Gore, Perot trade charts, quips

Vice President Al Gore says Ross Perot will profit from NAFTA's defeat. . . .

. . . Dallas billionaire dismisses the charge as "propaganda."

By Julia Malone and Bob Deans
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Vice President Al Gore and Texas billionaire Ross Perot faced off in a feisty debate Tuesday night in which the North American Free Trade Agreement often took a back seat to personal sniping and skepticism about the government.

In often testy exchanges debate over the trade pact on CNN's "Larry King Live" show, the two men produced dueling visual aids as they squared off over whether NAFTA would benefit the country or send American jobs south to Mexico.

But the two men frequently sought to undermine the other side's credibility. Perot called government statistics about exports "phony" and derided Mexico at one point as "not a free society."

Gore, in an assault on Perot's credibility, pulled out a brochure of the Perot family business, a free trade zone near the Alliance Airport in Forth Worth and charged, "He is in a position to benefit either way."

Holding up a photograph of Perot and his son Ross Jr. from the Alliance prospectus, Gore read a description of the warehouse and factory site as an "ideal distribution point for Mexican products."

Ruling narrows defense against sex harassment

■ Supreme Court's decision could make complaints easier to prove.

By Cragg Hines
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, narrowing the defense against allegations of sexual harassment, ruled unanimously Tuesday that a worker need not prove psychological damage to successfully challenge an employer's suggestive or demeaning conduct.

Protection under the 1964 Civil Rights Act "comes into play before the harassing conduct leads to a nervous breakdown," Justice Sandra Day O'Connor said in an opinion overturning lower court decisions that invoked a test of psychological impairment.

"So long as the (work) environment would reasonably be perceived, and is perceived, as hostile or abusive ... there is no need for it also to be psychologically injurious," said O'Connor, the court's first female justice.

Women's advocates cheered the decision and said the opinion will make it easier for workers to prove allegations of sexual harassment.

The case decided by the court involved a Tennessee woman who quit her job with a trucking company after 2 1/2 years of sexual remarks by her

George W. Bush was in Midland Tuesday as part of a 27-city tour in his campaign for governor. Bush said his concern for his family and society was what prompted him to run for the office.

Bush drops in on campaign kickoff tour

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

A day after he formally announced his intent to run for governor, Republican candidate George W. Bush received a warm welcome at Midland International Airport in a city he calls home.

"Let's put the speculation to an end — I am a candidate for governor of Texas," Bush told a large crowd of noisy supporters packed into the Avion North Terminal.

"I am delighted to be home. To me, Midland best defines what it is to be the best in Texas. I was raised here, attended school here. I have always felt a kindred spirit with the people who live here.

"And, if I could have made a living, I would have stayed here," he said jokingly.

Bush said his concern for his family and society was what prompted him to run for the office.

"People ask me why I would give up baseball, why I would put my wife and two girls through the ruthless scrutiny of a campaign," he said. "Those people ask me if I have any concern for what this will do to my family. My answer is that my concern for them is why I am here.

"Our education system is not providing our children with what they need, our justice system is not keeping criminals in, we have a property tax that keeps growing and we have the fastest-growing government in the nation," he continued. "I want to do something about that."

Justices mull limits on 'fair-use' parody of rock 'n' roll oldie

By Franki V. Ransom
N.Y. Times News Service

Lawyers debate whether parody of Orbison's "Oh, Pretty Woman" is fair or ripoff.

WASHINGTON — The attorney for 2 Live Crew told the Supreme Court on Tuesday that the controversial rappers were ridiculing a golden oldie rather than ripping off songwriter Roy Orbison when they recorded a version of "Oh Pretty Woman."

Such parody is protected "fair use" under federal copyright law, said Bruce S. Ragow, a law professor at Nova University in Florida. He asked

Poll: Viewers overwhelmingly pan TV's violence

Staff report

In the most lopsided Community Pulse poll ever conducted at the Reporter-Telegram, 92 percent of the almost 300 respondents who called the non-scientific poll felt that violence as depicted on television adversely affects people's behavior.

Of the more than 70 callers who chose to leave comments along with their vote, all but five felt that something needs to be done to alter the course of television and the "densensitizing" effect the medium has on viewers through its repetitive barrage of violent images.

Cityline Community Pulse

"Television violence," according to caller Pat Tims, "gives false glamorous illusions to cruel, ugly actions. It desensitizes people to other people's pain, and conditions the impressionable to make the wrong choices."

An anonymous female caller said, "the morbid, senseless violence seen on television and in the movies today has just got to stop. It's like a drug being injected into the very bloodstream of our society and it is mostly affecting our youth."

Basin, Chihuahua, Mexico, leaders eye-to-eye on trade

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Whether NAFTA is approved or disapproved by Congress, trade between Midland-Odessa and Chihuahua, Mexico, moved one step closer Tuesday as a delegation of business and civic leaders from the city in northern Mexico met with business and civic leaders in Midland and Odessa on a one-to-one basis.

"We are building friendships, relationships and connections that may develop into business trading in the near future," said Stan Garrison, acting head of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

Seated around tables in a room at the Holiday Inn were groups of Mexicans and Americans discussing business that included, cattle trading, auto parts, manufacturing, retail operations and John Wayne Bobbitt, whose very personal suffering has gained him national notoriety, testifies.

Man describes wife's attack: Felt a 'tug,' then 'it hurt a lot'

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — A man whose wife cut off his penis after he allegedly raped her testified Tuesday that he felt a "tug" but didn't initially realize what had happened.

"I grabbed at myself and I jumped up. It hurt a lot," John Wayne Bobbitt said at his trial.

Bobbitt, who is charged with marital sexual assault, said he remembered initiating sex with his 24-year-old wife, Lorena, in the early morning of June 23 but didn't recall if they finished. He said Mrs. Bobbitt was receptive.

"I remember she put her knees up around me and her arms coming across my back," Bobbitt said.

On Monday, Mrs. Bobbitt testified that he pinned her to the bed and attacked her. After he fell asleep, she said, "I lifted the sheets and I cut it."

Doctor describes toddler's wounds

PRESTON, England (AP) — The face of slain toddler James Bulger was so badly injured that his lip was ripped from his jaw, a Home Office pathologist said Tuesday in a harrowing description of the child's wounds.

It took Dr. Alan Williams nearly an hour to tell the court about the 2-year-old boy's 42 injuries, including 22 to his face and head.

Williams also said he found the foreskin on James' penis was pulled back, which was not normal for a child that age.

"It would have required forcible retraction," Williams said.

The two 11-year-old boys accused of abducting and bludgeoning James to death watched intently Tuesday as the jury examined a heavy metal bar.

It was one of 59 exhibits introduced by prosecutors, including 26 bricks, bloodstained stones and a pair of small white socks.

The cause of death was multiple head injuries, Williams said, adding that some blows to James' head fractured the joints that hold the skull plates together in a baby's head.

"There are so many injuries to the scalp and skull you could not single out one particular blow to the head and say that was the one that was fatal," Williams said.

"I would estimate there were at least 30 separate blows to the body. The majority were due to heavy blunt objects and, given the amount of brick dust at the scene, I consider bricks to be a likely implement," Williams said.

James would have died within minutes of the attack and was dead before his body was severed by a train, Williams said.

A patterned injury, of about 1½ inches square on the toddler's right cheek appeared to have been caused by stamping or kicking from a shoe, he said.

Williams said James' lower lip had been ripped away from the jawbone "due to a blow to the mouth."

James' pants, underpants, shoes and socks were found a distance from the body and Williams said several bruises and scratches on the boy's leg and feet probably were inflicted when he was naked.

"The brain shows evidence of bruising and contusions which I would expect from the extensive fractures of the skull," Williams said.

James' parents, Ralph and Denise Bulger, were not in court.

The two defendants, 10 at the time of the crime, are the youngest Britons ever to be charged with murder. They have pleaded innocent but the prosecution says one confessed to police and the other admitted witnessing the crime.

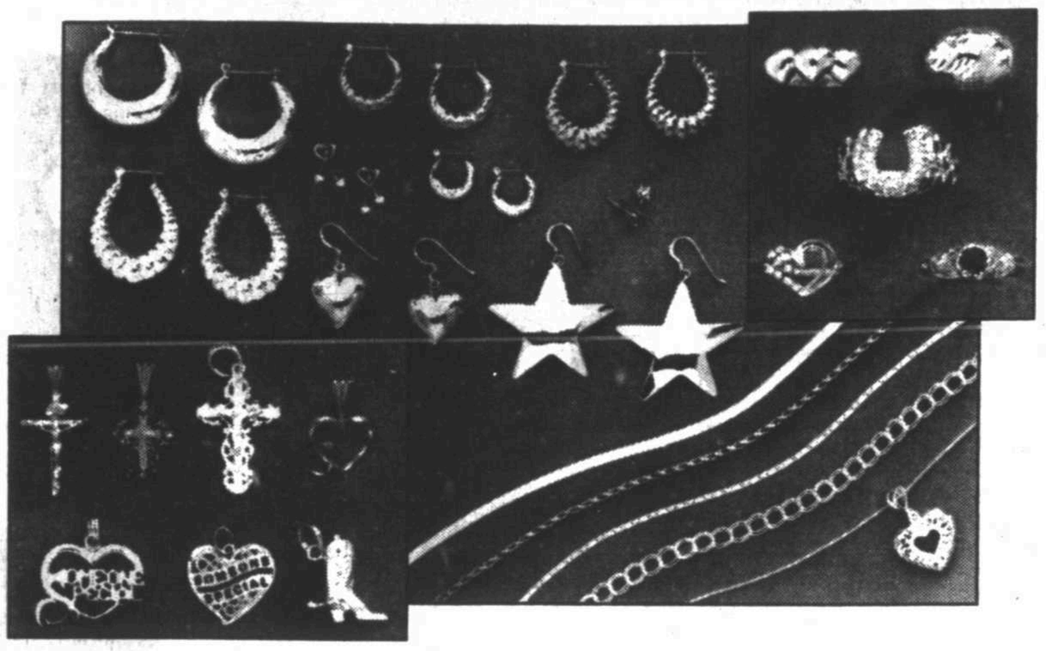

The boys must be referred to as Child A and Child B by the news media.

Child A's parents have never attended and Child B's parents, who have attended virtually every session, stayed in another room in the courthouse while the pathologist testified.

If convicted, the boys will be held indefinitely in a secure facility.

Israeli, Palestinian negotiators agree to resume peace sessions

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Palestinian and Israeli negotiators agreed Tuesday to restart suspended talks on implementing the Israel-PLO peace accord, with little more than a month left before the plan takes effect.

The agreement came after two days of meetings in Cairo by an Israeli-Palestinian committee formed to settle the differences that led Palestinian negotiators to walk out of the talks a week ago.

The committee met in extreme secrecy and its statement did not say where or when the talks would resume.

But the Palestine Liberation Organization's chief negotiator Nabil Shaath later told Egyptian television that the talks would be in Taba, the Egyptian resort where previous rounds were held. Egypt's Middle East News Agency quoted diplomatic sources as saying the talks would start on Sunday.

An official close to the negotiations said delegates planned to move the location of the talks each week.

The secrecy follows a complaint last Sunday by Shaath that media coverage had interfered with the peace talks.

Under an agreement signed Sept. 13, Israel is to give limited autonomy to the occupied Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho. The talks are to work out the complex details of the agreement, including arrangements for troop withdrawals.

Announcement that the talks would resume was made in a four-paragraph Palestinian-Israeli statement that said "progress was achieved in some issues (and) it was decided to continue negotiation next week."

The rest of the statement was mostly taken up with describing the "positive and constructive atmosphere" in the committee meetings and thanking Egypt for mediating the dispute that led to the Palestinian walkout.

Shaath did not comment on whether progress was made in resolving the dispute, which centered on Israel's plans for how to protect Jewish settlers in Gaza once Israeli troops are withdrawn.

Israeli officials could not be reached for comment.

The committee meetings Monday and Tuesday were so shielded from the press that the government would not even confirm the meeting place, believed to be Egypt's Foreign Ministry.

Hussein moves toward accord after election

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Flush from a parliamentary election victory, King Hussein said Tuesday that Jordan will forge ahead in negotiating peace with Israel.

But with his supporters winning a strong position in parliament Monday, Hussein also must deal with problems that are more important to Jordanians — poverty and high unemployment.

"He must remedy Jordan's economic and political ills in order to maintain popular support," said Labib Kamhawi, a political scientist at Jordan University. "It is going to be an arduous path," he added.

Both Muslim fundamentalists, who oppose peace talks with Israel, and the government failed to make the negotiations the key issue for voters worried about a frail economy and an unemployment rate estimated at 30 percent.

But peace with Israel is seen by the government as one way to boost Jordan's economy by luring investment to the region.

Hussein told reporters the peace process was moving ahead, but said he had no plans to meet soon with Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel.

"I hope progress will be made and is being made," he said. "Now not everything could be put under the flood lights of the cameras ... But there is an ongoing process and we hope it will succeed."

Making peace with Israel also could held Jordan's economy by leading Western nations to restore aid that was cut after the pro-Western kingdom did not support the U.S.-led effort to drive Iraqi troops from Kuwait in 1991.

On Monday, Jordan's first multiparty election since 1956 gave Hussein the support he needs in parliament to ratify any peace accord. The fundamentalist Muslim Brotherhood, which has worked to wreck the peace talks, lost six of its 22 seats in 80-member parliament and its Islamic allies lost nine of 12.

Report: Ethnic conflicts increase world's refugees

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — The spread of ethnic conflict since the end of the cold war has pushed the number of refugees to 44 million people, or more than one in every 130 inhabitants of the globe, the U.N. high commissioner for refugees reported Tuesday.

The number of people qualifying as refugees because they have been driven across an international frontier has climbed steadily from 2.5 million in 1970 to 19.7 million today, taking into account the recent mass exodus from the tiny African state of Burundi. In addition, roughly 24 million people have been forced into exile within their own countries.

The figures were presented by the high commissioner, Sadako Ogata, in a report titled "The State of the World's Refugees — the Challenge of Protection."

ATTACK: Man testifies in marital assault trial

(From 1A)

Mrs. Bobbitt, who faces a Nov. 29 trial on a charge of malicious wounding, testified that her husband frequently forced her to have sex. She said Bobbitt sexually assaulted her on their fourth wedding anniversary June 18 and again on June 23.

Bobbitt's lawyer, Gregory Murphy, asked him whether he ever forced sex on his wife.

"No, I did not," said Bobbitt, 26.

Minutes into cross-examination, prosecutor Paul B. Ebert pulled a piece of paper from his file and demanded, "Isn't it true that you tormented your wife with a list of women you slept with?" Ebert said Bobbitt read the list to his wife on their anniversary.

"It was my own private copy," Bobbitt replied. "I didn't show that to her ever."

In rebuttal testimony Tuesday, Mrs. Bobbitt said her husband read women's names from the list aloud "when he was raping me."

Mrs. Bobbitt had testified earlier that her estranged husband had told her forced sex excited him. Bobbitt denied Tuesday ever making such a statement.

Earlier Tuesday, a Prince William County court counselor testified that Mrs. Bobbitt came to his office two days before the mutilation and asked about court protection from her husband.

"I basically told her I'm concerned for her safety because of what she told me," Stephen Roque said. He said Mrs. Bobbitt complained of physical and sexual abuse by her husband.

To get a court order protecting her, Mrs. Bobbitt had to appear before a judge. Roque said she opted not to appear and said she would return later in the week. She never came back.

Another witness, a friend who was staying with the Bobbitts at the time of the mutilation, said Bobbitt had five beers and two mixed drinks before arriving home about 3 a.m.

Defense witness Robert Johnson said that after the mutilation, Bobbitt awakened him and went into the bathroom.

"I saw John's reflection in the mirror. I saw the blood. He said, 'I've got to go to the hospital.' "

After cutting off the penis with one stroke, Mrs. Bobbitt said, she fled the couple's Manassas apartment still clutching it and the red-handled fillet knife. She said she realized she was still holding the severed organ midway between the apartment and the salon where she works as a manicurist.

"I screamed and I threw it" out of the car window, she said.

Police found it in some grass. It was packed in ice and taken to Prince William Hospital, where it was reattached in a nine-hour operation. Doctors said Bobbitt is recovering well.

Bobbitt was charged with marital sexual assault, not marital rape, because under Virginia law the latter charge only applies to couples living apart or if the victim is seriously physically injured. The Bobbitts are seeking a divorce.

Each could be sentenced to 20 years in prison if convicted.

Prince William County Circuit Judge LeRoy F. Millette denied two defense motions Tuesday to dismiss the case.

PAN: Most in poll link TV violence, behavior and dumb not to think that increased violence on television is causing more and more violence in the United States and here in Midland," another female caller said.

(From 1A)

"When you hear about kids picking up guns and killing people, I don't know where they get it other than television."

Don't blame it all on television, other callers said.

"As long as we glorify booze and don't tell the hell it brings to everybody's lives, and you couple that with violence and career working women who forsake their children, what else can you expect? Don't blame it all on TV," one anonymous male caller said.

Some callers offered opinions historical in nature that would support their claims of TV's influence.

"Consider years ago when people like Joan Crawford and Clark Gable were smoking," Shirley Counts said. "This encouraged very many of us to start smoking.

"Television has a very definite impression on people who watch it. It's a myth to think that parents are able to stand by the telveision and monitor their children's programs. Most parents now are working two jobs because of the economic situation so let's get real about parents censoring television. It just doesn't happen."

A handful of people thanked both KMID-Channel 2 and KPEJ, the local Fox affiliate, for pulling programs that station personnel deemed offensive.

Other callers provided details of incidents involving children and the way they've reacted to violent images in the media.

One teen-age boy said his 3-year-old cousin reacted negatively after seeing the movie "Child's Play," where a possessed doll named Chucky becomes homicidal.

"After he watched it, he began to break things around the house and blamed it on Chucky. He'd have nice Chuckys and mean Chuckys and everytime something would go wrong he would blame it on one of the Chuckys."

Another caller said, "We live in what I would consider to be a good Christian home and we have a sensitive, loving third-grader. This year, we allowed him to have more freedom to choose what he watched on television and I think this was a big mistake. . . . Because of the comments he made after watching television about drugs and drinking and driving fast and talking bad."

And James Moody feels TV is just pointed in the wrong direction.

"There's more than just violence on television that makes humans less than what they should be," he said. "The TV industry could do a lot better job presenting the best of what we are. Not the worst."

TRADE: Leaders establish relationships

real estate.

"Now that trade barriers are being removed, we are looking to build a good commercial relationship between Midland and Odessa and the rest of the Permian Basin," said Patricio Martinez, mayor of Chihuahua. "It is an opportunity that has always existed, but has not been developed," he said.

Martinez said his city of 800,000 had a 100-year trade relationship with El Paso that had worked very well, and he was confident that the same relationship could be established in the Permian Basin. He also noted that the city of Chihuahua had a very good relationship with Roswell, N.M., because many of the sons of businessmen in Chihuahua are graduates of New Mexico Military Institute.

"We are a good market, and we would like to see the same friendship established with Midland-Odessa that we have with El Paso and Roswell," Martinez said.

He said that Mexican trade had made shopping malls in El Paso some of the most profitable per square foot in the nation.

Martinez, whose family business interests include hotels, cattle and book stores, said he would like to begin to build the relationship by starting a Rotary student-exchange program this summer in which Chihuahua and Midland students would exchange homes for the summer.

"Any kind of friendship or trade relationship should be natural and not forced," Martinez said. "We build friendship and from there we build business."

Gazi Moises, an automobile distributor in Chihuahua, said the relationship between Midland-Odessa and his city was now "on a roll and needed to be helped."

He also noted that Midland had a Hidalgo Park but no statue of Father Hidalgo, a Mexican revolutionary leader, and said he would perhaps try to find such a statue to give to the city of Midland. "It will be a token of friendship," he said.

It also was suggested by Martinez that a permanent representative from Chihuahua be assigned to Midland to handle business and other inquiries.

Martinez said many people might want to consider Chihuahua, which was founded 284 years ago, as a tourist destination, because of its 200-year-old architecture and magnificent cathedrals.

The mayor said Mexico was not the same country of 15 years ago. He said it was more open, more democratic and focused on its problems and seeking a higher standard of life for its people.

Asked what had accounted for the change, he simply said: "The times."

Jose-Luis Suarez, consul of Mexico in Midland, said nearly all Mexican businessmen favor NAFTA. Only a handful of holdouts who had benefited by closed markets and tariffs had resisted it, he said.

He said previous trade between Chihuahua and Midland-Odessa had been solely out of necessity or by accident, but he predicted deliberate efforts to establish trade between the two areas would pay off.

Approximately 38 business leaders and civic leaders from Chihuahua were in the trade delegation, which spent Monday and Tuesday visiting facilities in Midland and Odessa.

RULING: Court slims defense boss, including his suggestion: "Don't you think it's about time we started screwing around."

The ruling marked the second time the court has ventured into the increasingly contentious workplace issue and the first time since Justice Clarence Thomas narrowly won confirmation to the nation's highest bench in 1991 after facing allegations that he sexually harassed a former aide, Anita Hill.

O'Connor conceded that neither the high court's only other major ruling on sexual harassment on the job, in a 1986 opinion, nor the new decision created "a mathematically precise test."

"Whether an environment is 'hostile' or 'abusive' can be determined only by looking at all the circumstances," O'Connor said. "These may include the frequency of the discriminatory conduct; its severity; whether it is physically threatening or humiliating, or a mere offensive utterance; and whether it unreasonably interferes with an employee's work performance."

The standard set down by the court in the 1986 opinion, O'Connor said, "takes a middle path between making actionable any conduct that is merely offensive and requiring the conduct to cause a tangible psychological injury."

OLDIE: High court weighs limits on fair use the justices to reverse an appeals court decision that 2 Live Crew had unlawfully infringed on the copyright of the rock 'n' roll classic.

(From 1A)

"Parody is fair use unless it supplants the original," Rogow argued to the court. "The purpose of parody is to imitate, ridicule and poke fun at the original."

However, the attorney for Acuff-Rose Music, Inc., copyright owners of the original song, told the court that the issue was more akin to stealing than to satire.

"This case is not about parody," said Sidney Rosdeitcher, a New York lawyer. "This case is about selling rap music by fusing street messages with popular music.

"You have to have a right to say no," he said. "They took a great rock and roll classic and turned it into a parody that took too much (from the original), exploiting it and selling it for profit."

Luther Campbell, lead rapper for 2 Live Crew, sat in the courtroom's public section as the lawyers spoke of rock, rap and rights.

A satirist must borrow some of a song "so you know what is being made fun of," Rogow said.

This view was supported in briefs filed by the comedy group Capitol Steps, comedian Mark Russell and the Harvard Lampoon.

But Rosdeitcher said some parodies take too much.

The 2 Live Crew version stole the "jolting guitar riff" from Orbison's original version, he said. "They played it because it was one of the most wonderful, danceable, dynamic musical riffs of rock 'n' roll."

This view was backed in briefs filed by singer-songwriters Dolly Parton and Michael Jackson and by the estates of composers George and Ira Gershwin.

Outside court, a spokesman for the publishers said they could lose millions of dollars in royalties if the lower court ruling is reversed.

Copyright law requires someone to get permission and pay royalties when reviving a protected song, unless the new version represents a "fair use" involving comment or criticism.

Justice Antonin Scalia said that if indeed the record was sold because of the original music and not the song, then the owners "did lose money."

The original song written by Roy Orbison and William Dees was copyrighted in 1964 by Acuff-Rose. In June 1989, 2 Live Crew released "As Clean as They Wanna Be," an album containing "Pretty Woman," a satire of "Oh, Pretty Woman."

A 2 Live Crew representative told Nashville-based Acuff-Rose the rappers planned to use the song and offered to pay a copyright fee.

BUSH: Candidate hits Tall City against Gov. Ann Richards would be tough, Bush said he would run a campaign based on his beliefs of a good educational system, a better justice system and a small state budget.

(From 1A)

"An education is to the state is what the national defense is to the country," he said. "We are doing it backward here, with central governing and local funding. We need central funding and local governing."

He also called for the end of the Texas Education Agency, which he said only hinders local districts from making changes necessary in their particular district.

"If a district wants to change a rule, a textbook or a certain curriculum, the district must go through the TEA for permission," he said. "Local educators need to be making the decisions for those local districts."

Bush said he would push for no parole for persons who are guilty of sexual crimes and a revision of the juvenile criminal law.

"That law was set up in 1963, when the mindset was that no child under the age of 17 would be likely to commit a serious crime," he said. "Well, it's 1993 and we have to take responsibility for a whole generation of kids who know that the risks do not outweigh the rewards in our current justice system."

The candidate said he would propose "Tough Love" academies and boot camps run and taught by military personnel for young criminals.

"These kids want authority figures in their lives," he said. "They need to learn that love and discipline go hand-in-hand. They need to learn good citizenship and be literate enough to become a productive part of society."

Bush also said he would stop the state budget from expanding even farther.

"We are headed on a collision course between government jobs and private jobs," he said. "And, I am going to come down on the side of the common man and the private jobs."

DEBATE: Sniping dominates NAFTA faceoff

(From 1A)

Perot, saying he owned only a minority share in Alliance, responded that "It's my son's business."

Gore also recalled unfounded predictions the Texan had made in the past about bank failures and Operation Desert Storm casualties and challenged him to reveal how much he had spent to lobby against NAFTA.

By the end of the 90-minute exchange the debate partners zeroed in on the accord itself, which would wed the economies of the United States, Canada and Mexico by phasing out most barriers to trade and investment among the three countries over a 15-year period beginning Jan. 1.

"This is a choice between the politics of fear and the politics of hope," said Gore in arguing for the accord, which would gradually end trade barriers between the United States, Canada and Mexico.

"We are not scared. We are not a nation of quitters. We are not a nation that's afraid to compete."

Perot shot back with a host of concerns about the accord. "If we keep shipping out manufacturing jobs across the border and around the world," Perot warned, the day will come when "we will not be able to defend this great country."

"We are being sold out by foreign lobbyists," Perot said.

If Perot was using scare tactics, Gore employed some of his own, warning that "If we don't take this deal, you can bet that Japan will try to take this deal. They'll be in there in a New York minute."

The high-stakes debate came as the Clinton administration was still trailing badly in the struggle to win the NAFTA vote Nov. 17 in the House.

The debate gave both sides fodder for claiming victory, though some analysts saw no clear winner.

"I think it's a split decision," said Washington trade lawyer Frank J. Schuchat. A supporter of NAFTA and Clinton, Schuchat expressed disappointment that the debate didn't focus more on the substance of the agreement. "It was too much of a prize fight as opposed to a debate."

At one point, as Perot was attacking lobbyists, Gore countered by telling him "you know a lot about it," and said that Perot himself had employed lobbyists.

"You're lying now," Perot said.

Gore pressed, saying that the Texan had sought tax breaks from Congress in the 1970s.

"You're so general, I can't pin it down," Perot said.

From the start, Perot treated the camera like a close friend, gazing often and directly into the lens and addressing the audience as "you." Gore, who won the pre-debate coin toss and the right to pick his seat, chose to sit next to King and address most of his comments to the TV anchor.

The normally cerebral Gore avoided mind-numbing economic lingo. In most instances, he used personal examples to back up his points, citing a friend from Tennessee. Gore pulled out rich personal anecdote about his childhood friend who is a tire company worker who backs NAFTA because it would improve the prospects for Gordon's tire company to ship exports to Mexico.

Each came with armfuls of props.

China considers Red Cross visitations with political prisoners

BEIJING (NYT) — Signaling what would be a major policy shift on human rights, China said Tuesday that it would give "positive consideration" to allowing the Red Cross to visit more than 3,000 political prisoners.

Foreign Minister Qian Qichen, speaking with U.S. journalists in advance of next week's meeting between President Clinton and the Chinese Communist Party secretary, Jiang Zemin, said China viewed the meeting not as a "negotiating session" or for "picture taking," but as a discussion of "a broader and longer-term perspective" on bilateral relations.

The talks are to be held in Seattle during a meeting of national leaders from both sides of the Pacific.

Qian indicated that Jiang would take a hard line against Washington's policy of linking trade preferences to China's human-rights record, a policy that the United States has insisted on since the 1989 military crackdown at Tiananmen Square.

"China does not accept linking questions unrelated to trade," Qian said. "This method is a means left over from the Cold War era. It is a means to exert pressure, and therefore one cannot expect China to accept this."

Clinton said in May that "overall, significant progress" in improving China's human-rights record would be the main criterion for whether he renewed China's favorable trade status with the United States next June.

Just three weeks ago, Secretary of State Warren Christopher said he did not think he could recommend renewal of China's trade privileges because of China's human-rights record.

But in answer to a question about the desire by rights groups to inspect prisons, Qian said, "I believe that if the Red Cross does put forward such a request for exchanges, we would give positive consideration to that request."

Western diplomats and human-rights workers, who have been urging China to take such a step for years, applauded the move. If carried out, it would reverse four decades of refusals to allow any outside humanitarian organization access to the tens of thousands of Chinese who have been imprisoned, tortured or persecuted for their political beliefs.

The Asian representative for the International Committee of the Red Cross, Christophe Swinarski, said in a telephone interview from Hong Kong that the Red Cross would take Qian's statement "very seriously," and hinted that talks on prison access could begin this week when Swinarski passes through Beijing on his way to North Korea.

John T. Kamm, an American businessman who has carried on private humanitarian work in China for years and who has been urging Beijing to open its prisons to the Red Cross, characterized Qian's statement as "a significant change in the opinion of the Chinese government."

"To me, the immediate impact of this announcement," he said, "is that it delivers a message to every warden."

Beijing, Russia sign five-year military pact

BEIJING (NYT) — Russia and China signed a five-year military cooperation agreement Tuesday that is expected to broaden the transfer of military technology to China.

But Russian Defense Minister Gen. Pavel Grachev said the expanded cooperation would not be used "against any third country."

Chinese and Russian officials also emphasized that Grachev was not in China to negotiate any new sale of Russian weapons to China, which has been a matter of concern to China's neighbors and to the United States.

Western officials say China is now focused less on buying large and expensive weapons from Russia and more on modernizing Chinese military industries by purchasing Russian know-how.

The Chinese are particularly interested in acquiring important military technology in rocketry, anti-submarine warfare and air defense, Western analysts say.

Grachev, on a four-day visit, met with senior Chinese leaders, including Prime Minister Li Peng, who characterized the visit as "very successful." But in Tuesday's statements to Russian reporters covering Grachev's trip, neither side provided details of the cooperation agreement.

Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen said, "During the visit, the question of Russian arms sales to China will not be discussed."

Last December, Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev said Russian industries had sold $1.2 billion in military hardware to China in 1992, including about 24 advanced SU-27 fighters.

Clinton annoys N. Korea with invasion remark

TOKYO (AP) — President Clinton has annoyed North Korea's leaders by suggesting the United State will retaliate if the Communist state invades capitalist South Korea.

Clinton is "seriously getting on our nerves," said a statement carried Tuesday by North Korea's official news agency.

The statement by an unidentified Foreign Ministry spokesman was in response to Clinton's remark Sunday that if North Korea tried to invade South Korea, he would consider it tantamount to an attack on the United States.

At the Pentagon, spokeswoman Kathleen deLaski denied reports that circulated last week that a senior defense official had suggested an attack by North Korea on the South was possible in the near future.

She said that the official, who was traveling with Defense Secretary Les Aspin last week in the region, noted that the administration has concerns about the area, "but there was no mention that the department felt an attack (by North Korea) was imminent."

"The department doesn't believe there has been a sudden buildup (of North Korean forces) within the past weeks or months that is out of the ordinary. There has been a gradual buildup over the past 10 years," she said.

The United States and other nations have been trying to persuade North Korea to accept international inspections of its nuclear facilities.

Trade talk's in air for Midland, too!

Talk of trade is in the air — both in Washington, D.C., where the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) is scheduled for congressional action on Nov. 17, and in Midland, where a delegation of approximately 50 Mexicans from Chihuahua City arrived Monday to talk about the establishment of a trade corridor.

While it's never easy to predict what will occur when a trade agreement such as NAFTA undergoes congressional scrutiny, it's much simpler to see how free trade works at the local level.

The trip to Midland this week was in response to a visit to Chihuahua City in June by Permian Basin businessmen, community leaders and chamber officials. The group of Mexicans who came to Midland represent industries which include aviation, clothing, food production, auto and truck manufacturing, retail stores, travel, investments, construction, beverage, agricultural, ironworks, furniture, spas and general business.

That's a good cross-section of Mexican industry that should mesh well with this region's industries and industrial needs.

The goal of freer trade between the United States, Mexico and Canada is a worthy one. NAFTA offers one alternative for reaching that goal, but there are other ways of increasing trade between the three nations. That fact is underscored by the visit to Midland by the Mexican representatives and their tour of various Midland businesses and industries. The visit should have given them ample opportunity to see business prospects in the United States and for Midland businessmen to become acquainted with their business possibilities.

That's good. Hopefully, the visits will lead to further interest on the part of both Chihuahua City, Odessa and Midland officials and a trade corridor can be established. Better business opportunities and greater markets — that is the name of the game in trade.

Reno compromises post in New Jersey

WASHINGTON — What should be a church and state-like separation between politics and law enforcement was compromised when Attorney General Janet Reno interjected herself into New Jersey's hotly contested gubernatorial race.

Anderson

One high-level Justice Department official told us that career attorneys throughout the department were "visibly upset" in the wake of Reno's appearance last month with New Jersey's embattled Democratic Gov. James Florio. "This will take the bloom off the rose if she (Reno) continues to get involved in partisan politics," said one official about the star member of the Clinton Cabinet.

Florio was clearly seeking a ride on Reno's coattails. He showcased her around the state, and at one point posed with her standing near a table covered with semiautomatic weapons. Reno renewed calls for a national ban on assault weapons fashioned after a similar law Florio pushed through the New Jersey legislature in 1990, and lauded Florio's leadership.

Florio needs the help: He has been in deep political trouble since early in his term for unpopular tax hikes.

Reno's spokespersons have argued that the trip was inspired by her well-known concern about assault weapons, especially those that fall into the hands of youths. Reno says she would never allow partisanship to color her judgment about a case, and her early track record bears that out. But judgment often deals as much with perception as performance as Reno herself has explained.

With her appearance timed for the final stretch of the campaign, few Justice attorneys were buying her lawyerly language that the timing of her appearance was essentially a coincidence. "She's too smart," one Justice official said. "She's a smart lawyer and experienced politician. She knows exactly what she was doing."

Justice sources noted with irony that one of Reno's role models is Griffin Bell, who as Jimmy Carter's attorney general forged a reputation for remaining above the political fray. "He (Bell) never got involved in this sort of thing," remarked one official who served under Bell.

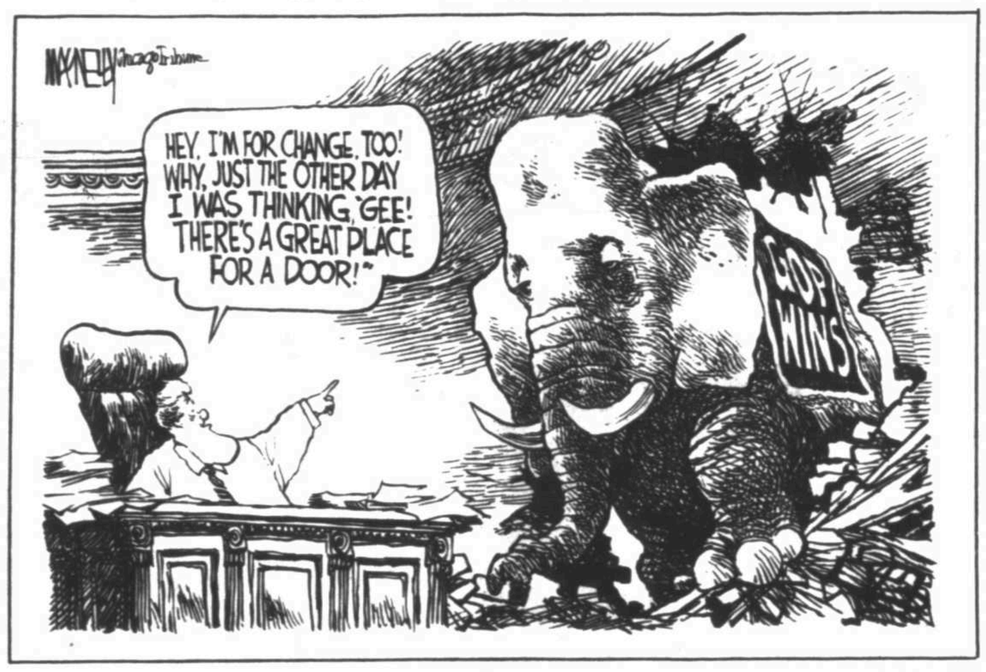

As the nation's top cop, Reno oversees public integrity, corruption and election fraud. Florio's Republican opponent, Christine Todd Whitman, criticized Reno on these grounds, noting that Justice has been investigating bond sales practices of people tied to the Florio administration.

Reno herself set some rigid rules in response to a hypothetical question from Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., during her confirmation hearings last spring. Asked what she would do if invited to a political event or fund-raising dinner for a candidate, Reno responded: "If Mr. Chairman asked me to do that, I'd say, 'Why don't you find something else for me to do and let me try to be the nation's lawyer and stay out of politics.'"

To avoid a repeat, Reno may also want to consult with a former deputy attorney general under Lyndon Johnson who once warned about politics creeping into the attorney general's office: "Our whole philosophy has been that you have to depoliticize this operation as much as possible. . . . Once the Department becomes political, of course, the mission of justice must suffer."

That former Justice staffer was Warren Christopher, the current secretary of state and Reno's Cabinet colleague.

'Iraqgate' scandal needs impartial justice

WASHINGTON — Let me take you behind the scenes in the exposure of a scandal, as the irresistible forces of inquiry slam into the immovable stone wall of coverup.

Safire

In Iraqgate, the Bush administration arranged for billions in unlawful financing of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein through the Atlanta office of Italy's Banca Lavoro. To avert embarrassment after Saddam's double-cross, our Justice Department conspired with Italy to obstruct the investigation of Saddam's bankers and Bush's top aides.

This past Sunday, the forces of inquiry got a bible to work from: "Spider's Web: The Secret History of How the White House Illegally Armed Iraq." Alan Friedman — whose reports in The Financial Times and on ABC's "Nightline" have helped move the revelations along — brings together the story that most media have shied away from because corruption's great friend is complexity.

In Congress, the relentless Inspector Javert of Iraqgate — House Banking chairman Rep. Henry Gonzalez — will take testimony from the convicted Atlanta branch manager who is the designated fall guy for higher-ups in Rome and Washington.

Also subpoenaed is Rinaldo Petrignani of Rogers & Wells, who as Italian ambassador made the approach to Bush's attorney general for the "damage control" that Dick Thornburgh denies ordering. But my friend Rinaldo, who was only doing his country's bidding, is also being sought by Italian authorities on a bribery charge and may be too busy to finger American culprits.

That's what revelation has going for it this week. But the forces of inquiry can do little without a court-appointed independent counsel, which calls for passage of a new law.

On the side of stonewalling is a group of Republican senators led by John McCain, protected by Bob Dole, who want to delay a floor vote on the independent counsel bill.

They have high-sounding excuses, but the real reason is to drag a foot until the 1989 crimes of Iraqgate come under the statute of limitations.

Behind that stone wall is another stone wall: Attorney General Janet Reno. When asked if she would seek a special prosecutor from the court if the law passed, she tells me: "I have no conflict of interest on Iraqgate." In other words, she will profess to be a Democrat investigating a Republican administration's crimes, and will refuse to honor Bill Clinton's promise of independent counsel.

Her protestation of no-conflict is a charade: the former Criminal Division chief who stands to be investigated in the Banca Lavoro damage control is Ed Dennis, the whitewasher chosen by Reno's deputy to find "no blame" in her Waco blunder. It's all one cozy, self-protecting establishment; but when asked if Justice's Criminal Division can investigate itself, Reno replies blithely, "It's my Criminal Division now."

Do not lose heart; persistence pays. Last February, revelations in The New York Times forced the Senate Intelligence committee into reporting that the CIA told Justice about Rome's corrupt involvement, following which everybody lied. But that staff report was fuzzy; I submitted 28 groups of questions following leads in it.

Example: the report read "the chief prosecutor and chief investigator on the case were part of a Justice delegation which met with the Italian ambassador . . ." I asked: "Who were these two Americans? Who arranged this meeting and where was it? Were minutes kept? Was this the same Italian ambassador (Petrignani) who saw Attorney General Thornburgh at a White House reception? Did Senate staff ask why a memo was prepared by the chief of the Criminal Division (Dennis) for the AG three days before the approach at the White House?"

Committee staffers, who did not want to admit they failed to ask the right questions, stonewalled.

That's how the battle between revealers and resisters goes on. Justice will prevail when somebody in Justice goes to jail.

William Safire's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

It is no longer a question of whether the Washington Redskins will go to the Super Bowl or not, but whether they will have enough health benefits to carry them through the rest of the season.

Buchwald

The Redskins have sustained so many injuries this year that their medical insurance has run out, and unless the Clinton health bill is passed very soon, the team will be playing with no protection at all.

With rising costs, the private health insurance companies have reduced benefits for Redskin football players while raising their rates. Under the new rules you can have only one hamstring injury in a lifetime.

You may stay in a hospital room for only two hours with a broken leg. Groin and collarbone injuries will no longer be paid for unless they were committed on the line of scrimmage.

The Clinton Administration is worried about the lack of protection for Redskin players and insists that Congress has to deal with it.

One of Hillary Clinton's spokespeople said, "The American insurance industry couldn't care less whether the Redskins are covered or not. They don't hesitate to collect their premiums, but let the player have the wind knocked out of him and they will invariably find a reason why he can't be treated."

Under Clinton's plan each football player would carry a plastic health card in his shoulder pad.

When the player is injured he'd show the card to the referee who would call for a stretcher to take him off the field. He could then be taken to the hospital of his choice, which must accept him even if it is located in Buffalo.

The doctor will be compensated with a fee of $10 for an office visit or two tickets to a Redskins band concert.

In the original Clinton health plan for football players, the government intended to provide two crutches for broken ankles. But to save money, now the employer will have to pay for one crutch and the player must pay for the other.

If an opposing lineman knocks out a football player's teeth in a game, the player is entitled to six tooth implants and a free cleaning.

Owners of professional football teams are up in arms over the plan, maintaining that they would end up paying most of the costs.

A Redskins assistant coach told me, "We need hospital beds if we're going to continue as a football team. If this program goes through, we will have no choice but to move the team to Mexico."

In the meantime, Lloyd's of London is pooling its resources in order to get the Redskins through the season. They are not happy about it as several syndicates at Lloyd's have gone bankrupt carrying Washington's health insurance during the first seven games.

As one underwriter explained, "We broke even on cracked ribs, but we were wiped out by tendinitis."

The injuries to the Redskins have become so severe that management has announced that instead of going for a linebacker and a quarterback, they are giving up their draft choices to hire two more doctors and buy a CAT scanner.

The Redskins coach told me, "Clinton has to have a decent health plan for football players because the entire nation is watching to see if anything he comes up will work or not. The Redskins are perfect to experiment with. They all need medical care of one kind or another. If the United States can't take care of its wounded football players, how can it take care of anyone else?"

Senators give 'nothing' again

To the tune of a clatterbox on a galloping goose's rear end, Sen. Robert K. Dornan and the "Plano Kid," Sen. Phil Gramm, have shown the world their caliber .22, and once again both have given the American people two cents of nothing.

At this time I can assure them both, they will be eligible for the Purple Heart in 1996.

'Fright Night' offers thanks

The board of directors of the Midland-Lee Youth Center, Inc. would like to take this opportunity to thank all of the wonderful persons who made "Fright Night" a huge success.

To the 1,400 persons who walked through our door and sometimes had to stand in line for up to an hour in a very cold room, we thank you for your patience and understanding and hope that you felt that your money was well spent. We also recognize that without the help of the press and media, we could not have been the success that we were. To Myra Salcedo, Joe D. Williams and the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Jason Feinberg and KWES-TV9, D'Lane Runkles and KOSA-TV and to the radio stations whose innovative PSA's never ceased to amaze us, Jack and Jill and Power 106, Texas 102, The Bat, K-Lite, Mix 97.9, Tejano 96, KGEE 100, KNFM 92.3, KJBC, and Hot Country KCRS, we give you our thanks.

We also want to acknowledge the students who worked as actors and tour guides and the friends and family who came through when we we're short of help and short of time, and lastly to Calvin Bryant whose unselfish use of his building allowed all of this to take place. To all of the above individuals and the many others who are not named, we give you our thanks for a great and successful event.

NAFTA to enslave America

Concerning the North American Free Trade Agreement, which is really a treaty, Henry Kissinger says if it becomes the law of the land, there will be a new government for the Western Hemisphere.

Instead of our Congress making the laws, international bureaucrats will run the United States. Our Constitution could be destroyed. Do you want that? The one we have has stood the test of time.

Our Founding Fathers gave their lives, their fortunes, and sacred honor to give us our Constitution. Why turn it over to a one world government?

Wake up Americans before you become slaves or foreigners!

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Report cites 'incompetence,' safety woes on Alaska oil line

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Management incompetence and inattention to safety have greatly increased the chances of a catastrophic failure of the aging trans-Alaska oil pipeline, according to a federal report released Tuesday.

The report was commissioned by the Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management. It also criticizes inspections, training and maintenance at Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., which operates the 800-mile pipeline.

The inattention means that no one knows when a problem will surface, how big it will be or its potential effect on public health and safety, the report said.

The pipeline's relatively safe operation was credited to dedicated and talented "front-line" workers whose success has come in spite of obstacles posed by management.

Alyeska President David Pritchard issued a written statement that didn't respond to specific allegations in the audit, but said the company would cooperate with the government to solve problems.

The BLM hired Quality Technology Co. of Lebo, Kan., which conducted a six-week audit of the pipeline this fall.

Bush knew of Iraq loan deal, banker says

■ More national news/1D

WASHINGTON (NYT) — An Atlanta banker who helped to secretly funnel more than $5 billion in loans that were used to arm Iraq in the mid-1980s told a congressional committee Tuesday that everything he did was with the knowledge of the governments of the United States, Italy and Britain.

But the banker, Christopher P. Drogoul, quickly found himself dismissed by some members of the House Banking Committee as unable to offer any proof for his allegations. Drogoul was the manager of the Atlanta branch of Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, which processed the loans.

On Sept. 2, a week before going to trial in federal court in Atlanta, Drogoul pleaded guilty to three felony charges in connection with his role in making the loans. He is to be sentenced this month; government prosecutors say federal sentencing guidelines dictate a prison term of 46 to 57 months.

Drogoul is being held in the federal penitentiary in Atlanta and was accompanied to Tuesday's hearing by U.S. marshals.

The Drogoul trial was to have been the principal stage to play out accusations that the administration of President George Bush secretly armed Iraq and then sought to cover up that policy after Iraq invaded Kuwait in 1990.

But Tuesday's appearance before the Banking Committee made clear that even if that is true — and Bush has said it is not — Drogoul is not in a position to provide proof.

One person who should know many of the details of the Bush administration's involvement with the bank, which is essentially an arm of the Italian government, is Renaldo Petrignani, Italy's ambassador to the United States from 1981 to 1991. Although Petrignani was subpoenaed to appear at today's hearing, he did not attend because he is in Italy to answer corruption charges apparently unconnected to Banca Nazionale del Lavoro.

Earlier this month an investigating magistrate in Milan charged Petrignani with accepting a $62,000 bribe from an Italian bank to guarantee that Salomon Brothers investment bank in London would participate in an Italian insurance venture.

Petrignani, who acted as a consultant to Salomon Brothers, has denied the bribery charge.

At Tuesday's hearing, Drogoul described numerous conversations with officials of Banca Nazionale del Lavoro's headquarters in Rome and others that led him to believe that his loans to Iraq were part of a larger scheme approved of by the governments in Washington, Rome and London.

"Behind me, sitting on my shoulders I had three governments for all my activities," he said.

Drogoul, 44, was arrested after an FBI raid on the bank's Atlanta office in 1989. President Bush denied that his administration secretly armed Iraq through the bank, and the Justice Department at that time charged Drogoul .

Judge: Health panel errs by keeping data

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A federal district judge said on Tuesday that the White House was improperly withholding records of Hillary Rodham Clinton's Task Force on National Health Care Reform from doctors and consumer groups that wanted to scrutinize the panel's work.

The judge, Royce C. Lamberth of the Federal District Court here, ordered the government to provide documents needed to assess whether the more than 500 people who worked for the task force had complied with federal ethics laws.

By his action, Lamberth took a preliminary step to pierce the secrecy of the panel, which developed administration proposals to control health costs and to guarantee health insurance coverage for all Americans.

The task force was created on Jan. 25 and disbanded on May 30, but senior members of its staff are still working at the White House.

Sounding exasperated, Lamberth said Tuesday that the administration was "improperly withholding the germane information" sought by the plaintiffs to prove their contentions about the staff task force.

The White House, he said, has provided incomplete answers, "dribbles and drabs of information," and "a preposterous response" to the plaintiffs' request for the names of people who participated in each of the panel's working groups.

"Even more egregious," he said, is the administration's contention that it cannot supply accurate lists of people who attended task force meetings because of "the fluidity and informality" of their work for Mrs. Clinton earlier this year.

The judge said he "condemns this litigation tactic and will not tolerate it in future responses in this case."

The case is in court because doctors and consumer groups filed suit in February under a 1972 law to gain access to meetings

Congressman files lawsuit against abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Chris Smith filed a lawsuit Tuesday in an attempt to block the Agency for International Development from financing a U.N. organization he says supports coerced abortion in China.

The New Jersey Republican, known for his strong anti-abortion views, said he claimed in the lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia that AID is breaking the law by giving money to the United Nations Population Fund.

He cited law prohibiting U.S. financing of any program or organization that the president determines is supporting coercive abortion.

"The Clinton administration's action in this instance trivializes the nightmare of forced abortion and involuntary sterilization in China," Smith said. "It whitewashes the U.N. Population Fund's complicity in these heinous crimes."

The United States has given no money to the UNFPA since 1985, when President Reagan cut off funds on the grounds that the U.N. organization was contributing to forced abortion in China.

The Clinton administration restored the funding, with the provision that no U.S. money should go to China.

AID provided $14.5 million for UNFPA in fiscal 1993, and has a planned budget of $50 million in 1994.

Smith said the ban on money going to China was "nothing but a ruse and a smokescreen" because the UNFPA could simply reroute U.S. money through other programs in aiding China.

United Way meets '93-94 goal

■ Campaign chairman announces agency hit $2,611,305 less than one hour before finale.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

All the bizarre "Back to the Future" antics of the Crazy Professor and Marty paid off Tuesday as the United Way of Midland campaign chairman announced the agency met its goal for the 1993-94 campaign.

Chairman Tom Sikes said it was less than an hour before the finale began that the goal of $2,604,000 was made. In fact, $2,611,305 was raised, he said.

Before the festivities started, Sikes credited Midlanders with coming through to help their fellow residents.

"This demonstrates that we had a tremendous response from the community. That is what makes Midland a great place to live," he said.

"Basically this means people are willing to invest in Midland's long-term future. We have had unbelievable successes and it is hard to believe what some people have done," Sikes said.

WEDNESDAY DAY WATCH

House approval

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Representative Larry Combest, R-Texas, Monday won House approval for studying the route for an additional Interstate 27 connection south of Interstate 10. Combest's proposal called for a southern route of Interstate 27 from Lubbock to Interstate 20. Interstate 27 begins at Interstate 40 in Amarillo and currently ends at Lubbock's southern city limits. The House action allows the Texas Department of Transportation to also study continuing a southern route for Interstate 27 on to Interstate 10. "Completing the connection of Interstate 27 with both I-20 and I-10 makes good sense and a good economy," Combest said. "Interstate transportation is the economic lifeline for our region. Connecting the major interstate corridors makes Interstate 27 a viable route for truckers and tourists through El Paso, Dallas, San Antonio, Houston and beyond."

Academic report

Ignacio Salinas Jr., vice president of the Texas State Teachers' Association, will release a report on Texas schools at 9:30 a.m. Friday at the Ector County Independent School District Administration Building, 8th Street and Sam Houston Avenue. The report, "Public Schools: Tougher Than You Think," traces the rise of academic standards in the state's schools over the past decade.

Planning, zoning

The League of Women Voters is to host a discussion, "Planning and Zoning: How Does It Work?" from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday at the Unitarian and Universalist Church, Neely Avenue and Midkiff Road. Speakers are to be Mike Harris of the Neighborhood Homeowners Group, City Council member Jose Cuevas, and Robert Burns of the Commission of Planning and Zoning. A question and answer session is planned. The public is invited to attend.

Memorial

PRESIDIO — The U.S. Customs Service is to dedicate a memorial at 1 p.m. today at the Presidio Port of Entry in honor of Jack Howard, a Customs inspector who was ambushed and killed on Feb. 12, 1913, while on patrol near Presidio. The memorial includes Howard's saddle, Colt .45 six-shooter, badge, pocket watch, photos, diaries and other memorabilia. Howard's daughters, Marion Howard Walker and Frances E. Howard donated to the Customs Services the mementoes for the Jack Howard Memorial.

Texas cotton gins run 24-hour days for 1993 crop

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

The 200-plus cotton gins throughout the High Plains of Texas are running 24 hours a day to process the cotton crop that ranges from mediocre on the south end of the plains at Midland to bumper-crop quality on the Plains' north end in the Lubbock area.

"It is a little better than what we had expected early on," said Martin County farmer Mike Mitchell of Lenorah.

"We had a dry spell in July and August that put a lot of stress on the cotton."

Cotton bolls opened prematurely.

"It is not going to set any records," Mitchell said. "It's a decent crop" in Martin County, which is in high-yield cotton country.

In Midland County, the crop appears mediocre production-wise, said Charlie Wright, manager of the Midland Farmers Cooperative cotton gin.

"Cotton is grading good this year" despite the drop in yield, Wright said. The hot, dry weather in August, when the maturing and finishing-out cotton needed rain, bit heavily into the boll count.

"We needed rain early in August, and we didn't get any until the last of August," Wright said. "We needed it the first of August."

The average production for the Midland gin is 16,000 to 17,000 bales, Wright said.

The crop turned out better than they expected, he said.

Southeast of Midland at the Midkiff Farmers Co-op gin, ginner Rocky King said the "yield is off from last year (due to) the lack of rain.

"You know the old story about West Texas: 'You can see more rain and get less than any place in the world.'"

King expects to gin about 20,000 bales by the first of the year "unless we have a run of bad weather."

The Midkiff gin processes cotton from Upton, Midland, Glasscock and Reagan counties. The community is at the four corners of those counties.

Council honors officers, gives rates approval

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

The Midland City Council gave commendations to two police officers and gave final approval for an increase in water and sewer rates at their regular meeting Tuesday.

Detective Sgt. Mike Reed and officer Bruce Williams were commended for helping, while off-duty in separate incidents, apprehend suspected armed robbers.

On Aug. 26, Williams stopped a suspected getaway car used in a robbery at a Midland Drive liquor store a short time earlier that day. Four Pecos men and a juvenile were arrested and stolen property recovered.

Two weeks later, Reed gave chase to a man — who fit the description of the suspect in two other bank robberies — fleeing a Wall Avenue bank. Reed eventually had to abort the chase and call for help. The suspect was later apprehended.

Each officer was presented a proclamation of appreciation by District 4 representative Claudia Egan, who spearheaded the recognition.

"I know for a fact law enforcement is taken for granted until you personally go through a crime," Ms. Egan said. In 1986, she was the victim of an armed robbery.

Police officers "are truly special. They put their lives on the line for us," she said.

Mayor J.D. Faircloth said he anticipates commendations for city employees' outstanding deeds in the future.

In other action at Tuesday's meeting, council gave second and final approval to increase water and sewer rates, to support ongoing operation of water supply and sewage disposal, and costs incurred for the city's participation in the Ivie Reservoir pipeline.

The minimum water charge for 2,000 gallons will increase from $10.50 to $10.75 and the rate for each additional gallon will jump from $1.89 to $2.15.

The sewer charge for households will increase from $12.17 to $13.

MISD comes through with funds to support D-FY-IT

■ School board trustees stand alone in answering challenge of Drug Free Youth in Texas.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Midland school board trustees stood alone in supporting D-FY-IT Tuesday night.

Despite a challenge to the hospital board, the Midland City Council and the Midland County Commissioners Court, only Midland Independent School District came through with funds for Drug Free Youth in Texas.

The program conducts drug testing and random drug testing among high school students who volunteer to be tested. Students who stay drug free qualify for discounts at restaurants, events and dances.

D-FY-IT representative Joan Johnson pleaded with trustees to give the organization the full $10,000 pledged if the other taxing entities came through. She said drug testing has already begun and the program is "operating on faith."

"I am just amazed," trustee James Fuller said. "After the grand jury report, and how everyone came down on us (for drug and alcohol abuse among Midland youth), that city and county officials did not walk their talk, that they are not helping us contribute to the resolution of the problem. It's ridiculous, it's hypocritical and phony."

Ms. Johnson said about $2,000 had been donated to the program by the Lions Club, an individual business and a police officer who donated $500.

She said the organization has more support from businesses than in the past. "And we are going to have random giveaways, including restaurant date packages."

Trustees voted 5-2 to give the program $10,000. Fuller and Adela Marmolejo voted against the motion since it "let the other entities off the hook" from the challenge grant.

In other action, trustees unanimously passed a district policy that will permit student-led prayer at extracurricular activities. The board split on excluding the guideline that stated: "Presentations shall be nonsectarian and nonproselytizing."

Memorial to honor women on Veteran's Day

By Mia B. Moody
Associated Press Writer

WACO — Each year when Veteran's Day rolls around, these former "servicemen" often are forgotten — women. But whether disguised as men or serving as their nurses, women have done their share to protect America.

Even before they had the right to vote or many other freedoms that American soldiers have fought to keep, women served side by side with men, noted Anne Taylor, a veterans benefit counselor and the women's veterans coordinator at the Veterans Administration Regional Office.

"As early as the Revolutionary War, Deborah Sampson, a housewife, disguised herself as a man to join the Massachusetts Regiment of the Revolutionary Army," Ms. Taylor said.

"It says something about the medical practices of the day that it wasn't until her third time in the army hospital that her true identity was discovered," Ms. Taylor said.

About 400 women are thought to have disguised themselves as men during the Civil War. After 1901, these disguises were not necessary. The United States recruited thousands of women to serve in the armed services during World War I.

Women took on new military roles during World War II due to the scarcity of manpower. About 400,000 served in all branches of the military as nurses, stenographers and translators to pilots.

Waco resident Elva Ewing, 74, was one of the pioneer women who signed up for World War II.

"When I heard news about the breakout of World War II, I was a 24-year-old country girl who was ready for an adventure," she said. "As soon as I heard about the war, I pretty well made up my mind right then that I was going."

Ms. Ewing enlisted in the Navy WAVES (Women Accepted for Volunteer Service). The Ocee native said she had little trouble adapting to the strict nature of the service because she was accustomed to doing lots of farm work.

She went through boot camp in the Bronx, N.Y., and trained as an airplane mechanic. However, instead of servicing airplanes during the war, she did payroll and statistical research at an air base in Kingsville, Texas.

Overall, she believes her gender played only a minor role during her stint in the service. She said the men at her base were accepting of women. However, she fondly remembers one incident when her base ran out of women's work shoes and she was forced to wear men's dress shoes.

"I didn't care because they were more comfortable than our shoes anyway," she said.

MISD: Board trustees answer D-FY-IT challenge

(From 1B)

However, the motion to exclude the phrase passed on a 4-3 vote, with Jack Hightower, Ms. Marmolejo, and George Staley voting against removing the phrase.

At issue was whether leaving the phrase in would give the district a more legally defensible policy.

Midland attorney Ted Kerr said the language of the policy, including the "nonsectarian, nonproselytizing" phrase was in the policy that resulted from the Jones vs. Clear Creek case on student-led prayer decided by the 5th Circuit Court.

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said he received a letter from the Anti-Defamation League in Dallas that said MISD's vote "must follow the criteria set by the Jones case" to avoid litigation.

Trustee Gary Willis said including the phrase would limit free speech. "We don't want to end up being speech police," he said.

Trustees said "in Jesus' name we pray" would be sectarian as would praying to Mohammed.

Including the phrase, Iris Englet of the Permian Basin Eagles Forum told trustees, "may set you up for your day in court."

"Please trust students to trust their own good judgment," she said.

Former MISD school board member Ken Marks suggested the word "non-denominational" be substituted for "non-sectarian."

Kerr, however, said nonsectarian would include all religions rather than just Christian.

"When you have free speech you're never going to adopt something that doesn't offend somebody," said attorney Larry McMillion. "With this policy, you are saying: 'Wait a minute, you are going to have prior restraint on that . . . the purpose of education is to spread — not stifle — ideas."

The policy, which passed on the first reading, was amended to allow students up to two minutes to use the public address system for welcoming remarks. It also struck out having a principal advise students on opening remarks.

Trustees applauded social studies coordinator Patty Smith and Carver Cultural Principal Patricia Maurer for the joint awards they received from the Valley Forge Freedom Foundation. They received the George Washington honor medals for their curriculum, "U.S. History from Reconstruction to the Present." The curriculum was designed to academically challenge students.

Thousands of nominations were received by the Freedoms Foundation, but only a few awards were given in the category of programs and activities. The co-authors and co-editors of the curriculum were assisted by team authors Helen Stephenson, chairwoman; Jim Carver, Milton Fitts, Sue Harris, Terry Little, Leonard Monroe, Tracy Norris, Cynthia Truitt and Jan Van Eman.

In other action, trustees voted to look into an alternative education program, which may include a community service type of discipline.

Trustees also heard a report on including special-education students into regular classrooms. Some parents and trustees expressed concern over full inclusion for all students.

"Mainstreaming is the law, full inclusion is not," said Ruby Morris, coordinator of special education for MISD. Ms. Morris said ARD (Admission, Review, and Dismissal) committees will continue to decide the degree of special education services some students will need.

The district is preparing to give special-education students the option of attending Lee or Midland high schools rather than Carver.

"We need to give an honest effort for every student . . . we have already seen some miracles," Baressi said.

Parent Misty Graham said she was concerned about emotionally disturbed students being mainstreamed into regular classrooms. "We already have discipline problems in the schools," she said.

"As students gain control of their behavior, they are mainstreamed one class at a time," Baressi said.

Representatives of ABLE (Advocates for Better Learning and Education) submitted a statement to school board members which stated, in part, "We can not academically hold back the 'faster' students in order to be sociable with the 'slower' students. Let's get our priorities in order . . . ABLE has studied, discussed and voted regarding our stand on 'Inclusive Education.' We are opposed to all-inclusive education. We suggest MISD not approve an all-inclusive educational system in Midland."

When asked what the board plans to do about moving toward inclusion, Fuller said, "I plan to obey the law," to a roomful of applause.

"The school district is committed to putting each child in the least restrictive environment possible," Baressi said.

CAMPAIGN: United Way meets 1993-94 goal

(From 1B)

He noted how fortunate Midland is to have "the volunteers and staff we have here. They have worked very long hours to make this campaign a success."

Bill Dingus, emcee for the event, continued to be his wise-cracking self, save for one moment when he became serious and paid tribute to the United Way.

Fighting back tears, Dingus told the crowd that his father is in an intensive care unit in Houston with his family by his side supporting him through this difficult time.

"It is a lot easier to be down and out in this town than anywhere else," Dingus said as he explained that Midland is a community that supports its citizens through the United Way and other helpful agencies.

Throughout the finale, while the various division representatives announced their totals, the Crazy Professor and Marty appeared keeping everyone in good spirits.

Dressed in a vintage lime-green tuxedo — in keeping with the finale theme of a prom night — the Crazy Professor and Marty were pleased to have arrived at the finale after traveling to the future and encountering a less than pleasant Midland.

At previous campaign announcement luncheons the Professor told of a Midland where despair was prevalent, but he said that slowly changed as the people of present-day Midland contributed toward a brighter future by giving to the United Way.

Dingus asked the Professor what the future has in store for him. The Professor said in addition to being bald, Dingus' future lies in "pigs." But, other than that sad bit of news, the Professor said the future brings good things to Midland including the return of a booming petroleum industry, filled office space and more businesses.

When Sikes read the final tally to the crowd it was received with cheers and applause, which also was the response to the crowning of the king and queen of the United Way prom.

In fitting with tradition, the campaign chairman was crowned prom king and his lovely prom queen was — Dingus.

During the event, volunteers and employees of the 16 United Way agencies were honored. Those agencies served by the United Way include: the American Red Cross; Big Brothers/Big Sisters; Buffalo Trail Council of Boy Scouts of America; Boys and Girls Club of Midland; Camp Fire Boys and Girls; Casa de Amigos; Centers for Children and Families; Community and Senior Services; Freewill Foster Home; Midland Need to Read; Midland Rape Crisis Center; Palmer Drug Abuse Program; Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children; Permian Basin Girl Scouts; the Salvation Army and the YMCA.

Veterinarian: Attempt to help bird may have contributed to death

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Attempts by inexperienced rescuers to help an injured whooping crane may have contributed to the rare bird's death, says a zoo veterinarian who oversees whooping crane programs.

A necropsy report Monday indicated the bird had not been shot, as was first supposed, but died of respiratory failure.

The 2-year-old whooping crane was found last week on a ranch near Midland and was suffering from a broken right wing, shock and blood loss. The bird apparently struck a high-line wire or fence. The impact resulted in the fractured wing and keel or breastbone.

Initially, the crane's rescuers, including Midland wildlife rehabilitator Midge Erskine, has thought that the bird had been shot.

Mrs. Erskine nursed the bird from Nov. 1, the day it was recovered, until the morning of Nov. 4, when it was flown to San Antonio for treatment.

The bird, nicknamed "High Sky" in San Antonio by Mrs. Erskine, died the next day.

Mel Richardson, a San Antonio Zoo veterinarian and a national coordinator of whooping crane programs, said had the bird been handled differently, it might still be alive.

"You hate to be a second-guesser, but I don't feel like we gave the bird every chance we could have," Richardson said in Tuesday's San Antonio Express-News.

James Lewis, a whooping crane expert with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Albuquerque, N.M., said the agency's plans for dealing with injured whoopers call for notifying the service's biological branch.

The biologist said the law-enforcement branch of his agency was notified, but the biological branch wasn't involved until days after the bird was found.

Richardson criticized Ms. Erskine for keeping the bird in a playpen in her home from late Monday to early Thursday.

Mrs. Erskine and Midland veterinarian Steve Betton flew with the crane between them in the aisle.

Mrs. Erskine said reports that they had taped the bird's beak shut were incorrect information.

"That's part of the misinformation which he (Richardson) received," Mrs. Erskine said Tuesday in Midland. "I feel sorry for the man," who was making conclusions based "on misinformation. I really feel sorry for him. I feel he's terribly embarrassed."

Mrs. Erskine said that Richardson was "making his statements from misinformations just like I was making misstatements on the bird being shot," said Mrs. Erskine, who has been working with wildlife, particularly birds, for more than 20 years.

Mrs. Erskine is licensed by the state and federal governments to care for sick and injured birds, including those protected by law.

Staff writer Ed Todd contributed to this report.

GIN: Cotton crops to turn out better than farmers expected the Midkiff area is irrigated cotton, he said.

(From 1B)

"We have got to have a little rainfall to make that good a crop," King said. "The quality is excellent. There is just not enough of it."

Marc Traweek, manager of the Tokio Co-op cotton gin in Yoakum County on the north end of the 25-county Plains Cotton Growers Inc., said cotton production there is "really amazing."

"Oh, man," he said, "everything just turns to cotton."

Most of the cotton there is dryland production. One-third of the production is from irrigated land.

"The gin has been running a good" 24 hours a day, Traweek said. "The weather has been good to us."

Since early October, the Tokio gin has turned out about 14,500 bales and is to process 35,000 bales by January.

Yoakum, Dawson, Gaines, Lubbock and Terry counties are the leading cotton-producing counties in Texas' High Plains.

Shawn Wade, director of communications for the Plains Cotton Growers, said the U.S. Department of Agriculture is projecting a near-record 3.45 million bales of cotton from the High Plains, which is Texas' leading cotton region.

"That's what the USDA is saying," Wade said. "There are some saying it will be better than 3.5 million."

Overall, the region had "pretty good weather all year," Wade said. It was a "pretty light year" for harmful insects and seedling diseases.

The region's record cotton production was 3.53 million bales in 1981 off 4.5 million acres, Wade said. "This year, we are harvesting off of about 3 million acres."

Texas' 1993 cotton production is projected at 5.2 million bales, Wade said. "Nationwide, the production is to be 16.3 million bales."

Veterans to be assigned teams

BIG SPRING — Beginning Monday, veterans receiving outpatient care at the Big Spring Veterans' Administration Medical Center will be assigned to a health-care team consisting of a physician or physician assistant, nurse and medical clerk.

Each team will be color-coded and will handle all scheduling and reception. Veterans will no longer check in at a central point, but will go directly to their color-coded team and will contact their assigned clerk to request, change or cancel an appointment.

Veterans will receive a color-coded card identifying the names of their physician or physician assistant, nurse and medical clerk and will give numbers to call for information.

"This system should permit veterans to be scheduled and be seen within 48 hours of a request and allow them to have a better relationship with their physician," said Dr. Darryl H. Powell, chief of staff.

Scheduled appointments are necessary. Walk-in patients will be seen after the last scheduled appointment. Emergencies will be seen at any time.

Texas inmate refuses appeals, is likely to be executed today

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Anthony Cook is a five-time loser who should be finishing a prison term for theft.

Instead, the ninth-grade dropout and former electrician ordered no appeals be filed for him and agreed he should be executed early today for killing a University of Texas law student more than five years ago.

Cook, 32, was on parole just 13 days after serving only a fraction of an eight-year sentence for theft when he and another recent parolee abducted David Dirck VanTassel Jr. from downtown Austin the evening of June 9, 1988. They drove him to a remote roadside park about 50 miles away where Cook shot VanTassel four times in the head, robbed him and stole his car.

"It's very frustrating," Charles Lance, the former district attorney in Milam County who prosecuted Cook, said Tuesday. "The system is not doing its job."

Cook, who last listed his hometown as Houston, first served time in Texas prisons in 1980 for aggravated assault in Winkler County. He was still on parole when he received four years for burglary in Lubbock County, but was released a year later to Harris County under mandatory supervision.

Two years later, in 1986, he was sentenced to eight years for theft in Harris County but was paroled after just one year behind bars. In six months, he was returned to prison as a parole violator, but was on the streets after another six months, paroled to El Paso County on May 27, 1988. The VanTassel slaying occurred 13 days later.

Cook would be the 16th convicted killer to receive lethal injection this year in Texas and the 70th since the state resumed capital punishment in 1982.

The victim's car was traced to Cook, who was arrested in Fort Worth trying to set up an illegal drug lab. He was carrying VanTassel's wallet when arrested.

Within the past two years, Cook wrote authorities from death row he had a religious conversion and wanted his punishment carried out.

"He sent me a letter basically saying he could not persist in the appeal where they were alleging that a codefendant actually pulled the trigger. He said 'I'm the one who did it. I can no longer lie about it,' " District Attorney Hollis Lewis said.

"I don't think he's looking so much that he wants to die but he's saying the system is in place and he's had advantage of everything he's supposed to have advantage of without lying about it."

Cook also exchanged letters with VanTassel's widow, Barbara.

"I received a letter of apology and remorse," she said. "He's volunteering. He's taking responsibility for what he's done. I always saw him as a very wounded person but that doesn't make him any less responsible for his actions.

"It was a very great expense to me personally. Putting one's life back together doesn't change it. My life will never be the same."

VanTassel, 35, was abducted in downtown Austin after leaving a hotel where he had taken a review course for his state bar examination. He had graduated from law school earlier in the month and was a dancer who performed for two years in the early 1980s with the Nikolais Dance Theater in New York.

Cook's codefendant, Robert Moore, from Robertson County near Waco, testified against Cook and received a 50-year prison term. He is eligible for parole in December 2000.

Cook would be the 16th convicted killer to receive lethal injection this year in Texas and the 70th since the state resumed capital punishment in 1982. The totals by far are the highest in the nation.

HONOR: Veteran's Day is for women too

(From 1B)

After the war ended, Ms. Ewing decided to go home because she did not want to risk being sent somewhere to work on airplanes, a skill she hadn't used since basic training. She later went to work for the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

In 1948, the Women's Armed Services Integration Act gave women a permanent place in the armed forces. This established guidelines for the 262,000 women like Linda Ogles, 39, who served in the Vietnam era.

Ms. Ogles said she signed up for some of the same reasons as her male counterparts: She was a single high school drop-out ready to do something for her country.

"I had nothing to hold me down," she said. "I had to drop out of school initially to help my parents financially and the service gave me an incentive to get my GED and to become an independent person."

While in the service, Ms. Ogles served as a security police officer, a ration control clerk and in many other capacities.

As a 100-pound, 5-foot-2-inch woman, she had to fight for the right to work shifts by herself while stationed in Montana.

"I carried a .38-caliber and I was an expert shot," she said. "I felt like I could take care of myself so I approached my supervisors and told them, 'This is my job. Let me go.'"

Overall, Ms. Ogles said she was treated fairly by her male counterparts. However, there were a few incidents of discrimination. While working in Montana, she remembers freezing while her male counterparts kept warm in government issued bunny boots, parkas and heavy gloves. Instead of complaining, she went out and bought her own.

"I am a small person and they probably had a hard time finding stuff to fit me," she said.

Ms. Ogles said the service helped her get her life on track. After serving seven years in the Air Force, she decided to get out and become a full-time mother to her 1-year-old daughter.

The next war during which women made a large impact was Operation Desert Storm. The war was a turning point for women in the service, Ms. Taylor said.

"It was during this war that Americans became more accustomed to hearing the phrase, 'Our men and women in the Gulf,'" she said.

Women have come a long way since the early wars when they had to disguise themselves as men to fight. But it wasn't until 1988 that Congress approved a project to build a memorial honoring women who served during the Vietnam era.

These women will be memorialized starting on Veteran's Day this year.

Groups criticize court for delay of conduct rules

AUSTIN (AP) — Several public watchdog groups have criticized five members of the Texas Supreme Court for voting to delay reforms governing the conduct of judges.

But Chief Justice Tom Phillips said Tuesday he voted to postpone the changes because they did not adequately address judicial campaigns.

Phillips and justices Jack Hightower, Nathan Hecht, John Cornyn and Craig Enoch voted to delay the new code until March. All are Republicans except for Hightower, who is a Democrat.

Justices Raul Gonzalez, Lloyd Doggett, Bob Gammage and Rose Spector, who are all Democrats, supported implementing the code Jan. 1.

In a dissenting opinion to the court's administrative order, Doggett said, "Five members of this court have elected unilaterally to postpone any reform at all until canons relating to judicial campaigns reflect their own narrow perspective."

Representatives of the League of Women Voters, Common Cause, Public Citizen and Texas Consumer Rights Action League issued a news release expressing concern about the court's decision.

Suzy Woodford, executive director of Common Cause of Texas, said the judicial code reforms are the result of months of work by officials who held 17 public hearings across the state.

She criticized the court majority, saying, "We wonder why they are trying to usurp the public wishes and the work of dozens of public interest groups."

But Phillips said it is better to delay in order "to get a code that we are all comfortable with."

The stumbling block is over proposed changes to judicial campaigns.

Phillips wants to limit the time a judicial candidate can raise campaign funds. He has proposed limits that would permit judicial candidates to start raising funds nine months before the first primary and 16 months before the general election.

Doggett, however, notes that a bipartisan Texas Ethics Commission rejected this proposal. And minority state officials have said these limits would hurt minority candidates.

State Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, said in a letter to Phillips, "The state is too big and the amount of money required too large to handicap those who need the time to raise small contributions from a large area. I fear African-American, Mexican-American and other judicial candidates who rely on small contributions would be greatly harmed."

Phillips, however, disagreed that his proposal would hurt minority candidates. He said most states that elect their judges have restrictions on when judges can raise campaign funds.

"This seems to me to be just the essence of good government," Phillips said.

Choking infants

CHICAGO (AP) — The nation's largest organization of pediatricians says that while the Heimlich maneuver is appropriate to use on choking victims over age 1, other techniques are better for infants.

"Controversy exists concerning first aid management for a choking child less than 12 months of age," the American Academy of Pediatrics said in September journal Pediatrics.

In the Heimlich maneuver, the rescuer stands behind the choking victim and puts their arms around the victim's lower torso. Clasping their fists under the victim's breastbone, the rescuer makes thrusts upward.

Using this on babies less than 12 months old risks damaging their stomach, liver or spleen, the academy said.

It recommended instead that a choking infant be placed on the rescuer's forearm, face down, with the head slightly lower than the hips, and the rescuer strike five blows to the upper back to dislodge the obstruction.

After that, the infant should be placed face up in the rescuer's lap, with the head again slightly lower than the hips, and be given four thrusts to the lower chest with the rescuer's hand or fingers.

Garlic wisdom

Cook your garlic. Roast it, stir fry it, microwave it, add it to stews and sauces. But don't eat it raw, advises Herbert F. Pierson, Ph.D., a former official at the National Cancer Institute and now a consultant on preventive nutrition. Contrary to popular belief, he says, cooked garlic is better than raw garlic in health-promoting powers and is safer.

Dr. Pierson fears that eating raw garlic can release substances into the stomach and intestinal tract that are irritating and potentially toxic.

On the other hand, he says the therapeutic and preventive powers of garlic depend on how it is processed. Sauteeing garlic in a little oil releases chemicals that help fight congestion and asthma by helping break up mucus in the bronchial passages, he says. Heating also releases ajoene, a garlic chemical that acts as an anticoagulant and a pain killer against inflammation. Cooked garlic also contains several anti-cancer chemicals.

As for garlic supplements, Dr. Pierson takes aged garlic extract (Kyolic) which he considers safest and most effective.

Coffee power

Do you get a bigger jolt of caffeine from downing espresso and cappuccino? These two European-style coffees, now increasingly popular in the U.S., have a stronger taste than "American" coffee. But strong taste does not necessarily mean more caffeine, according to experts at the Mayo Clinic. Here's what they say:

You get about 100 milligrams of caffeine in a standard 2-ounce cup of espresso. A cup of cappuccino also contains about 100 milligrams of caffeine because it is typically made from 2 ounces of espresso plus milk. Thus, the usual cup of espresso or cappuccino actually contains slightly less than the average 115 mg of caffeine in a 6-ounce cup of American coffee.

Further, cappuccino and espresso are usually made from arabica coffee beans, which give a stronger taste, although they contain less caffeine than the robusta beans that are blended into American coffee.

Of course, how much caffeine you get depends not only on the type of coffee bean. You get more caffeine if you grind the beans more finely, use more coffee and brew it longer.

Cancer losing

Currently, most breast cancer patients get at least two types of therapy. In addition to surgery, chemotherapy and/or radiotherapy, some patients also receive hormonal therapy, biologic agents and such supportive treatments as bone marrow transplantations.

The vast majority undergo surgery at some point, but a growing number receive chemotherapy first. Pre-operative chemotherapy may be delivered to reduce previously inoperable tumors or to shrink larger tumors so that more conservative surgery may be preformed.

The major impact of chemotherapy has been as an adjuvant treatment after surgery and either before or after radiotherapy to destroy hidden cancer cells throughout the body. Aggressive combination chemotherapy is credited with sharply improving survival rates for M.D. Anderson.

Life in nursing home reveals struggles, triumphs

By Jerry Harkavy

SOUTH BRISTOL, Maine (AP) — Author Tracy Kidder quickly inured himself to the unpleasant sights, sounds and smells of the nursing home where he spent a year observing the dark side of growing old in America.

But it was tougher to get used to the cruel torments, mental and physical, that residents of Linda Manor faced as they struggled to live a meaningful life in a place where they are banded together awaiting death.

"Some of it seemed like stuff Dante had invented," said Kidder, the Pulitzer Prize-winning writer whose observations form the basis for his new book "Old Friends."

There is the excruciating pain that Winifred endures whenever the mechanical lift, "a miniature gallows on wheels," hoisted her from her bed to her wheelchair and back again.

"Just preserving dignity, just trying to get your own pants on the morning, takes a tremendous amount of effort," Kidder, 47, said in an interview at his summer home. "Some of these are really stories of heroism, routine heroism."

There is the mental agony of the unnamed woman with Alzheimer's disease who remembers her husband's death, grieves over him and finally gets over it, only to forget that he is dead and begin the cycle once again.

But the anguish, which Kidder makes no attempt to mask, is tempered by daily episodes of determination and courage. Perhaps most uplifting is the friendship that developed between roommates Lou and Joe, the book's principal characters, and enriched the lives of both.

Linda Manor, in Northhampton, Mass., near Kidder's year-round home, is a good nursing home in many ways: It is clean and reasonably well-staffed. But to the author, that makes it just one of the better of a bad lot.

"They're houses of grief and pain," he said.

But Lou and Joe, opposites in many ways, are able to assert control over their circumstances and maintain their dignity in spite of their infirmities. Lou, in his early 90s, is nearly blind and has angina; Joe, in his early 70s, has multiple ailments that began with a crippling stroke nearly 20 years earlier and now include arthritis and diabetes.

Under Lou's gentle prodding, Joe's brusque manner slowly becomes transformed; he cuts down on his swearing, begins to exercise and learns to control his fiery passions.

Through their friendship, the two men adapt to their circumstances and turn to each other to overcome the loneliness that comes with a new phase of their lives.

The book is laced with humorous incidents, some of which border on high farce. Kidder said he was surprised at the number of comic moments he encountered.

To Kidder, the emotional climax of the book comes when Joe tells a doctor at the Veterans Administration hospital that he won't go through with additional tests to explore "a lingering irregularity" that shows up on a lung X-ray.

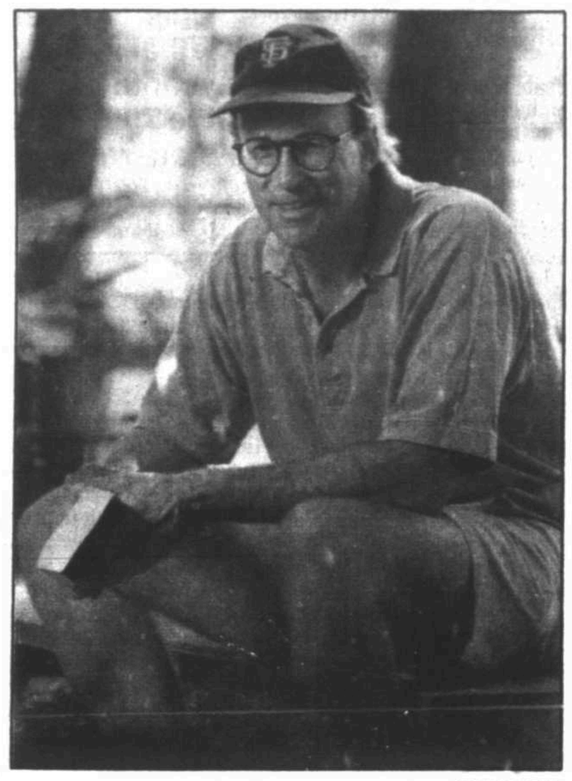

"He says, 'No, I don't want tubes down my throat,'... 'I don't want to be turned into some kind of living machine,'" the author said. It is a sign that Joe has found value in his life and is not interested in preserving it at all costs.

It is Lou's calm, considerate nature that works its magic on Joe as he undergoes a spiritual healing that enables him to accept the imperfections of a life that failed to reach its potential.

For his part, Lou stays alive and vital by nurturing his memories and his curiosity about the world.

Only rarely does Kidder intrude with his own thoughts, but he allows himself a slap at the concept of

Prenatal tests signal problems

N.Y. Times News Service

During pregnancy, prenatal tests can detect — or rule out — many problems ranging from chromosomal errors and genetic disorders to heart defects and health conditions that may not be genetic. Prenatal and diagnostic tests may include:

■ Alpha-fetoprotein (AFP): This is a screening test measuring the amount of AFP, a protein normally produced by every fetus as it grows. Higher than normal levels may indicate spina bifida, neural tube defects, abdominal wall defects, or the presence of twins. Abnormally low levels may mean possible Down's syndrome.

■ Ultrasound or sonogram: Sound waves are used to show the physical outlines of the fetus on a screen. This test can determine the age of the fetus and show whether there are twins. It can detect malformations such as spina bifida, heart or kidney problems or limb defects. There is no known risk of having this procedure performed.

■ Amniocentesis: Done during the 12th to 16th week of pregnancy, amniocentesis detects all known chromosomal errors and some single-gene disorders, such as Down's syndrome. It can also tell the sex of the fetus, detect a neural tube defect and some metabolic disorders. Doctors use ultrasound to see the fetus on a screen, then insert a thin needle into the mother's abdomen to withdraw a small sample — about two to three tablespoonsful — of amniotic fluid. There is a small risk, less than one in 200, of infection or miscarriage. Results are accurate, though many conditions cannot be detected.

■ Chorionic villi sampling (CVS): A new test done in the eighth to 11th week of pregnancy. A tiny tissue sample is taken from outside the sac where the fetus develops, through either a small needle or tube. The tissue is analyzed for chromosome disorders and certain gene conditions. This is slightly less accurate than amniocentesis. The risk of miscarriage is one in 50 to 100 cases.

'Do-Not-Resuscitate' cards prove popular with elderly

By David Wilkison

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Virgie Dorinzi has little faith in "living wills" and other documents that say her aunt should be allowed to die peacefully if her fragile heart stops beating.

But a new "Do-Not-Resuscitate" card, signed by a physician, is comforting thousands of people in West Virginia and 16 other states that they or their relatives do not have to be revived when they are close to death.

"If you call 911, their duty calls for them to resuscitate. You can't stand back and say this woman has a living will and you can't do that," said Dorinzi, 43.

Dorinzi's aunt is 64 and deaf. She communicates through sign language. She has a long history of heart trouble; her doctor has recommended against resuscitation.

"I'm not sure that it's going to be an easy or difficult choice, but you have to do what the patient wants, and she doesn't want life on a respirator," Dorinzi said.

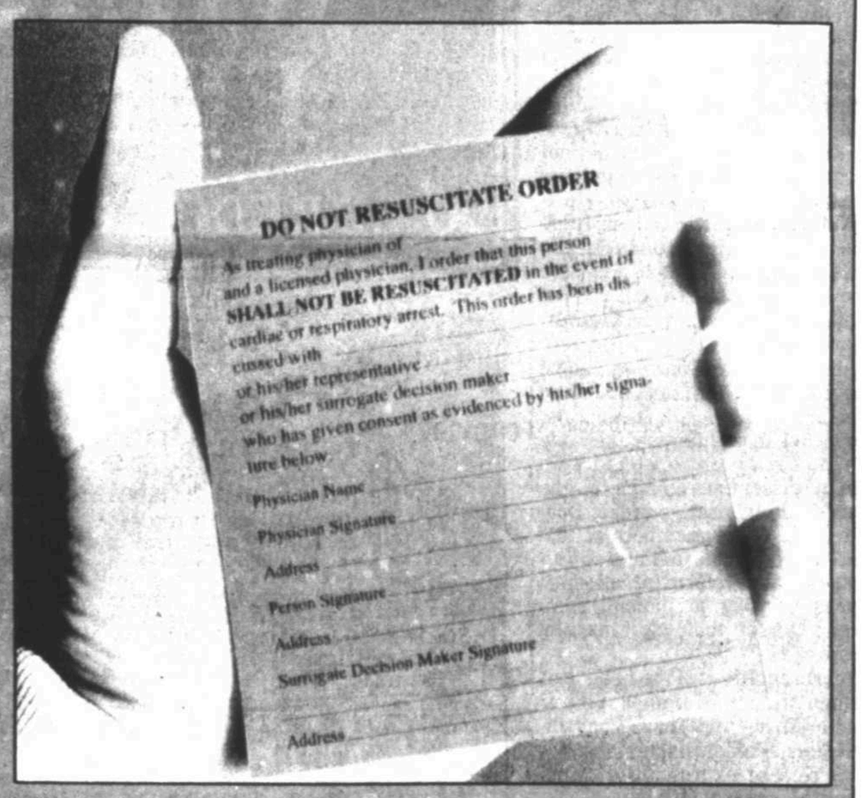

The cards, first introduced in 1991 in Montana, allow people to decide whether they want to be revived should they stop breathing or go into cardiac arrest.

People can make their wishes known in living wills, but emergency crews are still required to perform lifesaving techniques. The cards, however, permit crews to let the patient die without legal liability.

"They've already made a decision about what they want to have done with their own body and it doesn't have to be a court or someone that doesn't know them making the decision," said state Delegate Brian Gallagher, sponsor of the West Virginia legislation.

In the past two years, the cards also have been approved for use in Arizona, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Maryland, New Mexico, New York, Pennsylvania,

The new "Do-Not-Resuscitate" card, when signed by a physician, is comforting thousands of people in West Virginia and 16 other states. The cards, first introduced in 1991 in Montana, allow people to decide whether they want to be revived should they stop breathing or go into cardiac arrest.

High doses of calcium may help lower blood cholesterol, study suggests

Hearst News Service

Here's a new way to lower blood cholesterol. Take high doses of calcium. That's what a new study by Dr. Margo A. Denke, of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas, suggests.

In a test, 13 healthy men with moderately high cholesterol ate a diet fairly high in beef fat and low in calcium - 410 milligrams a day. Then they switched to a high-calcium regimen of 2,200 mg per day. Their average total cholesterol dropped 6 percent. More important, their artery-clogging bad LDL cholesterol fell 11 percent.

How did the calcium work? Partly by blocking absorption of saturated fat in the gastrointestinal tract. Such saturated animal fats from meat, cheese and butter are notorious at boosting cholesterol. If they are not absorbed, they can't raise cholesterol. Indeed, twice as much fat washed out in the men's stools during the high-calcium diets. This does not mean calcium cancels out the danger of a high-fat diet, but it may be one more dietary weapon you can use to lower cholesterol, says Dr. Denke.

The type calcium used was the same as calcium carbonate or citrate, readily available as supplements.

Excess zinc may have link to Alzheimer's

By Lauran Neergaard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Armed with experiments that indicate excess zinc causes lesions that kill brain cells, scientists want to know whether the metal could help trigger Alzheimer's disease in genetically susceptible people.

There is no evidence that zinc alone increases someone's risk of getting Alzheimer's.

But research reported Monday found that in Alzheimer's patients, excess zinc mixes with a substance called amyloid peptide to form lesions that kill brain cells.

"A little too much zinc ... causes a dramatic change in the peptide. It forms a very sticky glue on the outside of cells," Dr. Ashley Bush of Massachusetts General Hospital told the annual meeting of the Society for Neuroscience.

The zinc study comes one day after researchers reported that a mutated form of a gene called apolipoprotein-E substantially increases the risk of Alzheimer's, a progressive disorder that gradually destroys memory.

But most Alzheimer's cases are not solely genetic, said Bush's colleague, Dr. Rudolph Tanzi. Instead, most patients have a gene that makes them susceptible and something else must trigger that susceptibility, he said.

Zinc might be one of those environmental factors, he said.

"Genes don't exist in a vacuum," agreed Dr. Joseph Coyle of Harvard Medical School, who praised the zinc research.

But it's far too early for anyone to worry about dietary zinc, the scientists said.

"It's unlikely that zinc in the kind of doses we expect in our diets would contribute to these kinds of dramatic events," Bush said.

What if someone takes large doses of zinc supplements? "I really can't tell," he said. He will study the effects of supplements on volunteers.

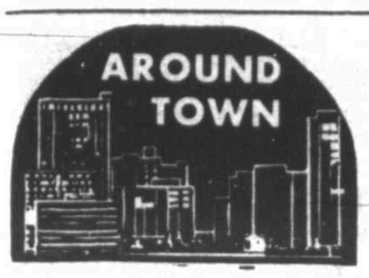

Zinc is vital for brain functions, particularly the short-term memory devastated by Alzheimer's. Normally, brain cells are able to protect themselves from too much of the metal, but autopsies of Alzheimer's patients have shown elevated levels of zinc surrounding cells.

The amyloid peptide was not affected by normal levels of zinc, Bush said. But when zinc levels increased in the brain, the peptide quickly turned to glue that bound to cell membranes, he said.

Those cells then died because the glue caused leaks in the membrane that allowed toxic levels of calcium inside, the researchers theorized.

Normally, enzymes break down amyloid peptide, rendering it harmless. But zinc formed an umbrella over the peptide to protect it. And combined with aluminum silicate, a salt found in the brains of Alzheimer's patients, the whole cell-killing process sped up, the researchers found.

The data is very preliminary, Tanzi emphasized. But he plans to use high-technology imaging systems to see whether zinc has the same effect on the brains of Alzheimer's patients as it does in the test tube.

DEAR ABBY

Woman's storybook marriage takes on surprising plot twist

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to the same man practically all my life, and we have worked hard in our business. Together, we raised a family any parent could be proud of.

Van Buren

I had never looked at another man — until last year, when I fell head over heels in love. He's also married. We meet once a week at a motel for three hours of heaven.

My husband knows nothing about this, and neither does his wife. Sex with my husband is even better now, so it's not as though I am denying my husband anything.

I teach a class at church every week, but for some reason, I feel no guilt about our little trysts. By the way, I'm 63 and my lover is 59. Sign me ... GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Although you appear to have rationalized these little trysts very well, adultery is wrong — even if you never get caught. Should your luck run out, the pain it could cause others would be a high price to pay for your weekly "three hours of heaven."

A little unsolicited advice: Quit while you're ahead, Granny.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, a Clifton, N.J., reader asked why people switched hands while eating with a knife and fork. This "etiquette" began in the British North American colonies for a very good reason.

Almost all of the colonists had grown up being taught to hold the fork in the left hand and the knife in the right. Such a lifelong habit is not easily abandoned.

Table knives in those days had very sharp edges and pointed tips to effectively deal with the meats that, by modern standards, were somewhat on the tough side.

As political opinions began to become more polarized between those loyal to the crown and those advocating rebellion, hosts (particularly in taverns and inns) found it advisable not to allow guests at tables to constantly have such a weapon in their right hands.

They insisted that the knife be used only for brief periods, when meat-cutting was required. And, to ensure that the knife would be placed on the table (thus presenting less of a threat), that the fork be used with the right hand.

While this did not eliminate all violence in the dining area, it did suffice to greatly reduce such incidents.

To lay down the knife and occupy the right hand with another less lethal instrument became the symbol of peaceful intent, and was generally adopted. — ROBERT F. BLACKBURN, VANCOUVER, WASH.

DEAR ROBERT: Fascinating! Thanks for the etiquette (and history) lesson. (It sounds a little like a Mel Brooks skit.)

RESUSCITATE: Wishes known

(From 4B)

Rhode Island, Tennessee, Utah, Virginia, Washington and Wyoming.

Arizona has the most liberal program in the country, according to Dr. Ken Iserson, director of the Arizona Bioethics Program at the University of Arizona.

Although some states like Virginia limit the recipients to terminally ill patients, anyone in Arizona can have a card, including children. Iserson said the program has had broad support, including among hospices and nursing homes.

"We used to get three to four patients from area nursing homes a week in our hospital who were clearly dead. It was clear they would not have wanted resuscitation and yet were brought in," Iserson said. "We haven't had one of those types of patients come in the past year."

Ann Fade, director of legal services for New York-based Choice in Dying, said her agency recommends the cards for terminal patients; frail, elderly patients and "anybody who's in poor health."

The national not-for-profit group, an advocate for the needs of dying patients and their families, does not recommend the cards for healthy people who could survive a heart attack.

"All the states require that a physician sign the form and that's really going to force people to talk to the doctor and make sure they're an appropriate candidate for it," Fade said.

The cards resulted from emergency medical technicians and others on ambulance crews forced to resuscitate people who clearly would not benefit, said Drew Dawson, chief of the Emergency Medical Service Bureau for the Montana Department of Health and Environmental Services.

"They would get calls by a family members who panicked and when they got there the family would say, 'We don't want you to resuscitate grandma,' but they could not honor those wishes," Fade said. "They would get the families upset, and they didn't feel good about doing it."

"Do-not-resuscitate" orders have been used in hospitals for some time; however, the paperwork could only be used at the facility. A living will could only be used if a doctor were present and he determined that the person was not likely to recover.

"A lot more people are opting to die at home rather than long-term care," Fade said. "Once you get these people out in the community, there's more of a chance of someone calling 911 in an inappropriate situation."

James Hoefler, assistant professor of political science at Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pa., and author of a book due in February on right-to-die issues, said the cards clearly outline the patient's wishes, something "living wills" don't always do.

"Usually no one has time to pore through that to see what it is exactly you have said what it is you would or would not want," Hoefler said.

Since the orange wallet-sized cards became available in West Virginia in late August, West Virginia University's Center for Health Ethics and Law has issued more than 1,800 to health care facilities across the state.

"It tells me that a lot of elderly people and a lot of chronically ill people would not want to undergo cardiopulmonary resuscitation and most likely would not want to be kept alive with life support when they're terminally ill," said Dr. Alvin Moss, director of the center.

Requests for the cards have come from hospitals and doctors' offices as well as nursing homes and hospices, Moss said.

Hoefler called the card another step as people refuse advances in medical treatment because "they'd rather not die those kinds of deaths."

"I think people are becoming more and more comfortable with the idea they want to take back some of the decision-making for themselves," he said.

But people should not get the issue confused with assisted suicides, Fade said.

"They're not asking to be killed. They're asking to be let alone and that's very different," she said.

Vinegar Can Be Used For WHAT?

If you're like me, you will be amazed at the multitude of uses for vinegar.

This common household product is packed with essential amino acids and helpful vitamins, minerals, and enzymes. Apple cider vinegar was found to be an almost universal preservative and cure-all. The healthy goodness of apples is concentrated into a teaspoon of golden liquid — a teaspoon of which supplies a generous portion of the building blocks needed for a healthy body.

The new book "The Vinegar Book" by natural remedies author Emily Thacker, shows you over 300 ways to use vinegar for fighting germs, easing pain, improving health, cutting grease, and cleaning tips for a natural sparkle! She gives you recipes to make your own flavored vinegar that will perk up the taste of your food!

Chase Germs Away
- Kill infection
- Soothe sore throats & coughs
- Calm nausea

Pain Relief
- Relieve varicose veins
- Ease arthritis
- Fade headaches away

Nature's Aid To A Healthier Body
- Control appetite to lose weight
- Protect skin from the ravages of the sun
- Fade age spots
- Minimize memory loss

Your House Will Be Ready For The "White-Glove Test!"
- Use as a disinfectant — some hospitals do!
- Use in the laundry — brightens colors! Whitens whites! Fades perspiration stains!
- Dissolve chewing gum
- Removes carpet stains — absorbs odors
- Repairs wood scratches & makes an excellent furniture polish
- Countertops, floors, windows & fixtures will shine!

Did You Know . . .
- Vinegar is credited for saving the lives of thousands of soldiers during the U.S. Civil War?
- In 400 B.C. Hippocrates, considered the father of medicine, used vinegar to treat his patients?
- Vinegar was used as a healing dressing on wounds and sores in Biblical times?

Research Shows . . .
- Complex carbohydrates and dietary fiber have been recommended by the U.S. Surgeon General to help build resistance to cancer. Vinegar contains a treasure trove of complex carbohydrates as well as a good dose of dietary fiber.
- When vinegar is made from fresh, natural apples, it contains a healthy dose of pectin. As pectin works its way through the digestive system, it binds to cholesterol. Then pectin pulls the cholesterol which is bound to it out of the body. Less cholesterol in the body makes for a reduced risk of cardiovascular problems, such as heart attacks and strokes.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Taking the easy way out will not produce the results you want. Meet any problems head-on and look for innovative solutions. Early in 1994, tensions fade as a close relationship becomes more rewarding. You find even greater satisfaction in your work as spring approaches. A large home or exotic vacation may soon be yours. Long-term investments are favored. Guard against putting all of your eggs into one basket.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Roy Scheider and Richard Burton, actress MacKenzie Phillips, lyricist Tim Rice.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your long-range thinking is on target. Trust your own know-how, not other people's suggestions. Distant events hold special interest. Move forward with confidence where romance is concerned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A positive attitude keeps a project moving ahead even when interest wanes. Do not allow rumors to upset you. Romance gets a shot in the arm when you reveal your tender side.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Serious consideration of an intriguing proposal is pivotal. Confiding in a higher-up brings valuable input and an important reality check. Widen your social circle by joining a community group.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Look forward to a lucky day for personal relationships. Romance reaches a new plateau, or a friend steps forward to lend a helping hand. Your faith in a loved one will be rewarded.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Deciding not to put yourself or your frustrations in the spotlight now is a smart move. Your quiet diligence will impress higher-ups more than an angry confrontation. Play a waiting game.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Another person's maneuvers may upset the balance of an agreement. Your diplomatic manner helps keep the scales tipped your way. A night on the town or phone adds up to great fun.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): VIP's suggested procedures may seem constricting. Relax. The money you save today will mean much more to you tomorrow. Events at a distance raise your hopes. Good times lie just ahead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Discuss your ideas with those in a position to implement them. Put more warmth into your personal relationships. A partner needs to know that your alliance is more than just a convenience.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A casual conversation with someone you barely know gives you valuable food for thought. Your experience and specialized knowledge give you an advantage in the marketplace.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Close ties are strengthened now, with the accent on long-term commitment. Alliances on the job, however, could shift. Modulate your enthusiasm today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Once you solve a difficulty or two, you will see the advantage of a new plan. Turning on the charm lets you get your way on the job. Tonight, invite friends over.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Seize an opportunity to perform a valuable service for someone influential. A fitness program pays off handsomely. Woo the object of your affections with music, poetry.

"Your mission, Mr. Phelps, should you choose to accept this assignment is relatively simple. You must decide what trick South, an expert player, lost at six spades. As usual, should you or any of your team be caught in faulty analysis this department will disavow any knowledge of your activities to avoid having to answer embarrassing questions about your bridge prowess."

The auction might not have been scientific, but it was quite accurate. If you can count the tricks available to declarer, there are 12—five spades, five diamonds and the aces of hearts and clubs. However, there is, as so often happens, a fly in the ointment. Unless diamonds split evenly, and the opening lead makes that unlikely, the diamond suit is blocked and South will be able to collect only four diamond tricks. Can you resolve this dilemma?

First, win the opening lead and draw trumps in three or four rounds, whatever it takes. The key play is to then clear the ace of hearts. To check on whether diamonds are 2-2 cash another high diamond. As you suspected, the suit splits 3-1 What now?

If you concede a diamond you have simply reduced your tricks from 12 to 11 and the fulfilling trick is nowhere in sight. But see what happens if you lead a heart from dummy and, instead of ruffing, you discard the offending diamond from hand!

You can win any return, cross to dummy with your remaining diamond and cash the two long diamonds. Let's hope Mr. Phelps came up with the right solution. If not, he would do well to buy Bill Root's How to Play a Bridge Hand, from which this problem is taken.

Couple confirms gossip-column reports: Whoopi-Ted fling is over

LOS ANGELES — Hear Ye! Hear Ye! The Whoopi-Ted romance is over.

The couple confirmed Tuesday what gossip columnists have reported for nearly a week: They have parted as friends after 18 months.

"Although we had hoped, perhaps naively, that we could keep our private lives private, it has become increasingly apparent that this is not possible," Goldberg and Danson said in a statement.

"We look forward to working together again in the future and hope that we may do so without the kind of media scrutiny we have been subjected to over the past year," the statement said.

Last month, Danson was criticized for donning blackface during an Oct. 8 Friars Club roast for Miss Goldberg. He also used a racial epithet and joked about the couple's sex life.

Critics called Danson's appearance tasteless and racist. Miss Goldberg defended Danson, saying she helped prepare much of his material.

NEW YORK — Barbra Streisand is doing a little housecleaning, for big money.

Christie's plans two March auctions for $4 million worth of art owned by the performer. A rare Tiffany Cobweb lamp valued at $800,000 to $1 million, a Galle elephant, and a bronze sculpture by Jacques Lipshitz are included.

Streisand

The art stretches from the 18th century to the 20th century. Memorabilia of Streisand's career will also be auctioned.

The sales are scheduled for March 3 and 4. Preview exhibitions will be held in Paris, Tokyo, Los Angeles and New York.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Something is missing in the state of Denmark: Queen Margrethe's dachshund.

The 4-year-old dog, Zenobie, went out for a romp in woods around the castle in Fredensborg on Oct. 21 and hasn't come back. Park rangers and palace workers have spotted her scurrying around, but can't catch her.

"The dog, which has been seen several times, is very shy and distant toward strangers," palace spokesman Christian Eugen-Olsen said Tuesday in a radio appeal to the public.

"So the queen asks that if someone sees it, they shouldn't try to catch it but should call the police or the forest rangers," he said.

The forest around Fredensborg, north of Copenhagen, seems to have some attraction for royal dachshunds. Four years ago, Zita Balzac headed for the woods and spent four days.

TOLEDO, Ohio — Danny Glover had to overcome dyslexia to attend college and acting school.

"They thought I was retarded," he told junior high school students Monday. "I even thought I was retarded. But I knew it didn't matter because I was in control of my life and it was up to me to make something of myself."

Glover, who starred in "The Color Purple," "Grand Canyon" and three "Lethal Weapon" movies, told students at McTigue Junior High School that to succeed, everyone must overcome problems and make the right choices.

"Now is the time you have to begin to make choices that will affect you in either a positive or detrimental way," he said.

TRENTON, N.J. — Jermaine Jackson skipped an art gallery appearance Tuesday and returned to Los Angeles to see his doctor because of heart palpitations.

The doctor's visit was strictly precautionary, spokesman John McLaughlin said.

Michael Jackson's 39-year-old brother was in Switzerland when he first felt ill and returned to the United States on Monday night.

"He's fine, and he's looking forward to getting back to his duties as executive producer of the Jackson Family Honors," McLaughlin said.

Jackson was to have made an appearance at Trenton's Boehm Porcelain Gallery, which created the award to be presented by the Jackson family to Elizabeth Taylor and Berry Gordy at the family's television reunion on Dec. 11.

NEW YORK — Who's that peeping out from under Demi Moore on the December cover of Vanity Fair? Santa, you say? Hardly.

David Letterman donned red suit, white beard etc. to pose with Moore for photographer Annie Leibovitz.

Moore is sort of the Vanity Fair house cover girl. She posed nude and pregnant and said in a story that "pregnancy agrees with me." She appeared after that in nothing but body paint.

Moore is pregnant again. It will be her third child with Bruce Willis.

Vanity Fair quotes Moore as saying that this time, she spent weeks "throwing up all day, all night, every day, for about a month and a half.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Favorite marketed in 'light' version

By Linda Anderson

When it comes to the epitome of what might be called "junk food," some items traditionally lead the list. For instance, what do you think of when you hear the words Twinkies, chocolate-covered graham crackers or barbecue-flavored potato chips?

Anderson

Or Cheez Whiz? This pasteurized process cheese product in a jar, known for its semi-liquid state that makes it more spreadable, is not known for its nutrition content. However, that doesn't matter to its millions of fans who have grown up with Cheez Whiz — not mention thousands and thousands of college students (and former college students) who have survived their years of higher education thanks to Cheez Whiz, crackers and diet sodas.

Now this old and venerable institution has been updated for the '90s with the introduction of Cheez Whiz Light. How could I resist trying some — I remember my college years vividly.

A 16.5 ounce jar of Cheez Whiz Light cost $3.39, which is kind of expensive (but not when you consider it may be the only thing standing between you and college cafeteria food).

Of course it's a Kraft product, which means label advertising is short and to the point. In this case, label claims consist of one that says "50 percent Less Fat than the leading cheese spread," which I assume is regular Cheez Whiz.

Sure enough, on the nutrition label on the back of the jar, Cheez Whiz Light is compared to regular Cheez Whiz: Light has 60 calories and 3 grams of fat (or 27 calories from fat) per one-ounce serving, while regular has 80 calories and 6 grams of fat (54 calories from fat).

The taste test proved to be very interesting. The youngest taste-tester thought the Cheez Whiz Light was "good" all by itself. She really preferred it straight out of the jar and not on crackers, like she sampled first. The next oldest taste-taster had a couple of toasted cheese sandwiches made with Cheez Whiz Light — and we discovered that it isn't really good for toasted cheese sandwiches unless you like them really, really runny.

I was very pleasantly surprised to find that Cheez Whiz Light taste a lot like the regular Cheez Whiz I know and love. Really brings back those college days, staying up all night with my roommate and other friends from the dorm, studying for finals and eating junk food.

Fortunately, I don't have to worry about finals anymore. And even more fortunately, there's still Cheez Whiz — only Light this time. The times, they are 'a changin...

KIDDER: Author meets 'old friends'

(From 4B)

"successful aging" which he links to a tendency to blame people for their infirmities. "When we want to praise the elderly we talk about how vigorous old age can be, without stopping to remember that that's not possible for everybody. Moreover, vigor ends for everyone at some point," he said.

The year that Kidder spent at Linda Manor, often showing up at night and on holidays, was not always grim and depressing. Kidder said he often looked forward to his visits with Lou, Joe and other residents whose stories dominate the narrative.

Kidder, who was allowed to roam around the nursing home, said his biggest surprise came in discovering how many residents kept themselves busy hatching schemes and working on projects.

Dan had his telephone programmed to the office of the junior senator from Massachusetts, to whom he would address his complaints that the nursing home would not prepare his breakfast eggs runny, which was how he liked them. Eleanor, drawing from her lifetime of theater experience, stayed vibrant by directing plays.

"It's a real hive," Kidder said, countering the idea that people tend to think of nursing homes — if they think of them at all — as places where most things are resolved. "After a while one realizes that the problems faced there are not very different than the problems all of us face. Perhaps the sooner we realize that, the better off we are."

THE MINNESOTA OPERA'S 1993 TOUR

Mozart's DON GIOVANNI

He was immoral, conniving and irresponsible...His conquests were legendary...He seduced over 2,000 women...He was a cad yet he was always charming. The Minnesota Opera Company presents Don Giovanni, a powerful and explosive production exploring Don Juan, the legendary Spanish lover. Mozart's operatic masterpiece blends comedy and tragedy with a rich, resplendent score.
"The Minnesota Opera's Don Giovanni is striking...carefully detailed...chilling..."

Permian fate up to UIL

■ The UIL Executive Committee will decide today if Odessa Permian can go to the state playoffs.

By Bill Petitt
Staff writer

ODESSA — The University Interscholastic League's executive committee will hold a special session at 10 a.m. today in Austin to determine if Odessa Permian will be forced to forfeit all of its league games due to an alleged ineligible player.

Originally, the District 4-5A executive committee had scheduled a 10 a.m. meeting at the offices of the Midland Independent School District, but the UIL agreed later in the day to hear Permian's case in Austin due to the time span and ramifications of the state playoffs.

ECISD superintendent Gene Buinger, athletic director John Wilkins, Permian head football coach Tam Hollingshead, Odessa High football coach Bill Barron, ECIDS legal counsel Mike Atkins, principals from both schools and Chuck Hornung, communications director of the ECISD, will travel to Austin today for the special session.

The District 4-5A executive committee, comprised of the superintendents of the Midland, Ector, Abilene and San Angelo school districts, met via a telephone conference call Tuesday morning and determined that a formal meeting was necessary to further examine anonymous allegations that Permian defensive tackle Benjamin Garcia played following a legal transfer, but didn't sit out one calendar year as required by the UIL.

"We discussed the allegations, but technically it was not a meeting," said Joseph Baressi, superintendent of the MISD and chairman of the 4-5A executive committee. "We determined that the allegations were detailed and serious enough to be handled in a formal meeting."

Kosar to sign with Cowboys

DALLAS — The Dallas Cowboys will sign released Cleveland Browns quarterback Bernie Kosar on Wednesday, television station WFAA-TV reported Tuesday night.

"Kosar will be in that room tomorrow and will be signed," sports anchor Dale Hansen said after showing footage of Cowboys head coach Jimmy Johnson meeting with the media earlier in the day.

A Youngstown, Ohio, television station reported Tuesday night that the Cowboys would call a Wednesday morning news conference to announce the signing.

The club refused to confirm the reports, however.

"I heard that," Rich Dalrymple, Cowboys' director of public relations, said of the WFAA report. "The club really has no comment at this particular time."

Kosar became attractive because of starting Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman's pulled hamstring suffered in the third quarter of Dallas' 31-9 victory over the New York Giants.

Kosar, 29, played for Johnson at the University of Miami in 1984, Johnson's first of five years as coach of the Hurricanes. Kosar led Miami to a national title in 1983 before Johnson. With Johnson as coach, Kosar led Miami to an 8-5 record and a Fiesta Bowl appearance, then left Miami with two years of eligibility remaining so the Browns could choose him in the 1985 supplemental draft.

Stone out

Abilene High head football coach Carlous Stone has been reassigned within the school district, it was announced Monday.

The Eagles finished the season 1-9 after a 21-17 win over Midland High the final week of the season.

Stone compiled a 4-26-3 record during his three-year stint at AHS.

The search for a replacement will begin immediately.

Two 5A teams out of playoffs

SAN ANTONIO — Two San Antonio teams have been given a premature exit from the state high school football playoffs because of an on-field brawl last weekend involving players and fans.

San Antonio superintendent Victor Rodriguez, overruling a district executive committee, ordered Tuesday that San Antonio Edison forfeit its Class 5A Division II game with San Antonio Clark and that San Antonio Jefferson forfeit its Class 5A Division I game with San Antonio Holmes.

Astros talk to Boone third time

HOUSTON — Minor league manager Bob Boone interviewed for the third time for the club's vacant field manager's position, KRIV-TV of Houston reported Tuesday night.

Boone is the only candidate among seven known nominees who has been interviewed a third time.

Texas Tech's Byron "Bam" Morris became the nation's second leading rusher Saturday after gaining 223 yards against Texas Christian.

Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — Byron "Bam" Morris, the nation's second-leading rusher, practices a powerhouse philosophy: Don't let just one guy take you down.

At 6-2 and 240 pounds, he's a lumbering giant who crashes through the opponent's line and collects dangling defenders as he plows downfield.

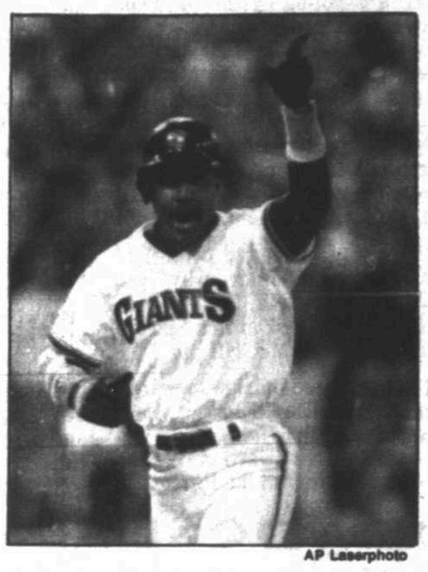

"They're not scared at first," said Morris, a junior who amassed a career-high 223 yards for Texas Tech on Saturday. "They come up and hit me ... with all they got. Then they're like, 'Dawg.' So they just grab onto me and let someone else hit me."

The Associated Press — for the second straight week — named Morris the Southwest Conference's offensive player of the week.

Southern Methodist freshman Chris Bordano received the top defensive honor for his 23 tackles, one interception and one caused fumble.

"He was making tackles from sideline to sideline," said Tom Rossley, coach of the Mustangs, beaten 31-24 Saturday by Rice. "He's going to be a very good player."

San Francisco's Barry Bonds was named the National League MVP for the third time in four years.

Bonds wins 3rd NL MVP

By Wendy E. Lane
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — With a $43.75 million contract, Barry Bonds already was in a financial class by himself. His third MVP award puts him in an athletic class by himself.

By being voted the National League's MVP on Tuesday, Bonds not only showed he was well worth the San Francisco Giants' investment, he became the first player to win the award three times in four years. He joined seven others as a three-time honoree, and the 29-year-old slugger easily could become baseball's first four-time Most Valuable Player.

Bears unplug 'The Fridge'

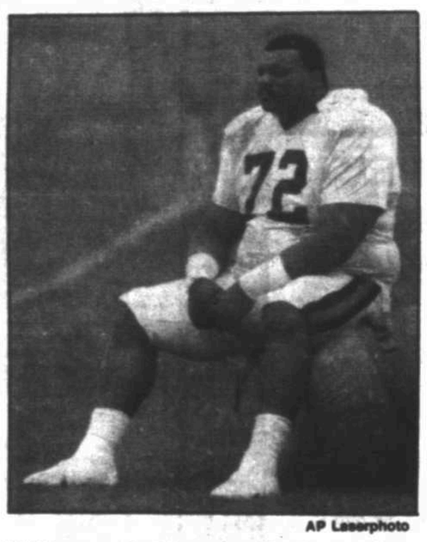

By Joe Mooshil

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — William "The Refrigerator" Perry, whose lumbering girth once made him a football folk hero, was released Tuesday by the Chicago Bears.

Perry has tumbled a long way since his rookie season in 1985, when he helped the Bears to a Super Bowl title and his weight of nearly one-fifth of a ton became a staple for comedy routines and television comercials.

He did not start a game this season and last Sunday was declared inactive for the first time. By releasing Perry before the second half of the season, the

UNLV gets probation

By Tim Dahlberg
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS — UNLV's men's basketball program was placed on three years probation today by the NCAA in a settlement of a 6-year-old case sparked by the recruitment of former New York City prep star Lloyd Daniels.

The probation, for what one NCAA official described as inducements and benefits to recruits and current UNLV athletes, restricts scheduling and television appearances for the Runnin' Rebels but does not ban the team from the NCAA tournament.

The head of the NCAA's Committee on Infractions, David Swank, said the penalties were less than the minimum under the committee's rules because UNLV had cooperated in the case.

"But for the actions of the university, the penalties would have been much more severe," Swank said. "But these are not a slap on the wrist. These are still fairly substantial penalties."

Swank said there was little discussion of the role that Jerry Tarkanian's resignation as basketball coach played in the decision. Tarkanian was coach at the time the violations occurred

Other NCAA officials, noting the time the violations occurred, said they wanted penalties "that had the least possible effect upon the present student-athletes."

UNLV admitted to 28 of the violations in a settlement resolved through the NCAA's summary disposition process. Swank refused to identify the violations because of a continuing dispute over a Nevada due-process law, saying only

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Lee's Rebs know how Rodney feels

Midland Lee has to be the Rodney Dangerfield of District 4-5A. The Rebels just don't command a lot of respect from around the league — or around the state for that matter.

Williamson

Consider the fact that Lee finished regular season play with an 8-1-1 record and was denied a Top 10 berth in The Associated Press' final prep poll. The No. 10 spot went to two-time loser Dallas Kimball, who lost its last game of the season to No. 1 ranked Dallas Carter by a whopping 55-12 margin.

Lee owns a 21-21 tie against Odessa Permian on a week when the Panthers were ranked No. 1 in the state. Kimball loses to No. 1 by 43 points and ranks ahead of Lee. You figure it out.

But the image isn't much better closer to home. In the pre-game hype leading up to the Lee-Cooper game, a host on an Abilene radio station said that Lee "was vulnerable" against Cooper and "not as good as they think they are." That remark was recalled after the Lee-Cooper game by Rebel cornerback Brian Quinonez.

Lee halfback Marlon Henry was upset with a story in the Odessa newspaper the week of the Lee-Cooper game that suggested that Lee's backfield wasn't as good as those at Cooper.

"Some of the Odessa High players trashed our backfield, saying Cooper was better than us." Henry said, "but I guess they can buy playoff tickets to watch us play now."

Of course, you expect that kind of talk in the situation that existed. Odessa High needed Cooper to win in order to get into the playoffs. They prayed, they desperately hoped, Cooper would win the game. Cooper fans, too, wanted to avoid ending regular season with two consecutive losses like they did last year. It was the second year in a row that the district's fastest starter ended with the worst finish.

But even after the Cooper loss to Lee, some of the Cougars were more disappointed that the loss cost them a second chance to meet Permian again in the state playoffs.

Had Lee lost the game to Cooper, Permian would have been back in the Small School playoffs with Cooper instead of Lee.

A dejected Cooper defensive back Ben Munoz said after losing to Lee, "This is a huge disappointment to us since we were hoping to get another shot at Permian in the playoffs. We wanted them again because we felt like we could have beaten them.

"Now, the way things stand, we will probably have to play Lee again in the fourth round, but we really wanted Permian."

That may sound a little strange coming from a team that has zero wins in its last three playoff outings, but it could easily be true. Lee and Cooper are solid favorites to reach the fourth round this year. That doesn't mean it will happen, but it is more than possible, considering the playoff bracket, which isn't the strongest in the world this year to that point.

So, no one seems to really be taking the Rebels seriously as we head into the "new season." But, with the current high school playoff format in Texas, the Rebels now have the chance to put the critics at rest — on the field of play.

That is a better fate than not being there at all. If the Rebels really want respect, they should go out and earn it. The second chance has arrived and you can't ask for much more than that.

Fernandez falls in Slims

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Zina Garrison-Jackson upset third-seeded Mary Joe Fernandez 6-4, 6-1 in the first round of the $750,000 Virginia Slims of Philadelphia on Tuesday.

Jackson played sound attacking tennis and her sliced strokes from an undercut backhand won her several important points. Fernandez was usually the first to break in hard fought running exchanges.

■ Tennis Roundup

Garrison-Jackson, who won tournaments at Oklahoma and Budapest this year, won seven straight games from 4-4 in the first s. t to 5-0 in the second set. She won the match in the seventh game of the second set when Fernandez made a high-volley backhand shot into the net.

European Community

ANTWERP, Belgium — Pete Sampras and Boris Becker won their opening matches Tuesday at the European Community Championships. For Becker, it was a close call.

Sampras, seeking to cap a great season with a World Championship title next week, quickly overcame some problems with his serve to coast past fellow American David Wheaton, 6-3, 6-2.

"I am lucky I can continue," Becker, seeded fourth, said.

BONDS: Third award in four years

(From 1C)

Bonds hit .336 with a league-leading 123 RBIs and 46 home runs and scored 129 runs — all career highs — while leading the Giants to a franchise-record 103 wins.

He received 24 of 28 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Bonds also received four second-place votes for 372 points, far ahead of Philadelphia center fielder Len Dykstra with 267.

Dykstra got the other four first-place ballots, along with 20 second-place votes, three for third and one for fourth.

"In a way you have control of this and in another way you don't," Dykstra said. "There were a lot of guys to look at this season. Look what Fred McGriff did."

The next three finishers were Atlanta Braves: David Justice, Fred McGriff and Ron Gant.

Bonds won the award in 1990 and again last year with the Pittsburgh Pirates, becoming the premier player on last year's free-agent market. The Giants, whose new ownership group wasn't even in place yet, stunned baseball by giving him a six-year deal that made him the richest player ever.

The furor over the contract didn't last long. Bonds began earning his pay right away, homering in his first at-bat at Candlestick Park and catapulting the Giants into first place by May 10.

When his team became locked in a pennant race with the Atlanta Braves down the stretch, Bonds proved his MVP status without a doubt, although the Braves claimed the title on the last day of the season.

In his final 16 games, Bonds hit .333 with six homers, seven doubles, 21 RBIs and an .860 slugging percentage. In the second game of the Giants' season-ending series at Los Angeles, he homered twice and drove in a career-high seven runs.

Powering his way through the season, Bonds slumped only once, in early September. But it was at a crucial time for the Giants, who slipped out of first during his 12-for-46 spell.

The other three-time MVPs were the Cardinals' Stan Musial (1943, 1946, 1948), the Dodgers' Roy Campanella (1951, 1953, 1955) and the Phillies' Mike Schmidt (1980, 1981, 1986) in the National League, and the Philadelphia Athletics' Jimmie Foxx (1932, 1933, 1938), New York's Joe DiMaggio (1939, 1941, 1947), Yogi Berra (1951, 1954, 1955) and Mickey Mantle (1956, 1957, 1962) in the American League.

Bonds is the fifth NL player to win back-to-back MVPs. Atlanta's Dale Murphy, Schmidt, Cincinnati's Joe Morgan and Chicago's Ernie Banks did it.

In addition to his $4 million salary this year, Bonds earned a $100,000 bonus for winning the award. If he wins two during the course of the contract, he'll get an extra $250,000, and if he wins four, he'll pocket $1 million.

BEARS: Release popular Perry

(From 1C)

Bears saved $343,750, half his salary.

"The decision was not easy, particularly since he is a fine person and has been an excellent football player," coach Dave Wannstedt said. "It was something that had to be done.

"I tried to be as fair as I could be. It was not money or part of a youth movement. Weight was not an issue."

Wannstedt said the 30-year-old tackle would not have suited up this week. Perry had eight tackles in seven games this year.

"We tried to rotate him with other people and it wasn't working," the coach said. "It was a decision that had to be made."

Perry, once a garrulous celebrity but not talkative in recent years, was not available for comment.

From the day Perry was drafted in the first round in 1985 out of Clemson, controversy followed him — mostly concerning his massive bulk and his clashes with Mike Ditka, then the coach.

Perry stayed out of training camp in 1992 in a contract dispute, and eventually signed an incentive-laden two-year contract.

He started 94 of 114 games. He had 452 tackles, nine forced fumbles, five fumble recoveries and 28.5 sacks.

His spot on the roster will be filled by defensive tackle Tory Epps, who was waived by the Atlanta Falcons after seven games this season.

BAM: Moves to second in nation

(From 1C)

Bordano played primarily on special teams early in the season. His first start was against Texas A&M, where he registered a game-high 14 tackles.

"He tackles through people," Rossley said. "He comes out the other side."

Rossley described the 6-2, 205-pound true freshman as an aggressive and versatile athlete who ran hurdles and sprints at San Antonio Southwest. For the season, Bordano has made 21 solo tackles and 27 assists.

Texas Tech claimed a 49-21 victory over Texas Christian thanks to three touchdowns by Morris.

He scored two touchdowns and rushed for 158 yards on 32 carries in the Red Raiders' 31-22 victory over Texas on Oct. 30.

Morris averages 145.3 yards per game, second best nationally. The 98 points he has scored this season also ranks second in the nation.

"I think this time next year Bam will be a viable contender for the Heisman Trophy," coach Spike Dykes said Monday. "... The way you get recognition, though, is just keep putting those good numbers up."

Morris, who caught two passes for 12 yards against TCU, described himself as an occasional "dump off man" for quarterback Robert Hall. He said his cuts get smarter each game.

"I want to take this ball club to a bowl," Morris said. "I'll be back next year. If I was a senior, it'd be another story."

Sophomores lead Borger, Corsicana

DALLAS (AP) — Only a sophomore, Borger's Cornell Jones has learned the value of hard work and dedication.

Jones already has plenty of confidence, so much that he told coach Marty McClintock he wanted to rush for 300 yards in the season finale against Amarillo Caprock.

That's where the hard work and dedication come into play. McClintock told Jones if he mastered those traits, the numbers would come.

And they did.

Jones rushed 27 times for 371 yards and three touchdowns in Borger's 48-0 victory Friday. It was the third-best rushing total ever in the Panhandle area, capping a 1,506-yard season, Jones' first on varsity.

He's not the only sophomore taking Class 4A by storm.

In Corsicana, Ketric Sanford has rushed for 1,322 yards despite not becoming a starter until week five. He ended the regular season with 328 yards on 41 carries in Friday's 28-6 victory over Athens.

The two second-year stars highlight The Associated Press' final honor roll of the season.

In the season opener, McClintock resisted the urge to start Jones, a dominant player last season on the freshman team. He waited until week two against Amarillo Tascosa, which was coming off a Class 5A playoff season.

"I knew he was going to be a great running back, but I had to show a little restraint," said McClintock, who turned an 0-10 team into a 6-4 squad with four sophomore starters.

Jones was impressive all season, even getting 72 yards by halftime of a game in which he hyperextended his knee. Against Hereford, Jones ran for 282 yards on 22 carries.

Then, with the final game ahead and all playoff hopes gone, Jones decided he wanted to give people something to expect from him in his junior season.

"He said, 'Coach, I want 300 yards.' I told him he had to work hard and be dedicated to achieve that," McClintock said.

Sanford also is a hard worker, which is why he was able to take over the featured role in Corsicana's offense when senior Jose Williams injured his knee, said head coach Tom Wilson.

Wilson, former Texas Tech quarterback and Texas A&M head coach, is in his first year of coaching Corsicana, more than 30 years after he was the Tigers' quarterback.

"He was ready when his time came," Wilson said. "We didn't have any idea he was going to be called on this early in his career."

UIL: Decision time for Permian

(From 1C)

The allegations state that Garcia, a senior backup defensive tackle, transferred to Permian from Odessa High, but did not sit out a year required by the UIL. Garcia, a junior, did not play in Permian's first three games of the season, but did play in all of the Panther's District 4-5A games.

Garcia went from Odessa to Permian as a majority-to-minority transfer. Such transfers are legal in the ECISD as part of a court-ordered plan for desegregation following the closing of Ector High School in 1982.

The order states that if a student chooses to attend more than one high school in the same district, then the student may transfer to another school, but the student is not eligible for varsity athletic competition until regularly attending that school for at least 15 days.

"At issue is our interpretation and the UIL's interpretation of our majority-to-minority court order," said Hornung during an afternoon press conference.

The UIL rule states that the minimum penalty for using an ineligible player, knowingly or unknowingly, is forfeiture of all the games the player participated in.

"I would assume any decision made would be subject to appeal," said Baressi.

"We feel very good about our position going into the meeting," said Permian assistant coach Kade King. "We have followed the district's transfer policy to a tee.

"This is an eleventh hour tactic. It is meant to be a distraction for the team."

Tickets for Permian's first round playoff game versus Lubbock Coronado Saturday at Ratliff Stadium in Odessa have been suspended indefinitely.

It marks the third time in four years that a District 4-5A team has been scrutinized by the UIL. In 1992, Midland Lee forfeited three games after running back Sherman Dedrick was ruled ineligible because he lived in the wrong school district.

In 1990, Permian was banned from the district championship and postseason after it was ruled that they participated in illegal summer practices. Permian's games counted toward the district standings, however.

Recently, Permian won state championships in 1989 and 1991.

If Permian is forced to forfeit two or more of its District 4-5A games then Midland Lee, Abilene Cooper and OHS would tie for the district championship. Odessa High, as a result of its 4-2 district record, would take Permian's place in the state playoffs as the league's big school representative.

Odessa High has been idle for the past 10 days with an open date the last week of the season. OHS was eliminated from playoff consideration after Midland Lee defeated Abilene Cooper 17-14 last Friday. OHS would have been in the playoffs if Cooper had won that game.

"We do not plan to practice today," said Odessa coach Barron Tuesday. "I guess we could, but as far as we know, Permian is the team representing our district."

UNLV: Punishment fair

(From 1C)

that they generally involved "inducements to prospective student athletes and extra benefits to current student athletes."

"We're excited," said current coach Rollie Massimino. "No one likes to be penalized but these penalties seem fair and reasonable under the circumstances."

Under the terms of the settlement, UNLV will:

— Reduce by two the number of basketball scholarships over the next two years.

— Not be able to schedule any home games other than with Big West Conference opponents in the 1994-95 season.

— Be prohibited from televising non-conference regular season road games for the next two seasons.

— Be barred from using any exceptions to NCAA limits on the number of basketball games for pre-season tournaments and foreign tours.

— Reduce the number of paid visits by recruits to the campus from 15 to 10 over the next two years.

The violations stem from a probe begun by the NCAA following a 1987 New York Newsday article on the recruitment of Daniels, who now plays for the NBA San Antonio Spurs but never played for UNLV.

In a statement released by the NCAA, the infractions committee said, "The violations admitted by the university in this case were very serious, numerous and extended over a period of several years."

UNLV spent more than a year trying to resolve the case. Through the summary disposition process, the university offers possible penalties in negotiations with the NCAA's infractions committee.

Before today's announcement, UNLV officials had declined comment on the penalties, other than to say they hoped there would be no postseason sanctions.

The NCAA listed 34 alleged violations against the university in December 1990, but the resolution of the case was delayed because of legal battles over Nevada's due process law.

Tarkanian's departure from the school was less than cordial.

His attorneys claimed UNLV administrators planted negative stories in the media about the former coach. The allegations were in response to a UNLV report outlining the university's troubles with the NCAA during Tarkanian's tenure.

Prices lower

NEW YORK — Oil prices finished lower Tuesday after sellers jumped on a price increase at midday as an opportunity to unload their positions, pushing prices to a modest loss.

Crude had risen as high as $16.95 during the session, but started falling early in the afternoon and settled 5 cents lower at $16.66 per barrel. The drop came on top of a 38-cent fall the day before, which brought crude back to three-year lows.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $15 a barrel.

Prices felt new pressure Tuesday morning following news that the Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz was expected to visit the United Nations Nov. 20 to press for an end to economic sanctions against the country.

Any hint of Iraq's eventual return to the world oil market can send prices falling.

But the report was not enough to keep prices down and crude was rising by mid-morning. The market frequently finds new buying the day following a sharp sell-off.

As the rally approached $17 per barrel, selling intensified and prices began dropping, finishing the day with a slight loss.

As has been typical of recent wide price swings in the market, there was little significant news to push prices lower.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for delivery in December settling at $2.380 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 0.9 cent.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against most currencies Tuesday after the government reported there was no wholesale inflation in October, feeding a bullish sentiment toward the dollar in currency markets.

Gold prices rose in the United States and fell overseas. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $376.00 a troy ounce, up $1.20 from Monday.

In New York, the dollar finished at 107.90 yen, up from 107.85 Monday.

Dow drops

NEW YORK — Stocks were mixed Tuesday after the market made an initial surge keyed on a better-than-expected inflation report and a rally in the bond market.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which was gained about 20 points in the opening minutes of trading, lost those gains as the day wore on, closing down 7.83 points to 3,640.07.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 4 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume totaled 275.86 million shares, against 231.21 million in the previous session.

Producer prices drop in October

■ Inflation at wholesale level disappears, helped by steep decline in auto prices.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Inflation at the wholesale level disappeared in October, helped by the steepest seasonally adjusted drop in auto prices in 21 years. Interest rates fell and financial markets rallied on the good news.

The Labor Department's Producer Price Index fell 0.2 percent. It measures prices paid by wholesalers and others to producers such as farms and factories.

In advance of Tuesday's report, economists were anticipating a 0.2 percent increase. The unexpected decline cheered financial markets, where traders have grown nervous during the past few weeks, believing the recently improved pace of economic growth could produce an upturn in inflation.

Both the stock and bond markets rallied in early trading. Analysts said 30-year mortgage rates, which tend to track bond rates, could slip below 7 percent again. Last week they rose above 7 percent for the first time since late summer.

"The economy picking up at the end of the year is not contributing to a concomitant pickup in prices," said economist Martin Regalia of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. "This report says that as of yet there is not a fundamental acceleration of inflation."

A good bit of the October performance came from a 3.9 percent seasonally adjusted drop in car prices, the largest decline since October 1972. But even without that, the index would have risen only a scant 0.1 percent.

"It was helpful but not critical to a very benign report," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch.

Unadjusted for seasonal variations, car prices actually rose 5 percent in October. That was a little more than half the typical 9 percent increase for the start of a model year, in part because dealers offered fewer price cuts on old models at the end of the summer.

October marked the fifth time in six months that the producer index has failed to record an increase. It was up 0.2 percent in September after plummeting 0.6 percent in August.

Prices increased at only a 0.4 percent annual rate from January through October, compared with 1.6 percent for all of 1992.

The Labor Department's Consumer Price Index, which unlike the producer index tracks the price of services as well as goods, is expected to show a moderate increase of about 0.4 percent in October, pushed up by new federal taxes on gasoline. That report is due out Wednesday. Through September, consumer prices had risen at a 2.5 percent annual rate.

Because the unemployment rate remains relative high, at 6.8 percent, and the operating rate at factories, mines and utilities relatively low, at 81.6 percent, economists see little reason for wage pressures or production bottlenecks to develop. Thus, they're expecting little increase in the inflation rate the rest of this year or next.

Inventor of pet feeder serves 'faultless' deal

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

He had hoped to start a manufacturing operation in Midland, creating jobs for Midlanders, but Larry Bergen received an offer he couldn't refuse.

Bergen, who invented the Futuristic Dog or Cat Feeder, a wall-mounted pet feeder whose height can be adjusted, has sold the manufacturing rights to the feeder to Faultless Starch/Bon Ami, as well as his on-hand inventory and all the tools and dies needed to produce the feeder, all for an undisclosed sum.

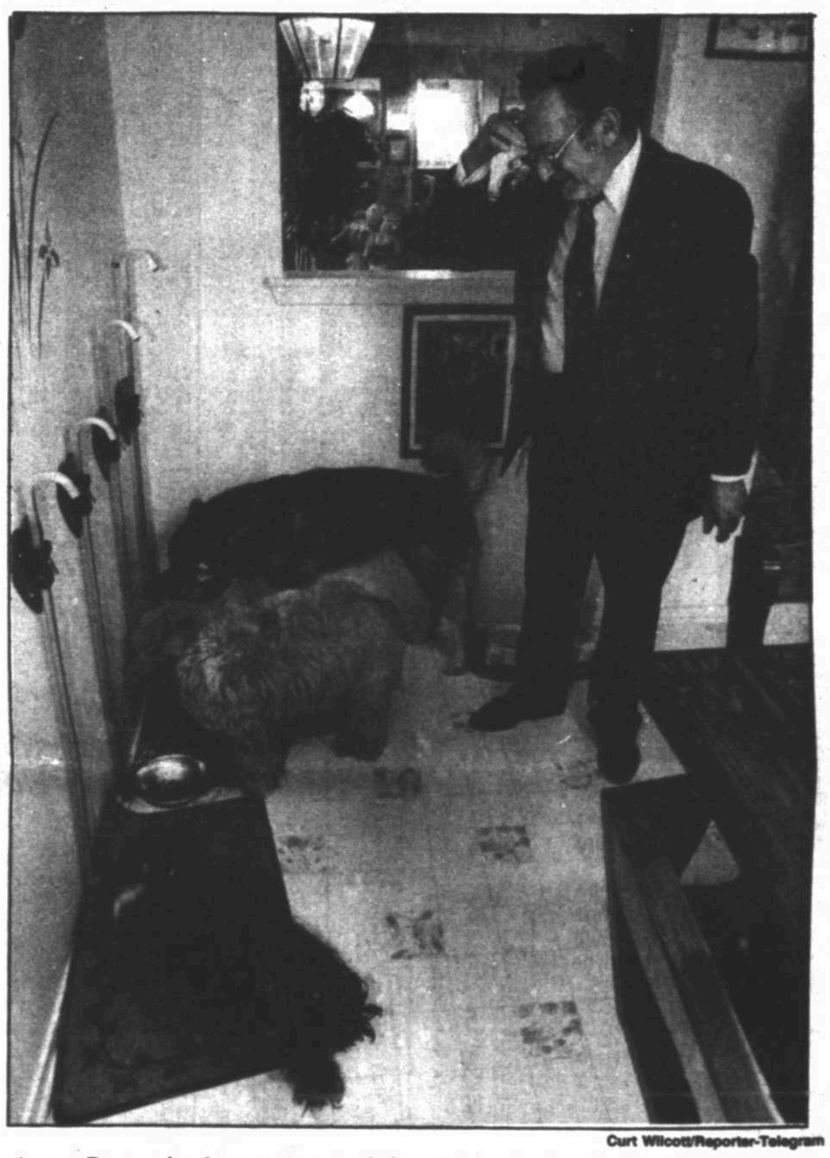

Faultless purchased the license for five years, with an option for further extensions.

"I got into this with the hopes of putting Midland people to work" he said. "But, in hindsight, when I was approached by Faultless Starch, they said they'd rather produce the item at their plant and I had no alternative but to take their offer."

He praised officials at Midland American Bank and the Midland Economic Development Corp. for helping him obtain financing to get manufacturing of the feeder off the ground, and his accountant, Keith Binam, for his assistance.

Bergman started the enterprise in 1989, received a patent in 1991 and opened a factory earlier this year. He sold the license to Faultless in October.

Survey: Growth to slow slightly next 12 months

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy now is expanding at the fastest pace in a year, but growth will taper off slightly during the next 12 months, according to a survey of top economists.

Blue Chip Economic Indicators, a Sedona, Ariz., newsletter, said the consensus forecast of 52 economists surveyed earlier this month calls for an annualized 3.3 percent growth during the three months ending Dec. 31.

That would be the fastest since the gross domestic product increased at a 5.7 percent rate in the final three months of 1992. The GDP is the total output of goods and services within the United States.

But the consensus projects the economy will tail off during 1994, growing at annualized rates of 2.8 percent in the first quarter, 2.7 percent in the second and third and 2.6 percent in the fourth.

Blue Chip editor Robert J. Eggert Sr. said the economists believed several factors would cause the slowdown. They included continued business restructuring and downsizing, more defense cuts, slow income growth and anemic overseas economies that will limit U.S. exports.

On the other hand, the respondents predicted a 7.5 percent increase in business investment in plants and equipment and continued strength in the housing sector, he added.

The forecast somewhat resembles the quarterly pattern during the past year.

After expanding at rates of 3.4 percent and 5.7 percent during the third and fourth quarters of 1992, the economy grew just 0.8 percent during the next three months. It then edged up at only a 1.9 percent rate from April through July.

The Blue Chip economists are predicting 2.8 percent growth both this year and next, up from their 2.7 percent projection in October. The Clinton administration has projected 2.4 percent growth this year and 3 percent in 1994.

It was the third month in a row the economists had raised their 1993 forecast and their second straight increase for 1994.

"Several of the 35 economists who raised this year's forecast said they were influenced by the 'oomph' the economy exhibited in the third quarter when (inflation-adjusted) GDP grew at an annualized rate of 2.8 percent," Eggert said.

RJR Nabisco to raise prices 4 cents a pack on most brands

(NYT) In a move that reflects a change in strategy under its new chairman and chief executive, Charles M. Harper, RJR Nabisco Holdings Co. told its cigarette distributors Monday night that the company was raising prices for most brands, including Camel and Winston, by 4 cents a pack, a cost virtually certain to be passed on to consumers.

The move may signal an eventual end to the cigarette price war started earlier this year by Philip Morris Cos., the industry leader, but neither Philip Morris nor any other cigarette maker would comment on whether it would follow the RJR move.

Peggy Carter, a RJR spokeswoman, confirmed Tuesday that wholesalers were informed that the price of all RJR brands except for Century would increase by $2 per 1,000 cigarettes, or 40 cents for a carton of 10 packs of 20 cigarettes. Century cigarettes, which are sold in packs of 25, would go up by $1.56 per 1,000, or 39 cents a carton.

Ms. Carter said the move was undertaken for "the best interest of the company" and did not elaborate.

In trading on the New York Stock Exchange, RJR stock closed Tuesday at $6.75 a share, up 37.5 cents. RJR was the second-most active stock on the Big Board on Tuesday, with nearly 6 million shares changing hands. Philip Morris was the fourth-most active stock, closing up $1, to $55.75 a share.

The price increase suggests that RJR is taking dead aim at improving profits and the price of RJR Nabisco stock.

Manager Jerry Anderson said the store, a little over 10,000 square feet, includes a pharmacy with a drive-through window. Pharmacy manager is David Draper.

The new store carries 16,000 items ranging from medications to Hallmark greeting cards, cameras and film to soft drinks, dairy products, frozen foods and snacks. There is also a waiting room near the pharmacy and a "cosmetics bar," a freestanding rectangle of lighted display cases carrying fine fragrances, cosmetics and expert assistance.

Store hours are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. seven days a week. Pharmacy hours are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

The store has relocated from Midland Park Mall; while no date has been set for closing the mall store, it is expected to remain open through the rest of the year.

Throw out that resume, get yourself a new job

By Kathleen Sullivan
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Resumes are useless: They've been supplanted by brilliant promotional letters. Interviewers are not sadists in business suits: They're human beings. Aggressive networking doesn't work: Subtlety and understatement does.

Those are some of the insights in "Resumes Don't Get Jobs: The Realities and Myths of Job Hunting," a new book for people looking for work.

Author Bob Weinstein says his goal is to debunk myths — he dispenses with 14 in the book — and replace them with tips and strategies geared toward today's job-hunting market. The book, published by McGraw-Hill Inc., costs $10.95.

Weinstein's book has a ready-made audience, with the nation's unemployment rate at nearly 7 percent.

Paul Shanahan, manager of Stacey's Bookstore in San Francisco, said the career section is very busy these days.

"Usually, people buy two or three books: one on how to conduct an interview; another on how to write a cover letter and another on how to write a resume," Shanahan said.

Weinstein, the author of eight books on careers, offers somewhat non-traditional advice. In the prologue to the 250-page book, he promises a "down-and-dirty-job-hunting guide," with lots of "hard information and solid advice" but no hand-holding.

Forget resumes, he says. "Like McDonald's hamburgers, Oreo cookies and Army uniforms, resumes are standardized," he says. "Take 200 people applying for the same job and remove the name, address and phone number from each resume. You'll have 200 resumes that could have been written by the same person. That tells you something."

Weinstein says job-hunters should write a brilliant promotional letter instead. He provides a step-by-step guide to producing just such a letter, from the "grabber" opening line, to the assertive close that tells the employer precisely when you'll be following up to discuss the job opening.

Weinstein also offers advice on handling a job interview — an event that fills many job hunters with dread. He recommends thinking of the interview as a three-act play. Act One: Small Talk. Act Two: The Interrogation. Act Three: Your Turn. Like any good actor preparing for a role, preparation is key, he says.

Firm to mesh its PC making in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH (NYT) — AST Research Inc. of Irvine, Calif., said Tuesday that it will consolidate its manufacturing of U.S.-made desktop computers in Fort Worth. The move will add 350 new jobs to the company's Texas work force next year.

AST said that, overall, the expanded desktop operations will add 500 local jobs. But the company said it also plans to eliminate the jobs of 150 Fort Worth-area workers at a 98,000-square-foot facility in the city. Those employees make parts and accessories for computers.

AST, which purchased Tandy Corp.'s computer manufacturing operations in July, also said it will shift about 100 white-collar workers who work in Westlake's Solana complex to an existing company facility in Fort Worth. The move of the product support employees and technicians is expected to take place after Jan. 1.

The company also said it will move marketing operations from its Solana office to its California headquarters. Between 10 and 20 AST employees in Westlake will lose their jobs, said Howard Elias, vice president of worldwide marketing for AST.

Bookstore opens 1st Texas location

DALLAS (AP) — New York-based Barnes & Noble has opened its first Texas bookstore in Dallas.

The bookstore will offer a wide-ranging selection of books in excess of 150,000 volumes and about 1,000 magazines and newspapers from across the country and around the world.

The 25,000-square-foot store also will feature its own cafe and music section.

Barnes & Noble Inc. owns B. Dalton Bookseller Inc., Barnes & Noble Bookstores, Bookstop, Doubleday Book Shops, Scribner's Bookstores, MBS Textbook Exchange, Software Etc. and Marboro Books Corp.

PET: Inventor inks tasty deal

(From 5C)

His involvement with Faultless began a year ago when he was trying to get his pet feeder skinwrapped and came across a Faultless-made garden tool with packaging he liked.

He contacted the plant manager, who said he would wrap one feeder for him.

"Time passed, and he called me and asked me to send down six to show his marketing people," Bergen recalled. "I did, and a month later he called back and said they would like to take it over."

The 68-year-old retired dental technician devised the feeder in 1988 after his late wife, Lisa, hurt her back and was having trouble feeding the couples dogs and cats.

Not only does the design make it easier for the elderly or disabled to care for a pet, but it is also easier for a pet with a bad back or neck to eat or for taller pets. And keeping the bowl off the ground keeps it from attracting insects.

Now that he has sold the license to the Futuristic Dog or Cat Feeder, Bergen plans to devote his time to some other devices he is developing. And he plans to offer his services — free of charge — to other local would-be inventors, helping them follow the proper procedures "in making their bright ideas come to life" and save them a lot of time and money in the attempt.

"The only requirement necessary is a strong desire to succeed and the ability to overcome the many barriers along the way."

His experience with the pet feeder has taught him that "the sense of achievement is greater than a dollar bill," he said. "I feel like an achiever now, and this you can't buy."

Gonzalez' panel to investigate Arkansas S&L

WASHINGTON (NYT) — House Banking Committee chairman Henry B. Gonzalez said Tuesday that his panel would investigate the failure of an Arkansas savings and loan owned by James McDougal, a former business partner and political patron of President Clinton.

The announcement, along with a development in a separate criminal investigation of the savings and loan, makes it more likely that the relationship between Clinton and the owner of the S&L will be under review well into next year.

Responding to a request Tuesday by Republicans on the panel for hearings into the management of the S&L, Gonzalez said he would designate staff members to collect information about the thrift, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan.

Madison is already the subject of a criminal investigation by the Justice Department which Tuesday announced a change of prosecutors in the case. The U.S. attorney in Little Rock, Paula Casey, said she and her staff had stepped aside because of concerns about their impartiality. Ms. Casey worked as a volunteer on six of Clinton's campaigns for governor in Arkansas.

The case will be supervised by Donald B. Mackay, a senior Justice Department trial lawyer in Washington.

McDougal was one of Clinton's closest associates in Arkansas, and was, at various times, his business partner, political fund-raiser, family banker and senior aide.

McDougal has denied any wrongdoing, blaming regulators and prosecutors for his problems. The president is neither the subject nor a target of the investigation, which is still in its early stages. But Clinton did benefit both personally and politically from the complicated finances of Madison.

Under McDougal, Madison, a state-chartered savings and loan, started as a tiny institution in a small Arkansas town, then grew rapidly, setting up an office near the governor's residence in Little Rock.

Even after it was criticized by federal examiners, Madison continued to make numerous questionable loans, many of them involving prominent figures in Arkansas Democratic politics, according to court and banking records. Some of those loans are the subject of the criminal investigation, according to federal officials and court records.

The Republican caucus of the banking committee wrote to Gonzalez asking him to seek testimony from federal and state regulators, Madison officials and members of the Rose law firm in Little Rock.

In 1985, Hillary Rodham Clinton, then a partner in the Rose firm, and other of the firm's lawyers represented Madison in some matters involving Arkansas regulators.

The Republican letter suggested several lines of inquiry, including possible lending abuses and "the timeliness of the actions of state and federal regulators."

McDougal was removed from Madison's affairs in 1986 by federal and state regulators. In 1989 the government took over the thrift. It has been estimated that Madison's losses will cost taxpayers $47.7 million.

Doctors, nurses eat junk food at heart forum

By Michael A. Giarrusso
Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — Some of the 30,000 doctors, nurses and researchers at the American Heart Association's annual meeting talk healthy diets out of one side of their mouth, and put burgers and fries in the other.

At lunch Tuesday, they clogged their arteries with meals high in cholesterol, fat and sodium, all of which contribute to heart disease.

"It was convenient and quick," Dr. Paul Colavita said as he gulped down a Big Bacon Classic burger and Biggie Fries at a Wendy's near the convention site — the Georgia World Congress Center.

Before lunch, some health-care workers enjoyed cigarettes outside the smoke-free building, while others sipped cocktails from a bar set up outside the convention hall (although a bartender said business was slower than usual). Colavita, a cardiologist from Charlotte, N.C., said fatty meals are OK every now and then because he monitors his diet.

But doesn't it set a bad example for doctors to be seen eating such fatty meals?

"Not me, because I took my name tag off," Colavita said.

Tacos, hamburgers and roast beef sandwiches were favorites for some of the scientists.

Fast-food is just as popular among those at the heart association meeting as it is with people at other conventions, said Jane Jaeger, director of sales and marketing for MGR food services, the convention hall caterer.

MGR set up several "heart-healthy" buffets of fruits, vegetables and fish for the meeting, but many doctors chose greasier fare.

Dr. Howard Gutgesell of Charlottesville, Va., knows fast food is a poor choice but just can't help himself.

"Food with a lot of fat in it just plain tastes good," Gutgesell said as he slurped his Wendy's Frosty, a chocolate ice-cream desert with 400 calories, 260 milligrams of sodium and 13 grams of fat, including 7 grams of saturated fat.

Gutgesell, a pediatric cardiologist, also had a taco salad, but skipped the sour cream topping.

"I think the key is moderation," he said. His entree contained 580 calories, 1,060 milligrams of sodium and 30 grams fat, including 11 grams of saturated fat.

Federal guidelines recommend that a daily diet of 2,000 calories contain not more than 65 grams of fat, including 20 grams of saturated fat, and 2,400 to 3,000 milligrams of sodium.

William Golden, manager of the Wendy's at CNN Center, said the most popular items during the meeting have been double cheeseburgers, grilled chicken sandwiches and large fries.

Senate passes measures on gangs, guns

WASHINGTON (NYT) — After senators told grim tales of gang violence in their states, they passed two measures Tuesday expanding federal authority to prosecute crimes committed by gang members and making it a federal crime to sell a pistol to a minor.

Senate passage of the two measures by overwhelming margins was another indication that the overall $22.3 billion crime package Senate leaders hope to pass today will include new federal initiatives on youth violence.

"There is a mood here," said Sen. Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., "that if someone came to the floor and said we should barb wire the ankles of anyone who jaywalks, I think it would pass."

Gun control measures are normally highly contentious, so the 99 to 1 vote to restrict the possession of handguns by juveniles was a remarkable affirmation of the growing fears that youth violence is out of control.

Congress has not enacted a significant gun control bill since the assassinations of Martin Luther King and Sen. Robert Kennedy of New York in 1968.

"We are witnessing a tragedy of epidemic proportions," said Sen. Herb Kohl, D-Wis. "A 15-year-old Madison, Wis., girl shooting her teen-age boyfriend, the drive-by shooting of a 12-year-old Milwaukee boy, a 14-year-old Milwaukee boy shooting an elderly woman who was walking her dog, an Anacostia student shooting his 13-year-old classmate in the locker room of their junior high, a 4-year-old D.C. girl killed in the crossfire of a brutal gang shootout."

Lawmakers have also brought personal experiences to the debate, as Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., did Thursday. "I have had my car stolen three times," he said. "I have had my house broke into. The fear affects all the conduct that we care about when you are talking about these words: Domestic tranquillity. And that fear, candidly, leads to more evil."

House leaders said they expected the handgun bill to pass the House as well, even though their chamber has killed other handgun and assault-rifle controls passed by the Senate in recent years.

Denny beating defendant goes free with probation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man charged with trying to kill Reginald Denny at the start of last year's riot pleaded guilty Tuesday to three lesser charges and was freed under terms of a plea agreement.

Antoine Miller pleaded guilty to grand theft from Denny and receiving stolen property, the purse of riot victim Alicia Maldonado. Both counts are misdemeanors. He also pleaded guilty to a felony assault count on victim Marisa Bejar. Fourteen other counts against him were dismissed.

Miller, 21, spent 17 months in jail until he was recently freed on bail. Among the counts he had been charged with were attempted murder and robbery of Denny and assault with a deadly weapon on other victims of the 1992 riot.

Superior Court Judge Cecil Mills called the plea agreement "fair and just" and said he would place Miller on 27 months probation at a Dec. 1 sentencing hearing. In the meantime, he allowed Miller to remain free on his own recognizance rather than bail.

Miller was allegedly videotaped opening a door to Denny's rig while others pulled the trucker from the cab and began pummeling him. He also was allegedly seen going through Denny's pockets afterward.

Miller's case had been severed from that of defendants Henry Watson and Damian Williams, who were seen as more active participants in the assaults on motorists after the acquittals of four white policemen on most state charges in the 1991 videotaped beating of black motorist Rodney King.

Like the police officers' trial, the Denny case carried racial overtones. Denny is white and his assailants are black.

Watson and Williams were convicted last month of assaulting Denny. But a jury acquitted them of the most serious charges, including attempted murder, which carries a life sentence.

Williams, 20, was convicted of felony mayhem and four misdemeanors. He is jailed on $580,000 bail and faces up to 10 years in prison.

Watson, 29, was convicted of misdemeanor assault on Denny. On Nov. 2, he pleaded guilty to a single assault count against truck driver Larry Tarvin that the jury was unable to resolve.

Bomb manuals draw attention at terror trial

NEW YORK (NYT) — Six large-format books with blue-green covers containing writing in both Arabic and English and, most importantly, diagrams on bomb-making, were at the center of testimony in the World Trade Center trial Tuesday.

The books, along with false passports and identification cards, were introduced by prosecutors as they continued to build their case against Ahmad Ajaj, one of the four defendants in the case. Ajaj is accused of having brought the bomb-making manuals to Kennedy International Airport when he arrived on a flight from Pakistan on Sept. 1, 1992. He was arrested on passport violations and has been in federal prison ever since.

It is the prosecutor's contention that the materials Ajaj brought into the country were used by the other three defendants in the case to make the bomb that exploded in the World Trade Center on Feb. 26, killing six people and injuring more than 1,000.

"There were multiple pieces of ID," said Mark Cozin, the immigration inspector who looked at Ajaj's baggage at the airport. "There were several passports from different countries, lots of books, photo IDs, videotapes, maps, pictures of weapons assembled and disassembled, bombs, rocket launchers — almost a military manual."

TxDOT SEEKS TO CONTRACT SURVEY WORK

The Texas Department of Transportation will accept proposals for surveying contracts with one or two surveying firms which can perform work for the Odessa District's four area offices.

The area offices, and counties served, are as follow:
Fort Stockton - Pecos and Terrell
Midland - Midland, Martin and Upton
Odessa - Ector, Andrews and Crane
Pecos - Reeves, Loving, Ward and Winkler

The contract period will be for two years, with a tentative starting date of March 1994.

General types of surveys performed include roadway, bridge, topography, centerline, and right-of-way.

Requests for proposals (RFP) will be sent only to those firms that respond in writing by November 19, 1993 to:

Texas Department of Transportation
ATTN: Jamshid Jahangiri, District Design Engineer
3901 East Highway 80
Odessa, TX 79761

A more detailed description of the proposed surveying work for each project will be provided in the RFP.

Contracts for surveying services will be awarded using the competitive negotiation process. A copy of the blank contract will be attached to the RFP for the purpose of information.

For more information, please call Jamshid Jahangiri at (915) 333-9261.

DRUG FREE YOUTH D-FY-IT IN TEXAS

D-FY-IT (Drug Free Youth in Texas) is a voluntary drug testing program that rewards students for being "drug free". For students to join the program they must voluntarily agree to a urinalysis test, and then subject themselves to retesting whenever their names are randomly selected. The urinalysis detects amphetamines, cocaine and marijuana. All testing is confidential, and test results are not reported to the police. A student who has a positive drug test is given confidential counseling by certified counselors who work with the program. This is done to keep that student in the program through counseling and further drug testing. Parents are Not notified when a student tests positive.

Once a student tests "clean", he/she receives a D-FY-IT identification card that entitles them to discounts from local businesses and admission to various D-FY-IT sponsored events such as dances and concerts. At this time, over 60 businesses in Midland are giving discounts to D-FY-IT members. The cards can also be used in surrounding towns that have the D-FY-IT program.

Individuals within D-FY-IT who will gladly discuss the program and answer your questions are:

Joel Young (Texas DPS 697-2211)
Dale Seago (Midland PD 699-1816)
Dan Walkenshaw (Midland PD 685-7150)
Steve Skaggs (Sheriff's Dept. 688-1228)
Sherry Tomlinson (D-FY-IT board 683-9489)
Joan Johnson (D-FY-IT board 688-3184)
Glen Woods (MISD 689-1000)

MEMBERSHIP APPLICATION

The testing procedure the group will use is a simple urinalysis test. The student will be notified to come to a designated place, the primary place of collecting, and give a urine sample. To keep the student's identity confidential, his/her School I.D. number will be placed on the sample bottle. The drug test will be performed by West Texas Pathology Lab, Allied Lab, or Harrison Lab. One test will be made on the sample. This test will detect marijuana, amphetamines, cocaine, and PCP. Should the test come back positive, a second test will be performed to confirm the first test.

In the event a student's sample is positive, the designated chapter representative and the student will be notified privately of the test results. The student will be advised to wait a predetermined amount of time, then return for another sample to be tested. The primary purpose of this program is to rid students of drug use. Testing of drugs or narcotics in the student's system is in no way an investigative tool of a law enforcement agency. Positive results will not result in criminal prosecution. It is the ultimate goal of D-FY-IT to abolish drug abuse instead of prosecuting. Students testing positive will be confidentially contacted and offered enrollment in a treatment/rehabilitation plan, in order to be re-issued a D-FY-IT discount card.

Students will be periodically retested to maintain the integrity of the program. Retesting will be on a random basis and will not be announced in advance.

EVERYONE has aches and pains and go through depressions. God has shown us in his scriptures, "I have given you all foods for life". The body is designed to live one hundred and fifty years. As we mature we are inclined to abuse our bodies, with bad habits and eating the wrong foods, which destroy the cells. A good diet and natural supplement of herbs will replace these cells and let the body heal itself. Nature's Sunshine has blended the best herbs to be found in the world. These herbs will help you feel better, and give you a longer life. For more information CALL 563-0306.
