the boat by not displaying their "I'll Vote Dry" bumper stickers. Taylor-Made didn't notice any of those "I'll Buy Dry" decorations either, Alan.

Brotherhood Noted In the Scriptures

At a time when there is much stress upon brotherhood, and a too conspicuous lack of it both at home and abroad, it is worth while to consider the Bible, and especially the Jewish scriptural lore of the Old Testament.

Planning to Enter Tech? Prepare Now

LUBBOCK—High school seniors thinking of entering Texas Tech next fall will find planning ahead to meet testing requirements helps smooth the process of registration. Tech officials recommend that high school students take either the American College Test (ACT) or the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) during their senior year and have the results sent to Tech. High school counselors can be contacted for application blanks and testing blanks. If students are not able to take the ACT or the SAT, they must arrange to take the battery of tests offered by Tech. For convenience of prospective Techsians, three testing dates are scheduled for June. They are to be given at 8 a. m. June 5, 19 or 26 in the Agriculture Memorial Auditorium. Fee for the tests is $2 and may be paid at time of testing. The tests are not entrance examinations, but will be used to aid in counseling students during their college careers. Students unable to take the June tests and who have not taken the ACT or the SAT will be tested 8 a. m. Sept. 11. Application for the June test dates may be made by writing the Testing and Counseling Center, Texas Technological College, Lubbock. The preferred test date should be specified. Completing testing requirements prior to registration will help entering freshmen avoid registration delay.

TELEPHONE TALK by Truman Black, Manager. HOSPITAL CARE BY TELEPHONE. Each day a number of interesting or unusual communications problems crosses my desk. While this one didn't happen here in Colorado City, I think you'll find it interesting, too. The day after Thanksgiving, a young mother was hospitalized. She needed medication and complete rest. Everything went well until she began to miss her three little girls who were too young to visit her in the hospital. To make matters worse, she worried about not being able to do her Christmas shopping. When the nurses discovered what was troubling her, they had a quick remedy. A phone was placed next to her bed. She talked with her children every day and, what's more, did all of her Christmas shopping by telephone. It's stories and services like this. "You name any communications need, Southwestern Bell has a service to meet it."

"NOW HEAR THIS . . ." Remember this old phrase made famous by the Navy? It was used to gain attention of crew members in all parts of the ship when new orders or instructions were communicated. When orders were required, all the crew members had to do was "speak up." Now the folks in Colorado City may have a similar communications system for the home. It's called the home inter-phone and offers many advantages to save time and needless steps. For instance you can talk from room to room, call people to the phone, even answer the door without leaving the room you're in. Near each phone in the home is a small speaker which broadcasts the caller's voice. The person called can answer through a small microphone located in the base of the phone. If you'd like more information about the home inter-phone, just call the telephone business office or ask any telephone service man. KEEP AN OPEN LINE Once in a while a child or a household pet will change the receiver to be off the hook. When this happens the phone is automatically closed to all incoming calls. To make sure there are no lost calls to your house, it's a good idea to occasionally check the phones in your home where the children play.

Christ who becomes lowly to the extent of sharing with a Raskolnikov his sufferings. In Sonia he sees "the furthest limit of self-abnegation".

After a prolonged struggle between the desire to lessen and the desire to harden his punishment, Raskolnikov begins to become a new person. "He knelt down in the middle of the square, bowed down to the earth, and kissed that filthy earth with bliss and rapture. He got up and bowed down a second time." He now must confess his crime to the authorities. His redemption is underway.

Dostoevsky is not saying that mere confession and repentance make of Raskolnikov a new man. The process is still a struggle. His wounded pride insists upon nagging him away from submission towards assertion. His seven-year stay in prison, however, will give the time demanded for his purification. He and Sonia "resolved to wait and be patient. They had another seven years to wait, and what terrible suffering and what infinite happiness before them."

But he had risen again, and he knew it and felt it in all his being, while she—she only lived in his life. He did not know that the new life would not be given him for nothing, that he would have to pay dearly for it, that it would cost him great striving, great suffering.

"Crime and Punishment" is a novel about a great sinner who experiences a gradual renewal and gradual regeneration from a present misery into "a new unknown life". It was the author's belief that the wrongdoer is his own punishment; that is, that his conscience will not allow him rest after the wrong is committed.

This can of course, be debated, as Man, though owner of a delicate conscience, has the uncanny ability to harden his heart and to desensitize his conscience. Many appear, at least, to be able to commit all kinds of wrong against humanity without the slightest turn of conscience.

Where Dostoevsky is right, and unquestionably, in his analysis of the criminal's psychology. We find him describing more than a Raskolnikov, but also a man on the street. We find that human hurt is rendered by every creature who desires the feeling of superiority above all else, as the creature who desires it must achieve it at the expense of others.

The writer had more in mind than a somewhat neurotic Raskolnikov, as he had in mind himself, and the many in society who struggle with the same drive for power, recognition and superiority. This drive we see exemplified in his own country. It is but to a smaller degree that it is manifested in our own society, on a day-to-day, person-to-person level.

For Dostoevsky there is a clear choice: either be a Raskolnikov (even though one may not actually kill) who does not repent; or be a Raskolnikov whose sufferings lead one to confession and repentance. The wrong doer needs this for his transformation—the public acknowledgment of his wretchedness and of his wrong committed against the world.

Knowing what we know of our world and of our opponents internationally and socially, we can hardly deny the validity of that demand to every creature wrestling with an obscurity that only recognition will overthrow, and that at the expense of one's fellows.

STARTS FRIDAY

New War Film To Show Here

"For those movie patrons who have long been advocating clean entertainment for family consumption (and they are legion) 20th Century Fox is blazing the trail to the door of decency and good taste."

Such was the opinion of those who sat in at a preview of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" from the novel by the eminent American author, John Fox.

Picture a fighting Kentucky Mountain boy plus a God-given voice, a spiritual back ground backed by the courage of his convictions, involving the war between the States, and you will have a true likeness of that universally popular singer of folk songs the idol of millions of young American music lovers, Jimmie Rodgers.

Making his first screen appearance in the DeLuxe color version of the renowned Southern classic, Jimmie as the Shepherd Boy turns in a performance which would do credit to an experienced and seasoned performer.

Burdened with the ravages of war, heartsick at the thought of kin against kin and struggling within himself to find the answer to a seemingly lost cause, Jimmie turns to his Bible for spiritual guidance.

Here is the answer to clean, unadulterated family entertainment. Here is a story of which all Americans might well be proud. Here is America!

Costarred with Jimmie Rodgers in this star spangled banner of Democracy, is that popular and appealing actor Chill Wills, who portrays the gentle and understanding Major Buford of the Confederate Army. As foster parent to the young Gospel singer, Chill gives one of the best performances of his long and varied career.

Among others who donate to this memorable occasion are Linda Hutchings as a beguiling Southern Belle, Luana Patten as a proud and beautiful product of the Blue Grass State and Robert Dix as a Kentucky planter. "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" will soon be seen at your favorite theatre. Treat yourself to a generous helping of this typical sample of young Americans. You will feel better for it.

Miss Holman had a 2.66 average for the fall semester. The junior elementary education major is a member of Delta Beta Epsilon social club and of Wah Wahaysee service club. She is serving as secretary-treasurer of the Junior Class, is editor of the Chieftain, newspaper for McMurry exes and has been elected president of the Student Education Association for 1961-62.
