Reagan maintains forceful stand against Libya

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — By urging 1,500 U.S. workers to return home from "imminent danger" in Libya, President Reagan apparently is trying to position himself to deal forcefully with Col. Moammar Khadafy if necessary.

If the appeal is successful and all Americans leave the North African nation, Reagan will have averted the potential for them being used as pawns in the festering dispute between Libya and the United States.

Fears for the safety of the Americans and fresh memories of the seizure of U.S. hostages in Iran effectively have barred the administration from considering a wide range of options up to now, including an oil embargo.

However, the only firm that immediately ordered its workers out of Libya in response to the president's request was Marathon Oil, which had just eight employees there.

Occidental Petroleum said it has told its employees they are free to leave if they wish. Exxon, which announced last month it was withdrawing its workers from Libya and terminating operations there, said it was arranging for its "fewer than 100" employees to leave Libya if they desire.

Other firms had no immediate comment.

State Department officials were to be available to discuss the Libyan situation with oil industry representatives today and department spokesman David Nall said several company executives were expected to accept the offer.

State Department travel warnings issued as early as last May have had little effect in reducing the numbers of Americans in Libya. Many say they have well-paid jobs and do not feel they are in danger even though all U.S. diplomatic posts in the country have been shut down.

The travel warning was upgraded to a travel ban Thursday in conjunction with the plea for U.S. citizens already there to return. No other country is the object of such a ban although the government advises U.S. travelers to stay away from several other countries where relations are strained.

The action came as border guards kept close watch for two purported Libyan assasination squads said to be trying to slip into the United States. A notice posted at check points on the U.S.-Mexican border gives descriptions of members of both teams and declares their aim is to kill Reagan and other U.S. officials.

Some of the officials presumed to be possible targets implied that the travel ban may be only a preliminary move.

"I don't rule out potential further steps, but the actions taken are justified by the prevailing circumstances," Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told reporters in Brussels.

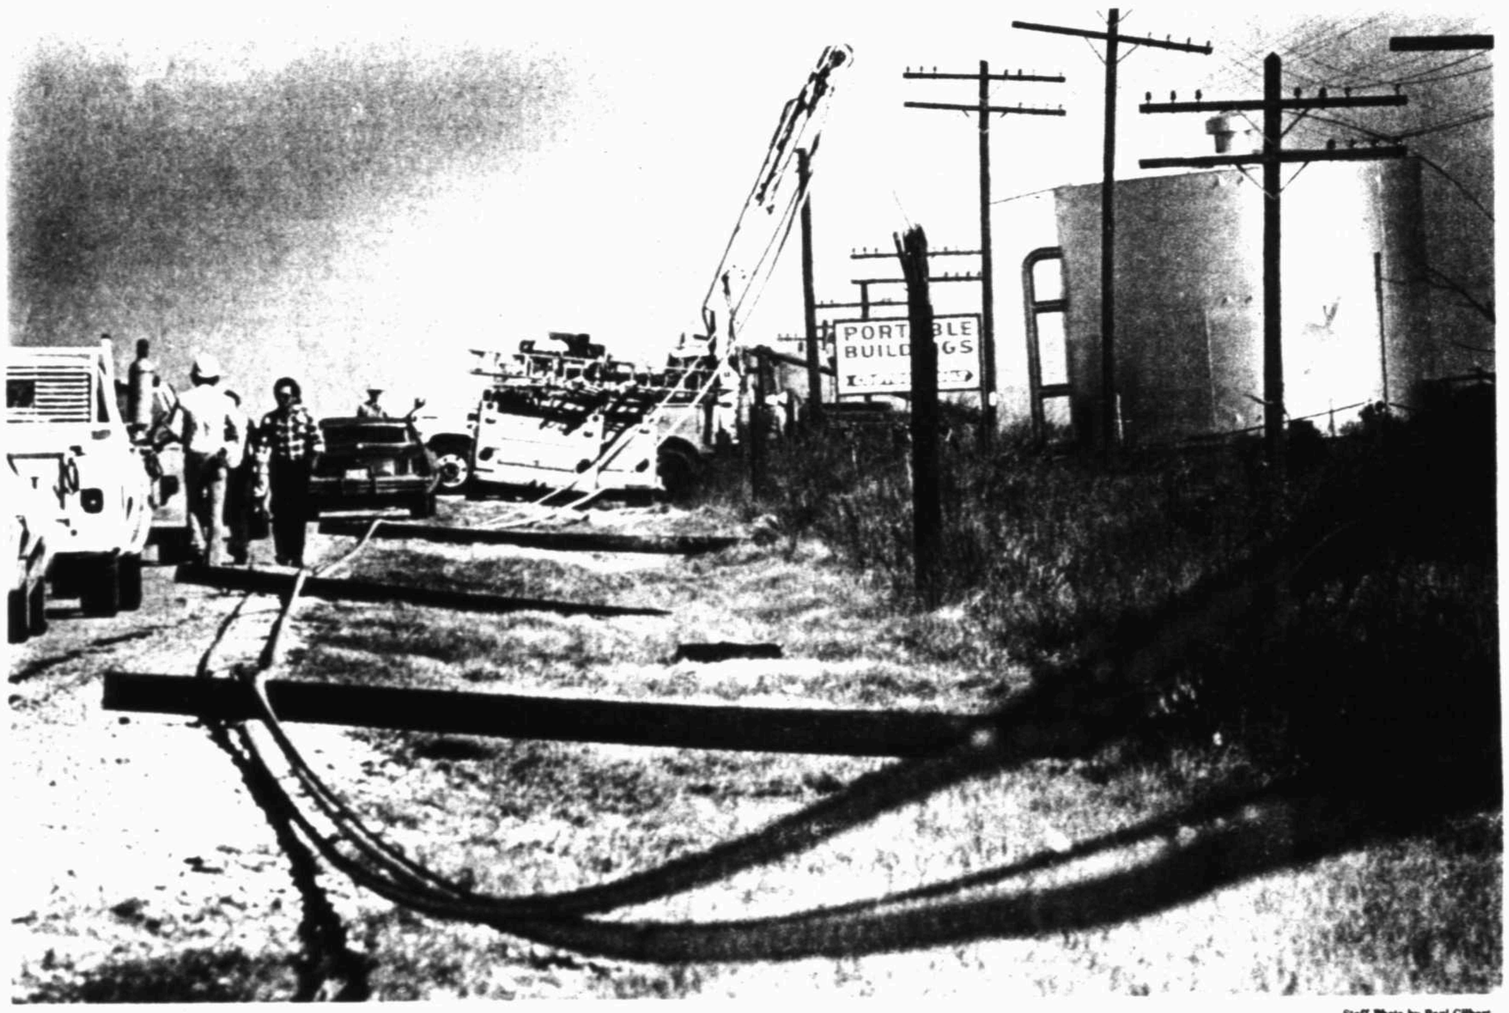

Haig said the United States is not bent on "victimizing Libya" but is simply taking "prudent steps in light of Libya's terrorist activities."

A senior administration official, briefing reporters under the ground rule that he not be identified, said no options have been ruled out and that the government's review of the situation continues.

Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee said Reagan's strategy is to get the Americans out first and then determine whether stronger actions are needed.

He said Reagan's action will enhance the safety of U.S. citizens, take away U.S. oil experts Libya needs and deny Libya the ability to "retaliate against American citizens" for any future actions.

The moves were announced by Deputy Secretary of State William Clark, who declined to link them to the administration's belief that Khadafy has dispatched assassins to the United States.

The telephone toll

Some long-distance telephone service was disrupted for several hours Thursday afternoon when a truck towing an oil storage tank, seen at right, failed to clear telephone lines and sheared 15 poles on West Highway 80 about six miles west of Midland. The incident happened about noon. According to Jay Allen, a spokesman for Southwestern Bell, long distance service to several points west of Midland was cut off until 4:10 p.m. There were no injuries in the incident.

Withdrawal won't injure oil industry

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Withdrawal of American workers from Libyan oil fields would inflict no lasting damage on the industry that's the backbone of Libya's economy, analysts say.

"From an oil production viewpoint, there would be only minor consequences" if American oil workers left Libya, said Constantine Fliakos, an international energy specialist at Merrill Lynch & Co., an investment firm.

Marathon Oil Co., the only U.S. oil company that ordered its American employees to leave their Libyan stations Thursday, said the withdrawal of its eight Americans would not substantially affect its operations.

Like the other five U.S. oil companies now operating in Libya, Marathon relies mostly on non-American workers to run its oil-producing operations there.

Marathon announced shortly after Reagan's warning Thursday of "imminent danger" to Americans in Libya that it ordered its American employees in Libya and their dependents to leave.

Occidental Petroleum Corp. and Exxon said they would evacuate employees who requested it, although Exxon previously announced its intention to withdraw from Libya.

Other oil companies said they had no comment or had no intention of asking their employees to leave.

Libya has exceptionally high-quality oil and the United States has long been one of its major customers. But relations between American operators there and Libyan authorities have been strained many times in the past.

Because of its high prices, Libya's oil production has tumbled to an estimated 700,000 barrels a day from about 1.7 million barrels daily last January. U.S. imports from Libya have dropped from about 550,000 barrels a day to less than 150,000 barrels, or less than 2 percent of total U.S. imports.

Despite that loss of export revenue, Libya's economy is healthier than that of other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, including neighboring Algeria.

American economists say a U.S. boycott of Libyan oil would put little economic pressure on that North African nation.

Exxon Corp., which discovered Libya's first oilfield in 1959, announced last month it was withdrawing all of its employees and relinquishing its right to operate there.

Exxon said Thursday that "some" of its "fewer than 100" American workers in Libya had left the country.

THFC accepts amended pre-application filed by MMH

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital's amended pre-application for a 50-bed free-standing chemical dependency unit was accepted late Thursday by the Texas Health Facilities Commission, according to Tom Camp, THFC administrator.

MMH filed a pre-application or letter of intent for a 20-bed chemical dependency addition to the hospital June 1. A study completed in February this year by Comprehensive Care Corp., of Bridgeton, Mo., showed that there is a need for a 67-bed chemical dependency unit. But, according to MMH administrator Ray Branson, a long-range study by TriBrook Inc. stated it was "not feasible" to spare that many beds at MMH.

Consequently, on Nov. 24 MMH's board of directors agreed to an amendment adding 30 beds to the original 20-bed addition and locating the facility away from the hospital.

According to Camp, the chairman of the three-member commission accepted the amendment. As a result, MMH could possibly be competing with Southwest Health of Midland/Odessa Inc., which also has filed for a similar facility.

"Providing the application (MMH certificate of need) is sent to us on time to be accepted and dated and there are no deficiencies, MMH could be in a possible joinder with the West Plains Hospital," Camp said, referring to the accepted and dated certificate from Southwest Health of Midland/Odessa Inc.

"The controlling period (for the joinder) is the first day we accepted the first certificate of need application for a psychiatric hospital," Camp said.

Southwest Health of Midland/Odessa Inc., naming its hospital West Plains, has proposed a 60-bed psychiatric hospital, including a chemical dependency unit, to be built on a site near Midland Regional Airport.

According to the THFC, there will be a public hearing in Austin Feb. 8 on the Southwest application. Persons wishing to protest the application must do so prior to Jan. 19. If no protests are received, the hearing may be dispensed with and the application referred to a THFC voting session.

Locally, the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency will hold a similar public hearing, tentatively set for Jan. 11.

MMH also submitted a new pre-application to the THFC after an agreement between the administration and the board members in an executive session of the Nov. 24 Board of Director's meeting, according to Branson. Hospital officials noted this step was taken "just in case the amendment was not accepted" by the THFC chairman.

If the amendment had not been accepted, MMH's pre-application would have been placed in the next six-month filing period for certificates of need with those submitted by Parkview Hospital and six additional health organizations for psychiatric/chemical dependency facilities in the Permian Basin.

According to Dick Liley, Parkview

Commissioners announce intent to file suit

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

After voting unanimously to file an injunction against the city of Odessa for allowing the continuous flow of sewage runoff into Monahans Draw almost one year ago, Midland County Commissioners have finally given notice of intent to file suit against Odessa.

In a letter dated Dec. 9 and signed by J. Scott Henderson, who took over as Midland County Attorney a little over a month ago, Midland County gave notice of its intent to file suit in United States District Court against the City of Odessa and W.T. Averitt III "because of violations of effluent standards and limitations under the Act (Federal Water Pollution Control Act)."

Averitt apparently has a permit to impound "a substantial amount" of the effluent water for private irrigation purposes. According to Henderson, Averitt is not affiliated with the City of Odessa in any other way. It is unknown whether Odessa pays him or if he pays the city for the services.

"But he is creating a certain amount of discharge himself," Henderson said.

According to Henderson, the letter was mailed either late Wednesday afternoon or early Thursday morning.

The problem of Odessa dumping effluent water into the Monahans Draw has been an issue between the two cities since the mid-1960s.

The water is reportedly contaminating wells, serving as a large breeding ground for mosquitoes and flooding range and cotton land.

Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright, who initiated the motion to file an injunction against Odessa in a special meeting of county commissioners and members of Midland City Council on Dec. 23, 1980, said that bureaucratic means to stop the flow of effluent water from Odessa had proven ineffective, leaving a law suit as the only means of a recourse.

He was quoted as saying, "I don't know if this (filing the suit) will get the job done, but it is the only arena left."

County Commissioners voted unanimously to file the injunction

Southwestern Bell will fight for heftier rate hike

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Minutes after they won the largest rate increase ever granted a Texas utility, Southwestern Bell officials said they would go to court to challenge the order and soon would be back to ask for more.

The Public Utility Commission voted 2-1 Thursday to grant the $243.7 million record increase recommended by hearing examiners. It means $1.70 more per month for residential service, probably beginning in January.

Consumer groups said their constituents won one and lost one Thursday.

The consumer victory was the denial of Bell's controversial request for "local measured service," according to Carol Barger of Consumers Union.

Don Butler, representing the Texas Municipal League, said it is unfair to bill for local calls on a measured basis.

"It's not like burning electricity," he said.

The $1.70 a month increase was a loss for consumers, Ms. Barger said.

The telephone giant lost a round when the commission approved a 10 percent increase in intrastate long-distance rates, a hike the company fought because of increased competition.

Household rates actually will drop for many customers who have been paying increased rates put into effect under bond in October. Refunds will be made by crediting bills.

PUC Chairman George Cowden and Commissioner Moak Rollins voted for the increase. Perpetual dissenter Garrett Morris, in his last case before being replaced, said the company was due $102 million less. Morris offered a different way to calculate Bell's income taxes.

Paul Roth, Bell vice president, said the company needs the entire $469.8 million hike it requested. Bell wanted $5.45 more per month.

Telephone bills in Midland area will increase by $1.70 per month

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Public Utility Commission's approval Thursday of a $243.7 million rate hike for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. will result in a $1.70 monthly increase in phone bills for Midland area residents.

Under the rates adopted by the PUC, Midland area residents will experience an increase from $5.95 to $7.65 in basic monthly residential rates. Those rates do not include instrument charges, which vary with the type of telephone each customer has.

In recommending the $243.7 million increase, PUC hearings examiners Bob Gillespie and Carolyn Shellman originally sai Midland area rates would go up to $8.15 per month, but it was later discovered that the hearings examiners had miscalculated the amount needed to achieve the recommended overall increase.

Southwestern Bell filed bonded rates of $8.75 for Midland area customers in October. The compnay now will have to refund the difference between the bonded rates and the rates approved Thursday for the two-month period bonded rates have been in effect, plus a 12.7 percent interest charge.

The new rates are expected to become effective by the end of the year, but Southwestern Bell officials have indicated they will challenge the rates in court.

The company had initially requested a $469.8 million increase.

Police think robberies might be linked

Two armed robberies Thursday night may be connected, Midland police officials indicated this morning. Investigation is continuing into those two incidents, and a reported robbery earlier in the week.

It was believed four men were involved in one of Thursday night's robberies, which occurred shortly after 11 p.m. at the 7-Eleven convenience store at 715 W. Scharbauer Drive. Witnesses told police authorities two men waited outside the store while the other two went inside and robbed the store of an undetermined amount of money.

Two of the men were armed with chrome-plated revolvers, reports indicated. One of the men was described in reports as an "older Iranian male." Another was described as a heavy-set Cuban man, short in stature, wearing a red plaid jacket, jeans and a heavy beard. A third was described as a thinly-built Cuban wearing a brown ski mask, black jacket and jeans.

The men were last seen leaving the area on foot, reports indicated.

An earlier robbery, about 8:30 p.m. at the Merit Food Store at 1800 N. Big Spring St., reportedly netted a robber an undisclosed amount of cash.

Reports of that robbery indicated a single Indian male armed with a chrome-plated revolver committed the act. He was described as 5 feet, 11 inches to 6 feet tall with long wavy black hair. He was dressed in jeans and a white shirt bearing a Budweiser beer emblem.

The report also indicated the robber was well built and "looked very strong."

No arrests have been made in connection with the incidents, but police say they are investigating the possibility the two cases may be related due to the similarities in information.

Police Roundup

In other reports this morning, Mark Claude Vann told police a 20-gauge shotgun, valued at $300, and a .22-caliber rifle with a scope, valued at $150, were stolen from his vehicle while it was parked at 1408 Garden City Highway Thursday night.

L. Borrugo of 1112 E. Oak reported the slashing of two tires valued at a total $155.

MMH pre-application accepted by state panel

adminstrator, the Midland private hospital filed a pre-application or letter of intent Dec. 1 to the THFC to "convert the existing 60-bed general acute care facility to a 60-bed general psychiatric/substance abuse project."

Parkview filed another letter of intent "to transfer the 60-bed acute care facility license to a new location, adding 60 additional beds, Liley said. He added this would allow for the conversion of the existing facility.

Six other health organizations also have filed pre-applications with the THFC in the next six-month filing period to construct a psychiatric hospital with chemical dependency units in the Midland/Odessa area. They are:

—Horizon Health Corporation, from Dallas, requesting to "construct and operated a new 60-100 bed psychiatric faciliy"... including "adult, adolescent, and child substance abuse."

—HCA Health Services of Texas, Inc., a Tennessee organization, proposing "to build a free-standing psychiatric hospital to serve the residents of the Midland/Odessa area," consisting of 60 to 80 beds and "including programs for children, adolescents, adults, geriatrics and alcohol and drug abuse patients."

—Community Psychiatric Centers, Inc., from California, submitting "a 100-bed psychiatric hospital (which) will offer services to both adolescents and adults and will include treatment for both alcohol and drug abuse."

—Countryside Clinics, Inc., from San Antonio, requesting "a 36-bed comprehensive alcohol and drug abuse extended care facility."

—Charter Medical Corporation, a Georgia corporation, submitting two requests — Midland and Odessa — for the "construction of an 80-bed psychiatric addictive disease hospital...to avoid unnecessary and costly duplication of services, direct linkages will be established with existing local services in Midland County."

—Care of Contemporary Health Management Inc., representation in Austin, to construct "a general psychiatric facility...to provide the full range of services typically found in a general psychiatric facility, including adult, adolescent, child and alcohol substance abuse."

Panel intends to file suit

against Odessa and to sue for monetary damages at that time.

Since then, correspondence between the United States Environment Protection Agency (EPA), the Texas Department of Water Resources, Odessa City Manager Kerry Sweatt, former Midland County attorney Robert V. Rendall, and Ed L. Reed and Associates, Inc., the consulting hydrologists employed by Midland County, has flowed almost as constantly as the water in question which runs down Monahans Draw.

Referring to the issue as a "running hassle," Henderson said this morning, "basically all that's happened now is we've completed some additional studies."

Although he said he had not seen them, Henderson said Ed L. Reed and Associates, Inc., had filed several new reports citing high level of nitrates in samples taken from the draw.

Whether the suit will be handled by Henderson or if Ted Kerr of Kerr Fitz-Gerald & Kerr law firm will be employed by the county, is still undecided, Henderson said.

Under a federal statute, notice of an intent to file suit must be given 60 days in advance so that the federal government, in this casethe EPA, will have time to get involved in the case themselves if they so decide, Henderson said.

Pecan show under way at Midland Park Mall

The 1981 West Texas Regional Pecan Show, representing 95 counties, is now under way at Midland Park Mall.

The 15th annual show, which runs through Saturday, will enable thousands of Christmas-minded shoppers to see those pecans already declared champions in scores of recent county shows, according to L. Austin Stockton, horticulturist with the Texas Agriculture Extension Service.

Stockton said judges will evaluate about 350 entries here to determine the grand champion and the reserve grand champion in each of three divisions: Shelling Pecans, In-Shell Pecans and Native Pecans.

The West Texas and two other regional shows are sponsored annually by the Texas Pecan Growers Association, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"The Texas pecan harvest this year is a large one," Stockton said. "The quality is excellent. The pecans to be seen in this show will be among the finest ever grown in the state."

Stockton also said Extension specialists and county Extension agents will conduct a free clinic Dec. 11 at the mall for commercial growers as well as homeowners wanting more information on producing, using and storing pecans.

Hosts at the 1981 show will include county pecans queens as well as the Texas pecan queen for 1981-82, Tina Brosch of Wichita Falls.

U.S. Air Force pilots ditch jet

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Air Force officials say they will convene a board of officers to investigate an incident in which two pilots safely ejected and ditched a training jet in an open field 20 miles southeast of here.

Capt. Patrick F. Nolen and 1st Lt. Joseph B. Dirago Jr. made a "controlled bailout" at about 12:15 p.m. Thursday and the T-38 jet crashed in an open field one mile southwest of la Vernia, according to a spokesman at Randolph Air Force Base.

Nolen, 27, of Dallas, and Dirago, 26, of Vicksburg, Miss., were examined by the flight surgeon at Randolph and then transferred to Wilford Hall Air Force Hospital at Lackland Air Force Base for overnight observation, Sgt. Glenda Hunter said.

She said neither pilot appeared to be injured.

"Both ejected safely," said Ms. Hunter, a public affairs specialist for the 12th Flying Training Wing, which trains all Air Force instructor pilots.

No punishment in bookkeeping disagreement

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission says it has a $1.1 million bookkeeping disagreement with President Reagan's campaign committee, but that no harm was done and nobody will be punished.

Details of the report, being released formally today, were obtained Thursday by The Associated Press.

Lawyers for the campaign committee had battled for four months to prevent release of the audit report and said they would continue their court battle over the legal points involved even though they lost their efforts to block it.

The final report makes no mention of the "criminal violations" the committee had said it feared would be alleged in the audit. And the only repayment it asks is for $251,122 in interest earned by federal money while in the committee's bank accounts, a routine adjustment in campaigns getting government money.

What the report does say is that funds given the campaign committee by the federal government were mingled improperly with money from the Republican National Committee during the campaign.

And it says that, while no punitive action is being taken against the Reagan campaign and the Republican Party this time, the commission will not allow anyone to do the same thing again.

At issue was $1,138,891 in payments made to the Reagan-Bush Committee for bills owed to the Republican National Committee. This mainly repesented payments made by Secret Service agents, reporters and others for their share of air fares on chartered campaign planes.

The campaign committee argued that it was acting properly as agent for the party and spent the money on the party's behalf in permissible fashion. The commission insists party money and campaign committee money should have been kept separate.

Earlier, Reagan lawyers had said they feared the committee might be required to repay as much as $1.5 million to the government because of the disagreement.

However, the commission concluded that even with the mingling of funds, neither committee exceeded the legal spending limits. It required only that the Reagan-Bush Committee file an ammended financial report to put the record straight and that it suggest the Republican party do the same.

The commission routinely audited the campaign finances of both Reagan and former President Carter since the general election for president was financed almost totally with $29.44 million in federal money given each candidate.

In addition to the money given candidates, major political parties were allowed to spend $4 million each in support of their candidates, and it is the Republican Party's expenditures for Reagan that the commission says was improperly mingled with the campaign's money.

The Carter audit was released in August and asked that his committee repay $105,362, most of it also representing interest earned on government money.

The Reagan audit was scheduled for release about the same time, but his campaign committee filed suit in U.S. District Court here on Aug. 10 seeking to block its publication.

Edward L. Weidenfeld, a lawyer for the Reagan committee, said the report finally released gave "a clean bill of health" to the campaign but still should not have been released.

"The Reagan-Bush Committee sought to prevent publication of the report on the grounds that the Federal Election Commission lacks legal authority to publish such reports during the pendency of the administative process because they do not reflect the final determination of the commission," Weidenfeld said.

Opponents contest pipeline financing

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of a complex financing package for the $43 billion Alaska natural gas pipeline say they will ask a court to overturn congressional approval of the measure.

The congressional battle over the financing package ended Thursday when it was approved by the House, 230-188, and sent to the White House, President Reagan is expected to sign it.

The financing package is intended to attract investors for the pipeline, the largest private construction project in world history.

But it was contested because consumers could be forced to pay off part of the construction loans before the pipeline is completed — and possibly even if it is abandoned.

OPPONENTS SAY the package is open to court challenge because of a technicality in the House vote. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said after the House vote that he would file such a suit, and Rep. Tom Corcoran, R-Ill., leader of the House opposition, said he was considering joining Metzenbaum.

"The banks are certainly not going to put up the money with lawsuits pending," added Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., who called the vote "patently illegal."

Supporters of the pipeline package said they weren't worried.

Melissa Prater is helped away from the grave site of her fiance, Keith Crager, during his burial service at a small family cemetery in the Appalachian Mountains near Hueysville, Ky., Thursday. Crager was the first of eight miners to be buried who were killed last Monday when the mine they were working in near Topmost, Ky., exploded.

Backfiring blasting powder appears to because of Kentucky coal mine explosion

By CHARLES WOLFE
Associated Press Writer

TOPMOST, Ky. (AP) — Blasting powder that appears to have backfired was probably the cause of an explosion half a mile deep in a coal mine that killed eight miners, the state mines commissioner says.

The men died Monday after hauling explosives 2,500 feet into the Adkins Coal Co.'s No. 18 mine. They were among 24 people killed in three mining accidents in less than a week.

Although an official ruling won't be made until after laboratory tests are conducted and a hearing is held next week, state Mines and Minerals Commissioner Willard Stanley said Thursday that the explosion may have been triggered by a faulty powder charge.

An inspection team found that the miners "apparently loaded seven holes" in a wall of coal with explosives and then detonated them, Stanley said. He was accompanied into the mine Thursday by inspectors from Mines and Minerals, the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration and the United Mine Workers in addition to three Adkins employees and two officials of Island Creek Coal Co., which owns the coal.

The last of the seven charges backfired into the mine, Stanley said.

The Independent Powder Co. of Hindman has completed removal of 22 cases of unexploded blasting powder from the mine. Stanley said removal of the unexploded blasting materials had become urgent because "we learned this powder is breaking down."

All Adkins Coal Co. employees will undergo a one-day safety training course next week, Stanley said.

One of the eight miners, Keith Crager, 25, of Hueysville, was buried Thursday after in neighboring Floyd County. Funerals were scheduled today and Saturday in surrounding mountain communities for the rest of the victims.

In Whitwell, Tenn., where 13 miners died Tuesday, federal inspectors from the Mine Safety and Health Administration began drilling Thursday into Whitwell Mountain in an effort to find out whether underground turbulence in the mine was due to fires or explosions.

Panel advises decrease in amount of nitrite

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The amount of nitrite food additives used to preserve and color bacon and other meats should be reduced while scientists search for alternative curing agents, says a National Academy of Sciences panel.

While the academy's National Research Council on Thursday recommended dropping most uses of a related additive, nitrate, it said nitrites still could be used even though there may be undefined health risks.

A special committee of the council said it would be "prudent" to cut exposures to nitrite and nitrate additives "to the extent that protection against botulism is not compromised."

WHILE CALLING for further study to see if there is a link between the additives and cancer, the group said the risk of using nitrite had to be balanced against the risk of sickness and death from food poisoning.

Neither nitrate nor nitrite, used in meats to decrease bacterial contamination, appears to cause cancer directly in animals or man, said the group in a report to the Agriculture Department and the Food and Drug Administration.

However, compounds called nitrosamines can form from the additives and many of these are known to cause cancer in animals, which makes them suspect in humans.

The committee pointed out that meat preservatives account for only a small portion of the total human exposure to nitrosamines. Tobacco smoke, agricultural chemicals, cosmetics, beer and other foods account for even larger exposures, it said.

NITRATE CAN be converted naturally to nitrite and then to nitrosamines in foods and in the body.

The committee noted that there is evidence that vitamins C and E block conversion of nitrite to nitrosamines. But it said there isn't enough known to say whether dietary supplements would have any protective effect.

"The elimination of nitrites from cured meats will probably not have a major effect on health," said Dr. Maclyn McCarthy of Rockefeller University, chairman of the committee that wrote the report.

But McCarthy told a news briefing that reducing use of the preservatives still is a good idea.

The committee also called for eliminating nitrate from all poultry and most meat products because there is no evidence it has any direct preservative effects.

Nitrate "may be necessary" in dry-cured meats, such as country ham and jerky, and fermented sausages, such as salami and pepperoni, and use in these products should continue, it said.

NITRITE HAS been added to meat for decades to give a reddish-pink color, improve flavor and inhibit bacteria growth. Nitrate is a similar compound that changes into nitrite, and it has been added to act as a reservoir of nitrite for longer preservation.

Intensive care may be too intense for some

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Many hospital patients who are admitted to intensive care units may not need that costly and potentially hazardous level of treatment, a group of researchers says.

The findings, published in today's issue of the Journal of American Medical Association, focused on one Washington, D.C., hospital. The report said nearly half the patients admitted to the ICU in an eight-month period did not need the special treatment.

Although the study concentrates only on George Washington University Medical Center, Elizabeth Draper, one author of the report, says research being conducted at four other hospitals indicates conditions are similar elsewhere.

Another study, published in 1980 in the New England Journal of Medicine, found that more than 75 percent of the admissions to an ICU in a university hospital were only for monitoring purposes.

In the GWU study, researchers reviewed 624 admissions and found 49 percent of the patients admitted to ICUs were in stable condition and received only observation or minimal amounts of treatment.

Patients placed in intensive care, Ms. Draper said, faced greater expense and a greater risk of health complications, such as infection, because of frequent tests and monitoring equipment.

An intensive care unit, she said, is "a high tension area" and patients can experience psychological problems and nightmares.

Ms. Draper noted that intensive care rooms cost three to four times the cost of regular rooms.

The study says that if fewer patients were in intensive care, short-term cost savings for hospitals would be minimal, as long as patients were receiving the same treatment regardless of location. However, substantial cost savings for hospitals could be realized if a reduction in requests for ICU admissions led to a decrease in the demand for more ICU beds, the study added.

But even with little growth in the number of hospitals, the number of ICU beds is increasing at the rate of 4 percent a year, the study says.

In 1960, the study said, only 10 percent of hospitals with more than 200 beds had intensive care units. Now, 99 percent of these hospitals have such facilities, and about 42,000 patients are in these units daily.

The enormous growth in intensive care facilities is due to a variety of reasons, Ms. Draper said, adding, "They do generate dollars and they do attract physicians."

Despite the findings, she said, researchers do not suggest that intensive care units are not needed.

She noted, however, that ICUs "can be used more intelligently. They can be used more sensibly. That will save costs."

First influenza 'A' case discovered in New Jersey

ATLANTA (AP) — The first isolated case of influenza "A," which has been associated with outbreaks and adult deaths, has been reported in the United States this year, a national health agency said today.

A 78-year-old patient at a psychiatric facility in Burlington County, N.J., was stricken in November with an illness that was determined to be influenza A virus, the national Centers for Disease Control said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

"What it means is that for people who are at high risk from influenza — people over 65 and people with really severe medical problems — there is still time to be vaccinated and get protection before it is really occurring in their area," said Dr. Karl Kappus, a CDC epidemiologist.

Applying Florida law helped control measles outbreak

ATLANTA (AP) — Strict application of a new school immunization law controlled a measles outbreak in Lee County, Fla., where 88 confirmed cases of the disease were reported during a four-month period, the national Centers for Disease Control said today.

In its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, the CDC said 50 of the 88 cases reported between July 16 and Nov. 11 involved young people attending school or day care centers.

Rabbits destroy farmland

By KIM N. PRICE
Associated Press Writer

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Thousands of jackrabbits have nibbled away $5 million in southeastern Idaho grain crops, but a plan by farmers to round the animals up and club them to death is under attack by the state Humane Society.

The farmers want to drive the estimated 15,000 jackrabbits into pens near Mud Lake Saturday and kill them with baseball bats and ax handles.

"I realize these farmers have a problem," said Max Finch, executive director of the Idaho Humane Society in Boise. "But I just don't understand this. We'll do anything we can to stop this thing."

FINCH SAID HE will ask Idaho Attorney General David Leroy today to seek a state court injunction against the farmers to prevent the rabbit slaughter.

Orvin Twitchell, 52, chairman of the Mud Lake Farmers Rabbit Committee, said Tuesday night the farmers' group had not heard of any legal action to stop the roundup.

"Let 'em pay for our crop if they want to come up with five or 10 million dollars," Twitchell said of the Humane Society's plans.

"It's against the law to cruelly kill an animal like this," Finch said. "Why can't they go in there and shoot them? That's about as quick and as humane as you can get."

But Twitchell noted the 4-H manuals say the best way to kill rabbits is to hit them in the head, and "that's what we're planning to do." "If they want to come out and help us by shooting the rabbits, they're welcome to do it," Twitchell added. He had been quoted as saying that farmers would use machine guns to kill the rabbits if they could, but guns are not permitted on the drive.

THE DRIVE WILL cover about 15 miles, with drivers herding the rabbits into funnel-shaped traps which lead into a huge pen that cost $4,000.

Once in the pens, the farmers will beat the rabbits to death. To prevent spoilage, the clubbers will only kill a few at a time, then dress them and place them in a refrigerated truck.

The 22 tons of meat the roundup is expected to produce will be donated to two Nigerians, who will ship the carcasses to their country at a cost of about $25,000. The men say they want the meat because a majority of Nigeria's 80 million inhabitants suffer from malnutrition due to a lack of meat.

But Finch says the meat give-away is a coverup by the farmers "to soften the blow" of the killings.

THE FARMERS say there is a "rabbit cycle" about once every decade when the population increases dramatically, and a rabbit kill similar to the one planned for Saturday took place about 10 years ago, when several thousand of the animals were clubbed.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife and Department of Agriculture officials had suggested using strychnine to get rid of the rodents.

But, Finch said, "They can't use poison if the rabbits are to be eaten."

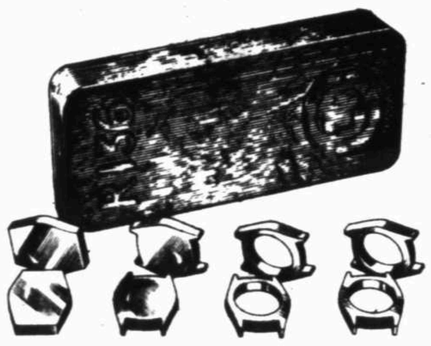

Included in the rabbit drive will be farmers, some of whom have suffered losses of more than $160,000 this year, and volunteers from the five-county area where damage to hay, wheat, oats and barley is said to be heavy.

"If the environmentalists are there and they know of a more humane way of killing them, we'll just stand back and let them do it," Twitchell said. "In a situation like we've had this year, where the rabbits have been damaging the crops the way they have, the rabbits just have to go."

Marines, Navy anti-drug

By KIP COOPER
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — The top uniformed flag officers in the Navy and the Marine Corps have come out with new, hard-line anti-drug policies calling for immediate discharge of officers and top enlisted men using drugs and authorization to search mail for contraband.

The policies, yet to be made public, are from Adm. Thomas B. Hayward, chief of naval operations, and Gen. Robert Barrow, commandant of the Marine Corps.

The toughened approaches are expected to be publicized today, which is the deadline for meetings of top Navy and Marine Corps flag officers on both coasts. A filmed speech by Hayward to all chief petty officers and officers is also scheduled.

CALLING drug abuse a cancer "residing among us," Hayward said in the filmed speech that he wants the Navy to make "a 180-degree turn from its present stance of indifference, passiveness and non-responsibility" toward the problem.

"Drug abuse in the Navy is a serious problem," Hayward said.

In a message sent to all Marine Corps commands Wednesday, Barrow said "commissioned officers and warrant officers who use illegal drugs have no potential for further service in the Marine Corps."

"They shoud be processed under less than honorable conditions," he said. "Leaders must set the example. Any illegal use of drugs by them is particularly damaging to the overall effort of eliminating drug use in the Marine Corps."

HAYWARD'S message to top commands will contain the same caveat to officers, warrant officers and chief petty officers, a high-ranking officer in Washington said.

Hayward said in his videotaped message now being shown throughout the Navy that he is accelerating a 10-point program he announced last the summer to fight drug abuse.

The Navy will train more dog teams to sniff out drugs and will use the animals on a more frequent basis, the CNO said.

The four-star admiral said more of the new urinalysis kits will be used by the Navy to detect drug abusers. The kits, which were developed by civilian firms, are being used in a test program that began Oct. 1.

The admiral also revealed that the Navy is working with Congress, the U.S. attorney general and postal authorities to find better legal ways to end the use of the U.S. mail system in the transporting of drugs to military commands.

HAYWARD said criticism of the Navy and its drug problems makes his "blood boil and angers me deeply."

"The trouble is, the critics have a point," he said. "There is too much drug abuse going on in the Navy today.

"I am through with this permissive attitude that has allowed many of you to abuse the system. So that you can understand where I am coming from, believe me — my policy today is a get-tough one."

Hayward said the Navy spent more than six months studying the drug problem last year, then a few months ago he issued his operational order about eliminating drug abuse in the sea services.

"Maybe you did not believe it, or maybe you were not concerned about it," he said. "But this new get-tough policy is going to come down again and again until you feel it in your bones.

"I WANT TO make you concerned."

The admiral said the whole Navy system is going to be "tightened down" to weed out the people who think it is all right to get high on the job or to involve themselves with drugs.

Bomb sniffer bombs

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Perhaps it was the suitcase's proximity to a fire hydrant that caused Napoleon to bomb his task.

But something made the bomb-sniffing dog's nose go awry Wednesday, to the agony of a Dyess Air Force Base sergeant who was packed and ready to take a leave.

The sergeant, base officials said, had chained his suitcase to a fire hydrant for safe-keeping while he went to get his car.

But while he was gone, a woman thought the suitcase looked suspicious and called base security police.

Napoleon, who accompanied bomb experts to the scene, poked around the suitcase and assumed the "alert" position, indicating an explosive just might be inside.

So the suitcase was exploded with what officials would describe only as a "classified projectile."

But the only bomb to be found was the one dropped on the sergeant when he returned to see his clothes and personal effects flying through the air.

Jury hears La Costa recording

By RIVIAN TAYLOR
Copley News Service

COMPTON, Calif. — Before filing a massive libel suit against Penthouse Magazine, the president of Rancho La Costa discussed the background of his partner, reputed underworld figure Morris "Moe" Dalitz, and concluded that no one had been able to pin anything on Dalitz despite many investigations by law enforcement agents.

The discussion, a tape recording of which was played before a jury here Wednesday, took place between La Costa president Merv Adelson and a public relations executive in the spring of 1975. At the time La Costa was contemplating a lawsuit against Penthouse, which had published an article titled "La Costa: The Hundred-Million-Dollar Resort with Criminal Clientele."

The March 1975 article accused La Costa owners of being mobsters and said the 5,600-acre resort was a headquarters for organized crime. In May 1975 La Costa filed the lawsuit, which now seeks $490 million.

"Through all these years, you and I know one of the things that they're really talking about really points up an important fact that he (Dalitz) has been under investigation for many, many years, for a long, long time," the jury heard Adelson tell public relations man Clem Whitaker in the 1975 tape.

"I imagine the files on him are this thick by this time. There's no sense kidding ourselves; the man has been under investigation.

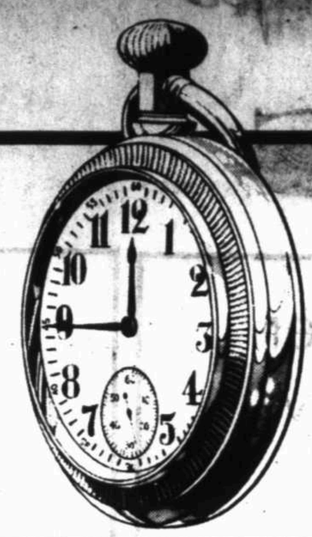

"I'm sure hundreds of agents have investigated this man in every way they know how and have never been able to even indict him, much less convict him.

"It would certainly seem to indicate that the man has come through with flying colors."

Before the jury heard the tape, Adelson testified that he had only limited knowledge of criminal investigations into Dalitz. Dalitz, 82, a former owner of the Desert Inn in Las Vegas, was desribed by the Kefauver Senate crime committee in the 1950s as a longtime racketeer and associate of the late Lucky Luciano and Bugsy Siegel.

"I knew that Mr. Dalitz appeared before the Kefauver committee; that's the extent of my knowledge," Adelson testified Wednesday when asked if he was familiar with criminal investigations of Dalitz.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Suicide often unpredictable

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was shocked to learn that one of my co-workers committed suicide. Although I was not a close, personal friend, she never seemed like the sort of person who would take her own life. Is it at all possible to predict who might be driven to do so? — Lila

Dear Lila: Dr. Alec Roy, of the University of Toronto Faculty of Medicine, has identified some risk factors for suicide, including early parental loss and feelings of depression. A study of a group of psychiatric patients who committed suicide also revealed that many were unmarried and living alone, and many were unemployed.

Of course, not everyone who commits suicide fits this picture, and not everyone who fits this picture will commit suicide.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a niece who is taking medication because she was depressed. Now she thinks she may be pregnant. Would the medication have any effect on the baby? — Mrs. J.L.Dear Mrs. L.: If your niece is not yet seeing an obstetrician, I strongly urge she arrange to do so without delay. Antidepressants can adversely affect the fetus, although they do not always do so. Close collaboration between the obstetrician and the physician treating her for depression may help determine whether your niece's need for the drug is more critical than the risk to the fetus.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I had just finished reading in one magazine about the risk of using the Pill when I saw in another magazine that the Pill can be beneficial. Can you set me straight on this? Is the Pill a risk to health, or isn't it? — Margaret

Dear Margaret: It may be that both magazines you read told part of the truth, but neither one told all of it. Dr. Heinz W. Berendes, of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, notes that oral contraceptives are associated with an increased risk of some diseases and a decreased risk of others.

Evaluating the link between the use of oral contraceptives and various diseases is complicated by the need to consider other risk factors. For example, women who use the Pill and are heavy cigarette smokers have a higher incidence of heart attacks than women who neither smoke nor use the Pill.

Class schedules available for spring UTPB classes

ODESSA — Class schedules for the spring semester at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin are now available in the admissions office.

Approximately 370 classes are listed on the schedule. Registration will be from 9 a.m. to noon, and 2 to 7 p.m., Jan. 11-12, in the UTPB student lounge.

UTPB Director of Admissions Robert Warmann noted enrollment will be by time assignment. Registration materials will be mailed to students. If the materials have not been received by Dec. 31, they may be picked up Jan. 4.

Enrollment at UTPB is open to students who have completed 60 hours of coursework at any accredited community college, senior college or university. Warmann said prospective students should notify the registrars at their previous colleges to send official transcripts directly to the UTPB admissions office. An application should also be on file to avoid delays in the registration process.

Students who are not pursuing a degree, but who are interested in taking courses for enjoyment or for more information in a particular field, should obtain special registration forms for the ENCORE (no-grade) program.

"ENCORE students, by law, must meet regular admissions requirements, but will not be required to take exams or complete outside assignments," Warmann said.

Further information about registration is available from the admissions office at 367-2210.

Papers win third award in a row

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Two newspapers have won top honors for the third year in a row in the 22nd annual Penney-Missouri Newspaper Awards competition for excellence in lifestyle sections.

Roy M. Fisher, dean of the University of Missouri School of Journalism, said Thursday a total of $12,850 will be awarded to the 25 winners. The awards recognize excellence in reporting and editing of lifestyle sections, categorized by circulation.

Four reporting categories are open to lifestyle stories that appeared in any section of a newspaper.

For the third straight year, the first prize of $1,000 in the 25,000 to 100,000 circulation category went to Janet H. Woods and the Evening Independent of St. Petersburg, Fla. The $500 second-place prize went to Keith Moyer and the News-Press of Fort Myers, Fla.; third place of $250 was awarded to Ann H. Kellett of the Sun-Sentinel of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Maria Parham of The Arizona Daily Star of Tucson won an honorable mention.

The other top winner for the third straight year was in the weekly category, where the first prize went to Ande Zellman of the Boston Phoenix. Other winners were Lori G. Calliser, Gresham (Ore.) Outlook, second; Lynne Wachter, Maui News of Hawaii, third, and Shirlee Iden, Southfield (Mich.) Eccentric, honorable mention.

Winners among metropolitan dailies of 250,000 or more circulation were Carroll Stoner, Chicago Sun-Times, first; Roy Hanson, Newsday of Long Island, N.Y, second, and Nancy Newhouse, The New York Times, third.

Winners among dailies with circulations of 100,000 to 250,000 were Richard Curtis, Baltimore News American, first; Mickey Davis, Dayton Journal Herald, second, and Pamela Scott, San Francisco Examiner, third.

Winners among dailies with less than 25,000 circulation were Tom Shantz, Concord, (N.H.) Monitor, first; Jean Bricarello, The Daily Californian of El Cajon, second, and Donna Fielder, Denton (Texas) Record-Chronicle, third.

David Hacker of the Kansas City Times won the $1,000 award for excellence in reporting for a story about victims of the skywalk collapse at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Kansas City. A special award of $100 went to James Ricci of the Detroit Free Press.

A $1,000 award for the best series went to Madeleine Blais of the Miami Herald for her stories about the slaying of a lonely Florida woman.

A $1,000 award for consumer affairs reporting went to Ben Z. Hershberg and Loni White of the Courier-Journal of Louisville, Ky., for their housing price analysis and guide. Phil Norman, also of the Courier-Journal, and Barbara Burke, of the Ithaca (N.Y.) Journal, won honorable mentions.

America's response

Will the succession of "nuts" never end?

What with the problems the United States has encountered in recent years from Iran's infamous Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and, most recently, Libya's fanatical Col. Moammar Khadafy, previously dreaded nuclear arms limitation negotiations with the Soviets take on something of a tantalizing appeal.

We all, of course, remember the ayatollah. That doesn't necessarily mean we WANT to remember him. He's just difficult to forget. For all his rantings and ravings — and his obvious hatred of America and all she stands for — the ayatollah still remained somewhat amusing, albeit a little of a nuisance. We could poke fun at him, at least.

But now consider Libya's Khadafy. If there's any doubt in your mind that the United States is dealing with a dangerous individual who would have the nerve to send two squads of assassins to kill President Ronald Reagan and other top American officials, you might want to consider the following:

According to information from the Heritage Foundation, Khadafy has tried to subvert at least 28 sovereign states — Chad, Central African Republic, Nigeria, Niger, Upper Volta, Ghana, Senegal, Gambia, Mauritania, Mali, Western Sahara, Algeria, Tunisia, Sudan, Somalia, Uganda, Egypt, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia, North Yemen, Oman, Malaysia, Indonesia, Thailand, the Philippines, Spain, Italy and Great Britain.

To make matters all the worse, Khadafy reportedly also has ambitions to acquire nuclear weaponry. The past record indicates he would not hesitate to use nuclear weapons to attain his goals.

The course for the United States in responding to Khadafy's threats is similar to the course taken with Khomeini in the latter stages at least — do not let Khadafy push the United States around. Let him know, immediately in no uncertain terms, that this nation will respond to force with force. Then, back up our words.

As Third World nations acquire a little power and an expanded view of the world, the United States is likely to be called on time and again to reassert its leadership role. It must do so without stumbling.

America must not bow down to the Khomeinis and Khadafys of these changing times.

Canada's feuding ends

After half a century of political fussing and feuding, the Canadian Parliament finally voted to approve a new constitution. It was an historic moment in the history of a Canadian government generally known for enlightened leadership.

As Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau has long been urging, the British North America Act of 1867 will come to Ottawa as a purely Canadian constitution. Canadians will have a bill of rights copied after those 10 cherished pillars of democarcy in the United States.

Whereas in the past every amendment to the British North America Act had to be approved in the British House of Commons, Canadians will forthwith be masters of their own constitutional ship. The new document can be amended by a vote of seven of the 10 provinces, and 50 percent of the Canadian population.

All this did not come about without considerable head-knocking. English-speaking Canadians differed with French-speaking Canadians. Premier Rene Levesque of Quebec was a difficult hold-out, and tried vainly to veto the constitutional reform at the last minute.

Economic interests came into conflict. Provinces blooming with energy resources like Alberta look at the future through different eyes than industrial Ontario. Bickering was so bitter at times it began to look as though a strictly Canadian constitution was a lost cause.

In the end the interests of the Canadian people prevailed. Compromises were made by all parties, but that is the way it is in a nation where the people are the governors. Parliament managed to preserve the essential influence of the provinces without seriously damaging the federalist structure so dear to the heart of Mr. Trudeau.

Canadian historians can look back on 1981 as a good year.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

ABSCAM's raw files soil top reputations

WASHINGTON — Apparently no one in Washington is safe from the vicious accusations that keep seeping out of the FBI's raw files. The subterranean traffic in tittle-tattle, most of it as false as it is scurrilous, has besmirched some of Washington's biggest reputations.

Jack Anderson

The victims include such dignitaries as Secretary of State Alexander Haig, Speaker Tip O'Neill, Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., ex-Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., Sen. Pat Moynihan, D-N.Y., Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., and House Judiciary Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., to name a few.

Most of the ugly, unfounded accusations can be traced to the infamous ABSCAM tapes, which were kept by undercover agents who tried to coax members of Congress into committing crimes.

The tapes contain hundreds of hours of sordid dialogue, implicating prominent politicians in shabby conspiracies. But at the end of the ABSCAM investigation, after the exhilaration of the publicity and the trials was over, came the ruination of several lives, including those of innocent people.

"Washington can be a cruel city," a subdued Alexander Haig told me after reading an FBI transcript about himself. The transcript, reviewed by my associate Indy Badhwar, contains salacious statements that have been investigated and have been found untrue, the FBI informed the State Department. Still the document has been passed around the backrooms of Washington like a forbidden copy of a pornographic manuscript.

Haig's accuser was Alfred Carpentier, an East Meadow, N.Y., businessman, who has been sentenced to four years in prison in connection with the ABSCAM operation. While the secret FBI tapes picked up every word, he told of an alleged argument with Haig over a Haig acquaintance — a man with underworld connections who was also an alleged homosexual.

Although the ABSCAM operatives agreed that Carpentier had a loose and vicious tongue, they not only leaked his foulmouthings about Haig but offered for the public record his tape-recorded accusations against Sen. D'Amato.

Carpentier told FBI undercover agents that he had been paying off politicians. "No big numbers," he said, "Five to ten grand ... D'Amato may look to shake you down for a little more. The guy is definitely taking contributions. He's on the take."

The judge hastened to emphasize that there was "absolutely no proof" of any wrongdoing by the maligned senator.

In another ABSCAM transcript available in the backrooms, convicted ex-Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., is quoted as boasting that he could "get anything done for a price." He "guaranteed" he could deliver Speaker O'Neill for $120,000 and suggested "maybe" he could also get Sen. Kennedy to do his bidding. At one point, the ABSCAM sleuths proposed bribing Kennedy with $250,000.

Still another transcript describes an elaborate plot to funnel money "to 10 or 12 congressmen" through a Republican campaign committee. This was proposed by William Rosenberg, a shady politico, who promised that "when a fa♦or is needed, at that time a congressman would assist."

Rosenberg suggested that the respected former Sen. Javits, a devout Jew, would be available to help the FBI's phony Arab sheik. Asked what Javits wanted for his cooperation, Rosenberg said: "He wants to buy a condominium down in Palm Beach."

In the tapes, Rodino is portrayed as "controlled by the New Jersey mob" and "backed by them" financially. Several other distinguished members of Congress, including Sen. Pat Moynihan, Sen. Russell Long, D-La., and House Democratic leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, are characterized as candidates for corruption.

All these unsubstantiated charges are being blown around the country by an ill wind called ABSCAM.

Footnote: The FBI refused to comment on the scandal-mongering on the grounds that the ABSCAM cases are still under investigation. Carpentier's lawyer, James Pascaralla, said his client had never been interviewed by the FBI about Haig.

PRESS ROOM PRANKSTER?: A note typed on assistant press secretary Mark Weinberg's personal memo paper has been circulating among the White House press corps. It reads like the gee-whiz boast of a preppie impressed with his own White House stationery.

"Hi Sweetie," the note reads, "isn't the above GREAT? I made the big time. Few people have the type of stationery I now have and even fewer have 'To the President' on theirs."

Weinberg, noting that "I'm not quite that indiscreet," and pointing out that the note was typed on a manual typewriter, not on an electric one like his, says the memo is spurious. He blamed it on a member of the White House press corps, whose name he said he knew but would not divulge. He added that he's now keeping his nifty memo pads locked up.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Dec. 11, the 345th day of 1981. There are 20 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 11, 1941, the United States declared war against Germany and Italy.

On this date:

In 1816, Britain restored the Indonesian island of Java to The Netherlands.

In 1961, two U.S. helicopter companies arrived in Saigon by aircraft carrier — the first direct U.S. military support for South Vietnam's battle against Communist guerrillas.

In 1972, America's Apollo 17 astronauts landed on the moon to begin extensive exploration of the lunar surface.

And in 1979, Iran's foreign minister said efforts were under way to assemble an international grand jury to hear charges against the deposed shah.

Ten years ago: An explosion in an underground water tunnel under construction in Port Huron, Michigan, killed 17 workers and injured eight.

Five years ago: The president of Spain's Council of State (Antonio Maria de Priol y Uguijo) was kidnapped by suspected Basque separatists.

One year ago: U.S. analysts said there was new evidence that Polish rather than Soviet troops would be used to put down labor unrest in that Warsaw Pact nation.

Today's birthdays: Former Chicago Seven defendant Tom Hayden is 41 years old. Heiress Christina Onassis is 31.

Thought For Today: We owe to the Middle Ages the two worst inventions of humanity — gunpowder and romantic love. — Andre Maurois, French writer (1885-1967).

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan needs 'just one hour' with nation's central banker

WASHINGTON — The prospect of a long-delayed personal faceoff between Ronald Reagan and the nation's central banker was revived when a senior administration official was asked whether the president has been spending too much time on the nuts and bolts of budget-making.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

President Reagan has devoted some 20 hours, a profligate expenditure of time for him, to scrutinizing department spending requests for the new budget even though there is no chance for nearly enough cuts to affect the economy. But nothing on his schedule indicates he has devoted one minute to monetary policy, which may mean life and death for Reaganism.

Is this not a misallocation of the president's time? "I suppose so," replied the senior official, "except that he doesn't need 20 hours for monetary policy. All he needs is one hour." Just one hour to learn that occult art? "No," the official said, "one hour with Paul Volcker."

This revives an old idea within the administration that sooner or later Reagan would have to deliver an admonition to Volcker, inherited by him from Jimmy Carter as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and, as such, the nation's central banker. In that one hour, the president would lay down his law: Don't abort the economic recovery!

At the same time, the president's top advisers are concentrating on his first chance to put a Reaganite on the Federal Reserve Board. The Jan. 31 expiration of Frederick Schultz's term as the Board's vice chairman offers what one adviser calls Reagan's most important appointment since the Cabinet was picked.

If Volcker is indeed invited to the presidential woodshed and then handed a Reagan-minded vice chairman, it would signify that the administration has come to these conclusions: Monetary policy is its biggest economic headache; Volcker is working an agenda wholly different from Reagan's; failure to realize these facts dooms the Reagan Revolution.

The Reagan administration since August has maintained what is described in internal memos as "an entente cordiale" with Volcker. Blaming budget deficits for high interest rates and attendant economic misery, Budget Director David Stockman has led the drive against criticizing ("scapegoating," say the memos) Volcker's Fed.

The voice of dissent has been Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, who inside the administration has complained that the Fed has been undershooting its monetary growth targets and thereby contributing to economic misery. For the first time, this perception is filtering through at the White House as well.

Although Volcker still gets high marks at Stockman's Office of Management and Budget (OMB), others in the administration have soured on the "entente cordiale." They believe that the Fed's bureaucracy still runs the show in trying to fine-tune the economy. What's more, they have come to appreciate that Volcker, though a conservative banker, is a Democrat with no particular stake in Reagan's political fortunes. Like his friends in the financial community, Volcker seems insensitive to the political, social and economic cost of wringing inflation out of the economy.

"I would say that Paul Volcker is on a different timetable," one administration official told us. While Reaganites hope for a recovery rapid and robust enough to affect the 1982 election, the central banker could not care less. In private talks with Reagan insiders, Volcker is concerned far less with recession than rising budget deficits. From this emerges justifiable fear of the Fed choking off economic recovery before it can be fairly started.

Nevertheless, sanctification of the Federal Reserve Board during the imperial chairmanship of Dr. Arthur Burns leaves the president's men hesitant. Mistakenly accepting the Burns credo that the Board is closer in sovereign attributes to the Supreme Court than to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, they fear a presidential confrontation with Volcker.

Before any one-hour session to cure monetary policy, therefore, the president probably will decide on his first Fed appointment. The conventional wisdom is that he will pick some respectable Republican banker from the West, a novice in monetary policy who would be welcomed by Chairman Volcker and the Fed bureaucracy eager to instruct and lead him.

But a different model vice chairman is talked about at the Treasury and White House: a banker or businessman, expert in monetary theory, ready to step in as Reagan's man at the Fed. That would be a message from the president that he intends to guide his central bank, a signal scarcely less dramatic than an hour with Chairman Volcker.

CHARLEY REESE

Liberaldom isn't awake for Marxists?

There are 10,000 Klansmen teaching in American universities and colleges. No, there aren't, but if that statement were true, liberaldom would be up in arms and demanding a Congressional investigation if not a United Nations resolution.

Charley Reese

Now tuck that thought away while I quote you an excerpt from a letter sent out by the Union for Radical Political Economics:

"At a time when everyone is worried about the country's swing to the right, Business Week has reported that there are 10,000 Marxists in U.S. colleges and universities. Even though we may not be that strong, there is a larger Left in academia today, under Reaganism, than under earlier periods of conservative ascendancy....one reason why radicals have been able to establish themselves in the academic environment is that they have helped one another. Mutual support organizations have grown in almost every discipline."

Whenever the issue of kicking Marxists off the campuses is raised, you hear immediately the shrill cry of academic freedom. I am all for academic freedom and that is precisely why a Marxist has no business on a public school faculty. Freedom, academic or otherwise, and Marxist are mutually contradictory terms.

Students should be taught what Marxism is all about. No one need fear any ideas, least of all those of Karl Marx, most of which have been discredited. Let the ideas of Marx and of Adam Smith rise or fall on their own merits and let there be a healthy debate and examination of all ideas and of all positions. That is what education should be about.

But just as you do not need a murderer to teach a course in criminal homicide investigation, you do not need a Marxist to teach Marxism or any other subject. The Marxist is a revolutionary and an idealogue. His mind is closed. Marxism, like racism, is one of those handy-dandy sets of beliefs which has an explanation for everything. Teaching anything in an objective manner is the farthest thing from a Marxist's mind. He is at war with capitalism and in war all things are fair, according to Marxism. He wants converts, not students. He has no intention of extending to others the academic freedom he demands for himself. Let a Marxist get into a department head's position and he will drive away the non-Marxist faculty members and replace them with radicals. They do indeed help each other.

Kicking Marxists off the faculties would in no way do injury to the First Amendment. The First Amendment guarantees the right of free speech, not a particular job. You are not blocking a man's right to free speech if you do not hire him or if you fire him. The Marxist can remain a Marxist, make all the speeches and write all the pamphlets he wants to, but let him buy his own soapbox and rent his own corner. It is stupid for the system which he wants to destroy to subsidize its own destruction.

If this house-cleaning of academe is to occur, the impetus will have to come from the people, acting through their elected representatives. Educators these days are notoriously weak-kneed as well as elitist. Probably much of the national press would side with the Marxists. They are First Amendment zealots (actually, the amendment was written to protect the people, not just journalists) and the sympathies of any of them clearly lie to the left.

It is not, however, a left-right issue. It is simply an issue of preserving the free society we all cherish from people who in theory and in practice reject a free society. One third of the world's people live under Marxism today and there is no freedom of speech, press or education in any nation controlled by Marxists. Not one.

Carroll O'Connor among charter airline's investors

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — "Awright, meatheads, dis is your captain speaking," probably won't be heard in the air, but actor Carroll O'Connor does own part of a charter airline.

The popular star of the CBS television series "Archie Bunker's Place" has become a major investor in Interstate Airlines.

O'Connor mingled with more than 300 guests Tuesday night at a party thrown by the company in a hangar at the Burbank Airport. As a gag, he climbed into the cockpit of a Handley-Page Jetstream and stuck his arm out the window for a right turn.

Among the partygoers were baseball player Reggie Jackson, who was in town for a guest role in the series, and co-stars Danielle Brisebois and Denise Miller.

Joe Gannon, producer of "Archie Bunker's Place," said O'Connor was a "major investor" in the airline.

The party was called to celebrate receipt of its operating certificate from the Federal Aviation Administration. Interstate will operate as a charter and non-scheduled airline.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Even events in land-locked Indiana affect the condition of the world's oceans, the son of famed ocean explorer Jacques-Yves Cousteau says.

Although Indiana has no seashore "everything that goes into your streams ends up in the ocean.... Chemicals accumulate along the ocean's edge. Fish eat the chemicals, then bigger fish eat the small fish and swim to other areas," Jean-Michel Cousteau said Wednesday in a speech at Indiana State University.

He added that failing to take proper environmental safeguards likely will cost more in the long run.

The young Cousteau particularly criticized methods used to drill for and transport oil, saying economy is taking priority over safety.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — EMI Records in London will release a Beatles track entitled "Leave My Kitten Alone" in either 1982 or 1983, EMI spokesman Brian Southall said.

The song, in which the late John Lennon sings lead vocals, is one of 12 unreleased Beatle tunes tucked away in vaults in England, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported Thursday.

Ken Townsend, a spokesman for Abbey Road Studios in London, said there were about 10 such songs at the studio where the Beatles worked from 1962 until Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr dissolved the group in the early 1970s, the newspaper said.

EMI has "Kitten" and one other song, "How Do You Do It," a Mitch Murray tune which the British group Gerry and the Pacemakers made into a hit in the mid-1960s, Townsend said.

He described "Kitten" as "probably the best" of the unreleased material. Brought to public attention by a British disc jockey, EMI planned to release it for Christmas 1980.

Those plans were scrapped after Lennon was murdered in New York City in December 1980. An EMI spokesman said the firm didn't want to appear to be cashing in on a tragedy.

•

NEW YORK (AP) — Hey, did you hear the one about Mayor Edward I. Koch being selected "best new comedian of 1981?"

Seriously, folks, it's true.

Chicago City Limits, improvisational comedy revue, said Thursday the group's cast and audience voted Koch as one of the winners of its "Haha Awards."

George Todisco, producer of Chicago City Limits, sent a telegram to Koch, notifying him that he won the award "because of your warm personality and the way you respond in press interviews and public appearances with ad libs, anecdotes and jokes."

Koch was the only politician among the other winners: Chevy Chase, Goldie Hawn, Robin Williams, Carol Burnett, Shecky Greene, Joan Rivers, John Belushi and Gilda Radner.

A Koch spokesman, asked for comment, was surprised only by Koch's selection as best "new" comedian.

"Where have they been?" said spokesman Evan Cornog.

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Former White House Chief of Staff Hamilton Jordan will marry an Allentown woman Saturday on the campus of Muhlenberg College here, school officials confirm.

Jordan, 36, will marry Dorothy A. Henry, 25, in a private ceremony to be attended by about 50 relatives and friends. Former President Jimmy Carter, under whom Jordan served, is not expected to attend the wedding.

Miss Henry, who grew up in Allentown and was a 1979 graduate of East Stroudsburg State, works as a nurse at Georgetown University Hospital in Washington, D.C. She and Jordan have been dating for about a year, officials said.

The couple picked the Egner Memorial Chapel on Muhlenberg's campus because they wanted a quiet setting, the school said.

Jordan was divorced in 1978 after an eight-year marriage. He is working on a book about his life in politics and on a CBS-TV documentary dealing with the Iranian hostage crisis.

Desi Arnaz

Arnaz in good condition in La Jolla area hospital

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — After a flareup of an intestinal disorder, actor and television producer Desi Arnaz was resting comfortably in "good" condition, a hospital official said.

Arnaz, 64, was removed Thursday from the intensive care unit at Scripps Memorial Hospital, where he was kept as a precaution since being rushed there by paramedics Monday from his home in nearby Del Mar, said the supervisor, who refused to give her name.

Arnaz's wife, Edie, said her husband had suffered a flareup of diverticulitis, an inflamation in the intestinal tract for which the entertainer underwent surgery four times from 1969 to 1970, according to an aide to Arnaz's Los Angeles-based agent, Marvin Moss.

The hospital spokeswoman said Arnaz would be kept at the hospital for observation. The reoccurrence of diverticulitis, she said, "is not unusual; it is a common ailment in older people."

Earlier Thursday, Arnaz's condition was changed from "serious" to "fair" condition, said hospital spokesman Peter Bythiner.

Doctors were to decide if further surgery was necessary, the aide to Moss said.

In the 1950s and early 1960s, the Cuban-born band leader starred with his former wife Lucille Ball on the popular "I Love Lucy" television show. They also produced the show.

From that series, the couple developed a major television production company, Desilu, which in its prime produced more than 19 TV programs, including "The Lucy-Desi Comedy Hour," "The Untouchables," "December Bride," "Willy," "Our Miss Brooks," "Make Room for Daddy," "Westinghouse Desilu Playhouse," "The Web" and the Ray Bolger and George Gobel shows.

Billie Jean King testifies about 'no publicity' deal

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In return for an offer of $125,000, Billie Jean King's former lesbian lover agreed to move out of a Malibu beach house, give back the tennis star's love letters and stir up "no publicity," Mrs. King testified.

"She would get an advance of up to $25,000 and she would get $100,000 when she vacated," Mrs. King said on the second day of a trial in which she and her husband, Larry, are seeking to evict Marilyn Barnett from the beach house, estimated to be worth at least $550,000.

Ms. Barnett, a 33-year-old former hairdresser, says she believed the house was hers. In addition to resisting eviction, Ms. Barnett has filed a "palimony" lawsuit seeking the house and lifetime support.

The $125,000 deal fell through and Mrs. King was unable to evict Ms. Barnett from the house, Mrs. King's business manager, James Jorgensen, testified Thursday in Superior Court.

Outside court, Ms. Barnett told reporters: "I am getting tired of people lying and saying I was threatening Billie with my letters. I kept the letters because I am sentimental, and I took money because I was vegetating at home and needed leg braces to learn to walk again."

Ms. Barnett, who has braces on her legs and uses a cane, broke her back in a fall from the balcony of the house she says Mrs. King bought for her while they were lovers. Ms. Barnett and her lawyer Joel Ladin have refused to discuss published reports that the young woman's fall was a suicide attempt.

Mrs. King, 37, testified that when she told Ms. Barnett in 1978 that she planned to sell the house, Ms. Barnett "got very upset."

"You also told Ms. Barnett then that you were no longer in love with her, didn't you?" asked Ladin. Mrs. King's lawyer objected, and the question was stricken from the court record as irrelevant.

Mrs. King said she first offered Ms. Barnett half the profits from the sale of the house, then switched to the $125,000 offer.

In return for the cash, Mrs. King said, Ms. Barnett would "get out of my life, get out of my house and not be bothersome to me. (She would) give the letters back and have no further claims, no publicity, no lawsuits. She said that would be fine."

Jorgensen said Mrs. King paid $25,000 to Ms. Barnett and thought she was going to return about 60 love letters. But in April 1981, he said, Ms. Barnett hired Ladin to represent her and showed the lawyer the love letters. Jorgensen said he later received a call from Ladin.

"He said he had some bad news for me and my client," Jorgensen recalled. "He said the deal was off, that he had read the letters...and that Marilyn was entitled to a lot more than $125,000, that she was entitled to the house and a lot more."

Erlichman reveals Nixon-era secrets

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Nixon thought "blacks were genetically inferior to whites," toyed with the idea of nominating Spiro T. Agnew to the Supreme Court and had doubts about Chief Justice Warren Burger's abilities, says Nixon's top domestic aide.

John Ehrlichman also says that Nixon thought Henry Kissigner couldn't get the confidence of Arab leaders because he was Jewish and that there was "constant friction" between the White House and the Cabinet.

Ehrlichman makes the statements in "Witness to Power," his third book, which is scheduled for publication by Simon & Schuster next spring. Michael Korda, editor of the book, sent copies of the advance uncorrected proofs to 22 people the author approved, including friends and reviewers. The Associated Press independently obtained a copy Thursday.

In one section of the book, Ehrlichman says Burger discussed a pending Supreme Court desegregation case at a 1970 breakfast meeting at the White House with Nixon, then-Attorney General John Mitchell and Ehrlichman. The discussion was improper according to the Code of Judicial Conduct of the American Bar Association.

Ehrlichman says that Nixon and Mitchell "made a constant effort to keep in touch with Burger. The president had a notion that Burger's decisions on cases before the court were not always worked out with sufficient clarity."

Neither Kissinger, the former secretary of state and national security adviser, nor Ehrlichman could be located Thursday. Nixon spokesman Nicholas Ruwe said the former president would have no comment on the Burger report. An attempt was made to reach Nixon for comment on other items in the book, but he could not be reached. Barrett McGurn, a spokesman for the Supreme Court, said the "justices do not respond to allegations."

Mitchell said on CBS' "Evening News," that "Warren Burger, to my knowledge and recollection, made no statements whatsoever about any of the issues before the court nor was he importuned in any way to my knowledge by anybody in the administration. And I've talked to President Nixon about the subject matter and his recollection is the same, that there were no such occurrences."

Ehrlichman says in a preface that the book is based largely on notes he took between 1969 and 1973 while he talked with Nixon. He says the notes were seized by the government immediately after he was fired, and he did not gain access to any of the material until 1980.

Ehrlichman, who was convicted in connection with the Watergate scandal and served a prison term in part for falsely testifying before a grand jury, divides his book into sections, including Congress, the Supreme Court, the Cabinet and domestic affairs.

Ehrlichman says that Nixon was determined to create a "long-lived strict-constructionist Supreme Court." He adds, "As I sat listening to him, he would daydream about whom he might put on the court." Among the possibilities, Ehrlichman says, was then-Vice President Agnew.

In 1971, faced with two vacancies on the Supreme Court, "Nixon was again toying with the idea of nominating...Agnew. He found 'the Agnew thing intriguing,' he told me." Ehrlichman says he told Nixon that the Senate would "clobber" an Agnew nomination. Nixon agreed, Ehrlichman says, and "nothing more was said about Agnew."

Vic Gold, who was Agnew's press secretary, called the report "ludicrous."

Gold said Thursday that there was speculation in the press in 1972 that Nixon would name Agnew to the court so he could nominate former Gov. John Connally of Texas as his vice presidential running mate. "No one took it seriously," Gold said. "Nixon and the people around him, particularly Ehrlichman, had a very low opinion of Agnew."

Ehrlichman says "the racial issue was both a problem and an opportunity for President Richard Nixon...."

Nixon "genuinely believed," Ehrlichman says, that federal programs like affirmative action and busing "simply would never do any good....

Advance reports could jeopardize syndication

NEW YORK (AP) — Syndication of John Ehrlichman's new book has been put into question by advance reports on what he has to say about former President Richard Nixon and others, a spokeswoman for the publisher says.

However, Julia Knickerbocker, director of publicity and public relations for Simon & Schuster, said Thursday, "Nothing has been canceled."

Simon & Schuster has sold syndication rights to a number of newspapers and was waiting to see what else was printed from the book, Ms. Knickerbocker said. If a major amount of material is printed by other newspapers, she said, then syndication will probably be dropped.

The Washington Post, The New York Times and The Associated Press on Thursday reported details of Ehrlichman's book, "Witness to Power." The book is scheduled for publication next spring.

Michael Korda, the book's editor, sent copies of the advance uncorrected proofs to 22 people approved by the author, including friends and reviewers. Korda said the proofs were sent out in an attempt to elicit "blurbs" that might be used to promote the book.

The Associated Press independently obtained a copy of the book.

"If I hadn't underestimated the hard-news impact of the book, I would have said, 'Let's not let anything out until we have the final version, because of the danger of leaks,' " Korda said.

Ehrlichman, Nixon's top domestic aide, says in the proofs of his book that Nixon thought "blacks were genetically inferior to whites," toyed with the idea of appointing Spiro T. Agnew to the Supreme Court, had doubts about Chief Justice Warren Burger's abilities, and thought Henry Kissigner couldn't get the confidence of Arab leaders because he was Jewish.

Kissinger says peace movement advocates 'bloodthirsty strategy'

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger says the European peace movement is advocating "the most bloodthirsty strategy" with its strident opposition to the concept of a limited nuclear war.

Kissinger on Thursday issued a strong defense of the NATO strategy of flexible response to a nuclear attack. When President Reagan advocates that position, Kissinger said, "he is accused of being a warmonger even though this view has been pressed by every president since Eisenhower.

"Who is the more dangerous participant in this debate," Kissinger asked. "What is the real menace?"

Kissinger addressed the annual meeting of the American Enterprise Institute, a private research group which generally advocates conservative causes.

Reagan caused a furor in Europe two months ago when he said he could envision a nuclear exchange that would be limited to Europe and would not erupt into world war.

European peace groups charged that the United States was devising a strategy that would enable it to confront the Soviet Union on European soil without extending the conflict to American territory.

The debate over this issue has sharpened with approval of the NATO plan to deploy land-based medium-ranged weapons in Europe starting in 1983. These weapons would counter Soviet deployment of SS-20 mobile missiles targeted at Western Europe.

Many Europeans consider the NATO plan an unacceptable alternative to early NATO policy under which the United States sought to deter Soviet aggression with the threat of massive American retaliation on Soviet civilian targets.

"Do you really want to be in the position where we can protect ourselves only by indiscriminate destruction of hundreds of millions," Kissinger asked.

"It is a strange fact that on both sides of the Atlantic, there are groups that consider themselves humane and progressive and pacific that also are the groups that advocate the most bloodthirsty strategy.

"It is taken as an example of warmongering tendencies to imply or to assert that it is the duty of governments to try to avert a nuclear holocaust and to resist aggression if it should take place by other than the most cataclysmic methods."

In Europe, he said there are "howls of outrage" whenever there is an attempt in the United States to define nuclear weapons in terms other than "blind mass destruction."

He said there are those in Europe who are ready to believe that the United States is ready to stand on the sidelines while Europe is devastated by war.

"When has it ever happened in history that that certain countries would make their defense conditional on the guaranteed destruction of their strongest ally," he asked. "That is a weird debate."

Donovan accused of knowing bribe was passed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan is under FBI investigation because he reportedly was present in 1977 when a construction company associate allegedly passed a $2,000 bribe to a union official.

While Donovan was saying Thursday he had "no direct knowledge of these allegations," the White House was acknowledging the investigation's existence.

And news organizations — The New York Times, ABC, NBC and The Washington Post — were providing what they said were details of the accusations.

White House spokesman David Gergen said Attorney General William French Smith told President Reagan last week about the inquiry, which is being conducted under the Ethics in Government Act and which could lead to Smith appointing a special prosecutor.

But Gergen said Reagan was given no details. "There is no information known to the president that would cause him to have any lack of confidence in Secretary Donovan," he said.

Donovan said in a prepared statement that he knows "nothing that lends substance to these reports."

The investigation is reported to have started after allegations were made to government investigators by Mario Montuoro, former secretary-treasurer of the Blasters, Drillers and Miners Union.

Montuoro reportedly told investigators Donovan was present at a luncheon at a restaurant in Queens, New York, when a white envelope containing $2,000 was handed to Louis C. Sanzo, president of Local 29 of the Laborers International Union.

The money was passed by Joseph DiCarolis, then senior vice president and now president of Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J., according to news accounts, including a New York Times interview with Montuoro.

Before joining the Reagan administration this year, Donovan was president of Schiavone.

Montuoro was quoted as saying the $2,000 was intended to encourage Sanzo's union to battle another union for jurisdiction over workers at a subway project for which Donovan's firm was the prime contractor.

The New York Times said that when it first contacted Sanzo, he said: "It's not fair. This never took place. Mr. Donovan is an honorable man, and his company is an honorable company. As far as any hanky-panky — it never took place. It's just not right what's going on."

Sanzo subsequently called the newspaper and said "no comment" was the only comment he wanted published, the Times said.

A man who answered the Schiavone office telephone told The Associated Press on Thursday that neither DiCarolis nor anyone else was available for comment. Sanzo's office was closed, and he has no telephone listing.

Sanzo was convicted earlier this year in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn of tax evasion and conspiracy and acquitted of racketeering and labor-law charges. He is free on bail while he appeals a three-year jail term and $22,500 fine.

One of the government witnesses against him was Montuoro, who is quoted as telling the Times that he had been convicted of a narcotics charge in the 1960s and possession of a weapon in the 1970s.

Donovan's confirmation by the Senate was delayed while the FBI investigated allegations that his company was tied to union corruption and organized crime. The FBI said in January it was unable to confirm any of these charges.

Donovan denied the earlier allegations, saying: "No executive officer of Schiavone Construction Co., no employee of Schiavone Construction Co., has ever bought labor peace."

Congress is prepared to veto used-car FTC regulation

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

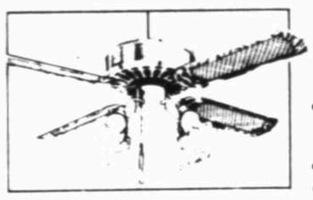

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal regulation that used car dealers tell a consumer about any known defects in the cars they sell is one step closer toward a congressional veto.

A resolution to veto the Federal Trade Commission regulation on used-car sales was sent to the Senate floor Thursday by a 12-4 vote of the Commerce Committee.

Meanwhile, it appeared that a majority of members of the House Energy and Commerce Committee also support the veto, but approval was delayed when that 42-member panel did not have a quorum. The veto was supported 14-4 and one vote of present.

MC offers advertising, public relations classes

In order to accommodate businesspersons, Midland College will offer evening courses in advertising and public relations during the spring semester.

Principles of Advertising (Jour 2305) and Principles of Public Relations (Jour 2306) could be beneficial to many persons in the area, according to Ralph Sellmeyer, the Allison Professor of Journalism at Midland College.

"I think there is a need in the city for such a course (Principles of Advertising) as an aid to business people, including small retailers, small business firms other than retailers, non-profit organizations, and just individuals who have perhaps always wanted to know something about how the world of advertising works," Sellmeyer said.

The course, which will meet at 5:30-6:50 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, will cover the history and development of advertising in the U.S. and its role in a free economy. Problems with the Federal Trade Commission on deceptive advertising will also be discussed.

Sellmeyer said definitions, dimensions, and socioeconomic aspects of advertising will be covered. Also, the structure of the advertising industry, the relationship of advertising and marketing, the advertising plan, creative strategy, creative processes in advertising, the consumer view of advertising, misleading, annoying and offensive advertising, and the future of advertising will be included in the class.

On the practical side, Sellmeyer said students will be given the opportunity to design basic advertisements, write copy and select illustrations for the ads in order to learn some aspects of typography and graphics.

Principles of Public Relations, which will be taught from 7 to 8:20 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, is designed to show how the practice of public relations by those who are professionally trained can aid in the interfacing of institutions, corporations, non-profit organizations and other groups and their various publics.

Sellmeyer pointed out that the course can help the business person in all areas: executive, administrative, assistant, and mid-management. Office managers, executive secretaries, personnel directors and anyone who deals with newpapers, television and radio stations will benefit from the course, he said.

"(The course) will show that public relations is not just grabbing publicity in the media, or the art of covering up or glossing over," Sellmeyer continued. "The practice of public relations contains a wealth of tools capable of helping to mend this society of ours, not injure it."

He said the course will consider what public relations is and is not, public relations and public opinion, public relations research, planning and creativity, working with the media, public relations writing, special event planning, evaluation of public relations performance, who practices public relations, its business side and the various applications of public relations.

On the practical side, students will learn the basics of writing news releases, designing brochures, newsletters and other promotional pieces.

Students who complete either of the courses can receive three hours of credit. Pre-registration may be completed now through Dec. 18, or from Jan. 4 through Jan. 12, in the Office of Student Services in the MC Administration Building. Hours are from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Fridays through Dec. 18. Hours during January will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Official registration dates for the spring semester are Jan. 13 and 14. Classes will begin the week of Jan. 18.

Clark considering CBN appearance

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Attorney General Steve Clark says he hasn't decided whether to accept an invitation to appear on the Christian Broadcasting Network's "700 Club" program.

M.G. "Pat" Robertson, CBN president, telephoned the attorney general's office with the invitation late Thursday. The message said Clark could appear at his convenience "to clear up any misunderstandings or misconceptions" from Wednesday's broadcast, Clark said.

Robertson, one of the program's hosts, attacked Clark's participation in an American Civil Liberties Union fund-raiser last month. He accused Clark of being crooked.

The attorney general viewed the tape late Wednesday and called the report absurd and asinine.

Nicaraguan ambassador tries to understand U.S.

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Ambassador Arturo J. Cruz may be the one representative of the Marxist-run government of Nicaragua who understands the United States.

Cruz has been trying to patch relations between the two countries for months now, without much success.

His low-keyed, reasoned appeals for "a more understanding United States policy" toward Nicaragua more often than not are drowned out by the strident revolutionary rhetoric of the Sandinista spokesmen in Managua.

Why that should be is hard to understand.

It is not just that Cruz has spent more time, some 15 years, in the United States and knows the American people better.

Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto and other members of the Sandinista hierarchy also have studied, lived and worked in the country.

D'Escoto, for example, an ordained Catholic priest, though now suspended from his clerical functions, was for many years editor of Maryknoll magazine, a widely-circulated U.S. religious monthly.

But while D'Escoto and the others pass up no opportunity to offend the United States in their public statements, Cruz gives all evidence of seeking a genuine rapprochement with Washington.

In mid-November, though, he announced that he is resigning as Nicaraguan ambassador to the United States and he remains here now only pending U.S. acceptance of his successor.

Cruz told the Managua newspaper La Prensa last month that he believes he "should be replaced by someone more identified with the FSLN," the Sandinista National Liberation Front which has been running Nicaragua since Gen. Anastasio (Tachito) Somoza gave up and flew into exile in July 1979.

Clearly, Cruz's is a dissident voice, but "within the revolution," he has said.

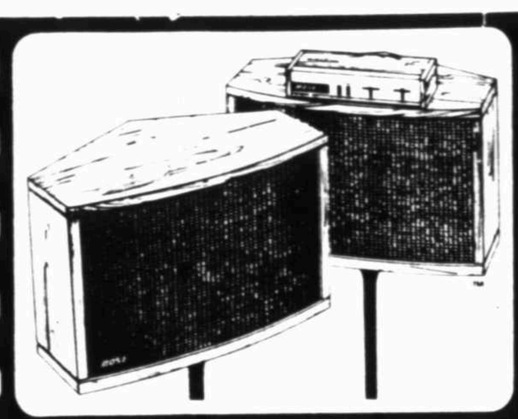

He objected to the frequent government closures of La Prensa, the only independent newspaper in Nicaragua, and expressed concern at the jailings of Nicaraguan businessmen who criticized the Sandinista regime.

Cruz understands how "a certain indiscriminate internationalism," the rhetorical support, and in a telephone interview with Copley News Service, he emphasized the word "rhetorical," for example, could have aroused U.S. fears that the Nicaraguan revolution was going Marxist-Leninist.

But he insists that a U.S. "hard line" threatens the chances that the democratic forces within Nicaragua may be able to insure the survival of pluralism and a mixed economy. Suspension of U.S. economic aid and the possibility of further economic sanctions oblige Nicaragua to turn elsewhere, to the Socialist bloc, to Europe, to Mexico.

Although he concedes that the Sandinistas have "a Marxist formation," Cruz has said that he thinks it is exaggerated to say "that the revolutionary government would like to have the best of the two worlds — that is, obtain financing from the Western world and remain inclined toward the Soviet bloc."

Cruz's specific recommendation for improved relations is a continuation of the talks that Assistant Secretary of State Thomas O. Enders started in Managua in August. That "would give the revolution the opportunity to enter a democratic channel," he said.

Volcano eruptions possible in all western states

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Although Mount St. Helens and its explosive sisters of the Northwest get most of the attention, scientists say all the Western states have volcanic fields that could produce violent eruptions — maybe not for 1,000 years, or maybe tomorrow.

"There are many systems that should be considered active and we do not know where the next action will be or where we are in the interval (between eruptions)," geologist Robert L. Smith told a meeting of the American Geophysical Union Thursday.

He said a study of past vulcanism reveals at least 60 volcanic clusters spread in an intriguingly regular pattern through the 11 states west of the Rocky Mountains, which seem to be the interior limit of the activity.

"And 60 is a conservative number — it may be closer to 100," said Smith, of the U.S. Geological Survey National Center in Reston, Va.

The Cascades volcanoes of Oregon and Washington seem to erupt every few hundred years or less, as Mount St. Helens did in a spectacular and destructive explosion in May 1980.

SMITH SAID the interval between eruptions in most other clusters seems to vary from 1,000 to 1 million years, and too little is known to refine those numbers for specific locations.

"It is difficult to get too excited about any one of them on the scale of a human lifetime," he said in a subsequent interview.

"But it could be tomorrow. One of these things may erupt every 1,000 years and we may be just one day away from that 1,000 years. The possibility that some of them will go off in our lifetime is worth considering.

"But," he continued, "what we are most concerned with is long-term land-use planning."

Smith said remote burial grounds for chemical and radioactive wastes could be jeopardized if they are located where volcanic eruptions could take place. An eruption under such a poisonous dump could spew its contents into the atmosphere, he warned.

While the Cascades are marked by great explosive eruptions, Smith and USGS co-worker Robert G. Luedke said other volcanoes are more likely to become active as smaller volcano versions known as cinder cones.

HE DESCRIBED the development of one such volcano in western Mexico. That eruption began with a crack in a flat cornfield in 1943. By the time the Paricutin volcano quieted down nine years later, it had raised a new mountain 1,345 feet high.

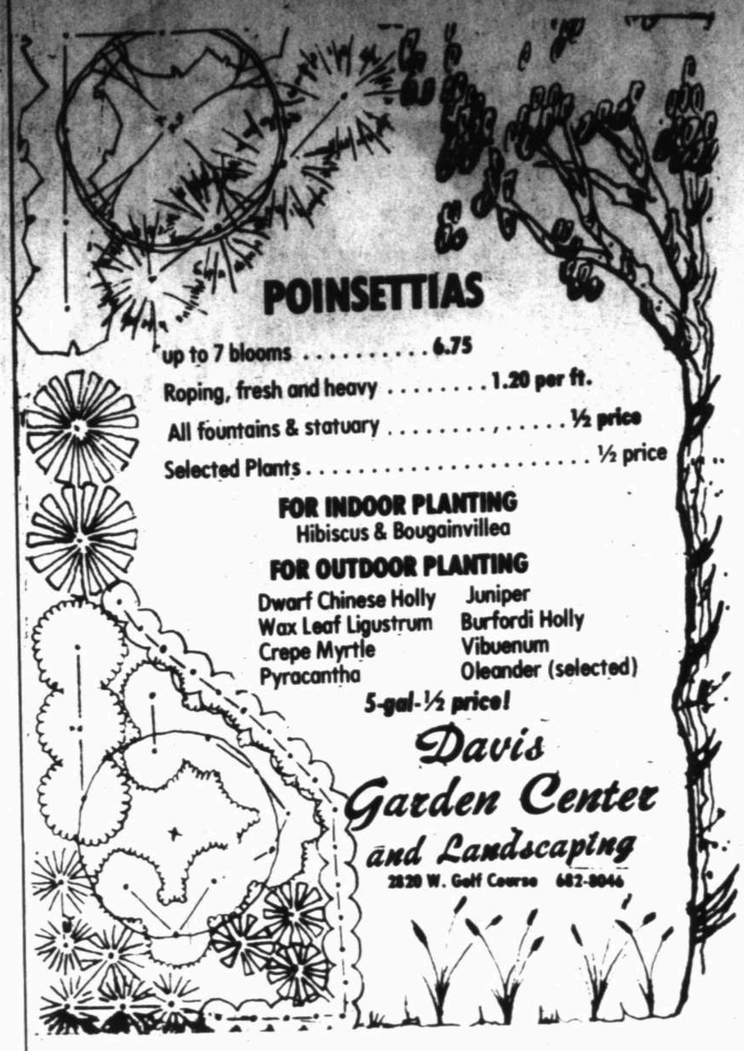

Luedke said cinder cone volcanoes went off in the eastern Mojave Desert 380 years ago, formed the Sunset Crater of Arizona 900 years ago and the Craters of the Moon in Idaho perhaps 1,500 years ago.

The forces that are still twisting, spreading, building and cracking the American West have produced about 10 large zones of volcanic activity, Smith said.

Major zones spread across Oregon and Washington; along the California-Nevada border; from southern Arizona to northeast New Mexico and southern Colorado; from Nevada through southern Idaho to Montana and Wyoming; and enclose the junction where Nevada, Arizona and Utah meet.

Luedke said the zones were discovered while preparing maps of potential hot spots for exploration for geothermal energy sources.

'Ski-mask rapist' is 'Boy Scout type'

By SCOTT F. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

DONALDSONVILLE, La. (AP) — A man who says he's the "ski mask rapist" who attacked women in a dozen states was the "Boy Scout type," neat and punctual and open about his problems, his former probation officer says.

"He was most unremarkable," said Harvey Honsinger, who worked with Jon B. Simonis after his 1978 conviction for making obscene phone calls in Lake Charles, La.

"He was, I would say, a popular boy in terms of being social," said John Watkins, superintendent of schools in Carroll, Ohio, where Simonis attended school.

"He was not a disciplinary problem — no more so than any other student — and there was no indication that there was any problem," Watkins said. "He didn't, maybe, work up to his abilities — but how many of us do?"

A state judge on Thursday ordered sanity hearings for Simonis, 30, of Lake Charles, and refused to accept guilty pleas in three rapes.

"I am guilty of these crimes," Simonis told District Judge Charles S. Becnel. "I knew extremely well what I was doing beforehand, while I was doing it, and I know now."

State police said Simonis, arrested Nov. 27, admitted being involved in at least 80 attacks across the country, including two for which other men were imprisoned. He pleaded guilty to armed robbery and burglary charges in LaSalle Parish and was sentenced to 231 years in prison without parole.

Simonis is charged in Becnel's court with three counts of aggravated rape, four counts of armed robbery and one count of aggravated burglary. Becnel said that in light of the gravity of the charges and their notoriety, it would be only fair that the defendant be ruled competent before being allowed to plead guilty.

Grand juries have since indicted him in LaSalle, East Baton Rouge, Ascension, and Jefferson Davis parishes and in Tyler County, Texas.

In addition, state police said they have had queries about Simonis from Ohio, California, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Michigan, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Wisconsin.

State Police spokesman Ronnie Jones said a composite of the crimes indicates a masked, armed intruder who surprised people in their homes, forcing men to watch while a woman or teen-age girl was raped or otherwise sexually attacked.

Simonis was "very candid and extremely honest," Lancaster, Ohio, police detective Donald Regan said.

Simonis says he feels remorse for his crimes. "It is my judgment I have done wrong and I would just as soon to plead guilty and save the people time and money," he said.

Simonis' family moved from Carroll, Ohio, when he was a high school freshman, after his father was transferred from Lockbourne Air Force Base. He went back to Bloom-Carroll High School for his senior year.

Simonis finished a four-year hitch with the Army in Europe in 1977 and returned to Lake Charles. After his conviction for making obscene phone calls he received a suspended sentence on condition that he receive psychiatric help.

"He impressed me as the Boy Scout type," Honsinger said. "He was neat, clean, punctual, didn't change his residence. He was well thought of at work and he was open to me in discussing his problems."

In a statement to Lake Charles police after his arrest, Simonis said: "Back in 1975, when I was in Rosepine, I first began window peeping." He also told police he began exposing himself to women while stationed in Europe.

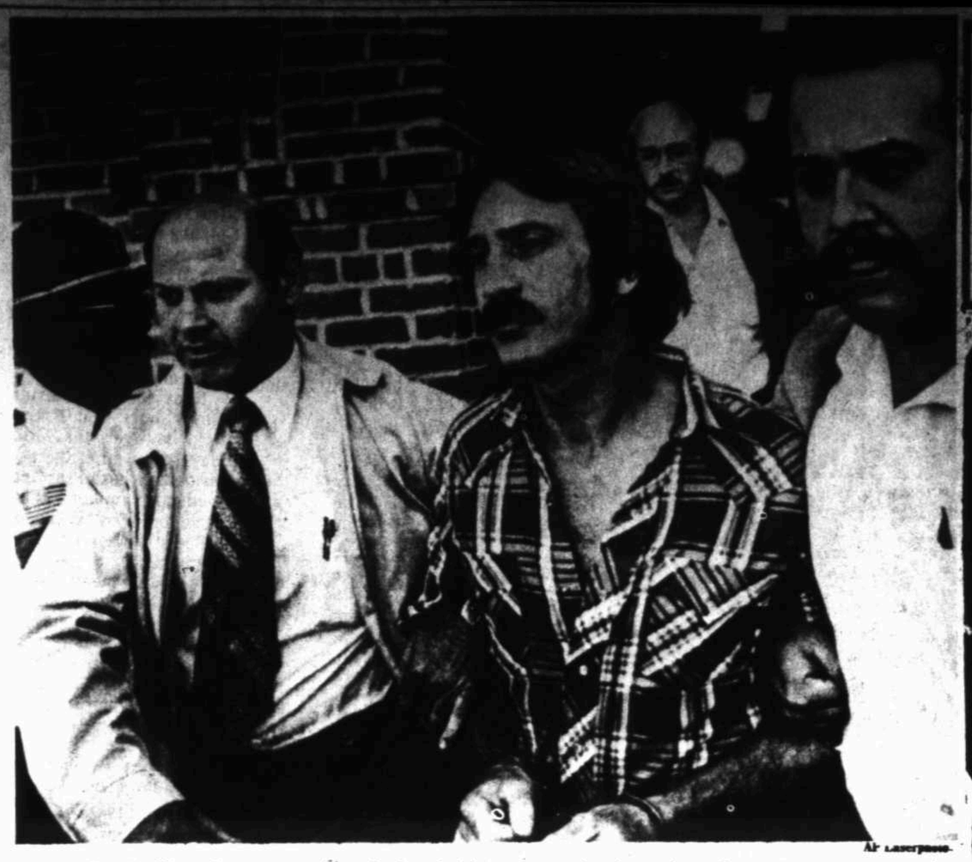

Officers had been told that a car like Simonis' was seen near the scene of one of the "ski mask rapist" attacks. Simonis was placed under surveillance and was arrested as he left a store near his home.

Following statements made by Simonis, Texas authorities freed a man imprisoned for rape in Orange City.

Sheriff Jim Peck of Fairfield County, Ohio, said Simonis admitted Wednesday to four rapes in Ohio, including two for which Bradley Cox, 20, is serving 56 to 200 years.

Peck said he would meet with District Attorney Jim Luse in Lancaster, Ohio, on whether Cox should be freed.

Cox confessed to committing the rapes and was convicted in 1980 on charges of burglary, robbery and rape. Police said Cox was unable to recall details of the crimes because he claimed to be under the influence of narcotics at the time.

Jon B. Simonis, center, the admitted ski-mask rapist, is rushed from court at Donaldsonville, La., Thursday under heavy security. Simonis, who is believed to have committed 80 crimes in 12 states, attempted to plead guilty to three rapes in Gonzales, La., but the judge ruled he would have to wait and undergo mental examinations.

Lawyer will argue struggling victim contributed to her death

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — In an effort to save his client from the death penalty in the killing of former Connecticut Sen. Abraham Ribicoff's niece, an attorney says he'll argue that a struggling robbery victim "contributes" to her own death.

Frederick Jerome Thomas, 22, was found guilty Thursday of murdering Sarai Ribicoff while robbing her and her escort, Stanford University professor John Shoven, as they walked to their car from a Venice restaurant on Nov. 12, 1980.

The Superior Court jury deliberated for three days before finding that Thomas was also guilty of robbery and assault with a deadly weapon on Shoven.

The same jury will begin deliberating Monday on the penalty phase of the trial. One of its options is committing Thomas to the gas chamber because the murder took place during a robbery.

Miss Ribicoff, 23, who was an editorial writer for the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, was shot as she was shoved to the ground after Thomas tried to pull a gold chain from around her neck. The assailant then fired two shots at Shoven as he ran into the restaurant for help.

Emergency medical personnel attend 12-year-old Tracy Danile Webb, 3308 Camarie Ave., Thursday afternoon after her bicycle was struck by a car driven by Robert L. Clemmons, 23, of Lubbock. The girl was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital's emergency room, where she was treated and released about 4 p.m. Police reports indicated the girl was riding north on Midkiff Road near the Wadley Avenue intersection and Clemmons was pulling onto Midkiff from a private drive when the accident occurred.

He's fit enough for bike, not job

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A heart transplant recipient who rode a bicycle 3,000 miles to the West Coast this fall as part of a fund-raising effort has been told he's not medically fit for a job with the U.S. Postal Service, an official says.

Knoxville Postmaster Roy Asbury said Thursday, however, that Jim Hayes' appeal of the decision by a postal service medical examiner will be considered by the post office's district office in Memphis.

"Once the medical officer in the region makes his decision, it will be final," Asbury said.

Hayes, 29, pedaled a bicycle during September and October from his Knoxville home to Stanford University Medical Center in Palo Alto, Calif., for a checkup — his fifth major annual physical since the transplant.

By taking pledges, Hayes generated more than $6,300 for the American Heart Association during the cross-country ride with his brother, DeWayne.

Most OPEC prices expected lower

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Oil ministers said today that OPEC oil prices except the benchmark were expected to come down by up to $1 a barrel and that Libya asked the oil cartel to take "joint action" to blacklist U.S. oil companies that withdraw from Libya.

But conference sources said that no oil embargo against the United States was requested and that joint action by OPEC against U.S. companies was unlikely.

The Saudi oil minister, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, said that prices of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were expected to drop by between 50 cents to $1 per 42-gallon barrel for all crudes except the benchmark Saudi type, now selling for $34. The United States imports about 900,000 barrels a day of Saudi oil, or roughly one-fifth of U.S. imports.

Yamani told reporters that OPEC was "about to" reach an agreement on lowering crude prices on "everything except the benchmark." He said the price cuts "vary sometimes 50 cents, sometimes a dollar" per barrel.

He said he could not give details of the overall pricing plan until an OPEC-wide agreement was officially announced.

"We don't decide alone. We discuss with the others and then we have a joint discussion," said Yamani.

Final details of the price adjustments are expected to emerge from the evening meeting of the OPEC ministers.

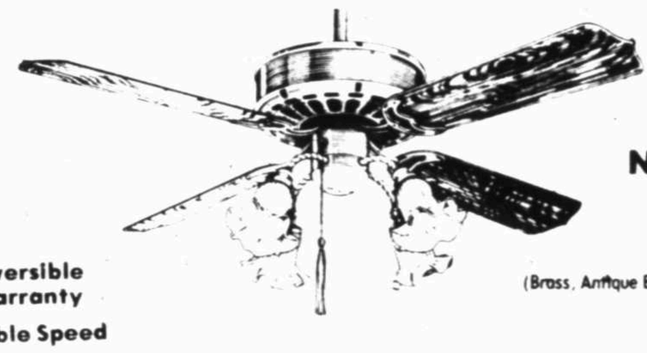

But the affect on prices in the United States of Yamani's so-called "nice Christmas gift" to the West was expected to be minimal. If the benchmark price falls by $1 a barrel, U.S. consumers might expect to pay one cent less per gallon. But the benchmark was not included in the arrangement, which was clearly aimed at sponging up the estimated 2 million barrel-a-day world oil glut.

The Venezuelan oil minister, Humberto Calderon-Berti, told reporters that the OPEC foreign affairs committee was considering the Libyan request, put forward to the OPEC conference by the Libyan oil minister, Adeb-Salam Al-Zagaar.

Al-Zagaar was quoted as denouncing the United States for taking "illegal and unfair" action against Libya. He was referring to a Washington call on U.S. citizens, about 1,500 in all, to leave Libya. U.S. oil companies also were to stop operating in Libya, Al-Zagaar claimed.

Natural gas leaks cause public building evacuations

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent said today that RRC safety inspectors have recommended the immediate evacuation of public buildings in the cities of Junction and Eldorado because of natural gas leaks thought to pose imminent danger to the public.

In making the announcement, Nugent said, "This is in line with what we feared, but expected, when we asked the Legislature to give us the ability to seek out these danger points."

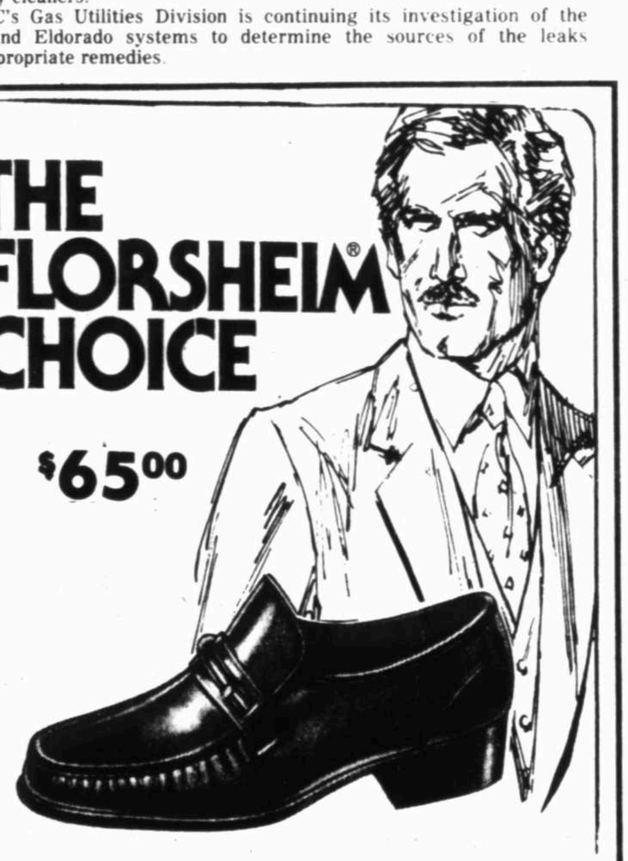

The public school in Eldorado was evacuated at 2:30 p.m. Thursday after inspectors found gas concentrations of 25 to 60 percent under the slab foundation of the building. Natural gas also was detected in the school building.

Earlier this week, high gas concentrations were found under and around two public buildings in the community of Junction, not far from Eldorado. One building housed the Farm Bureau and the other was a commercial laundry and dry cleaners.

The RRC's Gas Utilities Division is continuing its investigation of the Junction and Eldorado systems to determine the sources of the leaks and the appropriate remedies.

...Sponsors are still needed for the Salvation Army Dress-A-Live-Doll program for this year, according to Mrs. J. Paul Karcher, program chairman.

Through the program, individuals, together with friends or family, office staffs, civic organization members and many local church groups may outfit one child or several children for Christmas, Mrs. Karcher said. The Salvation Army staff visits families recommended for help to determine the needs and clothing sizes of the children.

"There is no personal contact by the donors and anonymity for all parties is assured," Mrs. Karcher noted.

"Purchase of a complete ensemble, including socks, shoes, night clothes, sweaters or jackets, etc., may be expected to cost approximately $75, and is tax deductible," she explained.

Since it's inception in 1974, Dress-A-Live-Doll has provided hundreds of Midland's underpriviledged children, from infancy to 14-years-old, with new clothing from 'head-to-toe,' Mrs. Karcher said.

Persons interested in participating in the project may call Margie Deggs at the Salvation Army office at 683-3614. A child will be assigned to them and a size information sheet forwarded to the donors.

All clothing for each child should be gift wrapped in several packages and taken to the Salvation Army office by Dec. 18. The Salvation Army staff will then deliver the packages to the children.

Mrs. Karcher said that several local stores have initiated discounts for customers purchasing clothing for the program. Merchants participating include Upstairs/Downstairs, Sears and Jimmy Smith Shoes...

Shopper's Hotline: Making your choices known

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

It has been said that America is a nation of individuals, each person unique and different from everyone else.

One of the few things everyone has in common is that every American is a consumer. Each day, we are all exposed to various goods and services, and each day many of us make decisions about which of these goods and services we will purchase.

And each day many of us wish we could make our feelings about these goods and services known directly to the people who offer them to us.

Now Midland residents have an opportunity to do just that. Information Resources, Inc., a marketing reseach company based in Chicago, has installed a new computer system in major grocery stores in Midland that is designed to give merchants and manufacturers a more accurate picture of consumer purchases.

The system is called BehaviorScan. It includes a computer scanner reading information off a product at the checkout stand, instead of a checker with a cash register, and a service called Shoppers' Hotline, which each person can participate in on a voluntary basis. John Malec, Chief Executive Officer of IRI, said that this system "dramatically improves checkout time, improves checker accuracy, and you are less likely to be overcharged."

At the checkout stand, the checker, instead of ringing up a purchase on a cash register, simply holds the item being purchased over a computer scanner, which "reads" the information from the special code printed on the item (those lines in a white box now on most items in grocery stores is the computer code), the purchase is recorded, and the information concerning description and price is printed on the register tape, all at the same time. The register tape gives an accurate description of the purchase.

Shoppers' Hotline is a voluntary service that consumers can participate in simply by filling out an application. The participant receives an identification card which is shown to the checker at the checkout stand.

The number on the card and the purchases made are recorded electronically. Mr. Malec said, "This allows us to keep a record of what's selling in the stores...and clears up the manufacturers' doubt about consumer preference...All individual statistics are massed, never individually exposed, and then analyzed."

Participants in Shoppers' Hotline also have a remote control sensor installed on their television sets. This enables IRI to try new advertising messages with only the consumers in the Shoppers' Hotline program.

Mr. Malec pointed out that this in no way interferes with television programming or the consumer's preference as to when the television should be turned on or off. He said these sensors are a way of "fine-tuning the advertising message" by letting a limited market test the message.

Mr. Malec said this type of test marketing can benefit consumers, merchants, and manufacturers by preventing wasted advertising dollars. "Usually billions of dollars are wasted each year on marketing processes (that involve a lot of guesswork)". If the marketer can avoid these huge losses, the consumer benefits because the marketer doesn't have to recover his losses by raising prices.

"The scanner allows a lot of precision in analyzing (consumer purchases)...We are taking the guess out of what works and what doesn't," said Mr. Malec. BehaviorScan gives a more accurate picture of consumer preference and behavior, giving merchants and manufacturers a clearer picture of the goods and services to offer, he added.

Accoring to Mr. Malec, Midland, along with EauClair, Wisc.; Pittsfield, Mass.; and Marion, Ind. are the only four communities in the world using this method of test marketing. He said these four communities were chosen because "we were looking for communities of about 75,000 that have cable television and that together would make up a microcosm of the United States." He said all the major grocery stores in Midland are now equipped with scanners.

Information Resources, Inc. was founded in 1977 by Mr. Malec and Mr. Gerry Eskin, Chairman of the Board, because "I experienced a growing reality...that every marketing technique that existed before this was flawed," said Mr. Malec. "Nothing speaks to a manufacturer like actual sales results."

He also said Shopper's Hotline has some additional benefits for consumers because they can participate in several drawings for prizes during the year, they receive a monthly newsletter, and all participants receive an annual prize.

CIA Parade of Homes to begin Saturday

The Midland Home Builders Association will host opening ceremonies for the 1981 Parade of Homes at noon Saturday at the intersection of Fargo and Westminister Streets, the entrance to the parade.

Benefiting the Christmas in April program will be the proceeds of ticket sales from the showing of 22 brand new, fully decorated homes. All homes are located in four cul de sacs, Parkhurst, Lexxon, Stillmeadow and Westminister, bounded on the west by Norwood Street, on the north by FM 868, on the east by Boulder and on the south by Fargo Street. The exclusive showing runs through Dec. 20.

Hosting the formal ribbon cutting ceremony will be the M Squad of the Midland Chamber of Commerce. Chairperson of the committee is Charles Logue. Captains include Jimmy Mohammed, H. A. Tuck, Wayne Martin, Jack Moore and Grace Graham.

Ceremonies will include cutting the ribbon on the show and a short speech by David Pine, chairperson of the 1981 Parade of Homes, followed by remarks by Bobby Trimble, chairperson of Christmas in April.

The parade is open from noon to 9 p.m. on weekends and from 5 to 9 p.m. on weekdays. It is located in the Skyline Terrace addition between Midland Park Mall and Midland Drive.

"We are delighted with the showing of these new homes and with the coming together of the builders in the association due to the parade," explains Pine. "We also are delighted to be able to do this for Christmas in April."

Tickets are $1 per person to tour all 22 homes. Tickets will be available at the gate of the parade.

A products show will be on display throughout the parade.

For more information, call the Human Relations Council, which coordinates the Christmas in April program or the Midland Homebuilders Association.

DEAR ABBY

Hanukkah puzzles Christian

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am seriously dating a man of the Jewish faith. I know he is planning to give me a Christmas present and I would like to give him a Hanukkah gift. I understand that Hanukkah extends over a period of eight days. When does it begin? And it would help me a lot if I knew a little something about this holiday and why it is celebrated. Thank you. Sign me ... SHANA SHIXA (his name for me)

DEAR SHIXA: In 1981 Hanukkah will begin at sundown on Dec. 20. This holiday commemorates the victory of Judah Maccabee over the Syrian Greeks in 165 B.C. — a victory of a few against many.

After the Jewish Temple had been defiled by enemy forces, it was rededicated. The cruse of oil which was found sealed by the high priest was sufficient for one day only; nevertheless, it miraculously lasted for eight days. Therefore, in celebrating Hanukkah it is customary to light candles each evening for eight days to celebrate this miracle.

DEAR ABBY: For many years I've been married to a fine man. We have lovely children, and things are still very good with one exception. I'm in love with my husband's brother. (I LOVE my husband, but I am IN LOVE with my brother-in-law.)

I don't know how to get over this feeling, which I've had for several years. It gets worse every time our family gets together (about twice a year — we live far apart).

There has never been anything the least bit improper in our relationship. I don't even know for sure if he feels similarly toward me, but I suspect he does by the way he looks at me. He's in his 30s, a few years younger than I. He's still single. My husband says his brother never married because he sees all his married friends divorcing, and he's still looking for a relationship as close and loyal as ours!

It's agony to feel this way about someone so close — and so taboo. I could never hurt my husband, whom I love and respect. It's no consolation to realize how hopeless this situation is. This is the first time I have ever allowed myself to admit it.

How can I handle these unholy feelings? Are they normal? I clearly need someone's help. — DISTURBED AND GUILTY

DEAR DISTURBED: We are not responsible for our feelings, only our actions — so stop punishing yourself with all that unearned guilt. You need more help than I can give you in a letter. Please seek counseling from a professional with whom you can be candid and completely comfortable.

Mum's the word — or Pop, or Sis, or ...

By PETER KAYE
Copley News Service

A couple of years ago, our oldest son, Loren, met us at the Seattle airport after driving north from his home in Sacramento.

"What," we asked him, "impressed you the most on your trip? The redwoods? The Columbia River? Mount St. Helen's?"

"My biggest thrill," he said without hesitation, "was seeing the Yreka Bakery."

His mother, brothers and I understood. After all, how can the world's tallest trees, the West's mightiest river or a reborn volcano compare to a living palindrome?

A palindrome is a word or phrase that reads the same backward and forward. And Yreka Bakery, short and sweet, is a palindrome.

Our children were raised on palindromes. Before they knew who Napoleon was, they had heard: "Able was I ere I saw Elba."

And "A man, a plan, a canal, Panama" was in their little minds long before Theodore Roosevelt (or even Ronald Reagan).

There are those who say this infatuation with palindromes led to the name we picked for our third son, just so he could imperiously tell a teacher: "Madam, I'm Adam."

But that's an unjust accusation. Palindromes have never affected my behavior, except for an insatiable urge to tell the publisher of The Los Angeles Times to "sit on a potato pan, Otis."

Actually, word games always have been important in our family. When the kids were little, we passed time on long auto trips by playing "Stinky Pinky," a rhyming riddle that goes like this:

Q: What is an evil preacher?

A: A sinister minister.

Q: A brightly colored device that helps things swing?

A: An orange door hinge. (Door hinge, incidentally, is the only rhyme in the English language for orange).

From "Stinky Pinky" it was an easy and logical step to the newspaper reporter game, wherein players identify themselves as "I'm Brown from the Sun" or "I'm Up with the Times."

Our family has grown up with an appreciation for words and their meanings. Despite a slight (uninherited) tendency to commit that cardinal sin, a pun, each boy has retained an interest in palindromes, "Stinky Pinky" or their descendants.

Loren writes or calls from Sacramento to keep me abreast of the latest fictitious bill titles — legislative acts that carry the names of their authors.

There is the Ellis-Presley memorial resolution, the Rogers-Hart musical comedy act, the Farr-Moore-Mello pot cultivation act and the Lockyer-Boatwright nautical theft prevention bill.

Closer to home, my wife and I have developed a list of our own — words that have little or no meaning without a prefix or suffix.

The other day she asked me to dismantle a couple of bunk beds, and as I struggled with some stubborn bolts, I complained:

"Who mantled these damn things in the first place?"

She was plussed at my ane rejoinder. I was traught by her feck reaction.

She normally is a ruth person and I am as ept as the next dismantler.

This could go on endlessly. A person can be criticized for looking disheveled, but never complimented for looking heveled. He can be accused of reneging on something he never neged in the first place. Seldom, if ever, is he praised for feasance in office.

It's not right and it's not fair. It's occuous and it should be evitable.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Make a new pad for a car seat bar

DEAR HELOISE:

For all those frustrated owners of children's car seats, who find the crash bar cover and padding have begun to show wear and tear due to sun and cold, I've come up with a great remedy.

After tearing off the original cover, I recovered it with one of those steering wheel covers!

After slitting it down the middle to make two long strips, I carefully wrapped it around the entire bar, sides and all.

If the padding is thick, it may take a couple of wheel covers to cover the entire area.

You could even coordinate your car seat with the steering wheel — neat and not expensive. — Barbara Roberts

+ + +

Great way to add a little more life to a life-saving necessity for car travel with youngsters. Thanks for sharing. — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: Need to label something? Cut out rectangular strips from aluminum frozen dinner or frozen dessert plates.

Place the metal strip on a piece of soft wood and, using a nail, write the information on the strip. You can use these strips for marking flowers or even identifying possessions such as lawn furniture.

These little labels can be attached with wire or nailed into position.

They last forever and cost nothing. — Tom Reese

+ + +

For an added little safety tip, it might be a good idea to round the edges, as metal strips can be pretty sharp. — Heloise

HOT GRAVY

Dear Heloise: When you need to keep lots of good gravy hot for second servings, serve it from the slow cooker.

The heat is consistent and the gravy doesn't dry out.

This is great when serving buffet style. — Julia Phinney

TOOTH TALLY

Dear Heloise: Because my two children are at the age of wiggly teeth, Grandma made a tooth fairy pillow for each out of scraps of material, lace and ribbon.

A pocket was attached and labeled, "For the Tooth Fairy."

My girls loved them. These would be very thoughtful and inexpensive gifts for children of this age. — Amy Fries

SHAMPOO 'N' RINSE

Dear Heloise: I, for one, really like hand soap in pump bottles, especially with three kids.

I put shampoo in one empty container and cream rinse in another.

No more spills, and it's easy for the kids to use. No more caps left off the bottles (my trademark) and they're pretty too. — Sue Kadela

+ + +

Come up with something for empty toothpaste tubes and you have made a million. — Heloise

BUTTON-WISE

Dear Heloise: When I make a blouse, I make the buttonholes crosswise instead of up and down.

The blouse stays buttoned much better. I wish manufacturers would do this on ready-made shirts and blouses.

Sure eliminates the problem of blouses popping open! — M.K.

Christmas poinsettias: Tradition isn't as old as you might think

By PAUL DEAN
(c) 1981, Los Angeles Times

ENCINITAS, Calif. — Within the Christmas package of ancient traditions and new customs is the seasonal supposition that poinsettias arrived eons ago, and by immaculate adoption.

Truth is, and at the risk of curdling your egg nog, the crimson-crowned plant is a relatively recent staple of Christmas in America, with introduction sometime between Scrooge and Bing Crosby.

And the process, by the great beard of Santa, was simple hype: the 1920 merging of Mexican myth, Franciscan ritual and commercial potential by a German-Swiss-Californian named Paul Ecke.

At 87, Ecke is still around, and so is his 20-acre sprawl of greenhouse barns on a hillside here. So is a son, Paul Jr., both with a green thumb in his mouth and now president of the Paul Ecke Poinsettia Ranch, assisted in sales expansion by a grandson, Paul III.

If and when there's a Paul IV, as sure as God made little green plants, he probably will continue the multi-generation enterprise that has made the Ecke poinsettia a December decoration more widespread and certainly more predictable than white Christmases.

Hype. Paul Ecke Jr. cringes at the word. For his operation was founded on Old-World politesse and handshake contracts, and remains bound to filial courtliness. Hype, to him, smacks of gauche. Better, says Ecke, to describe how his father visualized an opportunity, put acumen where his hopes were and gave impetus to inevitability by building a better poinsettia.

"He (Ecke Sr.) found some original varieties (of poinsettias) that made the difference, an alternative," explains Ecke. "But we certainly have done all we know how to make sure that the public knows all it can about poinsettias.'

That's why, in 1979, patriarch Ecke, who still prowls the ranch as ombudsman-innovator, imported a new variety from Germany and named it Amy for President Carter's daughter. This year, to dispel any smudges of political favoritism, the ranch has donated poinsettias to the White House and the Reagan ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif.

And whether it be Bob Hope peering over the foliage or Perry Como crooning among the blooms, chances are the telvision set decorations will be California poinsettias by Ecke.

None of this, however, is done as a direct benefit to the Eckes. "Think industry," is their philosophy, "not individual."

Ecke Jr. also is a firm believer in constant examination of the marketplace and gambling on what it might want as a change of aesthetic pace. Yet, when you are the world's largest supplier of poinsettia cuttings ("several million to several thousand growers in approximately 25 countries each year") and the wholesaler of potted plants to one corner of America ("about 250,000 to California and Arizona this season") marketing new types is more fait accompli than high risk venture.

With this in mind, there is little doubt that America's buffets, corners and windowsills will be showing different poinsettia postures this year with Ecke, naturally, the trend, pace and sales setter.

Poinsettia trees are in: bushy-topped minis up to 30 inches tall and standards stretching to 44 inches, to complement the home horticulturist's new swing towards indoor arborculture.

Because of the squeeze into condominium and apartment living, Ecke also is marketing his Arrangement Pak, pixie-sized poinsettias, our to a container, for incorporating into table and mantle floral arrangements.

Whether tree or tot, each represents 60 years of one family's dedication to a single genus. The plants also come deeply rooted in history and hearsay.

Fact: Poinsettias were a pre-Christianity cultivation of the Aztecs, indigenous to an area near Taxco, Mexico, and used by the Indians to manufacture red dyes, even an anti-fever medicine.

Myth: Once upon a time there was a poor Mexican girl bereft at not having a gift for the Christ Child at Christmas Eve services. A cousin convinced her that the lowliest present, if given in love, would be acceptable. So the girl gathered a bouquet of weeds, placed them on the altar and they burst into color to become Flores de Noche Buena, Flowers of the Holy Night.

Fact: A 17th century Franciscan settlement near Taxco used the plants in its Fiesta of Santa Pesebre, a nativity procession. it was a gesture more of expedience than religious significance. The poinsettia happened to be the only thing blooming in the area at that time of year.

Myth: The tale, exhumed each year to hang tall alongside the mistletoe, that munching poinsettia leaves can be hazardous to your health. It developed from the totally unsubstantiated rumor (maybe started by the competing holly wreath industry) that in 1919, the 2-year-old child of an Army officer in Hawaii died after chewing a poinsettia. No lesser authorities than the federal Poison Control Center, the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission, and toxin researchers at several universities have since debunked the poison reports.

And the whole truth: In 1825, the United States' first ambassador to Mexico, a keen amateur botanist, decided to bring a plant home. He began cultivation in Greenville, S.C., and gave cuttings to his friends. Ambassador Joel R. Poinsett gave his last name to the plant lest future generations be saddled with something called the Joelia.

Enter Albert Ecke. He brought his family from Germany to California in 1902 and began farming in what was the Eagle Rock Valley, now part of Los Angeles, where now only grafitti flowers. Ecke grew vegetables and fruit and outdoor flowers and was tinkering with poinsettias before his death in 1919.

And that was when Paul Ecke Sr. inherited the family business and in 1924 moved the operation to the agricultural watershed and railhead of Encinitas in northern San Diego County.

He was quick to recognize that in those pre-greenhouse days, florists had little to sell for the December season beyond the rather homey-looking cyclamen from the primrose family.

Yet on his doorstep, literally in his own commercial backyard, there was his father's legacy of the poinsettia, rich in legend and the Santa-red, elf-green colors of postcard Christmases.

So Ecke expanded field growing, began cultivating sturdier varieties, started promoting and selling. Everything has been coming up poinsettias ever since.

In those days, commercial horticulture was much hit and miss, with fertilizer restricted to horse manure and crops guaranteed or condemned by fickle climate. Even as late 1947, buying a poinsettia was a gamble right in there with betting on bowl games.

"They were very leggy, with tall, naked stems and often lost their foliage in one day," recalls Ecke Jr. And now? "They're sturdier, larger, with lower branches and much more foliage retention," up to several weeks, he says.

The Ecke Ranch is where one massive greenhouse holds 25,000 cuttings, themselves the result of countless graftings, cross-pollenization and chemical diets, being tweaked and tamed into new shapes and types for further experimentation. Chemical growth regulators are sprayed on some plants to stunt their growth. Others are sent to outside facilities for bombarding with gamma radiation to produce mutants.

The interim results are floricultural mongrels, the majority doomed to go no further than the nearest compost heap, a few headed for additional experimentation, and all developed almost by chance.

"The things we're looking for are not what we always get," Ecke says. He brushes through the aisles in this nursery, fluffing plants with an outstretched hand. "These are the weirdos...the variations...the mutants...the throwbacks, like finding the blue-eyed blonde in an Italian family."

Still, despite all this research and development, Ecke's plants remain restricted to approximately 65 5ypes, by stature and shape, in basic red, white and pink.

Each year, up to 15,000 experimental varieties are rendered to a short list of 50. That may drop to 10 by the second year. "In 19 years," says Ecke, proud of a statistic indicative of perfection as the child of persistence, "we've produced only one new variety." This is the Eckespoint. It's easy to spot in flower markets. It's the one that looks like it posed for every Norman Rockwell calendar.

Something like 25 million poinsettias are sold in the United States each year. Their popularity in Europe has been waxing since the '60s. There even are splotches of color behind Iron Curtain Christmases with poinsettia production increasing in Bulgaria, Romania, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

All of which would indicate a captive, inexhaustible market for the Ecke Ranch.

Demand for adult education courses limitless

By MARIANNA OHE
Hearst Feature Service

Young entrepreneurs across the country stand to make millions of dollars in the burgeoning adult education market by offering short, inexpensive, practical courses on everything from computer programming to finding lovers.

Unlike most of the non-credit free universities — or "learning networks" — which grew out of the counter-culture of the 1960s and 1970s, the new networks are profit-making and use the most up-to-date marketing techniques to hone their product to meet consumer demand.

In New York, San Diego, Sacramento, Houston and Chicago, 13 for-profit networks have sprung up in the past four years alongside the 200-odd non-profit ones around the country.

The founders of the new ventures say marketing studies show the demand for the kind of courses they offer is virtually limitless in a population that increasingly consists of single, upwardly mobile professionals eager to meet people and thirsty for practical knowledge. Married couples and older people flock to the courses for the same reasons.

"This company will make me a very wealthy man before I'm 30 if things continue on the track they're on now," says 27-year-old Jeffrey Hollander, founder of New York's "Network for Learning." His is one of the largest of the new ventures. It offers 200 courses a month with an annual enrollment of 60,000.

Network now surpasses New York's well-known New School for Social Research and the New York University School of Continuing Education in size.

Its one-session and four-session courses range from Mandarin Chinese cooking to personal financial management to careers in cable television to finding an apartment or a lover in New York to firming your fanny ("Bunnastics") to assertiveness training to skydiving.

Usually taught by practicing professionals rather than academics, the courses are held in the evening in rented classrooms, corporate boardrooms, restaurant kitchens, Broadway theaters, photographers' darkrooms, artists' lofts and teachers' homes. The subject usually dictates the site. They cost an average of $45 for four sessions and $21 for one.

Hollander founded the "Network" in 1979 with an initial investment of $60,000. He expects to take in $1.5 million in revenues this year and $3 million in 1982.

Approached by several television broadcasting and production companies, he says he has reached agreement with "a major entertainment company" to offer network courses on cable television and on video cassettes.

"Some topics, like cancer or sexual impotence or bankruptcy, people just won't come to classes for," he says.

Hollander believes "the home, institutional and foreign markets for both video and audio are limitless."

Hollander plans to open networks in other cities, as does his major competitor, Bill Zanker, 27, founder of New York's "Learning Annex."

"People today don't have either the time or inclination to spend three or four months, and a fortune per credit, attending a regular class to learn what they can learn in a one-night or four-week course, Hollander says.

The other big motive is meeting people.

"Lots of people are lonely," Zanker says. "What happens is people take a class in something they want to learn, and end up meeting lots of nice people and so they keep coming back."

"More and more adults are reappearing on the educational scene and demanding services," says Dr. Malcolm S. Knowles, professor emeritus in adult education at North Carolina State University and author of "The Adult Education Movement in the U.S."

Colleges and universities are beginning to adjust to this trend by establishing new colleges and external degree programs, Knowles says.

"But," he adds,"they are not changing as fast as the adults are demanding, so the adults are turning to alternative programs and commercial institutions. Language, aviation, business skills, dancing and culinary arts schools are all flourishing."

According to the National Institute of Educational Statistics, thirty million adults participated in formal, organized educational activities in 1979.

Super handyman: Eye-openers about venetian blinds

By AL CARRELL

It was a little scary when I saw the sign on a van up ahead that read, "Caution, Blind Man Driving." It turned out to be a venetian blind company truck. It did make me realize that venetian blinds have come back in popularity. They can act as a sun shield in the summer or easily let the sun in during the winter.

If you've got some old blinds up in the attic that don't work, you can probably repair them without too much truouble. There are repair kits available for the replacement of the cords and of the tape and ladder system. These kits all seem to have pretty easy to follow intructions, so you probably can't go wrong.

Another reason I think the popularity of blinds must be back is because I've received a fair amount of hints and tips on blinds of late. Maybe somebody else's bright idea will also help you.

+ + +

Dear Al: When buying new blinds or replacing the cords in old ones, I find that if you rub the cords with paraffin wax, they'll last much longer. Be sure to get the wax on the cords in the areas where they'll get the wear. This prevents fraying. I've also found that the blinds work better with this lubrication. — E.C.F.

+ + +

Dear Al: If you've ever replaced the cords in a blind, you know that the route it takes is sort of tricky. Here's my tip. I loosely stitch the new cord to the end of the old. Then as I pull out the old, the new cord follows it through the exact right path. It never fails. — Mrs. T.P.

+ + +

Dear Al: When venetain blind tapes are dirty, you can often make them look brand new by just using liquid white shoe polish. The dauber acts as a brush and lets you easily cover the tapes. — R.K.

You can also bleach them with liquid laundry bleach. Hang them on the clothesline and apply the bleach with a brush.

+ + +

Dear Al: One of the best ways to clean venetian blinds is in the shower. The messy dirt goes down the drain. — A.A.

Senate near passage of cuts

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-controlled Senate, sweeping aside a succession of Democratic amendments, is breezing toward final passage of $4 billion in new spending cuts sought by President Reagan.

Following House approval Thursday of a huge stopgap bill, the Senate worked late into the night in an attempt to finish the measure and send it to the president for his promised signature.

But several Democratic senators said they needed more time to prepare their amendments and the Senate recessed to resume deliberations today.

That was after the Republican majority in the Senate already had defeated more than a half-dozen Democratic amendments Thursday night aimed at restoring money for various social programs.

Republican majority strength was expected to prevail again today.

The House approved the plan, 218-197, after nearly unanimous Republicans were joined by 36 conservative Democrats to dump an alternative Democratic proposal that would have made less than $3 billion in cuts. That critical vote was 222-194.

House Republicans said Reagan would sign the bill, after warning in advance that the president would veto it if Congress didn't give him the full $4 billion in additional reductions.

"The president looked at me right in the eye and said, 'Silvio, I've seen this and I'm going to sign it," said Rep. Silvio O. Conte of Massachusetts, the ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Committee, after the House vote. He was referring to a meeting Republican leaders had with Reagan at the White House on Monday.

Republicans have been working to achieve the cuts to avoid another confrontation such as the one last month when Reagan vetoed a similar emergency bill, the government went broke for a half-day and the president ordered non-essential services to shut down.

That impasse was temporarily resolved with passage of an emergency bill which expires at midnight Tuesday. The new measure would expire on March 31, or halfway through the 1982 fiscal year.

Under the plan, hundreds of domestic programs will be cut by 4 percent, with the exception of defense, government benefit payments such as Social Security and food stamps, medical care for veterans, revenue sharing, law enforcement activities and the judiciary.

However, nearly $500 million of the $4 billion in cuts comes from administrative accounts for Social Security, Medicaid and unemployment insurance, and Republicans conceded those savings might evaporate later in the year if expenses are higher than expected.

The measure also contains a provision giving the lawmakers a previously approved tax break a year earlier.

Under the old law, a member of Congress could claim a tax deduction — just like any businessman — for reasonable amounts spent for transportation, entertainment and similar business-related expenses in Washington. Unlike businessmen, however, the lawmakers have been limited to $3,000 of such deductions a year.

Congress voted in October to allow members an unlimited deduction starting Jan. 1, 1982. The House vote Thursday would make the change effective retroactively to Jan. 1, 1981.

The $4 billion in additional cuts in domestic programs contained in the latest proposal is about half the $8.4 billion in domestic spending cuts Reagan requested last Sept. 24. Since then, Reagan said he would meet Congress "halfway" and offered to settle for $4 billion.

In addition, the bill provides pay increases for an estimated 40,000 to 50,000 federal workers whose salaries have been capped for several years.

For the highest paid civil servants, salaries would rise from $55,387 to $59,500. There would be no increase for members of Congress, who earn $60,662 a year.

The stopgap spending measure is necessary because most of the regular money bills that provide the annual operating funds for the government have not yet been signed into law by Reagan, and the existing stopgap bill expires Dec. 15. As the regular bills are signed, they drop out of the catch-call measure.

Reagan considering further spending cuts

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is considering new spending cuts and tax increases that could chop the record budget deficit it now faces to $40 billion or less by 1984, administration sources report.

Overall, the administration is contemplating tax proposals that would raise $80 billion or more in 1983 and 1984, substantially more than the $22 billion package President Reagan proposed in September, said one source, who asked not to be identified.

Spending reductions under consideration would total at least $90 billion in 1983 and 1984 combined, according to the sources.

Among the tax proposals under consideration:

—Either limiting deductions employers can claim for contributing to employees' health insurance premiums or treating the contributions as part of the employee's taxable income, an action that would raise $8 billion.

—Withholding 5 percent of an individual's interest and dividend income, to raise $2 billion a year.

—Placing per barrel fee on imported oil, a move estimated to raise $14 billion.

—Placing a windfall profits tax on natural gas, which may be the only way Congress would agree to accelerate removal of price controls. The proposal would bring in $12 billion a year by 1984, according to administration estimates. Although most of his advisers seem to support the tax as an inevitable price for decontrol, Reagan remains publicly opposed to it.

Reagan has ruled out any tampering with the three-year cut in personal tax rates approved by Congress last summer. But he previously endorsed several other revenue-raising proposals, such as taxing unemployment compensation benefits and removing tax-exemptions for special types of municipal bonds.

The new budget plan, which sources emphasized is still in rough form, would allow the president to gradually reduce the size of the deficit from just under $100 billion in fiscal 1982, to $70 billion or less in 1983 and $40 billion or less in 1984.

The new figures, although falling far short of Reagan's earlier pledge to balance the budget by 1984, would show significant improvement from recent internal administration forecasts showing steadily growing deficits of more than $100 billion a year between now and 1984.

Administration sources said those internal projections, which were prepared last week, already have been revised downward modestly.

The sources said budget director David A. Stockman told Reagan earlier this week that without more budget cuts or tax increases, the deficit will surge to $107.5 billion in fiscal 1982, $147.9 billion in 1983 and $152.4 billion in 1984.

By comparison, the earlier estimates showed deficits of $109.1 billion for the current fiscal year, $152.3 billion for 1983 and $162 billion for 1984.

Fiscal 1982 began in October. None of the internal figures take into account the spending cuts and tax increases Reagan may seek from Congress when he proposes a 1983 budget late next month.

Most of Reagan's senior advisers reportedly favor larger tax increases to reduce the deficits, but Reagan, who repeatedly has called for tax cuts, has been loathe to endorse that route.

As a result, the sources cautioned that the tax proposals under study cannot be assured of winning presidential approval.

Reagan also has expressed an unwillingness to close the deficit by making significant new cuts in his record defense budget plan despite urgings to do so from Stockman and other advisers.

Alexeyeva will leave Russia as Soviet citizen

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet emigration officials told Andrei Sakharov's daughter-in-law today she would receive a Soviet passport on Monday to go to the United States and could go to Gorky immediately to see the Nobel peace laureate and his wife.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said two American diplomats met with Liza Alexeyeva to discuss emigration formalities as soon as they learned her news.

Miss Alexeyeva said she hoped to leave later today for Gorky, the Volga River city 250 miles east of Moscow to which Sakharov was exiled 23 months ago.

Speaking with reporters outside OVIR, the government visa agency, Miss Alexeyeva said officials told her Sakharov had recovered sufficiently for her to visit him. He and his wife, Yelena Bonner, had been on a hunger strike since Nov. 22 to pressure the Soviet government into letting Miss Alexeyeva join Mrs. Bonner's son in the United States.

In an apparent gesture to Western public opinion, the government told Miss Alexeyeva she could leave the country as a Soviet citizen rather than as an emigre who could not return to the Soviet Union.

"I feel strange," Miss Alexeyeva said after meeting the OVIR officials. "I asked them why they don't want to strip me of my Soviet citizenship. They said they don't want to, so that's the way they want it."

The KGB, the Soviet secret police, told the young woman on Tuesday that she would be allowed to leave the country and that Sakharov and his wife had ended their hunger strike. But she said she would not leave until she went to Gorky and satisfied herself that the 60-year-old scientist and his 58-year-old wife were all right.

The decision to let her go was a major concession to foreign opinion stirred up by the hunger strike.

Sakharov, a top nuclear weapons scientist until he joined the fight for human rights in the Soviet Union, was banished to Gorky in January 1980 to restrict his access to foreign reporters.

The president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, Anatoly Alexandrov, announced Thursday that Sakharov and his wife had ended their fast and were taking fruit juice preparatory to resuming a normal diet. He said they were in a hospital to which they were admitted Dec. 5 and were in no danger of dying.

The KGB prevented Miss Alexeyeva from visiting the Sakharovs last weekend.

Miss Alexeyeva, 26, was married by proxy in Montana last June to Alexei Semyonov, 25, Mrs. Bonner's son by a previous marriage. The Soviet government refused to recognize the proxy marriage or let Miss Alexeyeva join her husband in Massachusetts, where he is a student at Brandeis University.

Nine of this year's 10 Nobel prizewinners sent a cable from Stockholm, where they went to receive their awards, to Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev appealing for better conditions for Sakharov. There was no explanation why the tenth laureate, medicine co-winner Roger W. Sperry of the California Institute of Technology, did not sign the appeal.

Sakharov won the 1975 peace prize for his fight for human rights.

Begin 'is recovering,' will leave hospital next week

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin, hospitalized since Nov. 26 with a fractured hip joint, will be released from Jerusalem's Hadassah Hospital next week, a hospital spokeswoman said today.

Begin, 68, slipped in the bathroom of his home and broke the collis femuri — the neck of the femur, where it joins the hip — in his left thigh. At the time of the accident, his doctor said he would have to stay in the hospital about two weeks.

"The Prime Minister is resting and recovering," said hospital spokeswoman Hadassah Gillon. She said there were no problems in his recovery, and said Begin would be released only next week because his doctors were "taking special care of him."

Mrs. Gillon denied local newspaper reports that claimed Begin was being treated for a blood clot in his injured leg.

Hubel and Prof. Torsten N. Wiesel, both of Harvard Medical Center, was the only Nobel Laureate to not sign the cable.

Rep. Kemp wants to cut loans to Third World

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican congressman is proposing a 40 percent reduction in low-interest development loans to Third World countries as part of an $11.1 billion foreign aid appropriations bill being debated by the House.

The measure faces uncertain prospects of passage, despite support from President Reagan and GOP congressional leaders.

Rep. Jack F. Kemp, R-N.Y., said Thursday the bill represents "a very delicate compromise," balancing economic and military aid programs.

Kemp, ranking Republican on the House Appropriations subcommittee which drafted the legislation, said he would oppose any major changes in the bill's provisions for the World Bank and other international financial institutions.

"It seems to me we have a bill that should not be dismembered by drastic, dramatic or Draconian cuts," he told the House.

Proponents of the legislation said they were worried that any sizable cuts in economic aid would erode support among liberal Democrats and thus spell likely defeat of the bill.

Nonetheless, Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., announced that he would seek to slash by 40 percent financing for the International Development Association, a World Bank affiliate that makes concessional loans to Third World countries.

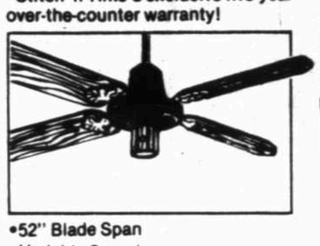

Edwards' amendment would cut IDA funds from $850 million — the amount requested by Reagan and written into the bill — down to last year's level of $520 million.

"Once we give funds to IDA the United States loses all control over the money so we end up seeing our money go to Cuba.

One-room schools due to close

By LISA LEVITT
Associated Press Writer

WOODEN VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — A dozen children peer out the door of their one-room schoolhouse at a sick animal nosing through trash in the yard. Cows low nervously on the other side of the fence, but Arlene Samuels remains calm.

"A coyote. Could be rabid," says the teacher's aide, fetching her .22-caliber rifle. A shot rings out.

"Good thing I got him," she says. "That was my last bullet."

It's a sunny fall day and the children at Capell Valley school have just had a lesson that wasn't on the agenda, one they would have missed at the schools in Napa where the school board plans to bus them.

"In the country, you don't call for help," Mrs. Samuels says. "You learn to take care of yourself."

THEY'VE BEEN TAKING CARE of themselves for more than 50 years at Capell Valley, Wooden Valley and Soda Canyon schools, the one-and two-room schoolhouses that the Napa Unified School Board has voted twice to close.

A successful lawsuit brought by angry parents calling themselves the Save Our Schools Committee forced the board to vote a second time on the matter. Now two board members face a spring recall vote that could oust them a year and a half before the end of their terms.

In rural Napa Valley north of San Francisco, where tangles of grape vines flourish and the grass turns yellow and brittle under the summer sun, they produce most of the state's finest wines. And some of its brightest, most motivated children, parents and teachers here say.

That's the reason many of them came here, and that's the way they want to keep it, say Mary and Len Colson, who formed Save Our Schools with their Napa neighbors.

After the board's vote, the parents activated a petition that will keep Capell Valley, enrollment 30 students, and Wooden Valley, 18 students, open for another three years. But even that has failed to defuse an emotionally explosive situation.

"TWO OF THE SCHOOLS THEY voted to close, to save money, are staying open for another three years," Mrs. Colson said. "Where's the money being saved? It would be laughable, if it weren't so sad."

Part of their discontent can be traced to a 16-year-old promise made by the Napa Valley Unified School District. Back then, parents say, the board struck a deal with the area's rural residents: join the district and the tiny schools will never be closed.

Donna Heine, one of the board members facing recall, said none of the old board members remembers that pledge. Today's board, facing declining enrolments and limited funds, couldn't honor it anyway, she said.

"I didn't become a school board member to say no to people. I became a member because I wanted to become involved in the process that would allow students to maximize their potential," she said. "The dollars realized from closure would allow us to distribute the money more equitably to all the schools."

But the parents speculate that the board wants to close the schools to sell the valuable real estate beneath them. They say the closures might also appease the parents of city school children who resent the tiny schools, particularly Soda Canyon.

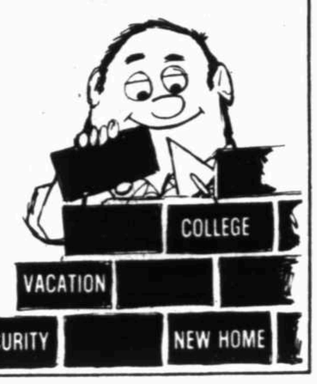

"They say we're sipping off the cream, so to speak. But we're not. These are the children of parents who like the smallness of the school and the fact that we keep the kids for four years," said Maryellen Bess, who has taught seven year's worth of Soda Canyon kindergarteners to read and write.

After the first year, her kindergarteners are reading, writing and illustrating their own stories. Unfettered by the traditional restraints of bells and report cards, they are learning and having a good time doing it.

In September, Soda Canyon became a school within a school, moving its 56 students into Vichy Elementary School five miles away. The parents, tired of the fight, have decided to make the move work and at least keep the Soda Canyon spirit alive.

THAT'S MORE THAN CAN BE said for the almost 150,000 one-room schools that have closed since 1930. The government stopped keeping tabs on the schools at the end of the 1976-1977 school year. At that time, there were 1,111 one-room schools across America, and California had 54.

Len Colson's two boys, particularly Frank, had problems at their school in San Jose. It was an open classroom situation, noisy, confusing, unfulfilling.

Morefield undecided about Congress race

By GEORGE CONDON
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Former Iranian hostage Richard H. Morefield said yesterday (Wednesday) he still does not know if he will undertake the legal battle it would take to let him run for Congress, even though he moved one step closer to running by switching political parties.

In Houston attending a State Department seminar, Morefield said he slipped quietly into San Diego Wednesday to change his party registration "at the last minute" because "things were just moving too quickly.'

"I've always been toward the conservative," he said. "But now, rather than being a conservative Democrat, I'm a liberal Republican.

"IT WAS A decision I had to make. It was necessary for me to go into San Diego to see actually what was going on. I now know what the parameters are."

Asked what those parameters are, Morefield said, "I'm going to have to talk to a lawyer before I can get into that."

Lawyers for the GOP in Washington are researching Morefield's case, but the diplomat remains uncertain how he will try to overcome the state law that currently blocks the start of his political career.

That law prohibits candidates from entering partisan primaries if they were registered in other parties in the 12 months prior to filing their candidacies. To meet the requirements of that law, Morefield would have had to change parties by March 12 of this year, 12 months before the filing deadline in 1982.

Another section of that law requires candidates to register in their parties within three months of filing deadline. This year, that registration would have to occur by Dec. 12 — a deadline Morefield made by three days.

SOURCES IN Washington said Morefield may be urged to skirt a legal challenge to the law and merely run a write-in candidacy or campaign as an independent in a newly created U.S. House District in the city of San Diego, The district was designed to have a heavy Democratic majority but Republican strategists feel that Morefield, with his fame, can win the seat.

Another option open to Morefield is to seek a court order requiring local elections officials to place his name on the ballot, supporting Morefield's contention that his name should have been purged from the voting lists when he failed to vote during his captivity in Iran.

A San Diego Republican close to the case said yesterday, "There's certainly an opportunity here to get a writ of mandate to say the registrar exceeded his authority by keeping him on the rolls when he didn't vote."

Morefield, 52, said he has been a Democrat since he was 21. But he said the party switch was not traumatic since he voted in "only one or two" Democratic primaries.

"I TEND TO vote on issues rather than parties. In that way, I think I am like many Californians. It is also why it is so important now for me to decide if I want to run or not."

UTBP to offer course for travel in Spain

ODESSA — Midlanders will once again be able to combine study and travel as The University of Texas of the Permian Basin offers a course which will culminate in a trip to Spain.

The three-hour course, History 489 or Spanish 489, will include a series of lectures on Saturday mornings on the literature and history of Spain with Dr. Genaro Perez, assistant professor of spanish, and Dr. Frank Samponaro, associate professor of history, co-teaching.

"Since the course is on Spain this year rather than Mexico, those who took the courses, 'The Panorama of Mexico' in 1979 and 'Mexico and the Maya' in 1980, will still be eligible for three semester credit hours," Samponaro stated. He added the course can be taken for history or spanish credit, and can be taken for graduate, undergraduate or for no-grade through the ENCORE program.

The trip is scheduled April 2-11 with the group visiting Madrid, Granada, Seville, Cordoba and Toledo. "Special tours are planned so the group may tour the Prado Museum and the Palacio Real, the El Escopial Monastery, the Valley of the Fallen, as well as tours in the cities," Samponaro said.

The cost of the trip is $1,495, which includes roundtrip airfare from Midland, airport transportation in Spain and baggage handling, double occupancy hotels, all tours, continental breakfasts daily and some lunches. The cost does not include UTPB tuition and fee charges.

Congressional member feels redistricted out of congress

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — "I suppose if they've robbed you, taken your wallet and pants but have not dismembered you by breaking your right arm, they've done you a favor," a caustic Rep. Barney Frank said.

That was his response yesterday to claims by state redistricting architects that they had treated him well in combining his congressional district with that of Republican Rep. Margaret Heckler — and making him a 3-1 underdog.

"They decided to legislative me out of Congress," a disheartened Frank said of his former state legislative colleagues in Massachusetts.

IF FRANK was devastated, Heckler was trying hard not to gloat. She bristled somewhat when Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., stopped to tease her with a "What did you do to my friend Barney?"

"They could have put two Democrats together to avoid this if they'd wanted to," Heckler said. "My district is the only one that didn't need changing. It was the only one with the right number of people."

She also denied that a big victory in 1982 could set her up to challenge Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., in 1984 but she said "I'm think I'm in a very good position to challenge anybody right now."

Both Frank and Heckler agreed that the veto threat by conservative Democratic Gov. Ed King was influential, but not necessarily pivitol, in persuading legislators to favor Heckler.

But Frank knew there were other animosities working against him as well.

THE ONE-TERM liberal congressman was braced for a difficult, uphill race with perhaps a 3-2 disadvantage against Heckler. But the six-way dismemberment of his district clearly shocked him, leaving him "very, very disappointed" and "surprised at the vehemence of the decimation."

And yet he refused to say he was beaten.

He might still challenge Heckler, he told a news conference, making the race a referendum on President Reagan's economic policies which Heckler has voted for throughout the year and which he said are hurting such key areas of the district such as Fall River.

"These are the cities he told to 'vote with their feet' (if they were being hurt by plant closings or economic dislocations," Frank said of Reagan.

Students offer help with drug problem

By CAROL KRUCOFF
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — If adults want youngsters to stop smoking marijuana in school, they should seek student help when making rules, provide training for peer counselors and "get informed about drug abuse, so they don't think 'smoking a joint' means cooking some meat."

These suggestions were among those presented by four high-school students in a teen's-view of drug abuse at a recent conference sponsored by the American Council on Marijuana and Other Psychoactive Drugs.

"Frankly," said Carl Metzger, 17, a Bethesda-Chevy Chase (Md.) High School senior, "I think the goal Dr. (Robert) DuPont stated, of creating a marijuana-free society for kids to grow up in, is a little unrealistic.

"I THINK THE sale and use has gone too far for that. If you aim your sights too high, there's a chance you'll miss the target ... which should be getting drugs out of the schools."

Drugs are most often used around the school, proffered 16-year-old Freda Adams of Dallas, Texas. "Marijuana does not tend to be an open problem within our school, partly because the halls are monitored by school officials. But there is some smoking outside the building, during lunch and class breaks."

Teachers may "just ignore" a student who comes to class high, she said, "maybe because they have large classes and so many other things to do. A guy I know always comes to class stoned, and if the teacher calls on him he starts laughing. Then he falls asleep."

To catch students abusing drugs, said Toni Thiboult, 17, of West Palm Beach, Fla., "Our school has security guards and the principal carries a walkie-talkie. You feel like you're in a prison.

"WHAT I THINK would be more helpful is to have more counselors. I went to see a counselor about a course once, but she was so busy with paperwork she couldn't even help me. It's sad to say, but if a student has a problem — with a class, or with drugs or with anything — there may not be any one to turn to."

Since adolescence is a time when students may be trying new roles and defying authority, said Metzger, "get-tough" drug-abuse policies may not work. "At our school, if a student is caught with marijuana they'll call the police, but I don't think the problem is that simple."

Discipline, he said, may be more effective than "severe punishment." ... "Schools ought to try to get to the root of the problem and come up with some active solutions. If it's a serious problem they could use 'in-school suspension' where the student has to come to school to do special work. That way they're not just sent home — the problem is confronted."

In some schools, said Adams, students are unaware of the administration's drug-abuse policy. "The rules concerning the use of marijuana during school should be clearly stated. And they should be made with some imput from students. Why don't you ask us for help? We are willing."

Said Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School senior Miriam de Levie: "We have a peer-counseling program that's about three years old ... about 30 peer counselors, supported by a counselor, a therapist and a special-educaton teacher.

"We get training in role-playing, verbal and non-verbal communication, confidentiality, empathetic questioning, family-related problems, when to make referrals and when to inform professionals. We have a conference room set aside where students can come in before or after school or during lunch. We don't give advice; we help students explore possible options. The whole philosophy is to help students help themselves."

THE PEER-counseling approach is particularly effective, said Adams, who participates in a similar program at her school, "because a student is more comfortable confiding in another student.

Teen marijuana use said to be decreasing

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Daily marijuana use by teenagers — and peer acceptance of dail pot smoking — is decreasing, according to the University of Michigan's annual survey of high-school seniors.

"Peer norms are shifting away from acceptance," says Lloyd Johnston of Michigan's Institute for Social Research, which has surveyed a nationally representative sample of 130 high schools (17,000 seniors) each year since 1975.

"The proportions of high-school seniors who say they smoke marijuana on a daily or near-daily basis has begun to decline. And we have observed a gradual increase in the proportion of seniors who themselves disapprove of regular marijuana use (75 percent disapproved in 1980 vs. 66 percent in 1977).

The 1975 survey indicated that 6 percent of all seniors were smoking pot daily or near-daily (20 more more times per month). By 1978, daily use almost doubled to 11 percent — about one in every nine seniors. Over the next two surveys, that figure dropped somewhat from 10.7 percent to 9.1 percent.

Preliminary analyses of the 1981 study, Johnston said, "show these downward trends continuing."

Concern about health appears to be responsible for the decline. "From 1978 to 1980 the proportion of seniors attributing great risk of harm — physically and in other ways — to regular marijuana use rose from 35 percent to 50 percent," he said. "The numbers continue to climb in 1981."

ON A LIST OF REASONS why students decided not to use marijuana, more students mentioned possible physical and psychological than cited moral, legal or social constraints. Also ranked high: "concern about loss of energy."

"There also appears to be decreased acceptance of occasional and even experimental marijuana use," he said, "although these lesser degrees of involvement with the drug are far more widely accepted than regular use."

There still is "a substantial generation gap" between students and their parents, he said, on the issues of experimental or occasional use.

"While the general situation with marijuana seems to be improving," he said, "I do not want to leave the impression that the problem is near to disappearing." In the class of 1980:

— Nearly half of all seniors had smoked it in the last year.

— One out of three had smoked it in the preceding month.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, December 12, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Superstar Frank Sinatra and Gorman Thomas, the Milwaukee Brewer slugger, celebrate this birthday with you. Your readiness to always say what you mean may upset some people but it will be a major factor in your success this coming year. You need to be very choosy when picking business associates and romantic partners. Many new doors will be opened to you soon. Walk through them and make the most of some golden opportunities! Look for an innovative solution to a financial problem. Love is happiest for those who reduce the stress in their lives. Share your thoughts and ideas with someone special.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your morale receives a major boost, thanks to something loved one says or does. Curiosity brings you some happy experiences and could spark a new romantic interest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Recent pressures are lifted. Spend the weekend with someone who will be affectionate and caring. You can find some real bargains today if you are discriminating.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friend offers a helping hand to a family member who is having difficulties. Romance dominates your thoughts. Travel will require careful planning.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day for shopping if you get an early start. Family member will make some excellent suggestions. Listen carefully. Be aware of your financial limitations if asked to make a loan.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Catch up on routine chores. Friendship is more important to you than ever. Get things off your chest by talking with a trusted confidant. Romance takes a pleasing turn.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A very good time for dealing with matters that require special concentration. Avoid all types of gambling, speculation. Romance will be ardent but may not last. Platonic relationships are safest now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Business affairs involving family partnerships enjoy favorable influences. Take advantage of an opportunity to mix business with pleasure. Old friends could be argumentative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Personal matters are uppermost in your thoughts. Devote more attention to family affairs. Launch a new financial plan. A family conference will shed light on budget problems.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will not be required to make any important moves this weekend. Let each member of your household go his or her own way. Loved ones are already affected by the holiday spirit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Attend to loved one's problems. Money-making hints may not work out right now. Watch your diet during the upcoming holidays. Enjoy the good food and drink, but limit the amount you take.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will draw inspiration and energy from others during this holiday season. Be sure to get your usual amount of sleep. Family member may look to you for special guidance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Devote part of this weekend to an artistic project. It could become a treasured Christmas gift for loved one. Evening is a favorable time for romance and socializing.

Opening lead: King of ◇.

When a defender holds long trumps, it is usually a sound tactic to force declarer to ruff rather than strive for defensive ruffs. Look at this hand.

Both North and South had difficult bids to make. Since North was a passed hand, we prefer a two club response to one no trump, but we can find no good alternative to South's jump to three spades. North correctly raised to the spade game with his singleton honor.

West cashed his ace-king of diamonds, and from the fall of the cards it was obvious that declarer had also started with only two diamonds. It was also apparent that East was not going to contribute anything toward the defense, so West had to look for the setting trick in his own hand. Despite all the strictures against conceding a ruff and sluff, West continued with a third diamond.

Declarer could not afford to ruff in dummy for that would have promoted a second trump trick for the defenders. But it proved to be no better to ruff in his hand for that reduced his trump length to that of West. When declarer led a trump, West grabbed the ace and continued with his last diamond. Declarer was again forced to ruff in his hand, and trump control had now passed to the defense. Eventually, West scored his long trump for a one-trick set.

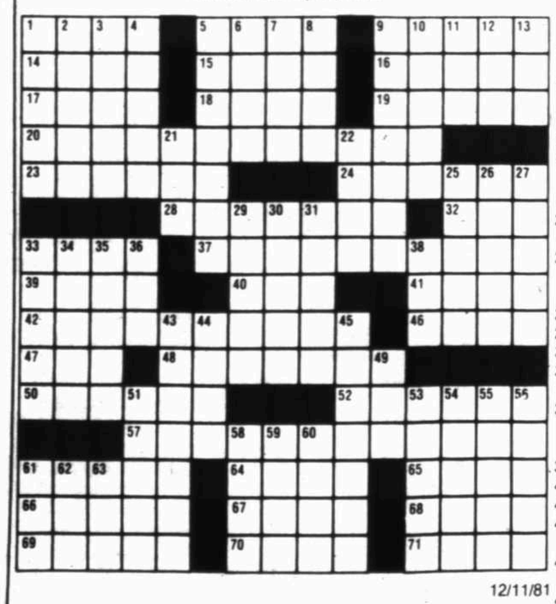

On this hand it was easy for West to work out the winning defense—he was looking at the long trumps. However, the same defense would have been appropriate had West held a singleton trump. He should then place his partner with the trump length and defend in the same way in an attempt to promote his partner's trump holding.

Tide gridder is charged

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — A University of Alabama football player was charged with possession of marijuana Thursday after officers who stopped him on a traffic violation discovered a substance in his car, authorities said.

Capt. Billy Tinsley said linebacker Thomas Boyd was arrested late Thursday afternoon on a felony warrant and booked in the Tuscaloosa jail on $500 bond.

Alabama halfback Linnie Patrick was riding with Boyd when they were stopped by police. No charges were filed against Patrick.

Two officers halted a car driven by Boyd Wednesday night and gave him a ticket for having an expired license tag, Tinsley said.

Chaps fall in overtime

Badgers escape with 91-86 win

BY TED BATTLES
R-T Sports Editor

Amarillo preserved its unblemished status with a 91-86 victory over Midland College as expected. What wasn't expected was that the Badgers would have to labor into overtime to do it only after a nail-biting escape in regulation that kept their hopes alive.

It was a fallaway jumper by Anthony Chennault with five seconds left in regulation that afforded Amarillo an opportunity to leave Chaparral Center Thursday night with its 12th win of the season.

Spud Webb, the 5-6 sapling among the Redwoods, had put MC ahead 78-76 with 17 seconds left, before Chennault, a 6-3 freshman from the sidewalks of Philadelphia, snapped the nets with his 20 footer.

HAROLD JONES, a 6-6 freshman from the concrete playground leagues of Brooklyn, converted a three-point play to put AC in front 83-82 with 2:40 left in overtime, a lead the Badgers quickly exploited when a couple of free throws and a tip in by Robert Dickerson made it a five-point breach. That was enough to give the Badgers their fourth WJCC victory.

Although Midland was foiled in its attempt to pin a first defeat on an unbeaten team for the third time in little over a week, it wasn't so much that the Chaparrals won or lost, but that they were even in the game.

MC hit a miserable 16 of 38 field attempts the first half and languished 46-35 at intermission. It was debatable whether the Chaps were just cold or AC's tentacle like defense that seldom gave Midland an uncontested look at the rim. It really didn't matter who the Badgers had on the floor. They are all built like agile, frisbee pursuing greyhounds.

EARLY IN the second half, MC trailed 49-46 and 51-37 before Lance McCain and Webb kicked the lid off the coffin. With 7:54 to go Webb converted a pair of free throws and from then on it was a towl-twister.

"We got too far behind early," said MC Coach Jerry Stone. "We were nervous and I don't know why. We had played this team before."

"Midland just came back and played good basketball in the second half," said Mark Nixon, the West Texas State grad in his first season at AC after two years at Clarendon College. "We were up by 11 and when you have that kind of a lead, I guess you have a tendency to relax. We didn't play with the same intensity as we had in the first half.

"The first thing you know, Midland made a couple of baskets and the crowd was in the game."

On the play that sent it into overtime, Nixon said the Badgers were trying to work the ball to Chennault, "but not on that play. Midland closed off the middle and it was the only shot he had."

Amarillo won despite going into the extra period without starters Nicky Jones and steve Dailey.

DICKERSON, a 6-5 freshman from Opelika, Ala., was largely responsible for Amarillo's halftime advantage, snaking inside for 18 of his game high 31 points as the Badgers took charge midway through the half 28-19 on a 13-2 spurt. In the second half, it was Jones, who had 12 of his 14 points, and Chennault, 12, who carried the load as MC boxed Dickerson out under the rim with a defense that forced AC into repeated turnovers and floor faults.

Stone went to his bench only once in the second half as the Chaps, 9-5, fought desperately to extend a five-game winning streak. Webb, McCain and Chester Smith were the spearheads of the come back. Webb, displaying an uncanny touch and somehow finding shooting room amidst all those hanging limbs, scored 18 of his 28 in the second half Smith had 11 of his 21. McCain suffered through a dreadful 2 for 8 first half, but riddled the rim for 5 of 7 in the second half.

Once the score was tied at 61 on a pair of Webb free throws, it was knotted again at 63, 65, 67, 69 and 71 before Smith's follow basket gave MC a 73-72 lead.

THE CHAPS had two opportunities to make AC's catchup task virtually impossible. With a 75-74 lead, Webb missed the first of a one-and-one, his only miss all night, with 1:26 left and then Smith converted at 1:08 to make it 76-74 but missed his second shot. Jones then tied it and set up the drama of the final seconds.

MC can still close out the pre-Christmas phase of its schedule with a 3-1 WJCC record with a win against New Mexico Junior College at Hobbs Saturday night.

Amarillo College—Anthony Chennault 11-2-0-26; Steve Dailey 3-3-5-9; Harold Jones 4-2-2-14; Robert Dickerson 13-5-2-31; Nicky Jones 1-3-5-5; Tim Price 4-0-3-8; Eddie Bonner 0-0-2-0. Totals 38-15-19-91.

Midland College—Spud Webb 11-6-3-28; Puntus Wilson 6-0-3-12; Lance McCain 8-04-16; Chester Smith 9-3-3-21; Jerome Crowe 2-2-4-6; Chuck Robinson 0-0-1-0; Bradley Richardson 0-0-1-0; Reggie Boyd 1-1-0-3. Totals 37-12-19-86.

Woody 'threatens' Houston broadcaster

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston broadcaster said he was threatened Thursday night by former Ohio State football coach Woody Hayes when he asked about the Gator Bowl incident that led to Hayes' dismissal.

Alvin Jackson, sports director for radio station KMJQ, recorded the conversation with Hayes, who was a guest speaker at the 12th annual Lombardi Award banquet Thursday night.

"Get off, get off of it," Hayes said just before he threatened to knock Jackson down.

Rebels romp against Kermit

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

If Midland Lee added a new definition to the word fun with their 79-44 win over Sweetwater Monday, the Rebels were rolling in the aisles Thursday following their 79-32 rout of Kermit at Chaparral Center.

The Yellowjackets from Kermit, now 4-3, were handicapped as three cagers were still playing on the state football playoff team. After Thursday's disaster, the rest of the Kermit roundballers may be wishing they could join their friends on the gridiron.

The contest was close for only 37 seconds of the first quarter. In that time span, Lee knocked home an offensive rebound and Andre Van Buren and Alvin Dunson scored off two straight steals as Kermit was trying inbound the ball.

KERMIT'S first shot at the bucket came with 6:08 left in the first quarter when Barry Kimball sank two free throws to narrow the gap to 6-2. The Yellowjackets ended the quarter hitting just one out of eight attempts from the field as Lee grabbed a 14-6 advantage.

Lee put on an awesome defensive display through the first half. The pesky Rebels, led by Randy Pepper, Barry Blackwell, Steve Cherryhomes and Dunson, hounded the Jackets into 31 turnovers and held them to two field goals in 15 attempts from the floor.

And when the Yellowjackets did get a shot off they got just one. Lee out rebounded the visitors 13-1 on the offensive boards with Dunson leading the way with six. On the defensive boards, Lee held a 10 to three edge.

Offensively, Lee shot 47 per cent in the first half and were just warming up. In the second half, the Rebels came out and connected on 20 of 34 shots for a sizzling 58.8 per cent. Kermit didn't improve much as the Yellowjackets managed just seven of 19 in the second half.

LEE WAS led by the outside scoring of Dunson and the inside strength of Van Buren. Dunson tossed in a game-high 26 points, many coming on long-range bombs, while Van Buren contributed 18. Kimball led the Jackets with 12.

Lee coach Paul Steuckler said, "I enjoyed our team play most of all.

Everyone on the floor looked to make the pass before going to the bucket. It showed me this team wants to play team ball."

He added, "Our reserves did an excellent job tonight. Jay Pendleton and Tommy Pollard came in and did a great job." Pollard netted eight points while Pendleton did a good job of directing the offense after Steuckler pulled his starters with seven minutes left in the game.

Slyvester Johnson was another man off the bench that turned in a commendable performance. Johnson displayed jumping ability and timing as he swatted away a couple of shots.

Stuckeler stated, "I was a little unhappy with the aggressiveness and movement in the full-court and half-court presses. But other than that, I thought we played a good game."

THE LEE players were a little disappointed when the Yellowjackets' Kimball canned two free throws to record the 29th and 30th points of the evening with 3:01 remaining. Lee's record for the fewest points allowed is 29 and the Rebels felt that mark could have been broken.

There was no junior varsity tilt Thursday evening.

The Rebs now are 7-2 on the season and own a modest three-game winning streak.

Lee hosts Lubbock Dunbar in an 8 p.m. game Tuesday at the Center. In an earlier meeting this year in Lubbock, the Rebels squeaked by Dunbar 62-61.

Following Tuesday's affair, the Rebels tangle with Canyon Thursday at 5:30 p.m. in a first-round game of the seventh annual Reese Air Force Base Christmas High School Basketball Tournament.

In Independence Bowl

Explosive Aggies test tough O-State defense

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Independence Bowl officials say they expect the biggest attendance in the six-year history of the event Saturday when the potent offense of Texas A&M tests the rugged defense of Oklahoma State.

It's the first Independence Bowl since the tie-up with the Southland Conference was dissolved after last season.

Bowl officials said they passed the 40,000 mark in ticket sales at midweek and expected 45,000 or more at the 50,000-seat State Fair Stadium by kickoff at 7 p.m. Saturday (Mizzlou TV).

The bowl record attendance was 42,600 set last year when Southern Mississippi edged Southland Conference champion McNeese State in the fifth annual event.

Each team is guaranteed $200,000, but Independence Bowl officials are hoping a bigger gate will enable them to raise the payoff to $250,000 per team.

Texas A&M, 6-5, represents the Southwest Conference. Oklahoma State, 7-4, is one of five teams from the Big 8 playing in post-season games. Oklahoma State finished third in the Big 8.

"I don't ever remember a conference sending over half of its teams to a bowl," said Pat Quinn, sports information director at Oklahoma State.

"We may be a year premature getting into a bowl," he said.

Southwest Texas Bobcats seek NCAA II title

MCALLEN, Texas (AP) — The coaches at North Dakota State and Southwest Texas State followed the same book to bring their teams into Saturday's NCAA Division II championship Palm Bowl.

North Dakota State's Don Morton and his former boss in Fargo, N.D., Southwest Texas Coach Jim Wacker, co-authored "Winning Football with the Explosive Veer Offense."

"We throw the ball a little bit more than they do, which is funny since he (Morton) wrote the part on passing," Wacker said Thursday.

And what does Morton think of competing against a coach who knows the Bison's style so well that he even uses the same play numbers?

"The coaching profession is a wide open profession," he said. "You don't have any secrets anymore with film exchanges. Both teams have their own personalities. It will be a players' game on Saturday."

Kickoff for the regionally televised game will be at 12:30 p.m. Saturday.

The Lone Star Conference champion Southwest Texas Bobcats, 12-1, are coming off a 62-0 shellacking of Northern Michigan in the Division II semifinals.

The Bobcats led the NCAA Division II in total offense, averaging 494 yards and 37.5 points a game.

Senior quarterback Mike Miller, a Rhodes Scholar candidate, tossed for 16 touchdowns and averaged 164 passing yards a game.

Non-scholarship Austin College bids for No. 1

AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN

The first thing you must learn about Austin College is that it isn't located in Austin, Texas.

Austin College started in 1849 and found a permanent home in Sherman, Texas in 1876.

And it didn't start playing collegiate football day before yesterday, either.

There has been football in the autumn EIGHTY EIGHT (88) years at Austin College.

Which brings us to the most glorious campaign in the history of the school.

The Kangaroos are 11-1 and play the Concordia Cobbers (11-0-1) of Moorhead, Minn., Saturday for the NAIA Division II national title. A cobber is a person who breaks asbestos fibers away from asbestos-bearing rock.

For some reason, Austin College's nickname is an animal from Australia.

ANYWAY, KANGAROO Coach Larry Kramer can't promise his players one thin quarter to wash out their sweat socks if they come to Austin College.

He has a squad of 69 players who compete in the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association for the pure love of the game.

Oh, Kramer recruits them — the kids the big football factories don't want. The school has a high academic standing — pre-med, pre-law, strong liberal arts. He says that's a lure and some of his players get federal grants-in-aid to pay for tuition and laundry and room and board.

But even if you weigh 120 pounds and stand 5-feet-2, you're a keeper on Kramer's team.

"We don't cut anybody," he says. "That's the second thing we tell them. The first thing is that we aren't located in Austin."

KRAMER OPERATES on a year-to-year contract just like the faculty but says he really hasn't considered going anywhere although he only has three fulltime assistants.

"I'm happy here," he says. "The longevity at some other places isn't too great."

Austin College has never sent anybody to the pros although a few have tried out.

On the current team punter-placekicker Gene Branum has the pros excited. He set an NAIA record with a 53-yard field goal last week and punts for a 41-yard average.

"We've had the scouts looking at them," said Kramer.

Branum, who has had a 68-yard punt, is a pre-med student and president of the student body.

When was the last time a jock at any school was the student body president?

"This is a good environment here," said Kramer. "There are 1,200 students and everybody knows everybody. This is a very academic climate."

THE QUARTERBACK of the team is an NAIA All-American, Larry Shillings of Bryan, Texas, who briefly attended Texas A&M on a baseball scholarship. He didn't get one in football from any school.

"Larry has great ability," said Kramer. "I think he could make it in the pros but at 5-11 he probably won't get much of a chance."

Shillings has a career total of 51 touchdown passes.

With good weather Saturday, Austin College Athletic Director Bob Mason is looking for some 3,000 fans to watch the Kangaroos get after the Cobbers.

Tickets were on sale all week at the Hughey Gymn on campus. You could buy one for $4.

And the parking is free at one of the last places in the country where they still play football just for the fun of it.

Dante's Inferno... a tragedy in three parts

Los Angeles Times

The title of this opus should be "Dante's Inferno," a tragedy in three acts. It should be made into an opera and sung in Italian. Everybody dies at the curtain.

The hero is a young man who, as the curtain goes up, has everything. Dante Pastorini is tall, handsome, graceful, and smart, a definite role for a tenor. A Casanova in cleats.

He had the world in a prevent defense when he first came out of Santa Clara University 10 years ago. Six-three, 215 pounds, he could throw a football 75 yards from a prone position and hit a running squirrel in either eye.

The Houston Oilers thought he had Super Bowl written all over him when they drafted him. The New York Mets wanted him as a pitcher. Life was just a bowl of touchdowns. Just give Dante the ball, and then go out and tear the goalposts down.

At first, it worked. In Italian operas, they don't begin coughing till the second act. He led Houston into the division championship games in 1978 and 1979. He played hurt. They designed the flak jacket for Dan Pastorini and Pastorini's ribs. He could still throw the bomb even though it made him scream to comb his hair. He completed 199 passes for 2,473 yards and 16 touchdowns in 1978. He married a movie star. He was on a team that had Bum Phillips and Earl Campbell but he was still The Star.

AND THAT'S WHEN the music began to get somber and the scenes began to have the principals in them come out with the back of their hands thrust against their foreheads in despair, Houston traded him to Oakland even-up for Ken Stabler. Since Stabler was in a stage of his career when he needed a tripod to stand up straight, it was a shocking markdown for Dante.

Still, there was that Oakland offensive line ... ivy couldn't get through it.

The honeymoon lasted two full games. Like all quarterbacks who have taken 10 years of shots for the knees, Dante had lost some mobility. In the San Diego game last year, Pastorini, trailing 24-17 with 44 seconds to play, had driven his team to the San Diego 16-yard-line when he was blitzed and sacked by a San Diego linebacker. He couldn't get up. Backup quarterback Jim Plunkett came in the threw the tying touchdown. Pastorini came back in overtime and, despite twice putting the team in field goal range to win, saw the Chargers beat Oakland, 30-24.

Three weeks later, in a game in Oakland, the mood of the local fans was ugly. The team was trying to sneak out of town to Los Angeles and the fans had to vent their frustrations on someone. Dante's life became an inferno. On his second possession, he was blitzed, fumbled, and a Kansas City linebacker ran the fumble in for a touchdonw. A few plays later, Pastorini got sacked again. This time, he didn't get up. His leg was broken. Incredibly, the crowd booed him as he was carried off the field.

The saddest sight at Super Bowl XV last January was Dante in the third ring of hell, healthy enough to play football but not wanted. Journalists interviewed him in embarrassment. It was a good human-interest story, but they felt like ghouls, stealing picutres of the dead man off the dresser in a murder victim's house. But Dante never ducked the questions. Dante was used to blitzes, media or safety.

ODDLY ENOUGH, the Super Bowl success of his successor, Plunkett, redounded to Dante's benefit. Like Dante, Plunkett had been a castoff, out of favor and out of fashion, thought to be a shadow of his former self, a guy brought in as a football version of the penalty killer in hockey or the mop-up pitcher in baseball. Maybe, the thought went, Pastorini could undergo the same kind of resurrection?

Alas! There is no George M. Cohen finale to Dante's operetta. Dante sat in a room at the Rams encampment a week ago and explained patiently to newsmen why his life had once again been batted down behind the line of scrimmage. He had been sacked -- this time by his own team, the Ram management. Pat Haden was going to be the quarterback again.

DANTE didn't blame "politics," "the press," the "breaks," or the other standard scapegoats of the sacked quarterback. "I had my chance and I wasn't good enough," he said simply. He conceded that the "numbering system" had somewhat baffled him. "In every other place I played, we had the odd numbers on the left side and the even on the right. The Rams have everything opposite. After 18 years of one way, high school, college and pro, I tended to bump into people." Sometimes, unfortunately, they were his own people.

Still, the house lights have not yet dimmed on the libretto of Dante's descent. Pat Haden promptly got hurt in the game that followed Dante's "farewell" interview. If it were an MGM movie, the fadeout would have Dante completing a 98-yard pass to beat Dallas and go to the Super Bowl. But it looks as if the ending will run more to "Madame Butterfly" with Dante as Cho-Cho-San sinking, dying on the dock, and everybody with their handkerchiefs out.

Texas' Kenneth Sims

Texas' Sims top lineman

HOUSTON (AP) — A hulking defensive tackle from Texas who for four years intimidated opponents with crunching tackles and a fierce pass rush was brought to tears by a 40-pound block of granite honoring the nation's best college lineman for 1981.

Kenneth Sims, the Longhorns' injured two-time All-America, tried to choke back the tears as he accepted the 12th annual Lombardi Award Thursday night from former Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes.

"Football players don't cry, they just get colds. And I've been practicing this sniffle all week," Sims said.

Sims was chosen ahead of Billy Ray Smith of Arkansas, Sean Farrell of Penn State and Bob Crable of Notre Dame.

"This is something I really wanted. It took a lot to put me where I am and I'm touched people would think enough of me to give this to me," the 6-foot-6, 270-pound senior said, his voice cracking.

The award is given annually in honor of Vince Lombardi, the former Green Bay and Washington coach who died of cancer in 1970.

SIMS, 22, led the Longhorns, whose defense ranks second in the nation, to a Cotton Bowl berth against Alabama before his season ended abrupty by a broken ankle. He was credited with 110 tackles, including 81 unassisted, and 10 quarterback sacks.

Sims thanked Texas Coach Fred Akers and assistant coach Mike Parker for making him a success.

"I was a good man before I came, but since I've been there I've gotten better. A lot of people have talent, but Coach Parker found the way to bring it out," he said.

Sims was the most decorated among the finalists, all chosen to the 1981 Associated Press All America first team. He finished as runnerup to Nebraska junior center David Rimington in balloting for the Outland trophy awarded the nation's best interior lineman.

Templeton headed for San Diego?

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Two of baseball's best shortstops — Garry Templeton of St. Louis and Ozzie Smith of San Diego — may be changing uniforms in the aftermath of a puzzling "partial trade" completed at the winter meetings.

The Cardinals and Padres made a 1-for-1 swap, with pitcher Steve Mura moving to St. Louis for outfielder Sixto Lezcano. But the intriguing part of Thursday's trade is that there is a mysterious "player to be named later" on each side.

Those players are expected to be the controversial Templeton and Smith.

St. Louis General Manager Whitey Herzog said, "It's a partial trade. The rest will be made in three days, one month, two months or three months."

In another major action Thursday, the Boston Red Sox re-signed free agent second baseman Jerry Remy to a five-year contract estimated at $2.8 million. The Sox have an option on a sixth year.

Meanwhile, free agent pitcher Ron Guidry appeared ready to sign wih his old team, the New York Yankees.

After a 2 hour, 55 minute negotiating session with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, attorney John Schneider said he was close to agreement on a contract for Guidry.

Schneider said he telephoned Guidry and his wife, Bonnie, in Lafayette, La., and explained the details of the Yankees' offer.

"They were asleep and I gave them an opportunity to digest it and talk about it. It's up to Ron. By tomorrow morning (today) we'll have accepted or rejected the Yankees' offer."

Guidry, 31, was seeking a five-year contract for $7.5 million. He played out his option after four full seasons with New York in which he posted an 87-34 record with a 2.73 ERA. He won the Cy Young Award in 1978.

Guidry was selected by 17 teams in the re-entry draft, plus the Yankees.

Earlier, outfielder Tom Paciorek, second-best hitter in the American League at .326, turned down a four-year offer by the Seattle Mariners. With incentives it could have totaled $1.1 million.

Grid rating system most primitive

By MELVIN DURSLAG
Hearst Feature Service

Considering the wonders performed today in the field of computer science, you are the least bit staggered by the primitive manner in which college football teams are graded in the weekly polls.

Arbitrarily, guys who see but a fraction of the games and are not conversant with the figures cast ballots, basing their judgements on the ability of teams to avoid losses.

Such an ability, of course, isn't to be minimized, but leads all too often to superficial appraisals which perpetuate as certain teams keep winning.

The most striking case study involves Pittsburgh, which rose unaccountably to the top of the polls this year by ripping through a schedule of lollipops while clubs undertaking more ambitious schedules encountered their troubles.

By roughly the time two-thirds of the season was completed, Pitt was only one of two major teams still undefeated.

THE OTHER was Clemson and since Clemson had opened with Wofford and resided in a sleepy niche of South Carolina, it seemed plausible to electors to give the edge to a club operating in the same town as the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Repeatedly, it was pointed out by certain cynics that Pitt was booked mostly against stiffs -- Temple, Rutgers, Army, Boston College and Cincinnati, to name a few.

But not wishing to complicate their cerebral processes by sifting through pertinent information, and, understandably, begrudging the time for a project so capricious, voters took the easy way out by sticking with Pitt.

And they did it for four consecutive weeks.

Well, it developed against Penn State, a team of quality, despite losses to two rough opponents (Miami and Alabama), that the great leader was unmasked.

Penn State ran Pittsburgh into the Monongehela, 48-14, confirming the suspicions of the cynics and embarrassing the polls.

SINCE COLLEGE football schedules are drawn up years in advance, a team isn't responsible for its opponents, which is to say, you can't always determine in 1977 that Syracuse will be a stiff in 1981.

But Army, Temple, Rutgers, Cincinnati and Boston College -- you've got a pretty good notion a long way off.

So when Pitt books such teams, it must be penalized by voters in weekly polls, who can't be flimflammed by undefeated records alone. They are obligated to honor teams that have lost once or twice in the course of real battle.

That's why media members and coaches, whose votes in the polls are beautifully free of science, should be replaced by machines, which can be programmed to reach decisions closer to the truth.

A simpler solution, of course, would be to throw polls the hell out, sparing the world heartaches and controversy.

But inasmuch as college football is convinced that polls are helpful to the operation, focusing attention on the sport and selling tickets, a method more satisfactory than the one now employed should be given thought.

THE HUMILIATION of Pitt by Penn State has interesting implications in the crap game that passes for the bowl system. No. 1 at the time that bowl promoters were recruiting teams for their respective games, Pitt understandably got a lot of action, yielding, at last, to the blandishments of the Sugar Bowl.

This choice was interesting, because five years ago, in a similar circumstance, Pitt made the same selection amid an uproar slightly deafening.

Since ABC, which televises the Sugar Bowl, also does college football during the year, it is in a position to favor a collegiate son it may be seeking on New Year's Day.

Solicited vigorously by bowl sponsors in 1976, Pitt chose ABC's Sugar Bowl, bringing charges from other networks of politico-horsetrading.

And when Pitt landed on national TV the following season against West Virginia, the other networks winked knowingly, hinting this was the payoff for the Sugar Bowl break.

Now selecting the Sugar Bowl again, Pitt was poised to deliver to ABC the No. 1 team in the land, except that a bad accident occurred against Penn State.

Matched against Georgia in New Orleans, Pitt could dispense a good game, because it doesn't hold necessarily that a team beating stiffs can't beat a decent club, too.

It's just that when polls are involved, the quality of opposition is vital, and computers are better than people at sniffing that out.

Madison Ave. bus ride lit the light for Lite

An AP Sports Analysis
By LARRY SIDDONS

NEW YORK (AP) — It was 1973, and Bob Lenz was looking for "non-actors who were macho guys" to help sell a new client for his advertising agency.

Riding a bus up Madison Avenue, he spotted a poster of Matt Snell, the New York Jets' fullback who was an all-star on the field but decidedly non-glamorous away from football.

"That gave me the idea for the type of guy we needed for the campaign," Lenz said, recalling the birth of what has turned out to be one of the most successful episodes in the long relationship among sports, television and beer.

The product being pushed by Lenz was Lite, then a recent addition to the Miller Brewing Co. line. It has grown into the third-largest selling beer in the nation, thanks in large part to the series of commercials featuring one-liners delivered by former pro athletes who never will be confused with matinee idols.

In 1973, Miller bought the "Lite" trademark from Meister Brau, a regional brewery in the Midwest.

"Lite was a very feminine beer at that time," said Lenz, vice president and creative director of Becker and Spielvogel. "It was a diet beer, and its market was mostly women beer drinkers who wanted to save calories.

"THE PHILOSOPHY at Miller was to make this beer a big success. We had to find a way to sell it. The agency I was working for then (McCann Erickson) had the product about six months before we found Matt Snell. Before the (commercial) campaign started, sales were virtually nothing."

Snell was the first "Lite Beer All-Star," a label since shared with such sports stars as baseball's Boog Powell, football's Bubba Smith and Dick Butkus, bowling's Don Carter, hockey's Boom Boom Geoffrion and basketball's Red Auerbach.

THERE ALSO are three celebrities whose fame comes from areas other than sports: comedian Rodney Dangerfield, mystery writer Mickey Spillane and actress Lee Meredith, the buxom blonde who appears on several of Spillane's spots.

But many products, including other beers, have utilized All-Pros and entertainers to make their pitches with much less success. Lenz feels there's something special about the cast of the Lite spots.

"We are using non-actors who are macho guys," he said last week when the All-Stars gathered for the annual "Lite Beer Alumni Dinner" in New York.

BIG SPRING — Virgie Cooks hauled down seven rebounds and scored nine points to spark the Midland High girls to a 43-33 win over a very tall El Paso Parkland club in an opening round game of the Big Spring Girls Invitational Basketball Tournament.

Janice Littlefield also netted nine points and Shelia Christain chipped in with eight as the Bulldogs jumped to an 11-7 lead after the first quarter and never trailed the Lady Matadors.

Denette Parker and Missy Larrimore played an outstanding defensively for the Bulldogs, contributing six steals each.

Raiders rip UTA, 107-84

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Clarence Swannegan poured in a career high of 32 points to lead Texas Tech to a surprisingly easy 107-84 victory over the University of Texas at Arlington Thursday night.

Swannegan scored 17 of his points in the first half when the Raiders broke a close game open to take a lead they never relinquished. The Raiders shot a sizzling 76.7 percent from the floor in the first half, and outscored the Mavericks in the final five minutes, 27-12.

In the second half, the Raiders pulled away to as much as a 27-point lead and then coasted as coach Gerald Myers cleared the bench in the final three minutes.

Ralph McPherson, a former Texas Tech player, led the Mavericks with 24 points, while Albert Colton had 22. Jeff Taylor had 16 points for the Raiders, as did Steve Smith.

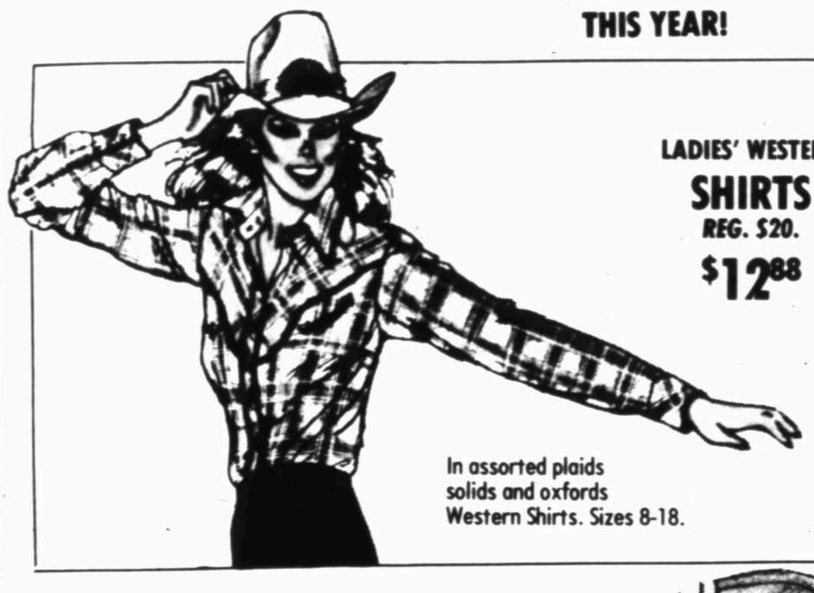

The victory Thursday ran Tech's season record to 4-1, and dropped the Mavericks to 2-3.

PROPERTY PROTECTION

JOE D. SWAN
A MOVE TO IMPROVE HOME SECURITY
Today the protection of life and property is a serious national problem.
Cities have become more crowded, population more transient, crime more rampant. Our homes are less secure.
Police are confronted with more burglaries and robberies than they can handle. More and more people are arming themselves to protect their homes.
Many police departments have set up special programs to show honest citizens how to make their homes secure against break-ins.
To supplement these official programs, this newspaper series is presenting specific tips on how you can improve your home security.
We hope this series will help homeowners restore their homes to their rightful role as havens of safety for families and possessions.

Notice to Telephone Customers

WE ARE PROPOSING CHANGES IN THE RATES FOR INTERSTATE SERVICES.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company has filed with the Federal Communications Commission a plan, to be effective March 3, 1982, to restructure and increase rates for interstate Message Telecommunications Service (MTS) and to increase rates for most interstate Wide Area Telecommunications Service (WATS) and Private Line Services.

HERE ARE THE PROPOSED CHANGES

Message Telecommunications Service (MTS):

• Establish a 1-minute minimum charge for all calls. (At present there is a 1-minute minimum for customer-dialed calls and a 3-minute minimum for operator-assisted calls.) Rates for this initial minute will vary by mileage and will range from 32¢ (1-10 miles) to 79¢ (4251-5750 miles).

• Increase the evening discount (5-11 p.m., Sunday-Friday) from 35% to 40%. The night and weekend discount (11 p.m.-8 a.m., all day Saturday, and Sunday until 5 p.m.) will still be 60%.

• Create a new class of service: the customer-dialed "Calling Card" (formerly called "Telephone Credit Card"). Currently billed the same as operator station-to-station calls, the new "Calling Card" service will now have a lower rate (see Operator Service Charges).

• Apply time-of-day discounts to the initial 1-minute period for operator-handled calls. (Currently, discounts apply only to the additional minutes on such calls.)

• Establish a single usage rate schedule for all types of calls. Initial and additional minute charges vary by distance.

• Increase rates for most calls. Initial minute rates will range from 32¢ to 79¢ (depending on distance) with increases ranging from zero to 12¢. Additional minute rates will range from 16¢ to 53¢, with changes varying from a 2¢ reduction to a 7¢ increase over current rates.

• Separate operator service charges from basic usage rates. There will be a uniform charge for operator service (regardless of the rate period) based on the type of call.

| Operator Service Charges* | |
|---|---|
| Customer-dialed Calling Card | $ .50 |
| Operator Station-to-Station | |
| (1-10 miles) | .60 |
| (11-22 miles) | 1.00 |
| (23-55 miles) | 1.40 |
| (56-5750 miles) | 1.85 |
| Operator Person-to-Person (regardless of distance) | 3.00 |

*Evening and night/weekend discounts apply to all usage rates, but do not apply to Operator Service Charges.

The appropriate operator service charge will be added to the usage rate and is the same regardless of the length of conversation.

• Simplify rates for conference calls by introducing a uniform service charge of $3.00 for each conference leg, to cover connection and operator handling, with usage billed on each leg from the originating point at normal usage rates.

• Discontinue the present 35% discount now provided between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. on the Friday or Monday designated as an additional holiday when Christmas, New Year's Day, or Independence Day fall on a Saturday or Sunday.

Wide Area Telecommunications Service (WATS):

• Increase most WATS rates 4.1%.

Private Line Services:

• Increase most Private Line Service rates 1.6%.

Rate Period Specific Billing

On December 31, 1981, AT&T will file with the Federal Communications Commission a change in the way MTS and WATS messages are billed when a call originates during one rate period and continues into another period. Under the proposed change, to be effective in early April, 1982, usage within each rate period will be recorded and billed at the rates applicable to that period. Currently such calls are billed at the rates in effect at the time the call originates.

Edwards accused of dismantling DOE

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's plan to get rid of the Energy Department may be in trouble, if the reaction from a group of angry senators is any indication.

For 2½ hours Thursday, the senators accused Energy Secretary James Edwards and the administration of illegally attempting a "de factor dismantlement" of the department through the budget process.

Members of the Senate Governmental Operations Committee were upset over budget documents showing that three program areas — conservation, fossil fuels and solar and renewable energy — were being trimmed by between 87 percent and 97 percent from their 1981 spending levels.

Only the fourth major area — nuclear power — escaped the drastic cuts. Its spending would be at a level of $1.2 billion, or five times the amount for the three other areas combined.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said such cuts were effectively dismantling the department, which he called a "sad mistake."

"The most important issue to occupy our time, thoughts and efforts between now and the end of this century will be energy," he said.

Reagan has called for the dismantling of the Energy Department, and Edwards said Thursday that the administration would submit a plan in January for distributing any left-over functions to other agencies.

But Bumpers and other members of the committee indicated that they may oppose decentralizing energy functions.

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said he was upset at the emphasis being placed on nuclear power to the almost total exclusion of other energy sources, and said the action was very shortsighted.

"I can not in good conscience go back to my constituents with the message that the nuclear option is the only option that our government will seriously consider," Percy said.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, called the energy cuts "penny-wise and pound-stupid" because he said they would cause the United States to lose its lead in developing new energy technologies.

Edwards defended cuts in the department's budget as a way to get the government out of the energy business and let the market place take over.

"Our policy represents a distinct break with the past," he said. "We don't think it is right to hand over the future of the nation to officials in Wasington."

But Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Oregon, said he found it incredible that the administration was cutting back on programs to produce domestic energy while saying it was ready to a fight a Middle East war to defend our oil interests.

"We will, in effect, be forced to employ violence because we failed to channel our genius toward the sane and logical alternatives of energy conservation and diversification," he said.

Edwards wants $920 million restored to department programs from the levels suggested by the Office of Management and Budget. He met personnally with Reagan to plead his case Thursday, but department sources said no decisions were made.

Refinery contracts near expiration

DENVER (AP) — The Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union has entered negotiations with 98 oil refineries across the nation, but so far the talks have produced no concrete results, says an OCAW spokesman.

With less than a month left before the expiration of contracts covering 55,000 oil refinery workers across the nation, the OCAW headquarters here has received no formal contract offers, union spokesman Jerry Archuleta said Thursday.

Negotiations at the local level began in November after the OCAW published an eight-point national bargaining proposal, he said.

The proposal sets a minimum standard for replacement of the 400 OCAW refinery contracts that expire at midnight Jan. 7. It calls for a "substantial" wage hike, a no-layoffs guarantee and improved pensions, medical benefits and vacations.

"We really should get a meaningful response to our proposal very soon or we're going to be — as we always seem to be — in the crisis stage of the negotiation process," Archuleta said.

Archuleta said that although OCAW does not grant contract extensions, the union could work without a contract "if it looks like we'll have a settlement in a day or two."

The 1979 negotiations — conducted under a wage-and-benefits reopener clause in OCAW's 1979-81 contracts — led to a three-month walkout that was the longest in OCAW history.

The strike settlement raised the average wage by 10.5 percent — to $11.66 an hour — and extended the contract for one year, until Jan. 8, 1982.

OCAW contracts are negotiated on an individual basis, with union locals sending company proposals to the 12-member National Oil Bargaining Policy Committee here — chaired by union President Bob Goss.

The trend in the past has been for a large company, usually Gulf Oil Co., to settle with OCAW and set a pattern for the rest of the industry.

Gulf spokesman Kirk Vogely in Houston declined to comment on the specific bargaining issues. He said Gulf was "not displeased" with talks so far, "but numerous serious issues have to be considered."

Three wildcats planned in 8, 8A

Three wildcats have been scheduled by area operators in Howard and Yoakum counties.

HOWARD VENTURE

McCann Corporation, Big Spring, will drill the No. 1 Read B-35, five miles northeast of Coahoma.

The scheduled 9,000-foot project is located 660 feet from the north, and east line of section 35, block 30, T-1-N, T&P survey.

It is two miles east of production in the Coahoma (Mississippian) field, which produces from an average depth of 8,717 feet.

YOAKUM WILDCATS

The No. 1 Hanks will be drilled by Forest Oil Corp., Odessa, 15 miles southeast of Plains.

The 5,800-foot wildcat is 1,980 feet from the south, and 660 feet from the east line of section 872, block D, John H. Gibson survey.

It is 1,500 feet north of Southern Minerals No. 1 Hudson, a 5,718-foot test, dry and abandoned Oct. 28, 1958.

****

Petro-Lewis Corp., Levelland, will drill the No. 3 Brown et al, a 9,300-foot wildcat, 13 miles northwest of Denver City.

The project is 660 from the north, and east line of section 663, block D, John H. Gibson survey.

It is near four other wildcat locations scheduled by the same firm, and is in the current no-well Janice (Wolfcamp) field, which is expected to produce from an average depth of 8,937 feet.

Five state-owned airports are in bad shape

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Aggies are doing a good job with their two state airports, but the Department of Parks and Wildlife has let its two deteriorate, according to the director of the Texas Aeronautics Commission.

"It's land at your own risk," Clay Wilkins said of the landing strip at Lake Whitney State Recreation Area in Hill County, south of the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex. "I wouldn't advise anybody to touch down there."

Parks and Wildlife's other strip, at Falcon State Recreation Area in Starr and Zapata Counties, is better, but getting worse, said Wilkins.

Texas owns five airports. Easterwood Field and Bryan Field are owned and used by Texas A&M. Easterwood is an active general aviation airport. Bryan is closed, but used for highway pavement testing and some emergency landings.

Both Bryan-area airports were acquired from the military, Wilkins said. The fifth state airport, the old Connally Air Force Base at Waco, is underused and deteriorating, Wilkins said.

Parks and Wildlife got its airports in the 1960s, when the landing strips seemed like a good idea for airborne visitors to the parks. The strips were opened just before the price of aviation fuel went sky-high and apparently killed interest in flying to the parks.

The Falcon strip cost $30,000. The state shelled out $70,000 for the strip at Lake Whitney.

Wilkins said records show no money was ever appropriated to maintain the 3,200-foot strips, "and to my knowledge Parks and Wildlife has never requested any funds to maintain them."

An attorney general's opinion said Parks and Wildlife owns the strips and is responsible for maintenance.

Bob Hauser, director of parks for the agency, said there are no plans to do anything other than watch the strips deteriorate.

"The visitation by that mode of transportation doesn't justify maintaining the airstrips," he said of the few flights into the parks. "There are some landings for touch-and-go, people utilizing the strips for training purposes, but not park visitors."

"Our plan is to keep them in operation until such time as the Federal Aviation Administration or the TAC determines these strips are no longer safe for landing," said Hauser.

When the strips get that bad, Parks and Wildlife will find other uses for them, he said.

TAC has not taken any official steps concerning the park airports, but Wilkins did say the Lake Whitney strip is on the "land-at-your-own risk" list.

Wilkins would like TAC to take over the maintenance and keep the airports opened.

"I think we would feel more responsible for the safe operation of the airport, simply because that's the business we are in," he said.

Connally AFB was bought by the state for $5.2 million and run by Texas State Technical Institute.

Airport manager Bob Hammond said there's enough concrete on the five runways to make a 106-mile two-lane highway. The only Texas airport with more feet of runways is Dallas-Fort Worth Airport, he said.

Maintenance has not been what it should have been, according to Hammond.

"It's just like your highways. If you don't maintain them, they go down," he said.

The airport is deteriorating in a time when landing strips are crucial to the state, according to Wilkins.

"These facilities are so big and there is so little traffic going in there," said Wilkins.

"They are just not putting the kind of money into it that would keep it maintained like we would like to see it maintained," Wilkins said.

"We would say the touchdown area on the main runway is only in fair condition. If it's not maintained it will be in poor condition in a couple of years," he added.

Bob Dowdy, TSTI manager of campus services, said the primary use of the airport is as a training strip for American and Braniff airlines, which pay landing fees. TSTI depends on those fees for maintenance.

Another section of the airport is used for TSTI training programs.

Dowdy said the main strip is in "fair-to-good" condition. He agrees that, as a general aviation airport, the facility is underused.

"It still has a rather large capacity above what we have now," he said.

Wilkins would like the airport used to relieve the pressure on too-busy Metroplex airports. Although it's about 100 miles from Dallas, Wilkins said it could be used by pilots going across Texas, but not needing to stop in the Metroplex.

Ted Getterman of Waco, a member of the governor's task force on aviation, asked the task force to look into the TSTI airport. Many of the task force members knew little about the Waco facility.

"They've got a huge airport there," said Getterman, one of the few nonpilots on the task force. "It's a dadgum shame."

He said TSTI must spend its money on education and training, its main purposes. Getterman said TAC, which "would really have the interest" would do a better job of maintaining the airport.

An airplane sits at the end of the state-owned airstrip at Lake Whitney in November. Texas Parks and Wildlife built airports at three parks in the 1960's, when the landing strips seemed like a good idea to accommodate airborne visitors to the parks. Records show no money was ever appropriated to maintain the 3,200-foot strips, according to the director of the Texas Aeronautics Commission.

Tower believes threat of Libyan assassination plot is real

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The threat of a reported Libyan assassination plot against American political leaders is real, even though foreign officials say the U.S. over-reacted to it, Sen. John Tower said.

"...I'm convinced there is a serious threat," said Tower, who told a news conference Thursday his information on the purported plot came from intelligence briefings and "various reliable channels."

The Republican, who is chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said several other congressional leaders also have been told of "evidence" President Reagan said he has of a plot by Libyan strongman Moammar Khadafy to kill Reagan or other high American officials.

Tower did not say what, if any, sanctions should be enforced against Libya.

"This is a highly arguable view, but I think the objective in our talking about (the plot) publicly was to convey the knowledge that we are aware of what Khadafy is up to and that that knowledge might act as a deterrent," said Tower.

Evidence that the threat exists cannot be revealed for security reasons and full disclosure will likely never be forthcoming, said Tower.

"I really think that should be a matter of determination by the president and his advisors, and that Congress should not try to dictate to the president what he should do in this regard," Tower said.

On another matter, Tower said Congress' failure to finish the Defense conference bill, a move that will take Defense out from under a continuing resolution, would result in higher military costs.

And he predicted Reagan will not "lend a very sympathetic ear to any further cuts to defense," cuts Tower said would seriously impair the president's defense modernization program.

Any additional defense spending cuts, said Tower, "would tend to undermine our objectives, both in the theater and global nuclear policy."

On other topics, Tower said:

—He is uncommitted on the move to censure Sen. Harrison "Pete" Williams Jr., D-N.J. Williams was convicted of bribery and conspiracy charges in the FBI's Abscam operation.

—The budget may be balanced by 1984. "A great deal of it hinges on the success of the Reagan economic policy, and we have great reason to think this will be the case. It's happened in six of the last eight times that taxes have been reduced."

—Gas decontrol debate is looming in 1982, with an attached windfall profits tax. Tower said he favors gas decontrol, but will strongly oppose a windfall profits tax in spite of congressional support for both.

Former dairyman sentenced second time to life in prison for murder-for-hire of his wife

COOPER, Texas (AP) — For the second time, State District Judge Lanny Ramsay has sentenced convicted killer Billy Ray Wallace to life in prison for the murder-for-hire slaying of the former dairyman's wife.

Wallace was sentenced by the judge Thursday after the jury that convicted him of capital murder could not reach a decision on his punishment.

Ramsay, who declared a hung jury Thursday afternoon, assessed the maximum penalty allowed under Texas law when a jury is deadlocked in the punishment phase.

Wallace, 40, who admitted killing his wife, Janyth K. Wallace, pleaded guilty to murder in December of 1979 and was sentenced to life in prison by Ramsay.

But the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturned the conviction in December of 1980 and ordered a new trial because the charge against Wallace was legally defective.

Prosecutors re-opened their case based on the testimony of a 41-year-old former employee at Wallace's dairy farm. Jessie Lee Shaw testified that Wallace hired him to kill Mrs. Wallace, 36, for $2,000.

Poteet man on trial for mercy killing

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A prosecutor says he submitted a mercy killing case to a grand jury because he did not want to bear the responsibility alone for deciding whether to condone such slayings.

"We're talking about a complicated moral, legal, sociological issue. I just don't see that I should make the decision that it is OK for this man to take another life. That's what we have judges for. That's what we have juries for," said Assistant District Attorney Charles Conaway.

Grand jurors indicted Woodrow Collums, 69, Wednesday for the murder of his terminally ill older brother.

The indictment alleges Collums, a retired rancher at nearby Poteet, Texas, walked into a nursing home on Nov. 16 and fired five shots into his 72-year-old brother, Jim, as the older man lay in a bed.

Jim Collums suffered from Alzheimer's disease, an incurable and progressive brain disorder.

"He had suffered long enough. I could not stand to see him suffer any longer," Woodrow Collums wrote friends and relatives in an emotional letter published in local newspapers after he was arrested and released on $10,000 bond.

"This man's conduct, whatever his motives might have been, falls into the legal definition of murder," said Conaway, who has gained the nickname "Kojak" because of his bald head and reputation as a tough prosecutor in murder cases.

"The option of either prosecuting or not lies with the district attorney. Having the option to present the matter to the grand jury, the grand jury apparently from what it heard felt that the matter should be tried... and to permit a jury to decide whether this man should be punished or not," the prosecutor said.

Woodrow Collums, who had expressed a desire to appear before the grand jury, was not summoned before the indictment was returned. He remained secluded at his ranch and declined to discuss the indictment with reporters.

Conaway said he felt compelled under the law to present the case to a grand jury, but that he would not seek any specific punishment if Collums is convicted.

"If a jury decides he was justified in this, I'm happy," he said. "If a jury gives him a life sentence, I'm equally happy. But I'm not going to take the responsibility for it myself," Conaway said.

"The underlying reason for that — the reason we have any law — is to prevent people from taking lives for reasons that they think are justifiable. We have no way of knowing that the person he killed was ready to be put out of his misery. So the idea of mercy killing...is foreign to our laws," said Conaway.

Soviet Jews rally on state Capitol steps

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — About 150 lawmakers, concerned citizens and recent emigres joined in national recognition of Human Rights Day with a rally on the state Capitol steps in support of Soviet Jews.

Thursday's gathering was whipped by blustery winds that rocked the public address system and threatened to blow away signs, but the participants braced themselves against the gusts and sang Israeli folk songs in praise of freedom.

Secretary of State David Dean read a proclamation issued by Gov. Bill Clements naming Thursday "Soviet Jewry Day" in Texas. Dean also used the occasion to call for support of extending this country's Voting Rights Act.

Sponsored by local Jewish organizations, the rally also featured remarks by Sen. Lloyd Doggett, Mayor Carole McClellan, local church leaders and several Russian Jews who immigrated to Texas recently.
