Poster-carrying farmers mail wheat

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

Area farmers today — almost 100 strong — lined up at the Pampa Post Office windows to mail boxes of wheat to President Carter in protest of low prices for the commodity.

It was a peaceful demonstration, although at one point midway in the mailing, a black man pushed to the front of the line.

"Did you see that (deleted) come in here and butt in front of everybody to buy food stamps?" one farmer said.

"It's a wonder he didn't get lynched," a bystander in the post office observed to another farmer.

"The only reason was ignorance," was the reply. "Nobody knew what he was doing."

Many of the farmers who blame the government for low commodity prices also do not approve of the food stamp program which is financed by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The farmers gathered at 10 a.m. at a parking lot just off Cuyler Street, then marched with a police escort the two blocks to the post office.

The parade consisted of a large John Deere tractor pulling a flat trailer containing boxes to be mailed and about 30 children of various ages and descriptions followed. Many signs and placards were carried by both children and adults. One sign declared:

"Farmers feed America!"

"How much longer?"

A farmer who appeared to be in his late 20s or early 30s wore a tee shirt upon which was printed: "Farmers striking for higher wages" in the front and "Warning, low farm prices may be hazardous to your health" in back.

Another of the $30,000 tractors brought up the rear of the parade.

As the group turned off Cuyler Street and began arriving at the post office, a bystander said to a reporter: "They might as well get the publicity because they're not gonna get another darn thing out of it. All these politicians count are votes."

Walking up the steps to the post office was difficult for one little fellow who was carrying a box about half his size.

"If you're counting heads, add one," a placard carrying farmer said. "We've got an expectant mother up here."

Several of those participating in the demonstration were mailing boxes of wheat for friends in addition to their own. The parcels were addressed to: "President Carter, 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D.C. 20500."

Willis N. Clark of the Clark Ranch near Miami had an extra copy of the letter he mailed to the President along with his box of wheat. He said he also mailed copies to the secretary of agriculture, and the chairman of the Agriculture committees of the Senate and House.

"Since the American agri-man has to purchase all of his inputs on a restricted market, and sell his products on a worldwide basis price-wise, doesn't it seem logical that he should expect to receive parity price for that portion of his crop that is needed for domestic consumption?"

"The consuming public must be educated to the fact that people in America devote outstandingly fewer hours of work for the food on their tables than the peoples of any country on earth."

"When you feed this wheat to a flight of birds in Washington, think of the plight of agri-men U.S.A."

Information on one of the signs carried by one of the demonstrators showed that a farmer receives only 3 cents of a 56-cent loaf of bread; only a half cent of a $1.04 box of breakfast cereal; and only $1.04 for the fiber used in making a $20 pair of blue jeans.

The placard also illustrated that in order to purchase a pair of shoes priced at $32.95, a farmer would have to sell 102 shoeboxes full of wheat.

Price of wheat in 1947 was contrasted with the current going rate. It was $3 per bushel 30 years ago and only $2 now, according to the sign.

Fred Vanderburg Jr., chairman of the protest movement, and Sheridan Harnly, president of the local chapter of Texas Farmers Union, said the local protesting farmers were joined in the mail-in today by farmers in other areas.

Following a press day Friday which resulted in extensive area coverage and an account carried by Associated Press, Mrs. Harnly said she was called and interviewed by a Dallas radio station. A farmer's wife from the San Antonio area called to pledge the support of several farmers in that region.

The next step to be taken by the protesting farmers has not been announced, but Vanderburg indicated it may be a strike. He said that following today's mailing he would return to his farm south of Pampa and put up a sign that declares "This Farm Will Strike" in a field near the highway.

Blaze destroys wedding gifts

By THOM MARSHALL
and JEANNE GRIMES
Pampa News Staff

Lorena and Raul Camacho are going to have a rough time when they return from their honeymoon and find the mobile home they had rented and everything they own except what they have with them destroyed by fire.

The wind-fed flames that broke out Sunday at 114 W. Thut also destroyed a two-story wooden building, tool sheds, a stack of lumber, several animals, tools, a boat, and a mini-bike.

But Mrs. Camacho's mother, Amelia Zamora, was most distressed this morning when she spoke of the lost contents of the mobile home.

"Her father had just furnished the mobile home," Mrs. Zamora said with a quiver in her voice.

The newlyweds were renting the mobile home from the bride's father, Manuel Zamora, who owned the property.

The groom is employed by Cabot Corp. as a welder.

The couple was married Saturday night at St. Vincent's Catholic Church and "They got a lot of nice presents," Mrs. Zamora said. They had put all the presents in the mobile home and they were reduced to ashes in a few minutes Sunday afternoon.

"All her beautiful china," the mother said. "A beautiful clock from Zales — everything was still in the boxes. I never saw so many presents in my life."

And the couple recently had purchased a new color television set on an installment plan. It was burned.

There was a new sewing machine in the trailer on which the young Mrs. Camacho, a 1977 graduate of Pampa High School, had made new drapes for the first home she was to share with her husband. And the record albums, photographs, all the presents Raul had bought her when they were dating — all burned.

"They didn't have any insurance or anything," Mrs. Zamora said. "All they have now is what they have in their little wagon."

And the wedding dress.

"She changed over at her daddy's before they left on the honeymoon," the mother said, "so she saved her wedding dress."

Mrs. Zamora was at home when she first heard the sirens at about 2:30 p.m. Sunday. A mother's intuition frightened her as the wailing fire trucks grew closer.

"I live about a block and a half away," she said. "I just knew it was that corner."

Mrs. Zamora was sifting through the ashes this morning, trying to find anything salvageable. She told The News before she started that she was dreading the task.

But she was dreading even more having to break the news to her daughter and new son-in-law.

"I just hope she doesn't get sick," Mrs. Zamora said.

She said that persons who would like to help the couple may bring items to 613 S. Ballard.

Capt. Kenneth Kirby of the Pampa Fire Department said today the 23 firefighters who were called out to fight the blaze included 14 off-duty firemen.

"We laid about 3,000 feet of line," Kirby said, "and there were three trucks at the scene."

The captain said the building that burned was the old Acme Lumber Company building.

"There was all kinds of stuff stored in there," he said.

Twenty-three Pampa firefighters Sunday afternoon battled a fire which destroyed a building and mobile home in the 100 block of W. Thut. Capt. Richard Norwood, administers oxygen to Fireman Ken Holt. Holt was one of three firefighters overcome by smoke and heat at the scene. The blaze was threatening a nearby grocery store. (Pampa News photos by Ron Ennis)

Two challenge school to forum on bonds

John Gikas, former school board member, and E.C. Sidwell, local businessman, have challenged the superintendent of schools and school board to a public discussion of the upcoming bond issue.

The Pampa Independent School District board of trustees has called an election Aug. 18 to determine if the school can spend $2.2 million to upgrade and repair local schools.

The letter, to be delivered today to Bob Phillips, superintendent, and board members, called for an open forum meeting.

It invited Phillips and a member of the school board "to join us for such a meeting for a period of not less than one hour, each side being given equal time."

Sidwell said he hopes for town meeting type gathering.

Phillips told The News he would not favor a meeting until "I know what they want." He said the decision would be up to the board.

Al Smith, board secretary and chairman of the long range planning committee which has been working on the bond issue, commented that he saw no purpose in an open forum.

He said that all the board meetings are open to the public.

Bill Arrington, board president, could not be reached this morning.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

How fast is 'fast' deregulation

Years after the OPEC cartel jacked up oil prices and made us all energy conscious, and after millions upon millions of words of government rhetoric about the need to conserve fuels, Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) regulated trucks are still wasting millions of gallons of gasoline and diesel fuel each year because of regulations that leave them no other option.

Such regulations force truckers to follow uneconomical, out of the way, routes and, adding insult to injury, often compel them to return empty when, were it not for crippling regulations, they could carry paying loads both ways.

Moreover, in addition to forcing truckers to waste precious fuel, the ICC practice of controlling entry into the trucking industry inhibits competition with the result that consumers are compelled to pay artificially high prices for goods and services.

Thus, we hasten to add, is not our indictment of the regulatory agency, but that of the federal government's own General Accounting Office (GAO), and of ICC chief, Daniel O'Neal, himself.

Calling for Congress to help solve energy problems by letting trucks owned by one manufacturer carry goods for other companies, the GAO pointed out in a recent study that this would save millions of gallons of gasoline and diesel fuel each year. The study found that empty trucks travel hundreds of thousands of miles returning from runs without a new load.

And O'Neal, commenting on the competition inhibiting nature of ICC regulations, told Wall Street Journal reporters that the regulatory agency must begin to move "its attention away from protecting carriers who currently provide services" and toward providing "adequate service to users of the system."

Mr. O'Neal, who has been a strong and vocal critic of ICC truck regulation, said that he plans to set a fast pace for reducing the agency's control of the trucking industry.

Brave and welcome words. Still, one wonders, for its reaction to suggestions that trucks owned by one company be allowed to carry loads for other companies, and thus carry paying loads both ways, a spokesman for the ICC, which Mr. O'Neal heads, said that the agency feared that such permission would divert cargo from regulated (read "protected") trucking companies to private truckers and hurt some small shippers.

After all, the ICC chief went on to warn, deregulation has troublesome implications for truckers and shippers who have come to rely on more than 40 years of regulation.

In other words, talk of deregulation notwithstanding, it's to be regulated and anti-competitive "business as usual."

Nation's press

By JOAN BECK

(Chicago Tribune)
"I'm on welfare. I'm taking what I need. What are you bothering me for?"

New York City is still sweeping up shattered glass and shattering gutted stores and counting burned-out social theories in the wake of last week's looting riots. Neither the stores nor the theories will be easy to restore.

Reactions of social theorists to the pillage were generally knee-jerk clichés about racial outrage and society not doing enough for the hungry, hopeless poor. But the 1960s theories don't fit the 1977 blackout pictures, as the looters themselves made clear.

Those muscular young males hefting furniture down the street or loading vans backed up to appliance stores or setting fires to merchandise they didn't want showed no signs of imminent starvation. They are as capable physically of building or improving a neighborhood as destroying it.

The looters' faces were not filled with rage, but glee. They weren't looking for food as much as for fun. And while it was as comforting to think they stole a storeful of Bibles and prayer shawls because they had urgent spiritual hunger for them, it's difficult to believe.

It's Christmastime. It's Christmastime. It's shopping with no money required.

There was also nothing racist about the plundering. The black, white, and Hispanic looters were indistinguishable, except something by age and energy. From the blacks, whites, and Hispanics they looted. Often, the pillaged were almost as marginally poor as the pillagers.

"It's really sort of beautiful. Everybody is out on the streets together. There's sort of a party atmosphere."

The carnival carnage in the blackout is a vivid and painful reminder that we need to look again at prevailing theories about crime and poverty and reassess the effectiveness of the welfare system as a preventative and as a remedy for both. This is particularly urgent as the Carter administration ponders the package of welfare reforms the President expects to send to Congress soon.

If New York City offers higher welfare benefits than other areas, why hasn't it helped more? How much is enough? (One recent report argues that by statistical definition, poverty shouldn't even exist in New York now—that enough welfare programs are available to push everyone above the official poverty level.)

Or, if "poverty" involves more than cash and kind income, and includes attitudes, lifestyles, the uses of time and energy, and the rearing of children, what then? How do we cope with the mentality of poverty?

And what happens when the

Every invention has social consequences

Technology must dignify our lives

By George Bugliarello

As you read this newspaper, watch a golf tournament on television, drive your car or turn on your hearing aid, you are enjoying some of the fruits of the 20th century technology. But the same technology can get you trapped in traffic jams, expose you to extreme levels of noise, introduce into your body some 3,000 chemical additives through the food you eat, and threaten your job through automation or obsolescence.

The question here and in the other developed nations of the world (and in some of the underdeveloped ones as well) is how we shall strengthen the quality of our life by continuing to benefit by the products of our inventive and engineering genius, and at the same time avoid cultural or environmental shocks.

Social technology, which concerns itself with these issues, is a newly emerging area of human activity. It can be compared, in some sense, to preventive medicine, where the physician is trying to prevent a medical catastrophe through vaccination, for example, rather than waiting for an epidemic to overtake his patients.

Similarly, social technology amounts to looking and planning for the future, endeavoring to understand the future implications of the choices we make today. We are beginning to exercise the same care and meticulous attention in looking at the future that, until now, archaeology and anthropology have devoted to exploring history.

Social technology implies that we have choices to make. We are, after all, living in a technological society with high life expectancies and creature comforts made possible by man's inventiveness and engineering.

But each technological invention presents us with new problems and choices with which we must come to terms. For instance, how far can we increase automation or work efficiency without risking the alienation created by fewer jobs and an impersonal work environment?

Or how can we use computers effectively in all levels of business and government — as we must if our complex society is to cope with an ever increasing flow of data — without invading our privacy or jeopardizing our democracy?

The fact is that we cannot ever hope to reap the great benefits that we are deriving from our technology without paying for them with some side effects. The essential problem for our society is to keep these side effects at tolerable levels, and to equitably distribute the burdens.

The scope of social technology is very broad. For instance, in medicine, technology has become so pervasive and indispensable that it dominates more and more the physician-patient relationship, with technical services and devices often replacing human contact with the doctor. Social technology is concerned with this problem — with how to avoid the depersonalization of health care, that has led us also to regulate the very old and the very sick away from our houses, to spend their last years or their last moments in segregation and loneliness.

The issue clearly goes beyond health care. It is one of economics, of social organization and of social preferences. But technological advances in health care created the modern hospital and nursing home, which made these social patterns possible.

Taking this matter a step further, how do we face up to the fact that electronic media, pills and stimulants tend to replace the companionship and love of other human beings? Are they surrogate men and women?

Three of the major concerns dominating all our lives today are peace, energy and food. Sociotechnology is central to them.

We can and must produce — mass produce — machines and systems that respect our need for diversity and esthetics. A system, whether it be transportation, banking or telephone communications, is an extension of our body and must care about us. It exists not to antagonize, tyrannize or destroy us, but to protect and enhance us.

Are we going to continue to have a mutual balance of terror between nations based on stockpiles of super weapons? Or will we develop a fundamental readjustment of nations through changes in the attitudes of various blocks? The answer must go beyond stalemates of mutual deterrence, essential as they have been thus far in avoiding mutual confrontation. It ultimately lies in whether every citizen in every nation can become sensitized to the horrors of modern technological war, and become indeed determined to convert weapons into plowshares.

In energy, are we running out of resources, as many scientists and engineers tell us, or will we be always able to depend on some revolution in our ability to extract and utilize energy, something which historically has always bailed us out in the past? The dilemma here too is a sociotechnological one of perception and of interaction between technology and other societal concerns.

If we pause and slow down our economies too soon, we face unemployment and an erosion of our ability to build hospitals and to do research for our future. If we persist in the hope that research and technology will come to our rescue, and this then fails to occur, we face social catastrophes on a global scale. The task for social technology is to devise intelligent strategies to reduce the risk of his subtle game of "chicken" that we are playing with our future.

In the realm of food supply for the world, can we continue to count on the promise of the "green revolution" which has enabled underdeveloped areas of the world to multiply crop yields of basic grains? And, if so, what are the social consequences? What are the impacts on poverty and overpopulation?

In essence social technology has three objectives. The first is to study how technology affects our society in all its aspects, from urbanization, to government, to esthetics. The second is to study the way in which social processes and attitudes lead to technological decisions — for example, how the design of a housing project is influenced by the architect's conception of family life. The third objective is the identification of the technological versus the social choices open to us. A very simple example is whether to install a home burglar alarm or depend on friendly, alert neighbors. This kind of choice, multiplied by all households of the nation, can have a significant influence on our economy and on the nature of our society.

It is obvious that machines have now acquired a complexity equal to that of biological organisms. Whether we like it or not, we can no longer conceive of man or society without machines, any more than we can conceive of machines without man. We can never go back.

But we must insist that a machine or technological system should not weaken dignity for the sake of efficiency. No more the coffee dispenser with only one choice — milk or not milk. No more the telephone that gulps down one more dime, or the telephone operator that takes advantage of her power to cut off us. No more the catch 22s of miscomputerized bureaucracy which forces us to answer "yes" or "no" when we would like to say "perhaps," "but," "sometimes."

No more, indeed, the rigid statistical categorization of people into "young," "middle-aged," "old," with the associated implication for jobs or retirement.

Rigid standardization was essential to the development of technology. But today, with imaginative use of computers and with committed people, we can go beyond this, and learn to produce individuality in our machines and our technological systems. We have, also, the mathematical means to go beyond the one dimensional biological and social categories that have come to govern our lives.

We can and must produce, yes, mass produce, machines and systems that respect our need for diversity and esthetics. A system, whether it be transportation, banking or telephone communications, is an extension of our body and must care about us. It exists not to antagonize, tyrannize or destroy us, but to protect us and to enhance us.

To see that this happens is the ultimate purpose of social technology.

welfare benefits than other areas, why hasn't it helped more? How much is enough? (One recent report argues that by statistical definition, poverty shouldn't even exist in New York now—that enough welfare programs are available to push everyone above the official poverty level.)

Or, if "poverty" involves more than cash and kind income, and includes attitudes, lifestyles, the uses of time and energy, and the rearing of children, what then? How do we cope with the mentality of poverty?

And what happens when the ever-increasing costs of a welfare system reach the point of no return, when high taxes for benefits and municipal services drive taxpayers workers and job-providing businesses away, as is happening in New York? How close are we to a social overload that will blow the system, not just temporarily, but irreparably?

"God gave us this opportunity to get what we needed."

If one cause of the New York looting riots is the rise in entitlements, how will the rage for more and more ever be satisfied? How will government mediate all the conflicting claims for entitlement — including the conviction of workers, who must pay for all the claims directly or indirectly, that they are entitled to the fruits of their labors? It's been easy in the past to ignore the victims of crime, to brush aside the protests of the trashed in concern for the trashed. But surely protection of person and property are obligations of government long before any dubious commitment to ending poverty. And those pillaged small business owners, who provided some stability and jobs, are entitled to more than a 5-7 per cent loan.

That leaves the questions of morality. "No other living person has the right to decide what is moral (right or wrong) for you," declares a new book, "Looking Out for No. 1," rapidly moving up on best seller lists. The same kind of do-it-yourself morality is also being taught in an increasing number of ethics courses in elementary and high schools.

So it's hardly surprising so many New York City looters were able to look TV cameras straight in the eye and insist they weren't doing anything wrong at all.

Neighbor Became an urban Vigilante

By JIM FITZGERALD

Kurt Eickhoff got tired of asking the police for help and not getting any. So he became an urban vigilante.

He obtained proof of the crook's guilt. He searched the neighborhood until he found his man hiding in a burned-out apartment building.

Eickhoff then stood guard over the criminal, ready to hit him with an empty wine bottle, while the cops were called one more time.

An hour later, the cop still hadn't showed up to arrest Eickhoff's prisoner. The police station was five minutes away.

Kurt (like) Eickhoff, 62, is night supervisor at the Detroit Free Press building. He lives on Alter Road, on Detroit's east side, where the 5th Precinct enforces the law. He and his neighbors say it is not enforced nearly enough, and they are fed up.

Eickhoff's story was no big news to me. Every time I brag to my Cousin Al about how safe it is walking around downtown Detroit, I hear yowls from the neighborhoods.

"Sure it's safe downtown, you knucklehead," the yowlers say. "That's because all the cops are downtown, making the mayor look good to the big shots. But you should try walking around our neighborhood after dark. You'll get your head busted and you'll bleed to death before a cop ever shows up."

A woman who works in our downtown apartment building told how things are at the other end of her bus ride. Teen-age vandals regularly damage her property. She has complained to the police several times. Not once has a cop been to her home.

Eickhoff's story is a doozy. His neighbor, a 52-year-old woman, asked his help in reporting a theft. She said her 32-year-old nephew, who had been staying in her home, had stolen $400 cash from her.

Eickhoff took the woman to the 5th Precinct station where she made a formal complaint. He advised the police to hurry because, at that moment, the nephew was packing and preparing to leave his aunt's home. A cop wrote down all the information, but no officer was dispatched to make the arrest.

LATER THAT DAY, the nephew apparently decided $400 wasn't enough. He knew his aunt had left $100 with a friend for safekeeping. He talked the friend out of the $100, saying he needed it to bail his aunt out of jail. He claimed she had been locked up after a barroom brawl.

This was a flat lie, but the friend handed over the $100. However, the friend insisted that the nephew sign a receipt for the money.

When Eickhoff heard about the latest ripoff, he phoned and urged them to send someone after the nephew, who was still in the neighborhood, five minutes from the police station. Eickhoff added that he now had written proof that the nephew was a thief.

No cops were sent. By now, Eickhoff was really steaming. He began his own search and, in about two hours, he found the nephew sleeping — or passed out — on the floor of an abandoned building.

Eickhoff again phoned police and gave them the nephew's location. Hurry! He returned to stand guard over the sleeping thief, prepared to make a citizen's arrest with the aid of an empty bottle.

An hour later, police had not yet arrived. The nephew was still out. Eickhoff gave up on phoning and went to the station in person where he raised hell. Someone finally listened.

Two cops made the arrest. The nephew had only $91 left out of $500. He had a suitcase full of new clothes, and a gut full of booze.

WHY DID EICKHOFF risk his elderly neck playing cops and robbers? "The police wouldn't do anything," he told me. "That money was every cent that woman had in the world. We all got to help each other."

Why are police so slow to respond to some calls for help from the neighborhoods? Priorities. The available cops are busy with more important crimes. It is hard to argue with that. Murders must take precedence over family thefts.

But if that nephew had grabbed his aunt's purse downtown, and she screamed for help, 25 cops would have been on his back in one minute.

That's why so many people who live in the neighborhoods aren't impressed by how safe it is in the center of the city. I don't blame them.

Pipeline builders wasted $1.5 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trans-Alaska pipeline builders wasted $1.5 billion as workers sunbathed on the job, equipment that was stored outside ruined and contractors ordered parts already in their own warehouses, a new report says.

The report on the $8 billion pipeline was prepared for the Alaska Pipeline Commission by Washington attorney Terry F.

Lenzer, a former Watergate prosecutor.

"One of the most serious ... of Alyeska's labor problems was that of workers frequently idle at the job site (including sleeping on buses and sunbathing along the right-of-way)," the report said.

"Alyeska's own documents show that the principal responsibility for idleness rested with management's poor supervision and utilization of the work force."

The pipeline, operated by the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., delivered its first oil from the North Slope to the Alaskan port of Valdez last week. The pipeline has been the subject of a number of investigations following charges of irregularities and excessive costs.

The report described a chaotic process of storing equipment and ordering spare parts.

"Execution contractors desperately sought to requisition spare parts which (unbeknownst to them) were already located in their own warehouses," Lenzer's report said.

"Because of inadequate warehouse space, equipment and material were often stored outside and effectively lost after the first snowfall. By the time the spring thaw came, much material had either been ruined by the weather or stolen."

The findings could be helpful in Alaska's drive to keep to a minimum the costs for transporting oil through the pipeline. A special formula gives Alaska more oil income as transportation costs decline.

The state could argue that unreasonably high construction costs should not be counted in determining the transportation charges, Lenzer said. He called such an exclusion "established regulatory doctrine."

Alaska is one of several protesters trying to convince the Interstate Commerce Commission that the eight oil companies who built the line want to charge too much in oil transportation costs. The commission has approved temporary charges but is investigating permanent tariffs that the companies can charge.

The new report could become part of Alaska's case if the state agrees with the findings. But first there must be public hearings at which the oil companies have a chance to respond, said a member of Lenzer's staff.

The chairman of Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., Edward L. Patton, declined to comment on the report because of pending litigation before the ICC.

Peter DeMay, an Alyeska vice president, said in Anchorage, "I don't think there was anything wasted. After a job of this magnitude, someone could always look back and point to instances where something should have been done better."

Four shot in Texas

By The Associated Press

At least 21 persons died violently in Texas during the past weekend, including 13 persons who died in traffic accidents.

In addition to the traffic deaths, four persons died in shootings and four drowned.

The Associated Press tabulates violent deaths in Texas each weekend between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Sunday.

The deaths included:

A Grand Prairie girl died Sunday following a two-car accident at Arlington. She was identified as Barbara Garza, 5. Officers said an Axl man who allegedly failed to stop after his automobile was involved in an accident with a car driven by the girl's mother has been arrested on a charge of failure to stop and render aid.

Three members of a Groves family were shot to death Sunday morning at their home. The victims were identified as Arthur Lee New, 45, his wife, Bernice Todd New, 41, and his son, Arthur Lee New, 18. Justice of the Peace John Knowles said an inquest was to be held today.

A seven-year-old LaMarque boy died Friday night in a two-car crash on U.S. 69 in Beaumont. Police identified the victim as Bobby Lankford of Beaumont.

A one-car accident Saturday morning in East Texas took the life of a Corrigan man. Police said Kenneth Bamberg, 19, died in a Lufkin hospital after his car struck a highway sign on FM 2501 in Trinity County.

Two teenagers died early Saturday when the car in which they were riding struck a guard rail in Odessa and overturned. Officers said the four persons in the car were thrown out. The dead were identified as Samuel Benavidez, 18, and Miguel Sotello, both of Odessa.

Harvey Binsell, 23, of Schertz, was killed and Waco police officer Jesse Wood was injured Saturday morning in downtown Waco. Police said the men were standing beside a minor accident when a passing motorist plowed into them. The 21-year-old driver was arrested.

Two boats collided Friday night on Lake Alvaredo in North Central Texas killing three teenagers. Authorities identified the dead as Leo Garcia and Mark Stewart, both 18 of Alvaredo, and Danny Helfer, 16, also of Alvaredo.

A two-car head-on collision Saturday morning three miles south of Beaumont claimed the lives of three more people. Police identified the victims as Raymond Brewer, 40, of Nederland, Willie Stewart Jr., 20, and John Chambers, 20, both Baylor University students.

Russell Tatum, 19, was the object of frantic efforts by paramedics Saturday in Dallas but to no avail. Tatum, of Richardson, died of wounds at a hospital received when his car struck a downtown bridge abutment.

Tammy Moore, 5, was pronounced dead at the scene Saturday in Dallas when a car went out of control, drove off the road and landed on the little girl and a playmate. Jessica Lara, 6, miraculously escaped serious injury. The driver of the car was arrested.

Police said it appears Haskell Paige, 42, may have shot himself thinking his wife had done the same. Officers theorized that Paige wandered into the back yard of their Houston home, saw his wife, Nellie, lying unconscious and thought she was dead. Mrs. Paige, 61, regained consciousness sometime after the 7:30 p.m. incident and called police. She too had been wounded in the chest.

Hotel becomes sale barn

HOUSTON (AP) — Formally attired cattlemen and horse breeders turned the lavish grand ballroom of a Houston hotel into a makeshift barn to "sell a horse, a cow and a piece of art."

"They're going to say it was just a group of rich Texans," said former Texas Gov. John Connally. "So be it. If you have top quality merchandise, why not show it off with a touch of Flo Zigfield or Billy Rose?"

Connally was among some 1,200 cattlemen, ranchers and horse breeders who paid a total of $462,550 Saturday night for prize Santa Gertrudis cattle, quarter horses and contemporary western scene art.

Auctioneer Gerald Bowie started the Western Heritage Sale at the Shamrock Hilton by saying, "We're going to sell a horse, a cow and a piece of art."

A Connally-owned bull named "John B." brought $33,000. Connally, one of the main promoters of the sale, said the sponsors decided to hold it in a hotel to "bring the animals to the people, not the other way around."

Dallas cattleman Joe Marchman, one of the sponsors, said the 45 consignors of cattle and quarter horses own some 15.5 million acres of land.

A similar sale with some of the same promoters and bidders was held last year at the Adolphus Hotel in Dallas with cattle taken up to the ballroom on elevators.

"That was a little too difficult," Connally said. "Here we could put up a tent outside and just lead the animals in."

The grand ballroom of the Shamrock is on the ground floor in a pavilion separated from the main hotel building.

"There have not been many requests for us to set up tents on the front lawn and house cattle and horses and in addition auction them off in the grand ballroom at a black-tie affair," mused Robert Shugart, executive assistant manager of the Shamrock.

Carter ponders air bill

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President Carter is giving final consideration to clean-air legislation and a $10 billion public works bill that includes nine of 18 water projects he originally wanted to kill.

The President is expected to sign the two measures today, barring any last-minute snag, said White House Press Secretary Jody Powell.

Considering the legislation, along with a stack of proposals for his tax program, interrupted a five-day vacation the President began in his hometown last Friday.

Carter and his family ducked taking sides in a bitter dispute over racial and other issues that have divided their Plains Baptist Church. They attended Sunday school there, but went to services at the new Maranatha Baptist Church, formed by a splinter group.

The public works bill contains money for 500 water projects.

Although he gave in to Congress on nine, Carter has won acknowledgement that, because of his review of 30 of the projects and his fight to kill 18, the pork barrel will be harder to fill from now on.

Carter reviewed the original 30 projects for their safety and environmental and financial costs. Last April, he announced that 18 failed to pass the test.

Of those 18, these projects and these amounts to fund them were included in the compromise:

Applegate Lake, Ore., $7.4 million; Atchafalaya River, La., $5.1 million; Cache Basin, Ark., $93 million; Columbia Dam, Tenn., $30 million; Hillsdale Lake, Kan., $14 million; the Richard B. Russell Dam in Georgia and South Carolina, $21 million; Tallahala Creek, Miss., $5 million; Auburn, Calif., $30.7 million, and Bayou Bodcau, La., $2.4 million.

The public works bill omits funds for the Clinch River Breeder Reactor in Tennessee.

Carter wants to halt construction of breeder reactors because they produce plutonium while they make power. Plutonium is an ingredient of atomic bombs. As part of his effort to stop the spread of atomic weapons, Carter has urged other nations to follow the lead of the United States in curbing plutonium production.

The bill also gives Congress 48 days to override any presidential decision to produce neutron weapons. Carter has said he will make a decision by Aug. 15.

These weapons are designed to kill by controlled radiation rather than by explosive power and heat. Since the radiation can be targeted, neutron warheads are supposed to be able to kill enemy soldiers without harming friendly troops or inflicting severe damage to buildings or enemy armaments.

Auto makers said the clean air bill is necessary to start building 1978-model cars.

The measure gives Detroit a new delay in meeting tough new auto exhaust standards. It is the fourth such postponement the automobile industry has received.

Carter urged Congress to enact the extension.

'Dirty old man' wants to keep porno private

BONHAM, Tex. (AP) — Jimmy Brannon says his extensive pornography collection, which includes snapshots of some local women he hired as models, is just a hobby that shouldn't offend citizens of this small Northeast Texas city.

But Bonham police see it differently.

They have arrested the 48-year-old music store owner on charges of commercially distributing obscene material and possession of obscene material and confiscated the collection.

"I'm a dirty old man," Brannon said. "But it's my hobby and I keep it to myself. But in a little town you just can't blink without everybody knowing about it." Bonham's population is about 8,000.

"He just sits over there (in his music store) and never bothers anybody," one man who wanted to remain anonymous said of Brannon.

Brannon said he recently rented films from his collection to "a boy I've known all my life." The "boy" was an under-cover policeman, and Brannon had to post $5,000 in bond, half of which he borrowed from his 79-year-old mother, on the eight misdemeanor charges.

Brannon said his collection, which he has been gathering since the 1960s, includes more than 230 pornographic films, hundreds of books, magazines, slides, photographs and two plastic female dolls.

He said he has paid local women up to $30 for posing for pictures.

The legal troubles are threatening his music business, says Brannon, who also stocks marijuana paraphernalia and incense — all sore points with the populace.

"They think if you sell pipes, papers and incense, you sell dope," Brannon said. "Maybe I had an ounce for some girls (models) once. But the guy that's pushing drugs is poisoning people's minds."

He says he might sell the slumping store and stock out-right if a buyer can be found. "But if they're (the buyers) smart, they'll get rid of the head gear, incense and posters."

Brannon's mother said she has never been to her son's apartment. "But I know he's never done anything wrong."

Brannon is scheduled to go on trial next month. He could receive a year in jail and a fine up to $2,000 for each of eight counts.

Psychic finds poly rapist

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — A touch of the supernatural has been added to the weekend arrest of the 17-year-old police believe may be the one dubbed the "Poly Rapist."

And now Bruce Vaughn, who claims he is able to read personalities by facial and body features, says he plans to help New York City police catch the killer known as "Son of Sam."

"I believe the Son of Sam is a Vietnam veteran," said

Vaughn. "The Sam means Uncle Sam. He's telling people you made a killer out of me and now it's your fault."

The Poly Rapist, who earned his nickname for his apparent fondness of elderly victims in the Polytechnic area of this city, is reportedly involved in a series of rapes, attempted rapes and burglaries dating back some three months.

"He (Vaughn) was right down the line on much of the information and composite he gave us," said one amazed detective.

Det. Capt. Roy Tate said Vaughn did help with the composite drawing but, "The man was arrested on evidence. Total evidence. We are working with Mr. Vaughn because he offered his help and right now we'll take all the help we can get."

Vaughn, 42, of Carrollton near Dallas, said he teaches at non-verbal seminars.

PLO may aid Mideast peace

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (AP) — U.S. officials confirmed today they are in indirect contact with the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) on possible ways of removing roadblocks to a Middle East peace conference.

These officials, traveling with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance on his tour of the region, said the PLO has advised the United States through intermediaries that it is considering "some modifications" in U.N. Security Council Resolution 242, which serves as a basis for American efforts to reconvene the Geneva Mideast peace conference.

The informants said, however, there is "nothing firm" yet indicating the PLO is about to recognize the existence of Israel, a key point of dispute.

"We are seeking clar-fication," one official said.

The officials gave no further detail on how these contacts were established, but PLO chief Yasir Arafat has shadowed Vance on almost every stop of his Mideast trip, showing up in Arab capitals a day before or after the American.

It was reported Sunday that the PLO wants to have the resolution reworded to recognize Palestinian rights to a homeland. As now worded, the resolution, passed in 1967 with U.S. backing, simply calls for a "just settlement of the refugee problem."

Second passage of a reworded resolution would firmly commit the United Nations and the United States to a Palestinian homeland.

But the developments also indicate that President Carter is permitting the United States to edge closer toward negotiations with the PLO, and that the PLO might be willing to accept the resolution's other provisions, including its call for a peaceful settlement of the Mideast conflict and for recognition of the right to exist of all states in the region, including Israel.

So far the United States has backed Israel in its refusal to negotiate with the PLO as long as it advocates destruction of the Jewish state. The Palestinian issue — Palestinian participation in peace talks and the creation of a Palestinian homeland — is at the heart of the current stalemate.

But it is not clear that the present hard-line government in Israel would deal with the PLO even if it decides to accept Israel's existence.

In Beirut, Lebanon, a PLO spokesman said the organization has not informed the Carter administration of any change in its opposition to Resolution 242.

After two days of talks with Saudi Arabian officials in this summer capital, Vance was scheduled to fly to Jerusalem Tuesday to meet with Israeli leaders, after which he will swing back to Jordan, Syria and Egypt to brief Arab leaders on the results of the U.S.-Israeli discussions.

U.S. officials acknowledge privately that any chance for a conference in October — called "very likely" by Carter last month — have all but evaporated.

Carter has made full negotiations a top foreign policy objective. Another administration objective — achievement of a new arms control agreement with the Soviet Union — appears out of reach this year.

Eager to attain at least one goal, the administration is pushing hard for a resumption of the Geneva Mideast peace talks. But, as Vance told a news conference Saturday night in Amman, Jordan, he sees no narrowing of differences between Arabs and Israel on the Palestinian homeland issue.

Earlier, Syrian President Hafez Assad rejected the idea of a "working group" of foreign ministers meeting in mid-September. And Jordan's cautious King Hussein, urging thorough preparation for a Geneva conference, said after seeing Vance: "I still think that we're at the very beginning, that it's going to be a long, hard, difficult road ahead."

Israel increasingly is being put on the defensive. Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who dismisses the idea of a Palestinian homeland in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, is getting no support from the United States in his bid to leave all basic issues to Geneva.

Welfare plan would help 'modest incomes'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's plan to overhaul the nation's welfare system would put at least a few dollars into the pockets of more than half of America's taxpayers, administration officials say.

A provision that Carter said would go largely to "hard-pressed workers with modest incomes struggling successfully to avoid welfare" also would benefit families whose annual earnings are as high as $15,000 for a family of four.

One official, who took part in the plan's preparation, said it "would constitute substantial tax relief for millions of Americans, and well over half of American taxpayers will receive at least some benefit."

The gains for the middle class as well as the poor would come from an expansion of the earned income tax credit, a $3.3 billion addition to the President's $30.7 billion plan to provide cash for those who can't or aren't expected to work along with jobs for those the government says are employable.

Another administration official, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., was asked Sunday why billions of dollars in tax relief for the middle class was included in the package.

"It has always been part of President Carter's tax reform objective to provide some relief for the middle class Americans in this country," Califano said.

"It becomes an integral part of the welfare-jobs program of the President because it's important to have a mechanism to make it always more valuable for an individual to work in the private sector than in public service jobs, and the earned income tax credit does that," he added.

The refundable tax credit is now worth up to $400 a year to families of the working poor who pay little or no federal income tax.

The credit pays a 10 per cent rebate on all earnings up to $4,000, so a family with that income gets an annual cash rebate of $400.

When a family makes more than $4,000, however, the credit is taken away in a reverse manner, disappearing entirely at an income of $8,000.

Under the Carter proposal, the tax credit would remain at 10 per cent for the first $4,000 in income.

But instead of phasing out at between $4,000 and $8,000, the credit would continue to increase, although at only 5 per cent, until the family reaches the so-called tax entry point, at which a family would have to begin paying federal income tax.

Officials say they expect that point to be $8,000 for a family of four under the tax reform proposal the President is scheduled to announce later this year.

Above that income level, the credit would be phased out at its present rate — $10 for every $100 of income — until the rebate disappears entirely for a family of four making $15,000.

Cypriots mourn leader's death

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Archbishop Makarios, political and spiritual leader of Cyprus' Greek majority, was buried in a mountain tomb today after his body was borne through the streets of Nicosia in an emotional funeral procession.

Tens of thousands of Greek Cypriots, many of them weeping, lined the streets to view the coffin carried on a jeep-drawn gun carriage. After church services, his body was driven to Kykko monastery, high in the Troodos mountain range 80 miles from Nicosia. It was placed in an earth-covered stone tomb, resembling an ancient burial mound.

Makarios was president of Cyprus almost without interruption since the eastern Mediterranean island won independence from Britain in 1960. He died of a heart attack last Wednesday at the age of 63.

His death left a void at a time when Cyprus is torn by a bitter political rivalry between Greek and Turkish Cypriots.

Mourners crowded streets and the windows of buildings along the mile-long route from St. John's Cathedral, where the archbishop's body had lain in state during five days of official mourning, to the Church of the Evangelists for the formal funeral service.

Pictures of the dead leader filled shop windows along the route. Many bore the legend "Makarios Zei" — "Makarios Lives."

A military band played dirges, setting the tempo for the procession, as church bells tolled and cannon boomed in salute.

The service was open only to Cypriot political, military and religious leaders and the almost 200 dignitaries from more than 50 countries who arrived for the funeral. Loudspeakers carried the service to crowds outside the church and it was broadcast live by television to the rest of the island.

"We will fight until we bring justice to Cyprus, until his (Makarios') dreams come true," said National Assembly Chairman and acting president Spiros Kyprianou.

Other speakers included Greek President Constantine Tsatsos and acting Cypriot

Archbishop Chrysostomos, the Bishop of Paphos.

The U.S. delegation was headed by Chief Justice Warren Burger and included President Carter's sister, Ruth Carter Stapleton, and former Defense Secretary Clark Clifford, special U.S. mediator in the Greek-Turkish dispute over control of the island.

The funeral cortege passed within a few hundred yards of the "green line," a fortified barrier dividing the Greek and Turkish sectors of the capital. On the Turkish side, occupied by 25,000 troops from the Turkish mainland, flags flew at full staff, a sign that most members of the Turkish minority were not mourning the passing of their longtime adversary.

After the service the archbishop's body was taken by motorcade along a winding 80-mile route into the Troodos mountains in the center of Cyprus to the Kykko monastery, where he was to be buried. Makarios entered that monastery 50 years ago as novice priest.

There was a society of herders and hunters living in North Africa as early as 6,000 B.C. whose wall paintings hang in modern museums.

13 governors discuss energy, agriculture

AFTON, Okla. (AP) — Thirteen governors were to begin discussing energy, agriculture and water this morning in the first session of the Midwestern Governors' Conference at the Shangri-la resort here.

Most of the governors and the 400 others attending the conference arrived Sunday and spent the day on tennis courts or golf courses. On Sunday night they attended a western barbecue.

The session at 9 a.m. today was scheduled to be a discussion of President Carter's energy program.

Walt Rostow, former advisor to late President Lyndon Johnson and now professor at the University of Texas in Austin, was to be the governors' special guest for the energy discussion. Tuesday's session will be highlighted by another energy discussion with John O'Leary, Federal Energy Administration director.

Boren, a strong advocate of providing more incentives for oil and gas exploration, said he believes most of the governors agree with him, "but the problem is getting the people in Washington to listen."

Boren said governors conferences "mainly are just a chance for governors to exchange ideas. We're going to be discussing energy, agriculture and water development, all of which are of great interest to Oklahoma." This conference gives us a great chance to show off Oklahoma.

Boren said the owner of the privately owned resort "has had a $3 million additional investment just since we decided to have this conference here."

The resort has indoor and outdoor tennis facilities, a golf course, swimming pools and is located on the tip of a peninsula that extends into Grand Lake. Several local yachts also have been made available for the governors use.

Fifteen states are members of the Midwestern Governors' Conference. Boren said only the governors of Minnesota and West Virginia were unable to attend. In addition to Boren, the governors of North Dakota, Kansas, Indiana, Kentucky, Nebraska, South Dakota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa, Ohio, Missouri and Illinois were attending the conference.

Boren said Oklahoma is trying a new way of financing activities for the gathering. "In the past, these conferences generally have been financed by direct legislative appropriations or soliciting contributions from private industry," Boren said.

"We didn't want to do it like that, so we decided to charge a registration fee and get assistance from chambers of commerce in the area. Boren said Sam Hammons, who is chairman of the conference's host committee, said the $50 per family registration fee for all who plan to participate in the social activities in the conference will bring in about $12,000. He said added to that is about $33,000 in contributions from chambers of commerce and tourist groups, bringing the total to $45,000 in social funds.

Altus policemen now unemployed

ALTUS, Okla. (AP) — The entire city police force here is unemployed today as the result of a surprise move Sunday night by the Altus City Council.

Meeting in emergency session, the council decided that approximately 35 officers who have been participating in a weekend strike are considered "self terminated."

The council also instructed the city administrator to begin procedures to replace about 34 officers in this town of 23,000. Only the police chief and his assistant have not participated in the outbreak of "blue flu."

Police began calling in sick Friday night after contract negotiations earlier in the week ended in a deadlock. A day before they staged a 24-hour sickout.

Following the brief session Sunday night, the council released a statement saying "The city of Altus will no longer recognize the local chapter of the Fraternal Order of Police as the bargaining agent for the members of the police department. The recent admitted 'blue flu' epidemics were a blatant violation of state law and amounted to a complete disregard for the law by those who are charged with upholding it."

"Failure of the members of the police department to report for work constitutes self termination of their employment with the city of Altus."

The distinction between "self-termination" and outright firing is that in the former officers may retain accrued retirement benefits.

Bell workers may sign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 700,000 telephone workers are being asked by their union leaders to ratify a proposed three-year contract with the Bell System calling for a 31 per cent increase in wages and benefits.

Company officials and leaders of three telephone worker unions reached a contract agreement late Saturday, averting the threat of a nationwide strike.

Spokesmen for the unions and the Bell System said they doubted there would be any problems in getting the contract accepted, a process which is expected to take a month.

In addition, local issues must be resolved in talks with the Bell System's 23 operating companies.

"We've cleared a major hurdle," Bell spokesman Charles Dynes said. The contract was "in line with recent agreements in the steel and auto industries," said Glenn E. Watts, president of the 500,000-member Communications Workers of America, largest of three unions involved in the talks.

Agreeing to similar pacts were negotiators for 120,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and 70,000 members of the Telecommunications International Union.

Asked whether consumers' phone bills will go up as a result of the settlement, Watts said, "I don't have any doubt that the telephone companies will have to go for rate increases." But he added that most of the reason for this is increases in other costs to the Bell System such as construction and equipment expenses.

Company officials did not speculate on the contract's possible impact on telephone rates. Under the three-year agreement, wage increases will amount to 7.9 per cent this year, 7.07 per cent next year and 6.68 per cent in 1979.

For example, the average telephone operators' salary will go from $200 to $257 a week during the contract.

Watts said other improvements include pensions for the spouse of any active employee who dies within 15 or more years on the job, disability benefits for pregnancy and five additional days off annually by 1980.

The workers are employed by Bell's operating companies, the Western Electric Co., Bell's manufacturing arm, and Bell Laboratories.

Police report
A 22-year-old Pampa man was arraigned on a driving while intoxicated charge after the car he was driving was involved in a one-car accident early Sunday.

Rogelio Villarreal of 1049 Varnon Drive was injured when his car struck a light pole in the 500 block of W. Francis. Officers said the car came to a stop in the intersection of Francis and Gray Streets.

He was taken to the Highland General Hospital emergency room by private car and was arrested by police after he was treated and released.

Villarreal was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford who set bond at $500. Pampa police were called to investigate a criminal mischief complaint, four thefts, a burglary and one non-injury accident over the weekend.

A man reported someone broke his car's windshield with a large rock while the vehicle was parked at 2535 Christine. Damage was set at $75.

A service station attendant told officers someone took a chamois cloth from the station and an attendant at Bell Service Station gave officers the description of a car in connection with the theft of $5 of gasoline. Police traced the license tag number and charges may be filed later.

An officer on patrol noticed the door to a local lounge standing open and on investigation found the door had been kicked open. The owner said approximately $50 was taken, along with seven cases of beer valued at $42. Also taken were about 25 cards with the names of creditors.

Police said two suspects are under investigation in connection with the burglary.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
High humidity coupled with morning temperatures in the 80s are keeping much of the nation steamy today.
Thunderstorms and milder showers in a band scattered from southern Idaho to the Great Lakes region, then up into New England and down to Delaware, may relieve some of the pressure.

Some of the storms moving across Nebraska and Iowa had thunderheads more than 10 miles tall. In a sudden storm in New York on Sunday, five people were struck by lightning on a baseball field in Central Park. Four were injured seriously.

Temperatures in the 80s were reported along the Atlantic Coast from Maryland to Florida and west along the Gulf and across the southern plains to even hotter readings in southern California.

The Northern Plains enjoyed cooler air with 50- and 60-degree readings.

Temperatures around the nation ranged from 46 at Grand Forks, N.D., to 96 at Phoenix, Ariz.

HS students enroll

High school enrollment for students new to the Pampa Independent School District started at 8 a.m. today and will continue through 4 p.m. Aug. 26.

John English, Pampa High School counselor, said this morning that schedules will be mailed to pre-enrolled students on Friday.

"If the schedules need corrections or changes, students may call the high school for an appointment between 8 a.m. and noon and 1-4 p.m. today through Aug. 26," English said.

Students new to the district must present immunization records in order to register. Those who pre-registered and were in attendance at the end of the last school term do not need to register again, English said.

Registration schedules for new students to Pampa's elementary and junior high schools will be announced later.

Names in the news

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Andrew Young, whose outspokenness as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations has caused him some problems, now has someone speaking up for him.

A group called People United to Save Humanity is initiating a national petition drive to support Young, the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson announced Sunday.

Jackson said the drive was to counter an anti-Young campaign begun by conservatives including New Hampshire Gov. Meldrim Thomson Jr. Jackson said he hopes to have 200,000 signatures by Sept. 10.

Thomson signed a letter last month as secretary of state of the "shadow cabinet" of a group called the Conservative Caucus, accusing Young of "deep involvement in both domestic and foreign communist and communist-inspired terrorists."

The letter asks conservatives for contributions to a campaign that would remove Young from his U.N. post.

The new petition, calling Young "the most sensitive and humane ambassador the U.S. has had in that post," has been signed by Vernon Jordan, national executive director of the Urban League, and Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the NAACP.

MIAMI (AP) — Ginger Rogers longs for the old-time movies when she says entertainment was spelled with a capital "E."

Miss Rogers, who for years entertained moviegoers with her famous partner Fred Astaire, says modern movies "seem to have the attitude of just throwing everything and the kitchen stove in there."

"There's too much violence. Movies to me today are similar to where they take an animal and they just stuff it for the slaughter," says the 66-year-old dancer whose "Ginger Rogers Show" opens this week in Miami.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., intends to follow doctors' orders and not pursue his official duties for at least two months, his wife, Norma, says.

She also reports that the 81-year-old senator is "very cheerful and feeling very good."

McClellan, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, is expected to be released Tuesday from a Little Rock hospital where he has been hospitalized since July 22 for chest pains and exhaustion.

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere toured an agricultural experiment station and asked how Americans control ticks, sleeping sickness and the tsetse fly.

He also asked technicians at the University of California at Davis on Sunday about irrigation because, he said, there's a fair amount of water in his East African country but no inexpensive means of transporting it to the vast arid areas.

Nyerere, on an official visit to the United States, was accompanied by California Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymally, state Food and Agriculture Director Richard Rominger; the U.S. ambassador to Tanzania, James W. Spain, and State Department chief of protocol, Evan S. Doherty.

About 25 persons, including about 10 from Tanzania, went with Nyerere to agricultural installations in a 12-mile radius of Davis.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: About that woman who objected because hurricanes were named after women but God was always spoken of as "He," "Him," and "Our Father?"

Tell those women libbers to knock it off. Each season I keep hoping the National Weather Bureau will name a hurricane after me, and now there is a move afoot in Washington to force the Bureau to change the system and name hurricanes after men, mythological characters or, worse yet, numbers.

It would be interesting to hear how other women feel about this latest asinine attempt to turn a few "tempest storms" into nothing more than hot air.

I say, let 'em blow it out their ear!

HURRICANE CHARLINE

DEAR CHARLINE: Meet another reader who shares your view:

DEAR ABBY: Thanks just the same, but they can name their next hurricane after me.

They can have their male God. I'm relieved to realize that a female god isn't responsible for this mess!

My name is Dorothy—from the Greek Theodora, which means "gift from God"—so bring on your hurricane!

DOROTHY D.

DEAR ABBY: This is in answer to all the gripes from ungrateful mothers who complained about what they received (or didn't receive) for Mother's Day:

My husband and I recently celebrated our 50th wedding anniversary, and for 47 of those years we received the same kind of "thank you" notes from his mother.

Example: "Nice of you to send me flowers for Easter, but why did you send me lilies? I'm not dead yet. Or maybe that's what you want?"

The next Easter I sent a fresh fruit pack. Her thank-you: "I can get better fruit from a supermarket. And cheaper, too."

Then I tried bath salts. Her response: "Are you telling me I need a bath?"

Whenever my mother-in-law received a card from us, she'd say to her son, "I know SHE (meaning me) bought it. Couldn't you take time out yourself?" When talking to her son, she always referred to me as "she," "her" or "your wife."

Now the lady is gone, and she never knew how much I really loved her. All she had to do was reach out. I was there all the time.

"SHE"

DEAR "SHE": Don't be too critical of your late mother-in-law. The poor dear never learned to give or accept affection with grace because she herself probably had so little as a child.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box, No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am writing to you in regards to Zylprim, used to treat gout. Would you comment on the side effects of this drug and what it actually does for the body? In addition, does taking it a prolonged time have any harmful effect? A friend of mine has been on this medicine for eight years. His physician states the gout crystals take a long time to form and therefore a long time to disappear.

DEAR READER — Zylprim is the trade name for allopurinol. Gout, gouty arthritis and kidney stones caused by gout (not other types of kidney stones) are all caused by an overproduction of uric acid by your own body cells.

By decreasing an individual's tendency to form excessive amounts of uric acid, the kidneys are often able to gradually clear and keep the body cleared of uric acid salts. This prevents acute gout attacks and gouty arthritis. I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-3, (Gout, Uric Acid) to give you a more complete discussion of gout. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Zylprim is not used to relieve the acute attack of gout. It is used after the acute attack is over to prevent another one. I am happy to say it is a fairly safe medicine. Almost all medicines do have some side effects. I don't know a single one that doesn't. Zylprim may cause a skin rash and if it does the doctor must be seen at once. Rarely it causes digestive upsets. Doctors like to monitor the blood count to be sure there is no adverse response there. Everyone on this medicine needs good supervision but they should get that anyway because of the gout. I'm sure that since your friend has been taking this medicine eight years, apparently without trouble, that he is not likely to have any difficulties with it.

If he stops taking the medicine his body cells will start producing excess uric acid again in about two weeks and eventually he will be exposing himself to the complications of gout.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Please don't recommend Motrin. My father and a close friend both developed ulcers from taking it for arthritis. They are both on Tylenol now.

DEAR READER — I am including your comment in my column to remind people that Motrin is not 100 per cent safe.

No medicine is. Aspirin may also cause irritation and even bleeding from the stomach. Some people cannot tolerate Tylenol for different reasons.

The doctor needs to decide what is best for each patient's condition. In many arthritic ordinary aspirin is as safe and as good a medicine as other, more expensive pain relievers.

Incidentally I noted a printing error in my column as it was reproduced in your newspaper. Tylenol is useful to relieve pain but it is useless, NOT useful in relieving inflammation. Larger doses of aspirin, prescribed under a doctor's supervision, will relieve inflammation. I hasten to add that some popular commercials about aspirin relieving inflammation are misleading. Aspirin does not have this effect, regardless of what your TV says, unless it is taken in larger doses than usually recommended for the simple relief of pain.

Dr. Lamb answers representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of this newspaper.

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — One of my Pet Peeves is with the webbing they put on aluminum lawn chairs as even when it is kept out of the rain and hot sun it lasts only one season of average use. It seems they could put much longer lasting material on and I refuse to throw away a good chair frame or put my time into installing more of that fragile stuff.

I worked out a solution of my own by making tubing the same way I would make a belt — from leftover upholstery material or even play clothes — and put this on instead of new webbing. I have some in service that I have used for three years. If you do not have any suitable scraps surely a friend has some. Just ask around. — MILDRED.

DEAR POLLY — To remove the decals from her crib Debbie should buy decal remover. I bought some at the five and 10 cent store and it looks like blotter paper. Cut a piece the size of the decal to be removed, wet it and place over the decal, press lightly with the fingers and it will stick. Leave on five or 10 minutes. — VEE.

DEAR POLLY — I have had my green sofa for a long time so the cording around the sofa and cushions was faded. I bought a water base felt tipped magic marker and painted all the cording a darker green and it looks very attractive. In fact, I have had many compliments on it. — MARY S.

Men's tailoring works for women

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — "I say, Watson, what do you make of this?" Holmes handed me a herringbone man's jacket.

"Well, the owner obviously can afford fine tailoring; the label says Cesariani," I ventured.

"Yes, yes, but what else?"

"I'd say he rode to the hunt. Look at the suede gun patch near the shoulder, and the wind tab at the throat to be buttoned against the wind, the bellows pockets for cartridges

"Go on about the pockets," Holmes directed, puffing at his pipe.

I examined the inside breast pocket, which was empty, but from the lower, inside ticket pocket, I pulled a worn ticket stub from a suffragette meeting, the night of the murder.

"Dear me, Holmes, what kind of man would attend a suffragette meeting?"

He smiled and said, "None. I should think. The owner of this jacket, Watson, is a woman!"

Given another minute, the smart detective would have explained that the jacket was constructed to conform to the female shape, and that the owner — but Bob Miller should really delineate the Cesariani woman.

He's president of the new womenswear firm dedicated to bringing the best of men's tailoring to the best of women in jackets, pants, skirts, shirts — most things that button, incidentally, button from left to right — and coats, that retail from $40 to $350, in sizes 4 to 14.

"She's the great American WASP," he says, "the Bryn Mawr lady who went to boarding school, who got her best jackets from the tailor who made her father's and her husband's riding clothes."

Or she's the girl who sneaked into her brother's room and borrowed his jeans, or bought shirts in boys' departments because they fit better.

She scrutinizes clothes, and appreciates hand-sewn operations, deep, meticulously finished seams, the way an undercollar matches the rest of a jacket unless it's meant to contrast in a sporty plaid, hand-cut buttonholes, suede patches — in short, all that's meant by men's tailoring.

And she likes these things done in traditional menswear fabrics: Harris tweed, shetlands, worsteds, English flannel, men's shirting fabrics.

Ah, but what kind of a woman, deep down, is this tightly tailored lady who may reach inside her jacket for a cigarillo?

Femme fatale, says Miller.

"Look at this white flannel wrap skirt we did," he says. "Instead of putting in a kilt plait to hold it, we have a long slit up the side so her leg shows. Now, she wears this with the barest sandal in the world, a silk blazer and a string of pearls and when she walks into a room, she'll drive the men crazy."

Sal Cesariani, 36 — yes, there is a Cesariani — had femininity very much in mind when he decided to gamble on doing a womenswear line, he says.

"I'd won a Coty Award in '76 for my menswear and I felt the time was right to show my creativity for women, to give them as much femininity as possible along with impeccable workmanship."

No one remembered that the short, dark, F.I.T. graduate and one-time Ralph Lauren associate had put himself through school by designing for a junior sportswear house. "They

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBCEK

I tell you, you wouldn't believe the way my children have really pitched in and tried to conserve energy during this nationwide crisis.

They've kicked all their dirty clothes under the bed to save on the gallons of water it takes to wash them.

They've called a moratorium on cutting and watering the grass until President Carter gives the nod.

They've insisted that the stove or oven not be turned on and that we all go out and eat in a modest but exorbitantly priced restaurant.

They gave up showers before bed without even being asked.

The other afternoon when we got into the car, my son said, "We've got to pick up Todd, Mike, Wendell, Tony and Steve."

When I slumped over the wheel in anticipation of an extra 45 minutes of driving, he said,

"After all, Mom, it's un-American not to carpool."

They cut back on going to the dentist to once a year to save gas.

They put a brick in the commode. (I wish someone had told them it goes in the BACK of the commode.)

They're maintaining their policy of "Never flushing unless she can hear you."

They let the garbage stack up for three days by the sink to keep from opening the door and losing precious air conditioning.

They play their stereos at 1:00 in the morning to take the load off of peak time.

They leave the ice cube trays empty to reduce the wear and tear on the refrigerator.

The other morning as I counted 63 glasses by the sink, I said, "Boys, you really amaze me at how you picked up on President Carter's plan to conserve energy."

They smiled. "When we get to 85 glasses, then we can start the dishwasher."

"In fact, I'm so proud of you, I think I'll do a column on it and tell my readers of your heroic efforts."

"That's not necessary, Mom," said a son leaning over to unplug my IBM. Just look upon this as a blow for democ-

Strips on clothing can save children

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — It's a fine summer night, so you decide to go for a walk. You take your red sweater, in case the wind blows up, and your house keys and, oh yes, you should wear something white so motorists will see you on the road.

There, you're perfectly safe now.

Or so you think.

The fact is when you get out there on that dark road — in your dark clothes and your light clothes — you've set yourself up for a hit better than the Mafia could.

According to HEW statistics, dark clothes disappear from sight at 55 feet at night, red fades away at 80 feet, and white becomes invisible at 180 feet.

Not especially earth-shattering, until you learn that a car traveling at 60 miles per hour requires about 250 feet to stop dead on a dry, flat road.

So unless you provide that driver with something he can see well in advance, you may end up a statistic for the National Highway Traffic and Safety Administration which reports that 8,259 pedestrians were killed in traffic accidents in 1976; almost half of them at night.

The remedy is simple enough. Wear a reflective trim, something made of microscopic glass beads or prisms which generate no light of their own (unlike fluorescent material, they won't glow during the day) but do reflect light focused on them — from headlights, for instance — for more than 500 feet.

Spend a few cents for reflective patches, strips or dots and sew them on jackets, back packs; stick them on the soles of your shoes (you'd be surprised how visible that is when you're in motion), backs of bicycle seats, your brief case, the inside of your car door, your pet's collar, and anything else that may hit the road at night.

If you don't want to bother with that, you can try to find items with inconspicuous reflective trims in sportswear and shoe departments, though it may take some looking.

International Shoes, for one, is marketing a line of men's, women's and children's jogging and walking shoes called Road Lites for fall, which came about partially because of a scare.

"I almost hit a kid driving down the road near my home," says Robert McElroy, general manager of International Shoe Co., "and it sprung my getting involved in reflective shoes."

J.C. Penney is including a couple of boys' and girls' coats with reflective trims in their fall line; Munsingwear is offering T-shirts; Wonderalls is making a toddlers snow set, and so on.

Whatever you do, give yourself a chance against that car at night.

And give the driver a chance, too. Almost hitting a pedestrian is bad enough. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

frightened to death. I thought I'd bomb, but I had to take the challenge. I said, please look, I can do it."

And they looked and agreed.

What he's done for fall, he says in a husky but high-pitched voice, is "very muted colors, patterns and mixed textures. And," he continues, picking up a pencil and sketching, "I said I think the woman should have this feeling in this jacket and this proportion. Then I'll give her a very soft skirt and have her wear her gloves in her breast pocket."

"And I want a ruffle coming out of the sleeve. Or she can put a little eyelet pocket hanky in her breast pocket, or a watch fob. And if she feels uncomfortable using any of the pockets, she can ignore them."

Which, of course, might be the safest course in the event she's planning to get away with murder.

Dorsett reinjures knee in 34-14 Dallas win

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP)—The much heralded and highly rich Tony Dorsett is a likely bench warmer for next Saturday night's preseason National Football League game as the Dallas Cowboys travel to Seattle.

Dorsett is having knee problems that are concerning Dallas Coach Tom Landry, who loves what he sees in his No. 1 draft pick from the University of Pittsburgh.

"As you can see all the moves of a great back are there," said Landry after the Cowboys trounced San Diego 34-14 in an NFL exhibition opener before some 60,000 fans in Texas Stadium Saturday night.

But Dorsett twisted a knee after gaining 26 yards on 7 carries and dashing upfield 15 yards with a swing pass.

Dorsett limped to the sidelines with what was later diagnosed as a twisted knee.

"We do have a problem there," sighed Landry. "This is the third time he has hurt the same knee and we are going to have to try something different. He needs the work but something isn't right. We may have to rest him more. But we are going to have to do something different."

Which means Dorsett may not scrimmage again until his knee is 100 per cent healed.

Al Davis, the general manager of the Oakland Raiders, attended the game and said "The Cowboys need to lay him off. Sometimes a little injury can become a big one. I can see why Dallas wanted to play him in front of the home folks after all the publicity. Maybe after tonight they will be able to rest him."

Davis said he thought Dorsett could become a tremendous player—although not in O.J. Simpson's caliber—if the patchwork Cowboy offensive line develops.

"That's the key," said Davis. "With (tackle) Rayfield Wright out and Blaine Nye retired, the Cowboys will have to get their offensive line problems settled. You can have all the talent in the world but it doesn't do a lot of good if you can't get to the line of scrimmage."

"Of course, Dallas has a tremendous overall team. They play great defense and their specialty teams are something else."

Dallas' Charlie Waters blocked two punts which resulted in touchdowns. Backup quarterback Danny White threw two touchdowns passes to Drew Pearson and Bob Breunig had a bangup night at middle linebacker.

The bright spot for San Diego was Johnny Rodgers, making his NFL debut after two years in Canada. He zipped 68 yards for a touchdown on a punt return.

Dorsett said his knee felt "pretty good" after the game. "Somebody grabbed me and slammed me down on the same knee I hurt earlier," said Dorsett.

Asked about his debut, college football's all-time leading ground gainer said "I'm just one of the crowd. I don't want to consider myself the best because I'm just out of college. But I'm going to be one of the good ones. I feel like a pro now."

Dorsett said in training camp his goal was 1,500 yards his rookie year. But he's not going to get there on one leg.

One of the few people unimpressed with Dorsett was San Diego Coach Tommy Prothro.

"I didn't know who was in there," snapped Prothro. "I knew who the quarterback was in there for them. I didn't pay much attention to the others."

O.J. ailing
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—Buffalo Bills star O.J. Simpson is suffering from an eye problem that could require surgery and will likely cause him to miss at least the next three pre-season games, a published report said Sunday.

Sources told the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle that Simpson apparently will not require a lengthy hospital stay. The running back announced last week that he will spend Monday at the Wilmer Institute eye clinic at Johns Hopkins University in an effort to diagnose occasional blurred vision.

The Central Division of the National Football League has long been known as the "Black and Blue Division." With that in mind, the Detroit Lions, a Central team, drafted Tim Black and Luther Blue in 1977.

For Talladega win 'Good guy' Waltrip relieves Allison

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP)—"Maybe we should get some sort of good guy award or something," Darrell Waltrip said after relief-driving Donnie Allison's Chevrolet to victory in the Talladega 500 Grand National stock car race.

"We sold one of our engines to Ricky Rudd this morning so he could start the race, and he ends up fourth. Then we helped Donnie win," Waltrip said Sunday.

If Waltrip was wishing he'd sold Rudd a different engine, or been in his own Chevrolet, which expired after 106 of 188 laps, he didn't show it much.

Allison, who doesn't remember calling for a relief driver since the World 600 in 1969, was on the edge of consciousness, suffering from the 96-degree heat and high humidity when his crew substituted Waltrip.

"I'd asked for David Pearson or Benny Parsons, because I knew they were out of the race. I hadn't even thought about Darrell," Allison said. "I'm awful glad he showed up, though. He did everything that could have been expected of him."

And, besides Rudd's dandy fourth-place finish, Skip Manning enjoyed the finest race of his career, battling for the lead until his Chevrolet started spewing smoke just six laps from the finish. He finished third, behind Cale Yarborough, whose Chevrolet was running in high gear only.

The strong Chevrolet belonged to Parsons, who led the field around the first part of the race at speeds faster than his 192.684 miles per hour pole position winning speed.

Seattle backup shines

By BILL MARTIN
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Quarterback Jim Zorn, who carried the Seattle Seahawks offense almost singlehandedly a year ago, wants backup signal caller Steve Myer to do well.

"We need some depth at quarterback and Myer is a fine one," Zorn said after Myer rallied the Seahawks to a 34-24 victory over the San Francisco 49ers. "It was good to see him come in and move the ball club well."

Zorn, who accounted for more than two-thirds of the Seattle offense last year with 2,571 yards passing and 246 rushing, played the first three quarters Sunday before Coach Jack Patera replaced him with the 49ers ahead 24-20.

With Myer at the helm, the second-year Seahawks dominated the fourth period, capping a pair of touchdown drives with one-yard plunges by Sammie Smith and Don Testerman.

Myer, who was on the Seattle roster for seven games last year but saw no action, hit two of five passes for 43 yards and, forced to run twice when he couldn't find a receiver, scrambled for carries of 26 and 12 yards.

"This is the first game coming back from a season which was not too good," Patera said. "The win was very good for us."

It was nice to see some people come in, particularly Myer and Testerman, and do a good job for us."

The 49ers, making their debut under new owner Ed DeBartholomeo, new General Manager Joe Thomas and new Coach Ken Meyer, said they did everything they wanted to do except win.

"I saw some very good things out there today," Meyer said. "We accomplished everything we wanted to do, except one thing—winning the ball game. I thought our first team offense moved very well."

Both starting quarterbacks looked sharp, with Zorn completing 11 of 13 for 115 yards and one touchdown and San Francisco's Jim Plunkett hitting on nine of 11 for 91 yards.

"We moved well in the first half," said Plunkett, a disappointment in 1976. "Everything we tried seemed to fall into place. Our passing philosophy is simpler this year and we still try to run that ball."

Plunkett and running back Delvin Williams, who scored twice, led the 49ers to a 14-3 lead early in the second quarter, but a 22-yard touchdown pass from Zorn to Duke Ferguson and a 55-yard field goal by John Leybold helped Seattle move to within 17-13 at the half.

After Testerman put the Seahawks ahead on a one-yard run in third period, reserve quarterback Scott Bull and reserve running back Bob Ferrell led the 49ers on an 86-yard, 14-play scoring drive. Bull scored from one yard out to put San Francisco ahead 24-20 before Myer went to work.

The first weekend of the NFL preseason began with Philadelphia defeating the New York Jets 21-3 and Denver downing Baltimore 14-8 Friday night.

In Saturday's games, it was Atlanta 3, St. Louis 0; New Orleans 19, the New York Giants 3; Miami 13, Tampa Bay 7; Pittsburgh 28, Buffalo 24; Detroit 17, Kansas City 0; New Orleans 20, Chicago 14; Dallas 34, San Diego 14; Green Bay 23, Cincinnati 20; and Minnesota 22, Los Angeles 17.

Washington plays at Cleveland and Houston is at Oakland tonight.

Place kickers played vital roles in five of the games. Nick Mike-Mayer's 37-yard field goal in the fourth quarter accounted for the game's only points in Atlanta's victory over St. Louis.

John Smith had field goals of 35, 32, 32 and 30 yards, leading New England past the New York Giants.

Chester Marcol kicked a pair of 45-yarders in the final two minutes as Green Bay rallied to overtake Cincinnati. Marcol also had a 49-yarder earlier in the game.

Rebounding Kratzert nabs Sammy Davis Tournament

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Bill Kratzert once became so disgusted with his game, so upset at his ragged, ineffectual play, he quit golf entirely, went home to Fort Wayne, Ind., and got a job as a fork-lift operator.

"It didn't take long, though, before I knew I'd never be happy in my life if I didn't get back into golf," the 25-year-old Kratzert recalled.

"I knew this was what I had to do. I knew I had to keep trying."

The solidly-built, 190-pounder had failed twice at attempts to gain his playing rights on the PGA Tour. But he pulled his clubs out of the closet and started working again.

It all culminated in a three-stroke victory Sunday in the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open. Kratzert, tabbed for potential greatness by his fellow pros, had a final-round, two-under-par 69 and posted the lowest 72-hole total of the year on the tour, 265, a distant 19 strokes below par on the 6,596-yard Wethersfield Country Club course.

"I've worked awful hard," the soft-spoken, poker-faced tour sophomore said. "I guess this is one of the dividends."

The dividend from his first individual title also included $42,000 from the total purse of $210,000 and boosted Kratzert to eighth on the season's money-winning list with $113,419.

"This guy," U. S. Open champion Hubert Green said before the final round started under gray, threatening skies, "is a good one. There's no telling how good he can be. His game is good, his temperament is good. He's smart and he's strong."

"He could be one of the great ones," Kratzert, who combined with Woody Blackburn to win the 1976 National Team Championship in his rookie season, didn't win it easily.

Kratzert, one of the few touring pros who wears dark glasses, blew a two-stroke lead and, after 11 holes of the final round, was two shots back of 22-year-old rookie Curtis Strange.

On the 12th, Strange had a potential birdie putt and Kratzert missed the green. Bill calmly chipped in for birdie from about 25 feet. Strange missed his bird "and the momentum kind of flip-flopped," Kratzert said. "It all turned around. That was the key. If I hadn't chipped in on that hole, I don't think I would have won."

From two shots behind, he moved two in front in a stretch of five holes, nailing it down with a 15-18 foot birdie putt on the 18th.

Cards stop Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — St. Louis Manager Vern Rapp has a simple formula for winning the National League East.

"We have played exceptional ball against Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Chicago this season," said Rapp after his Cardinals stopped the Houston Astros 5-2 Sunday.

"The key to our chances is winning games against teams like Montreal and San Diego, which have been tough on us all year."

Ken Reitz went four-for-four and drove in two runs with his 12th homer of the season as the high-flying Cardinals won for the 13th time in their last 17 games.

Reitz' homer, a shot over the left field wall in the second inning, followed a single by Jerry Humphrey off losing pitcher Dan Larsen, 0-6.

Houston tied it against winning pitcher John Urrea, 4-3, in the fourth on a single by Bob Watson, a double by Jose Cruz and Joe Ferguson's two-run single to right.

A benefiting stroke

Andy McNabb used a strong forehand to help enable he and teammate Tom Kensler to defeat the team of Dick Stowers - Bob Blake for the men's title of the American Cancer Society Doubles Benefit Tournament which concluded Sunday at the high school courts. McNabb-Kensler outlasted Stowers - Blake 7-5, 7-5 in the fervid afternoon match. The team of Betty Blake - Jeannine Laughlin defeated Kris Douglass - June Gilbert 5-7, 6-2, 6-2, for the women's crown. Consolation round winners were Joe Davis - Jim Stroud and Beverly Teague - Linda Klansek. The tournament collected $242 in entry fees, concession sales, and ball sales which will go to the Pampa Chapter of the American Cancer Society for cancer research. Tennis balls were donated by local banks, and prizes were donated by local merchants.

McEnroe loses

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. — Top seed Guillermo Vilas regained his strength during a 90-minute rain delay, reeled off five straight games and beat John McEnroe 6-2, 2-6, 6-0 in a semifinal match in an $85,000 open tennis tournament on clay.

Hunter happy with Rangers

By LARRY PALADINO

DETROIT (AP) — Billy Hunter says managing baseball's Texas Rangers "has been fun so far."

The Detroit Tigers saw to it Sunday that it continued that way, failing to get clutch hits and looking shaky in the field to help the Rangers grab a 4-1 victory.

Dick Ellis went all the way, scattering eight hits, to win for the first time since July 8. The triumph raised his record to 6-9 overall, including a 4-3 mark with Texas.

Fernando Arroyo, who gets little support from his teammates nearly every time out, pitched well but suffered the eighth loss in his last nine decisions of a 6-11 record.

"He pitched a hell of a game," Detroit Manager Ralph Houk said of Arroyo. "He kept us in it. We needed the complete game, too."

Reliever Jim Crawford, who hasn't started a game this season, is scheduled to pitch tonight for Detroit. He'll take a 3-4 record up against Mike Caldwell, 2-4, as the Tigers begin a four-game home series against Milwaukee.

Houk called Arroyo, "our hard luck pitcher, no question about it. We haven't been able to help him."

The Tigers helped Ellis, though, both in the field and at the plate.

Bump Willis opened the Texas third inning with a grounder that second baseman Tito Fuentes fielded. However, Fuentes made one of his weak throws to first, pulling first baseman Jason Thompson off the bag for an error. Tom Grieve doubled home Willis.

Jim Sundberg scored Grieve with a double — although it looked more like a single. Centerfielder Ron LeFlore was running to his right and wasn't able to catch the ball on the first hop because it bounced to his left.

Texas also scored twice in the eighth. Grieve opened the inning with a double, Mike Hargrove walked, then Bert Campaneris' hit-run single scored Grieve — who slipped rounding third. Leftfielder Steve Kemp held the ball too long, however, and then catcher Milt May bobbled the throw as the other runners advanced.

Claude Washington followed with a walk and shortstop Chuck Scrivener couldn't field

Willie Horton's bouncing single cleanly and Hargrove scurried home.

Detroit's run came in the first as Fuentes tripled and scored on a grounder by Rusty Staub that first baseman Hargrove bobbled for an error. The Tigers loaded the bases with one out but couldn't score again.

"That game could have ended in the first inning," Houk said. "If we would have gotten a hit with the bases loaded that pitcher would have been out of there. It probably would have turned the whole game around."

"I didn't have my stuff today," Ellis claimed. "I was just finessing. I was trying to get the corners with everything and keep them off stride. Usually I just go right at 'em."

Texas stars romp over Oklahoma as Shepard, Herring glitter

By JOETTE MOFFETT

Associated Press Writer WICHITA FALLS, Tex. (AP) — The 40th Oil Bowl was a big disappointment for highly touted running back David Overstreet of Big Sandy.

The potent combination of Overstreet and Odessa quarterback Darrell Shepard drew most of the pre-game glitter, but Shepard stole the whole show in Texas' 34-8 romp over Oklahoma Saturday night.

Overstreet carried just four times for only nine yards. And an Overstreet fumble at the Oklahoma nine-yard line killed the first Texas drive.

"I really got my bell rung on that play," said the 6-0, 195-pound Overstreet, who is bound for Oklahoma University. "I played in a daze the rest of the game."

"I'm not satisfied with the way I ran, but I must say the blocking was good."

Shepard made up for the lackluster Texas running game, which produced only 91 yards, by engineering a scathing aerial attack that accounted for four Texas touchdowns. He completed nine of 17 for 182 yards, passed for two first-half touchdowns, was named most valuable offensive player — and was ejected late in the game.

The University of Houston-bound Shepard connected on a 35-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Eric Herring of Houston Yates and a one-yarder to running back Tim Orr of Abilene Cooper for the first two touchdowns.

Texas took a 21-0 lead into the dressing room at halftime when defensive back Tim McCollum of Gainesville swiped a Mike Murray pass and darted 59 yards for the score.

Substitute quarterback Greg Hobbs added two touchdown passes — a 43-yarder and a one-yarder at the final gun — to Raymond Cockrell of Killdeer.

Hobbs replaced Shepard late in the game after the Odessa star exchanged heated words with an official over a disputed call. Texas offensive coach Gordon Wood said he thought there were some "late hits on Shepard."

Oklahoma didn't get on the board until the final minute of the game, when substitute quarterback Tony Bradley of Pauls Valley connected with Keith Wilson of Putnam City West on a 40-yard scoring pass.

Oklahoma's defense did stiffen in the second half. Bradley, who also started at defensive back, and most valuable defensive player John Higginbotham of Hugo combined to help put the wraps on Shepard.

"Offensively, we couldn't get anything going," Oklahoma Coach Darvis Cole said. "We had to play so much defense that eventually we knew they were going to score."

Gold Sox edge El Paso

By The Associated Press

Donny Alfano lashed a two-run single in the bottom of the 10th inning Sunday night as the Amarillo Gold Sox edged El Paso 13-12 in a Texas League slugfest that featured a total of 39 hits and eight pitchers.

In other Texas League action, Midland shaved San Antonio 7-4 and Tulsa whipped Jackson 7-3. Shreveport and Arkansas were idle.

The El Paso-Amarillo game was knotted 11-11 after eight innings, but Carney Lansford rocked his second homer of the game, a solo shot in the top of the 10th, to put El Paso ahead 12-11.

Amarillo reliever Randy Fierbaugh, 2-0, the Gold Sox third pitcher was the winner, while El Paso's fifth pitcher, Billy Wilson, 5-4, was the loser.

Amarillo's Ivan Murrell had four hits, including a homer, to pace the Gold Sox' 20-hit attack.

Steve Davis of Midland drilled a grand slam home run in the bottom of the eighth inning to pace the Cubs over the Dodgers. A few moments earlier, Ted Farr of San Antonio had slapped a three-run in the top of the eighth to stake the Dodgers to a 6-3 margin.

Jack Ledbetter, 10-4, the Midland starter, hung on for the win and San Antonio reliever Mike Seberger, 4-4, was the loser.

Blair Stouffer, Dan Duran and Eddie Daves paced Tulsa past Jackson and gave the Drillers part of the second half lead in the Texas League East. Tulsa and Arkansas are now tied.

Danny Darwin, 9-4, was the winner for Tulsa, while George Milke, 7-7, was the loser for Jackson. Gene Meneses had two singles to lead Jackson.

In Texas League action tonight, Amarillo entertains El Paso, Shreveport travels to Arkansas, Midland hosts San Antonio and Tulsa is at Jackson.

Clayborn runs for TD in first NFL return

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — His first taste of the National Football League hardly awed New England Patriots' rookie Raymond Clayborn, who merely returned a kickoff 86 yards for a touchdown the first time he touched the ball.

"I didn't have to do much, really," said Clayborn, who burst up the middle of the field to start the second half against the New York Giants and scored the only touchdown in New England's 19-3 pre-season victory Saturday night. "The wedge was there and I just followed it."

Clayborn was New England's No. 1 draft choice, a defensive back out of the University of Texas. A year ago, the Pats drafted another DB, Mike Haynes, and he turned out to be the Defensive Rookie of the Year. They hope Clayborn can be an instant replay.

For the moment, though, the youngster must content himself with returning kicks. Haynes, Bob Howard, Prentice McRay and Tom Fox are all ahead of him in the defensive secondary.

"Sure, I'd like the opportunity to play, too," said Clayborn. "But there are four good ones ahead of me and I've got to wait my turn. I feel I need a lot of work to improve as a defensive back. I want to get where they are."

So, Clayborn is starting his pro career doing another of the things he does best—returning kicks. He returned kicks for more than 1,000 yards during his career at Texas and scored four touchdowns on runbacks. He also developed the mental toughness that an NFL rookie must have.

"Playing football at a major college like Texas, you always have pressure games," said Clayborn. "Every year those games against Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas A&M, the atmosphere is just like professional football."

That's why Clayborn wasn't too nervous as he waited for the ball on his first kickoff return in the NFL. "I like to return kicks," he said. "I feel easy back there. There's no difficulty about the job. I did it for all four years at Texas and I broke a few."

But NFL pre-season rosters are bloated with bodies and the extras usually surface on kick return teams, where Clayborn is spending his first pro days.

"I thought about that aspect of it," he said. "All these guys are trying to win jobs, trying to stay with the club and not get cut. I just didn't want to get planted back there on the 14-yard line."

He didn't. Instead, he moved smartly into the wedge and took off. "A good runner finds the openings and I consider myself a good runner," said Clayborn. "I had my choice of holes and after that, it was off to the races."

As he neared the goal line, Clayborn relaxed. "I felt real good. I knew I wouldn't be caught from behind," he said, speaking with the confidence born out of 9.46 speed for the 100-yard dash.

We Hold These Truths... A Chronicle of America

'Free Men'

George Washington: "The [American] army may expect an attack as soon as the wind and tide shall prove favorable... [I hope that] every man's mind and arms will be prepared for action, and when called to it [will] show our enemies, and the whole world, that free men, contending on their own land, are superior to any mercenaries on earth."

Advocate doubts equal rights soon

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP)—Dr. Nikki Van Hightower, whose work as the woman advocate for the city of Houston kindled a move to oust the mayor and bitter city council debates, says she now doubts "if we will see full equal rights for women during my lifetime."

Dr. Van Hightower, 30, also predicted during a recent interview that when a new mayor is elected Nov. 8 she will be removed, the job abolished and "a lot of what we have accomplished will go down the drain."

A small blonde with a face and figure that turn men's heads, Dr. Van Hightower said, "At least we have created a new awareness among women. That will remain. But the changes come slowly, much slower than I once anticipated."

With a doctoral degree in political science and an associate professor at the University of Houston, she was appointed to the post in May 1976. It wasn't long until she became the center of controversy.

Her attendance at a rally supporting the Equal Rights Amendment and abortion for those women who request it angered a segment of the population opposing both issues.

She also was in the headlines after protesting the placement of a statue of Confucius in the public library because it bore the inscription—"Men have their respective occupations and women their homes."

The city council, after a heated debate and listening to the opinions of scores of citizens, voted 6-3 to abolish the $18,400-a-year job.

Minutes later, Mayor Fred Hofheinz appointed Dr. Van Hightower to a position in his office at the same salary and with the same responsibilities.

His defense of the woman advocate, coupled with his position that a proposed anti-pornography ordinance was unconstitutional, prompted the circulation of recall petitions. The backers of the move failed to get the required number of signatures.

Hofheinz has since announced he would not seek re-election this year, leaving Dr. Van Hightower without her most influential supporter.

During the interview in her small, unpretentious office, Dr. Van Hightower said she is still puzzled over opposition to the feminist movement. "All we are saying is, if you don't want to change your lifestyle, that's fine. But don't limit us. Give us a chance. Let me be me. Don't make rules and don't set limits."

In the business world, she said a "lot of the problem is the unconscious stereotype about women. They'll fire a woman who is pregnant without even bothering to ask if the woman can do the job. Women are still considered freaks, outsiders, because we have the ability to reproduce."

Asked why she would leave the serenity of a college campus to an arena of controversy, Dr. Van Hightower answered, "I find the world as it is, the male structure, impossible to live in."

Despite the constant squabbling, even with pro and con demonstrations in front of city hall, Dr. Van Hightower said she had recorded several advancements, such as raises and promotions for qualified women in certain city jobs; improvements in the women's city jail; a recruitment training program for women in some nontraditional jobs; the start on a facility for battered women.
