Love and understanding

Joyce Ryan, left, and her husband Bruce have flourished together — like the roses in the front yard of their west Midland home. The couple met at a Colorado rehabilitation center almost seven years ago and recently celebrated their third year of marriage, marking a triumph of love over adversity. Colombian justice resigns, flees to U.S.

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Ten banks were blown up by bombs in the cocaine manufacturing center of Medellin, and local reports said the justice minister who was leading a crackdown on drug lords has fled to the United States in fear of her life.

de Greiff

News reports also said Sunday that an appeals court revoked an arrest order accusing a top drug kingpin of ordering two assassinations.

The bombs that went off throughout Colombia's second-largest city early Sunday caused extensive damage to seven branches of the government-owned Banco Cafetero and three branches of the private Banco de Colombia and Banco del Estado, authorities said.

A police spokesman said a young man was killed, apparently while planting one of the bombs.

Police refused to say which organization was responsible for the bombings. Other attacks in recent months were conducted by leftist guerrillas that sometimes cooperate with drug traffickers.

The spokesman said police patrols in Medellin, 215 miles north of Bogota, were tightened to prevent new attacks. He said extra units were stationed throughout Medellin to protect private and public buildings.

The city is hometown for the Medellin Cartel, the world's biggest drug organization and reportedly responsible for 80 percent of the cocaine sent by air, sea and land to the United States.

President Virgilio Barco meanwhile "denied reports related to the resignation of the justice minister," Monica de Greiff, but he failed to clarify whether the minister had actually resigned, according to a communique late Sunday.

The presidential communique followed a weekend of speculation over the alleged desertion of Mrs. de Greiff at a time when the government is conducting an unprecedented campaign against the drug lords.

Newspapers, radio networks and television stations repeatedly reported Sunday that Mrs. de Greiff had resigned after less than two months in charge.

Asked to clarify the communique, a spokesman at the Presidential Press Office said, "I cannot add a single word to the document."

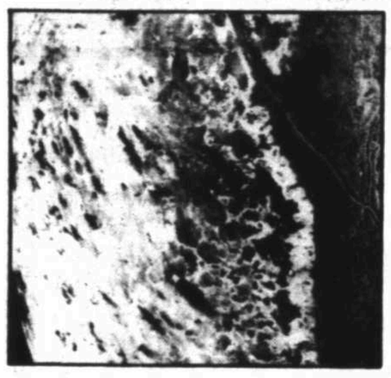
Mrs. de Greiff, 32, had been the target of death threats against her, her husband and their 3-year-old child since the government launched a nationwide crackdown on drug traffickers after a string of killings that included presidential candidate Sen. Luis Carlos Galan on Aug. 18.

Since Galan's death, the government has arrested more than 11,000 people and seized hundreds of millions of dollars in property. The United States last week pledged $65 million aid for the government effort.

Last week, the traffickers declared war after the government began a crackdown in response to the assassinations of a magistrate, a police colonel and Sen. Galan over a 48-hour period.

The presidential communique on Mrs. de Greiff appeared untimely, as the government was calling on Colombians to become "fighters for the moral" and help them defeat the cocaine traffickers.

She traveled to Washington on Friday where she was scheduled to confer with U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh on extradition of arrested drug suspects. But she failed to show up at the meeting and no explanation was given by Colombian authorities.



Triton's south pole

Active volcano indicated on Neptune moon

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Voyager 2 found Neptune's moon Triton to be a world in which volcanoes blast nitrogen ice 20 miles skyward and where giant craters once overflowed with ocean-size floods of frozen lava, scientists believe.

If scientists are correct in their interpretation of Voyager's photographs, Triton is only the third object in the universe where active volcanoes have been identified.

"It's one of the most interesting and provocative worlds in the solar system," says Charles Kohlhase, Voyager spacecraft mission design manager at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Voyager today snapped and sent back to Earth beautiful photographs showing the sunlit, crescent edges of Neptune and Triton as they were backlighted by the sun. NASA expects to release prints of the photo no earlier than Tuesday.

Triton apparently has three types of volcanic activity.

Scientists announced two of them Friday: huge inactive crater-shaped volcanoes, called calderas, filled with lava made of ice instead of molten rock; and long fault-line valleys filled with oozing ice, a process likened to toothpaste coming out of a tube slit with a razor blade.

Triton's biggest surprise came Sunday, when U.S. Geological Survey geologist Laurence Soderblom announced that a third kind of volcanic activity apparently had been identified. The latest recorded photographs sent by Voyager reveal what look like active ice volcanoes that erupt explosively, spewing nitrogen ice particles and gas 12 to 20 miles high.

"The stuff comes shooting up like gas out of a gun barrel," said University of Arizona planetary scientist Bradford Smith, leader of Voyager's photographic imaging team.

Soderblom cautioned that the volcanic theory could turn out to be a "crazy idea," but other scientists expressed their support.

"It sounds like a very reasonable hypothesis," said Voyager project scientist Edward Stone.

First commercial launch successful

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A communications satellite is orbiting Earth after being propelled by a privately owned rocket in a launch that opens a new era in the space age.

The 2,700-pound Marcopolo 1 satellite was drilled into space Sunday by a three-stage Delta rocket that performed flawlessly during a 27-minute climb into orbit.

The launching was the first in which a privately owned rocket sent a payload into orbit. Consort I, the nation's first licensed commercial spacecraft, released a payload on a suborbital voyage in March.

"Delta 187 has placed the British Satellite Broadcasting satellite in orbit; we wish the spacecraft folks good luck," reported Ray Adams of McDonnell Douglas, which made the $30 million Delta.

The satellite was sent into an elliptical orbit ranging from about 100 to 22,300 miles high.

On Tuesday, ground controllers are to send a signal to fire an onboard motor to place it in a stationary orbit 22,300 miles high, parking it over the middle Atlantic Ocean within view of the British Isles.

Marcopolo 1 is the first of two satellites designed to transmit television programs direct to British homes equipped with 12-inch dish antennas, a set-top box and a remote control unit. The equipment will cost about $450, said Anthony Simonds-Gooding, chief executive officer of British Satellite Broadcasting Ltd., operator of the satellite system.

The launch was a milestone in the U.S. commercial space program that started after the 1986 Challenger explosion. After the space shuttle disaster, then-President Reagan told the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to stop launching payloads for commercial customers. Reagan said the job should be done by private industry with unmanned rockets.

"This is not just another launch; it's the beginning of a new industry, a landmark event," said Stephanie Lee-Miller of the U.S. Department of Transportation, which licenses commercial launches. She said 27 additional launches are scheduled through 1993.

Reagan's decision revitalized a U.S. unmanned space rocket program that was almost dead because of the nation's growing reliance on the manned space shuttle to launch all payloads.

Three major U.S. aerospace companies took on the commercial space program in earnest, and the McDonnell Douglas Delta was the first to the launch pad. Martin Marietta has scheduled a commercial launch with its Titan rocket later this year, and General Dynamics' Atlas is set to make its debut next year.

All three rockets are upgraded versions of boosters NASA and the Air Force have used for several years. The Delta launched Sunday was the 187th in that series.

The three companies will compete with each other and with the well-established Ariane rocket sponsored by the French government and with a Long March rocket being marketed by the Chinese.

Several smaller American companies are developing rockets for boosting small commercial payloads into orbit or on brief suborbital trips.

British Satellite Broadcasting in 1987 selected Hughes Aircraft Co. to build the two Marcopolo satellites under a $300 million contract.

McDonnell Douglas is charging Hughes $50 million for each of the two launches. Hughes will verify the satellites are in orbit and working before British Satellite accepts them. The second launch is planned next summer.

Simonds-Gooding said BSB plans to start broadcasting to homes through the satellite next spring, with customers initially receiving five channels, four of them free.

The charge will be about $15 monthly for The Movie Channel, which shows movies from around the world. The free channels will consist of Now, for news and sports; Galaxy, devoted to entertainment such as game shows; a lifestyle channel; and a youth-oriented channel such as MTV.

Chinese student sentenced for role in protests

BEIJING (AP) — A student charged with spreading rumors to the Voice of America during the pro-democracy protests has been given a nine-year prison term, a state newspaper reported today. It was the first announced sentencing of a student participant since the government's June crackdown.

The China Youth News said Zhang Weiping was sentenced Saturday by the Hangzhou Intermediate People's Court for spreading counter-revolutionary propaganda and instigating criminal acts.

Zhang, a fourth-year student at Zhejiang Fine Arts Institute in the eastern city of Hangzhou, admitted some of the charges against him but would not acknowledge that his acts were counter-revolutionary, the daily said.

The court said that on June 6, two days after the bloody military crackdown of the student movement in Beijing, Zhang called the U.S.-funded Voice of America and falsely reported that students in Hangzhou forced local authorities to fly the Chinese flag at half-staff to mourn victims of the Beijing massacre.

It said Zhang sent a tape of the VOA broadcast of his report to his university, and "it created a very bad political influence."

The court also accused Zhang of drawing eight cartoons vilifying Communist Party and government leaders.

The newspaper did not say when Zhang was convicted, but conviction and sentencing often happen at the same time. It also did not say under what clause of the criminal code he was tried or what the maximum sentence was.

One clause covering counter-revolutionaries who incite the masses says those found guilty of serious cases shall not serve terms of less than five years. A counter-revolutionary can get a life term if the offense is deemed serious enough.

Chinese police have arrested thousands of workers and students who took part in the pro-democracy movement and have publicly sentenced dozens of workers to long prison terms for rioting and causing social disturbances. At least 12 non-students have been executed for destroying public property and attacking police.

Authorities have announced the arrests of eight out of 21 student leaders put on a nationwide wanted list following the military crackdown, but so far none has been brought to public trial.

VOA, which has a large Mandarin-language audience in China, has been accused by the government of "rumor-mongering" in its reports on the military push to drive students from Tiananmen Square, in which at least 200 unarmed people were killed.

The VOA Beijing bureau chief and another VOA reporter were expelled from China for their reporting activities.

Cavazos addresses educators

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Today's teachers are the key to tomorrow's leaders, Gen. Richard Cavazos told Midland Independent School District's teachers today.

Cavazos, brother of U.S. education secretary Lauro Cavazos, addressed the more than 1,200 teachers at a morning assembly in Lee High School's auditorium. The meeting marked the start of a week of staff in-service before school begins Sept. 5.

"My purpose here today is purely a function of old age," joked Cavazos, a four-star general who retired in 1984. "If you live long enough, you'll get invited to make speeches all over the place."

More seriously, Cavazos, who spent 35 years in the military, related a teacher's role to that of courageous soldiers.

"You're leaders," he said. "You have to encourage and guide those who are with you.

"I feel very deeply about you and what you're trying to do. The treasures of the world are presented by you lovely people."

Cavazos called education the "genesis of effective leadership," and told stories of past hard-driving teachers who enouraged him to succeed.

A 1951 Texas Tech University graduate, he saw combat and commanded troops in Korea and was twice awarded the Silver Star, the nation's second highest combat decoration.

Promoted to general in February 1984, he eventually became the first Hispanic in the armed forces to wear four stars. He lives near Austin and works as a management and military consultant.

Also speaking at the assembly were Superintendent Joe Baressi and MISD school board President James Fuller.

Physicians & Surgeons Hospital may listen to, won't seek bidders

From Staff Reports

Physicians & Surgeons Hospital's board of directors may entertain attractive offers to buy out the privately owned Midland hospital but is not actively seeking candidates for a buyout.

"In the past, different people have wanted to make offers, but the board said 'No'," Lana Cunningham, the hospital's manager of corporate marketing and public relations, said today.

"They have had some offers," Ms. Cunningham said of the board's directors. But if the offers are not for "betterment of the hospital," the directors are not going to sell the facility, she said.

Any serious bid would have to reflect infusion of enthusiasm on health care and attractive capital investment.

The 60-bed hospital, jointly owned by ClayDesta Corp. and a group of 29 Midland physicians and surgeons, was purchased by the two forces in December 1985 when the facility operated as Parkview Hospital.

Physicians & Surgeons Hospital is an acute-care hospital. The hospital's care includes open-heart surgery, sports medicine and laser surgery.

Low near 70 anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms are predicted for tonight, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be near 70 and winds will be from the southeast at 5-15 mph.

Tuesday will continue partly cloudy with a less than 20 percent chance of rain. The high will be in the middle 90s and winds will be from the south at 10-20 mph.

Sunday's high of 97 was three degrees cooler than the record high of 100 set on Aug. 27, 1985. The overnight low of 68 was eight degrees warmer than the record low for this date set in 1970.

STATE

A trough of low pressure along the Texas-New Mexico border continued to breed showers and thunderstorms around parts of West Texas early this morning.

The National Weather Service reported the scattered showers and thunderstorms were confined mainly to the Panhandle, the western portions of the South Plains and parts of the Trans-Pecos area.

Some areas in and around Amarillo got 2½ to 3 inches of rain last night. Elsehwere, a few isolated showers temporarily dotted the Del Rio area early this morning, but most of the Lone Star State saw fair skies.

Southerly winds prevailed throughout the greater part of Texas with speeds generally in the 5 to 15 mph range.

Temperatures early this morning were mostly in the 70s and lower 80s, but readings were in the 60s in the Panhandle and in parts of the Trans-Pecos region.

NATION

Thunderstorms dumped heavy rain and hail today on Kansas and Missouri, and fog covered parts of the Ohio Valley.

Kansas City, Mo., was hit by severe storms just after midnight, drenching the city with over an inch of rain in 20 minutes. Storms whipped winds up to 70 mph at St. Joseph.

Baseball-sized hail fell near Belleville, Kan., and 35 mph winds knocked over power lines at Hesston.

Floods briefly closed parts of Interstate 70 in Kansas City and near Independence, Mo., Sunday night.

Bakker's trial opens in Charlotte

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Television evangelist Jim Bakker headed to court today to defend himself against charges he stole from his flock to support an opulent lifestyle.

Prosecutors say Bakker and other executives of the PTL television ministry diverted for their own benefit at least $4 million of the $158 million they raised for "lifetime partnerships" at the ministry's resort hotels.

Bakker, joined by attorneys George T. Davis and Harold Bender, entered the federal courthouse today for the opening of his trial. When someone in the crowd shouted, "We love you," Bakker replied, "Have a nice day."

"There is a whole different side to this case and this man that just hasn't been revealed," Davis said earlier in an interview. "There are two sides to every story or we wouldn't be here."

If convicted of all 28 counts of fraud and conspiracy, Bakker could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined $5 million.

"I was a pastor, and a businessman I was not," said Bakker in testimony during a lawsuit last summer. Bakker, who says he is innocent, and his attorney, George T. Davis, have declined to discuss their defense strategy.

Bakker, 49, resigned from PTL in March 1987 after revelations about his sexual encounter with church secretary Jessica Hahn and a $265,000 payoff to buy her silence. Three months after Bakker resigned, PTL was put under bankruptcy protection.

Outside the courthouse today, about 50 journalists and cameramen waited, hoping to get one of the two rows of seats reserved for news media. Other journalists signed up for one of the 28 spectator seats in the small courtroom.

Two men from Columbia, S.C., carried picket signs denouncing Bakker and several other television evangelists.

One of the pickets, Bob Eckhardt, said he and David Hallman didn't represent a specific denomination. "We just want people to know God isn't playing games. Anybody who reads the Bible knew that (PTL) wasn't right," Eckhardt said.

In a sentencing hearing for former PTL Vice President Richard Dortch last week, prosecutors gave a glimpse at their case against Bakker.

Dortch, Bakker's top assistant from 1984 to 1987, pleaded guilty to four fraud and conspiracy charges in a bargain that requires him to testify against Bakker. He was sentenced to eight years in prison and fined $200,000.

At Dortch's sentencing hearing, prosecutors set up large charts showing PTL raised $158 million between 1984 and 1987 through partnerships that promised supporters who gave $1,000 three nights lodging per year for life in hotels being constructed at Heritage USA, PTL's expansive retreat and park near here.

Money was diverted to support the Bakkers' extravagant lifestyle, the prosecutors said. During those years, Bakker and his wife, Tammy, drew $3.5 million in bonuses plus other perks, and other funds were used for day-to-day operations at PTL, prosecutors said.

The government contended that nearly half of the money raised through lifetime partnerships — $74.2 million — was for the Towers Hotel project, but only $11.4 million was actually spent on the unfinished 20-floor hotel.

In another lifetime partnership plan, the 1100 Club, 492,000 people were offered the chance to buy partnerships and take their choice of "brand new" lodgings at Farmland USA.

According to the charts, 7,783 people bought partnerships with donations of $1,100 each, but only one "bunkhouse" with 16 rooms was built. Only eight of those rooms were designated for lifetime partners.

Tapes of PTL's television program, which were reviewed by a grand jury and will be shown to Bakker's jury, show Bakker and Dortch promising that there was a limit of 30,000 lifetime partnerships in the Towers project.

But government auditors said 68,755 partnerships were sold.

"Mr. Bakker and Mr. Dortch later told viewers of their television show that 900 additional partnerships had opened up because of people who had not made good on their pledges," Justice Department prosecutor Deborah Smith told U.S. District Judge Robert Potter on Thursday.

She said that sales pitch was an example of the "calculated attempts" by Bakker and Dortch to mislead their viewers and the PTL board about the ministry's financial condition.

Setting of trial date in tree poisoning postponed

AUSTIN (AP) — The setting of a trial date for the man charged with poisoning the historic Treaty Oak was postponed today until Tuesday, Sept. 5.

Paul Stedman Cullen, 45, of Elroy, was indicted on a charge of felony criminal mischief in connection with poisoning the centuries-old tree that experts say is still fighting for its life.

Dallas attorney Richard C. Jenkins said Monday he asked for the postponement because of a time conflict he had with another court proceeding.

The maximum punishment for the felony charge is 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

But Cullen could face an enhanced sentence of life in prison because the indictment alleges he has a previous felony conviction for burglary.

On Sept. 5, a Travis County state district judge is scheduled to designate counsel and set a trial date in the case, Jenkins said.

Police have alleged that Cullen may have poisoned the tree as part of a ritual, using the potent herbicide Velpar, which was poured on the soil around the oak's base.

The case has drawn national attention and an outpouring of public support for the tree. Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot has offered financial assistance, experts have been called in to assist in the rescue.

Small plane lands safely on Houston school grounds

HOUSTON (AP) — A small plane carrying two people made an emergency landing on the grounds of a middle school this morning, but no one was injured, officials said.

The plane landed at about 8 a.m. on a grassy athletic field adjacent to the Sharpstown Middle School in southwest Houston, said Houston Independent School District spokesman Larry Yawn.

Today was the first day of work for teachers, but HISD students don't return to school until next week.

The vintage plane's pilot and passenger, his wife, were not injured in the landing, Yawn said.

Yawn said the plane was flying from the Cleak Lake area south of Houston to Del Rio when the pilot experienced engine problems.

"The engine evidently just quit," he said.

The area where the plane landed is about the size of a football field and is used for physical education activities and football practice.

Authorities were called to the scene of the emergency landing, along with a mechanic. The pilot had not immediately decided how to get the plane off the field, Yawn said.

Muppets joining Disney family

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Kermit and the rest of the Muppets will be joining ranks with Mickey Mouse and his friends in an business agreement announced today by Walt Disney World and Jim Henson, creator of the Muppets.

Henson and Michael D. Eisner, chairman and chief executive of the Walt Disney Co., have signed an agreement-in-principle for Disney to acquire Henson Associates Inc., including its film and television library, Disney said in an announcement. It did not mention a price.

The proposal includes agreements for Henson to do long-term consulting and production. The announcement said he would produce motion pictures, network and off-network television shows, Disney Channel specials and series and made-for-home video programming.

Also included are special Muppet attractions and rides for Disney theme parks.

Work is already under way for the first such project, a Muppet film attraction using 3-D technology. The attraction, to open next spring at the Disney-MGM Studios Theme Park here, will be a collaboration between Henson and Walt Disney Imagineering.

In the release, Eisner hailed the proposal as "a business association made in family entertainment heaven."

Henson said he had enjoyed running his own company, "but now I am really excited about joining forces with Michael Eisner and the Disney organization and finding out how much more we can accomplish together for our audiences all over the world."

Eight-year-old dies after Army honors wish

FAIRMONT, W.Va. (AP) — An 8-year-old cancer victim who was granted his wish to join the Army has died three days after his special military induction.

Chris Riley will be buried in his camouflage fatigues, the same ones he wore Thursday when he was given an induction ceremony and rode in a helicopter and on a self-propelled howitzer, said his aunt, Sherrie Cottrill.

Chris died Sunday night in the arms of his father, Robert Riley, at his Fairmont home, his aunt said.

"Even though they knew it was coming, it was still hard to take," Cottrill said. "We knew it wouldn't be too long, maybe two weeks or three, the doctor couldn't tell us for sure."

Chris had undergone surgery twice since November 1986 for a brain tumor.

San Angelo city employees scoop dead fish from the Concho River Saturday after hundreds littered the river's banks. City officials attribute the problem to lack of oxygen in the water.

Muddy river water killing fish in San Angelo area

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Hundreds of fish have died and hundreds more are in danger from a lack of oxygen in the Concho River, but nothing can be done to help them, local authorities say.

"The showers in the last week washed a lot of sand and dirt into the water and reduced the river's oxygen-carrying capacity," said Will Wilde, San Angelo Public Works Director.

He said the recent high temperatures combined with the sediment decreased the river's ability to carry oxygen.

City parks employees began noticing on Thursday that the fish seemed to be jumping a lot, an indication of low oxygen levels, Wilde said. Hundreds of fish were found floating along the banks.

"There is nothing we can do," to increase the oxygen, Wilde said. "If we had a water supply, like a lake, we could send fresh water down the river. But we can't afford to let water out of the lake.

"All we can do is clean out the dead fish from the river and let nature take its course," he said.

Wilde, who inspected the river in Santa Fe Park on Saturday, said water tests show the presence of 0.2 to 0.3 parts per million of oxygen, a drastically low level. The river normally has about 6 parts per million of oxygen.

Most of the dead fish were shad and other "rough" fish that are less able to withstand low water and low oxygen, he said.

The problem won't last long, however. As the fish die, the demands on the river's oxygen decrease and the level of available oxygen in the water will rise, Wilde said.

VOYAGER

Voyager has discovered six moons orbiting Neptune in addition to Triton and Nereid, which were discovered from Earth. It also has found five rings of debris orbiting the planet, including two that are broad bands of dust.

By 9 p.m. PDT tonight, Voyager will be 2.76 billion miles from Earth and 3.65 million miles from Neptune, speeding toward interstellar space at 37,600 mph.

As the craft sped toward the ill-defined boundary of the solar system, about 1,500 mission scientists, engineers and their families celebrated at a bash that featured rock 'n' roll legend Chuck Berry singing "Go, Voyager, go!" a slightly modified version of his classic "Johnny B. Goode."

A recording of that song and other earth sounds was among the cultural and historical items aboard aboard Voyager.

The spacecraft made its closest approach to Neptune on Thursday night when it skimmed about 3,000 miles over the planet's north pole cloudtops. Early Friday, it zoomed about 24,000 miles past Triton.

Soderblom compared the new type of ice volcanoes to sulfur-spewing volcanoes on Jupiter's moon Io. But he said the volcanoes on Triton are produced when liquid nitrogen in underground pools rises to the surface, where reduced pressure means "it's got to explode and will shower ice particles and gas."

SPEECH

"Hopefully this year is going to be the biggest and best year in MISD history," Baressi told the teachers.

He said one of their goals this year should be paying attention to individuals students in hopes of decreasing MISD's dropout rate.

"If we can show them that we care, they'll stay in our school system and benefit from it," Baressi said.

He also complimented school trustees, saying it took courage for them to wrestle with this year's tight budget and approve a 13.5-cent tax hike.

Fuller said trustees have faith that the district's teachers will be effective instructors and leaders.

"We hope this year will be an extremely productive one," Fuller said. "We have a very important product to deliver.

"We as a board are confident that product will be delivered."

Ramses exhibit leaving Dallas; Memorabilia to be auctioned

DALLAS (AP) — Ramses, the 3,000-year-old god-king, is leaving town, but the effects of the internationally famous exhibit will linger, as the city counts the revenues and reaps the good will it produced.

And as the last visitors left the Dallas Museum of Natural History on Sunday, officials prepared for a public sale next month of every Ramses sign, badge and administrative knickknack.

The museum has 13 days to pack the priceless objects of Ramses II, who ruled Egypt for 68 years, for the return to Egypt.

During preparations for the March 5 exhibit opening, officials predicted it would draw one million visitors, $10 million gross income, and $50 million to $100 million for the Dallas economy.

"We basically hit them all," said Robert Townsend, executive director for the museum association.

About half the visitors came from outside the metropolitan area, and more than half of those stayed at least one night, said Townsend. Each out-of-town visitor spent between $180 and $200 a day, he said.

Since Ramses arrived, the museum, which had about $20,000 in the bank six months ago, stands to stash away a $1 million endowment and its membership has soared to more than 5,000 from about 350.

The exhibit was coupled with an unexpected debate about how African and how black Ramses was. Some Dallas black leaders threatened to boycott the exhibit unless organizers portrayed Ramses as black.

If Ramses walked into a white area of Dallas today, people there would probably consider him to be black, Park Board member Vivian Johnson said.

An Egyptian embassy official downplayed the debate.

"We cannot say by any means that we are black or white. We are Egyptian, with our culture and traditions and religions," Abdel-Latif Aboul-Ela, director of cultural and educational bureau at the Egyptian Embassy in Washington, said in March.

Townsend said his staff tried to get the message of Ramses' origin out to visitors. "We had 200,000 students, and at a minimum, they now know Egypt is in Africa," he said."

Ramses hype was high-level. The selling of the exhibit cost about $1.7 million. More than 4,000 volunteers drummed up support for Ramses and provided explanations of the hundreds of artifacts.

Inmate's attorneys work to overturn attempted capital murder charge

WACO (AP) — Attorneys representing an inmate with AIDS charged with attempted capital murder after she spit at a prison guard say they will seek to have the case thrown out because medical evidence shows the deadly disease cannot be transmitted through saliva.

The attorneys also told the Waco Tribune-Herald that they have contacted former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop as a potential witness in the case.

If Koop is not available, his report on AIDS and testimony from other medical experts will be used to build a case that the human immunodeficiency (HIV) virus that causes AIDS cannot be spread through saliva or "casual contact," said Waco attorney Karen Amos.

Ms. Amos and fellow attorney Kim Young represent Shacquita Renae Johnson, who was indicted by a Coryell County grand jury in April after authorities accused her of spitting on Cynthia Phillips, a guard at a Texas prison unit in Gatesville.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is a disease for which no cure has been found. It breaks down the body's natural defense system, giving cancers and other fatal infections a chance to spread.

In motions filed in Gatesville's 52nd State District Court, Ms. Amos and Ms. Young are asking that the charges be dismissed. They accuse Coryell County District Attorney Phil Zeigler of maliciously prosecuting the case against Ms. Johnson, who is serving a five-year sentence for forgery out of Harris County.

Prosecutors contend they don't have to prove that AIDS can be spread through saliva, only that the defendant intended to try to infect the guard.

"The allegation is that the intent was there, but the defendant failed to complete the offense," said David Weeks, a former special prosecutor who handles offenses with state prison units. "I believe the medical testimony will be that it may be possible to transmit AIDS through spit. It may be improbable, but it is possible.

"It is much the same as charging someone with aggravated assault who pointed an unloaded gun at somebody," Weeks said.

Chuck Fallis, a spokesperson at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, said it is "highly unlikely" that the HIV virus can be transmitted through a small amount of saliva. He said there are no known cases of it occurring because the virus doesn't normally live outside the human bloodstream.

"The virus just can't survive outside the body," Fallis told the Waco newspaper. "For the virus to be transmitted that way, there would have to be an exchange of an enormous amount of saliva containing blood between the two persons, and it doesn't sound like that is what happened. The AIDS virus just can't be transmitted that way."

The motion for dismissal contends prosecutors are ignoring U.S. government researchers' findings and says the indictment is not based on scientific fact.

Officials on both sides agree that the case provides some interesting legal questions.

Judge Bob Cummings has scheduled an Oct. 4 pretrial hearing and an Oct. 23 trial date.

"It is an odd case and one with some interesting legal questions," Zeigler said. "But it was one that was presented by a complaint of the officer, and the officer is entitled to protection from this type of assault. I am going to proceed with it until I am convinced that it is legally not a prosecutable case, and nothing I have seen so far has convinced me of that."

Zeigler said people with AIDS must be prevented from using their illness as a means of intimidating or threatening others.

"'I feel sorry for a person who is an amputee, too, but by the same token, if they try to beat somebody to death with their crutches, I would prosecute them," Zeigler said.

Ms. Amos and Ms. Young also point out that a new law set out to punish those who intentionally expose others to AIDS or HIV makes no specific mention of passing the disease through saliva.

The law that takes effect on Sept. 1 states that a person can be charged with the third-degree felony if he or she has AIDS or is a carrier of HIV and "with intent to cause serious bodily injury or death, intentionally engages in conduct reasonably likely to result in the transfer of the actor's own blood, bodily fluids containing visible blood, or vaginal secretions into the bloodstream of another, or through the other person's skin or other membrane..."

Department helps prepare diplomats for foreign postings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is advising its diplomats that while they needn't splurge on their wardrobe for overseas duty, shoes are a must.

American women going abroad, as diplomats or their spouses, are also advised to remove their gloves while eating or drinking at a formal function.

This is some of the advice in a pamphlet entitled "Social Usage Abroad" given to U.S. representatives to help prepare them for foreign postings.

The leaflet illustrates how protocol, that French invention which greases the wheels of statehood, can be a U.S. diplomat's biggest nightmare. It also makes clear that proper behavior within the U.S. diplomatic community abroad is just as tricky as behavior toward officials of the host country.

The diplomat's training begins well before departure from Washington. "It is customary when assigned to a U.S. mission abroad to write to the principal officer (usually the ambassador)...to express personal pleasure in the assignment," the guide advises. Wives (or husbands) of diplomats should do the same to the wife (or husband) of the principal officer.

A new member of the embassy staff must call on the ambassador or chief officer within two working days, according to the manual.

"An expensive or extensive wardrobe is not necessary" for junior diplomats. "It is advisable, however, for newcomers to bring along a basic wardrobe, including shoes, because they will often be too busy on arrival to shop for new clothes."

As for the dress code: for a daytime ceremony, "a woman's shoulders should be covered." And in countries where gloves are worn for all daytime social occasions, "it is useful to remember that they are always removed entirely for eating or drinking."

Ambassadors, in addition to familiarizing themselves with treaties and other aspects of bilateral relations, must remember to take the place closest to the curbside when entering a car.

When making social calls on officials of the host country in their homes, the American's calling card is left on a hall table "and a caller should stay no longer than 20 minutes unless strongly urged." The pamphlet doesn't explain how to judge whether such entreaties are "strong."

What it does do is answer every question "ever put to us," said Nancy Forbrd, relocation adviser for the Overseas Briefing Center. The center, run by the State Department's Foreign Service Institute, provides extensive reading materials on conditions in foreign countries, regulations of the U.S. foreign service, etiquette, educational and health facilities, and other information.

Some 14,000 people, or about half of the Americans sent abroad last year by various government agencies, used the center in 1988, she said. The center also offers a mandatory two-day seminar on security overseas, and even a course designed to help teenagers adjust to life abroad, Forbord said.

For American hostesses abroad, the pitfalls are numerous. Making a dinner table seating plan is "full of complexities," warn the authors of the pamphlet. Hostesses should check with the embassy protocol officer to ensure they have not inadvertently planned to seat together people from countries which do not maintain diplomatic relations, for example.

A proper seating arrangement requires mathematical talent. "To seat eight, 12, 16 or 20 persons without two men or two women sitting together, the hostess sits to the left of the seat that is properly hers." Is that clear?

Now, if the women are served before the men, the woman on the host's right is served first and the woman on the host's left is served second. Try explaining that to the servants.

One also should be aware that an invitation for 8 o'clock doesn't necessarily mean you show up at 8. In some countries, it's a signal to turn up at 9:30.

"At official dinners in certain Commonwealth countries, it is rude to smoke at the table before the toast to the Queen." And speaking of toasts, "it is a good idea to leave enough wine in the glass at the end of the meal to join in the drinking" of such salutations.

Recycling firm pitches in to help homeless

AP Laserphoto

Herman Jones sorts through paper refuse at the Dry Gulch Recycling center in Dallas on Monday. The non-profit corporation was organized last year to promote environmental cleanup and preserve natural resources.

DALLAS (AP) — It's a trashy job, but workers at Dry Gulch Recycling are willing to brush aside the dirt if it means saving natural resources and helping homeless families.

"Before (Dry Gulch), Dallas was at the bottom of the rung as far as recycling is concerned," said volunteer president Joanne Hill. "We were back in the Dark Ages."

Dry Gulch is a non-profit recycling corporation organized last year to promote environmental cleanup and preserve natural resources. It contributes about $200 monthly to the Downtown Dallas Family Shelter — a get-back-on-your-feet facility for homeless families.

Dry Gulch also helps through its employment policies.

All seven employees have some disability. They are homeless, retarded, battling alcohol or drug addiction and some have been in prison, Ms. Hill said.

"We have been able to take people deemed unemployable and get them and keep them working. They love what they do," Ms. Hill said.

The employees begin working for minimum wage, but good attitudes and work ethics substantiate raises. Six of the seven employees earn between $4.50 and $6.50 an hour, Ms. Hill said.

"It takes a tremendous amount of funds to restore a family," Ms. Hill said. "We hope to be able to contribute more in a couple of years, but we're barely breaking even right now."

Jan Mitura, director of the shelter, said Dry Gulch offers a unique way for people and businesses to help families in need.

> "You may not have the dollars to contribute to us, but you may save computer paper and donate that to Dry Gulch. We tap into the community in all kinds of ways for support."
> — Jan Mitura, shelter director

"Dry Gulch lets the community feel like they are a part of the shelter. It helps make all kinds of people feel good," Ms. Mitura said.

"You may not have the dollars to contribute to us, but you may save computer paper and donate that to Dry Gulch. We tap into the community in all kinds of ways for support," she said.

Dry Gulch pulls in about $10,000 a month on recycling. It sells office paper refuse and cast-off telephone books to paper towel manufacturers. Old tires are ground up and become part of running tracks. And about 8 billion pounds of glass collected is melted down into new containers.

Dry Gulch has become the largest multi-material recycling center in Texas. But Texans traditionally have not been recyclers, says Gavino Sotelo, assistant director of streets and sanitation for the city of Dallas.

"It'll take some time for recycling to catch on in Texas," he said. "Texas has a lot of landfills. That's not going to promote much recycling.

"I think it's important that people become aware that landfill space gets filled. We're not going to have a place to put it all."

Ms. Hill offered another reason.

"We're just so spoiled," she said. "We throw everything in the garbage and we expect the collectors to come and get it. And heaven forbid should they miss a day or leave a piece of paper behind.

"It's that kind of attitude that we have to change. We have to let people know that recycling is good not only from a economic standpoint but from an environmental standpoint."

The city of Dallas rents the collection center to Dry Gulch at a rate of $100 every five years. Recycling saves the city about $82,000 in waste disposal costs, Ms. Hill says.

Dallas spends about $4.7 million to dispose of about 850,000 tons of garbage each year, city records show.

Environmental groups such as the Sierra Club, Audubon Society and Save Open Space urged the City Council to create a recycling center. Nine corporations donated about $5,000 each to start Dry Gulch in April 1988.

Now it's outperforming centers in Waco, Houston and El Paso.

"This is a good example of what citizens and corporations and communities can do if they pool their resources," she said. "We've created a market here and people are responding.

"Recycling is something everyone can do," she said. "Everyone has trash."

Retired preacher finds flock

SANGER, Texas (AP) — Each morning the rustle of thousands of tiny wings greets Harvey Anthony as he steps out his door. He looks into pens filled with small brown birds flying or skittering over the sand.

Anthony raises quail in his Sanger back yard. And, he said, it's a rapidly growing business. Demand is always larger than supply. Buyers, who purchase quail for training dogs, restocking hunting grounds or eating, typically want 50 to 100 birds at a time. At $3.50 a bird, that adds up fast.

But money isn't why Anthony raises quail. The retired pastor and carpenter began with the birds around 10 years ago. "A cousin of mine had a bunch in his yard," Anthony related. "I saw them, all gathered in a circle with their heads pointed out and they just fascinated me."

He bought 105 chicks for $35 and raised 98 of them. "I haven't had that good a luck since," he said. Quail are delicate and hard to raise, he said.

Anthony built all his coops, flight pens, incubators and brooders himself. And, he cares for the birds alone — a time consuming venture.

He begins with eggs in the incubator and they hatch about 24 days later, he said. About 24 hours after the eggs hatch, he moves the chicks to the brooder where they are kept warm, fed special feed and given water in pans filled with stones. "I put rocks in so the little ones won't drown," he said. Once they are large enough, he removes the rocks.

He feeds his quail special flight-conditioning and feather-growing food, which doesn't put fat on the birds. This makes them particularly attractive to dog trainers. "I've got one man who comes every year for birds. He says he passes up lots of quail farms because he knows my birds will fly."

For trainers, it's essential that the birds fly when flushed by the dogs. For this reason, Anthony seldom lets people into the pens and doesn't go in himself except when it's necessary.

"I know one trainer bought some birds that wouldn't fly because the breeder would go into the pen each night and sit there and feed the birds. They were used to people so they didn't fly."

When the birds are a few weeks old, they have to be "debeaked" — the tip of the beak is squared off. "If you don't debeak 'em, they start pecking their feet and "feather picking" — pulling the feathers out of their back until they're nearly nude."

Until they are grown, the birds must be kept warm — at least at 70 degrees. But heat doesn't seem to bother them. With aluminum roofs and screened sides, Anthony's coops get plenty of ventilation. In winter, he covers the screen with plastic to protect the birds from the cold.

To protect them from disease, he gives them feed that includes mild medication and "if they start to get draggy I give them a little Teramycin."

Bush drug plan vitally important

The Bush Administration isn't expected to unveil its strategy for fighting the nation's drug abuse problem until Sept. 5, but already a consensus appears to be building that whatever can be done needs to be done.

In fact, the results of a Gallup Poll report show that teenagers as well as adults in the United States now believe that the problem of drug abuse is greater than any of the other problems facing the nation — the fear of war, the economy, AIDS, crime, abortion, even alcohol abuse.

That recognition on the public's part is critically important because it's much easier for an administration to launch a hard-hitting program when it has the support of most Americans than in an environment of disbelief or opposition.

National drug policy coordinator William Bennett responded to the poll results, saying they "give a very clear sense of direction" to the administration.

That sense of direction could be vital to urging the administration onward in setting a strategy that will be both broad and deep enough to effectively address what, it is becoming clear, is a serious and long-lasting problem.

The nation's flirtation with drugs started even before the decade of the 1960's, but it was then — most agree — when drug usage mushroomed in the anti-war atmosphere. The following decades led to more sophistication of the drug-culture, but drugs continued to maintain their hold on a large segment of the American public.

Now there is apparent strong public support for anti-drug programs and the Bush Administration certainly should capitalize as much as possible on that mood. Concerted effort must be launched if the nation is ever to effectively do battle with the drug kingpins who operate outside the law and often outside the borders of the United States.

No task will test the resolve and the imagination of the Bush Administration more than will devising its strategy to battle the drug scourge. But no task is more important to the future of the United States.

Are whales entertainers?

The death a week ago of San Diego Sea World's killer whale Kandu was the latest of several disturbing incidents involving animals kept in captivity.

Last year, it was the Dunda incident, allegations of elephant mistreatment at the San Diego Wild Animal Park. The year before, Sea World was forced to remove whale trainers from the pools after a series of incidents resulted in injuries to the trainers. They were allowed to return to the water only after park officials conducted an evaluation of its training methods.

The latest incident was particularly disturbing because it happened before several thousand shocked spectators. Kandu, a 14-year-old female, died after an underwater collision with another female whale. She fractured her jaw in the collision and died from hemorrhaging in the nasal passages.

It was an apparent act of aggression, perhaps unavoidable. Nevertheless, the incident should serve as impetus for reassessment. Both captors and paying customers need to continually consider our relationship with fellow creatures, particularly those we presume to confine.

The most outspoken criticism of Sea World this week is coming from the environmental group Greenpeace. A Greenpeace spokesman insisted that the two whales had been aggressive toward each other in the past and should have been kept separated. He argued that it is cruel to keep whales in an enclosure, even a 4 million-gallon enclosure, because whales in the wild swim more than a hundred miles a day. He also maintained that whales kept in captivity die sooner.

Dr. James McBain, staff veterinarian at Sea World, called Kandu's apparently aggressive act "ritualized biting," similar to what happens in the wild. The fracture, he said, was "a freak of the position and point of impact. Everything came together to produce a rare outcome."

Sea World spokesmen also emphasize that their animal shows are educational. The shows make people aware of whales and other sea animals; they encourage respect and sensitivity to animal needs. It is particularly important, they say, for young people to be exposed to animals they may never get to see in the wild.

We agree. Well-run zoos, animal parks and aquaria perform vital tasks in a world that grows ever more threatening to creatures in the wild. Places like Sea World and the San Diego Zoo not only serve an educative function. They protect, preserve and conduct vital scientific research. Endangered species survive because of their efforts.

Yet, there is a thin line between education and entertainment, between legitimate research and exploitation, particularly for a profit-making enterprise like Sea World. We don't presume to know where that line is, but animal performances for entertainment come uncomfortably close.

It's a thrill to watch huge and mysterious leviathans race around the perimeter of a Sea World pool, to gasp in surprise as these sleek black-and-white creatures leap majestically out of the water. We should be asking, however, whether this "contained and contrived" atmosphere — to quote a whale expert who commented on the Kandu incident — is in the best interest of the whales.

Killer whales are intelligent, sociable, peaceful creatures. So are elephants, dolphins, seals and numerous other creatures we humans enjoy watching. What we should enjoy, perhaps, is not their performance but the mere fact of their existence. That, we believe, is wonder enough.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Aug. 28, the 240th day of 1989. There are 125 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 28, 1963, 200,000 people participated in a peaceful civil rights rally in Washington, where Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. delivered his "I Have a Dream" speech in front of the Lincoln Memorial.

On this date:

In 1609, Henry Hudson discovered Delaware Bay.

In 1749, German author Johann Wolfgang von Goethe was born in Frankfurt.

In 1774, Mother Elizabeth Ann Seton, the first American-born saint, was born in New York City.

In 1828, Russian novelist Leo Tolstoy was born near Tula.

In 1916, Italy's declaration of war against Germany took effect during World War I.

In 1917, ten suffragists were arrested as they picketed the White House.

In 1922, radio station WEAF in New York City aired the first radio commercial. The Queensboro Realty Co. paid $100 for 10 minutes of air time.

In 1968, police and anti-war demonstrators clashed in the streets of Chicago as the Democratic National Convention nominated Hubert H. Humphrey for president.

In 1973, more than 520 people died as an earthquake shook central Mexico.

In 1978, Pope John Paul I became pope, following the death of his predecessor, Pope Paul VI.

In 1981, John W. Hinckley Jr. pleaded innocent to charges of attempting to kill President Ronald Reagan.

In 1983, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, reportedly despondent over the death of his wife and the casualty toll of Israeli troops in Lebanon, announced his resignation.

Ten years ago: Soviet ballerina Lyudmila Vlasova, whose husband, Alexander Godunov, had defected to the U.S., arrived in Moscow, telling interviewers the 73½-hour standoff at New York's Kennedy International Airport had been "madness."

Five years ago: Former Wall Street Journal reporter R. Foster Winans Jr. and two others were indicted in New York in an alleged stock fraud scheme based on insider trading.

One year ago: Seventy people were killed when three Italian stunt planes collided during an air show at the U.S. Air Base in Ramstein, West Germany, sending flaming debris into a crowd of spectators.

JACK ANDERSON

Education, not force, key to drug war

WASHINGTON — The U.S. government is waging a mighty war on drugs. And sometimes at night, along the dangerous front lines at the U.S.-Mexican border, your highly trained troops dress up as cactus.

Jack Anderson

Funny, maybe. But not half as funny as spending $25 million for radar balloons that as yet haven't managed to nail a single heroin or cocaine trafficker. The cactus costumes worn by the National Guard are part of a $2.9 million drug-fighting grant. Such simple techniques are beginning to look promising, unlike the colossal failure of the high-tech gadgetry, guns and manpower.

National polls indicate that the drug crisis concerns Americans more than AIDS or nuclear war. Drugs are in the nation's face, and killing your friends, your family and even some of your heroes.

However, these days, when the White House is boasting about its commitment to win the war on drugs, our federal drug-busters are far more overwhelmed than they let on.

Consider that the U.S. government spends more than $1 billion annually to stop drugs at the borders, yet the Coast Guard estimates as little as 5 percent to 7 percent of the U.S.-bound heroin and cocaine is intercepted. Consider that the United States represents 5 percent of the world's population and consumes about 50 percent of the world's cocaine. The annual U.S. market for illicit drugs is roughly equivalent to the federal budget deficit, approximately $150 billion.

The disheartening facts are sprinkled throughout a tongue-in-cheek drug questionnaire produced by Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif. He plans to use it as a forum to help slap America to its senses.

Our associate Jim Lynch obtained a copy of the questionnaire, which Stark plans to send to his colleagues on Capitol Hill with the note, "Here's another drug test you can take without fear that some lab will screw up the results."

Stark's review of the casualties of the drug war makes it clear that the good guys are outgunned and outmaneuvered:

The National Institute on Drug Abuse estimates there are about 6.5 million cocaine and heroin addicts in need of treatment. About 2 million will seek treatment, but they're in for a surprise. There are only 250,000 treatment beds available in the country, so even if a person wants to go straight, it may not be possible.

The government's tactic has been not to offer more treatment facilities, but to slow the supply of drugs. That has been costly and futile.

In 1988, the U.S. Navy and Coast Guard scoured the coastlines for smugglers, using up 2,347 ship-days at a cost of more than $40 million. Only 17 shipments were seized. That adds up to more than $2 million per smuggler. It would be cheaper to give each smuggler the money and set them up in a retirement home in Sun City, Ariz.

Recently, the U.S. attorney in Miami declined to prosecute a drug-smuggling case in which the Customs Service had confiscated half a ton of marijuana. Why? Because the prosecutor's office is swamped and won't touch a pot case of less than 2.5 tons.

Exasperation has spread through every tier of the population. Guess who said this: "If you want to lose the war on drugs, leave it just to law enforcement." It was U.S. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh, and he's right.

Drug czar William Bennett is coming around to the realization that spending a fortune to stop the flow of drugs doesn't work when the traffickers have deeper pockets than one can even imagine. The only thing that makes sense is helping those who are already hooked get unhooked and steering future generations away from the same abyss.

Boll Weevil eradication worldwide endeavor

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — When Polish Communist leader Mieczyslaw Rakowski pleaded for help from Mikhail Gorbachev on the long distance telephone last week, he received no promise of assistance but a no-nonsense warning: When swimming in a swift current, don't swim upstream.

Rakowski, the wily former editor who took over Communist reins last month, called President Gorbachev — not the other way around, as was widely reported. He made the call at a crucial point in Poland's governmental crisis, just after Solidarity leader Lech Walesa told him to "stop rocking the boat" and making "threats" during efforts to form a new government.

Gorbachev's advice ended the immediate threat to the Solidarity-bossed regime headed by Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki. But Rakowski, perhaps the current Communist leader most hated by Solidarity, can be counted on to obstruct sweeping economic reforms. Eradicating Boll Weevils.

Rep. Charles Stenholm's picnic on his farm in Stamford, Texas, Sept. 8 will be attended by two prestigious guests intent on eradicating a renewed infestation of the dreaded Boll Weevils: House Speaker Thomas Foley and Majority Leader Richard Gephardt.

"I'm Speaker of all the Democrats," Foley told us when asked why he would journey all the way to rural Texas for one conservative Democratic Congressman's picnic. In fact, his and Gephardt's attendance is regarded as a fence-mending mission to break up any renewed coalition between Republicans and right-of-center Boll Weevil Democrats. Stenholm was a major figure in the coalition that passed Ronald Reagan's tax and budget legislation in 1981.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

The omission of Southerners from the House Democratic leadership this year was followed by a revived Boll Weevil coalition in the House Ways and Means Commuittee, led by Democratic Rep. Ed Jenkins of Georgia, in support of capital gains tax cuts. When Foley and Gephardt started pressuring Democrats, Jenkins was defended by Stenholm — a warning signal to the Democratic leaders. Rewarding Enemies

The decision to name one of the most powerful liberal staffers on Capitol Hill to a coveted 15-year term on the Court of Veterans Appeals is a top drawer deal between President Bush and Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston.

The selection of Jonathan Steinberg, a key Cranston aide, is supposed to make life easier for the President in the Senate. But it disturbs Bush's own aides nearly as much as it does conservatives. Steinberg was a hair shirt for President Reagan, disrupting his proposals and nominees. No veteran, he spent the Vietnam War as a peace activist.

A footnote: The Rev. Thaddeus Garrett, one of Bush's closest black supporters who was his domestic policy adviser during the vice presidential years, has taken his name out of consideration for an Administration post. He was in line to a United Nations job with ambassadorial rank. That caused political insiders to ask why in the world he dropped out. Cuomo's Complaint Deputy Secretary of Energy W. Henson Moore is near the top of Gov. Mario Cuomo's enemies list after the New Yorker's conference with President Bush about the Shoreham nuclear power plant on Long Island.

Cuomo lit into Moore during the White House meeting, contending he did not have his facts straight. But what really irked the governor were comments to reporters after the meeting by the former Republican Congressman from Louisiana. "It is the world upside down," said Moore, in referring to Cuomo's plans to abandon the plant. Cuomo regarded the Deputy Secretary's comments as retaliation for sharp words uttered behind closed doors.

A footnote: Cuomo's political advisers are low-balling his California Democratic fund-raising speech in Beverly Hills Sept. 10. A similar California speech by the governor four years ago bombed after Cuomo's political lieutenants excited excessively high expectations. Mississippi Miss Sheila Smith, who wants to run for the south Mississppi Congressional seat of her husband — the late Rep. Larkin Smith — after his death in an air crash, may be derailed by an embarrassing political collision with former Ambassador Tommy Anderson.

National Republican leaders had pinned their hopes on Mrs. Smith. State Attorney General Mike Moore, the strongest Democratic candidate to win the seat long-held by Republicans, was a close friend of Smith and might not run against his widow. But Anderson wants to run. As the long-time administrative assistant of Sen. Trent Lott, Anderson would have his crucial support in the Oct. 3 primary. Smith was elected last year to replace Lott.

Since no Republican could win a primary against a Lott-backed candidate in the Senator's backyard, Sheila Smith may be forced out of the race. That sets up a possible Democratic takeover in the Oct. 17 special election.

MARIANNE MEANS

How old are you, really? Add nine months

WASHINGTON — When the Supreme Court retreated from its previous support of limited abortion rights, it conspicuously declined to rule on the constitutionality of a Missouri statute preamble that declared "the life of each human being begins at conception."

Marianne Means

Chief Justice Rehnquist, writing for the plurality, said it was not necessary to address that until the state courts actually applied the concept to restrict individual actions. "The preamble does not by its terms regulate abortion," Rehnquist wrote blithely.

The endorsement in a secular law of a theological tenet accepted by some religions but rejected by others, however, seems a clear violation of the constitutional separation of church and state.

Yet the court plurality also discredited viability — the stage of development at which a fetus could exist outside the mother's body — as the basic test for legitimate state intervention in a pregnancy.

This strongly suggests the justices are sympathetic to the doctrine that life begins not when the fetus "quickens," the standard used by St. Thomas Aquinas, but at the exact moment an egg is fertilized. If that is true, we are in for some incredible legal problems.

Already there are several controversies that indicate what folly it would be to legally endow an embryo that is a day, a week or a month old with the full rights of a living, breathing human being.

I heard about a guy who is defending himself against an arrest for illegal drinking before the age of 21 on the grounds that he is actually nine months older than his birth certificate shows, since his life began when he was conceived.

Think of it. If this idea catches on, we'll all suddenly be nine months older than we have always claimed to be. Horrors!

Then there is the pregnant woman who wants to be let out of a Missouri jail because her fetus is being wrongfully imprisoned. She contends that the state, because of its interest in protecting all unborn, must free an innocent fetus that has never been charged with a crime or allowed an attorney or convicted and sentenced.

And if the law regards fertilized eggs as human beings, can we sell them life insurance? How about issuing Social Security cards? What about inheritance rights?

One of the more imaginative state laws designed to make it difficult for women to obtain an abortion would require doctors to reduce "fetal pain" in abortions. No concern is expressed about the physical or mental pain the pregnant woman might be feeling that may have driven her to want an abortion in the first place.

But if the theory that life begins at conception and not viability is the criteria for such medical restrictions, how is "fetal pain" to be determined? Every doctor knows that a newly fertilized egg has not developed the human capacity for suffering; that comes only later, as the embryo gradually grows.

In Tennessee, an estranged couple is fighting for legal control of seven frozen embryos that the wife regards as "my children" and the husband regards as jointly owned property that is not yet life.

She said she wanted to go ahead to try to become pregnant with an embryo and wants him to pay child support if she succeeds. He said he has a right to control his reproductive life and decide whether to become a father. And he doesn't want to be one, at least not of her child.

The outcome turns entirely on the question of when life begins.

There is, however, a giant flaw in the wife's argument that the tiny eggs removed from her ovaries and combined with her husband's sperm in a petri dish are her children. Even if the court ruled in her favor, she would not give birth to all seven of them. The process involves artificially implanting several of the fertilized embryos in her uterus and later aborting all but the one that is developing best.

Other questions arise. Women who drink too much or take drugs can bear children who are addicted at birth or suffer from serious physical handicaps and ailments. If the fetus is given full legal protection, does it become the responsibility of the state to guard against abuse in the womb by a mother-to-be who smokes, takes drugs and drinks alcohol?

If so, how can the state do this without violating the basic human rights of the pregnant mother? Is the health of a fetus more important than the freedom and privacy of a living female? Do the police break down her door in the middle of the night and haul her off to jail?

Insane as they sound, these questions are not frivolous. This is where we may be headed, thanks to eight men and one woman in black robes.

Soviets, Western forces both cannot depend on Polish army, experts say

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kremlin cannot trust the Polish Army in case of an East-West European confrontation — but neither can Western war planners bank on Polish troops breaking ranks with their Soviet allies during a conflict, experts say.

"It is an unreliable force. I think that has been the Soviet General Staff calculation for years, and I think it has got to be even more the conclusion" now that the communists have lost control of the Polish government, said A. Ross Johnson, a former RAND Corp. expert on Warsaw Pact military forces who now heads Radio Free Europe.

Unless the Soviets have firm control of Polish rail lines, they would face grave difficulties waging a ground war in Europe, according to analysts who have studied the issue for the Pentagon.

Ian Cutherbertson, a British expert on Eastern Europe, said, "The Soviets long have realized the unreliability of the Polish Armed Forces. Most of them are earmarked to protect Soviet communications lines in Poland for the Group of Western Forces," the half-million Soviet troops in East Germany.

The chances that Polish or other Warsaw Pact units actually would see combat in a European war would be greatly diminished if Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev carries out his proposal to reduce Soviet troop levels Eastern Europe from 625,000 to 350,000, while cutting Red Army tank forces in half. President Bush has proposed smaller cuts in Atlantic Alliance forces.

"Gorbachev is in the process of withdrawing the forces that would give the Soviets surprise capability," said a U.S. intelligence analyst.

Questions about the loyalties of the Polish army began long ago, although the emergence of a Solidarity government marks a watershed in western perception of the issue.

Poland has the second largest military in the Warsaw Pact, with just over 600,000 Army and uniformed police forces, including reserves, according to a 1986 RAND study written for the Pentagon by a former Polish officer, Michael Sadykiewicz, now a consultant in London.

According to Sadykiewicz and other analysts with access to intelligence data, Kremlin war plans call for most of the Polish forces to guard rail and communication lines that would be needed to reinforce frontline Soviet units in East Germany.

Many Polish generals, including President Wojciech Jaruzelski, were trained in the Soviet Union, but loyalty to the Kremlin decreases down the ranks of the mainly conscript army, said Johnson and Cutherbertson, a scholar at the Institute for East-West Security Studies in New York.

Poll: Half of Americans expect WWIII

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifty years after World War II erupted, half of all Americans believe global war will consume the world again one day, a Media General-Associated Press poll has found.

A majority of those who expect another world war believe it will happen within two decades, the survey found. And if it does recur, most Americans fear it will escalate into an all-out nuclear conflagration.

A majority of respondents to the poll also said one of World War II's darkest episodes could recur: A holocaust on the order of Nazi Germany's murder of more than 6 million Jews.

The 1,163 respondents were asked: "Do you think that kind of thing could happen again — that is, the killing of millions of people because of their religion or ethnic background?" Six in 10 said it could.

More than a million German soldiers invaded Poland on Sept. 1, 1939, prodding France and Britain to declare war on Germany a few days later. World War II lasted until 1945, claiming the lives of an estimated 50 million people.

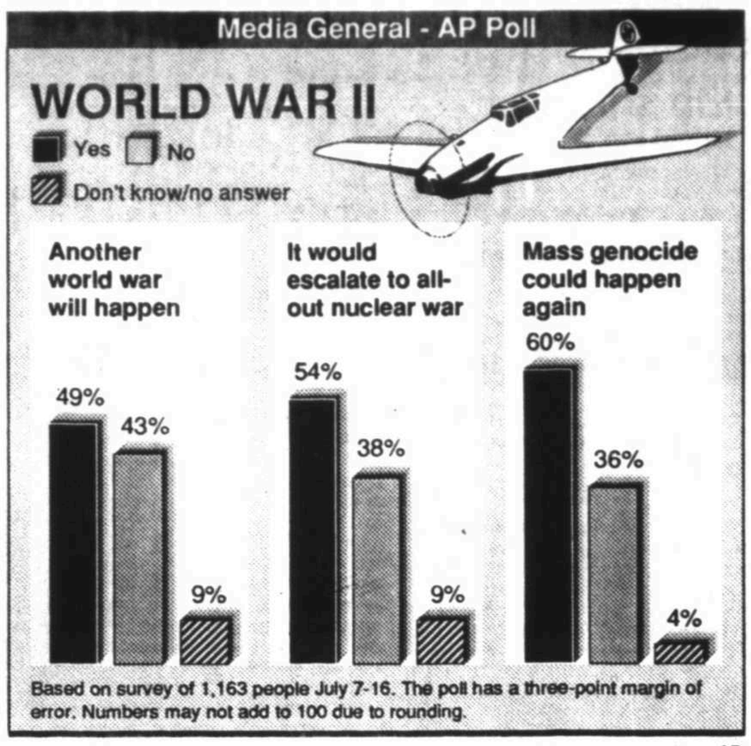
The United States joined the war in 1941 after the Japanese attacked the U.S. Pacific Fleet at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Four years later, the U.S. hastened Japan's surrender by dropping atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki — still the only time nuclear weapons have been used in war.

Six in 10 poll respondents said the Hiroshima bombing, in which up to 200,000 people died, was right. Seventy percent of the men in the survey supported the bombing; half the women agreed.

Two in 10 respondents said they sometimes think of Japan as the enemy because of the war. And with Japan now one of the world's leading economic powers, nearly four in 10 said the United States did too much to help rebuild Japan after the war.

A smaller group, 24 percent, said the United States did too much to help rebuild West Germany, which also is one of the world's strongest economies today. One in 10 said they sometimes think of Germany as the enemy.

Respondents strongly supported the reunification of Germany, which was divided after the war into democratic West Germany and communist-controlled East Germany. Seventy percent favored the two Germanies' coming together again as one country.



AP

Overall, nearly 70 percent considered themselves familiar with the events of World War II. Older people were far more apt to rate themselves as "very familiar" with the war — 57 percent of those older than age 64 chose that category, compared with just 12 percent of those younger than 45.

Familiarity with one aspect of the war was overwhelming: Ninety-five percent said they had heard of the Holocaust. Age was not a factor.

Respondents in the oldest group were less likely to believe there will be another world war. But they were more likely to expect that if one did occur, it would escalate into all-out nuclear war.

The expectation of another world war was greater among women (53 percent) than among men (44 percent). Women also were more apt than men to fear nuclear escalation of a world war, 60-48 percent.

Of the 49 percent who said they expect another world war at some point, 6 percent said it was likely within five years, 29 percent within 10 years and 26 percent within 20 years. Thus 61 percent of this group — or 30 percent overall — foresaw World War III within two decades.

The poll was conducted by telephone July 7-16 among a random sample of adults in the continental United States. It has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

The results were weighted to adjust for variations in the sample. The poll has a 3-point margin of error, meaning that 19 of 20 times its findings should be within 3 points of the result if every adult American were asked the same questions. The error margin is larger for subgroups; it is 8 points, for example, for respondents age 65 and older.

There are other sources of potential error in polls, including the wording and order of questions.

War monument already beset with concerns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The planners of a memorial for the nation's 5.7 million Korean War veterans were already beset with the usual monument concerns — money, vandals and pigeons.

So when weather researchers projected this summer that the memorial site could be underwater by the year 2050, the American Battle Monuments Commission decided that was a problem that just would have to be dealt with later.

Think building a monument is easy?

Organizers of the $6 million project won the government's blessing in 1986 for a prime spot on the Mall, near the Tidal Basin and directly across the Reflecting Pool from the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

The design — submitted by Pennsylvania State University architects — was supposed to be a secret until President Bush presided over the unveiling as a military band played patriotic songs at a White House ceremony on Flag Day last June.

But, in typical Washington fashion, word leaked out beforehand that the architects contemplated statues of 38 soldiers marching unevenly down a tree-lined path toward an American flag.

While the design was praised by veterans' groups, the planners face some vexing problems.

First, the location.

"It's going to be way out there by itself, and the potential for vandalism is pretty high," said Air Force Lt. Col. Mark Coon of the monuments' commission staff.

"It's very tempting to go up and rub the statues and touch and maybe break off a finger or two. One lady even wrote about pigeons sitting on them or dropping on them," Coon said.

This summer, the Washington Post published a map showing how much of the Mall would be under water when the region gets the type of flooding that is expected to occur every 50 years. The Korean memorial site was in a prime flooding spot.

"Somebody, someday will have to be concerned about that," Coon said.

The four Penn State architects are already concerned about it, although lately their efforts have focused more on getting their design approved by a battery of planning and parks commissions.

The designers were picked by a jury of Korean War veterans from among 1,019 entrants, and they are not about to let their work be ruined by water or vandals.

The flood forecast represents "a geotechnic problem that has to be addressed. We're talking to engineers," said Don Leon, an associate architecture professor who is one of the designers.

As for vandalism, "You address those problems by understanding the type of materials to be used," Leon said.

The group is considering making the statues out of granite.

The commission has raised $3.5 million of the $6 million it estimates the memorial will cost. The money must be on hand by the time the project's legislative authority expires in October 1991 or the collected funds are supposed to be returned, according to Coon.

"That's a nightmare thinking about returning all the money. Somebody would come through before that, I'm sure," Coon said.

Despite the problems, the designers don't expect the memorial to stir the controversy that surrounded the Vietnam memorial, which some veterans criticized as unheroic.

The Vietnam memorial is a V-shaped wall bearing the names of those killed in the war.

Clash erupts after youths freed on bail

NEW YORK (AP) — People protesting the shooting death of a black teen-ager twice marched through a predominantly white neighborhood and were met by racial taunts, cries of "Go home," and residents holding watermelons.

As the five white youths charged in the killing of 16-year-old Yusef Hawkins were freed on bail, hundreds of residents from their Brooklyn neighborhood lined the streets to make the demonstrators feel unwelcome.

Some residents feared the racially motivated killing would scar Bensonhurst the way the 1986 death of a black man in Howard Beach disgraced that community in the borough of Queens.

"Find the guy who pulled the trigger and leave us alone," one man shouted Sunday.

On Saturday, blacks marching through the mainly Italian neighborhood heard jeers and were spat upon. Some whites held up watermelons as 300 or so blacks marched.

On Sunday, the Rev. Timothy Mitchell and other clergymen led more than 70 protesters, about two-thirds white, in a prayer vigil on the Bensonhurst street where Hawkins was shot dead Wednesday as he was confronted by a gang of bat-wielding whites.

The marchers were then escorted along the 10-block route by more than 15 police officers on motorcycles and dozens more on foot as hundreds of white residents shouted at them from behind barricades.

A 24-year-old man was given a summons for disorderly conduct after a small firecracker blew up among the demonstrators, said Sgt. Ed Burns, a police spokesman.

Mitchell, who conducted a brief memorial service at the site of the killing, said the marchers were asserting their right to walk anywhere.

"We are not going to get passes to go to Bensonhurst and we're not going to get passes to go to Howard Beach. We have a right to go wherever we want," he said.

David Wynyard of the Brooklyn Residents Against Bias Related Violence said the whites marched Sunday "to show that white people are outraged by such incidents."

Many residents watched passively from windows and storefronts while others walked along the street waving posters in the air and chanting, "Go smoke your crack" or "Go home."

"We are home," demonstrators responded.

NATION IN BRIEF

Youths charged with shooting

TEMPLE HILLS, Md. (AP) — Four children ranging in age from 9 to 14 were apprehended for allegedly firing .22 caliber rifles at passing motorists on Interstate 95, wounding one person, police said Sunday.

The youngsters were captured about 8:30 p.m. Saturday after a citizen reported gunfire coming from a wooded area near the highway and police sent up a helicopter to investigate, state police spokesman Chuck Jackson said.

The shootings apparently began Aug. 18, when a 49-year-old Calvert County man was wounded in the shoulder while driving north on I-95, Jackson said.

A 14-year-old La Plata youth and an 11-year-old from Temple Hills were charged with assault with intent to maim. The 14-year-old also was charged with two counts of assault with intent to murder and one count of destruction of property, Jackson said.

Police believe the 14-year-old fired his weapon in the direction of the state police as they scoured the woods and as the helicopter circled above, Jackson said.

The 9-year-old and his 12-year-old brother, both of Temple Hills, were released into the custody of their parents without being charged.

Troops deployment backed

NEW YORK (AP) — Half the American public favors deploying U.S. troops against drug dealers overseas, although most believe drug traffickers would try to retaliate violently, a poll has found.

Fifty-three percent of the 600 adults in the Gallup poll for Newsweek magazine said they would favor sending troops to fight or arrest drug traffickers in Colombia or other major drug exporting centers.

Thirty-four percent opposed and 13 percent were not sure, the magazine reported Sunday.

At the same time, 64 percent said they believed the drug cartels would retaliate with "increased violence against Americans" if more foreign drug traffickers were brought to this country for prosecution.

Nineteen percent did not expect retaliation and 17 percent were unsure.

The poll found 85 percent support penalties against casual users of illegal drugs, such as the temporary suspension of a driver's license.

Gallup conducted the poll by telephone Thursday and Friday. The results have a 5-point margin of sampling error.

Safety rules strengthened

WASHINGTON (AP) — Auto safety advocates say it's no longer a question of whether minivans and light trucks will have to pass the same safety regulations as passenger cars — but when.

"You look at auto safety in general and the issue of minivans stands out like a sore thumb," said Clarence Ditlow, director of the Center for Auto Safety, the non-profit agency founded by consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

Ditlow says there has been enough public outcry and statistical information that the government can no longer ignore the regulation discrepancy between passenger cars and minivans.

Jeffrey Miller, acting administrator of the National Highway Transportation Safety Administration, agrees that regulations will be implemented within the next few years. But he says the reason is mostly to reassure the public, not because minivans are less safe.

"It's very important for motorists to understand that most safety standards already apply," said Miller.

Statistics from the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety show that the accident death rate per 10,000 vans last year was 1.4, an increase over the year before but only slightly higher than the 1.3 rate of large cars and much lower than the 3.0 rate of small cars.

Swindall gets one year

ATLANTA (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Pat Swindall was sentenced to one year in prison today for lying to a federal grand jury about a loan he negotiated with an undercover agent posing as a drug-money launderer.

U.S. District Judge Richard C. Freeman also imposed a $30,000 fine plus a $450 fee against Swindall, who was convicted on nine counts of perjury in June.

The two-term Republican from Atlanta's eastern suburbs was convicted June 20 on nine counts of perjury for lying to a federal grand jury about his 1987 dealings with an undercover agent who had posed as a drug-money launderer.

Evidence in his trial showed that Swindall repeatedly talked with the undercover agent and a political associate as he was seeking $850,000 to finish his luxurious Stone Mountain home, even after a time when he told the grand jury he had "walked away" from the proposed deal.

President doubles at softball, strikes out at fishing expedition

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — A double in softball is letting President Bush boast about his batting skills, but it's the same old story at sea, where the vacationing president is still looking for his first catch.

Bush was headed out again early this morning to try to end the skein of fruitless fishing expeditions.

The president came home empty-handed again Sunday evening from what he had hoped would be "a rendezvous with some bluefish."

The fishing trip capped a frenetic day of outdoor activity for the 65-year-old president, who jogged, played tennis, pitched horseshoes and got in two innings of softball before going fishing with national security adviser Brent Scowcroft. The sports-minded Bush called it a "quintathlon."

He and wife Barbara also squeezed in a pair of church services — one abbreviated — with visiting evangelist Billy Graham and his wife Ruth.

The president, entering the final week of his 20-day vacation, had no reaction Sunday to news of an Israeli raid against a Shiite Moslem stronghold in Lebanon.

White House aides also said they could not confirm reports from Colombia that that country's justice minister was seeking asylum in the United States.

The president skipped his usual round of golf to take part in a softball game pitting the White House press corps and townspeople against Bush's staff and off-duty Secret Service agents.

When Bush arrived, his side trailed 7-0, but it was 7-6 when the president took his leave two innings later, after going 1-for-2 at bat and recording four putouts at first base.

Bush flied out to center his first time up, then legged out a double on a ball down the first-base line.

The captain of the 1948 Yale baseball team — which played in the College World Series — expressed chagrin at his reputation for being a good fielder, but no batter.

"I think it's a vicious assault not only on my baseball ability, but on my character," he said in mock dudgeon.

On Tuesday Bush will confer with Cabinet members at his Walker's Point home about the drug strategy he will unveil Sept. 5.

Lutherans submit motion on abortion

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Lutherans worked on a compromise approach to abortion, an issue that in the past divided the three denominations that merged last year to form the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

A motion was submitted Sunday at the church's eight-day legislative assembly, which ends Wednesday, asking individuals "to act on their Christian convictions" while the church makes a long-range study.

The motion, by Louise Shoemaker of Philadelphia, was to supplant a resolutions committee proposal calling simply for a church study, and for people to use prior church guidance.

The Lutheran Church in America, the American Lutheran Church and the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches merged into the 5.3-million member church on Jan. 1, 1988. The three denominations had taken varying positions on abortion.

The substitute motion, which reportedly satisfied a women's caucus that had sought church action to oppose restrictions on abortion, said church advocacy should involve appealing for "free access to services for individuals" and "work for justice, especially with and for the poor."

Meanwhile, anti-abortion pickets showed up outside the O'Hare Exposition Center where the new church's first policy-making assembly is being held with signs reading: "ELCA: It's Your Baby Now," "Abortion Stops A Beating Heart" and "Lutheran General, Stop Killing."

The pickets said they were mostly from a group that for two years has been picketing Lutheran General Hospital in nearby Park Ridge, Ill., which performs abortions.

Bishop Herbert W. Chilstrom, the church's president, said in a letter that the hospital does not provide abortion on demand.

Midland pair finds fulfillment together after accidents

Perhaps fate guided a special Midland man and woman down their separate roads of life until their pathways merged.

Joyce and Bruce Ryan led their professional lives in different parts of the country. Each fell asleep behind the wheel of their vehicles and crashed.

Each has been confined to a wheelchair ever since.

Ryan, now 37, was an oil field worker living in Wyoming with his wife and two children. It was March 25, 1981, when he wrecked his company truck after hours of tiresome driving late at night.

During the almost two hours he spent lying on the ground and waiting for help, he realized he would never walk again.

A year and six months later, Mrs. Ryan, a respiratory therapist, was on vacation and driving out of Sioux Falls, S.D. A mile outside of town she fell asleep, and her car went off the road and rolled, trapping her in the vehicle until paramedics arrived.

"My main concern at the time was that I was going to get sick and throw up on my dress," said Mrs. Ryan, 32, who suffered a broken neck. "I ended up being a patient in the hospital I worked at for five years."

The Ryans, who met in a Colorado rehabilitation center in November 1982, celebrated their third anniversary this year.

They have carved out what they call a "regular" lifestyle in their west Midland home, chosen because of its wide doorways and easy room-to-room access.

They spend their days tending their flourishing rose garden, performing household chores and getting involved with church activities.

The couple also travels extensively. They have toured the U.S. east coast in their modified van, covering about 2,650 miles in 30 days.

Neither of the Ryans is employed, but Mrs. Ryan plans to take college classes and become an alcohol and drug abuse counselor.

Today they joke about each other's handicaps, but it wasn't the case in the past as they spent years in and out of hospitals and rehabilitation centers.

Shortly after returning from the hospital to his Montana home, Ryan's wife took the children and left him. He said communication with his family was frayed by his days spent just sitting on the porch and mulling over his disabilities.

Ryan returned to a Colorado rehabilitation center in November 1982 and soon met his new wife-to-be, who he said played a "mean game of pool."

Mrs. Ryan, who wound up in the center soon after her accident, said she didn't like him at first. But she soon found his abrasive outward appearance gave way to a "teddy bear" inner self.

RYANS

"We were just friends at the time," she said. "The furthest thing in my mind was getting into a relationship."

Ryan eventually moved to his own home in Denver, where he said he suffered "the bleakest days since the accident." He said he spent his time there playing poker, drinking beer and working part-time job in computer sales.

"It was a time for reflection and adjustment," Ryan recalled.

The Ryans continued their friendship through letters and telephone calls. Wanting to get out on her own, Mrs. Ryan moved to Midland in July 1983.

The romantic sparks didn't start flying until August 1985, when Mrs. Ryan invited him down for a visit, and he decided to plant his roots here.

The two said interacting with someone with similar disabilities has helped heal emotional scars.

"We've both adjusted and adapted," Ryan said.

"There's very little the both of us can't do."

Teen battles leukemia without tears

CANTON, Texas (AP) — Justin Greer's 2,800 friends have never seen him cry, even though he spent most of the last school year in a hospital undergoing chemotherapy.

His father, Lawrence Greer, has seen him cry only once — the day last October when doctors told the 16-year-old football player that what he had thought was a bad case of the flu actually was leukemia.

"He cried a little bit then," said Greer, 51. "But then he kind of squared off and said, 'Well, I'm not dead yet.' And I haven't seen him cry since, although he's told me that sometimes he cries at night when he's by himself."

Since the diagnosis, the rural community of Canton, 60 miles east of Dallas, has rallied behind the young athlete, raising thousands of dollars through blood drives and fish fries.

Local youngsters have stood on street corners with tin cans, seeking donations to help defray the astronomical cost of Justin's medical care. Although the family has insurance and both of Justin's parents have full-time jobs, the medical bills have been steep.

"Justin's a great young man. He's got a lot of character," said Mal Fowler, coach of the Canton High School Eagles, for which Justin played defensive tackle until last year. "He's handling this as well as anybody could.

"The day he found out he had leukemia, he came by to tell the coaches and players what had happened. His dad was with him, but he wouldn't let him talk. He said, 'Coach, I've got something to tell you and it's bad.'"

The team dedicated last year's football season to the stricken player. Team members wore his number on their helmets and black bands on their arms.

Although doctors had told Justin that the disease seemed to be in remission, a more grim diagnosis was made in June, canceling Justin's plans to play football this year.

Recently he sat on the sidelines, giving encouragement, while the team practiced for the new season.

"Y'all looked good yesterday," he said to a friend on the team. "I didn't see anybody dying."

Justin currently is seeking a bone marrow donor. Chances of finding a donor are one in 15,000, according to figures from the National Marrow Donor program.

If a donor is found, Justin will have a 60 percent chance of surviving, said John Gossett, who runs the special blood services lab at Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas, where Justin receives treatment.

"Right now every effort is being made and every (donor) registry has been utilized to find a donor for Justin," Gossett said.

Justin Greer, 16, poses recently at his home in Canton, as his parents, Mickie and Lawrence Greer, work on a scrapbook.

Justin's friends at Canton High School have driven to Dallas during his hospital stays to visit him. On a recent Saturday, about 25 of them showed up at the Greer home unannounced carrying boxes of doughnuts to share with the boy they had voted the school's friendliest for the last two years.

"Those kids wouldn't let him rest until it was time to go to bed. That was how he got through," said Mickie Greer, Justin's mother. "We could not have made it through this without this town. They have made an unbearable situation bearable."

Although Justin, who was in accelerated classes, missed about six months of school last year, two retired teachers tutored him free so he would not be held back. He finished the school year with A's, B's and one C — in health.

"What gift is more valuable than education?" said Mrs. Greer, 47. "These people will never know what they've done for him."

Sitting proudly atop the television set in the family's rustic home near Farm Road 1255 is a framed letter to Justin signed by President Bush.

Richard "Turkey" Jones, Justin's best friend, wrote Bush asking him to write to his "good school buddy" and encouraging the president to promote the need for bone marrow donors for leukemia patients.

A letter from Bush recently arrived at the Greer home shortly after a White House staffer telephoned Baylor to inquire about Justin.

"I felt bad for him because everybody felt he was cured," Turkey said of Justin's brief remission. "It kind of surprised me. But he's been in a good mood all the way through. He's been pretty up."

Justin talks about possibly attending Baylor University in Waco and becoming an oncologist — a cancer specialist. He is considering the medical profession, he said, because of the positive reinforcement Baylor doctors and staff have given him.

A basketball signed by members of the Dallas Mavericks sits on a shelf in Justin's room, along with rows of autographed photos of Dallas Cowboys, the team whose uniform Justin had hoped to wear someday. An autographed photo of former Cowboys coach Tom Landry offers words of encouragement: "Keep up your faith and the Lord will bless you."

In a basket beneath his nightstand are hundreds of baseball cards — courtesy of the Jolly Rancher candy company, which also received a letter from Turkey.

Justin talks of his illness at times, but almost as if it is secondary to other events in his life. He skips easily from the subject of leukemia to football.

"When I come out of remission, every week I can start telling that I'm getting sick some more," he said. "It takes me a little while to get built back up."

Mrs. Greer said she has hope that her son will conquer the disease.

"I said, 'God, I'll handle whatever you put me through, just please don't take him away from me,'" she said. "And so far he hasn't."

Furloughs of three inmates may be against guidelines

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — At least three Texas prison inmates convicted of aggravated robbery were among 36 Bexar County prisoners released on furloughs this year, despite new restrictions prohibiting such releases for violent offenders.

The San Antonio Express-News reported Sunday the three were released for unsupervised leaves in Bexar County in spite of stricter regulations.

Last fall, Gov. Bill Clements suspended furlough releases after news reports that Texas permitted several violent offenders to be released on the special passes.

The state prison board suspended inmate furloughs last October, but reinstated the program in November with new restrictions that exclude sex offenders and drug dealers. Murderers and many other violent offenders remained eligible for furlough.

The Express-News compared prison furlough guidelines with a list of Bexar County inmates who were allowed to take leaves during the first seven months of 1989.

In one case, a Bexar County man sentenced to 10 years in prison for killing his wife, was allowed to visit the county from July 27 to Aug. 2 this year.

The man has been rejected for parole four times.

According to Texas Department of Corrections rules, convicts excluded from consideration include those convicted of "capitol murder, aggravated kidnapping, aggravated sexual assault, aggravated robbery, or any offense in which the inmate used or exhibited a deadly weapon during the commission of the offense or during immediate flight therefrom."

16-year-old assaulted near home

From Staff Reports

Midland police are investigating the sexual assault of a 16-year-old youth who was grabbed early this morning as she got out of a car in front of her parents' house.

The girl drove up to the house in west Midland between 1:45 a.m. and 2:15 a.m., and parked by a curb. When she got out of the car, she was grabbed by a man, spokesman Cpl. Jim White said.

The man, who punched the girl at least once in the face and threatened her, then forced her to walk two doors down where he sexually assaulted her in the yard, White said. After the assault, the man ran away. He was not believed to have a vehicle, police said.

The suspect was described as a Hispanic man with shoulder length hair. He was wearing a dark blue or black jogging suit, according to police.

The victim was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital where she was treated and released.

Police remind drivers of school zones

From Staff Reports

Midland police remind local drivers that St. Ann's School opened classes today and that officers will be patrolling school zones surrounding the school at 2000 W. Illinois.

The all-day zones have a posted speed limit of 20 mph.

Cpl. Jim White of the Midland Police Department advises that there is "no grace period" associated with enforcement of the slower speeds.

MHMR warns against fund raising activities

From Staff Reports

"We have been advised that there are individuals in the community falsely representing the centers by soliciting donations," said Jim Hanophy, director of special services for the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health & Mental Retardation.

He noted that the centers are not engaged in any fund raising activities at this time.

Attorneys say verdict question of intention

By HOLDEN LEWIS

LUBBOCK (AP) — Victims or crooks? It's that easy, that hard.

For six months, federal prosecutors have been trying to paint a picture of deceit and conniving, claiming developer D.L. "Danny" Faulkner and six others stole $135 million from savings and loans through convoluted land deals.

Not so, say 12 attorneys for the defendants, who include former Garland Mayor James L. Toler: They were victims of Texas' real estate bust, and of a lying, convicted felon.

Since Wednesday, 11 women and one man have been in a second-floor jury room in Lubbock's federal courthouse, trying to figure out the intent behind land deals seven years ago and 350 miles away, along Interstate 30 east of Dallas.

"In white-collar crime, there's no question the defendants committed all the acts. The question is whether the events were a crime," said Edwin Tomko, a lawyer now in private practice who helped organize the federal bank fraud task force in Dallas.

"It's strictly an issue of intentions — can the prosecution prove that the defendant intended to commit a crime?"

Prosecutors say the defendants certainly intended to commit crimes by artificially inflating land prices through fanciful appraisals and back-and-forth sales to one another called "land flips." Sometimes the same piece of property would change ownership up to six times in one day, increasing in price with each sale.

The government says the defendants used inflated values to borrow money from Empire Savings and Loan Association of Mesquite and four other thrifts in Texas and Arkansas, then diverted the money to their own uses.

There is no question the deals happened, but defense attorneys say land appraisers might have been guilty of poor judgment, not fraud, and they point out that land flips are not inherently illegal.

Details of the complex testimony might not matter as much as how the defendants came across, said Bob Bennett, a former Harris County assistant district attorney who now represents white-collar defendants.

"The jury is eventually going to make a decision based on whether they think these guys are crooks or just businessmen taken in by the economy," he said.

That would be an ironic way to end the so-called I-30 Condo Trial, moved to Lubbock because of publicity. It is the largest S&L fraud case to go to trial. Prosecutors say they were alerted to the deal-making by reports in The Dallas Morning News.

An 88-count indictment accuses Faulkner, his partner Toler, former Empire Chairman Spencer H. Blain Jr., S&L employee Paul Arlin Jensen and real-estate salesman Kenneth Cansler of racketeering and conspiring to steal $135 million from the thrifts. Land appraisers Arthur Formann and Paul Tannehill are accused of falsifying appraisals in connection with the alleged conspiracy.

Empire was closed by regulators in 1984 in a $279 million deal that foretold the coming collapse of other thrifts several years later when oil and real estate prices plummeted.

Unlike some of the smaller trials involving thrifts, there are no charges of using depositors' money to buy influence or sex; there's just a mind-numbing array of numbers recounted by 120 witnesses describing dozens of real-estate transactions in excruciating detail.

Prosecutors have "an extremely difficult assignment — getting the jury's attention to the facts of the case based on financial documents and complicated financial transactions," Bennett said.

More than 3,000 documents of evidence are available in file cabinets in the jury room. Jurors have fat blue binders containing notes they took during testimony.

The jurors appeared last week to be settling in for long deliberations, asking U.S. District Judge Sam Cummings at one point if they could have their meals catered.

They also asked for the transcript of the month-long testimony given by Clifford Sinclair, the government's key witness, but Cummings refused, saying they would have to ask for specific parts.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Terry Hart tried to provoke jurors by describing mind-boggling changes of financial fortune: the ambulance driver turned S&L employee who bought a $4 million mansion, then a $2 million Boeing 727 cargo plane; the S&L chairman on a $30,000 salary who bought 63 acres for $560,000, then sold the parcel and three more acres six months later for $16 million.

Prosecutors used the charts showing who paid whom how much and when. They showed black-and-white aerial photographs of the stretch along I-30 in Garland where the land sales took place.

Defense attorneys parried by using color aerial photographs to show how nice the area looked. Faulkner's attorney, Cheryl Wattley, accused the government of "looking at this thing as if they were wearing dirty glasses."

The defendants contend they are victims of both the economic bust that hit Texas and of Sinclair, who is serving a 13-year sentence on a related bank-fraud conviction and was a government witness. The defendants say Sinclair cheated them, then framed them to please prosecutors and win a reduction in his sentence.

To bolster the contention that the defendants intended no harm, defense attorneys have tried to endear their clients to jurors.

In her closing argument, Ms. Wattley quoted a businessman who described Faulkner as a folk hero. She described how Faulkner, a sharecropper's son, rose from being an illiterate house painter to become an illiterate multimillionaire land developer.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Exploring new avenues will lead to job opportunities. Make joint plans with mate or partner. A new relationship is both pleasing and puzzling. Postpone making a commitment until you are sure.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ6 ♡873 ◇AQ653 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♡	?

What do you bid now?
A.—The choice is between a gross overbid, three diamonds, and a slight underbid, two spades. Since gross overbids lead to major disasters, we would opt for the conservative two spades in the hope of getting a chance to catch up later.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ1073 ♡AKJ ◇Q107 ♣62
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Your hand values to 17 points, so you are worth a try for game. We would bid three diamonds, asking partner to evaluate his holding in that suit for game purposes.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A9874 ♡KJ6 ◇83 ♣AQ7
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Your task is to warn partner that you have no fit, a thin suit and values in the unbid suits. The way to get all that information across in one fell swoop is to bid three no trump.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠97 ♡AKJ95 ◇63 ♣AKQ4
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—If you moved toward slam, we hope it was because you forgot that partner was a passed hand. If not, we question your hand valuation. You have five possible losers, and you can hope for at most three cover cards from partner. That still leaves you with two losers. Sign off in four hearts.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K763 ♡8 ◇AKJ987 ♣K6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♣	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—We don't blame you if you bid six spades, but we feel you should investigate grand slam possibilities. The way to do so is to cue-bid four diamonds, which tends to show both top honors since it is in the suit you bid initially, and see how partner reacts.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K763 ♡8 ◇AKJ987 ♣K6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	4 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—To all intents and purposes all side-suit losers have been accounted for. (The only exception is where partner holds specifically three low diamonds.) Therefore, a grand slam depends only on the trump situation. To find out whether partner holds both missing top spade honors, use the Grand Slam Force. Bid five no trump.

Author Irving Stone dies at 86

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Irving Stone, whose pioneering biographical novels of Vincent Van Gogh, Michelangelo, Sigmund Freud and others brought history to life for millions, is dead. He was 86.

Stone died of heart failure late Saturday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. His family said he had been receiving treatment for cancer there since July 24.

Stone

With the 1934 epic "Lust For Life" about Van Gogh, Stone perfected the art form of telling history with a human focus. During the next half-century, he wrote a stream of best-selling biographical novels, including "The Agony and the Ecstasy."

Doubleday & Co. Inc., Stone's publisher, estimates his books have sold more than 30 million copies.

"The only thing he ever wanted to do was write books and that's what he did all his life and we did it together," his wife and editor, Jean, said Sunday. "That will be his immortality — the books he left."

She said her husband had been working on a biographical novel before he was hospitalized and she hoped it could be completed by someone else. She didn't disclose the subject.

Stone's fictionalized portraits include Jack London in "Sailor on Horseback," Abraham and Mary Lincoln in "Love is Eternal," Michelangelo in "The Agony and the Ecstasy," Sigmund Freud in "The Passions of the Mind," Charles Darwin in "The Origin," Andrew and Rachel Jackson in "The President's Lady" and Eugene V. Debs in "Adversary in the House."

Stone was born in San Francisco on July 14, 1903, to Charles and Pauline Tennenbaum. His parents divorced when he was 7 and he took his stepfather's surname when his mother remarried.

He began writing short stories at age 9. He said the following year, he was inspired to pursue a writing career after he read Jack London's largely autobiographical novel about a self-made writer, "Martin Eden."

He graduated from the University of California, Berkeley, in 1923 with a political science degree and earned a master's degree from the University of Southern California on an economics fellowship.

Three years later, Stone went to Paris, where he met impressionist artists. Out of it came "Lust For Life," which was turned down by 17 leading publishers.

Stone recalled in 1984: "Always with the same comment: How can you sell a book about an unknown Dutch painter to the American public in the middle of a depression?"

Stone finally sold the book to a new publisher, Longmans Green, after he accepted editing suggestions from his wife, who was his fiancee at the time.

In addition to his wife, Stone is survived by their son, Kenneth, and daughter, Paula.

A private memorial service will be held at Leo Baeck Temple in Los Angeles this week. There will be no funeral.

De Palma

MONTREAL (AP) — Criticism of "Casualties of War" reflects the continuing American conflict over the Vietnam war, says director Brian De Palma, rather than a fundamental problem with his film's portrayal of the war.

The film, starring Michael J. Fox and Sean Penn, depicts the rape and murder of a Vietnamese woman by American soldiers and is based on a 1969 report in The New Yorker magazine.

Veterans organizations say the film promotes false stereotypes about American soldiers' conduct in the war, while other critics have characterized it as gratuitously violent.

"I've got many letters from veterans who say the movie's completely accurate about the kind of things that went on there," De Palma told reporters Sunday at the World Film Festival. "So the thing was divided then and it's divided now."

He said that because of his critics' various political agendas, "they aren't really paying attention to anything that appears on the screen."

De Palma, 48, said Americans needed to make movies about Vietnam "to continually remind ourselves that we make mistakes and that we can make them again."

Hershey

OXFORD, Conn. (AP) — Actress Barbara Hershey and other residents of nearby Southbury are fighting a zoning change that would permit "war games" in the countryside around this quaint New England town.

Hershey, who has starred in movies such as "Beaches," "The Natural" and "The Right Stuff," said through a spokesman she was "appalled that anyone would want to hurt this historic neighborhood with anything as ugly as war games."

Southbury resident Heather Kennedy said she was concerned about the increased traffic. Southbury is 6 miles west of Oxford; the two towns are about 80 miles northeast of New York City.

"Right now there's maybe 20 or 25 cars," Kennedy said. "I'm mainly opposed to the traffic up and down the street and I'm opposed to the war games being right here in the neighborhood."

Nelson

IMPERIAL, Neb. (AP) — Country music entertainer Willie Nelson says he hopes another pair of Farm Aid concerts will help rekindle concern about the nation's continuing farm crisis.

"Music is always the best communicator," Nelson told reporters Saturday during an appearance with Democratic Sen. Bob Kerrey before a concert at the Chase County Fair.

Nelson said he plans to have a small Farm Aid concert in Washington, D.C., in March, followed by a larger concert a few weeks later, perhaps at the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis. Previous concerts, the first in 1985, were held in Champaign, Ill.; Austin, Texas; and Lincoln.

The benefit concerts, featuring rock and country music stars, have brought much needed attention to the plight of farmers, Nelson said. The first three raised $6.5 million for farmers, but that's a "drop in the bucket" considering farmers' needs, he said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Rock singer and songwriter Don Henley thinks of himself as a socially motivated citizen who happens to be in the rock 'n' roll business.

"I read novels, political biographies — there's plenty of news everywhere," he said in a recent interview from Boston. "There's a lot of news but not much analysis."

Henley, 42, formerly of the Eagles, began a solo career in 1982.

His current album, "The End of the Innocence," looks critically at greed and corruption in America.

"It's about trying to reconcile the way things ought to be with the way things are," Henley said. "It's about trying to grow up."

Chilean political literature reappearing

By EDUARDO GALLARDO

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Political literature is booming as the bans and restrictions imposed by Chile's right-wing military government appear to be coming to an end.

Books ranging from Gabriel Garcia Marquez's latest to controversial political essays have become best-sellers, and literary experts believe the trend will continue because of the outgoing government of conservative President Gen. Augusto Pinochet.

After seizing power in a bloody 1973 coup, Pinochet decreed a total ban on political activities. Congress was closed, political parties disbanded and severe censorship on books and the news media were enforced.

In the last few years, however, most bans have gradually disappeared as the nation has prepared to pick a successor to Pinochet. The vote, in the first presidential election since 1970, is scheduled for Dec. 14.

Political activity now is virtually free, bringing a boom to political literature.

Experts say the long period they lived without access to a variety of freely published information left Chileans ripe for the wave of political literature.

"The public was thirsty for political information," said Ignacio Gonzalez, a journalist who authored "The Day Allende Died," one of the most successful books in Chile in 1988.

The novelized book is a vivid, well-researched account of events at the government house on Sept. 11, 1973, the day Pinochet toppled elected President Salvador Allende. Allende, a Marxist, died in the takeover.

Gonzalez' book sold 11,000 copies in three months, a notable figure in this small South American country where sales of 3,000 books is considered a best-seller.

"I think people reacted with enthusiasm because of the attraction of learning things that had been forbidden to them for so long," Gonzalez said in an interview.

Even more successful was "The Silent Revolution," a report on the achievements of the Pinochet government, by Joaquin Lavin, a conservative economist.

Published in December 1987, Lavin's book sold over 150,000 copies in 11 months, becoming the second-largest selling book in Chile's history, Lavin claims. He said it places second only to "Farewell to the 7th Regiment," a novel based on the 1879 war that Chile won over Peru and Bolivia.

An official at the Chilean Book Chamber said that although no precise figures have been compiled, Lavin's claim appears correct.

"I just tried to tell Chileans how the country is that they live in these days," Lavin said. "The book shows them how their country has changed."

Gonzalez and Lavin believe public interest on political books will survive the end of military rule.

Book records show that at least three political titles have appeared in the weekly lists of 6 top-selling books for over a year.

The best-selling non-political book in recent months was "The General in his Labyrinth," a biography of Simon Bolivar, the Venezuelan-born liberator of South America, by Colombian Nobel Prize-winning author Gabriel Garcia Marquez. The book has sold 65,000 copies in eight months.

Experts say it's too early to determine the effects the availability of political books is having on Chileans.

Among the leading books on political matters in recent years are those by Gonzalez and Lavin.

Also, "Gen. Prats' Memoirs," by Gen. Carlos Prats, the army commander under Allende who was assassinated in exile in Argentina, published postumously; "The Buchi Phenomenon," a bigraphical-political study on Hernan Buchi, the pro-government presidential candidate in the December election; "Moscow Here, the Soviet Union and Perestroika" as seen by a Chilean journalist, Bernardo de la Masa; "Yes or No," a study prior to last October's referendum in which voters rejected a military proposal to extend Pinochet's rule until 1997, by Hermogenes Perez de Arce, a right-wing author and politician.

Add Moldavia to Kremlin's ethnic problems

KISHINEV, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Add Moldavia to the ranks of the Kremlin's ethnic headaches — the majority Moldavians are pressing to make their Romanian dialect the official language of this Soviet republic.

Leaders of the Moldavian-dominated People's Front see a language law, to be debated Tuesday by the republic's Supreme Soviet, or parliament, as the first step toward emulating three Baltic republics' drive for political and economic autonomy.

Activists of the opposing Yedinstvo, or Unity, movement, fear it will be the first step toward discriminating against minority Russians, Ukrainians, Bulgarians, Jews and Christian Turks the way Moldavians have been put down for years.

An estimated 250,000 to 300,000 people rallied Sunday in this capital, waving flags and banners boosting ethnic demands. Similar crowds are expected outside government buildings Tuesday to await the Supreme Soviet's decision.

Mikhai Ghimpu, acting chairman of the People's Front, recently said the language law is a matter of national survival.

"When a language disappears, a people disappears," he said. "We reached that point. Every day, everywhere, it's Russian." Although 64 percent of the republic's 4.2 million people are Moldavians, they make up only 43 percent of Kishinev's population.

The law would make Moldavian, a dialect of the language spoken in neighboring Romania, the official language. It would also restore the Latin alphabet that the Soviet dictator Josef Stalin replaced with Cyrillic when the Soviet Union forcibly took the land from Romania in 1940.

Leaders of the People's Front see the adoption of the language law as vital to protecting Moldavian culture. They are one of many Soviet ethnic groups who have been agitating for more autonomy from the Kremlin.

More than 1 million residents in the Baltics linked hands last week in a giant chain to protest a Soviet-Nazi pact of 50 years ago that led to the Soviet annexation of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

On Sunday, the Communist Party daily Pravda said the need for a Moldavian language law was obvious.

Said Pyotr Shornikov, a leader of Yedinstov, "We are divided by a fundamental question — our attitude toward democracy. They demand preference, we demand equality."

Both sides say their movements aim for broad economic reform of a republic once ruled by Leonid I. Brezhnev and termed by Shornikov "one of the epicenters of stagnation." But they say their opposite stands on the language law makes it difficult to cooperate.

"We read stories about apartheid in South Africa, where people are barred from any work except manual labor if their skin is the wrong color," Pyotr Zalozhnikov, a 45-year-old Russian worker, said by telephone from Tiraspol. "This is what this law would do to all people here who are not Moldavians. In one day we'll be made deaf-mutes. Our children will have no future."

Rebel arrested in killing of American

DAVAO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Troops arrested a communist rebel who admitted taking part in the April slaying of a U.S. Army colonel in a Manila suburb, the military announced today.

Juanito Itaas, 25, was arrested with a companion in a public jeep here Sunday evening after intelligence reports linked him to the April 21 slaying of Col. James Rowe, the military said.

Rowe, a decorated Vietnam War veteran who escaped after five years in a Vietcong prison camp, was slain on his way to work at the Joint U.S. Military Assistance Group in Quezon City.

Rowe, 51, of McAllen, Texas, was assigned to a unit which provides training and logistical support to the Philippine armed forces. Rebels claim the organization also assists the military clandestinely in its counter-insurgency operations.

Communist rebels claimed responsibility for the assassination. Maj. Gen. Ramon Montanao, acting military chief of staff, said he considered the Rowe case solved.

Six blacks die in fighting

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Six blacks were killed in a series of attacks near the southeastern city of Pietermaritzburg, the site of vicious black faction fighting that has claimed almost 2,000 lives the past three years, police said today.

Three men were fatally shot in the Imbali township, police said, including two who were leaving a peace rally held by a youth group.

In the nearby Mpumalanga township, police found two charred bodies and also reported a man was shot dead in a clash between two unidentified groups. The police unrest report, which covers incidents from the previous 24 hours, provided no additional details.

The main combatants in Pietermaritzburg are the banned United Democratic Front, the country's largest anti-apartheid coalition, and Inkatha, a political organization headed by Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi.

Abuse of power noted

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Witnesses at the military trial of a former Cuban interior minister indicated he abused power, stole government money and had illegal weapons, according to a Cuban news report.

Prosecution and defense lawyers were to present closing arguments in the Havana trial of Jose Abrantes late Sunday, according to Cuban news agency Prensa Latina. The dispatch was monitored by Mexico's Notimex agency.

In another report monitored in Mexico, Prensa Latina said evidence presented Saturday in Abrantes' trial proved the division general abused his position, improperly used financial and material resources and was negligent in service. He was also found in illegal possession of arms, the report said.

African leaders meet

LIVINGSTONE, Zambia (AP) — President Kenneth Kaunda, for 25 years one of black Africa's harshest critics of South Africa's white government, met today with South African leader F.W. de Klerk for talks expected to cover regional conflicts.

Both have depicted the meeting as a get-acquainted session, but they were expected to discuss de Klerk's proposals for political reform, Namibia's transition to independence from South Africa and the crumbling effort to end Angola's 14-year-old civil war.

De Klerk met Sunday in Johannesburg with Angolan guerrilla leader Jonas Savimbi, who softened his stance a week after canceling a cease-fire with Angola's Marxist government.

Israel denies jet attack on Bekaa base

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Police and the Israeli army denied radio reports that Israeli warplanes today blasted Shiite Moslem guerrilla bases in a new air raid on east Lebanon.

The Voice of Lebanon, the most popular Christian radio station in east Beirut, and Voice of the Nation, the main broadcast for the Moslem sector, were among those to report a raid on Lebanon's Bekaa valley, the second in less that 24 hours.

"There hasn't been any air raid today," said a police spokesman, who cannot be named under standing regulations.

The spokesman said supersonic jets broke the sound barrier in reconnaissance runs over the village of Janta and the ancient city of Baalbek, drawing heavy anti-aircraft fire from Hezbollah's posistions.

The sonic booms apparently prompted speculation that the Israelis bombed Janta, 43 miles southeast of Beirut.

An Israeli army spokeswoman, who could not be identified under standing military rules, also said there was no raid today. She described the report as "disinformation."

A Hezbollah statement today said nine people were killed and 27 wounded in the Israeli air attack Sunday on a party base in south Lebanon's village of Ain Abu-Suar.

The statement said the victims included 15 students wounded when their school was hit in the attack.

Police had put Sunday's casualty toll at only three guerrillas killed and nine wounded.

Ain Abu-Suar is 40 miles southeast of Beirut near the northern edge of Israel's self-designated "security zone" in south Lebanon.

Sunday's attack was Israel's ninth on Lebanon this year. It apparently was in retaliation for an Aug. 9 suicide car bomb attack by a Hezbollah activist in the security zone.

Five Israeli soldiers and an militiamen of the Israel-backed South Lebanon Army were wounded.

Hezbollah said the bombing was to avenge the kidnapping of a Shiite Moslem cleric, Sheik Abdul-Karim Obeid, by Israeli commandos south Lebanon on July 28.

Contra commanders preparing to march back inside Nicaragua

YAMALES, Honduras (AP) — Thousands of armed Contra soldiers are preparing to defy a regional peace accord and march back into Nicaragua despite a lack of U.S. support.

"We will wait in the mountains for the changes that (President Daniel) Ortega has promised," said Contra chief of staff Israel Galeano, known as Commander Franklin.

"We aren't going to launch offensive operations because we don't have enough supplies, but we will defend ourselves if attacked," he said Saturday in an interview with The Associated Press.

Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government has promised democratic reforms and set an election for Feb. 25, 1990, in accordance with an agreement signed by Central American presidents on Aug. 7 in Tela, Honduras.

The accord also called for disbanding the Nicaraguan Resistance army by Dec. 8.

"By the time the U.N. gets here, we'll be gone," said "Commander Henry," head of the rebel medical corps.

Most of the army fighting to oust the Sandinista government has been camped in Honduras along the Nicaraguan border since U.S. military aid was suspended a year-and-half ago.

It's over: Midland loses, Wichita sweeps

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

There was still hope in the Midland Angels clubhouse Sunday evening, even though San Antonio Missions pitcher Mike Pitz threw a six-hitter in a 4-2 Mission win at Angels Stadium.

But the Haloes needed help from the slumping El Paso Diablos, and shortstop Gary DiSarcina knew it.

"Right now that (an El Paso win) is the only thing we have to hope for," the Texas League All-Star said immediately after his team's own game.

It didn't happen.

The first-place Wichita Wranglers clinched the Texas League West second-half championship with a 7-2, 6-1 doubleheader win at El Paso Sunday. The Wranglers lead Midland by two full games with only tonight's season finale remaining on the regular-season schedule.

While Wichita will face Eastern Division champion Arkansas in the league championship series beginning later this week, the Angels suffered another narrow miss. The Angels have finished second in four of the six half-season races during Manager Max Oliveras' three-year stint, but have finished second every time.

Oliveras took the familiar situation in stride.

"I'm not going to go out and shoot myself just because we're out of it.

"These guys have done a great job," Oliveras said.

The Angels scored 40 runs in the first three games of the series, and Pitz was 2-3 with a 5.09 earned run average against the Angels going into Sunday's game.

"We didn't think any of their pitchers could stop us," DiSarcina said.

But the man who took the mound Sunday wasn't the Mike Pitz that the Angels knew and loved. The fourth-year pro allowed only six hits and two runs before needing help from reliever James Wray with one out and one on in the ninth.

Midland scored its only runs on solo homers by Chris Graves and Reed Peters in the first and ninth innings, respectively. In between, Pitz allowed only five baserunners.

The smallish Pitz relied on his ability to spot his off-speed deliveries in an optimal location. The Californian realizes that he won't overpower many hitters, though he struck out 85 batters in 134 innings this year.

"I had the good curve and I was able to keep the ball down," Pitz said. The righthander had to admit he was worried after some of the Keystone Kops-style miscues committed by the Missions during the first three games, but Sunday — the Missions had but one error and no runs scored on its account.

"The way we lost the first three games was ugly," Pitz said. "But we're professionals and we're going to go out and give it our best every night, even if we're not in the race" Pitz said.

While Pitz was mowing down the Haloes, Midland starter Mike Butcher suffered through another rough outing, allowing six hits and all four visitor runs in only three-plus innings.

"I think Butcher was trying to overdo it," Oliveras said.

Butcher, who finished the season 2-6 with a 6.62 ERA, didn't get much fielding help from his mates in a two-run first inning.

Mission leadoff man Jose Offerman singled and stole his 32nd base of the season to make second. Manny Francois then reached when third baseman Chris Cron's throw pulled Jim McCollom off the bag, Offerman staying at second.

Mike White then singled home Offerman, and Peters' throw to the plate was wild to advance both Francois and White to third and second.

Joe Kesselmark was intentionally walked to load the bases, but Butcher finally got an out by fanning Eric Mangham. Mica Valdez capped the rally by singling in Francois.

The Missions got one in the third on Francois' triple off the right field wall and an RBI grounder by White, and the visitors chased Butcher by drawing two walks to lead off the fourth. Though reliever Tim Burcham wild-pitched Homar Rojas home later in the fourth, the Missions offense all but died at the hands of Burcham, Vinicio Cedeno, Tim McCoy and Jeff Richardson.

The Midland relief quartet combined to allow only three hits over the last six innings.

Tonight's season finale will pit Midland's Frank DiMichele, 5-5, against a Mission hurler yet to be announced.

HALO HOOPS — Midland's Mark Howie extended his hitting streak to 13 games with an infield single in the ninth, one batter after Peters' home run. Howie has hit .429 during the streak, raising his season average to .325.

Wranglers vault into playoffs

Associated Press

Omar Olivares pitched a six-hitter in the opening game and Rafael Valdez turned in a five-hitter in the nightcap Sunday to allow the Wichita Wranglers to sweep a doubleheader over the El Paso Diablos and clinch the second-half Texas League Western Division title.

Wichita beat El Paso 7-2 and 6-1 Sunday. Wichita's sweep, coupled with San Antonio's 4-2 win over Midland gave the Wranglers the division title. They will meet the Arkansas Travelers later this week to attempt the league title.

Wichita led just 1-0 entering the fifth inning of the first game but broke it open with four runs in the fifth.

Another four-run Wrangler inning doomed the Diablos in the second game. This time, it came in the fourth inning with Wichita leading 2-1 after three innings.

Olivares improved his record to 12-11 with the win, while Valdez stands at 5-0.

Johnson still undecided on top QB

DENVER (AP) — If Jimmy Johnson has a favorite quarterback, he still isn't saying after the Dallas Cowboys' first loss of the exhibition season.

But the new Cowboys coach said he still is pleased with both of his highly regarded rookies despite a 24-21 loss in overtime Saturday night to the Denver Broncos.

"I thought both did a good job," Johnson said of Troy Aikman and Steve Walsh.

Aikman was 6-for-13 passing for 65 yards and one touchdown against Denver, while Walsh was 12-for-24 for 160 yards and two TDs.

"We will evaluate them. We will take not just tonight, but everything from day one. Both have tremendous talent," Johnson said.

Walsh had a chance to engineer a game-winning drive in overtime, but his pass with 10:08 remaining in overtime was intercepted by Wymon Henderson at the Denver 47-yard line.

Broncos quarterback John Elway subsequently engineered the winning drive. Elway connected on a 24-yard pass to Mark Jackson and a 17-yarder to Orson Mobley, setting up David Treadwell's 19-yard field goal with 4:41 left in the 15-minute extra period.

Elway had sent the game into overtime by hitting Jackson with an 18-yard pass with only one second left in regulation.

"I had two interceptions and those were two balls I shouldn't have thrown," Walsh told The Dallas Morning News. "You learn from those mistakes."

Walsh, who played for Johnson at Miami last year, said he didn't think he had played his best against Denver.

"I wasn't taking as good a look at the rush as I could have," he said. "I was not sure a couple times. But those are mistakes you are going to make."

Aikman made few mistakes while playing only the first half, and he retired for the night with the game tied, 7-7.

"I felt good out there," Aikman said. "I thought it was good for us to go through something like that with a crowd like that. I know come Sept. 10 in New Orleans, we will hear a crowd like that."

Aikman, the No. 1 draft pick from UCLA who has an $11 million contract, was asked who he thought was ahead in the scramble for the starting job.

"I don't know — I felt like I had a good performance," he said. "I don't ask or answer those questions. Coach Johnson does."

Walsh said Sunday: "I think we've both earned it, but only one guy can play."

In three exhibition games, Aikman is 18-for-32 for 177 yards. He has not been intercepted while throwing for two touchdowns.

Bears fall to Jaworski's KC bomb

CHICAGO (AP) — Ron Jaworski's 19-yard touchdown pass to Robb Thomas with 4:03 left Sunday night led the Kansas City Chiefs to a 22-17 exhibition victory over the Chicago Bears.

Jaworski completed six of six passes for 69 yards in the 72-yard drive. He completed eight of 11 for 71 yards and the touchdown.

The victory was the first after two losses for the Chiefs, and the Bears suffered their second straight loss after an opening victory over Miami.

Turnovers and penalties stymied the Bears, although they never trailed until Jaworski hit Thomas with the winning touchdown.

Kevin Butler kicked a 54-yard field goal, the longest of his career, to give the Bears a 3-0 lead in the first quarter.

Dante Jones' interception of a pass by Steve DeBerg set up a 1-yard touchdown by Brad Muster and a 10-0 Chicago lead early in the second quarter.

Mark Porter's 36-yard field goal put the Chiefs on the board and Kansas City tied it when Thomas Sanders fumbled and Chris Martin picked up the ball and went 50 yards for a touchdown.

The Bears came right back and marched 68 yards in nine plays to break the tie on a 24-yard touchdown pass from Mike Tomczak to Muster for a 17-13 halftime lead.

Athletics avoid Royals' sweep

Associated Press

The next time Oakland plays Kansas City, the stakes figure to be a lot higher.

Bob Welch pitched eight strong innings and Oakland avoided a three-game sweep at Royals Stadium, beating Kansas City 6-0 Sunday.

Oakland ended a three-game losing streak, one shy of its season high, and stayed one game ahead of California in the American League West. The Royals, who have won 11 of 13, fell 3½ games behind the Athletics.

"We're in a heck of a race. It'll be a dogfight to the end," Welch said.

Kansas City took three of four against the Angels before winning two out of three against Oakland.

"We put the feeling in their minds that we'll have to be reckoned with," Kansas City manager John Wathan said. "We showed Oakland and California we're going to tough to beat down the stretch."

Kansas City does not face the Athletics again until the final weekend of the season, when they play a three-game series in Oakland.

Welch, 15-7, gave up five hits and extended his shutout streak to 24 innings. In his last outing, he outdueled Nolan Ryan at Texas and went eight innings.

Welch won his fourth consecutive start and beat Kansas City for the first time in three career decisions.

"Welch is on a good roll right now, making a lot of quality pitches," Manager Tony La Russa said. "We've won this type of game several times, the one where it looks like you're starting to go backwards."

Dennis Eckersley pitched the ninth for Oakland. He and Welch sent Kansas City to its league-leading 15th shutout.

Tom Gordon, 16-5, lost for the first time in six decisions. The rookie right-hander allowed three runs in the second inning, then retired 16 straight batters before issuing two seventh-inning walks and Rickey Henderson's home run.

The Athletics scored three times in the second inning. Stan Javier and Mike Gallego hit run-scoring singles and Dave Parker had a sacrifice fly.

Angels 5, Rangers 4

Pinch-hitter Johnny Ray's infield single in the ninth scored Brian Downing with the tie-breaking run as the Angels beat Nolan Ryan.

Ryan, 14-9, struck out 11 — the 195th time in his career he's been in double figures in strikeouts. But singles by Downing and Jack Howell put runners on first and third before Ray hit a ball that second baseman Julio Franco couldn't make a play on as Downing scored.

Bob McClure, 4-1, the third California pitcher, went 2⅓ scoreless innings, allowing one hit.

Twins 8, Mariners 5

John Moses got two hits in a seven-run fifth inning and Minnesota sent Seattle to its 11th straight loss. The Twins won their fifth consecutive game and moved over .500 for the first time since July 2.

Mark Guthrie, 1-0, got his first major-league victory. He allowed three runs in 6⅓ innings and Juan Berenguer got his third save.

Scott Bankhead, 11-6, lost for the only the second time in 11 decisions. The Twins used six hits, two walks and an error by third baseman Darnell Coles to take an 8-3 lead in the fifth.

Kirby Puckett got three hits for the Twins. Ken Griffey Jr. and Dave Valle homered for the Mariners.

Orioles 8, Yankees 5

Cal Ripken and Bob Melvin each homered and rookie Bob Milacki pitched his third complete game in 29 starts as Baltimore won for the ninth time in 10 games.

The Orioles won for the fourth straight day at Yankee Stadium and stayed 1½ games ahead of Toronto in the AL East. New York fell to 2-9 under Manager Bucky Dent.

Blue Jays 5, Brewers 4

George Bell's two-run triple capped a five-run fifth inning and led Toronto over Milwaukee at the SkyDome. The Blue Jays won their sixth consecutive game and the Brewers lost their sixth straight.

Bell extended his hitting streak to a career-high 18 games when his two-out fly ball fell out of center fielder Robin Yount's glove.

Red Sox 7, Tigers 1

Ellis Burks hit his fifth career grand slam as Boston won its sixth straight game and handed Detroit its eighth consecutive loss.

The Red Sox have scored 27 runs, 14 of them unearned, in the first four games of the five-game series. The visiting Tigers have made 11 errors.

Burks' slam came in the fifth off Brian DuBois, 0-2, after an error by third baseman Rick Schu. Nick Esasky hit his 25th homer, a three-run shot, in the eighth after an error by pitcher Steve Searcy.

Joe Price, 2-5, got the victory. He relieved Wes Gardner, who sustained a possible cheekbone fracture when he was hit by Mike Brumley's one-hopper.

White Sox 9, Indians 3

Ron Karkovice hit the first grand slam of his career and added an RBI single as Chicago completed a three-game sweep in Cleveland.

Karkovice's homer capped a six-run third inning against John Farrell, 7-13, and made it 7-1.

Cubs hold ground in NL East race

Associated Press

The Chicago Cubs, who have led the National League East for the last three weeks, have been slipping. The New York Mets, who were supposed to be leading it all season, have been sliding.

The Cubs, losers in seven of their previous eight games, found a little traction Sunday when they came from behind in the ninth inning to tie the Atlanta Braves before Andre Dawson's two-out single gave them a much-needed 3-2 victory in the 10th.

The Mets weren't so fortunate. They didn't pitch. They didn't field, and they lost 13-7 to the San Diego Padres to stretch their losing streak to five games.

Chicago, now two games ahead of Montreal in the East, was a winner in part because Atlanta manager Russ Nixon chose to play the percentages.

"Yes, it was the righty-lefty thing," Nixon said of his decision have right-hander Mark Eichhorn walk left-handed-hitting Mark Grace to get to the right-handed-swinging Dawson.

"I couldn't believe it," Grace said. "That's got to be a career-first, walking me to get to Dawson."

But Dawson, who hit a 1-2 pitch from Eichhorn, 4-5, into center field to score Shawon Dunston with the winning run, didn't think it was such a bad idea.

Padres 13, Mets 7

Roberto Alomar had a career-high five RBIs as San Diego swept New York in a three-game series for the first time in eight years.

Alomar hit a two-run homer, his fourth and second in three games, in the sixth and had a two-run single in the seventh.

Dodgers 8, Phillies 1

Fernando Valenzuela won for the fourth time in his last five decisions and slump-ridden Mike Scioscia hit a two-run homer for Los Angeles.

Expos 6, Giants 3

Andres Galarraga hit a grand slam and drove in five runs to match a career high, and Bryn Smith won for the first time in eight starts. Galarraga's other RBI came on a base-loaded walk by Mike LaCoss. It was the 11th time San Francisco pitchers have walked in a run this season.

San Francisco's lead over Houston was trimmed to four games in the West.

Astros 6, Cardinals 3

Ken Caminiti drove in three runs, two on a decisive double in the sixth inning, as Houston broke a five-game losing streak. St. Louis trails Chicago by 2½ games.

With Houston trailing 3-2, Glenn Davis reached on an infield single with one out against Ted Power, 5-6. One out later, Terry Puhl walked before Caminiti lined a one-hopper against the right-field wall. Glenn Wilson added a two-run double in the seventh.

Reds 1, Pirates 0

Tom Browning recorded his seventh consecutive victory. Browning, 14-10, allowed just three hits but left after walking Gary Redus to start the ninth. John Franco came on for his 28th.

Frost beats Crenshaw in overtime playoff

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — David Frost learned to play golf on the fast greens and tree-lined fairways of his native South Africa.

Frost drew on those experiences Sunday to defeat Ben Crenshaw in sudden death to win the World Series of Golf.

Three of the last seven winners in the World Series at the Firestone Country Club are South African natives. Despite their recent successes elsewhere, no European player has won the tournament.

Firestone was the first course Frost saw when he first came to the United States in 1983. He felt an affinity for it almost immediately.

"I grew up playing a lot of golf courses that had big trees like this," Frost said. "I think the key to winning on this golf course is you have to drive the ball well. You check the guys who have won (from South Africa), and Denis Watson can drive long and straight, as can Nick Price and I. ...

"Also, we have good minds on the golf course. You have to have a way of thinking. This is not a golf course that you play aggressive all the time. You have to take out all your ammunition, but you have to think all the time."

The victory was worth $180,000 to Frost and pushed him over the $2 million mark in career earnings on the PGA Tour. He followed rounds of 70, 68, and 69 with a closing 69 to finish regulation at 4-under-par 276.

On a day when Firestone swallowed many a would-be contender — only three players broke par in the final round — it came down to Frost and Crenshaw.

Crenshaw, who led after the first and second rounds, took the lead with a six-foot birdie putt at the 16th hole, but PGA champion Payne Stewart also birdied the hole to pull even with Crenshaw at 4-under.

Frost then rolled in an 18-foot uphill birdie putt at the 17th, with Stewart dropping out of contention with back-to-back bogeys on the final two holes.

Greg Norman, who was near the top of the leader board all day, also saw his shot at a playoff go out the window with a bogey on the closing hole.

Frost and Crenshaw each saved par on the finishing hole with chip shots to three feet and both parred the first playoff hole, with Crenshaw just missing a 25-foot birdie putt that he said "burned the right edge" of the hole.

On the second playoff hole, the par-4 18th, Crenshaw sprayed his drive to the right. His second shot was short and right of the green. A chip left him nine feet from the hole, and Crenshaw, considered by many to be the finest putter in the game, just missed.

"You can never write him off when the putter's in his hands," Frost said. Except this time.

Frost salvaged a par after hitting a 5-iron from the right rough to the back fringe of the green. He then chipped to two feet and knocked in the putt for the third victory of his five-year career.

"The most thrilling feeling is to beat Crenshaw, Stewart, and Norman," Frost said.

Raidermaniacs roar, but Davis doesn't talk

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Al Davis called the crowd inspirational and emotional, two tame descriptions of 50,000 roaring Raidermaniacs, but he didn't say the words they wanted to hear.

Davis said nothing Saturday night about whether he will move the Los Angeles Raiders to Oakland, as so many fans here hoped he would. He didn't say he was leaning toward Sacramento, either, or that he might keep them in Los Angeles.

Instead, he left the crowd giddy over the one-night visit, the Raiders first to their old stomping grounds in 7½ years, and no one except Davis and his team really seemed to care about the 23-21 preseason loss to the Houston Oilers. "It was a lot like a playoff game out there," said Houston quarterback Warren Moon, "the way the crowd was chanting, going nuts at the end of the game."

They were going nuts before the game, drinking beer and partying in the parking lot, and continued to go nuts after the game, chanting "Raiders, 'Raiders" on the way out.

The teams got caught up in the fever, with more than half a dozen fights breaking out on the field.

"We've got that image of being the bad boys and the Raiders had that image," Moon said. "I think both teams were trying to go one up on each other with a little intimidation out there."

Jay Schroeder, who passed for two touchdowns, said he likes games like this one.

"It was as crazy as it is in RFK Stadium (in Washington)," he said. 'It was real exciting. Of course, I'd like to win games like this. But I think we could have fallen on our faces and the fans would have loved us anyhow."

The love affair that once flourished in Oakland between the fans and the team was still very much alive, even as the Raiders faded on the field and Houston's Allen Pinkett ran for a 2-yard touchdown with three seconds left.

Houston, 2-1, outran and outpassed the 0-3 Raiders for three quarters but couldn't overcome a few big plays and a lot of gritty defense until the final seconds.

Raider linebacker Tom Benson seemed to stymie the Oilers when he intercepted a Cody Carlson pass in the endzone with seven seconds left. But pass interference was called and Houston got the ball just inside the 2 yard line. Pinkett then ran an option in for the winning score.

Schroeder threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Willie Gault midway through the first quarter, just 53 seconds after cornerback Dan Land intercepted a Warren Moon pass and ran it back 10 yards to Houston's 12.

Tony Zendejas' 24-yard field goal, after a 79-yard Houston drive stalled on the 6-yard line, cut Oakland's lead to 7-3.

Zendejas kicked a 26-yard field goal to make it 7-6 in the second quarter after another long Houston drive, this one 77 yards, died on the Raiders' 7-yard line.

Zendejas made it three for three in the first half with a booming 53-yarder with four seconds left for a 9-7 Houston lead.

After Zendejas missed a 25-yarder in the third quarter, the Raiders went for a quick strike and a 14-9 lead.

Schroeder threw a medium-length pass to Sam Graddy early in the fourth quarter, and after he was hit and he stumbled and put his hand to the turf, he managed to stay up until he'd gone 56 yards to the Houston 4-yard line. Schroeder then threw for a touchdown to diving tight end Ethan Horton.

Carlson, taking over for starting quarterback Warren Moon in the second half, threw a 3-yard TD pass to fullback Tracy Johnson to put Houston ahead briefly, 16-14.

But Steve Beuerlein came in for Schroeder and promptly led Oakland to another touchdown and a 21-16 lead.

Michigan faces early No. 1 test

Associated Press

Bo Schembechler wasn't exactly overwhelmed by the news that Michigan was No. 1 in The Associated Press' preseason college football poll.

"I didn't know that many writers hated me," he joked.

The last time Schembechler's Wolverines were the preseason No. 1 pick, they went out and lost their opener to Wisconsin in 1981. Michigan lost two more games that season and finished 12th in the final poll.

This year, Michigan opens at home against defending national champion Notre Dame on Sept. 16. But Schembechler doesn't believe in a No. 1 jinx.

"Being No. 1 doesn't bother me," he said. "Of course, we may or may not be that good."

Michigan received 23 first-place votes and 1,439 points to edge Notre Dame in the first Top 25 poll. The Fighting Irish were ranked No. 1 on 20 ballots and received 1,378 points.

The only other teams receiving first-place votes were Nebraska (10), Miami (4), Southern California (1) and Florida State (2).

Nebraska is ranked third, followed by Miami, Southern Cal, Florida State, Louisiana State, Auburn, UCLA and Arkansas.

Penn State, coming off its first losing season in 50 years, is ranked 11th. Next are Clemson, Syracuse, Colorado, Oklahoma, Alabama, West Virginia, Arizona, Brigham Young, Pittsburgh, Houston, Illinois, Iowa, North Carolina State and Ohio State.

The AP is expanding its rankings from 20 to 25 teams this season. Sixty sports writers and sportscasters vote in the weekly poll, which awards 25 points for first place, 24 for second and so on.

Two of Michigan's top three quarterbacks were recently declared ineligible, but most of the starters return from last year's 9-2-1 Rose Bowl champion team.

"I like this team," Schembechler said. "They are nice kids and they'll acquit themselves well."

As the school's athletic director, Schembechler celebrated when Michigan won the NCAA basketball championship in April. The Wolverines have never won a national football title during his 20 years as coach.

"I don't care about all that," Schembechler said. "We just want to have a year like last year. We had a lot of heartaches, but we had a lot of fun, too."

SWC's Jacoby listed in critical condition

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Conference Commissioner Fred Jacoby was in critical but stable condition early today at St. Paul Medical Center, where he awaits a heart transplant.

Jacoby's heart condition worsened Saturday and he was admitted to the hospital's intensive care unit, said hospital spokeswoman Judy Norkiewicz. She said Jacoby has been moved to an urgent status on the waiting list for a heart transplant, a list he has been on since May.

Tests revealed last April that Jacoby, 61, had suffered congestive heart failure in late April.

"Fred's health and speedy recovery are certainly in the thoughts of everyone associated with the Southwest Conference," SWC president James Vick told the Dallas Times Herald. "While Fred's in recovery, his day-to-day duties will be handled by the SWC office staff in conjunction with the SWC executive committee consisting of myself, vice president Dean Paul Rogers of the SMU Law School, Texas Tech faculty representative Robert Sweazy, Texas A&M director of athletics John David Crow and TCU director of athletics Frank Windegger."

Jacoby became the conference's fourth commissioner in November 1982, succeeding retired Cliff Speegle. He is chairman of the national Letter of Intent program and is a past president of the Collegiate Commissioners Association. He had been the Mid-American Conference commissioner for 11 years before joining the SWC.

Weather watcher worries about radio static, Ryan

By BILL RICHARDSON
The Scottsbluff Star Herald

GERING, Neb. (AP) — The chairman of Nebraska's Economic Forecasting Board keeps an eye on the weather, but it has nothing to do with the impact on the state's cash crops.

Fred Lockwood's fear is stormy weather and the static it causes when he's trying to tune his car radio dial to the Texas Rangers and record-setting pitcher Nolan Ryan.

To say Lockwood is a Ryan fan would hardly do him justice. Fanatic would be closer to the point.

For starters, whenever Ryan is on the mound Lockwood sits in his car — parked in a strategic location near his home — and tunes the radio to Fort Worth station WBAP, flagship of the Rangers network.

Lockwood proudly points out that Ryan's historic 5,000th career strikeout came at 7:51 p.m. MDT Tuesday — as his notes from the game will show.

Not only does he keep a scorecard, but he charts each and every one of Ryan's pitches "to get a real feel for how he's doing."

Lockwood, an accountant, lives near the Gering Golf Course just below the Scotts Bluff National Monument. "I think I probably get about the best reception possible up there," he said.

From now until the end of the season is Lockwood's favorite time of year. With the days getting shorter, he's able to pick up the games earlier in the evening.

"The station starts to come in clearer and I'm able to pick the games up about 7 p.m.," he said. "They usually start about 6:35 our time, so I don't miss much."

Lockwood is able to catch up on what he's missed when a hitter comes to the plate later in the game. Thus, he's able to have an up-to-date scorecard by the middle innings. He said the best situation for him is when the Rangers play on the West Coast and the games don't begin until late.

Lockwood said he started following Ryan's career closely in 1974 or 1975, when the "Ryan Express' was still with the California Angels. When Ryan was pitching for Houston, from 1980 through last season, Lockwood was often able to watch his hero pitch against Chicago or Atlanta by visiting friends in Mitchell who could get the games on television.

This season is the first time that Lockwood has been to listen to Ryan pitch regularly on the radio. It's also the first time that he ever watched the Rangers' "ageless wonder" perform in person, with three trips to Texas Stadium and one to Baltimore. He's taken advantge of business trips to watch a couple games.

"I thought I'd better get organized," said the owner of a local accounting firm. "He just might up and retire on us this year."

Lockwood was in the stands a few weeks ago in Texas when Ryan took a no-hitter into the ninth inning of a game against the Detroit Tigers. He is contemplating one more trip before the season's end.

The Rangers are scheduled to play in Kansas City next month, and Lockwood said Ryan will probably pitch one of the games — either Sept. 11 or 12.

He should know. Prior to the start of each season he maps out Ryan's projected starts on a calendar, and then makes revisions when necessary. The calendar is usually reliable, according to Lockwood, because the pitcher rarely misses a turn.

Arkansas has become hot spot for Cowboys

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys are hot — not just in their preseason games, but apparently among Arkansas sports fans.

Tickets to Cowboy games, including game-day and overnight packages, are going at the rate of about 80 a day at Little Rock's All Sports Travel, the designated ticket agent for the team in Arkansas.

And the fans interviewed at Little Rock's Sports Page restaurant who aren't planning to cross the border to travel to Texas Stadium are keeping up with the team in different ways.

Sherry Fitzgerald, for instance, has watched the Cowboys' preseason games on TV. She's always been a fan, she says, but "not as much as before Jerry Jones bought them."

Jones, formerly of North Little Rock and a player for the 1964 undefeated Arkansas Razorbacks, bought the Cowboys in February and has made sweeping changes, including replacing legendary head coach Tom Landry with his college roommate and teammate Jimmy Johnson.

"I'm from Dallas, so I was already a fan," said Greg Davis, now a Little Rock resident. Davis said he was born in Irving, Texas, home of Texas Stadium, and has been a Cowboys fan "since I was born."

Though he likes the Cowboys, he believes the Arkansas media have placed too much emphasis on the team since Jones took over.

All Sports' Bill Sowell said he believes one reason for the Cowboys' popularity in Arkansas, in addition to the Jones-Johnson connection, is that fans enjoy having another team besides the Razorbacks to root for.

"Nothing will take the place of the Razorbacks, but they are enjoying having a professional team to follow," Sowell said of the fans. "The people of Arkansas feel a part of the team. When Arkansas people get behind something, they go at it 100 percent. That's one reason the Razorbacks have been so successful."

One Little Rock man went so far as to predict Jones' ownership would benefit the Razorbacks.

"It's going to help the Razorbacks in our recruiting in Texas — that's what I'm looking forward to," said Mike Gray.

Stephen Lilley, who prefers the New Orleans Saints, said he might go to a Dallas game since a ticket outlet is located in Little Rock, but that "it will depend a lot on who they are playing."

Mark Garner, who also is lukewarm about the Cowboys, said he plans to attend a couple of games at Texas Stadium this season and resents the attitude many Texans have displayed toward Jones.

"It was just a typical business deal, and an Arkansan won," Garner said of Jones' purchase. "The Cowboy following in Arkansas has definitely grown since Jones bought the team."

Charles overcomes late mistake on 18th to nip Coody

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — It appeared Bob Charles had finally made a mistake.

Charles and Charles Coody got to the final hole of the $300,000 Sunwest Bank-Charley Pride Senior Tournament tied for the lead on Sunday.

Charles, considered one of the best putters on tour, left his first putt eight feet short. But he made the uphill putt, while Coody's par putt from five feet slid past the hole.

"I made the putts down the stretch and he didn't," Charles said.

Charles rallied from a three-shot deficit with seven holes to play to win the tournament for the third straight year.

"It's not always the guy that makes the best shots, but the guy who makes the most putts," said Charles, who had only one three-putt in the 54-hole tournament.

Coody, a runner-up twice this year and still looking for his first Senior Tour victory, left the course immediately after the final putt, refusing to speak with the media. He bogeyed the final two holes after leading Charles by two shots with three holes to play.

Charles finished with a final-round 4-under-par 68 and 54-hole total of 203 over the 6,686-yard Four Hills Country Club course.

Rose cleared of one charge

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose has been cleared of any involvement in a cocaine ring, but that doesn't lessen his problems with the IRS.

The local office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation found no evidence that Rose was part of a cocaine ring operated by former gym associates, an FBI spokesman said Sunday.

"We had an ongoing cocaine distribution investigation and it's been well documented that those folks knew Pete Rose, and we are totally satisfied that Pete Rose wasn't involved in any way in that type of criminal enterprise," FBI spokesman Edwin H. Boldt Jr. said in a telephone interview.

Also, there are no plans to prosecute Rose for his admissions to baseball investigators that he placed bets with bookmakers. Boldt said the bureau generally concentrates on bookmakers, not bettors.

Rose's admission was part of the basis for baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti giving a lifetime ban last week to the former Cincinnati Reds' manager. Under baseball rules, Rose can ask for reinstatement in one year.

Some of those who cooperated with baseball's investigation of Rose also cooperated with federal authorities.

Paul Janszen, who claims he ran Rose's bets to bookmakers, said Rose had shown an interest in getting involved in a cocaine ring run by operators of a Gold's Gym in Cincinnati where Rose worked out. However, Janszen said Rose never actually got involved in the drug deals.

The FBI looked into the matter and concluded Rose was in the clear.

"We were satisfied (of that) quite some time ago," Boldt said.

Former Rose housemate Tommy Gioiosa is on trial in federal court in Cincinnati, accused of being part of the cocaine ring that smuggled the drug from Florida to Cincinnati.

Although the FBI no longer is investigating him on the drug matter, a federal grand jury in Cincinnati is looking into whether Rose paid all his taxes on racetrack winnings and income from memorabilia sales and autograph sessions. Any indictment on such charges would carry the possibility of a jail sentence and large fines.

There's no indication when the grand jury might conclude its investigation.

Only one piece of evidence uncovered in the FBI investigation was shown to baseball investigators and Rose's lawyers, according to Boldt. The two sides were allowed to see the three so-called betting sheets that Janszen gave the FBI after a federal judge in Columbus, Ohio, ordered the agency to do so. The sheets were tested for Rose's fingerprints.

Texas set to open office in Tokyo

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Commerce will open an office in Japan later this year, and officials expect it to have a "substantial long-term business impact" on the economy back home.

Dana Shelton, the department's division manager for business development, says the Tokyo office, scheduled to open Oct. 17, will promote direct Texas investment and trade with Japan.

The office also is expected to generate Japanese interest in the maquiladora program, which allows companies to use Texas as a distribution point for products manufactured in U.S. assembly plants located in Mexico.

Department officials say about 235 Japanese firms are operating in Texas, 35 of them in manufacturing, according to Shelton.

The director of the state's new Tokyo office will find export markets in Japan for Texas firms and provide information for Texas companies wanting to do business with the Japanese.

Officials also hope the office encourages Japanese tourists to visit Texas.

"This office provides the opportunity for substantial long-term business impact," Shelton said. "But we need to be in Tokyo for about two years to be considered a player."

Department officials say the Japanese tend to do business only with those with which they have established long-term personal relationships.

"They have different business practices," said department spokeswoman Rebecca Allmon. "They believe it's best to deal with an entity face-to-face. That has been most successfully achieved with an office in same city."

Though the department hasn't found a site for the office and has yet to hire its director, officials say the Oct. 17 opening — which coincides with a planned Japan-Texas Conference in Tokyo — won't be delayed.

The department dismissed Bill Luttrell, who opened an interim Texas office in Tokyo using funds from Texas businesses, in December. Department officials offered no direct criticism of Luttrell's performance.

"We just felt it was necessary to make a change because we felt our marketing direction had changed," he said.

Shelton said the new director would be someone with "outstanding knowledge of Texas, outstanding marketing skills and outstanding communication skills."

"The key to our success will be the dissemination of information," he said.

The Department of Commerce will begin planning for its European office early next year, with an opening scheduled for September 1990 in Frankfurt, West Germany.

This swimming pool is part of a 4,000 square-foot addition the Helmsleys had constructed at a cost of $2 million. It is also one expense they allegedly billed to their business.

Helmsley mansion made of bad omens, opulence

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — It covers a space roughly the size of a football field and boasts 10 bedrooms and 10 full bathrooms. But locals say Dunnellen Hall also carries a curse that has brought ruin to its previous owners and could be a bad omen for the home's current mistress, Leona Helmsley.

The opulent, 28-room Jacobean mansion on the outskirts of Greenwich has been in the national limelight in recent weeks because of the federal tax evasion case against Mrs. Helmsley.

She and her billionaire husband, Harry Helmsley, were accused of billing $3 million in expenses at the house to their real estate empire and hotel chain. A federal jury in New York began deliberating the fate of Mrs. Helmsley and two former aides this weekend. Harry Helmsley was severed from the indictment because of mental incompetence.

The prosecutor, assistant U.S. attorney James DeVita, says the money was spent in a bid to turn the home into a modern Taj Mahal.

Machine tool orders off 21 percent in July

New York Times News Service

Orders for U.S.-made machine tools dropped by 20.7 percent in July from their level in June, as the slowdown in the automobile industry continued to hurt manufacturers of factory machinery.

In a report scheduled to be released Monday, the Association for Manufacturing Technology said the July figures represented the lowest monthly level of new orders this year.

For the first seven months of the year, the orders for machine tools were down by 18.5 percent compared with the first seven months of 1988.

The association, based in McLean, Va., said that orders declined to $190.9 million in July, from June's $240.7 million.

Compared with July of last year, the orders were down by 25.1 percent, the report said.

Although the third quarter is historically the weakest period for machine-tool orders, some industry analysts said the figures revealed deeper problems than the typical seasonal slowdown.

They attributed the continued decline to the strength of the American dollar and slower economic growth, in addition to production cutbacks in the auto industry.

"We are seeing a widening circle of slowing in the economy," said Ronald Petrie, an analyst with McDonald & Co. in Cleveland.

"The slowing goes beyond the cutbacks in auto production. We're also seeing a lot more softness in steel prices, and industrial commodities are softening. American manufacturers are playing things conservatively and as a result, we're seeing more and more delays in their orders for new machine tools."

Machine tools are power-driven devices that cut or shape metal parts used in everything from appliances to vehicles.

Economists consider their sales and orders important indicators of capital-spending patterns by makers of large products like automobiles and aircraft.

Albert W. Moore, the president of the association, said he was heartened by the 39 percent increase in shipments of machine tools in the first seven months of the year. But he added, "It is difficult to feel good about the data, since orders for the first seven months of 1989 are off."

Several machine-tool producers said they had been encouraged by a consistently high level of inquiries.

"Although the automobile industry orders have not been strong, we're seeing strength in aircraft and aerospace, farm equipment and construction," said Richard O. Priebe, a spokesman for Cross & Trecker Corp., the nation's second-largest maker of machine tools. The company is based in Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

The July decline included a lower level of orders from domestic and foreign customers. Domestic orders declined by 20.5 percent, while foreign orders for machine tools were down by 21.3 percent.

L. Michael Braig, an analyst with Prescott, Ball & Turben Inc., said that he expected orders to decline by 15 percent to 20 percent this year.

"I don't see the rate of decline changing very much," he said. "What we're seeing now is pretty much the picture for the rest of the year."

Existing home sales up second month

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes rose 1.2 percent in July, posting the first back-to-back increase after high mortgage rates produced consecutive declines in the first five months of 1989, a real estate trade group reported Friday.

The National Association of Realtors said sales of existing single-family homes sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.40 million units in July, up from June's revised 3.36 million units.

June's increase was the first in sales since December 1988 and the largest since December 1986, when sales jumped 6.6 percent.

"The downswing in (mortgage interest) rates is pulling some buyers off the sidelines," said NAR President Ira Gribin.

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. reported that average fixed-rate mortgages fell from 10.03 percent to 9.81 percent during July.

The Realtors also reported the median price of a home rose $3,000 to $96,400, a 3.2 percent increase over June and 6.3 percent over the previous year. The median price means half the homes cost more, half less.

The median price reflects the dominance of higher-priced home sales, said NAR chief economist John A. Tuccillo, and "a relatively low volume of sales in the lower-priced starter range."

"The loss of the entry-level buyer is taking a bite out of the market," Gribin added.

But while the July increase in sales was small, said Lyle Gramley, chief economist for the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, "taken in the context of all other recent economic indicators, it's got to be encouraging. I think we'll see more moderate rises as the year goes on."

> "The downswing in (mortgage interest) rates is pulling some buyers off the sidelines, (but) the loss of the entry-level buyer is taking a bite out of the market."
> NAR President Ira Gribin

Regionally, sales were led in the Northeast, where the resale pace rose 9.8 percent to 560,000 units. Next was the South, which recorded a 3.1 percent increase to 1.32 million units.

In the West, however, sales fell 5 percent to 570,000 units. Sales also dropped in the Midwest, 5.2 percent to 910,000 units.

Median prices were $147,000 in the Northeast, $88,200 in the South, $138,200 in the West and $73,500 in the Midwest.

Disk partitions overcome DOS limits

By DENNIS SEVER

I recently had a forty megabyte hardisk installed in my office PC-AT compatible computer. The technician that installed it formatted it into two disks, a C disk and a D disk. I asked him to install it as one disk but he said that it had to be installed as two disks if I wanted access to the whole 40 megabytes. Why must I have two disks instead of one?

Sever

The two disks that you have are called logical partitions. Although there is only one physical disk drive, the operating system thinks that there are two. The original purpose behind this partitioning technique is to overcome the addressing limit of MS-DOS and PC-DOS.

The disk space addressing limitations of these operating systems is similar to the memory addressing limitations in that it is a designed-in limitation. When these operating systems were first created, it was practically unthinkable that the technology would advance as far as it has. The MS-DOS/PC-DOS operating system can address only one Megabyte of memory (640K random access memory) and it can only address about 32 Megabytes of disk surface. Incidentally, the partitioning concept is pretty old and is quite common even with operating systems that don't have disk space addressing restrictions. Unix, for example makes use of partitions by calling them file systems. The partition/file system concept is central to the hierarchial modular design of modern operating systems, it allows the computer operator to easily segregate files by function, owner, group or whatever criteria seems appropriate.

How much memory should I install in my computer?

As much as you need. The answer to this question is dependent upon the needs of the software that you use. Most home computers would never need more than 512K; however there are several software packages that require more, and some that perform much more efficiently with larger memory bases. Usually software suppliers will recommend minimum configurations for their software. You can safely follow these guides. A couple of years ago I would have recommended that you buy as much memory as you could fit into your computer, but memory prices are up right now and the technology is rampant. Who knows what is around the corner.

Can you settle an argument? What is the best programming language?

That would depend on what the program is to do. What you are asking me is like asking what is the best eating utensil. Most languages have purposes for which they are better suited. Sometimes the purpose of the language is hidden in the name, like FORTRAN is a combination of FORmula and TRANslation. Accordingly, FORTRAN is particularly well-suited for numeric processing. RPG (Report Program Generator), on the other hand, was designed to produce reports from large databases. Some other languages like Pascal, Ada and C are considered by their proponents to be general purpose languages. And of course there is always the Assembler language of the computer, which is the most powerful and the most complex. Like eating soup with a fork is at best difficult, so is programming intricate mathematics with a language like RPG. However, designing and producing neat, complete reports with FORTRAN is like eating french fries with a spoon, possible but not preferred. The general purpose languages can be compared to a marriage of the fork and the spoon: a compromise between specialty functions and flexibility. As to an analogy for programming in an assembler language, I would suggest that it compares to eating a bowl of rice with chopsticks: one grain at a time.

You mention MS-DOS/PC-DOS all the time, and I hear about Apple DOS; so what does DOS mean?

DOS is an acronym for Disk Operating System. The name was used when these operating systems were first developed to identify them as capable of communicating with the magnetic disks, which were new technology, particularly for microcomputers. The DOS in the name has just stuck around. With the advent of OS/2, Unix and the MacIntosh into the office environments, we will probably come to equate DOS with old 16-bit microcomputers.

Crude prices slip up 5 cents

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices rose 5 cents in morning trading to rest at $18.56 per barrel, after declining on Friday.

On Friday, crude oil prices slipped as traders assumed a cautious stance ahead of an OPEC committee meeting next month.

The October contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of crude oil, lost 10 cents to close at $18.51 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, adding to a 19-cent slide on Thursday.

Texaco Trading and Transportation Inc., announced on Friday that it had lowered its posted prices to $17.50 per barrel, from $17.75 per barrel.

Refined products traded on the exchange also closed lower.

The September contract for home heating oil fell 0.27 cent to settle at 51.43 cents a gallon, adding to a 0.21-cent decline Thursday. Wholesale unleaded gasoline for September delivery dropped 0.85 to 53.30 cents a gallon, reversing a 0.22-cent rise the previous session.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has scheduled a Sept. 23 meeting of its price monitoring committee, and although the session is a month away and the panel has no power to change prices, traders are already cautious, said Andrew Lebow, a senior broker and analyst with E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc.

Bank holiday thins dollar's trading

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose in early European trading today, thinned by the closure of London financial markets for a bank holiday.

Foreign currency dealers said that in the absence of London trading, little movement was expected until after the opening of the U.S. business day.

EXCHANGE RATES
- 1.9643 West German marks
- 1.6933 Swiss francs
- 6.6125 French francs
- 2.2143 Dutch guilders
- 1,408.50 Italian lire
- 1.1750 Canadian dollars

Dealers were reluctant to predict the dollar's trend for the short-term.

"In the short-term, everything and nothing can happen to the dollar," said one trader in Rome.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a two-month high against the Japanese yen, closing up 0.75 yen at 144.28 yen. Later, in Europe, it was quoted at 144.30 yen.

The dollar rose against the British pound. It cost $1.5642 to buy one pound in Europe early today compared with $1.5725 in London late Friday.

In Zurich, the bid was $359.75, down from $360.25 late Friday.

Financial institutions were also closed in Hong Kong today for the Liberation Day holiday.

Stock prices post small loss

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices posted a small loss Friday, hesitating after the yearlong rally that carried the market to record highs on Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had climbed 56.53 points Thursday, slipped back 2.28 to 2,732.36. That left the average with a net gain of 44.39 points for the week.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 9 to 8 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 716 up, 798 down and 485 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 165.93 million shares, down from 225.52 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 200.16 million shares.

GM may plan to idle Arlington plant

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A union officials told a Dallas newspaper that General Motors Corp. plans to announce today it will idle its Arlington assembly plant for two weeks and trim its workforce in November.

Buddy Stewart, president of United Automobile Workers Local 276, said some workers at the plant already have been informed that it will close for one-week periods on Sept. 24 and Oct. 30.

Sources in the plant said the facility's production rate and employment will be reduced when production resumes the week of Nov. 6, according to reports in today's editions of The Dallas Morning News.

Two 'Baby Bells' settle; others continue talks

Associated Press

Bell of Pennsylvania reached agreement with its largest union early today, and progress was reported in settling phone strikes around the country.

Ohio Bell and Wisconsin Bell reached tentative agreements with the Communication Workers of America during the weekend, and talks continued with the other three companies that make up Chicago-based Ameritech.

"Negotiations are continuing to progress" in Illinois, Indiana and Michigan, said Ameritech spokesman Steve Ford, "and we're hopeful that settlements will be reached in the not-too-distant future."

In New York, NYNEX Corp. plans to resume bargaining with striking workers Wednesday, the first formal talks since that walkout started almost three weeks ago. The regional company serves New York and most of New England.

Nationally, 200,000 workers in 20 states went on strike earlier this month against four of the so-called "Baby Bell" regional telephone companies formed after the 1984 breakup of AT&T. Tentative settlements have been reached at Pacific Telesis, which serves California and Nevada; and Bell Atlantic, which covers West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Washington, D.C., and New Jersey.

While talks continued on local issues for some Bell Atlantic units, Bell of Pennsylvania tentatively agreed on a new contract with CWA Local 13000, representing more than 8,900 employees.

Union spokesman Alex Minishak said the settlement offers gains in such areas as vacations, layoffs and the use of contract labor.

In the Midwest, Ohio Bell on Saturday agreed to a tentative three-year contract with 10,000 CWA members. Wisconsin Bell settled with its 4,200 striking employees Sunday.

Neither side would discuss details of the contract.

Talks with Bell subsidiaries in Illinois, Michigan and Indiana recessed Sunday night. Negotiators were scheduled to meet again today, officials said.

"There's certainly momentum all around at this point, and we're hopeful to reach settlements with all the companies," said CWA spokesman Steve Rosenthal.

"We made excellent progress today and feel we're very close. Only a few minor details need to be worked out," said Indiana Bell spokesman Dennis McCabe after the two sides recessed their negotiations.

The union said pickets will remain up where settlements have been reached until there are agreements in the other states.

But Ohio Bell said its expects employees to return to work.

"It has been the company's point of view that we, in fact, have reached an agreement and what is going on elsewhere should not have an effect on our employees," said Mary Lou Ringle, spokeswoman for Ohio Bell's Cleveland office.

About 35,000 CWA members struck the five Ameritech companies Aug. 13, and there was little progress in bargaining until late last week.

In addition to the Bell companies, a settlement was reached between the CWA and Ameritech Services, a subsidiary employing about 600 warehouse workers in Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin.

Wages had been the issue in all five of the Ameritech companies, with the union balking at offers to pay a one-time, lump-sum amount as a part of any negotiated increase.

MANSION

"It's probably one of the most important houses in Greenwich," says Majorie Rowe, president and co-owner of Preferred Properties in Greenwich.

"This house has some history, if the walls could talk," said Rowe, who has twice handled its sale.

Two previous owners lost the estate to financial setbacks, another was indicted for forgery and a Dodge automotive heiress suffered marital problems with a husband who killed a busboy in Florida and later killed himself.

The three-story brick mansion sits on 26 acres of rolling hills in the northern end of this posh New York suburb. Stone walls, iron fences and a sophisticated electronic system keep the curious at bay. But a glimpse is possible through the main gate and up a 1,000-foot driveway painted brick red for Leona's birthday in 1986.

The curious can also get a feel for the house by watching for a late night rerun of the 1968 film "A Lovely Way To Die." The movie, starring Kirk Douglas, was filmed at the estate, and in keeping with the alleged curse at Dunnellen, it was a flop.

The Helmsley's hometown newspaper, the Greenwich Time, recently obtained a rare look inside the house.

Its reporter described in detail the ornate dining room, with its chandelier, tapestry, paintings and floor-to-ceiling wainscotting; the limestone-walled reception hall; the grand staircase; the second-floor workout room where Harry Helmsley exercises on a treadmill under the eye of his personal instructor; and the pictures of a smiling Leona and Harry Helmsley that grace nearly every room on the first and second floors.

The main house stretches about 300 feet from end to end and is more than 200 feet wide. It has more than 28,000 square feet of living space, and includes 10 bedrooms and 10 full baths.

Separate from the mansion is a 100-foot-by-25-foot guard house that provides nearly an additional 4,000 square feet of living space. The building provides five more bedrooms and three more bathrooms.

By comparison, the White House has 55,000 square feet of living space spread over six floors. The White House also has 132 rooms, much smaller than those in the Helmsleys' mansion.

Dunnellen Hall was built in 1916 by Daniel Grey Reid for his only daughter.

Shortly after purchasing the home, the Helmsleys constructed a 4,453-square foot addition that runs more than 88 feet to enclose the swimming pool. Constructed of limestone and marble, and topped by a marble dance floor, the addition cost about $2 million. It also is one expense the Helmsley's allegedly billed to their business.

Buyouts bring bombs and booms

By MARIANN CAPRINO
AP Business Writer

Jerrold Pass keeps a tighter leash on inventories of rhinestone-studded dog collars now that his Midwest pet store chain operates under the heavy burden of a debt-financed takeover.

Rather than go hog-wild when building a new store, Pass scrutinizes the cost of everything from cages to cash registers.

The enormous interest payments that go with leveraged buyouts, takeover deals that rely on borrowed money, have hurt a number of highly visible companies, from drug chains to truckers to furniture outlets.

But as Pass Pets Ltd.'s experience shows, a lower-profile crop of post-buyout firms is flourishing, partly because the high debt levels force management to cut unnecessary spending.

Pass says the relentless pressure of a multimillion-dollar debt on the 35-store chain, headquartered near St. Louis, has made him a better manager. He wouldn't disclose the exact amount of money owed, but said "I've got to make those interest payments."

Moreover, Pass said he's unafraid of a recession, unlike many managers of heavily indebted companies who worry that a downturn could shrink their income, delay debt repayments and bring angry creditors knocking.

"The pet business can jump 25 percent in a recession," he said. "People don't send their kids to camp — they stay home with their pets."

A small percentage of the nation's LBO debt has been repaid delinquently or not at all, and some finance experts forecast that LBO failures may rise sharply.

Federal Reserve Board vice chairman Manuel Johnson, for example, said in a June speech that about 40 percent of all debt-financed deals are in cyclical industries that could face severe problems if the economy shrinks.

The troubles that LBO companies face when they can't repay creditors first began receiving heightened attention more than a year ago. Revco D.S. Inc., one of the largest drug store chains, sought bankruptcy protection at that time because of inability to pay the debt incurred in its $1.3 billion LBO.

Other high-profile LBOs such as the $1.1 billion buyout of Singer Co., $2.5 billion buyout of Storer Communications Inc. and $3.7 billion of Owens-Illinois Inc. also have faced difficulty managing their heavy debt loads.

But some experts argue that many businesses.

Such companies can be resold later for an enormous profit because the LBO investors put up little of their own money. Most of the risk is borne by creditors who finance the LBOs.

Experts say LBO success depends upon a company having reliable streams of incoming cash, steady demand for its products and assets that maintain value regardless of economic swings. That's why some LBOs don't make it.

One example is Cuisinarts Inc., which earlier this month sought Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection because of stagnant demand for its upscale food processors and a failure to exploit its famous name on other products. Debt stemming from the company's 1988 LBO was just one problem.

Other companies likely to encounter difficulties are those that undertook management-led LBOs mainly to escape a hostile takeover.

Among the casualties is trailer maker Fruehauf Corp., forced to sell most of its businesses to help pay for a $1.5 billion LBO that thwarted an unwanted bid by takeover investor Asher Edelman. Little is left of the original Fruehauf, now known as K-H Corp.

Problems also arise when deals are "priced on the bet that the best case is going to materialize — it's never happened," said Al Rappaport, chairman of Chicago-based consulting firm Alcar Group Inc.

LBO specialist Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., generally considered the pioneer of the strategy and engineer of the record $25 billion LBO of RJR Nabisco Inc. earlier this year, reportedly faces difficulties unloading some businesses acquired in several of it debt-financed takeovers.

In addition, some companies Kohlberg helped acquire via LBOs are foundering. New York-based Seaman's Furniture Co., for example, has said it must renegotiate debt payments, partly because sales have stagnated. The $360 million LBO engineered two years ago presumed healthy sales growth.

LBO companies can pay debts promptly and make money. Steven Kaplan, assistant professor at the University of Chicago, said the "companies that can't make debt payments get a lot of press."

Kaplan said that in his study of more than 50 LBOs completed between 1975 and 1985, the companies experienced an average jump in operating income of 10 percent and a 2.6 percent increase in profitability, both exceeding the averages by non-LBO competitors.

An LBO has become one of the most popular corporate takeover tools of the decade. Figures compiled by IDD Information Services M&A Database, a securities industry research concern, show the value of LBOs completed in 1989 already totals $49.48 billion, vs. about $16 billion for LBOs completed in 1984.

In such a transaction, a group of investors that often includes company management buys a company largely with borrowed money, using its assets as collateral for the loans.

The investors repay the loans with the company's earnings or the sale of what they consider unnecessary assets or operations, ranging from corporate jets to inefficent factories or entire subsidiaries.

The results often are drastically shrunken but highly profitable, privately owned companies that don't have to worry about the demands of public shareholders and can concentrate instead on their long-term

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Lorenzo may sell Continental Air

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp. Chairman Frank Lorenzo said he was considering a sale of Continental Airlines because the "noise" at strike-torn Eastern Airlines was hurting the sister carrier's business.

In an interview Friday with The Associated Press, Lorenzo said the sale of part or all of Houston-based Continental was under discussion partly because of the negative impact from Eastern's bitter strike and bankruptcy proceeding.

"We have to be responsible to our shareholders," Lorenzo said.

South African boycott tightened

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The world is tightening its economic boycott of South Africa, but the apartheid state exploits loopholes such as foreign registration, mislabeling and third-party shipping to carry on trade, says a new report.

Among the most vociferous proponents of sanctions are the black front-line states of southern Africa, which ironically carry on considerable trade with South Africa.

The report issued last week from the United Nations Center on Transnational Corporations notes that the front-line states have become transshipment points for South African goods.

Agencies face off on stock baskets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two federal agencies and the financial exchanges they regulate are squaring off over a new product for investors known as a "stock basket."

On one side are the stock exchanges and their overseer, the Securities and Exchange Commission. On the other is the newer Commodity Futures Trading Commission and its charges, the boisterous markets that deal in commodities.

The product at issue is technically called an "index participation," but it resembles a basket of stocks because it allows investors to buy or sell something with a value tied to broad stock market indexes, such as the Standard & Poors 500.

Banks accuse S&Ls of name theft

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commercial bankers who successfully kept their deposit insurance fund away from failed savings and loans say the S&Ls are engaged in a "sneaky scheme" to appropriate the name of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which once exclusively belonged to banks.

But James H. Grohl, senior vice president of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, isn't worried about the complaints over its letter saying thrift institutions can advertise they are insured by the FDIC.

DEAR ABBY

Wife seeks spark to rekindle husband's love

EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is off on a two-week vacation, but she left behind some of her favorite letters taken from her best-selling book, "The Best of Dear Abby."

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a man I love with all my heart. He says he no longer loves me and wants a divorce. We have three children. At first he said there was no one else and he just wanted to be free, then after I begged him to reconsider, he admitted there was another woman.

I would get down on my hands and knees if I thought it would do any good. I tried to tell him how much I loved him. I even kissed him, but he stood there like a statue with his hands in his pockets. Abby, I am desperate. How can I get him to love me again? The divorce is coming up soon in court. No fault. No chance. Help me. I don't want to live without him. — ALONE AND CRYING

DEAR ALONE: You aren't alone. You have three children, which are three good reasons for living.

Since there is another woman in the picture, your chances for making him "love you" again are zilch. Furthermore, there is nothing less appealing to a man than a begging, prideless woman. So dry your tears, square your shoulders, and chin up. Concentrate on making a new life for yourself. Sometimes good luck comes disguised as disaster.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has always been a heavy smoker. (Four packs a day for the last 30 years.) Al had a heart attack last year, and the doctor gave him some orders. Quit smoking (which he did, believe it or not) and avoid all excitement. (He was more specific: absolutely no fooling around with young girls unless he wanted to die in bed.)

Now Al tells me he's nervous and restless. He says he has to lead a more "normal" life and can't give up everything he enjoys. He's asked me if I would rather have him go back to smoking again or fooling around with young girls. Isn't that a choice for you?

How should I answer him? With all his faults, I do love him and don't want to be a widow. But which is worse, lung cancer or a heart attack? — AL'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: It's a draw. But with a choice like that, you'd probably worry less if you saw Al smoking. (P.S. Your Al certainly is a shrewd trader.)

DEAR ABBY: I've been married to a good-looking cross-country truck driver for 10 years. I'm not the suspicious type, but Friday night he came off the road with two long scratches on his left hip. They were fairly deep scratches, yet neither his shorts nor his trousers were ripped.

When I asked him where he got the scratches, he said they were probably from a feather in the bed. Now, Abby, I'd like to believe him, but do they still have featherbedding in modern motels? And could anybody get scratched like this from a feather? — NOT DUMB

DEAR NOT: It's unlikely that the scratches came from a feather. It was probably the whole chick.

DEAR ABBY: When our daughter was a baby, I found her pacifier in our bed. I thought it had dropped out of her mouth while she was in our bed, but later I found the pacifer in the drawer of our nightstand table, and I couldn't for the life of me figure out how it got there.

Then one morning I woke up early and saw my husband sound asleep with the pacifier in his mouth! We had a good laugh over it, and that evening when I fixed the baby's bottle I jokingly asked him if he wanted a bottle too. He said yes, so I fixed him one.

He loved it, so I kept fixing him a bottle right along with the baby's. I took the baby off the bottle when she was 14 months old, but my husband still has one every night, and he is 37. Please don't use our names as my husband is well known here. He works on the space program. Thank you. — HAPPY WIFE

Family changes when grandchildren born

By Dr. LAWRENCE KUTNER
New York Times News Service

The moment your child has a child is the beginning of a new set of relationships and a new way of viewing yourself.

Taking on the title "grandparent" is an event that is embraced by most adults and dreaded by a few. It is an opportunity that many parents all but take for granted, but one that their own grandparents did not count on.

"This is the first generation of older people who live long enough that most of them can expect to have grandchildren," said Dr. Andrew Cherlin, a professor of sociology at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore who has been studying the relationships between grandparents and grandchildren. "This has only been true since the middle of the century."

Sociologists have also found dramatic differences in the numbers of grandchildren that grandparents have had over the past 100 years.

At the turn of the century, 60-year-old grandparents averaged 12 to 15 grandchildren, said Dr. Peter Uhlenberg, an associate professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Today, he says, a typical 60-year-old grandparent has only three.

Often this leads to a more intense relationship between the two generations.

Research on how new grandparents perceive their status has shown few clear-cut patterns, aside from the pervasive feeling of satisfaction reported in most studies.

"It means lots of different things to different people," said Dr. Helen Kivnick, a visiting associate professor of social service administration at the University of Chicago and the author of "The Meaning of Grandparenthood" (UMI Research Press, 1982).

"A lot of grandparents talk about it as getting a second chance," she continued. "That means being more patient and devoted to their grandchildren and more nurturing of their own children."

She has found that grandfathers over 65, especially, tend to be more physically affectionate with their grandchildren than they were with their children.

Other research has found that relationships between grandparents and grandchildren are quite different from those between parents and children.

While some of the differences are obvious, others are quite subtle, though extremely important for all three generations.

"Kids don't see wrinkles in their grandparents," said Dr. Arthur Kornhaber, a child psychiatrist and president of the Foundation for Grandparenting, who uses that metaphor to characterize the special bond commonly felt between those generations.

"Grandparents aren't a threat to children," he added. "Kids also see their grandparents as more vulnerable than their parents, which is one of the reasons why they behave differently around them."

His research has found that most grandparents are much less judgmental than parents, who tend to see their children as reflections of themselves.

For children, who often feel as if they are being evaluated by the adults around them, the relationship with grandparents is therefore unusual and much welcomed. It establishes grandparents and grandchildren as allies in a family.

"There's a playful and wonderful conspiracy against the middle generation," Kornhaber said.

The benefits of that "conspiracy" may be lost if grandparents live far away, as is the case in a growing number of families.

As a way of nurturing relationships, in 1985 Kornhaber started a summer camp in the Adirondacks where long-distance grandparents and grandchildren can spend a week together.

The camp, which is held at the Sagamore Conference Center in Raquette Lake, N.Y., serves 15 to 20 families at a time, and costs $325 per week per adult and $250-325 per week per child. Kornhaber is also experimenting with sessions held over long weekends.

Those interested in the camp can write the Foundation for Grandparenting, Box 31, Lake Placid, N.Y. 12946.

"What they do is just hang out together," he said. When he tried organizing activities throughout the day, they simply got in the way.

Instead, he found that no matter what the ages of the children, the two generations tended to spend their time in contemplative, informal activities like picking berries or singing songs. "It's such a relief for kids who have to produce at school and adults who have to produce at work," he added.

Kornhaber also found that children pay very close attention to how their parents treat their grandparents.

He said parents have a vested interest in examining this issue closely: "It forms the template for the way these children will treat their parents when the children grow up."

Adjusting to role as grandparent can be difficult

New York Times News Service

Most grandparents welcome their new status without hesitation.

For some, it is a chance to be viewed as a valued elder of the family. For others, it is an opportunity to indulge themselves and their grandchildren in ways they dared not do with their own children.

But some grandparents feel uncomfortable in their new roles.

That discomfort stems mostly from conflicts with their children or concerns about how others will perceive them.

In general, researchers say, women seem to have more extreme reactions to becoming grandparents than men do, showing more exuberance or, rarely, more depression.

"Women who become grandparents when they're 45 or younger are not as likely to talk about it," said Dr. Matti Gershenfeld, an adjunct professor of psychoeducational studies at Temple University in Philadelphia, who has been studying women at mid-life. "They say it makes them feel as if they are old."

She added that divorced women tend to keep their status as grandmothers very quiet, "since they feel it makes them less attractive in the marriage market. Men don't seem to have the same pattern. I haven't seen many men who felt negative about becoming a grandfather."

Among those who embrace the new title, problems often arise when their role is unclear or inappropriate.

"Wise grandparents do not become parents to the young children," advised Dr. Arthur Kornhaber, author of "Between Parents and Grandparents" (St. Martin's Press, 1986) and president of the Foundation for Grandparenting in Lake Placid, N.Y.

Although it is sometimes appropriate for a grandparent to take primary responsibility for bringing up a child, like when the new parent is a teen-ager or especially immature, doing so changes the balance of roles in the family.

"Wise grandparents give up their parental authority to the new parents," Kornhaber continued. "When they don't do that, there's big trouble."

Play it safe: Inspect outdoor playground equipment

New York Times News Service

It's important to inspect and maintain outdoor playground equipment, and now is a good time to do it.

Playground experts recommend that for safety, pressure-treated wood, which is prepared with chromated copper arsenate, be sealed with water-repellent sealer, and that for durability, all wood be sealed. Many brands of sealer are available at hardware stores and home centers.

Here are some tips on the care of various playground items.

■ WOODEN SWINGS, SLIDES, CLIMBERS: Smooth sharp edges and remove splinters; treat with water-repellent wood sealer; recess protruding bolt ends or replace with capped nuts.

■ METAL SWINGS, SLIDES, CLIMBERS: Tighten loose hardware twice monthly; smooth sharp edges with emery cloth or file; replace conventional nuts with capped nuts; lubricate moving parts and remove rust.

■ SWING ATTACHMENTS: Test ropes or chain monthly with adult weight; smooth sharp edges of chain links; close any open hooks; make sure anchors remain secure.

■ SANDBOX: Remove debris; dampen sand to prevent blowing; cover when not in use; replace old sand.

■ GROUND COVER: Keep playground area covered with 3- to 6-inch-thick layer of shredded wood chips or bark. Under swings, slides and climbing equipment, increase depth of cover to 9 inches.
