Oil tanker fire threatens African coast

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — A Spanish supertanker laden with 73 million gallons of crude oil burst into flames and split in half off the South African coast Saturday, threatening massive pollution to beaches and a bird sanctuary.

In Madrid, Pedro Sancho, president of the state-run company that owns the tanker Castillo de Bellver, said 33 people were rescued, including the wives of two officers, and three people were missing.

The five-year-old vessel, which had taken on its cargo in the Persian Gulf, was about 80 miles northwest of Cape Town when it erupted in flames before dawn.

Cause of the fire was not known. The value of the oil was reported to be $60 million.

The ship broke apart in choppy seas, some eight hours after the fire broke out. The Benguela Current swept the oil west into the Atlantic. Strong winds slowly pushed the bow and stern sections east toward South Africa's Langebaan Lagoon, a 15-mile-long coastal sanctuary for marine and bird life.

Oil streamed from each section, spreading for about a mile until they joined to form a 3-mile-wide slick.

The trawler Harvest Carina rescued 31 people, a merchant vessel saved another person, and a helicopter hoisted the 33rd survivor from the blazing aft section, according to the shipping company Empresa Nacional Elcano.

"I am very happy to be alive. It was terrible, terrible," said the ship's master, Alfonso Civera, after he stepped ashore from a rescue boat. "We tried everything to douse the flames but could do nothing."

By nightfall, officials called off plans to try to take the halves of the tanker in tow and pull them into deeper water to be scuttled.

The officials said the bow, which had burned itself out, and the still-blazing stern were dangerously close to sinking. If they went down, it was feared they would ooze oil for weeks or even months. They are in an area where the depth of the water is about 900 feet.

Officials from SafMarine, South Africa's quasi-government shipping company said the oil was too thick to be treated with chemicals.

Three die in plane crash

SEMINOLE — Three Hobbs, N.M., men died in the crash of a light plane 19 miles west of here about 7:15 p.m. Saturday, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Pronounced dead at the scene by Gaines County Justice of the Peace Mary Parrott were the pilot, 39-year-old Richard T. Long and two passengers, 26-year-old Bill W. Weldy and 41-year-old Gonzals Huerta.

Witnesses said the 1979 Piper was flying at a low altitude when it struck three towers of an irrigation system and then plunged to the ground. There was no fire.

The bodies were taken to the Singleton Funeral Home in Seminole.

The crash occurred 2.7 miles south of U.S. 62-180.

MISD's internship program achieving some goals

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

One year ago the Midland Independent School District initiated an internship program designed to give teachers experience as administrators as well as provide assistance to principals in crowded schools. As with most new projects there were some bugs which had to be worked out, but overall response to the program has been positive.

Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi said besides supervision and training, a third purpose of the program was to provide a pool of prospects for administrative positions.

"We wanted as many qualified applicants to choose from as possible and hoped that many of them could come from within (the district)," he said. "But we wanted more training in MISD specifically — information you don't get in a certification program. Two major purposes have been an outstanding success. The third — to promote from within — has not been realized yet. I think it will be."

Six teachers were chosen to participate as interns last year. They were to work in a capacity similar to that of an assistant principal. They were placed at elementary schools with enrollments over 600 and junior high schools with more than 1,000 students.

Interns are paid their regular teaching salary and $1,500. Payroll expenses, the major cost of the program, were nearly $155,000 in 1982-83. The interns work 10 months, a teacher's contract period, rather than 11 months as assistant principals do. All of last year's participants have reapplied for the four intern positions open this year.

"I enjoyed the experience," said Buddy Collins, an intern at Alamo Junior High School last year. "It allowed me to see what it's like on the other side. It's kind of a bridge between teaching and administration. I got experience I never would have gotten. If I ever do get a job in administration I won't go in cold turkey."

Dorothy Johnston, another intern, agreed. "It's a great idea. It eases the transition from classroom to the administrative level. It also familiarizes you with how the Midland school system operates." During various seminars interns spend a day learning about different aspects of the schools, from custodial to hiring.

"There's no way that a classroom teacher could get the experience that these people are getting," board president Bill Jackson asserted. The only places I know that have an intern program are the larger school districts.

Board members feel appointment bypasses promotion policy

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

In May the Midland School Board appointed a principal from another school district to a position as principal in a Midland elementary school. That appointment was opposed by two trustees, who felt it was against a policy implemented by the school district last year.

Both board members said they had no doubt the man was well-qualified for the position, but voted against the appointment because six people who served as administrative interns in the district last year were bypassed for promotion. The stated primary purpose of the program was to "develop a pool of qualified applicants who can be considered for placement as (administrative) vacancies occur."

The intern program was implemented last fall, partially in response to employees' complaints about the number of people from outside the district being hired for administrative positions. Those same complaints are still being raised, not only by trustees and teachers, but by citizens of the community.

Two elementary principals and two high school principals have been hired since the six teachers completed their internship, but none of the interns were selected. Tuesday the school board may appoint a principal to Lee Freshman High School and is expected to name the interns who will participate in this year's program. Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi predicted an assistant principal may receive the promotion at Lee Freshman and a former intern selected to replace him.

Telephone workers out on strike

From staff and wire reports

WASHINGTON — The president of the Communications Workers of America said late Saturday night his union has decided to strike American Telephone & Telegraph Co. after failing to successfully negotiate a three-year contract.

"I regret to advise you that our committee has just informed management that it is obvious we cannot reach an agreement by midnight Eastern Daylight Time," the president, Glenn E. Watts, said at a news conference.

Midland CWA Local 12127 Vice-president also said late Saturday night that some 1,000 union members in the Midland-Odessa area would honor the strike and pickets would be set up at the Southwestern Bell office at 410 W. Missouri Ave.

Watts said the union's executive committee "voted unanimously that we should go on strike as planned...for the hundreds of thousands of people who had hoped we would not have to go on strike to obtain justice in this day and age."

The CWA, the largest of AT&T's unions, represents about 500,000 of the company's 675,000 telephone operators and technicians.

AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner said of Watts' comment: "If that holds up, we're very sorry that we were unable to reach an acceptable agreement. We made a very good offer and if the union does strike then we expect we will be in there talking as quickly as possible in an attempt to resolve the walkout just as quickly as we can."

The three unions representing AT&T workers had rejected the company's latest wage proposal earlier Saturday.

In lengthy, separate bargaining sessions with representatives of the three unions, management offered to give experienced workers a 3.5 percent a year pay raise for each of the next three years.

But all three unions — the CWA, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Telecommunications International Union — had turned down the offer by mid-morning.

Rock star sentenced to five years in prison

DALLAS (AP) — Rock singer David Crosby, who told a court official he had used drugs "for 20 years," is free on bond while he appeals his conviction for possessing cocaine police confiscated from a nightclub dressing room.

Crosby, 42, was sentenced to five years in the Texas state prison Friday over the pleas of defense attorneys, who said the singer had benefited society. Crosby was also sentenced to three years in prison for possession of a firearm, but the two prison terms will run concurrently.

Crosby, wearing a suit jacket, plaid shirt and blue jeans, hung his arm over the back of his chair and glanced around the courtroom as State District Judge Pat McDowell explained his decision.

The singer did not speak during the hearing and declined to comment afterward.

Assistant District Attorney Knox Fitzpatrick said he liked Crosby's "very fine" music — first with The Byrds and then with Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young — but urged State District Judge Pat McDowell to levy a prison sentence to deter "one other teenager" from using drugs.

One of Crosby's lawyers, Tom Glenn, read McDowell a letter from fellow musician Graham Nash, who said, "I truly believe that what David needs at this juncture of his life is help, guidance and professional supervision. I believe that confinement in a prison would probably kill him."

GOP official: Most people can't afford $1000 dinner

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Republicans on Saturday made plans to fill the party's political war chest by staging a $1,000-a-plate dinner that one State Republican Executive Committee member said his constituents can't afford.

Texas GOP Chairman George Strake said President Reagan had agreed to be the featured guest at an Oct. 27 banquet in Dallas. The event should more than erase the $205,000 debt faced by the state party.

"That's the whole way we're getting out of the hole," Strake told the SREC.

But SREC member Ted Martin said a lower-priced event could attract more people and raise more money.

"There might be five persons in district 23 who could come to a $1,000-a-plate dinner," Martin said of his district. He proposed a series of $25-a-person events. "Let the grassroots people run it."

But Strake said, "We have to get the maximum we can" out of the Reagan dinner.

Former Gov. Bill Clements has been named chairman of the organizing committee for the dinner, according to Strake.

John Maxwell, who takes over as Texas Republican Party executive director on Monday, said the dinner could mean $1 million for the party. Maxwell, an Iowa native and former general counsel for a U.S. Senate subcommittee, said party finances are his first challenge in Texas.

"There are pieces to pick up," he told reporters.

Judge wants prison inmate moved for financial reasons

GALVESTON (AP) — A Galveston judge said he will ask to have Texas prison inmate Eroy Brown transferred out of Galveston County Jail for financial reasons.

Brown, 31, was acquitted by a jury here in November 1982 in the April 4, 1981 death of Texas Department of Corrections Warden Wallace M. Pack. Brown still faces trial on a second charge of capital murder in the slaying of Billy Max Moore, who managed TDC's Ellis Unit prison farm and was killed minutes before Pack.

Galveston County Judge Ray Holbrook said he will recommend Monday that the Commissioners Court ask state District Judge Darrell Hester to move Brown out of the Galveston Jail because a Walker County official told Galveston authorities he cannot guarantee that Walker County can continue to reimburse Galveston County for Brown's incarceration.

Court reverses lewdness ruling

BEAUMONT (AP) — An appeals court in Beaumont has reversed a Harris County jury's guilty verdict in a public lewdness case against an appellate judge, saying that he did not violate the law.

A jury convicted Associate Justice Ben G. Levy of Houston in April 1982 of the misdemeanor offense on charges that as an attorney he had permitted a female client to place her hand inside his pants in a county jail dressing room.

The appeals court in Beaumont ordered the Houston trial court to enter an order of acquittal for Levy.

"We had no way of knowing whether the factual situation occurred," Associate Justice Martin Dies Jr., who wrote the court's opinion, said Friday.

Three killed by cement truck

GARLAND (AP) — A teen-age mother, her 4-month-old baby and her grandmother were crushed to death when a cement truck overturned on their car in this Dallas suburb, police say.

It took rescue workers 90 minutes Friday to free the bodies of Elizabeth June Hernandez, 19, of Garland, her daughter, Lorene Elizabeth, and Eliene M. Baker, 68, of Cushing, Okla., from the wreckage.

A Gifford-Hill & Co. Inc. concrete-mixing truck carrying about 40,000 pounds of cement was traveling south on Broadway Boulevard about 4 p.m. when the driver braked and swerved in an attempt to avoid a car that was stopped at a red light at the intersection, said police officer Mike Roberds.

The truck crossed the intersection, struck the car Mrs. Hernandez was driving and then overturned on it, Roberds said.

Man hangs himself in jail

CONROE (AP) — A 72-year-old man hanged himself in a county jail three hours after his arrest for driving while intoxicated, authorities said.

Jail officials said they found the body of Virgil Charles McNeal of Conroe in his cell at Montgomery County Jail Friday afternoon. A Sheriff's spokesman said McNeal, who was alone in his cell, had hanged himself with his shirt.

Boa's owner takes cold reception philosophically

AUSTIN (AP) — Ed, a seven-foot boa constrictor taken during an Austin burglary, was back home Saturday, "just fine" but apparently less thrilled than his owner about the reunion.

"They really don't care one way or the other about people," said Bill Montgomery, Ed's owner.

Ed was stolen during the July 28 burglary of the home of a Montgomery friend who was snake-sitting.

"We never thought we'd see him alive again," said the woman.

But Ed, valued at $300, was found late Thursday, coiled on a cool tile in the shower stall of an Austin motel room.

Austin Police Sgt. Bob Boatright said a park ranger who saw a boy and a snake on July 29 recalled the story of the stolen snake. The ranger recognized the boy, and reported him to police.

A burglary charge was filed against the teen-ager, who had passed the snake to several acquaintances, police said.

The snake was located after one of those acquaintances was spotted at a local store by a policeman. That man led the officer to the Goodnight Motel, where Ed was being held.

The woman who was keeping Ed when he was stolen said the snake "came through it fine. His temperature was good and the only thing we could see was that a couple of scales were ruffled."

Tycoon files suit over list

FORT WORTH (AP) — Including Texas industrialist Kenneth W. Davis on a list of the 400 richest Americans is comparable to publishing nude photographs of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, Davis' lawyer says.

Kenneth W. Davis, who with his two brothers, Cullen and Bill Davis, owns Kendavis Industries of Fort Worth, has filed a federal suit to prevent Forbes magazine from naming him in its so-called "rich list."

U.S. District Judge David O. Belew said after a hearing Friday that he will rule within 10 days on a request by Davis for a temporary injunction against Forbes.

Davis said in court Friday that he believed the public "would be offended by the release of information about my private wealth," and his attorney, Cecil Munn, compared Davis' inclusion on the list to publishing nude pictures of Mrs. Onassis.

Munn told Belew that such injunctions are becoming "more necessary in dealing with a press that increasingly recognizes no right of restraint and no right of privacy...Only the court can right the balance."

But Forbes lawyer Marshall Searcy countered that "the Supreme Court of the United States has made it clear time and time again that anyone who seeks prior restraint comes to court with a heavy burden."

"It's simply not reasonable to conclude that the publication that any individual is very wealthy will cause him irreparable harm," Searcy said.

Last September, Forbes' first list of the 400 wealthiest Americans said Davis and his brothers were worth $250 million each.

Hiroshima anniversary observed

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

The 38th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Japan, brought out hundreds of U.S. anti-war protesters for demonstrations Saturday from a submarine base in Connecticut to the sidewalks of Seattle.

In towns large and small, Americans held candlelight vigils, meditated and fasted, and listened to speakers describing the horrors of nuclear war.

In the Little Tokyo section of Los Angeles, the Asian-Americans for Nuclear Disarmament and the Committee of Atomic Bomb Survivors scheduled Christian and Buddhist memorial services and a candlelight procession.

Organizers said the aim was to call attention to the plight of more than 370,000 survivors who still suffer from the effects of radiation from the bombings in Hiroshima and Nagasaki that killed 150,000 people.

They distributed thousands of folded paper cranes, a traditional symbol of health, prosperity and longevity.

A group called the Nuclear Resistance Coalition prepared cariods of life-size baby dolls, burned and dismembered, to dump on the steps of the Federal Building in Los Angeles.

"We Will Not Repeat This Sin," and "Hiroshima and Nagasaki Never Again," read placards carried by a dozen people who began a 75-hour vigil at the Old State House in Hartford, Conn. The vigil began at 8:15 a.m., the time the bomb exploded in Hiroshima, and will end Tuesday at 11:15 a.m., the time Nagasaki was bombed three days later.

An estimated 500 to 800 demonstrators gathered at the Electric Boat Shipyard in Groton, Conn., where the Navy's Trident nuclear submarines are built. The protesters assembled at nearby Fort Griswold to make a floral wreath in the form of a peace symbol to place at the gate of the shipyard's administration building.

About 250 women at a women's peace camp near the Seneca Army Depot at Romulus, N.Y., fasted and meditated. Two dozen gathered near the gates of the depot at dawn and one woman was arrested when she stepped across a yellow line marking the boundary line of the installation.

In Oak Ridge, Tenn., a dozen anti-war groups gathered for a memorial service in the town where the Hiroshima bomb's explosive core was made.

"We have the power to play God ... the means to self-destruct," the Rev. Rhonda Knight of Oliver Springs told about 100 people.

The observance held special meaning for Dr. Kimi Hara, a sociology professor at Shikoku Christian College near Hiroshima who said she just happened to be in Oak Ridge as part of a 28-day American tour.

"I find great hope in the United States because of your concern," she said.

The Hiroshima anniversary coincided with an open house at Griffiss Air Force Base in Rome, N.Y., where thousands of visitors watched Air Force crews demonstrate their proficiency at loading unarmed cruise missiles into B-52 bombers.

Air Force officials said the open house was held to commemorate the Continental Army's defense of nearby Fort Stanwix during a siege by British soldiers and Indians on Aug. 3, 1777.

In Omaha, Neb., an estimated 500 people from nine Midwestern states are expected to participate in a Sunday peace rally that will take protesters to the gates of Strategic Air Command headquarters.

Tom Cordaro, an organizer, said the protest is being coordinated by Strategies and Action for Conversion, a coalition of peace groups.

Protesters gather at Pantex arms plant in Amarillo

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — About 100 demonstrators gathered quietly Saturday at the Pantex nuclear arms assembly plant near here to protest nuclear weapons and mark the 38th anniversary of the dropping of an atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan.

Amarillo Catholic Bishop L.T. Matthiesen, an outspoken nuclear weapons opponent, told the crowd, which included 36 people from Plowshare Pilgrimage who had marched for 65 days from the Pentagon in Washington, D.C., "Your coming was eyed with alarm by some people here."

"Some folks here believe, as a bumper sticker I spotted in downtown Amarillo said, 'God, guns and guts will keep America No. 1,'" Matthiesen said. He called peace through weaponry an "illusion."

"Recall that day 38 years ago when a mountain of fire climbed into the sky above Japan and the face of the city was changed," Matthiesen told the demonstrators. "It became white, white as the face of the leper, and the face was the face of death."

Officials of the plant, owned by the Silas Mason Co. and located 17 miles northeast of Amarillo, videotaped the demonstrators. Two Department of Public Safety officers and two county deputies were the only police present. They directed traffic.

Japanese mark day with doves

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Japan marked the 38th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima on Saturday with church bells, doves of peace, silent prayers and pleas for nuclear disarmament.

In Western Europe, demonstrators began fasts and marches to protest the planned deployment of NATO's new nuclear missiles in Western Europe this year.

More than 48,000 people, including Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, attended memorial services at Hiroshima's Peace Park.

They stood for one minute of silent prayer at 8:15 a.m., the time when the U.S. B-29 bomber Enola Gay dropped "Little Boy" on Aug. 6, 1945, killing about 150,000 people in the world's first atomic bombing in the closing days of World War II.

The bells in the city's 120 Christian churches and Buddhist temples chimed with the Bell of Peace in the park and city officials released 1,700 doves to symbolize hopes for peace.

"The human race is standing on the verge of ruin amid heightening nuclear rivalry, centering around the United States and the Soviet Union," Hiroshima Mayor Takeshi Araki, a survivor of the bombing, said in his address. The ceremony was broadcast live on nationwide television.

Nakasone told the group that Japan, "as the only nation that has experienced the atomic bomb" is "qualified and has the responsibility to be a leader in seeking lasting world peace."

Similar services are scheduled for Tuesday in Nagasaki, in southwestern Japan, where a second atomic bomb killed an estimated 74,000 people three days after the attack on Hiroshima. Japan surrendered Aug. 15, ending the war.

Nakasone said Japan will maintain its policy of banning the production and possession of nuclear weapons and their introduction into Japanese territory by other powers.

About 20 people raised crossed arms to make "X" signs in a protest against the prime minister's stand on Japanese and European defense. Nakasone has said he favors U.S. nuclear weapons in Western Europe.

In West Germany, small groups of demonstrators in various cities began fasts and staged "die-ins," lying down on city streets, to protest the NATO plan to station 572 medium-range Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe. The deployment is to start in December unless U.S. and Soviet negotiators reach agreement at arms talks in Geneva.

Internship program 'successful'

The program was not approved by the school board until the spring of 1982. It had to be worked into the budget, the positions had to be advertised and applicants interviewed, then replacements for those selected had to be found. As a result, they did not begin until six weeks into the school year.

Replacements for some of the interns were hard to come by. Because of the nationwide shortage of science teachers, a certified teacher to take over physics classes was not found until spring. One intern taught English and history and also coached, while another taught reading in the migrant program and had special certifications. Finding tailor-made substitutes once school had already begun was difficult.

Some of those problems will be avoided this year, as interns are expected to be named at Tuesday's school board meeting. Although that is less than three weeks before school starts, Baressi felt it would not be a problem. "Personnel knows who the top applicants are and is gearing up to replace them before school starts," he explained. And Ron Whitmore, personnel director, assured, "Under no circumstances would we not appoint an intern because they would be difficult to replace."

Currently there are no plans to move the selection process up. Baressi said funds for the program would have to be approved before applicants could be selected, and the budget is usually not completed until August. Whitmore said an earlier selection date could complicate the process of filling administrative vacancies during late summer, because the same person may have applied for both positions.

However, at least two board members said the procedure may be completed earlier. "The interns should be selected earlier than they have been," board president Jackson conceded. "Hopefully selection will be made early enough so that we won't have a problem replacing these teachers."

"I think the sooner we can name the interns the better," Gary Hopper agreed. "It gives personnel time to replace them. They (interns) can hit the ground running the first day of school instead of being thrown into it."

Promotion plan ignored?

"We have to encourage our own people to excel, and that's hard to do if they're always running up against a brick wall."
— Gary Hopper

"We don't pay second-rate pay scales to anybody, and we don't have second-rate schools, and we want to hire the best persen available."
— Bill Jackson

"I'm a firm believer in using your local resources if possible," Gary Hopper said. He was one of the trustees who opposed the outside principal's appointment. "These people have been in the system for several years and they know the system and the city. I think because of this they're several steps ahead of people we bring in from the outside.

"I don't have anything against people from the outside," he added, "but I believe in giving our local people a shot at it."

"I think maybe some people are disillusioned because people other than interns have been hired," board president Bill Jackson said. "The philosophy of the school board is to hire the best person we possibly can get — within or without the school district.

"What we on the board are looking for is the finest school district in the United States," he continued. "We don't pay second-rate pay scales to anybody, and we don't have second-rate schools, and we want to hire the best person available. It's strictly a judgment situation. There's no rule book. In all businesses those who are at the top are not necessarily promoted from within."

"I know it's caused a lot of hard feelings in some teachers, because people wonder why they don't promote from within," intern Buddy Collins said. "I'm not convinced there's a problem there. Personally, I feel like I have been dealt with fairly. I feel everyone who was hired for the jobs I applied for were probably better qualified and had more experience.

"I feel like if I'm going to be a principal I have got to do my dues somewhere else. You can't just go from the classroom to principal. I would feel more comfortable going into a position as assistant principal rather than a principal. As long as I'm given my shot, I feel like I've been given every consideration."

Another intern, Dorothy Johnston, did not agree.

"Because of the fact that none of us was put into the position of an administrator, I feel that something was wrong," she said. "We were told this would not guarantee us a job, but that, all things being equal, we would be given first choice. The unrest that has been caused by the intern program is just the tip of the promotion policy iceberg. For many years there has been deep concerns about the lack of a consistant and fair promotion policy that is clearly stated in writing and faithfully followed.

"The intern program was the hope to many teachers that at last some steps were being taken to put in place a fair and equitable promotion policy. As most teachers and many community people know, the intern plan approved by the school board only offered false hope to the teachers."

Johnston, who has been teaching in the district for 10 years, said prior to her internship she had a year's experience in administration, and named a dozen other qualifications, certifications, and experience she possessed. "I feel I have a pretty good background to be a principal."

"I think we have got good people, but we have got to give them a chance to acheive," Hopper said. "The thing (the board) always said is we all want the best person for the job. But I think we've got a lot of excellent people in our school system and maybe we've got to look at them first. We have to encourage our own people to excel, and that's hard to do if they're always running up against a brick wall.

"If the program isn't producing the results we exptected, then maybe we've got to look at it again. I don't think it's fair to the taxpayers to pay thousands of dollars in taxes if it's not producing a 100 percent dividend."

He added that since the internships were only completed a few months ago, it may be too early make any judgments about its success in this area. "This next year should tell."

Local telephone workers join CWA in Bell strike

Arthur Perry, a negotiator for the IBEW, which represents 100,000 telephone system electricians and technicians, said in a telephone interview earlier Saturday:

"Either we're not communicating or they're not listening. The hours are getting short. We're still hoping there can be a settlement."

In contrast to the CWA, the IBEW does not have a "no contract, no work" clause in its constitution. But Perry had said earlier in the week that the top leadership would decide whether to call workers off the job.

Vic Alfonzo, California chairman of the Telecommunications International Union, which represents 50,000 technicians, said in a telephone interview that his union was poised for a walkout.

"It is our general understanding that if there isn't a national agreement (by midnight), we would go on strike," he said.

Company representatives and union negotiators recessed early Saturday and caucused among themselves.

A union bargainer, who asked not to be identified, said CWA's leadership believed management will have to double the 3.5 percent-a-year pay raise proposal before a new contract would be accepted by the union's negotiating committee.

Among CWA employees, a top-scale assistant technician makes $565.50 per week. A top-scale operator makes $389.

Company spokesman have said telephone customers would be largely unaffected, initially, by a strike.

AT&T spokesman Charles Dynes said supervisory personnel "would be called off their desks" to operate switchboards.

Chad seeks French intervention; U.S. AWACS on way

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — President Hissene Habre on Saturday pleaded for the French air force to intervene in Chad's civil war and repel Libyan-backed insurgents who reportedly have surrounded government troops in the strategic northern city of Faya-Largeau.

In Washington, the State Department announced that two U.S. AWACS surveillance aircraft and supporting jet fighters would be sent to monitor the situation.

Habre told a news conference, "Libya intends to totally destroy Faya-Largeau. What is happening there looks like something out of a film — it's a veritable act of genocide."

"Direct French air intervention is needed to counter the Libyan aggression," he said.

There was no immediate response by French officials, but Foreign Minister Charles Hernu and his top aides were meeting in an urgent session in Paris to review the situation. Hernu said he was in constant touch with President Francois Mitterrand.

One government source in Paris said France "cannot remain indifferent to the aggravation of the military situation in Chad."

State Deparatment spokeswoman Anita Stockman told reporters in Washington, "After consultation with other concerned governments, including the French, we have moved some of our aircraft to where they could be most useful to help in monitoring the situation in Chad."

She said the support aircraft for the two AWACS will include "some protective fighter aircraft and tankers," but she gave no overall number.

Libyan radio said Friday that Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy expects a joint U.S.-French "aggression" against his country because of the developments in Chad.

The Libyan broadcast, referring to two U.S. AWACS in Egypt to take part in military maneuvers and French arms supplies to the Habre government, said they were a "cover for the plot to attack Libyan territories."

But Miss Stockman said said none of the aircraft assigned to monitor the Chad fighting is being diverted from operation Bright Star, the U.S.-Egyptian military exercise now under way in Egypt. She also said the aircraft assembled for the Chad operation were sent from the United States and from U.S. bases overseas and are not intended to engage in combat.

She gave no further details, but other administration sources indicated the planes would be based in Sudan and the fighters would be 12 F-15s and the tankers two KC-10s. They said the U.S. aircraft would not penetrate Libyan air space.

The United States accuses Khadafy of backing the Chad insusrgents to extend Libyan influence in Africa.

In Cairo, Egyptian Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Aly said Egypt has "unequivocal evidence ... that Libya has intervened directly with its own forces in the Chad fighting."

"Egypt supports the legitimate government in Chad and is providing everything it can to help it defend itself and resist foreign intervention," Aly said in an interview in the weekly newspaper Akhbar el-Yom. He did not say what kind of supplies Egypt was sending, however.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

'Big bad wolf' huffing, puffing at Legislature's door

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — Determining true prophets from false ones has never been easy.

Cassandra, the Trojan princess of Greek mythology and epic poetry, was able to predict the future but was condemned by Apollo and was never believed.

In the end, of course, Cassandra's dire predictions proved true although at that point the matter was academic.

Then again, there are always lots of doom-and-gloom peddlers whose predictions don't come to pass.

State government is full of them.

But there are a number of folks who, if they should cry "wolf," then you'd better start looking for a wolf or at least a big, mean dog.

Legislative Budget Board Director Jim Oliver is seeing some wolves lurking around the state coffers these days.

And Oliver isn't usually someone whose identification on a wolf needs to be second-guessed.

The problem is that Comptroller Bob Bullock is saying that there are not any wolves out there.

And Bullock has enough experience to know a wolf when he sees one.

Oliver told LBB members, those select legislators who oversee budget drafting and related operations, that oil and gas revenues and sales tax collections have dropped more than was anticipated at the first of the year.

That could mean, Oliver says, that a special session may be needed to fund the $30.8 billion state budget for the 1984-85 biennium (which begins next month).

According to Oliver's calculations, $115 million less in sales tax revenues may be available and declines in oil and gas revenues could push the total shortfall to $500 million.

Basically, the reason is that while Texas' economy has been improving, that improvement has been slower than anticipated, Oliver explained.

And much of Texas' economic health is a reflection of the health of the oil and gas industry, which provides a substantial part, directly and indirectly, of the sales tax revenues.

Bullock disagrees that there will be half a billion dollars less than he had predicted.

Bullock estimates the amount of money which will be available for lawmakers to spend and the legislature is prohibited from deficit spending.

So legislators wait for the comptroller's estimates with mingled emotions — the hopeful anticipation of a child for Christmas and the tingling apprehension of a child over a report card.

Bullock had dashed lawmakers' hopes for a relatively care-free session in regards to budget matters even before they arrived in January. He announced that the anticipated surplus wouldn't be there. However, lawmakers did have more money to spend than in the prior session.

It was the budget, and the accompanying talk of tax increases, which overshadowed other concerns throughout the regular session.

So much work and attention went into that effort that it seems a bit surprising to look at what else lawmakers did and to realize that in terms of legislative output, the 1983 session produced significantly more than the 1981 session.

But one thing that wasn't enacted was a tax increase, although a number of fees were raised.

What lawmakers did was to shift the date for collecting some taxes in order to get more money into the 1984-85 biennium.

However, that may mean that there will be even less for the 1986-87 period so that a tax increase may be the only answer.

Of course, by then the Texas economy, and the nation's economy, may be booming again.

Black cowboys whoop it up for last time at Diamond L

HOUSTON (AP) — Cowboys of all ages are whooping it up this weekend for the last time at the Diamond L Ranch, a rodeo arena that attracted three generations of black performers but now is being replaced with a housing project.

Since the late 1940s, the Diamond L has been a showcase for black cowboys who for decades were locked out of competition with white cowboys in Texas.

Blacks long have worked at hundreds of Texas ranches, often at the side of white wranglers, but before integration, they were not permitted to compete in Texas rodeos.

One black Texas cowboy, J.L. Sweeney, competed in rodeos in New York, where there was no color bar during the '30s and '40s, but tired of the long trips North. In 1947, he built his own arena on Houston's south side.

In the following 36 years, black cowboys roped and rode before black audiences. Even after the big league rodeo circuit was opened to all races, the Diamond L continued to hold a special place among the black wranglers of Texas.

Willie Bonner, 55, who was born on a Texas ranch and started riding rodeo ponies at age 5, said the Diamond L kept alive the tradition of black cowboys.

"There's always been black cowboys," he said.

Hispanic Texans attend luncheon at White House

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A large number of Texans, mostly from San Antonio and South Texas, were luncheon guests of the president at the White House Friday. The luncheon also included a group from California.

The President is giving particular attention this month to Hispanics. In addition to the luncheon, he plans to meet at the White House next Thursday with Hispanic appointees. On Friday, the president will go to Tampa to talk to Hispanics. Aug. 13 finds him in El Paso and on Aug. 14, he will meet in Baja California with the president of Mexico, Miguel de la Madrid.

President Reagan introduced Cathy Villalpando of Austin to luncheon guests, terming her "my representative...a young woman from Texas, who will be keeping me up-to-date on your ideas and areas of concern." She is the resident Hispanic in the White House Office of Public Liaison. He also singled out Joe Salgado of California, saying "he has been brought to the White House to make personnel decisions."

While the President was speaking about the improvements in unemployment figures, he mentioned that the rate of joblessness among Hispanics had dropped from 14 percent in June to 12.3 percent today. "We got it down," he said. Then he mentioned with regret the high unemployment rate along the Mexican border. He promised "to keep on with what we've been doing until we can eliminate those pockets as well."

Then he made a strong plea for Hispanic support for his policies and actions in sending money, arms, advisors and other military aid to various groups in Central America.

Those from West Texas included: Liborio Hinojosa, Pete Diaz, Jr., Rio Grande City; Hollis Rutledge, Jr., Elsa; Guillermo (Willie) Serna, San Angelo; Ernest Angelo, Midland; Roy Santos, Lubbock; Edward P. Rodriguez, Eagle Pass; David Escobar, Joe Santos, Richard C. Najera, El Paso.

Victim will get payments

AUSTIN (AP) — A former premed student forced to relearn how to walk and talk will receive monthly payments for life from the owners of a convenience store at which he was shot.

But if it was up to jurors in the case filed by Micheal Segal of Houston, the young man would have received nothing from the stores. Minutes after a settlement was reached Friday, the jurors decided the owners of the Minit Mart in Northeast Austin did not owe Segal anything.

The agreement overrode the jury decision. Houston lawyer Bill Bludworth, representing the store, said his client agreed to the settlement because "there's always been a tremendous amount of risk in this case."

Segal was a University of Texas premed student when he was shot during a Feb. 18, 1981 robbery at the store. He had gone in to buy $2 worth of gas. The shooting left him partially blind and without the use of his right arm.

Three men arrested in the case received sentences of 25 years, 60 years and life in prisons.

Segal's $12.3 million lawsuit said defendants Zippy Food Stores of Austin Inc., Zippy Food Stores Inc. and Strasburger Enterprises Inc. provided lax security and poor cash-control procedures at the store.

Strasburger Enterprises, a Temple-based corporation, owns Minit Mart and Zippy stores.

After 10 hours of deliberations, the jury reached a decision at 4:30 p.m. Friday. But the jurors were kept waiting while the lawyers worked on a settlement. The agreement was announced at 5 p.m.

Judge asked to stop deportation of Haitians

MIAMI (AP) — Attorneys for 1,700 Haitians freed from federal detention centers a year ago by a federal judge are now asking the judge to block deportation of their clients.

Attorney Ira Kurzban filed the request Friday before U.S. District Judge Eugene Spellman. No date was set for a hearing.

Kurzban said he feared other Haitians may meet the same fate as a refugee deported to Haiti last month, despite intervention by the United Nations High Commission on Refugees.

That refugee, whom Kurzban did not name, is one of eight — all among those freed under Spellman's order last year — who have been deported, according to Immigration and Naturalization Service spokesman Verne Jervis.

Hundreds of others are in various stages of hearings on their requests to remain in this country, Jervis said.

Kurzban contended that two refugees were deported from Philadelphia in April without proper notice to their attorneys. At least one other refugee is in danger of deportation within a week from Nashville, Tenn., Kurzban said.

Executive Assistant U.S. Attorney Jay Brant said the government "will make every effort to be sure no class members are deported" before a court hearing can be held.

Congress had fast start, but bogged down on deficits

By CLIFF HAAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Congress was about to begin its five-week recess, Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. stood in the Senate chamber contemplating his colleagues' thoughts.

"I can now envision, in my mind's eye, remarks such as, 'Thank God that's over,' and other public policy-minded statements," Baker, R-Tenn., said.

The first session of the 98th Congress has been productive, at least in volume — more than 60 measures have been sent to the president and signed into law, more than double the 26 during the same period of the last Congress.

Congress got off to a fast, bipartisan start on domestic issues with action completed by March on a $4.6 billion jobs bill and landmark legislation aimed at assuring the solvency of the Social Security system.

Since then, however, the House and Senate have bogged down in a confusing series of inconclusive arguments over foreign policy, defense and what actions, if any, are needed to shrink bulging budget deficits that some argue will threaten the nation's economic recovery.

At the same time, President Reagan's ability to get what he wants from Congress has eroded.

"There's an impasse between what the Congress feels should be done and what the president wants to get done," said Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., who was instrumental in drafting an $859 billion 1984 budget plan that Congress adopted over President Reagan's protests.

"We're just passing time," Chiles said, indicating the view of many that Congress will accomplish little until after the next elections.

"Underneath, I know Congress has been engaged in one big fudging process," said Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif.

"The House knows that a lot of what it passes won't pass the Senate," Panetta added. "The Senate knows a lot of what it does won't be signed by the president. And the president is just appointing commissions."

Even Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., characterizes the accomplishments of the House this year in terms of changing the direction of Reagan's political rhetoric.

"This session, the House has prodded the administration toward policies of fairness at home and peace abroad ... We have given him (Reagan) some sensitivity" to the issues of hunger in America, education, women and nuclear arms control, O'Neill said.

Democrats in the House have been operating this year with a 100-seat majority that has helped them to notch victories on a nuclear freeze resolution and a move to cut off covert U.S. military aid to Nicaragua.

But the nuclear freeze is bottled up in committee in the Republican-controlled Senate and the question of military aid to central America will be argued again in the fall.

In contrast to the actions on nuclear weapons and Central America, the House has voted to preserve every major weapon Reagan has requested — the MX missile, B-1 bomber and Trident submarine.

O'Neill challenges Reagan on poverty, hunger problems

By TERENCE HUNT

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. challenged President Reagan on Saturday to abandon plans for cutting government nutrition programs for the poor. Reagan, meanwhile, said that recent economic news shows that, "Things are looking up for America."

The two officials spoke to the nation in separate radio addresses, with O'Neill focusing on the problem of poverty and hunger, and Reagan speaking about international trade and defending the strength of the U.S. dollar and new trade agreements with the Soviet Union and China.

O'Neill's address represented the Democratic response to Reagan's talk. However, the speaker's remarks were taped ahead of time and were made public before the president spoke.

THE SPEAKER SAID THAT if Reagan is serious about attacking the problem of hunger, he should drop plans for cutting back government nutrition programs.

"Under his pending request, some 600,000 low-income expectant mothers, infants and children would have to be terminated from this vital program next year. Is that fair?" the Massachusetts Democrat said.

Reagan, in his address, made no mention of the speaker's comments.

The president said that protectionist policies that impede free trade among nations increase international tensions. He said the leaders of industrialized nations pledged at the recent Williamsburg summit "to continue working for a more open trading system.

"BUT SOMETINES THAT'S easier said than done," Reagan added.

Pointing to recent economic reports, Reagan noted that inflation had dropped to 2.6 percent annually, economic growth reached 8.7 percent in the second quarter of the year and total civilian unemployment tumbled to 9.5 percent in July.

"Things are looking up for America," the president said. "This good news restores confidence in our economy and our currency.

"Some people dislike our strong dollar and blame it on our interest rates," Reagan added. Dismissing that argument, Reagan said, "Other countries have higher interest rates than we do, yet their currencies have fallen in relation to ours."

HE SAID A MAJOR CAUSE of the strong dollar is the decline in inflation in the United States.

Reagan said that a strong dollar "also brings problems" because it makes American goods more expensive abroad.

Reagan also said a new five-year grain agreement with the Soviets "represents a major step forward for our farmers" and symbolizes U.S. determination to regain markets farmers had lost. "It also proves that, while we oppose Soviet aggression, we seek to promote progress and peace between our peoples."

Government gets 30 days to plan release

ATLANTA (AP) — The federal government has 30 more days to make plans for the release of about 1,000 Cuban immigrants from Atlanta's federal penitentiary.

U.S. District Judge Marvin Shoob had given the Justice Department 30 days on July 7 to either prove the Cubans were a threat to the public or have them released.

On Friday, the department asked Shoob to suspend the order while the case was appealed. Instead, he granted them another 30 days to present the plan that originally was to be due Monday.

Shoob said he would give attorneys for the Cubans 15 days to respond to the government's request for a stay, and will then rule quickly on the request.

In Washington, a senior Justice Department official, who asked not to be identified, said the department waited until Friday — just before the deadline for submission of a plan — to ask Shoob to stay the order because "we couldn't decide what to do until today."

In an afadavit filed with Shoob by the Justice Department, Deputy Attorney General Edward C. Schmults said "if a foreign state opens its jails and mental institutions as Cuba did and foists the inmates onto our shores, our government should be able to act effectively to protect its citizens from the more dangerous of those inmates."

Schmults said releasing the Cubans "will virtually insure that serious violent and non-violent crimes will be committed ... against the American public."

In another affidavit, Norman A. Carlson, head of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, said the 940 Cuban refugees in the Atlanta prison "are among the most violent and dangerous that I have come in contact with during my 25 years in prison administration."

The Justice Department also said that Shoob's ruling "departed from established law" by placing on the government the burden or proving that an alien should not be released.

Labor leaders facing decision on endorsement strategy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The AFL-CIO leadership, coming under increasing pressure by some unions to support Walter Mondale's presidential candidacy, seems poised to advance the date when it will select its 1984 White House favorite, labor officials say.

As the federation's policymaking executive council prepares for a three-day meeting opening Monday in Boston, some unionists predicted the leadership would abandon its plan to endorse a candidate in December.

Instead, these officials said, the endorsement will likely be moved up to October — around the time the AFL-CIO holds its convention.

Mondale's prospects for winning the labor endorsement would be vastly improved if the AFL-CIO decided to move two months earlier than planned, labor and political operatives agree. They reason that Mondale already has the support of many unionists, and any speed-up of the endorsement decision would deprive his ivals of an opportunity to wrest the endorsement from him.

The former vice president is the front-runner for the 1984 Democratic Party presidential nomination, and the clear favorite of several of the AFL-CIO's largest union affiliates. These include the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, the United Food and Commercial Workers, the Communications Workers of America and the Service Employees International Union.

"THERE'S A GOOD LIKELIHOOD that they'll advance the decision to the convention," said Glenn E. Watts, president of the CWA, co-chairman of the Democratic National Committee's labor advisory council and a Mondale supporter.

Jerry Clark, political action director of state, county and municipal employees, said a canvassing of AFSCME's some 1 million rank-and-file members "showed overwhelming support for Mondale."

"We favor having it (the endorsement) done as early as possible," he said. Clark said the decision should be made around the time of the AFL-CIO's convention, which opens Oct. 3 in Hollywood, Fla., adding that "the timing would be just right."

For more than a year, the AFL-CIO leadership has been honing a political strategy designed to give labor more clout in the selection of Democratic Party presidential nominees. The idea is to unify the labor movement behind a candidate before the primary and caucus season opens early next year.

UNDER THE LEADERSHIP of the late George Meany, the federation for years strictly adhered to a policy of neutrality during the presidential primary and caucus seasons, then made its choice between the party nominees.

Federation President Lane Kirkland has remained non-committal on candidates and has given no indication of his feelings about advancing the timing of the presidential endorsement.

Although some members of the executive council have voiced concern about the risk that the labor movement might line up behind a candidate who stumbles in the primaries, there has been little public sentiment for anyone but Mondale.

Many pro-Mondale unions are anxious to begin working in behalf of the former vice president. But Kirkland thus far has been able to hold the line against premature endorsements by individual affiliates.

Honolulu police officers indicted

HONOLULU (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted four Honolulu police officers on charges of abusing prisoners.

The officers allegedly took prisoners to remote areas of Waikiki, beat them, urinated on one and, in one case, forced a man to catch live frogs with his mouth.

The defendants were identified as Officers Bernard G. Decoito, Dennis Kadekawa and Francisco Tagalicod and Sgt. Benedict Awana. The charges include assault, civil rights violations and making false statements to the grand jury, the Justice Department said Friday.

Judge arrested in courtroom

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — A substitute municipal judge has been arrested in his courtroom and charged with public intoxication, officials say.

The judge, Ronald Layer, 34, was filling in for a vacationing judge Thursday night when he was arrested, booked on the misdemeanor charge and released on a personal recognizance bond, Police Chief Les Spradlin said Friday.

Asked if Layer had been fired Friday, City Manager Don Sisson would say only that "Mr. Layer is no longer with the city."

Layer left on vacation Friday and could not be reached for comment, his receptionist said.

Lawyer can not represent leader

NEW YORK (AP) — A lawyer was disqualified from representing the alleged leader of the anti-Castro Omega 7 terrorist group because she also represents a potential witness in a grand jury probe of the organization.

U.S. District Judge Vincent L. Broderick said Friday he will appoint another lawyer for Eduardo Arocena, who is charged with trying to assassinate the Cuban ambassador to the United Nations in 1980.

Federal prosecutors said it was improper for Anna Maria Carnesoltas to represent Arocena because she also is attorney for Jose Lopez, who is being held at a federal prison in Miami for contempt of court for refusing to testify about Arocena before the federal grand jury.

Jet makes emergency landing

LINTHICUM, Md. (AP) — A Federal Express jet made an emergency landing at Baltimore-Washington International Airport after the crew smelled fumes, an airport spokesman said Saturday. The fumes turned out to be from a leaking container of cleaning solvent.

The Boeing 727 freight plane landed at at 11:46 p.m. Friday.

No member of the four-member crew became sick from the fumes.

Fifteen people injured on amusement ride

CINCINNATI (AP) — Fifteen people were injured, one suffering a broken leg, when an amusement ride broke down at a county fair here.

Anthony Krista, 17, Cincinnati, was admitted to Children's Medical Center with a fractured leg, said Don Swain, president of the Hamilton County Fair board.

The injuries occurred Friday night on the "Round-Up" when neon glass decorations shattered, dropping glass inside the spinning ride, Swain said. The ride was immediately stopped and several riders slumped to the floor, Swain said.

The ride, owned by the Bates Brothers Amusement Co., Wintersville, Ohio, was approved by inspectors from the Ohio Department of Agriculture on Wednesday, Swain said.

Building collapses

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A lightning bolt combined with high winds may have toppled the brick wall of a five-story building onto a passing car, killing a young woman and injuring two other people, authorities say.

"We're theorizing that a lightning strike on the east side of the building traveled across the roof, ripping out bricks, mortar and other material, where it caused the weakened west section to collapse," said St. Louis Fire Department spokesman David Fossel.

Jane Morrissey, 21, of Alton, Ill., was killed about 4:40 p.m. Friday when bricks, mortar and roofing material tumbled onto the northbound lanes of Interstate 55 during rush hour, police said.

THE CAR'S driver, Steven Crutcher, 22, of Godfrey, Ill., and passenger Benedict Monicat, 21, who was visiting Ms. Morrissey from Paris, were in satisfactory condition today, police said.

The falling debris ripped the roof off the auto, exposing the car's occupants to falling bricks, lumber and large boxes stored in the building.

A chunk of the roof also demolished a car parked beside the building. No one was in that vehicle, authorities said.

The 100-year-old brick building, on the southeastern edge of the downtown district, houses Welsh Industries, a manufacturer of baby carriages. Workers had ended their shift at the plant about 30 minutes before the storm hit, and no one was in the building during the collapse, Charles Ceresia, a company vice president said.

CRUTCHER told police that he stopped on the traffic-clogged highway when he saw debris on the road ahead.

A police spokesman said Crutcher thought he was near a tornado. Winds as high as 55 mph were recorded at the height of the storm, a weather service official said.

St. Louis Building Inspector Patricia Rheinheiner said the high winds from the storm could have contributed to the wall's collapse. "It's probably a combination of wind and the weight on the wall," she said after an brief, informal inspection of the damage.

Police detoured northbound traffic for about five hours until wrecking crews had cleared away some of the weakened portion of the plant. St. Louis Public Safety Director Thomas Nash said an independent contractor would attempt to tear away the the remaining dangerous section this weekend.

Caresia said there had been no previous sign of weakness in the collapsed portion of the block-long plant.

Nigerian presidential candidate Chief Obafemi Awolowo addresses a rally in Benin City, Nigeria on Thursday. Awolowo, of the Unity Party of Nigeria is one of three leading candidates forecasting victory in the final hours before the presidential election. The campaign is a crucial test of participatory democracy in Africa's most populous country.

Voting in Nigeria proceeds smoothly

By W. JOSEPH CAMPBELL

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Most Nigerians heeded appeals for calm Saturday and endured long lines as they voted in presidential elections, renewing the fragile democracy of Africa's most populous country.

The national election was the first conducted by civilians in Nigeria since 1964, when disputed, violence-ridden voting set in motion events leading to 13 years of military rule. The past violence contributed to fears that civil strife would accompany Saturday's voting.

The military ran the country for 13 years and organized the elections of 1979.

Reports from across the country Saturday generally spoke of orderliness at polling places, where police kept guard.

The incumbent and favorite among the six candidates, Shehu Shagari, predicted he would be returned to a second four-year term.

Shagari's leading rivals, Chief Obafemi Awolowo, 74, and Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe, 78, also expressed confidence as the vigorous, seven-month campaign closed.

Shagari, 58, and Awolowo, the runner-up in the 1979 presidential race, are expected to win a sizable portion of the popular vote.

Because the votes are being hand-counted, returns are not expected before Monday or Tuesday.

The news agency of Nigeria said the turnout was "impressive at most polling stations." More than 65 million people were registered.

A tour of more than 30 Lagos polling places, many of them makeshift aluminum sheds, revealed few difficulties and considerable patience. Voters at some booths were said to have begun forming lines well before polls opened at 7 a.m. (2 a.m. EDT). They close at 6 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT).

Other voters said they waited more than an hour to apply their inked thumbprint to paper ballots bearing the symbols of Nigeria's six political parties.

"I don't mind waiting — it's not too long," said Evelyn Okikiade, who was about to vote for the first time in her 27 years. "It's my civil right."

Alluding to the calm in the line of voters she joined, she said, "There's no violence, no quarrels: It's a good sign for Nigeria."

Explosion damages part of synagogue

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — An explosion broke windows and damaged part of a synagogue on Saturday, a few hours before President Marais Viljoen was to attend a service there, police said.

There were no injuries. Police said the cause of the explosion was unknown, but Heather Mendel, wife of temple Rabbi Norman Mendel, said she believed it was caused by a bomb.

The blast, before dawn in Temple Israel in the city's high-rise district, was heard more than two miles away.

A police spokesman said the rear of the synagogue and the congregation's community hall were badly damaged and windows broken in the synagogue and nearby buildings.

Mrs. Mendel said the president, Israeli Ambassador F. Lankin and other dignitaries were going to attend a 10 a.m. service marking the 50th anniversary of the establishment of Reform Juadaism congregations in South Africa.

After the explosion, the service was switched to Temple Emanuel in the nearby Johannesburg surburb of Parktown, she said.

Rabbi Gunther Plaut of Cincinnati, Ohio, and president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, took part in the service.

Temple Israel, with a congregation of about 600 families, is in the Hillbrow neighborhood near the city center. The majority of South Africa's 120,000 Jews are Orthodox.

World Council of Churches prepares position papers

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — After an all-night vigil for peace, the World Council of Churches assembly faced Saturday a week of preparing position papers on major world issues such as human rights.

The peace vigil began about sunset Friday with an open-air gathering of about 3,500 people for prayers, litanies, songs and pageantry, an activity that continued until dawn even as the crowd dwindled to a few hundred.

But it swelled again for a culminating Eastern Orthodox worship service in the morning sunlight on Saturday, the 38th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Japan.

As the 18-day assembly headed into its final week, proposed statements on some of the issues already were under consideration, including sweeping denunciations of the production or use of nuclear weapons and also of widespread human rights violations.

But numerous delegates pressed for changes, some insisting that human rights abuses be identified more specifically, particularly in the Soviet Union.

Citing harsh anti-religious laws in Communist Albania, the Rev. David Russell, a Baptist leader of Bristol, England, said, "We must bring these matters out in the open much more fully and clearly. Freedom and religious freedom must be championed with more vigor than ever before."

Conditions behind the Iron Curtain are touchy subjects for the assembly, whose 900 voting delegates include 143 from Eastern bloc countries. The assembly represents 300 denominations totaling about 500 million Christians around the earth.

Konrad Raiser, a German Lutheran and the council's Switzerland-based deputy general secretary, said public statements often aren't the best way to advance religious liberty in the Soviet area.

"Various approaches have been made, and some of them quite successfully," he told a news conference. "The freedom of the Russian Orthodox Church has increased very substantially."

He also said there has been a "very dramatic" advance in general religious rights in the Soviet region, "not the least due to interventions by the Russian Orthodox Church."

Raiser said the council "is never ambivalent about religious liberty as some critics say."

Controversial Archbishop of Zambia resigns

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A Zambian archbishop, called to Rome for investigation for healing practices that some described as voodoo, has resigned his post, the Vatican announced Saturday.

Pope John Paul II accepted the resignation of the Most Rev. Emmanuel Milingo as archbishop of Lusaka and primate of Zambia, the Vatican said in a brief statement.

"I am not a witch doctor," Milingo has written in defense of his faith healings.

He could not be reached for comment Saturday despite several telephone calls to the Roman monastery where he is staying.

After Milingo ignored repeated warnings to stop his faith healings, the Vatican summoned him to Rome 16 months ago for what it said were medical tests. Milingo will remain an archbishop, but in a new post — special delegate to the Pontifical Commission for Migration and Tourism.

The resignation of the popular, 53-year-old prelate could complicate relations between the Roman Catholic Church and many of Africa's 50 million Roman Catholics.

For years, the Roman Catholic Church has wrestled with the problem of how much local culture to allow in religious services in Africa, where the number of Catholics is growing by 2 million a year — the fastest rate of any continent.

After Milingo's recall in April 1982, a group of angry Zambians threatened to break with the church.

One million of the 6 million people in Zambia, in Central Africa, are Roman Catholics.

Milingo's new post means he will probably have to stay in Rome for some time, Vatican observers said.

No replacement for him as archbishop was announced.

A month ago Milingo was summoned to a 20-minute meeting with the pope at the Vatican. No details of the audience were released.

Sources who asked not to be named said that during his stay in Rome, Milingo was questioned several times by Vatican officials and underwent medical and psychological tests.

Bomb blasts in Salvadoran capital

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A bomb damaged an Economy Ministry building in the capital and Salvadoran troops battled guerrillas in at least three provinces, sources said Saturday.

A guard at the ministry's statistics office said the blast late Friday destroyed a metal door and a parked car. He said no one was injured.

The bomb apparently was set by leftist rebels fighting the right-wing government, but the guard said no rebel propaganda was left at the scene.

The underground guerrilla Radio Venceremos said rebels killed 19 members of the U.S.-trained Atonal Battalion in an ambush Friday at the village of La Loma, 65 miles east of San Salvador in Usulutan province.

The broadcast said six guerrillas were killed by machine-gun fire from army helicopters that rushed to the area.

The report could not be confirmed. There has been no telephone contact with Usulutan province for two months.

A major army drive continued in the northern province of Chalatenango, where 1,500 troops have been pushing guerrillas toward the Honduran border 60 miles north of the capital.

Government sources in Osicala, 115 miles northeast of San Salvador, said guerrillas on Friday attacked government positions on Cacahuatique hill in Morazan province. The hill has been the site of several heavy firefights in the past two months.

Walesa makes appeal

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa says the post-martial law policies of the Communist government are repressive, fraudulent and "lead nowhere."

Walesa also accused the government of breaking the August 1980 agreement that created his now-outlawed union. Polish Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski claims he is honoring the agreement by allowing small, state-controlled unions.

"On the third anniversary of August 1980, I appeal to all of you who have given us your mandate and support to address your opinions and demands to those who guaranteed they would implement the agreements", Walesa said in a three-page statement distributed Friday to Western correspondents in Warsaw.

Authorities have treated the 1980 accord "like a piece of waste-paper," he said, and have honored only one of 21 concessions it made in the pact: allowing live radio broadcasts of Roman Catholic masses.

"WHAT has remained of the August agreements?" he asked. "What has remained are radio mass on Sunday and empty words about the righteousness of the workers' protest in 1980. The whole rest was treated like a piece of waste paper."

"Beautiful words combined with deprivation of more and more rights lead nowhere," he said.

Walesa's statement did not mention a call by the Solidarity underground for workers to show support for the union by boycotting public transport for two hours on Aug. 31, the anniversary of the agreements.

The boycott, planned at the height of rush hour, appeared calculated to spark demonstrations.

THE statements by Walesa and the Solidarity underground fell short of the calls for defiance last summer by union supporters who protested throughout Poland on Aug. 31, 1982.

In a telephone interview Thursday, Walesa voiced support for the fugitive leaders' cautious call for demonstrations, but said their statement should have included an appeal for more union supporters to join the underground.

WALESA said the tough special regulations introduced by the government in place of martial law "limit the freedom of individuals... Limit the freedoms of the working class... (and) strike at the freedom of thought and self-management of universities."

The amnesty, Walesa said, "stopped half-way, ignoring the demands of the Church, which appealed for a general amnesty for political prisoners."

Seychelles holds first election since mercenary-led coup attempt

VICTORIA, Seychelles (AP) — A new one-party legislature will be chosen Sunday in the Seychelles' first election since a mercenary-led coup attempt and an army mutiny last year rocked these islands north of Madagascar.

Only members of President France Albert Rene's Seychelles People's Progressive Front can run. Senior government officials are stressing that whatever the results, they will not challege Rene or his leftist policies.

They also conceded in interviews Saturday that neither the prospective candidates nor the Indian Ocean republic's 65,000 people have shown much interest in elections for 23 elected seats in the 25-member assembly.

Two of the assembly seats are to be filled later by presidential nominees to represent mostly migrant residents of the outer islands.

New austerity measures, not Sunday's election, are the talk of the archipelago. Bus fares have been doubled recently, import duties have been increased and all sales now carry a 5-percent sales tax.

The socialist government has brought in free education, health care and public transport. The belt-tightening began after discovery that tourist revenues, accounting for close to 90 percent of foreign exchange earnings, cannot cover expenses.

The vote follows Friday's release of the only Seychellois detained in the bungled coup attempt Nov. 25, 1981, by South African-based mercenaries.

Jean Dingwall, a businessman, was pardoned by Rene, who last month freed six foreign mercenaries, four of whom had been sentenced to hang.

Rene's own popularity reportedly has risen in recent months despite the new economic austerity measures. It had dropped sharply after the army mutiny in August 1981, put down by airlifted Tanzanian troops, Western residents said.

Seychellois picked at random said they would not bother to vote Sunday. David Thomas of the president's office said a 50-percent turnout would be considered good.

The lack of interest is demonstrated by the fact that 17 of the 23 constituencies are being contested by one candidate each. Only four incumbents are seeking re-election.

Thatcher released from hospital

WINDSOR, England (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher emerged from the hospital in sunglasses Saturday, pronouncing herself "101 percent fit" three days after surgery on her right eye.

"I'm feeling fine, but then I always am," Mrs. Thatcher, 57, quipped to reporters outside Princess Christian Hospital in Windsor, west of London. "I can see clearly this morning. I can see everything that's wrong with you."

Thatcher

The sunglasses failed to hide a light bruise around her right eye. She admitted to "just a little bit of soreness."

Mrs. Thatcher was driven by limousine from the hospital to her country retreat, Chequers, and is planning a vacation in Switzerland this week.

'Naval craft fired on boats'

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The Defense Ministry acknowledged Saturday that naval craft fired on two Japanese fishing boats while hunting for a North Korean spy vessel.

The Korean statement, in the name of ministry spokesman Brig. Gen. Park Jong-shik, said two Korean destroyers came upon the fishing boats while searching for a communist "mother spy ship" in the Korean Straits on Friday.

It said the Japanese boats ignored orders to halt, and the destroyers fired warning shots, but quickly apologized after it was determined they were just fishing boats.

South Korean forces said they killed four North Korean commandos attempting to land near Wolsong on the southeast coast. The ministry claimed Friday it sank a vessel off Wolsong which one official said was a "child spy ship" from the alleged mother ship.

Gunmen kill coffee planter

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Gunmen shot and killed an Italian-born coffee planter on his veranda and apparently kidnapped his 14-year-old son in the eastern city of Mutare in the Burma valley, police said Saturday.

John Parodi, 67, was shot in the chest. The son, Giovanni, was missing and guns were stolen from the home, police said.

Parodi's wife and 20-year-old daughter were away at the time.

The valley adjoins Mozambique, and police said they suspect the killers are members of the Mozambique National Resistance, a guerrilla army battling the Marxist government of President Samora Machel in that country. Police say the rebels often cross into Zimbabwe to raid stores and homes.

Troops, copter strike stongholds

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — About 100 Thai troops supported by helicopter gunships Saturday struck suspected strongholds of Khun Sa, known as the opium warlord of the "Golden Triangle," a military officer said.

The attack in areas around Baan Hin Taek in the northern province of Chiang Rai followed a similar strike Thursday across the border in Burma, he said, where 1,000 Burmese troops killed more than 20 of Khun Sa's gunmen.

Khun Sa heads the Shan United Army which claims to be fighting for independence of the Shan ethnic minority in Burma. But most Thai and Burmese authorities regard the army as principally a drug trafficking outfit in the Golden Triangle, a poppy-rich region that also includes part of Laos.

Occidental signs oil exploration accord with China

PEKING (AP) — Two groups headed by Occidental Petroleum Corp. of Los Angeles signed contracts with China on Saturday to drill for oil in the South China Sea.

"We are dealing with huge structures in the multibillion-barrel range," Occidental chairman Armand Hammer said in announcing the pact. "This is one of the largest unexplored basins in the world."

Occidental became the first U.S. oil company to win offshore oil exploration rights in China in a round of competitive bidding that began last August among 33 foreign companies.

Another American company, ARCO, already has begun drilling south of Hainan island under an agreement made outside the bidding process. So have Japanese and French firms.

Hammer said Occidental expected to begin drilling by early next year. The contract period runs for 15 years from the beginning date of a commercial discovery.

The Chinese are gambling that large reserves of oil lie untapped offshore and that, with help from Western oil firms, they will eventually become one of the world's leading oil exporters.

Each of the Occidental-led groups won rights to about 500 square miles, located in depths of up to 650 feet and at distances up to 140 miles from shore. There were no estimates released on the amount of reserves in the two areas.

Under the contracts, signed with China's National Offshore Oil Corp., the groups must put $120 million into the exploration — with half the money coming from Occidental — during the first three years of a five-year exploration period.

If commercial oil is found, China puts up 51 percent of the production cost and the oil will be divided up according to terms that were not made public.

The groups are committed to train Chinese personnel and have agreed to transfer certain technology needed by China's oil industry.

Occidental's partners in one exploration area are Societe Nationale Elq Aquitaine and Total Exploration, both of France, and Tricentrol Exploration Overseas Ltd. of Britain.

In the other area, Occidental's partners are Hispanica de Petroleos S.A. of Spain; Ampol Exploration Ltd. and CSR Ltd., both of Australia, and Triceptrol.

The most powerful members of the community meet behind closed doors for secret deliberations of the Star Chamber, starring Michael Douglas and Hal Holbrook in this provocative thriller.

'Star Chamber' examines concept of 'justice for all'

A Review

"The Star Chamber," starring Michael Douglas, takes its name from an English court of law established by Henry VII in 1487. So named because of the star-studded ceiling in the room where the court met, the Star Chamber became another means of exacting justice when traditional ways had failed.

Just where this kind of self-styled justice fits into today's law is one question Douglas, as Judge Steven Hardin, takes on and literally wrestles to the ground.

It is an intriguing story founded on technicalities — legal technicalities. One that starts with the dismissal, by Judge Hardin, of two cases in which the defendants were apparently guilty but arrested and searched illegally. Because of the brutality of the crimes - one involving child mutilation and pornography and the other about the killing of senior citizens for their welfare checks — Judge Hardin is compelled to face his own conscience and what he sees is Justice with her blindfold slipping.

Unable to live with the results of his legal actions, Hardin turns to a law school mentor (Hal Holbrook), Judge Benjamin Caufield, for advice and finds himself drawn into a group of eight Superior Court judges intent on their own brand of retribution, the Star Chamber.

What then at first seems to answer Hardin's problems, soon becomes a nightmare when he realizes two men who are to be "eliminated," are innocent. Finding his own answer to the problem of justice for all provides for the resolution of "The Star Chamber."

A movie dependent on pacing, "The Star Chamber" has a riveting and involving opening. We feel the anguish of the tortured father whose son has been violated and murdered, the futility of Hardin as he grapples with the law he has always seen in mythical proportions. And Douglas as Hardin gives an impressive and solid performance as the keeper of that law.

But "The Star Chamber" is too long in trying to set up the premise of the judicial system unable to respond to its own calling. So much so, that the climax is anticlimatic, a resolution already resolved.

Even so, "The Star Chamber" is thought-provoking. It asks tough questions of us — such as what can we do when the very system of law we have devised to protect us, protects the criminals?

Set in scenes of foggy, relentless, big city nights and smoke-filled court rooms, "The Star Chamber" is easy on the eyes. This technique for producing a fine and natural mist is done by boiling mineral oil and is only one of several ways in which director and co-writer (screenplay also by Roderick Taylor), Peter Hyams, achieved the special mood. He also incorporated his design of a daylight lamp for outdoor scenes, using an 18 million candlepower light he has modified from a previous design.

Rounding out the effort are the fine performances from Yaphet Kotto ("Alien") as Detective Harry Lowes, Sharon Gless (TV's "Cagney and Lacey") as Hardin's supportive and loving wife, and James Sikking (TV's "Hill Street Blues") as the father of the murdered child.

"The Star Chamber," rated R, is a defense of the legal system of this country despite the loopholes, the inadequacies. It deals with tough issues and rough people and takes its language from the streets but brings us closer to understanding both sides.

'Hillbilly Queen' of radio, stage, screen dies at age 66

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Judy Canova, whose comic, down-home singing and acting made her the hillbilly queen of radio, stage and movies during the 1930s and 1940s, has died at age 66.

Miss Canova died Friday at Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital where she had been hospitalized with a lingering illness, Administrator Morrison Chamberlain said. Her family said she died of cancer.

Born Juliette Canova on Nov. 20, 1916, in Starke, Fla., she sang in clubs and on radio while in high school before going to New York City with her sister Anne and brother Zeke.

The trio sang hillbilly songs at The Village Barn in Greenwich Village before Miss Canova was noticed by bandleader Paul Whiteman and signed to his national radio show.

SHE stayed with Whiteman for 12 years and later was a regular singing guest on the Edgar Bergen and Charley McCarthy radio show.

Following a stint on the "Woodbury Soap Half Hour" radio series, she had her own radio program, "The Judy Canova Show."

In 1937 she appeared on Broadway in the "Ziegfeld Follies," and later in "Calling All Stars" and "Yokel Boy." She toured with "No, No, Nanette."

Miss Canova signed a film contract with Republic Pictures in 1940, where her cornpone humor shone in such movies as "Scatterbrain," "Sis Hopkins" and "Joan of Ozark."

Fearing the bubble would burst, she and husband Philip Rivero carefully invested her money, giving her financial independence.

"I HAD an eight-picture contract which gave me half of the profits — the first such deal that any star got, I believe," she said in a 1960 interview. "After the first six pictures I didn't like the way things were going, so I just decided to quit."

Lillian Gish Hollywood's first superstar

By JOHN STARK
Hearst Feature Service

ENTERTAINMENT

Before Streep, before Streisand, before Taylor, Bergman, Crawford, Deitrich, Hepburn, Davis, Garbo, Bow and Swanson, there was Gish.

Lillian Gish, Hollywood's first superstar, made her cinematic debut in 1912 for the legendary director, D.W. Griffith. She has just completed her 101st film, and will start her 102nd next month.

Gish, who never married, lives in New York. She's lovely: White hair, blue eyes, delicate features. The World Almanac says she's 87; she says 84. Whatever, time has played favorites. Gish still looks like the ethereal beauty in "Birth of a Nation," Orphans of the Storm," "Broken Blossoms," "La Boheme," "The Wind," "The Scarlet Letter," "Way Down East" and "Intolerance," rocking the cradle of time.

Why is she called the greatest dramatic actress of silent films? Why was she perfect for those Victorian melodramas? What was her appeal? To quote British film scholar David Shipman, she was "a wraith-like heroine in Raggedy Ann clothes gazing passively and innocently at the world which is wronging her so cruelly."

In other words, she could break your heart. Have you ever seen Gish move? Like fog.

THE ACTRESS may seem frail, but she's of hardy German stock, born and reared in Springfield, Ohio. Lillian's Midwestern roots, and a mother who refused to compliment her, kept her humble. "Griffith once told me I was as pretentious as an old shoe," she said. "How can you be vain seeing your face on screen? All you see are its faults.

Her mind is in focus; her diction is perfect: "Since the age of 5, I was told to speak loud and clear or they'll get another little girl."

Gish is on tour on behalf of the late George Cukor's "A Star Is Born," helping raise money to further film restoration, a favorite cause. However, mention "Greed," Erich von Stroheim's seven-hour, 42-reel epic, shot in the early 1920s, and her tune changes. She's not encouraging anyone to find its 32 missing reels.

"All he did was take that book ("McTeague," by Frank Norris) and photograph it page by page," she said. "To say that man's a good director is crazy. He and two German friends played extras in our films. When Dorothy (her late sister, who also became a film star) and I saw them coming, we'd cross the street to avoid them. They scared us. They were full of scars and never smiled. Stroheim was a fake. He told us he was a great director. Imagine, shooting 86,000 feet of film!"

Although Gish's heyday was the silent era, she's kept her career alive on stage, in TV and in an occasional feature film, such as "The Night of the Hunter," "The Unforgiven" and "Duel in the Sun," for which she received her only Oscar nomination. She was a striking presence in Robert Altman's "A Wedding," playing a grandmother who dies the day her grandson gets married.

"I TOOK THE PART because Altman told me I was to die with comedy. I thought, isn't that wonderful. I've died in every way known, but never with humor. I thought the movie was true and funny.

'Only Fric and Frac made sense'

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Whether the director yells action or cut, Paul Williams and Pat McCormick carry on as usual. Buddies for 10 years, the two actors have a relationship like Laurel and Hardy or Fric and Frac. "Only Fric and Frac made sense," quips McCormick.

The pair are attacking a tray of fruit and cheese in their hotel suite as if they hadn't seen food in a month. Williams curls up on the floor beside the low table, trading jokes and brie with McCormick, who sits on a sofa smoking a fat cigar between bites.

"Do you know that when a giraffe starts his lunch, he's still not through swallowing his breakfast?" McCormick asks.

"I didn't know that," responds Williams on cue.

"It's just one of those things," answers McCormick. "I'm just testing it on you and it's not going on the air."

"Good. It sure isn't," teases Williams.

Their new film "Smokey and the Bandit — Part 3" opens across the country in mid-August, featuring the pair once again as Big and Little Enos, the crafty tormentors of Sheriff Buford T. Justice, played by Jackie Gleason.

"Making 'Smokey 3' was probably the most enjoyable experience of my entire career," says Williams. "I lived on Alfred Bloomingdale's houseboat for the three-and-a-half months we shot in Florida. I didn't want to leave. We were treated awfully nice there. And Gleason was hot. He's probably one of the great comedy editors."

"I've made 14 movies and this was the most fun of any of them," agrees McCormick. "It was great working with Gleason. We tried to focus a lot on comedy in this film and it's basically a comic triangle between Gleason, Paul and me. 'Smokey 3' has been honed into a real fast, terrifically funny romp."

One of McCormick's favorite times during the filming was "watching Paul shrivel in the hot tub scene. We were in there three hours and it was hot. Then Paul stayed in there another three months to get in the Guiness Book of Records as the shrivel champ."

The duo worked together in the first two "Smokeys" and also on the ABC-TV Movie of the Week, "Rooster," the pilot for a half-hour TV series. "Working together is like being on a vacation," states Williams. "When we do get together to work, because we're best friends."

"We bring a lot to it," McCormick finishes for him. "There have been times on the set when we'd get together between takes and say 'What if you weren't there?'" says Williams. "We'd go nuts," adds McCormick.

Local music teacher achieves recognition

Leslie S. Ring has achieved special professional recognition by the Music Teachers National Association as a nationally certified teacher of music education.

She was recommended for this advanced professional standing by the Texas Music Teachers Association. She was judged on the basis of academic achievement and professional standards in the field of music pedagogy, including musical competence, teaching preparation and successful performing and teaching experience.

Mrs. Ring taught music in Kansas and California before moving to Midland. While in California, she presented music workshops to teachers and their classes and selected and prepared musical segments for a humanities work guide and book for California classroom teachers, the "Hand of Man" project.

She developed and teaches "Body Rhythmics and Music Awareness" at St. Luke's Child Development Program here. She also teaches private lessons. Mrs. Ring is recording secretary for Midland Music Teachers Association.

The MNTA Certification Plan, adopted in 1967, is a national standard for the evaluation and recognition of qualified music teachers. Individual teacher certification is maintained through continuing education, performance and profession involvement.

Founded in 1876, MTNA was the first professional music association in the United States. Its membership, which exceeds 19,000, represents music teachers in independent studios, conservatories and music schools, private schools and institutions of higher learning. Its primary goal is to raise the level of musical performance, understanding and teaching in the United States.

Enterprise looks for Spock, but he's behind the camera

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — On screen, the crew of the USS Enterprise will be looking for Mr. Spock. But all the while the pointy-eared Vulcan will be behind the camera, directing his first feature film — "Star Trek III: The Search for Spock."

"We start shooting in a few weeks," said Leonard Nimoy, who has portrayed the stoically logical character through the "Star Trek" series' successful television run and two movies, "Star Trek: The Motion Picture" and "Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan."

Spock's apparent demise in "Star Trek II" almost derailed the film when Paramount Pictures was deluged with letters protesting the character's death.

"What can I say? It's flattering," Nimoy said in a recent interview referring to the fuss over Spock. "But it can also be troublesome. You don't want to feel you're being led to your story. You'd like to think your own ideas have some merit."

Spock's future is a closely guarded secret.

"What form he's in, what condition he's in, whether he's energy or matter, will hopefully be something audiences will enjoy. We hope to pull off a few surprises," said Harve Bennett, the executive producer of "Star Trek II" who is returning for the third episode.

Others back for the Spock search include William Shatner as Adm. James T. Kirk, DeForest Kelly as Dr. Leonard "Bones" McCoy, James Doohan as Chief Engineer Montgomery "Scotty" Scott, Walter Koenig as Cmdr. Pavel Chekov, George Takei as Cmdr. Sulu and Nichelle Nichols as Lt. Uhura.

Robert Kennedy Jr. cited for marine safety violations

Kennedy

BOSTON (AP) — Robert F. Kennedy Jr., son of the late senator, has been cited for safety violations and for operating an unregistered boat after his disabled craft was towed from the sea, the Coast Guard says.

Coast Guard spokesman Peter Hopkinson said Saturday the 16-foot boat was towed to Osterville on July 31 after its engine failed.

He said Coast Guard officials went on board as part of a routine check of disabled boats, and found that it had no life jackets, flares or horns, and was unregistered.

None of the four people on board had identification or proof of registration, officials said. But the Coast Guard called the Kennedy compound in Hyannis Port and confirmed through Ethel Kennedy, wife of the slain senator, that she had purchased the boat.

LONDON (AP) — British rock star Elton John returned home Saturday from a singing engagement in South Africa saying he was not worried about criticism for his appearance in the racially separated nation.

John, 36, returned to London after an appearance with fellow rock singer Rod Stewart at Sun City, the South African luxury resort.

Many top entertainers, including Frank Sinatra and Glen Campbell, have played the resort despite criticism because of South Africa's apartheid, the official policy of racial separation.

"I'm a musician, not a politician," he said. "I go all over the world to take a look at places for myself.

Many veterinarians discourage the use of "home remedies" like garlic and diatomaceous earth to control ticks and intestinal worms in dogs. But some people — including one former St. Louis Zoo veterinarian — point out that all medications once derived from plants and claim that veterinary "folk medicine" is effective.

Home remedies used for pets raise questions

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Is garlic effective in combating fleas and ticks on dogs?

Will diatomaceous earth eliminate intestinal worms and do away with the need for over-the-counter preparations or those prescribed by a veterinarian?

The answer to both questions is an unequivocal maybe.

At one time, all medications were gleaned from the plant world.

Penicillin, for instance, had its beginnings in mold. Digitalis — employed in controlling certain heart ailments — originally came from the foxglove flower. And garlic was once almost universally used to reduce high blood pressure.

But with the growth of a multi-billion dollar industry that manufactures synthetic drugs, the use of "home remedies" is now widely discounted by doctors and veterinarians alike.

"I'm aware of garlic being used to control fleas and ticks," said a spokesman for the San Diego Zoo. "But it's an outdated concept of veterinary medicine and is not used here."

Dr. Eric Miller of the St. Louis Zoo concurs: "There is no proof that garlic is effective on fleas and ticks. I know of no zoos that use such home remedies".

A Midland veterinarian, who requested anonymity, also doubts the effectiveness of what he refers to as "folk remedies."

"It's an interesting subject," he said. "But it's superstitious witchcraft medicine."

He and other veterinarians, however, say most over-the-counter flea and tick products — including collars — display a limited effectiveness.

They also admit that to their knowledge no formal studies have been conducted on the issue of "veterinary folk medicine."

But advocates of home remedies think they know why no such studies have been done.

"It's probably economics," said Dr. Joel Wallach. "It would be pretty hard for pharmaceutical companies to get a patent on garlic."

Wallach is an ex-newspaper columnist and a former veterinarian with the St. Louis Zoo. He's now a naturopathic physician who operates three clinics in Portland, Ore., and has recently published a 1200-page book on animal care: "Diseases of Exotic Pets."

"It deals somewhat with home remedies," he said. "Yes, there's a certain amount of validity to them. All kinds of plants have remedial effects. They do work. And they lack the potential toxicity of commercial chemicals.

Moving: Count on costs

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Moving. The third most traumatic experience behind death and birth, according to statistics.

Moving across the nation or even down the street can arouse anxiety. Who's going to move grandma's china cabinet? Or what about Aunt Minnie's ashes in that urn on the fireplace? And how much will the move cost?

With more Midlanders moving out of the city during the current economic slump, some have inquired about the do-it-yourself technique as opposed to professional movers.

But moving companies have become more aggressive in courting the do-it-yourself crowd.

Largely because of the Household Goods Carrier Act of 1980, and changes in America's moving habits, many van lines have been introduced to the fierce world of competition.

While recession-pinched consumers are less likely to afford the higher costs of moving firms, as opposed to renting trucks and doing it themselves, degregulation has opened a new door for mobile America.

Relaxed regulations for interstate moving companies have prompted lower rates and new services not previously allowed. Professional van lines are offering binding estimates, special discounts, guaranteed pick up and delivery and insurance to replace damaged goods at their full price, said Dalton Cribbs, a salesman for Bekins Van Lines in Odessa.

"Each company can offer discounts," he said. "Before, we couldn't. It was strictly a movers' market, now it's a consumers' market."

Four years ago, the Interstate Commerce Commission, which regulates interstate van lines, approved fixed-rate schedules for moving companies such as Bekins and North American Van Lines. The companies could not deviate from the ICC-approved rates.

The average charge for an interstate move in 1981, based on an average shipment 5,711 pounds going 1,114 miles, totaled $2,100, including $1,296 for transportation and $700 to $800 for packing, loading and other service charges, according to the Household Goods Carriers' Bureau.

Now, across-state-line moves can be done at relatively competitive prices — depending on a person's priorities.

"If you do it yourself, it's cheaper," said Bekins' manager. "But it's a lot of work and damage could occur. It's easier with the moving van lines, but more expensive."

Although truck rental companies — such as U-Haul and Ryder — have enjoyed a significant pricing advantage over moving companies, the do-it-yourself outfit has been forced to become more versatile.

Young Odessan sees tattoo as art, skin as canvas

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Kevin Dalman believes it's a walking, talking, breathing art form.

Tattooing.

Dalman calls it the world's "second-oldest profession." Egyptian mummies dating back to 1300 B.C. bear evidence of blue tattoo marks. Throughout history, many races and cultures have practiced the art. Even today, the natives of southeastern New Guinea consider tattoos on women as indications of great beauty.

The art is practiced daily by Dalman in his shop at 1407 N. Grant in Odessa.

Only 21, Dalman already is an eight-year veteran, having made his first tattoo as a stripling of 13. But that was only the culmination of much practice and apprenticeship at the hands of his then-stepfather.

Born in Illinois and raised in Houston, Dalman studied diligently to learn the trade. "Before I made my first tattoo I knew how to mix the dyes, I knew how to shadow it, how to color it, learned to mop floors, everything," he said, to the buzz of a tattoo machine as he worked on the upper arm of a young man from Iowa. "I learned the whole nine yards before they turned me loose on grapefruit. I practiced on grapefruit. I messed up more grapefruit than you can imagine."

But it eventually paid off, and by 14 he was instructing others in the technique.

Dalman believes the specific touches he learned from his former stepfather set him apart from many tattoo practicioners. "My first tattoo was a lot better than most people were doing at that time who had been tattooing for 20 years, because it was more artistic," he said. "My stepfather was a portrait painter before he was a tattoo artist and he applies a lot of art to his work. That's what he taught me.... Skin and canvas are a lot different. He showed me the techniques that can be used on skin rather than all the techniques — you can't make a living painting portraits."

During the next few years Dalman tattooed in a Houston shop, in the backrooms of bars, in carnivals, gaining more experience and ability.

Kevin Dalman, left, applies an artistic touch to the upper arm of Ken Allen of Ankeny, Iowa.

"You stop improving, it's time to quit," he said.

Three years ago, he made the move to Odessa, where he and the former stepfather are business partners in the shop.

He has tattooed hundreds of persons since, as only three days has seen him draw a complete blank in the business.

"It's becoming an art form," opined Dalman, who added that "very few find it repulsive anymore."

The acceptance of tattoos in society, he said, has been evidenced by the wide variety of persons he has tattooed.

"I've tattooed assistant surgeons, I've tattooed doctors, I've tattooed lawyers, I've tattooed bums," he noted. "I've tattooed everything."

And why do people have it done?

"Everybody's got a different reason," he said. "It's usually to signify something about your personality."

That persons have a wide range of personalities is evidenced by Dalman's scrapbook of his own custom tattooing — no parts of the body are off limits except the face, hands and feet.

"Wherever else you want it, we can put it," said Dalman.

But he is not without scruples. He refuses to tattoo anyone who is inebriated, and he recently refused to put a tattoo of a stick person on a woman. "I said, 'I have more pride in my work than to do a stick person. I have a little more class than that.' I felt like she was insulting me."

Dalman explained that the mechanics of tattooing involves the implanting of dyes under the skin through a needle that goes in and out at a rate of 60 times a second. By mixing his own dyes, he is able to tattoo skin with any color except silver or chrome — an impossibility, he said. The going rate is $60 for an average tattoo, for which he spends an hour to 90 minutes.

He has spent as long as 12 hours on a single tattoo job, and as much as 20 straight hours tattooing one person after another.

Dalman said the easiest portion of the body to tattoo is the arm. "Anywhere else you get in some difficult binds," he said.

State law prohibits persons under 18 getting tattoos, even with parental consent — a fact which made Dalman somewhat of an oddity: for five years he could administer tattoos but couldn't receive one himself.

He has since made up for it. On his left arm he sports the handiwork of his partner — an African lion complete with flowing mane; which might indicate something about Dalman's Walter Mitty daydreams.

GARY OTT

Old man's story much like that of other drifters

The old man had a scruffy look. His pants were baggy, his shirt old and torn. His gray hair was long, reaching almost to the shoulders. A three-day beard solidified his unkempt appearance. Dirty tennis shoes added just the right charm.

Make no mistake, the man had charisma. Steinbeck could have written a novel about him. A country-western singer could transform him into another Clayton Delaney. Even Norman Rockwell might have had fun with his facial features... especially the brown-stained teeth, the lines of discontent and his peculiar eyes which somehow alternated between happiness and sadness, depending on whether he chose to smile or just stare into outer space.

Usually he opted for the latter.

Why? It's hard to tell.

Still, I wanted to know. The sight of an old man walking the downtown streets of Midland intrigued me. For a brief moment the scene resembled an old movie, the kind that is filmed in New York City and periodically shows up on the late movie, usually in black and white. With the high-rise buildings as a backdrop, the old man — paper sack in hand — slowly trudged to some unknown destination.

I've seen him around town often. Always he is alone, only occassionally nodding to a passer-by. And even then, the other person must nod first. It seems he wants to be left alone. Perhaps to brood. Perhaps to think. The only way to know for sure was to ask.

So I did.

His story was interesting, but not all that different from those told by other drifters you see from time to time on the "other" side of town.

He said he was in his early 50s, though I would have guessed him to be considerably older. The stench of cheap wine provided a strong clue as to what might have caused the rapid aging process. Surprisingly, he laughed a lot. It was a course, gravelly laugh. Still, it was pleasant.

He was from North Carolina orginially, he said, but seemed to take great pride in the fact he had spent much of his adult years traveling. He would re-locate in a new town, find a temporary job and then work until the urge to move on became too strong. This nomadic existance had been ongoing for almost 30 years.

"I don't have a lot of roots," he said, lighting another cigarette. "But, then, I've seen and done more than most people. I don't have any family, not many close friends. Just some vivid memories. Friends die. Memories don't."

Ahh, he's a philosopher too.

Or maybe he was just in the mood to talk. Whatever, he had more to say.

"People let themselves get tied down too much," he said. "They find security by getting into a rut. They think they're happy, but I'm not sure. Look at at them, at their faces. Do they look happy?"

He left the question unanswered, no doubt convinced his point had been made.

"But don't you get tired of it all?" I asked. "The road? The constant moving? Wouldn't it be nice to settle down? To have a home?

"Home is a state of mind," he said, his eyes squinting as the July sun beat down on us. "Until a person becomes content with himself, it doesn't matter where he is. Home. On the road. Wherever. He won't be happy until he learns to like himself.

"That's what I mean about home being a state of mind. I can be just as secure hitching a ride outside of Monroe, La., as you can sitting in front of the TV at your house. If I'm happy and you're not, who's the success and who's the failure?"

He was obviously enjoying himself.

"I only have one goal in life," he said. "When I'm on my deathbed I want to say to myself, 'Well, cowboy, at least you weren't bored. You were given a life and you did the best you could. You searched for answers. And, most of all, you discovered happiness was more than a two-car garage in the suburbs.'"

Moves always involve expense

Instead of only offering a trailer and hitch or truck, U-Haul in Midland, as in other areas, now provides a packing, loading and unloading service.

Whether moving across town or the nation, the do-it-yourself company intends to continue beating professional moving companies' prices by making the move easier — at less cost.

"We're a bonafide 30 percent cheaper than the moving van lines," Jim Carter, U-Haul's moving coordinator said.

"Everyone uses U-Haul...from all econmic backgrounds...from Greentree to the Flats," said U-Haul Manager Carl Curtis. "In the last four or five years, people have gone to larger furniture. They can't handle it themselves. We realized this and began offering an unloading and loading service."

Curtis said U-Haul has a flat rate — depending on the size of the load — for packing and unloading with "no hidden costs."

"Anything under 5,000 pounds going 1,500 miles, I can compete," Cribbs said. "We can get competitive now."

Cribbs added that loads are converted from pounds to cubic feet. With a standardized form in hand, the moving company will send a salesman to the home. Then, the company figures the cost of the move and guarantees that price.

"We don't care how much the load weighs anymore; it's how much room it takes," he said, adding that an 8,000-pound load can be dropped to 5,000 by converting pounds to cubic feet.

"And the price we quote is the price we deliver," Cribbs said, explaining that this is one of the new incentive services. "Even if the salesman missed the weight or the cubic feet, the company eats it. You pay what we quote."

According to Cribbs, a 5,000 pound move with Bekins 1,100 miles across the state line would cost in the neighborhood of $1,852.50 just for transporting the load.

Depending on the amount of furniture, an "average" three-bedroom home would cost an additional $500 to $600 for packing and loading. Total costs, excluding insurance, would run about $2,402.50.

According to Carter, a 24-foot U-Haul truck — which would hold furniture from the "average" three-bedroom home — cost $711 for six days. In addition, a $50 refundable deposit is required.

And gas. Calculating a 24-foot truck that gets seven miles per gallon, with gas at $1.20 a gallon, an 1,100 mile move would cost about $192 in fuel expenses.

This move would total $903 if a person packed, loaded and unloaded his own furnishings.

Because Carter said "there's no such thing as an average three-bedroom home," prices for loading and unloading could vary.

If the loading service was required, U-Haul estimates the cost would be an additional $600, making the total cost $1,503.

"This particuiar load may not run at 30 percent less, but like I said, it depends on the amount and size of furniture," Carter noted.

"There's just no such thing as an average three-bedroom home, but we can still beat the commercial moving companies."

'Remedies' questioned

"But with garlic, there were problems with its consistency because of different growing conditions. Also, there's the smell and inconvenience. We're a convenience-oriented society."

Wallach said he had not heard of diatomaceous earth being used for worms, and suggested that anyone wanting to try garlic for repelling fleas and ticks "should play with it.

"There are no known harmful effects. The amount to use depends on how bad you want the animal to smell."

Diatomaceous earth is a crumbly, talcum-like silica substance that's derived from the shells of single-celled sea organisms called diatoms.

Its uses range from thermal insulation to filter material in swimming pool filters. It can be purchased from swimming pool equipment outlets for about $10 per 50 pounds.

One Midland woman, who asked not to be identified, has been using diatomaceous earth for years and claims it's been 100 percent effective in keeping her dogs free of worms.

"I sprinkle about a teaspoonful on their food every day," she said. "It appears to dissolve, but it's not soluble in water. It works by clogging the digestive tract of worms. The digestive tract of dogs is much larger, so it doesn't hurt them.

"I started using it in 1967 on the advice of a veterinarian. My dogs are checked periodically and have never shown any sign of worms."

On the advice of a Midland woman who shows dogs, she began using garlic about six weeks ago and says it's 80 percent effective on ticks and 90 percent effective on fleas.

"I'm using four garlic capsules a day on each of my dogs because we have a bad flea and tick problem where we live. But most people could probably use one or two a day and be alright.

"I roll them up in small pieces of hamburger or moist dog food. Garlic won't work on heartworm, though — only on intestinal worms.

"I realize there's a lot of controversy about home remedies. But it doesn't hurt to try them. They're cheap and won't harm animals the way some chemicals do."

Auto inspection plan urged

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire, facing a ban on industrial construction here, is urging state and federal officials to negotiate an acceptable auto pollution inspection program.

Texas Air Control Board officials repeatedly have vowed to challenge the Environmental Protection Agency in court if the federal agency bans construction of major new sources of hydrocarbon pollution and cuts off some federal grants to operate state air control programs.

The EPA has threatened to impose the sanctions if an acceptable automobile inspection program is not adopted for Houston and Harris County.

An EPA official told a meeting of an air board committee in Houston Friday that the federal agency is set on enforcing measures that will bring about a 25 percent reduction in pollution from automobiles and light trucks by 1987.

Sanctions will be imposed unless the state agency immediately takes the necessary action, said Dick Whittington, head of the EPA's regional office in Dallas.

Ms. Whitmire said the air board should negotiate with the EPA on modifications that would win approval for an auto inspection program that went into operation here at the beginning of the year.

"This is a time we simply can't afford to have a ban on construction that affords jobs to the people of Houston," the mayor said.

Air board chairman John Blair, who has advocated a court suit against the EPA, said after the hearing he thought the board already had been "compromised, compromised, compromised to death."

Pearland mayor Tom Reid, who also is president of the Houston-Galveston Area Council, said Friday the EPA sanctions could be "very devastating to the entire region."

"We feel the patient is not quite as sick as the doctors may indicate," Reid said. "We also feel that in the attempt to cure this patient, we don't want to kill him with the cure."

The EPA has suggested two changes in the city's current automobile inspection program that would make it acceptable.

Both measures call for changes in the state inspection and maintenance program designed to determine if leaded gasoline has been used in cars which are supposed to use only unleaded fuel and for replacement of a vehicle's catalytic converter if it has been removed or damaged.

The current program consists of a simple visual inspection of autos.

New trial sought for Skelton

ODESSA (AP) — A lawyer seeking a new trial for John C. Skelton says there was not enough evidence for a capital murder conviction in the bombing death of a former employee and alleges Skelton's attorney was ineffective.

Skelton, 54, was convicted of capitl murder July 6 and sentenced two days later to die by injection for the April 1982 slaying of Joe Lee Neal of Odessa. Neal died when a bomb demolished his pickup truck.

Austin attorney Jim Vollers, in a motion filed Friday, alleged the state did not prove Skelton planted the bomb or had someone else do it for him. Vollers also contends other legal errors in the trial "violated this defendant's right to due process of law."

Vollers, a former Texas Court of Criminal Appeals judge, said State District Judge R.L. McKim has 75 days from the time of Skelton's sentincing to rule on the motion.

During the trial, prosecutors linked Skelton to magnets and dynamite believed to have been used in the bomb that killed Neal, and introduced testimony that Skelton several times threatened to kill Neal.

Defense witnesses, however, testified during the trial that Skelton was in Springfield, Mo., when Neal was killed.

Vollers also alleges in the motion that defense counsel "failed to properly prepare for the trial," and "failed ... to adequately enforce the defendant's legal rights during the trial."

"There were various legal issues that should have been raised in the trial that were not raised," Vollers said Friday. Vollers was hired to handle Skelton's appeal shortly after Skelton was sentenced.

Odessa attorney Clifford Hardwick, who defended Skelton during his trial, is no longer handling Skelton's case and would not comment on the motion Friday.

Skelton, Neal's former employer at an Odessa oil field servicing business, also is charged with four counts of solicitation of capital murder.

Young woman leads Human Relations Council

Midlander in Profile

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Even though she's only 24, Gloria Ellis has come a long way. And the slender Midlander with the friendly smile plans to go a lot further in the years to come.

Miss Ellis is currently executive director of the Human Relations Council of Midland, where she works with a two-person staff assisting and referring people with virtually any type of problem.

"I always wanted to help people who were unfortuante," she said, and she started at an early age working as a volunteer at the YMCA. She is active in the church, has served as a Girl Scout leader, and worked for the Salvation Army Social Service in Dallas as well as the Texas Department of Human Resources, child support unit, before coming to the HRC.

MISS ELLIS, the youngest of 10 children, was born in Texarkana. "But we moved here when I was three months old, so I consider myself a Midlander," she said. After earning her bachelor's degree at North Texas State University she returned to the Tall City to work at the HRC.

"It's strange to be 24 and in this position," she admitted. "But I knew I was qualified because I trained two other directors, and I learned from them and their mistakes. I was here by myself for six weeks, so I sort of ran the place myself. They asked me if I wanted the job, and I felt I was already qualified for it."

She said she has thought about going into social work since she was very young. "Years ago, back in junior high, I had a neighbor who was a social worker," she recalled. "She used to come home and tell me stories. I always enjoyed working with people and being involved. When I was in college I did a lot of volunteer work. I knew sitting down all day at a desk and shoving papers wasn't me.

"I know it's not a lot of money, but it's what I want," she continued. "I could get a job with more money, but I don't think I'd enjoy it. I have always been taught to do what you enjoy and you will be satisfied.

"This is an exciting job. You meet different people every day. I like being able to help people, give them information and referrals. I like working with the public."

Miss Ellis is convinced there will be continued demand for social workers in the years to come. "Social work is becoming more widespread," she asserted. "We're getting away from the tradition that social workers have to be in an agency. They are going everywhere: churches, industry, schools."

SHE INTERRUPTED the interview to answer the telephone and give a referral to someone seeking aid paying a utility bill.

Miss Ellis oversees several aspects of the HRC. It has a tenant and landlord relations service, food bank connection, information and referral line, energy crises intervention, weatherization program, Housing Rehabilitation Community Development, neighborhood beautification program and meetings on crime prevention, as well as connections with other community organizations and agencies and assistance in helping people in filling out forms pertaining to Social Security, Medicare, food stamps, etc. It does not provide direct aid such as food, clothing or money, but provides indirect services through referral.

"A lot of people think all we do is housing, because the housing rehabilitation program is so big. Our purpose 10 years ago was to deal with racial problems in the schools with integration," she explained. The stated purpose of the HRC today is to promote understanding and communication between all racial, religious, ethnic and nationality groups in Midland County.

"That's very broad," she laughed. "I'm not saying the purpose is bad, but it's so broad people can't relate to it. A lot of people get confused because we offer too many services. What I'd like to see is two or three major projects. I think people would be able to identify us better and we won't spread ourselves too thin."

THAT IS ONE problem already being faced by the HRC. Miss Ellis said the agency will run out of funding by mid October. The agency is funded locally by the city, Midland College, private donations and foundations. Currently it is asking citizens and various organizations for feedback. "If the community is not interested, we'll close," she said. "The problem is the majority of people think we should stay open, but they don't send us a check. For me, it's hard knowing that the services we provide are valuable to the community and knowing we may have to close."

Once that crisis is overcome, Miss Ellis has other plans.

"One thing I want to accomplish before I go into something else is to work with the elderly," she said: "I have always been afraid of older people and I'd like to work with them to overcome that.

"I don't think I'll be here 10 years from now. I think it's a good place to get experience, but there's no place for advancement. I'd like to get some experience and then get into school social work. I think education is so vital and so many kids are dropping out. Teachers can't do it all." She said she also has plans to return to school and get a master's degree.

"In 10 years I hope to be settled, maybe have a family, active in volunteer work. I wouldn't mind being a coordinator over a group of volunteers. Ten years from now I hope to have accomplished everything I set out to do. But every day your goals change."

IT'S NOT ALWAYS easy being in social work. "My biggest problem is being too emotional. Sometimes I get too involved with a family." She said her field placement supervisor at the Salvation Army in Dallas told her she was too trusting, she wouldn't give up on seemingly hopeless cases. "I didn't want to judge them. I didn't feel it was my place. I wanted to give everyone a chance."

She has had to get a little tougher since that time, but still hates to give up on anyone or anything. "I know I can't change the world overnight, but I can change part of it," she said with determination.

Library's 'new' lot to open

Midland County Public Library patrons beginning Monday will be driving down a new but familiar path to the library parking lot at 301 W. Missouri Ave.

Patrons and library staffers will be parking in the 89 spaces to the rear of the library instead of on temporary lot just to the east of the library, according to Librarian John Deats.

The new lot is the combined site of the razed American Legion building and the library's former parking lot behind the library at 301 W. Missouri Ave.

The new parking arrangement is courtesy of The First National Bank of Midland, Deats said.

Entrance to the lot will be from Missouri Avenue and through the former alley which was between the library's westside and the boot shop, which was razed. Exit will be alongside the other-side of the library and onto Missouri Avenue.

education in brief

Greenwood sets pre-registration

Pre-registration for new students of Greenwood School will be Thursday from 8 a.m. to noon in the cafeteria of the old high school building. Children who will be entering kindergarten or first grade will need a birth certificate.

All students will need an up-to-date immunization record, and new students are required to bring a transcript of previous classes completed. For more information call 689-6364 or 689-6383.

Additional host families sought

There are still openings for host families in Midland's Youth For Understanding International Exchange Program. The program places foreign students in American homes and also gives American teen-agers the opportunity to live in foreign countries.

Host families get firsthand knowledge of customs, habits and experiences of people in foreign countries, while the students get a firsthand impression of life in the U.S. They become members of the host family and take on responsibilities in the household as well as attend school and learn about life in America.

It is not difficult to qualify as a host family. Parents are responsible for providing exchange students with room and board. Students bring spending money and are responsible for personal expenses.

Most students arrive the first week in August and remain for about a year. Some Latin American students arrive in Jauary and leave in July, and an eight-week Americans Overseas Program is available for U.S. students to live abroad during the summer.

Interested persons may contact Paul and Harriett Stelling at 686-8229. Two students have been placed in Midland homes this year, but more families are needed.

Midlanders on UT honor roll

America's Most Respected Authority on Buying Property With NO MONEY DOWN

DR. ALBERT J. LOWRY
"Mr. Real Estate"

...A self-made millionaire ... has become America's foremost, most widely-quoted authority on real estate ...quoted in such high-powered publications as People, Success, Money, Barron's, New York Times ... has appeared on all major TV interview shows ..., author of the bestseller How You Can Become Financially Independent by Investing in Real Estate (Simon & Schuster, rev 1983). Look for his new book, Hidden Fortunes, at your favorite bookstore.

A dream? Absolutely not! Dr. Albert J. Lowry did it. Thousands of people all over the United States and Canada have done it. You, too, can achieve financial independence, regardless of age, sex or experience.

Here's Just A Sample of What We'll Discuss

- How to buy your first home with no down payment.
- How to get 110% financing, even with bad credit
- How to take the "insecurity" out of investing
- How to buy foreclosures at 50¢ on-the-dollar...with no money down and put cash in your pocket
- How to use "O.P.M."– other people's money
- How to legally avoid income tax
- How to find your hidden assets
- How to avoid balloon payments
- How to use balloon payments to your advantage
- Interest-free borrowing from Uncle Sam
- How to get around due-on-sale clause

In the last 10 years, more than 150,000 people have learned his SAFE, SIMPLE, PROVEN STEPS to achieve financial independence. If you can read and write, add and subtract, you can learn how to make BIG MONEY —simply by attending this 90-minute lecture.

You don't need to be a genius to read the economic indicators. We're two million housing units short in the United States . . . and this shortage becomes more critical every year. As fewer homes are built, prices rise. As families grow, the demand for housing units soars.

Let's face facts! People need a place to live. When housing prices are out of sight, PEOPLE RENT! As such, people who own, control or manage rental housing are making fortunes. The law of supply & demand dictates it!

"For years I've been saying that America is becoming a nation of renters. The logical conclusion is that the easiest way to get rich starting right now is to acquire income-producing rental property before prices go SKY HIGH. Believe me, they will!"—Al Lowry

DON'T MISS THIS OPPORTUNITY

ACT NOW! Decide when you'll come. Then come! You'll hear some startling, proven facts that could change your life.

Please bring a pen or pencil because there's plenty of note-taking space in the 16-page guide you'll be given.

Let this be the first step to the financial independence you so richly deserve.

Presentation will be made by an associate of Dr. Lowry

County Commissioners to discuss tax rate

It's time to talk taxes again.

So, the Midland County Commissioners Court will discuss the county's present tax rate, set at 18.03 cents per $100 valuation, in considering the county's 1984 budget in their 9 a.m. Monday meeting in the Midland County Courthouse.

Once again, the commissioners are to rehash proposals for solving the county's jail problems and anticipated violations of jail standards and court orders when they discuss means to build a new jail. The courthouse jail is becoming overcrowded.

In other business, the commissioners are to:

—Discuss service fees for the Justice of the Peace and Small Claims Courts.

—Consider amending the Midland County Subdivision Ordinance.

—Consider Consulting Engineer Bill Harral's proposal to provide inspection services for the construction of water and sewer lines under the federal Community Development Block Grant.

—Consider bids for sidewalk and fence repairs for the Museum of the Southwest.

MISD Trustees

The Midland school board will tour the new addition to Travis Elementary School before meeting in regular session at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday. It will vote to accept the addition and consider purchasing playground equipment for Parker and Santa Rita elementary schools.

Trustees will also hear a summary of the Title I program to improve basic skills of low achievers. The federally-funded program is for those schools with a high percentage of low income students, compared to the district average.

The board will hear a summary of year four of the five-year priorities plan and continue its study of budget items.

The meeting will be held in the board room of the administration building on the corner of Garfield and Louisiana.

City Council

Included in a largely routine, 59-item city council agenda this week are a resolution approving an operational grant for Mid-Tran; a resolution and lease proposal regarding the lease of school property for park development; discussion of the downtown portion of the city's comprehensive plan; and consideration of increasing the number of travel lanes on Midkiff Road from Loop 250 to 400 feet south of Wadley Avenue.

The council meeting starts at 10 a.m. Tuesday in city hall. The public is invited.

Jurors to consider sentence for convicted murdered

CONROE, Texas (AP) — Jurors must decide whether Curtis Paul Harris, convicted for the second time of capital murder in the beating death of a 27-year-old man, should die by injection or spend the rest of his life in prison.

Harris, 21, was convicted Friday after a state court jury deliberated more than 10 hours. The punishment phase of the trial was to begin today.

In 1979, a jury in Bryan convicted Harris of capital murder and sentenced him to death in the slaying of Tim Merka, of Mumford, Texas. The conviction was overturned a year later, and Harris' retrial was moved here on a change of venue.

Merka was killed Dec. 11, 1978, after he stopped to help Harris and three others on a Brazos County road where their car had stalled.

When the car failed to start 30 minutes later, prosecutors argued, Harris beat Merka to death with a tire tool. The group then stole Merka's wallet and his pickup truck, prosecutors said.

During the retrial, defense attorneys Michael McDougal and Jimmie Price argued that the state's key witness, Valarie Rencher, was an accomplice in the murder and her testimony needed to be corraborated.

At the time of Merka's murder, Miss Rencher was 15 and the girlfriend of Harris' brother, Danny Ray, who also was sentenced to death in 1980 for his part in the slaying.

Another man, James Manual, who allegedly held Merka while he was beaten, was given a life sentence.

CAF 'beating wings' for air show

The Confederate Air Force's Desert Squadron will launch its build-up to the squadron's biannual air show at Midland Air Terminal Sept. 3 and 4 by a flying tour to 14 West Texas cities and towns Saturday and Aug. 20.

World War II fighters, bombers and trainers, a post-war jet and civilian-type aircraft, including an aerobatic biplane, will make the tour.

"We're also going to have the West Texas Weekend Fliers, so we'll probably have 50 planes in the sky," said CAF Col. Paul Erdmann, air show chairman. The Experimental Aircraft Association is to join in the two flights.

The Labor Day Weekend air show will include re-enactments of the Pearl Harbor (Tora! Tora!) attack, Jimmy Doolittle's "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," Battles of Midway and the Coral Sea, the Normandy Invasion, the Enola Gay's flight over Hiroshima at the war's end, and the Missing-Man Formation.

Next Saturday, the flight of piston-popping airplanes will fly out of Odessa's Schlemeyer Air Field at 8:01 a.m. en route to stopovers at Andrews at 8:20 a.m.; Seminole at 9:20 a.m.; Monahans at 10:45 a.m.; Pecos at 11:45 a.m.; Crane at 2:05 p.m., and Fort Stockton at 3:05 a.m.

Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins, Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant and news reporters and photographers will be in the flight.

The touring aircraft will be on the ground for about 30 minutes at each stop in promoting the air show and in selling tickets at $5 each.

On Aug. 20, the CAF flight will takeoff at Midland Airpark at 8:01 a.m. for 30-minute layovers at Lamesa at 8:42 a.m., Big Spring at 9:40 a.m., San Angelo at 11:15 a.m., Sonora at 1:20 p.m., Ozona at 2:15 p.m. and McCamey at 3:20 p.m.

On the tour will be the squadron's Col. Patsy Edwards, decked out in the WAC uniform of Patti Andrews of the singing Andrews Sisters.

"We're trying to generate a large turnout for the air show," said Erdmann. The show is being sponsored by the Midland-Odessa-based Desert Squadron.

On the two flights will be the P-51D Mustang, piloted by Col. Dallas Smith, Midland's flying sheriff; B-25 Mitchell, flown by Col. Tom Todd of New Mexico's CAF Wing; T-33, trainer version of the P-80 Shooting Star, flown by Col. Robb "Flippye" Satterfield; L-4 Piper Cub flown by Col. Arnold Phillips, squadron leader; the Royal Air Force Chipmunk, piloted by Erdmann; Pitts Special aerobatic biplane flown by Col. Gene Beggs; T-6 flown by Col. George Coombes; BT-13 "Vibrators" flown by Cols. George Steding, Jim Tilson, Kermit Wilson and Bob Halford; a mock Japanese Kate divebomber flown by Col. Gene Armstrong; other warbirds and aircraft in the EAA and West Texas Weekend Fliers.

Warbirds scheduled to fly in the Sept. 4 air power demonstrations include the B-17 Flying Fortress, B-25 Mitchell, B-29 Superfortress, P-38 Lightning, P-51 Mustang, F4U Corsair, L-4, Curtiss P-40 Warhawk, B-26 Marauder, Grumman Wildcat and Bearcat, Douglas Sykraider, PBY and TBMS.

Farmers, ranchers exempt from sales tax on some items

COLLEGE STATION — Texas farmers and ranchers do not have to pay sales taxes on certain inputs or supplies used in agricultural production, says Dr. Ashley Lovell, an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

However, the producers often pay the sales taxes due to some misunderstandings.

Agricultural producers do not need an "exemption number" to avoid paying the sales tax, but they must file an exemption certificate with each firm or business from which purchases are made, Lovell said.

He suggests that farmers and ranchers have several Texas Sales Tax Exemption Certificates on hand and to file a copy with each supplier they do business with. Certificates may be obtained by telephoning the Texas Comptroller of Public Accounts at 1-800-252-5555, a toll-free number, or by writing the Comptroller's Sales Tax Division, 111 E. 17th St., Austin, Texas 78774.

Food production items were freed from state sales tax in mid-1976. Exempt items, regardless of use, include:

—Feed for farm and ranch animals, including work animals.

—Fertilizers.

—Seeds and annual plants if the products of those are used for human consumption or are sold in the regular course of business.

—Animals which produce products used for food.

—Horses, mules and work animals, including sheep dogs.

Items used exclusively for farming or ranching are exempt when the purchaser files an exemption certificate with the vendor. Home gardens and timber operations are not considered as farming or ranching units.

Exempted farm and ranch items include:

—Chemicals, such as fungicides, insecticides, herbicides and defoliants, used in agricultural production.

—Veterinarian products for farm and ranch animals.

—Machinery and equipment used in food, grass and feed purposes or in building or maintaining roads and water facilities.

—Hand tools, hardware repair parts, irrigation system components, machinery lubricants and repair parts for off-highway use, fencing and corral supplies, storage structures for petroleum and farm products and special purpose agricultural production facilities.

Cotton growers to gather

COLLEGE STATION — Farmers' concerns from government programs to boll weevils will be discussed Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in the annual Western Cotton Production Conference in the Holiday Inn in Las Cruces, N.M..

"The conference is the largest annual event for Western cotton growers," says Dr. Bob Metzer, cotton specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Sessions will deal with the worldwide cotton supply, the payment-in-kind program, results of a field comparison between cotton strippers and pickers in Oklahoma, irrigation techniques, and controlling root rot and pests, including the boll weevil.

Adjust pumping rate, too

COLLEGE STATION — Some farmers with center-pivot and linear-move irrigation systems are changing from high or moderate pressure sprinklers to low-pressure sprinklers or spray nozzles to reduce pumping costs.

While this chance can reduce fuel costs and improve application efficiency in some cases, it may also lead to runoff when soils do not absorb water fast enough, says an engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

If low-pressure sprinklers or nozzles are used, the pumping rate should be adjusted accordingly, the engineer said.

'Heritage' theme of meeting

COLLEGE STATION — The Texas County Agricultural Agents Association's annual meeting today through Wednesday in Wichita Falls will be keyed to the theme "TCAAA Western Heritage and Growth."

The meeting will include the recognition of the organization's seven recipients of the "Man of the Year Award in Texas Agriculture" and the presentation of the Distinguished Service Award to eight outstanding county agents.

Some disabled farmers cope

COLLEGE STATION — Farmers who become physically disabled are finding alternatives to leaving the farm business.

"With some help from technology, these farmers are learning to live and work with their disabilities," says Dr. Gary Nelson, safety engineering specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

To familiarize farmers with new technology to help them live more independent lives, Nelson is planning a conference Oct. 4 and 5 at Texas A&M University.

The conference will deal with available resources to help disabled farmers, new farm equipment designs and accessories, home modifications and sources of financial aid.

Chavez joins Campbell march

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — United Farm Workers leader Cesar Chavez joined about 100 migrant farm workers Saturday on the last leg of a month-long march through Ohio and Pennsylvania, demanding better pay and working conditions from Campbell Soup Co.

Chavez joined the marchers in the northwestern Philadelphia suburbs, and said he planned to stay with them through Sunday, when they expect to reach Campbell's headquarters at Camden, N.J.

Thirty Years of Service and Over 300 Million Strong

Prairie Lee students gather for reunion

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

GREENWOOD — "What've you been doing?" J.W. Arnett asked his friend.

"Nothing."

"Well," Arnett told Travis Matlock, "you've got a lot of help."

Now, there was more than nothing going on at Greenwood on Saturday. Among the goings-on were the rekindling of school days at Prairie Lee and the fellowshipping that home-cooked food affords. Classes were held at Prairie Lee, a rural school seven miles east of Midland, from 1907 to 1949. And, as elsewhere in the rural South, school days were arranged around the cotton-picking season.

All told, 155 former students, teachers, school trustees and friends of the old Prairie Lee Common School District got together here for the first Prarie Lee reunion. They plan another one in August 1984.

Prairie Lee, McClintic and Stokes schools consolidated in 1949 to form the Greenwood Independent School District. The schools opted for that route rather than their being absorbed by the Midland ISD. Five other common school districts — Cotton Flat, Pleasant Valley, Stephenson (Salt Flat), Valley View and Warfield — were taken in by Midland.

Bethel Graham, a retired farmer, served on the Prairie Lee school board.

"Yeah," he joshed, "that was my main job. Everybody you see here who is gray and bald used to be on the board."

Three ex-trustees were at the reunion: Graham, John King Jr. and Alvey Bryant.

THE PRAIRIE LEE exes were in busy mini-reunion "jam" sessions even while Prairie Lee ex-student and fiddler Jack Russell and his band, Rustlers, were playing Western Swing music.

Ex-teacher Juanita Raggett Arnett reunited with Russell, one of her former pupils, in the band corner in the Greenwood School cafeteria.

"He had the very audacity to stand up here and say that I'm one of his old teachers," she said sternly and smiled kindly. "Well, that's right. That's what I am."

Graham nodded toward a "jam" session in the hallway.

"That lady is talking to somebody whether they're listening or not."

Russell's band played a few numbers, including "Waltz Across Texas," before Bryant, the reunion's emcee, started the formal reminiscing.

The turnout pleased Bryant, a Praire Lee ex-student and trustee.

"We didn't have rules or regulations," he said, "but to try to treat everyone the way we like to be treated....

"It's good to have teachers who loved children well enough to put up with us."

AMONG THE early-day Prairie Lee students and teachers was Ethel McKee Staton, who enrolled in Prairie Lee in 1907.

"I don't know what I'm doing," she said, "but I'm taking you way back."

She recalled the days when her family lived on Midland Draw.

"We had hand-dug wells, and the water was wonderful."

That has changed, she noted.

She remembered the drought of 1910 and then of travelling to cotton fields to work.

"We started out to pick cotton; there was nothing else to do."

Back in those school days, teachers "always graded by the numbers — never by the letters."

And when she started teaching school, prayer was in the classroom.

"Well," she said, "I can't imagine school without prayer. I don't care what (atheist) Madalyn O'Hair says."

W.H. Vanlandingham was Prarie Lee's principal from 1927 to 1931 and returned in 1949 to be superintendent of Greenwood, which was named after two ministers: Green and Wood.

"THAT WAS many years ago," said Vanlandingham, who now lives in Seminole. "I did enjoy my teaching years at Prairie Lee.... Since 1927, you have made much progress." Back then, Prairie Lee had four teachers, about 100 students. Today, Greenwood has about 60 teachers, and more than 1,200 students and, said Vanlandingham, "a magnificent school plant.... It (Greenwood) has always been a growing and thriving community in Midland County."

Vanlandingham's wife, Irene, was a Prairie Lee teacher.

"She taught me what little I know," allowed Bryant. "He was a man of knowledge and wisdom. He and Miss Van loved children."

Georgia Pigg taught school at Prairie Lee in 1927. "I never had a lovelier school board," she said. "They were very cooperative."

Another teacher, Ozella Bryant Scales, said some of her "happier days were at Prairie Lee. I got my start at Prairie Lee."

Mrs. Arnett, who was Prairie Lee's principal during the World War II years, said "If it hadn't been for Prairie Lee, Greenwood might not be here....

"I hate to date myself," she said, "but I came here in '27, too. I have enjoyed it, enjoyed it then, and enjoy it now."

Bryant recalled Prairie Lee's closing days in 1948-49. Midland ISD wanted to absorb the eight common school districts in the county, but Prarie Lee, Stokes and McClintic weren't won over. Prairie Lee was running out of money and had no cash to buy school buses or to pay the teachers, who wouldn't take IOUs from the school board, Bryant said.

"THEY DIDN'T think IOUs would buy groceries," he said, "and by that we didn't think they wanted IOUs."

Bryant said the board tried to borrow money from The Midland National Bank, but the president then, Ralph Barron, wouldn't loan the board the money to tide the school over until taxes could be collected.

"He told us not to be hard-headed, to come up there and consolidate (with Midland)," Bryant said. "But we loved our school. He (Barron) was as nice as he could be. You know how nice they can be when they say no."

Bryant said school taxes would double if Prairie Lee, Stokes and McClintic were to consolidate into Greenwood but that taxes would quadruple were the three rural schools to consolidate with Midland.

So, the Prairie Lee board members Bryant, Graham and C.W. Branham ended up borrowing the money from the Citizen National Bank of Cameron. Afterward, Greenwood ISD emerged out of the consolidation of Prairie Lee, Stokes and McClintic.

Bryant, who views Prairie Lee with fondness, said the teachers cared for their students.

"They went that second yard to help children that needed help," he said and speculated that "Teachers today don't guite go that second yard to help students...."

No more Vietnams

When President Ronald Reagan decided in the last week of July to put Nicaragua "on warning" with naval exercises that could lead to a blockade, he was signalling Cuba and the Soviet Union that communist aggression in this hemisphere is out of the question.

Central America is raising some old questions about the United States' role in foreign conflicts. One thing is perfectly clear: Uncle Sam is conducting naval operations off Nicaragua for one reason and one reason only, protection of U.S. vital interests.

While it was much-maligned during the Vietnam War years, the "domino theory" is recognized as a reality today. South Vietnam is communistic now as are Kampuchea (Cambodia) and Laos. In the Western Hemisphere, Central American dominoes are stacked and ready to topple. The communists are playing dominoes in our backyard.

Where will the United States choose to stop the progression of communism? Will Americans accept a communistic Nicaragua? Guatemala? Mexico? Or how about not deciding to fight until we're defending the Texas border? Which states can be permitted to go communistic?

Central America, as Mr. Reagan and Henry Kissinger have appropriately noted, is not another Vietnam. It's another conflict and all Americans despise military conflict, but it's easier to see the threat when it's located in this hemisphere.

The real issue in Central America — the real enemy — is the same that threatened the United States in Vietnam, but there the threat wasn't felt. Where do we draw the line? How close to our borders can we allow communistic governments? Cuba lies only 90 miles off the coast of Florida, but how many more Cubas can we accept in this hemisphere?

President Reagan is exactly correct in calling the communists' hands in Central America. He's on a dangerous course that could lead to war, but if that war comes, it must meet only a couple of requirements. It must be fought honestly and with conviction, unlike the Vietnam War. Otherwise Americans will not support the president and the nation will again be split.

That would mean America truly waded into another Vietnam and that's something none of us can accept.

Another View:

Saving auto industry

U.S. carmakers have good reason to be proudly, if also cautiously, tooting their horns.

Second quarter profits for the nation's Big Three were $1.81 billion, the highest reported since the $2.83 billion of the first quarter of 1979. General Motors, Ford and Chrysler also report that sales of new cars were up 38 percent in July of 1983 over July of the previous year. And Chrysler has paid back more than $1 billion in U.S. loans ahead of time.

Detroit hopes to sell 7 million cars this year, compared to the 20-year low of 5.7 million in 1982, when total net profits were less than $500 million.

A number of factors have contributed to an amazing turnaround that enables automakers to achieve profits at sales volumes far below the 9-million-car levels of the halcyon 1970s.

Consumer confidence has risen with the economic rebound. So has consumer income, thanks in part to President Reagan's program of income tax cuts. Interest rates have dropped, and automakers' credit companies have shrunk them further as an incentive.

Carmakers also have spent billions of dollars to replace aging, unpopular lines with more fuel-efficient and aerodynamic models. Operating costs have been cut by reducing the automotive work force and closing obsolete plants. Workers at Chrysler agreed to wage concessions during its darkest days in order to keep the virtually bankrupt company going.

Unfortunately, the road ahead is not entirely rut-free. The federal government could stall Detroit's recovery if a rise in interest rates detours car buyers from the showrooms. So could, possibly, Japan, if it goes ahead and lifts voluntary export quotas — although Chrysler's Lee Iacocca has predicted that the "heat of an (American) election year" will encourage a fourth year of limits.

Yet the biggest obstacles looming for Detroit may be of its own making.

Recovery has coincided with a greater emphasis on quality and performance. All three automakers, as well as American Motors, must continue to modernize and offer technological improvements without repeating the mistake General Motors made when it rushed the X-cars on the market. Massive recalls haven't helped GM's once shiny image of quality and durability.

Autoworkers, meanwhile, could throw a wrench in the carmaker's modernization efforts if they continue to make demands raising production costs and resulting in an uncompetitive product.

Some United Auto Workers members at Chrysler already are talking about a strike when their contract expires in January because they are unhappy with an offer that brings them to within $1 per hour of GM and Ford wages. If their demands for wage parity close down Chrysler, all the hard work and effort to save this American company will have been wasted.

GM workers are trying to halt the company's joint venture with Toyota by claiming it will put 18,000 Chevette workers in the Midwest out of jobs.

We hope Detroit can bypass these traps. The more Americans buy domestic cars, the better chance there will be of thousands of employees returning to work in auto and auto-related factories across the country.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Despite talk, war may escalate

WASHINGTON — There is now hopeful talk in Washington of a negotiated peace with Nicaragua. But at the battlefield level, the talk is only of war — and, increasingly, of war that would involve American troops.

Jack Anderson

The basic problem, as I warned two years ago, is the questionable ability of the United States to control the renegade anti-communist forces the CIA has set in motion. On Aug. 26, 1981, I reported that the CIA's new director, William Casey, was urging increased support of anti-communist forces.

"American policy-makers are concerned about the clandestine activities that Casey advocates," I wrote. "They warn that the CIA will wind up supporting revolutionary forces and exile groups, with no control over what these groups do."

This is exactly what has happened in Nicaragua.

My associate Jon Lee Anderson is the only American reporter who has marched with all three of the anti-Sandinista rebel groups fighting inside Nicaragua. He has also visited the Sandinista troops on the other side and leaders of the Marxist regime — which is the target of the CIA's supposedly covert operations. Both the Sandinistas and their opponents stressed the importance of U.S. aid to the rebels.

My associate's most depressing discovery was the open skepticism with which the combatants view the chances for a negotiated settlement. They all seem determined to settle the conflict by force of arms.

And because the guerrilla groups are no match for the Sandinista army — the largest in Central America — the only way the anti-communist rebels can hope to overthrow the Managua regime is to draw the United States ever deeper into fighting.

Even if the Reagan administration succeeds in its stated goal — ending Sandinista aid to the leftist guerrillas next door in El Salvador — there is no guarantee that it could hold up its end of the bargain and call off the Nicaraguan rebels.

The anti-Sandinista forces have never agreed with this Reagan administration goal; they are fighting for nothing less than the overthrow of the hated Marxist regime in Managua. They will continue their struggle no matter what agreement the United States and other outside interests manage to reach with the Sandinistas.

Yet it seems clear that the American public will not stand for the use of U.S. combat troops in Central America — a political reality that both Congress and the White House recognize. But what is equally clear is that there are forces at work determined to suck the United States into a direct military commitment in the region.

It is ironical that President Reagan hedged his assurance that he planned no use of U.S. troops in Central America with a reminder that "they blew up the Maine." Exactly who blew up the U.S. battleship in Havana harbor — and touched off the Spanish-American War — has never been determined beyond doubt. One not-implausible theory is that the explosion was caused by Cuban rebels who wanted U.S. intervention in their revolt against Spain.

Like the Spaniards in 1898, the Sandinistas would be fools to provoke war with the United States. But there are others who would welcome such an outbreak.

Honduras, meanwhile, is preparing for war with Nicaragua. Some of its military leaders feel a military showdown is inevitable. They are encouraged by the joint exercises that have put some 4,000 U.S. combat troops in their country.

Here's the dangerous scenario my sources are concerned about: Nicaraguan rebels, emboldened by the U.S. military presence in Honduras and off the coasts of Nicaragua, will launch more daring strikes into Nicaragua from their Honduran sanctuary.

The Sandinistas would respond to this threat by "hot pursuit" of the rebels into Honduras. The Honduran army would try to repel the invasion, but would be no match for the Soviet-equipped Nicaraguan government troops. Honduras would then call for help from the U.S. troops so conveniently at hand.

If this seems farfetched, consider the statements of Col. Ronny Herbert Martinez, the Honduran commander on the Nicaraguan border.

"We need more help from the United States," Martinez told my reporter. "The problem of Nicaragua has to be stopped. Little strikes like the ones the rebels are carrying out won't do it. It needs a big hit."

The colonel then explained that a "big hit" is only possible if President Reagan gives a clear commitment to send in U.S. troops "if necessary," and guarantees massive military aid to Honduras, with no strings attached.

"The Americans have to wake up and realize they either have to be willing to do what it takes to stop communism here, or fight it on their own borders in a few years," said Martinez. "We are just pawns in the Marxists' chess game. They don't want Honduras. They want the biggest prize: the United States."

Is war coming, then? "Yes," said Martinez. "It's inevitable."

His sentiments were a chilling echo of those expressed earlier by Sandinista leader Tomas Borge in Managua. He, too, believes war between Nicaragua and Honduras is inevitable. Both men said August is the crucial month.

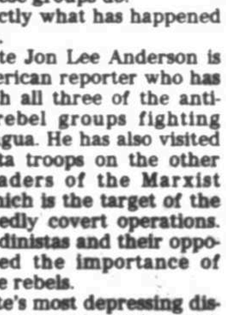
GEORGE F. WILL

Entitlements door could slam shut

WASHINGTON — Flying on the wings of the wind, John Glenn, yearning for life and love and laughter, and delegates, touched down in St. Petersburg, Fla., last Sunday and tarried long enough to demonstrate some of his underestimated skills, and why he will need all of them in this marathon campaign.



George F. Will

In a position paper, he said that coping with the budget deficit "means controlling the rapid growth of entitlement programs with more reasonable cost-of-living adjustments (COLAs)." Appearing before the hellhounds of the press on ABC's "This Week," he was asked what he had in mind.

Persons who think Glenn is not nimble should have seen this nifty slalom away from the question, beginning: "Well, a comment first on the overall deficit itself." And off he went with some of what Ronald Reagan will have to get used to: a Democrat taking custody of the issue of deficits.

(Columnist Mark Shields notes that Reagan was a potent "insurgent candidate" against Gov. Pat Brown, Jerry Ford and Jimmy Carter. Last Sunday, as Glenn described himself as a soldier and businessman who hates deficits almost as much as he hates war, this much seemed clear: If Glenn is nominated, another Reagan run will require a different Reagan mode.)

Glenn was speaking six days after the Reagan administration revised its budget estimates for 1984. The administration's good news was hardly news: The recovery is stronger than was originally expected. The real news was bad: The fiscal 1984 deficit projection is reduced by only $10 billion, to $180 billion. And without spending reductions and tax increases, deficits will exceed $200 billion a year through 1988 and beyond.

Glenn spoke the day before economist Alan Greenspan told the National Governors Association that federal deficits will cause a drastic slowing of the recovery in the next six months. Greenspan said that deficits cannot be significantly cut without reducing entitlement programs such as Medicare (which "ultimately will have to be means-tested").

Glenn was pressed again about a "more reasonable approach" to COLAs, and was reminded that most of the cost of COLAs is in Social Security. Moreover, when Congress recently enacted mild reforms, there were vigorous avowals that there would be no more reductions of the value of Social Security entitlements.

Glenn's answer was deft and responsible, but not without risk to him. And it pointed toward what may be a cost of the 1984 campaign. Choosing his words with care, as well he might, considering where he was (because of its retired population, St. Petersburg is, symbolically, the Social Security capital of the universe), Glenn said:

"Taking care of the COLAs (is) something that we have to do over the next several years," perhaps using a version of the Greenspan (Social Security) Commission. But "you cannot break faith with the elderly, who are beyond their working years, who cannot adjust as rapidly as people in mid-life, and so we have to be very, very careful on people who have built up this dependency on the government. And if we're going to change anything in that regard, it has to be done in the very early working years so people have a chance to adjust through their normal working lifetime."

That is a judicious, yet precise, sketch of what many — perhaps most — legislators know needs to be done: a slow, phased, delayed, moderate decrease in the value of COLAs. This is not a prescription for substantial sacrifices, but it is a departure from the pretenses that the budget can be balanced by economic growth, or elimination of "waste, fraud and abuse" in welfare or the Pentagon, or by soaking the rich, or whatever.

Even to talk about Social Security and Medicare is to walk on eggshells, and Glenn, to his credit, is doing it. But what may he and others be driven to say?

The conventional wisdom in Washington is that the need for reduction of entitlements is so widely recognized that it can be accomplished in 1985. But another 15 months of campaigning may drive the candidates to slam the door so tightly shut against reductions that no one will be able to open it in 1985. There may be a bidding war whereby they compete to see, regarding entitlement changes, who can slam the door loudest.

If such bidding begins, the nation's economic health will depend on the electorate being discerning enough to reward those candidates — if any — who leave the door judiciously ajar.

ART BUCHWALD

Justice comes first — after $$

"Louie the Louse, I am authorized to inform you of your rights. You are permitted to make one telephone call."

Art Buchwald

"Okay, I want to speak to the Heartongue Literary Agency. Hello, Heartongue? This is Louie the Louse. I think I got a good one for you this time. I heisted a Brinks truck of 20 million bucks, hijacked the Rolling Stones' private airplane and forged Cliff Robertson's name to a check for $150,000. My attorney thinks it could be a 'Lit Guild Selection of the Month.' No, I won't say anything until you get here."

A half-hour later Louie the Louse is sitting under a white electric light bulb surrounded by the district attorney and his underlings.

"Louie, who were your accomplices in the Brinks robbery?"

Louie says, "I refuse to answer on the grounds that my answer would damage the newspaper syndication right of my story."

The district attorney says, "You told Sgt. Brophy when you were brought in that there were four of you in on the Brinks job, inlcuding an inside man. Who was the inside man?"

"Wait," says Heartongue, "Newsweek has just offered us $50,000 for the name of the inside man, providing it doesn't appear in The Washington Post first."

Louie looks straight at the district attorney. "You can burn my fingers, you can dunk my head in the bathtub, you can knock out my teeth, but I'll never rat on Newsweek."

"Louie, we got all the evidence we need. We have pictures of you hijacking the Rolling Stones' airplane."

"Let me see those," Heartongue says. "You have no right to these photos. I sold them exclusively to New York Magazine."

"They're state's evidence," the district attorney says. "They're part of the public record which we hope will be used to convict Louie the Louse."

"Do you mean to say that you would use photographs that were sold to a magazine on an exclusive basis just to prove a criminal case against my client? Have you no legal ethics?"

"I'm not sure what you're driving at, Heartongue."

"The Constitution provides that every person accused of a crime is entitled to sell his story to a magazine, a newspaper, a hardcover book company and a paperback publisher. The value of his story is based on what he did not tell the grand jury or the FBI. If you reveal the facts in this case, the TV bidding on Louie's book could be seriously damaged."

"Maybe so," the district attorney says. "But my only concern is justice. We have a guy who stole from a Brinks truck, hijacked an airplane and forged a movie actor's name to a check. Now he has to be punished."

"He will be," Heartongue said. "But he wants to save it all for the book. Give us a break. A guy's got a right to make a buck on his own crime."

The district attorney says, "It's out of my hands. There are 100 reporters as well as photographers and TV cameras out there. How do I explain to them that Louie's story is copyrighted and they have no right to it?"

"That's your problem. My client has committed a perfectly valid crime which, on today's literary market, is worth anywhere up to seven figures. By making these crimes common knowledge you are depriving him of his literary and subsidiary rights under the Authors League and Dramatists Guild contracts."

The district attorney ignores him. "Okay, Louie, let's try once more. When did you forge Cliff Robertson's name on a check?"

Louie says, "I refuse to answer on the grounds that I may be getting a call from Mike Wallace at any moment."

UN failing to bring peace, stem flow of communism

BY WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

EDITOR'S REPORT

SAN SIMEON, Calif. — The United Nations, created originally by nations victorious in World War II, has failed to bring about a peaceful world. Instead we have wars, revolutions and all kinds of leftist revolutions running nations and hundreds of millions of lives. The main purpose, it seems to me, of Third World nations, which comprise a large bulk of the world organization, is a distinct anti-American bias although we pay 25 percent of the U.N. budget while the Soviet Union gradually and grudgingly gets kudos but defrays only 16 percent of the costs.

Hearst

These Third World nations whose independence we long endorsed and have plentifully backed with needed credits and ready cash, don't stand up and condemn aggression. They talk endlessly in the glass house of the U.N. headquarters building and shy away from taking a stand on despots seeking to take over even one of their own under-developed member countries. I have in mind the episode of landlocked Chad in Africa. A tinpot, ambition-driven dictator, Col. Muammar Qaddafi, wants to install his own puppet regime in that little have-not nation which he's attacked with Russian-supplied MiGs from bases in oil-rich Libya run by the tyrant.

We have offered in Chad's desperate hour of need to help them defend themselves with some anti-aircraft missiles and dispatched technicians to teach Chad forces in their use. How does Qaddafi react? He threatens to attack one of our aircraft carriers sailing in international waters off the Libyan coast. This is an example of how collective U.N. action against aggression, or at least a firm declaration, could help. Instead the dis-United Nations talks.

IT HAS BEEN most unfortunate that nothing much was done by the membership about Soviet and associated communist aggression in Afghanistan, Poland, parts of Africa, the Middle East and Southeast Asia. Many communist and Third World nations were quick, for example, to harangue the U.S. for seeking to defend Vietnam from communist encroachment.

They are totally mum today since all Vietnam is under communist control — a violation of the partition agreement. Communist-run Vietnam also has intruded its aggression into little Laos and once-free independent Cambodia now called Kampuchea.

This last week was a period in which Americans are worrying about the peace of the world. Although Central America was the center of our attention, thoughts turned to the overall U.S. responsibility to protect its own security. Through the years, it seems that we have been compelled to try to safeguard other nations' security on a global front, in short to protect small nations from international gangsterism. This is what the U.N. should have been doing and maintaining in its forums of independent rights. America cannot and should not be involved in anything more than our own hemisphere. The U.N. has an obligation to focus on global peace, but without armed forces constantly available this is impossible. The Soviet Union, remember, always has been responsible for saying "nyet" to a standing U.N. force ready to be rushed anywhere trouble flared.

IN ALL FAIRNESS several peacekeeping forces of the U.N. have been created. They at least symbolized the good will of those United Nations members who have been more in favor of peace than against the United States. From 1978 to the present one of those forces has been in Lebanon. It originally was sent there to oversee the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Southern Lebanon.

Another United Nations Emergency Force was stationed in Egypt for a number of years. It was there from 1974 until the signing of the Camp David accords in 1979. During this same period the mandate for a Cyprus force has been renewed every six months. A U.N. Observer group has tried to stop violence between India and Pakistan.

In short, some members of the U.N. have actually tried to carry out the mission the international organization set for itself four decades ago. However, despite these efforts the peace picture is not all that pretty. Take the sad instance in Afghanistan. The U.N. was powerless to prevent, or bring an end to, a naked and murderous invasion of that neighboring nation by a ruthless Soviet Union. There are 110,000 Russian troops in that little land, plus oodles of artillery and armor.

WHAT THESE facts say is that the United Nations has failed to keep the peace or stem the flow of communism. As a matter of fact, the Soviets are sitting pretty while the Americans are an endangered species. Why? The Third World is so enamoured of Russian rhetoric that its representatives prefer placing Soviet citizens in higher echelons as we continue to see U.S. representation fall.

Additionally, the U.N. has laid out the welcome mat for a raft of terrorist organizations. Their representatives appear to thunderous nonaligned and communist applause and are promptly offered observer status and funds. Those funds include your tax dollars and mine.

Leading the terrorist pack, remember, was stubble-bearded Yasir Arafat who showed up in 1974 with a holstered pistol that he ostentatiously strapped to his side. Look at Arafat today. Rebel PLO bands aided by Syria are close to finishing him off in a power struggle inside Syria where none of them have a right to remain.

THE REBEL PLO already is talking about filling vacancies left by departing pro-Arafat people. But while the PLO is the most prominently known of terrorist groups installed by the U.N., there's a bloc of others with communist connections. What I find ironic is that anti-communist guerrilla movements like "UNITA," fighting to oust Cubans and a Marxist regime from Angola, get nowhere. UNITA's leader, brave, bearded Jonas Savimbi, takes African prisoners, interrogates and releases them. He ambushes and kills Cubans, puppet Angolans, East Germans, Czechs and Bulgars.

We hoped for better things in what was supposed to become a brave new world watched over by the U.N. If the small nations don't make the effort to keep order, then most big countries might well become fed up with this international gabfest and simply walk away. It's high time that the Third Word faced facts of life in the REAL WORLD.

Animal treatment

To The Editor:

In the past week I have had three people who live in the county contact me regarding stray animals. The stories vary from run over animals, who don't die, starving animals, animals thrown from speeding cars, to animals shot and left to die!

Please do not take your unwanted pet into the country. Take them to Animal Control. If you feel you cannot take them there, call me and I'll take them for you. Many animals there do get good homes! Dumping animals is a most inhumane thing. Please don't do it!

If you are an animal lover, urge anyone you know to spay their pet or if they must get rid of it to take it to Animal Control. Urge your vet to take an active roll in helping inform people about pet ownership.

I talked with a kind lady Sunday who picked up a precious tick-infested animal that had been run over on a county road. She took it to the animal emergency unit and paid $50 to try to save the animal. This was not her responsibility but she saw a need. Thank God for caring people. The animals cannot take care of themselves, they look to us for care. Thank you for caring.

Midland thanks?

To The Editor:

I would like to express my appreciation, thanks and pay humble homage to that great, sensational and astounding governmental body: the City of Midland. Specifically, those truly incredible people in the Water and Street Maintenance Departments.

Their efforts must surely be carefully choreographed and coordinated to insure the comfort and safety of the citizens of Midland. I wish to thank the Water Department for their high standards of quality control. The passage of city water through my plumbing made the replacement of said same such a wonderful experience.

Imagine the excitement and wonder of seeing walls torn out and three foot trenches dug through the lawn. Thank you! The two days of vacation time and $800 expenditure to witness this inspiring event broke the tedious routine of day-to-day living in our great and wondrous city.

Thank you, Street Maintenance, for making it necessary to replace two windshields, three shocks and a wheel rim in just two year's time. Thank you, for the new gravel garden in the lawn and flower beds. Thank you, for defining lanes on our streets with water colors. This makes the squeezing of four lanes of traffic into two possible.

Thank you, for making driving in Midland a challenge. Might I suggest you contact automobile manufacturers around the globe to test their designs on our streets. I am sure this would eliminate the need for those costly test tracks in Detroit and the Rocky Mountains.

These two agencies with the city government are to be congratulated and praised for their ingenious and efficient work. I can scarcely wait for the up and coming unexpected pleasures the city has in store!

Budget criticism

To The Editor:

The Democrats are at it again! The Democrat fiscal year 1984 (FY84) budget resolution is full of the same old policies of tax and spend and tax and spend that wrecked our economy before President Reagan took office. Their budget calls for increased spending and increased taxes — formulas sure to hurt the recovery and the American taxpayer.

President Reagan says he will veto any spending bills that "bust the (Reagan) budget." He is determined to see the recovery continue and will not stand for increasing the taxes paid by the American people.

The Democrat budget (House Concurrent Resolution 91, First Concurrent Resolution on the Budget — FY84) raises taxes, cuts vital spending on defense, establishes more federal spending programs and has a projected deficit higher than the deficit projected in the budget recommended to Congress by the president.

The Democrats claim the projected deficit for their FY84 budget is lower than the president's. Their budget projects a deficit of $169.9 billion for 1984; the president's projected deficit is $189 billion. But, in fact, the Democrat's budget deficit is higher than the one the president recommended — higher by $13 billion.

The difference is the Democrats used different numbers to calculate their deficit. When they figured their budget, they calculated the economy would grow faster and fewer people would be unemployed. Their budget deficit looks smaller than the president's because of this.

It is strange the Democrats criticize President Reagan's economic program on one hand, yet calculate their budget believing his program will achieve even better results than those anticipated by the administration.

The Democrats aren't reducing the deficit — they're raising it to fund more spending programs. Fellow citizens, don't be deceived!

SPEAKING OUT

Federal assistance needed for future supply of water

By REP. TOM CRADDICK

Tom Craddick was first elected state representative of the 76th District in November 1968. The 76th District includes Midland County and part of Ector County.

Even though the western half of Texas is classified as arid or semi-arid, a large part of the state's economy has developed here. West Texas accounts for over 60 percent of the value of crops sold from Texas farms and ranches, over 80 percent of beef production in the state and 50 percent of the state's oil and gas production. However, the agricultural, energy, manufacturing and services industries of the West Texas area cannot continue to function without adequate supplies of fresh water.

Although the area has some surface water supplies from rainfall and flood water that is captured and stored in lakes, the area's major source of water is its aquifers which supply over 90 percent of the water for the area. Unfortunately, there is little recharge for these aquifers because of low rainfall which decreases on an annual basis as one moves westward across our state. Studies have shown that the West Texas area has about 95 percent of the state's known recoverable supply of ground water, which at today's rate of use amounts to about a 20-year supply for irrigation in the southern part of the High Plains area and a 60- to 70-year supply in the northern High Plains.

SUPPLIES FOR cities and industries, at today's rates of use, vary from area to area within the region, with the larger cities such as Midland, Odessa Lubbock, Amarillo, San Angelo, Abilene and Wichita Falls having supplies or plans to develop additional supplies that are thought to be adequate to meet their respective needs well into the 21st century. Many smaller cities are not so fortunate, with some having less than a 20-year supply in present well fields. In order to meet our future water needs several programs are being operated and some alternatives are being considered.

An aggressive water conservation program for both irrigation farming and municipal and industrial water uses is being carried out by underground water conservation districts, the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and Extension Service, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Texas Tech University, the Texas Department of Water Resources and others in order to improve efficiency of water use and make existing supplies last longer. Also, cooperative experiments are being conducted to test the use of air injection to recover more water from aquifers. The objective of these tests is to cause water that is held by capillary forces to flow toward wells and become available for pumping. If the tests work at reasonable costs, the usable ground water supplies throughout West Texas and other areas will be increased, perhaps significantly.

Additional surface water development is planned for West Texas, including Lake Stacy that would serve Midland, Odessa, San Angelo and other cities of the area; Lakes Post and Justiceburg that would supply Lubbock and neighboring cities; Lake Ringgold for the Wichita Falls Water System; Lake Palo Duro in Hansford County for cities of that area; and Lake Sweetwater Creek for Shamrock and Wheeler.

IN SOME PARTS of West Texas, treated effluent from surface water systems is used by industries and farmers to meet a part of their needs. Throughout West Texas the treatment of sewage and the re-use of both surface and ground water is practiced widely.

Continued emphasis will have to be placed upon sewage treatment in order to protect water quality from man-made pollution, chloride control projects to keep naturally occurring salty spring flows and runoff from salt flats out of surface and ground water supplies, research and development of drought tolerant crops to keep farming and ranching productive, weather modification to increase rainfall, and brush control to reduce the effects of this useless vegetation on water supplies.

Research and experimentation into ground water recovery, ground water recharge and desalting of brackish water is also needed. While some form of water importation is still being considered as a possible long-range solution for the water supply problems of the area, studies in the past have indicated that an import project may be infeasible due to high costs, energy requirements and the legal requirement for interstate agreements.

ALL OF the programs and projects mentioned above require large budgets. Federal funding, which has supported some such projects in the past, is becoming more doubtful each year. Local and state financing for sewage treatment, water conservation and water supply development will have to be increased to meet future needs.

In the future with a larger economy and a declining water supply, long-range planning by water conservation districts, state and federal agencies, cities, and local water authorities will have to be continued to meet growing needs and changing conditions. Public information programs by the media and the universities will have to be strengthened to promote water conservation and to communicate the results of studies to people who can use them. In turn, individual citizens will have to become more water conscious and take the initiative to put the results of research into practice.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

There's room in Texas for armadillo, longhorn

Bill Modisett

Charles William Russell is one Texan who refuses to go home with the armadillo.

Russell, who lives in Dallas, is hopping mad that "beer-drinking johnny-come-latelies" have elevated "that lowly, decrepit, squirming thing called the armadillo" to the status of the Texas state animal. His beef is that the 'dillo is robbing glory from the true state animal, the Texas longhorn steer.

Properly incensed, Russell is leading a campaign to rouse other "old-timers" to the cause of returning to the stately longhorn the honor and the glory "that lowly, worm-eating, ground-burrowing armadillo" has stolen.

"I am sure there are many other old-timers out there that feel the same way I do and are ready to take up arms — or pens — on behalf of that majestic, brave animal, the Texas longhorn steer, which surely did its part in making our state recognized as the most wonderful state of them all," writes Russell.

"Any true Texan will beam with pride and relate how from the very beginning the longhorn steer is as much a part of Texas as the Lone Star or the Alamo itself.

"Go to Europe, Middle East, Asia, Africa, anywhere on the globe and ask a young boy what animal he thinks made Texas his dream place of the world, then watch his eyes sparkle as he speaks up for the longhorn steer."

I have to agree to that, at least. I mean if it weren't for the longhorn, there might never have been Texas cattle barons, ranches, the Chisholm Trail or University of Texas football. There might never have been John Wayne movies or Marty Robbins songs about "Ghost Riders in the Sky." The longhorn steer, as Russell aptly notes, has left an indelible hoofprint on the state and deserves to be recognized for his colorful contribution to Texas history. But while the longhorn is a symbol for thousands of Texans who cherish that era — the "old wave" Texans, if you will — the armadillo represents the "new wave" in the Lone Star State.

Immortalized in song by Jerry Jeff Walker, the armadillo has been closely identified with Austin's cross-country sound, including singers of the Walker, Willie Nelson and Waylon Jennings ilk. They have helped bring change and freshness to the state but, not unexpectedly, have been criticized in some quarters as not bringing the "right" image to Texas.

Well, the armadillo burrowed into that controversy, but — in rebuttal to one charge — the critter's been around even longer than Nelson. The 'dillo can trace its heritage in the state back to the dinosaur age and that predates even the illustrious Texas longhorn steer, which was brought to this land, historians say, by Christopher Columbus on his second voyage from Spain. Descendants of those cattle, taken to Santo Domingo, later were introduced into Mexico and from there eventually moved into Texas.

I think the longhorn probably holds the edge on being Texas' state animal, even though the 'dillo's fame galloped to the forefront in recent times. But there's really no reason for squabbling. There's more than enough room in Texas for the armadillo and the longhorn — and beer-drinking cross-country buffs and "old-timers" like Russell who believe longhorn steers deserve more attention than they're getting.

Nope, the longhorn may have been a symbol of Texas longer than the 'dillo, but the 'dillo definitely was here first. And that's no bull.

Cubs lose, run home

EL PASO -The Midland Cubs ended a disastrous road trip to El Paso with a 12-3 loss to the Diablos for the second night in a row, and will try to snap a four game losing streak when they host Beaumont tonight at Cubs Stadium.

Diablo pitcher Rick Kranitz fanned 14 Cubs, and six of the last seven Cub outs came on strikeouts as Midland continued their horrible slump. The Cubs have now dropped 23 of their last 30.

Another early explosion put El Paso, first in the Texas League West, out front to stay. The Diablos jumped on Cub pitchers Joe Housey and Jim Gerlach in the second inning for eight runs.

It was an unusual inning. The Diablos' first two batters were thrown out after getting on base, so all El Paso runs came with two down. The first twelve Diablos in the inning got on base, but after the first two were erased on fielding plays, Stan Davis hit a solo homer to get things going for El Paso.

The critical play came when El Paso's Mike Felder hit a fly to right field that Cub Randy LaVigne lost in the lights. The ball dropped in for a triple and the rout was on.

Midland had the lead after one inning when third baseman Tom Lombarski doubled in Bill Hatcher, who had walked.

Midland tallied again in the third, when Mike Anicich knocked in a run with a single. LaVigne scored for Midland on an infield hit in the sixth to complete Cub scoring.

Davis, who went four-for-four on the night and smashed another homer in the seventh, led a Diablo attack that had 17 hits.

El Paso has now been the chief thorn in the side of the Cubs, having taken nnine of eleven games from Midland in the second half of the Texas League slate. The Diablos currently sport a 27-16, the exact opposite of Midland's, and lead the TL field.

Radio stations KNFM-KMND of Midland will team up tonight with the Hollywood Cover Girls at Cubs Stadium for a pre-game softball game. The Cubs begin a five game set with the Golden Gators before the San Antonio Dodgers invade next Friday for a five-game visit.

Crenshaw closes as Sutton falters

PACIFIC PALISADES, Calif. (AP) — Hal Sutton, the leader all the way, retained the top spot, but Ben Crenshaw chipped in for a birdie on the final hole to cut his advantage to two strokes Saturday in the storm-delayed third round of the 65th PGA national championship.

After shooting a tournament record 131 over the first 36 holes, Sutton, golf's Rookie of the Year last season and currently the leading money-winner appeared to be in position to make a rout of it.

But his 1-over-par 72 on the 6,946-yard Riviera Country Club course — by six strokes his highest score of the week — opened the gates to a variety of potential challenges in Sunday's final round of the chase for the title in this, the last of the year's Big Four events.

LEADING THE pack is Crenshaw, in second place and grimly seeking the major tournament victory he needs to confirm his stature in the game. After trailing by three at the end of two rounds, and down by four at various times in the third round, he closed up with the dramatic chip-in from about 30 yards on the 18th hole.

And, within striking distance despite less-than-spectacular third-round efforts, was a group headed by the most accomplished player of them all, Jack Nicklaus, along with Larry Nelson, the quiet little man who captured the U.S. Open title two months ago, Bruce Lietzke and John Fought.

Sutton completed 54 holes in 203, 10 under par.

Crenshaw, with a hard-fought round of par 71, was at 205.

Fought, 29, who won his only two titles in his rookie year, 1979, also had a 71 and was next at 207, 6-under-par and four back.

Nelson, a former winner of this title, put himself in position with a 3-under-par 68 and was tied with Lietzke at 208. Lietzke, winner of nine tour titles, shot a 70.

Nicklaus, who counts five PGA titles among his record collection of 17 major professional victories, struggled to an erratic 71 that left him at 209, six shots behind the 25-year-old Sutton. His back nine included three birdies, four bogeys and two pars.

He was tied with Jay Haas, Scott Simpson and Buddy Whitten, a club pro from Grand Rapids, Mich. Haas had a 69, Simpson 70 and Whitten 73.

Lee Trevino, who played in the same group with Nicklaus took himself out of it with a 74 that left him nine shots back at 212.

Tom Watson, who won the British Open title in his last previous start, said he had recovered from the neck injury that hampered his play in the first round. But Watson, Player of the Year five of the last six seasons, struggled to a 78 and a 220 total that will force him to wait until next year for a shot at the one major title that has eluded him.

Defending champion Ray Floyd had a 71-215.

SEVE BALLESTEROS of Spain, the current Masters champion, was the first man off the tee and was in the group of early starters that was forced from the course for one hour, 20 minutes by a morning electrical storm. Ballesteros shot 72-219.

Scoring, generally, was considerably higher than in the first two rounds. "It's harder to make birdies as the tournament goes on," said Sutton.

Lietzke had a different explanation.

"They didn't water the greens last night," said Lietzke, who played with Nicklaus and Trevino.

Rookie sparks Dallas

IRVING, Texas — Rookie halfback Chuck McSwain of Clemson scored two touchdowns in the final 97 seconds Saturday night to carry the Dallas Cowboys to a stirring come-from-behind 20-17 National Football League preseason victory over the Miami Dolphins.

McSwain, a fifth-round draft pick by the Cowboys, scored off right tackle from a yard out with 2 seconds to play to cap the amazing Dallas rally.

The Cowboys trailed 17-6 when McSwain took a short screen pass from backup quarterback Gary Hogeboom and broke three tackles on the 67-yard touchdown run.

Dallas' Ron Fellows pounced on the ensuing on-sides kickoff at the 50-yard-line.

Miami quarterback David Woodley, hoping to make a big impression on Miami Coach Don Shula with Don Strock holding out, glittered with his scrambling and pinpoint passing.

With the aid of an interference penalty on cornerback Everson Walls, the Dolphins went 83 yards in 13 plays for a touchdown on their first possession for a 7-0 lead.

Woodley contributed a key 10-yard run to the Dallas 23 and Tony Nathan got the touchdown from five-yards out on a handoff from Woodley out of the shotgun formation.

After Rafael Septien's 52-yard field goal cut the deficit to 7-3, Woodley hustled the Dolphins 96 yards in 9 plays in the second quarter. He hit tight end Joe Rose with a 56-yard pass before Eddie Hill covered the final 8-yards on a trap play up the middle of the Dallas defense.

Rookie Raul Allegre of Texas kicked a 51-yard field goal with time running out in the half with Miami leading 14-6.

The Cowboys' biggest offensive play of the first half was called back. Tony Dorsett dashed 52 yards for an apparent touchdown but tight end Doug Cosbie was in motion and the play was nullified.

Woodley completed 6 of 10 passes for 78 yards in the first half before rookie Dan Marino took over in the second half.

Marino contributed a 23-yard completion to tight end Dan Johnson in the third period before Uwe von Schamann drilled a 41-yard field goal.

Oklahoma whips Texans

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Shawn Stephenson passed for 115 yards and ran for 54 to lead the Oklahoma high school all-stars to a convincing 27-3 victory over the Texas high school all-stars Saturday night in the 46th Oil Bowl football game.

Stephenson, of Ada, Okla., and bound for Central State University, connected on six of 14 passes, including an 80-yard scoring toss to Clinton's Ray Collins on the first play of the second half that helped Stephenson win the game's most valuable offensive player award.

Oklahoma's win was only its 10th against 29 Texas victories.

The Texans crossed mid-field only three times.

Vikings make history in 28-10 win over Cardinals

By The Associated Press

WEMBLEY, England — A 76-yard punt return by Rufus Bess and a pair of touchdown passes by Tommy Kramer gave the Minnesota Vikings a 28-10 preseason victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday in the first-ever National Football League game in Europe.

The Vikings put on a dazzling display of running, passing and pass-defense that delighted a crowd of 32,847 at Wembley Stadium, the world's most famous soccer arena and the home of the sport in Britain.

Bess, a 26-year-old cornerback and kick-return specialist, took the punt on his 24-yard line, cut right and scampered down the sideline at the start of the fourth quarter to seal the victory for the Vikings.

Bess also intercepted a Jim Hart pass in helping the Vikings' secondary shut down St. Louis' aerial attack. Neil Lomax and Rusty Lisch shared quarterback duties with Hart.

Kramer, alternating with backup quarterback Steve Dils, passed for a pair of touchdowns, connecting with running back Ted Brown from 9 yards out at the start of the second quarter and wide receiver Leo Lewis for a 31-yard scoring play as the half wound to a close.

Rick Danmeier added two field goals of 41 yards and Steve Schonert kicked one from 45 to complete the Minnesota scoring.

Steelers 27, Patriots 16

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Walter Abercrombie ran for two touchdowns and Gary Anderson kicked a pair of field goals to give the Pittsburgh Steelers a 27-16 victory over the New England Patriots.

A crowd of 42,876 at the University of Tennessee's Neyland Stadium watched as Pittsburgh won its second pre-season game. It was the Patriots' first game of the year.

Abercrombie's first touchdown came on a 4-yard run with 1:27 left in the first quarter.

Abercrombie leaped 1 yard into the end zone with 57 seconds remaining in the first half for Pittsburgh's second score.

Henry Odom ran 3 yards for the Steelers' final touchdown with 8:21 remaining in the third quarter. Anderson's field goals of 37 and 22 yards sealed the victory in the final four minutes.

New England's two touchdowns came on runs of 7 and 11 yards by Mosi Tatupu. Rookie quarterback Tony Eason fumbled the first point-after snap but Mike Bass converted the second.

Falcons 13, Redskins 10

ATLANTA — Mick Luckhurst kicked a 29-yard field goal 4:56 into overtime to give the Atlanta Falcons a 13-10 victory over the Washington Redskins.

Washington had a chance to win with just over 4:30 gone in the overtime, but Mark Mosely missed a 50-yard field goal attempt.

The Falcons then took the ball on their own 33, and backup quarterback Mike Moroski completed a 55-yard pass to Willie Curran on their first play. Then Luckhurst came on for the winning kick.

Browns 21, Packers 20

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Matt Bahr kicked his fifth field goal, a 45-yarder with 28 seconds to play, to lift the Cleveland Browns to a 21-20 victory over the Green Bay Packers.

The Browns drove 52 yards in 10 plays to set up Bahr's winning kick after rookie kicker Eddie Garcia had booted a 55-yard field goal, longest in Green Bay history, to put the Packers ahead 20-18 with 2:59 left.

A 28-yard pass from reserve quarterback Paul McDonald to Dan Fulton set up Bahr's winning kick.

Garcia, who spent all but one game last season on the injured reserve list, kicked his second field goal to cap a 42-yard, seven-play drive that started on the Packers 20 with 6 minutes left.

Garcia's field goal surpassed a 58-yarder by Jan Stenerud against Tampa Bay on Nov. 21, 1981.

Third-string quarterback David Whitehurst sparked Green Bay's final threat with pass completions of 16 yards to Ron Cassidy and 21 to Byron Williams. A Whitehurst pass on third and 5 from the Browns' 38 to tight end Gary Lewis was broken up, but Garcia came back with his go-ahead kick for a 20-18 Green Bay lead.

The Packers took a 7-0 first-quarter lead on a 22-yard touchdown pass from Lynn Dickey to John Jefferson. The Browns came back to lead at 12-7 at halftime on field goals of 25 and 23 yards by Bahr and a 16-yard touchdown run by Charles White.

Kansas City 24, Cincinnati 7

CINCINNATI — Phil Bruneau and Thomas Howard turned Cincinnati mistakes into touchdowns and Willie Abrams ran 4 yards for another score as the Kansas City Chiefs defeated the Cincinnati Bengals 24-7.

Bruneau, a rookie defensive end from Montana State, returned a Turk Schonert fumble 21 yards for a touchdown and Howard, a six-year veteran linebacker, returned a blocked field goal attempt 51 yards for another.

Nick Lowery booted a 33-yard field goal to round out the Kansas City scoring.

Kansas City rookie Coach John Mackovic had said he planned to use his top two quarterbacks, Bill Kenney and Steve Fuller, to see which would get an edge for the regular-season starting spot. But Kenney, who started the game, left early in the second quarter after being sacked, and Fuller went the rest of the way.

The Chiefs' bench said Kenney had the wind knocked out of him, but he returned to the game only to hold for a Lowery placement.

The Bengals used all three of their quarterbacks. Ken Anderson, who led the NFL in passing the last two seasons, was the only one not victimized by the swarming Kansas City defense.

Anderson led the Bengals in their first two possessions and completed 7 of 10 passes for 70 yards.

Bears 27, Bills 17

CHICAGO — Reserve quarterback Vince Evans engineered two third-quarter touchdowns as the Chicago Bears rolled to a 27-17 victory over the Buffalo Bills.

Evans, used only in the third quarter, completed five of seven passes for 99 yards to set up touchdown runs of 9 yards by Matt Suhey and 1 yard by Dennis Gentry.

Jim McMahon quarterbacked the Bears to a 13-10 lead in the first half although he was intercepted twice. But the Bears intercepted five passes, two by free safety Gary Fencik.

Joe Ferguson started at quarterback for the Bills and threw two interceptions, as did Matt Kofler, who quarterbacked the Bills in the second quarter.

The Bills took the opening kickoff and marched 65 yards to the Chicago 13-yard line before Fred Steinfort booted a 33-yard field goal.

Fencik's first interception set up a 1-yard touchdown run by Willie McClendon for a 7-3 Chicago lead. But Chris Williams intercepted a McMahon pass and five plays later Curtis Brown scored from the 1 for a 10-7 Buffalo lead.

Bob Thomas then booted field goals of 31 and 29 yards to give the Bears their 13-10 halftime lead.

Bucs 20, Saints 17

TAMPA, Fla. — Bill Capece booted a 35-yard field goal as time ran out to give the Tampa Bay Buccaneers a 20-17 victory over the New Orleans Saints.

Capece's second field goal of the game capped a 20-point fourth-quarter and came at the end of a 15-play, 65-yard drive engineered by quarterback Jerry Golsteyn.

The victory gave Tampa Bay a 1-0 preseason record. New Orleans dropped to 0-2 after taking a 10-0 lead on George Rogers' 5-yard run and Morten Andersen's 24-yard field goal.

The Bucs, who struggled offensively much of the game, finally got untracked in the fourth quarter.

Capece put the Bucs on the scoreboard with a 31-yard field goal 1:55 into the period, and Golsteyn whipped a 20-yard touchdown pass to Jerry Bell seven minutes later to tie the score at 10.

Less than two minutes later, Tampa Bay rookie cornerback Jeremiah Castille intercepted a pass by Guido Merkens at the Saints 23-yard line and returned it 20 yards to the 12. A personal foul against New Orleans moved the ball to the six, setting up Michael Morton's scoring burst on the next play.

Texas Rangers belt Indians again

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Frank Tanana tossed a five-hitter and Jim Sundberg drove in three runs to spark the Texas Rangers to a 6-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians Saturday night.

Tanana, 5-4, struck out five and walked three while pitching his second complete game. The left-hander allowed only one hit and no walks over the final 6⅓ innings in lowering his earned run average to 2.72.

Len Barker, 8-12, took the loss, Cleveland's fourth straight. Barker yielded four runs over the first 5⅓ innings before leaving with tightness in his pitching arm.

Texas, which won its third straight game after losing eight in a row, jumped to a 3-0 lead in the second inning. Larry Parrish led off with a double and Bobby Jones drew a one-out walk. Mickey Rivers doubled home Parrish and Sundberg followed with a two-run single.

Buddy Bell lined a solo home run, his 11th, in the Rangers' third.

American League

Royals 4, Red Sox 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Eric Rasmussen became the first Kansas City pitcher to record a complete-game shutout since September 1982, when he checked Boston on seven hits and hurled the Royals to a 4-0 victory over the Red Sox in his American League debut.

Rasmussen, 31, was purchased from the Louisville Redbirds on Aug. 2 and brought up Friday to replace Vida Blue, who was released. It was the first shutout by a Kansas City right-hander since Oct. 2, 1981.

He struck out two and walked none for his first major league victory since beating the Chicago Cubs 5-4, while pitching for the St. Louis Cardinals in the final regular season game last year.

White Sox 6, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE (AP) — Floyd Bannister allowed five hits in seven innings and posted his sixth consecutive victory as the Chicago White Sox scored a 6-4 decision over the Baltimore Orioles.

Harold Baines and Greg Luzinski hit consecutive home runs for three of Chicago's four runs in the fifth inning as the White Sox ended a nine-game losing streak at Memorial Stadium.

Scott Fletcher opened the fifth with a single, moved to third on two infield outs and scored on a single by Carlton Fisk, one of four hits by the Chicago catcher. Baines followed with his 11th homer, his second in two games, and Luzinski cracked his 22nd. That finished Dennis Martinez, 6-14, and gave Chicago a 6-0 lead.

Yankees 13, Tigers 3

NEW YORK — Willie Randolph drove in four runs, Dave Winfield knocked in three and Jerry Mumphrey and Don Baylor each had two RBI, leading the New York Yankees to a 13-3 triumph over the Detroit Tigers.

The 13 runs were a season high for the Yankees, who shelled four Detroit pitchers for 17 hits, including home runs by Randolph and Winfield in the sixth inning.

Brewers 3, Blue Jays 0

MILWAUKEE — Rookie Chuck Porter fired a six-hitter for his first major league shutout and Paul Molitor homered to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 3-0 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

It was Milwaukee's second consecutive shutout over Toronto and the second consecutive game in which the Blue Jays did not advance a runner past second base. They have scored only one run in dropping their last three games.

Porter, 4-5, struck out three and walked two for his fourth complete game. Loser Doyle Alexander, 0-6, allowed only six hits in 7⅓ innings but remained winless in 11 starts this season with New York and Toronto.

A's 6, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Oakland's Tony Phillips hit a two-run homer in the 13th inning to give the A's a 6-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

The victory went to Pete Atherton, 2-0, who became only the second American League pitcher to have an at-bat this season. Ron Davis, 3-6, took the loss.

With two away in the 13th, Mike Heath hit a single up the middle and Phillips followed with his third home run of the season, a line drive over the right field wall.

Astro rookies stop San Francisco

By The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Rookies Mike Madden and Bill Dawley teamed on a three-hitter Saturday and Alan Ashby drove in two runs as the Houston Astros edged the San Francisco Giants 4-2.

Madden, 5-0, a left-hander making his first appearance against the Giants, worked the first five innings, allowing two hits and one run. Dawley worked the last four innings to earn his ninth save.

The Giants took a 1-0 lead in the third on Johnnie LeMaster's leadoff double and a one-out single by Chili Davis, but the Astros went ahead to stay with two runs in the fourth off loser Renie Martin, 1-2.

Phil Garner singled with one out and reached third on Martin's balk and a groundout before scoring on Ray Knight's single. Ashby followed with a run-scoring double to put the Astros ahead.

Expos 7, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — Andre Dawson belted a pair of home runs, including a three-run shot in the first inning, and Bryn Smith pitched a six-hitter for his second complete game in as many starts this season as the Montreal Expos topped the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-3 to further tighten the National League East race.

National League

Smith, 3-4, held the Pirates to just three hits and one run after being touched for a pair of second-inning runs.

The victory, Montreal's third in a row, moved the Expos within one-half game of the Pirates, who lost their third straight after beginning the day with a half-game lead over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Tim Raines singled to start the game against loser Lee Tunnell, 5-4, and Bryan Little walked. Dawson then crashed a home run just inside the left-field foul pole to give the Expos a 3-0 lead.

Phillies 1, Cardinals 0

ST. LOUIS — Von Hayes singled home Joe Morgan in the 11th inning to break up a scoreless pitching duel and give the Philadelphia Phillies a 1-0 victory over St. Louis, extending the Cardinals losing streak to six games.

Al Holland, 6-0, pitched the final two innings in relief of Steve Carlton, who had shut St. Louis down through the first nine. Bruce Sutter, 8-7, took the loss in relief of Danny Cox, who had blanked the Phillies through 10 innings in his major-league debut.

Carlton struck out six, bringing his all-time major-league total to 3,615, nine ahead of Houston's Nolan Ryan.

Mets 4, Cubs 1

CHICAGO — Pitcher Walt Terrell provided his own punch with a pair of towering two-run homers and blanked Chicago for seven innings to lead the New York Mets to a 4-1 victory over the Cubs.

The home runs and RBIs were the first in Terrell's 13-game major league career and made him the first pitcher in Mets history to hit two home runs in a game.

Padres 11, Reds 4

SAN DIEGO — Bobby Brown scored the go-ahead run in the seventh inning and highlighted an eight-run eighth with a grand slam home run to lead the San Diego Padres to an 11-4 trouncing of the Cincinnati Reds in the first game of a twi-night doubleheader.

Johnny Bench started at catcher for the Reds for the first time since April 29, 1981.

San Diego put the game on ice with the eight-run eighth.

Eric Show, 11-7, scattered five hits over eight innings, with four strikeouts. Luis DeLeon finished up for San Diego.

Aussies give U.S. another gift

BOSTON (AP) — Jan Stephenson, the newly crowned U.S. Women's Open champion, is Australia's most notable gift to the LPGA Tour, but she soon may have competition from another player from Down Under.

"Jan is a good player and I'd like to make it two in a row for my country," Aussie Jane Lock said Saturday after charging into a three-stroke lead after the third round of the $175,000 Boston Five Classic.

The 28-year-old former physical education instructor from Victoria fired a 4-under-par 68 for a 54-hole total of 206 on Radisson Ferncroft's 6,008-yard layout.

Still seeking her first LPGA victory — after winning a bunch of trophies as an amateur — Lock said she feels more comfortable in just starting her second year in this country.

"I'm still going through a learning process," she said. "For example this is the first tournament I've returned to. Here I know where to go. I even know where the clubhouse is.

Lock tied for eighth place here last year. That was her best finish until she tied for fourth in the Corning (N.Y.) Classic in May.

"Naturally, I'd like to win here, but if I shoot a 69 tomorrow and I'm beaten I wouldn't be disappointed," she said. "If I could take a 69 right now I'd be glad to just sit back and wait."

Starting the day two strokes behind 36-hole leader Patti Rizzo and one stroke behind Sue Ertl, Lock took command quickly.

She birdied the first two holes to pull into a tie with Rizzo, then took the lead with a birdie on the fourth.

Rizzo pulled back into a tie with a birdie on the the eighth hole, but dropped back with bogeys on the 10th and 11th.

Lock played conservatively the rest of the way and padded her lead on the final hole, picking up a birdie 4 with a five-wood shot on to the green and then two-putting from 75 feet.

This job is a drag — of the infield.

Velarde smooths out the baseline dirt.

A man outstanding...

...in his field.

Lee Velarde has had his chances to step into the bright lights, yet he isn't the kind of man who seeks personal glory first and foremost.

The majority of people who have the chance for the advantages of life in the big city and the ensuing monetary bonuses take the money and run. But not Lee Velarde.

Velarde is the groundskeeper at Cubs Stadium and is the main reason the plush infield turf looks like fine carpet. The superior greens at the Stadium have made Velarde well known in Texas, in the Cubs organization and nationally as well.

Velarde has worked for the City of Midland for 26 years and has been the head man at Cubs Stadium since the Cubs came to Midland in 1973. "I started working at Hogan Park when they built the golf course," says the soft-spoken Velarde. "I got interested in the greens and grass, and when the job here opened up in 1973 I took it."

Velarde and the two men that make up the main help in the grounds crew, Paul Sanchez and Artemio Garcia, put in long hours at Cubs Stadium. The job is a full time position, 365 days out of the year.

"In the off-season, we usually do some painting on the Stadium. This year we painted the whole stands," Velarde said. But work of this nature is largely cosmetic, and the real work — that of keeping the field in and Bermuda. "The infield is tiff, what you would see on a green at a golf course," he explained, "and the outfield is Bermuda. The tiff is kind of tough. We have to spray it a lot. But we get help from Hogan Park. We can use any of their equipment we need."

When the season is in progress, up to 130 games are played on the Cubs Stadium diamond, and that traffic flow keeps Velarde busy. "We have the Cubs, there's high school and semi-pro games." Velarde's duties are multiplied at this time. "We have to fertilize at least once a month and really soak it down when the Cubs are out of town. Most of our work is done when they(the Cubs) are gone."

When the Cubs are out for a five game road swing, Velarde's crew has "no problem keeping the infield in tip-top shape." But when the Cubs are in town, the days are longer even though the work load is different.

"When they are here, we spend 12 hours a day, seven days a week at the park," he said. On road dates, the crew spends about eight hours in the Stadium.

On game days, Velarde will confer with Cubs manager Tom Harmon and discuss how Harmon wants the field mowed. "We'll drag the field and mow the infield every day and the outfield every other day. We get it ready for BP (batting practice) and drag it again before the game," said Velarde, "then me and the manager get together and discuss how we mow the infield."

Velarde's efforts in the off-season are the kind that cause Cubs Stadium to be different from other Texas League baseball teams — and special. So special, in fact that Velarde's work at Cubs Stadium won he and his crew the top honors in competition among groundskeepers in the state of Texas. Velarde's green thumb was recognized even further as his staff took second place nationally in competition. Displayed prominently on the wall of Velarde's small office is an Honor Award for Professional Grounds Maintenance. It is a small momento of a huge job.

In the process of winning these awards, Velarde's Cubs Stadium was selected superior to the big money and facilities of such places as Arlington Stadium, home of the Texas Rangers.

As proprietor of the Texas League's number one facility, Velarde has achieved a certain status. "General Managers from other Texas League clubs come here to see how we do it," he said. This notoriety along with Velarde's awards have caused more than one offer to come his way. In fact, Velarde was offered the job of taking care of the Chicago Cubs home field, Wrigley Stadium, one of the major league's most scenic diamonds. Other big league teams have called as well.

But Lee Velarde likes it here. Born and raised in Midland, he has spent his whole life in the Tall City, playing baseball in the 50's for the Midland Indians and raising a family with five children. One son played shortstop last season for Lubbock Christian College's national champions and was named MVP of the team.

One might suspect Lee Velarde likes Midland just fine. "I really do," he smiled. "I like the people. I know most of the people here and since I took this job I know even more. People enjoy the park, and we're glad. We like what we're doing."

Unfortunately, Velarde is thinking of calling it quits in a couple of years. Says he: "I'm pretty sure I'll retire."

That will be a sad day for Cubs Stadium, and for the players, fans and baseball executives who know the contribution Lee Velarde has made to the game.

Mowing this lawn is a large scale operation.

Dancer wants win in movies

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The filly Duenna and Hall of Fame driver-trainer Stanley Dancer won the Hambletonian for 3-year-old trotters Saturday, following the kind of script that would make a hearts-and-flowers movie.

"You couldn't get a better story," said owner Norman Woolworth after his filly won the $1,000,080 Hambletonian in straight heat victories on the Meadowlands one-mile track.

"If Hollywood did it, there wouldn't be a dry eye in the house," Woolworth said.

Dancer, who has been in harness racing since 1946 and had won three previous Hambletonians, had said that his greatest thrill would be to win the famed race in his native state of New Jersey. He lives in New Egypt, N.J.

And everyone felt he would accomplish the feat with a splendid trotter named Dancer's Crown.

On July 19, Dancer's Crown died during surgery for a displaced colon and Dancer said he felt like retiring. But he continued at his life's work and after driving Duenna to a victory at Buffalo Raceway July 26, Dancer was told by Woolworth that he would drive the filly in the Hambletonian.

Asked if he put Duenna in the Hambletonian because he felt sorry for Dancer following the death of Dancer's Crown, Woolworth said he had planned on racing her in the Hambletonian even before the tragedy.

"I wasn't going to let Stanley win by default," Woolworth said.

But fate brought the driver and filly together and the result was Dancer's record-trying fourth Hambletonian victory and the first victory in the race by a filly since Kerry Way in 1966. Twelve fillies have now won in the 58 runnings of the Hambletonian.

As the 10-horse field approached the start for the second heat, Duenna broke stride and there was a recall. But she didn't mess up her second chance and got home two lengths in front of Winky's Gill, the only other filly in the field.

After Duenna ran away with her division of the first heat, Dancer said, "We missed having Dancer's Crown in there. It's just a crime. He was just one of those dream horses."

"There would have been no contest betwen Crown and Duenna. But you never know what would have happened," he said.

Joie De Vie won the first division of the first heat and only he or Duenna could have won the race in the second heat. If there had been another winner, it would have forced a three-horse raceoff.

The first five finishers in each division participated in the second heat.

Dancer had Duenna second on the clubhouse turn behind Speedy Claude. Then, just before moving onto the backstretch, Duenna took the lead and she kept it despite serious challenges by Joie De Vie and T.V. Yankee on the final turn.

Orioles' Palmer to pitch in Class A Hagerstown today

BALTIMORE (AP) — Orioles right-hander Jim Palmer is set to pitch today for Baltimore's minor league team in Hagerstown, Md., as part of a rehabilitation assignment.

Palmer, 37, who has been on the disabled list since July 3 with tendinitis in the triceps area of his right arm, will start for the Hagerstown Suns of the Class A Carolina League against Durham. He will pitch no more than five innings.

The three-time Cy Young Award winner also is scheduled to pitch for the Suns next Friday night against Winston-Salem.

"After that, we'll evaluate his condition and make a judgment about reactivating him," Orioles General Manager Hank Peters said Friday night.

Temesvari pulls off U.S. Clay title

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Top-seeded Andrea Temesvari overpowered No. 3 Zina Garrison 6-2, 6-2 Saturday to win the women's championship in the 74th U.S. Open Clay Court tennis tournament.

The men's singles and doubles finals in the $589,000 tournament at the Indianapolis Sports Center are scheduled for today.

"I couldn't really do anything," said Garrison after the 80-minute match. "You're always playing defense against her. I thought she played very well. I have nothing to be very disappointed with."

Temesvari, who earned $34,000 with the victory, said, "I was a little bit steadier."

Temesvari, who lost only 19 games in winning her five matches during the week-long tourney, found Garrison the favorite of the crowd, and she said that it made her nervous.

"I didn't know what to do. I wasn't used to that, but then I figured they were rooting for her because I was top-seeded and you always root for the underdog.

Garrison, who earned $17,500, started quickly by winning the first three points off Temesvari before the 5-foot-9 Hungarian rallied to save the game.

In the third game of the opening set, Garrison gained a 2-1 edge after winning her eighth break point of the match.

Temesvari, who didn't drop a set en route to her championship, got even by breaking Garrison and then took the lead by holding serve.

Garrison then started missing with her first serve and Temesvari began gaining control as her heavy forehand and topspin kept Garrison behind the backline.

Temesvari kept her momentum going by winning eight of the last 11 points in the second match with Garrison returning a backhand long for the final point.

Earlier in men's doubles semifinals play, Brazilans Carlos Kirmayr and Cassio Motta upset Wimbledon runners-up Tim and Tom Gullikson 6-3, 1-6, 6-2.

ISUZU P'UP TRUCK

Some beasts are born for just one thing. Work.

Isuzu breeds such an animal. The tough, dependable P'UP. The gas or diesel powered truck that has proven it has the muscle it takes to do the job. And continues proving it in over 100 countries around the world.

But the best thing about our little beast is its little price.

Not to mention how little it eats on the job.

She polished, shined and swept her way up

Text by Diane Booth

Vickie Esquivel leads a clean life.

Mrs. Esquivel, 34, is the Executive Housekeeper at The Midland Hilton. Her job is to oversee a staff of 30, which keeps the 238-room hotel pristine and sparkling.

The Midland native has worked for the hotel at Wall and Loraine streets for four years.

Her job requires her to be a supervisor, purchasing agent, accountant, time manager and negotiator. In addition to supervising the cleaning of the hotel rooms, she is responsible for the lobby, 11 public bathrooms, beverage rooms, hallways and ash urns on all 17 floors and the pool area. Hotel maids also care for management offices, the jewelry store next door and the barber shop, beauty salon and tailor shop downstairs.

She began as a maid cleaning rooms and advanced to lobby maid. She was promoted to desk clerk and then to morning supervisor of the front desk to front office manager and to her present position as head of housekeeping in April, 1982.

She arrives at her basement office every weekday at 7:15 a.m. By the time her staff arrives at 8 a.m., the day's work assignments are posted and Mrs. Esquivel has finished the daily payroll.

The room maids and lobby maids, inspectresses, housemen and laundry room employees go about their daily tasks and Mrs. Esquivel turns her attention to scheduling, purchasing and inventory.

It takes 2,000 bars of soap, 400 rolls of toilet paper, 250 boxes of tissues, 48 cans of furniture polish, 48 cans of glass cleaner and 150 pounds of laundry detergent to do her job each week, according to Mrs. Esquivel.

New towels and washcloths are ordered to replace the ones that leave with guests, Mrs. Esquivel said.

But guests also leave behind some interesting things such as clothing, a single shoe, travel alarm clocks, blow dryers, jewelry and some "obscene unmentionables."

Mrs. Esquivel learned the art of housekeeping from her mother. "She's a fanatic. She cleans every little thing."

The head housekeeper has developed one cleaning system which is followed by all her maids. "They all do it my way. I know how to walk into a room and show them how to make it easier for them to clean." Daily tasks are done in a certain order to save time going back and forth to the supply cart.

"It saves them a lot of time and time is very valuable."

Beds are stripped and made, ashtrays are washed, furniture is polished, bathrooms are cleaned and floors are mopped by hand. Carpets are vacuumed last.

A half hour is allotted for cleaning each room. Each maid is assigned to about 17 rooms per day. Every day 150 bathrooms need cleaning, 225 beds need changing and there are 50 loads of dirty laundry.

The worst part about being a maid Mrs. Esquivel said, is cleaning the bathroom. "You have to make sure there is no hair on the floor or anywhere else."

After all other cleaning chores are done, Mrs. Esquivel demands a thorough vacuum job. "When I go into a room to check, I don't want any footprints on the carpet. It doesn't give it that fresh cleaned look. That is my pet peeve."

When VIPs, such as company presidents, stay at the hotel, Mrs. Esquivel sees to it that special service is provided. The bed is turned down, pillows are fluffed and a mint is placed on the pillow. A fruit and cheese basket awaits the special guest.

Mrs. Esquivel inspects the room after it is prepared to make sure everything meets her standards. "If something is not done to my satisfaction I do it myself."

The executive housekeeper enjoys the challenge of motivating and supervising her staff.

Her rule when dealing with her staff is never to raise her voice. "I never yell at my employees. If they have any problems at work or home I try to help them as much as I can. I've seen other bosses yell at their employees and I don't like it," she said. "Being nice to employees works better. They feel they can come to you with anything. All people who work for me know they can come to me with anything. There's no friction between us."

Since she has done nearly every task her staff must do, she understands the frustrations that go with the jobs.

She remembers what it is like to have only a handful of rooms clean by noon on Saturday because everyone is sleeping in.

Mrs. Esquivel said male guests are neater than women. "Women are nice but they have a lot of stuff and you can't hardly clean the room."

There are often times when a maid will knock on a door and will get no response, only to open the door to find guests "not in a receivable way."

Mrs. Esquivel's penchant for cleanliness goes beyond her job. Before she leaves for work each day she makes sure the breakfast dishes are done and the bed is made. On the weekends she spends Saturday doing laundry and cleaning the house. On Sunday she irons clothes. But she does get a hand from her husband of 12 years, Enrique. "I've trained him very well," she said.

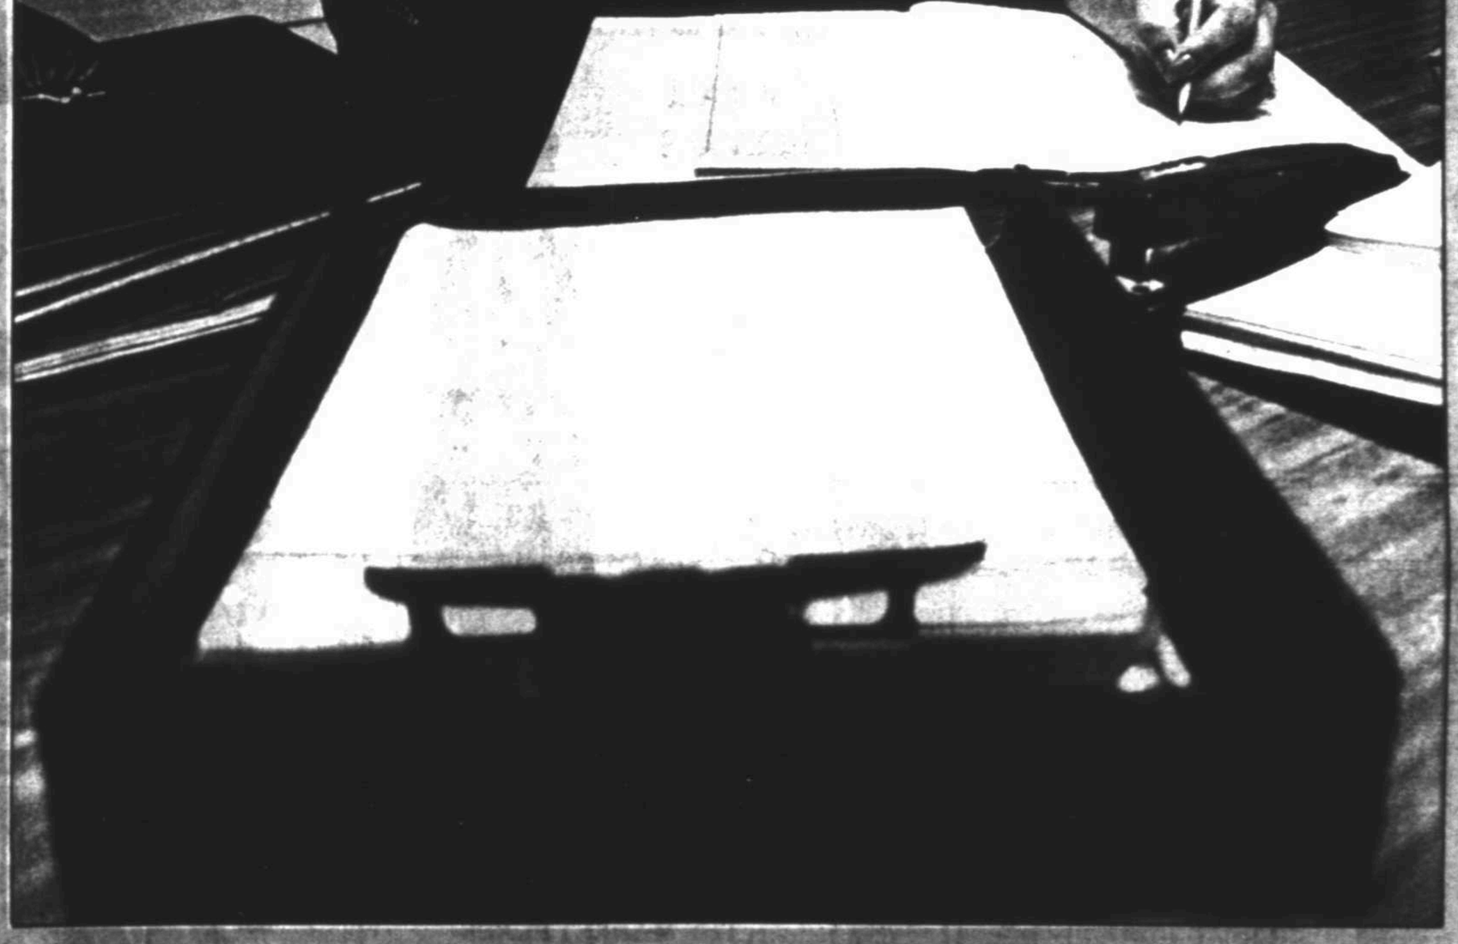
Once in a while there will be a full house at the hotel and a lot of illness on the staff. When that occurs, Mrs. Esquivel and Assistant Housekeeper Maria Carrasco take a floor of rooms to clean.

At the age of 14, Mrs. Esquivel got her first job cleaning rooms at another Midland hotel. "I have always liked to work to make everything clean," she said.

She never finished the 10th grade. What she has learned, she said "I have picked up myself." Mrs. Esquivel said she has never had second thoughts about her choice of work. "I have always wanted to be a housekeeper.

"I am a very ambitious person. If I know I can do something and somebody gives me the chance," she said, "Then I can do it. The Hilton is good about that."

Although there are many details involved in keeping the hotel running smoothly, Mrs. Esquivel said she is happiest when the hotel is full. "That's when I love it the most. It's a challenge."



Vickie Esquivel completes the employee payroll before her staff arrives each morning.

Vickie supervises the cleaning of the 238-room, 17-floor hotel.

Mirella Hernandez, top photo, one of 30 employees on the housekeeping staff, vacuums the carpet in the First National Bank suite. Delia Romero, bottom photo, wheels a supply-laden cart down the hall on her way to clean the 17 rooms she is assigned to daily.

DEAR ABBY

Other woman's husband bad bargain

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm in love with a married man. So what else is new, right? He's 43, has two grown children and has been married for 21 years. We've been seeing each other for almost two years. I'm 34 and single.

He and his wife still live together, but he says they haven't slept together for two years. He hasn't filed for divorce yet because his wife has mental problems and she was told by a psychologist that she would be incapable of facing life without him. Meanwhile, he is waiting until she's strong enough to live without him, then he will divorce her and marry me.

Abby, he seems to be doing more and more to build a permanent relationship with his wife. He recently put a new roof on their house. And now he's spending a lot of money on a new kitchen and new furniture. It sure doesn't look like he's waiting for their marriage to come to an end.

I even moved into a bigger apartment in anticipation of his leaving her and moving in with me. I know he loves me, but I don't honestly know if there's any future in my waiting around for him. What do you think? — WASTING MY TIME

DEAR WASTING: You figured it out yourself. Your signature is what I think.

DEAR ABBY: I need help with a problem that has come between me and the man I am planning to marry.

I am 26 and "L" is 36. I've had one bad marriage and no children. "L" has had two bad marriages and two children with each wife. He supports his four children, who live with their mothers most of the time.

I want children of my own, but "L" has had a vasectomy, so I suggested artificial insemination. He is absolutely against it, saying he couldn't handle the thought of my carrying another man's child. I don't look at it that way. I won't even know who the man is. "L" is also against adoption, because "the children could have 'bad genes' and you never know what you're getting."

I love children and desperately want to bear my own. (I used to teach kindergarten.) I also love "L" and don't know what to do. — LOVES CHILDREN

DEAR LOVES: "L" should return to the doctor who performed his vasectomy and find out if his can be reversed. (Some can.) If his can, congratulations. If not, before you marry "L," insist that he get some counseling to determine if his objections to artificial insemination and adoption are valid, or merely an excuse to justify his reluctance to being a father to any more children.

Book about custody battles

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Fathers involved in custody fights must realize there is little justice for them in divorce court, says a lawyer who has written a guide on avoiding the pitfalls of the system.

Attorney Louis Kiefer is convinced that many judges have a prejudice, believing that fathers who end up in divorce court have no interest in the welfare of their children.

Kiefer has not always felt that way, though.

"I began with a lot of confidence and faith when the courts said they were concerned about the best interests of children. I believed that.

"Then I found out that 'best interests' are as subjective as one's taste in breakfast foods," he said. "Trial judges are committed to a very narrow perception of father and mother roles."

Kiefer's book, "How To Win Custody," is subtitled "a complete, practical and sensitive guide to winning custody — inside and outside the courtroom."

It brings together Kiefer's experience as clerk of Family Relations Court and as a lawyer specializing in divorce cases.

"I had observed that the judges had their own rules and no one knew them," he said.

"One, you have got to have a relationship with the child.

"Two, you have to be able to prove it.

"And, three, you have to be in a position in which delays in the court proceedings don't interfere with the first two."

He urges fathers to prepare for a custody fight by establishing for public view the private reality of a father-child relationship

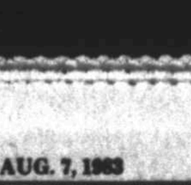
AT WIT'S END



Some things really never do change

By ERMA BOMBECK

A woman after my own heart was cleaning out her piano bench recently and came across a newspaper dated Jan. 9, 1938.

I was amazed to find a two-page marriage quiz. Maybe it's because we tend to think that divorce became a problem of the '70s and '80s. Yet, 45 years ago men and women were listing the "merits and demerits of their life partners in a test to gain the attention of all intelligent men and women who aspire to make their marriages both permanent and happy."

The plan was to tally up your mate's merits and hopefully have a total left after you subtracted the demerits.

Now you can talk all you want about the big four causes of divorce — money, kids, sex and in-laws — but take a look at these complaints that bothered their partners. Marriage comes down to a lot of little things that with time become intolerable. They also are very familiar.

Women found these things to be unacceptable in a partner. Men who belch without apology or blow nose at table . . . leave shoes in living room . . . stare at or flirt with other women while out with wife . . . tease wife regarding fatness . . . publicly praise bachelor days and regret having married . . . leave dresser drawers open . . . blame wife for everything that goes wrong; rarely admit they are wrong . . . dislike to dress or to shave on Sundays . . . call, "Where is ...?" without first hunting object . . . don't talk at home. Any one of those is enough to put the cork on a bottle of honeymoon champagne.

Now, about the women's "demerits." Even 45 years ago, men deplored women who are slow in coming to bed and delay it until husband is asleep . . . don't like children . . . put their cold feet on husband at night to warm them . . . wear pajamas instead of nightgown . . . serve dinner but fail to sit down till meal is half over and then want husband to wait on them . . . make evening arrangements without consulting husband . . . tell lies, whine and complain . . . talk about former boyfriend or flirt with husband.

It was interesting. Whoever stored the quiz in the piano bench took the test and the only fault the wife marked was "dislike to dress or shave on Sunday" and the only thing the husband marked was "wears pajamas instead of nightgown."

My conclusion: If they're both wandering around the house in night clothes on weekends the odds are good that the marriage worked.

Buttonhole style shows quality

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — One mark of quality clothing is the way the buttonholes are made, says Sharon Hinchey, Extension clothing specialist at Oklahoma State University. Buttonholes should be firmly and evenly stitched, with reinforced ends, and should be just the right length for the buttons — neither too long nor too short, she says.

Handicapped baseball fans lose seats

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Mentally handicapped baseball fans were humiliated when the "abrasive" general manager of a minor league team asked them to move from choice seats after other spectators complained, an advocacy group says.

The group of 27 mentally handicapped residents from Rainier School were forced to leave their seats behind home plate while at a Tacoma Tigers baseball game July 23, according to officials of Trouble Shooters for the Handicapped, an advocacy group for the disabled.

Gary Jungwirth, a Rainier counselor in charge of the outing, accused team general manager Stan Naccarato of saying the retarded people were "scaring the fans and didn't need to be at the ball game."

Seven members of the school's staff and two volunteers also accompanied the group. Rainier staffers characterized Naccarato as "abrasive and aggressive," according to Alice Peoples, an advocate at the school for the Trouble Shooters group.

Naccarato said Wednesday that he was in "mortal shock" after reading newspaper accounts of the flap.

Naccarato acknowledged that he asked members of the group to move, but said he did not mean to insult them.

"They're entitled to go wherever they want," he said. But he said he made the request because of two complaints from fans.

The game had not yet begun and the stands were about half full when he asked them to move, Naccarato said. An older man had complained about the group's actions and noises, while another man claimed his children were scared by the handicapped fans, he said.

"Love that Spirit!"

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

The much anticipated grand opening of the ClayDesta National Bank building will provide a glittering beginning to the holiday season and also benefit the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra. December 7 (a Wednesday) is the date set for the gala opening, which is being planned under the auspices of the Midland Symphony Guild and through the generosity of Modesta and Clayton Williams.

It is sure to be a memorable and exciting evening, highlighted by a showing of Oscar de la Renta's cruise and spring line. We hear that the designer is personally bringing his collection from New York for the occasion and also that "Ultra" magazine is planning to cover the event.

General chairman Anne (Mrs. John) Herbig and her committees have been hard at work this summer on plans for the benefit. Committee chairmen include Ann (Mrs. Bascom) Mitchell, decorations; Margaret (Mrs. James) Purvis, food; Donna (Mrs. Don) Hewett, invitations; Carol Ann (Mrs. Lynn) Hunt, mailing; Marilyn (Mrs. Neal) Allen, lighting; Julie (Mrs. Michael) Weis, publicity; Eloise (Mrs. Bill) Elgin, seating; Barbara (Mrs. Roger) Allen, sponsors; Bobbie (Mrs. Edwin) Lookabaugh, treasurer, and Schatzie (Mrs. Charles) Tighe, valet and insurance.

More about this stellar occasion later!

SARAH YURONKA, daughter of Donna and John Yuronka, is anticipating an exciting year abroad. She leaves this Friday to spend her senior year in Germany under the Rotary Foreign Exchange Student Program. She will be living with several German families in Heiligenhaus, a suburb of Dusseldorf, during her eleven-month stay.

To give Sarah a grand send-off, a bon voyage luncheon was held recently in the Garden Room of Midland Country Club. The hostesses were Mab Fitz-Gerald and her mother, Carolyn (Mrs. Jim) Fitz-Gerald, and Patsy Hinchey and her mother, Mrs. Patsy Hinchey.

INVITNG FRIENDS to a "Pig Out," Barbara and Steve Chandler entertained with a clever party at their home recently. The menu, from which guests could order, included six varieties of that old American favorite, the hot dog. They ranged from the Texas Dog featuring chili to the UFO Dog with everything on it and billed as "out of this world."

Although there were no real porkers present, the little creatures were seen everywhere in the form of stuffed animals and china figures, as well as on party goods and a welcoming poster adorning the front door.

The party honored Barbara's sister, Janet Merz, who was visiting here from San Diego.

SEVEN MIDLAND COUPLES enjoyed a week-long Caribbean cruise earlier this summer. Sailing board the S.S. Norway from Miami, they docked at Nassau, St. Thomas and a privately owned island belonging to the cruise line for a day of "beaching it."

Those who went were Nancy and Skeet Doss, Becky and Dr. Bob Hardy, Jeannette and Dr. Loren Bryant, Terry and Guy Hall, Debbie and Randy Bruno, Cynthia and Dave Clark and Ellen and Larry Bell. They were joined by Corky and Dr. Mitch Willens of Tyler, whose friendship with the Dosses goes back to their collegiate days at Baylor and with the Hardys to medical school in Dallas.

TO CELEBRATE Felix Dozier's birthday on July 27, his wife, Jackie, invited friends to "Happy Hour" at their home. The patio and pool area were decorated with multicolored balloons and Japanese lanterns, which cast a soft glow over the party after nightfall. The guest of honor was presented a number of gag gifts, including a large "bouquet" of black balloons. Among the many guests were long-time family friends, Mary Stokes and her daughter, Sissy, of Weatherford.

We hear Felix was observing a milestone birthday, but he will only admit to "39 and holding."

MARTHA AND PAT McNAIR, Dilly and Shorty Nance and Vera and Paul Wecker departed Midland in late June for London to join an American Express Tour of Central Europe. They visited London, Paris, Rome, Florence and Venice and had overnight stays in Lausanne, Switzerland; Milan, Italy; Bonn and Munich, Germany, and Amsterdam, Holland.

The Midlanders enjoyed the expertise of a very knowledgeable tour guide and had the opportunity to view lots of beautiful countryside while traveling by bus throughout the various countries.

Defensive Driving

Pretend you are behind the wheel of your car and:

— Another car runs a red light nearly crashing into your car.

— A small child chasing a ball, suddenly runs out into the street in front of your moving car.

What do you do? Do you know? Would you panic? Would you respond in time?

The leaflet Defensive Driving Tips will help you develop those defensive driving skills needed to cope with any of these unexpected situations.

First you must be schooled in those conditions that can affect your driving. Weather, road conditions and your own psychological and physical states will drastically alter the way in which you drive. Being aware of these conditions will enhance your ability to counter their effects.

A "mileage calculator" that helps you determine your vehicle's miles-per-gallon finishes off the brochure. Offer good through Aug. 31, 1983.

Women need X-rays, cancer society says

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Women 40 and over, not just 50 and over, should have their breasts X-rayed regularly to detect cancer, the American Cancer Society.

The recommendation adds 12 million American women to the 34 million who are age 50 and over for whom the cancer society previously urged regular mammograms, or breast X-rays.

A woman over 40 should have a mammogram every year or two, depending on her or her doctor's wishes, said Dr. Arthur Holleb, medical director of the society. Women 50 and over should have a mammogram every year, the society believes.

Until now, the group has been governed by 1977 evidence that the risk of developing cancer from excess radiation was greater than the risk of breast cancer for women in their 40s.

Two things have happened, Holleb and other doctors said: the amount of radiation per mammogram has been cut by as much as two-thirds in recent years, and, taking this into account, the risk of getting breast cancer now surpasses any risk of radiation-induced cancer. That risk is now "minimal ... if it exists at all," the society said.

The action puts the cancer society far ahead of the government's National Cancer Institute in recommending routine mammograms. After a 1977 "consensus conference" on breast cancer screening — one where the risks of X-raying received heavy emphasis — NCI merely said mammography "may be considered" for high-risk groups, including women 50 and older, and physicians "may" want to recommend routine mammography for younger women.

Sunglasses quality varies

Copley News Service

Grab some shades and let's go Hollywood!

Looking like a movie star may be fun. However, wearing sunglasses is serious business in Lotus Land because a bad pair can actually do more harm than good, some doctors warn.

That's because the shading process causes the pupils of the eyes to dilate. And when the pupil gets larger, the retina is exposed to harmful ultraviolet rays unless the glasses filter them out.

Andee Zeterbaum, assistant executive director of the California Optometric Association, said in a phone interview from Sacramento that you should shop carefully for sunglasses because quality can vary greatly.

Following are some suggestions from her:

— Look for a label that tells what percent of ultraviolet rays is filtered out. The higher the percentage, the better.

— Examine glasses for distortion by holding them up to a light source. If you see ripples in the lens or distorted reflections, put the glasses back on the rack.

— Try glasses on and look across the store in an attempt to read signs. Some lenses are so faulty, they can change your eyes from 20-20 to 20-50, Zeterbaum said.

The question of whether sunglass distortion is a major problem is debated among eye doctors, a local optician said.

Dark brown or gray glasses filter harmful rays best, Zeterbaum said. (A spokeswoman for the Food and Drug Administration said gray or dark green are best. It appears color choice depends on your source; however, gray as a recommendation appeared more frequently in research for this report.)

The weight of the glasses should be comfortable.

Polarized lenses cut out glare, but not necessarily harmful rays. A pair of Polaroid-brand glasses examined by this writer had a label claiming they filtered out up to 100 percent of ultraviolet rays. So if you do your Hollywood bit beside a pool or from a boat, you may find Polaroids or other polarized glasses excellent for filtering light reflected off the water.

There are problems with light-sensitive glasses, the kind that automatically darken in the sun but lighten indoors, Zeterbaum said.

Sometimes they are slow to work. And some car windshields filter out the light that makes the glasses work in the first place. So you should test this type in your car if you plan to wear them while driving.

Man fined for poking women with crutch

BOSTON (AP) — A store owner accused of getting "sexual titillation" when he poked his short-skirted female employees with a crutch says he is not responsible for more than $18,000 in fines assessed in a sex discrimination ruling.

The Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination on Wednesay awarded Gail Engel $10,538 and Janet Cassell Brodeur $8,030 in a case against the owners of Harney's Superstore in Dennis, Mass.

"These dress requirements were designed solely to display complainants' bodies because of their sex," the commission's Margot P. Kosberg said in her ruling.

"The only purpose served by exposing women in this fashion was the sexual titillation of Fred Harney," an owner of the store at the time, and other male employees and customers, Ms. Kosberg wrote.

Harney, 55, denied the charges when reached by telephone at his home in Jupiter, Fla., and said he was not responsible for paying the fines because the store no longer is in business.

"I don't know anything about that," Harney said. "I never sexually harassed anybody. All I did was have a dress code."

"While Engel was working as a cashier and wearing a skirt, Fred Harney, who had a handicap and used a crutch, put his crutch beneath her skirt, lifted it up and laughed," Ms. Kosberg wrote. "On other occasions, Fred Harney would prod and poke the female employees with his crutch."

New device gives girl mobility

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Monica Whalen, 7, not only can walk all by herself, but can also play the violin, thanks to "the Rochester parapodium" developed at the Birth Defects Center of the University of Rochester Medical Center.

Children like Monica, who were born with spina bifida and cannot move their legs, can now move about independently on this oval platform equipped with side and chest panels to support the body. The parapodium also enables children to develop at a more normal pace psychologically as well as physically, according to center personnel.

Forefathers fond of feasts

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Today, when so many of us are worrying about our waistlines, it is a pleasure to recall the era when our forefathers, who knew little about calories, indulged in gargantuan fare. It may not have lengthened their lives but it certainly brightened them.

Those were the days when a guest at one Virginia plantation I read about managed to down a breakfast of grilled fowl, prawns, eggs and ham, potted assorted vegetables, claret and coffee.

Nor was such fare limited to the Southland. In 1885, for instance, Scottish scientist William Ferguson was left bug-eyed by the dinner placed before him. The repast included two soups, two kinds of fish, nine roasts, five kinds of game, 13 vegetables, seven kinds of pastry, ice cream and coffee.

The dinner menus aboard the great trains that toured America's heartland in the 19th century give an idea of how our ancestors dined. Lucius Beebe, the late bon vivant, told about the cuisine aboard the Santa Fe line. It featured delicacies such as broiled sage hen and Mexican quail.

That was the era that produced Diamond Jim Brady, the legendary gourmand. Brady was a teetotaler, but there was nothing abstemious about his eating.

Society chronicler Cleveland Amory said that on an average day, Brady started off with a breakfast that included one gallon of orange juice, hominy, eggs, corn bread muffins, chops, fried potatoes and, finally, a beefsteak.

As the day wore on, Brady's appetite grew. At one dinner he plowed through three dozen oysters, half a dozen crabs, a double order of green turtle soup, two canvasback ducks, beefsteak, vegetables and, finally, a parade of cakes and pastries.

Here is a 19th-century recipe for one of the simpler dishes:

PHEASANT IN CASSEROLE

2 strips larding pork
6 tablespoons butter
1 three-pound pheasant
2 medium-sized truffles, sliced
7½ ounces beef gravy

Truss legs and wings of bird close to body and rub skin with a little salt. Cover breast with strips of larding pork. Place in roasting pan with 4 tablespoons of butter and roast in preheated 400-degree oven for 45 minutes. A few minutes before bird is done, heat remaining 2 tablespoons of butter in heavy casserole with tight lid. Add truffles and saute for few minutes.

Remove pheasant from oven, discard pork and cut off cord. Place bird in casserole. Skim fat from pan and discard. Add gravy to remaining pan juices. Bring to boil, stirring constantly until smooth. Pour this sauce over pheasant, cover, return to oven and continue roasting at same high temperature for 15 minutes.

WEDDING PICTURES

A bride and groom have three choices concerning their wedding pictures. They can do without them, have a friend take them or hire a professional photographer. Wedding pictures are very important because they are your wedding memories. The expressions on your face and on those attending your wedding are moments that are lost forever if photographs are not taken. So have lots of them made.

But there are many horror stories to be told about the snapshots taken by well meaning friends and relatives. Remember that owning an expensive camera doesn't automatically make someone a photographer anymore than buying a piano will automatically make someone a musician.

When you are planning your wedding, be sure to see the professionals at and let them show you samples of their special style of wedding photography. They also carry a complete line of custom stationery from Invitations to Thank You Notes. They are located at No. 98 Dartmouth Mall here in Midland. Call them at 699-0791.

TV show features kids for adoption

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Once a week, Charlotte television anchorman Bill Walker puts on his tennis shoes or a pair of rollerskates and takes a Charlotte child out to have some fun.

But the fun has a serious purpose. The outing is filmed by WSOC-TV and featured on the station's "Carolina's Child," a program designed to find people willing to adopt older or handicapped children.

More than 50 children have been featured on "Carolina's Child" since it began in September 1981. About 51 percent of the children have been adopted.

"It's a good feeling to think you had something to do with bringing together a child and a loving family," said Walker, managing editor of WSOC-TV. "It's definitely worth any time it takes."

WSOC is one of a number of television stations in Raleigh, High Point, Wilmington and Charlotte that have programs like "Carolina's Child." Several South Carolina stations also have such features and a Columbia, S.C., newspaper, The State, has a feature called "A Child Is Hoping."

In all the cities, the county social services departments choose the children who will appear on the shows. Social workers talk over the show with the child, then send along necessary information to the television station.

"We would not put a child on a show if he didn't want it," said Betty Levin, with the N.C. Division of Social Services. "The child has to understand what it's all about and want to do it. We certainly don't push them."

Most of the programs are funded by local grants and staffed by volunteers.

"Carolina's Child" has been filmed at zoos, in ice cream parlors and parks — places where children feel free to be themselves.

For example, an 8-year-old Charlotte boy was featured on the program last February taking a ride in WSOC-TV's helicopter, Chopper 9. Another program showed a 6-year-old boy mixing up chocolate candy with his hands as the song "The Candy Man" played in the background.

"We try to find out something about the child before we decide where to shoot the program," Walker said. "We try to put the child at ease, to make him feel like he can talk and have a good time. Sometimes it isn't easy and it doesn't come out quite like we wish it would, but they're always appealing."

Wines compete at fairs

Copley News Service

When a winery makes fine wines yet still has a problem selling them, certain things can be done to improve the situation, and one of the fastest is by entering the major wine competitions around the state.

Most are run by county fairs — non-profit, state-regulated functions. For a fee of perhaps $10 per entry, a winery will have its wines judged by a panel of experts, and those who win medals will be able to trumpet their achievements to wine shops around the country, with the hope that that tactic will sell more wine.

It is clear, too, that winning multiple awards with the same wine at more than one competition increases the odds that the wine is no fluke — that it didn't impress one panel by accident, or worse, that the panel it did impress wasn't very knowledgeable.

Following a honeymoon in the Hawaiian Islands, the couple will live in Midland.

Skipping breakfast bad

Skipping breakfast increases the chances you will be injured. That statement may be hard to believe, but according to an article in the August issue of "Sports Afield," it's a solid scientific fact, based on research collected by the New York Safety Council.

A well-balanced breakfast will counter the low blood sugar which is normal for most people in the early morning hours. For some individuals, poor coordination is worsened by low blood sugar. Food counteracts this by increasing metabolic activities, raising the body temperature.

Food also has a somewhat sedative effect on most individuals. The edginess a person feels in the early morning might be significantly reduced with the proper food.

Hints helpful for home, garden

Here are some handy household hints:

Cut the bottom out of any handled plastic bottle to make a disposable scoop for children's play at the beach.

Most packaged seeds should be used the same season they are purchased, as germination is unlikely if the seeds are stored too long.

Leaves of the nasturtium plant have a peppery taste and make a pleasant and unusual addition to a salad.

Protect skin from harmful rays, warns group

Copley News Service

The American Cancer Society has a sexy TV commercial showing a handsome blonde in a bikini rubbing sun screen all over her body. The message: Protect your skin from harmful sun rays that can lead to cancer.

To do this, you must first select your lotion by the numbers and then make certain you keep enough on you to screen out ultraviolet rays.

Lotions that have screens must have a label showing the sun protection factor, or SPF. It can range from 2 to 15, and the higher the number, the longer the screen should protect you.

A rule of thumb is, if you can remain in the sun one hour and not get a burn, with a SPF of 2 you could remain two hours — or an hour longer. If the SPF is 15, you'd be protected 15 hours. But keep in mind that it's a general guide that might not apply to you.

Of course, people with fair skin tend to sunburn more readily than dark-skinned people. But blacks also get sunburns and must protect themselves.

The most important thing to remember about a sun screen lotion is that it comes off with sweat and is washed off during swimming, so you must replenish it frequently if you are active.

The Food and Drug Administration recommends the following use of screens:

— People who burn moderately and tan gradually should use a rating of 6 to 8.

— People who quickly go lobster in the sun should use a lotion rated 8 to 15.

— If you must brown yourself for a healthy glow, start gradually, exposing your body a little at a time.

Elephant meat popularity grows

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (DPA) — Canned elephant meat has become a big hit with mining and building workers in southern Africa.

Elooloo, a factory in north Namibia, is selling the cans in batches of 48 for 33 rand, about $30.

The meat comes from elephants in Etosha Pan Wild Life Park in Namibia that were shot to thin out the herd.

A Windhoek gourmet, who has had a meal of a 300 gram can (about 6 1-2 ounces), says elephant tastes "almost like beef, with just a touch of game." He believes the novel delicacy would do well in supermarkets, but there are not enough elephants available to warrant a big sales campaign.

Each "surplus" elephant in the fenced-in Etosha Pan provides over 1,320 pounds of meat. There is also a ready market for the thick skin, ivory (most of it second-class) and bones.

The meat is seasoned, canned and heated. The finished product is cheaper than canned beef "simply because an elephant carcass costs us less than beef," the factory's manager says.

It took the canning plant's nutrition experts two years of experimenting and tasting to get the elephant meat "just right" for the market.

Summer time to cool it

Copley News Service

Lawrence of Arabia flitted about the desert in flowing white robes. He looked a bit of a sissy at times, but he was smart.

One of the best ways of cooling it in the heat of summer is to wear loose-fitting, light-colored clothing.

Dr. Ted Ganiats, medical director for the Family Medical Center at the University of California at San Diego, said white, loose-fitting fabrics are ideal in the type of heat that bears down on communities, as well as on the desert.

When you can, reduce your activities during a heat wave. Ganiats said it takes several days for your body to adjust to the increased heat of August and September in these parts.

Runners and others engaged in vigorous activities should slow down a bit while the body adjusts. The body tolerates heat by cooling off with perspiration. Sweat becomes cool in a breeze and this allows the body to adjust. One thing lost via sweating, however, is salt.

For people engaged in light activity, Ganiats acknowledged that drinking cool water is good for cooling off. However, marathon runners and joggers may need to drink fluids containing electrolytes, which can be found in such fluids as apple juice and Gatorade. Some active people may need salt tablets, he said.

The idea is to take in lightly salted fluids if you are perspiring heavily because of heat and heavy exercise.

Normally, one should avoid salts in the diet, he said. However, heavy loss of fluids and body salt creates the need for salt.

Elderly people are more fragile, he said, and the effects of the heat are more pronounced on them, for they adjust to heat more slowly than younger people. So that day at the beach with Grandpa and Grandma should be planned with their limits in mind.

Ganiats said the best way to cool off is to sit in a breeze, letting it fan your perspiration. Jumping into a cold pool of water, he said, may be too much of a shock to the body. The body will say, "Hey, it's too cold out there," then instinctively react to warm you up. Instead of cooling off, the body will be defending against cold.

Also, you should drink cool water. He said any fluid would be better than nothing. You should avoid "cold, cold" water, he said.

There are several ill effects of heat you should be aware of.

Couple work together in fantasy

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Welcome to fantasy land.

Not that you'd suspect it here in the drear high-rise canyon of E. 43rd Street, with the litter scraps flapping like bat wings. But 40 feet above the scum-gray asphalt is a private cosmos where reality and fancy coalesce. A deep-shag Wookie lolls in the center. On the walls are paintings from the Tolkien calendars. And on every ledge and shelf are bulls, a score of them, ceramic and wooden, a silent stampede of figurines.

Presiding over this gimcrack menagerie like elfin monarchs are Judy-Lynn and Lester del Rey — the conjugal core of Del Rey Books, the science-fiction line of Ballantine Books. She, a diminuitive dynamo festooned in gold is the house's editor-in-chief, and one of the most envied of publishing executives. "Yeah," she says, "I used to be a Jewish princess — now I'm a Jewish empress." He — the rumpled and cantankerous veteran s-f writer with a ragged tuft of chin-whiskers and the eyes of a dyspeptic Rasputin — is the line's fantasy editor.

Judy is the hottest star in a genre gone nova: from 348 titles in 1972 to 1,047 in 1982 — a year in which six of the 15 bestselling fiction hardcovers were s-f or fantasy, and two of them were hers. She's signed George Lucas' material from "Star Wars" to "Return of the Jedi," the recent number-one paperback best seller.

SHE HAS A MORTAL LOCK on Arthur Clarke, Isaac Asimov, Robert Heinlein, Stephen ("White Gold Wielder") Donaldson and more. And after 10 years at Ballantine, her advice today to booksellers becomes tomorrow's stock on the shelves.

But that's mere reality. This is the del Reys' magical habitat, and the surprises are about to begin. Judy is serving lunch, bustling in with bowls ("When I get to heaven, if there's no pasta, I'm leaving!") which she lifts nearly shoulder-high to reach the table top. She is well under four feet tall — a fact one fast forgets in the auditory avalanche that follows. Both talk at once, trampling over each other's remarks like they were being paid by the word. Each seems to ignore the other; yet no comment passes without a superbly timed sarcastic contradiction. "We do agree," she says, "but not in front of people."

IT IS BEST to agree with Lester, a spry 68, fond of playing the Sanctimonious Old Coot with an opinion on everything (most of them ratified at the cash register). A native of rural Minnesota, he was writing for a decade before Judy, 40, was born. And "I don't need a word processor. I never rewrite! I've got 50 books over there, an" ... But then Judy is saying how "in the old days of science fiction, if they needed an editor, they'd go the mail room and find some kid who read the stuff." ... But he's explaining the special keyboard he designed to "put the eight most commonly used letters right under your fingers," and how in the '50s his fantasy magazine beat its rack rivals, sneering that their covers "looked like Rorschach tests for dogs."

AND THEN, SUDDENLY, "Lester-did you feed the calves?"

Calves? Judy has disappeared into the kitchen, returning with a gleaming tray on which sit three tiny silver bowls. Quiet now, Lester carefully spoons a dollop of lunch in each bowl and takes them into the living room, where a sort of bovine shrine has been erected between the two easy chairs. On it are three identical figurines of bulls, about three inches high, each with a thatch of mink fur between the horns. The little dishes are set in front of them.

"They're the papal bulls," says Judy. "That's Innocent, that's Boniface and this is Urban." They are garlanded in miniature kerchiefs and neck chains, and each has a teeny teddy bear half its height "to sleep with." Urban is the top toro-"he's the Alpha," she says. "He wears the horn rings." And has a business card: "Urban Del Rey, Ganze Macher. Represented by the Scott Meredith Literary Agency."

THE DEL REYS STEP through this ritual as unselfconsciously as somebody else would put out the cat, then return to the table and the stereophonic nattering that, one begins to realize, is a habit of play and a dialect of love.

"Show him your card," she says. He fumbles for a copy: a simple white rectangle with his name and the single word "EXPERT." And her voice lights with pride in describing his 1951 novel about the first moon landing. He set it in 1964, but got the captain's name right: Armstrong. "So everybody says, 'Wasn't Lester prescient — isn't this a wonderful example of science fiction predicting the future?' But Lester contends that what it is, is that he and NASA thought the same way: They're gonna get a white Anglo-Saxon Protestant to be the first man on the moon!"

BOTH ATTRIBUTE DEL REY Books' success to a simple and dogmatic literary credo. "We publish the kind of books we like to read," says Judy. With Urban now at her elbow, she slides into a hard-boiled boardroom tone. "First, we are going to provide entertainment. We are not interested in meaningful, relevant, significant. If you want to send a message, use Western Union. Stories should have beginnings and middles and ends and the packaging should attract readers."

Packaging! Lester is up now, away from the table, pulling other houses' books off the shelves and gleefully insulting their covers. Judy, ignoring him, picks up Urban, turns him toward a paperback cover, and emits a Bronx cheer.

"She is very blunt," says a New York agent. "She once sent me back a rejection letter that made me turn colors." "Brutally honest," says another agent, Richard Curtis. "You seldom get a gracious rejection from Judy. What she says, in effect, is 'Don't bother me with stuff like this.'

Lee Mackey, a 29-year-old native Midlander, enjoys the investigation and security business. "It's a never-ending game played for very high stakes," he said.

Text by David Lee Forrest

Midland P.I.

Security and investigation work in Midland is not like the television exploits of "Magnum PI," according to Lee Mackey of Resources Unlimited, a Texas private investigation and security firm founded by the native Midlander.

"We've done some as exciting or more exciting than those," Mackey, a Lee High School graduate and former member of the Midland Police Department, said. "It's a lot more sophisticated than what you see on TV."

Mackey said his interest in fighting crime dates back to his junior high school days in Midland when he was befriended by two Department of Public Safety troopers, Dallas Smith and Davis Hancock, who would sometimes take him along on patrol.

"Instead of going out drinking and raising hell on Saturday nights I was out riding with the highway patrol," he said.

SINCE HE received his Bachelor of Science degree in criminal justice and law enforcement from Sam Houston State University in 1976, Mackey worked as an investigator with the Huntsville's District Attorney's office, was a patrolman with the Midland Police Department and served in the juvenile division of the Huntsville Police Department. He also worked as a paramedic while he was still in school.

He started Resources Unlimited four years ago in Huntsville, where he was living at the time. Mackey said he feels he has more flexibility with his own company than he did working with official law enforcement agencies.

"I'm a mover and like to be doing things and sometimes the bureaucratic process doesn't allow that," he said.

His company started out as a one-man operation, with Mackey doing all his private investigations solo.

"IT WAS JUST me by myself," he said.

It now has 40 employees working in offices in Huntsville, Conroe and Midland with another scheduled to open in San Marcos in September.

Mackey has chosen to open offices in smaller cities where the market is not as crowded as it is in Dallas or Houston.

Resources Unlimited tries to supplement rather than replace public police protection, Mackey said, to fill what he called "a gap between what law enforcement can handle" and the total amount of crime committed.

"We fill in that gap," he said.

"People are scared," he said. "Law enforcement can't keep up.

"The only way to pick up that slack is private security."

When he was with the Midland Police Department in 1977, Mackey said, "we had to look for something to do."

Now, he said, his Midland office is constantly working on 18 to 20 investigations a day. It is also responsible for approximately 500 alarm systems in the Midland area.

"DURING THE OIL boom, business was good," Mackey said. "After the boom, it was better."

He said many Midlanders became more security consicous when the number of transients and unemployed persons in Midland rose.

Executive protection for persons who have been threatened is a service Mackey said his company does "quite a bit of" in Midland.

"We do a lot of work for oil companies," he said.

Most threats are "business-related," Mackey said, with corporations rather than the executives themselves paying for the protection.

The precautions to protect a person can be quite elaborate.

"If the person has had threats we might have a team at the house and someone to take the kids to school and go with the wife to the store."

IN ONE CASE involving a bank president who was threatened, Mackey said, a team of men were brought in who checked his residence for bombs, set up a closed circuit television system and placed a guard dog team on the premises.

An investigator was also assigned to try to find out who was making the threats.

Such precautions normally last until the person making the threats has been caught.

"It can be a relative threatening a relative; we've run across all kinds of situations," he said. "Each case is unique."

"Usually they'll last from two to four days on up to two weeks," Mackey said.

THE COMPANY helped with security for Jim Collins when he campaigned in the Midland area during the 1982 Senate race, Mackey said.

It has also provided protection for a Grand Dragon of Ku Klux Klan in Fort Worth.

When working on a case, "we don't side with any political faction," he said.

Mackey describes Resources Unlimited as being "like a private police force."

In the next few months, the Midland office plans to have uniformed patrolmen watch customer's property a minimum of three times a night at irregular intervals, Mackey said.

The company also trains and uses and attack dogs, tracking dogs, drug and bomb detection dogs, sweeps offices for electronic bugs and installs and monitors alarm systems. The Midland office recently acquired G & G Burglar Alarm Company.

THE FIRM employs polygraph and handwriting experts, Mackey said.

Occasionally, Resources Unlimited teams are flown in a private jet when they work on big cases in other cities.

"When we have to fire up that jet it gets expensive," he said.

Mobility is important in the investigation business. In one extortion case involving "a wealthy gentleman in East Texas," Mackey went to Dallas, Fort Worth, Las Vegas, Acapulco, Houston and Midland in four days running down leads, he said.

"You never know from day to day what you'll be doing or where you'll be going," he said. "There's never a dull moment.

"I love it," he added.

Mackey particularly seems to enjoy extortion cases.

"Those are a lot of fun to work. You've got to be able to use your brain. You have to outwit the perpetrator.

"I kind of have a misplaced respect for the professional criminal," he said.

"It's a never-ending game played for very high stakes."

Bill Wheeler, left and Rocky, a German Shepherd guard dog, work for the Midland office of Resources Unlimited. Mackey compares his company to "a private police force."

Judy Reyes monitors the alarms at G&G Burglar Alarm Company, recently acquired by the firm Mackey founded, Resources Unlimited.

Hair receiver???

If you know what a hair receiver is then you probably have a grandmother who used one.

The receiver pictured is a circa 1910 vintage. Women, in earlier years, used these jars to store hair which came out on their brushes. Later, when enough hair had been accumulated, they took the hair and made watch fobs, jewelry, etc. from it.

Charming small hotels can be found in London

By JERRY HULSE
By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LONDON — After a lapse of several years it is time for an update of the small hotel scene. From Hyde Park to that section of London known as Hampstead, the choices range from slick to, well, humble.

Humble, I suppose, is how one would describe a favorite of mine over the years, the little Westland Hotel facing Kensington Gardens at 154 Bayswater Road.

It is a favorite not so much for its friendliness, cleanliness and thriftiness as for sentimental reasons. It has been my hotel now for more than 30 years, ever since I joined a group of ex-military pilots ferrying airplanes back and forth across the Atlantic in the early '50s. This was when a room at the Westland fetched $5 a night. The price was why we chose the Westland: We were dreadfully poor. But there was another very valid reason, and this involved members of the hotel staff.

Everyone loved Una O'Malley, a smiling slip of a girl from Ireland's County Mayo who served as maid-waitress-receptionist and unofficial greeter. Una died only recently, and so the Westland is not exactly the same, although it remains an excellent home for travelers on a budget.

Recommended listings of inexpensive places to stay in London and all over Britain are available in some new books sponsored by the British Tourist Authority.

In my book, the Westland is London's friendliest small hotel. The staff, of course, is the reason for this. The Westland is operated by a couple of transplanted Cypriots, Chris and Bertie Isseyegh. Because of the difficulty involved with pronouncing their last name, guests refer to them merely as Mr. Chris and Mr. Bertie.

An entire novel could be written about this hotel and its characters, both staff and guests, and the incidents that have occurred during the years it has served London travelers.

I recall how poor Una O'Malley was forever running about breathless when a certain pilot was in residence. It was difficult enough scrambling up and down stairs lugging suitcases, but she had to be quick to escape the clutches of this flier who made a game of chasing her through the shadowy halls. As far as I know, she avoided his bed, finally marrying the hotel's chef, Len Leaney.

Later, Una O'Malley grew weary (as did guests) of the stairs, and so finally, in 1971, Mr. Chris and Mr. Bertie installed a lift in this century-old hotel. At the same time they replumbed and rewired the entire place and installed central heating and baths in every room.

For thousands of travelers, including a renowned jazz violinist, the little Westland has been a home away from home. Not because it is chic (it is really rather nondescript), but it is inexpensive, clean and employs a friendly staff, including smiling Bridie Shanahan, the waitress, Jason Janos who pours an explosive martini, and Jimmy Glendenning, the combination receptionist-porter-concierge-consultant.

Hampstead is a leafy, garden-like neighborhood that attracted the likes of Mozart, Keats, H.G. Wells and Robert Louis Stevenson. Liz Taylor bought a home here as did Peter O'Toole. History permeates the hilly residential slot. It is the burial place of Karl Marx.

Relief from stress of flying

By JANET SUTTER
Copley News Service

Often the road to vacation leads right down an airline aisle. And sometimes, once the destination is reached, perhaps several time zones away, one's inner time clock goes awry. Jet lag strikes.

Gary Scherer, executive director of the Preventive Medicine Center at Scripps Clinic in La Jolla, Calif., has some advice for overcoming jet lag.

First, there is preflight adaptation.

If you are crossing time zones, particularly three or more, flying from east to west, go to bed an hour later and get up an hour later. Do that two or three days before the flight to begin putting yourself on the new time schedule.

If traveling from west to east, go to bed earlier and get up earlier. Also do everything you can to minimize the amount of stress before a flight. Plan ahead and give yourself plenty of time to get to the airport.

If you are on medication, such as for heart or diabetes, contact your physician prior to a trip — flights sometimes change responses to medication (that also holds true for alcohol).

Scherer says preflight stress levels, accompanied by the stress of an east-west, west-east flight contribute to jet lag.

During the flight, drink as much fluid as possible, about 8 ounces of fluid each hour, because one becomes dehydrated during a flight and that helps bring on jet lag. Minimize alcohol intake because it increases dehydration.

If you wish to indulge in alcohol, choose a lighter drink such as wine or a wine spritzer rather than hard liquor.

Get as much sleep as possible, particulary on long flights. Eat lightly. (Some people wind up with gastrointestinal upset.) Move around as much as possible, at least every 30 minutes, or at least do some stretching exercises in your seat.

Upon arrival, it's helpful to allow a day of recovery time for each time zone passed before scheduling a lot of activities, says Scherer. But of course, many people don't have that luxury of time.

If possible, take a flight that arrives in the late afternoon or evening so you can get a full night's sleep before going out on travel adventures or business meetings. Also, if possible, when going on a long trip plan a 24-hour stopover along the way. At the end of the flight, try to minimize stress (daily hassles) for the first eight hours. (One traveler just back from a European trip, suggested not even looking at the mail on the first day upon return.)

CNS Photo

The road to a vacation often starts in an airplane seat. If the destination is distant, jet lag often strikes. However, there are a number of precautions to take to ease the drear of flying and the after affects.

Festival in Israel

Tens of thousands of visitors and Israelis converged on northern Israel in late July for the 1983 Sea of Galilee Festival, a 10-day celebration of music and dance.

A wide spectrum of Israeli dance ensembles, chorales, popular music groups and individual entertainers joined by Country Music USA from Nashville.

In addition to concerts, other features of the festival include a major wind-surfing competition and water sports exhibition on the Sea of Galilee, as well as arts and crafts fairs and a huge entertainment park near Tiberias.

Tiberias is one of Israel's most popular all-year resorts, and hotels throughout this lakeside city offer nightly entertainment for their guests.

The Sea of Galilee is one of Israel's most prominent destinations, attracting not only vacationers to the lake's shores and resorts but also a multitude of travelers to its famous spa.

One of the world's most beautiful and tranquil spots is the Sea of Galilee, the site of this year's Sea of Galilee Festival.

Bargains don't stop at airport

By JAMES T. YENCKEL
By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

American travelers who know the value of a good bargain are heading for Europe this summer, taking advantage of cut-rate airfares and the new strength of the dollar against foreign currencies. But the savings don't stop there.

If you plan to shop in Europe (or elsewhere abroad), you should be aware that foreigners are exempt from the value-added tax that can amount to a hefty 20 percent or more on items you buy. But you must ask for the exemption, and the purchases must be shipped or carried back home.

Why pay more if you don't have to?

Customs procedures differ, and they tend to be bureaucratic, but the savings can be substantial. In some cases the amount of your purchase may have to be above a specific amount, such as $50, to entitle you to a refund.

Generally, you can avoid the tax by having the shop ship your purchase home. If that is not practical (you're afraid the item may never show up), you must pay the tax but can apply for a refund.

Ask the clerk for a value-added-tax form, fill it out and present it to a customs official when you are departing the country. Possibly you may have to mail the form to the retailer yourself after a customs official has stamped it.

You can get the refund immediately at some airports that have special tax desks. If you have paid by credit card, the refund may show up as a credit on a future bill. Otherwise, the payment will be mailed to you, probably by check in the currency of the country you have visited.

The check can be cashed for U.S. currency at a bank or foreign currency dealer, though there may be a delay and a service charge. One dealer, Deak-Perera, promises to honor immediately foreign-currency checks with a U.S. value of less than $100. The fee is $3. Over $100, there may be a wait of several weeks while Deak-Perera collects from abroad.

Travel with kids can be improved

Hearst Feature Service

Traveling with children can be the pits.

But traveling with youngsters can be less of an ordeal if you anticipate possible problems and plan ahead to keep children entertained. The following travel tips can help make travel with children a little less hectic and perhaps even keep the children from fighting over windows or kicking the seats. They might even stifle those annoying choruses of "Are we there yet?"

There is no way to avoid it — vacations often include a long car trip. If that's the case, pack favorite car games, small toys and portable snacks individually in plastic storage bags. Pack one activity or snack for each hour you'll spend in the car. Place the bags in a larger bag. As you travel, take out one bag each hour. Your children will look forward to the hourly surprises and the bags will keep the games and toy sets intact when not in use.

Pack the children's bed pillows in inexpensive pillow shams to use in the car. The shams will protect the pillows from dirt and provide a convenient place to store coats and sweaters when not in use.

Try freezing water or a favorite fruit punch in a large plastic milk carton. As the journey progresses, the liquid will melt, giving your family a constant source of cold refreshment. Pack dried fruits, granola and other nourishing snacks in plastic bags to help make your travel more enjoyable.

Urgent diaper changes often occur when there's no convenient restroom or table handy. You can make any flat surface a changing table with this handy kit made from a large bathtowel. Fold up one end of the towel about five inches to make a long pocket. Place diaper-changing items inside fold to measure proportion needed for individual pockets.

You'll probably want pockets to hold disposable diapers, baby washcloths, ointment, plastic bags to hold soiled diapers until disposed, and a toy to distract baby. Pin pocket seams, then stitch vertically along folded-up portion of towel to form pockets.

This week, we decided to give you some stitching tips. For a more elastic stitching line, shorten the stitch. This way enough thread will be stitched into the seam so as to loosen the tension on the bobbin and needle threads. As an alternative, a small zig-zag stitch will also make a more elastic seamline. Stitch twill tape, hem tape or a piece of lightweight selvage into any seamline that undergoes stress. It will serve to reinforce seams such as those at the shoulder or V-necklines. Lastly, to reduce rolling, stitch the edges of single knits ¼ inch from the edge.

Tourists should avoid drinking the water

Most people who plan to travel abroad, especially to Mexico, are already alert to the fact that drinking the water may cause a severe case of diarrhea, but many tourists are not aware of other food items which should not be eaten, or of the dangers lurking in swimming areas, mosquito bites or dog bites when traveling to other countries.

"Poor hygiene and an ineffective sewer system account for most of the contamination in Mexico," states Dr. Douglas Hurley, Director of Infectious Disease at Scott and White in Temple.

"One of the most unsuspected, yet highly contaminated, foods in Mexico are the red or green hot sauces which are served with other food dishes," noted Dr. Hurley. "These sauces are often left out all day, and most people think that since they are 'hot' with pepper seasoning they couldn't possibly be contaminated." Dr. Hurley added that if the hot sauces are processed and are in labeled containers, they are probably safe.

Some safe foods recommeneded by Dr. Hurley are raw vegetables and fruits which may be washed and peeled. "Handling of fresh fruits and vegetables by the farmers and vendors is responsible for a great deal of the contamination," Hurley explained.

"Also, if meat is well cooked (not rare) and arrives at the table still steaming, one may wonder if it is safe to eat," said Dr. Hurley. Asked what is safe to drink, he replied, "Bottled water, wine, and bottled soft drinks, but be careful of ice cubes. It's easy to forget that they're made from water." If silverware and dishes look and feel clean, they are probably safe enough to eat from, he added.

There are several strains of viruses which are common only to certain parts of the world, and when travelers are visiting these areas, they are likely to contract the viruses which local inhabitants have become immune to. "If people from Mexico, Central America or Africa come to visit the U.S., they may experience similar viral illnesses for which they have not developed an immunity because the viruses are common only to our area," explained Dr. Hurley.

Medication recommended by Dr. Hurley includes antibiotics such as sulfamethoxale-trimethropin or a tetracycline drug. For business of other travelers who must visit foreign countries frequently, or for the elderly, Dr. Hurley suggests preventive measures such as profilaxis with one of these drugs.

When considering swimming in a lake or stream in a foreign country, a good rule of thumb is to see if the water looks clean or if it is a clear running stream. "Since more parasites live in standing water, a clear running stream or clean-looking water is probably safe to swim in."

Dog and mosquito bites should be considered much more seriously in other countries, said Dr. Hurley. "Rabies is much more prevalent in Mexico than in the U.S.," he added. "However, rabies has been totally eradicated in England because of the strict quarantine rules."

Exotic tropical diseases such as malaria and yellow fever (a viral disease carried by a mosquito) are common to Africa, India, Southeast Asia and South America," Dr. Hurley stated. "Yellow fever is an equatorial zone problem and travelers to those areas should obtain a vaccination."

When travelers apply for a passport, it is not required that they obtain vaccinations to get in or out of a country, explained Dr. Hurley. "Even when travelers apply for a visa to a given country, they are merely advised of suggested vaccinations, but it is left soley up to the tourist as to whether he gets them."

No vaccinations are necessary when traveling to industrialized Europe, because those countries have such strict quarantine regulations.

If emergency treatment or medical transport is needed while traveling in a foreign country, Dr. Hurley suggests contacting the American Embassy or the American Consulate. "They are there to represent the best interests of America and to take care of its citizens," Hurley emphasized. "Also, most hotels should have a list of competent physicians in the area."

CNS Photo

Mexico is a great place to relax on a vacation if tourists take care to avoid drinking the water and consuming certain food items. Swimming should also be confined to areas where the water is clean or there is a running stream nearby.

Jane Addams' work goes on in Hull House tradition

By JOHN FARINA
Copley News Service

CHICAGO — Jane Addams and Hull House. Part of Chicago's past — and present.

Hull House was the city's famed neighborhood settlement house, where European immigrants at the turn of the century, and later — Italians, Jews, Germans, Irish, Bohemians — found an oasis in the "desert" of a strange and unfamiliar land.

Streams of them came to Chicago, and the West Side was Chicago's port of entry.

The immigrants represented 19 European nations, and they came to the New World with dreams and hopes for a better life.

More than 9,000 of them visited Hull House weekly from nearby neighborhoods, to learn to play, to seek help in settling in their new land.

That was long ago.

Hull House, a complex of 19 buildings which served them well, is mostly demolished now to make room in 1963 for the Circle Campus of the University of Illinois.

But part of Hull House still stands, a tourist attraction and a mecca for social workers and philosophers and others concerned about people and their welfare, just as Addams was.

Hull House at 800 South Halsted St. is also the place where I played as a boy, and where I began to learn about ethnic differences and the contributions people of all national origins make to the human race.

My brother, Nick, also knew and loved Hull House.

And my cousin, Pat, who spent more time there than any of us because she lived closest.

She still has a ceramic coffee cup coaster she made, a treasured possession.

And she remembers the sewing classes and the fun times during the summer at Hull House's Bowen country club, a camp outside the city where city kids could enjoy unfettered nature.

After school, we climbed the monkey bars in the courtyard of Hull House. We made toy animals and people puppets with papier-mache.

Settlement house workers played the piano for us and told us stories.

The adults shared their ethnic foods and crafts with all, and they learned citizenship values and how to speak English.

Mothers learned the principles of sanitation, and how to raise children to become good Americans. Fathers were assisted in developing new job skills and securing employment.

TRAVEL ADVISORY: Kenya — The State Department advises that hotel accommodations in Nairobi will be at a premium from Sept. 15 to Oct. 3 due to the Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference. Travelers should have confirmed hotel reservations prior to arrival in Nairobi during this period.

Q: If I travel to Mexico with my passport, will I still need a tourist card?

A: The Mexican Consulate advises that a tourist card is always required for tourist travel to Mexico even though you have a valid passport. For complete information I suggest you contact the Mexican Consulate nearest you.

Q: I've bought my ticket for an overseas trip, and now I find it is going to take time to get evidence of citizenship so that I can get a passport. Is there anything you can do to help?

A: Sorry, not much we can do to help as we must have acceptable evidence of citizenship before we are able to issue a passport. Since definite travel plans are not necessary to apply for and secure a passport, we always advise travelers to either have a passport in hand before they buy a ticket or be certain they have the necessary evidence to apply for a passport well before their departure date.

Q: My passport will have about a week left on it when my trip is over. Is this running too close, as I'd hate to be delayed for some reason and find my passport had expired. Also, I don't want to go to the trouble of getting a new one.

A: It's up to you if you want to use your passport nearing its expiration. If you happen to be in a foreign country when it expires, you may apply for a new passport at an American consular office. However, this can be awkward if you're on a scheduled tour, plus time consuming.

Midland couple learns when to bail out

And a thing or two more about business, themselves

After being in business for themselves for nearly 10 years, Mike and Kathy Credicott have learned a thing or two about location, pricing, displaying merchandise and advertising. Between the two of them, they have owned, or operate now, small businesses in Midland and Abilene as varied as an electronics repair service, gift shop, T-shirt store, snack bar and second hand clothing store.

The most important lesson they've learned is when to admit a business is not doing well and when to get out of it. They learned this the hard way in 1978, when they let two profitable shops go, in a futile attempt to shore up a mediocre third business with which they were too emotionally attached. They just couldn't face the prospect of selling or closing "their baby," although eventually they lost it anyway.

"There's no place for emotion in business," Mike says today. "At least, not that kind of emotion."

No matter. The Credicotts say they have had a lot of fun, a lot of headaches, a divorce and remarriage in the same year, made some money and lost more.

"A person has to be about half-way twisted to want to be in retail," claims Mike. "Regardless of how well you do one year, you have to do it all over again the next. But, it gets in your blood."

For Kathy, the rewards of being an independent business person are selfish. She says of her business, "It's mine, and I'm going to try harder for something that's mine. It's a challenge."

THE CREDICOTTS have contributed money and jobs to Midland's economy in the way most small businesses do. They are the backbone of the American free enterprise system.

Today, Mike operates Quality Electronics, which sells and services televisions, TV satellites and other electronic equipment. Recently, he completed the wiring for the TV system at the Mark Twain Inn on West Wall.

Since June, Kathy has come out of "retirement" at home with their two pre-teen daughters to open two businesses: Pot Pourri, a snack bar in the Vaughn Building lobby and a second-hand clothing store, Rags to Riches, on Thomason Drive.

She and a friend, Vicki Cupp, decided "over a glass of tea" on a Wednesday afternoon that they should open Rags to Riches. By Friday night, they had found a location, signed the lease, and begun fixing the shop. Monday morning, they opened for business.

OF COURSE, Mike, who studied marketing and has worked for Sears, Dillards and other companies, dreams of someday opening a store he half-jokingly has already named "Mike-owitz."

Perhaps the Credicotts' most enduring contribution to American entrepreneurism has been their unique concept of having a fire sale — at a candle shop.

Midlanders may remember the Enchanted Wick, a novelty candle and gift shop at Imperial Shopping Center on Wadley at Midkiff. Kathy started the business in 1974 on Thomason Drive and later was able to move to the new location.

Things were going pretty well until 1976, when fire destroyed most of the shop.

Kathy remembers the scene well: novelty candles melted down into globs of wax were sitting on wooden shelves right next to brand new candles miraculously untouched by the flames.

"There was such a feeling of loneliness, emptiness, to see all this we had worked so hard for go down the drain."

BUT, SHORED up by their religious faith and Mike's dry sense of humor, the couple immediately planned to rebuild. The fire sale came first.

"That must have been a first — a candle shop having a fire sale," Mike says. "People were lined up to get inside."

The fire was not the only hardship the Credicotts faced that year. Business strains, long hours, and the demands of raising two children finally caused a rift in their relationship. That spring, they "just thought they would schedule a divorce," as Mike puts it now.

They had met in Crane when Kathy was 13 and Mike 16. Later, they married and Mike went to work for Sears in San Angelo, Abilene and later, Clovis, New Mexico. In 1974, they transferred to Midland.

Mike was manager of Sears' appliance department and supervised and trained several salesmen. He was responsible for all ordering, merchandising and advertising for the department, which was operated as if it were an independent store.

Kathy, at home with the children, became bored and decided she wanted to open a novelty candle shop.

"He thought in his mind I wouldn't stay with it," she recalls of Mike's initial reaction. "He lined out a long list of things I had to do — find a building, go to the bank, get a sales tax license. It only took me two days to do it all, and then we went to market and we opened."

After the first excitement wore off, Kathy's frustration began to mount as she saw the business go through highs and lows. Mike decided if the business was worth having, it was worth all their effort, so he left Sears in 1975 to join Kathy.

"I decided to work extra hours — like 80 to 100 extra hours," he says. "We made it through that year, by some miracle, and we even made money.

"But, it was a transition for me. I felt extremely proficient at the applicance business. I was used to handling sales of anywhere between $100,000 and $200,000 a month. At the candle shop, it was $2,000 or $3,000 a month."

Kathy, meanwhile, came to resent Mike's expertise even though she knew it was needed to help "the Wick" succeed. Mike seemed to dwell on charts, graphs and percentages she didn't understand. He kept telling her they had to spend money to make money.

"I didn't understand that at the time, because we had no money — and I didn't want to be the dummy."

SO, THE COUPLE divorced in the spring of 1976. Mike ran the Wick and Kathy became a petroleum secretary in what she calls "the concrete jungle" of downtown Midland.

After the fire, however, the Credicotts got back together and remarried later that year. They believe now the whole experience was meant to be; that it strengthened them and made each stronger for the other. They rebuilt the business.

That fall, they opened a second Enchanted Wick in an Abilene mall and in just a month it paid for itself. The Wick in Midland never seemed to match Abilene's performance.

"The Wick in Abilene could do no wrong, and it made me determined to make the Wick in Midland do as well," Mike says.

He knows location was a big factor. In 1976 there was no mall in Midland.

"Location makes up for a lot of stupidity," he says. "It can overcome poor buying decisions, poor employees. The single most important thing is to be in a high traffic area."

IN 1977, THE Credicotts started selling T-shirts at the Wick to cash in on that craze. They soon opened a small shop in Dellwood Mall.

How did they handle operating two stores in Midland and one in Abilene? "Mike just had more charts on the wall in his office," Kathy says with a grin.

The Credicotts admit now they should have sold the Midland Enchanted Wick when it began to waiver and kept the two stores they owned which were in mall locations — but they didn't, and they eventually lost all three.

"It was like raising a child," Kathy says of the struggle to make the Midland Wick succeed. "We had worked so long and we were so involved with it."

Mike says there are times when children grow up to "be ugly" with their parents instead of providing for them, and that businesses can be the same way.

"The Wick started taking a dive and we sold the other two stores to keep it in business. We should have closed the doors then, but we were too stubborn."

THEY LOST it altogether in 1978.

Mike then helped set up the appliance department at the new Dillards store in Odessa while Kathy stayed at home with the kids.

But, they missed running their own show. Mike soon started Quality Electronics in his garage. Six months later he was able to move to a location on South Garfield.

Today, Mike and Kathy are "racing" to see who makes the most vacation money first. They say they are the type of people who try their best and, regardless of the outcome, they will keep the important things in life as a top priority.

"We learned that money is not the only way to judge success," Mike says. "We are like steel which gets tempered in the fire — we must be getting pretty top grade by now."

Kathy says she would advise anyone contemplating opening a business to "go for it." And Mike adds: "I would tell people just don't marry the business. With little ups and downs, don't think it's the end of the world."

Mike and Kathy Credicott a husband-and-wife small business team have in their years of partnership at home and at the store seen more ups an downs than the oil industry.

"A person has to be about half-way twisted to want to be in retail," claims Mike.

Kathy is committed to the business life.

"It's mine, and I'm going to try harder for something that's mine. It's a challenge," she says.

Court ruling could turn victory to defeat

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Hearst Washsington Bureau

PORTLAND, Maine — A Supreme Court decision upholding California's right to tax worldwide income of U.S.-based multinational corporations could prove a pyrrhic victory for the Golden State.

Initially hailed as a triumph for California and the 10 other states that have a so-called unitary system of taxation, the court's June 27 ruling could motivate some corporations in those states to move elsewhere.

That is what at least three major industrial states — Texas, Ohio and Minnesota — are banking on. They are exploring ways of luring business away from California by pledging not to touch foreign income.

The tax ruling and other emerging factors loom as major issues in the intensifying competition between the sunbelt and the snowbelt. Many of the nation's governors and experts from the business and industrial world at the meeting of the National Governors' Association here last week agreed that tensions between states are growing because of the severe recession and the massive new competition from foreign products.

The Supreme Court's decision, one of the topics discussed, means that California can keep earning as much as $500 million additionally each year through its tax formula, and the other 10 states about $250 million. Yet the decision has not prompted a rush by most other states to redraft their tax laws.

INDEED, RATHER THAN following suit, Texas is starting to help companies calculate their tax savings if they move out of California to Texas, which not only has no state corporation tax but will not touch its industries overseas activities.

Minnesota and Ohio governors say they plan to do the same thing.

Pennsylvania, on the other hand, is looking hard at the court decision and could follow California in levying a unitary tax.

Until now, Texas has gotten a free ride, compared to most other states, because its oil and gas resources have subsidized the school systems and have enabled the state to do without corporate and state income taxes.

With the oil industry still reeling from the glut of supplies and resulting low prices, that cushion is fast disappearing. This coincides with the flooding into Texas schools of immigrants not only from Mexico and Central America but from northern states where the recession prompted millions of midwestern residents to move south.

NOW, GOV. MARK WHITE, a moderate Democrat, is facing higher taxes almost inevitably — but this is prompting him to look at California's current tax status and to undertake new strategy to lure away California companies as well as to snare companies relocating from the midwest or east.

Governors in the hardest hit midwestern states had agreed informally to disavow the "beggar thy neighbor" policies, which had resulted in the luring of nearby industries into their states.

But that agreement already is being set aside as uncertainty about the future prompts top-to-bottom reassessment of economic and social-welfare game plans. "I believe some states are just going to fall apart but others are going to prosper in the years just ahead," said Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich, a Democrat returning for a second term after years abroad with Control Data Corporation that dramatically changed his outlook on life.

Perpich's three years in Vienna, Austria, gave him a special sense of urgency about his mission to make Minnesota competitive in the tough years ahead.

But governors of other states say the recession itself has been the catalyst for an action agenda that has them looking hard at their energy independence, their educational standards, their competitive tax status, and the viability of the major industries in their states.

ALL ARE IMPORTANT in an era of confusion about whether the steel and auto industries can resuscitate themselves and whether high-tech jobs are the wave of the future or just another form of sweatshop industry.

In the past, many sunbelt states have relied on low wages and cheap energy to get business from the higher cost snowbelt regions. That strategy now may be obsolete. "Those states that use low wages to attract business will find that is a no-win situation. Hong Kong and Singapore can beat them every time," said industrial analyst Ira Magaziner.

Magaziner and others briefing the governors cautioned against too much reliance on the high tech industries, noting that even if all existing high tech industries grew 100 per cent every year for five years they would provide only 10 to 15 per cent of today's steel and auto industry jobs. The challenge is to find ways to make the basic heartland industries competitive again, as well as to absorb the high cost of the new experimental potential growth industries.

To outsiders, the older regions of the country seem impossibly crippled while the sunbelt states seem to be scoring one success after another.

For example, White of Texas scored a major coup last month by nailing down a major high-tech research and development complex for Austin, which he hopes will compete with Boston's Route 128 high-tech complex and northern California's Silicon Valley.

BUT WHITE MUST persuade a reluctant state legislature, dominated still by rural and conservative interests, to launch a major upgrading of the state's educational system. He knows this must be done if Texas is to churn out the engineers and other specialists for the next generation of research jobs in what his experts already label the "golden triangle" between Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio.

Indeed, education is a major key to economic survival, when the work force will require far more highly skilled and flexible employees.

Arkansas Democratic Governor Bill Clinton convenes a special session of his legislature this month to purusade lawmakers that the extremely poor state must spend more on education before it ever can compete.

Florida just completed a successful upgrading and stiffening of its school standards, as did Mississippi, whose retiring governor William Winter concluded that the relatively ill-educated work force was one major reason why massive advertising campaigns in the north failed to lure many Fortune 500 employers to the low-wage, water-abundant region.

Energy — and the rapidly changing cost structure across the country — is another core economic variable.

THE SUNBELT ENERGY advantage may disappear by 1990, the governors' economic analysts contend, as the northern states make significant investments in energy conservation and the southern and western states are hit hard by price increases.

In 1970, industrial energy prices in the south were 26 percent below the national average but in 1980 they were only 12 percent lower. Western electricity rates jumped even more dramatically; they were 50 percent below national average in 1978-79 but were only 12 percent below in 1981.

New York State pioneered a program now being copied elsewhere which uses 70 retired engineers to provide free energy audits for small and medium size industries and commercial firms.

Working out of 15 regional centers, the engineers have completed 100 audits a month in the past two years and the firms who followed their advice saved about 15 percent of their energy costs, for an average of $20,000 in savings a year.

It was the shock of seeing how higher energy prices crumpled the competitive ability of European industries that so aroused Minnesota's Perpich in the late 1970's.

AFTER HIS UPSET victory as governor last fall, he has been a whirling dervish travelling to dozens of states to investigate innovative economic projects and travelling abroad to bring home energy-saving programs.

Education is not the problem in Minnesota. "Our base pay for teachers is what some of these other states are now talking about as 'master pay'. We have the lowest dropout rate in the country," he said.

Perpich is emphasizing a crash program to upgrade skills and to require more matchings of skills and jobs.

It took only one visit to Massachusetts for him to seize upon its quasi-public Bay State skills program as the vehicle. From Georgia he took home that state's use of wood waste for energy purposes and will have it in operation in six months. From upstate New York, he incorporated a solid waste disposal program. From North Carolina, he adopted the state's office of technology.

He is bringing in Finland's use of peet for energy; the use of biogas from Switzerland; and has persuaded the Swedish steel firms to start a mini-mill using his state's Iron Range taconite for producing pig iron.

WITHOUT OUTRIGHT abandoning the heavy industries in the Iron Range, Perpich is trying to steer his state toward high technology in specialized fields, such as biomedicine and medical research. "We are going to have the 'medical alley' from Rochester to Minneapolis," he said.

He is not apologizing for his state's high taxes, which rank in the top ten in the country, saying they are the vital underpinning for the educational and industrial health of the state.

"Federal cutbacks are not nearly as damaging to our region as they are to the sunbelt," he said. "We'd only gotten 65 cents in federal programs for every dollar we paid in federal taxes and the southern states had gotten far more. But now they are going to have to pick up the slack from federal program reductions by increasing their own taxes."

OIL AND GAS NOTES

Gas, oil wells reported

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace has announced that Texas operators reported 158 gas and 83 oil discoveries in June 1983.

One year ago, 122 gas and 75 oil discoveries were filed with the state's energy regulatory agency.

Gas discoveries in June included 52 in deep South Texas, 37 in the Refugio area, 20 in West Central Texas, 18 in Southeast Texas, 16 in East Texas, five in the San Antonio area, four in East Central Texas, three in North Texas, two in the Panhandle, and one in the San Angelo area.

Oil discoveries included 23 in West Central Texas, 16 in Southeast Texas, 10 in deep South Texas, eight each in North Texas and the San Angelo area, six in East Texas, four in the regugio area, three each in the Midland and Lubbock areas, and two in the Panhandle.

In June, operators reported 435 exploratory and field tests wound up as dry holes.

New application for permits to drill oil and gas tests totaled 2,684 in June, as compared to 1,586 during the same month a year ago.

Applications to drill, deepen, plug back and for service wells in June amounted to 3,085 against 2,945 a year earlier.

Operators filed 744 amended applications to drill. A year earlier they submitted 891 amended requests.

Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace has announced that 21 permits to operate new pipelines in Texas were granted by the RRC in June. In May, the Commission approved 12 permits, and 17 were granter in June 1982.

Fifteen of the new permits were for gathering pipelines, two were for gas plant lines, and one was for a trunk transmission line. Three were for multi-purpose lines. Gathering lines bring oil and gas from production leases, while trunk transmission line is larger diameter line into which smaller lines connect. At gas plants, gas is stripped of the liquid hydrocarbons usually present in wellhead gas.

Sixteen of the newly-permittd lines will transport gas, three will carry crude oil, one will carry products and another will move salt water.

In June, four permits each were granted to operate pipelines in Southeast Texas, West Central Texas, and North Texas; two each in East Texas and the San Antonio and San Angelo areas; and one each in East Central Texas and the Refugio and Midland areas.

Mobil operates safely

The Andrews Producing Area of Mobil Producing, Texas and New Mexico Inc., has been recognized by the National Safety Council for its exemplary on-the-job safety performance for 1982.

The National Safety Council selected Mobil Producing, Andrews Unit, for a 1st place award in its 1982 Petroleum Section Safety Contest for producing areas in the United States. The annual contest is based on the lowest incidence rates achieved by National Safety Council member organizations during 1982.

The Mobil Andrews Producing Area qualified for its safety award based on its rate of sero cases involving days away from work per 200,000 employee hours worked.

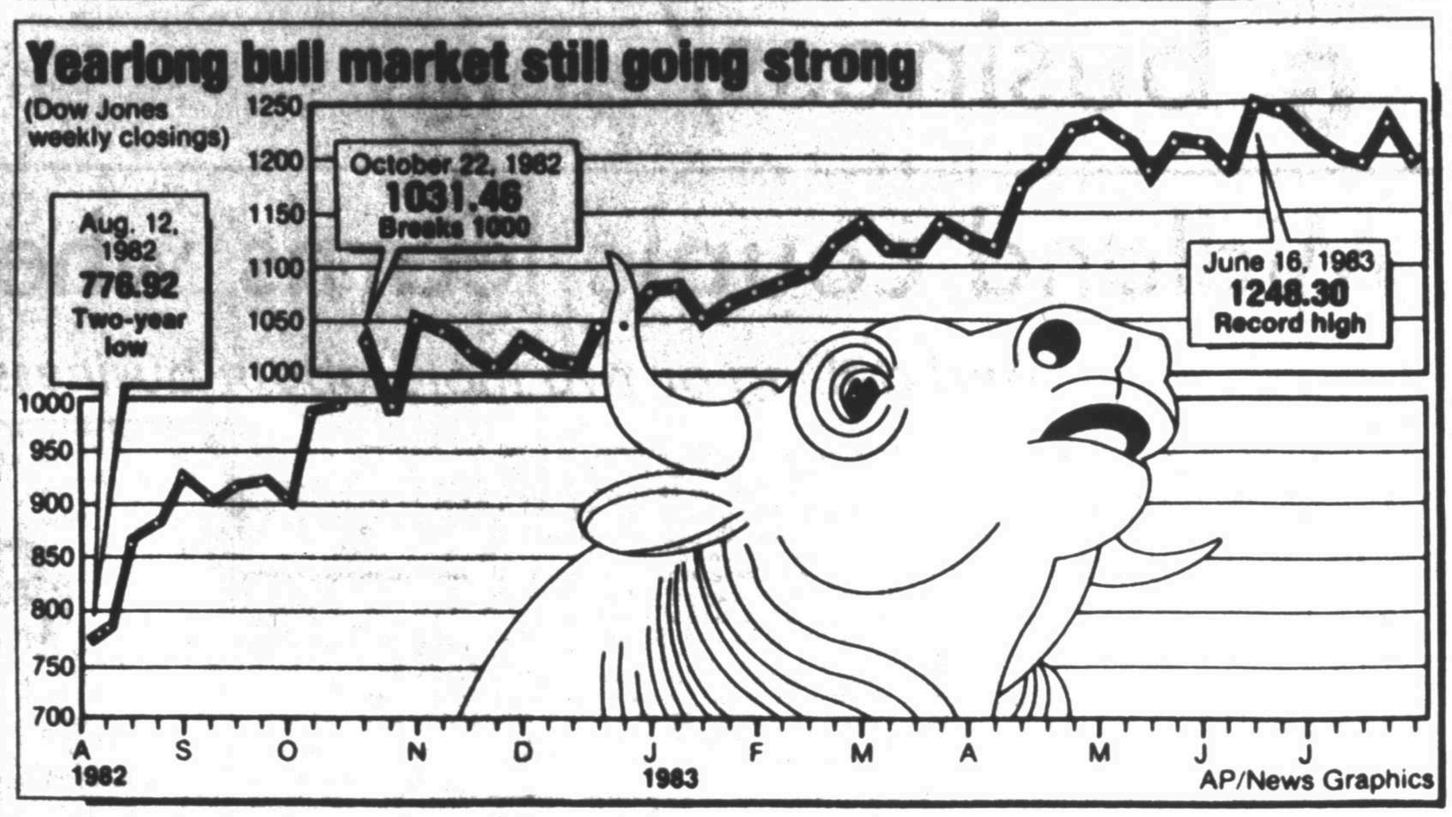
In addition to the National Safety Council award, the local unit was presented three other awards for the achievements. These came from American Petroleum Institute, Mobil Producing and the National Safety Council.

The Mobil Producing Andrews Unit records over 9 million man hours on-the-job which has accumulated over a period since February, 1972 without a lost time accident.

McComb wildcat approved

AUSTIN — The School Land Board has approved an application by Exxon Co. USA for the M. McComb "B" No. 1 Unit in a wildcat field, Pecos County. Pooling is for gas.

The unit is 704 acres, of which 25.5 acres are state-owned. Exxon has drilled the well for the unit to a measured depth of 25,735 feet, and the well is being tested, the board reports. The State has a one-eighth royalty interest.



Raging bull market

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

Thanks to the bull market on Wall Street, Marie Dresser plans to put Santa Claus on a generous budget for her daughter and grandson at Christmastime this year.

The 91-year-old Mrs. Dresser, a widow who lives in a Washington, D.C., suburb, says she has made about $25,000 so far in 1983 investing in stocks.

She is one of countless people and institutions with happy tales to tell as the historic market rally passes its first anniversary. Since last August, the value of stocks traded in this country has risen by about $700 billion.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, the oldest and best known measure of stock-price trends, reached a record closing high of 1,248.30 on June 16, up from a low of 776.92 last Aug. 12. Early this month, it was hovering just below 1,200.

At an age when many people prefer to stick with conservative investments like bonds, Mrs. Dresser says she likes to take a few chances. She has had great success with lower-priced stocks, including some in the over-the-counter market.

"I'm not buying General Motors or anything like that," she says. "I guess I'm sort of a gambler type."

The market has been good to gambler types, and less kind to the cautious. Since stock prices suddenly took off a year ago, they have advanced almost without interruption, confounding just about all the professionals who make their living trying to predict its behavior.

"I've been astonished by the degree of it," confesses Julius Westheimer, a broker at the Baltimore-based firm of Baker, Watts & Co.

Much has changed in the U.S. economy since the bull market was born. Last year at this time, there was no relief in sight from a recession that was already 13 months old.

Now, almost every expert agrees that the economy began to recover last winter and gathered momentum in the spring. The government recently reported that the gross national product grew at a robust 8.7 percent annual rate, after adjustment for inflation, in the second quarter of this year.

"The stock market acted as a very good leading indicator of economic activity," said Edward Yardeni, economist at the investment firm of Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. "It gave us a signal that the recovery was coming, and the strength of the rebound also foreshadowed that the recovery could be quite strong."

Yardeni and other economists say the extra wealth the market's rally created has helped to get the recovery in business activity started. It has also been a boon to many companies, both old and new, eager to raise capital by selling stock in order to pay off debts and finance future growth.

In the first half of 1983, corporations raised $26.6 billion through the sale of common and preferred stock, according to Abrahamsen & Co., a Hoboken, N.J., statistical research firm. That record total was nearly five times the $5.5 billion obtained through the same channels in the first six months of last year, when the stock market was severely depressed.

Amid all these positive developments, economists and market analysts still see many reasons for concern. The unemployment rate has come down only grudgingly, and remains near 10 percent.

No solution has been found to the problem of the federal budget deficit, which is expected to surpass $200 billion for the government fiscal year that ends Sept. 30. Interest rates have turned up this summer, threatening to slow or even stall the recovery. Countries like Brazil and Mexico are struggling under the burden of huge international debts and the threat of default.

"There are still a lot of icebergs in the fog," said Raymond F. DeVoe Jr., an analyst at the brokerage firm of Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc. "Some things, like the international monetary problems, actually look worse than they did a year ago."

Midland Lock and Safe can secure your valuables

Over three million burglaries are reported each year, according to FBI records. These statistics continue to rise with alarming rate.

With the odds mounting against you, the time to protect your valuables is now, not after you've been robbed.

Midland Lock and Safe Service will secure your valuables from fire and burglary.

There are as many different kinds of safes as there are needs for safes. At the bottom of the list is the inexpensive portable fire box for storage of important papers and other small items.

The safes range upward in function and price to the larger vaults. Fireproof safes protect against fires and the non-professional burglar.

Money chests or in-the-floor safes provide ample burglary protection and fire safety when properly installed. In both the fire and the money chests there are a large variety of ratings, which can be confusing to the layman.

Midland Lock and Safe Service is a safe professional – willing to analyze your needs and recommend the right safe for you.

Known for service, Midland Lock and Safe Service provides the largest selection of security locks between El Paso and Dallas.

All major brands are available: Star, Major, Johnson-Pacific, Meilink and Gardall.

If you feel your home or business is in need of more security protection, stop by Midland Lock and Safe Service, located at 1408 North Big Spring, or call 682-4202.

There are as many different needs for locks, safes and other security measures. Whether business of home protection is needed, count on Midland Lock and Safe.

They can be counted on to help one have and hold valuables safely.

Midland Lock and Safe Service: Get the protection you need – where it counts – in a high-security safe. Don't wait until a burglary has occurred.

FROM THE BUSINESS WIRE

Forbes 'rich list' subject of suit

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Industrialist Kenneth W. Davis admits he's wealthy, but he is suing Forbes magazine to keep the business monthly from saying how rich he really is.

Davis, who with his two brothers, Cullen and Bill Davis, owns Kendavis Industries, has filed a federal suit to prevent Forbes from including him on its annual list of the 400 richest people in America.

Davis said in court Friday that he believed the public "would be offended by the release of information about my private wealth."

His attorney, Cecil Munn, said Davis' inclusion on Forbes' so-called "rich list" was comparable to publishing nude photos of Jaqueline Kennedy Onassis.

After a hearing Friday, U.S. District Judge David O. Belew said he will rule within 10 days on a request by Davis for a temporary injunction against Forbes.

Munn told Belew that such injunctions are becoming "more necessary in dealing with a press that increasingly recognizes no right of restraint and no right of privacy .... Only the court can right the balance."

Forbes lawyer Marshall Searcy countered that "the Supreme Court of the United States has made it clear time and time again that anyone who seeks prior restraint comes to court with a heavy burden.

"It's simply not reasonable to conclude that the publication that any individual is very wealthy will casue him irreparable harm," Searcy said.

Last September, Forbes' first list of the 400 wealthiest Americans said Davis and his brothers were worth $250 million each.

Belew, although giving no indication of how he would rule, at one point wondered aloud what would prevent Forbes — should he grant the injunction — from simply publishing a list of the 399 wealthiest Americans with a note that the magazine was "enjoined from saying Ken Davis is number 400."

Beautification kills business in Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — A downtown Austin beautification project has been anything but beautiful for business, say two restaurant owners who have sued the city.

The suit filed by the Avenue Restaurant and the Waterloo Icehouse says the dust, fumes and inconvenience caused by the Congress Avenue project has kept customers away.

The $2.6 million beautification project started in March and is scheduled for completion early next year. As workers moved down the avenue, parking places were barricaded.

Business owners say the project hurt sales during the 1982 Christmas shopping season. City officials have agreed to halt work this year from Nov. 1 until Jan. 2.

The two restaurants are seeking money from the city to cover their losses, but no specific amount was requested. The work in front of the neighboring restaurants was completed in July.

Included in the beautification project is the widening of Congress Avenue sidewalks. The walks will be resurfaced with pink granite to match the state Capitol, which is at the northern end of the main downtown street.

Abbott Building Company, a West Texas-based construction firm, has recently opened a new division in Austin, according to R. E. Abbott, president. With officers in the Champion Tower on east Anderson Lane, the division is headed by vice president Howard Thrift.

The company specializes in the design and construction of commercial and industrial buildings, both conventional and prefabricated steel.

Abbott cited Austin's economy as a major reason for forming the new division. "Austin was a logical move for us. The area is experiencing phenomenal growth, and we believe it will continue for some time to come," he stated.

Thrift, who formerly managed the company's Houston division, is also enthusiastic about prospects in Austin. "The business climate here is aggressive and everyone is optimistic about the future. We are already doing preliminary work on several projects."

Abbott Consolidated Industries, Inc., operates through a number of subsidiary companies and divisions and has 300 employees. Headed by H. Eugene Abbott, chairman of the board, and A. Laurence Barton, president, the company is based in Midland, Texas. Formed in 1982, the function of Abbott Consolidated has been to coordinate the activities of all companies and divisions, oversee their growth, and explore possibilities for further diversification.

Tooth Fairy expands

From Wire Reports

Like many other businessmen, the Tooth Fairy is expanding his (yes, his) product lines in order to sustain growth.

Until now, the Tooth Fairy has been content to run his business in the traditional way: A child would leave a new-fallen tooth under the pillow and the Tooth Fairy would come along in the middle of the night and exchange it for a nickel, dime or quarter ($5 in Beverly Hills). Despite his monopoly, Mr. Fairy has felt the squeeze of inflation. Thus, the new product.

Now, parents who, for some reason, want to keep their child's first tooth — or teeth — can mail them in a padded envelope to the Tooth Fairy, who, by day, passes himself off as Gary Hohenstein, owner of Crown Royal Dental Laboratory in Bellevue, Wash.

He or one of his elves will plate the tooth in 24-karat gold with an eyelet mounted for hanging on a chain. He will then package the tooth in a jewelry-quality box, add a certificate of registration made out to the child and signed by the Tooth Fairy, and mail it — all for $17.95.

Those who are sentimental about their first pair of dentures and would like them gold-plated should write for a quote.

The financial-data industry may want to be advised: Harrington Drake is considering another shopping tour.

By the end of next year, the chairman and chief executive of Dun & Bradstreet Corp. will have a cool $1 billion in cash lying around, and Drake wants to spend it acquiring companies that can help D&B improve its specialty, providing businesses with credit ratings, financial reports and services. The new companies will join such other D&B products as Moody's Investors Service, the telephone Yellow Pages, as well as dozens of others under the D&B name.

People in the financial-data business know about "Duke" Drake's buying sprees. Over the last few years, the company has embarked on an aggressive program of acquisitions, divestitures, introduction of new products, reassignment of managers and restructuring of divisions — all aimed at transforming the once pudgy-but-profitable information company into an agile performer in the expanding field of computer-delivered business services.

The transformation, moreover, was accomplished at a time when D&B was faced with its first real competitive challenge on several fronts — such as the advent of Business Credit Services by TRW. Today, even though its market shares generally are smaller, securities analysts say D&B's prospects have never been brighter.

Over the past three years, for instance, D&B's earnings per share have risen about 17 percent a year. Return on shareholder equity, which averaged 22 percent through the 1970s, rose above 30 percent in 1982, prompting the company in June to make a 2-for-1 stock split. That growth in equity return came as D&B posted record net income of $142 million on $1.5 billion in revenues.

The success has continued this year. The company announced second-quarter 1983 earnings in July of 81 cents a share ($45 million) on revenues of $398 million, an increase of 17.4 percent.

D&B's most immediate cash expenses will come in starting a computer network, announced last Thursday, over which the company can transmit its growing number of computerized information services. The $22 million system, called DunsNet, is supposed to eliminate the problems D&B says it has had transferring data on "overloaded" common data networks. (Indicative of those problems was the time that Drake — trying to show visitors the new D&B computer services — could not call up data because the computer network's phone line was busy.)

Most of the cash, however, will likely be spent over the next few years acquiring companies that provide the kind of electronic data DunsNet will carry.

Of the cash hoard D&B will use to finance these acquisitions, about $450 million is to come in after-tax gains from the sale of D&B's six television stations, a group called Corinthian. The rest will come from interest on that cash, plus the roughly $150 million in excess cash D&B generates annually from normal operations.

The Corinthian sale is the latest example of D&B's strategy under Drake and President Charles Moritz to divest subsidiaries unrelated to the financial-services and information fields — D&B's fastest-growing areas. The company bought Corinthian at a time when television was growing faster than information services, but over the 12 years of its ownership D&B could neither add value to the stations nor share their costs with other divisions (a standard D&B practice). The parent company did enjoy substantial profits from Corinthian, however, and will reap a substantial gain in equity from selling the division at six times book value.

CREATIVE FINANCING

In today's maze of financing possibilities, it is critical to use the service of a Realtor when buying a home. With the right financing, you may be able to qualify for a loan easier as well as save moriey.
Here are some of the financing methods used today.

Mortgage Assumption: In some cases, you can assume the mortgage that already exists on the home you buy at a lower than the going rate. This usually involves a higher than normal downpayment.

Seller's Second Mortgage: Some sellers will finance part of the remainder - reducing the down payment you have to make.

Graduated Payment Mortgage: A GPM permits smaller payments in the early years with higher payments later. Interest rate is fixed.

Renegotiable Rate Mortgage: On the RRM, interest rates may be renogotiated at regular intervals, usually 3 to 5 years, to reflect changes in the interest market.

Contract Sale: Some sellers may agree to finance the property themselves at negotiated rates and terms.

Adobe earnings down five points; Coastal earns double

ADOBE OIL & GAS
(AMEX: AOI)

Adobe Oil & Gas Corp. recently announced operating earnings and earnings per share for the first half 1983 were down five percent compared to the 1982 period.

Net operating earnings were $11,116,000 compared to $11,729,000 for like earnings for six months 1982. Net earnings per share for first half 1983 were $0.68 versus $0.72 from operations for the 1982 period.

Operating revenues were $83,146,000 versus $103,742,000 in the year-ago first half, but cash flow for six months 1983 increased to $29,541,000 compared to $28,874,000 in the like 1982 period.

For second quarter 1983, net operating earnings were $5,445,000 or $0.33 per share compared to earnings of $5,828,000 or $0.36 per share for 1982 second quarter. Cash flow for 1983 second quarter increased to $14,540,000 from $13,948,000 for 1982 second quarter.

The 1982 figures for second quarter or first half do not include extraordinary earnings of $17,807,000 or $1.12 per share as a gain on sale of the Company's North Sea Interests.

PARALLEL PETROLEUM
(OTC: PLLL)

Parallel Petroleum Corporation reported net income for the first six months ended June 30, 1983, compared to a loss in the same period a year ago.

The company earned $42,488, or $.011 per share, on revenues of $509,620.

This compares with a net loss of $171,751, or $.046 per share, on revenues of $553,841 for the same six-month period last year.

Positive cash flow for the period was $158,444, or $.039 per share, compared to negative cash flow of $85,733, or $.023 per share for the respective six-month periods of 1983 and 1982.

Oil and gas sales during the first six months of 1983 were $252,714, an increase of 39 percent over the $184,100 in oil and gas sales re-corded for the same 1982 period. Total costs and expenses during the first six months of 1983 were $467,132, a reduction of $258,460, or 36 percent as compared to the same 1982 period.

Frank S. Delay, president, said that Parallel has continued to maintain its strong financial position, with working capital of $1,064,513, and no debt.

Delay said Parallel operates under the "successful-efforts" method of accounting. Drilling expenditures on an inception-to-date basis have resulted in $1,942,734 (76 percent) being added to the balance sheet under Producing Oil and Gas Properties, and $687,696 (24 percent) being charged to Dry Holes and Abandonments on the income statement.

Gains achieved on the sale of leasehold interests in the amount of $748,089, on an inception-to-date basis, have exceeded Dry Hole and Abandonment costs by $60,393.

COASTAL CORP.
(NYSE: CGP)

HOUSTON (AP) — The Coastal Corp., a gas pipeline and energy company, doubled its earnings for 1983, reporting second quarter earnings of $31.1 million and six-month earnings for the year of $45.2 million.

The 1982 totals for the same period were $15.8 million for the second quarter and $21.8 million over the six months.

Coastal attributed its improvement to increased margins in its refining and marketing segments and from the addition of the Wyoming Interstate gas pipeline system.

However, the company said profits were down in exploration and production for the year, due mainly to decreased purchases of gas by pipeline customers.

It said the 1983 earnings include an after-tax cash profit of $11.8 million from the company's tender offer for shares of Texas Gas Resources Corp.

Funds from operations totaled $158.1 million for the six months of 1983, compared to $99.7 million for the same period of 1982.

Newspapers recovering

Advertising inches up, costs squeezed

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

After toughing out a year that saw the demise of 21 of its ranks, the newspaper industry is starting to recover. Advertising is creeping back, newsprint prices have dropped, and — helped by a strict new watch on costs — newspaper companies are squeezing more profit out of each dollar of revenue.

Even with only moderate increases in advertising linage this year, industry analysts are predicting double digit increases in profit for the industry as a whole.

"Business is good, not great," says Thomas Ferguson, president of the Washington Post. "But it's a lot better than last year."

That isn't hard. The recession of 1982 separated American newspapers like a sieve, with the unhealthy failing to make the shake out. Advertising linage declined, with automobile and real estate classified linage particularly hard hit. The industry also lost more of its share of all advertising to other media — principally television — dropping one percentage point to 27.3 percent.

WHILE FEW newspapers were immune, worst hit were the second papers in each market, usually the afternoon editions. By year's end, 10 American newspapers had died, and 11 others had disappeared through mergers.

When the dust had cleared, the industry did manage an increase in profit of 8 percent overall. But to do it, most of the 1,711 papers that survived instituted strict cost cutting measures. Many froze hiring, cut back on expenses, laid off employees and some even shrank their circulation to save on paper. At The New York Times, 147 employees were induced by "buyout" offers to retire or resign. Miami-based Knight-Ridder Newspapers Inc. postponed raises for many employees nationwide.

The Los Angeles Times, owned by the Times Mirror Co., also froze hiring, briefly delayed a cost-of-living increase, elminated much of its first-class travel and merged its weekly You and Fashion sections into View. The Los Angeles Herald Examiner, owned by the New York-based Hearst Corp., froze hiring, cut back on overtime and eliminated much of its expensive distribution to distant circulation areas.

The industry's increase in earnings, moreover, was meager by the double digit levels highly profitable newspaper companies are accustomed to. And those profits were earned at a time when unemployment in the industry doubled, leaving 31,000 people out of work.

MATTERS BEGAN TO turnaround in January, gradually. Although advertising linage is flat for the year so far, the amount of ad space sold has picked up significantly since April. At the Los Angeles Times, for instance, total advertising space sold in June grew 12.5 percent over a year ago.

Coming back strongest of all is classified advertising, led by help wanted ads and automobile ads. But real estate, a traditional leader during recoveries, is improving only moderately. Many newpspaper executives believe their real estate classified sections will never again reach the peak they did in the late 1970s.

The weakest area is national advertising, a traditional laggard during recoveries, but also an area where newspapers compete directly with television.

Analysts say the recovery is also broad based, with papers in every region gaining ground. A few papers, nonetheless, look especially strong. The Wall Street Journal has enjoyed a robust 8 percent increase in ad linage so far this year, far above the national average, said George W. Flynn, senior vice president of Dow Jones Corp. Several New York area papers also are doing better than most, as they did last year. The New York Times Co.'s newspapers reported a 79 percent increase in the second quarter profits.

Overall, papers are profiting because ad revenues are up by about 17 percent this year, according to a survey of newspapers in 39 cities published by Editor & Publisher magazine, mostly due to increases in ad rates.

ONE OF THE BIGGEST boosts to the industry, however, was a drop last fall in the price of newsprint, of which the newspaper industry consumes 10 million metric tons a year. The $32 drop to $468 a metric ton will save U.S. newspaper companies more than $320 million this year. That fact alone, more than any other, could buffer many of the less healthy newspapers as they try to get back on their feet.

Today's is a leaner newspaper industry that across the board is looking for more unusual ways to boost revenues. Almost every major company instituted some sort of elaborate corporate strategy to contain expenses, and despite the growing profits, most plan to keep those programs for some time.

"Some of the good management and cost savings programs are paying off," said Ferguson of the Washington Post. "You don't just revert back to the sloppy habits of the past."

The industrywide hiring freezes for the most part remain, with some selective hiring now allowed. Knight-Ridder, which owns 31 papers nationwide, is allowing certain papers to hire for special local sections called Neighbor, and for expanded weekly financial sections called Business Monday. It is also still delaying pay increases, however.

THE GRIP ON COSTS will loosen at individual papers, Knight-Ridder spokesman Frank N. Hawkins Jr. said, as revenues for that paper return. "We want some more proof that we are in fact out of the woods."

Another help to newspaper company management is the lower inflation rate, which is translated into lower levels of pay increases for the labor intensive industry. Combined with the shrinking staff sizes through attrition and some layoffs, industry labor costs are rising at a rate of about 5 percent to 6 percent a year today, analysts said, compared with 8 percent to 9 percent two years ago.

"The newspaper industry is coming back through a combination of both improving advertising, lower newsprint costs and only modest increases in labor costs," said John Morton, a securities analyst with Washington-based research firm of Lynch, Jones & Ryan.

With revenues squeezed, however, many companies are searching for new ways to attract readers and advertisers. Harte-Hanks, for instance, this month replaced its cost cutting program called "Phase 3" with a complicated corporate strategy to examine both new products and even new areas of business, called "Target 83"

One of those products is a slick community magazine, such as one Harte-Hanks introduced in San Angelo, Texas. Harte-Hanks also is expanding its "zoned" sections, which are special locally oriented parts of the paper circulated exclusively to a given area. These sections allow big city papers to attract small advertisers who might not afford full-run space.

ANOTHER PRODUCT Harte-Hanks and other companies are exploring is special advertising supplements delivered free to every household, even non-subscribers. Such "throwaway" supplements allow newspaper companies to offer advertisers "Total Market Coverage" — one of the appeals luring advertisers to television.

Pre-prints — special advertising inserts printed separately and then inserted into the newspaper — also have gained in popularity among advertisers because they usually cost less.

More newspaper companies also are buying into electronic media, such as cable television stations, or computer-delivered information, such as the Times Mirror's Videotex. The move is not limited to large companies. The Daily Dunklin Democrat in Kennet, Mo., circulation 6,500, recently announced it was buying a 24-hour cable television text service.

One of the possible industry dark spots this year is circulation. At Gannett, the largest U.S. chain with 85 mostly smaller-sized newspapers, circulation is down 2 percent, not including its new national paper USA Today. Industry insiders also report drops in circulation at several other papers, including the Philadelphia Inquirer, and the San Francisco Examiner.

AGA supports Sharp bill for gas decontrol

The American Gas Association said recently that it believes the opposes the compromise natural gas pricing legislation narrowly voted out by the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources — and sent to the full Senate without recommendation. The bill, AGA said, contains provisions that will unnecessarily increase gas prices, are unduly complicated, and should be changed when considered by the full Senate.

AGA is on record supporting the need for legislative relief this year that would lower gas prices, permit greater utilization of the increased domestic supplies now available, and lead to an orderly transition to a fully deregulated market for new gas exploration and development.

To the extent that the action of the Senate Energy Committee is a step toward passage of such legislation, AGA welcomes this move. AGA believes this is a constructive step for floor consideration and a clear signal to the House of Representatives to accelerate its movement toward legislative relief.

AGA recognizes that significant changes in this bill are needed to ensure these consumer and national energy policy benefits and will work with members of the Energy Committee and the full Senate to this end.

Despite efforts by the Commitee to develop a compromise bill, the results are flawed in that it includes unduly accelerated old gas price decontrol, unduly complex federally-mandated transportation systems and other provisions that would increase consumer gas costs.

An AGA comparison of the effects of the Senate Committee compromise, the Sharp Committee print in the House, and the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 (NGPA) reveals that while the Senate Committee proposal would result in lower residential gas prices than those under NGPA for the next few years, prices under this legislation would exceed residential gas prices under even the NGPA over the long-term and exceed prices under the Sharp Committee print for the entire period.

In addition, the Sharp bill provides the strongest future supply response.

AGA will continue to work for legislation to modify take-or-pay requirements, defuse indefinite escalator clauses, and remove market restraints on gas use — positions for which a broad consensus of support presently exists in the Congress.

AGA OPINIONS: On gas decontrol

Desk & Derrick education fund OK'd

CORPUS CHRISTI — The Association of Desk and Derrick Clubs has announced the Internal Revenue Service has approved the Desk and Derrick Educational Trust which was created by members at the national convention in Fort Worth in September 1982.

The trust will award scholarships to full time and part time women students who are working toward a degree in a petroleum-related field. The scholarship program lends credence to the Desk and Derrick motto, "Greater knowledge — greater service," said Gladys Watford, chair of the board of trustees.

Since the trust is an endowment fund, with only the income being used each year for the scholarship awards, no scholarships can be offered until contributions reach a certain amount, the association said.

Checks should be made payable to Desk and Derrick Educational Trust, care of Gladys Watford, 9 Greenway Plaza, suite 2112, Houston, Texas 77046.

BANKING

A changing business

Dimension bank idea causes industry row

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — Fred Shaffer scrunches down in the brown leather chair on the far side of an aging brass spittoon beside his desk, touching a hole in the sole of his right shoe.

"I was in this bank and I heard a trust officer apologizing to a very old lady about missing their earlier appointment, saying that he was sorry she had to make a second trip.

"I looked out the window and saw four bank cars sitting down in the lot and I thought, 'Why didn't he send a car for her or drive out to her ... that's what service is all about."

At 60, Frederick I. Shaffer Jr., better known as "Bud," doesn't look like the man behind the proposed Denver-based Dimension Financial Corp., one of the most controversial banking concepts to come down the teller trail since deregulation began fuzzying the lines between financial institutions.

He looks like what he is, a Kansas native, the son of a furniture dealer and mortician. He thought tax shelters were more interesting than college, so he quit the University of Kansas to begin brokering oil leases.

Today, Shaffer is a highly successful independent oilman.

The studied understatement of a landman on the prowl, Bud Shaffer nestles comfortably in his five-room suite of offices — the home of Kansas Crude Inc. — in a slightly remodeled medical building in downtown Hutchinson.

With him are two of his four sons — Ron, 32, the family ramrod for Dimension, who turned over the day-to-day operation of Kansas Crude to another brother, Tim; and John, 25, who researched and produced 31 separate applications for banks in 25 states that were presented last February to the U.S. comptroller of the currency.

With them also is Daniel Carroll, 56, a private consultant who once headed the management consulting division of Booze Allen Hamilton in Chicago. Carroll is chairman of the Dimension Financial organizing committee. The other three are Harold Dufek, chairman of Valley Federal Savings, of which Fred Shaffer is a major stockholder and board member; Bill Mitchell, Shaffer's attorney; and A. Gary Shilling, a New York-based economic consultant.

The informal coziness belies the drive that has made the group the eye of an inter-banking storm that will be aired publicly when the comptroller conducts a series of hearings

At issue is the decades-long ban on interstate banking by commercial banks.

Banking laws and regulations define a commercial bank as one that receives deposits and engages in commercial lending. Over the years, banks have established commercial loan production offices in other states, but have complied with the law by not accepting deposits out of their home state.

Dimension intends to accept deposits — and estimates them at $1.5 billion within five years — but will eschew commercial lending.

Bankers, regulators and some congressmen have cried foul, charging that Dimension is trying to squeeze through a loophole in the law, thwarting the will of Congress.

Not so, the Shaffers and Carroll reply in unison.

"We're building on blocks," Bud Shaffer said. "I'm convinced we don't need commercial loans. People will make deposits to get the kind of service they want."

Said Carroll: "We do not have plans to make commercial loans. We're not going to put at risk a first-class concept to test the outer limits of the regulations.

"There is a market segment not successfully served by the commercial banks," Carroll said. "It's the upscale market ... educated people who worked hard for their money and want it professionally managed and will pay for professionalism .... Big banks use their resources to serve the big-ticket accounts. Personal banking is usually not their best ... and the little banks can't afford the economists, the portfolio managers."

That is the niche Dimension expects to fill, describing itself more like a European merchant bank than a conventional U.S commercial bank.

"We'll have a smallish presence in the markets," Carroll said, "but spread the overhead across 31 banks in the holding company and be able to offer such services as tax shelters, investment advice, computer-based portfolios."

Dimension will offer non-financial services as well, Ron Shaffer said, using as an example a family that wants to go skiing in St. Moritz, Switzerland, but does not want to plan any of the details. The Dimension bank would make reservations, exchange currency and "hand them the tickets."

The Dimension concept was born of Valley Federal, a $100 million savings and loan that converted mutual ownership to a stock company six or seven years ago.

Bank network will aid cities

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Washington Bureau

PORTLAND, Maine — Banks are notoriously conservative in their lending policies and the traumatic economic shakedown that has gripped most sections of the country has paralysed many loan executives at just the time when their help is most needed.

That's the bleak analysis of a leading Boston banker, Dr. James M. Howell, senior vice president and chief economist of Bank of Boston.

Howell and other activist bankers are taking the lead in steering bank loans toward development projects in older urban areas that have a good shot at success.

Howell, a wise-cracking Texan who plays on his southern accent in erudite Yankee land, told the National Governors' Association here that too often bankers could be identified by the "silver in their hair, gold in their teeth and lead in their ass."

That dooms too many worthy projects that could propel local areas to a bright future, including funding for industrial plants, civic centers, hotels, or shopping malls.

The Boston-based Council for Northeast Economic Action has created a network of 13 banks with combined assets of more than $160 billion to finance development projects both in the depressed midwest and in the emerging sunbelt. "We've run into three barriers in the last 5 to 8 years," Howell said, when studying ways to help local communiites expand and prosper.

"One is the inherent conservatism of banks. We've demonstrated that when communities get in trouble, banks become more conservative, which is not a matter of their financial capacity but a matter of their will," Howell said.

Many medium-sized and smaller banks lack the sophistication to package the federal, state and local government funds with their own money to help a promising local venture get off the ground — "and that non-familiarity produces its own problems," he said.

Current bank laws also restrict the funds that medium-sized banks can loan out. More than 60 percent of the 1400 banks in the U.S. average about $200 million dollars in assets and that means they are restricted to lending no more than $20 million dollars each — "so that places big capital limitations on the money available."

Explicit pricing: Banks halting free services

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

It must happen all the time — three times in a month, in fact, to one bank customer who was closing accounts at several banks and each time was asked to pay for the check giving her the balance.

She did not think she should have to pay $2.50 to get money that was rightly hers, and a lot of money at that, so she would say, "OK, I'll take it in cash." The teller would then offer to "see if we can waive the charge," and wonder of wonders, each time they could.

It seems an extraordinary exchange: The charge is apparently routine, as is its cancellation — if, and only if, the customer balks. It is the more extraordinary for taking place in banks, which boast a long past of customer service and a new future in competitive retailing, but, as such charges illustrate, are now neither here nor there.

The very idea of the charges is relatively new, introduced when banks began paying competitive interest for customer deposits they used to get for nothing or next to nothing. In turn, they started charging for a lot of services they had offered free, a practice they call "explicit pricing," and which they believe is characteristic of the general retail world that deregulation is helping them enter.

"Explicit pricing means we sell cashiers checks, there's a charge; we sell checking accounts, there's a price," said John Nenninger, a vice president at Security Pacific National Bank. "There's less 'bundling' or 'relationship' pricing, whereby a man with $15,000 on deposit and a car loan gets free travelers checks, free safe deposit, etc."

It is not like retailing as we know it, of course, unless a lot of stores are tacking charges on everything a customer might want — from paper bags to the floor manager's signature — and variable charges at that. Even a bank staff is not always clear why certain charges exist: A California First Bank branch officer, for example, thought that the 50 cents charged for photocopying a check was meant to discourage a practice that runs "against privacy laws; some people might take that copy and try to pass it off as a real check."

Cashiers check charges, however, are supposedly based on actual costs — the check form itself, says Guy Molde, assistant vice president at First Interstate Bank of California, the time of typing, signing, microfilming, and filing, plus some allowance for branch overhead. "The internal cost versus the price," adds Nenninger, "is literally at break-even, on a per-unit basis: If we issued one cashiers check, it would have cost us $2.50."

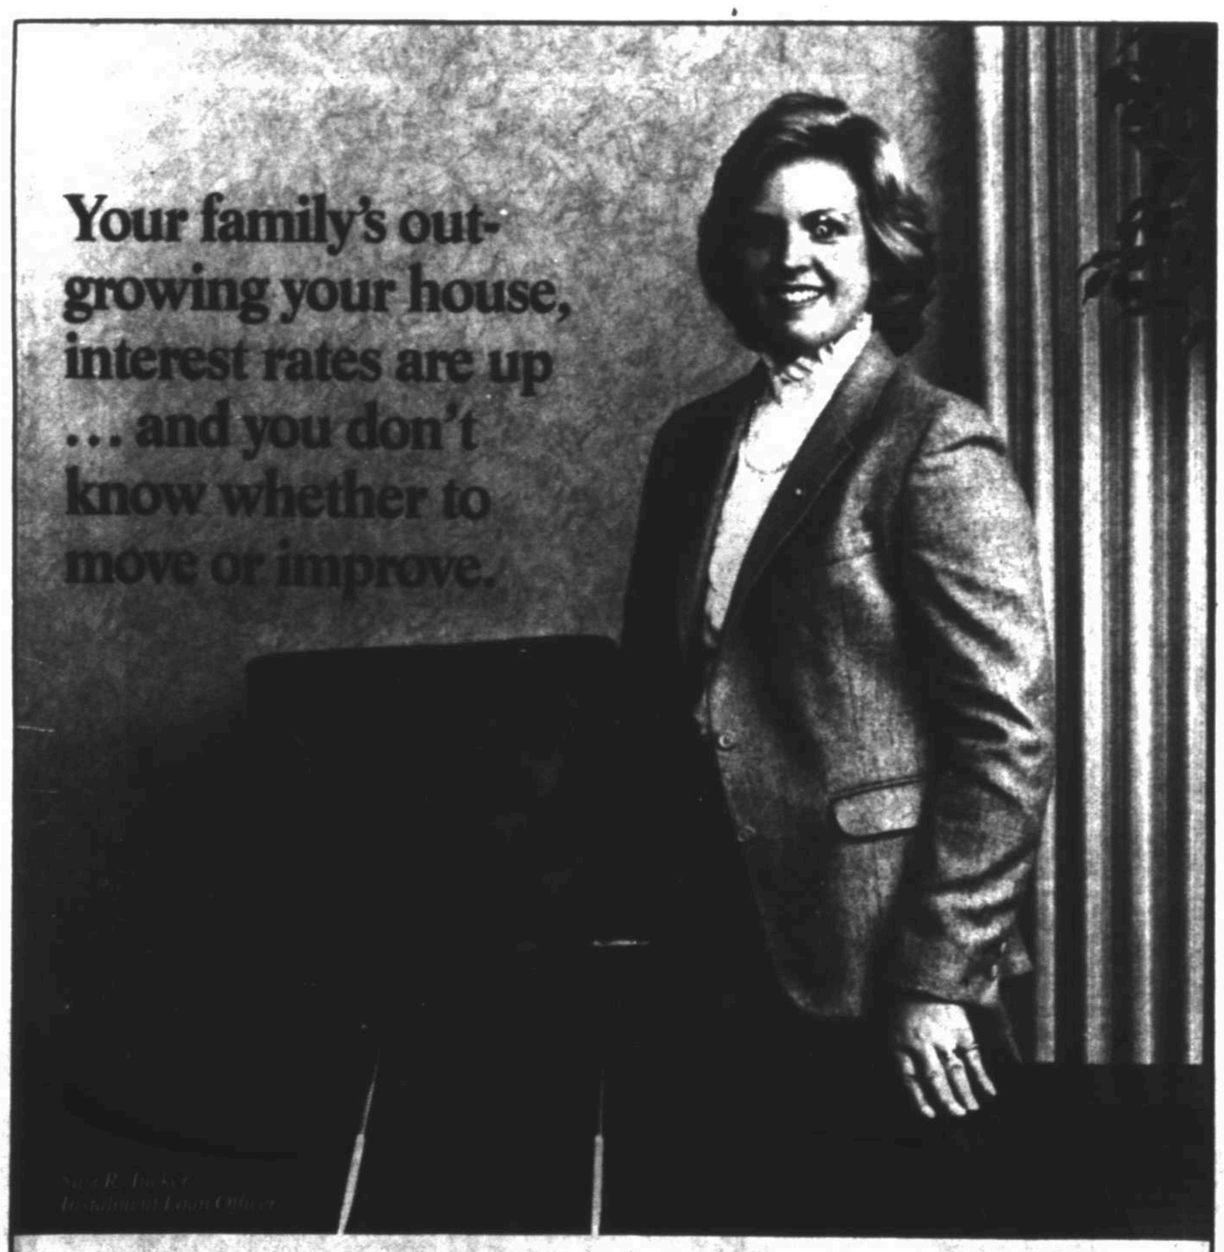
Many of these checks bring no price at all; banks still absorb a lot of those costs. Many cashiers checks issued — up to 70 percent of Security Pacific's, for example — serve the bank's purposes as well, disbursing loan money perhaps, or paying out interest on time deposits. Moreover, a lot of charges are still "bundled" for customers on special plans which in return for a minimum balance and a fixed monthly fee offer "free" checking, travelers checks, cashiers checks, safe deposit, etc.

But those are waivers well defined ahead. Most interesting, and most indicative of the kind of retailers banks will be, are the charges levied but immediately waived for reasons that are often unpredictable and subjective.

Some banks automatically waive the charge when customers are closing out an account. "After all," says Tom Tartaglia, a Bank of America branch manager in Los Angeles, "you had the account here and we did make money from it. I think (to charge for the check) would be a little greedy."

Most also say it will be waived for "compensating balances" — the amount of money the customer has had on deposit — but the amount that would compensate is not defined. Crocker National Bank branch manager Edwin Alexander in Los Angeles, for example, would waive for $25,000 or $10,000, but for "anything under $5,000," he says, "there could be a charge, based on the account relationship."

So it is back to "relationship" banking, taking into account the customer's balance, the length of time he has had the account, his employer, his other business with the bank, and even, admits one executive, whether or not he is making a flap over the charge in the lobby. In short, the difference between one man's $2,000 and another's $5,000 is left, says a Crocker spokesman, "to the discretion of the officer in charge, the judgment of someone who knows the customer," and — if indeed anyone at a bank does know customers — to his feeling about them as customers. Public marches have been staged over less.



Even in a buyers' market, it's frequently less expensive to add a room or other improvements to your present home. Maybe you should talk to Susi Tucker about a Home Improvement Loan.

First Bankers builds drive-in Safe deposit boxes and park

Construction has commenced on the new First Bankers Trust and Savings Association drive-in facility, according to Steve Rigg, president.

The drive-in, located on the southeast corner of Louisiana and A Streets, will feature four drive-up lanes and one commercial lane.

In addition to the drive-in lanes, this location will offer safe deposit boxes and ample parking for customers.

"We are incorporating safe deposit boxes to meet the steadily increasing demand for this service by our customers," said Rigg, "and now we are able to provide this service at an easily-accessible location."

First Bankers' drive-in will offer extended hours and Saturday banking. "The response to the Saturday banking program at our San Miguel branch has prompted the adoption of this practice at the drive-in," remarked Mr. Rigg. "Our customers expect convenience and availability and we're working to make sure they get it in all areas of Midland."

The drive-in project was designed by Patterson/Yowell Architects and will be built by HBF Construction. Both are Midland companies.

Completion of the First Bankers A and Louisiana location is set for January, 1984.

RRC cars unmarked

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has approved for public comment a proposed rule to implement recent action by the Texas Legislature that allows the Commission to use unmarked vehicles.

State law requires all state-owned vehicles to be conspicuously marked unless the legislature approves exempt vehicles for a particular agency. The Railroad Commission was given that status during the recent session of the legislature.

State law also requires an agency with exempt vehicles to develop a rule that identifies the types of vehicles that are exempt and explain why.

The Commission's proposed rule exempts vehicles assigned to and used by the RRC Oil and Gas Division's district offices. These vehicles are used in regulatory and administrative activity, including inspections and investigations which require that Commission personnel be able to accomplish their tasks undetected, the rule says.
