Britain Beefs Up Armada...

Will Not Appease Argentina

LONDON (AP) — Britain declared today it would not appease Argentine "dictators" and was reported beefing up its armada of warships steaming to the Falkland Islands.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. prepared to fly to London and Buenos Aires in an attempt to defuse the crisis, and Argentine forces were reported digging in to hold the islands they seized from Britain Friday.

"Britain does not appease dictators," Foreign Secretary Francis Pym told a House of Commons debate.

Pym, successor to Lord Carrington who resigned Monday over his failure to avert Argentina's seizure of the remote South Atlantic colony, said Britain "will spare no effort" to find a peaceful solution.

"But if our efforts fail the Argentine regime will know what to expect," he said.

Pym labeled the Argentine military junta a "morally bankrupt regime" and said: "We intend to show Argentina and the whole world, Britain is resolved to succeed in this crisis."

In a vigorous speech to a packed Commons, Pym said it was obvious the Argentine "occupation force" of more than 3,000 troops would treat the 1,800 pro-British islanders as "a conquered population."

In Washington, the White House announced that President Reagan has "directed Secretary of State Haig to continue consultations with the governments of the United Kingdom and Argentina in the interest of assisting both parties in the search for a peaceful resolution of the dispute in the South Atlantic.

Britain was reported sending as many as eight more warships, including nuclear submarines, to join the 40-ship armada steaming toward the Argentine-occupied Falkland Islands.

Argentine reinforcements on the British colony were reported digging trenches and foxholes.

British troops on the convoy were ordered to shave off beards before reaching the Falklands so that gas masks could be worn if needed. "We are coordinating a program to meet the threat," said Cmdr. Ken McKenzie, the operations officer on the aircraft carrier Hermes.

The Times of London said three frigates and one destroyer were expected to join the armada that sailed Monday, and that up to four nuclear-powered submarines could already be on the way to the islands, 250 miles east of southern Argentina. The navy declined to comment for "security reasons."

In Moscow, an official Soviet source branded as "a lie" a report by Argentina's official Telam news agency that the Kremlin was sending Soviet submarines to side with Argentina in the crisis.

The Soviet Foreign Ministry reiterated its position in the conflict "is neutral." The U.S. government says it too is steering a neutral course in the dispute, which erupted Friday with the Argentines seizing the islands.

Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez met for 70 minutes in Washington Tuesday with Haig. Costa Mendez said the United States offered to help its "two good friends" resolve the crisis.

"I'm confident that we will reach through negotiations — even if they are long negotiations — that we will reach peace, an honorable and just peace," he said.

The Reagan administration is "walking right down the middle" between Britain and Argentina and is "not going to give anybody any help either way," Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto told reporters in Washington.

In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher made clear she was only interested in mediation that would achieve Britain's aims.

"We shall be very happy if anyone is able to secure the withdrawal of the Argentinians," she told questioners in the House of Commons.

"Britain is not actively looking for mediation," said one British newspaper.

Local Savings & Loan Funds Top $51 Million

Total deposits at two Snyder savings and loan firms were $51.5 at the end of the first quarter of 1982.

Reporting at the end of the quarter were Snyder Savings and Loan Association and the Snyder office of First Federal Savings and Loan. Homestate Savings, which opened a branch in Snyder in March, did not have figures only for the Snyder office.

Combined deposits of all financial insitutions in Snyder were just below the $200 million--an all-time record for Snyder. Total deposits at the three banks and two savings and loans were $199.9 million--an increase of $11.4 million since Dec. 31.

Total savings and loan deposits were up $1.8 million when compared to the final quarter of 1981, and up $332,603 over the first quarter of 1981.

Total deposits at Snyder Savings and Loan were $27.4 million compared to $27.7 million at the end of last quarter. The first quarter figure, however, was up $1.9 million over the same period a year ago.

Deposits at First Federal were $24.1 million, an increase of $2.1 million over year-end deposits and an increase of $2.2 million when compared to the corresponding quarter in 1981.

Total loans at Snyder Savings and Loan were $24.8 million, up $1.6 million over Dec. 31 and down $988,674 when compared to the first quarter of last year.

First Federal had loans totaling $13.1 million, up $208,993 over the final quarter of 1981 and an increase of $676,280 when compared to the same quarter in 1981.

Seven People Die In Freak Tunnel Blast

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Seven people burned to death inside a highway tunnel early today after a gasoline tanker was hit by a bus and exploded in flames that turned the tunnel into a roaring furnace and melted vehicles inside, officials said.

Fire Capt. John Speakman confirmed that seven bodies were pulled from the wreckage after the crash and fire in the Caldecott tunnel on Highway 24 between Orinda and Oakland.

"It looks like something out of World War II in there," said Jim Mattos, a California Highway Patrol public affairs officer, of the interior of the three-tube, ¾-mile-long tunnel, a major commuter route burrowing through a hill between Alameda and Contra Costa counties.

Firefighters wearing breathing apparatus searched for victims inside the tunnel after the fire was brought under control, some 2½ hours after the 12:20 a.m. accident, Speakman said. The crash occurred in the tunnel's westbound tube. By early morning, the other tubes were open to traffic.

Speakman said the Alameda County Transit bus — which apparently carried no passengers — first struck a stalled car, then crashed into the rear of the double-tanker gasoline truck. The bus driver fell out of his vehicle, which went on to smash into a pillar, Speakman said.

At least five other vehicles were trapped in the tunnel behind the bus, the Highway Patrol spokesman said.

Searing heat from the blaze flattened the tanker truck, Mattos said, adding, "It's about six inches high — completely melted."

Speakman said the tanker carried 8,800 gallons of gasoline.

A Carson City, Nev., man who refused to give his name said he stopped his car in the tunnel after witnessing the accident and left his mother at an emergency telephone while he went for help.

"When I was about 50 yards from the end of the tunnel, the smoke hit me," said the man, whose face was covered with soot. "It was real hot. I am convinced my mother was trapped by the smoke and flames."

Mattos confirmed that the man's mother was among the dead.

The identities of the victims, who Mattos said were burned beyond recognition, were not made public immediately. The bus driver was believed to be among the dead.

Mervyn Lee Metzker, 44, of Sacramento, driver of the Armour Oil Co. tanker, escaped injury, officials said.

Advance Party Paves Way For April Circus

By Shirley A. Gorman

The circus is coming! The circus is coming!

People of all ages will have an opportunity to enjoy the Carson and Barnes Circus when it comes to town Saturday, April 17, for two performances only.

The circus, which is billed as the world's largest wild animal circus, is being sponsored jointly by the Noon Kiwanis and Golden K Kiwanis Clubs.

Yesterday an advance party for the circus spent the day in town arranging publicity and posting bills etc.

Ralph and Susan Gifford have been traveling as advance people for the circus for 14 years. Their Labrador Retriever, Snuggles, has been on the job for 13 years. Since her days as a puppy, Snuggles has served as "Advance Dog." Specific duties include inspecting the proposed location to make sure it is suitable for the menagerie which includes 25 elephants, 75 horses, giraffes, llamas, zebras, camels, and others.

Snuggles is paid 75 puppy biscuits per week and furnished room and board (in a camper with her master and mistress, the Giffords).

The Giffords have displayed dozens of circus posters in the windows of local merchants. One poster, unveiled for the first time here, was designed by D. R. Miller, owner of the circus, Gifford said.

The Giffords use the old lithograph method in preparing bills for distribution. They are made from wooden plates. Gifford explained that only about six printing houses in America are able to do this process. They carry a variety of posters in the stock truck.

To place the bills on tall windows two sticks are used.

According to Gifford, the circus will be setting up at 6:30 a.m. on the morning of the 17th. Pile drivers are used to install most of the stakes, but an elephant will be used to pull the center pole.

Once in place, the huge tent will house everything from the menagerie to the cook house etc. It is almost completely self contained, Gifford explained.

The circus will present two performances on April 17. One at 4 p.m. and one at 8 p.m.

The SDN Column

The relative position of food in the cost of living continues to decline, according to John Merrill, director of the Ranch Management Program at Texas Christian University.

Last year, he says, consumers paid only 13.6 percent of their disposable income for food. That is the lowest percentage in history.

"They could eat well and spend less, so that they could use that dollar difference to pay for gasoline, utility bills and rising inflation."

Of course he did not say that the average consumer's bill at the grocery store was lower than ever.

He said that on the average, 41 percent of a "grocery" bill is not for food. "It's tissues and toothpaste and all the other things we buy in grocery stores that are not food items."

And, of course, those dollars saved on groceries also were beginning to buy more gasoline. The American Automobile Association reported the past week that gasoline prices had dropped eight to nine cents per gallon since Jan. 29.

This situation attracted considerable attention, especially in Snyder, judging from inquiries we received. There was no uniform pattern to the decline in retail gasoline prices, and for a while, nearly every time someone made a trip, we got a question for our "Ask Us" column. They wanted to know why gasoline was cheaper in some other cities than in Snyder. We tried to put them all into one question and before it got its turn for publication, gasoline prices began to drop here.

Anyway, the subject attracted more questions than any other for a long time.

The "oil glut" has been causing some concern, with experts predicting that it might drop to $25 per barrel. We have short memories. Three years ago, most people in the industry were enthusiastic over prospects that they might get $13 to $15 per barrel for their oil within a year-and-a-half.

Lower prices for gasoline could help the state treasury, however. State Comptroller Bob Bullock says cheaper gasoline should mean more sales, which, in turn, would result in more gasoline taxes. The gasoline tax is five cents per gallon, no matter what the retail price is.

Area Schools Set Holiday

Area public schools wll dismiss early Thursday afternoon to begin the Easter holidays.

Snyder Public schools will dismiss at 2:30 p.m. Thursday, and Friday will be observed as a holiday. Buses will run at 2:30 p.m. Thursday.

Monday, April 12, had originally been scheduled as a holiday for Snyder pupils, but instead will be a regular class day making up one lost in January because of bad weather.

Ira Public schools will also dismiss at 2:30 p.m. Thursday. Pupils and staff will observe Friday and Monday as a school holiday.

Hermleigh Public Schools will dismiss at 2:15 p.m. Thursday. Both Friday and Monday will be a school holiday.

The Scurry County Courthouse and the Snyder Chamber of Commerce will be closed Friday in observance of the holiday.

Propose Nuclear Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four former high ranking U.S. officials are proposing that the United States and NATO pledge they won't be the first to use nuclear weapons in any conventional war in Europe.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., rejected the proposal Tuesday, saying it is "tantamount to making Europe safe for conventional aggression."

Haig argued that adoption of a "no first use" policy would hand the Soviet Union an automatic victory on the battlefields of Europe because the Soviets have an overwhelming edge in conventional arms.

The four veteran specialists in international affairs proposed the "no first use" policy in an article in Foreign Affairs Quarterly.

Naval Exercise Set

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Navy says 60 warships, 350 planes and more than 45,000 troops will head to the Caribbean later this month in largest naval operation ever planned for that area.

The maneuvers will emphasize command and control of forces in a simulated combat environment, Adm. Harry D. Train II, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic Command, said Tuesday.

The operation, called Ocean Venture '82, comes on the heels of an exercise involving 40 ships now being conducted in the same area.

Together, the war games focus considerable attention on the Caribbean, where Train said a "major chink in our strategic armor" exists because of the rapidly growing military capability of Cuba.

Your Birthday

April 8, 1982

This coming year you may form two important alliances with people whose ideals are in harmony with yours. These relationships will open up many new avenues of interest for you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be extra tactful in important one-to-one relationships today. Even people who are usually easy to get along with could have a chip on their shoulders. Predictions for each of the seasons following your birthday are in your Astro-Graph. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to include birth date.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Tasks that you have neglected to take care of properly could scream for attention today. Organize your time so that you can adequately deal with each one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Subdue impulsive tendencies today to take risks in areas that could cause you grief if they went awry. Don't go bucking the odds.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be sure you and your mate are in complete accord today regarding the ways you want to handle problems that might arise with your children.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might not be at your best today if you have to perform difficult mental work under pressure. Keep your mind on what you're doing. Don't wander.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Conditions affecting your finances and security could come under the gun today. Do nothing in haste that may be costly if it's handled incorrectly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try to be self-sufficient today and don't rely on others unless it's absolutely essential. If something needs attention, you'll probably have to take care of it yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Others may try to dump their problems and duties on you today because they know you're the one to come to when they want something done. Don't let them overload you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This could be a very busy day for you, but it may also be an unproductive one because you might become involved in too many insignificant activities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Major accomplishments are possible today, but they're not apt to come too easily. Be ready to put forth solid effort where goals are concerned.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be mindful today of painful past experiences or you might repeat a mistake similar to one that caused you headaches previously.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There is a chance you could have complications today in a situation offering a second source of earnings. Be ready to make adjustments.

Broken Freezer Ruins Shuttle Data

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Scientists anticipated problems in space with a biological experiment conducted on the last space shuttle mission, but they never thought malfunctions on earth would ruin the sample and the test, a space agency spokesman says.

A faulty ground transport freezer allowed frozen blood and kidney cell samples to thaw and spoiled much of an experiment designed to test the process a drug company wants to use to make a costly and difficult-to-produce drug in the weightlessness of space.

"The tests went very well in orbit. But we just ran into problems on the ground," said Dr. Dennis Morrison, principal investigator at the Johnson Space Center.

Two batches of red blood cells and six batches of human kidney cells were processed on the Columbia's eight-day flight and stored in a stainless steel, double-walled cylinder lined with insulation that holds the freezing agent, liquid nitrogen.

Scientists had hoped to use the specimens to produce urokanese, a substance produced on Earth at high cost and used to dissolve blood clots.

Within two hours after the spaceship landed March 30 in the New Mexico desert, the freezer was placed on a training aircraft and flown back to Houston, said NASA spokesman Brian Welch.

But they discovered the samples had thawed when they opened the container Monday, Welch said.

"Of all the things that could have gone wrong," said Dr. Stewart Nathway, chief of the biomedical applications branch. "The freezer was the last piece of equipment we would have expected to have trouble with."

Space center technicians were trying to determine what caused the freezer to fail.

Scientists said the freezer was designed to store the samples at least 10 days and, in earlier tests, had functioned properly for 12 days.

"Everyone was aghast that such a simple piece of equipment would go down," Welch said. "You almost expect to have some glitches come up on the flight, but you don't expect something like this to happen."

Welch said analysis of the kidney cells is impossible now, but he said NASA officials believe on-board photography will provide most of the data they were expecting from the red blood cells, which provided a test for how well the process worked in microgravity.

"We have the cell samples and the equipment to try again in the future if circumstances permit," Morrison said.

The experiment was one in a series NASA is conducting to verify theories of manufacturing in space to produce materials which cannot easily be made because of Earth's gravity.

In lowered gravity, cells in a solution will not settle. By applying an electrical current to the samples, the cells are forced to migrate away from each other and allow the development of super-pure drugs.

Alien Facts Are Explained

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Most illegal aliens in Texas head for Dallas or Houston rather than areas that have largely Spanish-speaking populations, and most want to become U.S. citizens, a state panel has been told by researchers.

The Governor's Task Force on Immigration, headed by Texas Tech University President Lauro Cavazos, also was told Tuesday that for the first time, the state has a dependable estimate of the number of undocumented workers living in Texas — between 600,000 and 900,000.

Dr. Frank Bean of the University of Texas said that number is narrowed down a lot more than a U.S. Census study that put the estimate of Texas' illegal residents at between 50,000 and 1.7 million.

Bean said his study combined two different methods of counting illegal immigrants to arrive at that figure.

One method involved taking the 1970 count of Mexican-Americans in the state, developing an estimate of the number there should be 10 years later according to standard mortality, birth and migration rates, then subtracting that number from the 1980 census count.

Part score hands

Part score hands frequently yield a lot of match points in a duplicate game. Here is a hand that might be passed out in some circles, but South has a jack and 10 above average with a good five card suit and elected to open it.

He considered passing the one spade response, but finally produced a two-club call. North toyed with the idea of a two no-trump call, but eventually bid three clubs which South was delighted to pass.

West opened the king of diamonds. South promptly took dummy's ace, cashed its king of hearts and led a club.

East took his ace and led back a diamond. West tried to cash a second diamond trick, but South ruffed. Now he ruffed a low heart in dummy, led a club, thought [illegible] rose with his king. This dropped West's queen. The 5-2 heart break made it impossible for South to discard three of dummy's spades so he wound up making his contract on the nose for plus-110 and 10 match points out of 12.

Had East ducked the first club, South might well have finessed the 10 and gone down one, but even minus-50 would have been just above average.

Why was plus-110 worth only 10 out of 12 match points? At a couple of tables East and West got into the bidding and wound up playing three diamonds doubled down two tricks.

Colonial Dames Conference To Open Sunday

The 58th Annual Conference of the National Society Colonial Dames XVII Century will formally open Sunday, April 18, at 8 p.m. at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, D.C., with a program entitled "America's Militia as Guardian of Peace" presented by Major General Arthur E. Brown, Jr. General Brown, a graduate of the United States Military Academy, was born in Manilla in 1929. During his extensive military service, he has earned eleven highly esteemed decorations which include the silver star, distinguished flying cross with oak leaf cluster, legion of merit and two Republic of Vietnam crosses of gallantry with gold star.

The conference will convene on Monday with business meetings and an awards luncheon hosted by the Colorado State Society. The evening banquet, hosted by the South Carolina State Society, will feature a musical program by noted musicians, Annie Martha and John Hills.

The conference will conclude on Tuesday with further business meetings and a luncheon hosted by the West Virginia State Society.

Preceding formal opening of the conference, there will be a memorial service on Sunday morning. Miss Josie Baird of Rotan will participate in the program by giving a tribute and placing a white carnation for a deceased member, Mrs. R. E. Massengill, an outstanding member from Longview.

The NSCDXVIIC was founded in 1915 by Mary Florence Taney to aid in establisment of a college of heraldry, the founding of chairs of historical research in colleges and universities and to commemorate the heroic deeds of the great republic.

To further the interest in heraldry, the society has established a committee on heraldry and coats of arms. Serving as national co-chairmen of this committee are Misses Josie and Delila Baird of Rotan. A frieze of coats of arms for emigrant ancestors of members hangs in the ballroom at national headquarters in Washington, D.C.

Serving as twenty-fifth president general of the national society is Mrs. Frank P. Copeland of Darlington, SC. As president general, Mrs. Copeland is chief executive officer and official spokesman for the society. For her special project during this administration, Mrs. Copeland has chosen to emphasize the American collection in the National Headquarters Museum. Each of the 46 member states have an opportunity to add to the collection by presenting an item indicative of its state history. The society gives scholarships for studies in American history and special scholarships in the field of health education to American Indians. An outstanding genealogical library is maintained in the lower level of the national headquarters building.

Mrs. Frank P. Copeland Jr.

Mrs. Copeland was honored guest at the 1982 Texas State Conference held recently in Dallas. Delegates to the state conference were the Misses Baird of Rotan, Mmes. R. W. Norwood and Fred B. Ison of Abilene, representing Benjamin Blackburn Chapter of Abilene. Other area members are Mmes. Ruple Morrow and J. Whit Clark of Rotan, and Mmes. Gene L. Dulaney, Leland S. Herod, and Doug K. Hill of Snyder.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Too few red blood cells

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 61 years old and have been in good health until recently. Now I am told I have a myeloproliferative disorder. Is that leukemia? I have an anemia and the doctor has already given me eight pints of blood. He is also giving me folic acid and Pyridoxine. I am taking vitamins C, E and B-12 plus bone meal with bone marrow on my own.

I'd like some more information on this if possible. Why do you need blood transfusions? Are you bleeding from someplace? I have not noticed any bleeding. Just how does this disease cause an anemia?

DEAR READER — Myeloproliferative disease is not a specific term as it includes several different disorders. But, yes, many of them are also chronic leukemia. The word chronic is important because these people have a much better outlook than most patients with an acute leukemia.

The chronic disorder results in fibrosis of the bone marrow or replacement with other types of cells. The net result of these disorders is that your bone marrow is not producing enough red blood cells to replace the daily loss of red blood cells. Each red blood cell normally only lasts about 120 days so you must produce a lot just to maintain your normal level.

You can bleed from leukemia or cancer may cause bleeding, particularly cancer involving the digestive tract. But cancer or leukemia that involves the bone marrow may simply eliminate normal production.

In many of the leukemia and cancer disorders the treatment is directed toward destroying the abnormal cells while stimulating normal bone marrow function at the same time. I don't think you should be taking medicines on your own without your doctor's approval and knowledge. You might affect the blood picture he is following as a guide to providing the proper treatment for you.

You will understand how anemias occur and the ways the balance between blood cell formation and blood cell destruction can be upset from The Health Letter number 4-3, Understanding The Anemias, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My 15-year-old son has become very involved in a physical fitness program. He jogs eight miles a day and is on the school's track and wrestling teams. He is 5 feet 10 and weighs 138 pounds.

His latest experiment involves drinking three raw eggs with a glass of milk each morning. I feel that he is overdoing the raw eggs a bit. Could you please give us your opinion? Are there any real benefits to drinking three raw eggs in milk every morning?

DEAR READER — Raw eggs are often a source of bacteria, particularly salmonella which causes food poisoning. That problem can be solved by adequate cooking.

Raw egg white contains avidin, a substance which destroys biotin, an important vitamin. Cooking destroys avidin and prevents this from occurring.

Then there is the question of the cholesterol content of egg yolks, 225 mg in each. If your son's cholesterol level is low, and in his age group I mean 170 or less, it is not so important. But if his cholesterol is high then he should avoid high cholesterol foods such as egg yolks.

Stores Have Same Name

PEKING (AP) — Despite China's rich language, too many Chinese stores have the same name — "Red Flag" or "Red Star," the nation's leading newspaper complains.

"There is the 'Red Flag Barber Shop,' the 'Red Star Snack Bar,' and so on and so on," the People's Daily said Saturday.

Presses For Tornado Disaster Aid

PARIS, Texas (AP) — U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says that federal disaster [illegible] week for more than 2,000 people left homeless in a four-mile-long path of destruction carved by a killer tornado.

Bentsen toured the area Tuesday, said it was "just miraculous" that more lives were not lost when the twister dipped into the [illegible] city last Friday. Eight people died and about 200 more were injured.

And U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said [illegible] officials assured him that they would give top priority to the disaster aid request made Tuesday by Gov. Bill Clements for Paris and [illegible] County.

"There's no question (that) what you've had serious devastation here," Bensten said during a tour by vehicle through the northern part of the city hit by the storm. "I think we can help."

Steve Allen Does His Writing With Tape Recorder

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Allen writes in the bathtub — sometimes.

Other times, he writes while flying or while driving or while lying in bed.

"You couldn't do that if you used a typewriter," Allen says with a smile. So, Allen does his writing with a tape recorder. "I always carry one," he says. "It's productivity wise. I produce far more material using a tape recorder than I would if I were linked to a typewriter. When I don't have it with me, I feel like a gunfighter without a gun."

It's a system that obviously works. While he's best known as a television personality, Allen is also a writer of books and thus far he has 25 to his credit.

The books have no common theme.

As Allen says, "There is no order to my books. It's a little of this and a little of that — poetry, short stories, humor, social issues. Books dealing with whatever happened to catch my attention at the moment."

Catching his attention recently was the murder mystery, a form Allen hadn't tried before. The result was "The Talk Show Murders."

"It's not literature," Allen says with a grin. "A couple of my earlier novels had literary pretensions but this one does not. It's an entertainment."

The book deals with murder, specifically the murder of guests who appear on television talk shows as well as members of the audience. A witty spoof of the detective-novel form, Allen says the idea was brought to him by a literary agent.

"Its origin was not creative," he says, "but I enjoyed writing it. I filled it with deliberate cliches — the cliche gangster, the cliche private eye, the cliche setting — and I guess it's a gimmick book, but it was a cute assignment."

Although he enjoyed writing "The Talk Show Murder," Allen says he has no plans to return to the form soon. "One of the books I've got going now is another novel — nearly finished — which has guns and killing in it but it's not a whodunit.

"Actually, it's about one of eight or 10 manuscripts I've got going. That may seem a peculiar way to work, but remember that every 10 months or so a book of mine gets finished and published. It seems that I'll be making observations on a possible book and then I realize I've got 80 pages done, so I say to myself, 'Well, I might as well add a couple of hundred more pages and call it a book.'"

Despite his many books, the California-based Allen doesn't think of himself as primarily a writer.

"I'm not a primarily anything," he says. "I do 14 thing for a living. I compose, I appear on television, I do comic material, I am involved in social issues.

"Granted I'm best known as a TV person. But that really has nothing to do with me. It has to do with the difference between television and, let's say, the publishing industry. I was on a television show the other night that was watched by 50 million people. Now, when a book is published the publisher is overjoyed if it sells 38,000 copies. Compare 38,000 and 50 million and it's obvious why I'm associated with TV."

Allen, a multi-talented man who also acts, writes poems, writes song lyrics and plays piano, was in New York recently to play piano and "a little clarinet" at a local pub. "I didn't do it for the money," he says, "I did it because I enjoy it. I've been playing piano since I was about eight, that's about 52 years at the keyboard."

Allen attributes his ability to do so many things — "I'm not a genius, I'm versatile" — to "a mental energy of some odd sort. My brains seems to keep working even when I'm sleeping. And, when I'm awake I don't waste time. Even if I'm lying on the ground I'm thinking.

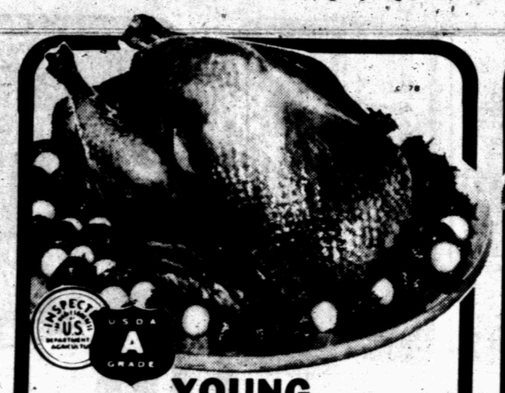

"When one part of my brain talks, another part listens to what's being said, and I put those thoughts into my tape recorder."

("The Talk Show Murders" is published by Delacorte.)

Criticizes Engineers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., has criticized the Army Corps of Engineers for failing to review 52 water development projects to determine if they are worth the taxpayers' money.

Moffett, chairman of the House Government Operations subcommittee on the environment, said Tuesday the Corps reneged on a promise to evaluate projects that were less than 25 percent complete.

Yellow Thunder Camp...

Are Staking Claim To Land Of Their Ancestors

YELLOW THUNDER CAMP, S.D. (AP) — They live in tepees in an isolated section of the Black Hills National Forest, nearly 40 Indians who for a year have refused to leave federal land taken from their ancestors more than 100 years ago.

The community, called Yellow Thunder Camp, is modeled after a traditional Sioux village.

The federal government has filed a lawsuit seeking a court order to evict the Indians and several white supporters, who arrived April 5, 1981.

"We're not here for a publicity stunt but because we're seriously committed to developing the Indian traditional life in the Black Hills," said Bill Means, 35, who helped found the community about 12 miles southwest of Rapid City.

The Dakota American Indian Movement has filed a countersuit seeking permission to set up a permanent Indian village on 800 acres of the federal land. A trial is expected later this year.

"The Black Hills is the Jerusalem of the Upper Great Plains, the center of the Lakota Nation, historically and spiritually," Means said.

"Here we are Indian people who have control over our own land and destiny," said Bill Means' brother, Russell, a veteran AIM activist and another camp leader.

Sitting on a worn picnic bench in the wooden geodesic dome that serves as a combination meeting hall, dining room and school, Russell Means called the camp a major development in Indian history.

"For 100 years we've been forced to live in those concentration camps they call reservations," he said. "Here we've shown what we can accomplish when Indian people are left to their own resources."

The camp operates a school and sells a small amount of Indian craft items made by the women. By growing vegetables in solar greenhouses and raising rabbits and chickens, the Indians hope to become self-supporting in about three years, Means said.

For now, the camp depends on donations to survive. Means, 42, is the prime fund-raiser, traveling around the country on speaking trips.

He gained national prominence as one of the leaders of AIM's 71-day occupation of the Indian village of Wounded Knee in 1973, which ended with two deaths and more than 300 arrests.

Both Means brothers were charged with felony violations as a result of the occupation. The charges were eventually dismissed.

Russell Means later served more than a year in the state prison after being convicted of inciting a riot at the Minnehaha County Courthouse in Sioux Falls.

Federal authorities and AIM members have worked to prevent a violent confrontation at Yellow Thunder Camp.

The government has sought to dismantle the camp through a civil lawsuit, instead of moving in with force to evict the illegal settlers.

Camp supporters are working to win passage of a bill introduced recently in Congress by Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D.-N.Y., that would set aside 800 acres for 10 years for use by Indians.

Under the measure, the Indians would be allowed to erect semi-permanent buildings, prevent use of the land for commercial purposes and hunt animals for their own use. The campsite would remain open to U.S. Forest Service officials and to other outsiders.

"If this bill gets the necessary support, our court battle will be over," Bill Means said. If it passes, Indians would later seek permission to remain at the site after the 10 years are up, he said.

Federal officials have said they fear more Indian camps could spring up in the Black Hills if the Yellow Thunder Camp wins permission to remain.

"There's not going to be a massive rush by Indian people to the Black Hills," Russell Means said. "There aren't too many people — Indian or white — who care to live in a tepee year-round."

Means said he expects the camp population to reach 150 to 200 in coming years, and says it could eventually support up to 500 people.

Camp residents live in insulated tepees heated by makeshift wood stoves. The dwellings keep out extreme cold and remain at comfortable temperatures on most winter days.

2-4A Girls Meet Set

MONAHANS -- The Girl's District 2-AAAA Track and Field Meet will be held here Thursday with Odessa Ector, Sweetwater and Monahans apparently vying for top honors.

Field events begin at 10 a.m. with the discus, high jump and triple jump. Running preliminaries begin at noon.

The shot put and long jump will be held at 2, followed by the running finals at 3:30.

Ector appears to have the top speed entering the tournament, while Sweetwater, Monahans, Andrews and San Angelo Lake View feature more depth. The Lady Eagles hold the district's fastest time in the 400 meter relay, 49.15, in the 800 meter relay, 1:44.1, and in the 1600 relay, 4:08.48. Sweetwater should give them a strong challenge as the Mustangs have been running only shades slower all season long - 49.8 in the 400, 1:44.5 in the 800, 4:08.85 in the 1600.

Sweetwater also boasts the fastest time in the 200 meters with Deborah McCain, who has run a 25.5, but Ector's Juanita Kelly will be pushing hard. Sonji McIntire of Ector holds the best time in the 400 meters with a 60.57.

The other sprint event, the 100 meters, should be a race between Snyder's Brenda Anderson, and Sweetwater's Alice Smith and Wanda Gardner. Anderson comes in with the best time, a 12.6.

The 100 meter low hurdles features Belinda Adams of Monahans, who has run a 15.3, and LynAnn Klutts of Lake View, who has taken the event in 15.58.

In the distance races there are no clear standouts. Nancy Ficken of Sweetwater apparently has the fastest time in the 1600 with a 5:55.8, while Andrews' Irma Flores has run the 3200 in 13:26.61. The fastest 800 meters time has been a 2:33.24 by Lake View's Amy Walker. Paula Brown of Andrews has run it in 2:33.91.

The field events promise equal excitment, particularly in the high jump. Lake View's Lori Hoelsher has cleared 5-5, but Tela Lindsey and Melody Holloway of Monahans and Lisa Morales of Fort Stockton have all jumped 5-4.

Snyder's Anderson has the best distance in the shot put, a throw of 40-9. Gardner of Sweetwater has thrown a 40-2. Sweetwater should do well in the discus where Gerilyn Stone holds the best distance of 122-11, followed by Gardner at 115½.

Ector hopes to get additional points from the triple jump where McIntire as leaped 34-9 and Natalie Carter 33-2½. Sweetwater's Sherolyn Hallmark has a best of 32-3. In the long jump, Tela Lindsey of Monahans has a 17-¾. Elva Aguilera of Fort Stockton has a 16-4½.

Tiger Entries For Loop Meet

MONAHANS -- Snyder girls hope to pull some upsets in the District 2-AAAA Girl's Track and Field Meet here tomorrow.

The Tigers, who do not appear to have enough depth to wrangle a surprise championship, will compete in all events except the 3200 and 1600 meter runs.

Snyder's primary threat would appear to be in the 100 meter dash and the shot put, where senior Brenda Anderson holds the district's best time and distance. The Tigers could also be strong in the 200 meters, the relays, the discus, high jump and triple jump.

Snyder individuals and their events, along with best times, are listed below. Also noted are heat and lane assignments for preliminaries, if applicable:

400 RELAY-- Best of 51.03, but 53.2 with present lineup of Michelle Townsel, Anderina Kitchens, Sherry Spells, Brenda Anderson. Heat 1, Lane 2.

100 HURDLES-- Patty Gleastine, 17.8. Heat 3, Lane 5.

800 RUN-- Thelma Garza (2:58.0), Debra Cline (2:59.0), Kim Knight (3:09.0). Run as finals.

100 METERS-- Brenda Anderson, 12.6. Heat 1, Lane 3; Robin Huntsman, NT. Heat 3, Lane 3; Connye Davis, NT, Heat 4, Lane 3.

800 RELAY-- Best of 1:53.06 with Anderina Kitchens, Michelle Townsell, Sherry Spells, Brenda Anderson. Heat 1, Lane 5.

400 METERS-- Kim Knight, NT. Heat 3, Lane 3; Thelma Garza, NT. Heat 4, Lane 6.

200 METERS-- Patty Gleastine, NT. Heat 1, Lane 4; Anderina Kitchens, 27.5. Heat 3, Lane 5; Michelle Townsell, 27.2. Heat 4, Lane 1.

1600 RELAY-- Best of 4:48.0 with Patty Gleastine, Debra Cline, Thelma Garza, Sherry Spells. Heat 2, Lane 3.

READY TO RUN -- Snyder's Anderina Kitchens gets into the blocks for her running of the 200 meters in a recent track meet. Kitchens, a sophomore, will run the 200 meters and the 400 and 800 relays when the 2-4A Girl's District Meet takes off tomorrow in Monahans. (SDN Staff Photo)

Astros Bombed In First Game

HOUSTON (AP) - About one hour after the [illegible] opener between St. Louis and Houston, a black cat crossed the path Astros hitters had to take to the batter's box.

It was far too late for the feline to bring any bad luck to the Astros - they had already crossed paths with the Cardinals, who banged out 18 hits and embarrassed the pennant hopeful Astros 14-3 Tuesday night before a disgruntled home crowd of 33,521 fans that was jeering before the season was one inning old.

Cardinal catcher Darrell Porter, recovering quickly from being hit on the elbow by a pitched ball on Sunday, gave the Astros their first taste of impending doom with a three-run home run in the in the five-run first inning off stunned Astros starter Nolan Ryan, trying to repeat his 1981 performance.

"It was an opening day home run off Nolan Ryan and it was a good feeling," Porter said simply. "I didn't even think about the elbow today. It started to stiffen on me. . .but the long delays between innings helped."

The Cardinals spent most of the game waiting to hit while the Astros flailed away in the field, committing two errors. Every Cardinal starter got at least two hits except third baseman Steve Braun and pitcher Bob Forsch, who got one each. In addition to his home run, Porter hit one of seven Card doubles.

"Nothing I did was right," said Ryan, who pitched a career record fifth no-hitter and led the major league in earned run average last season. "The only thing that looked reasonable was the change-up. After I hung the curve to Porter I started over striding. I never could do anything with my curve ball or my fastball. I never got close enough to do anything with it."

In addition to Porter's first inning homer, Braun had a run-scoring single and Ozzie Smith scored a run on a fielder's choice grounder.

Garth Iorg keyed a four-run fourth inning with a two-run double giving Forsch a comfortable cushion with which to ease his uncomfortable pitching motion.

WTC Aiming Toward Conference Golf Title

ROSWELL, N.M. -- Western Texas College goes after its fourth straight WJCAC Tournament title of the season here Friday, hoping to build its lead in the conference golf standings and medalist race.

The Westerners compiled 18 points through the first three conference tournaments held last fall and lead the division by 5.5 points over Odessa and New Mexico Junior College.

Western also boasts three of the top four medalists in the conference. Sophomore co-captain Philip Jones and freshman Petey Petri are tied with 72.3 averages over the first three tournaments. Jeff Seger, WTC's other sophomore co-captain, is in third place with a 72.6 average, along with NMJC's Dan Howard. Freshman Ronnie Fletcher is in seventh place in the standings with a 74.0 average.

In addition, freshman Rick Woodson has a 72.5 average. He has only played in two conference tournaments, however.

Seger was medalist in the NMSU Intercollegiate and in the conference tournament at Midland, while Jones took medalist honors in the NMJC Intercollegiate, and was runnerup in the WJCAC tournament at South Plains. Petri was medalist in the WTC conference meet and runnerup in the NMJC Intercollegiate and the Sam Houston State Invitational.

Friday's tournament was to open with practice rounds on Thursday. The tournament consists of 18 holes and is one of three conference tournaments this fall. The next will be held April 15-16 in Hobbs, N.M., followed by a conference-region tournament, held April 29-30 in Odessa.

Kruger Hired At Pan Am

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) - New coach Lon Kruger faces two big obstacles in returning Pan American University's basketball program to prominence.

The most obvious is last year's woeful 5-20 record but the most pressing may be a recruiting deadline. Kruger only took the job Tuesday and he has exactly one week until national signing day April 14.

"It's a difficult-type situation. But we can still get in a number of qualified people," said Kruger, 29, who left Jack Hartman's staff at Kansas State for his first head coaching post.

King, Gollagong Fall

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Billie Jean King and Evonne Goolagong both lost their matches in the second round of the $200,000 Sea Pines Family Circle Magazine Cup women's tennis tournament.

King, the 11th seed, lost to Pam Casale 6-7, 6-4, 6-4, while Goolagong, seeded 12th, fell to JoAnne Russell, 4-6, 6-2, 1-0. Goolagong suffered a pulled muscle in the second game of the third set and withdrew from the match.

In other matches, No.2 Martina Navratilova beat Yvonne Vermaak of South Africa, 7-5, 6-0; Mima Jausovec downed Switzerland's Petra Delhees 6-4, 6-7, 7-5, and Kathy Rinaldi beat Beth Norton 6-3, 6-0.

Snyder Scheduled Against Andrews

ANDREWS -- Snyder's Tigers look to keep their District 2-AAAA baseball lead intact as they face the Mustangs here Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The Tigers, 2-0 in loop play, gained sole leadership of the standings when Lamesa lost 9-4 to Pecos on Monday. Lamesa and Odessa Ector are tied for second place with 2-1 records, while Pecos is 1-1, Fort Stockton and Andrews 1-2 and Monahans 0-2.

Andrews is 4-12 for the season which includes a 7-6 loss to Snyder in the first round of the Monahans Tournament, held back on March 11. Snyder also leads league members in combined district and non-district play with a 13-5 record.

John Wilson, 5-1-2 with a 2.15 ERA, is expected to start on the mound for Snyder. Charles Bollinger will take over the third base duties.

The Tigers are led from the batter's box by catcher Jesse Hernandez, who is hitting .571. Perry Echols, outfielder, has been the bat-captain for the Tigers recently, however. He is slapping the ball at an .833 clip in district play and .396 for the season.

Other key hitters include Wilson, who is .750 in district and .383 overall; Britt Vincent, .250 and .318; Casey Peterson, .286 and .302; and Barry Davis, .333 and .273.

As a team, the Tigers are batting .338 in district and .303 for the season, with 12 home runs.

Cancer Crusade Month Named

Scurry County Judge Preston Wilson has proclaimd April as Cancer Crusade month. A door-to-door campaign will be conducted throughout Scurry County and each resident will receive crusade literature.

The crusade is conducted one time each year and its purpose is to get vital information into homes and to finance the expenses of the American Cancer Society as it seeks to eliminate this disease.

The symbol of the society is the Sword of Hope. The society has a three-fold program: research, education, and patent service and rehabilitation.

In the early 1900s few cancer patients had any hope of long-term survival. In the 1930's less than one in five was alive at least five years after treatment. In the 1940s it was one in four. Now the ratio is one in three.

The gain from one in four to one in three currently represents about 70,000 persons this year. Part of this progress can be contributed to the yearly crusade and have helped to finance research and education.

FBI Says Crime Rate Held Steady In 1981

WASHINGTON (AP) — The crime rate in the United States has leveled off after several years of growth, according to preliminary FBI statistics for 1981.

The figures, released Tuesday, show that the number of serious crimes reported to the nation's police in 1981 was about the same as in 1980. The crime rate had grown by 9 per cent in both 1980 and 1979. The last year it did not grow was 1977.

Administration officials and crime experts did not consider the 1981 statistics to be an indication that the nation is solving its crime problem, however.

"We see hope, but to say the problem is taken care of would be irresponsible," said Associate Attorney General Rudolph Giuliani, noting that 1980's crime level was the highest the FBI has ever recorded.

"I'd like to say that after a year and a half of firmer law enforcement, the message is getting through to criminals, but I just don't know. It's still too early to tell," he said.

An academic expert, Dr. James Fyfe of American University, said the statistics probably reflected two factors beyond the control of law enforcement officials: the weather and the aging of the American population.

Fyfe said some law-enforcement initiatives, such as stiffer sentences and special surveillance of habitual criminals, have been effective in some cities, but that "they have probably had only a marginal effect" on the national crime rate.

The statistics showed that of the serious crimes counted, only robbery increased in 1981, going up by 5 percent. Murder was down 3 percent, forcible rape down 1 percent, aggravated assault down 2 percent, burglary down 1 percent, auto theft down 4 percent, and arson down 8 percent.

Copters To Try Rescue Attempt

VILLAHERMOSA, Mexico (AP) — A group of American helicopter pilots planned another attempt today to reach isolated villages on the slopes of the erupting Chinchonal volcano in which more than 5,000 peasants may have perished. The chief pilot said he doubted they would be successful.

The 10 pilots flying for Pemex, the Mexican government's oil monopoly, made some trial flights Tuesday. But they could not get near the 4,340-foot volcano because of the clouds of volcanic ash belching up from the crater.

Chief pilot James Ballard said the copters would try again to fly over the five villages on the slopes of the mountain from which nothing has been heard since the eruptions began March 29. But he said the dense clouds of ash would probably force them back because the debris would clog the turbines of their choppers.

The villages are reached normally by trails now blocked by ashes three feet deep from El Chinchonal. With villages much farther away from the crater deserted because of the ash covering them and roofs of huts collapsed by the accumulation of debris, many officials doubt that anyone is still alive in the isolated settlements.

Florida is a beautiful, beautiful woman who is beginning to appear wanted and had by too many lovers ...

And some rapists.

Pained by the uninvited who ravage her cities, and drained by the invited who stay away.

Floridians love where they live, have paid willingly the price of their tropicality.—

The sometimes frost that wilts fruit...

The bugs that denude the palms...

The hurricanes which alternate with protracted drought.

Even when the yawning jaws of hell gulp down cars, sometimes whole houses ... faithful Floridians look beyond the sinkholes to the sunsets.

Gallantly they fight back against hit-and-run overdevelopers who would if they could with asphalt and ticky-tacky despoil sand and surf.

With the inevitable weeds in her verdant garden Florida can cope...

But then other places began dumping their problems on Florida and that may be too much.

Even Cubans now in Florida who protest that they want to go home — can't. Castro won't take them back.

Crime in Cuba is a fraction what it was since he flushed his sewers toward Florida.

Cubans and Haitians in the hundreds of thousands have invaded Florida in the past 18 months.

Dade County can't build classrooms fast enough for the 16,000 refugee children it is required by law to educate.

Housing is so tight Haitians live 25 to a room. Federal courts demand an end to overcrowding jails — and Florida has no place for the overflow to go — but out.

So in Miami's "Little Havana" recycled crime doubled last year.

Just the autopsies on murdered refugees cost the country $100,000 this last year.

Dade County has long since OD'd on smuggled drugs.

The hundreds more police which Miami cannot afford but has hired anyway can't begin to keep up.

Florida's Gov. Graham has injected himself into our nation's foreign affairs — has traveled to Haiti — has tried to stem the tide.

He says, "The federal government cannot or will not enforce its own immigration laws. We can't just sit back and let Florida be devastated!"

The American lifeboat is overloaded. From now on any magnanimous citizen who stands up in the lifeboat and demands we provide haven for even one more — should prove his humanitarianism.

Whether he be John Doe or Jesse Jackson — if he wants us to take another outsider in — he should himself be willing to step out.

Supreme Court Judges, Praise Late Abe Fortas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court justices past and present are praising the late Abe Fortas, the only member of the high court to resign under the threat of impeachment.

Fortas died of heart problems Monday night, 13 years after he was driven from the bench by his ties to a convicted stock manipulator. He was 71.

"Justice Fortas had an illustrious career as a member of the bar and in public office," Chief Justice Warren E. Burger said in a statement issued late Tuesday.

Justice William H. Rehnquist added:

"He will rightfully be held in high regard by the members of his profession and his fellow citizens."

"Justice Fortas was a man for all seasons, a lover of music and the arts, and a convivial friend and outstanding lawyer and jurist. I mourn his passing," said Arthur J. Goldberg, who resigned from the court in 1965 to make way for Fortas. President Johnson then named Goldberg U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Fortas resigned on May 15, 1969, after the disclosure that he had agreed to accept a $20,000 annual fee from a foundation headed by imprisoned financier Louis E. Wolfson. Fortas denied any wrongdoing.

Since leaving the court, Fortas had been in private law practice in Washington. He argued a case before the high court on March 22 — his first such appearance since he stepped down.

"We shall miss him," said Justices William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall.

Blizzards Paralyzing Country

By The Associated Press

A howling blizzard that ranked as the season's worst storm in the biggest cities of the Northeast buried blossoms under 2-foot snows, grounded robins in 75 mph gusts and slammed the door on spring.

The storm killed at least four people Tuesday in the Northeast after claiming 10 lives in the Midwest the day before, and four young hikers were missing in the Catskill Forest of New York.

Elections were canceled, Connecticut Gov. William O'Neill called out the National Guard to help clear the streets of abandoned cars and the airports serving New York, Boston and New Jersey were shut down.

Bitter cold threatened the peach crop in Dixie and thousands of people lost electricity in Virginia as winds gusted up to 72 mph.

The snow and the cold shattered weather records as two storm systems collided, and out in the white-capped ocean off Massachusetts, Nantucket Island was hit with gusts up to 83 mph.

The Midwest, digging out from the early days of the same snowstorm and crackling under record low temperatures, was warned that a new snowstorm would hit today after gathering strength in the West.

"This has to be, if not the greatest, one of the greatest spring storms to ever affect this area," said National Weather Service forecaster John Pollock in New Hampshire.

Balmy weather had melted the snow in New Hampshire and Vermont before Tuesday's storm dumped up to 2 feet of snow and brought gusts up to 35 mph, causing scores of accidents on highways.

"This is the worst morning I've seen in some time," said Manchester, N.H., police Capt. Dana Weeks. "It's unbelievable how in a month's time people can forget how to drive in snow."

Many New Yorkers went home from work early in a snowstorm that was accompanied by lightning. It was the city's worst of the winter and the first April blizzard since weather records have been kept. By late afternoon few people walked in the foot-deep snow in the city.

Four Connecticut cities were under a state of emergency and Hartford Hospital asked owners of four-wheel-drive vehicles to bring hospital employees to work as the state lay under 14 inches of snow.

The emergency declarations in Hartford, New Haven, Danbury and Meriden allowed the cities to move abandoned cars that made some streets impassable. But there were no fatal accidents.

"Nobody's going fast enough to kill themselves," Sgt. Williams Wadsworth of the Hartford, Conn., state police barracks said.

Boston virtually shut down Tuesday afternoon under 10-inch snow that broke a 65-year-old record for an April storm. The weather service reported accumulations of 2 feet in western Massachusetts and Interstate 495 near Marlboro was shut down after 50 vehicles were involved in chain-reaction collisions.

Logan International Airport in Boston was closed all day long, while LaGuardia and Kennedy airports in New York City and Newark airport in New Jersey shut down but reopened.

Two storm systems collided over New York City on Tuesday — cold air from Canada that moved across the Midwest hit warm air from the South, gathering strength and causing thunderstorms in addition to snow.

The 22-degree reading in New York City broke the 23-degree low set for the date in 1881, and Joe DiMaggio's plans to throw the first ball Tuesday at Yankee Stadium were snowed out.

The storm met the definition of a blizzard — sustained winds of 35 mph along with 6 inches of snow or more, said James Allen, deputy meteorologist in charge of the weather service in New York City.

The storm dumped up to a foot of snow in Pennsylvania, and record low temperatures of 24 degrees in Philadelphia and 20 degrees in Pittsburgh were recorded Tuesday night.

Temperatures in the teens broke records for the date Tuesday in Springfield, Ill., St. Louis, Detroit and Milwaukee. Muskegon, Mich., had a 9-degree reading that set a record for the month of April.

As New Jersey suffered under its first April blizzard, whipped by winds up to 55 mph, a bus driven by 55-year-old Peter J. Woelfel of Saddle Brook, N.J., slid into a ditch Tuesday morning in Harrington Park, N.J., and straddled railroad tracks.

The driver knew the train schedule, and he quickly got his passengers off the bus, said police Sgt. Richard Pearson.

"Sure enough, a few minutes later that freight train came through and ripped the bus in two. I can't praise him enough."

No one was injured, and the freight train didn't derail, he said.

New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean scrapped local school board elections in 11 northern counties because of the weather.

South Carolina peach growers fought a losing battle against temperatures in the 20s.

Two people died when a twin-engine Beechcraft Baron airplane was buffeted by blowing snow and crashed as it attempted to land at the Scandia Air Park in Warren County, Pa. Killed in the crash were the pilot, Nelson Klinek, and Douglas Bauer, 24, both of Bradford.

One person was killed in a four-vehicle pileup at the base of a snow-covered hill in Northampton Township, Pa. The victim — the driver of an armored truck — was identified as Harry Wise, 31, of Philadelphia.

In New Jersey, police said Frank Hume, 61, of Morrisville, Pa., was killed when his car struck a utility pole in Plainsboro during the peak of the blizzard.

Budget On Hold

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private negotiations on a possible budget compromise between the White House and members of Congress are temporarily on hold while President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. study the results so far.

Trying to play down his earlier optimistic statements, O'Neill is now saying the president must agree to a change in last year's three-year personal income tax rate cut as part of a compromise.

The Massachusetts Democrat told reporters Tuesday he is unwilling to discuss Social Security spending cuts as long as Reagan insists the tax cut he requested from Congress last year remain intact.

A number of officials have said the prospects for working out a bipartisan budget compromise hinge on Reagan's willingness to accept higher taxes at the same time O'Neill and House Democrats agree to reduce or freeze cost-of-living increases for Social Security.

Reagan has said repeatedly he will not accept any changes in the three-year personal income tax rate cut.

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee and a participant in the private discussions, said Tuesday he "doesn't underestimate the extreme difficulties" of reaching a compromise.

But Jones added that the negotiators have been discussing options previously ruled "off limits" by "the principals" — Reagan and O'Neill.

Jones stressed, however, that "no substantive agreement has been reached."

He added that Reagan and O'Neill are being briefed on the progress so far and if they decide the talks have been worthwhile the negotiators likely will resume their discussions next week.

Service To Close Week

The final noon service in the Holy Week Worship series, sponsored by the Scurry County Ministerial Alliance, will be held at 12:10 p.m. Thursday, at the First Presybterian Church.

The Rev. David Harr, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, will be the speaker. He will preach on the last supper. Music will be presented by Mrs. Verna West and Mrs. Melissa Harr, who will sing "An Upper Room."

A free lunch will be served following the worship. The public is invited.

Contest To Reopen Here

In order to comply with UIL awards rules, Midwest Electric Cooperative is re-opening its Rural Electric Youth Tour Contest that was previously held on Jan. 7.

The contest will be open to any boy or girl 14 to 19 years of age.

Interested contestants must submit a 500-word essay on the subject, "The Important of Rural Electric Cooperatives to America."

The entry must be received by Midwest Electric at P. O. Box 518 in Roby, Texas 79543, no later than 5 p.m. April 12. Two winners will be selected from these entries.

Grass Fire Extinguished

Units of the Snyder Fire Department were dispatched to a grass fire about 1.5 miles southeast of Snyder around 5:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Firemen quickly brought the blaze under control and no injuries or property damage was reported in the incident.

Snyder Police Recover Pickup

Snyder police officers reported the recovery of a stolen pickup Tuesday night.

Local officers found a 1978 Chevrolet El Camino, reported stolen from Fort Stockton April 4, in the parking lot of the Club 250 around 11:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The truck had been parked at the local club since Monday and was displaying license plates belonging to a Mrs. Baird's Bread Co. van. Police discovered the switched plates and impounded the vehicle until the owner can claim it.

No suspects have been arrested in the case.

Farewell Coffee Set For Warner

A farewell coffee to honor Bill Warner, manager of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce and BCD, will be held at 10 a.m. Thursday at the chamber office.

The public is invited to attend the coffee which is being hosted by the chamber's board of directors.

Warner, chamber manager for the past four years, has resigned to become assistant to the president and chairman of the board of the First National Bank in Odessa.

Warner will assume his new duties on Monday.

Brenda Hedges, president of the chamber, said that at least six applications for the position have been received. She said several more applications are expected.

Lecture Set Thursday

Terrell Hillebrand will give a gallery lecture on "A Golden Age of Painting" at 1 p.m. Thursday in the Scurry County Museum at WTC.

The public is invited to attend and there will be no admission charge.

Hillebrand is curator for the Sarah Campbell Blaffer Foundation of Houston which has made "A Golden Age of Painting" available to the Scurry County Museum.

Paintings from the 16th and 17th centuries are included in the exhibition, scheduled to remain in place through April 30. There is a video cassette introduction to the display which visitors to the museum may see in the lobby.

Members of the Museum Association will meet Hillebrand at a special premiere showing set Thursday night. Special music for the evening will be by Jill Wade, harpist, and a buffet dinner will be served.

Youngkin Is Named To Honor Roll

AUSTIN--Robert Clay Youngkin of Snyder has been named to the fall semester honor roll in the College of Business Administration at the University of Texas.

To qualify for the honor roll, the student must have carried at least 12 semester hours and have compiled at least six hours of A work above a B average in all courses taken. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. I. Youngkin, 4501 El Paso.

Gann Measure. . .

Could Rewrite Criminal Laws

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — In 1978 it was Proposition 13, a measure which made historic changes in California's taxing and spending laws. This year, residents of the nation's most populous state will vote on Proposition 8, an initiative which promises an extensive overhaul of the state's criminal laws.

Paul Gann, co-sponsor of the Proposition 13 and sponsor of a government spending limit initiative in 1979, calls his new initiative the Victims' Bill of Rights, though only a few of its 12 provisions deal with crime victims.

The measure was ordered onto the June 8 ballot last month by the state Supreme Court, which deferred until after the election a challenge based on the state constitutional requirement that an initiative cover only one subject.

Among its provisions are authority for judges to hold non-murder defendants without bail, a narrowing of the insanity defense, an attempt to limit plea-bargaining for serious crimes, a substantial increase in sentences for repeat criminals, and permission for victims to speak at parole and sentencing hearings.

"They're arresting the same people over and over because they're being turned loose...by the courts, in plea-bargaining," Gann said. "People are so upset at crime and the lack of control over crime."

One of the chief targets of the measure is the state Supreme Court, which has had a liberal majority for about 30 years but which has come under increasing attack in the last few years.

As the U.S. Supreme Court has narrowed previous rulings on defendants' rights, the California court has increasingly set out on its own under the state constitution, in areas like police searches, confessions and insanity.

The result has been accusations of judicial lawmaking, attempts to defeat Chief Justice Rose Bird at the polls, and now the Gann initiative, which would overturn many of the court's rulings.

The 69-year-old Gann, who spent most of his life selling real estate and automobiles, burst from obscurity four years ago when he and Howard Jarvis spearheaded the drive for Proposition 13.

Next to the tempestuous, headline-grabbing Jarvis, Gann was a quiet, calm figure. In 1980, Gann won the Republican nomination for U.S. Senate but was defeated by Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston by 1.6 million votes.

Even some of the measure's supporters say major portions of the measure are unconstitutional — for example, a provision that appears to admit all evidence from illegal police searches.

But the current anti-crime mood makes its passage likely, and if it survives court challenges, its impact could equal the shock wave caused by Proposition 13's $6 billion tax cut.

For instance:

A provision eliminating the automatic right to bail, and making public safety the first consideration in granting bail, might repeal the bail schedules that govern release of more than a million arrestees a year.

In that event, critics say, every local police jail would need a judge to set bail and, as the initiative requires, state reasons for each release.

Another provision would declare a constitutional right for all public school students and staff to attend "safe, secure and peaceful" schools.

Supporters say the purpose is simple, to promote school safety. Opponents say the potential consequences are staggering: parents refusing to send their children to "unsafe" schools; busing from inner-city schools to suburbs; reduction of police street patrols in order to station officers on campus.

Then there is the provision declaring, with a few exceptions, that criminal courts shall consider all "relevant" evidence.

The chief purpose, sponsors say, is to reverse California court decisions on the exclusionary rule, which bars the use of evidence from illegal police searches and illegally obtained confessions.

Weathermen Checking Twister Storm Warning

PARIS, Texas (AP) — Something can be learned from every tornado to help Texans prepare for the next violent storm, say forecasters who visited this twister-devastated city the day after the funnels touched down.

"Tornadoes usually move about 30 mph, but this one was moving about 50 mph," said Mike Mogil, deputy meteorologist in charge of the National Weather Service forecast office in Fort Worth.

Mogil praised the city and county warning system used last Friday to alert the area of the impending danger. Emergency vehicles with sirens raced through city streets to alert residents to take cover as the storm approached.

"(Getting) the warning out was imperative since it was moving so fast and covering a lot of ground in a short amount of time," he said, adding, "a spotter in Bonham mentioned that it was zipping right along."

Both Mogil and Alan Moller, warnings and preparedness meteorologists, were tracking the storm's path at the weather service in Fort Worth.

"We were typing the warning message into the computer system when we heard it had touched down," Mogil said.

"We knew from the movement around Bonham that it was dangerous, but did not know it was tornadic until a parent cloud, or wall cloud, was spotted near Ravenna. A funnel emerged and that's when we put out the warning to Fannin and Lamar Counties," the forecaster said.

The warning system used by the National Weather Service is two-fold, Mogil explained.

"We use the radar to track a system and then a spotter on the ground to tell them what is going on. It worked very well," he said.

"County spotters are due a tremendous amount of credit," said Moller. "Local amateur radio operators were working closely with city police and the Department of Public Safety. They should get credit for what they did."

Mogil said the early alert triggered the public warning.

"Not only did they (amateur radio operators) report what they got ... they got the word out to the cars with sirens and were the communications links," Mogil noted.

The spotters were also praised by Harold McCrabb, meteorologist-in-charge in Fort Worth.

"The total warning-preparedness program paid off," he said. "Early warnings thanks to trained spotters, effective dissemination of the warning via sirens and the mass media and superb response by the people at risk contributed to the very low death toll."

Texas Governor...

Mansion Renovation Noted

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — With fanfare and ceremony, Gov. Bill Clements and wife Rita [illegible] reopened the newly-renovated Governor's Mansion, after a more than two-year project to restoré it to its former "simple elegance."

The project cost $3.6 million — $1 million in state funds for structural repairs and the rest in private donations for interior decorating and furnishings.

Before ceremonially unlocking the front door Thursday, Clements said he felt only "dismay" when he and Mrs. Clements moved into the 126-year-old, deteriorating home in 1979. Former resident Dolph Briscoe warned them about falling plaster when they moved in, Clements said.

The Clements' stayed in the mansion only seven months, moving into an apartment to make way for the renovation project.

Mrs. Clements said $3.1 million in money and gifts was raised by Friends of the Governor's Mansion, $500,000 of which will be put into an endowment to preserve the home.

The idea behind the project, Mrs. Clements said, was to "restore the home to the simple elegance that characterized the period in which it was built" — the mid-1800s.

Architects Burson, Hendricks and Walls of Dallas won the contract for structural renovation of the mansion. Jed Mace and Tom Sellman of Dallas donated their time as interior designers, Mrs. Clements said.

A nationwide search turned up enough American Empire and Duncan Phyfe pieces to almost completely furnish the house with authentic American antiques.

After a news conference on the front steps, reporters were taken on tours of the mansion. Public tours begin April 14.

After she and the governor posed for photos in the entry hall, Mrs. Clements led the way through the two-story, white brick house which sits on a large corner lot between the Capitol [illegible] Travis County courthouse.

The redecoration features specially-commissioned rugs — including one with seals of the six flags of Texas and Texas wildflowers in its design — and all the drapery and upholstery fabrics were designed for the mansion, Mrs. Clements said.

In the entry hall is a large oil painting, "The Fall of the Alamo," signed in 1908 by artist Robert Onderdonk. It has been appraised at $450,000 was donated by two Houston families.

Two massive bookcases in the library are reproductions, Mrs. Clements said, because "we looked all over and couldn't find any." They were copied from pieces in the Dodge House in Oklahoma, she said.

The red-and-blue state dining room's 14-seat table is English, Mrs. Clements said, but added that decorators are still looking for an American table to replace it with.

One whole side of the downstairs is taken up with twin formal parlors decorated in yellow and green. At one end is an inlaid American Empire pianoforte dated 1830.

A huge breakfront bookcase houses a collection of mementoes Jean Daniel assembled from previous residents of the governor's mansion when she lived their during husband Price Daniel's term.

Among them is James S. Hogg's hymn book and Hardin Runnels' pistol.

Upstairs, the two "official" bedrooms are unfinished, with two mattressless four-posters in the room that used to be the Sam Houston bedroom, which has one of the most unusual pieces in the home — a hammered sheet metal floor clock that belonged to Gov. Pease.

The bedroom now named for Sam Houston is in the front of the upstairs and features a split bathroom, because the existing facility couldn't be expanded without destroying a historic fireplace, Mrs. Clements said. A shower was installed in what had been a closet.

After viewing the ceremonial rooms, reporters got an unexpected tour of the Clements' private living quarters on the second floor. Although furnished with reproductions of 19th-century furniture, the private quarters are strikingly modern and bright compared with the rest of the house.

At the news conference before the tour, Clements was asked why no one had seriously renovated the home before. He suggested that when governors served only two-year terms, they did not have the incentive to push for the lengthy project.

Clements insisted he would have plenty of time to reap the benefits of the renovation even though several candidates have lined up for his job this election year.

"We'll be here this year and then four more," he said.

Swiss Maintain Fleet For Some Emergencies

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Parliament has made sure that Alpine Switzerland, which at no point is lower than 850 feet above sea level, will maintain an ocean-going merchant fleet — the largest one of all landlocked nations.

With rare unanimity, legislators recently approved a $160 million credit line to guarantee bank loans intended to finance construction or purchase of new ships.

Tourists are familiar with the nostalgic looks of the white paddle-wheel boats cruising on Switzerland's scenic lakes but few know that the country has a 31-unit, 305,000-gross-ton fleet crisscrossing the seas of the world.

The fleet is larger than that of such island nations as Ireland and New Zealand and it is more than half that of Canada, whose shores are washed by two oceans.

Parliament acted following a government message saying the fleet, flying the Swiss red flag with the white cross, was of vital importance to assure supplies in case of international conflict.

The government said the measure would ensure a minimum tonnage to be available for "emergencies" even if some ships were lost.

With its economy depending by 50 percent on imports, Switzerland started its maritime traditions at the outbreak of World War II when it was surrounded by warring nations, and naval blockades resulted in food shortages.

Authorities chartered 15 Greek ships in 1939 "for the duration of the war." But when Greece also became involved in the fighting and its ships were barred from the French and Italian Mediterranean ports, the Swiss fleet was born.

The infant fleet lost one-third of its tonnage on the high seas or while approaching neutral ports. But it proved a necessity. The ships were taken over by private companies, and a slow but steady expansion followed.

The seven private Swiss companies now operating the ships are bound by stringent regulations. One clause in the 1957 law governing Swiss shipping says the government can refuse to withdraw a ship from the Swiss register if this would jeopardize "economic defense."

The Swiss tonnage is less than 1-1,000th of the world's total, but the government has seen to it that its merchant marine is one of the most modern. The average age of ships is nine years.

In case of conflict, they would come under orders of a "war transport office" which has its bureau in the federal capital.

Urs Vauthier, head of the office, said one problem was that only 40 percent of the 750 merchant sailors are Swiss nationals.

"Another problem is that in a future conflict we will not have that much time to prepare the ships to carry vital supplies," he told an interviewer.

At least four units are then likely to serve different purposes: they are special tankers for wine transport.

Cassette Tapes Give Blind View Of World

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Stephen Prine makes a living polishing an important window on the world for 8,500 South Carolinians who wouldn't have much of a view without him and his staff of nine.

The 8,500 are blind or visually impaired, and Prine is director of a special state library that expands their horizons in ways most of us take for granted.

Novels, histories, reference books, magazines and more are stored on the thousands of cassette tapes and records that jam row upon row of shelves at the state Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped.

There are more than 100,000 items in all, multiple copies of about 20,000 titles selected by the Library of Congress for its free program of reading material for the blind.

Every month, nearly 11,000 plastic containers are shipped postage-free to library subscribers, who make selections from monthly lists they receive by mail, and another 11,000 or so come back in for recirculation.

"When someone returns a book, we send them another one," Prine says. "We've got some people who read just one book a month. And we have others who read 30 books a week."

The national program is a half-century old, created by Congress and run directly from the Library of Congress at first. Regional libraries were set up later as demand increased.

In 1961, a center was established in Raleigh to serve North and South Carolina, until the Columbia branch was set up in 1973 in an old warehouse and coffin factory. The library moved to its present building three years ago, but Prine says it may have to expand or move soon.

"This library has been growing at the rate of almost 1,000 readers each year," he said. "We'll probably reach a plateau of 15 or 20,000." And storage space is growing scarce for the 1,800 new titles the Library of Congress produces each year.

The state's blind population is estimated at about 40,000.

"A lot of people are not readers," Prine explained. "If they aren't interested in print when they have access to it and then develop a visual impairment, they may not be interested in us either."

Dear Abby

Woman Says Impotence No Bar to Intimacy

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A 75-year-old woman wrote to say that when her 77-year-old husband was 30, due to a bungled operation, he had lost all desire for sex, but over the years they had experienced an intimacy that would not be believed by the present generation that thinks all there is to marriage is sex. She said, "When we cuddle up in each other's arms on a cold winter night, we achieve a more lasting closeness than the couples who make love for three minutes, then leave each other to go sleep in separate bedrooms."

Abby, when I read that, I cried. How I wish I had what she had. I love my husband, but I feel closer to him when he just holds me until I fall asleep than when he makes love to me, rolls over and goes to sleep with his back toward me.

Sometimes I pray that he will become impotent. To me, cuddling and holding expresses genuine "love." The sex part is just selfish animal gratification.

I am 20, and I think the younger generation is changing because most of my girlfriends say they don't like sex any more than I do. Some women just hide it better.

Abby, impotent men have as much going for them as the men who aren't. And if they can't find a woman to love them for who and what they are, tell them to come to Arkansas.

LOVES LOVE, NOT SEX

DEAR LOVES: Thanks for a potent letter.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I've been meaning to write this letter for a long time — 10 months to be exact — because that's how long I've been sober. I'm 34 and didn't even start drinking until I was 26.

I didn't know I was an alcoholic until I read the "test" in your column, and after answering the questions truthfully, I realized I was.

You said that Alcoholics Anonymous was the best, so I went to a meeting, and what I found there was exactly what I needed. The open discussions helped me to see the light.

My sincere thanks for helping me to save myself years of misery. About A.A.'s spiritual program: There may be lots of people like myself who aren't religious at all, and might shy away from A.A. because they don't believe in any kind of "God." But if they go, they'll find a new kind of faith. Please keep telling people about A.A., Abby. Some people make it on the third or even fourth try!

SOBER AND LOVING IT

DEAR SOBER: Thanks for writing. I know I sound like a broken record plugging A.A. as I do, but if only one person is helped today, it will be worth space in my column. A.A. is in your phone book. There's a chapter near you. It doesn't cost a dime, and could be worth a million.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: "Lacking Love and Hating It" blames his wife because he had a heart attack. He claims his doctor told him that withholding sex causes sexual tension, which in turn causes heart attacks in men. I can't believe a doctor would make such a statement. As though men were the only ones with sexual tension!

"Lacking Love" should take a good long look at himself. I'll bet he's a slob who smells like a brewery, abuses his wife, then gets mad because she's not in the mood to make love. There are a lot of men like that around. You see them every day in the corner bars complaining because their wives are "cold."

ICE-COLD IN LOUISVILLE

• • •

CONFIDENTIAL TO FEELING STUPID IN SARASOTA: Don't ever hesitate to ask a question because you're afraid you might sound "stupid." There are no stupid questions. Only stupid mistakes.

• • •

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

'An American Family'...

Surprise Ending To Family Story

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Once upon a time, Bill and Pat Loud lived with their five teenagers in a stucco ranch house on a scenic mountain drive with three dogs and two cats. Out back was the heated pool. The Jaguar, Volvo and Toyota were parked in the driveway.

An American family living the American dream.

The fairy tale took a nasty twist a decade ago. The Louds' marriage crumbled and the family shattered in front of a nationwide television audience. It happened the American way — at 9 o'clock Eastern time, 8 o'clock Central, on public TV.

They were "An American Family," their glossy but troubled lives played out in a living soap opera without background music, scripts or staging. The real-life documentary of the Loud household, filmed over seven months of 1971 and shown on a dozen consecutive Thursdays in 1973, became as analyzed and criticized as any show in television history.

Stardom wasn't far behind for the Louds. They appeared on talk shows and magazine covers. They were examined in the public prints.

The surprise ending comes now, without fanfare: The Louds have turned out just fine. The mother and father have made new lives for themselves on opposite coasts. The children are out on their own.

Once accused of being a family that "touches without meeting and meets without touching," the Louds today keep in touch with each other more than many families similarly spread across the country. Five of the seven went skiing together at Aspen, Colo., over Christmas; Papa Loud picked up the tab.

But the days when the cameras were recording their every move, and Dick Cavett was hanging on their every word, are not forgotten.

The same television screen that brought America the Brady Bunch and Ozzie and Harriet had brought a real family's real laughs and real tears — and a real marriage breaking apart. It was like transom peeping.

Pat Loud's concern for her homosexual son, Lance, for example, was apparent when Mrs. Loud visited him in New York City and the cameras followed. The youthful mother, with long black hair, took a room at Lance's rundown hotel and spent a week with his circle of friends.

Lance took his mother to a play (the actors appeared in drag) and later had a long talk. Lance told her that he felt "like a little mouse trapped in a box" when he lived at home. "There's always been something in me I could never understand," he said.

At home, Pat and Bill Loud's marriage, marked by verbal jousts, began to fall apart. Mrs. Loud decided to get a divorce. She gave her reasons in a talk with her brother and sister-inlaw in episode eight.

In episode nine, the breakup: "I have ... I've spoken to a lawyer," Mrs. Loud told her husband. She handed him the lawyer's card. "And I'd like to have you move out."

"Well, that's a fair deal," Bill said.

"I figured you'd think that."

Viewers saw Pat Loud boot her unfaithful husband out of the house, and Bill Loud try to get his attorney to keep the divorce settlement low. "Nothing for entertainment, nothing for birthdays."

They saw a house of five adolescents, ages 14-20; not one looked like Ricky Nelson.

They saw the oldest, Lance, take up his homosexual life in New York, saw him give makeup tips to his two sisters. They saw his brother, Grant, balk at getting a summer job and wreck a family car. They saw a brush fire come within inches of the Loud home. They watched Delilah talk for hours on the phone, pursuing her first true romance.

Meanwhile, Kevin was becoming a high-school politician, showing signs of maturing into a businessman like his father. Michele was a quiet girl of 14 who loved pets.

Today, the famous "broken family" appears to have healed itself. The Loud children are making their father prouder than he ever expected. "At one time I was uncertain about how anybody was going to turn out," Bill said in a recent interview. "It was dangerous in that house."

Bill, now 61, remarried in 1977 and lives in a wealthy suburb of Santa Barbara. He still heads his own mining-supplies firm from the bright office that appeared on the television series.

Pat, 55, lives on New York City's Upper East Side and is a writers' agent. She hasn't remarried.

Lance, 30, attends the School for Television Arts in New York, where he plans to graduate in June. Kevin, 29, got a master's degree from William & Mary and now is a finance manager for a petroleum company in Houston.

Grant, 27, lives in Los Angeles, writes and performs music, and works part time as a waiter. He appeared singing one of his own songs in a horror movie called "Graduation Day."

Delilah, 26, is a commercial producer for an advertising firm in Los Angeles. Michele, 24, is a pattern maker in New York's garment district.

Craig Gilbert, producer of "An American Family," who lives in Malibu, Calif., is developing feature films.

Gilbert conceived the idea for the series, theorizing that if a camera stayed with any one family long enough "something important would be revealed about why men and women in their various roles were having such a difficult time in America during the early 1970s."

The Louds provided a powerful screen portrait of a family that looked outwardly in control but inwardly was in trouble. They were not a typical American family, as the producer cautioned in the opening frames. Still, they were a family, and viewers often saw something of themelves in the Louds' struggle.

"We had thousands of letters that said, 'I loved the series . .. I think.' It was painful for people," Gilbert says now. "People thought: 'One or another or several aspects of this is exactly what I'm going through.'"

The $1.2 million series comprised 12 hour-long episodes gleaned from 300 hours of film shot in five states and several countries.

"For one shining moment, there was a glimmer of what television could do as a way for us to see ourselves in a constructive way," Gilbert says. "It was one of the few times Americans could say, 'I am not alone. I don't have to pretend any more that everything's terrific.'"

Shana Alexander called the show "a glimpse into the pit." America magazine called it "a painful and unnerving look at the American Dream turned nightmare. More important, it is a look at ourselves."

The Louds had little quarrel with the final product before air time. After seeing a preview of several episodes, Mrs. Loud wrote Gilbert a thank-you note, for handling the film "with as much kindness as possible and still remain honest."

But when the public criticism began, the family was hurt. They had become specimens in a laboratory of popular sociology and they lashed out at Gilbert. The media were quick to pick up their anger.

"What nerve have we touched?" an exasperated Mrs. Loud asked after the show had been on the air only four weeks.

"We weren't ready for the shock of it being presented as a picture of a declining family," Bill Loud says now. "We thought we were going to become the all-American, California family and we came out as the super tragedy."

The family took a closer look at itself, taking some of the criticism to heart. "The critics said we didn't communicate with each other and we didn't," Michele says. "They said we didn't confront each other and we still don't. But a lot of people find it difficult to confront others."

But the Louds also discovered advantages.

As Lance put it: "The series was the fufillment of the middle-class dream: you can become famous for being just what you are."

Interviewers sought Pat and Bill Loud's opinions on marriage and divorce. Pat wrote "A Woman's Story," a book about her divorce. Lance, Grant and Kevin formed a rock group called Mumps.

Fame waned, however. The rock group disbanded. Mrs. Loud's book never became a best seller. Life went on.

While the family was in the spotlight, producer Gilbert was sensitive to the critics and the Louds, who had become his friends.

"The Louds thought — and they were right — that they had been living their lives the best they could. It was only when they were called fools, idiots and bad parents that they got angry. And they directed it at me," Gilbert says.

He had also taken a personal look in the cracked mirror, a prop he used in the opening minutes of each episode. His own marriage of 16 years had broken apart the year filming began. Like many of the viewers, he found the Louds' story personal and painful.

Gilbert, a sympathetic figure with a graying beard and burly frame, has talked little about the series since that first hectic year. He's been torn between his pride in "An American Family" and his desire to be known for something other than "this bizarre series," he says.

The problem, he says, is that the series was "aired amid such enormous controversy and media hype that the content and truth of the thing — good or bad — got lost in the shuffle.

"I became a recluse," he continues, opening his third pack of cigarettes in as many hours. "I had enormous selfdoubts. I did a lot of thinking. It was a period when I truly felt hopeless."

Everyone involved with the production of "An American Family" was touched deeply — and personally — by the reallife trauma at the Loud household. Gilbert had asked the camera-sound crew, Alan and Susan Raymond, and other staff not to get involved in the Louds' affairs during filming. But, Gilbert acknowledges, that was impossible.

The Raymonds stopped filming in the middle of a particularly nasty argument between Bill and Pat Loud in a tavern, saying they simply couldn't film any more of the scene, Gilbert says. Raymond declines to discuss the series now; he and Gilbert are not on speaking terms.

Considering the havoc it caused, why did the Louds ever agree to let Gilbert and his cameras into their lives? Ego, says Bill Loud with a smile.

"Here they were telling us we were rich, had a good-looking family and a nice home," Loud says.

LESS THAN 65¢ A MONTH HELPS KEEP SEPTIC TANKS AND CESSPOOLS FROM BACKING UP AND BREAKING DOWN.

Every time you do a wash, your detergent, soap and bleach wash away some of the bacteria your septic tank or cesspool needs to work. That can mean back up and break down. And costly repairs.

Rid-X helps prevent all of that by putting back the bacteria. Rid-X and one extra flush of your toilet a month may be the only attention your septic system needs.
