17 Named In Drug Counts

Officials Withhold Details On One Indictment

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

FEDERAL OFFICIALS Wednesday afternoon revealed the names of 17 persons who were indicted last week on charges of conspiring to distribute cocaine in the Lubbock area.

Although the indictments were returned June 7 by an 18-member federal grand jury, U.S. attorneys said the sealed charges would not be made public until all persons named in the indictments had been served with summonses or arrest warrants.

Wednesday, three of the persons named in the indictments still had not been contacted by federal agents. Warrants have been issued for the arrest of Jerry Wayne Burgess, John Paul Newsom and a man who is known only as "Hollywood."

One Indictment Withheld

However, in a motion filed in U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward's court Wednesday, federal prosecutors said releasing the names of the indicted persons would "not hinder the apprehension of the three fugitives." Because the grand jury and U.S. attorneys had requested last week that the indictments be sealed, the motion from prosecutors and Woodward's approval was necessary before the names were released.

Prosecutors, however, did not include in their motion a sixth sealed indictment returned by the grand jury. Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger McRoberts said that indictment is not related to the five unsealed Wednesday. A warrant will be issued to the individual named in that charge before the name will be released.

Midland Man Named

The only single-count indictment returned by the grand jury was released Wednesday and named David Lansom Rankin of Midland as the defendant. That indictment accuses Rankin of perjuring himself while giving testimony concerning cocaine transactions to the grand jury.

Rankin also is charged in a second indictment with conspiring to possess cocaine with the intent to distribute the drug and with facilitating that conspiracy through a telephone conversation.

Rankin is one of nine persons who face multiple charges under the five indictments.

Stephen Hoyle Moss of 3102 40th St. is named in three indictments for a total of nine counts. Charges against the Lubbock businessman include three counts of conspiracy to distribute cocaine, five counts of aiding that conspiracy through telephone calls and one count of possession of cocaine.

Eight counts alleging violation of federal drug statutes were made against both Steve Zane Hall and Newsom, who remained free Wednesday.

Hall, of 4602 50th St., is named in three indictments on charges of conspiracy (two counts), aiding conspiracy (three counts), possession of cocaine (two counts) and one count of possession of the drug with the intent to distribute.

The one indictment in which Newsom is named charges him with conspiracy, five instances of aiding that conspiracy and two counts of possession of cocaine for distribution.

Suzanne Smith of 4208 44th St. is named in two indictments alleging two counts of conspiracy and one instance of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute the drug.

Randy Tom Leavitt is named in one indictment alleging he participated in a cocaine distribution conspiracy and aided that conspiracy three times. His address is listed as 5608 Fordham.

Burgess, who also remains at large, and Steve Bussell, of 5811 Ave. H, both were named in one indictment charging them with conspiracy and aiding that conspiracy.

Elias Faraon Masso of 5043 27th St. also was charged twice in one indictment. The nightclub owner is accused of participating in a cocaine distribution conspiracy and possession of cocaine.

Persons charged only with conspiracy are the fugitive "Hollywood"; Joe Leonard of Austin; Ted Simmons of McLean; Robbie Gamble of 3106 26th St.; Robin Houston of 3714 107th St.; Bobbie Ledbetter of 5524 Grinnell St.; Blas Torres Jr. of 2103 27th St.; and Scott Lamoreaux of 5023 34th St.

First-offense punishments for the charges range from one year in jail or a $5,000 fine or both to 15 years imprisonment or a $25,000 fine or both.

McRoberts and David Bass, assistant U.S. Attorney who also worked with the grand jury, refused comment on the investigation leading to the federal indictments. However, one indictment alleges that a 14-member conspiracy that transported cocaine from Austin to Lubbock began March 1, 1975.

A second indictment charges three persons with bringing cocaine into Lubbock from Austin in late June 1978.

Sources have indicated, however, that local drug agents stepped up their investigation about a year ago. That investigation reportedly cost about $70,000 and included extensive air and ground surveillance of suspects as well as wiretapping.

Summonses were issued to all persons named in the indictments except the three men still at large. The defendants are scheduled to appear before U.S. Magistrate Bill Brister at 9 a.m. Friday, when bonds and arraignment dates will be set.

Property Reappraisal Notices Again May Jolt Homeowners

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

REAPPRAISAL NOTICES like those that sparked a tax revolt in Lubbock last summer will be mailed to more than 20,000 property owners on Friday.

The city-school tax office reappraises one-fourth of the city each year, and this year notices will be sent to homeowners north of 34th Street and west of University Avenue and those with homes south of 50th Street between University Avenue and Avenue P.

Commercial property south of 34th Street and west of University also was reappraised this year.

Assessor-Collector John Brooks said increases in the assessed valuation (60 percent of market value) of residential properties increased between 20 and 80 percent, with the older, more expensive houses experiencing the greatest jump.

A sampling of houses in the 4700 block of 22nd Street in Bobalet Heights showed increased valuations of 56 to 83.9 percent, while a sample in the similarly affluent Cain Terrace neighborhood revealed increases of 63 to 77 percent in the 2400 block of Quaker Avenue.

In the Rushland Park area north of 19th Street, valuations averaged a 60 percent jump and values in the Westgate Drive neighborhood showed valuations averaging about 56 percent more.

Elsewhere, increases were more varied. On 21st Street south of Texas Tech University, valuations jumped 27.9 to 72.9 percent.

More modest hikes were noted in the Ridgewood area on 28th Street west of the Loop, in the West Wind addition in the 5500 block of 3rd Street and in Beverly Heights on 73rd Street between University Avenue and Avenue P.

Those receiving tax notices will be in elite company, inasmuch as established, affluent neighborhoods are being reappraised.

For example, Lubbock City Councilman Bud Aderton will learn the valuation on his house at 3002 25th St. has increased more than 42 percent. Aderton's valuation jumped from $23,880 to $41,400.

School board member Lynn Stafford will be notified that her house at 4421 10th St. now is listed on the tax roll at $75,920, a 37 percent increase over its previous valuation.

Lee Stafford, Mrs. Stafford's brother-in-law and a Texas Tech regent, lives in the same Westgate Drive neighborhood. His house at 4506 9th St. increased in value from $55,700 to $89,320 — a 38 percent jump.

Former Lubbock mayor Jim Granberry will discover his house at 4907 19th St. has jumped in value from $57,350 to

Funding For Nuclear Fusion Called Small

By PHILIP BRASHER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE FEDERAL government is "pitifully" funding technology vital for generating electricity by nuclear fusion, a former high-ranking Department of Defense official told an international conference of scientists here Wednesday.

The technology — repetitive pulsed power — uses continuous bursts of massive amounts of electricity for still-to-be developed particle beam weapons and nuclear fusion generators.

Already developed "single" pulse power technology is used by both the Soviet Union and United States to simulate the effects nuclear explosions.

"I am appalled to see that the funding (for repetitive pulsed power) "is pitifully small" in comparison to that spent for single pulse power, said Peter Haas, former deputy director of the U.S. Defense Nuclear Agency and now an agency consultant.

Haas addressed 289 representatives of 10 countries, including Poland and the Soviet Union, at the second International Pulsed Power Conference.

Texas Tech University, considered a leader in pulsed power research, arranged the three-day conference sponsored by the 200,000 member international Institute of Electronic and Electrical Engineers and seven federal agencies.

Haas worked 15 years helping pulsed power simulation for the government before resigning in May.

"It has taken us $250 million over 15 years to get us from there to here," Haas said following the meeting.

Present pulsed power research allows defense systems to be tested against attack without using actual test explosions forbidden by the 1962 test ban treaty, Haas said.

For that reason, such research "is the very essence of the strategic deterrent defense of the United States," he explained.

Nevertheless, "quantum jumps" in funding levels are critical to develop the technology necessary to generate electricity by fusion, he said.

Nuclear fusion generates heat by uniting atomic nuclei rather than splitting them as present nuclear reactors do.

The electrical pulse triggers the fusion process.

Persuading congressmen and federal agencies to pour money into pulsed power research will not be easy, said Sol Schneider, a U.S. Army researcher and conference participant.

"How do you take money from something for something else that is 10 years away?" he asked.

House Does About-Face In Rejecting Pay Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Wednesday reversed itself on the issue of raising its pay, rejecting a bill containing a provision that would have given members of Congress a 5.5 percent cost of living increase in October.

The about-face came shortly after the House had overwhelmingly approved an amendment to the bill that would have given members of Congress a $3,162 raise in their current salaries of $57,500 a year.

That increase would have cost between $50 million and $60 million, supporters of the amendment said.

However, after approving the amendment, the House rejected the overall bill on a 232-186 vote with several members jumping to the winning side in the last minute.

In a series of votes on the pay raise issue, the House:

—First, by voice vote, rejected an attempt to freeze pay levels for Congress and federal employees making more than $47,500 a year.

—Second, faced with a choice of either a 7 percent pay hike as proposed by the House Appropriations Committee or a lower 5.5 percent, voted 396-15 for the 5.5 percent.

—Finally, left with a bill containing a 5.5 percent increase, opponents of any pay increase at all were able to muster the winning margin to defeat the entire bill, 232-186. The full measure provided funding for the House and Senate in fiscal 1980.

Rep. George O'Brien, R-Ill., a principal opponent, said the parliamentary maneuvering would have been unnecessary if his original motion for a pay freeze had been accepted.

Asked if legislators had a chance to kill the raise without going through the question of deciding what percentage increase to approve, he replied, "I think you can say that. Had they supported my substitute (wage freeze amendment), that would have ended the matter."

O'Brien added that he thought the House was "very, very nervous" over the issue and that press reports of its action may have played some part in the final decision.

The vote to kill the bill outright came just minutes after Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., told the House that a news organization was reporting that members had voted themselves a pay raise.

The House action came after lengthy debate on the merits of increasing congressional salaries at a time when President Carter is trying to hold down wage

Jaycee May Propose Standout Screening

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE INCLUSION of convicted murderer Benjamin Lach in a 1979 Jaycees awards directory probably will cause Texas Jaycees to ask that the screening process for the awards be tightened, the immediate past president of Lubbock Jaycees said Wednesday.

Perry Gott told The Avalanche-Journal that such a motion probably will be made at the national Jaycees convention this weekend in Nashville, Tenn.

Lach, a member of the Walls Jaycees at the state prison in Huntsville, will be among several thousand Jaycees listed in a 1,000-page "Outstanding Young Men of America" book this year, it was announced Tuesday.

He is serving a 40-year sentence for the 1967 decapitation murder of a Texas Tech University cleaning woman.

Gott said the state Jaycees organization in Lewisville had been unable to determine who recommended Lach for the award but that the prisoner, who is editor of the Huntsville inmate newspaper, wrote the news release on the award that drew statewide attention Tuesday.

Gott said the state group had confirmed in its own investigation that Lach originated the release which then was approved by penitentiary public relations director Rosemary Heinsohn. State wire services carried the release as an official Texas Department of Corrections announcement.

A United States Jaycees spokesman in Tulsa said Tuesday that the directory is not related to the annual 10 Outstanding Young Men of America named by the national group. He said, however, that the publication in which Lach's name will be listed is endorsed by the U.S. Jaycees and the program has a national advisory board of former national Jaycee officers.

Gott said the Texas organization probably will ask either that nomination criteria for the directory be tightened or that the U. S. Jaycees withdraw endorsement.

Miss Heinsohn said Lach received an award certificate through the mail from national advisory board chairman Doug Blankenship of Atlanta.

Lach, 34, was recently rejected in his third application for parole. He became eligible for parole after receiving credit for a third of his sentence with 60 days' credit for every 30 served as a prison trusty and credit for time spent at the Rusk State Hospital for the Criminally Insane prior to his 1969 trial in Fort Worth.

'Hot Is When Jell-O Melts' En Route To Mouth, Says Death Valley Resident

DEATH VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — The people in Los Angeles sweltered in temperatures that hovered near 100 for the fifth straight day Wednesday. But in Death Valley, where the scorching earth can raise blisters through your shoes, such heat is a way of life.

"Hot is when the candles have to be refrigerated, when Jell-O melts on the way to your mouth," said Jan Fodor, wife of a Death Valley ranger.

Death Valley is the hottest place in the United States and just about the hottest spot in the world. On July 10, 1913, it recorded the highest temperature in the nation's history, 134 degrees.

The temperatures here average 10 degrees higher than in Azizia, Libya, the most sizzling part of the Sahara. Azizia set the world's highest temperature record on Sept. 13, 1922 — 136 degrees.

How do people cope? They go swimming. They wear protective gloves. They drink lots of water.

"I drink lukewarm water, never ice water. Ice water can shock your system," said Rolland Nelson, 45, a heavy equipment operator for the National Park Service in Death Valley for 14 years. "I've seen people double up with cramps after drinking ice water in this heat. I've seen a man suffer a heart attack from the shock of ice water."

He drinks three to five gallons of water a day.

"A human body loses a quart of water an hour in this open-air boiler room," he said. "You have to drink lots of water. Otherwise you die."

In Los Angeles, 300 miles to the southwest, the National Weather Service said the temperature was headed for 98 degrees Wednesday, two degrees below the record for the date set in 1896. It was 105 in Los Angeles on Monday and 100 Tuesday.

But Death Valley ground temperatures have doubled that — at 201. The earth's surface reached 180 Tuesday, and was about the same Wednesday as air temperature headed up to a predicted high of 118 degrees.

The air temperatures — the ones the weather bureau measures — hover between a sizzling 110 and 130 degrees. In the heat of the summer, the lowest night-time temperatures often are above 100. In 1974, the temperature rose above 100 degrees for 134 consecutive days.

If you put your hand out the window of a moving car to feel the breeze here, your fingers will burn.

"I wouldn't have any skin left on my hands if I didn't wear gloves," said Al Bradley, 44, the town's only highway patrolman. "You can't put your fingers on the ignition, on the door handles or grab the steering wheel unless you wear gloves."

But in at least one way, most Death Valley residents are like other Southern Californians.

"Most of the 200 men, women and children living in the valley spend most of their free time cooling off in swimming pools," Chief Ranger Richard Rayner said.

Fish Care Service Pays Off For Floridian

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — The 20-year-old woman in short, cutoff jeans plopped her doctor's bag down on the chair and quickly went to work on her patients. Reaching into the bag and pushing aside medicines, vitamins, tools and chemicals, she pulled out a plastic bag containing 30 live goldfih and dumped them into a 55-gallon aquarium.

They were food for her patients — a pair of lionfish residing in an aquarium in a restaurant lobby.

Sabrina Taylor operates a fish care service. She tries to make sure that aquarium conditions are right and, on occasion, cares for fish while owners are away.

"I got the idea in my head while I was at Florida State University," she said Wednesday. "I like this kind of thing, and I had my name in a fish store in Tallahassee and got some part-time work caring for fish while people were on vacation.

"So when I came back here to the University of South Florida, I thought, 'Why not turn this thing into a money maker?' I went around to offices and restaurants where they have aquariums and offered my services," she said.

"I got a few laughs, but a lot of people were surprised and glad there was such a service," she said.

She now has a list of clients, some of whom she visits routinely and others only on an emergency basis.

"Most people lack the knowledge of how to take care of fish," she said.

"I feed them and give them regular medication and vitamin supplements they need to survive in an unnatural environment," Sabrina said. "Most people are ignorant when it comes to fish."

In addition to treating and feeding the fish, she maintains the aquarium tank, its equipment and its water supply.

In her heavy bag she carries hydrometers to check the salinity of the water, thermometers, replacement parts, medicines, antibiotics, vitamins, chemicals, food, and "all kinds of test equipment."

"I like fish, and I prefer to work with salt water varieties," she said. "They have personalities."

Warm, Dry Days To Continue

Although the first day of summer is still a week away, South Plains residents already are experiencing 90-degree temperatures, and more of the same is expected today.

As a ridge of high pressure aloft persists over the area, the warm and dry weather pattern should continue for the next couple of days.

Readings should climb to the mid 90s for today's high, and drop to the mid 60s by tonight. Warm, southwesterly winds will be at 10 to 15 mph today.

Fair skies will prevail over the South Plains through Friday, and area residents can expect nearly 14 hours of sunshine today and Friday.

The weekend weather outlook is calling for clear to partly cloudy skies and continued warm weather, with the highs in the 90s and the lows in the low 60s.

Across the state Wednesday, an expanded area of high pressure stretched from East Texas southwestward into South Central Texas, producing fair skies, light winds and warm temperatures statewide. A few scattered clouds were reported over portions of East Texas and along the coast.

After a third straight morning of unseasonably cool temperatures, afternoon readings quickly climbed into the upper 80s and lower 90s throughout the state Wednesday.

The forecast calls for fair and warm weather, statewide, through Friday.

Shah Says He 'Trusts Providence' For Return

CUERNAVACA, Mexico (AP) — The exiled Shah of Iran said Wednesday he is trusting his life and eventual return to Iran to Providence, and "I do not fear being assassinated. I am a religious man."

"I believe in Providence. All depends on that," Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi said at a news conference, lifting his hands toward the sky.

Of the revolutionary government in Iran that took power after he left the country, he said, "I don't believe there is a government in Iran" now. "My country is destroying itself."

He said it was "too early" to say whether he will seek political asylum in Mexico, and he would not answer reporters' questions about whether he had been refused admittance by the United States.

The shah, a Moslem, spoke with 60 journalists in a plush, walled mansion in which he and his immediate family have stayed since arriving from the Bahamas on Sunday. He was dressed in a blue "guayabera," a traditional Mexican shirt, trimmed with white.

His wife, Farah, was with him at the news conference.

SHAH MEETS REPORTERS — The exiled Shah of Iran, who arrived in Cuernavaca, Mexico, from the Bahamas, Sunday, met briefly with reporters, Wednesday, ~ound the swimming pool of the mansion he has rented in this resort town, south of Mexico City. He said he is a religious man who trusts in Providence to return him to his homeland. (AP Laserphoto)

The shah said chose to live in Mexico because "it is a country with a long tradition of hospitality. The climate and the people of Cuernavaca are very agreeable. I hope to have a good time here."

When asked if he thought the Islamic government installed by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolution would last very long, the shah said:

"I don't believe there is a government in Iran because the bloodbath and fighting between brothers cannot be stopped. My country is destroying itself."

The exiled monarch denied reports that former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and the president of Chase Manhattan Bank, David Rockefeller helped him obtain his 90-day tourist visa from Mexico.

"I asked the Mexican government directly for my visa," he said. "It was a personal act."

Kissinger has said he used his influence with Mexico to gain permission for the shah to enter the country. The former secretary said he did so because the United States would not help the shah, once considered America's strongest ally in the Near East.

Khomeini, leader of Iran's dominant Shiite Moslems, orchestrated the revolution that toppled the shah last winter. The shah left Iran in January and the appointed government he left behind fell in February.

Last month, the head of Tehran's revolutionary courts said he had signed documents sentencing the shah and Farah to death along with others associated with the deposed regime. Revolutionary officials also have said assassination would be justified in the shah's case.

The shah went first to Egypt, then to Morocco and was in the Bahamas before arriving Sunday in this resort town, 50 miles south of Mexico City.

He lives in a three-story mansion owned by Mrs. Roland Graffenreid de Riverol, wealthy widow of a Mexican architect. The mansion, which normally rents for $1,000 a day, is located on 12,000 square yards of carefully kept grounds and has a kitchen staff of six, five gardeners and two maids, according to sources here.

In response to a reporter's questions, the shah said he had no evidence of foreign involvement in his overthrow.

"I left my country to avoid the spilling of more blood. When we left my country, something was said in that respect (that there was foreign involvement) but I don't have evidence," he said.

The news conference was called after an incident Tuesday in which the shah's bodyguards pushed aside a television newswoman who was seeking an interview at an exclusive, downtown restaurant.

"The shah was embarrassed by the attitude of his bodyguards," said the newswoman, Graciela Leal, adding that he later said "he would offer a press conference Wednesday."

Board Says Snake Owner Must Give Up Pets

MONTPELIER, Vt. (UPI) — The Vermont Fish and Game Board says Malcolm Goldberg must give up his boa constrictor, two pythons, and a Texas indigo because they are a danger to his neighbors.

But Goldberg's lawyer said Wednesday the board's refusal this week to grant his client the special permit he sought will be appealed in Superior Court.

Attorney Richard Blum said Goldberg, of Shelburne, Vt., can keep the snakes at least until July 1, the expiration date of a previous court injunction against Goldberg and his snakes.

Goldberg's unusual hobby and battles with the Fish and Game Board have been irksome to his neighbors who complained several months ago that the snakes — one which measures more than 12 feet long — threatened their youngsters and pets.

In addition to the three species for which a permit was sought, Goldberg keeps a rat snake, a hog nose snake and an iguana lizard.

"Obviously, we'll appeal," said Blum, who won the court injunction earlier this spring, just before Fish and Game officials and state police were about to seize the reptiles.

The board in its ruling said the snakes were kept illegally because Goldberg failed to obtain an import permit when he brought them to Vermont when he moved from Massachusetts.

But Goldberg successfully argued the snakes need a special habitat and their lives would have been threatened if they were removed from their quarters in his home.

In its opinion, the board also noted that Goldberg sometimes took the snakes out of his house and allowed them in his yard, and warned if they escaped, they could "exist for weeks or months" outside Goldberg's home.

'LONG LIVE HITLER'

SALERNO, Italy (AP) — About 200 West German tourists, some shouting "Long live Hitler," rampaged through a restaurant at nearby Paestum saying the quantity of wine they were served was not the one previously agreed.

AN EDITORIAL:

Lawyers And An Extra Court

WHAT HAVE THE lawyers done to increase the efficiency of the two existing Lubbock County courts-at-law?

That should be the question the Commissioners Court gets satisfactory answers to before even considering the Bar Association's request for a third court.

Are prospective jurors still subjected to long delays while opposing lawyers prolong the process of jury selection?

Do courts still sit unused because lawyers wait until the last minute to settle out of court, leaving no case ready for immediate trial?

Are trials stretched out while lawyers seek to bring up immaterial testimony or raise superfluous objections aimed at getting an advantage in the case rather than give the jury all of the pertinent facts so that justice can be served?

UNLESS THERE has been an overnight change in the rules of evidence and courtroom procedure, and a corresponding change in the adversary tactics of the lawyers, the answers to all these questions are "yes."

Lubbock's hard-working judges, try as they may, can go only so far in increasing the productivity of their courts without the full backing and cooperation of the Bar Association.

We have seen no evidence that the Bar, with notable individual exceptions perhaps, is disposed to make the most efficient use possible of the existing courts.

If the Bar does have evidence to the contrary, let it present that evidence to the Commissioners and back it up with statistics and documents to prove it.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY John Montford was among those requesting the addition of a third court-at-law, saying it's needed to help assure that those charged with misdemeanor offenses are brought to trial in speedy fashion.

If Montford, who took office in January, can demonstrate that defense lawyers are cooperating fully with him in efforts to bring cases to trial without absolutely unnecessary delays, and that the delays which do occur are because the existing courts are overloaded, then he would have a persuasive argument on his side.

He would also need to address the question of whether the caseload in the courts-at-law will remain as high when the two Municipal Courts become courts of record and thus eliminate scores of appeals to the courthouse.

The public will support as many courts as are needed to do the job well, but only if the legal profession is doing its job well, too.

AN EDITORIAL:

John Wayne--American Hero

THE DEATH OF actor John Wayne removes more than a standout performer from the American entertainment scene.

As few others have done, the veteran star of western and hero action type films made a name for himself not only as a movie "tough guy," but an outspoken defender of the American way of life which nurtured him.

"The Duke" not only was first at the boxoffice for much of his career, he was first in the hearts of those who admired his outspoken defense of ideals and patriotism which many saw maligned and made light of by others in his profession.

THERE HAVE been literally hundreds of performers walk before the lights down through the years.

But few, if any, could top The Duke for the across-the-the-board admiration bestowed upon him by all segments of American society. He not only was a man's man, a woman's man, but his own man.

John Wayne's success story in Hollywood started out not unlike that of many of his cohorts.

HE WAS BORN Marion Michael Morrison May 26, 1907, in Winterset, Iowa. When a child, his family had an Airedale dog named "Duke," a name which gave rise to Wayne's famous nickname.

Wayne spent much of his youth in the Los Angeles suburb of Glendale, and became an actor almost by chance. After a brief stint in a high school play, Duke Morrison became a star tackle at the University of Southern California. He dropped out after two years. But an acquaintance he had made with directors and John Ford and Raoul Walsh on a summer job led to his first starring role in 1930.

As Walsh told it later: "Dammit, he looked like a man..."

THE DUKE WAS a man, in every sense of the word.

In his personal life, as well as professional, he never ducked an issue.

He was an outspoken conservative. He supported American involvement in Vietnam and showed it with his backing of the film, "The Green Berets." He backed former President Richard Nixon during much of Watergate. And he had little use for those who aided and abetted the Vietcong cause during Vietnam.

Ironically, John Wayne more or less portrayed his own life, and in a way death, in his last movie, "The Shootist," the story of an aging cowboy-actor who is dying of cancer. In the film, Wayne says a line which could apply to him: "All in all, I've had one helluva life..."

Actor Jack Lemmon put it this way: "Wayne was bigger than life, but he never abused it. He always gave more than he got..."

The movie industry, his friends, the nation is better for having John Wayne pass this way...

ART BUCHWALD:

Skylab Bringing-Out Doom-Gloom Addicts

WASHINGTON—It isn't too early to start thinking about Skylab. The latest report indicates that Skylab will fall on us "somewhere between June 20 and July 14."

Hundreds of pieces of flotsam, some weighing as much as 5,000 lbs., will drop from the sky—God only knows where. Its "footprint" is said to be 100 miles wide and 4,000 miles long.

According to Las Vegas bookmakers, the chances of a piece hitting a person are 150 to 1. The chances of it hitting you personally are obviously much less.

But we all know people who take a bleak view of everything and they are the ones who believe that if Skylab is going to fall out of the sky, it will fall on them.

BUZZWORD IS IN this category. Ever since he read that the space laboratory was a goner he's been biting his fingernails.

"I know it's going to fall on me. I just know it."

"How can you be so sure?" I asked. "There are four billion people on this planet. Maybe, with luck, it will land on the Ayatollah Khomeini."

"This is serious," Buzzword retorted. "Do you know that Walter Cronkite has canceled his vacation so he can cover it when it falls?"

"Walter's always been interested in the space program. He covered Skylab going up, so obviously he wants to see what happens when it falls down. But just because he's worried doesn't mean that you have to be worried."

"Maybe," said Buzzword, "I should build a Skylab shelter. Then I'd be the only one safe when the sirens sound."

"I WOULDN'T if I were you," I warned him. "If people find out that you have a Skylab shelter and they don't, they might shoot you to get into it."

"What am I going to do?" he cried. "It will be just my luck that I'll be waiting at a gas station on the 4th of July weekend for three hours, and when I get to the pump a solar panel will come whizzing through the roof of my car."

"You've got to look at the big picture," I told him. "There is nothing that says Skylab will even fall down in the United States. It could be strewn all across the Soviet Union or China or the Riviera.

"That's the beauty of Skylab. Every country in the world has an equal chance of being dumped on.

"If I know our people at NASA they're going to do everything in their power to see that it doesn't fall on the United States—because if it does their budget is going to be cut."

"WHAT I DON'T understand," Buzzword said, "is why they would put up a space laboratory if they knew it would eventually fall down."

"They didn't think it would fall down until some time in the next century, and by then most of the people who sent it up would be on retirement pay and wouldn't have to deal with it.

"Believe me, they're as upset about their calculations as you are. They've hired a battery of lawyers to handle the class action suits that will come out of it."

"Suppose a piece of it hits a nuclear energy plant?" he wanted to know.

"Now I think you're overreacting," I said. "Las Vegas hasn't even put out odds on that one. The most important thing to remember when it starts raining Skylab parts is not to panic."

"What should I do?" he wanted to know.

"Go into the nearest subway station until the all-clear sounds."

"But then I'll get mugged," Buzzword said.

"Those are the chances you have to take if you want a safe and sane space program."

Those new magazines on jogging and running contain all the news that's fit to sprint.

Today's employes seem to fall into two groups: Those who regard criticism and those who ignore it.

GEORGE F. WILL:

The Spanish Miracle

MADRID—Those who savor irony, and the dissolution of political categories, should rejoice in King Juan Carlos of Spain.

This monarch was the indispensable director, and to a considerable extent the author, of the drama that restored to Spain the essence of republican government—a legislature of elected representatives.

If democratizing an authoritarian regime of the right constitutes an "opening to the left," a Bourbon may have been the most effective achiever "on the left" in postwar Europe.

His wait in the wings could have ruined him, as waiting ruined Queen Victoria's son, Edward VII. And there were rumors of dissipation.

Juan Carlos is tall and somewhat sleepy-eyed, which may have helped foster the false impression that he is mentally slow and awkward.

But he is neither languid nor laconic. When Franco died, the moment found its man in Queen Victoria's great-great-grandson.

And now, at 41, brimming with the vigor of a physically powerful and politically seasoned man in his prime, Juan Carlos is in the peculiar position—gratifying but also melancholy—of having done, or at least earnestly hoping he has done, the great work of his life.

That work was the peaceful dismantling, from within, of Franco's system, persuading the old parliament to vote itself out of existence and to summon political parties into existence.

In his final years Franco boasted that he had Spain "atada y bien atada"—tied and well-tied. But Juan Carlos already was planning how to untie the knots.

NOT SINCE EISENHOWER has there been a military man whose political skills were so judiciously disguised and helpfully underrated.

The remarkable consensus that sustains Spain's new democratic order is reinforced by the belief that the choice is "this order or the army." There were more than 50 military plots, mutinies, coups or other political eruptions by the military in Spain between 1815 and General Franco's rebellion in 1936.

But Juan Carlos is a soldier, an officer, a graduate of Saragossa academy (Spain's West Point), a jet pilot, and his most crucial and delicate task is to tranquilize the military.

He has had to walk a fine line, reassuring the military about the course of change, but not seeming too solicitous toward the military. He surely has in his mind's eye the example of his wife's family, the former royal family of Greece.

IN THE GREEK referendum that rejected the monarchy, much was made of allegations that the royal family had been too close to the armed forces.

Some terrorist attacks on officers almost certainly are designed to provoke the officer corps to attack democracy. Some terrorists have the "nach Hitler kommen wir" mentality. That slogan—"after Hitler, we come"—was coined by German Communists 50 years ago.

It expressed the theory that Hitler must come to power to provoke a proper revolution.

As a symbol of national unity in a nation riven by sectionalism—even by rival nationalisms—Juan Carlos understands how little he can involve himself in politics and policy.

He has asked the government for more funds for Madrid's Prado Museum, but that was just one national monument helping another. His problem is less maintaining self-restraint than restraining others who do not yet understand, or will not respect, the rules and delicacies of constitutional monarchy.

BECAUSE THE KING is accessible, and remarkably candid in private conversation, he has been embarrassed by people who, upon leaving the Zarzuela Palace, invoke his name and opinions in political arenas.

When Franco was dying, Santiago Carrillo, head of Spain's Communist Party, was asked how long Juan Carlos would last as king, and he said "as long as a caramel by a schoolhouse door."

But Carrillo has been photographed bowing over the royal hand. This is, of course, only another in a lifelong series of Carrillo's cynicisms.

But it demonstrates the king's power to evoke at least the forms of deference. And among the public benefits from that power is that people like Carrillo are required to advertise their cynicism.

As historian Hugh Thomas says, the transformation of Franco's tyranny into Juan Carlos' democracy is "one of the success stories of modern times," not least because where Euro-communism was supposed to prosper, Euro-monarchism has prevailed.

ANDREW TULLY:

A 'Used' Child...

WASHINGTON—She was one of our children, a dumpy little girl of perhaps 18, with acne, long greasy hair, and the sniffles.

But her real plight was not her pimples or her runny nose. It was that she had been used by the country's professional protestors.

Even after camping out for three days in Washington's unseasonably raw weather, she didn't know the score. She thought she was winning.

Waiting in line in the little delicatessen, she clutched a large bottle of Coke in one hand and with the other pressed a dirty rag to her nose.

"We've got Carter on the run," she said cheerfully. "Now he knows how the people feel about those nukes."

THE POOR tad was batting .500. Carter did know how certain people felt; some 65,000 had gathered on The Mall to denounce continued development and use of nuclear energy.

But Carter already had made his position clear: the U.S. would continue to support peaceful use of the "nukes."

"No more Three Mile Islands!" the little girl chanted. Investigation concluded that no more than two or three people were endangered by that "incident."

That, of course, is too many. But life itself is dangerous, and the career dissenters bereft of reasonableness.

The steam engine was denounced as a national peril, and indeed it took a toll of a few deaths and injuries. So did the first wood-burning locomotive. The agitators would outlaw nuclear energy.

WOULD THEY outlaw airplanes, too? After all, that appalling DC-10 crash killed 273 human beings in a few seconds. That's an estimated 260 more deaths than nuclear energy has caused in 30 years.

The Jane Fondas and Ralph Naders ignore such facts. Demonstrating against nuclear energy produces headlines because it raises the specter of a peacetime Hiroshima.

Besides, a nuclear protest has that quality of glamor that attracts little girls aching for attention. Miss Fonda and Tom Hayden slept in warm, comfortable beds when their job was done at The Mall.

The little girl camped out in an atmosphere of drugs, lousy food, violent sickness—and rapists.

"I DON'T KNOW how many girls were raped during this show," said a police spokesman. "We made only a few arrests, but hundreds of girls refused to press charges."

Carter won the battle of The Mall because he has a policy. All the protestors had, which is to say all they were given by their leadership, was what they perceived as a moral judgment.

Thus, the poor little girl in the delicatessen was happy in a misery she couldn't, or wouldn't, acknowledge. She belonged to something judged important enough to make television's evening news.

Maybe she wouldn't have come to Washington from a little West Virginia town if ever in her schoolday life she had been invited by somebody nice to go somewhere nice.

Timely Quotes...

A recent Japanese visitor to this country wanted to take home some souvenirs of his American journey.

"It was an awful job," said his host. "Every time he picked up something he thought would be typically American, he turned it over and it said, 'Made in Japan.'"

One supermarket has a cash register that flashes "We're sorry" before the total appears.

JAY HARRIS:

To Learn A Truth

ONE OF THE complaints of many business leaders and others today is that "they don't teach free enterprise and Americanism in the schools anymore..."

While the generalization may be too broad, and while the subjects are taught in varying degrees, it still is a valid argument. At least it is if current attitudes toward business and the nation's basic institutions are any indication.

As it turns out, there is an institution in Lubbock which is "doing something" about the complaint. Or, it might be more accurate to say there is a team effort in that direction.

We refer to two organizations with jawbreaker titles at Lubbock Christian College, the Center for Business and Economic Education and the Institute for Business and Economic Education.

BOTH FUNCTION on and off the campus, and as more or less adjuncts to LCC serve it and its students and faculty as well as the city and area.

Both the Center and the Institute are under the direction of Dr. C. L. Kay, who has been associated with LCC almost from its inception.

Both the Center and Institute are funded separately, the former through gifts, bequests and contributions to LCC, and through the J. E. and L. E. Mabee Foundation, whose chairman is Guy Mabee. The Institute is funded through foundations, businesses, corporations and individuals.

The Center primarily is an on-campus project, in which intensive classroom work is undertaken in the areas of history, government, economics, philosophy, management and leadership. It is answerable to the board of directors of LCC and Dr. Harvie Pruitt, LCC president.

The Institute, although like the Center headquartered in the Mabee American Heritage Center, has as its primary function providing information to the public in order to promote greater interest in and understanding of business and economic affairs. It works with LCC in providing speakers, source materials and films.

THE CENTER for Business and Economic Education has a dual goal: To create understanding of the philosophy of the American form of government and the free market economy.

To accomplish this, the CBEE emphasizes three basic areas of thought: 1. Understanding the free market system and business, 2. Understanding the nation's political processes, and 3. Character building (spiritual and moral values.).

In explaining those goals, Dr. Kay says: "Those associated with the CBEE feel that it is imperative that present and future generations have a deep and penetrating insight into our form of government and the free enterprise system. This understanding, however, must be undergirded by a respect for spiritual and moral values..."

These goals are projected through classroom study, symposiums, audio visual displays, labs and field trips, guest lecturers, including those brought here by the Institute, an intern program, public affairs and community service programs, general Americana library and this year a new honors seminar.

"JUST A FEW years ago," Dr. Kay says, "a college degree was adequate to qualify one for an excellent future.

"Today, however, business is diligently seeking young people who have an in-depth understanding of, and appreciation for, the free market system, the American form of government and the inter-relation between the two.

"An understanding of the historical development of our Constitutional Republic and the free market system will prepare these students for today's world," he notes.

To help accomplish this, Dr. Kay says "penetrating studies of our form of government in contrast to other forms are also undertaken. Serious study is given to the Constitution and its various interpretations, including the thinking of our forefathers as well as modern authorities..."

IT WOULD be impossible to cite all the courses and symposiums sponsored by the CBEE since its inception in 1973.

In addition to classroom instruction, there has been a Bicentennial Mini Course for Public School Teachers, a mini-course on National and International Affairs, Free Enterprise Economics for teachers and administrators and just the past week a summer workshop on "Strategies for Teaching Secondary English."

At that seminar, one of many outstanding speakers was M. Stanton Evans, syndicated columnist whose work appears on these pages. Evans, widely traveled and respected, as others who appear as speakers, is an authority in his field.

The lecturer for the Bicentennial Mini Course, for instance, was Dr. Walter H. Judd, who served ten terms as a congressman from Minnesota and who is an authority on foreign affairs.

THE INSTITUTE, like the Center, has a multiple purpose.

But, its major function is to build, through seminars for teachers, curriculum development workshops, publications, student programs, visiting scholars program and speakers bureau a "team relationship" between the business community and local schools and to present some old-fashioned and proven concepts of what America has been all about.

That is a big order. The Institute, while separate from the Center, has Dr. Kay as its president and Joe Mabee as chairman of its board. It works closely with LCC in many ways. Both organizations have gone a long way in lending stature to LCC. Citizens of Lubbock and the area also have profited, and LCC and both organizations are deserving of the support of those who believe this nation can still turn things around.

As Dwight D. Eisenhower once said: "There is nothing wrong with America that the faith, love of freedom, intelligence, and energy of her citizens cannot cure." That is what the Center and Institute are all about.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

MAKING EDITORIAL policy for a newspaper can be a pretty tricky business. Take the New York Times, for instance. It objected editorially to the Supreme Court decision which sustained the ban on the so-called "seven dirty words." An understandable position. And it refused to print those "seven dirty words." Likewise understandable.

Q. How many quills are on a grown porcupine?
A. Typically, about 30,000.

Oysters do indeed grow on trees. Mangrove trees. Limbs grow down into the water to root deeply. They become encrusted with oysters.

A pound of shelled peanuts has more protein than two pounds of sirloin steak, bear in mind.

Alligator Breeder Says Business Tough But Good

CHRISTMAS, Fla. (UPI) — Herman Brooks says breeding alligators is like playing slot machines.

"You know you're going to get it sooner or later," he said. "They're ugly and mean and it's not a business for everyone. But to me, raising alligators is a fine way to make a living."

Brooks opened Gator Jungle 10 years ago in a tiny town some 20 miles east of Orlando. It is one of five commercial alligator farms in the country.

"It was very difficult at first because there's never been any book written on alligator breeding. We had to learn something every year and there was a lot of trial and error, but it's starting to pay off right now."

Since the alligator was removed from Florida's endangered species list a couple of years ago the reptiles are now threatened, not endangered. Brooks and the other five commercial gator farm owners have been increasing their stocks. Alligator hides sell for $20 a foot.

"As a farmer, it's a lot easier raising gators," said Brooks, who looks tan and tough. The reptiles don't require close attention or medicatiou, "just good food and clean water."

Hundreds of alligators ranging in size from 12 inches to 13 feet must be moved daily so their Gator Jungle pens can be cleaned. Brooks must be careful to see that no alligator grows faster than its peers "because they're cannibalistic and they'll eat anything that they think they can without getting hurt."

Brooks said that includes him.

"Sure, I've been bitten lots of times," he said. "I've got scars all over me."

Woman Pool Player Hit Over Head With Chair

A 20-year-old Lubbock woman was hit over the head with a chair in a poolroom brawl early Wednesday, according to police reports.

The woman said she and a tall, thin black male in his early 20s disagreed while playing pool in a club in the 700-block of 13th Street about 1 a.m. After hitting her over the head with a chair, the woman said, the suspect fled in a car.

The woman did not require hospitalization.

A middle-aged man was reported exposing himself in a mid-city neighborhood around 2 p.m. Wednesday.

A 16-year-old girl reportedly was pulling out of her driveway when she spotted a naked man standing beside her house. The girl told police that the man continued to stare at her until she drove away.

In other activity, a man who reported his car stolen Wednesday morning was discovered trying to set fire to a car fitting the stolen vehicle's description.

Patrolmen spotted a man trying to stuff an ignited T-shirt into the gas tank of a car Wednesday afternoon on a Mackenzie Park road.

When police tried to question the man, he fled on foot. The car's description and the man's identity later were matched, and the suspect was charged with falsifying a police report.

Melvin D. Smith of 2012 E. 49th St. said burglars entered his home by breaking a glass door and made off with a stereo, a gun and assorted jewelery between 10 a.m. Sunday and 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Smith said he found muddy tennis shoe prints and a piece of cloth with a Batman picture on it in the house.

A vintage World War II pistol was stolen from the L&H Drug Store warehouse Tuesday night, owner Lonnie Hollingsworth told police.

Hollingsworth said he saw a 16-year-old male on a racing bicycle outside the warehouse about 6:45 p.m. Tuesday. Hollingsworth said he discovered the company safe open when he entered the building, but did not notice anything gone.

He discovered the presentation case for the .45-caliber automatic pistol in the restroom Wednesday morning, he reported. The pistol was valued at $500.

Another firearm, a .44-magnum revolver, was reported stolen from a pickup at the W.R. Batson parking lot at 1313 Jarvis Ave. The gun was worth about $250 and was stolen between 6 p.m. Monday and 7:30 a.m. Tuesday, according to reports.

Howard B. Adams of 5509 72nd St. said his 1977 Ford Courier pickup was stolen between 11:30 p.m. Tuesday and 7 a.m. Wednesday. The pickup, complete with a set of snow chains in the back, was reported stolen from Adams' residence.

Investigation of the alleged kidnapping of a 6-year-old girl was halted when officers found the child in the residence of one of her parents' friends.

Lubbock police had to cuff a man's ankles as well as his hands after he assaulted several officers during an arrest about 1 a.m. Wednesday.

None of the policemen were seriously injured in the incident.

The 21-year-old man was booked into the county jail on charges of aggravated assault on police officers, failing to identify himself, disorderly conduct, resisting arrest and public intoxication.

Police went to the man's parents' home and were told by his mother that her son had been giving her trouble and that she wanted him out of the house. The suspect told the officers he was 91 years old and refused to give his name.

Reports indicate that the man began struggling with two policemen in his bedroom and that he had to be handcuffed. Police say the man was taken to the patrol car where he began fighting again, kicking one of the arresting officers in the knee and cutting his arm.

After two other policemen arrived, the man continued to struggle and allegedly struck several of the officers in the face and stomach.

The man's feet were bound and he was transported to the county jail, according to reports.

A 35-year-old Livingston resident, found covered with blood and standing in a University Avenue parking lot about 6 a.m. Wednesday, told police he was attacked by bandits and robbed of $100 cash and credit cards.

Roland A. Poncho, who was listed in fair condition early Wednesday at Health Sciences Center Hospital, said he was held up in the 2400-block of 10th Street. He added that several persons jumped him, striking him in the face and taking his billfold, but he could not describe the suspects.

Poncho also suffered several cuts in the attack. No arrests had been made by early today.

A fight over a pool game about 12:05 a.m. Wednesday resulted in a 44-year-old Lubbock man's being cut and shot in the arm and buttock, according to reports.

Antonio Luna of 3913 E. Bates St. was in serious condition Wednesday at Methodist Hospital. Luna said he was involved in a fight with three black men at a pool hall at 13th Street and Avenue F.

The suspects were described as between 18 and 25, tall and muscular. No arrests had been made by early today.

National Guard Used To Protect Traffic

By The Associated Press

Alabama Gov. Fob James ordered the National Guard to protect private and commercial traffic in his state Wednesday and condemned the shooting of a Georgia truck driver's wife, the most serious incident of violence in a growing nationwide truckers protest.

"This kind of cowardly activity is lawlessness at its worst and will not be tolerated," James said of the shooting. He then ordered the head of Alabama's Department of Public Safety to "use the full force of the National Guard" to protect trucks carrying perishable goods, including fuel.

Doctors at Druid City Hospital in Tuscaloosa said Linda Pruett, 20, was in critical condition with a bullet lodged in her rib cage. Mrs. Pruett was wounded early Wednesday when a sniper opened fire on a semi-truck driven by her husband, Fred, 23, on U.S. 82 west of Northport, Ala.

In other states, tractor-trailer rigs were hit with gunfire and rocks. Police said some of the victims of snipers were warned over citizens band radio they would be shot if they kept on hauling.

The truck slowdown has cut into already-short supplies of gasoline. In Birmingham, city officials, juggling gasoline supplies, began rationing fuel for the city's police and fire vehicles Wednesday.

Scores of truckers were arrested on various charges as convoys snarled traffic in at least six states. Numerous truck stops were blockaded from New England to Oregon.

The demonstrations escalated this week after the Independent Truckers Association urged all the nation's 100,000 owner-operators to join in a protest to demand guaranteed fuel allocations, standardized weight and load regulations and an increase in the speed limit to 65 mph.

And state leaders attending the Western Governors' Conference in Sun Valley, Idaho — facing the possible loss of valuable farm produce as a result of the truckers' shutdown — urged the Interstate Commerce Commission Wednesday to allow rate increases for merchandise hauled by the independents.

"We want to get this over with as quick as possible," said Bill Scheffer of Brunswood, Pa., national vice president of the Independent Truckers Association. "It's either a slow death or a fast one and we'd just as soon get it over with."

Bill Diesem of Spiritwood, N.D., is one trucker who says things are getting too rough on the road. He was driving along Interstate 90, about 10 miles east of Sioux Falls, S.D., with a load of shoes late Tuesday night when a bullet tore into his radiator.

A second shot hit the lower right corner of the driver's window.

"I'm not going out there and be a target," he said. "I'm not getting hazardous zone pay."

The truckers got added support Wednesday from the National Association of Truck Stop Operators, representing 1,100 truck stops, many of which have been blockaded or closed voluntarily.

The protesting truckers want guaranteed diesel fuel allocations and a rollback in prices they say have reached as high as $1.20 a gallon in some areas.

In a continuation of the sniping that broke out over the weekend, rigs were shot up Tuesday night and Wednesday in Alabama, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Colorado and Nevada.

Gunfire disabled two refrigerated tractor-trailer rigs and another was hit by bullets on Interstate 76, about 30 miles northeast of Denver near Keenesburg. Weld County Sheriff Harold Andrews said the drivers were warned by CB radio they would be shot if they kept running.

Hector Garcia, 28, of Houston was driving a rig along Interstate 80 about eight miles west of Elko, Nev., when a car pulled alongside his rig. Garcia said he looked down at the car, saw a hand pointing a gun at him, and threw himself down in the cab. Two shots hit the cab.

Summit Hoped To Stabilize U.S., Soviet Relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The carefully orchestrated summit meeting in Vienna will produce a signed treaty to limit U.S. and Soviet strategic nuclear weapons and, President Carter hopes, smooth out "the peaks and valleys" in superpower relations.

But, otherwise, Carter's goals at this first U.S.-Soviet summit in 4½ years are modest, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance made clear at a news conference Wednesday.

"We must move away from the peaks and valleys, the ups and downs we have seen, to a more stable relationship," Vance told reporters. He said Carter also will stress to Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev that "detente is a two-way street and that we must both recognize it as such."

The strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II), a milestone in arms control, is the centerpiece of the three-day summit. It will impose constraints until 1985 on U.S. and Soviet long-range bombers and intercontinental ballistic missiles, and enhance U.S.-Soviet cooperation.

But the treaty still must clear the Senate, where ratification is in doubt, and where Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., a chief critic, said the pact demonstrates a policy of "appeasement" toward the Soviet Union.

The White House announced Wednesday that Carter would address a joint session of Congress at 9 p.m. EDT Monday, one hour after he returns from the Vienna summit.

Except for the signed document, Carter could come away from his talks with Brezhnev, beginning Saturday, with little in the way of concrete agreements.

Still, the two leaders may reach a number of informal understandings to improve relations. If they hit it off personally, they might establish an atmosphere of trust extending far beyond Hofburg Palace, the site of Monday's treaty signing.

"Hopefully, out of this can come a better understanding of the views and positions of the two parties," Vance said at a news conference.

He rejected Jackson's assertion as emotional, misguided and simply wrong, and said, "We have no delusions about the fundamental differences which exist between us and the Soviet Union."

Both Carter and Brezhnev have indicated they want to use the summit as a springboard to friendlier relations.

In a gesture of conciliation, Carter will bring to his first encounter with the crusty Soviet leader his personal assurances that he would like to extend favorable trading privileges to Moscow.

But, like the arms control treaty, Congress will have the final say.

The Soviets lost low tariff and easy credit arrangements five years ago by refusing to comply with a congressional amendment requiring that Jews and other minorities be allowed to emigrate freely.

The amendment was a blow to Soviet pride, while the cancellation of the U.S.-Soviet trade agreement slowed progress toward industrial development and a better life for the Soviet consumer.

The question at the summit is whether Brezhnev can give Carter whatever he needs to persuade Congress that Jewish emigration, now at an annual rate of about 60,000, is essentially free.

Carter will also try to make headway on the treatment of dissidents.

Five prominent prisoners were released last April in a swap for two Soviet diplomats convicted last year on espionage charges. There have been reports since then that a number of other dissidents will be freed to celebrate the summit and to coax reluctant senators to cast their votes for ratification of the SALT II treaty.

In a message smuggled out of Chistopol prison, Anatoly Sharansky, a Jewish computer technician convicted last July of treason, was said to be deteriorating health. Carter unsuccessfully intervened in his behalf in the past.

In the spirit of the summit, Carter will appeal to Brezhnev, meanwhile, for cooperation in promoting peaceful settlements in the Middle East and in southern Africa.

Specifically, the United States wants the Soviets to tone down their attacks on the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty and not to block a peacekeeping role for the United Nations.

Also, Carter probably will urge Brezhnev to prod Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, heads of the Patriotic Front guerrillas, into negotiations with leaders of Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

Vance Strikes Sharply At Charges That U.S. Policy Appeases Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP)— Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, reacting sharply to attacks by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, said Wednesday it is "misguided and simply wrong" to suggest that the administration has pursued a policy of appeasement toward the Soviet Union.

At a news conference, Vance struck back at Jackson's declaration Tuesday night of his unequivocal opposition to the U.S.-Soviet arms limitation agreement (SALT II).

"I hope very much that we can conduct this debate responsibly and relatively free of emotionally-charged rhetoric," Vance said. He said the treaty "deserves serious and reasoned debate."

Vance, who is known for his low-key public posture, clearly was irritated by Jackson's statement that there is a real danger that "seven years of detente are becoming a decade of appeasement."

The Washington State senator also compared detente with the policy of British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain toward Nazi Germany in the late 1930s.

In reply, Vance said, "To describe the policy of this administration and the policy pursued by President Nixon, President Ford and Secretary Kissinger as appeasement is, in my judgment, misguided and simply wrong.

"We have no delusions about the fundamental differences which exist between us and the Soviet Union. Neither did the prior administration," Vance said.

"We are maintaining and strengthening our defense, and with our NATO allies we are vastly improving our NATO defense."

Vance defended the SALT agreement, saying it will "lessen the threat to the United States and enhances our security and the security of our allies.

"I think it is important for all of us to recognize that in today's world, neither side, in going to an all out arms race, can succeed."

Vance said that one of the key points the American side will make at the coming Vienna summit is that detente is a "two-way street and we must recognize it as such.

"Another is that it is essential that we find ways to regulate the arms competition, the potential arms competition between us."

At the White House, meanwhile, press secretary Jody Powell, in effect, accused Jackson of knowingly misstating facts related to U.S. defense and the arms treaty.

In response to Jackson's statement that by 1985 "the Soviets will have achieved superiority in the number of warheads" available, Powell said this was incorrect. He said the U.S. lead in warheads will actually increase in the late 1980s.

Powell termed "grossly misleading" a statement by Jackson that the 250 weapons the treaty would force the Soviets to destroy were of no significance."

Powell equated those weapons to the U.S. Polaris and Minuteman missiles.

"There was a misleading reference to the fact that we couldn't build a heavy missile. That is correct."

But Powell also said, "There has been no consideration or request from our military people for us to build a heavy missile."

He said Jackson was aware of this.

Powell said it was "ridiculous" for Jackson to compare the Soviet bomber known in the West as the Backfire with the American B-52 bomber, which the press secretary said was a superior weapon.

Speaking at the daily White House press briefing, Powell said Jackson "totally ignored the fact that the United States has 225 F-111s and F-111Bs in the United States and Europe capable of reaching the Soviet Union" and that these were not counted in the arms limitations.

Asked whether the Jackson statements, made just before Carter's departure for the U.S.-Soviet summit in Vienna, were harmful, Powell said: "It's hardly helpful."

Pravda Cites Anti-Detente Forces In U.S.

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party newspaper Pravda, in an editorial on the approaching Vienna summit and signing of the SALT II treaty, charged that anti-detente forces in the United States "are going out of their way to thwart the agreement or at least to emasculate its contents."

The official news agency Tass Wednesday evening carried the text of an authoritative Pravda editorial on the Soviet-American summit, set to appear in Thursday morning editions of the Soviet Communist Party newspaper.

While lashing out against U.S. critics of the new strategic arms limitation pact, Pravda expressed Kremlin hopes that the top-level meeting in Vienna June 15-18, "will become an important landmark on the road to lasting peace and security on our planet."

Pravda said Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev and U.S. President Jimmy Carter "will discuss questions of Soviet-American relations and also several pressing international issues."

The second-stage SALT treaty, the Soviet newspaper said, will help put a limit on the nuclear arms race and also serve to "liven up" U. S.-Soviet talks on other issues, such as mutual reduction of conventional forces in central Europe.

The Soviet editorial said development of U.S-Soviet relations has become "noticeably complicated," mainly due to "activation in the United States of circles that are opposed to detente, that are striving to turn the world back to the cold war, to new confrontations and unbridled military competition."

"At the present time, when the SALT II agreement is to be approved and signed shortly, these circles are going out of their way to thwart the agreement or at least to emasculate its contents," Pravda said.

PICNIC IN CAPITOL ROTUNDA — Tiko Lewis, 6, left, and his brother, Melvin Lewis Jr., 7, enjoy slices of cold watermelon nearly as big as they are in the rotunda of the state capitol, Wednesday. Gov. Bill Clements signed into law a bill making June 19 a state holiday, and many who attended the ceremony took advantage of free watermelon, donated for the occasion. (AP Laserphoto)

Texas Adds June 19 As State Holiday

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite claims that it was the wrong day, Gov. Bill Clements signed into law Wednesday a bill making June 19, Emancipation Day, a legal state holiday.

Then everybody gathered under the pecan and elm trees on the west Capitol grounds to feast on two truckloads of watermelons.

"This is a historic occasion, long overdue," said Clements, Texas' first Republican governor in 104 years. "It gives me enormous pride and pleasure to sign it."

Rep. Al Edwards, D-Houston, a first-term black House member, stood at his side as author of the measure approved by the recent Legislature.

A rifle squad from nearby Bergstrom Air Force fired a volley to mark the ceremony, and the Ebenezer Baptist Church band of Austin played the black national anthem.

The bill will apply mostly to state employees and state banks, which will observe June 19 as a state holiday. The date has been unofficially celebrated as a holiday by Texas blacks for many years.

President Abraham Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation on Jan. 1, 1863. However, it was not until June 19, 1865, that Gen. Gordon Granger, the new military governor of Texas, declared at Galveston that all slaves in Texas were free.

Rep. Clay Smothers, an outspoken black legislator from Dallas, contended earlier Wednesday that Edwards' bill created a "fraudulent holiday."

"Most of us were taught by elderly blacks that we were freed on Jan. 1," Smothers told a news conference. "That information of freedom was deliberately withheld until the harvest of cotton crops was completed."

Another speaker at the bill signing ceremony brought up the difference in dates. "My daddy (a slave) told me that the good farmers in Texas wanted to get in more crops before they turned the slaves loose," said the Rev. S.L. Davis, 91, Austin Baptist minister.

Edwards explained that there was no real difference in the dates, just that Texas blacks always celebrated the day they were set free instead of the national proclamation date.

The new holiday will not become effective until June 19, 1980.

Beetle Spray Group Begins Campaign

The Overton South Neighborhood Association has started its annual insects-praying program to combat the elm leaf beetle.

For $10 per tree, the association will spray an infested tree in the neighborhood twice this summer, said Irene McNeill, secretary of the association. She added that only property owners in Overton South are eligible for the program.

"We urge all property owners to have their elms sprayed because if infested trees are not sprayed, the sprayed trees could get reinfested with the beetles," Mrs. McNeill said.

Those who wish to have their trees sprayed should call Mrs. McNeill at 762-5414.

The association uses money from the spraying program to fund its projects.

DOPE THAT WOULDN'T DIE

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — They tried to burn it. Then they sprayed it with diesel fuel. Then they tried to bury it with a bulldozer. But the 10 tons of marijuana scattered over a hillside at Kanawha Airport has resisted destruction and now the state has called out the Air National Guard to protect the pot.

Lubbock Man Charged With Manslaughter

Sammy Richard Selman, 30, of 6118 35th St. was charged Wednesday with voluntary manslaughter in the death of Jeral Ray Kirkland of Shallowater.

An inquest jury Tusday ruled Kirkland's death a homicide.

Selman remained in the county jail late Wednesday. Bond was set at $15,000.

Witnesses testified before the inquest jury that Kirkland had been beaten unconscious six days before he died in a Lubbock hospital.

Selman was arrested in the courtroom immediately after the jury's decision was announced, and he was placed in jail on a $1,000 temporary bond. He was released after posting the temporary bond Tuesday, but was arrested again Wednesday after the formal charge.

Judge Orders Three Roloff Homes Closed

AUSTIN (AP) — State District Judge Charles Mathews ordered the closing Wednesday of three homes for troubled youths operated by Corpus Christi evangelist Lester Roloff.

The judge said children at the homes would be removed unless the facilities apply for a state license by Tuesday.

He also ordered Roloff to pay $22,850 in civil penalties for the 450 days since he was ordered to comply with state licensing laws or cease operating the homes.

The homes affected by the ruling are the Rebekah Home for Girls in Corpus Christi, the Lighthouse Home for Boys near Corpus Christi and the Anchor Home for Boys in Zapata County.

"As I said before, back in October 1976, with no doubt in my mind, Brother Roloff is doing a good and a great service," Mathews said in issuing the ruling.

"I think he's a fine man. I think if it was left up to Brother Roloff, he would have licensed them (the homes) long ago. I think it was his following that wouldn't permit him to do that."

Roloff did not attend the court hearing. Several dozen of his supporters sat in the audience, and one was heard to say, "It's a black day," after Mathews issued the order.

Mathews first issued an order in October 1976 against Roloff, and that ruling was upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Attorney General Mark White recently filed motion to hold Roloff in contempt for failing to comply with the 1976 ruling.

For nearly six years, Roloff has refused to apply for a state license on grounds it is a violation of the doctrine of separation of church and state.

A bill failed to pass the 1979 Legislature that would have exempted Roloff's homes from state licensing regulations. Roloff testified for the bill in a legislative committee hearing.

Until last month, Roloff had refused to let state welfare workers inspect his homes.

On May 4, two state welfare department inspectors were allowed to tour the Rebekah home, and both testified at Wednesday's hearing.

David Gibbs, a Roloff attorney from Cleveland, Ohio, objected to the inspectors' testimony and said they were allowed on the premises on the condition they would not testify in any judicial hearings.

Mathews said he would not honor any such agreement to withhold testimony.

Also testifying briefly was Harmon Oxford, superintendent of the Anchor Home.

Oxford pleaded the Fifth Amendment under questioning by Assistant Attorney General David Young. After a recess, Young agreed not to further question Oxford, who had been threatened earlier with a jail sentence by Mathews.

George Duran and Joseph Kast of the Corpus Christi welfare inspection unit said they first tried to visit the Rebekah home April 13, but were turned away. When they returned in early May, they were allowed in and were admitted subsequently several times, they said.

Both said the homes appear to be operating despite the 3-year-old injunction ordering Roloff to license the facilities.

On Tuesday, a federal judge, Owen Cox, dismissed a suit by several of Roloff's backers who claimed the People's Church — not Roloff — is operating the facilities.

Although Gibbs did not mention the federal court decision he argued that the state had not proved Roloff has continuously operated the homes since October 1976.

"For you to come in here today and say they haven't proved anything just doesn't make good sense to this court," Mathews told the Roloff lawyer.

After the ruling, Gibbs declined comment on the entire matter, including whether he plans to appeal Mathews' ruling.

As the hearing began, Mathews criticized the Roloff supporters who have deluged him with letters asking him that he not close the homes.

"They're wasting their time, and it's something they should not be doing," the judge said sternly. He estimated he has received 10 to 20 letters a day since May 17.

"And if anyone has any questions about where they've gone, they're in the paper basket," he said.

Area Nursing Home Foundation Wins State Contract

The Texas Department of Human Resources has awarded Many Benefits For The Aging Foundation's West Texas Home Health Agency a one-year contract for home care for the aged, blind and disabled in a 15-county area.

The contract calls for a maximum of $415,349 on a cost-reimbursement basis.

Mrs. Barbara Satterwhite will coordinate the program and will be supervised by WTHHA Administrator Mrs. Claudia Marberry.

The agency reports that 76 clients been served under the program as of June 1 with 79 providers as employees of the program.

In July, Garza, Hale and Hockley counties are expected to add 78 clients to the program rolls with 64 providers.

In August, Bailey, Cochran, Crosby, Dickens, Floyd, King, Lamb, Lynn, Motley, Terry and Yoakum counties will be adding an estimated 98 clients with 70 employee-providers.

Providers serve clients in their homes on a regular basis, delivering services such as meal preparation, personal care, light housekeeping and transportation.

MBFA Foundation is a non-profit organization which operates 13 nursing homes in Texas and other services such as homemaker services and meals-on-wheels programs.

Baptist Conservatives Happy With Presidency -For Now

HOUSTON (AP) — Flushed with triumph by gaining the Southern Baptist presidency, a conservative coalition Wednesday backed off from seeking further actions to root out so-called "liberal teachings" about the Bible.

"We're easing off for the time being," said the Rev. Paige Patterson of Dallas, a key leader in a keenly orchestrated advance campaign that elevated the Rev. Adrian Rogers of Memphis, Tenn., to the presidency of the nation's largest Protestant body.

An inquing atmosphere of reconciliation settled over the big convention of 13,000 "messengers" and several moves planned to tighten controls on Bible interpretations in seminaries were dropped.

"I am not mad at anybody, but the devil, and not against anything but sin," Rogers told a packed news conference.

"I don't want any witch hunt to purge the seminaries," he said.

Although he said he would favor a "a fair balanced committee," to investigate teachings at seminaries and felt they would "welcome it" as a chance to refute any unfair criticism, associates said later such a possibility was scrapped for the current convention.

Also, the conservative coalition abandoned plans to back its own picked slate for denominational seminaries to get reins on them and instead accepted the nominations of a regular convention committee chosen by the outgoing administration.

Additionally, a coalition-backed resolution insisting that seminary professors subscribe to Biblical inerrancy and other specific beliefs such as a "personal devil and a literal hell," was withdrawn by its mover, the Rev. Larry Lewis of St. Louis.

The gesture came in a conciliatory floor exchange between Lewis and the Rev. Wayne Dehoney of Louisville, Ky., who had proposed instead the convention simply reaffirm its 1963 Baptist faith and message statement.

Lewis said Rogers had agreed to that and the "messengers" promptly approved.

The statement calls Scripture divinely inspired and said it "has God for its author, salvation for its end, and truth without any mixture of error for its matter."

But the statement does not specify verbal "inerrancy", the criteria of the conservative faction. This means that each word was specified by God and not just the thought and ideas.

Rogers, 48, pastor of Memphis' 10,000-member Bellevue Baptist Church, has espoused that position. "Any doubting of the Bible is too much," he said, adding that anyone with such doubts has no business in influential denominational roles. "But we already have processes for removing anyone who ought to be removed."

Appeals Court Judge Paul Pressler, another key figure in the coalition that backed Rogers, said, "We'll find out by the convention next year how the seminars respond" and if they don't come into line, further actions could be taken.

Meanwhile, the convention shifted for the evening session to the Houston Astrodome for a vast, colorful evangelistic rally, beamed by satellite to television outlets and to similar rallies in a dozen other cities.

Evangelist Billy Graham, urging a "magnificant obsession" to present the gospel to the whole world by the century's end, said, "Let us get on with this obsession with a new dedication and ferver we have never know before."

A procession of 144 flags of states and nations where the Baptist have missions set the scene for the rally, featuring the commissioning of 1,100 new missionaries and singing of an 8,000-voice choir.

Homeowners Bracing For Reappraisal Notices

The home of Granberry's next door neighbor, developer Reuel Nash, increased in value from $57,530 to $93,020.

Also, nearly half the members of the Board of Equalization which hears complaints of reappraisal inequities are in the areas where values were adjusted.

The valuation increases seem especially steep because of double-digit inflation during the four years since the properties were reappraised, Brooks said.

Brooks said commercial property had increased in value by about 6 to 7 percent a year, while annual residential increases were "about three times that great," he said.

Increases in valuations were greater in older, more affluent areas, Brooks said, because "that's where the demand is."

But that is not the only factor considered when property is reappraised.

George Popham, residential property senior appraiser, said the size of the lot, the age of the house and construction of the house all are used to establish the property's fair market value.

And even though houses look the same on the outside, Popham said, what's on the inside may make a significant difference in the value of the property.

Appraisers include such features as cathedral ceilings, counter-top ranges and dishwashers in their appraisals.

Because of recently-enacted "truth in taxation" legislation, this year's tax notices are "big as a bed sheet," Brooks said.

Although some of the truth may be correct at the moment, much of the information is subject to change.

For the first time, the tax office has calculated the taxes of property owners at the city tax rate ($1.12) and school tax rate ($1.38). The calculation is made both on 1978 property values and on the 1979 value.

However, the city council and school board likely will make some adjustment in the tax rates after learning how much tax revenue will be available in the coming fiscal year.

City taxpayers over the age of 65 can receive a $10,000 homestead exemption and disabled veterans can qualify for a $2,500 to $3,000 additional exemption.

Things are not so simple with school taxes this year, primarily because of tax relief legislation passed by the legislature last month.

Listed on the tax notice is a $3,000 assessed valuation ($5,000 market value) exemption which was authorized by the legislature for all owner-occupied houses. That will not change.

However, those over 65 will receive either $9,000 in exemptions from the school district or $6,000. In prior years the school district has given the elderly a $3,000 exemption listed on the sample tax notice.

The school board may decide to repeal that exemption because the legislature mandated a $6,000 appraised value ($10,000 market value) elderly exemption. The exemption mandated by the legislature is not listed on the tax notices.

The school district offers the same disabled veteran exemption that the city allows, but the legislature is requiring all Texas school districts to give certain disabled persons receiving Social Security payments a $6,000 appraised value ($10,000 market value) exemption.

Taxpayers must render their property at the tax office to receive any of the exemptions, Brooks said. The rendition period ended April 30 for all but the state-mandated disabled exemption, and property can be rendered until July 20 to qualify for that exemption, he said.

Those who think the values set on their property are out of line should contact the appraisal section of the tax office, Brooks said.

If questions remain, the reappraisal can be appealed to the Board of Equalization, which will begin meeting June 27.

Public hearings will be held on business personal property June 27, 28 and 29, with public hearings on residential property scheduled July 5-6 and 9-12.

Commercial property hearings will be July 13 and 16-20.

All hearings will be from 8:30 a.m. to noon and from 1:30 to 5 p.m.

Brooks estimates between 500 and 700 people will ask the board to adjust their property values.

New Fighting Rocks Managua

More Americans Leave; Residents Fleeing; Looting Spreads

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Two planeloads of frightened Americans flew out of this Central American country Wednesday on the second and third U.S. evacuation flights in two days, leaving behind scenes of furious new fighting and mass looting by hungry Nicaraguans.

Government warplanes trying to root out Sandinista guerrillas were rocketing and strafing eastern and southern neighborhoods of this capital city, residents reported as they tried to flee Managua.

In Washington, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance called for a mediation effort by the Organization of American States to settle the conflict between President Anastasio Somoza and the Sandinista National Liberation Front, whose 2-week-old "final offensive" is aimed at ousting the right-wing Somoza government.

"Political Solution" Urged

"We have told President Somoza we believe that a political solution is necessary to resolve the problem," Vance said. Otherwise, he said, "polarization will continue and the chances of a radical solution to the problem are great."

Vance was clearly alluding to fears that communist elements within the Sandinistas would take command if the nationwide revolt is prolonged.

Journalists returning from the northern city of Esteli said national guardsmen were pinned down at two locations in the town. They said the small nearby towns of La Trinidad and San Isidro were held by guerrillas, who had taken a dozen guardsmen prisoner.

Guerrillas Fighting

One female photographer, who asked not to be identified, said guerrillas reported fighting in the northern cities of Sebaco and Matagalpa, and in the southern city of Masaya.

Some Managuans said guerrillas freely roaming the streets of their neighborhoods told them Sandinista commander Eden Pastora was leading an "international brigade" north from the Costa Rican border.

The report could not be confirmed. Somoza has said his national guardsmen crushed a guerrilla forces near the Costa Rican border last week, driving the remnants back into Costa Rica.

Pastora, known as "Commander Zero," led a guerrilla assault on the national legislative building in Managua last August that sparked a nationwide uprising, eventually put down by Somoza's forces.

Conflicting Reports

In the first flight Wednesday, 80 American evacuees were flown to Panama aboard a U.S. Air Force C-130. There were conflicting reports about the number of Americans aboard the second flight later Wednesday. One report said 70 and another 80.

In the first such flight Tuesday, 61 Americans were airlifted to Panama and most left Wednsday morning for Miami.

One American woman who arrived in Panama on Wednesday, and asked not to be identified for fear of endangering family members still in Nicaragua, told reporters: "I am sad for the Nicaraguan people. They are stuck in a war they don't want to get involved in." She and the others were whisked through customs and were making arrangements for flights back to the United States.

At Somoza's Home

The evacuation flights took off from an airstrip at Somoza's seaside home of Montelimar, about 40 miles south of Managua. The fighting has virtually shut down Managua's international airport.

Many of the evacuees were wives and children of U.S. Embassy staff members. An estimated 3,000 Americans were in Nicaragua when the current rebel offensive was launched. U.S. Embassy officials said further evacuation flights were planned.

"We aren't picking anyone up for the flights," an Embassy source said. "They have to get to the embassy themselves. We don't encourage anyone to move if there is danger. Some callers have said they could hear firing near their homes."

The evacuees have been taken to the airstrip in convoys guarded by U.S. Marines assigned to the embassy and Nicaraguan troops.

Refugees continued to stream out of Managua, meanwhile — on foot or jammed aboard any vehicles they could find. One pickup truck held more than 35 persons, many waving white flags.

Many Managuans said they were fleeing to the countryside to escape fighting in their neighborhoods.

Red Cross officials said their 10 relief centers in Managua were packed with more than 15,000 persons.

Many refugees complained they were forced to leave because they have been without water and electricity since last weekend.

On the highway leading north from Managua to its airport, reporters found people looting a large food warehouse, dragging out bags of sugar, coffee, beans, oats, corn and chocolate powder.

"We have to do it to eat!" one woman said as she hoisted a 30-pound bag onto her head.

Other stores along the highway, including a Chinese restaurant, a copying center and a liquor store, also had been looted.

Some people took refuge behind their bags as periodic skirmishing erupted nearby between guardsmen and guerrilla snipers.

At one point, eight youths dashed out onto the road and began prying up paving stones with a six-foot crowbar, working frantically to barricade the roadway. Four national guard jeeps suddenly drove up, and the youths ran off as the soldiers opened fire with automatic weapons. Then the driver of one jeep was hit with gunfire and slumped over, and the guardsmen jumped back into their jeeps and roared off.

The Somoza family has governed Nicaragua for more than 40 years. The Sandinistas have been fighting on and off for a decade to end the Somoza dynasty. Their organization is named after a Nicaraguan rebel who fought the U.S. Marine invasion in 1927-33.

Reports Allege South African Money Given U.S. Politicians

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, confirmed Wednesday FBI agents have questioned him about allegations the South African government funneled large contributions into his 1976 campaign to help him unseat liberal Democrat Sen. Dick Clark.

Other sources said the probe of Jepsen's campaign is only one of a number of preliminary inquiries the Justice Department is conducting into reports the South African government funneled large amounts of money to U.S. politicians.

Sources said the allegations being investigated include:

—A South African newspaper report that some $20,000 was funneled to Jimmy Carter's presidential primary campaign in New York state. Sources said the inquiry to date has traced none of the Carter campaign money to South Africa, and if it did, the money would have been so carefully "laundered" it would be almost impossible to prove Carter knew it came from the Pretoria government.

The Carter inquiry is being handled speedily, because if there is evidence warranting a further investigation, a new law requires Attorney General Griffin Bell to appoint an independent special prosecutor to handle the case.

—Reports South African interests gave Gerald Ford $10,000 for delivering a speech in Houston.

—Reports money was funneled to Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., to help him defeat Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., in 1976. There also have been reports that money may have been passed to other Democrats to help weaken Tunney's reelection campaign. Hayakawa has said publicly that he was unaware of any South African contributions to his campaign, but that the Pretoria government could have laundered large contributions through a number of small contributors without his knowledge.

Campaign financing reports Jepsen has filed with the Federal Election Commission list thousands of dollars in contributions under "miscellaneous" categories.

Jepsen said in a statement Wednesday he was interviewed by two FBI agents last week "concerning foreign money in Iowa campaigns."

"I have invited them to examine any of my records," Jepsen said. "I told them I had no knowledge of any foreign money being involved in any Iowa political campaign at any time. I offered complete cooperation in facilitating their investigation so that it will reach the earliest possible conclusion."

It is illegal for a foreign agent to contribute money to a U.S. political campaign on behalf of his government, and also illegal for a candidate for federal office to accept such a contribution. However, there are no criminal penalties unless the contribution totals $1,000 or more.

IF KENNEDY RUNS...

'I'll Whip His ——,' President Vows

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I'm sure the president must have been misquoted," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said Wednesday. "I think what he meant to say was that he was going to whip inflation."

That's not what others heard the president say — and they say he said it twice:

"If Kennedy runs, I'll whip his——."

Carter's comment to a group of congressmen at a White House dinner earlier this week touched off the latest political flap between the Democratic president and the Democratic senator who insists he won't challenge Carter in 1980 despite polls that indicate Kennedy would win.

At the White House, press secretary Jody Powell said Wednesday he could not confirm that Carter had made the comment, adding that he had not asked the president about it.

But Powell told reporters, "I can confirm, as the president has indicated publicly, that any race he is involved in, he can win and intends to win."

Nonetheless, others in the White House lost no time encouraging the widest circulation of Carter's confident view of his 1980 chances.

Rep. William Brodhead, D-Mich., was the first one to make the Carter quote public. Brodhead said he told a reporter for a Detroit newspaper because he was certain "he (Carter) wanted to get it out."

But when other congressmen who also heard the remark were called by reporters, they refused to comment, at first, on the ground that it was a comment made at a private dinner.

Then, White House congressional liaison Frank Moore called Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., and told him, "Don't be surprised if you get some calls."

Moore explained to Downey that the White House had let reporters know that the New York congressman was one of those who had heard Carter's remark about Kennedy.

Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., said the Carter comment came during a conversation that he and Downey were having with the president.

Some 60 members of Congress were at the White House Monday for a dinner and briefing on legislation to implement the Panama Canal treaties.

The guests were seated 10 to a table and, at one point, Carter joined the table that included Moffett, Downey and Brodhead.

Moffett, who has opposed Carter's plan to lift price controls on domestic oil, said he told the president that the administration's energy policies were hurting him politically in New England.

"I said I'd like nothing better than to see you go into New England in pretty good shape next year," said Moffett.

"He said something about, 'I feel good, I'm ready for 1980,' " the congressman recalled. Then Moffett asked Carter how he felt about 1980 and Kennedy.

The president reportedly replied that "ever since I started running for president, I've been prepared to run against Kennedy . . .

"If Kennedy runs, I'll whip his——."

and price increases in private industry.

Supporters of the increase argued that Carter's guidelines allow an increase of 7 percent in private wages. They said legislators should not bear the brunt of freezing their own wages in the face of rapid inflation.

The original pay raise provision that went to the House floor from the Appropriations Committee would have allowed an increase of up to 7 percent in congressional salaries.

It was accompanied by a rule, issued Tuesday by the Rules Committee, that would have prevented opponents of the hike from killing the increase on the House floor. The rule allowed only a vote on whether the pay raise should be 7 percent or 5.5 percent.

Opponents of the pay hike showed surprising strength in defeating that rule by a 292-126 vote, thereby allowing a vote on the freeze proposal.

The pay raise proposal would have been tied to the annual cost of living increases issued by the president. Under law, the president annually recommends a cost-of-living increase for government workers in an effort to keep federal salaries on a par with those of private workers.

Last year, Congress exempted itself and all officials making more than $47,500 a year from the 5.5 percent pay increase approved by the president.

The Appropriations Committee action would have allowed congressmen and top bureaucrats to receive the 5.5 percent increase, plus another 1.5 percent from the cost-of-living adjustment to be announced later this year.

Supporters of the 7 percent amendment contended the bill was a cap that was necessary to prevent a pay increase going as high as 10 percent or 11 percent.

The supporters said Congress last year did not permanently kill the 5.5 percent increase for congressmen and top officials but only delayed it for one year. If the president recommends another 5.5 percent hike this year, they said, workers could get an 11 percent hike.

But opponents argued that members of Congress should not be giving themselves a pay increase but should set an example at a time the Carter administration is urging industry to keep wage and price hikes to a minimum.

Rep. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, decried the "gall" of Congress in "taking an opportunity to enrich ourselves at the expense of taxpayers."

Grassley said public opinion polls showed the government suffers a lack of credibility. "What we ought to be doing here today is to do those things that will help people have greater respect for the Congress rather than trying to tear down those institutions," he said.

Rep. George M. O'Brien, R-Ill., told the House that "if fiscal restraint is going to be shown, we have to take the lead in cutting spending in government."

House Democratic Leader Jim Wright of Texas said a cost of living increase was needed. He said former Speaker Sam Rayburn once told him, when Congress was considering a pay raise, that a vote against a pay hike was saying "either the job is not important or you're not man enough for the job."

Tech Engineer Studies Cause Of Roof Collapse

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The collapse of the roof of Kemper Arena during a storm last week may have been caused by the "airplane wing effect" of high winds, says an engineering authority.

The winds gusting over the arena may have caused the roof to push up, putting an unnatural strain on steel support beams, Joseph Minor, head of the Institute for Disaster Research at Texas Tech University, said.

Photographer Found Dead In Rhodesia

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe Rhodesia (AP) — An American woman photographer was found dead in her Salisbury apartment Wednesday and police sources said her gunshot wounds apparently were self-inflicted.

Sarah Webb Barrell, 33, originally from New York, was a freelance journalist who specialized in feature photo essays.

Her assignments included work for the French photo agency Sygma and the French newsweekly "Le Point." She was also published widely in photo magazines and newspapers and used by the wire services.

Miss Barrell, a former fashion model, covered conflicts in Lebanon and Indochina and was one of the last Americans to be evacuated from Cambodia.

Senate Avoids Fight On Draft Registration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Threatened with a filibuster, the Senate sidestepped a politically explosive debate on registering young men for the draft and passed a bill Wednesday authorizing $40.1 billion for weapons and military research.

Opponents of registration claimed a victory in the Senate's action. "It demonstrates that (Sen. Sam) Nunn and proponents of the draft cannot ram this down the throat of Congress without a debate," said David Landau, an attorney and leader of the anti-registration movement.

However, the issue will be back on the Senate floor soon, after the House votes on whether to bring back registration. The House vote is expected next month.

Overall, the weapons bill calls for spending $26.5 billion in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 for aircraft, missiles, ships, tanks, torpedoes and other weapons, $13.5 billion for military research and $107 million for civil defense.

At the same time, it risks a veto by ordering President Carter to lift economic sanctions against Zimbabwe Rhodesia. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said a veto is "quite likely" if the Senate provision is in the bill when it reaches Carter's desk.

The legislation, adopted on an 89-7 vote, now goes to the House.

Zimbabwe Rhodesia and draft registration were the only major items of discussion in three days of debate on the bill. There was no attempt to delete $670 million authorized in the bill for the MX mobile missile, as had been expected. However, several senators said the MX money was the reason they voted against the overall bill.

Nunn, a Georgia Democrat and head of the Armed Services manpower subcommittee, had pressed to have a registration provision considered as part of the weapons legislation, or to have a specific time set aside to debate the issue as a separate bill.

Sens. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., and George McGovern, D-S.D., refused to agree to any time limit on debate and said they would offer numerous amendments.

In the end, both sides agreed that registration would not be proposed as part of the weapons bill, but that it would come up again after the House votes on the registration question.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd indicated he would bring the subject up for debate before Senate and House negotiators meet to iron out differences between separate versions of the weapons legislation.

Nunn was guaranteed that the Senate would take up the subject even if the House votes not to reinstate registration, which was stopped by President Ford in 1975. Hatfield persisted in refusing to agree to any time limit on debate.

Nunn's proposal would require all men age 18-26 to sign up, beginning next January, for a possible draft. It would not apply to women. Classification of men as to their eligibility for service would not start until 1981 unless the president said it was necessary sooner.

The president already has the authority to renew registration. Defense Secretary Harold Brown has called for more money for the Selective Service System instead of renewed registration.

The Pentagon's Joint Chiefs of Staff unanimously back renewed registration.

City Council Slates Hearing On Tech Terrace Park

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

At the request of residents around Tech Terrace Park, the Lubbock City Council agreed in April to install barricades to limit the flow of traffic around the park.

However, other residents around the park now are calling on the council to remove the barricades, placed there for a 90-day trial period, saying they are a nuisance and a traffic hazard.

Council members will hear from both sides at the meeting at 9:30 a.m. today in city council chambers, with the Tech Terrace dissussion set for 10:25 a.m.

However, that's not the only hot potato to be dropped in council members' laps at the meeting.

The West Texas Home Builders Association wants the council to waive a portion of the building code which sets the requirements on window sizes in sleeping areas of a residence.

It is unclear exactly what precipitated the builders' request, but the latest version says the council adopted new minimum window sizes in the building code last year.

After numerous citations were issued on wrong-sized windows by the Building Inspection Department, Cecil Turquette, city building administrator, and M.B. Smith, executive director of the home builders association, recommended a catalog number on a window which would meet the code.

However, the window recommended by the pair has only a clear width opening of 16 inches, rather than the required 20 inches.

Following that discovery, inspectors again began red-tagging buildings with the recommended windows.

Last week, the Building Board of Appeals refused to recommend a waiver of change in the code, preferring instead to let any change in the window-size requirements be made when the code is revised in the near future.

The builders would like a waiver of the code until the revisions are made so the existing supply of windows ordered by the suppliers and builders can be used up.

However, the City Attorney has advised the city council it cannot waive a portion of the code, but can only amend the code.

Also on the agenda is consideration of increased fees for party house rentals, recreation programs, library fines and boarding and impoundment of livestock at the city animal shelter.

Library officials propose to increase the maximum fee for an overdue book from 75 cents to $3 and to raise the fine to 50 cents a day for library pictures on loan, up to a maximum fine of $15.

The increased fines, which would go into effect October 1, would generate approximately $3,000 in additional revenue.

Also, the Parks and Recreation Board has recommend a variety of changes in party house rental fees and fees for recreation programs.

The increased rental rates would become effective July 1 and generate an estimated $7,100 annually. The user fees, which are designed to allow the city to recover costs above normal park maintenance required to recreation programs, would generate about $43,000 in revenue.

The increased Animal Shelter fees would place the impoundment fee for large animals like horses and cows at $20 and at $15 for animals like sheep and goats.

Council members will consider a contract with the Chamber of Commerce to assume operation of the Convention and Tourism Bureau so the city could devote its money and efforts to promotion of city facilities like the Civic Center and Municipal Auditorium and Coliseum.

The city would contribute ⅛ of 1 cent of the hotel-motel tax, and not less than $50,000 annually, to the operation of the Convention and Tourism Department. The chamber would agree in the contract to contribute no less than $50,000 to the operations also.

Also at the meeting council members will consider applying for $196,000 in funds from the Texas Department of Community Affiars to begin a Young Adult Conservation Corps Program here.

The funds would allow the city to employ 23 persons for one year to build trails and landscape the south side of Canyon Lake No. 8 east of Quirt Avenue.

With the recent approval of the city's annual Community Development Block Grant application, council members will consider designating $75,600 of the total $3.9 million grant to the Lubbock Housing Authority to begin security patrols at Green Fair Manor and Hub Homes.

Another $80,000 of the funds likely will be authorized for the housing authority to renovate eight units of public housing for the handicapped.

Estes Trial May Begin Immediately

DALLAS (AP) — Attorneys estimate testimony in the fraud trial of paroled West Texas con man Billie Sol Estes will begin Thursday afternoon after jury selection is completed during the morning session.

A total of 26 panelists were picked Wednesday after tedious individual questioning of the 52 prospective jurors. After attorneys agree on 35 potential jurors, they will strike names until a final panel of 12 and two alternates are selected.

Most of those excused Wednesday said they were familiar with Estes' previous fraud conviction and indicated it would prejudice them during their deliberations.

Early in the day, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Rolfe moved to dismiss one of the four indictments returned against Estes on Feb. 22. The dismissed indictment charged the West Texas wheeler dealer with reporting false income figures on his 1975 income tax return.

Standing trial with Estes in Judge Robert Hill's courtroom is Midland businessman Raymond K. Horton. A third defendant, M.L. Copenhaver, last week pleaded guilty to one conspiracy count and Rolfe said prosecutors would move to dismiss the other charges against him.

Rolfe said sentencing for Copenhaver had not yet been set.

Estes and his attorney, G. Brockett Irwin, wore identical blue pinstripe suits to court Tuesday. The portly Abilene swindler apparently has lost weight in recent months and has shucked the trademark horn-rimmed glasses for more subdued metal frames.

His wife, Patsy, and several members of his family sat in the back of the courtroom during Tuesday's jury examination.

Estes and Horton are charged with conspiring to bilk four leasing companies of more than $589,000 by financing oil field steam cleaners that do not exist. According to the indictment, a total of 38 cleaners were bought and sold on paper only through dummy corporatons using money loaned from the legitimate leasing companies.

The scheme outlined by the federal government is almost identical to the one that earned Estes a conviction in the early 1960s when he was convicted of mortgaging non-existent ammonia fertilizer tanks.

Because of his notorious reputation as a flim-flam man, Estes was forbidden from self-employment and from promotional activities when he was paroled in 1971.

The allegations spelled out in the grand jury indictments are not new. Many surfaced in newspaper accounts two years ago, when state and federal agencies began their investigations of Estes and his associates.

As part of a plea bargain last October, Estes pleaded guilty to conspiracy to conceal assets from the IRS and plotting to defraud investors.

Foreign DC-10 Certification Said Unlikely At Present

WASHINGTON (AP) — A State Department official said Wednesday it would be "very difficult" for foreign DC-10 passenger planes to get permission to fly into the United States before all the planes are allowed to fly again.

Thomas Niles, director of the office of Central European affairs, told reporters:

"I know the Western European carriers are all pushing for a recertification of the DC-10-30. I frankly don't think it's going to happen."

The DC-10-30 is a more recent model of the big plane, owned by many non-American airlines. It has not been in service as long as the DC-10-10 and inspectors have not reported similar cracks in the engine mounts that may have led to the biggest air disaster in U.S. history on May 25, when 275 persons were killed.

All DC-10s in the United States have been grounded. Any non-American DC-10 that landed at a U.S. airport would not be permitted to take off again, U.S. officials explained. There was no indication of how long the ban would last. If a defect is found in the design of an important part, it could take months to rectify.

DC-10s also have been grounded in Europe. An effort is being made to get them back into service by next Tuesday.

Niles said:

"I think we understand that it's a serious problem for Lufthansa, Sabena, Swissair, Air Inter and all the other companies that have DC-10s."

Four Bodies Recovered From Air Crash

GRANGEVILLE, Idaho (AP) — The bodies of four victims of the crash of a U.S. Forest Service DC-3 were recovered Wednesday from the Selway River Wednesday, about two miles downstream from the crash site, a Forest Service spokesman said.

Nez Perce National Forest spokesman Steve Waterman in Grangeville said all four bodies were found in the river near Ballinger Creek, about two miles from the spot where the plane plunged into the north-central Idaho river Monday with 12 persons on board. Three bodies were found in the early afternoon, the fourth about two hours later.

He said the bodies were taken to a base camp at Race Creek, where Idaho County Sheriff Bud Walkup and County Coroner Kathy Gibbs would examine them before they would be taken to the town of Cottonwood.

Three persons escaped from the rear of the plane Monday when it plunged into the river, but one died later on shore. A dog with a broken leg was the only survivor found Tuesday.

"We presume at least some of the missing bodies are still strapped (in their seats) to parts of the plane," said Forest Service spokesman Ed Laven. "We're still hoping to find survivors, but it's getting pretty doubtful."

Lee Dubay, an inspector for the Federal Aviation Administration, said debris and personal effects were "spread out down the river for 10 or 20 miles."

Dubay said a small portion of the passenger section side paneling was lodged in the Wolf Creek Rapids area about 10 miles above Selway Falls. The main section, with the cabin and the passenger section, in which seats were attached to the floor, has not been found, he said.

The DC-3, carrying the Forest Service employees to a wilderness school at Moose Creek Ranger Station, about 10 miles from the crash, caught fire, lost an engine, hit a tree and apparently cartwheeled before nosing into the river and breaking apart, Dubay and Laven said.

Neither engine has been found. Dubay said he cannot be sure which engine fell off before the crash, although one survivor had said the left engine died and the right engine blew up.

A rafter riding down the river after the crash slammed into a propeller sticking out of the water, apparently knocking an engine lose and letting it sink, Dubay said.

He said searchers have not been able to get a close look at the wings. The tail section was lodged in rocks in the Wolf creek Rapids.

The only survivor found Tuesday was the dog belonging to passenger Catherine Hodgin, 25, of Eugene, Ore. It was flown to a veterinarian.

Bryant Stringham, 17, of Cottonwood, Idaho, and his dog escaped from the wreckage and made it to a ranger station. Charles Dietz, 26, of Stites, Idaho, and Republic, Kan., suffered leg and arm injuries and shock. Robert A. Taylor, 59, Whitebird, Idaho, died shortly after the plane went down.

Little Chance Exists Of Outsmarting Photo Contest Judges

At the close of every final judging of the Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards (KINSA), one of the judges usually recommends starting all over again.

Judging photos is a very subjective business. Most judges agree that a different group of five judges would probably pick different winners — or, at least, put the winners in different order. What's more, most judges feel even they might make different choices on different days.

What chance does an amateur photographer have of outsmarting or second-guessing the judges of KINSA '79? Probably none at all. Luck, fashion, news and, let's face it, the field of entries, all will figure in the choice ofwinners. But so will some unchanging facts of judging.

The way to a judge's heart — remember all KINSA judges are professionals who see and sometimes take hundreds, even thousands, of images each week — is always "through the lens." As one KINSA '78 judge admitted, "Make me say, 'Gee, I wish I'd taken that' or 'That's what I would have done,' and you've probably got a first-prize winner."

Selecting winners is a lot like selecting subjects. In effect, judges look through your lens or viewfinders with you. Sometimes, they see an opportunity you missed. Other times, they see something they've seen too often in books, magazines and exhibits. Still other times, they see something they feel they might have missed in the same situation. Show them something new, and you've got 'em.

Originality quickly stands out. Impact gets the second look. And if judges find something more to like about a picture that's captured their attention in the first place, that picture is well on its way to a top travel prize.

Some of the qualities that give a photo staying power during judging include: an appealing subject, a cohesive and uncluttered composition, a telling detail (something that proves the candidness of the situation), contrast (in tone and/or subject matter), unusual or especially dramatic lighting, action or viewpoint. Judges, in general, seem to prefer snapshots that "say something" to strictly pretty pictures. But don't count prettiness out; it's been known to figure heavily in top, especially color, winners.

All photos that reach the finals are judged, according to the rules, on the basis of "general interest and appeal." Technical photographic quality, while important, is not the deciding factor. Judges generally choose sharp pictures over slightly fuzzy ones simply because they've come to expect sharpness in the images they see. By the same token, a photo that has been cropped to eliminate extraneous background and to emphasize the subject may have a better chance of winning than its original full-frame image. (Since judges also have the option to crop, and cropping like picture-taking and judging is quite subjective, "may have" should be emphasized here).

Whether it's black-and-white or color, a good picture has certain basic ingredients, judges agree. A strong center of interest is one; readability is another. A good picture can be the result of following the rules of basic photography to the letter — or of breaking those rules in a way that somehow makes your picture refreshing. Taking more than one view of a subject can help you find interesting angles and approaches. Judges talk about "living with" a picture, wanting to "take it home" and "hang it on a wall." They seem to look for a range of gray tones in black-and-white pictures and an effective, often subtle, combination of color entries, Color not for the sake of color but for the sake of the scene or subject is one rule of thumb.

AERIAL PHOTOGRAPHY — Larry R. Laws of Lincoln, Neb., combined his interests in skydiving and photography to produce this unusual shot, which impressed the judges in the 1978 Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards. It won a $500 Honor Award.

FEEDING PIGEONS — Judges in the 1978 Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards found this picture of a small boy feeding popcorn to pigeons in a Boston park in the midst of a snowstorm very appealing. In fact, they liked it so much that they gave the color photo one of the 10 $500 Honor Awards. It was taken by D. Michael Skolnik, a Houston salesman.

When the chips are down, however, and judges must decide which photos will get $100, which $500 and which, the top travel awards, it's the pictures that make them respond as human beings — the pictures that make them think, remember, appreciate, perhaps even smile — that get the nod. The response might be compared to the one you experience when first you see a winning subject through your camera viewfinder and then you picture it — through your lens!

The Avalanche-Journal is accepting entries in the Kodak contest through July 14. Weekly winners will receive parchment certificates and their entries will be forwarded to Kodak for the international competition. Cash awards also will be given to the finalists by the A-J. The first week's winners will be announced Sunday.

Lozano Civil Rights Decision Expected

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

After more than a year of review, the U.S. Department of Justice is expected to issue a decision on whether federal charges will be filed in the Jan. 22, 1978, death of inmate Larry Lozano in the Ector County Jail.

John Wilson, Justice Department public information officer in charge of the Lozano probe, said a fourth medical opinion had been received and the case reviewed "on all levels." A legal opinion on whether Lozano's civil rights were violated will be announced before a Midland federal grand jury convenes early next month.

Wilson had earlier said the Justice Department investigators asked for a fourth medical opinion after reviewing the transcripts of the July 1978 grand jury probe in Midland.

Wilson, who said the fourth pathologist's report has been received and reviewed, would not say who the doctor was or whether he conducted an actual autopsy on Lozano's body or based his opinion on previous autopsy reports.

The three previous pathology reports were crucial evidence in both the federal grand jury and separate state grand jury probes. All three reports agreed on the cause of death (suffocation due to a crushed larnyx), but two of the three opinions differed as to how the fatal injury occurred.

Dr. Frederick Bornstein of El Paso, who was retained by the Lozano family, said "the mode of death was homicide" while Harris County Medical Examiner Joseph A. Jachimzcyk said Lozano's death was "accidental, unintentional." He said it was caused by "some kind of physical force exerted to the throat."

When Lozano died after apparently struggling with several Ector County deputies outside his padded cell on the second floor of the jail, Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught told investigators the inmate apparently killed himself by pounding his head against the one-inch thick glass pane of his cell.

After several of Lozano's cellmates claimed that he may have been beaten to death, several state and federal agencies began investigations, including the Texas Rangers, the FBI, the state attorney general's office, Ector County District Attorney's Office and the Justice Department.

A coroner's jury at a subsequent April 1978 inquest ruled the death accidental and the Mexican-American community of Texas staged protests, demanding indictments be brought against all those connected with Lozano's arrest, incarceration and death.

In July, the federal grand jury in Midland and a state grand jury in Odessa recessed without taking action.

U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd, who presented the case to the Midland panel, said at the time the case would be referred to the Justice Department for further consideration.

Seeking the fourth medical opinion was the only new development in almost a year, and the Justice Department is maintaining silence on all other issues related to the case.

Indonesian Floods Kill At Least 13 Persons

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — At least 13 persons were reported dead after floods hit the east Kalimantan city of Balikapan Wednesday following several days of heavy rain. Six thousand persons were reported evacuated.

Flood waters inundated several villages near the city, rising to more than 13 feet in Kampung Damai.

The Balikapan Air Base was closed, and all land communication with the city was cut off a report said.

It said scores of flood victims were hospitalized and bodies of children and old people were discovered beneath the debris of houses destroyed in the flood.

TOM T. HALL

CHARLY McCLAIN

Hall, McClain To Perform At Fair

"Storyteller" Tom T. Hall, along with Charly McClain, who was runnerup for Country Music Magazine's Bullet Award for best female vocalist this year, will be appearing at the 62nd annual Panhandle South Plains Fair.

The popular Hall, who has approximately 20 LPs out and who has had at least a dozen No. 1 singles over the years, will bring his show to the Fair Park Coliseum stage at 8 p.m. only Sept. 28, according to general manager Steve L. Lewis.

The eight-day fair run is scheduled Sept. 22-29.

Not only is Hall a top country singer, he has penned numerous hits, including "Harper Valley PTA," which sold more than a million records. At one time, Hall's songs for others occupied as many as six spots on the country charts.

Some of his other notable hits included "The Year Clayton Delaney Died," "Old Dogs, Children and Watermelon Wine," "I Love," "Sneaky Snake," "Your Old Man Loves You Honey" and "Country Is."

Miss McClain is establishing herself as a rising star. She lost the "best female vocalist" award to Janie Fricke this year but also was nominated by the Academy of Country Music as the best new female artist."

Lewis also said that a "special" show had been arranged at 7 p.m. on Sept. 27 — "The Golden Years of Country Music — to be presented by South Plains College and featuring special pre-show appearances by area artists. John Hartin and Eddie Trice of SPC will produce the show.

The two-year community college at Levelland, with a branch in Lubbock, has taken the lead in the country-bluegrass music education field. It is one of the few places in the nation where aspiring musicians can study a two-year program devoted to country-bluegrass.

The show's dozen performers come from the college country bluegrass and speech-drama departments, either as faculty — or students.

A three-hour show is planned, Lewis said.

Other shows previously announced included:

— The Charley Pride Show, 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sept. 23.

— The Statler Brothers Show, with special guest Barbara Mandrell, 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sept. 24.

— The Eddie Rabbit Show, with Janie Frick, 8 p.m. only Sept. 25;

— The Dave and Sugar Show, with John Conlee, 8 p.m. only Sept. 26; and

A free fiddlers' contest on Sept. 22 will help launch the fair run.

Seats for all shows, except the fiddlers' contest, are reserved. Ticket prices for the SPC production at $2 -$3, but all other tickets are $4, $5 and $6.

Tickets may be reserved now by writing the fair association PO Box 208, Lubbock, Texas 79408. However, tickets will not be mailed until they become available in mid-August. At that time, they also will go on sale at the coliseum box office and at five other locations.

Art Exhibit Starts Nationwide Tour

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-eight paintings and sculptures by artists from Alaska to New Mexico are being shown in Washington on the start of a nationwide tour.

Church Speaker Likes Grandfather Role

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

"The image of a grandfather is changing," said Hassler Strickland, himself a grandfather and speaker on the contemporary role of grandfathers for the "Fathering in Today"s World" Seminar this weekend at First Baptist Church.

"'You probably would find grandfathers — and grandmothers too — barreling down the highway in sports cars; but surely not sitting around in an old rocking chair."

Strickland is a good example of the lively lifestyle he cites as characterisitic of today's grandfathers. Now retired after 39 years of service with the Social Security Administration, he is a full-time student at Texas Tech University where he is working on a master's degree in education and preparing for a new career in marriage and family counseling. He is serving as the first intern in the Family Life Ministry Department of First Baptist Church as part of his practicum for his degree work.

Establishing a style of being a grandfather takes thought and work, just as does any other role in the family, he said. He attributes his own style of relating to his children and grandchildren to lessons learned from the way he was treated by his father-in-law. This way he characterizes as " non-interfering."

"You've got to let your kids make their own miistakes," he said. Refraining from telling your children how you think they ought to raise their children is especially important.

Other "grandfather traps," as he calls them, include not trying to buy the affection of your grandchildren with gifts and not letting your children assume you are there to babysit all the time.

An important function of a grandfather, he said, is to serve as an "umbilical cord to the past and future." He explains that by this expression he does not mean that the older generation ought to dwell on the past, but " work it in very carefully so that the younger generations have an appreciation for our vast history."

"We have lived through so many changes in our lifetimes, those of us who are now grandparents. The best thing we can pass on to others is the way to cope with change which we have learned from experiencing so many."

The disbursement of the traditional nuclear family is one modern development which Strickland sees as changing the way generations relate to each other. Part of his family is here in Lubbock and another part lives away from here, so he has a basis for comparison. "You relate differently to those you can see frequently. Letters and pictures are so important to those living at a distance."

He also said grandparents relate on different levels to children of different ages. "Teenagers would like you to show up for some of their activities, while very young children appreciate it it if you do something on their interest level with them like play catch,'" he asid.

The seminar at First Baptist Church will deal with all kinds of roles related to fathers and the family.

The program begins with registration at 6:30 p.m. Friday. Saturday's sessions open with a continental breakfast at 8:30 a.m. Charge for the two-day meeting is $5. The meeting is open to the public and reservations can be made by calling the church.

Father's Day Fare Features Beef

(Special) — Father's Day has certainly grown into one of our country's most cherished traditions since the idea was first conceived by a Spokane, Wash. woman almost 70 years ago.

While attempts had often been made to secure recognition for fathers, it wasn't until Calvin Coolidge recommended a national observance day in 1924 that Father's Day emerged. Its position among national holidays was confirmed by the signing of a Father's Day bill by Richard Nixon in 1972.

The tradition of serving beef for Father's Day has had a similiar rise to national recognition. It began in 1953 when Mrs. Thomas C. Currier of Grand Junction, Colo. urged the Plateau Valley CowBelles to begin promoting beef as an ideal Father's Day dish.

In 1955, the CowBelles (the women's auxiliary of the National Cattlemen's Association) extended their Beef for Father's Day program nationally and in 1962 joined efforts with the National Live Stock and Meat Board's Beef Industry Council.

Together, the two groups work with retailers and the various national and local cattlemen's organizations to establish good-tasting, nutritious beef as the food to serve dad on his special day. In fact, beef has been endorsed as the official Father's Day entree by the Father's Day Council.

This year the CowBelles' effort is spearheaded by Mrs. Ruth Ball of Amarillo and she says beef for Father's Day makes sense for so many good reasons.

"Beef is the right meat for so many sound reasons, and good taste is but one," she said. "Besides, being a versatile food, beef is also one of the most complete nutrition 'packages' in nature. It includes high quality protein, essential minerals and vitamins like iron and vitamin B-12. It tastes good and it's good for you. That's important to people today."

The Ball family plans to carry out a Father's Day tradition with a backyard barbecue featuring Texas-size steaks in dad's honor.

"This makes Father's Day a special day for everyone," Mrs. Ball added.

Clip 'n' Cook

APPLE—SAUSAGE CURRY

1 lb. pork link sausages
1 cup water
1 10½-oz. can chicken-rice soup
1 cup milk
2 tbsps. cornstarch
1 tsp. curry powder
2 tbsps. water
¼ tsp. sugar
3 apples*, cored, pared and cut into chunks

Heat skillet to 350 degrees and brown sausage, pouring off fat as it accumulates. Add water, return to simmer and blend in chicken soup. When soup begins to bubble, reduce heat and simmer, covered, about 5 minutes. Combine cold milk with cornstarch, curry powder, water and sugar to form a thin paste. Stir into soup mixture and bring to a boil. Add apple chunks and simmer, covered, about 5 to 10 minutes or until tender. Serve over crusty French bread, steamed rice or English muffins. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

(*Preferred varieties: Washington, Jonathan or Golden Delicious)

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: You've printed several letters from women who have been jilted. All the anger and bitterness and heartache comes through. Why is it that you rarely print a letter from a man who has been dumped?

When I was in Korea a lot of men in my combat unit got "Dear John" letters from their girls back home. It was terrible. They would break down and cry — then soon after, volunteer for every hazardous mission — hoping for death. Ask any chaplain.

The "Dear Johns" were very similar: "I met the nicest guy and I'm going to marry him. I can't risk the chance of losing you both if you don't make it home."

The women in your reading audience should know that the road is just as long and hard on the other side. — Tough Stuff In Lafayette, Indiana

Dear Stuff: I'm sure it is. Thanks for your poignant example.

In answer to your question — why do I print so many letters from women who have been dumped and so few from men? Because the women who write about this shattering experience outnumber the men at least 20 to one.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you'll be big enough to print this letter and admit you were wrong.

A reader asked if the handle, "Good Buddy," was code for "I'm gay. Are you?" You replied, "Absolutely not." Why didn't you take the trouble to check with someone who is into the current jargon? Your answer is at least two years old.

I'm a trucker's wife and have been a C.B.er since 1975. About two years ago the truckers got fed up with rookie C.B.ers coming onto their business channel and showing how cool they were by using C.B. slang right out of the commercial handbooks — so they changed the meaning of the most overused terms to weed out the yokels.

If "Over And Out" had told the trucker he was a new C.B.er, I'll bet the trucker would have leveled with him. — Mountain Dew — 10-10 And Listening

Dear 10-10: Would you believe over 1,000 letters — and they're still coming in from Maine to California.

So the word to all you straight C.B.ers who are new on the scene is forget "Good Buddy." Like many other bits of language — it's taken on a different meaning.

• • •

Dear Ann: My wife is pregnant. We just got the good news and I'm walking on air. But it's not all peaches and cream. We are having a terrific argument and would like you to settle it.

I read somewhere that pregnant women should not smoke because it could be harmful to the baby.

My wife says this is a lot of horseradish. She claims once conceived, the fetus is so well protected by the water bag, nothing can get to it. Is she right or wrong? — Worried On Cloud Nine

Dear Worried: She's wrong. Several studies have proven that babies born to mothers who smoke heavily during pregnancy are often smaller than normal and sometimes underdeveloped. They could also be stillborn. Babies DO absorb nicotine before birth and the result could be a child with lifelong respiratory problems. Talk about a guilt trip — this could be the worst.

Cooking time for vegetables can be lengthened by leaving them whole, or shortened by slicing or dicing them.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

This is a suggestion I gave my daughter-in-law to help her and her family.

She works until 6 p.m. so my son picks up the two children in the evenings from the sitter.

As the children eat early lunches, they are quite hungry by the time they get home.

I suggested that their mother keep homemade TV-type meals in the refrigerator for my son to put into the oven for about five minutes to warm.

This way the children can eat immediately instead of filling up on cookies and chips.

When preparing meals, fix a tray or two for the freezer to be used later. Then each morning, before leaving for work, set the needed number in the refrigerator to thaw.

Now the baby's not hungry and crying the whole time Mom is preparing supper. Mom's nerves are calm — and even Dad can read the paper in peace. — Irene Garland.

Your daughter-in-law must love you for this one! Seems like everyone's nerves are jangled at the end of the day and anything to help settle the mood is worth the effort.

Thanks, Irene. — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

My husband came up with a wonderful fix-it hint which he told me to send to you.

We had a small hole in our plastic screen and now that the bug season is here, I asked him to please mend it.

He had cut a small piece of patch from some screening that we had on hand so I figured I would be darning it into position.

Later I noticed there wasn't a patch on the screen but the hole was mended.

He had used some plastic glue and just lightly spread it over the hole sealing it.

So the credit for this tip goes to Mr. D. Someday I will send one of my own. — Elizabeth Ducale

Tell Mr. D. thanks for wanting to share his hint with us and thank you, Elizabeth, for sending it in.

We'll be waiting for your own inspiration. — Heloise

• • •

DEAR HEOISE:

Here is one of my favorite "inflation-fighter" tips...

Before wearing purchased garments, especially children's, machine stitch stress seams and resew all buttons with the strongest thread you can find. — Grace E. Clark

DEAR HELOISE:

Do you know how hard it is to put a nice, even narrow hem into a silk or very sheer scarf, or the edge of an unlined jacket or cape?

The professionals call it a rolled hem. Well, I've found an easy way with no stretching of the material at all.

I cut strips of fusible webbing (available in fabric shops) to the desired width and fold it in half. Placing the strip on the edge of my garment, as if I were going to bind it, I machine-baste it around the edge.

Then placing my garment on the ironing board, I turn the edge of the scarf or jacket over twice, pinning it to the padding of the ironing board as I have room.

Using my steam iron I press the seam, fusing it together, unpinning as I go.

So very simple and such a breeze to do. — Mrs. Jerry Lamb.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: My son, who is now six months old, was born with a — I don't know the correct spelling, but I will try — "hypo-spade-eous." The hole for the penis is not at the tip but below it. The hospital doctor sent me to a pediatric surgeon when the boy was six days old. He looked at it and told me to come back in about a year, and that it would take three or four operations. What do you know about this? Is this common? — C.W.

Quite common. Some degree of hypospadias (congratulations on your phonetic spelling) occurs once in about every 44 male births. The urethra (urine conduit) may outlet anywhere, from near the end of the penis to further down and underneath. In some cases the rent (which is what "spadias" means) may be minor and cause no serious problem. The urine stream is simply downward instead of ahead. The further down the shaft (toward the body), the more serious it is, both physically and psychologically.

Surgery to correct it must be done in several stages and this is usually begun after the first year. If the defect is very near the normal opening, only one operation may be needed. Results are usually quite good. Circumcision has to be delayed or avoided entirely for children born with the defect.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have been having constipation recently. I haven't had any change in diet and have always tried to get enough fibrous foods. What really worries me is the presence of mucus when I have a B.M. There is no blood or pain. What could be the cause? — S.K.

The schedule of bowel elimination is an individual matter. That is, when a person develops "rhythm" it is usually pretty well set for life. If a change occurs for no obvious reason (like a change of diet), the doctor would want to know why, and so should you. An examination is in order.

You tell me little in your letter, except that you have mucus. This might mean only an irritable bowel, but it can also signal more serious conditions — polyps or tumors, for example. I do not want to frighten you with medical ghosts, but I do want to impress upon you the importance of reporting such change in bowel behavior.

You may have developed an intolerance to certain foods — milk, for example. Mucus would be part of that picture. Many medicines can cause constipation — tranquilizers or any drug that tends to slow down bodily functions. Some find it difficult to imagine how such a thing as low thyroid activity can play a role in constipation, but it can. You may find other tips on this problem in my booklet "You Can Stop Constipation." For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: If you take antihistamines for a long time, do you become immune to them? I mean can they become less effective or bother one? If so, are there other antihistamines one might use? I have allergies all year around so I really need them. — Mrs. H.V.S.

There should be no lessening of effect with continued use. An allergy can wax and wane, and when it becomes worse an antihistamine might seem less effective. There are so many antihistamine products on the market that people do tend to switch from one to another. It is even possible for a person to be allergic to one and not to another brand. One symptom would be a skin rash. If you were using another antihistamine product that seemed to work better for you, return to it.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Can one have shingles without having the blisters? — H.S.

Yes. The common sign is multiple small fluid-filled beads of blisters, often around the waist. There may be just areas of reddening in cases where the blister stages do not develop.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: What are bile salts and what are they taken for? — K.F.

Bile, as you may know, is a complex fluid produced in the liver and stored in the gall bladder. It is released via the bile duct as needed for digestion in the small intestine. It is especially helpful in digestion of fats. It's a bitter tasting substance. Bile salt medicine is derived from the bile of cattle. It was once thought helpful in increasing alkalinity in a digestive system that is over-acid. A healthy liver produces adequate bile salts, so supplements are not needed. The salts may help in some forms of constipation.

• • •

CONFIDENTIAL TO MRS. A.F.L. — Cortisone is effective in reducing the joint inflammation of rheumatoid arthritis, but that doesn't mean it should be used by everyone who has that problem. The article you mention discussed the problem of a woman who had to take cortisone drugs for life. She did not have arthritis. For her, it was necessary. Your doctor feels that cortisone at this point would be heavy artillery for you. He is probably correct. Other anti-arthritis drugs are all you need at present. When possible, cortisone is avoided because of side effects and the difficulty in withdrawal from it. Take your physician's word for this.

• • •

Arthritis sufferers can be helped. For a copy of the booklet, "How You Can Control Arthritis," which discusses many types of arthritis and related joint diseases as well as effeotive treatments and medications, write to Dr. Ruble, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK — How soon they forget and how soon they are forgiven their trespasses.

Peter Simon departed his long-running role of Scott Phillips on "Search For Tomorrow" about two years ago. Last fall, his wife, Courtney Sherman, who portrayed his screen wife Kathy Phillips, also left "Search." Simon's exit was marked with recriminations about frustration with the silly dialogue and maudlin scripts that are all too common in soap operaland. Mr. and Mrs. Simon have lectured at Smith College's Department of Theatre about their experiences on a soap. Their harsh criticism of the medium resulted in a newspaper headline tht read, "Soap Operas ... You don't have to like them to star in them." That should give you an inkling of what the pair reported.

Writers change and, apparently, so do actors, since Simon has joined "As the World Turns" as Dana's much-talked-about husband, musical wizard Ian McFarland. Soaps do pay big bucks, after all, and sour grapes can be thrown aside by those in the business as well as anyone else. Don't it all make one proud?

SHORT TAKES:

WHEN "As the World Turns" talks about its really fine performers, it need look no further than Larry Bryggman (John Dixon). Larry, too, has been known to moan about general soap opera quality, but that has never diminished his grand performances on "ATWT." Currently, he's costarring with Al Pacino in "Richard III" on Broadway.

CBS HAS ANNOUNCED plans to expand "The Young and The Restless" to an hour format sometime in "the near future." Talk about loss of quality. If anything kills soap operas, it will be this increasing madness to overstretch a medium that is better done on a smaller scale, with a more intimate group of characters, and in half the storytelling time.

TOM O'ROURKE (Justin Marler on "Guiding Light") is off for a week's vacation in Greece, where he joined his wife who's on a modeling assignment.

JOINING "All My Children" are James Mitchell and Linda Miller as Palmer Cortlandt and his daughter Mimi. The Cortlandts are described as a wealthy clan who will provide tooth-and-nail conflict for several Pine Valley residents.

AN ENGAGEMENT AND a pregnancy to announce: Karen Ann Morris (Faith Desmond on "Ryan's Hope") is engaged to Curt Gowdy Jr., sone of the famous CBS sports commentator, who works for the ABC sports department. And Rita Walter (Carol Stallings on "ATWT") is bubbling happy that she and hubbie Norman are expecting their first-born in October. As plans stand now, Rita will be shown on "ATWT" in poses that won't reveal her approaching motherhood, since her character isn't pregnent.

WHEN VELEKA Gray (Mia Marriott on "Love of Life") vacationed in Egypt last winter, she was interviewed for a magazine article and visited the set of the country's only soap opera production. She made so many pals around the pyramids that she recently hostessed a bash for Egyptian performers who were visiting the states.

THE MAILBAG:

Did I miss some episodes on "Days of Our Lives"? Is Linda faking amnesia? — J.L., Lumberton, Tex.

Only Linda knows for sure and to what extent. But a few recent episodes have depicted that Linda remembers more about her past then she is letting on to anyone. She's hanging onto her amnesia "cover" for reasons that have to do with the usual schemes she hatches.

(Send your questions about soap operas to "Tune In Tomorrow," 220 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Questions cannot be answered personally, but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.)

West's two-club bid was a Michaels' cue bid designed to show both major suits and little else. This nuisance bid backfired. First, it got North and South to seven clubs. Left to themselves they might well have stopped at six. Then, it told South how to play the hand.

He ruffed a heart in dummy at trick two, came to his hand with a trump and stopped to plan how to continue against all four trumps in the East hand.

He couldn't ruff out the last two little hearts. He would run out of his own trumps before East ran out. He could not cash the spade and diamond winners and then cross ruff. East would almost surely ruff the second spade.

There was another way to handle his problems. A spade-heart squeeze against West.

So he ruffed a second heart. Then he cashed dummy's ace and king of diamonds to discard one spade. Led and overtook dummy's last trump. Ran the rest of his trumps to come down to a three-card ending.

Dummy held A-K-8 of spades. Declarer held 7-5 of spades and the 10 of hearts. West could not keep three spades and a heart and just gave up.

Lubbock United Way Provides Funding To 34 Area Agencies

There's a good deal more to the United Way than meets the eye.

Despite the overwhelming media appeals for funds and famous personalities asking for contributions, the United Way is more than just a charitable collections agency.

The Lubbock chapter of the United Way provides funding for 34 help agencies, and next year will filter more than $1.8 million through various aid programs designed to help disadvantaged Lubbock County residents.

The Budget Division now is in the final stages of a four-month process to decide how big a piece of the United Way pie each agency will receive.

According to 1979 figures, the five local agencies which receive the biggest slices of the pie include the Boy Scouts, American Red Cross, Salvation Army, Well Baby Clinic and the Caprock Council of the Girl Scouts.

United Way officials are expected to announce their goal for this year's campaign June 20.

Budget Divison Chairman Tom Locke, senior vice president at Lubbock National Bank, said the United Way campaigners later this year will be asking for more than $1.8 million from Lubbock County citizens.

Locke, vice chairman Reid Warner of Mason, Nickels & Warner and four committees composed of six members each have been involved in intensive budget review sessions of each member agency since early April.

Locke says the United Way keeps a close eye on the financial dealings of each agency, periodically reviewing its books to make sure it stays within its budget.

Each United Way agency must submit a detailed budget request form in early April, showing a line-by-line inventory of expenses and income, including funds received from other sources.

When the agency's budget request is reviewed, its books audited and its overall financial situation thoroughly critiqued by the Budget Division committee, the board will meet with executives from each agency and discuss recommendations.

After the agency and Budget Division finish discussing the agency's budget request, the United Way board of directors will receive a recommendation from the Budget Division and make the final decision of this fall's goal.

Locke admits it's not easy to tell the agencies supported by the United Way that there isn't enough money to meet their total request.

"The hardest part is trying to justify their needs according to the amount of money they have," he said. "Of course, every agency could use a lot more money than they're getting (from the United Way). But there just isn't that much to go around."

Locke said all 34 agencies are asking for more money this year, citing inflation as the main reason for the higher requests.

"We have given most of the agencies a fair increase in their allotment for next year," he said, adding that the Budget Division has tried to see that salary increases stay within President Carter's voluntary guidelines of seven percent.

The United Way of Lubbock practices a pre-campaign budgeting procedure. Locke says the reasons for deciding on agency allocations before announcing the goal is the best way to control agency expenditures.

"We know exactly how many people each agency is helping and we know how much their people's salaries are," Locke said, pointing out that the United Way keeps a reserve fund available for agencies which might need emergency funds during the course of the year.

He said all the agencies do a good job of staying within their budgets but that the United Way will give them additional funds for worthwhile building projects or capital improvement plans.

All agencies are funded on a deficit basis, Locke says, which means they receive only enough money from the United Way to meet expenses. Agencies that receive funds from other sources, such as federal or state welfare programs, will have to submit those amounts to the United Way. Those agencies will receive only enough money to meet the projected expenses subtracted from their projected income.

we're introducing the very closest thing to a diamond. our cubic zirconia vs. diamonds compare and marvel at the facts.

The cubic zirconia glitters and sparkles like a diamond, but only an expert can tell the difference. Our 'space age' diamonds are the solution when the real thing is out of view. Our cubic z is the most realistic looking diamond fake on the market. It's brilliant, flawless! The most detection defying, diamond like jewel ever created by man without the expensive price. From June 15th to the 23rd, view our dazzling pseudogems set in 14k gold. Diamonds are the most valuable gem stones in all the world. They are the hardest substance known to man, keeping their color and brilliance forever. Color, clarity, carat and cut determines the diamonds price. The diamond can demand as much as $25,000 a carat. Our magnificent cubic zirconia requires special equipment to tell the difference. The cubic zirconia is heavier than a real diamond, almost as hard and probally more brilliant. Ours are closer to perfect than a real diamond due to the controlled atmosphere in which they are created. Those are all the facts. The biggest difference between the two? The cost. YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JUNE 14, 1979

PHYSICAL
Critical: 6, 18, 29, 41, 52, 64, 75 ... A negligent day
Highs: 1-5, 19-28, 42-51, 65-74 ... Physically you're on top
Lows: 7-17, 30-40, 53-63 ... Moments of unsteadiness

EMOTIONAL
Critical: 12, 26, 40, 54, 68, 82 ... Easily provoked
Highs: 13-25, 41-53, 69-81 ... Positive day emotionally
Lows: 1-11, 27-39, 55-67, 83-95 ... Moderation will be helpful

INTELLECTUAL
Critical: 9, 25, 42, 58, 75, 91 ... Be alert to danger
Highs: 10-24, 43-57, 76-90 ... Everything's clear
Lows: 1-8, 26-41, 59-74, 92-95 ... Avoid decision making

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Denial Of Health Permit To Spark Court Battle

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A courtroom battle appears imminent between the Lubbock Health Department and a local meat market. The two sides remained locked in dispute Wednesday over the findings of a weekend plant inspection.

A clearly visible "Yes! We're Open" sign hung from the door of the Discount Meat Center at 4116 Ave. Q this morning, and inside business was bustling despite the refusal of the health department to renew the meat market's health permit following a Saturday inspection.

The health department issued a written notice to the market Tuesday, specifying a period of time to comply with health ordinances or face court action, Dr. Marjorie Orr, director of the department, said today.

"Unfortunately, it will take 10 days (period of compliance)," she said. "We have to give them a notice, which we did yesterday (Tuesday). And the notice said that if they had not met state health statutes in 10 days, the city attorney will take action."

Discount Meat Center proprietor Floyd Umsted said this morning he intends to keep the business open and will contest the charges of the health department.

"We're going to court," he said. "We're contesting that they were wrong in everything they said."

Umsted said he had not received a written notice from the health department, but added that he had already hired an attorney for court action.

Assistant City of Lubbock attorney Donald Vandiver this morning said the city attorney's office had received Tuesday a copy of the written notice to Discount Meat Center.

He said that if the business does not comply with state health standards in the allotted 10 days, the city attorney will likely file a lawsuit for injunction, requesting a court to order the meat market closed until health standards are met.

Discount Meat Center has operated without a health permit since failing an inspection Saturday. The health department filed a formal complaint against the business Tuesday in Municipal Court, and Dr. Orr said it would continue to do so daily until the matter is resolved.

Dr. Orr said she accompanied the inspectors Saturday to the meat market. "This one just had overwhelming rodent infestation," she said. "This building had holes in the wall, and the rats had even been in the walk-in refrigerator."

Inspector Roger Gibson said today he first visited the meat market Friday and discovered "severe problems that would not meet compliance." He said the health department asked the business to voluntarily close, which it did, shutting down from 4 p.m. Friday to about midnight to clean the meat-handling areas.

Successful Cancer Treatment Reported

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Swedish doctors have reported success in treating some lung cancers with a new technique which burns the cancer out with an electric needle.

Doctors at the respected Karolinska Institute here said Tuesday that the new method appears promising but is still highly experimental.

The new method, known as electrophoretic ionization, was developed by Professor Bjorn Nordenstrom and research engineer Jerker Olsson. A 10-volt electric current is applied directly to the tumor with a platinum needle eight-thousandths of an inch thick.

The method has not been tested yet against other treatments for lung cancer — the crucial test of any new cancer treatment.

But Nordenstrom said it has been used on 20 tumors in 15 patients, all of whom were in advanced stages of lung cancer. Some of the patients have survived for 15 months after the treatment and one woman was able to return to work, he said.

"This seems a feasible method, but we are as yet not sure what importance it will play in the future treatment of cancer," Nordenstrom said.

Getty Finally Buried

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Billionaire J. Paul Getty has finally been buried with two of his five sons on his 65-acre Malibu estate overlooking the Pacific Ocean.

J. PAUL GETTY

The burial ended a three-year legal struggle that began when the oil tycoon, who was one of the world's richest men, died at his estate in Surrey, England on June 6, 1976, at age 83.

In accordance with his 1958 will, the bodies of Getty and his sons Timothy and George, who died before him, were buried during private ceremonies early last month, attorney Edward Landry said Monday.

The will provided for a mausoleum on the estate to house the bodies of Getty, his sons, their wives and their children.

"Mr. Getty intended to return to California, and one of the things he was going to do when he returned was to select a spot (for the mausoleum)," Landry said. "Of course he became ill and was unable to return to California."

Landry said Getty died before he could return to California to pick out a place for the mausoleum. A team of lawyers then had to make the arrangements, Landy said.

It wasn't easy, he said, because of dozens of regulations and laws aimed at keeping people from being buried outside o regular cemeteries, not to mention opposition from neighbors.

"Here we were, trying to build something the size of a small bathroom — and they were treating us like we were Forest Lawn," he said.

Solution May Be Relative

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Albert Einstein has been dead for 24 years, but the state and two universities are still quarreling over who will pay for the privilege of honoring the scientist.

Gov. Brendan Byrne signed a bill in March calling on Rutgers University, the New Jersey Institute of Technology and the Institute of Advanced Study at Princeton University to set up professorships in memory of Einstein.

The state will foot the $65,000 annual bill for the memorial at the Princeton institute, because it is a private school. But Rutgers and the Institute of Technology will have to pay for their own chairs out of state allocations.

Rutgers and the Institute of Technology have taken the position that if the state pays for one chair, it should pay for all three.

Einstein came to Princeton in 1933 after leaving Germany. He spent his last years studying at the institute there and members of his family still live in the area.

Doctor, 100, Not Retiring

EAST ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — The last 100 years have seen the birth of most of the "miracles of modern medicine": X-rays, chemotherapy, penicillin, insulin — and Dr. Walter Pannell.

Pannell, still an eye, ear and throat specialist after 75 years in medicine, will celbrate his 100th birthday July 31. He says he has no plans to retire.

He may be the oldest practicing physician in the United States. "No one keeps records of that kind of thing," said Dr. Herman Robinson,one of the organizers of Pannell's birthday bash.

But Pannell says he doesn't feel he's special. "I just don't know what all the fuss is about or why anybody wants to know what I think," the white-haired doctor said.

He is in his office from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. each day and still accepts new patients. "I don't attempt too much, he said. "But you know how it works, one patient sends the other ..."

Dr. Pannell's office sports a slightly worn couch and a 1903 edition of "Modern Medicine and Therapeutics."

"Today's doctors' offices seem to be getting so elaborate," he said. "But I guess people like to see nurses swishing by and to be able to say 'how lovely.'"

Woman, IRS Hit Jackpot

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Uncle Sam will get more than half of the big jackpot won in Las Vegas on Sunday, according to a spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service in Las Vegas.

The spokesman said the IRS will take up to $180,000 of a $280,000 slot machine jackpot won by a 32-year-old California mother.

The IRS said Judi Hansen of Santa Ana will get to keep about $100,000 to $110,000 of the $280,000 check she took home.

TV Actor Refuses To Work

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC and Lorimar Productions Inc. have sued Dick Van Patten, star of the popular television series, "Eight Is Enough," for $23 million, saying he's refusing to come to work Friday unless he is paid "substantially more."

The two firms filed suit Tuesday, claiming Van Patten's agent, Mary Ellen White, informed them the actor would not honor his contract unless it is revised. The plaintiffs claim the agreement gave them a four-year option on Van Patten's contract for the top-rated show.

Duet Maker Files Suit

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — radio executive who says it was his idea to combine the voices of Barbra Streisand and Neil Diamond on the song, "You Don't Bring Me Flowers," has filed a $5 million lawsuit.

Gary Guthrie, former program director for WAKY in Louisville, Ky., who now lives in Memphis, filed the Chancery Court lawsuit Tuesday accusing Columbia Records and CBS Inc.f breach of contract.

Guthrie said he was working for WAKY when he got the idea of splicing separate versions of the song by Miss Streisand and Diamond into a duet. He said he made the duet version on or about May 21, 1978, and it became extremely popular in Louisville.

Guthrie said he sent a copy of the tape in July to Freddy Pillot, a record promotions man for CBS in Miami.

In October 1978, the record company released a single version of the Streisand-Diamond tune, Guthrie charged. The duet was repeated in two albums — "Barbra Streisand's Greatest Hits, Volume II," and "Neil Diamond's 'You Don't Bring Me Flowers.'"

According to the lawsuit, Columbia sold more than 1 million copies of the single and more than 2 million copies of the two albums. But Guthrie said he has received no payments.

Change Of Plea Possible

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A tentative change-of-plea hearing is scheduled Thursday for actress Linda Blair, whose federal narcotics trial is to begin next week.

LINDA BLAIR

But it wasn't clear whether Miss Blair's attorney is bargaining a plea. Government and defense attorneys declined comment. Miss Blair has pleaded innocent to a charge of conspiracy to possess narcotics with intent to distribute.

Defense attorney Martin Garbus filed a motion to dismiss the charge, accompanying it with partial grand jury testimony by George Mangum, a convicted narcotics dealer now serving a prison term.

"I remember doing a lot of cocaine business while Linda was in town," Mangum was quoted as saying. He said he sold her one-quarter ounce of cocaine at his Jacksonville home in October 1977 and delivered another quarter ounce to her Wilton, Conn., home a month later.

The implication of Mangum's testimoney is that the cocaine was for personal use, not for distribution as the charge says.

Miss Blair, 20, was here in October 1977 to attend funerals for two members of the Lynyrd Skynyrd rock music group who were killed in a plane crash.

Hideaway Costs $107,000

SEN. McGOVERN

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Sen. George McGovern and his wife have paid $107,000 for a "small, unpretentious" two-story house for a weekend hideaway near the picturesque Severn River, according to a staff aide.

Records show the McGoverns, who recently sold a home in St. Michaels on Maryland's Eastern Shore, purchased the house on March 19.

"He was looking for a place a little closer where he could simply get away from Washington on weekends," said the aide.

IRS Eyes Rock Star

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service hopes to collect $109,000, plus interest, in unpaid taxes owed the government by rock 'n' roll singer Chuck Berry.

The 52-year-old singer-guitarist on Monday pleaded guilty to a charge of failing to report and pay federal taxes on earnings of more than $200,000 in 1973.

On his 1973 joint return, Berry reported that he owed taxes of $189,184 on total income of $374,982. But the count to which he pleaded guilty says he actually owed $298,271 — about $109,000 more than he claimed — on earnings of $589,555.

Tut Hikes Gift Sales

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A special gift shop at a city museum where the "Treasures of King Tutankhamum" are on display sold more than $30,000 per day the first week of the exhibition, according to the store manager.

Antiques, statues, reproductions and other items are being sold. Proceeds, expected to total $1.3 million, are going to the Egyptian government, part of an agreement which brought the show to the M.H. de Young Memorial Museum.

"We're doing $30,000, maybe $35,000 a day," shop manager Maxine Newman said Monday. "It is much better than we ever anticipated."

She said more than 100 clerks were hired to sell items ranging from postcards to a $3,500 bronze statue probably made in 300 B.C.

Soviet Space Capsule Makes Soft Landing

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet space capsule Soyuz 32 returned to earth unmanned Wednesday, Tass reported.

The Soviet news agency said the spacecraft soft-landed 183 miles northwest of the city of Dzhezkazgan in Soviet Kazakhstan.

The landing came a week after another capsule, Soyuz 34, was launched to test out an improved docking-approach system.

Bike-A-Thon Winners Announced

Top winners were announced Wednesday on the Bike-A-Thon fund-raising campaign held recently by the Lubbock unit of the American Cancer Society.

Judy Mahurin of 2009 63rd St. was a double winner when her name was drawn twice. She won an expense-paid junket for one night to Dallas and television video game.

Elizabeth McRae of 6109 Nashville won a bike speedometer and Paul Board of 3513 45th St. won a dinner for two at El Chico.

In order to be eligible for the top prizes, names of riders were placed in a hopper once for every 20 miles ridden in the Bike-A-Thon.

Top money-raisers were:

Girls 13 and under — Chantal McNair, $117; Alaina Altis and Amy Thormaken, $101 each;

Girls 14 and over — Maria Farmer, $421; Judy Mahurin, $369; and Cheryl Rosen, $235;

Boys 13 and under — Gordon Muth, $700; Shane Johnson, $302; and Shawn Schwarzentraubh, $180;

Boys 14 and over — Kent Gamble, $401; Steve Barrera, $302; and Andy Coates, $75.

Awards will go to all the top fund-raisers mentioned above.

Thus far, $6,200 in Bike-A-Thon pledges has been turned into the cancer unit and more is expected. All prizes were donated to the cancer unit.

The drawings were conducted at KCBD-TV, Channel 11, studios.

Wayne Became Roman Catholic Just One Day Before He Died

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — John Wayne converted to Catholicism on his deathbed, the priest who baptized him and performed the last rites said Wednesday.

The 72-year-old superstar, who lost his final battle with cancer Monday, agreed to see the Rev. Robert Curtis Sunday during the dwindling hours of his life.

"John Wayne was received into the Catholic Church the day before he died," said Curtis, a Paulist priest who is also the chaplain at the UCLA Medical Center.

"Mr. Wayne was conscious at the time," Curtis said in a statement. "We are not at liberty to speak about something that is a personal matter between a priest and a penitent, and any other information should come foom the family."

Michael Wayne, the actor's eldest son, said his father had been visited a about a month ago by Archbishop Marcos G. McGrath, of Panama.

"They talked a long time," he said. "Then last Saturday when Dad was suffering a lot of pain and things were tough, my brother Patrick asked Dad if he would like to see a priest.

"Dad said, 'Yeah, I think that's a good idea.' Then we called in Father Robert Curtis.

"I wasn't in the room at the time, but Father Curtis gave Dad the last sacraments. It was either Saturday or Sunday.

"I don't know the technicalities of the church or what constitutes a conversion. But Dad did die in the church. I guess you could say he died a Catholic. I do know that Dad always called himself a 'cardiac Catholic.'

"Dad always said he was a Presbyterian although he didn't attend church. He was a Christian at heart his whole life and tried to live by Christian ethics.

"Naturally, all of us are very happy that Dad joined the church," Michael said.

Michael and other members of the Wayne family all are Roman Catholics, as were Wayne's three Latin wives, Panamanian Josephone Saenz, mother of four of his children; Mexican Esperanza Baur and Peruvian Pilar Palette, mother of the three youngest Wayne offspring.

Michael said he would spend the day making funeral arrangements for his father.

"Nothing has been determined yet," said Michael, who manages Wayne's Batjac Productions. "But I do know that we intend to limit the services to the family. Not even close friends will be invited.

"There will be quite a crowd as it is. There are seven of his children and our spouses and 21 grandchildren. Plus six pallbearers.

"It wouldn't be fair to ask one or two close friends to the funeral and leave out dozens of others. Dad didn't think much about funerals. He liked to remember his friends as they were in life. And that's how he felt about his own funeral. He would like to have friends remember him as he was."

Michael said he did not know whether the services would be Catholic. But neither a date nor place for final rites and burial have yet been made.

The Wayne family has been overwhelmed by telegrams and telephone calls from friends, acquaintances and movie fans.

Wayne, who starred in 200 movies in a career that spanned a half century in movies, lost his 15-year battle against cancer when the end came Monday evening.

He entered UCLA Medical Center Jan. 10, 1979, for routine gall bladder surgery. The operation two days later became a nine-hour ordeal during which his cancerous stomach and associated lymph nodes were removed.

He was operated on May 2 for abdominal cancer and was to undergo chemotherapy treatment, but never gained sufficient strength to rally. He had a cancerous lung removed in 1964 and underwent successful open heart surgery April 3, 1978.

President Carter, other national political figures and movie stars paid tribute to Wayne in an outpouring of sympathy from all over the world following news of his death.

Wayne was the biggest boxoffice star in film history. He won an Oscar in 1969 for his performance as one-eyed lawman Rooster Cogburn in "True Grit."

He made his final public appearance last April at the Academy Awards ceremonies when he presented the Oscar for the year's best picture, "The Deerhunter."

President Carter reflected most American's feelings for Duke Wayne, saying, "In an age of few heroes, he was the symbol of many of the most basic qualities that made America great ... the best of our national character."

Inaccurate Diagnosis Ruled Not Liable

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court ruled Wednesday a psychiatrist was immune to civil damages even if he erred in diagnosing a man charged in Dallas with assault to murder, robbery and burglary.

Terry Don Clark sued Dr. James Grigson after Clark had received the maximum sentence on each charge. He argued the sentences would not have been so severe if Grigson had not testified Clark had a "severe sociopathic personality disorder."

Clark's suit included nine counts, and he sought from $431,000 to $1,431,000 on each count.

Case records show Clark had deviate sexual tendencies of such an "extraordinary nature" that his attorney asked him to see a psychiatrist in preparation for a possible defense of insanity.

Grigson interviewed Clark in jail and concluded Clark's mental disorder was not subject to cure or treatment. He said, however, it was not a "mental disease or defect" that would constitute a defense to criminal prosecution.

The insanity plea was not raised at the trial.

Grigson also testified at the punishment stage.

Clark sued for alleged malpractice on the theory that he would not have received such heavy sentences if Grigson had made an accurate diagnosis of his condition and had not given adverse testimony in the case.

Clark contended Grigson should have warned him of the possible risks of submitting to a psychiatric examination. He said Grigson should have told him he diagnoses 15 percent of the people he examines as having a sociopathic personality.

The trial court rejected Clark's suit, and the Dallas Court of Civil Appeals affirmed that ruling. The appeals court said Clark's lawyer — not the psychiatrist — should have advised him of the risks.

Clark also argued there would be less so-called expert testimony if "experts" were liable for civil damages.

The appeals court said Clark's theory is "more than counterbalanced" by the recognized policy that communications such as the psychiatrist made to the court are absolutely privileged in order to encourage "unrestrained access" to the courts and to develop facts fully in court.

There is no civil liability, the appeals court said, when an expert forms an opinion and states that opinion even if the expert is negligent in the process.

The Supreme Court said it could find no reversible error in the appeals court opinion.

Supreme Court Rejects Hunt 'Hot' Oil Suit

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court on Wednesday rejected an effort by the sons of the late H.L. Hunt to go to trial on their foreign "hot" oil suit against Coastal States Gas Producing Co.

Nelson Bunker Hunt, Herbert Hunt and Lamar Hunt sued Coastal States in 1973 after the firm bought oil from Libya's Sarir Field, had it refined and then sold the products.

The Hunts and British Petroleum Co. had developed the Sarir Field under a 50-year concession granted to Hunt in 1957.

By 1967 oil was being produced in "marketable quantities." The Libyan government nationalized British interests in 1971 and the Hunt concession in 1973.

Hunt published notices in newspapers throughout the world claiming the nationalization violated international law and threatened suit against anyone who came into possession of Sarir oil.

In May 1973, Coastal States signed a contract to purchase oil from the field. The oil was transported to Italy, refined and sold.

A portion of the net proceeds from the Sarir oil were brought to this country, where Coastal States is located.

Case records show the Hunts abandoned their claims against the Libyan government in exchange for $19 million in 1975.

The Hunts' suit seeks to recover the proceeds realized by Coastal States from oil allegedly purchased prior to the 1975 settlement.

A Houston judge dismissed the case without a trial, ruling it had arisen from the Libyan government's expropriation of an oil concession.

In upholding the trial judge, the Houston Court of Civil Appeals said the Act of State Doctrine prohibits American courts from inquiring into the actions of foreign powers.

The Supreme Court concluded in a 6-3 opinion that Hunt had obtained only a contractual right under the concession agreement. It said the 1964 Hickenlooper Amendment making exceptions to the Act of State Doctrine applies "only to a claim of title or other right to property."

The three justices who dissented said they would reverse the summary judgment and submit Hunt's suit for trial. They said "our courts are under a duty to make a determination on the merits of this controversy."

"The Hickenlooper Amendment does not require proof of title to property; it requires adjudication of controversies when 'a claim of title or other right to property is asserted,' " the minority said.

"In fact," the minority added, "the Department of State has indicated its belief that the Hickenlooper Amendment was passed precisely to permit American courts to entertain suits such as this, brought in pursuit of 'hot' oil; that the nationalization of Hunt's interest in the Sarir Field of Libya violated international law; and that wherever possible Hunt should be supported in his pursuit of legal remedies."

The highest point on the European continent is Mount El'brus in the Caucasus Mountains of the Soviet Union.

Man Wins Suit Against GM

AUSTIN (AP) — A man left paralyzed after his Chevrolet overturned won Texas Supreme Court approval Wednesday of a $1.1 million damage award against General Motors.

Robert A. Turner suffered a broken neck in 1971 when his 1969 Impala overturned after he swerved to avoid hitting a truck. He asked for $6 million from GM but an Angleton district court jury lowered the award.

The Beaumont Court of Civil Appeals ordered the case retried because jurors did not follow the law correctly in assessing damages.

The Supreme Court reversed its previous ruling issued in March that upheld the appeals court decision and favored the manufacturer.

The product liability case involved General Motors' decisions in designing the car's roof, not errors in the manufacturing process.

Turner said the sedan was unsafe and "uncrashworthy."

"The jury found that the automobile was defectively designed under an instruction incorporating the ordinary consumer test," the Supreme Court said.

The court said it disagreed with the civil appeals court ruling that juries should balance design errors and the driver's actions in deciding who was most at fault.

The Supreme Court said in future liability cases involving design defects, juries should not be asked to decide how the "ordinary consumer" would have used the product or whether a "prudent manufacturer" would have agreed to the product design.

"The jury may be instructed in general terms to consider the utility of the product and the risks involved in its use," the court said.

"We are persuaded to this conclusion by the inconclusiveness of the idea that jurors would know what ordinary consumers would expect in the consumption or use of a product," the court added.

Texas Court Of Appeals Affirms Stiehl Decision

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday affirmed the Lubbock County conviction of Henry Steven Stiehl, charged with the 1976 robbery of a Lubbock supermarket.

Stiehl was sentenced to 40 years in prison for the Jan. 26, 1976, armed robbery of a United Supermarket. The supermarket was robbed of $8,500 by two masked men carrying rifles.

The two men were met by police as they left the store but managed to escape by taking two hostages. The men were captured following a brief car chase when a police car rammed the getaway car.

Stiehl contended in his appeal that the trial court erred by refusing to dismiss the indictment against him because he was subjected to cruel and unusual punishment during his pretrial confinement.

He also claimed the court erred by excluding evidence of the jail conditions at the punishment phase of his trial, by not granting a change of venue, by refusing to appoint a psychiatrist to examine him and by denying a limiting charge on extraneous offenses.

The appeals court ruled there were no reversible errors by the trial court in any of the areas contended by Stiehl.

The court ruled that Stiehl had received adequate relief from the poor jail conditions through a federal lawsuit he participated in with other inmates. That suit resulted in an order that county officials correct deficiencies in the jail standards.

The court also upheld the verdicts in the Lubbock County cases and one Swisher County case involving burglary, aggravated assault and driving while intoxicated.

The court affirmed the conviction of Melody Jane Isreal who was sentenced to five years probation for burglary of a habitation.

Isreal claimed in her appeal that the trial court should have declared a mistrial in her case because of an improper question asked by the prosecutor.

The court ruled, however, that the trial judge's prompt action instructing the jury to disregard the question was sufficient to protect the defendant's rights and no mistrial ruling was necessary.

The aggravated assault conviction of William Yarborough, who was sentenced to 10 years in prison, also was affirmed by the appeals court.

The court also affirmed two Lubbock County DWI convictions against Freddie Douglas Conwright and William Kennard.

County Loses Suit On Taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — Grayson County officials lost a court fight Wednesday over attempts to collect taxes from six Grayson County landholders, who said county rolls failed to list all taxable property.

The Texas Supreme Court affirmed an earlier ruling by the Eastland Court of Civil Appeals without issuing its own opinion.

Rep. Bill Sullivant, D-Gainesville and a lawyer for the six taxpayers, said in a phone interview the suit led to the 1978 Tax Relief Amendment and legislation banning taxation of intangible wealth.

"It (the tax amendment) will legalize to a degree what was already being done," Sullivant said.

The six taxpayers originally sued to prevent collection of all 1978 Grayson County taxes. District Judge Will C. Boyd issued an injunction in July 6, 1978, stopping county officials from collecting taxes.

However, the appeals court modified Boyd's ruling Oct. 5, 1978, so that it applied only to the six taxpayers.

The group claimed taxes on their real estate would be decreased if items such as household furniture, older cars and money in personal bank accounts were taxed.

Sullivant said Texas law had required all property be listed on tax rolls but that was never done.

"Either the Legislature had to give the taxing authority more authority to tax intangibles or that kind of taxation had to be cut out," he said.

The legislator said he doubts that the suit will change county tax procedures.

Appeals Court Deals Blow To Amusements

AUSTIN (AP) — The 3rd Court of Civil Appeals rejected two attacks Wednesday on state admission taxes.

Escobedo Enterprises, Inc., doing business as Bridgeport Ballroom, sued to recover admission taxes, paid under protest, for 1976-77.

Escobedo Enterprises claimed the admissions tax on dance halls, night clubs, skating rinks and similar places of amusement violates state and federal constitutions. An Austin trial judge agreed and awarded the company $4,366.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Recently, I sold approximately $12,000 of various stocks which had not been paying high dividends and put the money in a "ready asset" account run by a big brokerage firm which is currently paying better than 9 percent. I am retired and need income.

Just what does this account entail? If it as good as they say it is, why don't more people put their money there? The minimum investment is $1,000. Checks can be drawn on the account for $500 on up. There isn't any charge for these transactions.

A. You put your $12,000 into a "money market mutual fund" — an investment company which uses the money from you and other investors to buy "short-term money market instruments," such as U.S. Treasury Bills and other U.S. government and U.S. agency short-term debt obligations, bank certificates of deposit, bankers' acceptances, letters of credit and repurchase agreements.

The fund collects the interest paid on the securities it holds. After a management fee is deducted, that income is passed on to the fund's shareholders in the form of dividends. Most money market mutual funds declare dividends daily.

All this and more is explained — in detail — in the fund's prospectus. You should have received a copy of that prospectus when you made your investment. If you didn't, your broker fractured the rules.

More people than you seem to think are putting their money into money market mutual funds. They're the fastest growing thing on Wall Street.

Because interest rates are so high these days, many money market funds now provide yields of close to 10 percent. But, only about a year and a half ago, before interest rates skyrocketed, few of those funds yielded much more than passbook savings accounts.

A money market fund is a good place to keep your money, as long as interest rates stay high. When interest rates drop — as they eventually will — you'll have you look elsewhere for high yields.

• • •

Q. If there is no commission on putting money into or taking money out of a money market mutual funds, why do brokers push them?

A. Money market funds, like all mutual funds, have operating expenses. For most funds, those expenses include an "advisory fee" paid to the organization sponsoring the funds. That fee is usually one-half of 1 percent of a fund's assets.

So, when a brokerage firm runs a money market mutual fund with $100 million of assets, that brokerage firm collects $500,000 a year as an advisory fee. That's an incentive for the brokerage house and its brokers to put customers into a "captive" money market fund.

Also, when a broker keeps a customer's money "in house," the broker knows that the customer has cash available to act on future "buy recommendations" — which generate commissions.

Q. My wife is 64. I am 69 and retired. We must get along on $562 a month from Social Security, $255 a month from a pension and $71 a week from a part-time job. We own some bank stock, worth about $10 a share, which pays 77½ cents a year cash dividends, plus 4 percent stock dividend.

This stock has a dividend reinvestment program, which we use to buy more shares. Are we right in doing so?

A. As long as you can live comfortably and enjoy yourselves on your Social Security, pension and part-time salary, the answer is "yes." But if you need extra cash — as I suspect you do — the answer is "no."

Dividend reinvestment plans are great. This column has preached their virtues since they were started — because they are an easy method of acquiring wealth.

But there comes a time in life when people normally stop building up their nesteggs and start living on the income those nesteggs should provide. That time is normally at, or shortly after, retirement. Most retired folks stop reinvesting and start taking their dividends in cash. If you need income, you should too.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Interest On Checking Accounts Assailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Small banks and small savers would be the losers if Congress legalizes interest-bearing checking accounts nationwide, representatives of rural and suburban banks said Wednesday.

However, Rep. Fernand J. St. Germain, D-R.I., disputed the claim, arguing that experiments with so-called NOW accounts in New England and New York have earned consumers extra money and not led to bank failures.

Raymond D. Campbell, president of the Independent Bankers of America, told a House Banking subcommittee that because NOW accounts are offered by banks at a financial loss, they could drive many small banks out of business.

Campbell also claimed that interest-paying checking accounts would force banks to assess high service charges, making the accounts expensive for small depositors who write large numbers of checks.

St. Germain, subcommittee chairman and sponsor of the NOW account bill, contended that Campbell's bleak predictions have not been borne out by the experience in New England and New York.

St. Germain said New England consumers have received much more in interest on NOW accounts than they have paid in service charges and "there has been no rash of bank failures."

"We would concede that the consumers in New England are benefitting from NOW accounts," responded Campbell. But he added that those benefits result from a "competitive environment that can't go on for long."

"Isn't there something to be said for competition?" remarked St. Germain. "When we look at the profit margins that banks have been reporting lately, it's hard to say to our constituents that the banks are in trouble."

"We haven't made a decent profit for years," said Campbell, whose organization represents mostly small banks in rural and suburban areas. "The only people we have to apologize to about our profits are our stockholders."

Congress is considering legislation to permit interest-paying checking accounts nationwide in face of a court-imposed deadline of Jan. 1.

Last April, a U.S. Appeals Court in Washington banned savings-to-checking automatic transfers and similar devices that effectively offer consumers interest on checking accounts.

Continental Illinois Chops Prime Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Continental Illinois National Bank, the nation's seventh-largest, Wednesday said it is cutting its prime lending rate from 11¾ percent to 11½ percent.

The ¼-point cut by the Chicago bank was followed late in the day by a similar move at Commerce Union Bank of Memphis. At both banks, the lower rate on loans to top-rated corporate customers takes effect Thursday.

Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., the nation's fifth-largest bank launched the rate-cutting moves Tuesday. Two smaller banks in California and Missouri also cut their prime rates after the Morgan announcement.

Analysts cited a general decline in other interest rates in the short-term money market and a weakness in loan demand in some areas of the country, possibly reflecting a slackening economy, as reasons behind the prime rate cuts.

But the prime rate decline may not be reflected in drops in consumer loan or home mortgages rates.

The prime rate decline may represent a lull in an overall upward interest rate spiral, rather than a peak, the analysts said.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, was born in 1859.

Futures Firms May Agree On Merger

CHICAGO (AP) — The boards of two New York commodity futures exchanges have agreed on "the concept of a merger," exchange spokesmen said.

The Commodity Exchange Inc. and the New York Mercantile Exchange, separate markets situated on the floor of the Commodity Exchange Center in New York's World Trade Center, are working on details of a merger plan, spokesmen said Wednesday.

A final plan must still be worked out and approved by the two boards of directors, the exchanges' members and the federal Commodity Futures Trading Commission before it could be implemented.

The Comex board "voted in favor of the concept of a merger" late Tuesday, a spokesman said. The Mercantile Exchange board approved the idea June 6, according to Merc vice president Howard Gabler.

"There are still hundreds of questions to be answered. We have agreed to keep on talking. I would guess it's going to require many, many months before the final paperwork is worked out," Gabler said in a telephone interview.

Gold, silver and copper futures are traded on the 386-member Comex. The Merc, which has 375 members, offers platinum, Maine potato, foreign currency, fuel and heating oil, and palladium contracts.

Seat prices on the Comex, where a record 1.28 million contracts were traded in May, are $125,000. Membership prices on the Merc are about $35,000. The Comex is in need of more floor space, while the Merc hopes added members would enliven trading in its less-popular offerings such as currencies and palladium. The merger if completed would reduce the number of the nation's futures exchanges to nine. A merger between the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange and the New York Cocoa Exchange is in the final stages of implementation.

Gas Prices, Station Lines Increasing

HOUSTON (AP)— It will be more of the same this week for Texas motorists — higher gasoline prices and longer lines at service stations — so says the American Automobile Association.

In its weekly Texas Fuel Gauge Report, the AAA said Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth, the two big population centers of the big oil-producing state, will be the hardest hit, both in the pocketbooks and in the gasoline tanks.

The AAA said in Houston, 92 percent of the 49 stations surveyed will be clod Saturday night and 98 percent on Sunday.

In the Dallas-Fort Worth area 91 percent will shutdown the pumps by 6 p.m. Saturday and all day Sunday.

The average price of regular gasoline has climbed to 80.3 cents a gallon, compared with 79.5 cents last week. The full-service unleaded fuel, and full-service is about all a motorist can buy in the cities, climbed from 83.4 cents to 84 and premium moved from 82.6 to 84.1 cents.

Diesel fuel jumped from 80.7 to 83.1.

This week's report, the AAA said, was based on a survey of 416 stations across the state with 60 percent reporting closings by 6 p.m. Saturday, 73 percent closed on Sundays, and 68 percent shutdown by 8 p.m. on weekdays.

The association said only 21 of the stations are pumping gasoline 24 hours a day, with most of them located on highways between major urban areas, such as Interstate 45 between Houston and Dallas.

Here are the closing percentages for various areas:

By 8 p.m. weekdays — Amarillo, 36 stations surveyed, 56 percent; Austin, 15 stations, 87 percent; Beaumont-Port Arthur, 16 stations, 44 percent; Corpus Christi, 20 stations, 80 percent; Dallas, 38 stations, 8 percent; El Paso, 30 stations, 60 percent; Fort Worth, 32 stations, 94 percent; Houston, 49 stations, 92 percent; McAllen, 20 stations, 30 percent; Midland-Odessa, 15 stations, 47 percent; San Antonio, 40 stations, 58 percent; Waco, 15 stations, 53 percent; miscellaneous, 90 stations, 67 percent.

By 6 p.m. Saturday — Amarillo 22 percent; Austin 47 percent; Beaumont-Port Arthur 50 percent; Corpus Christi 50 percent; Dallas 100 percent; El Paso 20 percent; Fort Worth 81 percent; Houston 92 percent; McAllen 70 percent; Midland-Odessa 27 percent; San Antonio 60 percent; Waco 40 percent, miscellaneous 44 percent.

Closed Sunday — Amarillo 61 percent; Austin 80 percent; Beaumont-Port Arthur 56 percent; Corpus Christi 55 percent; Dallas 97 percent; El Paso 67 percent; Fort Worth 84 percent; Houston 98 percent; McAllen 90 percent; Midland-Odessa 47 percent; San Antonio 80 percent; Waco 33 percent, and miscellaneous 60 percent.

U.S. Gasoline Inventories Show Decline

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite some increased gasoline production, inventories of the fuel declined, according to the weekly supply bulletin released Wednesday by the American Petroleum Institute.

For the week ended June 8, gasoline output at the nation's refineries increased slightly to 6.8 million barrels daily from 6.7 million barrels daily a week earlier, while gasoline supplies fell to 226.1 million barrels from 229.6 million barrels in the preceeding week. Gasoline stocks in the comparable week last year were 236.4 million barrels.

Production of distillate oil, used primarily for home heating and diesel fuel, was 3.2 million barrels daily, virtually unchanged from the week-earlier figure. Inventories of this product increased to 128.2 million barrels from 125.6 million barrels a week ago. Last year at this time, distillate stocks stood at 150.4 million barrels.

Crude oil imports rose to 6.6 million barrels daily from 5.8 million barrels daily in the previous week and was probably attributable to changes in shipping schedules.

Shirt-Sleeve Attire OK For Japanese Diplomats

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's Foreign Ministry, as part of a summer energy conservation campaign, has told its diplomats they can cast off their traditional dark business suits for tieless, casual attire. The air conditioners will be set at a tropical 82 degrees.

Japan must import all its oil, and as part of the energy-saving effort the city of Osaka is going to postpone for a month even turning the air conditioners on.

But a ministry official in Tokyo admitted that even the city's sweltering summers may not be enough to convince some officials to loosen their collars.

Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda, one of the more fashionable of the nation's pin-striped leaders, expressed fears that he would not look good without a necktie, and Vice Minister Keisuke Arita has taken a cautious "wait and see" attitude, the official said.

Five ministers showed up at a Cabinet meeting this week decked out in short-sleeve safari suits, acclaimed as ideal dress for those wishing to maintain a modicum of decorum when their offices turn into steam baths this summer.

But Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira, who modeled a safari suit for the press last week, kept up his image as a deliberative decision-maker by appearing in his usual suit and tie, saying he would wait until the weather gets hotter before making a final decision.

A staff member working on plans for the late June Tokyo economic summit meeting of industrial nations said he would be embarrassed to go coatless and tieless to the government guest house or hotels where summit participants are staying.

Fortunately for those with similar sensibilities, Tokyo's summer usually doesn't turn oppressively hot until after the rainy season, which stretches from mid-June to mid-July.

U.S.-Mexico Border Termed 'Little Vietnam'

SAN YSIDRO, Calif. (AP) — It's 10:55 p.m. on Otay Mesa, an isolated stretch of brush and farmland straddling the Mexican border a few miles southeast of San Diego.

The night is still, and a dark-colored van eases along a rutted, moonlit trail. Off in the distance, a powerful spotlight streams from the underbelly of a low-flying helicopter, seeking out suspicious shadows in the hip-high brush.

It is the beginning of another tense overnight patrol on the border.

Inside the van, Border Patrol agent Barry Hall gingerly maneuvers the bouncing truck, his eyes scanning the darkness. Tonight he isn't taking any chances. The 32-year-old Vietnam veteran is wearing a flak-jacket purchased an hour earlier for $70.

"This place is getting hairy," he tells a reporter and photographer in the rear of the van. "If Jimmy the Greek was taking odds on the Border Patrol against the aliens, we'd be longshots."

Menaced by nightly sniper fire and rock-throwing, fellow agents call this troubled stretch the "war zone." Otay Mesa is flat and remote, ideal for the smuggling of Mexican aliens across the border, and because the patrol offers but a thin line of defense, thousands of illegal immigrants trod this path nightly. Armed bandits stalk the procession, attacking alien and agent alike.

Alarmed by the growing violence in this area, U.S. Immigration Commissioner Leonel Castillo made a tour this week after rumors that disgruntled agents were ready to stage a walkout.

Today's FOCUS

Now, suddenly, Hall's eyes detect a dark object darting across the road about 20 yards in front of the van. Racing to the spot, Hall points out a path through a field of wild oats. "He's gone."

Nearing the border, Hall puts his two passengers on alert: "When we get over this hill, watch when the headlights hit the fields. You'll see hundreds of 'em."

In an instant, the tall grass comes alive. Rustled from their resting place, the "wets," as the agents call them, make a mad dash back to the nearby four-foot-high barbed wire fence marking the border.

Reaching safety, about 10 — some holding blankets — stand inside the fence, on Mexican soil, and watch the van slowly pass. Hall offers salutations in Spanish; voices return the greeting.

"Could we interview them?" Hall is asked.

"I doubt if they'll say anything, but we can try it."

Hall backs up. Yes, they will talk.

"Why do you take this route?" asks Hall, serving as interpreter.

"Fewer bandits here," says a young man in his early 20s. Aware of the photographer, he covers his face.

"He's the guide, the smuggler," says Hall.

"Do you speak English?" the guide is asked.

"Yes," comes the reply.

"Why do you choose to leave your homeland?" other members of the group — from the states of Sonora, Michoacan and Jalisco — are asked.

"For jobs," says a young man next to a teen-age girl.

"What kinds of jobs?"

"Any jobs. We will do anything."

"How far do you have to travel on foot?"

Hesitating, the guide replies: "About six hours." A low laugh and something in Spanish follows.

"He says you are asking sensitive questions," says Hall. "He thinks you could be a border agent."

Loud laughter, from both sides of the border.

"If you have no food, where will you eat?"

"At a 7-11 store on the way to L.A.," says the sleepy-eyed guide.

"What is your name?"

More laughter.

"Just say Jose," he says, smiling but now growing impatient.

"I want to sleep," he adds, ending the interview.

The van makes its way down the mesa to the bone-dry Tijuana River bottom where hoards of frightened aliens often dash to freedom in human waves. But tonight the sandy arroyo appears deserted.

Then gun shots break the evening still and the brushy bottom comes alive with dozens of figures running wildly toward the U.S. side.

Hall says the shots were fired into the air by smugglers hoping to divert agents' attention from the migrants.

Meanwhile, at the Border Control command center in nearby San Ysidro, a red light blinks on a giant map, signaling the river crossing. The map has a bulb for every major alien route, each triggered by buried sensors.

"Tonight's a little slow," says agent Jim Spooneybarger. "If this were Saturday night, every light on that board would be on."

In 1969, 33,331 aliens were caught in this corner of California. Last year, it was 325,557. But that is a mere trickle in the tide of aliens; the government estimates 5 million entered last year.

They leave behind a country staggered by an unemployment rate of 40 percent. Most pay a smuggler $200 — smuggling is big business.

It isn't the increasing numbers that worry agent Jeff Otherson. It's the new violence, including sniper fire.

"It's a 'Little Vietnam' down on the river. We expose ourselves to a barrage of rocks every night — if we are lucky. The rest of the time you have to contend with somebody trying to sneak up behind us with a knife."

Recently the Border Patrol issued such riot gear as shields, helmets, and face protectors; an "impenetrable" metal fence will be built; and Don Cameron, the patrol's chief agent here, is calling on President Carter to fund more manpower.

"I had two agents surround a group of 263 aliens the other night," he says. "I've already ceded part of the United States to Mexico — about 150 yards of the north levee of the Tijuana River that's indefensible.

"It's like I'm commanding a lost battalion, asking for more troops, and my radio operator's saying he can't get through."

CAPTURED FAMILY — A family of illegal aliens is processed by a Border Patrol agent in San Ysidro, Calif., for return to Mexico after being caught exiting a sewer tile in which they had traveled from the Tia Juana River into the United States. The family, which was returned to Mexico at daybreak, will try again, and the odds indicate they will make it. (AP Laserphoto)

CABBIES END STRIKE

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A week-long walkout by drivers for the Yellow Cab Co. of Philadelphia has ended. The drivers Tuesday night approved a new three-year contract by a 104-92 vote.

Some ideas work and some won't! In 1978 over 2000 growers from California to Delaware and from Canada to Florida agreed that the Spray Sickle is one weed control idea that really works.

The 1979 Spray Sickle is better than ever — (Over 35 New Improvements.) If you have Johnson Grass (or any other problem weed) the Spray Sickle is really the only sure way to eradicate it.

Big Spring Fires Airport, Industrial Park Manager

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Harry Spannaus has been fired as Big Spring's industrial park-airport manager.

The decision to terminate Spannaus, who originally planned to leave the position at the end of the month, was made Wednesday by Paul Feazelle, acting city manager.

"Friday will be Spannaus' last day as industrial park manager," Feazelle said. "It was my decision that he was not fulfilling his job duties as he had in the past."

After announcing his resignation June 1, Spannaus was asked by the city council to remain as industrial park-airport manager until the end of the month.

"He (Spannaus) never made any commitment to me or to the city for any set period of time. It was my understanding that he would stay on until he found a new job or until the end of June, whichever came first," Feazelle said.

Spannaus countered by saying, "I had indicated verbally to both Mr. Feazelle and Mayor Wade Choate that I would stay on until the end of the month. But, I don't have that in writing.

"I had requested a 30-day delay from my new employers in order to continue as industrial park manager through June," he added.

Feazelle has alleged that Spannaus failed to take responsibility for equipment at the park and that he failed to discipline an employee who had been abusing the use of a city-owned vehicle.

Feazelle has alleged the employee was involved in falsifying records.

REGIONAL ROUNDUP

Rodeo Scheduled In Roaring Springs

A-J Correspondent

ROARING SPRINGS -The annual Motley County Junior Rodeo is slated Friday and Saturday at the Old Settlers Arena here.

Youths 19-years-old and under will be competing in bareback riding, bull riding, calf roping, ribbon roping, heading and heeling, goat tying, barrel racing, flag racing and pole bending events.

Rodeo performances start at 8 p.m. each day. A dance, featuring music by Henry Lester of Idalou, will follow Saturday night's performance.

The high point boy and girl will receive saddles, and the high point peewee boy and girl will be given buckles. Buckles also will be awarded to the first place finishers in all events.

Runt Sloan of Newcastle is this year's stock producer.

The Motley County 4-H Rodeo Association is sponsoring the event. Persons desiring more information may contact Dell Bearden at 347-2461 or Bill Halford at 347-2333.

All-Breed Show Set Saturday

BIG SPRING (Special) — The Howard County Youth Horseman Club will hold an all-breed open horse show Saturday at its arena on the Garden City Highway here.

Registration begins at 9 a.m., with show time slated for 10 a.m.

Entry fees are $2 for the youth classes and $3 for halter and performance events, which will include reining, pole bending, barrels, flag race and goat tying.

Study Shows Interferon Useful In Kidney Surgery

BOSTON (AP) — Interferon, a natural substance in the blood, can ward off a common infection that often causes dangerous complications in people who receive kidney transplants, a study shows.

Researchers said that controlling this viral infection, usually harmless in healthy people, would greatly reduce the deaths that result from risky transplant surgery.

Their report demonstrates one of the first practical applications of interferon, an experimental medicine derived from human blood and produced naturally in the body to fight invasion by viruses.

Doctors at Massachusetts General Hospital used interferon to delay outbreaks of infections caused by the cytomegalovirus in kidney transplant patients.

The germ is one of the most common complications of transplants and can lead to severe infections and rejection of the new organ. It plagues recipients of heart and bone marrow transplants as well.

The doctors said they believe that if the drug had been given for a longer period, it would have totally prevented this infection.

"Limitation of cytomegalovirus infections would greatly reduce the morbidity and mortality of renal transplantation," they wrote.

Their study was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

"This first study is very promising," Dr. Robert Rubin, one of the co-authors, said in an interview. "It is as good as anything ever is in this field in terms of showing clinical efficacy."

The doctors gave injections of interferon to 21 people for six weeks after they received new kidneys. Another 20 patients took inactive placebos.

None of the interferon patients developed cytomegalovirus infections until about a week and a half after they stopped taking the medicine. The people who received placebos, however, caught the infections an average of 4½ weeks after their operations.

The infections contracted later by the interferon patients were not as severe as those suffered by the other people.

Transplant patients receive drugs that reduce the body's natural urge to reject the new organs. However, these medicines also obstruct their resistance to disease.

In the patient's weakened condition, the usually harmless cytomegalovirus can be a killer. It produces symptoms of viral pneumonia, fever and hepatitis and leaves the body susceptible to other diseases caused by bacteria and protozoa.

In addition, doctors believe the virus contributes to destruction of the transplanted organ.

Rubin said 70 percent to 95 percent of transplant patients catch the virus. However, the seriousness of their infection usually depends on how much of the immunity suppressing drugs they are given.

Interferon also shows promise as an anti-cancer drug. The American Cancer Society recently spent $2 million to buy enough interferon to treat about 150 patients.

However, the substance is still extremely expensive and rare. Only human interferon will work against human diseases. Most of what is used experimentally is made by a laboratory in Finland.

Interferon is obtained from the layers of white blood cells produced when whole blood is separated into plasma, red cells and other medically useful substances. But large amounts of white cells are needed to derive usable quantities of interferon. Researchers estimate that all the white cells now discarded by labs in the United States could be used to make only limited amounts of the substance.

California Employees Walk Out

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — State water and power employees seeking a pay raise walked off their jobs Wednesday across California, which was hit just last weekend by a Highway Patrol pay protest "sickout."

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. vowed to go to court to end the strike, which shut off the flow of water through the state's aqueduct, the lifeline for growers in Southern California.

It is only the second state employee strike in California history. But Brown has faced a rash of sickouts and other job actions by public employees since he instituted a wage freeze in July 1977.

The state attorney general's office, acting on Brown's behalf, said it would seek the injunction early Thursday against the strike, staged by about 310 employees at 11 a.m. Wednesday.

The walkout did not immediately cut off water to cities, which drew supplies from already filled reservoirs.

But it shut off irrigation water for up to 700,000 acres of farm land, closed down three hydroelectric power plants, and knocked out most power-producing units at a fourth plant.

Charles Reiter, general manager of the State Employees Trade Council, said the employees would continue striking "until they see the wisdom of reaching a reasonable salary settlement."

The striking workers are seeking a 20 percent pay raise in a one-year contract, part of which they say would be compensation for foregoing raises last year. Brown has offered 10.5 percent.

State employees have received no raises since Brown responded to the tax revolt that led to the Proposition 13 tax cut initiative by freezing wages for all state employees.

In another development Wednesday, Highway Patrol officers canceled plans for another sickout next weekend. Last weekend, 3,009 of the patrol's 3,188 traffic officers called in sick in protest of Brown's pay offer.

Although the officers did not reach agreement with the state, they said they were satisfied the Brown administration was bargaining with them in good faith.

The power and water workers, including hydroelectric operators, electricians and other technicians, run the $3 billion State Water Project, which was hailed as an engineering feat when its 450-mile, computerized aqueduct operation began in 1971.

Half the state's 22 million residents and a large part of California's prime agriculture land are served by the system.

Sitting Bull, Artist Recalled With Death Mask

WACO (AP) — The "ghost dance" had cavalry officers worried.

The Sioux Indians, following the vision of Wovoka, an Indian leader who said a "ghost dance shirt" could stop speeding cavalry bullets, were ready to reconquer the American continent that once had been the Red Man's exclusive domain.

The cavalry officers believed Sitting Bull, the Sioux medicine man, was behind the uprising. A tribal policeman known as Red Tomahawk was told to arrest the spiritual leader.

Perhaps knowing how Sioux tribesmen watched over Sitting Bull, Red Tomahawk loaded a pistol and set forth on his hazardous task.

Although the policeman was armed, Sioux tribesman gathered around Sitting Bull as Red Tomahawk attempted to carry out the cavalry orders. Tempers flared.

In the ensuing fracas, a single gunshot rang out and fatally pierced the medicine man's skull.

Sitting Bull was dead.

The enraged Sioux, fueled to frenzy by the shooting, rampaged. When word got back to cavalry officers, armed horsemen were called to put down the Indian insurrection.

History records the event as the Wounded Knee Massacre of 1890, a confrontation in South Dakota that still remains a source of bitterness for Native Americans.

Almost 90 years later, a Texas artist plans to honor both the memory of Sitting Bull and a fellow writer and artist who devoted much of his life to the history of the Indian and the U.S. cavalry.

Bronze reproductions of Sitting Bull's death mask soon will be available, according to Gene Deveney of Waco.

The plaster death mask came from the collection of Randy Steffen, "a leading authority on Plains Indians," Deveney said.

Steffen, who died in 1977 at the age of 59, was born in Eagle Pass. After living much of his life in California and Florida, he bought a ranch near Dublin, Texas, in 1970.

BRONZE DEATH MASK — Texas artist Gene Deveney of Waco displays a bronze reproduction of Sitting Bull's death mask, one of a special edition he plans to sell for $1,250 each. The death mask of the great Sioux Indian chief probably was made by a contract surgeon with the U.S. cavalry, Deveney said. Two features, a bullet hole and a scar, positively identify it as the face of Sitting Bull. (AP Laserphoto)

Deveney, a longtime friend of the late artist and historian, said he does not know where Steffen obtained the plaster mask.

But two features of the death mask — a bullet hole over the right eye and a scar across the nose — positively identify it as the face of Sitting Bull, Deveney said.

History records that the fatal bullet entered behind Sitting Bull's left ear and exited over the right eye, Deveney said. The nose scar also is documented by events in Sitting Bull's colorful life.

"Sitting Bull was kicked in the nose by a horse when he was with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show," Deveney said.

The death mask — a method of recording historical faces before photography — probably was made by a contract surgeon with the cavalry, Deveney said.

"We know for sure it wasn't the Indians," he said. "They would not think of doing anything like that."

Deveney believes Sitting Bull holds a special place in American history. "He was probably the most famous of all the American Indians," he said.

Steffen, best known for his western art and lengthy research into the history of the cavalry, had a natural-born interest in Indian events.

"He was a quarter Sioux," Deveney recalled. "He was a great-nephew of Crazy Horse, a war leader of the Oglala Sioux."

Each of the bronze reproductions of Sitting Bull's death mask will sell for $1,250, Deveney said. Funds from the special edition will be used to pay off medical debts Steffen accumulated.

"He was in the hospital off and on for years," Deveney said. "He didn't have a cent of insurance."

Limited edition reproducions of Steffen's western art already bring a high price among collectors. A painted bronze statue of Crazy Horse at the Battle of Little Big Horn garners up to $25,000, Deveney said.

GET RID OF STATE CARS

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The state of Illinois, which last fiscal year consumed 14.9 million gallons of gasoline, will get rid of one in every 10 vehicles of its fleet in an effort to conserve fuel, said J.R. Deuel, spokesman for the Department of Administrative Services.

Open Field Eyes Watson

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Tom Watson, endorsed by Jack Nicklaus as golf's outstanding performer, is a solid favorite to win the game's premier, most-coveted title, the United States Open.

"Without question," Nicklaus said, "Tom has been the best player in the game for the last couple of years."

The record supports the statement.

In the last two years Watson has led the tour in money-winnings, stroke average and been named Player of the Year. He's played even better this season. He again has the game's best stroke average. He's won four times (twice as many as any other player). And, with $353,000 in winnings already this year, he's apparently on the way to another record in that category.

His performance on the PGA tour this season has been overwhelming in its consistency. He hasn't finished lower than fourth since March. His peers, the other tourists, now regard him with the same awe once reserved for Nicklaus alone.

But, while his record is beyond comparison, Watson had a little deficiency in his game Wednesday on the eve of the 79th American national championship.

"I'm not pleased with the way I'm hitting my driver," he said. "I hope it'll fall into place before the tournament starts. It isn't something you can force."

It is a problem he has had from time to time all season. He has, however, been able to recover on the tour courses.

Famed old Inverness may be another matter, with all its subtle trouble, the deep rough, narrow fairways and tiny greens.

Watson is very much aware of the potential problems.

"If you drive it in the rough you will have to lay it up short and that will make a more difficult shot into the green. I see the straightest driver winning the tournament," he said.

Should his driver continue to be erratic, the gates would be opened for a host of our-toughened pros to make a move in the four-day, 72-hole chase for a $50,000 first prize which starts today.

Chief among them, of course, is the mighty Nicklaus. Although he's gone into semiretirment and is suffering through the poorest season of his unmatched career, he still occupies a level of his own.

"The Nicklaus era isn't over," Watson said. "He's too good a player, too smart a player, not to win again."

And, of course, he's at his best in the major championships, events which he has won a record 15 times. Although he hasn't won this year, it is worth noting that his best performance was in the Masters. He missed by a single stroke getting into the three-man playoff won by Fuzzy Zoeller.

But he isn't the only challenger.

"In the '30s, the '40s, even into the '50s, you could point out 10 players and be fairly certain one of them would win the Open," said Sandy Tatum, president of the sponsoring United States Golf Association. "But it's a different world now. There is such an enormous depth of talent, so many, many highly accomplished players, it is no longer possible to pick a small group and say with any degree of accuracy that the winner will come from them."

But there is a group that owns the proper credentials, including Hubert Green, Lanny Wadkins and Zoeller, each a two-time winner this season, Hale Irwin, Ray Floyd, Bruce Lietzke, Tom Weiskopf and Andy Bean, runaway winner last week in Atlanta.

With the nature of the 6,982-yard, par-71 Inverness Club course placing such a great emphasis on driving accuracy, such players as PGA champion John Mahaffey, Tom Kite, Jerry Pate and Lee Trevino must be given high regard. Trevino generally is considered the most accurate driver in golf. Kite, Pate and Mahaffey aren't far behind.

Andy North is the defender in the international field of 153 but said a successful defense is improbable.

South African Gary Player and Spain's Severiano Ballesteros top the foreign threat.

But it is Watson who stands above them all.

He won two of the four major titles in 1977. He was in position, at one time or another, to win them all in 1978. And he's been a playoff loser in the last two.

"This is the one I've been looking forward to," he said. "This is the one I really want to win."

He's the man to beat.

FRISCO CHANGES

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Giants made room on their roster Wednesday for returning pitcher John Montefusco by selling third-string catcher John Tamargo to Denver of the American Association. Montefusco, 1-2, came off the disabled list and was scheduled to start Wednesday night.

Raiders Sign Coronado Ace

Gene Segrest, a three-year starter for the Coronado High School baseball team and one of the top prep pitching prospects in the state, signed a national letter-of-intent with Texas Tech.

A two-time all-district selection, Segrest compiled a 7-4 record during his senior year on the mound with an earned run average of 1.24. He also played shortstop and batted .464 including 33 runs batted in, a CHS record.

Segrest was recruited by a number of schools including Texas and Oklahoma. He will play in the Texas High School Coaches Association's All-star game on June 23.

"Gene is definitely a top prospect," said Tech baseball coach Kal Segrist. "We will look long and hard at him pitching-wise and try him at either third base or shortstop. He has outstanding velocity on his fast ball and he came up with a good breaking pitch his last year in high school."

Segrest and the head coach are cousins, however, Segrest says the family ties had nothing to do with his decision.

"I thought Texas Tech had as much to offer as anywhere else," Segrest said. "I feel Kal can teach me as much about baseball as anybody else."

The 6-0, 165 pounder is the third player to sign with the Red Raiders this year. He joins Midland Lee pitcher Terry Willis and Midland High infielder Jimmy Zachry.

Sitting Bull, Artist Recalled With Death Mask

WACO (AP) — The "ghost dance" had cavalry officers worried.

The Sioux Indians, following the vision of Wovoka, an Indian leader who said a "ghost dance shirt" could stop speeding cavalry bullets, were ready to reconquer the American continent that once had been the Red Man's exclusive domain.

The cavalry officers believed Sitting Bull, the Sioux medicine man, was behind the uprising. A tribal policeman known as Red Tomahawk was told to arrest the spiritual leader.

Perhaps knowing how Sioux tribesmen watched over Sitting Bull, Red Tomahawk loaded a pistol and set forth on his hazardous task.

Although the policeman was armed, Sioux tribesman gathered around Sitting Bull as Red Tomahawk attempted to carry out the cavalry orders. Tempers flared.

In the ensuing fracas, a single gunshot rang out and fatally pierced the medicine man's skull.

Sitting Bull was dead.

The enraged Sioux, fueled to frenzy by the shooting, rampaged. When word got back to cavalry officers, armed horsemen were called to put down the Indian insurrection.

History records the event as the Wounded Knee Massacre of 1890, a confrontation in South Dakota that still remains a source of bitterness for Native Americans.

Almost 90 years later, a Texas artist plans to honor both the memory of Sitting Bull and a fellow writer and artist who devoted much of his life to the history of the Indian and the U.S. cavalry.

Bronze reproductions of Sitting Bull's death mask soon will be available, according to Gene Deveney of Waco.

The plaster death mask came from the collection of Randy Steffen, "a leading authority on Plains Indians," Deveney said.

Steffen, who died in 1977 at the age of 59, was born in Eagle Pass. After living much of his life in California and Florida, he bought a ranch near Dublin, Texas, in 1970.

BRONZE DEATH MASK — Texas artist Gene Deveney of Waco displays a bronze reproduction of Sitting Bull's death mask, one of a special edition he plans to sell for $1,250 each. The death mask of the great Sioux Indian chief probably was made by a contract surgeon with the U.S. cavalry, Deveney said. Two features, a bullet hole and a scar, positively identify it as the face of Sitting Bull. (AP Laserphoto)

Mississippi Newlyweds Educated

HOUSTON (UPI) — For Mississippi newlyweds Ann and Rick Welsford, the honeymoon has been a headache.

Married last week in Lucedale, Miss., the couple drove to Houston where Welsford, 20, expected to find a job as a pipefitter. Tuesday he found no job and their car, which ran out of gas Sunday on a freeway, has been stripped and their wedding gifts stolen.

"People back home aren't mean in the mouth like here," Mrs. Welsford, 17, said Monday after discovering the damage to their 7-year-old car.

Welsford said gasoline was readily available when they left Mississippi.

They still had a quarter-tank Saturday night when they reached Houston. After eating dinner at a restaurant the couple encountered problems with the freeway system while trying to return to their northside motel.

"Your roads aren't like those in Mississippi," Welsford said. "You just can't get back on."

After driving for three hours and exhauting most of their fuel, the couple found themselves on the south side of town where they rented another motel room.

Sunday morning the car ran out of gasoline and was left locked on Interstate 10, the road that had brought the couple west. A six-hour walk in search of gasoline found only closed stations. A policeman finally picked them up. Monday they returned to their car to find it stripped.

The car windows were broken and missing were their wedding attire, wedding presents, kitchen utensils, clothes, television, stereo, camera and tools.

The Welsfords spent Monday night — his birthday — with friends.

Joe Niekro pitched his ninth straight victory and his 10th of the season, tops in the National League, as the Houston Astros beat the Philadelphia Phillies 4-3.

Cesar Cedeno drove in three runs for the Western Division-leading Astros, who handed the Phillies their 18th loss in the last 26 games.

Niekro, 10-2, checked the Phillies on nine hits, striking out seven and walking four. Dick Ruthven, who lasted just 32-3 innings, lost his fourth straight after six victories.

BREWERS 5, RANGERS 4

Sal Bando, hitting a mere .218, crashed a tie-breaking solo homer in the eighth inning to ignite the Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-4 victory over the Texas Rangers and old nemesis Ferguson Jenkins.

It was Milwaukee's first victory over Jenkins since Aug. 14, 1974, although he still holds a 10-3 lifetime record against the Brewers. Milwaukee starter Moose Haas, 4-5, survived two shaky innings before needing help from Jerry Augustine and Reggie Cleveland in the ninth as the Brewers snapped a four-game losing streak.

REDS 4, METS 1

Unbeaten Mike LaCoss posted his eighth victory, combining with Tom Hume for a two-hitter, as Cincinnati defeated the New York Mets.

LaCoss surrendered just one hit — Richie Hebner's run-scoring single in the fourth — before leaving the game after five innings because of a sore elbow. Hume came on to collect his second save, allowing only Steve Henderson's infield single in the eighth.

TIGERS 7, MARINERS 3

Ron LeFlore's bases-loaded triple keyed a five-run Detroit uprising in the fourth inning and the Tigers went on to a 7-3 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Detroit starer Milt Wicox, 5-4, needed relief help from John Hiller while Seattle starter Mike Parrott, 4-2, took the defeat.

INDIANS 6, A's 4

The Cleveland Indians, held hitless for seven innings by Oakland's Mike Norris, exploded for six runs in the eighth, highlighted by Andre Thornton's three-run homer, and defeated the A's 6-4.

TWINS 8, YANKEES 7

Rookie Dave Edwards slammed a tie-breaking two-run homer in the seventh inning as the Minnesota Twins rallied to defeat the New York Yankees 8-7.

Edwards' blast, his first of the year, came off loser Ray Burris, 1-2, who relieved starter Jim Beattie in the fifth. Beattie was staked to a 4-0 in the first inning but couldn't hold it.

EXPOS 4, BRAVES 1

Steve Rogers scattered six hits and the Montreal Expos took advantage of three Atlanta errors to record a 4-1 victory over the Braves.

The Expos scored twice in the fourth inning when Atlanta committed two errors on the same play following a sacrifice by Rodney Scott. Warren Cromartie led off with a walk, becoming the first Expo to reach base against loser Rick Matula, 3-5.

RED SOX 11, ROYALS 3

Larry Wolfe hit two solo home runs, his first homers of the season, Dwight Evans added another and rookie Gary Allenson walloped his first major league grand slam to power the Boston Red Sox to an 11-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

ORIOLES 8, WHITE SOX 7

Billy Smith's double with two out in the 10th inning scored Doug DeCinces from first base and lifted the Baltimore Orioles to an 8-7 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

DeCinces drew a two-out walk from loser Steve Trout, 1-2, and Smith followed with his double, culminating an uphill battle for the Orioles, who trailed 5-0 at one point.

ANGELS, BLUE JAYS SPLIT

Willie Aikens belted his first career grand slam home run to power the California Angels to a 10-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays and a split of a twi-night doubleheader.

Rick Cerone doubled home the winning fun in the eighth inning to give Toronto a 9-8 victory in the opener after the Blue Jays blew a 7-0 lead.

California scored single runs in the first and second innings of the nightcap before erupting for six runs in the third. Don Aase, 6-4, scattered nine hits for his third consecutive victory and blanked Toronto until the sixth.

Wilson More To Aggies Than Simply Grid Boss

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Head Football Coach is Tom Wilson's official title. But his job at Texas A&M isn't limited just to the sidelines on Saturday afternoon. Nope, there are other chores to tend to.

There's also the public relations part — an aspect Wilson handles like an old pro.

"When you're at A&M please feel free to come by and visit," Wilson told a group of Aggie boosters Wednesday night. "I want to get to know you."

"And also feel free to send some suggestions," he continued. Then he paused for a few seconds and added: "But don't get upset if I don't use 'em."

The 200 or so boosters laughed — not their famous horse one, either.

"They (the gatherings) are an important part of any program," commented Wilson following the dinner. "It's important to get out and talk to the people...let them know what's happening. Anything in the way of communications is important. There's no doubt about that."

Although the roast beef and ham may be tender (some of the time) and the welcomes warm, Wilson says the functions have one major drawback: "I don't like the time they take away from my family, but that can't be helped."

From Lubbock, Wilson now moves on to El Paso for a similar gathering today. By the start of two-a-day practices in August, he'll have made about 30 meetings.

During that span, you can bet he'll be bombarded with one question imparticular. "How will the Aggies do in the Southwest Conference?"

"Texas is strong," came Wilson's reply, "and so is Houston. Then there are five teams stacked right in behind them. I like to think that we are one of those teams. I feel there are seven teams right now that can challenge (for the SWC title)."

No matter how unimportant the the question seemed, Wilson answered it with relish, going into detail any chance he got.

"People like to know what's going on," said Wilson. "And it's important that we tell them."

So he did.

Wilson, who took over the Aggie helm in the middle of the '78 season after Emory Bellar resigned, believes one of the key reasons the Aggies should compete well in the SWC race is because of their "good" spring training.

"We got a lot of questions answered that needed to be answered," commented Wilson about the spring workouts. "It was important that we have a competitive spring training. And we accomplished that. There was a lot of one-on-one contact and things like that. We also made a lot of positions changes during the spring that I think came out well. There was considerable improvement on the line, too."

But the fine spring didn't solve all of Wilson's woes, he said, there's also a couple of unanswered questions — namely at tight end and runningback.

"Of course, (all-America candidate Curtis) Dickey is coming back," said Wilson. "But we still need to find more depth at runningback."

Which brought up the question of George Woodard, the 300-pound fullback who suffered a leg injury during a softball game late last summer and missed the entire '78 season.

"I'd like to have him back," said Wilson. "But first he needs to get his weight down. Right now he's at 265 pounds and that's down from 305. To play, he's got to be under 260."

For the first time in four years, the Aggies will also be without field-goal kicker Tony Franklin. But, says Wilson, freshman David Hardy should be able to step in and fill the void left by graduation.

"I'm excited about this year," concluded Wilson. "And I'm happy to be associated with the finest university in the country."

It's called PR, folks.

Henderson Putts Way To Semis

By SCOTT SUDDUTH
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The Womens' West Texas Golf Tournament enters the homestretch today, as four players advanced to the match-play championship semifinals.

Karen Henderson highlighted Wednesday's action with a 6-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole at Hillcrest Country Club to defeat Jane Gray and advance to the semis against Judy Casey, a 2-1 winner over Linda Jones. The match begins at 9:25 a.m.

Kathleen Oswalt will meet Carol Vinton in the other semifinal contest which tees off at 9:30 a.m. Mrs. Oswalt, who is playing in her third WWTtourney, defeated Doris Wright, from Hillcrest, 3-2 Wednesday while Miss Vinton held a 2-hole advantage over Donna Avery with a hole to play in their match.

Mrs. Henderson, who plays at Meadowbrook golf course, also eagled the par-4 13th green in Wednesday's action. "My tee shot landed six feet from the hole," explained Mrs. Henderson, who is expecting her second child in 13 weeks.

"My drives and putts were consistent today (Wednesday) but I'll have to hit my approach shots very well to compete with Judy," added Mrs. Henderson. In three previous bouts with Mrs. Casey, Mrs Henderson has won once.

Mrs. Casey, who won medalist honors in the tourney's qualifying round Monday, continued to play consistent golf although she was unhappy with her approach shots. "My iron shots into the greens were too long," complained the Abilene golfer.

The pin placements, which are changed daily by Hillcrest pro Richard Whittenburg, were moved towards the front of the greens on Wednesday, and many of Mrs. Casey's shots rolled towards the backside of the putting surfaces. "I've got to learn to back down and use a different club for those placements," explained the 29-year golfing veteran.

One player who chatted with Mrs. Casey near the the 18th green disagreed with her diagnosis. "I think you're just too darn strong," said the golfer. "No," replied Mrs. Casey, "I'm just too darn dumb to use the right club. You'd think I'd learn."

For Mrs. Oswalt, it was the putting that hampered her otherwise sharp performance. "The greens have been fast and I'll have to improve my putting in the semifinals," said the golfer from Meadowbrook. Last year Mrs. Oswalt advanced to the finals of the tourney. When the tournament was last held in San Angelo, Mrs. Oswalt was eliminated in the semifinals.

While most of the golfers still in contention for the crown were worried about today's round, one golfer was just glad to be playing in the tournament.

In fact, Mrs. Ida Mae Powell is playing in her 43rd WWT tourney. Most of the women refer to the 77-year-old golfer as the tour's own living legend.

"I started playing in 1930 and I've been playing in this tournament since 1936," said Mrs. Powell.

HS Federation Wants Olympic Funds Frozen

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The National Federation of High Schools has urged Congress to withhold a $16 million appropriation from the U.S. Olympic Committee, the Associated Press learned Wednesday.

Withdrawal of the funds, appropriated under the Amateur Sports Act, could strike a crippling blow to the USOC and this country's Olympic efforts. At issue is the arbitration process set forth in the Amateur Sports Act passed by the Congress last year.

Many amateur sports groups, including the NCAA, have been adament in their displeasure over a decision by the International Amateur Wrestling Federation (FILA) to disregard an arbitrator's decision making the United States Wrestling Federation the governing body of the sport in this country.

The USOC, in turn, rejected the arbitrator's ruling and endorsed FILA's action, recognizing the Amateur Athletic Union as wrestling's national governing body.

"It now appears rather clear that the keystone of the Amateur Sports Act — impartial and binding arbitration of disputes within the amateur athletic community — is in the process of being rendered meaningless," the letter stated to all members of the House and Senate appropriations committees.

The Congress is scheduled to vote on the appropriations in the next week or two.

"...The membership of the USOC is unwilling to take the proper steps to allow such arbitration to work effectively and. . .the international sports federations, and the international Olympic Committee are showing either unwillingness or reluctance to permit the arbitral mechanism to function within the United States."

The letter was signed by Herman L. Scott of Montgomery, Ala., president of the high school federation, which represents more than 20,000 high schools across the country.

"In these circumstances, the National Federation believes it would be unwise for the Congress to appropriate taxpayer funds," the letter stated, "when the whole issue of arbitration as an effective mechanism in this country is in serious doubt."

The letter told the congressmen that if the arbitration mechanism is not workable "and in fact subject to the control of the International Olympic Committee and the international sports federations, then. . .that role. . .is at best one subject to foreign domination and control. The National Federation doubts seriously that the American people, aware of these facts, would be willing to have their taxpayer funds spent under such circumstances."

Brice Durbin, executive director of the Kansas City-based high school federation, told the AP, "it's ridiculous when a foreign organization can dictate what we are doing domestically."

Pine Hills Sets Partnership Meet

Pine Hills Golf Course will sponsor a two-day partnership golf tournament June 30-July 1, according to head pro Courtney White.

The field is limited to the first 120 teams, and the entry deadline is June 29. Entry fee is $56 per team. For more information, contact White at 799-7801.

Guidry Hospitalized

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — New York Yankee pitching ace Ron Guidry was still in pain Wednesday from an injury diagnosed as strained and possibly pulled muscles in his lower back. The lean left-hander received ice massage and ice therapy treatments and was expected to be released from the hospital today.

Guidry was in Fairview Southdale Hospital in Edina, Minn., where he was examined Wednesday by Dr. Harvey O'Phelan, the Minnesota Twins' team physician who could find no evidence of a fracture or nerve damage.

Yankee spokesman Mickey Morabito said the Cy Young Award winner will miss at least one pitching turn.

Guidry, 6-4 with a 2.12 earned run average and two saves, was coasting into the seventh inning Tuesday night when Minnesota's Ken Landreaux hit a grounder back to the mound. The 28-year-old pitcher threw the runner out. But on his next pitch to Dale Edwards, Guidry slumped at the waist with his hands at his back.

Yankee Manager Bob Lemon and the New York trainer raced to the mound, but Guidry said he was all right. He took two warmup pitches and then retired Edwards on a tapper back to the mound for the final out of the inning.

"He said he was all right at the mound, but when he got to the dugout at the end of the inning he said he was in pain," said Lemon.

The manager brought reliever Ron Davis into the game at the start of the eighth, and the Yankees broke a 1-1 tie with three runs in the ninth to win 4-1.

Carter Shoots For Olympics

DALLAS (UPI) — Michael Carter, the nation's leading high school shot putter, will pass up his first year of college football at Southern Methodist University to concentrate on making the 1980 Olympic team.

Carter, the 6-2, 250-pounder, broke the national schoolboy record in the shot seven times last spring. He said he had an agreement with SMU when he was recruited that he did not have to play football his freshman year.

"I thought about it a long time," said Carter, who was considered a blue-chip lineman prospect and was heavily recruited last spring.

"I had originally planned to make throwing the college (16-pound) shot 66 feet my cutoff goal. If I could do that (which he did on May 5), then I think I would have been close enough to making the team. But now I think I'd better work a little more. I'd like to add another three feet."

On May 5, Carter tossed the 12-pound high school shot 77 feet on one throw, setting the current national record. He still has one more high school meet to break that mark.

"Eighty feet is still my goal," he said.

At that same May 5 meet, he also tossed the college shot to a winning 66-4 mark. Among the defeated competitors that day was Olympic hopeful Sammy Walker, who placed second with a 64-10.

Walker said he helped convince Carter to concentrate on the shot put rather than football.

"I honestly believe he might not make the Olympic team if he didn't concentrate on the shot next fall. It's going to be that kind of battle. But here's a high school kid with a chance," Walker said.

"Every guy out here (at SMU) wants him to be a football all-American and make a million dollars off football and everything he dreams of," he said.

SPC Adds Two Track Athletes

LEVELLAND (Special) — South Plains College has added two recruits to the track team for 1979-80.

Yayo Salinas, a middle-distance runner from Memphis High School and Bryan Compton, an all-district performer from Post, have signed with SPC.

Salinas won the regional title in the 880-yard run his junior and senior years and twice won the District 3-AA half-mile crown. His best performances are 1:55.3 in the 880 and a 50.0 in the 440-yard dash. Salinas also has posted a 10.2 in the 100-yard dash.

Compton, an all-district performer in football and basketball, anchored the Post relay team that placed first in the regional meet this year. His career-best mark in the 440-yard dash is 48.1 and 10.1 in the 100-yard dash.

Chitwood Show Set At Speedway

The Lubbock Speedway will host the Joie Chitwood Thrill Show June 18 at 8 p.m. The event is co-sponsored by Don Crow Chevrolet.

The 21-act, family-type show will feature a fleet of new cars valued at more than a quarter of a million dollars. The performance will include two-and three-car "helldriving," reverse spins, two-wheel driving, and the aerial rocket leap where a Chevette jumps 65 feet through the air and lands on a receiving platform.

The Chitwood family travels over 40,000 miles during an average season, and it performs about 200 shows in 40 states.

The performance will be held at Lubbock Speedway, located on the Tahoka Highway.

NBA Coaches Want Three-Point Basket

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Basketball Association general managers and coaches voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to adopt the 3-point field goal next season in an effort to create new fan excitement and cut down on physical play underneath the basket.

Both groups expected the club owners to approve the proposal at their meeting next week.

The general managers approved the proposal by a vote of 15-7 while the coaches voted 15-5 in favor of the 3-point basket, one of the mainstays of the old American Basketball Association.

Both groups also voted overwhelmingly against a proposal to legalize the zone defense, the other major topic discussed during the two-day annual meeting of the NBA general managers, coaches, team doctors, business managers and public relations directors.

The general managers voted down the zone defense 20-2, the coaches 19-1.

Jerry Colangelo of the Phoenix Suns, chairman of the general managers' group, said the GMs were persuaded to vote for the 3-point plan because the "former ABA people said it would add excitement to the game. If you can add excitement, then that is a plus."

However, Jack Ramsay of the Portland Trail Blazers, president of the coaches association, said the ABA coaches indicated the 3-point basket "opened up the game, got rid of the congestion in the basket area. It not only rewards for the long shot but forces the defensive team to play the perimeter players more honestly, thus opening up the game."

Al Attles of the Golden State Warriors, chairman of the Coaches Rules Committee, said he was against the 3-point goal but said he would go along with the majoritiy.

Colangelo said the general managers adopted a general proposal, leaving to the NBA Rules and Competition Committee the responsibility to set the dimensions for which the 3-point basket would count. Ramsey said the coaches considered dimensions used in the ABA, 22 feet from the corner and 23.9 feet straight away from the basket, or two feet above the top of the key.

Ramsay also said the coaches voted 17-3 to continue with three referees a game at least for another year. Colangelo said the general managers discussed the subject but did not take another vote, although he indicated that sentiment favored the three-referee system.

In other business, the general managers agreed to create a committee to study the possibility of the NBA affiliating with the newly formed minor league, the United Basketball Association.

Ten Napel Leaves Hospital

ATLANTA (AP) — Two months ago, no one thought Garth Ten Napel would live. Then when he did, no one thought he would walk.

But the Atlanta Falcons linebacker, who was injured last April in the car accident that killed teammate Andy Spiva, surprised them all. On Tuesday, he walked out of the hospital, determined to play football again.

Ten Napel left the rehabilitation center at Emory University Hospital here to return to his home in Kemp, Tex., for two weeks before returning to Atlanta to become an out-patient at the hospital, according to a Charlie Dayton, a spokesman for the National Football League club.

The 25-year-old Texas A&M standout, who came to the Falcons in 1977 in a trade with the Detroit Lions, was in a coma for three weeks after suffering head, chest and pelvis injuries. His weight dropped from 204 to 150 pounds.

Although his speech has become deliberate as a result of extensive injuries he received, Ten Napel is determined to return to the football field.

Doctors are cautious about his chances, but Dayton said Ten Napel has bought a trailer to put on a piece of land he owns in Suwanee, Ga., the site of the Falcons training camp.

"He's ready to come back," said Dayton. "After all, they didn't expect him to walk or talk again. Who can say what will happen?"

Besides the injuries he suffered, Ten Napel also had to deal with the sorrow of losing a friend with whom he had spent most of last season undergoing rehabilitation for knee injuries.

But Ten Napel looks at the crash as a challenge to come back. "I'll have to play twice as hard when I come back," he has said, "because I'll be playing for Andy too."

Dayton said Ten Napel would remain on the team's injured list for the current season.

"Obviously, he won't be able to play this year," said Dayton. "But when he's ready to come back, he'll be welcome to try and make the team."

Gerulaitis Defeated

LONDON (AP) — Tom Gullikson beat Vitas Gerulaitis, a top prospect for the Wimbledon tennis title, 6-2, 6-3 Wednesday in the first round of the Stella Artois tournament.

The $125,000 tournament, at the Queen's Club, is one of the grass-court warmup events leading up to Wimbledon.

Gerulaitis, the No. 3 seed in this event and the winner recently of the Italian Open, was humiliated. Gullikson, left-hander of the American tennis-playing twins, broke him in his first service game and kept ahead for the whole match.

Tournament organizers struggled to get the first round finished despite rain, which shortened the program for the third straight day. Queen's Club is equipped with four indoor wooden courts, but the singles are being played outdoors or not at all because the players need practice on grass.

Center court was treacherous and Gerulaitis was clearly unhappy. His usual racy game was shackled. Once he slipped and went headlong. His hopes of saving the match faded when he turned too slowly to chase a lob and lost his service broken at 2-4 in the second set.

Gerulaitis never really came to life until the last game of the match. Then he fought off three match points after Gullikson had led 40-0. But Gullikson's service, which had been accurate throughout the match, saw him through.

Gullikson said he had been in England a week but had had scarcely any practice on grass because of the bad weather. But he said Gerulaitis was probably at a greater disadvantage on the slippery surface.

"He normlly runs around the court such a lot and moves so fast," Gullikson said. "He couldn't do it on this surface. If you take that away from him, an important part of his game is gone."

Gerulaitis had been expected to meet John McEnroe in next Sunday's final for the first prize of $17,000.

Boston Ships 'Boomer,' Get Watson

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox traded first baseman George "Boomer" Scott to the Kansas City Royals for outfielder Tom Poquette Wednesday and acquired slugger Bob Watson from the Houston Astros.

Scott and Poquette were to swap uniforms Wednesday night as the Red Sox wrapped up a three-game series in Kansas City.

Poquette's best season was his first full campaign with Kansas City, in 1976, when he hit .302. He batted .292 in 1977 but the left-handed hitter fell to .216 last year in 80 games.

Scott, a three-time AL all-star, broke in with Boston in 1966 and was traded to Milwaukee in a multi-player swap in 1972. That deal sent Scott, catcher Don Pavletich, pitchers Ken Brett and Jim Lonborg and outfielders Billy Conigliaro and Joe Lahoud to the Brewers for pitchers Lew Krausse and Marty Pattin and outfielders Tommy Harper and Pat Skrable.

After the 1976 season, Scott was reacquired by Boston from Milwaukee, along with outfielder Bernie Carbo, for first baseman Cecil Cooper.

The fast-talking Scott slumped to .233 last year after hitting .269 in 1977. He shed considerable weight last winter and appeared ready for a big season but slumped after a fast start.

Scott balked at the benching by manager Don Zimmer and at one point declined to go into a game in the late innings after Boston had taken a big lead.

Watson, a .299 hitter in for his career, all at Houston, was hitting .239 this season with three home runs and 18 RBI. He has 136 career homers and 764 RBI.

The 33-year-old Watson, a veteran of 10 big league seasons, has been on the bench in recent weeks since his batting slump forced Manager Bill Virdon to move Cesar Cedeno to first so he could get the hot bat of Jeff Leonard into the lineup.

Watson was Houston's only lifetime .300 hitter coming into the 1979 season, and holds the Astros records for career hits and runs batted in. Watson, a right-handed power hitter who plays first base and outfield, was a member of the National League All-Star team in 1973 and 1975. He will join the Red Sox during an off-day today and be available when Boston opens a series Friday in Chicago against the White Sox.

Ladd, a Portland, Maine, native in his third season with the Red Sox organization, is 3-1 in 18 games — all in relief — and has an 0.63 earned run average with Bristol in the Eastern League. He was 8-2 last year with the team's Winter Haven farm club.

Slow-Pitch Date Nears

Deadline for entering the 1979 summer softball league, sponsored by the City Parks & Recreation Department, is Friday. The slow pitch tournament begins July 16 and continues through October.

The entry fee is $175 and mens, women, industrial and co-recreational leagues will be offered. Playoffs for men and women leagues will be July 6-8. The church league playoffs will be July 13-15. Entry fee is $55 and the deadline is June 20.

Entry fees can be mailed to the Lubbock General Athletic And Recreation Association, Box 2000, Lubbock, 79457. For more information contact Rusty Black or Chuck Swallow at 762-6411, extension 2669.

Week After Feasting In Ratings, NBC Drops Back To Famine

NEW YORK (AP) — Just a week after NBC's best finish in the prime-time TV ratings race in nearly four months, the struggling network has slipped to a new low.

NBC listed only one show in the A.C. Nielsen Co.'s Top 20 for the week ending June 10 — a repeat episode of a series dropped from the network's schedule around the first of the year — and that contributed to a rating for the week of 12.8.

It was NBC's lowest average rating since the 1978-79 TV season began in September. The networks say it means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 12.8 percent of the homes in the country with television were tuned to NBC.

ABC, with seven of the week's 10 most-watched programs, was No. 1 for the second week in a row with a rating of 15.2, with CBS second at 14.7.

ABC's "Three's Company" was the week's highest-rated program for the fourth consecutive week. That is the longest run in first place for any show since the recently completed season began.

The rating for "Three's Company" was 23.1. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 23.1 percent saw at least part of the program.

CBS had the other Top 10 shows, including "Alice" and "M-A-S-H," both tied for third with ABC's "Angie."

NBC's best for the week was a rerun from the "Eddie Capra Mysteries" series, which has not been renewed for next season. It was ranked 20th.

ABC scored with a special, "When the West Was Fun," in 10th place, and CBS did relatively well with a "CBS Reports" segment, "On the Road with Charles Kuralt," No. 24 in the ratings.

ABC won the week despite some heavy representation at the bottom of the ratings — No. 62 "Operation Petticoat," followed by a special, "Who are the DeBolts and Where Did They Get 19 Kids?" and "Welcome Back Kotter." NBC's "Comedy Theater: Good Ol' Boys" was No. 65, and "Hizzonner," also from NBC, was 66th.

Here are the Top 10 shows:

"Three's Company," with a rating of 23.1 representing 17.2 million homes, and "Charlie's Angels," 21.5 or 16 million, both ABC; "Angie," ABC, and "Alice" and "M-A-S-H," both CBS, all 21.3 or 15.9 million; "Mork and Mindy," 21.2 or 15.8 million, "Laverne and Shirley," 20.9 or 15.6 million, and "Taxi," 20.8 or 15.5 million, all ABC; "Stockard Channing in Just Friends," 20.4 or 15.2 million, CBS; and "When the West Was Fun," 20.1 or 15 million, ABC.

The next 10 shows:

"One Day at a Time," CBS; "All in the Family," CBS, and "Happy Days," ABC, tie; "WKRP in Cincinnati" and "60 Minutes," both CBS; "Fantasy Island," "Barney Miller" and "Vegas," all ABC; "Dukes of Hazzard," CBS; and "Eddie Capra Mysteries," NBC.

AMERICAN EXHIBIT OPENS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Joan Mondale, wife of the U.S. vice president, officially opened the exhibit "American Culture -a View of the Seventies" at ceremonies Wednesday. The exhibit features highlights of American painting, sculpture, music, film, architecture, theater and ballet and is housed in a specially erected dome on the banks of the Danube and Sava rivers.

Annie Ross Sings Again In London Solo Act

NEW YORK (AP) — Annie Ross is singing here this week. So? So she once sang with one of the best-known vocal groups in modern jazz — Lambert, Hendricks & Ross. Now she's working solo.

But her act only has a few of the tunes she used to do with the group, famed for singing lyrics they put to material based on recordings of top jazz soloists and bands.

"I always feel that then is then, now is now, and you can only do memory lane for so long," says the lady, born in London, raised in Los Angeles and working here for the first time in 17 years.

A tall, attractive woman of 48 with red hair and brown eyes, she teamed up with Jon Hendricks and Dave Lambert — the latter was killed in an auto mishap a few years ago — almost by accident.

Back in 1957, she says, the two singer-musicians were recording an album of songs based on recordings of Count Basie's big jazz band. They were doing it with a group of studio singers at first.

The two men, friends of hers, hadn't asked her to sing on the date. But they asked her to come over, just in case, because the studio singers didn't seem able to swing in the Basie tradition.

But Annie did, having been born into a show business family in Scotland and raised by her aunt, singer-actress Ella Logan, in a house that always seemed full of visiting American jazz players.

The session singers cut two tunes, were proficient enough, "but didn't know what Basie was about. They sounded stilted and stiff." She was asked to try the material with Lambert and Hendricks.

On the playback, she says, "we knew we had something good. It was a real moment of creation, of knowing what you've created was of real quality."

It led to their first album, "Sing a Song of Basie," now a collector's item, and six more well-received albums. They played clubs, concerts, won top jazz awards and the acclaim of critics.

But she says she grew to hate the constant travel. She left the group in London in 1962 — Yolande Bavan replaced her — after one last show there with the Basie orchestra.

Miss Ross, who still lives in London on a converted 85-foot barge on the Thames River, then got married, then divorced, and concentrated on acting, as jazz work was scarce.

She emoted in a few films, also many shows for Scottish TV and the BBC.

'Rocky II' Opening Set In Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Rocky II," the sequel to the Academy Award-winning best film of 1977, will make its bow here Thursday night, amid all the trappings of a Hollywood opening.

Philadelphia, a city more known for its sedate past than its jet set, will be treated to a mini-parade, banners, signs, spotlights and movie stars.

It will all wind up with a post-premiere reception at the city's Museum of Art. In "Rocky," its star, Sylvester Stallone, jogged up the museum's steps in a soaked sweatsuit at dawn and raised his arms in a sign of victory.

The premiere's main attraction is Stallone, the star, the writer and the director of the film about a mediocre Philadelphia boxer named Rocky Balboa who achieves fame, and defeat, in a heavyweight championship fight.

In the sequel, he also loses the rematch, but wins a wife and they have a child.

Movie houses around the country will begin showing "Rocky II" on Friday. Stallone hasn't done well at the box office with his recent movies, "F.I.S.T." and "Paradise Alley."

Although Stallone made the first movie on a low budget, "Rocky II" cost $8 million to produce, according to Mike Weiss, the movie's publicist.

Stallone, who was nominated for best actor of the year in his first Rocky adventure, flexed his muscles Wednesday on the sun-lit plaza across from City Hall, crowded with 5,000 cheering people, and accepted a proclamation for his newest work.

The proclamation, signed by Mayor Frank Rizzo, thanked Stallone for creating in his second Rocky "a story that is sharper, smarter and more sophisticated" than the first.

"When I started out to write about 'Rocky,'" responded Stallone, who played high school football when he lived in Philadelphia, "I tried to think of a city where a great miracle had occurred, and one that had spirit. And it just had to be Philadelphia."

Thursday night's premiere is a charity affair, 500 tickets sold for $50 each with proceeds going to the Police Athletic League.

PAL, which caters to boxing, is a pet project of many of Philadelphia's business and civic leaders. And this connection has brought the movie free ads on city transit vehicles and free TV and radio announcements.

Weiss, who estimated the cost of promoting the movie here at "anywhere between $35,000 and $100,000," said the big attraction will be the stars — Stallone, Talia Shire, Burt Young, Burgess Meredith and Carl Weathers.

"People like to be where the stars are," Weiss said. "We'll make sure everybody sees the stars."

Extended-Wear Contact Lens OKed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has approved for the first time an extended-wear contact lens for patients who undergo cataract eye surgery.

The agency said the lens was approved for wear up to 30 days. It is not now being approved for people who use contact lenses just to correct their vision, but an FDA spokeswoman said that use eventually may be approved, too.

Two companies received approval to market the long-wear lenses — Soft Lenses Inc. of San Diego and Cooper Laboratories Inc. of Mountain View, Calif.

The FDA said the lens is made of the same material that is used for conventional lenses that must be taken out daily, except that this one has "a slightly higher water content that enables the lens to remain in the eye for a longer period."

Robert Mandan Of 'Soap' Fame Called 'Cleanest Man In Town'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The cleanest actor in town has to be Robert Mandan, a veteran of daytime soap operas who also stars as Chester Tate in the wacky prime time comedy series "Soap."

Awash in suds for much of his career, Mandan spent four years in "Search for Tomorrow" and three years in "From These Roots" during the day while working on and off Broadway in New York.

He also scrubbed up for short runs in such other soaps as "Edge of Night" and as "As The World Turns."

Women viewers, he observed, have a greater tolerance for rape, incest, marital infidelity, illegitimate birth and other social aberrations than do men who react with shock to life's tribulations as seen in soaps.

He believes "Soap's" success with male viewers is attributable to the fact that the series treats social shockers with zany humor.

As Chester Tate, the weirdo businessman, Mandan is accused of murder and stumbles off into the boondocks suffering amnesia.

At season's end his wife, Jessica, has taken up with a detective (John Byner) she hires to find her missing husband. The question is, when the series resumes in the fall, will Jessica opt for the shamus or return to the marital bed with good old Chester.

Chester has a roving eye and Jessica has a roving mind. Between the two, madness carries the day in the irreverent series.

Mandan has no way of knowing. The cast is kept in the dark. They never know what direction the show will move until they report for work each Monday morning to go over the new script.

Before returning for the fall season, however, Mandan and Katherine Helmond, who plays flighty Jessica Tate, will costar in a summer stock version of "Same Time Next Year" For three weeks in Akron, Columbus and Dayton, Ohio. "It's part of the Henley chain of theaters," Mandan said. "Those people were the first to discover they can pack their houses with television stars every summer.

"They found out audiences prefer to see familiar TV personalities to stage actors who pronounce 'theatah' with a capital 'T.'

"Certainly, Katherine and I wouldn't have been hired were it not for the fact that 'Soap' has given us a large personal following. We've had two weeks to learn all the lines in that two-character comedy.

"Katherine and I will decide just how much of the crazy Tates we can use in the play. They're both too dingy to play the people in 'Same Time Next Year' in the altogether.

"It will be fun working different characters with Katherine. We're both from the stage and we hit it off right away as the Tates."

Mandan is a big, strong-featured man with 20 years experience in the theater and movies. But he was just another face in the crowd before he accepted the role of Tate two years ago.

He finds playing Tate a blessed relief from his typecasting as a movie-TV villain. In the theater he played only leading men.

"Working in soaps as long as I did was a peculiar experience," he said. "There is no comedy in real soap operas. None. With few exceptions it was like reporting to the morgue every day. The actors all took themselves and the scripts seriously.

"'Soap' is a cartoon of the real thing. We're a farce, really, with everything done in quick strokes. 'Soap' bears no resemblance to the daytime serials.

"We have a basic cast of 14 characters and some of us rarely are seen on camera together. There isn't a single character who hasn't had at least one pre-marital or extramarital affair except Bob, the dummy.

"Like 'Three's Company,' we're a sex farce but the sexual involvements are incidental to the craziness that goes on. We magnify the wild possibilities of unfaithful husbands and wives without getting too specific about sex itself. "Next season we're losing Robert Guillaume, the butler, who has spun off into his own series. God knows who they'll find to replace him. He was the only totally sane character in the series.

"I think the zaniness of the show and the bizarre behavior of the characters elicits sympathy from viewers who see ordinary situations taken to their extremes.

"Chester Tate isn't really dumb. He's a victim of his own self-deceptions. He's successful at business but not very bright when it comes to juggling his girlfriend and his wife.

"Everyone has a relative or a friend who is embroiled in the same sort of messy situations. In real life, of course, the problems are very serious. It's a relief for viewers to see the complications treated with comedy."

Mandan and his wife, Sherry, live in a Los Angeles suburb where their lives bear no resemblance whatever to the madcap goings-on of the Tates.

FAMILY THAT PLAYS TOGETHER — Actor Alan Arkin, center, his son Mattew, and his wife Barbara Dana get together for a jam session recently at their Westchester County home in the suburbs of New York. Arkin, the Brooklyn-born actor who grew up on the songs of Pete Seeger and Woody Guthrie, says music plays an important part in his life. (AP Laserphoto)

Actor Alan Arkin Enjoys Time Spent At Home With Family

NEW YORK (AP) — There was Alan Arkin, bare feet and blue jeans, with his wife and son in their Westchester home, blowing a bossa nova on his soprano saxophone.

It's something he rarely gets to do these days. But for the Brooklyn-born actor who grew up on the songs of Pete Seeger, Woody Guthrie, Josh White and Lee Hays, music is an important part of life.

"We need to practice more, but we just can't seem to get the time," Arkin said as the family trio tried to find a compatible key for the Carlos Jobim tune. Arkin moaned as they missed the key, but played on. Son Matthew, a 19-year-old college student, improvised a few chords on his recorder. Wife Barbara Dana, an actress and writer, filled in with a few lyrics as she strummed the guitar.

"I'm endlessly frustrated," Arkin said later, once the instruments had been put away. "I can hear better than I can play."

He is perhaps his own toughest critic, whether actor, producer, director, composer, photographer, gardener, cook, writer or musician.

And the creative energy it takes to be all of those things — sometimes doing a few at the same time — is not a fluke or even super special, he said. "I think it's in everybody. Most people spend their time stifling creative energy. It's a natural entity in people. I'm just not afraid of it."

Meditation and yoga helped him cope with success and the demands of his multiple talents, and he talks about that in his upcoming book, "Halfway Through the Door."

In his latest film, "The In-Laws," with Peter Falk, Arkin gets a chance to wear two caps, those of actor and producer. He also uses the moment to improvise some hilarious comedy sequences portraying a straight-laced Fifth Avenue dentist who unwittingly becomes involved in the wacky but dangerous exploits of his daughter's future father-in-law.

At the age of 5, Arkin said he knew he wanted to do film work. So when his family moved from Brooklyn to Los Angeles six years later, he was ecstatic. "I thought I was in the promised land out there. I wasn't."

In Brooklyn, with a mother who played the piano and an artist father, Arkin was exposed to plenty of cultural activity. Seeger and other folksingers of the day were special friends. But in Los Angeles, only four other friends in high school read books, he said.

"Yeah," he said, gazing at the Japanese garden outside his living room, "I turned inward and lived in a fantasy until I was 30."

The Arkin family, which also includes sons Tony, 11, and Adam, 22, moved from Manhattan's Greenwich Village about five years ago to the seclusion of Westchester County. They've reached a point now, he said, at which they prefer staying home and enjoying what they have instead of being a part of the lifestyle of so many in filmwork.

"I don't know what it is," Arkin said. "My roots just feel more deeply fed here. I love the fact that our closest friends have nothing to do with show business. I love being fed by different things."

Nor is he especially concerned with "image."

"Look," he said, "I didn't want to be a star. I wanted to be an actor. I'm not concerned with image. My whole idea was to run away from what I was. I wanted to lose myself in other people so the idea of image never came up."

Arkin's first acting work was with the "Second City" improvisational group. That led to successful roles in the off-Broadway production, "Heloise" and the Broadway run of "Enter Laughing," for which he won a Tony Award.

Before acting, Arkin was with the 1950s folk singing group, The Tarriers. On tour, he was exposed to the civil rights movement, and later was involved in the peace movement.

Country Music Milestone Credited To Housewife

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Roba Stanley Baldwin, recently assigned a place in history as the first female soloist to cut a country music record, now shares a problem with millions of less celebrated people.

"I can't carry a tune too well," she confessed.

Historians recently discovered that her 1924 recording of "Devilish Mary" was the first recorded country music solo by a female.

"It's all very thrilling," the chipper Mrs. Baldwin, 71, said in a telephone interview from her home in Gainesville, Fla. "I just can't believe all this is happening to me. I'm still floating on clouds."

As teen-age Roba Stanley, she recorded "Devilish Mary" in Atlanta, as well as eight other songs, before marrying a year later and giving up music to concentrate on her family.

"I was too young to realize what this was all about," she recalled. "But I was thrilled about it. I can remember it like it was yesterday. We sat in a big house and there was a big room like a barn. The record was put down on a big piece of wax."

She played the guitar as a youngster, but that, too, took a backseat to taking care of her husband and raising three children.

"I tried to play not too long ago, but my fingers just wouldn't let me," said Mrs. Baldwin, who spent most of her adult life in Miami.

She said she still listens to country music on radio and television.

On a recent visit to Nashville, she was introduced to the crowd at the Grand Ole Opry while seated in the audience. "It was just so thrilling," she said. "Everyone around me said they wanted to hear me sing."

Artist Depicts Female Last 'Supper'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Artist Judy Chicago wanted to reinterpret the Last Supper as a history of women in Western civilization.

"I wanted to express my rage at being deprived of my heritage," said the 39-year-old artist. "And I was aware of the hunger for art that's relevant to and affirms women."

It took her five years to complete "The Dinner Party" — a controversial feminist piece of art symbolizing 39 historic female figures ranging from the Primordial Goddess to painter Georgia O'Keefe. Others include the poet Sappho, Saint Bridget, astronomer Caroline Herschel, abolitionist Sojourner Truth and novelist Virginia Woolf.

"I thought men had a last supper, but women have had dinner parties. Moreover, it was probably women who cooked the food for the famous Last Supper," she said.

Using traditional women's techniques of pottery, ceramics, china painting and stitching, she created a personal tribute to women and an innovative art form.

JUDY CHICAGO

More than 100 artisans worked on the piece.

"The Dinner Party" is a gigantic triangular table with 39 place settings. Each woman is symbolized by a specially designed and painted porcelain plate, which is placed on a decorated fabric runner representing the woman's cultural and historic period. Another 999 women's names are etched on a tile floor.

"I make trends, I don't follow them," said the curly haired artist, who was dressed in jeans and a red T-shirt. "I thought once the piece opened, I would be free to move on."

Instead, Miss Chicago faces financial and artistic problems. She said she has $25,000 in debts and one of three museums planning to display her piece has bowed out.

"The Dinner Party," which is on display at the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art until June 17, goes to the Rochester, N.Y., museum in the fall. After that, the piece has no permanent home.

"It's upsetting. I'm working to keep the piece from getting lost," said Miss Chicago. "The Whitney in New York said they don't show political art. Other museums have declared that it's not art at all.

"If art is the sterile pictures that hang in art galleries, then I'm happy that 'The Dinner Party' is classified as non-art. It challenges the definition of what art is and is richer, more human, more accessible," she said.

At the museum here, women crowded around the piece, exchanging their impressions, often circling it for an hour. Some smiled, one wept quietly.

"The response is very moving. It's very reinforcing that art can affect people's lives," the artist said.

Miss Chicago was born Judy Gerowitz in Chicago. She changed her name in 1969 to divest herself "of all names imposed upon her through male social dominance."

She started taking art classes at the Art Institute of Chicago in 1947, went to UCLA and later became a teaching assistant in sculpture there. In 1970, she pioneered the first women's art program at Fresno State University.

"I'm interested in images that change consciousness," she said. I believe in the artist as a visionary."

Fall Of Skylab Due Between July 7-25

WASHINGTON (AP) — The space agency reported Wednesday that the huge Skylab space station now is expected to fall to earth between July 7 and July 25.

That is a narrower period than the July 4-July 28 forecast made last Thursday in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's weekly report on the demise of the biggest manmade object in space.

The reports are based on information gathered by the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD), which is keeping track of the 77-ton satellite from a command center in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Blue Chips Post Losses

NEW YORK (AP) — Blue-chip and glamor stocks posted some losses Wednesday in a mixed session marked by selling pressure on International Business Machines shares.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had risen 10.14 points Monday and Tuesday, slipped back 3.12 to 842.17.

New York Stock Exchange volume came to 40.74 million shares, off only slightly from Tuesday's 45.45 million total, which was the largest of the year.

Many of the big-name issues began their retreat after selling hit IBM, the No. 1 holding of investing institutions, which is frequently described as a "bellwether" stock whose ups and downs can affect the general market. At the 4 p.m. close in New York, IBM was down 2½ at 75½.

An executive of the computer giant told security analysts that it had noticed "some shift" recently among its customers to increased leasing rather than purchasing of its products.

New York (AP) — Wed.'s national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of Consolidated Tape close. Prices and volume consolidated tape for securities also traded on other markets.

World Wheat Production Has Trippled In 30 Years, Survey Says

By RODERICK TURNBULL
Kansas City Board of Trade

KANSAS CITY — The world has been able to more than double, in fact, almost triple its wheat production in the last 30 years.

The International Wheat Council in London in a review of world wheat output noted that production in 1949 was 160 million metric tons; in 1978, it was 440 million metric tons, an increase of 280 million.

Converted to bushels, these figures show that in 1948 the world produced about 5,879 million bushels; in 1978 about 16,168 million or an increase of about 10,289 million.

This data should be fixed in the minds of anyone analyzing world trade in wheat, formulating domestic farm programs, world wheat agreements or anything else relevant to total production and trade of the bread grain.

For one thing, the figures demonstrate that the world, at least in the past, has had the ability to increase production dramatically.

On the other hand, the world has more people every year. And, the world consumes all that it produces. It has carryovers every year, but eventually these are consumed.

World trade in wheat also has increased. But world trade and world consumption are different things. Most wheat is consumed in the countries where it is grown.

Michael L. Hall, president of Great Plains Wheat, Inc., a grower organization with headquarters in Washington, has been pointing out in recent speeches that world trade in recent years has been increasing percentagewise more than world production. He uses U. S. Department of Agriculture figures on world production of 348.4 million metric tons in 1971-72 (the year prior to the big sales ot the Soviet Union) and 435.8 million metric tons produced in 1978-79.

The USDA figures on 1978-79 production are a little lower than the Wheat Council's estimates. At any rate, Hall calculates world wheat production since 1971 has increased 25 percent. At the same time, world trade increased from 52.4 million metric tons in 1971-72 to 72.5 million metric tons this year, or a boost of 38 percent.

But Hall also points out that while the United States, Canada, Australia, Argentina and the Common Market countries have accounted for 90 percent of the world wheat trade over the last six years, the exports of these same countries have accounted for only 15 percent of total world production.

The Wheat Council finds it significant that while the area planted to wheat around the world has increased about one-third in the last 30 years, yields have increased twofold. The Wheat Council notes that the most remarkable increases in output have taken place in the centrally-planned (communist) and the developing countries.

In its calculations, the Wheat Council refers to quintals per hectare. One quintal equals 220.46 pounds, or about 3.674 bushels. A hectare equals 2.47 acres. The Wheat Council says yields have increased from less than 10 quintals per hectare to nearly 20, or, in round numbers from nearly 14 bushels to the acre to almost 28. This is for the whole world. In the developing countries yields have moved from eight quintals per hectare to nearly 14, or from about 11.9 bushels to the acre to 20.8 bushels.

The U. S. wheat crop in 1978 averaged 31.6 bushels to the acre.

Yields in some of the developing countries, especially India, have increased appreciably in recent years following the introduction of high-yielding wheat strains and ever-increasing emphasis on improving cultivation techniques (the green revolution).

When it comes to the developed countries such as the United States and Canada, acreages in wheat have not changed much over the last 30 years, although average yields have increased.

It so happened that in 1949, the United States had one of its largest acreages in wheat at more than 75 million acres and the harvest exceeded a billion bushels. In 1978, the harvested acreage was 56,839,000 and the crop totaled 1,798,712,000 bushels.

But in the prior two years, the harvest exceeded 2 billion bushels. U. S. wheat acreages have varied widely over the years because of control programs. Last year, for instance, the government paid farmers to reduce their plantings, while most of the rest of the world, including Canada, Australia and Argentina was planting more.

The world had its biggest wheat crop in 1978-79. The Wheat Council observed that the full potential of the wheat crop was highlighted when, in certain few countries, average wheat yields approached 60 quintals per hectare or nearly 89 bushels to the acre.

"Although these results were obtained under extremely intensive and high-cost farming operations," the Wheat Council comments, "they give some indication of what might be achieved in other regions, given the right incentives and conditions."

Hall doesn't think it is in the cards that the world wheat harvests will set records every year. He contends that growth in production will lag behind the expansion in world trade. So, any substantial shortfall in world production would require increased wheat exports. He concludes the most logical and available source would be the United States.

But, as the Wheat Council's figures demonstrate, given the incentive (demand), the world outside the United States can grow more wheat over the long run.

SLAUGHTER CATTLE LAGGING

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of cattle being fed for slaughter in key areas continues to lag below a year ago, government surveys show, indicating consumers will have less beef to eat in coming months.

Researchers Delving Into 'Petroculture'

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — As the search for alternative energy sources takes on an increasingly fevered pitch, Texas A&M University researchers are turning back to the land for answer.

Agricultural scientists are able to turn primarily desert plants — with exotic names like guayule, jojoba and euphorbia — into everyday commodities such as rubber, lubricating oil and ethanol, an alcohol fuel.

Ethanol is one of the many fuel products that can be produced from what Texas A&M researchers are calling "petroculture."

Petroculture is like agriculture, except the plants are grown to be processed into fuels, plastics, building materials and other replacements for non-renewable resources.

Plants, nature's most efficient solar collectors, are the key to a renewable resource economy, says Dan Bragg, who specializes in industrial economics research.

"It's like coming down the staircase to find all the presents under the Christmas tree," he says, alluding to the potential resources packed up in plants that scientists know very little about now.

"It's much more exciting than something mundane like atomic energy, and it has much more potential," Bragg says. "So far, we've ignored most of these plants because we've had our minds on cotton, peanuts or wheat. If we couldn't eat it, we ignored it."

The petroculture products, developed in times of national emergency and strife, are used sparingly today, but that is changing.

For example, some racing cars run on ethanol, which is distilled alcohol, and are lubricated with jojoba (HO-HO-ba) oil. Jojoba is another of the desert shrubs that grows in the Southwest and is under a revival, partly due to economics and partly due to the fact that it is an excellent replacement for sperm whale oil.

Ethanol can be produced from corn, for instance, after the food value has been taken out, adds Bragg.

Certain species of plants belonging to the euphorbia (you-FOUR-bia) family produce a latex that is similar on a molecular level to crude oil.

"Nobody has put it through the lab yet," Bragg says, "but Dr. Melvin Calvin, a Nobel-winning scientist at the University of California, is promoting it."

Of all the petroculture crops, guayule (wy-OO-lee) probably holds the greatest potential, contend Bragg. Guayule could be used as a substitute for the synthetic rubber made from petroleum.

The Native Latex Commercialization Act of 1978 put $30 million in federal funds into research programs to develop guayule. Bragg and other researchers at Texas A&M have already started experimental work in several parts of Texas.

Rubber from guayule is not a new idea. In 1910, half the nation's rubber production came from the plant. So researchers know it can be used successfully.

It's now a matter of creating markets, finding the best variety strains of the plant and making guayule production economically feasible, Bragg says.

"We're looking at some very complex plants," he says of petroculture, and that means a lot of research questions remain before these resources can be used to replace non-renewable ones.

But the effort is not only worth it, Bragg believes, but vital.

"We've become an island economy," he explains. "We used to be self-sufficient, but now we import 35 percent of our iron ore, all the bauxite for producing aluminum and 50 to 55 percent of our oil. We need to develop petroculture for our national defense and for our economic health."

Bragg predicts that by the turn of the century the United States could be well on its ways to an industrial society based on renewable plants.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — A steep rally in wheat futures resumed Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade, and soybean and corn futures closed higher as well.

Wheat prices erased Tuesday's losses and went beyond to gain 14 to 18½ cents a bushel, primarily on speculative buying in the continued hope of bigger U.S. wheat exports because of possible crop damage in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Reports that Brazil and Japan had bought substantial amounts of U.S. wheat and news of continued hot, dry weather in Soviet wheat-growing areas aided the rally.

Futures On Live Cattle Close 80-150 Lower

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 80 to 150 points lower paced by August through January at the daily limit level Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. All months were at or near daily lows. Sales totaled 28,295 cars.

Futures were weak from the start following the neutral to negative cattle on feed report Tuesday and an easier tone to cash cattle. Beef was unchanged at noon but sources noted underlying weakness with packer to packer trades lower.

Deliveries total 85 thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 105½ to 106½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were steady to off $1 with the best top $71.50 per hundredweight. Omaha's top was $70.75. Slaughter was 121,000 head. About 6,000 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed 130 to 150 lower with all but distant March and April off the daily limit. All months were down limit at one time. Volume was estimated at 3,839.

Generally negative feelings by traders on the cattle on feed report as well as spillover weakness from live cattle futures sent prices tumbling. Sources also noted underlying weakness in cash beef.

Cash feeder cattle were steady to up $3 with the best top $109.50. Receipts at the major terminals today are expected to total 2,600 head.

Hog futures closed 52 to 150 higher led by June at the daily limit. August was also up the limit earlier with sales totaling 8,643 lots.

Buying was encouraged by the sharply higher live prices and discount of futures to cash. Firmer cash hams and light receipts were also noted. Stop loss orders were touched off on the climb adding to the advance. Locals were the most active.

There have been 12 deliveries thus far. Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 1 at 62½ to 67 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were up 50 cents to $2 with the best top $44 per hundredweight at Peoria. Kill was 330,000 head. The major markets today are expecting about 28,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures ended 100 higher to 5 lower in uneven trade.

Distant July was up the most with only February and March off. Futures traded on both sides of previous levels during the day with August up 185 at one time. Sales numbered 9,462 cars.

Spillover support came in from the hog pit on sharply higher live prices and firmer tone to cash product. Locals were good buyers and a commission house with cash hog connections a seller. Sources noted selling on further protests by truckers.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 3½ at 42 to 45 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

MANY FARMERS ARE INQUIRING at the Lubbock County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office about options concerning replanting of cotton under the federal farm program.

"We've had a steady stream of farmers in the office since Monday," said Alan Mackey, county ASCS executive director. "They primarily just want to know the different options available to them because the older cotton is dying."

Cotton weakened by seedling disease has been under more stress under the return to warm, sunny conditions.

Mackey said most Lubbock County farmers are replanting to cotton. The cotton acreage on only six farms has been released for planting to other crops. In Hale County, however, the ASCS office had a backlog of 165 release requests, not counting those which already had been approved.

WHERE COTTON IS DESTROYED by natural causes, farmers can qualify for a disaster payment and a partial cotton deficiency payment if one is made on the 1979 crop.

They then can plant another crop, such as grain sorghum, and be eligible for program benefits on the alternative commodity. Many farmers have used Treflan on cotton ground, however, and cannot readily plant grain sorghum on land treated with this herbicide. In some cases, though, farmers do attempt to plant below the chemical.

With rather limited cropping options, many Lubbock County farmers prefer a late cotton crop to anything else. The amount of late cotton across the area will be large.

If a farmer has only cotton on the farm and it has been destroyed, he can sign a statement agreeing to make no other use of the land for the rest of the year other than for grazing — such as on sudan or sweet sorghum — and the ASCS will assess the yield at zero and pay the grower on 75 percent of the established yield times one-third of the target price.

WITH THE PRELIMINARY TARGET PRICE at 57.7 cents per pound (it still is subject to change), the payment rate would be 19.2 cents a pound.

If a farmer is going to plant another crop on land where cotton has been destroyed, the ASCS must appraise the cotton and assign a potential yield to it. The appraised yield then is deducted from the eligible poundage (75 percent of the established yield) to arrive at a payment yield.

"I don't think we've had a single farmer to take the zero appraisal and agree to summer fallow the land," Mackey said. "They're all going to plant it back to something."

Farmers would be eligible for a low-yield disaster payment on the late cotton. Mackey pointed out that farmers are acutely aware of the high cost of diesel and know they would have to go over the land with tractors even if they didn't have some kind of crop on it.

Mackey said he could not estimate at this time the number of acres involved in the replanting situation but described it as "substantial."

"WE MAY BE SEEING ONLY THE TIP of an iceburg," Mackey said. "A lot of farmers will come in and get the program facts and then decide what to do."

Mackey pointed out that hail, sand or other adverse conditions could leave relatively little cotton in fields where stands already are thin. And if a farmer waits to see how much cotton eventually dies, he may lose additional precious time in this region's short growing season.

Where cotton is planted and destroyed, cotton deficiency payments, if any, and disaster payments cannot be made on the same poundage. But since disaster payments are made on 75 percent of the established yield, this theoretically leaves 25 percent eligible for any deficiency payment.

Deficiency payments under the target price system have never been made on cotton, however, and are not a real factor in current acreage decisions.

The lateness of the High Plains crop as a whole makes it more vulnerable to setbacks later in the season. Cotton abandonment in the northern area, although still a questionmark at the moment, may be on the high side.

'Coupon Kid' Overzealous In Airport Dealings

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jeff Dickey, a 13-year-old who's been making hundreds of dollars buying and selling airline discount coupons at San Francisco International Airport, has run afoul of the law.

His father, William Dickey, got a telephone call Tuesday evening: Pick up your son at the airport or answer for him later at a juvenile detention center. He picked him up.

Jeff and a young friend were sent home by airport police and San Mateo County sheriff's deputies following complaints from airline passengers.

What began during the weekend as a trip to the airport to help some relatives fly cheaply to the West Coast ended in a good business proposition for the youth.

Jeff first bought the four coupons he needed for his relatives. Then he continued, along with other coupon scavengers, to approach passengers as they got off flights or retrieved their baggage, asking: "Do you want to sell your half-fare coupons?"

By Tuesday night, said his father, the boy had made an estimated $400 buying the half-fare coupons from disembarking passengers and selling them to others. The purchase price ranged from $10 to $30.

"They've been pretty good about letting him do it out there," Dickey said of his son. "I guess it's kind of created a problem for their airline customers."

"They were just asked to knock it off because they're bugging the passengers," said Sgt. Charles Caverly of the sheriff's department. "I think the passengers complained to United and United complained to us."

Caverly said Jeff was not charged with any offense, although he said there may be some municipal ordinance which bans soliciting at the airport. He said the boys were detained because of complaints.

United and American airlines are distributing the coupons to all passengers through Sunday. The coupons are numbered, but don't carry passengers' names, so they could be used by anyone, the airlines say.

DEMONSTRATORS EVICTED

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police evicted an estimated 65 demonstrators from a downtown office building housing the Nicaraguan consulate after a slogan of opposition to President Anastasio Somoza was sprayed on the third-floor consulate door. One of Tuesday's demonstrators said they will hold daily demonstrations in front of the Flood Building in an attempt to close the consulate "because we don't think the consulate represents the Nicaraguan people who are in rebellion against the Somoza regime."

Stripper 'Takes It Off' In Family Tradition

SEATTLE (AP) — When Stacy Hayes takes it all off, she's carrying on the family tradition. Both her mother and grandmother were strippers.

"Work it, girl, work it!" cheers Dixie Lee Parker as her 20-year-old daughter bumps, grinds, writhes and wiggles out of a gold tinsel dress, black brassiere, panties and G-string.

"She has the same moves I did, she does the same steps I did, but I didn't teach her a thing," says the proud mother.

"I've always been interested in families that carry on traditions," says the daughter.

Stacy has been dancing under the stage name "Sunshine" for two months at the Downtown, which bills itself as "Seattle's only totally nude live theater." She also is assistant manager. Her boyfriend, David Hardy, is the manager.

She says she'd like to restore stripping to the status it had in the days of burlesque.

In fact, she'd like to learn some of her mother's routines "to bring back burlesque in people's minds," she said.

"I'd like to do a burlesque revue, but people don't do much of that any more," she said. "People just don't do feature acts any more."

She never knew her grandmother, Charlotte Parker, who ran away at a young age to join the circus and became a dancer.

In the 1930s she came to Seattle and worked as a stripper at the old State Theater, later the Rivoli, one of the city's best known burlesque houses.

Her daughter, Dixie Lee, recalled growing up backstage. In those days, the second-generation stripper said, stripping meant "getting out of elaborate gowns with 20 buttons down the back and slowly shedding gloves, boas, hats, fringes and whatever else could be put on to take off."

Like her mother, Dixie Lee ran away at age 17 and, with her boyfriend, joined a carnival in the Midwest where she worked as an exotic dancer.

How much she took off "really depended on the sheriff," she said.

She, too, became a sripper at the Rivoli but quit at age 22.

"Once, when Stacy had a birthday party — I was 31 — I worked a stag party to earn money to get Stacy a present," she said.

At age 18, Stacy ran away to Honolulu to work as a topless dancer in Waikiki.

"She called me from Hawaii," the mother recalled, "and said, 'I'm following in the family tradition.'"
