Bush questions 'sensitivity'

ATLANTA (AP) — Republican nominee-to-be George Bush said today that Democrat Michael Dukakis could have shown "a little more in terms of sensitivity" toward Jesse Jackson. He commented before going to the United Nations to defend U.S. actions in the downing of an Iranian airliner.

Dukakis, ready to accept the presidential nomination here next week, stressed that he wants Jackson to "play an important role" in the Democratic campaign this fall. But Jackson, preparing to embark on a bus caravan to Atlanta, was still frosty toward Dukakis.

Bush, in remarks prepared for delivery to the U.N. Security Council, blamed the Iranian government for allowing the airliner to fly over the gulf as its gunboats and the USS Vincennes were fighting, calling such a decision "irresponsible."

"One thing is clear," he said, "the USS Vincennes acted in self-defense" in firing two missiles at the jetliner, which U.S. officials say was mistaken for an Iranian F-14 fighter closing in on the cruiser.

Two new national polls gave sharply conflicting views of where the race for the White House stands before the Democratic convention opens — and before the selection of Bentsen was announced.

The Los Angeles Times survey gave Dukakis an 11-point lead, 49 percent to 38 percent, over Bush in 1,763 telephone interviews with registered voters conducted July 5-10. Several other national polls have given Dukakis a lead of about 10 points.

But a USA Today-CNN poll put the two contenders in a virtual tie. That survey of 1,264 registered voters July 6-10 gave Bush 47 percent to Dukakis's 44 percent. Both surveys have sampling error margins of about three percentage points, meaning the USA Today-CNN results are a tie.

Dukakis, the governor of Massachusetts, was to spend the day at the Statehouse in Boston, facing a state budget crisis.

Civil rights leader Jackson was fuming over Dukakis' failure to tell him of his choice of Bentsen Tuesday before reporters asked Jackson for his reaction.

"After yesterday, many people have a sense of indignation and a sense of insult," Jackson said at a Chicago news conference Wednesday.

Some Jackson supporters were more emphatic.

Atlanta City councilman Hosea Williams, a nationally known civil rights activist, suggested the failure to treat Jackson better had racist overtones. Rep. Edolphus Towns, D-N.Y., said he was "extremely disappointed" after meeting with Dukakis and Jackson. "I don't feel comfortable (with the ticket) at this time," Towns said.

At a Capitol Hill news conference, Dukakis said he had apologized to Jackson when he did reach him Tuesday morning.

Hightower feels Dukakis choice lacked 'finesse'

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

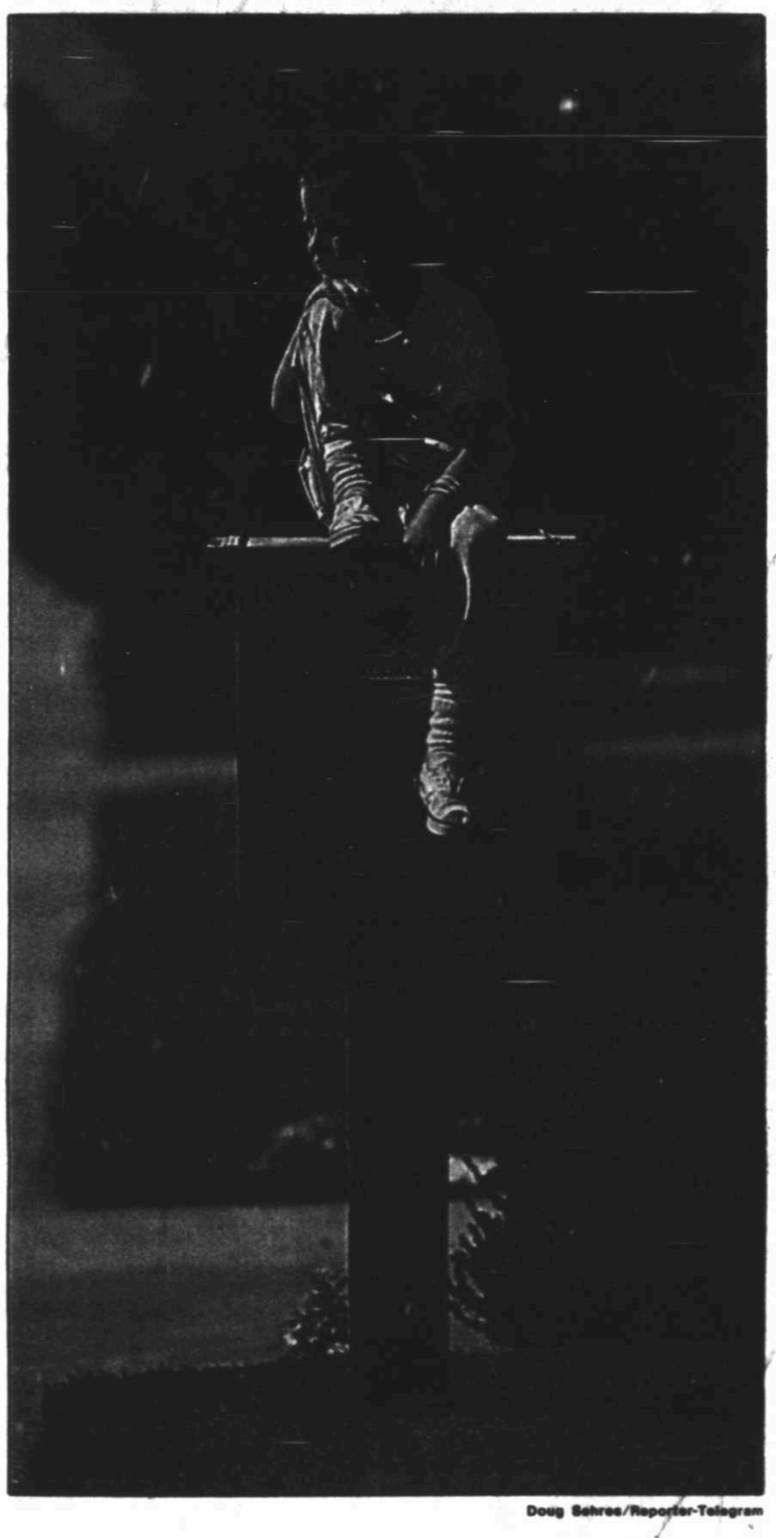

AUSTIN — Michael Dukakis must bring the Rev. Jesse Jackson's forces into the presidential campaign quickly because they feel "stiffed" over Tuesday's selection of Lloyd Bentsen to balance the Democratic ticket, a key Jackson advisor warned Wednesday.

"It is not a matter of him being overlooked for the second spot, it is a matter of the handling of the consideration of Jackson, which could have been done with a good bit more finesse and respect for Rev. Jackson," said Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, a Texas delegate for Jackson to next week's Democratic National Convention.

Hightower said Dukakis "boo-booed" by not notifying Jackson ahead of time that he was picking Bentsen, the senior U.S. senator from Texas, as his running mate.

U.S. District Judge Hubert I. Teitelbaum interrupted a trial to criticize an attorney's use of "Ms." with her maiden name.

Is judge entitled to judge her title?

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A lawyer says she was "in shock" after a federal judge interrupted a race discrimination trial to scold her for using "Ms." and her maiden name and found her colleague in contempt for protesting.

"You'll do what I tell you to do or you'll be up with your colleague there in jail," Senior U.S. District Judge Hubert I. Teitelbaum told attorney Barbara Wolvovitz, whose husband is University of Pittsburgh law professor Jules Lobel.

"From here on, in this courtroom you will use Mrs. Lobel. That's your name," Teitelbaum said Friday.

When her co-counsel, Jon Pushinsky, protested, Teitelbaum found him in contempt of court for "officious intermeddling" and gave him a suspended sentence of 30 days in jail.

Ms. Wolvovitz refused to be addressed as Mrs. Lobel, and when she asked for a mistrial Monday, Teitelbaum retorted, "What if I call you sweetie?"

He then declared he would refer to her only as "counselor."

"I ordinarily do not allow anyone to use that 'Ms.' in this courtroom," he said.

During a disjointed dialogue Friday that covered about 20 pages of court transcript, Teitelbaum told Ms. Wolvovitz that Mrs. Lobel is her legal name "under the laws of the state of Pennsylvania."

"And that's what I want you to be, to call yourself from here on in this courtroom," he said. "That's an intolerable kind of thing."

The judge claimed a married woman must petition Common Pleas Court for permission to use her maiden name, but the Pennsylvania Family Law Practice and Procedure Handbook said no legal proceedings are required.

Teitelbaum, presiding over a race discrimination suit against PPG Industries Inc., also asked each of the six female jurors Friday if she used her husband's name or maiden name. All used their husbands' names.

The trial began June 23, but the issue of "Ms." in Teitelbaum's court never surfaced before Friday.

The case went to the jury Wednesday. Ms. Wolvovitz said she would not decide whether to file a complaint against the judge until after the jury delivers its verdict.

Teitelbaum, 73, a former U.S. attorney appointed to the federal bench by President Nixon in 1970, declined to comment Wednesday to The Associated Press.

According to the American Bar Association, Ms. Wolvovitz could file a complaint with the 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia, which could decide to publicly or privately admonish the judge, said Ernest Zavodnyk, with the Chicago-based judicial administration division.

Ms. Wolvovitz, 36, said she was "in shock for two days."

"I've practiced for 10 years. I've gotten into arguments with judges but never over something like this. I can't quite understand what happened," said Ms. Wolvovitz, who had never argued a case before Teitelbaum. "After it was over and the jury left, I had tears in my eyes."

"We didn't know what to do. She started crying. I started crying," said Ms. Wolvovitz's client, Charles Gavin.

Bush defends U.S. action against jet

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Vice President George Bush today called the accidental U.S. destruction of an Iranian airliner carrying 290 people a "terrible human tragedy" but told the U.N. Security Council that Iran shares in the responsibility.

Presenting the U.S. case in the Security Council's debate on the downing of Iran Air flight 655, Bush defended the U.S. naval presence in the Persian Gulf as "our legal right." Iran, which asked for a council condemnation of the U.S. action, was represented by its foreign minister, Ali-Akbar Velayati.

Bush said that Iran "allowed a civilian aircraft loaded with passengers to proceed on a path over a warship engaged in battle. That was irresponsible and a tragic error."

The vice president said he would not "dignify with a response the charge that we deliberately destroyed Iran Air 655."

And he said that Velayati "knows better."

Bush called the Persian Gulf a "region of vital importance to the United States and the economy of the world." He said the U.S. presence in the gulf was intended to help ensure the flow of oil and protect neutral commerce. "This is our legal right," he said.

Bush accused Iran of "reckless behavior toward neutral ships engaged in lawful commerce."

County hoping for new helicopter

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The Midland County Sheriff's Department is hoping for a replacement for an airborne friend that was helping cut burglaries in rural Midland.

After the department's donated helicopter, a 1976 Hughes 300C valued at $85,000, was wrecked during a cattle round-up in May, the rate of residential burglaries began to rise after it had fallen the first quarter of the year, according to Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter.

"It has affected the way we do some of our work," Painter said.

Painter said after the helicopter — which was covered by liability but not collision insurance — was wrecked, he contacted the office of Texas U.S. Senator Phil Gramm to see if they could help out.

"We asked them if there was any grant or anything we could apply for to get another helicopter," the sheriff said, since there were no county funds available to buy a replacement.

When Gramm's office called back, it was good news. They had located some military helicopters that had been used for pilot training and were scheduled to be replaced, Painter said.

"We were told law enforcement would get them first, and then we were told that we were the first on the list," he said.

Officials from the General Services Administration contacted the sheriff, and he said as soon as the paperwork is completed, he and his officers, including pilot Jerry Lee, will be invited to inspect the available choppers.

"We would like to try and find one which is airworthy, with low time on the components," Painter said. "That's the main thing."

Midland Police Chief Richard Czech said through a spokesman he is not interested in obtaining a helicopter for his department — even if it is free.

"There is a lot of maintenance, it would be very expensive to keep up," Cpl. Jim White said. "Then you have to worry about insurance, and hiring a pilot.

Odessan charged with bank fraud

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

A real estate and insurance firm owner and former director of Odessa Savings Association was arraigned in Midland federal court today following his arrest on bank fraud charges brought in a 25-count sealed indictment.

Louis Rochester, partner of the Murphy & Rochester firm, was released on his own recognizance by U.S. District Magistrate Darrell Smith. He had turned himself in to U.S. marshals earlier today.

In the indictment, Rochester is charged with racketeering, mail fraud, wire fraud, misapplication of funds, making false entries, fraudulent participation in loans, and concealment of material facts from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Rochester, who served on the Odessa Savings Association board of directors, devised a scheme to defraud the savings and loan, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board (FHLBB) and the Texas Savings and Loan Department out of millions of dollars in money and credit, according to the indictment.

As the second largest stockholder, Rochester and Odessa Savings approached the FHLBB in 1973 about the possibility of the two entering a joint venture to develop University Gardens — an apartment complex, according to the indictment.

Rochester, who held 45 percent ownership in the venture, according to the indictment, borrowed, along with Odessa Savings and Southwestern Development Corp., $4 million from the savings and loan, the indictment said.

17-year-old Midlander found fatally shot

From Staff Reports

Police have classified as accidental Wednesday afternoon's fatal shooting of a 17-year-old Midland youth.

Eric Cleere died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound about 4 p.m., police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said today. "At this time, we believe it was an accidental shooting," he said.

Cleere was shot once in the face with a 12-gauge shotgun, according to a report of the incident. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

He was found by police in a room at 4703 Pleasant Drive, but White said investigators were not sure if he lived there. According to school records, Cleere would have been a senior this fall at Lee High School.

No other information about the shooting was released by police.

Cleere was the son of Beldon Ray Cleere of Midland.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Partly cloudy skies forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Partly cloudy skies are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the lower 70s and winds will be out of the southeast at 5-15 mph.

Partly cloudy skies and a less than 20 percent chance of afternoon thundershowers are expected for Friday. The high will be in the upper 90s and winds will be southerly 10-20 mph.

Wednesday's high of 94 was 13 degrees cooler than the record high of 107 set for that date in 1933. The overnight low of 66 was 16 degrees warmer than the record low of 50 set for this date in 1936.

STATE

More typical summer-like weather returned to Texas today and forecasters said it was expected to last several days.

A high pressure system over the central U.S. was expected to remain for several days, forecasters said.

Forecasts called for partly cloudy skies and hot temperatures through Friday.

Lows tonight will be in the 70s except in extreme South Texas where readings will be in the 80s.

Highs Friday will be in the 90s over most of West Texas except to near 105 in the Big Bend area, in the mid 90s to near 102 in North Texas and in the 90s in South Texas except near 100 in the inland areas to near 105 on the Rio Grande plains.

A few showers were reported offshore in the Gulf of Mexico near the middle Texas coast early today and a few clouds were reported over extreme West Texa and some low cloudiness was observed in the Hill Country and Brazos Valley, but the rest of the state had clear to partly cloudy skies.

Early morning temperatures were in the 70s except in South Texas and North Central Texas where they were in the 80s. Extremes ranged from 71 at Midland to 83 at Palacios.

NATION

A high-pressure system spread a steamy blanket over much of the nation today, boosting temperatures in the southern and central Plains and the middle Mississippi Valley.

Temperatures were already in the 80s this morning, and highs from the upper 90s to over 100 degrees were forecast for much of America west of the Mississippi.

The hot, humid weather was expected to linger through Friday because of the high-pressure system extending across most of the western and central sections of the nation.

Cooler weather in the 50s and 60s prevailed only across the northern tier. Showers and thunderstorms were scattered along a cold front curving from upper Michigan into southern Nebraska.

Bentsen's NAACP welcome not warm

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who got the second spot on the Democratic ticket that Jesse Jackson coveted, endured a frosty reception from the NAACP convention Wednesday to tell the civil rights activists that "indifference is simply not an option in 1988."

Some delegates, still irate that Michael Dukakis did not choose Jackson as his running mate, booed after Dukakis personally introduced Bentsen to the throng of 2,000.

Benjamin L. Hooks, the longtime executive director of the civil rights organization, intervened and asked the crowd for a warmer reception for the Texas senator.

"You've got a hard act today, so do your best," Hooks advied Bentsen. "This is a great audience, this is a great crowd, but many of our delegates wanted to see Jesse in this position." The crowd cheered.

"I empathize with you.... I've been preaching when they wanted somebody else to preach. One said, 'We ain't going to say Amen one time.' They didn't," said Hooks, turning the jeers to laughter.

"I lived. But I didn't go back," Hooks said. "So we want to give Mr. Bentsen the kind of welcome that he will come back."

Bentsen said, "For all who are commited to justice and equality, indifference is simply not an option in 1988."

"If you care about the make-up of the Civil Rights Commission ... or the composition of the Supreme Court or ther leadership of the Justice Department, or about equality and progress in jobs and schools, I think you have to vote for Michael Dukakis," said Bentsen.

"It's important not just for the NAACP, not just for black Americans, but for all who care about freedom and opportunity, for all who believe that government can be a force for fairness, for all who believe in the politics of inclusion," he said.

"Mike Dukakis and I are committed to making a difference for America, and a difference that's important to you, and we need your help," said Bentsen, who skipped a meeting of his Senate Finance Committee to make the joint appearance with Dukakis.

Bentsen received polite applause at the end.

There were no boos for Dukakis, but a few delegates groaned when the Massachusetts governor spoke of "the party that has opened up the doors of opportunity to a couple of guys named Dukakis and Jackson."

The convention heard a proud and defiant Jackson declare Tuesday night, "I may not be on the ticket, but I'm qualified! Qualified!" Many were not mollified after hearing from Dukakis and his choice for vice president.

James Hatch, a NAACP delegate from Washington, D.C., said, "It was a good speech — but they've got to hear something else."

An angry Vera Baugh of Pasadena, Calif., holding two souvenir "Win Jesse Win" mugs, said of Dukakis, "I resented being talked to by the runt of the Democratic political litter who did not have the courtesy to consult Jackson, to let him know prior to the time the public knew.

"To me that was a slap in my face and I am going to write in Jesse's name. I will not vote for Dukakis," she said.

Before the speech, Beulah C. Wright of Main Line, Pa., said Dukakis had been "very rude" to Jackson. Asked if she would vote for the Dukakis-Bentsen ticket, she replied, "I'm going to have to think about that. When you put him against Bush, I probably will."

Historic campsite combed to make way for aquarium

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A pre-Civil War camp site has historians busy digging for artifacts at the site of the future Texas State Aquarium on Corpus Christi Beach.

Musket balls, cannon balls and old bottles may be buried at the site where Gen. Zachary Taylor once oversaw a military camp in 1845-46, officials said.

The city hired as a consultant archaeologist James E. Warren, after a review of the aquarium's site showed it is located where 4,000 U.S. troops were stationed under Taylor.

"They (the commission) commented that this area is historically important and should at least have the opportunity to be looked at," said Warren, who is based in George West.

The target date for opening the aquarium is summer of 1990. Construction of the aquarium's main exhibit building is expected to take 18 months and another six months is needed to stock the facility before the grand opening.

State legislation designating the project as the Texas State Aquarium requires the facility to be completed by 1991 or lose the state designation.

The Texas Antiquities Code stipulates that the Texas Antiquities Commission may comment on possible historical disturbance of any building project that uses public funds.

Claude V. D'Unger of the Nueces County Historical Commission said a few of the workers on the aquarium project have found some old bottles, but neither he nor Warren had seen them.

Newborn abandoned on airplane

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A baby found abandoned in the blood-spattered bathroom of a United Airlines jet was apparently born five hours earlier, just before the plane took off from New Jersey, authorities said.

Weighing 8 pounds, 9 ounces, the newborn girl was found by a custodian on Wednesday stuffed beneath a sink in a lavatory of United Airlines Flight 35.

Minutes earlier, the mother and 252 other passengers disembarked from the non-stop flight from Newark, N.J. Police were still searching for the mother Wednesday night.

The white infant, who has dark brown hair and blue eyes, is listed in good condition at Mills Hospital in San Mateo, where nurses have named her "Elizabeth," said Lt. Mike Dow of the San Mateo County Sheriff's Department.

INDICT

On July 2, 1974, Rochester and his wife, Lois, were paid $2,092,000 from the venture for the purchase of a tract of land that was used in the development, according to the indictment.

Two months later, Rochester, along with the savings and loan, formed OSLA Joint Venture for the purpose of real estate development and marketing, the indictment said.

Between June 30, 1977 and July 1984, the venture, along with other partners and corporations that would be created later, would borrow millions from Odessa Savings Association to finance a number of transactions, according to the indictment.

Included in those developments were a number located in both Ector and Midland counties as well as outside the state where property was purchased in Virginia Beach, the indictment said.

In March 1981, Odessa Savings incorporated Mid-Central Financial Group as the holding company of the thrift, and, in turn, exchanged stock, share-for-share.

According to the indictment, Rochester, who hid his 25 percent plus interest in Odessa Savings, supposedly moved that ownership among other participants, but remained in full control of those shares.

The indictment said that in order to reflect his dilution, Rochester made a number of false entries in books, records and statements of the association related to his ownership and control.

During that period, the indictment said Rochester induced Odessa Savings and Mid-Central to make loans to him and a number of his companies which were prohibited under federal law.

While Rochester had resigned from the board of directors in July 1974, the indictment said he stayed on as an advisory director, all the time acquiring more and more blocks of Odessa Savings stock, according to the indictment.

BUSH

Bush, as he has done repeatedly over the last few days, defended the captain of the USS Vincennes. "One thing is clear," he said, "the USS Vincennes acted in self-defense" in firing two missiles at the jetliner, which it had deduced was an Iranian F-14 fighter closing in on the cruiser.

Bush called on Iran to immediately divert civilian air traffic away from areas of "active hostilities" and to join with Iraq in accepting an immediate cease-fire in the war that has raged since 1980.

"The victims of Iran Air 655 are only most recent casualties of a brutal and senseless war that has brought immense pain and suffering to the people of both sides," Bush said.

Bush said he came to the United Nations, where he served as ambassador from 1971 to 1973, at the request of President Reagan, "because of the importance of the issues at stake."

Bush said it was "not just the terrible human tragedy of Iran Air 655 but the continuing conflict between Iran and Iraq" that brought him to speak.

Speaking with reporters on Air Force Two as he flew to New York, Bush said he had been selected because "the president decided to put some real emphasis on the policy of the United States by elevating the level of representation."

The appearance is likely to give the prospective Republican presidential nominee high visibility at a time when Democrats are preparing to nominate Michael Dukakis as their presidential candidate.

ROUNDUP

"I said I was sorry that I missed him on the first call," Dukakis said.

At the black caucus, at the NAACP convention in Washington and in the news conference, Dukakis stressed how much he needed the enthusiasm of Jackson and his supporters in the campaign," Dukakis said. "We want his support. We hope and expect he will be very much involved with us in the campaign and afterwards."

Back in Chicago for one last time before the convention, Jackson was not ready to be appeased.

"At this point I'm not in the partnership," he told a news conference there. Later he told a convention of Operation PUSH, the civil rights group he founded, "For too long, the power brokers have sat in small rooms with closed doors and made great decisions. ...We must be a part of this process."

Jackson laid down another challenge to Dukakis, suggesting that he could very well allow his name to be put into nomination for vice president during Thursday night's session — in addition to the presidential roll call on Wednesday night.

It would be a symbolic gesture, since Dukakis has the delegate votes to control the convention.

"I'm not suggesting that I will compete for a place on the ticket but the floor is wide open on Thursday night when the recommendation is made," he said.

"So long as we stay within the rules and follow the process," the possibility of such a fight was there, Jackson said at his news conference.

Informed of Jackson's comments, Dukakis said, "I'm confident we'll have a united convention."

Even as Jackson's rhetoric suggested confrontation, there was movement toward reconciliation.

Jackson said Bentsen called him on Wednesday, a "courtesy call that I appreciated very much."

And the campaign staffs were in close contact. Jackson convention manager Ron Brown and Dukakis campaign chief Susan Estrich talked three times Wednesday.

RACE

"That's pretty much what the campaign is saying," Hightower said. "They concede he was treated rudely, but it was unintentional. I take them at good faith."

Although admitting that Bentsen's conservative philosophies are far from Jackson's populism, Hightower said Bentsen has "grown in office." He cited his support for legislation that would require industries to give workers notice of plant closing, his opposition to placing a high-level nuclear dump in the Panhandle and his opposition to the nomination of Robert Bork to the Supreme Court.

"Bentsen is certainly acceptable to me as an inner-circle member of the Dukakis campaign," he said.

Hightower said the 7 million Democrats who voted for Jackson during the primaries could feel left out if "salt is rubbed in the wound" by party leaders. "I think Dukakis, and Bentsen, are going to make efforts of healing in this process in the days maybe even before the convention, ...(otherwise) the constituency that is on the move with Jackson could feel stiffed."

Along with convention decisions on the party rules and platform, Hightower said, Dukakis and Bentsen have to bring Jackson inside the fall campaign. "They've got to have Jackson as a part of the development of the strategy, the full strategy in terms of the message that's going to go out," he said.

That includes campaign schedules, spending and "a massive voter registration drive," he explained.

In a related matter, Hightower said he's considering running to replace Bentsen in the Senate next year should the Democrats win the White House and Bentsen have to resign his seat. The agriculture commissioner is also eyeing a 1990 race against Republican Sen. Phil Gramm and said he would weigh campaign finances, possible opponents and "winability" before making a decision.

Democratic Comptroller Bob Bullock issued a statement Wednesday saying he has no interest in the Senate and is concentrating on his 1990 race for lieutenant governor.

COPTER

"At this time, he's just not interested," White said.

Painter hopes the new craft will help reverse an increase in the number of building burglaries reported to the department during the second quarter of 1988.

During April, May and June, 35 building burglaries were reported, up from 19 during the same period last year, according to department records.

But, the good news was that residential burglaries were down from 28 to 19 despite the loss of the helicopter.

"We have done a lot of work in the county to try and stop the burglaries," Painter said. "It's that time of year, and we're actively working on it," he said of the large number of residents who are on vacation this time of year.

Painter says he reviews statistics regularly, but he said they are more of a guide than anything.

"It gives us direction," he said. "It tells us what we're doing, if it is a good job or a bad job."

During the second quarter of the year, the decrease in home burglaries was tied to an increase in narcotics arrests, according to the statistics.

Painter said the two are related.

Jackson hints at fight on convention floor

CHICAGO (AP) — Jesse Jackson heads to Atlanta today looking for signals from Michael Dukakis on their future relationship as he ponders whether to launch a showdown at the Democratic convention.

Jackson

On Wednesday, Jackson may have fueled the passions of those who want to run him against Dukakis' vice presidential choice by saying the floor was "wide open" on the vice presidential vote next Thursday night.

Jackson's departure by bus caravan to the convention city comes as many of his supporters are still reeling from what they considered a snub by Dukakis in failing to fully consult Jackson on his choice of a running mate, and in not notifying him of that choice before word leaked out.

Dukakis says he tried to call Jackson on Tuesday morning to tell him Lloyd Bentsen had been picked, but was not able to reach him. He spoke with Jackson before the actual announcement, but after reports were already circulating of the Texas senator's selection.

And two Democratic sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Jackson was told privately Monday afternoon that he would not be picked. One source said Dukakis campaign chairman Paul Brountas told Jackson "he would bring the ticket down" if nominated for vice president.

A clearly irked Jackson complained in a news conference that Dukakis is excluding him from the unity team Jackson has repeatedly emphasized as the key to victory in November.

"At this point I'm not in the partnership," he said, adding: "I'm not suggesting that I will compete for a place on the ticket but the floor is wide open on Thursday night when the recommendation is made."

"I'm being asked to, in spite of inadequate communication and not being recommended for the ticket, to motivate more people and deliver more votes and pour out more energy at greater risk and danger than any governor or any senator."

He would expect in return, he said, satisfaction for "the legitimate and reasonable requests" of his constituents.

On Wednesday night, speaking to Operation PUSH, the civil rights group he founded, Jackson sounded similar themes, complaining about exclusion.

"For too long, the power brokers have sat in small rooms with closed doors and made great decisions," he declared. "We must be a part of this process. When they sit around these tables, the key investors in our party are not in the group."

No decision has been made about convention strategy, said Jackson convention manager Ron Brown. Jackson's team is waiting to see if Dukakis reaches out to undo the damage from the perceived snub on the Bentsen issue, Brown said.

Jackson officials had been negotiating privately on unresolved platform issues, but those talks were halted in light of the running mate matter, he said.

It's up to Dukakis "to make it a unity convention," Brown said, adding that Jackson has the logistical wherewithal to "make our presence felt" on any matter at the convention.

Told that Dukakis had said Wednesday he wants Jackson's support and plans to talk to him "from time to time," Brown stated, "Those comments are encouraging, but I think they need to talk now."

Jackson was "flabbergasted" to learn of the Bentsen choice from reporters instead of from Dukakis in advance, Brown said. He said Dukakis aide Paul Brountas had assured Jackson he would be consulted, not for a veto prerogative, but out of courtesy.

Jackson told his news conference that "many people have a sense of indignation and a sense of insult," about the matter.

Dukakis' campaign manager Susan Estrich apologized to Brown, saying the tardy call was unintentional. She said when Dukakis called, Jackson was already airborne, according to Brown.

But Brown emphasized Dukakis must contact Jackson directly and bring him into the partnership for November. "There has to be some serious outreach," he said.

Jackson said he spoke briefly with Bentsen on Wednesday in a "courtesy call that I appreciated very much."

After Dukakis and Bentsen met with the Congressional Black Caucus Wednesday, some of his Capitol Hill supporters said they were satisfied the communication foul-up Tuesday was inadvertent.

"Lots of fences have been mended," said Rep. Mervyn Dymally, D-Calif., chairman of the caucus. "We have a very fruitful discussion about the convention, the campaign and the presidency."

And Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., a close Jackson ally, urged Jackson supporters to rally around the Dukakis-Bentsen ticket.

But another caucus member, Rep Major Owens, D-N.Y., said the way Jackson learned of the No. 2 choice was "a demonstration of disrespect."

Jackson's Atlanta-bound bus entourage has scheduled stops in Indianapolis, Ind.; Louisville, Ky.; Nashville, Tenn., and Chattanooga, Tenn.; on the way to Atlanta.

Veto of plant-closing bill called 'pro-jobs'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A veto of a bill to require that workers be given advance notice of plant closings and layoffs would be a pro-jobs move and not hurt Vice President George Bush's presidential campaign, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said today.

"The senior advisers recommend a veto, and it was a major reason why (President Reagan) vetoed the trade bill," Fitzwater said aboard Air Force One as Reagan flew to Marion, Ill., to visit a drought-stricken farm. He was later flying to Davenport, Iowa.

Fifty-four of the 177 House Republicans abandoned the administration and Bush on the issue Wednesday. Nineteen of the Senate's 46 Republicans did the same last week as Congress heads for a showdown with Reagan over the issue.

"We support the concept but believe it ought to be a part of labor-management agreements," Fitzwater said.

"We believe this bill stymies job creation, puts structural rigidities in the market to make it more difficult to expand plant capacity and create more employment, so we consider our position on plant closings as a pro-jobs position," he said.

Fitzwater denied that a veto of the measure, which had earlier been included in a trade bill Reagan vetoed, would prove politically damaging to Bush.

On a 286-136 vote, more than the two-thirds needed to enact the law over a veto from Reagan, the House voted Wednesday to let workers caught up in plant closings or layoffs involving more than 50 of them know about it 60 days beforehand.

The Senate approved the same measure a week ago by a veto-proof 72-23 vote in the biggest legislative battle of the decade between corporate America and labor unions.

House Republicans aware of polls showing that more than 80 percent of the American public favor the notices are distancing themselves from Reagan and Bush on the issue.

"I don't think he'll be able to sustain a veto," said Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J., who led the House fight against the mandatory notices through the legislative process but voted for the bill Wednesday.

"There are a lot more than 54 Republicans who don't want him to veto it," she said. "We fought every fight...but you have to pick your battles. Bush is going to have to handle the issue now."

Immediately after the vote on the layoff notices Wednesday, the House approved by an even larger 376-45 vote a trade bill that President Reagan vetoed in May because the plant closing and layoff notices were then a part of it.

The 14.1 million-member AFL-CIO, possessing one-sixth of the delegates at next week's Democratic National Convention, has threatened to withdraw its pivotal support for overhauling the nation's trade laws if the plant closing notices are not enacted separately.

And the labor movement's chief supporters in the Senate — Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, — have vowed to reattach the notices to the trade legislation or kill the bill entirely if Reagan's veto of them as a separate measure is upheld.

"Today's House vote, coupled with last week's overwhelming Senate margin, clearly give the White House a strong message that this bill should be signed," AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said Wednesday.

In vetoing the trade bill in May, Reagan echoed the sentiments of business groups such as the National Association of Manufacturers, U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the Business Roundtable, which oppose notices of plant closings or impending layoffs. Reagan called them anti-competitive and said they would stifle the creation of new jobs.

Under the Constitution, Reagan has 10 days — excluding Sundays — to veto the measure after it reaches his desk, which House leaders said will be sometime next week. That gives Democrats time for a veto override vote before the Republican National Convention the second week of August.

"I suspect the president will veto it," House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., said Wednesday. "The legislation is here to create an issue, not because people are demanding it."

Bush has steadfastly supported Reagan's position that companies should tell workers well in advance they are about to lose their jobs, but that the government shouldn't make them do it.

Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis said Wednesday he will sign the bill into law the first month of his presidency if elected in November.

"There is now a national consensus for national plant closing legislation," Dukakis said in a statement also attacking Reagan's handling of so-far unsuccessful efforts to oust Panamanian leader Manuel Noriega after his indictment.

Marine pilot killed in Harrier jet crash

HAVELOCK, N.C. (AP) — A Harrier fighter jet crashed soon after takeoff on a training mission, killing the Marine pilot, officials said.

It was the second fatal crash involving a Harrier based at Cherry Point Marine Air Station this year.

The $30 million AV8-B Harrier II went down near Havelock just after 8 a.m. Wednesday, about a mile south of the air station runway into the backyard of a mobile home, said Master Sgt. Sandra Riley, a Marine spokeswoman.

The jet clipped a stand of trees before it hit the ground and burned in a rural area off Highway 101, Ms. Riley said.

The pilot was 1st Lt. Kerry D. Dale, 26, of Havelock, a member of the Marine Attack Training Squadron 203 and part of the Second Marine Aircraft Wing. Ms. Riley said Dale had been on a routine training mission.

Bill OKs seizure of land next to battlefield park

WASHINGTON (AP) — Momentum is building in Congress to protect a hallowed Civil War battleground from a massive shopping center complex that a developer wants to build next door.

The House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee approved a measure Wednesday authorizing the federal government to seize a 542-acre tract next to the Manassas National Battlefield Park.

The bill, a combination of legislation introduced by Rep. Frank Wolf, R-Va., and another bill sponsored by Reps. Michael Andrews, D-Texas, and Robert Mrazek, D-N.Y., now moves to the House floor after passing the committee by a 27-11 vote. Supporters hope the matter will come up for a vote when the House reconvenes after the Democratic National Convention.

Critics of the measure, including Rep. Ron Marlenee, R-Mont., complained that the bill was too costly, but it was approved after the panel defeated an amendment offered by Marlenee that would have added 11,000 acres to the Custer Battlefield National Monument, near Billings, Mont.

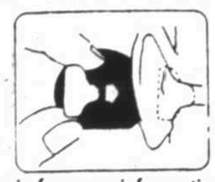

The House committee vote came one day after a $10.6 billion transportation bill passed by the Senate included a provision to block any federal money from being used for highway construction associated with the proposed William Center development.

A similar measure had already been included in transportation legislation approved by the House, and supporters of the provision predict it will survive final legislative changes made by House and Senate members.

Congress entered the domain of local zoning officials after historians and preservationists complained that the massive development would destroy the rural sanctity of the 4,600-acre park where two important Civil War battles took place.

Developer John T. Hazel seeks to build a complex including 1.2 million square feet of retail space, 1.7 million square feet of office space, and 560 homes. He bought the property in 1985 and first proposed a small-scale office park for the site, then expanded his plans to the current concept once Prince William County, Va., officials relaxed zoning restrictions on the property.

Senate sends stern, bipartisan warning to Sandinistas

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an unprecedented show of bipartisan unity, the Senate is warning Nicaragua's Sandinista government it could face renewed U.S. military aid to the Contra rebels unless it reverses "dramatic new steps in brutality" against its own citizens.

In what some senators called a "carrot and stick policy," adopted on a 91-4 vote, the Senate also said it was ready to extend U.S. economic aid to Nicaragua if the Sandinistas fully comply with commitments made a year ago and "proceed to permit the establishment of a democratic system."

The "sense of the Senate" resolution is non-binding.

But the wide bipartisan coalition which swung behind it emphasized the anger and concern caused by recent Sandinista actions to suppress dissent.

These include the closing of the opposition newspaper La Prensa and Nicaragua's Catholic radio station, the suppression of a non-violent demonstration in Managua, the arrest of 40 opposition political leaders and the expulsion of U.S. Ambassador Richard Melton and seven other U.S. diplomats.

"You can say it's only a sense of the Senate resolution, but in my view it means a great deal," said Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

Dole told his colleagues: "We are moving now because the Sandinista goons have been in the streets of Managua again; because the Sandinista jails are filling up with new prisoners; because what little independent media there has ever been in Nicaragua is being closed down again; and because the light of freedom in Nicaragua has been nearly snuffed out again."

The resolution states in part: "The Sandinistas should understand that blatant violations (of last year's peace agreement) and the human rights of the Nicaraguan people could cause Congress to consider the provision of additional humanitarian and other appropriate assistance, including military aid, if conditions should so warrant."

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., said that by their actions, "the Sandinistas have shown their true colors."

Military aid to the Contras was suspended in hopes that the Central American peace process would take hold but Boren said: "We have tried removing the pressure and all we have done is harm the cause of peace.

"If the Sandinistas continue down this path they will leave us no choice but to resume the pressure, even military pressure if necessary."

Only Sens. Brock Adams, D-Wash., Mark Hatfield, R-Wash., Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, and William Proxmire, D-Wis., voted against the resolution. Not voting were Sens. Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., Jesse Helms, R-N.C., Larry Pressler, R-S.D., John Stennis, D-Miss., and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.

Meanwhile, the permanent council of the Organization of American States planned a late afternoon meeting today at the request of Nicaraguan Ambassador Carlos Tunnermann.

Tunnermann, who serves as both ambassador to the OAS and the United States, is expected to press his view that the Reagan administration cannot legally expel a diplomat assigned to the OAS.

Tuesday, Reagan announced that Tunnermann and seven of his colleagues had 72 hours to leave the country. The action was taken after Nicaragua expelled Melton and the other U.S. diplomats from Managua.

The State Department maintains that Tunnermann engaged in "abuses" of his privileges of residence here and that his expulsion is therefore both lawful and warranted. It has given no details of the alleged abuses, but one official said privately they are based on FBI investigations.

NATION IN BRIEF

Pro-Contra defendants say government betrayed them

MIAMI (AP) — Defendants indicted on charges they violated federal neutrality laws by helping the Nicaraguan Contras say the Reagan administration betrayed their patriotic fervor and abandoned them as scapegoats.

"They used them and then abused them," Doug Jones, attorney for Thomas Posey, said of the administration. "You will never hear one iota of evidence that anyone asked them to stop."

The federal indictment unsealed Wednesday named seven men, including the brother of Contra leader Adolfo Calero, but no U.S. administration officials or top Contra figures as some had expected, even though the early stages of the probe helped uncover the Iran-Contra military supply network.

"The indictment speaks for itself," said John Mattes, a federal public defender whose investigation of a client's case led to accusations that federal prosecutors tried to sidetrack the probe. "No one of substance was indicted."

The indictment covers a period in 1984 and 1985, and accuses the seven of violating the U.S. Neutrality Act, which prohibits mounting operations against foreign governments from U.S. soil.

It accuses the men of sending mercenaries into combat in Nicaragua, including a group that tried unsuccessfully to blow up a bridge in 1985, but was forced out of the country, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Schnapp.

Parents mourn son's death

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Parents who lost five children in an apartment fire 25 years ago now is mourning the death of their 17-year-old son — shot in what police said was a game of Russian roulette.

"We're trying to get through this and we're praying to the good Lord, but it's pretty tough," said Bessie Milton, whose 17-year-old son Edward died after being shot in the eye.

"We lost five children in a fire in Chicago in 1963 and the Lord blessed me with five more children," Mrs. Milton, 46, said Wednesday. "Now I've lost my baby. Hopefully, the good Lord will pull me through again."

The teen-ager's shooting death Saturday is the latest tragedy to scar a family all too familiar with death.

L.D. and Bessie Milton were in the process of buying a house in 1963 when a boiler in their South Side apartment building exploded.

Duo critical after transplant

CHICAGO (AP) — A baby boy and girl were in critical condition today following the first double liver operation in the United States, in which another infant's organ was divided between the two, hospital officials said.

The boy, 12-week-old Joseph Kovach of Geneva, Ill., is the smallest person ever to receive a liver transplant at 4.2 pounds, said University of Chicago Medical Center spokesman John Easton. The infant had open-heart surgery earlier, he said.

Joseph went back into surgery Wednesday night to fix a bleeding problem, said night administrator Camille Renella.

The girl, 7-month-old Jaclyn Manrose of Crystal Lake, Ill., was also in critical condition, which is considered normal after transplant surgery.

In Tuesday's operation, which lasted 12 hours, the liver of a 1-year-old Illinois youngster who died in an accident was divided between Joseph and Jaclyn, Easton said.

Church stunned by murder charge against pastor

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — Stunned worshippers gathered for Bible study without their church's pastor, who was in jail today accused of killing his live-in girlfriend and burying her hours before giving his Sunday sermon.

"Everybody's just knocked out and surprised," said Hezekiah Butler, chairman of the board of deacons for Zion Traveler Missionary Baptist Church, one of three churches served by the Rev. Jonathan Hamlin.

"He's been a wonderful pastor and a wonderful young man. You've never run across a finer person in the world," Butler said.

Hamlin, 24, was arrested Monday by the Warren County Sheriff's Department, accused of fatally shooting 24-year-old Lula Sims. Held on $100,000 bond, he won't be required to enter a plea until a grand jury issues an indictment.

Authorities say Hamlin shot Sims in the head and chest on July 3, buried her body in woods about 40 miles southeast of Vicksburg, and hours later preached during Sunday morning worship at Zion Traveler.

Sims remained buried for eight days, until Dorothy Lipscomb persuaded Sheriff Paul Barrett to investigate her daughter's disappearance.

Barrett said he questioned Hamlin, a father of three, who admitted that he had killed Sims and led officers to her shallow grave Monday night. Police recovered the pearl-handled, .22-caliber pistol they believe Hamlin used.

Hamlin's estranged wife had given him the gun as a gift, Barrett said.

Wednesday night, members of the congregation gathered for Bible study at the small red brick building that houses the church. Outside, a sign read: "Rev. J. Hamlin, pastor."

"He was just a first-class minister," said Daniel Clark, a long-time member of Zion Traveler. "That's the way it seemed to us."

Hamlin, a member of Zion Traveler, was elected to lead the 500-member congregation in November after the church's longtime pastor died, Butler said.

Sims' mother recalled a different side of Hamlin.

"About a month and a half ago he choked her," Lipscomb said Wednesday in the living room of her small, neat Vicksburg home.

South Africa agrees to end rule of Namibia

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Angola, Cuba and South Africa agreed that Pretoria will end its 73-year rule in South-West Africa and that Cuban troops will leave Angola, but did not set a schedule for the Cuban pullout.

Private meetings among the negotiators began Monday under tight security at the U.S. Coast Guard station on Governors Island in New York Harbor and concluded Wednesday at their hotel.

Crocker

"As a result of these 2½ days, the Angolans, Cubans, and South Africans were able to reach agreement on a set of principles which constitute the essential elements of a political settlement in southwestern Africa," said Chester A. Crocker, under-secretary of state in charge of African affairs, who led the host American delegation.

Crocker said the South African administration in South-West Africa, also known as Namibia, would be replaced by U.N. civil and military administrators to comply with a U.N. resolution calling for that nation's independence under black majority rule.

"There are some large gaps that remain," Crocker said. "For example, the existing gap on the timing of the Cuban troop withdrawal from Angola is a major issue. I think the parties agreed that this was not the time to come to grips with that issue, and we agree with that judgment.

"But they do recognize...that there's going to have to be a compromise, that there's going to have to be no losers, that it's going to have to be something that can be verified to the satisfaction of everybody," Crocker said.

The statement of principles adopted by the military and political negotiators must now be approved by their respective governments. Details of the principles will not be released until then, said Crocker.

South Africa has said it would accept a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for South-West Africa's independence when the estimated 50,000 Cuban troops withdraw from neighboring Angola.

The U.S. goal is a full Cuban troop withdrawal in one year, the same time span that the U.N. resolution sets for granting independence to Namibia.

Angola and Cuba had insisted that the Cuban withdrawal should take place over four years.

The United States is a party to the talks because it has been supporting anti-communist rebels in Angola with funds and weapons since 1985.

Cuba's delegation, led by Cuban Communist Party secretariat member Carlos Aldana, had no immediate statement but called a news conference for today.

Before Crocker's announcement, the leader of the Angolan delegation, Lt. Gen. Antonio dos Santos Franca, said a final settlement was "very close — this is the wish of everyone."

The South Africans had no announcement.

But during the talks, their chief negotiator, Neil van Heerden, told reporters the parties were "talking turkey" and the negotiations were "on track."

The optimism expressed by the Angolan and South African were a marked contrast to the usual rancor and recriminations in statements about each other.

Another meeting has been set for early August to begin working out details of the withdrawal of all foreign forces from southwestern Africa — the Cubans from Angola, and the South Africans from South-West Africa.

A site for the meeting has not been set.

Angola has been convulsed by civil war since it gained independence from Portugal in 1975. The Marxist one-party government has been fighting the anti-communist rebels in the south, who call themselves UNITA, for National Union for the Total Independence of Angola.

South Africa has repeatedly sent troops across the border from Namibia into Angola to support the UNITA rebel forces in their clashes with Cuban and Angolan forces.

Namibia has been ruled by South Africa since World War I, when the League of Nations gave it a mandate to administer the territory. The League's successor, the United Nations, has revoked that mandate.

The four parties first met in London in early May, then reconvened last month in Cairo, Egypt. South African and Angolan officials held a separate meeting in May in Brazzaville, the Congo.

WORLD

Gorbachev says he wants to return to Lenin's plan

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev told Polish intellectuals today that the basic goal of his reform program is to ensure that working people live a better life.

Gorbachev said he wants to return to the approach of Vladimir I. Lenin, founder of the Soviet state, who he said staged a revolution against exploitation to make man "master of his own spirit."

The Soviet leader, on a six-day tour of Poland, spoke to several dozen academics, writers, scientists and cultural figures in the ornate gilded ballroom of Warsaw's Royal Castle. Polish state television broadcast the meeting.

A Polish physicist in the audience thanked Gorbachev for the decision by the Soviet Communist Party conference to erect a monument in Moscow to victims of the late Soviet dictator, Josef Stalin.

The scientist, Jan Rychlewski, said his father was among the Polish communists who disappeared in Stalin's purges.

"We will treat this monument as his grave," the physicist told Gorbachev.

Gorbachev, speaking in Russian, told his audience that during a stop at a farmer's house near Szczecin on Wednesday, he was asked what he was trying to accomplish with "perestroika," his program to restructure and modernize the Soviet economy and society.

"Simply, we want, in spite of everything...for working people to lead a better life," Gorbachev said he replied.

Gorbachev, who grew up on a farm in southern Russia, added that socialism must make humanitarianism its most important achievement.

By improving the lives of the people in both the Soviet Union and Poland, all other fields of life will be transformed as well, Gorbachev said.

Intellectuals can offer their support to reconstruction and renewal, but its main goal is to improve the lives of workers and farmers, Gorbachev said. On the "train of perestroika" he said, "these are the most significant and main passengers."

Later, Gorbachev drove across town to party headquarters to meet with the leadership of the communist Polish United Workers Party.

Wednesday, Gorbachev told about 3,000 shipyard workers in Szczecin he is looking to Poland for ideas to help solve economic problems at home and avoid making costly political mistakes.

"We find many useful things in your experiences," he said.

The speech was greeted with polite applause but little outward enthusiasm by the workers, who were admitted by invitation. The Soviet Union buys about half the ships built at the yard, once a Solidarity stronghold.

Attempts by Poland's communist authorities to revive the nation's stagnant economy are complicated by the Soviet bloc's best organized opposition.

Solidarity, the outlawed independent labor federation, was stifled in a 1981 military crackdown. But dissatisfaction with communist authorities' unwillingness to share some measure of power or allow free trade unions is still strong enough to trigger disruptive strikes.

Polish leader Wojciech Jaruzelski also is embarked on a reform campaign, and both leaders have stressed their common goals during the Soviet leader's visit.

But Poland has so far failed in its attempt to bring prices more in line with actual costs and trim heavy government subsidies.

Gorbachev told his nation's Communist Party conference last month that a similar revision of the state-set price system is crucial to the success of his economic reforms.

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

The Bible should be compulsory reading for bridge players—it contains much sage advice. For instance, consider this morsel of wisdom: "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's." Had West but followed that dictum, we would have had nothing to write about.

West was unnecessarily cautious in the bidding. Once his partner could raise spades, West should probably have competed with four spades. He was looking at seven or eight playing tricks in his own hand, and his partner had raised. As the cards lie, four spades has a shot if the defense makes the slightest slip.

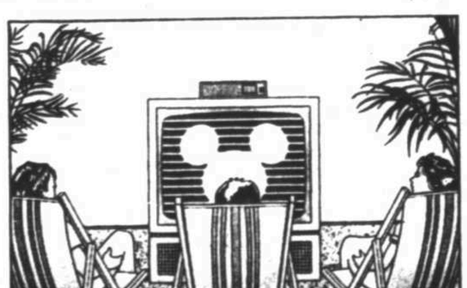

West compounded his timidity in the bidding with a poor choice of opening lead. Reluctant to present declarer with a spade trick that he might not be able to make on his own. West chose to lead the jack of hearts. Declarer played low from dummy, East signalled encouragement with the eight and declarer held up the ace. There was still time to switch to a spade, but West thought he had struck gold.

Declarer won the heart continuation with the ace and led a club to the table's king. A diamond to the ten was allowed to win, and declarer crossed back to the ace of clubs to repeat the diamond finesse. When that brought the ace from West, all was well. Declarer scooped up six club tricks, two diamond tricks and the ace of hearts.

Obviously, the contract goes down with a spade lead. Declarer does get a spade trick, but that gives him only eight tricks in toto.

Nelson Mandela more well-known among Britons than most members of Cabinet

LONDON (AP) — Seventy-seven percent of Britons can identify Nelson Mandela, the jailed South African black leader, making him a more familiar figure than most members of the British Cabinet, according to a new Gallup poll.

Apart from Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, Mandela scored a higher recognition rating in the poll than did any British Cabinet minister in a 1986 poll by Market Opinion and Research International.

Gallup made it easier with African National Congress leader Mandela, mentioning his name — as opposed to the MORI pollsters two years ago who simply produced photographs and asked who it was.

Even so, Mandela, serving a life sentence imposed in 1964 on sabotage charges, emerged far ahead of the all-white, 22-member Cabinet.

Gallup spokesman Bob Wybrow said that if a respondent associated the Mandela name with South Africa, or went further, that counted as identification.

In the 1986 poll, Mrs. Thatcher scored a 99.05 percent shutout.

The Gallup poll was released Wednesday. It was commissioned by the London-based Anti-Apartheid Movement to mark Mandela's 70th birthday Monday.

GALVA, Ill. (AP) — Samuel Leroy Mendel, who was the oldest living American veteran and one of two remaining Spanish-American War-era veterans, died Wednesday at his home at the age of 104.

Mendel, past commander-in-chief of the Spanish-American War Veteran's Association, died in his sleep, said a friend, Jim Phillips.

Mendel had been a vaudeville performer, lumberjack, sanitation officer, furniture salesman and preacher. He retired in 1952 after moving to this town of 3,200 people.

A native of Fort Worth, Texas, Mendel was 17 when he enlisted in the U.S. Army in 1901. His patriotic fire had been sparked by the sinking of the U.S. battleship Maine on June 23, 1898, in Havana harbor in Cuba — then under Spanish rule. But he was only 14 at the time and unable to enlist.

The war that liberated Cuba ended that same year. But fighting in Guam, Puerto Rico and the Philippines continued for several years and when Mendel joined the Army he was still hoping to see combat, he recalled in a 1983 interview.

Samuel Leroy Mendel, of Galva, Ill., died Wednesday at his home less than a month after his 104th birthday. Mendel was the oldest of two remaining Spanish American War-era veterans. He is shown at his 103rd birthday party last year.

Instead of carrying a gun onto the field of battle, Mendel spent his three-year military career carrying a football on the athletic fields at Fort Sam Houston. In 1902, he was cited as the best athlete in the Army.

Mendel outlasted all but one of the 392,000 Americans who served during the 1898-1902 era. The last known veteran of Spanish-American War era is Nathan E. Cook, 102, of Tempe, Ariz., a former Navy man with 44 years of military service.

Mendel became the oldest living American veteran when Jasper Garrison of Marion died June 5, 1987, at age 107.

LONDON (AP) — Hundreds of unpublished love letters from ribald American writer Henry Miller to Hollywood actress Brenda Venus, who was 50 years his junior when they met, have surfaced at a London auction.

The letters will be sold later this month at Sotheby's as part of the papers and books of the British novelist and poet Lawrence Durrell, 76, a longtime friend of Miller.

Miller, author of "Tropic of Cancer," was 88 when he died in California in 1980. Miss Venus and Miller met when she was in her early 30s and Miller was 83.

The letters, written from 1976 to 1979, vividly describe his feelings for Miss Venus, who appeared in Clint Eastwood's 1975 movie "The Eiger Sanction."

The friendship rejuvenated Miller, although Miss Venus rejected his proposal of marriage. He went on to publish three more books and poems and said of their relationship: "How explain this miraculous and fortuitous conjunction? How explain sunrise and sunset, flood and drought?"

Willis

PADUCAH, Ky. (AP) — Actor Bruce Willis, who is starring in a forthcoming movie about the return of Vietnam War veterans, met with a group of former soldiers from western Kentucky to find out "what it's like to come home."

"I lost a couple of friends in the Vietnam War," Willis, 33, said Wednesday before the start of filming "In Country."

"The real story needs to be told, what it's like to come home," said Willis. "I feel really responsible to this group."

Willis, co-star Emily Lloyd and other cast members met with the veterans Tuesday night. Filming was to begin today.

Bentsen selection ushers in new race

In choosing U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as his running mate, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis showed he is attuned to political realities and aware of his own inexperience at the national and international levels. He also tossed Texans an interesting, perhaps difficult, political choice.

Few Texas politicians can claim to match either Bentsen's breadth of political experience or his expertise in energy, tax, business and economic matters. Few can claim the degree of respect Bentsen holds not only within the state but also throughout the nation.

A run for the Democratic nomination for president in 1976 gave the senator much needed national exposure and Dukakis, no doubt, hopes to capitalize on that, along with Bentsen's expertise in national and international matters to bolster what the governor may lack.

There is no question that the choice adds an interesting twist to the presidential race for Texans. Now there are two major party candidates in the race for the White House who claim Texas as home — Bentsen and Vice President George Bush, the Republican nominee. And while it isn't certain that Dukakis's selection of Bentsen will actually help him garner more support in the Lone Star State, from a perspective of political clout Texans couldn't be happier. Either way this presidential election year, Texans will win.

From a standpoint of political reality, Dukakis made a wise choice for vice president. Historically, no Democrat has won the presidency without carrying Texas and one can assume Dukakis also had in mind solidifying support in the south with selection of a "Southerner" of sorts.

Of course, not every person or bloc of voters will agree with the Bentsen choice. Some black voters — and notably the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) — will be upset that Dukakis did not choose Jesse Jackson. But Dukakis had already indicated he might not choose Jackson, who posed a degree of political trouble for the Democrats in addition to Dukakis.

Under Texas law, Bentsen can be on the ticket without withdrawing from his race for reelection to his senior seat in the Senate. He should not withdraw from that race because his knowledge, clout and expertise would be too much of a loss to the state.

The Bentsen choice gives the Democrats an outstanding leadership offering and a way to potentially recoup some lost credibility, gives Texans an interesting decision to make in November, and obviously gives Vice President Bush a tougher race in Texas than he may have expected.

All in all, that puts Texans right where they like to be: in the thick of things.

Hochman service cited

One of Midland's longtime residents and strongest promoters was honored last week — and the honor was certainly deserved. In a proclamation signed by Mayor Carroll Thomas, Louis Hochman was cited for his long-term civic involvement.

Hochman, known to numerous Midlanders as owner of Luigi's Italian Restaurant, was appropriately honored by having a day set aside in his honor with the mayor encouraging other residents to "recognize the outstanding attributes of Louis Hochman, and express our appreciation for his service to the Midland community."

After moving to Midland in 1958 from Lubbock, Hochman opened his restaurant and soon became involved in the civic life of the community. His contributions down through these three decades have been too numerous to mention, but the mayor's proclamation specifically cited his work for the Chamber of Commerce, including being a board director and chairman of the Convention and Visitors Bureau, and his service on the board of Midland Center for several years.

Hochman's influence on the community life has been undeniable and positive. He obviously has subscribed to the belief that an individual who enjoys living in a community has an obligation to return to that community a measure of service.

In Hochman's case, the service has been, as Mayor Thomas noted in his proclamation, "devoted, unselfish and skillful."

Stop Iran-Iraq war

A U.S. Navy ship's downing of an Iranian jetliner by mistake was a terrible tragedy involving civilian activities in the middle of a battle zone, the Persian Gulf. It emphasizes anew the need for the world community to pressure Iran and Iraq to end their eight-year war that has led to the fighting in the gulf.

President Reagan has described the cruiser Vincennes' missile attack on the plane carrying 290 persons July 3 as an "understandable accident," while deeply regretting the loss of life. The Pentagon has declared that the Iranian plane was outside the normal commercial flight corridor on a flight from Bandar Abbas, Iran, to Dubai, United Arab Emirates, after a clash had broken out between the U.S. ship and Iranian gunboats, that the plane ignored several radio warnings from the Vincennes, and that it began to descend, a customary maneuver by an aircraft preparing to launch missiles.

An Italian warship is reported to have heard the Vincennes send four radio warnings to the Iranian plane, but there was no response.

A team of U.S. Navy officials is en route to the Middle East to investigate the incident, which has brought threats of violent retaliation from Iranian officials. The probe is likely to include such questions as why the Navy ship's sophisticated electronic equipment identified the approaching Airbus airliner as the much smaller F-14 warplane flown by Iran.

Another key question that Americans are not likely to be able to answer is why Iran permitted the airliner to take off and approach the scene of hostilities near the Strait of Hormuz, the strategic "choke point" for tankers entering and leaving the Persian Gulf.

Regardless of any unanswered questions, this is no time for U.S. warships to abandon the gulf and its crucially important mission of protecting neutral ships carrying oil to the United States and its allies. While the United States has the most peace-keeping vessels in the gulf, Britain, France, Italy, The Netherlands, Belgium and the Soviet Union have vessels in and near the area.

What is vital is that there be renewed support for U.S. Security Council Resolution 598, which was adopted unanimously a year ago and calls for a cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war. Without such a cease-fire, further tragedies involving innocent victims are inevitable, along with raising the threat of the war engulfing more Middle East nations.

Americans wonder about Iran future

WASHINGTON — The downing of an Iranian airliner over the turbulent Persian Gulf has triggered apprehension in Americans throughout the country who are wondering what will happen next. Here are the best answers we can provide:

Jack Anderson

A Lebanon, Pa., reader assumes that Iran will again use terrorists to strike back at the United States. Do we have positive evidence, she asks, that terrorists are controlled by Teheran? And if we really know that Iran is responsible for kidnappings, hijackings and bombings, "why don't we retaliate against Iran for these outrages?"

Most revolutionary regimes go through a chaotic stage before they settle down. In Iran, Ayatollah Khomeini has continued to deliberately stir up chaos. He presides over a bubbling, flaming volcano of his own creation.

The ruling clergy is split between conservatives and reformers; the political leadership is torn between pragmatists and radicals. The latter are dominated by unregenerated revolutionaries who continue to pursue the revolution they have already won.

These radicals control the Revolutionary Guards who, in turn, have recruited and trained terrorists. For example, a contingency of Revolutionary Guards moved into northern Lebanon where they recruited terrorists from the squalid, restive Shiite villages. Restless young villagers have been suddenly transformed from the deprived and downtrodden into professional assassins and saboteurs — "soldiers of God," serving in the underground army of Hezbollah — "the party of God."

There is no question that Hezbollah is loyal to Iran and takes its orders from Teheran. Some orders have actually been intercepted by America's eavesdropping National Security Agency. But there is also evidence that the terrorists' operations have been opposed by the pragmatists, who want to stabilize Iran and break its military and diplomatic isolation.

The pragmatists were gaining the ascendancy until the U.S. Navy shot the Iranian airliner out of the sky. This gave the radicals an emotional appeal. And they control terrorists, kamikaze pilots, speedboat crews and mine-laying frogmen who are sworn to die for the ayatollah.

In Hollywood, Fla., a retiree has read that Khomeini is stricken with cancer and may not last long. "Who is really running Iran," she asks?

Khomeini has walked the tightrope between the pragmatists and radicals, leaning one way, then the other, ever keeping his balance. But intelligence sources who have studied the ayatollah believe his heart is with the radicals.

If cancer claims Khomeini, his designated successor, Ayatollah Ali Montazeri, has the religious status and radical credentials, including close ties to the Revolutionary Guards. But he lacks Khomeini's personal charisma and political savvy.

The individual who appears to be gaining the strongest hold on the levers of power is Speaker of the Parliament, Hashemi Rafsanjani, a wily pragmatist who can outpreach the ayatollahs and outshout the radicals if the political mood requires it.

Before the revolution, he was an obscure cleric. He is still outranked by all the ayatollahs. But the astute Rafsanjani has moved up the leadership ladder, weaving, dodging, manipulating, ever keeping his head an inch below the purge line.

Intelligence sources speculate that Montazeri will replace Khomeini, but only as a figurehead. It is Rafsanjani, they predict, who will wind up with the real power.

VOICE OF CENSORSHIP — The mission of the Voice of America is to broadcast news of the free world to communist and third world countries. But VOA employee Carolyn Weaver has learned that freedom of expression doesn't always extend to the people at home.

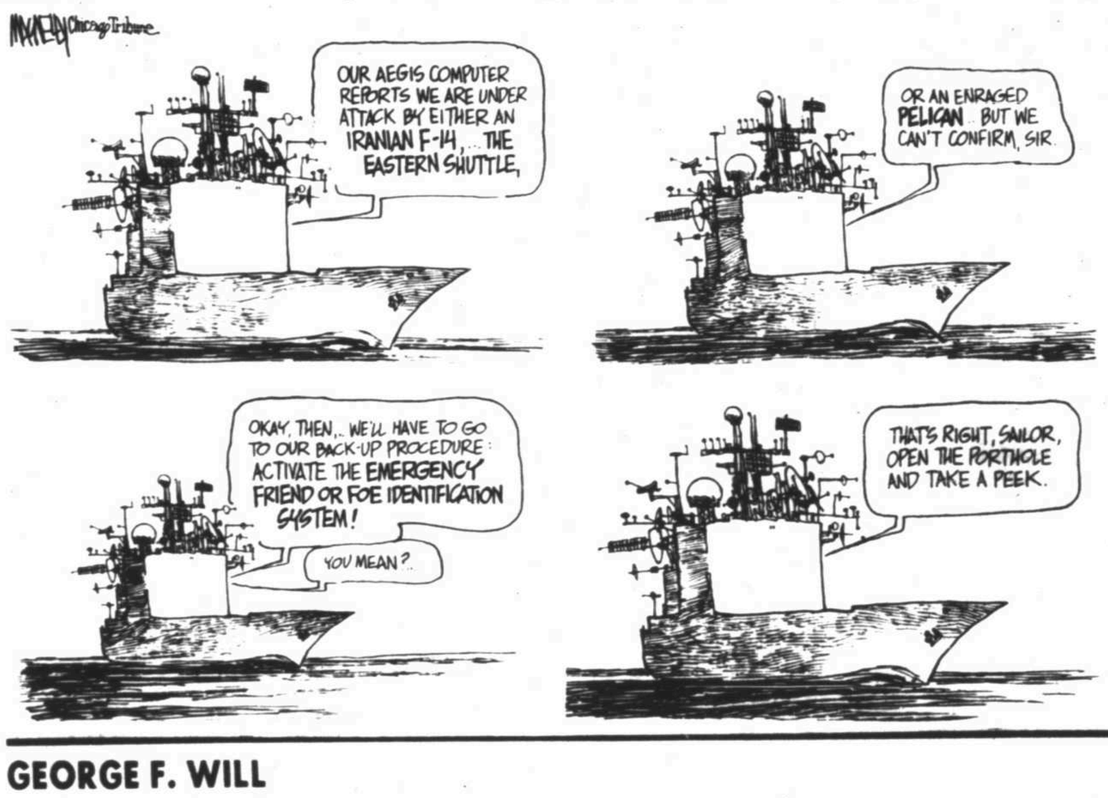

Weaver wrote an article for the Columbia Journalism Review about her experience at VOA and about what she sees as violations of the VOA charter. But the VOA has invoked its censorship rule to keep her from publishing the article. The regulation allows the government to review and censor any material prepared by an employee of the agency, even if it's prepared on the employee's own time and intended for outside publication. It also allows the State Department to spike anything that is considered to be inaccurate or inconsistent with our foreign policy. VOA is a branch of the State Department.

A wildcat group of public interest lawyers from the Government Accountability Project has filed a federal suit on Weaver's behalf.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The Population Crisis Council has published a report on the status of women throughout the world — and the news is not new. Even in industrialized nations, women make less money, do more housework and get less credit than men. They grow half the world's food, but own little of the land. They raise the children and work outside their homes, too. One of the few perks for women is that even in poor countries, women live longer than men. Maybe if women could bottle inequality, they could sell it as an elixir of youth.

'Bull Durham's' about baseball, everything

WASHINGTON — What is this summer's most entertaining movie for grown-ups (the cast includes no cartoon rabbits) about? Everything. "Bull Durham" is about baseball and love, and what else is there?

George F. Will

Yes, there are other things, such as presidential politics and Roger Rabbit. But baseball, properly practiced and appreciated, is a form and object of love, and thus touches, at least tangentially, all of life's great themes.

One such theme is the dignity of honest mediocrity, even in the unforgiving meritocracy of professional sports. Another is the necessity — indeed, the obligation — for special discipline on the part of the especially gifted.

In olden days, most baseball movies went like this. Boy meets baseball and falls in love. Then boy meets girl and inexplicably (one grand passion should suffice) falls in love yet again. The girl's role is to sit in the bleachers beneath a broad-brimmed hat and look anxious in his adversity and adoring in his inevitable triumph over it.

"Bull Durham" is different in two particulars, one of which is the girl, who is decidedly no girl. The other is the ball player, who is no Lou Gehrig. He is not the Pride of the Yankees, or even of the Durham Bulls.

Annie is more than 30 summers old, but is a fetching sight wearing a short off-the-shoulder dress and, as exquisite accessories, batting gloves. She pitches Whitman and Blake to students of English at a community college and also at one ball player each session. "A guy will listen to anything if he thinks it's foreplay," she says from considerable experience.

Annie, the thinking person's theist–"I believe in the Church of Baseball"–takes one player as her lover each season but is not, by her lights, promiscuous: "I am, within the framework of a baseball season, monogamous." Furthermore, "I'd never sleep with a player hitting under .250 unless he had a lot of RBIs or was a great glove man up the middle. A woman's got to have standards."

But the real keeper of standards, which is the movie's moral theme, is Crash Davis, a journeyman catcher. He once made it to the major leagues, but only for a cup of coffee. Now, in his 12th minor-league season, he is brought to Durham to teach baseball's craftsmanship to a promising but unpolished pitcher, Ebby Calvin "Nuke" LaLoosh.

When Annie asks Crash, in effect, to compete with Nuke for the privilege of being her lover for a season, he walks away, saying: "I'm not interested in a woman who is interested in that boy." In terms of physical skills, Crash is not much. But in terms of character, he is the keeper of the flame of craftsmanship. While Annie teaches Nuke about, well, life, Crash teaches him that his million-dollar arm does not mean he can get by with a five-cent brain.

In baseball, concentration is required of everyone. Alas, Nuke is a male bimbo, an airhead who even has to be tutored by Crash in the cliches that comprise the basic interview. ("We've gotta play 'em one day at a time....I just wanna give it my best shot.") When Nuke asks why Crash dislikes him, Crash says: "Cause you don't respect yourself, which is your problem, but you don't respect the game — and that's my problem."

Nuke has no idea how much hard work is required to achieve excellence, even when nature has given great talent. It has been said that the difference between the major and minor leagues is just a matter of "inches and consistency." That is essentially true of the difference between excellence and mere adequacy in poetry or surgery or anything else.

When Nuke bounces into the dugout after one good inning, there's this exchange:

Nuke: "I was good, eh?"

Crash: "Your fastball was up and your curve ball was hanging. In the Show (major leagues), they woulda ripped you."

Nuke: "Can't you let me enjoy the moment?"

Crash: "The moment's over."

Crash has learned the essential lesson of life: Nothing lasts. Everything must be achieved anew — on the next pitch, the next at bat, in the next game, the next season.

Remember back when, when you would fuel up for a matinee with Jujyfruits and watch a baseball movie? The protagonist, invariably a paragon of physical prowess and moral virtue, would be begged by some boy to perform a heroic deed, and would sweetly promise to do so and would promptly deliver. But in "Bull Durham" there is the following exchange — the most satisfying moment in the history of movies:

Batboy: "Get a hit, Crash."

Crash: "Shut-up."

Then Crash strikes out. And grown-ups in the audience sigh contentedly. They have sat through their fill of syrupy sports movies that are sweet enough to give a viewer diabetes. When Crash says, "Shut-up," and strikes out, a grown-up thinks, happily: "Now I've seen everything!"

Which, as I said, is what the movie is about.

Arms dealers aren't cited for good deeds!

Every night on the television you see people shooting at each other with everything from naval guns to rubber bullets. The screen is full of tanks smashing through villages and tear gas wafting on campuses. Whether it be the streets of Beirut or Northern Ireland, the entire world now appears to be an armed camp.

Art Buchwald

Nobody ever takes the time to ask, "Where is all this stuff coming from?"

The big surprise is not that it is so easy to buy equipment to start an insurrection, but rather that the people in sales don't even know who they're selling the arms to.

Feaster, an arms merchant prince, said, "I love this crazy business. You never run out of surprises."

"What kind of surprises?" I asked.

"Look at this newspaper. The Israelis are helping the Chinese develop a new and improved Silkworm missile. As soon as it is tested, the Chinese are going to sell it to Saudi Arabia, and the Saudis will probably use it against the Israelis."

"Do the Israelis know this?" I gasped.

"Sure, but that's what makes the arms business so much fun. Take Iran. The country is everybody's enemy in the world, and at the same time everybody's best arms customer. So what are they doing right now? The Iranians are buying weapons from France to sink ships belonging to the Western alliance which France supports. Meanwhile, France is selling missiles to Iraq to sink Iranian ships."

"I guess you could lose your mind if you tried to keep track of whose side you're on in the armaments business."

"The Iraqis used the missiles they bought from France to hit a U.S. Navy ship despite the fact that the U.S. is helping Iraq in its war with Iran."

"I expect terrorists are big customers of arms dealers."

"The best. And they're getting bigger all the time. For a while they just bought the stray case of machine guns here and a gross of hand grenades there. But now they're really upgrading their material and ordering designer weapons. As a result they have to be treated with respect."

"Do you have any restrictions on what you sell terrorists?"

"No, but we ask them to try to avoid using the stuff in their own country. There is nothing wrong with selling bazookas to the Japanese Red Brigade to shoot down planes in Rome, while the Italian terrorists blow up an air terminal in Tokyo. It is what is known as terrorist reciprocation."

"Every country seems to be selling arms to the people it considers to be its enemies."

"That's what makes the business profitable for us. The reason weapons are so plentiful is that when we have orders from both sides, we can make them so much cheaper. Take Lebanon, for example. There isn't a group in the entire country that won't buy everything we can provide. Every car bomb in Beirut has our name on it."

"And you don't feel guilty that you are playing a small part in fanning the flames of war?"

"No. We're for peace. The other day a man from Lebanon came into the store and wanted dynamite, detonators and a Volkswagen to blow up the headquarters of a medieval church. As I was wrapping the package, I happened to mention that that particular faction had purchased 1,000 mortars just the day before. He thanked me and bought a tank to knock out their mortars. If I hadn't brought this up, someone in Beirut might have gotten hurt. So we do a lot of good in this business. Unfortunately, no one ever hears about it, mainly because arms dealers prefer to keep their good deeds to themselves."

Mexican opposition leaders say ruling party stole election

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Opposition leaders today insisted the governing party stole the presidency, which final results gave to Carlos Salinas de Gortari by the slimmest margin in the Institutional Revolutionary Party's history.

The opposition won four seats in the 64-seat Senate, the Federal Election Commission said late Wednesday, releasing a week after the balloting vote totals it originally promised for election night.

The centrist governing party, known as the PRI, had not lost a presidential, gubernatorial or Senate race in its 59 years.

It was not yet known whether the PRI lost the two-thirds majority required for approval of constitutional reforms in the Chamber of Deputies, the lower house of Congress.

The PRI-dominated election commission said Salinas received 9.64 million votes, or 50.36 percent, far below the 70 percent the PRI has traditionally won.

Cuauhtemoc Cardenas of the leftist National Democratic Front was second with 5.96 million, or 31.12 percent; and Manuel J. Clouthier of the conservative National Action Party was third with 3.27 million votes or 17.07 percent. Two minor candidates accounted for the rest of the vote.

Of 38 million registered voters, 50.3 percent cast ballots, the commission said. Government and party officials initially described the turnout as larger than the 75 percent in 1982.

High turnout was one of the reasons they gave for the delay in releasing results so the low turnout gave rise to two theories: The 1982 turnout was inflated — or opposition votes were not counted this time.

Opposition representatives on the commission accused it of fraud and said the release of the vote totals was delayed so they could be doctored.

"It appears that there are two Mexicos," said Jorge Amador, a National Democratic Front supporter on the commission.

He said there is a modern Mexico where the federal electoral code is respected, honest results were posted and the victorious candidate is Cardenas, and a second, backward Mexico "in which the federal electoral code is not known, is not applied," and the the popular will was thwarted.

"In many garbage dumps and on isolated roads, in some rivers of the republic are flowing electoral material marked in favor of parties of the opposition," he said early today.

Amador's aides carried into the commission boxes of ballots, some of them partially burned and others he said they found in the streets.

He said the vote should be annulled in 10,000 of the more than 54,000 polling places because opposition representatives were denied access or ejected illegally.

Diego Fernandez de Ceballos of the National Action Party said: "We do not accept this election as clean...because there were violations of the law, because the (state) governors pressured voters, because the resources of the political power were at the service of the PRI, because the official and private television was for the PRI.

"For many reasons we believe that it has given the lie to democracy in Mexico," he said.

Jorge Alcocer of the Mexican Socialist Party, the largest leftist party and a supporter of Cardenas, said, "The delay in information meant increasing the votes of the PRI."

He said there were "countless maneuvers" to take away votes from Cardenas, including altering electoral rolls and changing ballots.

Interior Secretary Manuel Bartlett, who heads the commission, denied it delayed releasing results: "No one has ever hidden information in this process."

The results gave four of Senate seats, two from Mexico City and two from Michoacan, to parties supporting Cardenas, and 60 to the PRI.

The PRI won 249 of the 300 directly-elected seats in the Chamber of Deputies, the lower house of Congress. The National Action Party took 31 and parties supporting Cardenas took 20.

The remaining 200 seats in the chamber are assigned on the basis of proportion of the vote received, so the PRI will retain its majority. But it was not known how many of the 200 seats it would get.

Salinas has said he preferred a smaller but more credible victory to the PRI's traditional overwhelming margin.

Salinas, 40, as budget director under President de la Madrid, was the architect of the economic austerity program that eroded workers' buying power but allowed Mexico to keep up with service payments on its $104 billion foreign debt.

Cardenas, 54, son of the late Lazaro Cardenas, one of Mexico's most popular presidents, led a dissident movement in the PRI.

WORLD in brief

Suspected terrorist gets seven-month prison term

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A court today convicted a Palestinian believed linked to a terrorist attack on a Greek cruise ship of entering the country illegally and sentenced him to seven months in prison.

Dozens of police with automatic weapons stood guard at the Athens courthouse where Mohammed Rashid was tried before a three-judge panel. Plainclothes officers packed the courtroom.

"I am a member of the PLO and the Palestine Liberation Army. I was passing through Greece on a secret mission," Rashid, 34, testified.

"The Americans are trying to convince people the Palestinians staged the cruise ship massacre so that I would be released. This is not true," he added.

Rashid, 34, was accused of entering Greece May 25 with a false Syrian passport. Police believe gunmen planned to hijack the City of Poros cruise ship Monday in an attempt to free Rashid.

Nine people were killed and 98 wounded when terrorists opened fire on the ship with machine guns and hurled grenades.

In Bagdhad, Iraq, a spokesman for Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat said the group condemned the ship attack.

Liberian coup attempt foiled

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Liberian President Samuel K. Doe said his security forces Wednesday quashed a coup attempt led by his former second-in-command, church-owned Radio Elwa reported.

In a nationwide broadcast Wednesday night, Doe said his forces exchanged gunfire Wednesday morning "with what is believed to have been an invading force" at a Liberian border post in Nimba County in the north of the West African country.

The radio is operated by the Sudan Interior Mission, an interdenominational, international Christian mission.

The broadcast, monitored in Nairobi, quoted Doe as saying the force was led by J. Nicholas Podier Jr., described as vice head-of-state of the former ruling People's Redemption Council.

Doe, 36, was quoted as saying the attackers suffered some casualties, but he did not specify how many or whether Podier was among them.

The radio quoted Doe as saying 12 people were involved in the alleged invasion, but did not specify where in Nimba County, 350 miles north of the capital, Monrovia, the incident occurred. Nimba County shares borders with Guinea to the west and the Ivory Coast to the east.

Man barricaded in embassy

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Police said an Arab man pulled a gun and barricaded himself inside the Libyan Embassy today after employees refused to issue him a visa. Several employees were trapped in the building, authorities said.

Bonn police spokesman Hans Georg Classen said the man claimed he escaped from a West German prison.

"He told police he had broken out of prison in the federal republic (West Germany) and that he now wants to go to Libya," Classen said.

Classen said the man barricaded himself on the first floor of the building. Classen said the man took no hostages but that several employees were trapped on upper floors in the building, officially called the Libyan People's Bureau. He said he didn't know how many people there were.

200,000 rally in Armenia

MOSCOW (AP) — More than 200,000 people rallied in the Armenian capital of Yerevan to demand annexation of an Armenian enclave in neighboring Azerbaijan, and a strike today paralyzed many of the city's industries, sources said.

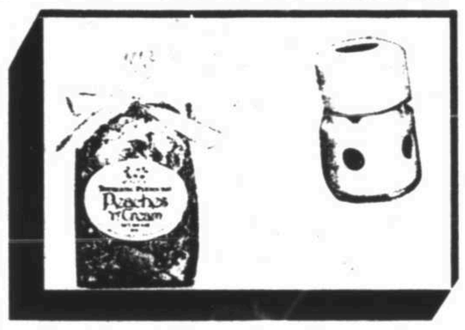

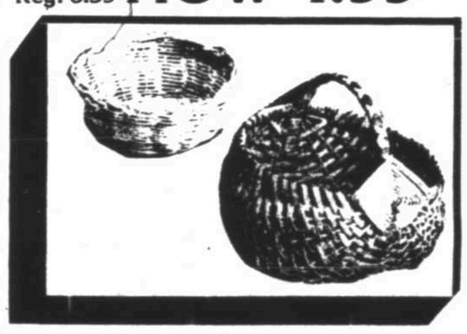

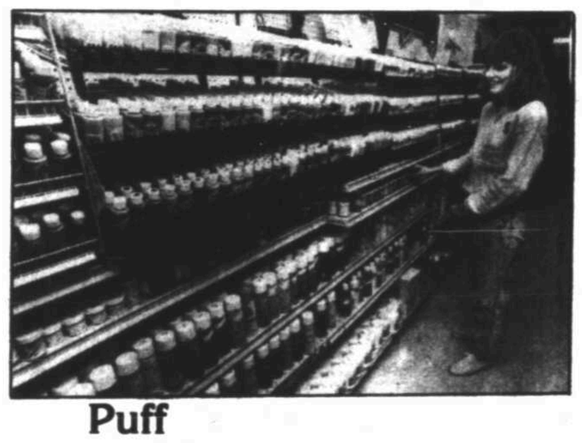

People took to the streets Wednesday night after learning that Azerbaijan's government had overridden Nagorno-Karabakh's decision to secede and join Armenia, Khovik Vasilyan, an Armenian activist said by telephone from Armenia.

Bangles (left) are for everyone! Petite, average-height and tall women can wear bangle bracelets. The tall woman has many options (top right): A choker necklace de-emphasises height, and stacked bangles give a moare balanced look to lanky ladies. A v-shape necklace (bottom right) elongates the look of the petite woman.

Jewelry looks that flatter you best

The key to choosing a fine jewelry wardrobe is to zero in on the styles of earrings, necklaces, bracelets and rings that flatter you best.

This requires a realistic, honest assessment of your overall body size and shape, and the size and shape of the body areas on which the jewelry will be worn.

Jewelers of America (JA), the national organization dedicated to consumer information and education about fine jewelry, advises that a little self-analysis, combined with a knowledge of how to play up your assets and minimize any flaws, will help you achieve a pulled-together, tasteful look that adds to the natural beauty you possess.

Although size is often relative to those around you, in most western societies a woman is classified at petite if she is 5'4" and under, average if she is 5'4" to 5'7", and tall if she is over 5'7".

Following is JA's advice for selecting fine jewelry to complement your body type, taken from the book, "Jewelry–How to Create Your Image" by Jorge Miquel.

■ Petite: Thin, average, full-figured–The petite woman must take more care when making fashion decisions with clothing or jewelry because she is small, and mistakes loom larger on her than on others.

Thin petite women, because of a more delicate bone structure, should choose collar length necklaces which do not fit too tightly but rest on the neckbone.

Bangle bracelets are best, as they don't emphasize the thinness of the wrist. Several narrow bracelets are more flattering than wider types, because they are more in proportion to the thin petite's overall size.

When it comes to earrings, the thin petite woman should concentrate on earrings that sweep up, angles that draw attention upward.

Average petite women should also select collar length necklaces, not chokers, which emphasize shorter necks. Necklaces with "v" shapes, and ones that fall below the breast but above the waist, elongate the figure.

Full-figured petite women should avoid round shapes altogether, especially button or round earrings. Sharp geometric shapes provide greater contrast, and more lines and and angles to attract the viewer.

Also, the full-figured petite woman should avoid tiny jewelry, even though she is petite. Full-figures will only be emphasized by the smallness. Select medium-sized watches, necklaces and bracelets.

When buying necklaces and bracelets, avoid pieces that fit close to the skin. A bangle is preferable to a cuff; a collar necklace looks better than a choker.

■ Average: Thin/Average, Full-figured–

Gold jewelry enhances tan

At the world's most famous resorts, from Malibu to St. Tropez and Capri, what's the most common element covering the masses of sun-worshipping women? If your guess is a string bikini, you're in for a surprise. The latest trend is to wear a subtle accent of karat gold jewelry to the beach!

As women the world over are taking it off to wear with the most minimal amounts of clothing this summer, real gold jewelry is the one essential they choose to enhance a glowing summer suntan.

Summer's fashions are more revealing than ever, from sexy off-the-shoulder knits, to daring midriffs and short, body-hugging mini skirts.

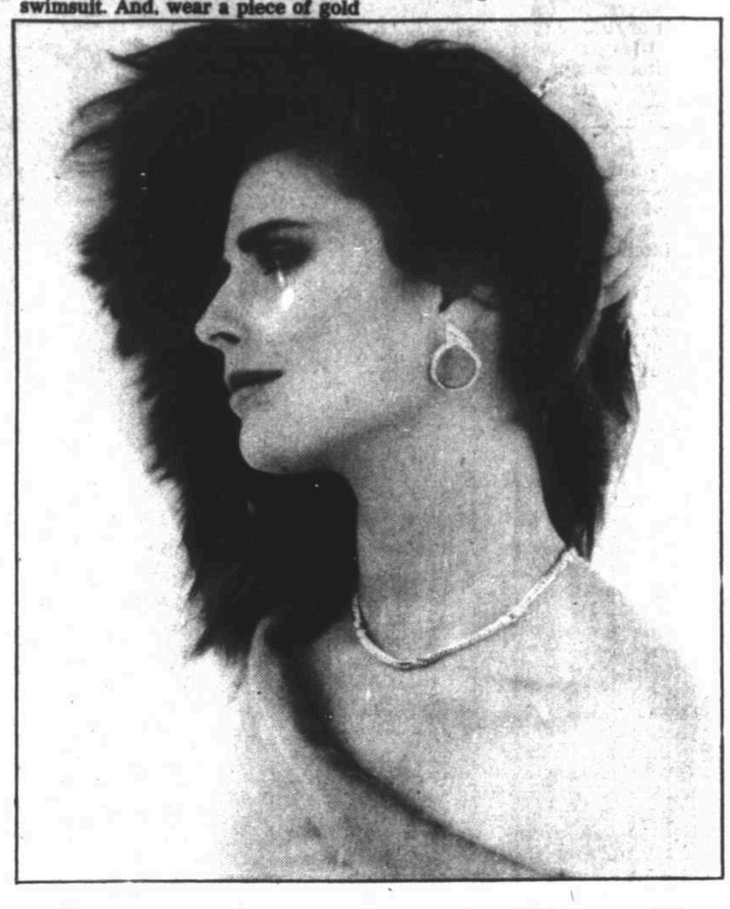

Just as racy are the barely-there swimsuits which range from the body wrap tube suit, to the cut-out maillot (in bather's terms, "monokini") and the sexy "thread" bikini.

"This is the year that women will bare all," commented Nancy Benson, fashion editor at Cosmopolitan. "Most of the swimsuits we're showing fit like a second skin, have plunging necklines and are cut all the way up to the waist."

To grace an open neckline, to add glimmer and glow to the wrists and ears, women can pick from their personal collection of gold jewelry basics to live in, day in and day out, all summer long. There are many new, interesting and inexpensive styles as well, to complement the ease and simplicity of the season.

For example, thin wire hoop earrings, perhaps with a dangling charm, or tiny gold star studs look sexy with windblown hair and a golden complexion. A link bracelet or necklace dotted with pastel semi-precious stones or several thin gold bangles worn stacked are all a woman needs to accent a pared-down wardrobe and lifestyle.

When packing for a seaside outing this summer, take along the bare basics: straw hat, towel, tanning lotion, swimsuit. And, wear a piece of gold jewelry–it will provide the right incentive to look and feel golden all season long.

To go with the ease and carefree spirit of today's summer living, beautiful karat gold jewelry appeals to women who want to look and feel their best.

Your eyes can become sunburned, too

Now that the summer days are becoming longer and warmer, our favorite outdoor sports are beckoning.

It's time to get out the shorts, sneakers, hiking boots, camping gear or fishing tackle. But, this year, don't forget one important piece of equipment that is often overlooked–a pair of good quality sunglasses.

Many active people don't realize that their eyes can sunburn, too. There is growing evidence that the sun's ultraviolet light is harmful to eyes, causing cumulative and irreversible changes in the lens of the eye.

Extended, unprotected exposure to ultraviolet radiation may cause eye problems such as corneal lesions, conjunctivitis or premature cataracts. But sports specs come in a bewildering array of styles and prices. How do you select the best pair for you? Experts recommend you consider the following w en purchasing a pair of sunglasse

■ Ultraviolet radiation–Sports sunglasses should eliminate all potentially harmful ultraviolet radiation.

■ Reflected glare– Most sunglasses generally darken light levels to varying degrees. While this is momentarily comforting to eyes, it is often unneccessary.

Your eyes have built-in mechanisms that automatically adjust to light levels. Most important is selecting a pair of sunglasses that eliminates reflected glare light through polarization.

That annoying little hangtag dangling over your nose is your best source of information. Find the hangtag that indicates "Polaroid Polarizing Lenses" and you've got a pair that not only screens out all potentially harmful ultraviolet rays, but blocks out up to 99 percent of reflected glare light.

Prescription eyeglass wearers can take advantage of one of the latest eyewear innovations: prescription eyeglasses that convert to polarizing sunglasses.

With some sunglasses, the wearer may simply flip the polarizing sunglass lens in place (rather than taking the time to change glasses) when he or she wishes to make monetary adjustments due to changes in light.

Finally, when choosing your sunglasses, you'll want a comfortable and fashionable frame. Today, it's possible to find great-looking sunglasses with good-quality lenses.

You'll not only be protecting your eyes, but–who knows?–you might just improve your performance. And who couldn't use that extra edge?

Ready to enjoy your favorite summertime sports? Don't forget one vital piece of gear–a pair of good quality sunglasses.

LOOKS

The women of average height can choose from a wide variety of pieces, because her height is neither a benefit nor a disadvantage.

Thin/average women can wear necklaces of any length, and earring choices are virtually unlimited. It is usually wise to select geometric shapes such as triangles, squares, and ovals, because they create added excitement.

Bracelets should be wider, rather than narrower, as they are more proportional to the average woman's size than thinner ones.

Full-figured average women should be especially careful not to draw attention to the breast line, and make sure not to wear too many necklaces, which also tends to emphasize the chest.

The women should select jewelry of medium size, not delicate pieces, because these will look out of proportion if they are too small.

■ Tall: Thin, average, full-figured–Tall women are the most versatile group of all when it comes to wearing clothes and accessories, being able to carry off looks that would overwhelm other women.

Thin tall women may de-emphasize their height (because it accentuates their thinness) by wearing choker necklaces, which cut the line of the neck. Necklaces of pearls or semi-precious beads all the same size, instead of graduated, work best for this effect.

Average tall women generally have plenty of space between earlobe and shoulder, thus, they are able to wear any earrings except tiny buttons, which would be lost. Long pendants and dangling earrings are especially flattering to tall women.

Similarly, because her neck is often long, and there is a long area between neck and waist, the tall woman can wear almost any length necklace, depending on personal preference. And, she has a wide range of bracelet choices, with the exception of delicate pieces, which would look awkward. Wider or stackable rings enhance longer fingers.

Full-figured tall women should wear multiple thin or a couple of thick bracelets to give a heavier overall feeling. When selecting a necklace, the full-figured tall woman should avoid oversized beads, which could make the neck seem fuller. Rather, she should look for loose and tapering beads of medium size.

Whatever your body proportions, there are fine jewelry styles to suit your "look," while at the same time flattering your best features.

Jewelers of America advises that you visit your local jeweler, who has a wide array of styles and designs from which you can choose, and you can try them on to be sure they complement you!

Before you buy, you may want to read up on the many facets of fine jewelry. JA will send you a series of 11 brochures covering diamonds, karat gold, pearls, colored gemstones, sterling silver, etc., free of charge. Simply write to them and request the "What You Should Know About..." series: Jewelers of America, Inc., 1271 Avenue of the Americas, Dept. MNS, New York, NY 10020.

Selecting a child's summer wardrobe for $175

Hot weather is here, and you've noticed that your child needs a completely new wardrobe to beat the heat. don't panic.

Here's a workable wardrobe list for a boy and girl, some shopping advice, and summer activity suggestions for your child.

A good basic wardrobe will be suitable for a variety of summer activities, comfortable for your child, and easy to care for.

GIRLS

1 short and shirt set
4 pairs shorts
7 tops
1 long-sleeved top
1 pair jeans
1 fleece outfit
1 jacket
2 swimsuits
1 pair pajamas
7 pairs socks
1 pair sneakers
1 pair sandals

BOYS

5 pairs shorts
7 tops
1 long-sleeved top
1 pair jeans
1 fleece outfit
1 jacket
2 swim trunks
1 pair pajamas
6 pairs socks
1 pair athletic shoes
1 pair fun sneakers

All items on the list were coordinated and selected in the boys and girls 4-6x range, according to a children's fashion industry spokeswoman. Each complete wardrobe retailed for $175, on the average.

Other miscellaneous items useful for kids going off to camp this summer are: stationery, flashlight, pen, wallet, hairclips, adhesive strips, bug spray, shoelaces, sunglasses, suntan lotion and a knapsack or lunch box.

"It's also time to start planning activities to fill your child's summertime fun," says Dr. Joan Bergstrom, author of "School's Out--Now What?" "Long summer days can turn into boring summer days for a child who doesn't have interesting things to do."

She notes that about 80 percent of a child's waking time is spent out of school during afternoons, weekends and vacations.

Dr. Bergstrom suggests thinking ahead about your child's summer by tuning into activities of interest, locating community resources, and developing a plan. In addition, newspapers often publish daily or weekly calendars of upcoming local events.

Some questions she has developed which can help a parent zero in on the child's interests are:

- If you could do anything this summer, what would it be?
- Do you want to learn how to do something new?

Summertime is your child's time to day dream, to get into mischief, to swim, to explore, to shoot baskets and to fly kites.

Fun summer fashions that are easy to care for and suitable for a variety of summer activities are pictured above.

Women's office wear targeted for success

Associated Press

The ultra-short skirt may be the height of fashion, but it is off-limits as office wear for women dressing for success.

That was the consensus of a panel of hard-working but high-style women executives whose opinions appear in an article in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar discussing wardrobe do's and don'ts for working women.

Pants also came under fire.

"I doubt that women who work on Wall Street, in law firms and men-oriented businesses will be wearing pants or short skirts," said Christy Ferer, who heads Vidicom Productions and also covers fashion for NBC's "Today" show.

"I think these fall in the same category — pants and skirts of above 19 inches. You're not likely to see a lot of pants or short skirts on women making deals."

Short skirts were vetoed by several panel members, including Ivana Trump, chief executive officer of Trump Castle Hotel and Casino.

"It depends on the business," she said. I'm in a business totally dominated by men. I have 4,000 employees and out of those 3,500 are men. If I came in wearing a skirt that was only 15 inches long, I would lose my credibility.

"When I have a meeting with the finance committee vice presidents and we're talking millions of dollars spent here and there, I don't think you can come in with a very short skirt."

She described her skirts this way: "I go short, but I don't go too short."

Elsa Peretti, who has designed jewelry exclusively for Tiffany's since 1974, spoke of very beautiful young girls who looked fantastic in short skirts, but added:

"Of course, it would be terrible to have them in the office because everyone will look at their legs. But they look really great."

Carolyne Roehm, formerly with Oscar de la Renta and now head of her own design house, agreed that women executives who weren't 18-year-olds should not wear ultra-short skirts.

"But it's such a sad commentary for those young women on Wall Street who have this fixation that they have to dress so conservatively," she said.

"It's a question of corporate culture," said Susie Tompkins, co-founder and design director of Esprit de Corps clothing. "You have to look at where you work. And in my company it would be very inappropriate to be overdressed, to wear corporate clothing to work."

Hilary Weston, director of Canada's Holt Renfrew department store chain, voted against pants in sales jobs, but predicted: "Pants are going to be really popular because women can't make up their minds whether to wear long skirts or short skirts."

Several of the executives deplored the American career woman's lack of fashion self-confidence.

"The European woman can just wear a black sweater and skirt at any age so much better than the majority of American women," said Lee Radziwill, a mainstay at Giorgio Armani, "and that doesn't take time to put together. That's the confidence again."

European fashion tips

The Europeans still seem to be enamored with American lifestyle dressing. Trendy Europeans are influenced by two very different styles, the West Coast surfer look and the East Coast yuppie country club look.

Golfwear for the preps and surfwear for the beachniks were very strong statements at ISPO, Europe's sport fashion shows.

There were very interesting interpretations of tennis attire using matte with sheen, and also frosted pastels.

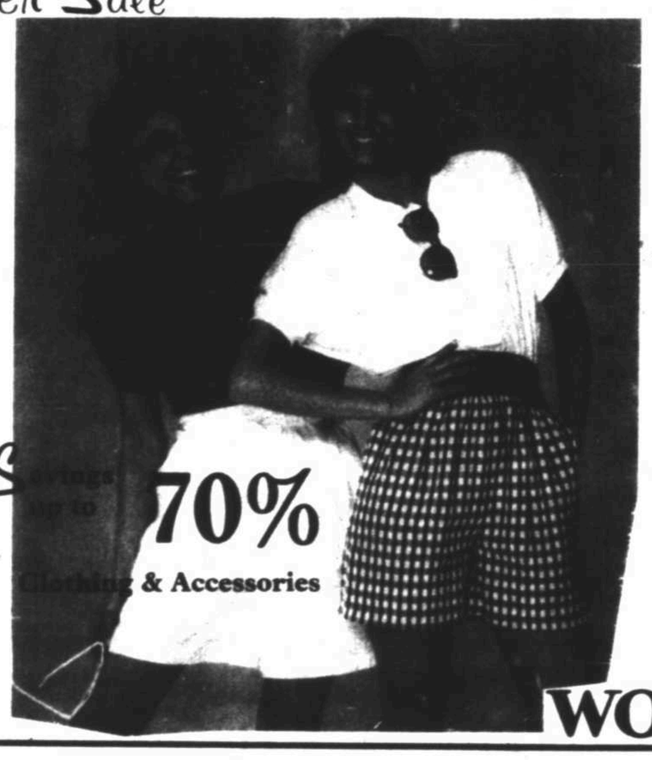

Jogging apparel used new woven high tech nylons.

The strongest statement that came out of ISPO was walking apparel as real active sportswear. The big safari looks and the military looks were very strongly featured in the walkwear category.

The season's major color statements were purple, in all shades, khaki and the citrus category, orange, red and yellow.

Cruise collections: Between-season flair and a growing market

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times News Service

Hemlines bare the knees. Cotton, upgraded for warm weather, and silk and lightweight wools are the major fabrics. Lively colors like turquoise, yellow, and orange-red are upstaging tradi tional black and navy.

These are the major fashion developments in the cruise collections that many European designers have presented in their New York showrooms in the past month. They are shown without the hoopla and excitement of the major showings for fall-winter and spring-summer. In these businesslike presentations, retail executives arrive with order books and choose their styles immediately after the show.

Some cruise collections consist of 20 to 30 styles, while others contain as many as a hundred pieces. They cover a variety of fashion needs, but a majority of styles are simple daytime clothes that can be worn to work. Prices are $300 to $2,000.

The name "cruise" is a convenience and an anachronism, re calling the time when affluent women from the colder parts of the United States took midwinter vacations in southern resorts. American manufacturers regularly showed collections they called "cruise and resort" wear, which served to preview their summer collections. It was well known that the best swimsuits appeared in the cruise collections. Designers were in a more experimental mood than when they designed their summer groups.

When French and Italian designers first established toeholds in this country for their expensive ready-to-wear some 20 years ago, the concept of cruise collections was unknown to them. For Europeans, midwinter vacations meant trips to ski resorts.

But as they established niches in department stores as well as independent shops, European designers discovered a void between the fall and spring seasons. Fall stock was pretty much picked over by October; spring styles would not arrive until January. Nature abhors bare racks.

The development of this country's Sun Belt played an important role in the development of cruise lines, too, since women who lived there needed lightweight clothes year round.

About seven or eight years ago, some European designers began developing special collections to be shipped to stores in November. As they got the hang of what styles were needed, sales soared. What began as an American venture succeeded also in warm places like Singapore and Hong Kong and is gaining ground in Europe.

"It began as an American venture," explained Kitty D'Alessio, the vice chairwoman of Chanel, which has been showing cruise collections for about six years. "Today, 70 percent of our business in stores in the South and Southwest is based on this col lection. In places like Hawaii, Florida, and Texas, it is one of the most important collections of the year. But the idea is growing: we are getting wonderful response from places like Singapore and the Far East."

The emphasis in Chanel's cruise collection is on the classic Chanel look in pastel tweeds and knitted fabrics with lots of signa ture gold buttons and chains. While the designer Karl Lagerfeld has recently extolled longer or calf-length hemlines, skirts in this collection clear the knees. Alternatives are wide-leg trousers and skinny silk knit bicycle shorts. The few ankle-length skirts are mainly for late day.

Lagerfeld offered a few more calf-length styles in his cruise collection for Fendi of Rome. The best of these are pleated and in linen. Of equal interest are easy trousers cropped above the ankles, shown in solid colors or with blouses or jackets in the prevailing print patterns: daisies or cherries.

Giorgio Armani has always favored trousers, which he pairs with his cool, collarless jackets and soft silk shirts for warm-weather versions of the fashionable working woman's wardrobe. He also likes shorts, the same length as his knee-grazing skirts. But his narrow shift dresses in crepe or linen are commendable for their fresh, uncluttered look.

Valentino offered two extensive collections, both expressing his slick, fashionable approach. Valentino Night emphasizes polka dots, off-the-shoulder necklines, wide pleated pants, and snug suits for most evening occasions. Valentino Boutique in cludes sweater sets, pleated skirts, and flower prints as it focuses on day fashions.

The sexy fashions by Emanuel Ungaro fairly sizzle in closely draped dresses, peplums that round the hips below snug waist lines, pale suede skirts in colors like peach and mustard, and his familiar combinations of mixed flower prints. Still, there are some styles in this lively collection, mainly suits, that could be worn to the office.

Small polka-dot handbags, printed shoes, and striped belts are especially attractive accessories in the Genny collection, carry ing out the good-humored spirit of the clothes.

Christian Dior's cruise clothes are young and snappy, typified by a cotton ottoman curvy jacket with a matching skirt in mango, daisy-printed chemises or floating evening dresses in sheer silk and shapely cloque shifts with big sleeves or tiered jackets.

Jean Muir, the British designer, has entered the cruise sweepstakes for the first time. Pastel cashmere sweaters and navy silk polka-dot separates are her best styles.

"It is a tremendously important season for us," said Lynn Manulis, president of Martha, which has shops in Palm Beach and Bal Harbour, Fla., and New York. "We do 30 percent to 40 percent of our business on cruise."

Aussie hats trendy in United States

By RICHARD BILL

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — In outback Australia, where the climate is harsh and the sun unrelenting, the akubra hat is a must. Cattlemen, or stockmen, wear them for protection like cowboys in the old Wild West wore a Stetson.

Now, akubras have become a fashion accessory, but back at the ranch the men are complaining hats are in short supply.

"We can't make enough hats," said Stephen Keir, whose great-grandfather Benjamin started the akubra family business in 1911, the hats getting their name from the aboriginal word for head covering.

Keir, whose 140 employes turn out 8,000 akubras a week, said demand for the wide-brimmed felt hats showed no sign of falling off.

"Three years ago we were producing half that amount," Keir said in an interview. "Now the factory is planning to raise production to 10,000, and even that's not enough."

The akubra craze is big down south, particularly in New South Wales, the country's most populous state, and in Sydney, where 3.3 million people live.

The renaissance in outback clothing includes oilskin trench coats marketed under the brand name "Driza Bone" and boots produced by well-known "bush" personality R.M. Williams, a former camel driver.

The popularity of such attire seems tied up with ongoing bicentennial celebrations marking the pioneering beginnings of European settlers.

Akubras got a boost in the United States when Prime Minister Bob Hawke bet his for President Ronald Reagan's Stetson on the outcome of the America's Cup.

Hawke lost his hat.

Golfer Greg Norman, known as the "Great White Shark," reputedly earns $740,000 U.S. to don one when he plays and Paul Hogan wore one in his box office hit movie, "Crocodile Dundee."

Akubras retail for about $45 U.S., the coats for $104 U.S. and boots for $33 U.S. — an inexpensive wardrobe by today's standards but better suited to the great outdoors than the city.

Keir also traces the surge of interest to a "new national pride" brought on by a "Buy Australia" campaign.

Summer swimwear colorful, provocative

By NANETTE WISER
Copley News Service

Did you see that girl? She has an orange nose, a lime-green bikini wetsuit and a lemon-yellow portable stereo.

The beach will look like a sherbet stand this season. Swimwear for men and women is kicky, Hawaiian and colorful.

What was once the domain of surfers — neoprene wetsuit material — now shows up in bikinis in hot colors such as magenta, banana yellow and riotous blue.

Cover-ups that match your bathing suit, especially miniskirts, go to the beach as well.

Even the bikini has taken a new twist. Today, a cropped tank top and a high-waisted panty, with a wide band of color at the waist and under the bust, is hot.

And gold lame has gone from lingerie to lingering poolside in the shape of a bathing suit. In fact, lingerie and lace are really big on the beach scene for women.

Retro suits from the Marilyn Monroe film days are just as big for women as beachside athletic wear. Soft options for the shore this season include scalloped or ruffled cotton tap pants and peasant-style off-the-shoulder midriff tops. Eyelet cotton and crinkled checkered looks are big, too.

The final touch? A tier of ruffles at the back or a bow at the tailbone for a come-hither look.

Men are wearing longer, more aloha-style swimwear, done up in colorful floral or geometric patterns that flow loosely almost down to the knee. Cool cotton and neoprene shorty wetsuits have taken the place of nylon huggy swim trunks.

Hats for the beach are just as fun as swimsuits this season. From visors to safari hats, you can protect your hair from demoisturizing sun rays. There are also sunscreen styling aids for hair, such as Sunbrella Sun Protection Hair Spray by Pantene and Sun Survival Styling Mousse from Philip Kingsley.

Why not gather little bits and pieces of your hair in terry ponytail holders to match your suit and cover-up? After a few hours, undo for a cascade of waves as delicate as the sea.

And don't forget your summer beach feet, ladies. Treat toes to a French pedicure and when it dries, dust your feet with talc for all-day coolness.

Got the suit and the look in hand? Good. Now you need the toys and accessories that make a day at the pool or beach just perfect.

Start with a cooler, a soda holder, your favorite fruit juice and fruit. Then add from this list compiled by Seventeen magazine:

Plucky pith helmet to keep rays from your hair.

Kooky earrings to say it's you.

Offbeat beach towel with comic strip print.

Sleek red-and-white striped sling chair in its own tote bag.

Red canteen to hold 20 ounces of watermelon juice.

Multicolored beach-ball shoulder bag.

Goggle-like sunglasses.

Your favorite romance or detective novel.

A portable cassette stereo and books on audio.

Wild white sandals with leather straps and rubber soles.

This summer's swimwear is kicky, comfortable and colorful.

Maintenance of skin important in summer

Summer's carefree atmosphere encourages us to spend more time outdoors in the sun and heat–we feel somehow healthier and more alive as our spirit reawakens from the winter doldrums.

However, time spent on the beach and at the pool, long walks in the sunshine and even leisurely picnics on the grass on hot days, can all take their toll, as the sun and heat can sap the skin of its moisture and elasticity.

Barbara Kotikoff, a fragrance industry expert, offers the following tips on preventive maintenance for healthy summer skin:

■ Moisturize, moisturize, moisturize: After every bath or shower–busy as we are–this is a must to ensure that skin keeps its healthy resiliency throughout the summer.

■ Look for body lotions which are specifically formulated with collagen and elastin for increased cell renewal rate to help skin maintain its natural elasticity.

■ To avoid "scent clashes," use a body lotion that matches your fragrance. Look for those which are rich in perfume oil, they'll hold the scent longer.

■ Apply body lotion while skin is still slightly damp, to hold moisture against the skin, keeping it softer and reinforcing the scent.

■ Don't be stingy! Apply body lotion lavishly all over. Good ones are light enough to be absorbed by the skin quickly, and won't feel greasy.

■ Since more skin shows in the summer, don't forget your knees and elbows. Make sure your feet look their best in sandals and your nails show off frothy summer polishes to their best advantage by applying extra body lotion to feet and hands before bed, then sleeping with socks and cotton gloves on.

■ To counteract gravity's downward pull on skin, always apply a body lotion with upward strokes, starting at the feet.

A classic silk tee shirt will complement every woman's wardrobe, whether her tastes are traditional or trendy, and can be worn, day or evening, with a wide variety of clothing from suits to sportswear.

Oilfield worker downplays his heroic efforts

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Tony Vickery of Odessa doesn't believe in hero worship — especially when it's directed his way.

The drilling supervisor of Mobil Producing & Exploration Services Inc. discounts his importance and the role he played last year in saving the life of co-worker, Lester Heuring of Andrews.

However, officials with the American Petroleum Institute believed differently and awarded Vickery its Meritorious Safety Award for his heroic efforts.

Vickery received the award this week at a dinner given in his honor at the Midland Petroleum Club.

"In a situation like this you try anything," Vickery said of the accident, which occurred Oct. 13, 1987, just as he was driving up to the Cardinal Well Service Rig 102.

"It (the award) was great, but I think the greatest thing was that we were able to revive Lester," he said.

Although Vickery has completed several hours of safety training, he confessed that he'd never put his life-saving skills to the test prior to the accident last fall.

Heuring was completing a well installation project when he was overcome by deadly hydrogen sulfide gas fumes, lost consciousness and fell to the ground and stopped breathing, Vickery said.

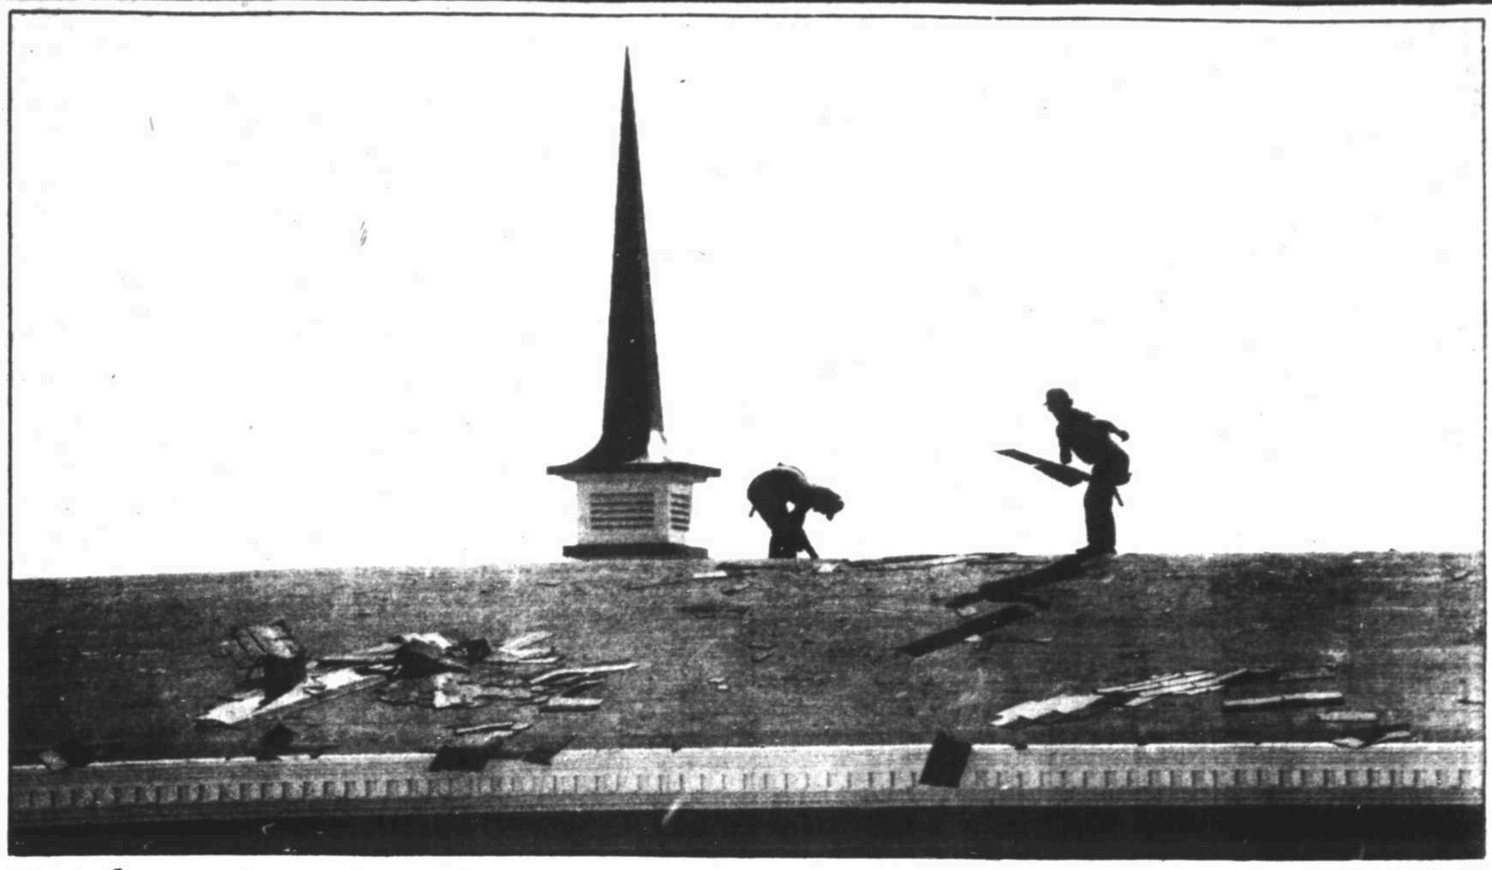

A colorless gas, H2S is a poisonous and potentially toxic substance that is known to numb the sense of smell when inhaled. H2S is associated with large oil and gas formations in the West Texas area.

"Lester's main problem was that he was working downwind," said Vickery, who was supervising the drilling project and administered artificial resuscitation, enabling his coworker to breath on his own.

Eugene Hyde, the tool pusher on the rig, immediately transported Heuring to a local hospital where he was kept overnight for observation, Vickery said.

"He (Heuring) was overcome by the fumes as he was removing the blow-out preventer from the well head. He passed out and he wasn't breathing.

"I just assisted in helping move him away from the well head," he added.

Men sit 'round the table, trading barbs, shooting the breeze

By ANDREA LAMB

HEREFORD (AP) — A long-standing tradition of Hereford sits idly in the corner of the Ranch House Cafe where the coffee and the bull are flowing freely even before the chickens get up.

It's not the kind of thing you put in a chamber of commerce pamphlet, but the circular formica table represents a kinship for the men who station themselves around the table each morning, discussing politics, weather, farming, or betting on who's paying for the breakfast.

The Roundtable is divided into two shifts — one for the really brave at 5:30 a.m., and one at 7 a.m.

Billy Wall, a veteran of the 7 o'clock shift, says he's been coming to the Roundtable for eight or 10 years and "there's times it gets so sticky and gets a little deep that you can't come back for a few days."

Tom Draper, who's been ambling to the table since the cafe opened in 1963, is loosely considered the kingpin of the Roundtable.

"When Tom's gone, and he rarely is, we don't have much to talk about," said Emory Brownlow, one of the more vocal members of the 5:30 a.m. shift.

"Tom eats that every morning — one scrambled egg, gravy toast and tomato..."

"And plenty of grape jelly — nothing but grape jelly unless it's grape wine," chimes in Leroy Wood, who starts barbing Draper about his grape growing business.

"Why don't you tell 'em about your wine makin'? Let's get this out in the public," shouts Brownlow to Draper.

Draper, a member of the Church of Christ, which does not condone alcohol, concedes defeat and scrunches his shoulders, laughing with a hoot.

Draper, wearing a pair of his Osh-Kosh overalls and a straw hat, quickly turns the table on Wood and asks, "Why don't you tell that girl how long you've owed me and Argen (Tom's wife) a big thick steak?"

"For one month longer you've owed me one," retorts Wood.

Spicer Gripp intervenes at this point to explain that Draper and Wood have a running bet on the first frost day of the year. Wood matched four steaks to Draper's four steaks this past year, Wood lost and hasn't had the money to pay, according to Wood.

"Whatever happens the wives is gonna win," says Draper. "That don't take any hide off their backs to sit there and eat those steaks."

According to Brownlow, gambling is one of Draper's favorite hobbies, who loves to match quarters with people at Hereford State Bank and Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative each day.

"He can't afford to buy a piano for the church but he can afford to gamble," says Brownlow, taking another jab at Draper.

"Tom, my voice is such we don't need a piano."

The mention of church and gambling quickly springs a story in Draper's mind which is crammed with thousands of tales stored over the years.

The one he introduces concerns an old church member who loved to gamble.

"One Sunday morning we got a new minister in up there and I guess he heard about ole Cecil's gamblin'. He hit that pulpit and he said 'It's not whether you win or lose, it's the influence.' He was layin' it on and tryin' to get Cecil's attention, I looked around at Cecil to see how he was takin' the heat and he was sound asleep," says Draper while the entire table cackles.

As sure as the sun rises in the east, a conversation at the Roundtable would not be complete without a good left hook to the Republican Party.

Draper, who drives a '50s model pink Plymouth Savoy with the sign "Republicans put me in this car," always determines a man's political affiliation before he will eat with him.

Police try to make the hurt more bearable for children

ARLINGTON (AP) — During a recent evening roll call, each of the Arlington Police Department's patrol officers received an assignment, picked up a teddy bear and hit the streets.

The officers are arming themselves with the stuffed bears to give to frightened or hurt children they may encounter in the line of duty.

"Normally it's an intimidating situation when you come into contact with a kid because of the equipment you carry, the patrol car, the uniform, the cage and shotgun," police spokesman Dee Anderson said. "It'll be nice to give them something to hang on to that can really calm them down."

The teddy bear program, proposed by members of the Arlington Pre-School Parent Teacher Association and approved by Police Chief David Kunkle, encourages officers to give the teddy bears to children who are lost, children injured in car accidents, children caught in the middle of domestic violence and children who are the victims of abuse.

PTA members who organized the teddy bear drive read about a similar program in Washington, said Mary Leen, PTA vice president in charge of community service.

Officers in Washington and Colorado who have been giving teddy bears to children under a similar program have reported good results, Anderson said.

"The response has been surprisingly good from the officers. They really seemed to be excited," Anderson said.

Officer Joe Chavez liked the idea so much he gave bears to two sisters who had been in a car accident he worked the previous week.

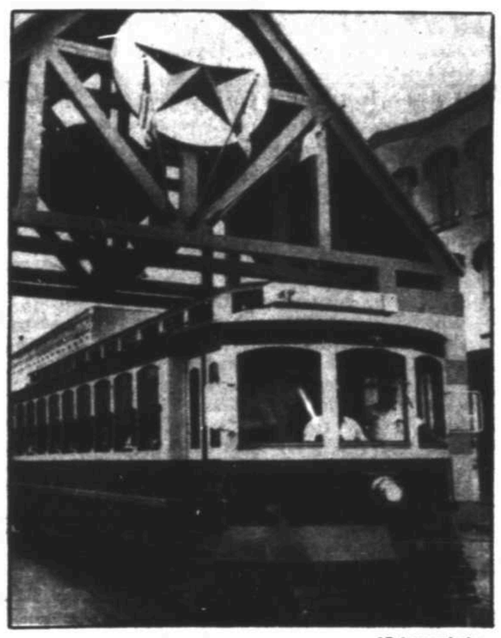

The girls, 4 and 1, were in a van with their mother when she drove into a stalled dump truck. The mother was trapped in the van for 30 minutes and the older girl had a cut on her lip and was bleeding, Chavez said. The baby was not injured but both children were very upset, he said.

"It gave me an opportunity to go see the kids and show we were interested in the welfare of the family and show them that we care about them," Chavez said. "I've got a little 2-year-old, my own little girl, and when you get out here and see these things it just kinda gets you."

PTA member Kathy Oszustowicz said her daughter Alice, 3, gave police officers eight of the "tons" of nearly new bears that decorate the toddler's bedroom.

"I told her a story about how some children are very hurt or very sad and suggested she give some of her bears," Ms. Oszustowicz said.

PTA members have distributed 250 bears and hope to gather 1,000 bears in the continuing drive. They also said they may expand the program to include the fire department and ambulance service, Ms. Leen said.

Cooley sees no reason for people to continue using tobacco products

By LORI RODRIGUEZ
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — If Houston heart surgeon Denton Cooley had his way, tobacco would be eliminated from the United States.

"I see no reason for people to keep using a substance that has been proven to be so deleterious to them," Cooley said Wednesday.

Even tobacco companies have begun to see the handwriting on the wall, he said, as court judgments have gone against them, more people have kicked the habit and cigarette firms have been forced to diversify.

Cooley called cigarettes one of the three major risk factors in heart disease — along with hypertension and cholesterol — expected to contribute to an estimated 1.5 million heart attacks among Americans this year.

About a third of those attacks will prove fatal, he said.

"Many people today are concerned about the recent epidemic of AIDS," he said, "but it can't compare with the epidemic of heart disease that already exists."

Despite the large role heredity still plays, Cooley told about 650 members of The Forum Club of Houston they can do plenty to keep from becoming a statistic: quit smoking, eat healthy meals (like the chef salad and fruit luncheon served at the meeting), limit sugar, salt and fat, exercise more, avoid stress, and maintain a normal weight.

And they can buy his book, Cooley joked as he held up a copy of his newly published "Each Mark for a Healthy Heart."

"Many of you know I've suffered a few economic reversals during the past year," Cooley said, amid much good-natured laughter. "Now I'm not one to go around peddling books, but ..."

MCH board approves increase in room rates

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An average 10 percent rate hike in the cost of Medical Center Hospital rooms and ancillary services will still leave the county-owned hospital's rate structure about "30 to 40 percent lower" than other area medical facilities, says MCH Administrator Sam Glenney.

Rate increases approved by board members, which become effective immediately, will boost the cost of a private room from $192 per day to $204.

The daily rate for a semi-private room will rise from $182 to $193 daily. The cost of an X-ray will increase from $55 to $64, while a complete blood test will go up to $27.80 from $24.40.

Without the increases, according to Glenney, MCH would suffer a year-end deficit projected at $180,000. The rate hikes should mean MCH will realize a surplus of about $355,000.

The rate increase is expected to generate total patient revenues of about $1.6 million for the remainder of the 1987-88 fiscal year.

As to the approved rate increases, MCH spokesman Frank Beaman said, costs at MCH, on average, will remain about 47 percent below rates nationwide.

The rate increase (at Medical Center Hospital) is expected to generate total patient revenues of about $1.6 million...

In addition to the rate increases, Ector County commissioners have been asked to allocate $1.8 million to MCH in the next fiscal year. Of that amount, $1 million would be earmarked for indigent care and $800,000 for purchase of hospital equipment.

The MCH board also approved creation of the position of associate administrator, who would be responsible for overseeing hospital operations. The position would pay $65,000 a year.

The position has been offered to Judi Guthrie, a consultant with Hospital Corporation of America, which has a management contract with the county to run MCH. Ms. Guthrie recently headed the HCA task force that helped prepare MCH to pass an inspection and retain Medicare eligibility.

As of today, Beaman said, no word had been received whether Ms. Guthrie would accept the position.

It's wise to consider ways to save water

Todd

When rains come and do a bit more than settle the dust, Midland seems prone to flood. And many folks seem to think that West Texas is in a monsoon season and has water to throw away.

Hardly.

Folks seem to forget that West Texas mostly is desert or, at best, is semi-arid country. That doesn't sound too harsh.

But the truth is, if an alleged absolute is to be allowed, the world and West Texas have no more water today than they had a century ago or a millennium ago.

What you see — and don't see — is what you've got.

Remember, as running water is swept down the streets and into the channels just to get rid of it as if it were rubbish, water is as precious as air. Water renews life. Much of life is water.

Of course, Midland doesn't want to be flooded following a hard rain or a drawn-out rain.

And neither does it really want to "waste" water, which is recycled by nature by way of rain.

As water runs down the streets, such as A Street, and out of sight, Midlanders would be wise to consider ways to conserve this precious resource.

For man to recycle wastewater is not all that farfetched and, indeed, is being done in this world.

Just because a consortium of West Texas cities is spending millions of dollars to develop another water source, Stacy Dam and Reservoir, that does not give anyone the right to treat water as if it were a disposable product. It is not.

Years ago, an Englishman proposed planting trees throughout the Midland-Odessa area and watering them with treated wastewater — effluent. Carried out, such a notion would greatly enhance this niche of West Texas.

Midland's Ed Vogler is on a campaign to glorify this bit of creation by planting trees.

And the funneling of precious water to these trees would be just one vital step in conserving water and preserving life.

Police hunting suspect in alleged sexual assault

From Staff Reports

Police Roundup

Police are searching for a masked man who broke into a 72-year-old woman's home early today and tried to sexually assault her before escaping with $400 cash.

According to police, the man broke into the central Midland home about 2:40 a.m. by prying open a back door with a screwdriver. He attempted to sexually assault her, and may have been armed with a knife, reports said.

The man then took $400 cash before he left the house through the back door, according to police.

The man was described as black and 5 feet 8 to 5 feet 10 inches tall. He wore a gray shirt and blue jeans, and had an afro haircut, according to the description. The victim also told police he wore some kind of mask during the episode, police said.

In other law enforcement developments, a 29-year-old Midland woman is in police custody and is expected to face drug charges after she was arrested during a routine traffic stop.

The woman was driving a vehicle in the 600 block of Cuthbert about 9:50 a.m. Wednesday when she was stopped by Officer Elias Hernandez. The officer was talking to a male passenger when Officer Jose Perez arrived at the scene. As Perez observed the woman, he saw her reach toward a piece of gauze bandage wrapped around her right wrist, and saw something hit the sidewalk.

On the sidewalk, the officer found a clear plastic bag containing 31 aluminum wrappers. The substance in the wrappers was field tested and found to be heroin.

The man was arrested on traffic violations, but was released on bond late Wednesday, police said.

In other reports, the Midland County Sheriff's Department Wednesday disclosed the recovery of stolen oilfield equipment valued at $30,000 and the identification of four suspects.

The equipment was stolen from Geo-Systems, 1501 W. Francis Ave. in Midland on June 30, according to reports. The equipment was recovered Wednesday after an investigation.

Four suspects have been identified in the theft, according to investigator Gary McGlaughlin, including two individuals already in custody on burglary charges.

Forecasters have all sorts of equipment to predict weather

By TOM BOONE

FORT WORTH (AP) — Forecasters for the National Weather Service station here have all sorts of sophisticated instruments, including a bank of hunk computers, to help predict the weather. They can call upon computer-generated graphs and maps and on their own expertise as meteorologists.

Or they can just stick their faces out the front door.

"Everybody knows it's gonna be hot," Skip Ely said with a shrug. Ely is meteorologist in charge and area manager for the North Texas forecasting office.

Indeed, as Texas joins other states in wilting under what has been described as the worst nationwide drought in 50 years, government weather forecasters vainly seek signs of relief from high temperatures and the repetitive predictions.

"This is kind of a slack time," Ely said.

So, since they're not challenged by tornadoes (which usually come in the spring) or hurricanes (which are more common in the fall) or the threat of winter storms, the 25-member office concentrates more on some fine details in the art of forecasting.

For instance, Ely debates aloud with himself whether to predict a 40 percent chance of rain out of an East Texas storm or merely a 30 percent chance.

Nearby, posted figures show the Dallas-Fort Worth area's rainfall totals to be 5.66 inches, or 34 percent below normal for the year. Wichita Falls is only 13 percent below normal, but Lufkin particularly was needing what the East Texas storm could provide. Rainfall there is 13.27 inches, 63 percent below normal.

Ely opts to go with a 40 percent chance for Lufkin.

"I have a wet bias," he said, which means he tends to lean toward predicting a higher probability of rain than does, say, Tommy Trimble, Ely's deputy, who has a "dry bias." Hence, Ely's nickname around the office: "Swamp Ely."

"Have you ever wondered how forecasters arrive at a probability of precipitation?" Ely asks. He explains the weather service formula this way:

"First you look at an area and figure what part of it will get rain. Let's say you think 50 percent of the area will get rain. Then you look at how confident you are that there will be any rain at all. Suppose you're only 50 percent confident that there will be rain. You multiply the 50 percent times 50 percent and get a 25 percent probability of rain."

Ely is working the "plain language desk" this particular day. His forecasts will go out to media throughout the North Texas area. Trimble is on the aviation forecasting desk, and Brad Fujii is on the local forecasting desk.

"Plain language" is something of a misnomer, because everyone in the bureau speaks a strange language.

A note taped to one of the "plain language" computer terminals reads: "The SKEWT's are being run at ABI again, so you should receive the run after 0130Z and 1330Z. I have added the RAOB MACRO to AEX for the morning fire weather forecast. It will run at 1280Z. This should be late enough to pick up the MAN and SGL products."

At one point Trimble expresses concern that the temperature is 89 and there isn't a cloud in the sky.

"I predicted we'd have cumulus clouds forming when it reached 88," he said. He is working at a computer terminal but also keeps watch out the window.

The 10th-floor federal building window not only serves as a source of light for the office, but occasionally reassures forecasters that they haven't lost their touch.

"Look there," Trimble said, pointing to a bit of fluff in the sky. "It's 90 degrees." Within minutes a dozen small clouds have formed, thus refuting the widely held belief that clouds come scurrying in over the horizon when no one is watching.

On the windowsill rests a rudimentary forecasting tool, a pair of binoculars, which Ely says are used mostly for getting close-up looks at storm clouds as they approach.

By far the most sophisticated piece of equipment is the bureau's computer, which automatically tracks weather balloons released twice a day from points as diverse as Stephenville, Longview and Lake Charles, La.

Lawmen say they did not cause man's death

HEMPHILL (AP) — The three Sabine County lawmen accused in the alleged beating death of a jail inmate Christmas night testified they did not cause the prisoner's death.

Jurors were scheduled to hear final arguments in the case today after testimony in the two-week-old trial ended Wednesday.

The three white officers — former Hemphill Police Chief Thomas Ladner, 41, and Sabine County deputies James "Bo" Hyden, 35, and Bill Horton, 58, — have denied they caused the blows that led to the death of Loyal Garner Jr., a black truck driver from Florien, La.

The trio is accused of violating Garner's civil rights. If convicted, they face up to life in prison.

Garner, 34, died Dec. 27 at a Tyler hospital, two days after allegedly being beaten while in the Sabine County Jail.

All three officers took the stand Wednesday, all denied causing Garner's death.

"You hit him on that side of the head and top of the head and other side of the head?" special prosecutor John Hannah asked Ladner.

"That is a lie," Ladner replied.

"How did he get the blows?" Hannah asked.

"I don't know," the police chief said. "I did not hit Mr. Garner but one time." And that blow, according to Ladner, was a glancing one because Garner held up his arms to defend himself.

Horton said he helped Garner off the floor and walked behind the prisoner from the jail's drunk tank to his cell.

"I still hadn't seen any cuts," Horton said. "I saw a little blood on the left side of his hair."

He said Garner was asked if he desired medical attention. "He said he didn't want to go anywhere with us, or something like that."

Hyden said he neither saw Garner strike Ladner nor Ladner hit Garner.

"Everything happened so quick," he said. "I didn't see him do anything but run at Mr. Ladner. I saw him go toward him with his arms out."

Hannah questioned both Hyden and Horton about the fact they left out the presence of blood in any of their written reports of the incident. Horton acknowledged it was a serious omission, but both said they were shocked when they learned later that Garner had been hospitalized and that his life was in jeopardy.

Hannah, who accused Ladner of being a "psychotic bully," also had Ladner re-enact the jail cell scuffle — with Hannah playing the part of Garner.

In other developments Wednesday, Hannah filed a motion with State District Judge O'Neal Bacon withdrawing all mistrial motions he filed earlier. Hannah refused to explain his action to reporters.

The officers were suspended after being indicted in Garner's death.

The three officers were scheduled to stand trial on murder charges this week in Tyler. But Smith County District Attorney Jack Skeen said the murder trial is scheduled for Monday.

Youth determined to grow into his space camp astronaut's suit

By MAX RIZLEY JR.

GALVESTON (AP) — Ken Macdonald's first space suit was just a little big for him — but he's determined to grow into it, someday.

Although at 10, Ken may seem a little young to be commanding a space shuttle, that's just what he did during a recent stay at the U.S. Space Camp in Huntsville, Ala.

In June, Ken was immersed for five days in the language and lore of the Space Age. He scooted around on a rocket backpack trainer, bounded in a lunar-gravity simulator, ate such delicacies as freeze-dried chicken and astronaut ice cream and launched a model rocket.

And he commanded the space shuttle Columbia.

Well, maybe this Columbia didn't really loft its crew into space; still, to hear the red haired student describe it, the flight was real enough.

Speaking with a test-pilot cool reminiscent of John Young or Bob Crippen at one of their post-flight press conferences, Ken told of his trip into a 185-by-185 mile orbit, strapped into the left-hand seat of a simulator with a control panel like the real shuttle's.

"There was a countdown," he said, explaining that — just like the Youngs and Crippens and Haucks in the big birds — there was a script to follow, a timeline that he and his crewmates had to adhere to. "We said a bunch of stuff, like 'Commander ready,' 'Mission Specialist 1 ready,' 'Mission specialist 2 ready,' and then we lifted off."

"Liftoff," he explained was accompanied by piped in rocket noises and video footage of an actual shuttle liftoff on a screen in front of them.

"We dropped the SRB (solid rocket booster, but then no proper astronaut would ever use a full name when abbreviations will do) after two minutes," Commander Ken said. "After nine minutes, we dropped the external tank."

Out their shuttle windows, the crew — Ken, his pilot, two mission specialists and two payload specialists — could see the Earth. "There was cloud cover over Florida and over India," he said.

While in orbit, the crew did pretend experiments with a telescope, glass-making and formation of rubber balls to be used on Earth in medical applications. They also had to deal with several glitches during the flight, little meanies thrown at them by the simulator's computer.

"We had a couple of malfunctions," the commander said off-handedly. "One with the ET (external tank) and one with a fuel cell. You would say, 'Houston, Columbia, we are having a malfunction."

The computer screen would tell them what the "malf" was, and offer solutions.

But it wasn't the malfunctions that worried the crew so much as the down-to-the-earth problem — indeed the bane of 10-year-olds the world over: "What was really scary, was we were being graded..."

But there was more than just the shuttle simulation; in fact, that only took up an hour of his time.

Ken and his crewmates built model rockets, decorated them with appropriate decals, loaded them with solid-fuel cartridges and launched them.

He also took a turn in the V5, a hovercraft-like device that uses compressed air to float its occupants just off the floor simulating the rocket powered manned maneuvering unit used in space. And the "moonwalker" was a long counterweighted beam that lets future astronauts bounce around in simulated lunar gravity.

Richards' speech lost by computer

AUSTIN (AP) — A draft version of state Treasurer Ann Richards' keynote speech to the Democratic National Convention was lost in a computer glitch.

"I don't trust machines and never have," Ms. Richards said.

The speech, which was about 95 percent complete, disappeared Tuesday while being revised by a speech writer for the Democratic National Committee. Working from earlier drafts and Ms. Richards' notes, speech writer John Sherman of Virginia reconstructed the half-hour address, and late Wednesday the speech was electronically transmitted to the Austin Democrat.

Ms. Richards began practicing her delivery Thursday in preparation for the Monday night address to Democratic delegates and a national television audience.

TABLE

"When you write down these names, write 'Democrat' right by them," said Draper pointing at the three men sitting at the table.

"Not all of us are Democrats, though," said Gripp.

"Well, you got to be patient and long-suffering. I think we'll have most of 'em come around, but it don't happen fast," Draper said.

Most of the conversation is one verbal punch after another, but Harvey Milton, an electrician who shows up at 7 a.m., swears that much of the time the men do more than just shoot the breeze.

"I've seen people at that table throw in $20s and $50s if a waitress' kid were sick and having trouble. They always come to help," said Milton.

Milton said the times when the Roundtable helps the waitresses balance with the flack the men give them.

"Tom loves to pinch the waitresses on the back of the knee when they pour his coffee," Brownlow said. "He gets half a cup of coffee," Brownlow said. "He gets half a cup of coffee each time they come around so he can pinch them."

Wood added with a laugh, "If we get a new waitress, they normally don't last very long."

Draper said, "All these ornery characters feel obligated to tip these girls well because we put them through the ringer."

The number of men who frequent the table total about 12, and most of them agree that their wives have a special fondness for the Roundtable, too.

"I think most of the wives like it 'cuz they can sleep good. They get us out of the way," Draper said.

More than leaving their wives in peace the men come for the food, the information and the company.

"I think the Roundtable is good for people like Tom," said Milton. "He doesn't have any kids and he just likes to talk."

The Ranch House Cafe Roundtable, according to Milton, isn't the only Roundtable in town. Every cafe has one, but the Ranch House Cafe Roundtable is Milton's favorite because the information is more up to date.

"They don't know what's going on at the other Roundtables," Milton said.

The Ranch House Roundtable has been on some shaky legs before. Brownlow can remember passing through four managements during his time with the table.

"The Roundtable is a floating situation," said Milton. "When the management closes the door, the Roundtable just moves. We go just about anywhere."

SMOKING

On Jan. 4, Cooley filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code after suffering deep reversals in real estate investments.

Bankruptcy documents showed he owned 2,500 shares of Philip Morris and 1,000 shares each of Loews and RJR Nabisco stock. These companies or their subsidiaries make cigarettes.

Cooley's business manager said an investment firm bought the stock for the surgeon's portfolio without his knowledge.

"If you read this book," Cooley told his audience, referring to "Health Marks," "it'll tell you that if it tastes good, you probably ought to spit it out."

Dukakis thinks Bentsen has more of 'right stuff'

By JOHN KING

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen

Sen. John Glenn

BOSTON (AP) — In the waning hours of Michael Dukakis' search for a running mate, it came down to two — John Glenn and Lloyd Bentsen.

And both, in Dukakis' mind, had the right stuff.

The two senators each offered Washington experience. Either would bring ideological and geographical balance to the Democratic ticket. Both have moderate to conservative voting records and both are well respected in Congress.

Glenn, the Ohio senator, the astronaut and hero, likely would deliver his state's 23 electoral college votes to Dukakis. Bentsen, the silver-haired Texas senator, the quintessential Washington insider, might help carry his state's 29 electoral votes.

On the negative side, neither is considered a dazzling campaigner. Both had made unsuccessful presidential bids, Bentsen's a short-lived venture in 1976 and Glenn's a failed 1984 effort marked by well-publicized disarray and a huge remaining debt.

As Dukakis prepared to make his choice Monday night, sources said, the focus essentially had narrowed to Glenn and Bentsen. But Rep. Lee Hamilton of Indiana and to a lesser degree Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee were still in contention.

Stacked up against Glenn, Bentsen emerged as the victor based on his Senate record and the strategic implications of his inclusion on the ticket, sources said, winning out over the heroic legacy of the Ohioan most had considered the favorite for the Democratic vice presidential nomination.

Dukakis aides also believe he is already a strong contender in the Midwest and that the key to the election is attracting Reagan Democrats back to the party.

As part of the detailed background checks directed by Dukakis confidant Paul Brountas, the campaign had compiled an unimpressive portrait of the 1984 Glenn presidential effort, which was in serious trouble even before Iowa's all-important caucuses. Several people involved in that campaign live in the Boston area and were easily accessible to the Brountas research team.

With Dukakis, his wife, Brountas and two top campaign aides assembled at Dukakis' kitchen table, the unanimous choice was Bentsen.

"If the pick is between two near equals, why not take the one that causes George Bush the most grief?" offered one senior Dukakis adviser. Bush claims Texas as his home state, and the choice of Bentsen by Dukakis was a deliberate effort to force Bush to invest time and money in a state he may have taken for granted.

Bentsen, as Senate Finance Committee chairman, plays a leading role in the chamber's handling of major legislation and this year alone has been a key figure in the consideration of trade and catastrophic health care bills.

"Both had the stature we were looking for, but Bentsen is more of a doer, has more accomplishments," another adviser said. "That was appealing to Michael."

Dukakis said from the outset of the search that his vice president would be an active player and trusted adviser, and Bentsen was seen in the Dukakis camp as fitting that role better than Glenn.

Dukakis himself hinted at that when explaining on Wednesday why he picked Bentsen to fill the ticket.

"I picked this man because in my judgment he had those qualities, the strength, character, the values, the experience that would be most helpful, not just in running and winning but in serving in office and putting together as fine an administration as we possibly could," Dukakis told a Capitol Hill news conference.

The choice of Bentsen also was partly attributed to the withdrawal of two attractive candidates from consideration: Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn and New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley.

With Nunn out of the running, speculation about a running mate from the South turned to Bentsen, Gore and Florida Sen. Bob Graham.

Graham, sources said, did not have the Washington and national political experience Dukakis sought, and Gore would prove a sensitive choice because Jackson was pushing for the No. 2 spot and had outlasted Gore in the presidential primaries.

That problem also dimmed the prospects of Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt.

Jackson has no government experience, and his flamboyant personality clashes with Dukakis' reserved nature.

Peace convoy's attorney says 10 vehicles crossed into Mexico

LAREDO (AP) — An attorney for the Veterans' Peace Convoy says ten vehicles in a peace activist group's convoy have crossed the Rio Grande into Mexico despite efforts by federal authorities to block the caravan's planned journey to Nicaragua.

Texas Rural Legal Aid lawyer William Beardall told a federal judge Wednesday that 10 vehicles crossed without incident although they were clearly identified as being with the convoy and were vehicles that federal agents had previously blocked from crossing the international bridge.

The U.S. Treasury Department has blocked the group's trucks from leaving the country on at least three different occasions, contending that taking the vehicles to Nicaragua would violate a 3-year-old trade embargo.

"In the last two days, 10 vehicles have crossed without incident and without (being) subject to being stopped," Beardall said. "All the vehicles are highly visible and many of those had been stopped previously."

Beardall's comments in federal court came during a hearing on a lawsuit convoy members filed against the government in an attempt to get apporoval to take the vehicles to Nicaragua.

Convoy members say they oppose U.S. government policies in Nicaragua, including the trade embargo and U.S. support for the Contra rebels fighting the leftist Sandinista government.

Attempts by the group to take the vehicles loaded with food and medical supplies across the border has led to standoffs with U.S. Customs officials, who have stood in the vehicles' paths.

Eight convoy members were arrested by Laredo police last Saturday when they refused to leave the roadway leading to a bridge toll booth at the Rio Grande. One of the men was arrested again early Monday when he attempted to drive across again.

U.S. Customs spokesman Charles Conroy in Houston said Wednesday he had an unconfirmed report that two of the vehicles had crossed, and added that the government had not changed its policy toward the group.

Violating the embargo potentially could mean fines of up to $50,000 and up to 10 years in prison, Conroy said.

"A vehicle can also be used to commit an act of terrorism," Justice Department attorney John Tyler said at the court hearing Wednesday.

U.S. Customs officials temporarily detained four of the group's trucks on June 15 when the convoy first attempted to cross the bridge.

The government's position is that the food and medical supplies qualify as humanitarian aid exempt from the Nicaraguan Trade Control Regulations, but that the vehicles are not humanitarian aid.

Convoy members have refused to sign forms agreeing to return the vehicles within 30 days.

The convoy is sending some 300 tons of aid by ship.

Council blasts CBS, mouse cartoon

DALLAS (AP) — A Mighty Mouse cartoon in which the superhero rodent sniffs a light-colored substance prompted the City Council to pass a resolution condemning CBS-TV, saying the episode is a positive depiction of drug use.

The resolution passed unanimously Wednesday was introduced by city councilman Charles Tandy, who said he noticed the possible drug use on an episode of "Mighty Mouse: The New Adventures" while he was attending a medical convention in Chicago three weeks ago.

"What else do people snort up their noses but cocaine," said Tandy, an anesthesiologist. "I know of only one other thing, and that's a type of medicine for asthma, but I don't think this was that."

No one at CBS' New York headquarters was available for comment concerning the council's actions, said a woman at the network's office who refused to give her name.

Tandy showed council members reproductions of cartoon cells in which Mighty Mouse sits around a campfire listening to friends' stories, then produces a powdery substance from inside his cape and sniffs it.

The cartoon superhero was first accused of overt drug use last month by the American Family Association.

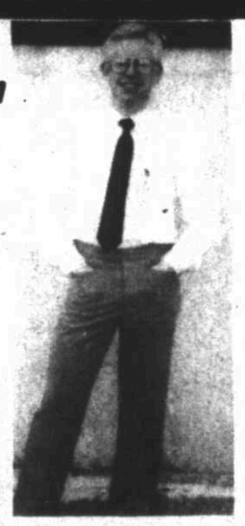

A letter to the group from CBS responded to the accusations, stating the character was enjoying a pink mass of crushed stems, tomatoes and flowers that a former girlfriend had given him. The network said there was "no change of mood or behavior' after the flowers reached his nose.

Tandy said he hopes to hear CBS' response to the council's resolution.

Question...If a previously painted surface has blistered or peeled, what preparation is necessary?
Answer...Remove all loose, scaly paint completely by wirebrushing and then sand these areas and dust clean. Spot prime sanded areas with a good primer. Previously painted surfaces in a lightly weathered condition should be sanded down to bare wood and then completely primed.

Question...Why does a new coat of paint sometimes not stick to the old one?
Answer...Inadequate surface preparation is the usual cause. If the previous surface is still glossy, the new paint may not adhere. This happens most frequently on protected, unweathered areas such as the surfaces under overhangs and ceilings of porches and carports. All such glossy surfaces should be washed and sanded. Since excessive chalking of the previous paint may also interfere with adhesion of the new paint, the chalky substance should be removed before repainting.

Pilot's wife says he's 'law-abiding'

EL PASO (AP) — The wife of the helicopter pilot who says he was forced to break three inmates out of a New Mexico prison maintains that her husband is a law-abiding man despite a private detective's claims to the contrary.

Charles "Cheater" Bella, charged by New Mexico authorities with aiding an escape and conspiracy in connection with Monday's unsuccessful jailbreak, was expected to be released on $50,000 bail today, said his wife, Carrol.

Bella has told authorities he was forced at gunpoint to fly his helicopter into the recreation yard of the State Penitentiary of New Mexico near Santa Fe and pick up three inmates.

On Tuesday, El Paso private detective Ivan Enriquez told the El Paso Herald-Post that Bella owned an airplane that was seized in Colombia by soldiers making a large drug bust.

But Mrs. Bella said Wednesday that Enriquez was lying, and that her husband tried to buy the twin-engine DC-3 after its seizure.

"There was nothing illegal about what Cheater was doing," she said.

Enriquez told police last week that Bella beat him up because of a dispute arising from the plane's attempted purchase.

Mrs. Bella said her husband suspected Enriquez was trying to bilk Bella out of $25,000 he gave Enriquez to buy the aircraft. The plane was seized more than a year ago after it landed illegally in Colombia, she said.

The plane was seized because it landed beside 12 tons of marijuana packed in bails, Enriquez said.

Bella, who collects airplanes and owns two helicopters, heard about the plane earlier this year, about a year after the seizure, Mrs. Bella said.

"The original owner of it said, 'If you can get it out, you can have it for however much it would cost to get it out,'" she said.

Bella asked Enriquez, who works for Bella's attorneys, to find a reputable lawyer in Colombia to work out the deal, Mrs. Bella said. Enriquez chose Carlos Escallion Villa of Bogota.

Escallion is a fugitive wanted in the United States, Phil Jordan of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration said.

"He is a significant international cocaine and marijuana trafficker," Jordan said.

Bella did not know Escallion until Enriquez started acting as a go-between, Mrs. Bella said.

Enriquez said he cabled $15,000 to Escallion to buy the plane. The remaining $10,000 was to be paid upon delivery, he told the Herald-Post.

Mrs. Bella said Enriquez told Bella about three months ago that the plane was ready to go. Bella went to Colombia with a co-pilot to fly the plane back to the United States.

"And there's no airplane," Mrs. Bella said. "People down there who supposedly know Ivan said they didn't know what Cheater was talking about."

Bella returned to the United States and gave Enriquez three months to come up with the plane or the money, Mrs. Bella said, adding, "$25,000 is a lot of money for people like us."

Last week, after the three-month deadline had passed with no word from Enriquez, Bella paid the detective a visit, when the alleged beating took place.

USFS officer won't be charged

LUFKIN (AP) — Charges will not be filed against a U.S. Forest Service officer who seized two eagle feathers from a Rainbow Family member during the back-to-nature group's gathering, a prosecutor said Wednesday.

"In my opinion, the Forest Service officers were engaged in legitimate law enforcement activities on federal lands in regards to confiscating the feathers," Angelina County Attorney Ed Jones said. "It looked to me that the minimum amount of force was used to confiscate the feathers."

Rainbow Family elder Kim H. "Neosho" Ramsay filed a complaint with the Angelina County Sheriff's department accusing U.S. Forest Service special agent Billy Ball of assault, theft and damage to religious and personal property.

The sheriff's department then forwarded the complaint to the county attorney's office.

Ball and other Forest Service officers seized the golden eagle feathers July 7 after a scuffle with Ramsay during a group's meeting in the Angelina National Forest near Zavalla.

Group members said the feathers were part of a religious ceremony to help decide where the group will gather next year.

Ramsay, who does not have a telephone, could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

STATE IN BRIEF

TDC nurse charged in alleged murder scheme

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Texas Department of Corrections nurse was charged Wednesday in an alleged scheme to kill her husband, who is a TDC lieutenant, authorities said.

Martha Fern Allen, 30, was charged with criminal solicitation of capital murder. Justice of the Peace John Pasket set bond at $50,000.

Huntsville Police Capt. Larry McDugle says no one was hurt, and a drug investigation led to Tuesday night's arrest of the woman, plus another TDC employee on drug charges.

Mrs. Allen, who worked at the Walls Unit in Huntsville, reportedly had been trying to find someone to kill her husband, John, who works at the Ferguson Unit in Midway, said McDugle.

TDC corrections officer Michel La Sage from Huntsville was charged Wednesday with felony delivery of marijuana. Pasket set bond at $10,000.

Both Mrs. Allen and La Sage remained in the Walker County Jail.

Magazine loses lawsuit

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has let stand a lower court ruling dismissing a malicious prosecution lawsuit filed by a magazine against a South Texas mayor who had sued the publication for libel.

The publishers of The Nation said in their lawsuit that McAllen Mayor Othal Brand knew there was no basis for his libel suit. But the magazine's lawsuit was dismissed on summary judgment, meaning the trial judge saw no need to convene a full trial on the suit.

Brand had sued the magazine for publishing an interview in which a political opponent likened Brand to an "ayatollah." That suit also was dismissed on summary judgment.

In its suit for malicious prosecution, the magazine said it "suffered special injury to its reputation and economic standing" as a result of Brand s lawsuit.

Without writing an opinion, the Supreme Court refused to reverse the lower court rulings against the magazine in the malicious prosecution case.

In a related case, the Supreme Court last week agreed to hear the defamation lawsuit filed by Brand against Ramiro Casso, who called Brand an "ayatollah" during their 1981 race for mayor.

Texas inmate indicted

NEW PORT RICHEY, Fla. (AP) — A Texas inmate who has been charged in a police slaying and the stabbing of an Indiana girl has been indicted in the slaying of a Florida teen-ager

A grand jury in Pasco County returned the Florida indictment against Michael Lee Lockhart, 27, of Toledo, Ohio. The Tuesday indictment was ordered sealed until the charges were served.

FBI laboratory tests had shown a positive DNA chromosome match between blood taken from Lockhart and blood found in the home of Jennifer Colhouer, Assistant State Attorney Allen Allweiss said last month.

Miss Colhouer was stabbed to death in her bedroom in a Land O' Lakes subdivision about 25 miles north of Tampa on Jan. 20.

Lockhart, who is in a Texas jail awaiting an Aug. 1 trial in the March 22 killing of a Beaumont police officer, also has been charged with the Oct. 13 slaying of Windy Gallagher. The 16-year-old Griffith, Ind., girl was stabbed 21 times in the throat and abdomen, a killing officials say is similar to the Colhouer case.

Farmers take food stamps

AUSTIN (AP) — The San Antonio, Fort Worth and Beaumont farmers market associations are the first of a growing list to be certified to accept food stamps, said Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

"This marks a big step in our efforts to bring together the freshest, best-tasting, most nutritious produce under the sun with more of the people who want to eat it," Hightower said in a statement Wednesday.

"Altogether, there are 70 farmers market associations in Texas, and just in the last few months, we have helped them receive permission from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to be certified as associations to accept food stamps."

Farmers market associations in Del Rio, Lubbock, Corpus Christi and Austin are in the process of being certified, the Texas Department of Agriculture said. Individual farmers in the Houston, El Paso and Waco associations also are certified to accept food stamps.

The other All-Stars

Former Angel gets win

By JOHN F. BONFATTI
AP Sports Writer

BUFFALO, N.Y. — The similarity between the major league All-Star Game played Tuesday night and Wednesday's Triple A All-Star Game wasn't lost on Ed Jurak.

Jurak, an Oakland Athletics farmhand, tripled and scored the winning run in the ninth inning as the American League beat the National League representatives 2-1 in the first contest featuring top prospects from the highest minor leagues.

Triple A

Oakland catcher Terry Steinbach knocked in both AL runs Tuesday as the American League also beat the National 2-1 in the major league game.

"Steinbach did the job. He should have been the MVP," said Jurak, who played two seasons with the Boston Red Sox. "I come in here and triple and score the winning run, so I should have been the MVP."

Jurak led off the ninth by lining a shot down the right-field line off Richmond Braves pitcher Joe Boever. The ball rattled around the corner long enough for Jurak to leg out the triple.

Columbus Clippers catcher Bob Geren hit a one-hopper that bounced off the glove of shortstop Tony Perezchica to score Jurak.

Jurak, of the Tacoma Tigers, said he was looking for an offspeed pitch "because I was told he threw a lot of palm balls. But he shook off a couple of signs and I saw a fastball away and just hit it down the line."

The victory went to former Midland Angel Urbano Lugo, currently of the Edmonton Trappers. Donn Pall of the Vancouver Canadians got the first two outs of the ninth on groundouts, then Mike Kinnunen of Columbus came on to retire Gregg Jefferies of the Tidewater Tides on another groundout for the save.

In the seventh, Jefferies, one of the top prospects of the New York Mets, had tied the game with a home run.

MISL future looks bleak

By RIC BUCHER
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — The revised collective-bargaining agreement presented to the Major Indoor Soccer League Players Association two days ago, unlike its predecessor, was not stamped with a take-it-or-we-fold ultimatum.

It appears it should have been.

Upon learning that the players' union had rejected the revised five-year plan, Commissioner Bill Kentling announced that a vote would be taken by the MISL board of directors today to determine whether the league should fold. Based on his comments Tuesday night, the vote will be a mere formality.

"I think she's over," Kentling said, "but we'll see. This was no shot across the bow. This shot us right in the ol' engine room."

John Kerr, director of the players' union, refused to comment on Kentling's announcement last night. "At this point," he said, "I have to wait until he informs me officially of his decision."

Kerr, after an impromptu poll of players around the league, had informed Kentling earlier that the union rejected the proposed five-year plan, which would have replaced a two-year agreement ratified in April.

"I believe the players have gone to extremes to save the league," Kerr said. "If this league can't make it with the concessions we made last time, then it isn't going to make it, anyway."

Asked when the revised agreement was presented Tuesday if it had an ultimatum attached, both Kentling and Kerr said no. Asked last night if the league could possibly continue under the existing CBA, Kentling said, "Absolutely, unequivocally, no."

The new plan was presented to Kerr during an MISL board of directors meeting Tuesday in the offices of Cleveland Force president Bart Wolstein. A new plan was necessary, Kentling said, because the existing CBA was structured for an 11-team league. The MISL has had four teams fold since the end of the 1987-88 season, and the Sockers are under the protection of a Chapter 11 petition in federal bankruptcy court.

"The players don't understand that they're not coming down from anything," Kentling said. "They're going up from zero."

A group of Tacoma businessmen expressed interest Tuesday in acquiring an expansion franchise for next season, which raised the possibility of an eight-team league this fall. Sockers general managing partner Ron Fowler, who has said he will resubmit a bid to purchase the team out of bankruptcy if there is an eight-team league, met last night with attorneys to discuss doing so.

Sockers chief operating officer Ron Cady, who also attended the discussion, said Fowler has decided to wait until Tacoma is officially accepted by the league before submitting another bid.

Ballesteros off to good start in stormy England

British Open

LYTHAM, England — Seve Ballesteros overpowered the wind and the tricky Royal Lytham and St. Annes course to shoot a 4-under par 67 for the early first-round lead at the British Open Thursday.

Ballesteros, the winner of the open the last time it was held in this resort town on the Irish Sea, in 1979, birdied five of the first nine holes while the 25 mph winds were gusting against his back, then rode out the winds on the back nine.

"I feel I played the best I can on the first 13 holes," he said. "It's definitely very difficult to shoot 4-under in these conditions, but the way I played I don't deserve any worse."

His worst moments came when he drove far off the fairways and into unplayable positions at the 14th and 18th holes. He took a drop and a stroke at both holes and scrambled to save two bogeys with long putts.

"Both shots landed behind bushes. I don't think even Daniel Boone could play from there," the Spaniard said.

Ballesteros got one of those shots back with a birdie 3 at the 17th, sinking a short putt after coming close to holing out his second shot.

Most of the leading players, including defending champion Nick Faldo of England, had late tee-off times for the first round.

Playing in the 10th threesome out on the gray, chilly day, Ballesteros finished two shots clear of anyone else who had yet set foot on the 6,673-yard course.

Gordon Brand Jr. of Scotland was 3-under par through 11 holes, with an eagle 3 on the seventh hole and a birdie 3 at the 10th. Ron Commons, an American who plays on the European PGA Tour, also was 3-under through the front nine, with an eagle at the sixth and a birdie at the eighth.

Chip Beck and Larry Nelson were Americans among a a bunch at 2-under with holes remaining in their rounds. Peter Senior of Australia was in the clubhouse at 1-under 70, but none of the other early finishers were even close.

As he played his first round, the odds on Ballesteros winning his third open title dropped from 9-to-1 to 4-to-1 among Britain's legal bookies.

And the way the course was playing, Ballesteros' round looked more and more remarkable as the wind blew and scores soared.

The front nine was playing relatively easy, with golfer after golfer picking up birdies, particularly on the par-5 sixth and seventh holes.

With the winds at their backs, they were driving long and easily reaching the greens in two strokes.

But once they made the turn, they found the wind in their faces, or blowing across the fairways, with mist and drizzle making the scene even more uncomfortable.

And the leader board, loaded with red numbers for sub-par rounds on the front nine, turned green for even par and then the pale blue of bogeys and double-bogeys.

No American has won the open since Tom Watson took the last of his five titles in 1983 at Royal Birkdale. That was the 12th time in 14 years that an American had won the open.

Sparky trades Tigers for grandkids during break

By JIM IRWIN
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT — Detroit manager Sparky Anderson spent part of Wednesday doing what he promised he'd do during the All-Star break — walk with his grandchildren back home in Thousand Oaks, Calif.

But on Thursday, he'll make the 1½-hour drive across town to Anaheim Stadium and go back to work doing what none of the preseason predictions said he'd be doing — managing the first-place team in the American League East.

The Tigers lead New York by three games going into their 10-game, 11-day western road trip beginning tonight against the Angels.

Anderson said during a telephone interview that the Tigers couldn't afford to spend the second half of the season doing anything differently from the first.

"We're gonna have to pitch well," he said. "The hitting will come and go, but if we pitch we'll be all right."

A key question about Detroit's pitching could be answered Thursday, when Jack Morris starts against the Angels. Morris, 7-9 and with a 5.24 earned-run average, missed his last scheduled start so he could concentrate on conditioning.

Morris's struggle has been all the more puzzling because he hasn't been hurt. Other players, including outfielders Chet Lemon and Gary Pettis and infielder Tom Brookens, took advantage of the All-Star break to nurse assorted injuries and will be ready to play Thursday, Anderson said.

Shortstop Alan Trammell is eligible to come off the 15-day disabled list Thursday, but Anderson said he doubted Trammell would be ready for at least a few more days.

Anderson said he's given little thought to baseball since Detroit's last game on Sunday. But he did admit to catching a few innings of Tuesday's All-Star Game, which the American League won 2-1.

Trammell was voted to the starting AL shortstop position but couldn't play. The only available AL players who didn't get into the game were pitchers Jeff Reardon of Minnesota and Doyle Alexander of Detroit.

That meant the Tigers, a division leader with baseball's second-best record, weren't represented on the field at the All-Star game. But Anderson, who begged off an invitation to serve as an AL coach, said he wasn't about to second-guess Manager Tom Kelly of Minnesota.

"Every All-Star game I ever managed, there were guys who didn't play and you heard from their fans every time," said Anderson, who managed four National League All-Star teams while with Cincinnati and headed the AL squad in 1985.

"Tom Kelly doesn't say, 'Who's the first-place team, I've got to get their player in,'" Anderson said. "He's doing the best he can."

Time to rise and shine — the All-Star Game is over

Patterson

Things noticed between catnaps during the 59th Major League All-Star Game, Tuesday night at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium:

Most Worthwhile Suggestion

Can't remember which of the three ABC commentators said it, but the suggestion was made to not allow pitchers in the All-Star game who threw with more velocity than the ML norm of 86 mph. It was suggested that because of speedy hurlers like Clemens and Gooden and Plesac that the past few All-Star games have been especially boring. Tuesday night's was no exception — 2-1 in favor of the American League, in case you dozed off.

Best Managerial Move

NL Manager Whitey Herzog's decision to install Cincinnati rookie sensation Chris Sabo as a pinch runner in the eighth inning.

Worst Managerial Move

Not installing Sabo in the lineup so he would have a chance to hit. There were 55,000-plus Cincinnati fans ready to be-head Herzog for not putting in their hero.

Most Ridiculous Round of Applause

The Cincinnati Reds' trainer received more hand claps than did most of the American League starters during pre-game ceremonies.

Most Applause, AL

Ranger pitcher Jeff Russell and Kansas City shortstop Kurt Stilwell, both former Reds.

Biggest Boo

Understandably, Houston pitcher Bob Knepper, who has not really endeared himself to females as of late.

Best Commercial

Lord knows there were plenty of ads during the game, but the two best were the Michelob spot featuring the ugly Eskimo and the beautiful woman, and the Stroh's ad which took a rather direct shot at Spuds McKenzie.

Worst Commerical

Come on now, haven't we all been subjected to enough promotional adverstisements featuring ABC's, "Perfect Strangers?" But I guess when a show isn't funny in the first place, you've still got to bill it as if it is.

Most Irony

Darryl Strawberry, hailed as one of the best players today, and one of the top vote getters, misplayed Terry Steinbach's long fly ball that subsequently bounced off the top of the wall for a homer and the AL's first run. Steinbach, one of the most controversial vote-getters because of his lack of production (.217 average), had the last laugh, accounting for both AL runs.

Best Observation

ABC's Al Michaels — one of today's best broadcasters — noting that the first pitch of the game off Dwight Gooden to Rickey Henderson could be a foreshadowing of the first pitch of this October's World Series — if the Mets and Yankees make it that far.

Missed Observation

Michaels, though, forgot that when Minnesota's Frank Viola threw his first pitch in the bottom of the first to St Louis' Vince Coleman, it was the same first-pitch matchup in last year's Series.

Most Gutsy Announcing

Michaels, Tim McCarver and Jim Palmer did themselves well in mentioning Wade Boggs' palimony problems and Bob Knepper's comments about women. That they didn't gloss over the truth and brought out the ugly side of some of the All-Stars was just that — All-Star announcing.

Best Camera Work

When KC pitcher Mark Gubicza attempted to pick off Vince Coleman at first. All that was visible to the viewer was a zoom in shot of first baseman Mark McGwire's foot, the base, and Coleman's reaching hand. Excellence.

Let's Pat Ourselves on the Back

When Yankees' outfielder Dave Winfield threw his bat down the third base line as he was reaching for a pitch. ABC was very proud of their shot from the blimp, saying the flying bat "looked like a helicopter." Personally, shots from the blimp have never done much for me.

Best Plays

1. Pittsburgh's Andy Van Slyke and his diving catch in left field to rob Boston's Mike Greenwell of a sure double.

2. Gary Carter's save of a wild pitch from Knepper, preventing a run scoring from third.

Most Deserving, Least Appreciated

New York Mets Gary Carter received some flack for being named the starting catcher, but Carter showed nothing deficient — defensively. Still, he's one of the best in the game, despite by baseball standards becoming elderly as of late.

Best Quote, Most Humble

"I don't know why they did it. I just go out there and play every day. It was nice, though. I enjoyed it." — Cincinnati's Sabo, on the fan reaction awarded him.

Most Valuable Non-Player

Chris Sabo. Name another player in All-Star history who has received so much attention for spending virtually the entire game sitting on the bench.

Highlight of the Game

As always, the introduction of the starting lineups.

Lowlight of the Game

Almost everything that followed the introduction of the starting lineups.

Boggs case grows uglier

By KEVIN GALVIN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — The agent for four-time American League batting champion Wade Boggs is accusing the woman who filed a $6-million lawsuit against the Boston Red Sox third baseman of prostitution and extortion.

"I think it is a sad commentary that society has put ... Margo Adams in celebrity status when we all know that her admitted behavior is nothing short of prostitution and extortion," Alan Nero said in an interview Wednesday.

Nero also accused Adams of choosing "to air her dirty laundry publicly for her own personal profit."

"And Wade prefers to be a gentleman and to not bring the same pain to other people's families she has brought to his," Nero said.

Boggs admits to an affair with Adams, but disputes her claim that he agreed to pay her expenses when she traveled with him during road trips. He also denies compensating her for time she spent away from her business.

Adams, a 34-year-old Californian, also alleges that she met with Nero on more than one occasion to discuss a financial arrangement.

"All absolutely wrong," Nero said. "I met her once four years ago by mistake."

He said he had met Adams once by chance, but he declined to say where.

Nero said Adams will have a chance to air her allegations in court on Aug. 12.

"If there's any substance to her allegations, then there's a proper medium for it and that medium is not the Boston Herald or People magazine or the 'Donahue' show," Nero said.

Adams appeared on "The Phil Donahue Show" on Tuesday and alleged that Boggs gave her photographs of some Red Sox players in compromising positions.

"If some guys on the team (did) something Wade didn't particularly like, or they were going to talk about what was going on, he devised a little thing called the 'Delta Force.'

"What he did was make sure they were set up in a compromising position and he'd break into the room and take pictures," she said.

Adams said she had no intention of making any photographs public, and Boggs has denied that any exist.

Reds, Expos complete trade

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds, hoping to rouse their lagging 42-45 team at the All-Star break, Wednesday traded outfielder Tracy Jones and right-handed pitcher Pat Pacillo to the Montreal Expos.

In return, the Reds said they received catcher Jeff Reed, outfielder Herm Winningham and right-handed relief pitcher Randy St. Claire.

The Reds said St. Claire will be assigned to their Class AAA Nashville Sounds farm team. Reed and Winningham will join the Reds on Thursday when they open a four-game series in Montreal against the Expos.

Jones, who has nine runs batted in and a .229 average this year, has been idled for part of this season by a chronic knee injury. Pacillo, a former U.S. Olympic star, has divided the season between Cincinnati and the Nashville farm team.

Reds General Manager Murray Cook, who was the Expos general manager for three years before joining the Reds in 1987, was said to be traveling Thursday and unavailable for comment.

Winningham, 26, was one of four players traded from the New York Mets to Montreal in 1984 for Gary Carter. Winningham was the first-round draft pick for the Mets in 1981.

Winningham played 415 games for the Mets and the Expos, compiling a .238 batting average, 11 home runs and 84 RBIs. He was with Montreal most of this season, but was sent to the Expos' Class AAA Indianapolis farm team when Tim Raines was taken off the disabled list.

Reed, 25, was a first-round draft pick for the Minnesota Twins in 1980. In 1987 he was traded with three others to the Expos for Jeff Reardon and Tom Nieto. Since then Reed has hit .215 in 118 games with Montreal.

Reed was the starting catcher for the Expos when they played the Reds on opening day this year, but was sent down to Indianapolis on June 30.

St. Claire, 27, has spent five seasons with the Expos after signing with them as a free agent in 1978. He owns a 10-6 career record in the major leagues, with a 3.92 earned run average in 107 relief appearances.

In his six games with Montreal this year, St. Claire has no won-loss record and a 6.14 ERA. He has been in Indianapolis since April 28, where he was 0-3, with a 2.87 ERA and eight saves.

Pacillo has made six relief appearances for the Reds with no decisions and a 5.06 ERA. He had a 1-3 record in Nashville this season, for a 3.95 ERA.

Steinbrenner says he'll 'clam up'

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner is apologizing for his criticism of All-Star first baseman Don Mattingly, according to a published report.

Steinbrenner was quoted in today's New York Daily News as saying he would leave the players alone and not criticize them publicly the rest of the season.

"I'm backing off, I've got to back off," he told the newspaper. "So I'm off. I'm clamming up."

Earlier this week, Steinbrenner criticized what he called his "big-money players," specifically referring to All-Stars Mattingly, Dave Winfield and Rickey Henderson.

This time, he said of his comments on Mattingly:

"I'm sorry that it came out wrong about Don Mattingly and you can quote me. Listen, here's all I was saying about Mattingly, other than I don't think a guy who's not long off the disabled list should be going to the All-Star Game, which is a carnival, nothing more. Mattingly, you ened up judging him by superhuman terms. ... I wasn't calling Don Mattingly a bum. I just was saying Don Mattingly hasn't given me the kind of production he has in the past, if you look carefully at his numbers. His .311 has been unproductive."

Steinbrenner said he plans to talk to all the of the players he criticized through the media.

He also reiterated his wish that Winfield tone down his off-field schedule, particularly public appearances.

"What I am basically saying about Dave Winfield is that I want him to conserve all his available strength so he can play in August and September the way he did in April and May."

Winfield is batting .346 with 15 homers, 62 RBI and 57 runs scored.

As for any further messages he might deliver through the media, Steinbrenner said, "If they want me to shut up, fine, I'll shut up."

TRIPLE A

A sellout crowd of 19,500 at Pilot Field saw the game involving the three highest minor leagues — the International League, American Association and Pacific Coast League.

Pawtucket's Ed Nottle, manager of the AL team, was euphoric after the game.

"This is the most fun I've ever had in 29 years in the minor leagues," he said. "It was absolutely electric from the time we got to this town."

Next year's game will be played at Columbus, Ohio.

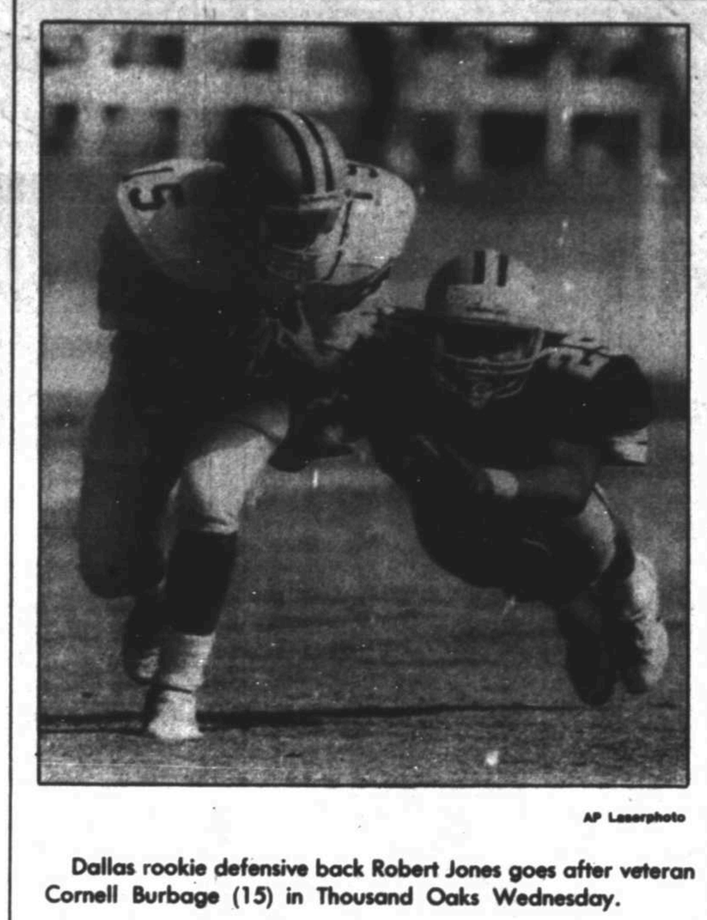

Two members of the Syracuse Chiefs, top farm club for the Toronto Blue Jays, helped the American League take a 1-0 lead in the third off former Montreal Expos pitcher Bob Sebra.

With one out, Syracuse's Eric Yelding reached on a fielding error by third baseman Marty Brown of the Nashville Sounds. Yelding moved to second on a groundout and scored when fellow Chief Geronimo Berroa singled.

The NL's first threat came in the fourth, when Dwight Smith of the Iowa Cubs reached on an infield single with one out, stole second and moved to third on a groundout. Designated hitter Benny Distefano of the Buffalo Bisons — who earlier had become the latest target of kissing bandit Morganna — stranded Smith when he grounded out.

The National Leaguers had another threat in the fifth when they loaded the bases with one out. It ended when Mike Brumley of the Las Vegas Stars flied out.

Once again in the sixth, the NL got a runner to third but couldn't bring him home. With Distefano on third and John Fishel of the Tucson Toros on first, Mike Devereaux of the Alburquerque Dukes popped out to end the inning.

Cowboys, Norton agree on contract

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The signing of former UCLA linebacker Ken Norton Jr. has allowed the Dallas Cowboys to become the first NFL team to sign all their draft choices.

Norton agreed to a four-year contract that sources say will pay him about $950,000 late Wednesday.

Norton, 21, 6-2, and 224 pounds, is the son of former heavyweight boxing champion Ken Norton Sr., and was the second player selected by Dallas in the recent National Football League draft.

"I had hoped to be there on time. I wanted to learn all I could and have a positive impact on the team. I want to sign as soon as I can. I've missed some training camp, and that's not positive at all," Norton said before reaching the agreement.

"I'm real anxious to play and be the best football player I can be."

Norton will take a physical early today and is expected to join the other players in training camp for a 10 a.m. workout.

Admitting that he will be behind other rookies in camp, Norton said he is confident he can catch up.

"I just have to cut my lunches a little shorter and catch up for those few days," Norton said. "I didn't want to miss too much."

"The defense is supposed to be really difficult to learn," he added. "I missed some days that put me behind, but not as far it could be. It could be a lot worse."

Norton was described by pro scouting combines as "one of the fiercest tacklers" in college football. He led UCLA last year with 119 tackles.

He entered UCLA as a running back, having rushed for 840 yards and 10 touchdowns his senior year in high school, but switched to linebacker before his freshman year in college.

Angels end losing skid

From Staff Reports

SHREVEPORT — Norm Carrasco drove in Jesus Alfaro with a one-out sacrifice fly in the sixth inning to lead the Midland Angels to a 3-2 victory over the Shreveport Captains Wednesday night.

The win for the Angels breaks a four game losing streak. All three Angel runs were unearned as the Captains were tagged with three errors.

The Angels put their first two runs on the board when C.L. Penigar singled home Erik Pappas and Alfaro drove in Mike Knapp with a two out single.

With the Angels up 2-0 in the fourth, Shreveport tied it with three consecutive singles by John Skurla, Harry Davis and Mike Wishnevski.

Tim Burcham (5-4) picked up the win for Midland; Joe Olker (9-2) was the Captains' loser.

Shreveport had ample opportunities to win, as 10 men were left stranded in the first four innings. Twice — in the second and fourth — the Captains left the bases full.

Elswehere in Texas League action Wednesday night, San Antonio scored a 2-1 10-inning win over Jackson, Arkansas defeated Wichita, 8-5, and Tulsa whipped El Paso, 5-1.

ANGEL NOTES: Before Wednesday night's win, the Angels had dropped eight of their last nine ... With a 14-11 record in the second half, Midland holds on to a slim one-half game lead over second place San Antonio (13-11) ... Pitcher Chris Collins, after staying in Midland for the first part of the road trip for personal reasons, has rejoined the team in Louisiana and is expected to start Friday night ... Third baseman Jeff Manto, who has missed six games with a hamstring pull, is expected back in the starting lineup tonight ... Todd Eggersten (4-8) will start for the Angels this evening while hard throwing right-hander Dean Freeland, whose fastball has been clocked at 90-plus mph, will get the nod for the Captains.

STATS

Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees hit his seventh double in All-Star competition Tuesday to extend his own record. ... Darryl Strawberry of the New York Mets had four putouts in right field to tie the All-Star record established by Charlie Keller in 1940 and tied by Enos Slaughter in 1953. ... The American League is 5-14 in All-Star games decided by one run. ... The Mets' Dwight Gooden was called for his second balk in All-Star competition, a record.

STREAKS

Dave Winfield has hit safely in seven straight All-Star games to tie Mickey Mantle and Joe Morgan. ... Whitey Herzog is 0-3 as manager of the National League All-Stars. He is the only NL manager to lose three games. ... The AL has won the last two All-Star games played in NL parks (Houston and Cincinnati). The only other time that occurred was 1947 at Wrigley Field and 1949 at Ebbets Field.

SLUGGERS

Oakland's Terry Steinbach hit a home run in his first All-Star at-bat. The last to do it was Lee Mazzilli of the Mets in 1979. The only other Oakland player ever to homer in an All-Star game was Reggie Jackson in 1971 at Detroit.

SLUMPS

New York Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly is 0-for-8 in five All-Star games.

British Open Holes

LYTHAM, England (AP) — A hole-by-hole description of the 6,831-yard, par-71 course at the Royal Lytham & St. Annes Golf Club, site of the 117th British Open golf championships July 14-17:

No. 1, 306 yards, par 3

An unusual way to begin a golf course, especially an Open circuit, this par 3 starts in a wooded tee and has a straight drive to an egg-shaped green. It's not as simple as it sounds, however. Two bunkers in the middle of the fairway must be carried, and big traps guard the green on the left and right.

No. 2, 420 yards, par 4

A dogleg left with bunkers in the middle of the fairway and off to the left, awaiting any big-hitters who try to drive past the bend. The approach to the green is fairly open, with one big bunker in the front left-hand corner and two others to the right.

No. 3, 466 yards, par 4

The last of three opening holes that run parallel to the sea, this one bends slightly to the left behind a sheltering row of trees. Bunkers line the left-hand side of the fairway and the green is tucked behind a pair of bunkers on its right-hand approach.

No. 4, 393 yards, par 4

The first inland hole of a course that never actually touches the sea, No. 4 continues the dogleg-left with deep traps lining that side of the fairway and surrounding the green. Anyone who goes long with their approach faces a recovery from trees that guard the back of the green. If the wind is blowing from the northwest, this hole will play much longer than 393 yards.

No. 5, 212 yards, par 3

The second of four straightaway par 3s, this one with sand in front and on both sides of a large green that swings behind the biggest of the bunkers.

No. 6, 486 yards, par 5

A wide fairway invites a big drive, but if your second shot is off, pack a shovel. Bunkers cut through the middle of this dogleg left that runs north-south. Plenty of sand protects the kidney-shaped green, as well. Another wind-blown hole.

No. 7, 551 yards, par 5

The longest hole on the course, it runs parallel to the sea and bends slightly to the right, where bunkers guard the fairway and the green. In fact, almost any approach shot must clear three traps on the front right-hand side, and trying to fade a shot to the left risks landing in one of three traps there. A monster.

No. 8, 394 yards, par 4

This starts out behind trees to protect it from the winds, bends slightly left and features a split in the fairway just where three big bunkers run out. The green is fairly open but shielded by sand on the right.

No. 9, 162 yards, par 3

Numbers cannot begin to describe this deceptive hole, the shortest on the course. A straight shot from an unguarded tee, it has one of the largest bunkers on the course spread in front of the green and no less than nine other pothole bunkers all around.

OUT: 3,282 yards, par 35

No. 10, 334 yards, par 4

A dogleg right with a fairway that cuts like a figure-8 and five bunkers around the approach from both sides of the green. Try to drive the dogleg in a crosswind and a large fairway bunker on the righthand side awaits.

No. 11, 542 yards, par 5

You start this hole with a tree blocking your view. It gets worse from there. The fairway is notched with big bunkers on both sides just before it swings sharply to the left. The fairway widens behind trees at that point, but the foliage hides a mammoth bunker on the left front of the hole. Trees shelter the back of the green, while two pothole bunkers and a large L-shaped trap guard the front.

No. 12, 201 yards, par 3

A longer version of No. 9. Straightaway from tee to a much smaller green, but a big bunker in front of the pin and five others all around provide danger. Trees to the back of the green as well.

No. 13, 330 yards, par 4

A dogleg right that ends smack into any southwesterly wind. Bunkers encroach on the righthand side of the fairway and surround the small, oval green.

No. 14, 445 yards, par 4

A slight dogleg right, due north, with large bunkers about 200 yards from the tee on the right and a string of three that notch the fairway about 75 yards from the flag. The green is big and fairly open, with single bunkers right and left.

No. 15, 468 yards, par 4

A wide fairway on this dogleg right suddenly becomes treacherous as four bunkers, looking like giant footprints, cut across about 100 yards from the long, narrow green. Not much area to aim at on an approach, and wayward shots are threatened by bunkers to the rear on both sides of the green.

No. 16, 356 yards, par 4

An elevated tee presents a shot over a large bunker onto a fairway that narrows rapidly as it bends to the right. Bunkers become more numerous as the green, another long, narrow one, gets closer. Again, not much to play with on the approach.

No. 17, 453 yards, par 4

A big drive is needed to position the golfer for any kind of decent approach shot in this corupt dogleg left. Once the drive is finished, a strong iron shot must clear five bunkers that cut the fairway in two, thread through more sand guarding the lefthand side of the green and not go too far for fear of three bunkers behind on the right. A trademark hole of the course.

No. 18, 411 yards, par 4

A straight shot from tee to green, with four staggered bankers across the fairway ready to catch any short drives. Go to the left and there's sand. Go to the right and there're trees. Play a second shot from any angle and there is plenty of sand to cross to get to the green, which widens as it approaches the clubhouse.

Triple A ump Pam Postema

Postema lands mixed reviews

By JOHN F. BONFATTI
AP Sports Writer

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Albuquerque Dukes manager Terry Collins believes Pam Postema "knows what she's doing," but says her selection as home plate umpire in the first Triple A All-Star game "probably was a public relations move."

Postema, seeking to become the first female to umpire in the major leagues, said she doesn't care why she was selected for the honor.

"I don't really care about how I got it," she said. "I got it."

Aside from a few glares from batters on called third strikes, Postema fulfilled any umpire's desire in Wednesday night's 2-1 victory by American League farmhands over their National League counterparts: She did her job well enough that she went unnoticed.

Although her unique situation automatically brings attention to her, Postema is clearly tired of dealing with the questions about when — or if — she'll ever make it to the majors.

"I'm not thinking about that now," she said. "I really don't want to talk about going up to the big leagues — when or where or if — because I don't know anything."

POSTEMA SAID she's "uncomfortable with it (the publicity). I really don't want it, but I understand it. I guess we all kind of like to be noticed, but I don't think it's good for umpires. I think umpires' work should be kept on the field. I don't think there's any need for me to be up there talking."

She added, "I understand that I'm different, but I'm just another umpire out there on the field."

The All-Stars gave Postema their approval, although at least one was clearly concerned with the possibility any public comment may come back to haunt him later.

"I don't want to say anything that can get me in trouble," said the Denver Zephyrs' designated hitter Tim Pyznarski, who sees Postema regularly in the American Association. "She's a decent umpire," he said. "I've seen worse. I've seen better. She's doing the best job that she knows how."

Joe Boever, the Richmond Braves pitcher who lost the game, said Postema is a good umpire.

"She's consistent in her calls," he said. "She doesn't take any flak."

COLLINS, WHO had Postema for three seasons in the Pacific Coast League, said she "knows what she's doing. She's very good behind the plate."

He added, "The last time I saw her, I thought if she improves on the bases, she can work in the major leagues."

Postema was one of seven umpires being considered for two National League openings and umpired several major league exhibition games before being sent back for her sixth season at the Triple-A level.

"I just was hoping, especially in spring training, that I could just kind of slip in unnoticed, but it didn't work out that way," she said, adding, "Thank you, Bob Knepper."

Knepper, who pitches for the Houston Astros, brought Postema unwanted attention when he maintained women shouldn't be umpires after Postema worked a game he pitched in spring training.

"This is not an occupation a woman should be in," said Knepper. "In God's society, woman was created in a role of submission to a husband. It's not that women are inferior, it's just that I don't believe women should be in a leadership position."

Aside from offering him her mock thank you, Postema didn't want to talk about Knepper. "I don't have anything to say about that comment," she said. "How can I comment on his statement?"

ASKED ABOUT an incident last year when then Nashville Sounds manager Jack Lind took her in his arms and kissed her while presenting his lineup at home plate, Postema said the incident demonstrates that chauvinism still runs deep in baseball.

"That's just an indication of how things change, but they don't really change. It was such a shock to me. I didn't expect it," she said.

Then she added with a laugh: "By the way, he's a good kisser."

The death during the season of National League umpire Lee Weyer prompted some to speculate Postema might get the call to the big leagues, but she said, "I didn't wait by the phone all day."

She added, "I don't think about it. It's not up to me. Of course, I checked my messages a lot more."

At 34 and in her 12th season as a minor league umpire, Postema is aware that time is running out on her.

"I'm very old," she said. "That's a long time in the minor leagues."

Asked why she perseveres, Postema laughed and said, "I'm stubborn, I guess. I like being poor."

Midland teams romp

From Staff Reports

Midland North Central and Midland Western romped past second-round opponents in District Little League tournament at Hogan Park Wednesday.

North Central walloped West Odessa 27-1 and Western kicked Big Spring International 22-9. In the remaining two games, Big Spring National downed Midland Tower 6-3 and Coahoma American defeated Odessa Jim Parker 7-5.

Midland Western-Big Spring

Western rapped out 25 hits in their 22-9 win over Big Spring International.

Winning pitcher Robert Settles pitched a no-hitter — despite the nine runs — and struck out nine. Mike Martinez took the loss.

Angel Davis went 5-for-5 with three doubles and two singles and Ricky Reyes had four hits in five at bats with two home runs, a double and single to pace MW. Sean Stoner finished 3-for-4 with a double and two singles.

Midland North Central-West Odessa

In their rampage over 27-1, North Central collected 13 hits while winning pitcher Sean Low held the opposition to just five hits.

Low also stood out at the plate, finishing a perfect 3-for-3 with a homer, single and double. Also for North Central, Brian Henderson finished 2-for-3 with a homer and a double and Jeff Pursley was 2-for-2.

John Hubble took the loss for Odessa and was also the team's leading hitter with a double and single.

Big Spring National-Midland Tower

There was not one but two pitching gems in Wednesday play as Big Spring's Wes Hughes threw a two-hitter and struck out 13 in National's 6-3 win over Tower.

Danny Ybarra was 2-for-2 with a double and single and Torbin Lancaster had three singles in three trips to the plate to lead National.

Josh Stacey collected a home run for Tower and Ben Langford was losing pitcher although he racked up 10 strikeouts.

Frank Ortega struck out eight in six innings on the way to the win. Ortega was relieved in the seventh by Jon White.

Brian Madison, Adam Hamilton and Eddie Johnson all had hits for the Odessa squad.

Rene Garcia was the loser for Jim Parker.

Loser's bracket action continues tonight. Midland Tower meets Big Spring International; West Odessa will play Odessa Jim Parker and Odessa Floyd Gwin meets Midland Eastern. All games begin at 7:30.

MISL

On April 15, in an 11th-hour negotiating session, the players' union and the league hammered out a two-year CBA that included a salary-cap reduction from $1.275 million to $900,000 per team. The union did so under the owners' threat that they would fold the league if it wasn't approved.

The five-year plan proposed Tuesday called for:

— Reducing the salary cap to $675,000 next season and increasing it by annual incremenus of $50,000, ending with a $875,000 ceiling for the 1992-93 season.

— Declaring all players free agents, regardless of their contract status (guaranteed or non-guaranteed).

— Providing a profit-sharing plan that would increase player salaries if a team's gross revenues exceed $2.5 million.

— Reducing the player per diem allowance on the road from $31 to $25.

— Structuring all contracts over 12 months.

— Implementing minimum and maximum player salaries of $1,250 and $5,500, respectively, a month.

— Restricting player vacations to six weeks.

"The union did the right thing (by rejecting it)," said Sockers defender Kevin Crow, the team's player representative. "The whole meeting Tuesday should have been how to help San Diego solve its problems and figure out how to help Tacoma put together a franchise. Instead,the six teams who said they had no problems come up with 50 gripes. It makes no sense. It's typical MISL leadership at its best."

Trial Predictions for track and field

By FRANK MORGAN

Morgan

One, two, three, who will it be? The Olympic Track and Field Trials open Saturday in Indianapolis where a one-shot winner-take-all trip to the Olympics awaits the top three finishers in each race. The United States is the only country that selects all its team members by using a one-meet test, and the system is long overdue for a change.

Consider the case of Greg Foster, the world champion in the 110-meter hurdles. Foster fell and broke his arm last week, and is out of the Trials. It doesn't matter that he would be healed in time to run the Olympics in October. Without gaining a spot in the Trials, he won't go to Seoul.

The U.S. Olympic Committee has the responsibility of placing our best athletes on the starting line at the Olympics. An argument can be made that the Trials force a runner to compete just as he would in the Olympics by facing the stress of one race for the gold. On the other hand, the Trials allow someone who runs a once in a lifetime performance to be on the team, taking a spot from someone who might consistently be a better performer. Just suppose Carl Lewis had tripped coming out of the blocks at the 1984 Trials. Goodbye four gold medals.

The British choose two of their Olympic spots by a Trials method and reserve the final spot for selection by their Olympic committee. This seems to be much better to me. With this type of process, Joan Benoit-Samuelson would be able to compete in the 1988 women's marathon.

Though our Trials process is not the best way to select the team, it is fair. Every athlete has the same chance to be on the team and represent our country.

Knowing that I am exposing myself to public ridicule, here are my predictions for the U.S. team members in the distance events. If I guessed well, you'll probably read about it in this space in a few weeks. If not, I'm sure I'll hear about it from some of you.

Mark Nenow has the third fastest 10K in history and should qualify in that event, but he is unpredictable. I still like his chances. Ed Eyestone would prefer to run the 10K rather than the marathon and he will forfeit the marathon spot if the qualifies for the shorter distance. Bruce Bickford should round out the team. Only Nenow has a chance to win a medal in Seoul.

For the first time, the 10K will be run by women in the Olympics. Sylvia Mosqueda led the marathon trials for the first 17 miles and should be able to qualify for the 10K. My sentimental choice is Francie Larrieu-Smith, who is trying to qualify for her fifth Olympic team. Lynn Jennings is the reigning national champion and should grab the third spot. Noticeably missing from the list is Joan Samuelson. She doesn't have the speed to run with these women. If she can take charge from the beginning, she might make the team, but I think she'll be at home in October. Betting against her is like betting against apple pie and motherhood.

The men's 5,000 team should include former Olympians Sydney Maree and Doug Padilla as well as University of Arkansas star, Joe Falcon. Falcon will try to double in the 1,500 and should qualify in that event along with Steve Scott and Jim Spivey. The women's 1,500 team should consist of Diana Richburg, Regina Jacobs and Alisa Harvey.

The showcase event of the Trials, and of the Olympics will be the women's 3,000-meters. Mary Slaney should be able to silence the criticism after the fall in Los Angeles by winning not only the Trials, but also the gold in Seoul. Since the 1984 Olympics she has set six American and one world record. She has also been often injured and has given birth to her first child, so it will be interesting to see what she can do. Joining Slaney will be Dallasite Mary Knisely and Brenda Webb.

The men's 3,000-meter steeplechase should include former Olympians Henry Marsh and Brian Diemer as well as Brian Abshire who set an indoor American record. The steeplechase is the only realistic chance for a medal for the U.S. in the men's events.

Those are my choices. I purposely did not pick a fourth place in any of these so that when someone else wins, I can claim that he was next on my list.

RUNNING NOTES: The Fifth Annual Women's Distance Festival will take place Saturday at Chili's in the Colonnade Shopping Center. The 5K and one-mile women's race will be at 7:30 a.m. followed by the men's 5K at 8:15 a.m. The Women's Distance Festival is a nationwide series that was started by the RRCA in 1980 to promote the fact that there were no women's distance events in the Olympics. The marathon was added in 1984 and the 10K this year, but there is still no women's 5K in the Olympics. Maybe in 1992.

Joyner-Kersee still has golden dreams

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Track Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Four years ago, Jackie Joyner-Kersee had a dream: To win the Olympic gold medal in the heptathlon.

She fell five points short, finishing second behind Glynis Nunn of Australia.

That disappointment is what motivates Joyner-Kersee now.

"That girl in Australia with the gold medal is what makes Jackie better," Bob Kersee, her husband and coach, said Wednesday.

"She learned from that. She has turned that disappointment into positiveness. That's not to take anything away from the silver medal she earned, but she didn't perform up to her capabilities then."

After that heartbreaking setback, Kersee said he told his dispirited wife, "Now, you have to wait four years for that dream to come again."

That time is approaching. The Seoul Games are about two months away and, at present, Joyner-Kersee not only is the prohibitive favorite for the heptathlon, the two-day test of skill and strength in seven tough events, but also the favorite for the women's long jump.

She won both events in convincing fashion at last year's World Championships in Rome, and to win both again would be an extraordinary accomplishment.

FIRST, HOWEVER, she must make the U.S. team in those events during the Olympic Trials, which begin Friday at the Indiana University Track and Field Stadium.

Barring injury, that should not be difficult.

Joyner-Kersee is the world record-holder in the heptathlon, and is the only athlete to score more than 7,000 points in the competition, having done it three times.

She also is the American record-holder in the long jump, and shared the world record with Heike Drechsler of East Germany until June 11, when Galina Chistyakova of the Soviet Union broke the mark by nearly three inches.

In addition, Joyner-Kersee shares the American record in the 100-meter high hurdles, an event in which she also is entered in the Trials but probably will not contest unless she has unexpected difficulties in the heptathlon or the long jump.

"It doesn't make sense to do it here if she's not going to do it in the Olympic Games," Kersee said, referring to the hurdles.

The major concentration will be on the heptathlon, to be held Friday and Saturday, and Kersee said his wife was fully prepared for an assault on her world record of 7,158 points set in 1986 at Houston.

"We came here with the intention of breaking the world record," he said. "We're also going after the first-day world record (4,256 points, set in the 1987 World Championships). I would like to see her around 4,300 points."

OVERALL, KERSEE said he had his wife "programmed" for 7,194 points.

Joyner-Kersee, considered the world's best female athlete since Babe Didricksen Zaharias dominated women's competition during the 1930s and 1940s, said, "My first goal is to go after the win."

"Then, I will see where I am, and take it from there," she said. "I might PR (break her personal record).

"My biggest goal is making the Olympic team, going to Seoul and winning the gold medal. My dream last year was to win the gold medal at the World Championships, and I did that."

Joyner-Kersee said she blames her near-miss in the heptathlon during the Los Angeles Games on lack of experience rather than a tight hamstring that hampered her during the long jumping, her best event.

"In 1984, I was inexperienced as far as international competition was concerned," she said. "I doubted my ability.

"I was stubborn and hard-headed, and I paid the price. It wasn't my injury that cost me the gold medal — it was my stubborness. After that, I decided to do the little things that prevented me from winning the gold."

THOSE "LITTLE things" included working out early in the morning before attending classes at UCLA, making sure to go for proper treatments from her physical therapist and eating the right foods, Joyner-Kersee said.

"Once I realized I wanted to be the best in the world, I knew I had to do the little things," Joyner-Kersee said.

She has been doing the little things so well that even her husband is surprised — and optimistic.

"It's her year," he said. "She's prepared herself well. She has geared not only her mind, but her body, too."

"I can program my mind to tell my body what to do," Joyner-Kersee said.

Right now, her mind is telling her body that it is capable of producing performances to win gold medals in the heptathlon and long jump.

No American woman has won an Olympic gold medal in a field event since 1932. Joyner-Kersee would like to end that drought.

European television gets first all-sports channel

By RAF CASERT
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Nine years after ESPN became the first 24-hour sports network in the United States, Europe is about to get an all-sports channel of its own.

Media baron Ruppert Murdoch and 15 public broadcasting networks are joining forces to create Eurosports, expected to go on the air early next year.

The partnership gives the financially strapped public broadcasters a better chance to compete for new sports contracts against commercial networks. It also entitles them to half of the channel's profits.

The station gives Murdoch another addition to his worldwide empire, which includes newspapers, magazines and television stations in his native Australia, the United States and Europe.

But the biggest beneficiaries may be Europe's sports hungry television viewers, often fed a meager diet by their national networks.

Murdoch and the public broadcasters have reached an agreement in principle and are on the verge of signing the final contract, said Jaklien Caenberghs, an aide to Eurosports chairman Cas Goossens.

Eurosports will combine the television transmission rights of public broadcasters in Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Iceland, Finland, Switzerland, Austria, Italy, Britain, Ireland, Spain, Portugal, France and Belgium, which has two public networks.

"There is a great pool of high quality sports programming there," said Fiona Waters, a spokeswoman for Murdoch. "From that point of view, the product is already there."

Thorn in SMU's side now playing in CFL

Associated Press

DALLAS — Scandal and an NCAA investigation killed Southern Methodist's football program in 1987, but the former SMU football player who sparked the probe says he doesn't regret the part he played.

David Stanley on Tuesday night started his football comeback in the Canadian Football League with the season-opener of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

"I don't have any regrets," Stanley told the Dallas Times Herald from British Columbia. "Why should I? I feel sorry for some of my teammates at SMU and I lost some friends. But I'm not responsible for what happened.

"(Former SMU athletic director) Bob Hitch and the athletic staff got what was coming to them," he said. "I didn't have any other choice because of what they did to me. SMU cost me a chance to ever play college football and maybe to have a career in the NFL."

Stanley said in an interview with Dallas television station WFAA in November 1986 that he and his mother were paid a monthly stipend from SMU after the school had been put on probation.

SMU is still serving its so-called "death penalty" sentence, which resulted in the Mustangs being suspended in 1987 and limited to seven road games in 1988. The university scrapped the 1988 season, as it was only able to offer 15 scholarships.

"His past is past. And the problems at SMU went much deeper than David Stanley," says Winnipeg head coach Mike Riley. "All I'm concerned with is he had a great preseason and has added an element of toughness to this football team."

Stanley has been a construction worker since the television report and said he's been lifting weights and running for more than two years. He was a high school All-American in Angleton and he was invited to the Blue Bombers camp after a free-agent tryout last spring in Houston.

"I know people in Dallas still hate me, but I don't care," Stanley said. "I had to get on with my life and make a living. Football is still the thing I do best."

Stanley is playing on the Blue Bombers special teams. He made the team as a "specialist," a CFL position reserved for one of the 16 non-starting, non-Canadian players on each 35-man roster.

Riley said Stanley is still "rusty", but adds that he will be given some playing time at linebacker.

Stanley said his Winnipeg teammates, including former Baylor star and Angleton teammate Tom Muecke, know about his problems at SMU, but adds that "they don't really care."

"People will make their own judgments and I can't change that. I made my mistakes, but I learned from them."

The Boz writes a book

Associated Press

Brian Bosworth, linebacker for the Seattle Seahawks, has a book coming out: "The Boz: Confessions of a Modern Anti-Hero."

Seahawks Coach Chuck Knox says he's not worried about what the outspoken Bosworth might say in the book.

"That book, whatever it is, won't have anything to do with what we do or how we do this season," Knox said.

"As always, there will be some instant rush and people will be quoting the book, paraphrasing the book and asking questions about what was meant .... Then it will be put up on the back shelf."

Bosworth, a former University of Oklahoma linebacker, reportedly told a New York news conference two months ago that Knox didn't know anything about defense.

"I've been accused of not knowing a whole lot about offense," Knox said good naturedly.

Knox has his own book, "Hard Knox," written by Bill Plaschke of San Diego, coming out this summer.

Costas, Madden honored

ABC won three major awards — best special for "The Kentucky Derby," best live series for "Monday Night Football" and best edited series for "Wide World of Sports."

CBS won the award for best edited special for the "Paris Roubaix Bike Race."

Believe it or not — Baltimore's Birds better

By TIM LIOTTA
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE — Six weeks of mediocre baseball. Not bad for the Baltimore Orioles, who only a few months ago were baseball's laughing stock after the game's worst start ever.

Behind some improved pitching from young arms, the Orioles won eight of 13 games going into baseball's All-Star break. They are 22-25 since opening the season with 34 losses in 40 games — starting off with that 21-game winless streak.

And that followed 21 losses in their last 26 games a year ago.

Suddenly the foundation for the future looks more promising.

"We'd like to put a couple of good months together," says relief pitcher Dave Schmidt. "The front office is building for the future, and we'd all like to be part of that."

"From eight or 10 weeks ago, this team has improved 100 percent," says manager Frank Robinson. "Our pitching is more consistent, the defense is better and our hitting is much better."

"The biggest thing is to try and maintain the consistency of the last month and see how respectable we can be the second half," relief pitcher Tom Niedenfuer says. "If we can play like the past month, we'll upset a few teams."

Going into the All-Star break, the Orioles pitching staff, behind veteran Mike Boddicker and rookie Jose Bautista, posted a 2.92 ERA over its last 13 games, this from a staff that surrendered 107 runs in the Orioles' first 16 games.

Boddicker, who lost his first eight starts this season, has recovered to post a 4-3 record with a 2.82 ERA over his last 10 outings. He has allowed more than three earned runs only twice during that span.

Bautista, a right-hander the Orioles selected from the New York Mets in the major league draft last December, is 3-0 with a 1.32 ERA over his last four starts. He has not walked a batter in his last two outings.

Moreover, the staff is a young one.

The four starters besides Boddicker — Bautista, Oswaldo Peraza, Jeff Ballard and Jay Tibbs — average 24.5 years of age.

"They're starting to get more confidence in their abilities," Robinson said of his young starters. "Once they start to learn the league and some of the older pitchers like Boddicker work with them and just by watching everyday, they're going to develop."

Then there's Niedenfuer, an anchor in the Baltimore bullpen. In his last 13 appearances, Niedenfuer has a 1.20 ERA and five saves, giving him nine this season.

"He's having an excellent year," Robinson said of his stopper. "If you consider the fact that he didn't have a save opportunity until the middle of May, I'd say he's having an excellent year."

And the Orioles, who were shut out nine times in the first 52 games, have finally found the meaning of timely hitting. In winning three of four games from Texas last weekend, the Orioles scored 17 runs on 22 hits.

"We're there," Robinson said. "We've had a shot at winning six out of 10 or seven out of 10, and, if we're in a majority of our ballgames, then we're just a pitch away or a play away from turning a few games around. Then all of a sudden you've put together a good streak."

So, even though they are still 13½ games behind the sixth-place Toronto Blue Jays in the American League East, the Orioles are, as outfielder Ken Gerhart notes, "going to go out and win a few series we can let some people know we're not pushovers."

"Hopefully," Gerhart says. "we can play well and let them know that 0-21 shouldn't have happened."

Fed: Sharp interest hikes not needed

By PETER T. KILBORN
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Asserting that the nation's economy has begun to slow a bit after its lively growth so far this year, the Federal Reserve Board's chairman Wednesday dispelled speculation that he is pondering a sharp increase in interest rates to stop inflation any time soon.

The Fed chairman, Alan Greenspan, acknowledged what the markets had already divined, that the Fed had pushed up market interest rates from March through June.

And with repeated warnings that inflation remains a hazard, partly because of higher import prices and the rise of some food prices because of the drought, he said the Fed remained much more wary of rising inflation than a recession, which would permit a decline in interest rates.

In the Fed's annual midyear review of the economy before the Senate Banking Committee, Greenspan declined to engage senators' questions about whether he and his fellow Fed governors, all Reagan appointees, might be trying to manage the economy to keep it from embarrassing the Reagan administration and the Republican presidential candidate, George Bush.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, presents the Fed's midyear review to the Senate Banking Committee.

But no one charged Greenspan with playing politics with the economy, and at a hearing of the Banking Committee on Tuesday, several economists who are often critical of government policy found little to fault with Greenspan's performance.

"The Federal Reserve has, on the whole, done a splendid job for the past few years," said one of the economists, Alan Blinder of Princeton University.

Greenspan exerts enormous power over the economy now, with Congress and the administration absorbed in the national elections. But no one could cite evidence of manipulation. Both Greenspan and the chairman of the Banking Committee, William Proxmire of Wisconsin, allowed that the question may have become moot.

Federal Reserve actions like cuts in interest rates take a while to flow through the economy, speeding it up and creating jobs, and in that way influencing voters. Any new actions by the Fed, including changes in interest rates, might not be felt until after November. Any effects of policy changes now, Greenspan said in agreement with Proxmire, "could correctly be described as relatively small."

Major banks increase prime rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Three big banks raised their prime lending rate today by a half percentage point to 9.5 percent, the highest level in more than two years.

It was the second boost in the key lending rate this year and signaled a new round of higher interest rates for consumers on loans for purchases ranging from automobiles to homes.

Chase Manhattan Bank in New York was the first to announce the rate increase and was quickly followed by Citibank and First National Bank of Chicago. Others were expected to follow.

The increase came one day after Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan warned he would use the central bank's power to tighten credit if inflation started to accelerate.

New thrift buyouts expected

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A Dallas-based savings and loan association is expected to acquire several Texas thrifts soon under the government's Southwest plan, industry experts say.

Industry experts said Metropolitan Financial Savings and Loan Association will acquire several thrifts under the Southwest Plan, the government's blueprint for cleaning up the nation's troubled thrift industry.

Three such transactions have been approved so far.

Roger Martin, a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in a telephone interview Wednesday that regulators have been involved in serious talks with officials of Metropolitan Financial, which had assets of $832 million and regulatory capital of 5.1 percent March 31.

But Martin stopped short of saying that Metropolitan Financial's proposal to participate in the Southwest Plan will be approved by regulators.

Other experts expect a deal to be announced soon, perhaps as early as next week.

"I fully anticipate that Metropolitan will be approved under the Southwest Plan," Frank Anderson, a senior vice president with D. Latin & Co., said earlier this week. "The only question is when and which thrifts it will be buying."

Two other industry experts, who requested anonymity, also said they expect Metropolitan Financial to be approved this month as a thrift acquirer under the Southwest Plan.

Executives from Metropolitan Financial have been talking with regulators for about three months, according to Robert Stallings, president and chief executive officer of Metropolitan Financial.

"We've been involved in a series of discussions involving a number of different possible acquisition groups," said Stallings, who served from October 1982 to December 1987 as executive vice president and chief operating officer of Murray Savings Association in Dallas.

"We certainly are enthusiastic about the proposal we've made," Stallings said. "But negotiations have not reached the final stages."

Martin said regulators have been in discussions with several different possible acquirers.

In addition to Metropolitan Financial, Martin said regulators have been talking with a number of institutions, including Olney Savings Association of Olney.

"We still are going to get four major deals done by the end of August," he said.

Olney Savings Association, located about 100 miles west of Fort Worth, had assets of $1.36 billion and regulatory capital of 2.2 percent March 31. It has acquired about a dozen smaller Texas thrifts or branch operations since 1980.

Wade Fikes, president and chief operating officer of Olney Savings, confirmed his company's interest in participating in the Southwest Plan. But he declined to elaborate.

World Savings and Loan Association, headquartered in Oakland, Calif., has discussed with the Bank Board a plan to acquire Texas thrifts, Martin said.

Retail sales up in June

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales, boosted by strong auto sales and hot weather-related buying at department stores, rose a moderate 0.5 percent in June, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said that sales increased $713 million last month to a seasonally adjusted, but not inflation-adjusted, $132.8 billion.

Economists had been expecting a gain of about 0.8 percent. However, the government revised a previous estimate for the May increase to 0.3 percent, up from 0.1 percent.

The moderate June increase may ease fears in the financial markets that a too-strong economy poses the danger of inflation.

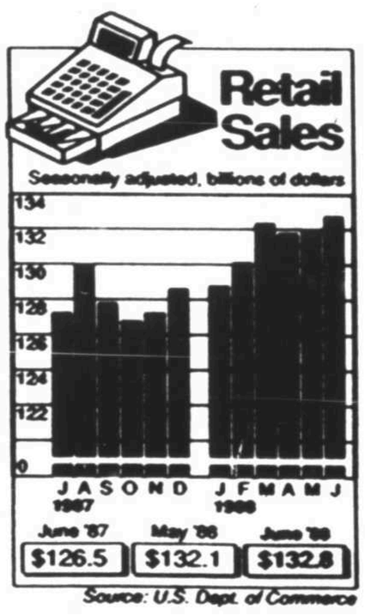

Excluding autos, the June sales increase was 0.3 percent, down from 0.6 percent in May.

Sales at department and other general merchandise stores were up 1.87 percent to $15.2 billion, the strongest gain since last August, when the rise was 1.94 percent.

In a report last week, major department stores had reported strong sales of air conditioners, summer clothes, barbecue equipment and sporting goods.

Sales of durable goods, "big ticket" items expected to last more than three years, were up 0.5 percent with the gain in autos being partially offset by a 1.0 percent decline at building supply and hardware stores and a 0.5 percent drop a furniture stores.

Sales of non-durable goods were up 0.6 percent. There was gains of 1.6 percent at specialty clothing stores, 0.4 percent at restaurants and bars and 0.3 percent at gasoline stations.

Automakers post early July sales gains

New York Times News Service

DETROIT — Sales of new American-made cars and light trucks were 1.7 percent higher in early July than a year earlier, according to figures reported Wednesday by the seven domestic manufacturers.

The rise reflected brisk sales of light trucks, which rose 8.6 percent, to an average selling rate of 12,394 a day. Car sales, on the other hand, dropped 2.1 percent, to 20,301 a day. There were seven selling days in the July 1-10 period this year and eight days last year.

Domestic car sales ran at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 7.1 million, slightly more than the 7 million rate of early July 1987, but lower than the rate of about 7.5 million that has prevailed since January. The annualized rates are calculated from a formula devised by the Department of Commerce.

"This looks like a much softer market than in late June, when the sales rate was 8.2 million," said David Healy, an auto analyst in New York for Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Buyers rushed to take advantage of cash-rebate programs that were due to expire by moving their car purchases forward in late June, taking away sales from early July, Healy said. In the end, the Big Three auto makers renewed their incentive programs.

"It's another one of those fraudulent threats of ending incentives," Healy said. "But if you average the sales for the last three 10-day periods, you get a selling rate of about 7.6 million."

The Chrysler Corp.'s share of domestic light-vehicle sales increased to 18.8 percent, a gain of 2.2 points from its 16.6 percent share a year earlier. Ford's market share dropped 1.1 points, to 31.6 percent, and the General Motors Corp.'s share dropped 1.9 points, to 43.7 percent.

Comanche Peak opposition resolved

DALLAS (AP) — A 9-year dispute over construction flaws in the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant ended Wednesday as federal regulators disbanded a federal hearing board and formally endorsed a $10 million settlement between opponents and the plant's parent utility.

"To me, it's a stunner ... 10 years of fighting this plant (is over)," said Anthony Roisman, an attorney for the Citizens Association for Sound Energy, or CASE, during the last meeting of the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board in Dallas.

Peter Bloch chaired the three-person Nuclear Regulator Commission board that officially dissolved when they signed an order at the end of the hearing.

Opponents of CASE's pact withdrew their petition for a two-month delay. Had the petition remained in place, the delay would have prolonged the pre-hearing phase and made the Sierra Club and a citizens' group intervenors, the role abandoned by CASE in their agreement.

CASE's deal with the NRC and Texas Utilities, Comanche Peak's operator, ends the last major citizens' opposition to NRC licensing of the plant.

The disputes, which spanned nearly a decade, resulted in the cost of building Comanche Peak ballooning from an estimate of under $1 billion to $9.1 billion.

The agreement received opposition from people who charged "secret" arrangements were made.

Bloch praised Jack Doyle, a former Comanche Peak engineer who resigned to point out design flaws to the NRC that included faulty welds, metallurgy and pipe.

"Though he isn't a degreed engineer, he knew the truth about this plant when people who were hired for millions of dollars either didn't know the truth or refused to see it," Bloch said.

"When we first started (negotiating) with Texas Utilities (in 1978), we were having enough problems getting them to admit they were in the state of Texas," Doyle said of his early dealings

In 1984, when the utility began to address the issues raised by CASE, Doyle said "the cooperation has been unbelievable. At first I thought I was being conned — I had to be conned. I now know that was not the case."

Last week, CASE agreed to drop opposition to Comanche Peak in exchange for a five-year term for its leader, Juanita Ellis, on an operations review committee overseeing the plant.

UT consortium gets $500,000 energy grant

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

A $500,000 Department of Energy grant announced by Texas Sen. Phil Gramm Wednesday will support preliminary work being done by the Geosciences Institute for Oil & Gas Recovery Research at the University of Texas at Austin.

The institute, which comprises a 15-member consortium of universities and state agencies, is preparing comprehensive recommendations for the DOE on initiating research programs to develop and improve hydrocarbon recovery techniques. The group expects to present its report to the department by late September.

The institute has completed a series of six regional technical forums which laid the groundwork for reaching a consensus among industry personnel and those in academia on what technical elements should be incorporated in a national recovery research initiative.

The initial DOE funding coordination between the federal government and private sector "is significant because it brings together some of our best research resources in the country and concentrates those resources on an issue of great importance to our economy and to our national security — advanced oil and gas recovery research," Gramm said in announcing the grant.

As a result of the six regional forums — one of which was on the University of Texas at the Permian Basin campus in Odessa — the institute has established six technical subcommittees, which will meet next week in Dallas.

The committees, which include representatives from the Permian Basin, will address: reservoir characterization; field reservoir frameworks; advanced extraction technology; reservoir performance prediction; stimulation and completion technology; and, resource evaluation and technology transfer.

Although its looks likely that Congress will appropriate only about a quarter of the $20 million the consortium had requested for its initial research programs, institute director Marcus Milling said his staff is preparing both short- and long-term budget plans for the center through 1995.

The half-million dollars already appropriated will keep the institute "on-track and on-schedule for getting the final report to the DOE," Milling said.

Prices bounce back at opening bell

From Staff and Wire Reports

Crude oil prices opened higher this morning after skidding to a 21-month low Wednesday as traders grew more pessimistic about overproduction by OPEC members.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the August-delivery price of West Texas Intermediate crude, opened 18 cents higher at $14.62.

Wednesday, the near-month contract fell 28 cents further after dropping 6 cents on Tuesday to close at $14.44.

The last time prices for the near month WTI contract were lower was Oct. 29, 1986, when they closed at $13.73 a barrel.

Fears of continued overproduction by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries sent prices lower, said Andrew Lebow, senior broker and analyst at E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc.

Dollar calm, higher vs. yen, mark

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed in calm European trading late this morning as activity wound down ahead of Friday's release of U.S. trade figures. Gold prices were slightly higher.

Dealers said the market appeared to have stabilized in a narrow range after recording further gains on statements made Wednesday by U.S. Federal Reserve Board officials.

Computer buying drives prices up

NEW YORK (AP) — A late round of buying attributed to computer program trading gave the stock market a lift in the waning moments of an erratic session Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down about 10 points at its afternoon lows, closed with an 11.73-point gain at 2,104.37.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 7 to 6 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 782 up, 668 down and 525 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 218.93 million shares, against 161.65 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 242.78 million shares.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

CBS news chief to head broadcast division

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS Inc. has announced a management shakeup that has the president of CBS News becoming president of the broadcast group and will for the first time bring in an outsider to head the CBS news division.

Effective Aug. 1, news division head Howard Stringer replaces Gene F. Jankowski, who has been president of the broadcast group for 11 years, the network announced Wednesday.

Succeeding Stringer as president of CBS News will be David Burke, who has been with ABC News for 11 years.

Hospitals begin treating Big Mac attacks

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — McDonald's is opening restaurants in hospitals, in what one doctor suggests is an invitation to a Big Mac heart attack. But a hospital spokesman argues the food "hasn't killed anyone yet."

The fast food chain has opened eight such restaurants nationwide. One more is under construction at Dayton Children's Hospital in Ohio, and four are under contract, said Steven Roth, McDonald's manager of hospital development.

Dr. Michael Goldblatt, McDonald's staff nutritionist, said Wednesday that the restaurants supplement hospitals' regular food services and are aimed at staff and visitors, not patients.

BUSINESS TRENDS

Golfs headed for 19th hole

The last Volkswagen made in America rolls off the assembly line today when the West German automaker closes its only U.S. assembly plant at New Stanton, Pa., an area already hit hard by declining manufacturing.

The company cited slumping sales and increased competition for the closure, although many workers blame trade policies.

The Volkswagen still will be sold in the United States. Jetta models will be imported from West Germany and Golf models from Mexico, the company said.

Methanol plant near completion

HOUSTON (SWN) — Construction nears completion ahead of schedule on a 2,268-metric-ton-a-day methanol plant near Punta Arenas in southern Chile. The Cape Horn Methanol facility, mechanically completed in June, will begin test runs in August and should be producing methanol for export shortly thereafter.

The M.W. Kellogg Company, an international, technology-oriented engineering and construction subsidiary of Dresser Industries, Inc., was responsible for design, engineering, procurement, construction management and start-up on the $300 million project. Construction was handled by Tierra del Fuego, a local subcontractor.

The plant, which is owned by Cape Horn Methanol, Inc., includes a natural gas-fed methanol unit designed by Kellogg using BASF catalyst technology; full utilities and offsites; and a d

Analysts believe Fed has done enough credit tightening for now

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan is talking tough about using higher interest rates to fight inflation, but many economists doubt the tough talk will be followed with much action.

These analysts believe the central bank, with an eye on the November presidential election, has done all the credit tightening it intends for a while.

For this reason, they are looking for interest rates to stay about where they are currently in coming months. That would be good news for the housing industry as mortgage rates level off, and it would mean consumers and businesses may be spared another jump in the prime lending rate.

Greenspan, delivering his mid-year report on Fed monetary policy to Congress on Wednesday, issued some stern warnings about rising inflationary threats in the economy, singling out tight labor markets, rising import prices and the drought's effect on grain prices as particularly worrisome.

He said the central bank had already made a series of credit tightening moves "from late March through late June" in an effort to keep inflation in check.

"The costs to our economy and society of allowing a more intense inflationary process to become entrenched are serious," Greenspan said.

But Greenspan also suggested that the credit-tightening which has occurred may be enough to dampen inflationary pressures because of an expected moderation in growth in the second half of 1988.

Greenspan said that factory utilization rates "could well top out soon" and he also predicted that the unemployment rate, which has fallen dramatically this year, would level off. Both of those developments would be seen as easing inflationary pressures.

In response to a question, Greenspan said he did not think that further increases in interest rates were inevitable, especially if current inflationary pressures begin to ease.

There had been widespead expectations that the Fed would soon move to nudge interest rates higher, especially since the unemployment rate fell to a 14-year low of 5.3 percent in June.

But many analysts said Greenspan's comments seemed to indicate that the central bank is satisfied that it has done enough for now.

Beginning in late March, the Fed initiated a series of credit-tightening moves by reducing the amount of money banks have to make loans. Those efforts have pushed a key interest rate, the rate banks charge each other for overnight loans, up by a full percentage point.

That in turn triggered an increase in the prime lending rate to 9 percent in May and sent mortgage rates, which had dropped below 10 percent, up to a current level of 10.38 percent.

David Jones, an economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a New York securities dealer, said he believed rates would hold steady at these levels in coming months.

"Greenspan feels he has taken the appropriate tightening steps and that will be enough to cool off demand growth in the second half of the year," Jones said.

"Greenspan believes the economy will not be that strong in the second half and that you shouldn't tighten credit conditions with an economy slowing considerably," said Michael Evans, head of a Washington consulting firm.

David Wyss, chief financial economist at Data Resources Inc., predicted that the Federal Reserve would "keep its head low during the election campaign" and will avoid its strongest tightening move, a boost in the discount rate it charges on money it loans to member banks.

Many analysts believe that Greenspan, and the other members of the Federal Reserve's board of governors, all appointed by President Reagan, would try to keep the economy on an even keel in an effort to promote George Bush's presidential chances.

But some senators at the hearing expressed concern that Greenspan and the Fed had already overdone the efforts at tightening credit conditions and had raised the risk of a recession next year.

"I would come down on the side of avoiding a recession almost at all costs," Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., lectured Greenspan. "I do hope the Fed would not be hypersensitive to signs, real or imagined, of inflation."

Despite the fact that none of the initial funding will come to the Permian Basin, Milling said West Texas plays a major role in the institute's plans because of the vast unrecoverable resources in reservoirs in the region.

The consortium is headquartered at the Bureau of Economic Geology at the UT-Austin campus.

In addition to UT, institute participants include Texas A&M, the University of Alabama, Colorado School of Mines, the University of Kansas, Louisiana State University, Mississippi State University, New Mexico Institute of Mining Technology, University of Oklahoma, Penn State, Stanford, the University of Wyoming and state agencies in Illinois, West Virginia and Alaska.

FED

In his comments on interest rates and inflation, Greenspan was characteristically cautious and in ways ambiguous — a central bank tactic to discourage overreaction in the financial markets.

But in his own way, Greenspan made his priorities for Fed policies clear in discussing inflation and recessions.

"The long-run costs of a return to higher inflation and the risk of this occurring under current circumstances," Greenspan said, "are sufficiently great that Federal Reserve policy at this juncture might well be advised to err more on the side of restrictiveness rather than of stimulus."

Elliott Platt, an economist at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities, said, "Greenspan seems at the moment to be saying that the Fed is concerned about the potential for inflation to acelerate, but he doesn"t ses that happening yet."

Another Wall Street economist, Darwin L. Beck of the First Boston Corp., said: "I think he's saying he hopes rates won't have to go higher. But he's saying they're going to be ever vigilant and that means rates eventually have to go higher."

Such analysts, noting the caution in Greenspan's commentary, warned that their expectations of Fed restraint could be shattered at any moment, perhaps on Thursday, when the government reports on the trade deficit and wholesale prices. If either shows a big increase, the analysts noted, the Fed could be forced to react by raising the discount rate right away.

Greenspan sought to dispel financial market speculation that two developments are driving the Fed to raise its 6 percent discount rate, which it charges financial institutions for loans. The typical increase, of one-half or one percentage point, sends a shock through the economy, provoking increases in everything from home mortgages to credit-card loans.

Increases in foreign rates, notably in West Germany and Britain, could force the Fed to raise rates to keep the dollar from falling and to discourage foreigners from selling their investments in the United States.

Greenspan allowed that foreign rate increases could bring such pressure on the Fed, but he said he thought such pressures had abated. "I know of no actions contemplated by any of my counterparts in the international arena" that would make a Fed increase necessary, he said.

Surgical laser makes debut at Physicians and Surgeons

From Staff Reports

The only KTP/532 surgical laser in the Permian Basin was used Tuesday for several surgical procedures at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital in Midland.

This sophisticated machine is the only one between Dallas and El Paso and recently was acquired by P&S. Last Tuesday, it was used for gynecological procedures by Dr. Luis Montaldo and for urological procedures by Dr. Nick Shroff.

Dr. Thom Lobe, a pediatric surgeon at the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston, conducted an in-service Monday evening for physicians and assisted Tuesday in the procedures. He has worked with the KTP/532 laser for more than two years.

The KTP/532 fiberoptic laser combines all the benefits and applications of all previous surgical lasers in one system. It is far more efficient than other lasers and easier to operate, according to Roger Middaugh, sale manager with the machine's manufacturing company.

This laser has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration to be used in dermatology and plastic surgery (removal of port wine stains and tattoos), urology, otology (the ear), laryngology, rectal neoplasm surgery (removal of rectal growths), neurosurgery (soft tumors), otorhinolaryngology (ear, nose and throat), gynecology, gastroenterology, lower tract and intra-uterine gynecology and general surgery.

Laser surgery is a more viable option to conventional surgery, when it can be used. Lasers produce less bleeding, pain and swelling and physicians can use less invasive procedures in treating a variety of problems. Patients have shorter hospital stays and many procedures can be done on an out-patient basis.

One such use of the KTP/532 is an inner-operative laparoscopy. A surgeon will enter the abdomen with pencil-sized probes through one or more tiny punctures, instead of a wide incision. A telescope inside the laparoscope gives a clear view of the internal organs. The laser beam is inserted through another opening, allowing the physician to make bloodless incisions through tissue, coagulate bleeding tissue or eradicate tumors by vaporizing them. These incisions are less traumatic to the body and the patient experiences much less pain.

One primary advantage of the KTP/532 is its flexible fiberoptics. It has been approved for neurosurgery because of its ability to precisely remove tissue with minimal mechanical and thermal damage to surrounding sensitive tissue. In gastroenterology, the flexible fiber of the laser can be directed through a fiberoptic endoscope to place the physician close to polyps and obstructions. Growths in the esophagus, stomach, duodenum, colon and rectum can be treated through the endoscope with the laser.

Two features differentiate the KTP/532 from other lasers. First, the laser energy is delivered to the site by a thin quartz fiber, allowing it to reach almost anywhere in the body with little or no incisions. Second, the KTP/532 takes the place of two or more lasers because it can coagulate small vessels and cut or vaporize tissue.

KTP/532 for the three components that make up the special laboratory-grown crystal: Potassium (K), Titanyl (T) and Phosphate (P). The light inside the machine passes through this special crystal and is converted to a wavelength of 532 nanometers which is seen by the human eyes as green.

The KTP/532 surgical laser was used Tuesday for gynecological procedures at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital in Midland. This machine is the only one between Dallas and El Paso.

Brett's story reminds drinking must be accompanied by responsibility

Humphreys

The citizens of the United States have been beseiged by written information concerning drinking and driving, perhaps to the point of having our sensitivities dulled. However, our tolerance of this problem and the carnage it produces is an ongoing reproach to our society.

What follows is a poignant essay written by Thomas J. Poulton M.D., of Omaha, Neb. It concerns one of his patients who is now paralyzed from the neck down (quadraplegic) as a result of an alcohol-related crash.

Brett is intensely curious about the rapidly enlarging world about him. His probing curiosity about life stimulates the adults around him to inquire more actively about their own lives. He is like most other three-year-olds, I think: full of delightful mischief, grant smiles without hesitation and rapidly retreating to tears at those times when life is just too much bigger than he is. And, like many children, he cannot conceal a certain charming, if smug, satisfaction as he masters each new developmental task. Those tasks often come hard for Brett.

Brett has many other friends. Some, such as I, are new friends. Others, such as Grandma, and Daddy, go way back to before the accident that he now pretends not to remember. The accident? Brett's mother and baby brother, Matthew, were killed by a drunk driver in a violent accident on a softly beautiful starlit evening last summer. I did not know the driver, but I know he had spent the day enjoying a party with friends and relatives. It was a day of happiness and sharing, of warmth and comradery. It was also a day of drinking.

I grew up in a home in which the consumption of alcohol was uncommon, but not condemned. Nevertheless, the importance of responsibility and the possible adverse consequences of drinking and driving were emphasized. I can still easily recite a litany of facts about alcohol consumption and driving: a quarter of a million Americans have died in alcohol-related accidents in the last decade; one American life is lost every 20 minutes in an alcohol-related accident; half of all Americans will be involved in an alcohol-related accident during their lifetimes; alcohol-related crashes are the leading cause of death among Americans between the ages of 16 and 24 years; 2,000 persons are injured each day in alcohol-related accidents; two million drunk-driving collisions occur each year; 80 percent of Americans drive after drinking; drunk drivers cost US tax payers in excess of $20 billion annually; only about one in 1,000 drunk drivers on the road is arrested. I knew all this, but I really did not know anything about the human cost of drunk driving until I met my new friend Brett.

At least one person told the drunk driver he ought not drive, but the warning was waved off. No one stopped him and no one tried to save his life by preventing him from driving while he was so obviously drunk. He also died in the fiery crash, burned alive in the first few minutes after he wove repeatedly across the center line and crashed at 60 mph into the car carrying Brett.

Some might say that Brett is lucky: he suffered no brain damage. Intellectually he is quite alive — I believe he will go to college one day. But Brett is paralyzed below the level of his second cervical vertebra. His arms and legs will never move. He cannot breathe at all on his own, nor will he...ever.

As a specialist in pediatric intensive care medicine, I see and care for many very severely ill and injured children. The jarring horror of my first moments with Brett ripped a still unrepaired hole in the wall of objectivity that usually protects me from the pain of seeing a seriously injured child.

"He's not breathing," shouted the flight nurse over the scream of the engine as we unloaded the child from the helicopter and rushed into the emergency department. The neurosurgeon and I examined the form below us. The cherub was motionless, save for a grimace when we ventilated him by mask. "Can you open your eyes?" urged my colleague. When he did promptly open his eyes we both gasped, staring almost uncomprehendingly at one another, then back to the figure on the table. The frightened young eyes reached out so powerfully in their panic that we felt ourselves pulled to the child. The reality of the nearly unimaginable injury was upon us.

"Oh, God, it's his C-spine — this kid's a quad." The words were whispered. They would have been wholly unbearable if spoken any louder. Even gently whispered, those words conveyed a sentence of harsh finality known to all in the room, save one. A few slow, deep breaths and physicians and nurses resumed control and function: "We're sorry, Brett. You've been in a car accident. This is the hospital. We're doctors and nurses — we're going to help you, honey. Don't you have the most handsome blonde hair we've seen today? This is Tickles, our stuffed bear. Can he snuggle close by you? He loves little boys." Later, Brett and his father would cry together, as one generation struggled to be brave for the next, unable to soften the story that had to be shared.

A portable ventilator now breathes for Brett. The annual cost of providing his necessary medical and nursing care exceeds $180,000. The man who caused the accident was uninsured. The cost in anguish and emotional pain for Brett's family and for the family of the drunk driver cannot be guessed. The lives of all involved will never be the same.

Although the police report assigned the responsibility for the accident to only one man, we are all to blame. Why do we share this burden? Because we have driven after drinking. Because we have welcomed friends into our homes, entertained them with alcohol, then waved them warmly into the night. Because we have laughed at and accepted public intoxication. Because we have tolerated weak and inconsistent enforcement of drunk driving laws. Because we have accepted lenient sentences for drunk drivers. Because we have conveniently ignored signs of alcoholism in our patients.

Perhaps we can only truly know that which we have experienced. My friendship with Brett has added much to my understanding of the realities of drunk driving and of life. Few intend to hurt or kill others, yet it happens, and the consequences fill our forevers.

I grieve with Brett for the mommy who can no longer kiss and hug away the hurts of childhood, and for the little brother who will not play with him. I share with him the emptiness of a football by lying by the fireplace unthrown, of the unopened bag of marbles on the table beside his bed, of the laughing horseplay and the flirtations of young manhood that may never come.

Yet life goes on. I will not demean the resilience of man or child by ascribing to Brett extraordinary bravery or superhuman determination. He is, after all, a little boy. He still laughs and he still cries. He manipulates people and he likes french fries with lots of ketchup. He uses a computer masterfully with a mouth control that also enables him to drive his own wheelchair. Such is our nature, about which Brett has taught me so much: given the slightest toehold, we dig in and we grow and survive. That is our nature. yet with the joy remains the sadness and a certain loss of innocence — even for the physicians who thought they already had the big picture. We survive, but the shocking ease with which beautiful things can be broken haunts us. Twenty-five thousand Americans die each year in auto accidents involving alcohol. Two are them are missed a great deal by my little friend Brett.

Uterine monitoring may help prevent preemies

NEW YORK (AP) — Simple, inexpensive monitoring of uterine contractions during pregnancy can help predict and prevent the birth of premature infants, whose medical care costs the nation $2 billion annually, a new study shows.

The monitoring, done once a week beginning in the seventh month of pregnancy, identified 70 percent of women who later gave birth to premature infants, said the study's author, Dr. Michael Katz of the Children's Hospital of San Francisco.

"We can use this data to make prematurity a preventable event," Katz said Tuesday. "Not always — but most of it," he said.

About 350,000 babies are born prematurely in the United States each year, said Richard Leavitt, a spokesman for the March of Dimes in White Plains, N.Y. Ten percent of them have serious health problems, and the bill for intensive care for premature infants totals $2 billion each year, Leavitt said.

Until now, doctors have had few ways to identify women likely to give birth prematurely, Katz said in New York at a reporters' seminar sponsored by the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital of Memphis, Tenn.

He noted that prevention of premature births could cut medical costs drastically by reducing reliance on extremely expensive intensive care units for newborns.

The techniques he has devised to prevent premature births might add $100 or $200 to the cost of a pregnant woman's health care, he said. In comparison, it costs about $2,000 per day to treat a premature infant in a newborn intensive care unit, he said.

Dr. Russell Chesney, professor of pediatrics at the University of Tennessee and past president of the Society for Pediatric Research, said after hearing Katz's presentation, "I was struck by his results. ... If we could identify those people who would benefit, it would be very exciting."

Chesney added, however, that many low-income women might not be helped by Katz's methods because they don't consult an obstetrician during their pregnancy. "You don't see them — they show up two weeks before delivery," he said.

Low-income women often cannot afford prenatal care, and lack of prenatal care is statistically linked to a much higher probability of premature birth.

Katz said his research has focused on the early identification and treatment of women likely to have premature births — not on the social problem of getting care to women who can't afford it.

The key to early identification is a device called a tocodynamometer, a small instrument worn around the waist that measures contractions of the uterus.

In a study of 150 black, inner-city women in Philadelphia, Katz and Dr. Denise Main of Mt. Zion Hospital in San Francisco measured the women's uterine contractions with a tocodynamometer in a doctor's office for one hour, once a week, from the 28th to the 32nd weeks of pregnancy, Katz said.

FDA approves wart treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new treatment is available for the estimated 8 million Americans who suffer each year from genital warts.

The Food and Drug Administration announced recently that it has OK'd direct injection of genetically engineered alpha interferon into the warts.

The FDA said a study of 192 patients showed they exhibited marked improvement after receiving interferon injections three times a week for up to three weeks.

Of the 192, 42 percent experienced complete clearing of all their treated warts, 24 percent had a 75 percent to 99 percent reduction in the size of their treated warts and 18 percent had a 50 percent to 74 percent reduction in the size of their treated warts, the FDA said.

Previously, the most effective treatments were painful and potentially scarring removal by freezing or burning.

Some types of genital warts can be treated with direct application of conventional anti-infective drugs, but this treatment often is not effective.

Alpha interferon was first approved in June 1986 as a treatment for hairy cell leukemia — a rare form of leukemia.

Although the presence of genital warts is more distressing than health-threatening, some studies have suggested there could be a relationship in women between the warts and later development of cervical cancer.

SOUND ADVICE

By Orland Purcell, M.S., Audiologist

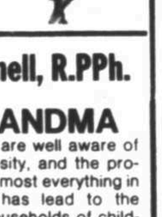

READING STAR TREK

A good many of us spend an inordinate amount of hours in front of our television sets each day. Yet, this privilege is denied the hearing-impaired person unless the T.V. set is equipped with a caption decoder. This small box-like device allows hearing-impaired people to join the video revolution that we have experienced in the last decade. The decoder allows television dialogue to appear as subtitles, called closed captions. This is accomplished by capturing the appropriate part of the broadcast signal and converting it to print. While not all broadcast programming is currently closed captioned, a significant portion is. This warrants the purchase of a T.V. caption decoder for a cost similar to that of an inexpensive VCR.

For those with hearing difficulty there is much that technology has to offer. To learn more about hearing instruments that can return the world of sound to your lifestyle, we invite you to come to AUDIO ACOUSTICS HEARING CENTERS, INC., 32 Village Court. We have a "sound idea" that you will be happy to learn about. Tel. 682-5033. Open 9-5 Mon.-Fri.

TELL GRANDMA

Nearly all parents are well aware of their children's curiosity, and the proclivity of some to put most everything in their mouths. This has lead to the adoption by most households of child-resistant bottles for medications. In addition, all medications are stored away from the reach of children. However, government statistics reveal that one in six cases in which children swallowed prescription medicine involved a grandparent's medication. These children were either visiting their grandparents or the grandparents were visiting the children. Regardless of the exact circumstance, most grandparents need to be made aware of the danger posed by easily accessible medication in the home. Because most do not live with the possibility, they have yet to childproof their homes. Parents should inform them of the facts.

In addition to medication many household products are poisonous and should be kept away from children. If you have any questions on drugs don't hesitate to give us a call at 689-9999, ALLEN'S PHARMACY, 2101 Midland. We provide 24 hour emergency service. Open: 8-7 Mon. thru Sat., 6-10 Sundays.

HINT:
Since the federal legislation on child-resistant packaging in 1974, childhood poisonings from prescription drugs have dropped of dramatically.

AN IRRITABLE COLON

One out of every two people will complain of recurrent cramps in the area of the lower abdomen at one time or other. This symptom can be experienced in conjunction with intermittent bouts of diarrhea and constipation, or other varieties of bowel habits. If no organic cause is detected, these symptoms point to a condition known as irritable bowel syndrome. The important thing for a patient to remember is that the condition is not serious. It is thought to result from anxiety, stress, and/or provoking irregular muscle contractions. Patients should try to relax in an effort to head off problems. The physician may also see fit to prescribe dietary therapy or even antispasmodic drugs to help control muscle action.

In addition to cramplike abdominal pain, some persons with an irritable colon will also have ulcer-type symptoms such as heartburn or upper abdominal indigestion. When these symptoms occur, try to remember what foods or activities triggered them. This information will be very helpful to your physician. ## Taste-testers pay high price for convenience

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

OK, I admit it — breakfast at our house is a sit-down meal only on weekends. During the week, we're usually all so rushed just getting up and going (sleeping seems to be more desirable than eating, at least at that hour of the morning), that taking time for a "real" breakfast is out of the question.

Still, I don't want the kids to go hungry, so we usually have something they can eat "on the run," as they say. One of their current favorite breakfasts-in-a-hurry is the croissant sandwich. We occasionally indulge in fast-food restaurant croissant sandwiches, but that gets expensive in a hurry. The next best thing would be a similar breakfast you can buy in the grocery store, stash in the freezer or refrigerator, and sap in the microwave when you need it.

And guess what — Swift Premium Brown 'N Serve Breakfast Sandwiches are just what the hungry kids ordered. Available in five varieties — bacon and egg croissant, ham and cheese croissant, sausage and egg English muffin, sausage and biscuit, and sausage, egg and cheese biscuit — these sandwiches can be heated in a microwave or a conventional oven.

Of course we had to check some out for taste, price and advertising accuracy. Since the small taste-testers prefer croissants to biscuits or English muffins, and since the bacon and egg croissants were the only ones available in the supermarket when we bought them, that's what we tried.

Bacon and egg croissants from Swift Premium (or, to be more technical, Swift-Eckrich Inc.) are packaged one per box (which can be a pain if you are trying to feed more than one person). Price per box is $1.28. (Price listed is from a local supermarket. Price at other locations may vary.)

Label advertising claims not only is the product "convenient," but also "a fast and nutritious way to begin your day. Simply pop one in your microwave (or conventional oven) and you have a hot, delicious sandwich perfect for breakfast or any time you want a quick meal. ..."

Well, OK, I'll buy the sandwiches' "convenience," but if they are so nutritious, why doesn't the manufacturer print the nutrition information on the label?

The egg in the croissant was strange-looking, to say the least — it was a ring of white with a yellow circle in the middle — I guess it was supposed to look like a fried egg that had been hard-cooked for a sandwich, but it just succeeded in looking strange. The bacon was limp and semi-flavorless, but the croissant itself was light, tender and tasty.

The children ate the bacon (they don't get it very often, and when they do they savor every bite, even if it isn't good bacon), tossed out the egg and enjoyed the croissant. They actually prefer ham and cheese croissants, but none were available when we bought ours.

I admit, saving time in the morning is a priority with us — there never seems to be enough of it. But trying to save money on store-bought croissants by spending almost as much as fast-food croissants cost seems ridiculous. Maybe I'll just buy a package of bakery or frozen croissants and fill them myself.

New south-of-the-border restaurant is 'charming'

CASA MADRID: 911 S. Big Spring; three minutes from Wall and Big Spring with ample parking.

By The Office Gourmet

Upon entering Casa Madrid, a charming new Mexican cafe, patrons select the table of their choice. We were promptly welcomed in a true Spanish manner by a smiling, friendly waitress.

The restaurant is tastefully carpeted, and the green linen tablecloths blend well with the quaint hand-painted walls of cactus landscapes.

The menu offers burritos, flautas, chili rellenos plus a few family-style selections. The enchiladas and chalupas are especially fresh, tender and tasty. Although the chicken taco filling was excellent, the appropriately warm taco shell was dripping in oil and quite unpleasant.

Patrons also can create their own luncheon plate from the a la carte menu which includes nachos, chalupas etc. These portions are quite small however, and possibly will appeal more to a lite appetite than to those who are very hungry.

A delightful innovation is the "Specialty of the House" — a small tortilla cup (rather like a minature taco salad bowl) filled with Spanish rice, beans or some particularly succulent, chunky guacamole.

The waitress accommodated the table with her cheerful service, but did have to be reminded to refill the beverage glasses. The huge dinner-plate-size sopapilla topped off the meal with great style.

All during lunch we expected to see the arrival of a strolling mariachi band come serenade us due to the warm South-of-the-Border atmosphere here. We departed after half an hour in a very happy mood with the faint echo of an "hasta la vista" ringing in our ears.

Casa Madrid's prices range from 89 cents — $15.99 (family-style). Personal checks, but no credit cards, are accepted. Hours are: 10 a.m.-2 p.m. and 5 p.m.-9 p.m. Mon.- Fri., 9 a.m.-2 p.m. and 5 p.m.-9 p.m Sat. and 9 a.m.-2 p.m. Sun.

BETTER BUSINESS

Customers' demands not always justifiable

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

In this age of increasing impatience, we find more and more consumers are demanding instant satisfaction, regardless of whether or not their demands are justified.

The Better Business Bureau receives calls every day from people who insist that the BBB serve their needs by forcing the cancellation of a contract simply because they have changed their minds.

Others question why a store cannot be forced to make a cash refund on returned merchandise. Still others complain to the BBB about charges for service calls. It seems some customers appear to believe all service and repair should be "on the house." And some think they should be given a new appliance when the old one plays out during the warranty period (never mind what the warranty says), or perhaps they believe that the store should take back any item which they have used and all charges for the time it was in use should be forgotten.

The thinking of our society is changing at such a fast rate and it is so different from the recent past. Along with the society becoming filled with so many "uneducated" high school graduates that we are always reading about, there is a growing breed of irresponsible consumers who assert what they believe to be their "rights" by making demands that are really quite unreasonable.

So many seem to be firmly convinced that they, somehow, surely must be protected against what frequently turns out to be their own impudent actions, and they appear to believe they have an absolute unqualifed "guarantee of satisfaction."

Those who have the mistaken belief that this is what a consumer protection agency, private or governmental, is supposed to insure, are multiplying. These agencies also must contend with those who are just plain greedy or gullible enough to expect something for nothing.

A good example of this strange thinking is the consumer who bought a $7 pair of shoes at a discount chain store. In a couple of weeks the shoes had ripped out. The store agreed that the shoes were faulty and offered to replace them. The consumer, however, demanded a full cash refund and when the store manager refused, she placed a long distance call to the company's home office to pursue the refund. When that didn't work, she then demanded that the BBB not only secure the refund, but also the long distance telephone expense.

Other examples of irresponsible consumers: 1) A consumer dreams up an imaginary defect in trying to back out of a deal, 2) signs a contract without reading it then complains when he or she is expected to live up the the agreement or 3) buys a 1980 car "as is" and expects it to run like a 1988 model, etc.

Consumers know that most companies, as a matter of policy, extend themselves to render satisfaction on any customer grievance no matter how trivial or unfair. Unfortunately, this cxauses the circle of demanding and unreasonable customers to expand. It is inevitable that this, in turn, adds to the business' costs and results in higher prices for all consumers.

'Remedy' too hot to handle

WEST JORDAN, Utah (AP) — A woman following a newspaper story's advice to yeast infection sufferers tossed her underpants in the microwave and sparked a fire, authorities say.

Firefighters rushed to the woman's home in this south Salt Lake County community and quickly extinguished the flames, but not before her microwave oven was destroyed and a nearby wall scorched, said County Fire Chief Don Berry.

Berry said when the embarrassed woman explained how the fire started, firefighters were hard-pressed not to laugh. However, he said the incident's humorous side was tempered by its potential for developing into a serious fire if it had not quickly been extinguished. There were no injuries.

Berry said the woman, who was not identified, decided to "cook" her underpants after reading a news service article quoting University of Florida obstetrics and gynecology researchers as saying the bacteria responsible for yeast infections can be killed in a microwave oven in five minutes on the high-power setting.

The article emphasized the process only works on cotton underpants, and also recommended the underwear be freshly laundered and slightly damp.

The woman was certain the underwear that caught on fire was 100 percent cotton, but fire officials believe they were probably of an artificial material. If the underpants were indeed cotton, the elastic material may have been to blame, they said.

Berry said that after seeing what happened to the woman's kitchen, he could not recommend the microwave process. "I just wouldn't do it," he said.

'Healthy beef' advertisements cause controversy

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Advertisements indicating that a lean, trim, cooked 3-ounce portion of beef fits within the dietary guidelines are stating fact.

Last week the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a Washington-based consumer-interest group, labeled Beef Industry Council ads which contain this statement as misleading.

Lean beef is included in dietary guidelines from the U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services, the American Heart Association and other national health organizations.

The CSPI didn't dispute this fact, but based its criticism on claims that the average serving of beef is more than 3 counces and that popular beef products, such as hamburgers, contain large amounts of fat.

The dietary guidelines recommend 6 to 7 ounces of lean meat, poultry, fish or protein alternate each day. If you overeat these or any other foods, it can lead to overweight and obesity.

So whether you eat your protein food for the day in the form of 6 ounces of lean beef for dinner, or two 3-ounce servings at two different meals, you're still within the guidelines.

It's true that some of our most popular foods are high in fat, often because they're fried. Eating lots of chicken-fried steak, fried chicken, fried fish, fried hamburgers, fried pies and french fries will put excess fat in your diet.

The nutritionist said the key to including beef or any meat in a healthy diet is selecting lean cuts, knowing the recommended serving sizes, balancing them out over the day and choosing low-fat cooking method.

Consumers can easily find lean cuts in the meat case. Most retailers are now removing all exterior fat or trimming it to less than ¼-inch. Beef also is being pre-cut into serving sizes for smaller packages.

Results of a recent national beef market basket survey conducted by meat scientists at Texas A&M University showed that more than 42 percent of beef retail cuts had no external fat and the overall fat thickness for steaks and roasts was .14 inch.

Consumers are also buying more lean ground beef. Figures on the distribution of ground beef type showed almost 60 percent of the ground beef in stores is lean or extra lean.

Since many retailers clearly label lean cuts and the type of ground beef, consumers can use these as guides to selecting lean beef.

DEAR ABBY

First criminal offense forgiven

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, you published a letter from "Depressed Down South," a nursing student who had been convicted of shoplifting. She worried constantly about how this might affect her future employment prospects.

Your recommendation to get counseling to help "Depressed" deal with her emotional problems is right on the money. But there is something else she can do that can put her fears to rest.

Abby, many states have laws that permit a one-time offender to have the conviction and/or arrest record "expunged," erased and/or set aside. "Depressed" should contact a criminal defense lawyer in her state to look into the availability of that procedure. If the conviction is set aside, some states even have laws that permit job applicants to truthfully state that they have never been arrested, much less convicted.

If any of your readers have a similar problem and don't know the name of a criminal defense lawyer to consult, they should write or call: National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, 1110 Vermont Ave. N.W., Suite 1150, Washington, D.C. 20005. Telep[illegible] (202) 872-8688.

And to "D[illegible]" good luck! — JOHN H. Hi[illegible]SON III, TREASURER, NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF CRIMINAL DEFENSE LAWYERS

DEAR MR. HINGSON: Thank you for some valuable information that could turn some lives around. One mistake does not a loser make. Justice is sometimes tempered with mercy.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow in my early 60s. Several months ago I started going to baseball games, symphony concerts and the theater with a gentleman whose wife died a year ago. I really enjoyed his company. Two weeks ago he called and asked me to accompany him to a function in the middle of the week. I had to decline because I had a previous engagement with friends. Since then, he hasn't called me. I don't know whether he's angry, hurt or out of town.

Should I call him, and, if I do, what excuse do I use for calling? I miss his companionship and the nice places he used to take me. — STRANDED IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR STRANDED: Call him. You don't need an "excuse" — use the real reason. You miss him. You're past the age of playing games, so tell him the truth, and invite him over for a home-cooked dinner.

DEAR ABBY: Here's a tip for all those people who are bothered by moochers who want to visit them during the season: When we retired to Florida nine years ago, I promised myself we wouldn't operate a motel for moochers, so I made my second bedroom into a sewing room. Now when anybody calls and wants to visit, I tell them we will be happy to reserve a room for them at a nearby motel — then I ask how much they want to pay. That solves the problem.

I do not care to be stuck with dirty sheets and towels and vacationing folks who keep different hours.

If they get mad and don't want to come, that suits us fine. — 'NO VACANCIES' IN FLORIDA

Summer security begins at home

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — As millions of Americans hit the roads for summer vacation, burglars and other crooks go into action for one of their busiest seasons.

Summer is one of the peak times for burglary, police statistics show, thanks to the combination of closed schools and absent vacationers.

The insurance industry reports that most burglars turn out to be school-age young people.

That means, of course, that most burglars are not professionals, just adolescents taking advantage of unguarded homes during their idle time. A few simple precautions can discourage most of them, according to the Insurance Information Institute.

Lots of companies are advertising complex and costly alarm systems, and many of them do a good job. They can turn on lights, set off noisy bells and sirens and even alert a central office or the police in the event someone tries to enter your home.

Probably not everyone needs or can afford a high-tech system. But there are still things they can do to help protect the home.

To begin with, lock doors and windows, including the attic, basement and garage. Sure, this sounds obvious. Yet police report that many burglars get into homes through doors and windows carelessly left unlocked.

The insurance institute recommends deadbolt or double cylinder locks for doors, and notes that a variety of good, inexpensive window locks are on sale.

In many areas, local police will do a free security audit of the home and make recommendations.

When away, try to make the home look lived in, the institute says.

For example, have someone mow the lawn, and ask a neighbor to collect the mail and newspapers instead of stopping delivery. The fewer people who know you're away, the better.

Do not hide keys outside the home, burglars know where to look. Leave a key with a friend or neighbor who can check on the house from time to time.

Get automatic timers for lights to keep the place looking lived in. Keep ladders out of sight and locked up.

Valuable items should be locked in a safe deposit box or other secure storage.

If a burglar does break in, stereos, televisions and such are among the most popular items to steal.

Permanently mark them in an inconspicuous place with initials, Social Security number or some other identifying mark. Often, police will lend an electric engraving tool for this purpose. With this mark, if police do recover the stolen items, you will be able to identify yours and get them back.

When back from vacation, look for signs of burglary before entering the home. Surprising a burglar could be a deadly mistake.

And while on the road, remember you are not immune from crime either. Be wary of pickpockets and setups, such as someone dropping a handful of change to distract you while an accomplice steals luggage or other property.

Some thieves have adopted the strategy of putting up signs that say "Beware of Pickpockets," and watching people to see which pocket they check on viewing the sign.

Home alarm systems fact of 1980s life

By HANS FANTEL
New York Times News Service

Time was when a moat and a drawbridge were the preferred home security devices. Things improved, and for a while the residents of many towns could boast that they never needed to lock their doors. That too has changed in recent years, and with more than 3 million burglaries reported annually in the United States, burglar alarms are becoming a staple of domestic life. Roughly 800,000 such systems were sold last year, and the million mark will probably be exceeded in 1988.

Until recently, such devices required professional installers to string wires from sensors around the home to a central unit, which sounded the alarm. But a new wireless alarm is gaining popularity. It performs all the functions of a conventional system, but is so simple to install that even those whose mechanical aptitude does not extend beyond the use of a screwdriver can easily do the job themselves. The result is a substantial saving in cost.

Conventional "hard wired" alarm systems usually took two installers two days to provide what may be considered minimum protection for an eight-room house: intrusion sensors at front and back doors, along with sensors at all ground-level windows. The bill for an installed system of this kind often ran upward of $2,000. The wireless systems can cut the price by 50 percent.

Like all intrusion alarms, the wireless models depend mainly on so-called perimeter sensors: magnetic devices, no bigger than a matchbox, attached to the doors and windows that mark the outer border of the protected area within the house. When a door or window is jimmied, the motion causes these sensors to close a switch and sound the alarm.

In the new systems, each sensor has its own battery-powered radio transmitter, which broadcasts the intrusion signal to the central unit. No wires need be strung throughout the house and then concealed.

The sensors can be mounted with a few screws, or even stuck to doors and windows with adhesive fasteners supplied with the equipment.

In addition to perimeter sensors, modern alarm systems have motion detectors that sense the presence of a person in the prohibited space. This is a second line of defense against burglars who might sneak past the protected perimeter.

Typical of such systems is the Heath-Zenith Model SS-5910, which has a list price of $329 and consists of a control unit, two door sensors, window sensors, motion sensor and tamper alarm. It can be expanded with door-window sensors at $29.97 apiece and motion sensors at $99.97.

One useful feature of the Heath-Zenith system is that separate surveillance zones may be selected for coverage at any time. For example, if the family is in the house, the perimeter sensors may remain active while the motion detector is shut off; or the garage may be be "on" while the main house is not.

Similar systems are offered by Black & Decker, Schlage and Universal Security Instruments.

Simple installation and lower cost are not the only virtues of the new wireless systems. They are also as easy to take down as they are to put up, a decided advantage for people who rent. When you move, you take the whole system with you.

After being "just around the corner" for more than 30 years, picture phones have arrived.

Since last fall, Mitsubishi Electric of America has sold 64,000 of its new VisiTel units in this country, a $400 device that looks like a TV with a 4½-inch screen but also has a built-in camera lens and a cord that plugs into a telephone jack.

Introducing the automobile that worldwide automotive journalists have described as

"THE BEST IN THE WORLD"

The all-new BMW 735i.

"The best big sedan in Europe is no longer built by Daimler-Benz. But it still comes from Germany. The BMW 735i represents the best sedan in the world."
Automobile

"While another prestigious German automaker has busied itself increasing profit margins on its cars, the folks at Bavarian Motor Works have designed and built a much improved product line. The flagship of this brave new fleet is the second generation 735i."
Sports Car Illustrated

"The seats are covered by Nappa leather of a richness not found in any Mercedes and hold one better than the Unterurkheim product. In general, it's a much more "human" place to be than the insides of a Mercedes."
Road and Track

"What we have here is the best-handling large sedan in the world, bar none. It's superbly comfortable, yet its handling will put to shame many so-called sports cars. So okay, the BMW 735i is filled with more goodies than Santa's workshop on Dec. 24, but what's it like to drive? in a word — FABULOUS."
Motor Trend

"If a $49,000 car can be called a bargain, surely the 735i qualifies. Drive one and I'm sure you'll agree."
Sports Car Illustrated

The "best in the world" is here in the Permian Basin. You owe it to yourself to experience the thrill of a test drive in the new BMW 735i. See and feel it today at Broncho BMW — Odessa.
