Bush limits offshore drilling

Bush admits tax increases needed to slash deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, who won the White House with a "read-my-lips" pledge of no new taxes, conceded Tuesday that tax increases must be part of any plan to shrink the mushrooming budget deficit.

The politically charged admission was quickly hailed by Democrats, who had demanded that Bush and his Republican allies share the heat for digging deeper into taxpayers' pockets during an election year.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill. and chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, called Bush's statement "an important step in the right direction," WASHINGTON — President Bush Tuesday banned new drilling for oil and natural gas off most of the U.S. West Coast and the southwest coast of Florida and New England until after the turn of the century.

Bush also recommended a permanent ban on drilling for the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary proposed by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. The 2,200 square mile area off the central California coast is considered the largest marine mammal breeding ground in waters surrounding the 48 lower continental states.

Cooling tips work for pets, plants, too

■ Area horticulturalist recommends deep watering in the early morning, while a veterinarian says pets should have access to shade and water.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Water, shade and mulch are the hot words on the street for keeping cool.

National Weather Service officials say there's no relief in sight for barbecued Midlanders who weathered a 105-degree high Tuesday.

It was the eleventh day in the last two weeks when the mercury topped 100 degrees, and the fifth consecutive day of greater than 102-degree heat.

The high today is expected to hit 106 blistering degrees, an NWS spokesman said.

So what's a suffering pet owner and gardener to do?

Conventional wisdom calls for drinking plenty of water, finding shade and wearing natural fibers that reflect the heat.

Deborah Benge, Texas Agricultural Extension Service horticulturist for Midland and Ector counties, said plants need the same things.

She recommends deep watering, which involves pooling water on grass and plants once a week, or even less frequently, rather than using the sprinkler system every day.

"Deep watering encourages deep root system development," Ms. Benge said. "Otherwise, if you're shallow watering, the roots will stay close to the soil surface and they'll die in this heat."

Workman's torch set off complex fire

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A workman's torch set off a residential fire that damaged eight units of a north Midland apartment complex Tuesday afternoon, fire officials said.

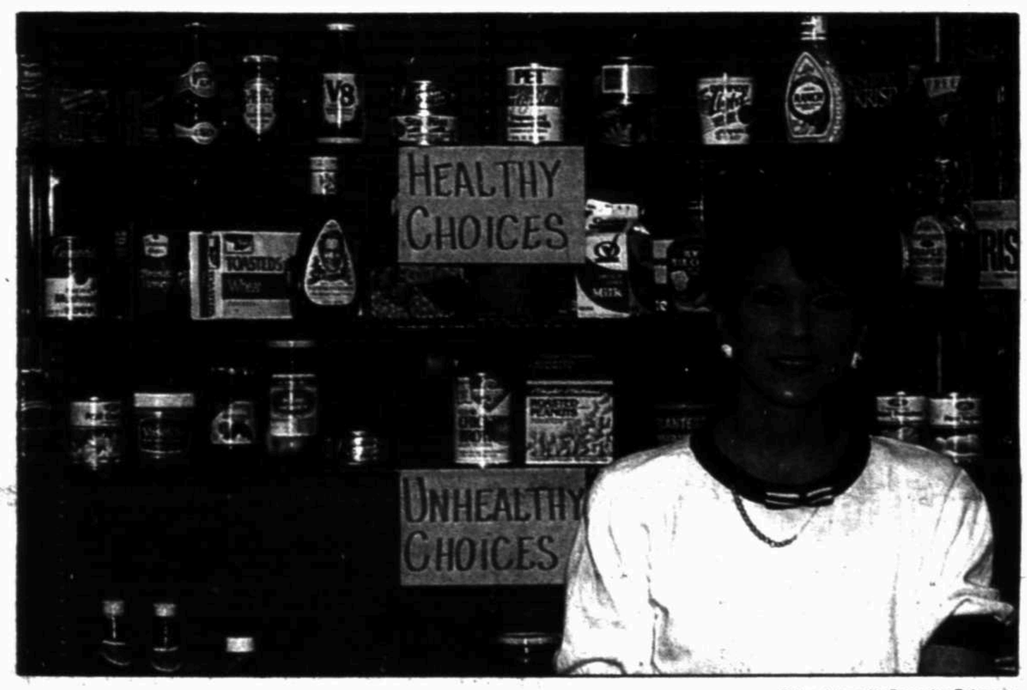

Firefighters responded to a fire that began in a laundry room at the Windscape Apartments, 3500 North Loop 250, about 3:05 p.m. Tuesday.

The laundry room where the fire started and two second-story apartments were heavily damaged. Two additional second floor apartments received lesser fire damage and four ground-level apartments sustained water damage.

The fire was caused accidentally by workmen, who were using a plumber's acetylene torch, Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said. Apparently the workers were soldering a pipe near a wall, causing the fire to start inside the wall and spread upward,

Time of transition

Theresa Markham, a dietitian and director of behavorial medicine with Permian Health Resources in Midland and Odessa, teaches patients how to go about changing their eating habits prior to coming off the program's HMR liquid fast. Such diets recently have grown in popularity.

Isn't there a 'cure?'

A THINNING OBSESSION

Driven to achieve the ideal slender physique, Americans are becoming big losers — of weight and more. From the seasonal shedding of a few pounds for a sleeker swimsuit look to radical starvation and fasting regimes for the seriously obese, dieters struggle to be a less sizable portion of society.

Today: Keeping up with the latest fashionable diet or weight loss treatment is as transitory as fashion itself. A look at yesterday and today's "hot" methods for taking off weight.

By Chris Van Wagenen

When the Phoenix Fiber Cookie was introduced less than two years ago, a lot of promises were made to an eager purchasing public.

Here was a product that supposedly promoted weight control, and prevented high blood pressure, diabetes and cancer as well as other diseases.

Like the snake oil salesman's magic cure-all, it wasn't long before the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) jumped into the act.

Last month the FDA forced Phoenix Marketing Corp. to remove the cookie from all store shelves. The company later announced it would discontinue other diet product lines, including its Phoenix Fizzie.

Chalk up another one for fad diets.

From the "Beverly Hills Diet," which professional dietitians love to scoff at, to the Appetoff Appetite Control Plan, which relies on a skin patch to suppress the appetite, fly-by-night weight-loss programs are as common as the West Texas mesquite.

Fad diets aren't new. Neither are fad products. And desperate consumers will try just about anything once, including 1990s versions of the magic elixir.

So it's little wonder that lawmakers on Capitol Hill have taken considerable notice of the diet industry in their quest to sort out the reputable from the reprehensible.

United Way pledges to 'go the distance'

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

The United Way of Midland pledged to "go the distance" to raise $2,503,000 this year, and its campaign chairman has even promised to run the distance — from Austin to the Tall City — if necessary.

Charles Spence, campaign chairman, president and publisher of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, said he would don his running shoes in mid-October to make the approximately 320-mile run if the United Way did not receive a challenge grant this year.

Lana Cunningham, United Way communications director, said that proposing to run a great distance to raise funds was unusual.

"Most of our campaign chairmen would have died trying to run that distance. But Spence is a runner, and a sports enthusiast," Ms. Cunningham said. "So, we decided to use the theme, 'Go the Distance for the United Way of Midland' and make it a fun campaign.

As for the run, Spence laughed and said, "I'm hoping I won't have to do that."

Last year the Abell-Hanger Foundation offered a challenge grant which leveraged about $276,000 in new dollars for the United Way, according to Spence.

This year's goal is 1.5 percent higher than the $2,464,00 raised last year.

"Last year's campaign was a tremendous success, and we are hoping for other challenge grants to commit," the campaign chairman said. "We are going to raise every dollar we can and knock on every door."

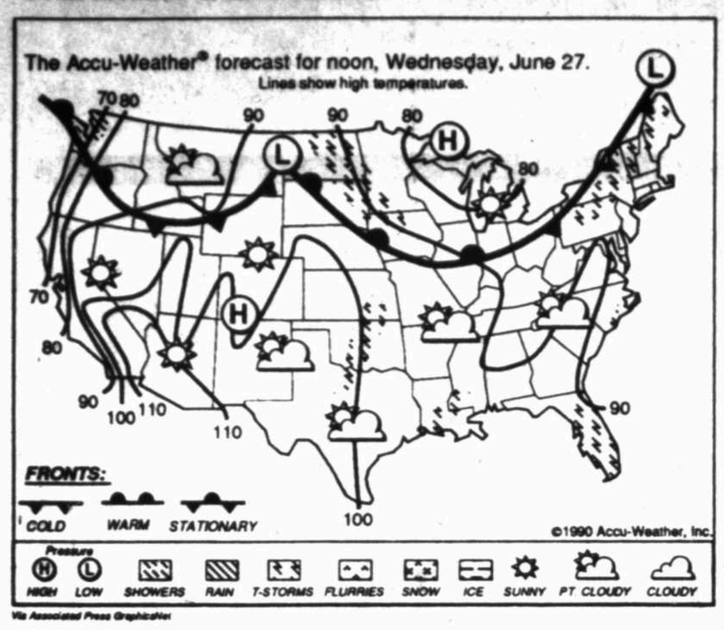

Spence, who has served on the Midland Needs Assessment Project for the past three years, said he got behind the campaign after studying the "human needs" in Midland. "Even though $2.5 million sounds like a lot of money," he said, "we ought to be looking at raising $3 million in the next year or two."

Spence said that he committed to serving as campaign chairman since he has often worked with agencies which have been on the receiving end of United Way services. He has served as board president for the Boy Scout Council and the Salvation Army, agencies which both benefit from United Way services.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press GraphicsNet

HEAT: Mulching helps slow evaporation rate

(From 1A)

Grass needs to have an inch and a half of water once a week. Trees and shrubs need 4 to 5 inches of water two to three times a month.

Ms. Benge said water levels could be measured by putting a bowl in the path of the sprinkler and recording how long it takes to fill it to the desired point.

"The way people can tell if their plants are getting the right amount of water is to dig down 5 inches in the dripline of the plant and if there's no moisture, they need to increase watering," Ms. Benge said.

Watering is most efficient in the early morning, she added.

She said soil moisture could be retained by mulching around plants. Three inches of mulch such as pine bark, pecan shells, gin trash, dry grass clippings and even shredded newspapers insulate the soil from the heat of the sun and slow evaporation.

Ms. Benge also cautioned against using quick release nitrogen forms of fertilizer, such as ammonium sulfate and ammonium nitrate, because they speed up the plant's metabolism and add salt to the soil, increasing water demand.

Mowing grass at the higher end of its recommended height can help its drought tolerance, by slowing its growth, she said. The higher leaf blades do a better job of shading the soil, which reduces evaporation.

There's not much you can do to help out your vegetables and bedding plants besides deep watering and mulching, said Coby Farrow, greenhouse manager for La Casa Verde Garden Center.

■ Southwest sizzles in record heat wave/3E

"This heat is tough on everything," he said.

He warned that squash and cucumbers will go downhill fast in the heat and tomatoes and peppers will be marginal.

Tomatoes won't set if the temperature soars past 92 degrees during the day and 75 degrees at night. Airborne pollen from sweet corn tassels will die before reaching the silks in the heat.

However, melons enjoy hot weather and peach and plum trees should do OK, Farrow said.

Animals don't appreciate the heat.

Dr. Robert Boyd, a veterinarian at Tall City Veterinary Hospital, said outside pets and livestock should have plenty of water and shade.

"The only way dogs can cool themselves is by panting. That tongue's an evaporative cooler for them," he said. "That's why they need so much water."

He doesn't suggest doghouses for shade because they don't provide enough ventilation. A tree is better.

Boyd said animals not used to hot weather should be watched closely to ensure against heat exhaustion.

"Those little fat house dogs can cook up real quick outside," he said. "For heaven's sake, don't leave them in the car where it can be 130 degrees in a matter of minutes."

He said only animals conditioned to work in the heat, polo ponies, for example, should be out at high noon.

Like their owners, exercising dogs should have plenty of water and not stress themselves. An overheated dog can be cooled down in a shallow pool or splashed on the head and legs with cold water, Boyd said.

"At the clinic we give them ice-water enemas," he said.

A spokeswoman with Midland Memorial Hospital said nurses haven't administered cool-down treatments to emergency room patients yet.

"To my knowledge, we haven't had any heat-related admissions," she said.

Perhaps Midlanders have learned that only mad dogs and Englishmen go out in the noonday sun.

Today's forecast is hot and sunny with a near-record high of 106 and south winds gusty at 10-20 mph, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. This evening will be clear with a low in the lower 70s.

The record high for today is 106, set in 1980. The record low is 61, set in 1968.

Tuesday's high of 106 broke the previous record for the date of 103 set in 1972 The overnight low was 73, compared to the record low for of 59, set in 1958.

Man charged in robberies

Staff Report

A 25-year-old man was arrested Tuesday morning in connection with two early morning robberies, police officials said.

Jesse Vincent McGrew was charged in the aggravated robbery of the Exxon service station, 3603 W. Wall Ave., shortly after midnight, and the robbery of the 7-Eleven convenience store at 4324 Andrews Highway, about 1:45 a.m.

A knife was reportedly used in the Exxon incident when about $150 was taken; no weapon was displayed at the 7-Eleven where about $50 was taken, police said.

McGrew, who was arrested about 2:15 a.m. near the intersection of Midkiff Road and Cuthbert Avenue, remained in jail Tuesday night. Bonds were set at $25,000 and $50,000 in the two incidents by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, jail officials said.

DRILLING: Bush calls for further study

"Although I have today taken these strong steps to protect our environment, I continue to believe that there are significant offshore areas where we can and must go forward with resource development," Bush said in a statement.

Bush, whose decision follows a steady string of oil spills in U.S. waters, called for further studies of potential environmental impacts and socioeconomic consequences to settle whether new leases might be offered to oil companies after 2,000 in areas specified in Tuesday's announcement. Environmentalists had hoped for permanent bans on offshore drilling to protect beaches and sensitive environment regions.

For waters off California, the president's decision will halt drilling consideration for more than 99 percent of tracts that had been under federal review until after the year 2,000.

But Bush said that beginning in 1996, consideration will be given to drilling on 87 tracts in the Santa Maria basin and the Santa Barbara channel if studies suggest that oil can be extracted in an environmentally responsible manner. The areas are off the coast northwest of Los Angeles where oil and gas production already is occurring.

In addition, Bush adopted a plan put together by representatives of Washington and Oregon, federal agencies and Indian tribes calling for cancellation of planned 1992 lease sales for waters off the two states and deferral of development plans until further studies are complete after the year 2,000.

For Florida's coast below the 26th parallel and west of the Everglades, Bush canceled existing leases and said further leasing will not be considered until after the year 2,000.

The president also said the federal government will immediately begin talks with Florida aimed at sharing the cost of buying back leases already sold in the area. Estimates of the amount already spent on oil development in the area range from $100 million to $200 million.

Bush also canceled proposed lease sales for oil and gas drilling on Georges Banks, the rich fishing grounds off the New England coast.

In canceling planned lease sales that he had put on hold more than a year ago, Bush followed recommendations formulated during the past year by an interagency task force led by Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan.

Lisa Speer, a scientist with the New York-based environmental group Natural Resources Defense Council, called Bush's decision a step "in the right direction," but complained that the president did not address pending lease sales off the Mid-Atlantic coast, North Carolina, New Jersey, Alaska's Bristol Bay and northern Florida.

Sierra Club Executive Director Michael Fischer also said Bush's decisions did not go far enough.

"These biologically rich marine waters deserve permanent protection from the threat of offshore drilling," Fischer said, adding that Bush "can provide a moratorium for only the rest of his term."

The American Petroleum Institute, the lobbying organization for the nation's major oil producing companies, said Bush's decision "will lead to decreased domestic (oil) production, more imports ... more tanker traffic, and the export of jobs and investment overseas."

API President Charles J. DiBona said delaying development "will have a dramatic effect in the next decade."

FIRE: Temperatures complicated fight

(From 1A)

Fire officials said conditions for fighting the fire were complicated by hot temperatures coupled with the heat of the blaze.

As a precaution, other residents of the building moved furniture and belongings outside shortly after the blaze started. "Some man came banging on the door telling us to get out," Laura Stanley said.

Ms. Stanley, who was in her apartment with her twin 5-month-old girls, said her apartment received some smoke damage.

No injuries were reported in connection with the fire.

TAX: Bush's decision becomes political target

while the White House said it marked the turning point in sluggish negotiations with Congress to write a plan to reduce the deficit.

"We're going to have to do some things that are probably not going to be universally popular in dealing with the budget deficit," said House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash.

Neither the White House nor congressional Democrats would speculate on what taxes might be raised or what spending programs might be trimmed.

"We're not willing to give it any definition," presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said of Bush's statement. "That's a matter for the negotiators."

Some Republicans balked at Bush's decision and it quickly became a political target.

Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., a member of the House GOP leadership, urged members of Congress to sign a letter declaring any increase in tax rates unacceptable. By the end of the day, 90 Republicans — more than half the 176 GOP members of the House — had put their names on the paper.,

Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., said the "charade is finally over."

"The other shoe raised in the 1988 presidential campaign has just dropped. George Bush has announced that he's raising taxes," Torricelli said.

Sen. John Breaux, D-La., said Bush had scotched an election-year theme for Republicans.

"It removes this so-called tax and spend issue from their arsenal of weapons," he said.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said the president had concluded that tax increases are necessary "and we share the president's view."

Foley added: "I think someone who is complaining about taxes being raised in the budget summit will have to complain against both parties and the president."

White House chief of staff John Sununu tried to calm the Republican revolt. House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia said Sununu had assured him that nothing had changed in Bush's position on taxes. "The White House claims the statement doesn't mean anything new," Gingrich insisted.

Deficit estimates have sharply increased since Bush unveiled his budget in January, and red ink may total more than $200 billion in the next fiscal year.

"We're not interested in who's first (to mention taxes) and who's last and who gets the blame for this and that," Fitzwater said. "Both sides want to move in a bipartisan way to resolve this issue, and this statement is designed to reflect that feeling."

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Bush's Democratic rival in the 1988 presidential election, said he told the truth about the need for higher taxes and "paid the price" by losing the presidency.

"Mr. Bush did not (tell the truth) and we're all now going to have to pay the price for that," Dukakis said in Boston.

Meanwhile, Democratic Party Chairman Ron Brown said Bush's statement was candid and sober and "gives no one comfort. It's no time for partisan gloating."

Budget talks are scheduled to resume Wednesday, and the White House expressed hope for a final agreement by the August congressional recess.

Bush issued his statement after a breakfast session with top congressional leaders and following a weekend of meetings between Democrats and White House budget negotiators.

"It is clear to me," Bush said, "that both the size of the deficit problem and the need for a package that can be enacted require all of the following."

He listed "tax revenue increases," cuts in spending for federal benefits as well as reductions in other domestic and defense programs, reform of the budget process and "growth incentives," a term often used to describe a cut in the capital gains tax rate.

UNITED: Chairing campaign year-round job

(From 1A)

Serving as campaign chairman is a year-round job, according to Spence. "We started working on this campaign two days after last year's campaign ended."

Pat Orseth, campaign cabinet member, said she volunteered because the United Way — which serves 17 agencies — "provides a wonderful community service. It is a necessary organization," she said, adding that Spence's enthusiasm made him "a delight to work with."

Despite the tremendous amounts of dollars needing to be raised, Spence said he expects to surpass the goal.

"We have an outstanding group of cabinet members. There is a lot of excitement about just going out there and getting the job done," Spence said. "There is a lot of competition between the divisions, and I feel confident that we will surpass the goal."

In setting the goal, each unit chairman worked with their respective division chairman for six weeks reviewing and analyzing last year's records, according to Ms. Cunningham. Their analyses included a study of corporate gifts, the number of employees of each company which contributes to United Way, and the city's economic situation.

The 14-week campaign will kick off July 31 with 21 companies participating. The general campaign will begin Sept. 26 and the final total raised will be announced Nov. 8.

Agencies benefiting from the campaign will include Midland Need to Read, Inc; American Red Cross, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Casa de Amigos, Community and Senior Services, Midland Rape Crisis Center and Palmer Drug Abuse Program.

Williams, Richards agree to consider meeting for debates

But Richards' campaign consultant Glenn Smith added, "perhaps we could expand on your idea and offer Texans a series of Town Hall meetings" to allow citizens to ask questions.

That brought an accusation from the Williams campaign that Ms. Richards was dragging her feet. Williams people said he would "not wait indefinitely for an answer" since Ms. Richards herself "has been beating down the doors for debates."

Smith replied, "Yes, we will debate — more than twice, all over Texas."

Williams, accused by Ms. Richards of ducking debates and joint appearances, proposed the face-offs for the candidates' hometowns, Midland for Williams, Waco for Ms. Richards, on Sept. 27 and Oct. 11, respectively.

A letter from Williams campaign manager Zack Dawes to Smith said "we are positive that statewide television coverage will result from both debates."

The letter suggested two one-hour "sit-down discussions ... assisted only by a mutually agreed upon moderator, and hosted by a mutually agreed upon sponsor."

"If we cannot reach agreement on a sponsor, we propose the two campaigns split the cost for both 'Conversations,'" the letter said.

Smith responded that the Richards campaign had "tried for months to initiate joint appearances and discussions, and we are ready to begin today to negotiate times and places for future joint events."

In other political developments Tuesday:

■ Railroad Commissioner John Sharp said he'll aggressively audit school districts to search for waste if he wins the race for state comptroller.

The state's new school finance reform law allows the comptroller to review the effectiveness and efficiency of school district budgets and operations, a provision Sharp said he worked on.

"I think there's fat in the system. I think there's fat in the bureaucracy. I think it's time to cut the bureaucracy and put our money where it ought to be — in the classroom," said Sharp, a Democrat.

■ The campaign manager for GOP state agriculture commissioner candidate Rick Perry said current and past employees of the department have been telling Perry that incumbent Jim Hightower and his top aides are under federal investigation.

"The problems at TDA are spreading like the fire ant problem," said manager Ken Luce. "In both cases, the commissioner has done little to squelch the spread."

Murderer has execution wish fulfilled

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Convicted killer James Smith, maintaining his innocence but refusing to plead for mercy, was put to death early Tuesday, fulfilling his long-held desire to be executed.

Smith, 37, had been on death row since 1984, sent there for the robbery and slaying of a Houston insurance office manager in 1983.

"I've already spoken the truth, but because the truth was spoken by the one accused, the truth is not respected," he said in a final statement.

"I am not the one who is the killer. I myself did not kill anyone. I go to my death without begging for my life. I will not humiliate myself. I will let no man break me."

He was pronounced dead at 12:31 a.m., 11 minutes after the lethal drugs began flowing into his arms.

Outside the prison about a half dozen death penalty opponents carrying an Amnesty International banner stood in a downpour.

Smith, a former tarot-card dealer in New Orleans, had come within six hours of dying in 1988 before death penalty opponents convinced his mother, Alexine Hamilton of Indianapolis, to seek legal help to save her son. The U.S. Supreme Court stayed that execution, but since has ruled inmates have the right to refuse appeals

On Monday just moments before he was placed on the death chamber gurney, the high court voted 5-4 against Smith on each of two appeals that were filed on his behalf and against his wishes.

In an interview last week, Smith repeated his desire to die and complained about his mother and other "do-gooders" robbing him of time in the next world.

He had insisted that life was temporary and that his spirit would move on.

"Death is like eating a prune in the morning," he said. "It's a natural function."

Smith was working as a Houston taxi driver at the time of his arrest for the shooting death of insurance executive Larry Rohus.

Witnesses said Rohus, 44 and the father of a 1-year-old son, complied with Smith's demands and filled a small trash can with cash, then was shot through the heart as he pleaded for his life.

"You prepare yourself as best you can, but it is a time of stirring up old memories," said Rohus' widow, Deborah, who has remarried and moved from Texas.

Mattox advice proves prophetic

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said he offered a piece of political advice for Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev in 1987 that proved prophetic.

While on a trip to the Soviet Union with other attorneys general, Mattox said the group was asked by officials in the Kremlin what advice they would give Gorbachev.

"When it was my turn, I said very simply that I would put Gorbachev on a Caterpillar tractor and have him drive right through the Berlin Wall to show the world that the great symbol of separation was coming down, and that there was true glasnost and perestroika behind the Iron Curtain," Mattox said.

"As you can imagine, our hosts expressed utter amazement," he said in a speech prepared for an insurance company executives meeting in Wausau, Wis.

'Yet, it was only a short time later that the Berlin Wall was indeed brought down — and not by the government, but by the people. We now see Soviet influence crumbling worldwide."

A THINNING OBSESSION

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

For 20 weeks, Liz Wheeler whittled away at more than 200 pounds on one of America's most controversial weight-loss programs — a very low calorie diet, better known as the liquid diet.

"I've battled weight all my life. I had been on one diet or another, but I wasn't successful in taking it off myself. ... I was in a drastic situation that needed a drastic solution."

Today, Wheeler is 81 pounds lighter — 66 through the program and another 15 pounds she didn't plan on through weight maintenance.

Very low calorie diets, or VLCDs, may not be popular with dietitians and nutritionists, but the fact is — with the right program — they work.

And that has caused controversy within the American Dietetic Association as well as the House Subcommittee on Regulation, Business Opportunities and Energy.

Wheeler is a patient of Dr. Scott Sanford, an internal medicine specialist who subscribes to Health Management Resources (HMR) — one of three major liquid diets now taking the country by storm. The other two are Jason Pharmaceuticals Inc.'s Medifast and Sandoz Nutrition's Optifast program, which is expected to be offered through Midland Memorial Hospital sometime next month.

On a VLCD, a patient gives up food for a five-packet-a-day flavored powder which provides from 400 calories to 800 calories per day.

During the late 1960s and early 1970s, liquid diets containing ground-up livestock led to the death of 58 Americans. All these diets eventually were banned by the Food and Drug Administration.

"We know now that the formulations today are very safe compared to what they were taking at those times," said Sanford, who heads Permian Health Resources. "Those formulas were grossly inferior, besides the fact that patients weren't monitored."

Sanford refuses to refer to HMR as a liquid diet because of the connotations that still exist from earlier days, but his program and others like it in the Permian Basin are VLCDs.

In Sanford's program, patients aren't just drinking liquid. According to him, a successful VLCD is one that incorporates behavior modification as well as close monitoring by a physician.

"We know exactly what they're getting. They're getting 50 grams of top-quality protein from egg white and milk, 79 grams of carbohydrates, one gram of fat and 150 percent of the Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA)."

U.S. RDAs are the labeling standards established by the FDA based on the recommended dietary allowances as set by the National Academy of Sciences. Those listings include protein, five vitamins and two minerals.

What Sanford and other reputable physicians must contend with are those who hand the medication out like candy.

Dr. Robert A. Vogel, a Midland internal specialist, said Medifast and similar products, which he uses for certain patients, are a big business if one wanted to take advantage of it.

But "a physician who uses the weight-reduction craze as a way of making money is pretty distasteful to me," he said. "I'm all in favor of people dieting, but I don't like the idea of people taking advantage of them."

Another professional who doesn't like it is Lisa Tyrer, who has little faith in such programs. As an outpatient dietitian at Midland Memorial Hospital, Tyrer said she worked with a West Coast VLCD program where 80 percent of the patients had regained their weight after six months.

"And that's pretty much across the board for those types of programs because the patients don't learn proper nutrition once they get off," said Tyrer.

"The bottom line is there's a small place for those programs, mainly for people with medical conditions. It's not for the person that has to lose five or 10 pounds."

However, physicians interviewed for this series said they wouldn't consider placing a moderately overweight patient on a VLCD.

In Sanford's case, he said most of his patients have severe weight problems or medical conditions: heart problems, diabetes or high blood pressure.

"Everyone we see has been to 3½ programs on an average. Many feel hopeless. They think this won't work either.

"I don't want to paint a perfect picture because not all of them will stay at their ideal weight. Some will put it back on."

Still, liquid diets are under fire. Last month, a House subcommittee chaired by Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., questioned just how each low calorie diet is administered and whether patients were receiving all the facts about certain health risks associated with such diets.

Those marketing VLCDs claim that precautions are being taken.

Certainly that's the case at Midland Women's Clinic, according to Marian Humphries, a licensed vocational nurse, who works with a modified version of the Medifast program.

"We won't just put someone on this who comes in off the street because we realize there could be complications."

In fact, reputable programs will require a slew of tests, including weekly monitoring by a physician, lab tests for blood sugar, potassium, liver functions, as well as an electrocardiogram.

Program administrators say what's even more important to a successful VLCD is re-educating patients how to eat once they're ready to make the move to normal food.

In Ms. Wheeler's case, it was a scary ordeal.

"I wasn't really anxious to start eating again. One of the keys for me when I got off this was learning how to plan my daily menus. ... You just don't realize until you've been on this just how much time and energy food takes up in your life."

Glyndon Kimbrough, education coordinator with Wellness Professionals Inc. in Midland, uses a supplement called Ultrafast. She is also one that stresses food management.

'We know exactly what they're getting. They're getting 50 grams of top-quality protein from egg white and milk, 79 grams of carbohydrates, one gram of fat and 150 percent of the Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA)."

— Dr. Scott Sanford, internal medicine specialist with patients on the Health Management Resources liquid diet

'The bottom line is there's a small place for those programs, mainly for people with medical conditions. It's not for the person that has to lose five or 10 pounds."

— Lisa Tyrer, MMH outpatient dietitian

'I wasn't really anxious to start eating again. One of the keys for me when I got off this was learning how to plan my daily menus. ... You just don't realize until you've been on this just how much time and energy food takes up in your life."

— Liz Wheeler, who lost more than 60 pounds on a liquid diet

'You have to combine good nutrition information with the behavioral component. If you don't learn appropriate ways to self-nurture, you're going to gain it all back."

— Glyndon Kimbrough, education coordinator, Wellness Professionals Inc.

"You're looking at ultimately changing their lifestyle, but you have to give them a method to do that," she said.

Kimbrough teaches through visualization — to put food knowledge in a simple form so that her patients will understand just what they're doing when shopping as well as eating.

She'll also conduct a supermarket tour and teach people how to read food labels.

"You have to combine good nutrition information with the behavioral component. If you don't learn appropriate ways to self-nurture, you're going to gain it all back."

According to the American Medical Association's Council on Scientific Affairs, VLCDs do, indeed, provide all the essential nutrients and the high quality proteins that their predecessors in the 1970s lacked.

However, the AMA, like others, is alarmed that VLCDs are being consumed by persons who are not "severely overweight" or "who do not receive appropriate medical supervision."

Dr. Dipak Patel, a Midland internal specialist, is another who supports the use of liquid diets. He said they are easy to follow and to use.

Patel said he understands the concerns of physicians and others who oppose the liquid diets' use, but added that sometimes they are necessary.

"The problem with dieting is it's very slow, very exhaustive and very time-consuming for the person following it."

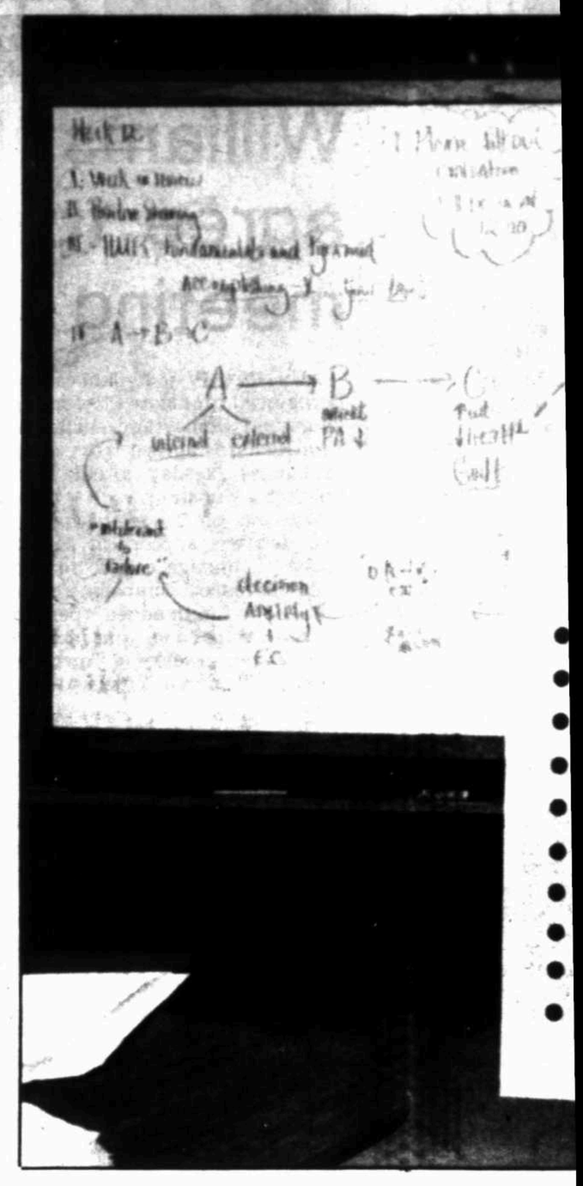

In the case where health is at stake, Patel said VLCDs are beneficial in treating such symptoms as high cholesterol, hypertension, and diabetes.

Right or wrong, VLCDs are not expected to go the way of the silver dollar. In fact, business is booming, according to industry analysts.

"Research has shown that low-calorie diets work," said Sanford.

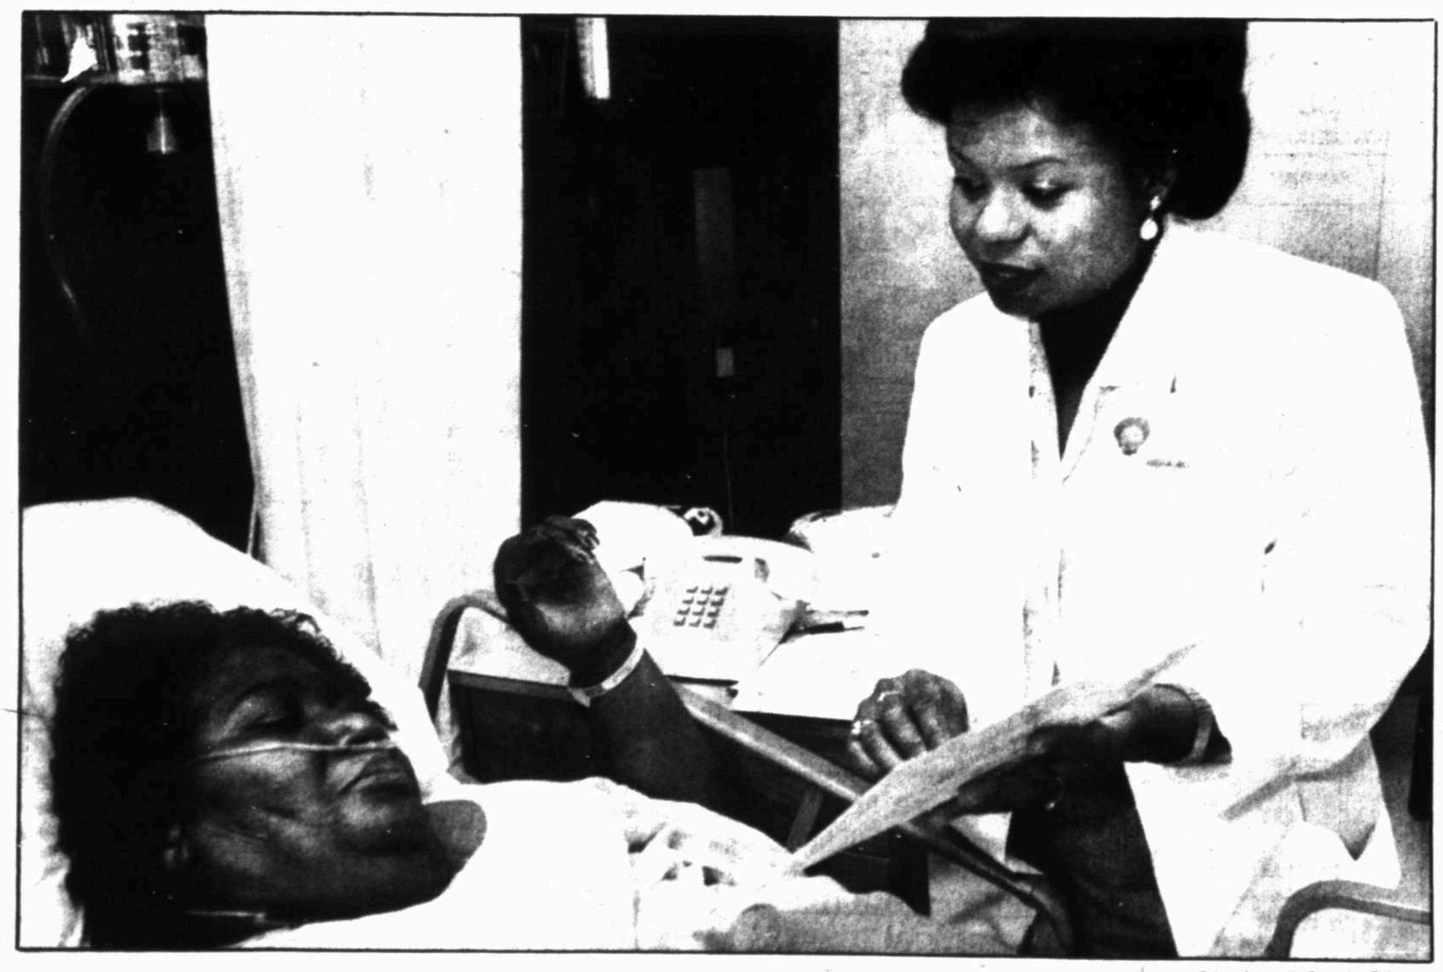

"We can get 50 percent of our patients to a medically safe weight within 20 percent of their ideal body weight.

"We feel pretty good about that. Even if they only lose half the weight," that they need to lose, "it's still good because the first 50 percent (of weight) is the health risk."

Aisha Ali, a dietitian at Midland Memorial Hospital, said the problem with fad diets is that most people don't make long-term changes in their lifestyles, which is why many such programs fail. Ali works with patient Mozelle Johnson.

(From 1A)

Every day consumers are bombarded by diet books written by non-professionals as well as weight-loss products and programs that guarantee rapid and permanent loss.

Two of the most popular diets are Thompson Medical Co.'s Ultra Slim Fast (give them a week and they'll take off the pounds) and Dexatrim, an appetite suppressant that contains what amounts to a decongestant used in cold medicine products.

While health professionals concede popular weight control aides can work if used correctly, they question their overall effectiveness in keeping the pounds off permanently.

"What you're talking about is an artificial factor here. With these types of products, the longer you take them, the more you need to get the same effect," observed Dr. Joseph Rhode, a Midland family physician.

"It's not losing the weight, it's keeping it off that counts. A lot of people don't understand that," he said.

"That's why people gain it right back after they take the weight off."

Using Dexatrim and other capsule appetite suppressants to diet can cause health problems, according to Suzanne Bush, chief clinical dietitian at Medical Center Hospital (MCH) in Odessa.

Diet Questions

Before going on a fad diet, it's a good idea to consider these questions:

- Could you follow the diet for more than a few weeks?
- Does it fit into your lifestyle?
- Is it reasonable?
- Is it extremely low in calories?
- Are the foods required in the diet easy to find and inexpensive?

Dr. Terry Tubb displays some of the surgical equipment used during liposuction — a surgical fat-removal procedure that is gaining popularity among women as well as men.

Surgeon's skill also a part of slimming trade

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

Next to exercise and diet, surgical procedures from gastroplasty (or stomach stapling) to the gastrointestinal bubble have been used through the years as a means of assisting the morbidly obese in losing one thing — weight.

For them, according to the American Society for Bariatric Surgery, it's a matter of life and death.

That's not the case for about 250,000 Americans, who each year pay anywhere from $750 to $5,000 to rid their bodies of unwanted fat using a procedure invented by the Swiss and perfected by the French.

Called liposuction, this elective surgery is fast becoming one of the most common ways of trimmming out unwanted saddlebags and love handles since its U.S. debut nine years ago.

"It works best on people who are close to their normal weight," said Dr. Terry D. Tubb, a Midland cosmetic and reconstructive surgeon. "Actually, the best candidates are women in their 30s who are 15 pounds overweight and have some fat deposits on their hips."

Although the procedure is generally considered safe, it did become the focus of a six-month probe conducted by the House Subcommittee on Regulation, Business Opportunities and Energy.

The committee questioned the training of some doctors, whose disciplines were primarily in other fields.

One particular 1986 case involved a Pasadena, Texas, gynecologist, who performed liposuction that led to the death of one woman and severely injured another.

Shortly afterward, the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons (ASPRS) issued a report stating the technique was being overused by "inadequately trained surgeons."

Tubb said the Houston area case was an unusual one, in that the doctor used unsterile techniques.

"Of the last 3,000 cases in America, there were no deaths and no major complications, but the next case could be the one. ... The fact is, it's probably as safe as any elective surgery," he said.

ASPRS states most post-operative complications, such as infection or localized collection of blood, are uncommon and can be treated.

During a lipectomy, a surgical incision about one-half inch in length is made into a part of the patient's body where the fat will be removed.

The doctor then inserts a blunt-ended tube — a cannula — into the opening and vacuums out pockets of fat cells with a high-powered suction machine. The incisions are closed with a few sutures, leaving small, often concealed scars.

Depending on the extent of the surgery, the entire procedure can last from 45 minutes to two hours or longer.

After surgery, the patient may have some numbness or discomfort for varying periods of time. The surgery also may produce swelling and skin discoloration, both of which will subside in two to three months.

In some cases, permanent sagging of the skin may occur where a great deal of fat has been removed.

Tubb said he won't do anything for a person who is 30 to 40 pounds overweight.

"The closer to normal weight you are, the better the results. ... A lot of these gals, especially those over 35, really aren't concerned about how they look in a bathing suit, as how they look in snug slacks or Levis."

While liposuction is hardly a replacement for dieting, it does work well in areas that don't respond to exercise and other weight reduction methods.

"It's just not going to come back to any extent because you're removing fat cells. ... They just don't multiply after adolescence."

Liposuction "works best on people who are close to their normal weight. Actually, the best candidates are women in their 30s who are 15 pounds overweight and have some fat deposits on their hips."

"It's not something you want to be taking for the rest of your life, and you're not making a healthy change in the long run," said Bush, adding that only 3 to 5 percent of dieters are able to keep the weight off after five years.

Although appetite suppressants come in a variety of forms, all work the same way — to reduce the desire to eat.

Dexatrim and most others work off phenylpropanolamine, or PPA, which acts on the appetite center in the brain. But it also can cause reactions such as dizziness, rapid pulse and sleeplessness.

Such products also contribute to the so-called "yo-yo" syndrome, according to Dr. Eleanor Young, a professor at the Texas Health Science Center's School of Medicine in San Antonio.

"Every time you go on a diet, it becomes harder each time to lose the weight you've regained," said Young. "There are also a lot of people that have no business going on these diets for health reasons."

As for Slim Fast, which now controls about 80 percent of the over-the-counter liquid market, physicians and dietitians have different philosophies regarding its use.

A number of physicians contacted said they saw nothing wrong with the Slim Fast program in general for people needing to lose a few pounds, although they wouldn't recommend it for extended periods.

On the other hand, dietitians don't believe Slim Fast, or any over-the-counter product, has a place in the American diet.

"If anyone is going on anything less than 1,000 calories per day, I'd certainly recommend a multiple vitamin of some sort," warned MMH's Aisha.

As for books, such as the "The Diet Bible," "The Express Lane Diet," "The Nutrient Free Diet," and "The Beverly Hills Diet," dietitians advise consumers to steer clear of authors who have no obvious nutritional background.

"The problem with most of these books is they hit people on an emotional level," said Jerrine Barney, a clinical dietitian with MCH in Odessa, while other books like "The Diet Bible" strike people on a religious level.

Diversity marking European nations

The results of the elections in Czechoslovakia and Bulgaria provide further evidence that the countries of Eastern Europe, freed of outside dominance for the first time in more than four decades, are evolving in their own separate ways.

In Czechoslovakia, whose historic ties are to the West and which had a democratic system between the two World Wars, power went to a democratic coalition — Civil Forum and its Slovakian counterpart, Public Against Violence — led by intellectuals with almost no political experience.

In Bulgaria, whose history grows out of the Byzantine tradition, with centuries of domination by Turks and Russians, the Communists — who now call themselves Socialists — won with nearly half the vote in what Western observers saw as a fair multiparty election.

Nearly 97 percent of eligible voters turned out in Czechoslovakia, this time not because they were forced to by a Stalinist regime but out of an overpowering desire to endorse the "velvet revolution" of last autumn and its leaders' determination to create a free and civilized political culture and a market-based economy. The Communist Party won only 14 percent of the vote, though the survival of thousands of midlevel party "apparatchiks" in the government may complicate an already awesome task of reforming one of the most collectivized systems in Eastern Europe.

Bulgaria, by contrast, had neither any democratic experience nor even much of a dissident faction until very recently. This political imbalance, plus the innate caution of rural voters and a fear among many Bulgarians of the potentially jarring impact of the kind of rapid reforms promised by the Union of Democratic Forces, helped the Communists win an election in which more than 80 percent voted. Yet those who now lead the party appear to be reformers; moreover, the UDF did well, obtaining and estimated 36 percent of the vote. However cautiously, Bulgarians are testing the unfamiliar waters of freedom.

Czechoslovakia's democratic impulses, the country's inspired leadership, its strong industrial infrastructure, modest foreign debt and well-educated work force put it in a position to be a leader in Central Europe, both in playing a mediating role in resolving East-West security issues and in making what's bound to be an extremely difficult transition to a more modern, market-oriented system. The question now is whether President Vaclav Havel and his colleagues can match their indisputable courage and vision with the pragmatic qualities needed to overcome decades of Communist mismanagement. Clearly their constituents have confidence that they can, and others in Eastern Europe are hoping that they are right.

LETTERS

Let's back entertaining, influential conservative

In response to Vera Wecker's letter of June 17, in which she described the loss of two precious hours of "nice listening music" to a "very verbose" talk-show host, I wish to issue the following appeals to area conservatives:

(a) listen to the "Rush Limbaugh Show" each weekday from 3 to 5 pm on KMND radio, AM 1510 and Dimension Cable channel 2;

(b) register your support for the show by calling KMND at 563-5651.

Concerning listener response to the show, a reliable source informs me that KMND has received mostly negative feedback, doubtless from disgruntled supporters of Ann "we don't lie" Richards. To those who appreciate conservatively oriented commentary and humor (and to those who feel that a meager twenty-two hours of "memory music" per day is sufficient to jog anyone's memory), I say act now, before the liberals apply their own brand of censorship to the most influential and entertaining conservative on the air.

Don't neglect child training

It is popular today to jump on the bandwagon of child abuse prevention, and rightly so. However, equally as repugnant as child abuse is the exact opposite — letting children do as they please all the time, as I observe so many parents are doing these days.

The Bible enjoins parents to "train up a child in the way he should go." Children both need and want discipline and guidance. They will never learn what behaviors are expected of them if they are not taught these behaviors.

A recent study found that children who grow up with a high level of control and a high level of support are more confident and better achievers than those raised with a high level of support and a low level of control.

If parents do their job correctly, spending more time with their children and being fair but firm in their discipline of their children, there might be less alcohol and drug abuse among teenagers, and our nation's children might become more responsible citizens and better leaders.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 27, the 178th day of 1990. There are 187 days left in the year.

On this date:

In 1942, the FBI announced the capture of eight Nazi saboteurs who had been put ashore from a submarine on New York's Long Island.

Vets try to save captain's reputation

WASHINGTON — When some 80 aging Navy vets meet in Indianapolis on Aug. 10, the Navy's hatchet job on the USS Iowa investigation will hover over them like a dark shadow. These men from another generation know what it is like to be vilified by Navy investigators.

Anderson

The Navy has admitted that it probably goofed in assuming that a love-sick sailor blew up himself and 46 shipmates by exploding the Iowa gun turret on April, 19, 1989. Yet for 45 years, the Navy has refused to be as candid with the men of the USS Indianapolis.

In 1945, the Indianapolis, at sea after unloading the main parts of the Hiroshima atomic bomb on a Pacific island, was torpedoed by a Japanese submarine. In all, 880 men died, making it the Navy's worst ocean disaster.

The survivors feel their skipper, Capt. Charles McVay III, was used as a scapegoat for the tragedy, just as the Navy sought to use the Iowa's hapless gunner's mate, Clayton Hartwig. More than 700 Navy ships were sunk in World War II alone, but McVay was the only captain ever court-martialed for the loss of his ship in battle.

The Indianpolis survivors and McVay's family are working anew to clear McVay, bolstered by a scathing investigative book to be published next month.

Journalist Dan Kurzman, author of "Fatal Voyage," told us that McVay was railroaded by the Navy to quiet the political clamor over the deaths. Kurzman's list of outrages in the McVay case reads like a banana republic show trial, and it is the last thing the Navy needs to read in the context of the USS Iowa debacle:

— A document buried in an obscure file admits that the charge on which McVay was convicted probably had nothing to do with the sinking of the ship. Indeed, one Navy memo characterizes the charge as "super-technical."

— The Navy had information about Japanese sub sightings in the area that may have alerted McVay to be more cautious, but no one alerted told the Indianapolis. The sub sightings were kept under wraps for "security" reasons.

— The submarine data was suppressed by an officer who worked for Vice Adm. George Murray, and incredibly, Murray was allowed to sit on the board that recommended McVay be tried. Murray should have been on the witness stand, not in the judgment seat.

— Adm. Chester Nimitz, chief of the Pacific fleet, decided not to court-martial McVay. But he was overruled by Navy Operations Chief Fleet Adm. Ernest King, who rushed McVay to trial. King should have bowed out of the decision because, when King was a young officer, McVay's father had reprimanded him.

— Information that would have cleared McVay was found, but it was secretly edited out of public documents. To this day, the Navy has refused to give Kurzman information that might clear McVay.

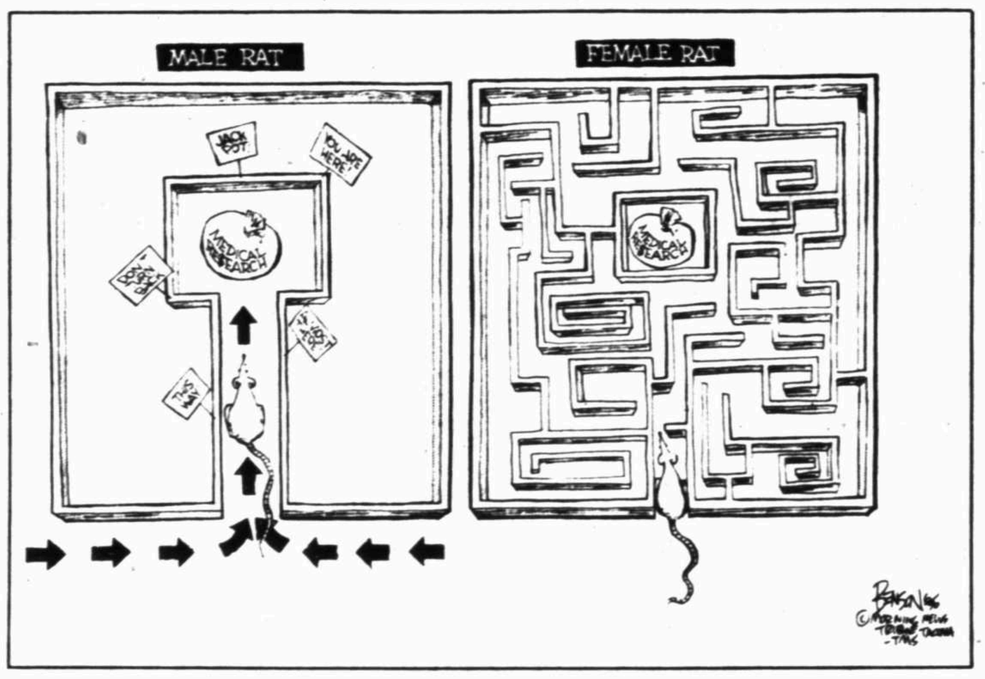

It makes no difference to McVay anymore. He shot himself through the head with his old Navy pistol on the front lawn of his house in Litchfield, Conn., in 1968. Fallen from his lifeless fingers into the snow was a tiny toy soldier he had carried as a good-luck charm.

But justice still matters to the Indianapolis survivors. They had hoped that before their reunion in August, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., would appeal the case to the White House. Lugar had agreed to look into it for them. But Lugar's office told us that a great deal of study needs to be made of the case. A spokesman pointed out that the records are old and the entire matter highly complicated.

MINI-EDITORIAL — It is your civic duty to vote in the November congressional election, but the outcome is already rigged. Congress itself rigs the election to make it almost impossible for newcomers to win. The incumbants vote themselves enough money for oversized staffs and limitless mailing privileges. They court voters at public expense. They corner the campaign money from special interest groups. They steer government contracts to their districts to stroke the business people back home. Any newcomer who runs in spite of those odds deserves a medal for courage. It will be some consolation when they lose as they inevitably will.

Let's fire off new pro-gun commercials

When I saw the news of the gunman who killed a half-dozen people in Florida with a semiautomatic rifle, I immediately thought of my friend Charlton Heston and his NRA commercials.

Buchwald

To hear Charlton tell it, guns are as safe as Hershey's almond bars. But when you have a mass killing like the one in Jacksonville, there are always going to be a few skeptical souls who say, "Charlton is gonzo."

It is at times like this that we have to make the pro-gun-lobby TV commercials stronger, not weaker.

That is what I've been doing for the last few weeks — writing commercials to keep the naysayers from huffing and puffing on the pro-gun lobby's doors.

The first would show a man holding a Colt semiautomatic rifle in his hand. "Hi, I just lost my job at Mom's Diner on Route 66. As you can imagine I don't feel too good about this, so I bought myself a semi. I'm not saying if I'm going to use it or not, but the nice thing about this state is that I didn't have to wait to buy it, in case I get the urge. The man in the store handed it over as if it was a loaf of French bread. That's why I belong to the National Trigger Association. We have 10 million members, give or take five or ten thousand who get shot accidentally every year."

My second commercial would feature a woman firing a .357 Magnum from her hip. She'd turn to the camera and say, "The National Trigger Association prides itself on teaching women how to shoot. I'm a widow and I don't know what I'd do if I didn't have this gun under my pillow. How did I become a widow? I shot my husband George when he tried to sneak up the stairs after a terrific beer party down at the American Legion hall. I felt terrible about what I did, but everyone tells me not to worry — at least I proved I was a good shot."

The third commercial would have an Army general in full uniform. "I've been around guns all my life," he'd say. "And all the stories you hear about them killing people are malarkey. What kills people are the bullets. This country needs every gun it can get its hands on. We have our choice of fighting the anti-handgun people on the sands of California or on the shores of Tennessee. Write to your congressman today and tell him that if he is even thinking of passing anti-gun legislation, he'll get his jockey shorts filled with lead."

The last commercial I wrote was for Charlton Heston, although I am not sure he'll do it. It would show Charlton as Moses from his movie, "The Ten Commandments." He would be saying:

"At the time God gave me the Ten Commandments He specifically did not tell me 'Thou shall not own a handgun.' When I asked Him about this, He replied, 'What's a handgun?' I told Him that it was just a sporting weapon my people use for target practice in the Sinai desert.

"God asked, 'Doesn't it kill anybody?'

"No, God. Guns don't kill people — You kill people."

Defense of Germany stirs new questions

LONDON — Facing the prospect of the end of the division of Germany within six months, Westerners with historical recall face this dilemma: Whom should we distrust more — the Russians or the Germans?

Safire

Nobody puts it so outrageously, of course.

All agree that the brave new world aborning requires some basis of trust; a stable peace with freedom is not a zero-sum game.

But underneath their bonhomie, European and American diplomats know a gut judgment cannot be avoided: is the greater danger to peace in the next generation likelier to come from a domineering Germany or a resurgent Russia?

Put the same question in more acceptable terms: Should we be sensitive to Moscow's concerns about post-occupation German militarism — or should we treat those suspicions as excuses for Gorbachev foot-dragging on conventional arms reduction?

Taking two generations of good West German behavior into account, my inclination is to mistrust the dangerously convulsing Soviet Union more; to put faith in the ability of German free enterprise to enhance political freedom, and to say: Welcome to NATO, East Germans; Russkies go home.

And yet, and yet — this fellow Genscher gives me pause. Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the Ost-politician who jumped the previous ship to help put Chancellor Helmut Kohl in power, is too crafty by half.

Three months ago, he quietly set up a working group within his ministry to study troop deployments and air cover within a united Germany.

The goal: to set up a strong "national means" of defense throughout Germany, including the East.

West Germany had already offered the Soviets a deal: In return for allowing the unified Germany membership in NATO, Bonn would not station "NATO troops" in what had been East Germany during a five-year transition period of Soviet withdrawal; nor would the U.S. nuclear umbrella extend east of the Elbe River.

But not all West German military forces are "NATO troops."

I'm informed that Genscher directed his startled diplomatic aides to see how non-NATO Bundeswehr troops, military police and border guards could form the cadre of a sovereign national defense force.

Here's the tricky part: When Defense Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg made a similar proposal at the end of last year, Genscher slapped him down publicly, assuring the Soviets this was out of the question.

When members of his Foreign Ministry staff wondered about two-facedness, Genscher shrugged and said the Defense Minister had made a tactical error in bruiting it about, but that a sovereign state had the right to defend its territory without interference.

Genscher added that neutralization of East Germany was not in the cards.

If you believe what I was told, as I do, here would be the beginnings of a West German strategy for taking military control of East Germany with non-NATO Bundeswehr troops — being planned not a month after the foreign and defense ministers assured the world that no West German troops of any sort would be introduced into East Germany.

No wonder the Soviets are antsy about pulling their occupation troops out of East Germany; the KGB, despite defection of its German assets, could not be unaware of the Genscher working group's workings.

The German leaders are probably convinced that Gorbachev can be bought off with a $20 billion ransom, and that a German force east of the Elbe will worry him less than angry devolutionaries within the Soviet empire.

If I were German, I'd want my whole country defended by Germans.

If I also wanted to earn the trust of a mistrustful world, I would want my Foreign Ministry to avoid even the appearance of duplicity.

Iranian politics bogs down quake relief

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran's fractious leaders turned a relief operation for victims of a catastrophic earthquake into a political dispute Tuesday, with Parliament insisting the West cannot buy forgiveness with humanitarian aid.

In northwestern provinces, weary rescuers dug through the remnants of 342 cities, towns and villages demolished in Thursday's temblor. Another quake measuring 4.9 on the Richter scale shook southeastern Iran Tuesday but caused no casualties or damage, Tehran University's Geophysics Center reported.

Officials have said 50,000 people were killed, 200,000 were injured and 500,000 others lost their homes Thursday, when a quake measuring 7.3 to 7.7 on the Richter scale hit Iran. Many of the reported 360 aftershocks have hampered rescue operations.

Interior Minister Abdullah Nouri, who supervised relief operations, told a news conference that an accurate casualty count was not yet possible. He said 99 percent of the bodies have been recovered in round-the-clock operations by local rescuers, backed by foreign relief teams and sniffer dogs.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency said 171 planeloads of relief supplies had arrived by Tuesday from more than 26 countries, including some of Iran's bitterest foes.

Nouri, a middle-ranking cleric in President Hashemi Rafsanjani's political camp, thanked all those who sent relief teams and aid and said: "If new relief teams are willing to come to Iran on humanitarian grounds, they are welcome."

But in Parliament, hard-line deputies said the aid will not buy closer relations with the West or nullify positions taken by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Those stands include the February 1989 death threat to British author Salman Rushdie for offending some Moslems in his novel, "The Satanic Verses."

One deputy, Ayatollah Saddegh Khalkhali, said quake aid from the United States, Iraq and Saudi Arabia was appreciated but Iran "could not forget our martyrs."

West Germany offers plan to unify by year's end

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany unveiled proposals Tuesday to unify the two Germanys politically by mid-December and finally end the countries' 40-year split along Cold War lines.

The proposals, in the form of a "Discussion Paper" released by the West German Interior Ministry, were made public just five days before the two countries merge their economies and social institutions.

Under proposed wording for a treaty on political unification, East Germany would officially join West Germany the day after elections for a joint German parliament. West and East German politicians have proposed Dec. 9 or Dec. 16 as possible dates for the balloting.

West German Interior Minister Wolfgang Schaeuble said he expected the East German Cabinet to decide Wednesday to begin negotiations on the political treaty. He added that the pact should be ready for debate in both parliaments by early September.

The parliaments of both countries last week ratified a treaty outlining the monetary, economic and social union that is to take effect Sunday. On that day, the West German mark officially replaces the nearly worthless East German mark and 40 years of rigid, socialist economic policy give way to free-market rules.

The victors and vanquished from World War II are still working on the international ramifications of German unity, namely the military posture of a united Germany and the disposition of the 380,000 Soviet troops on East German soil.

West Germany is a member of the Western NATO alliance, and the Allies have insisted a united Germany remain there. The Soviets have rejected that idea. East Germany has been the most strategically important member of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact, as the first line of defense against the West.

The discussion paper notes that the so-called "two-plus-four" talks among the World War II victors and the Germanys are expected to be concluded by December and that the political treaty is conditional on the results of those talks.

Other proposed articles of the political treaty declare that the five pre-war states that now comprise East Germany as well as the city of Berlin would be individual states under a united Germany.

Proposed wording for a third article of the treaty says, "Germans in both parts of Germany will form a united nation of people."

Bonn wants to limit the political treaty to only those laws and regulations that differ between East and West Germany and that must be changed before political unification can be achieved.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Peace Corps leaves rural Philippine areas

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Peace Corps staffers have been pulled out of rural areas and brought to the capital following intelligence reports that Communist rebels planned to kill volunteers, officials announced Tuesday.

The move was the latest in a series of measures taken in the wake of threats against Americans by the Communist New People's Army. It has been fighting 21 years to establish a Marxist government in the Philippines.

Last week, the Philippine military said rebels in Manila plan to target Americans and other foreigners for assassination and kidnapping over the next six months.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager said Ambassador Nicholas Platt ordered the recall of Peace Corps staffers last weekend but delayed the public announcement for security reasons.

He said no decision had been made on when the 261 volunteers would be allowed to return to their posts, mostly in remote, rural areas where security is poor.

IRA admits bombing club

LONDON (AP) — The IRA claimed responsibility Tuesday for a bombing at fashionable club that is a bastion of the Conservative Party, and it said no government member will be safe until Britain pulls out of Northern Ireland.

The bomb at the Carlton Club, which injured nine people, was the first directed at the party since the IRA bombed the Grand Hotel in Brighton during the 1984 Conservative conference. That attack killed five people and narrowly missed Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Scotland Yard said it was examining videotapes taken by a security camera outside the club for clues to the bombers.

Mrs. Thatcher toured the bombed-out building and visited two of those injured in Monday night's attack.

"It was dreadful, inhuman, depraved" she said. "They are trying to undermine democracy. In Northern Ireland everyone has a vote, and they voted to stay with the United Kingdom."

Germans reassure Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — The visiting presidents of the East and West German parliaments assured Israel Tuesday that concerns here and elsewhere about German unification are unfounded.

Rita Suessmuth of West Germany and Sabine Bergmann-Pohl of East Germany also pledged that a united Germany would be a strong supporter of the Jewish state.

The two presidents spoke on the second day of a three-day visit to Israel. The trip has been seen as an effort to allay concerns about German unification.

"We take the concerns seriously, but they are unfounded," Ms. Bergmann-Pohl said in a speech before Israel's Council on Foreign Relations, a private group that regularly discusses foreign affairs.

Zambia imposes curfew

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — The government put the capital under curfew Tuesday in an effort to stop looting and anti-government rioting that doctors said had killed 15 people and injured 149.

President Kenneth Kaunda cut short a 10-day vacation at his private lodge at Mfuwe, 375 miles east of Lusaka, and met most of the day with Defense and Security Minister Alex Shapi and political colleagues.

The rioting began Monday one week after the government more than doubled the price of corn meal, Zambia's staple food.

Lithuanian asks council to freeze independence

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Lithuania's prime minister told parliament Tuesday that breaking away from the Soviet Union would be impossible without a compromise with the Kremlin, and asked the Lithuanian Supreme Council to freeze its declaration of independence.

Kazimiere Prunskiene said Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev agreed in a telephone call earlier in the day that in return for a temporary suspension of its March 11 independence declaration, he would end the nine-week-old economic embargo against the breakaway Baltic republic.

Gorbachev also said he would begin negotiations that "will discuss a different status for Lithuania, including as an independent state," the prime minister said.

There was no confirmation from Soviet officials of Mrs. Prunskiene's claim that Gorbachev had softened his position on independence. The only statement from Moscow about Lithuania was more toughly worded.

Mrs. Prunskiene argued that Lithuania will not escape the economic blockade imposed in April by the Kremlin, take control of its borders, or be free of Soviet Army soldiers without compromising.

"We need negotiations," she said. "We don't have a magic wand to solve these problems."

Mrs. Prunskiene also hinted the future of her government — including her own possible resignation — may depend on how the Supreme Council parliament reacts to the proposed compromise.

"Maybe a new government could find some such solution," she said.

Lithuania, a republic of 3.8 million people, and its parliament are divided over whether to accept a compromise with Moscow over the declaration of independence.

Gorbachev met with Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis in Moscow Tuesday morning, then telephoned Mrs. Prunskiene two hours later in the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius to offer what the prime minister described to parliament as a softening of his position.

Mrs. Prunskiene said she was optimistic a compromise would lead to Lithuanian independence in part because Gorbachev in the telephone conversation did not repeat his demand that the republic "return to March 10" — once again act as a Soviet republic rather than an independent state.

Council approves contract with CAF

■ City officials say negotiations of Midland's contract with CAF were "painless thing."

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

By the time a proposed Confederate Air Force contract with the city of Midland expires, the organization's vintage World War II aircrafts will be antiques.

And the CAF is expected to make that a concrete reality in three days.

Midland City Council on Tuesday unanimously approved a contract to keep CAF planes here for 50 years. CAF officials are expected to sign the contract Saturday, with a ceremony celebrating the event scheduled for sometime next week.

"That's just a formality," Joe Mabee, CAF chief of staff and a local rancher/oilman, said of his organization's signing. "It's a big agreement. The negotiations have been very smooth on both sides."

Under the agreement, the CAF will pay only $1 a year to rent the former Windecker aircraft manufacturing facility from the city but must also make $2 million in renovations within the next two years.

Mabee said remodeling and constructing at the Windecker site at Midland International Airport should begin immediately after the agreement is finalized.

In addition, the CAF plans to build two 50,000-square-foot hangars to store the airplanes, he said.

"We have $4 million to spend and we're still raising money," Mabee said, adding that more than half the money has come from sources outside the CAF.

Bids on the construction project likely will be awarded to local companies, Mabee said. The museum is scheduled to open Dec. 7, 1991, on the 50th anniversary of the Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor, he said.

Mayor Carroll Thomas applauded the negotiation process to hammer out the contract with the CAF. "It's been a relatively painless thing," he said.

Kevin Laughlin, assistant city attorney, said the biggest hitch during the negotiations phase was the CAF's demand of having exclusive rights to air shows at the airport.

"We felt we couldn't legally do that," Laughlin said. "The city needed to keep control over the granting of the air shows."

The CAF accepted the city's offer of giving the organization first refusal on days when city officials are looking at scheduling an out-

Directors vote to shut down Bid Center

■ Permian Basin Bid Center's directors could not justify facility's existence.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

The Permian Basin Bid Center will cease operations at the end of the month, according to Chuck Cowell, president of the center.

Cowell said directors voted Tuesday to cease operations of the Bid Center, after the 10-member board had exhausted all avenues for finding additional support and funding. He said the center would begin immediately to liquidate assets which include computer equipment and a database applicable to obtaining federal bids.

"We tried hard, but we simply were unable to justify our existence," said Cowell. "We were unable to produce the kinds of numbers that would have resulted in support." He noted that both Midland and Odessa chambers were supportive of the center, as were Midland and Odessa colleges.

Over five years, he estimated the Bid Center generated about $6 million in contracts for the Permian Basin, ranging from machining contracts to landscaping services. The operating budget for the center office near Midland International Airport was approximately $100,000 a year.

Cowell said the general economy and a lack of interest from the local business community had resulted in the assistance organization not being able to show benefit for dollars spent. He noted that if no one used the center it was a pretty good indication that it may not be needed.

Cowell attributed a reluctance to do business with the federal government for the lack of interest: "It took a lot of paperwork, and it was time consuming, especially the first time. And, it usually took a couple of applications before getting a bid."

He said the opening of a bid center by the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce had nothing to do with

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Midland Animal Control Center employees and the animals they look after may finally have a new home away from toxic gases and biting parasites.

Councilmen Tuesday applauded administrator's selection of a city-owned rural spot southeast of downtown and away from residential neighborhoods.

George Logan, parks and recreation director, said the shelter will be located on Cloverdale Road about a mile east of Fairgrounds Road.

The site was selected because it was away from homes and already has sufficient water and sewer lines nearby.

"We're taking advantage of existing facilities," Logan told councilmen. "Our biggest key was that it won't cost us any money to get the land."

Despite being away from residential areas, the shelter should be easy to find, he said.

"It's not going to be in anybody's back yard," Logan said. "There's also not any planned development out there."

Councilman Jose Cuevas said it appears to be an appropriate place.

"This is the best way to appease everybody," Cuevas said. "If neighborhoods start encroaching that area, they already know it's (shelter) there."

Logan said the new center, which will cost about $375,000, should be completed by April.

Funding for shelter construction will partially come from $1.9 million in certificates of obligation issued earlier this year.

In addition, Midland veterinarians since last October have been collecting an extra $1 in license fees to help raise funds to build the new center. The fee was expected to raise about $20,000 a year.

Run-down conditions have plagued the current center for years. The shelter has seen high employee turnover, worker sickness and untimely animal deaths because of unsanitary conditions.

The 30-year-old center was built over a landfill, and methane and carbon monoxide gases seep up into the building and set off alarms, sending employees running outside for safety.

Though the building is steam-cleaned daily, some workers have developed flu-like symptoms because of the diseased conditions. In addition, animals become ill and sometimes die before they can be destroyed.

Meanwhile, parasites crawl through cracks in the building, which serves as a breeding ground for infectious bacteria.

Despite the shelter's unhealthy conditions, Texas Department of Health inspectors in early 1989 said the center complied with minimum standards. However, the inspectors cited numerous instances where the building needed repairs.

City administrators had started planning to build a new shelter in Hogan Park in northeast Midland, but city councilmen nixed the idea last December because the building would have sat on a dry lake bed.

City officials in January said they had hopes of opening a new center by Oct. 1, but the date was pushed back.

At least one person is not excited about the proposed location for the shelter.

Midge Erskine, a local environmentalist, expressed concern that the center was too far from populated areas and too near city sewer plants, which are located nearby.

"For the general public it's going to be an inconvenient place," Ms. Erskine said. "And it's a stinky place besides."

Local sales tax rebate checks up

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

The city of Midland and Midland County got fatter tax rebate checks in the mail this month, but officials aren't planning to spend all the money in one place.

The county's $345,963 rebate reflected a 20.6 percent increase over last June's $285,150 check.

"The best thing I can say is that it's a slight positive trend," said city finance director Troy Gifford. He cautioned against reading too much into a one-month increase.

"No doubt the payment is higher, but the trend over the year is more indicative," Gifford said.

The trend in year-to-date payments is less impressive. The city has received $4.2 million since the beginning of 1990, compared to $4 million received by June 1989. The figures reflect a 4.6 percent increase.

The county's sales tax rebates have totaled $2.3 million from January through June 1990, compared to $2.1 million received last year by this time, a 9.8 percent increase over 1989's figures.

Fireworks company owner expects booming business

■ Despite being illegal and dangerous, fireworks are popular.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Fireworks are a booming business.

"We've never had a bad year ... we're really pleased with it," said Jim Harris, a partner in Truckload Fireworks, a local business in its eighth year.

Harris, whose company has 21 firework sales locations in the Midland-Odessa area, brought in about three and a half 40-foot-truck loads for the Fourth of July celebration.

"I think we will sell out completely," Harris said, adding that this year's stockpile is based on last year's firework sales.

Harris estimated that 75 to 80 stands are set up in the area, by Truckload and its competitors.

Some of the more popular fireworks include Roman candles, sparklers and Black Cat firecrackers, Harris said.

"It's popular because so many states have outlawed fireworks," Harris said.

"That's how you celebrate the Fourth of July," Harris said. "Fourth of July without fireworks is like Christmas without Santa Claus ... it's been around forever."

Fireworks are also a booming business for the fire department, police department and health care facilities.

According to a city ordinance, discharging or possessing fireworks is prohibited within Midland

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Tax abatement backers rejoiced at the prospect of Midland's economy being pumped up with new or expanding businesses Tuesday evening when the school board approved their plan.

"This is a real step forward for Midland," said Jerry Jones, a member of the Enterprise Zone Committee. "It's an exciting opportunity for everyone."

The Midland Independent School District Board approved the tax abatement policy backed by the Midland Chamber of Commerce with two amendments.

The first amendment, recommended by board member Larry Rusk, is that retail businesses be discouraged from locating west of Loop 250. Rusk expressed concern that a mall might locate between Midland and Odessa, drawing business away from Midland Park Mall.

James Fuller suggested the second amendment, that businesses be encouraged to invest in the enterprise zone — primarily in south and southeast Midland — above and beyond the state-mandated hiring of 25 percent of the employees from the zone area.

Fuller stated that he would like to see residential improvement in the zone area as well as capital investment in the area.

"Corporate responsibility will encourage that type of action," Jones said.

Despite the amendments, Jones said the tax abatement "concept was intact. I feel real positive about everything."

The tax abatement proposal was tabled at the previous board meeting, when several members questioned having an evaluation committee which included four members selected by the chamber.

"It was a concern of the board that four members were not elected members of any taxing entity. They would have nothing to lose," Kenneth Morrison said, at the meeting.

MISD, the county's biggest taxing entity, would stand to lose the most from having to wait five years to fully tax an industry.

Jones previously said that about 50 percent of all property taxes charged in the county go to MISD.

A tax abatement policy addendum presented to the board by the Enterprise Zone Committee stated in part that the four other members appointed by the Executive

Baptist group's new president urges unity

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Sammy Medina, the new president of the Mexican Baptist Convention of Texas, calls all Southern Baptists to work together in unity.

"I want to work in the service of our Lord Jesus Christ, together, as one convention, one denomination and one church," Medina said, following his election at the Mexican Baptist Convention of Texas, being held through Wednesday at First Baptist Church, here.

"Unity, I think, is the key to everything. We have a Mexican Baptist Convention, we have a Baptist General Convention of Texas and we have a Southern Baptist Convention. I want us to be one denomination. I want us to work together for the common cause of winning souls for Jesus."

Elected by the MBCT Tuesday night, Medina is a Lubbock attorney and pastor of Alliance Baptist Church there.

Also elected to offices in the MBCT Tuesday night were Issac Rodriquez, Corpus Christi, pastor of Second Baptist Church, first vice president; David Galvan, Garland, pastor of New Life Baptist Church, second vice president; Eddie Pina, a CPA from San Antonio and member of Seacroft Baptist Church, third vice president; and Roberto Arrubla Sr., pastor, Fort Worth, secretary.

Those attending the Mexican Baptist Convention of Texas have been treated to concerts prior to the nightly business and worship sessions.

On Tuesday, the concert was presented by the Lubbock association of Mexican Baptists. Noelia Cavazos, one of four soloists, closed the musical portion of the program by leading The United Choir from Lubbock area churches in a moving performance of "Carry the Light."

While she sang, she used sign language to complement her performance. The act seemed most appropriate considering the deaf are among 22 minority groups for which the Southern Baptist in Texas have started churches.

Close to 2,000 are attending the annual meeting. MBCT, part of the Baptist General Convention of Texas, includes about 1,000 Hispanic congregations across the state.

Top priorities for the MBCT during both the business and worship sessions this week are the subjects broadly defined under mission work and leadership training. In addition, business at plenary sessions include resolutions on major moral and social issues.

Mexican Baptist Convention of Texas, formed in June of 1910, and Baptist General Convention of Texas were separate entities until a unification agreement between the two was ratified in 1964. The agreement calls for the two bodies to hold one convention while allowing MBCT to retain its identity as an ethnic fellowship. Thus, since MBCT first met in June, it holds its annual meeting in June. BGCT holds its convention in November.

A resolution to hold concurrent conventions with the Baptist General Convention of Texas was tabled Tuesday night.

"The convention decided to study it further," said Jimmy Garcia III, coordinator of Ethnic Missions for the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

In addition to the plenary sessions, the MBCT has held meetings of the Woman's Missionary Union, Texas Baptist Men, Sunday School, discipleship, music and youth.

Former employee sues Odessa for alleged sexual discrimination

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A former city of Odessa employee is seeking more than $500,000 in damages in a sexual harassment lawsuit filed against the city earlier this month, federal court documents show.

Peggy Arlene Kerr, 38, claims that an Odessa Animal Control center supervisor subjected her to "sexual comments, offensive touching and sexual advances" while she was employed there.

The supervisor, identified as Freddy Belis, is a co-defendant in the suit. Odessa City Manager Bill Brown said Belis is no longer employed by the city.

City Attorney Joel Roberts declined to comment on the suit.

"We would generally be denying the allegations in the petition," Roberts said. No response to the suit has been filed yet, he said.

Ms. Kerr worked as an Animal Control center clerk from September 1988 to June 1989. The suit claims she was forced to resign after a series of incidents involving Belis.

"It's our client's position that Belis' behavior became progressively worse as time went on," said Eva-Marie Leahey, one of Ms. Kerr's Odessa attorneys. "She was first hired in September 1988 and subjected to some instances of ... verbal harassment and it just became progressively worse until she couldn't take it any longer and had to resign."

The suit, filed June 11, seeks $500,000 in exemplary or punitive damages. It also seeks attorney's fees, lost wages and benefits and "liquidated damages" equal to lost wages and benefits.

The suit claims the city of Odessa was negligent in allowing Belis to continue working at the center in spite of Ms. Kerr's "adamant" complaints.

Ms. Kerr has been "anxious,nervous, depressed and irritable" following her resignation, the suit contends.

side air show, he said. In addition, the city can't hold another air show within 90 days prior to a CAF show, he said.

The CAF must hold at least two air shows yearly, Laughlin said, adding that future Midland Air Show events may have to be rescheduled if they conflict with planned CAF shows. This year's Midland Air Show was held June 3.

Victor White, Midland International Airport director, said that in addition to being a tourist attraction, the CAF also will be an effective advertising tool to convince airlines and businesses to set up shop here.

"To witness this community support for the CAF is helpful," White said.

FIREWORKS: Many people ignore fireworks ordinance city limits. Sparklers as well as firecrackers and other conventional July Fourth fireworks are included in the ban.

"I think everyone is aware of the violation ... and choose to ignore it thinking they are not going to get caught," City Attorney David Reagan said.

Up to a $2,000 fine can be imposed for violating the ordinance, Reagan said.

Both the police department and the fire marshal's office will be issuing citations, officials said.

"It's a pretty good problem," Officer Dale Seago of the Midland Police Department said. "We'll probably make about 100 firework call in addition to regular calls" on the Fourth.

Seago said that many people who set off fireworks don't consider the danger in doing so.

"It's been ingrained in us since we've grown up to shoot off fireworks on the Fourth," he said.

The biggest problem that spoils the fun from using fireworks seems to be the threat of fire.

On and around July 4, 1989, approximately 145 blazes, mostly grass fires, were started in Midland city and county, Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said.

"It's amazing that at this time of year, we all lose our respect for fire," Petree said.

"It's so dry and there is such a potential number of things that can catch fire in the city," he said.

"We've had a number of roofs burn off in the city in the last few years because of fireworks," Petree added.

Petree and Seago recommend that people go to the pyrotechnic displays at Angels Stadium as an alternative to setting off their own.

Shows will be presented at the stadium, on July 1 and 2. Both will begin about 9:30 p.m. or when it gets dark.

Another firework risk is personal injury.

"Most injuries are eye injuries and minor burns," a spokesperson for Midland Memorial Hospital said.

In 1989, 10,000 people in the United States suffered fireworks related injuries with most occurring during Fourth of July celebrations, according to the American Academy of Ophthalmology.

Almost half of the injuries occurred in children under the age of 16 and about 1,300 of the injuries damaged the eye, according the academy.

Recommendations of firework safety include:

- Do not put firecrackers in bottles, cans or under objects like clay pots;
- Do not throw sparklers in the air;
- Wear safety goggles;
- Do not let children ignite fireworks.

Harris said that fireworks should be shot off where the grass is short or in a paved area outside the city. He also recommends that someone armed with a shovel and water be designated to watch for fires.

TAX: Hike seen as 'positive trend'

(From 1B)

the first increase it's seen in the three years it has levied its half-cent tax. County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin said he interprets the increase as a good economic indicator.

"If it keeps up, we'll be tickled to death. Even a 10 percent increase would be helpful," Jarnagin said.

However, he added that the county did not intend to change its budget to take advantage of the increase.

Gifford said sales tax observers should take into consideration the fact that merchants send in their sales tax returns on a monthly, quarterly or annual basis, depending on their size. Major retail stores report monthly to the comptroller, while "mom and pop" shops report quarterly.

This month's rebates come from purchases made in April.

The staggered receipts result in what Gifford terms "two little 'uns and a big 'un" — Two small tax returns and one large tax return in each quarter. For the city this amounts to two months of $500,000 checks and one month with a whopper $1 million tax return check.

"Just the fluctuation alone would drive you crazy," he said. He prefers to analyze the returns on a quarterly basis.

With that analysis, sales tax returns for the city, which has a one cent per dollar rate, have increased by $150,000 in the last quarter.

"Out of a $6 million budget, that's not a big deal," Gifford said.

He said it was just as likely that the slight positive trend could turn into a slight negative one if oil prices soften.

"I think it's reflective of a better economy," he said. "I feel we're in a growth pattern, but not a boom."

The city of Odessa got a $502,890 check from the comptroller, a 10.2 percent increase from June 1989's $456,571 figure. Odessa has received $3.8 million in sales tax returns from January to June 1990, up 11.6 percent from 1989's year-to-date sum of $3.4 million.

Statewide, tax rebates to cities totaled $74.9 million, up 13.3 percent from last June's payments. Rebate checks to counties totaled $8.4 million, up 23.9 percent from June 1989.

MISD: District to help select chief

(From 1B)

Committee shall be appointed as follows:

- MISD will select eight nominees.
- The City of Midland will select four nominees.
- Midland County, Midland College and Midland Memorial Hospital District will each select one nominee.
- Two of the four members will be selected from the MISD list of nominees, one of the four members will be selected from the city list, and one of the four will be selected from Midland County, Midland College and MMH district nominees.

Hospital directors will review the proposal today.

Home garden yields enormous tomato crop

By Lisa Hesketh

This year, he planted his tomato crop Feb. 25, the day the Almanac recommended for above-ground crops.

So far, he and wife, Wanda, have harvested more than 400 pounds of tomatoes, with more to come. They're trying to beat last year's 900-pound harvest.

"He has had the best results by planting by the almanac," says Wanda.

In 1983, Ray retired as a structural steel ironworker and decided to spend his days quite differently he chose to take up gardening as a hobby.

Ray and Wanda, who've been married 36 years, have spent many a summer day canning tomatoes from their backyard garden.

Now, he says, he can't go any farther. "I got my lot filled up," he says.

LAST YEAR, Ray and Wanda canned more than 450 jars of tomatoes from their 900-pound crop.

"The rest we gave away," Wanda says. "By the time we get to the point where we're almost through canning, I get so sick of looking at tomatoes, I want to throw everything in the river."

From the time the tomatoes are picked to the time they are canned, Ray and Wanda handle each one about five times.

The tomatoes are picked, weighed, set out to ripen, put in the refrigerator, then finally canned.

Ray picks the tomatoes in the mornings and evenings each day, which sometimes total up to 65 pounds.

He stresses that they need to be picked before they're completely ripe.

"If you let the tomatoes ripen on the vine, the birds will eat them," he says. "When they turn pink is when you should get them."

Ray distracts birds by planting sunflowers and using the seeds to feed the birds.

Following folk wisdom, he has planted marigolds around the tomato plants to repel insects and keep them away from the vegetables.

Ray attributes his gardening success to Miracle Gro brand fertilizer and and the compost they also use as fertilizer.

AP Laserphoto

Wanda and Ray Penney won't be buying tomatoes from the grocery store this summer. The couple have harvested more than 400 pounds of tomatoes from their garden so far this year. Last year they picked 900 pounds.

"It goes back in the ground and deteriorates," Wanda says. "I think it has a whole lot to do with gardening. It's sort of like replenishing the ground."

RAY ALSO subscribes to several organic magazines, plants strictly by The Farmer's Almanac and has learned much of what he knows by trial and error.

"It didn't come to me overnight," says Ray. "You learn from one year to the next."

What do Ray and Wanda do with so many tomatoes? "We use them, and we share them with our family mostly and friends at the church," says Wanda.

"A lot of our friends are getting real elderly, and they can't get out and garden like they used to, and so we try to share with them whatever we've got."

Wanda says she can remember watching her mother can vegetables when she was young.

"I never, ever thought I would be somebody that would get in to canning," she says. "I didn't think I had the patience to do it."

■ Use Kerr or Bell jars, which can be bought at any local grocery store.

■ Sterilize the jars by leaving them in the drying cycle of a dishwasher.

■ Drop individual tomatoes in boiling water for five minutes, then drop in cold water for a few seconds. This will loosen the skin for easier peeling.

■ Using a paring knife, cut off the stem of the tomato and peel skin.

■ Put 1 teaspoon of salt and 2 teaspoons of sugar in the jar with the tomatoes. This takes out the tartness of the tomatoes, and the salt acts as a preservative.

■ Do not use water with your vegetables. They will make their own juice.

■ THOROUGHLY CLEAN the top of the jar so no food will be in contact with the seal.

■ Put lids on snugly, but do not tighten completely.

■ Set jars in a pot of boiling water for 45 minutes. The water should be 1 to 2 inches over the lids. This "pulls a vaccuum" on the lids of the jars.

■ After 45 minutes, lift the jars out of the pot and wipe off excess water on lids.

■ Be careful not to pick up the jars by the lids; doing so will disturb the seal. Use potholders and carefully lift by the sides.

■ Set jars on a towel on countertop. Directly placing them on the countertop could cause the jars to crack.

■ Do not bump the jars together. They are very fragile when hot and could crack.

■ Turn off all fans in the area or anything that might cause the jars to cool too quickly.

■ After the jars have cooled, tighten the lids and store.

■ If the juice of the tomatoes is very cloudy, they have gone bad.

STUFFED BELL PEPPERS

4 pounds super lean hamburger meat
2 large fresh onions, finely chopped
48 ounces stewed tomatoes
1 package beef mushroom soup mix
4 whole eggs
Cup Heinz sauce and Worchester sauce, blended

STEWED TOMATOES

Skin tomatoes as though you're going to can them. Drop then into a pot and put the flame on low. Do not use water.

Peel onions, banana peppers and jalapeno peppers and finely chop them in food processor.

DEAR ABBY

Couple are neighbors' keepers

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just came back from helping an elderly neighbor lift her invalid husband off the couch and onto the bed to be "changed." (This is the third time this morning.)

Van Buren

My husband and I are graduate students who work nights and are home at odd hours, grabbing a quick bite or typing a last-minute paper.

When we rented this apartment, we gave our telephone number to this elderly neighbor and told her to call us in case of an emergency. At first, she called only when her husband had fallen. He has gotten himself into some strange positions; once his head was wedged between the sofa and the coffee table. He's a very large man, and she can't handle him alone. No other neighbors seem willing to help, and there's no family nearby.

Now we are called several times during the day and at night, too. Also, their apartment is becoming a health hazard with piles of soiled diapers all over the place. (The odor and flies are terrible!)

We will be moving after we graduate, and we're concerned about what will happen to this couple after we move. Please help. — FEELING HELPLESS

DEAR FEELING HELPLESS: Don't wait another day. Call your county social services department (sometimes listed under "family services") and explain the situation.

A social worker will be sent out to appraise your neighbors' needs. Most communities have a visiting-nurse service for elderly or physically challenged people who require daily care.

Bless you for caring enough about your neighbors to have written to me.

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to be married to "Mr. Right" very soon. We've been very serious for two years. Mr. Right was formerly married to "Mrs. Wrong." They have two children. The problem is his mother.

She insists on keeping several pictures of Mr. Right with Mrs. Wrong conspicuously displayed in her home — even though she claims not to care for her. I know it's her home, but this has bothered me for two years now. Since I am engaged to her son, I feel very offended and have told my fiance that I will not visit his mother after we are married if she doesn't remove those pictures.

What should I do? — NOT WANTING TO STIR UP TROUBLE

DEAR NOT WANTING TO STIR UP TROUBLE: Be true to your signature and let it pass until after the wedding. Then present your mother-in-law with current wedding pictures suitably framed and "help" her select the places to display them.

Then the pictures of Mr. Right and Mrs. Wrong can be retired with other mementos of ancient history — possibly a dusty and seldom-opened family album.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is an ordained minister, and we have recently relocated to a new community. Thus far, we have been inundated with announcements and invitations to weddings, bridal parties, anniversary celebrations, graduations, baby showers, etc.

We don't think it's proper to send these notices concerning gift-giving occasions when they know we can't attend.

We cannot send a gift to all of these people — even a nice card costs at least $1.25. Yet, we cannot just ignore the occasion.

Kindly print this (no names or city, please) so the people in this congregation will realize that our budget does not allow for gifts or cards in response to these announcements. — THE MINISTER'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Please do not regard every invitation or announcement as a hint for a gift. It's not. Many send their clergyperson invitations to all family celebrations seeking more to be honored with their presence than their presents.

Don't strain your budget in order to send a gift or card. A personal note of congratulations and best wishes is sufficient.

Olive oil has worked its way to top of health-food charts

By Kit Snedaker
Copley News Service

Back in the days when movie magazine articles speculated on whether screen kisses were "real," and butter sat next to the salt shaker at every meal, olive oil was exotic.

I don't even remember tasting olive oil until I was doing my own cooking. Since then healthy food fads, such as oat bran, have blazed up and died down — but olive oil has worked its way to the top of the health-food charts and has stayed there.

As a replacement for such saturated fats as butter or lard, mono-unsaturated olive oil is a world beater. Some studies indicate that it may even help reduce cholesterol levels (of bad low-density lipoproteins) for those of us who use it regularly.

These days olive oil takes up a whole supermarket shelf. The problem is which one to buy.

Best oils are extra virgin, which means the oil is extracted from olives by cold-pressing (without heat or water), and nothing is added. It has the least amount of acidity.

Superfine virgin is next, then fine (or regular) virgin, and virgin or pure.

The lightest oils, those lightest in color with the least flavor, come from California or France. The heaviest, dark green with full fruity flavor, come from Spain, Portugal or Greece. Italy gives us anything from light to heavy.

I like a heavy, fruity full-flavored olive oil and get a dark Tuscan variety when I can afford it, but you must buy small quantities to taste and decide for yourself.

Buy the best oil (by taste, not price) for salads and less expensive for cooking because heating olive oil changes its flavor. You can, of course, add the oil after a dish is cooked and retain flavor that way.

I use olive oil in place of vegetable oil for cooking and salad dressings. I even drizzle it on bread in place of butter and love it on baked potatoes or vegetables.

For baking, olive oil can replace other oils one to one or use 1 tablespoon of olive oil in place of 1¼ tablespoons of butter or margarine.

Usually I use olive oil for bread baking but didn't think of it for cakes until Pompeian, a well-known brand name, sent me some cake recipes using olive oil. I tried them and love them.

In fact Pompeian has set up an olive oil hot line. If you have questions, call (301) 276-6900 and ask for Jaan or Lois.

Bottom of olive oil bottle looks different
Is it safe?

Yes, here's why:
1. Saturated fats make up a small amount of olive oil and often settle in the bottom of the bottle.
2. At cool room temperatures these crystals tend to be solid, even more so in the refrigerator.
3. At room, or slightly warm temperatures, this milky residue turns clear again.

APPLE CAKE

4 to 6 apples, peeled and sliced
2 teaspoons cinnamon
2¼ cups sugar
3 cups flour
1 tablespoon low-sodium baking powder
1 cup light olive oil
4 eggs
⅓ cup orange juice
2½ teaspoons vanilla

Yields 12 top 14 servings. Each serving has about 444 calories, 19 grams fat, 84 milligrams cholesterol and 22 milligrams sodium.

In medium bowl, combine apples with cinnamon and ¼ cup of sugar. Set aside.

In large bowl, combine remaining sugar with flour, baking powder, olive oil, eggs, orange juice and vanilla. Beat until batter is smooth.

Grease 10-inch tube pan or Bundt pan and pour small amount of batter into bottom. Place layer of apple slices on top. Continue layering in this fashion, ending with layer of batter.

Bake at 350 degrees for 1½ hours or until cake tests done. Cool in pan 30 minutes before turning cake onto rack to cool.

POUND CAKE

¾ cup extra light olive oil
½ teaspoon grated orange peel
¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 eggs
1¼ cups flour
½ teaspoon low-sodium baking powder

Yields 14 to 16 servings.

Each serving has about 188 calories, 12 grams fat, 54 milligrams cholesterol and 14 milligrams sodium.

Whisk olive oil and orange peel until frothy; gradually add sugar. Beat until light, approximately 3 minutes at medium speed. Add vanilla, then eggs (one at a time), beating well after each addition. Sift together dry ingredients, stir in.

Grease bottom of 9x5x3-inch loaf pan. Pour batter into pan, and tap pan to release any trapped air bubbles. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes or until done. Cool in pan. Sift powdered sugar over top of cake.

CARROT CAKE

1 cup extra virgin olive oil
1 cup crushed pineapple
4 medium carrots, shredded
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup granulated sugar
3 eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons low-sodium baking soda
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 cup chopped walnuts
1 cup coconut

Yields 12 to 14 servings.

Each serving (not frosted, but lightly dusted with powdered sugar) has about 460 calories, 25 grams fat, 63 milligrams cholesterol and 31 milligrams sodium.

Grease 9x12-inch rectangular pan or 10-inch round pan. In medium mixing bowl, combine olive oil, pineapple, carrots, brown sugar, granulated sugar, eggs and vanilla. Mix well.

Sift together flour and baking soda. Stir dry ingredients into carrot mixture. Add walnuts and coconut. Mix completely and pour batter into prepared pan.

Bake in 375 degree oven for 50 minutes. When cool, frost with your favorite cream cheese icing or dust with powdered sugar.

Spring cleaning should include inside cupboards, refrigerator

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Spring or fall cleaning used to mean days of work, turning out the house from top to bottom. With today's easy-care furnishings and improved cleaning products, most of us have given up that twice-a-year chore. But the part of your kitchen that doesn't show — inside the cupboards and refrigerator — still needs an annual or semiannual cleanup to be sure the food you're storing is safe and high-quality. These storage tips and times will help you with the job:

■ Sugar will keep 2 years in a tight-lidded container.

■ All-purpose flour usually will last 6 to 8 months in a tightly covered container. Discard flour or any other grain product if you see signs of insects.

■ Store whole-grain flours and other whole-grain products in the refrigerator or freezer. The small amount of oil they contain can become rancid, giving an off-flavor. They also are more attractive to insects.

■ Store tea bags in an airtight tin for up to 18 months. Unopened ground coffee in a can lasts 2 years. Opened ground or freeze-dried coffee crystals last about 2 months; for longer storage, refrigerate.

■ Don't store spices over the stove. It may be convenient, but heat and moisture steal the flavor. Whole spices retain flavor about 1 year; ground spices about 6 months.

■ Check boxed goods for "use by" dates. If there's no date, remember that boxed pasta lasts 1 year or more; dry cake or similar mixtures about 1 year.

■ Store commercially canned tomato products, fruits and fruit juices up to 18 months.

■ Other commercially canned goods can be stored for 2 to 5 years if the cans look healthy; no dents, holes, rust, bulges or leaks.

■ Home-canned foods should be used within 1 year.

■ If in doubt, throw it out. Never taste suspicious-looking or smelling canned goods or anything that spurts liquid when opened.

■ Check the temperature. Your refrigerator should maintain 40 degrees F or less.

■ Remember that fresh poultry and fish keep only 1 to 2 days; fresh meat 3 to 5 days. For longer storage, wrap in moisture- and vaporproof wrap and freeze immediately after purchase.

■ Canned hams needing refrigeration last about 9 months. Don't freeze such a ham in the can.

■ Vacuum-packed meats last 2 weeks unopened; 5 to 7 days after opening.

■ You can safely cut a small mold spot from hard cheese, salami, and firm fruits and vegetables. Keep your knife out of the mold and cut away 1 inch around and below the spot. Discard other moldy foods.

In the freezer:

■ Discard old, frozen-over packages. Keep packages if they're not past the "use-by" date. Date the packages you save and place them up front to use first.

■ Defrost your freezer at least once a year, more often if necessary. When the freezer is frosted over, it can't work efficiently. Also ice crystals can invade food, causing loss of quality.

■ Be sure your freezer maintains 0 degrees F or less.

And under the sink:

■ Never store food of any kind under the sink; leaky pipes, household chemical spills, insects or rodents can cause contamination.

Teas are refreshing, aromatic drink

By Carrie White
N.Y. Times News Service

There is more than one way to make iced tea, and more than one kind of iced tea to make.

"Peppermint is very refreshing and aromatic. It's also good for digestion," said Chari Jagelka, a herbalist at Gentle Strength Cooperative in Tempe, Ariz. Also going for peppermint tea is the fact that it cools the body down when temperatures are high.

Rose hips, a tea that produces a reddish brew, is high in vitamin C. It is also used for infections and cleansing toxins from the body. Hibiscus is also a red-hued tea, but this one bears a fruity flavor.

"Lemon grass helps absorb gas in the stomach," Jagelka said, noting that the lemon flavor is very subtle.

"Chamomile relaxes the nerves, is good for digestion and for sleeplessness," Jagelka said. The tea is light yellow in color. It also improves appetite.

Comfrey leaf tea, while being good for the digestion, is also a gentle laxative. The tea is high in potassium, vitamin A and calcium.

Pau D'Arco, a tea from South America, is medium brown in color and is commonly used to counter yeast infections. It does have a mineral quality to it. But it is a non-toxin and can be drunk all day.

Jagelka offered her suggestions for brewing tea with the sun's heat, a popular practice in the South:

An appropriate ratio of tea to water is 1 teaspoon of tea per 8 ounces of water. Do not leave the tea out in the hot sun for more than four hours. Longer than that, and the tea will either be too strong or it will sour and smell.

Always start with a well-scrubbed glass jar. A jar that isn't washed well between uses will transmit a sour taste to the tea.

Don't keep sun tea longer than three days. The quality of the tea lessens greatly after that time.

REFRIGERATOR ICED TEA

Place 8 tea bags in a large glass container. Add 8 cups of cold water. Refrigerate three to four hours. Remove tea bags and serve over ice.

MICROWAVE ICED TEA

This method offers the taste of brewed iced tea with the convenience of instant iced tea.

When using the microwave in this way, it is important to transfer tea from standard tea bags to muslin bags or other non-metallic holders. (Regular tea bags have metal staples.)

Place 1 cup hot tap water and the equivalent of 4 tea bags in a microwave container. Microwave on high for 2 minutes. Place 3 cups of cold water in a 1-quart pitcher. Remove tea-filled bags from hot tea. Sweeten while hot, if desired. Add hot tea to pitcher of cold water. Pour over ice to serve. Makes 1 quart.

No-cook gazpacho is a cool summer dish

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Introduce your family to cool, no-cook gazpacho. The recipe originated in Spain where it's been a favored refreshment for centuries. Originally the soup was thinner and the vegetables were more like a garnish.

GAZPACHO

3 medium tomatoes
1 small cucumber, chopped
1 medium green pepper, chopped
2 green onions, sliced
1 clove garlic, minced
1 12-ounce can (1½ cups) vegetable juice cocktail
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 teaspoon olive oil or cooking oil
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon dried basil, crushed
Several dashes bottled hot pepper sauce

Peel tomatoes. Coarsely chop the tomatoes. In a large mixing bowl combine tomatoes, cucumber, green pepper and green onions. Stir garlic, vegetable juice cocktail, vinegar, olive oil, salt, basil and hot pepper sauce into tomato mixture.

Cover and chill in the refrigerator for several hours or until thoroughly chilled. Ladle into soup bowls. Makes 4 side-dish servings.

Prices sag

The contract for August delivery of West Texas Intermediate dropped 24 cents to $17.14 a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

In natural gas trading, the August contract closed at $1.507 per 1,000 cubic feet, down from $1.516 Monday.

Brian Tagler, an energy options specialist at Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc., said the oil market seems to be stuck in a holding pattern, with activity winding down before the Fourth of July holiday.

Trump saved

NEW YORK (AP) — Donald Trump on Tuesday secured urgently needed funds to avoid defaulting on debts after his bankers agreed in principle to a long-term $65 million financial rescue plan.

Prolonged wrangling on the bailout culminated in an agreement by seven key banks to lend another $20 million immediately to the cash-strapped landlord and real estate developer.

The 30-day bridge loan will tide Trump over while finishing touches are placed on a complex bailout and debt restructuring deal aimed at keeping his sprawling real estate and casino empire solvent.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dolla declined against all major currencies Tuesday after the markets became pessimistic about Congress reaching a budget accord, traders said.

Gold bullion prices fell domestically and overseas on reports of selling in the Middle East. The reports could not be confirmed.

In London, one British pound cost $1.7360 late Tuesday up from Monday's late rate of $1.7300.

Other late rates for the dollar in New York, compared with Monday's late quotes, included: 1.6618 West German marks, down from 1.6775; 1.3975 Swiss francs, down from 1.4100; 5.5770 French francs, down from 5.6315; 1,217.50 Italian lire, down from 1,228.25; and 1.1719 Canadian dollars, down from 1.17705.

The late bid price for gold in London was $349.50 a troy ounce, down from $353.50 late Monday.

Silver bullion traded late in London at a bid $4.79 a troy ounce, down from $4.85.

Journal moves

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Oil & Gas Journal has moved from Tulsa to Houston to be closer to offshore oil activity.

"The offshore industry is where the big bucks are today," said Jim West, managing editor for news at the weekly trade magazine.

"We needed to be closer to our sources and our customers. It was time to change, and we did."

AP Laserphoto

Ray Leopold, director of systems engineering for Motorola, poses with a mock-up of one of the company's planned Iridium satellites, part of a communications system announced by Motorola Tuesday.

■ Motorola's planned Iridium cellular phone system, expected to be in full operation by 1996, will allow cellular phone users to make a call from anywhere on Earth.

By Bart Ziegler

NEW YORK (AP) — Before the decade is out, you'll be able to pull a telephone from your overcoat and make a call from anywhere on Earth.

Motorola Inc. announced plans Tuesday to build a satellite-based cellular phone system that would allow users of a portable, 25-ounce phone to make and receive calls in regions where phone service is troublesome or unavailable.

Current portable phones cannot be used in many areas because they rely on radio antennas atop buildings or towers being close enough to relay a signal.

Motorola's Iridium system, under development since 1987 and expected to be fully operating by 1996, envisions a constellation of 77 satellites to relay calls. Motorola said it hopes to charge less than $3,500 for each phone.

Motorola, the world's largest maker of cellular phones, is the first company to announce plans for such a system.

"What we have done is put together a concept that allows, for the first time, personal communications to occur anywhere in the world," said Durrell W. Hillis, general manager of Motorola's satellite communication division.

John Pemberton, an analyst with the research firm Gartner Group of Stamford, Conn., said American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is believed to be working on plans for a cellular system that would use two giant satellites.

The Iridium system could be used in nations where conventional telephione service is poor, such as in Eastern Europe, Hillis said.

Iridium phone users could place a call directly to anyone with an Iridium phone, and their calls also could connect with a conventional, land-based phone system.

The system will cost about $2 billion to develop, and the cost will be shared by four or five partners that have not yet been chosen, Hillis said.

Motorola said it has signed with three satellite operators to explore constructing the system.

Hilton owners pleased with their property

■ Fred Eydt, president of Medallion Hotels, owner of the Midland Hilton, has big plans for the hotel, its first acquistion.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Midland's Hilton has become the cornerstone of a growing young hotel company run by a veteran hotelier.

The downtown hotel was purchased approximately 10 months ago by New York-based Medallion Hotels Inc. from Prudential for between $5 and $10 million, according to Medallion president Fred Eydt.

He adds that it was Medallion's first acquisition. Since then the company has acquired a Marriott property in Houston, a Hilton in Austin, and a hotel in Louisville, Ky. He said he hopes that Medallion will gain a few more properties by the end of the year. The company focuses on properties that are well-located and with potential.

"We have the philosophy that there are properties in the Sun Belt that, for economic reasons, are available at an attractive price," explained the Buffalo, N.Y. native, in town with six others from New York for a meeting of managers of Medallion's four properties.

"We have confidence that Texas is on the mend and on the way back, and we thought it was time to find undervalued properties in the Sun Belt," he added.

Medallion works with a group of investors, finding and purchasing properties for the investors, and then manages them. Eydt said he plans to keep his staff in New York to a minimum, believing that the strength should lie with the staffs actually operating the properties.

"I think Medallion's concept is to apply its resources — both physical and human — and maintain high standards in both," observed Barry Smith, general manager of the Midland Hilton for the past four years.

IBM unveils 'easy to use' computer

■ IBM jumps back into the home computer market with its PS-1, which the company has tried to make user-friendly from the packaging to the hardware itself.

By John Markoff
N.Y. Times News Service

The secret to International Business Machines Corp.'s latest foray into the home computer market may lie in the box the computer comes in.

The computer giant has taken great pains to come up with an "easy to use" shipping container: It opens like a treasure chest; has graphically displayed unpacking instructions, and when it is opened the user finds the manual already turned to the correct page.

"Easy to use" has never been the phrase associated with the computer giant or the cryptic PC-DOS operating system software it uses. But now Big Blue is taking a gamble on a new, more comforting approach.

The company is hoping to woo first-time home computer buyers by packaging everything they will need in a single box and offering a built-in modem to provide extensive electronic "hand-holding" via several computer networks.

Using the slogan "IBM Brings It All Home," the computer maker took its first plunge back into the home computer market in almost five years Tuesday when it released its PS/1 family of computers.

The machines, which will be priced between $999 and $1,999, depending on memory and whether they come with a color monitor and a hard disk, were designed during the last 19 months by a small group the company set up in Lexington, Ky.

North Park racks up new book store

By Mella McEwen

McEwen

Just opened in North Park Shopping Center, next to Zody's is THE BOOK RACK.

The Midland store is owned by Gay Cox Sherrill, explained that she buys, trades and sells used books, primarily paperbacks. She has books in all categories, from children's books to mysteries, adventures and romances.

The Book Rack is a franchise that got its start in Memphis, Tenn. but now has located its corporate offices to Florida.

Also new on the Midland scene is KWIK KAR OIL & LUBE CENTER, located at 4404 W. Wadley.

Owned by Herman Schwartz, Kwik Kar offers oil and lube change using Quaker State Oil. Other services include state inspections and service on differentials and transmissions.

Hours are from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Walls buys, sells and trades guns and gun accessories such as cleaning supplies, holsters, clips and some ammunition. He also does appraisals and will special order merchandise for customers.

CHEZ VOUS CATERING has opened a private party room in San Miguel Square.

Barb Christiansen, who owns Chez Vous with Dominique Chardola, said the room can be sectioned to hold small-groups or can comfortably accomodate larger parties of between 100 and 120 guests. It can even accomodate a dance floor, if the client desires, she said.

She also pointed out that the room, available for breakfast, lunch or late night parties, is also suited for business meetings such as lunches or seminars.

One benefit of this room, she says, is that it allows Chez Vous to handle the arrangements, and lets the customer buy his own liquor to be served.

Christiansen charges a flat $100 fee for use of the room, which goes toward the set-up and utilities.

Chez Vous has been in business four years and has catered events for UTPB, Wagner & Brown, Septemberfest and Celebration of the Arts, among others.

Midlander Malcolm Campbell has started CAMPBELL & ASSOCIATES, located at 2413-A Haynes.

He is associated with Success Motivation Institute, a producer of personal and motivational programs.

According to Campbell, he will hold programs and workshops for both individuals and companies. Programs cover a variety of topics such as dynamic goal setting, sales management, and management. There are even some programs for children. Prices vary from $300 to $995.

Campbell also sells individual audio tapes.

SMI was founded by Paul J. Meyer in 1960.

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 682-0861;enter your access code which is 78625*

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticket symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticket guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticket symbol, press the (*) star key and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticket symbol. You now have 2 options:

* You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
* You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*). Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticket code.
* You may enter up to 10 ticket symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Analysis

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, strengthening on President Bush's remark that tax increases will be needed to reduce the deficit.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 12.13 points on Monday, was up 9.90 points to 2,854.95 at 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 6 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 752 up, 631 down and 529 unchanged. Volume on the Big Board came to 101.84 million shares.

Prices for bonds and stocks increased on the Bush statement news, reflecting investor optimism that it meant the deficit could decline and ease pressure on interest rates by lowering the amount of money the federal government must borrow.

Caterpillar, which led Monday's decline with a 5-point drop, fell another 6⅜ to 52⅛ in heavy trading. Caterpillar said Monday that the company was expecting sharply lower earnings in the second quarter.

IBM was up ⅝ to 117¼, as the computer giant launched a home computer to sell for $999 in mainstream retail stores.

Among other active issues on the NYSE, Philip Morris was up ⅛ to 46⅞; Commonwealth Edison was up ⅛ to 32⅝; General Motors was down ⅝ to 47¼; and American Express was unchanged at 30½.

In over-the-counter trading, International Lease Finance Corp. was up 3¾ to 30⅞. Late Monday, the aircraft leasing company said it had agreed to a $1.3 billion buyout by American International Group Inc., the nation's largest commercial and industrial insurance underwriter.

AIG was down 2¼ to 94¼ on the NYSE.

The NYSE's composite index of all listed common stocks rose .59 to 193.19.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

The hows and whys of inheritance taxes

By Bill Doyle

Q. Please settle an argument regarding federal inheritance tax. My protagonist and I agree that up to $600,000 of one's estate is tax free. What would the tax be if one's estate is $601,000, $1,000 above the tax-free limit?

Doyle

A. To begin with, there is no federal inheritance tax. There is a federal estate tax. This might seem to be nit-picking, but it's not. There is a difference in the two forms of "death taxes."

An estate tax is imposed on the transfer of property, including cash and securities, a dead person leaves. An inheritance tax is imposed on property received from a dead person. Put another way, an estate tax is levied on the estate; an inheritance tax on the heirs.

Next point: There is an unlimited marital deduction for federal estate tax purposes, meaning one spouse can leave to the other an unlimited amount free of that tax bite.

Past that, the first $600,000 left to anyone other than the dead person's wife or husband also escapes the federal estate tax. On larger amounts, that tax starts at 18 percent on the first $10,000 of a taxable estate and skyrockets to 55 percent on a taxable estate of $3 million or more.

On your hypothetical $601,000 estate, the federal estate tax would be $180. That's because the $600,000 is tax free and the remaining $1,000 is nicked for 18 percent.

We can't let this go by without noting that all states except Nevada have estate and/or inheritance taxes. In recent years, a number of states have dropped inheritance taxes but have retained estate taxes. There's not enough room here to spell out all states' death tax rules.

Q. Will my individual retirement account be subject to federal estate tax?

A. Not unless you leave a bundle, including your IRA, to heirs other than your spouse.

Your IRA will be included in your estate for federal estate tax purposes. However, if your spouse is your IRA beneficiary, the value of your IRA will be exempt from federal estate tax, because of the unlimited marital deduction.

If you have other IRA beneficiaries, your IRA will be included in your taxable estate. But your estate, including IRA, has to exceed $600,000 before the federal estate tax kicks in.

Your IRA beneficiaries, including your spouse, will have to pay federal income tax on withdrawals from the IRA.

Q. I own Series E and EE bonds, U.S. Savings Bonds, on which quite a large amount of interest has accrued. I also have Series H and HH bonds, which I received in exchange for old E bonds on which interest had accrued and on which income tax has continued to be deferred because of the exchange.

When I die, will the estate value of these bonds be the bonds' face value? Or will it be face value, less federal and state income tax?

A. Your estate needn't worry about income taxes on accrued savings bond interest. Federal income tax will have to be paid on that interest only when the bonds are redeemed. So the heirs who receive the bonds can worry about that later on.

There never is any state income tax on U.S. Savings Bond interest.

For federal estate tax purposes and state estate and/or inheritance tax purposes, the value of each U.S. Savings Bond is the bond's redemption value on the date of the owner's death.

The redemption value on an E or EE bond can be more or less than the bond's face value, depending on when the bond was issued. Tables of redemption values for E and EE bonds and U.S. Savings Notes are available free from the Bureau of the Public Debt, Washington, DC 20239-0001.

The redemption value of each H and HH bond is that bond's face value.

HILTON: New owners believe in basics

(From 1C)

He says he's seeing an upswing in convention activity this year, and feels this will be a very good year for the hotel. "We're seeing more associations willing to hold their meetings in Midland, and at the Hilton. The city is dong its job promoting itself."

A graduate of the Cornell Hotel School, Eydt has been in the hotel business for 35 years, the last 16 at Rock Resorts, where he eventually served as president. The father of five grown children, he and his wife now make their home in New York City.

He is proud of his first acquisition, and has committed $2.2 million to the renovation of most of the Hilton's rooms. In response to a survey of guests, convention organizers and local businesspersons, the rooms are being remodeled to be more accommodating to business travelers — who make up a majority of the hotel's clients.

The rooms will include an chest with a remote-control television, overstuffed chairs, a desk with lamp suitable for paperwork, and an honorary snack bar. According to Eydt, there are also plans to add an exercise facility on the second floor and redo the lobby and public restrooms. All renovations are expected to be complete by the end of the year.

"We'd like to make this a model that we can duplicate in our other locations," he stated.

In addition to the physical appearance of the hotel, Medallion has hired Laurel Donlan to provide training, orientation and motivation for the hotel staff.

Said Eydt: "I think the key to success is doing the basics. Keeping the property up and having the staff well-trained, always alert to the fact that the most important thing is the guest — having him enjoy his stay and come back often. I think if you can do the basic things well, you will be successful."

He adds: "Everything we're doing here is for the long-term. We're prepared to be here a long time."

MOTOROLA: Users would need compatible phone

(From 1C)

The satellites would be 475 miles above the Earth, considered a low orbit. That would ensure that each point on the Earth's surface would be in a continuous line of sight with a satellite.

Iridium users would be given personal phone numbers, and someone wanting to reach users would not need to know their location, Motorola said.

Since Iridium phones would be incompatible with conventional cellular systems, a user probably would need to carry both types of phones to always be in contact. Hillis said he envisions the development of phones compatible with both systems.

Motorola, based in Schaumburg, Ill., has wide experience in satellite communications.

IBM: Easier computer unveiled

(From 1C)

The PS/1, which comes with complete Microsoft Works software, a separate monitor, a full-function keyboard, a mouse and a built-in modem, is certain to put pressure on the less expensive end of the market because IBM's pricing is aggressive by industry standards.

The Armonk, N.Y., computer giant also says it has successfully dealt with the flaws that killed its PCjr., which was withdrawn from the market in 1985 after two years.

A THINNING OBSESSION

Is the American obsession for dieting and losing weight out of control?

Has the emphisis on thinness resulted in discrimination against overweight people and are they being made to feel like "second class citizens"?

Or is the nationwide interest in maintaining weight and losing excess pounds one of the healthiest trends to come about in a long time?

In conjunction with the week-long series, "A THINNING OBSESSION", now being published, readers are invited to participate in our second SOUND-OFF on Sunday July 22. Just send your letters on any aspect of the subject :

On Thursday

Tony Smith has won all five races he's entered in this year's Sports Car Club of America West Texas circuit, but that's not good enough for the Lubbock native who now calls Midland home. The 38-year-old Smith wants to race at Indianapolis before the turn of the century, a dream he is taking calculated steps to achieve.

Sports writer Bill Grimes profiles Smith in "Front Row Seat" in Thursday's Reporter-Telegram Sports.

Correction

Last Thursday's "Front Row Seat" incorrectly reported the Midland Angels drew 106,000 fans in 1989. The figure should have read that 135,518 fans attended Texas League games at Angels Stadium last year.

UTEP allegations

UTEP head basketball coach Don Haskins denies charges in a Los Angeles Times story that says the the Miner program could be guilty of NCAA recruiting violations in the case of former UTEP recruit John Staggers. Staggers also calls the story inaccurate.

Better late than never ...

■ Midland Angels infielder Kevin Davis made his first appearance in five years at Angels Stadium count with a game-winning, two-run homer in a 7-5 Midland win Tuesday.

Staff Report

Newly-arrived Midland Angel Kevin Davis didn't expect to play any ball Tuesday, five years after the end of his first stint with the Midland Angels.

Oh, the 26-year-old veteran minor leaguer mentally prepared himself for a possible pinch-hitting, pinch-running or defensive appearance late in the game.

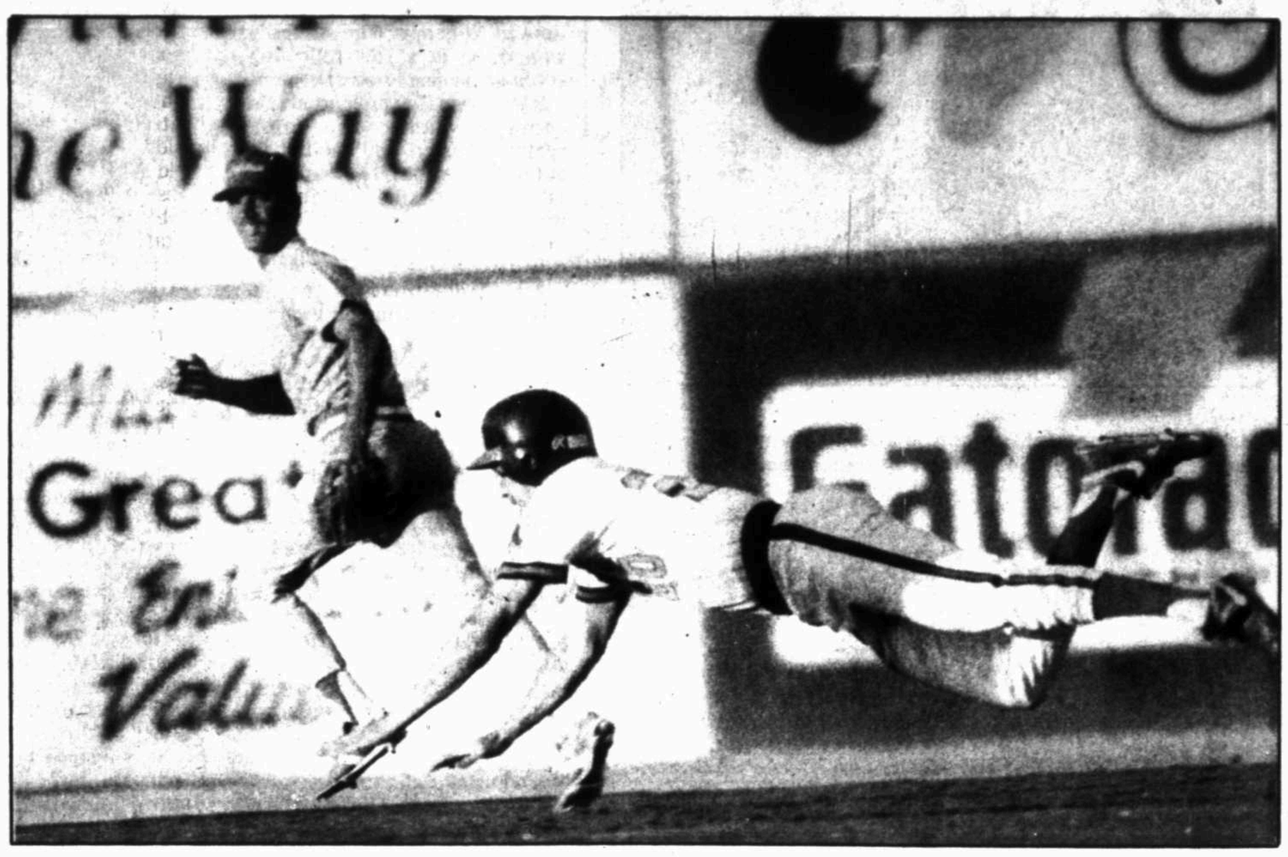

Who could expect any more, especially after Davis and teammate Howard Nichols arrived just a half-hour before the game after their promotion from Class A Palm Springs?, and five years after he batted .263 in 100 games for the M-Angels.

Little did he know...

Inserted into the game as a pinch-hitter in the second inning after starting shortstop Kevin Flora went down with a leg injury, Davis made his first appearance in five years at Angels Stadium a big one with a two-run homer in the seventh inning that propelled the Angels to a 7-5 win over the El Paso Diablos in the fifth game of a six-game series.

Davis, who had been hitting .254 at Palm Springs before his promotion, understandably was a bit surprised to play such a major role.

"I just got here in time to get my uniform on and get out on the field," he said. In fact, Davis and Nichols were playing catch on the sidelines well after game time.

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram
Midland's Reed Peters dives safely into second during Tuesday action at Angel Stadium.

It turned out to be a good thing, too. Flora got the worst of a collision with El Paso's Dee Dixon at second base in the first inning and had to leave at the end of the inning.

Davis immediately made his presence felt with a leadoff single in the second inning, and later scored the Angels' fourth run of the game on a bases-loaded walk to Luis Aguayo.

The Angels led 4-3 after five innings, but El Paso's Craig Cooper tied the score with a leadoff homer off David Martinez, the second of four Midland pitchers. The visitors then went ahead when Rafel Skeete singled, stole second, made third on a throwing error by catcher Dave Sturdivant, and scored on a wild pitch that enabled Dixon to reach first despite striking out.

Nets remain mum

■ New Jersey has the No. 1 pick in today's NBA draft, but still refuse to give an indication as to who'll be their lucky guy.

Associated Press

Coleman

Payton

The Nets made their second trade in two days on Tuesday, sending Dennis Hopson, the No. 3 selection in 1987, to Chicago for the Bulls' 22nd pick in this year's first round. On Monday, New Jersey acquired veteran guard Reggie Theus.

All the action did little to clear up the Nets' intentions concerning the top pick. Ever since they won the No. 1 selection in the draft lottery on May 20, they have sent mixed signals.

"The last couple of days, the phone has been ringing for our No. 1, so things could happen," Nets vice president Bob Casciola said. "All along we wanted to go with our No. 1 pick, but we had a lot of conversations the last two days. But nothing has come by that has knocked our blocks off."

The consensus is that the best NBA prospect is Syracuse forward Derrick Coleman, but the Nets have made no secret that they have shopped around.

Much of the speculation about a trade has centered on doubts about Coleman's mental makeup and his ability to get along with coach Bill Fitch.

Clouding the situation further is that Fitch has tried to deflect the notion that he would have problems with Coleman.

"I like him," Fitch said. "I've never had a problem with a player between the lines. Derrick wants to win. He's a winner.

"He's been a victim of a lot of things because he tends to stand out in a crowd. He's a competitor and a tough kid. There's a certain meanness to him. He's not scared of anything, and I like that about him."

Johnny Mac takes a hike

■ Still clinging to hopes that his tennis future is just beginning, John McEnroe gets angry, gets nasty and then gets beat.

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — John McEnroe, sadly older but no wiser, won a meaningless war of words while staggering wearily to a first-round loss on Wimbledon's worst day ever for seeded players.

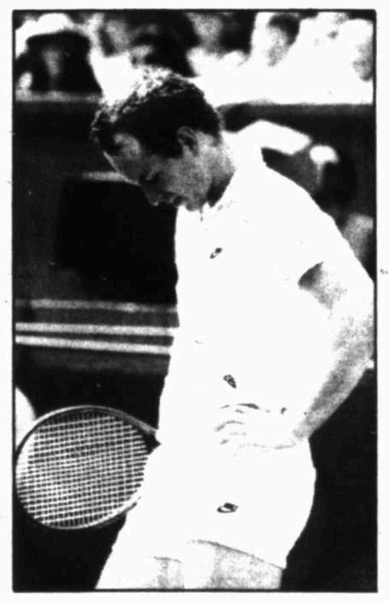

Once again, McEnroe's mouth got in the way of his talent, breaking his concentration and wasting his energy.

"If I knew the answer to why I did those things, I'd probably be senator of New York right now, at a minimum, if not the president of the United States," McEnroe said with a shrug.

McEnroe's moments of glory on Centre Court in three Wimbledon championships seemed far away Tuesday as he absorbed a relentless assault of volleys and serves by Derrick Rostagno in a 7-5, 6-4, 6-4 loss.

Five months after getting thrown out of the Australian Open, McEnroe's earliest Wimbledon exit since 1978 forced him to take a hard look at his tennis future.

"I feel pretty strongly that this is just the beginning but if I take a couple of steps in the wrong direction, in my opinion I'll be out of the game in six months,"

John McEnroe

McEnroe said.

The future looked wonderful for 14-year-old Jennifer Capriati, who followed McEnroe onto Centre Court — "I knew he would leave the court pretty hot for me" — and became the youngest winner in Wimbledon history.

Capriati's 6-3, 6-1 victory over Canada's Helen Kelesi moved the happy-go-lucky Floridian into the second round with top-seeded Steffi Graf, second-seeded Martina Navratilova, third-seeded Monica Seles and fourth-seeded Gabriela Sabatini.

Meanwhile, five of the top men's players tumbled out, including No. 4 McEnroe; No. 5 Andres Gomez, the French Open champion; No. 6 Tim Mayotte; No. 12 Pete Sampras; and No. 14 Petr Korda.

Throwing in No. 16 Yannick Noah, who lost Monday, the six first-round losses were the most by men's seeds since Wimbledon began seeding players in 1927.

No. 3 Stefan Edberg and No. 13 Michael Chang avoided the carnage to join top-seeded Ivan Lendl and No. 2 Boris Becker, who won their first-round matches Monday.

The biggest shocker, by far, was McEnroe's loss, though he conceded he was worried about the match before it began.

"It was unrealistic to think that I could come in and do a whole lot, based on what had happened in the past few months," said McEnroe, who followed his stormy Australian default with a shoulder injury. "So I really wasn't expecting a whole lot."

McEnroe said he knew the 129th-ranked Rostagno was dangerous — the Californian held two match points before losing to Becker at the U.S. Open last year and lost a tough five-setter to Jimmy Connors here two years ago.

McEnroe insisted that if he's playing well, Rostagno is "not the type of guy I

Brown, Rangers lose to Twins

Associated Press

The Minnesota Twins rallied for two runs in the bottom of the eighth inning on Gene Larkin's RBI triple and Gary Gaetti's sacrifice fly and beat the Texas Rangers, 5-4.

After Pete Incaviglia hit his 12th homer in the top of the eighth inning — the third solo home run by the Rangers — to give Texas a 4-3 lead, Dan Gladden led off the bottom of the inning with a double off Kevin Brown (9-5), who had won four straight decisions.

Despite yielding Incaviglia's homer, Juan Berenguer (5-1) got the win with two innings of relief. Rick Aguilera pitched the ninth for his 18th save in 20 opportunities as the Rangers' losing streak reached four games.

The Twins took a 1-0 lead in the third inning on Larkin's sacrifice fly and Texas tied it in the fourth on doubles by Rafael Palmeiro and Harold Baines.

Scott Coolbaugh's leadoff homer in the fifth inning, his second of the year, gave the Rangers a 2-1 lead. The Twins tied it again in the bottom of the inning when rookie Paul Sorrento singled, took second on a wild pitch, went to third on a groundout and scored on Al Newman's tapper back to Brown which the pitcher threw away.

Kent Hrbek's RBI single in the sixth inning gave the Twins a 3-2 lead but Kevin Reimer led off the Texas seventh with a home run, his first of the season and only the second of his career, a 422-foot blast to center.

Red Sox 3, Blue Jays 0

Carlos Quintana hit a two-run homer and Wes Gardner held Toronto to two hits in six innings as the Boston Red Sox blanked the Toronto Blue Jays for their fifth victory in a row.

Gardner (2-4) struck out eight, walked one and didn't give up a hit until two were out in the fifth inning as the Red Sox increased their American League East lead over Toronto to 1½ games.

After issuing his second walk to start the seventh, Gardner was replaced by Rob Murphy, who pitched two innings of one-hit relief. Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth for his 12th save, also giving up one hit.

The Red Sox, who ended a string of 15 consecutive home losses to Toronto on Monday night, tagged David Wells (5-2) for three quick runs and went on to their ninth victory in 11 games.

AL Roundup

With one out in the second, Tony Pena singled and Quintana hit Wells' next pitch over the screen atop the wall in left. It was Quintana's third home run of the season and the first of his brief career at Fenway Park.

Gardner, making his fourth start since being moved from the bullpen, retired the first 13 Toronto batters before Fred McGriff walked on a 3-2 pitch with one out in the fifth.

The only other hit off Gardner was by Junior Felix, who beat out a grounder back to the mound with one out in the sixth. Gardner then struck out Tony Fernandez for the third time and retired Kelly Gruber on a fly ball.

Yankees 8, Brewers 2

Steve Balboni singled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and hit another RBI single during a five-run eighth as the New York Yankees beat the Milwaukee Brewers in a game delayed by a power failure.

A blackout in the Bronx caused the lights to go out for 16 minutes after 3½ innings with New York leading 2-1. Balboni's hit broke a 2-2 tie and pinch- hitter Matt Nokes' three-run homer in the eighth helped send the Brewers to their third straight loss and 14 in 20 games.

Lee Guetterman (5-2), relieved Andy Hawkins and struck out Bill Spiers with a runner on second to end the seventh, gave up one hit in 2 1-3 innings. Hawkins yielded eight hits in 6 2-3 innings and remained winless in seven starts since May 6.

Dennis Powell (0-2) gave up a single to ninth-place batter Alvaro Espinoza on the first pitch in the Yankees' seventh and Roberto Kelly sacrificed. After Steve Sax flied out and Don Mattingly walked, Balboni, only 3-for-24 with runners in scoring position, singled for a 3-2 lead.

Indians 5, Orioles 3

Sandy Alomar's two-out single scored pinch-runner Stan Jefferson with the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning as the Cleveland Indians handed the Baltimore Orioles their fifth straight loss.

With one out, Ken Phelps drew a walk off Baltimore starter Pete Harnisch (7-4). Jefferson, running for Phelps, stole second and Brook Jacoby walked. After Jefferson stole third, Cory Snyder fouled out.

Padres, Bip bop Astros, 7-0

Associated Press

Dennis Rasmussen pitched and hit his way to his sixth consecutive victory over Houston, and Bip Roberts had three doubles among four hits and two RBIs as the San Diego Padres beat the Astros 7-0.

Tony Gwynn also drove in two runs and Roberto Alomar had his third straight three-hit game as the Padres won for only the ninth time in 13 games. The Astros had won three in a row following a seven-game losing streak.

Rasmussen (7-4) pitched his third complete game, two coming against Houston, and his first shutout of the season. He gave up nine hits while striking out four and walking two. Rasmussen, who had two hits and an RBI, has a 7-1 career record against Houston.

Alomar made it 2-0, tripling home Roberts, who had singled with one out in the third. Gwynn added an RBI single.

Rasmussen helped himself in the fourth with a two-out single that moved Fred Lynn, who had walked, to second. Roberts followed with one of his three doubles.

With Dan Schatzeder pitching, San Diego added two runs in the sixth. Fred Lynn hit a one-out single and moved to third on a hit by Mark Parent, who took second on the throw to third. Rasmussen singled in one run and Roberts followed with a double to make it 6-0.

Expos 6, Cubs 5

The victory was the sixth in eight games for the Expos. The loss was the 12th in 15 games for the Cubs.

Pirates 1, Phillies 0

Bob Patterson and two Pittsburgh relievers ran Philadelphia's scoreless streak to 22 innings and Jay Bell's eighth-inning single drove in the only run as the Pirates beat the sinking Phillies.

The Phillies have been shut out in three of their last four games — eight times overall — and have lost five in a row, matching their longest slide of the season. The Pirates have won three in a row and have shutouts in two straight games for the first time since Rick Rhoden and John Tudor blanked the Phillies in 1984.

Braves 4, Dodgers 2

Avery (1-1), after yielding a single in each of the first two innings, did not allow another hit until Jose Gonzalez, pinch-hitting for Mike Morgan (7-6), singled with one out in the seventh.

Reds 3, Giants 2

Ripken errorless streak ends

BALTIMORE (AP) — The errorless streak of Baltimore Orioles shortstop Cal Ripken ended at 67 games Tuesday night when he muffed a throw in the first inning against the Cleveland Indians.

Ripken had handled 296 consecutive chances at shortstop until a throw from center fielder Mike Devereaux glanced off his glove. It was Ripken's first error since April 13. His errorless streak ended five games short of the American League record for shortstops set by Detroit's Eddie Brinkman in 1972.

With one out and Jerry Browne on first, Dion James singled to center. Devereaux misplayed the ball, then threw to third in an attempt to get Browne. Ripken tried to catch the throw but it skidded off his glove and into foul territory.

Browne scored and the official scorer ruled the he reached second on Devereaux's error and came home on Ripken's miscue. Ripken has committed only three errors in his last 125 games.

Haskins calls for proof of charges

Associated Press

EL PASO — Texas-El Paso basketball coach Don Haskins said Tuesday he wants proof of allegations that his basketball coaches and players have violated NCAA rules.

Haskins said in a news conference that a Los Angeles Times article quoting former UTEP recruit John Staggers was inaccurate. Haskins also said he did not believe it.

"He needs to prove this is what he needs to do. And then I guess if he can't prove it, he'll say John Staggers told him," Haskins said.

Bill Dwyre, Los Angeles Times sports editor, said the story was written by staff writer Danny Robbins, who he called one of the top sports investigative reporters in the nation.

"It's a predictable reaction of a coach who has been rightly or wrongly accused of something," Dwyre said. "The 'kill the messenger' theory is the most predictable route that coaches and sports figures seem to take."

Staggers also said in a phone interview that the story was accurate.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association has been investigating UTEP for the past six months after published reports quoted former players saying they had been loaned cars or had been given favors by area families.

The NCAA has not formally announced any allegations against UTEP. Haskins said the basketball office is not conducting its own investigation nor has it hired outside attorneys.

Staggers said he told the NCAA he received free lodging, housing and meals from UTEP assistant coaches while living in El Paso for six weeks in 1988.

"I just wanted everybody to get it right. I wanted to set it straight ... I want everyone to know what they did," Staggers said.

Assistant coach G. Ray Johnson, who Staggers also implicated, said Staggers stayed in an apartment that belonged to basketball player Antonio Davis and former football player Rickie Evans.

"Ricky took care of the apartment and paid the bills and John was supposed to pay his share," Johnson said. Davis was out of town.

Staggers was a top college recruit during his senior year at a California high school, but never graduated. He signed a letter of intent with UTEP, but never played because he failed to pass a General Equivalency Diploma exam. He now attends Columbia Community College in California.

Staggers said he is not seeking revenge on UTEP.

"I have no beef with them. What happened, just happened. I didn't ask them to help me," Staggers said.

Haskins said he understands why the NCAA is investigating UTEP.

"If you go back and read that story, it sounds like we're doing a lot of things real bad. I don't think they'll (NCAA investigators) find that. I really don't," Haskins said.

LANGLEY, British Columbia (AP) — Doug Flutie occupied center stage on Tuesday during the British Columbia Lions' practice session, although his first workout in the CFL consisted mainly of posing for pictures and signing autographs.

"It was exciting and it's great to be in uniform and back on a football field," Flutie said. "I know what's going on and it won't take long to feel comfortable running the offense."

ANGELS: Rodriguez likes new blood

From 1D

The Diablos appeared to still have something going when Charlie Montoyo singled and Bert Heffernan tried to punch the ball into short right field.

Then with Montoyo still on first, Mark Davis made a leaping catch of Jesus Alfaro's drive to deepest center field to end the threat.

The Davises, no relation to one another, both played key roles in the game-winning rally. Mark Davis led off with a base hit, and Sturdivant followed likewise to move Davis to third.

Reed Peters then pasted the ball on one hop to third baseman Alfaro, and the Grand Old Man of the Texas League looked Mark Davis back to first, threw to second for one out, and Sandy Guerrero relayed to first to catch Peters.

Luis Merejo, 1-3, pitched an inning of scoreless relief for the win, while Brandy Vann retired the last four batters for his second save since his promotion from Palm Springs.

Tuesday's win boosted Midland's second-half record to 2-4. Midland and El Paso will wrap up their six-game series tonight at 7 p.m., after which the Haloes will host the San Antonio Missions for five game beginning Thursday.

NBA: Payton, Scott, Jackson also considered prime picks

From 1D

The 6-foot-10, 235-pound Coleman set an NCAA record with 1,537 career rebounds and the Syracuse scoring record with 2,143 points, He's also considered an outstanding passer.

But he's been criticized for lack of consistency.

"I think sometimes he played to the level of competition," Fitch said. "Playing against the best will bring out the best in him. He really wants to be great."

Following New Jersey, the next three picks belong to Seattle, Denver and Orlando, and it's expected that three perimeter players — Gary Payton of Oregon State, Dennis Scott of Georgia Tech and Chris Jackson of Louisiana State — will be grabbed quickly, but not necessarily in that order.

Payton says he would be thrilled to go to Seattle, a 41-41 team last season that got the No. 2 pick with a lucky draw in the lottery.

"I hope I go to Seattle," Payton says. "I think I can fit in there. If not, I can be happy in Denver. Basically, I want to get it over with. When my name is called, it will be a relief."

"I haven't figured out who is going to take me," said the 6-7 Scott, heralded as the top outside shooter in the draft. "Where I go doesn't matter. Obviously the first and second picks are going to make more money than 12 or 13, but all of us in the draft have dreamed of just playing in the NBA."

The 6-1 Jackson, who averaged 29 points in his two-year college career, has the skills of a shooting guard, but not the size.

"I've been playing point guard all my life and that's where I'm most comfortable," Jackson said. "But I'll play shooting guard if that's where they want me."

The remainder of the first-round draft order after Orlando is Charlotte, Minnesota, Sacramento, the Los Angeles Clippers, Miami, Golden State, Atlanta, Houston, the Clippers, Dallas, Miami, Milwaukee, New York, Dallas, Boston, Minnesota, Phoenix, New Jersey, Utah, San Antonio, Portland, Detroit and the Los Angeles Lakers.

Projected among the highest picks at guard are Kendall Gill of Illinois, Rumeal Robinson of Michigan, Bo Kimble of Loyola Marymount, Willie Burton of Minnesota and Travis Mays of Texas.

The highest-rated forwards after Scott and Coleman are Alec Kessler of Georgia, Tyrone Hill of Xavier (Ohio) and Loy Vaught of Michigan.

Overtime the rule at World Cup action

Associated Press

■ Soccer violence/8D

Dragan Stojkovic scored his second goal of the game early in overtime to lift Yugoslavia over Spain 2-1 and a place in the quarterfinals of the World Cup.

Stojkovic shot Yugoslavia ahead with 13 minutes remaining in regulation time, but Spanish striker Julio Salinas tied it five minutes later.

Midfielder Stojkovic then won it with a stunning 25-yard free kick in the second minute of extra time. His curling shot beat both the Spanish wall and goalkeeper Andoni Zubizarreta, who dived but could not reach the ball.

Yugoslavia made the final eight in the tournament for the first time in 28 years. It finished fourth in Chile in 1962.

England 1, Belgium 0

David Platt scored on a sensational volley shot with one minute to go in overtime, giving England a victory over Belgium and a spot in the World Cup quarterfinals.

In the 119th minute, when a penaly kick shootout seemed certain, midfielder Paul Gascoigne broke down the middle and was fouled. He then floated a free kick in front of the net and Platt, a substitute, turned and kicked the ball out of the air and past goalie Michel Preud'homme.

The game was preceded by rioting among English fans at Rimini, on the Adriatic coast. When English supporters reached Dall'Ara Stadium at Bologna, they found hundreds of Carabinieri paramilitary police standing guard, equipped with automatic weapons, truncheons and visored riot helmets. There were police sharpshooters armed with automatic carbines stationed on side streets.

Belgium hit the goalpost twice in the first 50 minutes as it dominated with smooth combination play. But England steadily got into the match to create one of the more entertaining second-round games.

In extra time, the teams continued to look for the decider. Preud'homme denied substitute Steve Bull with a great save on a 20-yard drive in the closest chance.

Belgium again was brilliantly led by playmaker Enzo Scifo, who rifled a 30-yard drive against the inside of the goalpost in the 50th minute. Jan Ceulemans also hit the post in the 14th minute.

England also was unlucky when John Barnes put the ball in the net in the 40th minute after a pass from Gary Lineker. But he was called offside on the play by referee Peter Mikkelsen of Denmark.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Spontaneous decisions will bring the best results now. Financial loose ends can be tied up and forgotten in September. In November, charitable efforts will benefit you as well as others. Share your hopes and dreams with good friends. Your powers of persuasion will reach their peak in January 1991. Save a special business proposal until February and you will have much to celebrate. Next March and April are a very special time for romance. Show your tender side.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Tackle minor repair jobs before they grow larger. Joint finances could be a sensitive subject. Resist the temptation to gamble. Romance will be uppermost in your thoughts this evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A wonderful day for real estate ventures. Limit your tax liability. Luxury purchases are best postponed. The financial decisions you make now are sound. Resist the temptation to say, "I told you so."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Use a conventional approach when dealing with someone conservative. A luncheon meeting could lead to new business. A piece of good luck reinforces your romantic hopes. Put your best foot forward.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will be pleased with what you are able to accomplish at work today. Let your artistic side show through. Travel produces wonderful results now. Handle your money with greater care.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Progress at work will be slow but sure. Be thankful for, not envious of, a friend's good fortune. Sentiment plays a major role in a business decision you make today. Confide in a close pal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Romantic happiness should be yours if you exercise patience. Have more confidence in yourself. Discuss a financial situation openly with mate or partner. A close friend repays a favor.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put the finishing touches on an important work project. An old friend will bring you good news. Romance enters a brighter phase. Group efforts pay off handsomely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Deal with vocational challenges as they arise. Falling behind at work could hamper your long-range career plans. Romance shows new promise. Hold fast to your dreams. Some couples set the date.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Timely correspondence can advance your career. Your ability to write succinctly is a tremendous asset. Resist a fast-talker who advocates a get-rich-quick scheme. Romance becomes more complicated.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You feel more ambitious than ever today. Negotiate from a position of strength and sign important papers. The money picture improves. Romance looks lively. Devote more time to family life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid being overly critical of your co-workers. Their cooperation is vital to the successful completion of a business deal. A social event should be postponed if it conflicts with a business obligation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Loved ones will go out of their way to help you. Show your appreciation in a meaningful way. Let romance develop slowly. You may be more comfortable socializing with people your own age.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have a vivid imagination and tend to dramatize things. Wise parents will recognize these youngsters' deep need for attention and give them plenty of quality time. Cancerians who feel ignored may become hypochondriacs, fretting over every little scratch. Making a final decision can be tough on today's children; they always wonder about the road not taken. Encourage them to make a choice and stick to it.

Opening lead: King of ♠

We have often stressed that aces were made to capture kings, and that as a rule it is correct to win a trick when you can. While true in most cases, there are always exceptions to these generalities.

The auction needs some explanation. North-South were employing five-card major opening bids with forcing no trump responses. Thus, North's bidding, in effect, said he had a hand good enough to force to game, but with only three-card heart support. South had no further ambitions. West's failure to overcall is surprising, but that's what happened at the table.

West cashed two spade tricks and continued the suit for declarer to ruff. South led the king of trumps and let's see what would have happened had West followed the sage advice we previously offered of beheading the monarch with the ace.

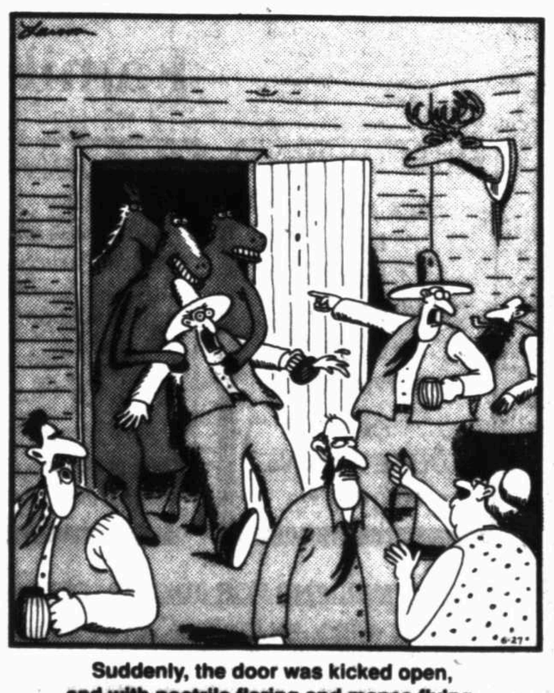

If West perseveres with spades, declarer ruffs in dummy, draws trumps and claims the rest of the tricks for his contract. No other return does any damage, either.

Now let's see what happens if West, cagey fellow, holds up the ace of trumps and holds up again when declarer continues with the queen of hearts. Declarer can save a trick by abandoning trumps, but since West will surely ruff away one of declarer's minor-suit winners if he is left with his low trump, South probably will continue to draw trumps.

However, West can pounce on the third trump with the ace and, now that the table's trumps are exhausted, force out declarer's last trump by reverting to spades. West is left with the only trump in town and declarer cannot avoid going down two tricks.

Stormie Jones has hepatitis

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Doctors at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh said Tuesday that pioneer transplant recipient Stormie Jones developed hepatitis in her second transplanted liver, leaving her in serious condition.

The 13-year-old girl from White Settlement, Texas, was admitted to the hospital Saturday for testing, spokeswoman Margy Buczynski said.

Hospital spokeswoman Lynn McMahon said Stormie's condition was downgraded from fair to serious Tuesday after tests confirmed she had hepatitis, an infectious inflammation of the liver.

Hepatitis also damaged Stormie's first transplanted liver, which was removed in February.

Stormie made medical history in 1984 when she became the world's first heart-liver transplant recipient. The operation took place on Valentine's Day at Children's Hospital.

The girl received a second liver in February of this year, also at the Pittsburgh hospital. Last month she suffered a mild episode of liver rejection and returned to Children's for tests. Doctors adjusted the dosage of her anti-rejection medication.

Stormie's latest visit to Pittsburgh was prompted by episodes of fatigue and a change in her liver enzyme levels while at home in Texas, Ms. Buczynski said.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Paul Mellon, a member of one of the families that founded Carnegie Mellon University, has given $5 million to the school, officials said Tuesday.

Mellon's gift will be used toward the construction of a campus performing arts center. The center is expected to cost $10 million.

"A vibrant performing arts center will enhance Carnegie Mellon's strength in arts education and the university's role as one of Pittsburgh's great cultural resources," Mellon said in a statement.

Mellon made his donation as part of a five-year campaign he started in 1986 with a $10 million gift. The campaign exceeded its $200 million goal by $4 million with Mellon's latest gift, officials said.

Mellon, who was raised in Pittsburgh but now lives in Virginia, is an honorary trustee of the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. He retired as chairman and trustee of the National Gallery in 1985.

"I've always felt that the script was at the heart of the movie," Eszterhas said. "If you're going to pay actors and directors, there's nothing wrong with paying the writer, too."

Eszterhas, who wrote the screenplays for "Jagged Edge," "Betrayed" and "The Music Box," generally commands more than $1 million for a movie script.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor James Caan will marry a woman raised in the same New York City neighborhood where he grew up two decades earlier, his publicist said.

Caan

Caan, 49, and Ingrid Hajek, 29, announced their engagement Tuesday and said they plan to marry later this year, said spokesman Paul Bloch.

"They grew up a few blocks apart in Sunnyside, New York, and went to the same public school, P.S. 150," said Bloch. "However, they only met two years ago when they were introduced by mutual friends."

It will be Miss Hajek's second marriage and Caan's third, Bloch said.

Caan, who was nominated for an Academy Award for his role in "The Godfather" and an Emmy for "Brian's Song," has two children, Scott, 13, who lives with the actor in Los Angeles, and daughter Tara.

DETROIT (AP) — Ze'ev Chafets, a former Israeli government spokesman and native of Michigan, has written a book about Detroit that depicts it as the nation's first Third World city.

"Devil's Night and Other True Tales of Detroit," to be published by Random House this fall, says Detroit has a black leadership that sees itself engaged in a struggle with a white-dominated world.

Chafets, 43, was born in nearby Pontiac. After emigrating to Israel in 1969, he spent five years in the Israeli army and became a government spokesman under then-Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

The idea for the book came when he watched Devil's Night arson during a return visit to the Detroit area, Chafets said.

Chafets, author of three other books, describes the racial polarization in metropolitan Detroit between the majority black central city of 1 million people and the suburbs, whose 3.2 million residents are overwhelmingly white.

"The city and suburbs are separated by a cultural and emotional gap as wide as any that divides hostile nations," he writes.

Violent shenanigans won't leave World Cup alone

Associated Press

ROME — The World Cup just can't shake the ugly specter of violence.

No matter how good the action is on the field, what is happening off it is marring the world soccer championships.

It happened again Tuesday, when Yugoslavia beat Spain 2-1 in overtime to advance to the quarterfinals. That game was in Verona, 125 miles from Rimini, where the latest clashes between fans and police took place late Monday night and extended into early Tuesday.

In what a British spokeswoman called "the worst incident involving English fans" at the World Cup, 246 supporters of England's soccer team were taken into custody. They were to be expelled from Italy and flown back to London.

This was just the latest incidence of confrontation. Previously, English fans went at it with police and with locals on the island of Sardinia. West German and Yugoslav fans battled in Milan.

The World Cup is supposed to be about soccer. Too often, it is about things like rock and bottle-throwing, tear gas and truncheons.

In Rimini, a resort on the Adriatic where English fans had gathered before traveling to Bologna for their team's game Tuesday night against Belgium, the fans were drinking in a bar and "started throwing bottles at the Italians and car windows were smashed," British Embassy spokeswoman Kay Coombs said.

The fighting spread throughout downtown Rimini and onto the waterfront and beaches. Shop windows were smashed and cars damaged before police restored order after calling in reinforcements from surrounding towns.

England's fans were being tested at this tournament. Their behavior would help determine if the country's soccer clubs could return to European competitions after being barred in 1985, when 39 fans, most Italians, died in a riot at the European Cup of Champions final in Brussels.

"This will not help the English teams to make a fast return to European cup competitions," said Lennart Johansson, president of UEFA, the European soccer federation. "I don't think we should hurry up with the issue on the English teams' European comeback."

"There were groups of Italian hooligans going around and charging the English," said Sid Cook, 21. "The English got together and fought back. The Italians were marching toward us and throwing stones at us and the police were not doing anything to them."

Outside Dall'Ara Stadium in Bologna, hundreds of Carabinieri paramilitary police stood guard, equipped with automatic weapons, truncheons and visored riot helmets. There were police sharpshooters armed with automatic carbines stationed on side streets.

In Rome, a group of Italian youths celebrating the nation's 2-0 win over Uruguay on Monday night scuffled with police and damaged cars. Five people were taken into custody for resisting arrest and causing damage.

Oh, yes, there was soccer, too.

Yugoslavia's Dragan Stojkovic scored twice, once on a free kick in extra time that was the difference. The Yugoslavs, who next play defending champion Argentina on Saturday in Florence, made the final eight in the tournament for the first time in 28 years.

should lose to. But he's capable of playing very high caliber tennis and he did. He played a good match."

Neither a new racket designed to give McEnroe more power, nor a collection of old tapes of his triumphs that he hoped would inspire him, helped much.

McEnroe looked sluggish and heavy on his feet from the start. He had trouble moving in quickly enough to pick up half-volleys of short shots by Rostagno, and was broken at love in the third game of the first set.

McEnroe began complaining about calls in the next game, staring at a spot where he thought Rostagno had hit wide on a serve that was called good. McEnroe lost the point and was still brooding about it after Rostagno hit a service winner to take the game.

McEnroe continued to complain to the umpire, Steve Winyard, about several other calls in the first set, particularly in the final game when Rostagno served out after an exchange of breaks.

McEnroe never lost control of his temper as he did in Australia, perhaps because he was thinking that another $1,000 in fines would keep him out of the U.S. Open, his favorite tournament.

"It's important for me to be able to play there," he said. "That's where I'm from. I don't feel like I was holding back, in that sense, but it was definitely" on his mind.

"The fact that I was in that position (added) more pressure than was necessary."

Not much separated the two players — Rostagno displayed a little more power and quickness, McEnroe a little more variety — and the match turned on Rostagno's breaks of McEnroe's serve in the fifth game of each of the next two sets. For all his antics, McEnroe couldn't break Rostagno's serve after the first set.

The big blowup that may have cost McEnroe the match came after he won an argument and just before the second-set break. Rostagno, serving at deuce, hit a first serve that was called good. McEnroe returned the ball long then complained that the serve was out.

McEnroe pointed to the Cyclops electronic eye used to call serves and complained it had been wrong several times. Winyard asked the line judge for her opinion, and she signaled the serve out. Winyard then decided to play the point over.

Rostagno, who later claimed "the umpire was succumbing to all the pressure — anything McEnroe asked the umpire to do, he did," came over to voice his opinion. A lengthy rhubarb ensued, with two other officials coming out to join in, but in the end the point was replayed.

The crowd, restrained throughout the match, cheered wildly when McEnroe hit long on Rostagno's next serve, and roared again when Rostagno won the game on the following point.

Rostagno, who occasionaly practices with McEnroe, said he didn't know if he could have beaten the McEnroe who won Wimbledon in such grand style in 1980, 1981 and 1984.

"I didn't play him 10 years ago, but he was definitely in my dreams," said Rostagno, 24. "That is where I always wanted to be."

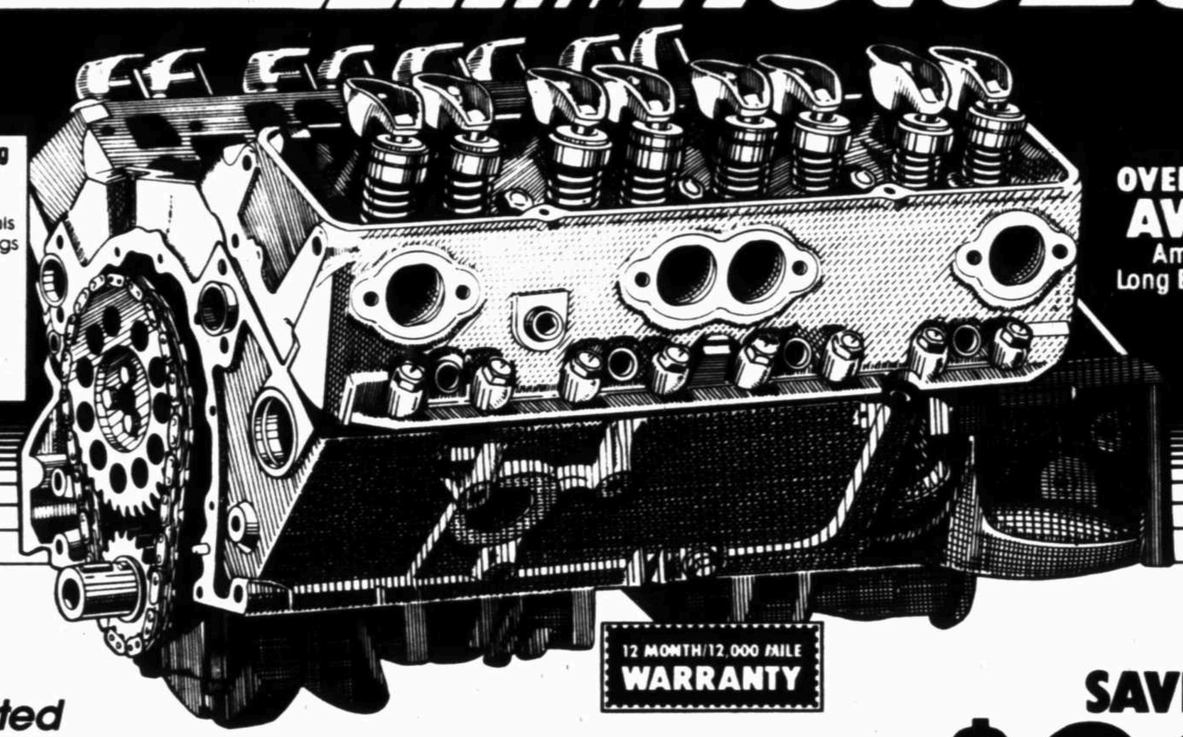

McEnroe, 31, blamed his loss on more than a lack of conditioning but said he didn't think his career is quite over. The keys, he said, are desire and ability, and he has to decide whether he still has enough of both. Meanwhile, he still must contend with his temper, which got him thrown out of the Australian Open in January.

"I think (the default) made my attitude worse," he said. "Significantly worse. And that's one of the things I need to overcome. That really set me back a lot farther than I realized. I let it bother me a lot more than I probably should have. But it's like anything else that's happened. I have no one to blame but myself."

Mandela asks Congress for aid in anti-apartheid struggle

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nelson Mandela urged Congress Tuesday to supplement economic sanctions against South Africa with "material resources" to hasten the end of white-minority rule. "Our people demand democracy," the celebrated black leader said.

Mandela made an impassioned plea for justice in his historic address to a joint session of Congress, comparing the struggle of South African blacks with that of America's founding fathers.

The one-time prisoner was accorded the kind of reception from Congress normally reserved for U.S. presidents. His entrance was greeted with a 2½-minute ovation and there was even longer applause from the packed House chamber when he finished.

"Our people demand democracy. Our country, which continues to bleed and suffocate, needs democracy," he said.

At an evening rally attended by more than 19,000 people in the city's Convention Center, Mandela again called for the United States to maintain its economic sanctions against his country, but he also called for financial assistance to the nation once the apartheid system is abolished.

"New investment will play a key role in this respect," he told an often cheering crowd of thousands.

"We need to mobilize the country for peace," Mandela said. "We need to train personnel for economic recovery. ... For all this we shall continue to rely on your firm support."

Mandela said he had been encouraged by his trip to the United States.

"The masses of the American people are with us, both Congress (the House) and the Senate are with us; surely apartheid must go," he said.

Mandela's tardiness of more than an hour prevented him from speaking at a private $1,000-per-person reception before the rally, and he apologized for that in his speech. He said the unspecified amount raised would be devoted to "the struggling masses of South Africa."

Mandela was introduced by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who apologized for U.S. complicity in his arrest by the South African government 27 years ago.

"Our CIA was a factor in your arrest," Jackson said. "We are ashamed of that."

In his speech Congress, Mandela appealed to the senators and House members to let the "people of South Africa" — not the U.S. government — be the ones to judge when the sanctions imposed by Congress four years ago should be lifted.

Standing before the assembled lawmakers, Cabinet members and foreign ambassadors, Mandela skirted the controversial issues that have arisen since he began his U.S. tour last Wednesday. He made no reference to his support for anti-American radicals, such as Libya's Moammar Gadhafi, and did not reiterate directly his view that violence is a useful tool in the anti-apartheid struggle.

He was at pains, however, to praise American founding fathers, such as George Washington, who resorted to armed confrontation in the American war of independence. He compared the struggle of South African blacks to that two-century-old struggle.

"We would be fools to believe that the road ahead of us is without major hurdles. Too many among our white compatriots are slaves in the ideology of racism to admit easily that change must come," he said. "For those who care to worry about violence in our country as we do, it is at these forces that they should focus their attention."

The lifting of the sanctions is expected to be an issue of heated debate, and Mandela appealed to the lawmakers to leave the decision to South Africans.

In addressing the Congress, Mandela was virtually guaranteed a friendly audience. It was the Congress, four years ago, which overrode President Reagan's veto and imposed a ban on new investments in South Africa.

The only other private citizens who have addressed a joint meeting were Solidarity leader Lech Walesa of Poland last year and the Marquis de Lafayette in 1824.

Mandela visit 'neat' for Texas lawmaker

WASHINGTON (AP) — No day in the 16-plus years Rep. Craig Washington has spent in government was like Tuesday.

"He's strong and resolute, yet small and semi-frail. He's determined and courageous," said Washington, Texas' newest and only black congressman. "You can look in his eyes and tell he has his eyes fixed on a star."

The congressman said meeting Mandela was "the neatest thing I've ever done in government."

Mandela, the deputy president of the African National Congress who was freed a few months ago after spending 27 years in jail, was in Washington on a tour of the United States.

He met President Bush Monday and on Tuesday became only the third private citizen to address a joint session of Congress.

Before his speech, Mandela met with the Congressional Black Caucus, where Washington shook his hand and they chatted briefly. Washington later attended Mandela's appearance before caucus staff members and then his address to the Congress.

"He knows in his heart that justice will prevail," said Washington, a Democrat whose central Houston district is predominantly black and Hispanic.

Washington said Mandela embodies hope for the future: "His message is of the future, not of the past."

Barry's testimony differs from confessed dealer's

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mayor Marion Barry told a grand jury he had neither given nor gotten drugs from a man who later pleaded guilty to drug dealing, according to tapes played Tuesday at Barry's cocaine and perjury trial. He said he saw nothing "unusual or criminal" in visits to the man's hotel room.

Barry

Charles Lewis testified at the trial last week that he and the mayor smoked crack cocaine on each of four Barry visits to Lewis' hotel room.

The January 1989 grand jury tapes include new material as well as previously released statements — Barry's responses to questions about whether he knew Lewis was involved with drugs, and his denials that he ever gave Lewis drugs or that Lewis gave him drugs — that form the basis for the three felony perjury charges the mayor faces.

For example, the tapes indicate that on Dec. 22, 1988, the day Barry's links to Lewis were becoming public, the mayor visited three people who law enforcement officials have said could eventually be called to testify about his alleged drug use.

Barry testified before the grand jury in two appearances a few weeks after a police operation aimed at Lewis was called off when city officers learned Barry was with him at a downtown hotel.

Since that episode, Assistant U.S. Attorney Judith Retchin asked Barry during the grand jury proceeding, "have you talked with anyone or has anyone come to your attention who you believe has information about Charles Lewis' connection with narcotics or drugs of any kind?"

"No ... I had gotten the feeling, again, just an impression from having known him over the years, having seen him in the Virgin Islands, that one, Chuck Lewis was not a drug dealer and two, I didn't get the impression that he used drugs," Barry said.

When asked by Retchin whether he had ever given Lewis "anything of value," Barry responded, "No. If you're getting at — I've never given Mr. Lewis any cocaine or any other drugs. Announce that right up front."

In addition to the perjury felony charges, Barry, 54, also has been charged with 10 misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession and one misdemeanor cocaine conspiracy count. He has pleaded innocent to all 14 charges.

His taped testimony differed from Lewis' version on minor as well as major points. For example, Barry said his Dec. 19, 1988, visit with Lewis lasted an hour or less. Lewis testified that he and the mayor smoked crack cocaine well into Dec. 20 and long past the end of the Monday night football game they had been watching.

Also, Barry told the grand jury he thought his first visit to Lewis' hotel room in Washington took place on Dec. 17, while Lewis testified it was a day earlier.

"Was there anything unusual about the (Dec. 17) visit?" Assistant U.S. Attorney Retchin asked Barry during his grand jury testimony.

In a Jan. 24 1989, grand jury session, Barry also described how he attempted to handle revelations that he had paid repeated visits to Lewis' hotel room. The mayor detailed a telephone conversation with top police officials, and said he met a man — now considered a possible witness against him — who noted the mayor's anxiety about the situation.

Barry told the grand jury he first learned of the developing revelations from one of his security guards while he was visiting the hotel room of Willie Davis, a former aide to Birmingham, Ala., Mayor Richard Arrington.

Davis, Crenshaw and Mohammadi are considered potential witnesses at the trial, according to law enforcement sources who have commented only on condition they not be named.

Visiting circus elephants are cooled off in Phoenix Tuesday as temperatures soared to 122 degrees. On Monday, the city set an all-time temperature record of 120 degrees, breaking the old one by 2 degrees.

PHOENIX (AP) — Air conditioners whined. Swimming pools beckoned. But there was no getting around it — it was hot here Tuesday, 122 degrees worth of hot, hot enough to ground planes. It was the hottest day on record in America's hottest big city.

A heat wave that stretched from the Southern California coast to the heart of Texas reached its sweltering peak in Phoenix, which set an all-time record of 120 degrees on Monday and promptly broke it a day later.

At 2:47 p.m. it was 122, and a short time later Sky Harbor International Airport ordered all airlines to cancel takeoffs, said airport spokesman Rick Martinez. Most airlines appeared to be resuming flights later in the afternoon, as temperatures dropped.

The National Weather Service advised the metropolitan area's 2.1 million residents to stay indoors, carry plenty of water when driving and not leave pets or children inside parked cars.

It was the first time planes had been grounded because of heat in the history of Sky Harbor, the world's 20th busiest airport, Martinez said.

"Temperature is really critical on takeoff," Martinez said. "People are staying in the gates, waiting for the temperature to go down."

"It is what we consider a severe weather condition, not unlike your northern California fog conditions or similar weather conditions," said America West Airlines spokesman Dick Shimizu. America West canceled its takeoffs at 3:30 p.m.; they resumed at 4:20 p.m., airline officials said.

The state didn't swelter alone.

Borrego Springs, Calif., in the Anza-Borrego Desert had Monday's nationwide high of 122 degrees, and the weather service reported temperatures above 110 degrees in low deserts from the coastal mountains eastward to New Mexico.

NATION IN BRIEF

Cabinet enters into owl row

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration announced preliminary plans for saving the threatened northern spotted owl Tuesday, contending it can be done with a far-less-drastic reduction in timber cutting than government scientists say. Even so, 1,000 Northwest logging jobs would be lost.

For the second time in a week, officials delayed issuing a complete proposal to support their public hopes that the bird can be saved without economically devastating the region by greatly restricting timber cutting.

Tuesday's outlook from Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter and Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan Jr. was in stark contrast to estimates by government scientists that timber-cutting reductions that would cost 28,000 jobs by the end of the decade would be necessary to save the owl's habitat in the Northwest's old-growth forests.

Environmental groups said in advance they would likely challenge in court any action short of that.

Zoo's flamingos killed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Vandals have brutally attacked and killed four prized Chilean flamingos at San Francisco Zoo, authorities said.

"We're just stunned here," the zoo's director, David Anderson, said Monday. "We never thought we'd have to build a zoo to keep people out of its exhibits — just to keep the animals in."

Police are examining fingerprints from a beer bottle that was left near a cage. Anderson said the intruders scaled a perimeter fence and used a long metal pole to batter the animals in their specially constructed habitat.

The birds have been a feature at the zoo for 15 years and are worth about $1,000 each. The flamingo flock is now reduced to 28.

GAO suggests delay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators reported Tuesday that the fate of the endangered Mount Graham red squirrel has become precarious and raised new objections to a planned observatory on the Arizona mountaintop that is its only home.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, suggested that 1988 legislation authorizing construction of the $200 million observatory be changed to permit a delay while new studies are undertaken to weigh the impact of the installation on the squirrel's chances for survival.

In testimony before four House environmental subcommittees, James Duffus III, natural resources director of the General Accounting Office, sharply questioned the validity of a 1988 study by the Interior Department's Fish and Wildlife Service, which concluded that building the observatory would not pose an unacceptable risk to the squirrel.

Abortion bill debated

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The Louisiana Senate, hoping to overturn the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade decision, approved an abortion bill Tuesday that prohibits abortion even in cases of rape and incest.

The bill, passed by the House last week, would send doctors who perform abortions to prison for 10 years of hard labor. It would be the toughest state abortion law in the country.

The House will get the bill again, possibly as early as Wednesday, to vote on amendments the Senate added to clarify that abortion would be allowed to save the life of the mother.

Then it would head to Gov. Buddy Roemer, who has promised to veto the bill in its present form.

SHERIFF'S DEPARTMENT TEXAS MIDLAND COUNTY

Residents of Midland County:

We would like to remind everyone that the NATIONAL NIGHT OUT AGAINST CRIME will be held again on August 7, 1990. This is a night which is set aside for everyone to turn on all their outside lights, go outside and meet your neighbors and learn more about reducing crime in your neighborhoods.

Many neighbors are organizing block parties, barbeques, ice cream socials, Neighborhood Watch meetings and other gatherings to correspond with this event. Other activities are being scheduled also, and we would like for everyone to participate this year. Now is the time to start planning and we would be grateful if you would let us know of your group's activities so that you can be recognized for your participation.

In 1989 Midland received national recognition for the level of citizen participation and we want to make this the best year yet!

For more information please contact Sgt. John McDaniel or Deputy Phillip Buys at 688-1014 or 688-1015.

Discovery of blimp, planes thrills crew

By Noel K. Wilson

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After 55 years at the bottom of the sea, the last U.S. dirigible and two rare Sparrowhawk scout planes were located in 1,500 feet of chilly water by a tiny Navy submarine.

The 785-foot-long Macon was returning to Moffett Field, about 45 miles south of San Francisco, when it was damaged in a storm on Feb. 12, 1935, and settled into the sea. It was carrying a crew of 83 and four Sparrowhawks.

Lifeboats saved 81 of the crew, but the Macon slid beneath the surface about 100 miles south of San Francisco and disappeared. It was spotted on Sunday by the three-man crew of the titanium-hulled Seacliff, which had been commissioned to find the wreck.

"It's a delightful surprise!" said squadron leader Henry Miller, now 87, the only Macon crewman still alive.

The dirigible, which was about four times as long as the popular Goodyear blimps, went down after a tail fin snapped in heavy wind and rain, puncturing three helium cells, according to John Sanders, a spokesman at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey.

Recalling the accident, Miller said it was "obvious the ship was a goner" after it began losing altitude. As the deflated tail section dragged the airship downward, the captain sent several men to the nose to try to balance the ship.

Sanders said searchers have always looked south of the lighthouse for the wreckage, but apparently the Macon was dragged north by the California Undercurrent. A clue discovered in the late 1970s helped solve the puzzle.

A piece of the Macon was pulled from the water by fisherman Dave Canepa, and it eventually wound up hanging on the wall of a restaurant. Chris Grech of the Monterey Bay Aquarium, one of a small group of people looking for the wreck, heard about the junk hanging on the dining room wall and traced it back to Canepa.

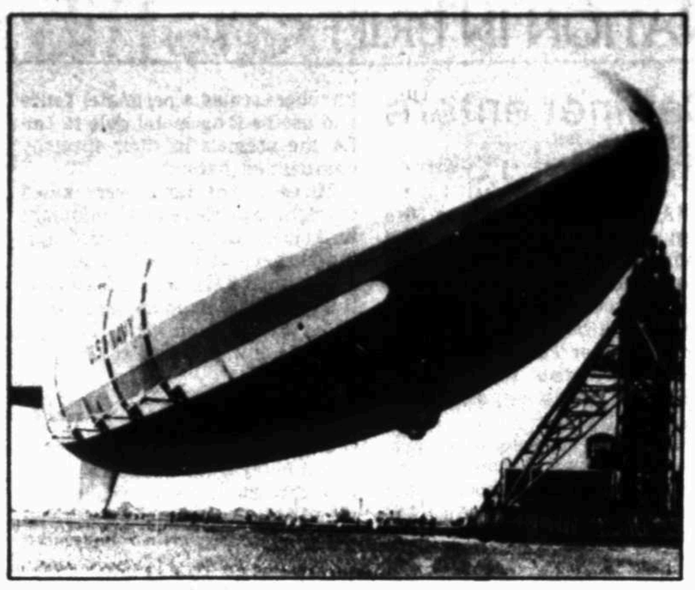

Canepa, who says he "never threw any of my (fishing) records away," told Grech where he found the debris. Grech passed it on to the Navy.

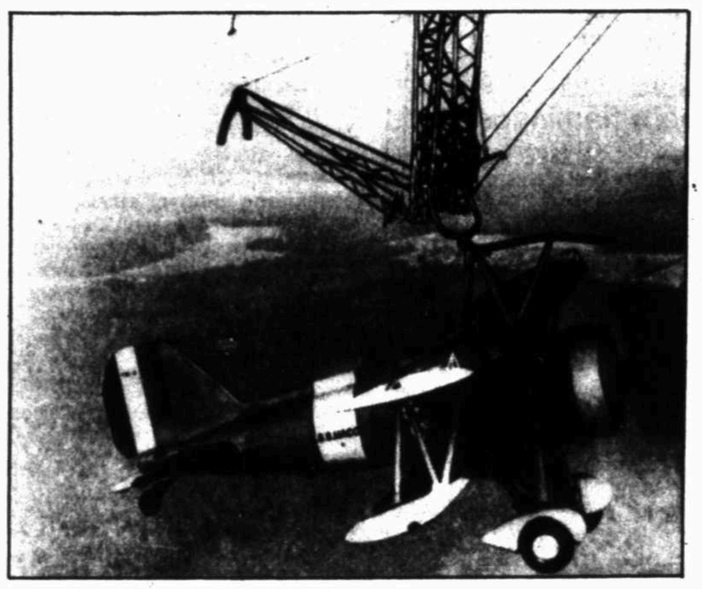

The discovery is a "tremendous find for aviation museums," said Sanders. Only one intact Sparrowhawk exists, on display at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

"They were the most beautiful little planes I ever flew," Miller said.

The Sea Cliff discovered the wreck in just 15 minutes on the first dive, pilot Lt. Pat Scanlon said. Scanlon said the airship's frame was collapsed, but the crew could see two Sparrowhawks intact.

The Macon crash followed the crash of its sibling ships, the Akron and Shenandoah, both of which were lost in storms. The three crashes doomed the Navy's plans to expand the lighter-than-air program.

Checking fees up, survey suggests

By Dave Skidmore

WASHINGTON (AP) — Checking fees have jumped 28 percent in seven years, with the typical holder of a regular account paying $108 a year, according to a consumer group survey released Tuesday.

The Consumer Federation of America said fees on regular, non-interest checking accounts averaged $107.96, while fees on interest-paying NOW accounts averaged $111.39.

Compared with a similar survey in 1988, regular checking account fees are up 6.7 percent, while NOW account fees rose 6.4 percent. Compared with the group's first survey in 1983, regular fees are 28 percent higher and NOW fees 62.3 percent greater.

The consumer group collected information in March from 170 banks and savings institutions in 16 states and the District of Columbia. Comparisons between 1990 and 1988, however, are based only on the 111 institutions included in both surveys.

The non-profit group, representing 240 consumer organizations around the country, is using the survey results in its push for legislation requiring banks to cash government checks for non-customers and to provide low-fee accounts to the poor and the elderly.

Sen. Henry Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, is trying to attach a provision requiring check-cashing to housing legislation pending on the Senate floor. The House and Senate banking committees are considering truth-in-savings bills that would require financial institutions to disclose fee and interest rate information in a uniform manner.

Bankers are fighting government-imposed low-fee accounts, arguing that there is more than enough competition among banks to keep fees reasonable.

"Banks are businesses, not public utilities, and their prices reflect their costs of doing business with a margin for profit," the American Bankers Association said in a statement.

The bankers' group said 59 percent of 856 banks surveyed last year offered special low-fee accounts for basic checking service.

Ken McEldowney, executive director of Consumer Action, a San Francisco group, said banks are competing for wealthier customers by offering high interest rates on certificates of deposit. To offset the high rates, banks are raising fees on smaller accounts, he said.

Board denies parole for Sirhan

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — Sirhan B. Sirhan, who shot Sen. Robert F. Kennedy to death 22 years ago, was denied parole Tuesday for the 13th time.

After a hearing of more than five hours in Soledad Prison, Sirhan was told his next parole hearing would be in 1992.

Commissioner David Brown, one of the three Board of Prison Terms members, said parole was denied "because the prisoner committed a political assassination, which is unique in American history."

Sirhan, now 46, was convicted of gunning down Kennedy on June 5, 1968, in the pantry of Los Angeles' Ambassador Hotel. Kennedy, who had just won California's Democratic primary, died early the next day.

Sirhan is serving a life term in prison. He was sentenced to death in 1969, but the sentence was reduced to life imprisonment in 1972 after the state Supreme Court struck down the death penalty.

6 die while battling Arizona forest fire

PAYSON, Ariz. (AP) — Six firefighters battling an erratic wildfire in intense heat died Tuesday and at least five others were hospitalized with serious burns, authorities said.

Four of the injured firefighters were prison inmates who were among the 1,000 people battling a blaze on a mountain ridge about 90 miles northeast of Phoenix.

The fire was sparked by lightning Monday, but the wind Tuesday began pushing the 1,900-acre fire past firelines on the Mogollon Rim, he said.

The injured inmates were part of a group of 18 or 19 prisoners and two officials the Perryville state prison assigned to help fight the fire, said Corrections Department spokesman Mike Arra.

Buckey defense rests case; Case going to jury Monday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The defense rested Tuesday in the second molestation trial of Raymond Buckey, and the judge told jurors the case would be theirs to decide within two weeks.

Buckey, the final defense witness, denied he ever molested children. The prosecution called as its first witness the defendant's mother, Peggy McMartin Buckey, who was acquitted of all charges in the marathon case earlier this year.

She confirmed that she once "checked" her son to make sure he was not being sexually aroused by a child sitting on his lap. But she said she saw no sign of such arousal or of any misconduct on his part.

During cross-examination by her son's lawyer, Mrs. Buckey told jurors she had been accused by two of the same children now accusing her son and she had been acquitted.

"Have you ever been convicted of molesting children?" the attorney asked.

"Never!" Mrs. Buckey said indignantly.

After she left the stand, Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg told jurors to return Thursday for brief prosecution rebuttal testimony. He said final arguments would begin Monday and the case would be submitted to jurors July 9.

The case began with jury selection April 10, and testimony has taken less than two months in marked contrast to the first trial, which lasted nearly three years.

Buckey, who testified that he did not "dress to molest" said outside court he felt the prosecution's extensive questioning about whether he wore underwear while teaching preschool was an example of a prosecution case based on "innuendo."

"I didn't wear underwear," he said. "That doesn't mean I was a child molester." He added, "I wasn't the only person in the South Bay to not wear underwear. But I was the dumbest one not to wear it to preschool."

The prosecution has hammered away at the fact that the defendant had a habit of not wearing underwear when he was teaching at his family's Manhattan Beach nursery school.

Deputy District Attorney Pam Ferrero has suggested Buckey did so because it made it easier to expose himself to children. Buckey said he went without underwear because he found that manner of dress more comfortable.

"No," said Buckey.

"Did you ever dress to expose yourself to children or other people?" Davis asked.

"No," Buckey responded.

"Is it possible that at the preschool you exposed yourself to other people," asked Davis.

"It seems I did," said Buckey.

Buckey is being retried on eight charges not resolved by the jury in the first McMartin trial, which ended in January with Buckey acquitted of 40 counts of molestation and his mother, Peggy McMartin Buckey, 62, acquitted of 12 charges.

Panel to study minority clout

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Organization for Women said Tuesday the U.S. political process is unresponsive to women, minorities and young people, and named a panel of prominent Americans to help improve it.

"We have many, many obstacles to overcome," said NOW President Molly Yard. "There are many groups that agree ... that it's time to take another look at our democracy."

Yard said there were too few women, minority or young officeholders, and politicians now in power aren't addressing the concerns of those groups.

The Commission for Responsive Democracy stems from a resolution adopted last year at the National NOW Conference. The resolution created a stir because it was interpreted as a call for a third political party.

Yard said Tuesday that a third party was only one option to be considered at six regional hearings by the commission, which includes two past third-party presidential candidates.

"We intend to be open-minded," she said. "Our conclusions will depend upon what we hear. The whole history of third parties has clearly been important in the development of American political life."

She said the Republican Party descended from a third party; George Wallace's third-party presidential bid forced both major parties to the right; and the National Woman's Party at the beginning of the century is cited by some as the reason women won the right to vote.

Asked about the reaction of the Democratic and Republican parties to the commission, Yard said she hoped they would testify and welcome whatever recommendations the panel develops.

"Surely no political leader in this country believes we have a perfect system," she said. "If they do, they're like Rip van Winkle and haven't waked up from their sleep yet."

Yard cited the difficulty of raising money and defeating incumbents as two major problems for women and minorities.

In addition to the third-party option, the NOW commission is expected to examine proposals such as setting up a shadow cabinet; eliminating political action committees; public financing of elections; reforms in the use of television during campaigns; and mail and same-day registration of voters.

Among the panel members are: Rose Bird, former chief justice of the California Supreme Court; former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark; former New Mexico Gov. Toney Anaya; former presidential candidates John Anderson and Barry Commoner; essayist Barbara Ehrenreich and poet Robin Morgan; and retired Rear Adm. Gene La Rocque, director of the Center for Defense Information.

Sullivan reviews food-labeling rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan on Tuesday disclosed additional details about the food-labeling rules being drafted, but it's still undecided whether they will apply uniformly.

Sullivan declined to discuss the uniformity question during a speech to a conference on food safety and nutrition, saying "this issue is under review within the administration." He also declined to discuss it after his speech.

Administration sources have said Sullivan's department wants the federal regulations to supersede state regulations, but that White House officials don't want to preclude the states from adding stronger regulations.

Sullivan said he believed the uniformity question would be resolved "very soon." He previously said he wanted to get the proposed regulations out by the end of this month, but he declined Tuesday to be that specific.

The proposal, to be issued by the Food and Drug Administration, would require nutrition labeling on most foods — including most fresh produce and seafood.

Nutrition labels would have to appear on all packaged food. For unpackaged foods such as fresh fruits, vegetables and seafood, other methods of displaying the information would be allowed, such as leaflets or posters where the foods are sold.

Also, manufacturers would have to show on the label the number of calories from fat and the amount of saturated fatty acids, cholesterol and total dietary fiber.

Restaurants, bakeries, cafeterias and some small businesses would be exempt from the regulations, Sullivan said. Also waived from the requirements would be bite-size foods and foods that have no meaningful sources of calories and nutrients, he said.

HOW TO PLACE A GARAGE SALE AD

(1) Decide the address and dates where the sale will be held.

(2) Compile a list of the major items you want to advertise (furniture, appliances, speciality items, specific sizes or types of clothes) along with a few smaller items (pictures, kitchen utensils, etc.) If more than one family will be participating in the sale, ask each family to write out a list of the items they want to sell.

(3) Combine the lists of items to be sold, the complete address, the day and times the sale will be held. Remember, the best days to advertise for your sale will be at least the day before and each day of the sale. The deadline for placing your ad will be before 5:00 the day before you need your ad to appear, Monday - Friday.

(4) NOW - Call Classified at 682-6222 with the days of the sale and the items you want to list.
EXAMPLE WORD AD:

1234 MAIN Street. Saturday 9:00 - 4:00. Kids' clothes: boys 2T-4T, girls 6x-14, dining room set and lots of miscellaneous.

EXAMPLE SPACE AD:
